Marines Tighten Up Security Procedures

By G.G. LaBELLE Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - U.S. Marines reinforced security barriers, bulldozed smoldering rubble and awaited replacements today after a suicide terrorist bombing that killed 172 comrades, left as many as 50 dead under tons of concrete and wounded at least 75. A second terrorist bombing seconds later killed 22 French soldiers, left 36 missing and wounded 15, the French Defense Ministry said. French President Francois Mitterrand made a surprise visit to Beirut and inspected the carnage but told reporters: "I have no declarations to make.

The Marines added sentries, set up more checkpoints and parked large trucks across all roads leading to their compound at Beirut's international airport, forcing all vehicles to halt for security shakedowns.

The Pentagon gave the American death toll as 172 from Sunday's blast, which occurred at 6:20 a.m. as most of the Marines slept. But U.S. Marine officials in Beirut said as many as 50 Marines and Navy men might still be buried in the smoking wreckage of the command post. Tons of concrete covered at least two bunk areas and the basement.

'There's nobody alive in there now," Marine spokesman

Maj. Robert Jordan said of the wrecked battalion command center. "No, it would be a miracle."

Jordan said up to 300 Americans may have been sleeping in the four-story command center at the airport when it was blown up early Sunday by an estimated ton of TNT in a red pickup truck driven by a suicide terrorist. He said "about 80"

American troops were wounded. The blast destroyed personnel records in the building, but a duplicate set was kept aboard a 6th Fleet ship off Beirut, said Pentagon spokesman Petty Officer John McIntosh. "A lot of the bodies are really mutilated, that's one of the hardest problems" in identifying victims, he said.

About a mile away from the Marine compound explosion. and only seconds later, another vehicle packed with explosives blew up a nine-story building housing French troops. After a night of frantic clawing through the rubble, rescue workers rescued one Frenchman alive today, officials

A hitherto unknown group called the Islamic Revolutionary Movement claimed responsibility for the blasts a few hours after the bombings, telling the French news agency, Agence France-Presse, it would not rest until Beirut was controlled by "revolutionary Moslems and the combative democratic Iran today denied any connection with the bombing. Its official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said the Americans were trying to link Iran to the attack as an excuse to deploy U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf.

Late Sunday, the first of more than 300 Marine replace ments took off from Cherry Point Marine Air Station. 60 miles northeast of Camp Lejeune, N.C. They were to bring the 24th Marine amphibious unit in Beirut back up to strength, Maj. Gen. Al Gray, commander of the 2nd Marine Division, told reporters at Camp Lejeune.

President Reagan told reporters in Washington his commitment to keeping the Marines in Lebanon was unshaken, and that he was "more determined than ever" that the forces battling Lebanon's government "cannot take over that vital and strategic part of the Earth

Greenville Man Had Trained For Eventuality A Nightmare-Come-True

. George Williams, Greenville pharmacist and army reserve officer, turned on his television Sunday and was confronted with a nightmare come true. Nine days ago Greenville pharmacist George Williams returned from Army reserve exercises in West Germany and England that simulated evauation and treatment of wounded U.S. servicemen from the European region.

Yesterday he turned on his television, and within sec-onds he realized from news reports that his imitation exercise was a nightmarecome-true for about 75 wounded American servicemen and the survivors of some 172 Americans killed in the bombing of U.S. Marine Headquarters near Beirut Airport. More bodies are believed to be in the debris.

As the day progressed, Williams recognized names such as Rhein Main, Ramstein, and Landstuhl, West Germany - places where some of the wounded United States marines and sailors were being taken for treat-

'I heard the names of facilities where I was a week ago in West Germany," he said during an interview Sunday Asked why the Beirut casualties are being treated said, "I think the reason is that our hospital ships off the Lebanon coast have highquality care, but they also have limited capacity that they have to keep available for other possible incoming casualties.

He theorized about additional advantages of moving the wounded from Lebanon. For example, those treated aboard hospital ships probably will have to be moved again. "You don't want to move casulaties any more than necessary," Williams said. Furthermore, American military hospitals in West Germany can provide secure, as well as competent, treatment facilities.

But there are other reasons for sending American wounded to West Germany. Williams said, "As I understand the situation, the United States cannot support our Middle East efforts out of Greece or Turkey, which are the closest countries to Lebanon, because we have no agreements with them to provide such services. We have unofficial landing agreements for military transports in other countries.

Congress Plans Reopen Debate On Lebanon Peacekeeping Role

Congress, responding to the slaughter of 161 American servicemen in Beirut, is moving swiftly to reopen the peacekeeping force is in Lebanon and how long it should stay there.

President Reagan sent Secretary of State George P. Shultz to Capitol Hill, where he was meeting behind closed doors this afternoon with members of the House and Senate

The meetings were being conducted by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee. The Senate panel also was hearing from five Middle East experts who served in previous administrations, including Sol Linowitz, former

Humber House Dedication Was Held Yesterday

Family members, friends of the family, and officals attended the dedication of the Robert Lee Humber House held Sunday after-

The Humber House, located at 117 West Fifth Street, will now serve as the office of the Eastern Division of Archives and History for a multi-county region of eastern and northeastern North

The house was donated to the city of Greenville and Pitt County jointly by the Humber heirs three years ago. A stipulation was made that the house be used for art, culture or history purposes that would serve both Greenville and Pitt County. The two governing bodies accepted the donation with the stipulation, and both approved use of the house for the office of the Eastern Division of Archives and

In 1943, the house was remodeled. A local artisan, Tom May, carried out interior plaster work, including ornate medallions and mouldings. Later, a basement was added to the house.

Other major changes in the original house were the creation and installation of handcrafted walnut paneling in the library, and the conversion of attic space into additional library space. Installation of the paneling and renovation of the attic space was carried out by Ed Congleton, Lester Sutton, and C. B. Rogerson.

The first of two sons of the senior Humber, John David Humber, was born in 1895, the year that the house was built. A physician who now lives and works in San Francisco, he earned degrees from Wake Forest and Tulane, and pursued special studies at the University of Wisconsin, at Harvard, and

The sheer elegance of this classic Swedish Medallions afghan will have your friends asking how you did it. If you like, you can let it be your secret that Swedish weaving on monk's cloth is probably the very simplest of the needle arts!

If you can thread a needle and weave under and over the blocks of threads that make up the monk's cloth weave, then you can create this stunning home accessory. Designer Margaret Brainard used a kitten-soft Eleganza yarn a blend of acrylic and mohair — but any knitting worsted-weight yarn may be substituted monk's cloth versions are becoming more popular. What these fabrics have in common are distinctive raised threads at measured intervals. These raised threads are known as "floats.

A needle is threaded with yarn and passed under the floats following a pattern chart. Most pattern charts show a staggered series of double vertical lines (although occasionally a designer will use single vertical lines). In either case, the vertical lines represent the floats of the fabric so that you can readily see where the needle should go.

One pattern line is worked all across the pattern before going on to the next pattern line. As a general rule, it is best to start in the center of the fabric and work first from the center to the left edge and then start over in the center, working to the right edge.

There are two reasons for doing this. First, whenever possible, it is easiest to work a full line with one strand of yarn. When you do start in the center of the pattern, you pass the needle under the center float and leave the right half of the yarn hanging free while you work to the left edge. You then pick up the right half to work in the opposite direction. In this way, you are not working with an excessively long strand at any one time.

Also, unless you are working a perfectly straight line, this is the best way to center your design on every pattern

These explanations may be clearer if you look at the accompanying sample chart. The lower part of the chart illustrates a perfectly straight pattern

For California wineries, faced with a glut of unsold wine and what they feared might be another record harvest, the news coming out of the vineyards this fall may be a welcome relief.

Last winter's rain and hot, muggy weather early this past summer have combined to produce what is now expected to be an average or even a light crop - although, as one industry analyst said, it's a little like predicting the outcome of a baseball game.

"It's not over until it's over," he said.

The past two harvests have led to some bargain prices on California wines. Some have dropped in price as much as $4 a bottle and some good wines are selling for low prices under a secondary

"I think they have lowered prices to the hilt. There's not much place to go unless somebody wants to give it ' said Ed Everett, publisher of a wine newsletter in San Francisco.

PROSPECTS OF GROWTH ARE BRIGHT:

Won't Be Dressed In Blue Jeans

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm a reasonably attractive bachelor who enjoys the company of young women, but I'm having a hard time trying to find one who still wears a dress. The other night when I called for my date for dinner and a movie (not a drive-in), she met me at the door wearing blue jeans! I asked her if she had a dress, and she said, "Yes, but then I'd have to shave my legs' Abby, I shaved my face to go out with her. Why can't she shave her legs to go out with me? What is it with women these days? Why do so many of them prefer pants?

If you can answer this, you're a genius.
HATES WOMEN IN PANTS

DEAR HATES: I'm no genius, but I asked a number of pants-wearing women why they preferred pants. Some typical responses: 1. Pants are much more comfortable than a dress.

. My legs aren't too terrific, so why advertise it? 3. Pants are warmer when I need warmth. 4. If I have a run in my hosiery, it won't show.5. With pants I can wear a shirt or blouse that hangs down over my big behind to hide it. 6. Almost everybody else wears pants, and I don't want to be the oddball.

DEAR ABBY: When a funeral director signed "Dead Serious" requested that you ask people to quit making jokes about his profession, instead of being sympathetic, you added a few more. Abby, you showed the sensitivity of an armored tank and the shallowness of onionskin!

I am also a funeral director, and I've heard just about every mortician joke in the book When I walk into a place, I am asked, "What are you doing here-looking for business?

Then someone else pipes up with, "Hey, everybody, act alive. Look who's here with his meat wagon!" Abby, how would you like to come into a place and be greeted with, "Well, if it isn't Heartache Hannah" or "Lovelorn Abby with all the answers . . . ha, ha, ha!"

Now do you get my point, or should I hit you with my shovel? My name is not "Digger" or "Planter"-just call

DEAR DAVE: Though somewhat corny, there may be a kernel of truth in your complaint. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: When you printed the letter from the mortician who was fed up with jokes about his job, such as "I'll bet people are just dying to do business with you" and "How's business? Dead, huh?" I think you did him more harm than good when you replied, "All men are

DEAR A.C.: I apologize to all morticians who were offended. They should not have been. The final put-down is theirs. P.S. Orchids to the mortician who wrote: "Don't let it bother you, Abby, most people in this business

Distinction

Pitt County can take pride in the installation of Clifton W. Everett Sr. of Bethel as president of the North Carolina State

The Bar includes licensed attorneys of North Carolina and serves as the governing board for the legal profession.

Everett took the oath of office at the Bar's 50th anniversary meeting in Raleigh last week. The last attorney from this district to serve as president of the state Bar was J.B. James Everett has been active in Bar affairs and he has been mayor of Bethel and a member of the N.C. House of Representatives.

We have no doubt that Clifton Everett will serve with distinction as president of the State Bar.

Issue: Voter Registration In The Schools

RALEIGH - Across North Carolina, local school boards are about to face a question that bedeviled a legislative committee for most of the 1983 session: should schools' staffers register students to vote

The Senate Elections Law Committee, in a compromise that finally passed the assembly, decided that local schools could best answer that question. The new law says that local boards of education may decide whether students can be registered by school personnel. The boards are left with the perogatives of how, when and by whom the students would be registered.

You can hardly argue with the good intentions of state Sen. Wilma Woodard's original bill to establish voter registration booths in high school libraries. Young people don't vote in large numbers, Sen. Woolard argues. Make it easier to register and more young people will take place in the democratic process.

While few people argued with Sen. Woodard's intentions, a good many argues with the practical problems her idea would create. Jan Holem, lobbyist for the N.C. School Boards Association, argued for librarians and school peace and quiet. Librarians are already overworked, she said, and many schools have only a part-time librarian. Also, the proposal could bring floods of adults into the high schools during registration drives, thus disrupting classes

Even though Sen. Woodard's bill was changed to mollify critics like Mrs. Holem, the law still doesn't please everyone. In Rowan County, where both the county and Salisbury city school boards rejected the registration option, the criticism was less practical and more philosophical.

One city school board member, The Salisbury Post reported, worried that the registration could be slanted politically. Staff members might try harder to register students who agreed with their own political stands, the board member said. Sen. Woodard retorts that such an action would be a violation of the law and that school personnel aren't normally lawbreakers.

The argument that apparently carried the day in Salisbury, however, came from schools Superintendent Marcus Smith. He said the job of the schools is to teach students reponsibility and the basics of the political system. It is not the job of the schools to enroll students in that system.

"The schools should take the responsibility to make the students understand that they have a responsibility to register and vote in a democracy. shouldn't do all these things for them," he said in an interview

Sen. Woodard says her bill makes "perfect sense" from an educational point of view. If students are taking a course in American democracy, registering them to vote is just a logical outgrowth of that work, she said. Some schools do as much already by inviting registrars into high schools periodically. Dr. Smith doesn't allow registrars in the Salisbury schools. But, his students often visit voter registration points as part of a field trip. If they wish to register at that time, that's fine, he says. Salisbury did not debate one important question: do the schools have time to register voters? Some educators argue that we should be eliminating extra duties on school staffs so they can concentrate on teaching. As Dr. Smith says, "The schools have become dumping grounds for other agencies' responsibilities." Sen. Woodard agrees but says voter registration is an educational matter.

When local school boards consider this question, they should ask if voter registration is really the duty of the educators.

Star Is Lost

Pat O'Brien belonged to the memories of older movie-going Americans. That part of his career provided the Irishman from Milwaukee the security that permitted the luxury of reverting to his first-love, the stage, when Hollywood tired of the stereotype it had bestowed on him.

Too bad. Maybe the movie moguls missed the best O'Brien might have offered.

A lot of people then (and now) did not know Pat was a product of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts or that he was a modestly successful actor long before Hollywood called.

A lot of his admirers (then, and now) were surprised when he won two Emmy awards for television performances; and his followers included many who were surprised the O'Brien they "knew" returned to the stage to portray other characters than the prototype Son-of-Erin.

So many saw him as a one-character performer; and while he starred in that role, one has to wonder if the American theater didn't lose something in the untapped resources of the actor

Now we'll never know.

Projections

NEW YORK (AP) - Maligned. criticized, regulated and taxed, and sometimes competed against unfairly, the U.S. economy is turning out numbers no other country is likely to match until near the turn of the century

It is only then, by most estimates, that Japan has a chance of exceeding U.S. production, and most people who tinker with such computer projections aren't at all sure that it will happen even then.

Although you might not have believed it just a year-and-a-half ago, when the recession was deep and the outlook bleak, the latest gross national product figures show the U.S. economy can still perform like no other economy

This still might come as news to some people, accustomed as they are to hearing claims that the Japanese can produce a better and less expensive automobile and how the Japanese worker can outperform his American coun-

The truth is that the U.S. economy is still the world's biggest and most productive, even in basic manufacturing, and the output-per-hour of the American worker is still the world's highest.

Confusion enters the comparisons. however, when productivity and rates of productivity are used interchangeably, as they cannot be The United States is biggest and most productive. But Japanese productivity is rising faster.

During the 1970s. Japanese productivity rose at about 7.5 percent a year. or three times the growth rate of U.S. productivity. The latter, however, was growing from a much larger and far more diverse base.

At that rate, it might be true that Japan could overtake U.S. economic production by the turn of the century. But nobody can say those rates will prevail until then, especially in view of recent trends in the United States

Among those trends: The rapid development of U.S. technology to replace the decline of older industries; a renewed effort to free - deregulate - the U.S. economy; and a greater spirit of cooperation between labor and manage-

These factors were often forgotten in the depths of the recession, when the negative comparisons with Japan became commonplace. But now that the U.S. engine has been started again they are far more easily recognized.

"Everyone loses sight of the fact that business cycles have a self-renewing aspect," said Richard Lesher, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, in an interview

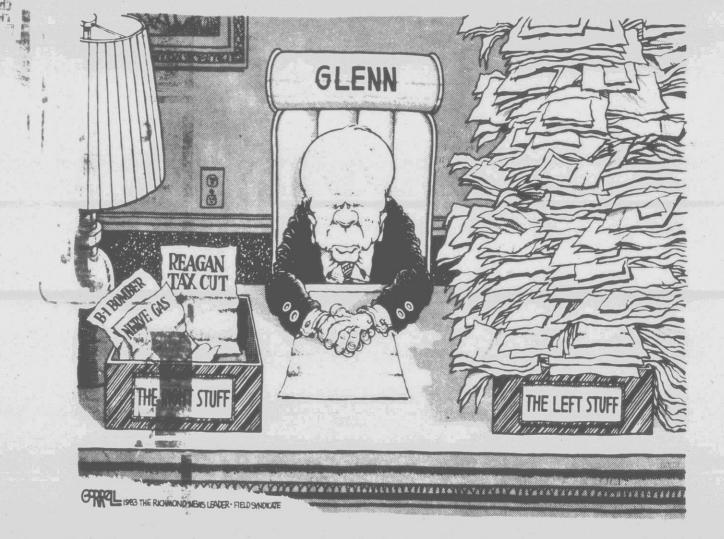

What Lesher referred to was the recession-induced determination of U.S. industry and government to correct the mistakes of the past, to trim down overhead, to eliminate inefficient factories, to put out more effort.

By general agreement of business people, government officials and academics, one of the most important changes has been the U.S. burst of strength in high technology, putting it far ahead of other nations. By its very nature, high technology is highly pro-

Some of these lessons and developments of the recession, which followed 20 years of depressed U.S. growth rates, are now appearing in robust gross national product figures — 9.7 percent in the second quarter, 7.9 in the third.

Eventually, this expansion will fade, as all business cycles do, but barring cataclysmic economic or military events, it will be repeated.

And if repeated enough, it might end those negative comparisons between the power and health of U.S. economy and that of Japan.

The View From Old Paint

We all saw James Watt ride off into the sunset last week. Unfortunately we didn't hear what he said to his tinental shelf.

Watt reached the top of the trial and looked out over the massive mountain range

'I had great visions for this land, Paint. I wanted every American to have a strip mine he could call his own. I wanted to sell off the wilderness areas and make them into thriving real estate developments which produced jobs and taxes.

I dreamed someday we could cut down all the forests to provide wood for the lumber people who love this country as much as I do. I wanted to drill into the deep brown earth and offshore blue waters for gas and oil, to supply our fuel needs for the next 50

"I longed to take America's most valuable heritage and protect it from the bird lovers and the Indians and the Democrats who don't believe in needed time to sell off the outer con-

Strength For Today

How do we measure accomplishment?

There are various ways of doing this. Probably the one most frequently lemployed is to measure a man's success by the amount of money he makes or the positions of honor he achieves.

Money success can sometimes be very real, for the people who achieve it often make important contributions to the material welfare of society. Also, people usually attain positions of honor and trust because they are fitted for them.

The greatest measure of accomplishment, however, is to be able to come to the end of one's life fairly well satisfied with one's achievements, not bitter over failures or injusties, and above everything else, on good terms with one's self.

And this means to look back over life with a good conscience - the greatest comfort of all.

Glenn Shows No Sign Of Slowing

WASHINGTON — Having burned his bridges with the Democratic Party establishment, Sen. John H. Glenn has no plans for repair but is moving apace to his next step: questioning the character of Walter F. Mondale in his performance as vice president. without waiting for another face-toface confrontation, Glenn on the campaign trail will ask how Jimmy Carter's vice president could public ly promote policies that he says he privately opposed in White House councils. Although such tactics are viewed by the party's conventional wisdom as deepening Glenn's earlier wounds, in fact they are central to the senator's basic strategy The past two weeks of Mondalevs.-Glenn sparring, vicious at long range and more gentlemanly at closer quarters, have finally defined the nature of their two-man struggle for the Democratic presidential nomination. Perhaps more than any other national contest in the party's history, that struggle involves an anpeal to rank-and-file voters over the heads and against the judgment of their party leaders.

To many of those leaders, Glenn's attack on the only Democratic administration since the '60s looked suicidal. One Washington superlobbyist with a proven track record in political forecasting called it "quite clearly a disaster" for the senator. "Appalling!" snapped a previously friendly party chairman in a key primary state. On Capitol Hill, the drift toward Mondale hastened.

Having carefully constructed their campaign on gaining the support of the party'e component groups, Mondale's managers feel more than ever that the nomination is theirs. What they tell newsmen is almost certainly what they believe. "The nomination is locked up - thanks to Glenn," one

Mondale adviser told us. But there is substantial contrary opinion that the last two weeks locked nothing up but, instead, guaranteed a bitter struggle at least into the early primaries. Indeed, neutral professionals who had been criticizing Glenn for not properly framing the campaign feel he has remedied that error with precious little time to spare.

What Glenn has done to change the Democratic landscape is cut himself loose irrevocably from Democratic constituency group politics and the party's recent record in office. Although even some Glenn supporters wince at his attack on the Carter administration's "failed policies" as Reaganesque, it was not a case of candidate excess. It was planned all the way, including the label of Mondale as first mate on the Titanic.

When by the luck of the draw Glenn got to ask Mondale a question in the Oct. 13 Harvard arms control debate, the focus was on Carter administration policies, including the MX missile. Mondale's response that 'my voice was heard in the private councils of the administration" opposing these policies led to plans for Glenn to compare the vice president's public declarations and his claim of differing private advice. A deliberate assault on the sort of duplicity that is commonplace in the political world is viewed with contempt by the party's establishment. But Glenn's strategy is an appeal beyond the establishment to everyday Democrats.

Everyday voters were also the target of Glenn's closing argument at Harvard. After an hour in which the Soviet menace had been ignored, Glenn declared: "We must offer a realism that acknowledges that our adversaries do not see the world as we do, that they cannot be trusted to look out for our interests party cannot show readiness "to defend our liberty ... we Democrats will undoubtedly lose," he continued. Suggestions of Soviet responsibility for the danger of nuclear holocaust did not play well to nuclear freezers present. Glenn was trumpeting over their heads to ordinary Democrats who turned against Carter, voted for Ronald Reagan and now are wavering about the Reagan administration.

Whether these Reaganoid Democrats actually vote in party primaries is the core of the practical debate. While Glenn's strategists believe that Mondale's attacks on President Reagan go too far, Mondale will keep painting Glenn as a Reaganite.

But it makes no difference whether Mondale keeps to that course. John Glenn is not counter-punching but attempting to portray Fritz Mondale as typical of the Democratic Party's problem. That may not win him the nomination, but it is his only chance against organized labor, the school lobby and Mondale's accumulating list of big-name supporters. The struggle may determine not only what it takes to win the Democratic nomination but what kind of party it

Teacher Strike Is Tentatively Settled

By JOHN WOLFE Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - A record three-week strike by 24,000 teachers in the nation's third-largest school district could end Tuesday following a tentative settlement hailed as a "win-win agreement" by the school superintendent and as "very acceptable" by union lead-

The Chicago Teachers Union, which also includes 3.000 other school workers such as librarians, was to vote today on the proposed pact, reached Sunday after a 33-hour bargaining session.

Approval could send Chicago's 436,000 public school students back to class by Tuesday, ending the longest teachers strike in the city's history.

Union Vice President Jackie Vaughn said the union's House of Delegates would recommend that the contract be accepted by rank-and-file members and predicted that the pact would be approved.

"We hope they will accept it," Ms. Vaughn said, adding that she felt the agreement was fair to teachers.

Union President Robert Healey called the pact "very acceptable.

Details of the agreement were not disclosed, but Schools Superintendent Ruth Love said it called for a salary increase for teachers and "some sharing of fiscal responsibility by the union."

Miss Love said she was ''delighted'' with the agreement and that it "helps us maintain the fiscal integrity of the school system as well as provide for the needs of our employees.

"I think it's what we would call a 'win-win' agreement,' she said.

And the Chicago Sun-Times reported that the contract entails no layoffs and no change in maximum class size, but that the union made concessions on health benefits.

Before Sunday, the board had offered a 2 percent salary boost for a one-year contract. The union's latest demand was a two-year pact with raises of 11 percent the first year and 5 percent the second

In all, students missed 15 days of classes, including today, and WMAQ reported the union had agreed to make up nine of those days.

The walkout began Oct. 3 over a proposed salary increase for teachers, whose annual salary averages $25,530 and who had not had a raise since 1980.

The pact was announced in a surprise press conference called by Healey, Miss Love and mediator William J. Usery at 6:50 p.m. Sunday. Usery, former U.S. Labor

Secretary, entered the talks Saturday night after both sides began the bargaining session at 10 a.m.

Asked what would have happened if Sunday's bombings had occurred while his simulated training exercise was underway in Europe. Williams replied, "The exercise probably would have been cancelled. In connection with his recently completed reserve training, he said, "Each fall we have massive practice exercises in Europe that involved active U.S. military forces and National Guard units from throughout the country. This year the First Calvary Division from Fort Hood, Texas, went as the main military unit." Called REFORGER '83, overall activites included participation by NATO allies in European nations in addition to West Germany

"Within REFORGER we had a number of specific operations going on. For example, units from the N.C. National Guard participated in 'Display Determination,' in which they trained Italian forces who wre getting ready to deploy to Beirut. Williams said. The official U.S. military publication "Stars and Stripes" described that exercise.

Williams was one of 13 medical observer/evaluators who participated in an evacuation exercise known as "Atlantic Lion

Early in September he flew to Texas where he worked with the First Cavalry Division before departing for Europe on Sept. 17. By Sept. 19 he was at Rhein Main Air Force Base outside Frankfurt, West Germany, a large troop and supply receiving center.

"At this point, the 13 medical observer/evaluators were dispersed to various U.S. military hospitals in Germany, including those at Frankfurt, Nurenburg, Stuttgart, and Landstuhl. I was assigned to Landstuhl, Williams said.

The training exercise called for simulated casulaties to come from various areas to staging areas West Germany.

"In the staging areas we had 600 to 1,000 simulated patients who came from field combat units. We put pajamas on them and applied makeup and plastic wounds imitate real injuries," Williams said. "In addition, we provided them with medical records - also simulated. The people were treated as if they had real

Turnout Cheers European Missile Protest Leaders

Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) Bolstered by the turnout of 1.5 million anti-nuclear activists in weekend demonstrations. European protest leaders vow to carry on their fight even after NATO starts deploying 572 U.S.-built cruise and Pershing 2 missiles

Several British newspapers reported Sunday that the first batch of 16 cruise missiles — destined for Greenham Common U.S. Air Force base 50 miles west of London - would arrive in mid-November and would be activated Dec. 15.

Nine Pershing 2 rockets are to be sited in West Germany at roughly the same time, barring a lastminute concession by the Soviet Union at current arms control talks with the United States in Geneva. Switzerland.

But a ranking Soviet official warned not to expect any breakthrough and said the NATO deployment would be countered by new Soviet

Elsewhere in a weekend of rallies andd marches, 300,000 turned out in Brussels, 200,000 in Rome, 150,000 in Madrid and tens of thousands more in Paris, Stockholm and Vienna

About 10,000 protesters in Paris linked arms from the U.S. Embassy just off the Place de la Concorde, across two Seine bridges to the Soviet Embassy — a distance of three miles. They chanted 'No! No! Nyet! Nyet! Neither Pershing nor SS-20.

Except for a rock-throwing melee in Hamburg, the protests were peaceful as participants denounced the North Atlantic Treay Organization's planned deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles in five European countries. But many balanced the attack with a demand that the Soviet Union scrap more than 350 triple-warhead SS-20 rockets already deployed on the continent

Further anti-missile protests were planned today in Norway, with more scheduled for next weekend in Denmark and the Netherlands.

Despite the large turnouts, Western governments in-sisted the demonstrations would not deter deployment. "There is no change," said a spokesman for British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Moscow also was steadfast about its position.

In a radio interview, Mrs. Ruddock of Britain's antinuclear campaign said continuing demonstrations would limit the portability of the U.S.-made cruise missiles. The missiles are fired from launchers mounted on trucks, which "It will be impossible to take those missiles onto the British roads because we, the peace movement, will protest against it," Mrs. Ruddock said in a radio interview.

"They will have to encounter people who would be prepared to sit down or lie down in the path of these vehicles. I think it will be very effective.

Supporters of the missiles, however, said the larger battle - that of winning official acceptance for the missiles - had been won.

"(The Kremlin) knows that this deployment marks the failure of its greatest post-war propaganda campaign and, at the same time, the basis for serious negotiations to replace all the nuclear shadow-boxing of the past few months," said London's conservative Sunday Telegraph.

London's independent Sunday Times called the demonstrations "the last gasp of a campaign that has

Wilson, Bahr Paying Off For Raiders

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Raiders' signing of quarterback Marc Wilson is already paying dividends.

Wilson threw three first-half touchdown passes and Chris Bahr kicked four field goals, including a game-winning 26-yarder with 20 seconds left Sunday, to give the Raiders a 40-38 National Football League victory over Dallas and hand the Cowboys their first loss of the season.

"I was thrilled to get the chance to play against Dallas," said Wilson, who confirmed that he has signed a new lucrative multiyear contract with the Raiders. "You may as well start out against the best and see what happens.

In other games Sunday, it was Kansas City 13, Houston 10 in overtime; Minnesota 20, Green Bay 17 in overtime; Atlanta 27, New York Jets 21; Chicago 7, Philadelphia 6; New England 31, Buffalo 0; Cincinnati 28, Cleveland 21; Washington 38, Detroit 17; Miami 21, Baltimore 7; Pittsburgh 27. Bahr's game-winning kick was set up when Ted Watts intercepted a Danny White pass at the Raiders 12 and returned it 13 yards late in the game. Wilson then used short passes, including two 18-yard completions to wide receiver Dokie Williams, to move Los Angeles to the Dallas 8.

Cards Excited About Battle With Giants

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Members of the St. Louis the best in the league. They're capable of Cardinals are excited about playing the New York Giants tonight - even if their fans

More than 9,000 seats at Busch Stadium remained unsold for the contest between National Football League also-rans 72 hours ahead of game time Friday. Under league rules, that means the nationally televised contest between the National Conference rivals will be blacked out locally Apparent fan apathy notwithstanding. St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan admits mixed feelings over the first performance by his young team on prime time since 1977.

"In reality it's just another night ballgame. The only thing about it is the players know everyone in the country is going to be watching." Hanifan said. "It's an important ballgame - like any game is.

If anything extra is on the line, it is the embarrassment two teams with 2-5 records are seeking to avoid by dropping into sole possession of last place in the NFC East

New York slipped into a tie for the bottom when it lost 38-17 last week to the Kansas City Chiefs. Meanwhile, the Cards shook off a pattern of costly errors that had plagued them and prevailed 34-27 over the winless Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

The mistakes are still something that concern us very much," said Hanifan, whose team has turned the ball over 27 times.

'In some respects, the Giants are a very fine defensive team. Their linebackers may be putting intense pressure on you, and we'll need some good blocking. Entering the contest, St. Louis has been bolstered by the return of right guard Joe Bostic and right tackle Tootie Robbins from the injury list on offense but may be hobbled by the absence of running back Ottis Anderson

Anderson suffered a shoulder injury in the victory over Tampa Bay. On Sunday, his availability was downgraded from questionable to doubtful. It he cannot play, his place will be taken by Stump Mitchell.

Aspects of the contest to watch will be St. Louis quarterback Neil Lomax' probing of a New York pass defense ranking 27th in the NFL and Giants running back Rob Carpenter's assaults on the Cards' rushing defense, which ranks 21st.

Jeff Rutledge, a fifth-year player, draws his first start at quarterback for New York. He spells Scott Brunner, who against Kansas City suffered three interceptions and fumbled once.

St. Louis' last appearance on Monday night was a 24-17 triumph in November 1977 over the Dallas Cowboys two weeks after a 28-0 conquest of the Giants in a similar time slot.

It's an opportunity to show the folks in America that the Cardinals have a good organization and a good team — that we're at least better than 2-5," said Cards wide receiver Pat Tilley. "It's prime-time TV, the most popular football game watched.

NEW YORK (AP) - For the past seven years, the New York City Marathon had catapulted Bill Rodgers and Alberto Salazar into marathon

Rod Dixon, this year's winner, isn't sure he will continue along that path.

'Marathoning is a discipline all its own," the 33-year-old New Zealander said Sunday after overtaking Britain's Geoff Smith at the 26-mile mark and outkicking him in the final 385 yards for a dramatic victory in 2 hours, 8 minutes, 59 seconds

"I'm not sure I'm ready to do it all the time. I may be looking back to the track next

Picking his main race for 1984 will be important for Dixon, since it is an Olympic Dixon already has competed in two Olympics. In 1972 at Munich, he earned a bronze medal in the 1,500 meters, and in 1976 at Montreal, he was fourth in the 5,000 meters, finishing only seven-tenths of a second behind gold medalist Lasse Viren of Finland.

"The New York City Marathon was like the Olympics for me," said Dixon, who had

Two penalties played a big role in Florida's 24-17 victory over East Carolina University this past Saturday afternoon. In fact, it meant a difference in 14 points for the sixth-ranked Gators, who remained unbeaten on the season with the win

The first of those fatal calls came late in the first half when East Carolina held a 10-0 advantage over the Gators, leaving a record crowd almost 74,000 in near silence. Florida had just missed a chip-shot field goal on fourth and six, and it looked like the Pirates would go into the dressing room with that 10-0 lead.

But no. A penalty on the play for encroachment being in the neutral zone at the snap) cost the Pirates five yards and Florida elected instead to go for the first down, made it and went on to score its first touchdown.

That was seven points the Pirates lost there.

Then, late in the contest, with the score tied, Clint Harris pulled in what would have been his fourth interception of the day - breaking an ECU record — when a flag was thrown for pass interference further upfield. To be interference, a ball much be catchable and many observers said that this particular receiver couldn't have reached it on a bicycle.

Nevertheless, it negated the interception which would have put the Pirates in outstanding field position to break the tie, and led to Florida's final score that won the contest.

Still, the Pirates never gave up and we applaud them for that. They were in the contest right up until the last play and very few of those 74,000 Homecoming fans left until the game was truly

Late in the game, the Pirates had a fourth and three at the Florida 34 and failed by inches of making the play. We asked Ed Emory over the weekend if he had considered a field goal at that point — with 2:30 left in the game — followed — if successful - by the Pirates' famous "Bam-

Missed Conversion Snaps Unbeaten String

By The Associated Press For the second year in a row, a conversion attempt has come between Southern Methodist and perfection.

In last vear's regular-season windup, the Mustangs, needing at least a tie to nail down the Southwest Conference crown, scored against Arkansas with 2:51 remaining. But Coach Bobby Collins ordered an extra-point kick and SMU settled for a 17-17 tie.

Collins couldn't know, of course, that Arkansas would bomb against Texas two weeks later, which would have given SMU the title anyway. But the deadlock was the only blemish on an 11-0-1 campaign and might have cost the Mustangs the national championship. They wound up as the nation's only unbeaten major-college team, but finished second to Penn State in the final rankings.

It was decision time again Saturday when Reggie Dupard ran 16 yards for a touchdown with 2:47 to play. bringing ninth-ranked SMU within 13-12 of No. 2 Texas. YOUR DAILY from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This can be a day of broken promises, tensions and strain unless you make a consistent effort to carry through with whatever you have agreed to do. Avoid making unjust criticisms.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't be too much in a hurry to answer some irksome letters that may reach you and listen carefully to what friends have to say.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Think carefully before you come to any final decisons on monetary matters, and be sure to double-check all figures.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You arise feeling quite depressed, but if you study both sides of whatever is troubling you, you can soon feel cheerful again.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Some secret anxiety could keep you from progressing in your field of endeavor, if you permit LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Try not to upset a friend or new contact and avoid allies who are apt to be petulant. Stay out of the way of irritating people

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are eager to be off to new places and be with interesting people, but for now you should adhere to important contracts. SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) In the morning you are

Arming the World

Today marks the beginning of National Disarmament Week. A recent study reports that in 1983, nations around the world will spend a total of $660 billion dollars on weaponry. That represents an expenditure of $1.3 million per minute. Russia, the United States, China, and England are the four biggest military spenders. Fifth on the list, and the country that spends the most per person on defense, is Saudi Arabia.

DO YOU KNOW - What will the U.S. spend on defense this year?

lines As Prison Inmate Count Increases

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) The nation's prison population set another record in the first six months of 1983 while reported crime dropped by 5 percent during the same period. the Justice Department reported.

While Justice officials and the FBI are normally wary of trying to explain movements in the FBI Crime Index reports. Steven R. Schlesinger, new director of the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics, speculated that stiffer sentences may be paying off in reduced crime.

These prisoners are at least temporarily unable to victimize the public and this may partially explain the recent decrease in crime rates." he said.

Academic experts, on the other hand, have long predicted a drop in crime during the 1980s as the postwar Baby Boom" generation grows out of the crime-prone ages, the late teens through the early 20s

The rise of inmate populations to record levels and the decrease in crime reported to the police both continued trends which began in 1981. The figures for the January-June period of this year were released Sunday.

FBI Director William H Webster said that during the first half of this year de creases were reported in all seven major crimes on the Crime Index and in all regions, in rural and suburban areas and in cities of all sizes. The drop follows a 3 percent decrease in reported crime in 1982 and a tiny decrease in 1981.

The Bureau of Justice Statistics reported that the state and federal prison population grew by 4.2 percent during the same period, to a record 431.829. Record 12 percent increases in the prison population were recorded in both 1982 and 1981, but the increase this year has been slightly below that pace.

Calling the FBI crime re port a "heartening development," Attorney General William French Smith said, "Crime is far too grave a problem to permit any complacency but these declines must be viewed as encouraging

The FBI said both violent crimes and the much more common property crimes were down by 5 percent. when measured against the first six months of 1982.

Murder fell by 12 percent: rape. 4 percent: robbery. 8 percent and aggravated assault, 3 percent. There was an 8 percent decline in burglary. 3 percent in larceny theft and 6 percent in motor vehicle thefts

The states in the Northeast and South both recorded overall 6 percent declines; the West, a decrease of 5

Says Schools Need Changing

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) Radical and dramatic is needed to improve the nation's schools the superintendent of North Carolina's largest public school system says

Superintendent Jay Robinson of the Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools said the 29 major reports issued in the past year on problems in the nation's public schools will have little impact unless the quality of classroom teachers and principals is

Robinson told the Raleigh Kiwanis Club on Friday that the Legislature would not raise teacher salaries 25 percent or 50 percent next year - which he said might make the teaching profession more attractive to the best and brightest college stu-

But the American people have said over and over they will pay more money if we'll document excellence and pay the teachers who are doing the best job more money. he said. "We have to stop saving the only differential we can make in teaching is based on a teacher's training and years of experience.

While reported violent and property crime as a whole fell in all regions, rape was up 7 percent in the North Central states and 1 percent in the Northeast: aggravated assault rose by 1 percent in both the Northeast and the
