Sunday's Bombing Toll Is Rising, Now 207 Deaths

By SCHEHEREZADE

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Marines were ordered into foxholes and bunkers today near the rubble of the bombed U.S. command post after three suspicious vehicles were seen at the airport, a Marine spokesman said.

Rescuers dug four more bodies from the shattered command post building, raising the American death toll from Sunday's bombing by a suicide terrorist to 207, according to the Pentagon.

French officials said 35

French troops were killed, 15 were wounded and 23 were missing in a bombing at a French compound seconds after the attack on the Americans.

"There have been three vehicles spotted driving around the area," said Capt. Wayne Jones. "There are suspicions that they could contain explosives."

Marines went on their highest state of alert and officers warned reporters to get in the bunkers or leave the area. Mabine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan said if anyone approached the gate to the Marine compound, "It will be a shoot-to-kill situation."

Jones gave no further information about the suspicious vehicles except to say: "Right now, we're just observing."

Airport officials received an anonymous bomb threat, and Marine guards took up firing positions around the British Embassy building in downtown Beirut that houses U.S. Embassy offices in the Lebanese capital.

American press attache John Stewart said the 45-minute embassy alert was triggered by "a warning of a potential threat. Later we were told we could resume normal activities. And we did."

Stewart, however, said the atmosphere was extremely tense.

The British Embassy is on Beirut's seafloor, five miles north of the Marine base and has housed American diplomats since a suicide terrorist bombed the U.S. Embassy April 18.

Some 300 Marine replacements for comrades killed or wounded in Sunday's terrorist bombing took up their positions at the airport, where the U.S. contingent of a four-nation peacekeeping force is based.

Gen. Paul X. Kelley, commandant of the Marine Corps, also arrived today for an inspection ordered by President Reagan in the wake of the attack.

Jones said Marine commander Col. Timothy Geraghty ordered the entire contingent on the highest state of alert as the three vehicles drove back and forth near the airport.

Jordan said there were more bodies buried in the ruins of the four-story glass and concrete building.

U.S. And Caribbean Units Involved Confirm Grenada Landing

By MICHAEL AARON

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said today that the early morning landing of U.S. and Caribbean forces on Grenada was "completely successful" and had as its overriding purpose the protection of 1,000 Americans on the island.

The president said he wanted to withdraw the American soldiers "as quickly as possible." House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said the troops would be in Grenada "five to seven days or less."

A senator said he was told 30 Soviets stationed on the island nation had been "secured."

The invasion force included an 1,800-man U.S. Marine amphibious unit and a small number of army special forces troops.

Pentagon sources who requested anonymity said they understood the Army Rangers had suffered casualties, but the source said they had no details.

Also sent into the area was the 76,000-ton aircraft carrier Independence with its 70 planes and about 10 other ships.

Reagan said the countries of Antigua, Barbados, Dominica, St. Lucia, St. Vincent and Jamaica contributed 300 troops.

He said in addition to protecting American lives, the purpose of the operation was "to restore law and order and democracy" and to "forestall further chaos" that had existed since a military junta took over.

But the chancellor of a medical school attended by most of the Americans said they had not been in any imminent danger and that any loss of life would be Reagan's responsibility.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said after the White House briefing for congressional leaders that the Americans were "under fire, fairly heavy fire from rifles," and added that there was also "some anti-aircraft activity." But he said he was told nothing about any American casualties.

"It's incredible that we are involved in a fight in still another place," Cranston said.

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said after the briefing from the president that the landing forces had "secured the 30 USSR personnel" who had been stationed on Grenada. Others briefing a large group of congressional leaders gathered at the White House were Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Secretary of State George Shultz.

Percy, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the Soviets "will be provided safe exits from the island, but they will be asked to leave."

Reagan told reporters that the U.S. action was in response to a formal request Sunday from the Organization of Eastern Caribbean states to help restore order to the island, whose government was overthrown by what Reagan called "a brutal group of leftist thugs."

Prime Minister Maurice Bishop and several Cabinet members were killed when insurgents led by Gen. Hudson Austin, seized power in last week's coup.

Reagan made his announcement about what he called "an actual invasion" in the White House briefing room. He was accompanied by Eugenia Charles, prime minister of Dominica and the chairman of the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States.

Interviewed from Bayshore, N.Y., on NBC's "Today" show, Dr. Charles Modica, chancellor of St. George's Medical College of Grenada disputed Reagan's contention that the Americans were in danger.

Green Testifying In Defense Today

By MARY ANNE RHYNE

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green began testifying in his own defense today after a judge refused to dismiss four remaining charges in Green's bribery and conspiracy trial.

Superior Court Judge James M. Long denied the defense request to drop the charges as soon as court convened. Long ordered the jury brought in and defense attorneys called Green to the stand.

Early testimony by Green centered around his military service and his family.

On Monday, prosecutors dismissed a charge that Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green conspired with Howard F. Watts to receive a bribe.

Defense lawyers asked Long to dismiss charges that Green, 62, twice consented to receive a bribe of $10,000 a month, consented to receive a $2,000 bribe and received a $2,000 bribe. The defense argued prosecutors failed to present enough evidence to submit the charges to the jury.

Defense attorney Howard Twigg said he might present eight witnesses, including Green, and that could take two days.

Green, the only North Carolina lieutenant governor to face criminal charges, has pleaded innocent. He faces a maximum

Utilities Commission Is Asked To Cut Gas Rates

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

Margaret Wirth, chairman of the Greenville Utilities Commission, today urged the North Carolina Utilities commission to cut natural gas rates charged Greenville and other municipal customers of North Carolina Natural Gas Co.

"Our deep conviction" is that "rates should be based on cost of service, and discrimination among customers or groups of customers should be avoided," Mrs. Wirth said.

Mrs. Wirth's comments were made at a public hearing on natural gas rates held in Greenville by the state commission this morning.

The only person to appear on behalf of consumers, Mrs. Wirth said she did not appear as an expert witness, but "as an expert on the matter of seeking fairness and equitable rates for the gas consuming public in the city of Greenville."

Pointing out that GUC has completed cost-of-service studies for electricity, water and sewer service, Mrs. Wirth told the hearing, "We would hope to complete a similar study for natural gas service, but only when we can be assured that the cost of gas to Greenville is in line with the costs to North Carolina Natural of serving us."

"Our problem, and the reason for my appearance today, stems from the fact that we have no such assurance. In fact," Mrs. Wirth said, "we know that the rates charged Greenville are substantially out of line with the costs of providing service, because that is what the company's own cost of service study showed in the 1978 rate case and what the company's cost of service shows in this one."

Mrs. Wirth said that in the earlier case, "everybody's cost of service — that prepared by the company, the cost of service prepared by the Public Staff (of the N.C.

Utilities Commission), and our own 'GUC's' — showed

Tass Fumes At Neocolonialism

MOSCOW (AP) — The official Soviet news agency Tass said the U.S.-led military landing in Grenada is aimed at subordinating the Caribbean island state to "neocolonialist rule."

Tass called the landing a "foreign armed intervention guided by the U.S. administration" and said a "fierce exchange of fire" between Grenada's defenders and the invaders followed the dawn landing.

The early Tass articles made no mention of reports by U.S. congressional leaders briefed at the White House that 30 Soviet personnel in Grenada were "secured" and would be asked to leave the country.

"The (U.S.) president tried to justify the armed aggression against that small insular state by the United States' 'vital interests' in that region and by the intention of the United States and its accomplices in the intervention to 'restore democracy,'" Tass said.

It said Jamaica, Barbados, St. Lucia and Antigua had agreed to participate in the landing force. President Reagan said St. Vincent and Dominica also sent troops.

"The aim of the imperialist intervention is to put a stop to the revolutionary process in Grenada and again subordinate that country to neocolonialist rule," said Tass.

The news agency said the participation of the other Caribbean forces was "a fig leaf to cover the U.S. intervention."

It disputed U.S. claims that the Marine landing was aimed in part at protecting American citizens and assisting in their evacuation. "The Revolutionary Military Council (of Grenada) has reaffirmed that the security of the citizens of the U.S.A. and other countries resident in Grenada is fully guaranteed," said Tass.

The Soviet press has maintained that the recent coup in Grenada, in which Prime Minister Maurice Bishop was killed, was an internal affair.

Martin Thefts Investigation Brings 8 Arrests

By JERRY RAYNOR

Reflector Staff Writer

WILLIAMSTON — "This is one of the biggest rings of breaking, entering and larceny we've ever faced in Martin County, and we feel that maybe we are about to break it up," Deputy Sheriff Jerry Beach commented Monday.

Beach said that a total of 32 charges have been made against eight individuals who have been apprehended, seven male, one female, and most of them residents of the Williamston area. "Three of the eight are juveniles, the others range from their 20s to one who is 51," Beach said.

The first appearance in court of those charged will be held Monday, with the probable cause hearing to be conducted on Nov. 9, in the Martin County District Court. Of the eight charged, four remain in jail, and four have posted bond, Beach said.

"Charges filed against the group include breaking and entering, receiving stolen goods, and abetting in breaking and entering," he said.

The five adults charged are Michael Turner

Leggett, 37; Joseph B. Strevel Jr. and Joseph Ray Grizzard, both in their 20s; Linda H. Poston, 36, and 51-year old Jeffrey Moran. Beach said that "Leggett has just been released from prison a short time, about two months ago."

The breaking and entering and larceny incidents have occurred throughout the county — in Williamston, Gold Point, Robersonville, and have included a chain saw firm, other businesses and several grocery stores. "We have been working on these cases for some time, and have recovered some of the stolen goods," Beach said. "We still expect to be charging others in this ring of incidents. So far this ring has concentrated on businesses."

Beach also mentioned that the sheriff's department is engaged in investigating a number of break-ins of homes in the Farm Life area. "We expect to have something on that soon," he commented. "Most of the homes entered have been during daylight hours while people were away for one or another reason. We think we have some good leads on this case."

BABY NEEDS LIVER TRANSPLANT

Wanda Locklear of Greenville has asked Hotline to appeal for a liver transplant for her great-nephew, Josh Brooks. The baby, born Feb. 1, 1983, will die within the next two months, doctors have told his parents, Rick and June Brooks of Laurinburg, unless he has a liver transplant. He has a condition called biliary atresia, which essentially means that his liver has no ducts, Ms. Locklear said.

She came to Hotline as one more way to get before the public the urgency of Josh's plight. Anyone having information that might help in obtaining a liver from a donor about the same age and size is asked to call the Josh Brooks Hotline 919-276-8966. Donations to the Josh Brooks Liver Fund may be sent to P.O. Box 2018, Laurinburg, N.C. 27552. These donations will be used to provide for the medical needs of Josh and also for other children with similar medical needs, his parents have pledged.

Professor Says Public Needs To Know About Shopping In Outlet Stores

By MELINDA STAVALL
GREENSBORO — Boy, what a bargain! Cost-conscious consumers rush to outlets for name-brand designer jeans advertised at drastically lower prices.

The word "outlet" often conjures up expectations of great bargains and super deals. But that is not always the case, according to a study done at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. The study adds new meaning to the ageless warning of "let the buyer beware."

In some cases, the marketing of outlet stores depends on the mystique they have developed — they rely on the notion of always having the lower prices," said Dr. Melvin Hurwitz, a professor in UNC-G's Department of Clothing and Textiles, who supervised the study.

You can get good buys at outlet stores, but the public needs more education," Dr. Hurwitz continued. "There were very few flagrant violations. Outlet stores are great, but you need to know what you are buying and how and when to shop."

Essentially, the UNC-G study on whether the growing number of outlets adhere to laws governing competitive pricing and advertising revealed that, for the most part, the outlets do conform.

Despite the fact that a great number of outlets do conform, there are some misrepresentations. But the abuses are not so great that more consumer awareness and spot checking by the proper authorities and competitors cannot remedy the problems, said Dr. Hurwitz.

But many people often are not well-informed about what they are buying or about the pricing of clothes, said Malinda Wight, a senior clothing and textiles major at UNC-G, who conducted the study. Ms. Wight, who has worked several years in regular retail stores, has seen numerous persons who thought that they had bought a top quality garment from an outlet when it may have been a second.

A person paying for name-brand jeans, for example, assumes they are of good quality, but in an outlet, the fabric of a pair of jeans with that name brand can be different or the dye may be off, Ms. Wight said.

I saw in one outlet store some name-brand black denim jeans," she continued. "The dye was completely different from the ones sold in the department store and the label wasn't sewn on the same, but the garment wasn't marked as a second. Those jeans probably were manufactured for an outlet, weren't marked as a second or could have been counterfeited."

Following up on her observations earlier this year, Ms. Wight surveyed a sampling of outlet and department stores anonymously in the Burlington-Greensboro area. She set out to determine if the "suggested" retail prices on selected garments were current or not and if the outlet stores' items were, as implied in advertising, of identical style, grade or quality as the regular department store garments.

The legal test for her comparisons were the Federal Trade Commission rulings and North Carolina General Statutes governing competitive pricing practices in selling and advertising. In selecting which goods she would compare between outlet and department stores, Ms. Wight said, "I tried to stay with jeans, designer lines — garments that people could identify with."

Outlet stores were chosen on the basis of having well-known, name-brand merchandise that could simultaneously be found in the area's department stores. Those outlets selected also represented ones that would have similar outlets in other parts of the state.

Malinda's sampling simply wasn't in the fringe areas; she went into the mainstream," Dr. Hurwitz said. "The department stores were very representative and the outlet stores also were very representative and well-known."

Ms. Wight concluded in her study that the four department stores chosen had adhered to the guidelines. Of the 10 outlet stores selected, six did not provide the current suggested retail price to some degree and/or the garments were not quite up to par as to advertised quality. Of those six outlet stores, only one had provided a suggested retail price that was grossly out of line.

Legally, merchandise advertised as first quality must be backed up by the seller," Dr. Hurwitz said.

One of the easiest ways for the average consumer to become more aware about the quality and pricing of clothing, Ms. Wight said, is to shop around constantly.

Billie Miller, consumer specialist with the State Attorney General's Office, agrees. "People are more educated than ever before because they are shopping more," she said. "But there still needs to be more education about warranties, services, about what they are buying and what can be fixed, and also about refund policies."

To help consumers become more aware about clothing purchases, Ms. Wight and Dr. Hurwitz offer these tips:

- Be sure you know exactly what the sales policies of a store are, such as returns on merchandise. At some department or other standard retail stores, a customer may have as long as three months to return a garment, but many outlets will not take back clothes, unless defective.

- It adds to outlets' cost of business to take back things, plus they have to get rid of off-grade merchandise," Dr. Hurwitz said. "Most outlets have signs over the merchandise somewhere saying that they can't take back items."

- Check to see if you might not be paying this year's price for last year's garment. Although a store can charge what it wants for a garment, you may be getting a returned garment from last year for a current price, Ms. Wight said.

- A blazer made last year may be in the outlet at this year's price," she said. A way to check is to match the code number in the garment at the outlet to one at a standard retail store and find out what year the code number was made in.

- Make sure that an outlet is providing the current suggested retail price of items at department and other standard retail stores. If the prices are not current, your savings at the outlet may be less than you think or none at all — and without the services of a standard retail store, Ms. Wight said.

- Pay attention to when standard retail and outlet stores begin to mark down clothing for seasonal changes. Many department stores, for instance, begin marking down some of their winter items before Christmas, with the majority of the final mark-downs in February and March. Ms. Wight said. Many outlets may wait until April to mark down finally most of their garments and the amount of their mark-downs may be less.

As an example, Ms. Wight said a winter coat retailed in a department store at $129 and sold for $125 at an outlet. As the department store continued to mark the price of the coat down, the garment finally was selling at $89. The final mark-down price of the same coat at the outlet, however, was $99.

"The timing of the mark-downs can be important because sometimes you can do as well or better in department or other standard retail stores and get their services," Dr. Hurwitz said. "Here again, the outlets have depended on the expectation of having the lower price longer."

- Finally, just be conscious of what you are buying. If you know that you are purchasing irregulars, seconds or returned clothes, then fine, Ms. Wight said. But in view of some outlets' well-stated no return policies, it is best to be absolutely sure, she added.

Anniversary Dates Aren't Forgotten

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Please answer this in the paper because there are some folks who need to see it. I am a widow, 85 years old. I just had a wedding anniversary, and not one friend or relative sent me a card or wished me a happy anniversary. It was just like I never had an anniversary to remember.

I always remember them on their anniversaries, but if they keep forgetting mine, they are going to get exactly what they gave me—nothing!

They think that just because my mate is gone that date doesn't mean anything to me anymore. Well, they are wrong. It still means a lot to me.

HURT IN LEXINGTON

DEAR HURT: I'll print your letter to let those who ignore the wedding anniversaries of widows know that their remembrances are missed. In most cases, however, the date is not forgotten; friends and relatives think they're being kind by not reminding the widow of her loss.

DEAR ABBY: What can a wife do about a husband who constantly buys porno magazines? I don't mean just Playboy and Hustler, I mean magazines with one nude picture after another—no articles at all.

We've had many fights about this. It's been going on for five years. I've threatened to leave him, then he promises he won't buy any more, but I keep finding them hidden all over the house. I even found some stashed under his car seat.

We have three kids, and when I think of how much money my husband has spent on this filth when it should have been spent on the kids, I could cry.

I am not bad-looking, Abby. I'm 27, have a good figure and I'm still asked for my ID when we go out. I even get whistles from guys when I'm in the car or walking by myself.

Why does my husband keep buying this filth? He knows how much it hurts me. He will get up in the middle of the night to read these magazines, then he wakes me up for a little fun. I feel so used. What can I do? He says he loves me just the way I am.

HURT AND BETRAYED

DEAR HURT: Believe it or not, your husband's preoccupation with nude pictures has nothing to do with you. If he loves you and wants your marriage to survive he will see a therapist about his problem—and it is a problem if it's damaging your marriage.

See a family therapist with him. You both need to understand why your husband needs these magazines. Share this letter with him today. It could save your marriage.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you had a poem in your column that started with, "Thank God for dirty dishes." I clipped it, hoping to make a needlepoint sampler of it to frame and hang in my kitchen. Now I can't find it, and I'm going crazy looking for it.

Can you help me, please?

ANNA IN ASHTABULA

DEAR ANNA: Yes:

Thank God for dirty dishes,
They have a tale to tell;
While other folks go hungry,
We're eating very well.
With Home and Health and Happiness
We shouldn't want to fuss,
For by this stack of evidence,
God's very good to us!

WATER, WATER

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A strenuous exerciser sweating at the normal rate of 1.5 quarts per hour should be concerned with replacing water, not salt (sweat is essentially salt and water).

"Immediately after exercising, people normally drink about half of what they've lost," says Dr. Albert Craig, a professor of physiology at the University of Rochester Medical Center. "They replace the rest later."

Craig warns against taking salt tablets: "With a one-grain tablet, you ingest more salt than you've lost, so you can get even thirstier. You'll get enough salt in your food to replace what you've lost."

Cooking Is Fun

Associated Press Food Editor

Born in Hong Kong, Agnes Ng pronounced "ing" came to the United States when she was 13. She graduated from the University of Colorado with a degree in international communications. Now she works on international accounts in a large New York City office.

All during her high school and college days she enjoyed American food, and she still does. And often now she lunches or dines in New York's fine restaurants — French, Italian, Greek. You name it.

But even after all these years she gets nostalgic for a special dish and the particular way it was made in her childhood home in Hong Kong. As a result, she has recreated some of those dishes from memory.

Shrimp with Black Bean Sauce is one of them. When I heard about it, I asked for the recipe.

"I haven't one," Agnes said. "Someone will have to come over to my house and measure what I put in and write down what I do."

And that's what someone — a mutual friend of Agnes and mine — did. Now I can offer you a recipe for what up to now has been Agnes' secret.

SHRIMP WITH BLACK BEAN SAUCE

- 1 1/2 tablespoons fermented black beans
- 1 large clove garlic, crushed (1 teaspoon)
- Corn oil
- 1 pound small shrimp, peeled and deveined
- 1 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1 cup cool chicken bouillon or clear fat-free broth
- 1 tablespoon hoisin sauce
- 1/4 cup thinly sliced scallion
- 1 teaspoon minced fresh ginger root
- Hot cooked rice

In a medium bowl with the back of a spoon crush the black beans, garlic and 1 teaspoon corn oil into a smooth paste. Add shrimp; toss to coat well.

In a small bowl stir together the cornstarch, bouillon and hoisin sauce until smooth.

In a large skillet or wok heat 1 tablespoon corn oil over medium-high heat. Add shrimp mixture, scallion and ginger; stir fry until shrimp turns pink — 1 or 2 minutes. Restir cornstarch mixture; add to shrimp mixture. Stirring constantly, bring to a boil over medium heat and boil until thickened. Serve with rice. Makes 4 servings.

Note: Fermented black beans and hoisin sauce are available in Chinese food shops and by mail order.

The honor attendant wore a cranberry matte taffeta gown with a front draped tea length skirt and low back. She carried a nosegay of burgundy and mauve silk daisies, snapdragons, lilies and baby's breath interspersed with greenery and ribbons.

The attendants each wore cranberry matte taffeta gowns with front draped tea length skirt and low back. They wore halos matching their nosegays which were like that of the honor attendant.

The flower girls wore cranberry dresses styled with fitted waistlines and flowing skirts with ruffles. Each carried a basket with silk slowers matching the bridesmaids.

A reception was held at the church.

The couple will live in Kinston after a wedding trip to the mountains.

The bride is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and teaches school in the Kinston City Schools. The bridegroom graduated from Campbell University and is owner and manager of Lamplighter Shoppe in Kinston.

The bridegroom's parents entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner at the Barbecue Lodge.

A bridesmaids luncheon was held at the home of Bonnie Avery of Greenville and was given by the bride's aunts, Lucille Avery, Peggy Avery, Bonnie Avery and Mae Nobles.

Several showers were given for the couple prior to their marriage.

District Chairperson Named For Campaign

GREENSBORO — Martha Smith Ferrell of Greenville will serve as campaign chairperson for District Two in the N.C. Alumni, Parents and Friends Division of the $12 million Prospectus III Campaign which is being conducted by the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

The kickoff meeting for the district will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday at the Holiday Inn in Kinston. District Two has 13 counties. County chairpersons and volunteers from the counties will attend the meeting.

The Prospectus III Campaign is the first comprehensive capital gifts campaign for private support in UNC-G's 91-year history. Currently the drive has received gifts and pledges totaling approximately $9.7 million from corporations, foundations, alumni and friends of the institution.

A graduate of UNC-G, Mrs. Ferrell is a medical technologist with Pitt Memorial Hospital. She has been a trustee of the UNC-G Alumni Association and president of her local alumni chapter. Active in her church, she was the first woman in the 200-year history of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church to serve as chairman of the administrative board.

David B. McDonald, director of development at UNC-G, said that approximately 1,100 UNC-G alumni live in the District Two.

County chairpersons working with Mrs. Ferrell include: Evelyn Griffin Garner, Greenville; Genevieve Whittington Exum, Snow Hill.

Prospectus III was formally announced in May 1982. Within its $12 million goal, the drive contains the following objectives: faculty development, $4 million; student development, $3 million; art center, $3.5 million; university enrichment, $750,000; equipment, $750,000.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I'm intrigued by these young people who get up one morning and decide to climb up the side of the Hancock building in Chicago or the world Trade building in New York for no reason. I mean if their car was parked on the top floor, I'd understand.

My kids won't walk anywhere. I listened to one of them make 15 phone calls one morning trying to hitch a ride to a 10-K run four blocks from our house.

I told them, "Everyone needs a role model. What about this man who climbed the 1,575 steps to the top of the Empire State building in 11 minutes and 36 seconds?"

"Why would he want to do that?" asked my son.

"Maybe just to show the world what it feels like to be on top of it."

"Oh, sure," he grumbled. "Look where it got King Kong."

In retrospect, a lot of it is my fault. I didn't trust the product I produced enough to know that it could withstand rain, snow, heat and strong winds. If my kids had to cross a busy street, I drove them there. If they overslept, I drove. If there was a dog in heat who was a public embarrassment, I drove them quickly by the house and turned up the radio.

By the time they were 9 or 10, they were completely mechanized. I remember being called to school one day when my son was hit with a baseball on the playground.

The kid refused to get into the ambulance until I assured him the hospital had valet parking.

It was of great concern to me that my kids wouldn't pass puberty until they were carpoiled.

Their teenage years followed the entrance of the drive-in to the American scene. After all, how many people walk to a drive-in? They did everything in cars. They saw movies in them, did their banking, dropped off their film and rolled up the car windows and had their cars washed.

Neither rain, nor snow, nor gas shortages can stay this generation from their appointed rounds. The hands that hold the car keys rule the world!

My son stopped by the other night and as he sat in the driveway with his motor idling, I couldn't help but wonder if he was tall like his father.

And about those kids who climb tall buildings. It wouldn't surprise me if when they get home and their mother asks them to go out for a quart of milk, they whine, "I just scaled the United Nations building and you want me to go out for milk! Are you crazy?"

Cleaning Sequins Can Be Risky

NEW YORK (UPI) — Select new sequinned, bead-trimmed or rhinestone-trimmed evening wear carefully, says a dry cleaning association executive.

"If glittering trimmings are glued on instead of being sewn on, the adhesive may dissolve in dry cleaning solvent, even if your dry cleaner utilizes special care," says Bill Seitz, executive director of The Neighborhood Cleaners' Association, a nine-state trade group.

Even sewing is no guarantee of complete protection, Seitz said.

For example, chain-stitched beads or sequins may fall off if just one stitch unravels. Individually stitched ones are more secure.

Many sequins are adversely affected by sunlight and common chemicals, Seitz said.

Rhinestones, which are usually glued, can be dislodged easily.

Plastic trims may melt from heat and contact with dry cleaning solvent, he said.

He suggests testing beads for color fastness by rubbing them with a moist tissue. "If the color comes off, don't buy it."

"If you have any questions, discuss solvent solubility with your drycleaner."

Body Wraps Can Be Dangerous

PUEBLO, Colo. (UPI) — Rubber sweatsuits and wraps have no effect on fat deposits and will not dissolve fat, even temporarily.

A government publication says most medical experts agree such treatment will cause a loss of inches and perhaps pounds because the rapid and excessive fluid loss can cause severe dehydration and upset the balance of important chemicals in the body.

Successful Season

The Greenville Tobacco Market began its sales year with considerable apprehension.

Clouds, as always, hung over the tobacco industry and during the first sales days a high percentage of tobacco was going to Stabilization Corp.

Last Tuesday, however, the market completed its 1983 sales season and it was on a happy note.

The market ended the season with the highest season average ever and also the highest average for the Bright Leaf Belt.

Sales Supervisor J.N. Bryan said the market's average for the 1983 season was $185.10. The market sold 31,998,102 pounds for $59,229,172 during its 42 sales days. The average for the previous year was $178.99 per hundred pounds, although more pounds were sold.

Stabilization receipts for the year from the Greenville market were 12 percent of total sales, a figure which looks considerable better than for the early days of sales.

Tobacco growers have had plenty to worry about this year, with attacks and changes in the tobacco program and uncooperative weather conditions. The growers in this year, however, seem to have come through with a reasonably good year and that is to the advantage of the area economy.

Proving Its Worth

The Greenville Area Transit system bucked a downward trend across the state and recorded a 10.4 percent increase in ridership.

The state Department of Transportation reports that ridership for all 14 municipal transit systems in North Carolina was down by 5.5 percent during fiscal 1983.

Greenville not only had an increase; it also enjoyed an exceptional increase during the fourth quarter at 18.4 percent.

Bus mileage for the GREAT system was down by 1.04 percent and the net cost of operating the system was down 10.9 percent at $145,759.

Certainly the goal of the public bus system is to carry the optimum number of passengers. That brings in more revenue, reduces the cost per passenger and shows that the system is providing the service for which it was intended.

Conservatism

NEW YORK AP. — For the first time in his memory, said Richard Leshner, U.S. Chamber of Commerce president, "The Democratic Party hasn't had a proposal for more spending as the centerpiece of its platform."

The Republican is right, he says. It is to maintain a reputation that the Democrats have lost. He says that the Democrats have lost the popular vote there on the liberal end of the spectrum.

It is acknowledged, he says, that the nation has come to understand its problems and may even be ready to deal with them. And that it understands the relationship between big spending, budget deficits, inflation, and recession.

There is much evidence to be found these days, he says, that "The public sector will reconsider the damage that it has done because of overspending and over-regulating." In short, that elected officials will be more conservative.

Leshner, an aggressive advocate of private enterprise, is nevertheless far from satisfied, and judging from his comments, maybe a bit less certain than he admits about the conservative turn he describes.

Across-the-board spending cuts rather than piecemeal reductions are needed to bring the deficit to manageable levels, he says, because otherwise "you get into the issues of rich vs. poor and guns vs. butter."

But he doesn't expect to see such cuts until after the elections. "Congress is still playing games with it," said Leshner in an interview.

Meanwhile, the dangers as he sees them increase. Interest rates already have in them some expectation of problems, he says — the danger, for example, of rates "as high or higher than those of two years ago."

Two years ago the prime interest rate hit 21.5 percent before beginning its gradual fall to today's 11 percent level. But that lower rate reflects the recent recession and a drop in private-sector borrowing. And as the expansion began, business was able to finance needs from cash flow rather than debt.

Now, with utilization of plants and equipment rising from less than 70 percent to 80 percent or more of capacity, business soon must raise its level of borrowing, competing with government for the same dollar.

The pressure must be relieved through government budget-cutting, says Leshner, who estimates that federal government spending accounts for 25 percent of gross national product, "representing careless management of the country's resources, past and present, and administrations past and present."

Leshner adds that the 25 percent figure doesn't accurately represent the total involvement of government. He points out that if you add in state and local government spending the total comes to about 37 percent of the GNP.

"Beyond that," he observes, "there are enormous private-sector costs in looking after government interests," such as paper work, "none of which helps to build a better mousetrap."

While government involvement, relative to GNP, has risen under President Reagan, Leshner is willing to give the president "a good rating overall — very strong on tax policy, an A, but weaker on spending, a C."

The economy has improved dramatically, says Leshner. "Interest rates and inflation are the best data points, and by election time unemployment will be down to around 8 percent." It was 7.4 percent when Reagan took office.

Leshner calls the tax cut of 1981 "the most important thing to encourage business investment." But that business investment, he concedes, soon could collide with government's need to finance its big deficits.

What is needed, Leshner repeats, "is a more aggressive approach to spending cuts," and he foresees the possibility of that occurring in 1984.

The first step, he suggests, has occurred. "The good news is that we have recognized the problems." And to Leshner, the solutions to America's problems begin with cuts in government spending and the federal deficit.

RALEIGH — They appear to be some of society's finest. They're doctors, dentists, optometrists and pharmacists. Some own nursing homes. Some own ambulance services. Actually, they're just crooks.

The target of their greed is Medicaid, the state-federal program that provides medical service to the poor. They've got ingenious little ways to steal a few dollars at a time. They claim to have done more work that they did. They claim to have provided higher quality service than they did. Over time, they're stealing a fortune.

The SBI is currently investigating 48 cases of Medicaid fraud in North Carolina. Since 1979, the SBI has won 36 Medicaid fraud convictions. Only four people have actually served jail sentences, but the state has recovered about $750,000 in fines and restitution.

Don Grimes, the director of the SBI's Medicaid fraud unit, says the N.C. Department of Human Resources and the SBI constantly monitor the billing patterns of each of the state's 10,000 Medicaid health care providers. A computer compares the billing pattern of each provider to the general pattern of all others in his same profession. If one dentist is charging Medicaid for an abnormal number of high cost dentures, it may be time to look at that dentist more closely.

Grimes says that inside information is just as valuable as the computer billing profiles. Employees who actually work on patients will notice that a doctor or dentist changes the records to indicate that more work was done. They realize it's dishonest and they call the SBI. "We've had good luck that way," Grimes chuckles.

People have always found ways to steal from the government. But with Medicaid they may be taking an extraordinary risk in doing so. Grimes notes that the program requires a great deal of documentation and health care requires so much extra record-keeping. That leaves a neat paper trail for investigators to follow.

The rip-offs they've found follow general patterns. Pharmacists have billed Medicaid for drugs they never dispensed, or for brand name drugs when they actually dispensed generics. Doctors, dentists and optometrists have been convicted of exaggerating their claims. Maybe a doctor billed for a half-hour with a patient but really only spent five minutes.

Ambulance services have billed for transportation they never provided.

Nursing homes have billed for extra patient days, and they've been caught billing the patient for service for which Medicaid had already paid.

The SBI suspects that some providers have submitted hundreds of fraudulent bills. When they prepare a case, however, the SBI has the resources to nail down only a dozen or two on each defendant. They may charge a doctor with stealing a hundred dollars, Grimes says, but usually they're convinced he actually stole thousands. Because of these limitations, the SBI rarely seeks prison sentences in these cases. They prefer to bargain for a guilty plea, plus fines and restitution that equals all the fraud they suspect, not just what they can prove.

One case demonstrated his point. A doctor in the east was charged with 20 counts of fraud that totaled about $175. He pleaded guilty and agreed to pay a $90,000 fine.

In addition to the fines and suspended jail sentences, these doctors, dentists and pharmacists also lose their livelihoods because their licenses are usually revoked. And they lose the respect of their peers, too, when everyone finds out they're just crooks.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The deployment of Cruise and Pershing II missiles is scheduled by the Reagan administration in the next few weeks. My concern as a physician and parent is that nuclear war is a fatal disease for mankind which has no cure. These weapons make accidental nuclear war more likely. They do not add to our deterrence strength. Instead, they increase the likelihood of errors in human judgment or lethal computer errors by either side, by diminishing the time from launch to impact (eight minutes for the Pershing missile). They make nuclear war too easy to start and impossible to end.

These dangerous deployments represent a unilateral escalation of the arms race. They make any chance of arms control yet more bleak. The Russian government is paranoid and has an inferiority complex in its awe of the United States, always trying to catch up to us in weapons technology. The Russian military system is prone to panic and over-reaction, as recently proven by the Korean airliner tragedy. Playing "nuclear chicken" with the Soviet Union risks a fatal irrational response.

When we pull the nuclear tripwire tighter, we threaten our own children with nuclear death. America will no longer be the land of the free when we are all forced against our wills to die of burns and/or radiation poisoning from senseless, accidental nuclear war.

Can the President be influenced by the opinions of his countrymen? Or will he sacrifice the future of our great nation and all our children, for political expediency? Now is the time to write or call our concerns to our President and Congressmen. Because our technology has advanced so far, the time grows short.

Politics Has A Role

WASHINGTON — A big question mark for Los Angeles Olympic planners is the disposition of Soviet athletes. It already seems likely that politics could keep the Soviet team in Moscow next summer.

Several conservative California assemblymen have threatened to pull a Mario Cuomo and keep the Soviet athletes from landing in Los Angeles. Meanwhile, it's possible that the Soviets, still reeling from the Korean Air Lines fiasco, could decline to compete, citing cold war politics.

But if the Soviets don't show, their reason could have more to do with athletics than politics. Track and field experts who've spoken with their Eastern bloc counterparts speculate that the Soviets may default for fear of losing badly in L.A.

During the world track championships in Helsinki last August, the Russians captured only six of an expected 10 gold medals. The poor showing reportedly led Soviet coaches to ship the team home immediately, canceling coveted leisure time in Finland.

Meanwhile, Western coaches say the Soviets may win no more than five or six of 41 track and field events (compared with 16 gold medals in 1980). The Soviets are strong in the pole vault, men's and women's high jump, men's 1600-meter relay and men's hammer throw. But the U.S.S.R. has no first-rate distance runners.

"The Russians aren't going to come to Los Angeles (to) be devastated by the Americans," a U.S. coach told us. "If their athletes don't perform well at a few indoor meets in Europe this winter, you can scratch them from the Summer Games."

Of course, if the Russians stay home, Pravda will cite something like "U.S. Imperialism." But everyone will know better.

Footnote: President Reagan's political lieutenants intend to milk the Summer Games for all they're worth, particularly if the Soviets make the trip. They say that an impressive U.S. Olympic victory in Los Angeles, coming a week before the Republican National Convention in Dallas, could lend an impression that America under Reagan is a winning combination.

With a negligible ranking in voter surveys and a debt of more than $700,000, Sen. Gary Hart remains in the race for 1984's Democratic presidential nomination. Hubris isn't the only reason. Hart has admitted to colleagues that he won't withdraw until January 1984, when Uncle Sam hands out "matching funds" for nearly $600,000 which the Coloradan has raised himself. Whether he needs to wait until then, however, is another matter; the Federal Election Commission has no rule requiring a candidate to stay in until the matching funds are handed out.

Vice President Bush followed up a three-day visit to Jamaica last week with little more than 12 hours in San Juan, P.R., the site of a major speech. Aides say the brevity of the stop-over stemmed from a reluctance to fan domestic tensions over the statehood issue.

Of the 10.4 million Americans looking for work in September, only 3.4 million, or 32.8 percent, collected unemployment compensation, according to a recent report by the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities in Washington. The report said September's percentage was the lowest in the 48-year history of the nation's jobless aid program.

Ketchup Is A Necessity

reply: not especially.

But if the matter were to be abandoned without further examination, this column would run about eight inches short. Let us pursue the proposal more critically, and let us begin by studying the example of the states.

Our investigation will disclose that nearly all of the sovereign states have an official flower, bird, tree and song. Many of them also have an official mineral, fish, insect, rock, stone and gem. Three states have official reptiles; four have official beverages. Idaho and Massachusetts have official state horses, though they are not the same horses. Pennsylvania has an official dog, the Great Dane, and Virginia has an official shell, the oyster.

But we will discover that only one state, the state of Texas, has an official state dish. Naturally this is chili, so our search for precedent concludes on an affirmative note. To proclaim a national food would not be the kind of reckless innovation that conservatives abhor.

Is chili the best possible choice? It sorely grieves me to oppose the resolution, for nothing beats a bowl of five-alarm chili on a cold day in the mountains, but objection must be voiced. Chili, despite its manifest merits, cannot truly be acclaimed as a national dish. It is no more national than a lobster, a side order of grits or a plate of black-eyed peas. If any resolution at all is to be adopted, should we not look to a more nearly universal culinary delight? Specifically, should we not consider the turnip?

The turnip, it seems to me, has every virtue one might ask for in an official national food. It is sturdy; it is modest. It is possessed of a flavor that cannot easily be forgotten. The turnip obligingly makes available both its bottom and its top. No other vegetable can make the same claim. Unlike chili, which must rely upon Tabasco to make one's eyes water, the turnip can make one's eyes water with no help at all. It is self-reliant. It grows anywhere. It is cheap.

Other arguments in the turnip's behalf could readily be advanced, but these may be reserved for debate when the name of the turnip is advanced as an amendment to the chili resolution. Understand, I beg you, that my mind is not closed on this important matter. There is much to be said for the pork chop, the broiler and the sirloin steak, but I leave it to others to sponsor these entries. The humble turnip is first choice for me.

Strength For Today

The newspapers often carry the horrifying stories of people who have gone "berserk." This word comes from the day when savage warriors clothed in animal skins and heaving in every respect like animals, cast themselves upon their enemies and very often upon innocent people.

A man today goes berserk when he gets into a frenzied rage and becomes, temporarily at least, a ravaging animal.

There is only a thin shell covering the svagery of us all.

We should remember that the human race has been savage for a much longer period of time than it has been civilized. The loss of temper and self-control, the opening of the floodgates of hatred — these are part of the animal nature. The possibility is in every one of us.

But we also have within us a spark of the divine. Triumphant living consists in getting the divine into the dominant position and making the physical serve the spiritual.

Farm Scene

By MITCH SMITH
Agricultural Extension Agent

The summer drought of 1983 caused much economic distress to many farmers. One possible solution to this problem may be found in wheat. Fall-planted crops such as wheat offer opportunities for double cropping. Farmers who practice double cropping and no-till may benefit from several examples as follows: conservation of moisture, reduction of erosion, intensification of land use through rotations which lessens severity of insects, diseases and weed infestations and increasing profits by decreasing labor, thus saving time and reducing production costs (fuel, etc.).

Although the 1984 wheat program is not as attractive as last year's program, growers still stand to make a greater return by double cropping in contrast to monoculture. Wheat prices are projected to be slightly higher than last year's $3 per bushel. Projections reveal that prices should remain in the range of $3.30-$3.75 per bushel by harvest time. An even greater return might be experienced if growers considered booking their wheat or using advanced contracts.

Should one consider the use of wheat in his management operation, there are a number of factors which should be examined. The success of any agricultural crop is dependent upon the fertility of the soil. The best way to know the fertility needs of a particular field is through a soil sample. The soil sample should be taken in a manner which is representative of a whole field. By avoiding low areas and differences in soil type a uniform sample can closely monitor the nutrient levels in the soil. After a sample has been analyzed the fertilizer required by the soil test can be applied.

Liming is also another consideration. The optimum pH for wheat is 5.7 to 5.8. If soil is suspected to exhibit a pH of 5 or less wheat is not recommended as a crop to be used. Liming the soil enables the farmer to adjust the pH to the optimum level.

The soil sample is essential to accurate assessment of the nutrient level, but how are fields to be fertilized without a test? If a farmer knows the history of a field and is confident that the pH is 5.7-6, he could fertilize according to the previous crop. Wheat planted behind PIK land should receive 200 pounds of 10-20-20 with the rest of the nitrogen being applied between Feb. 15 and March 15. Wheat which is to follow soybeans should receive no nitrogen in the fertilizer and only potash. Soils in the coastal plains are accumulating high levels of phosphorus, so none is recommended to be applied.

Although this might prove to be a decent fertility program, there is no substitute for the soil test. The soil test stands the most accurate way of determining the fertility level in the soil. Farmers should make every effort to exercise this practice.

After the fertility has been adjusted the next step is to select a proven variety. Unlike oats and barley, wheat seed is plentiful this year. Although many older varieties have proven yield records, newer varieties like Pioneer 2550, Coker 916, Tyler and Wheeler are more resistant to disease. Other high-yielding varieties are available but due to their longevity on the market, they may be more susceptible than those listed.

Further information is available through the following publications: "Small Grain On-Farm Test Report 1983," "Small Grain Production Guide," "Variety Selection," "Tips for Seedling Small Grain" and "Measured Crop Performance for Small Grains 1983."

Intruder Is A Big Black Bear

CHERRY POINT (AP) — Military police and state officials sought an intruder at the Naval Air Rework Facility — but they weren't worried that their quarry might steal classified information.

The intruder was a huge black bear.

The animal ambled into an office building and accosted a security guard before dawn Monday, said Maj. Dennis Brooks, public information officer for the air station.

"He (the bear) just stuck his head in the window like he belonged there," Brooks said.

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer
ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — The slaughter began at 2 p.m. The youngest survivor, an 11-year-old girl, remembers because her family was sitting down to lunch when Soviet soldiers burst through the door.

"We were all frightened," she said. "My parents offered them the keys to the family strong box where we kept all our valuables. We thought they had come to search the house."

They hadn't. Instead they tossed a grenade into the room where the family of eight was seated with nine guests. When the smoke cleared the intruders sprayed the room with gunfire, and the girl was the only one who lived.

Throughout the afternoon of Thursday, Oct. 13, Soviet troops lobbed grenades as they went from house to house, leaving a trail of destruction. By dusk, 51 villagers of Kolchabad were dead.

That account of Soviet brutality was told by Habibullah Karzai, a former Afghan diplomat living in the Pakistan border town of Quetta.

According to the version of events he heard from survivors, Karzai said Soviet atrocities also took place at the nearby villages of Moshkizai and Timor Kalacha, which he said are located on the outskirts of Kandahar city in southeastern Afghanistan.

The survivors said a total of 126 civilians were killed. Karzai, himself a resistance member directing guerrilla operations in the Kandahar area, has proved credible in past dispatches from the region.

In an interview, he said he thought the massacres were in reprisal for guerrilla attacks earlier in the week on Soviet convoys when troops began installing military outposts around Kandahar.

In two attacks, Moslem rebels managed to destroy 18 tanks and armored vehicles, he said, adding two helicopters transported Soviet dead and wounded back to Kandahar.

Karzai, who represented the Kabul government at the United Nations in 1972, said he believed refugees' accounts.

"These sort of stories are impossible to prove," he said. "But when you consider that over 3 million people have fled the country since the Soviets moved in and these are the sort of stories that have started coming out, you have to pause and think for a moment."

About 100,000 Soviet troops moved into Afghanistan in December 1979 to install the pro-Moscow regime of Babrak Karmal.

Karzai also said the death toll from the Soviet reprisals would have been far higher were it not for the fact that many villagers managed to flee before troops encircled the area.

"The tragedy is that almost all the victims were old men, women and children," he said. "When the mujahedeen (guerrillas) launch an attack they never return to their villages — they always seek safety in the hills."

Again quoting survivors, Karzai said Soviet troops plundered the village of Timor Kalacha, bayoneting women and children. Forty villagers were killed, he said.

"Usually when troops encircle places where they think guerrillas are in hiding they announce through loudspeakers that the people have three alternatives: they can surrender and take up arms to defend the homeland, they can take refuge to Pakistan or they can die," he said.

"But on this particular day they announced there is a price to pay for everything. The refugees told me that the Soviets told them they had decided to teach them a lesson."

He said the 11 members of the Mullah Shair Mohammed household were killed that afternoon, including a 6-month-old child.

In the village's two mosques five people were gunned down as they prayed, he added. The next day villagers recited prayers for the dead and then buried them.

In nearby Moshkizai 35 villagers were executed, he said, and the only survivor was a young bride. "For four hours she ran from house to house seeking help," he said. "But everybody was dead."

Other Afghans in the area expressed no surprise about the reports of Soviet atrocities.

"For four years the Russians have been bombing towns and villages, killing women and children. How is that different from bayoneting people or blowing up houses with grenades?" asked Zia Javad, a resistance sympathizer.

"You will be shocked if I tell you that time and again the Russians have taken their prisoners for helicopter rides. When they reach a high altitude they toss them out. When are you Westerners going to believe the Russians are capable of such things?"

House Finally To Decide Extent Of Tax Increase

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of fervent appeals for fiscal responsibility, the House is about to decide how much taxes should be raised to reduce the federal deficit.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, is soliciting support for an amendment that would cost taxpayers another $11.5 billion over the next three years, delaying scheduled tax cuts on cigarettes, telephone services and interest from savings.

Most economists agree that continued deficits in the $200-a-billion-a-year range will dispute recovery from the recession. Rostenkowski said Monday in a letter to colleagues. Although his "tax-freeze" amendment is only a modest step, he added, it is the largest realistic deficit-reducing measure that can be enacted this year.

"The freeze does not raise anyone's taxes, but only postpones tax reductions scheduled for the future," Rostenkowski said. "If Congress cannot take this modest step, good hope is there that they will take the tough actions that will be necessary in the future to get the deficit under control."

Rostenkowski's committee has approved a bill that would raise taxes by about $8 billion over the next three years, with most of the money coming from high-income investors and life insurance companies.

When the House considers that proposal on Thursday, Rostenkowski will ask that it also approve his amendment, which would run the deficit-reducing total to nearly $20 billion over three years.

Still being prepared is another amendment, which would raise taxes by $73 billion over the three years — the figure called for earlier this year when Congress approved a target budget for 1984.

That plan would have to find another $53 billion more in tax increases above the Ways and Means bill and Rostenkowski's amendment. It is being drafted by first-term House Democrats and by the Democratic Study Group, an organization of moderate-to-liberal Democrats in the House.

Still unclear is just how the Reagan administration would greet any tax-increase plan this year. President Reagan has repeatedly said he opposes any tax increase in 1984. What is uncertain is whether the president and his advisers would view the Ways and Means and Rostenkowski proposals as tax increases or just "revenue enhancement," a phrase that adorned last year's plan, signed by Reagan. At the time the plan was estimated to cost taxpayers $100.4 billion over three years.

Revenue enhancement is used to describe a tax increase that falls only on selected groups of taxpayers.

The biggest single item in Rostenkowski's proposal would delay the start of a new law that, beginning in 1985, would allow a new interest deduction for individuals. A person could exempt from tax 15 percent of interest income after subtracting interest paid on loans except those for cars and homes. The delay would cost taxpayers $3.9 billion over the three years.

The federal cigarette tax of 16 cents a pack, due to drop to 8 cents after Sept. 30, 1985, would remain at the higher level until Jan. 1, 1987. This would cost smokers $1.9 billion. Similarly, the federal tax on telephone service would be frozen at 3 percent until the end of 1987, at a cost of $1.2 billion.

Another part of Rostenkowski's amendment would retain the present 60 percent top tax rate on estates until 1986 and allow it to drop to 50 percent in 1988. This would cost taxpayers $700 million.

Stakes In Lebanon Emphasized

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is escalating the rationale for his Lebanon policy by suggesting that a U.S. military withdrawal could lead to Soviet domination of the entire Middle East and a cutoff of Western access to the region's oil supplies.

By depicting the stakes in those terms Monday, Reagan indicated that previous administration justifications for the Marine presence in Lebanon did not go to the heart of the issue.

Before Monday, the administration had been defending the Marines' mission in more limited terms: to make Israel's northern border secure, to help achieve Lebanese national reconciliation and to promote the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon.

But Reagan, speaking a day after the Beirut airport massacre, said the stakes involved not only Lebanon's political future but that of the entire Middle East, the security of Western oil supplies and American global credibility as well.

Reagan noted that forces loyal to the Soviet Union have taken over in such countries as South Yemen and Ethiopia and "it would be a disaster" if forces with similar orientation were able to spread their influence throughout the Middle East.

And, citing the presence of several thousand Soviet military advisers in Syria, Reagan said pro-Soviet forces are poised to move elsewhere in the region.

He added, "If Lebanon ends up under the tyranny of forces hostile to the West, not only will our strategic position in the eastern Mediterranean be threatened, but also the stability of the entire Middle East, including the vast resource areas of the Arabian peninsula."

Despite the enormity of the stakes, Reagan said it would be a mistake for American forces to become involved in the area other than in a peacekeeping role. If Americans were to go into combat, "We would be fighting Arab states, and that is not the road to peace," he said.

Reagan's statement left some analysts wondering whether the administration can achieve its ambitious objectives for the region with 1,600 non-combatant Marines.

There were echoes in Reagan's remarks Monday of his speech last April in which he outlined what would happen if Congress rejected his proposed $600 million aid request — a trifling sum nowadays — for Central America: "Our credibility would collapse, our alliances would crumble, the safety of our homeland would be put in jeopardy."

Reagan sounded much the same Monday as discussing Lebanon: "We have vital interests in Lebanon and our actions in Lebanon are in the cause of world peace. ... To the extent that the prospect for future stability is heavily influenced by the presence of our forces, it is central to our credibility on a global scale."

In both Lebanon and Central America, Reagan is warning of serious consequences if the United States abandons its friends. But he is reluctant to commit more than minimal resources to get the job done, apparently recognizing that to do otherwise would entail a heavy political price at home.

Concerned Debate May Reduce Tobacco Quotas

By The Associated Press
Tobacco growers and their representatives are worried that prolonged debate on tobacco and dairy legislation pending in Congress could drastically reduce leaf quotas and might put many North Carolina dairy farmers out of business.

If the tobacco bill has not been enacted by Dec. 1, the last day the secretary of agriculture can announce his quota decision, James Oliver of the N.C. State Grange said, "We can expect a 10 to 12 percent cut."

For dairy farmers, the new legislation would reduce to 30 cents the current federal assessment of $1 on every 100 pounds of milk they sell. Each day the higher assessment remains in effect means more dairymen will go broke, state dairy leaders have said.

When Congress voted last week to delay the legislation, leaders of three major state farm groups told Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., farmers will suffer if the legislation is prolonged.

The U.S. Senate already has passed the legislation. But the House, amid criticism of a part of the bill dealing with the dairy program, voted not to bypass action on the measure by diverting it to a House-Senate conference committee.

The tobacco portion of the legislation authorizes changes in price supports and the lease-transfer system of allotments, the government-granted right to grow tobacco.

Speedy passage of the tobacco bill in Congress could prevent the quota for blue-cured tobacco in 1984 from being cut sharply, said John Sledge, president of the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation.

Oliver said if the tobacco bill becomes law before Dec. 1, it would be possible for the secretary to keep the quota at the same level or cut it no more than 5 percent.

T. Carlton Blacklock, executive director of the N.C.

Tobacco Growers Association, agreed. The two hope the quota won't be cut at all.

Sledge said the pending dairy legislation is not as satisfactory as the state's dairy farmers would like. But it would give farmers some relief, he said.

See Related Shootings

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A gunman wounded a Marine and a truck driver in separate shootings along U.S. 70, Wayne County sheriff's deputies said.

The shootings occurred in the same area and are believed related, deputies said.

Marine Pfc. Roland Grant was shot once in the leg Monday by one of eight bullets fired at his vehicle, said Sheriff's Investigator Earl Lewis. He was treated at Lenoir County Memorial Hospital and released.

About an hour later, Gerald Grant of Goldsboro was shot twice when he got out of the tractor-trailer truck he was driving to inspect a tire. He was listed in satisfactory condition at Wayne Memorial Hospital.

Lewis said Grant "heard a noise similar to an explosion and stopped the tractor-trailer rig to check his tires for a blowout."

"As he rounded the front of the rig, he was confronted by a white male with a handgun" who robbed Grant of $50 and shot him in the chest. The gunman ordered Grant to drive him to Wallace, N.C., but they had barely started when a sheriff's car approached and the assailant jumped from the truck.

Second Place Won At Fair

Mark Flanagan of Farmville won second place in the Simmental Heifer competition at the North Carolina State Fair.

Five other Farmville youths competed in the event and placed and the same five also participated in the Southeastern Heifer Show in Kinston recently. Tyson Warren was selected as junior showmanship champion and Chris Powell won the senior showmanship.

Link Bonus To Productivity

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Bonuses and raises will increasingly go to highly productive workers as North Carolina companies strive to reduce costs and improve efficiency, business executives and consultants say.

"What I'm hearing from Carolinas companies is that they are tying compensation as much as they can to individual performance," said Bob Allsbrook, chief economist for First Union National Bank in Charlotte. "There is a closer identification of reward with performance."

He cited his own bank's system of paying its trust department investment analysts bonuses based on the performance of their investment recommendations.

At another financial institution, which Allsbrook declined to identify, executive recruiters are paid a percentage of the salaries of bank personnel they recruit.

"Companies are going to variable forms of compensation, more and more incentive reaching further and further down in the organization," said Dave McDaniel, general manager of the Hay Management Consultants' Charlotte office.

A highly productive worker will receive larger bonuses or pay raises than other workers, he said. Employees who produce less than expected probably will receive lower bonuses and raises, or none at all.

McDaniel was a speaker Thursday at a conference attended by compensation executives from 27 companies in North Carolina and the Southeast.

He analyzed an on-the-spot survey in which the executives indicated their companies are easing wage freezes caused by the recession, small raises and layoffs, but are trimming benefits.

"They're trying to find ways to cut costs and keep them down while raising production," McDaniel said.

Pay raises for hourly workers at the 27 companies will average 5.4 percent in 1984, the survey said. Management and professional employees will receive an average increase of 5.9 percent.

As of September, average wage increases in 1983 for hourly manufacturing workers in North Carolina were about 5 percent, compared to 10.4 percent in 1982, according to the state Employment Security Commission.

More than 80 percent of the companies surveyed have increased or are considering increasing the amount their employees pay for health-care premiums. Nearly half of the companies have increased deductibles and 26 percent more are considering it.

Businesses represented at the conference included Duke Power Co. of Charlotte, Carolina Freight Corp. of Cherryville, Cone Mills Corp. of Greensboro and Northwestern Bank of North Wilkesboro.

OUT OF SIGHT OR COMMUNITY LIFE

By Robert DeSoto, Coordinator
Partial Hospitalization and Transitional Services

Individuals who suffer mental or emotional disorders that erode or prevent development of functional capacities are considered as chronic mentally ill. These disorders generally prevent the development of economic self-sufficiency and are evident in such things as personal care, self-direction, interpersonal relationships, social transactions, learning and recreation.

For more than two decades the number of chronic mentally ill in state psychiatric hospitals has been declining in response to public policies known as deinstitutionalization. Persons who were previously cared for in state hospitals are being removed or denied entry to be cared for in the community setting.

Community mental health programs are now expected to provide comprehensive care programs to individuals known to require a variety of psychiatric, medical, social, rehabilitation, and vocational services. Patients who fall between the cracks in this system serve to remind us that our service delivery lacks adequate community support to meet this population's needs.

Deinstitutionalization requires more than a new physical environment for the mentally ill. It requires complex comprehensive care programs that understand both the problems and deficits of the chronic mentally ill. In Pitt County the Partial Hospitalization and Transitional Services programs help provide deinstitutionalized services to chronic mentally ill in the community setting. For more information about these programs call Robert DeSoto at 752-7151.

SIGN-EATING TREE — Bit by bit, year by year, this roadside tree is devouring a tough metal sign. When the 12-by-18 inch sign, advertising Texaco motor oil, was first attached to the tree by a metal bracket in the autumn of 1933, a distance of about three inches separated the sign from the tree. As the tree has grown during the past half-century, it has devoured the bracket and about four inches of the sign. Give or take another century, the leisurely digestive process will be completed — the sign will disappear into the tree. Despite time, bullet holes and weather, vivid patches of red and yellow remain on the sign, which is located in Martin County on a dirt road that branches off the paved Wild Cat Road. Caller Claims A 2nd Abduction ROME (AP) — The presumed kidnappers of Emanuela Orlandi claim they also abducted another teen-age girl linked to the Vatican, a lawyer for the Orlandi family says.

The name of Mirella Gregori, 16, had been mentioned in mysterious messages sent by those claiming to have kidnapped Emanuela in Rome on June 22, but the latest contact was the first time the self-proclaimed abductors boasted of snatching the Gregori girl, said Gennaro Egidio, the Orlandi's lawyer.

"The call deserves to be taken seriously," Egidio said Monday.

Emanuela, the daughter of a Vatican messenger, disappeared after a music lesson in downtown Rome. Italian investigators have been stymied in the case.

Mirella's disappearance in May received no public attention until after Emanuela dropped from sight. Newspapers have published photographs of both girls attending Pope John Paul II's general audience at the Vatican with their school classes.

Egidio, refusing to elaborate on the latest contact, directed inquiries to Richard Roth, Rome correspondent of CBS news, who has received several messages in the case, including some on Monday.

On Monday evening, said Roth, "I received an anonymous telephone call from a man who said I should write down the name Gregori, Mirella. He said that was the name of the girl we took in May."

"He said he would call me back with a communique in a few minutes. Approximately 30 minutes later I received a second call from the same man, still unidentified, who asked me to write down the following message: 'Gregori, Mirella was chosen during a collective audience by the head of the Vatican state John Paul II.'"

Roth said the man spoke in Italian and that he reported the call to police.

In a message last week, the self-proclaimed kidnappers threatened to kill "Vatican and Italian citizens." The message was left in a coffee bar that Turkish gunman Mehmet Ali Agca says was one of the places he stopped shortly before shooting the pope on May 13, 1981.

Agca is serving a life sentence for the attack. Anonymous callers have demanded he be freed in exchange for Emanuela's return.

Jordanian Envoy Shot

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A gunman shot Jordan's ambassador to India "five or six times" today as the diplomat walked home for lunch, then made his escape in a three-wheeled taxi, officials said.

Mohammed Ali Khourma was reported in serious condition in intensive care at a hospital. Indian government spokesman Salman Haider said.

The ambassador was shot just after 2 p.m. as he was walked home for lunch from the Jordanian Embassy, Haider said. The buildings are about three houses apart in a posh residential neighborhood of south Delhi.

The assailant fired several shots at Khourma with a revolver, then ran behind a market and hopped into an autorickshaw, a three-wheeled motorized vehicle. The taxi driver took the man to the main shopping center, where he jumped out and ran off without paying his fare.

Police obtained a description of the gunman from the taxi driver, who contacted officials because his passenger did not pay.

No individual or group had claimed responsibility for the attack by late afternoon, Haider said, and no motive had yet been established.

Khourma, about 40, was taken by relatives to the clinic in the U.S. Embassy compound a few blocks from where he was shot, a U.S. embassy source said.

The ambassador was hit "five or six times" in the legs and arms, said the source, who declined to be identified.

After emergency treatment at the clinic, Khourma was taken to the All India Institute of Medical Sciences, where he underwent surgery, Haider said.

Khourma has been in the Indian capital for about three months. He has a wife and two children.

"If any of the Americans or other citizens of any country in Grenada were hurt by this action, I think he should be held accountable," Modica said of Reagan.

The chancellor said the people of Grenada "were in no real danger whatsoever, other than from external forces and any internal disorder that might occur. I think the orderly evacuation of the island could have been maintained throughout this week and then if any political settlements had to be made, the U.S. forces or other forces could have gone in."

The president did not say where the landing or landings were staged but that both of the island's airports had been taken over by the multinational force.

(Continued from Page 1) that the municipal customers ... were entitled to a rate decrease, yet our rates were increased.

"I am told that this same situation exists again, and that the company's own rate filing shows that, even without any increase to the municipals, their revenues will be higher than their cost of serving the municipals," while the revenues for NCNG's residential and commercial customers will be significantly lower than their cost of service, she said.

Mrs. Wirth told the hearing the "Greenville Utilities Commission and the residents of Greenville urge you to seize the opportunity to end the discriminatory rates charged by NCNG which require those living in Greenville, Rocky Mount, Wilson and Monroe to subsidize NCNG's ratepayers living elsewhere in the state."

PORTLAND, Mich. (AP) — Police Chief Richard White wasn't playing football — but he was certainly chasing the pigskin around.

When a motorist reported he had had to swerve to miss a pig on the streets of this central Michigan town of 4,000 people, White set out Monday to catch the animal.

With the help of several residents — one of them armed with a garbage pail — White finally managed to corner it in a garage.

"People were out there cheering and most of them were cheering for the pig," says Portland Fire Chief Larry Blundy.

The pig weighed less than 150 pounds and was not likely to hurt anyone, but it was definitely a traffic hazard.

"We don't know who the pig belongs to, and we don't even know how it got loose," Blundy said. "Right now it's penned up in the livestock exchange at town waiting for someone to identify it."

$810,000 For Confirmation

VERNON, British Columbia (AP) — If residents jump straight up upon seeing a 100-yard-long serpent, they may be leaping for joy instead of starting in fright.

The Okanagan-Similkameen Tourism Association is offering $810,000 to anyone who can prove the existence of Ogopogo, a legendary serpent-like monster which has been reported in several Okanagan Valley lakes over the past 50 years.

At its annual meeting over the weekend, the tourism association proposed a promotion based on the mysterious Ogopogo with the award money put up by association members, including some 250 restaurants, motels, wineries and other businesses interested in tourism.

"Certainly one reason (for the reward) is to finally establish once and for all whether the Ogopogo really exists or whether he doesn't — or she doesn't," said association vice president Dave Hodge.

sentence of 20 years in prison and an unspecified fine.

The state constitution prohibits a convicted felon from holding statewide public office.

Green, also considered a Democratic candidate for governor in 1984, refused to comment Monday on the dismissal of the one charge.

Special prosecutor Jim Blackburn dismissed the conspiracy charge Monday after completing the prosecution's case. He said that during a June interview with an FBI agent, Watts made statements that contradicted comments he made in video and audio tapes.

Defense attorney Wade Smith argued that the remaining charges should be dropped because they do not focus on "official acts" by the lieutenant governor and the evidence does not show intent to break the law.

"There are no allegations, and certainly no proof, he ever said he would do anything specific at any specific time that is an official act," Smith said.

But prosecutor Richard Gammon said the bribery law covers jobs within a person's "apparent authority."

"To hold that because it is not an enumerated power it is not an official action would destroy the intent of the statute," Gammon said.

Smith said prosecutors cannot prove Green meant to do anything corrupt.

"If there is a theme running through the state's case, it is the word 'No,'" Smith said, adding that Green repeatedly refused money offers from FBI agent Robert Drdak.

But Blackburn said Green did not say "no" enough.

"It was Mr. Green and not Mr. Drdak who suggested the campaign contribution. It was Mr. Green and not Mr. Drdak who on Feb. 15 (1982) brought up the $10,000," Blackburn said.

"It just doesn't seem right that a man should be charged with receiving a check that came to his mailbox and he took back," Smith said. "It's just not American. It's French or something."

Smith referred to the charge that Green accepted a $2,000 bribe. The charge is based on evidence that a $2,000 cashier's check was mailed to Green's campaign fund and later handed back to Drdak.

Gammon responded by saying that it was very American to prosecute someone when they solicited the money that was mailed to them.

"It was not by the grace of God that check ended up in his post office box," Gammon said.

Held Hearing In Jail Cell Ambassador Says France Will Build Up Presence

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. AP — A Superior Court judge worried by threats against a 21-year-old man charged with murdering a 2-year-old boy by placing him in a freezer, conducted a hearing in the defendant's jail cell.

Judge Lotte Greenlee went to the Rutherford County Jail rather than have Ronald Dale Smith appear in court. Greenlee appointed an attorney for Smith, of Bostic, and set a probable cause hearing for Nov. 15.

Sheriff Damon Huskey said his office had gotten numerous telephone calls threatening Smith's life.

"They're upset about it," said Huskey. "People are threatening to shoot him."

Michael Brandon Lowery's partially-clad body was found in a freezer Friday morning. Smith, the mother's boyfriend who lived with them and was said to have been babysitting, was arrested after leading officers on a four-county chase.

An autopsy showed that the child, who apparently had been sexually assaulted, died of exposure and suffocation.

Ronald Blanchard of Henderson County was appointed Monday to represent Smith after another attorney, T. Eugene Mitchell, rejected the case.

Smith also is charged with stealing a patrol car from a sheriff's deputy, driving over 100 mph, and resisting arrest.

Huskey said the child's funeral drew a capacity crowd Sunday to the Morningstar Lake Baptist Church in Forest City.

"There is a lot of sympathy here for the family," he said.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. AP — France will send more troops to Lebanon in a gesture of solidarity with the United States after the terrorist bombing that killed dozens of French soldiers and U.S. Marines, the French ambassador to the U.S. says.

"One of the most important issues on which France and the United States agree is they act together," he said. "They shed their blood together as yesterday Sunday in Beirut," said Bernard Vernier-Palliez, who appeared Monday to address businessmen at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte on "Current Prospects for French-American Relations."

"There is very clearly no question at this time of our troops being withdrawn," he said. "Our troops will be most numerous in Lebanon until a political solution is worked out."

Vernier-Palliez said the French people support the government's decision to send French soldiers to Beirut as part of a multinational peacekeeping force. But he said it is a solution isn't worked out in the near future to end the fighting in Lebanon, the government will take another look at its decision.

"If a political solution doesn't take place, then we will have to ask ourselves a lot of questions," he said.

French troops were sent to Beirut in August 1982 along with American troops and some soldiers from Great Britain to monitor withdrawal of Palestinian Liberation Organization forces. France recalled its troops within a few months, but then sent them back after Palestinians were massacred in refugee camps.

"We decided to keep troops in Beirut in order to support the formation of a strong, independent government accepted by all the factions in the Lebanese government," he said.

Vernier-Palliez said he met Sunday with State Department officials and would begin another round of meetings in Washington Tuesday morning.

The ambassador said French President Francois Mitterand flew to Beirut on Monday to show support for French troops, but that Mitterand isn't considering any withdrawal at this time.

He said he thinks Sunday's killings will hasten talks between the Lebanese government and Druze leaders. Leaders of both parties have scheduled meetings in Switzerland later this week.

FRANCE WILL STAY — French President Francois Mitterand looks resolute Monday evening during a press conference at the Elysee Palace in Paris shortly after returning from Beirut. Mitterand said that France will remain faithful to its history and to its commitment in Lebanon, and that in "defending as elsewhere its principles of national independence and equilibrium of forces in the world, France is defending no other thing but peace." Soviet Publicizes Deployment Of Nuclear Missiles Started MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet press today reported without elaboration the announcement that preparations were under way to deploy nuclear missiles in East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda added no commentary of its own in reporting the statements by the Soviet Defense Ministry and the East German and Czech governments Monday night that "preparatory work is being started for deployment of missile complexes of operation-tactical designation."

Red Star, the newspaper of the Soviet Defense Ministry, also carried no comment on the announcement, simply running the ministry's statement on the front page.

Radio Moscow said the deployment was necessary to maintain the nuclear balance in Europe and to protect the security of the Soviet Union and its allies.

"This is being done because of the U.S. preparations to site Pershing 2 and cruise missiles" in Western Europe, the noon broadcast said.

The announcement capped months of Warsaw Pact statements about "appropriate responses" to the planned NATO deployment of 572 U.S.-built medium-range missiles in Western Europe. It said the preparatory work was "one of the planned response measures in case the American missiles are sited in Europe."

Other threats have been to place the United States in an "analogous position," interpreted as meaning the possibility of stationing more nuclear-armed submarines closer to U.S. shores.

The Soviet press has suggested that the United States will in effect be breaking off the Geneva talks aimed at reducing medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe if the NATO missile deployment starts as scheduled in December.

It has never dwelled on why the Soviet Union has deployed and targeted at Western Europe more than 350 triple-headed, medium-range SS-20 missiles since 1977. The NATO deployment decision, made in 1979, is aimed at countering the Soviet buildup.

U.S. officials in Washington and western diplomats in Moscow have said they believe the threats were aimed at increasing opposition to the NATO deployments.

Monday's announcement did not specify what missile complexes were under preparation, but Radio Moscow's English-language broadcast referred to them as "tactical" or battlefield weapons.

Some Western diplomats have speculated that the seven-nation Warsaw Pact is not firmly united behind the Soviet threat of retaliatory steps.

Romanian leader Nicolae Ceausescu has called for both the United States and the Soviet Union to end additional deployments and to reduce their nuclear arsenals.

The military council of the Warsaw Pact is to meet in Moscow this weekend, and there have been rumors that a leadership summit might also be held.

It has been assumed that the alliance would have a summit to make some announcement prior to the NATO deployments in December.

Recast Votes For Chairman

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina A&T State University's Board of Trustees will meet this week to recast votes for chairman in accordance with the state's Open Meetings Law, chairman-elect McArthur Newell said.

Newell was elected Oct. 19 by a 9-4 vote conducted with unsigned, written ballots.

The open meetings law specifies that when submitting written votes, members of public boards must sign their ballots so the public will know how each person voted.

Newell said the trustees weren't aware at the time that secret ballots are against the law.

"If I'm going to be chairman, I at least want to start off on the right foot, so we're going to meet again sometime this week and set the record straight," he said.

A body believed to be that of 61-year old Lillie Mae Tyson was recovered from the ruins of a house destroyed by fire near Oak City Monday morning, according to Martin County Deputy Sheriff Jerry Beach.

Beach, who also serves as the county's coroner, said "badly burnt remains were taken from the completely destroyed dwelling. The remains have been sent to Dr. Stan Harris, medical examiner in Greenville in an effort to secure positive identification."

The house where Mrs. Tyson lives alone on Route 1, Oak City, was discovered on fire and reported by a passing motorist at about 5:45 a.m. Monday. "Both the Oak City and Hamilton Fire departments reported to the scene, but the house was totally engulfed in flames when they arrived," Beach said.

Beach said no foul play was suspected, but that the sheriff's department is continuing its investigation in an effort to determine the origin of the fire.

Warrants For 103 People

BREVARD, N.C. (AP) — Warrants were issued for 103 people in what authorities called the biggest drug bust in Transylvania County history.

The arrests began Monday and were to continue Tuesday, culminating an investigation that began in May 1982, said Sheriff Milford C. Hubbard.

He said most of the people arrested were "middle men," not the big drug sellers. But the arrests could lead to those who sell large quantities, said Hubbard.

The sheriff's department spent several thousand dollars during the investigation for drug purchases, he said.

The largest amounts of drugs bought by undercover agents at one time were eight ounces of marijuana and two grams of cocaine, said chief investigator Hubert Brown.

O'Donoghue 'Felt Good,' Missed Three

ST. LOUIS (AP) — If Neil O'Donoghue never has to endure another such ordeal, he already has paid his dues. "I felt good, but I missed," said O'Donoghue after missing on three field-goal attempts in overtime for the St. Louis Cardinals Monday night. "If I had them over, I'd make them all." But O'Donoghue got no second chances, and the New York Giants were able to walk off with a 20-20 tie in the National Football League contest.

"Both teams had chances to win, and there's frustration in both locker rooms," said New York Coach Bill Parcells. "I can appreciate how they must feel."

O'Donoghue, at 6-foot-6 the tallest kicker in the NFL, embarked on his misadventures after first rescuing St. Louis from defeat.

His 22-yard field goal with 54 seconds left in the fourth quarter created the tie. It offset Ali Haji-Sheikh's earlier boot of 28 yards for the Giants, but later the St. Louis kicker went cold.

"There's no excuse," said O'Donoghue after squibbing a 19-yard attempt among the three he missed in overtime.

"These things happen. It's been a long time since I missed three in a row," the mild-mannered veteran of seven NFL veteran seasons said. "You do the best you can and go on. I had to hit them, and I didn't."

"It was an excellent chip shot. It was automatic, you win the game," St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan said wearily. "We didn't want to lose the clock. We didn't want Neil to run around. He just missed it."

St. Louis, after trailing most of the way in regulation time, dominated the overtime period to no avail.

O'Donoghue first missed a 44-yard field goal attempt following a short New York punt. Following the try from short range with 1:03 to go, he missed a 42-yarder with 44 seconds remaining.

Hanifan was asked, in view of his team's numerous chances, if he equated the tie with a defeat.

"When you think of the opportunities ... yeah, you have to feel that way," said Hanifan. "I don't recall ever missing a win before in a game like this."

Prior to the missed field goals, St. Louis appeared bent on self-destruction in a contest between teams which started the night with 2-5 records.

A Neil Lomax pass was picked off late in the opening period by Giant safety Bill Currier, who returned the interception 30 yards for a touchdown. Stump Mitchell offset that with a 7-yard touchdown run, but the Cardinals problems continued.

New York linebacker Brad Van Pelt was in the right place to intercept, a pass tipped by Pat Tilley and set up a 1-yard Rob Carpenter touchdown plunge.

That established a 14-10 edge for the Giants at halftime. The advantage grew to 17-10 on Haji-Sheikh's team record-setting 13th consecutive field goal before St. Louis came back.

One of the few Giant errors of the night was a botched handoff between quarterback Jeff Rutledge and wide receiver Floyd Eddings on an end-around late in the third quarter.

The connection was never made. Cardinal safety Lonnie Perrin grabbed the loose ball and dashed 32 yards to the end zone to create a 17-17 tie.

In addition to the O'Donoghue field-goal misses, Haji-Sheikh's string came to an end when he kicked short on a 66-yard try to end regulation play.

It was the first tie of the year in the NFL and only the seventh in 87 regular-season overtime contests since the NFL went to sudden-death play in 1974.

St. Louis wound up with a 388-264 advantage in total yards, much of it generated by Mitchell's rushing total of 108 yards on 24 carries. Each team had three turnovers.

As time was winding down in the extra period, the Cards sent O'Donoghue on the field to attempt his 19-yard field goal on second down.

Up And Over

Eppley, Martin Top Gridders

GREENSBORO (AP) — Clemson quarterback Mike Eppley and Wake Forest guard Danny Martin have been named Atlantic Coast Conference offensive football players of the week for their performances Saturday.

Eppley, a 6-foot-2, 185-pound junior from Charlotte, completed 17 of 26 passes for 248 yards and two touchdowns as the Tigers defeated North Carolina State 27-17.

Martin, a 6-2, 273-pound senior from Mount Airy, blocked for three of Wake Forest's four rushing touchdowns and graded out at 89 percent on his assignments, including five solo tackles. Wake Forest defeated Virginia 38-34.

Clemson cornerback Rod McSwain and Maryland linebacker Eric Wilson were named ACC defensive players of the week.

McSwain, a 6-2, 190-pound senior from Caroleen, graded out at 95 percent in Clemson's victory over N.C. State. He intercepted a pass and returned it 25 yards and broke up four other passes, three in the end zone.

Wilson, a 6-2, 239-pound junior from Charlottesville, Va., led a defense that yielded only 121 yards on the ground in Maryland's 38-3 thrashing of Duke. Wilson, ACC defensive player of the week for the second time this season, had 16 tackles.

The selections were made by a special committee of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association.

Undefeated Hunt Downs Rampants

WILSON — Wilson Hunt, unbeaten against Big East competition for two seasons, gained a 2-0 soccer victory over Rose High School yesterday.

The loss leaves the Rampants tied with Northeastern for second place. The two teams meet on Thursday at 4:30 p.m. at Dancy Field, with the winner earning a spot in the state playoffs along with Hunt.

Although Rose held a 9-7 shot advantage in the first half, the Rampants were unable to put the ball into the nets. Finally, with 25 minutes gone, Matt Diemer scored for Hunt on a header, assisted by Richard Felding.

Both teams had good offensive thrusts in the second half, but the lone goal came 15 minutes in when Greg Adkins scored off a direct kick.

Rose had 13 shots on goal for the game, while Hunt had 12. Rose goalie Gregg Ward recorded nine saves.

"I thought that the entire team played outstanding," Coach Will Wiberg said. "David Jester, David Ely, Jordy Smith, Greg Savage and Jeff Stallings played exceptionally well."

"Hunt was able to capitalize on the few mistakes we made to get the win. It seems they play best when playing us," the coach added.

Rose is now 9-4 in the league and 9-5 overall. Hunt climbs to 15-3 overall and 13-0 in the conference.

Spiders Blank Pirates, 3-0

RICHMOND, Va. — The University of Richmond gained a 3-0 soccer victory over East Carolina University yesterday.

Peter Miller, Bill Rider and John Maliff each scored single goals for the Spiders, who move to 4-12 on the season.

East Carolina falls to 3-12 with the defeat.

The Pirates travel to Virginia Wesleyan on Wednesday at 3 p.m.

Nebraska Takes Top Slot Of Reflector Poll

Nebraska, ranked number one on both of the wire service polls, moved to the top in the Daily Reflector Computer Rankings this week, 30 points ahead of second place Texas.

West Virginia, which had been ranked in the number one position for several weeks, dipped to the number three position after its loss to Penn State this past Saturday.

Nebraska, 8-0, has piled up 286 points through its own wins, victim's wins, and victim's victim's wins in the rankings. A team receives six points for each of its victories, and an additional four points for second level wins, with two points awarded for each third level win.

Texas is now second in the standings with 256 points, while West Virginia has 244.

Auburn is ranked fourth with 236, followed by Florida with 230.

The second five includes Illinois, Michigan, Georgia, Brigham Young and Fullerton State.

The second ten has Arizona,

Maryland, Penn State, Iowa, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Washington, Wisconsin, Kentucky and Miami, Fla.

East Carolina, after its loss to Florida, tumbled into a tie for 41st place out of the 105 Division I-A teams. The Pirates are tied with Southern Mississippi and Utah with 106 points. Interestingly, Alabama is 45th with 102 and Notre Dame is 46th with 98.

Shula 'Not Interested' In Generals

MIAMI (AP) — The money certainly got his attention, but then the attention got to Don Shula.

That, said the Miami Dolphins coach, was why he decided Monday that he was "no longer interested" in an offer of $1 million a year to coach the United States Football League's New Jersey Generals.

"When the third question in my press conference following the ball game is about my personal contract, not about our football team, I think it's time to draw a line," Shula said in his surprise announcement.

But the fact that Generals owner Donald Trump went on national TV Sunday to discuss their talks didn't help. Trump said the only issue left was a demand that he ante up a valuable condominium in his new building on New York's 5th Avenue to sign the National Football League's best-paid coach.

"I could not have done the deal. I could not have given an apartment in Trump Tower," Trump said Monday after talking to Shula.

The Generals have not fired Coach Chuck Fairbanks, whose team was 6-12 in its inaugural season, but club officials have made it clear he won't coach in 1984. Trump said he'd have an announcement soon.

The real estate magnate appeared on CBS' "NFL Today" show Sunday and said the only obstacle to signing Shula was whether he'd give up one of the apartments that sell for $500,000 to $12 million.

"Maybe he thought that," Shula said, adding that he had been interested "because of the ownership possibility and, of course, the amount of money had to get your attention...."

"We talked about a lot of things. For me to make a move of that magnitude, I would have to know exactly where he's coming from and what it entails."

Dolphins owner Joe Robbie, dismissing Trump's contacts with Shula as "ballyhoo," said he would see his coach this week "to discuss his contract free from outside interference."

Shula, who makes a reported $450,000 now, had little to say about the Dolphins' 21-7 victory over the Baltimore Colts Sunday.

He said his talks with Trump became a "huge distraction" when he started receiving calls and interview requests late last week from out-of-town reporters who wanted to discuss the offer from the USFL.

"With important games like the Rams and the 49ers coming up, I don't think it's fair to the people I'm responsible for," said Shula, 53, who is 206-79-6 in 20 years as an NFL head coach.

"And I have found myself thinking about things that I shouldn't be thinking about as we prepare for ball games."

He said he had viewed a tape of Trump's CBS appearance. "Donald Trump said that I was all set and ready to go — the only thing he had to do was meet certain economic conditions."

"I've never felt that I have in any way committed myself to that extent," said Shula, whose Dolphins went to the Super Bowl last year and are tied with Buffalo atop the AFC East with 3-3 records.

Shula coached one of his Baltimore Colts teams and four Dolphin clubs to the Super Bowl. Miami won the NFL title two years in a row, its first championship capping an unbeaten season in 1972 that is, still the only one in NFL history.

He noted that the NFL season ends in January and, to join the Generals, he'd have to "jump immediately into more time and effort and preparation... and go till July."

"I don't know if my 53-year-old body and mind could handle that."

While Crowds Flock Around Wilson, Plunkett Sits Alone

By The Associated Press

The changing of the guard was drawing to a close. Marc Wilson, the Los Angeles Raiders' quarterback, was being besieged by a flock of writers and photographers.

In the locker next to him, Jim Plunkett dressed quietly, almost unnoticed.

It must be tough, someone commented, to be ignored after having been surrounded by crowds like that. "Oh, I don't know," Plunkett said with a sad smile, surveying the unoccupied space around him. "I've been in this kind of crowd plenty of times, too."

"This looks fairly permanent," he added. "It's always difficult when you're not playing, but it's something we all have to accept somewhere down the line."

Then Plunkett, a victim of some disastrous seasons with New England and San Francisco before being rescued by the Raiders, pulled on his boots, slung his jacket over his shoulder, worked his way past Wilson and his court and strolled out of the locker room — alone.

Wilson is the epitome of the good guy — a soft-spoken gentleman who set all kinds of passing records at Brigham Young in the late 1970s, then became the Raiders' No. 1 draft choice in 1980, the year Plunkett reached the pinnacle with his Super Bowl victory.

And in a matter of five days starting last Wednesday, Wilson became the Raiders' starting quarterback, the co-signer of a rich, five-year National Football League contract and the first quarterback to beat the Dallas Cowboys this season.

He would seem, at first blush, to be very much out of the Raiders' image, an image of misfits, ne'er-do-wells and clubhouse lawyers who, having failed at acceptance elsewhere, have been given one last chance on renegade owner Al Davis' team and have cashed in on it.

"Well, yeah, but Jim Plunkett isn't a renegade," said Coach Tom Flores, who used to quarterback these Raiders two decades ago. "He's always been a very classy guy, very quiet."

For a few days last week, Wilson was very much in danger of becoming a renegade of sorts, a potential league-jumper. He was being wooed by Donald Trump, the owner of the United States Football League's New Jersey Generals. Negotiations had begun with Wilson's agent, Howard Slusher.

"There was never an ultimatum like, 'Sign me or I'm going to leave,' never anything like that," Wilson said. "I just think everybody just knew it was coming down to the wire and something had to happen one way or the other."

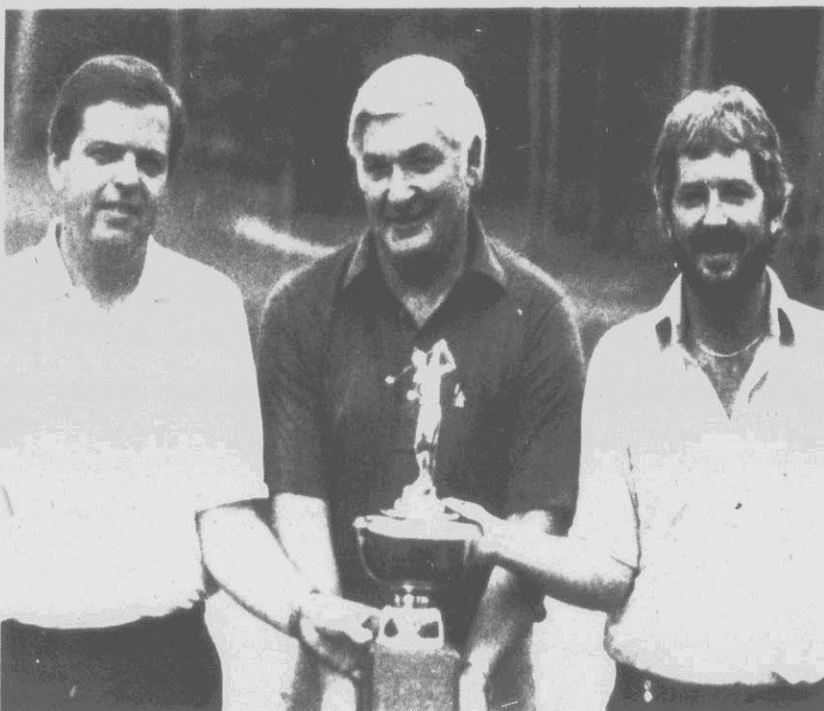

"The situation was that either the Raiders were committed to me or I was going to go to the USFL. I just worked out that the Raiders decided they wanted to have me around for a while. It's nice to be liked — especially at those prices."

"I heard Trump said on TV that they weren't interested in me, that they never were, that I was a backup quarterback, that they had no interest in me, which is a flat-out lie." He halted for an instant and giggled as he said "lie," surprised at himself for using that word.

Flores said it was only coincidence that Plunkett was yanked and Wilson installed as the starter and then signed, all at the same time the USFL was waving big bucks in his direction. "We felt we had to make a change because of the way things had been going the past few weeks," Flores said. "We just felt a change was needed and that Marc deserved a chance to play."

"And we'd been working on signing Marc since the summer. It just so happened that it came to a head now," said Davis, the architect of the American Football League's player raids on the NFL in the '60s, added: "We want to win. The players are the game and the players have to be paid."

Then, as Plunkett and Wilson had done before him, Davis walked out of the room, past the poster which had been torn from the Texas Stadium stands and taped to the locker room wall, a poster which read: "Good Guys Wear Black."

Tony LaRussa Pleased By AP's Manager Pick

CHICAGO (AP) — Tony LaRussa, who twice in the last two seasons came close to being fired by the Chicago White Sox, smiled graciously when he learned he had been named American League Manager of the Year by the Associated Press.

"I'm very pleased," said LaRussa. "I felt I had a chance, but it's the kind of thing that you don't think is going to happen."

LaRussa, who turned 39 during the AL playoffs, said 20 of all the honors and awards he receives this is where you have to pass the credit around. There is no other individual honor dependent on so many other people.

"There are the players, the coaches, the general manager, the owners," said LaRussa, whose team caught fire in the second half of the season and won the AL West by a record 20 games before succumbing to Baltimore in the playoffs.

LaRussa won the honor easily, getting 51 of a possible 67 votes from a national electorate of sports writers and broadcasters. Joe Altobelli of the Dodgers finished second with 21 votes. Toronto Blue Jays Manager Bobby Cox was third with 11 votes, and the other four went to Sparky Anderson, whose Detroit Tigers finished second to Baltimore in the AL East.

Last year, LaRussa's job was in jeopardy when the team fell to 500 before making a job-saving turnaround. The same thing happened this season when the club was struggling at 16-24.

Both times you read and hear enough things to know it's a possibility," said LaRussa. "But from my conversations, it never got down to having to win this game or this series."

"Maybe they had it in their minds, but they never said it," he said of owners Jerry Reinsdorf and Eddie Einhorn and General Manager Roland Hemond.

"Whenever we struggled, we talked about what we needed to get the team going again."

LaRussa, who was first hired by former owner Bill Veeck late in the 1979 season, developed a managerial knack of using all 25 of his players.

"The reason I try to use the entire roster is not to make all 25 players happy," said LaRussa. "Nobody can make everybody happy. In my 20 years in baseball I've learned that when you're a contender or you are in first place, there's happiness."

"If you can get the entire roster involved during the season, you have a better chance to have a good year. Playing 162 games is an endurance grind and the people on the bench have to play if you are to win."

"Regulars have to be spelled because of fatigue and injury," said LaRussa. "You accomplish a lot using the entire roster and it keeps the bench sharp and alive. August and September are the months for all the marbles. Finish strong in September and you have a chance to win it all."

Much has been made of the fact that LaRussa studied law in his spare time and passed the Florida bar during the 1979-80 offseason. But baseball remains his life.

"I'm a baseball person," said LaRussa. "I went to law as something to do at the end of my baseball career. I'd have to struggle in law to really be decent. I look in the future and I like the feeling that I want to stay in baseball."

LaRussa admits the White Sox accomplished something this year by winning the division.

Trainer Named In Alien Probe

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Nationally-known race horse trainer D. Wayne Lukas and four other horsemen have pleaded guilty in federal court to misdemeanor charges of aiding illegal aliens elude inspection by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Initially, Lukas and the others were charged with harboring illegal immigrants and shielding them from detection, a felony. But the defendants pleaded guilty Monday to the lesser charge during a hearing before U.S. Magistrate J. Edward Harris.

Harris fined each of the defendants $500, placed them on probation for one year and admonished them that if they hired and sheltered undocumented aliens during that period, they would be subject to imprisonment.

The charges against Lukas, and trainers Darrell Vienna, Leigh Howard, Rod Kaufman and Lloyd Wicker stemmed from a Sept. 12 raid at San Luis Rey Downs thoroughbred race horse training center in Bonsall.

During the sweep of the northern San Diego County training facility, the U.S. Border Patrol rounded up 184 illegal aliens employed at the complex as grooms, exercise riders and hotwalkers.

Charges were dropped against trainer Bob St. Cyr and stable foreman Brian Smith because the government felt they were not responsible for the offenses because they were employees, said Assistant U.S. Attorney John Markham.

Markham said Guadalupe Pareda, a foreman who failed to surrender for arraignment, was still missing. A warrant is out for his arrest.

U.S. Attorney Peter Nunez said he was satisfied with the outcome of the case. "In our view, we made our point. This is a step in the right direction, making it difficult for undocumented aliens to get jobs," he said.

Nunez added that all five defendants were first-time offenders.

Had the trainers been convicted of the felony charge, their training licenses could have been revoked or suspended by the California Horse Racing Board.

Lukas, whose clients include San Diego Chargers owner Gene Klein, has trained such horses as Codex, winner of the 1980 Preakness Stakes, the undefeated filly Landaluce, and Maria, winner of the 1983 Santa Anita Derby.

Markham, meantime, said the INS was continuing its investigation at San Luis Rey Downs, as well as other tracks.

"This is statewide," he said. "Lawyers representing the industry have approached us to discuss ways of alleviating disrupting searches in exchange for agreements not to hire illegal aliens, with the INS monitoring who they are hiring. The objective is to make these (stable) jobs available to legal residents."

Lasorda Named Manager Of Year In NL For Third Time

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy Lasorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers captured his third Associated Press National League Manager of the Year award today by one vote over Houston Astros Manager Bob Lillis.

Lasorda, who guided the Dodgers to their fifth NL West title in 10 years, emerged victorious from a three-way voting war that also included Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner.

Lasorda received 28 of a possible 87 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Lillis, who led the Astros to a third-place finish in the NL West, received 27 votes, and Tanner, whose Pirates finished six games back of Philadelphia in the NL East, was third with 23 votes.

Paul Owens, the Phillies general manager who took over in the dugout on July 18 from the fired Pat Corrales, had six votes. Atlanta Braves Manager Joe Torre, last year's NL Manager of the Year, had two votes, and Bill Virdon of Montreal received one.

The 56-year-old Lasorda took over the Dodgers from Walter Alston in 1977 and immediately led the club to the National League pennant. He also won pennants in 1978 and 1981, when the Dodgers won the World Series in six games over the New York Yankees. He won his previous Manager of the Year awards in 1977 and 1981.

This year, the Dodgers clinched the NL West on Sept. 30, the Friday night before the end of the season, and wound up with a record of 91-71. They lost the playoffs in four games to the Philadelphia Phillies.

This was to have been a rebuilding year for the Dodgers, a team replete with sophomores and rookies.

Steve Garvey and Ron Cey were gone from the team, following on the heels of players like Dave Lopes and Reggie Smith. Bill Russell was the only veteran left from an infield that had played together for 10 years.

Rookie Greg Brock replaced Garvey at first base, while second-year player Mike Marshall moved into the outfield as Pedro Guerrero took over Cey's job at third. In addition, Lasorda had 1982 Rookie of the Year Steve Sax at second base.

"You lose a Garvey, or a Cey, and you don't replace guys like these overnight," Russell said early in the season. But that, in effect, was what Lasorda did.

Brock, while hitting only .224, drove in 66 runs and had 20 homers, and Marshall, who played in only 49 games last year, finished with a .284 average 65 RBI and 17 homers. While struggling at third base with 31 errors, Guerrero remained a potent offensive force, hitting .298 with 103 RBI and 32 homers. Sax, in much the same straits as Guerrero with 30 errors, had 175 hits and stole 56 bases.

"Winning changes a lot of things," Russell said. "It makes up for a lot of inexperience."

While Lasorda had a fine group of starting pitchers to help cope with a young lineup, he ran into another serious problem. Twice during the season, ace reliever Steve Howe was suspended for drug use, and finally, the Dodgers let him go for the last two weeks of the season because he refused to take drug tests.

And another test came when Lasorda lost both his catchers, Mike Scioscia and Steve Yeager, to injuries early in the year. Scioscia never did return, forcing the Dodgers to use rookies Jack Fimple and Dave Sax. Steve's brother, until Yeager returned late in the year.

A lot of Lasorda's troubles were ameliorated, however, by the team's fast start. The Dodgers, the hottest team in baseball in April, won 21 of their first 28 games. But they still trailed Atlanta by 6½ games on Aug. 10 before warming up again. On Aug. 16, they started an eight-game winning streak, and the Dodgers won 12 of 13 until they led the division by one game on Aug. 29. They never relinquished that lead, finishing three games ahead of the Braves.

Rivera Has History Of Driving Mishaps

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steeler defensive lineman Gabriel Rivera, who injured his spine in what police charge was an alcohol-related car crash, was involved in five traffic incidents in his native Texas over a four-year span.

Doctors say it will be another 10 days before they learn whether injuries to the 22-year-old athlete's spine will leave him paralyzed from the chest down.

Rivera was in serious condition Monday at Allegheny General Hospital, after being in critical condition over the weekend. He was admitted Thursday night after being hurled through the back window of his sports car during a head-on collision in suburban Ross Township.

Police charged Rivera with drunken driving, speeding, reckless driving and driving on the wrong side of the road. The San Antonio (Texas) Light reported that police records show Rivera was involved in five separate traffic incidents between March 1, 1979, and Jan. 12, 1983. He was charged and pleaded guilty in at least four of them.

Rivera was first involved in a collision in San Antonio on March 1, 1979, when he was 17, but police records don't indicate whether he was charged. The newspaper reported, Rivera played at Thomas Jefferson High School in San Antonio. He was charged with speeding on July 31, 1979, in San Antonio; on Oct. 10, 1980, in Tom Green County in west Texas; and on Dec. 9, 1980, in Lubbock, according to the newspaper.

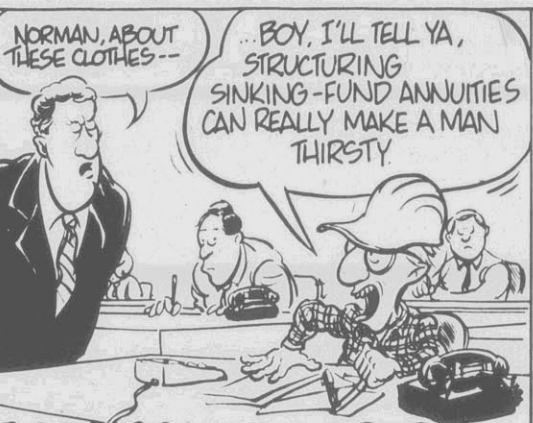

The last two violations occurred when Rivera was a student at Texas Tech University, where he was a four-year starter and the Southwestern Conference defensive player of the year in 1982.

The paper reported that Rivera was charged with running a stop sign in San Antonio last Jan. 12, four months before the Steelers made him their No. 1 draft

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Reports Savitch Soon Drowned

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer
NEW HOPE, Pa. (AP) — Although NBC News anchorwoman Jessica Savitch apparently "made some attempt to get out," she and a New York Post executive drowned within minutes after their car plunged into a canal during a rainstorm, a coroner has ruled.

Miss Savitch, 35, and newspaper executive Martin Fischbein, 34, were trapped Sunday night when they made a wrong turn in foul weather and the car overturned in the water and silt of the Delaware Canal, police said.

"I will say I think an individual's first response in that situation is to gasp. I think she probably did do that, and her lungs filled with water... Death did not occur on impact; it was not instantaneous," Dr. Thomas Rosko, medical examiner for Bucks County, said after performing autopsies late Monday night.

Fischbein was found strapped into the front seat by his seat belt, while Miss Savitch was found in the back seat, officials said.

Rosko said nothing in the car or in the autopsies indicated that Miss Savitch struggled to escape. But because she was found in the back, he said, "it's reasonable to assume Jessica Savitch made some attempt to get out and he did not."

Mud on the floor of the canal made the car doors "impossible to open," said New Hope Police Chief Walter Everett.

Fischbein was driving and apparently became disoriented when he left a parking lot near the historic Chez Odette Restaurant and drove into the shallow canal, Everett said.

"It was raining. The weather was bad," Everett said. "The visibility was very poor."

Miss Savitch's pet dog also drowned.

Bill McAndrew, a spokesman for NBC, said Fischbein, of Woodmere, N.Y., and Miss Savitch, of New York City, were "close friends."

Fischbein was a vice president and assistant general manager of the Post and also served as personnel and circulation director.

The canal and the parking lot, which has no guard rails, are in Roosevelt State Park. Everett said the car proceeded "past two signs which say 'no vehicles allowed' and continued for 40 or 50 feet," before running off a wall and dropping 10 feet into the canal.

After an accident in May 1977 in which a man died when he drove into the canal, his family was awarded almost $1 million, about two-thirds of it from the state. The ruling is being appealed.

Miss Savitch, who has been with NBC since 1977, delivered one-minute prime-time news updates during the week and had been an anchor for the Saturday edition of the "NBC Nightly News" until last summer. She also was an anchor for NBC's special news service for its television affiliates and was the anchor for "Frontline," a weekly documentary series begun by public television last January. She was author of the book "Anchorwoman."

"We are shocked and saddened by the news of Jessica's passing," said Reuven Frank, president of NBC News.

Miss Savitch grew up in Kennett Square, Pa. Her father died when she was 11. She is survived by her mother and two sisters.

Post publisher Rupert Murdoch called Fischbein's death "tragic," describing him as "one of the most brilliant young executives in the newspaper industry."

Fischbein, a former labor mediator who once worked in President Richard Nixon's Urban Affairs Council, is survived by his parents and a sister.

Actress Accidentally Wounded By Pistol

LONGVIEW, Wash. (AP) — An amateur actress was accidentally shot during a play rehearsal when a pistol that was fired offstage for dramatic effect discharged a real bullet instead of a blank.

Linda Beattie, 30, was in satisfactory condition Monday at St. John's Hospital, where doctors removed the bullet and set a broken bone in her left forearm.

Police said Ms. Beattie was shot by Dan Jacobs, an off-duty Longview policeman who is a member of the cast, during rehearsal Sunday at the McClelland Arts Center.

Dick Olson, play director, said Jacobs thought he had taken all the bullets out of his gun.

Jacobs loaded several rounds of blanks into his revolver in a dark area backstage and could not see as he loaded, police said.

On cue, Jacobs fired three rounds into a piece of carpeting held by another person to help muffle the bang.

The bullet ripped through the piece of carpeting, a canvas wall and an imitation stove made of fiberboard before it hit Ms. Beattie on stage, Olson said.

Ms. Beattie yelled but didn't fall when she was struck, Olson said. "She just kind of stood there until (other cast members) told her to lie down."

Despite her injuries, Ms. Beattie hopes to be in the cast Wednesday night when Cascade Players open "Don't Drink the Water," a Woody Allen play in which Ms. Beattie plays Marion, a major role.

The gun will be fired at a brick wall instead of the stage, Olson said.

Jacobs declined comment. Longview Police Lt. Hal Manke said the case will be investigated.

Found Drugs Weren't Fun

LONDON (AP) — Rock star Sting, lead singer with Police, says he began experimenting with drugs when he was 12 years old, but stopped last year because he decided drug-taking was wrong and "not even that much fun."

"I wasn't a heroin addict or anything like that. It's just that drugs are around, and you take them, and then you start taking them on your own as well, and that's dangerous," the 31-year-old multimillionaire singer said in an interview.

"You start lying to people and to yourself. When you're feeling 'vulnerable' they're there. But you mustn't. It's wrong... They're not even that much fun," he said.

"I've been taking drugs since I was 12, so about a year ago I decided to stop them altogether."

Sting separated from his wife, actress Frances Tomelty, last year and now lives with girlfriend Trudie Styler who is expecting their baby in January.

Success doesn't bring happiness, the onetime Catholic school teacher said in an article published Monday in the weekly magazine Woman.

"I think we're here to learn, and the pursuit of knowledge alleviates the pain of being human," he was quoted as saying.

"And everybody is in pain, but if you're learning something, your mind is diverted."

Landon, Nancy In TV Promo

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actor Michael Landon was at the White House for some television work, and his co-star was first lady Nancy Reagan. Landon, 46, and Mrs. Reagan taped a television promotion Monday night to be used in a nationwide community campaign against drug and alcohol abuse.

The campaign will be launched in connection with a program called "The Chemical People."

Said Mrs. Reagan: "I long for the day when our schools and homes will be drug free."

The promotion will be shown on public TV early next month.

'Bay City Blues' More Than A Baseball Series

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Frenchy Nuckles races home to tell his wife about the spitball pitch he's just learned to throw. He finds her upstairs, in the bedroom, with the cable TV guy.

"Judy," the ballplayer pleads, seemingly on the verge of tears, "was he at least gonna give you a 'teal'?"

So that's what life is like in Double-A baseball: adolescents from 18 to 40, living as adults in backwater towns, away from friends and family and always on the margin.

The producers of "Bay City Blues," starting tonight on NBC, built a minor-league ballpark in Southern California as the backdrop for a promising show that promises the best new drama since the network introduced "Hill Street Blues" in 1981.

"Don't be misled by the title," says "The White Shadow" producer, "that estimable CBS series about a high school baseball team, the sports drama in 'Bay City Blues' lives largely as common environment for a diverse cast of characters, some young and inexperienced and uncommonly vital, others aging and fading and desperate to hang on.

And it's a continuing story, one told with sensitivity and plenty of humor and with that special, sneering, clubhouse brand of cynicism that seems often to embellish the professional athlete, on and off the field.

"So one of these winters, we'll detox him," the big-league scout says of the young pitcher with a drinking problem. "He can give press conferences. The writers will love it."

Not coincidentally, the two men who created "Bay City Blues," as well as four members of the cast, also worked on "Hill Street" at one time or another. Steven Bochco is executive producer of both shows, while Jeffrey Lewis, an Emmy-winning writer for "Hill Street," is supervising producer of the new series.

The cast includes Pat Corley, the bumbling coroner from "Hill Street," as Ray Holtz, a used car dealer and owner of the Bay City Bluebirds; Dennis Franz, the sadistic cop who killed himself in last season's finale of "Hill Street" as Angelo Carbone, the pitching coach; Peter Jurasik, a drug dealer from "Hill Street" as the team announcer, and Marco Rodriguez, an addict who kicked the habit but fell off the wagon in "Hill Street," as the team's mascot, the Bluebird of Happiness.

Michael Nouri, star of the theatrical film "Flashdance," plays the Bluebirds' manager, Joe Rohner, with Perry Lang as Frenchy and Michele Greene as Judy.

Bay City is a blue-collar town, and Holtz is struggling constantly to meet the payroll. "Bus 'em to Bakersfield Sunday night instead of Monday," he tells Rohner after passing out the paychecks Friday night. "That'll buy me three more days at the bank."

Rohner, meantime, has troubles of his own. The team is making a late-season run at the Western League pennant, and Holtz is trying to unload his most promising pitcher on St. Louis. Then there's Sunny Hayward, the banker's wife who has her eye on Rohner.

A baseball game, graceful and fluid, is not easily dramatized. There is something of the athlete in most actors, but even the casual fan can spot the unpracticed pitch or the awkward swing.

Action on the ballfield in "Bay City Blues" is surprisingly, and pleasingly, realistic, a credit to the cast that includes only one recognized athlete, Bernie Casey, a former professional football player.

Carson Divorce Delay Refused

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC Tonight Show host Johnny Carson lost a bid to have a hearing on his divorce postponed, and lawyers for Carson and his estranged wife Joanna were ordered to appear in court today.

Mrs. Carson is seeking monthly support payments of $220,000 during the couple's divorce litigation. That includes $37,000 a month for jewelry and furs, $5,000 for household help, $5,000 for clothing and department store purchases, $12,000 for gifts, and $2,700 for travel. A lawyer for the 58-year-old Carson, Norman Oberstein, entered the case last week and asked for a 60-day postponement to give him more time to prepare his case.

A Superior Court judge on Monday turned him down.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 10-25

ATEHW KGDC HGPSEUH WGUK G RPO
HGSGUC EK ATW OUGDC REGA.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip - MOST DEGRADING
CREATURES IN ANIMAL KINGDOM; MOCK TURTLES.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: E equals O.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 NT 2 ♥
3 ♦ Pass 4 ♦ Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: Nine of ♥.

There are times when you can afford to defend passively. All too often, however, tricks won't sit around and wait for you—you must go out and collect them.

South's jump to three spades was a slight stretch, especially since his queen of hearts rated to be worthless.
With close to a maximum no trump response, North was fully justified in raising to game.

West led the nine of hearts to his partner's king. When South followed with the queen, East took time out to review his side's defensive prospects.

Since to falsecard with the queen of hearts from a doubleton might cost a trick, declarer probably had only a singleton heart. West could not possibly have more than one defensive trick so, if the contract was to be defeated, the defenders would have to take two diamond tricks.

East's holding in clubs was ominous—it seemed likely that that suit would provide declarer with a discard once trumps were drawn. Therefore, diamonds would have to be attacked immediately.

The play to establish a second diamond trick was elementary—East shifted to the jack of diamonds at trick

two. Declarer won in dummy and tried the trump finesse.
West took the king and reverted to diamonds, and the defenders cashed their two tricks in the suit for down one.

Note that this defense would have succeeded had West held the king of clubs rather than the king of trumps. The defenders would have gotten their two tricks in diamonds before the discard was set up.

Decision Won't Block Launch

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A U.S. Army Corps of Engineers decision not to dredge a channel from the Manteo harbor to Pamlico Sound for the Elizabeth II won't block plans to launch the 16th century sailing ship replica, officials say.

"The administration supports the view that where the project serves primarily as a local recreational resource, the project should be a local responsibility entirely," said Sheila Roy, spokeswoman for the Corps' Wilmington district.

The ship is under construction for the America's 400th Anniversary celebration, honoring the first English settlers in North Carolina.

Chancy Kapp, spokeswoman for the state Department of Cultural Resources, said the Elizabeth II would be launched as scheduled Nov. 22 and would be open to the public in July 1984.

The 50-ton, 70-foot ship has a draft of 8 feet, and the channel varies in depth from 4 to 6 feet, she said.

PITT-GREENVILLE

Biweekly

"The Best Things In Life Are Free!"

Priceless

THE ALTERNATIVE

Now in its third year, the PITT-GREENVILLE TIMES has truly become the area's "alternative" reading and advertising source. In fact, it provides the very best coverage of life in Pitt County that money can't buy. That's right, money can't buy it because there's no charge for your copy of the PITT-GREENVILLE TIMES. It's priceless!

Originally created as a guide for what's hot and what's not in entertainment, dining, and the arts, the PITT-GREENVILLE TIMES has expanded its editorial coverage to include many new areas. These new features include crazy columnist Lewis Grizzard, the cultural calendar, art news, inside looks behind the headlines, personal interviews, restaurant profiles, entertainment calendar and features, stories about life in Pitt County, event highlights, articles featuring your neighbors, sports topics, classified ads, home and garden tips, and much more.

Published every other Wednesday, the PITT-GREENVILLE TIMES has consistently offered very informative and entertaining reading with something included for folks from all walks of life. More of a magazine than a newspaper, the tabloid is divided into sections for quick location of your favorite local topics. And as if the reading wasn't already diverse enough, three new surprises will be added in 1984!

Most PITT-GREENVILLE TIMES copies are scooped up within 72 hours after they are distributed. Therefore, lots of readers can't seem to find a copy each fortnight. To solve this problem a subscription offer has now been initiated. You can now have each and every PITT-GREENVILLE TIMES sent directly to your mailbox for half a year at the introductory price of only $5.00.

The new $5.00 (6 month) offer is only charging for necessary postage and handling. It is meant as a convenience for PITT-GREENVILLE TIMES readers and does not affect the "complimentary" status of copies left at the usual distribution points. After all, the best things in life are still free!

The PITT-GREENVILLE TIMES is distributed at high-traffic locations throughout Greenville and Pitt County. Hotels, restaurants, shopping centers, Carolina East Mall, nightclubs, shops, convenience stores, East Carolina University dorms, and the new mailed subscriptions effectively distribute the publication.

Good Times. Changing Times. Fun Times. Meal Times. Night Times. Old Times. Prime Times. First Times. Three-Quarter Times. Record Times. Glad Times. Scheduled Times. Best of Times. PITT-GREENVILLE TIMES.
