Reconciliation Talks Beginning

Lebanese Hold Private Session

Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) - Leaders of Lebanon's warring factions conferred privately today before the opening of the long-delayed national reconciliation conference aimed at ending the nation's eight years of civil strife.

Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel-Halim Khaddam was reported meeting with opponents of Lebanese President Amin Gemayel in a private home near the lakeside resort of Montreux, east of Geneva.

Former Lebanese President Camille Chamoun and Pierre Gemayel, father of current President Amin Gemayel and leader of the Christian Phalange Party, huddled in a suite in the Intercontinental Hotel, where the conference was

Grenadian General Caught

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) - A man believed to be the Marxist general who seized control of Grenada's left-wing government in a bloody coup has been captured by American paratroopers, the U.S. military reported Sunday

An announcement from the Pentagon said units of the 82nd Airborne Division seized "an individual who claims he is Gen. Hudson Austin." It said the prisoner "fits the description of Gen. Austin and was carrying identification to that effect.

Barbados' state-run Caribbean Broadcasting Corp. had reported earlier that Austin was caught Sunday, but gave no

The reports came one day after U.S. Marines seized former Deputy Prime Minister Bernard Coard, accused of provoking the coup that led to the U.S. invasion of Grenada.

Austin organizaed the coup and named a Revolutionary Military Council following the slaying of Prime Minister Maurice Bishop on Oct. 19. Bishop had been under house arrest for a week in a power struggle with Coard, a hard-line

The Pentagon also announced that the American death toll rose to 16, with 77 wounded and three missing. Four of the dead had previously been listed as missing since thousands of U.S. troops and a seven-nation Caribbean force invaded Grenada at dawn Oct. 25 and deposed the leftist military junta. Their stated aim was to restore order and protect

U.S. military officials in Barbados said Air Force planes were transporting food and supplies into Grenada for tired and hungry residents of the tiny tropical island nation. American diplomats could not confirm this, but they said 500 displaced Grenadians may be eligible for emergency aid.

Election Signs Bring Protests

East Carolina University and Greenville city officials said today that they have received complaints about political posters for candidates seeking office in the city election Nov. 8 being erected on the ECU campus Saturday.

Nadine Bowen, assistant to City Manager Gail Meeks. said a city ordinance makes it unlawful to post handbills or political campaign signs "on or over any property or right of way owned or controlled by the city," with two exceptions

She said temporary signs may be placed in the right of way of residential property when placed there by or with the premission of the owner or occupant. She said handbills may also be placed on city owned or controlled bulletin boards which are made available for public use as long as they are placed and maintained in accordance with rules and regulations adopted for the bulletim boards.

Mrs. Bowen noted that the ordinance provides that the city's director of public works is authorized to remove any posters or handbills when they are posted in violation of the ordinance.

Jim Mallory, associate dean for orientation and ju-

Nancy Reagan, in a television show to be broadcast next month, says parents can turn the tide in the battle against drug and alcohol abuse by their children.

Parent Power can make the difference, giving hope that the twin demons can be whipped and the epidemic quelled, Mrs. Reagan says in the two-part program. "The Chemical People," to be broadcast on public television Nov. 2 and 9.

Parent Power also is solicited in a new Ad Council Drug Abuse Prevention campaign conducted on behalf of the National Institute on Drug Abuse and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

"It's time for us to stop denying the extent of drug and alcohol abuse and bring it out of the court into the open, she said.

Lloyd Kaiser, general manager of WQED. Pit tsburgh, Pa., producer of the show, said Mrs. Reagan worked very hard for two days in April while her parts of the show were filmed.

We went over it many times," he said. "And she never lost patience.

Couple Speaks Vows In Farmville On Sunday

Lynn Allen and Jeffrey Lynn Heath, both of Farmville, were united in marriage Sunday at 4 p.m. The Rev. Dennis R. Ricks officiated at the double ring ceremony. Leigh Taylor served as acolyte.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Ray Allen of Farmville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Edward Heath of Route 1, Farmville.

Mrs, Bradford Lamm of Wilson was organist and Mrs. Jerry Bizzell of Wallace, cousin of the bride, sang "The Wedding Song and the "Wedding Prayer.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a formal gown of white satin over peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in scalloped silk Venise lace beaded with pearls. Beaded alencon lace enhanced the fitted bodice. The long fitted sleeves were fashioned of satin and finished in calla points overlaid in re-embroidered alencon lace. Matching lace encircled the modified waistline. The A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were accented with an edging of silk Venise lace. Appliques of alencon lace and seed pearls accented the skirt and train. She wore a chapel length veil with a full Juliet cap. Alencon lace and seed pearls cascaded from the cap. The bride carried a cascading bouquet of white silk roses, orchids and stephanotis. Melissa Dawn Lambert of Farmville was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Angela Kay Cash of Farmville, cousin of the bride, Mrs. Paul Edward Heath of Route 1, Farmville, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, Sarah Elizabeth Hunt of Farmville, George Lelia Sugg of Snow Hill, Cindy Lou Cunningham of Walstonburg and Laurie Jane Rogers of

Halloween Safety Ensures No Tricks

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: It's Halloween again and time to remind you that.

Somebody's child will be seriously injured or killed in a Halloween-related traffic accident. Somebody's child will be badly maimed or fatally burned due to a flammable costume.

Somebody's child will become violently ill or die after eating poisoned candy or an apple containing Somebody's child will be coaxed into an automobile or lured into a secluded area and sexually as-

To make sure that child isn't yours, here are some tips to ensure the safety of your children:

Use flameproof costumes only. If costumes are made at home, treat the fabric with a flame-resistant solution.

- Because masks, floppy hats, wigs and veils often interfere with a child's vision, use makeup Accessories such as swords, broomsticks, hatchets, wands, etc., should be made of cardboard rather than plastic, metal or wood. Sharp items are dan-- Provide youngsters with flashlights to prevent falls on sidewalks or porch steps. (Positively no lighted candles should be carried!) Decorate your child's costume and trick-or-treat bag with reflective tape to make them highly visible to motorists. - Remind children that they should never enter the home of a stranger or accept rides.

— Adults can help by keeping their yards well-

- Parents should check all "treats" before allowing children to eat them. Very young children should never be out after dark unless accompanied by an adult. So, make it a safe Halloween, and come Thanksgiving, you'll have more to be thankful for.

DEAR ABBY: A junior high school girl sought your advice after having told her gym teacher that she "loved" her and asked her to be her "special friend." The teacher told her she felt "uncomfortable" being loved so much by a student, and she urged the girl to get over it.

You were right to advise the girl not to pursue a special friendship with this teacher. Abby, as a representative for the National Education Association, I have seen my share of unsavory student/ teacher liaisons gone public, and I can only commend this teacher for seeing the danger in the situation.

Every day in every school, some student is falling in love with some teacher. Some of these gestures are reciprocated and, if made public, the teacher stands to lose a career or worse. School boards and the courts do not look kindly on teachers who violate the sacred trust of a student/teacher relationship.

Teaching is a more difficult job than most of the public realizes, and this letter illustrates just one of the occupational hazards. The gym teacher was correct and proper, even expressing her feeling of being "uncomfortable" with being "loved." I applaud this teacher's sound judgment. S.L., WICHITA, KAN

Adaptation Will Occur

Exaggeration is a commonplace tool to get attention or underline a point, just as it is the basis for humor.

No humor was intended in the EPA warning of vast changes in the environment and "catastrophic" impact of the "Greenhouse Effect"

(If you came in late, the Greenhouse Effect has been anticipated for years; and is linked to the release of vast quantities of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere — which, it is believed, will trap heat, melting polar caps and raising the ocean levels to flood low-lying islands and coastal lands.)

The Environmental Protection Agency's report, projecting dire results in the 21st century, drew immediate attention and reaction. The study flatly stated the trend could not be

The EPA study was followed by a National Academy of Sciences two-year exploration of the same subject which, while "more conservative," was in agreement with the overall picture. NAS experts opined the world had time to further study the phenomena and determine what to do about it. In that, they were less pessimistic than the EPA's scientists.

As the NAS study chairman said, "we speak of probabilities," and "our ability to adapt to them."

Both reports served their intended purposes: to peer into the future, to inform the world's people of what lies in store, and to remind that there are resources of adaptability which have long been held to be the single greatest quality of humankind.

In short, it is anticipated there will someday be changes in our weather and in the world's geography; but it will be a slow process, perhaps barely perceptible to the generations who witness the changes, and people will adapt to those changes.

Ham Finds New Role

Last week ham radio operators all over the nation were listening to the transmissions from a medical student in Grenada

What they were hearing was highly important to a nation that suddenly found itself in a military operation, because reporters had been barred from the invasion of Granada by the Reagan administration.

Twenty-two-year-old Mark Berettella reportedly performed well in giving information about the war to his fellow ham operators, who in turn relayed it to the nation.

Berettella's congressional representative from New Jersey says he will recommend the highest civilian award for him. It would be appropriate - and if Berettella should decide against a medical career he might want to consider a role as a war correspondent

Economic Currents

NEW YORK (AP) — The world today might be a sea of troubles, but there are a few currents here and there that suggest a good many Americans are feeling rather serene about one aspect of life, their finances.

You may have noted, for example, that the markets for stocks and gold and silver and diamonds don't get hysterical any more, even if the world seems to be blowing up and threatening the value of more ephemeral things.

And you probably have observed also that people are out there buying up goods as if tomorrow were a certainty. And that they they are borrowing against their futures too, which generally is believed to indicate confidence.

Why this state of financial affairs should exist isn't altogether clear on the surface, as nothing is that involve the human mind and emotions. But those currents do steer us to some up because the stock market is up. This assumption seems to confuse cause and effect, and it might. But an argument nevertheless is offered in its defense. It is this: Since the stock market is up so is the net worth of the people who make up the stock market.

Researchers at Merrill Lynch Capital Markets provide some documentation. The value of equity holdings, they point out, exploded by $514 billion, or 50 percent, between mid-1982 and mid-1983.

If other securities are added in, this measure of household wealth grows to an astonishing $661 billion, $140 billion of it added in the April-May-June quarter of this year alone Comments ML: "Although stock holdings accounted for only 28 percent of all deposits and securities owned by households in mid-1982, they contributed fully two-thirds of the gain in net worth over the subsquent year.

And what does this do to behavior? Although difficult to quantify, say the ML researchers, it almost goes without saying that a household that feels better off financially is going to act out that feeling in the marketplace. The marketplace has indeed been booming, for cars especially and for houses until recently, and for some electronic items too. Installment credit has been up and savings down, and that doesn't happen if people aren't confident.

In fact, the savings rate in the second quarter of the year dropped to a 33-year low of just 4 percent. In effect, people felt less of a need to save out of current income because of their increased wealth from the stock market. This explanation does tend to leave you with the nagging question of which came first, the stock market ascent or the confidence that caused it. A bit of each perhaps, one factor reinforcing the other. While that answer still might not satisfy, it does at any rate seem as plausible as other theories being offered for the bullish behavior of Americans in a world of friction and fighting.

Another theory is that people have become inured to crises and no longer react to them. And still another, that there is no escape in gold or silver or stocks or anything else.

Therefore, it goes, you might as well

Weinberger Balked At Military Response

WASHINGTON — During agonizing hours following Sunday's Beirut massacre, the Pentagon deflected a long-anticipated move to seek Israel's help out of the Lebanese quagmire, pushing hard instead for the earliest possible exodus of the Marines consistent with American credibility and honor.

For weeks, during slowlyescalating sniper fire against the undefendable Marines, high administration officials in the State Department and White House had eyed the U.S.-supplied military might of Israel as a last-ditch, surefire response to Islamic extremists. It was presumed at State and in the intelligence community that if a disaster happened, the Syrians could be behind it and Israel could handle Syria.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, backed to a man by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, objected. He feared that a turn toward Israel would plunge U.S. stock in the Arab world to dangerous lows, opening up the oil-rich Middle East to a new chapter of Soviet exploitation.

So well did Weinberger carry that argument into the West Wing basement when President Reagan summoned the National Security Council last Sunday that the "Israeli option" is now a dead letter. It will remain so, unless the savage act against the Marines can be laid at the doorstep of Damascus. With or without help from Israel (help it might not wish to give), Weinberger set the U.S. firmly against any military response.

The Israeli card looked potent until the time came to play it," one policy insider said. The result of inducing an Israeli strike against Syrian forces in Lebanon would be 'psychic satisfaction" he explained, but the closer U.S.-Israeli strategic partnership would drive the wedge deeper between Washington and moderate Arab states.

From the moment Sunday's deliberations began, Weinberger suggested he was prepared to fight within the administration against a new U.S.-Israeli military partnership. As the first top official to comment on the massacre, following Reagan himself, Weinberger hinted pro-Iranian fundamentalists of the Shiite sect were to blame. He had no firm evidence, but his insinuations purposely left the way open for Reagan to pursue new understandings with Syria while the CIA and allied intelligence services search for who really did it after months of probing, it is doubtful that the world soon will learn the identity of last Sunday's terrorists. That makes revenge or sensible retaliation difficult. "The president is not vengeful," a White House aide told us, "because he knows we have not been able to locate or even identify the perpetrators."

With the instigators of last April's murderous assault on the U.S. Em-

That alleviates concerns of Weinberger and the Joint Chiefs that seeking reprisals with the help of Israel's awesome military power would damage the U.S. throughout Islam, from North Africa to the Persian Gulf. Instead of retaliation, the Pentagon wants new ways to guarantee maximum security for the Marines for as brief a time as possible before withdrawing them.

Reagan, who faces devastating political problems at home arising from the Beirut disaster, cannot allow even veiled suggestions that the U.S. will turn tail and run. The president needs time and political changes in Lebanon to prepare removal of the Marines from Beirut's shooting gallery. He is being urged by a variety of advisers inside and outside the administration - including Henry Kissinger - to make a new push for the 1982 West Bank peace plan, using all his influence to force both Israel and Jordan into

But no breakthrough on his longbecalmed peace plan is expected in time to facilitate a graceful withdrawal from Lebanon as soon as Reagan wants it and needs it. Weinberger is clearly telling the president that he cannot wait that ong to bring out the Marines.

Reagan refused to listen to the secretary of defense and the Joint Chiefs when they warned that he would be creating a disaster waiting to happen if he sent the Marines to Lebanon. Now that Weinberger has been proved tragically correct, the president's ear, for the moment at least, may be more closely attuned to the Pentagon.

Grandiose hopes of a miraculous breakthrough on the West Bank or anywhere else in the Mideast seem as detached from the cold, new reality in this capital as an Americanbacked Israeli military thrust against Syria. Despite his statement on Monday that the Marines were staying, Ronald Reagan was getting ready to cut losses as soon as he can do it without running away, and that could be the beginning of wisdom.

Strength For Today

The great philospher and brilliant converstationalist, Samuel Johnson, once declared, "Gratitude is a fruit of great cultivation; you do not find it among gross people." The English statesman, Benjamin Disraeli, also remarked that gratitude is the rarest of the virtues.

If we think back over our lives we find that sometimes the people for whom we have done the most have sometimes had no appreciation at all for our efforts. Gratitude is not only rare, it is a virtue which if manifested sincerely and enthusiastically will always warm some heart and produce a most favorable reaction. The person who takes everything for granted and fails to say "thank you," either to God or to man, is an unloving and unloved creature.

Gratitude is the capacity on the part of a recipient to enter into the mind and heart of the giver. So be grateful. Your fellow men will love you if you are — and so will God.

'Rocks Laying Around'

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the stump speech he's been delivering across the country, black leader Jesse Jackson has a metaphor about "rocks just laying around." Every astute politician in America is aware of these "rocks."

They are the untapped black vote. For effect, Jackson calls the roll and compares the number of unregistered blacks with Ronald Reagan's winning margin in key states.

Alabama, carried by Reagan with 17,000 votes, has 287,000 unregistered blacks. Arkansas, Reagan's by 5,000, has 87,000. South Carolina, where Reagan won by a margin of 11,000, has 328,000 unregistered blacks. New York, carried by Reagan with 165,000 votes, has 915,000 unregistered blacks.

Jackson says these are rocks that some

Whether or not all those blacks register to vote, the numbers are registering in people's minds

And the effects are making themselves felt even outside the political arena. It may be a sign of the times that in 1983 a black man went into space, a black woman was crowned Miss America, a black leader will be memorialized with a national holiday and Jackson is weighing a bid for the Democratic presidential nomination.

It doesn't matter whether or not those events occurred out of the most cynical of reasons. What matters is that they are taking place.

That NASA selected astronaut Guion Bluford for an early trip on the shuttle because it was aware of the public relations payload such a flight would

That, in selecting Vanessa Williams of Millwood, N.Y., the Miss America judges got a message when the states sent four pretty black women to Atlantic

And that politicians in Congress voted for creating a legal holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr. out of a respect for, or fear of, the power of the black vote and not because they thought so highly of King's earthly achievements.

Even if all that were true in this most hard-bitten world, it still would be evidence that at last black people begun to emerge from the shadows American life

Eyesores, Or Weathered Beauties Conveying A Special Rural Charm?

To destroy or to enjoy as is? That is a question increasingly being asked — whether it is wiser to tidy up the rural landscape of eastern North Carolina or to accept as part of the ambience the increasing numbers of buildings abandoned each year, and which with the passage of time begin to

Advocates of beautification feel that a general clean-up campaign would significantly enhance the appearance of the countryside. Measures this contingent stump for would result in removal of structures in advanced stages of deterioration and action to paint, cleanup and repair salvaga-

On the other side of the issue are those who claim that one of the particular charms of the area — and of the entire South — is the appeal of weathered wood, the random beauty of landscapes fashioned by nature. Once a structure is abandoned, nature quickly reasserts itself, encompassing such places with vines, wild flowers, new tree growth.

Primary advocates of the let nature take its course stand are poets, artists and persons addicted to nostalgia for old places, old things that are part of their rural roots.

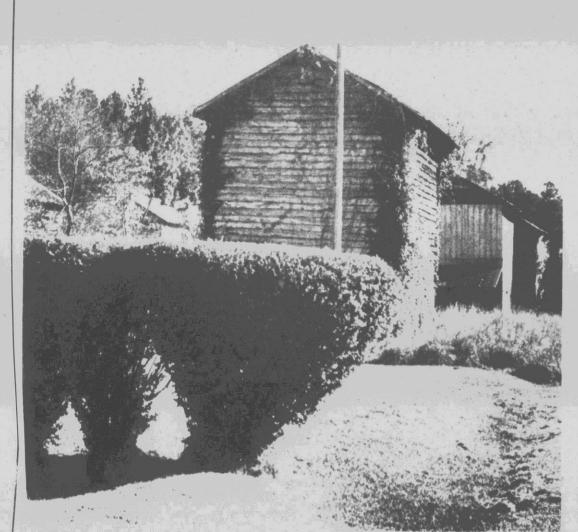

On one point, both factions agree. There exists a pressing need to identify, and where possible, save for posterity houses, barns or other structures with a historical significance. There's a surprisingly large number of such places in rural eastern North Carolina, many of them clearly in an endangered state.

Agricultural Extension Agent

Fall is the optimum time to take soil and nematode samples. During the fall the crops are out of the field, temperatures are moderate and comfortable and nematode populations have built up to near their high levels for the

These factors mean that the necessary soil samples can be taken more easily and nematode populations will be easier to detect and count. Soil sampling is an inexpensive way to find out important things about conditions of a field, garden, lawn or any other place where plants will be raised.

Soil sampling is a free service in North Carolina. The N.C. Department of Agriculture processes all soil samples for free at its agronomic division laboratory in Raleigh. Nematode samples cost only $1 but can save the average farmer in eastern North Carolina hundreds of dollars.

The soil sample report that the NCDA lab sends back will give relative levels of major plant nutrients, some micronutrients, soil chemical factors like pH, an acidity index and a soil's ability to provide basic nutrients. This information allows specific fertilizer blends to be formulated for the farmer. Fertlizer and lime requirements come back to the grower on a weight per area basis. For crops that are likely to be planted in large areas, the results will be in tons per acre. For lawns, gardens and ornamentals, the results will be expressed in terms of pounds per 1,000 square feet.

Therefore, a sample of the upper six-eight inches of the soil can be analyzed and the necessary nutrients can be applied. The upper few inches of soil is the zone of maximum root growth and any improvements we try to make below this depth are difficult to do. There is no way to look at a soil and tell how much lime or fertilizer is necessary. Most of our soils in eastern North Carolina are acid in nature and largely infertile. It is only with the addition of lime and fertilizer that the beautiful land we have becomes profitably productive.

Soil sample information is available at any North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service office. In Pitt County many garden centers and agricultural chemical suppliers also have sample materials on hand. After taking the sample they can be packaged and mailed or deposited at the extension office.

In years past there has been an avalanche of soil samples arriving at the lab in Raleigh at the same time. With a large staff on hand, turn-around time id often weeks instead of months away.

What can soil samples? They can give you an idea of what fertilizer materials you'll need prior to planting or after planting, what fertilizer analysis you'll need, how much to distribute and tell you about your soil's chemistry. By taking soil samples at least every two years, many of the difficulties in growing plants will be simplified.

Alfonsin Ends Peronists' Era

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - Raul Alfonsin of the centrist Radical Civic Union won the presidential race in elections to replace Argentina's 7-year-old military regime, returns today showed. The victory ended the Peronist Party's fourdecade domination of national politics.

With more than 80 percent of ballots counted, Alfonsin, a 56-year-old lawyer and former congressman, had 52.6 percent of the popular vote compared to Peronist candidate Italo Luder's 39 percent.

Alfonsin captured 6,155,234 votes of a total of 11,701,347

Clark Choice Opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) -The Sierra Club, calling William P. Clark's overtures to environmentalists "disappointing and cosmetic,' said today it opposes his nomination to succeed James Watt as interior secretary.

"We have asked for reassurance that Watt's policies will change under Judge Clark and received none. Based on the lack of any such commitment and on what we know of Judge Clark's environmental record, we must oppose his confirmation." said Sierra Club President Denny Shaffer.

The 350,000-member organization said the Senate should question Clark closely at his confirmation hearings, which begin Tuesday, on what it termed 17 antienvironmental decisions he participated in while he was on the California Supreme Court. Each decision was pro-development, the organization said.

McCumber Joins Double Winners "But I'm 35 under (par) for season's leading money- missed. Just Barely. Peete

Mark McCumber became golf's eighth two-time winner this season in the Pensacola Open, but the fond hopes of three players were denied in the season-closing event on the PGA Tour.

"I'm proud of the way I won," McCumber said after he solved a multiple-man scramble Sunday with a closing six-under-par 65 on the 7,093-yard Perdido Bay Country Club course.

He should have been. He came out of the pack with birdies on four of the last five holes, including the last three, to join Fuzzy Zoeller, Hal Sutton, Gil Morgan, Lanny Wadkins, Cal Peete, Seve Ballesteros and Jim Colbert as the game's double winners history, there was not a three-time winner. (Two team events remain on the schedule. But they do not count on the official statistics.)

McCumber won his second of the year, and third of his career, with a 266 total, 18 under par. The victory was worth $45,000 from the total purse of $250,000 and boosted his seasons's earnings to a career-high $268,294.

One wag in the press box, following East Carolina's 21-9 Homecoming victory over East Tennessee State, suggested moving Ficklen Stadium to Grifton, or Bethel, or Washington somewhere out of Greenville.

Then, he explained, the Pirates might think it's a road game and play to their abilities rather than the usual performance they seem to show in

It's disappointing for them to play below par in front of their home fans - especially when they have a crowd like they had Saturday. One has to wonder after that performance how many will return for the final home game against William & Mary

For the first 20 minutes, the fans had to be very pleased, however, as the Pirates - playing somewhat conservatively - barrelled out to a 21-0 lead. But that's probably where the mistake

Coach Ed Emory, trying to be fair to all the players, began subbing, and momentum was lost never to be regained. He admitted later that this was probably the crucial point in the game: he should have left the first stringers in longer.

A couple of more series probably would have produced 14 more points and could have put the Pirates into a comfortable 35-0 lead. Then, with the time remaining in the half, the subs could have come in to finish up play. Then, with the regulars back in for the first one or two series of the second half, they could have made it an even more comfortable margin before letting the subs get their needed experience by finishing out the third and playing through the fourth period.

That would have thoroughly crushed the East Tennessee spirit and allowed ECU to have won a victory that they could have been proud of. And one that would have been impressive to any bowl scout who sees the score.

One thing is certain: East Carolina cannot play in its final three games as it did on Saturday after those first 20 minutes. Anything less than an all-out effort against Miami, William & Mary and Southern Mississippi will lead to disaster.

Miami is probably the toughest opponent the Pirates have faced this fall. They lost early to Florida by a lopsided score, but the Hurricanes have come on strong since then and handled West Virginia with relative ease last Saturday. They have a good chance of being the third Top Ten team the Pirates have faced this year (at the time of the game), and have one of the nation's best passing games.

William & Mary, despite a lack-luster record, has another fine passing attack, and there are still those who should remember William & Mary's last visit to Greenville. That loss handed the Pirates an embarrassing losing season — one they had to live with for a year since it was the final game of the season.

Then, Southern Mississippi is again no slouch. The Hattiesburg team will be tough and playing them on the road will be no easy task.

Victories in all three games could assure the Pirates of a bowl bid, but any hopes of post-season play they have would have to see them beat the last two opponents.

Anything less and it would be all over.

It would have been interesting to see what would have happened had North Carolina recovered the on-side kick in the final seconds of the game at Maryland Saturday evening.

After the Tar Heels came up short on their two-point conversion try which eventually cost them the game, the Maryland fans mobbed the field, tearing down the goal posts at the UNC end

That cost Maryland a 15-yard penalty and could have cost it the ball game. It put Carolina in a excellent field position, kicking off from the Maryland 45 and with an on-side kick, they would have gained possession around the 35 with time left to complete one or two sideline passes for excellent field goal position.

But with no goal posts, it would have been interesting to see the action of the officials had Carolina gotten the ball. They would have had to turn around and go the other way - with a stiff wind in their faces. It was a situation where the fans definitely could have decided the outcome by their unwelcome actions.

Even so, the recovery of the on-side kick was controversial. It appeared in replays of the kick that a Maryland player touched the ball prior to its traveling 10 yards, thus making it a free ball. Following a tussle for the ball, one official signaled it Carolina's ball, but another awarded it back to Maryland.

Our best guess as to why is that once the Maryland player controlled the ball, it was the Terps, since he was on the ground. He then lost it after he was hit by Carolina defenders.

It will be talked about by Carolina fans for some time, we are sure.

ACC Scenario Familiar

The story was familiar: North Carolina and Maryland locked in a do-or-die Atlantic Coast Conference battle royale. And, just as last year's story, the Tar Heels came up

Six bowl scouts and a regional television audience watched 13th-ranked Maryland pull away to a 28-17 edge over the third-ranked Tar Heels, then hang on for a 28-27 victory which was not decided until officials judged an onside kick to be the possession of the Terrapins.

In the rest of the ACC, Duke ended its seven-game losing streak with a 32-26 victory over Georgia Tech that wasn't assured until a pass interception. Clemson stopped Wake Forest 24-17 when a Gary Schofield pass to Dan Dougherty was stopped seven yards short of a first down.

Second came the issue of the onside kick. Rob Rogers hit a squibber that was slow to travel the required 10 yards. Video-tape replays showed Rogers apparently fell on the ball after a Maryland player tried to pounce on it. The officials declared it to be Tar Heels ball inside the 40. After consultation, however, the decision was reversed.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) George Gervin was determined to have a better game than the one he had in the San Antonio Spurs' season-opening loss in Houston

Gervin poured in 35 points Sunday night as San Antonio rebounded to whip the Dallas Mavericks 123-101 in the second game of the National Basketball Association season for both teams.

Gervin had 19 points in the Spurs' 106-100 loss to Houston Saturday.

"I was determined to have a big game," he said after the win Sunday night. "I was sort of depressed about my game against Houston yesterday.

Gervin, 16 of 23 from the field, led a fourth-quarter surge by scoring eight straight points after the Mavericks cut the San Antonio lead to 12 points, 99-87, with 7:15 left to

TV's 'Sadat' Glorifies Slain Egyptian Leader

By FRED ROTHENBERG

AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The man who brought sanity and humanity to an ancient battle line in the Middle East was not always a statesman and a peacemaker.

As depicted in an emotionally moving but historically suspect and sometimes superficial television movie, Anwar Sadat first exhibited political consciousness as a bombthrower and a revolutionary

'Sadat," the two-part, four-hour glorification of the assassinated Egyptian president, stars Louis Gossett Jr., who captures Sadat's inner dignity and his physical appearance. although his performance, at times, comes across as bland.

The miniseries, filmed entirely in Mexico with hordes of extras, will be broadcast tonight and next Monday on the Operation Prime Time network.

Thirty years before he broke ranks with other Arab nations to help close some of the wounds between Israel and Egypt, Sadat was part of the assassination team that killed an Egyptian deemed to be too friendly with the ruling British authorities. Although he spent time in prison on the murder charge, Sadat was acquitted for "political reasons.

Sadat's treatment here is so glowing that even his involvement in the assassination is treated sympathetically. Later, when he's courting his second wife, Jihan, he says that his earlier activism occurred before he grew up, which is the closest thing to a wart uncovered by "Sadat.

Some items ignored or swept under the rug were his imprisonment in 1944 for helping two German spies in World War II, the first marriage he outgrew, his early alliance with the Soviet Union and the failure of many of his domestic

To woo audiences from ABC, CBS and NBC, Operation Prime Time feels its films must profile bigger-than-life figures who are then enlarged by the full-blown Hollywood treatment. The last OPT biography, the Emmy awardwinning "Golda," starring Ingrid Bergman, chronicled the life of Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir

"Golda" did a better job reconstructing the personal life behind the public figure. Sadat's private life is fleshed out only superficially. No mention is made of his seven children from the two marriages, and Jihan, played by Madolyn Smith, does little here but boost his morale.

Because it leans in so many directions to show that Sadat was a special man every second of his life, "Sadat" loses some of the impact it might have had when it chronicles the really courageous acts of the leader who took the first steps toward peace by visiting Egypt's hated enemy, Israel.

Still, "Sadat" is a very watchable film, offering behindthe-scenes history and glimpses into a man who grew gracefully into greatness.

An Israeli and an Egyptian soldier embrace, and the Israeli says: "Without Anwar Sadat, not only might I have died here so might my sons." It's a powerful beginning.

The story then traces Sadat's career in the Egyptian resistance movement against the British and his rise through Egypt's military ranks. At one time, he was considered President Gamal Abdel Nasser's "yes-man."

When Nasser dies, Sadat assumes the presidency, confiding to his wife that he feels ill-equipped to be a national leader. Her advice: "Be your own man.

He starts rising to the occasion when he stands up to the Soviets. After their advisers begin acting too independently, he boots them out of the country. He also launches troops across the Suez Canal, igniting the Yom Kippur War against

In one battle, Sadat's brother, a pilot, is killed. Sadat cries over his casket and vows to "stop the killing." This is great pathos, but one wonders about Sadat's sensitivity if death had 'no impact until it landed on his doorstep.

Green Trial Cost $90,000

The indictment and prosecution of Lt. Gov. Jimmy . Green, which resulted in his acquittal on bribery charges, cost taxpayers more than $90,000, according to preliminary estimates from court officials.

The charges against Green arose from Colcor, the FBI's 21-month investigation into political corruption in southeastern North Carolina. The cost of Colcor — which led to indictments against 40 people - was $135,000, said Robert Pence, the FBI agent in charge of North Carolina

Green said he would have a statement this week about how much the trial cost him personally. "The people of North Carolina deserve to acquittal

L. Sneed High, a Fayetteville lawyer and a former legislative colleague of Green, set up a Jimmy Green Defense Fund in August. High declined to say how much money was raised or how much was needed.

On Friday, a Wake County Superior Court jury found Green innocent of charges that he took a $2,000 bribe and agreed to take bribes of $10,000 a month from an FBI agent posing as a busi-nessman with underworld connections Months before he was indicted, Green said, "I would think that the people of North Carolina would be tired of the taxpayers' money being spent in this manner.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1983

YOUR DAILY from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Confusion can be the condition you encounter early in the day unless you make sure you have every detail of any course of action well thought out and have organized your day.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't permit some outside matter of little importance to take you away from vital duties you have to perform.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You want to revise some creative plan, but be sure it is wise that you do so before making radical changes

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Listening carefully to what kin are saying will save you confusion and arguments later. Give in to compromises.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Reading missives carefully is important today, especially any contracts. Pay attention to fine print.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Important you use care in the handling of money, also in any matters of charity and stay within your budge VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be practical and stop all that daydreaming and get busy accomplishing. You've been neglecting too many tasks at hand.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Schedule your work well and get it done in your precise and clever fashion and be enthused about it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Before you go out to buy something, make sure you really want it, otherwise you could later regret having spent the money

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make sure you are precise in handling your job, otherwise you could get into trouble of some kind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You get ideas about how best to advance, but test them for practicality and workability first, before you invest any money.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study those puzzling statements well and make any corrections that are needed. Someone is deliberately misleading you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Listen carefully to what a partner says and don't try to put words into his or her mouth, otherwise trouble ensues

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one of those charming young persons who will be very imaginative during early childhood so impress upon him, or her the importance of being more practical and down-toearth, and gaining the respect of others.

The U.S.* Merchant Marine has shrunk by half in the last two decades, and will continue to decline unless current maritime policies are revised or changed, according to a government report.

The 540 ships flying under the U.S. flag also are getting old, said an Office of Technology Assessment report released today. More than 110 ships are at least 30 years old.

'Analysis indicates that the United States has no overall, coordinated and effective maritime policy that responds to the major trends and realities ... in the increasingly competitive and complex arena of world seaborne trade." the report said, adding:

"If there are no policy changes, most U.S. maritime industry segments will confinue to decline in size and influence.

Some of the flaws cited were overlapping jurisdictions among federal agencies, ineffective use of subsidies, and lack of a stated mission. One of the results has been the loss of shipbuilding to foreign countries.

No recommendations were made, but the report listed several options, including international negotiations to promote competitive trade practices and loan guarantees to spur productivity and

What do you bid now? A.-You are certainly in slam territory - even a grand slam cannot be ruled out. The question is how best to in vestigate the possibilities. Both an immediate cue-bid and a jump in partner's suit will convey the strength of your hand, but the bidding could get too high before you have decided where to play the hand. For instance, if you jump to three spades and West preempts with five have diamonds, what next? Our own choice would be a quiet bid of two hearts.
