'We're Sorry,' Say The Kids

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — In pencil and on blue-lined notebook paper, the words are simple, but from the heart.

Over and over again they say "we're sorry" and "we appreciate what you're doing." Some promise to join the fighting "when I grow up."

The words are from 10- and 11-year-olds and they are in a batch of 28 letters Judy Gibson's remedial reading class in Hamlet, N.C., sent to Camp Lejeune. The base forwarded them to the Marines in Beirut.

"Dear Marines," "I heard some of you had to go to Lebanon. If some of your friends got killed or hurt, I am sorry. I am so thankful because you are trying to save our countries. My friend, Lisa, said hello."

"Your friend, Tracy Walters."

Capt. Mary Ann Krusa-Dossin, director of the Family Services unit at Camp Lejeune, opened the youngsters' letters on Friday and immediately sent them to Beirut, where 229 Marines died a week ago in a terrorist attack.

"It's so touching to get letters like that," said Mrs. Krusa-Dossin, who said she thought the correspondence would help lift the spirits of the troops in Beirut.

"Dear Marines,"

"When we saw the news, my (8-year-old) brother said, 'I'm going to be a Marine one day. They are brave like me.' My grandmother started crying. That is a brave thing you did."

"Your friend always, Robin Dawkins."

Mrs. Gibson, 41, said her pupils at Monroe Avenue Elementary School began talking about the terrorist bombing in Beirut last week and she was surprised at how spirited the discussion became.

Missing Ship Found In China Sea

HOUSTON (AP) — A U.S. oil drilling ship that carried 81 people and had been missing off the coast of China since Oct. 25 has been located by sonar 300 feet beneath the sea, a spokesman for the company that owns the vessel said today.

U.S. and Chinese air and sea craft have been searching for the vessel or survivors in the South China Sea since the Glomar Java Sea disappeared during a typhoon.

"Using sonar equipment, we have determined that the drilling ship is sunk at the drilling site," said Dick Vermeer, vice president for control and administration of Global Marine Inc. in Houston.

No survivors had been found but the search was continuing, according to a statement today by the U.S. West Pacific Rescue Coordination Center in Okinawa, Japan.

The 5,926-ton ship had two escape capsules on board. Vermeer said one was sighted capsized, but the other has not been spotted.

Each of the capsules can hold 54 people, said Vermeer. There were 81 crewmen — 42 Americans, 32 Chinese, two Singaporeans, an Australian and a Filipino — on board the drilling ship.

Vermeer said he did not know how many survivors might be aboard the remaining escape capsule.

"They either loaded one to the gills, or it has about half the people," he said.

Vermeer said sonar located the Glomar Java Sea lying on its side beneath the drilling site in about 300 feet of water.

Two U.S. Navy P-3 planes have been searching for the lost ship while China sent 14 ships and three helicopters out in poor weather south of Hainan Island.

Over the weekend, U.S. pilots thought they might have seen flashing lights, a buoy and life rafts. But after debriefing pilots from U.S. Air Force Hercules HC-130 and Navy P-3 planes, Gregory said the lights apparently were strobe lights floating "unattached" in the water.

Eight People Are Charged In Flea Market Break-Ins

Eight Washington, N.C., residents, including a 15-year-old juvenile, have been arrested by Pitt County authorities in connection with three break-ins at the Poor Man's Flea Market on U.S. 264 near Pictolus, Sheriff Ralph Tyson said today.

Tyson said deputies arrested Stevie Allen Johnson, 23, John Boston, 18, Richard Earl Tucker, 21, Earl Graham, 20, and the juvenile, on charges of breaking, entering and larceny at the flea market last Saturday.

The sheriff said Johnson, Boston, James Reddick, 16, Michael Darrell Razor, 18, and the juvenile were also charged with an Oct. 11 break-in at the facility, while Johnson, Boston, Razor, Reddick and Allen Whitfield, 17, were charged in connection with a Sept. 23 incident at the flea market.

Tyson said five of the arrests were made Saturday, including two which took place after a burglar alarm at the business went off early Saturday morning. He said one person was arrested in the building and another was taken into custody a short distance from the facility. Two others were apprehended Sunday and the eighth person was arrested Monday, Tyson said. Deputies confiscated a car loaded with merchandise, he said. Approximately $2,500 in property has been recovered.

Bond for Johnson and Boston was set at $25,000 each and Reddick was placed under $4,000 bond. Bonds were set at $2,000 each for Tucker, Gorham, Whitfield, and Razor.

Pitt Dropout Average Above State's Level

The number of dropouts in Pitt County schools has increased for the last five years and was higher in 1982-83 than North Carolina's public school dropout rate, according to a state report released Monday.

In 1982-83 the county's dropout rate was 7.2, compared to a statewide rate of 6.7 percent, according to a report by the controller's office of the State Board of Education. The report was based on information provided by the 143 school systems operating in the state last year.

The report indicated that the public school dropout rate in North Carolina has declined for the fifth straight year. In contrast, figures for Pitt County show an increase from 6.9 percent in 1978-79 to 7.2 percent in the past school year.

Pitt County's dropout rate in 1975-76 was 66.7 percent, in 1976-77 it was 7.4 percent, then in 1977-78 it increased to 7.5 percent. In 1978-79 the rate dropped to 6.9 percent and in 1979-80 to 6.6 percent. By 1980-81 the percent increased to 7.1 percent and in 1981-82 it reached 7.2.

The state dropout rate was 8.5 percent in 1974-75, 7.5 percent in 1975-76, 7.9 percent in 1976-77, 8.1 percent in 1977-78, 8 percent in 1978-79, 7.8 percent in 1979-80 and 7.6 percent in 1980-81.

Greenville city schools reported a dropout rate of 5.2 percent in 1982-83, well below the state average of 6.7. Superintendent Delma Blinson reported in October. A comparison with Greenville's 5 percent dropout rate in 1980-81, however, also indicated a gradual increase.

Assistant Superintendent John McKnight of Pitt County schools attributed the increase in county dropouts to handicapped students that stay in school longer and become high school dropouts rather than lower grades dropouts.

Pippins Sentenced

Carolyn Denise Pippins of Route 4, Greenville, who pled guilty to charges of accessory after the fact of murder and accessory to armed robbery in Pitt County Superior Court Monday, was sentenced to six years in prison this morning.

Ms. Pippins, 20, had been charged with two counts of first degree murder and one of armed robbery in connection with the February murder of the Rev. Leslie Thorbs of Grifton, and Anthony Ray Herring of Goldsboro. But under a plea bargaining agreement she pled guilty to the accessory charges.

Dwight Parker of Newark, N.J., was sentenced to two life terms plus 28 years in late-September, after being convicted of killing and robbing the two men.

During the Parker trial, Ms. Pippins was credited by officers with furnishing information that led to the recovery of Thorbs' and Herring's bodies from the Tar River, and with Parker's arrest in Newark.

Officers testified in the Parker trial that she allegedly helped Parker dispose of the bodies.

U.S. Admits Setbacks In Grenada Operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American-led occupation of Grenada began its second week today with officials hopeful that U.S. battlefield successes are not overshadowed by accidents and public relations setbacks that have haunted the operation since the beginning.

Grass roots support for President Reagan's policies on the island appeared to remain substantial but officials acknowledged Monday there had been disappointments:

— The Defense Department, after greeting initial reports with skepticism, acknowledged Monday that a U.S. bomber trying to knock out artillery fire on the first day of the invasion struck a civilian mental hospital, leaving a reported 14 dead. The attack occurred three days before defense officials boasted no civilians were killed in the invasion.

— Wounded Army troops brought to Walter Reed Medical Center said 19 soldiers were injured because an American plane called in for an air strike hit their building instead of an enemy target. The Washington Post in today's editions quoted unidentified Pentagon sources as saying that several Army Rangers were killed and several others were injured when two U.S. helicopters collided, and four Navy Seals in a commando unit drowned in a pre-invasion accident.

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

CONSIGNMENT SHOPS FEEDBACK

In response to the Thursday Hotline item about consignment shops for clothes, two have been called to our attention. One is Transition Wardrobes on Route 2, Winterville, near Sunshine Garden Center. It carries women's sizes 14 and up and is meant especially for women who are losing weight to be able to buy and sell clothes inexpensively. The phone number is 355-2508.

The other, to be opened Nov. 15 at 1726 W. Fifth St., will be called Twice Is Nice and will feature children's clothes — zero to 14, and furniture suitable for children. The phone number will be 752-1722. The owners are Karin Borstin, 355-6032, and Jody Chaffee, 355-6048.

Energy Drive Exceeds Goal

More than 1,000 single-family homeowners and multifamily home dwellers now live in E-300 energy-efficient homes recommended by Greenville Utilities Commission.

Greenville Utilities started the energy-efficient home award program five years ago. The goal at that time was to have 20 percent of new homes conform to GUC's E-300 energy standard. According to the commission, that milestone has been surpassed with E-300 signs marking the sites of 75 percent of the area's homes under construction.

"Lots of people have heard of the E-300 program, but some are not sure what it is," said Greenville builder Merle Bowser, president of Bowser Construction.

"We've been meeting E-300 standards ever since the inception of the program," Bowser said. "Builders know the value of it, and more people custom building are aware of the energy factor. They want to know how to make their homes energy efficient. GUC set the standard, and they set the program in motion."

The program awards points for energy-saving features in new homes. If the home accumulates 300 points, the builder earns the right to have an E-300 sign on the construction site and after several inspections at different stages of construction, the homebuyer receives a certificate.

The number 300 was chosen because the heat loss in qualifying homes is less than 300 BTU's per hour for every 1,000 square feet of living space for each degree difference between inside and outside temperatures.

The average score is 380; the highest, 835.

"I've used E-300 as a selling tool," Bill Clark, president of Bill Clark Construction, said. "Everyone is energy conscious today. They know E-300 homes are built to good energy standards."

Some of the energy-saving features recommended by the home award program include the following:

1 — That all exterior bottom wall plates and all wiring and plumbing penetrations be sealed.

2 — That provisions be made for outside combustion air source and/or other fireplace efficiency improvements recommended.

3 — Program directors recommend attic or ceiling insulation to value of R-30, including vaulted ceilings.

4 — Program directors recommend use of improved attic ventilation system, such as combination of soffit vents plus continuous ridge vent.

5 — Program directors recommend use of double glazing for all window and glass area — either storm over single-glazed prime windows, or thermal pane windows. (Limiting glass area to 12 percent of floor area also recommended.)

6 — Also recommended is use of exterior wall sheathing and wall cavity insulation to achieve and overall value of R-16.

7 — That homes have a storm door over an uninsulated door, or insulated exterior doors recommended.

8 — Using high-efficiency heat pump systems are recommended (if both heating and cooling desired.)

9 — Use of conservation-type water heater or conventional model with insulation wrap is recommended — particularly if the water heater must be located in an unconditioned area.

10 — Use of R-19 batts under exposed floors recommended. Slab floors insulated with R-8 perimeter insulation.

"All E-300 builders should be commended for helping to better our community," GUC Energy Services Officer Robbie Tugwell said. "This is a voluntary program. No federal or state agency has forced any of our builders to participate. I think this speaks highly of our area builders."

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Remember the other day when I wrote about my impatience to become a grandmother?

I didn't see why my children were punishing me by refusing to give birth and provide me with a few billfold-sized photos to pass around and a couple of cute stories. After all, it seemed such a little thing to ask for a mother who gave up being Joan Collins because she wanted to stay home and be a professional martyr.

Well, a grandmother named Janet in Riverside, Calif., has come to "save me in the nick of time. Get hold of yourself," she warned. "Time has erased the ravages of war from your mind and you are vulnerable to attack."

The woman is obviously hysterical.

"Yesterday," she continued, "I accompanied my 13-year-old granddaughter and her mother on a shopping trip for clothes. Try to remember how you offered lovely blouses, skirts and sweaters off the rack to your children which they sniffed and rejected. And remember the shock when you saw your kids on their knees reverently worshipping a Goodwill reject priced at $130."

It was only a phase.

"Do you want to go through that again with a granddaughter? Are you ready for the New Wave, Punk, New Romantic, Things Remembered, Flashdance tacky?" Everyone has to change, Janet.

She went on to write:

"And what about those horrible moments when the clerk gently lifted my charge card from my wallet as I frantically tried to revive my daughter from a coma? Her card had been snipped in half three stores back when it was discovered she was $2,000 over the limit."

Come to think of it, Janet, I do remember a maxi leather coat that died from terminal dust in the closet and had to be put to sleep. And there was that business with the $30 jeans with the knee ripped out that I paid $5 more for because they were guaranteed to shrink and fade. But we're talking babies here... babies who... as I remember...

Kept hours like hamsters, played the piano with sticky fingers, flushed shoes down the toilet, put meal worms in the refrigerator next to the lettuce, crayoned on the fireplace, knew only one word: "No!" made their own formula for their own bottle, sat down when they no longer felt like walking, bit the dog's nose, locked themselves behind doors for which there were no keys, dialed direct to Hawaii, left a rainbow over the sofa with their damp drawers and...

Thanks, Janet, I needed that!

Fluorescent Lighting

Lighting makes up about 2 percent of the home's total energy usage, or about 10 percent of the total electric bill. That's not much, but why waste it, ask housing and home furnishings extension specialists at North Carolina State University.

One of the easiest ways to save is to use fluorescent lighting. It is three to five times as energy efficient as incandescent lighting and the fluorescent tube lasts 10 to 20 times longer. Savings can average 40 to 45 percent.

For example, a 24-watt fluorescent tube gives off as much light as a 100-watt incandescent bulb, but costs only a fourth as much to operate. While fluorescent tubes may cost more to buy, the savings in energy and replacement more than make up for the difference in cost. Fluorescent lighting also generates less heat — a plus in warm weather.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
LIGHT SUPPER
Farina Squares & Salad

Crisp Red Apples & Coffee
FARINA SQUARES
Patterned after Italian Gnocchi.

- 2 1/4 cups water
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 3/4 cup farina
- 3 ounces grated (medium fine) sharp cheddar cheese (3/4 cup slightly packed)

In a medium saucepan over high heat bring the water and salt to a boil; stirring constantly pour in the farina. Bring to a boil again and then over gentler heat, stirring constantly, cook until very thick — a matter of minutes. Off heat, stir in 1/2 cup of the cheese so it is distributed evenly. Turn into a buttered 8 by 8 by 2-inch pan; cool; cover pan with saran; chill. Line a cookie sheet with foil and generously butter the foil. Cut the farina into 2-inch squares; with a spatula remove squares and arrange them, well apart, on the foil-lined pan. Sprinkle squares with the remaining cheese. Broil 6 to 8 inches from high heat until hot through and topping is melted — a matter of minutes, remove with a wide spatula and serve at once. Makes 16 squares.

FAMILY DINNER
Fish & Potatoes
Green Salad & Vinaigrette
Apple Cobbler & Beverage
VINAIGRETTE
French-style salad dressing.
1/4 cup red wine vinegar
2 teaspoons prepared Dijon mustard
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
3/4 cup olive oil

Into a jar with a screw-top cover turn the vinegar, mustard, salt, pepper and oil; cover tightly and shake thoroughly. Store in refrigerator. Just before using, shake until blended. Makes 1 cup.

Hunger Is A Problem In United States

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer
BRANCHLAND, W. Va.

(AP) — Like thousands of other poor kids across the country, Jerry and Betty Elkins' three children know all too well what it's like to sit down to meager meals.

"We usually have bread and gravy the last few days of the month," the 27-year-old Elkins says while waiting for a handful of federal surplus food at nearby Guyan Valley High School. "This cheese and butter will really come in handy at our house."

The Elkins glance at their kids — aged 5, 6 and 7 — as they talk about trying to stave off hunger in one of the most economically depressed areas of the nation.

"I just can't find work anywhere, not even odd jobs," he says. "We're living on welfare and just barely getting by. And things really get tough at the end of the month, when the food stamps are used up."

In August, President Reagan said he was perplexed by reports of widespread hunger in America. Reagan, who announced he was appointing a task force to study the problem, said he couldn't understand how there could be so many hungry people in such an affluent nation.

Mrs. Elkins, a thin, dark-haired woman, hadn't heard of the president's task force but says she knows well its area of inquiry.

"I couldn't tell you how many times we've made a meal on bread and water gravy," she says. "The kids don't complain, though, and I tell them, 'At least we're not starving.'"

Elkins and his family live in a rickety, rented frame house near this rural southern West Virginia community. The father says soup, beans, bread and gravy have become end-of-the-month staples since he lost his sawmill job nearly 30 months ago.

"Sometimes, though, I can get a little advance on my bill at the store," he says. "Then we buy some eggs or something."

Those months when Elkins can't get any credit, his wife tries to pawn her watch to the neighbors.

"They usually let me have $5, if they aren't running too short themselves," she says.

Nancy Amidei, director of the Food Research Action Center in Washington, D.C., has heard many such hard-luck tales. She says the country is teeming with hungry children.

"One-quarter of all the kids in the country are members of poverty-level families," she says. "And, while there's no nationwide, scientific survey, the poverty count, by definition, is a good indicator of the hunger count."

She says her nonprofit, advocacy office was beginning to receive widespread reports of underweight births among poor families in Cleveland, Ohio, Chicago and the rural South.

Paul Smith of the Children's Defense Fund, another advocacy group, agreed with Ms. Amidei that hunger has become endemic among poor children in the United States.

"We're not talking about acute, caloric starvation," he cautions. "This is not Bangladesh. What we're talking about is a regular and chronic lack of proper nutrition, a situation that often leads to stunted mental and physical development."

In McDowell County, located in the southern West

Virginia coal fields where more than 30 percent of the work force is unemployed, school officials say hunger is a way of life for many children.

Frances Whitten, who administers the county's school lunch and breakfast programs, says she did a survey several years ago and found that summer weight loss was not uncommon among the children who participate in the school feeding programs.

"We had one pupil who had lost 20 pounds over the summer," she says. "He attended a school that provided only free milk."

At McDowell's Panther Elementary, says Principal Jerry Horne, about 375 of the school's 425 kids participate in the free lunch and breakfast programs because their parents can't afford to feed them.

Ilene Welby heads the Mountaineer Food Bank, which stocks 22 emergency food pantries across West Virginia. She says Reagan administration cuts in the food stamp and school lunch programs have exacerbated the plight of the nation's hungry kids.

Ms. Amidei says 3 million fewer children are being fed in the school meal programs than in 1972. The Elkins' two school-age children do qualify, however, and their parents say this means they will be better fed this winter than they were during the summer.

"This will really help with the grocery bill, too," says Mrs. Elkins. "Now, maybe, we won't have to eat bread and gravy so often."

But the Elkins say they have yet to visit one of the food bank's emergency pantries. Asked why, they pointed to their lack of a telephone or car, and noted that there is virtually no public transportation available in the remote, rural area where they live.

However, while swimming in the nearby Guyandotte River this summer, he did find a way to earn a few extra dollars.

"I was standing on the bottom and felt a big lump of coal that had washed down the river," he recalls. "Right then I told my wife I thought I'd found a way to earn a little extra money."

For more than two weeks Elkins and his 19-year-old brother mucked along the bottom for lumps of coal.

When they found some they'd toss it up on the bank, bag it and carry it back home on their backs.

"We must have carried a couple of tons up the hill," Elkins says. "I sold it to a man down the road."

Elkins says he got $45 and a strained back for his labor. He also says he was getting more desperate trying to feed, clothe and house his family on a $252-a-month welfare check and food stamps.

"Winter's coming on and I don't know how we're going to get enough money to pay our utilities and still buy groceries," he says.

"I told my wife the other day that I've reached the point I'd take any kind of work, even shoveling out barns, if I could get it."

In 1979, according to information from the Pitt County Mental Health Center, approximately 1039 adolescents in Pitt County were classified as heavy drinkers.

Some States Don't Require Blood Test

DEAR ABBY: This letter is regarding "No Mrs. in Manhattan," who complained that her live-in lover, "Bobby," wouldn't marry her because he was terrified of needles, and he couldn't get married in New York without a blood test. To add to her problems, she was pregnant.

You suggested that Bobby see a "shrink" or consider hypnosis. You missed a painless solution, Abby. They could come to Nevada, obtain a marriage license without a blood test and get married the same day.

And by the way, divorce in Nevada is almost as quick and painless as marriage.

JACK IN NEVADA

DEAR JACK: Thanks for the good news from the most popular hitching and unhitching post in the United States. Read on for some sunny news from California:

DEAR ABBY: Please advise "No Mrs. in Manhattan" to take Bobby to California, because the law there states that when an unmarried man and an unmarried woman, not minors, have been living together as husband and wife, they may, without a license and without obtaining health certificates, be married by any person authorized to solemnize a marriage.

MRS. IN LOS ANGELES

DEAR MRS.: California may not be the only state in which this law prevails. And because state laws change from day to day, I repeat my advice: If you have a legal problem, hire a lawyer and pay him (or her) for what he knows. The person who tries to be his own lawyer has a fool for a client. Even lawyers hire lawyers to represent them.

DEAR ABBY: Tell "No Mrs. in Manhattan," whose boyfriend was afraid to get married because of the blood test, to come to Arkansas. As of July of this year, the state of Arkansas no longer requires blood tests for marriage license applications. All we require is that the couple apply together, provide proof of age and $20 in cash.

I realize Arkansas is a long way from Manhattan, but the trip probably wouldn't be as painful to Bobby as the needle.

PHYLLIS MALLARD
DEPUTY COUNTY CLERK
CRAWFORD COUNTY, ARK.

DEAR ABBY: I am the holder of a mortgage on property sold to a relative. Payments are due the first day of each month. This relative dutifully writes the checks and dates them on the first day of the month, but the checks are not mailed until later, and some have arrived as late as the 11th! This infuriates me.

Jean Eakes Gives Talk

The Eta Delta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi International Sorority met last week at the home of Carmen Bradley.

Jean Eakes, guest speaker for the occasion, spoke on the Hospice program. She discussed cancer patient care and funding for the Hospice program.

After the program, President Gloria Potter led the general meeting, and gave thanks to all who had participated in casino night, a recent fund raising event.

In 1981, there were 214 births to women 19 and under. 96 of these were to teens 17 and under.

Apart from the interest that might be earned on the payments, and the concern that the check may be lost in the mail, the late arrival necessitates multiple trips to the bank and other inconveniences.

The law provides a 30-day grace period before a late payment penalty can be invoked. Can you suggest a solution?

STEAMED

DEAR STEAMED: If the relative lives in your city, pick up the check on the first day of every month—or have someone pick it up for you. It may get your relative's back up, but it will keep your blood pressure down.

No Choice For Reagan

Irony of ironies. On the day all America, and the world, was abuzz over the U.S. invasion of the Marxist stronghold on tiny Grenada, the John F. Kennedy Library released heretofore secret White House tapes showing that a similar invasion — but of Cuba, not Grenada — had been considered seriously by then-President Kennedy and his advisers back in October 1962.

Kennedy, of course, kept the invasion possibility alive but opted to gamble on a blockade of Cuba while publicly debating the presence of Soviet missiles in the Caribbean with Nikita Khrushchev. It was a gamble that paid off as the Soviets, rather than risking war with a country that then was respected for its power and its determination, backed off.

Would such a gamble have worked over Grenada? Hardly. Nor was the situation as imminently clear in Grenada as it was in Cuba. But the threat of expanded Marxist activity in still another island-nation neighbor to the United States was present.

President Reagan publicly says he acted to assure the safety of Americans on Grenada and at the request of other island nations in the area to restore peace in the Caribbean. That probably is true, but the threat of Cuban-style communism gaining an even stronger entrenchment certainly could not be overlooked.

Reagan did not have Kennedy's choice. The Soviet Union, in the early 1960s, was still rebuilding and, although known to be powerful, lagged behind the United States in military strength. Today, the U.S.S.R. probably holds the balance of power and the United States, because of its timidity in the misguided name of humanity during the years following World War II, has seen its clout diminish.

Reagan did have a choice, however: act, or let the situation run its course. He acted, doing so with conviction of decision even in the face of opposition from England's Margaret Thatcher.

Florida's Sen. Lawton Chiles, a man known for his own devotion to convictions, scoffed at the invasion of tiny Grenada, questioning whether the United States was "looking for a war we can win." That is the point — we as a nation have been pushed, goaded, prodded and shoved while we stood by, committing troops to "police actions" with orders not to shoot or sending them to foreign lands as "peacekeepers" and tying their hands. Even former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger mused aloud in the wake of the recent bombing of the Marine building in Beirut, "If they were there only to defend themselves, they could do that better at Camp Lejeune."

Grenada by itself is and was insignificant. But to the Caribbean and to the United States, it is symbolic of the change that hopefully will lead to a revitalization of this country's sense of pride. If, as some critics contend, that's gunboat diplomacy, so be it. What would it have been if Kennedy had been forced to back up his threats in 1962?

—Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer—

Mixed Reaction

WASHINGTON — At the GOP's 1980 national convention in Detroit, about 500 sanguine young Republicans rallied in support of Ronald Reagan outside his hotel. From the decibel level of their roars, one could easily sense an unquestioning enthusiasm among Youth for Reagan.

Yet the din could not drown out at least one concern voiced by many of the young Reaganites: Would their man ship them off to war, and, if so, would the cause be justifiable?

Recollection that fear of dubious battle often knows no partisan lines prompted us to survey college newspaper editors for the campus reaction to last week's escalation of U.S. military involvement overseas. While sentiments were mixed, we found them hardly enthusiastic.

At Ohio State University in Columbus, Gretel Winkle of The Lantern (daily circ. 35,000) said that students generally and the newspaper's nine editors in particular had approved of last Tuesday's U.S.-sponsored invasion of Grenada, but not simply for the purpose of "saving" American lives. "We're convinced" that Grenada posed a military threat to the U.S., Winkle said on behalf of The Lantern's editorial board. Yet last week the same editors voted to call for the immediate withdrawal of U.S. troops from Lebanon.

Reaction at the University of Massachusetts took a more negative tack. "This campus as a whole would tend to be very against the invasion," said Joel Myerson of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian (circ. 17,000), which devoted three pages to the story. "There is some fear of the draft (coming back) ... and of some kind of war because of our involvement in different parts of the world." Myerson said that the invasion would "spark not only more general awareness but also action on the part of the whole student body."

Sentiment at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville was more representative. Roger Bryant of the UT Daily Beacon (circ. 15,000) conceded, "Most people don't know what to think" but that they "have some reservations." In an editorial published Oct. 26, the Beacon contended that "the explanation of our government should be approached with great skepticism" and that "the specter of imperialism hangs over us today."

Though Bryant said he hadn't sensed an increased fear of a draft, he added that there was evidence of gallows humor among students. "Some people," Bryant said, "have made joking references, things like, 'Now we have a choice (of trouble spots to see), what with the Middle East, Central America and now the Caribbean.'"

Yale University's Wendell Bell takes exception to the administration's version of events in Grenada. A sociologist who specializes in Caribbean affairs, Bell suggests that operatives of the Central Intelligence Agency could have encouraged subordinates to overthrow Grenada's late prime minister, Maurice Bishop, and to establish a far-left government. A brutal regime, Bell noted, would help to make U.S. intervention appear politically palatable.

In an interview last Wednesday, Bell described as "inconceivable" claims by members of the Organization of East Caribbean States that Grenada posed a threat to their security. Bell speculated that the Organization's weekend plea for help could have come at the suggestion of the U.S.

Bell cited two precedents to support his theory: CIA financial support for civil servants, police and labor unions involved in the overthrow of a leftist leader in Guyana; and the infiltration of student anti-war groups during the 1960s by FBI agents posing as radicals.

WASHINGTON — The 40 minutes Grenada's Prime Minister Maurice Bishop spent with national security adviser William P. Clark here last June probably cost him his life four months later, framing an overdue moment of truth for the U.S. in the Western Hemisphere.

Bishop's murder was dictated by the fear of fellow Grenadian Marxists, shared by Moscow and Havana, that he was deserting to the West. If the Reagan administration permitted his assassins to consolidate their new power, the message to the hemisphere would have run out loud and clear: Switching from the Kremlin to Uncle Sam was a fool's bargain.

That would have continued the Finlandization of the Caribbean, begun under Jimmy Carter. The small, defenseless island states would have been forced to accommodate Soviet-backed Cuba and Fidel Castro's well-armed Grenada client. President Reagan's decision to launch Tuesday's operation, therefore, came as reassurance for the hemisphere.

Actually, administration officials had hoped the reassurance would be less dramatic — by weaning Bishop from his communist moorings. The abandonment of the Carter administration's policy of seeking to isolate Bishop was climaxed by that 40-minute session with Judge Clark and Under Secretary of State Kenneth Dam.

It was surprisingly cordial. Clark asked from Bishop both words (he did soften his rhetoric) and deeds (ultimately, free elections). Bishop agreed to send the Reagan administration a status report on what amounted to the de-communization of Grenada. Clark left the meeting with the feeling that Bishop was no true Marxist-Leninist but a combination of opportunist and idealist.

In the months that followed, the U.S. discreetly pushed a badly needed world Bank loan for Grenada that would lessen dependence on Moscow and Havana. Although the human rights report never arrived, word was passed in September that Bishop was working on it. With good reason, the Reagan administration saw at least a possibility of quietly weeding out the latest communist threat in the Eastern Caribbean. So, apparently, did Bishop's communist patrons and subordinates.

Some Caribbean specialists believe the train of events that led from a political power play to murder were spontaneous, but U.S. officials doubt it. For one thing, there is resemblance to the bloody 1979 Afghanistan coup, stage-managed by the Soviets. For another, there was the arrival in St. George's harbor of a Cuban ship called the "Vietnam Heroica" coincidental with the anti-Bishop coup. It carried substantial Cuban troop reinforcements (one reason the U.S. military operation encountered more trouble than expected) whose obvious purpose was to overawe the pro-Bishop population.

Also on board were high-ranking Cuban officials similar to those who arrived in Angola just prior to Castro's massive troop buildup there. "I honestly believe that we got there just in time," said one senior administration official.

The window for effective action was small, permitting no opportunity for elaborate negotiations. Once the new government was installed with a patina of legitimacy, the military operation would be foreclosed, just as it was during the Bishop regime.

That the vast majority of Caribbean nations wanted the American move is undeniable. Less apparent is the fact that it was welcomed by the Spanish-speaking nations of Central and South America (with the predictable exception of Mexico). Some are playing to the gallery in denouncing Yankee intervention, but diplomats at the United Nations and Organization of American States privately express their gratitude.

Religious Interest Growing

WASHINGTON — Americans are getting more religious year by year. Paradoxically, they are getting less churchy. A midsummer poll conducted by the Gallup organization finds a dramatic increase in the number of adult Americans who are attempting in some way to "find God," but there's no increase among those who look for him in church on Sunday.

In 1965, a Gallup Poll found that 73 percent of Americans were members of an organized church. That figure now has dropped to 67 percent. In the country as a whole, among those expressing a religious preference, about 60 percent are Protestant, 28 percent Catholic, 2 percent Jewish and 10 percent something else. More than half of those who identify themselves as Catholics weren't at mass last Sunday. Only 43.6 percent of the professed Protestants were at church as well.

If religious involvement were defined solely in terms of church membership or church attendance, the story over the past two decades would be a story of gradually diminishing commitment. But this past July, Gallup conducted a poll for the Christian Broadcasting Network. The data were released a few weeks ago by Pat Robertson, one of the most successful of television's religious leaders.

George Gallup Jr. found the figures both "amazing and surprising." Telephone interviews with 1,029 persons, randomly selected as a national sample, turned up clear evidence of a revival of interest in religious and spiritual matters. The trend was most pronounced among Protestants; almost two-thirds of them (64.5 percent) said they are more interested in religion now than they were five years ago. Well over half of all those polled said they are more likely to believe that religion can answer the problems of the world. The shift away from reliance upon science is dramatic.

In an effort to define "religious interest" more precisely, Gallup's pollsters inquired about specific activities. An astonishing 26 percent of adult Americans — about 43 million persons — are actively participating in Bible study groups. Five years ago, when the same question was asked, only 19 percent were involved in Bible study.

Other forms of religious activity also have increased since 1978. The poll indicated that 34 million adults are in religious education classes, 17 million are in prayer and meditation groups, and 23 million are witnessing. Gallup found a sharp increase in prophecy, speaking in tongues and the charismatic movement.

One of the most remarkable findings, Gallup said, is that college students are caught up in the religious revival. The proportion of college students who say that religion is "important" has grown from 39 percent to 50 percent over the past five years. Roughly one out of three persons in the 18-34 age bracket regularly attends a church or synagogue.

What accounts for these trends? The poll could find no very explicit explanations for the increase in religious interest; some of the respondents cited "personal experience" or "personal problems." Only 4.6 percent cited such reasons as "world situation and mankind," by which presumably was meant a fear of atomic war. One explanation for the decline in church membership may lie in television ministries such as Robertson's. These have attracted large followings in recent years.

Some of the poll's data could have political meaning. The question was asked, "Do you form your political opinions based on religious beliefs to a greater or lesser extent than five years ago?" Thirty-five percent of the respondents answered "greater," just over 27 percent said "less." Gallup said in an interview that among both liberals and conservatives, religious beliefs are at least as important as such factors as age, sex and education in determining how people think "and in some cases how they vote."

Another question asked, "Is your material well-being better (or worse) than it was five years ago?" Fifty-one percent said it was better; only 15.5 percent said worse. On such images and perceptions do elections turn. President Reagan, viewing these data, should be pleased.

Senate Decorum Hard To Maintain

that our colleagues either talk louder or softer."

Even the crisis in Grenada provoked a moment of levity in the House chamber as Rep. James Shannon, D-Mass., offered this update of the Gershwin lyrics: "You like po-ta-to, I like po-ta-to. You say Gre-na-da, I say Gre-na-da; Po-ta-to, po-ta-to, Gre-na-da, Gre-na-da. Let's call the whole thing off," Shannon told the House.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., got the Senate on record in favor of an anti-busing amendment the other day, then withdrew the measure, citing a political reality — that such a move would be doomed in the Democratic-run House of Representatives.

"The last time this amendment passed, it was sent over to the House and Speaker (Thomas P.) O'Neill and (Judiciary Committee) Chairman (Peter) Rodino arranged for it to be sat upon."

"If you will look at the posters of these two men, you will realize that when they sit on something, that is a lot of coverage," Helms quipped.

Committee chairmen aren't supposed to tell their members how to vote, but the situation in the House Foreign Affairs Committee the other day confused both chairman Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., and member George Crockett, D-Mich.

"Mr. Chairman, what are we voting on?" asked Crockett. Zablocki said one thing, then looked puzzled and said another. At that point, Zablocki gave up trying to characterize the vote and told Crockett: "Your vote is aye."

—Elisha Douglass—

Strength For Today

We would naturally believe that the way to get religious certainty would be to have religious matters made reasonable to us. On the whole, the better we understand something, the more we believe it.

But people very often fail to understand that we arrive at spiritual certainty and scientific certainty by entirely different routes. The scientist deals with observable phenomena or with concepts derived from the operation of natural law. And his conclusions become true only when they can be proved.

But the methods a scientist uses to prove scientific truth will not work in spiritual matters.

Spiritual truths are validated in a different fashion. We take them into our lives and let the experience from them move through our thoughts and acts. We make them a part of our nature by accepting them, and then the consciousness of whether they are true or false will grow.

Family Earnings Climb Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says median weekly earnings of American families rose to $481 in the third quarter, a $26 improvement over the same three-month period in 1982, which helped to keep household budget-managers well ahead of inflation.

The weekly earnings figure was 5.7 percent above that of last year.

For individuals with full-time or salaried jobs, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said median weekly earnings, which includes overtime, tips and commissions added to paychecks before deductions, rose to $320, up from $307 over the same period last year, an increase of 4.2 percent.

During the same 12-month time span, consumer prices were rising at an annual rate of only 2.5 percent.

Full-time workers in the managerial and professional fields had the highest earnings, especially those in executive, administrative and managerial jobs where average weekly earnings in the third quarter were $476. At the other end of the scale, workers in farming, forestry, fishing and household domestics earned the least, ranging between $194 to $113 a week.

In another part of the report, the labor statistics bureau noted that the number of families with one or more unemployed members shrank by 360,000 from the third quarter of 1982 through Sept. 30.

Median earnings continued to be higher for whites at $498 a week, than for blacks at $351, and Hispanics at $377, the report said.

While the some 44 million full-time and salaried male workers averaged $388 a week in the third quarter, the figure for the some 29.5 million women in the same category was only $251.

The agency, basing its findings on the Census Bureau's Current Population Survey of some 60,000 U.S. households, provided further evidence of the disparity between incomes earned by men and women when they were compared solely on the basis who worked full time, regardless of the nature of work.

Several women's organizations and labor unions, led by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, have been pressing the issue of "comparable worth" — contending that women doing work comparable to that of men are paid less.

The National Research Council concluded in a study last year that for every dollar paid to men, women make only 59 cents.

The average weekly earnings of men rose from $371 to $388, while the figure for women increased from $240 to $251.

In households where both the husband and wife were working in the third quarter, the man averaged $426 a week and the woman $262, according to the labor statistics bureau report.

Judge Overturns Sex Bias Verdict

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former television anchorwoman Christine Craft says she's "appalled" and will fight a judge's ruling to throw out a $500,000 verdict in her sex discrimination case after citing "her apparent indifference to matters of appearance."

U.S. District Judge Joseph E. Stevens Jr. on Monday ordered a new trial, saying the jury verdict on Ms. Craft's allegations of fraud against Metromedia Inc. was excessive and resulted from "passion, prejudice, confusion or mistake."

He also ruled that her demotion by KMBC-TV was not the result of sex discrimination and criticized excessive publicity in the case.

"This totally throws out the jury's role and function," said Dennis Egan, an attorney for Ms. Craft.

Kenneth W. Green, foreman of the four-woman, two-man jury, said Monday he did not believe the jury was biased by the publicity.

"It's like a boxing match," Ms. Craft said today on ABC-TV's "Nightline" program. "But there are several rounds to go."

Earlier, in Milwaukee on a speaking tour, Ms. Craft said, "I am appalled. I am not surprised, however. I think as a reporter, I was prepared for the worst. I wasn't ready to pop any champagne corks yet."

Ms. Craft's lawyers said they were investigating whether the judge's decision could be appealed immediately to delay or prevent the start of the new trial, which Stevens set for Jan. 4 in Joplin, about 120 miles south of Kansas City.

Egan said he would look for grounds to appeal Stevens' decision.

Quake's Toll Goes Past 1,200 In Turkey

ERZURUM, Turkey (AP) — Battling frigid weather, rescue teams erected tents today and fed tens of thousands of people left homeless by the massive earthquake that killed at least 1,233 people in eastern Turkey.

President Kenan Evren, after inspecting the disaster area, called for generous donations of money and supplies to help the survivors, many of whom were huddled in donated tents and makeshift shelters to ward off the winter chill and snow.

"The destruction brought upon the region by the quake is greater than we thought at the beginning," Evren said. "We fear that loss of life and property will rise."

The powerful jolts that rolled through the eastern provinces of Erzurum and Kars Sunday also left at least 534 others seriously injured and destroyed 15,000 houses, leaving an estimated 75,000 people homeless.

Rescue workers continued to clear the rubble and villagers buried the dead.

Village Affairs Minister Munir Guney, here to supervise relief work, said some of the homeless would be temporarily settled in public buildings. He promised to erect prefabricated houses quickly.

The International Red Cross has dispatched 13 tons of medical supplies, 20,175 blankets and 5,473 tents to Erzurum, officials said. They said a 37-car train filled with relief supplies was leaving Ankara for the disaster area.

Saudi Arabia has contributed $10 million, and contributions from institutions and individuals in Turkey were expected to be above $1 million in the next few days, the officials said.

Another problem to be tackled by relief officials was preservation of stray livestock whose owners were killed by the quake.

Cattle and sheep-raising is the main source of income in the region.

Lt. Gen. Irfan Yay, commander of Turkey's 9th Army Corps in the area and in charge of rescue operations led by military units, warned the people not to sell their livestock at deflated prices to "opportunists sure to flock to the area."

He said livestock would be bought by the state, either to be slaughtered for meat or to be sent to state farms.

The quake was the worst to hit Turkey since 1976 when a major quake in the same region killed 3,837 people. Turkey's coastal areas and the entire eastern region sit atop an earthquake-prone belt known as the Anatolian fault.

Earthquakes have claimed 70,000 lives in Turkey in this century.

U.S. Commanders Say Safety Can't Be Certain In Beirut

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two top commanders of U.S. forces in Lebanon say as long as Marines hold their peacekeeping position in Beirut, their safety from terrorist attack cannot be guaranteed.

Gen. Paul X. Kelley, commandant of the Marine Corps, and Army Gen. Bernard Rogers, commander of U.S. forces in Europe, testified Monday before the Senate Armed Services Committee on security at the Marine headquarters in Beirut following the Oct. 23 terrorist bombing that claimed at least 230 lives.

"No way, we cannot guarantee that there will be no further attacks against our troops," Rogers said. "We can't make that guarantee as long as our forces are in this situation. You can't prevent it, and I don't like it."

Kelley was returning to Capitol Hill today to explain to the House Armed Services Committee steps taken to protect the troops in the wake of the suicide attack that destroyed the Marine headquarters at Beirut airport.

On Wednesday, the House is scheduled to vote on an attempt by Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., to cut off funds for maintaining the Marines after Nov. 30 as part of the international peacekeeping force that has been based in the war torn nation for 13 months.

Numerous members of Congress have expressed outrage about the adequacy of the protection provided the Marines, and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., predicted the vote would be "very close." He said members of a congressional delegation who visited the Marine contingent over the weekend would carry "a significant amount of clout" in the matter with their colleagues.

In his first public testimony about the attack following his visit to the airport headquarters last week, Kelley told the senators Monday that security is being beefed up. Besides access being limited to a one-lane road, additional guard posts are being added, patrols are being stepped up and machine gun emplacements are guarding the approaches to the U.S. positions, Kelley said.

Kelley pointed out that the Marines' mission was a "diplomatic and political mission, and not a military one," making it difficult for them to build a fortress-like defense.

"Our basic mission is presence," Kelley said. "The Marines had to be seen by the Lebanese people."

He attempted to convince the senators that prior to the attack, "every reasonable and prudent precaution" had been taken to ensure the troops' safety, but that an attack of such magnitude had not, and could not have been, foreseen.

"It was a Kamikaze attack," Kelley told the Senate Armed Services Committee. "We didn't have a defense against it in World War II and we didn't have a defense against it in 1983."

The headquarters was blown up when a man, bent on suicide, rammed a 5-ton Mercedes truck carrying 5,000 pounds of explosives into the building where most of the troops were billeted, Kelley told the senators.

He called the attack an "unprecedented" terrorist maneuver, and described it as much larger than the April car bomb that blew up the U.S. Embassy.

"We did not have a shred of intelligence that could even suggest that we should anticipate an attack of this size," Kelley said.

The head of the Marine Corps said that the truck took six seconds to speed at an estimated 60 m.p.h. through the compound that housed the Marines, and that even machine gun fire from posts guarding the area could not have stopped a truck of such size.

He argued that the measures taken to protect the Marines — such as barbed wire and sandbag defenses — were adequate given the threat that they faced. It had been determined by the local commander that the troops were most threatened by the shelling and small arms fire.

Later, to reporters, Kelley said, "obviously, security was not sufficient for what happened."

Residents To Discuss Alzheimer's Disease

Two local residents will talk about their personal experiences in dealing with Alzheimer's Disease during a meeting Wednesday sponsored by the Mental Health Association in Pitt County and the Pitt County Council on Aging.

Richard Darty, a retired person living in Greenville, and Walter Shepherd, assistant to the dean of the ECU School of Medicine, will talk about stresses each experienced during the illnesses of their family members. Darty's first wife had Alzheimer's disease, as does Shepherd's father-in-law.

The luncheon meeting will be held in the County Commissioners Auditorium, with lunch beginning at 11:30 a.m. and the session lasting until 1 p.m.

For further information contact Brenda Gray, Mental Health Association executive director, 752-7448, or Jeff McAllister, Council on Aging director, 752-1717.

Missile Deployment Is Keeping To Schedule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is confident that demonstrators and a new arms control proposal by Soviet President Yuri Andropov will not delay the deployment of American nuclear missiles in Britain, West Germany and Italy next month.

But while all three countries will have "the necessary pieces" in December, the missiles in Italy probably will not be ready for firing until next March or April, officials indicated Monday.

"By the end of the year Germany and Britain will be ready, and the Italians will be well along the way," said a Pentagon official.

Despite the pressures that protesters are bringing on all three governments, "there is no change in the schedule, there is no delay," the official said.

Soviet strategy is geared to holding up the installation of the first round of U.S. ground-launched cruise and ballistic Pershing 2 rockets. Any delay could be interpreted as a slip in NATO's resolve to follow through on its 1979 deployment decision.

According to some published accounts, the missiles in all three countries may not be operational until next year. But Pentagon and State Department officials, interviewed on the understanding their names would be withheld, disagreed.

"Don't be surprised if the pieces are connected to the buttons in December," said one official. But when he was asked if he included Italy in this estimate, he replied, "no comment."

The first round involves 16 Tomahawk cruise missiles each for Britain and Italy and 9 Pershing 2 missiles for West Germany.

Eventually, Britain is to have 160 of the jet-propelled cruises, Italy 112, West Germany 96 as well as 108 of the Pershing 2s, and the Netherlands and Belgium 48 cruise missiles each.

"Of course there can always be a slip between cup and lip, but everything is on track," a State Department official said.

In the meantime, the administration intends to press the Soviets in Geneva for an agreement to limit missiles on both sides. While the United States has ruled out a delay in deployment, it has said any missiles that are installed can be dismantled later.

At today's session in the Swiss city the U.S. negotiators are expected to receive a detailed explanation of the proposals suggested by Andropov in a Pravda interview last Wednesday. A copy of his remarks was turned over to the American delegation last Thursday without elaboration.

Andropov offered to a total of 140 Soviet missiles west of the Urals, limitations on deployment in the Far East and flexibility on a ceiling on nuclear-armed bombers. But the Soviets have not dropped their demand to match French and British missiles as well as the new American weapons.

President Reagan on Saturday invited the Soviets to present the proposals in Geneva.

The Salvation Army building is located on Farmville Highway a short distance past the Memorial Drive-Farmville highway intersection.

Wang Delivers Paper

Dr. Veronica Wang, a professor of English and Chinese at East Carolina University, delivered a paper at the annual meeting of the South Atlantic Modern Language Association in Atlanta last week. Her paper was on the award-winning work, "The Woman Warrior," by contemporary Chinese-American novelist Maxine Hong Kingston.

Dr. Wang's paper, "Reality and Fantasy: The Chinese-American Woman's Quest for Identity," focused on the dilemma of the Chinese-American woman in a cross-cultural environment.

Dr. Wang was selected secretary of the 1984 SAMLA session of the Society for the Study of the Multi-Ethnic Literature of the U.S. She will succeed as chair of the 1985 MELUS session.

Two Pedestrians Injured

Two pedestrians were injured and an estimated $3,600 damage caused in three traffic collisions investigated Monday by Greenville police.

Officers said Carolyn Scheeren of 272 Jones Dorm and Mary Mulholland of 282 Jones Dorm were injured when struck by a truck driven by Claude Blaine Hampton III of Route 1, Stokes, about 9:05 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Reade streets.

Investigators, who said the two 18-year-old women ran into the path of the truck, set damage to the vehicle at $200.

Cars driven by Arthur Randol Scott of 616 Hudson St. and Jame Copeland Perry of Windsor collided about 1 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Stantonsburg Road, causing $600 damage to the Scott car and $1,500 damage to the Perry vehicle.

An 11:29 a.m. collision at the intersection of Douglas and McKinley Avenues involved cars driven by William Lawrence Smith of 53 Cedar Lane and Dallas Mayo Jr. of 1118 Colonial Ave. Damage was set by police at $300 to the Smith car and $1,000 to the Mayo car.

Drug Education Program Set

Drug educator Sue Lyman will conduct a community meeting for citizens interested in teen-age drug and alcohol abuse Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Rose High School library.

One of approximately 11,000 similar meetings being held across the country, the forum is being held in conjunction with "The Chemical People," a television program addressing the drug problem that will be broadcast nationally at 8 p.m. Wednesday on public television stations. The program is a project of The National Center for Youth, their Families and Society.

Open discussion will follow the broadcast with a panel composed of a Rose High senior student, a Greenville police officer, and representatives from ECU's Alcohol Studies program and the Pitt County Health Department.

"The Chemical People" will continue Nov. 9 at 8 p.m. on Channel 25. Another meeting will be held if there is sufficient interest.

Special Services Scheduled

First Timothy Free Will Baptist Church is holding special worship services this week. The schedule is as follows.

Tuesday — 7:30 p.m., Elder Horace Joyner and Mt. Shiloh will be in charge of the service; Wednesday — 7:30 p.m., Elder J.L. Swinson and Mills Chapel will be in charge of the service; Thursday — 7:30 p.m., Elder R. Sanders and Sanders Chapel will render the service, and Friday — 7:30 p.m. Eldress Ida Gorham and Rock Spring Traveling Choir will be in charge.

Prayer services will begin each night at 7 p.m.

Student Inducted By Fraternity

Susan Spain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Spain of Greenville, was inducted into the Epsilon Eta Chapter of Beta Alpha Psi, the national honorary Accounting Fraternity during the fall induction ceremony last week at the Carolina Inn in Chapel Hill.

Ms. Spain will graduate from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in December. Upon graduation she will join the international accounting firm of Arthur Anderson and Co. located in Charlotte.

Building Fund Service Planned

Why Would A Bank Put So Much Value On Something Money Can't Buy?

No one is surprised these days when a bank touts the quality of its services or announces with pride the addition of another zero in its assets column.

And certainly, these things are important. It's just that, at BB&T, we view them from a somewhat different perspective. Because, what we value above all else is something quite different. We place a premium on attitude.

Attitude shows up on the balance sheet only indirectly. But we venture to say that you'll notice the difference it makes when you enter any one of our branches.

You'll find, for example, that instead of merely providing a service, we're interested in the full range of your long-term financial plans and needs.

We believe that our commitment to long-term thinking gives us superior insight. And that this insight gives us the ability to understand the need and value of integrated financial solutions for our customers.

Responsiveness is another BB&T attribute. We're committed to responding to any request for our services in the absolute minimum amount of time.

Ultimately, you'll also discover that BB&T delivers the highest quality financial services across the board.

Quality. Commitment. Performance. For the things that mean more than just money, come to the place that's more than a bank.

BB&T
It's More Than A Bank.
It's An Attitude.

'This Girl For Hire' Is Low On Wit, Moves Forward Slowly

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Jose Ferrer, Hermoine Baddeley, Howard Duff and Celeste Holm get together tonight on CBS, seemingly to prove that a superior cast doesn't have to make a good movie.

"This Girl for Hire" is supposed to be a spoof on the '40s-style private-eye flick. Bess Armstrong, who cracks wise as Brady, a snooper whose client is murdered in the first act, does what she can to elevate style: trenchcoat and high-fashion snap-brim, lots of leg and an acid tongue.

But the story advances rather unsteadily, and aside from an occasional line or two, the script is low on original wit. There is a twist at the end that will delight some in the audience, but may distress true fans of the genre.

Ferrer plays Harrison Wooly, a mystery writer who hires Brady to make sure his newest manuscript reaches the Japanese filmmaker who has just paid $2 million for the story. He's shoved down an open elevator shaft before she can make the pass.

All this happens during a convention of the Mystery Writers of America, and guess who's got a motive?

How about Edwina Gaylord (Miss Baddeley), who used to sell more books than Wooly? Or Mitch Dillon (Scott Brady), a Mickey Spillane look-alike who says, "Someday, someone's going to shut his trap ... permanently?" Or Manfred Hayes (McDowell), who often writes about death in elevators, or Jonathan Eastman (Percy Rodrigues), who is being sued by Wooly for plagiarism?

Or Evan Picard (Beverly Garland), who protests: She was in love with the dead man.

"Loving a man," Miss Gaylord rasps (Or is she Agatha Christie?) "never stopped a woman from murdering him."

Wait. Wooly's agent, Abner Litto (Ray Walston), has worked out a movie deal of his own. "Warner Bros. has Redford, and it's a 'go' project," he whines. "I need that manuscript."

And Garth (George Reynolds), the writer's valet, acts like he's got something to hide. In one scene, he knocks a policeman from his horse and gallops off down Sunset Boulevard. Or is it Wilshire?

Brady's mother, an ex-film star named Zandra Stoneham (Miss Holm), is more convinced than ever that her daughter is in the wrong line. "It was the pre-natal influence of having carried you while I was making 'Death is My Destiny,'" she anguishes.

Besides, murder is not what Brady had in mind when she took the case, and when she's threatened herself, she begins to look for a way out.

"Did Marlowe, or Spade, or any of those guys ... did they ever quit a case?" she asks Wolfe Macready (Duff), a has-been character actor and Zandra's live-in lover.

"I don't know," he says. "I do know all that blood that Bogart bled was Max Factor No. 10."

"Detectives don't ever quit their clients," she says at last, "especially dead ones."

Romance? Brady, blonde and wide-eyed, manages to string along both the professional athlete who was her previous client ("a little touch football sounded like fun ... and it was") and the cop on the murder case (Cliff de Young). "Sorry, I was expecting a man," Lt.

Hanson says when's he's introduced. "Well, consider this a disguise."

True, it's not clear until the very end who killed Wooly. But there's not much suspense in reaching that point, either. It's the talented cast that keeps "This Girl to Hire" afloat for two hours — sometimes barely.

AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Do viewers want to watch nudity on free television? Will they accept unbalanced programs, produced by the far right or the radical left, in the interest of the free flow of information? Are they ready for something really new from the medium?

These are some of the questions raised by "No Sacred Cows," a new public television series containing nude scenes and intentionally one-sided political and social viewpoints.

Some scheduled programs include a film about teen-age sexuality and one on animal cruelty. In addition, programs will be devoted to the views of Phyllis Schlafly, who helped defeat the Equal Rights Amendment, and a discussion with a group claiming it can cure homosexuality.

The 13-part "No Sacred Cows," scheduled to premiere Feb. 5, will be produced by Michael Mears, who oversaw a similarly provocative project when he was program manager of WGBH, the public television station in Lewiston, Maine.

"If liberty means anything at all," said Mears, quoting from author George Orwell, "it is the right to tell other people what they don't want to hear." He said that's one element of "No Sacred Cows."

"But mostly, each week, viewers will be presented with programs that go against the grain of accepted broadcasting," Mears said Monday in an interview. "It's frightening to put out this information, but it's more frightening to hold it back."

The Sunday night series is financially backed by the Public Broadcasting Service and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Barry Chase, public television's director of news and public affairs, said the series is designed to "ask some questions that haven't been asked before about what audiences do and do not want to see on television, what the rules ought to be and who should make those rules."

Mears said another novelty of the series is that viewers "can talk back to their sets." They can immediately register their views on issues raised by each show by phoning 900-numbers — one saying yea, the other saying nay. In some cases, the questions will be framed by the advocates who produce the programs.

'Quiet Zone' For Concerts

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A lot of cities have hospital zones, school zones or even animal-crossing zones. But a concert zone?

Vancouver has broken new ground for municipal zones with two newly installed signs along busy Evergreen Boulevard saying: "Quiet Zone, Concert in Session."

Vancouver City Manager Paul Grattet, a concert buff, had the yellow and black signs put in after more than a few solos at the Columbia

Arts Center were punctured by the bawl of a trailer truck's horn or the grinding of gears.

Dean Kelley, arts center executive director, said the signs served their purpose for the first time at a recent opening of the Music Art Series in which a pianist was playing.

Did they make a difference?

"No, not particularly," says Kelley.

But then, he added, that the concert was on a Friday night when "there is not a particularly large truck problem" anyway.

Over time, Kelley figures, maybe the signs will do some good.

When concerts aren't in session, the signs are folded up so their message can't be seen.

MOON-QUAKES

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scientists at UCLA believe that a correlation exists between the behavior of the moon and earthquakes along the San Andreas fault in California, long noted for earthquake activity.

Although the gravitational pull of the moon does not actually cause the earthquakes, they say, it may set off the release of accumulated stress along the fault and trigger the quakes.

Actors Hurt In Coach Mishap

The 61-year-old Scofield, winner of an Oscar for best actor in 1966 for his role in "A Man for All Seasons," was hurt Monday during the filming of "The Shooting

MEDIA AWARDS ... were given by the Mental Health Association in North Carolina to three Pitt County entities — the Daily Reflector newspaper, Greenville Cable TV and the Broadcasting II class of Ayden-Grifton High School. Pictured left to right are Carol Tyer who accepted the Daily Reflector award for best coverage of mental health issues in the state last year; John Pait and Ray Bell of Greenville Cable TV, recognized for most extensive and well-done broadcasting on mental health issues in the state; and Beverly Overstreet, a class member, and James W. Churchill, teacher of the Ayden-Grifton Broadcasting II class which produced 30-minute programs shown twice weekly by Greenville CATV on the work of various Pitt County agencies and organizations including the Mental Health Center and Mental Health Association. Strangler Conviction Returned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury summoned almost two years ago returned its first verdict in the "Hillside Strangler" cases — guilty of one murder — and now must decide whether a 50-year-old car upholsterer also killed nine other people and deserves to die.

Angelo Buono Jr. remained expressionless as the verdict was read Monday to a hushed, packed courtroom just 16 days before the trial's two-year anniversary on Nov. 16.

The trial, which included testimony from 392 witnesses and 1,807 exhibits and whose transcript ran almost 56,000 pages, is the longest criminal trial in the history of California and possibly the United States.

Buono was convicted of killing Lauren Rae Wagner, 18, a business college student from Los Angeles who was kidnapped near her parents' home on Nov. 28, 1977, burned with an electrical cord and then strangled. Her body was found the next day along Cliff Drive in the Glassell Park section of Los Angeles.

"For Mr. Buono, it's obviously got to be a setback," said one of his two attorneys, Katherine Mader. "Anytime someone has been convicted of something to send him to prison for the rest of his life, it's got to be a setback."

Buono was "disappointed," said his other attorney, Gerald Chaleff, who added that he intends to appeal any conviction.

In most of the Hillside Strangler cases, the victims, ranging in age from 12 to 28, were raped or otherwise sexually assaulted, strangled and their nude bodies dumped along Los Angeles-area hillsides.

The victims included prostitutes solicited by telephone, an aspiring actress, students and others picked up hitchhiking or by men posing as police officers.

PITT A WINNER ... The Mental Health Association in Pitt County was recognized for three separate statewide honors at the Mental Health Association in North Carolina awards luncheon held recently. Zula Rouse, Pitt County Operation Santa Claus chairman, accepted an award for the association's most-effective Operation Santa Claus campaign in the state. Lauretta Lewis, association president, accepted the Silver Bell Award for the Pitt unit's fulfilling its goals during the past year. Brenda Gray, right, was named the most outstanding county Mental Health Association executive director for the year. (Photo By Barry Gaskins)

Japan Will Limit Exports

TOKYO (AP) — Japan agreed today to limit auto exports to the United States for a fourth year after winning concessions opposed by the United Auto Workers union.

Japan's top trade official described the measure as a "soft landing" to prevent further disruption in the U.S. auto market, and said he had been promised by a U.S. official that restrictions would be for only one year.

The 1.2-million member UAW has demanded a two-year extension of restraints that expire March 31, while Japanese automakers, citing the strong recovery of the U.S. auto industry, have said the restraints should be for only nine months.

UAW President Owen Bieber called Monday for a two-year renewal, saying any shorter extension of the existing agreement "that expires shortly after the presidential election will smack of politics."

Social Security Tax Increase To Hit Self-Employed Hardest

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 28 percent increase in payroll taxes for self-employed people earning at least $37,800 in 1984 is due largely to measures adopted by Congress to rescue Social Security.

For the nation's 8.8 million self-employed workers, the payroll tax will climb from 9.35 percent to 11.3 percent in 1984. The payroll tax for self-employed workers earning at least $37,800 will rise to nearly $4,300.

The precise amount of the maximum tax became known Monday when Social Security announced the new, higher ceiling on wages subject to its levy. Congress adopted the changes as part of the bill passed in April to save the financially troubled Social Security system.

Under an automatic adjustment formula that is tied to the increase in average workers' wages, the amount of income subject to Social Security tax will jump from $35,700 to $37,800 on January 1.

For other workers earning that much or more, the maximum tax will increase by $140.70 next year, to $2,532.60.

Eight million people and their employers will pay an extra $2 billion in Social Security taxes because of the higher income ceiling, spokesman James Brown said.

For an employee earning $35,700 or less in 1984, the Social Security tax will not change. Workers will still pay at a rate of 6.7 percent. But the Treasury will kick in an additional 0.3 percentage points of revenue on their behalf, while their employers will pay a full 7 percent payroll tax.

The maximum tax paid by employers on a worker's earnings will rise in 1984 to $2,646, an increase of $254.10. The maximum tax for the self-employed will be $4,271.40, an increase of $933.45 for those making $37,800 or more.

Congress raised the payroll tax on the self-employed by 21 percent. For those at the top, the increase in the levy combined with the higher ceiling will mean a 28 percent payroll tax increase.

Congress' rationale was that the self-employed should have to pay just as much as employers and employees do together for Social Security: 14 percent in 1984. But the lawmakers cushioned the increase with a 2.7 percentage point tax credit that will keep the self-employed's net tax at 11.3 percent in 1984.

The higher tax rates will bring $13.1 billion into Social Security's coffers, in addition to the $2 billion produced by raising the ceiling.

Social Security also announced those under 65 will be able to earn $5,160 in 1984 without losing any benefits, up from $4,920 this year. On amounts earned above that, a person loses $1 for every $2 earned.

Federal Hospice Program Begins

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is launching its new hospice program, offering as many as 31,000 dying Americans an alternative to traditional hospital care.

But none of the estimated 1,200 hospice organizations has yet been declared eligible for federal Medicare payments to care for terminally ill patients during their last six months of life. And the regulations which will guide the program haven't been finalized.

Federal officials who will operate the new program starting today and the interest group which promoted the idea blame the delays on bureaucratic snarls and the efforts of hospice organizations to conform to strict draft federal standards.

The Health Care Financing Administration, the federal agency which administers Medicare, said it is near approving three hospices for participation in the program. The spokesmen would not reveal their names and locations. Some 38 others have been surveyed and the results must be processed before they can be approved.

Toastmasters Set Meeting

The Greenville Toastmaster Club No. 2595 will meet Wednesday at Archie's Steak House, with dinner at 6 p.m. and a business meeting at 7 p.m.

The educational portion of the meeting will feature an evaluation contest.

For more information about the Toastmasters communication and leadership program, call 756-8171.

Break-In Reported

Pitt County deputies are investigating a Saturday break-in at the Bruce E. Thigpen Furniture Co. on Stantonsburg Road that resulted in the theft of over $2,000 in property, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

He said three new and three used television sets were taken in the incident, as well as three stereo turntables and five kerosene heaters. Value of the property was set at $2,074, said Tyson.

Entrance was apparently gained after a window on the front of the building was broken, he said.

Extradited

Johnny Ruel Taylor Jr., 18, of Fountain waived extradition from Mississippi and has been brought back to Pitt County to face a charge of breaking into a rural Pitt residence, Sheriff Ralph Tyson said.

According to Tyson, Taylor was escorted back to Pitt County from Pascagoula, Miss., and charged with an April break-in at the home of Dudley Webb, Route 1, Maclesfield. An electric guitar, valued at $750, was reported stolen in the incident, Tyson said. The guitar has been recovered.

Bond for Taylor was set at $20,000.

Moseley's Kick Wins For Redskins

SAN DIEGO (AP) — For a few anxious minutes, Mark Moseley knew what it felt like to be in Neil O'Donoghue's shoes.

After missing four field goals in Monday night's game against San Diego, Moseley was fighting a case of nerves when he lined up for what he called "the hardest field goal I ever had to kick in my career."

"I was over there on the sidelines praying to get another chance," said Moseley, a veteran of 12

National Football League seasons.

His 37-yard field goal with four seconds left produced a 27-24 victory over the Chargers and helped Moseley, 35, conquer a confidence crisis that traced back to a key miss two weeks ago.

A year ago, he was near-perfect for the Super Bowl champion Redskins, hitting 20 of 21 field goals for an all-time NFL accuracy mark. Over two seasons, he had made 23 consecutive kicks, another NFL record.

But Monday night he was near the breaking point.

"I wouldn't be human if I didn't say I was thinking about the four misses," said Moseley, who had failed from 43, 52, 47 and 39 yards. He also had made a 43-yarder.

The winning kick "felt like I had a 1,000 pounds taken off my shoulders," a relieved Moseley told reporters. "It's been a mental struggle all year. Tonight was the turning point of my career."

It was the third consecutive week that a field goal kicker determined the outcome of the Monday night NFL game.

In last week's 20-20 tie between St. Louis and the New York Giants, the Cardinals' O'Donoghue missed three field goal attempts in the overtime period.

Two weeks ago Moseley missed a 39-yarder as time ran out, allowing the Green Bay Packers to preserve a 48-47 victory on Jan. Stenerud's 20-yard field goal with 54 seconds left.

With the victory, Washington improved its record to 7-2 in the NFC East, a game behind the 8-1 Dallas Cowboys. San Diego slipped to 3-6 and has a three-game losing streak, its longest in five years under Coach Don Coryell.

Moseley's kick erased a dramatic comeback by the Chargers, who trailed 24-7 early in the fourth quarter and tied it at 24-24 with 1:52 remaining on a 43-yard field goal by Rolf Benirschke.

San Diego quarterback Ed Luther overcame six interceptions, a fumble and a sack to ignite the 17-point fourth quarter with a pair of touchdown passes 4½ minutes apart.

But, after Benirschke tied it, the Redskins drove 72 yards in the final two minutes to grab the victory.

Washington built its lead by converting three of Luther's interceptions into 17 points. Redskins' safety Mark Murphy had three interceptions. San Diego also lost two fumbles, including one that rolled through the Washington end zone for a touchdown.

Joe Theismann completed 25 of 46 passes for 324 yards while Luther finished with 19 completions in 36 tries for 314 yards.

"It's tough to take," said Luther. "We stopped ourselves."

Long To Hula Bowl

East Carolina University's Terry Long has received an invitation to play in this year's Hula Bowl in Honolulu, Hawaii, January 7.

Long has indicated he will accept the invitation.

This marks the first time in the school's history that an ECU player has been invited to play in the Hula Bowl. Long, billed as the nation's strongest football player, is completing his senior season at offensive guard and looks to the pro draft for his future.

The Columbia, S.C., native is among those being considered for the Outland Trophy and the Lombardi Award for 1983 as well as being a strong candidate for several first team all-America berths.

"We are elated that Terry has been invited to the Hula Bowl," said head coach Ed Emory. "He deserves this and deserves to play in other all-star games. Terry is without question the finest college lineman in America."

This One Counts

Washington Redskins' kicker Mark Moseley kicks the winning field goal with four seconds left in the game as holder Joe Theismann watches the ball. The kick, which gave the Redskins a 27-24 victory over the San Diego Chargers Monday in San Diego, was only the second of six attempts by Moseley that he made in the game. (AP Laserphoto)

'Huskers Boost Lead; Tar Heels In Tumble

By The Associated Press

The Nebraska Cornhuskers, fresh off another lopsided victory, this time over Big Eight foe Kansas State, widened their lead over second-place Texas in the Associated Press college football poll.

The Cornhuskers polled 57 of 59 first-place votes and 1,178 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Texas, which defeated Texas Tech, received the other two first-place votes and 1,123 points.

Last week, with 58 voters participating, Nebraska had 54 first-place votes, while Texas received four.

Behind the two unbeaten powers, who have held down first and second-place for seven straight weeks, there was a lot of movement, though the 20 teams remained the same as last week.

Auburn moved up one spot to third with 1,048 points after stopping Florida 28-21, while Georgia, a 3-14 winner over Temple, advanced from sixth to fourth with 954 points. That sets up a key Southeastern Conference game Nov. 12 when Auburn travels to Georgia.

Miami of Florida also jumped two spots to fifth after knocking off West Virginia, while Illinois, a 16-6 winner over Big Ten foe Michigan, moved up three places to sixth. The victory made Illinois a strong favorite for the Big Ten berth in the Rose Bowl.

Maryland's victory over North Carolina moved the Terrapins from 13th to seventh, while North Carolina fell from third to 10th. Southern Methodist is eighth this week, up two spots, while Florida held on to its No. 9 ranking.

The second 10 consists of, in order, Oklahoma, Brigham Young, Michigan, Ohio State, Iowa, Boston College, West Virginia, Notre Dame, Alabama and Washington.

Last week, it was Washington, West Virginia, Maryland, Oklahoma, BYU, Ohio State, Iowa and Alabama, with Boston College and Notre Dame tied for 19th.

Illini Tie For Computer Lead

Nebraska held onto first place in the Daily Reflector Computer Rankings this week, but had to share it with Illinois.

The Cornhuskers, 9-0, on the season, found themselves tied with Illinois, 7-1, following the Illini's victory over Michigan. Both teams have now compiled 356 points on the season. Points are awarded for wins, wins by their victims, and wins by their victims' victims on a 6-4-2 basis. Where ties occur, the points are split equally.

Illinois' only loss came early in the season to Missouri, defeated later in the year by East Carolina.

Texas, second on the wire service polls, is third with 350 points, followed by Auburn with 334 and West Virginia with 304.

The second five consists of Georgia, Miami of Florida, Brigham Young, Maryland and Florida.

East Carolina's Pirates, following their 21-9 win over East Tennessee, slipped back to 47th place with 124 points, with only two of their five previous victims, Missouri and Murray

State, picking up victories over the weekend.

Cowboys' Poise Comes From Unflappable Landry

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Football teams are a reflection of the man on the sidelines pulling the strings.

That certainly is true in the case of the Dallas Cowboys, the poised, unflappable minions of stoic Tom Landry, whose 8-1 mark through the first half of the season only embellishes the best winning record in the National Football League for the last 18 years.

Landry has become the star of the longest running weekly show on television—a somber figure in a familiar felt hat, white shirt, tie and "Sunday-go-to-meetin'" suit standing like a statue on the sidelines while his Cowboy teams, in neat blue and silver uniforms, methodically carve up the opposition with the subtle skill of a surgeon.

He's not wearing earphones and hysterically surveying charts. He's not barking orders, chewing out players and yelling epithets at officials. He's not foaming at the mouth. He's not ripping up shirts and stomping on the wrist watch. He is the antithesis of the image projected by some head football coaches.

Landry has done his job earlier in the week. Now he is out there surveying his handiwork, his expression etched in granite. If Drew Pearson drops a pass in the end zone or if his star runner, Tony Dorsett, loses the ball in the midst of a drive, he doesn't bat an eyelash. If Danny White leads a 75-yard drive to a last-gasp winning touchdown, the expression remains unchanged.

The Cowboys won their eighth of nine games Sunday, beating the New York Giants 38-20. It wasn't done with brute strength. It wasn't done with legerdemain. It was an execution—mercifully sharp and quick.

The Giants lost the ball three times on fumbles. Each time it was a blue jersey—not a white Giant one—that smothered the football. The Cowboys, who are human, fumbled four times but lost the ball only once.

They say football is a game of passion. The Dallas Cowboys traditionally show the least emotion of any team in the league. You can almost visualize a "Men at Work" sign on the backs of their shirts. It's computer-like precision.

No slamming helmets to the ground in a fit of anger. None of those cooey-cooey dances featured by Atlanta's jittersbugging Billy "White Shoes" Johnson or Tarzan's gloating displays copyrighted by the Jets' Mark Gastineau.

They get behind but never flustered. They never panic. They never gloat. They are cool professionals.

This has been the trademark of Tom Landry ever since he took over as a 35-year-old rookie coach in 1960, weathering six lean years before embarking on a winning skein of 177 victories, 62 losses and two ties from 1966 through 1982, gaining the playoffs 15 times, appearing in four Super Bowls and winning two.

His austere composure represents a supreme confidence that appears to rub off on his players.

Landry is a stickler for discipline and faultless execution, which were also the tenets of the late Vince Lombardi of the Green Bay Packers, who was, however, more of a martinet and a driver who whipped up high emotions.

Of the current NFL coaches, Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins, Chuck Noll of the Pittsburgh Steelers and Bud Grant of the Minnesota Vikings are Landry's chief challengers for longevity and winning records in the NFL.

A stern tactician and superb organizer, Shula, whose 201 victories were only one behind Landry entering the current campaign, strides the sideline like a caged tiger during a game, his square jaw jutting out, himself getting intensely involved in every play.

Grant is a tall, flint-eyed refugee from the Canadian League who has Landry's low-key professional style yet a wry wit that masks an inner toughness. He is zeroing in on his 150th victory in 17 years with the Vikings, four times in the Super Bowl.

Noll, who looks like a prize fighter with his disheveled hair, thick neck and heavy shoulders, symbolizes the team with which he has won more than 125 games over 14½ years.

Knights Ousted

CHARLOTTE — Northside Christian Academy of Charlotte rolled to a 6-0 soccer victory over Greenville Christian Academy yesterday in the first round of the Christian School State Championships.

The loss eliminated the Knights from further competition and ended their season.

Tim Skidmore put Northside into the lead just 2:50 into the game with the first goal. Northside then added two more before halftime as Paul Banner hit at 7:20 and Dwayne Allen scored at 16:50.

Three more goals by Northside in the second half rounded out the scoring. Robert Ross scored at the 10 minute mark, followed by Thor Jensen at 18 and Mark Smith at 35:00.

"We played as well as we usually do," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "They were just, by far, the best team we've played all season and as good as their seeding indicated." Northside is the host team for the state tournament.

Baby Bucs Win

East Carolina's junior varsity football team evened its record at 1-1 with a 28-14 victory over Fork Union Military Academy yesterday.

The game was the second played by the Baby Pirates this year.

Football Pioneer Halas Dead At 88

CHICAGO (AP) — "Papa Bear" George Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears and last survivor of the pioneering group that founded modern professional football in a Canton, Ohio, auto showroom, has died at the age of 88.

Halas, whose teams won eight national championships and produced 20 members of pro football's Hall of Fame over a career that spanned seven decades, died just after 8:30 p.m. Monday at his apartment on Chicago's North Side, family members said.

Halas had been in and out of hospitals for the past year with heart problems and other ailments. His daughter, Virginia Halas McCaskey, was at his bedside when he died, his grandson, Rich McCaskey, said.

His death prompted an outpouring of tributes from former players, coaches and others who remembered his contributions to the game and his feisty, driving personality.

"George Halas leaves modern professional football as his memorial," said Commissioner Pete Rozelle. "He was the National Football League — its founder, the driving force that sustained it during struggling pioneer years, the owner-coach-innovator whose dynamic Bear teams triggered public acceptance of the NFL and the revered elder statesman whose vision and vitality were pivotal in the league's growth."

"I think the biggest quality Coach Halas had was he was a very inspirational guy," added current Bears Coach Mike Ditka, whose often-stormy career as a player under Halas spanned six seasons and included the team's last championship, in 1963.

"His talks at halftime — I wish that I had taped a few of them so that I could use them," Ditka said. "They were unbelievable. No matter what had happened in the first half, he could make you feel like you could do anything when you went back out the door. You may not be able to do it, but you thought you could."

Halas was the last survivor of 12 men who met in 1920 at a Canton, Ohio, automobile agency to establish the American Professional Football Association, forerunner of the National Football League.

On his 82nd birthday, Halas said: "It has been the most priceless privilege of my professional life to see our dreams come true and to watch our ugly duckling grow up to be a magnificent eagle."

He acknowledged that he "never thought it would be this big."

Halas, born Feb. 2, 1895, grew up on Chicago's West Side. He played college football at the University of Illinois, where the idea of professional football first occurred to him after he heard the legendary Coach Bob Zuppke lament, "When a boy finally learns to play football, he graduates from college."

After a stint in the Navy and a brief tenure as a right fielder for the New York Yankees — he often joked that he was "replaced" by Babe Ruth — Halas in 1920 went to work for A. E. Staley, a corn products company in Decatur, Ill., "to learn the starch business."

There, he organized an athletic team, the Decatur Staleys.

By 1922, with financial backing from the company's owner, Halas was in Chicago coaching the team, now officially named the Bears.

Years of selling tickets and writing game stories himself, as well as passing hats in the stands to collect money for players, began to end when Halas arranged the signing of legendary Illinois running back Red Grange. "The Galloping Ghost," for $100,000 in 1925.

On Thanksgiving Day that year, Grange made his debut, drawing 36,000 fans to Wrigley Field. The Bears then went on a coast-to-coast tour, paving the way for football to become a big-time sport.

During the next four decades, Halas led his "Monsters of the Midway" to more victories than any other coach — college or professional — has ever won.

Under his leadership, the Bears were the first team to film games and study the movies, the first to hire their own band, the first to publish and distribute a team newspaper for fans, the first to encourage radio broadcasts of their games, the first to have an annual homecoming for former players and the first to practice daily.

Halas retired from coaching in 1968 at the age of 73 with a record of 326-150-30.

"He loved the Bears with all his heart," said Sid Luckman, a former Bears quarterback and a Hall of Famer who led the team to four NFL titles — 1940, 1941, 1943 and 1946. "He lived for them. He died for them."

Halas Praised For Devotion To Chicago Bears, Pro Football

By The Associated Press
Those who knew George Halas praised his devotion to football, the National Football League and the Chicago Bears following his death at age 88.

Halas, one of the founders of the NFL, died at his home in Chicago on Monday night.

Sid Luckman, a Hall of Famer who quarterbacked the Bears to four NFL titles — 1940, 1941, 1943 and 1946 — said Halas' "main thought in his life was the Chicago Bears. That was the utmost thing."

"Through all his sickness and all his trying times, he always talked about the Bears and how they were doing," Luckman said.

"Not only sports (people), but many, many people around us ... have lost a man whose legacy ... will linger on as long as football is played in the United States."

"George Halas leaves modern professional football as his memorial," NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said in a statement. "He was the National Football League — its founder, the driving force that sustained it during struggling pioneer years, the owner-coach-innovator whose dynamic Bear teams triggered public acceptance of the NFL and the revered elder statesman whose vision and vitality were pivotal in the league's growth."

Rozelle called Halas' death "a loss to the entire American sports scene."

"It is particularly deep felt by those of us who shared his friendship and benefited from his counsel and support for parts of the over six decades he personified the NFL."

Bill Walsh, the president and head coach of the San Francisco 49ers, also called Halas the father of professional football.

"As a player, coach and administrator, he gave more to the game than any single generation of football people could count," Walsh added. "He had a telling effect on the game until the very end."

Chicago Bears business manager Rudy Custer, who said he met Halas during World War II, described the coach as "tough, two-fisted man with a heart of gold."

"I can't say enough good things about that man," Custer said.

George Allen, a former assistant coach under Halas and now head coach of the Arizona Wranglers of the United States Football League, echoed the sentiments on Halas' impact on professional football.

"We lost the father of professional football and he's done more for pro football than anyone past or present," Allen said in Phoenix. "I had the privilege of working with him for eight years. He was not only a great man, he was a tremendous leader. I've never seen him discouraged and he was always trying to help others. He had that type of disposition."

Gale Sayers, who earned a Hall of Fame berth as a running back for the Bears during seven seasons from 1965 to 1971, said he will remember Halas more "as a friend and advisor than as a coach."

"I played for him for three years," Sayers said. "He helped me and my family. He advised me on various matters. I'll always remember him for that."

Sayers added that the NFL will miss Halas.

"He had enough foresight to know that this would be a great game if he hung in there and held the league together."

Tom Landry, coach of the Dallas Cowboys, also mentioned Halas as the man behind professional football.

"Ever since I've been in the game, he's been a central driving force in the game," Landry said.

"I think we owe about everything to him. Of course, he was a founder. He was really the driving force almost in everything for many years."

Deacs Cited For Violations

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The basketball recruiting violations for which Wake Forest has been reprimanded by the NCAA were technical and unintentional, but the censure is embarrassing, Wake Forest officials say.

The Atlantic Coast Conference school was cited Monday by the NCAA's Committee on Infractions for violations in recruiting two prospective basketball players, but the penalty will not affect the university's eligibility for post-season basketball competition or television appearances.

"It is in a way embarrassing to be reprimanded," said Gene Hooks, Wake Forest athletic director. "I hasten to say that the violations were ... technical. Not a willful violation. I think the coaches made some careless mistakes."

Hooks said the violations came when Mark Cline, a Demon Deacon freshman from West Virginia, appeared with coach Carl Tacy at a news conference and when Darryl Person of Pinehurst, who later signed with Jacksonville (Fla.) University, was given transportation. Both violations came in the 1982-83 academic year.

Cline, a 6-foot-7, 200-pound forward, was West Virginia player of the year in 1982 and averaged 29 points per game in leading his team to a state championship. Person, a 6-2, 200-pound guard, averaged 24 points and 12 rebounds for Union Pines High School in Carthage.

In a prepared statement, Wake Forest president Thomas K. Hearn Jr. said the university accepted the NCAA findings.

"We agree with the committee that the violations did not represent an intentional effort by the basketball coaching staff to subvert NCAA recruiting legislation," said Hearn's statement, read by sports information director Phil Warshauer.

"The violations were technical in nature. Wake Forest is committed to the principle of the NCAA as shown by its history of responsible membership. We intend to continue this commitment."

The NCAA said Wake Forest violated five NCAA bylaws, including providing a friend of a prospective athlete with meals, a music concert, two nights' lodging and gasoline expenses; providing a prospective athlete with the use of a car during his visit to the university and contacting a prospective player in person while he was a junior in high school.

The NCAA also said members of the school's athletic staff violated rules governing the announcement of a prospective player's intent to attend the university and that Tacy and two assistants had erroneously attested that they had reported their knowledge of involvement in any violations of NCAA legislation involving Wake Forest.

"The Committee on Infractions did not believe that the violations in this case represented an intentional effort by basketball coaching staff members to circumvent NCAA recruiting legislation," said Charles Alan Wright, who was chairman of the infractions committee when the case was investigated.

"Even so, the committee believed a public announcement of the case was appropriate to indicate that additional effort is expected from institutional staff members to maintain compliance with NCAA requirements," Wright said.

O'Brien Prepared To Enter Dispute

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Larry O'Brien, who played a direct role in helping avert a National Basketball Association players' strike last spring, was prepared to take part in talks with locked-out referees until a dispute over the site stymied a meeting between the two sides.

Richie Phillips, general counsel for the NBA referees' union, said Monday night he was willing to meet with O'Brien and the owners' Labor Relations Committee today in New York, but not in league offices.

"As long as they continue to lock us out, we will not set foot in the NBA offices under any circumstances," Phillips said after the league invited him to meet for the first time with O'Brien and the Labor Relations Committee.

The NBA countered Phillips' offer with a statement that said he "refused an invitation" to attend the meeting at league offices between the NBA negotiating team and the Labor Relations Committee.

"The meeting will go forward as scheduled," said NBA spokesman Alex Sachare. "Phillips and his associates are welcome to attend."

The referees' union has been without a contract since Sept. 1, and no talks have been held since last Thursday. The NBA has used non-union referees for exhibition games and for 21 regular-season games since last Friday night.

Phillips maintains that there can be no real progress in negotiations until O'Brien and club owners join the talks. He said Monday night that if the commissioner attended a negotiating session outside the NBA offices, it would be "an indication they are at least ready to seriously reflect on the issues."

Cage Officials Clinics Begin

High School Basketball Officials Clinics begin Thursday at 7 p.m. at Jaycee Park.

Veteran officials and anyone desiring to become a high school basketball official should make plans to attend this meeting.

Baseball Injury Led Halas To Professional Football

CHICAGO (AP) — George Stanley Halas — the crusty, iron-willed innovator who built the Chicago Bears into a football power and the National Football League into a multi-million dollar business — got into professional football through professional baseball.

The year was 1919, and Halas was a right fielder for the New York Yankees under Miller Huggins. In his 12th major league game, Halas suffered a severe hip injury as he slid into third on a triple.

"There goes one of the best prospects I ever saw," Huggins moaned. But Halas, with the advantage of hindsight, could afford to joke about that day in later years.

"It was probably the biggest break in my life," he said. "Not too long after that the Yankees acquired a guy named Babe Ruth to play right field."

So Halas turned to football, and the game was never the same. He played, he coached, he sold tickets and in the days before the great media floods, he even wrote stories of the games and went to newspapers to have results of the games printed.

Halas was around when the players passed hats throughout the stands to collect money and he was around when sponsors were paying hundreds and thousands of dollars for a commercial minute on television.

It was Halas who realized pro football's potential for popularity and, back in 1951, "Papa Bear" paid out of his own pocket to have Bear games televised into places such as Minneapolis and Louisville.

"We knew we had a great attraction," Halas once said. "But we had to show the public and the television people how great an attraction professional football was."

Despite the game's popularity today, it was a long struggle in the early years. There were times Halas paid his players with IOUs. During the Great Depression in the 1930s, Halas had to borrow $5,000 from the late sportsman Charles Bidwill to keep the Bears afloat.

The idea of professional football struck Halas during his days as a player at the University of Illinois under the legendary Bob Zuppke.

University of Illinois under the legendary Bob Zuppke.

Halas was standing nearby when Coach Zuppke shook his head one day and said, "When a boy finally learns to play football, he graduates from college."

"The thought stuck in my head," said Halas, who completed his civil engineering studies at Illinois in 3½ years and went off to the Navy in 1918.

Halas played with Great Lakes team that defeated Navy 7-6 in 1919 and then defeated the Mare Island Marines 17-0 in the Rose Bowl. Halas left the Navy in 1919 and played Yankees until the hip injury ended his career.

The following year, Halas went to work for the A.E. Staley Co. in Decatur, Ill., "to learn the starch business" and became the firm's athletic director.

Halas organized the Decatur Staleys football team and was in line for a promotion in the glucose department of the starchworks when the 1921 recession hit.

The company couldn't underwrite the team any longer, Halas recalled, so "Mr. Staley gave me $5,000 to move the team to Chicago and call them the Staleys for one year."

Halas moved the team to Wrigley Field and the following year adopted the name of the Chicago Bears as partial identification with the baseball Chicago Cubs.

Despite financial difficulties, Halas managed to hold onto the team. He was instrumental in changing the rules to step scoring and modernized the game. But it wasn't until 1925 that the game began "catching on."

Then came the great maneuver. Halas eventually enticed Red Grange, the Galloping Ghost from Illinois, to turn professional for $100,000.

On Thanksgiving Day 1925, Grange made his professional debut and the Bears packed Wrigley Field with a crowd of 36,000.

"If there had been room, we could have put in another 30,000," said Halas. "We went to New York and drew 65,000 the day after the Army-Navy game drew 60,000." It was the beginning of a coast-to-coast tour in which the Bears played 16 games from Nov. 26 through Jan. 31 interrupted by a two-week rest.

Halas had turned pro football into a big time sport and his "Monsters of the Midway" became a legend, stringing together a series of championships.

Halas went back into the Navy during World War II. Upon his return in 1946, and the Bears, led by quarterback Sid Luckman, the team won another championship.

The Bears then had their ups and downs as the struggle for talent grew throughout the growing and expanding league and in 1956 Halas "retired" as coach for the third time, handing the reins to his old buddy, Paddy Driscoll.

Driscoll coached the team until Halas made another comeback in 1959. In 1963, at the age of 68, Halas led the Bears to their last NFL championship with a 14-10 victory over the New York Giants, a day Halas described as "one of the greatest in my life."

In 1968, at the age of 73, Halas permanently retired from coaching with a record of 326 victories, 150 defeats and 30 ties. He remained a dominant figure in the organization but the Bears' fortunes kept slipping.

Halas suffered a tremendous blow when his son died of a massive heart attack at the age of 54 in December 1979, the year the Bears made the playoffs. They lost in the wild-card game to Philadelphia 27-17.

Sutton Takes First Place

Marvin Sutton captured first place in the month-long Krispy Kreme No-Tap, No-Split Bowling Tournament at Hillcrest Lanes this past weekend.

Sutton turned in the best game during the tournament, a 267. Second place went to Billy Whitehurst with a 248, while Edward Stancil was third at 250.

Ed Diehl finished in fourth position with a 248, followed by Harvey Nethercutt at 240.

Hillcrest Lanes will hold a Scotch Mixed Doubles Alibi Handicap tournament during November. The tournament will run on Friday's from 7 to 11 p.m. Format for the tournament will be for the teams to bowl four games and throw out their worst score.

Further details and information are available at the bowling center.

Petty Leaving Family Team

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — NASCAR driver Richard Petty says a desire to concentrate on his own racing fortunes instead of splitting time between his car and that of his son, Kyle, made him decide to leave family-owned Petty Enterprises after 25 years.

Petty and his sponsor, STP Corp., announced Monday that Petty had signed a three-year contract with one-year options to drive for Curb Racing Associates of Kannapolis on the Grand National Circuit. Bob Rahilly will build the engines for the new team and veteran Buddy Parrott will be the crew chief.

"The future of Petty Enterprises is more in Kyle Petty's hands than Richard Petty's hands now," Petty said. "Racing has become so much more complex than it was four or five years ago, and basically we weren't capable of taking care of it all."

"The main thing we're going to try to do is keep Petty Enterprises going with Kyle. If it works out, fine. If it doesn't, we'll have to do something else," he added. "I'll be able to concentrate on one car now, which I haven't been able to do in the last four or five years."

Richard Petty, 46, will still own and be president of Petty Enterprises. He will drive the familiar No. 43 red and blue STP Pontiac for the new team next season.

After a winless 1982, Petty captured three races this season, including the Miller 500 at the Charlotte Motor Speedway, which set off a storm of controversy and forced NASCAR to change its rules regarding use of illegal equipment.

NASCAR fined the Randleman native $35,000 and took away Winston Cup points after it was determined his engine was larger than required and that he used four left-side tires.

Petty Announces Move

Carew Among Free Agents

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven-time American League batting champion Rod Carew will be among as many as 47 players who will take part in the free agent re-entry draft next Monday.

The 47 players still can sign with their old teams by Thursday. On Monday, catcher Bob Boone and outfielders Ellis Valentine and Brian Downing, each of whom had been eligible for free agency, signed multi-year contracts with the California Angels.

But the Angels may be losing Carew, 38, who batted .339 this year.

Carew filed for free agency over the weekend, along with Dan Ford, who hit .280 with nine homers and 55 runs batted in for the world champion Baltimore Orioles, and five other players.

The others included pitchers J.R. Richard, the former Houston Astros' star who hasn't hurled in the majors since suffering a stroke in 1980, and Jerry Koosman, who posted an 11-7 record and a 4.77 earned run average for the Chicago White Sox this year. He turns 40 in December.

First baseman Enos Cabell, who batted .311 with five homers and 46 RBI for the Detroit Tigers last season, reserve infielder Kiko Garcia of the Philadelphia Phillies and reserve outfielder Miguel Dilone of the Pittsburgh Pirates also opted for free agency.

While the Angels made progress in signing potential free agents, New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner worked to keep reliever Goose Gossage and Graig Nettles, who have both filed for free agency.

Steinbrenner and front office aide Gene Michaels talked with the two players and agent Jerry Kapstein in separate meetings Monday.

"The atmosphere of our meetings was businesslike and friendly," Kapstein said. "It was time well spent."

But the prospect of Nettles staying in New York appeared to be far more likely than Gossage.

After the meeting with Nettles, Kapstein said, "We are no closer to signing, but it was a positive meeting."

Waltrip Inches Closer In Race

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The gap between Bobby Allison and Darrell Waltrip has narrowed in their battle for the NASCAR Winston Cup Grand National championship.

Allison, a 19-year veteran who has never won the Winston Cup, holds a 27-point lead over two-time defending champion Waltrip, going into next Sunday's meet at Atlanta's International Raceway.

The 4349- to 4322-point race is the closest the two drivers have been all year. At this point last year, Waltrip led Allison by 37 points.

Waltrip of Tennessee cut 40 points from Allison's lead in Sunday's Hodgdon American 500 at North Carolina Motor Speedway. He finished fifth to winner Terry Labonte of Texas.

Allison, from Alabama, registered his slowest finish coming in 16th after surviving an early third-turn crash.

Bill Elliott is third in the Winston Cup standings with 3949 points. Richard Petty is fourth with 3743 and Labonte is fifth with 3693.

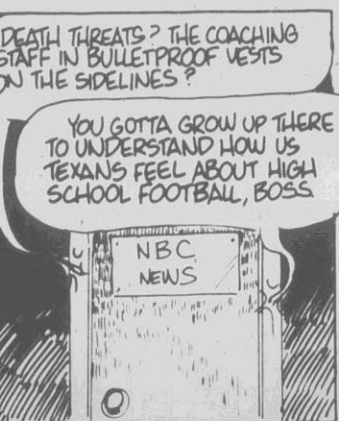

Rounding out the top 10 were Harry Gant, 3668; Ricky Rudd, 3551; Dale Earnhardt, 3498; Neil Bonnett, 3497; and Tim Richmond, 3356.

Meanwhile, Mike Alexander of Tennessee has taken the 1983 NASCAR Winston Racing Series, the national short track driving title, and the more than $35,000 that goes with it.

Alexander, champion of the Southeast Region, won 31 feature races during the season, three more than his closest rival, Northeast Region champion Rickie Evans of New York.

Pressure On Toledo

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Ever so quietly, the University of Toledo is sneaking up on an unbeaten college football season. But as the victories mount, so does the pressure.

"It does add to it," senior quarterback Jim Kelso said Monday. "Once another team sees that you're unbeaten, they're out working that much harder to knock you down. But you have to expect that."

Kelso knows of what he speaks. Last Saturday, Kent State — which has the nation's longest major college losing streak at 21 games — came within three points of knocking Toledo from the shrinking ranks of the nation's unbeaten major college football teams. Grid powerhouses Texas and Nebraska are the only others unbeaten.

Max Gerber, team publicist at Toledo for the last 24 years, said it's too early to compare the 1983 Rockets with the Toledo teams of 1969 to 1971 that won 35 consecutive games.

"How do you compare a team now with a team of 10 or 12 years ago?" Gerber asked. "I'd say this team isn't there yet. But if they win their last three games, then I'd put them in the same class."

Toledo has won eight games in a row this year and nine straight over the last two seasons. "Second-year Toledo Coach Dan Simrell admitted that he's impressed by the winning streak."

"It's something these kids have earned," he said. "A lot of these kids were around when we were in a bowl game two years ago. They know what it takes. They have character."

In 1981, Toledo won the inaugural California Bowl, created for the winners of the Mid-America Conference and Pacific Coast Athletic Conference. Decimated by injuries last year, Toledo fell to 6-5.

The Rockets were picked by sportswriters to finish fifth in the 10-team MAC this year, but Toledo roared through its two non-conference games against Massachusetts and Richmond. By the end of four games, Toledo had outscored its opponents 150-26.

Following the surge, Toledo had to depend on senior placekicker Tony Lee to kick them to wins over conference foes Miami of Ohio and Bowling Green. A relatively easy victory over conference also-ran Eastern Michigan and the 37-34 squeaker against Kent State brought the season mark to 8-0.

The Rockets rank 16th in the nation in total defense and first in defense against the run, allowing only 70 yards per game. Toledo is seventh nationally in scoring defense, surrendering 11.4 points a game.

Toledo's remaining games contest against MAC foes Western Michigan, Northern Illinois and Central Michigan. The Nov. 12 game at Northern likely will decide the MAC title because the Huskies are tied with the Rockets for the MAC lead.

"We tell the players we're in the stretch run," Simrell said. "We're not looking for anybody's help. We control our own destiny."

Morgan Gets Release By Phils; Seeks Spot

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies dropped another of their so-called "wheeze kids" Monday when they released second baseman Joe Morgan.

Morgan, 40, asked for and received his unconditional release so he could play with a team close to his Oakland, Calif., home if he decides to play again in 1984.

Several weeks ago the Phillies gave 42-year-old Pete Rose his release after he declined to remain with the team as a part-time player.

Morgan reportedly is negotiating with the San Diego Padres for next season.

Bill Giles, the Phillies president, said in a statement: "I spoke with Joe several times last week and he hadn't made up his mind regarding next season. There was a clause in his contract in which we had an Oct. 31 deadline for renewing his contract for 1984."

"Joe requested that the Phillies exercise their option not to renew his contract and he be given his release so that if he decided to play next season, he could play closer to home."

Morgan hit only .230 during the regular season, but the figure isn't indicative of his contribution to the Phillies' September drive to the National League East title.

In September, when the Phillies posted a 22-7 record, including an 11-game winning streak, Morgan hit .337 with five of his 16 home runs and 18 RBI. In one four-game stretch during the long winning streak, he had 13 hits in 18 at-bats.

Giles added, "Joe Morgan was a very big part in the Phillies winning the 1983 National League pennant. He got hot at the right time and led us into the World Series."

Morgan played most of the season with several nagging injuries, including a knee ailment that affected his ability at the plate. He was healthy in September and actually triggered the Phillies' stretch drive.

In the National League Championship series he hit .067 during a three games-to Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 11-1

RDWGWZ HMP VM XNA PNIR UINBEH:
"ZMD ADIB RMMG UBWVXNRP."

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — THE MOST FAMOUS CIRCUS STAR TURNS FIGHTER; IS A RING MASTER.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: M equals O.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal Q throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: King of ♣.

When declarer led the jack of hearts, West had no safe discard. If he sluffed a club, declarer's third club would become established, so he parted with a spade. That proved to be no better.

Declarer discarded a club from dummy, cashed the ace king of spades and ruffed a spade to set up a long spade in dummy. With West marked for the ace of clubs, the queen of clubs was the entry to the high spade.

New Judge For Carsons Studied

All too often, a player will give his hand away by bidding when he should pass. But sometimes a perfectly normal action will have the same result. Consider this hand, reported by "International Popular Bridge Monthly."

The auction contains several points of interest. Since North had not yet bid, South's double was for takeout. But as he had already shown a good hand with his double, South should have been content to bid three hearts at his next turn, rather than jump to game.

The defenders started with three rounds of diamonds, declarer ruffing the third. Prospects were dim, for it was likely that declarer would have to lose two club tricks. However, West's takeout double made it probable that he held four spades, so declarer saw a ray of light. He started to run his trumps, reducing the hand to this position:

Passing Into History

Although the forward pass in football was first allowed in 1906, it was not until this date in 1913 that its effectiveness was demonstrated. Notre Dame defeated Army 35-13, completing 14 of 17 passes for 243 yards. Originally, a forward pass could go no further than 20 yards. A receiver had to run to a specified spot and wait for the ball. In order to help the referees determine if a pass was legal, the field was divided into five-yard squares, thus giving rise to the nickname "gridiron."

DO YOU KNOW—What famous Notre Dame athlete caught most of those first passes?

MONDAY'S ANSWER—Houdini's real name was Ehrich Weiss.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A great day to get an early start seeing and being with and arriving at new and more effective understandings with those whom you would like to co-ordinate your talents in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) If you change your attitude concerning your partners, you gain greater knowledge about what it is they expect of you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Tap your subconscious for best ideas as to how to handle any business at hand and get good results.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Bring your finest creative ideas to the attention of the influential and gain support for them. This will be profitable.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Be sure to combine the proven with new mechanisms at work for good results. Cooperate with co-workers.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Be with friends who are progressive and gain good ideas for your own advancement. Some excellent advice should be taken.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Have those talks with kin that can bring more harmony at home and make life happier there. Pay attention to details.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Talk over new arrangements with those you see daily at routines and gain more efficiency, better results thereby.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get the information you need from bigwigs just how you can become more prosperous and put the advice to work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A generous person from out-of-town can give progressive ideas for your eventual advancement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) One who is experienced in business can give you fine ideas for improving practical matters, so follow them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Partners and friends see you in the best light now and will give you the backing you need for your projects.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have more than one option where business affairs are concerned, so consider them well and know which is best to follow.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those charming young persons who can understand the over-all aspects of any condition, so add courses to the school curriculum that can add to this natural ability. There is an ability for sports here.

Historical Group Gets Old Table

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The table used by printer John Dunlap to hold Thomas Jefferson's manuscript copy of the Declaration of Independence as it was set in type on the evening of July 4, 1776, has been given to the Historical Society of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

The society also owns the oldest copy of the Declaration, the printer's proof, on which Jefferson and Charles Thomson, secretary of Congress, made last-minute corrections during that night.

The mahogany Pembroke table is the gift of Samuel Rush Bleight of Haymarket, Va., a direct descendant of the patriot and printer.

"Not only is this handsome table a functional piece of early American furniture," said James E. Mooney, director of the Historical Society, "it has historical associations which make it a remarkable piece of early American history."

John Dunlap (1747-1812) came to Philadelphia from Ireland while a young boy and served as an apprentice to his uncle, a printer whose shop on Market Street was maintained by Dunlap when he took over the business in 1768. Dunlap in 1771 launched the "Pennsylvania Packet or General Advertiser," which later became the first daily newspaper in the country.

An ardent patriot, Dunlap founded the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, in 1774, and was also designated official "Printer to Congress." On July 8, three days after the first copies of the Declaration were distributed to assemblies throughout the 13 colonies, Dunlap printed the proclamation on the front page of his paper.

Dunlap and David C. Claypoole, who later became his partner, were to continue this journalistic tradition. They published in their paper the texts of the Treaty of Paris in 1783, the Constitution in 1787, and Washington's Farewell Address in 1796.

The Dunlap table was previously on exhibition in 1927 at the Historical Society, the oldest historical society in Pennsylvania and among the oldest in the nation. At that time, a memorial tablet to Dunlap and Claypoole was unveiled at the site of their former printing office.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green

Green Says He Will Enter Race For Governor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green says he still plans to seek the Democratic nomination for governor in 1984 and doubts that his recent trial put him behind in campaigning.

"Of course I'm going to run for governor," Green said Monday. "The only question is when I will formally announce."

A Wake Superior Court jury Friday acquitted Green on charges of twice agreeing to accept bribes of $10,000 a month, agreeing to accept a $2,000 bribe and receiving a $2,000 bribe.

Before the trial, Green said he expected to be a candidate. But he had to put his plans on hold to prepare to go to court. Green said Monday that he didn't believe the delay would hurt him because he could see little progress in other candidates' campaigns.

Green, relaxed and smiling, met with reporters in his legislative office. There were several large flower arrangements from supporters and the desk was covered with mail and telegrams.

"I am not a wealthy person and the ordeal must conclude was terribly, terribly expensive," Green said. "I don't have any money to begin a campaign with but I have a lot of good friends and supporters. Right now I would rather have the supporters than the money."

In response to questions about whether he can maintain political support in the face of negative publicity surrounding his indictment, Green read a telegram. In the telegram, a supporter said he knew all along that Green was innocent and he promised to support him for governor.

"Their words and actions speak louder than mine possibly could," Green said.

"I had the opportunity to tell the truth last week and people had to listen to it," he said. "I very much wanted to get on the stand so the truth could be told that never had been told. ... The challenge was to clear my name and it appeared that was the only way to do it."

Some of Green's supporters say they hold Attorney General Rufus Edmisten partly responsible for Green's indictment. Green said he wasn't sure who his adversaries were but he would continue to try to find out.

Federal prosecutors began the probe that led to Green's trial but they chose not to indict and turned the matter over to Edmisten, who turned the matter over to Wake County authorities.

Edmisten also is a candidate for governor.

Hunt To Develop Economic Strategy

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt says he will devote his final year in office to developing a "comprehensive and detailed strategy" for economic growth in the face of an uncertain future.

"I plan to spend a great deal of time ... listening and talking to people in each of our communities — people in business, government and education — about how we can plan North Carolina's economic future," Hunt said Monday at the N.C. League of Municipalities convention. "We face serious economic challenges in the years ahead," he said. "Competition for jobs from other states and other nations, new technologies demanding new skills, structural changes in the job market and shifting governmental responsibilities." Hunt said he would concentrate on recruiting industry, boosting traditional industries such as textile and furniture manufacturing, and helping small business.
