Rumsfeld Gets Reagan's Nod As New Envoy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today named former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, a moderate Republican who heads a major pharmaceutical firm, to be his new special envoy to the Middle East.

Reagan said Rumsfeld would be his "point man" in the effort to remove foreign forces from Lebanon and to negotiate peace between Israel and its Arab neighbors.

"I cannot think of a better individual," the president said as he appeared with Rumsfeld before reporters at the White House.

"We intend to work and use the talents of our best minds to achieve a just and lasting peace in the Middle East," Reagan said.

At the same time, he appealed to the Lebanese groups meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, to put aside their differences and move toward a national consensus.

Reagan also reaffirmed his commitment to his September 1982 plan for settling the Arab-Israeli conflict. "No one has come up with a better proposal since," he said.

Israel, Jordan and the Palestine Liberation Organization all refused to participate in the negotiations proposed by Reagan.

But the president said a resolution of Lebanon's divisions could provide the momentum required to get the U.S. proposal going.

Reagan appointed Rumsfeld as his personal representative in the Mideast, which runs for six months and does not require Senate approval.

Rumsfeld, in a brief exchange with reporters, said he did not volunteer for the job and that, while he expects to be a fulltime envoy for months, he has not severed his ties with G.D. Searle & Co., the Chicago pharmaceutical company he heads.

The former Pentagon chief in the Ford administration said he did not know what could be done to persuade Syria to remove its forces from Lebanon. "I don't know that anybody does," he said.

Rumsfeld also said he did not know when he would go to the Middle East but that he expected to be away "for prolonged periods."

Rumsfeld succeeds Robert McFarlane, who is the president's new national security assistant. Richard Fairbanks will remain in his current post as a U.S. negotiator in the Middle East, the president said.

McFarlane and Secretary of State George P. Shultz, with whom Rumsfeld has close ties, both were unable to overcome Syria's resistance to pulling out its troops from Lebanon.

Appointment of the well-known Rumsfeld, a veteran of several top posts signals Reagan's determination to settle Middle East problems.

Besides serving as secretary of defense under President Gerald R. Ford in 1975-77, Rumsfeld was White House chief of staff and U.S. ambassador to NATO.

Reagan Says War In Grenada Over

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said today that hostilities had ended in Grenada and that U.S. military commanders are being instructed to begin withdrawing their forces within a few days.

"Our objectives have been achieved, and as soon as logistics permit, American personnel will be leaving," the president said.

He praised "the courage and the professionalism" of the U.S. troops sent to Grenada on Oct. 25, and said that the 18 Grenadians killed there "are heroes of freedom."

According to the president's spokesman, Larry Speakes, there are 5,980 soldiers on the island plus some Air Force personnel. He said that the Marines and Army Rangers who took part in the invasion have been withdrawn.

The president, in a brief question-and-answer session, said that he would take a step similar to the Grenadian invasion elsewhere, "if all the conditions were the same."

Asked about the Nicaraguan government's predictions that the United States would invade that Central American country, he said, "I haven't believed anything they've been saying since they got in charge, and you shouldn't either."

"The situation is not the same," in Nicaragua as in Grenada, he said.

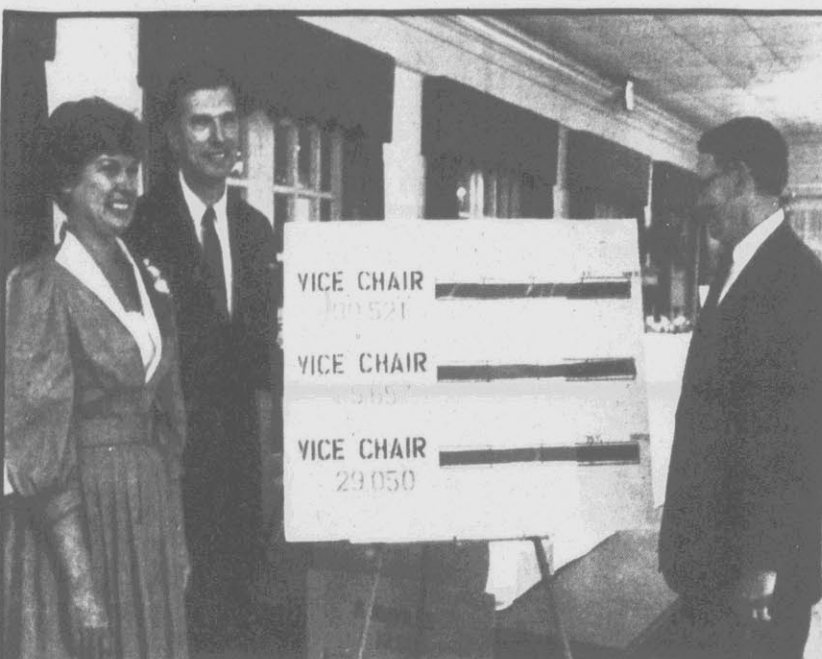

Reagan, pointing out that "the situation is stable" in Grenada, noted that U.S. forces had captured stores of weapons shipped to Grenada by Cuba and said, "who knows what evil the liberation of Grenada achieved for us or averted in the year ahead."

The president had said the day of the U.S. invasion that the troops were dispatched to help approximately 600 American medical students leave the island and restore democratic processes there after a coup in which leftist leader Maurice Bishop was replaced by an even more Marxist group.

Saluting the U.S. troops, the president said today "the American students called them rescuers. The citizens of Grenada have hailed them as liberators."

Reagan said the troops "not only rescued our own citizens, they saved the people of Grenada from repression and laid aside a potential threat to all the people of the Caribbean."

Reagan, who called the U.S. military action an invasion when he originally announced it, objected today to the same word and said to a questioner: "Incidentally, I know your frequent use of the word invasion; this was a rescue mission."

Seeks 'New Majority'

Jackson Officially Enters Campaign

By BETTY WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, the black civil rights leader, announced today that he will seek the Democratic presidential nomination, saying if minorities join together they "can build a new majority."

"This candidacy is much more than just a man running for an office," Jackson told more than 1,000 supporters who crowded into a downtown convention center.

"This is a serious candidacy for the presidency. But a by-product of this candidacy is to inspire 10,000 people to run for office at every level," said Jackson.

Jackson, who has said that he does not expect to win the nomination, faces seven other Democrats who already are competing for a chance to unseat President Reagan, the probable Republican nominee.

Jackson, 42, has said his goal is to awaken blacks, Hispanics, other minorities, the poor and women, to their latent power. His campaign will be aimed at persuading them to register and vote and also to run for state, local and national office. He estimates that 2 million more blacks can be registered in time for the 1984 election.

"We want to cross the finish line first, but not with an empty wagon. We want our wagon to be full of other candidates as well," he said.

"If we come together around our common economic plight and a humane political agenda, we won't be poor and powerless anymore. Together, the old minorities constitute a new majority."

Forum

The Pitt Greenville Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a Candidate's Forum tonight at 7 p.m. in the Willis Building on Reade Street. Candidates for mayor and City Council will be available to answer questions.

Together we can build a new majority," he said.

The South Carolina-born, civil rights leader who founded the black self-help organization Operation PUSH in Chicago is not the first black to seek the Democratic nomination.

Former Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., was a candidate in 1972 but dropped out of the race. Mrs. Chisholm introduced Jackson at today's ceremony.

Jackson arranged for some of his other supporters to attend the announcement ceremony, where people sang and cheered.

Among those who agreed to appear on the program were Tony Bonilla Jr. of the National Hispanic Leadership Conference; Bishop H.H. Brookins of the African Methodist Episcopal Church; and Julie Henderson of the National Congress of American Indians.

Chrysler Strike Can Bankrupt, Iacocca Claims

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca warned that if "the whole system goes down for a month or two, we're bankrupt," as a walkout at a key Ohio factory shut down four plants nationwide, idling 15,000 workers today.

Chrysler closed two plants employing 9,000 workers Wednesday because of the strike by 3,200 workers at a stamping plant in Twinsburg, Ohio. Two plants had to be shut down Tuesday, and more closures were possible, the company said.

Meanwhile, little progress was reported toward settling the walkout in Twinsburg that began Tuesday after the United Auto Workers union and the carmaker failed to reach agreement in contract talks held over the past 15 months. The facility is the sole supplier of door panels and underbodies for six of Chrysler's seven North American assembly plants.

Negotiators for UAW Local 122 and Chrysler exchanged written proposals and talked by telephone Wednesday, as two hours of negotiations ended shortly before 7 p.m. Local 122 President Bob Weissman said only about 2 percent of the outstanding health and safety issues were resolved in the session.

No time was set for further talks today, he said.

As available parts ran out, workers at Chrysler plants in Detroit and Newark, Del., were sent home halfway through their shift Wednesday night, said Chrysler spokesman Baron Bates.

Parts shortages forced plants at Windsor, Ontario, and Belvidere, Ill., to close at the end of the work day Tuesday. About 6,300 workers were idled at Windsor and Belvidere, Chrysler said.

A facility in Fenton, Mo., would be affected by week's end, while a second Windsor plant could close in two weeks, Chrysler said.

The only plant not affected would be a Warren, Mich., truck facility that gets stampings from a plant in Sterling Heights, Mich.

FIRELIGHTING

Members of the Alpine Hunting Club have asked Hotline to appeal to anyone having knowledge of or suspecting anyone of firelighting deer to call the Pitt County Wildlife Protectors immediately. Club President C.R. Shelton is shown Wednesday as he surveyed a male fawn he estimated to be about 8 months old that had been shot the previous night and left to die. "Most firelighters are poachers," he said. "They blind deer with bright lights, shoot them down, and take them for the meat, which they evidently sell. Whoever shot this one and another one up the road evidently got scared off before they could cart them away." He said the club members have found about 10 dead does and fawns so slaughtered this year and have no idea how many others have been killed and taken away. The same practice is going on in other areas of the county, he said.

He reminded that any use of spotlights for sighting deer after 11 p.m. in illegal and seeing one is reason enough to call the wildlife protector. A wildlife protector may be contacted by calling a toll-free number — 1-800-662-7137. This is a bay station in Raleigh constantly in radio contact with every wildlife protector in the state.

Anyone having knowledge is how illegally obtained venison is being marketed in this area is also urged to contact wildlife officers or appropriate law enforcement agencies.

Mutineers Hit Arafat Stronghold In Tripoli

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian mutineers today attacked Yasser Arafat's stronghold in the northern city of Tripoli, killing at least 30 people and wounding 100, police said.

U.S. Marines, meanwhile, repulsed an attempt to infiltrate their base at Beirut airport.

Syrian jets roared across the border in thunderous mock divebombing attacks on Arafat's military headquarters in the Palestinian refugee camp of Baddawi on the outskirts of Tripoli, 50 miles north of Beirut, a senior Arafat aide reported by telephone.

Arafat, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization, sent out messages to Arab, African and non-aligned heads of state appealing for prompt intervention to stop the attack on Baddawi and the nearby camp of Nahr el-Bared and "avert a new massacre."

"Up to 140 field artillery guns are shelling us as well as Tripoli," Arafat said over the Voice of Palestine radio. "A tank charge was launched toward the harbor (of Tripoli) in an attempt to isolate and encircle the two camps for a showdown. We shall defend our people."

Beirut radio said oil storage tanks at Tripoli's refinery were ablaze as combat around the camps touched off street battles between pro-Arafat and pro-Syrian local militias in the city's seaside slums.

Police To Launch New Ride-Along Program

Greenville residents interested in seeing how police operate while on patrol will now be able to "ride along" with local officers and get a first-hand glimpse of police operations.

Chief Ted Holmes said today that a "Citizen Ride Along" program will be initiated Friday.

The objective of the program, Holmes said, "is to help community residents understand the nature of police patrol activities as well as problems encountered by the department."

Persons 18 years old and over who are interested in the ride-along program may call the police department at 752-3342 and ask for the supervisor on duty. The supervisor, in turn, will assign the rider to a selected officer.

Participants, who should give the department at least four hours' notice, will be asked to complete a liability "Assumption of Risk and Indemnity Agreement for Ride Along Program" form, Holmes said.

Holmes said other guidelines for the program require that participants wear seat belts at all times while riding, and that riders remain in the patrol car when asked to do so by the patrol officer.

Foreign Language Is 'Elementary'

By DAVID FOX
Associated Press Writer
FERNDALE, Mich. (AP) — The first-grade classroom looks like any other with its knee-high desks, dusty chalkboards and bright wall posters. But to all but a few of the nation's schools, the conversation inside is totally foreign.

"Guten tag, kinder," Lynn Haire greets students at Ferndale's Warren G. Harding Elementary School. "Guten tag, Frau Haire," the 22 youngsters gathered around her respond in unison.

For the next 20 minutes, she leads class discussion, songs and games — all in German.

Mrs. Haire is among seven teachers in the suburban Detroit district who visit elementary schools, conducting daily classes in German, Spanish and French for kindergarten through third-grade students.

The language varies according to the building, but the method is constant.

"We always speak the language in front of the students," Mrs. Haire said during a recent visit to the school. "In fact, they're a little shocked when they finally hear you speak English."

"We're trying to present this in much the same way children learn a language at home — by being absorbed in it," added French teacher Annick Brown. "At first, they tend to giggle a lot and find it amusing. But after about the third day, they understand what it's about and start answering."

"Our belief is that, if you start young enough, everyone can learn," explained Glen Brackenbury, deputy superintendent of instruction in the 4,700-student district.

The program is mandatory for kindergarten through second-graders and through third grade at classroom buildings where it began as a 1980 experiment.

"We've added one grade per year," Brackenbury said. "Like anything, though, it's not all roses. We're having some growing pains and problems. For one, we don't have all our long-range programs in place."

"What happens when the students reach the upper grades? How do we approach the program then? Frankly, we don't know yet."

Foreign language programs suffered for a decade from a lack of money and, often, a lack of interest, Michigan State University language professor George Mansour said.

"I'm quite optimistic about what is going to happen in the future," Mansour said.

"It bodes well that 10,000-12,000 fourth-, fifth- and sixth-graders are studying Latin in Philadelphia, and Chicago has six foreign language academies for elementary students."

He added that foreign language enrollment in high schools and colleges has risen steadily for three or four years, while more schools are hiring foreign language teachers.

Such classes are common at the high school level, but relatively few elementary schools are known to offer foreign language programs, Nancy Rhodes of the Washington-based Center for Applied Linguistics said in a telephone interview.

She said only a few districts have programs which try to make elementary school students fluent in a language — either by the immersion method, where no English is used in any classroom, or FLES (for Foreign Language in the Elementary School), where conversational language is stressed in a more limited classroom setting.

Ferndale, one of only three Michigan public school systems known to offer foreign languages in the elementary grades, adopted a modified FLES program with two goals: improving students' English skills and expanding their cultural horizons.

But for students, the program is just plain fun.

"I talk to my brother in German," said 7-year-old Dwayne Porter, a first-grader. "He's in the third grade and doesn't take it. When he yells at me, I talk right back in German and he doesn't understand me. That makes him mad: I like it."

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Every time I go to a shopping mall, I get a sinking feeling that no one will ever hear from me again.

It's the same chill that passes over me when I see all the same cars in the parking lot that are there when I go in weekend after weekend. The tires are soft. The license plates expired. The "Goldwater for President" bumper stickers on an Edsel seem dated. The cars seem abandoned somehow.

The other day my worst fears were realized. I read a story quoting an architect of malls who said, "Our biggest complaint from shoppers is getting lost in the mall, but that is our intent. We are trying to entice people to enter the mall and keep them there."

Did you hear that? Wake up, America, before it's too late!

These designers aren't going to stop until every man, woman and child in this country is milling around with glazed eyes and the egg money in their hands wandering from shoestore to cheese shop.

These concrete mazes didn't "just happen." First, planners studied people who lived in the suburbs. They discovered they were people with virtually no social life and no stimuli. They read, they watched television and two weeks every year they went on vacation. They needed a place to "cruise" without cars.

The shopping center was born.

Today, there are 23,000 shopping centers. No matter what time of day you go to them, there are 17,000 cars in the parking lot and 17 drones inside walking around with hollow eyes picking up a greeting card and putting it back, holding up a T-shirt or watching a video game flash on and off.

There is a shopping center in my city that is big enough for 35 football fields to fit inside. That is the other day with a pair of wedgies and a Bee Gees record. He was only three stores away from an exit sign hidden behind a potted palm. That's what happens when you panic."

Candy Striper's Kindness Is Someone's Reward

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl working as a "candy striper" (volunteer) at a home for the aging in Cleveland. During my lunchtime an elderly lady came up to me and asked if I would walk her to the medical building next door to buy a pair of sunglasses.

I walked her over there and she tried to give me a dollar. I told her I couldn't accept it, and besides, it was such a beautiful day I really enjoyed the walk. She got very mad and threatened not to go back with me if I didn't take the dollar. She said, "Just take it, and don't tell anyone!" Then she stuck it in my pocket.

Abby, I don't know what to do with this money. I'd feel so guilty if I spent it. I feel like throwing it out, but there are people who could use it. I know it isn't much, but I'm sending it to you. Will you please send it to a worthy cause?

M.K.

DEAR M.K.: You are to be commended for (a) not wanting to keep the money and (b) asking that it go to a worthy cause.

I am sending your dollar to the United Way in Cleveland. It supports 175 separate agencies—among which are the American Cancer Society, the Heart Association, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, help for the hearing-impaired and the visually handicapped, crippled children, etc.

You say a dollar isn't much, but every dollar counts. If everyone who reads this sent a dollar to his or her own United Way, millions of disabled, sick, poor and elderly people would be better served.

DEAR ABBY: "Billy" and I dated for five years before we got married two months ago. We live in my house. I have a good job and it pays well.

The problem? Billy does not have a job, and he doesn't seem to care if he gets one or not. He never goes job hunting—he just does odd jobs whenever he feels like it, which is not very often.

I have tried to impress on him the importance of getting a steady job because I don't want to go on supporting us forever.

My parents will help us out if we need money, but it's not their place to support Billy and me. It's our place to support ourselves. Your advice would be greatly appreciated.

LOSING PATIENCE IN S.C.

DEAR LOSING: Give Billy an ultimatum. Let him know that if he does not seriously seek employment until he comes up with something, the honeymoon is over! And give him a time limit—unless you want to carry this freeloader indefinitely.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for your fine column on fire prevention during Fire Prevention Week.

You wrote: "The phone number of your fire department should be taped to every telephone." An excellent idea, but you should have added, "along with your address."

A sitter or guest in your home may not know your address. Also, people sometimes panic when calling the fire department and "forget" their own address.

Structure Is Teacher's Key

By DIANE WILSON

Monroe Enquirer-Journal MONROE, N.C. (AP) — No one knows what they know. Autistic children live in a world of their own, perceiving disorder and incoherence in "our world."

June Lee teaches autistic children at Walter Bickett Elementary School, in the first year an autistic class has been taught at the school. She has a fulltime aide working with her to oversee a class of three students.

The teaching environment has to be structured, Mrs. Lee said, and a break in structure may result in a tantrum.

"Structure is the key to getting anywhere with these kids," she said. "They're like kids who have no order or sense to the world at all."

Teaching autistic children requires a lot of patience, she said.

"You can never take for granted that what you taught yesterday will be there today, or that a month's vacation won't totally wipe it out," she said.

"Some days they don't perceive what you say at all," she said. "They will respond to their names but as far as body parts or names of objects, they may know 100 percent one day and not respond at all the next. This is what parents have to work with every day."

Mrs. Lee said although autistic children do not respond to normal stimuli, most have a "ritual kind of thing," such as dangling a string, thumping fingers against surfaces or handling a ball, that stimulates them.

"But again, it is not something appropriate," she said.

Autistic children are easily distracted. Her students will respond to noises, she said, but not loud or obvious noises.

"It's not the obvious distractions like car horns or the fan," she said. "It could be water running out in the hall. They seem to go for minute things on the floor rather than the larger things."

Mrs. Lee is worried that some parents may think her students are dangerous or violent. She said they are not.

"Autism," she said, "comes from the word 'auto' meaning 'by self,' so it is a child who is in his own world."

"It is not like retardation," she said. "Nobody knows what causes it. It could be biochemical. Their emotional stability and social skills make them unaware of the world."

Mrs. Lee said the severity of autism varies. Some autistic children are self-abusive and will bite or hit themselves, or bang their heads against hard surfaces.

Others, such as her students, respond to their names, have some eye contact and sometimes want attention. Others are able to live in group homes and hold down jobs.

A few symptoms of autism are poor language and social skills, little eye contact, unstable moods or inappropriate responses and lack of response to sensory stimuli. The autistic child may experience acute illogical anxiety over a common occurrence or object, or fail to perceive a real danger.

CHECK BATTERY FOR WINTER

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — Winter weather reduces battery efficiency, warns the Automotive Information Council here, which suggests that having a battery checked before cold weather sets in could save a time-consuming and expensive road service call.

It may be time to shop for a replacement if your present battery is more than four years old and showing signs of weakness, such as an engine that cranks slowly or dimming headlights, advises the AIC.

Mrs. Metcalfe won the award for her chairmanship of the West Virginia "Get It Together" seatbelt-child safety restraint program, which aims at educating and interesting the residents of the state in safety belt and child safety seat use.

Explanation Needed

Government spokesmen expressed surprise at the very large caches of Cuban and Russian weapons (and ammunition) on Grenada; and Americans on the island were surprised by the military talents of a Cuban "labor battalion" constructing the military-type air strip.

Figures given the public on the number of Cubans in Grenada ranged from those provided by Castro to pure guesswork ... which is neither "intelligence" nor intelligent. The lack of important and even critical information is dangerous and hard to excuse.

The sometimes conflicting information on developments in Grenada, from Washington sources, resembled at times the fable of three blind men asked to describe an elephant. In a way, that was understandable because there is always a degree of confusion in battlefield reporting.

Still, our intelligence services have a lot of explaining to do.

The extraordinary air strip on the island has been a point of concern for many months, and there should have been no surprises except that which the United States provided Cuba, the Soviet Union and the Grenadian "government."

Trial Settled Issue

The facts have been heard in orderly fashion and in court and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has been acquitted. He is, and should be, totally free to pursue his political career. That career apparently will include a run for governor and certainly voters should make their decisions on Jimmy Green based on his record in public service. The questions raised in the concluded trial were settled by the verdict of innocent.

It was an unpleasant time for Lt. Gov. Green and for the state of North Carolina which he serves in the second highest office. While it was an ordeal, it was best for him and for the state that the case was tried after allegations were raised. If the prosecutors had decided not to take the case to trial a cloud would have hung over Green and our state.

Blunt Warning

WASHINGTON — A top-secret Pentagon warning was flashed to Gen. P. X. Kelley, the highly-respected Marine commandant, hours after he said publicly that his personal inspection of the Marine barracks in Beirut showed "very adequate" security.

Kelley was bluntly told by the Defense Department that Congress holds a contrary view and that innumerable investigations soon will aim at proving military negligence in Beirut. Ex-Marines serving in Congress understand that the general's apparent exoneration of the Marine command was intended to rebuild morale, but believe it could severely damage him.

A footnote: Also politically nicked in the aftermath of the Marine tragedy was Secretary of State George Shultz. His congressional testimony "explaining" the Marine presence was privately denounced by many members as only contributing to the confusion.

Cap In Control

Apart from keeping the news media in the dark, the tight Pentagon security insisted on by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and personally approved by President Reagan blocked the rest of the U.S. government from learning about the unfolding drama in Grenada.

No official outside the Defense Department — including those in the State Department, the CIA and the White House's national security staff — was given information that could have been leaked to their favorite reporters. In insisting on total secrecy, Weinberger argued that premature and inaccurate reports from competing government bureaucracies might damage the invasion. Nothing since World War II has approached such information-hoarding by the military.

One important State Department official was forced to use a secure scrambler telephone to obtain rudimentary information from his Pentagon counterpart. Even White House chief of staff James Baker was kept in the dark.

Deaver's Lost Cool

White House aide Michael K. Deaver's sharp tongue, widely felt in Washington the past three years, was directed at Ronald Reagan himself when the president backed away from a Deaver-planned staff shakeup.

"Indecisive!" was one work unbelieving onlookers in the White House heard Deaver direct at Reagan. The president had first agreed to replace William P. Clark as national security adviser with James Baker and move up Deaver from deputy to succeed Baker. A press release announcing the changes had been prepared based Reagan's OK, but he killed it when Clark and other officials dissented strenuously.

Deaver's close personal relationship with the president and first lady has been his trump card in internal White House wars. It remains to be seen whether his outburst will weaken those ties.

Fritz Mondale's Apology

The public apology by front-runner Walter F. Mondale for calling closest pursuer John F. Glenn "anti-Democratic" represented the first public chink in Mondale's wondrously smooth presidential campaign structure.

WASHINGTON — The Oct. 23 massacre in Lebanon provides one more example — as if one were needed! — of the hard choices that confront the rational mind in the midst of an irrational world. In this instance, every choice is a bad choice.

Jimmy Carter faced the same kind of frustration when a mob invaded the American Embassy in Tehran four years ago. Ronald Reagan tasted gall last month in the destruction of the Korean airliner. Now this.

Rational minds and rational governments can respond to conventional situations. Argentina attempts a takeover of the Falklands Islands. Britain reacts with a declaration of war. Ships sail, troops land, missiles fly and men die — but they die according to the ancient rules that govern the force of arms. It is a grim and terrible business, but there is a certain order to it.

What response can be fashioned to the horror in Beirut? The essential elements of the story — the who, the why, the what — defy simple answers. No effective retaliation can be undertaken against a cult of fanatics whose madness embraces suicidal missions. We scarcely know who the perpetrators are. Beyond some blind hatred of the United States, we cannot fathom the reason behind the attack. There was no reason.

The president and his advisers have spent the past few days grappling with the intractable question: What to do now? Do we keep some unspecified number of Marines in Lebanon? Or do we pull them out? The alternative courses are equally unsatisfactory.

As the grumbling on Capitol Hill has made evident, many members of Congress have opposed our commitment in Lebanon from its inception a year ago. My own deep misgivings have been rooted in the pessimistic feeling that nothing — no diplomacy, no military intervention, no resolutions of the United Nations — will halt violence that stems from religious enmity. This is the millennial history of the Middle East. At a less fanatic level, it is the problem that Britain is grappling with in Northern Ireland.

Reagan has explained the "why" of our presence at least 50 times. Those who complain that there is "no policy" toward Lebanon must be deaf or blind. Repeatedly the president has said that the purpose of the multinational force is to "help provide stability as the several armies withdrew, and thereafter to keep the peace as Lebanon establishes its own government to control its own territory."

That purpose may have been impossible of achievement from the beginning, though some hopeful signs have appeared in recent months. In any event, if the Marines are to remain, this is why they will remain.

The alternative, in the short and ugly phrase, is to cut and run — to withdraw from the multinational peacekeeping force and to bring the Marines home. It is not an appealing alternative. Any such order would be interpreted universally as a pusillanimous act. It would be seen as a surrender to terrorists, and it would invite repetitions. The multinational force would be disbanded; diplomatic efforts at internal reconciliation would be set back; factional bloodshed would return. The result might be to carve up Lebanon and to serve most of it to Syria on a platter.

My own thought — it is not a happy thought — is that we must stay the course. The effort to bring Syria into line must be resumed, and new pressures must be brought upon the Gemayel government to make the concessions that might restore some semblance of order. It is inevitable that our Marines will suffer further casualties; no defense is proof against a sniper's bullet or a madman's bomb. We are not done with shedding tears.

But the economic and strategic stakes in the Middle East are high, and the dangers of a timid isolationism cannot be overstated. Tempting as the alternative of withdrawal may be, we can't quit now.

Hardison's Image Doubted

gratifying himself with the man who does.

Those who doubt that Hardison will seek the lieutenant governorship note both the strengths of his opponents and his own political liabilities. In Jordan and former House Speaker Carl Stewart, he faces two articulate and well-organized candidates. They're both perceived as open and progressive candidates who can appeal to a broad base of Democratic voters.

Hardison, on the other hand, is widely resented for his role in keeping the power of the Senate in control of a very few hands and for his often blatant use of the power bestowed on him. Among party activists, he's perceived as a throwback to the politics of old eastern North Carolina, and is inability to get organized early cost him the support of a great many business people who've jumped on other bandwagons.

Hardison's detractors fail to take into account the many friends he's made through the use of his power and his undeniable claim to being the most conservative Democrat in the field.

Still, it's fair to say that Hardison is an underdog. If he loses, he's out of politics and he may just love politics too much to take that risk. "He'll never push his chips into the middle of the table," one senior Democrat said. "He'll be out of it in two weeks," said another.

So, Hardison's detractors say he'll strike a deal. But forget about any deal with Stewart who almost beat Green in 1980 and who has loudly criticized Green's closed power structure in the Senate.

A deal with Jordan appears almost an unlikely. Hardison can make trouble for Jordan on the political right and cut into his base of business support. But much of Jordan's support comes from party elements who have fought Green for eight years. They see him as a man who'll open the Senate to new blood. Also, Stewart has been sniping at Jordan, claiming he'll be unable to break up the powerful clique that now runs the Senate. Any deal with Hardison would seriously undermine Jordan's credibility and give credence to Stewart's charges.

Neither Jordan nor Stewart count Hardison out. Both realize he could run strongly. Both also say he'd be an important member of the 1985 Senate. But neither is willing to promise him an important job.

Hardison says he's not looking for a deal because he's running for lieutenant governor. But despite the free lunch, many Democrats still don't believe him. If he runs, they say, it won't be because he didn't want a deal. It'll be because no one would make one with him.

Public Forum

To the editor:

At the risk of offending friends of a contrary opinion, I feel compelled to express a note of thanks and admiration for President Reagan's courage and decisive action in Grenada.

The media expressed outrage for having been delayed, quite briefly, in reporting on the situation on site. I don't feel that brief delay has undermined freedom or threatened the Constitution.

As for the legality of the action, most of us are not sufficiently informed about the numerous treaties, etc., to be able to make an informed judgment.

What is incredible is that we seem to expect the president to come upon a "crime in progress" on our doorstep, call for a grand jury investigation, etc., and, only then, actually do something of a preventive nature. Such behavior by our local policemen would not be tolerated.

Our preoccupation with the legal processes seems to have diverted our attention totally from the crime already in progress. And the criminals don't follow "the rules." I don't know what President Reagan's real motives were, but I suspect that his motives were at least as honorable as are those of his loudest critics.

Let me mention for clarification that I'm a Democrat and Mr. Reagan isn't my idol. But an attempt at fairness is called for, regardless of party affiliations.

Strength For Today

We often hear the statement that we get out of life what we put into it. This is true. In the spiritual realm, however, we get out of life what God puts into it. For we can never even begin to understand the nature of the Christian life until we realize that what we have come to call salvation is in reality a great gift from God.

What God gives us is the touch of his hand, the word of his assurance, the power which becomes ours when the life of the worshipper and the life of God comingle. Something takes place in the experience of salvation which exceeds in magnitude and significance everything else in a believer's life.

The theme of the netire Bible is salvation — that overwhelming experience which occurs when God gives man his spiritual gift of illumination, power, peace and insight.

So let us remember how poor we are even in the midst of all the riches of material civilization, until we receive this one great gift of God.

Management Costs

NEW YORK (AP) — Plain nonsense, says Prof. Eugene Jennings when he hears America's economic problems blamed on a lost ability to produce, and a badly eroded work ethic.

"Horsefeathers," he snaps. Instead, the professor blames bad management, going so far as to say the recent recession was unlike any other since the 1930s in that it can be laid at the doorstep of those who managed the nation's corporations.

Jennings is delivering that message these days to assemblies of corporate executives and directors, who traditionally meet at this time of year in sunny, remote, informal spas to consider their company's vital issues.

This year the big subject is revitalization, and Jennings is telling them they probably cannot succeed in that goal unless they admit that management itself might have sapped the corporation's strength.

What happened, he says, "was a direct result of unearned, easy growth in the 1960s" that caused many companies to become smug about success, and to institutionalize practices they felt were responsible for it.

In doing so, he maintains, they produced "a highly rigid, bureaucratic and authority-oriented" corporation with an "ossified management structure" that couldn't contend with the tougher times of the 1970s.

"Management became inner-directed, employees were neglected and middle management was taken for granted," said Jennings, professor of business administration in Michigan State University's graduate school of business.

There were other consequences too: Morale sagged, and innovation was discouraged. Growth became forced, often through acquisitions. In effect, corporate chiefs became portfolio managers rather than business developers.

They paid themselves well for the misdirected ideas. "Rewards for top management accrued regardless of performance and increases in shareholder values," says Jennings, a confidential adviser to many corporate chairmen.

In less than 10 years, he says, top management accrued in real dollars about 2.5 times their wages of the 1960s. And the total cost of top management as a percentage of total administrative costs tripled from the 1960s.

"We threw people and money at problems," he observes. "Management became top-heavy, costly and clumsy."

Now, in reaction, many companies are seeking to go back to the more solid ways of the years before the 1960s. They may fail, says Jennings. The buzzword is excellence, but it doesn't mean excellence will be achieved, he says.

He explains: The revitalization being sought is being coerced by economics rather than emanating from insight and conviction. When prosperity returns, he predicts, many managements will return to sloppy practices.

Some Cells Elude Body's Defenses

Cancer Study May Help Organ Transplants

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers who have discovered that some cancer cells are able to elude the body's defenses say the finding overturns accepted notions about the workings of the immune system and may hold the key to preventing rejection of transplanted organs.

The cancer cells apparently "turn off" the gene for a substance that causes the body to recognize a cell as an invader and destroy it, one of the researchers, Rene Bernards of the State University of Leiden in the Netherlands, said Wednesday.

"Nobody expected that such a gene could be turned off," Bernards said in a telephone interview.

The gene triggers production of a component of what are called the class I major histocompatibility antigens. These antigens, found on every cell in the body except for red blood cells and sperm cells, enable the body to distinguish its own cells from foreign cells.

They are also responsible for the rejection of transplanted organs, and the discovery that they can be suppressed suggests that it may be possible to manipulate them to prevent such rejection.

"It's a very interesting development," said Phillip Sharp, a biologist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. "Understanding what controls the synthesis of the major histocompatibility antigens is an important area of science."

The research, directed by Alex van der Eb, professor of tumor biology at the State University of Leiden, was reported in the latest issue of Nature magazine.

"This is a completely new way to induce a cancer — by circumventing the immune system," Bernards said in a telephone interview.

The new findings grew out of an effort to discover why there are such great differences in the abilities of certain viruses to cause cancer.

One virus studied by van der Eb, called adenovirus 12, is an extremely potent cancer-causing agent in animals. But a very similar virus, adenovirus 5, is not.

Van der Eb infected animal cells with both types of virus. He found that the cells infected with the dangerous virus, adenovirus 12, lacked one component of the major histocompatibility antigens. Thus it was not recognized and was attacked by white blood cells called killer T cells, which recognize foreign histocompatibility antigens.

Van der Eb and his colleagues are trying to determine how the adenoviruses turn off the production of the histocompatibility antigen. If that process could be understood, doctors might learn how to control it, Sharp said.

Adenoviruses do not appear to cause cancer in humans, and "the question now is whether there are human forms of cancer that have reduced expression of this antigen," Bernards said. But that question may already have been answered. Another group of Dutch researchers has some intriguing evidence that the antigen is turned off — or at least toned down — in melanoma, a skin cancer, Bernards said.

Sweetener Lowers Blood Pressure In Lab Animals

BOSTON (AP) — The new sugar substitute called NutraSweet, now being used in some diet soda, will lower high blood pressure in lab animals, scientists reported today, as the sweetener's maker denied suggestions that it might brighten human moods.

Dr. Richard J. Wurtman of Massachusetts Institute of Technology said it's still not clear whether the sweetener lowers blood pressure in people. But if it does, he said, it might someday be recommended as a "medical food."

However, an official of G.D. Searle & Co., which makes NutraSweet, criticized the way the study was conducted and said he thinks its conclusions cannot be applied to people.

The sweetener, known generically as aspartame, is used in a variety of low-calorie foods, including powdered ice tea and milk shakes.

The researchers injected high doses of it into rats that inherit high blood pressure, a condition doctors call hypertension. It lowered their blood pressure by about 15 percent.

"It was the kind of fall you might get if you gave somebody with human hypertension a mild antihypertensive agent, like a diuretic," Wurtman said in an interview.

He speculated that aspartame might also influence mood, appetite and sleep.

However, Max Downham, vice president of planning at Searle, said, "We feel that Dr. Wurtman is wrong on this. There is no question in our minds about the safety of aspartame."

Wurtman conducted the study with Dr. Timothy J. Maher of the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy. It was published in a letter in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Wurtman said that aspartame probably would not have any effect on those with normal blood pressure, and people should not worry about using it.

"At this point, I think people can go right on doing what they have been," he said. "The cool season is approaching, and we can assume that consumption is going to go down, anyhow. It would be nice if by next summer we know whether there is any basis for concern in people."

The researchers believe that aspartame raises brain levels of an amino acid called tyrosine.

Wurtman said that theoretically, aspartame could also increase people's appetite for carbohydrates, make them take longer to fall asleep and improve mood by acting as an antidepressant.

Device Could Help Medics

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Researchers have started developing a monitoring device that would help medics find wounded soldiers and assess the extent of their injuries, all by remote control, a scientist says.

The wristwatch-like device, called a Personal Monitor and Communicator, would establish whether a soldier was conscious and relay vital information about his condition to medical workers, said Dr. Willis Tacker, research scientist at Purdue University's Biomedical Engineering Center.

Tacker, the director of the project, announced the development plans here Wednesday during a meeting of the Association of Military Surgeons.

"The device will act as a two-way transmitter, capable of receiving signals and relaying information back to a receiver," Tacker said. "The transmission will tell medics where a wounded person is located and how badly he is injured."

The monitoring device also could be used to locate soldiers buried under rubble.

Nichols also said about $600 worth of property was taken from a home at 419A Wyatt St. The theft, reported at 3:23 a.m., included two .22 caliber rifles, a television and a pair of pants, a shirt and a leather coat.

Strikers Cut Bus Service

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Picket lines went up at bus terminals across the nation and passengers scrambled to find alternate transportation today as 12,700 workers struck Greyhound Lines Inc. after balking at a company demand for wage cuts.

The walkout by members of the Amalgamated Transit Union, which began at midnight, knocked out 60 percent of the nation's intercity bus service. No new talks were scheduled, and Greyhound officials said they did not know when service might resume.

Rival companies added extra routes and buses and honored Greyhound tickets to make up for the lost service, and Amtrak also accepted Greyhound tickets, but long passenger lines were still reported in some places. Greyhound officials began shutting down operations Tuesday afternoon to avoid stranding passengers.

As several strikers picketed the Greyhound depot in Portland, Ore., today, dozens of passengers complained that the walkout had left them without transportation.

Scott Moore said he had planned to take a Greyhound bus from Portland to his home in Lincoln City on Wednesday night, but the strike left him stranded.

"No other bus goes there," Moore said. "I sure don't know what's going on."

In San Francisco, about 25 workers began picketing the Greyhound station when the strike began. One passenger, told he could go to other bus companies to get to his destination, responded angrily. "Why should I have to pay for cab fare when I bought this ticket?"

The company is seeking 9.5 percent salary cuts for drivers and terminal, maintenance and office workers, saying the cuts are necessary for the bus division to remain competitive, said John W. Teets, chairman of the board of Phoenix-based Greyhound Corp.

"Greyhound's higher labor costs prohibit us from effectively competing against discount airlines and other bus companies," he said.

GAO Says Large Farms Draw Huge Federal PIK Payments

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost three dozen large farms are receiving government-owned commodities worth millions of dollars in return for not growing crops this year under the Reagan administration's payment-in-kind program, congressional investigators say.

The General Accounting Office report issued Wednesday said the huge payments should be illegal under a law that limits compensation paid to farmers for diverting crop acreage to $50,000 per producer.

The GAO found the large payments when it surveyed 708 farms in nine states. The study was not a scientific sampling, but was intended specifically to ferret out big transfers of government cotton, rice and grain to farmers who participated in PIK — the Agriculture Department's latest program to cut production by giving farmers commodities for idling part of their acreage.

Details of the study were to be the subject of a hearing today in a House Ways and Means subcommittee.

Rep. Fortney H. Stark, D-Calif., the subcommittee chairman who requested the study, said the department "seems to have developed hybrid strains of wheat, rice and cotton plants that bloom with dollar bills, creating a rare new species for the enjoyment of rich corporate farmers."

The GAO, Congress' investigative arm, found the average farm in its sample would get $175,000 worth of commodities. Thirty-five of the farms were due to receive more than $500,000 each in government-owned surpluses, and seven farms would receive upwards of $2 million each.

All seven farms in the top category, the GAO said, are in California. Six are cotton farms and one grows primarily rice. The agency report did not release the names of the farms.

"Of the farms in our survey, those receiving the largest PIK payments are cotton farms in California," the GAO said. "These are followed by California rice farms and Midwestern corn farms. Texas cotton, Arkansas rice, and wheat and grain sorghum farms will receive PIK commodities valued at lesser amounts."

The agency also sent a legal opinion to the Agriculture Department this week contending it is against the law to pay more than $50,000 in land-diversion compensation for any single farm. The limits on such payments should apply to payments in kind as well as in cash, the agency said. USDA said it is studying the opinion, but it has previously reviewed the law and believes the limits do not apply to PIK.

The program has been the target of repeated criticism since it was introduced as a way to trim production and thus hold down government stockpiles of wheat, corn, rice and cotton, swelled by bumper crops and low export demand. Lower surpluses would mean higher market prices and lower government outlays for farm subsidies, the logic went.

Agriculture Secretary John Block said the program has achieved those goals, and he called PIK "the most successful farm program in history." His department also has maintained that in order to effectively reduce surpluses, large farms would have to be enticed into participating.

The largest single payment GAO found — $3.7 million — is going to a corporate cotton farm in California. That includes 14,000 bales of cotton worth $3.6 million and 29,000 bushels of wheat valued at $115,000.

Another corporate farm, which operates in Nebraska, Texas and Arkansas, will get $3.5 million in corn and wheat, the office said.

Launch Is Set Nov. 28

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. and European space officials have set Nov. 28 as the new launch date for the European-built Spacelab and a six-man crew on space shuttle Columbia, even though several experiments will be useless because of bad sun angles that late in the year.

The decision was made Wednesday after the National Aeronautics and Space Administration offered a free ride on future flights for the missed experiments. Two earlier dates that would have afforded good lighting were postponed for technical reasons.

The agreement came during a trans-Atlantic telephone call between James M. Beggs, NASA's administrator, and Erik Quistgaard, a Dane who is director-general of the European Space Agency.

Beggs was in Washington, Quistgaard at the European agency's headquarters in Paris.

They considered two dates for the launch: Nov. 28 and Feb. 28. NASA favored the earlier date, but several Spacelab scientists objected because seven of 38 experiments to be carried in the $1.1 billion research lab would not be able to function in the adverse lighting conditions in late November.

early December. Some wanted to wait until the next favorable period in late February.

During the Wednesday telephone conference Beggs told Quistgaard that NASA will make space available at no cost for the missed experiments on future shuttle missions and accomplish them all by mid-1985. Four of the experiments are European, two American and one Japanese.

Customs Service Bolstering Effort To Curb Drug Traffic

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Customs Service expects to throw new resources into the battle against drug smuggling, a problem a House report says is overwhelming the nation's capacity to contain.

"Many, if not all, of the shortcomings cited in the report have been or are being addressed by the Customs Service," Dennis Murphy, a spokesman for the service, said Wednesday following release of the report by a subcommittee of the Government Operations Committee.

"The drug smuggling threat has overwhelmed this nation's capacity to contain it," the report said. "Even in those areas where extraordinary emphasis has been placed, interdiction has been only marginally successful."

Murphy said efforts to combat drug smuggling "increased three- or fourfold last year" and included such steps as creation of the National Border Interdiction System in the office of the vice president, which is just getting off the ground. That has been "a tremendous shot in the arm," Murphy said.

The service also expects next year to use military hardware it has been negotiating to acquire, including airborne radar platforms to help detect low-flying smuggling planes, he added.

The House report said the service now relies on radar scanning by the Federal Aviation Administration and North American Air Defense Command for high- and mid-altitude flights.

"These facilities can detect the smuggler who flies in that upper altitude environment, but their utility in support of the Customs mission is limited because the smuggler usually understands and avoids the FAANORAD coverage by flying at low altitudes which they cannot cover," the report said. "He knows that as long as he flies at low altitude and remains a reasonable distance from the actual radar site, he is assured of an undetected border penetration."

The report cited the need to help Bahamians interdict drug smugglers, who use those islands as a way station between South America and Florida.

"The Customs Service has been given the responsibility to interdict drugs coming into this country from South America, but they haven't been given the resources needed to do the job," said

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., chairman of the subcommittee.

"They don't have the radars needed to detect smugglers, they don't have the kind of airplanes needed to intercept smugglers, and they don't have helicopters fast enough to get arrest teams to the smuggler landing sites. They fly a handful of junk airplanes that they seized from smugglers years ago."

He said the subcommittee found weaknesses in each of the eight Customs air support branches across the southern border of the United States.

"Even where special efforts have been made, such as with the Vice President's South Florida Task Force, we determined that there was insufficient law enforcement presence to deter smugglers for long," English said. "Today, there is more cocaine on the streets of Miami than there was before the task force started, and it's purer and cheaper than it has ever been."

Drug Abuse Still High Despite Some Reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — While use of marijuana, cocaine and other drugs has leveled off nationwide, overall drug abuse remains alarmingly high, according to the director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

"The levels of use by our young people are probably greater than in any other industrialized country," William Pollin, M.D., told the House Select Committee on Narcotics Wednesday.

Two of every three students have tried some drug while in high school, Pollin said, and one in every five people has used heroin, hallucinogens, amphetamines, sedatives or some other drug in the past year.

The evidence of leveling off comes from national surveys of high school seniors, households, and drug treatment centers. Pollin said increased public awareness of the dangers of drug use and rigorous efforts to curtail supply and punish offenders are reasons for the stabilization.

"Until the late 1970s, there was a major debate in this country" about whether drug use was dangerous, he said. "We really learned more about the health consequences of these drugs ... and we finally began to communicate effectively that knowledge."

"A very important change in direction has occurred. I am personally convinced that they (the findings) are not an aberration."

But Rep. Ralph Hall, D-Texas, said: "The information we have shows that the abuse of heroin and cocaine, as well as the demand for treatment, is up."

"You talk with any police officer in any major city, you talk with any social worker," said Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J. "They'll tell you we're loaded to the gills."

Pollin agreed that supplies of some drugs were up and prices down, but he linked both to a decline in use. Addicts probably are using more, he said, and that is why the general decline in use is not seen at hospitals and treatment centers.

"I don't believe there is any basic contradiction in decreased use and increased supplies," he said.

Cleaning Can Reduce Lead In Child's Body

BOSTON (AP) — Keeping floors mopped and children's hands clean will substantially reduce high levels of lead in youngsters' bodies, a study today shows.

Children pick up lead, a metal that can cause learning problems and retardation, when they crawl around their homes and then put their fingers in their mouths.

The researchers said that keeping houses free of lead is difficult unless people are shown where the concentrations are high.

"I want to be cautious about not labeling these families as being dirty," said Dr. Evan Charney, who directed the study. "That's probably not the case. It's very hard, unless you know where the lead spots are, to do the cleaning correctly."

No one knows how much lead is safe. However, more than 600,000 children in the United States may have lead levels that exceed federal standards.

In the latest study, researchers mopped families' floors twice a month and gave them cleaning instructions in an effort to cut down on lead-tainted house dust.

"It is clear," they wrote, "that lead levels in house dust can be reduced by a regular and focused dust-control effort and that the blood lead levels of children residing in those homes can be significantly lowered."

A year after the cleaners began visiting people's homes, the levels of lead in youngsters' blood had dropped 18 percent.

Charney said the findings cast doubt on the effectiveness of programs that strip lead paint off the walls and woodwork of homes where young children live.

"Those programs may not be making a major difference," he said in an interview. "They may be preventing the kids from getting a lot higher lead, but they're probably not helping the kids get much lower."

The study was conducted by doctors from Sinai Hospital in Baltimore, and it was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Two research assistants went into the homes of 14 children twice a month and mopped the floors and windowsills. They identified spots in the house where lead dust was especially thick and urged the adults to scrub them two or three times a week. They also instructed parents to wash the children's hands before meals and at bedtime.

When the study started, all the youngsters had blood levels of lead that were above 30 micrograms per deciliter, the safety level established by the Centers for Disease Control.

Their lead levels were compared with those of 35 other children whose homes were not in the cleaning program.

Reagan Praises King As One Who 'Stirred Nation'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the United States has made historic strides battling racial discrimination over the last three decades, but that "traces of bigotry still mar America."

Reagan made the observation Wednesday as he signed legislation honoring the late civil rights leader, Martin Luther King Jr., with a national holiday. Beginning in 1986, it will be celebrated on the third Monday in January.

Reagan, who originally opposed honoring King with a national holiday, praised him as a man who "stirred our nation to the very depths of its soul" and said he had "awakened something strong and true: a sense that true justice must be colorblind."

Veterans of the civil rights movement, such as Jesse Jackson, the Rev. Ralph Abernathy, and Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, joined with congressional leaders at the signing ceremony in the Rose Garden.

Together, they softly sang, "We Shall Overcome" — the anthem of King's non-violent crusade against segregation.

His widow, Coretta Scott

King, told the crowd, "America is a more democratic nation, a more just nation, a more peaceful nation because Martin Luther King became her pre-eminent non-violent commander."

Reagan recalled the late civil rights leader's historic speech to a crowd of 250,000 at the Lincoln Memorial in 1963.

"If American history grows from two centuries to 20," said Reagan, "his words that day will never be forgotten: 'I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia, the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood.'"

The president noted that King was assassinated at the age of 39, in 1968. "But those 39 short years had changed America forever," the president said, mentioning passage of the 1964 Civil Rights Act and the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

"We've made historic strides since Rosa Parks refused to go to the back of the bus" in Montgomery, Ala., in 1955, said Reagan. "As a democratic people, we can take pride in the knowledge that we Americans recognized a grave injustice and took action to correct it, and we should remember that in far too many countries people like Dr. King never had the opportunity to speak out, at all."

He said King's holiday should serve as a reminder to follow the principles that King espoused: "Thou shalt love thy God with all thy heart and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

At least temporarily, civil rights leaders put aside their policy differences with the administration and their anger over Reagan's earlier opposition to honoring King with a national holiday.

"Well, we've all had high and low moments and this is one of his high moments," said Jackson, an outspoken Reagan critic and newly announced candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Jackson said the only thing that mattered was Reagan's signature on the bill.

"The effect is that the civil rights movement and its place in American history is institutionalized, and that's very significant," Jackson said.

Reagan originally had expressed concern over the cost of honoring King with a national holiday, and said he would have preferred a day of recognition.

At a news conference Oct. 19, Reagan publicly speculated on whether secret FBI files would show that King was a communist sympathizer. For that remark, the president later apologized to Mrs. King.

Reagan also wrote former New Hampshire Gov. Meldrim Thomson that the public's perception of King was "based on an image, not reality."

Mrs. King told reporters she had accepted Reagan's apology for his news conference remark. As for his letter to Thomson, she said, "I am not questioning motives at this point. I think we have to accept what people say and then we watch what they do."

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes noted Reagan's apology to Mrs. King and said, "I don't think a day like today calls for discussion from us on that kind of controversy."

to reaffirm their candidate's commitment to participate in a debate sponsored by the caucus.

Democrats Seek 3-Hour Debate For Candidates

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats, seeking a "crucible-type test" for the party's 1984 presidential contenders, are trying to arrange a three-hour televised forum early next year moderated by Ted Koppel and Phil Donahue.

"The idea of the debate is not just to get their (the candidates') rote answers to questions," one House Democrat said Wednesday. "It's to get some idea of how they are as a person, a crucible-type test."

Several sources cautioned that the details are far from settled. In fact, the candidates have not yet been approached with the plan as it is being developed, although all seven announced candidates have agreed in principle to participate in the debate to be sponsored by the House Democratic caucus. Democratic sources, who asked not to be identified, said the House Democrats are trying to work out a plan for the Public Broadcasting Service to televise a three-hour forum on Jan. 15, at a site to be determined.

Aides in several campaigns generally declined comment on the plan, except to reaffirm their candidate's commitment to participate in a debate sponsored by the caucus.

Clark May Win Confirmation Easily

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee says Interior Secretary-designate William P. Clark should easily win confirmation as James G. Watt's successor, despite Clark's persistent refusal to say how he will run the department.

Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, tentatively scheduled a committee vote Friday to send the nomination to the Senate floor, although he said the process may be delayed if senators have additional questions to submit to Clark in writing.

A vote Friday would allow the Senate to consider the nomination sometime next week.

In two days of testimony before the panel, Clark persistently refused to commit himself to any changes in policy, processes or personnel at the department. He said his mandate from the president was to review those matters, and he promised senators no more.

His reluctance to take firm positions was so extreme that at one point he had to be pressed to say how he wanted history to remember him in the post.

Preliminary Report Shows State Fair Sentencing Act Works

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Fair Sentencing Act has accomplished some of the Legislature's goals while avoiding some problems anticipated by critics, shows a recent Institute of Government study.

The law, passed by the General Assembly in 1979 and heavily amended in 1981, sets a presumptive prison sentence for each felony. Its purpose was to make felony sentences more uniform and predictable.

The law, applied to felonies since July 1981, lists aggravating and mitigating factors for a judge to consider in deciding whether to impose a sentence other than the presumptive term.

Judges are required to explain in writing their reasons for imposing a different term.

"Our determinate sentencing law did accomplish some of what it was intended to accomplish," said Stevens H. Clarke, who wrote the report. "It apparently did not create some of the problems that were predicted."

But Clarke said the study used statistics from the first year the law was effective. He said future studies would be needed to determine whether the Institute's findings still hold true.

The study, conducted for the Governor's Crime Commission with a grant from the National Institute of Justice and the U.S. Justice Department, shows that:

- The length of active sentences for felonies has varied less since the law took effect and generally the time served has been reduced.
- Before the law took effect, active maximum prison terms had a median of 60 months. After the law took effect, the median was 36 months.
- The study shows the defendant's chances of receiving an active prison sentence increased from 55 percent in 1979 to 63 percent in 1981-82.
- The disadvantages of black defendants in sentencing has disappeared. Before the law took effect, the length of blacks' felony active sentences were an estimated 7.8 months longer than whites' terms.
- The prison population does not appear to be growing. The state Department of Correction has forecast the prison population in 1986 will be 1,000 inmates less with the new law.

- Judges seldom found aggravating or mitigating factors that allowed them to change the presumptive sentence.

The study showed that written reasons were given in only 17 percent of the felony cases. Judges more often found aggravating factors than mitigating factors, the study shows.

- Fears that plea bargains would increase did not come true.

The report shows that jury trials dropped from 5.7 percent of all defendants' dispositions to 3.2 percent while the rate of guilty pleas remained constant and the number pleading guilty with a recorded plea agreement increased from 33 percent to 39 percent.

- Concern that it would take longer to dispose of cases was not supported by the study. The median time from arrest to disposition declined from 59 days to 48 days.

Apples Are Small

By The Associated Press

North Carolina apple growers say they will harvest 400 million pounds of apples this year but they say the smaller size of the fruit is forcing prices down.

The harvest, which began in early September, was 85 percent complete at the beginning of this week. Carl Cross of the state Department of Agriculture's Crop Reporting Service said North Carolina apples are bringing about 15 cents a pound.

IN TUNE — Santa Claus keeps in tune with the times as he wears a pair of headphones in this bulletin board on Times Square in New York Wednesday. Streets in New York and

Phillips Says Study Suggests More Homework Is Needed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina schools may need to place stronger emphasis on homework based on a study showing half of the state's public school students do less than three hours of homework a week, Superintendent Craig Phillips says.

"There probably needs to be a little stronger emphasis on carefully planned, out-of-school activities as they relate to what happens in school," Phillips said after the study was reported to the state Board of Education. "There probably needs to be a more carefully laid out policy about how much time should be allotted to homework."

Twenty-five percent of the state's pupils study three to five hours per week, while another 20 percent do five to 10 hours' worth of homework per week, said the study by the Department of Public Instruction's Division of Research.

The study was based on surveys of 87,708 sixth-grade students and 83,901 ninth-grade students during the spring of 1982 and the spring of 1983.

The study cautions against concluding that doing more assigned homework causes higher achievement test scores.

But it adds, "Generally, students who report doing increasing amounts of assigned homework per week score higher on tests of general academic achievement than their peers who study less."

Also, the study says, students who do no assigned homework average well below the national grade level and thus score lower than those who study.

For instance, sixth-graders who said they did between five and 10 hours of homework per week scored at the eighth-grade level on their standardized reading test. On the language test, these same students scored at the 9.7 level, or as the average ninth-grader does during the seventh month of the school year.

N.C. Republicans Set For Reagan Visit On Friday

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Republican officials in Onslow County have praised President Reagan's decision to attend memorial services for Marines killed in Lebanon and Grenada, but not for political reasons.

The president's visit to Camp Lejeune and Cherry Point Marine Air Station on Friday will be "a shot in the arm for the Marines and their families," said Beth Sloan, the Republican chairman of the Onslow County Board of Commissioners.

"It's great of him to take the time to be with families of the Marines," she said, adding that she would not attend the ceremonies to avoid any appearance of political considerations.

Robert Grady, a Republican member of the Jacksonville Town Council, said Reagan's visit might mean more to Marine families in the future than it does now.

"I don't think there is much anyone can say to them at this time that will help," Grady said. "But I think in time they can look back to the President's visit to the memorial service as recognition of the contribution their loved ones made and that it was recognized by their country."

Family members of Marines killed or wounded in the military actions will meet privately with Reagan and his wife, Nancy, before they return to Washington.

Lt. Col. Richard Weidner, officer in charge of attendance at the memorial service, said the first priority for the 5,000 available seats will be the wives of the victims.

"We will have members of the 1st Battalion, 8th Marines, and then we want as many Marines as we can from the 8th Marine Regiment (the home unit of most of the Marines serving in Lebanon)," he said Wednesday.

Weidner said the memorial service will also be carried by closed circuit television to two gymnasiums on the base, the base theatre and a base pavillion for civilians and Marines who can not get into the service.

A spokesman for the Camp Lejeune Public Affairs Office said the names of dignitaries attending the service may be released Friday.

Federal Judge Sets Standards For Tallying Municipal Votes

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A U.S. District Court judge has signed an order setting out the method for cities to count straight-party ballots with cross-over votes in partisan elections next week.

The order signed by Judge Woodrow W. Jones resulted from a compromise reached by attorneys for the state and for voters challenging the state law on ballot counting.

The attorneys said the order allows cities with voting machines to count cross-over votes. Voters in those cities who pull the straight-party lever also must cancel one of the votes if they want to cross over and vote for a candidate of the other party.

The order will not allow cities with paper ballots or ballots that are counted by optical screening machines to count cross-over votes. Attorneys said that's because it is unclear which vote must be taken from the straight-party ticket and given to the other candidate.

The method for counting cross-over votes has been in question since a North Carolina law was declared unconstitutional by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va. That law requires only the straight-party vote be counted.

Former Republican Rep. William Hendon challenged the law after Democrat James M. Clarke captured his 11th District congressional seat in 1980. Hendon said the law may have cost him the election.

Jones still must hold a hearing on how the state will count cross-over votes. The interim order was signed because cities needed immediate instructions for counting ballots in Nov. 8 partisan elections.

There are about 18 cities with partisan elections, according to the state Board of Elections.

I-40 Work Slows

KENANSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The completion of Interstate 40 from Wilmington to Benson may be another 10 years away, Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., told Southeastern North Carolina leaders.

State Transportation Secretary William Roberson confirmed Wednesday that the DOT plans to recommend adoption of a 10-year plan for completing I-40 at its Nov. 18 meeting.

Roberson said the six-year timetable sought by I-40 promoters is "too short unless we get a lot more money than anticipated."

"Railroad overpasses will become a major need as Greenville continues to grow."

"We should do all possible to lessen traffic jams caused by trains."

NEED FOR RAILROAD OVERPASSES

WHAT WE HAVE:

- Freight service by 6 trains daily.
- Increasing auto traffic on main arteries having train crossings—Evans Street, Memorial Drive and Arlington Boulevard.
- Projected increase in visitors to the Medical Center.
- Nagging traffic delays for our people.
- Concern for safety.

I WILL:

- Encourage long range plans to construct railroad overpasses at key choke points.
- Support efforts to place projects on Department of Transportation priority list.
- Support efforts to obtain governmental grants to alleviate congestion caused by trains crossing city streets.
- Support the city thoroughfare plan to relieve congestion on main traffic arteries.

Services Held For Marines Killed In Lebanon

By The Associated Press
Mourners at funerals for an Asheboro Marine killed in Lebanon and a Fort Bragg Army captain who died in the U.S. invasion of Grenada tried to smile through their tears and recall the slain men with pride.

MARINE FUNERAL — The mother of Lance Cpl. Johnny Williamson of Asheboro weeps into the flag that was presented to her after his funeral Wednesday. Williamson was killed in Beirut Oct. 23 during a terrorist bombing of Marine barracks. Marine Chief Warrant Officer Jim Carter sits beside Mrs. Williamson. (AP Laserphoto) of Fort Lee, Va., said he was at a loss for words at the funeral for Army Capt. Michael Francis Ritz, one of two Fort Bragg soldiers killed on Grenada.

"There's nothing I can say today that will take the sorrow out of your hearts," he told mourners in a small chapel. "All of us are going to have to try to smile through our tears."

Williamson's mother, Jewel Williamson, sobbed as two Marines folded the flag that covered her son's casket at Asheboro's Oaklawn Cemetery and presented it to her. She held the flag to her face, then laid two red roses on top of the coffin, saying, "I thank you for my son for 25 years."

Williamson's father, Bill Williamson, gently touched his son's casket as he left the flower-ringed graveside.

Williamson, 25, was among 30 North Carolina Marines killed in a terrorist bombing in Beirut. Eleven Marines from the state are listed as missing and presumed dead.

Maj. Kevin McHale of the Marine reserve unit in Greensboro read a poem written by a Marine, called "Orders for an Angel."

"If he must travel to a distant land, take tighter hold of his hand," McHale read. "When your orders have been carried through, return to heaven and bring your Marine, too."

As the service at the cemetery ended, seven

Marines fired their guns in the air three times in a salute to their slain comrade and a member of the 82nd Airborne played taps.

Ritz, 28, a native of Petersburg, Va., was a company commander in the 325th Infantry, one of the first 82nd Airborne combat units to land on Grenada behind Army rangers who secured one of two airfields on the small Caribbean island.

Ritz's pregnant wife wept as she was handed the flag that covered her husband's coffin and a small box containing his patches and medals. Six rifleman fired three volleys and a bugler standing among headstones at the Fort Bragg Post Cemetery played a slow taps.

The North Carolina services were among several held across the United States Wednesday as families and friends came together for burials and memorial services, consoling themselves that the Marines killed in the Beirut bombing, die not die in vain.

"He's passed the test, he's with the best, he's finally made it home," said Lucian

Ray, reading from the poem he wrote a few days ago for his son, Gunnery Sgt. Charles Ray, 33, who died in Beirut. The elder Ray spoke at a ceremony before his son was buried Wednesday at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.

"He's a hero. We feel his life was not lost in vain," said Joseph Summa, acting police chief of Naugatuck, Conn., where a service was held for Marine Lance Cpl. Dwayne W. Wigglesworth, who also died with members of the Lebanon peacekeeping force.

"Dwayne lived and died for peace," the Rev. Henry Buchan told a crowd of about 120, including the Marine's parents, at Naugatuck's Congregational Church.

At Harper's Ferry, Iowa, 550 people gathered at St. Ann's Roman Catholic Church to console the mother and two sisters of Army Pvt. Russell L. Robinson, who died in the Grenada invasion.

"I know he believed in the invasion even if he never told me," Mrs. Robinson said at Wednesday's wake. "He'd be proud if he knew this (his death) could have helped the cause."

"It is in giving that we receive, and sometimes it is in dying that we give," Marine Col. D.H. Gardner told a crowd of about 1,700 high school students in Revere, Mass., who voted to hold an ecumenical service honoring those killed or wounded in Beirut or Grenada.

"We want the families and friends of the servicemen to know that they do not grieve alone," said Revere High School senior class president Robert Bamberg, 17.

East Assists Raleigh Man

By The Associated Press
Sen. John East, R-N.C., helped Raleigh lawyer Robert Valois field questions about Valois' background as a U.S. Senate subcommittee considered his nomination to the Legal Services Corp. board of directors.

Valois, criticized Wednesday by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, for his anti-union activities, told the Labor and Human Resources panel that he was just doing his job.

"Certainly, I don't accept the label as being a union buster," Valois said, although he acknowledged he had represented the J.P. Stevens Employee Education Committee, a group consisting of anti-union Stevens employees.

Metzenbaum asked if Valois's work wasn't telling companies how to avoid unions.

"Yes," replied Valois. "Part of my advice is to try and have an employer's work environment such that employees do not need a union."

East, another committee member, defended Valois, saying a lawyer's clients shouldn't determine his or her fitness to serve on the board unless some violation of law or ethics was involved.

Valois, a law partner of National Congressional Club chairman Tom Ellis and a former campaign worker for U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was among five Reagan administration nominees at the hearing.

Several, including Valois, have been criticized for allegedly opposing Legal Services aims or for being insensitive to the needs of the poor because they usually represent large organizations and corporations.

Valois and the other nominees heard Wednesday said they supported the corporation's aims and did not favor abolishing it.

But Metzenbaum objected that several of them appeared "extremely conservative in their philosophic thinking, and it's hard to see how they can administer the Legal Services program and be concerned about the poor."

The committee took no action on the nominees Wednesday.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina to-b dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 49.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 4 pound birds. Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is fully steady and the live supply is moderate for a good demand. Weights desirable to heavy. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,781,000, compared to 1,770,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices gained ground today, aided by new signs of an expanding economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 9 1/2 to 1,238.21 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 4 1/2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Several of the nation's largest retailers today reported two-digit sales gains for October.

That news followed two upbeat economic reports from the Commerce Department late Wednesday. New-home sales climbed 13.7 percent in September, and factory orders were up 1.5 percent in the same month.

With all that, however, analysts said traders' enthusiasm was still restrained by doubts about the interest rate outlook.

Today's early volume leaders included Rockwell International, up 1/4 at 29; Inco Ltd., up 1/2 at 13 1/2; American Telephone, unchanged at 61 1/2; and Merrill Lynch, down 1/4 at 37 1/2.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrials climbed 8.03 to 1,237.30.

Advances outpaced declines by almost 2 to 1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 95.21 million shares, against 84.46 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index gained 69 to 95.02. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.15 at 214.20.

Martin Youth Dies In Chase

WILLIAMSTON — Van Tucker Haddock, Jr., a 22-year old Williamston resident, was killed instantly shortly before 11 p.m. Wednesday night following a police chase.

According to police reports, police attempted to stop Haddock, who was riding a motorcycle, on Washington Street downtown. He allegedly took off at a high rate of speed, with police in pursuit.

The report states that at the corner of Harris and North Houghton Streets, less than one mile from downtown, Haddock apparently lost control of the motorcycle which jumped a curb, and hit a utility pole. The impact threw the vehicle and Haddock across the street, where both hit a house, knocking an air conditioner and the window frame loose.

Coroner Jerry Beach said death was instant on impact.

Police are continuing investigation of the accident.

ECU Sees Demonstration On Invasion Of Grenada

Placard-carrying opponents and supporters of the United States' military invasion of Grenada conducted peaceful demonstrations here Wednesday at East Carolina University.

Seven members of the Greenville Peace Committee gathered near the student supply store with signs stating the group's opposition to the U.S. military involvement in the Caribbean island.

Edith Webber, a committee member, said the campus activities were organized to demonstrate opposition to the United States' use of military means to change the government of Grenada.

"Not that I had any love for the government that came into Grenada," Ms. Webber said. "It was certainly highhanded and I would like to think vastly inferior to anything that we know in the United States."

She said the group opposed the methods employed by the United States, saying Grenada is a case for international law or the Organization of American States (OAS).

Ms. Webber, an English instructor at ECU, said, "It seems that if we are ever going to have stability or security for the people of the world, we have to do it through an international mechanism."

Eight supporters of the U.S. government's position lined up Wednesday for a counter demonstration after the peace committee activities began. The support group, organized by the College Republicans on campus, was led by Steve Sherbin.

Sherbin said Wednesday that his group believes the United States serves a purpose in Lebanon. He said it is disappointing that people do not support their government. Sherbin or other members of the campus club could not be reached this morning for comment.

Peace committee member Patrick O'Neal said Wednesday's counter demonstration by the Republicans marked the first time that any feedback had been generated on campus. "It was nice to see some interest," he said.

O'Neal said he feels the invasion of Grenada was "clearly a terrorist act and a violation of international law."

O'Neal said President Reagan is taking offense at the military activities being referred to as an invasion rather than a rescue mission but he said "it's quite obvious it was designed to overthrow the sovereign state of Grenada. I think a measure of the response to the invasion and to really see how much of a mistake it was one only has to look at the international response to it," he said. "There really is no international support for Reagan's actions."

The spokesman said a "soapbox forum" was scheduled for today on campus with Grenada as the focus.

Wake Hopeful Speaks Here

Betty Ann Knudsen of Wake County, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for secretary of state, spoke here Wednesday night at a meeting of the Eastern North Carolina Computer Users Group, discussing "Megatrends."

She told the group, "It's trite to say that computers are synonymous with the future, but administrators who ignore this statement, governmental units which don't take advantage of it, and individuals who are certain it will never touch them personally are going to be left behind as the future becomes now."

Mrs. Knudsen is serving her second four-year term on the Wake County Board of Commissioners. She chairs the General Services Committee and the Intergovernmental Committee and is a member of the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research and the governor's Science and Technology Board.

She has said that greater accessibility to public information held by the secretary's office is the major change she would like to implement.

The office maintains and makes available to North Carolina citizens records pertaining to state and local government actions and the commercial activity of private business. The secre-

Rose Ending Disappointing Season

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

The 1983 football season for Rose High School will come to an end sometime around 10 p.m. Friday night — and it must be looked back on as one of the most frustrating seasons ever for the Rampants.

Early on, the Rampants were among the favorites in the state 4-A race, advancing to as high as fifth place in the Associated Press' rankings. Rose opened up with a stunning 18-10 win over Jacksonville — a team that hasn't lost since then, and has only been scored on one other time. That was followed by victories over New Bern and Eastern Wayne. There was the hint there, however, that things were not quite as well off as the opening game might have shown. The Rampants had trouble moving the ball on the ground and only their passing game kept them in the ball game.

But with a 3-0 record, Rose moved into the Big East wars as one of the league's teams to beat.

And Rose certainly has become the team to beat. In five conference games so far, Rose has been beaten, and only one of those scores was close — a 14-7 defeat at the hands of Rocky Mount. Northern Nash handed Rose a 28-7 defeat, starting the crash, and Beddingfield (33-7), Fike (42-0) and Hunt (33-0) have followed. The lone win came against Kinston, 13-7.

The last two games have seen the Rampants shut out; the first of those shutouts snapped a 45 game scoring streak by Rose. And to have two straight shutouts is almost unheard of. "I can't remember the last time Rose had two straight shutout losses," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "It's been a long, long time."

Against Hunt this past weekend, Vincent felt that the Rampants played with good intensity for the first quarter of the game, making a couple of threats but failing to get into the end zone. At the same time, Rose held Hunt in check.

But late in the period, Hunt started a drive that eventually ended with an early second quarter score and that blew the wind out of the Rose sails.

"We just don't seem to be able to fight back from behind," Vincent said. "Our offensive line played very badly in the game, and it seems that we find new ways to make mistakes every week."

But, he said, the team hasn't given up totally. "The guys are still hanging in there tough. They are trying to get a little bit of improvement as we go along."

Injuries are also taking their toll, the coach noted. Among those sidelined this week are Marc Gatlin (knee), Toby Fischer (knee), Tony Johnson (ankle), Ronald Moore (ankle), Robert Joyner (ankle), Marvin Barrett (hand), Cyrus Blackwell (thigh) and Reggie Smith (thigh). Joyner, Barrett and Smith are expected to play, however, while Blackwell is questionable.

"Butch Haskins (dislocated knee against Eastern Wayne) has returned and we expect him to play this weekend. Michael Walsh is also back with the team and that's helped us a lot."

Vincent said that while injuries are symptomatic of a losing season, he does have those who will be playing with injuries with no complaints.

The season ends for Rose Friday in Elizabeth City against surging Northeastern High School. The Eagles, who have come on to win three of their last four games, have a very slim chance of still making it into the state playoffs should the league's last weekend go just exactly right.

Wilson Hunt, which leads the league with a 5-1 record, has clinched one of the two Division I playoff berths, regardless of how it comes out against Northern Nash this Friday night. A Northern victory would tie the Knights with Hunt at 5-2, while Fike could, by beating Rocky Mount, also gain a share of the title. In this case, Northern, since it beat both Hunt and Fike, would gain the Division I's top spot, while Hunt, which beat Fike, would take the number two position.

A Hunt win would give the title to the Warriors, leaving Fike to take second — if it wins. A loss by Fike, however, could see as much as a five-way tie for second and a draw would be necessary to decide the berth. Fike, Northern, Beddingfield (with a win over Kinston), Northeastern (with a win over Rose) and Rocky Mount would all be tied for second place.

None of the five beat all the others, making the draw necessary.

Of course, that is all speculation, and one must see what happens on the football field to decide it all.

Rose, however, could end Northeastern's hopes with a victory in the contest.

"They have a very good team," Vincent said, "and they're playing well now too."

Northeastern opened the year with three straight wins over 3-A and 2-A foes. They beat Edenton, 29-21, then topped Camden, 40-6, before taking a 7-0 win over Perquimans.

But that was followed by two straight league losses, to Fike and Hunt, 21-6 and 34-14, respectively. That string was broken by a 13-0 win over Kinston before the Eagles fell to Northern Nash, 33-15.

In the last two weeks, however, the Eagles have flown high, romping over Rocky Mount, 41-12, and then beating Beddingfield, 27-26, in overtime.

Northeastern operates out of the wishbone, but they are not that much of an option team. They break the bone on occasion, but mainly come at you as a power team. Vincent pointed out.

"Their biggest offensive threat is George Pledger (a halfback), who is their number one runner and pass receiver. He also plays safety and punts, so they get a lot out of him. Their quarterback, Marvin Sutton, has a good arm."

Pledger has carried the ball 101 times this season for 641 yards and 11 touchdowns. He averages 6.3 yards per carry. Sutton had 508 yards through the air, hitting on 38 of 112 passes.

"On defense, they run a 4-4 and a 5-2. They are big and strong and aggressive," the coach said.

The Eagles, too, have been a big play team. They pulled off seven interceptions against Rocky Mount, returning three of those for touchdowns. Of four touchdowns against Beddingfield, three came on big yardage plays.

"For us, it will be another big challenge. I really think that the first quarter of the game will tell us a lot. It all depends on how we get started," Vincent said.

How Rose starts could well determine how this season will finally come to an end.

Quick Return For Floyd

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

For most athletes, being sidelined with an emergency appendectomy would have been the end for them that year.

But East Carolina center John Floyd didn't let a little thing like having his appendix out bother him. Two games later, he was back in the thick of the action just like he'd never been away.

"It really upset me at first," Floyd said this week during preparations for the Miami-ECU game. "I thought my career was over."

Floyd went through practice on Monday evening after the first game of the season against Florida State and then went back to his room to watch the end of the television game. "It woke me up about two o'clock and I thought it was just gas," the senior snapper said. "I took some medicine and made it through the night and went to class the next morning. But about 15 minutes into it, I couldn't take it any more."

"I knew that something was wrong and I thought it was my appendix, but I didn't want to miss the (N.C.) State game," he added.

Nevertheless, he checked into the infirmary and by 2 p.m. that afternoon was admitted into Pitt Memorial Hospital with surgery taking place that night.

"They told me it would be six to eight weeks before I could think about getting back to football," Floyd said. "But I love football too much. I just made up my mind that I'd be back before then."

Floyd who, by his own words, "came up the hard way" as a walk-on who fought to earn a scholarship, did what others might have thought unthinkable. He missed the N.C. State and Murray State games. Then, following an open date, he not only rejoined the team against Missouri, he played almost half the time.

"I'd never been sick before, never had any surgery or even been in a hospital," the Fairmont native said.

And so far, his surgery hasn't slowed him down. "I did get a helmet right on the spot (Monday) night in practice, and it was sore that night, but I'm fine now."

And now, Floyd and his offensive teammates turn their attention to what may be their toughest test of the season — Miami's Hurricanes.

known for their defensive play.

"They've got the best defense we've seen all year," he said. "They're not big, but they're tough, scrappy guys who pursue well and get to the ball."

"But they can be beaten if our offense does the job it's capable of and the defense does its job."

Asked why he felt the Pirates could move the ball against a team that held West Virginia to only two yards rushing, Floyd said he didn't think anybody could stop the Pirate offense. "I don't know what West Virginia has, but I know our team and we have pride in ourselves. The only people who have stopped us this year are ourselves. If we sustain our blocks and do our job, we'll move the football. If I didn't believe that, I wouldn't even go down there."

Floyd said the ECU offense is like one big family. "When it gets tough, we all encourage each other."

One thing that's helped the offense this year has been a move made by new offensive coordinator Art Baker. The offensive unit now grades opponents play, watching their film over and over again. "My responsibility is the nose guard, and you watch the film and pick up something here, then watch again and see something else. It's been a big help to us," he said.

For Floyd, making the trip to Florida is a big thing. He's anxious for the offense to prove itself all over again. And for someone who was told he might just be getting back to the practice field, it's even more special.

Maryland Seeking More Grid Glory

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Maryland is in the driver's seat for the Atlantic Coast Conference football championship and meets Auburn this Saturday to attempt to get further down the road to a major bowl appearance.

The seventh-ranked Terrapins are 4-0 in the ACC, one game ahead of 10th-ranked North Carolina, which dropped a 28-26 decision to Maryland last Saturday. A victory over the third-rated Tigers on the road would enhance Maryland's chances for a berth in the Orange Bowl to face the champion of the Big 8, likely Nebraska.

North Carolina, 7-1 as is Maryland, faces Clemson, 6-1-1, in a game that does not count in the ACC standings, but also carries post-season implications. A Tar Heel victory would keep alive their slim hopes for a major bowl. Scouts from the Orange, Gator, Sugar and Florida Citrus bowls are slated to watch from the Kenan Stadium press box.

This weekend's action actually starts tonight when Virginia travels to Georgia Tech. The rest of the Saturday schedule shows Duke at Wake Forest and Appalachian State at North Carolina State.

When Maryland's Bobby Ross was head coach at The Citadel, he never could find a way to beat Pat Dye, who was head coach at East Carolina. Thus, Saturday's battle is a chance for Ross to break a five-game losing streak.

"That has no bearing today, of course," Ross said when asked about the streak. "But I am quite familiar with his style of play. Auburn isn't much different now from the East Carolina of years ago ... except they're bigger and more skilled."

Ross is also concerned about facing the Auburn wishbone — it's an offense he has not faced since the Terrapins met Clemson in the ninth game of last season.

"If there's a defensive breakdown, if a man doesn't carry out his assignment, a wishbone play is a potential big gainer," Ross added.

The Tar Heels needed last weekend's game to preserve their high ranking as well as their stock in the eyes of bowl scouts. Coach Dick Crum thinks the game might serve his team well in that it will help ease the sting of the loss at College Park.

"Our youngsters know Clemson is a good football team and they're really gonna have to work to get ready to play them," Crum said. "It's gonna take their minds off the Maryland game because they're going to have to have full concentration. Clemson is probably a little better this year than they were a year ago."

Clemson is fifth in total defense in the ACC, including third against the rush and last against the pass. North Carolina, by comparison, is tops in total offense (fifth in NCAA) and is first in rushing offense. The Tar Heels are third in NCAA Division I-A rushing statistics behind Nebraska and Air Force. Coach Danny Ford wants his defense back at peak efficiency.

"Our biggest challenge this week is to get back to playing defense," Ford said. "We have to do something in one week that we have not done this year — and that is play ... good defense."

Virginia is third in the ACC at 2-2 with a 5-3 overall record, and coach George Welsh thinks this is the time for his Cavaliers to distinguish themselves as one of the league's better clubs.

"Late October and early November is the time of year when you separate the good football teams from the average ones. We're in the position of having a good year or a mediocre year," Welsh said. "We still have a chance for good things to happen. We can have a winning season or better than that."

Virginia's last game, a 38-34 loss to Wake Forest, was viewed by a scout from the Peach Bowl.

Duke broke its seven-game losing streak last weekend with a come-from-behind victory over the Ramblin' Wreck. In trying to make it two in a row, coach Steve Sloan says he sees similarities between his team and the Demon Deacons.

"Wake Forest is much like us defensively and has struggled quite a bit this year," he said. "The only difference is that Wake has kept the opponent off the scoreboard."

The league's most prolific passer will duel at Groves Stadium. Duke's Ben Bennett has passed for 2,132 yards and 11 touchdowns. Mike Grayson and Mark Militello, one-and-two in ACC pass catching, have hauled in 100 of Bennett's 219 completions.

Gary Schofield has hit 57 percent of his passes for 1,782 yards and 13 touchdowns and is ahead of Bennett in passing efficiency. Although pleased with his own quarterback, Wake Forest's Al Groh expects Bennett to give his team headaches.

"I don't think we play better defense against a passing team and Duke has certainly caused problems for us in the past two seasons," Groh said.

Wake Forest, 4-5 and 1-3, ranks second in pass defense, while the Blue Devils are sixth ahead of Maryland and Clemson. Duke leads the conference in passing offense and is sixth nationally.

N.C. State, 2-6, committed six turnovers in their loss to South Carolina last Saturday and coach Tom Reed says only practice will bring his team closer to perfect.

"We have changed the personality of the football team," Reed said. "Now, we must come with another dimension — to eliminate mistakes. You cannot win unless you do that."

Indians Top ECU

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — The nationally ranked Indians of William & Mary defeated the East Carolina University soccer team, 3-0, yesterday.

John Leibowitz scored the game's first goal in the first half, with an assist from Mike Flood. Two other goals were scored in the second half.

"We really played well and more as a team than we have all year," Coach Robbie Church said. "George Podgorny (Pirate goalie) played well all day, giving up only three goals to a nationally ranked team."

The Pirates were without five regulars, three sidelined by injuries, and two who didn't make the trip. "We had people playing in positions they hadn't played in all year," Church said. "That group gave more hustle and desire and they'll be our future."

The victory upped the Indians' record to 12-4-2, while East Carolina falls to 3-14.

The Pirates play Saturday at Christopher Newport at 2 p.m.

Borg Is Back

Bjorn Borg is set to return a backhand shot Wednesday during the first round victory with partner Bettina Bunge in the $400,000 World Mixed Doubles Championships at Houston. Borg, playing his first competitive tournament since retiring seven months ago, teamed up with Bunge to defeat Hu Na and Marty Riessen, 6-4, 6-7, 7-6. (AP Laserphoto)

Borg Struggles In Doubles Play In Comeback Effort

HOUSTON (AP) — Bjorn Borg almost picked the wrong tournament for his return to competitive tennis after a seven-month retirement.

It wasn't Jimmy Connors nor John McEnroe that tried to upset his return but a pert Chinese defector named Hu Na, who almost stole the show before Borg and his partner Bettina Bunge rallied to beat Hu and Marty Riessen 6-4, 6-7, 7-6 Wednesday night in a first round match of the $400,000 World Mixed Doubles Championships at Astroarena.

Borg showed flashes of the old form that won five consecutive Wimbledon titles and six French championships.

But by the third set, it was Hu who was drawing the applause of the crowd as she matched Borg volley for volley on several points.

"The first set I was really nervous, especially on the passing shots and drop shots," the smiling 19-year-old Hu said through an interpreter. "But after the first set, I forgot I was playing against Borg and just hit the ball."

Hu defected to the United States July 20, 1982, and was granted sanctuary in the U.S. on April 4. She had seen one tape of Borg in action prior to their match, but she still had a surprise. "I didn't realize he had such a big serve," Hu said.

A mismatch appeared in the making in the first set when Borg-Bunge broke Hu in the third game and ran off a 6-4 victory. But Riessen and Hu battled their more celebrated opponents on even terms in the second set and won the tie-breaker 7-2.

"She (Hu) got better and better during the match," Riessen said. "I'm glad we hung in there the way we did. As it turned out, you'd have to say she played great. We were unlucky to lose the match."

Bunge-Borg appeared to have the match sewed up when they broke Hu in the eighth game of the third set and Borg went to the line to serve for the match.

Despite serving flawlessly throughout the match, recording 10 aces, Borg was broken in the ninth game that eventually forced the second tie-breaker of the match. Bunge-Borg won it 7-3 on the first match point when Hu's backhand volley sailed wide of the court.

"I might have played better if I had played in 20 or 30 more matches," Borg said. "But I was serving pretty good and we played pretty well."

In other first round matches Wednesday, second seeded Sherwood Stewart and JoAnne Russell defeated Kathy Horvath and Chip Hooper 6-4, 6-4.

Auburn Picked Over Terps; Miami Gets Nod Over Pirates

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

For the second week in a row, Maryland plays the nation's No. 3-ranked team while Florida battles No. 4.

But don't go looking for replays of last week's Maryland-North Carolina and Florida-Auburn thrillers.

Maryland was No. 13 a week ago and the Terrapins jumped to No. 7 after nipping previously unbeaten North Carolina 28-26. On Saturday, they visit Auburn, which climbed from No. 4 to No. 3 by beating Florida its first setback 28-21.

The Gators, meanwhile, slipped from No. 5 to No. 9, while Georgia moved up from No. 6 to No. 4 by beating Temple 31-14. The Georgia-Florida game will be contested, as usual, in Jacksonville's Gator Bowl in what has become known — not without reason — as the world's largest outdoor cocktail party.

Auburn is a 7½-point favorite over Maryland, although the Terps catch the Tigers at the most opportune time — a nonleague game between bitter Southeastern Conference rivals Florida and Georgia. But the same holds true in reverse — Auburn catches Maryland between two big Atlantic Coast Conference foes, North Carolina and Clemson. The pick is Auburn 24-13.

Meanwhile, Georgia is 1½ points over Florida. The Bulldogs have had Florida's number recently, mainly thanks to No. 34, Herschel Walker.

This time, says Gator Coach Charley Pell, "Instead of trying to get ready for one big gun, we're trying to get ready for about 12." Nevertheless Florida 24-21.

Last week's score was 40-11-1 for a percentage of .784 and both Upset Specials — Texas A&M over SMU and Ole Miss over LSU — covered. For the season, the count is 290-106-5-.732. Against the spread, last week was 18-13-.581; on the year, 94-96-3-.495.

Iowa State at No. 1 Nebraska (no line). Nebraska 56-13.

No. 2 Texas (favored by 18½) at Houston. Texas 24-10.

East Carolina at No. 5 Miami, Fla. (no line). Miami 27-10.

No. 15 Iowa (6 1-2) at Wisconsin. This is No. 4. Iowa 31-17.

No. 16 Boston College (22) at Army. Boston College 45-7.

Temple at No. 17 West Virginia (17 1-2). West Virginia 28-14.

Pitt at No. 18 Notre Dame (7). Notre Dame 24-14.

No. 19 Alabama (7 1-2) at LSU. Alabama 31-21.

Brown at Penn State (no line). Penn State 99-0.

Hinson Handcuffs Ralph

By The Associated Press

In this matchup of rookie National Basketball Association centers, Ralph Sampson seemed to be the favorite.

At 7-foot-4, the Virginia alum, now playing for the Houston Rockets, stood six inches taller than Roy Hinson, a rookie out of Rutgers starting in his first season with Cleveland.

"Here's a college kid who's probably never played against more than one or two good centers in college," Cavaliers Coach Tom Nissalke said.

"And now he comes out and faces (Bill) Cartwright, (Robert) Parish, (Darryl) Dawkins and Sampson. What a baptism."

But the edge Wednesday night went to Hinson, who held Sampson scoreless in the fourth quarter as the Cavaliers won their first game of the season, beating Houston 103-94.

"I never faced anybody of his capability in college," Hinson said of Sampson.

"Sam Perkins at North Carolina was the closest."

World B. Free led the Cavaliers with 33 points. Cleveland took its biggest lead, 98-87, when Hinson circled Sampson for a dunk off a rebound with 4:31 to play. Sampson wound up with 16 points and a game-high 16 rebounds.

"When he (Sampson) did get the shots today, he really didn't get the shots we want him to take," Rockets Coach Bill Fitch said.

"Cleveland just laid off and said to Phil Ford, 'We're not going to guard you.' Phil went 2-for-12. That kind of defense will stop Sampson, but it won't usually stop the rest of the team."

In the rest of the league, Boston defeated Milwaukee 119-105, Dallas beat Portland 123-117, San Diego defeated Los Angeles 110-106 and Seattle beat New York 125-119.

Celtics 119, Bucks 105.

Larry Bird scored 27 points, helping the Celtics avenge their playoff loss to Milwaukee last spring. Robert Parish and Dennis Johnson added 19 apiece for Boston, which led all the way.

Outside Boston Garden, picketing referees, led by union chief Richie Phillips, handed out whistles to fans going into the game. "Blow your whistle on scab referees," one sign on the picket line said, protesting the use of non-union referees while the regular refs are locked out in a labor dispute.

However, before the game the public address announcer warned fans against blowing the whistles, and few, if any, did.

Sidney Moncrief led the Bucks with 28 points.

Mavericks 123, Blazers 117.

Mark Aguirre scored 15 of his 28 points in the second half to help Dallas hold off a Portland rally. The Trail Blazers trailed by only six points, 108-102, with four minutes left, but Dallas hit the next six points to widen their lead.

Pat Cummings added 22 points for the Mavericks and Brad Davis had 21. Jim Paxson led Portland with 23.

Clippers 110, Lakers 106.

Norm Nixon scored all of his 25 points in the first half and added 12 assists to help San Diego beat his former team. Traded last month, Nixon hit 10 of 12 shots from the field as San Diego led 59-53 at the half.

The Lakers cut the lead to 105-103 with 37 seconds left, but Bill Walton hit a hookshot with 10 seconds left, and Terry Cummings sank a free throw to put the game out of reach. Walton played only 27 minutes.

Sonics 125, Knicks 119.

Tom Chambers scored 18 of his 28 points in the first half as the SuperSonics won their third in a row. Chambers scored 14 of his points in the first quarter, and guard Jon Sundvold came off the bench in the second quarter to score nine points as Seattle took a 65-53 lead at intermission.

The Knicks never got closer than six points in the fourth quarter. Ray Williams led the Knicks with 23 points.

Tired Of 'Splinter' Status, Church Unit Seeks Home

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A group of Columbia families who left the Protestant Episcopal Church with their priest six years ago are preparing for what could be their reorganization as a Roman Catholic parish.

Members of the Good Shepherd Anglo-Catholic Church say they're tired of being part of one of the many splinter groups of dissident former Episcopalians which have been vainly trying to create a new national church.

"People are getting real tired of being eccentrics," said Ronald Childress, the church's senior warden. "It gets old after a while."

"I feel very uncomfortable about being adrift," agreed former senior warden Irvin "Pete" Parker.

The move would place the church among a handful which have accepted the invitation of Pope John Paul II three years ago to join the Catholic Church while retaining some of their Anglican traditions and identity.

So far only two others have actually taken the step: Our Lady of the Atonement Parish in San Antonio, Tex., and St. Mary the Virgin church in Las Vegas, Nev. Several others are considering it.

The Columbia group organized their own church in 1977, leaving the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd in a painful split that followed the Protestant denomination's decision to ordain women as priests and make other changes in church policy and worship.

Not all conservative Episcopalians objected to ordaining women in principle, but many viewed it as a symbol of the church's drift away from established doctrine and tradition which they had cherished.

"It was traumatic," said Childress of the debate within Good Shepherd. "There was a lot of anger, a lot of hard feelings. I think with time a lot of that has healed."

For the past several years, the approximately 80 families of Good Shepherd Anglo-Catholic Church have been part of the small Diocese for the Southeastern United States, one of nearly a dozen organizations of former Episcopalians who were unhappy with the changes of the 1970s.

But the groups have been unable to find enough common ground to create a new national church.

"We all knew what we were against, but we soon discovered we had a lot of differences," Childress said. "At our church, we really became uneasy about not knowing what we were. A lot of us wanted some stability."

Earlier this year, the Rev. William Ladkau told the congregation he was planning to become a Roman Catholic and offered instruction to those members who wanted to consider doing the same. Each member will have to make a personal decision on whether to convert.

"Based on the views I'm hearing expressed at the moment, a majority is certainly leaning in that direction," said Parker.

"People are making up their minds," Childress said. "We'll probably decide after the first of the year."

One Episcopalian official who has followed efforts of dissident groups to reorganize themselves said the Columbia group might still feel isolated by its unique status within the Catholic Church.

"If they thought they were lonely by themselves, they're going to find out what lonely in a crowd means," he said.

Biomedical Research Setting Goal Of Helping The Disabled

By JOE B. MCKNIGHT
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Dr. Herman R. Weed is a man of nerve. He wants good nerves in the body to take over the work of disabled ones.

His efforts toward that end could make useful some otherwise good parts of the human anatomy rendered useless by accident or design.

Mechanical aids are available: Paraplegics drive cars, and quadriplegics use their mouths to activate a stick to operate a wheelchair or typing device. Researchers have used electrical impulses to get a paraplegic to take some halting steps.

Weed is professor of electrical engineering at Ohio State University, director of its biomedical engineering department and professor of biomedicine in the university's college of medicine. He views electronic advances in medicine as marvelous uses of computers and microprocessors.

"But there's nothing magic about microprocessing," he says. "It's doing exactly what I tell it to do, and that may be the simplest way to do it, but it's not the only way to do it."

He dreams of having a disabled person use good nerves to activate otherwise good muscles rendered non-functional by nerve damage. It is being done, but Weed indicates it is far from an exact science. And he holds no hope for complete success.

"I think it will be practical in the reasonable future, five years, 10 years, there will be recognized protocol for the retention or retraining of muscle mass for patients who for whatever reason would otherwise lose their muscle mass," he said. "I think that in that same period of time we are going to see the beginnings of realistic abilities for the handicapped, those who have lost the use of function of muscle parts of the body, to regain to some extent the function of the body. I'm very careful to say I don't see ... any hope of regaining total capability."

Weed's hope is to divert electrical impulses from good nerves to activate muscles made useless by non-working nerves. Within a decade, he said, the state of the art will be far beyond presently known mechanical means of stimulating non-functioning muscles.

"The aim is to use nerves which are accustomed to doing something else to stir action in muscles which have lost their connection to the brain," explains Weed.

Trained as a specialist in automatic controls, Weed almost 20 years ago brought together some 15-20 scientists and researchers at OSU to explore the possibilities of what was then the new field of biomedical engineering.

It got him into medical school, not to become a physician but to learn how to apply automatic controls to the human anatomy. It led to OSU establishing a department of biomedical engineering.

Weed says most research in this field is on using external force to make muscles function. He is working on ways to use the body's internal signals to make non-working muscles function.

Weed talks of developing the art of nerve excitation — the ability to transfer a signal intended for one muscle to another muscle — beyond present stages. Some call his work nerve switching but Weed prefers "nerve excitation" because switching carries so many connotations.

"If we had our total desire it would be nice if we could just connect up the ends of the two broken parts, like splicing a rope," he said. "But we don't know how to do that."

"So what we are really learning how to do at the moment is how to excite the nerve externally from an electrical source called a stimulator. We also know how to control that stimulator with all sorts of signals, including a signal from another muscle."

"So that means I can use another muscle to trigger the stimulator and then in turn excite the muscle I'm trying to excite."

Weed's work includes the use of electrodes to pick up electric impulses carried by nerves to command muscles to move.

'Free Clinic' Shows Maturity

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Free Medical Clinic of Cleveland — a radical flower child 13 years ago — has matured into an institution that deals with the corporate world and government bureaucracy while clinging to its birthright.

"In the old days, hippies were working here, even the docs," says Jane Yackshaw, one of the clinic's 50 employees. "That's not true any more. There's straight people volunteering to work here, the kind who have never smoked marijuana."

"They come now to get exposed to patients and to learn to deal with people, but I remember when people were volunteering to work here out of a sense of revolution."

Miss Yackshaw, 24, directs volunteers who staff the Free Clinic Hot Line, a service which takes on such problems as drug abuse, venereal disease and suicide and uses the telephone as an intervention tool.

"I was 16 years old from an all-girl school when I first came to the clinic for a medical problem," she says. "It was an old, beat-up house and was painted all kinds of colors. I remember it as a very wild place."

The clinic is businesslike now. You don't have that loose chaos that used to reign. Now it's controlled chaos.

Her experience as a patient led her to become a volunteer at the clinic. Later, she became a paid staff member, and the clinic moved from the house into a vacant commercial building.

Many of the clinic's 400 volunteer workers were once patients, according to Marty Hiller, the recently named clinic director.

Though the contemporary Cleveland Free Clinic is neatly decorated, organized and furnished, it clings to a certain informality. Signs providing patients with information are hand-printed. A few dogs, belonging to staffers, can be seen roaming the hallways and lobbies.

Hiller says free medical clinics began springing up in urban areas of the nation in the 1960s and early 1970s to serve the drug culture, students and poor people.

The history of such efforts, Hiller says, is a sad one.

"Alternative health care generally evolved as storefront operations. The Cleveland Free Clinic began that way," Hiller says. "Maybe some 95 percent of those operations no longer exist. They used what energy they were able to garnish just to create themselves, and once the energy was gone, they were gone."

Dedicated volunteer support and eventual acceptance by the community enabled the clinic in Cleveland to survive, Hiller says.

Currently, while worrying about budgeting for everything, the clinic provides medical care day and night, dental care, legal services (mostly for abused wives), drug abuse counseling, a community arts program and a runaway shelter for teen-agers. It's all free — no strings attached.

Hiller oversees a $900,000 budget, including federal money and substantial grants from Standard Oil Co. (Sohio), and TRW Inc.

The Sohio money requires matching grants from other corporate sources, so the once anti-establishment clinic now must play ball with big business.

Diplomat Will Leave London

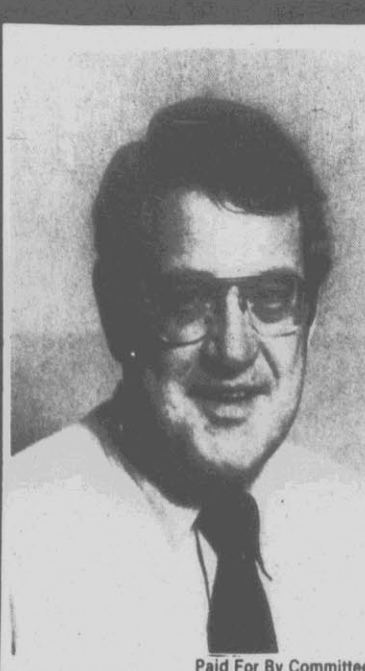

LONDON (AP) — Homeward-bound U.S. Ambassador John B. Louis Jr., dubbed the "invisible man" by a British newspaper columnist, Wednesday defended what he called his "laid back" style in the coveted diplomatic post.

Louis' departure Nov. 7 — he spent two years in the post — has been billed as his resignation by the U.S. administration. But newspapers and diplomatic circles here widely assume he was fired.

"I think my style has been one of being a bit laid back," Louis, 58, the genial heir to the Johnson's Wax fortune, said in a radio interview aired by the British Broadcasting Corp.

"And I think that's the kind of style a U.S. ambassador here has more or less always tried to portray," he said.

He will be succeeded by the current U.S. ambassador to Belgium, Charles Price.

Publicity Helps Make Liver Donors Available

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Just over a year ago, a desperate but determined Charlie Fiske stood before 400 physicians and begged them to help find a liver for his dying daughter, 11-month-old Jamie. She got one the following week.

Since then, the number of transplants and organ donors has increased significantly, due, in part, to enormous publicity. But for many of those involved in the everyday, everywhere fight for life, there have been some unexpected and worrisome side effects.

Liver donations come in spurts following celebrated cases. Adult patients and parents who lack medical and media contacts to help their children feel helpless and left out. More families of potential donors are refusing to offer organs in highly publicized cases for fear of attention. Even doctors and nurses, harassed by families for donor organs, are becoming increasingly angry and less helpful.

"It's made people more aware. But it's not helpful when the media focuses on one child or one adult. The public then perceives liver transplants as something episodic: Jamie Fiske last year, Brandon Hall this year," said Don Denny, director of organ procurement at the University of Pittsburgh's Transplant Foundation.

"It's a continuous process," agreed Thelma King Thiel, president of the American Liver Foundation.

Many Americans had been oblivious to the urgent need for donated organs until Jamie's father made his plea at the American Academy of Pediatrics on Oct. 28, 1982.

So for Dr. John Najarian, who headed Jamie's surgical team at the University of Minnesota Hospitals, that single public act marked the start of a new period for organ transplants.

"What it did immediately, it increased the number of donors that was available. It also increased the number of recipients," Najarian said. "Jamie did so well, other people with children came to us."

Since the first successful liver transplant operation in 1963, more than 550 such operations have been performed around the world, largely because of improved technology and approved use of cyclosporine, an antibiotic that prevents tissue rejection.

Ninety liver transplants were performed in the United States in 1982, 80 of them by Dr. Thomas Starzl of the University of Pittsburgh. The others were divided between the University of Minnesota and the University of Tennessee.

So far this year, 89 liver transplants have been conducted in Pittsburgh, from 25 to 30 at Minnesota and Tennessee and about a dozen others at hospitals around the country.

But the number of acceptable donated livers has not kept pace with the number of people who need them. And even if it had, many of the organs would likely be discarded, Denny said.

Denny said he turns down nine of every 10 livers his facility is offered through a telephone hotline linking doctors to 110 organ procurement centers around the country. Of 523 potential livers last year, he accepted only 64, recommending the others to different transplant centers.

"It's misleading to tell the public that there's a severe shortage of liver donors," he said. "We are doing more livers, but we're stressing our facilities beyond belief to do as many as we are."

Most donor livers are rejected because the blood type or size doesn't match or the age of the donor is unacceptable. Livers must come from brain-dead victims 6 months to about 40 years old, representing only 1 percent to 2 percent of all deaths each year.

Many others, however, are refused because the staff is already doing a transplant operation or is too exhausted from previous surgery, or because the hospital's intensive care unit is filled, Denny said.

Because the number of organ donations usually hinges on the attention awarded the latest transplant case, "there can be as many as 11 liver donors one day, then none the next," Denny said.

"We need livers every day of the year," he said. "It's a chronic thing, and not all donors can be utilized."

Up to 115 people are waiting for liver transplants in this country on any given day, 60 percent of them adults.

When a donor liver is accepted, Denny decides to whom it should go based on the patient's size, blood type and need — not, he insists, the publicity surrounding the case.

"Jamie Fiske got a liver not because she's Jamie Fiske, but because of the system that distributes organs for transplantation. She got it because at that moment, there was no one else in the country who could use that liver," said Denny, who arranged for Jamie's new liver.

The critically ill children mentioned by President Reagan in his radio appeal for liver donors last July also created a temporary crush of donated organs.

The problem with highly publicized cases, Denny said, is that parents of other youngsters in need of liver transplants grow frantic. And the adults who wait for livers become enraged.

"A lot of them are feeling frustrated they can't get the attention. There's almost a guilt complex because they feel they can't help their child," Ms. Thiel said.

"One mother called me in tears," Denny said. "She asked me what chance did her child have. She didn't know any doctors or have any presidential support."

"The adults (patients) say,

'Damn it, how much are we going to be considered?'"

Excessive publicity surrounding a case sometimes frightens away potential donors, Denny said. Twice this year, families with a brain-dead relative agreed to offer the victim's organs but later reneged when they learned the recipient's identity, he said.

"They said they were afraid that the media glare 'is going to switch over to us and we don't want it,'" he said.

Many doctors, and nurses, inundated with telegrams and letters from people seeking donor livers, also try to avoid attention, Denny said.

"Health professionals ... are perceived as donor doctors rather than neurosurgeons whose job is to save lives," he said. "When they call (the donor hotline) it means they've lost."

Burns Signs Contract With Caesars World

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Comedian George Burns signed a five-year contract with Caesars World, vowing to see the pact through to its conclusion because "I can't afford to die when I'm booked."

Burns, 87, joked with reporters at the announcement Tuesday, making frequent references to his age.

"The last time I played Caesars Palace, it was owned by Julius," Burns dead-panned. He called himself the original performer for the Roman Empire.

Burns will star at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas and Caesars Tahoe in Stateline, Nev. His first engagement for the resort chain is Dec. 27 through Jan. 1 at the Lake Tahoe property. The contract calls for a two-year option at the end of the five-year period. He is currently at the Las Vegas resort filming "Oh, God III." In a departure from his two previous "Oh, God" films, the new movie will feature Burns as both God and the devil. It is scheduled for release by Warner Bros. in 1984.

Burns was a fixture on the Las Vegas stage for years, introducing such stars as Ann-Margret and Bobby Darin. He quit appearing in the city nearly 20 years ago, then returned last year for a series of sell-out engagements at the Sahara Hotel.

Burns recently authored the book "How to Live to be 100 — or More!" which is described as "the ultimate diet, sex and exercise book."

DOING 'LOVE BOAT' — Don Ameche and Luise Rainer share a moment together during taping an upcoming "The Love Boat" segment in which they play the part of a couple trying to rekindle an old romance. It will be the third

San Diego Marine Park To Run Tests On Whales

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Opponents of a marine park's plan to round up killer whales for tests and display say they are considering taking action in the courts and at sea.

Sea World won permission Tuesday from the National Marine Fisheries Service to conduct tests on 100 killer whales over the next five years. The park plans to start rounding up the whales next summer, separating some from their herds for tests and capturing 10 for breeding and display.

"The general purpose is to put together some real information on wild killer whales that doesn't exist in most cases," said Sea World spokeswoman Jackie O'Connor. "You add to the knowledge and in the long run you hope to come up with better and sounder management programs when and if that become necessary."

A group opposing the whale roundup said the project will eliminate the United States from its role as a world leader in protecting whales.

Alan Reichman, spokesman for Greenpeace Seattle, one of the groups that fought Sea World's plan, said legal action was being considered along with deployment of a boat to disrupt the hunt.

A spokesman for the Animal Protection Institute, based in Sacramento, said the project jeopardizes a five-year moratorium on whale hunting that goes into effect in 1986. "This is now giving the Soviet Union and Japan a way to wiggle out of it," said Ted Crail.

The permit comes with restrictions that include types of tests that can be done and what will happen if any of the captured whales dies.

"If any of the 100 whales that are authorized to be taken should die, it will be counted against those 10 that are authorized to be permanently retained," said Brian Gorman, spokesman for the fisheries service.

He said testing and captures would be halted in the event of a death until a study could be made.

Sea World currently has eight killer whales in captivity at its parks in San Diego and Florida.

Group Honors Betty Ford

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Former first lady Betty Ford, an outspoken critic of drug and alcohol abuse since her own battle against addiction, says community awareness and education are essential in fighting the problem.

"Perhaps they will make a choice not to abuse their bodies if they know what it does," the 65-year-old Mrs. Ford told a news conference Tuesday before being honored by Abraxas, a statewide organization offering alternative rehabilitation for young drug and alcohol offenders.

In April 1978, Mrs. Ford admitted herself to the Long Beach Naval Hospital Alcohol and Drug Rehabilitation Center in California where she stayed for nearly four weeks battling an addiction to alcohol and arthritis medication.

She has said the hardest part of all was facing the fact that she was an addict.

Veteran Don Ameche Still Active At Age 75

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of the pleasures of the recent box-office hit, "Trading Places," was seeing Don Ameche back in a major movie.

If you're of the right age, you'll remember his smooth-as-glass voice on radio with "Betty and Bob," "Grand Hotel" and especially "The Little Theater Off Times Square."

Remember when your kid sister used to say, "You're wanted on the Ameche"? That was everybody's synonym for the telephone after Ameche starred in "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell."

Don Ameche is alive and 75 and still pursuing his profession whenever the offer seems good. He was here recently to appear in his third "Love Boat," playing opposite Luise Rainer in an episode about the rekindling of an old romance.

The hair is no longer thick and black, and the face shows the wear of 55 years of performing. But his figure remains as trim and erect as a West Point cadet's. And the voice still crackles with authority.

Between scenes on the "Love Boat" set he talked frankly about his current career.

"I had a great time making 'Trading Places,' but as far as having it generate work for me — no. I had a chance to do a picture in Chicago, but I turned it down."

"It's not unusual that I didn't get jobs out of the picture. There are so many people my age who are well known, and so few jobs for us," he said. "That's only natural. The accent in movies is on youth. Always has been."

Pacino Testifies

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Al Pacino spent an afternoon on a witness stand where the talk was about tapes — around 1,000 of them left by the renowned acting instructor Lee Strasberg.

The 43-year-old Pacino, currently appearing on Broadway in "American Buffalo," was called to testify Tuesday by Strasberg's widow, Anna.

She and the Actors Studio are engaged in a court fight over ownership of the tapes, which contain her husband's critiques of students.

Pacino is co-artistic director of the studio. Mrs. Strasberg contends the tapes belong to her late husband's estate and said she wants to make them available to "everybody who has an interest in the theater and acting."

The studio, supported by affidavits from its president, Paul Newman, and co-artistic director Ellen Burstyn, contends the tapes are "teaching tools" essential to the educational process there.

Pacino said in court the critiqued sessions "could get very personal," but "I don't think I have a problem" with other actors hearing them.

The case was continued to later this week.

Animals Down Under

Australians are rapidly killing off their national symbol—the kangaroo. Although official government estimates place the number of kangaroos at between 10 and 19 million, hunters are killing these unique creatures at the rate of 6 million a year. The kangaroo is one of many unique animals found only in Australia. Others include the Platypus, a mammal that lays eggs; the emu, a bird that cannot fly; and the koala bear, an animal that feeds entirely on one kind of leaf.

DO YOU KNOW—What is a baby kangaroo called?

Chattanooga Arena Lacking In Public's Eye

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — It has been little more than a year since singer Kenny Rogers opened the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga Arena.

Some 12,000 people squeezed into the arena to listen to Rogers, making the concert the first of the building's numerous financial successes.

Unfortunately, because of acoustical problems, not everyone who had a ticket was able to hear the country-pop superstar.

That concert fostered a feeling about the $15.5 million facility that lingers to this day — successful, but with a less than perfect public image.

The 11,200-seat multipurpose arena, nicknamed the Roundhouse because of its circular shape, is both a community entertainment center and the home of the UTC basketball team.

"It helped basketball tremendously. It doubled our season ticket sales the first year," said Athletic Director Harold Wilkes. "No way would North Carolina have come here without the arena, and we would never have had Tennessee in town."

The school's other sports programs and physical education department have also benefited through new weight rooms, training rooms and offices in the Roundhouse. Dances and other large-scale activities are also held there.

But from the outset, the new opportunities that the Roundhouse has created for UTC and Chattanooga also have been accompanied by various troubles.

First, the sound. Originally designed as strictly an indoor stadium, the Roundhouse had three acoustical strikes against it as an entertainment facility, said Mickey Yerger, arena director. It has open concourses, it is steep and it is round.

That made it difficult to hear from upper level areas, although the situation has been improved through the addition of acoustical baffling and by advising touring shows to rig their speakers higher.

The steepness also created a more serious problem. It made some people afraid they might go bouncing down the steps from an upper level.

"The first time in, people were absolutely astounded at the size of the place," said Yerger. "During the show, when the lights went off, people found it scary to move around."

The addition of hand rails and safety lights provided some reassurance, although a Georgia woman who says she fell during a Barbara Mandrell concert in April is suing the university and the arena designer and builders for $285,000.

Then there's the matter of the Gold Circle seats, sections set aside for basketball season ticketholders whose contributions to the UTC athletic fund also give them first shot at the same seats for entertainment events. That's caused some grumbling.

Yerger said the arena faces the problem of trying to serve the public while also working to keep up the quality of the UTC athletic department.

"Ideally, we wouldn't have any preferred seating, and the public would get first shot at all the seats," Yerger said. "But the reality is that we need that funding."

Last year, about 1,900 Gold Circle patrons contributed $150 each to UTC. Contributions to the athletic fund were $440,745, up from $259,466 the previous year.

Housing Sales Show Increase As Cost Rises

By The Associated Press

After three straight months of decline, new home sales spurted 13.7 percent in September despite a jump in the median selling price to a record $82,000, the government said.

The Commerce Department and the Department of Housing and Urban Development said September's sales of new single-family houses were at an annual rate of 632,000.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist at the National Association of Home Builders, called the increase a "fairly good improvement" from August, when sales dropped 7.2 percent. The rate of new home sales also declined in June and July.

The median sales price, meanwhile, jumped $5,400 from August's $76,600. The median is the point at which an equal number of sales were at a higher price as were lower.

In another positive sign for the economic recovery, the Commerce Department said new orders to factories rose 1.5 percent September. The increase was the eighth gain in the 10 months since the recession ended last year.

Factories' shipments and inventories also increased, the report said.

The department's chief economist, Robert Ortner, said he was particularly pleased to see a 9.5 percent September increase in orders for machinery and other non-mineral capital goods. Those are the items companies use to modernize or expand and thus are, in Ortner's view, "a critical component in the long-term outlook."

Other economic developments:

—The Treasury Department announced Wednesday that the interest rate on U.S. Series EE savings bonds will rise to 9.38 percent for the six months started Nov. 1 from 8.64 percent for the preceding six months.

—Two units of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. plan to cut their payrolls by a total of 12,000 to 13,000 people to help strengthen their competitiveness once AT&T is broken up Jan. 1. The two units, AT&T Information Systems and AT&T Communications, want to reduce their payroll costs by a total of at least $400 million a year through offers of early retirement, transfers and attrition.

—Ford Motor Co. and American Motors Corp. joined General Motors Corp. in extending 12.9 percent interest rate programs through November. Ford's program was narrowed to include only dealers in Alaska, California, Washington and Oregon and applies only to certain vehicles. AMC's program is nationwide and applies to 1983 and 1984 AMC, Jeep and Renault vehicles.

—Chrysler rolled out the company's new minivan — then couldn't get it open. "The vehicle has a side door that usually doesn't stick," Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca quipped after four company executives were stranded momentarily inside the new van after it rolled off the assembly line in Windsor, Ontario.

OSHA Slices Exposure Time For Asbestos

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says its first emergency job safety rule "will save many lives" by drastically reducing worker exposure to cancer-causing asbestos fibers.

Citing new health risk assessments showing that three of every 1,000 workers face "grave danger" under the current standard, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration issued an emergency temporary standard to cut acceptable asbestos exposure levels by 75 percent.

The decision was welcomed by Sheldon Samuels, health and safety director of the AFL-CIO's Industrial Union Department, which had been pushing the regulatory agency to move against asbestos.

But Samuels said "we have to evaluate the movement in terms of enforcement. I want to see 200 industrial hygienists out there" immediately, stepping up inspections of workplaces where asbestos fibers present a hazard.

Emergency health standards are seldom imposed by OSHA because these rules have been vulnerable to court challenges by industry groups.

But in announcing OSHA's move Wednesday, Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan said the possibility of challenge was weighed by department officials before they acted.

Noting that the Occupational Safety and Health Act authorizes such emergency measures in instances of "grave danger" to workers, Donovan said that "in the past, the courts have narrowly applied those statutory requirements. That is why the decision to issue an ETS (emergency standard) was made only after careful deliberation within the department and detailed review of our work outside the department by experts from the public and private sector scientific communities."

Douglas Clark, an OSHA spokesman, said the new asbestos health standard will take effect immediately upon publication in the Federal Register, the government's official compendium of rules and regulations proposed by various agencies. He said he expected that it would be published by Friday.

Some 375,000 workers in the manufacturing, construction and maritime industries are exposed to asbestos fibers, although the job safety agency did not indicate Wednesday how many of those workers are exposed at levels exceeding the existing standard.

Asbestos is a fibrous mineral widely used as a fire retardant insulation in buildings and reinforcement in concrete pipes. It has been shown to cause cancer and debilitating lung diseases.

Three large asbestos firms — Manville Corp., UNR Industries Inc. and Amatec Corp. — have filed for bankruptcy law protection in the face of thousands of lawsuits by former workers who allege they contracted respiratory problems as a result of their jobs.

The emergency rule slashes by 75 percent the permissible exposure to asbestos fibers. It lowers the legal asbestos exposure level over an eight-hour day from 2 fibers per cubic centimeter of air to one-half of a fiber.

Donovan said recent risk assessments predict "three excess cancer deaths per 1,000 workers exposed for one year at the current permissible exposure level." Those studies also warned of a "risk of grave danger" even to workers exposed to asbestos over a short period of time.

The mortality rate is an extraordinary 53 times higher for smokers who are exposed to asbestos, the agency said.

It said studies indicate that lowering the asbestos level to one-half fiber per cubic centimeter of air will "save many lives."

An asbestos health standard has been on the books since 1972, not long after the Occupational Safety and Health Administration was created, but has remained unchanged since 1976.

Under government rulemaking procedures, OSHA must propose a permanent asbestos standard, and seek public comment on it, within 60 days of publication of the emergency rule.

OSHA administrator Thorne G. Auchter had said last April that he was speeding up his agency's work on tightening the existing asbestos standard. In a letter to Samuels, he said, "Personally, I am very concerned about the asbestos problem."

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 11-3
GIQBOW EPUCCO CG URNJ SYCPSE:
RJKWNEBQZ IYBKWNEBQZ.

Yesterday's Cryptquip — WHERE THE FIREMAN GOES FOR FUN: TO A HOUSE WARMING.
Today's Cryptquip clue: C equals O.
The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Here's a chance for you to test your card play technique. Before reading on, decide how you would play three no trump after a spade lead.

The auction was routine. South showed a balanced minimum with no particular diamond fit, and North had the values and the shape for a raise to game.

You play low from dummy. East contributes the jack and you win the queen. What now?

Concede down one! Assuming that East is alert enough to play the king of diamonds when the suit is first led and return a spade, there is no way to make nine tricks unless the defense errs — try it if you don't believe us. You have been tricked by a pair of sneaky writers.

With careful play at trick one, the hand is safe. Allow East's jack of spades to win the trick! Unless West has both missing diamond honors and five spades, your contract is safe.

Suppose that East continues with a spade. You win in your hand (or dummy if West covers your spade honor) and lead a diamond. If West wins and forces out your last spade stopper, he has no entry to his good spades. If East wins, he has no spade to return. In either case, you have time to knock out the remaining diamond stopper and make an overtrick.

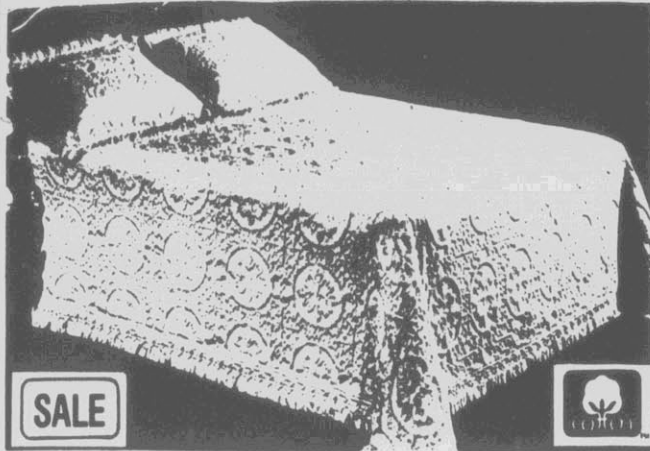

But what if East wins the first diamond and returns a spade? You have nothing to fear. Spades are then 4-3 and the most the defenders can get are two spade tricks and two diamonds.
