Modest Increase In Wholesale Prices

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, despite the sharpest gain in food costs since April, rose a modest 0.3 percent in October, the government said today. Largely offsetting the 1.1 percent food price gain was the first drop in energy prices in six months.

Beef and veal prices rose 2.4 percent, the first increase after three months of falling prices and a renewed indication of the impact of the summer's prolonged heat and dry weather.

Fresh fruit prices rose 18.5 percent and vegetable prices were up 5.3 percent, also the result in large part of the summer's weather.

As for energy prices, the department said natural gas costs tumbled 2.8 percent. Over the last year, gas prices have fallen 0.7 percent, their first 12-month decline since 1965. Department analysts said a glut of gas on the wholesale market produced the October decline, which came at the start of the winter heating season in parts of the country.

For the year, the Labor Department said its Producer Price Index for finished goods has risen at an annual rate of just 0.6 percent, virtually assuring that the pace for all of 1983 will be well under the 3.7 percent of 1982.

Indeed, economists say the final tally for the year will be about 1.5 percent, which would be the smallest increase since the 0.5 percent advance of 1964.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, in Tokyo with President Reagan, called the October figure "a significantly low rate of inflation" and added that "in recent weeks we have seen a remarkable string of indicators of a flourishing economy. The October producer prices showed the foundation for the recovery is strong."

Indeed, over the last 12 months, wholesale prices have risen a small 1.3 percent, the lowest full-year gain since the 1 percent increase posted over the November 1966-November 1967 period.

Detailing last month's price activity, the Labor Department said:

—New car prices jumped 0.8 percent after falling a sharp 2.1 percent in September, when dealers offered customers special deals to close out the 1983 model year. Light truck prices shot up 10.8 percent after tumbling 5.6 percent in the previous month.

The department noted that "the October advances reflected price hikes for 1984 model-year vehicles by domestic producers."

—The 1.1 percent food price increase was well ahead of the 0.7 percent advance of September and matched the gain recorded in April. Vegetable prices rose 5.3 percent and poultry costs rose 0.3 percent. Bakery goods rose 1 percent.

—Pork prices last month, however, were off 2.5 percent and dairy product costs fell 0.2 percent.

—Gasoline prices fell 0.2 percent, slightly better than the 0.1 percent decrease of a month earlier. Fuel oil prices jumped 4.2 percent. Those prices had risen 2.5 percent in the previous month, when natural gas prices were up 0.5 percent.

The energy price calculations reported today were for September. That component of the wholesale price measure lags a month because energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most recent index.

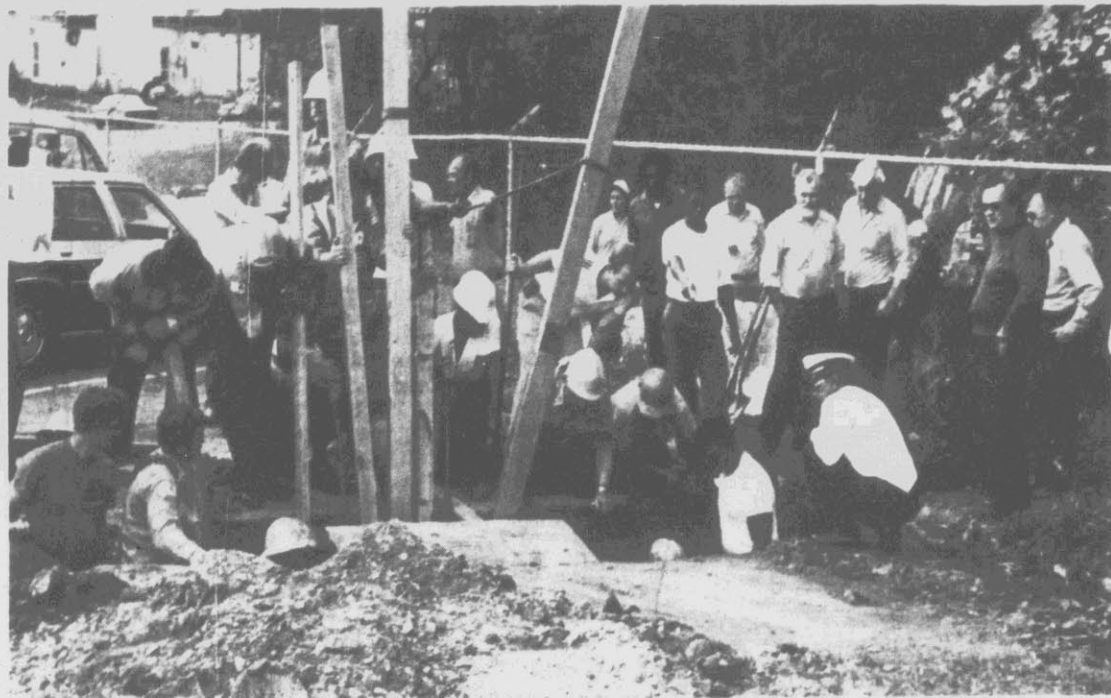

—Capital equipment costs rose 0.3 percent after falling 0.3 percent in September. Those costs are for machinery and transportation equipment used by business.

All the price changes are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

Wholesale prices rose a seasonally adjusted 0.4 percent in August and 0.2 percent in September.

In all, the Producer Price Index for finished goods stood at 287.9 in October, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $28.79 last month.

If last month's 0.3 percent increase held steady for 12 straight months, the yearly advance would be 3.8 percent. The annual rate reported by the department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly prices than the figure made public.

men were trapped Wednesday afternoon for nearly four hours. (Reflector Photos by Tommy Forrest)

Escaped From A Cave-In

Two state highway maintenance workers escaped with minor injuries after they were trapped for several hours Wednesday when a ditch in which they were working caved in at Highway Patrol Troop A headquarters in Greenville.

Randy Edwards, 23, of 111 Paris Ave. and Clarence Whitehurst, 40, of 1012B W. Fourth St. were taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital after they were removed from the ditch by Greenville Fire-Rescue Department personnel.

O.L. Potter, district engineer for the Department of Transportation, said Edwards and Whitehurst suffered bruised ankles and were "very sore this morning." He said both men were examined at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and released.

Potter said the men were helping to install a drainage pipe in the parking lot of the patrol's garage parking lot prior to resurfacing.

Potter said Edwards and Whitehurst were at the bottom of a ditch nine feet deep when one side of the ditch wall gave way, pushing their legs against the pipe and

DETOX RESOURCE HERE?

I have been a nurse in the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Emergency Department for the past few years and during this time have found the E.R. to be a babysitting service for drunk persons. This is all due to the fact that Pitt County has no acute substance abuse detoxification unit. Cherry Hospital will no longer accept any intoxicated patient regardless of their mental condition. The municipalities appear to have no statute outlawing public drunkenness, and the local alcoholic rehabilitation center will only accept patients who present themselves in a state of sobriety. So where is this drunk person sent? Where else — to the Emergency Department, putting an added strain on the E.R. staff's time and resources and also occupying beds needed for "sick" people. I would like to know if the County Commissioners have addressed this problem and what is being done to remedy this situation. J.G.

Dr. Stephen Creech, director of the Pitt County Mental Health Center, confirmed your statement that there is no substance abuse detoxification facility in Pitt County at the present time and none which serves the county other than Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro closed its detoxification unit in August, he said.

Dr. David Ames, medical director of the mental health center, said Pitt Memorial is doing a good job on medical and psychiatric units of dealing with extreme alcohol and other drug abuse cases and that some substance abusers can be detoxed at home under the supervision of a family physician. The problem, he said, are those in-betweeners who are not sick enough to justify hospitalization and who cannot be dealt with in a home setting.

He and Dr. Creech said the County Commissioners, the Mental Health Center and the hospital are now in the process of looking at what it will take to establish a detox program here. No site has been chosen, they said, and input from the community on this and other mental health issues would be welcomed.

U.S. Planes Draw Attack

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian gunners fired ground-to-air missiles at U.S. jets flying over central Lebanon today, and Syrian-backed mutineers resumed bombarding Yasser Arafat and his beleaguered fighters in Tripoli after a short-lived truce. But the PLO chief again refused to flee.

The Syrian command in Damascus said it drove off four U.S. F-14 Tomcats over central Lebanon. White House spokesman Anson Franklin, in Tokyo with President Reagan, said the U.S. planes were fired upon from Syrian-held positions while on a reconnaissance mission. None was reported hit.

Arafat's loyalists in Tripoli came under heavy bombardment from Syrian-held heights north and east of Tripoli, state radio said. The attack at midday broke a truce, less than 24 hours old, between Arafat's fighters and mutineers, backed by Syria. Israeli jets buzzed the battle area, the radio said.

Arafat's chief spokesman, Ahmed Abdul-Rahman, in a statement distributed by the Palestine Liberation Organization news agency WAFA, said Arafat had no intention of abandoning his last Middle East stronghold and that any reports that he would flee were "completely untrue and aimed at creating chaos."

Italy's defense minister, Giovanni Spadolini, announced in Rome today that if requested, Italy would evacuate Arafat from Tripoli and that two Italian warships had been ordered to the Lebanese coast to stand by for a possible evacuation.

Spadolini said Arafat could be picked up "at any place on land or sea where he might request it." None of the Italian peacekeeping contingent of more than 2,000 troops in Beirut would be involved in the rescue, he said.

Lebanese religious and political leaders in Tripoli were urgently contacting Arafat and rebel leaders to try to salvage the cease-fire, which earlier had been "generally holding," Beirut radio said.

The truce briefly took hold Wednesday evening and was to apply for four days, to give the warring factions time to discuss their disputes, said one of the cease-fire's arrangers, Sheikh Ahmed Bin Saif al Thani, the foreign minister of Qatar.

During negotiations for the cease-fire, the mutineers insisted that Arafat must leave Tripoli. Newspapers controlled by Syria and Libya, which both back the rebels, said Syrian President Hafez Assad and Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy "agreed that Arafat's departure from Tripoli is a must."

The truce was mediated by the foreign ministers of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Qatar on behalf of the six major oil-producing nations of the Arabian peninsula.

The rebel attack has cornered Arafat in Tripoli, 50 miles north of Beirut. Loyalist holdouts remain at the Baddawi camp of Palestinian refugees on the outskirts of Tripoli.

Tripoli police had estimated that at least 1,000 people were killed and 3,000 wounded in the week-old assault. The International Red Cross has said hundreds of the casualties were civilians.

The rebels claim Arafat has betrayed the PLO goal of wresting a homeland from Israel. Arafat claims the rebels have been deceived by Syria, which he says wants to dominate the PLO.

Syria denies involvement in the mutiny, but Syrian troops in north Lebanon have been supporting the mutineers with tanks and artillery.

French paratroopers fired at a car speeding toward the French chancery in Beirut Tuesday, seriously wounding three of the four occupants, the French said.

Reagan Coaxes Japan To Enter Two-Way Partnership With U.S.

TOKYO (AP) — President Reagan prodded Japan today to boost defense spending and lower trade barriers, telling Japanese lawmakers that "partnership must be a two-way street grounded in mutual trust."

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone called on the United States to push down interest rates and curtail taxes that hamper international trade.

In a day mixing the culture of ancient Japan with an exercise in 20th century international politics, Reagan said Japan should "share more of the burden of our mutual defense effort."

The president and Nakasone touched on a gamut of controversial issues that separate their two nations.

In excerpts made public this afternoon from a speech Reagan plans to make Friday to the Diet, Japan's parliament, Reagan says, "Partnership must be a two-way street grounded in mutual trust. Let us always be willing to learn from each other and to cooperate together. We have every reason to do so."

"We and the other industrialized countries share a responsibility to open up capital and trading markets, promote greater investment in each others' country, assist developing nations, and stop the leakage of military technology to an adversary bent on aggression and domination," Reagan's advance text says.

After a senior administration official reviewed the talks on the second day of Reagan's six-and-a-half day Asian journey, the president's spokesman took the rare step of following Reagan to a podium to stress that progress was indeed being made and that it was demonstrated — if in no other way — by an agreement to continue U.S.-Japanese discussions.

"We came here to set an agenda, and we set that agenda," said White House spokesman Larry Speakes. "We're setting a benchmark...to indicate the problems we have can and will be resolved."

U.S. Ambassador Mike Mansfield, known for his brief, low-keyed answers to questions when he was the Senate Democratic leader, was asked how the talks were going and responded, "Can't complain."

Reagan himself acknowledged the divergent approaches of the two countries this evening when he told a reception for U.S. and Japanese business executives, "Now that Japan has become a giant in the world economy, your nation shares the responsibility for keeping that economy strong."

"America does have trade problems with Japan, and we seek the cooperation of your government, so we can solve them together," Reagan said. "We must work for lower barriers on both sides of the Pacific."

The Reagan administration would like Japan to play a greater role in the joint U.S.-Japanese defense of this island nation, and it has complained about limits on

Daughter Of TV Star Weds A Former Resident

MALIBU BEACH, CALIF. — The daughter of Larry Hagman, star of the television series "Dallas" and an artist formerly of Greenville and Rocky Mount were married Oct. 29 here.

Heidi Kristina Hagman and Brian Howard Blount were united in marriage at the Hagman home at 4:30 p.m. Judge Merrick officiated at the double ring ceremony. According to Swedish custom, the bride's great-grandmother wore two gold bands.

Until he left home to pursue a career in art, the bridegroom lived with his grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. Edgar B. Jenkins, retired professors at East Carolina University in Greenville, N.C. His parents are Dr. Evelyn J. McAuley of Jacksonville, Fla. and the late Herman F. Blount Jr. of Rocky Mount.

Hagman escorted his daughter down the stairs to the living area where she joined the bridegroom in facing a large stained-glass window designed by the bride's maternal Aunt Lillimor and constructed in the latter's glass factory. The bride's gown was of silk embellished with lace and was designed by the mother of the bride and sewn with the help of three sisters and their Swedish mother. The bride carried a bouquet of mixed flowers and her veil was attached to a circlet of similar flowers.

The bridesmaids, Bridget Fonda and Philippa McNabb, wore dresses that were predominantly lavender. The flower girl was Mary Devon De Meritt and the ring bearer was Christopher De Meritt, grandchildren of Mary Martin. The rings were carried on a needlepoint pillow designed and embroidered by the bride.

The best man was Avery Danziger, a native of Chapel Hill, N.C., now living in Galister, N.M. The best women, Sharon Tingle, directed the ceremony.

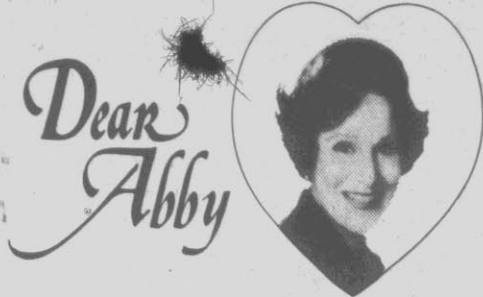

Mary Martin, the bride's paternal grandmother, sang musical selections including an unpublished selection found by Dorothy Hammerstein in her late husband's file and given by the widow to Miss Martin. A copy of "The Sweetest Thing I Ever Saw" was given to the bride by her grandmother.

Refreshments were served to family members and a few friends. Later in the evening a buffet supper was served to those invited to the reception and music for dancing was provided by a string combo.

Gloria Sanders, professor in the School of Allied Health at ECU, and Hazel Valentine of Nashville, a friend of the bridegroom and his family, traveled to California with Mrs. Jenkins.

On Friday evening Mrs. Jenkins and her daughter entertained at a post-rehearsal dinner at Bean Rivage Restaurant in Malibu. Favors prepared by Mrs. Jenkins were reminiscent of Greenville and the home of the bridegroom. Bryan R. McAuley, a student at the University of Florida in Gainesville, accompanied his mother.

The couple will live in a home which they are buying in the historic district of Santa Fe.

Timely Advice To Robbery Victims

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a retired Chicago policeman now living in Arizona. I am constantly amazed at these retired people who open their wallets in public and expose large sums of money and a string of credit cards. Don't they realize that they are asking for trouble? I see this done at every checkout counter.

After the victim was robbed, this is what we used to suggest:

- 1) Carry only as much money as you can afford to lose.
- 2) Carry only the credit card you will be using. Leave the rest at home, and be sure the cards and a list of their numbers are in separate places.
- 3) Keep your house keys and your ID in different places on your person. If a purse snatcher or a pickpocket gets both, he can rob your home anytime. If you do happen to lose both, have your locks changed immediately—I mean the same day!

Almost none of the victims had obeyed any of the above rules.

C.R. HALEY, PHOENIX, ARIZ.

DEAR MR. H.: Your rules are helpful for everyone—not only retired people. Thanks for reminding us.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl who is seriously in love with a boy who will be 14 soon. I will call him "Matthew." He is gorgeous, sweet, kind, polite and a lot of fun. My problem is that I can never get him alone. Matthew always comes over with another kid or several other boys, but he never comes over all by himself.

I would like a close and loving relationship with him, but how do I get into one the way things are going? He knows how I feel about him because I told him. (Was that a mistake?)

When I asked Matthew how come he never comes to see me alone, he said his mother told him it was "dangerous." Abby, where is the danger? I'm not going to hurt him.

Answer soon because I want this guy to like me so bad I am going crazy.

POUNDING HEART IN DENVER

DEAR POUNDING: Slow down, honey. Girls mature earlier than boys, and you are moving too fast for Matthew. And yes, it was a mistake to tell him how you feel about him. (Boys, and girls too, know when someone "likes" them—they don't have to be told.) Matthew sounds like a normal boy his age. Don't try to get him alone or you may never see him at all.

DEAR ABBY: A man from Toronto was visiting friends in Florida last winter. Being handy around the house, he offered to repair a loose shelf for his friends. The shelf was lined with an old newspaper, and when the Toronto visitor looked at it he noticed that it was The Toronto Sun!

Face up was a "Dear Abby" column he knew he had never read, and being a fan of yours, he promptly scanned it right there on the shelf.

That column had a special meaning for him because he was a transsexual who had never had any help with his problem. In your column was a letter from Christine Jorgensen, suggesting that you publish addresses of places around the country where transsexuals could find help. Our friend quietly pocketed the column before he fixed the shelf.

Today he is a patient of "Confide," a personal counseling service in New York, one of the places you named, and he is well on his way to fulfilling a lifelong dream—to become a woman.

I thought you would like to know that you helped a very desperate man who was afflicted with the feeling of having been born into the wrong sex.

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR ABBY: Reading the letter from "Bully's Wife," whose son was being reprimanded for being "lazy and stupid," hit a nerve with me. "Bully's Wife" said the lad was neither lazy nor stupid; he was a good kid who works with his father putting in 9-10 hours a day to earn his college fees.

As a boy, I was forever being clouted for my "stupidity" and pushed with a firm shove by a father who complained about my "laziness." Consequently I grew up with an inferiority complex, which took me years to overcome. Worse yet, it was accompanied by a terrible feeling of guilt for despising him.

I felt little remorse for this unfeeling person when he died, but I still feel pangs of guilt for not loving him the way I was supposed to.

Please tell "Bully's Wife" to show this letter to her husband. My father's hard hand did not make a man of me, it made me a wimp.

I made a man of myself, no thanks to him. Sign me... SELF-MADE IN ONTARIO

THIMBLE COOKIES

Requested by a reader.

¼-pound stick butter (½ cup), cut into thin pats

1-3rd cup confectioners' sugar

1 large egg, separated

½ teaspoon vanilla

1 cup fork-stirred unbleached all-purpose flour

¾ cup walnuts, finely chopped

¼ cup (about) thick strawberry preserves

In a medium bowl with an electric beater cream the butter and sugar; add the egg yolk and vanilla and beat until blended. With a wooden spoon, gradually stir in the flour until blended. Chill, covered tightly, until firm enough to shape. Using 1 level tablespoon for each, roll into balls. In a small bowl, beat the egg white until foamy; spread the nuts on a sheet of wax paper. One at a time, dip balls into the egg white and then roll in the nuts; set aside on the wax paper. Place 2 inches apart on ungreased cookie sheets. Using a lightly floured thimble (¼-inch across bottom) press an indentation (at least ¼-inch deep) in the center of each ball. Using a small fractional measuring spoon, fill each indentation with the preserves. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until lightly browned — about 15 minutes. With a wide metal spatula remove to a wire rack to cool. Makes about 1½ dozen.

Personal Finance Is Business Of Financial Planner Karen Kale

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor
As a financial planner, Karen Kale shows people the realities of personal finance — a service that involves analyzing a person's total financial situation and then designing a comprehensive strategy to achieve predetermined financial goals.

In handling personal finances she said, "Women should be aware that there are alternatives which include banks, brokerage houses and other funding agencies, having a basic grasp of what they can and can't do for you. There is no one perfect investment — each individual has to determine their own needs, the risks they are willing to take and the kind of return they expect.

"Women in general are afraid to invest but I think it's simply a lack of knowledge — they get bombarded daily through the media and they're not able to understand the differences between the products," she said.

"I think women need to be very frank in their ignorance and ask questions that will help them be a more informed consumer," she added.

In telling what someone needs in financial planning,

Ms. Kale said, "The way Americans handle their finances has turned upside down. A few years ago financial strategies were relatively tranquil. A typical family had a home as its major investment. Families also kept a nest egg in a savings account, had some life insurance on the husband, some grocery money in a checking account and maybe a few shares of blue chip stocks. Today, a financial strategy like that would lose ground every day to inflation and taxes."

"Bankers, brokers and insurance agents specialize in a limited area. For example, a broker can help plan in respect to securities; or an insurance agent can concentrate on insurance. A personal financial planner develops a well-balanced financial plan that integrates all of these areas as needed. A planner will also try to determine how much risk you are willing to take."

"In general, the planner will help you do a personal financial inventory of assets, debts, needs and wants and then take that information to complete an analysis. Often a financial planner will use a computer or consult with an attorney or accountant. The financial planner then presents the results of this analysis in a plan that is based on one's current level of income and expenditures, present assets and tax situation."

Some planners are graduates of the College of Financial Planning in Denver. Graduates of the college study insurance, taxes, retirement, employee benefits and estate planning. A qualified correlator in financial planning has varied experience and training for working in industries such as mutual funds and securities.

insurance, taxes, law and accounting.

Ms. Kale recently completed teaching a course for Pitt Community College on basic personal financial planning.

She has moved her office from Greenville to Morehead City.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

If you could die from over-communication, this country would be a graveyard.

There is no other nation on the face of this earth that disseminates more information to its people than we do.

America has the highest literacy rate in the world — over 98 percent. In 1977, the percentage of high school graduates increased to 80 percent and is still climbing. We have more 15-to-18-year-olds enrolled in school than any other nation in the world.

By the time our kids leave school they have been taught how to read, write, cook, work a computer, climb ropes, drive a car, type, do math, build a birdhouse, speak Italian, make sulphur, stop bleeding, identify a cumulus cloud, know that Thomas Jefferson invented the folding chair, write a resume, and play a musical instrument. So, what am I setting you up for?

They know nothing about money.

From the time a child is born, no one talks to him about how much things cost. He rarely knows the price of a house or a car until he is ready to buy one. The only thing we tell them about money is that it doesn't grow on trees. They figured that out the first time they tried to spend leaves.

Then, somewhere between puberty and bankruptcy, they get an answer to their financial prayers — a plastic credit card. A few months later Never-Never Land turns into small claims court and then they are told about money.

I'm exaggerating, but only a little. There are kids roaming the earth today whose first words to a contemporary are, "Do you remember where you were and what you were doing the day you found out your shampoo cost $1.85 a tube?"

There are families, of course, who talk about nothing else but money, but generally how much Daddy makes and what things cost are a well-kept confidence right up there with cousin Elmore who had a six-month baby that weighed in at ten pounds, four ounces.

People Of Vision

Greenville will soon have its first woman mayor as the result of the municipal elections held Tuesday.

Janice Buck, who had served a two-year term on the City Council, was chosen by the voters to be mayor over the next two years. She defeated A.B. Whitly. Present Mayor Percy Cox did not run.

There will be other changes in the makeup of the City Council. The front runner among the six elected to the council was Edward Carter and he will be the only black member on the council. There are no blacks on the present council.

Four incumbents were returned to the council. They are: Judy Greene, Stuart Shinn, Louis Clark and William Hadden. Carter will be a newcomer and Dr. M.W. Aldridge, a periodontist, was also elected. George Pugh, a member of the present council, ran seventh in the field of 11 candidates and thus was defeated.

The new City Council certainly has the balance and experience to lead Greenville into a continuing era of growth and development. Of those elected all but one has served, or is serving, on the council. The newcomer, Edward Carter, has experience serving on other public boards.

As always, the city has problems, but most of our problems are the ones that other municipalities would like to have. Largely they involve planning for the growth and economic development that seem to be coming our way, and making certain that economic development continues.

Growth means that streets, recreation, water and sewer, fire and police personnel and facilities must keep pace. Members of the council must be men and women of vision if we are not to be overwhelmed by our development. We wish the new council well as its members continue the task.

Work Is Never Ending

A groundbreaking will be held at Pitt County Memorial Hospital Friday for an expansion of hospital facilities.

There will be a new emergency department and expanded surgery and radiology facilities.

The project will give the hospital one of the outstanding trauma facilities of the state, according to Ralph Hall, PCMH vice president in charge of facilities, who spoke to the County Commissioners this week.

The new construction will take about a year and renovations inside the hospital will take six months to eight months.

There will be some inconvenience to patrons as entrances are closed off and alternate entrances are used. And, of course, construction work around a hospital is always a problem insofar as patient comfort is concerned.

Our region is justly proud of what has been done to make Pitt County Memorial Hospital a regional medical center. The work is never ending, however, if we are to build the type medical facility here that we must have to serve the population of eastern North Carolina.

Rewards Are Possible

NEW YORK (AP) — The hour is at hand for investors in stocks and bonds to perform the annual balancing act known as year-end tax planning.

It's not the kind of assignment most people approach with great enthusiasm. But as unappealing as an afternoon closeted with pencil, paper, calculator and your investment records may sound, it can bring large financial rewards on the bottom line of your tax return.

"Unlike the weather, and contrary to popular belief, your tax liability is something you can actually do something about," says the accounting firm of Arthur Andersen & Co. "But now is the time to get started."

In one system suggested by investment advisers for making the job as simple as possible, the investor starts by organizing all transactions made and investments held during the year into three lists.

— List A. All gains and losses on investments sold during 1983 within 12 months of the date they were purchased.

These are classified as "short term" under the tax rules.

— List B. All gains and losses on investments sold during the year after being held for more than 12 months, which qualify as "long term."

— List C. All investments still owned, with the profit or loss that would be realized if they were sold at current prices.

For small investors of limited means, compiling these lists is likely to be a simple process. There may be no entries at all on some of them. But experts point out that the rules and principles involved apply just as much for these investors as they do for active traders with large portfolios.

The next step in the process is matching up the totals for lists A and B. Under the rules, a minus amount from one column offsets an identical plus amount from the other.

But otherwise, the law treats short-term and long-term results very differently. A net short-term gain counts as ordinary income, and thus is subject to tax at rates up to 50 percent. The maximum rate on long-term gains is just 20 percent.

Furthermore, short-term losses can be written off dollar-for-dollar against your other income, up to $3,000 a year. With long-term losses, however, only half the total can be charged off in this manner.

Given those basic rules, year-end tax planners can go to work using the totals from their three lists. If the combined result yielded by A and B is zero, obviously, there is no tax to be concerned about.

But more likely, it will show a net short-term gain or loss, or a net long-term gain or loss. At this point, it is time to look at list C.

If, for example, the sum of A and B is a net short-term gain, and you have on list C an investment that hasn't worked out as you hoped, "you may want to consider realizing some losses before year-end to cut your tax liability," says Market Logic, an investment advisory service.

Or if the sum of A and B is a net long-term loss, it may make sense to sell something from list C at a profit, thereby getting the maximum tax benefit from the loss.

Should it happen that the sum of A and B is a long-term gain, Market Logic notes, there will be federal tax due, but it will be no more than 20 percent of the total. And, the firm adds, "Congratulations!"

TOKYO (AP) — President Reagan's aides, assessing the potential political results of a shortened Asian tour after the past tumultuous weeks, believe his visit to Japan and South Korea will have a modest impact at best.

And they have been doing their best not to raise false hopes about what the 6 1/2-day tour can accomplish.

Still, they are making sure that a trip intended to be long on the symbols of friendship also touches on issues of concern back home.

In Tokyo, there is concern that Japan, as a result of its successful forays into the American marketplace, is becoming a scapegoat for each and every problem in the U.S. economy.

In the view of the Japanese, according to one Japanese official, it would be best if the issues related to auto shipments to the United States and the Reagan administration's desire that Japan assume a greater role in Western Pacific defenses, are left for others to discuss while Reagan and Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone focus on "the lofty, global issues."

Indeed, certain steps have been taken to soften any potential problems during the president's visit. Informed Japanese sources said Japan's Nov. 1 announcement that it would limit its auto exports to the United States next year to 1.85 million vehicles — up only slightly from the current 1.68 million — was timed to settle that job-related issue before Reagan's arrival.

Still, despite Reagan's much-voiced concern about what is seen as a Soviet military buildup in Asia, the president and his aides were not ignoring trade topics.

Referring to the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada and the suicide bomb attack on the U.S. Marine headquarters in Beirut, one senior White House official said just before the trip began "our expectations are the political impact will be modest. There are so many things happening around the world that people aren't paying much attention" to the tour.

"We are trying to make sure people don't expect too much," said this official, speaking on the condition that he not be identified by name.

"People are concerned about the trade aspects of the trip," he said, adding that attention was being paid to "seeking more open markets."

Another official, spelling out the relationship between trade — and its inherent impact on jobs in the United States — and domestic U.S. politics, said:

"We know what next year is. It's an election year and we know everyone has a fixation on trade. It's very important that he has to be seen from the White House point of view to be dealing with these issues. Next year when he is up for election and there's a $30 billion trade deficit, everyone is going to be saying

"What are you doing about it, Ronnie?"

"The man can't go to Japan and talk about the Middle East" or nuclear missiles in Europe, the official said, "because when he comes back, people will ask what he's done about trade."

An anticipated $20 billion trade imbalance in Japan's favor this year is expected to climb to $30 billion or more next year.

However, this official said that if Japan agreed to the steps advocated by the Reagan administration, and increased purchases of U.S. beef and citrus, the deficit would be lowered by no more than $1 billion.

Still, paying heed to congressional pressure, efforts were planned "to deal with market access," this source said, adding that "more beef for Japan won't help Detroit."

Besides, he said, "You can't call a market closed that buys $25 billion in U.S. products every year."

Destination Unknown

"Hi, Colonel, where are you going with your parachute?"

"I can't tell you, son. It's a military secret."

"I'm from the press. Can I come along?"

"No way, son."

"Why not sir? I'm paid to cover wars."

"I'd be too worried about your safety. We have a mission to accomplish, and we don't want you to get hurt."

"With all due respect, sir, that sounds like a load of bullfeathers. How are the American people going to know what's really happening if you exclude the media from the operation?"

"We'll brief you at the White House, with great maps and wonderful pictures."

"That isn't the same as being on the scene. Are you trying to tell me that from now on we have only the government's word as to what happens when American troops are sent into a foreign land?"

"Why not? Do you think the government would lie to the people?"

"No, they wouldn't lie. But they do tend to see things from a different point of view. In a free and open society the American people demand to be informed as to what their government is doing."

"You may think so, but the latest polls show the American people would rather believe what their government tells them than what the media reports. The trouble with you guys is that you're always bringing them bad news, while the government prefers to give them good news. As far as the Pentagon is concerned, you guys covered your last war in Vietnam."

"Well, if you won't let me come along with you, can you give me a little hint of where you're going?"

"We're going in to overthrow a repressive government that took power through force and wiped out all the opposition."

"You're not going into Chile, are you?"

"You're not even warm. The present leaders of this particular country are no more than thugs with curfews and death squads and they have no respect for human rights."

"I got it. You're going into El Salvador."

"We are in El Salvador. The government we're going to overthrow is a totalitarian regime that rules with an iron fist, has martial law and doesn't think twice about assassinating its critics."

"Wait a minute. You're not going to attack the Philippines are you?"

"You're in the wrong ocean. It's a Communist government steeped in Marxist philosophy, with contempt for all democratic reforms."

"Poland?"

"We have no intention of being bogged down in Poland, or anyplace behind the iron curtain."

"They're so many countries in the world that fit your description, it's hard to come up with just one. Let's see, we've eliminated all totalitarian governments we support because they're not Communist, and we've eliminated all the major Communist countries because militarily it's not feasible. I'm stumped. You have to give me another hint."

"Ask me if it's bigger than a breadbox."

"I forgot that one. Is it bigger than a breadbox?"

"No, it isn't bigger than a breadbox."

"It's not bigger than a breadbox and it's a threat to the United States?"

"It isn't a threat to the United States in itself, but it's a way of sending a message to Cuba and the Soviet Union not to mess around with us because we mean business."

"You mean it's not bigger than a breadbox and the press can't even accompany the American troops going in?"

"Now you're getting very warm. Do you give up?"

"What choice do I have? Where are you going with your parachute?"

"I can't tell you. But if you go over to the Pentagon tomorrow they'll give you all the details, and to show we have nothing personal against the media, the coffee and doughnuts will be on the house."

—Elisha Douglass—

Strength For Today

In the Book of Daniel we find these words: "I was left alone, and saw this great vision" (Daniel 10:8).

If there ever was an age which needed to learn the value of being alone once in a while, it is the age in which we live. Some people appear to be positively terrified to be left alone. They must hunt up companions; they must try to arrange a party. If this is not possible, at least they can pick up the telephone and exchange news with their friends.

Yet the great discoveries in the world have been made by people who were alone. Wisdom seems to dawn upon us more when we are alone than when we are in the company of others. Also, in solitude we often gain our deepest peace.

It is a dreadful thing to be lonely. It is a more awful calamity to our souls to be overburdened with affairs, events, the burden of ourselves and the continual presence of others.

—Rowland Evans and Robert Novak—

Nuclear Issue Has Top Priority In Europe

BONN, West Germany — The shattering of a 25-year consensus among West Germany's major parties over the nuclear issue has unleashed political forces here certain to cause dangerous new tensions with the U.S., a fact made clear in high-level reactions to the Grenada affair.

A top Social Democratic Party (SPD) leader, Horst Ehmke, told the West German parliament that the SPD condemned the U.S. no less harshly than it had the Soviet Union for its invasions of Czechoslovakia and Afghanistan. Ehmke carried his tartness further, privately informing prominent diplomats that the trouble with the Americans was — Ronald Reagan.

Such comments from an astute politician of Ehmke's stature would have been unthinkable in the SPD leadership of the recent past. It would have been unthinkable if the SPD had not broken with the NATO decision — originally the SPD's own — to deploy Pershing II missiles here next month. The party was voted out of power late last year. It is now exploiting its opposition to the Pershings (and hence to the U.S.) in hopes of raiding the left-wing, anti-nuclear Green Party to rebuild its strength.

How far the SPD will go in its headlong rush away from accepting Pershing missiles, the most important NATO decision in years, and toward what looks like neo-neutrality is widely speculated upon here. But party Chairman Willy Brandt supplied a foretaste when he announced that he had originally accepted the Pershing II deployment decision only because he did not want to oppose then SPD Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, who made it the centerpiece of West German security policy.

The questions being asked are: How many in the SPD leadership, both federal and regional, supported Schmidt's courageous insistence on the new Pershing missiles for the same reason Brandt did? And how many — if any at all — will stand with the 1979 decision when the SPD finally votes not to deploy the missiles at its Nov. 18 party conference?

At stake is not the Pershing missiles themselves (all but certain to be installed in December with the full support of Chancellor Helmut Kohl's conservative government) but future effects of the shattered consensus.

"How astonishing," one official who is not partisan politician told us,

"that within one year the whole SPD Party has run away from Schmidt's policy."

One effect is to open the shooting season on the U.S., as vividly displayed by Ehmke's rebuke on Grenada. Such hyperbole may play well to the frenzied galleries of Petra Kelly's Green Party and the far-left fringe of the SPD, but it could raise hackles in the U.S. Congress, if not the White House itself. That pushes the U.S. toward re-examination of the American military role in West Germany and its ever-rising costs. It feeds American go-it-aloners.

Ambassador Arthur Burns is meeting regularly with prominent SPD politicians to warn that the poison in their rhetoric could produce unwanted antidotes across the Atlantic. Yesterday it was Grenada that made the pretext for poison.

Public Forum

To the editor:

In response to those critical of our actions in Grenada: Do you really believe that, without the military or the force they provide, you would be able to express so freely your views in a newspaper public forum?

The whole basis of our democratic nation has been achieved by bloodstains and death. Neither the Revolutionary War nor the War Between the States was discussed at a round table and solved with peaceful agreements. From the Revolutionary War came our Constitution and Bill of Rights; and from the War Between the States came the foundation for what we all enjoy as civil rights.

We cannot, as a world leader, sit quietly as communism spreads across the world like a cancerous plague. Some people in our country never have an opinion about any world situation or crisis, so long as it does not involve them. When do we become involved? Do we wait until the United States is surrounded by communist countries? Do we do nothing to help our brothers in this world share what we take for granted?

At the present time many people are critical of President Reagan, but where is the outcry against Chairman Andropov as the Soviets aggress in every corner of the world. The outcry should be against those who would destroy freedom, rather than against those who defend it.

For my part, I am proud to be a citizen of this country and to be loyal to a leader who has enough courage to stand up for freedom for all men. Certainly death and dying can never be justified, but there is always a price to pay for a treasure you possess, and frankly, I treasure my freedom.

Brain Dead Infant Kept On Supports

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Although her heart still beats, doctors say a 6-week-old infant has been "legally, morally" dead for a week and should be allowed to rest in peace. But her grieving parents, waiting for a "miracle," have vowed to keep her on life-support.

"We feel it's up to God to take her life, not the doctors," said Adrian Roberts, 31, father of Starla Roberts. "We don't feel it's the doctors' or the judge's decision."

"We're believing in God for a miracle," said Ginger Roberts, 20, the infant's mother. "My response to the doctors who believe in their tests is: Why can't they accept our faith as Christians? ... Why can't they accept someone who is stronger than all of us?"

Starla remained hooked up to life-support equipment Wednesday at Memorial Medical Center where doctors said no decision had been made as to when it should be shut off.

"There's no question, morally, legally, that the child is brain-dead," said Dr. Carlos Maggi, associate director of the pediatric intensive care unit of Memorial Medical Center.

Roberts said doctors at Memorial threatened to seek a court order to disconnect Starla's life-support system unless the couple agreed to such action. But he said the physicians backed off after his wife contacted a local television station Tuesday afternoon and told reporters of her plight.

Starla's doctors denied threatening court action.

"We are respecting the parents' feelings," Maggi said. "In many other hospitals, the child would have already been disconnected from the ventilator, but because we always try to work with the parents to understand their feelings and respect them, we haven't done that."

Both Maggi and Dr. Eliezer Nussbaum, director of the pediatric intensive care unit, say Starla has no chance of recuperating, noting that she was without oxygen for at least 30 minutes before she was found in her bed Nov. 3.

But, Starla's parents disagree.

Mrs. Roberts said that her father, an evangelist in Barstow, prayed for Starla and that they were waiting for God to heal the child.

Roberts, a bus driver, told doctors that his wife "was going to have a very, very hard time to accept that the child was dead," Maggi said.

Starla, who, according to her mother, had been plagued with respiratory problems since her birth on Sept. 19, was brought to St. Mary's Medical Center after suffering cardiopulmonary arrest at home.

Doctors said the child possibly suffered sudden infant death syndrome.

"It took a while before the paramedics came," Maggi said. "They found the child was not breathing, she didn't have a heart rate, she was doing nothing neurologically ... The child was dead on arrival."

Doctors at St. Mary's, unaware that the child had been without oxygen for at least 30 minutes, "maybe thought the child had a chance, so they put a tube in her lungs and started breathing for the child," he said.

"They were able to get a heart rate back and then they transferred the child to Long Beach Memorial," he said.

Although no child has been denied treatment because Starla has been hooked up to the life-support system, Maggi said a decision on removing the equipment should be made soon.

"We'll have to think about what's the best thing for the child," he said. "She is already dead and she should be allowed to rest in peace."

Lottery Fever In Pennsylvania And Ohio Growing

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer

SHARON, Pa. (AP) — At Penn-Ohio Discount Drugs, a store bisected by the Ohio and Pennsylvania border, Lotto fever rages.

Patrons, who can watch lottery drawings on television or call a special hotline for winning numbers, have a choice between two state lotteries — Ohio and Pennsylvania. They usually choose the Keystone State.

Pennsylvania has the country's richest and most productive lottery, one that offers headline-making jackpots to its winners and produces record profits for the state.

"It's the size of the pot. It grows and grows and grows," said Tim Trotter, Penn-Ohio Discount's director of marketing. "When the jackpot reaches a certain level, the parking lot fills up. The line for tickets goes all the way around the aisles in the store and out the door into the parking lot."

The Lotto queue includes many Ohio residents. The biggest jackpot in the Ohio game was about one-tenth of Pennsylvania's biggest prize.

"It pays more money. It's as simple as that," said John Novak, 57, a truck driver from Girard, Ohio. "There's no comparison. Pennsylvania's got it. The pot's bigger."

"We invested a lot of time and effort in marketing to make sure we're giving the people what they want," Pennsylvania lottery executive director Lynn Nelson said in explaining the success of a game that started as a weekly raffle nearly 12 years ago.

Despite a fixing scandal in 1980, the lottery's gross sales surpassed $4 billion last month. More than $1.5 billion have gone into an exclusive fund for programs benefiting senior citizens.

By law, all lottery profits go into a fund giving senior citizens property tax rebates, rent rebates, inflation dividends and free urban mass transit during off-peak hours. And a bill paying all but the first $4 on medical prescriptions to qualifying senior citizens was approved last month by the Pennsylvania Legislature.

Last year, the lottery set a new sales record of $885.4 million, but that mark will likely be eclipsed in 1983. Weekly sales now average $23 million, which puts the game on a $1 billion pace for this year.

"In gross sales, no state approaches Pennsylvania. It's the most heavily played lottery," said John Quinn, president of National Association of State Lotteries.

In 1964, New Hampshire became the first state in this century to run a lottery. Sixteen other states and the District of Columbia have since entered the sweepstakes.

In Pennsylvania, more than 70 percent of the adult population plays some form of the lottery.

"The main reason lotteries exist and why they're successful is the people want it. How many things can you do for a buck that can completely change your lifestyle?" asked Quinn.

The Pennsylvania lottery has created 132 millionaires. Despite odds of 3.8 million to one, the most popular gambit is the 18-month-old Lotto, a twice-weekly game that accounts from more than 40 percent of all lottery sales.

For $1, players get two chances to pick six numbers drawn from a pool of 40. If no one has all the numbers, the jackpot rolls over and increases until someone gets all the numbers.

On July 22, Nicholas Jorich of Harrisburg hit Lotto for $8.8 million, the largest single jackpot ever won in North America. The Sept. 2 Lotto bonanza reached $18.1 million and was shared by three players.

Even the fixing scandal, which occurred April 24, 1980, didn't hurt sales.

Nick Perry of WTAE-TV in Pittsburgh, which once televised the drawings, and lottery official Edward Plevel were convicted of rigging the winning Daily Number by weighting the game's ping-pong balls with injections of latex paint. Both men are serving jail terms.

But lottery sales rose rather than fell after the scandal.

"When you have a bank robbery or an embezzlement, they don't close up the bank," said Quinn.

Other lottery stories received national publicity.

Six years ago, Philomena Drake quit her secretarial job with U.S. Steel Corp. so she and her husband, Tom, could spend their $14,000 in assets on instant lottery tickets in hopes of winning $1 million.

After a summer-long spending spree, the couple won $1,800 but failed to hit the big prize. They split up six months later and are now divorced.

In October, Richard Smith, 19, of Erie County took $6,000 from a bond account to buy tickets for Lotto, then attempted suicide by an aspirin overdose after he failed to win, police said.

Smith's family said some blame should be shouldered by the retailer who earned a 5 percent commission by selling the tickets. But lottery officials say they can do nothing after the fact.

"We do encourage retailers to tell us when an unusual circumstance takes place. Prior to a drawing, we can cancel a ticket. But you can't come in after the drawing and say I want my money back," said Nelson.

"We don't encourage and we don't want people to spend money on lottery tickets that is needed for something else," he said. "The lottery is a form of entertainment, and we're after discretionary dollars."

Extra Space Is Given Migrants

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Migrant farmworkers in North Carolina labor camps will be entitled to an extra 30 square feet of space per person under standards adopted by the state Commission for Health Services.

The commission voted Wednesday to raise minimum space requirements from 20 to 50 square feet, bringing the state in line with federal standards for labor camps and answering criticism by farmworkers' advocates.

"For a person to live in a space like this we think is inhuman and intolerable," said Joseph Hughes of the East Coast Farmworkers Support Network.

Steve Edelstein, a Raleigh attorney, said standards for migrant labor camps are lower than for state prisons. He said labor camps have lower space requirements and few fire safety requirements.

"I think we should have more room," said Joseph Simms, a farmworker. "I've lived in these camps."

Before the meeting, six people carried signs in front of the building where the commission met. The signs said, "How much room for a farmworker?" and "20 square feet?"

The commission also adopted temporary health standards identical to existing state laws, giving the commission time to gather more information and adopt permanent regulations next February.

The commission will hold four public hearings on proposed permanent regulations in January. The higher state standards will not take effect until April 1, 1984.

The 1983 General Assembly passed a law repealing existing health standards as of Jan. 1, 1984. The law gave the commission authority to write new regulations for the labor camps.

Several commission members also expressed concern about the frequency of health inspections at the camps. Currently, an inspection is required for a permit to operate the camp and at least one other inspection is required each year.

Commission member Kimsey King said he thought inspections should be required each time the camp is filled with new workers.

Arrests Made In Pitt Theft

Two Raleigh residents were arrested Wednesday in Craven County and charged with an armed robbery reported Tuesday morning at Lee's Grocery and Grill at Stokestown on N.C. 102, according to Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

He said Craven County authorities, who were investigating a check forgery at Cove City, arrested Willie Junior Smith, 42, of 6209 Creedmore Road and Josephine Williams Florance, 33, of 324 Hill St.

Tyson said Walter Lee Haddock, the store operator, told deputies that $200 from the cash register and his wallet containing $800 were taken in the robbery. Tyson said Smith then allegedly attempted to cash a check in Cove City that had been in Haddock's wallet.

Smith and Florance were charged on the forgery count in Craven County, Tyson said, and were held for Pitt authorities. Bond for each person was set at $100,000 on the armed robbery charges, he said. Authorities also confiscated an automobile in the arrest, according to Tyson.

Investigation is continuing, he said.

Deputies Arrest Break-In Suspect

Pitt County deputies arrested Christopher B. Presser of 302 Lee St. and charged him with a Nov. 1 break-in at the home of Eleanor Cherry, 201 Guinevere Lane in Camelot subdivision, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

He said deputies recovered a television set, valued at $700, that was taken in the robbery. Tyson said entrance to the home was gained after a lock was broken on a door.

Bond for Presser was set at $400.

Study Cites Child's Need For A Home

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — One child has severe bruises on his head. Another stays away from home and is truant from school.

Such cases are common for state social workers. In the past, officials say, the state was relatively quick to intercede. The child often was taken away from his home and put in foster care.

But that is changing now. And if members of the Governor's Advocacy Council on Children and Youth have their way, that policy will change more in the future, paced by changes they proposed in the state's juvenile codes.

The council, whose members included social service workers, attorneys, psychiatrists and foster parents, concluded in a recent report that "our present practices often do more harm than good."

"The laws were left up to interpretation. As a judge, I have a difficult time saying what 'neglect' means," said District Judge Kelley Edward Greene of Lillington, a council member. He was referring to a condition that current state codes say is sufficient cause for removal of a child from his home.

Nearly 7,000 children in North Carolina are in the custody of county departments of social services, the report "Acting on Behalf of Endangered Children" says. A child's average stay in foster homes is nearly four years, and many move from home to home.

"The old system evolved from a very caring point of view ... but recent studies have disputed" some of its premises, said John R. Wiblock, the council's executive director.

"It's hard to say that kids were taken away when they needn't have been, but some of them weren't really any better off" when they were removed from their families, said Margot Roten, chairman of the council's committee on foster care standards.

The council recommends that a child should be removed from his home only when the state can prove he will suffer specific harms if he stay, and if the state has a better alternative available.

Under those guidelines, a truant child would stay at home. A physically abused child would be removed if the parents showed no signs of changing their ways, Wiblock said.

Once a child has been removed from the home, social workers should make every effort possible to work with the family to make his return safe, the council members say.

"We're saying that the family has an initial right to family autonomy," Ms. Roten said. "We figured that in most cases the children are going to be better off if you can fix the family."

Under the council's recommendations, if social workers judge the return of the child to be unsafe after six months for children ages 3 and under and after a year for others, the child would be found a permanent home.

"The concrete difference between this approach and the old one would be probably several thousand children each year would remain in their homes," Wiblock said. "They'd receive additional care within the home rather than in foster care."

"Studies have shown us that a child's parents are terribly, terribly important," he said. "There should be no damaging of those psychological bonds unless it is absolutely necessary to the safety of the child."

Settlement To Cost $10 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Burlington Northern Inc. will pay $10 million to railroad workers and applicants who had charged the railroad with race discrimination.

The settlement, announced Wednesday by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, resolves a lawsuit filed against BN in Chicago in 1974. The railroad also agreed to give priority consideration to black applicants whose applications were rejected.

Discoveries By An Orbiting Eye

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An orbiting telescope is rewriting astronomy books with its discovery of new comets, giant rings of dust, interstellar clouds and direct evidence ours is not the only solar system in the universe.

Three new findings were revealed Wednesday as astronomers reported on the first 10 months operation of the Infrared Astronomical Satellite (IRAS), a joint venture of the United States, The Netherlands and Great Britain.

"Man has always wanted to learn his place in the universe: IRAS is our first road map," said Nancy Boggess, program scientist for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Newly found are three giant rings of dust in the solar system, huge dust shells around the star Betelgeuse and a mysterious object — possibly an asteroid or a dead comet — that passes nearer to the sun than any planet or known asteroid.

These are not as exciting as some earlier discoveries by the heat-sensing telescope, but are significant nevertheless as astronomers try to piece together the history of the universe.

Project officials reported earlier this year that the satellite had produced the first direct evidence of what may be another solar system besides ours — a vast cloud of particles circling Vega, one of the brightest stars in the sky. Astronomers said Wednesday the satellite's telescope, which detects infrared radiation from an object, may have located as many as 50 such systems in the heavens.

Other earlier findings: The detection of five comets, infrared clouds in interstellar space and large amounts of infrared radiation emitted by galaxies that are only smudges to Earth telescopes.

"IRAS is providing us with a steady stream of stunning discoveries; so far, the results have been nothing short of spectacular," said James M. Beggs, NASA administrator.

"We're getting a look at the universe in a way not possible before," said Mrs. Boggess. "It's a new window on the universe. A lot of chapters in the astronomy books will be rewritten when all the results are in."

The satellite has been transmitting enormous amounts of data since it was launched in January, "and we're just beginning to scratch the surface," she said. "We've only examined a small fraction of it."

The new object reported Wednesday is about 1.2 miles in diameter and passes within 9 million miles of the sun. It has been cataloged as 1983TB.

Although 1983TB looks like an asteroid, NASA's Conway W. Snyder said its orbit almost exactly matches that of the Geminid stream of meteoroids, which are visible as a shower of shooting stars each December. Thus, he said, the object could be a dead comet whose ice and other volatile materials have boiled away during its frequent passes by the sun.

Frank Low of the University of Arizona reported the three rings of dust detected within the solar system may have been created by the collision of two or more asteroids or a comet crashing into an asteroid as it tried to penetrate the asteroid belt.

Harm Habing of Huygens Laboratory in The Netherlands said astronomers studying IRAS data at the University of Groningen in that country had discovered three giant dust shells around Betelgeuse, one of the brightest stars in the constellation Orion.

He said the shells are about four light years away from the star, which means their debris left the star a relatively brief 100,000 years ago. The data, he said, will allow astronomers to study the earliest stages of mass lost by a star.

Michael Hauser of NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center showed infrared pictures of the center of the Milky Way, 30,000 light years from our sun. He interpreted the beautiful red, blue, yellow and green images as a great concentration of dust clouds and molecular gas, "with a great number of wisps of unknown material."

Charge Nude Driver

A Traffic Hazard

ORMOND BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A Rocky Mount, N.C., woman was arrested after allegedly driving nude on Interstate 95 and turning on the light inside her car to give passing truckers a better view, police said.

The naked woman was a traffic hazard, said Volusia County Deputy Larry Humm, who arrested her early Wednesday near a rest area north of State Road 40.

Humm said Toni Hardwick Smith, 33, was also charged with drunken driving and possession of marijuana.

The officer said he was parked at the rest area when he overheard at least five truckers talking on citizens band radio about a car traveling south on the interstate.

Radio chatter indicated the truckers were jockeying for position to get a better look at the unclothed woman, he said.

Humm stopped the car when it passed through the rest area. When he walked up to the car, he saw the woman scrambling to put on a shirt. Her pants were below her knees and she wore no underwear, Humm said.

The deputy said he turned away to let her dress and find her license. The car sped off, and after a chase at speeds of more than 75 mph, Humm stopped the woman half a mile north of State Road 40. He said the car was weaving back and forth during the chase.

Ms. Smith, then fully dressed, got out of her car and explained she had been changing clothes and had fled because Humm frightened her.

After telling deputies that she had been drinking beer, tests determined she had 0.11 percent alcohol level in her blood, 0.01 percent above the Florida limit.

Ms. Smith was charged with fleeing from a police officer, driving while intoxicated and possession of half a pound of marijuana which Humm said was found in the car. She was released on bond from the Volusia County Jail.

Ms. Smith listed her occupation as a salesperson for an agricultural chemical plant in North Carolina.

Ethics Panel Leans To Giving Evidence To The Justice Dept.

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Ethics Committee says the panel is likely to hand over to the Justice Department evidence the panel has developed in an investigation of altered committee hearing transcripts.

But Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said the transfer of such evidence, if approved by the committee, must not break down the constitutional separation of powers between the executive branch and Congress.

Stokes' committee is being urged to share the evidence by most of the seven Republicans whose complaints earlier this year touched off investigations by both the ethics panel and the Justice Department.

The Republicans say they were made to appear foolish and uninformed by unauthorized alterations to transcripts of joint hearings of five House subcommittees last year. The subcommittees were looking into operations of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Rep. Robert S. Walker of Pennsylvania, one of the seven Republicans, told the ethics committee Wednesday that without the panel's evidence, the department's criminal investigation is at a dead end.

"Those (ethics) files consist of the whole case. The Justice Department cannot proceed without those files," said Walker, adding that he believes "at least several" criminal violations occurred.

The ethics panel, formally known as the House Committee on Official Standards of Conduct, must vote to determine whether the evidence will be given to Justice Department investigators. Stokes did not indicate when the private vote would be taken, but he said the panel is leaning toward helping the Justice Department.

"I would think in all probability the sense of this committee would be to accede to any request made by the Justice Department while still preserving the requirements of the House," Stokes said at Wednesday's hearing.

In September, after the ethics panel started its probe, Lester Brown resigned from the staff of the environment, energy and natural resources subcommittee.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, the chairman of the Government Operations Committee, said Brown told him that "he personally had made unauthorized changes in the record."

The resignation removed Brown from ethics committee jurisdiction. Under House rules, the panel can recommend disciplinary action only against incumbent representatives and employees currently on the House payroll.

Walker and Rep. John Hiler, R-Ind., said the ethics committee should not be swayed by arguments that constitutional separation of powers would be violated by cooperating with the Justice Department's criminal investigation.

"Separation of powers to me does not mean that one branch of government should be above the law," Hiler said.

"The bottom line," Walker said, "is we should not allow this body to house criminal activity."

Several Republicans on the ethics panel agreed. Rep. John T. Myers of Indiana said the situation appeared to be a reverse of Watergate, "when the executive had all the evidence and Congress demanded it be turned over."

"It's a very serious problem," Myers said. "If it's criminal, we cannot withhold that evidence. ... We have a responsibility." He added, however, that "I want to protect the separation of powers by any means."

Except for Stokes, committee Democrats were generally noncommittal about handing over the evidence to the Justice Department.

MURDER — Nine murder victims, all strangled, were found in burlap bags in a gully south of Zaragoza, El Salvador by civil guardsmen. The victims included two pregnant women, and the killings were similar to those of rightist death squads. (AP Laserphoto)

Congress Votes Pay Dairymen Not To Produce Milk

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the backing of tobacco-state lawmakers, Congress has approved a plan that would, for the first time ever on a national scale, begin paying dairy farmers not to produce milk.

The House endorsed the plan, also backed by the major dairy cooperatives, on a 325-91 vote Wednesday after rejecting an alternative that would have simply cut the government price support level by about 11 percent.

A similar measure already had been approved by the Senate, and the matter is to be sent to a House-Senate negotiating committee to work out differences between the two versions. Those include a fine-tuning of the tobacco program passed by the Senate but not included in the House bill.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, the House Agriculture Committee chairman, called Wednesday's vote "a welcome step toward reducing surpluses and helping the nation's milk producers move toward a better economic balance."

But Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., likened the action to piracy and predicted that President Reagan ultimately will veto the industry-backed dairy measure. Conable had proposed his own alternative that would simply have cut the price support. That idea was rejected 250-174.

Opponents of the bill warned tobacco congressmen it will not become a vehicle for changes in the leaf program.

"You are riding a sick horse," said House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill. "I predict it will be a dead horse by the end of the year."

Michel and other Republican leaders warned that the farm package including dairy and tobacco changes would be vetoed by President Reagan.

Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., disagreed.

"I certainly hope they wouldn't do a thing like that," he said. "Certainly they understand how important this is to North Carolina and the chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee (Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.)."

"If it's worthy of a veto now, why wasn't it worthy when Sen. Helms was in charge of it?" Rose said. "I hope this was just sabre-rattling..."

Of North Carolina congressmen, Republicans James Brohill and Jim Martin were joined by Democrats James McClure Clarke and Robin Britt in voting for Conable's amendment. The rest of the delegation opposed it.

Agriculture Secretary John Block backed the industry's bill when it passed the Senate Oct. 7 attached to tobacco changes advanced by Helms, who faces a tough re-election fight next year. But the administration switched sides just two weeks ago, lining up behind the Conable version and coming out with new, revised figures to show it would cost less than the bill advanced by dairy interests.

The tobacco section includes a two-year freeze on price supports, ends the leasetransfer system for tobacco allotments in 1987, and would give the agriculture secretary the authority to cut price supports for lower quality grades of tobacco.

Tobacco supporters hope to get the changes approved before Congress adjourns Nov. 18.

Conable said the measure passed because of lobbying by the dairy industry on behalf of large farmers who need high price supports to pay for heavy investments in milk plants. Asked whether his own approach would not have hurt such dairy plants, he said:

"We've got to start easing the rug out from under them, or sooner or later the American people are going to sweep away the entire agriculture program." Farm subsidies cost more than $21 billion, a record amount, in the fiscal year just ended.

Consumer and food industry groups supported Conable's proposal as a way to cut the price of dairy products.

Under the approved legislation, the government would begin next year to pay nearly 80 percent of full price to milk producers who agree to cut their production by 5 to 30 percent below normal. The payments of $10 for each hundred pounds not produced would continue for 15 months.

Farmers would help pay for the so-called "paid diversion" program through an assessment of 50 cents for each hundred pounds of milk they produce. A hundred pounds is roughly equivalent to 11 gallons.

In addition, the support price — the price farmers are guaranteed they will receive for their milk — would be trimmed from $13.10 per hundred pounds to $12.60. Additional cuts would be possible in future months if production is insufficiently curbed.

And the bill would set up a national milk promotion and marketing campaign to boost consumption. That would be financed with a 15-cent-per-hundred-pounds assessment.

Defending against suggestions that the bill was an attempt to pay farmers for "loafing," Rep. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said, "It's not paying them not to work. It's assisting them in maintaining their overhead."

Some opponents saw the vote as an attempt by Democrats to ingratiate themselves to the wealthy dairy lobby, which gives millions of dollars to House and Senate candidates.

Conable said Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., chairman of his party's House re-election committee, stood near the chamber door during the vote on his alternative and urged members to oppose it because it was "a Republican bill."

To keep milk prices up to the federally guaranteed minimum, the government buys up and stores surplus cheese, butter and dried milk. The government bought about one of every 10 pounds of U.S. production in the year ended Sept. 30, at a cost of $2.6 billion.

Current law, which assesses farmers $1 per hundred pounds to help pay for the price-support system and curb production, has been universally unpopular and has had little effect on trimming surpluses

'Settlement' For Treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — A woman convicted of stabbing a Secret Service agent inside Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's Senate office suite will receive a small settlement for being treated in jail against her will.

A court settlement approved Wednesday gave Suzanne Osgood an amount described as less than $10,000 by one of her lawyers, Robert Carson Godbey.

Ms. Osgood, now 42, sought $80,000 in damages after she was injected with a mind-altering drug to calm her in a District of Columbia jail on June 4, 1980. Ms. Osgood, whose Christian Scientist religion avoids medical treatment, had earlier signed a form refusing treatment.

Ms. Osgood was sentenced in 1980 to five years in prison for assault on a federal officer. On Nov. 28, 1979, a Secret Service agent was wounded when he led her after she entered Kennedy's offices.

Investigating Security Breach

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Embarrassed State Department officials, investigating a bizarre security breach, are directing the search of a nearby prison for missing top-secret documents stored in a safe mistakenly delivered to the prison.

The documents, which included highly sensitive daily intelligence reports for Secretary of State George P. Shultz, were not missed until they were discovered late last month by prison officials. But some of the documents fell into the hands of prison inmates and investigators said they were still being recovered from the prison late Wednesday.

"It's possible, if not probable, that we do not" have all the documents, said a high-ranking State Department security official, who insisted on anonymity. "What we really are concerned about now is whether we have all the documents."

The papers were in a four-drawer cabinet safe mistakenly taken from a State Department office in early August along with unused filing cabinets that were to be refurbished by inmates at the Lorton prison in nearby northern Virginia.

The documents presumably included data supplied by the Central Intelligence Agency, U.S. embassies and other highly sensitive sources. But officials said there was no reliable record of all the documents and it was difficult, if not impossible, to determine all of what was in the safe.

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., who viewed some of the documents Tuesday and arranged for their return, said, "There were classified documents, some extremely high, as high as any I have seen as a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee."

Another classified document was found in a search of the prison late Wednesday, and officials said the search would continue.

While officials were treating the incident as a bizarre mistake, they said "appropriate disciplinary action would be taken as the facts warrant."

Embarrassing in any circumstances, the incident was all the more embarrassing for the security-conscious Reagan administration, which uses lie detectors to try to plug leaks and is seeking to impose lifetime muzzling of government employees who have access to secret documents.

Officials privately acknowledged that one of the most incredible aspects of the incident was that the safe was not missed from the time it was picked up at the State Department in early August until it was discovered by a Lorton official on Oct. 25. The safe was held in a department warehouse for a month before it was sent to the prison.

No attempt was made to disguise the extremely sensitive nature of the documents or the damage to national security that would ensue if they fell into the wrong hands. But officials refused to discuss them in detail.

Shultz was with President Reagan on a visit to Japan today and did not immediately comment publicly.

Officials at the city-owned prison were searching the facility and questioning the prison's 2,800 inmates about the documents.

Romberg said, all of the documents were current and sensitive, dated from January through March of this year, and that they include daily intelligence reports given to Shultz. Occasionally red-faced in answering reporters' questions, Romberg acknowledged the department was embarrassed.

"It is a serious matter," Romberg said. "The fact of the matter is that those were sensitive documents that were in that safe."

He said some of them were stamped "top secret" and a damage assessment is under way to learn whether any of the nation's intelligence and diplomatic secrets were compromised.

But another official said "there is no indication that any of this has found its way to a foreign intelligence agent."

Romberg gave this account of how classified information was transferred from the main State Department building in Washington to Lorton:

The documents were in a four-drawer filing-cabinet safe with a combination lock. Its contents were being readied for copying on micro-film by the State Department's Bureau of Intelligence and Research.

Several other safes were emptied and their contents copied. On Aug. 1 the empty safes were picked up by workmen and taken to a State Department warehouse. The workmen also removed "one full but unsecured safe in the process."

On Sept. 1, the safes, including the one still full of documents, were taken to Lorton which has a furniture repair facility and stored in a "limited access" warehouse.

Romberg said the loss was only not discovered until Oct. 25 when Lorton officials contacted the department's security branch to report they had found a large quantity of documents in a routine check.

Although there was no public disclosure of the incident then, an investigation was launched. Romberg said the assumption was that all of the papers had been recovered.

But on Tuesday, a local television station, WTTG, reported that a Lorton inmate turned over some more documents to one of its reporters. It showed the documents to Mathias, who arranged for their return.

Every Story Is Challenge

CINCINNATI (AP) — Writing doesn't come easy, admits award-winning author Isaac Bashevis Singer, who's still cranking out the words at age 79.

"Every new story is a new challenge," said the author whose stories richly portray simple, fallible people stumbling toward the meaning of their lives.

"You could write 20 good books and there is no guarantee that the 21st will be good; it could be terrible. The danger is always there."

Singer's stories, written in Yiddish, have been translated into more than 20 languages and won the 1979 Nobel Prize in literature.

He puts words on paper with either a fountain pen or a rickety Yiddish typewriter which is sometimes uncooperative.

"The typewriter is 50 years old and it thinks it is a critic," says the author. "If it doesn't like a story, it stops working."

Singer was in town to attend a conference of the Midwest Federation of Library Associates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 17.58 points Wednesday, rose 5.79 to 1,238.31 by noon today.

Gainers held a 9-5 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts described the rise as primarily a "technical" rally after several weeks of declining prices. They noted that the best gains were concentrated in a few blue chips.

However, some market-watchers said stocks also benefited from a steady showing by the bond market, which is absorbing a $16 billion sale of notes and bonds by the Treasury this week.

In today's economic news, the government reported that producer prices of finished goods rose 0.3 percent last month. The figure gave no signal of any impending increase in the inflation rate.

American Telephone & Telegraph led the active list, down 1/4 at 63 3/4. Trading in the stock included a 1 million-share block at 64 1/4.

Among other actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines rose 1 to 124 3/4; General Motors gained 3/4 to 75 1/2, and Sears Roebuck was up 3/4 at 40 1/4.

But Walt Disney Productions tumbled 7 1/4 to 51 after the company reported lower earnings for the quarter and fiscal year ended Sept. 30.

The NYSE's composite index added .40 to 94.84. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.11 at 216.39.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 43.75 million shares at noon, against 32.70 million at the same point Wednesday.

partially burying them. Potter said one of the men was actually covered initially by the clay-type material but a work foreman was immediately able to remove some of the material.

Highway Patrol Sgt. R.B. Miller, who said the cave-in occurred about 1:10 p.m., said Greenville rescue workers "ran oxygen down to at least one of them" as they dug with shovels and hands to free Edwards and Whitehurst.

Potter said the last of the men was taken from the ditch about 3:30 p.m.

"We are thankful they were not hurt any worse than they were," said Potter. "I would like to thank the people who made an effort to get them out. The rescue men were at the site in just a few minutes. Our men also did an excellent job initially before the others arrived," he said.

Farmville Opens Playoff Title Quest

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

"I've never been there before; I don't even know what it looks like," Farmville Central Coach Gil Carroll said after his team clinched a berth to the State 3-A Conference Division II playoffs.

Carroll and the Jaguars get their baptism under fire this Friday when they travel to Havelock for a battle with the Rams. Havelock dropped a 3-0 decision to White Oak on a 37-yard field goal in the final moments of the deciding game of the Coastal 3-A Conference race.

In other playoff games involving area teams, Williamston will host Warren County in another 3-A Division II playoff bout, while Jamesville makes a long trip to Bladenboro in the 1-A Division I tournament.

Williamston defeated Edenton 21-14 in the final regular season game to finish 6-2 in the conference behind Tarboro and 8-2 overall. Jamesville, however, completed its schedule with a 50-0 trouncing of Columbia to stand 6-1 in the conference while 8-2 overall.

FARMVILLE CENTRAL. As Carroll stated, the Jaguars find themselves in an unusual position — the postseason playoffs.

Farmville posted its first winning season since 1979 with a 7-3 overall mark while 5-1 in the league to finish behind eighth-ranked Southwest Edgecombe in the Eastern Carolina Conference. The Cougars posted a 28-0 win over Farmville, but Carroll said the Jaguars had a chance to win up until the fourth quarter when they let Southwest score a pair of touchdowns to expand the margin.

The Jaguars lost their first two games of the year, as Williamston won the opener 7-0 and Bertie Senior followed the next week with a 20-3 pounding. Farmville's only home victories were against C.B. Aycock, 34-7, and Southern Nash 20-3.

But Farmville was unbeatable on the road, with a 28-6 victory at Ayden-Grifton's Homecoming insuring a spot in the playoffs. Carroll was worried of a letdown in the Jags' final game of the season, but Southern Nash closed the season as Farmville's seventh victim.

"They're real excited about playing another week," Carroll said. "They're not ready for the season to be over. They're really up for the game."

"As a coach, you like to see the players excited early in the week. Some people think it's not good to get so excited this far ahead of a game, but I think it's a snowballing effect building up to the game."

The Jaguars have averaged scoring over 21 points each of their wins, but the Rams have only given up 28 points in 10 outings — a statistic Farmville will have to alter to advance to the second round of the tournament.

"They've given up the fewest amount of points of any team in the eastern part of the state this year," Carroll said. "They've got a bunch of boys who've never lost a game since they were on the junior varsity. Someone told me their quarterback lost his first game since junior high last Friday."

"They're smaller and quicker than we are. If we play the line tight and don't over-penetrate, we can make that disadvantage balance out or shift to our favor. They've thrown the opposition for a loss 100 times this year. They run a '4-stack' defense and like to mix up the blitzes."

"Basically, we're preparing for this game the same as any other we've played with the exception of watching more film than in the past."

The Jaguars will rely on depth to help counter the Rams' advantage of speed. Toronto Moya has taken over the starting role at tailback since shifting to that position after the loss to Southwest Edgecombe. Moya has rushed 74 times for 340 yards, averaging 4.6 per carry and 68 a game.

Jeff Vail leads the Jaguars' point production with eight touchdowns, while rushing 560 yards on 115 carries. Tyrone Forbes leads the fullbacks with 380 yards on 84 rushes, but Edward Davis gets the starting berth with 179 yards on 42 runs.

Junior quarterback Bobby Evans has connected on 40 out of 74 pass attempts for 589 yards and four touchdowns with just four interceptions. Dennis Tripp leads the Farmville receivers with 23 catches for 384 yards.

Linebacker Joey Steppe leads the senior-laden Jaguar defense, while John Ford and Chris Edwards anchor the line at tackle.

"We have 10 of the basic 13 players on offense coming back next year," Carroll said. "We use a lot of seniors on defense, though. We play more people than they do. They have seven going both ways, while we only have three."

"Patrick Nilsson has been pretty consistent for us with the kicking game. That might play an important role if we can get inside the 30 — he's best from 30-35 yards out. He's missed three extra points, but he's 18-21 for the year."

"It's been a good year for us so far; the guys are glad to finally get a chance to make it to the playoffs. They don't want it to end now."

WILLIAMSTON
The Williamston Tigers lost six players at mid-season in 1982 over a disciplinary matter and subsequently lost the last five games to finish 2-8. But the young players who suffered through that record returned in 1983 to post an 8-2 mark and take second place in the Northeastern 3-A Conference.

Now the Tigers will host Warren County in the Division II opener Friday after

Frustrating Year For Rose

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Last Friday night ended the 1983 football season for Rose High School — a season that saw the Rampants go from the heights to the depths before it was over.

Many times, one might see a team struggle early and then suddenly improve, finally putting it all together for a strong finish. But with the Rampants in 1983, it was just the opposite. They opened with a strong 18-10 victory over Jacksonville, snapping what was then the state's longest winning streak. Jacksonville was the defending state champion and already had a game behind it when it faced the Rampants.

That Friday night, back in early September, things looked bright for the Rampant football team. They were ranked over the next few weeks, as high as fourth in the state. Visions of a league championship danced before their eyes — and maybe even a state title.

But in the fourth week, the bubble burst. Northern Nash pulled off an astounding 28-7 win over the Rampants, and the following week, Rocky Mount pulled out a 14-7 win in a controversial finish.

From there on, it was a battle simply to keep heads above water. Rose won but one of its six conference games — and was stunningly shut out the final three games of the year. No one around Rose can ever remember a three-game scoreless streak by a Greenville team.

From the heights to the depths. It was that kind of year.

"It was really a very, very frustrating season," Coach Ronald Vincent said looking back on his third year as head coach. Last year, Rose had gone to the new Division II 4-A finals before losing to Asheville, and Vincent had hopes early of grabbing off one of the two Division I berths, the Big East Conference had. Most around the conference agreed that his team had the chance, picking Rose a strong second in the league despite a lack of experience on the squad.

"But after the Rocky Mount game," Vincent said, "it was a struggle just to keep going."

Oddly enough, there were few defections from the team.

"I really thought that after we lost at Homecoming, there would be a number to quit, but it wasn't so. They hung on and kept trying."

The start of it all can be traced to a single play in the Northern Nash game. The Knights had rushed out to an early 21-0 lead over the Rampants, who fought back and cut the lead to 21-7. Then, they were on the threshold of scoring again when Northern's Jarrad Moody intercepted a pass and returned it 98 yards for a touchdown.

It broke the Rampant back that night. Instead of being able to come on back and pull out the win, Rose was dead.

The following week, the Rampants fought against Rocky Mount, battling back from a 7-0 deficit to tie the game in the third period. Then, in the fourth, Rose had a touchdown pass called back and a few minutes later, a Rocky Mount pass was completed in the end zone — or at least what the officials called the end zone. Vincent and his team still maintain that the ball was caught beyond the back of the scoring box.

"I think some of the players must have figured that with two losses we were out of the playoff picture," Vincent said. "Then, too, we lost our entire offensive line to either injuries or illness during about a three week period from Eastern Wayne to Rocky Mount, and I'm not sure how much that illness took away from our strength at that time when people came back."

But, the coach agreed, there was no question that Moody's interception was the key that started the Rampants on their slide to the bottom.

"We never seemed to go wide open again after that," he said. "It seemed like if we got behind after that, we never could battle back. We also didn't block and tackle well during the remainder of the season, and that was really disappointing."

The coach also feels that there were some intangibles, too, such as a lack of senior leadership this year. "Losing didn't seem to bother some people."

After the Rocky Mount loss, some players were in the bus crying, but others stood around talking and waiting for post-game soft drinks.

But while things ended on a downer with the three shutouts, Vincent is convinced that there are better things ahead.

He feels that the junior class is a good one, and his sophomores proved that they are able in their 8-2 junior varsity season. And there are a group of freshmen coming up who in two years of junior high ball, stand 13-0-1, having recorded five straight shutouts at the end of the year.

Untested — certainly — but the ability appears there in the two lower classes. Now, he feels, if the returnees to the varsity — and 14 of them were starting at the end of the season — can do the leadership job next fall things could be greatly improved.

"I hope that they were disappointed enough to put forth a great effort in the winter and spring to improve before next fall. We have a strong nucleus that can really get us off to a good start next year."

And like the Dodgers, the rallying cry this year is — "Wait 'till next year."

Maury Banks Making Life Miserable For Ball Carriers

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

"I'd rather play Nebraska in a bowl than Carolina; Nebraska is more of a challenge. Carolina's good, but Nebraska has a better offense."

This could be the comment of a defensive lineman of the Texas Longhorns, or the Miami Hurricanes, or the Illinois of Illinois.

But it's not; it came from East Carolina University defensive tackle Maury Banks.

Seems like a bold statement from a senior who came into his final season with only five tackles and one quarterback sack to his credit while his team posted a 16-17 mark over the past three years.

But while the 1983 Pirates have been compiling a 6-3 record with narrow losses to Florida State, Florida and Miami, — all of which were ranked in the top eight in the nation at the time — Banks has been quietly making life miserable for opposing ball carriers and quarterbacks.

So far as a "backup" for Steve Hamilton, Banks has been credited with 26 tackles and five QB sacks. Banks had a pair of solo tackles in ECU's 12-7 loss to the fifth-ranked Miami Hurricanes last Saturday — a loss which jeopardized the Pirates' hopes for a bowl bid.

East Carolina had one final chance to win the game on a 41-yard pass from Kevin Ingram to Stefan Adams on the goal line, but Norwood Vann and Adams collided and the ball sailed out of the end zone.

"I was practically on the field when the ball was on the way," Banks said. "I saw it pop up in the air; I just turned around and headed to the dressing room. I thought one of the Miami players had hit the ball; I didn't know they ran into each other."

East Carolina free safety Clint Harris was ejected from the game for a scuffle after the play that produced the Hurricanes' winning touchdown, but Banks wasn't aware of it until after the game.

"I was on the bottom of a pile and didn't even see what happened," Banks said. "I'm not surprised, though. I was told they were really giving him a hard time running their mouths."

"They tried a lot of verbal abuse to intimidate us, but they can't do it that way. That kind of stuff doesn't do anything but make us mad — then we want to hit them that much harder."

No one had to tell Banks about hard hitting — he had the straps to his shoulder pads broken during the game.

"I felt like I had been held all day," Banks said. "I've been in rough games before, but I've never had anything like that happen before."

The Pirates went through much of the same when they lost 24-17 two weeks earlier to the Florida Gators. A 47-46 loss to the Florida State Seminoles in the opening game of the season was the Pirates' only other setback.

"Neither (Florida nor Miami) was as tough as Florida State," Banks said. "Florida State was the toughest offensive team we've played. That was a real challenge."

"I know we can play good defense."

The Pirates are still in contention for a bowl bid, but Banks has his own criteria for a strong finish.

"We have to win the last two games (against William and Mary and Southern Mississippi)," he said. "We want to prevent the big plays. If we can do that, everything else will fall into place."

Pirates attack Indians!

East Carolina vs.
William and Mary

Saturday, November 12,
Ficklen Stadium, Kickoff 1:30 P.M.

Get ready for the final attack of the '83 home season when ECU's Pirates attack the Indians of William and Mary. It's "flip cap" day with free Henry Williams caps to kids 12 and under (sponsored by Wachovia). And, of course, the "ain't it great to tailgate" tradition continues with free packets to tailgaters until they run out.

Plus, there's a free basketball scrimmage in Minges at 11:00 A.M.

So, let's fill up Ficklen Stadium for the best Pirate team ever. Call 757-6500 for tickets or drop by Haskins.

Catch the final attack...ECU's last '83 home game.

Duran Chases Fourth World Title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Driven by the desire to become boxing's first four-time champion, a reborn Roberto Duran reaches for Marvellous Marvin Hagler's middleweight championship tonight in the most widely anticipated fight of the year.

This dramatic showdown takes place in the 15,200-seat arena constructed outside of Caesars Palace and matches Hagler, who has not lost a fight in seven years, with Duran, reclaimed almost miraculously from boxing's scrapheap.

"I am a man with a mission," said Hagler. "Roberto Duran has his time, but that time is over. This time is for me."

The champion, whose shaven head adds to his ominous image, has established an aura of invincibility. "He is far and away the most complete boxer around," said Pat Petronelli, who, with his brother Goody, manages and trains Hagler. "He has no weakness. Great chin, never off his feet. He's got great staying power and he hits equally hard with either hand."

There also is a touch of bitterness in Hagler, who, until now has been unable to cash in on the era of boxing's big paydays.

The man who changed that and made this $20 million promotion possible was Duran, whose comeback from two years of drifting after his controversial "No Mas" loss against Sugar Ray Leonard has been nothing short of remarkable.

Ridiculed by his countrymen as a quitter and discarded by the boxing community as used-up, Duran refused to accept that sentence. Under the guidance of new manager Luis Spada, he battled his way back, destroying Pipino Cuevas to earn a shot at the junior middleweight title and then capturing that crown with a textbook attack that ended in an eighth round knockout of young Davey Moore.

"I am redeemed," exulted Duran after he destroyed Moore. And he seems, at age 32, more at ease with himself than he was earlier in his career, which began in 1967.

He is almost mellow now, except, of course, when he's around Hagler. Then the old fire seems to return as he glares at the champion.

"He wants this fight very badly," said Spada. "He wants the fourth title."

If he wins, Duran would write boxing history by ruling at various times in his career titles ranging from 135 pounds to 160 pounds. He beat Ken Buchanan for the lightweight title June 26, 1972 and ruled that division for eight years until he outpointed Leonard for the 147-pound welterweight crown June 20, 1980. Five months later, he surrendered the title back to Leonard, turning his back and waving Sugar Ray off with the cryptic "No Mas."

For two years after that,

Duran drifted. He was advised by many people to retire for good but was convinced he wasn't through, despite some lackluster performances.

Meanwhile, Hagler, who had won the middleweight crown from Alan Minter with a third round knockout Sept. 27, 1980, was cleaning up the 160-pound class, waiting for the big name who would help him turn his talent into a fat purse bout.

"Here I am champion with three belts," he said, admiring the World Boxing Council, World Boxing Association and Ring Magazine hardware, all symbols of his title, "and there are guys with only one belt with a lot more money in the bank than I've got."

For awhile, it seemed Leonard might be the man who could change that. Sugar Ray was thinking about stepping up to the middleweight division before he suffered a detached retina that forced his premature retirement from the ring. Hagler was crestfallen at the announcement, figuring that Leonard was the only boxer around who could supply the charisma needed for the big payday.

That's because he didn't know Duran was still around.

Desperate after losing to someone named Kirkland Laing in September, 1982, Duran turned to Spada for help. Spada agreed to manage his old friend, provided Duran would dedicate himself in training. There would be no more roller coaster adventures on the scales, battling to get into shape in time for a fight. Duran would get in shape and stay in shape or Spada would leave. It was that simple. Duran agreed and the partnership was formed.

The comeback started with a narrow victory over Jimmy Batten in the walkout fight on the first Alexis Arguello-Aaron Pryor card in Miami last November. Then came the wipeout of Cuevas in January and the decisive victory over Moore last June for the third championship.

That set the stage for Duran-Hagler.

The champion is guaranteed $5 million and his percentage of ancillary earnings from 400 closed circuit television outlets, pay-per-view packages in Los Angeles and Chicago, and delayed NBC and Home Box Office network broadcasts could push his take to $8 million. Duran is guaranteed $1.5 million with a percentage potential of about $5 million.

Duran carries a 76-4 record with 57 knockouts into this bout. Hagler is 57-2-2 with 48 knockouts. The winner will make a mandatory defense of the crown against the winner of the Frank "The Animal" Fletcher-Juan Roldan undercard match. Fletcher has a 17-3-1 record and Roldan is 49-2-2. Also on the undercard is a faceoff between two unbeaten lightweights, Charley "White Lightning" Brown (18-0) and Frank Newton (24-1).

The fight will be telecast locally over closed-circuit to the Greenville. Tickets for the fight will be on sale at the door for $20 each until capacity is reached. Doors open at 7:30 p.m.

Fight Bonanza For Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Hotels are hanging out "No Vacancy" signs, courting high rollers and forecasting a $150 million bonanza weekend thanks to tonight's middleweight championship bout between Marvin Hagler and Roberto Duran.

"We've got a great response from our preferred customers," said Harry Wald, president of Caesars Palace where the title bout will be held in an outdoor stadium. "We're getting greater acceptance than we'd expected."

Wald said many of the city's major hotels had bought blocks of tickets to entice preferred customers — gamblers with high-credit credentials — to spend the weekend in the city.

"This will be one of our biggest fights in a long time," said Wald. "The whole town is benefitting because of the number and type of people it is attracting."

Virtually all of the city's 51,000 hotel and motel rooms are taken for the weekend, with some hotels that normally have vacancies reporting 110 percent bookings. Adding to the crowd will be some 16,000 delegates attending the National Association of Realtors convention beginning Saturday.

A sellout crowd is expected in the 15,000-seat stadium, which houses numerous events at Caesars Palace ranging from concerts to boxing and tennis matches. The gate is expected to run about $4.3 million with interest running "very high" in closed circuit telecasts across the country, according to Rich Rose, a spokesman for promoter Top Rank Inc.

Advertising executive Sig Rogich, who also heads the Nevada State Athletic Commission, predicted the fight would generate in excess of $150 million for the city's economy, "with every hotel oversold."

And that doesn't include the exposure factor — the kind of publicity the fight will bring to a city that thrives on exposure," Rogich said.

Rogich said Thursday's bout strengthened the city's claim as the boxing capital of the world. Title bouts in recent years have included Larry Holmes and Muhammad Ali, Holmes and Gerry Cooney, Thomas Hearnes and Sugar Ray Leonard.

Betting on the fight was reported to be "very light" Wednesday.

ECAC-South Set For Basketball Telecasts

The ECAC-South will have a regular season television package for 1983-84, in addition to the league's championship game televised on March 10.

This marks the first season that the five-year-old league has had a regular season television package, although several championship games have been televised.

The 1983-84 package will include 15 regular season games. Of those 15, the East Carolina University Pirates will be playing in three.

The Dart Sports Network of Harrisonburg, Va., has been awarded this year's contract. Jim Dulaney, voice of the James Madison University Dukes for several seasons will handle the play-by-play, while the color commentator has yet to be announced.

"We are extremely pleased that a television package has been worked out for this season," said East Carolina Director of Athletics Dr. Ken Karr. "It is essential that college athletics be heavily involved in television for exposure purposes, particularly for a league like the ECAC-South that plays good basketball and needs a way to let the public and media know this."

"Obviously, we are also pleased that three of East Carolina's games will be in the package, one from our Minges Coliseum. This will help our program so much, especially the recruiting aspect for our coaches."

East Carolina will play James Madison in a 2 p.m. televised game on January 28; William & Mary will be at East Carolina at 2 p.m. Feb. 11; and ECU will play Richmond Feb. 18 at 9 p.m. on television. In the Greenville area, WNCN-TV, channel 9, will carry all East Carolina games. Also WJTM-TV, channel 45 in the Greensboro/Winston-Salem area will carry all ECU games.

The following is a schedule of the games to be televised in the league and the stations that will air them:

Jan. 9 VCU at James Madison (9 p.m.); 14 Navy at James Madison (2 p.m.); 18 George Mason at Richmond (9 p.m.); 21 James Madison at George Mason (2 p.m.); 25 James Madison at Richmond (9 p.m.); 28 East Carolina at James Madison (2 p.m.). Feb. 1 Old Dominion at James Madison (9 p.m.); 4 James Madison at William & Mary (2 p.m.); 8 Navy at Richmond (9 p.m.); 11 William & Mary at East Carolina (2 p.m.); 18 East Carolina at Richmond (9 p.m.); 22 James Madison at VMI (9 p.m.); 25 William & Mary at George Mason (2 p.m.); 28 Virginia Tech at Richmond (9 p.m.). March 3 Richmond at William & Mary (2 p.m.); 10 ECAC-South Championship game (2 p.m.).

Stations carrying all games include: WTVZ-TV, channel 33, Norfolk, Va.; WRLH-TV, channel 35, Richmond, Va.; Fairfax, Va.; Cable, Alexandria, Va. Cable, Roanoke, Va. Cable.

Stations carrying selected games include: WHSV-TV, channel 3, Harrisonburg, Va.; WDBJ-TV, channel 7, Roanoke, Va.; WNCN-TV, channel 9, Greenville, N.C.; WJTM-TV, channel 45, Greensboro/Winston-Salem, N.C.; WJLA-TV, channel 7, Washington, D.C.; and WMKV-TV, channel 30, Memphis, Tenn.

State Tops EC Kickers

Chris Ogu scored on a penalty kick early in the second half to break a 1-1 tie and lead N.C. State's soccer team to a 4-1 victory over East Carolina yesterday.

The Pirates, who finished the season with a 3-16 record, took a 1-0 lead on a Mark Hardy goal in the first half. The Wolfpack tied the score just before the half ended when Sam Oktodu scored unassisted.

Following Ogu's second half go-ahead score, N.C. State added goals by David Inrabortello and Trey Plunkett. The win ups the Wolfpack record to 12-5.

finishing the season at 6-2 in the conference with the win over Edenton Holmes.

"I was a little surprised at how well we did this year," Tiger Coach Harold Robinson said. "But the attitude of our kids this year has been great. They came in August 1 ready to win. They're a good bunch of kids. They never gave up, not even last year."

"They had a great deal of pride, and they had to swallow it last year. The kids we stayed with last year were back this year. Most of them had at least five games varsity experience from last year, whereas most would have had only about 4-5 quarters of playing time."

Leading the Tigers' offense is James Ward, who finished the season as the first Williamston quarterback to throw for over 1,000 yards since Mike Weaver in 1973. Running back Edgar Willingham rushed for over 700 yards to lead the ground attack.

"Ward is going to make a fine college quarterback," Robinson said. "Mike Peele and Donnell Griffin at linebacker are our best assets on defense returning for us."

"Our specialty team play has been a bright spot for us this year; we blocked three kicks against Ahoskie. Rodney Connor has given us consistency kicking extra points for us."

"It's going to be a very physical ballgame Friday. They don't do anything real fancy, just good fundamental football. They're a little bigger than we are, but we're quicker off the ball — it's going to be a good matchup."

JAMESVILLE

The Jamesville Bullets haven't held the low total on the scoreboard at the end of a game since their 12-6 loss at Creswell September 23, but the Bullets have a long ride before they open competition in the state 1-A playoffs at Bladenboro Friday.

season with a 24-6 victory over Clarkston in the Tri-County 1-A Conference for a 4-1 league record while 6-4 overall, then won a draw for the berth.

"This is something we've been shooting for all year," Jamesville Coach Jerry Godley said. "I really didn't think we'd be able to go this far with our young offensive line. But when I look back, we should have won every game."

The Bullets rolled over winless Columbia 50-0 while amassing almost 500 yards total offense a week ago. Godley wishes the game had been a little different.

"I'd rather of had it much tougher," Godley said. "We sort of clouded around Friday night, and that's carried over to this week. But I think we'll be ready."

"Bladenboro's a real big team; they've got two backs over 200 pounds. We're going to rely on our quickness and speed. If they can take advantage of their size, they'll win; if we can take advantage of our speed, we'll win — it's that simple."

The Bullets rely on Matthew Moore for their ground game, as he carried the ball for 1,336 yards. Junior Robbie Harris transferred from a Maryland school and provides relief at tailback. Junior Richie Ange calls the signals after suffering an injury in practice early in the season.

"Moore is our most productive ball carrier for us this year," Godley said. "The defense couldn't key on Matthew, though, because Harris is a big kid, a good runner. Richie Ange had a good year; he threw five touchdown passes and we really haven't passed that much."

Carlton Rogers serves as the blocking fullback on offense, but his performance at linebacker has turned the heads of college scouts at East Carolina University as well as Atlantic Coast Conference schools.

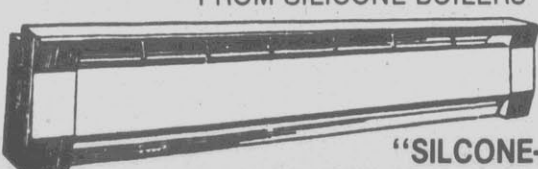

"Richie Ange leads the team in interceptions," Godley said. "At defensive end, Whit Brown, a junior, and Chris Jones, a sophomore, have done the job for us. Not too many people have had any success getting outside against us."

"We're not going to change anything; we're going to go with what got us this far."

Stepping Down
National Basketball Association commissioner Larry O'Brien announces at a news conference in New York Wednesday that he will leave his post at the conclusion of his current contract, which expires Feb. 1, 1984. O'Brien served as commissioner for more than eight years. (AP Laserphoto)

NBA's O'Brien To Step Down

NEW YORK (AP) — The search is on for a successor to Larry O'Brien as commissioner of the National Basketball Association with a basic question to be resolved first — does the league want another celebrity from the outside or for a lesser-known insider more familiar with the league?

O'Brien, who came to the NBA in 1975 after holding numerous jobs at the top level of American politics, announced Wednesday he would leave office when his contract expires Feb. 1. He said he had another job lined up and there was speculation that he would go to work for Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, a Democratic presidential candidate and an old political associate.

"I'm not going to retire," the 66-year-old O'Brien said. "My wife would never let me."

The league's Board of Governors — its 23 owners — will meet here next week with the first order of business selection of a new commissioner.

"It will not be one of those Bowie Kuhn deals where it drags out for two years," Atlanta Hawks general manager Stan Kasten said in a reference to baseball, which has been searching for six months for a successor to outgoing commissioner Kuhn.

The principal contenders for O'Brien's job would appear to be Jerry Colangelo, general manager of the Phoenix Suns and David Stern, the NBA's executive vice president for legal affairs and O'Brien's right-hand man.

Colangelo, recently appointed the Suns executive vice president, Wednesday night said, "I'm very happy where I am. I feel I have one of the best jobs in professional basketball."

He appeared, however, not to shut the door completely, saying, "Unless there was a real movement for me to get the job, I wouldn't consider it."

"My guess is that it will go to ... David Stern."

O'Brien said that if asked, he would make a recommendation, but did not disclose who that might be.

"It must be a strong guy who can deal with people at arm's length and who doesn't concern himself with the animosities he may create," O'Brien said.

One possibility would be to go outside basketball. That's what the NBA did when it chose O'Brien, whose name will appear in the history books as the Democratic National chairman whose office was broken into by the Watergate burglars.

"I don't know if they want to go the celebrity route or choose someone within the league," said Chicago Bulls General Manager Rod Thorn.

O'Brien gave no reason his decision except to say:

"There comes a time when you have to move on. Eight and a half years is the longest I've ever concentrated on a single thing in my life. If you told me 8½ years ago when I came in that I'd still be here today, I'd have been very surprised."

O'Brien took over as NBA Commissioner on June 1, 1975. It was the beginning of the free-agent era, a time when labor and financial disputes were just coming to the forefront in sports, and he had a reputation as a mediator and conciliator.

A veteran of Massachusetts politics, he emerged on the national scene as an aide to the late President John F. Kennedy. He subsequently worked for Kennedy's brother, Robert; for the late President Lyndon B. Johnson; as U.S. postmaster general and twice as Democratic national chairman.

He said Wednesday that the high point of his NBA tenure was the settlement in 1976 of the suit filed by former NBA star Oscar Robertson, which opened the way to free agency and allowed the league to merge with the American Basketball Association. That brought into the NBA from the ABA four new teams — the New Jersey Nets, the Denver Rockets, the San Antonio Spurs and the Indiana Pacers.

He also cited last year's agreement with the NBA Players Association on strict penalties for drug abuse and the settlement of a contract with the players' union last year that guarantees the players 53 percent of gross revenues and set limits on the amount any single team can pay in salaries.

He said that despite disappointments like a failure to expand beyond 23 teams and the current labor dispute with the league's referees, he believes he has left the league in the best shape ever.

"Television revenue increased 300 percent, gate receipts increased 200 percent and no teams have folded," he said, noting that new owners this year in Cleveland and Indianapolis have revitalized franchises that were in severe financial difficulties last season.

In fact, Gordon Gund, the new co-owner of the Cleveland Cavaliers, said:

"It would be fair to say that without the support Larry O'Brien gave us, there might not be professional basketball in northeastern Ohio today."

Management was not alone its praise of O'Brien.

Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers, among the players sorry to see the commissioner leave, said, "He's made a good commissioner. When he came to the job, he added a lot of class to it. He's going to be sorely missed."

O'Brien's announcement was a well-guarded secret, even with NBA owners.

Many were not informed of the decision until Wednesday, when they received a letter notifying them of the move just as O'Brien was announcing it at an 11:30 a.m., EST news conference.

Duke, State Collide Under Lights Tonight

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

North Carolina State meets Duke tonight to start the long Atlantic Coast Conference football weekend, while Maryland and North Carolina attempt to put their bowl hopes in perspective Saturday afternoon.

The Wolfpack-Blue Devil encounter is the second straight Thursday night battle in the conference, following last week's Virginia-Georgia Tech game in Atlanta. Whereas Grant Field has lights, however, Wallace Wade Stadium will be lighted by an Iowa firm, making it the first night game ever in the history of the stadium.

Clemson, which cannot win the ACC title, nonetheless thinks it will be the champions if it can top the Terrapins in Death Valley. Maryland is looking for a post-season bid, but saw its chances for the Orange Bowl clipped with a loss to Auburn.

A major bowl is out of the picture for the Tar Heels, whose mid-season collapse also took them out of the conference title chase. This weekend's bout with Virginia may help North Carolina re-establish its bowl worthiness.

In other ACC action, Wake Forest travels to Georgia Tech, with the Ramblin' Wreck taking aim at a winning record in their first season of competition in the conference.

Both N.C. State and Duke are headed for losing seasons under first-year head coaches. While the Wolfpack has been on a roller coaster, the Blue Devils have started to surge, winning their last two after losing the first seven. Duke coach Steve Sloan is impressed with his team's resiliency, especially after rallying to beat Georgia Tech and Wake Forest to end the victory drought.

"Their attitude has been a lot different than I have experienced in the past," Sloan said. "They've come from behind twice and I would think that would build their confidence."

Quarterback Ben Bennett continues to set ACC and NCAA records and is closing in on the all-time career rushing yardage record, but Wolfpack coach Tom Reed thinks his biggest trouble will be stopping Blue Devil tailback Mike Grayson.

"He does everything," Reed said. "He runs, blocks, catches passes. He's the best running back in the league, the most dangerous man with the ball."

Clemson's last loss to an ACC opponent came to Maryland in 1980. Since then, the Tigers have knocked off 18 straight league foes, including six this year. So don't try to tell Tiger players and fans that they are not the conference champions if they down the Terrapins.

"We look upon ourselves as being ACC champs," Clemson defensive back Ray Brown said. "If no team beats us how can they say we're not the ACC champs?"

While Clemson will not go to a bowl game because of its probation, Maryland would like to go somewhere. Coach Bobby Ross is afraid, however, that he will be facing a near-carbon copy of the team that whipped him last week.

"From an emotional standpoint, this is the same type of game we had at Auburn," Ross said. "Playing in Auburn should help us handle the crowd in preparation for the Clemson option."

Two weeks ago, North Carolina was the third best team in the country. Going to Charlottesville, they are ranked 19th and on the verge of exclusion from the post-season bonanza. The Tar Heels have won 12 of the last 13 meetings and coach Dick Crum expects to get what he always calls "their best shot."

"Virginia generally plays well against us in Charlottesville," he said. "There's no reason to believe we won't get a good effort from our players, though."

The Cavaliers have not had any trouble scoring — they are fourth in the ACC. However, they are sixth in scoring defense. That fact has coach George Welsh worried, but not enough to force drastic action.

"We don't have many choices in personnel," he said. "We have some players who are not playing as well as they can."

Midnight Is Deadline

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has until midnight to pass an emergency spending bill to keep money flowing to most of the federal government.

Standing in the way is a squabble within the ranks of House Democrats, an abortion filibuster in the Senate and the desire of legislators in both chambers to attach pet amendments to the emergency measure.

The House today was making its second attempt of the week to pass the measure.

It tried to pass the measure Tuesday, but just enough rebellious freshman Democrats — trying to draw attention to budget deficits and force action on a tax bill — defected and the legislation was rejected 206-203.

"Often one can be so clever he's downright stupid," Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said of his junior colleagues. Wright had spent hours Tuesday fending off Republican assaults on nearly $1 billion in additional domestic spending he sought to add to the bill only to have the entire measure defeated.

The House Rules Committee cleared the way for the House to consider the measure again today and to take another vote on the package of domestic spending that Wright included. "Let us run the play over again," Wright said, indicating he expects the package to pass this time.

Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., appeared before the Rules Committee on behalf of the freshmen saying, "The vote (Tuesday) was intended to call attention to the Reagan budget deficit. ... Many members feel they have made their point and would like to have another chance" to vote on the additional domestic spending proposed by Wright. She was among those who stayed with the leadership on Tuesday's final vote.

The Senate, meanwhile, began action on its version of the bill Wednesday. Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., offered an amendment to ban financing of abortions by federal employee health insurance plans unless the mother's life is threatened by carrying a baby to full term.

After a series of parliamentary skirmishes, Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., sought to block the amendment with a filibuster that he began by reading from a book on the history of abortion. Senate leaders then put the entire measure aside until today.

Even after that dispute is resolved, other senators were lined up with amendments they wanted to offer.

The House version of the emergency bill would continue funds through Feb. 29, 1984, for government departments and agencies whose regular fiscal 1984 appropriations have not yet been enacted into law.

The Senate version would continue the money until Sept. 30, 1984, the end of the current fiscal year.

Delay in enacting a new bill, necessary to replace an existing measure that expires at midnight, could leave the affected agencies technically without money.

Under a Justice Department ruling made during the Carter administration, federal agencies must cease all functions — except those directly related to health, safety and national defense — when their appropriations lapse.

So far, eight of the 13 regular annual appropriations bills have passed both houses of Congress and been signed into law. Those still awaiting action provide money for the operations of the departments of defense, state, justice, commerce, treasury, agriculture as well as the Postal Service and a variety of smaller agencies. The stopgap bill also would provide money for U.S. foreign aid.

Murder, Rape Charged Marine

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Camp Lejeune Marine was arrested Wednesday and charged with murder and rape.

Jacksonville police charged Robert Scott Duke, 22, with first-degree murder and first-degree rape in connection with the death of Phounapha Naughton Ratansavan of Springfield, Va., who had been selling encyclopedias in the area last week.

Her body was found Monday in a ditch near a Jacksonville mall.

Capt. Delma Collins, chief of Jacksonville police detectives, said investigators found a bloody aluminum baseball bat in Duke's apartment. He said the trunk of Duke's car was also covered with blood.

CRACKED EARTH — A resident of Ceara, Brazil examines the cracked earth of an abandoned farm in the drought zone of Brazil's Northeast, the worst drought to hit the area in more than a century. The dry zone covers 575,000 square miles — an area more than twice the size of Texas — in the nine-state Northeast where South America juts into the Atlantic Ocean. (AP Laserphoto)

Experts Hit Marketing Body Parts

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Patients who need human organs for transplant may be unable to find voluntary donors if a system of buying and selling human body parts is allowed, health experts say.

Furthermore, such a system would prey on the desperate poor, could result in inferior organs being transplanted, and lead to life being auctioned off to the highest bidder, the witnesses told the House Science and Technology Committee's subcommittee on oversight and investigations.

"We must not allow profiteers to exploit people who might be in a desperate economic situation, or who might not be carefully screened or provided with the necessary long-term followup," Dr. Oscar Salvatierra Jr., president of the American Society of Transplant Surgeons, said Wednesday.

He said that since recent publicity on proposals to buy and sell organs, "every organ transplant center in this country has been besieged by numerous calls and letters from people willing to sell their organs with the hope that the income gained might provide solutions to some of their economic problems."

Robert M. Veatch, professor of medical ethics at Georgetown University, said that, based on the experience with blood transfusions, sold organs will be poorer than donated ones.

"When an organ source is motivated financially, he or she has an incentive to hide potential problems — a history of kidney disease in the family or an existing illness, possibly even a terminal illness, in the contributor," he said.

Veatch added that it is doubtful that a voluntary donation system and a market procurement scheme can co-exist. He said people are much less likely to be altruistic about donating organs if they know others are being paid for them.

Rep. Albert Gore, Jr., D-Tenn., chairman of the subcommittee, appeared to agree with Veatch's assessment.

Buying and selling organs "would make the poor a source of spare parts for the rich and it would auction off life to the highest bidder," the congressman said.

At present the practice is not illegal, Gore said, and he has introduced legislation to make it so.

But Peter Dobrovitz of Rochester, N.Y., said he would have considered buying a kidney had he not received one voluntarily last February. And he said Dr. Barry Jacobs, a Reston, Va., physician who is establishing himself as a broker of human organs, "has perceived quite correctly that there is an overwhelming need in America for donor organs and he has gone about filling that need in a most acceptable capitalistic manner."

Dobrovitz also said "it is foolish and naive to view medicine as existing on some high plane, outside the considerations of profit and price."

He added that "hospitals across the nation are forcing critically ill and in many cases, terminal patients to produce large sums of money up front in order to receive medical care that will keep them alive." He asked if those actions are any less mercenary than what Jacobs proposes.

Contractors Elect Officers

Gary Whaley of Kinston was elected president this week of the Down East chapter of the Painting & Decorating Contractors of America. He and other officers will be installed Dec. 13.

Other officers elected for 1984 are Linwood Dickens of Farmville, vice president, and three Greenville residents, Cathy Jessen, secretary; Debra Dudley, treasurer, and Garland Lancaster Sr., board member.

For more information about the organization, call Ms. Jessen at 756-7910 or Ms. Dudley at 756-7611.

Pitt Schools Air 'Viewpoint'

The Community Schools capitol outlay program will be the topic of this week's "Pitt County Schools Viewpoint," a radio show aired on several local stations. Host Barry Gaskins will talk with Alice Keene, Community Schools coordinator.

The show is scheduled at the following times and stations: Saturday, 7:30 a.m. WTN-FM, 8:30 a.m. WGHM-AM, 8:25 a.m. WOOW-AM; Sunday, 8:30 a.m. WRQR-FM; 1:06 p.m. WNCN-AM and Monday, 3:05 p.m. WBZQ-FM.

For further information contact Pitt County Community Schools at 752-6106, extension 249.

Lions Candy Day Drive Set

The Greenville Host Lions Club will conduct its annual Candy Day drive Friday and Saturday to raise funds to support programs relating to the blind and visually handicapped in Pitt County and North Carolina.

Club spokesmen said that in addition to purchasing glasses, helping to pay for eye examinations and operations, and assisting families of the blind and visually handicapped, Lions Clubs and the North Carolina Lions Association support the North Carolina Eye and Human Tissue Bank in Winston-Salem. The bank serves as a clearing house for all eye wills and requests for eyes and other human organs needed for transplant operations.

Don Wallace, Candy Day chairman, and George Pollock, club president, said Lions Clubs sponsor and support Camp Dogwood, a camp and vacation resort for the blind and visually impaired citizens of North Carolina. Each year, donations help to send one or more Pitt County blind residents to the camp. A scholarship program is provided by the club for gifted children of blind parents.

Spokesmen said anyone knowing of children of blind parents needing assistance with their education should notify them by calling 757-3460 or 752-5138 or by writing the Greenville Host Lions.

Contributions for Lions projects are tax deductible.

Anniversary Program Planned

The deacons and mothers of Holly Hill Free Will Baptist Church will celebrate their anniversary Sunday starting at 7 p.m. The Rev. Ellis R. Foreman and J.B. Taylor traveling Choir of Corey Chapel will present the service.

Bizzaro Makes Presentation

Patrick Bizzaro of the East Carolina University Department of English made a presentation on faculty-counselor collaboration in the writing center at the 14th annual conference of the Virginia Association of Teachers of English.

Bizzaro is director of ECU's writing center.

Play To Be Presented

A performance of "For Better Not For Worse" will be presented at Philippi Church of Christ, 1610 Farmville Blvd., Greenville, Friday at 8 p.m.

The production was written by South African playwright Selaelo Maredi. The performance is sponsored by the International Friendship Association.

Pastor's Anniversary Noted

Lewis Chapel Free Will Baptist Church of Farmville will celebrate its pastor's 15th anniversary this weekend with services tonight and Sunday night.

Tonight's service, starting at 7:30 p.m., will be led by the Rev. Robert Bullock and the Patrick Chapel Choir. The Rev. H.L. Hill and his choir will be in charge of the 7:30 p.m. service Sunday.

Conley Cadets Make Tour

The D.H. Conley High School JR/OTC Leadership Development III class recently took its annual trip to Fort Eustis, Va., where the students saw transportation facilities used by the Army, including aviation schools, helicopter hangers and control towers.

The class also traveled to other towns in Virginia including Yorktown, Jamestown and Williamsburg. It visited the Army Transportation Museum.

The cadets received a briefing from a chief of staff colonel and were given an explanation of the purpose and mission of Fort Eustis.

Choir To Sponsor Dinner

The CG Spiritual Choir of Selvia Chapel Church will sponsor a chicken-fish dinner sale Saturday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the church.

Each dinner will include chicken or fish, potato salad, string beans and hushpuppies. Plates may be picked up at the church or call 756-5909 for delivery.

Hospital Plans Groundbreaking

Ground-breaking ceremonies will be held at noon Friday to kick off the building of a new emergency department at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The ceremony will be held near the existing emergency department entrance.

The new 38,000-square-foot building will cost approximately $6 million. In addition, the old emergency department will be renovated and expanded to house surgery and radiology.

Both the new building and renovation of the old department are included under Phase I of the hospital's long-range construction plan. The total cost for renovation and the new structure will be approximately $9 million.

City Offices To Be Closed

City hall, all municipal offices, library facilities, and recreation centers and gymnasiums will be closed Friday in observance of Veterans' Day.

GREAT buses will not operate Friday, but will resume regular schedules Saturday. Backyard refuse pickup normally provided by the sanitation department on Thursday and Friday will be furnished a day early. Emergency calls for public works services may be made to 752-3473.

Physicians To Hold Meetings Here

Experts from North Carolina's four medical schools will lecture on AIDs and other immunological disorders Feb. 25-26 at the 30th North Carolina Regional Meeting of the American College of Physicians, a gathering held in association with the North Carolina Society of Internal Medicine. Approximately one out of every six North Carolina physicians belongs to one of these specialty groups.

Both meetings will be held in Greenville. The scientific meeting will be held in the Brody Medical Science Building at East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Dr. Joseph E. Johnson III, governor of the North Carolina chapter of the American College of Physicians, will welcome physicians to the conference. The program was planned by Drs. Eugene D. Furth, Thomas F. O'Brian and William W. Fore, all of Greenville.

James Receives Tenure Award

Pitt County Agricultural Extension Chairman Leroy James has been recognized for 25 years of extension work.

James was among farm agents and county chairmen receiving tenure awards recently during a state conference of the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service held in Raleigh.

James received his bachelor's and master's degrees from North Carolina A&T State University. He joined the Wayne County Extension staff in 1958 and was transferred to Pitt in 1962.

He has been chairman of the Pitt extension staff since 1978.

Great Smokeout Set Nov. 17

Members of the Alpha Phi Omega Coed Service Fraternity along with other organizations will man a booth on the East Carolina University campus Nov. 16 prior to the scheduled Great American Smokeout.

The booth will be set up in front of the Student Store on campus from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. and will feature Smokeout buttons and literature. Members will also distribute candy, gum and lollipops on Nov. 17, the day of the Smokeout, and provide free literature containing tips on how to quit smoking.

The Great American Smokeout is sponsored nationally each year by the American Cancer Society.

Electric Co-Op Meets Tonight

The 46th annual meeting of the members of the Pitt & Greene Electric Membership Corp. will be held tonight at the auditorium of Farmville Central High School with registration starting at 6:45 p.m.

John Kutter, manager of the power supply division of the North Carolina Electric Membership Corp., will be the guest speaker. He will discuss the load management program and the Catawba buy-in arrangement.

Elections will be held for new directors. Candidates are Mark Mozingo of Route 2, Farmville, and John B. McLawhorn Jr. of Route 1, Hookerton, from District 7, and Joe Edwards Jr., Route 1, Hookerton, and Johnnie Jones III, Route 3, Snow Hill, at-large.

The cooperative serves approximately 5,000 homes and businesses in Pitt, Greene, Lenoir, Edgecombe, Wilson and Wayne counties.

Theft Reported At Home

Greenville police are investigating the theft of property from a home at 106 Osceola Drive Wednesday.

Officer W.C. Widener and Detective H.L. Conner said $50 in cash, two silver dollars, two gold coins and some clothing were taken. The incident was reported at 10:12 a.m.

Abbot To Give Lectures

Khenpo Karthar Rinpoche, abbot of Karma Triyana Dharmachakra, Woodstock, N.Y., will present a lecture on "Buddhism and the Contemporary World" Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the First Federal Savings and Loan Building on Greenville Boulevard.

He will also lecture in the Brewster Building, Room B-102, at East Carolina University Monday at 7:30 p.m. His topic then will be "Buddhism: Path of Compassion and Harmony." This lecture will be sponsored by the Asian Studies Committee of East Carolina University.

There is no admission charge for either lecture.

Certification Workshop Set

A workshop on certification for human services workers will be held Tuesday in room 203 of the Whitchard Building on the Pitt Community College campus from 6-7 p.m.

The process and advantages of certification will be explained. Eligible persons include individuals who are advanced students in an associate or bachelor's degree program in mental health, human services program or workers already employed in an organized service delivery agency.

Maggie French, chairman of the PCC Human Services Technology Department, will conduct the workshop.

Trumpet Recital Set Friday

Stephen Stewart will present a trumpet recital Friday at 9 p.m. in the Recital Hall of the Music Education Building on the East Carolina University campus.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Delano Stewart of Dale City, Va., he will perform works by Handel, Haydn, Walbert and Schiedt. Also on the program are Angela Wilcox, Mike O'Connor, Donald Stewart and Brian Otter. The accompanist is Patricia Foltz.

Bloodmobile Stops Reported

Three recent Bloodmobile stops in Pitt County resulted in a total collection of 296 pints of blood with 62 deferrals, according to Pitt Red Cross spokeswoman Ruth Taylor.

She said 66 pints of blood were collected at Empire Brushes and nine people were deferred, while a visit at Pitt Community College saw 73 donors and 10 deferrals. A drive at D.H. Conley High School this week netted 157 pints of blood, although there were 43 deferrals, she said.

The next area blood drive will be Nov. 30 at Fletcher Dorm at East Carolina University. Mrs. Taylor said the annual after-Christmas drive will be held this year on Dec. 27 at the Moose Lodge.

Pastor Honored At Supper

The Rev. John C. Moran, pastor of the Belvoir Free Will Baptist Church, was honored recently at a covered-dish supper in the church fellowship hall given by members of the church. He was presented a love offering and thanked for his 10 years of service to the church and Belvoir community.

Assistant Attended Session

Donna Poe attended educational sessions at the 69th annual convention of the Florida Chiropractic Association in Orlando, Fla., recently. She is a chiropractic assistant to Dr. Steven I. Cohen of Winterville.

Drug Shows Promise As Means For Reduction Of Cholesterol

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
Serum cholesterol and triglycerides linked with a high risk of heart disease and stroke may be cut in half by new drugs called cyclic imides, although they are unlikely to be marketed in the near future, a University of North Carolina researcher says.

"At a relatively low dose, these agents lowered 40 to 60 percent serum cholesterol and triglycerides," Dr. Iris Hall, a physiologist and biochemist in the Department of Medicinal Chemistry at UNC-Chapel Hill, said in a recent telephone interview.

Her findings, based on tests of tissue removed from living organisms, were to be presented today at a meeting of the American Chemical Society in Charlotte.

While various modifications of the drugs have been effective in human and rodent cells, Mrs. Hall cautioned that it may be 10 to 15 years before they will be available to consumers.

"These are not cancer drugs," she said. "They don't reach the market that quick. There are extensive tests to go through and approval by the Food and Drug Administration."

Cyclic imides, structurally related to the artificial sweetener saccharin, are the first man-made drugs to be tested in reducing cholesterol, Mrs. Hall said. Saccharin itself has no such properties.

She said researchers discovered the drugs by examining the chemical mechanisms that incorporate cholesterol into artery walls and seeking a synthetic chemical capable of blocking it. Once cholesterol becomes established, clots may form and certain organs may be deprived of oxygen, leading to heart attacks and strokes.

Cyclic imides slow the action of an enzyme in human fibroblast cells, which make up the plaque that can clog arteries, Mrs. Hall said. Without the enzyme, cholesterol and triglycerides can't be bound inside the cells, she said.

"All Americans have plaque. They (the plaque deposits) start during adolescence. They grow with age. Once they get there, what you'd like to do is to make sure you're not depositing lipids any faster than you have to," Mrs. Hall said.

The drug also speeds the elimination of cholesterol in rat liver cells, she said.

The findings should not overshadow other important factors that can increase the risk of hardening of the arteries, including heredity, stress, cigarette smoking and physical inactivity, Mrs. Hall said. But she added that the American diet contains a lot of cholesterol.

"One of the problems here in the United States is that we are a society that seems to take in a lot of lipids in our diet," Mrs. Hall said. "Consequently, that is a factor in the development of arteriosclerosis in our society."

Drugs now available can reduce cholesterol by 12 percent while cutting triglycerides up to 25 percent, Mrs. Hall said. But those drugs, which use human hormones, are not safe in the high doses needed to produce better results.

Cyclic imides, on the other hand, have done well in preliminary toxicity studies, she said.

"We are not picking up anything negative to date," Mrs. Hall said. "We've seen no side effects from these. They seem relatively safe."

The next step is to test the drugs on cells from the human aorta, the large artery carrying blood directly from the heart, she said.

"This should come closer to what is actually happening in man," Mrs. Hall said.

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Mercedes Benzes, Cadillacs, Jaguars, Peugeots and Volvos are being stripped of their identities in what Greensboro police believe may be a high school fad.

"It is getting to be a tremendous, extensive-type problem," Staff Duty Officer D.C. Long said. "I have a feeling it has to do with some kind of high school fad."

Some auto service dealers say they are getting a spate of orders to replace the stolen parts.

"All of a sudden, we have just been flooded with people saying their emblems have been taken," said David Jones, co-owner of The Auto Warehouse, an import service dealer.

"Last week it really seemed to be bad, but this week, it seems to be getting worse," he said.

The star emblem on the hood and trunk of Mercedes sedans and Jaguar nameplates seem to be most popular with the thieves, Jones said.

Joe Planck, service advisor for Jack Pickard Imports, said Mercedes owners also are losing the plates that designate the car as "diesel" or "turbo diesel."

"Mercedes are getting nailed," said Planck. "I've seen a half dozen within the last week."

The auto service dealers say the car symbols are pried off with a screw driver, often leaving an expensive repair bill. Jones said he has seen paint damage that cost $150 to $200 to repair. And replacement of the Cadillac "crest" emblem can run about $50 with labor charges.

Can Advertise Money Yields

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 300 money market funds can advertise the compounded yields earned on their investments under a plan approved by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Wednesday's action puts money market funds on a similar footing with banks and savings and loan associations that already advertise the compounded interest depositors can earn on savings accounts.

Previously, money market funds had been limited to advertising a yield figure that represented the annualized current yield on portfolio investments over a seven-day period.

U.S. Chiefs Hope For Grenada Pullout This Month

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with conflicting congressional demands for an immediate military pullout from Grenada and a continued U.S. presence there, chiefs of the armed services say they hope to withdraw the troops this month. "I think we're two to three weeks away" from a military withdrawal, Adm. James D. Watkins, chief of naval operations, told the Senate Armed Services Committee Wednesday.

Gen. John A. Wickham Jr., the Army chief of staff, said he had "no problem" with Watkins' estimate of the U.S. pullout date.

Wickham said the 3,000 troops still on the island, primarily paratroopers from the 82nd Airborne Division, are searching remote areas for Cuban and Grenadian holdouts and weapons caches because "we don't want to leave a nascent insurgency there."

Meanwhile Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, and two Democratic members of a House fact-finding delegation announced conflicting conclusions on the basis of separate weekend trips to the Caribbean island.

"Although the level of hostilities in Grenada has abated to sporadic sniper fire, there continues to be an immediate need for U.S. combat forces," Tower said.

"U.S. officials believe that there are still Cubans on the island and U.S. forces are continuing to search for Cubans, members of the People's Revolutionary Army, and weapons caches," he added.

He said leaders of other regional states believe a U.S. military presence is needed at least until a planned Grenadian election and "there was also general agreement among those officials with whom I spoke that there may be a need for some U.S. military presence and support in Grenada even after the elections."

Rep. Ron V. Dellums, D-Calif., on the other hand, said, "The role of the U.S. forces on the island daily grows more precarious, and they should be replaced immediately by forces from the Caribbean states or the Commonwealth nations.

"Every day that the U.S. forces remain on the island alters their role," Dellums said. "They are now being perceived — and in some instances acting — as an occupying force rather than a peacekeeping force, even to the extent of tracking down alleged subversives and determining what books and other reading materials are considered subversive. This is not the proper role of the American military in a free society — either at home or abroad."

Dellums was joined at a news conference by Rep. Louis M. Stokes, D-Ohio, who was also a member of the 14-member delegation sent to Grenada by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass. The majority of the group reported to O'Neill Tuesday that the invasion was justified because of danger to Americans, mostly medical students, on the island.

Stokes, however, said, "The evidence is that not a single American national was in any way placed in jeopardy or in danger of being made a hostage during the period prior to the invasion," Dellums said, "I do not believe the invasion was about the students."

Stokes and Dellums, who are black, said their conclusions were endorsed by the 21-member Congressional Black Caucus at a meeting Wednesday.

Tower said his trip convinced him that there had been "substantial threat" to Americans on the island.

"There was an absolute vacuum of authority bordering on chaos," he said. "If the United States and others had not acted in a timely manner, we could have faced a difficult hostage situation."

Fathers Of Atomic Age Differ On Space Arms

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Two pioneering nuclear physicists debated development of "Star Wars" space weapons — with Edward Teller calling the proposed devices a "moral necessity" and Hans Bethe arguing it would escalate the arms race.

President Reagan has promoted using the U.S. edge in high technology to create defensive weapons capable of destroying nuclear missiles in space before they have a chance to strike the United States.

"This would be a great achievement if it could be done, but it would be better to reduce the number of offensive weapons drastically and now," said Bethe, a 77-year-old Nobel Prize winner.

Teller, 75, who is called the father of the U.S. hydrogen bomb, supported the plan and criticized the nuclear freeze movement.

"I believe it is a moral necessity to develop a good defense," he said.

Once colleagues, Teller and Bethe differed without rancor before a packed forum at Harvard University on Wednesday night.

Their talk of space battle stations, X-ray lasers and so-called "pop-up" weapons systems showed the separate paths the two have taken since, as refugees from Hitler's Europe, they worked together on the atomic bomb at Los Alamos, N.M., during World War II.

"I have no objection to quiet research in laboratories to get better ideas than what I have heard," said Bethe, professor emeritus at Cornell University and a nuclear freeze campaigner.

But Teller said the ideas were there, if only men like Bethe would lend their genius. "I would be happy to be exceedingly quiet if Hans would come and help," he said.

Teller said that Bethe's help would serve as an example to young scientists reluctant to join in weapons research.

"I may be wrong, but if I am right and the ingenious people do not help, they will suffer along with the rest of us," he said.

Teller, a member of Stanford University's Hoover Institute, has often said the dangers of nuclear war are exaggerated.

Development of space weapons systems, he said, could "buy time for an increased level of cooperation" between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Belittling nuclear freeze proposals, Teller said, "I would much rather see two

Bars Further Pupil Strikes

COLUMBUS, N.C. (AP) — Striking students at Polk Central High School have won earlier access to the school, but other demands have not been met and officials say no more strikes will be tolerated.

Principal David R. Corley, who reached an agreement with student leaders Wednesday, said the strike benefited everyone by raising student concerns. He said the strike was caused by "rapid change" since he became principal this year.

Lewis Jackson, student body president, said students were pleased with Wednesday's outcome and called off the strike.

Meanwhile, James E. Benfield, superintendent of Polk County Schools, said no more strikes will be tolerated.

"We would not look favorably upon any more sit-outs and would take whatever action is necessary to maintain order in the high school," he said.

The students complained that it was too difficult for sick students to be excused from classes, that senior privileges and a senior play were suspended and that students who arrived before 8 a.m. had to wait in the cold for doors to open.

Corley agreed to unlock the cafeteria at 7:30 a.m. but said the sick rule remains in effect and senior privileges are still being studied.

The two scientists agreed it would be impractical to orbit satellites armed with lasers to knock down attacking missiles.

But Teller said recent developments showed the possible use of X-ray lasers and pop-up weapons systems, launched from this country, could work. Such systems would be fired to counter an attack on the United States, knocking out nuclear weapons in space.

"We have here a technology that does not exist," Bethe disagreed.

He said defensive systems could be easily countered by increasing the number of missiles and decoy warheads. X-ray lasers, he said, did not have the power to knock out missiles.

He also said pop-up systems launched from this country would not have enough time to stop an enemy attack. Basing the systems in Europe is not realistic politically, Bethe said.

Teller declined to talk about the specifics, claiming that much of what he knew was classified information.

Both men claimed their goal was world peace. Bethe said it would come through disarmament. Teller looked to a concentrated scientific effort, like the development of the atomic bomb.

"What we did in the war, we should do on a smaller scale to secure the peace," Teller said.

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — John F. Kennedy was the first American president to fully recognize the value of television and to learn to manipulate it for his advantage.

"Kennedy ... made government a form of home entertainment," Barbara Matusow writes in "The Evening Stars," her recently published history of TV news. Two current productions, composed largely of television film shot before and during Kennedy's presidency, illustrate the point most effectively.

"JFK," a two-hour "ABC News Special" to be broadcast Friday evening, and "Being With John F. Kennedy," a cinema-verite style documentary of the same length now in syndication, were produced to mark the 20th anniversary of Kennedy's death in Dallas, Nov. 22, 1963.

The two films, stylish and frequently dramatic, complement one another in recalling the personalities and events that helped etch the Kennedy image indelibly in the minds of millions in this country and abroad.

"There has not been a day in 20 years when somebody has not talked to me about John Kennedy, not a day, no matter where I am in the world," Pierre Salinger, an ABC News correspondent who was Kennedy's press secretary, says in "JFK."

Kennedy's term in office, shortened to less than three years by an assassin's bullet, was full of dramatic occurrences: the Bay of Pigs invasion, confrontation with the Soviet Union over Berlin, violence in the name of civil rights, the Cuban missile crisis, expansion of the

In retrospect, most seem to have been made to order — sometimes almost scripted — for television, including those events not particularly flattering to Kennedy.

Much of the footage used here is historic, but the significance of the two productions, especially for those who lived through the period, may best be described in more subjective terms. Kennedy, says Nancy Dickerson, the former network-news correspondent who narrates "Being With John F. Kennedy," brought "wit, purpose, humanity" to the presidency.

And the evidence is on film.

The ABC documentary, anchored by Peter Jennings, is largely chronological and includes interviews with many of those who worked with Kennedy, along with historians and journalists who covered the period in Washington.

"Being With John F. Kennedy," assembled by Robert L. Drew, an independent filmmaker who produced several documentaries on Kennedy as a candidate and as president in the early '60s, is more personal in approach. Intimate, close-up footage sometimes suggests a well-made home movie.

In fact, it was Kennedy's own idea to record on film events — activity as well as mood — as they developed.

In a lengthy and particularly dramatic segment, for instance, Kennedy, his brother Robert, then the attorney general, and other government officials, discuss how to deal with Gov. George C. Wallace, who had refused to allow two black students to enter the University of Alabama.

Later, in that same sequence, Robert Kennedy is shown on the telephone with Nicholas Katzenbach, an assistant who is in Tuscaloosa, Ala., preparing for the showdown with Wallace. Robert Kennedy's tiny daughter, Kerry, enters the room, and the attorney general puts her on the phone with Katzenbach. "Hi, Nick," she says, and they chat for a few moments before the two officials return to the business at hand.

Kennedy defined the term "charisma," and television was his primary vehicle for spreading the word.

An example, from "Being With John F. Kennedy": Which state, Kennedy is asked on a campaign swing through the South, produces the most beautiful women, Kentucky or Massachusetts?

"Taking a leaf out of the vice president's book," he replies, referring to his Republican opponent, Richard M. Nixon. "My wife comes from New York, therefore, I will say New York produces the most beautiful women."

And, from "JFK": Reporter at news conference: "It's been a long time since we've had a definitive report on your health. How is your aching back?"

Kennedy: "It depends on the weather, political and otherwise."

In both instances, the people in the audience howl with laughter, and Kennedy appears as amused as they are. Marvelous if you were there, and maybe, with a closeup shot of the president having fun, even better on television.

Asner Re-Elected Actors Guild Head

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ed Asner's re-election to a second term as president of the Screen Actors Guild is an "empty mandate," says fellow actor Charlton Heston.

Although Asner is generally at odds with conservative members of SAG such as Heston, that faction did not run a candidate against him in the election. Votes were counted Wednesday.

Asner won 9,997 votes, or 73 percent of the 13,648 votes cast. Contender J.D. Hall, a member of the SAG board of directors who plays a union organizer in the play "The Cradle Will Fall," received 2,787 votes, and the other candidate, stunt driver Charles Holden received 864, said SAG spokesman Mark Locher after the vote count.

"I'm pleased at my plurality," Asner said of the outcome. "Now we can start getting some work done that is awfully pressing," including mergers with the Screen Extras Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, and improved stunt safety and finding new ways to put the membership to work.

The liberal Asner, who played the title role in the cancelled series "Lou Grant," has frequently clashed with conservatives led by Heston, who called the victory an "empty mandate."

The faction, Actors Working for an Actors' Guild, urged members to boycott the election.

"I would be very surprised if there was much of a voter turnout," Heston said Wednesday, conceding that Asner would win. "He in effect is running unopposed."

Heston and his allies oppose such actions as SAG's donation of $5,000 to help striking air traffic controllers two years ago. The group has also objected to such remarks as Asner's outspoken criticism of President Reagan's Central American policy.

Only 25 percent of the 55,000 union members who were mailed ballots last month voted.

Says 'Howdy' Is To Blame

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Social unrest in the late '60s and early '70s has been blamed on many factors, but a columnist is now suggesting the greatest "subversive" influence may have been the children's TV show, "Howdy Doody."

The 1950s program featuring a smiling, respectful puppet taught an entire generation "never to trust anyone over 30," wrote columnist Jeff Greenfield in the current issue of TV Guide.

"Howdy Doody represents one of the most authentically subversive TV shows in American history," Greenfield wrote.

Although Howdy Doody told children to mind their parents, the characters sent out another message — grown-ups are bad guys, Greenfield wrote.

"The only more-or-less normal adult who was in any way admirable was 'Buffalo Bob,' and he was often the butt of practical jokes."

"Almost every other memorable grown-up was either a manipulative, evil schemer... or an unbelievable, pompous bore," he said.

Clarabell the Clown, a character with a penchant for throwing pies and squirting seltzer water at authority figures, was the first Yippie, Greenfield said, recalling the '60s anarchist group.

'Who Dat' Has Fans Cheering

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Jazz musician Aaron Neville may soon be wearing a "Who Dat?" hat, as enthusiasm builds for the New Orleans Saints football team and a "Who Dat?" song recorded by Neville and several of the Saints.

The upbeat adaptation of a football cheer is getting plenty of play on New Orleans airwaves. It goes like this:

"Who Dat? Who Dat? Who Dat sayin' dey gonna beat dem Saints? Who Dat? Who Dat? Who Dat sayin' dey gonna beat dem Saints? Who Dat?"

The cheer is chanted enthusiastically by offensive guard Brad Edelman, cornerback Dave Waymer, guard Louis Oubre, defensive end Reggie Lewis and center John Hill. Blended around the cheer is Neville's rendition of "When the Saints Go Marching In."

For fans of a team that could make the National Football League playoffs for the first time in its 17-year history, "Who Dat?" is catching on.

And plans are in the works to produce not only "Who Dat" hats, but bumper sticks and other "Who Dat?" paraphernalia.

— TV record
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Happy Days" will mark a special milestone this month when the series' 252th episode is broadcast on ABC-TV, surpassing the record for number of sitcom segments set by "M.A.S.H."

N.C. Culture Week To Feature Anniversary Theme

By PEGGY HOWE
N.C. Department Of Cultural Resources
RALEIGH — Dr. Charles
Blitzer, director of the National Humanities Center in the Research Triangle Park, leads the list of speakers for the 70th annual observance of Culture Week in North Carolina Nov. 14-19.

Raleigh's Radisson Plaza
Hotel will be headquartered for the week-long observance.

A host of other well-known speakers and presentation of three dozen prestigious awards will highlight the week, which brings together members and guests of a dozen different statewide organizations concerned with literature, history, art and music.

Events include business meetings of the various groups, programs on historic preservation, musical performances, reviews of literature produced during the past year and social events.

Blitzer will address the 6:30 p.m. dinner session of the 83rd annual meeting of the N.C. Literary and Historical Association on Nov. 18.

Blitzer, a native of New York, came to the center just this year after 17 years with the Smithsonian Institution, where he served three years as director of education and training, and then in 1968 assumed the position of assistant secretary for history and art. As assistant secretary for history and art, Blitzer was responsible for all the Smithsonian museums dealing with art and history.

S. Dillon Ripley, secretary of the Smithsonian, credited Blitzer with making "a permanent contribution to the nation's cultural heritage."

The Thursday sessions of the sixth annual meeting of the Federation of N.C. Historic Societies will highlight the 50th anniversary of the New Deal and the 100th anniversary of the Brooklyn Bridge. Featured speakers include Dr. Otis L. Graham Jr., a professor in the department of history at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, who will address the opening session at 9:30 a.m. Graham, who is the author of "Toward a Planned Society: From Roosevelt to Nixon," will discuss "Franklin D.

Roosevelt and the New Deal:

Fifty Years Later." The anniversary theme will continue with several panel presentations including "TVA and the Headwaters: Government Planning and the Carolina Mountains, 1933-1940" by Dr. Ronald D.
Eller, department of history,
Mars Hill College; "The New Deal as a Big Deal for Southern Cities," by Dr.
David R. Goldfield, department of history, UNC-Charlotte; and "A Slice of Life in North Carolina: The WPA Historical Records
Survey," by Dr. David L.
Smiley, department of history,
Wake Forest University.

Also on the program is "Popular Music in the Depression and New Deal," by Dr. A. Sidney Knowles, department of English, North Carolina State University.

The afternoon program will include "The Brooklyn Bridge: 100 Years Later" featuring a prize-winning film on the bridge, nominated in 1981 for an Academy Award as Best Feature Documentary and winner of the Organization of American Historians' 1983

Erik Barnow Award, given annually to "an outstanding television or film program dealing with American history."

Ken Burns, the film's director and producer, will be present as commentator.
Other speakers scheduled throughout the week include North Carolina's poet
laureate, Sam Ragan; Dr.
Thomas Parramore, professor of history, Meredith College; Dr. Sydney H.
Nathans, associate professor of history, Duke University; Dr. Judith Ruderman, director of continuing education, Duke University; the Rev. Donald Davis, pastor of Christ United Methodist Church, Charlotte; and Dr.
William J. Chiego, chief curator, North Carolina Museum of Art.

Most meetings are open to the public. Details on fees for meals and registration are available from each of the organizations or from Becky
Meyer, 109 E. Jones St.,
Raleigh, 27611; telephone 733-7305.

Associations meeting during Culture Week include the N.C. Literary and Historical Association; N.C. Folklore Society; Society of Mayflower Descendants in the State of North Carolina; Roanoke Island Historical Association; N.C. Society of County and Local Historians; The

Today's Cryptquip clue: F equals R.

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Feared Late Press Focus

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) —
While Charlotte Mayor-elect Harvey Gantt is pleased with becoming the first black mayor of North Carolina's largest city, he says the news media's last-minute focus on racial symbolism threatened to topple his campaign of issues.

"We had spent six months developing issues that were legitimate issues of concern to this community," said Gantt, who defeated Republican Ed Peacock on Tuesday 52 percent to 48 percent. "And I was a little bit worried and a little upset that the color of my skin was starting to make a difference."

Gantt told reporters in a Wednesday press conference that if the election had "revolved on baser instincts of tradition and race and symbols, I'm not so sure that the results would have been the same."

Gantt said that after his victory he received congratulatory calls from Democratic presidential candidates Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., and former Vice President Walter Mondale as well as from representatives of most Democratic presidential candidates. He also heard from a well known noncandidate, Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass.

Gantt said he hasn't had time to decide who he will support for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Can Repair The Portrait Damage

WASHINGTON (AP) —
Damage to portraits of 19th Century senators that were scarred by a bomb blast in the U.S. Capitol Monday night was not as severe as first thought.

"We are mighty lucky,"
said James R. Ketchum, the Senate's curator of arts and antiquities. He said Wednesday the portraits will be repaired and returned to their accustomed places
early next year.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This can be a day when you have some exciting new or original plans to put in motion and it is good to get after doing this even though you are likely to encounter some delays.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have some new interests that friends will gladly back, despite responsibilities of the past.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan how best to revive your business activities and get good results, despite a nagging partner, which it is wise to ignore.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have an inspiring idea and should put it in motion quickly and also improved upon. Be aggressive in this.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Find more a modern business system so that you can handle vital matters better and quicker.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Be with progressive friends who can assist you to get ahead faster. Look at a current relationship and evaluate honestly.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) If you handle your work from a different angle, you can get better results. The solution is quite obvious.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You need a change from usually dull routines, so look into something new and exciting. Don't be afraid of being open.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be charming at home with family but keep out of the way of irate boss who could take his ire out on you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Find more efficient and original ways of handling daily tasks and help others do the same. Use your charm.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get your home stylishly improved and add to its value as well as those aesthetic values that mean so much.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You are pretty much an individualist and should be highly so today for best results. Avoid self-indulgence, though.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Change your advisors and be with those who are more progressive for best results in the future.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one of those delightful people who is definitely a New Age product and will be a fine adjunct in the new inventive and scientific world, so be sure to send to the right and most modern schools for best results.

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

After some years in the wilderness, France has again emerged as a major bridge power. They are current holders of the World Olympiad Teams title, and this year they won the European Championships by the huge margin of almost three matches with a team that included three young newcomers to international bridge.

One of the newcomers, Philippe Cronier, became declarer at six clubs on this hand from this country's match against Luxembourg. The bidding was rather aggressive, but dummy might have been better.

The spade lead effectively killed the only entry to the table. Declarer took the ace and crossed to his hand with a spade ruff to force out the ace of trumps. East returned the queen of hearts. Declarer won, and it now seemed that he could get to dummy with the jack of hearts for the diamond finesse. But declarer wanted better odds than 50 percent.

He ran all his trumps but one, reducing the hand to this:

Declarer cashed the king of hearts, and East discarded a spade. Next came the last trump. West smoothly blanked his king of diamonds, dummy pitched a heart and East parted with a diamond. Now declarer crossed to dummy with the ten of hearts, and East let go another diamond.

Everybody was down to two cards. Declarer knew that one of West's cards was a heart and that one of East's cards was a spade. Therefore, each defender held just one diamond. So declarer continued with a diamond to the ace to fell the king and land an excellently played slam.

Note that it would not necessarily have beaten the hand had East returned a diamond after winning the ace of clubs. Declarer can rise with the ace and squeeze West in the red suits.
