Tank Assault Seeks To Dislodge Arafat

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian-backed guerrilla mutineers mounted a tank assault today to dislodge PLO chief Yasser Arafat from his stronghold in northern Lebanon, but he claimed the attack was crushed.

With shells falling around his quarters in Tripoli, Arafat's office said in a communique that the attackers were driven back after seven hours of fierce combat on the outskirts of the Baddawi refugee camp.

The communique from the Palestine Liberation Organization said 13 Syrian army tanks were destroyed and 50 PLO rebels and Syrian commandos captured in the fighting that collapsed a four-day-old ceasefire.

Another PLO communique, issued in Tunis, claimed Col. Salah Maani, military commander of the Syrian-supported Saiga guerrilla group, was killed in the attack on Baddawi and that his body was brought to Tripoli.

It also claimed Capt. Ahmed Jibril, leader of the Libyan-backed Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, suffered a head wound in the fighting and was hospitalized in Zagorta, seven miles east of Tripoli.

But Jibril's official spokesman in Damascus, Fadl Shrouro, denied the PLO claim, saying, "Capt. Jibril is quite safe and exercising his normal functions."

The tank assault, backed by infantry and artillery, initially concentrated on Baddawi, but later spilled into Tripoli, including the main commercial thoroughfare. Shops closed and streets were empty.

A few shells struck Tripoli's oil refinery on Baddawi's edge, setting oil storage tanks on fire. The Lebanese government says it lost $100 million from burning crude and refined oil in the past two weeks of PLO warfare.

Tripoli is 50 miles north of Beirut, which was shaken this morning by the sound of rapid explosions as shells and rockets crashed into predominantly Christian east Beirut.

Police said the intense barrage, which lasted 30 minutes, injured five motorists and forced schools in most of east Beirut to close for the day. Christian-controlled radio stations blamed on Syrian-backed Druse militiamen in the central mountains overlooking the capital.

Until Monday, the Druse fighters had avoided hitting Beirut during a seven-week cease-fire while continuing to fire at Lebanese army positions in the mountains. The Druse frequently shelled east Beirut during a three-week civil war in September that pitted Druse and Shiite Moslem militias against the Lebanese army and Christian militia.

Turkish Cypriots Declare An Independent Republic

By ALEX EFTY
Associated Press Writer
NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The Turkish-occupied northern part of war-divided Cyprus declared its independence today and named itself the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus.

The Cypriot government, based in the Greek sector of the Mediterranean island, immediately called for an emergency meeting of the United Nations Security Council and protested the unilateral move by Turkish Cypriots.

In Greece, the government said Premier Andreas Papandreu was meeting in emergency session with his armed forces commanders following the announcement from Nicosia.

The action was expected to sharpen the conflict between Greece and Turkey over the future of the island that was partitioned into Greek and Turkish sectors after Turkish forces invaded the Cyprus in 1974.

The official Turkish Cypriot Bayrak radio said the independence decision was reached during a special session of the legislative assembly of the self-proclaimed Turkish Cypriot Federated State and was announced to thousands of people waiting outside.

Cyprus has been divided between Greek and Turkish sectors since 1975, a year after Turkey invaded and occupied the northern part of the Mediterranean island following a Greek Cypriot coup that toppled the government of the late Archbishop Makarios.

The two communities have been deadlocked in intermittent talks under U.N. auspices for the past nine years to try to work out a settlement through a new constitution.

An estimated 120,000 Turkish Cypriots live in the northern sector under the protection of 25,000 Turkish troops, while 500,000 Greek Cypriots live in the southern portion.

Soon after the independence proclamation, Turkish Cypriot authorities closed the only crossing point between the two sides. This is next to the Ledra Palace hotel on the heavily fortified "green line" that splits the Greek and Turkish Cypriot sectors of the capital, Nicosia.

Foreign diplomats and United Nations officials were allowed by Turkish police to enter their sector but foreign tourists were turned back. It has been Turkish policy since the invasion to forbid Greek or Turkish Cypriots from crossing from one side to the other.

A Cypriot government spokesman, Andreas Christofides, told reporters that although Turkish Cypriot leaders had been threatening to proclaim independence for several months, the timing of the proclamation "came as a complete surprise at this particular time."

Christofides said Foreign Minister George Iacovou would fly to New York today to confer with the U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar on the possibility of an emergency Security Council meeting.

Tobacco Farmer Cited

Wayne Kirby of Lucama was named "Tobacco Farmer of the Year" by the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Association at the Commissioners' Awards Banquet held at the Greenville Country Club Monday night.

Kirby was presented a check for $450 and a plaque by award sponsor representative Elmer Rodwell of the Production Credit Association.

Kirby and C.O. Kearney of Snow Hill tied as finalists in the Eastern Belt division.

Other finalists were: Georgia-Florida Belt, Quinteen Veas of Hamilton County, Fla.; Borderbelt, Chandler Worley of Cerro Gordo; Old Belt, Eddie Johnson of Elkin; and Middle Belt, Raymond Seaman of Manson. Each finalist was given a check for $250 and a plaque.

Louis W. Gregory and his son, David W. Gregory, both of Java, Va., swept the Commissioners' Most Perfect Bundle Contest, taking first and second places, respectively, in the leaf, cutters' and lug categories.

Third place in the leaf category went to Terrell Cason of Nichols, Ga.; third place in the cutters' category went to Edwin Cole, also of Nichols, Ga.; and third place in the lug category went to Carolyn Barnes of Kinston.

The grand prize winner in the Tobacco Essay Contest was Robert Bennett of Alma, Ga., who was also Georgia's state finalist. The grand prize runner-up was Grady Dale Tuck, Virginia's finalist in the essay contest.

North Carolina's state finalist was Lisa Loren Hester of Clarkton and runner-up was Jenny Tejano of Kinston. Jim Swindell, president of the Tobacco Farmers' Show and Specialized Agricultural Publications Inc., was given a special award by Greenville Mayor Percy Cox in recognition of his work with the Tobacco Farmers' Show.

"Swindell has put in tireless effort over an eight-year period to build and develop the Tobacco Farmers' Show from a small local event to what has become a regional and international event," a spokesman for the festival said.

Swindell, a resident of Cary, was presented a key to the city. The award was sponsored by the city of Greenville.

U.S. Industrial Output Sees Another Advance

By The Associated Press
Industrial production rose 0.8 percent in October, the 11th straight monthly gain but the smallest increase since February, the Federal Reserve Board said today.

The October gain in output by U.S. factories, mines and utilities followed a revised 1.3 percent increase in September and August, which were reported previously as 1.5 percent and 1.2 percent.

Last month, production of consumer goods and construction supplies rose only modestly, but the output of equipment rose sharply, the Federal Reserve Board said.

While the production gain in October was the smallest since the 0.5 percent advance in February, the latest increase still left production 14.8 percent higher than a year earlier.

Moreover, some economists expect production to keep increasing in the months ahead because sales are rising faster than business inventories.

The Commerce Department said Monday that inventories rose 0.7 percent in September, the latest month available, but sales climbed 1.5 percent.

Meanwhile, oil industry officials said prices probably will hold steady in the months ahead unless political unrest in the Middle East leads to a supply cutoff.

Energy Secretary Donald Hodel told the annual meeting of the American Petroleum Institute that he foresees "a fairly stable price," barring a supply emergency.

Hodel made no specific price forecast, but warned that if unrest in the Middle East produces a cutoff of oil imports to the West, prices would be sure to rise. About one-fifth of the non-Communist world's oil flows from the Persian Gulf, whose shipping lanes are considered threatened by the Iran-Iraq war.

However, Hodel also said in his Monday address, "there is no justification for doom and gloom" about the energy future.

Exxon Corp. Chairman Clifton C. Garvin Jr. predicted that for a "fairly significant period" excess oil supplies will head off any major increase in oil prices.

He said, however, that he sees "some signs" that oil demand is beginning to increase as the U.S. economic recovery broadens.

One of the latest indications of the economy's improved health is the government's report that business sales rose 1.5 percent in September as companies continued to rebuild inventories. The Commerce Department said inventories rose $3.4 billion, or 0.7 percent, for the third straight monthly increase.

In other developments Monday: —The Federal Reserve Board said its basic measure of the money supply fell $2.5 billion in the latest week. It was a much bigger decline than Wall Street expected.

Analysts said they saw little chance the Federal Reserve would change its monetary policy in order to allow a drop in interest rates. "I don't expect any change in Fed policy," said Edward Yardeni, chief economist at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

The credit markets reacted much the same way, as bond prices and short-term interest rates showed little change.

An additional contact person for the planned support group for parents who have lost an infant to death written about in Monday's Hotline column is Gwen Duncan. Anyone interested in knowing more about the group, to be known as SHARE, and the support service it will offer may call her at 758-6044.

DOROTHY BUMGARDNER APPEAL

Dorothy Davenport Bumgardner has acute myelomonocytic leukemia. She has been hospitalized since August and is now considered in guarded condition at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Friends have set up a Dorothy Bumgardner Fund with Planter's National Bank and have asked Hotline to appeal for donations for the medical and financial assistance of Dorothy and her husband, David.

Dorothy was diagnosed as having leukemia a few weeks after her graduation from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1977. A state of remission existed until this past summer. In the meantime, she has been a kindergarten teacher at Fourth Street School in Plymouth for several years. The fund has been set up by friends who have admired her service to the children of Washington County. Persons have questions may contact Leafie Bryant or Carol Broderick, both of Plymouth.

Donations may be sent to the Dorothy Bumgardner Fund, c/o Planter's National Bank, P.O. Box 98, Plymouth, N.C. 27062.

Volunteers Assist With Commissioners Banquet

Volunteer Women assisted with the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Commissioners Banquet which was last night at the Greenville Country Club. The women added decorating touches.

Betty Lou Howard was chairman for the banquet. She was assisted by Lois Briley, chairman of the women volunteers, and Lib Tyson, who coordinated individual tables, June Ficklen, Ann Clark, Lib Phillips, Mary Honeycutt, Joy Belcher and Celeste Wilkerson.

Special decorating accents included three unique flowers arrangements. An arrangement of gold roses and rosebuds, made from cured tobacco leaves, and greenery in a crystal bowl highlighted the club foyer. The roses were designed by Jeanette Whitehurst and arranged by Ms. Clark.

A grapevine basket was filled with yellow spider mums and bronze chrysanthemums with greenery. Cured tobacco leaves forming a golden bow adorned the top of the basket. It was arranged by Ms. Wilkerson and decorated one of the refreshment tables.

An antique brass container was filled with tobacco blossoms, cured tobacco leaves, wild wheat and native foliage. This arrangement was done by Ms. Briley and Mary Dillard Mills.

Dear Abby

Parents Are Stuck With No-Shows Cost

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our son was married to a nice girl whose parents had no money, so my husband and I gave the young couple a wedding reception and paid for it ourselves.

The invitations were sent out with reply cards. Eight couples we did not know but who were friends of our son and his bride returned the reply cards saying they were coming, so we counted on them for dinner as we did for all the others who accepted by mail.

When the dinner was served, those eight couples did not show up. Abby, dinner at $41.50 a plate for 16 people cost us $664. After the wedding, none of the no-shows called to explain or apologize. And none of them sent a gift.

My question is this: Since these people were friends of the bride and groom, don't you think they should make good the $664? We offered to foot the bill for the reception, but must we pay for guests who accepted but didn't show up?

STUCK IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR STUCK: You are indeed "stuck," because having offered to pay for the reception, you are obligated to pay for the no-shows. They were very rude, and your son and his bride should let them know about it, but the financial loss—unfair as it is—is yours.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who is a widow and often travels with a widower. Their relationship is strictly platonic. (My friend says she does not find this man physically attractive.)

Recently the two of them attended her granddaughter's graduation in another part of the country, and the daughter, thinking her mother and this man were lovers and not wanting to appear old-fashioned, put them up together in a room with a double bed!

My friend said she was uncomfortable and somewhat embarrassed, but she didn't want to make a fuss, so she went along with it.

What are your thoughts on this?

NO NAMES OR LOCATIONS

DEAR NO NAMES: I find it difficult to believe that a grown woman with all her marbles would share a double bed with a man rather than "make a fuss!"

What fuss? It would seem perfectly logical for her to have told her daughter that she and the gentleman were just friends, not lovers, and separate accommodations were required.

DEAR ABBY: I worked for a married man for 25 years. For 18 of those years I was his mistress. I finally broke it off after trying to end it for three years. He got mad and fired me. Then he hired a young divorcee to take my place. I needed that job, Abby. I told him if he didn't give me my job back I would tell his wife.

Should I keep my word?

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: No. If your boss fired you because you refused to sleep with him you can sue him for sexual harassment. You can also appeal to the Labor Relations Board and/or one of the many support groups for women's rights. WEAL (Women's Equity Action League, 805 15th St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005) and your local chapter of NOW (National Organization for Women) are particularly effective. Good luck.

Partnership Exists

It will take more than charm — and coercion is out of the question — to persuade Japan into lowering trade barriers; or for the United States to push down interest rates and curtail taxes that hamper international trade. There are inescapable national problems involved.

The question of increased Japanese spending for defense is more apt to be happily resolved, but at a politically safe pace. No question about it, Japan is going to work out a means of preventing an unwieldy military machine from running amok, before venturing very much further into military buildup. Too, the Japanese people look on defense growth as something to avoid unless and until the threat to their own safety reaches a recognizably higher level.

The United States has a good ally in Japan, and Japan has an ally in the United States. Quite naturally, national needs and concerns require understanding and acceptance; but the odds are strongly in favor of the two countries finding a larger base of cooperation.

While President Reagan is reportedly "prodding" Japan into a two-way partnership, the fact is such a partnership does exist; and the only thing that can prevent it from becoming closer is the ever-present chance for those usual conflicts between national problems and the demands of cooperative effort.

We have to live with that.

Low Point For Arafat

An elusive PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat seems to be fighting for his position and possibly his life in Tripoli.

Mutinous guerrillas have been pressing him in Tripoli, a city which Arafat says he wants to save. At this writing it is not clear what will happen. Tripoli could become another victim of the endless war in Lebanon and be reduced to rubble.

Of course Arafat has survived other onslaughts, one being the Israeli movement into Lebanon and Beirut. He may pull out of this one and find a way to rally his forces for further fighting. Certainly, at this time, it seems a low point for Arafat.

Clock Keeps Ticking

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ohio Clock took a licking but kept on ticking. And, still, no one can tell you why it's called the "Ohio Clock."

Last week's bombing in the Capitol focused attention on the ancient timepiece, a tall mahogany case clock located not more than 10 feet from the blast site near the Senate chamber.

Its glass face was demolished and its base fragmented in the explosion but the clock's mechanism was left undamaged. After workers cleared the debris from the corridor, the clock still stood, proudly and defiantly.

At first workers thought the old clock was broken. But a little tinkering got its pendulum swinging once again. And today, it's still ticking off the minutes, just as it's done in the same spot since 1859.

For as long as anyone can remember, the clock has been called the "Ohio Clock." That's always seemed strange, since the word "Philadelphia" is printed behind its hands. It was just another mystery of the Capitol — one that that didn't seem to bear too close a scrutiny.

But the bomb blast sent the office of the Capitol curator scurrying into its records for the history of the clock.

Seems it was ordered by the Senate in 1815 from Thomas Voigt, a Philadelphia clockmaker, for just over $300. The clock, which is topped by an ornate, wing-spread carved eagle, was delivered to the Senate in 1816 and placed outside what was then the Senate chamber.

It was moved to its present location — after the Capitol was expanded and a new Senate chamber built — in 1859.

But, alas, the curator's office can come up with no clues as to why the clock is called the Ohio clock.

Some historians offer a suggestion for its nickname. A carved shield on the lower portion of the case contains 17 stars — and Ohio was the 17th state admitted to the union.

But other historians scoff at that notion, noting that Ohio was admitted in 1803 and that by the time the clock was installed, the 18th and 19th states had already been admitted.

So the clock remains a mystery. But, wound once a week, its continues to do all that anyone could ask of a clock — it keeps good time.

Senators and Capitol visitors are trying to make the best of the explosion and the construction work under way to restore the blast-damaged areas.

The day after the explosion, both the Republican and Democratic cloakrooms — which serve a dual purpose as private lounges and conference rooms for members — were closed as workers repaired damage to their blown-out windows.

The Senate managed to complete a $252 billion military spending bill the same day, the largest defense budget in history. "Considering the progress we've made on the bill, maybe we'd do better without cloakrooms," joked one top GOP official.

The day after the blast, security was tightened considerably in the Capitol. Among those who had trouble getting into the building were Senate Sergeant-at-Arms Larry Smith — who ordered the tighter security precautions — and President Reagan's chief congressional lobbyist, Ken Duberstein.

Smith said that officers at the door didn't recognize him — and he had to produce identification to persuade them he was entitled to admission.

Duberstein griped that he had to remove his overcoat and open his jacket, pass through a metal detector, and have his belongings searched — just as do all Capitol visitors.

He jokingly suggested to Senate GOP aides that, the next time Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., visits the White House, he was going to have him subjected to the same type of near "strip search."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., planned a news conference in the Senate last week to talk about Republican prospects in 1984 Senate races. But the room he picked for a news conference was in an area near the bomb site, off limits to reporters.

At first it was suggested that reporters would need a police escort to get to Lugar's news conference. Instead, Lugar's staff distributed maps of the Capitol to reporters showing a circuitous route by which reporters could make it to the room — through back corridors and down a hidden stairwell.

The map didn't mention the explosion, just suggested — euphemistically — the route reporters should follow "because of construction work on the second floor of the Capitol."

RALEIGH — A political poll is like a good crossword puzzle. You can play with it vertically. You can play with it horizontally. Or you can go to the back of the newspaper and get the answers.

In two recently released polls, the answers on the back page have been pretty standard. Gov. Jim Hunt leads Sen. Jesse Helms in the race for U.S. Senate. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten leads the field of Democrats seeking the governorship with a lot of voters still undecided.

But when you start playing with the poll findings, looking at them vertically and horizontally, these two new polls have a bunch of little surprises that challenge some of the conventional wisdom you hear mouthed over beer and barbecue.

Take, for example, the assumption that Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox is simply an urban candidate. The Carolina poll conducted by the UNC School of Journalism found that Knox indeed relied heavily on urban support to hold second place behind Edmisten. Knox got 11.1 percent of the urban vote and only 5.1 percent of the rural vote. But the poll also shows John Ingram, Jimmy Green and Lauch Faircloth — all candidates with rural bases — getting about 5 percent in rural areas, too.

A poll released by Knox's political consultant, Walter DeVries of Wrightsville Beach, brings into question a widely held notion about Edmisten. Many political types feel that the public looks unfavorably upon Edmisten. They note that he's been attorney general for 10 years but, even with all the recognition that's brought him, he still only has a small lead. They ascribe his inability to lock the race up to public concern about his alleged playboy reputation.

DeVries asked 600 Democrats who voted in 1982 if they had a favorable or unfavorable opinion about several candidates. Edmisten had a much lower unfavorable rating than either Green or Ingram — only 11.8 percent as compared to 17.2 percent for Ingram and 41.7 percent for Green. Faircloth's unfavorable rating was 7.3 percent, but he had far lower name recognition than did Edmisten. Knox was viewed unfavorably by 3.5 percent.

Another notion widely held in political circles is that Ingram has a loyal core of support that he can count on in the May primary. DeVries asked people who they'd vote for and then asked them if they thought the candidate they just named could win. If a voter says his candidate will win, then his support for that candidate is considered to be strong. Of the five leading Democratic candidates for governor, Ingram had the weakest support, according to DeVries' theory. Only 22.7 percent of people saying they'd vote for him expect him to win. Edmisten, Knox and Faircloth, on the other hand, all were in the 60 percent range.

Conventional logic on the Democratic nomination for president has Ohio Sen. John Glenn running ahead of Walter Mondale in North Carolina. Glenn's more conservative, he's a military hero and a former astronaut. Just the kind of stuff voters here like. Mondale gets 42 percent to 18.5 for Glenn, percentages which show Mondale has gained 12, and Glenn lost three, points since June.

Finally, a finding from the Carolina Poll is startling because of its magnitude. In this U.S. Senate contest, Hunt gets 44.5 percent and Helms gets 44.7 percent of the male vote. The female vote, however, goes 63 percent to Hunt and 26.6 percent to Helms. Of all the poll respondents saying they planned to vote for Hunt, three-fifths were women.

Public Forum

To the editor:

At a time when the merging of city and county schools is a prominent issue and particularly one that is said to ultimately benefit the city schools, to have the county school system belittled is disheartening. In recent weeks two news articles have appeared downgrading the county school system.

One example would be the letter written to the editor of The Daily Reflector on Sept. 9, 1983, stating Rose High School's humiliation at having to use D.H. Conley's football field. Unfortunately, Rose High does not have its own football field, but Rose High School should be grateful for any accommodations made by the others schools in this county.

The second article appeared in Rose High's newspaper, Rampant Lines. The article covers a luncheon and news conference for the Japanese ambassador in which each high school was allowed to send a journalist for its paper. The following excerpt from the article is degrading, not only to the county schools' journalists, but also to the governor of our state: "The high school students were not to ask questions unless specifically called on by Governor Hunt, and if he were so kind to remember us, Rose High got priority over the other schools. (We made sure the county 'journalists' knew we were the Rose Corps.) By the time Jim and friend entered the press room, Jim was already late for another appointment. He made a brief statement, flashed his bright blue eyes around the room and took off for the helicopter."

Rose High journalists were misinformed thinking they had been given priority over the county schools in the question-and-answer session. Gov. Hunt tried to conduct the meeting in an orderly manner by assigning high schools a specific slot for questioning without regard for who went first.

As a high school student, I am aware that everyone takes pride in the school he attends. This certainly is a desirable trait; however, for one school to degrade another to boost its image seems distressing.

Strength For Today

"Now the Lord is that Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."

The mood of the early Christian Church was one of joy, and this joy arose mainly from the fact that Christian faith had brought to those who embraced it an exhilarating sense of freedom.

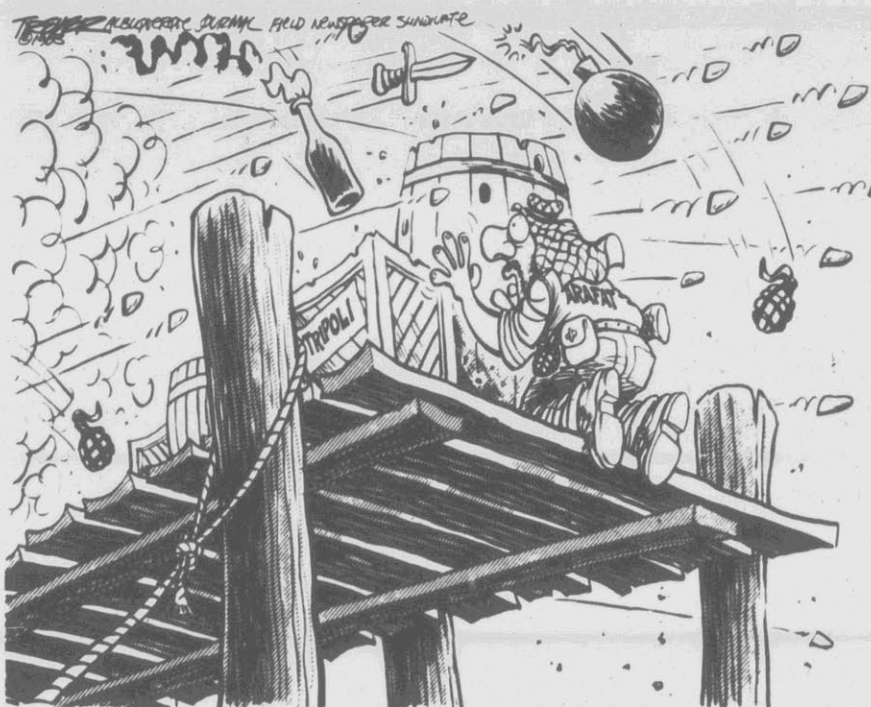

Before these early Christian believers knew anything about Jesus, his teachings, his resurrection, and his glory, they had been in the bondage of sin. Sensuality, avarice, hate, envy, moral instability dominated their lives. They struggled, but to no avail. Their sins were too great for their poor powers to cope with.

Then came the message of Christ and following that message a sense of power and release from the bondage of self and sin.

We all attach great importance to political liberty. And when spiritual liberty is added to it, then are we free indeed.

Those Millions Add Up

WASHINGTON — Some years have passed since Everett Dirksen, that beloved senator from Illinois, formulated his homely explanation of how the government gets in the fiscal messes that so constantly recur.

"We vote a billion here, and a billion there," said the senator, "and the first thing you know it adds up to real money."

Dirksen's admonition came to mind the other day when the House of Representatives, to its credit, wrestled one more time with a bill to establish "Project Democracy" as an adjunct of the U.S. Information Service. The bill was not concerned with billions; it would authorize mere millions, but the principle is the same.

The bill would create a "National Endowment for Democracy" that would be funded in one version by an appropriation of $31.3 million. The money would be distributed as follows: $13.8 million to the AFL-CIO to promote free trade unionism in foreign lands; $5 million to the Democratic Party and $5 million to the Republican Party to explain the formation of democratic institutions; $2.5 million to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce to promote democratic capitalism abroad; and $5 million for operating expenses and other grants.

The object, we are told, is "to promote democratic ideas and ideals, and to assist democratic institution-building overseas." Project

Democracy would be an "enhancement of traditional programs" of the Information Service. It also would represent "new initiatives." A mandate "to teach democratic practice and principles already exists." The new endowment, coupled with other existing programs, will enlarge the ability of the U.S. government "to communicate with other people around the world," and will "directly affect its ability to promote U.S. values and interests in the world community, and thus to enhance U.S. national security."

Now, in translation from the Greek: This little bill is a bill to create a plump little slush fund for the fat cats of labor, business and the two major parties. If enacted, it would provide a marvelously convenient place to employ Uncle Ben, Sister Polly and Cousin Andrew. Committees of oversight, eager to see how Project Democracy is working in Bangladesh, would of course repair to Dacca — but with an intermediate stop at Paris on the way. Should democratic ideals be promoted in Burma, and free labor unions be encouraged in Sri Lanka, and principles of capitalism be promulgated in Bhutan? Absolutely! And Hong Kong is such a lovely city in which to rest from the grueling tasks the endowment will have sponsored.

It seems incredible that so gauzy a program ever could have been dreamed up. Still more incredible is that President Reagan could have approved it and that such sensible fellows as Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., are supporting it. When the bill reached the floor of the House last June, Rep. Hank Brown, R-Colo., took the lead in striking the grants to the two political parties from the bill, but the Senate subsequently restored them.

Ten days ago the measure returned to the floor on procedures involving a conference committee. Once again the House voted overwhelmingly against the $5 million political handouts. The heroes on this occasion were Brown again, George Crockett of Michigan and Jim Leach of Iowa. Leach had the best line: "This is nuts foreign policy," he said.

And indeed it is. Abundant agencies already exist, in both the public and private sectors, for explaining and encouraging the spread of democratic ideals. One more agency cannot possibly be justified. The matter of redundancy to one side, the measure provides a classic example of Dirksen's Law in operation. In a budget of $800 billion, an item of $31 million is practically invisible. A state of mind exists in which such trivial sums really are not worth bothering about. But just as Dirksen said, after a while a million here and a million there will add up to real money.

Foreign Policy Challenged

WASHINGTON — Frustrated in part by Democratic quietude regarding nuclear weapons and Central America, citizens are themselves increasingly challenging U.S. foreign policy in court. The barrage of litigation is reminiscent of judicial wrangling over Vietnam. Though no outright reversal of policy may come of it, the result will be constructive.

Thirteen women, all but one British, opened the latest front last Wednesday (Nov. 9) before a federal judge in New York City. Joined by Democratic Reps. Ron Dellums of California and Ted Weiss of New York, the women challenged the legality of U.S. plans to deploy 96 cruise missiles at the U.S. Air Force base at Greenham Common, west of London. An antagonistic Judge David N. Edelstein refused to grant the plaintiffs a temporary restraining order against deployment, and agreed to hear a jurisdictional challenge next week (Nov. 21).

The Greenham Common case follows a string of three seemingly quixotic lawsuits that have centered on Reagan administration mischief in Central America. One challenges the presence of U.S. advisers in El Salvador; the other two involve Washington's covert assistance to Nicaraguan rebels. While one case received a big boost from a federal judge in San Francisco on Nov. 3, two are now hostage to federal appeals panels.

Understandable angst over the course of foreign policy inspired judicial sorties by congressmen and private citizens during the Vietnam War. Orlando vs. Laird (1971) and Atlee vs. Laird (1972), like those cases pending today, essentially contested the legality of war by executive decree. Most were eventually dismissed on procedural grounds or as matters for political resolution; not one ever led to a final "guilty" verdict.

Enactment of the War Powers Act in 1973 did little to bolster the public's check on presidential war-making. The law's value has become practically illusory in the view of its sponsor, Sen. Jacob Javits (R-N.Y.), who wrote recently in The New York Times Magazine, "... (we) in Congress helped to establish the unwritten precedent whereby avoiding the War Powers Resolution's intent has become more the rule than the exception."

Nevertheless, 1978 ethics legislation has enhanced the leverage of citizens who want to take issue with errant foreign policy. This was evident in San Francisco, where a federal judge ordered Attorney General William French Smith to undertake a preliminary investigation of U.S. support for Nicaraguan rebels.

Ronald Reagan's blatant contempt for facts has offered concerned citizens every reason to yell and scream. So has a waffling Congress, which in almost successive actions has invoked the War Powers Act (over Lebanon) and abdicated it (by giving the CIA money to topple Managua's Sandinistas). That's why the court challenges to the president's wayward foreign policy are nothing to belittle.

Jordan Is Area Visitor

State Sen. Bob Jordan, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor, met supporters Monday night at the Three Steers Restaurant in Greenville.

The Montgomery County Democrat, a member of the Senate since 1977, discussed the need for improving schools and establishing re-training programs to prepare workers for the new jobs of the future. He also pointed to efforts to spread industry throughout the state and create jobs.

A native of Mount Gilead, Jordan graduated from N.C. State University with honors and served on the town board in his home town for 11 years and as chairman of the Montgomery County Planning Board for over 10 years. He served on the UNC Board of Governors from 1971-76 after 10 years on the board of trustees of the Consolidated University of North Carolina. Jordan is chairman of the Senate's base budget and administrative rules committees. He is the only Senate member of the State Board of Education.

Carl Darden of Greenville is serving as Jordan's campaign manager for this area.

Firemen Turn To Police Chore

By The Associated Press
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A group of Guilford College firefighters switched to police work Sunday afternoon when they jumped on their fire trucks and chased a suspected burglar to a tobacco field.

Shortly before 3 p.m., Assistant Fire Chief Norman

Marshall spotted a man speeding backward in his car.

Right behind the suspect was horse farmer Don Hart, who shouted that the driver, still fleeing backward, had just burglarized his home and threatened his girlfriend with a shotgun.

Marshall, returning in his truck from a false alarm, radioed his men at the nearby Guilford College fire station. Nine volunteer firefighters raced to the scene, hopped off their fire trucks, and chased the suspect half a mile.

Richard D. McDaniel, 29, of Greensboro was arrested and charged with breaking and entering and assault, according to Guilford County Sheriff's Deputy M.E. Brown.

The Gregorys' son, David, also of Java, followed in his father's footsteps to take second place in each of the categories as well.

Elizabeth II Will Have Crew

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — The sponsors of the Elizabeth II have found dozens of people willing to sign up as crew members for the ship, even with no pay.

The applications for crew positions on the replica of a 16th century sailing ship range from 11-year-old Robin Fetner of Winnsboro, S.C., who has "very little experience as a cabin boy" but is willing to learn, to an East German political refugee living in Fayetteville who has been studying American history.

David Lathan, site manager for the Elizabeth II, said if a channel is dredged allowing the ship to leave her dock, volunteer crews will be picked for spring and fall cruises.

If the ship must remain in its dock, a number of volunteers will serve as crew members to give visitors accounts of life on board ship.

Stop Shipping Of Computer

NEW YORK (AP) — West German authorities seized a sophisticated computer made in the United States seven minutes before it was to leave for the Soviet Union via Sweden, federal officials say.

Michael Kaufman, New York spokesman for the Customs Service, said today the shipment was stopped in Hamburg, West Germany on Friday.

The seizure was made "in the nick of time," said John M. Walker Jr., assistant secretary of the Treasury for enforcement and operations.

Walker said U.S. Customs Service officials in West Germany told the German government about the planned shipment after receiving word that the Digital Equipment Corp. mini-computer would be smuggled into the Soviet Union.

The Commerce Department has banned shipment of the computer to Eastern bloc nations to keep them from getting high-technology equipment that could be used for military purposes, Kaufman said.

William Green, deputy assistant commissioner of the Customs Service, told the New York Times the VAX 11/780 computer could be used "for missile guidance or something like that," and for "keeping track of troops and weapons."

The computer was shipped by a company in New York State to an affiliate in South Africa, then sent to Hamburg, West Germany, where it was loaded on a freighter bound for Sweden before it was seized, the Times reported in today's editions.

Customs officials said the name of Richard Mueller, a fugitive wanted in another case involving illegal export of electronic equipment, was found on some documents with the computer shipment. Customs Commissioner William Von Rabb identified Mueller as a West German indicted by a federal grand jury in California in 1979 in connection with an illegal shipment of semiconductor manufacturing equipment to the Soviet bloc, the Times reported.

"He has been implicated in several other investigations," Von Rabb said.

Why Would A Bank Put So Much Value On Something Money Can't Buy?

No one is surprised these days when a bank touts the quality of its services or announces with pride the addition of another zero in its assets column.

And certainly, these things are important. It's just that, at BB&T, we view them from a somewhat different perspective. Because, what we value above all else is something quite different. We place a premium on attitude.

Attitude shows up on the balance sheet only indirectly. But we venture to say that you'll notice the difference it makes when you enter any one of our branches.

You'll find, for example, that instead of merely providing a service, we're interested in the full range of your long-term financial plans and needs.

We believe that our commitment to long-term thinking gives us superior insight. And that this insight gives us the ability to understand the need and value of integrated financial solutions for our customers.

Responsiveness is another BB&T attribute. We're committed to responding to any request for our services in the absolute minimum amount of time.

Ultimately, you'll also discover that BB&T delivers the highest quality financial services across the board.

Quality. Commitment. Performance. For the things that mean more than just money, come to the place that's more than a bank.

BB&T
It's More Than A Bank.
It's An Attitude.

ECU Moving To Strengthen Biotechnology Role

ECU NEWS BUREAU

East Carolina University is moving rapidly to strengthen and expand its program in biotechnology because of a predicted demand for educated technicians in that field of modern science.

"Biotechnology is as much a component of today's high technology as computers," Dr. Kathleen Kennedy, molecular biologist and researcher who is director of ECU's Biotechnology Training Program, said.

A new word in the academic world, biotechnology refers to laboratory techniques of genetic engineering and development of hybridoma cells in organisms — both plant and animal — for research and product development.

In the future, biotechnology will be applied to medicine, agriculture, chemistry, mining and the energy field as well as enriching the environmental quality of life.

In agribusiness alone, applications of genetic engineering are expected to create an annual market between $50 billion and $100 billion in 1996, investment analysts predict.

"It is the fastest moving intellectual discipline in biology," Dr. Kennedy said. "The explosion of knowledge in this field is equivalent to the explosion of knowledge in physics after the atom was split."

It is estimated that up to 75,000 biotechnologists will be needed for high-skill salaried jobs in the United States by the late 1990s. And the greatest need by industry will be for technicians trained at the undergraduate and master's degree level, ECU officials said.

The state of North Carolina, through the Policy Development Division of the Department of Administration, is stressing the need for and encouraging educational institutions to develop the capability to train personnel for biotechnology-related industries and has established a North Carolina Biotechnology Center to push the program.

"Our purpose in the biotechnology program is two-fold: to prepare students to become Ph.D. candidates for careers in teaching and research, and to train technicians at the undergraduate and master's level for industry," ECU Biology Department Chairman Charles E. Bland said.

ECU has applied to the University of North Carolina General Administration for permission to plan degree offerings in biotechnology, Bland said.

John M. McConney of Greenville, an official of Burroughs Wellcome, said the field "is one of the emerging technologies of the future," and holds great promise.

With a recent unrestricted corporate gift of $5,000 to help support the ECU program, McConney noted "the importance of East Carolina University and its efforts in this field to Burroughs Wellcome."

"Its work in this field is of particular interest and importance now and in the future," McConney said.

Burroughs Wellcome has a large production facility in Greenville and conducts extensive research in North Carolina's Research Triangle Park.

"We are very happy to receive this support," Bland said of the Burroughs

Wellcome gift. "Such support is almost essential to certain aspects of the program."

He said he hopes that the Burroughs Wellcome gift will be used to establish a scholarship fund for the biotechnology program.

Begun two years ago,

ECU's biotechnology program consists of an area of concentration in molecular biology and biotechnology in the BS degree curriculum including more than 30 semester hours of course work — mostly laboratory courses. Also, revision in the curriculum for the MS degree has strengthened the molecular biology area.

ECU's program is the only nationally recognized biotechnologist training program for bachelor's and master's level students currently existing in North Carolina, Bland said. However, several colleges in Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania began undergraduate major programs in biotechnology this fall.

"This supports our contention that students need to start early at the bachelor's and master's levels in order to develop the capability to synthesize material from the broad subject matter of biotechnology," Bland said.

"Our students will superimpose their biotechnology skills upon a background equivalent to the BS degree in biochemistry," Bland said. The ECU Biology Department also offer a bachelor's degree in biochemistry.

A new course in biotechniques, designed especially for the biotechnology program, was taught at ECU for the first time last spring. An intensive, eight credit-hour laboratory course, the class was devoted to modern methods in molecular biology.

ECU's students will be trained in a wide variety of the techniques of genetic engineering (recombinant DNA methodology), Dr. Kennedy explained. Also, a section of the biotechniques course deals with immunological methods.

"Experience gained by students in this course will be useful to them whether they seek jobs in industry or pursue graduate studies," she said. Two new graduate level courses in molecular biology are also being developed.

Dr. Kennedy, who received her Ph.D. in molecular biology from Vanderbilt University in 1977, joined the ECU faculty this fall. She recently completed post-doctoral research at the Biozentrum of the University of Basel, Switzerland.

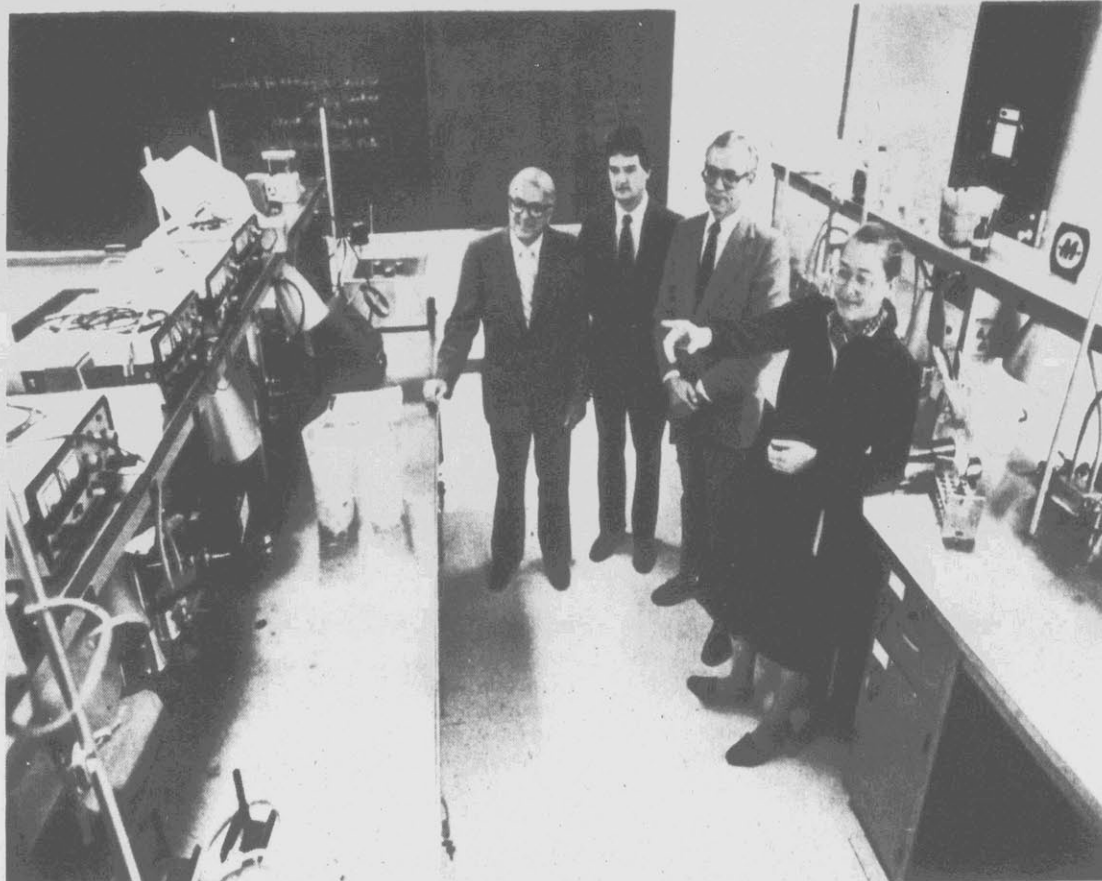

She teaches molecular genetics and biotechniques at and is director of the Biotechnology Training Program at ECU. She is also continuing her research.

N.C. Pet Crematorium Says Business Grows

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — For prices ranging from $35 to $200, an increasing number of North Carolinians are having their pets cremated, the general manager of the state's only pet crematorium says.

"To a lot of people, a pet is just like a child," said Faye Harris of Hillsborough's Pet Cremation Service. "We see people who are in a lot of grief and pain and who often are feeling guilty that they somehow caused the death."

Ms. Harris says business at firm has tripled since 1979, leading the company to open regional sales offices in Matthews near Charlotte and in Raleigh. She says the company handles about 500 pet cremations a year.

The cost of cremation for any type or size of animal is $35. For that fee, the pet's ashes are scattered in a wooded area adjacent to the Orange County operation.

About 75 percent of the service's customers pay $40 and have the pet's remains processed for return to the owner, Ms. Harris said. Some of those customers select one of the company's urns in which to store the ashes.

Urn prices range from $10 for a plastic one to $157 for the top of the line solid bronze jar.

Ms. Harris said dogs make up about 60 percent of the company's business, followed by cats at 35 percent and others, 5 percent. "Others" have included tigers, rabbits, pigs and goats, she said.

The business originated and shares building space with Triangle Cremation Services, a crematorium for people built 10 years ago by three Chapel Hill investors.

Until Ms. Harris joined the firm in 1978, the cremation of pets was a little-publicized sideline. But in 1979, she convinced the shareholders that more pet owners would use the service if they knew it was available.

Ms. Harris' promotional efforts, including brochures distributed to veterinarians' offices and ads placed in the Yellow Pages and newspapers, are paying off.

All cremations are still done in a crematory furnace next door to the human crematorium. But a new pet incinerator, being custom-built in Richmond, Va., will go to an expanded branch site in Mecklenburg County. Long-range plans call for pet incinerators in Raleigh, Greensboro and the New Bern-Wilmington area.

Meanwhile, Ms. Harris said the ashes of her little terrier, Scruffy, who was hit by a car and killed, sit in an urn on her desk. She says she'll have a matching book-end for her desk when her new dog, a dachshund named Fritz, dies.

"I know this all sounds corny, but if you don't smile a little, this work will get to you emotionally," she said.

Five Collisions Here Yesterday

An estimated $9,950 damage resulted from a series of five traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Monday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a collision at the intersection of Charles and 12th streets, involving cars driven by Clinton Paul Charles of 210 N. Eastern St. and Julius Liston Bishop of 304 Umstead Dorm.

Damage was set at $1,200 to the Charles car and $2,300 to the Bishop car.

Cars driven by Linda Evon Harrell of Route 1, Bethel, and Frances Elizabeth Smith of 905 E. 10th St. collided about 1:10 p.m. at the intersection of Fourth Street and Rotary Avenue, causing $1,500 damage to the Harrell car and $800 damage to the Smith auto.

Police charged Ms. Smith with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

Three cars were involved in a 5:31 p.m. collision on Elm Street, .1 mile south of the 10th Street intersection.

Officers, who identified the drivers involved as Patricia Lynn Weeks of 1908 E. Fourth St., Jane Barnhill Waller of 3003 Fern Drive, and Linda Loretta Hodges of 1500 Willow St., charged Ms. Hodges with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

Damage was estimated at $1,000 to the Weeks car, $500 to the Waller car and $450 to the Hodges vehicle.

Investigators charged Willie Louis Wilson of 1801 McClellan St. with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 9:20 a.m. collision at the intersection of Howell and Perkins streets.

Officers said the Wilson car collided with an auto driven by Arthur Wooten of 706 Howell St., causing $350 damage to the Wooten car and $700 damage to the Wilson auto.

Linda Lamsche Finch of 104B Maplewood Court was charged with failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 5:13 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 75 feet east of the Brinley Road intersection.

Officers, who set damage to the Finch car at $750, identified the drivers of the other two cars involved as Sandra Kay Brown of Farmville and Amos Calvin Leggett of 1101 E. Rocksprings Road. No damage resulted to the Brown and Leggett cars.

Staton Serves As Judge

Dr. Mary Lois Staton, professor emerita of East Carolina University, is one of the judges who served on a panel Monday to evaluate school essays for students in three grade levels in the Washington County schools.

Students competed at three levels in writing essays on the topic, "Why I Am Proud of My Community." Grade levels and word maximums were: 4-6, 250 words; 7-8, 350 words; and 9-12, 450 words.

A $50 bond was presented to winners in each category. The winning essays will be printed in the Washington Daily News along with pictures of the winners.

Rose Students 'Take' State Jobs

Five students from J.H. Rose High School were among 110 students statewide who "took over" the jobs of state officials recently during the annual Youth Involvement Day activities in Raleigh.

The five Rose students and the offices they assumed that date were: Hunter H. Bost, director of elections; Derek Dickens, secretary of state; John Jenkins Nelson, operations services; Jennifer Sessoms, state health director; and Carmela Weber, chief of State Information Processing Services.

Senior Named Intern

Terri Stewart, a rising senior at East Carolina University, has received an internship appointment to the Area Health Education Center in Tarboro.

A major in school and community health at East Carolina University, she will be involved in designing and conducting educational programs for a variety of health professionals. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Stewart of Northfield, N.J., she will be eligible upon graduation for certification as a public school health teacher or a public health educator.

Older Adults Day Planned

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department has designated Wednesday as older adults day at River Park North, for all persons 50 and older. Participants may bring a bag lunch. There will be a tour of the nature building and a nature walk around the facility from noon to 2 p.m. There is no fee charged. For further information about the Toastmasters Communication and Leadership program, call Tom Houston at 756-8171.

Ex-Sheriff Imprisoned

HAYESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Hartsell Moore, former Republican sheriff of Clay County who pleaded guilty in September to two counts of vote buying, began serving a 15-month prison term in a federal prison Friday.

U.S. Marshal Max Wilson said Monday that Moore entered a minimum-security camp in Terre Haute, Ind., that houses offenders convicted of non-violent "white-collar crimes."

U.S. District Court Judge Woodrow W. Jones allowed Moore to delay reporting to prison because of eye surgery. Moore originally was scheduled to report to U.S. marshals Oct. 21.

Wilson said Moore will continue to receive medical treatment and will live in a "big dormitory." Moore also was fined $2,000 and received an additional 15-month suspended sentence. He served as sheriff of the rural county for 16 years.

Sheriff Howard Barnard, who defeated Moore in the November 1982 election, has appealed his Sept. 22 conviction of vote buying — a felony — and continues to serve as sheriff.

Baltimore Has Subway System

BALTIMORE (AP) — Seventeen years after planning began and seven years after the first shovelful of dirt was turned, Baltimore has a subway system.

The $797 million complex linking the city center with its northwestern suburbs officially opens Saturday, but riders got to try it out for free Monday.

The city hopes the eight-mile-long system will build ridership to 45,000 patrons a day after one year and serve 85,000 or more passengers a day after the completion in 1987 of a six-mile extension of the line to Baltimore County.

Solicitation Request Approved

Police Capt. J.A. Briley has announced approval of a request by Gamma Sigma Sigma service sorority to conduct a car stop Saturday at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Greenville Boulevard to raise money for future service projects.

Environmental Documents Available

Complete sets of environmental documents concerning the impact of Peat Methanol Associates $540 million peat-to-methanol project in eastern North Carolina have been placed in 18 libraries across the state.

Copies are in the reference sections of the East Carolina University and ECU Regional Development Institute libraries and the library of Martin Community College, Williamston.

The documents include environmental impact summary analysis for the project and study results and plans for air and water quality controls, wildlife habitat, cultural resources and socioeconomic analyses, solid waste management and other studies.

'Spotlight' Lecture Scheduled

Dr. Nancy James will be the speaker during the 'Spotlight' lecture to be sponsored by the Mental Health Association in Pitt County at noon Wednesday at the Jaycee Park Administrative Building, 2000 Cedar Lane.

Dr. James, a Grifton resident who is director of hospital education at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, will talk about "Listening to Your Child." The lecture is open to the public and participants may bring a bag lunch. A beverage will be provided.

Byrd Heads Coalition For Teens

The Pitt County Action Coalition for Teens has elected Bill Byrd, professor of community health at East Carolina University, chairperson and head of the standing committee on planning.

Jesse Harris, Greenville community relations officer, will serve as vice chairperson and head of the membership committee. Donna Weeks, public health educator, was named treasurer and chairperson for finance, and Pat Byrd will serve as secretary. Jo Rogerson, public health educator, will head the committee for public information and publicity.

The coalition, which is sponsoring the Let's Talk campaign, will meet again in January 1984 and bi-monthly thereafter. Anyone interested in taking part may call Pat Byrd, 752-4141, for more information.

Trooper Takes New Job

Former Highway Patrol Sgt. P.C. Eure of Winterville took the oath of office last week as a motor vehicle process coordinator in the License, Theft and Weight Enforcement Section of the Department of Transportation's Division of Motor Vehicles.

Eure, who will be stationed in the Greenville office, is a Hertford County native. He began his state government career as a Highway Patrol trooper in 1961, and remained with the patrol until his transfer to the License, Theft and Weight Enforcement Section.

Brick Company To Have Opening

A ribbon-cutting ceremony for Sutton Brick Co. was held recently with Mayor Percy Cox and representatives of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce attending.

Sutton Brick is a branch of Sutton Brick Co. and Sutton Distributors Inc. of Kinston and is owned by W.D. Sutton. The Greenville business is located at 309 Hooker Road and is managed by Tommy Dail.

Sutton Brick carries brick and other related building supplies.

Day Care Laws To Be Explained

Personnel from the North Carolina Office of Child Day Care Licensing will explain new laws concerning day care at a meeting Dec. 6 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Martin Community College Auditorium, Williamston. Seven new day-care bills were ratified by the 1983 General Assembly.

The meeting will be open to anyone interested in day care services.

Belvoir Store Robbed

Pitt County deputies continued their investigation today of a Monday night robbery by two men armed with pistols at the Convenient World Inc. grocery at Belvoir, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

He said the store manager reported that the men entered the business around 10 p.m., made him and three customers lie on the floor, and took an undetermined amount of money from the cash register. Also taken were three bank bags, Tyson said.

The sheriff said the manager told deputies the robbers fled on foot north down Secondary Road 1400 (Porter Road). He said they apparently had a vehicle parked at Holly Hill Church about a quarter of a mile from the store.

Tyson said no one was injured in the incident.

Elm Grove Starting Revival

Elm Grove Free Will Baptist Church near Ayden will hold revival services Wednesday through Friday with services beginning nightly at 7:30. The featured speaker will be Evangelist Shirley Daniels of Mt. Calvary FWB Church.

Great Smokeout Activities Set

Thursday is Great American Smokeout Day nationwide and several Greenville area activities are planned, according to local Smokeout chairman Joan Boudreaux.

Noy. 17 has been set aside for the past seven years as a time for smokers to go 24 hours without a cigarette. Community volunteers will be encouraging anyone who wishes to sign a pledge not to smoke Thursday. Major activities will be under way at East Carolina University, Rose High School, Aycock Junior High School and Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Adopt-A-Smoker, a plan of the Maryland campaign last year, has gone national. Non-smokers are encouraged to adopt a friend who's a smoker for the day and do whatever is needed to support that person on the path to smokelessness. Mrs. Boudreaux said, "Adoption papers" are available from the American Cancer Society office at 112 S. Pitt St., as will "Larry Hagman special stop smoking wrist snapping red rubber bands."

"Dallas" star Hagman is national Smokeout chairman for the third year.

Removed From House Of Filth

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — A house containing "just total filth" in which rats were fed as pets has been condemned and may have to be demolished, city officials said.

An 80-year-old woman and her son in his 60s were forced to leave the house two weeks ago after authorities found cobwebs, rotting food, dead insects and hundreds of rats, acting city manager Stuart Meck said Monday. Neither the plumbing nor heating systems worked.

The son was feeding the rats from bags of grain, while he and his mother "were living on cookies," Meck said. By Monday, 249 dead rats had been removed.

The woman was taken to a nursing home and her son to the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Cincinnati, Meck said, declining to give their names.

Two Ordinances For Winterville

WINTERVILLE — Winterville aldermen passed two zoning ordinances Monday night after conducting a public hearing at the regular board meeting.

According to Town Clerk Elwood Nobles, the W.E. Briley property located between Chapman Street and the N.C. 11 bypass was rezoned from R-6 to general business, and the land uses received an additional permitted use, to allow television, radio, microwave towers, and related buildings.

The board also approved a 100 KVA pad mount transformer, for a new apartment complex to be constructed between Mill and Blount Street.

Seven contracts on house rehabilitations were also granted by the board totaling $88,100. The houses include residences of Ollie Boyd, Gladys Grimes, Naomi Holloway, Katherine Lincoln, John Waters, Louise Patrick and Willie Elbert.

In new business brought before the board, Nobles said the board adopted the rule that businesses will not be allowed to use town water and equipment to clean business equipment and vehicles. The board approved the motion.

The board also approved the addition of underground electric service, with the charges of $125 per meter for a residence and trailer, apartments and condominium, $75 per meter, three gang or less meters, $75, and four gang or more, $50.

A.G. Cox School requested a permit to sell cookies Nov. 18-29, with delivery of the cookies Dec. 5. The request was approved.

Linda Tripp appeared before the board and explained a wharf rat problem in a ditch behind her residence. The town agreed to purchase poison and put it out for the residents.

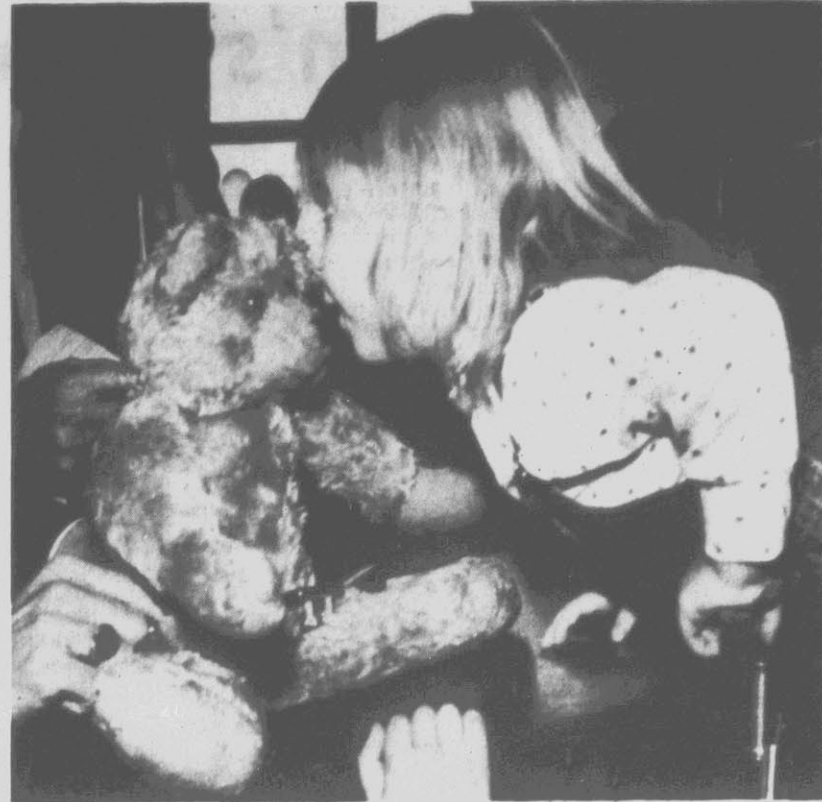

A petition for street improvements on Cooper Street between Cross Street and a dead end was accepted as presented.

Sentenced For Tax Evasion

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — William R. Hughes of Dunn was sentenced to three years in prison Monday after pleading guilty to one count of income tax evasion.

U.S. District Court Judge Earl Britt suspended all but six months of the prison, but ordered Hughes, 50, to pay a $5,000 fine and the costs of prosecution.

The Internal Revenue Service said Hughes owed $128,490 in back taxes for the years 1976 to 1979. Anyone convicted of tax evasion is liable for the taxes owed in addition to any fine that may be imposed.

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A North Carolina farmer who came to this city to pick up a piano left with a bullet wound to the leg — and no piano.

Carlton R. Casper, 31, was wounded when a bullet fired by a policeman at a dog ricocheted off a sidewalk and a truck, shattered and struck him.

"I felt a sting," said Casper, of Gates County, N.C. "Then I looked down and saw blood running through my pants. I was scared. All at once I knew I had bullet wounds in my leg."

Casper said in a telephone interview from his home that he has three bullet fragments in his left leg below the knee and one above his hip. He said doctors at the hospital where he was treated and released said removal of the fragments could cause further damage.

Norfolk Police Lt. J.H. Jackson said Officer A.C. Bassett had gone to a home

Sunday on a complaint from Casper, who was in Norfolk to pick up a piano purchased by a friend and take it back to North Carolina.

When no one answered the door, Casper and several friends called the police, suspecting something was wrong, Jackson said.

Bassett arrived at about 12:45 p.m. and also was unable to get a response from inside the house. As he started to leave, the officer was attacked by a dog that had broken loose from its chain in the back yard.

The officer fired one shot at the dog and missed. The bullet struck the sidewalk and ricocheted off the right rear panel of a pickup truck being used to move the piano. The dog did not injure anyone.

Jackson said the incident was under review. Bassett remained on duty.

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Citadel," starting Sunday night on public TV's "Masterpiece Theatre," might be considered muckraker's work, reflecting as it does A.J. Cronin's acquired distaste for aspects of the British medical profession.

Cronin was a practicing physician before he turned to writing full-time in 1931, and "The Citadel," his condemnation of the country's medical hierarchy, published in 1937, is described by Alistair Cooke, the television series' host, as "a passionate exercise in total recall of his own experiences."

"The horrors and iniquities detailed in the story I have personally witnessed," Cronin said at the time. "This is not an attack against individuals but against a system."
The novel, about a young Scotsman who begins his career in a mining town in Wales and eventually takes his idealistic practice to London, was scorned, by Cronin's former colleagues, and eventually earned the author a scant one-line obituary in The Lancet, Britain's prestigious medical journal.

"All they're bothered about is ethics, professional standards," Cronin's protagonist, Dr. Andrew Manson, says of the General Medical Council, the profession's disciplinary board. "You know they don't care a thing about humanity."

Ben Cross plays Manson, and his performance, progressing toward an impassioned speech before the Medical Council in the 10th and concluding installment, is outstanding.

In addition to Cross, who played Harold Abrahams, the Olympic runner in the acclaimed film "Chariots of Fire," the cast includes Clare Higgins as his wife, Christine, and Gareth Thomas as Philip Denny, another doctor.

The British Broadcasting Corp. production is the second dramatization of "The Citadel." Robert Donat played Manson in a 1938 motion picture that also starred Rosalind Russell and Ralph Richardson.

The BBC dramatization is first-class, though the story waxes soapy and rather melodramatic before the climactic final episode. The ill-fortune that Manson must endure in the last three hours is almost too much to swallow.

Early scenes were shot on location in the Rhondda coal-mining valley in Wales, where Cronin himself first worked as a physician. Manson is 24, a gold medalist, the most-honored graduating student at St. Andrew's Medical School in Scotland, when he arrives in Blaenelly to work as an apprentice to the bedridden

Denny, another of the doctors contracted to the mining company, can't believe Manson would accept so low a position. "They're all either greedy or stupid or incompetent," Denny, himself an alcoholic, says of their professional comrades. "A man who's a gold medalist doesn't fit any of those categories."

But life was a tough go for Manson's own family, and besides, he says, he is interested in more than a quiet, lucrative practice. "I just want a doctor to be more than a poultice-mixer or a medicine-slinger," he says.

And quickly, his attention and concern is focused on the respiratory illnesses that seem to afflict many of his patients.

His pursuit of a cure for silicosis, the most common of the miners' maladies, leads him to work in a hospital — and indirectly into marriage — and to a position on the Coal Mines Fatigue Board in London.

Then, a physician-friend from college, Freddy Hamson, comes along, and convinces Manson that his future is in treating wealthy hypochondriacs for inflated fees. "Every profession's the same, isn't it?" Hamson says. "Licenses to print money."

Wealth, membership in a fashionable club, a shiny new car and an affair with a "modern" woman follow.

Tragedy is the inevitable result, and Manson's career and marriage seem about to collapse. "Any doctor who says he's happy," he tells

Christine, "is either lying or he isn't doing his job. You can't face sickness every day, and be happy."

But Manson is not completely gone. He talks a foppish Old Boy surgeon into operating on an aging cobbler for a fraction of his normal fee. The quack botches the thing, and Manson tells Freddy and his friends to take a hike.

Principle prevails, but, unfortunately, Manson's troubles are just beginning.

'The Right Stuff' May Bring Stardom To Actor

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — John Glenn may or may not win the Democratic nomination for the presidency based on his astronaut exploits in "The Right Stuff," but Dennis Quaid is certain to emerge a major star for his portrayal of Gordon Cooper.

Quaid, along with Sam Shepherd (as test pilot Chuck Yeager) steals the film.

"The Right Stuff" began as an ensemble for seven actors depicting the original Mercury astronauts in the American space program. But as the film evolved over a period of eight months, Quaid became more and more prominent.

Scott Glenn, too, as Alan Shepherd — America's first spaceman — was favored by director and film editor for his strong performance.

Ed Harris, as Glenn, reflected the man's virtues but also came off as a tedious type compared with the colorful personalities of Shepherd and Cooper.

Aside from the strong, silent performance of Shepherd as Yeager, Quaid's ubiquitous grin, cocky self-confidence and laid-back attitude stand out above the others.

Apparently, Quaid has more in common with Cooper than one might suspect.

Asked if he thought "The Right Stuff" would influence Sen. Glenn's prospects for the Democratic nod, Quaid said, "Put it this way. I don't think this picture will help or hinder Ed Harris' chances for the presidency."

Quaid is a kicked back 29-year-old who has made 15 pictures in seven years, including memorable roles in "Breaking Away," "The Long Riders" and the TV movie, "Bill."

He's also made some dogs, "Jaws 3D," "Gorp" and "All Night Long."

He hopes, of course, "The Right Stuff" will be his breakaway picture, the film that rockets him farther into the firmament than Cooper's capsule ride.

To that end, Quaid moved to New York to appear in a couple of off-Broadway plays after he completed "The Right Stuff."

"I'd done four movies back-to-back and I wanted to bide my time for a quality project," said Quaid, whose crew-cut for the Cooper role has grown over his ears and down his neck.

"The Right Stuff" is a milestone in my career.

"Breaking Away" made people aware of me and helped me get work. This picture can help me get quality films. I moved to New York so I wouldn't be tempted to accept mediocre parts here in Hollywood."

After Cooper saw "The Right Stuff" he telephoned Quaid to say, "You done good."

The faint praise delighted the young actor who spent many hours with the retired astronaut before tackling the role.

"Getting to know Gordon helped my performance," Quaid said. "I picked up on the way he walked and talked and smiled. I wanted to get the feel of his personal attitudes and experiences. He was the youngest and cockiest astronaut."

"He likes to think of himself as a serious scientist. But when he talks about all the pranks the astronauts pulled, that grin comes out."

"I think the other actors picked up on the traits of the men they were portraying based on how the astronauts came off in the book and the script."

"We were basically strangers who began to play off one another. Almost unconsciously, Fred Ward took on the personal quirks of Gus Grissom, the only astronaut in the film who died. Some people said his performance was so real they didn't believe he was an actor."

"It's important that even though the picture makes it look as if Grissom screwed up by blowing the emergency port, all of us close to the project know better. He didn't screw up at all."

Quaid said he had the best time of his life during the film's production. The actors became an off-camera gang, hanging out at the same bar, playing pool and calling each other by the character names in the movie.

"We had a real brotherhood," Quaid said. "It helped us assume those same attitudes for the relationships of the astronauts when we were on camera. And I think it worked."

The Bridge Centre in Johannesburg is the local equivalent of New York's Cavendish Club. Of an afternoon, you will find most of the area's good players there for rubber bridge, including many who have represented their country in world competition.

This hand cropped up in a rubber bridge game at the Centre. The situation is not uncommon, but is often misplayed.

North-South conducted a reasonable auction to three no trump. For want of anything better, West decided to lead the unbid suit, and struck gold with his partner. Unfortunately, East's thoughtless play proved fatal to the defense.

He won the king and ace of hearts and continued with a third heart to his partner's queen. West shifted to a spade, but declarer was in charge. Although the diamond finesse lost, he still had time to make nine tricks.

Had East taken some time before playing to the first trick, the contract would have been defeated. South surely has a heart stopper for his bid of three no trump. Therefore, West's lead is either from three to the queen or four to the jack. In either case, declarer has a sure heart trick. To maintain communications between his hand and his partner, East should simply play the nine of hearts at trick one!

Declarer wins, but he cannot take more than eight tricks without the diamond finesse. When West wins the king of hearts and returns the queen of hearts and the defenders collect four heart tricks for down one.

Ancient Village Site Upset Plan

OLD TOWN, Md. (AP) — The discovery of the remains of a 1,000-year-old Indian village has forced the Maryland highway department to revise plans for a new bridge over the Potomac River.

Earle Freedman of the department's division of bridge development, said Monday the agency has scrapped plans to build a bridge to West Virginia in a location that would have threatened the village.

Instead, he said, a temporary bridge will be built until the existing bridge linking Paw Paw, W.Va., with Maryland can be rebuilt.

"This site is important because of the particular time period and the particular type of pottery that occurs there," said state archaeologist Tyler Bastian, who said the village dates back 800 to 1,000 years.

Manpower Survey For Police Dept.

The Greenville Police Department is conducting a manpower deployment study to aid in the assignment of personnel according to workload.

Chief Ted Holmes, who has met with department employees to explain the concept, said the data collected during the study will be used to equalize workload and response time, maximize officer safety, performance and efficiency, and "match people to the workload by time of day and day of week," as much as possible.

Holmes, who came to Greenville from Austin, Texas, where he was a police management consultant, said generally the best way to match officers to work load is by using three permanent shifts, rather than using rotating shifts as the department does now.

On the average, Holmes said, administrative duties take up about 25 percent of an officer's time, while patrol time accounts for another 33 percent to 50 percent. The time spent on investigations (on the average 30 to 45 minutes on each call), accounts for the remainder of a policeman's time on duty.

Holmes also said that on the average, the 4 p.m. to 12 midnight shift is the busiest, accounting for about 43 percent of the workload, while the 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. shift accounts for about 34 percent of the workload. The mid-night to 8 a.m. shift, Holmes said, is normally the quietest time for policemen, accounting for about 23 percent of the workload.

With shifts of equal size rotating, Holmes suggested, the 4 p.m. to 12 p.m. shift will be understaffed and overworked, while the mid-night to 8 a.m. shift will normally have more officers on duty that are needed.

He said the data collected during the study period will give some indication how closely local conditions are to the average and how best to schedule local officers to meet the workload needs.

Day-Care Owner Denies Any Maltreatment Of Tots In Care

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Disciplinary techniques used at a Lexington day-care center have not been as severe as some former employees and parents have alleged, the owner of the Creative Learning Center says.

Jean T. Drum testified Monday in Davidson Superior Court that children were not tied to cribs, locked in closets or deprived of proper food, as had been alleged.

The testimony came in the third day of a hearing to determine whether her day-care center should be permanently closed in the wake of complaints of child abuse and neglect filed with the state Attorney General's office.

Ms. Drum has filed a counterclaim asking that the state's suit be dismissed and that she recover $1,000 a week in lost income.

Earlier Monday, Martha L. May testified that she removed her son from the center the day after she found him tied to his crib.

"He was tied in the crib with no less than three blankets on, and this was in July," she said. "When (Ms. Drum) undid him completely, he was soaking wet ... and his face was red flushed."

Ms. Drum, however, disputed Mrs. May's version of the incident.

"I deny seeing that done," she said. "I deny doing it. The babies were wrapped, but not tied up."

Ms. Drum also denied allegations that she locked the child in a hallway closet three times and that she left him unattended in a sunroom to stop him from crying.

Ms. Drum also said that she has never used a practice called "shock treatment." Terri Cash, a former employee, testified last week that Ms. Drum said that a way to make a child stop crying is to put a hand over his mouth and pinch his nose closed.

Joyce Davis, another former employee, testified last week that Ms. Drum told her to smack children in the mouth to stop them from biting and said that a doctor had approved the practice.

Ms. Drum testified that she has told her teachers to stop children from biting by tapping them "lightly on the mouth ... as if you were touching a hot stove."

She also said that in August she fired Mrs. Davis and allowed Mrs. Cash to resign because the two women repeatedly left children unattended and caused three citations for staff violations at the center this summer.

Ms. Drum admitted Monday that she did not regularly hold fire drills that the state requires once a month and that she kept wine in the refrigerator at the day-care center.

She said that she missed the fire drills five or six times "because of the cold weather and exposing the infants to the cold weather."

Ms. Drum said that she doesn't drink but that she keeps wine in the refrigerator during the holidays in case friends come over. Ms. Drum lives with her two sons on the second floor of the building that houses the day-care center.

Josh Improving As Hours Pass

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — While Josh Brooks, a 9-month-old Laurinburg, N.C., infant who recently received a new liver, remains in critical but stable condition, his father says there are tiny improvements each hour.

"Josh is stable at this point. He's battling for his life," said Rick Brooks on Monday. "Though I said he was stable, there is improvement as each hour goes by."

Brooks and his wife, June Brooks, took turns watching over Josh in the intensive care unit at the University of Minnesota Hospitals after Saturday's eight-hour operation complicated by an irregular heart and kidney failure.

The boy suffered from biliary atresia, an inability of the liver to eliminate bile. Doctors said he would have died within a month without the new organ donated by the family of a brain-dead child.

"There were reports concerning fluids around Josh's brain last night, but we had a doctor come in and check him out," Brooks said in a telephone interview with radio station WEWO in Laurinburg.

"There is at this point no problem with the brain fluid," he said.

Installment On An Old Debt

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A security guard has made good on the second installment of what he considers a 21-year-old debt and shipped a truckload of Thanksgiving dinners to unemployed Pennsylvania steelworkers.

Carl Martin and members of the United Steelworkers of America Union Local 1219 of Braddock, Pa., loaded hundreds of pounds of food onto a truck Monday that will return to the western Pennsylvania town today.

Martin said collecting food is his way of thanking the steelworkers of Braddock for the help that 17 of them gave Atlantic City after a flood on March 6, 1962 in which 12 people died.

It was the second straight year that donations were collected by Martin, a 52-year-old Pittsburgh native who earns $11,000-a-year as a Convention Hall security guard.

OK Emergency Parking Spaces
By MARY SCHULKEN

AYDEN — The Town Board of Commissioners has approved the construction of four emergency-only parking places in the area between the Fire Station and the Ayden News Leader.
The action came at the board's regular meeting Monday as a result, explained Police Chief Tommy Burney, of the difficulty fire and rescue personnel have finding parking places during the day.
From 8 a.m.-5 p.m. when the Town Hall and businesses are open, Burney said, emergency personnel are often forced to park in the street because all available spaces are taken.
Presently, he explained, there is a broken sidewalk in the area and a large mud hole, which Burney termed an "eyesore." Creating four emergency only parking spaces, he noted, would eliminate both the eyesore and the need for parking.
One parallel parking place on Third Street would be eliminated by the construction, Burney said, to allow access to the lot. The land, he said, is currently owned by Southern National Bank, which has agreed to let the fire department use it for emergency parking if the liability of the bank for injury is waived.
The lot will be paved, said Burney, and curb and gutter installed. The town can do all work except the paving. Town officials estimated the paving cost at $350 if it's done at the same time as other area paving.

Missiles Stir Demonstrators
By MAUREEN JOHNSON

LONDON (AP) — Demonstrators sprayed Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine with red paint, chained themselves to the gates of a U.S. air base and climbed a 150-foot radio tower at a nuclear submarine dock today to protest the arrival of Europe's first cruise missiles.
At least 145 people were arrested, most of them at Greenham Common Air Base, 50 miles west of London, where the missiles arrived Monday, police said.
Heseltine, arriving to address a Conservative student union meeting at Manchester University, strode smilingly up to some 200 demonstrators gathered outside the front door. One of the protesters reached out a plastic squeeze bottle and sprayed his face and bushy blond hair with red paint.
"Better red than dead, Michael," shouted one demonstrator.
Heseltine, shaken but unhurt, disappeared into an anteroom to clean up, then addressed the students — and had to shout to be heard above hecklers.
"It is an abuse of the privilege of university to try and deny freedom of speech in this country," he bellowed.

President Spyros Kyprianou had telephone conversations with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and with Papandreu to discuss the situation.

Britain, Greece and Turkey are co-guarantors of the independence of the Republic of Cyprus, established in 1960 at the end of the British colonial rule.

The self-proclaimed federated state in northern Cyprus had not been recognized by any other nation except Turkey. The internationally recognized government of Cyprus has been the one ruling in the Greek Cypriot southern part of the island.

Turkish Cypriot leader Rauf Denktaş, president of the federated state, had been threatening to proclaim independence since the Greek side took the issue to the United Nations in May and pushed through a resolution calling for withdrawal of all foreign troops from Cyprus.

The assembly's declaration said the move would make it easier to establish a "partnership between the two communities with equal rights under the roof of a federation." Turkey's semi-official Anatolia news agency reported in Ankara.

"Our assembly believes all the disputes between the two communities can be solved through a policy of peace and conciliation at equal level under the good offices of the secretary-general of the United Nations," the declaration said.

The 1974 invasion forced 200,000 Greek Cypriots to abandon their homes in the Turkish-occupied region and they have not been permitted to return. Later, Turkish Cypriots living in the south moved north, completing the partition of the island.

During the prolonged unification talks, the two sides agreed on the establishment of a two-part federation but had been unable to agree on the powers of the central government.

The independence move is expected to deepen the rift between Greece and Turkey, both members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

At Faslane Bay, Scotland, three demonstrators invaded the naval base where Britain's nuclear-armed Polaris submarines dock. They climbed the radio tower, unfurled anti-nuclear banners and stayed for six hours before agreeing to come down. Police arrested them.

In central Australia, about 250 women gathered today outside the U.S.-Australia Joint Intelligence Facility at Pine Gap, demanding that the base be closed.

Missile opponents in Britain have vowed to intensify their protests against the cruise rockets, charging Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher with handing Britain's destiny to the United States and turning the nation into a "saturation bombing" target by accepting the American weapons.

Mrs. Thatcher, addressing a financiers' meeting Monday night in London, countered: "The United States is our ultimate defensive shield, the guarantor of Western freedom and the best hope for the world's oppressed."

Avoiding hardline anti-Soviet rhetoric, she said the missiles could be withdrawn quickly if the superpowers reached an arms control agreement. She vowed Britain was ready to pursue "sensible dialogue" with East bloc nations and "in that spirit" would visit Hungary early next year.

ATLANTA (AP) — Eric Dickerson's first appointment with the Atlanta Falcons this year ended in disappointment, but the Los Angeles Rams rookie vowed things would be different next time.

The next time was the National Football League's Monday night television contest and Dickerson set two single-season club records. He raced for two touchdowns and ripped off 146 yards in 21 carries to pace the Rams to a 36-13 victory over the Falcons.

The game was played in a steady rain before just 31,203 fans. There were 28,253 no-shows.

"I don't like to be shut down by a team," said Dickerson, who was held to only 64 yards in 29 attempts in the Rams' 27-21 victory over Atlanta earlier in the season.

"I'm going to find a way to play better next time," he said. "The first time I didn't take them seriously after watching them on film. This time I was more serious and it was a personal goal to get more than 64 yards."

Dickerson scored on runs of one and seven yards and increased his league-leading rushing total to 1,369 yards for the year. The yardage total and 19 touchdowns shattered Los Angeles single-season records.

Meanwhile, Rams' quarterback Vince Ferragamo, who sustained a cut right hand when he smashed it on a Falcon helmet during the second quarter and needed "a few" stitches after the game, threw touchdown passes of 61 yards to Preston Dennard and nine yards to George Farmer. The Rams ran their record to 7-4 to gain a share of the NFC West lead with the San Francisco 49ers.

Dennard's TD reception gave the Rams a 7-3 lead in the first quarter. Dickerson then scored his first TD in the second quarter to give Los Angeles a 14-6 halftime lead as the Falcons managed only field goals of 31 and 23 yards by Mick Luckhurst. Atlanta's only touchdown was a fourth-period run of one yard by Gerald Riggs.

The Rams, who had 442 yards total offense to only 209 for the Falcons, broke it open in the third quarter on Dickerson's seven-yard scoring run and Ferragamo's TD pass to Farmer. Chuck Nelson added a 27-yard field goal and Barry Redden had a 40-yard scoring run for the winners in the final quarter.

"Our offensive line dominated them, and I wouldn't say I was surprised. I can run in rain or snow, it makes no difference," said Dickerson, the Rams' No. 1 draft choice from Southern Methodist.

He bettered the old Rams record of 1,238 rushing yards set in 1977 by Lawrence McCutcheon, and his 19 touchdowns shattered the mark of 17 shared by Elroy Hirsch and Wendell Tyler.

Ferragamo completed 15 of 22 passes for 173 yards while Atlanta's Steve Bartkowski managed to hit on only 14 of 30 for 137 yards. The Falcons' William Andrews managed 52 yards in 14 carries before injuring his shoulder late in the second period and sitting out the rest of the game. He now has 1,007 yards for the season to rank second behind Dickerson.

"I'll take my share of the blame tonight," said Bartkowski, who was the NFC's top-ranked quarterback entering the contest. "I really didn't play well."

Atlanta Coach Dan Henning, whose team fell to 4-7 and last in the NFC West, felt "there wasn't a turning point" in the game.

"You've got to stop people from running before you can win. That's two weeks in a row we haven't been able to stop people," he said, referring to a 27-10 loss to New Orleans.

"Two weeks ago we had the chance to get back into the race. It is obvious we are not good enough to do that right now," said Henning.

Pirate Swimmers Ready To Open Against NCSU

East Carolina University's men's and women's swimming teams open their 1983-84 campaign Wednesday at 6 p.m. when they entertain the N.C. State Wolfpack in Minges Natatorium.

The Pirates will be seeking to end years of domination by the Wolfpack over the Bucs in the sport, and Coach Rick Kobe thinks the chances are much improved over the last few years for such a victory to take place.

"We've made some really good improvements over the past year," Kobe, in his second year, said. "We brought in a couple of YMCA National Champions and an Olympic swimmer from Peru. We have some fine talent now."

"As always, our goals are for a winning season but we go up against some of the finest teams in the country. But we have confidence in winning and doing well in our championships."

Kobe said he had several men who are within striking distance already of NCAA national qualifying times, which he calls the fastest meet in the world. Among those with a good shot are Stan Williams in the freestyle sprints, Doug McMillan in the butterfly, along with Kevin Richards and Peruvian Chema Larranaga.

The ECU women won't have as much of a problem qualifying for the nationals, since they compete in Division II, and have routinely qualified since the women's program began a few years back. Last year's ECU team finished 22nd and Kobe has hopes that it can climb into the Top 12 in the coming season. "We could take eight to ten women to the nationals this year," he said. "We already have some girls who are under varsity records, so we're hopeful for a good season."

Leading the men in the freestyle sprints will probably be Williams and Steve Hollett.

a transfer from Tennessee, along with last year's most valuable swimmer Chris Pittelli. The same three will likely dominate the middle distance freestyle also. In the distance events, Larranaga and Stratton Smith are the most likely leaders.

Richards and McMillan are the top people in the individual medley, with the same two, along with Gregor Wray in the butterfly.

Richards and Kevin Hidalgo lead in the backstroke, with Jon Mathieson and David Robaczewski in the breaststroke.

In the relays, Kobe expects to be strong in all of the freestyle events.

"Our toughest competition should come from State, North Carolina, South Carolina and Navy," Kobe said.

In the women's events, Jean Keating and Nancy James lead in the sprint events, while Cindy Newman and Scotta Miller handle the middle freestyles. Newman and Miller will also lead the distance events.

Caycee Poust and Nancy Ludwig lead the way in the IM, with Annette Burton and Newman as the top butterflyers. Poust and Lori Livingston are the leaders in the backstroke, with Jessica Feinberg and Burton leading the way in the breaststroke.

Again, Kobe expects all of the relays to be strong, with one of the better ones in the medley this year.

Chief competition will come from N.C. State, North Carolina and South Florida.

The N.C. State meet is the only home meet before the first of the year. ECU also has home dates with Navy (Jan.

7), UNC-Wilmington (Jan. 14), North Carolina (Jan. 19), UNC Charlotte (Jan. 28) and William & Mary (Feb. 18).

The Pirates will also be the host team for the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming and Diving Championships, to be held March 1-3.

Rampette Pair All-Big East

WILSON — Two members of the Rose High School girls' tennis team, which shared co-champion honors with Wilson Hunt, have been named to the Big East All-Conference team.

Making the list for Rose were Vickie Parrott, a sophomore, and Louise Evans, a senior.

A total of 13 girls were selected to the team, three of which came from Hunt. They included Suzanne Stott, Linda Vandenberg and Ginger Hill.

Elected from Fike were Stacey Reid and Beth Graves, while Lou Ann Proctor represented Beddingfield. Monica Harris was selected from Northern Nash, with Susan Mattox and Cindy Dawson elected from Kinston. North-eastern's Jackie Tolson and Karen Poole round out the selections.

Tennis coaches from the conference made the all-conference selections.

Nebraska One Vote Short; Missouri Joins Top Twenty

By The Associated Press
Powerful Nebraska has come within one vote of regaining the stature it held earlier this season — the unanimous choice as the No. 1 college football team, in the weekly Associated Press Top Twenty rankings.

One vote in this week's poll went to runnerup Texas, but the Longhorns still lost ground after polling two first place votes last week.

The unbeaten, 11-0, Cornhuskers of Nebraska, coming off a 67-13 rout of Kansas, received 59 of 60 first-place votes and 1,199 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters in the weekly poll.

Texas, which rallied from a 14-3 halftime deficit to defeat Texas Christian 20-14, received 1,137 points.

Nebraska, which has been No. 1 in every poll this season and twice was a unanimous choice, led Texas 58-2 in first-place votes and 1,198-1,140 in points a week ago. This is the ninth consecutive week that Texas has been No. 2.

Auburn, earning the right to represent the Southeastern Conference in the Sugar Bowl by beating Georgia 13-7, remained third with 1,072 points. Georgia slipped from fourth to seventh.

Illinois, going to the Rose Bowl for the first time in 20 years following a 49-21 rout of Indiana, moved from fifth to fourth place with 990 points, and Miami of Florida, which completed a 10-1 regular season by slipping past Florida State 17-16 and will meet Nebraska in the Orange Bowl, jumped from sixth to fifth with 985 points.

Southern Methodist, a 33-7 winner over Texas Tech, rose from seventh to sixth with 882 points, followed by Georgia with 754.

Michigan and Brigham Young traded places, Michigan climbing from ninth to eighth with 718 points by trouncing Minnesota 58-10, while BYU slipped from eighth to ninth with 706 points after a 24-6 triumph over Colorado State. Ohio State remained No. 10 with 657 points after a 55-7 rout of Northwestern.

The Second Ten is Iowa, Florida, Clemson, West Virginia, Washington, Alabama, Pittsburgh, Boston College, Missouri, and Maryland. Last week, it was Maryland, Iowa, BC, Florida, West Virginia, Alabama, Clemson, Washington, North Carolina and Pitt.

North Carolina suffered its third straight setback, losing to Virginia 17-14, and fell out of the Top Twenty. The Tar Heels were replaced by Missouri, which is 7-3 with a four-game winning streak after downing Oklahoma State 16-10 and which cracked the Top Twenty for the first time this season.

Wildcats, Tar Heels May Take Top NCAA Cage Slot

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

With defending NCAA Division I champion North Carolina State missing three of last season's starters, a towering Kentucky and an experienced North Carolina may help keep the title in the South for the third straight year.

Kentucky boasts the largest starting front line in college basketball, with 6-foot-9 Kenny Walker, 7-1 senior Melvin Turpin and 7-foot Sam Bowie, finally recovered from a nagging leg injury.

"With two big men in the same lineup, we'll scare a couple of teams off," Turpin said. "They won't take too many shots inside, especially when we go to a zone."

But the Wildcats are missing three starters from the 23-8 team that lost to Louisville in the Mideast regional finals — the same circumstances facing N.C. State, which lost seniors Derek Whittenburg, Sidney Lowe and Thurl Bailey to graduation.

"The good news is we've got a lot of depth," Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano said. "The bad news is that the level of our projected starters is not close to the five we had last year."

Center Cozell McQueen and forward-hero Lorenzo Charles are the strength of the returning team. Freshman center Terry Shackelford could provide relief inside, while 5-foot-6 freshman Anthony "Spud" Webb will dazzle Wolfpack fans with his ability to dunk. His first effort, in front of a recent scrimmage, however, was a miss.

Webb and sophomore Ernie Myers are strong candidates to inherit the guard spots held by Lowe and Whittenburg.

North Carolina, meanwhile, returns junior Michael Jordan and senior Sam Perkins from last year's 28-8 squad that lost to Georgia in the East regional finals. The duo, who helped the Tar Heels beat Georgetown for the NCAA crown two years ago, refined their skills as the U.S. team won the Pan American Games last summer.

"Sam has been sensational in practice. He's way ahead of the other big men," said Tar Heel coach Dean Smith. "Michael continues to get better. His ball handling and passing are improving."

In addition, North Carolina got a jump on the NCAA field when it opened practice Oct. 3 before playing an exhibition tour in Greece.

Smith, whose supporting cast includes 7-footers Brad Daugherty and Warren Martin plus senior forward Matt Doherty, also had one of his best recruiting years, bringing big men Joe Wolf and Dave Popson in along with speedy guard Kenny Smith.

Then there is Louisville, trying to replace Rodney and Scooter McCray from the 32-4 team that lost to finalist Houston.

"We've lost some really quality front line players," coach Denny Crum said. "I wish I could say we have players good enough to take their place."

Within the Atlantic Coast Conference, Maryland is the biggest challenger for supremacy with four seniors coming back from the team that reached the second round of the NCAA tournament before losing to Houston. Freshman forward Keith Gatlin and classmate guard Terry Long are expected to aid Lefty Driesell's shot at post-season competition.

Memphis State promises to battle Louisville in the Metro Conference, with 6-10 Keith Lee and three other starters coming back.

Tennessee-Chattanooga finished 15th in the Associated Press poll and is expected to claim another Southern Conference title. Coach Murray Arnold is not betting on it, however.

"I think the Southern Conference has gotten stronger every year and this season is going to be the strongest," he said. "I don't think we have been or will be a dominant team in this league. We have just been fortunate to win some close games."

Virginia Commonwealth, which lost on a last-second basket in the East regional, is the favorite to repeat as Sun Belt champions. Six lettermen are gone from the 24-7 team of last season, but among the returning player are co-player of the year Calvin Duncan, center Mike Schlegel, forward Michael Brown and point guard Rolando Lamb.

Morehead State finished second in the Ohio Valley regular season and captured the conference tournament. Four starters are back to help the Eagles climb to the top. Lamar is a top choice in the Southland Conference.

Ussery Wins Final Contest

Sandra Ussery of Rt. 2, Box 166, Walstonburg, is the winner of the Daily Reflector's final football contest for the 1983 season.

Ussery correctly picked the winners in 26 of the 32 games listed in last week's contest pages.

Second place was a tie between Jim R. Bullock, Rt. 1, Box 116, Fountain, and Dennis E. Warren of Rt. 2, Box 281, Robertsonville. Both correctly picked the winners in 25 games and both had 83 points as their point guess tie-breaker. The actual high total scored in one of the contest games was 82 points.

Twelve other entrants also correctly picked 25 games correctly, but were further off in their point total guesses.

The Daily Reflector congratulates the winners of the contest this year and thanks all entrants for their participation.

Kinston, Fike Seen As Big East Leaders

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
WILSON — Kinston's boys basketball team and Fike's girls have been picked to win the Big East titles this year in a poll of the league's coaches. The Vikings of Kinston gathered five first place votes and a total of 46 points in the voting by the coaches, just inching out Fike, which got the other three first place votes and a total of 45 points. Coaches were not allowed to vote for their own teams and points were awarded for the order of the vote on a 7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis. In the boys' race, Northern Nash was picked to finish third with 35 points, while Beddingfield was chosen for fourth with 29. Northeastern led off the bottom four teams with 27, followed by Rocky Mount with 26, Hunt with 13 and Rose with 11. Fike's girls collected all but the Golden Demon vote for first place with seven and a total of 49 points. Beddingfield got the nod for second place with 37 points and one first place vote. Picked to finish third was Kinston with 35 points, followed by Northern Nash with 27. The second four included Hunt with 24, Rose with 22, Rocky Mount with 17 and Northeastern with 13. Kinston's Paul Jones returns two starters from last year's team, 6-9 junior center Charles Shackelford and 5-9 senior guard Travis Freeman. Two other lettermen join them, Rodney Davis, a 6-3 forward who started late in the season and Cedric Kirkpatrick, a 6-0 forward, who started early in the season. Those four will start along with 6-4 guard Paul Jones, the son of the head coach. Others likely to see action could be 6-2 forward Matthew Streeter and Ricky Carlisle, a 6-2 guard, both of whom were on the varsity roster last year. Newcomers most likely to play some are Raymond Wood, a 6-5 transfer from South Lenoir who did not play last year, and Darris Harris, a 6-6 player off the junior varsity.

"I think we'll have a good club," Jones said. "But I think our league is strong again. The key for us is how Shackelford plays. He was our leader last year and if he continues to do the job and our guards can get the ball to him, I think we'll be all right. It's going to take us a little time to see what we can do though."

Fike's Harvey Reid has three starters back from last year. Michael Hilliard a 6-1 senior forward, Andre Virgil, a 6-2 senior forward, and Brian Harris, a 5-10 guard. Two other lettermen return in John McNeil, a 6-1 sophomore forward, and Tim Lucas a 5-5 guard.

Reid said Hilliard, Virgil, Harris and McNeil are the likely starters, along with 6-0 guard forward John T. Smith, up from the junior varsity.

While the Golden Demons don't have a great deal of height — 6-3 Charlie Howard is the tallest — Reid is unperturbed. "We've always been short," he said. "I think we'll hold our own in the league — which is going to be very strong this year — unless we get dominated on the boards. That's going to be our biggest problems."

Northern Nash's Bobby Dunn has only one starter back, but he's one of the league's taller players. 6-8 center/forward Mark Richardson. Joining him will be three other lettermen back from last year, 6-1 Jarrard Moody at the point, 6-5 David Brady at the forward, and 6-4 George Leonard at the other forward.

The likely fifth man will be James Batts, a 5-11 guard, who was the leading scorer on last year's junior varsity team.

With the height of his starting five, Dunn expects to have one of the tallest teams in the league. "We've got height on the bench too," he said. "We've got a couple of tall sophomores, but you know how sophomores can be."

"I'm hoping that we can be competitive with everyone, and we hope to have a winning season. Our goal has always been to win the state title, but so far we haven't done that."

For the Knights to have a chance at that goal, Dunn feels Richardson must come into his own and play as good as he can. "The guards are going to have to pass well enough to get the ball to him. We're still working on intestinal fortitude too."

Lynn Green of Beddingfield has two starters back from last year's team. They are 5-11 guard Eric Batts and 6-3 forward Marcus Parker. Three other lettermen join them, including two who saw some starting action during the year. They are Darren Bynum, a 5-11 guard and Andre Pegues, a 6-3 forward. The third letterman is 6-6 center Anthony Thompson.

"How we'll do depends on how our big man comes around. If he can pick up the scoring and play defense we'll be competitive. He was timid and shy last year, and he has to be aggressive."

Green also looks for a very tight conference race, saying he expected no one team to dominate.

Northeastern's Carl Harris feels that his team can finish in the top four rather than the bottom four and will be in the battle for the lead.

Three full-time and one part-time starter return for the Eagles. They are 6-6 center Clyde Nixon and 6-4 forward Joe Jenkins, along with Michael Barcliff, a 6-1 guard. The other part-timer was Prute McCafferty, a 6-0 guard.

Two other lettermen are back, 6-2 forward Anthony Bell and 6-2 Claude Nixon, a cousin of Clyde.

"I definitely feel that we'll do better than fifth place," Harris said. "And we could finish second or third with a few breaks. This is the strongest team I've had at Elizabeth City."

The conference is strong and competitive, and I don't see any one team dominating. To win, we'll have to be strong at home and competitive on the road. I really look for four or five teams to battle for the title."

Gerald Costen takes over as the new basketball coach at Rocky Mount, replacing Reggie Henderson, who retired from the coaching ranks. Costen served as assistant coach and JV coach for several years and thus is familiar with the players on the Gryphon squad.

Two starters return for Rocky Mount, 5-10 guard Calvin Fitz and 6-4 center

Ernie Griffin. Joining them will be Darrell Powell, a 6-3 guard who started early in the season last year before being dismissed by Henderson for disciplinary problems.

Three other lettermen return, and Anthony Dupree, a 6-3 forward and 6-2 guard Herbert Boddie are the most likely to move into the starting lineup. "They are quick, good leapers," Costen said. "We should have pretty good depth, and I look for us to be two-deep at every position."

Costen said he felt that the Gryphons will do well this year. "But I'll have to wait to see how they react to me in a pressure situation. We're not as tall as we used to be, so that might be a problem, too."

One might pity Hunt's James Peppers, who is still looking for a familiar face. The Hunt Warriors lost the first eight players on the team from last year and have no starters and no lettermen returning.

Hunt, too, is still involved in the football playoffs, and Peppers has seven potential players on that squad — add thus not out for practice.

Likely starters — at this point — are 6-4 center Kenneth Cox, 6-3 forward Chris Cox, 6-0 forward James Coley, 5-11 guard Jay Lassiter and 5-9 guard Thomas Best. Kenneth Cox and Best are the only ones who were on the varsity roster last year.

"We're going to be a very young team," Peppers said. "I really think it's going to be a rough year for us. We know that."

Rose High School's prospects will be covered later in a separate article.

10-14 Soccer Winners

Farmville Middle School won the 10-14 year old division in the Pitt Community Schools junior soccer tournament held recently. Members of the team are: (kneeling, L-R) DeWayne Banta, Todd Puryear, Sean Smith, Matthew Lanier, Stacey McDaniel and Harold Barrett; (standing) coach Tono Hardesty, Ricky Edwards, James Wilson, Monty King, Randy Whitfield and Eddie Meeks.

Heels Upset: No Bid

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina head soccer coach Anson Dorrance says he figured the Tar Heels had an NCAA playoff bid sealed up after upsetting No. 1 ranked Duke on Sunday.

But Dorrance and his players found out otherwise

Monday after having been bypassed.

"Initially, my reaction was shock," Dorrance said. "We thought it was a foregone conclusion that we were in."

"We felt if we played Duke close, or if we tied them, we'd go," Dorrance said in a telephone interview from his office. "When we beat Duke we knew we were going, it was just where.

"A kind of irony to the whole situation is that they had a gentleman from the (regional) committee watching the game," he said. "If it didn't matter whether we beat Duke or not, why was he here?"

"But they figured out a way (to keep us out). I congratulate them," he said. "Right now, we're wondering what we have to do to get a bid. It appears we have to go undefeated."

The Tar Heels' 16-3-2 record is better than one of the four teams — North Carolina State — to be selected for the NCAA tournament from the South Region. Duke, 17-1-2, and Alabama A&M, 15-1-1, got the regional bids while N.C. State, 13-5-1, and Clemson, 16-2-2, received the at-large bids.

A total of 23 teams from eight regions are picked for the NCAA tournament. Each region gets two automatic bids, leaving seven at-large bids. No more than two at-large bids can go to any one region.

Dorrance said he filed an appeal, which was turned down by the NCAA.

"We think the committee made a mistake," Dorrance said. "If you look at the criteria for selection in the NCAA guide it doesn't make sense."

Dorrance said according to the NCAA guide the criteria is a team's won-loss record, strength of schedule and eligibility of the athletes.

The selection committee compared the schedules of the two teams and North Carolina's was tougher, Dorrance said. But N.C. State beat North Carolina 2-1 earlier this year, and he said that loss influenced the decision.

North Carolina also lost to Clemson and Virginia, but beat North Carolina Greensboro, ranked No. 1 among Division III teams.

"Our concern is what gives," Dorrance said. "That's covered by the criteria for selection, is the committee decided to go with head-to-head competition."

"The irony is that N.C. State should go — and so should we," Dorrance said. "But our region is so strong that the fifth best team in our region may be better than the No. 2 team in another region."

Duke Is Top Seed

DURHAM (AP) — The Duke University soccer team has been seeded first in the South Region and will host North Carolina State Wednesday in the first round of the NCAA soccer tournament.

Duke, 17-1-2, has been in the NCAA tournament three previous years, last year losing to Indiana in eight overtimes in the final game.

The Wolfpack, 13-5-1, is making its second appearance in the national tournament. Last year they lost to Clemson in the opening round.

The winner of the Duke-N.C. Carolina St. game will face the winner of Wednesday night's Clemson-Alabama A&M game for the South Region championship this weekend.

The Wolfpack lost 1-0 to Duke in their regular season meeting.

To The Sports Editor:

October 27, 1982, Sports Editor Joe Tiede of the Raleigh News & Observer wrote a column with the headline "ECU in football limbo," which indicated that ECU should be in Division 2 and return to the Southern Conference.

This column burned me up. Last week, I wrote Joe for an up-date on his opinion in view of ECU's performance this year. His reply:

"I haven't changed my mind about the ECU football situation because the scheduling difficulties still remain. I never questioned the ability of the ECU team and players, only the problems imposed by independent status. If the present senior-dominated team can't get into a bowl, what are the chances on an annual basis? A lot of teams not as good as the Pirates will go to bowls, but that's the way it is in college football. You can't force teams to play you or bowls to invite you."

I thought your readers would be interested in this. Did he change his tune any? I love being a small part of the fight to elevate ECU. When you're on top the only way to go is down but when you are struggling every step up the ladder is a great accomplishment. Go Pirates! Join the Pirate Club!

New England Surging In AFC East

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The way the season started, the New England Patriots were more likely to pick up disability checks than playoff checks.

Defensive end Ken Sims broke his leg in the final pre-season game. Promising defensive end George Crump (a former East Carolina player) hurt his knee and hasn't played all season. Veteran linebacker Steve Nelson has been sidelined since breaking his thumb in the fourth game.

And the Patriots won just two of their first six starts. But with a young defense playing like a cohesive unit of veterans and a balanced offense spearheaded by quarterback Steve Grogan and the National Football League's top running attack, New England is 6-5 and in the thick of the playoff race. (New England's leading rusher is former ECU standout Anthony Collins.)

"Everything's up for grabs," Patriots' Coach Ron Meyer said Monday. "We've got ourselves in a position to make a solid run at it, which is something we desperately want to do." The Patriots have won four of their last five games and are in excellent shape to keep rolling. They are 4-1 at home where they face Cleveland Sunday and New Orleans two weeks after that. In between, they visit the New York Jets, who are 4-7. "We're definitely talking playoffs," Meyer said. "We've won four of our last five games, but I'd like to keep an even temperament because it's so fleeting."

New England is 6-5 and tied with Baltimore for third place in the American Football Conference East. Miami and Buffalo share the top spot at 7-4.

There are many reasons for the Patriots' revival. The defense, a patchwork assortment of youngsters, is improving. The offense has kept the pressure off the defense by controlling the ball.

New England has played all 11 games without cornerback Mike Haynes, a free agent who signed with the Los Angeles Raiders, its first 10 games without Sims, the top pick in last year's NFL draft, and the last seven without Nelson.

"As I said in training camp," Meyer said, "I felt our defense would be a dominant factor in the league ... The thing that we didn't anticipate obviously was the non-presence of Michael Haynes. We didn't anticipate the horrendous injuries to Crump, Sims and Nelson."

"We struggled early because all of a sudden the guts of your defensive team were taken away from you."

But in three of their last four games, the Patriots beat Buffalo 31-0 and 21-7 and Miami 17-6 Sunday. They held the ball at least 34 minutes and allowed fewer than 300 yards in each of those victories.

"We're maturing. Our linebackers and secondary have really come of age, particularly against the run," said Meyer.

In five of the victories, the Patriots defense, which has three rookies and three second-year players as starters, has yielded 93 or fewer rushing yards. Miami gained just 81. That forced Dan Marino, who began Sunday's game as the NFL's leading passer, to throw.

"It's a combination of your entire team playing good, solid football and being self-complementary. Your offense goes out there and scores, forcing their offense to get a certain amount of points," Meyer said. "If you can force a team to go upstairs to beat you, you'll latch on to a few of their passes."

Grogan scored on a 1-yard run on New England's first possession, the Patriots stopped runners Andra Franklin and Tony Nathan, and Marino completed just 14 of 37 passes for 141 yards, one interception and no touchdowns.

"I don't think there's probably any more respected rival than the Miami Dolphins because of their past accomplishments," said Meyer. "When you have a football team that beats them and beats them very soundly, it's very gratifying."

"We probably have as productive an offense as you'll see in the league today," he added. "I've always felt good about this team. Perhaps you feel better as you progress and are rewarded more with victories."

Catholic Bowl In Liberty

BOSTON (AP) — Boston College and Notre Dame, the country's only two Roman Catholic schools still playing football at the Division I-A level, are headed for the Liberty Bowl Dec. 29 in Memphis, Tenn.

Although NCAA rules prohibit formal invitations and acceptances until Saturday, sources in Boston, South Bend, Ind., and Memphis said Monday the stage is set for a "Catholic Super Bowl" marking the Liberty's 25th anniversary.

"The only two Catholic schools still playing in Division I-A, maybe we should have a bingo game at halftime," quipped Reid Oslin, the BC sports information director.

Bill Flynn, BC's 1938 football captain who has built the program into a multi-million dollar money maker in 26 years as athletic director, said the Liberty Bowl "is interested in us and hopefully will extend a bid next Saturday."

Without confirming that the game with Notre Dame is set, Flynn said he and others at BC were "thrilled and excited."

"I think it's the best matchup of all," Flynn said. "I was trying to talk the Fiesta Bowl into that one before last week, but of course that was before we both lost."

BC, 7-2, had a Fiesta bid all wrapped up until it was upset by Syracuse 21-10 last Saturday. Notre Dame dropped to 6-4 in a 34-30 loss to Penn State. BC has games left with traditional rival Holy Cross and Alabama. Notre Dame ends its regular season Saturday against Air Force.

John Heisler, Notre Dame assistant sports information director, said that the university's Faculty Board in Control of Athletics voted Sunday night "to leave open the door for acceptance of a bowl bid next weekend."

Heisler said that Notre Dame never has gone to a bowl without an 8-3 or better record. However, he said, the thinking at the university is that a postseason game can be used "as a springboard for next season."

"I'm thinking of converting, it sounds so good to me," BC Coach Jack Bicknell said. "Notre Dame — let's face it — it's such a magical name. You always try to schedule them, but they're always booked through 19-whatever."

"The only thing I can say is that we have considered a number of outstanding football teams for our 25th game," said Tim Treadwell, chairman of the Liberty Bowl's selection committee. "The only other thing I would say is that we are happy with the developments that have transpired."

Boston College and Notre Dame have met only once before in football. In a 1975 season opener, the Irish beat the Eagles 17-3 before more than 60,000 fans at Sullivan Stadium in nearby Foxboro.

The Liberty Bowl game will give BC another big pay day, guaranteeing each team $620,000. BC also is collecting $990,000 for three ABC regional telecasts and $600,000 from CBS for national television of the Alabama game this season.

Glimpse Into The Daily Life Of Italian Terrorist

By JUAN-CARLOS GUMUCIO
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — A repentant terrorist has shattered the image of the Red Brigades as cold-blooded professionals in a book that portrays the feared leftist gang as often bungling and plagued by mishaps.

Patrizio Peci describes his life-on-the-run as a string of bombs that would not explode, shots fired accidentally in secret hideouts and cars trapped in traffic jams in the middle of an escape.

"People imagine the life of a 'brigatista' (Red Brigades guerrilla) is all violence, mystery and adventure," writes Peci in his book "Io, L'Inferno" ("I the Inferno"), the first public glimpse into the daily life of an Italian terrorist.

"Those moments are very few. The rest is nothing but problems because the 'cause' hardly distracts you or helps you make peace with your girlfriend... that is if you manage to have one," he says in the book co-authored by historian Bruno Giordano Guerri. It's now No. 3 on the national best-seller list.

The Red Brigades are believed to have participated in nearly 100 attacks between 1974 and 1980, according to government statistics. Fifty-five people died. Since then they have been blamed for dozens of other attacks, although the numbers have declined.

Its most spectacular blows were the 1978 kidnapping and murder of five-time Premier Aldo Moro and the abduction of U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier in 1981. Dozier was rescued by police after 42 days in captivity.

Peci, 32, was "sentenced" to death by the Red Brigades for helping police arrest scores of terrorists after his defection in 1980. He served more than two years in a high-security prison, was paroled and now lives in police custody.

His younger brother, Roberto, was kidnapped and shot to death in 1981 by the Red Brigades in a futile attempt to stop Peci from talking.

"Even the most beautiful moments of underground life end up being ridiculous and grotesque," says Peci, who was found guilty by Italian courts of several terrorists attacks that killed seven people and wounded 17. Under a controversial law designed to encourage terrorist defections, he was given a reduced sentence.

Peci, who lived in the central coastal village of San Benedetto until he joined the Red Brigades in the mid-1970s, says his first armed action was a knee-capping — a terrorist tactic aimed at wounding Red Brigades targets in the legs.

"We waited for hours in a garage. When my target, a high-level Fiat employee, was finally few steps away from me, I pulled my pistol aimed, and... Click. No shot. I had simply forgotten to load it."

Unfortunately, for the intended victim, Peci had another pistol which did function.

"When people now talk about the military training of the Red Brigades they make me laugh. It's all kids' stuff," he says.

Peci says bad luck also dogged the group. He tells a story of when he and a fellow terrorist agreed to meet with a third party at the doorstep of a Turin church to plan an attack. As they waited for the third man, a young couple holding hands approached them.

"I thought they were undercover cops and we began to sweat as we went to our weapons inside our pockets. Instead, the young man said: 'We are in trouble and have to get married now but we don't have witnesses. You gotta help us...'"

Peci said he and his accomplice couldn't resist and agreed to sign as witnesses. "We even toasted them after the wedding," Peci writes.

Peci says disguises were never his strong point and recalls he once had to rush out of a crowded bar after his false mustache plunged into his cappuccino.

Another problem divided the membership.

The Red Brigades leaders, concerned about information leaks, banned love affairs outside the gang. Peci says that policy resulted in unwanted pregnancies and a major headache for the leaders who had to approve abortion costs in monthly expense accounts.

Then the doctor who performed abortions for Red Brigades terrorists in Turin was shot by "those fools of Front Line," another ultra-left gang that had declared war against illegal abortions, Peci says.

Despite large ransom payments from kidnappings, money was always a problem for most of the Red Brigades, Peci says.

He recalls receiving between 4,000 or 5,000 lire a day (about three dollars), which forced him "to live on salads and cold cuts."

Since Dozier's rescue, the government has rounded up dozens of the Brigades and many of its jailed leaders admitted early this year that armed struggle "had short-circuited."

"We had been defeated, politically and militarily," says Peci explaining his defection.

"You feel the grief and the remorse for the death you have spread and there is no defection or repentance that can make you forget it. It's something for the rest of your life... It is like you have been knee-capped in the conscience."

Soviet Delegation Shortened Arms Negotiations

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Soviet delegation left the medium-range nuclear arms talks after 35 minutes today, the shortest session during nearly two years of negotiations, but U.S. officials said the two sides will meet Thursday.

The brief meeting came one day after the arrival in Britain of the first of 572 new U.S.-built cruise and Pershing 2 missiles scheduled for deployment in Western Europe if the negotiations fail to produce an accord.

Chief Soviet negotiator Yuri A. Kvitsinsky refused to comment to reporters as he left the U.S. delegation building where the session took place, but 20 minutes later the office of U.S. negotiator Paul H. Nitze announced that the talks would continue Thursday.

Negotiating sessions usually have lasted from one to two hours since they began in November 1981, but the brief stay of the Soviets today was seen as potentially significant since they have threatened repeatedly to leave the talks when the U.S. begins deploying new missiles.

Soviet mission spokesman Vladimir Evdokuchine said a Soviet delegation member had told him that continuation of the talks depended on what was said at today's session. He did not elaborate.

Kvitsinsky, on arriving at the mission, had to push his way through a crowd of about 30 anti-missile demonstrators outside the U.S. delegation headquarters. The demonstrators, mostly children, put small paper doves on the windshields of cars parked near the building.

The United States, adhering to a 1979 NATO plan of negotiating against a deployment deadline, Monday flew the first of its cruise missiles to Britain, part of the contingent of 572 nuclear-tipped rockets scheduled to be sent to five West European allies.

The Soviet Union, which already has 243 triple-warhead SS-20s aimed at Western Europe, has threatened in recent weeks to walk out of the medium-range talks if deployment of 108 Pershing 2 and 464 cruise missiles begins as planned.

The Soviet mission here has refused to comment on the arrival of the first cruise missiles.

A Reagan administration official said Monday in Washington that the United States was planning to present a new proposal cutting to 420 the number of warheads allowed each side. That matches the number of warheads left if the United States accepted Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov's latest offer to reduce the Soviet triple-warhead SS-20s to 140.

Negotiating rounds usually last two months, but Nitze has said publicly he would like to extend this round of talks into December.

Today's brief meeting was the 109th plenary session since the talks began in November 1981. This round of talks began Sept. 6, but no recess date has been set by either side.

Parallel U.S.-Soviet Strategic Arms Reduction Talks on long-range strategic, submarine-launched and air-launched cruise missiles, and bombers were being held today at the Soviet mission.

Despite the counter-offers, both sides in the medium-range talks are locked head-on in a dispute over 162 British and French missiles that appears to be the major stumbling block. The U.S. has steadfastly refused to accept Soviet demands that they be counted in the talks.

By Soviet reasoning, the French and British forces form part of the possible nuclear response from the West, and should be counted. The Soviets also fear those forces could receive multiple warheads, adding to the total of warheads aimed East.

Both U.S. and Soviet officials have refused to make substantive comment on the negotiations while here.

The new U.S. proposal assumes that no more than 420 medium-range warheads would be based in Europe and Asia by the Soviets. The United States would be held to an equal limit, but actually would install less than 420 warheads, keeping some back to match the Asian missiles.

The precise U.S. deployment total was not divulged as administration officials stressed President Reagan was trying to be flexible and that even lower ceilings would be acceptable provided they were equal.

The new offer fleshes out a proposal Reagan made at the United Nations in late September and responds to Andropov's call last month for no more than 140 intermediate-range missiles on each side.

Since Soviet SS-20 missiles have three warheads each they could observe the 420-warhead limit with 140 missiles. Currently, 243 are deployed on the European side of the Ural mountains and 117 in Asia.

The United States would deploy a mix of cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe, but stop short of the 420 total unless the Soviets scrapped all their Asian missiles.

The deployment schedule approved by NATO calls for installation of 464 cruise missiles in Britain, Italy, West Germany, Belgium and the Netherlands, and 108 ballistic Pershings in West Germany through 1988.

Cousin Insists Killing Of Jesse James Was A Hoax

By PAULA LITTRICK
LOVINGTON, N.M. (UPI) — A woman claiming to be a third cousin to gunslinger Jesse James says his supposed 1882 killing was a hoax. Ola Everhard maintains James actually died of natural causes in 1951 at the age of 103.

She also says Jesse acted at one time as a deputy U.S. marshal and as a Texas Ranger.

She says she got the story straight from James himself, who told her and her husband about his life while staying with them several times during the late 1940s when they lived in Austin.

Mrs. Everhard says she does not care if others believe her. But those who do include a New Mexico historian who has been checking her story.

A small group of relatives and believers gathered recently in Granbury Cemetery, about 70 miles southwest of Fort Worth, to dedicate a granite stone on the grave of a man Mrs. Everhard calls Uncle Jesse.

The stone reads: "CSA ... Jesse Woodson James ... Sept. 5, 1847 — Aug. 15, 1951 ... Supposedly killed in 1882."

Mrs. Everhard, surrounded in her home with pictures and letters she uses as documentation, said it was Charlie Bigelow, an outlaw who resembled Jesse James, who was killed in the hoax of the infamous bank robber's death.

It's Bigelow's body that is buried in the Jesse James' grave in Missouri, she said.

She said James made secret campaign contributions of $35,000 to Missouri Gov. Thomas Crittenden, who promised the public he would rid the region of outlaw gangs.

Mrs. Everhard said James met with Crittenden the night before he was supposedly shot in a house at St. Joseph, Mo., on April 3, 1882, by Robert Ford, a member of his own gang.

Bigelow was killed, said to be James and buried shortly later. No death certificate ever was issued, Mrs. Everhard said.

Ford was said to have collected a $10,000 reward and granted an immediate pardon by Crittenden. But Mrs. Everhard said Crittenden got most of the reward money.

"He helped Crittenden and Crittenden helped him. Get the picture?"

She said James attended the funeral, adopting the name of Frank Dalton, and helped carry Bigelow's casket to the grave.

James' friends then helped him leave the country and live in South America for awhile until the story of his death had spread across the United States and been accepted.

Jesse's supposedly demise, she said, allowed him to assume a variety of aliases and continue to roam the Southwest. He served as a U.S. deputy marshal in Indian Territory, which later became Oklahoma, and also was a Texas Ranger, Mrs. Everhard said.

"Uncle Jesse changed his name as often as he changed his shirt," she said.

Historian William A. Tunstall of Roswell, N.M., a retired Fort Worth principal, said he was skeptical the first time he talked to Mrs. Everhard. But she has convinced him during the last four years.

"I have yet to find her in error on anything she had from Jesse," he said. "I have nothing to gain by chasing rainbows. I was so enthralled with this setup that I went hook, line and sinker. She's 100 percent."

Mrs. Everhard said her great-grandmother, Sarah Underwood, was Jesse's aunt — the sister of his mother, the former Zeralda Dalton.

"Uncle Jesse used to tell me he couldn't have done it later because nowadays people are too apt to talk," Mrs.

Everhard said of the hoax. "Those who knew the truth then kept their mouths shut."

She said James lived honestly after the hoax death, announcing his identity in Lawton, Okla., on May 19, 1948, when he was 100 years old.

She said he tried to get a Missouri judge to reinstate his name in 1950, but the judge told James there was no need for that if he had not legally changed his name.

Tunstall said, "We're just about to get to that point where we've got documented evidence" that Jesse James lived till 1951. "When we get every angle completed we'll get it copyrighted and then take other steps."

He said he hoped to convince several southwestern states to establish a study commission to clarify the history of Jesse James and other outlaws who roamed the region.

But Mrs. Everhard hasn't too much confidence that her story will be accepted by historians.

She said James had not wanted to become an outlaw. Jesse and his brother, Frank, joined the Confederate guerrilla forces of William C. Quantrill during the Civil War, she said. After the war they were blacklisted in Missouri for fighting with the Confederates and they turned outlaws because they had no home.

When questioned about his reputation as a gunslinger and killer, she responded with a smile, "Uncle Jesse was in the bankin' business."

Mrs. Everhard said Jesse

James had a wife and two children, all of whom he outlived. His family's name changed when his name changed. The family was out of town when James was said to be shot and killed.

James never lived in the house where he is claimed to have been killed, but rented the place so he could use a barn in the back for his horses, Mrs. Everhard said.

James allowed Bigelow, his wife and two children to live in the house. Mrs. Everhard said, adding James resented Bigelow because the James gang sometimes was blamed for Bigelow's crimes. Bigelow also had fought under Quantrill.

Mrs. Everhard refused to answer questions about Bigelow's family.

EL Salvador Promises Investigate U.S. Charges

By ISAAC A. LEVI
Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Defense Ministry says it will investigate U.S. charges that a man accused of murdering an American military adviser was tortured by Salvadoran military officers and forced to give a false confession.

The man, Pedro Daniel Alvarado, was arrested Aug. 22 and later told reporters he confessed to murdering Navy Lt. Cmdr. Albert Schaufelberger III, deputy commander of the U.S. military advisers assigned to El Salvador.

Schaufelberger was shot three times in the head May 25 as he waited in his car at a university campus for a Salvadoran girlfriend.

The U.S. Embassy says Alvarado was a member of the Popular Liberation Forces, one of five leftist rebel groups waging a four-year civil war to topple the U.S.-backed government. The group claimed responsibility for Schaufelberger's murder, but denied Alvarado was involved.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Donald Hamilton said Friday that Alvarado's confession was obtained by Salvadoran officials "under duress." He said a lie detector test administered by U.S. Naval investigators and other evidence has convinced American officials Alvarado is innocent.

NBC News reported last week that U.S. officials believe Alvarado confessed after five days of torture and that the police who arrested him were members of right-wing death squads.

Elsewhere in El Salvador, about 300 rebels armed with automatic weapons attacked a key town in a government reconstruction area for 12 hours, but caused little damage and withdrew Monday, military sources said.

A military spokesman in El Salvador said one soldier was wounded in the attack on San Lorenzo, 37 miles east of the capital. The spokesman, who asked anonymity for security reasons, said he had no reports on guerrilla casualties.

San Lorenzo is at the center of a U.S.-financed reconstruction project designed to attract refugees back to their homes and to rebuild the farm-based economy of the area. Under the plan, the government offers military protection and financial assistance.

Guerrillas have lessened the intensity of their attacks in the area, but continue to occasionally hit small targets included in the project.

In Guatemala, police shot and wounded two presumed guerrillas Monday after they killed a policeman and fled in a stolen car, officials said.

A bystander also was wounded in the shootout that took place in a southern Guatemala City suburb. Meanwhile, on the western side of town police found the bullet-riddled body of an unidentified man left there Sunday night.

Human rights groups say violence has increased in Guatemala since an Aug. 8 coup by Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores that overthrew President Efraim Rios Montt. As many as 100,000 have died in civil strife in the country since 1954. In Honduras, Nicaraguan Ambassador Edwin Zablah charged that two of his employees were held by secret police and subjected to "psychological pressures" over the weekend.

Zablah said he asked the Honduran government for "a clarification of the event." He said police had captured his driver Humberto Chavez, and bodyguard Rorigo Castillo.

Relations between Honduras and Nicaragua have been bad since the 1979 Nicaraguan revolution that put the leftist Sandinistas in power.

Honduras serves as a base for some 6,000 anti-Sandinista rebels, and Nicaragua charges that Honduras and other rightist governments in the region are planning to invade Nicaragua. Honduras claims the Sandinistas are promoting revolution in neighboring countries.

A leader of the Honduras-based rebel group told a news conference in Washington on Monday that military intervention by other Central American nations to oust the Sandinistas is "definitely an option."

Adolfo Calero, head of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, said that approach would involve his establishing a government on Nicaraguan territory and then asking for aid from "friendly countries."

Asks Duties On Chinese Exports

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt Monday urged the U.S. Department of Commerce to levy extra import duties on Chinese textile and apparel imports to offset subsidies which the Chinese government gives to their exporters.

In written testimony submitted to the department, Hunt said "our relations with China cannot be purchased at the price of domestic jobs and the destruction of the U.S. textile and apparel industries."

Hunt said extending special treatment to China would set a bad precedent, particularly since thousands of textile jobs have been lost in recent years due to imports.

AT&T Investors Look To Radical Transformation

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An investment that has stood for decades as a bastion of stability and generous income will be radically transformed with the breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. this winter.

The common stock of the existing telephone company will become stock of a new, smaller AT&T, and separate shares will be issued for each of seven new regional companies that will take over local telephone service.

All eight companies are expected to issue reports Wednesday on their finances and their dividend plans for 1984. Stock trading in the new companies is scheduled to begin Nov. 21 on a "when issued" basis — the trading of shares that have been announced but not yet issued.

Many Wall Street analysts believe the new structure will work in the companies' favor, and therefore benefit investors.

But no matter how successful any of the new companies becomes, experts generally agree that none will duplicate the characteristics that have helped make the old AT&T the most widely held stock in this country.

Along with its legions of customers and employees, American Telephone & Telegraph has a vast family of owners — more than 3.1 million at last count, or three times as many as any other company.

Large institutions like banks, insurance companies and pension funds hold only about a quarter of the shares. In the ranks of AT&T stockholders, those big funds are far outnumbered by individuals of comparatively modest means.

More than 500,000 people, in fact, own fewer than 10 AT&T shares, worth about $63 apiece at recent prices.

The company, under the supervision of a federal judge, has worked out a plan designed to make the transformation as easy as possible for investors big and small. Most will have some choice in the contents of the package of stocks they receive.

But as the time for divestiture nears, uncertainty is rampant, even among Wall Street professionals, over what it will ultimately mean for investors and how they can best respond to it.

"There is, unfortunately, no precedent for gauging the precise effect of breaking up the nation's largest company," said the firm of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis Inc. in one of the many special reports being turned out by investment analysts.

"The last time the government initiated such an event was with Standard Oil at the turn of the century. Unlike Standard Oil, AT&T is regulated at the federal, state and international level."

As the experts see it, AT&T shareholders can follow any of four basic strategies. One course that some have already taken is to sell the stock in the open market before the divestiture takes place, leaving someone else to cope with the complications.

But that approach can present new problems. If the stock is sold at a profit, the seller has a capital gain that is subject to tax on the 1983 return.

There will be brokerage commissions to pay as well. And the seller also forgoes a chance at the possible benefits of the breakup, which some students of the situation say could be considerable.

After selling, furthermore, the investor must seek out some other investment offering comparable stability and earnings growth. In the decade between 1973 and 1982, a volatile period for most stocks, AT&T never sold for less than $39 nor more than $66, while its dividend nearly doubled.

A second option is to hang onto the stock and accept the deal as AT&T has set it up. For each 10 shares in the old company, holders will wind up early next year with 10 shares of the new AT&T, plus one share in each of the seven regional companies.

Whenever that formula works out to fractions of shares in the regional companies, cash will be paid instead.

A third choice is available to the 77 percent of AT&T investors who own between 10 and 499 shares. They will be permitted early in 1984 to rearrange their holdings in the regional companies directly through AT&T, for a fee of 25 cents for each share bought or sold.

A fourth possibility is offered by Wall Street firms operating what are known as "Humpty Dumpty funds" — unit investment trusts that seek in various ways to put the new pieces of the telephone company back together into something resembling the old AT&T.

For a relatively small fee, investors may swap their old AT&T shares for units of these trusts, which will invest their assets in the stocks of the various new companies.

"The telephone trusts offer AT&T shareholders a convenient way to maintain their proportionate holdings in AT&T," along with the new regional companies, says Standard & Poor's Corp. in its investment advisory publication "The Outlook."

Whatever these trusts can accomplish, however, none can recreate the old AT&T. The various new companies will be operating in a new environment, under new rules.

After the dust of divestiture settles, says Mark Luftig, an analyst at the firm of Salomon Brothers Inc., "We're going to be looking at eight different companies."

Booger Scales: 35 to 1

35 years of loyalty —
to one company, to each customer.

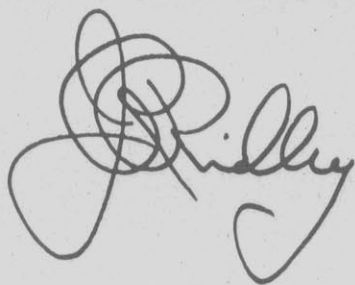

W.M. "Booger" Scales, Jr., Greenville native and general agent for Integon Life Insurance Corporation, celebrates 35 years of service with Integon today.

Since joining Integon (then Security Life and Trust Co.) in 1948, Booger has never sold another company's product. He feels gambling with other companies' products may mean gambling with his client's future. This loyalty has made Booger Integon's all-time top-producing agent.

His loyalty doesn't stop at Integon's doors. In fact, his loyalty begins with his 3,000 policyholders. Each one is equally important to him, throughout the entire relationship of planning a future and seeing it successfully carried out.

Loyalty. Booger Scales and the Integon-Scales Agency is where it begins.

"I love and respect Booger as a person and business professional. I've never known a man of greater integrity."
