Federal Credit Extension Clears Senate

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today voted to renew the federal government's credit, giving the Reagan administration authority over the next three months to borrow another $225 for every woman, man and child in the United States.

Government credit ran out on Nov. 1, a day after the Senate rejected a higher debt limit as a protest against record federal deficits. By a 58-40 margin, the Senate agreed shortly after midnight to boost the old $1.389 trillion borrowing authority to $1.45 trillion — enough to last through about mid-February.

Unless the higher credit limit becomes law, the Reagan administration says, some government checks will start bouncing on about Dec. 1. But the fight isn't over yet because the House voted to give the administration the full $1.615 trillion authority it asked. Senate and House negotiators will have to work out a compromise between the two figures.

At the White House today, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the administration would work with the conference committee with an eye toward getting a debt-ceiling bill to cover the government's full fiscal year, which ends next Sept. 30.

Before approving the higher debt limit, the Senate used a technicality to avoid a straight yes-or-no vote on a proposal to raise taxes and cut spending by $78 billion to slash the record federal deficit over the next three years. On a 65-33 vote, the Senate refused to consider the package, which was put together by Sens. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., and Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., chairman and senior Democrat, respectively, on the Budget Committee.

That vote left considerable doubt that Congress will take any significant action until after the 1984 elections to reduce projected $200-billion-a-year deficits. But leaders of the House and Senate tried to keep the deficit-reduction drive alive.

The Senate planned to consider today a $28 billion, three-year package that includes $13 billion in tax increases and reductions in the growth of federal health programs.

The Senate Finance Committee planned to begin voting today on efforts by its chairman, Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., to write a $150-billion, three-year package of spending cuts and tax increases. This would include a 2 percent tax on most forms of energy, a surtax of either 2 percent or 5 percent on individuals with incomes of more than about $45,000 a year, and a limitation on the automatic annual tax cuts due to begin start taking effect in 1985.

—The House was preparing the rules for a debate Friday on several proposed anti-deficit packages. One, already approved by the Ways and Means Committee, would raise about $8 billion over three years, chiefly from high-income investors and the life-insurance industry. Other proposals, which together could total as much as $73 billion, would delay other scheduled tax reductions and close off several tax benefits now available to investors and corporations.

Hanging over all the suggestions for cutting the deficit was Congress' plan to adjourn Friday until Jan. 23. Leaders have indicated the adjournment might be delayed if there is evidence of progress in the fight against deficits.

But the Senate, in its first chance to approve a big deficit-reduction plan Wednesday night, showed no evidence that it considers the deficit serious enough to warrant big tax increases and additional spending cuts.

"It is time to put our votes where our mouths are," said Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., in endorsing the Domenici-Chiles plan. "I don't like the package but ... each of us concerned about the deficit is going to have to compromise."

Sen. Russell B. Long of Louisiana, senior Democrat on the tax-writing Finance Committee, said it makes no sense for Congress to stick its neck out for a tax increase when President Reagan has signaled repeatedly that any such effort would be vetoed.

"It doesn't accomplish much to be one of the dead bodies on the battlefield after the smoke has cleared," Long said, adding that he sees no need for a bill that would "tax everything from bedbugs to billygoats."

Dole and Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., criticized the Reagan administration for its adamant position against such deficit-reducing actions. Dole was asked how he can continue to say the administration might accept a plan. "It's intuition," he replied. "I just have the feeling they are going

Arafat Hangs On In Tripoli

Guerrilla Base Bombed By French Jets

By G.G. LaBELLE
Associated Press Writer

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP) — French jets attacked a Shiite Moslem guerrilla base in the Bekaa Valley today, a day after the Israelis bombed the same area to retaliate for suicide attacks on U.S., French and Israeli bases in Lebanon.

In the PLO war, guerrilla mutineers threatened to bomb Yasser Arafat's sanctuaries in Tripoli "down to the earth" unless he leaves.

But the besieged PLO chief said he would go only if asked by the city's elders. Beirut radio said Arafat ordered his fighters to cease fire, but he said he had "no choice" but to fight on.

The French Defense Ministry in Paris said Super

Etendard jets from the carrier Clemenceau hit "a military objective east of Baalbek" in the Bekaa Valley to "prevent new terrorist actions."

It said the planes attacked in the afternoon and returned to the Clemenceau with the "mission executed."

President Francois Mitterrand said on French television Wednesday night that the deaths of 58 French soldiers killed in a suicide attack on their Beirut barracks Oct. 23 "will not go unpunished."

Moments before the attack on the French Oct. 23, another suicide terrorist blew up a U.S. Marine command post in Beirut, killing 239 Americans.

On Nov. 4, yet another suicide terrorist blew up an Israeli command post in Tyre, killing 29 Israelis and 32 Lebanese prisoners.

The Israelis flew retaliatory raids against the Shiite bases in the Bekaa Wednesday, killing 43 guerrillas according to Lebanese police.

Ahmed Jibril, who led the assault Wednesday that drove Arafat's loyalists into Tripoli from their last stronghold in the Baddawi refugee camp, said, "All we want at the moment is for Arafat to leave."

He warned that if Arafat stays, "We shall level all places he frequents in the city down to the earth. We shall not attack but shall bombard him mercilessly."

"We've won the war and we have finished Arafat," Jibril said, urging the Palestine Liberation Organization chief to surrender and "receive the punishment he deserves for the mistakes and crimes he committed against the Palestinian people."

As Jibril spoke to reporters in Baddawi, Arafat told a news conference at his headquarters in the Zahrieh

Nitze And Russian In A 2-Hour Arms Parley

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S. arms negotiator Paul H. Nitze met for more than two hours with Soviet Ambassador Yuli A. Kvitsinsky today and afterwards said the talks on limiting medium-range nuclear missiles will resume next Wednesday.

"They are continuing," Nitze said on returning from the Soviet mission to U.S. delegation headquarters.

The meeting next week would come one day after West Germany's parliament concludes debates on accepting U.S. cruise and Pershing

2 missiles. West German arms experts have said the Soviets consider that the "cut off" date for the talks in Geneva.

The Soviets have repeatedly threatened to walk out of the talks when new U.S. missiles are deployed in Europe, but are apparently waiting for the debates in West Germany. The first cruise missiles arrived in Great Britain on Monday.

Today's session followed a 35-minute meeting Tuesday — the shortest plenary meeting in more than 100 negotiating sessions since the intermediate-range nuclear force talks began two years ago.

President Francois Mitterrand of France predicted Wednesday that the Soviets would walk out of talks in Geneva when the first Pershing 2s are deployed in West Germany next month.

He said, in a national television interview, he did not think "the rupture would last a long time" and promised that France would "use all of its means" to help the negotiations resume if they are broken off.

VIEWER'S GUIDES

I read in a magazine that local ABC affiliates would have copies of a free "Viewer's Guide" for "The Day After," the film to be shown Sunday night at 8 p.m. about the aftermath of nuclear attack. I would like to have one. Are they available? G.F.

WCTI-TV in New Bern does have a limited number of copies of the "Viewer's Guide," Promotions Manager Carolyn Stevens said, and will send them out upon request as long as they last. The guide, she said, is designed to help people who see the film process the film's impact and information. Posed in it are a series of questions for discussion in a schoolroom, community or home setting.

She said it is advised that the film be viewed with one's family, a group of family or close friends — not alone. It is a graphic depiction of the agony that could be experienced by ordinary people following a nuclear explosion.

To receive a copy of "Viewer's Guide," contact the station, 637-2111, immediately. Since numbers are limited, plan to share it with your friends and/or organizations, she suggested.

N.C. Award To Boyd Lee

ACCEPTANCE ... Boyd Lee, executive director of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, is shown giving his acceptance remarks following the presentation of the Society Fellow Award to him. Lee received the highest award of the N. C. Recreation and Park Society at the society's annual conference held in Charlotte on Tuesday night.

Boyd Lee, executive director of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, is the 1983 recipient of the Society Fellow Award, the highest annual award given by the North Carolina Recreation and Park Society.

The award was presented to Lee Tuesday night at a joint conference of the North and South Carolina Recreation societies held in Charlotte. This marked the first time that the societies of the two states have held a joint annual conference.

After enumerating Lee's achievements, Dr. Robert Sternloff commented: "The North Carolina Recreation and Park Society truly honors itself as it bestows on Hector Boyd Lee Jr., its highest award, the Fellow Award." Sternloff is a professor in the recreation and parks curriculum at N. C. State University.

Sternloff also presented Lee telegrams and letters of congratulations from Mayor Percy Cox, City Manager Gail Meeks and Sens. John East and Jesse Helms.

Qualifications for the Society Fellow Award are stringent, and include having at least 10 years of full-time experience in the field of recreation and parks; distinctive leadership of a pioneer type in recreation, and meritorious service through work in allied fields.

In accepting the award, Lee gave credit to his departmental staff and to professionals to whom he attributed whatever success he has been able to achieve in the recreation and parks field.

Top Hair Colorist Sees Renewed Interest Turning Again To Blonde

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — Vern Silberman first sought a career as a coloratura. But circumstances changed and she became a colorist with a major hair products company.

Today, at 65 and approaching retirement, she probably ranks as the nation's No. 1 authority on hair coloring techniques and trends.

"I don't see any revolution coming in new methods of coloring," she said. "I do see new focus on conditioning and maintenance."

"And blondes are having a resurgence. Well, they never went away, but tastes in color as in fashion change."

"Blond is beautiful, if it is the right shade for a woman."

"Could you imagine Grace Kelly as a brunette?"

"Notice the appeal of a flaxen-haired child," she said. "You simply want to reach out and touch."

Mrs. Silberman said that right now is a quiet period in style leadership.

"Someday a star will come along who again will set the climate. Maybe our last was Marilyn Monroe, and a lot of young people don't even remember her."

Miss Monroe died in 1962.

"Jacqueline Kennedy (brunette) had the leadership. Do you remember how she had us all wearing bouffant hairdos and pillbox hats?"

"I thought when Ted (Sen. Edward M.) Kenney seemed a likely candidate for the presidency. 'Oh, good. We'll have that lovely Joan, the all-American blonde, to establish an image...'"

"Mrs. Ronald Reagan has set a pace to a degree. But not as much as we all expected."

"And Lady Di (Princess of Wales) has her following."

"One area in which I do see tremendous growth is in men's coloring," she said.

The next question naturally was, "Does he or doesn't he?" paraphrasing a famous advertising slogan of her company, Clairol, Inc., in reference to President Reagan's head of lush brown hair without a streak of gray showing.

"I've never seen him except on television," she said, "but I'd be very suspicious if there isn't some gray there. If I met him, I could tell in a minute."

"Yet I've known 80-year-olds without a single strand of gray."

"Men are going in for coloring for a variety of reasons. A job situation, being passed up for a promotion, and then there are those dating much younger women and consider gray hair as aging."

"I remember when a man would go to almost any length to keep secret his hair coloring. Now the men are just as candid as the women. They cross all employment areas — the theater, the modeling world, lawyers, teachers, salesmen."

Mrs. Silberman a slim, handsome and energetic woman with silvery gray hair (touched with a rinse), was born in Wyoming, Pa. In planning a musical career, she needed parttime work so she taught at a chain of beauty salons in Wilkes-Barre and Scranton.

Moving to New York for further study of voice and languages, she joined Clairol, again teaching.

"The company was just getting into coloring," she said, "and gradually I realized I didn't have God's greatest gift (voice)... that I might never sing Lucia at the Met. I was 27, and for me it was either the Metropolitan or nothing."

"As the company grew, I grew with it. We used to have 200 or 300 volunteers in our salon for testing our products. Now we have between 2,500 and 3,000. I call them our models. One woman has been with me 34 years."

Through her 35 years, Mrs. Silberman has guided colorings of Ginger Rogers, Judy Holliday, Eva Gabor, Jean Nidetch, Brenda Vaccaro and Ann Landers.

Her company, largest in coloring products in the States, now is a part of the Bristol-Myers conglomerate.

She will retire as vice president in charge of Clairol's product performance research center.

More time will be spent with her husband, Jay, at the family's home in Roslyn, N.Y., and their two children, daughter Jean, 25, an insurance company executive, and son Robert, 23, working toward his master's degree in psychology at Columbia University.

Clairol is feting Mrs. Silberman with a week-long celebration — "I work with so many departments and each wants to give me a party." Then, she said, "I'll probably go back to school. I haven't had any real time off since high school."

In the meantime, there will be the continued interest in hair care and coloring — Clairol will keep her as creative consultant.

"Ginger Rogers always told me, 'You're very popular when you're in hair.' Even at social events, when people find out you're in hair coloring, they'll talk you to death."

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

My husband's idea of ambience is a restaurant with restrooms marked with a graphic ewe and ram, a cook with a tattoo on his tongue, and a dog asleep in a booth.

He says you can't eat ambience. I say you can. I think dining out should be a high matched only by the exhilaration you experience when you finally pull on the tights in your aerobics class. He wants to get in to eat right after Dan Rather and out by the time the NFL kicks off.

The way I figure it, if I wanted to eat in a dump, I'd stay at home. Men don't seem to understand that women love the idea of not having to wash the silverware between each course and being able to grind butter stains into the linen and not soaking it. They love violets on the table in December, and candles that don't smell like citronella.

They love the luxury of large tumblers that don't smell like creme rinse when you bring them to your lips. They love being asked if something is to their taste, rather than, "Do you know what that green vegetable looks like? A festered sore."

I know some men who even get up to dance with their wives between courses. My husband eats like he has five minutes to catch the last flight leaving a country before the communists take over. I have always believed you can tell how long a couple have been married by watching them eat out. Those married under five years never eat the bread. They spend less than three minutes ordering. They always toast something with their wine. They always have a request for the musical group.

Those married under ten years eat off one another's plates. They always order more butter. They ask for a doggy bag when they order the meal. Those married 25 years or more don't talk. They just eat. They drink Scotch and soda with their meals. If they can't read the check, they light a match. All of our lives, my husband and I have fought over ambience. He says waiters in white gloves have a skin disease to hide. The gift of a rose is a bribe. Violins cause stomach disorders. Cooking at your table saves on the heating bill.

One night the late Arthur Godfrey invited us to dinner. As we arrived 20 minutes late, he smiled and said, "Well, if it isn't the last happily married couple in North America."

We were. But that was before my husband found out valet parking would cost him a dollar and he parked our car at the loading dock behind the hotel and I walked a mile and a half in gravel in open-toed shoes.

Arthur never mentioned the fact that my husband and I ate at separate tables that night. Maybe he didn't notice.

Marsha Ann Vines, bride-elect of Johnnie Curtis Taylor, was entertained at a kitchen shower Friday evening at the home of Dr. Malene Irons.

Hostesses were Dr. Irons, Sandra Gaskins, Sarah Pritchard and Mary Foreman, grandmother of the bride-elect.

Guests were greeted by Dr. Irons and Ms. Gaskins. Pouring punch was Mrs. Pritchard, a god mother of the honoree. Mrs. Foreman and Sarah Irons assisted. The refreshment table was covered with a white linen cloth and centered with an arrangement of geraniums and chrysanthemums flanked by candelabra.

The gift table was covered with a similar cloth and decorated with fall flowers. Gifts were received by Irene Dickens, aunt of the honoree, who was remembered with a corsage of miniature mums and bachelor buttons.

The bride-elect was presented a corsage of pink sweetheart roses and ageratum.

DOG LOVER IN ELMIRA, N.Y.

DEAR DOG LOVER: My mail has been running 100-to-1 in favor of dogs. But here's one that has me stumped:

DEAR ABBY: Tell the woman who hated barking dogs to go to Holland. The dogs there do not bark. I visited my daughter and her husband in Holland two years ago, and their golden retriever didn't bark at all.

They moved to Germany, where all the dogs bark, and now their dog is barking, too. Did you know that dogs learn to bark from barking dogs? And if a dog has never heard another dog bark, it won't bark either?

MRS. M. IN HUNTSVILLE, ALA.

DEAR MRS. M.: My dog expert says that dogs bark instinctively, whether they have heard another dog bark or not.

But that's only the "arf" of it—the exception is a barkless African breed, the basenji.

DEAR ABBY: After 20 years of dieting, "Fat, Female and Feeling Fantastic" found a support group of fat people who decided to quit dieting and accept themselves the way they were. Then figuring that she had accomplished something that merited national applause, "F.F. and F.F." bragged about it to you. You told her, "There's nothing wrong with being heavy—as long as you're healthy."

Abby, it's not possible to be hefty and healthy. Excess weight impairs both the immune system and liver function. It breeds diabetes, gallstones, arthritis, puts a strain on the heart and contributes to bad backs and high blood pressure.

"F.F. and F.F." may try to justify her gluttony, but before the American Medical Association says obesity is OK, Yuri Andropov will be a born-again Christian!

That Leaking Safe

A common practice in Washington lately has had Reagan administration spokesmen decrying publicity "leaks" of sensitive papers or plans. But no one can beat the administration itself.

This administration, which uses lie detectors to test employees directly under its control and wants to place a muzzle on all federal employees, actually lost highly sensitive, top secret documents — presumably including CIA and Pentagon reports — for three months and didn't even know it.

How did the administration discover the loss? The papers turned up in the hands of prisoners at the Lorton Prison in northern Virginia, where a State Department safe had been sent for repairs. It seems no one bothered to clean out the safe before it was shipped.

Prison officials discovered the documents when some of the prison's 2,800 inmates started passing the papers around. The safe reportedly sat in an open warehouse for a month before it was shipped to the prison in August. The papers, or at least the papers still remaining, were found by prison officials Oct. 25.

Reagan spokesmen say they are confident none of the papers has fallen into the hands of a foreign agent. The spokesman did not bother to say how he could be so confident when there was a three-month gap in which the government wasn't even aware of the papers' insecure nature.

It would seem the administration needs to take care of its own blunders and let the "leaks" run their course. In view of what could have happened if that safe had gone some place other than to a federal prison, routine leaks to newspapers seem mighty tame.

Politics And ERA

We have to be approaching an election year. An attempt was made to revive the Equal Rights Amendment in the U.S. House of Representatives.

There were numerous charges and countercharges hurled between opponents and proponents of the measure and generally they boiled to one thing — politics.

The Equal Rights Amendment has only recently failed to gain the necessary support of state Legislatures to make it a part of the Constitution. It was a bitter defeat for proponents, but that is the way our system works.

There is nothing to say that the procedure for making the amendment a part of the Constitution cannot be followed again. That, however, should not be done with little notice and shortened debate in the House of Representatives.

Feud Simmers Along

JACKSONVILLE — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green had just finished about two dozen local supporters for their prayers and thoughts during his recent trip when several TV reporters began asking him about his future plans. Was it true, one asked, that he was considering a race for the U.S. Senate?

That afternoon, as in a morning appearance in Fayetteville, Green had a bit of fun with the bait. He's feeling about a possible Senate race. "Some of my supporters tell me I'm needed more in Washington than I am in Raleigh," he said. But he would go no further. He's considering both races, he said, and he'll announce his decision soon.

Green has been running for governor almost since the day he took office as lieutenant governor in 1977. He only started talking about the Senate the weekend after he was acquitted in October. From discussions with him and his aides, it is obvious he's running for governor. So why is he playing with the Senate talk?

It's Jimmy Green's way of thumbing his nose at Gov. Jim Hunt, the man who is expected to be the Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Republican Jesse Helms. During several hours of interviews in the plane that flew Green around the state, it became obvious that the lieutenant governor sees Hunt's long shadow behind the long ordeal. Green has just weathered Hunt's legal counsel, Jack Cozart, who was instrumental in putting to trial a case that shouldn't have been tried. Green charges.

Green says Cozart "shopped the case all around southeastern North Carolina looking for a seasoned district attorney who would prosecute the case. He says he's been told as much by at least two prosecutors. Green named those two but only one could be reached. That district attorney spoke on the condition that he not be named. He confirmed Green's story and said it is "my impression that Hunt's people had more to do with this than Rufus Edmisten, the attorney general, although Rufus was by no means clean."

Green also says that Cozart, in interviewing Colon Willoughby to take the job of acting Wake County district attorney, let Willoughby know that to get the job he'd have to prosecute Green.

Cozart couldn't be reached for comment. His assistant, Pam Gaither, said, "It's hard for me not to laugh because it's so ludicrous. There's no basis for it." Brent Hackney, Hunt's deputy press aide, said the governor was in no way personally involved in the case and that, if Green thinks he was, that "is an unfortunate perception, a mistaken perception."

The district attorney says he doesn't think Hunt was personally involved. It was his feeling that Cozart acted on his own, seeking revenge for years of difficulty with Green. The district attorney also said he felt Edmisten's involvement in the case was limited, that it was Edmisten's lieutenants who pursued the prosecution.

During the interview, Green was asked if he held Edmisten responsible for the prosecution of what many people consider a weak case. He responded with a question: "Let me ask you, is he any more responsible than Jim Hunt, Cozart or Willoughby?" Asked to answer the question himself, he said, "I don't know. But they sure acted strange."

Green and Hunt, as the state's top two officeholders, have long feuded. But it had appeared that relations were improving as Hunt finished his term and prepared to take on Helms. It is obvious that relations between the two are not improving and that doesn't bode well for Hunt as he seeks to unify his party behind his effort to win the Senate seat.

WASHINGTON — The most interesting fight in town these days has to do with the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. The controversy is exceptional for this reason: It goes straight to the heart of the political process. If we look closely at this struggle, we are likely to learn what elections are all about.

Congress created the commission in 1957 as an independent agency in the executive branch. The act says the commission is to be composed of six members appointed by the president subject to the advice and consent of the Senate. No more than three of the members may come from the same political party. Unlike members of such other agencies as the Federal Trade Commission, members of the Civil Rights Commission do not serve for fixed terms. A reasonable assumption is that they serve at the pleasure of the president.

This has been the operative assumption from the beginning. Eisenhower's original appointees submitted their resignations when Kennedy was elected. Kennedy's people submitted their resignations when Johnson came into office. Nixon asked for — and got — the resignation of Theodore Hesburgh as chairman. Nothing in law, custom or precedent suggests that members of the Civil Rights Commission are like justices of the Supreme Court who may be removed only by impeachment.

The problem at the moment is that two holdover Democrats on the commission believe they do indeed have lifetime tenure. They won't quit. They insist they can't be fired. President Reagan would like to replace them with Democratic nominees of his own choosing, but even though Republicans control the Senate, Reagan is having serious problems in getting his choices confirmed. Meanwhile, the issue has wound up in federal court. To add one more complication, it should be noted that unless Congress and the White House come to some agreement before the end of November, the commission will go out of existence anyhow.

At the bottom of this conflict is a philosophical issue of real meaning. Is racial-balance busing a good thing? Should employment practices and college enrollment be predicated upon numerical quotas? Present members of the commission say yes. Reagan's nominees say no.

Now we get to the heart of the matter. You would never believe it if you listen to the outcries from the civil rights lobby, but we had an election in 1980. That election pitted the attitudes and policies of Jimmy Carter against the attitudes and policies of Ronald Reagan. And Reagan won. He won overwhelmingly.

Throughout the campaign, Reagan made no secret whatever of his views in the area of affirmative action. The president believes in equal opportunity. He opposes racial quotas. He believes it is fundamentally wrong to bus little children to school solely by reason of the color of their skins. These views are widely shared by blacks and whites alike. It is a fair assumption that many persons voted for Reagan at least in part because of these views. This is the stuff from which mandates are made.

It seems to me that Reagan has not only the right but also an obligation to nominate persons to executive agencies who are in general agreement with his political philosophy.

This does not demand the appointment of mere bootlickers, sycophants and yes-men. The president's nominees are superbly qualified in the field of civil rights. No one who is familiar with their characters would suggest that they would toady to the White House. On the basis of their publicly expressed views, we would expect his people to reflect Reagan's opposition to racism in the form of quotas.

What in the world is wrong with such a pattern of political responsibility? I see nothing wrong with it. The Civil Rights Commission is not a judicial body; it has no powers of enforcement or arbitration. The commission exists to make reports and recommendations. It has made some superficial reports and some wrongheaded recommendations in the past, but it has some useful publications to its credit also. If the two bullheaded commissioners would have the grace and good manners to resign, everybody could get back to work. The political process would be fulfilled, and the skies wouldn't fall.

Reunion Is Impressive

ATLANTA — Jimmy Carter assembled an impressive roster of individuals from past and present governments here last week for a conference on the Middle East. The meeting was "quite a reunion of old friends," said Cyrus Vance, Carter's first secretary of state.

But for a group of local residents, the occasion was hardly worth celebrating. About 600 of them demonstrated outside the conference site at Emory University over a plan to build a "Presidential Parkway" linking Carter's proposed presidential library and mediation center to a nearby interstate highway. The citizens consider the highway more destructive than beneficial, and probably wish Carter's old friends had told him so.

Carter insists that the 2.4-mile interstate link will offer needed access to his federally-funded complex, which is to be more modest in size and cost to taxpayers than any of the last four presidential libraries. He points out that the construction site, now held by the Georgia Department of Transportation, was originally bought as a right-of-way to Interstate 405. If the natives don't let him build the road, he might just move the library somewhere else.

But local opponents of the highway contend that its construction will destroy nearby parkland, mapped out by landscape architect Frederick Law Olmstead, and lower surrounding property values. What worries these residents and others more is the possibility that state transportation officials might want to build more links to another interstate in the future.

At one time, Carter enjoyed local support for the library. Yet he didn't take the opposition to the highway seriously. Now there's growing resistance to the project as a whole, and much of the fault lies with Carter's undiplomatic behavior during the controversy.

"It's appalling that a former president who espouses human rights and wants to build a mediation center refuses to sit down and talk to his neighbors," said David Walbert, an attorney and opponent of the highway. One could add that former presidents ought to let the public decide how it wants to memorialize them.

Footnote: Students at Stanford University have already split over a proposed presidential library. On one side of the issue are "Students for the Presidential Complex at Stanford" (SPC), who gathered Nov. 3 for an organizational meeting. On the other is "Stanford Community Against Reagan University" (SCARU), a group consisting of students and faculty critical of Stanford's ties to the conservative campus think-tank the Hoover Institution. Stanford President Donald Kennedy has endorsed the complex generally but warned recently that it would strain Stanford's fund-raising machine.

Strength For Today

In Brazil there is a common plant which forest dwellers call the "matador," or murderer.

Its slender stem first creeps along the ground, but as soon as it comes in contact with a tree, it starts to creep up its trunk, becoming stronger as it goes along. Continually it squeezes the tree more tightly, until finally it crushes the life out of it. Then, having reached the top, it blossoms with a huge, flowery head and scatters seeds to do again the work of death.

This is an example of what sin can do to our souls, minds and bodies. It creeps subtly along the ground like a serpent. Then, when it has seized our lives, it becomes bold and strong.

The sin may be as common as selfishness, but whatever it is, it wraps itself about us, squeezing life out of any resistance we may put up, and then arrogantly crowning our lives with a hideous flower that will spread seeds and start again for others the work of destruction.

Assad's Opinions Fall On Deaf Ears

DAMASCUS — President Hafez L. Assad's scorn for American fist-shaking along his Mediterranean border should not be mistaken for fear just because, without public announcement, he ordered full mobilization of Syria's 400,000-man army Monday.

Talking to an American friend behind closed doors recently, Assad heaped ridicule on President Reagan's recent statement that the U.S. has "vital interests" in Lebanon, a country that used to be an historical part of Syria. It is Israel, he said to the American friend in a private conversation, that wants expansion, not Syria.

That such sentiments fall on deaf ears in Washington shows the depths of the danger that now stalks the Eastern Mediterranean littoral. As perceived in this capital of a powerful, dynamic Arab police state, that danger goes beyond possible new conflict between Syria and Israel, with or without American participation. The core is whether the Lebanon crisis and its redoubling of the American affinity for Israel, regardless of Arab viewpoints, are rushing the U.S. headlong into permanent hostility from the most powerful and feared Arab state — and beyond that the Arab world. Assad talks mildly, sometimes wittily, but there is little that is mild or witty in the scorn he heaps on the Reagan administration's handling of the Lebanon issue. During the latest crisis over Lebanon, in which Israel's 1982 invasion has thoroughly enmeshed the U.S., his talk exhibits toughness, a refusal to genuflect to Washington and genuine confidence.

"Israel and George Shultz (the U.S. secretary of state) have dealt Assad several aces he never had before," a top European diplomat told us. That explains the confidence. Assad's Western borders are now lined with late-model Soviet anti-aircraft missiles where before there were only Soviet castoffs, increasing his military power; he has proved his influence on the potent dissident factions, mainly Shiite and Druze, who refuse to take orders from Lebanon's

U.S.-backed Maronite president, Amin Geyamel — and Israel; his flippancy dismissal of what all Arabs regard as the one-sided Israeli-Lebanon troop withdrawal agreement has stopped the U.S. in its tracks, forcing mobilization of one of the greatest naval task forces since World War II.

Assad correctly predicted that Camp David would result in a separate peace between Israel and Egypt. Israeli occupation of his own Golan Heights is a matter he has put on the shelf, insisting that a comprehensive Arab-Israeli settlement, including the West Bank, is the only way to deal with Israel's occupation of Arab lands.

When asked why he does not accept the May 17 Israeli-Lebanon troop withdrawal agreement (which he wickedly calls "Camp Shultz"), he counters by asking why the U.S. has abandoned the U.N. Security Council resolution it voted for that demanded immediate Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon well over one year ago. Syrian politicians say that not much is heard from Washington about that resolution.

Assad's scorn is tinged with ridicule. Talking privately, he recently derided President Reagan's definition of the Lebanon crisis as a shoot-out in the East-West corral. That, he said, may explain U.S. naval gunfire against anti-Gemayel forces at Suk al Gharb, which is Arabic for West Market.

American confrontation with Syria, resulting from Israel's invasion of Lebanon, has nevertheless created difficulty for Assad. The difficulty, ironically, worsens the problem that President Reagan wants the confrontation to cure: rising Soviet power in the Middle East.

Ever since the U.S. began to flex its military muscle along the Syrian-Lebanese shores, the Soviets have exerted more pressure on Assad to let them show the depths of their love for Syria. That means Soviet-controlled bases and Soviet extra-territorial rights to airfields in Syria.

Federal Tobacco Program Termed 'Anachronism'

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Hailed by supporters as a model of efficiency that's a lifesaver for thousands of farmers, the federal tobacco program is under assault from critics who denounce it as a deadly anachronism.

While attacks on commodity support programs increase, the tobacco program faces more than the typical complaints of government interference in the free market and wasteful spending.

It's also drawn fire from an organized and vocal anti-smoking movement concerned with health issues.

With the tobacco industry buffeted by a decline in smoking and foreign competition, opponents have redoubled their efforts to bury the controversial program.

"It is rather ridiculous for government to spend ... dollars telling people not to smoke and then spending more subsidizing tobacco," said Roy Meyers, press secretary for U.S. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, a leading tobacco critic.

But supporters argue that the issues of smoking and tobacco supports are separate.

"Most people including the present administration realize that this is an economic issue, not a health issue," said William D. Toohey Jr., spokesman for the Tobacco Institute, a Washington-based trade group of U.S. cigarette manufacturers. "No one has smoked a cigarette because of the tobacco program or would quit without the tobacco program."

The program is considered so important in states where tobacco is grown that political enemies — such as North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. — unite on its behalf.

Hunt, a Democrat, said in a June letter to all senators that the tobacco program meant "survival of the family farm in North Carolina."

Helms, whose seat Hunt is expected to seek in 1984, has fought off challenges to the program from his position as chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Tobacco provides 30 percent of all farm cash receipts and 40 percent of net farm income in North Carolina.

Sob Story: They Cry For Science

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — People shed tears because they are happy, sad or angry — or because they've got something in their eye. At Tulane University's Tear Analysis Laboratory, volunteers cry for science.

The lab breaks teardrops into their basic chemical components, giving researchers a fountain of information about the human body — and hope that tear analysis might one day replace some painful blood tests and spinal taps.

In their first project, researchers found a Vitamin A deficiency among people with a malady known as "dry-eye syndrome," said Dr. Peter R. Kastl, director of the lab, which is less than a year old.

Other work has linked one group of tear chemicals to rheumatoid arthritis and shown that tears can help detect and prevent eye diseases.

Kastl also hopes to learn whether tears can be used to detect the presence of pollutants or drugs in the body.

He wants to develop tear tests that will replace painful blood tests and spinal taps.

To get the tears for study, volunteers take a healthy whiff of an onion slice, then carefully remove the tears from their eyes through a thin glass pipe, where the droplets are collected.

With this season's sales nearly complete, 886 million pounds had been sold in the five flue-cured producing states for $1.57 billion — a 17 percent decline from 1982. The decline was blamed mostly on the summer drought and a government-mandated 10 percent cut in the amount of leaf marketed.

Air-cured "burley" tobacco, the second most common type, is grown in Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, Indiana, Ohio, Missouri and West Virginia. This year's markets open next week but last year's burley crop produced 850 million pounds that sold for $1.53 billion.

Opponents respond with statistics of their own. Illnesses believed to be smoking-related such as cancer, heart disease and emphysema, they say, cause an estimated 340,000 deaths in the U.S. yearly.

"We are literally talking about a product that, if we could do something about it, we could save this country billions of dollars in health care costs and improved health and productivity," said Matthew Myers, director of the Washington-based Coalition on Smoking and Health.

The tobacco program has remained intact and few see its demise as imminent. Its closest call came two years ago, when by a single vote the Senate rejected a bill to kill it.

Shaken farmers reluctantly accepted reforms to make the program largely self-supporting. Attempts to radically revise the program continue, including a bill sponsored by Metzenbaum to eliminate the system through which the government limits the number of tobacco growers. The bill is stalled in committee.

A leading tobacco champion, Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., says he doesn't think anti-smoking forces are strong enough to kill the tobacco program. "But we don't take any enemy for granted," he said.

Myers agrees that the program probably will remain intact into the 1990s, although more change is likely.

"...We want to be sure that the mechanism for getting the government out of the tobacco business is one that takes farmers into consideration," he said. "We'd strongly support spending money on helping the farmers make the transition from tobacco to other crops."

The anti-smoking coalition's biggest objection to the program is that it gets money that could go to smoking education projects, Myers says.

"Obviously, the program itself doesn't have any health implications if tobacco is going to be grown regardless," he said. "On the other hand, the health community is greatly concerned ... when we have struggle to get the federal government to allocate $3 million for smoking education programs while it spends $15 million supporting tobacco."

Flue-cured tobacco, its green leaves slightly yellowed by the sun, is harvested in late summer and cured in heated barns, where it becomes limp with a dark gold hue.

In late August and September, it's sold to cigarette manufacturing companies in auctions across North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, northern Florida and southern Virginia.

Tobacco that doesn't sell for the government-designated support price goes to a grower-funded cooperative, which pays the farmer and stores the leaf until it can be sold. Under the federal program, farmers are guaranteed a minimum price for their crop. This year's minimum price for fluecured tobacco, the most common type, is $169.90 per hundred pounds.

Each grower has an allotment, or permission to grow tobacco on a certain number of acres. Critics say many allotments are owned by corporations and others who don't grow tobacco but lease production rights to farmers.

Senate Democrats Air An Industrial Strategy

By TOM SEPPY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats have a national industrial strategy which they say will make the American economy more competitive internationally and ease the problems caused by technological change.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the task force which prepared the report over the past nine months, told a news conference Wednesday the Reagan administration has followed a policy of "aimless drift."

"We reject the foolish proposition that government should stand idly by while winds of change sweep across our land," Kennedy said. "The debate in 1984 must be about the future, and along with our colleagues in the House and our party's presidential candidate, Senate Democrats intend to ensure that it will be."

There is no doubt the recommendations, along with a similar plan put forth by House Democrats, could well serve as an economic theme for Democrats in next year's elections, even if the economy in general is still expanding in recovery from the 1981-82 recession.

The task force report, Jobs for the Future, contains 22 recommendations in six categories to make the American economy more competitive and calls for what were described as "new policies to meet the twin challenges of international competition and technological change."

The proposal calls for the creation of a Council on Economic Competitiveness and Cooperation, a permanent, independent agency in the executive branch made up of 20 representatives from government, business, labor and the public.

The task force said the council would have two major responsibilities — to be a forum within which the nation's industrial strategy would be debated and formulated and to establish advisory working groups to analyze and consider responses to problems that affect individual industries and geographic regions.

In addition, the report calls for better education to help job-seekers in a world in which many jobs are disappearing in basic industries such as steel and auto manufacturing. It also calls for better retraining for people who lose jobs in those industries and for modifications to the unemployment insurance system.

It urges federal support for state development finance agencies, coordination of the federal impact on financial markets, consideration by the council of a National Development Bank and a study of capital markets.

Road Promised By Faircloth

CURRIE, N.C. (AP) — D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth said Wednesday an Interstate highway between Benson and Wilmington would be built in less than 10 years if he's elected governor in 1984.

Faircloth, who resigned as state Secretary of Commerce to run for governor, said eastern North Carolina could no longer be denied its potential for growth by lack of access to the Interstate highway system and its connecting trade corridors.

Faircloth spoke at a pig-picking held by the Pender County Committee to Elect Faircloth Governor.

Political leaders in southeastern North Carolina are awaiting a decision Friday on how much money will be available to continue building the Interstate 40 freeway connector.

Gov. Jim Hunt has proposed a funding plan to complete the I-40 connector in 10 years.

neighborhood of Tripoli that he still considered himself a guest of city leaders.

"I told you from the beginning, I am here according to the leaders, according to their wish," Arafat said. "I will leave if they ask me to leave."

Tripoli political leaders, including the mayor, have asked that Arafat leave and spare the city of 500,000 people from harm. But local militia leaders have said he remains welcome.

Arafat and his aides said there were still some loyalist fighters in positions on the southern edge of Baddawi in an area called Mankub. Rockets, machineguns and rocket-propelled grenades were being fired by both sides.

"We will win. I keep telling you," Arafat claimed.

One of Arafat's spokesmen, Mohammed Shaker, said the Syrian-backed rebels were sweeping the camp to stifle resistance. The rebels already hold positions on the north, east and southeast, as well as inside nearly all of the camp.

Unconfirmed radio reports said 100 were killed and 600 wounded in the final assault on Baddawi.

Frustrated By Wrong City

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A prisoner at the Fayetteville city jail took his frustration out on a light fixture in his cell early Sunday morning, police said, and then explained what his problem was.

Police said James E. McClean, 33, was released from a Memphis jail recently and put on a bus that he thought was going to Fayetteville, N.C., his home. Instead, his ticket got him a ride to Fayetteville, Ark. He arrived with no money and no place to go. Officers said he was picked up for loitering.

After he ripped the light fixture, police said, a local benevolent organization, "Operation Blessing," bought the man a ticket for a bus ride to Fayetteville, N.C. He boarded the bus Monday, police said.

The PLO war in north Lebanon broke out Nov. 3. On Nov. 6 the mutineers overran the loyalist camp of Nahr el-Bared, and Arafat's men fled to Baddawi. It was not known how many loyalists were in Baddawi when the mutineers fought their way in.

The PLO rebels accused Arafat of abandoning military struggle against Israel, but Arafat said the mutiny was part of an effort by Syria to gain control of the PLO.

The state radio said a tentative count of casualties during the two-week PLO war showed 345 combatants and civilians were killed and more than 800 wounded. Beirut police said the figures could go much higher.

In Israel, military sources quoted by Israel radio said officials decided to launch the Bekaa Valley air strikes Wednesday after it became clear the United States did not intend to retaliate for the Oct. 23 bombing of the Marine headquarters in Beirut.

A U.S. official in Washington, speaking on condition he not be named, said the United States would not comment on possible retaliation, and that it was not consulted in advance about the Israeli raid.

However, the political bureau of Lebanon's largest Shiite militia, Amal, charged today that the raid had U.S. endorsement.

The jets struck Wednesday near Nabi Sheet, where bases of Shiite Moslem Lebanese extremists loyal to Iran's revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini are located.

Israel's military command said all pilots returned safely and reported direct hits on the camps.

Israel said its attack was in retaliation for the Nov. 4 truck bombing which devastated an Israeli army base in Lebanon's southernmost port of Tyre, killing 29 Israeli soldiers as well as 32 Lebanese and Palestinian detainees.

Beirut police said at least 43 Shiite militiamen and Iranian Islamic Revolutionary guards were killed and more than 80 wounded in the air raid.

Meanwhile, the 1,600 Marines in the 24th Marine Amphibious Unit in Beirut were being replaced by the 22nd MAU, commanded by Brig. Gen. Jim R. Joy, who is the first general to command a Marine force in Beirut. Previous units were headed by a colonel.

Marine spokesman Capt. Wayne Jones said the changeover began this morning, but would give no details on how it was being accomplished.

Some Snow For Asheville Area

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Temperatures in the 30s Wednesday brought a wintry mixture of snow, sleet and freezing rain to western North Carolina, with up to 2 inches of snow reported in some areas.

The National Weather Service reported that 2 inches of snow fell in Boone, Grand Father Mountain and Mount Mitchell, while most other mountain cities recorded traces of snowfall.

The weather service said warmer weather would reach the mountains later this week to melt the snow.

Pitt's Operation Santa Drive Organized For '83 Campaign

Zula Rouse has been re-named chairman of the

Vigil Begun For Another N.C. Child

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — While waiting for 9-month-old Joshua Brooks to improve after receiving a new liver Saturday, the Laurinburg, N.C., infant's parents visit with other North Carolinians whose children may face similar vigils.

Rick and June Brooks, physically worn by hours spent while their son is in critical condition at the University of Minnesota Hospitals, have gotten to know Joe and Barbara Quinn of Kenansville and Susan McConnell of Raleigh.

Hospital spokeswoman Mary Stanich says 3½-month-old Ashley Nicole Quinn is there strictly for examination. But Mrs. McConnell says her daughter, 4½-month-old Shelly Rose McConnell, has been added to the list of about a dozen babies needing liver transplants.

"They're going ahead although (Shelly) is rather young," said Mrs. McConnell. "They're putting her on the list because her blood type is B positive, not one of your more common types."

Mrs. McConnell added that Shelly was healthy enough to leave the hospital next week. She said the family would spend the Thanksgiving holidays with relatives in Charlotte before returning to Raleigh.

Meanwhile, Brooks says Joshua continues to make slow but steady progress.

"It feels good just to go somewhere else and sit for a while," said Brooks, who, with his wife, has spent most of the time napping on couches in a waiting room adjoining Joshua's intensive care room.

"We were in the hotel two hours today," Brooks said, chain-smoking cigarettes in the hospital's third floor waiting room. "And there wasn't a minute that we didn't think about how he was doing. I couldn't even think of sleeping away from him."

Two nurses are with Joshua constantly. A pediatrician is always on duty, along with other medical personnel.

Doctors said the boy's condition is improving.

Approve Aid To Hatteras

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has passed and sent to the Senate a bill requiring the federal government to pay up to 50 percent of the cost of repairing and maintaining N.C. 12 within the Cape Hatteras National Seashore.

The measure was passed by voice vote without debate in the House Tuesday but was not expected to be acted on before the congressional adjournment set for Friday.

It provides that the Interior Department enter into an agreement with the state on the amount to be provided by the federal government to maintain the road.

The highway is the only road that runs through the Cape Hatteras National Seashore. Visitors who wish to see the seashore and who drive the 73-mile length of the park must use it for the entire length, except for a five-mile segment at the entrance.

In recent years, the number of visitors to the seashore has increased greatly and the condition of the road has deteriorated, creating safety hazards, according to a House interior committee report.

Daddy where have they gone
Momma where have they gone

Daddy, Momma I went to see my Christian Friends but no one is at Home.
Daddy, Momma where have they gone?
Why did we not go? Now they are gone.
Remember Christmas Eve, the four that came by that night their names were Matthew, Mark, Luke and John.
Remember how their faces shined so bright.
When they talked about JESUS being Born that night.

Daddy, Momma, remember the minister prayer.
How that WE should be there;
Remember the Sunday School we missed
And how we left early before Service, and remember the Sunday nights and Wednesday nights we didn't go, oh there was so many in a row.
Daddy, Mama where did they GO

Thank You JESUS

Four paintings and one photograph were selected Wednesday afternoon as top winners from five states in the South Atlantic states exhibit of high school art show at the annual Tobacco Festival currently under way at Farmers Warehouse in Greenville. About 125 works of art by high school seniors were chosen by art teachers from the five states for submission in the annual show. The competition this year is sponsored jointly by A.C. Monk & Co. of Farmville and Powell Manufacturing Co. Each of the five winners received a $500 scholarship along with a plaque. The winners and the titles of their entries are:

- North Carolina, Angela Bowden, Myers Park High School, Charlotte, "Mama's Kitchen."
- Florida, Beth Kelly, Largo High School, photograph, "Girls."
- Georgia, Komo Gray, Shamrock High School, "Breakfast."
- South Carolina, Laura Douglas, Airport High School, "Flowers Under Water."
- Virginia, Steve Sommovigo, "Lobsters."

Following the exhibition at the Tobacco Festival, the student art from each state will go on tour in the individual states.

Suing Over Bridge Site

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Morehead City filed suit Wednesday in Carteret County Superior Court against the state Department of Transportation to try to block construction of a bridge to Atlantic Beach and Bogue Banks.

The city opposes the department's plan to demolish the drawbridge now in use and build a $12.4 million high-rise, four-lane bridge at 23rd Street. The city wants the state to build a $24 million bridge to Bogue Banks west of the present bridge and to keep the 24th Street bridge.

"The location of the proposed bridge ... is ill-conceived, poorly planned and undertaken without due consideration of the effects that this location will have on the town of Morehead City," Mayor Bud Dixon said at a news conference Wednesday.

The suit seeks a judgment on whether the state is "empowered to improve, enlarge, widen or close (23rd, 24th and Evans streets) without the consent and approval of the town of Morehead City."

The suit also requests that a permanent injunction be issued restraining the state from "improving, enlarging, widening or closing" those three streets and from constructing the bridge at the 23rd Street location.

Highway Administrator Billy Rose, who is named as one of the defendants in the suit, said as far as he knew "the project is go." He said the department was preparing construction plans and right-of-way contracts and hoped to award construction bids by July 1984.

Affirm Greyhound Buses Ready To Roll

By The Associated Press
Two Greyhound buses were involved in accidents — one causing a fatality, the other triggered by a striking bus driver — as the company trained replacement drivers to resume partial service in 27 states today despite a two-week strike.

Meanwhile, a Greyhound bus in Phoenix was delayed by Greyhound and union representatives' conference past midnight but resumed a few hours before the first scheduled run.

Starting with a morning departure from Miami, Fla., Greyhound planned to resume service with guards and escort vehicles helping buses through anticipated corridors of protesting strikers.

"We will be passing the terminal but I don't believe there will be any trouble," said Roy Nutter of the Amalgamated Transit Union local in Boston, where 10 buses were scheduled to roll at 7:30 a.m. EST. "It's questionable how many people are going to be riding these buses."

Greyhound spokeswoman Dorothy Lorant said the extra security was planned "not because we expect violence but ... for the peace of mind of our passengers."

The company's offer of half-price tickets to lure back riders was matched by its chief competitor, Trailways.

In Phoenix, federal mediator Sam Franklin was guiding talks Wednesday between Greyhound Lines Inc. management and the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, which represents 12,700 workers who refused to accept the company's demand for wage and benefit cuts.

"Tell Mom not to go down and buy a ticket," union negotiator Harry Rosenblum said Wednesday night when asked about the progress of talks.

Greyhound said it has hired 1,300 replacement employees and expected 1,600 strikers to cross picket lines.

The union predicted only half that many workers would return, despite a company ultimatum for employees to come back or lose their jobs. Union officials also questioned the ability and training of new drivers.

"The guys they have training these new drivers weren't qualified themselves," said Charles S. Robinson, president of the union's Los Angeles local.

A woman was killed Wednesday when her car pulled in front of a Greyhound bus on a training run in Fresno, Calif. The auto driver failed to yield the right of way, said highway patrol spokesman Ted Eichman.

The Greyhound driver, who had experience driving intercity buses for a Juneau, Alaska, sightseeing company, "was fully exonerated" and would not be penalized, Greyhound's Ms. Lorant said.

But Robinson said Greyhound drivers were formerly held to a higher standard and that the company had "preached over and over again that drivers should expect the unexpected."

In Detroit, a second crash Wednesday was triggered by a striker in a car who braked sharply ahead of a Greyhound bus, police spokesman George Anthony said. The striking employee, identified as Bernard Crittenden, and an unidentified woman were hurt in the chain-reaction collision.

Also in Detroit, two buses were slightly damaged Wednesday night after two Molotov cocktails were thrown over a fence at a busyard, a security guard said. Two other buses were delayed from leaving the downtown depot when about 20 strikers surrounded them, police said.

Detroit local union president Robert Rucker, who was in Phoenix, declined to comment on the crash, saying he knew nothing about the incident.

About 120 "dry runs" were held Tuesday and Wednesday, said Greyhound spokeswoman Leslie White, who added, "I don't know if there's any way we can protect ourselves against strikers who try to set up accidents on the road."

In Albany, N.Y., a striking Greyhound driver who said he was struck Wednesday by a company bus was arrested on charges of falsely reporting the incident. The driver was identified as Stephen Miller, 37. "We're alleging that he was not hit by the bus. It never happened," said police Lt. Peter Lounsbury.

The strike, which shut down Greyhound operations accounting for 60 percent of U.S. intercity bus service, began Nov. 2. Union negotiators rejected a company proposal including pay cuts of at least 9.5 percent and employee contributions to pensions of 5 percent to make it competitive with regional airlines and other bus carriers.

To Reconvene If Crisis Flares

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders, worried over a wider war in Lebanon or that President Reagan may order new military operations in Central America, have agreed to call the House and Senate back into emergency session if necessary during the year-end recess likely to begin this week.

Congress, nearing the end of the first session of the 98th Congress, is scheduled to reconvene Jan. 21. Under normal rules, only the president would be empowered to reconvene both houses between sessions.

But sources said Wednesday that Democratic House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and Republican Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. have settled on an adjournment resolution that would allow them — rather than Reagan — to call senators and House members from their home states back to Washington in November, December or January.

Larry Speakes said Tuesday that the troops would be out by Christmas, therefore there was no need for Congress to reaffirm the Dec. 24 deadline. Nonetheless, some senators and House members said they would like to reconvene if American forces are still there by late December.

Noting the buildup of U.S. naval forces off Lebanon and Reagan's decision to invade Grenada last month, Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd Jr. asked: "What if something should happen in El Salvador or Nicaragua?"

Byrd wants Congress called quickly back into session if there is a sudden new military expansion by the United States in the fighting in either El Salvador or Nicaragua, or in Lebanon.

One Republican leadership aide portrayed the plan as routine and unrelated to any specific fear of Reagan administration policies in Central American or Lebanon. Congress made similar plans before adjourning for its summer recess in August.

In the House, a number of senior Republicans, including Reps. Barber Conable of New York, and Lawrence Coughlin of Pennsylvania, signed a letter from about 40 House members urging congressional leaders to reconvene Congress if need be in the upcoming recess.

"The current presence of American military forces throughout the world makes it vital that Congress be in a position to act quickly should a crisis arise," said the letter, written by Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y.

Churches Fight Beer Sale Law

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A coalition of Greensboro churches says it will appeal a ruling by the North Carolina Court of Appeals rejecting its claim that beer sales at its festival is against the law.

The Coalition of Concerned Churches, which says it represents some 30,000 churchgoers in Guilford County, has protested the beer sales since Greensboro's City Stage Festival started in 1980.

The festival, which is held each fall, attracts more than 100,000 people to downtown Greensboro and is co-sponsored by the United Arts Council and the Miller Brewing Co., which sells beer at the festival.

The coalition asked the city council and other agencies to stop the sales without success.

Jimmy Workman, attorney for the coalition, said he received word of the court's ruling Wednesday and the group has given notice it will appeal the decision.

AFTERTHOUGHT

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — A former Chinese navy pilot who defected to Taiwan in a MiG-17 jet earlier this week appealed today to the Chinese government not to harm his family.

In addition to the possibility of increased U.S. involvement in El Salvador or Nicaragua, there is also fear of a widening war in Lebanon, where 2,000 Marines are part of a peacekeeping force in Beirut.

Another concern is the remaining American troops in Grenada. Under the 1973 War Powers Act, they would have to be withdrawn by Dec. 24 unless Congress decided they could stay.

White House spokesman

He said it is up to House and Senate leaders to make "sure that the Congress will be able to fulfill its constitutional responsibilities when American servicemen and servicewomen are sent off to fight and sometimes to die in foreign lands."

House Votes Withhold Child Support

By JANET STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Parents who fail to make child support payments on time will find the amount automatically deducted from their paychecks under a proposal that is now in the hands of the Senate.

The House late Wednesday passed the bill 422-0.

"Children from all economic classes will receive protection" under the bill, said Rep. Marge Roukema, R-N.J. "A family no longer need fall onto the welfare rolls to get the government to help them."

Proponents estimated that more than $3.9 billion in child support due is not paid each year, affecting about 4 million children.

The key provision of the bill would require states to impose mandatory wage withholding after a parent is 30 days late in support payments.

Rep. Barbara B. Kennelly, D-Conn., who also pressed for the measure, said there is growing sentiment in the Senate for the child support provisions. But she was unsure if it could get to the Senate floor before the adjournment tentatively slated later this week.

The House measure is one of a number of proposals that had been put together by the Women's Congressional Caucus to try to improve the economic status of women in America.

Mrs. Kennelly said the proposals, collectively called the Women's Economic Equity Act, had been going nowhere as a package so the caucus decided to break them up into separate bills and send each to a committee.

"Generally, when the mother is the custodial parent, the mother and children undergo a decline in their standard of living, but the father's available income increases — at least after a year of separation," Mrs. Kennelly said in explaining the bill on the floor.

If passed by the Senate without any changes, the bill would go into effect in 1985.

Presently, the federal government provides financial incentives for states to collect child support payments from individuals who have not been making these payments and whose spouses are therefore collecting Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) money.

Because of the incentives, Mrs. Kennelly said, states have been concentrating on families who receive AFDC, but have not actively pursued other spouses who fail to pay child support.

The bill would also repeal the present incentive payment to states of 12 percent of AFDC child support collections. It would be replaced with a guaranteed incentive equal to 4 percent of AFDC collections, plus 4 percent of non-AFDC collections.

Under the bill, all states would automatically have to begin withholding child support from an employee's paycheck when the amount owed equals one month of support payments. Pensions, royalties, and state income tax refunds could also be tapped for the child support payments, said Mrs. Kennelly.

Other collection devices would include placing liens on real and personal property of parents living or owning property in the state; and requiring bonds or other guarantees where there is a pattern of past-due support.

Additionally, consumer credit agencies could also be informed of child support arrearages of $1,000 or more.

Besides the actual child support payment, a special fee would have to be paid to an employer for the administrative costs of taking out the child support payments.

Fugitive List Sees Success

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A "Big Six" list of fugitives created by the FBI in North Carolina last year has led agents to six wanted men and is considered a success by the FBI.

Robert Pence, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina, said his office gets dozens of tips on fugitives each week.

"...Some of them don't work out," he said. "We've got the best luck with people who continue to commit crimes while running."

In March, FBI agents and Mecklenburg County police officers used a bloodhound to track an Illinois prison escapee — an armed robber who had been on the run for two months.

Before they arrested the man, agents staked out Charlotte's Western Union office and captured two of his friends who had hidden him in a trailer.

Law enforcement officials estimate that each year 50 to 60 people in North Carolina are nabbed after becoming part of the criminal underworld.

Despite the "Big Six" list, which currently includes murder suspects Ace "The Snake" Turner and Andrew Melton, Pence said finding fugitives is difficult.

"Fugitives may try to get absorbed by a big metropolis," he said. "Many will go into rural areas, obtain a new identity and try to change their appearance."

AT EDMISTEN RALLY — N.C. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten (right), a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in the 1984 elections, talks with Charles Vincent, Edmisten's Pitt County campaign manager, and supporters Tammy and Vernon Lee at a rally and barbecue dinner in Greenville Wednesday. About 1,200 people attended the affair.

Speaking off-the-cuff, Edmisten voiced his support for tobacco, citing the crop's importance to North Carolina, and to Pitt County, where the total income generated from tobacco amounts to about $1,300 per person in the county. The attorney general also voiced support for East Carolina University and the ECU school of medicine. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Foat Acquitted, Adopts New Future Goals

By DAN EVEN
Associated Press Writer
GRETTA, La. (AP) — Feminist Ginny Foat says her acquittal on an 18-year-old murder charge is a "symbolic victory" for women who are battered and abused, adding that she hopes to "go back to California and put my life together."

Cheers and tears swept a packed state District Court chamber Wednesday as jurors announced they had found Ms. Foat, 42, innocent of killing an Argentine businessman in 1965.

The six-man, six-woman jury took only two hours to reject the testimony of Ms. Foat's former husband, John Sidote, who was the prosecution's key witness.

Sidote claimed that he and Ms. Foat, then a barmaid in a seedy Canal Street bar, had lured 62-year-old Moises Chayo to the outskirts of New Orleans. He testified they clubbed Chayo with a tire iron after robbing him of $1,400 he was carrying to pay his son's hospital bills.

However, Ms. Foat testified that Sidote's accusations were born of malicious vengeance because she left him after enduring five years of physical and psychological abuse.

Ms. Foat, who was president of the California chapter of the National Organization for Women when she was arrested in January, was mobbed by friends and supporters after the verdict was announced. Several jurors asked for her autograph on placemats they saved during the nine-day trial.

"She is finally free, she is finally free," said her sister, Emilia Guigi of New Paltz, N.Y.

Ms. Foat, a contender for the national NOW vice presidency at the time of her arrest, said her next step would be to try to raise an additional $100,000 to pay off the $200,000 cost of her defense.

"I was going to law school, so I'm planning to do that and to go back to California and put my life back together," she said.

Many of Ms. Foat's former colleagues in the women's movement greeted her acquittal happily. "She has gone through the legal process and the process has said she is not guilty," said Sandra Farha, the current

California NOW president, from her Santa Monica, Calif., office. "We're pleased with the verdict."

But at a news conference Ms. Foat said she thought she was the victim of a vendetta in the California women's movement — an apparent reference to rivals who reportedly brought the long-ignored case to the attention of police.

While expressing thanks to rank-and-file NOW members who sent contributions to help pay for her defense, Ms. Foat said she wished she had received more support from the organization itself.

"I became something of a dirty thing to the national image," she said. "The case could have been a rallying point."

Ms. Foat criticized prosecutors for bringing charges against her. "I think the citizens of Louisiana and of Jefferson Parish should at some point look at the kind of prosecution that their district attorney, Mr. (John) Mamoulides is pursuing," Ms. Foat said.

"The jury was asked to take the word of my ex-husband, a three-time confessed murderer, a diagnosed schizophrenic, and there was nothing else. We kept sitting there, waiting for the next witness to come and wondering why this case was pursued," she said.

F-14 'Trash'

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Documents detailing a computerized combat system on one of the Navy's most sophisticated jet fighters were found discarded in a trash bin outside a drugstore, officials say.

The documents, stamped "confidential," outlined weapons systems for the Navy's Grumman F-14 Tomcat jet.

The papers apparently were thrown away in suburban Poway by an officer assigned to the F-14 training unit at the Miramar Naval Air Station in San Diego, Lt. Cmdr. Sally Robins, a Navy spokeswoman, said Wednesday.

Navy officials in Washington, D.C., have ordered an investigation of the incident.

The papers were found Nov. 7 by a man browsing through the trash for salvageable goods, marking the second time in a month that documents relating to Navy combat equipment turned up in a rubbish bin. In October, an engineer found hundreds of blueprints and technical manuals, including some dealing with the Tomahawk cruise missile, in a large trash container at a National City industrial park.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 54 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of xxxxx cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is light to moderate for a seasonally moderate demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 849,000 compared to 1,729,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks were mixed through morning trading today as the market struggled to extend its modest advance in the previous session. Steel, oil-service and forest-products issues rose, but several defense, mining, oil and drug stocks fell back.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial edged up 1.32 to 1,252.64 after two hours of trading. The measure climbed 3.35 on Wednesday to give it a gain of 36.48 over the past seven sessions.

Gainers held a slight edge over losers on the New York Stock Exchange, but the NYSE's composite index slipped 0.09 to 95.80.

Big Board volume totaled 35.07 million shares at noon EST, against 33.82 million at that hour Wednesday. American Telephone & Telegraph, up 1/4 to 63 3/4, quickly moved atop the NYSE's active list today. The company on Wednesday estimated the 1984 financial picture of AT&T and the seven new regional telephone companies that will be formed following AT&T's breakup on Jan. 1.

Other active stocks included Gulf Oil, down 1/4 to 42 1/2, and International Business Machines, down 1/8 to 123 1/8.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 0.15 to 219.43.

Town Nuts Over White Squirrels

By TERRI COLBY
Associated Press Writer
OLNEY, Ill. (AP) — Some might call the folks here squirrely, but a zoologist says their affection for a rare colony of the white, furry creatures is a matter of "civic pride."

Each fall, volu teers walk the streets of Olney to count the southern Illinois city's albino squirrels. Last year, zoologist John Stencel's volunteers counted 151.

"It's the largest wild albino colony in the world," Stencel said.

The pink-eyed, white squirrels are commonly seen scampering around town — where an ordinance gives them the right of way on streets.

In addition, white squirrel emblems show up on the uniforms of police officers, firefighters and city workers.

White squirrels adorn the city flag and the sides of city vehicles. White squirrel post cards and statues are for sale in town.

Indeed, Olney is known as the "Home of the White Squirrels."

"It's a symbol of the town," Stencel understates. "People are very proud of the squirrel. They feed them, they watch over them."

But it's not just the kindness of Olney's citizens that protects the squirrels. State law and city ordinance make it a crime to kill a white squirrel.

How the white squirrels came to Olney is a matter of debate, but the theories agree in dating the animals' appearance in the city to about 1902, Stencel says.

There are other wild albino colonies in Marionville, Mo.; Kenton, Tenn.; Columbia, Miss.; and in the Illinois city of Versailles, Stencel said, but none are as large as the colony at Olney.

"Albinism is found in almost all animals," he says. "It's a mistake in nature."

Stencel, a zoologist at Olney Central College, has been studying and counting the squirrels in Olney for more than eight years.

He rounds up volunteers each October, hands them forms to fill out and sends them into the streets to count.

The data on this year's count won't be compiled until December, but Stencel said he believes the number of white squirrels will be up from 1982.

"We should have a high count this year," Stencel said. "We had a real mild winter and very little snow cover."

Stencel said he is studying the squirrels because there are few long-term population studies in zoology, and to find out the effects of albinism on an animal population.

Albinos usually don't survive well because they are more easily seen by predators and because their eyesight isn't good, he said.

And maybe that helps explain the one opposition vote to adoption of the city's symbol: the Olney Central College basketball team, which 20 years ago balked at being called the White Squirrels.

The team is known as the Blue Knights.

Jaguars, Tigers Tangle In Playoffs

By JIMMY DUPREE
Reflector Staff Writer

When the Williamston Tigers defeated Farmville Central 7-0 in the Jaguars' opening game of the season, neither team managed to produce much yardage on offense. But the Jags lapsed on defense in the third period, allowing Williamston running back Larry Brown to score the only touchdown of the night. Now Farmville Central has the chance to return the favor, as the two teams meet for a rematch at Williamston Friday night at 8 p.m. in the eastern semifinal of the Division II 3-A football playoffs.

"We're going to be ready to play," Williamston Coach Harold Robinson said. "Farmville has certainly improved a great deal since the first time we played. Their coaches have done a fine job getting the players ready."

"They've proven themselves as a team. They had rough edges they had to work off. They had to do a lot of things right to get this far — they're balanced pretty well as far as offense and defense."

The Jaguars won their last five games of the season to earn their berth in the Division II playoffs, and face Williamston with an 8-3 record. A 20-3 loss to Bertie in the second game of the season and a 28-0 setback against Southwest Edgecombe were the Jaguars' only other losses of the season after the Tigers spoiled their home opener. Could the early loss to Williamston in Farmville inspire the Jaguars to reverse the scene?

"That may enter into the picture," Robinson said. "It's a playoff game and regardless of what happened early in the year, both teams want to win. That was a Monday night game after the rainout on Friday; the atmosphere wasn't what you'd like for a high school football game."

Defense has been the key for the Jaguars in the key games late in the season, with the steady performance from John Ford (5-9, 280) and the return of senior tackle Chris Edwards (6-3, 250) anchoring the line. Senior Joey Steppe provides leadership at linebacker.

The improvement of the Jaguar defense showed a week ago when they shut down Havelock for four quarters, then stopped the Rams in overtime on fourth and goal at the four-yard line. A 25-yard run by Nat Norris was the only score of the first-round playoff matchup.

"Some of our boys haven't experienced the success some of Havelock's players have," Farmville Coach Gil Carroll said. "None of our players have been on a team that's won more than five games; they (Havelock) were used to winning and going to the playoffs."

"Coming down the stretch in the second half, we kept Havelock from getting the big play — that was the key. We'd give up yardage here or there, but we didn't let them get into the end zone."

"Each game is like another step up the ladder for our players. It's a challenge each week; it's easy to get them up for a game at this point."

"Having lost to Williamston gives us some incentive. Our seniors are faced with a situation of losing to the same team again or redeeming themselves with a win. It would certainly gnaw at me to lose the first game of the season to a team and then be knocked out of the playoffs by the same team."

Carroll has a lot of respect for the Tigers' offense — and with good reason. Against Warren County a week ago, quarterback James Ward took off on the Tigers' first play from scrimmage and scampered 62 yards to tie the score early in the first period.

Williamston rolled up 249 yards rushing en route to improving its record to 9-2 with the win over Warren County, but the defense had its moments as well.

Senior Donnell Griffin intercepted a pair of passes, with the second setting up a fourth-quarter touchdown. Warren County managed just 162 yards rushing on the night, with Derrick Davenport tallying 152 of that total including a 69-yard TD on the first play of the game.

"We were able to do many of the things we wanted to (against Warren County)," Robinson said. "I was pleased with our effort on both sides of the line."

"But against Farmville, we'll have to go out and move the football on offense. I feel like the best defense is a good offense."

The Jaguars will have to stop Ward, who is considered one of the top quarterbacks in the area, along with running backs Larry Brown and Al Willingham.

"I think they run the option better than any other team we've faced this season — better than Southwest Edgecombe (which finished first in the Eastern Carolina Conference with a 9-1 record)," Carroll said. "They don't have quite the size up front that Southwest has, but they block well."

"We definitely have to control the ball. If we give them as many minutes with the ball as we did Havelock, they'll roll up the points. They run it all — traps, dives, option, pass. We'll have to have total concentration on defense."

"They can score points and have great specialty teams that don't give up good field position. We'll have to play the best we have all year."

Hunt Puts In Word For ECU

Gov. Jim Hunt put out the word on the Pirates yesterday, but it may have proven to be too late.

Hunt called Rod Duchesne of the Independence Bowl selection committee in Shreveport, La., to urge that bowl's picking of East Carolina University as one of its teams this year, but got nothing but the committee's thanks for his effort.

According to Brent Hackney of the governor's office, Hunt pointed out to Duchesne that the Pirates were only 13 points away from being one of the top teams in the country. Hackney said Duchesne made no comment, but said that he appreciated the call and the governor's interest in the situation.

According to an Associated Press story out of Raleigh today on ECU's chances, the Pirates are only on the secondary list of the Independence Bowl, and would only come to the fore should several other teams lose this weekend and put themselves out of contention.

East Carolina, of course, would have to beat Southern Mississippi in its final game Saturday night to have a shot even then.

Bowl bids can officially be issued at 6 p.m. Saturday, or at the end of an invited team's Saturday game, whichever comes earlier. Despite this, most of the bowls have already lined up their slates, barring unforeseen upsets this weekend.

State Men, Women Swim Past Pirates

N.C. State's men and women were victorious over East Carolina University's swim teams in the season opener for both schools last night in Minges Natatorium.

The NCSU men won 78-35, while the Lady Wolfpack took a 78-36 victory.

Cayce Poust, a freshman in her first collegiate meet, broke the school record in the 200-yard backstroke with a time of 2:15.11. The old record, set by Jennifer Jays in 1981, was 2:16.85.

East Carolina won four events in the men's meet, with Chris Pittelli winning the 200-freestyle, Stan Williams taking the 50-freestyle and 100-freestyle, and the 400-freestyle relay team of Pittelli, David Breece, Kevin Hidalgo and Doug McMillan winning their event.

The Lady Pirates were led by Poust, who won the 200-individual medley in addition to the 200 backstroke, and another freshman Scotia Miller, who took the 500-freestyle.

"Overall, we are very pleased with the effort," Coach Rick Kobe said. "N.C. State is a perennial ACC and national power. We swam straight up against them. They didn't have any exhibitions, but the outstanding performers were Pittelli and Poust."

East Carolina returns to action on Saturday, traveling to Old Dominion.

Investigation Can Proceed

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn can now get on with his efforts to investigate the actions of New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner following last summer's "pine tar bat" game.

The two men, along with their lawyers, met in State Supreme Court in The Bronx Wednesday, at which time Steinbrenner agreed to drop his request for an injunction against Kuhn's planned hearing on the matter.

Kuhn has not set a date for the hearing.

Steinbrenner sharply criticized American League President Lee MacPhail after MacPhail reinstated George Brett's controversial home run — hit with a bat containing excessive pine tar — that cost the Yankees a victory July 24.

Sources close to Steinbrenner, who claims Kuhn is biased against him, have said he is concerned that he could be fined as much as $250,000 and suspended because of his conduct.

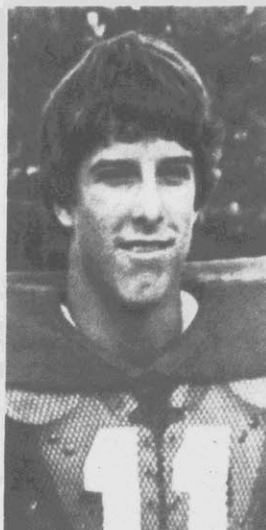

Steinbrenner dropped his request for an injunction against Kuhn's investigation, but Justice Irwin Silbowitz, who met with the two sides Wednesday, said the Yankees owner did not waive his right to contest any of Kuhn's findings.

Steinbrenner, Kuhn, their lawyers and Silbowitz met for 3½ hours during which time the judge apparently tried to get the sides to reach a settlement, an effort that failed.

Asked after the meeting if a settlement was possible, Milton Gould, Steinbrenner's chief lawyer, said, "I hope so, but I don't know."

Grant Preparing For 'Bowl' With So. Miss

By JIMMY DUPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

While many followers of the East Carolina University football team wait in front of the television for news of a possible bowl berth, Pirate senior linebacker Mike Grant is preparing for what may turn out to be his final game in the purple and gold.

He'll be playing Saturday's game against the Golden Eagles of Southern Mississippi as 'tough it's a bowl game.'

"I'd like to think the only thing on our minds is Southern Mississippi," Grant said. "But I'm sure (the bowl situation) is in the back of everyone's mind. That's what we've wanted all along."

"I'm pretty excited; I've never had a chance at bowl at all before. I just hope everything falls into place. We tell the young guys that we have a bowl game Saturday. This being the last game for both teams, I think it's going to be a great one. Southern Miss has good team speed; they line up well against our team."

The Pirates carry a lofty 7-3 record into the game with a win over bowl-bound Missouri along the way. Only a trio of losses to nationally-ranked Florida teams — by a total of 13 points — stand between the Pirates and a major bowl bid.

But those three losses leave ECU a "slim" chance of getting into a bowl. Several teams headed for bowl bids have records less impressive than the Pirates, but the lack of tradition is blamed for ECU's failure to attract the scouts.

How does Mike Grant feel about the selection process?

"I don't think it's fair," he said. "Florida State is 6-5, and they're going to a bowl. But I can't control that."

"Carolina's got a great program. I guess they're disappointed with the way their season is ending up, but they've got the big name and will be going to a bowl.

"We feel that we have a team as good as anybody else."

The Pirates lost the opening game of the season 47-46 at Florida State, then went on to win five straight before losing to Florida 24-17. A trip to fifth-ranked Miami yielded a 12-7 loss for ECU in the ninth game of the season — the Pirates' sixth contest on the road.

"We were disappointed with the way we (defense) played in Florida State game," Grant said. "After every game you lose, you look back and say 'I could have done this or that.' Everybody looked back at that game and saw little things that could have gone differently — there was no one play that cost us any game."

Grant has accounted for 59 solo tackles and 42 assists, along with an interception last weekend against William and Mary to lead the ECU defense.

"If there's something that needs to be said on the field, I'll say it," Grant said. "But I lead by example as much as anything — everybody on this team does, for that matter."

The Pirates lose 23 seniors at the end of the 1983 season, but Grant is confident next year's squad will continue the progress established over the past three seasons.

"We've got a real good class of juniors," Grant said. "I think they're as good as we are, maybe even better."

The bowl committees can extend official invitations at 6 p.m. (EST) Saturday, but the kickoff of the ECU-Southern Miss game is two hours later.

Would Grant want to know whether the Pirates were included in the group?

"I don't think so," he said. "But it wouldn't make any difference. I guess I'd be puzzled a little in the first quarter."

"Our goal now is to have a winning percentage on the road. The Southern Miss game can give us that."

Pirate Chances Seem Very Slim

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

They're still waiting for the phone to ring at East Carolina's football office to let the Pirates know they will be playing in a post-season game, but the team that gets no respect also may not get a December trip.

Lacking that all important aspect of glamor, East Carolina will likely be denied a chance for its second bowl trip in five years as well as one more shot at national recognition.

No one can say East Carolina didn't try. The Pirates traveled from pillar to post this season, playing teams that it might have been foolish to challenge 10 years ago. Three trips to Florida — and three losses — have turned out to be part of the obstacle.

"We're 7-3 now, 13 points away from the nation's best teams," East Carolina coach Ed Emory said after his team pinned a 40-6 whipping on William & Mary last Saturday.

"I just hope the best qualified teams will go and if one goes from this state, East Carolina is the best team to go," he added.

Both East Carolina and North Carolina have 7-3 records, but bowl scouts are not only looking at football ledgers; they are looking at their financial ledgers. A team that brings a crowd means money to the bowl and to the city where the bowl is held.

Bowl names have been tossed around whenever the possibility of post-season play arose. One newspaper listed East Carolina as a finalist for the Aloha and Independence bowls. The Pirates have already visited the Independence and whipped Louisiana Tech in the process.

Even if officials of the Independence Bowl are familiar with East Carolina's name, they do not appear eager to invite the Pirates. Bowl spokesman Dennis Parker said the Pirates will not be scouted this weekend when they travel to Southern Mississippi for their season finale.

"They are on our secondary list," Parker said. "They're in there with Tulsa, Memphis State and Texas A&M. Air Force, Virginia Tech and Mississippi are on our primary list."

Parker said East Carolina's ability to bring a crowd to Shreveport, La., would play a key role.

"Two of the things we are looking for is their road ability and their following," Parker continued. "We really have to fill up the stadium to meet NCAA requirements for minimum payoff."

John Chandler, assistant director of the Pirate Club, said East Carolina has increased its average attendance this year to more than 28,500 in 35,000-seat Ficklen Stadium. He added that the Pirates have also taken a good following on the road.

"The Temple game had more than 6,000 people and I would estimate that we had half of them," Chandler said. "The Florida trips were well attended — we had people from Florida who attended those games."

Chandler said he learned the Pirates were even in the running for the Aloha Bowl, held in Honolulu. What the Pirates have discovered this season is that with the schedule, with the close calls in Florida and even with the decision to play a tough schedule, it doesn't mean a thing if you don't have a name that's on the tip of America's tongue.

"We've got a lot of good respect and I think it's going to help a lot next year," Chandler said. "It doesn't ease the pain of not going to a bowl, however."

ACC Teams Aim For Bowl Spots

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

With the Atlantic Coast Conference football title locked away in Maryland's trophy chest, six league teams look to improve their records Saturday, while one quarterback looks for his own spot in the record book.

The Terrapins reportedly have locked up a bid to the Florida Citrus Bowl and will attempt to impress scouts from that game against North Carolina State. North Carolina, whose hopes for a major bowl were reduced to ashes in three games, will try to salvage a Peach Bowl spot against a streaking Duke team.

In the Tar Heel-Blue Devil encounter, senior quarterback Ben Bennett needs 246 yards to become college football's most prolific passer.

Clemson is ineligible for a bowl, but nonetheless is looking for its ninth victory against South Carolina. Virginia searches for its seventh victory against Virginia Tech at Charlottesville.

Although Maryland dropped the 52-27 decision to the Tigers last week, the Terrapins are undefeated in conference play at 4-0, as well as a 7-3 mark overall. The Wolfpack withered under the assault of Bennett's arm and fell to Duke 27-26.

N.C. State coach Tom Reed said Bennett might have blitzed his defense, but he expects to have a harder time stopping Terrapin left-hander Boomer Esiason.

"He's the kind of kid who likes to throw the football, he can scramble, he likes to hit the open receiver and he likes to run," Reed said. "That gives a dimension to the offense that I think is something special."

Esiason, touted by Maryland as a Heisman Trophy candidate, is second in the league in total offense behind Bennett and third in passing efficiency ahead of Bennett.

In October, many might have considered the North Carolina-Duke game as the caper on an undefeated Tar Heel season. Now, coach Dick Crum is trying to keep his team's collective head up.

"Duke is on a roll while we're struggling," Crum said. "I expect and hope our youngsters get ready to play."

When Bennett finished with the Wolfpack last Thursday night, he had set the NCAA record for career pass completions with 793. He claimed the ACC record for touchdown responsibility with 55, took the conference mark for completions in a season with 273, and held the ACC standard for attempts in a year with 433.

With all those numbers, Duke coach Steve Sloan thinks the kicking game will be crucial.

"We have not done a good job in our kickoff coverage and we are very concerned about punting the ball to Walter Black," Sloan said. "He is a very dangerous punt returner."

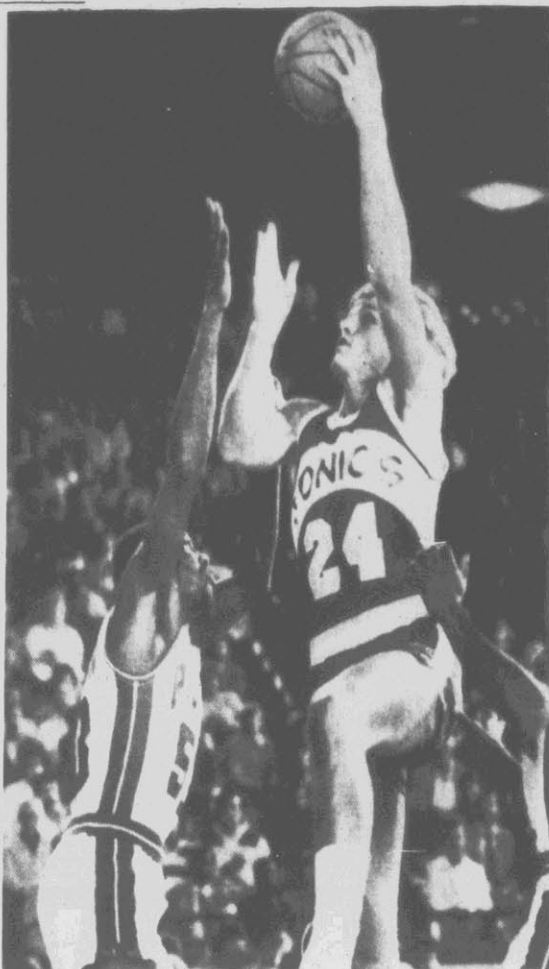

There's talk in Charlottesville that the winner of the Cavalier-Gobbler matchup could go to the Peach Bowl. There's also been talk that the Dec. 30 bowl game has already been decided — North Carolina and Florida State the combatants.

"I sense this is a big game," Virginia coach George Welsh said. "After going around the state for a year, recruiting and speaking, I realize how important this game is."

Wake Forest finished its season last week with a 49-33 loss to Georgia Tech, giving the Yellow Jackets a winning season.

Ripken: Promos Must Fit Him

BALTIMORE (AP) — Orioles shortstop and 1983 American League Most Valuable Player Cal Ripken Jr. says he will spend the winter by playing basketball and by promoting milk.

Ripken, who spent last winter the same way after being named the league's Rookie of the Year, said whatever promotional opportunities come his way now that he has become the first major league baseball player to win both awards consecutively will have to fit his personality.

"Everything that comes in that I have a chance to do I'm sure I'll look at very closely to make sure it fits my personality," Ripken said Wednesday. "A milk commercial I think fits me pretty good."

But asked during a press conference if he would follow Orioles pitcher Jim Palmer on the underwear-promoting circuit, the 23-year-old Ripken answered: "I don't know about that."

Ripken, who played basketball and appeared in milk commercials last winter, was named the A.L. Most Valuable Player Tuesday night by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Ten others have won both awards, but never in successive years. Fred Lynn received both in 1975 when he was with Boston. Rod Carew, Thurman Munson, Jackie Robinson, Frank Robinson, Willie Mays, Orlando Cepeda, Willie McCovey, Johnny Bench and Pete Rose also won both during their careers.

Ripken won the award by receiving 322 votes to teammate Eddie Murray's 290. It was the first time that teammates finished 1-2 since the Orioles Frank and Brooks Robinson did so in 1966. Joe Morgan and George Foster placed 1-2 for Cincinnati in 1976.

Ripken batted .318 with 27 home runs and 102 RBIs this past season while Murray, who plays first base, batted .306 with 33 homers and 111 RBIs.

In a statement issued through the Orioles, Murray, who is currently driving home to Los Angeles, said Ripken deserved to be named MVP.

"I feel like he deserves it, and I hope he does it again and that the Orioles win the World Championship again," Murray said.

Ripken, who said he had not spoken with Murray since the award was announced, was mutual in his praise for his teammate and "good friend." "Who could just as easily have won the award and been standing right here where I am right now,"

"I know if I would have finished second and Eddie first, I would be the same happy person I am this morning," Ripken said during the Memorial Stadium news conference.

Ripken said he just wants to hit .300 next season and "the RBIs, the home runs and the extra base hits will come."

As part of his off-season preparations, he plans to play basketball and racquetball and around January, he'll take a few swings with the bat.

But in the meantime, Ripken said he wanted to savor the 1983 world championship won by the Orioles and his winning the MVP.

Jazz Gamble Pays Off

By The Associated Press
Seven-foot-4 Mark Eaton was so slow and unpolished that he hardly played as a collegian at UCLA. The Utah Jazz took a chance on him, however, and sometimes the gamble pays off with aces.

Eaton scored 10 of his 17 points in the final quarter and blocked two shots in the final three minutes as the Jazz snapped Boston's nine-game winning streak with a 122-109 National Basketball Association decision Wednesday night.

"Eaton was the difference. He was the whole story," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "What did he do — block 10 to 15 shots? He would not let us shoot inside. None of us shot from the outside."

Eaton, the heaviest player in the NBA at 290 pounds, actually rejected six Boston shots as the surprising Jazz improved their record to 5-5 before a crowd of 12,743, the club's largest attendance since it moved to Utah in 1979. Boston is 9-2, still the best mark in the league.

In other NBA games, Philadelphia tripped New York 102-97, Detroit edged Seattle 122-120 and Phoenix beat Cleveland 115-104.

The Jazz led 94-85 at the end of the third period, but the Celtics cut that to 98-96 with 7:19 left in the game on Larry Bird's basket from the corner. Bird, center Robert Parish and guard Gerald Henderson keyed the 11-4 Celtics spurt.

Parish, who finished with 25 points to lead Boston, scored on a turnaround jump shot with 4:26 left to cut Utah's lead to 103-100.

Then Eaton saved the Jazz, blocking a shot by Bird with 2:43 to go and scoring at the other end. Less than a minute later, Eaton rejected a shot by Boston's Kevin McHale and converted a three-point play to put Utah up 109-100 with 1:49 left.

The Jazz held the lead from there with the help of three technical foul calls on the Celtics.

"Mark can do anything," Jazz Coach Frank Layden said. "But he isn't always on the floor. If he gets his

Duke In Advance

DURHAM (AP) — No. 3-ranked Duke meets Alabama A&M Sunday for the South Region NCAA soccer title after Tom Kain's goal lifted the Blue Devils to a 2-1 victory over unranked North Carolina State on Wednesday.

Alabama A&M beat Clemson 1-0 Wednesday night while N.C. State finished the season at 13-6-1.

The Blue Devils, 18-1-2, took a 1-0 lead 4:51 into the game on a goal by David McDaniel. Paul Aherna had an assist on the play.

N.C. State tied it on a goal by Angel Abramovich with 9:19 gone in the second half.

Duke outshot the Wolfpack 15 to 10.

minutes, he then shows production."

"I wanted to get a rebound, block a shot, do anything to just get something going," said Eaton of the closing moments.

Once the Jazz rebuilt the lead, Eaton said, "All I could think was, 'We're beating the Boston Celtics. We're beating the Boston Celtics.'"

John Drew and Adrian Dantley, the NBA's leading scorer, led the Jazz in scoring with 29 and 26 points, respectively. Drew had 14 points in the second quarter to help the Jazz take a 68-59 halftime lead.

McHale finished with 24 points, while Henderson had 19 for the Celtics. Bird, the fifth-leading scorer in the league with a 26-point average hit only four of 15 shots for eight points.

76ers 102, Knicks 97

Julius Erving scored 28 points, five of them consecutively down the stretch, to help Philadelphia capture a home victory over New York.

Erving tapped in a rebound with 1:22 to go to break a 95-95 tie, then followed that with a free throw and a layup to put the 76ers ahead 100-95.

Andrew Toney added 23 points and Moses Malone 21 for Philadelphia, while Bill Cartwright led the Knicks with 20.

Suns 115, Cavaliers 104

At Phoenix, Walter Davis scored 35 points, including a three-point play at the start of the fourth quarter that put the Suns ahead to stay against Cleveland.

The Cavaliers, who got 24 points from Lonnie Shelton, led for most of the first three quarters and had a 74-72 lead going into the final period. But Davis' three-point play gave the Suns a 75-74 edge and started a 33-20 advantage in the fourth quarter.

Pistons 122, SuperSonics 120
Kelly Tripucka scored 31 points for the Pistons at Detroit and twice hit field goals immediately after Seattle had pulled to within one point in the fourth quarter.

Valvano: Game Isn't Considered Rematch

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Do not classify Saturday's Hall of Fame basketball game between reigning NCAA champion North Carolina State and runner-up Houston as a rematch, requests Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano.

The Wolfpack team that edged the Cougars 54-52 in Albuquerque last April bears little resemblance to the 1983-84 version. By the same token, Houston is without Clyde Drexler and Larry Micheaux.

"I think a rematch is stretching the point some," Valvano said prior to a Wednesday practice session. "To me, it is our first game and I want to see us play."

"I'm not going to be holding the ball like last year. I wanna play. I'm going to go out and play and that's the way I'm going to find out things," he added.

Thurl Bailey is now a member of the Utah Jazz, while Sidney Lowe is a part-time performer for the Indiana Pacers. Dereck Whittenburg, released by the Phoenix Suns, is back at N.C. State pursuing his degree. The three were the movers and shakers in the Wolfpack climb to the NCAA's mountaintop and Valvano is looking for suitable replacements.

Taking the place of Lowe and Whittenburg will be sophomore Ernie Myers and 5-foot-6 freshman Anthony "Spud" Webb. Another freshman, Bennie Bolton, will take Bailey's spot. Lorenzo Charles, whose dunk gave the Wolfpack the title, will join with Cozell McQueen at center.

In Charles, Valvano said, a leader is slowly emerging to take the place of the departed seniors.

"He's not going to break into The Improvisation with a stand-up routine, Lorenzo is still ... quiet," Valvano said. "But on the court, he's been so much more assertive. He's been so much more a positive player."

Valvano said the only player who has really taken over any sort of leadership role is Alvin Battle.

"It's hard to lead when you're not starting, but he is the one fellow who has accepted the role of kicking some butt and getting the team together," Valvano said. "Everybody is so unsure of themselves in that role. They're all fighting for their own niche as a player."

Along with leadership, Valvano said a lack of experience could provide the biggest stumbling blocks to a return trip to the NCAA tournament. Already, however, he is talking about next year.

"The truth of the matter is I don't think we are a very good basketball team," Valvano said. "I'm not saying that we're not going to be someday. But we have so many questions unanswered. I believe when you give this group experience, you add the talent we have coming next year. I think we'll know how the seniors, juniors and sophomores are going to play, we're gonna be a lot better."

Kent State At The Bottom

Kent State continues to hang at the bottom of the NCAA's 105 Division I-A teams — at least as far as the Daily Reflector's Computer Rankings are concerned.

The Reflector rankings rate teams by their success against strength of schedule, awarding points for wins, victim wins and victim's victim's wins.

As a result, Kent State, which has won but one game this season, has put together only ten points and ranks at the bottom of the list.

Keeping Kent State company, however, are such teams as Minnesota, Rice and Eastern Michigan — KSU's only victim — tied for seventh place with 14 points. Oregon State rounds out the bottom five.

In the next five come Navy, Southwestern Louisiana, Houston, Texas El Paso and Army.

The bottom ten, their records and points for the past week:

1	Kent State (1-9)	10
2	Rice (1-10)	14

Breakfast Of Champions Celebrates 50th Anniversary

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

A generation ago, when the world was a nicer place in which to live, tykes gathered around their radios to listen to the travails and ultimate triumphs of "Jack Armstrong, the All-American Boy."

During the commercial breaks of these half-hour dramas, a sports idol of the period, a Babe Ruth or a Lou Gehrig, would break in with an exhortation which went something like this:

"Now, boys and girls, if you want to grow up to be strong and brave like Jack Armstrong, don't forget to eat your Wheaties."

People who heard those words 50 years ago are now papas, mamas, grandfathers and grandmothers. TV has replaced the talk box and Jack Armstrong's adventures appear mild compared with the gun-totin', car-chasin' and head-bashin' of T. J. Hooker, Mr. T and Simon and Simon.

But the spirit of strength and goodness, as conveyed by a cereal box, goes on. Now it's a blond, handsome Olympic champion or some other outstanding amateur athlete making the appeal on a TV screen during Saturday morning cartoons.

Over the years, Wheaties have become a continuing thread in the fabric of our social structure — "as American as baseball, Kate Smith and apple pie."

The producers of the cereal, General Mills, Inc., touched many a nostalgic nerve when they gathered many of their illustrious alumni to New York this week for the 50th anniversary of their theme: "Wheaties — Breakfast of Champions."

They included Red Barber, one of the original radio baseball broadcasters; Olympic gold medalists Bob Mathias and Bob Richards, basketball great George Mikan, Yogi Berra, Phil Rizzuto and other baseball personalities.

The event also launched a "Search for Champions" campaign in which outstanding amateur athletes from throughout the country are chosen to grace the cereal box.

The late Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig were among the first to endorse the product, and both figured in interesting radio foulups that have become part of the industry's deathless lore.

Gehrig had been signed to endorse Wheaties but later was lured away by a rival product, Huskies, no longer in existence. On a national radio hookup Gehrig was giving his commercial spiel, which ended with, "Kids, don't forget to eat my favorite cereal — Wheaties."

Newspapers had a field day with the slip of the tongue, generating publicity for both products which would not have been otherwise possible.

Prep Playoffs Continue

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

When the high school football playoffs began, Jacksonville head coach Ray Durham picked unbeaten and No. 1-ranked Fayetteville Byrd as the team to beat in the chase for the 4-A title.

After watching films of the Eagles' 42-10 victory over Wilson Fike in the first round of the playoffs, Durham was even more convinced.

"They appeared to be even better than I thought they were," Durham said in a telephone interview on Wednesday. "We feel like we're playing the No. 1 team in the state."

Durham will get a chance to see if the films are telling the truth Friday when defending 4-A champ Jacksonville battles Byrd in the second round of the playoffs.

Meanwhile, defending 2-A champ Randleman battles Southwest Guilford while Robbinsville, which has won four straight 1-A crowns, meets Rosman.

Fifth-ranked Jacksonville, 10-1, scored two TDs in the final 10 minutes to beat Smithfield-Selma 21-14.

"We feel like we played real well early and late, but in the middle feel like Smithfield-Selma took the game from us," Durham said.

The Cardinals won't be able to do that against the Eagles and win, Durham said.

"Byrd jumped on Wilson early and I don't think they ever recovered," he said. "I just hope we can keep that from happening. We've got to play really well to be competitive."

Byrd coach Bob Paroli said Durham's praise for his Eagles should be taken with a "grain of salt and divided by two."

"I really believe they have everything going for them. We feel like this will probably be the toughest game we've faced this year," Paroli said. "It has all the makings of a great football game."

Paroli was particularly impressed with the Jacksonville defense, which had a school-record eight shutouts during the regular season.

"In the films we've seen, they seem to always be playing in the other people's backfield," he said.

In the 2-A class, Randleman meets Southwest Guilford for the second time this year. The Tigers, 10-0, turned the ball over five times while struggling to a 6-2 victory over the Cowboys, and coach Charlie Gregory is hoping his team does not repeat that performance Friday night.

"We didn't feel like we played very well that night," he said. "But we will be satisfied to win 1-0 Friday night. We're not going to try to win 60-0 or anything. We'd just like to win and like to look good and play well."

Southwest Guilford coach Roy Boyles said some fans appear to have already written off his team's chances against the two-time defending state champs.

"I've been getting sympathy cards all week from all my friends," Boyles said with a laugh.

Boyles admitted it won't be easy for his unranked Cowboys, 9-2, to defeat the top-ranked Tigers.

"We know we'll have to play a super ballgame and hope they don't have a real good game," he said. "We know that if we play a super game, we've got a chance to win."

He also downplayed the significance of the teams' earlier meeting.

"If they had beat us 35-0 in the first game, we might have an advantage. But we had them in a sweat and they'll be ready," he said.

In other second-round games in the 4-A division, No. 7 Wilson Hunt, 10-1, meets Fayetteville Sanford, 8-3. No. 3 Charlotte Myers Park, 11-0, meets No. 4 Greensboro Page, 10-1, and No. 6 Northern Durham, 10-1, meets unranked North Forsyth, 8-3.

In the 3-A class, unranked Tarboro, 8-3, meets No. 9 SouthWest Edgecombe, 10-1. No. 4 Clinton, 11-0, faces No. 10 Eastern Randolph, 10-1, third-ranked Thomasville, 11-0, battles No. 8 Alexander Central, 11-0, and Lincoln, unranked at 8-2-1, challenges second-ranked Asheville Reynolds, 11-0.

In the 2-A division, No. 8 Fuqua-Varina, 10-1, meets No. 4 Franklinton, 11-0. No. 10 East Carteret, 10-1, faces unranked South Robeson, 8-2-1, and No. 2 Sylva-Webster, 11-0, squares off against unranked Newton-Conover, 6-5.

In the other 1-A semifinal matchup, Creswell, 8-2, meets Bladenboro, 7-4.

Home Burglarized, Car Taken

An investigation is under way by the Pitt County Sheriff's Department into a break-in at a Brook Valley home that resulted in the theft of a 1983 Mercedes-Benz automobile and various items of personal property, Sheriff Ralph Tyson said today.

He said the theft at the home of Morris Brody, 110 Christenbury Drive, took place while the Brodys were away on a trip. Tyson said a maid discovered the break-in when she went to the home Wednesday morning.

According to Tyson, rooms and drawers were rifled, as were various files, and property was scattered throughout the house. He said investigators believe a full length mink coat, a video recorder and a sterling silver service were taken. He said deputies are still trying to determine exactly what was stolen and were waiting for the Brodys to return home to inventory the property.

The sheriff said the Mercedes-Benz was recovered at Cherry Court Apartments. No arrests have been made.

Nat'l Geographic News Service
WASHINGTON — Squeezed by two war-torn countries, Honduras is caught in the middle of Central America's political and military turmoil. With a leftist government in Nicaragua and leftist guerrillas fighting for power in El Salvador, Honduras has opened its arms to more than 43,000 refugees fleeing their volatile homelands.

Once considered a passive country, Honduras has emerged as the keystone of American foreign policy in Central America. As Mike Edwards reports in "Honduras: Eye of the Storm" in the November issue of National Geographic, "Honduras looked the other way as the CIA sent counterrevolutionaries into Nicaragua from its soil."

U.S. Training
Earlier this year, in an effort to strengthen El Salvador's government against leftist insurgents, Honduras allowed the United States to set up a military camp where Green Berets could train Salvadoran military units. Then U.S. and Honduran army units performed joint military exercises.

Although the impoverished country has received $40 million in military aid and $101 million in economic aid from its American ally this year, government officials in the capital city of Tegucigalpa have asked for even more assistance. President Roberto Suazo Cordova requested a fivefold increase in economic aid over the next 12 years and a tenfold rise in military aid by 1986.

Suazo, whose 1981 election marked the end of nearly two decades of military rule, insists that social and economic change can be brought peacefully to Central America. In his inaugural address he spoke of a "revolution", only one of "work and honesty".

Less than a century after winning independence from Spain in 1821, Honduras became a stronghold of American-owned fruit companies. With growing conditions ideal for bananas, Honduras became locked into an almost familial relationship with the United States and developed into the quintessential banana republic.

Strike Paid Off
Wages were low. But in 1954, a major strike by 25,000 workers won better pay and numerous benefits. The Honduran government guaranteed employee rights and minimum wages. The companies — Standard Fruit and United Fruit — started subsidizing workers' housing and education.

"Many Hondurans believe the lesson of 1954 — that disputes can be settled peacefully — has helped the nation enjoy greater internal peace than its neighbors," writes Edwards.

Despite the social progress of the labor unions and the thriving banana, coffee and lumber exports, Honduras is still plagued by economic ills. Illiteracy afflicts 40 percent of its population of four million, malnutrition is widespread, and housing is inadequate.

Tourism receipts, which six years ago amounted to $14 million, appear to have evaporated; and developers are reluctant to invest their capital in a country surrounded by political instability.

Some Hondurans believe that Suazo is engaged in a power struggle with his military leaders. "Many people, long used to army rule, wonder if their government now has two heads, one the president's, the other a general's," writes Edwards.

But if Gen. Gustavo Alvarez Martinez and President Suazo concur on one principle, it is the importance of American commitment. Their pro-American spirit reminds some visitors of the days when President Kennedy's "Alliance for Progress" program helped alleviate the housing shortage.

The Honduran Air Force has only 70 pilots and 50 combat aircraft, some of them of Korean War vintage. Yet it is considered Central America's strongest. The United States is enlarging three of the country's airstrips. Along the Nicaraguan border, Honduran soldiers carry American weapons. Border skirmishes with Nicaraguan soldiers have added to tensions in the area.

The Refugees
Of 23,000 refugees from Nicaragua, perhaps half are Miskito Indians. Determined to clear them from the border area, Nicaraguan troops apparently burned Miskito villages and forced Indians who did not flee to resettle elsewhere. About 4,000 of the refugees have been settled along Honduras's Patuca River, which flows through Mosquito Coast wetlands into the Caribbean Sea.

Across Honduras on the Pacific, Edwards went by dugout to Amapala, an island in the Gulf of Fonseca. For him the experience helped sum up the predicament of Honduras:

"From the island it is possible on a clear day to see the volcano named Cosiguina in Nicaragua and two volcanoes, Conchagua and 7,000-foot San Miguel, in El Salvador. 'Where the hell is Honduras?' asked a T-shirt I had seen on a boy in Tegucigalpa. I can answer: 'It is between volcanoes.'

Honduras, the poorest country in Central America, finds its troubles compounded by those of its neighbors. Political instability continues in Guatemala. Miskito Indians flee violence in Nicaragua and settle in Honduras. The United States charges that Nicaragua sends war supplies across Honduras to Salvadoran guerrillas.

Government troops stand by to assure the safe passage of a Honduran campesino family from Las Trojes to sanctuary with relatives in Danli. This treacherous road runs less than a mile from the Nicaraguan border. Ten days later two American journalists were killed on the road when their car struck a land mine. Although Honduras is poor and small, it has become a haven for more than 43,000 foreign refugees, more than half of them from Nicaragua.

Motions By Klan Are Frustrated

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge has denied motions by Ku Klux Klan members and supporters that could have temporarily frustrated a grand jury investigation into Klan conduct in Iredell County.

U.S. District Judge Woodrow Jones' actions came after Klan attorney Ray Motsinger of Winston-Salem claimed federal officials were engaging in "illegal acts" and other misconduct during their ongoing Klan investigation.

Motsinger, 50, said Linda Davis, an attorney with the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Justice Department, has shouted at witnesses who testified before the grand jury.

"I have never had anybody get up in my nose like that," Motsinger said. "I'm a gentlemen, sir, in and out of the courtroom."

Asked later about Motsinger's allegations, Ms. Davis declined comment.

But assistant U.S. attorney Jerry Miller said there is nothing unusual about aggressive questioning and offered to show Jones grand jury transcripts to demonstrate there had been no improprieties.

Among the Klan motions that Jones denied was a request for a transcript of the grand jury investigation and a request to give defendants the names of all government staff members involved in the investigation.

The hearing Wednesday represented an attempt by Klan supporters to take the offensive against the government after a 4½-month-old grand jury probe into a Jan. 29 incident in Statesville.

Then, about 20 Klan members and sympathizers attempted to post bond at Iredell County Jail for a black man charged with raping a white woman. Klan members say they weren't serious about posting bond and were just exercising their rights to freedom of speech.

Wednesday, about 20 Klan members and associates attended the Asheville hearing. Most were apparently associated with the White Knights of Liberty, a Klan group headed by Joe Grady, 54, of Winston-Salem.

"I would say from what I've seen, people in Poland have just as many rights as we do," Grady said.

According to Motsinger and Klan members, federal officials have harassed them by repeated visits to their homes, neighborhoods and places of employment during the investigation.

No one has been indicted during the investigation, but an assistant U.S. attorney said in court that several people were "targets" of the investigation.

Jones said four people could have court-appointed lawyers prior to going before the grand jury. Jones refused five requests for court-appointed lawyers.

The investigating grand jury is scheduled to meet in January but could meet earlier if called into a special session.

FILES — Margaret Trudeau, whose jet-set lifestyle as the estranged wife of Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau has made her a gossip column favorite, filed for divorce on Wednesday. According to her lawyer, the suit was filed in the Supreme Court of Ontario. (AP Laserphoto)

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Avoid getting involved in wishful thinking. Fast-talkers are trying to persuade you. You need to carefully guard your funds and property against any sort of poor judgment.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure to handle personal matters sensibly and later do the same with your business affairs. Seek needed advice.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Steer clear of one who listens carefully to your troubles and appears to be sympathetic, only to profit from them later.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Your judgment may not be good where personal matters are concerned, so think them out carefully before acting.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Not a good morning to be out in public. Don't visit friends later since they are too preoccupied.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) It's all right to think about expanding and making changes, but don't take any action today. New contacts could be dangerous.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't be forceful in gaining the favor of one in business and be sure you know just where you stand.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't permit a grumpy partner to upset in you the morning, since later practical matters are difficult to handle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get your work completed so that you can be free for the week-end. Be sure not to upset a partner today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Forget pleasure and go after the important business aims that motivate you and become more successful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be sure you think before you speak at home and thereby save a possible confrontation with kin.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't be impulsive with your comments, otherwise you can get into trouble easily. Decide how to improve routines.

East Meets West

Eighty years ago this week the United States and Panama signed a treaty for the building of the Panama Canal. Because the Atlantic Ocean is east of the Pacific, most people assume that ships sail west through the Canal. However, at this point in the world, the Atlantic Ocean's Caribbean Sea is west of the Pacific Ocean's Gulf of Panama. This means that a ship sailing through the Canal actually leaves the isthmus 27 miles east of where it entered.

DO YOU KNOW — Which country was originally intended to be the site of the Canal?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — "Through The Looking Glass" was the popular sequel to "Alice In Wonderland".

MEAL TIME — Every three hours, veterinary assistant for the Philadelphia Zoo Ann Hess mixes up a milk and water and vitamin formula and bottlefeeds Roo, a 5-month-old red kangaroo that was rejected from his mother's pouch in early October. Ann takes the kangaroo, secured in a sheep-skin lined L.L. Bean bag (as a pouch) everywhere she goes. By the time Roo is one year old, he should have begun the weaning process. (AP Laserphoto)

Idiosyncrasies Also A Problem

NEW YORK (AP) — National idiosyncrasies are as much a learning problem for overseas-bound businessmen as learning the native language, says a management consulting firm.

The company advises businessmen to learn about culture and protocol beforehand. This could prevent mistakes, such as discussing deals with Japanese over dinner or patting a Frenchman on the back after negotiations — both of which are considered rude.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You are apt not to think straight about money matters, so go over your figures well. Use caution driving today.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one of those young persons who can make many errors during childhood if not taught early in life to think and analyze before taking any action. Once this is learned, your progeny would do very well in any vocation.

Even simple hands require a modicum of care. At the bridge table, pessimists make money.

East's jump overall showed the values for at least a sound opening bid. West's raise was justified because of his distributional values, but East elected to go no further because his hand was better suited to defense than offense.

West led a diamond and declarer won in dummy. Thoughtless play now would lead to defeat. Suppose, for example, that declarer were to lead a trump. East follows low and the jack wins. When West shows out, declarer abandons trumps and leads a spade to the king and ace. East now plays ace of hearts and another and, because of the bad club break, declarer can make no more than nine tricks — a spade, a ruff and the ace of diamonds on the table, and five trumps and the ace of clubs in hand.

The careful declarer has no problem making the hand — with an overtrick to boot. It takes nothing more than sound technique.

After winning the ace of diamonds, declarer simply leads the king of spades from dummy at trick two. East wins the ace, but declarer is a tempo ahead and no defense harms him.

Suppose East returns a diamond. Declarer ruffs, cashes the ace of clubs and ruffs a club. He discards a club on the queen of spades

May Measure Star-Changes

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — It may soon be possible to measure, over a time span of one to three years, changes in individual stars undergoing a million-year evolutionary phase.

In a recent study of a new class of extremely hot, pulsating degenerate stars, astrophysicists Donald E. Winget of the University of Texas (Austin), Carl J. Hansen of the University of Colorado, and Hugh Van Horn, professor of physics and astronomy at the University of Rochester, report that changes in the stars' pulsation period may now be detectable.

Observation of such changes will help update and improve our understanding of these stars and their evolution, they say.

NEW YORK (AP) — Imagine sleek missiles rising high over a crowded football stadium, headed, presumably, for targets in the Soviet Union. Or picture Lawrence, Kan., in rubble and white-powder ash, its wretched populace governed by firing squad.

Or consider this horrible and numbing scene, when Stephen Klein (Steve Guttenberg) realizes that no shelter, no store of food and water, can arrest the devastation of nuclear holocaust: "You can't see it. You can't feel it. And you can't taste it. But it's here, all around us. It's going through us like an X-ray, right into our cells."

Make no mistake. "The Day After" on ABC is an extraordinary and powerful statement in support of nuclear disarmament. Never before has a TV movie offered an audience less hope, or reason, for survival in the aftermath of nuclear attack. "The Day After" asks whether there is life after nuclear war, and millions of Americans will see Sunday night that there is not.

The film, two hours and 15 minutes long and $7 million in the making, dramatizes the imagined consequences of nuclear catastrophe in the American Midwest. The message, graphic and brutal, is one of despair: "We're lucky to be alive," Eve Dahlberg, played by Bibi Besch, tells her husband, Jim (John Cullum). "We'll see how lucky that is," he replies.

Some psychiatrists and educators warn that "The Day After" is not for the young and impressionable. Others suggest that the film be watched only in the company of friends and family.

The movie has polarized competing sides in the nuclear arms debate like no previous television show, though ABC denies that "The Day After" is political in content. The timing, though, is remarkable: the first American-made cruise missiles planned for deployment in Western Europe arrived in Britain less than a week before the air date.

A reference in the film to Pershing 2 missiles, which are planned for deployment in West Germany later this year, was stricken from the script to avoid suggestion that the two events — broadcast of "The Day After" and installation of American missiles in Europe — were in any way connected.

The film is divided roughly into two parts, the first dramatizing life as usual against an ominous backdrop of mounting world tension, the second depicting the aftermath of the attack.

"The Day After" opens with a panoramic sweep of the Kansas countryside. There are rumblings of confrontation in Europe, but no one appears particularly worried. Dr. Russell Oakes (Jason Robards) is more concerned about his daughter's plan to move to Boston. And Denise Dahlberg (Lori Lethin) is busy getting ready for her wedding, three days away.

Then the radio reports Soviet troops are invading West Germany. Moscow is being evacuated. And from long-silent tombs on the U.S. plains, Minutemen missiles are launched.

The people watch the white tails in the blue sky, knowing that Soviet missiles — perhaps earlier, perhaps later, it doesn't really matter — have also been launched. Those missiles, directed at Kansas City and the surrounding area, are in flight and unstoppable, a half-hour away.

"Where does one go from Kansas City?" a hospital colleague asks Oakes. "The Yukon? Tahiti? We're not talking about Hiroshima anymore. It was peanuts..."

The cast, with the exception of Robards and Cullum, is more or less anonymous, and with reason. "What we don't want," Nicholas Meyer, the director, said in an article in TV Guide magazine, "is another Hollywood disaster movie with viewers waiting to see Shelley Winters succumb to radiation poisoning."

The film originally was produced as a four-hour miniseries, to be broadcast over two nights, and that was considered too long to hold a troubled audience. The final version could have been shortened even more without diminishing its effectiveness. After all, once it is clear that survival is impossible, or at least meaningless, what is the point of pounding the theme?

The depiction of violence and the deterioration of body and mind might easily have been made more gruesome. On the other hand, what could be more ghastly than the sight of Oakes, his flesh scarred and blistered and his hair nearly gone, digging with his hands through the dust and debris of what once was his home, looking for some sign of his wife.

Indeed, what's left? The president, spared for the time being, assures a dying population. "There has been no surrender."

Critics' Stings Draws Response

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Comedian Skip Stephenson, upset by a critic who panned his singing, ran an ad in the Omaha World-Herald to respond. The newspaper's Roger Catlin had written that Stephenson, a fixture on NBC-TV's "Real People," tripped over the words in three numbers during a benefit performance Friday night for Stephenson's alma mater, Holy Name School.

The review also said Stephenson "almost derived wicked glee from telling jokes about religion and sex in an audience with priests and nuns in the front row."

Stephenson said his main concern was with Catlin's "wicked glee" comment.

"Any reference to sex was quite innocent, and I was not telling jokes about religion," he wrote in the ad published Wednesday. "I was telling jokes about life in parochial school as a kid."

The comedian admitted flubbing some songs, saying he didn't have enough time to rehearse.

Moore, Murphy Joining Forces

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Two of the movies' hottest comedians, Dudley Moore and Eddie Murphy, will star for Paramount Pictures in "Best Defense," with a supporting cast including Kate Capshaw and George Dzundza.

"Best Defense" is the story of a wacky engineer who builds new defense weapons and the luckless lieutenant assigned to field test the results.

The madcap comedy will be filmed on locations in the Los Angeles area under the direction of Willard Huyck.

Army's Video War Games Designed To Test Stress

By DEBRA KRAJAK
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Army is playing video war games, not to entertain the troops but to measure the effects of stress on performance.

The Army calls the test its "Star Wars game," which was designed and developed in Kansas City under a contract with the non-profit Midwest Research Institute, a top research facility.

"It's fun to give fun to take and yields scientific information," said Dr. Frederick Hegge, a scientist at the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research in suburban Washington.

"Using a game format keeps people interested and may help us get measurements that we haven't been able to get in the past," said Hegge, who, until recently, was chief of the Army's Department of Military Medical Psychophysiology, which monitored and rated the game.

As a person plays, researchers measure the effects of stress on efficiency and speed, memory, information processing, decision making, risk taking and psychomotor skills.

The game — called Strategic and Tactical Assessment Record or STAR by the institute — is played on a video display terminal. Each contest is considered a military mission in which the goal is to seek out enemy warships and destroy them in the most energy efficient way in the time allotted.

The "battlefield" is shown as a grid pattern, and a player must do battle in one quadrant before moving on. Information is provided on the screen about enemy location, ammunition and fuel supplies as players carry out a mission timed by a digital clock in the corner of the screen.

Players must keep track of battle positions and the other data while plotting strategy. Mathematical calculations are involved in determining the most direct way to travel between quadrants.

Researchers plan to incorporate their findings into Army teaching curriculums, training exercises and field manuals, Hegge said.

"What it becomes is basic information of use to people who must make military decisions," he said.

Each game can be varied. Charles Graham, MRI's principal investigator on the STAR project, said stress was introduced into a mission by cutting down on the time allowed for the mission or by reducing the amount of fuel and other resources available to the player.

The project's co-principal investigator, Harvey Cohen, said MRI did not vary physical conditions such as room temperature or study the effects of sleep loss, both of which have been found to cause added stress.

Unlike arcade video games which rely on random choices, each move in STAR is evaluated by researchers against predetermined optimal alternatives.

If a player is skillful, each game becomes more challenging — and more stressful. Hegge said a computer terminal was used for the game, because computers are now a mainstay in battle strategy and tactics.

In designing STAR, Graham said the MRI research team recognized that some people can perform well under the stress that accompanies complicated tasks, and some can't.

The need to respond quickly to a variety of tasks under stressful conditions is becoming more and more apparent during battles, Hegge said.

"More and more people have more and more information that they have to process and make decisions with. War is becoming more and more complex."

These changes are compounded, he said, when battles continue into the night, giving soldiers little chance to rest. He said soldiers always have been sleep-deprived, but it's getting worse.

"The modern battlefield...is one that goes around the clock, night and day. High technology weapons systems are capable of sighting in the dark like never before. The strategy of opponents is one of unrelenting pressure," Hegge said. "We have to understand the impact of these stresses on performance if we're going to have a functional Army."

He said the Army planned to administer STAR and other tests in a heat chamber so "they (the Army) will know how people can perform in a field setting where heat and humidity are present."

At other times, a soldier might be asked to play STAR continuously for a long period of time to evaluate the effects of sleep deprivation.

The game approach was suggested at the Midwest Research Institute by Mary Cook, head of its Biobehavioral Sciences Section, and was developed with the help of 22 college student volunteers — 13 women and nine men — who played over 800 games.

The Midwest Research Institute gave the Army its final report last summer. Modifications began this fall. Among other things, Hegge said, the Army wants to set up the game for group, rather than individual, play.

Ordination Of Women Left To Congregations

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — More than 25 women, some ordained Baptist ministers, vowed to meet and give each other encouragement after the Baptist State Convention agreed to let individual congregations decide whether to ordain women.

"I think it's a good sign. I have a feeling that there's a lot more of us out there than we knew," said the Rev. Debra Griffith-Woodberry, an ordained minister of education and youth at Ridge Road Baptist Church in Raleigh.

Women came out of a "need to get together and meet people — just for fellowship and kind of a support group," said Paula Settle, a minister of education.

Meanwhile, the convention at its 153rd annual session Wednesday elected officers and took stands on political issues ranging from the minimum drinking age to smoking on airplanes to pornography.

The convention by a 921-724 vote Tuesday recognized individual "freedom of conscience" and affirmed "the right of the local church to ordain all persons who are called to a church-related ministry."

The resolution, similar to one approved in 1975, was substituted for one submitted by the Rev. Linda Stack Morgan, associate pastor and minister of music at Jewel Baptist Church in High Point.

Her original resolution called for "undiminished support of the commitment, education, ordination and employment of women" in every part of Southern Baptist ministry.

It's not unusual for the convention to rewrite resolutions, Ms. Morgan said, adding that she was grateful for the "strong statement" it approved.

The approximately 3,500 delegates also passed six political resolutions taking the following stands:

— Opposition to formal U.S. diplomatic ties with the Vatican, because Baptists oppose direct ties between government and religious bodies.

— Support of stricter enforcement of state laws under which adult book stores selling pornographic materials are considered a nuisance.

— Support of proposed federal legislation to ban smoking on commercial flights.

— Support of a nationwide minimum drinking age of 21. Currently, North Carolina's minimum is 18 for beer and wine and 21 for liquor.

— Support of proposed federal legislation to limit alcoholic beverage advertisements and ban alcohol on commercial flights.

— Support of proposed federal legislation to bring the cable television industry under jurisdiction of the Federal Communications Commission and of urging local officials to fight "pornographic programming" when granting cable companies franchises in a community.

20,000 Patents For Bell Labs

MURRAY HILL, N.J. (AP) — Bell Laboratories, AT&T's research and development branch, was recently granted its 20,000th patent, according to a management information systems journal.

MIS Week says the research unit has thus averaged nearly a patent a day since its founding in 1925. The journal reports that many of the patents have been shared with the world and have had "substantial impact both within and out of the field of telecommunications."

GAME PLAN — From left, Charles Graham, Mary Cook, and Harvey Cohen, Midwest Research Institute researchers, test a game they developed for the Army to measure the effects of stress. (AP Laserphoto)

The latest patent was for a new etching technique that could further advance the technology of transmitting voice, data and video information on pulses of laser light through hair-thin glass fibers.

Experts Differ On Effect Of Coffee To The Heart

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Is coffee bad for the heart? Three major surveys published today say no, but two others say maybe.

The question, which has been asked for years, arose again in June when Norwegian scientists discovered that Norwegians who drank a lot of coffee had 14 percent more cholesterol in their blood than those who did not.

Cholesterol causes hardening of the arteries, and the doctors concluded coffee could at least double the risk of heart disease.

Now, in a rebuttal to five followup studies also contained in today's New England Journal of Medicine, the Norwegians say coffee consumption's link to cholesterol in their population could result from how Norwegians drink their coffee — black and boiled.

"Not only the method of growing, roasting and brewing but also the duration and temperature of the extraction process may influence the biologic properties of the ultimate brew," said Dr. Dag S. Thelle and colleagues from the University of Tromsø in Asgard, Norway.

To check the Norwegians' results, five medical teams around the world analyzed the results of large population studies. Three found no link between coffee and cholesterol. One found that coffee raises cholesterol only in young people, while the other suggested it does so only in women.

"As far as serum cholesterol goes, I know of no reason for people in the United States who consume coffee in customary amounts to be concerned," Dr. Richard B. Shekelle said in an interview.

At Rush Medical College in Chicago, Shekelle and other doctors analyzed the habits of 1,900 middle-aged men and found no relation between coffee and cholesterol.

Dr. Albert Hofman and others from Erasmus University Medical School in Rotterdam looked at data gathered from 10,532 people in The Netherlands. They also could not confirm the link.

"We have no explanation for the discrepancy between our findings and those of the Norwegian group," they wrote, "but we are hesitant to accept coffee consumption as a major determinant of cholesterol levels."

A similar review of data from 5,098 people, undertaken by Dr. Mary Grace Kovar and others from the National Center for Health Statistics in Hyattsville, Md., also found no evidence of an association between coffee and cholesterol.

Two other groups, one in West Germany and the other in Australia, partially confirmed the Norwegian findings.

At the Clincial Institute for Heart Attack Research at the Medical University Clinic in Heidelberg, Dr. Lenore Arab and others looked at coffee and cholesterol in 387 people in their late teens and early 20s, and at 383 in their late 60s and early 70s.

Although there was "absolutely no hint of a trend" among the elderly, the researchers found a correlation similar to the Norwegians' among the young people.

In the Australian study, Megan Shirlow and Colin Mathers of the University of Sydney looked at total caffeine consumption — tea, cola and chocolate as well as coffee — in 4,757 people. They found a link between caffeine intake and cholesterol in women but not in men.

Girl Victim In Vicious Assault

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — An 11-year-old Sanford girl was in serious condition at North Carolina Memorial Hospital on Wednesday after allegedly being sexually assaulted, authorities said.

The girl was allegedly attacked Tuesday in the auditorium of W.B. Wickers Middle School shortly after school was dismissed, Sanford Assistant Police Chief Wayne Poe said.

Poe said injuries to the girl, who was not identified, were severe, but declined to elaborate.

George Lannie Martin, 34, has been charged with kidnapping, first-degree sex offense, assault on an officer and resisting arrest, Poe said. Martin was being held without bond in the Lee County Jail.

Martin's sister, Mary Elizabeth Martin, and Gary Lee Harrington were both being held in the jail under $5,000 bond each after being charged with accessory after the fact, Poe said.

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A court has sentenced a Filipino man and his wife to eight to 20 years in prison for fraud, six years after they refused to return $1 million an American bank sent to them by mistake. They say it is nearly all spent.
