YOUTH IN GOVERNMENT DAY — Students from Rose High School listen to Mayor-elect Janice Buck Thursday at the city's council chambers. The students got a first-hand look at the operations of city government including a mock City Council meeting with two topics for discussion: discuss whether or not the city of Greenville should have a Sunday closing ordinance, and discuss whether the mayor and City Council should be elected every two or four years and should they be elected by ward or at large. Also on hand were various city department heads. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Dairy And Tobacco Programs Advance

By JIM DRINKARD

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has approved and sent to the House a major new dairy price subsidy program that would for the first time pay farmers not to produce milk.

Approval was expected before the House adjourns for the year. But it remained far from certain whether President Reagan would sign the legislation into law.

The bill would also alter the nation's tobacco price support program and make low-grade government-owned corn available to drought-stricken farmers for livestock feed.

By a unanimous voice vote, the Senate late Thursday consented to a compromise version of the bill worked out Tuesday by House and Senate negotiators.

The administration had supported the legislation during Senate consideration, but under pressure from the White House budget office changed positions when it came before the House. The administration feared the program would be too expensive.

A spokesman for Agriculture Secretary John Block said today no decision had been made on whether to recommend a veto, adding that Block was leaning against the bill.

But dairy interests, which developed the bill and pushed it through Congress, were confident there would be no veto. For one thing, killing the bill would leave in place the current, universally unpopular dairy program, which has failed to reduce milk surpluses.

Even more crucial might be the political damage of a veto to several Republicans up for re-election next year at a time when the GOP is concerned about retaining control of the Senate.

The Senate Agriculture Committee chairman, Sen. Jesse Helms, was depending on the bill's tobacco provisions to demonstrate his legislative effectiveness to constituents in North Carolina, where he faces a tough re-election challenge.

Also concerned were:

—Sen. Roger Jepsen, thought to be in political trouble in Iowa, who helped draft part of the bill protecting cattle and hog producers from the adverse effects of a quick reduction in dairy herds.

—Sen. Rudy Boschwitz of Minnesota, one of the main backers of the dairy bill's "paid diversion" provisions, which were widely viewed as especially beneficial to his region.

Under the legislation, the government would for the first time set up a program to pay dairy farmers to trim their output by up to 30 percent. The 15-month program, to begin early in 1984, is designed to reduce large government purchases of cheese, butter and dried milk made to keep dairy prices up to the guaranteed support level of $13.10 per hundred pounds.

Other provisions would trim the support price by 50 cents, assess dairy farmers 50 cents per hundred pounds to help pay for the program, and bill farmers for another 15-cent assessment to finance a dairy marketing and promotion program.

The bill also includes a two-year freeze on price support levels for flue-cured tobacco, sought by growers to help make their leaf more competitive in the world market. And it would put an eventual end to the practice of leasing by absentee owners of tobacco-growing rights to farmers who do the actual cultivation.

And, in a provision inserted by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the bill would make available up to 160 million bushels of government-owned damaged corn to drought-stricken farmers for use as animal feed. Farmers could buy the corn at bargain rates, but would have to pay to transport it to their farms.

Approve Borrowing Another $101 Billion

Congress Shrugs Off A Tide Of Red Ink

By JIM LUTHER

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Climaxing a year of hand-wringing about the evils of federal deficits, Congress is leaving for a two-month vacation after doing little about the red ink except to authorize the borrowing of another $101 billion.

A compromise plan raising the limit on borrowing to $1.49 trillion was accepted by voice vote by the Senate Thursday night, sending the measure to expected final approval in the House today.

Action on the credit bill would clear away the last major obstacle to wrapping up the first session of the 98th Congress, and allow the federal government to resume its borrowing.

But for an unusually large amount of cash on hand, the government would have been without authority to pay many of its bills since Nov. 1, when the old borrowing limit of $1.389 trillion was reached. The night before, in a protest against the prospect of $200-billion-a-year deficits for the foreseeable future, the Senate had denied President Reagan's request for a full year's borrowing authority of $1.615 trillion.

The protest produced no results. The last opportunity for Congress to do something major this year to combat those deficits disappeared Thursday when the House refused, by a 214-204 vote, to even consider a modest package of tax increases and spending reductions.

Even so, the Senate planned to consider today a $28 billion measure balanced about evenly between tax increases and spending reductions. But any action at this point would be merely symbolic, since no House action would come this year.

Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., asked the Finance Committee, which he chairs, to plan to consider a combination of spending cuts and higher taxes that would cut the deficit by about $150 billion over the next four years. Again, even if the panel went along with Dole, Congress could do nothing about the measure until it reconvenes on Jan. 23.

But congressional leaders agree almost without exception that the lawmakers are unlikely to consider anything so controversial in an election year. Thus, any significant action would be delayed until 1985, and by that time, many economists say, the rising deficits may have stopped the economic recovery dead in its tracks.

The deficit has been the No. 1 topic of conversation in Congress this year. Democrats generally have advocated tax increases to help erase the red ink; Republicans favor spending cuts without touching defense. President Reagan refuses to accept any tax increases; House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said no to further domestic spending reductions.

Nevertheless, Dole and Rostenkowski put together their own plans, hoping to convince colleagues — and Reagan — that something should be done. Dole could not even get his own committee to approve his proposal. Rostenkowski's Ways and Means Committee accepted his $8 billion plan, only to see it rejected by the House Thursday.

O'Neill put the blame on Republicans, who voted almost as a bloc against taking up the bill, whose main burden would have fallen on upper-income investors and the life-insurance industry.

"The next time I see Republican crocodile tears about the deficits, I will ask them where their party was today," O'Neill said.

Rostenkowski and O'Neill were upset by the lobbying against the provision in the bill restricting use of tax-exempt bonds for private projects. But Republicans were upset also by the Democrats' proposed rules for debating the measure, which would have allowed the House to vote on limiting the third step of Reagan's individual tax cuts enacted in 1981.

That amendment, which the House approved once earlier in the year, was being pushed by first-term House Democrats, who had won election after campaigning on pledges to restrict the tax cut. But while those Democrats sought to hold down the tax cut for middle- and upper-income Americans, Republicans viewed that prospect as a direct attack on Reagan's economic policies.

Arafat Loyalists Say Camp Is Recaptured In Counterattack

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP)

— PLO chairman Yasser Arafat's loyalists say they recaptured their last stronghold today with a pre-dawn counterattack on Syrian-backed rebels in the battered Baddawi refugee camp.

The counterattack by the loyalists set off a barrage of shelling by PLO rebels and Syrian forces. Shells exploded in the northern outskirts of Tripoli, the hills beyond, and the port city's east side.

As Palestine Liberation Organization officials told reporters the loyalists had recaptured 85 percent of the camp, three shells fell near Arafat's political headquarters in Tripoli, shaking the building and breaking glass.

In Beirut, French peacekeeping troops were on alert today after Shiite Moslems warned of reprisals to avenge this week's air raids by France and Israel on Shiite radicals in eastern Lebanon.

In southern Lebanon, an Israeli soldier was killed and six others wounded when a roadside bomb detonated next to a military convoy Thursday night, the Israeli command said. The attackers were not found.

A PLO loyalist said Arafat's forces opened their assault on Baddawi at 3 a.m., and the PLO chairman prayed in a mosque southeast of the camp as the fighting raged.

The loyalist, who asked not to be identified, said Arafat's troops captured 21 Syrian and rebel prisoners.

The rebels, who want to oust Arafat because they say he has abandoned the military struggle against Israel, drove into the camp Wednesday after capturing the PLO chairman's other northern Lebanon stronghold at the Nahr El-Bared refugee camp.

There have been conflicting casualty reports since the rebels began their Nov. 3 assault against the two camps. An International Red Cross official said Thursday that 350 civilians and fighters on both sides had been killed and nearly 1,400 wounded between Nov. 3 and Wednesday.

Guerrilla mutineers had vowed Thursday that if Arafat did not leave Tripoli they would bomb his hideouts "down to the earth." But Arafat said he would leave only when Tripoli's leaders tell him to go. The Red Cross reported 350 people killed and 1,360 wounded since the PLO war broke out.

In Beirut, the U.S. Marines were bringing in fresh troops today from ships offshore to replace the 1,800-man peacekeeping unit that was the target of a suicide bomb attack Oct. 23 that killed 239 Americans. The incoming 22nd Marine Amphibious Unit includes Marines who spent a week fighting on Grenada after the U.S.-led invasion of that Caribbean island.

The Voice of Lebanon radio said French troops in the multinational peacekeeping force went on alert in expectation of more counterattacks in response to the French bombing of a Shiite radical outpost Thursday.

Sheik Mohammed Shameddintal, the spiritual leader of the Shiite community in Lebanon, said France's justifications for the air raids, "are insufficient and unacceptable."

Abu Yahya, the military leader of the Shiite Amal militia, threatened attacks on Israeli positions in southern Lebanon.

"We shall send them suicide men wearing their death shrouds wired with explosives to detonate themselves," Yahya said.

A French checkpoint in Beirut was fired on Thursday night with machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades, and the French returned fire. There were no casualties reported.

The incident occurred about five hours after French Super Etendard jets completed bombing runs on a pro-Iranian Shiite post outside Baalbek, 40 east of Beirut.

Lebanese police said at least 39 people were killed and 150 wounded in the raids, which were in reprisal for the recent suicide truck-bombing attacks on French, U.S. and Israeli troops.

Sally To Get Second Ride

SPACE CENTER, Houston

(AP) — NASA is planning its busiest year ever in 1984, with astronauts on 10 space shuttle flights to launch satellites, monitor experiments and test rocket belts that let them fly in space unattached to the shuttle.

Commander Robert L. Crippen, who has flown the most shuttle missions so far, is scheduled for two more missions, and six women will be among the 50 astronauts to go into orbit next year, the space agency said Thursday.

The first flight — Mission 41B scheduled for Jan. 29 — will include a spacewalk by Bruce McCandless to test the rocket belt, called the Manned Maneuvering Unit. If that test is successful, the unit will be used by George D. Nelson on Mission 41C to repair a broken satellite.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration identifies missions by code, such as 41B. The "4" designates the fiscal year of the flight — 1984. The "1" is the launch site — Kennedy Space Center. And the "B" indicates the sequence.

More than a dozen satellites will be launched, while Mission 41E on July 14 is to carry a secret Defense Department cargo and an unidentified cargo specialist from the department.

Sally K. Ride, who was America's first woman in space, will be joined by Kathryn Sullivan, Crippen and two other astronauts for Mission 41G, set for launch Aug. 30.

Ms. Ride's husband, Steven Hawley, is scheduled for Mission 41D, set for launch on June 4.

Two other husband-wife teams are also on the 1984 roster. Dr. Rhea Seddon will fly on Mission 41F on Aug. 9, while her husband, Robert L. Gibson will fly on 41B. Dr. Anna Fisher will fly on 41H in September and her husband, Dr. William F. Fisher, will fly on 51C in December.

DA Blocking A Prison Inquiry

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)

— A district attorney has refused to endorse a State Bureau of Investigation probe at Piedmont Correctional Center until prison officials provide specific details of their allegations.

James E. Roberts of Concord, whose district includes the high-rise prison in Rowan County, said Thursday he had refused to request an SBI investigation "because I do not understand what (the Department of Correction) wants us to do and I have still not gotten a response."

"If they show me an indictable offense, we'll go with it," Roberts said, but he indicated skepticism about DOC findings revealed to him so far.

Correction officials said Thursday additional information was mailed to Roberts' office Wednesday.

Andrew A. Vanore Jr.,

senior deputy attorney general for the state, said that because Correction Secretary James Woodard asked for SBI assistance, the investigation did not require Roberts' concurrence.

Rae H. McNamara, director of prisons, suspended PCC Superintendent Robert Hinton without pay Oct. 25 in a shake-up that also resulted in several guard officers being fired, demoted or transferred.

At the time, Mrs. McNamara cited alleged falsification of records, personal misconduct by staff members and excessive force against inmates.

Woodward requested SBI assistance Nov. 7, saying a departmental investigation had uncovered "some possible criminal violations" involving use of force on inmates.

Dear Abby

Woman Launches Mercy Mission Of Matrimony

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have been reading your column for years in the Scranton Tribune but never needed to write before this. I am 62 and have been taught from childhood to help my fellowman.

I know a wonderful 27-year-old man who is as nice as they come. He's served four years in the U.S. Army, believes in God, and has no prejudices whatsoever.

Can you rush me a list of missionaries, institutions, religious orders and lonely hearts magazines where he could find a nice girl who maybe has had a hard life and would appreciate a tall, handsome, slim, young white man? Religion doesn't matter. He could give her a nice home, children, marriage and a happy future. He doesn't care if she's divorced, widowed or has had a child out of wedlock. And it's even OK if she's Oriental or American Indian. Thank you.

A FRIEND IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR FRIEND: Your friend sounds like a fine young man, but if you want to help him, please encourage him to find his own wife. He can begin by socializing where decent, worthwhile people spend their time. He could volunteer his services to the elderly, disabled, disadvantaged children and veterans. All these people have friends and relatives. All he has to do is let them know he is interested in meeting a nice woman. Nice young women are standing in line to meet a decent young man.

DEAR ABBY: Is it right for my family (brothers and sisters) to invite my ex-husband and his new wife to family parties where I am invited even after I have specifically requested them not to? And to add insult to injury, his new wife was the woman who broke up our marriage. They are all aware of how he mistreated me during our marriage, but they continue to include him in family gatherings.

I want to be with my family—particularly for the holidays—but not if he is going to be there.

HURT IN BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

DEAR HURT: Since your family is aware that your "ex" has mistreated you and you are uncomfortable in his presence, but they invite him anyway, then they have made a choice. And it's not you.

DEAR ABBY: I wish kids would stop calling it "making love" when it's simply "having sex."

Sex is the icing on the cake. To make a cake, you assemble the right ingredients, combine them properly, bake and cool. Then apply the icing!

Thanks for listening.

DISGUSTED IN SAPULPA, OKLA.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Right! The most important part is letting the cake cool.

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago you ran a letter that still bothers me. It was signed "Can't Decide." She couldn't decide if she should marry the "wonderful, considerate, generous" man she had been dating for two years because he was "short, stocky and bald." She said she was afraid that any children they might have would look like him.

Abby, I'm so glad you advised her to not marry him because she was unsure. I have an even greater concern for any children they might have: They might grow up to think like her.

Report Says Person's Health Shows Steady Improvement

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Considering the current epidemics — AIDS, teenage pregnancy, genital herpes — there's room for improvement in the nation's report card on health.

Dr. Elizabeth Whelan, a crusader who describes herself as a bearer of good news, allows that. But taking the long view, she says Americans never have been healthier.

Her "long view" starts at 1900. She provides statistical support for her claim in a report, "America's Health, A Century of Progress But a Time of Despair."

The report has just been issued by the organization Dr. Whelan heads, the American Council on Science and Health, a consumer education group that tries to present scientifically-balanced evaluations of issues relating to food, chemicals, the environment and health.

The new report from the group, which has offices in New York City and Summit, N.J., says common measures of the health status of a population — life expectancy, death rate and infant mortality — have improved significantly among Americans during the 20th century.

"Despair," referred to in the report's title, refers to concern engendered by health scares, Dr. Whelan said in an interview. She said her group's investigations show many of the "scares" are unfounded or on weak ground scientifically.

"Allegations that the health of Americans has deteriorated as a result of modern lifestyle and technology are not supported by national health statistics," she said.

"On the contrary, these statistics indicate that Americans are healthier than ever before."

"But it seems that every day we are treated to a new health scare story. We are constantly being bombarded with allegations that the health of Americans has worsened due to poor dietary habits and exposure to man-made products such as food additives, pesticides and pollutants."

"This simply isn't true. Certainly, there is much room for improvement, but with a few specific exceptions, the technological and lifestyle changes which have occurred during the last eight decades have improved, rather than harmed, Americans' health."

She said an American baby born today can be expected to live 27 years longer than one born in 1900. In addition, the age-adjusted death rate of Americans declined 53 percent from 1900 to 1950 and another 27 percent from 1950 to 1977.

The ACSH report defines life expectancy as "the average number of years of life remaining to individuals of a given age."

"During this century, there have been dramatic gains in this important health index," it says.

"The gains in life expectancy were especially evident in the first half of the century, and were largely attributable to the control of infectious and parasitic diseases, which were major killers of the young."

"From 1900 to 1950, life expectancy at birth increased 38 percent, while the life expectancy of a 45-year-old person rose only 15 percent."

"From 1950 to 1980, however, life expectancy at birth increased 8 percent whereas life expectancy at age 45 increased 13 percent."

"This appears to be a major reversal of an historical trend which may be due, in large part, to the recent drop of deaths due to cardiovascular diseases."

"Population statistics suggest that under ideal societal conditions, the average age of death would be approximately 85 years of age."

"During this century Americans have rapidly approached that ideal. In 1900, the average person died 38 years prematurely; in 1950, 17 years prematurely; in 1980, only 12 years prematurely. "Moreover, violent death accounts for three of the years by which we fall short of the ideal."

The report also said age-adjusted death rates from heart disease fell 18 percent in the 20 years from 1950 to 1970. From 1970 to 1977, the heart disease death rate dropped 2.6 percent a year.

It said mortality rates from stroke declined about 25 percent from 1950 to 1970, and the pattern of decline has continued.

The American Council on Science and Health, a non-profit group directed and advised by a panel of scientists, receives funds from foundations, individuals and industry.

Homemaker's Haven

The increased fire hazards associated with wood burning stoves have been well documented. The media has been filled with the "do's" and "don'ts" of installing and using wood burning stoves. One problem that hasn't received much attention, though, is what to do with the small child who doesn't understand the potential dangers of wood burners.

Crawling babies are out to explore and the feeling of objects with their fingers and hands is one of their ways of learning. Letting them learn the hard way (by touching the hot stove) is certainly not a good idea. Thinking that the intense heat a few inches from the stove will stop them isn't true either, because they simply cannot recognize the intense heat is warming them of danger.

And what about the toddler, the child old enough to climb out of the playpen and half walk, half stumble across the room? Even slightly older children, who do not know the hazards and do know better than to touch hot objects may become so absorbed in playing (especially if there's more than one child) they roll, fall or run into the stove.

There appears to be no easy or clearcut solution for safeguarding children against wood burning stoves. For the crawler, a barrier of some sort seems to be the only answer, especially if the adult might be moving about in different rooms. A decorative fence, (metal, to avoid a fire hazard) two or three feet in height should be sufficient.

For children who are a little older the solution isn't as simple. It will take a combination of methods to get the message across to the older child; a serious concerned effort to explain the dangers of hot objects; supervision; and seeing to it that play areas do not include the room where the wood stove is located.

Preplanning for where your stove will be located is a point not to be overlooked. If you have children and plan to install a wood burner, one way to avoid some of the problems is by not locating the stove in their normal play area or find a new play area for them.

Cooking Is Fun

A while back, a friend sent me a gift from Hawaii: a can of glazed macadamias. Each nut had a thin, crunchy, candy coating. Absolutely marvelous tasting. I couldn't stop munching them.

Then and there I decided to offer you a copycat recipe for these glazed macadamias. With the help of some candy-making experts, the recipe evolved and it follows.

One comment. If you find a can of these glazed macadamias in a food shop and buy them, you'll notice that their coating looks white. The coating on our homemade glazed macadamias may be on the white side or a golden color — it will depend on the oven of the range in which they are baked. But whatever the color of the coating, the glazed macadamias will still taste wonderful.

Why the variation? Because it is normal for range ovens to be up to 25 degrees below or above the temperature set on the oven control. This latitude isn't significant because it is taken into account by professionally adept testers when they issue recipes. For example, in our recipe for Copycat Glazed Macadamia Nuts, the baking time is 40 to 50 minutes. This time range offsets the vagaries of the ovens of ranges.

COPYCAT GLAZED MACADAMIA NUTS

3 cups macadamia nuts, see Note

1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup light corn syrup
1 tablespoon corn oil
1/8 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup butter

Spread nuts in a single layer in a 13 by 9 by 2-inch baking pan. Bake in a preheated 250-degree oven for 5 minutes; reserve. Leave oven control at 250 degrees.

In a heavy 2-quart saucepan stir together sugar, syrup, oil and salt. Stirring constantly over medium heat, bring to a boil; boil without stirring for 5 minutes. Off heat, stir in butter until melted.

Pour this white syrup over reserved nuts, stirring constantly to coat evenly. Bake in the 250-degree oven, stirring several times, until lightly browned — 50 to 60 minutes.

Sprinkle with extra sugar (about 1/4 cup); toss to coat evenly. At once spread on cookie sheets to cool. Separate into individual nuts. Cool completely. Store in a tightly covered container.

Makes 3 cups.

NOTE: We used the macadamia nuts that come in jars or cans and are salted.

2 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup fine honey graham cracker crumbs
1/4 cup finely chopped

walnuts
4 large eggs, separated
14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk
1 teaspoon grated lime rind
1-3rd cup lime juice

Melt butter; off heat stir in crumbs and nuts. Pat half of mixture over bottom of an 8 by 8 by 2-inch baking dish. Beat together yolks, condensed milk, lime rind and lime juice until blended. With a clean beater, beat egg whites until stiff; fold into lime mixture. Pour over crumbs; sprinkle with remaining crumb mixture. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until crumbs are lightly browned — 30 to 35 minutes. (A cake tester inserted in center will not come out clean.) Cool (it will sink), then chill. Makes 8 servings.

One other problem that comes to mind is that children are imitators. This becomes a problem when small children try to "imitate" (or help from their viewpoint) when adults take hot plans or water off the stove or make coffee or tea on the stove or even add wood to the fire. If you are going these things in front of your children, make sure they know it is a forbidden task for them or that it is for adults only.

Neighborly Feud

North Carolina and Virginia, good neighbors most of the time, have always had difficulty in agreeing on mutual concerns over highways and waterways. The current fight over pumping water from Lake Gaston, in North Carolina, to the Tidewater area of Virginia is no exception. It has a longstanding precedent in the fight over keeping the Chowan River clean.

Virginia has lower standards for water quality than does North Carolina. As a result, pollution in Tidwater Virginia has cut into the water supply for the Virginia Beach area. As a result, Virginia now wants to pump clean water from North Carolina to its coastal area — while still refusing to clamp down on its own pollution.

The Chowan River has been a bone of contention for years, primarily because North Carolina says lets clean it up and Virginia says let's do it gently. That case is likely to wind up federal court for mediation.

Somehow, based on the lack of mutual concern over the Chowan, it appears to us the Lake Gaston-Virginia Beach dispute probably will wind up in the same court. We only hope that the court, or whatever type of mediator is involved, chooses to protect the party that is concerned about the future and not just the present. So far, that concerned party has always been south of the Virginia-North Carolina border.

Changes Beneficial

One of Greenville's oldest shopping centers will soon be extensively renovated and sporting a new name.

Pitt Plaza will become the Plaza after it is expanded from 225,000 to 300,000 square feet and is developed into an enclosed environmentally controlled mall.

Pitt Plaza was developed 18 years ago with covered, but open, walkways connecting the stores. Since that time the enclosed, heated and air conditioned mall has become the norm for shopping centers. Thus The Plaza will be modernized to fit current shopper's needs.

John Kane, president of J.M. Kane & Co. which owns the center, said the number of stores will also be increased from 30 to 40.

After 18 years, The Plaza still enjoys a good location convenient to large residential areas of the city. It is to everyone's benefit that there will be major improvements at the shopping center.

No Crisis Talk

NEW YORK (AP) — When the nation's oil chieftains huddled in their annual conference this week at a New York hotel, talk of a crisis was nowhere to be heard.

There still is a glut of oil on the world market, and oil prices are stable. Oil company profits are picking up, and the companies' stock prices have rebounded from last winter, when dissension within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries helped push down oil prices.

But the outlook for 1984 is far from clear. Here are some questions and answers to help explain what the experts see ahead for oil prices and supplies:

Q. Are prices going up or down?

A. At the moment, neither. Oil prices on the international and domestic markets have moved very little in the past few months, although traders say they see signs that the next move may be downward. From the consumer's point of view that is good: Gasoline prices have slipped about 3 cents a gallon in the past two months and continue to edge lower, while heating oil prices have been stable.

Q. What about next year?

A. Because the oil markets are so volatile, few analysts are willing to offer forecasts of specific prices. But most would agree that oil prices are more likely to go down than up, at least for the next year or so. That is partly because experts believe oil will remain in excess supply for at least a few more years. Even so, no one is willing to rule out the possibility of a quick turn of events.

Q. What could change the picture?

A. War, for one thing. Experts say an escalation of the Iran-Iraq war could lead to a closing, at least temporarily, of the Persian Gulf shipping lanes through which nearly one-fifth of the world's crude oil moves. Iran has threatened to close the gulf if Iraq uses its new French-made warplanes to cripple Iran's oil terminals. Such a closure would be expected to trigger a sudden jump in oil prices, although it is less certain that the higher prices would stick.

Q. What about a price decline?

A. Some analysts see a good chance that oil prices will fall in the months ahead, assuming there is no interruption of oil shipments from the Middle East. Oil prices fell a few dollars a barrel in 1982, mainly because demand for oil was dwindling. Last March, OPEC matched the lower prices being charged by non-OPEC producers by cutting its prices $5 a barrel, or 15 percent. Since then, prices worldwide have stabilized.

Q. How long will that stability last?

A. Clifton C. Garvin Jr., the chairman of Exxon Corp., said at the oil executives meeting this week in New York that his company expects "a fairly significant period in which there is a lot more crude oil than there is demand" and that oil prices will not rise faster than the general inflation rate "for some years." Some industry analysts, however, think the oil glut will again become such a burden to OPEC that it eventually will lower prices again.

NEW YORK (AP) — In spite of the recovery in home building, home selling and home financing, these are worrisome days in the housing industry. Every time the industry meets, in fact, the worries seem to predominate.

Worries about the big federal budget deficit, worries about the level of interest rates, worries about the availability of financing.

To make matters worse, there are even some concerns about the demographics that support the industry — about the 42 million people who will pass age 30 in this decade, considered the prime age for thinking about buying a nest.

As it turns out, not all of those young

WASHINGTON — A secret session of the Senate Finance Committee with Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker not only explains the recent spasm of tax increase fever but deepens concern whether the Reagan recovery will last through the presidential election.

Senators left that Oct. 26 meeting with the nation's chief central banker trembling, believing that only a major "deficit-reduction" package containing painful tax increases can prevent newly-escalating interest rates. Since President Reagan promptly and predictably shot down higher taxes, cooler heads outside the Senate fear Volcker will prove a self-fulfilling prophet by keeping money tight.

Such fears are voiced by non-political economists at the Treasury and non-economic politicians at the Reagan campaign committee. They are well-founded. Not only did the president last June in his single most important appointment extend Volcker as chairman without getting a clear policy commitment from him; there still has been no unambiguous expression to him of Reagan's desires for growth, not austerity.

The distance between Volcker-nomics and Reaganomics was measured at 11 a.m. Oct. 26, when the chairman quietly slipped into the private conference room back of the Finance Committee hearing chamber for an unannounced meeting. The senators were not permitted to bring staffers and were told the meeting was strictly off-the-record.

Volcker's prose, as usual, was enveloped in cigar smoke and ambiguity. Nevertheless, Volcker was unequivocal in predicting interest rates would climb unless the deficit goes down. While throwing out his usual caveat of preference for spending cuts over tax increases, his formula for the best way to boost taxes was more specific than in his public declarations.

His first choice, Volcker said, would be a consumption tax. Told by the senators that is politically impossible, the chairman stressed that higher revenue must come from lower-middle to middle-income taxpayers rather than upperbracket investors. He then suggested scrapping Reagan's cherished plan to index brackets to protect ordinary taxpayers from inflation (coupled with similarly austere treatment of indexing for Social Security and other entitlements).

Not surprisingly, some — though not all — Finance members left the meeting with this message: If they wanted Volcker's Fed to ease money, they had better get cracking with tax increases. Shortly thereafter, Finance Chairman Robert Dole unveiled a $55-billion tax boost which would cut back indexing and impose a surtax on individual income taxes. Closely fitting Volcker's soak-the-middle-class formula, it was rolling toward committee approval until derailed by the president's promised veto.

Apart from the questionable propriety of the central banker playing tax lobbyist against the president's program, the incident raises apprehension about Volcker's intentions. His words to the senators gave no hope for relaxation of the tighter money policy begun by the Fed in May.

That policy is viewed at the Treasury as "extremely tight" today, with failure to create new bank reserves keeping high the federal funds rate (inter-bank borrowing). According to Treasury analysis, only statistical and seasonal aberrations save the Fed from falling under the money-supply target range. That reflects Volcker's overriding fear of inflation to the virtual exclusion of concern with economic growth.

The recovery that Reagan's political managers consider indispensable to a narrow re-election victory is now imperiled by a central bank that mistakes present deflation for future inflation. We reported in August that administration officials wanted a Reagan-Volcker summit to prevent the Fed from aborting the recovery. No such meeting has been held as 1984 approaches and Volcker-nomics threatens to engulf Reaganomics.

False Fronts Make For 'Modern' Bronx

South Bronx, and while he thought it might improve the morale of people commuting from Westport and Greenwich every day, he didn't believe it would change the lives of those who lived in the area.

"Every four years all the presidential candidates visit the South Bronx with television crews, and each one announces the first thing he will do if he is elected is rebuild the neighborhood. Then, if he gets in office, he gives the money to El Salvador."

"Do you have a better solution than covering up your blight with vinyl decals?" I asked him.

"Yup. After the next election we should invite Castro to build a 10,000-foot airplane runway in the South Bronx."

"Are you crazy?" I shouted in the middle of a Madison Avenue gridlock. "Castro would send in soldiers disguised as workers to export Marxist revolution. The South Bronx would become a dagger pointed right at Scarsdale. We couldn't stand for that."

"That's the idea. No president could allow it. So he would send in the U.S. Marines and the 82nd Airborne to stop the construction."

"But that could mean war."

"The South Bronx looks like a war zone now. How much more damage could the Marines do?"

"All right, so the United States invades the South Bronx. How does that help you?"

"After the fighting stops, the Americans will have to ship the Cuban workers back to Havana and then the Bronx will become a United States problem. The Americans will have to send in army engineers and AID officials to help us get on our feet. The president will go to Congress and ask for millions of dollars to keep the borough from falling into the communist camp. He could make the Bronx the showcase of the Western Hemisphere, and persuade everyone the United States will really help those who turn their backs on Castro."

We got into another gridlock on Fifth Avenue. "Mr. Cortez, you make a very good case, but it's hard to believe that any president would get excited about Castro's plans for the South Bronx. The U.S. government wrote off your borough long ago."

"They might ignore our borough politically, but they can't afford to overlook the 10,000-foot runway. You don't think we're going to build it to attract tourists to the South Bronx do you?"

"It's the wildest idea I've ever heard of," I said.

Mr. Cortez replied, "It isn't half as crazy as covering up a city's urban decay with a bunch of phony vinyl fronts."

Strength For Today

In the fourth chapter of the Gospel of John we encounter the conversation Jesus had with the Samaritan woman at Jacob's well.

Jesus asked the woman for a drink, which in itself astonished her for the Jews and Samaritans had no dealings with each other. If you knew what the gift of God is and who I am, said Jesus, you would ask me and I would give you water so satisfying that, upon drinking it, you would never thirst again.

Worries Dominate The Housing Industry

Francisco meeting this week of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions. This worry, as so many other housing worries, involved Uncle Sam and his behavior regarding finances.

The housing, financing and real estate people consider the old spendthrift's behavior to be both outlandish and dangerous, especially when he sends up little signals suggesting the housing people have it too good.

Too good, that is, in the sense of having a disproportionate share of the market for funds, which they claim is an arrogant exaggeration. Uncle Sam, the cause of our problems, is blaming us, the housing people say.

A U.S. League study suggests that the old spendthrift has become a monster in the marketplace. It produces this evidence:

— In the 1950s, the federal government's share of total funds raised in the money and capital markets averaged only 4.8 percent a year.

— In the 1960s, Uncle Sam's share increased to an annual average of 7.1 percent, or about 14 cents of every available dollar of financing.

— In the 1970s the rate continued to rise. Uncle Sam took 15.1 percent of money in the financing pool, a pool from which business and individuals also seek loans.

All this, as you have surmised, is preliminary to an even bigger shock. The people at the U.S. League ask you to savor this bit of evidence:

"Through the first three years of the 1980s, the federal government's share of the capital pool has been 26 percent — one dollar of every four — and the really large federal deficits are yet to come."

The housing people hope that this worry of theirs, along with all the other things they are worrying about, is not in vain. They hope you get their point, which is:

If you can't afford to finance a house, don't blame the financiers or the builders. Instead, blame Uncle Sam and his profligate ways. And ask him to straighten out.

N.C. Will Have Aspirin Plant

PILOT MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — A New Jersey drug company plans to open an aspirin-manufacturing plant in Pilot Mountain in about a month and hire 200 people by late 1985, a company official said Thursday.

PharmaControl Corp. will buy a building in Pilot Mountain and hire 25 to 30 specialists over the next six months, said Thomas Carscadden, the chief financial officer.

Carscadden said PharmaControl's board of directors decided Wednesday night to set up the operation in Pilot Mountain.

The company will manufacture a patented soluble aspirin. The company is negotiating with four larger drug companies to market the product, Carscadden said.

PharmaControl will pay Workmen's Federal Savings & Loan Association $485,000 for a 32,000-square-foot building and 10 acres of land, he said.

The building will be expanded by 60,000 square feet "almost immediately," Carscadden said, and the company has an option to buy 30 more acres.

PharmaControl picked the Pilot Mountain site instead of one in New Jersey because the New Jersey site would have cost two to four times more, Carscadden said.

"There's a plentiful labor supply here to employ technical and non-technical people," he said. "The state and local chambers of commerce were extremely helpful over those in New Jersey, where we originally intended to locate."

Low-Cost Loan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — First-time homebuyers may apply for a limited number of 10.35 percent mortgage loans beginning Dec. 5 because of a record $120 million bond sale authorized by the North Carolina Housing Finance Agency.

The bond sale is expected to provide from 2,500 to 2,700 fixed-rate loans for low and moderate income families, agency officials said. Applicants must have a sales contract in hand before they file a loan application with a lender.

Silence On 'Smokeout' By Tobacco Companies

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

While the American Cancer Society predicted up to one fourth of the smokers in the nation's biggest tobacco-producing state would abstain during the Great American Smokeout, tobacco companies kept a low profile.

"It's a free country, said a spokesman for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. "People can choose what they want to do as long as it is legal."

Karen Bohr of the Charlotte chapter of the cancer society said a telephone poll conducted by her office showed that one of four smokers in the state planned to participate in the smokeout, although no figures are available on the number of smokers in North Carolina.

Even in Winston-Salem, home of R.J. Reynolds, some 300 students at two schools agreed to be "adopted" by non-smoking friends who helped them abstain.

But Bobbi Zaunbrecher, executive director of the Forsyth County chapter of the cancer society, said she didn't see the smokeout as a slap at the tobacco industry.

"We don't look at it as a pro and con thing," she said.

"We're not against the tobacco industry. We're just trying to inform the public about the relationship between smoking and lung cancer."

North Carolinians were inventive in finding ways to quit the smoking habit for the prescribed 24-hour period on Thursday.

"Early this morning, I prepared a platter of celery and carrot sticks and I plan to eat one every time I want to smoke today," said Pat Lineback of Asheville. "I want to try to quit for this one day anyway."

"We've heard of smokers using all kinds of support systems to help them get through the day without lighting up," said Mildred Bartley of Raleigh, the state smokeout coordinator. "We say whatever works is worth the effort."

Sixty-three cancer society chapters across the state set up anti-smoking exhibits and handed out literature in shopping malls, factories and schools. Members served cold turkey lunches in several industry and school cafeterias to symbolize smokers going "cold turkey" for the day. The Raleigh chapter released 300 balloons from a downtown shopping park in a smokeout ceremony.

"We're here to tell people that cigarette smoking kills and whatever we can do to get our message across, we'll do it," Ms. Bartley said. "It's very serious when you're talking about lives. What we hope the smokeout will do is save some lives by convincing people to throw away their cigarettes."

Spokesmen for Pilot Life Insurance Co. near Greensboro, which was among the first to offer lower rates for non-smokers, said dozens of workers had put away their cigarettes for the day. At Wesley Long Community Hospital, nurses pushed carts loaded with health food up and down the corridors. A stop-smoking clinic was scheduled at the hospital Thursday evening.

Weigh Action On Hog Farmer

WENTWORTH, N.C. (AP) — The Rockingham County Humane Society is considering filing a complaint against a Madison hog farmer who two weeks ago abandoned his operation to creditors.

The society has called a special meeting Monday at Rockingham Community College to seek first-hand information on conditions at Marvin Angell's Gold Hill Farm.

Angell left the farm Nov. 4 when he could not meet his debts or buy feed for his 7,000 hogs. Hundreds of pigs died and others were sick and weak when found by investigators two days later.

AT CAMPAIGN BREAKFAST ... Carl Stewart, former speaker of the N.C. House of Representatives and candidate for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor in the 1984 elections, is flanked by Phil Dixon and William C. Byrd, Stewart's Pitt County campaign coordinators at a breakfast for supporters this morning. Stewart, who has visited 80 counties in the past six months, and barely lost in his bid for the nomination in 1980, said "I think we'll keep the votes we had in 1980" and pick up additional votes in the coming primary. He also said he would spend half his time campaigning in the east, which he termed "the critical area in any Democratic primary." Stewart said other candidates for the lieutenant governor's nomination are members of "the good old boys club" who are "inbedded in the process" and don't want to change it. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Auctioning Student-Built Home

Vocational students in the masonry and carpentry classes of Rose High School will hold an open house at the passive solar house they recently completed at the corner of Sedgefield and Sir Walter drives in the Cambridge Subdivision Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m.

The house is built on the Ecosea design, sometimes referred to as the "envelope" or "thermos bottle." It utilizes cooling tubes, roof ventilatory and a south-facing greenhouse to heat and cool the structure according to the season.

The students began the project by learning about the effects of siting and circulation of air on passive solar designs. They then considered the various materials that might be used and began construction.

The house will be sold at public auction Wednesday at noon on the site.

Orders End To Life-Prolonging

MIAMI (AP) — A judge has approved a parental request to withhold extraordinary measures for prolonging the life of a teen-ager left in a "vegetative state" after he was struck by lightning.

"It has been a rough decision," Circuit Judge Edmund Newbold said Wednesday in ruling in favor of Vicki and William Ismer, who went to court to force hospital officials to comply with their wishes. Michael Ismer, 15, has been in a coma at James Archer Smith Hospital in Homestead since he was struck by lightning Aug. 12 during a sailboat outing.

Two GIs Wounded; Grenada Snipers Elude Search

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — U.S. officers say the snipers who wounded two American soldiers have eluded capture, and they report that the number of Grenadians killed during the invasion is more than double the 21 that had been announced.

In another development, the new Grenadian government lifted a state of emergency Thursday and a White House task force met with government and business leaders to discuss ways the United States can assist the island's struggling economy.

Two members of the U.S. Army 82nd Airborne Division were wounded "very slightly" by sniper fire while manning an observation post Thursday on Green Island, a tiny islet of rocks and swamps just off Grenada's northeast coast.

They were the first U.S. casualties in 10 days, and pushed the total number of Americans wounded since the Oct. 25 invasion to 115. Eighteen U.S. troops were killed.

"No culprits were detained or found," Army spokesman Maj. Douglas Frei said. He had no other details on the attack on the observation post, one of several set up on the tiny out-islands to watch for "unfriendly" boats.

It was the first sniper attack since Nov. 9, when several men with automatic weapons opened fire from a cliff above an Army checkpoint, then apparently hid in a cave and escaped later. There were no casualties in that incident.

Meanwhile, the U.S. military changed its official Grenadian death toll from 21 to 45, and increased the count of wounded Grenadians from 280 to 337. The 42 Cuban dead reported earlier was lowered to 25. No explanation was given for the changes.

The Grenadian death toll includes 18 patients in a mental hospital inadvertently bombed by U.S. forces.

The Cuban government said earlier only 24 of the 42 bodies shipped to Havana were Cuban. Thirteen of the bodies were returned to Grenada and U.S. Diplomatic Mission spokesman Jim Dandridge said he presumed the other five were in Cuba or "in transit."

The bodies returned by Cuba are presumed to be Grenadians, and local funeral homes have reported burying 37 Grenadians killed by U.S. forces.

"They haven't tried to come up with the real figure because they want to keep saying that the Cubans did all the fighting. The truth is that the PRA (People's Revolutionary Army) fought hard, too," said George Louison, former agriculture minister and an associate of slain Prime Minister Maurice Bishop.

Bishop, a leftist, and a number of his followers were executed and a hard-line Marxist military junta seized power six days before the U.S.-led invasion.

The White House task force, which includes seven officials of U.S. government agencies, will report back to the White House and to people in the private sector interested in projects in Grenada.

The new Grenada government has begun meeting, according to legal adviser Tony Rushford. An initial act was to lift the state of emergency declared two weeks ago, but the government apparently retained the power to detain individuals for questioning and restrict public assembly.

Louison, who has criticized the continued U.S. military presence, was detained twice this week by American soldiers.

But the U.S. military said such actions had been ordered by the Grenada government. The U.S. prison camp at Point Salines airstrip has been dismantled.

Frey said 46 detainees, most believed to be PRA leaders or participants in the Oct. 19 attack on civilians who had freed Bishop from house arrest, were shifted to Richmond Hill prison. They joined several other prisoners, including army commander-in-chief Gen. Hudson Austin and former Deputy Prime Minister Bernard Coard and his wife Phyllis, all leaders of the coup that toppled Bishop.

Frey said Thursday some 2,300 combat troops and 2,000 non-combat support troops remained in Grenada.

"That number is very liquid, because people are leaving all the time," he said. President Reagan said Wednesday that all combat troops would be home by Dec. 24.

Nearly 300 members of a multinational Caribbean peacekeeping force remain in Grenada. Dandridge said it hasn't been determined who will be responsible for chasing any remaining resisters when U.S. troops leave.

Maj. Gen. Jack Farris, commander of U.S. Army forces here, estimated that

"12 to 30" Cubans remained on the island.

Over the weekend, rumors swept Grenada about the reported sighting of a submarine said to have dropped off a boatload of men. Frey said the "submarine" turned out to be a whale.

Nicaraguan Govm't Is Fanning The Winds Of War

EDITOR'S NOTE — Nicaraguans are building trenches and air raid shelters — digging in for what many of them believe will be a U.S.-organized invasion. With anti-American rhetoric stronger than ever and military training programs accompanying the TV news, war fever is growing. Here is a report.

By JUAN MALTES
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist government, warning of an "imminent" invasion by the United States or regional enemies, has spread war fever among its citizens as it oversees a massive military mobilization.

Rumors of invasion are on the lips of everyone — in the market, at the movie theatres, at work centers, at the soccer field.
Constant denials by U.S. officials both here and in Washington have failed to dispell what Nicaraguans perceive as the surging winds of war.

Restaurants, discos and pizza parlors still do good business at night. But since the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada on Oct. 25, which Sandinista jenta coordinator Daniel Ortega called a "prelude" to Nicaragua, the country's war-mood has heightened.
"The United States is preparing the armies of El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala to attack Nicaragua. An invasion is imminent and it is a matter of days, or any minute," Ortega warned in a recent speech.

Radios, TV sets, the newspapers, posters and graffiti on walls blare anti-American propaganda and increasing numbers of military uniforms can be seen in public places.
In the northern part of the country, where the fighting against U.S.-backed rebels has been heavy, soldiers manning an increased number of checkpoints along the roads search vehicles thoroughly for weapons.
Nicaragua's relations have steadily worsened with the United States, which rejects the Sandinista government's Marxist orientation and provides "covert" aid to rebel exiles, including remnants of the regime of Anastasio Somoza, the late rightist ruler ousted by the Sandinistas in 1979.

The government announced a massive war mobilization after the U.S. invasion of Grenada, ordering 40,000 reservists and militiamen to report for military training.
At 36 training centers in the capital, thousands of militiamen are training at a frenetic pace. Since early November, they have been digging trenches and building air raid shelters in many neighborhoods of the capital.
Militiamen with jobs have to use their spare time to train — Monday to Friday from six to nine, Saturday afternoons, and all day Sunday.

Most government employees report to work in olive-green militia uniforms and, upon leaving work, report directly to the training centers.

On television, Sandinista commanders explain what to do in case of an air raid, or how to disassemble a rifle, and reel off barrages of anti-American or patriotic pro-Sandinista rhetoric.
"We must complete our tasks, defeat the invader. People in arms in the streets and mountains," some of the announcements say.

Sometimes, the government's Soviet-made T-55 tanks, anti-aircraft guns and military installations are flashed on the screen to show the nation is prepared for a fight.
"There is a psychosis of war operating here," said one citizen who asked not to be identified, as he helped build a tunnel on the northeast side of Managua.

Although the call to war has been taken seriously by the Nicaraguan people, U.S. Ambassador Anthony Quainton assures there will be no invasion.
"My sons are in the United States and will return this Sunday to Managua," he told reporters Tuesday. "If I knew of an invasion, and I would be one of the first to know, I would not bring my sons to Nicaragua."

"I can assure you that I will spend Christmas in Nicaragua together with my family," he said.
The Sandinistas blame the United States for the critical situation in Nicaragua, caused in part by rebel sabotage of economic installations, but opposition parties say the government is to blame "for having taken the government into a Marxist-Leninist trajectory."

Rebel sabotage raids in September devastated the nation's oil reserves and prompted strict rationing. Church and opposition leaders claim the Sandinistas have become increasingly more radical since the rebel attacks, pressuring young men into military service and persecuting government critics.

Sandinista mobs beat up a bishop and a priest Oct. 31 and attacked eight churches, forcing them to suspend Mass. The government arrested a Spanish and a Costa Rican priest and deported them, accusing them of "inciting people to disobey the Military Law."
The church retaliated by banning Masses on Nov. 2, All Soul's Day, as a gesture of protest.

Rapists Given Choice: Castration Or Prison

ANDERSON, S.C. (AP) — A judge who offered three admitted rapists the choice of spending 30 years in jail or being castrated says the sentence fits the crime, but a lawyer calls it "cruel and unusual" punishment.

In offering the castration option, Circuit Judge C. Victor Pyle Jr. said Thursday he felt he was handing down an "appropriate sentence" because the rape was the most horrible he had ever heard of.

Pyle said the 23-year-old victim nearly died after being severely beaten and repeatedly raped by the three men on April 6. Roscoe James Brown, 27, of Pendleton, S.C., Mark Wallace Vaughn, 21, of Clemson, S.C., and Michael Braxton, 19, of Sarasota, Fla., all pleaded guilty to the crime last month.

The three men appeared stunned as they listened to the sentence in Anderson County General Sessions Court, according to Solicitor George Ducworth.

Theo Mitchell, a Greenville, S.C., attorney charges was sentenced to undergo Depo-provera treatments, and is now receiving the injections weekly at Johns Hopkins University Hospital in Baltimore, officials said.

Pyle said he had never before imposed a sentence involving castration, and was "not aware of there being any provision in the law providing for such a penalty as castration."

"I would not have done it if I didn't think the law provided for it," Pyle added. "It's nothing mandatory. It simply provides each defendant with a viable alternative to incarceration."

If the men choose castration, they will be put on five years' probation, he said.

Pyle said the men will be sent to Perry Correctional Institution in Pelzer, S.C., and can decide to take the castration option at any point during their incarceration.

The 30-year sentence is the maximum penalty for first-degree sexual criminal conduct, Ducworth said. The three men were each given an additional five years in prison on a criminal conspiracy charge, which will run concurrently.

JUDGE C. VICTOR PYLE

who represents Braxton, described the sentence as "cruel and unusual punishment" and said he would appeal.

"It was a heinous crime. But there's no question about it, the sentence is prohibited by the U.S. Constitution," Mitchell said. "The voluntary castration option has tainted the entire sentence."

In a telephone interview Thursday from the Anderson County Jail, Brown said he and his co-defendants would issue a statement on the sentence today. Glenn Thomason, the attorney for the other two defendants, made no immediate statement.

Although Pyle specified physical castration in his sentencing order, he said he "wouldn't be opposed to the use of chemicals."

Chemical castration is a controversial procedure accomplished by administering the drug Depo-provera, a female hormone which researchers believe reduces the male sex drive.

Edmisten Raps GM Settlement

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorney General Rufus Edmisten has criticized the settlement of a three-year-old Federal Trade Commission lawsuit against General Motors because consumers must individually arbitrate their claims against the manufacturer.

GM is accused of selling millions of cars with defective transmissions and other defective engine components. The settlement allows consumers to seek reimbursement for their repair bills from the defective parts.

Edmisten criticized the arbitration procedures for their complexity and time-consuming demands on consumers, but said the consumer protection staff of his office will help owners through the process.

New Nurses In Job Hunt

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A few years ago, nursing students didn't bother to ask Anne Spence, a recruiter for Rex Hospital in Raleigh, if jobs were available there. They knew they were.

But they were asking this week at the 13th Annual Nursing Career Day sponsored by three Greensboro-area colleges, and the answers Spence and other recruiters were giving were noncommittal.

Jobs generally aren't available now, the students were told, but might be in May when they graduate.

"There was a time not long ago when we took new nursing graduates in any area they wanted to work because we had a need," Spence said Wednesday as students milled past her display table at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, which co-sponsored the event with N.C. A&T State and Winston-Salem State universities.

"We don't do that anymore because we don't need to," she said. "In today's market, we can afford to be more selective."

Spence said she doesn't believe the change was caused by a flood of students enrolling in nursing programs when nurses were scarce.

Would Triple Nat'l Forests

By The Associated Press
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Legislation that would triple the wilderness areas set aside in North Carolina national forests has been approved by the U.S. House and sent to the Senate.

The bill was unanimously supported by North Carolina's House delegation, but has not yet been endorsed by Sen. Jesse Helms or Sen. John East, North Carolina's two Republican senators, the News and Observer of Raleigh reported Thursday.

Senate action on the bill is not expected until next year since Congress is set to adjourn Friday.

The bill would set aside 68,740 acres of national forest lands as wilderness in addition to the 31,468 acres already in the state. Wilderness area designations protect the land by banning vehicles, timber management and other activities that disturb its natural state.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

ELIJAH AND THE PRIESTS OF BAAL

IN THE DAYS OF ELIJAH HE CONTINUALLY BATTLED THE PAGAN PRIESTS WHO WERE IMPORTED BY QUEEN JEZEBEL WHO WISHED TO DISPLACE THE LORD WITH HER OWN HEATHEN GODS. ELIJAH WAS GUIDED TO SEEK A CONFRONTATION WITH THE PRIESTS OF BAAL. (I KINGS 18:20-40) HE SENT A MESSAGE TO THE ISRAELITES TELLING THEM TO GATHER AT MOUNT CARMEL...

IN A VERY SHORT SPACE OF TIME EVERY PATHWAY AND ROAD IS CROWDED WITH PEOPLE IN ANSWER TO THE ROYAL SUMMONS...

AND WITH ALL ISRAEL GATHERED BEFORE HIM, IN A PULSATING MASS OF HUMANITY, WONDERING, TALKING, LAUGHING, JOKING, ELIJAH STANDS BEFORE THEM—A STARKLY LONE, YET COURAGEOUS FIGURE! HE RAISES HIS ARM IN A COMMANDING GESTURE AND SLOWLY THE TUMULT OF THE CROWD DWINDLES TO A DEEP SILENCE AS THE PROPHET OF THE LORD PREPARES TO SPEAK...

Prison Gangs In Knifing Affray

FOLSOM, Calif. (AP) — Some inmates involved in a violent clash between Mexican-American and black gangs at Folsom Prison had been removed from a security unit because of a court order against double-celling officials said.

Four Mexican-American inmates were stabbed Thursday when a band of black prisoners stormed their cells with prison-made knives during breakfast, said Lt. Ted Zink, a prison spokesman. Three of the injured were in stable condition and one in good condition, he said.

Zink said several of the inmates involved in the attack had been returned to the main prison population from the Security Housing Unit on Tuesday or Wednesday.

Hopeful Pirates Play Final Game

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Two good football teams who will probably spend the holidays with their football gear in storage collide Saturday at 8 p.m. (EST) in Hattiesburg, Miss. For one, there is no tomorrow and for the other, the chances of playing again this season are extremely slim.

Southern Mississippi, the host team, is on NCAA probation and cannot go to a post-season bowl game. East Carolina, with an equal 7-3 record, probably will be left out of those "rewarded" with a bowl game should it come away with a victory.

Pirate Coach Ed Emory says the Pirates cannot afford to think "bowl" in this game. They must win and then let the chips fall where they may. "Our situation is to put all our emphasis on Southern Mississippi," Emory said this week. "Anything else that may come will be a bonus. But we want to fulfill our goals and one of them is to have a winning percentage on the road. Right now, we are 3-3, and this is going to be a hard game for us."

East Carolina has lost but three games — all to Florida teams — Florida, Florida State and Miami, all three bound for bowls. One of the Pirate wins came over Missouri, also bound for a bowl this year.

Southern Mississippi lost its three games to Auburn, 24-3, Tulane, 14-7, and to Alabama, 28-16. "They got beat by Auburn and Alabama, and they just threw away the loss to Tulane," Emory said.

Auburn and Alabama are also bowl bound this year.

Another opponent of the Golden Eagles, Mississippi, a 27-7 loser, is a likely prospect for the one bowl the Pirates have a shot at, the Independence.

Aside from Mississippi, the Eagles have also beaten Richmond, 32-3, Louisiana Tech, 28-10, Mississippi State, 31-6, Memphis State, 27-20, Southwest Louisiana 31-3 and Louisville, 27-3.

Memphis State, reportedly, is still on the Independence Bowl list also, while Southwest Louisiana is the only common opponent the two have had.

East Carolina, playing USL at home, gained a 21-18 win. Emory calls Southern Mississippi the best defensive team the Pirates have faced this year. "They've got the best nose guard (6-0, 232-pound senior Jerald Baylis) we've seen this year, too. They have big tackles (248, 242) and great defensive ends."

After last week's loss to Alabama, Southern stands ninth in total defense among NCAA Division I-A schools, allowing 274.9 yards a game. They're giving up 141.4 through the air, sixth in the NCAA, while opponents are getting 133.5 on the ground.

The Eagles have allowed but 11.8 points a game in their ten games, standing sixth in the country in that category.

That should prove a test for the Pirates, who come into the week rushing for 246.9 yards a game, 15th best in the country. ECU is passing for 114.1 yards a game, a total of 361 yards a contest.

East Carolina is scoring 26.1 points a game. On the opposite side of the coin, the Eagles have a good offense too. "They're a lot like us, more of a rushing team,"

Emory said. "They have four backs who can play. (Robert) Duckworth is a fine football player who can throw or bring it back down and still make something happen."

Duckworth has hit on 56 of 106 passes for 1,006 yards and seven touchdowns. He's also been intercepted seven times.

Far and away, his chief target has been flanker Louis Lipps, who's caught 35 for 695 yards and five touchdowns.

In the rushing game, the Eagles are led by tailback Sam Dejanette, who has 145 carries for 658 yards and six touchdowns. His backup, Vincent Alexander, is next in rushing with 95 carries for 522 yards and two touchdowns.

Kicker Steve Clark is their leading scorer with 25 of 26

PATs and 14 of 24 field goals, a total of 67 points.

The kicking game can also be a factor in the contest. Lipps is returning punts an average of 12.1 yards a game, while Dejanette and Alexander are bringing back kickoffs 20.6 and 24.1 yards a try, respectively.

And with a night game, it might be time for ECU's Henry Williams, who played his junior college ball in Mississippi, to break loose again. With two punt and two kickoff returns for touchdowns, Williams has made all four runs at night.

What happens after the game, should the Pirates win, will be up to the powers who pick the bowl people — assuming there is still a slot open at 11 p.m. Saturday night.

Emory is hopeful of the best, but prepared for the worst. "I've always told my kids that they have to feel good about themselves. If we go down there and perform well and win, they have no reason not to feel good. But I've also told them that life's not fair. What you have is the opportunity to compete."

"I certainly think this is a team deserving of a bowl game, but whatever happens happens. It's something we can't control."

Emory acknowledges that the Pirates have their work cut out for them against the Golden Eagles and cannot get their minds on bowls, or it will all be for naught.

Karr Discounts EC-NCS Rumor

East Carolina athletic director Dr. Ken Karr says he knows of no basis for rumors circulating that N.C. State University is considering dropping ECU from its football schedule.

The rumors apparently surfaced in the Durham area yesterday. A Raleigh sportswriter contacted Karr last night, saying he had heard the report over a Durham television station.

Karr, this morning, said he had nothing to base the rumor on, and that East Carolina was firmly scheduled with signed contracts through 1985, the next two seasons, and that games had been agreed on with State through the 1990 season, although contracts had not yet been signed.

"If they are planning on anything like this, they have not apprised me of it," Karr said. Karr said he had not talked with N.C. State athletic director Willis Casey in about six weeks, and while they discussed future scheduling at that time, Casey gave no indication that State planned to drop the Pirates.

"I just consider this a rumor and no more," Karr said. "I'm sure that the East Carolina series has been a productive one for them."

A glance through the N.C. State football brochure would tend to prove this. Prior to this season, East Carolina held eight of the top 20 crowds in Carter-Finley Stadium. Included in that group are three of the top five crowds. In the top ten, the Pirates ranked second, fourth, fifth, and eighth. North Carolina holds the number one, three, six, nine and ten spots, with only Penn State in 1979 appearing among other schools at number seven.

East Carolina also holds down the number 11, 12, 17 and 20th spots, giving them eight top crowds among 11 total games prior to this year.

This year's total topped the previous Carter-Finley Stadium record with a draw of 57,700, and North Carolina's game, later in the season, drew a new record 57,800.

State's next largest crowd for this season was 44,800 against Virginia.

That would tend to show that the ECU-NCSU game was an extremely popular one among North Carolina fans.

While Casey was out of town and unavailable for comment, Sports Information Director Ed Seaman said he had heard of no plans to drop the series. "Of course, we are playing seven conference games now (with Georgia Tech moving onto the football schedule), and I don't know how that might affect things. We are playing Penn State and Pittsburgh again in the future too," Seaman said.

Lady Pirates Open Year

East Carolina's Lady Pirates take to the court for their opening game of the 1983-84 season Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m. in Minges Coliseum against George Washington University.

The Lady Pirates will field a young team this season, with only one senior on the team, along with three juniors, all new to the team.

The only real returning veterans are three sophomores, Sylvia Bragg, Delphine Mabry and Lisa Squirewell, each of whom saw a lot of action during the previous campaign.

The lone senior is 6-2 Darlene Hedges, who joined the squad as a transfer during her sophomore year, then missed most of last year, rejoining the team only after injuries had sidelined several others. With limited playing time, she averaged only 0.4 points a game and 1.3 rebounds.

Mabry, a 5-4 guard on a track grant, played most of the early season before leaving the team to have surgery on her hand and to concentrate on the spring track season. During her 14 games, she started 10 and averaged 7.3 points and 3.6 rebounds a contest.

Squirewell played in 21 games, but started in only five. The 5-9 forward averaged 5.6 points and 4.3 rebounds over the course of the season.

The leading returner is 5-8 guard Sylvia Bragg, who scored 9.3 points and 2.8 rebounds a game. She is expected to carry most of the load this year.

Those four, along with

Chowan College transfer Anita Anderson, a 5-10 junior forward, are expected to draw the starting assignments against the Colonials Sunday afternoon.

All of the other members of the squad are newcomers to (Please Turn To Page 14)

It looks as if it's going right down to the wire — that is, the bowl games — as to who will be the winner in this year's pickings. With just this week and the bowls to go, there are three ties — for first, third and fifth — in the standings.

Vickie Spivey pulled back even with this writer for first place last week, both now standing at 86-43 for the year. Tom Baines and our guests are now tied for third with 84-45 marks, two games behind. Then, two more further back come Joe Jenkins and Jimmy DuPree, knotted in fifth place with 82-47 records.

Last week's guest, Jimmy Bond of Bond's Sporting Goods, came up with a 7-5 record, leaving WNCT-TV's Slim Short as this year's guest leader at 9-2.

This week, our guest is former Duke University basketball star and currently principal at Rose High School Howard Hurt. Howard has the last chance to dump Slim off the list and return for the bowl games.

This week, the panel will pick the lone high school game in the area as Williamston entertains Farmville Central.

Peele	Baines	Spivey	Hurt	DuPree	Jenkins
Williamston over Farmville	Williamston	Williamston	Farmville	Williamston	Farmville
Clemson over S. Carolina	Clemson	Clemson	Clemson	Clemson	Clemson
Maryland over State	Maryland	Maryland	Maryland	Maryland	Maryland
Mississippi over Miss. St.	Ole Miss	Ole Miss	Ole Miss	Ole Miss	Miss. State
Michigan over Ohio St.	Michigan	Michigan	Michigan	Michigan	Michigan
Tulane over LSU	LSU	LSU	LSU	Tulane	Tulane
Southern Miss over ECU	So. Miss	E. Carolina	E. Carolina	E. Carolina	E. Carolina
N. Carolina over Duke	N. Carolina	N. Carolina	Duke	Duke	N. Carolina
VPI over Virginia	Virginia	VPI	VPI	VPI	VPI
Notre Dame over Air Force	N. Dame	N. Dame	N. Dame	N. Dame	N. Dame
Pitt over Penn State	Pitt	Pitt	Penn State	Penn State	Penn State
UCLA over Southern Cal	S. Cal	UCLA	UCLA	UCLA	UCLA

The Jaguars would seem to have a psychological edge in the contest, since they came out on the short end of a 7-0 meeting between the two earlier in the year. It's been shown that it's awfully hard for a football team to beat another twice in the same season. Be that as it may, the panel is going with the Tigers, picking them only by a 4-2 margin, however.

Our own personal feeling is that Williamston will come out on top, and we look for a defensive battle, say 8-7.

In the other area game, East Carolina's Pirates travel down to Hattiesburg, Miss., to face strong Southern Mississippi. This is probably going to be both teams' bowl games. Southern Miss is on probation and can't go anywhere, and the Pirates, even if they win, have only a very slim chance of picking up a berth.

The panel is going with the Pirates — again by a 4-2 nod. Our personal pick is Southern Miss is going to win a close one, 24-21. Knowing that they've missed a bowl shot is probably going to take just enough out of the Pirates.

Our other consensus picks: Clemson over South Carolina; Maryland over N.C. State; Mississippi over Mississippi State; Michigan over Ohio State; Tulane and Louisiana State, a toss-up; North Carolina over Duke; Virginia Tech over Virginia; Notre Dame over Air Force; Penn State and Pittsburgh, a toss-up; and UCLA over Southern California.

Revenge Factor 'Garbage' In PAC 10's Decisive Game

By The Associated Press

Washington Coach Don James says the revenge factor "is garbage" as his 15th-ranked Huskies prepare for a meeting with cross-state rival Washington State.

The game, for the second straight season, will determine the Pacific 10 Conference's Rose Bowl representative.

Last year, the Huskies needed to beat Washington State to win the Pac 10 title, but they lost 24-20. This year, they are in the same position, only they're two-touchdown favorites to beat the Cougars Saturday at Seattle and win their third trip to the Rose Bowl in four years.

"Last year's game is history," James said. "This year's

Allison Hopes For Different Results

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — The trip home after the last two Winston Western 500 races has been awful for Bobby Allison.

Each time, the cross-country air trip from Riverside to Allison's home in Hueytown, Ala., has followed the veteran driver's failure to win the showdown for the Winston Cup championship.

The 46-year-old Allison, who heads into Sunday's 500-kilometer race with a 64 point lead over nemesis Darrell Waltrip — the man who has beaten him each of the past two years — doesn't want another such trip.

"Last year, it was a pretty depressing ride," said Allison. "I was in a pretty foul mood and there probably weren't half a dozen words spoken on the trip."

"And last year was even more disappointing and depressing than the year before, because it would have taken a miracle (in 1981, when Waltrip entered the Western leading by 83 points).

"But, last year (when Waltrip came in leading by just 22 points)," Allison said with a grimace, "the championship was a reality. It was something we thought we could win. Instead, we came up short again."

Allison, who has been a regular on NASCAR's Grand National stock car circuit for 22 years, has been a big winner. But he's never won the national championship.

"I guess I don't have to say any more how important this (championship) is to me," Allison noted. "But we're just going to try to go into it with the same preparation and enthusiasm we have for every race."

"I should probably take it easy and just try to finish," added Allison, who can clinch the championship by finishing 13th. "But I don't know if I can do that. My philosophy is to race to win."

Waltrip, who came from behind to beat Allison each of the last two years and has trailed him throughout the 1983 season, said, "I don't know what he's going to do, but we're going to have to go for it. We need to win and then see where Bobby finishes. All we can do is run hard and hope."

A year ago, Waltrip wrapped up his second Winston Cup by finishing third, while Allison was 16th after encountering tire and engine problems. Tim Richmond won the race.

Practice began Thursday on the 4.215-kilometer road circuit, with qualifying for the first 25 positions scheduled today. The rest of the 35-car field will be filled Saturday.

The race, which will be televised live on WTBS, is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. EST.

Cox Topples B-W, 20-14

BETHEL — Artie Anderson threw a pair of touchdown passes to Robert Staton to lead A.G. Cox to a 20-14 victory over Bethel-Wellcome Junior High School Thursday.

Cox got on the scoreboard first with a two-yard run by Darryl Simpson. Anderson's first TD pass covered 37 yards, while the second was for four.

Calvin Hunter tossed two touchdown passes for Bethel-Wellcome, the first to Eldred Smikle for 46 yards, and the second one to Ashley Sheppard for 30.

Cox finished the season 7-1, while Bethel-Wellcome was 3-2-1.

Cavs' Wilson Learns From Experience

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia Coach Terry Holland and Othell Wilson say they hope the senior guard's suspension for at least the Cavaliers' first four basketball games "will have a positive result."

The 6-foot Wilson, an All-Atlantic Coast Conference choice as a sophomore in 1982 and a second-team All-ACC selection last year, missed Thursday night's 89-74 exhibition victory over Athletics in Action and will be out of at least the first three games of the regular season, Holland said Thursday.

"We had guidelines about certain on-court behavior and until he is able to respond favorably, he will not be seeing action in games for our basketball team," Holland said in a prepared statement released by the sports information office.

"Othell is one of the finest competitors that I've been around," Holland added. "While I know some will view this as a negative step, the two of us hope that it will have a positive result. Othell has indicated that he wants to do the right thing."

Lady Pirates...

the team. They include 6-1 Jan Bethea; 5-7 Crystal Grier; 6-0 Lynn Nance, 5-10 Annette Phillips, 5-9 Judy Rodriguez, and 5-5 Terri Sutton. Phillips and Bethea are both juniors; the rest are freshmen.

Sutton, however, has been sidelined with knee surgery, and probably will miss the entire season.

The biggest loss the Lady

Pirates will have to overcome will be that of 6-0 center/forward Mary Denkler, who was one of the nation's top scorers with a 22.0 point per game average.

George Washington will present a challenge to the Lady Pirates. The two teams met only once, last season in Washington. In that game, the Lady Colonials eased to a 79-75 victory.

Three Colonials accounted for 69 of those 79 points and all three of them return. Forward/guard Kelly Ballentine scored 40 of those points, while guard Kathy Marshall added 18 and center Anne Feeney scored 11. Bragg had 15 for the Pirates while Squirewell had 12.

Feeney tops the starters for the Colonials at 6-3, while Ballentine is a 5-10 sophomore. Marshall is a 5-8 junior. The other GW starters are expected to be 6-0 freshman forward Kas Allen and 5-7 sophomore guard Patty Kinghorn.

"There is no doubt that this is a tough opening game for us," Coach Cathy Andruzzi, opening her sixth ECU season, said. "While we didn't play one of our better games last season at GW, you've got to give them all the credit for winning that game. We must contain Ballentine better this year and deny her the outside shot."

"Coach Denise Fiore has done an outstanding job in building their program and this year's team has added size to the roster which will make for quite a season-opener for us."

The Lady Pirates, during their preparation, saw several players sidelined with injuries, and they are just returning to the team. Rodriguez broke a foot during the first week of drills and will not play Sunday. Nance broke her nose several weeks ago and will wear a protective mask for most of the season. Sutton, as stated, will miss the year with her knee injury.

"I'm very pleased with the improvement of our players," Andruzzi said. "We started pre-season drills with so many players who were not accustomed to our system and each other and I think they have done a great job of preparation in this past month. But I just don't know what they will do in a game situation when they are three points up or three points down. That's something you can't tell until that first game."

While the Lady Pirates are young and relatively inexperienced, Andruzzi said that will not be used as an excuse. "These girls are playing with great intensity and enthusiasm and that's all you can ask of them. They're a fun bunch to coach. We're just ready for the season to begin."

Andruzzi's plans this year have moved Bragg to the wing, her natural position, with Mabry as point guard. "Originally, we planned to use Sylvia at the point slot, but Delphine emerged as a leader in team practice and has really run our offense well. That enables Sylvia to move back and really use her talents more effectively."

Following Sunday's opener, the Lady Pirates take to the road for their next three outings. They will be at St. Peter's College on November 26, and at Iona on November 27. They travel to Fayetteville State on December 1, and return home to play host to UNC Charlotte on Sunday, December 4 at 3 p.m.

Ken Stabler, the southpaw quarterback of the New Orleans Saints, was also a pitcher at the University of Alabama and turned down offers from several major-league clubs.

SPORT LINE

To The Sports Editor:

I want to congratulate Coach Ed Emory, his staff, and his ECU football players on such a great year. As a graduate of ECU, I am so proud that I can't hold my enthusiasm down.

We have always had to fight for everything we have ever gotten in Eastern North Carolina. We will continue to have to fight against all odds. But, we are Pirates and Pirates have always had a hard time. We will suck it up and battle even harder. Because we are Pirates, and we have coach Emory, we will overcome all obstacles and succeed!

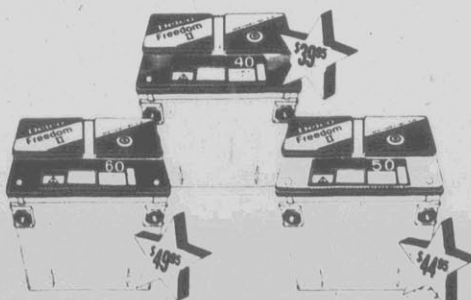

I have the good fortune to attend many football practices with the Pirates. What a great group of coaches and players!

I was born a Pirate, lived as a Pirate and will die a Pirate.

No bowl game for the Pirates? What I have to say about this is unprintable in the newspaper! We will overcome the politics, snobbery, and everything else that's against us. Beloved Pirates, you have played in 11 bowl games this year. We love you. Go Pirates!

Parents' Decision On 'Baby Jane' Held Reasonable

By PAT MILTON
Associated Press Writer
UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — A judge who ruled against attempts by the federal government to intervene in the case of "Baby Jane Doe" says the parents of the deformed infant made a "reasonable" decision against corrective surgery. The ruling Thursday by U.S. District Judge Leonard Weiler rejected a Justice Department contention that the month-old baby may have been discriminated against because she is handicapped. The ruling was blasted as "outrageous" by a right-to-life group, but hailed by the parents and their lawyer, who labeled the federal intervention "government at its worst."

The baby girl was born at University Hospital in Stony Brook on Oct. 11 with spina bifida — an open spinal cord — and with excess fluid on the brain and an abnormally small head.

The parents, a Long Island couple who have not been identified in court proceedings, decided against operations that doctors said might extend the baby's life from a few years to a few decades, but would not change her paralysis and severe retardation.

Evidence showed "conclusively that the decision of the parents to refuse consent ... was a reasonable one based on due consideration of medical options available and a genuine concern for the best interests of the child," the judge said in the 26-page decision.

He rejected an unprecedented federal government request to review medical records in the case. Charles Cooper, a Justice Department lawyer, said the decision "could represent a major obstacle to full, vigorous investigation and enforcement of federal health regulations." He said the government would decide quickly whether to appeal.

An appeal was urged by Gary Curran, spokesman for American Life Lobby, a right-to-life group that had asked the Reagan administration to enter the case. He called the ruling "outrageous" and "based on less than the facts."

The baby's father said: "I feel really good. I'm numb. It was certainly a pressure-packed decision for one judge to make but I admire him for making it."

"The procedure for the parents has been a horror," complained one of their lawyers, Peter Caronia. "This is government at its worst."

Richard Rifkin, an assistant state attorney general who represented the hospital, said there was "a mere suspicion by the government that discrimination has occurred."

Medical records of the baby's first week of life became public in earlier court actions and federal lawyers conceded in court Thursday that they found no evidence in those files that the infant was discriminated against.

Weiler ruled that the hospital "has failed to perform the surgical procedures not because Baby Jane Doe is handicapped, but because her parents have refused to consent to such procedures."

He said doctors had testified as the case moved through state courts that "there were two reasonable possible courses of treatment and the parents chose one and that was proper."

Rifkin said the decision means that "when a hospital acts appropriately the federal government will not be permitted to intrude in the operation of the hospital or the medical treatment."

The parents first were taken to state court by Lawrence Washburn, a lawyer and right-to-life advocate who alleged that University Hospital had violated the baby's civil rights.

State court judge Melvyn Tanenbaum ordered on Oct. 19 that the baby be given the surgery. His decision was reversed two days later in the Appellate Division, which held that the parents had made an "informed, intelligent and reasonable" decision. The Court of Appeals, New York's highest, declined to intervene.

Paul Gianelli, a lawyer for the parents, said he would seek to have the federal government pay the family's legal costs, more than $30,000.

Reviews Evidence On Day Care Case

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A ruling on whether to close a Lexington day-care center where children were allegedly abused has been postponed until Nov. 28.

Superior Court Judge Judson D. DeRamus said Thursday he needs the time to review evidence after six days of testimony on the Creative Learning Center.

DeRamus said that the center's owner, Jean T. Drum, may continue operations until he rules in the case, if she obeys state day-care licensing laws and lets state authorities inspect it at any time.

The state Attorney General's office sued last month to close Ms. Drum's 4-year-old center, claiming that children there have been neglected and abused.

Witnesses for the state have testified this week that some infants were tied to cribs and that other children were hit and locked in closets as discipline. But in testimony Thursday, Ms. Drum sobbed quietly as her attorney argued that the center should remain open.

"What's really on trial in this case is my client's reputation," said R.B. Smith Jr., Ms. Drum's attorney.

Smith told DeRamus that if he closed the center, "you kill the biggest thing a person has, and that is that person's reputation in the community where he or she lives."

Smith challenged the credibility of the state's witnesses and said that Ms. Drum had been singled out for prosecution.

Although some technical violations of state regulations may have occurred at the center, Smith said, there is no evidence that children there were abused or mistreated as the state has alleged.

But Nonnie F. Midgette, an assistant state attorney general, argued that the center should be permanently closed because Ms. Drum has shown a pattern of neglecting children and deceiving state officials.

Told Perform Public Service

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — One of the first drivers arrested in North Carolina under the new driving while impaired law has been ordered to perform 48 hours of community service.

Catherine Mae Shealy, 20, of Hendersonville, who was arrested just four minutes after the law went into effect Oct. 1, pleaded guilty to driving while impaired in Henderson County District Court Monday.

In addition to community service, Judge Robert T. Gash sentenced Ms. Shealy to 60 days in jail suspended for one year, placed her on probation for one year, fined her $120 and court costs and suspended her driving privileges for one year.

World's Oldest Mouse

Mickey Mouse is 55 years old today. Mickey Mouse first appeared in the cartoon "Steamboat Willie". When it premiered on this date in 1928, "Steamboat Willie" became the first animated talking cartoon. Contrary to popular belief, Walt Disney himself did not create Mickey Mouse. He was the invention of Disney's boyhood friend and partner, Ubbe Ert Iwerks. Disney's original name for the mischievous mouse was Mortimer.

DO YOU KNOW — Which famous Disney film became the first full-length animated feature?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Nicaragua was originally intended to be the site of the Panama Canal.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening when you need to be wise and careful in the handling of the money and the property and in matter of fact whatever has to do with the practical affairs of your life.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study income and outgo carefully and be more economical so that you build up your reserve. Experts give some advice.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You want to make some radical changes in your person life, but it is inadvisable just now. Improve health and appearance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) There is much of a private nature you have to handle, so get into the privacy of your study and take care of such duties.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Some cherished wishes would be almost impossible to attain, so postpone going after them until a better time. A good friend is in need of advice, not money. Be helpful.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Be very wise in the handling of business, credit, career work of all kinds and do very little talking for good results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Find the right way of improving your present status instead of trying to make any radical changes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) There are bills to pay that you feel you should argue about, but don't waste your effort or time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be more concerned with your public image and try to improve it in some way. Avoid signing contracts today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Carry through with that work at hand, even though you are quite tired of it, and then go on to new outlets.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't think you have to spend a good deal for pleasure, but be satisfied with the economical and wholesome.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Home is of concern to you, so change things around if you think that would be better. Avoid entertaining at home.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) It is vital you use much care while driving, since there is potential danger at every corner, so slow down.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one of those remarkable young persons who can easily comprehend problems of others, and of large corporations and would do well in property and financial matters, provided an adequate education is given.

A Day In Court For Jackie O.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, wearing a black pullover sweater, grey skirt and charcoal gray boots, spent a day in court over an advertisement for Christian Dior sportswear which contains a Jackie look-alike, model Barbara Reynolds.

Mrs. Onassis sat in the front row of the spectator section in state court Thursday and made no statements during the proceeding.

Lawyers for the 54-year-old Mrs. Onassis asked Justice Edward J. Greenfield to issue an order stating, "Thou shalt not use the likeness of Jackie Onassis for purposes of trade."

Dior lawyer Todd Solis said the ad ran from Sept. 8 to Oct. 18, and "Christian Dior has no present intention of ever using this again."

The judge reserved a decision.

WEST ♦ 4 ♠ Q107 ♣ J107632 ♦ AQ10

EAST ♦ Q32 ♠ A863 ♦ Q9 ♠ 6543

The bidding: West North East South Pass Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass 4 ♦ Pass Pass Pass Opening lead: Six of ♦. It is all very well to bid aggressively. But you had better have the technique to bring home your ambitious contracts. This hand is from the 1955 Vanderbilt Team Championship. Sitting South was our good friend, Lee Hazen.

North's jump to three spades was not forcing since he was a passed hand. It described his hand nicely. South's four spades was a distinct gamble.

West led his fourth-best diamond and, when dummy appeared, declarer was looking at a lot of potential losers, perhaps including one in trumps. He won the diamond in hand, cashed the ace of trumps and led a club towards the table's king. West rose with the ace and exited with a diamond, taken in dummy.

Obviously, a spade finesse would have been on target, but declarer was not omniscient. He cashed the table's king of clubs, ruffed a diamond in his hand and a club on the board, in the process felling the queen and establishing his jack of clubs.

Declarer returned to his hand with the king of spades and was disappointed to find that he had a trump loser. However, he soon proved that all was not lost.

He cashed his jack of clubs, discarding a heart from dummy. Then he presented East with his trump trick.

Poor East was down to nothing but hearts. He could do no better than cash the ace of hearts and set up dummy's king for the game-going trick.

At the other table Sam Stayman, sitting West, made a psychic one no trump opening bid and East bought the contract at two hearts. That went down two tricks for a gain of 520 points to Hazen's team.
