White House Security Is Tightened After Bombing

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move that appeared to be designed to foil any Beirut-style bombing, the Secret Service tightened security around the White House during the Thanksgiving holiday by parking seven sand-laden dump trucks at five metal-gate entrances.

White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the move was "not in response to a specific threat," but security also was tightened at the State Department six blocks away, where spokeswoman Anita Stockman said authorities were reacting to "possible bomb threats."

President Reagan and his family were at Reagan's ranch in Santa Barbara, Calif., for a five-day Thanksgiving vacation, ending Sunday.

At the State Department, five entrances were blocked by cars or vans and police cars blocked part of a street that leads to a sixth. Ms. Stockman said "extra security has been taken and will be in effect until we can evaluate this possible or potential threat." The State Department security measures were implemented Wednesday, while the trucks were moved around the White House on Thursday.

The parked trucks at the entrances to the White House grounds were the latest episode in a series of increasingly stringent security measures prompted by a late-night bomb blast at the Capitol on Nov. 7 and the attack on the Marine headquarters in Beirut. The Oct. 23 Beirut bombing, which killed 239 servicemen, occurred when a dynamite-laden truck with a suicide driver at the wheel rammed the Marine barracks.

Last week, in reaction to the Capitol bombing, guards began to use dogs to sniff all cars and trucks entering the White House grounds for explosives. Guards also searched the handbags and briefcases carried by reporters, normally exempt from such measures, in what was described as a spot check.

On Thursday, three dump trucks were parked at the southwest gate across the entrance to the closed-off street separating the White House from the Old Executive Office building next door. Those trucks were outside the fence surrounding the White House.

Another truck was parked on that same street inside the northwest gate; two more were inside gates leading off 17th Street into the Old Executive Office Building and a seventh was on East Executive Avenue, a public walkway on the other side of the building separating the White House from the Treasury.

All the lights on the south lawn of the White House were lighted, which is unusual when the mansion is not in use. A loud buzzer from inside the compound could be heard Thursday afternoon, but later was silent.

The guard dogs could be seen patrolling and sniffing at bushes.

Andropov Threatens Added Nuke Buildup

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — President Yuri V. Andropov says the Soviet Union will enlarge its nuclear arsenal at home, in eastern Europe and at sea in response to NATO's deployment of new U.S. missiles in Western Europe.

Most Western leaders said Andropov's statement, carried Thursday by the official Soviet news agency Tass, was little more than a confirmation of long-standing Soviet plans.

However, it was the first time Andropov publicly had disclosed new plans to bolster Soviet maritime nuclear forces. Navy sources in Washington have said several Soviet submarines armed with nuclear weapons are assigned to positions several hundred miles off the east and west U.S. coasts.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization plans to deploy 572 new medium-range U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 nuclear missiles in five Western European countries starting next month. Parts of some of the missiles already have arrived in Britain and West Germany.

Andropov indicated that, through an increased sea arsenal, he wanted to keep the direct threat to American soil at the same level as that posed by Western weapons to Soviet territory.

"Since by deploying its missiles in Europe the United States increases the nuclear threat to the Soviet Union, the corresponding Soviet systems will be deployed with due account for this circumstance in ocean areas and seas," he said.

The Soviet Union on Wednesday broke off negotiations in Geneva on limiting medium-range nuclear missiles.

Andropov repeated the Soviet contention that, through the new NATO deployment, the United States "torpedoed" any chance for a Geneva agreement.

"The Soviet Union considers its further participation in these talks impossible," Andropov said.

President Reagan, in a response issued in Santa Barbara, Calif., said: "We can only be dismayed by this Soviet statement. It is at sharp variance with the stated wish of the Soviet Union that an agreement be negotiated."

Government spokesmen in West Germany and Britain said Andropov's statement was not a surprise.

"It does not meet our hopes, but also does not contradict our expectations," said West German spokesman Peter Boenisch.

He said the statement, "to our way of thinking," did not rule out a Soviet return to the medium-range arms talks.

The Soviet short-range missiles "have been ready for deployment for some time. The Soviet Union would probably have wanted to deploy them in Eastern Europe in any case," the British Foreign Office said.

But Prime Minister Andreas Papandreu of Greece, who is NATO's leading critic of new missile deployment, said the United States had miscalculated the Kremlin reaction.

"I warned that the Soviet response would be to increase its nuclear weapons in Europe, leave the talks and possibly take additional measures," Papandreu said during a visit to Brussels, Belgium.

The West contends the new deployment is needed to counter Soviet SS-20s aimed at Western Europe.

Andropov has not been seen in public since Aug. 18. His statement was read in full on the main Soviet television evening news. But as has been customary since he came to power a year ago, no pictures of Andropov were shown.

He made no mention of parallel talks in Geneva on limiting long-range nuclear arms, which suggests the Soviets would stay at the table in those negotiations.

He said the Soviet Union was ending a moratorium on deploying new SS-20s in Soviet Europe and accelerating preparations for short-range nuclear missiles in East Germany and Czechoslovakia. The actions had been threatened previously as the NATO deployment deadline approached.

"It goes without saying that other measures, too, will be taken to ensure the security of the U.S.S.R. and its allies," Andropov added without elaboration.

Tass said Warsaw Pact defense ministers would meet in Bulgaria in early December, and Western observers in Moscow speculated that further moves by the Soviet bloc would be discussed there.

The unilateral moratorium on new SS-20s was announced in May 1982 by the late Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, but Western analysts say the Soviet Union broke the promise and has installed some 200 SS-20s since then.

Andropov said the Soviet Union would be willing in the future to return to the current arms levels and then resume negotiations.

The Soviet Union has contended there now is "rough" parity between East and West in the number of medium-range nuclear weapons.

Israeli Reluctant In POW Exchange

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli officials reluctantly made concessions to free six of their soldiers in exchange for 4,600 Palestinian and Lebanese prisoners, but they say Israel and the PLO remain bitter enemies.

"There is no change in our approach toward the murderers whose only desire is to sow destruction and panic and killing," Deputy Prime Minister David Levy said.

Israel accepted the Palestine Liberation Organization's conditions for the prisoner swap after more than a year of deadlocked negotiations through intermediaries. Israeli officials said there was no direct contact between Israeli diplomats and the guerrilla organization.

"I don't see any change or improvement" in Israeli-PLO relations, Defense Minister Moshe Arens said Thursday. He also denied the exchange deal included guarantees for PLO leader Yasser Arafat's safe passage from his embattled headquarters in the north Lebanese city of Tripoli.

Israel, meanwhile, is hoping to strike another bargain for the freedom of up to six Israeli soldiers it believes are still in captivity following its invasion of Lebanon last year.

"We still have bargaining cards which will make possible another agreement," Arens said, without elaboration.

A radical PLO faction, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, was quoted by Israeli newspapers as saying it would demand 2,250 guerrillas for the two Israelis it is holding.

Former Justice Minister Shmuel Tamir says the PFLP is holding a third Israeli, and Israel says Syria holds three more prisoners.

Israel still holds 290 Syrian soldiers captured during the Lebanon invasion who could be used as leverage for a POW exchange with Syria and the Syrian-backed PLO rebels. It also holds about 2,700 other Arabs convicted of security offenses.

The two-day prisoner exchange, assisted by France and the International Red Cross, ended Thursday when the six Israeli soldiers returned to a hero's welcome after 15 months in captivity, and three Air France jumbo jets flew 1,000 Palestinians, defiantly flashing victory signs, to the Algerian capital of Algiers.

The Palestinians were released from Israel's massive Ansar detention center in south Lebanon. About 3,500 more Palestinians and Lebanese freed from Ansar, along with other suspected guerrillas from smaller lockups in Sidon and Nabatieh, elected to stay with their families in Israeli-occupied south Lebanon.

The Israelis also freed 98 guerrillas from prisons in Israel, more than 50 of them serving life sentences for terrorist assaults, said Prisons Authorities spokesman Shimon Malka. These guerrillas flew with the other Palestinians to Algiers.

In London, an Israeli official said in a British Broadcasting Corp. television interview that his government was unconcerned about the outcome of the fighting around Tripoli between forces loyal to Arafat and the Syrian-backed PLO rebels.

"I don't think it makes any basic difference for Israel who survives this war, whether Arafat or his rivals," said Ehud Olmert, a Likud coalition member of the Israeli Knesset's Defense and Foreign Affairs Committee.

The release of the Palestinian and Lebanese captives has been widely seen as a big boost for the sagging political and military fortunes of Arafat and his loyalists.

Another Storm Powers Its Way Across West

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

A "good strong cold front" sped toward the Rocky Mountains today after knocking out power to more than 100,000 people, as the death toll rose to 27 from an earlier storm that dumped up to 2 feet of snow on the Great Plains before lumbering into Canada.

Nearly 4 inches of rain soaked the San Francisco Bay area Thursday, unleashing a mudslide that blocked U.S. 50 near Placerville for several hours. The moisture turned to snow as winds gusted to 70 mph in the mountains, causing blizzard conditions at Alpine Meadows ski resort and dropping half a foot of snow at Norden, 45 miles northwest of Lake Tahoe.

About 130,000 people in western Washington — many with half-roasted Thanksgiving turkeys still in the oven — lost power Thursday morning as the new storm blew in and drenched the West as far inland as Idaho, where visibility was down to 100 feet in mixed rain and snow.

Electricity was restored within several hours to 63,000 people in the Seattle area, but 57,000 others were still without power early today. A spokesman for the Snohomish Public Utility District, where 10,000 outages were reported, said "it could be a couple of days before this is taken care of."

While the new storm "doesn't have quite as big a windup" as the system that howled out of the Rockies last Sunday, "it's still a good strong cold front that will bring snow and wind to the Plateau and Rockies today," said meteorologist Nolan Duke at the National Weather Service's Severe Storm Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Duke said it was expected to spread from Montana to northern Arizona, covering territory still digging out from the earlier storm blamed for the deaths of 15 people on roads, 10 in small planes and two elderly Minnesota men who died Wednesday and Thursday shoveling snow.

Kettle Drive Is Opened

Area officials took part in today's noon kick-off of the Salvation Army's 1983 Christmas fund as the annual operation of the familiar red kettles officially began for the holiday season.

Joining Jim Sutton of the local Salvation Army's advisory board for the kettle kick-off at the Belk entrance of Carolina East Mall were Mayor Percy Cox and Charles Gaskins, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners.

The Greenville unit will collect money in the red kettles at various area locations and by mail, with this year's goal set at $40,000. Funds given will be used to provide food, toys, and gifts to the needy in Pitt County during Christmas and the winter months. Around 600 area families will be helped this season.

During Christmas last year, the Salvation Army helped 178,857 individuals in North Carolina and South Carolina, an increase of 31 percent over the previous holiday period. During the next four weeks, the organization expects to help over 200,000 individuals in the Carolinas.

Beepers Help Track Wandering Toddlers

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

For moms and dads, the next best thing to a set of eyes in the back of the head may be an electronic system that helps keep track of toddlers in backyards, malls, neighborhoods, parks or around water.

The system also has a panic button kids can press to signal when they're in trouble.

The electronic system consists of a pair of tiny components: a transmitter about as big as a cigarette pack, and a receiver the size of a deck of cards.

The 3-ounce transmitter, clipped to a child's clothing, triggers a buzzer in the parent's receiver when the child passes the 25-foot mark. The buzzing continues until the child moves beyond 100 feet — or returns within the 25-foot safe zone.

The $80 system is meant to give a parent enough time to retrieve the errant child, says Edward Corwin, a general contractor who thought up the system when he had a scare in 1981.

mCorgin couldn't find his 14-month-old son Gregory around their Pompano Beach, Fla., home, which was 20 feet from a canal.

"When you live around water, a warning flag goes up automatically anytime a child goes outside," said Corwin, a father of six.

"When I heard a splash, the only thing I could think of was that Gregory had fallen into the canal."

Corwin said he and a neighbor both jumped into the water to search for the toddler. They were about to give up when they heard Gregory crying from the house. The boy had crawled onto a second-floor balcony.

"Right then and there I figured there had to be a way these things could be prevented," Corwin said.

"With telephone pagers, tiny radios and TVs, digital watches, portable computers, and a widening array of micro-electronic devices becoming available, I was amazed there was nothing that could have let me know that Gregory was getting close to the edge of the canal."

"I had this idea that if you could get a warning before the child got into trouble, you'd have a good chance of getting there in time. The answer was one of distance."

Corwin set out to design a transmitting device that would sound an alarm when a child strayed a certain distance.

Dennis Vories, an electrical engineer, teamed up with Corwin, who now lives in Valley Center, Calif. The two worked out variations on the monitoring system, coming up also with a signal to sound when a child has fallen into water, and a sensor to monitor breathing.

The breathing monitoring straps around an infant's stomach, which expands and contracts with every breath. If the movement stops for 5 to 10 seconds, a tiny transmitter sends a signal to the receiver, sounding an alarm.

Corwin believes the device will help parents worried about Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, which claims the lives of 6,000 to 8,000 children a year, usually during the first year life and seldom after the second year.

(Recent research reports indicate the condition may be caused by poor development of the baby's immune system. This would interfere with the body's defense against allergens — dust, molds, pollens — and may set off anaphylactic shock, which can impair and then halt breathing.)

The monitoring system, Kiddie Alert, will be in major retail stores early in 1984. The $80 price includes the "wetness" sensor that activates the receiver if child falls into water. The respiration sensor accessory will cost about $40. The manufacturer is Cortex Electronics Inc., 1894 Commer Center West, Plaza Centrico, Suite 108, San Bernardino, Calif. 92408.

Dear Abby

Daughter Has Different Ideas

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: In response to a letter in your column you said, "You don't need a person's permission to pray for him." Well, that's my problem. My mother is praying for me, and I wish she wouldn't. Ever since she got herself "born again," she says she is praying that God will bring me to my knees so I will be born again, too.

Abby, I have my own religion, which doesn't happen to be the same as hers, but she keeps trying to talk me into being "saved." When I ask her to please leave me alone and quit praying for me, she says it's her duty as a parent to lead me down the "right" path.

Don't get me wrong. I also believe in prayer, but I don't want to get into a contest with my mother to see which one of us prays better.

GETTING GOOFY IN L.A.

DEAR GETTING: You didn't state your age, but if you're an adult you have the right to choose your own religion. And as well-meaning as your mother may be, she needs to be reminded that one of our most cherished rights is the right to be left alone.

DEAR ABBY: From time to time I meet people who are anti-black, anti-Jew, anti-Catholic, anti-gay and anti-foreigner, while loudly proclaiming that they are passionately pro-American!

Since the logic behind this kind of thinking escapes me, I am at a loss as to how to deal with them. Please advise. And you may use my real name.

CHARLOTTE CAMPBELL

DEAR CHARLOTTE: Tell them that it's not possible to be anti-black, anti-Jew, anti-Catholic, anti-gay and anti-foreigner AND passionately pro-American at the same time because a substantial part of America is composed of blacks, Jews, Catholics, gays and foreigners.

DEAR ABBY: A close relative, age 77, recently went to Poland to visit his relatives. His wife was unable to accompany him because of poor health.

Two weeks after he arrived in Poland his wife received a telegram from the American Consulate in Poland informing her that her husband had suffered a fatal heart attack and it would cost her $7,500 to have his body flown back to the United States for burial. The alternative was to have him buried in Poland for $300. His wife chose to have him buried in Poland because she couldn't afford to have his body shipped back here at those prices.

We were shocked at how much was asked to have his body shipped to the United States from Poland. It seems so grossly overpriced. Am I being ridiculous to question the whole thing? Why in the world is so much charged for such a humane service?

Now the poor widow will be deprived of being buried alongside her lifelong companion in the family plot with other family members.

I would like to hear your comment on this upsetting crisis in our family.

UPSET IN N.Y.

DEAR UPSET: I am informed that the cost of shipping a body by air is determined by the weight and mileage. The average weight (including the shipping crate) is approximately 350 to 400 pounds, which costs between $120 and $140 per each 100 pounds. Add to that the mortician's fee for embalming, plus the casket, and it should not total anywhere near the figure you were quoted. I think you have good reason to be upset.

A MOVEABLE FEAST

VENICE (AP) — What may be one of the world's most lavish and expensive dinners was served on a railroad here recently.

To commemorate the 100th birthday of the Venice Simplon Orient-Express on Oct. 4, 140 passengers paid some $2,000 each to drink vintage champagne and dine on haute cuisine re-created from menus on the first Orient-Express run.

The passengers, who traveled from London, through Paris and the Swiss Alps, to Venice, toasted a tribute to George Nagelmackers of Belgium, who launched the fabled train in the style of a grand hotel a century ago.

JEAN ANDERSON'S
MAYONNAISE

It's made in a food processor in generous amount.

2 egg yolks
1 egg
Juice of 1 lemon

2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon white pepper
1 cup olive oil (best quality)
1 cup of corn oil or peanut oil

In a food processor fitted with the metal chopping blade, blend the egg yolks, egg, lemon juice, vinegar, mustard, salt and pepper, using 2 pulses or on-offs of the motor. Combine the olive oil and the corn oil in a 1-pint measure, then, with the processor motor running, trickle them down the feed tube in a very fine stream. After all of the oil has been incorporated, buzz for 10 seconds longer. Spoon into a 1-pint jar, cover and keep well refrigerated until ready to use. Makes about 2 cups. From "Jean Anderson's New Processor Cooking" by Jean Anderson (Morrow).

Food Editor's Note: My use of 2 large egg yolks and 1 large egg plus the juice from 1 medium lemon (2 tablespoons) yielded 3 cups of tangy mayonnaise. -C.B.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler

If you have decided you want to do something about clean up, your problem is well on its way to being solved. People do best those jobs they consider important and necessary.

A schedule will help get that seasonal cleaning done. Before you begin, check throughout the house for any special jobs you wish to accomplish, repairs you want to make, items you wish to replace and throwing out the junk that always accumulates.

It is a good idea to make sure all closets, drawers and other areas that might need reorganization are completed before the cleaning begins. The work will go faster if you do. List the things you wish to accomplish then divide the tasks between you and other family members who may help.

A cleaning basket may be a big aid to you as you work. Organizing cleaning equipment and supplies will save stops. It should include: whisk broom; upholstery brush; dust and polishing cloths; duster; scrub cloths; sponges; furniture polish or wax; scouring powder or cleanser if not duplicated in kitchen or bathroom; spot and stain removers; all-purpose household cleaners; and window and glass cleaners. Two other containers may also prove helpful — one for collecting small out of place items to be redistributed and one for collecting trash.

We as consumers can easily spend more and more on cleaning supplies as new and improved products are introduced. A wise consumer will select a few all-purpose or multi-purpose cleaners. Not only does this cost less, but also it requires less storage than a collection of specialty cleaners.

Some Recommended Basic Cleaning Products:
Water and detergent tops any list of cleaners. Water alone — particularly warm water — helps to dissolve and remove some soil. Lightly soiled surfaces may be treated with light-duty detergent — the type used for hand dishwashing. All-purpose detergents — as laundry detergent — contain an alkaline builder which makes them effective in removing grease and grimy dirt. Detergents produce more suds than other household cleaners and will require extra rinsing.

Liquid chlorine bleach, long known for its magic in laundering, is useful in cleaning. It helps to remove stains and mildew but can dull shiny porcelain finishes and darken aluminum.

Baking soda can also be versatile around the house. Use it to clean wall tile, porcelain, enamel and glass. Combined with water it moves coffee and tea stains from china and plastics. A long standing use is cleaning the inside of the refrigerator. The fine, dry powder can remove greasy food particles from the surface of the range and other kitchen appliances without scratching.

Household ammonia is more powerful than baking soda. At full-strength, ammonia helps loosen baked-on grease inside ovens. Diluted with water, ammonia can be used for such jobs as range burner, windows and mirrors. Ammonia does demand respect — when misused it is dangerous. Store in original container and keep away from children. Read and follow label directions. Never mix ammonia and chlorine bleach. At less than a penny, a tablespoon, a general cleaning solution can be made with one tablespoon of ammonia diluted with one quart of water. Window and mirror cleaner calls for one tablespoon ammonia in one quart of warm water. The amount needed for an effective oven cleaner is ½ cup ammonia full strength.

Vinegar is another mild cleaner with some special uses. It will remove hard water deposits from glass ware, rust stains from sinks and will brighten darkened aluminum pots and pans. Add one tablespoon vinegar to one quart warm water and you have an effective window cleaner ready to use.

A word of caution: Read all labels carefully before using any household chemical. An increasing number of cleaners contain a variety of chemicals, many of which are dangerous if improperly used. Keep all containers tightly covered in the original containers out of reach of children. Never mix household chemicals not specifically recommended for use together. Some cleaners are flammable while others are poisonous. Following label instructions exactly will produce the best cleaning results with a minimum of effort — and can help avoid costly problems such as damaging expensive surfaces.

Naturally the mixing and preparation one must do calls for time. It's your choice to make — a little time or more money.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

There have been a lot of obituaries written on the death of the American family... all premature. It may falter occasionally, regroup, divide, multiply, suffer erosion and gasp for air. But it endures.

During the holidays it does more than that. It flourishes. No one knows why. All we know is that the gathering of the clan at Thanksgiving is a ritual that must be shared with every man, woman and child in this country.

Young marrieds endure an Eatathon as they drag from in-law to in-law eating all day long. Children living in another state come home from their poverty pockets to be fattened up in a single day like a visit to the feed lot. And singles who cannot get to their families are absorbed into the lives of people they don't even know.

A bachelor I will call "Jim" wrote last year to tell me of his invitation to have dinner with a large family.

"Grandpa led us all in the Lord's prayer. It was beautiful, and then I heard one youngster say, 'Our Father, who are in heaven, how'd you know my name?' From across the table, it became, 'Howard be thy name' and finally a small voice from the end said, 'Lead us not into Penn Station.'

"Grandpa started to carve the turkey when the young man on my right said he was working on a new turkey for Thanksgiving... a cross between a turkey and a kangaroo.

Said it would be the first turkey in history you could stuff from the outside.

"Everyone ate too much, talked too loud, laughed relentlessly and said absolutely nothing meaningful. The lady next to me confessed she was on a diet. Said she had to stop exercising on a pogo stick as it registered 6.5 on the Richter scale. She added, 'If the Good Lord wanted me to be on my toes all the time, He wouldn't have given me so much to sit down on.' She then took her diet pills and crushed them in her napkin with the butt-end of her knife, sprinkled them on the dollop of whipped cream on her apple pie and said, 'Reducing pills taste lousy' so I have to disguise them."

"The kids pounded the piano, the air filled with cigar smoke and the dishes weren't cleared away before they started to eat again. It was wonderful."

For whatever they are, families have a way of usurping wars, personal problems, tensions, pressures and disappointments. It's the last bastion of human relationships that make no demands on you. All you have to do for membership is to show up. They are rather wonderful.

Intentions Fall Short

The U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives went home for the holidays, and most members also had re-election campaigns in the back of their minds.

Put off for another time (and perhaps other lawmakers?) was the matter of achieving some fiscal restraint in governmental operations.

This country has endured a string of $200 billion budget deficits, and our federal debt of over $1 trillion has become a wasteful burden that requires interest payments beginning to rival the largest categories of the federal budget.

Few lawmakers appear willing to face up to a problem largely created by themselves.

Nor has the president been especially helpful. For with the kind of spending cuts that are needed there was also needed tax increases, too, to achieve anything near the desired end results. The president has refused to support any tax hike this year, and with Congress' normal reluctance to raise taxes prior to approaching elections, the results were foreordained.

Last June the Congress voted a requirement the lawmakers approve a three-year package raising $73 billion in new taxes and making $12.3 billion in spending cuts before adjourning for the year. It would have been a start, but nothing came of those intentions. They might have done it.

Congress had this much going for acting before year's end: the nation's economic recovery is enjoying a strength beyond anything forecasters anticipated. Supporters for decisive action on fiscal restraint rarely have had the blessing of such favorable timing.

Spending money you don't have can cost ordinary citizens. The laws that demand financial honesty and prudence on the part of private citizens just don't apply to mismanagement of governmental finances.

Speed Important

The possibility of voting tabulators was a matter back before the County Commissioners last week.

The commissioners met with the Board of Elections, which was instructed by Commissioners Chairman Charles Gaskins to determine what was needed and "we'll see about it."

We hope everyone concerned moves promptly. There is a far more modern way available to vote and tabulate the votes. Many North Carolina counties already use voting tabulators and certainly Pitt County is large enough to join them.

This is a project which should be carried out before the big primary of next year.

Depth Of Concern

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's selection of Secretary of State George Shultz to respond to "The Day After" shows the depth of administration concern over public reaction to the ABC anti-nuclear film.

The administration's calm public posture is exemplified by Reagan pollster Richard Wirthlin. After viewing the film several times, he said it was something everybody should watch. In fact, the president and his men are worried about the political impact of the emotionally draining film on public support for nuclear deterrence.

Shultz was picked by Reagan to explain the necessity of deterrence on Ted Koppel's ABC panel show following "The Day After." But White House aides insisted that Shultz appear first — and he will do so from his living room at home — and that he appear alone.

Friends of Jeane Kirkpatrick, who know that she will quit as ambassador to the United Nations after the current General Assembly session, are trying to keep her in the Reagan Cabinet as U.S. representative to the Organization of American States (OAS).

That would satisfy Kirkpatrick's complaints about the horrors of commuting between New York and Washington. It also would be a belling in Latin America, where she is the favorite American diplomat.

Actually, the OAS job is a middle-level post not close to Cabinet status. But by so elevating it with a stroke of the pen, President Reagan could with a single action satisfy Kirkpatrick and place a higher priority on Western Hemisphere affairs.

Jesse Jackson exploded in anger when a nationally-known Democratic operative informed him of reports that a deal had been cut for his eventual support of Walter F. Mondale for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Word is circulating in the black community that hands have been shaken between the Mondale and Jackson camps for a future alliance. Besides angering Jackson, such talk undercuts his credibility as a presidential candidate.

A footnote: Although most elected black officials support either Mondale or Jackson, Sen. John Glenn may soon make a bid for backing from Chicago's Mayor Harold Washington. Never enthusiastic about the Jackson candidacy, Washington is not pleased that his enemies in the city's regular Democratic organization are all backing Mondale.

NEW YORK (AP) — What color is your collar?

Not so long ago, the answer to that question for just about every American worker was one of two hues — white or blue.

But in the past couple of decades the job marketplace, like a lot of other things, has grown more complicated with sweeping social, economic and technological change.

More and more exceptions arose to the old stereotypes that equated "white collar" with high pay and high status in the world of work, and "blue collar" with lower pay and lower status.

For example, how to classify the technician who could straighten out the problem with a balky computer while the white-collar types stood by wringing

RALEIGH — Mike McClister of Chapel Hill, a nationally recognized political consultant, got his start in politics when, as a UNC undergraduate, he went home to Tennessee in 1962 to work on the re-election campaign of Sen. Estes Kefauver.

McClister has never worked in any other kind of business. He's worked in 150 campaigns around the country and abroad, and during that time has compiled a good many stories and an acerbic perspective on the business of democracy. Presented here is a bit of his wisdom as gleaned from a speech made before the N.C. Association of Educators in mid-November.

"A political expert," McClister told the teachers, "is someone from out of town. I'm going to Seattle tomorrow where I'll be a positive genius."

"A political critic is someone who comes down from the mountain after the battle and shoots the wounded."

"A political poll can be very, very accurate." For those who can't understand how a sample of 600 voters can represent the intentions of a million citizens, just consider the blood sample the doctor takes. "He doesn't have to take it all out."

Six months before a primary, only 20 percent of the voting population is paying much attention to politics. The other 80 percent will begin to do so about 42 days before election day, although recent years have found the voters getting interested later and later, McClister said.

In 1984, there will be 4.2 million voting age citizens of North Carolina. But only 2.6 million will be registered, and, of the two million registered Democrats, only 800,000 will vote in the May primary.

Political candidates better know how to advertise well because they face a lot of competition. Every week, McClister said, North Carolinians are confronted by an average of 3,000 advertisements.

The Legislature is about to get back in the business of feeding itself. A subcommittee of the Legislative Services Commission has decided to take over operation of the legislative snack bar.

Last year, the commission gave Ron Faison of Raleigh a one-year contract to run both the snack bar and the main dining room. Faison said he lost money and the commission gave him a $6,000 subsidy in May. Under consideration are plans to give him another small subsidy to help offset his losses.

But the subcommittee decided recently not to renew Faison's contract and to run the snack bar with state workers. Noting that past attempts to do so cost the state even more money than the subsidy paid to Faison, the subcommittee vowed to keep close watch on the snack bar and make sure it breaks even financially.

There won't be a need to operate the dining room until the June short session and the subcommittee said it might look for a church or civic club that would be interested in taking over its operation as a fundraising project.

Insurance Commissioner John Ingram got a scolding from an English teacher when he finished speaking to the NCAE convention. In his speech, Ingram called for "reducing classroom size."

The English teacher was appalled at Ingram's inexact language and told him that "if we keep reducing classroom size, eventually we'll be meeting in the broom closet."

Ingram was promoting reduced numbers of children in each class, not smaller rooms in school buildings.

'Secret: Return After Reading'

"Boy, this stuff is boring. It don't have anything in there about how we can break out of here, does it?"

"Don't expect so. They got lots of maps of prisons in foreign countries showing how the prisoners can break out from there, but none for Lorton."

"What's in that confidential folder?"

"Just a bunch of stuff about death squads knocking off the peasants, and how to handle it if the press starts asking too many questions."

"You mean they're cooling it when it comes to death squads in other countries?"

"Sure looks like it."

"Then why am I doing 20 years for just shooting my wife's boyfriend?"

"State Department don't get involved with what we do in this country. They just supposed to protect criminals in other countries from going to jail."

"Hey, Jeeter, you used to work in the government before you heisted the credit union. You think this stuff got any value for us?"

"It sure does. When they find out their files are missing they're going to go ape until they get them back. What I suggest we do is divvy up the top-secret folders amongst ourselves and then deal with them."

"How do you mean deal?"

"Well, let's say I'll give them back their plans for supplying the rebels in Nicaragua, if they take five years off my sentence."

"Maybe they'll give us five years more for having the top-secret folders in our possession."

"They won't if we tell them we'll blow the whistle to '60 Minutes' on what the State Department really thinks of Pierre Trudeau."

"Is that in the files?"

"It's right here in this top-secret folder on psychiatric profiles of heads of state."

"Hey, man, give me a real good one. I got a parole hearing coming up soon, and if I give them back something they really need, the secretary of state might appear himself to recommend it."

"Sure, Shorty. Here's a game plan on how the State Department is going to shaft the secretary of defense with the White House. They'll do anything to get that one back. Don't shove, there's enough to go around for everybody, but hide them good because they're going to tear this joint apart to find them."

"Hey, we forgot something. We're supposed to repair this cabinet."

"Don't give it no mind. No one at the State Department is ever going to want to see the outside of this cabinet again."

Strength For Today

The evangelist, Dwight L. Moody, used to tell an interesting story of how he smiled a whole family into church.

It seems that as Mr. Moody went every day from his home to his study in the church, he passed a certain house at the window of which he once noticed a child. He smiled at the child, and the child smiled back at him. The next day, when he passed, there was an older child standing beside the younger.

It became an established routine for the children to be there at a certain time to smile at this kindly man and wave their greetings.

Finally, other children appeared at the window, also, and, at last, the mother. From this contact, which began with the smile toward a child, Moody found his way into the home, and the people found their way into Moody's church.

It is well to keep in mind that a smile is one of the most disarming, subtle and overwhelming factors of a charming and forceful personality.

Collar Colors Have Become Outdated thinking about jobs in the 1980s up to date.

"The new classifications mirror occupational realities better than the former system," writes Martha Farnsworth Riche, an associate editor of the magazine. They "are based on what you do, not on how much education you have or how much money you make."

"Instead of the major group 'white-collar workers,' there is a new group called 'managerial and professional specialty.' There is also a group called 'technical, sales and administrative support.'

"Another is 'precision production, craft and repair.' This group, along with one called 'operators, fabricators and laborers,' includes many of the occupations that used to be in the blue-collar category."

The other two groupings are "service occupations" and "farming, forestry and fishing."

A change in classification methods like this may seem to be of interest only to statisticians — who, presumably, are either "professional specialty" or "administrative support" workers.

However, as American Demographics observes, the old white collar-vs.-blue collar standard, as long as it remains in people's minds, is a problem for many individuals trying to negotiate their way through the job marketplace. Studies have found, for example, that it stands as a big obstacle in the paths of numerous older male workers seeking to win promotions or change careers.

The evidence leaves little doubt that the American economy has changed drastically in the past four decades. In 1940, there were four "white collar" workers for every three in "blue collar" jobs. By 1982, the white collars outnumbered the blue by nearly 2-1.

In addition, American Demographics points out, "the content of a job often changes even though its title may not. A 'printing compositor' used to be someone who had the skill to work in hot type. Now, because printing technology has changed, a compositor may be someone who pastes strips of paper."

With all that has changed, the magazine concludes, "people may not be willing to give up simple and familiar categories. It remains to be seen whether our images catch up to reality."

New Strictness Due New Federal Prison Violence

By TERRI COLBY
Associated Press Writer
MARION, Ill. (AP) — The nation's most violent criminals used to go to Alcatraz, but now they are locked up in the U.S. Penitentiary at Marion, located in the rolling hills of southern Illinois.

The setting is tranquil, but life behind the concrete walls and barbed wire fences can be dangerous for the staff and inmates. Since it opened in 1964 to replace Alcatraz as the toughest of all federal prisons, 24 inmates and three guards have died violent deaths there.

And the violence continues.

Last month, two guards, one with just a few months to go before retirement, were killed in separate stabbing incidents on the same day. Within a week, an inmate was stabbed to death in his cell. After the deaths, there was a rash of assaults on guards. Shakedowns turned up hundreds of homemade weapons.

"Is it open season on guards now?" asked Dean Leech, executive assistant to Warden Harold Miller. "I certainly hope not, but the blood's been let."

Sixty veteran guards from nine other federal prisons were brought to Marion to bolster security.

Since the guards' deaths, the prison's 360 inmates are more closely guarded when moved from one part of the prison to another. Three guards, two armed with riot batons, escort prisoners whenever they are moved. Inmates who formerly ate in a dining hall with others from their cellblock now eat in their cells. Prisoners are allowed fewer personal belongings so guards can find hidden weapons more easily.

Inmates are sent to Marion when they cause problems at other federal institutions or are security risks at state prisons. Few, if any, are ever sent directly to Marion after being convicted of a crime, nor are they likely to be released from the prison into the community. If they cause no problems at Marion, inmates can expect to be transferred to a less restrictive prison.

"Marion's mission is to house essentially the worst of the worst," said Leech.

That presents prison officials with a unique problem: How can an inmate be punished for killing in prison when he is already serving consecutive life sentences?

The U.S. Supreme Court abolished the federal death penalty in 1972, and while Illinois has reinstated the death penalty, the state has no jurisdiction at Marion.

"The law the way it's set up today, the only persons who can give a death sentence are the inmates and they impose it at their will," Miller said.

U.S. Attorney Frederick Hess, responsible for prosecuting crimes committed at Marion, says inmates are in some ways rewarded for killing in prison. When brought to trial, an inmate gets a change of scenery, different food and a chance to escape, he said.

"Consequently, I believe that by killing they have everything to gain," he said.

Hess said he doesn't know if the death penalty would act as a deterrent to prison murders, but he said it would act as "the ultimate restraint." A federal death penalty, said Miller, would make Marion a safer place for inmates and staff.

James Roberts, a Carbondale, Ill., attorney who represents a number of Marion inmates, said he is concerned about his clients' safety.

"It's a very dangerous place to be," Roberts said. "It's not safe in that institution for guards and it's not safe for inmates."

Roberts and other attorneys have claimed that some inmates have been beaten and mistreated since the October killings. Prison officials deny this.

Of the inmates, Roberts said, "They're scared because they're afraid they're going to be hurt ... and they're angry because they feel like they're being punished for something that they had nothing to do with."

The two inmates accused in the deaths of the guards have not been publicly identified. They have been moved to an undisclosed location, Leech said. Hess said he plans to take the case before a federal grand jury later this month.

Roberts said he is concerned, too, with the attitude of the prison administration.

killings.

The 185 correctional officers at Marion earn an average of $22,000 a year, Leech said. They don't carry guns because inmates who spend their time lifting weights easily could wrest a weapon from a guard.

The recent deaths haven't deterred people from looking for work at the prison. Leech said guards at other institutions have inquired about transfers and local residents have applied for jobs.

"This is a challenge for people in corrections," he said. "It's a difficult place to work. To some people, I guess it's like the major leagues."

N.C. Christmas Tree Sales Made By Mail

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
After 10 years of growing Christmas trees on his mountain farm, Waightsell Avery decided to give people all over the country a chance to buy his trees through the mail.

Avery's advertisements for his new mail-order business, Highland Fraser Firs, have attracted orders from as far away as Puerto Rico. With more than a month to go before Christmas, Avery has already sold hundreds of the trees.

"One day, we took orders for 108 — all in one day," said Avery's wife, Linda. "I don't know exactly how many we've sold so far but the trees are selling real well."

Avery, whose tree farm is located in the hamlet of Plumtree in Avery County, is the only Christmas-tree grower in the state to sell trees by mail.

The Christmas tree business is a $27 million industry in North Carolina. Most of the 2,000 growers are located in the mountain counties of Watauga, Avery and Allegheny.

Bill Stanton of North Carolina State University's agricultural extension office said growers will sell about 2.5 million trees this year. They produce 6 percent of the nation's Christmas trees annually.

Avery's advertisements in Southern Living and Town and Country magazines describe his Fraser firs as "perfectly shaped." The six foot trees, cut to order and complete with an Avery-designed plastic stand, sell for $59.95 apiece.

The price includes packaging and shipment by United Parcel Service, with guaranteed delivery to the door of the buyer with five days anywhere in the continental United States. The ads give a number of call to place orders. The trees can be charged to credit cards.

Stanton said Avery's idea is something that may catch on with other North Carolina tree farmers.

"It seems to be a viable business, so I don't see why it couldn't work for some other farmers," he said. "Right now, there is only one other tree farmer selling trees by mail and he sells white pines in another state."

The Averys say most of the 25,000 trees they will sell this year will be cut and shipped by truck to Eastern states. Most of their mail-order trees are to be delivered between Dec. 12 and Dec. 20. Some have already been shipped to the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

"We're going to be real busy trying to get a lot of trees out at the same time," Mrs. Avery said.

To Try Accused Boys As Adults

BALTIMORE (AP) — Three teen-agers accused of fatally shooting a 14-year-old boy in a school hallway because he refused to give them his $65 jacket have been charged as adults, police said.

Police spokesman Dennis Hill said Ranson Watkins, Alfred Chestnut and Andrew Stewart, all 16, were arrested Thursday on charges of homicide, robbery and a handgun violation. They faced a hearing today.

Eyewitness accounts led to their arrests in the Nov. 18 killing of DeWitt Duckett at Harlem Park Junior High School, Hill said. The youth was shot once in the neck at point-blank range.

El Salvador Rebels Have Intricate Infrastructure

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer
CHIRILAGUA, El Salvador (AP) — The guerrillas who roam eastern El Salvador are backed by intricate logistical support systems and seem to make up with cunning and discipline what they lack in supplies.

A trip to a rebel camp in the mountains of San Miguel province in southeast El Salvador made clear the difficulty government forces would face if they tried to oust the seasoned insurgents from the forests and brush lands of these rocky highlands.

The guerrilla "infrastructure" is impressive: it has its own farms, radio system, hospital, armory, propaganda office, even a silkscreening operation for printing colorful rebel T-shirts.

In the hills above this guerrilla-held town, rebels live a spartan life, finding refuge among the peasants and in their own large bases.

The People's Revolutionary Army (ERP), one of five active guerrilla bands in El Salvador, is active in this part of the country. In September, the ERP launched a series of attacks that military sources grudgingly admit gave the rebels an initiative they still hold.

The four-hour slog through the mountains to the camp starts on a back road leading west from here, then veers to trails that often dip into deep ditches covered by canopies of tall grass or milpa stalks, which resemble corn.

The paths vanish into streams and rivers, emerging again through pasture or swampland. The guerrillas follow them with no maps and no hesitation.

Occasionally a rebel vanishes behind rocks or into a hut. Crackling static sounds from a radio network that controls the approach to the camp even from miles out.

The camp is spread out in clusters of straw-roofed huts over an apparently large area. The number and size of the clusters, said one resident, "is information we keep to ourselves."

Inside a hut, women prepare food for hundreds, cooking beans and corn in halves of 55-gallon drums. Next door, an armory is packed with well-oiled rifles, mortars and heavy machine guns, almost all American-made. Many American weapons are captured from the Salvadoran army, and others are bought on the international arms black market and smuggled into the country by land, sea and air routes.

A camp training ground has an obstacle course — low strands of barbed wire for crawling under and barricades for crawling over.

Up a hill, another cluster includes a smaller kitchen, a print shop, short-wave radios, a flag-making operation and sewing machines for turning out red ERP armbands.

A videotape array includes a Betamax and television screen rigged to run on automobile batteries. These are lugged from village to village to show propaganda messages and videotapes of victorious guerrilla raids.

"They call us Marxists," he said. "We follow some ideas of Marx, but prefer to think of them as 'pro human-ity.'"

The guerrilla game is a deadly one but friendly persuasion plays its part.

The rebels had captured three young government soldiers who had gone to Chirilagua on leave to visit their families.

They were put in a guerrilla supply formation to be taken into the mountains to be questioned.

The prisoners shook with fear at first, but calmed down as the march progressed and they were assured they would be freed unharmed.

They were asked to carry an equal share of the supplies, rested as often as their captors and were offered food and water more frequently.

Residents of Chirilagua said this is common strategy. Young soldiers are captured, indoctrinated but well-treated for a few days, then freed.

"Hard-line cases might be kept a little longer," said a religious worker in Chirilagua. "They will keep them for a couple of weeks then turn them loose. Then the army won't trust them anymore. It has the same effect as if the soldier was a battle casualty."

Villagers in Chirilagua say rebels pay for what they take, but often set the price themselves. Cars are often "borrowed," then returned, sometimes with fresh dents, sometimes with money on the seat for gasoline used.

New decrees posted in this village are more concerned with keeping the streets clean than with making changes in the local government.

The guerrillas banned the sale of "guaro," a fiery raw cane liquor whose popularity is a mystery to outsiders. But there have been few other changes.

Up in the guerrilla camp less earthly matters are tended by Father Rogelio Poncel, a 44-year-old Belgian priest who linked up with the guerrillas on Christmas Day 1980, and has been there ever since.

He carries no weapon but says he knows guerrilla priests who do and admires them for it.

"The Bible confronts established order," the priest said. "It must be seen from the point of view of the poor, and Christ was poor. The Bible carries a message of liberation."

"A Christian, a priest, must be a revolutionary," he said. "How can we conform what we preach with a system that oppresses and exploits?"

Sales, Use Taxes

Net sales and use tax collections in Pitt County during October amounted to $398,346, according to state Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch.

Totals in several neighboring counties for October included: Beaufort, $145,256; Carteret, $228,201; Craven, $277,843; Edgecombe, $153,921; Greene, $19,479; Lenoir, $220,640; Martin, $72,368; Nash, $334,773; Wayne, $317,771; and Wilson, $256,890.

Net collections in the 99 participating counties during the month amounted to $23,433,818, Lynch said.

Appeal

NEW YORK (AP) — Church World Services, an arm of the National Council of Churches is appealing to U.S. churches for money to help fund relief and reconstruction work in Grenada, Lebanon, Vietnam and Turkey.

Grenada was invaded by U.S.-led forces last month, and Lebanon has been the site of years of strife. An earthquake struck Turkey on Nov. 4, and a typhoon hit Vietnam in early October.

Prison In Few Felony Arrests

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A Justice Department sampling has found that fewer than half the people arrested on state felony charges are prosecuted and only 5 percent are sentenced to more than a year in prison.

The sampling of more than 400,000 felony arrests in four states also found that people arrested for felonies were 12 times more likely to be prosecuted in the Eastern state surveyed than in the Western one.

The department's Bureau of Justice Statistics, which released the figures Thursday, had no explanation for the wide disparity in how states deal with people arrested for felonies.

The bureau called the figures surprising, but warned against drawing broad conclusions from them and said they demonstrate the need for greater reporting on the disposition of criminal cases in the states.

The figures came from an Eastern, a Mid-Atlantic, a North-Central and a Western state. Each state reported on a different 12-month period between 1979 and 1982. Two of the states had populations below 10 million and two above that figure.

The bureau's director, Steven R. Schlesinger, said the states provided the data on the condition that they not be identified by name, because the information has not been "thoroughly verified and they wished to avoid premature speculation and interpretation." One state said its sampling methods may have produced figures not truly reflective of its experience.

The overall data showed that 48 percent of those arrested for felonies were prosecuted. But the Western state prosecuted only 8 percent of these cases, while the Eastern state prosecuted 97 percent. In the Mid-Atlantic state, the prosecution rate was 77 percent, and in the North-Central state it was 70 percent.

Prosecution rates were higher for violent crimes than for the far more numerous property crimes, but the regional differences remained. Overall, 84 percent of the homicide, rape, robbery and aggravated assault cases were prosecuted.

In the Eastern state, the prosecution rate for violent crimes was 96 percent, compared to 27 percent in the Western state. The Mid-Atlantic state prosecuted 78 percent and the North-Central state, 65 percent.

The bureau said these were the first aggregate figures ever compiled on the processing of criminal defendants and noted that "none of the answers is known on a national level" to such questions as: how many people were charged with a particular type of crime in the United States in any given period? How many were released; how many were prosecuted; how many convicted or acquitted; how many sentenced to prison?

The bureau said "it would be unwise to draw any firm conclusions" from the preliminary sampling but said the data does illustrate "a few broad patterns."

The bureau noted different overall prosecution rates for whites, 34 percent, than for non-whites, 79 percent; and a different rate for men, 51 percent, than for women, 35 percent.

It noted that acquittals were extremely rare, 1 percent for whites and 2 percent for non-whites.

Only 5 percent of all those arrested received sentences of more than a year, but such sentences were handed out to 15 percent of those charged with violent felonies.

Homicide was the crime most likely to be prosecuted and to result in a sentence of more than one year, which happened in 35 percent of the cases.

Schlesinger said there is "a long way to go before we will have the type of offender reporting systems that this country needs."

"If we gave the sort of attention to crime statistics that we currently give to sports statistics, we would have reliable statistics from all 50 states instead of the preliminary ones from these four states," he added.

He said such data could help officials determine how to reduce the number of releases without court action, whether a better definition is needed for reasonable arrests and what procedures may be needed to ensure equal treatment of the arrested regardless of race, sex or age.

Decide Rebels Lack Strength

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA has concluded that U.S.-supported rebels in Nicaragua lack the military strength or political support to overthrow the Central American nation's leftist government, according to a published report.

The Washington Post, which quoted unnamed congressional sources, reported today there were indications that Central Intelligence Agency's finding had prompted the Reagan administration to consider ways to reduce its support for the counterrevolutionaries.

The CIA study said the "contras" fighting Nicaragua's Sandinista government lacked sufficient financial backing or adequate manpower to mount a successful fight to topple the revolutionary regime.

The guerrillas have 10,000 to 12,000 fighters, according to U.S. officials, while the Nicaraguan government has an army of 25,000 with an even larger militia.

The agency's conclusions were contained in a National Intelligence Estimate to congressional oversight committees this fall.

CIA spokesman Dale L. Peterson refused to comment on the account.

The newspaper reported that in a statement to the committee, President Reagan outlined conditions for cessation of hostilities against Nicaragua. Reagan said he wants a general amnesty for the "contras" and a pledge by Nicaragua to stop supporting anti-government rebels in El Salvador.

The presidential statement was in the form of the certification to the intelligence committees required by law that a particular covert action — in this case, support of the anti-Sandinista "contras" — was in the national interest.

Interim Grenada Leader Unable To Fill Position

By STEVE WILSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Alister McIntyre, appointed to head Grenada's interim government following the U.S.-led invasion, will not be able to take the post because of a serious illness, Commonwealth officials said today.

Patsy B. Robertsen, a spokeswoman for the Commonwealth Secretariat, said McIntyre would have to undergo four months of "intensive medical care" in Geneva, Switzerland.

Ms. Robertsen would not specify his ailment, but McIntyre, a Grenadian, is known to suffer from diabetes. She said there is no indication who would replace him as acting leader of the Caribbean island.

Alan Lamond, a spokesman for the U.N. Conference on Trade and Development in Geneva, confirmed McIntyre was ill and required "immediate specialized medical treatment" for an unforeseen condition.

McIntyre is UNCTAD's deputy secretary-general with a salary of between $80,000 and $85,000. He entered the hospital this week, Lamond said.

Leaders of the Commonwealth, an association of Britain and its former colonies, are holding a summit conference in India this week. Caribbean nations at the conference supported the U.S. intervention in Grenada, — itself a Commonwealth member — but three African nations denounced the Oct. 25 invasion.

The leaders today journeyed from New Delhi to the resort city of Goa for informal talks which Commonwealth Secretary Shridath Ramphal said were designed to mend the rift over the Grenada issue.

McIntyre was appointed to head the interim government by Grenada's governor general, Sir Paul Scoon, following the invasion. The invasion came after leftist Prime Minister Maurice Bishop was killed in a takeover by a hardline Marxist military junta.

Tony Rushford, acting attorney general in Grenada, said Thursday in the capital of St. George's that he presumed Scoon would consult with the interim council to decide what to do about replacing McIntyre.

"It leaves a big, bloody gap," said Rushford. He added that Nicholas Braithwaite, who has been acting council chairman, might be appointed to the post.

The interim government is to run Grenada until elections can be held, probably sometime after May.

In St. George's, about 25 people marched through the downtown area Thursday chanting: "Do you want Cuba? No! Do you want Russia? No! Do you want Americans? Yes!" Their signs read: "Cuba, leave Grenada alone," and "President Reagan, please let U.S. troops stay with us."

Reagan has set Dec. 23 as the pullout date for the 1,200 remaining combat troops. But the U.S. commander in Grenada, Maj. Gen. Jack Farris, has said some combat troops may still be on the island after Christmas.

The president's announcement two weeks ago alarmed many Grenadians, who say they're worried that Cuban President Fidel Castro wants to avenge the rout of Cuban soldiers and construction workers here by the U.S.-led invasion Oct. 25.

Teen Dems Meeting Planned

The Pitt County Democratic Teen Dems will be addressed by Janice Faulkner at the Nov. 30 meeting at 7 p.m. at the Allied Health Building near the corner of Greenville Boulevard and Charles Street.

Ms. Faulkner will speak to the group on the Democratic Party organization and the electoral process. Ms. Faulkner is executive director of the Regional Development Institute and past executive director of the State Democratic Party.

All interested Pitt County teens are urged to come to the meeting. Officers for the year will be elected.

Council On Aging To Meet

The board of directors of the Pitt County Council on Aging will hold a called meeting Monday at noon in the council's office at 1717 W. Fifth St. The public is invited.

Shaw Alumni Are Honored

Two members of the Pitt County Chapter of the Shaw University Alumni Association were honored last Friday during their Class '50th anniversary.

Ms. Esthes Rich and Mrs. Mildred Graves Thompson of Greenville, 1933 graduates of Shaw University, located in Raleigh, were honored with half century awards.

Mrs. Evelyn Lane Sanders of Greenville, secretary of the chapter was second runner up for the title of Miss Shaw University Alumni. She was showered with flowers and rode as a special guest in the Raleigh Christmas Parade last Saturday.

Three Collisions Investigated

An estimated $5,700 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from an 8:34 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, at the Mall Drive intersection, involving cars driven by Debrah Ann Warner of 220 East Woodstock Dr., and Debra Johnson Whitley of Snow Hill.

Police, who charged Ms. Whitley with failing to stop for a stop sign, set damage to the Warner car at $2,000 and damage to the Whitley vehicle at $1,000.

Cars driven by Donna Jean Stocks of Route 2, Ayden, and Everne Lane of New Haven, Conn., collided about 7:34 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 150 feet east of the Memorial Drive intersection, causing $1,000 damage to the Stocks car and $700 damage to the Lane car.

A 3:15 p.m. collision at the intersection of Plaza Drive and Evans Street involved a vehicle driven by Richard Henry Hardy of Route 13, Greenville and a car driven by Henton Long Chesson of Washington.

Investigators, who said no damage resulted to the Hardy vehicle, charged Hardy with following too close and set damage to the Chesson car at $1,000.

Surgery To Be Discussed

Professor Robert Bolande of the ECU School of Medicine's pathology department will speak Nov. 28 on the parallels between ritualistic surgery in early peoples and some of the medical practices today.

Bolande will discuss his ideas at the last "Perspectives" program of the fall series, entitled "The Evolution of the Practice of Circumcision." He will speak at 12:30 p.m. in the conference room at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The program is sponsored by the ECU School of Medicine's humanities program. The public is welcome to attend.

Organizational Meet Set

Alumni of East Carolina University's School of Home Economics are invited to attend an organizational meeting of ECU's home economics alumni society planned for Dec. 10 at 11 a.m.

The meeting will be followed by a covered dish luncheon at which December home economics graduates will be recognized.

All graduates of ECU's home economics program are welcome to attend the meeting. Further information and luncheon reservations are available from Dr. Jane King Teleki of the home economics faculty (Class of 1965), Home Economics building, ECU, Greenville, or telephone 757-6891.

Farm Bureau Names Delegates

Delegates to the state convention representing the Pitt County Farm Bureau were named at the Tuesday night meeting. The convention will be held in Asheville Dec. 4-7.

Named were: James N. Galloway, Ben A. Gardner, Charles Hart, Bruce Garis, Wilbur Worthington, David H. Smith, R.G. Lewis, Fenner Allen Jr., Richard Cannon, John I. Brown, Earl Sermons, R.M. Dilda, Margie Hart, Alma Worthington, and R.H. McLawhorn.

Alternates are: Mamie Smith, Charlotte Garis, Helen Wooten, Louise Lewis, Lilly Sermons, Patsy Galloway, Grace Cannon, J.C. Galloway, Jackie Gardner and Lucille Dilda.

Jim Galloway, Lois Briley and Atlas Wooten were recognized for outstanding service to the organization for the past year.

A movie "The American Farmer" was shown in conjunction with Farm-City Week.

Church Cutting Back Programs

OTTAWA (AP) — The Anglican Diocese of Ottawa says it will cut programs and mission work next year because annual contributions from parishes were $95,600 less than expected.

Rev. Bill Gilbert, the program director, says the cuts have forced "painful examinations and decisions" on church work. Hardest hit will be the ministry to senior citizens.

Families And Strangers Share Holiday

By DANA FIELDS

Associated Press Writer
Millions of Americans stepped out for parades or just settled back to watch football, but Thanksgiving meals formed the holiday's centerpiece as families both intimate and impromptu gathered for the oldest of national observances.

In Massachusetts, where the hardy people of Plimoth Plantation first gave thanks for a bountiful harvest 350 years ago, the family of Marine Cpl. John L'Heureux felt especially blessed Thursday. L'Heureux, a wounded survivor of October's terrorist bombing in Beirut, was home from Lebanon for his first Thanksgiving outside a barracks in three years.

And inside the walls of the North Dakota Penitentiary, it was the biggest day of the year for more than 400 inmates whose friends and relatives came to visit, said Warden Winston Satron.

A half-million people stood in brisk winds and temperatures in the low 30s to watch Detroit's big Thanksgiving Day parade, while parents in New York hoisted tots who screamed and cheered as a helium-filled Superman, Woody Woodpecker and other favorite characters floated past in Macy's 57th annual parade.

"We're not used to this kind of weather," said a shivering Sharon Kaddyama, a hula dancer in the Mililani, Hawaii, high school band before her unit stepped off in New York's chilly drizzle.

Across the nation, those who felt fortunate gave thanks by sharing their time, money and food, providing instant families for others whose holiday would otherwise have been gloomy. Denis Jensen, who until three years ago was a senior vice president at Arkansas' First National Bank in Little Rock, woke up early to collect homeless people from the emptied streets downtown.

Now the director of the Union Rescue Mission, Jensen oversaw dinners for about 235 people and delivery of food baskets to 200 more. "I went out and picked up four carloads of hoboes," Jensen said. "They feel unloved."

The New Life Evangelistic Church in St. Louis served hundreds of hungry people and delivered food to an additional 2,350 families.

"This year we're seeing more families, more women with children," said the Rev. Larry Rice, pastor to the city's homeless. "Some have their utilities shut off and can't cook. Others have no food. And some are just lonely."

In Utah, where the Salvation Army fed 1,300 people, restaurateur Chris Ritzakis roasted 60 turkeys for free meals for an additional 2,000.

"When I came to the United States in 1964, I hoped one day to afford something like this. I know the feeling of being alone on a holiday," said Ritzakis, a Greek immigrant who launched a personal tradition 11 years ago with two turkeys. He wouldn't disclose the cost because "that would destroy my purpose."

While the 92-year-old Union Rescue Mission on Los Angeles' skid row was serving 2,500 free meals, a group of Los Angeles doctors offered free house calls from 2 p.m. to 9 p.m. to anyone groaning from overeating or other woes.

The Pittsburgh Steelers were groaning from a 45-3 roasting at the hands of the Detroit Lions in one of two Thanksgiving National Football League games broadcast nationwide. In the other contest, it was the St. Louis Cardinals who turned turkey, losing 35-17 to the Dallas Cowboys.

The fattest turkeys in Nederland, Texas, weren't on anyone's table Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. Tom Turkey, a friendly pair of pets weighing about 40 pounds each, instead feasted on tortillas and cornbread courtesy of their owners, Jim and Addie Garsea.

President Reagan marked the holiday at his California ranch, while an X-rated movie palace a few blocks from the White House laid out a turkey buffet for its patrons.

More than 38 million Americans were expected to travel during the long weekend, and the National Safety Council estimated that 400 to 500 would die on highways. By early today, more than 75 motorists had been killed.

One of those who stayed at home was Ruth Rushing, a 71-year-old widow in Phoenix, Ariz. She enjoyed one of her "best Thanksgivings ever" because of three inmates who got a special week-long furlough from the Safford Federal Prison Camp to repair massive damage to her house from a wild thunderstorm last summer.

"It's going to be right lonely around here when they leave," Mrs. Rushing said. "You've never met a nicer group of gentlemen."

Three Airline Flights Aborted Due Incidents

By The Associated Press

A seagull sucked into a jet engine forced an Air Florida flight's quick return to a Chicago airport, while two United Airlines jetliners aborted takeoffs in California when an engine blew apart on one and smoke filled the cabin of the other.

Passengers were shocked but safe in the three unrelated incidents Thursday, all of which occurred on Boeing 737 jetliners, according to authorities.

The pilot of Air Florida's Flight 3 to Florida turned around shortly after takeoff from Chicago's Midway Airport and landed with just one engine operating after the seagull shut down the other, Loretta Bridgworth, a spokeswoman for the Federal Aviation Administration, said.

An air traffic controller said smoke billowed from the dying engine after the plane landed with 124 passengers aboard. The passengers were bused to O'Hare International Airport where they caught an Eastern Airlines flight to Miami, said the controller, who asked not be identified.

At the Fresno, Calif., Air Terminal, about 25 passengers on United Airlines' Flight 1140 to San Francisco slid down escape chutes when smoke entered the cabin from overhead air nozzles.

The smoke, which passengers said they were told came from an air conditioning system problem, delayed the flight for about four hours. Two people complained of unspecified minor pains after the incident, an airport fireman said.

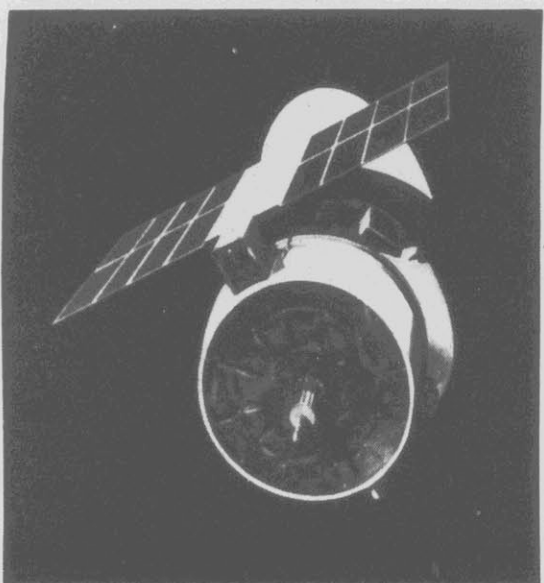

An engine on a United Airlines jet blew apart and scattered debris on a runway in Redding, Calif., as the plane was accelerating for takeoff, but the pilot was able to taxi back to the terminal, officials said.

No injuries were reported among the 69 passengers and five crew members on Flight 1163 to San Francisco, said United station manager Larry Fleschman.

Fleschman said a spinning compressor part at the front end of the gas turbine engine failed and flew apart.

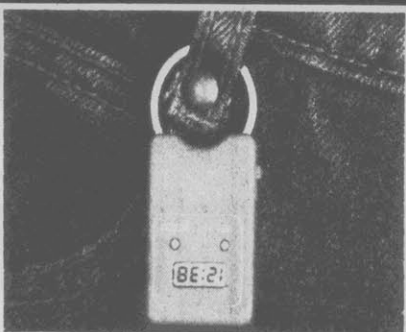

Capt. Victor Hansen said the plane was moving about 115 mph when he aborted the takeoff. He said there was plenty of rolling space on the runway despite the scattered parts.

"It's just one of those things that happens once in a while. ... Everything worked like it was supposed to and there were no problems," Hansen said. "It was no big deal."

IMMINENT DEATH — This is an artist's conception of the Infrared Astronomical Satellite (IRAS) in earth orbit. The NASA has announced the imminent death of this orbiting telescope that was launched last January. Cause of death: at 448 degrees below zero it is overheating. Since its launch, the Infrared Astronomical Satellite has produced direct evidence that ours is not the only solar system, discovered five comets and recorded more than 200,000 objects in the heavens — among other things. Cuban Footing May Become Precarious Elsewhere

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
Evicted from Grenada, Fidel Castro's far-flung foreign legion of teachers, technicians and troops still has footholds in two dozen other countries. But the footing may become precarious.

One country, Surinam, has already ordered Cubans out.
In another, Nicaragua, hundreds of teachers and other Cubans have been leaving in recent days. A third country, Angola, poses a potential trap for the Cubans.

Cuba's chief ally, the Soviet Union, is also finding a chillier reception in some corners of the Third World.
Iran expelled 18 Soviet diplomats last May, and the Liberian government this Tuesday ordered the Soviet ambassador to leave that country. Three other African nations — Somalia, Egypt and Equatorial Guinea — have expelled Soviet diplomats in recent years.

At the same time, some Cuban-Soviet friends, such as Angola, have sought to play down their ideological ties in order to attract Western investment capital in this time of international recession.

For the Cubans, the Grenada eviction process may have begun in mid-October, when the southern Caribbean island's Marxist leaders had a bloody falling-out. Prime Minister Maurice Bishop, a protégé of Cuban President Castro, was killed.

Within a week, U.S. forces were landing on the island.
Almost 800 Cubans, most of them airport construction workers, were caught in Grenada and expelled.

The impact was immediate:

— Cuba lost an ally and potential base in the southern Caribbean.

A reliable Cuban source — a defector familiar with Grenadian-Cuban dealings — has told The Associated Press that as far back as 1979, when Bishop took power, Cuban officials regarded the planned Grenada airport as a potential stopover point for a new southerly air route to re-supply Cuban troops in Africa.

— Within hours of the invasion, the military leader of Surinam, on South America's north coast, ordered the Cuban ambassador and much of his staff to leave the country within two weeks. Cuba had been a major benefactor of Lt. Col.
Desi Bouterse's regime.

Bouterse said he feared a repetition of Grenada's internal strife, implying the Cubans were to blame — something not proven.
Bouterse had begun loosening his Cuban connection several months ago, as Sur-inam's giant neighbor Brazil moved in with aid.

— The Grenada invasion consolidated a militantly anti-Castro front among English-speaking Caribbean island nations, which contributed units to the Grenada occupation force. Jamaica's Prime Minister Edward Seaga, who cut diplomatic relations with Havana two years ago, followed up the invasion by expelling four Soviet diplomats and a Cuban journalist from Jamaica.

In Latin America, Africa and the Middle East, an estimated 50,000 or more Cubans — including one-quarter of the communist island's 153,000-member armed forces — work as technical and military advisers, teachers or doctors, or as ordinary soldiers in far-away wars.

"Since 1975, when it went into Angola, Cuba has been reaching out as an international actor," Edward Gonzalez, a Rand Corp.
consultant and Cuba specialist at UCLA, noted in an interview. "And its expanded role means increased risk. It's especially risky when you can't control your clients, as in Grenada."

The 25,000 Cuban troops in Angola support the Marxist government in its war against anti-communist UNITA guerrillas. In Ethiopia, 11,000 Cuban soldiers help the Marxist government in its lingering conflict with Somalia.

Cuba-watcher Robert S.
Leiken, of Washington's Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, said the African involvement could be perilous for Castro.

"What the Cubans have to be concerned about now, after Grenada, is Angola.
UNITA is quite a powerful force, with support of the majority tribes," Leiken said. "The Cubans have a real problem there."

In Ethiopia, Gonzalez said, military leader Mengistu Haile Mariam may be ready in the long term for a thawing of relations with the United States, a thaw that could cool relations with the Cubans and Soviets, who are economically powerless to match the allure of U.S. and other Western aid.

In Nicaragua, where Cuba has an estimated 2,000 military advisers, Castro could be faced with a wrenching choice if war breaks out with other Central American nations, as Nicaragua's Sandinista leaders predict.

The Cuban president would have to choose between joining in the conflict — possibly inviting direct U.S. reprisal against Cuba — or abandoning his Sandinista allies.

In recent days, hundreds of the 5,000 or more other Cubans working in Nicaragua, many of them teachers, have left for home.
Nicaraguan officials say they and the Cubans do not want to provide an "excuse" for a U.S. invasion.

The trend is not all negative, however, for the Soviets and Cubans in the Third World.

In Egypt, where the Soviet ambassador was expelled in 1981, Moscow has been slowly repairing relations and may resume full diplomatic ties in the coming months.

The U.S. invasion of Grenada, meanwhile, gives Castro new ammunition in the propaganda war with the United States, both domestically in Cuba and internationally in the Third World, which almost universally condemned the U.S. action.

"Castro is now using the Grenada invasion as confirmation of what he has been saying all along about aggressive 'Yankee imperialism,'" Gonzalez said.

Greyhound Bus Striker Held

By The Associated Press
A striking Greyhound driver accused of shooting at a bus faced federal charges in San Antonio, Texas, while the competing Trailways bus line prepared for a busy conclusion to the holiday weekend.

The 53-year-old striker, whose name was not immediately released, was being held in the Bexar County Jail after his arrest Thursday, said Bill Dalseg, an FBI agent in San Antonio.

Federal authorities planned to file charges of destruction of an interstate motor vehicle against him today, Dalseg said.

The windshield was damaged when shots were fired at a Greyhound bus and its driver in San Antonio on Wednesday evening, Dalseg said. The driver was not injured, and there were no passengers aboard.

The driver told police that two men in a car drove ahead of the bus when it left the downtown station en route to a maintenance garage just after 6 p.m. The driver said that when he neared an underpass, one man in the car shone a spotlight, and moments later a bullet struck the right top side of the windshield.

The driver said he recognized the men as union members who previously had threatened him. Damage to the bus was estimated at $200, police said, adding the second man was not immediately arrested.

Elsewhere, Thanksgiving Day was mainly quiet on picket lines at Greyhound terminals across the United States.

FOCUS

Slowing and Saving

Ten years ago today, President Nixon requested a cutback in the speed limit from 70 to 55 miles per hour. The National Highway Traffic Administration reports that the lower speed limit had probably saved 48,000 lives by 1980. Fuel savings have been estimated to be 2.4 billion gallons per year, or 160,000 barrels of petroleum per day. In 1982, with OPEC charging $34.00 a barrel for oil, that amounted to a savings of more than $5.4 million every day.

Ultralight Pilots Enjoy Relief From Restrictions

By DOROTHY GAST
Associated Press Writer

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — When Gary Ingraham flies, he likes to be free of air traffic control towers, lighted runways and the need for a pilot's license.

The 40-year-old Ingraham pilots an aircraft called an Ultralight, a one-seat, light-weight flying machine barely regulated by the government. And even though Ingraham came close to losing his life in an Ultralight crash two years ago, he bristles at the idea of the Federal Aviation Administration devising stricter rules for Ultralight flight, something that's being considered.

"I don't think there are too many regulations in conventional aviation," he said.

"But for me, individually, I like more freedom," Ingraham, however, believes one should be trained in Ultralight flight before leaving the ground. Ultralights, were born in the mid-70s when a Wisconsin man attached a motor to his hang glider, he said.

Flying was a life-long dream for Ingraham, who climbed in his Ultralight for the first time in 1980 and put hundreds of feet between himself and the ground. The freedom, the detachment from the earth, made him feel closer to God, he said.

In June 1981, his plane dived 100 feet and crashed at an air show in Bedford County. The accident broke Ingraham's back, right arm, left knee and leg, lower jaw and right cheek. It also severed his spinal cord, fractured his skull and left him temporarily paralyzed.

Ingraham, who paints and repairs car bodies from a shop he owns in north Roanoke, said his was a freak accident that was largely his own fault because he failed to install a part from the kit he used to build the plane.

"I got to a speed where it fluttered, and that broke a bolt in the control linkage," Ingraham said. "At the time, I'd been flying the aircraft for about a year. It was very questionable for awhile if I would be able to fly again or if I would even want to."

An FAA spokesman, Dick Stafford, said his agency plans to draft some stricter rules for Ultralights unless pilots start regulating themselves. In October 1982, the FAA decided Ultralights may not weigh more than 254 pounds, fly faster than 63 mph, carry more than five gallons of fuel, stall at more than 27 mph and fly in controlled airspace or at night. Pilots don't need licenses.

Stafford said the FAA thinks there are 14,000 Ultralights in the country, but he said other estimates range from 8,000 to 20,000.

Ingraham said the lack of government regulations is one of the freedoms he enjoys about Ultralight flight. That, he said, is part of the reason why he didn't get involved in conventional regulation.

The accident rate for Ul-tralights is about the same as that of conventional aircraft, he said. In a telephone interview from his Washington office, Stafford said the National Transportation Safety Board has been having trouble compiling statistics on Ultralight accidents because the crashes don't have to be reported.

Ingraham thinks the FAA soon will require Ultralight pilots to get licenses to fly. Stafford wasn't so definite. "We're not convinced that they need to be further regulated," he said.

Bad Attitude On Thanksgiving

I'm afraid that I have a bad attitude regarding Thanksgiving. Faced with the prospect of compacting an entire week into three days, I find my feelings ranging from trepidation to hostility to paralysis to despair. At times I even harbor the faint hope that lightning or something equally debilitating will strike me and relieve me from the duties of writing two columns, typing them, washing and ironing everyone's favorite clothes, packing and preparing a dish acceptable to the gourmet sensibilities of my mother in the time it usually takes me to get geared up for preparing a hot breakfast. My blood is simply not suited for such a breakneck pace.

My brain isn't either. The more I expect from it, the less it gives. This is not a new phenomenon. My grey matter has never recovered from the shock of my first pregnancy. But its deficiencies are far more noticeable when I am staring into the pantry for culinary inspiration and find myself reading the list of additives on the back of a can of pumpkin. I find myself frittering away time as if it was of no more consequence than the blank paper in my typewriter. This is the only week of the year that I lick green stamps.

Phillip exhorts me to pull myself together. "It's a matter of concentration," he tells me. "You can get more accomplished in 10 minutes than in an entire day if you make yourself concentrate on the task at hand."

I know that he's probably right, but I am hopelessly out of practice. The only thing I'm used to concentrating on is finding Zachary's shoes. Thus, after a brief attempt at improving my attention span, I invariably begin to start blaming my predicament on family obligations.

I complain about having to travel for three hours with a pie in my lap.

"But Grandmommy won't mind if you don't bring anything. She's such a good cook that she won't ever miss your food," Meg assures me. "I'll miss it," I say, glaring at her. "Everybody takes a dish to our family gatherings. It's a tradition."

I don't add that for years I was regaled with derisive tales of my enormously fat great-aunt's contributions of fruit cocktail at such occasions.

I also complain about having grandparents who always expect everyone to come to them and wouldn't dream of visiting anyone else.

The Litter Is Returned

HOUSTON (AP) — In a one-man campaign to help keep his state clean, a Colorado man sent a package of garbage to Houston, with an invitation for Texas to keep its trash to itself.

The package contained an empty soda bottle, a cherry pie wrapper and a Houston woman's library card.

The accompanying note was from B.W. Mangrum, addressed to The Houston Chronicle and "all Texans in general."

It said: "Enclosed herewith the garbage you dumped at the intersection of my driveway and U.S. Highway 160, four miles west of Durango, Colo."

"It is inconceivable that one would spend so much time and money and travel so far to see the Rocky Mountains, and dump garbage beside the roads. I live here and I resent it. Your garbage is being sent to the Houston Chronicle in the hopes that they will see that you get it back."

Mailing the package cost the sender $1.83.

The Chronicle said it would not name the woman whose library card was found, "to protect the guilty."

"For heaven's sake," Phillip says, "they're in their 80's."

Then I complain about the drudgery of packing and the confusion bordering on chaos whenever my family members converge.

"But Mommy," Meg cries, "what if we didn't have a family to celebrate with?"

And I realize that I am truly thankful that we do.

Holding Mother In Fatal Wreck

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — A 32-year-old Robeson County woman has been charged with driving while impaired following a traffic accident Wednesday evening that left her 1-year-old son dead, authorities say.

Kathleen Locklear of Shannon has been charged with DWI, felony death by vehicle and driving while her license was revoked, North Carolina Highway Patrol Trooper John Flynn said.

Mrs. Locklear apparently lost control of her car and struck a tree about 8:15 p.m. on Secondary Road 1011, 11 miles northwest of Lumberton, the trooper said.

Her son, Brian, was thrown from the car and died about two hours later at Southeastern General Hospital in Lumberton, officials said.

A second passenger, Denise Jones, 15, was admitted to the hospital, as was Mrs. Locklear. Both were listed in fair condition, a hospital spokesman said Thursday night.

Churchmen In The Philippines Urge Decrees' Repeal

By RUBEN G. ALABASTRO
Associated Press Writer
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Philippines' 110 Roman Catholic bishops today released a pastoral letter urging President Ferdinand E. Marcos to repeal his "repressive decrees" and saying the nation was moving toward "chaos and anarchy."

The letter, to be read Sunday in Catholic churches across the Philippines, said present injustices and violence could lead to a "bloodbath of revolution."

It also urged the armed forces to demonstrate their loyalty to the people, not to a single leader, and it condemned the Aug. 21 assassination of Marcos' chief political rival, Benigno Aquino.

"Many events have pushed our country closer to the brink of chaos and anarchy," the bishops said.

An estimated 10,000 people held a protest rally today in suburban Caloocan City demanding justice for Aquino. Such anti-government rallies have become almost a daily ritual since Aquino's murder.

At suburban Makati, about 1,000 opposition followers marched to the sound of a brass band through the financial district singing "Happy Birthday" for Aquino, who would have been 51 Sunday.

Earlier, hundreds of Filipino Moslems and Christians also marched through Makati in a joint Moslem-Christian demonstration to demand Marcos' resignation.

In the capital itself, about 7,000 squatters from slum communities staged a "rally of empty pots and stomachs" blaming the Philippines' economic crisis on "the U.S.-Marcos dictatorship."

Dozens of women carried empty pots and pans and pounded them with spoons and forks.

The bishops called for full restoration of civil rights, honest elections, and a free press, and asked that "the common good of 50 million Filipinos be placed above the petty and narrow interest of any political family or party."

They called for an end to graft and corruption which they said had eroded government credibility, and for "a constitutional solution to the issue of presidential succession."

The present constitution provides for a 15-member Executive Committee to act as caretaker if Marcos becomes incapacitated, a setup many fear could breed power struggles.

Marcos' party, which controls the government, recently agreed to restore the abolished vice presidency in 1987, with the speaker of parliament to act as president in the interim if anything happens to Marcos.

Addressing themselves to insurgent groups, the bishops called on "Christians who believe in armed revolution" to consider "a peaceful and non-violent solution" to problems.

The bishops also urged "a repeal of repressive decrees violative of due process and our basic rights."

Although Marcos has lifted eight years of martial law, decrees he issued during martial law and after remain in force.

Among other things, the decrees allow Marcos to indefinitely jail anyone arrested for security offenses and impose the death penalty on people engaged in certain rebellious acts, such as media owners who allow their facilities to be used for "sustained" anti-government propaganda.

The pastoral letter was signed by Archbishop Antonio Mabutas, president of the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines.

To the armed forces, the bishops asked that they "demonstrate that their loyalty is not to any individual, nor to itself as an institution, but to the Filipino people and to accept fully the principle of civilian supremacy."

Government critics have charged that top military officers are personally loyal to Marcos, and they have voiced fears about a possible military takeover if Marcos should suddenly leave office without a pre-designated successor.

On Thursday, members of the commission investigating Aquino's assassination at the Manila airport said they have received death threats.

Commission chairwoman Corazon Agrava said the five-member panel was "not apprehensive" about the threats. But private security guards have been using metal detectors to search people entering the

Painted, In The Still Of Night

KIRKCALDY, Scotland (AP) — Bernard O'Malley was pink, with rage, when he woke up to find the colors of his windows, outside walls and doors had suddenly changed to purple and yellow.

In the still of the night, two decorators who had argued with O'Malley over an $87 painting bill slapped the paint all over and then woke him up with a midnight phone call.

Prosecutor Peter Morrison told Kirkcaldy court Thursday that the paint-happy pair, Paul Paterson and Stephen Wright, both 24, also changed the color of the inside of O'Malley's car.

The defendants told the court they were drunk, and have been ordered to compensate O'Malley the equivalent of about $1,000 so he can bring his colors back more to his liking.

Pirates Open Year; Host Campbell

Coach Charlie Harrison's second version of the East Carolina basketball Pirates open the 1983-84 season Saturday night in Minges Coliseum, hosting Campbell University.

Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. East Carolina comes into the game following a 69-66 victory over Yugo Plastika, a touring team from Yugoslavia. Campbell, meanwhile, dropped a 96-82 exhibition game with Marathon Oil.

The Camels will be opening the year under their new head coach Jerry Smith, who was an assistant under former coach Danny Roberts. So while the head coach may be different, he is thoroughly familiar with the team.

The Camels return two starters off last year's squad, 6-1 senior guard Harvey Smith and 6-5 senior forward Larry Canady. Smith averaged 11.7 points a game last year, while Canady hit on 12.7 per game.

Expected to join them in the starting lineup is 6-1 junior college transfer Andrea McGee and 6-6 freshman forward Clarence Grier, along with letterman Russ Elbaum, a 6-3 center.

In the game against Marathon, the Camels were led by McGee, who canned 22 points on eight of 11 field goals and six of nine free throws. He also pulled in a team high eight rebounds.

Canady added 12 points while Grier had 11.

The meeting between the two teams will be the 28th, with ECU holding a 17-10 edge. ECU won both meetings last season, 67-54 and 73-55.

"Things are going slow for us right now," Harrison said. "We are doing some nice things, but we are not finishing plays offensively or defensively. We move the ball well on offense, then fail to get two points. Or, we play strong defense, then give up the easy basket. I hope I am patient enough with these guys, but things must start coming together now."

Harrison will likely start a senior, a junior and three freshmen in the contest — the same starting lineup he used against the Yugoslavians. That group includes senior Tony Robinson, a 6-1 guard, junior Barry Wright, a 6-5 forward, and freshmen William Grady, a 6-2 guard; Roy Smith, a 6-7½ center, and Derrick Battle, a 6-6 forward.

Wright led the ECU scoring in the exhibition game with 13 points and six rebounds, while Robinson also had 13 points. Battle was the leading rebounder with seven.

"We are not yet accustomed to each other," Harrison added, "but then that is understandable with only two or three of these guys having played together last year. This will take time and play to solve."

"Our veterans are very recognizable in practice. And the freshmen are very typical in that they do some good things, but also some bad things. But, I am not disappointed in what I've seen. Harrison said that the exhibition game, with its special international rules, did not really give the Pirates a chance to see what they could do. "It was not an indication of anything."

Harrison feels that despite the fact that Smith is not new to the Campbell program, it, along with the fact that the Camels have a good number of veterans, will give that team a different look. "I expect some very hard play from their individuals," he said. "They have greatly improved the team with the addition of (McGee). Campbell has good quickness and good perimeter shooting and will play an up tempo game. I have no idea how our kids will react to that."

The Pirates play twice more next week, entertaining Christopher Newport on Wednesday, then going to Virginia Commonwealth on next Saturday, December 3.

ECU Pirates

and manager Maurice Stuart; second row, assistant coach Tom Barrise, assistant coach David Pendergraft, assistant coach Ricky Schoof, Barry Wright, David Harris, Leon Bass, David Reicheneker, Jack Turnbill, Roy Smith, Derrick Battle, graduate assistant Charles Green, head coach Charlie Harrison. Holmes, Frazier Battle

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Marvis Frazier, with only 10 pro fights to his credit, challenges Larry Holmes, who nearly 10 years ago was a sparring partner for Frazier's father, tonight in a 12-round bout.

Holmes says he bothered Smokin' Joe Frazier with his movement and left jab when he helped the former heavyweight champion prepare for his second fight with Muhammad Ali, which he lost Jan. 28, 1974, and he feels will be too much for Frazier's son.

"There are a lot of things I can do to you that you've never had done before," Holmes told Marvis Frazier at a pre-fight news conference. "You're going to see a lot of things coming at you that you never saw coming at you before."

"If he gets destroyed at this stage of his career it could be the end of his development, the end of his development," said Eddie Futch, Holmes' trainer who trained Joe Frazier for most of his 37 fights and who has known the 23-year-old Marvis since he was 6.

But Joe, who is his son's manager and trainer, and Marvis Frazier think Marvis' time is at hand despite his paucity of pro fights, all of which he won.

"If I do what I'm told, there's no way I can lose," said Marvis.

"If I didn't think he would do it, we wouldn't make the fight," said Smokin' Joe. "Marvis can do anything he sets his mind to and he's set his mind to this. So have I."

"I think he'll win it for his father," said Joey Giardello, the former middleweight champion, who is a member of the Frazier camp. "He'd crawl into the ring for his father."

The 34-year-old Holmes is a 4½-1 favorite to win the fight, which he and most people who are involved in or follow boxing consider a title match even though the WBC refused to give it championship sanction.

Frazier cannot win the title, according to the WBC, but Holmes can lose it.

"I'm the world champion," said the unbeaten Holmes, who counts 16 WBC title defenses among his 44 victories. "I will, if Marvis Frazier beats me, consider Marvis Frazier as champion."

Jose Sulaiman, the WBC president, has said the fight isn't sanctioned because Frazier hasn't fought at least 15 fights or beaten two ranked opponents in order to be ranked among the top-10 contenders.

So, if Frazier wins, there will be no WBC champion. Sulaiman said there also is a rule that when a champion loses a fight within his class weight limit the title is declared vacant. There is no weight limit for the heavyweight division.

The fight, approved as a nontitle match by the Nevada State Athletic Commission, and billed as a "12-Round Heavyweight Superfight," will be held indoors at the 4,500-seat Caesars Palace Sports Pavilion.

It is scheduled to start at 7:03 p.m., PDT, and be televised by NBC during a telecast running from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Part of the telecast will be a 10-round nontitle fight between Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini, the World Boxing Association lightweight champion, and Johnny Torres, a junior welterweight from Homestead, Fla.

Frazier turned pro with a three-round knockout of Roger Troupe Sept. 12, 1980, just 20 days before Holmes stopped Muhammad Ali in the 11th round in what was his 36th pro fight. It was also his eighth defense of the title he won on a 15-round split decision over Ken Norton June 9, 1978.

One reason Frazier turned was that one of his two losses against 56 amateur victories came in the 1980 Olympic Trials when he was knocked out in 21 seconds by James Broad.

"I decided after the Olympic Trials I wanted to do something my dad had done," said Frazier, who, unable to match his father as an amateur — Joe won the Olympic heavyweight title in 1964 — decided to try to do so as a pro.

The quick loss to Broad was the result of a pinched nerve in Frazier's neck, and after his fourth pro fight he underwent surgery in 1981. His career was further set back by viral hepatitis, which kept him inactive in 1982.

This year, he has scored four victories, two by knockout to give him six KOs. In his last fight, June 4, he gave away 37½ pounds in scoring a 10-round decision over Joe Bugner, who was beaten on a 12-round decision by Joe Frazier July 2, 1973.

Frazier's other victory this year was a 10-round decision over Broad.

NCS Not Favored

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Defending NCAA basketball champion North Carolina State will be among six teams at the Great Alaska Shootout, but they are not favored to win the event, being held for the first time in a new $30 million sports arena.

The Wolfpack isn't being accorded the respect usually tendered NCAA champions, labeled instead as "the best of the rest" in the bottom echelon of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

But the tournament committee was gracious enough to pit the Wolfpack against the perennial underdogs, the Division II Seawolves of the University of Alaska, Anchorage.

Two stars from last year's 26-10 title team are now in the National Basketball Association, but N.C. State will have hero Lorenzo Charles back. His dunk shot off a rebound with three seconds left gave the Wolfpack its 54-52 championship victory over top-ranked Houston.

Charles grabbed 13 rebounds and scored a career-high 23 points last Saturday in the Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic to give the Wolfpack a surprising 76-64 victory over third-ranked Houston in a rematch of the title game.

Santa Clara, 21-7 last year, hopes to gain the national recognition that eluded it last year, opening against New Mexico, which was 14-15 last year.

Fourteenth-ranked Arkansas, which has averaged 24 victories in the past seven years under coach Eddie Sutton, has three starters among 10 lettermen returning from last year's 26-4 team. The Razorbacks plan to use their depth and quickness against Fordham, which was 19-11 and played in the NIT last year.

No. 20 Oklahoma is entering the second year of what the Sooners hope becomes an era — the Wayman Tisdale era. Last year, the 6-foot-9, 240-pounder was named first-team all-America by the Associated Press. But Coach Billy Tubbs needs to find Tisdale some help if the Sooners are to improve their 25-9 mark of a year ago.

Oklahoma's first-round opponent, Southern Cal. will be similarly inexperienced. Nine of the 14 Trojans are either freshmen or sophomores. Southern Cal, 17-11 last year, does have its leading scorer and rebounder, 6-8 Wayne Carlander, back.

Lady Pirates In Two Early Tests On Road

East Carolina's Lady Pirates, fresh off their opening game victory over George Washington last Sunday, take to the road for a weekend doubleheader Saturday and Sunday.

Saturday afternoon at 3 p.m., the Lady Pirates face St. Peter's and then visit Iona for a 3 p.m. Sunday contest.

The Lady Pirates took an impressive 64-57 win over the Lady Colonials in Minges Coliseum Sunday, after having led by 20 points late in the contest.

For St. Peter's it will be the first game of the year, while Iona will also be opening its schedule.

"Both of our opponents this weekend are fine basketball teams from the New York City area and we will need to keep our level of play up in order to keep winning," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "Since these are their first games, we have no scouting report on them, but I'm familiar with both school from when I was head coach at Wagner, and I know what a competitive league they are in. St. Peter's is, of course, very strong, as they return most of their starting lineup from a fine 25-3 team of last season."

"We look forward to our trip and just hope to play with the same intensity that we did in our opener, while improving on some of our first game mistakes."

One of the three losses handed St. Peter's came at the hands of the Lady Pirates, who took an 81-70 victory in Greenville. Blanche Jones (5-5 junior guard) and Amanda Berry (5-8 senior forward) each scored 22 and 16 points respectively in that game, while Debbie Anderson (6-0 sophomore forward) pulled off 11 rebounds.

Jones is the leading returning scorer for the Peahens with a 15.7 average last season, while Berry had a 10.8 mark and Anderson had a 9.5 average. Others starters include 5-6 sophomore guard Bonita Singleton (4.9 ppg) and 6-2 freshman center Carla Thomas.

For the Lady Gaels, it will be the first meeting with the Lady Pirates. Iona was 11-15 last season, and all five starters are veterans. They include 5-5 junior guard Emily Mojica (9.5 ppg), 5-7 sophomore guard Lori Acker (7.6 ppg), 6-1 junior center Joan O'Connor (8.2 ppg), 5-9 forward Maggie Kupcha (3.4 ppg), and 5-9 forward Eileen O'Connor (5.1 ppg).

East Carolina is led by Sylvia Bragg and Annette Phillips, each hitting 15.0 while Darlene Hedges scored 10 in the first game. Hedges was the leading rebounder for the Lady Pirates in the opener with 10, while Lisa Squirewell added nine.

Dorsett, Cowboys Roll Over Cards

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Thanksgiving Day has become the Dallas Cowboys' favorite holiday, serving once again as a springboard into the National Football League playoffs.

The Cowboys rolled over the St. Louis Cardinals 35-17 Thursday and counted the following blessings:

•An 11-2 record, their fastest start since 1977.

•A 12-3-1 record on Thanksgiving Day.

•The return of the NFL's worst pass defense from the grave, including a season-high seven sacks of St. Louis quarterback Neil Lomax.

•Tony Dorsett's inspired running which placed him eighth on the all-time list. Dorsett had touchdown runs of 5 and 55 yards, and tallied 102 yards on 17 carries. •It was Dorsett's 38th 100-yard game. Dallas has won 36 of them.

In the other Thanksgiving Day game, the Pittsburgh Steelers turned turkey in Pontiac, Mich. and were roasted by the Detroit Lions 45-3. Eric Hipple threw a pair of touchdown passes to Ulysses Norris and Billy Sims scored twice on 2-yard runs.

Steelers quarterback Cliff Stoudt was intercepted four times and sacked twice. The victory moved the Lions to within one-half game of first place Minnesota in the Central Division of the National Football Conference.

The Cowboys, who have already clinched a playoff berth, moved a half game ahead of Washington in the NFC Eastern Division.

They don't play again for 10 days, traveling to Seattle Dec. 4. Dallas has won 14 of 15 games in its history the game after Thanksgiving.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry, who has developed a hardline attitude toward his player's this year, was most pleased.

"The players went about this game in a very businesslike manner and because they did I'm going to give them three days off," Landry said. "They've played well the last two games and the break will do them good."

Dallas gave up a 71-yard Lomax to Roy Green touchdown pass in the first period then built a 35-10 lead and coasted.

"We had a good game on defense and that's what we needed," said Landry.

Lomax had a 6-yard touchdown pass to Ottis Anderson in the final seconds against a prevent defense as St. Louis dropped to 5-7-1.

Dorsett passed Larry Csonka on the all-time list with 8,153 yards.

Quarterback Danny White had an exceptional outing. He passed 15-yards to Butch Johnson for a touchdown, ran four yards for a score, and connected on 24 of 31 passes for 237 yards.

White's 24 completions gave him 270 for the season, breaking Roger Staubach's club record of 268 in 1979.

"We're in control of our own destiny now," said Dorsett. "The last two games we've come out and taken control and that's what we want going into the playoffs."

St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan said, "Dorsett does a helluva job. He just pops out of there and goes 55 yards and that's the game."

Asked who he thought would win when Washington and Dallas tangle here Dec. 11, Hanifan said, "Right now I think the Redskins are the best team but I think Dallas has the necessary personnel to cause the Redskins a lot of problems."

The Steelers' loss was among their worst since Chuck Noll took over as head coach in 1969.

Noll, after the game, said, "I mulled over what was the turning point of the game. I decided it was the opening kickoff."

The Lions had marched to a touchdown after taking that kickoff.

Sunday's action has the New York Giants at Los Angeles Raiders, Philadelphia at Washington, Minnesota at New Orleans, Buffalo at the Los Angeles Rams, San Francisco at Chicago, New England at the New York Jets, Baltimore at Cleveland, Denver at San Diego, Kansas City at Seattle, Green Bay at Atlanta and Houston at Tampa Bay.

Cincinnati is at Miami in Monday night's game.

The Raiders, 9-3, with a two-game lead in the AFC West over Denver, have won three straight, two by field goals in the final seconds. But, in doing so, they also have held the opposition to less than 85 yards rusher per game. The Giants, 3-8-1, got 159 yards rushing from Butch Woolfolk last Sunday.

Philadelphia, 4-8, has lost six straight, and the Redskins must make it seven in a row to keep pace with the Cowboys in the NFC East. Washington, 10-2, have won five straight, including a 42-20 victory over the Rams last week.

The Vikings are 7-5 coming off last week's 17-14 victory over Pittsburgh. Minnesota must contain Saints running back George Rogers to win.

Buffalo, 7-5, trails Miami by a game in the AFC East, while the Rams were tied with San Francisco for the NFC West lead at 7-5. And both teams are coming off losses last week. Rams quarterback Vince Ferragamo has a sore hand that might affect the game's outcome, but if rookie running back Eric Dickerson can come back from a disappointing performance against Washington (37 yards rushing), that also could affect the outcome.

San Francisco, which has lost three of its past four games, runs into a hot Chicago Bears club. The Bears have won two in a row to raise their record to 5-7, playing strong defense in both the victories.

Stovall Disappointed Despite Win In Finale

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It may have been the last college coaching appearance for Louisiana State University's Jerry Stovall, but he said he has made no plans to fight for his job and doesn't know whether the victory over Tulane will make any difference.

LSU beat Tulane 20-7 Thursday night, leaving both teams with 4-7 records for the year.

"You tell me," Stovall said. "What's the difference between 3-8 and 4-7?"

Either way, it was a disappointing season for LSU fans. The Tigers went 8-3-1 last year, finishing with an Orange Bowl appearance. They opened this year ranked among college football's elite, but lost the opener and skidded from there.

The LSU Board of Supervisors is scheduled to meet on Dec. 2, and it is expected that Athletic Director Bob Brodhead and Chancellor James Wharton will recommend that the remaining year of Stovall's contract be bought out.

Brodhead would not comment on that Thursday night.

Stovall was asked after the game whether he planned to lobby the board or present arguments on his behalf.

"No, I do not," he responded to both questions.

Over his four seasons at LSU, Stovall's record is 22-21-2.

Tulane's coaching situation has also been surrounded by speculation and rumor. The relationship between first-year Coach Wally English and Athletic Director Hindman Wall is just as strained as that between Stovall and Brodhead, though not aired as openly.

English has refused to sign the contract Wall offered him, saying that between the time they shook hands on an agreement and the time Wall drafted the contract, several things were omitted.

Thursday night, English said he would probably be back next season as Tulane's coach.

The Thanksgiving night game was nationally televised by cable network WTBS. A crowd of 51,765 watched the game at the Louisiana Superdome, meaning there were about 15,000 who bought tickets but didn't attend.

Through the first 28:04 of play Thursday night, it appeared neither team could get organized enough to win. LSU turned the ball over twice in the first half and got penalized four times for 59 yards. Tulane also turned it over twice and got penalized a whopping 10 times for 80 yards.

Finally, LSU drove from its own 26 to the Tulane 30, and Juan Betanzos booted a 46-yard field goal with 1:56 left in the half for the game's first score.

Tulane ran three plays and punted, then LSU quarterback Jeff Wickersham threw an interception with 29 seconds left in the half. Aided by a 29-yard pass interference call, Tulane drove to the LSU 4-yard line with :04 left and Laruan Ambrose went over to score with no time left on the clock.

"I'll tell you what I told the players at halftime," Stovall said. "I told them that I didn't think they were playing with great intensity."

"The second half, we came out and played well."

LSU drove 94 yards on its first possession of the second half, with Dalton Hilliard capping the drive with a 4-yard sprint.

Tulane couldn't move the ball, and Eric Ellington returned Jim Barker's 56-yard punt 35 yards to the Tulane 30. Nine plays later, Garry James dove over from the 1 to make it 17-7 with 3:47 left in the third quarter.

Tulane ran only eight plays in the third quarter, netting just eight yards after a 6-yard sack and a 5-yard penalty were deducted from the total.

Betanzos kicked a 37-yard field goal to wind up the night's scoring on a drive that started at the LSU 18 late in the third quarter and stalled at the Tulane 20 with 13:13 left in the game.

As far as the 1983 East Carolina University Pirates are concerned, the season is over. There will be no bowl game for the team, even though richly deserved. That honor goes to some teams, who, like the Pirates, deserved a berth, and some others, unlike the Pirates, who got it simply because of who they were.

There will be more honors for team members. Terry Long has already been named to one All-America team, the Walter Camp, and we will not be surprised if he isn't on a good deal more as the weeks go by.

For some 20 seniors, the climax will come in the spring with the pro draft. Coach Ed Emory says that 10 to 14 of the seniors are draftable. If so, it would be one of the largest classes ever to come out of one school — if not the largest.

But with the season over, the thoughts must immediately turn to the 1984 year. Emory and his staff have been long at work on that, recruiting on the high school and junior college levels, seeking to replace those 20 seniors with another quality group.

The Pirates lose a number of starters, it is true. On offense, that group will include quarterback Kevin Ingram, fullback Earnest Byner, guard Terry Long, center John Floyd, tackle John Robertson and tight ends Norwood Vann and Lloyd Black. On defense, gone will be ends Jeff Pegues, Kenny Phillips and Curtis Wyatt, tackles Hal Stevens, Maury Banks, and Steve Hamilton, nose guard Gerry Rogers, linebackers Mike Grant, and backs Clint Harris, Keith Brown, and Chuck Bishop.

It is an impressive group of players, a group that will be sorely missed.

But the Pirates return a good group also. Returning will be backs Reggie Branch, Tony Baker, and Jimmy Walden, the receiving crew of Henry Williams, Ricky Nichols and Stefan Adams, tackle Tim Dumas, center Tim Mitchell, and guard Norman Quick, among others.

On defense, the coaches will find such players as end J.C. Plott, linebackers P.J. Jordan and Chris Santa Cruz, backs Kevin Walker, Rally Caparas and Calvin Adams back.

The Pirates also return both of its kickers, punter Jeff Bolch and placekicker Jeff Heath.

While that does leave some gaping holes — mainly in the lines and the quarterback position, it is believed that there are quality people there to step in. How they do will first be determined during spring drills.

The biggest thing however is the intangible — leadership. The 20 graduating seniors have left a mark on East Carolina. Emory has said time and again that they have set a standard to be followed.

If that leadership quality is as good in this year's junior class as it has been in this year's senior class, the Pirates could well have another banner year.

And maybe next December, they won't be overlooked.

Vickie Spivey holds onto the lead in our panel with just the bowl games to go. After last week's games, Spivey held a 96-44 record, while this writer was next at 94-46. Our guest of last week, Howard Hurt of Rose High School, went 8-3-1 and brought the guests to 92-48, good for third, while Tom Baines is fourth at 91-49. Jimmy DuPree is fifth at 90-50, leaving Joe Jenkins in the basement with an 89-51 record.

We'll return in a couple of weeks with the bowl picks.

Are Church News—Churchmen Talk

Disassociation From Culture

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of religious leaders who visited Europe's nuclear hotspots asks: What if every U.S. church declared itself a nuclear-free zone, and then "twinning" itself with a overseas church that did the same?

There would be no air-raid shelters in buildings that bear the cross or the Star of David, says the Rev. Paul Mayer. The churches, he says, would be "disassociating themselves from the whole nuclear culture."

And Mayer, convener of the Mobilization for Survival's religious task force, which organized the trip to Europe, says the gesture would also affirm something he learned on the tour last month: "We are in fact one human family, faced with one disaster."

"Trips like ours help create a larger sense of the universality of the issue — it doesn't stop at human borders," said Rabbi David Saperstein, head of the Religious Action Center of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

Saperstein and four others went to England, while eight others went to West Germany or Italy. They joined disarmament rallies, news conferences and worship services, speaking out against the NATO deployment of U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in the countries they visited.

Despite their efforts, the first cruise missiles — what Mayer calls "these awful instruments of death" — were shipped to England this month, and the West German Parliament has approved the deployment of Pershing 2 missiles in that country.

Saperstein says the English disarmament groups were "exceedingly grateful for the presence of an American religious delegation."

He took part in a rally that drew 250,000 people; the participation of religious leaders, he said, "added a sense of credibility" to the protest.

"Ultimately, the world has to see this as not a military or technical issue — not an issue of this or that missile system — but as a moral argument. We can help to do that," he said.

Loretta Williams, director of the Office of Social Responsibility for the Unitarian Universalist Association, went to Italy. She spent four days in Rome, attending news conferences and a rally for evangelical Christians.

Then she went to Sicily. She toured the area where the missiles would be placed — "lush farmland," she said — met the local bishop, and visited a room packed with disarmament literature and posters collected by teenagers.

As a religious leader, she says, she carried a simple message: "It's not only wrong to have nuclear weapons. It is evil. It is sinful. We now have the capacity to destroy future generations."

Mayer's trip to Germany was a homecoming of sorts. He was born there 51 years ago, a Jew; he and his family fled to the United States in 1938. Years later, he converted and then became a priest.

"It's always very difficult for me to go back to Germany. As it turned out, this trip really had a healing quality about it," he said.

He marched in a rain-soaked procession through Stuttgart with 4,000 other peace activists, ending at a church where a service for disarmament was held.

Among the speakers, he said, was one of the last surviving signatories to a post-World War II document in which German religious leaders confessed they had not fought the Nazi outrages.

"The church must never be silent again," Mayer quoted the old man as saying. He said the man urged the worshippers to fight "the holocaust that faces us now."

Members of the American delegation said they intended to maintain their ties with the European movement. Saperstein says he used his experiences to convince the U.A.H.C. convention, the governing body of Reform Judaism, to pass a strong, detailed resolution in favor of disarmament.

Mayer said the idea of declaring churches and synagogues nuclear-free zones — and then matching them with houses of worship abroad — is one that his organization will promote.

Each church is being asked to renounce their right to be defended by nuclear weapons, to change Civil Defense shelters to soup kitchens or shelters for the homeless, and to register with Mayer's religious task force as "a peace-building spot in the community," Ms. Williams said.

"It is the business of a church to speak about morality, to speak about evil, to speak about survival," said Mayer.

Expulsion Over Anti-Semitism

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — A report spurred by a pair of highly publicized anti-Semitic acts at the University of Maryland campus has recommended the suspension or expulsion of students engaging in racist activities.

The report, issued by an 11-member panel more than a year after the two incidents occurred, also urges changes in educational programs and improved communications to combat repeats of such cases.

"The frequency of reported incidents of violence and extremism is quite low" on the campus, the 12-page report noted.

But it criticized the school's administration for its slow response last year after a Jewish student was shot five times in the leg with a BB gun by another student shouting Nazi slogans. An underground fraternity newsletter later named the woman's attacker "Man of the Month."

"Glacial-like movements by the administration, for whatever reason, leads to disaffection and may subvert the community's need for justice," said the report, which defended current efforts to battle anti-Semitism.

The group recommended a toughening of the student code of conduct to expel or suspend students participating in racist or anti-Semitic activities, and urged the implementation of courses aimed at examining intergroup relationships.

The committee of faculty members, staff members and students was formed by Gov. Harry Hughes last year following the two incidents. After the report was released, university President John Toll echoed the feeling that the anti-Semitic acts were "isolated" incidents.

"Even though isolated acts of violence and extremism may occur at any campus, the environment (at College Park) does not promote or tolerate such despicable behavior," he said.

Dr. Louis Kaplan, a former chairman of the university Board of Regents who urged an administrative response to the incidents, said overall he was pleased with the report.

"I personally would have liked a little more dispatch," Kaplan said. "But if it's a choice between dispatch and having a complete, well-researched report, I'll take the latter."

PLATE SALE

The Pastor's Aid Club of Sweet Hope Church will be selling fish and chicken dinners Saturday from the home of Mrs. Beulah Moore, A-14 Glendale Court Apartments. Plates can be picked up or delivered. To place an order, call 355-6363.

CHURCH SERVICE

Holy Mission Church, 905 Dickinson Ave., will hold a Seven Seals of Revelations service at the church Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

The service will feature seven speakers and is open to the public.

Hartman Says 'Homework' Keeps His Show Going

By JULIANNE HASTINGS

UPI TV Reporter
NEW YORK (UPI) — Maybe its because his program has been No. 1 for some time, but "Good Morning America" host David Hartman is generous in his appraisal of all three networks' morning shows — they're the best.

Unlike his competition — Bill Kurtis and Diane Sawyer on "CBS Morning News" and former sportscaster Bryant Gumbel and Jane Pauley on NBC's "Today" — Hartman came to his present post from the entertainment side of the industry.

But the 6-foot-4, self-described "workaholic" said he believes the primary prerequisite for the job is an inherent curiosity.

"That's something I've had since I was this high," he said, holding his hand at a height he probably hasn't seen for at least 47 of his 48 years.

Sitting in his plush but book-and-paper-cluttered office, surrounded by blown up color photographs of his family, Hartman is the calm picture of a "workaholic" high on his favorite addiction.

"Good Morning America" has been his show since its inception on Nov. 3, 1975, and he swears he's going to stay there until they have to take him away in a wheelchair. "All of these programs are easily among the best that commercial television has to offer," Hartman said. "What we attempt to do is present people with different points of view on a subject so the viewers can make their own minds up."

"And at that hour of the morning particularly we are able to do it in a quiet way."

"We try to cover as many subjects as are interesting — the gamut — and hope the viewers can take something away from the television set and use it in some way in their lives," he said, still referring to all three networks' shows.

Then he got a little specific: "Whether it's our series on drugs and alcohol or driving (which they did last week with Bruce Jenner), medical care, child care — the kind of information that affects lives daily."

When it comes to breaking stories, Hartman said, "If something does happen, we're ready to go."

He cited the assassination two years ago of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

"I think all the networks reported that he had apparently been shot at around same time, about 7 a.m. Eastern time. We were able within an hour and a half of that first news report, live, to put on former President Carter from Plains, former President Ford from Baltimore, former Secretary of State Vance from San Diego, Henry Kissinger from New York and later Washington."

"And they were all very key players in the whole Mideast thing," he said. "So it was important to get their reaction not only from a personal point of view about Sadat, but to ask them about what the possible effects might be."

Hartman said he didn't approve of the fact that the majority of Americans get all their news and information from television.

"That's not good, but I think it just increases the reason all of us on television have to present as many points of view as possible."

"We're about the only opportunity in television where the major figures in the world can be interviewed live, and be questioned live, so there is no mistaking what is being said, what's being asked and what's being answered."

"The 'Today' show set that pattern when they started 31 or 32 years ago, they started the ball rolling. The 'Today' show created this monster and it's grown since then."

Hartman gets up at about 3 a.m. every weekday, gets to work by 5 a.m., goes home at 4 or 5 p.m. and continues working via the telephone until 6 or 7 p.m.

"Most of my work is in preparation, not in execution," he said.

"If you have 6 minutes with the president, you can cover a lot of ground if you've done your homework."

Now if you're just spouting off long, involved questions to try to show everybody how much you know as an interviewer, then it's not a good interview.

"The challenge to me is to say as little as possible and elicit the most information I can from the guest. And that takes preparation."

There are some frustrations.

The Friday before the bombing last month of the U.S. Marine headquarters in Beirut, Hartman went to Washington and interviewed President Reagan.

The Oct. 21 interview, Reagan's "first sit-down, one-on-one interview for television" in some time, was to air Monday Oct. 24.

"Twenty four hours later, almost to the minute, the president was in Augusta (Ga.) and a guy crashed his truck through the golf course gate and frightened the world."

"Thirty six hours later, the truck with all the dynamite crashed into our Marine headquarters in Beirut.

"Seventy two hours after that interview our troops went into Grenada."

"It was certainly the busiest 72 hours of this administration," Hartman said.

"The result was, I had a 24-minute interview on a broad range of the toughest subjects with the president and we were not able to use one word of it."

"So it sits over here on the shelf and no body will ever see it."

Although Hartman first became widely known to television viewers for his starring role in the 1969-73 medical series "The Bold Ones" and the 1974-75 teacher series "Lucas Tanner," he also had his own production company, which in 1974 produced the documentary "David Hartman: Birth and Babies." The acclaimed work showed the first actual birth of a baby on commercial television.

Today's Cryptokuip clue: D equals S.

The Cryptokuip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

under his partner's "marked" honor, so he played low. (Indeed, if the hands were somewhat different and East did have a spade honor, it could have been fatal to go up with the queen since that might permit a second round trump entry to the board.) Dummy's nine won, and declarer was in command.

He led a diamond to the king, drew the last trump and conceded a diamond. Declarer still had two trumps in his hand. One he would use to ruff any return, then after ruffing a diamond to set up the suit, the other would serve as the entry back to his

Big Cannon Is Missing

DALLAS (AP) — If Robert Austin ever meets the person who stole his group's 10-foot-long, 1-ton Mauser cannon from World War II, he'd like to ask a few questions.

"How did they lift it onto a truck?" Austin said Thursday after the cannon was discovered missing. "Did they use a winch? Did they attach it to a big tow truck and just roll it away? 'I mean, I can't believe somebody didn't see it.'"

The cannon, which is not functional, was on display at the Regular Veterans' Association building, Austin and other members of the group bought the cannon from the Army post at Fort Sill, Okla., as military surplus about two years ago.

The wheeled, gray steel gun was last seen by maintenance workers Tuesday night.

"I had been out of town until 3 o'clock Thursday morning, and the first thing my wife asked me when I got home was if I had moved the cannon," said Austin. "That's when we realized it was gone."

Police don't have any leads, but think they know the thief's motivation.

"They're bound to sell it for scrap," officer Barry Whisenhunt said.

Braniff Plans Return In 1984

DALLAS (AP) — Braniff International has tentative plans to serve 20 cities, with 70 to 80 flights daily from Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, when it returns to the skies March 1, the Dallas Times Herald reports.

The airline also will have bright red, white and blue colors for its fleet of Boeing 727 jets, the paper said Thursday, citing unidentified sources. Braniff ceased operations in May 1982 shortly before filing for protection from creditors in federal bankruptcy court.

The sale will be made subject to all prior liens, unpaid taxes, restrictions and easements of public record, and assessments, if any. All of said tract of land shall be offered for sale separately.
The record owners of the above described real property as reflected in the records in the Office of the Register of Deeds of Pitt County not more than ten (10) days prior to the posting of this Notice: Clarence Van Jones and wife, Jean C. Jones.
Pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 45-21.10(b), and the terms of the Deed of Trust, any successful bidder will be required to deposit with the Substitute Trustee immediately upon conclusion of the sale a cash deposit of 10% of the bid up to and including $1,000.00 plus 5% of any excess over $1,000.00. Any successful bidder will be required to tender the full balance of the purchase price so bid in cash or by certified check at the time the Substitute Trustee tenders to him a deed for the property or attempts to tender such deed, and should such successful bidder fail to pay the full balance of the purchase price so bid at that time, such bidder shall remain liable on his bid as provided by the provisions of G.S. 45-21.30(d) and (e).
This sale will be held open for a period of ten (10) days from and after the filing of the report of sale for upset or raised bids as is required by law with respect to the sale of the tract or parcel of land upon which the above described property is located.
This 24th day of October, 1983.

ARE YOU AT THE END OF YOUR ROPE TRYING TO FIT A NEW HOME INTO YOUR BUDGET?

Inflation is here to stay, but there's still plenty you can do. In a home of your own you can live with inflation where inflation can work with you instead of against you!

Mortgage prices are the same every month no matter what happens to other prices. That means inflation can't affect the cost of your home - but it can increase the value!

WE NOW HAVE SEVERAL NEW HOMES UNDER CONSTRUCTION IN VARIOUS LOCATIONS OF THE GREENVILLE AREA THAT QUALIFY FOR NORTH CAROLINA HOUSING FINANCE MONEY. This is a below market interest rate of 10.35% - fixed rate for 30 years. Not only does it lower your monthly payments but it may enable you to qualify for a little more home than before.

TO QUALIFY:

1. You must not have owned a home in the past 3 years.
2. You must make a 5% down payment and pay all prepaids.
3. You must meet specific income requirements as listed below: $29,100 maximum income (family of 2-4) add $800 to this limit for each member that exceeds 4. $21,825 maximum income - single with no dependants.
4. Total debts (including house payment) may not exceed 28% of your total income.

Call one of our qualified brokers today for more details and your personal showing of these fine homes!

Are You Dog Tired Of Wanting A House?

LOOK AT ONE OF GREENVILLE'S MORE CONVENIENTLY LOCATED SUBDIVISIONS

Take a look at what's available in a new home today. You'll see pretty much the same thing everywhere you go. But, things are different at Greenwood Forest. It begins with the spacious half acre wooded lots. There's room to breathe here-to enjoy life. At Greenwood Forest you get the "feel" of country living with the convenience of being near the city.

The homes are different here, too. You choose the plan that suits you, 3 or 4 bedrooms-from the basic architecture to the smallest detail.

There's more at Greenwood Forest...much more. Come and see for yourself.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: One of your best days in a long while since everyone will be in a fine state of mind, willing to listen to and go along with those who have breadth of scope to their reasoning.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are thinking creatively and should pursue whatever aims mean the most to you. Be especially thoughtful of others.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Your home and family mean much to you so endeavor to have more rapport in that important realm of your life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Good day to see associates and make better plans for the future. Get at those statements not completed yesterday.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) The good things of life mean much to you, so plan just how to gain them. A monetary expert has good advice.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) The planets are favorable and you can accomplish just about anything you set your mind to today. Visit old friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Put aside all those small, unimportant ideas and activities. Seek out progressive individuals who can help you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be with your powerful friends today and something very fine can occur for you. The social side of life can be very enjoyable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can gain much prestige by today's activities, so attach yourself to higher-ups and get their backing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Opening up new horizons can bring you benefits far beyond what you had thought possible at this time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Good day to make progress since you are businesslike and can get together with others of same turn of mind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Your best progress can come by being with those who are conservative today and by being cooperative.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan how to get your environment more functional and then full speed ahead with ideas. Reach agreements with others.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have success more easily than most and will be endowed with a nice disposition, a mature outlook on life and will be creative in whatever profession is chosen. Accord the finest education you can afford.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Charged In Gun Death Of Wife

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A 49-year-old Raleigh man has been charged with first-degree in the shooting death of his wife late Thursday afternoon, police said.

James Edward Hayes was charged with killing Perlene Williams Hayes, 43, said Sergeant Barry Rigsbee of the Raleigh Police Department.

Linda Baker, 21, who is Mrs. Hayes' niece, received a "superficial wound" to the hand, Rigsbee said.

Ms. Baker experienced labor pains following the shooting, but Peggy Blake, a spokesman for Wake Medical Center, said the pains were later identified as false labor.

Ms. Baker was listed in good condition at the hospital, Ms. Blake said.

Rigsbee said several shots from a .38-caliber revolver were fired during the shooting, which is still under investigation.
