Some Say American Dream Ended With Shooting Of Pres. Kennedy

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Twenty years ago on November 22 what some called an American dream, a step back in time to Camelot, ended in Texas with the death of President John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Pitt Countians along with the rest of the nation mourned Kennedy's death that day in 1963 and again mourned and reflected last week upon what his death and presidency were about.

Greenville resident Colleen Cargile said she was devastated when she heard the news of Kennedy's death. "I was 34 at the time, and I, like everyone else, thought it was tragic, heartbreaking."

Despite Mrs. Cargile's admiration for President Kennedy, she said she was not blind to the mistakes he made while in office. "He made a lot of mistakes, the Bay of Pigs for example, but I feel he would have made up for a lot of things had he had a second term in office. Maybe he would have solved the civil rights problem and if he'd lived and been re-elected, I also feel Vietnam would not have escalated into such a senseless war where so many of our young men's lives were wasted," she said.

Acting Pitt Community College President Dr. Charlie Russell was on his way to a Farm Bureau meeting in Jacksonville when he and his friends in the car heard of the shooting over the radio.

"First I was appalled, shocked," he reflected, "then I got angry and upset that something like that could happen in the United States and to our president. There was a period of anxiety there for awhile while we wondered whether or not he had been killed, but what made it a lot easier was being able to share it or know you were grieving along with 99 or 100 percent of the people in the world.

"Of course when I reflect on John Kennedy's death, his presidency and on the man himself, I remember how much he impressed me. What captivated me, I think, was his charisma, his ability to comprehend endless facts, figures and information and then articulate those ideas so fluently," Russell said.

Bobby Hazelton of Winterville recalled that he was working part-time at Fred Webb's Grain Elevator when his girl friend Sandra, now his wife, called up the company to tell the news. While Hazelton was surprised by the shooting, he said he was never a supporter of John Kennedy. "He, his family, wanted to set up a dynasty. Well, they accomplished that and they haven't let that dynasty or dream die for 20 years. The news media built him up to be the saviour of our country, as one of our best presidents when, in terms of what he accomplished, he was probably one of our lesser presidents. They (the press and the family) immortalized him, they just don't want him or the Kennedy name to die."

East Carolina University Regional Development Director Janice Faulkner was an advisor to the Pirate Cheerleaders and 31-years-old at the time Kennedy died. "I remember the whole thing quite clearly, she said, "in fact I'll never forget how we heard of the shooting.

"We were enroute to Tampa, Florida, to play a football game when we stopped for lunch in a small Georgia town and saw all the flags at half-mast. We asked the waitress why and she told us President Kennedy had just died.

"When we got to Tampa, there was a great quandry about whether or not to play the game. Many, many, many athletic events across the country were cancelled that night, but the officials decided to hold the game with dedicatory ceremonies before, along with silent prayer. There was a great pall upon the event. It was the quietest football game that I've ever attended," she said.

"His death was a very, very personal thing to me, because I was one of the alternate delegates that went to the convention that nominated him as the Democratic presidential candidate. I was also on the committe that prepared for his visit shortly before he became president. He was the first president in history to come east of Raleigh since William Jennings Bryant came to Goldsboro in the late 1880s," she said.

Dr. Leo Jenkins, then chancellor of ECU, said his recollection of the day Kennedy died is "eerie".

"We were on our way from Chapel Hill to Raleigh to meet with (University) President William Friday and I remember commenting to my friends that the road (from Raleigh to Chapel Hill) was a mighty dangerous road. It was narrow and there were all sorts of trees and hills a potential assassin could have hidden behind a couple weeks ago when Kennedy had traveled that road. Believe it or not, just about that time they interrupted the radio program we were listening to with the message that President Kennedy had just been shot. The meeting was cancelled."

Jenkins said he was a great fan of Kennedy's, that Kennedy was "an inspiration. The time he was president was a great period in American history for the people who were romantic and wanted the best for our nationa, it was a Camelot period, it was a dream period," he said.

Factors Behind School Dropouts Have Roots In Earlier Years

By JERRY RAYNOR

School administrators in the Pitt County and Greenville City Schools agree on the basic premise that factors behind dropouts from school are not generally ones that result in a student's sudden decision to quit school, but often have their roots in earlier school years.

A recent report compiled by the N. C. Department of Public Instruction reveals that the dropout rate for school year 1982-83 was 5.2 percent for the Greenville City Schools, and 7.2 percent for the Pitt County Schools.

"In general, most dropouts occur in the tenth grade, after a student turns 16," Dr. Delma Blinson, superintendent of the city schools remarked. "But the problem basically goes back much farther. Often we can identify a potential dropout as early as the second, third and fourth grades. Young students who have trouble with their studies, who fall behind in their work, lose interest, become defiant and are disciplinary problems, are likely to be eventual dropout candidates.

"Students who do well the first six or seven years of school usually end up graduating," Blinson added. "I feel that for reliable indications of dropouts in high school, it's good to take a look at students who are 10 to 12 years old. Much depends on the question of how much communication takes place between a child and parents about school. If the answer is virtually zero, the student is a potential drop out."

Blinson feels one of the most effective dropout prevention approaches "is finding a way for a student to study to be successful in his school work, to learn to read and write effectively. Young student who can do this are more likely to feel good about being in school. When this happens, a student can face problems with confidence."

Blinson added that in Greenville, "the Agnes Fullilove program is one of the most effective types of solutions in preventing dropouts. Students there feel the teachers care, which is perhaps the single most important element in approaching a dropout situation. These students also react positively to the fact that somebody is expecting them to perform.

"There are no gimmicks to prevent dropout," Blinson remarked. "I feel strongly that the two most important elements to dropout prevention is that a student early learns to read, write, and compute, and to have teachers who really care. These two factors are the bottom line."

John McKnight, assistant superintendent for instruction in the Pitt County Schools, said "the droput rates as a whole have to be looked at statistically in grades nine through twelve. One phenomena that is happening in the schools is that we are holding students longer. Some under-achievers in the past dropped out earlier and were not reflected in statistics, whereas now with students staying in school longer, it has reached the point where statistics do reflect them, and that makes a difference in reports on the subject."

McKnight mentioned, too, the role that availability of work for young people plays in the dropout picture. "In the past, more than now perhaps, but it still remains a significant consideration, is that many dropouts can immediately get work at minimum wages and often in better paying jobs.

"This has lured away students in the ninth, tenth, and 11th grades, some who have managed to get work at $5 or $6 an hours. To a young person, this can seem like a lot of money. For some, that's more important at the time than staying in school."

On steps that can and are being taken to prevent high dropout rates, McKnight cited the development of "curricular offerings that are based on the awareness of the value of a full gamut of vocational courses as well as computer studies.

"This makes schools more attractive to certain students, which in turn makes for a more stable student.

"For the first time this year," McKnight pointed out, "we have a specific dropout prevention program. In addition to our regular counselors, we have two fulltime people who work with at least 40 students each in helping them plan programs and find parttime jobs. This is the kind of situation that works in keeping students in school who otherwise might be dropouts," McKnight said.

Area Highway Improvements

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Motorists in this area of North Carolina will have new roads to travel on, beginning next year, as work on long-sought-after projects is completed, and work on other projects is begun.

The Board of Transportation awarded contracts Nov. 18 for widening N.C. 11-U.S. 13 from Greenville to Bethel.

Work on the $1.05 million project — 8.89 miles from SR 1442 North of Greenville, to SR 1429 in Bethel — is scheduled to begin in December, and should be completed in October 1984. The project includes widening the present 20-feet wide roadway to 28 feet and resurfacing.

The U.S. 264 project — a 33.4 miles long four-lane freeway between Greenville and Wilson, estimated to cost $76.35 million, is to be built in stages, and construction on two of the nine sections has already begun — a 4.86 mile link from west of SR 1507 in Wilson County to the Wilson-Greene County line, and the East Thoroughfare at Farmville, a 3.17 mile roadway from existing U.S. 264 to SR 1200.

Bids on two other sections of the U.S. 264 project — a 1.22 miles section west of Greenville, from SR 1204 to SR 1200, and a 3.96 miles section from east of N.C. 58 at Wilson to SR 1507 west of Saratoga — have been received and award of the contracts for construction is expected in December.

Two other sections of the U.S. 264 project are scheduled for bidding in January 1984 — 4.57 miles from the Wilson-Greene County line to the present U.S. 264 and U.S. 264A at Farmville, and 3.56 miles from west of SR 1210 to west of SR 1204 (west of Greenville) — while April 1984 should see the seventh section ready for bid — 3.91 miles from the Farmville East Thoroughfare to west of SR 1210 in Pitt County.

The two remaining sections of the freeway — 2.22 miles from the N.C. 58-U.S. 264 intersection at Wilson, to the new U.S. 264, and the 6.65 miles Farmville Bypass, from east of SR 1311 to East of N.C. 121 — will be later in coming.

Tentative Department of Transportation schedules show bids for the section at Wilson will be accepted in mid-1985, while bids for the Farmville bypass will be accepted in fiscal year 1992.

In addition to the Wilson-to-Greenville road, the remaining two-lane section of U.S. 264 between Greenville and Washington will be four-laned. Estimates set the Plane Crash

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A Boeing 747 jetliner of Colombia's Avianca Airlines crashed and exploded in flames early Sunday as it approached the Madrid airport and officials said they feared at least 182 people were killed.

The airport officials said the jumbo jet was carrying 169 passengers and 20 crew members and it was believed there were only seven survivors. Police reported one survivor died of burns en route to the hospital.

Airport sources said many of the victims were French nationals who had boarded the plane in Paris. The flight originated in Frankfurt, West Germany, and had been scheduled to continue on to Bogota, the Colombian capital, from Madrid.

The plane crashed near the village of Mejorada del Campo, only five miles east of Madrid's Barajas airport and 12 miles east of the Spanish capital. Fire-fighting equipment and ambulances rushed to the scene from Barajas.

Officials said the bodies of the victims, including three children, were being taken to the airport for identification. They said it appeared most of the people perished from the flames that swept through the broken craft.

Among the 140 passengers waiting at Barajas airport to catch the flight to Bogota was former Colombian President Misael Pastrana.

A spokesman at the Avianca office in Bogota said he had no passenger list for the Paris-Madrid flight. He said his records indicated the pilot on the flight would have been Capt. Eduardo Moreno.

In Washington, National Transportation Safety Board spokesman Ira Furman said accident investigators Tom McCarthy from Washington and Luis Carmona of Miami, Fla., who speaks Spanish, would leave for Madrid Sunday to aid in the investigation.

KETTLE DRIVER BEGUN — The annual kick-off of the Salvation Army's 1983 Christmas fund kettle drive was held Friday at noon at the Belk's entrance at Carolina East Mall. Helms-Hunt

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms' re-election committee has sent letters to several thousand Democrats claiming that Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt is too close to organized labor, Helms aides say.

Hunt has said he will challenge the North Carolina Republican in the 1984 election, although neither man has made a formal campaign announcement.

"Several thousand letters went out to Democrats over the state," said Claude Allen, Helms' campaign press secretary. "We haven't had any response yet, because they only went out late last week."

The three-page letter, signed by retired Superior Court Judge Albert W. Cowper of Kinston, was mailed by Democrats for Jesse, an organization set up by the Helms for Senate Committee.

Cowper, whose nomination by a judicial district committee in 1960 was approved by Democratic Gov. Luther Hodges, left the bench in 1979.

Allen said this was the only mailing by Democrats for Jesse so far this year.

In the letter, Cowper wrote: "Jim Hunt has been a governor. As a governor, he's had to bend with the special interests: the labor union bosses, teacher unions, radical black activists like Jesse Jackson, anti-nuclear peaceniks and others.

"Perhaps you may remember how Jesse led a successful filibuster in 1978 that stopped the AFL-CIO's labor reform bill — a union power grab that would have crippled North Carolina's economic development," the letter continued.

"Ask yourself, would Jim Hunt have stood up to the union bosses who have given him so much support? I think you know the answer."

The letter cited $18,000 in contributions by labor union-affiliated political action committees to a now-defunct Hunt fund-raising organization, the North Carolina Campaign Fund.

Troops Capture Resister

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — U.S. troopers tipped by local residents raided a house where six armed Grenadian soldiers were hiding out and captured one but the others escaped in a van, a U.S. Army spokesman reported Friday.

Capt. George Wright said six rifles were found in the house near the Point Salines airstrip but no shots were fired during the Friday afternoon raid.

Most of the soldiers of Grenada's now-disbanded People's Revolutionary Army — PRA — surrendered within days after the Oct. 25 invasion by U.S. forces, and resistance in recent weeks has been limited to infrequent sniping attacks.

Wright gave this account: "Based on information provided by local Grenadian residents, U.S. soldiers in the Point Salines area found a PRA meeting going on inside a house.

Arms Race Tension Up

LONDON (AP) — Dramatic developments during the last two weeks appear to mark the start of a new stage in the nuclear arms race between East and West.

Many Western governments and weapons-control specialists had predicted the Soviet Union would make concessions at arms talks in Geneva when the first of NATO's 572 new U.S.-made nuclear missiles arrived in Europe.

But after the missiles began to arrive in Britain, on Nov. 14, the Soviets quit the negotiations on medium-range missiles in Europe and said they'll match the growing NATO nuclear arsenal in Western Europe by stationing more missiles in the Communist East bloc and sea-based rockets that could strike the United States.

"We don't know at this point what to expect," said Richard Perle, assistant U.S. defense secretary, after Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov threatened to strengthen the Soviets' nuclear firepower.

"We have all started on a new spiral of madness," said Richard S. Ovinnikov, a Soviet ambassador to the United Nations. Nevertheless, the diplomat said on Friday at a news conference, "We are not going to be the first to use nuclear weapons."

NATO member governments, while vowing to go ahead with their five-year program of missile deployment, quickly appealed to the Soviets to resume negotiations.

Some government officials and arms experts suggested the Soviets might return to the talks on medium-range missiles but not before the 1984 U.S. presidential elections. Others said the Soviets would return only if the West agreed to combine medium-range missile talks with the negotiations on strategic weapons.

A critical point in the arms race came on Nov. 14, when British Defense Minister Michael Heseltine told a hushed House of Commons "I have to inform the House that earlier today the first cruise missiles were delivered by air" to Greenham Common air base in Britain.

In all, 464 cruise missiles and 108 Pershing-2 rockets will be placed in five Western European nations.

NATO says the missiles, each carrying one bomb, will counter Soviet SS-20 triple-headed missiles, which Western intelligence sources say now number 360.

On Nov. 22, the West German Bundestag voted 286-226 after a heated debate to approve the deployment of 108 Pershing-2 and 96 cruise missiles in West Germany, the largest complement of the new missiles in any one NATO country.

The next day in Geneva, 25 minutes after the start of a session of arms talks, Soviet negotiator Yuli A. Kvitsinsky told reporters: "The talks are discontinued and there is no resumption date" of the negotiations to limit arsenals of medium-range missiles.

A separate set of arms talks, dealing with long-range, or strategic, nuclear weapons, is still under way in Geneva and there has been no indication those talks will break off.

On Nov. 24, Soviet news media issued a statement from Andropov. The president declared that the Soviet Union would resume deployment of SS-20 missiles in Eastern Europe and that new sea-based nuclear weapons would be placed within range of the United States.

Some Western experts said that although the Soviet Union claimed it had a moratorium on deployment of SS-20s, the missiles were being put in place all along.

Andropov also said he would speed up deployment of short-range nuclear weapons in East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

"Since by deploying its missiles in Europe the United States increases the nuclear threat to the Soviet Union, the corresponding Soviet systems will be deployed with due account for this circumstance in ocean areas and in seas."

Among Western officials who had calculated the Russians would not seriously negotiate until the West began deploying its new missiles was Eugene Rostow, former director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Rostow said in Brussels, Belgium, Oct. 18, 1982, "Allied public opinion should not expect any movement in the Soviet position, if they continue to negotiate in the pattern of the past, until five minutes before the deployments are scheduled."

Mideast Roundup

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP) — Yasser Arafat and the rebel PLO factions trying to oust him agreed Saturday to halt their bloody fighting around Tripoli and leave this northern Lebanese port city in the coming weeks.

Syria, whose forces backed the PLO rebels, claimed its troops had fired on U.S. F-14 jets flying reconnaissance missions over eastern Lebanon.

There was no confirmation of the claim from Pentagon spokesmen in Washington.

In Tripoli, Arafat, the embattled chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, told reporters he had accepted an agreement mediated by Syria and Saudi Arabia that gives former Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami a free hand to negotiate the details of a Palestinian pullout.

Under the plan, all Palestinian forces will leave the area within two weeks after Karami has worked out details of their departure.

But the agreement sets no timetable for Karami's negotiations and there was no indication when any of the Palestinian troops — an estimated 2,000 on each side — would start to leave, nor where they would go.

Arafat said he had telephoned Karami in Damascus, Syria, and urged him to dispatch an Arab military commission to the city as soon as possible to police the cease-fire.

In Damascus, spokesmen for the two major rebel factions also endorsed the agreement and said they would support Karami in his efforts to end the fighting.

The International Red Cross estimates that 442 people have died and 2,146 have been wounded in three weeks of warfare.

The two rebel groups intially balked at the plan because it provided for removal of their own troops from Tripoli and two nearby refugee camps, Baddawi and Nahr el-Bared, which they captured from Arafat.

"Although the departure of the Palestinian fighters from Tripoli was not our demand, we declare that we are fully committed to the cease-fire and to whatever decision Rashid Karami will take regarding the situation inside Tripoli," said a statement issued in Damascus by rebels within Arafat's Fatah faction.

In a separate statement, Talal Naji, secretary-general of the Libyan-backed Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, also declared his group's "full commitment" to Karami's mission.

But during an interview Friday in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, rebel leader Col. Saeed Mousa, also known as Abu Mousa, said the insurgents would only allow Arafat to leave Tripoli without his fighters.

Despite the cease-fire, both sides traded sniper fire in the neighborhoods north of Arafat's headquarters and along the coastal highway between the center of the city and the Palestinian camps.

Arafat refused to say whether his fighters would leave Lebanon. But he said he would go to Algeria eventually to meet Palestinian fighters freed last Thursday from Israeli detention camps.

Arafat aides told reporters the agreement had strengthened the chairman's hand in quelling the PLO mutiny.

They claimed Syria's open support of the rebels had discredited the insurgents among Palestinian civilians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza and among Arab countries that support the PLO.

"The rebels are finished," one aide said. "The Syrians found out that crushing the PLO is not an easy matter."

He said the Soviet Union, Saudi Arabia and other countries had put diplomatic pressure on Syria to end the rebellion. Another aide, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Syrian support for the agreement was the key to ending the fighting.

"Our big problem was not the (rebel) fighters," he said. "It was the Syrian artillery. Most of our brothers were wounded and killed by Syrian artillery, not by bullets. Without the Syrian artillery, there is no chance for the rebels to take the city."

State Officials Fight Army Land Reclamation

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission plans to fight a proposed U.S. Army plan to reclaim some 53,000 acres of popular commission hunting land near Fort Bragg.

"We're going to fight like hell to assure the future of the Sandhills," said commission director Vernon Bevill.

Officials at the 130,696-acre Army base near Fayetteville are eyeing the Sandhills Game Lands in Richmond, Scotland and Moore counties to expand their military training area.

The federal government deeded the land to the state in 1949, with the proviso that if the land were needed for "national defense purposes," the federal government or the military could reclaim it.

If there is a battle over the land, the Wildlife Commission will have an ally in Rep. Bill Hefner, D-N.C., whose district includes the three counties.

Hefner, chairman of the House Appropriations military construction subcommittee, opposes the expansion of the base.

"The Army is not to use or plan to use the Sandhills Wildlife Refuge for additional training or exercise purposes," he wrote in a report on a military spending bill for 1984. "If additional land acquisition is necessary, real estate other than the wildlife refuge is to be explored."

Wildlife Commission officials say the Army wants the land so it can expand training for elite counterinsurgency units.

cost of widening the 10.4 miles of roadway at $14.81 million, and bids are expected to be received sometime in 1984.

The updated Transportation Improvement Program (TIP) approved by the Board of Transportation Nov. 18, also includes plans for 7.3 mile, $17.7 million U.S. 264 bypass north of Greenville, and a 13.1 miles, $42 million U.S. 264 bypass of Wilson.

Right-of-way acquisition for the Greenville bypass, according to the TIP, would begin in fiscal year 1989-1990, with construction beginning in fiscal 1990-1991. Construction of the Wilson bypass would begin in fiscal 1991-1992 after right-of-way acquisition beginning in fiscal 1989-1990.

Another project included in the TIP is the widening of 11 miles of U.S. 64 from Williamston to Jamesville to four-lanes, and the improving of the 12 miles of two-lane U.S. 64 from Jamesville to Plymouth. The cost of the 23-mile project is estimated at $12.3 million. Construction is expected to begin by mid-1984.

Construction is also scheduled to begin this fiscal year on a $10.8 million four-lane replacement for the Roanoke River Bridge carrying U.S. 13-U.S. 17 at Williamston.

Also included in the TIP, a 10-year program of work, is a $13.9 million bypass carrying U.S. 70 around Havelock in Craven County. The 9 miles of roadway is scheduled for construction in 1991.

Planning for another bridge replacement — the bridge across Bogue Sound, linking Morehead City with Atlantic Beach and other communities on Bogue Banks — is continuing, despite a suit filed by the Town of Morehead City last week against the transportation board and the DOT.

The $12.2 million high-rise bridge, as planned, will be located just east of the present draw bridge, and DOT schedules call for awarding contracts for construction by mid-1984.

But Morehead City elected officials want the present bridge left in place and a new bridge built further to the west. So the town filed suit in an effort to halt work on the present project.

However, area supporters of the DOT project say they may take legal action against Morehead City if the town persists in its move against the planned project.

$37.5 Million In Gold Taken

LONDON (AP) — Six hooded gunmen stole more than 3 tons of pure gold worth $37.5 million from a warehouse near Heathrow Airport Saturday after threatening to burn the security guards alive, police said. It was richest robbery haul in British history and one of the biggest of all time.

Insurers Robert Bishop and Co. offered a reward of $3 million for information leading to recovery of the loot, which also included a small quantity of diamonds worth $150,000.

Commander Frank Cater, head of Scotland Yard's Flying Squad, said the gold bullion at the high-security Brinks-Mat Ltd. warehouse was in 6,800 bars awaiting shipment to the Far East. The firm, a subsidiary of the U.S. Brink's company, transports valuables.

Police said six members of the security staff were in the Brinks-Mat warehouse at about 6:40 a.m. (1:40 a.m. EST) when the gunmen broke in, somehow averting detection by 24-hour surveillance cameras mounted outside the building.

The gunmen — wearing ski-mask hoods and armed with handguns — handcuffed the guards and then poured gasoline over them, police said.

"They threatened to ignite it (the gasoline), but they did not do so," an official Scotland Yard statement said. It continued:

"No shots were fired. It's thought they must have had two vehicles to get away."

About two hours after the robbers fled, one of the workers managed to free himself and sounded an alarm that brought ambulances, police cruisers and fire engines rushing to the scene.

Late Saturday night mystery still surrounded the holdup at Brinks-Mat depot No. 7, a long red-brick and corrugated-metal building at the end of a row of warehouses in Hounslow industrial park, one mile from Heathrow and about 15 miles west of London.

Police refused to say who owned the gold, why so much of it was stored in one place, how the gunmen managed to get past surveillance cameras outside the warehouse and how they carted away 3 tons of bullion.

Said Yard spokesman Martin Habgood: "These are some of the questions we're just not prepared to answer. We're not saying who the gold belonged to, why it was there or where it was going."

Asked why the owner's identity was not disclosed, Habgood said, "Maybe it's because they don't know it's been stolen."

The crime bore similarities to Britain's previous biggest robbery — April 4 at Security Express in London, where a 14-man gang wearing monkey masks made off with 7 million pounds ($10.5 million) in bank notes. During that robbery the gunmen squirted gasoline on a guard and threatened to burn him unless he opened a vault.

All 14 men remain at large, and police say none of the missing bank notes has ever been traced.

"It might be that there is a link or it might be that it is a copycat," said a Scotland Yard spokesman who did not want to be identified.

A Yard spokeswoman said the gold bars weighed between 1.1 and 3.3 pounds, not between 2.2 and 4.4 pounds each as earlier announced.

"We know that the figures don't tally but we can't get them exactly," she said. "We are now saying the gold was in excess of three tons and valued at 25 million pounds."

Cater said the total haul could be contained in a box measuring about 6 feet by 3 feet by 2 feet.

Because each bar was marked and identifiable, he said, the gold would probably be melted down before disposal.

The commander told a news conference that one security guard was pistol-whipped around the head and another suffered skin blistering from the gasoline.

Scotland Yard's Central Robbery Squad cordoned off the 150-foot-long warehouse while forensic experts searched for fingerprints and other clues.

Police searched all cars entering and leaving the compound, where 18 industrial warehouses are situated directly under the final flight approach to Heathrow, the world's busiest international air terminal.

Warehouse No. 7, bears no signs or other marks indicating that it is a top-security warehouse.

Police refused to speculate on whether the robbery might have been an inside job.

In the robbery at the headquarters of Security Express police said the gang appeared to have detailed knowledge of the company's money collections and employee movements.

Despite a $750,000 reward offered by the company, police have disclosed no significant leads in the case.

The Security Express holdup came only four months after Britain's biggest-ever burglary: the theft of nine certificates of deposit worth 10 million pounds (now $15 million) from the Bank of Sepah-Iran in London. The thieves were not caught and it is not publicly known whether the certificates were exchanged for cash. Police differentiate between robbery — which is committed with violence or threat, and burglary which is not.

But perhaps Britain's best-remembered theft was the Great Train Robbery of 1963, which netted 2.6 million pounds (then $7 million), most of which has never been recovered.

The biggest robbery of all time, according to the Guinness Book of World Records, was that of the Reichsbank following Germany's collapse in the spring of 1945 at the end of World War II. Negotiable securities worth $400 million were stolen at that time.

Scott Tries To Stop College Funding Bills

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Community colleges in areas with strong legislators are getting an unfairly large share of funding, says the president of the state community college system.

Bob Scott said he has begun a program to halt the process and bring some stability and predictability to the schools' budget requests.

"There are two problems we have to deal with: maintaining equity in funding in our system; (and) two, let the educational decisions be made after fair study and review by those who have the total picture, rather than have educational decisions being made in the political arena," he said.

In the 1983 General Assembly, special bills were passed for several colleges, including Wake Technical College, $1 million; Durham Technical College, $200,000; Lenoir Community College, $50,000; and Haywood Technical College $1,970,000. All were for programs in high technology training.

"Haywood Tech, we knew about that one," Scott said. "But so many of the others we didn't know about until we saw them on the legislative calendar."

Other special bills included $60,000 for Craven Community College in New Bern for a public radio station and $80,000 for a new building at Sampson Technical Colleg in Sampson County.

Scott said he has a tough job trying to stop such special treatment. Each of the 58 institutions has a 12-member board of trustees. He said the trustees thionk of their school as a local institution rather than a state one.

"I'm trying to involve the presidents and the trustees and the faculties in building a consensus on what our priorities are," Scott said.

Scott and John Forlines, chairman of the State Board of Community Colleges, have been giving speeches urging that colleges pull together behind one comprehensive budget rather than leaving funding to chance.

Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, speaker of the House, said Scott is on the right track if he just follows through.

"I think it would be better for them to come forward with a package," Ramsey said. "But they can't sit on their laurels because the laurels aren't there to sit on."

Ramsey defended the Legislature's funding of high technology programs through special bills.

"We saw no initiatives from the community colleges to get into that," he said. "The General Assembly just took the initiative last session and put us on that road. I don't think it's a good idea to go around and criticize the group that has the initiative to get up and go."

The Republican Corner
Pitt County's Conservative Voice

Some years ago I watched a communist organized parade moving through the streets of Karachi, Pakistan - a long line of flatbed trucks laden with people waving little Soviet flags, their legs dangling over the sides of the trucks. I was so impressed with the number of people that I said to the American Consul: "I had no idea that communism has such a foothold in Pakistan!" He said: "It doesn't! Let me show you how it works." He drove me in his car to the foot of the parade where several hundred people were being paid with sacks of flour to jump on the trucks and wave the flags. They were being unwittingly used to promote the communist cause in Pakistan. Of course, there are no communists trying to undermine our country (so we are told). Nevertheless, we Republicans would like to know who is paying the demonstrators to drive all over this country in their cars and buses tooting the Communist Horn! Register Republican and help us get to the foot of the parade! Call 756-7590 or write P.O. Box 2927.

Computer Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In an amended complaint to an action filed last year, International Business Machines has sued Hitachi and three Silicon Valley businesses for at least $750 million plus damages for allegedly conspiring to steal IBM trade secrets.

The revised U.S. District Court complaint filed Friday claims the value of the secrets was between $750 million and $2.5 billion. IBM has asked that the defendants by required to pay three times the value of the secrets, plus unspecified punitive damages.

The suit, filed in September 1982, grew out of an FBI "sting" operation that resulted in federal grand jury indictments. Hitachi, Japan's largest industrial company, pleaded guilty to charges it conspired to send stolen computer secrets from IBM to Japan.

According to published reports, Hitachi made an unspecified cash settlement to IBM, but Hitachi is named as a defendant in the amended complaint, along with National Semiconductor Corp., its subsidiary, National Advanced Systems, and NCL Data Inc., a consulting company.

Individuals named as defendants are two former IBM employees, Raymond Cadet and Jonathan Fram; former National Advanced System employee Barry Saffaie,and Tabassom Ayazi, who with Saffaie operate a Silicon Valley employment agency.

County Audit Gives Feeling Of Comfort

We as taxpayers always have reason to be pleased when the auditors pronounce the books of any public agency to be in good shape.

CPA Lloyd R. Moody told the Pitt County Board of Commissioners last week that the county government is in good financial shape and "functioning well."

He cited investments, deposits, collection of taxes, reserves and other economic indicators as being favorable.

Moody said he was conservative but saw the county government's condition as "good ... even excellent."

The auditor suggested that the county take more advantage of prompt payment discounts. He also suggested an "efficiency audit" to be conducted by county employees.

It is always well to remember that economies can be made in any operation, no matter how well it is operated. With the money investment plans available, public managers should constantly be looking out for the best interest rates available for funds on hand. And we should regularly look for ways to most efficiently use personnel.

It appears from the auditor's comments that the county government is operating with reasonable efficiency and it is comforting to us as taxpayers to have such a report.

Kennedy Death Leaves Images On Our Minds

It is one of the trickeries of time that memories are frozen on the images of the First Family when John F. Kennedy was in the White House.

He is forever the animated young man who could be charming, angry, forceful, stirring, impetuous and aglow with humor. For a thousand days he captures the imagination of America's people.

His widow will never be allowed to gracefully age with the passage of time; nor will his children be remembered as other than the very small boy and his "big sister", who really wasn't so big after all.

The assassination stunned people as few tragedies have affected us. And, as the days of mourning passed in funeral procession, people went about their tasks with heavy hearts and dragging feet — wondering what they had lost, and wondering whether it would ever be found again.

In the Novembers that followed there has been a temptation to question how much of the Kennedy presidency was mere charisma, and how much represented a greatness that was not allowed to be achieved.

Perhaps it was his destiny to pose that unanswered question, and depart the scene ... leaving vivid images and a wistful sadness among those who would remember and remember and remember.

Sunday Morning Notes

(Reflector Staff Writer Carol Tyer is guest columnist for Alvin Taylor this week).

Granville Grant, a Falkland area resident who died last week at age 88, was a contemporary of Thomas Wolfe at the University of North Carolina and a personal friend of Wolfe while both lived in New York City once their college days were over.

"I'd attended Buie's Creek Academy because there was no high school in rural Onslow County (Snead's Ferry) where I'd grown up," Grant said a few weeks before his death, "and then, in 1916, I went to France with the Canadian Flying Corps. I had some serious lung damage from poison gas over there and when I got back to Snead's Ferry found out they'd conducted my funeral after I has been mistakenly reported to my family as dead. I loafed for a while, then went to Chapel Hill and entered the university.

"I didn't know Tom Wolfe at the university. I knew who he was (he was well known on campus, very active in Dr. Carter's Playmakers) but we ran in different circles. After college, I got an accounting job with Chase Manhattan Bank in New York and there I got to know him better than most. He'd been to Harvard a while and was teaching at the Washington Square campus of New York University. He lived a block from me and we had dinner together frequently.

"Before he met me, he stopped at the worst greasy spoons. I was, at the time, a connoisseur of good food and good company, so I introduced him to restaurants I enjoyed. We both were talkers and we enjoyed conversation with each other and others we met at places like Keeley Brown's at the corner of 39th and Broadway.

"He asked me to read some of his writing and I found it confusing but very interesting, very good. He put words down on paper just as they exploded out of his brain. The writing I read over a period of time was portions of 'Look Homeward, Angel.'

"Once we traveled from New York to Chapel Hill together by train. That was the only commencement I ever went to after I graduated.

"Another time I met his mother and sister when they came up from Asheville to visit him. I remember them as being just as tiresome as he made them out to be in 'Look Homeward Angel.'"

In 1924 Grant served as director of social affairs for the Democratic Convention held in New York. "Planning events that would keep people's minds off the heat took some doing," he said. "Those were torrid July days in Madison Square Garden back before it was air-conditioned."

From New York, Grant returned to Onslow County to manage his family's farming operations. He said he was proud of his scientific farming during that time and was equally as proud of the house he built on Topsail Island — from washed up timbers and marine limestone. After some years a hurricane washed it away, taking with it the manuscript of a novel he'd nearly completed and already agreed to sell to Scribner's Publishing Co.

Much of his other writing — largely essays on philosophical topics and short stories — was destroyed when his parents' house burned. He cared for his mother til her death at age 98.

He married for the first time at age 68 and moved to Pitt County. His widow, Marguerite Moore Grant says, "We had a wonderful 20 years. I wouldn't take anything for them."

He said he took great pride in the accomplishments of his nephew, Greenville resident Col. (Ret.) H.D. Bradshaw.

Bids

RALEIGH — You'd have thoght it was the middle of August and the world's last bottle of cold Mountain Dew was on the auction block. The candidates for governor were tripping and falling all over themselves to raise the ante when the political wing of the N.C. Association of Educators held its convention in Raleigh in mid-November.

No sooner would one candidate make a bid for the teachers' support than another would come along and make a bigger bid. All weekend long, the price tag went higher and higher, and teachers basked in the glory of being nurtured up to for a change.

Teacher pay has spawned the first two big issues of the 1984 gubernatorial campaign. Teachers want big raises, and the public wants some form of merit pay that rewards the best teachers. The candidates wanted to say just the right things of both because at stake was what could be a mighty important endorsement from NCAE.

Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox kicked off the NCAE weekend with a four-year plan to bring techers up to the national average salary. He proposed an 8 percent raise for each of the next four years. Half that would be a cost of living adjustment and the other half would serve to get the state up to the average. Total cost: $400 million, he says.

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and Knox are considered the leading candidates to get NCAE's endorsement. So Edmisten had to one-up Knox. To make sure he didn't forget any goody that NCAE wants, Edmisten had former NCAE President John I. Wilson write his speech for him and then he read it virtually verbatim.

Edmisten ran down NCAE's wish list, taking the right stand at every stop. As for pay, Edmisten proposes raising the minimum salary from $13,000 to $20,000 in four years. At the same time, the maximum salary would go from the current $27,000 to $40,000. He doesn't know how much this would cost and he concedes that his plan relies on some local government supplements.

Then along came Insurance Commissioner John Ingram. He was so anxious to outdo the other two that he promised the make North Carolina teachers the best paid in the country "in real dollars." Ingram hasn't figured out the arithmetic of all this. He can't say how much his plan would cost the state nor how much he'd actually pay teachers. But, you have to remember that Knox and Edmisten had already promised quite a bit.

On the issue of merit pay, it doesn't really matter much that there's a great deal of public support. NCAE opposes merit pay. So, one by one, all the candidates except Republican Jim Martin marched to the podium to say they either oppose merit pay or are extremely suspicious of it. Knox proposes that if North Carolina is to have a merit pay system, teachers should be given increment increases as they attain specific goals, such as extra graduate credits.

Tom Gilmore says he can't support merit pay until he's assured it would be fair. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green says it's premature to talk about merit pay. A big pay increase for all teachers must come first. Lauch Faircloth opposed merit pay but supported a "career development plan" that would give teachers more pay as they took on more responsibility.

A few cynics in the audience derived considerable pleasure from all this groveling. NCAE, as a lobby, was rather ineffective during the 1983 legislative session. Privately, legislators said the organization was a "paper tiger." It roars loudly but doesn't take much of a bite. From the NCAE convention, it became clear that while individual legislators might feel comfortable disregarding NCAE, the gubernatorial candidates think NCAE's endorsement is as valuable as a cold drink on a hot summer's day.

Surprise

NEW YORK (AP) — As even Martin Feldstein might admit, there have been more than a few pleasant surprises in the evolving economic recovery.

Like the very strength of the recovery, which has been at a rate double the 3 percent to 3.5 percent foreseen a year ago by Feldstein, full-time chairman of the president's council of economic advisers and an in-house critic too.

There is also genuine surprise among many so-called experts that there has been little crowding out, in spite of almost daily reminders that the budget deficit would force Washington to sop up all liquidity in the financial pool.

It will come, they say, but so far it hasn't. The housing people claim the government's financing needs have kept mortgage rates higher than they might have been, but buyers did get their money. They didn't get crowded out.

Neither has business been bumped from its position at the water hole. It simply didn't need the money, a fortunate circumstance resulting mainly from its rapidly improving profits, which also weren't entirely foreseen.

The swift descent of the jobless rate also ranks as a surprise, even to folks in the White House who would have loved to tell you a year ago that the rate would be under 9 percent of the civilian work force by late 1983.

Very few economists, including those in the administration, foresaw such a labor market turn. To the contrary, one year ago — when the fourth quarter jobless rate was 10.7 percent — many of them spent their energies telling us why we shouldn't expect anything very much below the double digits.

But in just one month, October, the rate dived from 9.3 percent to 8.8 percent. While some of the improvement might be attributable to statistical neurasthenia, a good deal of it represents a healthy improvement.

Data Resources Inc., the Lexington, Mass. statistical factory, points out that all major categories of the labor market shared in the latest improvement, and that compared to a year ago, civilian employment is 2,752,000 higher.

Unexpected also was the improvement in the books of states and localities. In 1982, according to Morgan Guaranty, these entities posted a combined operating deficit of $3 billion, and their outlook on life was even gloomier.

Although it is just a year later, it is hard to recall how desperate the situation seemed to be. The only remedy, municipalities were told, was to cut, cut, cut, because they were on their own. Federal aid was being cut too.

Now, says Morgan, it appears these same governments will show a 1983 surplus of $15 billion, an impressive, even heroic achievement, accomplished in part by the doubly painful procedure of doing without while raising taxes.

Papers Raise Questions

WASHINGTON — From the government documents seized in the U.S. intervention on Grenada emerges a pattern of intimate collaboration between its now deposed communist regime and the Congressional Black Caucus, suggesting gulf between black politicians ad voters in the U.S.

The fact that Rep. Ron Dellums of California dissented from the overwhelmingly favorable view of the Grenadian operation by a bipartisan congressional delegation sent there comes as no surprise once these documents are read. They specifically reveal that Dellums' report on Grenada to the House Armed Services Committee was submitted to the late Maurice Bishop's regime for its editing and approval. Beyond that, a close connection between Grenada's now deposed dictators and Capitol Hill is revealed.

Dellums is not alone. Not one notable American black politician, much less a member of the Congressional Black Caucus, has endorsed Grenada's liberation from the bondage of a Marxist-Leninist police state. Reps. John Conyers of Michigan and Gus Savage of Illinois stormed out of a caucus meeting hearing Dominica's Prime Minister Eugenia Charles defend the U.S. intervention. Savage took the House floor to declare: "This puppet of our president represents Aunt Jemimaism."

This aligns black congressmen against black nations of the West Indies and, by all accounts, the black citizens of Grenada. While caucus members contend their constituents back their position, private nationwide poll shows that nearly six out of 10 American blacks support President Reagan's policy in Grenada.

The connection between the Bishop regime and the black caucus is revealed by documents such as minutes of the Dec. 15, 1982, meeting of the Grenadian Politburo. Dellums' Oakland-based administrative assistant, Barbara Lee, had just arrived on the isnd.

"... Barbara Lee is here presently and has brought with her a report on the International Airport that was done by Ron Dellums," said the minutes. "They have requested that we look at the document and suggest any changes we deem necessary. They will be willing to make the changes."

That draft of his report to the House Armed Services Committee poohpoohed President Reagan's fears that the airport would become a military base. Dellums' prose could only please the Bishop government, contending that "nothing being done in Grenada constitutes a threat to the United States or her allies." Dellums urged fellow congressmen to use the report "as a basis for a critique of the administration's hostile and hegemonistic policy toward Grenada." A Dellums aide told us the congressman "may have had discussions (with Grenadian officials) as to whether there were factual inaccuracies" in the report.

The Dellums office's connection with the Bishop regime shows up in another seized document: a report by Ian Jacobs, Grenada's deputy ambassador to the United Nations, on a U.S. tour last spring.

Advice To A Writer: Stick To The Point

A few days ago I was fairly overwhelmed by a sense of sympathy, compassion and commiseration, and because I seldom experience these humane emotions — and almost never experience them toward a professional liberal — I am minded to describe the sensation. I am speaking of the problem John Kenneth Galbraith encountered in writing his just-published book, "The Anatomy of Power."

For the record, Galbraith is a professor emeritus of economics at Harvard. He is a gentleman of great wit and sagacity, and almost alone among his peers he has succeeded in writing readably about the dismal science he teaches. His book provokes thought on the nature, the source and the exercise of power, but I put all that aside for another day.

As I say, my friend the professor is a board-certified, morocco-bound, hand-tooled, gilt-edged liberal in the contemporary meaning of the word. This being so, he is acutely aware of the sensitivity of many females to the male nuances of the English language. As he began his book, he spoke of circumstances in which "the individual refrains from speaking his or her mind." On Page 14 he was still with it, but only parenthetically: "Compensatory power offers the individual a reward or payment sufficiently advantageous or agreeable so that he (or she) forgoes pursuit ..." This same "he (or she)" appears in a subsequent footnote. It was still a dutiful "he or she" on Page 40.

But at about that point, I have a notion that my friend abandoned the stylistic struggle. "Ah, the hell with it," I hear the old professor saying. Whereupon, on Page 42 he returned to English: "The individual who has access to the instruments of power has a natural attraction for those who wish to share his influence, live in his shadow. It would not be seemly to tell him that his access ..."

Let me venture a couple of modest suggestions. Among our purposes, as writers, is never unintentionally to offend our readers. Some readers are in fact offended by the male referent in such constructions as "the lawyer who accepts his client's retainer ..." If there are ways to avoid such offenses, without creating stylistic spinach, we ought to seek such ways: "lawyers who accept their clients' retainers ..." But we ought not to be so intimidated by the feminists that we stumble into "the lawyer who accepts his or her client's retainers." Such constructions are pretentious, distracting and clumsy. They smack of a virtuous complacency: What a great egalitarian am I!

Verb of the week: From the sponsors of one of the mail-order sweepstakes: "Failure to comply with official rules and regulations will null and void your eligibility."

Phenomenon of the week, from an article in the Cleveland Plain Dealer about convicted murderer Jeffrey MacDonald: "Each victim had been killed again and again and again."

Boner of the week, from a memorandum to all employees of the Illinois State Board of Education from Donald G. Gill, state superintendent of education: "New letterhead stationary may be obtained as in the past. All old stationary should be taken to Word Processing to be used for rough drafts." One misspelled "stationery" is an accident; two are by design. Tsk-tsk, and tut-tut!

Public Forum

To the editor:

On Nov. 22. 1963 I was in Ayacucho, Peru, as a member of the First Peace Corps Arts and Crafts Project. I remember how stunned our small group of volunteers was when, in isolated circumstances, we learned of the president's death. In the evening, we found each other after a day's work. Grief. The stars were very close in a very black sky.

That Thanksgiving was held in the enclosed garden of an abandoned monastery where two of the volunteers lived and where I had lived at first. Whitewashed walls glowed with the light of the clear sierra day. Our tables were two doors on four sawhorses. We were glad to be together with Peruvian friends, visiting volunteers, our site group and expatriots from other countries, but we could not laugh at a quick careless joke a Swiss-Peruvian made on the assassination.

We felt that we were the grass roots. We knew John Kennedy was special.

To the editor:

I see by your editorial Tuesday night that you already knew that stuff in "The Day After" ("It is an old theme. The horrors are not new.")

I suppose you also were aware of the nuclear winter that Carl Sagan described in the discussion that followed the film. Speaking for a united scientific community, he reported that a fairly small nuclear war could black out the sun so that the planet would freeze from the poles to the equator and the human species would probably be extinguished.

If you knew so much, Mr. Editor, why hasn't your newspaper been campaigning for a nuclear freeze, against the MX, and for every bit of legislation that gave hope for controlling this monster in our midst? Why have you personally not been demonstrating with the Peace Committee in Greenville and Goldsboro and D.C. and New York? Why haven't you been using your intelligence to think of better ways than demonstrating?

Knowledge carries responsibilities.

Steve Gerstel — Capitol Gripped By Siege Of Security

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A security shroud envelopes the nation's Capitol, turning that magnificent edifice into a besieged garrison.

Dogs sniff for bombs, police check for indentification, machines probe for metal, entrances are sealed to visitors, corridors are off limits.

The state of siege, so grim, seems inevitable in a time when the setting of explosives in public and corporate buildings has become commonplace.

Security in the Capitol, once almost non-existent, was tightened noticeably after a middle-of-the night bomb in 1971 demolished a washroom and barber shop on the first floor.

But that was only a pale forerunner of the stringent security measures which were imposed the day after another explosion two weeks ago.

That explosion, set off within steps of the Senate chamber, inflicted minor structural damage and damaged priceless paintings. Fortunately, the blast came late at night, when the Capitol was virtually empty.

That same explosion, as little as four hours later when the Senate was still in session, would very likely have claimed some wounded, perhaps some dead.

The force of the explosion, set off in a heavily-traveled corridor on the second floor, sent shrapnel-type missiles rocketing into the Republican cloakroom, an off-floor retreat for GOP senators.

The new security measures were quick to go into effect but they were not actually a response to the bombing.

The desire for new safeguards were prompted by reports, never substantiated, that Lybian hit squads had inflitrated the country. It was in response to that danger that security officials first made their plans.

The security measures now in effect are, by and large, little more than a nuisance although they take away from the vistors the privilige of roaming the second-floor corridors.

The measures will be tightened even more when Congress returns Jan. 23 — further restricting the access of outsiders to the Capitol and requiring badges for staff and media.

Although the feeling of greater safety may be reassuring to the lawmakers, many are bothered by the neccessity of the unprecedented precautions.

House Democratic leader Jim Wright said, the day after the bombing, that he was "earnestly concerned" about restricting the Capitol to the point it would interfere with visitors.

"A free society such as ours owes a degree of access to its citizens," he said. "It is not our building. This building belongs to the people of the United States."

Hopefully, Wright's concept of the Capitol is widespread and strong enough to head off the tunnel-vision security types who would not be adverse to turning the building into an off-limits fortress.

These types have suggested putting a fence around the lush Capitol grounds, which also belong to the people, and encasing the House and Senate chambers with a form of plexiglass bubble top.

Almost absolute security can be provided for the Capitol.

But the price in terms of access for the thousands of Americans who come to see the one building uniquely theirs is far too high.

George Gallop — Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — President Reagan has registered a moderate gain in popularity in the aftermath of the momentous events in Beirut and Grenada last month. In a survey completed last Sunday, 53 percent approved of Reagan's overall performance in office while 31 percent disapproved.

In a similar survey conducted prior to foreign incidents, Reagan received a 46 percent favorable job rating with 37 percent disapproving. The latest assessment, therefore, represents an improvement of 7 percentage points in the president's standing with the American people over a period of six weeks. His current rating is his highest in two years.

It is interesting to note that a survey conducted for Newsweek by the Gallup Organization Oct. 26-27 — immediately after the Grenada invasion — showed virtually no change in President Reagan's popularity. This suggests that the public's favorable response to Reagan's performance was a considered judgment that took some time to develop.

Long-Term Trend Is Strong

While Reagan's 7-point gain in popularity as a consequence of the Beirut and Grenada events can be characterized as moderate, the president has enjoyed a steady upward trend in popularity since early this year. His present 53 percent approval rating, in fact, represents the first time in almost two years that it has topped the 50 percent mark.

In addition to the public good will that accrued to Reagan because of the foreign incidents, growing optimism about the economic recovery has contributed to a generally strong trend this year.

Following is the question asked and a comparison of the three recent surveys' results:

"Do you approve or disapprove of the way Ronald Reagan is handling his job as president?"

Reagan Performance Ratings
(Before & After Foreign Events)

	Before Sept.30-Oct.16	Oct.26-27	After Oct.28 Nov. 13
Approve	46%	48%	53%
Disapprove	37	39	31
No opinion	17	13	16
Total	100	100	100

President Reagan's recent upturn in popularity is found in most major population segments.

Among Republicans, his approval score, at a high 77 percent prior to the foreign events, went still higher, to 84 percent approval after those occurrences. Among Democrats, too, Reagan made a strong 10-point advance. Independents gave the president a 48 percent job approval rating both before and after the incidents.

For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 4 percentage points in either direction.

Helen Thomas — White House Enjoys Sigh Of Relief

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The president and White House aides are breathing a sigh of relief. They do not believe that "The Day After," a television drama showing the horrors of nuclear war, had any major negative fallout as far as administration's nuclear arms policies are concerned.

Home free is the way the aides have been reacting. They feel it did not lay a glove on the White House, politically speaking, although it was considered a "national happening."

They concede they feared the worse, particularly with some reports before ABC-TV aired the film Sunday night that there might be mass hysteria.

"The best thing about the day after was that the country was mature enough to deal with it," said one top official. He recalled that a similar film had been banned in Britain in 1965 out of concern that it would scare the public.

"There was nothing like that," he said following the showing of "The Day After," adding, "There's been a healthy debate. I thought it was good for the country."

He said that Reagan thought the movie was "depressing" and repeated the public White House statement that his policies are designed to prevent a holocaust.

Meanwhile, Cabinet officials such as Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger are keeping up the counterattack charging that while the United States has reduced its nuclear arsenal, the Soviet Union has built up its stocks, believing that it can win a nuclear war.

"I only wish the Soviet leaders would allow their citizens to see a film like 'The Day After,'" Weinberger said.

Weinberger has not spent enough time in Moscow, if any, or he would know that war has been on the Soviet minds since World War II. No one can visit the Soviet Union without hearing of the 25 million casualties suffered in that devastating war.

Official visitors, and tourists alike are taken to the Leningrad memorial to commemorate the untold suffering of millions when their city was blockaded on three sides for three years.

Soviet citizens may not be told what their leaders are up to. But they are told about the horrors of nuclear war.

The White House received some 600 calls that they labeled preponderantly pro-Reagan's policies. Aides admit the number was a drop in the bucket considering that tens of thousands watched the movie, and stayed glued to the television for the pro and con debate afterward by administration officials and former government chieftains.

Americans are not in a protest mood. To White House aides, there is a general acceptance of where the nation is headed, and a belief that Reagan is doing his utmost to reach a nuclear arms reduction agreement with the Soviets.

To other observers, there is a sense of resignation and passivity to what people feel they cannot do anything about.

The administration's solution is peace through strength. Only matching or superior arms, Reagan's advisers believe, will hold the Soviets in line.

As for the political repercussions, the official said, "There's no reason to believe it will become an issue in the campaign."

With Pershing-2 and cruise missiles being deployed in Europe, the superpowers appear to be approaching the point of no return. The need for an agreement on on arms reduction becomes more urgent.

So far the Soviets have not made any major conciliatory gestures. Soviet leader Yuri Andropov has not been publicly visible, indicating that he is not well enough to be asserting leadership.

In his farewell statement before he went on his six-day Asian swing, Reagan said "We live in a dangerous world."

That appeared apt.

He also told a Jewish group privately a few weeks ago that it appeared "we were going down the road to Armageddon."

With doomsday possibilities all around us, no attempt is being made for a dialogue to get started between U.S. and Soviet officials.

Dan Sewell — Spirit

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — Grenada's churches are speaking out again in a new ecumenical spirit after being pushed into the background during 4½ years of left-wing governnment.

Some Grenadians criticize church leaders, saying their credibility had been undermined because they failed to publicly condemn the government of Prime Minister Maurice Bishop, whose overthrow and slaying by opponents in his own governing party Oct. 19 led to the U.S. invasion six days later.

The Grenada Conference of Churches, headed by the leaders of the island's Roman Catholic, Anglican, and Methodist churches, has endorsed the Oct. 25 U.S. invasion of the island as a "rescue mission."

A special national day of thanksgiving and prayer was declared Nov. 13, and sermons and prayers gave thanks for the U.S. forces that ousted the short-lived army junta here. An evening ecumenical service attracted nearly 1,000 people to the Catholic cathedral in St George's.

Bishop Sydney Charles, Catholic leader on the island, called it the largest turnout ever for such a service.

"I think we all feel we have been bound together by this experience, and our ecumenical efforts have become stronger," Charles said in an interview.

Charles added that the churches are trying to strengthen their leadership through more meetings and joint statements and declarations.

Church leaders say that church attendance was high during the 4½ years of leftist government. But Charles said the churches were being eroded by what he called a "dimension of arrogance" by the government's "subtle attack on the church." An estimated 65,000 of the 110,000 Grenadians are Roman Catholics.

Prime Minister Bishop's Marxist-influenced government never had a publicly stated anti-religion policy. But church leaders say young people and activists in the New Jewel Movement, the governing party, were deterred from attending church services by the scheduling of party and organization meetings on Sundays.

Seven Catholic teachers were retired or transferred from public schools by the government.

In 1980, priests who published a treatise on the role of the church in a leftist society were castigated over the state radio. A Catholic newsletter was stopped by the government, which by 1980 had closed down all independent news media.

In the months leading up to Bishop's overthrow, public school teachers were instructed to discontinue separate courses on Christian history traditionally taught in Grenadian schools in favor of general courses that would incorporate both religious study and Marxist theory. The decision to combine the studies coincided with the arrival in September of 15 Soviet teachers. Cubans were already on the teaching staff.

Charles said Bishop was "moving very slowly" against the church because of his Catholic training and upbringing and that it was obvious the hard-line Marxists who overthrew him would have stepped up the attack. Charles added that he feared for his own life after Bishop's execution.

One of those critical of the church during the Bishop years is Lloyd Noel, a former attorney general under Bishop who was imprisoned for 27 months after criticizing the government's move to the left.

"I don't know what they were talking about in their meetings and what they were doing in the background, but the church should take a leadership role. The church is not a secret organization," said Noel, a Catholic.

Barry Schweid — U.S.-Israeli Relations Improve

WASHINGTON (AP) — After some difficult times, U.S. relations with Israel are on the upswing again.

The administration has stopped pushing a "peace plan" that Jerusalem considered a threat to its security.

The two countries are working together to bolster the central government in Lebanon, where both have felt the sting and loss of terrorist attacks.

But even as these two allies close ranks there is nagging doubt that Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's heart is in it.

In this gossipy and savvy town, the Pentagon chief is considered relatively lukewarm toward Israel, particularly in comparison to his boss, Ronald Reagan.

Of all the top presidential advisers, he is said to be most wary of too sharp a tilt in Israel's direction for fear the United States might lose favor with Arab governments.

Faced earlier this month with persistent reports of a stronger U.S.-Israeli strategic relationship, Weinberger appeared puzzled.

"I certainly wouldn't regard it as a new policy," he said.

Israel, he said, is a strong ally and "there is no change whatsover in that relationship."

But it is precisely his unwillingness to acknowledge that the administration is relying more on Israel that deepens doubts about Weinberger.

With that as a backdrop, Mayor Ed Koch of New York City has taken on Weinberger in an exchange of letters published by The New York Times. In it, Koch claimed Weinberger was promoting arms sales to Saudi Arabia around Reagan's back.

The defense secretary flatly denied it.

Now, in the columns of The Sun in Baltimore, Rep. Jim Scheuer, D-N.Y., is feuding with Weinberger over the failure of U.S. authorities to use Israeli medical facilities to treat Marines wounded in the Beirut bomb tragedy.

"It is no secret," The Sun said in an editorial, "that the adminstration has been torn between Mr. Weinberger's approach and the more traditional close links with Israel advocated by Secretary of State George P. Shultz."

Scheuer is one of more than 100 House members demanding to know why critically wounded Marines were taken to the helicopter carrier Iwo Jima and others to Cyprus and far-away West Germany when Israel had offered the use of Rambam hospital in Haifa, only 30 minutes away.

The hospital, Scheuer says, has one of the world's foremost burn and trauma centers with advanced and unique equipment to locate and lift victims safely from under rubble. That would not be surprising in light of Israel's experience with terrorist bombings.

The United States took 200 body bags from Israel for the victims, but otherwise did not accept the offer to help.

Noel Yancey — Flood Of 1916 Rates As One Of The Worst

In western North Carolina they still refer to it as the 1916 Flood.

The flood, one of the worst natural disasters ever to hit North Carolina, killed an estimated 80 persons and caused incalculable destruction and damage to industrial plants, dwellings, railroads and highways, power plants and to farm crops along the Catawba, Yadkin, Broad and French Broad rivers.

On the morning of July 19, 1916, when the flood waters were beginning to subside, the Charlotte Oberver gave this summary of the situation:

"There is not a single bridge across the Catawba, ... there is not a hydroelectric power plant, not even one of the five mammoth stations of the Southern Power Company (now Duke Power Company) in operation today on that stream although they probably will be started up again within a week or 10 days: there is not a cotton mill within the valley where the flood poured that has not been more or less submerged, two being totally wrecked and others being out of commission for indefinite periods; there is not a railway or trolley car crossing the path of the Catawba, nor will there be one for a week or longer; there is not a strand of telephone or telegraph wires across the Catawba Valley, and the only means of communication between the sections divided by the stream has been via Lynchburg and Richmond or Colunbia and Atalanta ...

"Of damage to dwellings, crops, roads and every other form of vested interest situated in the flooded area, there can be no estimate placed. It will mount into the nillions."

All this death and destruction resulted from two hurricanes which struck the Southeastern United States a one-two punch on July 5-6 and July 14-16. The first storm did little damage in North Carolina but it left the soil saturated and the streams swollen so that vitually every drop from the second storm ran off and contributed to the surging flood. Precipitation amounting to 10 inches or more in 24 hours fell at several points, and at Altapass in Mitchell County the U.S. Weather Service reported that 22.22 inches were recorded in the 24 hours ending at 2 p.m. on July 16. A man at Linville Falls wrote that rain fell on 22 days that month and totaled 41.76 inches.

The soil became so saturated that on many mountain slopes there were huge landslides as great masses of earth carrying rocks and trees slid into the valleys. Normally placid mountain streams were transformed into torrents that swept away the bottom land on their banks, literally wiping out or seriously curtailing the livelihood of many farmers.

At Asheville, water from the French Broad River rose so rapidly that automobiles and street cars were abandoned in the streets near the Southern Railway passenger station.

The biggest single loss of life came when the Southern Railway massed all available manpower in an effort to save the bridge that carried its mainline over the Catawba near Charlotte. The men were put to work pushing away debris that lodged against the bridge and piers so it could float on down the stream. However, the water continued to rise and the amount of debris continued to build up until the bridge was swept away.

Nineteen men were on the span when it collapsed. Of these, 10 were drowned. Others held onto trees for safety.

"I never thought that I would hear a man calling upon me in the name of God for help and not give it, if it was in my power," said W.S. Orr, who headed the rescue effort. "Tonight it would be suicide, but you can't expect that poor fellow to realize it, with the trees next to it snapped at its base and his own shaking as though it had a chill."

The Southern Railway not only suffered the most lives lost by the 1916 flood, it also sustained the greatest property damage. In addition to the bridge at Charlotte, three other main line bridges across the Catawba were swept away.

Its line from near Statesville to Asheville was a shambles with bridges and fills washed away and obliterated so that for the distance of 108 miles there was scarcely any undamaged track. Between Old Fort and Asheville, which had taken the full brunt of floods and landslide, there was not a half-mile of continuous track that was usable.

Other sections of the Southern system were hit almost as bad. The Yadkin River destroyed the North Wilkesboro line for 61 miles, and the French Broad River wreaked havoc on the Asheville-Morristown, Tenn., line. In all, the two storms knocked 826 miles of the Southern system out of service.

The destruction wrought by the storms came so suddenly that many trains, both freight and passenger, were marooned while on their runs. One of these trains, eastbound No. 12, was marooned at Marion. Its 225 passengers were put up in hotels and private homes and remained there for several days until service could be restored sufficiently to get them on their way again.

Son's Captivity Changed Perception of Palestinians

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Shemaryahu and Zipora Hazan, like most average Israelis, used to think of Palestinian guerrillas as murdering terrorists and little more. But their son's 15 months in Palestinian captivity changed their minds.

"We know now that they are human beings, just like any other human beings," says Mrs. Hazan.

"Since this thing happened, I'm more aware that there is a Palestinian problem and it cannot be swept under the carpet," says her husband.

For the Hazans, who grew up in awe of Menachem Begin and were adherents of his nationalist doctrines, such talk represents a profound change of consciousness.

Their remarks, in an interview Friday night on Israel Television, provoked strong reactions. They were swamped with phone calls, "mostly from people I don't know who said they identified with us," said Shemaryahu Hazan.

Their son Raphael (Rafi), 21, was captured with seven other Israeli soldiers by Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon in September 1982. Rafi and five of the soldiers came home Thursday in exchange for some 4,600 Palestinian captives.

"Because of their (the Israelis') captivity, the whole image we had, and which Rafi had, changed completely. We were always being told that they (the Palestinians) are murderers, terrorists. That's what our leadership was always calling them. But it simply isn't true. Not as far as these six boys were concerned, at any rate," said Mrs. Hazan.

Years of terrorism, hijackings and massacres of civlian hostages have taught most Israelis to revile the PLO, and the prisoner exchange is unlikely to have any lasting impact on that perception.

Shmuel Tamir, who headed the Israeli team negotiating the swap, says the Palestinians were "a tough, cruel adversary." He charged that they used "extortionist" tactics and never showed much concern for the Arab prisoners held by Israel in south Lebanon, who lived in harsh conditions and made up the bulk of the prisoners eventually freed by israel.

Tamir said in an Israel Radio interview that the PLO negotiators "represented a different culture, a different world of values, they were dressed up in supposedly modern dress, which has misled many nations to believe that they are different from the terrifying standards to which they adhere in practice."

The Hazans' first step toward their change of mind was a meeting with Aharon Ahiaz, an Israeli pilot who was captured by the Palestine Liberation Organization in 1982 and released after three months.

"Ahiaz painted a very rosy picture of them (the guerrillas). It was hard for us to digest it," said Mrs. Hazan. "Here everybody shouts, 'Murderers! Terrorists!' And they were holding our boys! Ahiaz really set our hearts a bit at ease. We know now that they're human beings just like any other human beings."

Raphael's letters, saying he and his comrades were being well treated, bore out Ahiaz' words, she said.

The Hazans bought a video recorder so that they could watch over and over the interviews conducted by foreign TV networks with the prisoners. In these interviews the Israelis appeared healthy and in good spirits.

Mrs. Hazan, a native-born Israeli, says she grew up in a proudly nationalist home where "Begin was God for us." In 1981 she voted for Begin in the general election.

To Begin, the PLO was the reincarnation of the Nazis, and Yasser Arafat the successor of Adolf Hitler. Thus the Hazans started out convinced that their son would be beaten and tortured and never come home.

But when the six returned, they all said they had been treated very well, and were never beaten.

Hazan, a 49-year-old carpenter who immigrated here from Turkey in 1942, said that for years he tended to accept the official line laid down by the late Golda Meir which held that "there is no such thing as a Palestinian people."

Today, he says, he believes there is a Palestinian people which must be given its rights. "I don't know how their problem can be solved, and I don't know whether it is Israel which has to solve it. But it has to be settled around the negotiating table," he said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Hazan says he knows of at least one other prisoner's family which has come around to his way of thinking.

"We used to think that if we had an enermy threatening us, we must rise up and kill him and that way we solve our problem, he said.

"Today I realize that we cannot go on living on our sword forever."

Leftist Government Settles In

OUAGADOUGOU, Upper Volta (AP) — Capt. Thomas Sankara, the paratroop commander who seized power in a coup last August, has set a populist, radical course for his revolutionary government but so far he has been moderate in applying his policies.

Sankara, 34, makes no secret about his affinity with like-minded governments in Libya and Ghana. But he takes pains to avoid any direct criticism of the United States, France and other Western countries that contribute millions of dollars in aid to his impoverished nation.

Sankara took power Aug. 4 in Upper Volta's third military coup since November, 1980. Supported by a contingent of about 300 commandos, he overthrew President Jean-Baptiste Ouedraogo, a comparative moderate who had seized power himself in November, 1982, from Col. Saye Zerbo.

About 20 people were killed and Ouedraogo, who had dismissed Sankara as prime minister a few months earlier, was placed under house arrest. Zerbo, former President Maurice Yameogo and two former prime ministers also have recently been arrested.

Sankara, who once taught French to U.S. Peace Corps volunteers here, proclaimed his takeover "a victory over international imperialism and its allies" and announced the start of a "popular and democratic revolution."

"The revolution in Upper Volta," he said in an interview, "is not the revolution which took place in Libya or Ghana or Cuba or Iran. It's different from all other revolutions. There is no model."

Its goal, he has said, is "the construction of a new, free, independent and prosperous Upper Voltan society — a society free of social injustices and free from the century-long exploitation of the people by international imperialism."

In trying to fulfill that vision, Sankara faces daunting domestic obstacles linked with Upper Volta's crushing poverty.

More than 90 percent of the 7.1 million people who live in the Colorado-sized country are illiterate. The same number are engaged in subsistence agriculture, many of them farming land that is threatened by the ever-encroaching Sahara Desert.

With an annual per-capita income of $240, the country is heavily dependent on Western aid — $240 million this year, half of it from France, the former colonial power here.

Sankara's government, said a Western diplomat in this sweltering, dust-choked capital, "is on the horns of a dilemma. They really want a revolution, they really want to help the little guy, but they have almost no resources to do it.

"They just don't accept that the place is terribly poor. So they find it much easier to say that someone's been ripping them off all these years."

Sankara, who invariably makes his public appearances in dark green camouflage fatigues and a red beret, insists that his revolution "has produced a magic effect."

"That's to say the Voltan people have spontaneously, massively, with enthusiasm and sincerity, joined the revolution," he said in the interview.

As evidence, Sankara referred to the Committees for the Defense of the Revolution, citizens' groups set up throughout the country to "transfer power from neocolonial and reactionary forces to the masses."

The self-governing committees, established after the August coup roughly along the lines of those in Cuba, Nicaragua and Ghana, are designed to increase popular political awareness and provide civilians with paramilitary training. But their most conspicuous activity to date has been in modest, self-help projects.

On weekends in the cities and villages, residents turn out by the dozens to devote a few hours to collective manual labor. Wielding axes, shovels and other implements, they work at patching deteriorated roadways, repairing long neglected water lines and digging wells. Although the labor, ostensibly, is freely given, citizens who decline to participate risk being branded "reactionaries" or "counter-revolutionaries."

The committees, said Sankara's press attache, Sylvestre Some, represent "the sense of the revolution — changing the mentality of the Upper Voltan people, so that they no longer wait for assistance from the outside. This way they realize the fruits of their own labor."

Improvement of womens' rights is another priority to which Sankara attaches great importance, very conscious that "I saw my mother suffer."

Although the grass-roots endeavors are generally praised, quiet criticism about Sankara's revolution is not uncommon.

A countercoup can never be ruled out; some residents, in fact, expect one.

In a crackdown against corruption and inefficiency, Sankara has dismissed more than 300 civil servants and retired about 60 army officers. They were people, he said, who "cannot follow the rhythm of the revolution."

Sankara himself has never publicly espoused communism, however, and will not identify the "imperialist" countries he claims intend to destablize his regime.

"We don't say who these countries are because the list is long," he told the interviewer. "In addition, we don't want our people to align themselves against the people of any other country."

Heavy Damage In Friday Wrecks

An estimated $8,800 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Friday.

Heavest damage, officers said, resulted from a 4:37 a.m. collision on Fifth Street, 54 feet West of the Roosevelt Avenue intersection.

A car driven by George Washington Myers Jr. of 121 Fletcher Place, collided with parked cars owned by John D. McLowhorn of 115 South Washington St., and Christine Jones Miller of 401 Line Ave., causing $3,500 damage to the Myers car, $2,000 damage to the McLowhorn car, and $1,800 damage to the Miller vehicle.

Myers was charged with careless and reckless driving and hit and run driving.

Steven Troy Bullock of Simpson was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 2:45 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 150 feet East of the Kirkland Drive intersection.

Police said the Bullock car collided with an auto driven by Vance Parker Overton of 104 Oxford Road, causing $1,200 damage to the Bullock car and $300 damage to the Overton car.

Three Charged In Liquor Sales

Greenville narcotics and vice squad officers Friday arrested three people in connection with the illegal sale of tax-paid liquor.

Officers said Lester Jenkins, 65, of 505 West 12th St. was charged with selling tax-paid whiskey following an incident at 1009 Broad St. about 5:55 p.m.

Roy Douglas Savage, 60, of 1009A Broad St. was charged with aiding abetting in the sale of tax-paid liquor in connection with the same incident.

Police arrested Mabel Howard, 50, of 1901B Norcott Circle about 7 p.m. on charges of operating a business without a permit and selling tax paid liquor following an incident at her home.

Telethon Auditions To Be Held

Local talent auditions for the Cerebral Palsy "Weekend With the Stars" telethon will be held on the nights of Dec. 6 and 7 at the Greenville Moose Lodge. All types of acts and groups are welcome to try out.

The telethon, starring John Ritter as national host, will be produced by WITN-TV of Washington at the Moose Lodge here the weekend of Jan. 14-15.

To schedule an audition, contact the telethon coordinator at P.O. Box 3271, Greenville, call 756-5390 in Greenville, or contact Mary Ludwig at WITN-TV.

Commission Meeting Called

A special call meeting of the Environmental Advisory Commission will be held Monday at 5 p.m. in the third floor council chambers at city hall to discuss the revised noise ordinance.

Zipper Society To Meet

The Zipper Society of Pitt County will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Willis Building, corner of Reade and First streets in Greenville.

Mrs. Loretta Kiffner, regional director of Mended Hearts, Inc. of Richmond, Va., will be the speaker. In addition, officers for 1984 will be elected.

The meeting is open to all heart surgery patients and their spouses.

Holiday Babysitting Service

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and the East Branch of Sheppard Memorial Library are jointly sponsoring "Santa's Morning Out," a free holiday babysitting service.

The service, to be provided Saturday, Dec. 3 from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. is open to take care of children ages 3 to 9, and will be held at the East Branch Library/Recreation and Parks Administrative Building at 2000 Cedar Lane.

Children will be entertained with Christmas stories, games, crafts, and puppet shows while parents do their shopping. Drinks will be provided for the children, and parents, if they wish, may bring along a bag lunch.

A limited number of children will be accepted, so early reservation is encouraged by calling 752-4177 or 752-4137, extension 200.

Man Charged In Break-in

Cadet Pierre Jean of Florida was arrested about noon Friday when a break-in was reported at a storage building used by Rose's Store at Pitt Plaza.

Officers said Jean apparently broke the lock off the storage building door and entered seeking shelter.

Pregnancy Class Begins

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department is sponsoring a new session of pregnancy exercise beginning Monday. Classes will meet Mondays and Thursdays from 6 to 6:45 p.m. at Jayce Park Auditorium, 2000 Cedar Lane, for ten lessons (five weeks). The fee is $15. The class will be conducted by Cathy Greer and is open to any expectant mother. To pre-register, call 752-4137, extension 200.

Larceny From Vehicles

Greenville police are investigating three larceny from vehicle reports received Friday.

Officer B.M. Hamill said Rebecca Naomi Dickins of Route 2, Grimesland, reported at 8:40 p.m. that her car parked at Sunshine Vidio on Arlington Boulevard had been entered and $35 in cash and other items were taken.

Hamill said Linda Tarkington of Route 2, Winterville, reported at 9:10 p.m. that her car parked at Pitt Plaza had been entered Wednesday and a leather coat, valued at $175, was stolen.

Officer J.M. Simonowich said Dawn Morrill of 1016B Brownlea Drive reported at 7:37 p.m. that her purse, containing $35 in cash, was taken from her car parked at Sweet Carolines on Greenville Boulevard.

Youth Needlework Class

A new class in youth needlework is being offered by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department. The class will be held from 3:30 to 5 p.m. each Wednesday at the Jaycee Park Administrative Building for youths 8 and older. Fee for the ten weeks of instruction is $5. The class begins Wednesday, Nov. 30. To pre-register, call 752-4137, extension 200.

Downtown Break-ins

Police are continuing their investigations of two break-ins in downtown Greenville Friday.

Officer C.M. Credle said the front door of Riggan's Shoe Shop at 113 West Fourth St. was broken open and a dozen belts and six key rings, valued at $154.50, were reported taken.

That break-in was reported at 3:16 a.m.

Officer J.E. Nichols said a window at the Snooty Fox on East Fifth Street was found broken at 7:31 a.m.

He said a skirt and blouse, valued at $84, were reported missing.

Probe May Result In Water Controls

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State officials say an upcoming probe of water quality in North Carolina fish nursery areas could lead to stricter controls on agricultural and industrial runoff.

The state Division of Environmental Management will conduct the inventory of 80,000 acres near the mouths of coastal streams and creeks where young fish, crustaceans and other species develop. The Governor's Coastal Water Management Task Force recommended it last year.

The task force brought together agricultural, fishing and forestry representatives to formulate a balanced approach to coastal development.

The inventory arose out of the task force's concern for the lack of controls over drainage for coastal farming and forestry.

"We have the authority to handle regulations dealing with fish matters within nursery areas (such as) use of fishing gear," said Edward G. McCoy, assistant director of the Division of Marine Fisheries in Morehead City. "What we don't have any control of is what occurs upstream."

More information is needed on freshwater runoff, runoff patterns and types of pollution in runoff, McCoy said.

After heavy rains early this year, abnormally high counts of fecal coliform bacteria in coastal waters closed clam and oyster beds to fishermen from Feb. 17 through March and, in some areas, until April or May. The rain washed the bacteria downstream from farming, septic tanks and waste treatment plants.

Now, the environmental division is interested in stepping up runoff controls, but some future controls may be voluntary, state officials said.

"I don't want to see fishermen and the farmers and the state in an adversarial position," said James D. Sheppard Jr., spokesman for the environmental division. "We're looking at a voluntary effort to protect that (nursery) resource.

'Guidelines' To Help Decide

By The Associated Press

The president of the Southern Baptist Convention has clarified a statement he made this month on Baptists' need for a "creed."

"No matter what they say, Baptists have got a creed — everybody's got a creed," the Rev. Jimmy Draper of Euless, Texas, said at a news conference in Virginia this month. He added that the denomination should have some "guidelines" to help members decide whether they are "true Southern Baptists."

But on Tuesday, Draper, who is serving his second term as president of the 13.9 million-member denomination, said in a telephone interview from Virginia that he thinks the media made it sound as if he wanted Southern Baptists to have a written creed, which the historically "noncreedal" group has never had.

"I had said the word 'creed' comes from (the Latin word) 'credo,' which means 'I believe,' and we all do believe something," he said.

But he acknowledged that when Southern Baptists hear the word, they think of a set of theological statements that are enforced as a written standard for all members of a denomination.

"I would not suggest at all that we have a creed that people would have to sign or that they would have to affirm in order to be Southern Baptists," he said. "I am suggesting that Southern Baptists affirm some basic, bedrock beliefs that I think most of us agree with."

Four basic beliefs are the "bodily resurrection of Christ," the "full humanity and divinity of Christ," the doctrine that "Jesus died for our sins" and "justification by grace through faith."

Conservative Engineers Aid Jailed Black Co-Worker

EDITOR'S NOTE — Until the mid-60s, a neon sign hanging over Main Street in Greenville, Texas, proclaimed the conservative, Bible-belt town the home of "The Blackest Land, The Whitest People." That philosophy dies hard, according to a group of whites who are working together to try to free from prison a former co-worker they say was arrested only because he was well-educated, well-paid and black.

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Wendell Crom, a 56-year-old bow-tied engineer for a defense contractor, says the only other time he got involved in issues was to fight a stoplight planned for his street.

Charles Hartford, 53, has trouble sleeping at night because he believes a black man has been wronged.

Debra Cotten, 29, who spends her off-hours attending Bible study and playing softball, ignored her parents' advice to steer clear of a black man's troubles. She said she had to get involved because she believed she knew the truth.

And then there's Lenell Geter.

Geter, a 26-year-old black engineer, worked at E-Systems Inc. with Crom, Hartford and Ms. Cotten before he was arrested on armed robbery charges, convicted and sent to prison for life on Oct. 18, 1982.

Five witnesses, all white, had identified Geter as the man who had robbed a fried chicken restaurant at 3:20 p.m. on Aug. 23, 1982. Nine of his white co-workers at E-Systems Inc. said he was at work all day, but he was convicted by an all-white jury.

"Most of us couldn't believe that could happen — couldn't believe that the man could possibly be convicted when he had us for an alibi," Crom said.

Today, Geter sits in a prison in Tennessee Colony, Texas, and prays that his former co-workers will be able to spring him. A request for a new trial was denied last year, but the FBI is investigating whether his civil rights were violated.

"Some things reek so bad that you just have to do something about it," said Crom, one of about 15 people who have raised $9,000, hired detectives, financed a lie-etector test and sent books to Geter's prison cell.

"We know the man, we know where he was when they say he robbed the restaurant and we know he didn't do it. Why wouldn't we get involved?" Crom asked.

Geter was the only black in his work group and "stood out like a raisin in a bowl of rice," said E-Systems design director Ed Garrett. "We knew he was there at the time they said the robbery happened."

Geter came to E-Systems with five friends from South Carolina State University in early 1982. Garrett recalled that Geter and the others "demonstrated good work habits, good attendance. ... We thought we had some good people that could help us as engineers."

But not long afterwards a local police officer was distributing photographs of the six newcomers to suburban Dallas police departments, labeling them as robbery suspects from South Carolina. Geter's roommate, Anthony Williams, was tagged with a $31 7-Eleven robbery in nearby Dallas County on Aug. 22, 1982, but was acquitted earlier this month.

Geter's troubles began because he frequented a city park after work. A 68-year-old woman who lived across from the park reported him to police as a suspicious character.

Police Lt. James Fortenberry followed up the complaint by photographing the new E-Systems workers and checking with South Carolina authorities through their car license tags. Fortenberry says he was told Geter and Williams were robbery suspects in their home state. He distributed pictures of them and the four other men among Dallas-area police departments.

Subsequently, five clerks at a fried chicken restaurant in the Dallas suburb of Balch Springs, 50 miles from Greenville, identified Geter as the robber. Geter's court-appointed attorney, Edwin Sigel, argued that the identifications should have been thrown out: The restaurant workers had initially described the robber as about 5-foot-6, and Geter is 6 feet tall.

Making Dreams Come True

WEBSTER, Mass. (AP) — In a cramped office in this Massachuchetts mill town, some unlikely dream makers are granting last wishes to children who may never grow up.

Since its creation in May, A Wish Come True Inc. has financed vacations and gifts for eight terminally or chronically ill youngsters.

"It's a privilege to work with these children because they've taught us so much," said president and founder Mary Girardin. "It's kind of like you have your own little angels here on Earth, and if you reach out and touch them, you've touched a tiny piece of God."

So far, the organization has sent four children to Disney World in Florida and one to New Hampshire's White Mountains. Seven-year-old Billy Kopsaftis of Grafton, who suffers from a rare bone disease known as Hurler's syndrome, was the guest of President Reagan in Washington for a day last month.

When Jamie Melanson, a 3-year-old afflicted with malignant brain tumors, asked for a merry-go-round for her back yard in Dayville, Conn., Mrs. Girardin phoned a company in Missouri. A week later, the $3,800 carousel arrived on a truck.

Volunteers are now trying to arrange free tickets for Jackie Manzi, a 17-year-old leukemia victim from Webster, to see popular singer Neil Diamond.

Non-profit and run by volunteers, the organization has scraped together dollars and change from bake sales, flea markets, raffles and public pleas.

"Call us beggars. That's us," said Helen Defilippo, who is in charge of fundraising. "We aren't afraid to ask."

It's a shoestring operation that runs on hand-me-down furniture and borrowed time. Keeping administrative expenses below 5 percent is a point of pride.

The office, once Mrs. Girardin's living room, is crammed with desks supplied by a Worcester store. Clippings and pictures of children who got their wishes are pinned to the walls. In a corner, fish swim in a murky aquarium on loan from co-chairmen Junior and Nancy Robidoux, who live upstairs.

Volunteers range from motorcycle club members to children who stand on street corners drumming up donations from passing motorists. Parties, dances, awards and "A Wish Come True" football and softball teams help sustain their interest.

The real reward, says Mrs. Girardin, is doing something for children and families caught in desperate crises.

"When people have children this sick, the medical bills are enormous and trips are out of the question," said Mrs. Girardin. "Our purpose is to take the family away from the tensions and problems this kind of illness causes and let them enjoy a vacation together."

A mother of nine, Mrs. Girardin's interest in terminally ill children began when a friend took her to a fundraising dinner for a similar group in Tiverton, R.I. She adapted the concept to help more children at once.

"Our waiting list is an arm long," she said.

Most of those who have been touched by A Wish Come True live within 60 miles of Webster, a town of 14,000 near the Connecticut border.

A second chapter was organized recently in Danielson, Conn., and groups in Mississippi, Michigan, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Florida have expressed interest in affiliating with the group, she said.

Shoplifting Up

CHICAGO (AP) — Shoplifting nationwide has increased 10 percent over last year, according to a study by the Arthur Young consulting firm, and the president of a retailers' group says the recession is one reason for the increase.

"This year's economic upturn could have a positive effect in somewhat lowering the pilferage rate," said Richard Hersh, president of the National Mass Retailing Institute.

The shoplifting study, conducted for the retailers' institute, said retailers are spending 8 percent more to prevent shoplifting than they were last year.

"The rise in shoplifting partly may be attributed to the last year's recession," Hersh said.

The study also said that about 50 percent of all pilfering is done by employees at the checkout or sales area.

It also said losses from shoplifting are equal to 2.2 percent of the dollar value of all retail sales, while the amount spent on prevention techniques, including guards, lie detectors, electronic detectors, mirrors and television cameras, is equal to 0.5 percent of retail sales.

The study also said the average shoplifter is an adult between 18 and 35, and that shoplifters are just as likely to be men as women. Minors were the second largest shoplifting group.

In addition, 62 percent of the male shoplifters are employed, compared with 51 percent of female shoplifters.

By departments, it was found that most shoplifting takes place in clothing, health and beauty aids and jewelry areas.

The study said use of mirrors and television cameras are among the least effective means of controlling the shoplifting. Lie detector tests did not quash employee theft considerably, according to the study. The best prevention methods are security guards and electronic tags, it said.

School Takes Case To Court

GROVE CITY, Pa. (AP) — Grove City College — avowedly Christian, adamantly conservative and afraid of losing its old-fashioned outlook — wants the U.S. Supreme Court to tell the federal government to mind its own business.

The U.S. Department of Education insists that Grove City College sign a piece of paper pledging that it does not discriminate on the basis of sex.

The form is required of any school receiving federal aid, but the college maintains that it already treats its male and female students equally and that signing the paper would be signing away its independence.

College President Charles S. MacKenzie sees the case, to be argued before the Supreme Court Nov. 29, as a lesson in what Grove City College tries to teach its students.

"We hope students perceive that Grove City is trying to live by its principles," he said. "That's what life is all about."

Since 1977, the college has been fighting against signing the affidavit, which is required under Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. Title IX states that federally funded education programs cannot discriminate on the basis of sex.

Grove City College maintains that it is not federally funded because it has never accepted a penny of direct aid. The Department of Education, however, says that the $250,000 to $500,000 in grants and loans the federal government provides to Grove City students each year is federal aid to the college.

What worries college officials is that if the government wins the case, it would have the power to make Grove City College obey other regulations.

"If we lost or gave jurisdiction to the government, it would, over the long term, change the character of this institution," said MacKenzie, a Presbyterian minister. "If we lose, there may be no truly independent colleges left in the country."

For 107 years, the college has provided men and women with a liberal arts education. Affiliated with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), its enrollment has grown from 13 to 2,200 students.

The serene 150-acre campus, 70 miles north of Pittsburgh in Mercer County, is tidy and quiet. Its 27 brick or stone buildings are spread across gently sloping grassland bisected by Wolf Creek.

"Ours is a loving community. You will love and be loved back," MacKenzie tells students in a brochure.

"You meet the kind of girls you marry here," says senior Marcie Dahl. "Where will I meet people like this when I'm gone?"

Robert Smith, who graduated in 1959, found the atmosphere so inviting he returned a decade later to work in the public relations office.

"The small town also has a Christian orientation, and we thought it would be a good place to raise kids," said Smith, whose son attends Grove City and whose 17-year-old daughter will enroll next September. Almost 25 percent of the Grove City students are related to an alumnus.

"It's important for me to be a Christian every day, not just on Sundays," said Denice Brown, who chose Grove City College after a visit convinced her of the intimacy of the campus community.

The campus community, however, is also governed by strict rules of behavior.

Alcohol is prohibited, and ice cream socials are popular.

Students are allowed in dorms of the opposite sex only on weekends, and then must leave by 1:45 a.m.

Students may live off campus only if they live with their families.

Some students say they don't mind the rules; others get around them. For example, students are required to attend 16 chapel programs a semester, but some pay fellow students $1 a service to go in their place and turn in their cards.

The 1981 edition of the Comparative Guide to American Colleges says students at Grove City seem "to have more influence on curriculum than on rules governing their social life."

"Being 22, I could have a little more choice," said Tim Daigle, president of the Interfraternity Council, which has unsuccessfully pressed to relax the rules.

Despite the social restrictions, Grove City College emphasizes personal freedoms in the classrooms.

"We hire people who have a commitment to students, an orientation to Christian values and belief in the paramount importance of economic and political freedoms," said Dr. Thaddeus Penar, academic vice president.

Students learn the free market theory of economics, and say they are taught the dangers of government intervention into life and business.

"Academically, I believe in the college very much," said Matthew Frankovitch, a junior who opposes the social rules. "We're getting the most possible for the price."

The $2,880 annual tuition is far less than the more than $4,500 charged at the average private college, according to the College Scholarship Service in Princeton, N.J.

"I looked at a lot of schools, but what eventually swayed me was the excellent education for the bucks," said Bill Collier, a 21-year-old accounting major.

Grove City College is "a successful little school operating at a low cost," MacKenzie said. Despite an endowment of just $7 million, it runs on a balanced budget and has no debt. The faculty has no tenure; there are no labor unions. In each of the past six years, alumni have set records with contributions.

Lottie Moon Program Dec. 5

A special television program about the life of Missionary Lottie Moon will be broadcast Dec. 5 at 7:30 p.m. on WNCT-TV, channel 9, in conjunction with the Baptists' Week of Prayer for Foreign Mission and the Lottie Moon Christmas Offering.

Nationally, the church group hopes to collect an offering of $60 million, with $6.6 of that amount to come from North Carolina churches.

The television time was purchased by the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Union, an auxiliary to the Baptist State Convention.

Diet Pill Sweeping U.S.

No Dieting - Eat All You Want Pill Does All the Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special)—An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Contains ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these highly successful "super" grapefruit pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail order only) by sending $12 for a 14-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check, or money order to: Citrus Industries, 9903 Santa Monica Bl., Dept. F50, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not satisfied.) Visa and MasterCard OK. (Send card number, expiration date, and signature.) © Copyright 1983.

FATAL PLANE CRASH ... Six employees of KOSA-TV, a pilot and an unidentified person were killed Saturday when their Beechcraft King Air 100 flipped in a gust of wind and nosedived into the ground at Midland Regional Airport at Midland, Texas. The TV crew was returning from filming two high school football championship games. (AP Laserphoto)

Six TV Station Employees Among Eight Killed In Crash

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — A private plane dived into the ground and burst into flames Saturday as it approached an airport, killing eight people, including six television station employees who had been filming high school football playoffs.

The twin-engine Beechcraft 100 turboprop was flying from Fort Worth about 1:50 a.m. when it "fell nose first for no apparent reason, crashed and burned on impact," said Texas Department of Public Safety dispatcher Jerry Warren.

The plane crashed on the Scharbauer Ranch adjacent to a runway of the Midland-Odessa Regional Air Terminal.

All eight people aboard were killed instantly, said Peace Justice Bob Pine. Warren said four of the victims were burned beyond recognition.

The plane was returning with a KOSA-TV crew, which included the Odessa station's news and sports directors and chief engineer.

"We lost some key people, but fortunately we have enough staff left to put the news on," said KOSA-TV anchor Brent Boynton.

The plane burned for about four hours before firefighters could extinguish the blaze. A charred and twisted heap of metal was all that remained.

"From where I was standing, all I could see that that looked like a plane was one wing jutting out of the wreckage," said Bob Brundage, a sportswriter for the Midland Reporter-Telegram who was among the first on the scene.

Bill Giles, manager of Texas Western Aviation Inc., which chartered the flight for the CBS affiliate, said the television crew was sent Friday to tape highlights of playoff games won by two local teams.

The crew had flown to Wichita Falls to cover the Odessa Permian-Wichita Falls Rider match and then to Fort Worth for the Midland Lee-Trimble Tech game, Giles said.

The victims were identified as news director Gary Hopper, 32, of Midland; sports director Jeff Shull, 25, of Odessa; chief engineer Bobby Stephens, 47, of Odessa; assistant chief engineer Edward Monette, 26, of Odessa; production assistants Bruce Dyer, 26, of Midland and Brent Roach, 24, of Odessa; pilot Keith Elkin, 29, of Midland; and Jay Alvin Price, 27, of Midland, a helper for the station at football games and Hopper's brother-in-law.

A autopsy was ordered on the pilot and toxicology tests would be performed on all the bodies.

The airport was closed following the crash, but reopened at 6:42 a.m. after the area was secured, said Jay Stucki, airport operations supervisor. He said planes were routed away from the wreckage.

Federal Aviation Administration investigators arrived from Lubbock later in the morning and sealed off the crash site.

FAA spokesman Victor Frier Jr. said the investigators would begin "examining the crash site to see what was hit. Then we'll starting tearing the airplane apart."

Because the aircraft was charred, it probably would take longer than the usual 48 hours to determine the crash's cause, he said.

Old One Dying, New One In Doubt

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, which has pricked the public conscience for 26 years, will go out of existence on Tuesday. There may be a successor, but it will not be the same.

In its heyday the commission was one of the most controversial, and ultimately influential, forces on the national scene. It confronted state and local authorities in the South and focused national attention on the emerging struggle of blacks for equal rights as Americans.

Often it forced reluctant politicians to act despite resistance and political risks. Most of its major recommendations eventually became law, from voting rights to equal rights in schools, public accommodations and the work place.

More recently the commission had declined in public visibility as many of the remaining issues were more economic and less confrontational.

Now, President Reagan's efforts to replace some members of the commission have revived some of the old fire. But the reorganized commission expected to emerge from the current feud will be bigger, possibly more politicized and probably less likely to focus as sharply on specific problems and solutions.

Rather than accede to Reagan's claim of control over the commission, Congress declined to enact the routine reauthorization that comes up periodically and was due in September.

Just before it adjourned for the year, Congress moved to break the impasse by creating a new commission under joint congressional-presidential control and with members protected against political firings. That bill is still on Reagan's desk.

Meanwhile, the clock is ticking for the old commission, which technically expired in September. A 60-day winding down period runs out on Tuesday and the old commission goes completely out of existence then, no matter what happens.

Friends of the commission, on the one hand, believe the principle of a federal civil rights watchdog will have been saved if Reagan signs the bill. But the informal assumptions that have made the commission an independent spirit free from political interference have been replaced by legal provisions that could invite uncomfortable oversight from Congress and the White House.

Reagan is in a dilemma. If he fails to sign the bill, he could make a martyr of the commission on the eve of a presidential election year.

But the White House also sees serious legal problems in signing it as things stand. The administration agreed to the compromise that shaped the new statute, but is worried about a lawsuit filed to block Reagan's firing of three members of the outgoing commission. The Justice Department is appealing a ruling in U.S. District Court that the firings were illegal because Congress intended the agency to be independent.

If Reagan fails to challenge a ruling that he could not fire members of the old commission, the administration fears, it might create a legal precedent against removal of others the administration considers the subordinates of a president — any president.

Simply signing the bill could moot the court case as far as this commission is concerned, but it could leave a dangerous shadow over presidential prerogative since the opinion of U.S. District Judge Norma H. Johnson would be left on the books. The administration would rather see it overturned, but there may not be time.

The White House has indicated Reagan will not sign any bills except emergency measures before returning on Sunday from his Thanksgiving holiday in California.

Since its creation, the commission has been made up of six members appointed by the president and confirmed by the Senate. It originally was given a two-year life. Few doubted it would be renewed regularly, but, after a few controversies in the early years, it always was.

The idea for a federal agency to watch over the state of civil rights in America dates at least to a 1947 committee appointed by President Truman. That group suggested two federal civil rights agencies, one in the executive branch and a joint committee of Congress.

It took another decade to get action from Congress, but on Sept. 9, 1957, President Eisenhower signed the first civil rights act since the Reconstruction measures that followed the Civil War. Passed after a record-setting filibuster, it included provisions for the Civil Rights Commission, an advisory body that had subpoena powers for investigations but no enforcement authority.

Sponsors of the bill dropped the idea of a joint congressional committee. But the commission they created was not entirely a child of the executive branch; it was required to file its reports with both the president and Congress. The law was silent on removal of the members.

The law permitted no more than three members from either political party. Most of the time it has been evenly divided, although there have been occasional independents. But more important, most of the appointees have been non-political — scholars, college presidents, civic leaders, retired office holders and others attuned to issues but not directly connected with government or party activities.

The status of the commissioners had never been clear. When Eisenhower left office, members offered pro-forma resignations just as cabinet officers did, and the members offered similar resignations when President Johnson succeeded Kennedy in 1963. But no one was replaced and the custom died.

Palestinian Refugees Survive

— Three-year-old Rifat came out of a bomb shelter after 22 days of shelling, looked at his bombed-out house in the Palestinian refugee camp of Baddawi, and asked, "Mommy, who brought down our house?"

His mother, Jomaa Jaber, 25, had no reply.

"What could I tell him, that our Palestinian brothers had destroyed our home?" she said.

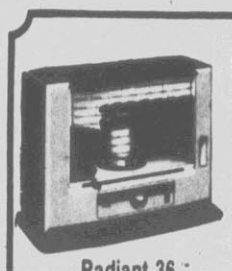

The mother and child were among those who remained and survived in Baddawi despite three weeks of fighting between PLO rebels and loyalists of Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization. The U.N. Relief and Works Agency estimated 2,000 stayed.

The agency estimated on Saturday that as of last Thursday, 3,000 refugees who fled during the fighting had returned.

The camp, which originally had more than 8,000 U.N.-registered refugees, is without electicity. Water is supplied two hours a day. The U.N. agency has provided emergency rations, including flour and rice, but many of the refugees are living mostly on canned foods.

Both the rebel leaders and Arafat's lieutenants say they have agreed to leave Tripoli and its surroundings under a cease-fire worked out by Syria and Saudi Arabia. The rebels have demanded in particular that Arafat himself leave Tripoli, where he fled after being driven out of Baddawi.

The refugees, walking or sitting along the dirty, garbage-filled alleys of the camp, generally seem unconcerned whether Arafat goes or stays.

N.C. Boy Dies

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Joshua Brooks died Saturday when his body rejected the transplanted liver he received two weeks earlier, despite a volunteer effort that brought national attention and raised more than $100,000.

Joshua, the son of Rick and June Brooks of Laurinburg, N.C., died about 3:30 a.m. at the University of Minnesota Hospitals, said family spokesman Patty Bland. He would have been 10 months old on Thursday.

The cause of death was multiple organ failure, said hospital spokesman Dr. Jane Schwartzenberg.

Ms. Bland said Brooks and his wife were with their son just before he died.

"They were by themselves, without any family, so it was hard for them," she said. "But they got to hold Josh before he died. The doctors realized death was coming, so they took him out of bed and let them hold him."

Funeral arrangements were incomplete early Saturday afternoon. Relatives flew to Minneapolis to comfort the Brookses, who were "holding up strong," said Ms. Bland. The parents planned to return to Laurinburg late Saturday, she said.

Doctors reported that heavy internal bleeding contributed to the death, said Ms. Bland. She said a new liver for Josh had been discussed as a possibility, but that death came too soon.

The boy received a new liver, donated by the family of an anonymous brain-dead child, at the Minnesota hospital Nov. 12.

He had been suffering from biliary atresia, which causes the liver not to eliminate bile. Shortly before the transplant, doctors warned he couldn't live more than a month without a new liver.

Joshua had been listed in critical but stable condition for most of the period after the operation.

Hospitality House Today

WASHINGTON, N. C. — Kay Currie's Hospitality House today returns to its customary Sunday time slot after several weeks of Saturday airings.

The show airs from noon to 12:30 p.m. over WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington. The first guest on the show is chef Matthew Weaver of the Henderson House in New Bern, who prepares a Christmas dessert, "Bosch Noel."

Other portions of the show will feature an ultra-suede and silk fashion show sponsored by Blount Harvey, Greenville. Kay and the store's manager, George Sutphen, narrate the show. Kay also takes a look at the 1983 Bald is Beautiful convention in Morehead City with guests John Capps, president, and Kell Person.

Religious Banners Fly Over Battles

Marx called it "the opium of the people." But religion today is more stimulant than sedative in much of the strife troubling the world.

Moslem vs. Christian, Catholic against Protestant, Hindu vs. Buddhist — the cross and crescent fly once again among the emblems of battle. Sectarian conflict bloodies Belfast's alleyways, Beirut's streets, Sri Lanka's village lanes.

Many of these confrontations, such as those in Lebanon and Northern Ireland, may be better described as ideological, ethnic or class struggles, not religious. But religion helps shape and nurture them, long ago by creating an "us-against-them" social system, today by feeding the fears and prejudices against non-believers.

Moorhead Kennedy, executive director of New York's Council for International Understanding, says religion is an underlying — and underestimated — element behind much of the world's violence.

"We Americans just don't understand religion as a force in international affairs," he says.

Kennedy, a retired U.S. Foreign Service officer who is a longtime student of Islam, has first-hand knowledge of religion's political power. He was one of those held hostage for 444 days by Islamic militants at the Tehran embassy.

Even when religion is not on the front line, it can affect the conflict:

Because they believe in reincarnation, Lebanon's tough Druse militiamen are fearless in the face of death; Iran's Shiite Moslems embrace the idea of dying in battle, a martyrdom that guarantees entrance to heaven; India's Sikh terrorists are inheritors of a religion that glorifies the martial spirit, much as the Shinto creed inspired pre-World War II militarism in Japan.

The swift pace of modernization and Westernization in the late 20th century is stirring the soul of religious militancy, Kennedy said.

"In the Third World, one result of the penetration by the West is the likelihood of a religious reaction, because people won't take too much change," he said in an interview.

Edward Said, a Palestinian-born Columbia University professor and leading American interpreter of Mideast culture, finds such an anti-West reaction behind Lebanon's sectarian agonies.

"The Maronites in Lebanon see themselves as the representatives of Christianity, Europe, the West — as opposed to the others, who are Arab, Islamic," he said.

At a recent memorial service for U.S. Marines killed by a suicide bomber in Beirut, the U.S. Navy commander, Adm. James D. Watkins, emotionally deplored the "unenlightened and anti-Christ practices" of the killers. Shiite Moslems had claimed responsibility.

Here is a capsule look at religion and conflict around the globe:

LEBANON

For centuries a mountain refuge for persecuted sects, Lebanon today is an ecumenical slaughterhouse.

Despite an overlay of superpower rivalry, the basic struggle still echoes the Crusader era — a clash between dominant "Western" Christians and poorer "Eastern" Moslems.

At least 17 recognized religious communities crowd this tiny land of 3.5 million people. They include about 1 million Shiite Moslems, almost as many Sunni Moslems, 200,000 members of the Islamic-descended Druse sect, and 1.4 million Christians, mostly members of the Maronite sect.

The legacy is bloody and old. A century ago, tradition says, 20,000 Christians were massacred by Druses in the Chouf Mountains. More recently — in the period from the 1975-76 civil war to the aftermath of the 1982 Israeli invasion — probably 70,000 Lebanese have been killed.

Druse and Moslem groups, regarding themselves as a downtrodden majority, formed a largely leftist camp and allied themselves with socialist, Moslem and Soviet-supported Syria. The right-wing Christians turned to the United States. American Marines landed in Beirut in two crises, in 1958 and 1982, to help prop up Christian-led governments.

IRAN-IRAQ

"This is not a conventional war," Iranian ground forces commander Col. Sayyed Shirazi has said. "It is a war of faith."

Iran's border conflict with Iraq is the world's bloodiest war — unconfirmed U.S. reports say at least 175,000 people have been killed over three years — and is probably the most "religious."

It mirrors the historic schism between the austere Shiite sect of Iran's Persians and the more pragmatic Sunni sect of most Arabs.

At the warfront, Iranian signs point "To Karbala," nearby site of a great Sunni-Shiite battle of 1,300 years ago. The Iranian war cry is "Allahu Akhbar!" — "God is Great!" And Iran's supreme leader, Shiite clergyman Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, has condemned Iraq's Sunni leaders as atheists.

AFGHANISTAN

When rebel tribesmen banded together in 1979, they called themselves "Teiman Atahad-Islami" — "Those who have sworn to fight for Islam."

To the tribesmen, their Moslem fundamentalist struggle against Afghanistan's Marxist government and Soviet troops is a "jihad," a holy war, against godless communism and Western-style modernization. Traditional religious elders lead two major rebel groups.

ARABS-ISRAELIS

Five major wars, tens of thousands of dead, international tensions stretching over decades — all have grown from the clash of two peoples, Arab and Jew, over a strip of land each regards as its birthright.

In some respects, the conflict is ethnic, economic and ideological, but the religious element is ever-present.

Those who govern Israel cite Biblical "title" when they lay Jewish claim to the Arab-populated West Bank of the Jordan River. And generations of Arab leaders have summoned their people to a "jihad" to "liberate" Moslem shrines under Israeli control.

PHILIPPINES

The traditional Moslem credo divides the world into the "Land of Islam" and the "Land of War." The farthest frontier of the "Land of War" today lies in the jungles of Mindanao and the Sulu Islands, in the southern Philippines.

Separatist guerrillas among that region's 2.5 million Moslems have been fighting to end domination and encroachment by the Philippines' Roman Catholic majority of 42 million.

NORTHERN IRELAND

The guerrilla Irish Republican Army, overwhelmingly Roman Catholic, is waging underground war to remove Northern Ireland — Protestant population 1 million, Catholics 500,000 — from the United Kingdom and to unite it with the largely Catholic Irish republic to the south.

Though usually identified as a "Catholic vs. Protestant" conflict, Northern Ireland's troubles have many dimensions — it is a nationalist struggle, a campaign against anti-Catholic economic discrimination and for civil rights, a revolution by IRA Marxists, a battle against terrorism of both sides.

The sectarian streak is unmistakable, however. Old religious fears always loom near at hand, especially among the Protestants, who worry that a "papist" takeover of all Ireland would threaten their rights to divorce and contraception, would undermine Protestant education, and might even jeopardize their community's future.

INDIA

In the eastern state of Assam, more than 3,200 people were killed this year in clashes between Hindu natives and Moslem immigrants from nearby Bangladesh.

The smallest sparks can ignite religious conflagration. Last June, a Hindu wedding party in the city of Khurja set off firecrackers, and days of Moslem rioting followed. It was the Moslem fasting month of Ramadan, when firecrackers signal the end of the daily fast, and the false alarm infuriated the Islamic faithful. Two people died and 50 others were hurt.

Another religious conflict tears at India's heartland.

Militants among Punjab state's turbaned Sikhs, a sect that rejects Hindu polytheism, demand more religious and political autonomy, including an independent, Vatican-like status for their holy city of Amritsar. More than 200 people have been killed since 1980, including Hindu priests hacked to death in their temples.

SRI LANKA

A thousand years of animosity between this island's two ethnic-religious groups — the majority Buddhist Sinhalese and the minority Hindu Tamils — boils over regularly in communal warfare. Last July, almost 400 people, mostly Tamils, were killed in rioting that erupted after Tamil separatists ambushed an army patrol.

Prosecutors Say Tissue Will Solve Mystery

BOSTON (AP) — Using fragments from deep within the human brain, prosecutors say they will prove a prominent anatomy professor hammered his young lover to death after she threatened to cut off their affair.

No body has been found. But investigators say they followed a grisly trail from a blood-smeared hammer in a roadside trash bin through strip joints of Boston's Combat Zone to the suburban home of professor William Douglas.

There, in the pocket of a jacket belonging to Douglas, prosecutors say they found a chunk of brain tissue.

"We will prove without a doubt that William Douglas killed Robin Benedict," said John Kivlan, Norfolk County assistant district attorney, at Douglas' arraignment Oct. 31 on a charge of first-degree murder.

But how to prove murder without the body of the victim?

"There is precedent," said William Delahunt, Norfolk County district attorney. "It's not unheard of."

F. Lee Bailey, a prominent trial lawyer who is not involved in the Douglas case, said there are risks in prosecuting without a body, a death certificate or witnesses. He said he knew of only a few such convictions.

"I'd be looking at the circumstantial evidence," Bailey said. "It's not conclusive, but then again it's not to be ignored. Thre arehre are plenty of hammers out there, but not many of them have brain matter on them."

Kivlan said he will present tests by police and the FBI of brain cells found in Douglas' coat and blood found on clothing and Ms. Benedict's car to prove she is dead, and that Douglas is her killer.

"This so-called white matter is from the deeper part of the brain," said Kivlan. He said he believes the victim was beaten with the 2½-pound hammer found in the trash bin and that she could not have survived.

Douglas has pleaded innocent.

"This is ridiculous," said his attorney, Daniel J. O'Connell. "There are going to be a number of novel questions about this case."

O'Connell said Friday he will file motions to have the trial moved from Dedham Superior Court.

"I don't think he can be tried fairly anywhere in the state," he said. "I've never seen the media try and convict someone like they have in this case."

O'Connell said prosecutors haven't proved Ms. Benedict is dead, but added he hasn't decided whether to argue she is still alive.

"I haven't determined whether there is sufficient evidence to prove that a person is deceased. It's certainly an issue, but I won't take a position on it until I have to," he said.

"The key questions are whether or not she's dead, and whether or not Professor Douglas had anything to do with it."

For John Benedict, the only question that remains is what happened to his daughter's body.

"I'm convinced she's dead. I would have hopes of finding her body, that's all," Benedict said. "My daughter would never be in any place this long without getting in touch."

Friends recall Miss Benedict as a promising art student. They say she once dated a professional football player who was a devoted Jehovah's Witness, and she joined church members in seeking converts door-to-door.

Douglas achieved national prominence for his research into the growth of human and animal eye cells, and was determined to find an alternative to the use of animals in the testing of cosmetics.

In 1980, he was awarded a $100,000 grant by the New England Anti-Vivisection Association, said Aaron Madlock, association director.

According to court affidavits, the lives of the artist and the professor converged about 18 months ago.

By January 1982, police say Miss Benedict had left the church and, using the alias Nadine Porter, began working as a prostitute. She was arrested Dec. 9 on a charge of prostitution, but was found innocent, said Anthony DiFuscia, attorney for the Benedict family.

In March 1982, Miss Benedict met Douglas in a Combat Zone bar.

"His contacts with Robin Benedict became an obsession," said Kivlan. "When he had exhausted his personal funds and his family's funds, he began to steal from his employer."

Douglas resigned his post at Tufts University in June after the university began investigating his use of research funds. On Oct. 12, he pleaded innocent to charges of larceny and filing false documents. Prosecutors say he misappropriated more than $50,000 in university funds.

According to affidavits, Miss Benedict told Douglas on March 2, 1983, she never wanted to see him again, and called Douglas' wife Nancy to ask her help in keeping her husband away.

Three days later, she told a friend she was on her way to Douglas' house. Mrs. Douglas told police she saw Miss Benedict's car that evening outside their home. When she returned later, she said, the car was gone.

Miss Benedict has not been seen since.

The next day, a bloodied shirt and hammer with a single strand of brown hair were found in a trash bin at a highway rest area near Marshfield. Searches of Douglas' home turned up the coat with a piece of brain in the pocket, along with Miss Benedict's purse and credit cards.

In July, Miss Benedict's blood-smeared car was found on a street near Pennsylvania Station in New York.

Douglas is being held without bail. A trial date has not been set.

On Nov. 7, the state Supreme Court ruled that Douglas' children can be compelled to testify in the trial about their father's activities with Miss Benedict.

As court maneuvering drags on, Benedict mourns his daughter and waits for a trial that seems certain to produce jarring testimony.

"As far as all these things they're saying, she was a very loving daughter," he said. "Anything else comes as a complete surprise to me."

More Homeless In City As Winter Closes In

NEW YORK (AP) — For New York City's homeless, the first snow is a cruel reminder of what lies ahead — a winter spent huddling near steam pipes or in doorways or seeking the slim comforts of a city shelter.

No other city has as many homeless people as New York, and no other city spends so much to provide shelter — without seeming to make a dent in the problem.

By early next year the city expects 5,500 people a night at 18 city shelters plus another 1,000 at shelters run by churches or other groups. This figure is 25 percent higher than last winter.

But there are apparently no fewer men and women camping near steam pipes, picking through trash cans or sleeping in doorways. The "bag lady," who carriers all her possessions in a shopping bag, has become as familiar a symbol of New York City as the cabbie or sidewalk vendor.

"It's like the job of Sisyphus," the mythological figure condemned to push a boulder up a hill, only to have it roll down each time it gets near the top, said Robert Trobe, commissioner of the city's Office of Family and Adult Services, which under a 1981 legal settlement must shelter all comers.

In 1978, three years before the settlement, the city spent $6.8 million on the homeless. Now the city spends $50 million to $60 million a year for a network of shelters far more extensive than any other city's.

The average nightly population at men's shelters in September has increased from 1,887 in 1980 to 4,319 this year. The average number of women has risen even faster, from 117 in 1980 to 644 this fall.

Trobe said he sees no end to the increase, because most of the people now streaming into the city's shelters have not been living in the streets or other public places.

"When we say 'homeless,' we mean the guy out on the street who could freeze to death," said Trobe. "But we're getting a lot of people who had a fight with a roommate or can't pay the rent and so they come to a shelter."

Kim Hopper of the New York City Coalition for the Homeless, which filed the lawsuit that resulted in the city's expanded shelter system, admits there has been an infux of younger, more able-bodied residents.

But he says the shelters are being used "out of desperation, not convenience."

"Some of the shelters, he said, "are dirty, insecure and poorly staffed ... It's hard to believe that anyone would give up any living alternative for a shelter."

Under the terms of the court agreement the city must accept anyone who asserts a need for shelter. Even if it were to implement a means test, "How do you distinguish between a man who really can stay with a cousin and one who can't?" asked Trobe.

But the city is instituting work programs at the shelters; residents get $12.50 a week for 20 hours of folding laundry or cleaning up.

Although Trobe said any able-bodied person who refused to work would be transferred to another shelter, ultimately the right to shelter makes the work rule unenforceable.

Meanwhile, out on the street, there seem to be as many homeless as ever, Hopper and Trobe agreed. This group seems impervious to the city's efforts.

In the first three months of this year, for instance, city "outreach" teams removed 2,000 people from the subways. But only 1,200 agreed to check into a shelter, and many others undoubtedly drifted away afterward.

The coalition says the shelters' poor conditions, particularly overcrowding, explain why they are shunned by so many of the needy. The shelters have improved in the last few years, "but the improvements have been overtaken

Chinese Diplomat Kept Under Wraps

CHICAGO (AP) — Federal officials kept mum Saturday on the whereabouts of a Chinese diplomatic courier whose request for asylum triggered a two-hour standoff on an airport runway over possession of diplomatic documents.

The State Department refused to comment on the defector's status or his whereabouts Saturday. The FBI referred calls to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, but Duke Austin, INS spokesman, was out for the day, his wife said.

Larry Speakes, deputy White House press secretary, said, "We will review it (the asylum request), and INS will make a decision."

A spokesman at the Federal Metropolitan Correctional Center here said "I don't have anything on that" when asked to confirm a Chicago Sun-Times report that the courier, identified as Gogiang Yang by an O'Hare airport policeman, had been kept there overnight.

A Chicago Tribune report that Yang would be flown by military transport to Washington also could not be independently confirmed.

In Tokyo, Hu Yaobang, general secretary of the Chinese Communist Party, quipped, "Such a thing is possible, but you know, there are so many people in China, if just one of them leaves ..."

Two Chinese couriers were aboard Pan Am Flight 72, en route from San Francisco to New York, to carry documents in diplomatic pouches to China's delegation at the United Nations. After the two couriers started arguing loudly over possession of the pouches, pilot Gerald Dion decided to make an unscheduled landing at O'Hare International Airport on Friday afternoon, airport police said.

The second courier did not want to defect.

After more than an hour of negotiations in the presence of State Department officials, the defecting diplomat was taken off the 747 jet and whisked into seclusion. The other courier kept the documents, an INS spokesman said, and the plane flew on to its scheduled destination in New York.

Four Injured In Wreck

Betty Jo Joyner of Rocky Mount, was charged with driving left of center following investigation of a Thursday collision 2.3 miles North of Falkland on N.C. 43.

Trooper Coy Taylor said the Joyner car crossed the center line and collided with a truck driven by Paul Douglas Dilsa of 324 Clairmont Circle, causing $2,000 damage to the truck and $6,000 damage to the car.

Taylor said both drivers were treated at Pitt County Memorial Hospital for injuries, then released, while two other persons were admitted to the hospital for treatment.

Fireworks Explosion Levels Warehouse

WAREHOUSE DESTROYED ... The Grucci Fireworks Co. warehouse in Bellport, N.Y. is leveled Saturday by a major explosion which also damaged a number of homes. At least four people were killed and 23 injured. (AP Laserphoto)

BELLPORT, N.Y. (AP) — An explosion at the fireworks company that made President Reagan's inaugural display leveled a warehouse and damaged homes Saturday, killing four people and injuring 23 others, authorities said.

MAP ... locating fireworks warehouse explosion. (AP Laserphoto)

Fireworks went off in the sky when the Grucci Fireworks Co. warehouse blew up, knocking out power temporarily to about 7,000 suburban Long Island customers.

"They were red, blue, green and white. This was the biggest show ever," said Jim Lyons, 18, an employee of Walker Automotive a mile south of the site. "It's just incredible. I've never been terrified in my life until now."

Edward Thompson, director of the Nassau County Red Cross, said four bodies had been recovered and two other people were missing.

The warehouse of the company, owned by fifth-generation fireworks makers, blew up at 11:10 a.m., officials said. Several small fires were sparked but firefighters extinguished them.

Lyons said his parents, who live about three miles away in Brookhaven, felt their house shake.

Karen Hermus, who lives across the street from the warehouse, said her house was "severely" damaged.

Ray Braun, manager of an insulating company a block away, said the explosion collapsed his 14,000-square-foot roof and blew out the doors and windows.

"My own employees were saying, 'That's it, that's the end,'" he said.

Braun said he rushed to the scene and found chaos. "There were people running out of their homes half-dressed. There were babies being thrown out of windows. It was a real mess," he said.

A spokesman at Brookhaven Memorial Hospital in Patchogue, who would not give his name, said 23 people were taken to the hospital. He would not elaborate on the nature of their injuries.

An emergency room employee at Brookhaven, who did not give her name, said "we have received a few" blast victims. She would not estimate the number nor describe their conditions.

Charles Salit, a Long Island Lighting Co. spokesman, said power was restored within 90 minutes to all but 300 of the 7,000 customers who lost power after the blast. Durham said several small fires from the explosion had been brought under control.

The warehouse that blew up was about one-half block long and there were several other concrete buildings nearby, Lyons said.

Police originally reported that 20 houses were destroyed, but later revised that estimate. They said a two-block area had been evacuated because of fireworks lying in the street.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The more I see of people, the more I love my dogs. I would like to be buried with them, but I can't find a cemetery where people and their pets can be buried together. Is there one? I am 83 and not crazy.

DOG LOVER IN HARRISBURG, PA.

DEAR DOG LOVER: To my knowledge, the only cemetery in the world where humans and their pets are buried side by side is Bonheur Memorial Park, located just outside Baltimore.

The owner, William A. Green, said there are currently about 8,000 pets and 100 humans buried there, with reservations in the hundreds for more.

Bonheur is the final resting place for dogs, cats, hamsters, rabbits, birds and monkeys. An elephant named Mary Ann who lived at the Baltimore Zoo for over 40 years is also buried there. Plans are being made to bury six racehorses—a difficult feat because after a horse dies, it's impossible to fold its legs.

Bonheur offers 24-hour pick-up service in a custom-built pet hearse from home or animal hospital. The pet is brought to Bonheur where it is bathed and groomed to give it a lovely "sleeping" appearance. The pet is then placed in a satin- or velvet-lined casket and placed in the "slumber" room for viewing. For those who want a religious service, a priest, minister or rabbi may be engaged.

For an extra fee, candles will be lighted at the grave of the loved one on the anniversary of his or her birth or death, and on Easter and Christmas. If your pet was Jewish, Hanukkah and Passover are remembered as well.

It costs about $350 to bury an average-sized cat and about $450 for a large German shepherd. A complete interment of a human is about $950. (Human bodies must be prepared at a "regular" funeral home.)

Bonheur was founded in 1935 as a pet cemetery, and in 1979 special permission was granted by the court to bury humans as well.

Some may think that being buried with a pet—or even giving it a "funeral"—is a foolish waste of money. But to many, a pet is a much-loved member of the family and it seems reasonable to me to give it a dignified and compassionate burial.

For more information about this unique cemetery, write to: Bonheur Memorial Park, 7239 Washington Blvd., Baltimore, Md. 21227.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old girl, and I just finished reading your booklet, "What Every Teen-ager Ought to Know."

As I read through it, I thought it was just an OK book, but when I started reading the chapter on drugs, I thought it was really great!

I have never taken any drugs. I have never even had a desire to try them, but after I read your booklet, it made me absolutely sure that I will never try drugs as long as I live. I never realized how serious just trying drugs out could be.

I hope other kids will read your booklet and learn what I did. Thanks, Abby. I am passing it around to my friends.

NO DRUGS FOR ME IN MAINE

DEAR NO DRUGS: Thanks for writing. Your letter made my day. For those who want the booklet, "What Every Teen-ager Ought to Know," send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

While Meg blithely skips through life pondering the essence of God and the Jedi knighthood, Zachary concentrates on details. Meg recites poetry; he recites the color of each relatives' car. She wants to save the whales; he wants to know why Daddy was sneaking around behind us in the toy store with a Star Wars box in his arms.

He is most definitely a pragmatist. When confronted with a choice, he weighs all the pros and cons before making his decision. Even an invitation to a birthday party deserves close scrutiny. When invited to the party of a preschool classmate, his first reaction was, "Amy is not nice. She throws sand."

I was a bit surprised. The birthday girl was undeniably feisty, but being used to Meg's unreserved ecstacy at the mere mention of a party, I could not quite comprehend Zachary's lack of enthusiasm.

"But she has invited you to her party," I said lamely.

He remained solemn. "She throws paint, too."

"Then you don't want to go?"

"And she knocks you down if she wants your toy."

"So you're not going?" I repeated.

"Well," he hesitated, "I think I prob'ly will because some of my friends might be there."

"If you're going to the party, you must try to be friends with Amy, too."

"I don't like her none."

"You can't go if you're not going to be nice to her."

"But I'm taking her a present," he said, as if that absolved him fron all further responsibilities.

"That doesn't matter. You still have to be nice to her."

He screwed his fists into his cheeks. "Do I have to invite her to my party?"

His party is all he ever talks about now. He's planning to have it at ShowBiz Pizza, and he's not having any girls. He even knows what he's going to wear. His birthday is in May.

"By the time you have your party you may want to."

He wrinkled his nose. "No way, Jose."

"Well let's don't worry about your party just yet. Let's talk about this one." I remembered all too vividly how a reluctant guest could sabotage a birthday party. I will never forget the kid who ruined Meg's third birthday by refusing to play any "baby games," then left me with the parting shot, "My mother told me to tell you I had a nice time, but I didn't."

I didn't want Amy's mom holding such a grudge against Zachary 30 years from now. So I persisted. "I will not let you go until you promise me that you will behave yourself and be nice to Amy."

He examined my mouth for the faintest hint of a smile, but finding none, he acquiesced, "Okay," he sighed, "but I never knew parties could be so hard."

N.C. Actor Wins Role In 'AfterMASH'

By FRANCES HASTY
The Fayetteville Observer

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — For once, having an "unknown face" worked in an actor's favor. It won John Chappell a top role in the new "AfterMASH" television series as hospital administrator Mike D'Angelo.

"They wanted new people; that was in my favor," Chappell said. "Usually they want the opposite. They saw a lot of other actors. I was fortunate because the character they wanted happened to be me. They wanted someone from the South or Midwest, about my age ... likeable even when being mean."

While he may be a new face in Hollywood, Chappell is not unknown in the North Carolina Sandhills and other areas of the state. He was born in Winston-Salem and grew up in Southern Pines, where he went to school.

He was graduated from Wake Forest University, majoring in math, physics and education, then earned bachelor of divinity and master of sacred theology degrees from Southeastern Seminary at Wake Forest.

Chappell said he has several relatives "here and there about the state" and he and his wife maintain a residence at Pine Bluff.

His theatrical work started in Pinehurst, Chappell said during an interview on a recent visit home. As a high school senior he performed with the Pinehurst amateur theater and worked at a radio station after school. His first paid job was in the outdoor drama "Lost Colony."

He played the governor and narrator, "getting my feet wet in a lot of ways," he said.

Chappell also had a stint as chaplain at North Carolina Central University, but acting was always on the sidelines.

He began doing Hal Holbrook's "Mark Twain Tonight" — he still does about 15 shows a year — which he feels shoved him out of the nest and into trying his wings as a professional actor.

In Hollywood he obtained some small movie roles and portrayed Gary Gilmore's lawyer in "Executioner's Song," and he did some stage work as well. It all added up to the point that he was making a name for himself.

Then along came "AfterMASH," and for the first time, he is doing primarily comedy. "It has its serious comedy as well as its serious moments as did 'MASH,'" he said.

Chappell said that as the hospital administrator, his character has to be a heavy.

"Mike D'Angelo is a guy who is gregarious, a publicity hound, very concerned about the image of the hospital, which is identical to his own image," he said.

Chappell, who in appearance falls somewhere between Rod Steiger and Tom Bosley, speaks very highly of the people involved both behind and in front of the cameras of "AfterMASH."

Smith's 18 Leads ECU By Camels

Harrison Pleased By Effort In Young Pirates' Opener

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Freshman Roy Smith rubber-armed his way to 18 points and 12 rebounds in leading East Carolina's basketball Pirates to a 75-66 victory over Campbell University Saturday night in Minges Colisuem.

It was the opening game of the season for both schools.

Smith, a 6-7½ freshman from Gastonia, hit on eight of 14 shots from the floor and two of six free throws in scoring 18 points, while junior forward Barry Wright added 16 points and Curt Vanderhorst had 12 for the Pirates.

Clarence Grier scored 25 to lead the Camels, while Rene Parker added 12. ECU held junior college transfer Andrea MeGee to only four points. McGee had been expected to be the team leader for the Camels this year.

It was a game of streaks, one which saw the Pirates push out into as much as a 17-point bulge in the first half and a 15-point one in the second. But Campbell made a run at the Pirates in the second half, trimming the game back to as little as four points midway the half.

"We could have been up by 20 in the first half," Coach Charlie Harrison said afterwards. "Or we could have built up a 20 point lead in the second half, but we just couldn't hit the shots and we took a few bad ones too."

Harrison, who appeared to be fairly pleased with the team's play considering its youth, said he expected Campbell to make a run at the Pirates in the second half. "We took about three bad shots...no, not bad, but not really the kind of shot we wanted. They threw lots of junk defenses at us and that broke our rhythm. We're playing a lot of young kids and they saw a different defense every time down the court."

East Carolina opened the game with two straight baskets as Derrick Battle and Tony Robinson scored before Cambell got on the board with a 20-footer by Grier.

The Camels were nevcr able to draw even, although they stuck close for most of the first ten minutes. Three times they cut the lead back to one, the last at 17-16 on a 12-footer by Harvey Smith.

East Carolina then began to pull away, getting a basket by Vanderhorst on a goal-tending call and following that up on two free throws by Wright. After the Camels broke that string, Wright, Keith Sledge and David Harris each hit a pair of free throws to run the lead to nine and William Grady hit from the baseline to up the lead to 11, 29-18.

The Pirates kept it up, adding another Grady basket before Campbell got a three point play from Mike Vandy. Another streak, with Smith, Wright and Vanderhorst scoring, ran the lead to 16, 39-23. After a Camel free throw, a basket by Smith and two Wright free throws extended it to 17 — the biggest lead — at 41-24.

The Camels fought back, however, led by Grier, and cut the lead to as little as 11 before trailing 45-32 at intermission.

The Pirates then went cold at halftime and scored only three baskets and a free throw in the first ten minutes of the half. Campbell, meanwhile, took advantage of that dry spell to pull back into the game, cutting the lead to as little as three points, 51-48, before Battle scored on a three-point play for a 54-58 lead with 10:11 left.

East Carolina's defense took over after that,

Lady Pirates Fall To Saint Peter's

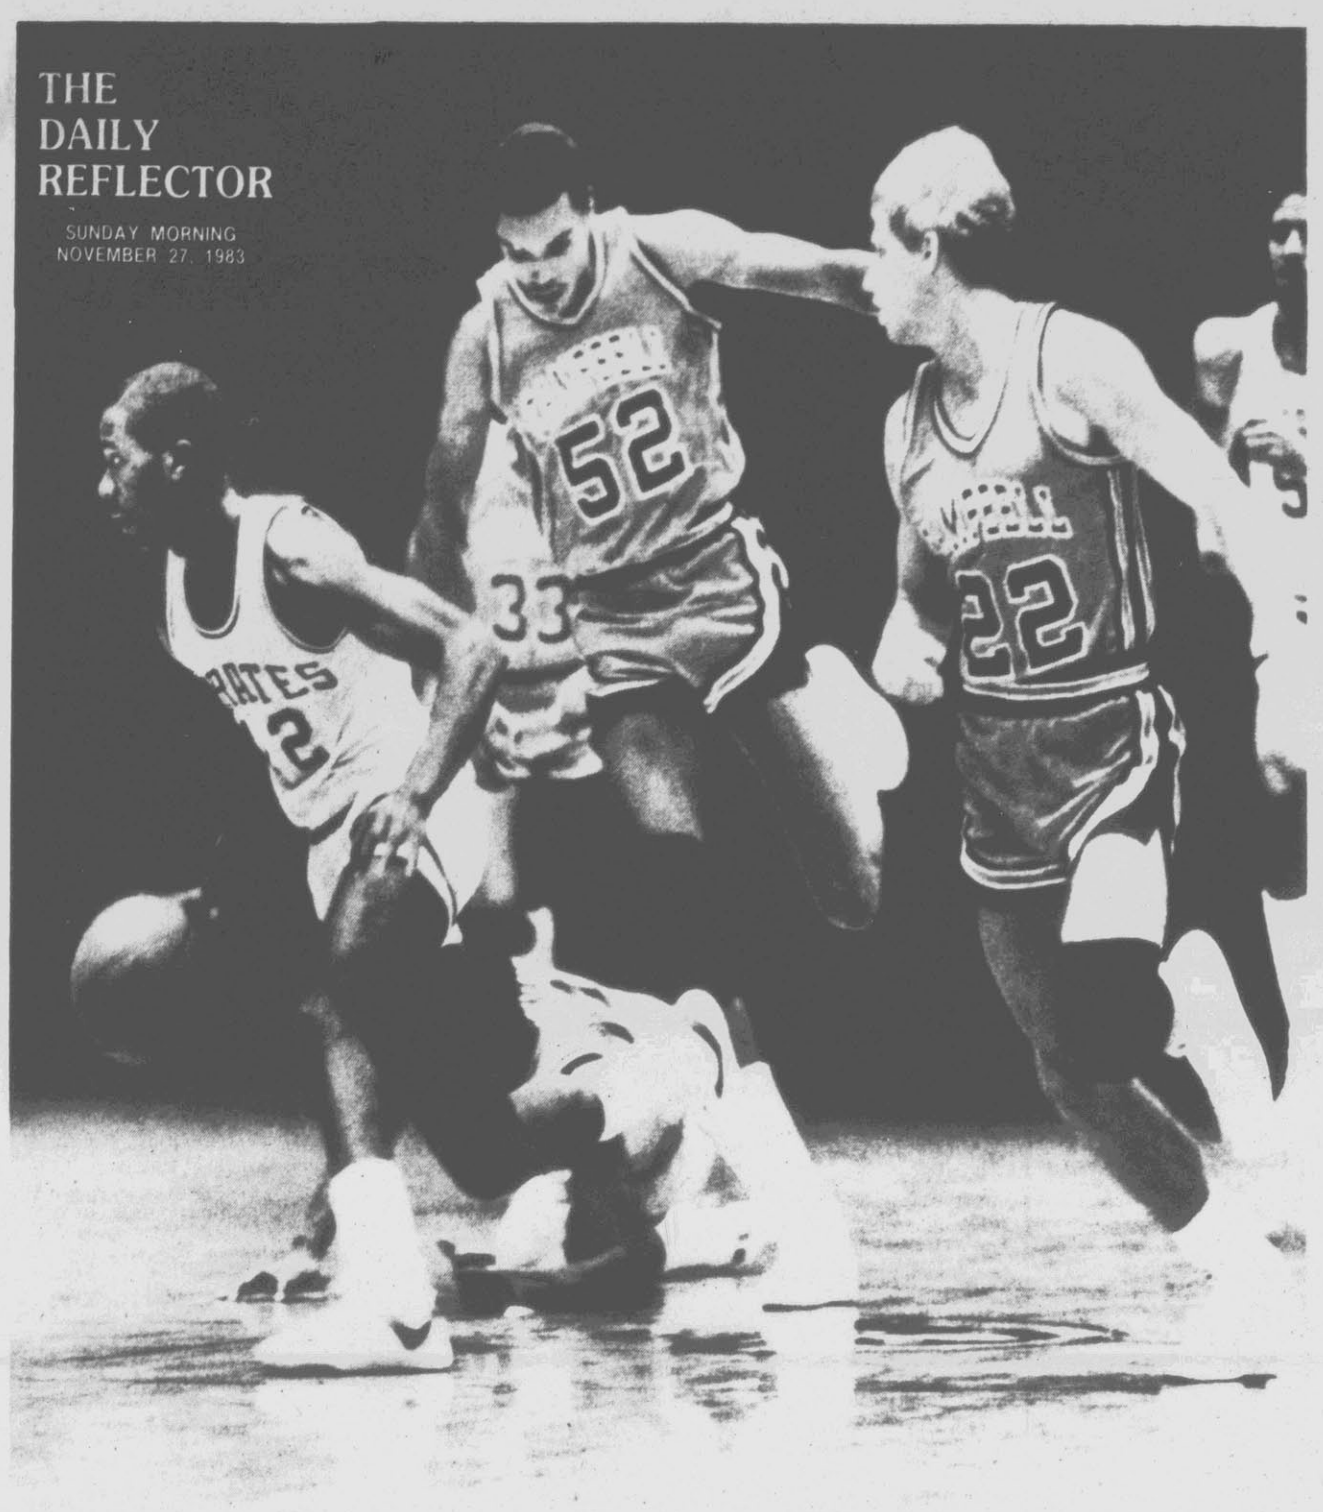

JERSEY CITY, N.J. — Blanche Jones fired in 23 points and the Saint Peter's defense shut off the Lady Pirates of East Carolina University late in the second half to take a 77-52 victory Saturday in women's collegiate basketball action.

The Lady Pirates were led offensively by Sylvia Bragg with 17 points, while Lisa Squirewell, Darlene Hedges and Delphine Mabry scored eight each. Squirewell pulled down a game-high 11 rebounds.

Carla Thames and Amanda Berry fired in eight points each for the Peahens in their season opener. Saint Peter's posted a 25-3 record a year ago, with one of those losses an 81-70 defeat to the Lady Pirates at Minges Coliseum. ECU evened its record at 1-1 and will play at Iona today.

Bragg sank a pair of free throws with 4:44 left in the first half to give the Lady Pirates a 24-22

Huskers Moving Closer To NCAA Title

"A good offensive team — maybe as good as I've seen in college football," Osborne conceded Saturday following No. 1-ranked Nebraska's come-from-behind 28-21 victory over arch-rival Oklahoma.

Osborne was certain about one thing, though. He motioned to a trio of Nebraska players standing alongside him — quarterback Turner Gill, tailback Mike Rozier and wingback Irving Fryar — and called them "as good as I've coached."

Rozier, continuing to set records left and right, rushed for 205 yards, while Nebraska stormed from behind with two touchdowns in the final 5½ minutes of the third period and completed a 12-0 regular season.

"To go 12-0 is a tremendous feat, but we've still got a tough game in the Orange Bowl," said Osborne, referring to Nebraska's Jan. 2 meeting with fifth-ranked Miami.

A 62-yard gallop by Rozier, who became the second runner in NCAA history to rush for 2,000 yards in one season, set up Gill's one-yard quarterback sneak that tied the score 21-21 with 5:29 left in the third period.

"When our team gets behind, they take it in stride and come right back," Rozier said. "This was not my best game, but one of my best. The biggest will be the Orange Bowl. Our main goal is to win the national championship, and we'll have to beat Miami."

Schellen also scored Nebraska's first touchdown on a seven-yard run that capped the Cornhuskers' first possession, while Rozier, who carried 32 times and set an NCAA record with 929 yards in his last four games, tied the score 14-14 with a three-yard run 46 seconds before halftime.

Oklahoma reached the Nebraska 2-yard line in the final minute after a 72-yard drive. But an illegal procedure penalty set the Sooners back to the 7, defensive end Bill Weber nailed quarterback Danny Bradley for a three-yard loss and two passes fell incomplete in the end zone. The last one was batted away from split end Buster Rhymes by cornerback Neil Harris.

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer claimed that on the next-to-last pass, wide receiver Derrick Shepard "was hit in the mouth by the defender (Harris) with the ball in the air. It was interference, but they didn't call it. That is part of the game, too.

"But give the credit to Nebraska. They have the most explosive offense in college football. It wasn't our letdown after we went ahead twice, it was their explosive offense. They have the talent and ability to make those things happen. Nebraska has a great football team. We played about as well as we can play. We didn't fumble or make any mistakes or errors until that illegal procedure penalty."

The victory, which extended the nation's longest winning streak to 22 games, sends Nebraska into the Orange Bowl against fifth-ranked Miami as Big Eight champions for the third straight year. The Cornhuskers' 21-game Big Eight winning streak marks the first time a team has posted three straight unbeaten-untied seasons in conference play since Oklahoma's six straight from 1953-58.

The Sooners, who declined all bowl bids, are 7-4 and wind up their season next week at Hawaii. They finished in a second-place Big Eight tie with Missouri at 5-2.

Spencer Tillman, one of Oklahoma's two outstanding redshirt freshman running backs, scored on runs of 39 and 18 yards. His second touchdown gave Oklahoma a short-lived 21-14 lead at 6:22 of the third period and came two plays after Bradley scrambled for 16 yards on fourth-and-1 for a first down at the 18.

On its first possession, Nebraska drove 67 yards on 13 plays for a 7-0 lead. Schellen, the forgotten man in Nebraska's troika of backfield superstars, scored on a seven-yard burst up the middle at 8:07 and the sellout crowd of 75,008, which braved heavy rain plus a touch of snow, seemed to anticipate a blowout by the Cornhuskers, who had outscored their first 11 opponents by an average of 54-15.

The drive included a fourth-down, eight-yard shovel pass on a fake field goal from Gill, the holder, to blocker Tim Brungardt that gave the Huskers a first down at the 7.

But Oklahoma, a two-touchdown underdog for the first time in memory, battled on more than even terms for the rest of the first half, even though Tim Lashar missed field goal attempts of 37 and 47 yards.

Gannon's Hot Hand Leads Pack To Final

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Terry Gannon bombarded Santa Clara's zone defense for 24 points as defending NCAA champion North Carolina State moved into the finals of the Great Alaska Shootout with a 78-75 victory Saturday.

Fourteenth-ranked Arkansas was to play 20th-ranked Oklahoma in the other semifinal with the winner taking on N.C. State in Sunday's title game. The loser plays Santa Clara for third.

Gannon drilled seven of 10 shots from the field in the first half, all from the 15-to 20-foot range. The 6-foot-1 junior guard from Joliet, Ill., cooled off some in the second half, but got help from freshman Bennie Bolton who hit 11 of his 13 points in the second half.

George McClain sank four free throws in the final 43 seconds to ice the victory.

Santa Clara's 7-1 junior, Nick Vanos, played a magnificent game, scoring 25 points and hauling down 12 rebounds. Repeatedly, he hit key shots to keep the Broncos in the chase. Harold Keeling added 19 points, six in the final minute.

The Wolfpack went to its delay game with a seven-point lead and about six minutes to go. But Santa Clara closed it to 77-75 with two seconds left before McClain's final free-throw.

In consolation action Saturday, the University of Alaska-Anchorage upset New Mexico 79-72 and Fordham trimmed Southern Cal 78-67.

Jerry Hobbie and Dave Roberson scored 17 points apiece as Fordham won what amounted to a free-throw shooting contest.

The Trojans led at the half 35-32 on the strength of 17-23 free-throw shooting. But the second half was Fordham's as the Rams converted 22-29.

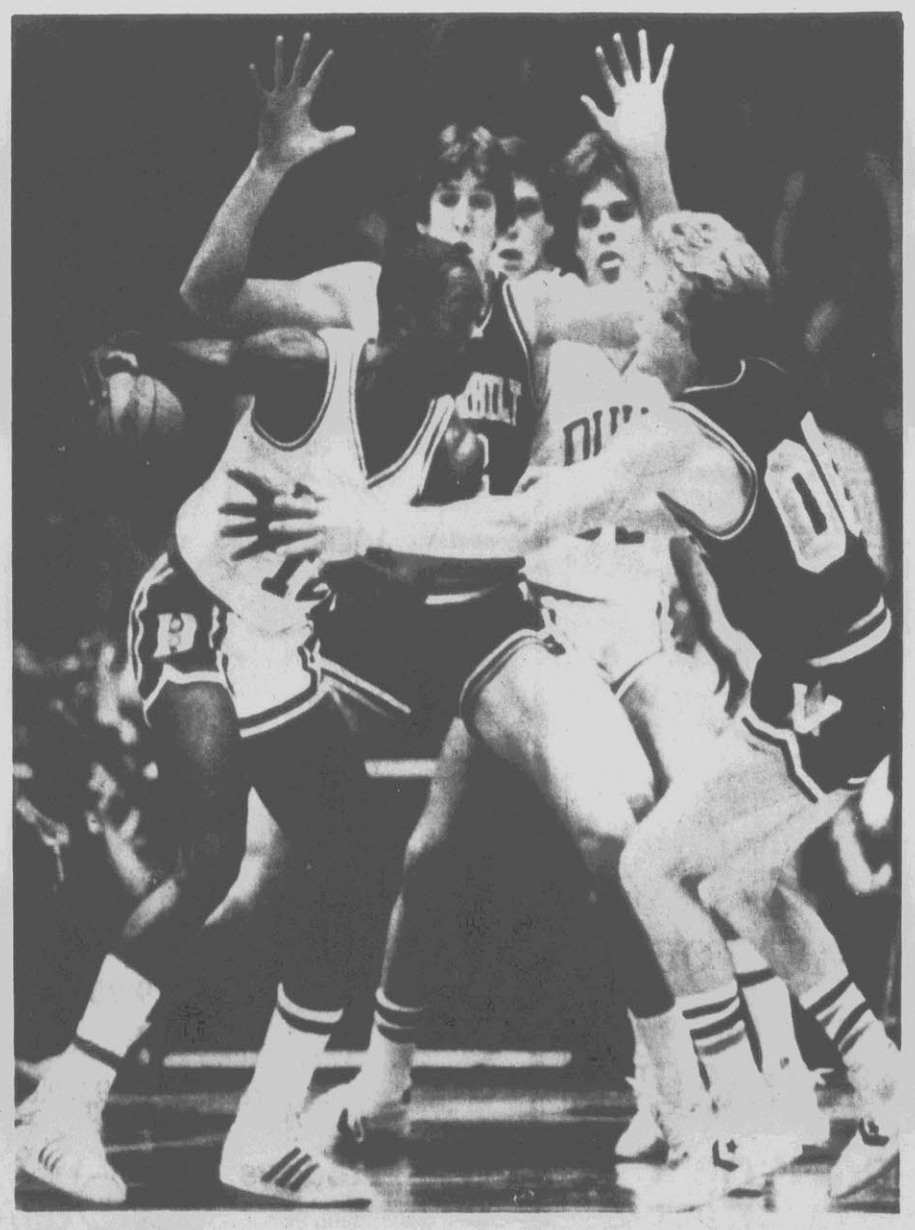

The only Trojan who could score in the first eight minutes of the second half was Wayne Carlander, who had six points. He finished with 14, as did Cedric Bailey.

Jeff Martin scored 17 points to propel UAA to its surprising victory over New Mexico.

UAA will play Fordham on Sunday for fourth place, while New Mexico plays Southern Cal for seventh.

Martin scored 13 points in the second half to propel Alaska-Anchorage to its first Shootout victory since 1980. The Seawolves, a Division II school, are 3-1 for the season,

The score was tied ten times before New Mexico pulled to a 40-33 halftime lead behind Alan Dolensky's 14 points.

Carolina's Win Over Missouri 'Not Pretty'

By TOM FOREMAN Jr
AP Sports Writer

GREENSBORO — Senior forward Matt Doherty has been around long enough to know that although coach Dean Smith captured his 497th career victory Saturday night, the 64-57 triumph over Missouri was nothing his coach would be pleased with.

Doherty his 6 of 8 perimeter shots and led the Tar Heel attack with 15 points. Kenny Smith, the fifth freshman to start for coach Smith since 1972, added 14 points on 6 of 10 from the field.

"It wasn't pretty, not pretty at all," Doherty said. "I'm sure coach is disappointed in the way we played, but we got the job done."

Coach Smith called Missouri a strong rebounding team, a fact borne out by the 31-25 edge the Tigers held.

"Missouri does a great job of pivot defense," Smith said. "They'll be heard from in the Big 8."

The Tigers committed 24 turnovers, a figure that surprised coach Norm Stewart because of who made them.

"We expect our young players to make the mistakes they did, but we didn't expect the mistakes from our veterans," Stewart said. "If we can get better execution, we can be a good ball club."

Missouri's pesky defense, along with an early cold spell by the Tar Heels, allowed the Tigers to score the first five points. Sam Perkins scored on a layup at the 17:04 mark to break the North Carolina drought.

Trailing 9-4 after a Blake Wortham dunk, North Carolina then ran off 10 unanswered points, ending on Michael Jordan's breakaway slam dunk at the 13:13 mark. The Tar Heels never trailed again.

Missouri stayed close throughout the first half and trailed 33-27 at halftime. A six-point run at the start of the second half brought the Tigers to within 40-39 with 10:55 left to play.

A Perkins free throw and a Jordan jumper at the 10:08 mark gave North Carolina a 43-39 edge. Twice more, Missouri pulled to within two points, but a 10-2 run in which Smith and Jordan scored four points each put the Tigers away for good.

Dawkins Paces Duke By Vandy

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Guard Johnny Dawkins pumped in 27 points and forward Mark Alarie added 14 points as Duke slipped by Vanderbilt 78-74 in a college basketball Saturday night.

Dawkins scored 22 points in the first half, but Vanderbilt came grabbed a 44-43 halftime lead in the season opener for both teams.

The teams traded baskets during the first seven minutes of the second half before Alarie's 3-point play gave Duke a 58-56 lead, which the Blue Devils never lost.

Duke hit 63.66 percent from the floor in the second half compared to Vanderbilt's 38.7 percent.

Guard Phil Cox and center Brett Burrow keyed Vanderbilt with 16 points each.

McIvor Sparks Texas Past Aggies

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Rick McIvor, a red shirt, third-string senior, hadn't played enough to qualify for a letter until Saturday.

He deserved a letter jacket plus the game ball after he came off the bench to trigger the listless No. 2-ranked Texas Longhorns, throwing four touchdown passes in a rousing 45-13 come-from-behind Southwest Conference victory over the arch-rival Texas Aggies.

The unblemished, Cotton Bowl-bound Longhorns notched their first undisputed SWC title since 1977 as they marched to an 11-0 record and a meeting with the Georgia Bulldogs.

McIvor had only completed three passes all season on 12 attempts. In his last appearance two weeks ago, he was yanked after being intercepted for a touchdown against Texas Christian.

He threw touchdown strikes of 12, 13, 33 and 60 yards against the Aggies to tie the Texas school record and connected on 8 of 12 tosses for 170 yards.

McIvor said he had been hurt earlier in the week and was a doubtful participant in the game.

"I hurt my back and I wasn't sure if I would be ready if needed." McIvor said. "The last four weeks I've been working hard. I had no doubt I could do the job."

McIvor said not playing "hadn't bothered me at all, so long as we've been winning. That may be hard for a lot of people to understand, but that's exactly how I feel."

Texas Coach Fred Akers said, "This was the first time in a long time that we really showed we were a whole football team.

"When we got 13 points down we knew we had to throw and Rick's our best passer. We felt it would make sense to put him in."

It made sense to the Aggies, trying to defend against his rifle arm.

"We had the Longhorns on the run for awhile," said A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill. "McIvor did a great job. He can throw the ball.

"Early in the game we we put a lot of pressure on (Rob) Moerschell and made him scramble. We didn't put as much pressure on McIvor."

The Longhorns, who will meet Georgia Jan. 2 in the Cotton Bowl, finished their regular season 11-0 overall and 8-0 in SWC play.

The Aggies dropped into a third-place tie with Baylor in the final SWC standings, posting a 5-5-1 season and a 4-3-1 league mark.

The psyched-up Aggies, playing for the first time in all-Maroon uniforms and before a record overflow crowd of 76,751 fans, jumped to a 13-0 lead on Roger Vick's 24-yard touchdown run and Alan Smith field goals of 37 and 46 yards.

McIvor replaced Rob Moerschell once the Longhorns got the 35 mph wind and struck for touchdown passes of 12 yards to Bill Boy Bryant and 13 yards to Brent Duhon in a 96-second span just before the intermission.

Texas quickly padded its 14-13 halftime lead with 31 points in the third period, including scoring passes of 33 and 60 yards from McIvor to Kelvin Epps.

McIvor completed 8 of 12 passes for 170 yards and tied the school record for scoring passes held by Clyde Littlefield and Randy McEachern.

The 31-point third period explosion also included a 41-yard touchdown pass on a reverse from Bryant to Duhon, John Walker's 1-yard touchdown plunge, and Jeff Ward's 31-yard field goal.

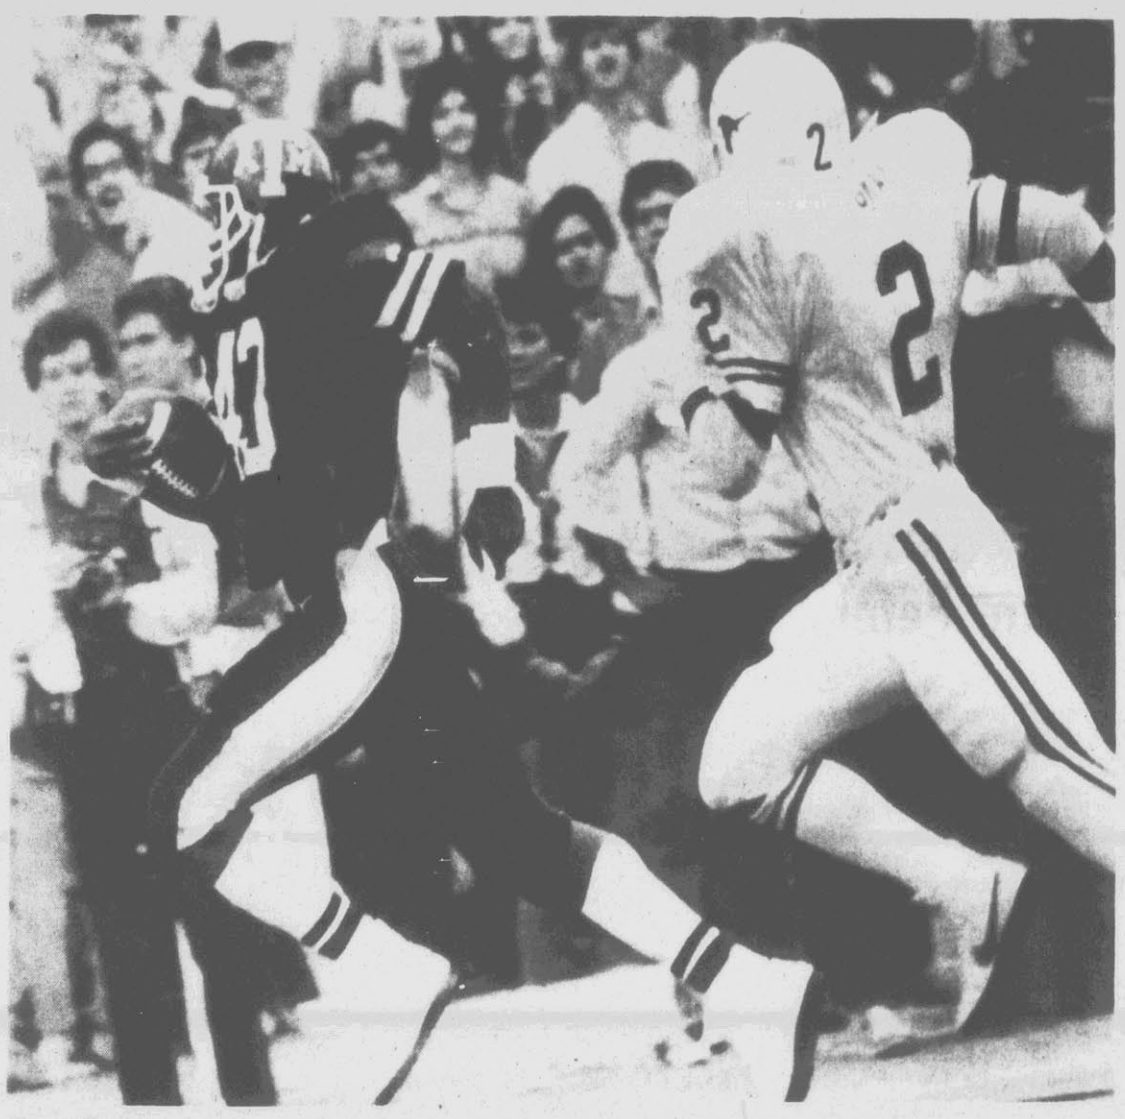

The landslide of points was triggered at the start of the second half when Chris Duliban blocked Kyle Stuard's punt and William Harris recovered at the Aggie 1-yard line. Walker scored on the next play.

The Texas kicking game paid a dividend of sorts to position the 'Horns for the first touchdown of the game. Moerschell picked up a low center snap on an apparent field goal attempt and passed 10 yards to Terry Orr at the A&M 12. McIvor threw the first of his touchdown passes on the next play to Bryant.

The Texas defense, tops in the nation, shut down the Aggie offense in the second half, sacking freshman quarterback Kevin Murray four times.

advantage, but that was to be the last time ECU would lead. Bonita Singleton canned a field goal with 3:37 left in the half to put the Peahens ahead 26-24.

The Lady Pirates held the score close through the early part of the second half, as Bragg connected on a jumper with 13:25 on the clock to trim the margin to 40-36. But Saint Peter's pulled away with an 18-4 scoring tear over the next nine minutes to take a 58-40 lead with 4:30 remaining in the game.

Squirewell leads the Lady Pirates in rebounding with 20 in the first two games of the season, while Bragg is averaging 16 points an outing.

stealing the ball on a number of occasions. And while the offense didn't exactly race away, it was able to protect the lead, moving back out by as many as 14 at 70-56 with 2:58 left in the contest.

"We're going to have to work to get more consistant," Harrison said. "We've got to get more than six or seven minutes of good basketball in a row."

Harrison praised the play of Grady and Vanderhorst in their defense of McGill, and added he thought Robinson ran the club well. "They all played hard, but I expect that. If they keep playing that hard, they're going to get better."

Harrison was especially pleased with the defense for the most part. "When they want to, they can really 'D' it up, can't they? If we had just had some shots to go early (in the second half) it wouldn't have been so tough. Then, the defense could have gotten some momentum. But at least the effort was still there when things got rough."

Harrison said that when the Pirates really got moving they blocked shots (eight), stole the ball (ten) and played quite well. "That's what I want for 40 minutes. But some of these guys are young, and they still have mental lapses.

"I did see some things I didn't see in the first game from last year's team. They went to the offensive boards much better and they were defensively intimidating inside. But at the same time, they gave up too much more easy stuff."

Still, Harrison admits, "We won!" The Pirates won't have to worry about winning that first one again.

ECU shot poorly in the second half, just 30 percent — and 50 percent at the line — and finished with a 43.9 percentage overall. In the first half they hit on 59.3 percent from the floor. At the line the Pirates hit on 61 percent for the game.

Campbell made good on 47.4 percent from the floor and 70.6 percent at the line. ECU held a slim 40-38 rebounding edge.

Now 1-0, the Pirates will seek the second victory on Wednesday night, as they host Christopher Newport at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum. The Pirates have only one other home game, December 17, in Minges before the new year.

Campbell's FTs Lift Clemson

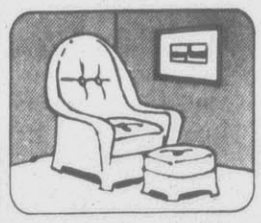

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Marc Campbell hit six free throws in overtime to lift Clemson to a 66-61 overtime victory over Marquette Saturday night in the championship game of the IPTAY Invitational Basketball Tournament here.

Air Force beat Wagner 70-58 in the consolation game earlier in the night.

The Clemson Tigers, trailing by as much as four points late in the second half, knotted the score at 56-all on a layup by Murray Jarman with 25 seconds to play.

Rampants Hope To Improve On Selection

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's Rampants, picked to finish last in the Big East Conference — but hoping for better things — open the 1983-84 basketball season Tuesday night.

The Rampants will be playing host to Jacksonville in the opening contest in the Rose High gym. A change has been made in the starting time of games this year. All home games, and most away affairs will begin with the junior varsity at 4:30 p.m. The girls' game will thus begin about 6 p.m., and the varisty about 7:30 p.m.

Coach Jim Brewington said he was pleasantly surprised by the outcome of the Rampant scrimmage game last week against Ayden-Grifton. "We did much better than I expected," Brewington said. "I think we're much improved. I don't know how many games we are going to win, but I think we're a better team than last year."

Picked to finish in last place by the Big East coaches earlier this month, the Rampants may not be that bad, Brewington said. "Being picked last didn't bother me. They usually don't pay that much attention to us. But we're always in the game. Even the games we lost last year, we were right there most of the way with a chance to win. I really think it's a great chance for us to prove that we not a last place club."

The Rampants return three starters from last year's club, although two of them didn't start all the way. Jeff Hopkins, a 6-7 center, is back and appears to be much improved. "He looks faster than he did last year before he got his knee injured," Brewington said. Also back is Mack Walston, a 6-1 forward, who could be the leading player on the team. "He has all the moves and shots, but he's an unselfish player. I'm looking for a great year from him," Brewington said.

The third starter back is Carlton Wilson, a 6-4 forward, who moved in for Hopkins when he was injured last year.

All three of them are slated for starting roles this season.

Joining them will probably be 6-0 Tyrone Smith at the point and 6-0 Hunter Bost at the other guard spot. "Smith has been a big surprise for us, and Bost has improved a lot over the off-season," the coach said.

Gary Scott, despite being only 6-2, is a good leaper and is the most likely candidate to move into the lineup in the front court when relief is needed. Dwight Smith at the point along with guards Mike Harris, Jerry Mayo, Raynold Joyner, Tony Harris and John Jordan, wing Maurice Barnes and forward Dave Hammond will add additional depth to the team.

"I think we've got good quickness in our guards and we should be able to press anyone and run with them. I think our offense is going to be improved, and our rebounding much improved. In fact, I think if we can outrebound a team, we'll win. Our defense is going to be much better too, especially our man-to-man."

In the conference race, Brewington looks to no one team to dominate. "Kinston has the big man (6-11 center Charles Shackelford), but I don't know about the supporting cast. Rocky Mount has the tradition, but also a new coach. Northern Nash is the biggest team in the league and Fike probably has the best talent."

While the boys are picked at the bottom, Rose's girls were picked just outside the top four, and that too, doesn't bother coach Dennis Gibson. In fact, Rose could turn out to be the sleeper team in the league, thanks to the transfusion of several sophomores up from the junior high team of last year.

"We're young, but promising," Gibson said. "We've only got two starters and four other lettermen back, but we have some good newcomers."

The two starters returning are 5-11 senior center Doris Richardson and 5-10 senior forward Sheila Carmon. Joining them are letter winners 5-7 guard Lisa Trevethan, 5-8 forward Niansa Outlaw, 5-6 guard Cheryl Clark, and 5-8 forward Lori Woolard, all juniors.

The sophomore contingent includes 6-1 center Pam Smith, 6-2 center Beteena Parker, 5-7 guard Vickie Parrott, 5-5 guard Casey Drury, 5-10 forward Chris Holec, and 5-9 forward Tammy Newton.

Along with them, junior guard Cindy Humphrey, 5-8, and 5-10 center Dawn Lambing are new to the Rose program.

"We have good experience to build around, especially in the front court," Gibson said. "If we can find a good point guard, we will be all right."

Probable starters for Tuesday's opener include Richardson, Carmon, Outlaw, Humphrey and either Woolard or Parrott.

"I look for Smith and Lambing to play a lot for us too," Gibson said. The other big girl, Parker, needs to improve on her game and Gibson is hopeful that she'll come along in time for the conference schedule.

"With the added height, I expect us to be improved in our rebounding," the coach said. "Smith is an aggressive rebounder, and that will help us.

"Our shooting is going to have to improve too. We don't have the perimeter shooting we had last year."

Gibson feels that the defense will be improved. "We're where we were at the end of last year, so we're a good bit along. We're moving better, and Humphrey looks like she's going to be a very good defensive player."

Gibson notes, however, that team speed isn't going to be as good as last year.

"The team's strong point has to be character," he said. "I think this team is going to have much more poise than last year's. They'll be able to adjust when someone does something different."

While the Rampettes were picked to finish sixth in the league race, Gibson is hopeful of a finish in the top third of the conference. "I think we can finish there. Fike is going to be good and so is Kinston, but I'd like to think that by the end of the year, we'll be as good too."

Gilbert Tosses Three TDs As Cats Rally By Colgate

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — Quarterback Jeff Gilbert passed for 376 yards and three touchdowns, including a 27-yarder early in the fourth period, as Western Carolina defeated Colgate 24-23 on Saturday in the first round of the NCAA Division 1-AA football playoffs.

The Catamounts, who rallied from a 23-7 halftime deficit, will play Holy Cross in Boston next Saturday in the second round. Colgate ends its season at 8-4.

Gilbert, who completed 25 of 47 passes without an interception, hit wide receiver Kristy Kiser in the end zone with 13:26 left to tie it. Dean Biasucci booted the point after to give Western Carolina, 9-2-1, its first lead.

Gilbert's 25 completions set a Southern Conference record for most passes completed in a season with 199, breaking the old mark of 1988 set by Davidson's Gordon Slade in 1969.

Colgate extended its lead to 13-0 on running back Stacy Hall's 1-yard run with 13:18 left in the second period, but Mike Powers missed the point after.

Running back Bob Clark's 8-yard run with 11:01 left and Powers' 36-yard field goal with 1:35 remaining boosted the Red Raiders' lead to 23-0. But the Catamounts drove 79-yard drive in the final minute to cut the deficit to 16 points at the half.

The drive was capped by Gilberts' 19-yard TD pass to wide receiver Eric Rasheed with 18 seconds.

Biasucci's 51-yard field goal with 13:36 left in the third period pulled Western Carolina within 23-10. Gilbert then hit Rasheed with a 34-yard TD pass with 42 seconds to go in the period to make it 23-17.

Rasheed hauled in seven passes for 141 yards and Kiser had eight catches for 131 yards.

Biasucci's field goal was the 55th in his career, tying a conference mark set by Craig Jones of Virginia Military Institute.

Georgia Survives Tech, 27-24

ATLANTA (AP) — It was a typical performance for seventh-ranked Georgia — just enough to win.

"The bottom line was we won and that is what this game is all about," Coach Vince Dooley said Saturday after his Bulldogs twice overcame 7-point deficits, then survived a late comeback attempt to edge Georgia Tech 27-24.

"The game was everything we expected, and Georgia Tech certainly played well," Dooley said.

John Lastinger scored one touchdown and passed for another, but it took some big plays from the Georgia defense to secure the victory.

"I thought both of our quarterbacks played well," Dooley said, after lifting his coaching record against the Yellow Jackets to 16-4. "John (Lastinger) did a good job of running the team when he was in there, and it was good to see (backup) Todd Williams back in his old form."

Coach Bill Curry of Tech praised the effort of his 14-point underdogs, but said, "There is no satisfaction when you lose. When you put your heart and soul into something for so many years, and then you have to face those faces in the locker room after this. It's tough. It hurts. I'm sick of it."

Lastinger scored on a 6-yard keeper to cap an 84-yard drive in the first quarter and then broke a 17-17 deadlock late in the third period when he threw a 4-yard scoring pass to Kevin Harris.

Kevin Butler kicked a 36-yard field goal early in the final quarter to give the Cotton Bowl-bound Bulldogs a 10-point lead before Tech struck for another touchdown behind its two offensive stars of the day — a 30-yard pass from John Dewberry to Robert Lavette.

Tech had one last shot in the waning minutes, reaching the Georgia 36 before Tony Flack intercepted a Dewberry pass to allow Georgia to run out the clock.

Lavette, who had 158 yards on 26 carries, had given Tech a 7-0 lead on the third play of the game when he scampered 72 yards for a score and Dewberry gave the Yellow Jackets a 14-7 lead in the second period when he rambled 25 yards on a quarterback draw.

The victory lifted Georgia to 9-1-1 for the year and it was their sixth victory in a row over Tech, which finished the season at 3-8.

Butler also kicked a 23-yard field goal on the final play of the first half after Gary Cantrell had blocked a Ron Rice punt to gave Georgia possession at the Tech 4 only seven seconds before intermission.

Georgia's other touchdown came on a 2-yard plunge by Barry Young, capping a 75-yard second quarter drive.

Dewberry's scoring pass that chopped the lead to three points came with only 4:38 left in the game. The Tech defense then held Georgia and forced a punt.

The Jackets, starting at their own 25 with 2:41 to play, converted a fourth-and-14 situation when Dewberry fired a 29-yard strike to Daryl Wise at midfield. Keith Glanton then ran for 5 yards and Dewberry hit Gary Wilkins on a 9-yarder to the Georgia 36 before Flack made his game-saving interception on the Bulldog 9.

Lavette, who ran for 203 yards against Georgia last year, got the Jackets off to a good start when he popped past the defense at left end on his 72-yard scoring run. He ran into trouble only at the 10 where he pulled away from Darryl Jones, who made a lunging attempt at a tackle but only got Lavette's jersey.

Georgia's first scoring drive covered 84 yards and included runs of 15 and 22 yards by Tron Jackson and a 15-yard roughing the kicker infraction that kept the drive alive after Georgia had bogged down at its own 32.

Jones Gains 248 Yards As Vols Down Vandy

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee tailback Johnnie Jones ran for 248 yards to become the Volunteers' all-time single-season rushing leader as he keyed the Vols to a 34-24 victory over Vanderbilt in a regionally televised Southeastern Conference football game Saturday.

The Vols finished their regular season at 8-3, while the Commodores fell to 2-9 and failed to win in six conference outings. Tennessee, which finished 4-2 in the league, goes to the Dec. 17 Florida Citrus Bowl to face Maryland.

Jones, who has rushed for 1,116 yards this season, ran 41 yards for a second-quarter touchdown and 70 yards to score just 17 seconds into the fourth quarter, allowing the Vols to regain an early-game lead.

Tennessee quarterback Alan Cockrell hit end Tim McGee with a 78-yard touchdown pass to put Tennessee on the scoreboard 3:86 into the game. Junior placekicker Fuad Reveiz kicked the extra point.

The Vols fell behind at the end of the third quarter, but came back with Jones' run. Split end Clyde Duncan scored on an 85-yard touchdown pass from Cockrell with 9:00 left in the game. Reveiz again kicked the extra point.

Vandy quarterback Kurt Page threw for a total of 329 yards, including a 9-yard touchdown pass to split end Phil Roach, to set a new SEC conference record for passing offense with 3,178 yards.

Fullback Louie Stevenson ran 1 yard for a touchdown, giving the Commodores a shot-lived 24-20 lead over the Vols late in third quarter.

Texas Tech.....13

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Brad Taylor guided Arkansas 77 yards for a fourth-quarter touchdown Saturday that carried the Razorbacks to a 16-13 season-ending Southwest Conference victory over Texas Tech.

Taylor hit flanker Mark Mistler with clutch passes of 10 and 11 yards and winged a 11-yarder to Donnie Centers in the scoring drive capped by Carl Miller's one-yard touchdown run.

Miller dove into the end zone with 4:29 showing on the clock.

Greg Horne's field goals of 36, 35 and 35 yards preceded the TD and kept the Razorbackss in the contest most of the intermittently rainy and windy afternoon.

The Red Raiders' final threat died on an off-target, fourth-and-nine Jim Hart pass from the Arkansas 42.

The victory hiked Arkansas' season record to 6-5 and squared its SWC slate at 4-4. The Raiders wound up the year 3-7-1 and 3-4-1.

Old And New Combine In Cougar Win

HOUSTON (AP) — It took a blend of the old and the new for third-ranked Houston to sprint past Kansas 91-76 Saturday. Michael Young was the old and Greg Anderson was the new.

Young, a senior, scored 16 of his game-high 25 points in the second half to shake the Cougars from a sluggish start and Anderson, a freshman, stepped in like a veteran in relief of foul-plagued Akeem Olajuwon.

"When Akeem got into foul trouble, I knew I'd have to go in," said Anderson, who scored eight points and pulled down nine rebounds. "Michael Young told me I had to block out, play defense and get the rebounds.

"When Coach (Guy) Lewis told me to go in I was a little nervous but I was all right as soon as I hit the floor."

Akeem Takes Aim

It was the coaching debut at Kansas for Larry Brown, who said his team had much to learn.

"I knew we would not be a good team early in the year and that makes it tough going against a great team like Houston," Brown said. "Their zone bothered us. We didn't shoot well over the top of it."

The Cougars, evening their record at 1-1, bolted from a 37-29 halftime lead with four straight baskets without a miss to start the second half after struggling most of the opening half.

Olajuwon went to the sidelines with 17:05 to go in the game with four personal fouls. He returned later and finished with 19 points and 15 rebounds.

Carl Henry led the Jayhawks with 21 points and Kelly Knight added 18, including 10 in the second half.

Houston started sluggishly just as it did a week ago in a 76-64 season opening loss to NCAA defending champion North Carolina State.

Kansas, returning all five starters from last season's 13-16 team, held an 18-17 lead with seven minutes to play in the half on a goaltending call against Olajuwon.

The Jayhawks, 0-1, took the early lead on the outside shooting of Henry, who had 12 points at the half, but Kansas then went cold trying to shoot over Houston's 2-3 zone defense.

The visitors shot only 32 percent from the field in the first half.

Houston guard Reid Gettys aided the victory with a school-record 15 assists. The old mark was 14, set by Poo Welch in 1970.

Miami U.....63
Indiana (19).....57

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Ron Harper, the Mid-American Conference freshman of the year last season, scored 16 of his game-high 26 points in the second half as Miami of Ohio upset No. 19 Indiana 63-57 in the opening game for both basketball teams Saturday.

Indiana, which was 20-0 against teams from Ohio here in Assembly Hall, and 16-2 in the overall series with Miami, only made only 15 of 28 attempts from the free-throw line. The Hoosiers missed six of 10 free throws in the second half.

The Hoosiers took their first lead of the game, 31-29, with 17:52 remaining on a field goal by Mike Giomi. Indiana, which had not lost to the Redskins since 1944, led one more time on a jump shot by Uwe Blab with 17:40 remaining that made the score 33-31.

Harper, a 6-foot-7 forward who also was the game's leading rebounder with 13, then hit a three-point play with 17:06 remaining to give the Redskins the lead for good. Another basket by Harper and two free throws by Chuck Dahn gave the Redskins a 38-33 advantage. Miami went on to take its biggest lead of the game, 47-39 with 12:36 left, on a layup by Harper.

Indiana closed to within four twice in the final minutes, but each time Miami withstood the rally.

Miami hit 13 of 20 field goals in the second half for 65 percent and shot 52 percent for the game.

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — Senior forward James Banks scored 31 points and senior guard Vern Fleming added 27 as No. 16 Georgia defeated host Western Kentucky 85-68 to win the Wendy's Classic college basketball tournament Saturday.

Georgia, 2-0, jumped out to lead by as many as 13 in the first half at 28-15 with 6:57 left. Western Kentucky, 1-1, trimmed the lead to 30-26 with 3:49 left in the half but the Hilltoppers trailed 38-32 at intermission.

The Bulldogs outscored Western Kentucky 14-4 at the start of the second half, leading 61-44 with 9:58 to play, their longest lead. Georgia shot 63 percent the second half on 17 of 27 from the field, while Western Kentucky hit only 44 percent on 16 of 36. Georgia shot 55 percent for the game on 32 of 58.

Salley Leads Fayetteville Past Wilson Hunt, 35-14

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

Running back Steve Salley scored three touchdowns and No. 1 Fayetteville Byrd intercepted five passes to beat Wilson Hunt 35-14 in the semifinals of state 4-A high school football playoffs.

Byrd, one of three undefeated teams remaining in the playoffs, will play Greensboro Page on Friday for the state 4-A title. Page rallied to nip North Forsyth 7-3 on a broken play to move into the finals for the fourth year in a row.

In the 3-A semifinals, No. 3 Thomasville downed No. 2 Asheville Reynolds 15-12 and No. 10 Eastern Randolph defeated ninth-ranked SouthWest Edgecombe 34-21.

No. 1-ranked Randleman, the defending 2-A champ, rallied from an 11-point deficit in the second half to slip past No. 2 Sylva-Webster 29-25 and No. 10 East Carteret upended No. 8 Fuquay-Varina 14-7 in overtime.

In the 1-A finals, No. 9 Robbinsville won its fifth straight title with a 28-6 victory over unranked Creswell.

Salley, who rushed for 93 yards on 27 carries, scored on runs of 2, 2 and 4 yards to lead the Eagles, 13-0.

Linebacker Bruce Yeomans recovered a fumble and intercepted a pass to set a pair of fourth-period touchdowns by the Eagles, whose longest scoring drive was 42 yards.

Hunt, 11-2, lost three of seven fumbles along with the five interceptions. Running back Juan Jackson led Hunt with 79 yards on 22 carries, but only eight of those yards came in the second half.

North Forsyth, 9-3, which lost to Page in its regular-season finale 35-0, led 3-0 on a 24-yard field by goal by Ben Hill in the third period.

The Pirates, 12-1, stopped North Forsyth on downs at the Page 49 with 3:15 left in the fourth quarter to set up the winning touchdown on quarterback Todd Ellis' 56-yard TD pass to running back Otis Jordan with 2:27 left.

The play was designed to go to wide receiver Stafford Moser, but Ellis was unable to find him and went to Jordan instead.

In the 3-A semifinals, running back Kevin Sanders' 90-yard run with 8:17 as unbeaten Thomasville handed Asheville Reynolds its first defeat. Sanders rushed for 194 yards on 22 carries.

Running back Bobby Bowens' 2-yard run in the opening period gave Reynolds a 6-0 lead. But Sanders hit Marty Hogan with a 25-yard halfback pass for a touchdown and Vince Steele booted the PAT to give Thomasville a 7-6 lead.

Running back Carey Metts rushed for 114 yards to lead Reynolds.

Running back Leroy Crutchfield gained 216 yards to key Eastern Randolph to its 12th victory in 13 games. Crutchfield scored three touchdowns on runs of 15 and 18 yards as Eastern Randolph grabbed a 20-7 halftime lead.

Crutchfield added an 11-yard touchdown run in the second half.

Running back Jerome Staton gained 201 yards and scored one touchdown to key SouthWest Edgecombe, 11-2.

In the 2-A seminfinals, Goss scored on a 1-yard run with 3:31 left to lift Randleman past previously unbeaten Sylva-Webster, 12-1. The touchdown was set up by an interception by Goss, who rushed for 189 yards and three TDs and also picked off three passes as a defensive back.

Sylva-Webster led 25-14 going into the final period, but Goss' 2-yard run early in the period cut the lead to 25-22 and his second score — his 36th of the season — gave Randleman, 12-0, the lead for good.

Sylva-Webster quarterback Brian Bryson threw for 146 yards.

In the other 2-A semifinal, fullback Ervin Newkirk's 1-yard run gave East Carteret the victory.

Fuquay-Varina, 11-2, won the toss in overtime and elected to give the Mariners, 12-1, the first shot at scoring. After Newkirk's score on second down, Fuquay-Varina lost three yards on its first three plays and a fourth-down pass fell incomplete.

Fuquay-Varina defensive back Tommy Davis returned an interceptin 28 yards to give the Bengals a 7-0 lead in the first period. But Steven Avery returned the ensuing kickoff 88 yards to tie it up.

Falcons Topple Williamston

GREENSBORO — Mike Byers scored on runs of 74 and 31 yards in the fourth quarter, and Southeast Guilford capitalized on a pair of Williamston fumbles to take a 21-7 victory in the state 3-A Conference Division II Eastern Championship Friday.

Byers finished the game with 162 yards on 15 carries for the Falcons. Southeast Guilford rolled up 284 yards rushing on 46 attempts on the night.

But while the Falcons were grinding out yardage on the ground, James Ward connected on nine of 15 passes for 149 yards for Williamston. Michael Peele caught seven of those attempts for 113 yards.

Williamston took the opening kickoff and drove down to the Falcons' four yard line, but the Tigers' first fumble of the night was recovered to stop the scoring threat.

Southeast Guilford marched 96 yards with the help of a 42-yard pass from quarterback Scott Simpson to fullback Danny Maye. Randy Long carried the ball in for the touchdown from five yards out with 2:45 remaining in the first period.

The Tigers continued to have trouble on offense on their second possession of the game, as they drove to the 18 before a 15-yard holding penalty and a 10-yard loss on a quarterback sack put Williamston out of scoring range.

Williamston knotted the score at 7-7 with 1:19 left in second quarter on a seven-yard run by Al Willingham capping an 80-yard drive. Rodney Conner kicked the extra point. The Tigers pulled off a flea flicker play to move the ball 42 yards during the scoring drive. Ward passed to Peele for 15 yards on the play, and Peele lateraled to Larry Brown for 27 more.

Byers added a 31-yard touchdown with 4:26 on the clock, and Paul Yodis kicked his third extra point of the night to set the final margin. The Falcons had recovered a Williamston fumble at the Tigers' 30 yard line.

Southeast Guilford finished the season with an 11-2 record, while Williamston closed the year at 10-3.

Buffalo Expects Trouble Against Dickerson, Rams

By The Associated Press

After having difficulty with one Los Angeles team, the Buffalo Bills expect more trouble with another when they meet the Rams in a battle of playoff-hopeful National Football League clubs Sunday.

"The Rams are such a difficult team to prepare for because, if you become preoccupied with stopping (running back Eric) Dickerson, they can hurt you in so many other ways," said Buffalo Coach Kay Stephenson. "(Quarterback) Vince Ferragamo is having a super year and they have great receivers like Mike Barber and Preston Dennard to torment the secondary."

After last week's 27-24 loss to the Los Angeles Raiders, the Bills have a 7-5 record in the American Conference East, same as the Rams who are tied for first in the NFC West after losing last week to Washington 42-20.

"This game is crucial for both of us," said Rams Coach John Robinson. "I think we're both teams that have to bring something extra to the game in order to win consistently."

Both teams have something else in common — quarterbacks who have been injured recently. But Ferragamo and Buffalo's Joe Ferguson are both expected to start.

Robinson assesses the Bills as one of the league's "dangerous" clubs.

"Buffalo seems to be a team that finds a way to win," he said. "They don't have any overwhelming statistics, but they have Joe Cribbs and Joe Ferguson."

In other games Sunday, Philadelphia is at Washington; Minnesota is at New Orleans; San Francisco at Chicago; New England at the New York Jets; Houston at Tampa Bay; Baltimore at Cleveland; the Giants at the Los Angeles Raiders; Denver at San Diego; Kansas City at Seattle and Green Bay at Atlanta.

Monday night's game pits Cincinnati at Miami. In games on Thursday, Detroit trounced Pittsburgh 45-3 and Dallas beat St. Louis 35-17.

The 10-2 Redskins are 15½-point favorites over the 4-8 Eagles, the largest spread of the year in the NFL.

"I don't think we'll take the Eagles lightly," said Washington Coach Joe Gibbs. "We know they have had problems but they gave us a battle earlier this year and have played a lot of tough games."

Gibbs' biggest task would seem to be to keep the Redskins from looking ahead to the Dec. 11 showdown in Dallas with the Cowboys, who moved one-half game ahead of Washington Thursday with their victory over St. Louis.

"I have told the players that the Philadelphia game is just as important as the one in Dallas," said Gibbs, who says his team needs the home field advantage in the playoffs if it is to return to the Super Bowl. "We want this game as much as any on our schedule."

Both the Vikings and Saints are in dogfights. Minnesota is 7-5 and in a four-team scramble in the NFC's Central Division, leading Detroit and Green Bay by one game and Chicago by two.

Similarly, the Saints are part of the NFC Western Division pack, 6-6 and second, one game behind co-leaders Los Angeles and San Francisco and one game ahead of last-place Atlanta.

"It's going to go right down to the last week or so, probably in every division," said Grant, whose Vikings were one of a few dominant NFC teams in the 1970s. "This is the crucial game. This is the one we must win. There are a few teams still downtrodden, but everybody else seems to be very competitive."

Saints Coach Bum Phillips said Minnesota "hasn't in a long time had the real dominant people, but they have good people and they play hard and they consistently win. They are really well coached."

SPORT LINE

To The Sports Editor:

I am writing in response to a letter published last week in this column written by Mr. David Lee, who insists upon comparing East Carolina to Carolina in repspect to their football teams. He states that UNC has a far better team than ECU and wishes the two teams would play each other to "set everything straight," and that UNC is not scared to play ECU but has nothing to gain and everything to lose. Furthermore, he says "Carolina is expected to win."

The excuse of Carolina having everything to lose and nothing to gain is a very weak one. Carolina had seven straight wins this year because they played opponents which are not in the top 40 temas in the country. What would happen if one of these schools "lucked out" and beat Carolina. It would be worse than if East Carolina beat them.

The ECU-UNC rivalry was a great one. This rivalry was great for the state and for college football in general.

As for Carolina being expected to win, I wonder WHO expects them to win? An avid group of Carolina fans, obviously, but nationwide I think the game would be viewed from a different perspective. ECU is ranked in this week's top 20 but Carolina is deservedly absent. So considering the rankings and their respective schedules ECU would be the obvious choice to the oddsmakers.

I agree with Mr. Lee on one point, I wish the two teams could play to "set everything straight." ECU has chosen the right road to success and national recognition by playing ranked teams across the country and if they continue to play as they did this year, it may be Carolina contacting ECU for a game and their great rivalry will continue.

Malone, 76ers Teach Sampson A Lesson

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

It was the first confrontation between pro basketball's resident super center and the rookie who just might take his place. Not unexpectedly, the veteran taught the kid a few things.

Moses Malone, the three-time most valuable player in the National Basketball Association, led the champion Philadelphia 76ers to a 115-101 triumph over Ralph Sampson and the Houston Rockets Friday night. Malone scored 24 points to Sampson's 20 and had 13 rebounds to seven for the 7-foot-4 rookie and first pick in the NBA draft.

Malone was especially effective in the lane and under the basket, his private domain, as Philly outscored Houston 57-41 in the second half before a sellout crowd.

"The best team should win the game and that's what happened tonight," Malone said. "This was not a battle between Ralph and me. He's a team player and so am I. The victory's what counts."

Julius Erving added 22 points and eight rebounds for Philadelphia, which won its fourth straight game.

Malone liked what he saw of Sampson.

"In the open court, he can do a lot of things, but when it gets to the set position, he's got that jump shot and nothing else because I'm going to be on him," Malone said.

Elsewhere, it was Utah 126, Denver 124; Phoenix 120, Chicago 94; Los Angeles 147, New Jersey 123; Washington 120, Detroit 111; Boston 109, Atlanta 102; Golden State 110, Indiana 105; Dallas 98, Kansas City 96; San Antonio 133, San Diego 130, and Portland 100, Seattle 90.

Jazz 126, Nuggets 124

Adrian Dantley, who had 32 at halftime, poured in a league-high 47 points, including Utah's final seven, offsetting 34 points by Denver's Dan Issel and 26 for Kiki Vandeweghe. Dantley had 27 points from the free throw line.

Dantley said he usually plays well against Denver because of their run-and-gun type of offense.

"You run up and down the court like that and it's very difficult to play defense and move back to offense. I just seem to have good games against Denver, that's all."

Suns 120, Bulls 94

Phoenix coasted to its 11th straight win over Chicago, which hasn't won in the Suns' building since March 2, 1977. Larry Nance had 24 points and Maurice Lucas added 22 for Phoenix, which snapped a four-game slide. Rookie Mitchell Wiggins paced the Bulls with 23.

"They came out a little bit out of step and we took it to them," Lucas said. "We hit the boards hard. That's the way we have to play in this league if we want to keep winning."

Lakers 147, Nets 123

Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 19 points and 20 assists, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 27 and Jamaal Wilkes added 25 for the host Lakers, who welcomed Mitch Kupchak back to their lineup. Kupchak, playing for the first time since a knee injury 23 months ago, had four points and three rebounds in nine minutes.

Otis Birdsong led the Nets with 29 points.

Bullets 120, Pistons 111

Jeff Ruland notched a career-high 38 points and Washington spurted to an 18-3 blitz at the start of the final quarter to down Detroit. It was the first road victory this season for the Bullets, who saw Coach Gene Shue ejected with 50 seconds left in the first period.

Kelly Tripucka scored 31 points for Detroit.

Celtics 109, Hawks 102

Dennis Johnson had 25 points to pace Boston, which broke a four-game losing streak. Dan Roundfield had 23 points and Eddie Johnson 22 for Atlanta, which is 7-0 at home and 0-6 on the road.

"We've been playing good defense, that's what helped us tonight," said Boston's Kevin McHale. "Our offense hasn't been all that good."

Warriors 110, Pacers 105

Golden State survived a 12-point run by Indiana in the final period and rode the scoring of Mickey Johnson (22 points off the bench) and Purvis Short (21). Herb Williams collected 21 points and 11 rebounds for host Indiana.

"We knew that Indiana depended on the transition game," said Warriors Coach John Bach. "But we shut them down and played a good transition game ourselves."

Mavericks 98, Kings 96

Dallas didn't net a field goal for 7:19 of the second quarter but still managed to raise its record to 9-4.

Spurs 133, Clippers 120

George Gervin led seven San Antonio players in double figures as he put in 36 points — 20 in the first quarter — and San Diego fell to 0-10 on the road this season. The Clippers have lost 23 in a row away from San Diego.

Terry Cummings had 24 points and seven rebounds for the Clippers, and Norman Nixon hit 15 points and had 13 assists.

Trail Blazers 100, Sonics 90

Portland remained in a tie with the Lakers for the top spot in the Pacific Division, taking control by outscoring Seattle 29-10 in the second quarter. Kenny Carr led the way with 18 points and Jack Sikma had 20 and 14 rebounds for Seattle.

Memphis St. Rolls Past Tenn. State

By The Associated Press

Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk was about to circle the wagons when his Keith Lee-led Tigers finally broke the siege.

Leading by only 33-29 at halftime, the fifth-ranked Tigers loaded up in the second half to beat Tennessee State 88-60 in the first round of the Mid-South Basketball Classic Friday night.

"They controlled the tempo of the first half, and we finally got our wagons going in the second half," Kirk said. "I knew if we could get into halftime within two or three points, we could make the necessary adjustments."

Lee, now a sophomore, scored 26 points and got some help from Derrick Phillips, Phillip "Doom" Haynes and Andre Turner as Memphis State led Tennessee State by 21 points midway through the second half.

Ronnie Cage led Tennessee State with 25 points.

Memphis State was to play Southern Mississippi in the tournament final Saturday night. Southern Miss defeated North Texas State 63-61.

Fourth-ranked Georgetown beat Hawaii-Hilo 71-42 and No. 9 UCLA defeated Idaho State 85-58 in the only other games involving Top Ten teams.

Ranked teams saw action in three other tournaments. No. 14 Arkansas edged Fordham 62-61 and 20th-ranked Oklahoma edged Southern Cal 92-91 in the first round of the Great Alaska Shootout in Anchorage; 12th-ranked Michigan defeated Central Michigan 73-52 in the first round of the Spartan Cutlass Classic at East Lansing, Mich.; No. 13 Fresno State defeated North Dakota State 83-54 in the first round of the Sun Met Classic at Fresno, Calif., and 16th-ranked Georgia beat Middle Tennessee in the first round of the Wendy's Classic at Bowling Green, Ky.

Top Ten

UCLA took a 29-9 lead after 14 minutes and started the second half in like fashion, scoring 11 of the first 13 points, to handle Idaho State rather easily. Reserve forward Gary Maloncon led the Bruins with 16 points, Kenny Fields had 14 and Montel Hatcher 12.

UCLA led Idaho State 34-21 at halftime and, after running off their 11-2 spurt, led 45-23. Idaho State, which was led by Buck Chavez's 16 points, never got closer than 16 points after that.

Senior guard Fred Brown scored 17 points as Georgetown raced to a 31-13 halftime lead and cruised to victory in its season opener. The Hoyas forced Hawaii-Hilo into 14 turnovers in the first half. David Wingate added 14 points for Georgetown and Patrick Ewing had eight.

Second Ten

Joe Kleine scored 18 points, and Ricky Norton's free throw with five seconds left enabled Arkansas to hold on against Fordham. Norton's free throw made it 62-59, and Fordham's Jerry Hobbie scored an uncontested layup at the buzzer to cut the final margin to one.

That set up an Arkansas-Oklahoma semifinal as freshman guard Tim McCalister hit two free throws with three seconds left to lift the Sooners over Southern Cal. Despite Wayman Tisdale's 35 points for Oklahoma, Southern Cal rallied from 14 points down to take a 91-90 lead with 12 seconds left.

Defending NCAA champion North Carolina State defeated Alaska-Anchorage 68-60, and Santa Clara beat New Mexico 54-50 in the other two games of the tournament. N.C. State and Santa Clara meet in the other semifinal, while the four losers are paired in the consolation bracket.

At the Spartan tournament, Michigan State went to work early against Central Michigan with freshman Darryl Johnson leading the charge, and Scott Skiles topped the Spartans with 14 points. Leading 20-13, Michigan State scored 10 straight points, six by Johnson, to lead 30-13 with 3:46 left in the half. In the tournament final Saturday, The Spartans meet Western Michigan, a 73-52 winner over Fairfield.

Fresno State built a 47-32 halftime lead behind the 20 points of Bernard Thompson, who finished with 26, and beat North Dakota State 83-54 in the Sun Met tournament. Ron Anderson added 23 points for the Bulldogs. Purdue won the other game, 83-64, over Northeastern.

Georgia got 26 points from Vern Fleming and rallied in the second half to beat Middle Tennessee. That put the Bulldogs, a Final Four loser to N.C. State last spring, in the Wendy's Classic final Saturday night against Western Kentucky, which beat Georgia State 61-39. Middle Tennessee led Georgia 51-50 before Fleming led a 17-2 tear with 12 points.

Gene Sarazen was only four months past his 20th birthday when he won the United States Open Golf Championship in 1922.

Boston College Survives Scare

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — It was a day that might have struck fear in the heartiest of men — rainy, windy, raw and dark. Boston College Coach Jack Bicknell was no exception.

"It was looking a little scary," Bicknell admitted referring to the fact that Alabama had the ball on its own 20-yard line with a 13-6 lead and less than nine minutes to play.

Soon, though, Alabama would be the team with something to worry about. In an 83-second span, 15th-ranked Boston College, 9-2, turned two fumble recoveries into touchdowns. Then the Eagles withstood a last-minute threat by the No. 13 Crimson Tide, 7-3, and pulled out a 20-13 college football victory Friday.

"You just can't give up on what you believe in," Bicknell said. "You're not going to panic. I knew if we could get the ball in any kind of field position we had a chance because we had the running game going well."

Six plays after Dave Thomas recovered a fumble by Kerry Goode at the Alabama 35, Doug Flutie threw a five-yard touchdown pass to Bob Biestek. Brian Waldron's extra point tied the score, 13-13 with 6:29 remaining.

On the Crimson Tide's next offensive play, Ricky Moore fumbled and defensive end Steve Lubischer pounced on the ball at the Alabama 33. Four plays later, Biestek bulled over from the 3 for the winning touchdown with 5:06 to go.

"Fumbles killed us," said Moore, who rushed for 109 yards to crack the 100-yard mark for the fourth consecutive game. "We gave the game away in the fourth quarter. I never really had control of the ball."

The first half was played in a driving rainstorm, and both teams had trouble mounting sustained attacks. Alabama's Van Tiffin kicked field goals of 20 and 28 yards before Steve Strachan scored on a one-yard run 19 seconds before intermission to tie the score 6-6.

Shortly before the second half, a power outage attributed to a transformer problem in Foxboro knocked out the field lights, scoreboard and other electricity. But the game went on and, before the power returned 39 minutes later, Anthony Smiley raced 58 yards with a blocked punt for a touchdown to put Alabama ahead 13-6 with 4:20 left in the third quarter.

Then, the power returned to Boston College.

"The weather hurt them even though it hurt us because we're a throwing team," Bicknell said. "They're an option team and it's tough to stick the ball in (a runner's arms) and pull it out again" when the ball is wet.

Alabama had six fumbles and lost four. Boston College lost one of its three fumbles.

"We felt the weather conditions were an advantage for us because of our strong running game," said Alabama Coach Ray Perkins. "We felt like we could run the ball against them but it doesn't matter unless you hold onto it."

The game was the regular-season finale for Boston College, which plays Notre Dame in the Liberty Bowl Dec. 29. Alabama has one game left against third-ranked Auburn next Saturday before facing Southern Methodist in the Sun Bowl Dec. 24.

Alabama was outgained, 350 yards to 327, but piled up 246 on the ground. "It hurts when you beat yourself," said quarterback Walter Lewis. "We ran the ball well but because of the wind and the rain we had problems passing."

Flutie managed to cut through the soggy skies to complete 14 of 29 passes for 198 yards.

"Going into the season, we wanted to beat Clemson, Penn State and Alabama. We beat those teams," Bicknell said. "Clemson only lost to one team in America and that's Boston College. Penn State is Penn State and Alabama is Alabama. We certainly belong with the national teams."

In Friday's traditional football game, Navy used a 21-point first-quarter outburst to down Army 42-13. The game, usually a standard played in Philadelphia, was played before a crowd of 81,347 — including a total of 9,000 student from both schools — in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif.

Eric Wallace returned the opening kickoff 95 yards for a touchdown, Napoleon McCallum ran 14 yards for a touchdown and Steve Brady returned an interception 65 yards to give the Midshipmen, 3-8, a three-touchdown advantage with 3:57 gone in the game.

Army, 2-9, narrowed the difference to 21-13 on field goals of 42 and 40 yards by Craig Stopa in the second quarter and a one-yard touchdown run by Bill Turner in the third. But Rick Williamson capped a 77-yard drive on a one-yard touchdown run with 4:17 left in the third period to build the Midshipmen's lead to 28-13. Two more Navy touchdowns late in the contest, a two-yard run by Williamson and a 30-yard burst by Ron McDonald, completed the scoring.

In another game played Friday, Jose Oceguera kicked two field goals in the last 68 seconds — including a school-record 55-yarder — to give Long Beach State a 6-3 victory over Utah State.

Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino both won consecutive victories in the British Open Golf Tournament. Palmer did it in 1961 and 1962. Trevino won in 1971 and 1972.

Holmes Stops Frazier In 1st Round

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Young Marvis Frazier could have used his father's help. And maybe that wouldn't have been enough.

Frazier, 23 and a veteran of only 10 professional fights, undertook the major challenge of stepping into the Caesars Palace ring with unbeaten World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes Friday night. It proved to be a serious error in judgment.

Frazier threw the first punch, a wild left as the fight began. For all intents and purposes, he never threw another.

Holmes floored his young foe with a short right hand after 2:09 of the nationally televised affair and, with Frazier being punished unmercifully, referee Mills Lane called a halt to the bout with three seconds left in the round.

The fight was scheduled for 12 rounds. The WBC refused to recognize it as a title bout because Frazier is unranked by the organization.

"I don't know what to say, this is probably the first time I've been at a loss of words," Holmes, 34, said afterwards. The champion then said plenty.

"I didn't want to hurt him, I feared that I would. It turned into a picnic. You don't drop your hands against a man who can throw a jab 100 miles an hour."

Holmes referred to a tactic used by Frazier early on, when the son of former heavyweight champion Smokin' Joe Frazier began to dance with his hands at his sides.

"I was clowning around a little bit because he couldn't hit me with the jab," said young Frazier. "I forgot about the right hand."

The right hand knocked Frazier across the ring and onto his back. According to Lane, he arose at the count of eight but he could have saved himself some trouble by staying down.

After that, Holmes threw an estimated 19 punches without an answer. The bout ended with Holmes pounding away in Frazier's corner with the youngster's father, only a few feet away, being forced to witness the carnage.

Three times during the pounding, Holmes gestured to Lane to stop the fight. Finally, it was over.

"So many of you probably believed that young Frazier had a chance because his father is a good talker," said Holmes, who raised his record to 45-0 with 32 knockouts. "Joe and Marvis have bitten off more than they could chew."

Holmes is required by the WBC to meet top-ranked Greg Page early next year in a mandatory defense. He didn't seem too concerned about that.

"I'm going to Miami with my wife, I'm not even going to think about doing anything," said Holmes, who weighed 219 pounds. "I'm going to let them come to me. If it sounds good, OK.

"I'm not going to let these organizations dictate to me. I've had five fights this year, lightweights don't fight that much.

"I cannot buy a cup of coffee with that championship belt, I can buy a cup of coffee from what I'm earning, in fact, I could buy a coffee factory."

Holmes collected $2.7 million for his 177 seconds of work. Frazier, who weighed 200 pounds, earned $500,000.

Holmes has indicated he'd like to fight World Boxing Association champion Gerrie Coetzee in the near future but only at his price.

"I want $100 million to fight that apartheid South African," said Holmes, referring to Coetzee, who was among the standing room only crowd of 4,993 at the fight.

A lot of people questioned the wisdom of Joe Frazier in allowing his son to fight Holmes at this stage of his career. The elder Frazier, however, said he had no regrets.

"I never make a mistake," he said. "I know what I'm doing. I didn't underestimate Larry, he's a great champion. I've always had respect for Larry.

"We'll be going to the drawing board. Whatever Marvis wants to do, he'll have his father behind him 100 percent. He will learn a lot from what happened tonight."

What did Joe Frazier say to his son when the short fight was over?

"I said 'I love you, don't worry about it,'" said Frazier, 39, who embraced his son at the bout's conclusion.

"I have no regrets, I was ready," said Marvis Frazier. "This is just one night. I'm young, there'll be another day."

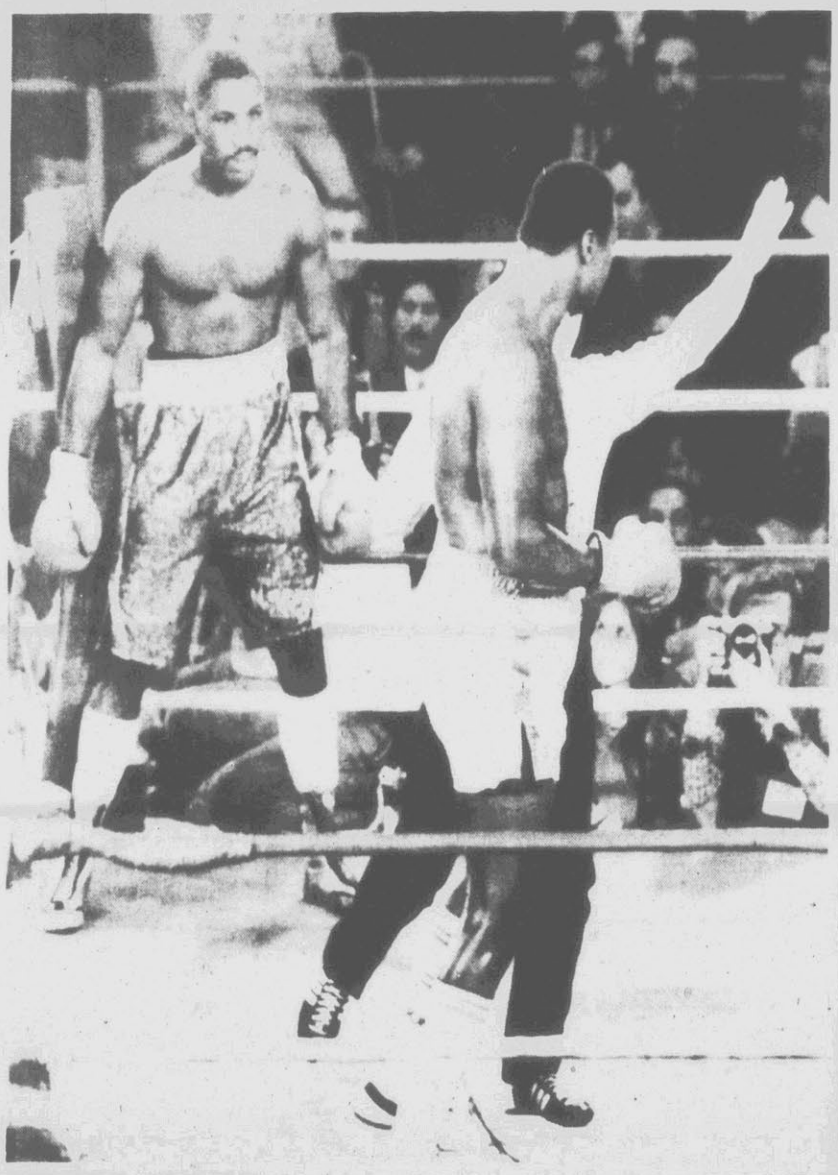

Eddie Futch, who used to be the trainer for Joe Frazier and now has a similar job for Holmes, expressed the feeling that Marvis wasn't ready for such a big fight.

"I felt that Marvis needed at least a year's more experience, possibly five or six more fights," said Futch. "He would have gotten the experience from fellows who could give him a good contest, get him more prepared for the problems he would face in an opponent of Holmes' caliber.

"I've been very close to Marvis for a long time. I hated to see him (Marvis) put into this fight at this time because I didn't think he was adequately prepared."

Also, Mark Holmes, 160, Larry's unbeaten younger brother, stopped Henry Walker, 162, in the eighth and final round of their middleweight bout; Wilfredo Vasquez, 119¾, knoked out Jose Rodriguez, 125¼ in the 10th and final round of their junior featherweight bout, and Edwardo Dominguez, 138, stopped Steve Heron, 139, on cuts in the third rund of their junior welterwight fight scheduled for 10 rnds.

Frazier Still Wants To Be A Fighter

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The questions seemed to hurt almost as much as the tremendous right hands he took from Larry Holmes, but Marvis Frazier handled them with composure.

"I still want to be a fighter," he insisted after Holmes stopped him Friday night at 2:57 of the first round.

"I have no regrets. It wasn't in the Lord's will to have it now. It's back to the drawing board."

Heavily criticized for taking the fight against Holmes with only 10 professional bouts under his belt, Frazier said it wasn't inexperience, but carlessness that led to his downfall.

"When I saw I could slip the jab, I got careless," the 23-year-old son of former heavyweight champion Smokin' Joe Frazier said. "I saw he couldn't hit me with the jab. I forgot about the right hand and I got caught."

Holmes, who ended his 17th fight as champion quickly, said he was concerned about Frazier's safety after he floored his young opponent and wanted referee Mills Lane to stop the fight earlier that Lane did.

"Sometimes I get emotional; I feel differently in there," said Holmes. "I'm not a mercenary and I don't want to hurt nobody."

Holmes said he just wanted to do his job, earn his money ($2.5 million for 2:57 of work) and not hurt anybody or get hurt in the process.

"I'm just a fighter, a businessman, a family man and an American trying to do his job," the World Boxing Council heavyweight champion said.

Holmes had some words of advice for young Frazier.

"I hope he understands, I know his father understands, that we're in it for what we can get out of it," he said.

Holmes, who had earlier said he would retire at the end of 1983, said the nature of the sport made it hard to follow through on such a promise.

"They don't let you retire, you have to quit," he said. "Consider me in retirement until a better offer comes around."

Joe Frazier said he had no thoughts of trying to stop the fight as his son absorbed a beating above him in his corner.

"I'm not the type of guy to throw the towel in," he said. "A man should stand on his own."

But the elder Frazier, who said before the fight that Holmes was making too many mistakes in his recent fights and could be taken advantage of, admitted it didn't happen this time.

"He didn't make any mistakes in this fight," Joe Frazier said. "I didn't underestimate Larry; he's a great champ. I've always had respect for Larry."

Spinks Pounds Rivadeneyra

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Michael Spinks physically hurt Oscar Rivadeneyra early and then patiently destroyed him mentally Friday night to retain his undisputed world light heavyweight boxing championship.

Spinks ran his professional record to 24-0 by cutting Rivadeneyra below his left eye in the second round and then stopping the No. 1-ranked World Boxing Association challenger in the 10th round. It was Rivadeneyra's first defeat in 20 professional fights.

"He has just the right punches to give a guy like myself trouble," Spinks said of Rivadeneyra. "But he never hurt me. I took control of the fight in the second round.

"I was killing his mental state because he couldn't hit me like he wanted to. But he's one tough cookie, he gave me all I wanted in a fight."

Warning To Duck Hunters — Although it may seem ridiculous for me to warn you not to go out and shoot yourself this hunting season, a four-year study of hunting accidents indicated that such a warning might just save your life or at least considerable embarassment. The study, conducted by Jim Dabb, supervisor of hunter safety education programs for the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, included 39 states. It showed that migratory game bird hunters were just as likely to shoot themselves as other types of hunters. Of 342 accidents involving migratory game bird hunting, 76 were the result of self-inflicted wounds.

The need for safety can never be overemphasized, particularly among waterfowlers, who often pursue their sport from the close confines of a blind.

Too many hunters leave loaded guns precariously perched where one wag of a tail from a Lab can send them crashing down. Too many times they shoot first and think later.

Good Migration — Because water conditions were generally better throughout Canada this spring and summer, the fall migration of waterfowl is expected to be improved over last year throughout the four flyways.

Ducks Unlimited biologists in Canada (where 70 percent of the continental waterfowl population breeds) say that overall, migration should be larger than in 1982, with improvements from breeding grounds in all provinces save Manitoba and Ontario.

Another Potential Record — Big blues are biting hard along the Outer Banks and one of them is a potential world record. Fishing with 16-pound test line last Tuesday, Joe Malet of Nags Head landed a 20.5 pound chopper which measured 35 inches in length with a girth of 22 inches. The big fish was taken from the surf at South Nags Head. According to a spokesman for the International Game Fish Association, the 16-pound test bluefish category is wide open with the earlier pending record being a 20-pound, two ounce blue caught Sept. 18 at Point Lookout Beach, Long Island, N.Y. Malet's catch was the second potential record served up by Outer Banks waters in less than two weeks. On Nov. 12, a four-year old IGFA record for red drum caught by a woman using 20-pound test line was put in jeopardy with the catch of a 65 pounder south of the Avon Pier by Lun Gottert of Bakertown, W.Va.

Wildlife Note — You think you live in cramped quarters? Cave dwelling bats may roost at densities of up to 300 bats per square foot. And a single cave may house more than 40 million bats.

State, Virginia, Clemson In Wins

By The Associated Press

North Carolina State may be only a remnant of the team that won last year's NCAA basketball title, but the distinction was lost on the University of Alaska-Anchorage.

Relishing the opportunity to knock off the defending national champions, the Seawolves gave N.C. State all it could handle before succumbing 68-60 Friday in the opening round of the Great Alaska Shootout.

Virginia, meanwhile, overcome the absence of departed Ralph Sampson and suspended Othell Wilson to cruise past Lafayette 71-59 in the opening round of the United Virginia Bank-Cavalier Invitational Tournament. Clemson crushed Wagner 105-55 to start the the 11th annual IPTAY tourney.

Three other Atlantic Coast Conference basketball teams get their seasons underway today. Top-ranked North Carolina faces Missouri in Greensboro, Duke hosts Vanderbilt and Maryland entertains Johns Hopkins. N.C. State plays Santa Clara, 64-40 winner over New Mexico, in the second round of the Alaska Shootout. Virginia seeks the championship of its tournament against George Mason while Clemson plays Marquette in the IPTAY finals.

Coach Jim Valvano insisted that his 2-0 Wolfpack didn't suffer a letdown after last week's upset of third-ranked Houston. However, N.C. State's performance was notably poorer Friday than during the earlier Tip Off Classic.

Although it trailed but once, the Wolfpack never was able to pull away from the stubborn Division II Seawolves. Alaska-Anchorage narrowed the margin to 54-52 with 6:30 left before unranked N.C. State ran off eight straight points.

The Wolfpack's normally potent outside shooters had a poor day. Freshman forward Russell Pierre led N.C. State with 17 points, while frontliners Lorenzo Charles and Alvin Battle scored 13 and 12 respectively.

"If we gave out game balls, it would go to Battle," said Valvano. "He came in and played well and got us some ... baskets we hadn't been getting."

Freshman Tom Sheehey scored 16 points for 1-0 Virginia, which could win its invitational tournament for the seventh year in a row. The Cavaliers grabbed a quick 20-6 lead and were never threatened.

"The defense allowed us to take control of the game early," said Coach Terry Holland. "I was pleased with our overall effort except for our free throwing (11 of 21), which we need to work on."

Jim Miller added 15 points for Virginia, while Rick Carlisle and Ricky Stokes had 14 apiece.

Vince Hamilton, who missed last season with an injury, and center Murray Jarman scored 17 of Clemson's first 19 points as the Tigers roared past Wagner. Jarman finished with 23, and Hamilton had 14. Three other Clemson players scored in double figures.

"We had three goals going into this game," said Clemson coach Bill Foster. "First, we were going to try not to give up a lot of baskets in transition; second, not give up any second shots; and third, play good defense."

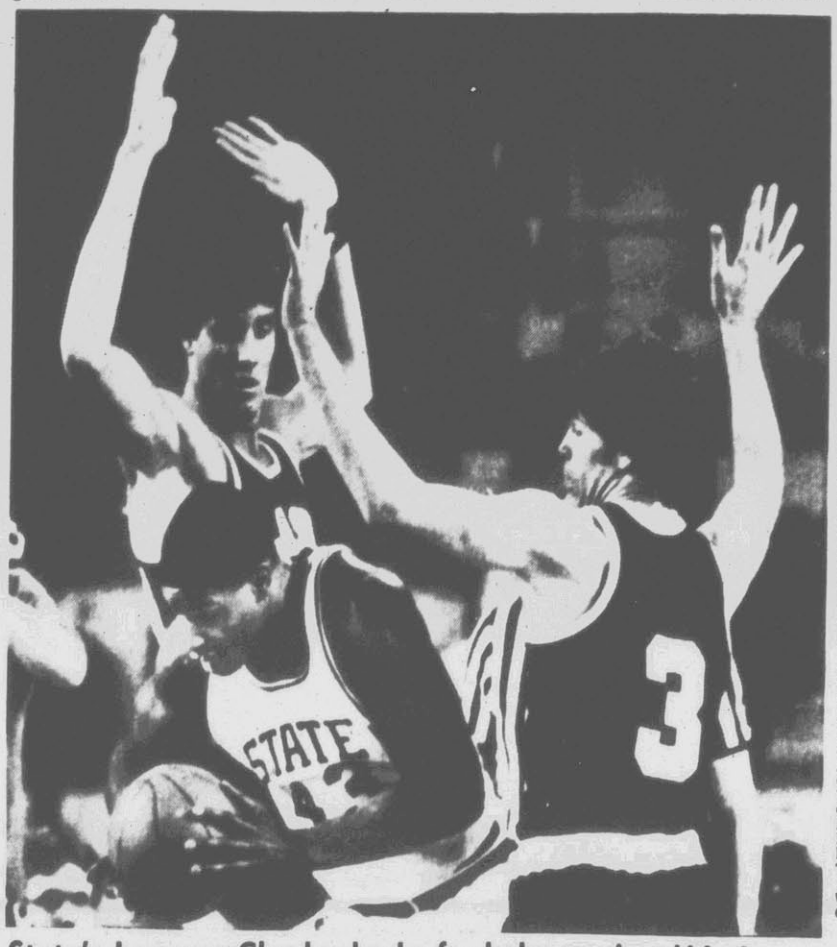

Foster started a new policy by designating eight players as starters and five "orange aides" as substitutes.

Mancini Makes Quick Knockout

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini barely worked up a sweat in stopping Johnny Torres in the first round and the World Boxing Association lightweight champion said that was fine with him.

"I can go out and dance tonight and not have to worry about soaking my body," Mancini said after stopping Torres at 2:58 of the opening round Friday.

"I haven't had a short fight in awhile," he added. "It felt good to have one."

Mancini, who last fought Sept. 15 when he stopped Orlando Romero in the ninth round to retain his title, said the brief non-title fight against Torres keeps him on line for a January title defense, probably against former World Boxing Council champion Bobby Chacon.

"I was looking to fight Bobby in November or December," said Mancini. "Now I'm hoping January. I'm going right back to camp."

Mancini sent Torres to the canvas about two minutes into the first round but Torres managed to get to his feet at the count of eight.

Mancini moved in to finish him off, connecting with two left hands that sprawled Torres out for the count.

"I caught him good, right on the chin," the champion said. "He went down hard. You could tell it wasn't a fluke punch."

Torres was taken to Desert Hospital following the bout and released when X-rays were negative. His manager, Jack Kallen, said Torres was conscious but could remember nothing about the brief fight.

"This fight proves I can handle the bigger guys," said Mancini.

The fight marked the return of Mancini to Las Vegas and Caesars Palace where last Nov. 13 he knocked out South Korean contender Duk Koo Kim in the 14th round. Kim never regained consciousness and died a few days later in a Las Vegas hospital.

On the undercard, Eduardo Dominguez, 138, Los Angeles, stopped Steve Hearon, 139, of Houston, on a cut over the left eye at 1:26 of the third round of a scheduled 10-round junior welterweight bout. It was the second straight loss on a cut for Hearon, 24-4, who is ranked No. 4 by the WBC and No. 8 by the WBA.

bloodied challenger to the canvas at 1:42 of the 10th round. His corner threw in the towel and the fight was stopped.

"The knockout wasn't easy," said Spinks, who earned $500,000. "It started with a couple of jabs, I teased him a lot, stayed after him. I gave him the chance for some shots, made him commit himself, and then took it away. It was the accumulative pressure by capitalizing on his crucial mistakes."

The challenger collected $100,000 for the bout.

Spinks now is looking forward to "cleaning up the division" by fighting all legitimate challengers, including Canadian champion Donnie Lalonde, who scored a third-round knockout of Akbor Muhammad of Omaha, Neb., in a fight on the undercard.

Sitting between Lalonde and middleweight James Shuler of Philadephia, who scored a first-round knockout of Leroy Green of Kansas City, Kan., Spinks said he would like to fight again early in 1984, perhaps against Dwight Braxton, who he beat to claim the undisputed championship.

Lalonde, who had little trouble knocking out Muhammad for the third time, said he looks forward to a bout with Spinks.

"It will be the last one for Michael as champion ... you showed me a lot of flaws out there tonight" Lalonde said to Spinks. "I'd win it in five rounds.

Arnsparger Admits Talking With LSU

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Bill Arnsparger, defensive coordinator for the Miami Dolphins, confirmed Friday that he has had "exploratory" talks with Athletic Director Bob Brodhead about the Louisiana State University head football coaching job now held by Jerry Stovall.

Brodhead, the Dolphins' director of finance until he became LSU athletic director in 1982, was to make a recommendation on whether to retain Stovall during a meeting next Friday of the LSU Board of Supervisors.

There is strong speculation that Brodhead will recommend firing Stovall, 22-21-2 after four years of a five-year contract. There was talk, too, that Brodhead would recommend hiring Arnsparger as head coach and also former LSU quarterback coach Mack Brown as offensive coordinator.

LSU finished with a disappointing 4-7 record this season after an 8-3-1 campaign that included a 21-20 loss to Nebraska in the 1983 Orange Bowl. With an 0-6 record, the 1983 Tigers also finished last in the Southeastern Conference standings for the first time ever.

In a telephone interview Friday from Miami, Arnsparger confirmed he talked with Brodhead "within the last 10 days to two weeks," but insisted the discussions were "exploratory."

"I was interested in what Bob had to say . . . interested in finding out more about it," said Arnsparger.

"Nothing's been offered. LSU's always been a good place to be, and I'd be interested."

Collins Looks For Different Results In NY

NEW YORK (AP) — The last time they played, the New England Patriots ran all over the New York Jets thanks to a club-record 212-yard rushing day by former East Carolina running back Tony Collins.

But Collins thinks things may be different in their National Football League game Sunday at Shea Stadium.

"Their defensive line has played better the last couple of games," said the Patriots' running back. "It'll be a little bit tougher for us this time, I think. We might have to do some different things."

Most particularly, Collins was thinking of running away from Joe Klecko, the tackle who anchors the new version of the "Sack Exchange."

Klecko was an end in the old Front Four, but was moved to tackle by Coach Joe Walton early in the season in an attempt to shore up the Jets' defense against the run. Kenny Neil, younger and quicker than Klecko, whose mobility has been hampered by an injury that required surgery during the off-season, moved outside to right end.

"Klecko is very strong inside," Collins said. "He has really helped their line."

On the other side of the Front Four, of course, is Mark Gastineau, who is on his way to his best all-around season with 14 quarterback sacks, third highest in the NFL, and 71 tackles, 48 of them solo.

He expects to see a lot of Collins again Sunday.

"Collins is a player with a lot of potential," said Gastineau, when told that Collins voiced expectations to run some plays at him. "If they want to run against me, it's their perogative. I'm willing to accept the challenge. I'm not going to change my game in any way."

Collins has amassed 918 yards on 169 carries for a 5.4 average so far this season to spearhead a New England rushing game that is first in the NFL with an average of 173 yards a game.

Despite this powerhouse rushing game, however, the Patriots have been an enigmatic team this season, much like the Jets.

"I told our team that New England is another one of those confusing teams scurrying around the NFL now," said Walton. "I don't know which team will come here Sunday, but I know that every team that plays the Jets always comes in ready to play."

Both the Jets and Patriots have faint hopes for the playoffs, especially the Jets. The Jets are in last place in the American Conference East with a 5-7 record while the Patriots are one game ahead of them in the standings at 6-6.

Rookie quarterback Tony Eason, who will replace injured veteran Steve Grogan, said he is more nervous about the Jets' Front Four than about his first pro start.

"What concerns me is the Sack Exchange," said Eason, the Patriots' No. 1 draft pick from Illinois. "They're always putting pressure on the quarterback. They have a lot of talent, and we'll have to be very careful carrying the ball."

RALEIGH (AP) — Linda Page scored 23 points and grabbed seven rebounds Friday night to pace No. 11 North Carolina State to a 94-57 rout of Howard in the nightcap of the Wolfpack women's basketball doubleheader.

In the first game, Tresa Brown scored 18 points, including 14 points in the second half, as North Carolina claimed a 77-64 victory over Miami of Florida.

After trading baskets, Page ignited an 8-2 spurt that gave the Wolfpack at 10-4 edge at the 15:17 mark. A 20-2 run midway through the period gave N.C. State a 30-6 cushion which it parlayed into a 47-22 halftime lead.

The lead eventually grew to 85-43 on a Jan Rogerson follow shot with 5:29 left before the Bison cut the gap to the final margin.

Robin Mayo and reserve Debbie Mulligan added 12 points apiece for the Wolfpack in their season opener, while forward Priscilla Adams scored 11 points.

For Howard, also playing its first game, Jean Matthews led the attack with 12 points while Vanness Graham chipped in 11.

Free Tickets To Shows For Students

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Hard-bitten New York City is the last place you'd expect to get something for nothing, but the Shubert Theater organization is promoting an altruistic venture called the Midtown Arts Project.

It's a citywide program that provides high school students with free tickets to top Broadway shows as a means of cultural enrichment and education.

Since September of 1982, more than 4,500 New York City high school students have seen two of Broadway's most noted shows, "Cats" and "Dreamgirls," as a result of the combined efforts of the Shuberts and the city government. Shubert president Bernie Jacobs estimates that his organization has given away more than $100,000 in tickets in the past year.

"It's just a way for the Shuberts to express our gratitude for all the people who have seen our chows," says Jacobs. "In my day, T.S. Eliot was very important in the educational process. We thought the kids of today should know about T.S. Eliot."

"Cats" is based on T.S. Eliot's "Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats," a collection of poems that has been put to music by Andrew Lloyd Weber. Jacobs also felt that "Dreamgirls" would be appropriate for city students "because of the large minority group in New York." The show traces the rise of a black female singing group not unlike the Supremes.

That's not all the Midtown Arts Project is trying to do, however. Michael Presser, the Project's director, explains that the program is an educational tool as well, with a classroom research guide book that contains information about T.S. Eliot and interviews with members of the "Cats" cast. Another such book is being put together on "Dreamgirls."

The Project selects a different city high school each week to receive a ticket allocation. A particular effort is made to select students who have never attended a Broadway show. The emphasis is placed on students who have achieved good attendance, participated in extracurricular activities or provided service to their communities. By June of 1984, it's expected that all New York City high schools will have participated in the program.

While the Shuberts provide the tickets, the Project is funded by the New York City Youth Board and the Board of Education and is associated with the New York Urban Coalition.

Jacobs says that the Shubert organization, which has 17 theaters in New York, is committed to the project as long as there are lights on Broadway.

"We have no intention of terminating it," he says. "We'll continue to look at other appropriate shows. We're not using it as a method to fill seats. The show has to be of high quality, and creatively satisfying."

$15,000 Mobil Grant To NCSA

WINSTON-SALEM — A grant of $15,000 has been made by the Mobil Foundation to the North Carolina School of the Arts in Winston-Salem, according to an announcement made by Dr. Lawrence Hart, acting chancellor of the school.

The grant has been earmarked for student aid. The Mobil Foundation has been a continuous contributor to NCSA since 1981.

"We hope it will assist NCSA in maintaining the standards of excellence in the arts for which it is so justifiably noted," says Rosemary Judge, president of the Mobil Foundation.

Shrimp Exhibit

ATLANTIC BEACH — A new exhibit on shrimp and the shrimping industry has opened at the North Carolina Marine Resources Center, Bogue Banks. The exhibit traces shrimp from the larval stage in the open ocean to harvest by the commercial shrimper, to the market, and finally, to the dinner table.

One of the most popular of all seafoods, over 300 million pounds of these crustaceans are consumed by Americans every year. Shrimping is a very important industry in North Carolina with about 6 million pounds landed annually.

The exhibit was funded by Sea Grant Marine Advisory Services and was designed in a co-operative effort by Jay Barnes of the N.C. Marine Resources Center and Bob Hines and Larry Giardina of Sea Grant. According to Hines, "The exhibit is designed to answer some of the most frquently asked questions about shrimp and the commercial shrimping industry."

The exhibit was previously displayed in the 1983 N.C. State Fair in Raleigh where it won honorable mention for exhibits. It can be seen at the Marine Resources Center weekdays from 9 to 5. The center is closed weekends until April.

Marine Center Events

ATLANTIC BEACH — Two events of interest to the public are on the calendar of the N. C. Marine Resources Center at Bogue Banks during the coming week.

At 7:30 p.m. Thursday, a lecture "Life Between the Grains of Sand: The World of Meiofauna," by Mary Watzin of the UNC Institute of Marine Sciences, will be given. It is part of the Public Understanding of Science Seminar Series.

On Saturday, at 10 a.m., a field trip to explore "Mollusks and Mullets" will be held aboard a 27-foot pontoon boat for a first-hand look at the traditional gathering of fall seafoods. Pre-registration is required for this event and can be made by calling 247-4003.

Grant To NE NC Tomorrow

ELIZABETH CITY — Northeastern North Carolina Tomorrow has received $2,360 grant from the North Carolina Humanities Committee to host a one-day symposium on "Where is the Family Farm? A Question for the Northeast," according to NCCT Board Chairman Joe Parker.

The symposium will be held March 8 from 1-5 p.m. in Elizabeth City State University's K.E. White Graduate and Continuing Education Center here.

The symposium is being held to increase public awareness about the disappearing family farms in the state.

NCCT is a private non-profit corporation located on the campus of Elizabeth City State University. Supported by federal tax funds and private gifts, the corporation encourages and assists public educational activities in the humanties for adults.

LOVE STAMP — This design of a stamp to be issued next year in honor of the finest human emotion, Love, was unveiled recently in Birmingham, Ala. The stamp is a 10-cent denomination commemorative. (AP Laserphoto)

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By JULIE HICKS

To millions of fans, Louis Armstrong was just a great entertainer — and he himself never aspired to anything more. But to ardent supporters of jazz, Armstrong was one of the most important musicians of our times — the key figure in the history of jazz and thus a formative influence on all other 20th century popular music.

In addition, he was a fascinating human being as James Lincoln Collier so aptly reveals in "Louis Armstrong: An American Genius." In this book, Collier sheds new light on Armstrong's music and on his much-misunderstood personality.

Armstrong's life began in a waif's home, where he learned to play the trumpet (incorrectly, Collier notes, resulting in life-long lip problems) and ending with his death in 1971 as one of the best-known figures in American entertainment. Against the backdrop of New Orleans, Chicago and New York during the "jazz age," Collier recreates the saga of an old-fashioned black man making it in a white world.

Collier chronicles Armstrong's rise as a musician, setting the record straight on his scrapes with the law, his relationships with his four wives and his on-again/off-again feuds with fellow musicians like Earl Hines and Zutty Singleton.

He discusses Armstrong's willingness to be used by a series of tough, hard-talking wheeler-dealers with gangland connections who became his managers. He sheds new light on Armstrong's endless need for approving audiences, his streak of jealousy, which often made him seen disloyal to old comrades, and most of all what some consider his betrayal of his gift as he increasingly opted for commercialism and stardom.

Collier analyzes in depth Armstrong's evolving musical style and his recordings, showing how he almost single-handedly remodeled jazz and, as a consequence, had a critical effect on all the music of our day, including rock, pop and even the classical music of Copland, Milhaud, Poulenc and others.

"There come at moments people who gather into themselves threads around them and weave from them a new pattern," Collier writes, "Armstrong was one of them."

Non-Stop Science Aboard Space Laboratory

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — In the interest of round-the-clock, round-the-world scientific exploration, NASA has "hot sacked" the bunks aboard shuttle Columbia for Monday's debut of the European-built laboratory known as Spacelab.

Hot sacked? "That's a Navy term meaning that when somebody gets out of the sack, you crawl into it," explained commander John Young.

The laboratory work schedule for the nine-day mission is so busy that NASA split the six-man crew into red and blue teams that will work alternating 12-hour shifts.

Spacelab, bolted into Columbia's cargo hold, was designed, built and paid for by the European Space Agency. The billion-dollar laboratory is the most spectacular gift from Europe since the French sent the Statue of Liberty to America a century ago.

It took 10 years to build the most versatile research facility ever sent into space. From the outside, it looks like one of those huge diving bells that explore the oceans. The pallet, holding instruments exposed to space, resembles a futuristic city.

The 70 experiments were provided by scientists in 11 European countries, the United States, Canada and Japan.

But the German scientist who will be the first non-American aboard a U.S. spacecraft is most anxious to play down flag-waving aspects of the first Spacelab flight. "There is no French science and no British science," said Ulf Merbold. "Science in itself is international."

Merbold and Byron Lichtenberg are the first of a new breed of non-astronaut, space-flying scientists called payload specialists. They will be joined in the Spacelab by astronauts Owen K. Garriott and Robert R. Parker, who are mission specialists trained both to work on the shuttle and in the laboratory. With Young at the controls will be pilot Brewster Shaw.

The first flight is a test of the laboratory, which will be used in more than 50 shuttle missions. Spacelab carries 38 separate scientific instruments: 27 aboard the pallet outside in the cargo bay and exposed to space, eight inside the module where the men work, and three that have components both inside and out.

Research will be in five broad areas: life sciences, in which the astronauts will perform tests on themselves and other experiments; atmospheric physics and Earth observations; astronomy and solar physics; space plasma physics — the study of the electrically charged gases in space; and materials science.

Topsy-Turvy Hours For Six Astronauts

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Six astronauts ate and slept at topsy-turvy hours as the countdown began Saturday for the longest space shuttle flight yet — a nine-day international science mission set for liftoff Monday.

At midmorning, all six sat down together for a meal. Three ate breakfast, three had dinner.

After the meal, the three-man Red Team went to bed for eight hours. The Blue Team studied flight plans and attended flight briefings until their after-midnight bedtime.

The six, including the first foreigner named to a U.S. flight, have followed the unusual timetable for several days to prepare for the mission. Each team will work a 12-hour shift, concentrating on science and technology projects in a European-built science station mounted in the cargo bay of Columbia, which is returning to space for the first time in a year.

The countdown began at 4 a.m. EST, aiming for a launch at 11 a.m. Monday. The early hours of the count went to well that at midday the launch crew was finishing many chores about 30 minutes ahead of schedule, test conductor Bob Webster reported.

But bad weather approaching the Cape could pose problems for the flight, already delayed twice since September because of technical problems. Webster said a low pressure system heading to Florida from the Midwest could produce clouds and rain showers in the launch area on Monday.

"It depends on how fast that weather system moves in," he said.

NASA would not launch the shuttle during a storm, because rain could damage the ship's protective tiles, winds could throw it off course and clouds could obscure the crew's view if they had to make an emergency landing back at the Cape.

During 145 orbits of the globe, the astronauts are to conduct more than 70 experiments in five science and technology fields. It is the most intense space research project undertaken in such a short period.

The ninth shuttle mission is filled with firsts, besides its length:

—A record sixth flight by commander John Young, who says this may be his last.

The main task is to test Spacelab.

Ten years in the making, the billion-dollar reusable laboratory is the most versatile research facility ever built for space. For the 10 European nations that designed, constructed and financed it, and for NASA, which is providing ground facilities and launch management, the flight is the culmination of the largest and most comprehensive multi-national space project.

Experiments have been provided by scientists from 11 European nations, Canada, Japan and the United States. They cover life sciences; atmospheric physics and Earth observations; astronomy and solar physics; space plasma physics, and materials processing.

"If we can do nine days up there, 24 hours a day and prove out the Spacelab and get some really good science, it would be more than I could hope for," said Young, who at 53 already has flown two Gemini missions; two Apollo flights, including a walk on the moon, and the maiden shuttle trip, also aboard Columbia, in 1981.

The other crew members are Air Force Maj. Brewster H. Shaw Jr., 38, the pilot; mission specialists Owen K. Garriott, 53, an electrical engineer, and Robert A. Parker, 46, an astronomer, and payload specialists Merbold, 42, and Byron K. Lichtenberg, 36, a biomedical engineer.

Merbold, a metals research specialist from Max Planck Institute in Stuttgart, and Lichtenberg, a biomedical engineer researcher at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, are the first of a new breed to fly the shuttle. They are not trained astronauts, but are scientists and engineers selected by their peers to conduct experiments on specific missions. They are not trained to pilot the ship as the other crew members are.

Garriott, although he has had only one previous space flight, has more time in orbit than the 23 total days logged by Young on five trips. Garriott spent 59 days aboard the Skylab space station in 1973 and he sees Spacelab as an extension of Skylab's research.

"Skylab was a little more leisurely," he said. "We were up for one-, two- and three-month intervals, which gave us better opportunity to modify and adapt our work schedule. For Spacelab we've got to do more thinking and more planning so we can hit the ground running."

To get in as much scientific work as possible, the crew has been split into the two shifts. Young, Parker and Merbold are the Red Team and Shaw, Garriott and Lichtenberg are the Blue Team.

While Young and Shaw take turns piloting Columbia at 155 miles above the Earth, the others will work in Spacelab, which is 24 feet long and 13 feet in diameter and is connected to the shuttle cabin by a 19-foot-long tunnel, 3.3 feet in diameter. It has an observation window and an airlock to raise instruments into space and is crammed with computers, furnaces, medical equipment, telescopes and other experiment gear.

Behind the lab is a 13-foot, U-shaped aluminum pallet where 16 experiments will be exposed directly to space.

The scientist-astronauts will work in shirtsleeves in the pressurized laboratory, which will remain in the cargo bay throughout the flight.

Vet Buried

TORGAU, East Germany (AP) — In a gesture of U.S.-Soviet friendship, an American veteran was buried Saturday as he had wished — in an East German town where he and other U.S. soldiers met their advancing Soviet allies 38 years ago and cut Nazi Germany in two.

Among his mourners was a contingent of Soviet troops from a nearby barracks and American officers from a U.S. military mission in Potsdam, East Germany.

Shortly before Joe Polowsky, a 66-year-old Chicago taxi driver, died of cancer last month, he wrote a letter telling relatives he wanted to be buried at Torgau, East Germany.

"Joe Polowsky being buried at Torgau on the Elbe River cannot but have a comforting, creative, positive effect upon events," he wrote in his letter. The burial would symbolize "one of the few remaining ties" between the United States and the Soviet Union, he said.

"My view is that my (burial) ground at Torgau ... was paid for with the spilling of the blood of the soldiers of the World War II Allies of East and West," the ex-G.I wrote.

Polowsky was one of the American soldiers who met the Soviet army at Torgau, on the banks of the Elbe, on April 25, 1945. The joining of the Western and Russian armies sealed the fate of Adolf Hitler's Third Reich.

Twelve days later, Hitler was dead and the Germans had surrendered.

Polowsky was buried about a mile from where the troops met. Two American and two Soviet soldiers who were part of the troop linkup in Torgau wheeled the cart bearing Polowsky's coffin, draped with an American flag, to the grave.

The only relative to attend the burial was Polowsky's son, Ted, 23.

Col. Roland Lajoie from the U.S. mission at Potsdam handed Ted Polowsky the flag that had covered his father's coffin.

About 200 East Germans from the area came to the burial.

Two U.S. Marines stationed in West Berlin followed the pallbearers.

After a riverside ceremony after the burial, Ted Polowsky quoted Christ's admonishment to "love one another, as God has loved you."

GREAT NEWS FOR NORTH CAROLINA HOME BUYERS!

Now The First American Mortgage puts the percentages in your favor!

10 3/8%

payment rate adjusted yearly

Looking for a 30-year mortgage for your next home? Check out the "affordable mortgage" at First American. This Adjustable Rate Mortgage (ARM) is the modern way to home ownership.

Compare The First American Mortgage to any other mortgage. The big difference between mortgage lenders is the index used to determine adjustments in the rate to your mortgage. We use the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's Monthly Median Cost of Funds Index. This is the most stable of all indices used to determine ARM rates. During the past 30 years, through a volatile economy, this Index has fluctuated much less than any other of the indices that are being used to determine mortgage rate.

The First American Mortgage is the only one that has a limit on interest rate and payment changes. It is truly the affordable mortgage.

The First American Mortgage features:

- The initial rate will always be less than a 30-year fixed rate.
- Your monthly payment stays the same for the term duration.
- The interest rate cannot go up or down more than 5% during the loan duration.
- Choose from three terms: one, three and five year term schedules.

Business Notes

REGIONAL MANAGER

Greenville native Richard Bilbro has been named regional chain manager for Miller Brewing Company's Midwest sales region, with responsibility for managing and coordinating the efforts of national retail sales accounts in Missouri, Iowa, and part of Illinois.

A graduate of East Carolina University with a bachelor's degree in business administration, Bilbro joined Miller in 1981 as an area manager in the Capitol sales region. He was formerly a division sales supervisor for the Del Monte Sales Co.

Miller is an operating company of Philip Morris Inc.

HONORED BY COMPANY

Herb Lee, owner and president of Heritage Personnel Services of Greenville, announced that Judy Via has been named "personnel consultant of the year" by the firm for the second consecutive year.

The spokesman said that Heritage completed its second year of operations on Sept. 30.

PMAC-V MEETING

The Purchasing Managers' Association of the Carolinas-Virginia (PMAC-V) will holds its eastern regional chapter dinner meeting here Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at Western Sizzlin Steak House on East 10th Street.

Bill Wehr, senior purchasing agent for Abbott Laboratories in Rocky Mount, will present the program, discussing motivation to obtain certified purchasing manager certification.

WACHOVIA POST

Julie H. Smith has been elected assistant vice president at Wachovia Mortgage Co. in Greenville, the firm announced.

A Washington native, Mrs. Smith joined Wachovia in 1968 as a loan processor and transferred to Wachovia Mortgage Co. in 1974 in her current position as loan originator. She was named mortgage officer in 1977.

Wachovia Mortgage, a member company of Wachovia Corp. of Winston-Salem, has offices in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

NET INCOME UP

Branch Corp. announced that consolidated net income for the nine months ended Sept. 30 was $12,147,000, compared with $8,882,000 for the first three quarters of 1982. Consolidated income before securities losses for the period was $12,551,000, up from $10,424,000 in 1982.

For the third quarter ended Sept. 30, consolidated net income was $3,419,000, compared with $3,140,000 a year ago. Income before securities losses for the quarter was $3,787,000, down from $3,969,000 last year.

GAINS REPORTED

Heilig-Meyers Furniture Co. reported that for the quarter ended Sept. 30, earnings rose by 94.6 percent to $2,059,000 on revenues of $31.5 million, compared to earnings of $1,058,000 on revenues of $26.5 million a year ago.

For the six months ended Sept. 30, earnings increased by 48.2 percent to $5,094,000, compared with $3,437,000 for the same period in 1982. Revenues rose to $65.1 million from $58.4 million last year.

Hyman Meyers, board chairman, said directors declared a three for two stock split of the company's 4,152,421 common shares outstanding. A cash dividend of 12 cents per share, based on common shares outstanding prior to the stock split, was also declared.

NEW BOARD MEMBER

Pam Kachmer, vice president of First State Bank and manager of its downtown branch here, has been elected to the bank's board of directors.

Ms. Kachmer, who has been in banking for 15 years, has been associated with First State for nine years.

A Windsor native, the new board member is a graduate of Chowan College, East Carolina University, and the Carolina School of Banking at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Ms. Kachmer is currently serving as Pitt County Key Banker and is a past chairman of Group I of the North Carolina Bankers Association.

EARNINGS INCREASED

Jack Eckerd Corp. announced that its 1984 fiscal year first quarter net earnings rose 20.9 percent to $11.1 million from $9.2 million a year earlier.

Sales for the quarter, which ended Oct. 29, were $543 million, an increase of 15 percent over sales of $472.1 million in the comparable quarter last year.

Sales of the Eckerd Drug Co. were $472.6 million for the quarter, an increase of 15.1 percent over last year's first quarter sales of $410.5 million. Operating profit was $28.3 million, an increase of 23.7 percent over $22.9 million reported a year earlier. The drug chain currently has 1,364 stores.

DIVIDEND DECLARED

The board of directors of Peoples Bancorp. declared a fourth quarter dividend of 33 cents per share of common stock, payable Dec. 30 to shareholders of record on Dec.21.

The dividend brings the total declared dividends for 1983 to $1.30 per share, Peoples said, compared to $1.24 per share in 1982.

Peoples Bank & Trust Co., a subsidiary of the Rocky Mount headquartered corporation, has 60 branches in 31 North Carolina communities.

RECORD INCOME

J.C. Penney Co. Inc. reported that income from continuing operations in the third quarter rose 18.6 percent to a record $94 million from $80 million in 1982. Results exceeded the previous record level for the quarter set in 1981.

For the nine months, earnings were $207 million, up from 1982's $196 million.

Third quarter sales of Penney stores and catalog increased 6 percent to $2,660 million from $2,509 million a year ago. Volume for the nine months amounted to $7,142 million, a gain of 4 percent from $6,870 million in 1982. Excluding discontinued merchandise lines, sales rose 8.2 percent for the quarter and 5.9 percent for the nine months.

NEW ASSOCIATE

Connally Branch of Realty World-Clark-Branch Realtors announced that Glenwood P. (Geep) Johnson Jr. has joined the Greenville firm, specializing in residential properties.

A Goldsboro native, Johnson attended East Carolina University, majoring in psychology. At ECU, he was assistant ads manager for the East Carolinian campus publication for three years and prior to joining Clark-Branch Realtors was director of advertising for the Greenville Advantage.

HAWAII TRIP

Myra Garrett, travel consultant with Greenville Travel Center on Arlington Boulevard, returned recently from a familiarization trip to Honolulu, Hawaii, sponsored by United Airlines.

The trip consisted of hotel inspections and tours to various attractions on the island, according to Mary Wesley Harvey, travel center manager.

JOINED FIRM

William C. Douglass has joined First American Federal Savings & Loan Association as regional coordinator for business development, operating out of the company's east regional office in Kinston.

A native of New Bern, the new coordinator is a graduate of East Carolina University

REPORT CITED

First Union Corp. said its 1982 annual report received first place awards in two national competitions.

The Nicholson Award was given to First Union by the National Association of Investment Clubs for having produced "the best 1982 annual report for the individual investor."

The corporation also won a first place award in the financial industry category of Financial World Magazine's 43rd annual competition.

Poland Is Buying Oil, Then Selling At Loss

NEW YORK (AP) — Poland is buying Libyan oil on credit, then selling it at a loss on the spot market to raise needed cash for its ailing economy, The New York Times reported today.

Poland is losing up to $9 million on the oil, plus whatever interest the Libyans are charging, the newspaper reported. But the arrangement lets Poland convert Libyan credit into hard currency at relatively low cost.

The procedure indicates the plight of the Polish economy, which has been battered by a cutoff of credit from the West. Poland owes $26 billion to Western banks and governments.

Tadeusz Nestorowicz, Poland's foreign trade minister, said recently that Libya had granted Poland $230 million in credit to buy Libyan crude oil. Asked how the oil was used, he said, "We are selling it abroad in order to raise the money we need," the Times reported.

Cities Rated

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York is well known as the nation's largest city, but few people would identify Sandy City, Utah, as a leader in other population categories.

With a median age of 20.2 years, however, Sandy City is the nation's youngest city. It is also the most married, according to American Demographics magazine. The publication found that 85.6 percent of Sandy City's households include a married couple, the highest proportion of any city in the ranking.

The magazine, which reports on population trends and statistics, has compiled rankings of the top American cities of 50,000 or more people in a variety of categories, based on 1980 Census figures.

The overall 1980 population totals are generally well known, although experts consider it likely that some of the rankings have changed since the national head count.

New York topped that list by a wide margin, but Chicago and Los Angeles were neck and neck for second with 3,005,078 and 2,966,850 people respectively. Los Angeles was growing faster than Chicago, though, and likely has moved into second place by now.

And the same situation may also prevail in the fourth and fifth places, with the 1980 list showing Philadelphia fourth at 1,688,210, and Houston fifth at 1,595,167.

—Black population: New York, 1,788,377; Chicago, 1,197,174; Detroit, 758,468; Philadelphia, 638,788; Los Angeles, 504,301.

—Percent black: East St. Louis, Ill., 95.6 percent; East Orange, N.J., 83.2 percent; Compton, Calif., 74.9 percent; Gary, Ind., 70.8 percent; Washington, D.C., 70.2 percent.

—Percent Hispanic: East Los Angeles, Calif., 94.1 percent; Laredo, Texas, 93.0 percent; Brownsville, Texas, 83.8 percent; Pico Rivera, Calif., 76.1 percent; Hialeah, Fla., 74.3 percent.

—Percent foreign born: Hialeah, Fla., 61.9 percent; Miami, 5[illegible]7 percent; Union City, N.J., 48.7 percent; Miami Beach, Fla., 48.7 percent; East Los Angeles, Calif., 45.2 percent.

—Lowest median age: Sandy City, Utah, 20.2; East Lansing, Mich., 21.4; Orem, Utah, 21.5; West Valley, Utah, 21.7; Provo, Utah, 22.2.

—Highest share of women in the labor force: Columbia, Md., 68.9 percent; Bloomington, Minn., 67.4 percent; Alexandria, Va., 66.5 percent; Westminster, Colo., 66.5 percent; Mountain View, Calif., 65.9 percent.

—Percent of college graduates in population: Bethesda, Md., 51.5 percent; Columbia, Md., 48.2 percent; Palo Alto, Calif., 46.7 percent; Brookline, Mass., 40.4 percent.

Grain And Soybean Futures Prices Higher

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Grain and soybean futures prices were higher in light volume Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Prices opened slightly higher and stayed higher throughout the session.

Analysts said there were no new developments affecting grains to influence prices.

Walter Spilka, a grain analyst in New York with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., said most of the trade Friday was based on technical factors such as trends on price charts.

Commission houses, which handle accounts for investors, were noted buyers in corn, soybeans and soybean oil, Spilka said.

He added that prices have fallen sharply in the past two weeks, and the rebound Friday was a normal correction.

Although trade was light, Spilka said, the advance could stimulate additional buying on Monday.

Wheat prices appeared to have reached the bottom, he said, noting that the December wheat contract now cost more than corn. The price of corn had briefly traded higher than wheat because of the shortage of corn and the plentiful wheat supplies.

Wheat settled ¾ cent to 3½ cents higher with the contract for delivery in December at $3.41¾ a bushel; corn was 1¾ cents to 4¼ cents higher with December at $3.38¾ a bushel; oats were ¾ cent to 1¼ cents higher with December at $1.77½ a bushel; and soybeans were ½ cent lower to 15 cents higher with January at $7.95 a bushel.

Gold and silver futures prices were slightly higher in very light trading on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

Prices were steady through most of the session but posted a modest advance near the end of trading.

Jack Boyd, senior vice president for commodity research with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York, said buyers were encouraged by the stability in interest rate futures.

He noted that Treasury bond futures, which move inversely to interest rates, were moderately higher, and that prompted traders who had sold metals contracts earlier to buy them back.

Gold settled $1.50 to $1.70 higher with the contract for delivery in December at $377.20 a troy ounce; silver settled 6.5 cents to 7 cents higher with December at $8.60 a troy ounce.

The livestock and meat futures markets were closed Friday, because the Chicago Mercantile Exchange was moving to a new building.

Christmas Sales Season Off To Fast Start On First Day

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

Stores opened to waiting lines and popular items were already selling out on the traditional first day of the Christmas shopping season, as both merchants and consumers said better economic times put more people in a gift-buying mood this year.

Some store managers said Friday's sales were the best for the day in years, and many predicted that business through Christmas would be up 15 percent to 20 percent from a year ago.

"This is going to be the best year in the history of the store," said Gary W. Ramsey, manager of a Sears, Roebuck & Co. store in Raleigh, N.C.

"People seem to be more secure about the economy and themselves," said Ellen Thilmony, 64, as she joined the crowds Friday at Dayton's department store in Fargo, N.D.

A booming start to the Christmas season is encouraging news for merchants because holiday sales generally account for about 40 percent of the full year's business.

Big sellers Friday included telephones and telephone accessories, home computers, lingerie, sweaters, the "Cabbage Patch Kids" dolls and the "Care Bears," according to spot checks with shoppers and retailers across the nation.

Police had to be called to one Miami department store on Thursday when 150 shoppers pushed and trampled one another to buy the moon-faced Cabbage Patch dolls, which are one-of-a-kind and come with a name, footprints, "adoption papers" and personality profile. A 75-year-old man was knocked down in the frenzy at a Jefferson Ward store, officials said.

"Some people were crying because they didn't get one," said Elizabeth Figueroa, a toy department employee at the store's Lauderdale Lakes branch. "Some wanted to sue the store because we ran out."

"We actually had people camping out on our doorsteps" for the dolls, said Kenneth J. Ehli, regional vice president for the 18 Jefferson Ward stores in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Gwyn Manns of Lionel-Toy Town in Randallstown, Md., said the store couldn't keep enough Care Bears and Cabbage Patch dolls in stock. "As soon as we get them in, they're gone," she said.

Retailers also warned of possible shortages of other fast-selling items.

"For the first time in a long time, we're seeing spot shortages at Christmas," said Edward A. Brennan, chairman of Sears, Roebuck & Co., the nation's largest retailer. He warned that consumers should not wait long in looking for "very wanted" items such as video cassette recorders and some sweaters.

There were few signs of hesitation. Storekeepers in many cities said they opened their doors as much as two hours earlier than usual in anticipation of Friday's rush, and some said they were greeted by waiting lines of hundreds of shoppers.

"It's very busy, very crowded and steadily increasing every hour," said Marilynn Hamilton, assistant marketing manager at the Santa Monica Mall at Santa Monica, Calif.

Harsh weather in the Rocky Mountains and in much of the East did not appear to chill consumers' enthusiasm for getting an early start on holiday shopping.

"It may be lousy outside, but in here I get a nice, warm feeling," said Francine Myers as she braved the crowds at Macy's department store in New York City.

The fast start to this year's Christmas shopping season was no big surprise; retail sales have been increasing steadily this year in line with a stronger overall economy. Retail sales in October rose 1.1 percent from September.

Pilots Charged

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Federal investigators were called in after two striking Continental Airlines pilots were arrested with a pair of pipe bombs and pictures of at least three homes of non-striking employees, authorities said.

Frances Calvin Earley, 43, of Houston, and Charles Weldon Hall, 47, of Humble, Texas, were charged with possession of an explosive weapon and released Wednesday on $10,000 bond each, officials said.

Earley and Hall were arrested after apparently trying to avoid a routine driver's license check in San Antonio, said Department of Public Safety Trooper J.R. Holder.

While the two were stopped, an unidentified woman turned in a sack she said they had thrown from their car, officials said. The sack contained two pipe bombs, and a search of the suspects' car turned up the photos of Continental employees' homes and a variety of disguises, officials said.

The federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has launched an investigation into the men's activities, said Phillip Chojnacki, acting special agent in the agency's Houston office.

"We are investigating that situation referred to us by the Department of Public Safety. At this stage of the game, there's nothing I can legally refer to the news media," Chojnacki said.

Earley and Hall were not reached for comment, as their home telephones went unanswered Friday.

At the time of their arrest Tuesday, the two men said they worked in a drapery business, but at a bond hearing, they listed their occupations as Continental pilots, Holder said.

Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks confirmed Friday that the two were striking pilots.

"We've been totally shocked by this incident ...," Hicks said.

Greyhound Driver Hurt

By The Associated Press

The Greyhound strike entered its fourth week with new violence, as a crowbar attack on a bus leaving the terminal in Philadelphia left smashed windows and an injured driver.

Meanwhile, a striking Greyhound driver was charged Friday in San Antonio, Texas, with a shooting attack on a bus that left a bullet hole in the windshield.

And as striking workers continued to cast ballots on a proposed contract, Amalgamated Transit Union officials in Los Angeles predicted resounding defeat and announced a unanimous vote to reject the pact in Boise, Idaho.

Philadelphia police said the attack by four unidentified men Friday occurred just blocks from the Greyhound terminal, on a bus owned by Easy Rider Lines and leased by Greyhound.

The vandals "were in an auto and pulled up behind the bus, turned off the bus engine from the rear and then beat on the windows with crowbars," said Detective William Egenlauf. "They knew what they were doing."

The bus driver, who was not identified, suffered facial cuts when glass flew from the smashed windows, Egenlauf said. The six passengers and one unarmed security guard were unhurt.

No one was arrested, and pickets marching in front of the depot denied their union was responsible.

"Some sympathetic people must have done it," said striking driver Preston Foster of Sicklersville, N.J. "We're non-violent. We are not damaging anything."

The passengers were taken to the nearby Trailways terminal, where they were allowed to use their Greyhound tickets for the ride to New York.

In San Antonio, Edwin L. Bunte of La Vernia, Texas, was ordered held on $25,000 bond after being arrested Thursday on a federal complaint alleging destruction of an interstate motor vehicle, said Bill Dalseg, special agent in charge of the local FBI office.

He was arrested after shots were fired at a Greyhound bus and its driver Wednesday evening. The driver was not injured, Dalseg said.

Greyhound's 12,700 drivers and other workers who belong to the Amalgamated Transit Union struck Nov. 2 over a proposed contract calling for at least 9.5 percent cuts in wages and benefits. Union officials are scheduled to announce Monday results of the voting on a new three-year offer, which reportedly contains a 7.8 percent wage cut.

But a union vice president predicted at a Los Angeles rally on Friday that strikers will "resoundingly" reject the company offer.

Peugeot reinvents the big wagon
It's bigger than the best-selling imported or American wagons.
With its back seat up, it holds even more than the hold-over dinosaurs from Detroit.
Yet—here's a pleasant surprise—this is one big wagon that is designed not to wag its tail clumsily from side to side on the highway.
The Peugeot 505 GL wagon. Huge inside. Not too huge outside. A wagon with the road handling of a European sedan.
We've got it. Come and try it.

Chinese Shar-Pei Are Tingen's Wrinkled Treasures

Tell a Shar-Pei owner his dog is a meatmouth and he'll say, "Thanks for the compliment."

Tell him his dog's skin is too big for its body and he'll love you.

Tell him his dog's coat feels gritty and he'll say, "Yes, Shar-Pei means 'sandy coat,' you know."

The Shar-Pei is an extremely rare dog with unusual traits that acts for all the world like the mutt next door. It is a stockily built Chinese import which became almost extinct at one time. Now its lineage, which dates back to the temple and palace guard dogs of China 2,000 years ago, has three representatives alive and frisky in Pitt County — all in the kennels of Pistol Tingen of Route 4, Greenville.

Long A Dog Lover

Tingen loves working with dogs — he delights in grooming them, caring for them, studying them and publications about them, and cultivating friends who share his enthusiasm about them. He's been raising another relatively rare breed, rottweilers, for some time. But only last year he saw an article in "Dogs" Magazine about Shar-Pei. "The article told," he said, "how in 1973 there were only about 40 Shar-Pei in the world. This is a breed known for at least a couple of thousand years in China which had practically been wiped out when Mao took over and ordered all dogs killed. There was a big scarcity of food at the time and it was decreed that dogs should become food for the people, not consumers of food.

Here Via Hong Kong

"In 1973 a Shar-Pei breeder in Hong Kong named Matgo Law made an appeal to American breeders to help save this wonderful dog. American breeders gave him the help he asked. Now, 10 years later, the population of Shar-Pei in the United States is about 3000."

"Minkin," "Munchkins" and "E.T. — Ebony Times" are Tingen's three of the 3000. He does not consider Minkin to be show quality. Her brow isn't wrinkled enough and her muzzle is too pointed — she's not a meatmouth. However, she has a well-developed chest and good straight legs with feet set up well on her toes. Tingen believes that, with a champion sire, she can produce good quality puppies and he plans to keep her as a breeder and a beloved pet.

Munchkins is a brush-coat Shar-Pei of very high quality. She proved it recently by being chosen as best female puppy in show at an Atlanta dog show.

E.T. (Yes, she bore a striking resemblance to the famed extra-terrestrial of movie fame when she was a young puppy, Tingen says) is a horse-coat meatmouth of very high quality, too. She recently was named best puppy in show in a Waynesville competition.

All three are black and have short tails that curl over their backs — another desirable Shar-Pei trait. All are lickingly friendly good pets.

Yet Unrecognized

So far, Shar-Pei have not been recognized by the American Kennel Club. They are being kept an exclusive item by conscientious breeders who charge large prices and write stringent contracts with their buyers to limit their distribution.

A disturbing development, Tingen said, is a decision by Neiman-Marcus department stores to include Shar-Pei in their exclusively expensive Christmas catalogues. Whoever struck the deal to provide these dogs to the store, Tingen said, is working against themselves and other breeders. There's nothing anyone can do, though, he said. It's a prerogative of free enterprise. He said he understands the firm is charging about a thousand dollars more per dog than the going price for a good purebred with no unusually good traits.

Sons Assist Him

Tingen enlists the help of his two sons, Jamie, 14, and Jody, 12, in caring for the kennels. "The boys are up every morning at 6 o'clock to feed the dogs, clean the runs, do everything that needs to be done," he said. "They love the dogs as much as I do and they put in a lot of hard work with them."

Tingen runs an auto body shop near his home. "I love cars," he said, "always have. But I love dogs more. I spend all the time I can up here working with the dogs and I spend as many weekends as I can at dog shows — sometimes showing the rottweilers, sometimes the Shar-Pei, occasionally both."

He's building his dream of having his kennels support him and his family financially. "That will take a long time, though," he said. "You don't build a good line quickly. I've been developing my rottweiler line for several years and I've only just begun with Shar-Pei."

He has developed a network of buyers nationwide for both breeds, however. Not long ago, he shipped a rottweiler to Alaska and spent many wakeless hours worrying till the dog arrived. "I told the buyer to call me regardless of the time of day or night she got there," he said. "I couldn't sleep til I knew that puppy was safe in the arms of her new owner in Fairbanks."

Napoleonic Silks Make Brilliant Display On Trip Abroad

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP

UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Napoleon, a stickler for excellence, ordained that the silks used to decorate walls and windows and upholster furnishings of his many palaces should be of such superior quality and enduring color as to "last 100 years."

An exhibition, "Silks from the Palaces of Napoleon," at the Fashion Institute of Technology's galleries, proves that Napoleon spent public funds on decor with such a keen eye to getting his money's worth that Napoleonic silks are still in use in France's chateaux-museums and presidential residences. The show will continue through Feb. 11.

Napoleon began his patronage of the silk mills of Lyons, which had been closed since the Revolution, in 1802, ordering fabrics for the palace of St. Cloud. All of the royal palaces had been stripped by revolutionary mobs and their redecoration was a beady-made work project by which Napoleon revived the moribund silk industry.

Gradually the emperor stepped up his orders to the Lyons factories to provide for the redecoration of a dozen palaces in France as well as royal residences in Brussels and Rome. Much of this was delivered after his abdication in 1814, leaving nearly 75,000 yards of silk in storage in the Mobilier National, France's national collection of furnishings for palaces, ministries and embassies.

"The silk is woven in 18-inch widths and a weaver can do only about 3 to 3½ inches a day, so it would take years to weave enough silk for a suite at Versailles," said Marty Bronson, who organized the exhibit for FIT. "There were miles of silk which could never be used in his reign which he left behind when he went into exile."

The Bourbon and Bourbon-Orleans kings who succeeded Napoleon drew on the Mobilier's warehoused reserves of silk to redecorate France's palaces, thriftily cutting out imperial crowns and Napoleonic symbols and replacing them with the royal crown and the fleur-de-lis.

Napoleon III, who succeeded the Bourbons, used the rich stuff ordered by his uncle for new decorations as late as the 1850s when he hung his throne room with brocade ordered in 1806. Some of the silks also were given to the church throughout the 19th century for making vestments.

"Most of this exhibit is made up of samples of the silk still stored at the Mobilier in rolls with acid free tissue rolled between the layers to preserve the fabric," said Jean Coural, administrator-general of the Mobilier National who came to New York to oversee mounting of the exhibit. "As you can see, they look as fresh as if they were woven yesterday."

The FIT galleries are radiant with yard upon yard of damasks, brocades, velvets, satins, reps, moires and lampas dyed in such favorite Napoleonic colors as crimson, poppy red, malachite blue, spanish tobacco, saffron yellow, lilac and emerald green. Much of the fabric is shot with 24-carat gold thread.

Fabric patterns include Greek and Roman motifs copied from architectural reliefs, Napoleon's favorite fritallaria blossoms, swags and wreaths of greenery, bouquets of mixed flowers, feathers, cornucopias shaped like the letter "J" for Empress Josephine, birds including the swan, and the imperial bee, star and eagle symbols.

The exhibition includes silks for wall coverings, hangings, draperies, borders, pillow covers, seat and back panels for chairs and sofas, and firescreen covers. It is the largest collection of early 19th century silk in the world and has never before been shown outside France.

One of the most fascinating aspects of the show is the only complete Napoleonic campaign tent in existence, made for the emperor's use in the Iberian peninsular campaign. It is made of blue and white striped duck lined with flower-sprigged linen and furnished with a folding cot, tables and chairs that fit into leather-lined canvas carrier cases.

Another useful item is a folding bed of burnished and gilded iron that Empress Marie Louise took from palace to palace for boudoir catnapping. It originally was hung with white silk and embellished with ostrich plumes. Napoleon died on a similar but unadorned bed on the island of St. Helena in 1821.

The silk mills of Lyons still have some of the original hand looms on which the silks in this exhibit were made. Their designs are used to recreate silks for the restoration of various palaces. Some 30 colors can be used on these looms, far more than modern computerized looms can manage.

All of the Napoleonic fabrics can be reproduced but one, a chine velvet made for the emperor's bedroom at Fontainebleau. The technique for this rich, almost three-dimensional fabric has been lost, and no attempts to recreate it have succeeded.

MRS. JOSEPH LEE HOOKER

Hooker-Briley Vows Spoken

Kathryn Elaine Briley became the bride of Joseph Lee Hooker in a double ring ceremony held Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Aurora United Methodist Church. The Rev. George Jones officiated.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Briley of Bethel and Mr. and Mrs. John C. Hooker of Aurora.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mike Morris and Judy Morris, both of Vanceboro. She sang "If" and "The Lord's Prayer." He sang "The Wedding Song" and "I.O.U."

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father and son, the bride wore a formal candlelight gown of silk organza over chantilly lace over taffeta which featured a high see-through neckline with a lace ring collar, natural waistline and long tapered sleeves of lace. Clusters of seed pearls accented the embroidered illusion yoke. Lace motifs etched with seed pearls adorned the bodice. The skirt extended into a chapel train which was encircled with tiers of lace. She wore a bridal hat overlaid in candlelight lace and beaded with pearls. She carried a prayerbook covered with lace and showered with stephanotis and centered with wine silk roses tied with bridal stain streamers.

Connie Varnell of Greenville was matron of honor and wore a formal gown of cranberry dotted swiss over taffeta and featured a wide off-the-shoulder flounce accented with cranberry bows and white cluny lace. The long full sleeves had double ruffles of lace and dotted swiss at the cuffs. The full skirt was designed with ruffles with white cluny lace and cranberry chiffon topped with satin ribbon. She carried three long-stemmed pink roses tied with cranberry ribbon.

Lori Ann Johnson of Greenville, Gail Sutton of Stokes, both sisters of the bride, Sally Jo Roebuck of Robersonville, Vivian Weaver of Greenville and Paula Betts of South Creek were bridesmaids. Their gowns were identical to that of the honor attendant and they each carried a long-stemmed pink rose tied with cranberry ribbon.

Melissa Hooker, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl and wore a dress identical to that of the honor attendant. She carried a white basket filled with wine rose petals. Brandon Sutton, nephew of the bride, was ringbearer.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Johnny and Bill Hooker of Aurora, both brothers of the bridegroom, Greg Bonner of Durham, Carl Sermons of Washington and Russ Peed of Aurora.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of emerald green knit; the mother of the bridegroom, a jacketed formal gown of ecru. Both wore rose corsages. Mrs. W.A. Strickland of Robersonville, grandmother of the bride, wore a white carnation corsage.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Thore Brothers and Marsha Bennett.

After the ceremony, the parents of the bride entertained at a reception in the Aurora Community Building. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Rick Pendleton. Mary Lou Coltrain served cake. Punch was poured by Donna Moore. Goodbyes were said to Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hollowell. Linda Beacham presided at the guest register.

A pig-pickin' was held at the home of the bridegroom's parents Friday after the rehearsal. A bridesmaids' luncheon was given by Donna Moore and relatives of the bride at Sweet Caroline's.

After a wedding trip to Vermont, the couple will live in Aurora. The bride is employed at Fred Webb Inc. in Greenville; the bridegroom at Aurora Industrial Supply in Aurora.

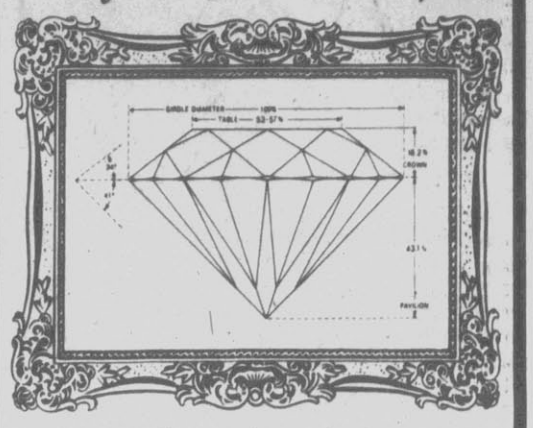

Engagement Announced

DIANE LYNN BRIDGER...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Alton Bridger of Suffolk, Va., who announce her engagement to Jesse Harold Hawkins III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Harold Hawkins Jr. of Route 2, Washington. A Jan. 7 wedding is being planned.

Candlelight Wedding Vows Solemnized On Saturday

MRS. RAYMOND EARL STYONS JR.

BETHEL — Denice Sutton Dennis and Raymond Earl Styons Jr. were united in a candlelight ceremony in the Bethel United Methodist Church Saturday at 7 p.m. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Ellis Jennings Bedsworth.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Earl Dennis of Bethel. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Rosalie Brown Styons of Greenville and Raymond Earl Styons Sr. of Plymouth.

Michael Edmondson of Bethel was organist and Donna Dennis of Hillsdale, N.Y., was pianist. Robert Trostli of New York was cellist and Mary Wells Andrews of Bethel and Robert Moulden of Plymouth were vocalists.

The bride was given in marriage by her family and escorted by her father. Her attendants included her sister, Mrs. James Van Taylor III, honor attendant, and bridesmaids, Donna Dennis, sister of the bride, Mrs. Walter Harrell, sister of the bridegroom of Elizabeth City, Holly Dennis of Annandale, Va., cousin of the bride, Kathryn House and Debbie Bowers of Bethel, Mrs. David Coats of Tarboro and Gina Wadsworth of Whitakers.

Raymond Earl Styons of Plymouth was best man and ushers included Walter Harrell, brother-in-law of the bridegroom of Elizabeth City, William Nelson Best of Jacksonville, Fla., William Larry Davis of Farmville, William Benson and Brady Pinner of Plymouth, Dr. James Van Taylor III of Wilson and Edward Earl Dennis Jr. of Bethel.

Honorary bridesmaids were Elizabeth Williams of Enfield, Barbara Winfield, Mrs. Dean Zurawski and Janet Chadwick, all of Greenville, Joan Burton Andrews of Raleigh, Mrs. William Nelson Best of Jacksonville, Fla., Mrs. Todd Henley of Greenville, S.C., Linda Adams of High Point and Alta Jean Dewar of Annadale, Va.

The bride wore a formal gown of white satin over peau de soie designed with an open neckline outlined in silk Venise lace beaded with pearls. The fitted bodice was overlaid in point d'esprit lace accented with beaded silk Venise lace. Matching lace encircled the silhouette dropped waist and the short baby doll satin sleeves were fashioned with an insert of schiffli lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel train were accented with an edging of scalloped schiffli lace. She wore a full length family mantilla of Brussels lace. Her only ornament was a strand of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom. She carried a bouquet of petal pink sweetheart roses, stephanotis, gypsophila and sprays of English ivy.

The matron of honor wore a formal gown of red faille taffeta designed with an open V-neckline outlined in a band of self-fabric edged in ruffled taffeta. The gown had three-quarter length pouf sleeves. The modified natural waistline was enhanced by a sash of red taffeta. Her bouquet was of anthuriums interspersed with variegated English ivy and Boston fern. The bridesmaids' dresses were identical to that of the honor attendant and they carried similar bouquets. The honorary bridesmaids wore multicolored formal gowns and carried a long-stemmed American beauty rose tied with matching ribbon.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Jule Pollard.

After a wedding trip to Hilton Head and the Bahamas the couple will live near Bethel.

The bride is a graduate of the East Carolina School of Nursing and was a member of Sigma Theta Tau. She is employed by Eastern Carolina Plastic Surgery Associates and Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom is a senior at ECU and works at F and D Motors in Bethel. He is also a basketball officiator and baseball umpire.

The bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall. A bridesmaids luncheon was held Friday given by Mrs. Van Taylor Jr. and Mrs. Pat Dennis Taylor. On Friday evening the couple was honored at a rehearsal dinner at the Greenville Country Club given by the parents of the bridegroom which was followed by a dance given by friends of the couple.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I took my daughter aside recently and said, "Forget what I said about marrying a doctor. Go for a man who manufactures batteries and those rosebud lips will never touch plastic for as long as you live."

It's true. During the Christmas season alone, a man could retire at the age of 28 and never work another day in his life.

To say that we have moved from the Stone Age to the Battery Age is the greatest understatement of all times. I'm not just talking a single battery that I put in a talking robot for my youngest that went dead when I accidentally dropped a hammer on it; I'm talking four, six and eight batteries that run everything from electronic games to your toothbrush.

We're looking at electronic Christmas cards, new to the market this year ($35 for a box of six) that will require a battery one-sixteenth of an inch thick. We're looking at home computers that do your budget, balance your checkbook, record albums, recipes and inventory your household items . . . batteries not included.

We're looking at electronic games (already in the homes of two million families) and toys in record numbers that need from one to eight batteries to operate.

The camera that Daddy points at you around the tree needs batteries. So does the little car that your preschooler rides over your foot. Dolls that do aerobics do it the easy way . . . on batteries. Even games that aren't hooked up to the TV set need batteries to light up and beep.

Don't think for a minute that batteries are interchangeable like light bulbs. You can't steal from one to make the other one go. I have purchased products where the batteries for them are available only directly from Iron Curtain countries during the months with R in them. (No personal checks, please!)

No, it's definitely a battery market this year. No one wants anything anymore that just sits there and does nothing. If it's worth buying, it's worth lighting up, belching, moving, printing out, beeping, doing a backflip, playing music, or ticking.

I told my daughter, "It doesn't matter if a potential mate is three feet tall, looks like a troll and has the personality of a food processor, just so long as he's in batteries. Just remember a cartoon I saw recently by Roger Bollen. It shows two kids knee-deep in toys with one of them saying to the other, 'How many batteries did you get for Christmas?' Think about it."

Sandra Everett Gives Program

Xi Gamma Xi Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held its meeting at the home of Mary Lynn Thompson. Sandra Everett gave a program on "Thanksgiving Table Decorations." Members made decorations to be used at a nursing home.

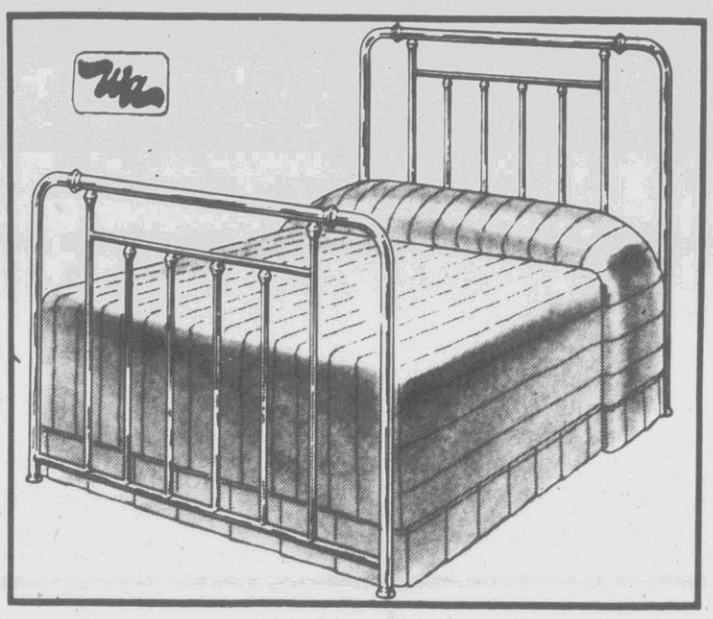

Evelyn Darden reported the Friendly Venture chapter was given the name of N.C. Pi by the international office. Gifts will be given to the nursing for Christmas as a service project. A contribution will be made to Pitt County Department of Social Services to held provide Christmas gifts for children.

Hilda Hiner and Linda McGehee finalized ways and means plans for the fall.

The rare volcano rabbit is found only on the slopes of volcanoes near Mexico City. The animals feed on grass and other small plants, and hide from humans and predators by burrowing among rocks. Scientists believe only a few thousand volcano rabbits exist today.

Double Ring Ceremony Takes Place Saturday

Justine Kim Longnecker and Robin Mitchell Saleeby were married Saturday at 2 p.m. in a double ring ceremony in the First Presbyterian Church of Greenville.

The matron of honor was Rachelle Jean Fowler of Greenville, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Elizabeth Ellen McConnell of Greenville, Dr. Jackie Ann Newlin of Snow Camp, Richel Helen Saleeby of Raleigh, sister of the bridegroom, and Soyna Rene Saleeby of Wilson, cousin of the bridegroom. Each wore a formal gown of frost rose sataglo designed with an open portrait neckline outlined in a single ruffle of self-fabric accentuated with miniature fabric roses. Each was fashioned with short pouf sleeves finished with gathered ruffles. A cummerbund of sataglo emphasized the modified natural waistline of the gathered skirt. Each attendant carried a nosegay of pink miniature carnations with baby's breath, greenery and ribbon matching her gown.

The bridegroom's father was his best man. Ushers were Mickey Lee Longnecker, brother of the bride of Greenville, William Newton Fowler Jr. of Greenville, brother-in-law of the bride, Richard Gibran Jr. and Stephen Morton Saleeby of Raleigh, brothers of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore a raspberry lustreglo and chiffon gown and the mother of the bridegroom wore a silver gray tissue taffeta and beaded chiffon gown. Both wore an orchid corsage.

Dr. Robert E. Irwin was the organist and Gary L. Warren sang "Truly" and "The Lord's Prayer".

The reception was held at the Ramada Inn. Guests were greeted by Dr. and Mrs. Dean Hayek of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Matney of Rhinebeck, N.Y. Presiding at the guestbook was Josie Smith of Raleigh. Cake was served by Hazel Sessoms Fowler of Colerain and Samera Saleeby Samia of Raleigh. Evelyn Benn of Ames, Iowa, poured punch. Paul Ayers, Suzanne Ayers and Nicole Longnecker handed out rice bags and rice roses. Goodbyes were said by Dr. Wayne Ayers and Dr. Caroline Ayers of Greenville and Dr. and Mrs. John Matney of Newport News, Va.

The couple will take a wedding trip to St. Martin's Island in the Caribbean and will live in Raleigh. The bride is a commercial underwriter at North Carolina Farm Bureau Mutual Insurance Co. in Raleigh. The bridegroom is district manager for Franklin Life Insurance Co. in Raleigh. Both are graduates of East Carolina University.

A wedding breakfast was given for the wedding party and out-of-town guests by friends. The parents of the bridegroom entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner Friday night at the King and Queen. A bridesmaids luncheon was given by Elizabeth Ellen McConnell at here home Friday.

Members Show Arrangements

The Greenville Garden Club held its meeting at the home of Mrs. Ted Steig. Mrs. C.M. Respess, Mrs. J.E. Ricks and Mrs. J.A. Piver were assisting hostesses.

The program was an exhibit of "Wildflowers and Weeds in Their Final Beauty." Members made the arrangements and identified plants used.

Mrs. J.C. Galloway, garden therapy chairman, reported on planting pansy plants in the courtyard of the psychiatric unit at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Mrs. R.G. Little, conservation chairman, told of a workshop held for volunteers who will be teaching third grade students about conservation.

Memorial contributions were made for Mrs. R.V. Keel, Sally Klingenschmitt and Mrs. J.B. Spilman to the Garden Club of N.C., Inc. to be included in the Book of Appreciation.

Rosalie Trotman was welcomed as a new member.

When winds reach at least 74 mph, the storm is officially a hurricane. As big as 500 miles or more in diameter and almost eight miles high, hurricanes can produce winds of up to 200 mph. The most violent surround the relatively calm "eye" of the storm. These winds and the low pressure in the eye can join forces to swell coastal waters as high as 25 feet above normal tide. Drowning is the cause of most hurricane deaths.

Couple Marries In Mobile Saturday

MOBILE, Ala. — Ashland Place Methodist Church here was the scene of the Saturday afternoon wedding ceremony of Robin Leigh Mansfield and Joseph Alan Wright.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Marshall W. Mansfield of Mobile, formerly of Greenville, N.C. and Mrs. Daisy Jernigan of Grand Ridge, Fla. and Robert D. Wright of Mobile.

MRS. JOSEPH ALAN WRIGHT

The honor attendant was Marsha Mansfield of Hertford, N.C., sister of the bride. Bridesmaids included Hope Baker of Columbia, S.C., Judi Foster, Silver Broome and Jo Jo Schwarzauer, all of Mobile.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Travis Wright, brother of the bridegroom, Michael Mansfield, brother of the bride, Leonard Wilson and Matt Newton, all of Mobile, Ala.

The bride wore a gown of candlelight satin trimmed in lace and pearls. Her candlelight veil was trimmed with lace and pearls and extended the length of the gown train. She carried an oval shaped bouquet of a dozen bridal white roses, stephanotis, variegated ivy and baby's breath. Ivory picot ribbon and streamers accented the bouquet.

Each of her attenants wore a pale pink peach chiffon dress and each carried a cluster bouquet of eucalyptus, nypthitus, scotch broom, sala and dieffenbacia. Gerbera daisies in various shades of peach highlighted the bouquets.

The flower girl wore a candlelight dress of organza accented with a peach colored sash and carried a basket filled with sonja rose petals. A cluster of sonya roses and greenery accented the front of the basket.

The couple will be living in Mobile after a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C.

Ms. Barnhill To Be Speaker

Ann H. Barnhill will be speaking at the meeting of the Greenville Chapter Professional Secretaries International Monday at 6:15 p.m. at Western Sizzlin' on 10th Street.

She is a partner with Williamson, Herrin, Stokes and Heffelfinger, attorneys. Her program topic will be "Women's Rights Under North Carolina Law."

Wedding Vows Solemnized

ANDERSON, S.C. – Laura Eugenia Pettigrew and Stephen Jude Lawler were married Saturday at 7 p.m. in St. John's United Methodist Church here.

The Rev. Robert Howell and Father Thomas Davis officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional styled gown of candlelight satin trimmed in alencon lace with a Queen Anne neckline and long fitted sleeves. Her veil fell from a floral wreath into a cathedral length train. She carried a cascading bouquet of royal bouquet orchids, pink sweetheart roses, stephanotis, baby's breath and springeri fern trimmed with ivory satin ribbon streamers.

The maid of honor was Lynn Pettigrew of Anderson, S.C., sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Janet Brown of Anderson, S.C., Amy Christine Lawler of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, and Charlene Elizabeth McCutchen of Charleston, S.C., and Brenda Ellen McDowell of Sumter, S.C.

Each wore a teal satin gown with sweetheart neckline, elbow length puffed sleeves and full long skirt. They carried cascading bouquets of ivory enchantment lilies, rose pink miniature carnations, springeri fern and baby's breath trimmed with long streamers of ivory satin ribbon.

The bridegroom's father was his best man. Ushers were James Vincent Lawler of Greenville and John Michael Lawler of Baton Rouge, La., both brothers of the bridegroom, George Robert Pettigrew of Anderson, S.C., brother of the bride, and Lt. Tony Michael Watcher of Hinesville, Ga.

Music was provided by Mrs. Phillip Nall, organist, and Deirdre Welborn, flutist.

Armstrong-Needham Vows Spoken

ASHEBORO — Sheila Jayne Needham and Robert Krick Armstrong Jr. of Greenville were married in a double ring ceremony Saturday at 5 p.m. in the First Baptist Church here. The Rev. David Swartz officiated.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Carl Cameron Needham of Asheboro and Dr. and Mrs. Robert Krick Armstrong Sr. of Glassboro, N.J.

Music was provided by Ruby McIlvaine of Asheboro, organist; Lex Smith of Greenville, soloist and guitarist; Bobby Maness of Asheboro was soloist; and Bill McIlvaine of Asheboro, trumpeter.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown fashioned of silk organza over peau de soie. It featured a high neckline encircled with rosepoint chantilly lace, sheer yoke of point d'esprit, fitted bodice overlaid with pearl outlined chantilly lace and long fitted lace sleeves with calla points at the wrists. The full skirt and attached cathedral train was bordered at the hem with beaded lace. A matching panel of lace extended from the waist over the length of the train. She wore a chapel length veil edged in chantilly lace and carried a cascade bouquet of sweetheart roses with ivy and heather which was sent from Scotland by the bridegroom's relatives.

Gayla Boyle of Greensboro, matron of honor, wore a formal gown of cornflower blue satin fashioned with a portrait neck and cowl drape, three-quarter-length pouf sleeves and full circular skirt, accented by a cummerbund. She carried a muff of white marabou.

Bridesmaids were Joyce Felix and Celeste Smith of Greenville, Candace Kee of Shelby, Karen Coble of Ramseur, Annette Flowers of Asheboro, and Julia G. Smith of Alice, Texas. They wore gowns identical to that of the honor attendant and carried muffs.

Junior attendants were Lanette Brown of Ramseur, Betsy Cagle of High Point, Jennifer McNeill of Asheboro, and Angela Sloat of Greensboro. They wore formal gowns of daphne rose organza over taffeta. Each carried a nosegay of mixed flowers.

Natasha Duncan was flower girl and wore a white formal gown styled identically to those of the junior attendants and carried a white basket of mixed flowers. The wedding pillow carried by Alec Duncan, ringbearer, was designed and made by Joyce Felix.

George Armstrong of Glassboro, N.J., brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Groomsmen were Jeff Brown of Glassboro, N.J., John Gresham of Greenville, Barry Roziewski of Roswell, Ga., Doyle Needham of Memphis, Tenn., and Steve Coble of Coorville, Tenn. The junior groomsman was Jeremy Swartz of Asheboro.

The bride's mother wore a formal gown of silver gray satin and the bridegroom's mother wore a formal gown of mauve crepe satin. Both wore orchid corsages. Honorary mother, Mrs. Ruby Harris of Greenville, wore a formal gown of dusty rose.

The parents of bride gave a reception in the church fellowship hall. Assisting were Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Layne, Mr. and Mrs. Farrell McNeill, Cathy Beane, Diane Cagle, Hilda Sloat, Diane Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. James Moran, Betty Sue Moran and Elaine Brown. Hilda Smith was the wedding director.

MRS. ROBERT KRICK ARMSTRONG JR.

The bridegroom's parents entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner Friday at Pinewood Country Club, Asheboro. A bridal tea was given by the cousins of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of Appalachian State University in Boone; the bridegroom, a graduate of Tri-State University in Angola, Ind. Both are employed by Union Carbide Corp. in Greenville. After a wedding trip to Baja California Sur, Mexico, the couple will live in Greenville.

An all-formal wedding is a wedding to remember always. Everybody is dressed for the great occasion, every guest feels as if he or she is really a part of the party. Remember, After Six has a fabulous formal for every man. And the formal of formals for the groom. Illustrated: the elegant gray Ascot with its notched lapels trimmed with matching braid.

Miss Vines And Mr. Taylor Marry

Marsha Ann Vines and Johnnie Curtis Taylor were married Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in Wells Chapel Church of God in Christ in a double ring ceremony conducted by the Rev. William Gorham.

Parents of the couple are Mrs. Barbara Vines of New York and the Rev. and Mrs. J.B. Taylor of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her grandfather, James Foreman, the bride wore a formal gown of white satin and peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with a high neckline encircled with a serpentine patterned silk Venise lace accented with pearls and outlined in ruffled Brussels lace. Matching lace accentuated the sheer yoke of English net. Scroll patterned lace interspersed with silk Venise lace florets and miniature satin rosebuds enhanced the fitted bodice. The full bishop sleeves featured appliques of Brussels lace and borders of scalloped embroidered lace overlaid with silk Venise lace with white satin ribbon medallions. The deep fitted cuffs were fashioned in the bridal satin with open cutwork of Brussels lace inserts forming calla points at the wrist. The full skirt and attached chapel length train featured a wide panel of scalloped brussels lace centered with a circular motif of silk venise scrolls accented wth silk florets and satin ribbon medallions the hem was edged in a scalloped patterned Brussels lace. She carried a prayerbook bouquet of phalaenopsis orchids and white and pink pixie carnations.

The matron of honor was Patricia Ray of Goldsboro, sister of the bridegroom. She wore a formal gown of watermelon pink matte taffeta fashioned with tiny rolled fabric straps and a mock wrap bodice and bolero jacket with Queen Anne collar. She carried a basket of pink pixie carnations in varied shades, with baby's breath and green streamers.

MRS. JOHNNIE CURTIS TAYLOR

The maid of honor was Jackie Batts.

Bridesmaids were Mary Blount and Erica Helton of Greenville; Sharon Clark of Stanford, Conn., Anita Dickens of Landover, Md., Sylvia Taylor of Greensboro, and Gina Sparkman of

A lot of diet programs
are full of baloney.
Ours lets you eat baloney and a whole lot more.

Introducing

FAT FIGHTER™

The water diet you went on was all wet. The grapefruit diet soured fast. And the 600-calorie-a-day diet didn't last through breakfast. Now, just when you thought you had your fill of diet programs, comes one that could really be right for you—and just what you're looking for. Introducing Fat Fighter.™ a new, natural weight loss supplement that lets you eat like a normal person without putting on extra weight. Fat Fighter™ contains DHEA, a natural substance produced in your own body. DHEA turns food into energy. It helps your body burn off calories instead of storing them as fat. But the amount of DHEA in your body greatly diminishes as you get older. That's why you need Fat Fighter.™ It gives your body the additional DHEA to fight off fat. So don't torture yourself with some hyped-up fad diet program. Try new Fat Fighter.™ You'll love it! And that's not a lot of baloney.

Two From Med School Win Major Film Awards

WINNERS OF VIDEO AWARDS . . . Jacob Postma, left, and Charles Kesler, both of the Center for Medical Communication, East Carolina University School of Medicine, have received two top awards at the 1983 Computer Animation Film Festival in London for their independent production, "Nuke the Duke." (Photos courtesy ECU School of Medicine)

An independent video production by Charles Kesler and Jacob Postma has won two awards at the 1983 Computer Animation Film Festival in London, England.

Kesler and Postma are both employed by the East Carolina University School of Medicine'c Center for Medical Communication. Kelser, a medical illustrator, received a MFA degree in painting from the ECU School of Art. Postma, a television producer/director, received his degree from Murray State University, Kentucky.

"Nuke the Duke" tied for Best in Show and received the top honors in the Features and Short category, receiving the Online Award, a specially commissioned award for excellence in the field of computer animation. "Nuke the Duke" competed with over 50 different productions worldwide in the festival, Europe's major computer graphics event. Competition from the United States in the features and shorts category incuded Lucas Film's "Return of the Jedi" and the highly regarded works of the NYIT Computer Graphics Laboratory.

The premiere showing of "Nuke" was in Detroit in July at SIGGRAPH (Special Interest Group for Graphics) '83, an annual conference displaying state-of-the art computer graphics by computer scientists, engineers, and artists. Since that initial viewing, "Nuke the Duke" has been shown by invitation to computer conferences and film festivals including ones in London, Hollywood, Chicago, Milan, Monte Carlo and Tokyo.

The production was discussed in the November issue of Creative Computing magazine and will be the subject of a forthcoming article in Joystick magazine.

Poetry Award

RALEIGH — Stephen Knauth of Charlotte is the winner of the 1983 Zoe Kincaid Brockman Memorial Award of the North Carolina Poetry Society. The award, a check for $100 and a trophy bowl to be kept by the poet for one year, was awarded at the annual meeting of the society in Raleigh.

Knauth, a native of Milwaukee, has been a resident of North Carolina for 11 years. He won for his 1982 volume "Night-Fishing on Irish Buffalo Creek" pubished by The Ithaca House, Ithaca, N.Y.

Two Events At Mariners

BEAUFORT — Two festive events are on tap during the first week in December at Hampton Mariners Museum, 120 Turner St., near the waterfront in Beaufort.

On Friday, the annual trimming of the museum's Christmas tree gets under way. Visitors may take natural ornaments to the museum to be used as decorations for the tree.

On Saturday, the Fiesta for the Animals field trip will be held on Bird Shoal, beginning at 11 a.m. and continuing until 1 p.m. Those attending should bring food to decorate island trees for birds and to leave for wild horses to eat.

Fee for this trip is $5, and reservations are required. For reservations, call 728-7317.

CHRISTMAS JOURNEY

RICHMOND, Va. — "A Journey Into Christmas" offers a look into Richmond's treasured past, present and future in a weekend of noncommercial holiday trips. Details and reservations for the trips can be obtained by calling 804/780-0107 or by writing to: Heritage Tourism Center, Bowers Brothers Coffee Building, 104 Shockoe Slip, Richmond, Va., 23219.

Brentwood, Mo. Their gowns were like that of the honor attendant in teal green and they carried baskets of flowers like those of the honor attendant, except with pink streamers.

Jennifer Farra of Durham and Janna Zinzi of Mount Vernon, N.Y., were flower girls. Their white dresses were styled similarly to those of the bridesmaids. They carried white wicker baskets of flowers.

The bridegroom's father was his best man. The ringbearer was Marcus Gorham of Greenville. Ushers were Larry Batts, brother of the bride, Bryan Taylor, brother of the bridegroom, Ronnie Cannon, Kevin Clark, and Ernest Clemons, all of Greenville, Tood Ray of Goldsboro, and James Foreman of Honolulu, Hawaii.

Presenting a program of music was Linda Wilder and Wanda Joyner, soloists, harpist Ruth Moskop, flautist, Kelly Via, and Mark Joyner, organist.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Florida.

The bride is employed by the Pitt County Clerk of Courts and is a graduate of St. Augustine College in Raleigh. The bridegroom works at Procter and Gamble and graduated from Pitt Community College.

The parents of the bridegroom gave an after-rehearsal dinner and aunts of the bride entertained at a wedding breakfast.

Duo Recital Dec. 4

ECU News Bureau

Soprano Carla Connors and East Carolina University faculty pianist Dr. Timothy Hoekman will perform in recital at 3:30 p.m. Dec. 4 in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. The recital is free and open to the public.

Their program will include five songs by 17th century English composer Henry Purcell, Debussy's "Ariettes Oubliees," an aria from Donizetti's "Don Pasquale," songs by Granados and Hugo Wolf, and selections from Bolcom's "Six Songs for Medium Voice."

Connors and Hoekman have performed widely as a duo under the name "Andiamo." Their joint appearances included a performance at the 1982 World's Fair.

Ms. Connors is a doctoral student at the University of Michigan. She has been a soloist with the detroit Smpyhony, the Szczecin (Poland) Symphony and other orchestras and has sung leading roles in various opera productions, including the role of Anne in "The Rake's Progress" directed by Robert Altman.

Dr. Hoekman, who studied at Calvin College, Peabody Conservatory and the University of Michigan, has performed as soloist and accompanist in the U.S., in Canada, Australia and Europe. He was pianist-in-residence at the 1982 Grand Rapids Summerfest, where he played for the Joffrey Concert Dancers and performed with the orchestra.

Hosted Play Festival

The Department of Theater Arts at East Carolina University recently played host to the Region I North Carolina Theater Conference Secondary School Play Festival. Three high schools competed for various awards and the opportunity to go to the State Festival in December at UNC-Greensboro.

Christine Myers and her students from Plymouth High School presented two plays for the competition: "The Sheep Thief" and "The Doctor in Spite of Himself."

Pender High School from Burgaw sent two plays: "The Haunted Carousel" and "I Hate War." These were directed by Lucile McIntyre.

The Thespians of John T. Hoggard High School of Wilmington brought the final entry: "Stages," directed by Charles Foss.

Each performance was followed by a critique from the two judges, John Kuhn, a guest lecturer in the ECU Theater Arts Department, and Tracy Dononhue, an ECU theater arts instructor.

After the final production, those interested in acting and directing were invited to take part in a workshop conducted by Donald Biehn, associate professor. Biehn, who supervises the acting program at ECU, was trained in New York at the noted Neighborhood Playhouse in the Meisner Technique.

Awards presented at the end of the School Play Festival were:

•Best actress — Beth Clark, Pender High School.

Other awards were given in the categories of honorable mention acting, ensemble acting, and directing.

MISUNDERSTOOD — George Benson, singer, songwriter and guitarist, says his critics just do not understand him or his music. Those jazz critics say Benson abandoned the chance to become a great jazz guitarist and sold out to the moneyed world of pop music. (AP Laserphoto)

Playwrights Reading Set

A playwrights' workshop will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Eastern Office of the N.C. Division of Archives and History (The Humber House) at 117 W. Fifth St.

Cold readings of four short work-in-progress scripts will be made. These are by Grace Ellis of Cameron, Sheila Turnage of Farmville and Christine Rusch and Nancy Shires of Greenville.

The event is sponsored by the N.C. Playwrights' Fund. All persons interested in script development or simply wanting to hear scripts read may attend.

Auditions Slated For 'Tobacco Road'

Auditions will be held Dec. 5-6 from 7:30 to 10 p.m. in room 206 of the Messick Theater Arts Center for "Tobacco Road," the third production in the 1984 season of the East Carolina Playhouse.

To be directed by Edgar R. Loessin, the play offers roles for a mother and father, their 16-year old son, and two teen-age daughters. In addition, there are roles for three other young men in their late teens or mid-20s, plus a middle-age woman and a mute grandmother.

Second only to "Life With Father" as the all-time long-run theatrical American favorite, "Tobacco Road" was a Broadway fixture for nearly eight years. Road companies criss-crossed the nation for thousands of other performances over a period of six years.

"When the play opened on Broadway on December 4, 1933, it shocked or repulsed all of the major critics except the New York Times' Brooks Atkinson," says Edgar Loessin. "This is the 50th anniversary of that opening," he added, "and I felt the play was worth reviving. There is still a blunt truth powerfully stated about the evils of ignorance and poverty."

Judaica Show To Open At NCMA

TORAH POINTER ... A silver Torah pointer, by an unknown artist, created in Prague, Czechoslovakia, in the mid-19th century, is one of the 36 items to go on view in an exhibition of Judaica art opening at the N.C. Museum of Art in Raleigh on Dec. 18. The 11¼ inch silver object is a gift of Dr. and Mrs. Ron H. Levine. (Photo courtesy N. C. Museum of Art)

By SHARON BROOM
N.C. Museum of Art

RALEIGH — A gallery devoted to Jewish ceremonial objects will open at the North Carolina Museum of Art on Dec. 18. The Judaica collection, which was formed beginning in 1976, has never before had an area for permanent display.

Exhibited in the gallery will be 35 objects which reflect the international nature of Judaism through the centuries. Included are silver, brass and pewter objects used in a variety of Jewish ceremonies as well as Jewish household or folk art objects. The works represent the Jewish traditions of Europe, Asia and America, beginning with the 16th century and continuing through important contemporary craftsmen.

Among the works on view are objects used to adorn the Five Books of Moses, known as the Torah; objects wich are part of Jewish ceremonies used in celebrating holidays, such as the seder plate and the "Cup for the Prophet Elijah," which are part of the Passover celebration. Some of the works, such as a 16th century German representation of King David dancing before the Ark of the Covenant, are not ceremonial objects but may have been displayed in the home.

Unusual within a general art museum setting, the collection was formed as the result of a special exhibition at the museum, "Ceremonial Art and the Judaic Tradition," which was shown in 1975. Guest curator for the exhibition was Dr. Abram Kanof of Raleigh, a retired professor of pediatrics from New York who had written and lectured extensivley on Judaica. Kanof had been the first chairman of the Jewish Museum in Washington, D.C., where he founded the Tobe Pascher Workshop, which furthers the modern design and execution of Jewish ceremonial objects. He also is the author of the book, "Jewish Ceremonial Art and Religious Obervance," published by Harry N. Abrams Inc.

The success of the Judaica exhibition led the museum, with Kanof's assistance, to launch as ongoing fund-raising campaign in 1976 for a permanent collection of Jewish ceremonial objects. A number of works on view are the gifts of Kanof and his wife, the late Dr. Frances Pascher Kanof, and their friends and associates.

A gallery guide which discusses 26 of the works on view will be available in the gallery and the museum shop for 50 cents. Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 1-5 p.m. on Sunday. No admission fee is charged. For more information call 833-1935.

Visiting Artists At Rose High

The visiting artist program at Rose High School began Nov. 17 with a visit by internationally known sculptor Al Erdmann, who is participating in a continuing workshop co-presented with Paul Hamilton, a graduatge student from East Carolina University majoring in ceramics.

A grant from Planters Bank is making the visit possible.

The workshop began with a slide presentation by Erdman showing historical monuments such as the Great Pyramids and Stonehenge with explanations of their origins and meanings. He remarked on how their early functions were related to astronomy.

Erdman showed slides of many of his own works, also related to the sun and the movement of the earth. These ae constructed with solar cells and hidden microphones, with many of the plexiglass sculptures requiring human encounter before they can function. Some of his electronic devices operate in a quasi-humorous vein such as turning themselves on only after everyone leaves the museum.

During the workshop sessions. Hamilton is demonstrating methods of throwing clay on the potters wheel. He plans additionally to show students how to combine enclosed forms into sculptural pieces. Constructing 3-D forms from slabs of clay will be a hands-on project for students.

The demonstrations provided by both artists are being videotaped so that their presentations and demonstrations can be re-used for instructional purposes.

Art Gallery Opening

Arlington Hall is the name of a new art gallery scheduled to open in Greenville on Friday.

An open house for the public will be held that date at the gallery, located at 327 Arlington Blvd. A ribbon-cutting ceremony will be conducted by a representative of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Greenville's newest art outlet is to be operated by Enid White, Betsy Glenn and Dorothy Paschal. According to Ms. White, the gallery will stock original art in various media by artists in the Greenville area, as well as art by artists from other parts of the state.

Plans are also under way to represent artists outside the state at an early date.

Ingalls Honored

BELHAVEN — Marie Griffin Ingalls, native of Jamesville in Martin County now living in Belhaven, is being honored today at Winston Square in Winston-Salem at a reception for the opening of an exhibition, "The Artist and the Quilt."

Mrs. Ingalls made one of the 20 quilts being exhibited. The quilt is also featured in a book, "The Artist and the Quilt," a publication documenting the creation of the show. The book was published by Alfred J. Knopf.

Mrs. Ingalls is the only North Carolinian whose work was chosen for the show.

Her quilt, based on a design by Mary Beth Edelson, a New York artist, is called "Women Rising," and incorportes two vertical list of women's names beginning with Jezebel on down to modern women. The names frame a stylized modern figure with upturned hands.

The original quilt collection, funded by the Mary Duke Biddle Foundation, the North Carolina Museum of Art, as well as the National Endowment of the Arts, has been purchased by Phillip Morris, Inc. for its fine art collection.

This is the first showing of the quilts in North Carolina. The initial showing of the collection was held in September at the McNay Museum in San Antonio, Texas.

Rose High Presenting 19th Century Melodrama, 'The Drunkard'

'THE DRUNKARD' . . . Members of the cast of the 19th century melodrama about the problems that demon rum brings to lives are shown assembled on stage in the auditorium at Wahl-Coates. The play will be presented there at 8 p.m. on Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings. Tickets in advance, available from Rose High, are priced at $3. Tickets are the door are priced at $4. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

"The Drunkard," an action filled old-fashioned melodrama that ran to appreciative audiences for 26 years in California, is the play chosen for this year's autumn production by members of the Rose High drama department.

The play will be presented for three evening performances at 8 p.m. — Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. Performances will be in the auditorium at Wahl-Coates Elementary School.

The 'delirium tremens dramas' of stage life dealing with the heartaches (and sometimes the comedy) of over-imbibers, had their roots in England and later came to be popular in America in the 19th century.

The authorship of "The Drunkard" is uncertain, but there is good reason to assign major contribution of the script to a 19th century American actor, William Henry Smith, a hard drinker who signed the pledge to keep away from demon rum.

Actress Sarah Bernhardt had a leg amputated in 1914, but she continued acting for another nine years until her death in 1923.

Shipps Is Concert Guest

ECU News Bureau

Stephen Shipps, a noted violinist and faculty member at the N.C. School of the Arts, Winston-Salem, will perform with pianist Paul Tardif and cellist Selma Gokcen of the East Carolina University music faculty in a chamber music concert on Wednesday.

The concert will be at 8:15 p.m. in the A.J Fletcher Recital Hall, and is free and open to the public. It is sponsored by the ECU School of Music in conjunction with several local business firms.

Shipps is a graduate of the Indiana University School of Music and has performed with the Cleveland; Seattle and Dallas symphonies, in addition to serving as concertmaster for the Casals Festival and the Piedmont Chamber Orchestra.

A member of the Fine Arts String Quartet, Shipps has recorded for Angel Records with flautist Ransom Wilson.

The Wednesday ECU concert will feature Claude Debussy's "Cello Sonata and Trio," and two compositions by Maurice Ravel, the "Sonata for Violin and Piano" and "Trio in A Minor for Violin, Cello, and Piano."

Co-sponsorship of the concert was initiated by Joseph Gantz, president of Empire Brushes Inc., one of the sponsor firms, and pianist Tardif. Other sponsoring Greenville firms are TRW Inc., Procter & Gamble, the University Book Exchange, Piano and Organ Distributors, and Central Book & News.

GUEST PERFORMER ... Violinist Stephen Shipps, faculty member of the N. C. School of the Arts, Winston-Salem, will perform in a program, "An Evening of Chamber Music" at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. Also performing in the program will be cellist Selma Gokcen and pianist Paul Tardif, both ECU School of Music faculty members.

Senior Recitals

Two senior recitals are schuduled by students of the East Carolina University School of Music during the coming week. Both are free and open to the public and will be held in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

The two are:

•Tuesday, 7:30 p.m. — Patricia Ann Sutton of Mebane, piano student has chosen five works by three composers for her program — Mozart's "Fantasy in C minor;" two Debussy preludes, "La Fille aux cheveux de lin" and "Minstrels," and two Brahms pieces, "Cappriccio in G Minor" and "Rhapsody in B Minor."

•Friday, 7:30 p.m. — Debra Lynn Pressley of Monroe, an oboist, will be accompanied by Nancy Bailey. She has listed two compositions for her program — Handel's "Sonata in C minor" (in four movements), and two movements of Gabaye's "Sonatine."

Community Sing For 'Messiah'

Residents of Greenville and surrounding communities may sing Handel's "Messiah" on Dec. 11 at 3 p.m. in East Carolina University's Wright Auditorium.

Prior to the performance, the Greenville Choral Society will have two open rehearsals, one on Nov. 29 at 7:30 p.m. and one on Dec. 6 at 7:30 p.m., at Immanuel Baptist Church on Elm Street.

Attendance of a rehearsal is not required for participation in the concert.

Gas was first used in the United States in 1826 to light a theater in New York City.

Farmville School Play

FARMVILLE — A seasonal play, "Christmas On Angel Street," will be presented by students at Farmville Middle School Dec. 5-8.

During the day, it will be performed in area schools, and on Dec. 8 it will be shown to the public in the auditorium at Farmville Central High School.

Admission for the 7:30 p.m. evening performance Dec. 8 is $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students and children.

'Annie' Opens Thursday At ATW

ANNIE AND FRIEND . . . Amy Allen, the young girl playing the title role in "Annie," poses for her photo with one of the large dogs which were being tested for the dog role in the play. The Ayden Theater Workshop production of "Annie" opens at Ayden-Grifton High School at 8 p.m. on Thursday with two other performances, at 8 p.m. Saturday and at 3 p.m. Sunday. Tickets, priced at $3 will be available at the door or can be secured in advance.

When the curtain rises on the Ayden Theater Workshop's production of "Annie" on Dec. 1, area audiences will be renewing old acquaintances and marking the debut of a generation of new local performers.

Three performances are scheduled — on Thrusday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m. and on Sunday at 3 p.m. (Due to other school activities at Ayden-Grifton, performances are never held on Friday evenings).

Tickets are priced at $3, or by season tickets. Those wanting to make advance reservations can write to: A.T.W., Box 293, Ayden, N. C., 28513 or call either of two numbers, 746-6782 or 746-2121.

Returning to the leading role of Daddy Warbucks is Bill Tyson, who has been in several ATW productions. Betty Dixon, who has mostly worked backstage, is in front of the lights this go-round as the orphanage matron, Miss Hannigan.

Two newcomers to ATW, Michael and Sue Clup, are making their debuts in the role of Rooster, the scurrilous Hannigan brother, and Grace Farrell, private secretary to Warbucks.

Amy Allen has the title role of the orphan, Annie, with other orphans being portrayed by Lori McClaine, Stacy Creech, Brandy Barwick, Amy Layden, Megan Craft, Tracy Howell, Elizabeth Smith, Anessa Culp, Megan Henderson, Marty Brandon, Julie Garris, and Tracy Roberts.

The production is being directed by Doug Mitchell.

Nearly everyone knows about Little Orphan Annie, how she searched for family and happy tomorrows. There may be some confusion on the part of those who see the stage and movie versions. On stage, "Annie" is set in the despair of wintertime, whereas in the movie the setting is the fourth of July. ATW people feel the winter setting is more appropriate with the cold of winter better representing the play's mood.

Cloggers Celebration Saturday

Greenville's 8th Annual Greengrass Cloggers Day Celebration will be held at the Pitt County Fairgrounds, U.S. 264-Bypass on Saturday. The celebration is sponsored by the Roxy Music Arts and Crafts Centr, a nonprofit organization affiliated with the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

Activities get underway with the opening of a workshop at 11 a.m. which will continue until 5 p.m. Evening activities start at 7:30 p.m. and conclude at 11:30 p.m.

Tickets for the workshops and concert are $6 at the door, and can be purchased in advance for $5 at Mendenhall Student Center, Apple Records, the New Deli, the Rathskeller, and at Record Bars.

The workshop includes demonstration in beginning and advanced clogging, square dancing, fiddle and guitar playing, and storytelling techniques for children. Those taking part, where appropriate, should bring their own instruments with them.

Additionally, crafts demonstrations will be given, with Sheila Lapointe to offer a hands on experience in pottery and Virginia Horne to give a demonstration in hand spinning.

The evening concert, to begin at 7:30 p.m., will feature performances by the group being honored, the Greenville Greengrass Cloggers, and by a number of other North Carolina groups and one from out-of-state. These are:

- The Fiddle Puppets of Riva, Maryland, which contains former Greengrass members and present zany interpretations of entrtainment.
- Touchstone, an Irish group from Chapel Hill.
- Phil and Gay Johnson, a husband and wife team from Green Creek, with old timey music on guitar, dobro, and mandolin.
- The Too Wet to Plow String Band of Greenville with fiddlin' Earl White, along with Nancy and Bill Sluys, bass and banjo players.
- The Wild Goose Chasers, a western North Carolina String Band featuring former Greengrass Cloggers Brian Demarcus and Carol Mallet, as well as Rich Hartness and Joe Thrift, and Big Boy Henry, a blues singer from Beaufort.
- The Cane Creek Cloggers from Chapel Hill.
- The Swift Creek Cloggers; juggler Rob Sharp; and various area square dancers

Madrigal Dinners

ECU News Bureau

Student singers and musicians from the East Carolina University School of Music will be featured at ECU's eighth annual series of Christmas Madrigal Dinners Nov. 29-Dec. 5.

The dinners, a joint production of ECU's Mendenhall Student Center and the ECU School of Music, are modeled after a Christmas feast in an English manor house of the Elizabethan era. Music, carols, customs and festivities of the period are presented by performers and hosts wearing Renaissance costumes, and a traditional roast beef dinner is being served by authentically clad servants.

The ECU Collegium Musicum, an ensemble of Renaissance instrumentalists, will present a selection of compositions by early English English composers, including a pavane to be danced by the singers.

Tickets for places at one of the banquet tables may be reserved by calling the ECU ticket office in Mendenhall at 757-6611.

Schweickhardt Recital

ECU News Bureau

Clarinetist Brian Schweickhardt, a visiting assistant professor in the East Carolina University School of Music, will perform in recital at 8:15 p.m. Monday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. The recital is free and open to the public.

Schweickhardt's program will include the Bellison arrangement of Beethoven's "Variations on a Theme of Mozart;" Charles Stanford's "Three Intermezzi;" "Flammes" for solo clarinet by Janos Komives; Paul Jeanjean's "Carnival of Venice, Theme and Variations;" a Honnegger sonatina; William Bolcom's "A Short Lecture on the Clarinet;" Henry Brant's "Ice Age" and Carlos Surinach's "Ritmo Jondo."

Others to be featured in the recital will be pianist Donna Coleman and percussionist Harold Jones, both of the ECU music faculty. Assisting will be trumpeter Barry Shank of the ECU faculty and student percussionists Bill Congdon, Keith Beck, Brent Montgomery and Sharon Ross.

The Jeanjean composition has been recorded by Schweickhardt on the Coronet label. He is also featured on a soon-to-be released Coronet recording, "The Composer's Clarinet," Volume II.

Schweickhard made his New York recital debut in May 1980, after more than a decade as assistant principal clarinetist with the Detroit Symphony. He is a candidate for the doctoral degree at the University of Michigan, where he is active in two Orchestra Hall support groups.

Aurora Fossil Museum Serves Several Roles

Murals Depict Life Beneath Ancient Sea

To anyone passing through the business district of Aurora, a quiet, small Beaufort County town, the Aurora Fossil Museum's brick face could easily be mistaken for any other quaint storefront.

There is a sign out front, and a display case with shark teeth and fossil bones to let visitors know that they have reached the right place. But there's really nothing to hint at the spectacle contained inside.

A step through the door and the visitor is plunged into the bottom of a scaled-down open pit mine, similar to the existing Texasgulf Inc. phosphate mine at nearby Lee Creek.

A model dragline scoops up a bucketful of plaster ore, while painted scenes of pine trees and the town of Aurora depict the earth's surface eight feet up along the top of the museum's walls. Core samples of earth and rock from the mining site, fossil bones and teeth, charts and diagrams surround the room.

Slide Show

Placed in the middle of it all are benches and a large projection screen where visitors view taped slide shows describing the forces that have shaped North Carolina's Coastal Plain over the past 200 million years.

An adjoining display room places the viewer beneath the surface of an ancient sea. Two huge murals depict fish, whales, sharks, and other creatures swimming in the warm ocean waters that covered what is now Beaufort County at a time millions of years in the past.

Many of the creatures shown here, like the great white shark and humpback whale, still exist today, although in slightly different form. For example, the great white shark of 2 million years ago measured 55-feet in length, almost twice the size of the 30-foot monster made popular in the movie "Jaws." Six-inch fossil teeth of the great white of old are on display in the museum.

The Coming Of Man

Other displays and murals depict the coming of man to the area, bringing forth the age of the hunter, the nomadic food gatherer, and finally simple fields and Indian villages. Outside the museum itself, visitors can sift through a heap of diggings from the mine to find their own shark's teeth and fossils.

"The sediment layers underlying this area are one of the world's richest sources of marine fossils," explains Rusty Walker, spokesman for North Carolina Phosphate (NCPC), a company that will soon join Texasgulf in mining the local phosphate deposits. Scientists from the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C., have made frequent trips to the mining site to collect specimens, and are publishing a multivolume analysis of their research here.

Fossils Are By-Product

The fossils are a byproduct of phosphate mining, which is big business in Beaufort Coiunty. Since the start of mining in 1965, Texasgulf has scooped up millions of tons of ore, which is eventually processed into fertilizer products used world-wide. Mammoth draglines gnaw at the earth with buckets large enough to hold two cars, suspended from booms as long as a football field.

Investment costs are high. NCPC will have spent more than $200 million before it actually produces a pound of phosphate ore. But the Beaufort County deposits are large, one of the four largest in the world, according to Walker, a fact which gives the giant companies that will mine it a certain measure of securitv.

A small sidelight to this vast industry, the Aurora Fossil Museum has grown haltingly, its fortunes rising and falling much like the world market for phosphates.

Role Changed

Early plans centered around the creation of a diplay area for fossils that would attract tourists to the small town. In 1979, local architect Whiting Toler came in to produce the first sets of murals.

Since then, the museum has weathered funding shortages and the lack of a permanent director to continue telling the story behind the fossils. The town purchased the original museum site and the building next door, doubling the displam space. New murals and displays have been added, and the outlook of those involved with the museum has broadened.

"In many ways the name 'Fossil Museum' is no longer accurate," says. Dr. Vince Bellis, a biology professor at East Carolina University and current chairman of the museum's board of directors.

"The museum is much more than a collection of old bones," Bellis says. "Great strides have been made to create a living presentation that explains the geology and natural history of the entire Coastal Plains region. The broad goal of the museum now is to intepret for its people the origin and use of our region's natural resources."

Local Resource

To accomplish this, Walker and others involved in the museum's development hope to "take the program to the people," primarily in the form of slide shows, pamphlets, and educational materials distributed to the public schools.

"I now think of the museum as a local resource that can teach earth sciences," says Walker. "In addition to reading about world geology, students can come here and see how the soil right under their feet was made."

With assistance by the ECU biology and geology faculties and the ECU Regional Development Institute, a package of educational materials has been developed and sent for review to the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction. Acceptance of this package for distribution may provide support for permanent funding for operation of the museum itself.

No Regular Hours

In the meantime, contributions from NCPC allow the museum to open for scheduled visits by school children and other groups. As of now, there are no regular hours for use of the museum by individuals.

"Right now, were're mainly trying to keep the museum alive," says Bellis. "Ww want to develop slowly so that each step we take is top quality. Then, as the interest develops, we'll have a first rate program ready for the public."

The Aurora Fossil Museum is open for scheduled guided group tours. A trip may be included along with a visit to the Texasgulf mine site (also arranged in advance) or with visits to places such as historic Tryon Palace in New Bern, or a visit to Bath, Edenton, and other nearby historic sites.

An America's 400th Anniversary Article

. . . For many millions of years, what is now coastal North Carolina was under water. As the ancient sea receded and land was built up, great quantities of marine life left behind the substance of their skeletons — forming a vast deposit of rich phosphates. Also left beneath the soil were numerous specimens of fossils of creatures from ages past.

. . . In very recent years, this great natural resource has been mined by Texasgulf, and another firm, North Carolina Phosphate, will soon join Texasgulf in mining these deposits which is abasic material in the manufacture of fertilizer.

. . . In the village of Aurora, the Aurora Fossil Museum has been created to tell the public the fascinating story of former sea life and the geological changes that took place over long centuries of time.

. . . Although the museum is not yet open to the public on a day by day basis, arrangements are readily made for any type of groups of visitors — school, civic, church or simply groups of interested people. Arrangements for visits can be made by calling 946-4181.

Rebel Contest Winners Announced

Winners in the Rebel competition to be published early next year

Fourteen prizes — ten in art and four literary prizes amounting to a total of $515 have been awarded to winners in the annual Rebel Art and Literary Contest held in conjunction with the forthcoming publication of Rebel '84. Rebel is the literary-art magazine published each year at East Carolina University.

In the art division, George McKim, a graduate student in painting from Wilmington received the $125 best in show award for his work, "Vicissitude." The nine other art winners in various categories receiving cash awards of $20 each are:

- Painting — Marty Hardin, a junior from Forest City, for "Frog Level (An Ode To)."
- Design — Diane Maisel for "Flying Boat Four." Ms. Maisel was winner last year in the mixed media category.
- Sculpture — Gregory Shelnutt of Charlotte, "Tripod Landscape." This is the second consecutive year Shelnutt has won the sculpture prize.
- Photography — Joe Champagne for an untitled photograph.
- Ceramics — James Lux of Apex, for a pit fired basket.
- Illustration — John Boone, for "Optimism." Boone was winner of the Best In Show award last year.
- Drawing — Graduate student Jo Pumphrey for "The Arrival."
- Mixed media — Leslie Karpinski for "Architectural Scrapyard."
- Graphics — R. Christopher Palmer of Annandale, Va., for "Portrait of J. C. Sacks."

Judges for the art competition were four faculty members of the ECU School of Art — Michael Ehlbeck, Marilyn Gordley, Tran Gordley, and John Satterfield.

Rebel prizes were given to each of two top works in prose and poetry entered in the literary category of the Rebel competition. The two first place winners each received $80 and second place winners each received $25. The winners are:

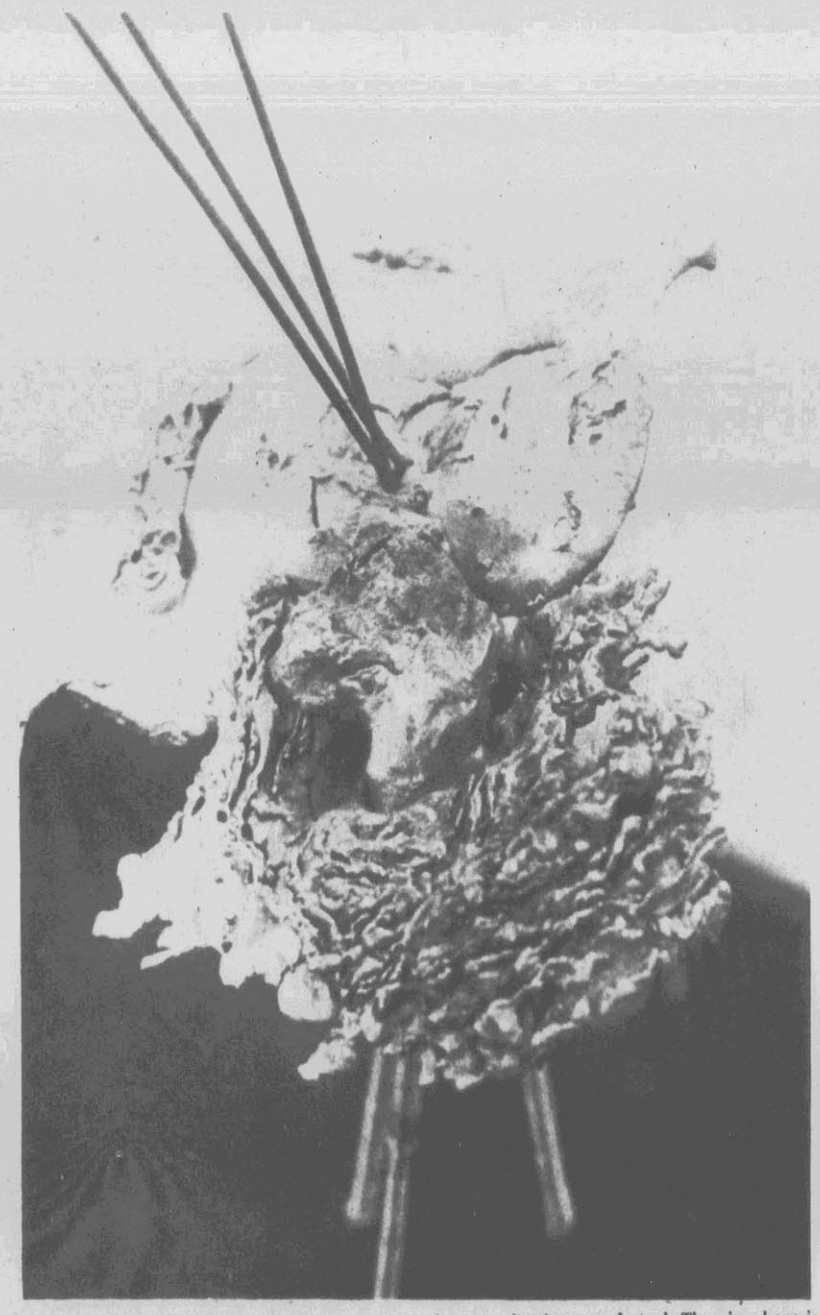

- Poetry — First place, Malynn Linton of High Point for "Passing," and second place, Jeff Jones of Greenville for "Kentucky Grandpa."
- Prose — First place, Cam Sloan for "Random Scenes from Going Off on a Limb One Special Night," and second place, Jeff Jones for "Captain Danger."

Judges for the poetry contest were Luke Whisnant, Pat Bizzaro, and Julie Fay, all from the ECU English Department, and judges for the prose competition were Carlyn Ebert, a graduate student in English and Bill Hallberg, an English professor.

Winners, both in the art and literary divisions, will be published in Rebel '84, due out in lae February or early March. Prize money for the Rebel fund was provided by the Attic and Jeffries Beer and Wine.

Furniture Industry Changes Styles To Fit Need

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

New styles of living call for new home furnishings. So, while Americans are coping with smaller living spaces and the electronics revolution, the furniture industry is learning how to make furniture to meet new needs.

At the recently-concluded Southern Furniture Market in North Carolina, manufacturers offered furniture "solutions" to today's living problems.

Among product categories that gained were small-scale dining furniture useful in the ever-shrinking space given over to dining; cabinetry to hold electronics equipment and home computers, and dual purpose seating so rooms other than the bedroom may be used for sleeping.

Additions to the seating-sleeping furniture included several versions of the Japanese futon. The innovation was to provide a wood or upholstered platform to raise the futon off the floor for more seating and sleeping comfort.

Several manufacturers figured out new wrinkles to fold-out foam furniture which made its first appearance several years ago. In one new version, designed by Robert and Barbara Tiffany for Atlantic, the sofa back flips down and the front folds out to make an off-the-floor foam sleeping surface.

Typical of industry thinking on multi-purpose cabinetry was a piece termed by its maker the "incredible credenza." The cabinet, by Thomasville Furniture Industries, comes in six styles and provides a file drawer and two pencil drawers on one side, storage for wine on the other side and a center section for silverware, china and serving pieces.

The top of the cabinet is on casters and flips open to become a desk, buffet or dining surface, while a slender opening in back provides a place to store a leaf for the matching dining table.

A number of companies introduced furniture to store home electronics products. American Drew's offering in three styles (traditional American, contemporary and European) was a typical example. It accommodated a television set and videoplayer as well as records and tapes. Built-in electric plugs, access for wires and ventilation are provided, as are a telephone jack and a cable television connection.

The market, which retailers attend twice a year to shop for new furniture styles, provided some innovative designs for children — many of them inexpensive, brightly-colored metal furniture.

A collection created by Charles Anacker for Landes Furniture Co. included a cradle which converts into a small rocking settee for use after a child has outgrown the cradle. Anacker also designed a crib whose telescoping metal base pulls out to make a regulation-length 30-inch-wide bed with the crib's side rails removed.

Jethro Industries produced a table which operates on the same principle as a folding ironing board and would work well as a play or work table in a child's room. The 30-by-40-inch table can be used in three positions — cocktail table height (good for a small child), dining height, and as a tilted drawing board.

With living and buying patterns changing, some manufacturers have begun studying their markets more systematically. It used to be that a major furniture purchase effectively took a consumer out of the marketplace. But Pennsylvania House discovered that 92 percent of those who had spent $1,000 or more on furniture within a year were considering additional substantial purchases.

As a result, the firm is developing a quarterly magazine to be distributed to consumers by retailers. The magazine will help the company maintain a continuing relationship with interested consumers, explained a company executive.

Another manufacturer has revised its bedroom furniture line partly as a result of consumer research. William O.W. Fenn Jr., president of Ladd Furniture, said research showed that the number of people seeking formal bedroom suites had diminished as more people use the bedroom as a kind of private living room. To pursue reading and hobbies, listen to music and watch television, these needs have created a demand for more living-room-like furniture for the bedroom, as well as for more storage furniture.

The same study also questioned consumers about the qualities they seek in new furniture. Some 2,600 respondents in 10 cities said they were looking for quality and durability first and that they preferred furniture that offered lasting value and was not faddish.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We have selected a house to buy and have been shopping for a mortgage loan. We have learned quite a bit about the differences between the regular type of mortgage and the one called adjustable. We have found, as we are sure you know, that the adjustable mortgages have a lower rate of interest than the regular mortgages. This puzzles us somewhat. Why should a bank or savings and loan company give a lower interest rate on an adjustable mortgage?

A. — The rates on adjustable mortgages are usually from 1 to 2 percentage points lower than those on fixed-rate mortgages. That's because when you have a fixed-rate mortgage, the lender carries all of the risk. If the interest rates in general go up, he still gets only the rate called for in the mortgage. But if they go up and you have an adjustable mortgage, your rates will rise also. In other words, the lender takes the full risk with a fixed-rate mortgage, whereas the lender and the borrower share the risk with an adjustable mortgage.

Q. — Our family is considering having a log house built, but there are a lot of questions we need the answers to, including the names and addresses of log-house manufacturers in our area. Is there some central source where we can get this information?

A. — The Log Homes Council of the National Association of Home Builders has put out a brochure called "Is a Log Home for Me?" Included with it are the names and addresses of about 25 log-home manufacturers in different parts of the country. Write to the council at the National Association of Home Builders, 15th and M Streets NW, Washington, DC 20005.

Q. — How do I remove built-up wax from my dark pine table without destroying the stained finish? Everything placed on the table leaves streaks that cannot be wiped completely away.

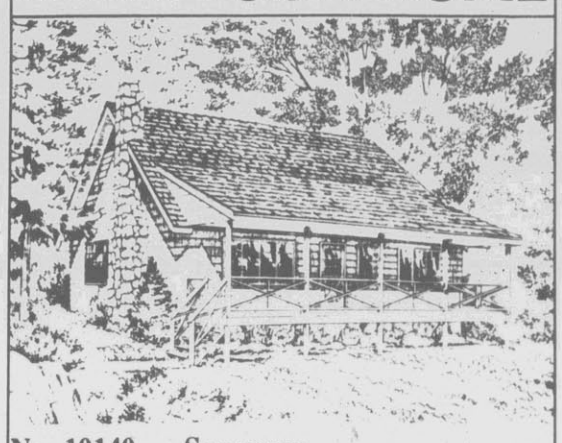

A. — You say the finish is stained, but if it is highly polished then it probably has varnish, lacquer or shellac over the stain. If you know what the finish is, ask your hardware dealer to help you select a wax remover that will not harm the surface. Otherwise, try wiping with denatured alcohol and if that doesn't work, then turpentine. There is always a chance the finish might be dulled somewhat, in which case you will have to recoat it. Be sure, though, that you do not use lacquer over varnish. The other way around is all right.

Q. — We bought a house with asbestos shingles on it. The previous owner says they have not had any finish on them, but we want to paint them. Can we use a latex paint? If so, we assume a primer will be needed.

A. — Yes, a latex paint or one of several other kinds will do. Ask your dealer to advise you, being sure to mention the shingles are asbestos. Once you have made a choice based on his recommendation, you then pick a primer that is compatible.

No. 10140 — Sagamore

Complete Home in Rustic Exterior

by Jerry Bishop

Seemingly small, rustic and cozy, the Sagamore is, in reality, quiet, modern and comfortable. This small gem is so carefully planned, it packs three bedrooms, two baths and a two-story living room into its compact structure. Exposed beams add to its beauty. As a hunting or fishing lodge or a mountain retreat the Sagamore compares well.

Shape Up House Plants Now

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Now that autumn is here, it's time to get your house plants into shape, whether they have remained indoors or vacationed outside in the garden or patio. Here are some good practices:

—Remove all dead and yellowing leaves.

—Wash accumulated dust from those that stayed indoors.

—If they have outgrown their normal size, most plants can be trimmed back with a sharp knife or pruning shears.

—To determine if a plant has become potbound, turn it upside down and lightly tap the edge of the pot on a table or bench until the plant loosens. If you can see the roots clearly around the edge of the root ball, the plant should be shifted to a larger size pot (2 to 4 inches more). Keep the root ball intact and add soil around it. Use new soil for this purpose. An ideal mixture is one of equal parts of coarse sand, garden loam and peat moss.

For a good plant nutrient: Mix one teaspoon of 5-10-5 or 4-12-4 fertilizer in a quart of water and apply it generously every 8 to 10 weeks. Throughout the winter, maintain the correct balance of light, water, temperature and nutrients, and your plants should stay healthy and attractive. ——

One method is to remove the entire plant from the soil and hang it upside down in a cool but frost-free cellar. In the spring, cut back, pot up and start the plant over again. But since most homes have warm basements, it is better to start new plants from cuttings.

African violets, one of the most popular houseplants, need light if they're going to bloom but they can't take direct sunlight.

Insufficient light causes the central stem of violets to stretch and leaf petioles to elongate as they reach for the light source. The result can be a misshapen plant with few blossoms. A well-lighted plant is likely to be symmetrical with closely spaced leaves and many blooms in the center.

Fluorescent lights are good for growing African violets where they don't get enough natural light. But don't crowd them under light. Keep about 8 inches between plants and lights and if plants seem to stretch, lower lights a little or raise plants.

Water African violets only when the soil is dry to the touch, then apply room temperature (or slightly above) water thoroughly. Cold water can spot leaves.

Violets like well-drained potting soil high in organic matter. Soluble fertilizers recommended for flowering plants should be diluted but there are special formulations for violets.

A new special display being developed at the U.S. Botanic Garden in Washington highlights plants created by American breeders. One new item is Meserve Blue Hollies, Blue Maid and Blue Stallion, developed by hybridizer Kathleen Meserve of Long Island, N.Y., and Vero Beach Fla. The hollies were specially grown by Conard-Pyle Co. of West Grove, Pa., which has introduced eight new hollies created by Mrs. Meserve in the past 10 years.

Another item is a new, highly fragrant pink flowering dogwood for the National Arboretum. It was found in a group of "Cherokee Chief" dogwoods by Kit and Muriel Steppe of Wayside Nurseries, Raleigh, N.C., and is named Pink Sachet.

Q. How should canna bulbs be stored? Can they stay in the ground all winter? (T.N., Badin)

A. In most areas of North Carolina, thr ground feezes and the rhizomes — they are not true bulbs — will not overwinter. After the frost kills the foliage, dig the rhizomes up, remove the tops and any remaing soil and let them dry for a few days. They should be stored at 45 to 50 degree farenheit in bushel baskets or burlap bags and covered with peat moss.

Q. What is liquid manure? (D.L., Wendell)

A. Liquid manure is the fluid that leaches from dried manure immersed in water for a period of time. It is prepared by the home gardener for use as a liquid fertilizer. It is not available commercially. Liquid manure is also called manure water and manure tea.

Q. Can camellias be pruned now? (F.R., Charlotte)

A. Spring flowering shrubs such as camellia, azalea, mock-organge, forsythia and flowering quince have already set their flower buds for 1984. Pruning now will reduce the number of flowers this spring. Delay pruning until after the shrubs have bloomed.

Q. How many leaves can I add to my garden soil, and what can I do to hasten their decomposition? (O.S., Albemarle)

A. Four to six inches of leaves added to the garden site should not cause any problems if they are watered down and then turned into the soil as soon as possible. Applying nitrogen fertilizer (one pound of 33 percent nitrogen per 100 square feet) will hasten the decomposition process. Since decomposition is n acid-forming process, apply an equal amount of lime with the fertilizer.

Hand sanding, so-called because the hand supplies the power and sandpaper supplies the abrasive, still plays an important part in refinishing despite the multiplicity of electric sanders on the market.

There are times when only hand sanding is delicate enough to perform certain tasks, such as the smoothing between coats and the final finishing process. It is especially helpful when a valuable or cherished piece of furniture is being refinished and must be treated very gently to prevent the damage that can be caused by a power sander not handled with expertise.

Whether refinishing is just a hobby or a serious way of restoring furniture or other objects, a knowledge of the various kinds of sandpaper can help you make the proper selections. Of course, as you probably know, although it isn't really important whether or not you do, sandpaper contains no sand. It is a mineral abrasive attached to a backing that is usually paper but is sometimes cloth or some other material. Here is a list of the most commonly used sandpapers or abrasive papers:

Flint — Made of white quartz. The cheapest of the abrasives. Not as efficient as the others. Sometimes used for rough work and then discarded. Can be used for light sanding of softwoods.

Garnet — Made of red quartz. Can also be used for sanding softwoods, but is harder than flint, cuts faster and holds up better.

Emery — Usually has a cloth backing. Once used extensively on metals, but has lost out greatly in this respect to aluminum oxide. Still is used on metal for polishing, cleaning and light tasks.

Silicon Carbide — Black and hard. Used a lot for wet-or-dry sanding with a waterproof backing. Suited for sanding glass. When used with very light hand pressure, it is excellent for getting a very smooth finish on final coats.

Aluminum Oxide — A synthetic abrasive. Very hard. Very durable. Can be used on all materials and for hand or power sanding.

There are many varieties of sandpaper in addition to the differences in the types of abrasives. For removing paint, varnishes and other finishes, extra coarse sandpaper is used. The grades go down the line from medium coarse to medium to fine to extra fine. The finer the grade, the better it is for sanding between coats and on the final coat. All sandpapers were once numbered to indicate the grades, but these became confusing after a time, especially when different manufacturers used different numbering systems. While numbers are still used in some cases, most manufacturers now specify whether a paper is coarse or fine or whatever.

When you have rough work that will clog the paper, it is best to use an open-coated abrasive, which simply means the particles on the paper are spaced far apart. When the paper is wrapped around a sanding block, remember the more resilient the block, the better it is for precision sanding. In some cases, the surest way to do very light sanding is to apply the tiniest bit of pressure with your hand and not use a sanding block at all. When this is done, care must be exercised not to apply uneven pressure by pressing down harder with one or more fingers.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743.)

Wood-Refuse Is Tennis Answer

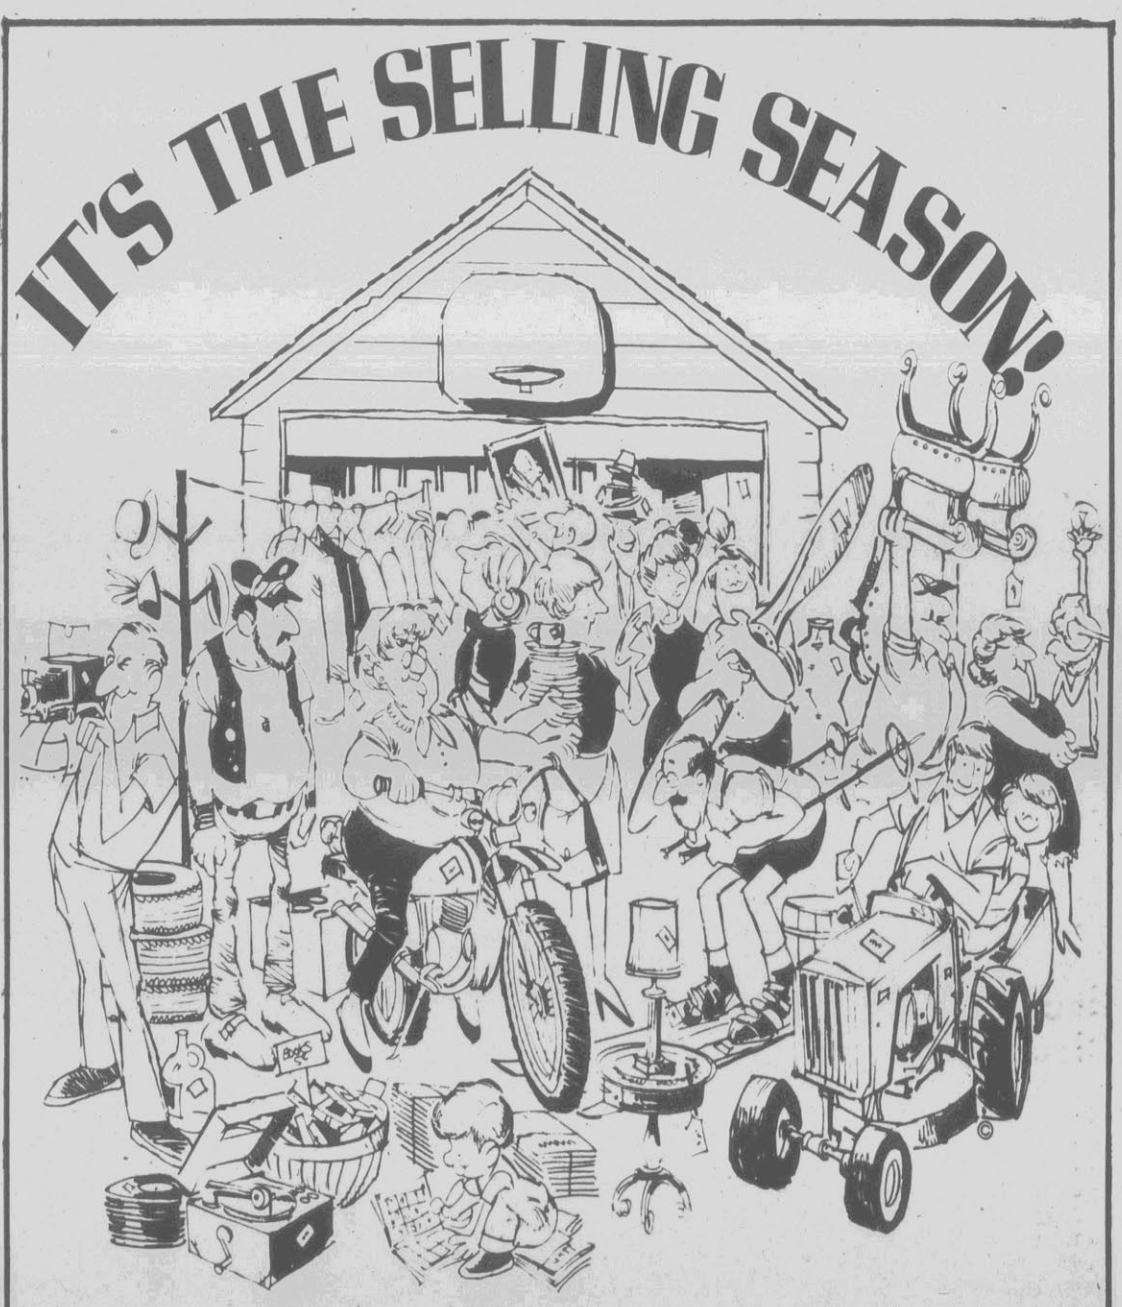

HI-TECH RACKET

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — Wood-refuse has joined catgut to make tennis a safer sport.

Tennis elbow, an ailment suffered by many who play the sport, can be avoided by using a newly developed tennis racket made of carbon-fiber converted from wood-refuse, according to research done here by R.K. Textiles and Win Sports Ltd.

Until now, power could only be obtained from using a "closed-loop" tennis racket which radiates the shock of hitting a ball to the racket frame. This causes a whip effect which, after numerous repetitions, causes tennis elbow, the developers of the new racket say.

The carbon-fiber racket, however, is open at the base and absorbs the shock in the racket shaft, eliminating the whip effect, they say. Because of the carbon fiber's strength it is lightweight and powerful.

ONE ACE TOO MANY

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands that we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series, we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

Both vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH

◇ Void
♣ K

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♣.

Over the years, we have read thousands of bridge magazines. Not only have we enjoyed them, but they have proved a fertile source of hands for this column. This hand, reported many years ago in the Indian Bridge World, ranks high among our favorites. Sitting East was Shri D.V. Gore. He was playing for Bombay in a match in Calcutta.

We were not given an explanation of North's strange two no trump response - to our eyes, one no trump would have adequately described his soft 10 points. Not that that would have made any difference to the final contract – South would still have bid four hearts at his second turn.

West got off to the only lead to give his side a chance – the ace of clubs. Even so, it is not easy to spot how the defenders managed to beat four hearts.

West continued his good work by shifting to a trump at trick two in an effort to eliminate dummy's ruffing power. The table's nine of hearts won the trick and declarer ran the six of spades to West's ten. Continuing his attempt to keep declarer from ruffing a spade, West persisted with a trump.

East's moment of immortality had arrived. After considerable thought, he jettisoned his ace of spades! Declarer had no counter. When he led another spade from the board, West was able to win and remove dummy's last trump. As a result, declarer ended up losing three spade tricks and a club for down one.

Observe that declarer would have had an easy path if East hangs on to his ace of spades. East will have to win the second spade lead and he cannot return a trump, nor does he have any way to get to his partner for another trump lead. Declarer will win any return, ruff a spade in dummy to set up the suit and claim his contract.

Send any questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

Charles Goren and Omar Sharif personally cannot undertake to answer all questions submitted.

Bourbon Adds 'Saucy' Touch

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Now we know what Killer's always known about Geraldine Jones: where that saucy voice comes from.

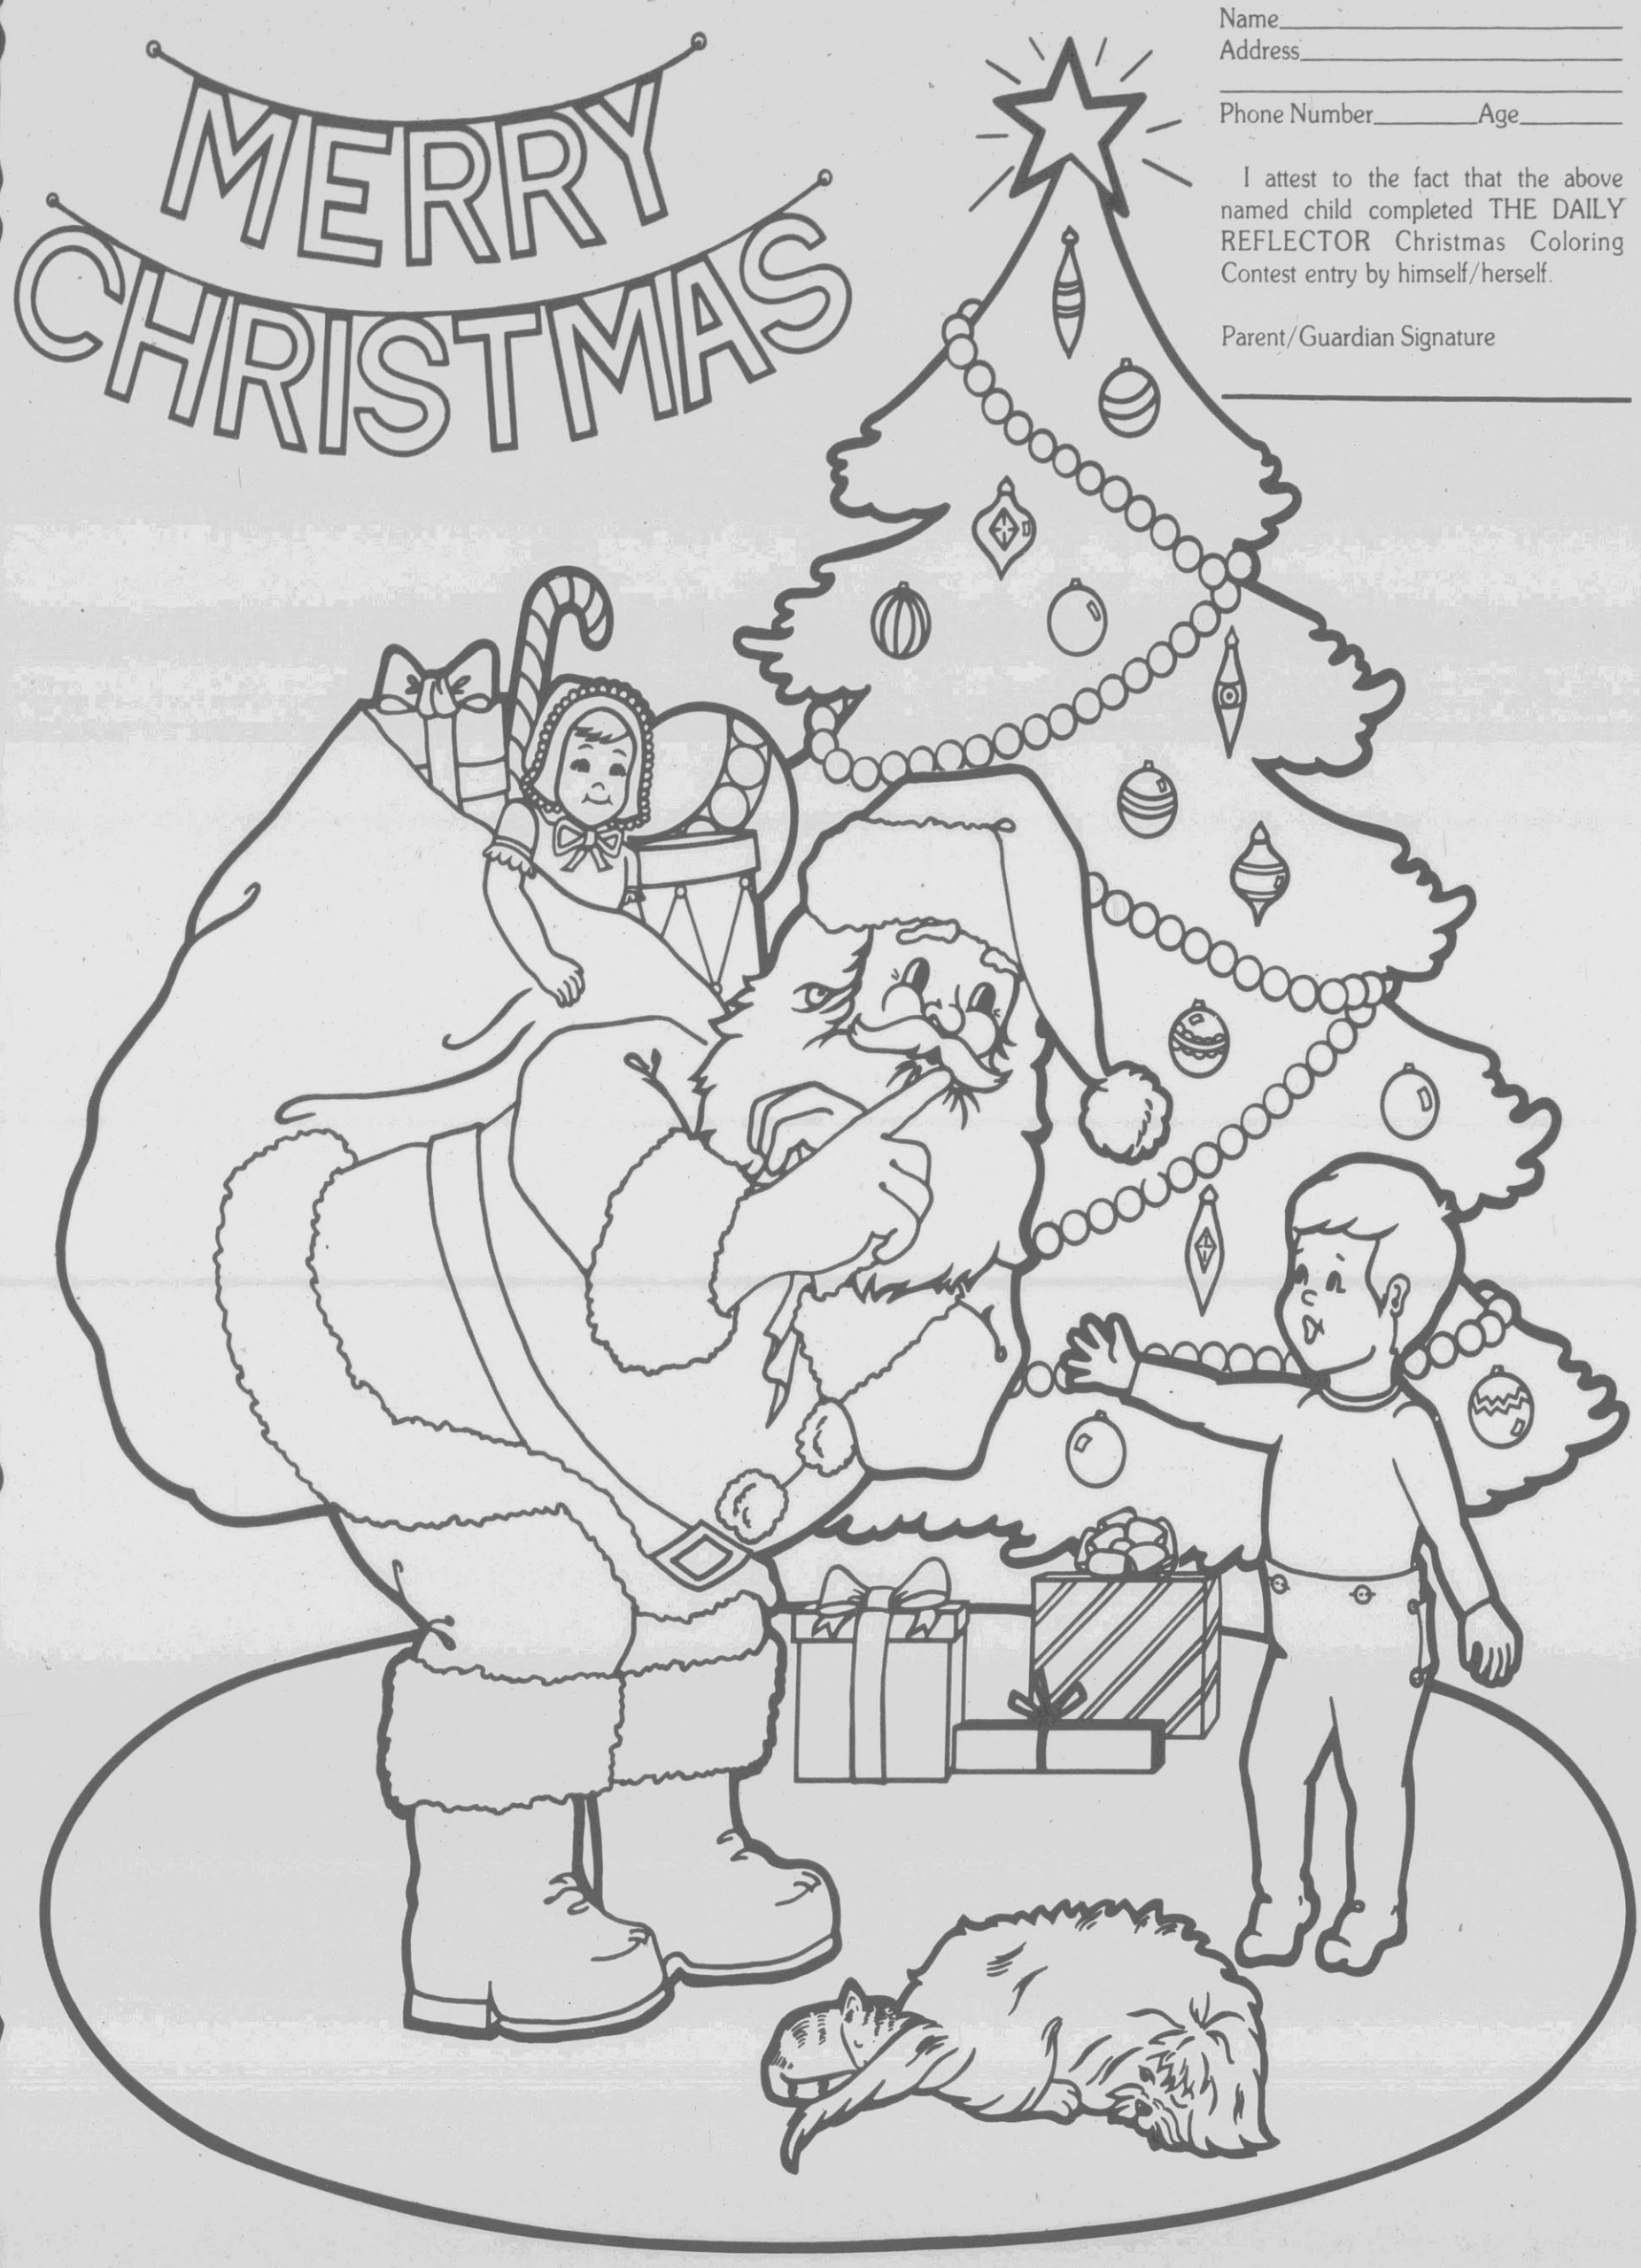

Comedian Flip Wilson made the revelation while talking about his famous comic creation on the late-night show "Thicke of the Night."

"Before I do Geraldine I usually take a double shot of 100-proof bourbon, just to irritate my throat so I can get the voice right," Wilson said.

"I'm not a bourbon drinker, but there's nothing else that gives my voice that 'Geraldine' sound."

Or is really because "The devil made me do it?"

STRIP-EASE
"A Better Way To Take It Off"
Residential - Commercial - Industrial
The STRIP-EASE process is a completely new method for removing finishes from WOOD, METAL, PLASTIC or GLASS. It has been developed and perfected over a number of years by a professional antique refinisher who was dissatisfied with the results of stripping processes on todays market. Stripease is not like conventional dip processes, which may damage wooden furniture. It employes a UNIQUE JET SPRAY ACTION which quickly removes finish from cracks, spindles, carvings and hard to get places to restore wood to its original warm look.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Refusing to upset the applecart of present conditions by nagging or being overcritical, but by your own intelligent actions can make this a very worthwhile day.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Good morning to sit down with your mate and talk over the various aims you both have and to coordinate your efforts.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Contacting business associates at leisure and stating your plans would be wise before they attempt drastic changes.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A day to be of help to others and observe the Golden Rule. Avoid those who take delight in downgrading you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Acceptable amusements are your best bet today. Avoid doing work that could upset you.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Plan to keep those promises you made to kin some time ago and get busy on them. Forget expensive pleasures right now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study a new philosophy which intrigues you and get the right answer to present perplexities. Be happy at home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Even if it is Sunday, be sure to study your financial standing. Plan how best to improve it by consulting experts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have good ideas and should see as many friends as possible to improve relationships. Avoid discussing practical affairs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you try to force others to acquiesce to your desires, this could lead to battles. Be more tactful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Stop brooding about some worry and get out to cheerful Sunday pursuits. Tonight, schedule the week's activities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be with older persons today since your regular friends could be trying to criticize you. Get into civic activities.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If you tackle that long-time worry from a different angle, you soon get rid of it. Steer clear of a demanding bigwig.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be able to make plans for far into the future and steadfastly carry through with them. Encourage in this, otherwise the success is lessened. Teach the importance of not taking any unnecessary risks.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1983

GENERAL TENDENCIES: On the surface, there seems to be considerable agitation to get every single detail of any plan of action corrected. There is certainly the opportunity for one to use resourcefulness and ingenuity.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Gain the cooperation of partners for your plans by being kind with them instead of criticizing so much.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be of some service to others and gain their cooperation for your ideas. Don't rely on your charm alone.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) By helping one who is close to bigwigs who support you, you gain greatly at this time. Find a new outlet for hidden talents.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) A cooperating partner can assist you in getting the backing you need from another so that you get projects finished.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Talk your ambitions over with a charming individual and get good advice from that source. Don't ask for favors.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Although business problems should not be brought home, take a family tie to dinner and get the help you need now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are anxious to get much done with the aid of any outside partner. Schedule your time and plans wisely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Seek the advice of a friend who is practical concerning some problem with another pal. Don't ask for financial help.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A progressive pal could assist you with some worrisome matter. Talk little and listen more for good results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Search for the right answer to a problem that is deterring your progress and get it. Confide in a good advisor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Go to see a bigwig and state your ambitions. You will get the right advice on how best to attain your goals.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Talk over with an expert how you can meet your obligations. Seek a new method you have not thought of.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will live a fine life. Be sure to teach early not to talk so much and alienate others by being a smart-aleck. Listening is a virtue that can bring greater success. Slant the education along the lines of selling, law or police work.

Bumper Turkey Crop Forecast

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — A bumper turkey crop is forecast for 1983, along with prices no higher than at holiday time last year.

Dan Cunningham, a Cornell University poultry specialist and assistant professor of poultry science, says this year's crop is expected to total 169 million, up 4 million from 1982. Cunningham says retail prices will range from 60 to 80 cents a pound.

Modern gobblers range from light-weight, fryer-roasters weighing 4 to 9 pounds each to heavy breeds topping 20 pounds or more.

Cunningham says North Carolina is the nation's leader in turkey production, raising 28.8 million birds a year. Minnesota runs a close second with 26.6 million, and California is third with 20 million.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 11-26

Today's Cryptoquip clue: G equals O.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Christmas Gift Guide

Holiday season celebrates joy, love, good will

Christmas traditions link past and present

Home for Christmas . . . the words ring with the brief, beautiful moments when all are children once again, bright cheeks glowing and giggles bursting with excitement from amidst rainbows of untied ribbons and scattered wrappings. Pleasures to be felt and savored are the warmth of steaming cocoa sipped through cream, the loving hugs of young and old as they snuggle around a crackling fire on Christmas Eve.

A time of tradition, Christmas present forever links to Christmases past, continuing the chain of memories that binds us to that first Christmas, when the earthly father Joseph was himself compelled to return to his homeland to be taxed, and thus the first journey home was made in anticipation of the child Jesus' birth.

All over the world, people keep the traditions that they learnt as children, each parent wishing only to recreate for their own children the magic of holiday joy that they themselves shared as youngsters.

Stockings are hung and trees are trimmed to the sound of carols drifting in from the snowy outdoors.

Children bake cookies and wrap each other's gifts while mom stuffs a turkey and dad drapes the doorway with garlands and lights.

Young lovers delight in kisses stolen beneath the mistletoe, and grandpa sits by the fireside, stirring the dying embers, as he recalls long forgotten days of boyhood Christmases to an audience of wide-eyed youngsters.

Then, all too soon, grandpa's tales come to an end as the children are hurried off to bed, so excited it seems they'll never sleep.

They check one last time to be sure that Santa's cookies and cocoa are left where he's sure to find them and, after lingering over a few goodnight kisses, are off to bed.

Dawn finds ribbons flying through a maze of crumpled wrappings as children of all ages delight in giving and receiving gifts.

After a festive breakfast, the family attends mass or services though, for many, a candlelight mass on Christmas Eve is a long-standing tradition.

After noon, aunts, uncles, cousins and relatives perhaps not seen on any other occasion, arrive to share in the day's joy.

Gifts are exchanged, wonderful foods enjoyed, and an overwhelming warmth appreciated.

Is it any wonder that all roads lead home at Christmas? Not at all, when you realize that being together is perhaps the greatest gift of all.

Yuletide enchantment

Beauty tips for holiday razzle-dazzle

'Tis the season to be glamorous in dazzling party dresses. These glittery holiday fashions require make-up with a subtle, sexy finished look that makes you look and feel magnificent!

"With holiday parties fast approaching," says Ralph Porto, president of Hazel Bishop Cosmetics, "now is the time to experiment with those extra special finishing touches and put together your party look."

Here are some special suggestions from the experts at Hazel Bishop Cosmetics that will make you stand out from the crowd and glitter!

• With all eyes on you in your slinky holiday best, you become a sexy focal point. So, be sure to spotlight your curves with a powder blush for an all-over glow — on shoulder blades, collarbone.

Because indoor lighting drains the rosy tones from your skin and face, use a soft natural pink blush. Powder blushes are easiest to work with and also eliminate shiny areas, especially on your forehead, nose and chin.

• Draw up an eye-opening plan for the holiday season. Alluring eyes are a must on festive holiday nights and can easily be created with a little know-how.

Use liners to boldly accent the shape of your eye. Always line your eyes from the inner corners out, widening the line slightly as you go out. Don't go out too far — it's your eyes not the liner you want to draw attention to.

Skillful shadowing is the key to making eyes seductive and daring. Use a powder eyeshadow to highlight and contour your eyes with dramatic definition.

First, fill in a contour shade over the lid area. Then, fill in the area under your eyebrow with a lighter color to highlight. Hazel Bishop Eyeshadow Classics are available in five color schemes, each with four colors for perfect highlighting and contouring. To give a deep look to eyes and a chiseled look to your nose, lightly bring your contour shade down the sides of the nose bridge.

Finally, apply two coats of No-Smear Mascara to lashes, allowing the first coat to dry before applying the second. To make the whites of your eyes look especially bright, line the lower lid with a blue/purple liner and add tiny touches of blue eyeshadow to the corners.

• Who needs diamonds? Sparkle your fingertips and toes with a professional "look" manicure and pedicure, making your nails look like glittering jewels.

Start with a base coat to make your nails more resistant to breakage and to increase the longevity of your manicure or pedicure; it also serves as a smooth base for your polish.

Then, apply a chip-proof nail polish in a color shade that complements your party dress. Be sure to apply two coats for a smooth look.

Lastly, apply a top coat to protect your nails from unexpected chips and a professional finished look.

For extra razzle-dazzle, try Hazel Bishop's Brite Lites Porcelain Glaze Gold or Silver Nail Enamel. For a low luster sheen, apply a single coat of the gold or silver over your regular color shade; use two coats for more gleam.

• Sensuous lips are made for kissing under the mistletoe. For party evenings, select a no-smear, long-lasting lipstick with a built-in natural sheen.

Use a no-smear lipstick especially if your lips are dry and cracked from the cold winter weather; creamy lipsticks will only run into cracks accentuating imperfections.

Be sure to also blot your lipstick with a tissue to "set" the color and outline shape. For extra sheen, apply a clear gloss over your lipstick.

Gift of luxury and comfort

EVERY DAY WILL BE SPECIAL for the person who receives a luxurious down-filled comforter. It makes you feel cozy all night snuggled underneath it because it settles over your body to keep you warm in the winter and comfortable in the summer months. A sense of luxury and ultimate comfort that will last for years and even generations is an extra plus that comes with a down-filled comforter. It looks just as attractive in a traditional or modern setting and adds a touch of elegance anywhere. It also makes bed making a breeze — just fluff up the comforter and the bed is made. That's almost like having another present that lasts year round.

Pets under foot: adorable animals make ideal gifts

Pets are good for people. It's a conclusion reached by a top-rated television news program that recently spent part of its prime-time hour discussing the therapeutic value of owning pets.

Dogs, cats, birds, even occasional reptiles have proved themselves loving, cuddly and undemanding companions for all types of human beings.

With holiday gift-giving approaching, you may want to act upon this theory as you shop for your favorite teenager, senior citizen or middle-aged workaholic.

What type of pet is affordable, housebroken and suitable for both small apartments and large homes! Pet Slippers, of course.

Holly Haas, assistant buyer of slippers for JC Penney department stores, comments on the novelty gift item: "The thick acrylic pile Pet Slippers are fun, something different for grown-ups, in both scuff and boot styles."

Elephants, lions and honeybears make up the holiday menagerie, and will look right at home under the Christmas tree in their special pet carrier boxes.

Haas continues: "The Pet Slippers are loose-fitting and comfortable, with plenty of room for layers of heavy socks, tights or bulky leg warmers. So, while your legs look right in tune with fashion, your feet are cozy and warm."

How to build a home for dolls and toys

Just in time for holiday gift giving, here's a project that allows kids to keep house in two ways: Half of it is a dollhouse, perfect for pretend house-keeping; the other half is a toy box where the youngsters can store playthings so their room stays neat.

You can cut the entire dollhouse-toy box — excluding the optional trees and shrubs — out of a single sheet of ½-inch exterior plywood (good both sides). The design of the trees is up to you.

The building experts at Georgia-Pacific remind you to always wear safety goggles when using a hammer or power tools. And don't forget to follow manufacturer's instructions when using power tools.

Take care in cutting the compound angles of the roof parts. To ensure that you won't ruin a piece by mismeasuring and/or shaving off too much wood when making the bevels, make each roof piece longer than the dimensions shown on the cutting diagram.

Cut out the parts, then hold them together temporarily to figure out the direction of the bevels. As you fit the rough-cut pieces together, refer often to these illustrations, which you'll quickly realize are worth a thousand words.

MAKE SOMEONE'S CHRISTMAS a very special memory this year, by building her a unique dollhouse, which doubles as a toy box, from plans created by the experts at Georgia-Pacific.

Examine the drawings and the pieces you've cut, then set your table saw for 12 degrees to make the bevel cuts. Next, hold the parts together again and check the fit.

When you're certain you've got each roof piece cut correctly, trim off any extra wood from its nonbeveled end to get the final dimensions.

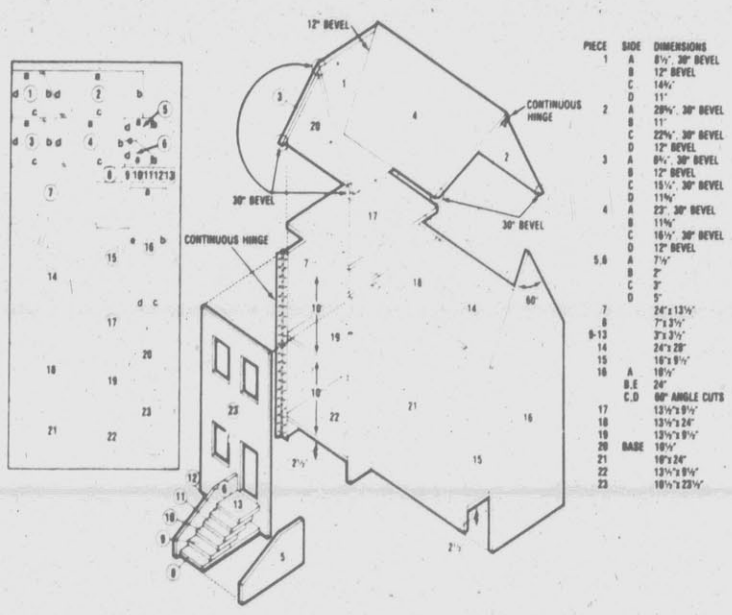

Once you have cut out, beveled, and trimmed off all the roof parts, the rest comes easy. Cut out the remaining parts and assemble all the stationary pieces with glue and nails.

Hinge the front door of the house with small butt hinges: at the peak of the roof, use a continuous hinge.

Make window trim from scraps (you can use some of the pieces you cut out in making the windows and door) or purchase ready-made trim from a hobby shop.

Gifts of food make a hit at Christmas

Christmas can be just plain hectic — there are holiday goodies and decorations to prepare, special meals and parties to plan and presents to select.

An easy-to-follow guide, Betty Crocker's Christmas Cookbook (Golden Press, $14.95) helps you get everything done with time left to enjoy the holiday season.

Be creative

For example, this Christmas apply your creative hand to making special homemade gifts of food from the recipes in Betty Crocker's Christmas Cookbook.

By starting now and working at your own pace, you'll have quite a stockpile of delectables to choose from at Christmas time.

Range of recipes

There are recipes for jellies and jams, herbed vinegars and dressings, bottled cordials and sauces, and much more to help you avoid the throngs of last-minute holiday shoppers.

Your special gifts deserve special wrappings. Start saving unusual and attractive cans, bottles and jars now; with a few decorative touches, they can become personalized packagings for your gifts of food.

WHAT CAN BE MORE HEARTWARMING than to receive a handmade gift at Christmas — especially one you can eat! Betty Crocker's Christmas Cookbook shows you how to make gifts of food, and is a great gift in itself for cooks who love holiday baking.

Striking stripes for him

A HANDSOME DUO — Christmas gift ideas abound when you shop for Sportswear by Ron Chereskin. This year give the man in your life a Ron Chereskin shirt and tie combination. Choose a sport shirt or a dress shirt in one of many colors and styles, then select from a variety of ties to complete the perfect ensemble. Ron Chereskin Menswear is available at fine department and specialty stores nationwide.

LOGGING THE FUTURE

An emblem of good luck, the Yule log should only be half-burnt. The remainder of the log should be kept to light a new log on the next Christmas Eve. It is believed to be bad luck if a barefoot or squinty person comes into the house while the fire is burning.

FIT FOR A KING

During biblical times, the gifts of frankincense and myrrh were as precious as gold. Once worn on the crowns of Persian kings to symbolize wealth, myrrh is an aromatic resin prized as a perfume, a spice and a medicine. Frankincense is also a resin used for embalming.

GIFTS IN DISGUISE

In Holland, it is the custom to go to great lengths to disguise Christmas gifts. In fact, it is not uncommon for people to go so far as to wrap a package, and then coat it with dough. It is then baked in the oven to make it look like a loaf of bread. A surprise package indeed!

Color photographs bring joy at Christmas

The Christmas season is a time of celebration, made especially festive through the exchange of gifts with family and friends. But choosing just the right gifts is often a confusing and frustrating task. This Christmas season, why not give your loved ones photographs.

A photograph is the perfect gift to share with those who mean the most to you, to demonstrate how much you care. An attractively matted, framed and personally signed color photograph can preserve a special moment in time as a precious and vivid memory that lasts a lifetime.

The vibrant colors of the holiday season are perfectly suited to color photography. Photographs of the family gathered around the gaily decorated Christmas tree, or in front of a crackling fireplace will be especially treasured as gifts. They're also ideal as homemade Christmas cards. A photograph can truly reflect genuine affection and thought, more so than most store-bought gifts.

A photograph offered as a gift should represent your best efforts. For this reason, the choice of film is critical. Fuji, the Official Film of the Los Angeles 1984 Olympics, is renowned for dependable, high quality, brilliant color reproduction and sharpness.

For indoor and outdoor family portraits, or scenic shots, a fine grain film with an ASA/ISO of 100, such as Fujichrome 100 slide film or Fujicolor HR100 print film, offers brilliant color saturation and sharp definition, qualities especially important if you plan to make enlargements.

When photographing under low light conditions, or shooting candid or action scenes, a faster film that is more sensitive to light and permits the use of a faster shutter speed, such as Fujichrome 400 or Fujicolor HR400, is recommended.

Do not limit your subject matter by any means only to loved ones. An architectural study of a dear friend's lovely home taken at dusk, capturing the angles of the structure and the surrounding grounds beneath a dramatically darkening sky, will no doubt be cherished by the owner.

Similarly, any animal lover will be eternally grateful to receive a candid photograph of the family pet, or shots of wildlife captured in beautiful settings. Environmental portraits of landscapes, forests, waterfalls and sunsets are well-received by lovers of nature.

Try to match the subject of the photograph to the interests of the person and your gift is bound to be a source of delight.

The Fuji Film experts offer the following additional advice to help you take photographs that will make ideal Christmas gifts:

- Always check to make sure your camera and flash unit are working properly. Thoroughly familiarize yourself with your equipment, remember to remove the lens cap, and be certain the film is properly loaded.
- Use plenty of film, match the film type to the situation and light conditions, and bracket exposures in order to be sure the exposure will be correct and to be able to select from a variety of lighting effects.
- Plan ahead. Try to schedule your shootings far enough in advance of the holidays to take advantage of beautiful outdoor lighting conditions when they present themselves.
- Pre-visualize the photograph you intend to take. Move in close to the subject, so the image fills the viewfinder. Change position, shoot from several angles, place subjects in front of a variety of backgrounds.
- Be aware of color. Fuji films are renowned for their true-to-life color reproduction capabilities. Brilliant colors, pleasing natural patterns, and bright, even lighting produce the best family portraits, while more dramatic lighting enhances the beauty of scenes and environmental shots.
- When shooting family portraits, for color harmony, coordinate clothing and select a complementary background. Never allow the background to distract from or overpower the main subject of the photograph.
- Crouch down to photograph children at their level, never down on these subjects.
- Carefully examine the full selection of photographs before selecting the final shots for enlargements. Check for closed eyes, unappealing facial expressions, unsightly or intrusive background elements, accidental scratches and spots on the negative or transparency caused by handling.

Problems are always far more apparent in enlargements. After the photographs have been enlarged and printed, check again for any unattractive elements.

Most importantly, using your most critical eye, determine if the photographs truly represent your best work. If not, reevaluate your selections and enlarge additional shots.

- Choose mats and frames that complement the photograph. Most photography labs or retailers offer custom mounting and framing services, as well as greeting card and Christmas card services.

If he's been very good, give him jewelry, the gift of love

If you're looking for something extra special for the men in your life (dad, brother, husband or boy friend) make it the gift of love — jewelry.

Because a gift of jewelry is a highly personal gift, and something that continues to give pleasure for years to come, it's a favorite at Christmas time, says the Jewelry Industry Council.

You don't have to worry about his sock size, neck or sleeve measurements, or his preference in fabrics or colors when you select something from the jewelry store. Furthermore, you've a wealth of gift ideas to choose from.

GIFTS FOR HIM — Jewelry, the gift of love for that very special man in your life, is a gift that keeps on giving pleasure long after Christmas is gone, says the Jewelry Industry Council. Gold filled money clips, coin cuff links, tie bars, gold filled buttons for his favorite blazer, or a handsome 14 karat horse for a pendant are just a few of the suggestions for Christmas morning pleasure that the Council enumerates.

It could be coin cufflinks, gold tiebars, engraved money clips, a handsome karat gold pendant with his birth sign, initial, favorite sport or animal in karat gold. Choose a set of gold-filled buttons for his treasured blazer as a novel gift.

Elegant accessories

Then there are bar ware items for the perfect host, as well as handsome silver desk accessories, such as stamp dispensers, letter openers, and don't forget the new elegantly styled writing implements on onyx or marble desk stands or a pen/pencil set for his pocket.

The very newest item for that special man "who has everything" is the jewelry tie. It is similar to the bolo, but has a precious metal chain of karat gold or sterling silver, with a "knot" decoration that often sports a diamond or other impressive stone.

Personalized present

Don't forget it is possible to have many jewelry store items engraved with his name or initials, the Council points out.

This Christmas, make it personal and a special gift — those "good things in small packages" usually come from the jeweler's, says the Council.

All we want for Christmas is more home entertainment

With the holiday gift lists growing and the cost of entertainment soaring, many families are pooling their resources this year for large single-purchase items that everyone can enjoy.

The trend towards group gifts — within extended families or groups of friends — includes hi-fi component systems, video equipment and car stereos, according to audio manufacturer Bose Corporation, whose dealers across the U.S. report increased sales of high-ticket consumer electronics products as holiday gifts.

New or upgraded stereo systems are among the most-wanted home entertainment items. While Mom, Dad and the kids don't usually agree on what kind of music to listen to, everyone appreciates his or her favorites played on a good component system.

Contributions for group purchases can be sufficient to buy an entire system, or simply to upgrade one or two components.

According to Bose, speakers are first on the list of components to be upgraded, since they control the quality of sound from the complete system.

Selecting stereo speakers is as simple as trusting your own ears. Shoppers should expect to pay at least $250 for a pair of well-engineered loudspeakers.

While pre-packaged component systems might seem the easiest to buy, they don't always offer the best value.

It is easy enough to select your own, say the research engineers at Bose, who offer the following tips:

MUSIC TO THEIR EARS — This season, families are pooling their resources to buy home entertainment products everyone can enjoy, according to Bose Corporation, the U.S. audio products company.

• Bring good copies of favorite records to test on a variety of speakers. Have different kinds of music, to be sure that the Philharmonic sounds as real as the rock singer.

• Ask the salesperson to play your records on two different sets of speakers at the same volume. Select the best set and compare them to a third.

• Use this process of elimination to evaluate the speakers you are considering, but don't compare too many sets in one day. A few hours of comparison can lead to listener — and family — "burn-out."

• Stand a couple of feet directly in front of one speaker. See if you can hear both speakers, or if the nearby speaker drowns out the farther one. This will help assure that you hear true stereo.

• Set the receiver to the hissing noise between FM stations and have everyone walk around the listening room. Is the sound about the same throughout the room, or does the character of the hiss change a lot as you walk? A good pair of speakers will give you more uniform sound quality throughout the room.

• The next step is one the kids can enjoy. Close your eyes. See if you can tell where the sound is coming from. If you can pinpoint the speakers, you are not getting the concert hall effect. At a live performance, 10 percent of the sound comes directly from the source (instruments, voice), while 90 percent is reflected off room surfaces.

• Finally, since this is the family's Christmas gift to one another, when the speakers are home and set up, sit back and enjoy your favorite holiday album. And thank each other for making Christmas sound better than it ever has!

For free listening information to help you select new stereo speakers, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Bose Corporation, Box HS, The Mountain Road, Framingham, MA 01701.

For holiday gift-givers, the leading men's fashion designers say the magic word this season is "sweaters."

The winners of this year's Cutty Sark Men's Fashion Awards, the Oscars of the men's fashion industry, agree that the new sweaters are more versatile than ever and will make perfect gifts for almost every man on a gift list.

These experts say the new color combinations and styles make them ideal replacements for blazers and outerwear. Sweaters are even being designed to be worn over other sweaters.

Winter sporting motifs such as flying pheasants, holiday reindeer, skaters and sledders are the special touches added to the Polo sweater collection from Ralph Lauren, winner of the Cutty Sark Career Achievement Award. He suggests these to recapture the Sun Valley look of the '20s and '30s.

According to Ron Chereskin, whom the nation's fashion press voted Outstanding Sportswear Designer in the Cutty Sark honors, "A sweater vest is ideal for a contemporary layered look. When it's worn under a sport coat, a man can change his business appearance to a rich country club look." His bold new patterns include geometrics, linears and overscaled argyles.

"A rep stripe blazer sweater is a perfect alternative to the blazer," points out Sal Cesarani, a two-time nominee for Outstanding U.S. Designer in the Cutty Sark Awards.

"My blazer sweater has a shawl collar and six button closings with two front pockets," he says. "Best of all for shoppers, it comes in easy sizes — small, medium and large."

Laura Pearson's hand-knit Tijuca sweaters earned her this year's Cutty Sark trophy as Most Promising U.S. Designer. "For the holidays," she says, "my long kimono sweater for men is a unique alternative to the traditional winter coat. It comes in a one-size-fits-all model and it molds itself to the body."

If you want to give your newly sweatered or jacketed man an added look of dash and daring, Marsha Akins, winner of Cutty Sark's Outstanding Accessories Designer award, reports that her Makins hats come in 120 color variations and in the softest velours and fur felts.

Paring down to essentials...

Simple comforts for the holidays

This year when dashing through the holidays, oh what fun it will be to play it simple. 'Tis the season that even Mother Nature celebrates the beauty of the bare essence.

Taking this as cue, don't deck the halls with an over-elaborate barrage of hangings, wreaths, crafts, trims, decorations and ornaments.

Try instead for the pure and simple — the fragrant basket of pine cones, the strategically-placed poinsettia or the beauty of a bowl of apples.

Use a natural garland or wreath, and have a tree that doesn't groan under the burden of too many lights and ornaments.

Plan holiday meals with the same sense of simplicity. A traditional turkey can have its trimmings but neither it nor your guests will benefit from the addition of two appetizers, three salads, four vegetables and five different desserts.

To help you pare down or in this case, "pear" down, included is an uncomplicated dessert of poached pears in an eggnog sauce.

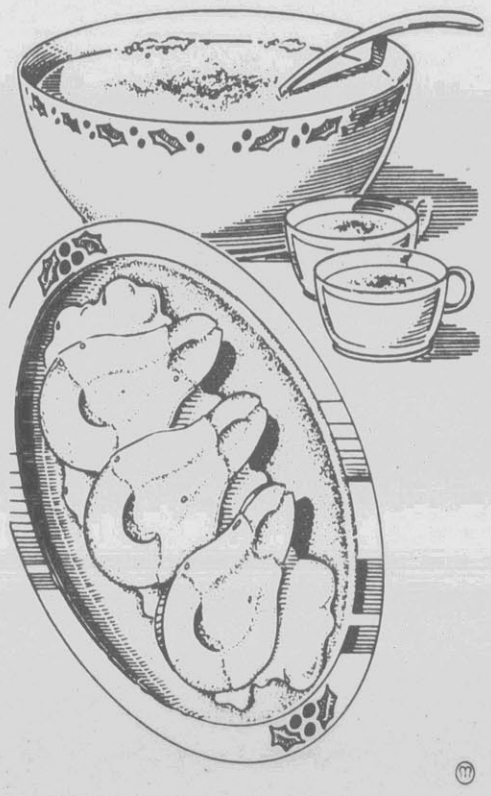

It's easy to make, yet its classic white-on-white presentation is as elegant and dramatic as a wintery landscape.

No need either to worry about a commonplace flavor, for it uses the one-of-a-kind taste of Southern Comfort.

This deliciously different distilled spirit was created more than a century ago in Old World New Orleans. Uncover the good taste of the season with this tasty temptation.

For yet another uncomplicated, yet delectable treat, add Southern Comfort to your favorite store-bought or homemade eggnog.

Try for the simple comforts this season and perhaps discover as did Emerson that "to be simple is to be great."

SOUTHERN POACHED PEARS WITH EGGNOG SAUCE

- ¾ cup sugar
- ½ cup Southern Comfort
- 2 cups water
- 2 long strips orange peel
- 4 firm pears pared

* * * * *

- 1 cup light cream
- ¼ cup sugar
- 3 egg yolks
- 1 teaspoon cornstarch
- 1 to 2 tablespoons Southern Comfort

Combine sugar, Southern Comfort, water and orange peel in a non-aluminum pan. Bring to a boil.

Core pear, leaving stem intact or cut in half and remove core.

Simmer covered pears in Southern Comfort mixture, turning once or twice, until tender, about 25 minutes.

Cool pears in poaching sauce.

Eggnog Sauce: Heat cream in a heavy saucepan.

Beat sugar and egg yolks until thick and fluffy. Beat in cornstarch. Slowly beat in hot cream.

Stir in Southern Comfort.

To serve, spoon Eggnog Sauce onto serving plate, arrange pears in sauce — cut orange peel into long strips and drape over pear.

Makes 4 servings.

Swapping stockings for family fun

After drawing names from a hat several weeks before Christmas, each family member is responsible for filling another's stocking on the big day. With a bit of imagination and a lot of enthusiasm, a stocking exchange can bring the family closer together as well as lighten Santa's heavy load during the seasonal rush.

Giving Santa a break doesn't have to mean going broke. Many super gifts can be created from miscellaneous household objects, inexpensive items found in 5¢ and 10¢ stores and packages or bottles of Rit® Dye. Try your hand at these surprising stocking stuffers:

For solid color, dip hankies into a Rit dye-bath following package instructions. Or, to give a subtly shaded "ombre" effect, dip sections into the dye-bath for different lengths of time.

• Other feminine accessories include: nylon stockings dyed in seasonal hues . . . perfect for today's "leggy" fashions; brilliantly-dyed cotton socks for a "fun feet" look; brightly-dyed shoelaces to accent plain sneakers, act as hair ribbons, or use as an alternative to gift-wrap ribbon.

• Surprise the athlete in the family with colorful sporty t-shirts made from white cotton undershirts. Try tie-dyeing them for a trendy new look reminiscent of the 1960s!

• A practical gift becomes fun when you turn a white cotton pillowcase into a cheerfully-colored laundry bag. Take your pick of dye techniques: solid dye, tie-dye or ombre using the favorite colors of your lucky recipient.

A timely gift for personal wake-up

SOUNDS OF JOY . . . She can't say "thank you" to Santa yet, but she and her Mom will enjoy listening to Panasonic's talking clock radio. The RC-6810's voice selector lets you wake up to either a man's or woman's voice or music. Auto-time call and manual time call allows the voice to wake you every few moments or only once. Your spouse will appreciate the two alarm system, especially if one of you wants to sleep late. Other features include a Sure-alarm backup system, doze/sleep switch, fluorescent time display and a two-step brightness control.

Rainbow of color

NO WONDER Ship'n Shore's fabulous "Silken Wonder" blouse collection has won the accolades of stores and consumers across the country . . . making it the company's number one blouse. The fabric feels, looks and acts like silk . . . performs like 100 percent polyester — which it is! Besides the basic solid, which comes in 11 luminous colors, the prints are glorious . . . like this standout stripe, a fashion winner with puffed shoulders, ruffled band collar and side closing. Gift that children will grow with — a preschool library

Tired of giving your children Christmas gifts they discard after playing with them once or twice? If so, why not give them something really worthwhile this year which they'll enjoy and grow with for a long time.

The gift that's sure to shine long after the holiday season is over is the "Challenger" line of games and skill builders created by Program Design, Inc. (PDI), a publisher of educational software for home computers.

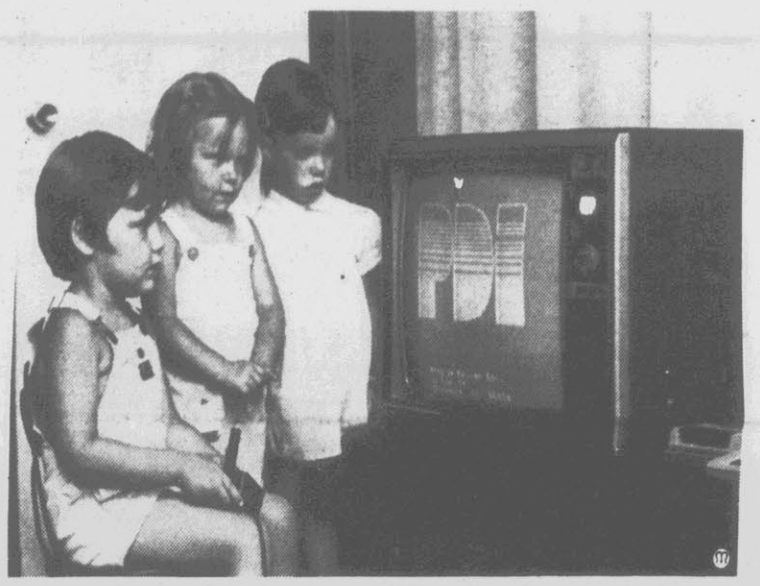

The "Challengers" comprise a revolutionary software series, designed by educators, that will help both you and your children to expand your learning potential to the fullest.

All PDI's programs reflect the philosophy that children as well as adults learn by working with learning programs that build on each other, starting with preschool, leading the child progressively through the different stages of learning skills.

To get your child off to a fast start, begin with PDI's Preschool Library package. It includes four individual programs that help three to six year-old children develop the critical skills needed when they start school. They include Sammy the Sea Serpent, The Adventures of Oswald, Preschool IQ Builder 1 and Preschool IQ Builder 2.

PDI's Preschool Library is designed for use in ATARI 400/800 computers. It consists of four cassettes and the User's Guide. It requires a minimum memory of 16K and retails for $59.95. A disk version (24K) retails for $69.95.

Each of the four titles in the package is also available individually, on either cassette or disk. The cassette versions of each title require 16K of memory and retail for $18.95. Disk versions require 24K and retail for $23.95.

CHILDREN ENJOY WORKING WITH COMPUTERS, especially with the PDI Preschool Library of fun-filled learning programs. PDI's cheerful characters and colorful graphics used in the home environment make learning and fun synonomous.

Capture holiday happiness

CHRISTMAS MORNING, grab your robe and instant camera to capture the moment your youngster has been anticipating for so long. For excitement and happiness, there's no match for Christmas Day, and there's no better way to capture that delight than with Polaroid's Sun 660 Autofocus camera. Move in close to get the action — and expression — as your child unwraps the special gift that makes the day. The Sun 660 camera focuses as close as two feet — automatically — and the built-in flash provides just the right illumination to light up wide eyes and happy grins. Take extra shots to share with family and friends.

Special grooming gift for him

Looking for a holiday gift for the man who has everything? Try slipping a little comfort into his Christmas stocking.

Every year men get bottles of high-alcohol aftershave. What most people don't realize is that those aftershaves can be irritating.

Shaving is tough on a man's face. Even if there's no obvious damage, the scraping process of shaving leaves microscopic nicks and cuts as well as removes at least one layer of skin. The new layer isn't quite mature and strong enough to face the assaults of the world. It needs some protection.

High-alcohol aftershaves can't provide protection. In fact, they may actually increase discomfort and skin irritation. That's where Saxon Lotion for Men comes in. Saxon isn't just an aftershave.

It's an aftershave skin conditioner that not only provides the refreshment and fragrance men want, but also is specially formulated to soothe shaving irritation and replenish — throughout the day — those emollients stripped away with shaving.

And Saxon is a gift that will please a man because it was planned that way. Before developing Saxon, the scientists at Richardson-Vicks talked directly to men about their preferences.

A CHRISTMAS GIFT TO MAKE A MAN — and his face — feel good. Saxon Lotion for Men is a new aftershave conditioner that not only provides the refreshment and fragrance men want, but also is specially formulated to soothe shaving irritation and replenish emollients stripped away with shaving.

Men reported that traditional moisturizing products are too greasy. That's not surprising, Saxon scientists say, since these moisturizers are formulated for a woman's skin, which tends to be drier than a man's.

Saxon contains a special conditioning system that is fast-penetrating and non-greasy. And, because Saxon was formulated to take the place of ordinary aftershave, it doesn't add an extra step to the shaving process.

Its fragrance, too, was the result of talking to men abut what they like. It's a blend of citrus, floral and woody notes that combine to form a fresh, invigorating, masculine scent.

That all comes down to a Christmas gift that will make a man — and his face — feel good.

A fine collectible: the perfect gift for the person who has everything

Finding the perfect Christmas gift becomes more challenging every year. What do you give to the people in your life who've attained the status of "the person who has everything?"

This year, why not start the people on your gift list on the road to a life-long hobby with the gift of a fine collectible.

The first item towards a collection makes a unique gift, is the beginning of a rewarding pastime that will bring enjoyment for years, and causes you to be remembered.

You can find collectible items that will appeal to any age group. Young children can be started on a collection of piggy banks or dolls. Teens will spend hours with stamp or coin collections.

THE GIFT OF A FINE COLLECTIBLE can start someone you love on a hobby which will provide a lifetime of pleasure and satisfaction. Ideal collectibles are dolls or paperweights, piggy banks or ceramic decanters — such as the one pictured above — and make perfect presents for those special people on your Christmas list.

For lovers of beauty

For those on your list who appreciate beauty, try paperweights, bells, butter dishes or ceramic plates. Collector's plates come in a variety of Christmas themes, the Norman Rockwell series being a particular favorite among those who collect Americana.

While all these collectibles will be enjoyed for their present beauty and uniqueness, they do have the potential of becoming valuable treasures that can increase in value in the future.

Bottle collecting is one of the most popular hobbies in the country today. Included in this category are ceramic decanters which are issued by many liquor companies throughout the year, as well as at Christmas time.

Austin, Nichols & Co., Inc., makers of Wild Turkey Bourbon, issues three limited edition Wild Turkey ceramic decanters every year.

Limited edition means that a specific number are produced and the mold is broken. Thus, there's a good possibility that the decanter will increase in value and become a highly-prized collector's item.

Increasing value

The first Wild Turkey decanter, introduced in 1971, originally retailed for $20. It now commands a price of about $500. The complete unopened set of eight from the first series now has an estimated value of $2,000!

Many ceramics are issued as part of a series, making it that much easier to select next year's gift. However, if the recipient has caught the collecting bug, they'll probably beat you to it.

If you missed out on the original series of Wild Turkey decanters issued between 1971 and 1978, you'll be happy to learn that a set of miniature (50 ml.) replicas of the originals — faithful in every detail — is now available (where legal only) for approximately $15 each.

Wild turkey minis #5 through 8are also being sold in sets of four for approximately $60. The minis make a terrific companion present for someone who is lucky enough to possess the original, full-size decanters, and it's also an excellent way to introduce someone to the fun of collecting.

So, if you're looking for a Christmas gift of distinction, a gift that may someday be a treasured object of value along with the memory of you, remember collectibles.

Good things in small packages

LONG AN IDEAL HOLIDAY STOCKING STUFFER, Sony audio tapes are practical, economical, compact and colorfully packaged. The Sony family of audio tapes includes LNX, BHF, AHF, UCX and UCX-S, designed for all recording needs. They may be employed in tape cassette decks, car stereo players and personal recorder/players. All Sony cassettes are available in 60- and 90-minute lengths. LNX is also available in 46-minute and 120-minute formats (both sides), the latter perfect for students wishing to record complete lectures without interruption. Sony microcassettes are also suitable for classroom use.

SOLVING HOLIDAY BLAHS

Uncle Charlie and 10 small toddlers will descend on your house for the holiday festivities. What to do to make it memorable?

Give a gift of sight and sound, according to John Dale of Fuji Photo Film U.S.A., Inc., a leading manufacturer of premium audio and videocassettes.

Make a film of the whole family a festive showpiece. Mount a special screening of a movie or a prerecorded program of children's cartoons to liven up the big day.

Amuse the pop generation — or any music lover — with a gift of fine audio cassettes. Perfect for stocking stuffers, perfect as last-minute gifts, a good audio or videocassette will make a gift that lasts and lasts — particularly if you have videotaped the family 'gobbling' up the Christmas turkey!

Just make sure you provide quality, name-brand tapes, says Fuji's Dale, to ensure those priceless memories don't fade in a videotape "snowstorm" of glitches, picture faults and dropouts.

Help for smokers, non-smokers

Just a few years ago smoking was considered a socially acceptable thing to do. Now, with the dangers well-documented, smoking is looked upon by many as a public nuisance rather than a personal indulgence.

More than ever, today, non-smokers have become vocal about the annoying effects of other people smoking. In response, restaurants have created smokeless zones and even municipalities have enacted laws preventing smoking in public places.

If you're like most, you have friends and family members who are smokers and non-smokers. That combination is likely to create an uncomfortable situation whenever the two groups are together.

Fortunately for smokers and non-smokers a new product has been introduced which just might be the answer, and it's the perfect Christmas gift for both.

The people at Pollenex have developed a new ashtray which helps clear the air for everyone on your Christmas list by automatically "inhaling" smoke from an idling cigarette or cigar resting on the ashtray.

Called the Pollenex® Smoke Grabber™ NO SMOKE™ Ashtray, the innovative new product utilizes a replaceable filter element which helps remove unsightly and annoying tobacco smoke and odors.

When a burning cigarette or cigar is rested on the ashtray a powerful battery-operated fan draws the smoke through a series of inlet vents and into a replaceable six-stage Smoke Grabber filter.

After the smoke has gone through the filtering process, cleaner air is released through a second series of vents at the bottom of the ashtray.

The ashtray helps to grab lingering smoke but does not "smoke" the cigarette or cigar, allowing the user to continue smoking after a short respite.

Pollenex developed the No Smoke Ashtray in response to growing public concern about the dangers of the inhalation of tobacco smoke from cigarettes or cigars.

No doubt there's a smoker on your Christmas list. And if he isn't planning a New Year's resolution to quit, the No Smoke Ashtray could be the perfect gift.

Better yet, why not gift yourself with this unique device and do away with annoying tobacco smoke and odors at home or in the office.

It is sold at local department stores, retail chains, catalog showrooms, drug, discount and hardware stores. For more information about the Pollenex No Smoke Ashtray, write to: Dept. GH, Associated Mills, Inc., 111 N. Canal St., Chicago, IL 60606.

SMOKERS AND NON-SMOKERS on your Christmas list will appreciate the new Pollenex No Smoke Ashtray. The innovative device helps remove unsightly and annoying tobacco smoke and odors from an idling cigarette or cigar when rested on the ashtray.

Christmas is what you make it

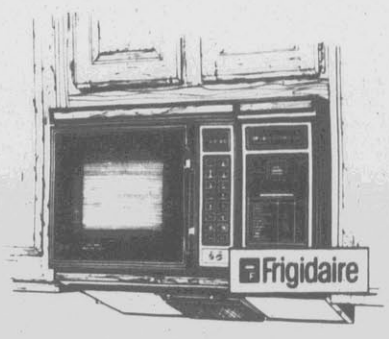

IT'S THE YEAR OF THE BEAR. Officially, it's Teddy Bear's 85th anniversary and you can celebrate by sewing up your Christmas list with a variety from the Brooke's Bear Collection. Brooke just adores the fluffy moon bear with his authentic markings and the panda bear, a classic favorite for children of all ages. Bear this in mind when you're planning your Christmas gifts; there's nothing quite like a hand-made gift and, this year, there's nothing quite like a huggable bear from McCall Pattern 8865 for the moon bear in three sizes (35", 21½" & 15") and McCall Pattern 8869 for the panda (16" or 9").

Give that special young lady her first fragrance for Christmas

A mother's gift of a fragrance to her daughter is as much a holiday tradition as Christmas trees and mistletoe, and today's young ladies enjoy gifts that make them feel more grown up and more "like mom." Many tasteful "grown-up" gifts can often delight both young daughters and moms alike.

The first fragrance mom or dad gives a teenage daughter is a particularly memorable gift, which is why a "first fragrance" gift of Jean Nate has become such a popular holiday tradition.

The stocking-stuffer Spray Cologne — in attractive .8-ounce bottles — offers the hint of a light, citrusy, and youthful scent that will please her and those around her, making that memorable family moment even a bit more special.

Little girls between eight and 12 love to emulate their mother and a gift of very silky moisturizing bath-beads is sure to please. Delightfully scented Jean Nate bath beads in a decorative re-usable jar shaped like a cuddly snowman make bathing fun and offer hours of "just like mom" enjoyment.

And bath beads have a fresh, light scent that moms will love, too. The "Sassy Snowman" bath beads, new this season, are available everywhere for only $5.

Washing up will become more fun with a specially-scented moisturizing soap that looks like an actual snowflake! The snowflake's holiday packaging is so delightful that most little girls are sure to want two: one to display in their rooms and the other to use.

At an affordable "stocking stuffer" price of only $2.95, moms can feel comfortable buying even more than two.

A gift of fragrant Jean Nate bath bubbles will add new, fragrant fun to any young girl's bathtime routine and make her feel like a real lady.

A feminine yellow bottle decorated with spring-like flowers and butterflies is so pretty she'll probably want to keep it long after the bath bubbles are gone. The 16-ounce decanter sells for about $5.25.

Overnight trips to visit with girlfriends can be even more exciting and fun when the teen takes along her "Travel Essentials" gift set from Jean Nate.

The set, distinctively packaged in bright yellow, contains two-ounces each of after bath splash, perfumed talc and very silky moisturizing body lotion. At just $6.25, it's a value parents and ladies on the go will love, and it's from one of the favorite names in fragrances!

WASHING UP IS MORE FUN when using soap that looks like a larger-than-life-sized snowflake. The Jean Nate scented snowflake moisturizing soap makes a great stocking stuffer for young and old alike.

The Balmain style: elegant and feminine

For almost half a century, he gained his reputation by dressing such storied figures as the Queen of Thailand, the Empress of Japan and Eva Peron. Katherine Hepburn, Marlene Dietrich and Vivien Leigh also numbered among his exclusive clientele.

Balmain always knew what was genuine style. As a young man, he became a protege of Gertrude Stein, the writer who befriended the greats of the "lost generation" in Paris.

"She had style even though she liked to appear anti-fashion," Balmain said. "Style is a matter of understanding yourself and what you are about."

During his lengthy career, Balmain created costumes for movies and for Broadway shows, most recently winning a Tony Award nomination for his designs in Happy New Year.

His innate sense of style seemed to turn everything he touched into magic — from his wedding dresses for Arabian princesses to the ballgowns he created for the French aristocracy.

He also created fragrances to express his romantic vision of women and of elegance. Ivoire, introduced to America last year, was a success almost immediately in New York, Dallas, Chicago and Los Angeles and virtually everywhere in between. Ivoire embodied a feminine ideal Balmain had long cherished.

"Ivoire is the name I have given to a dream," he said, "the reverie of a young woman of cool and slender beauty, draped in pale silk, whom I saw descend the stairs of the opera and disappear into the night.

"I was a young fashion apprentice, but her presence is with me still. Ivoire de Balmain is the glow of this fleeting vision which struck me with the force of a revelation."

Creating fashion from fleeting moments was how Balmain became known in the rarefied world of French couture. To his peers, he was the talented designer who had come from the provinces to present a distillation of the style he had witnessed as an onlooker at the galas and casinos at Aix les Bains.

There, he observed the most beautiful women of the era as they arrived in ormolu carriages to attend the festivities of the fabled resort. His student eye committed every detail of their comings and goings before he took on Paris.

In 1934, Balmain began his career as an assistant to Captain Edward Molyneux. In 1945, after working for both Molyneux and Lucien Lelong, he established the House of Balmain which earned international acclaim during the decade.

Balmain's clean and elegant designs transformed Eva Peron, a former Argentine actress of easy virtue, into a stunning national presence known to the world as "Evita." The lady dictator looked refined.

In 1947, Balmain created Vent Vert, a refreshingly "green" fragrance and in 1949 he introduced Monsieur Balmain, the first fragrance intended for men.

Decorative sachet ornaments keep the fragrance of Christmas in the air

Christmas is a wonderful time for tradition and family gatherings; for creativity and sharing family projects. Preparing the home for the festive holiday season is an annual ritual that has its roots in the Roman feast of Saturnalia.

The custom of decorating with evergreens comes from the Romans who exchanged branches of greens as a token of good luck. Halls were festooned with laurel leaves, gifts were exchanged and small wax tapers were lit as a protection against the spirits of darkness. "All Rome seems to go mad on this holiday," exclaimed the Roman statesman Seneca. Even the slaves were free to do and say what they pleased!

Medieval traditions

During the Middle Ages, Christmas was celebrated "with all the food and mirth that men knew how to devise." "Wassail" (Be in good health) was the common salutation. In England, the celebration became so wild that in 1654 Parliament passed a law abolishing Christmas from the calendar.

The Massachusetts Bay Colony in America made the observance of Christmas a prison offense. Yuletide celebrations became larger than life during the 18th century as revelers feasted on 800-pound puddings and pies filled with all type of fowl.

The Christmas tree was fashionable in German homes as early as 1605, presented to all with "boughs bent under the weight of gilt oranges, almonds and marzipan fruits."

But it was during the Victorian period that Christmas came to be the holiday that we celebrate today. In 1840 Queen Victoria and Prince Albert gave the tree their royal imprimatur. As a result, Christmas evergreens appeared in homes throughout England.

Tasty trimmings

As the custom grew more popular, the Victorian habit of decorating a tree with sweetmeats and fruits for children to eat on Twelfth Night gave way to using ornaments and candles as decorations.

With the introduction of glass beads and commercial ornaments in the mid-1800s a beautifully adorned tree became an essential part of the festivities.

The Christmas tree continues to be the focal point of holiday celebrations. Some families spend a lifetime collecting antique or unusual trimmings for the tree. Many ornaments are preserved and treasured over the years, handed down from generation to generation often to provide a wonderful panorama of family history.

"Scentual" approach

There is no doubt that the holidays were a visual delight with many festive experiences also centered around the wonderful smells of Christmas. Close your eyes! Take a sniff!

One of the loveliest and strongest impressions on entering a house during this season is the aroma in the air. Gingerbread baking, fresh pine, the yule log burning in the fireplace are scents that mean Christmas is here.

Begin a new tradition! Now you can combine the visual and the aromatic elements of Christmas. Gather the family together, plan a trim-the-tree party, to make scented ornaments for the tree in favorite Christmas shapes — a teddy bear, Victorian lace tree, candlewicking on a stocking and a star for Dad.

All you need is some red or green or patterned fabric, some ribbon and a 20 ounce canister of "Love My Carpet"® Forest Fresh scent to use as a potpourri. These sachet ornaments inspired by McCall's Craft Patterns are especially perfect for decorating an artificial tree.

Besides adding a personal touch to your Christmas decor, the sachet ornaments fill the air with a pleasant pine scent. These fragrant sachets make it difficult to distinguish the life-like fir tree from the real thing.

As a finishing touch to the whole room, before guests arrive, sprinkle a little "Love My Carpet" rug and room deodorizer on your carpet as you vacuum. Forest Fresh gets rid of odors in the rug and leaves the entire room with the scent of a pine forest.

The mood has been set for the great event — the presentation of the Christmas tree.

We may not entertain our guests any more by parading a boar's head through the dining hall, but enthusiasm is as strong as ever when it comes to holiday preparations. Meeting with family and friends to enjoy century old traditions and create new memories is what the holiday is all about.

Send for instructions

Instructions for these enchanting "Love My Carpet" sachet ornaments as well as other sachet gift ideas, are available by sending a self-addressed envelope to LMC, Box 454, New York, NY 10163.

DECORATING WITH EVERGREEN during the winter holiday season is a custom that goes back to Roman times. The Victorians made the Christmas tree fashionable as they decorated it with glass beads, wooden animals and porcelain doll ornaments. A beautifully adorned Christmas tree continues to be an essential part of holiday festivities. These lovely sachet ornaments, filled with "Love My Carpet" Forest Fresh and inspired by McCall Patterns, combine the visual and aromatic qualities of Christmas. They are easy-to-make, and add a personal touch to your Christmas decorations while filling the air with a pleasant pine scent.

Mix-and-match covering for coordinated presents

Believe it or not, it's just about time again to start thinking about holiday wrappings and all the trimmings.

You'll probably buy beautifully patterned, colored paper, ribbons and bows, and tie everything up in a package that looks too good to open. And later, what was pretty and appealing will be crumpled up, torn and tossed aside.

Colorful coordination

This holiday season there are other alternatives. You might box your presents in a wrapping that stays on, cleans in a minute and turns the most ordinary gift into a designer-coordinated treasure.

Plus you're thoughtfully creating a gift box that can be used year after year, for gifts or for attractive storage in the home.

It's possible with self-adhesive decorative coverings. And not only can you wrap the package, but you can make gifts to match. Simply coordinate inexpensive and useful items with mix-and-match coverings.

Pretty and organized

One idea that's perfect for the office, college dormitory or living room desk is a coordinated desk set personalized with Con-Tact® grid and dot patterns. Turn the ordinary blotter, notebook and letter holder into something smart and colorful.

The office is like the last frontier; it always seems to take a back seat to other decorating considerations. But remember that the office is the place where some of us spend a good part of our lives.

So add a little color to the ordinary things in life and give the present that remains as pretty as a package all year round.

ATTRACTIVE DESK ACCESSORIES are inexpensive and easy to enhance with self-adhesive decorative coverings. These grid and dot designs are new mix-and-match Con-Tact® patterns.

FIRE SAFETY TIPS

Holidays are high risk times for fires. Christmas parties and family get-togethers frequently mean smoking in crowded areas, and can result in careless smoking habits. And careless smoking habits, according to the experts at the Polyurethane Foam Association, are the leading cause of home fires in the U.S.

Follow these easy steps for holiday time fire safety:

- After a party, lift all furniture cushions and look for live cigarette ashes. A hidden cigarette butt can lead to a smouldering cushion that bursts into flames hours later.
- Don't empty ashtrays directly into the trash. A partially lit cigarette can ignite wrapping paper or other trash, resulting in a house fire. Wet down ashtrays before emptying.
- Be careful with candles and other decorations.
- Be sure not to overload household wiring.
- Water a live Christmas tree often, and plan to remove it from the house two weeks after buying it.

Enjoy the holidays, but remember to keep your house fire-safe.

For someone very special.

The spirit of Christmas is alive on decorative collectors' plates

No season of the year is as brilliant with age-old tradition as the Christmas season.

Around the world, special foods, gifts, decorations and the gathering of family and friends all combine in our memories to signify Christmas.

For 5.6 million Americans, a very special Christmas tradition is the giving and receiving of limited-edition collector's plates. In the past 10 years, plate collecting has skyrocketed, and it is now recognized by many as the most widely traded art form.

There are as many varieties of Christmas plates as there are Christmas traditions and, with new issues every year, the plates have become a special part of this joyous season.

1895 Christmas plate worth $4,000

Collector's plates began with Christmas. Their history traces back to an old Danish custom of wealthy landowners presenting gifts of food on beautifully decorated wooden plates to the common folk at Christmastime.

After the food was eaten, the plate was hung on a wall to remind the people of the spirit of Christmas giving throughout the year.

The first authentic collector's plate was issued by Danish chinamaker Bing & Grondahl in 1895 to commemorate Christmas. It was the first to be issued in a true limited edition.

It originally sold for about 50¢. By 1896, the mold was broken. Recently, the plate, entitled "Behind the Frozen Window," sold for for $4,000.

The two longest running collector's plate series are Bing & Grondahl's and Royal Copenhagen's which began in 1908. These firms have issued Christmas plates every year and neither depression nor foreign occupation has caused an interruption.

Today, collector's plates issued by more than 60 companies grace the holiday seasons in the United States, Europe and Canada.

Collector's plates — beauty and variety

And the Beswick Christmas series manufactured by Royal Doulton features "Christmas Around the World" with a traditional Christmas scene from a different country each year.

For many people, collector's plates are the perfect Christmas gift. Not only are they beautiful, but the diversity of design, color, mood, theme and country of origin mean that there is a special plate for nearly everyone. Another attractive feature is the reasonable prices at which many plates can be bought.

The gift of a collector's plate is even more meaningful when it begins a hobby for the recipient. Plate collecting is a fun and interesting pastime shared by people all over the world.

With more than 5,000 different plates currently on the market and new plates issued each year, a collector's plate gift can be the beginning of a lifetime hobby. Newly issued collector's plates can be purchased for anywhere between $20 and $150.

An organized system of trading

For many years, finding back issues of a particular series was time consuming and difficult, with collectors relying on antique dealers and newspaper ads.

The Bradford Exchange's new computerized trading floor enables collectors to buy and sell plates and obtain market information by toll-free telephone.

Bradford also operates collector's plate exchanges in London, England; London, Ontario, Canada; Frankfurt, West Germany; and Copenhagen, Denmark.

Christmas generates flurry of activity

The majority of issues in the plate market are Christmas collector's plates, according to Harriet B. Dalaskey, vice-president of brokerage operations for The Bradford Exchange.

"Trading is heaviest in November and December on Christmas issues, but continues throughout the year," Dalaskey said.

"If someone receives a current plate as a gift, he or she may try to find previous plates in the series, resulting in a lot of trading of Christmas plates in January."

1983 plates of promise

There is every indication that 1983 will be no exception to the varied traditions of Christmas plates, according to Dalaskey. The most notable new Christmas plates are from Germany and the United States, she said.

The Hedi Keller Christmas series by Konigszelt Bayern is one of Germany's most exciting imports. This year's addition, "Rest on the Flight," is the fifth plate in this series.

Keller's impressionistic style of painting is distinctive in her characterizations of ancient Biblical lore. "Rest on the Flight," a colorful interpretation of the Holy Family fleeing from King Herod, is available for $29.50.

There are two new Norman Rockwell Christmas plates available for 1983. According to Dalaskey, "based on activity alone, the most popular Christmas plate is always a Rockwell."

The Rockwell Society of America and the Edwin M. Knowles China Company bring us "Santa in the Subway" for 1983. The artwork for this 10th plate in the series is also taken from a Saturday Evening Post cover. This plate is available for $25.50.

Another Knowles China Company issue is "Christmas" by Don Spaulding, the sixth plate in the Americana Holidays Collection which is set in the 1870s.

Spaulding, an expert on Americana, has recaptured the spirit of the age by paying particular attention to details like hair style and clothing. Spaulding is a Norman Rockwell protege and shares his master's charming insight. "Christmas" is $26.00.

This series features works done by Hummel before she entered a Franciscan convent in 1934 and became Sister Maria Innocentia. "Angelic Messenger" is available for $45.00.

"Ted De Grazia's Holiday Series by Fairmont is certainly among the most valued of Christmas collector's plates," Dalaskey said. "Last year's issue rose 75 percent in one year. This series has been in greatest demand since the artist's death in 1982."

For 1983, "Heavenly Blessings" features the characteristic Southwestern stylized motif and bright colors for which De Grazia is known. This year's plate is $65.00.

Danish artist Frode Bahnsen also recently died, leaving behind a legacy in collector's plates. His Christmas series for Grande Copenhagen illustrates the beloved tales of Hans Christian Andersen. The 1983 issue is "The Little Mermaid of Kronborg," and is available for $45.00.

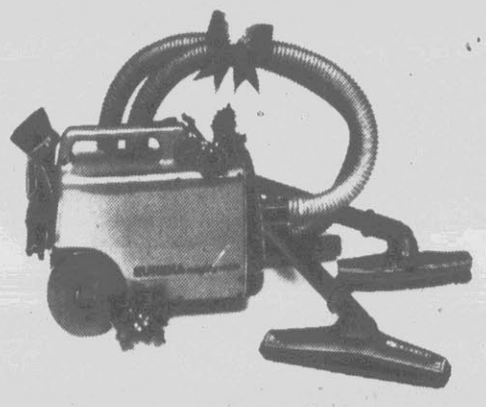

New plates introduced in time for Christmas, 1983, as well as previously issued plates can be purchased at gift shops and collectibles dealers throughout the country.

Gift-givers can also obtain plates through the Bradford Exchange, P.O. Box 390, Chicago, IL 60648. For more information, call (312) 966-2770.

CHRISTMAS DECORATING is easy and beautiful with limited-edition collector's plates. Each lovely plate captures a special memory which will last for many Christmases to come. The Bradford Exchange, the world's largest trading center for collector's plates, lists more than 4,000 Christmas plates.

The gentleman's guide to gifts for the lucky ladies in his life

Shopping for the perfect gift for the ladies in his life is probably a man's most challenging holiday assignment. What does she need? What does she want? What will make her feel good? What can he get that will say, "You're Special."

These and a host of similar questions will be filling the minds of millions of men across the country as they begin their holiday shopping sprees.

Budget-pleasers

This year, they can shop with confidence: the makers of Jean Nate offer every man's budget and belle a wide selection of gift options that are sure to please even the most discriminating gift-getters.

A "bath treatment" with this year's "Splendor in the Bath" set from the Jean Nate collection, is one of the most personal, yet luxuriously self-indulgent gifts a sweetheart can get.

The treatment begins with a long, relaxing soak in a delightfully aromatic, scented bubble bath, followed by an invigorating after bath "splash" of refreshment that's sure to tingle both body and senses.

Then, for the finishing touch, she can smooth on a subtly scented, perfumed talc from head to toe. She'll love her new set and he'll love the price at only $9.25.

Mom's the word!

Mom will feel truly pampered with a gift of "Elegant Energizers." The distinctive Jean Nate gift package tells her you think she's special. A spritz from her frosty bottle of cologne spray will make her feel special long after Christmas morning. After bath or shower, the $7.75 set provides an invigorating treat with an after bath splash.

A gift is, of course, a thoughtful gesture to a sweetheart's Mom, and a gift of Jean Nate will delight her senses. Special limited editions of Jean Nate bath bubbles and perfumed dusting powder — designed just for holiday gifting — are colorfully decorated with butterflies and flowers.

They're so attractive, in fact, that all the gift-giving gentleman need do is apply a bow or add a card.

And, once she's enjoyed the bubble bath or powder, mom can even re-use the pretty decanters or simply put them on display in her bedroom, bath or kitchen.

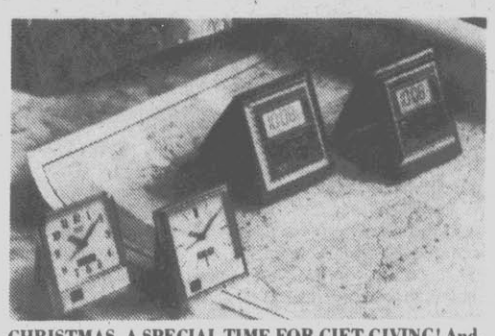

It's official

Hard-working secretaries and other office assistants will be enchanted with a special gift of Jean Nate's stocking-size Spray Cologne. This .8-ounce bottle of distinctly refreshing, subtle fragrance is as attractive as its holiday motif chalet-shaped box. A fragrant reminder of springtimes ahead can be had for only $3.95.

The "little man" in the family may want to remember his school teacher during the holidays, too. A "Sassy Snowman" gift of very silky moisturizing bath beads in a clear, cork-topped snowman-shaped jar is priced at only $5. And his teacher is sure to appreciate the reusable Snowman to hold pencils on a desk.

PRETTY RE-USABLE DECANTERS make the limited editions of Jean Nate perfumed dusting powder and bath bubbles great gift-giving ideas. And a gift of silky moisturizing bath beads in a jar shaped just like a snowman will charm lucky gift-getters.

CHRISTMAS, A SPECIAL TIME FOR GIFT-GIVING! And, what more of a special gift to give than a Seiko travel alarm with special conveniences! Seiko's little alarms (pictured left) offers a digital alarm setting that enables you to set precise time at five minute intervals. Available in gold-tone case with antique white dial and Arabic numerals or gilt dial and stick markers, both feature snooze alarms, luminous dials, easel stands and their own carrying pouch. The handsome enameled selections (right) offer a remarkable array of functions with the added convenience of being easy to pack by folding inside classic leatherette cases. They feature large easy readout digital display screens, two separate alarms, am/pm indicator, dual ascending alarm with snooze feature and light. For him or her in black or brown tortoise finish enamel front panel and matching leatherette case, whatever your choice, a Seiko travel alarm is a Christmas gift to delight all!

Fragrances for well groomed men

Accessorizing a man's outfit this holiday season means more than getting him the right shirt, tie or shoes to go with his business suit or sport jacket.

Individual scent

A splash of after shave or cologne establishes a man's character and sets the tone for wherever he's going. If you want to give him a fragrance for a Christmas gift, think of his personality as the key to any wise selection.

Olympic choice

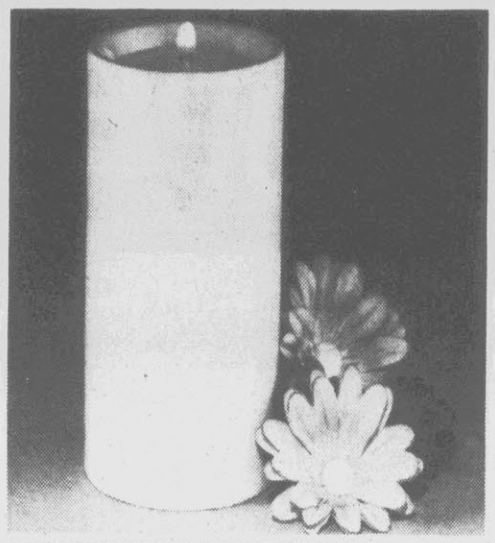

Is he active and outgoing? Then Revlon's Chaz may be the perfect solution. This clean, masculine scent was chosen by the U.S. Olympic Committee for its contemporary quality which is long-lasting but never overpowering.

Or is the man on your mind sophisticated and worldly? If he is, the distinctive Bill Blass fragrance with brisk overtones of citrus and a dash of patchouli will bring out his urbane charm.

Or is the gent so deeply self-assured that he sleeps soundly on his back and without pillows? If he's that confident, give him Braggi. Its scent combines a unique blend of spicy herbs, fresh citrus and deep, warm tones of musk and oakmoss.

Perfect gift

Making accessories work with a man's wardrobe can be easy if they are chosen well. For Christmas, Revlon helps you sharpen your choices for the man in your life.

Enjoying this holiday season in a new light

This year, don't buy another wax candle to enhance your holiday festivities. This year, buy a Forever Candle from Lamplight Farms.

Unlike traditional pillar candles, the Forever Candle is not made of wax. Instead, this revolutionary alternative is made of beautifully crafted English porcelain. Designed to burn lamp oil, the Forever Candle allows the candle lover to enjoy the look of a wax candle without the expense, nuisance, and danger of melting wax.

Now you can safely and attractively highlight an autumn dried leaf or Cornucopia arrangement. Just fill a yellow Forever Candle with gold apple pie scented oil and you will capture the warmth of Thanksgiving.

Or create a unique centerpiece by surrounding a white Forever Candle with a Christmas poinsettia flower ring trimmer. To bring in the freshness of outdoors, use a green bayberry or pine scented oil. These decorations will give you just that extra touch and will be yours permanently without the worry of melting wax and candle replacement costs.

Military play comes vividly to life with toy vehicles

While other toy and game categories come and go with the trends, military toys, particularly vehicles, remain ever-popular among action-loving children. This Christmas, the already popular "Stomper" line of fast-paced, miniature military vehicles from Schaper Toys will be ready-made hits under the Christmas tree.

Four different military vehicle groups, all for youngsters four and up, are available in this Stomper line. Each features authentic looking, camouflaged vehicles specially designed for use separately or with other military play items. The "Mobil Force 4x4's," for example, include replicas of an official U.S. Army Jeep with Machine Gun, Troop Carrier, Armored Car with Gun Turret, and Ambulance.

Each vehicle has two gears (one for speed, one for power), a fifth stunt wheel, working headlights, wide-treaded tires and large bumpers with a trailer hitch for added play capability.

In addition—a bonus to busy Moms and Dads—each "4x4" comes with a free Duracell battery.

For super-powered defensive military play action, the "Mobile Force Semi's" are a Rocket Launcher and Anti-Aircraft Battery. The Rocket Launcher has a missile which lifts off its track bed and the Anti-Aircraft battery has a turret gun.

Available in two official camouflage designs, the two weapons also feature 10-wheel drive and working headlights and running lights. Each vehicle requires two "AA" batteries, not included.

Whenever military play calls for fast action in water, the Stomper "Amphibian" is ready to go. This miniature vehicle has special treaded tires to tackle almost any "enemy" terrain and plows through water — real or imaginary — at up to 35 mph.

In addition to the Military Amphibian, there are the Stomper, "Explorer Construction" and "Swamp Patrol" styles, all featuring a unique push-pull switch for tast and easy cleaning.

A real-life popular military vehicle for over 40 years, the tank sees lots of action in child's play, as well. The three Stomper "Mobile Force Tanks" are miniature replicas of American, British and German models. Each has authentic tank treads, Bogie wheels, a moving gun turret and a removable cannon.

The American "M-60," British "Centurion" and German "Tiger" all come in two official camouflage patterns and include a free Duracell battery.

Mobile force terrain sets

For an added dimension of daring military missions, two "Mobile Force" Terrain Sets from Schaper Toys provide the equipment and setting for a variety of military maneuvers. The "Mobile Force Secret Mission Set" and "Bridge Busters Set" feature realistic blockades, machine gun nests, patrols of solders and a Mobile Force Tank with moving gun turret.

Both sets are used against a background of Tough Track and Rugged Mountain Ramps made of durable, interlocking plastic. Both sets include a free "AA" Duracell battery.

Clear the air at Christmas

CHRISTMAS FESTIVITIES, with a houseful of people and windows shut tight against the cold, can mean a smoky, smelly environment that's unpleasant for everyone. At the same time, children tend to stay indoors to be with the family and play with their new toys. You can handle the problem with a new ultra efficient air cleaning unit such as the Norelco Clean Air 9000, which rapidly helps remove smoke, dust, pollen, odor, gas and other airborne pollutants from up to a 33' by 34' room. With a unique multilayer filter, three speeds, two adjustable louver grills and extra fan-power circulation, this newest Norelco Clean Air Machine will help keep the air in your home pleasant and fresh for everyone.

Needlecraft projects can take the chill off long winter evenings

Every year, Old Man Winter forces millions of active people indoors to keep warm. They may grumble, but for most of them this period of enforced hibernation is a welcome relief from the hectic pace of the warmer seasons.

For those who want to relax and yet still remain productive during those long winter evenings after the excitement of Christmas subsides, here's good advice: Start a needlecraft project.

It's a great time to start that quilt you always intended to make. In fact, every year more and more people are rediscovering the American tradition of beautifying the home with handcrafted needlework.

This surge of renewed interest in needlecrafts reflects the corresponding boom in the crafts movement as a whole. In addition, 10 years of a troubled economy have forced many hard-pressed Americans to adopt a new philosophy of self-sufficiency.

As a result, stores selling needlecraft supplies have proliferated, and needlecraft clubs have sprung up, and a spate of new magazines and newsletters helps to keep craftspeople informed of the latest trends in knitting, crocheting, cross stitch, embroidery and quilting.

The astonishing revival of quilting is probably the greatest success story in contemporary needlecrafts. Before the Bicentennial in 1976 rekindled public interest, quilting was a dying American art. Today millions of needlecrafters have discovered the personal satisfaction that comes from making beautiful handmade quilts.

Chilton Book Company, a leading publisher of arts, crafts, and hobby books, offers a complete line of needlecraft books that make ideal Christmas gifts for others or yourself.

The stunning color photographs and step-by-step directions will inspire the novice and advanced needleworker to create handcrafted items to decorate the home or give as gifts.

One of Chilton's best-selling titles is Dorothy Frager's The Book of Sampler Quilts. Both a technique and a pattern book, it teaches 24 skill-building techniques from the basics of patchwork to advanced pictorial applique, with over 50 individual block designs for making resplendent, durable quilts.

Also available from Chilton are many exciting projects in their McCall's Big Book Series. McCall's Big Book of Christmas Knit and Crochet, for instance, is an excellent guide for making those much needed winter accessories: hats, afghans, rugs and bedspreads, as well as carolers, angels, santas and Christmas stockings to decorate your home.

McCall's Big Book of Country Needlecrafts features hundreds of country projects for replicating furnishings with items to sew, knit, crochet, embroider or quilt.

A great way to weather winter's icy blasts and save money at the same time is by choosing from the 27 titles in McCall's Craft Book Series. Published in brilliant full color, magazine format and reasonably priced, each book treats one needlecraft theme or technique, and supplies a number of easy-to-do projects with complete how-to instructions.

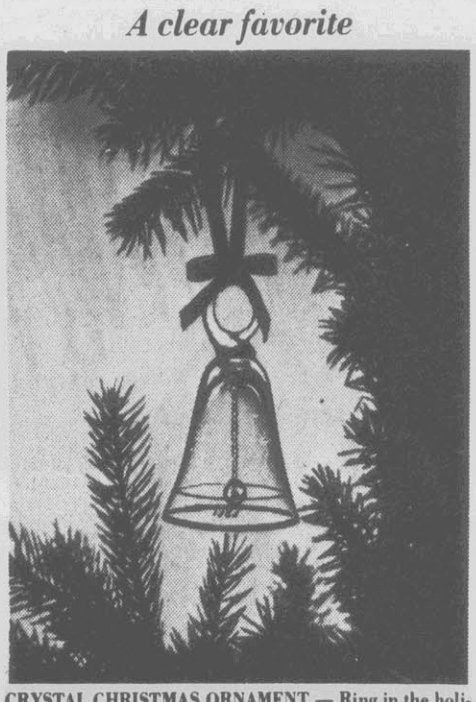

QUILTING TAKES THE CHILL OFF long winter evenings for Sandra Millett, author of the best-selling Quilt-As-You-Go (Chilton Book Company, $10.95 paperback). Chilton's fine series of needlework books, including the McCall's Series, offers today's handiworkers hundreds of projects to keep them busy from season to season.

'The Gambler' Continues In Two-Part Miniseries

By JAY BOBBIN

One might have to "know when to hold 'em, know when to fold 'em, know when to walk away, and know when to run," but Kenny Rogers is an entertainer who obviously knows something else: when to cash in on a good thing. In 1980, Rogers starred in a TV-movie adaptation of his hit song "The Gambler." According to a chart published last month by the showbiz newspaper Variety, its original 1980 showing ranked it the 17th highest-rated feature in the history of made-for-TV movies. Since that is certainly nothing to dismiss, Rogers is ready to strike again with a CBS miniseries sequel, "The Gambler — The Adventure Continues"; it airs Monday, Nov. 28 and Tuesday, Nov. 29.

The new story reunites Rogers with his earlier co-star, Bruce Boxleitner, as they respectively re-create their roles of professional cardsharp Brady Hawkes and his protege Billy Montana. There's even more star power on hand, since Linda Evans of "Dynasty" fame is also featured as bounty hunter Kate Muldoon, who uses the cover of a saloon entertainer in her missions. She eventually joins the two men as they mount a small army to rescue Brady's son Jeremiah (Charlie Fields) from vicious train robbers demanding a million-dollar ransom.

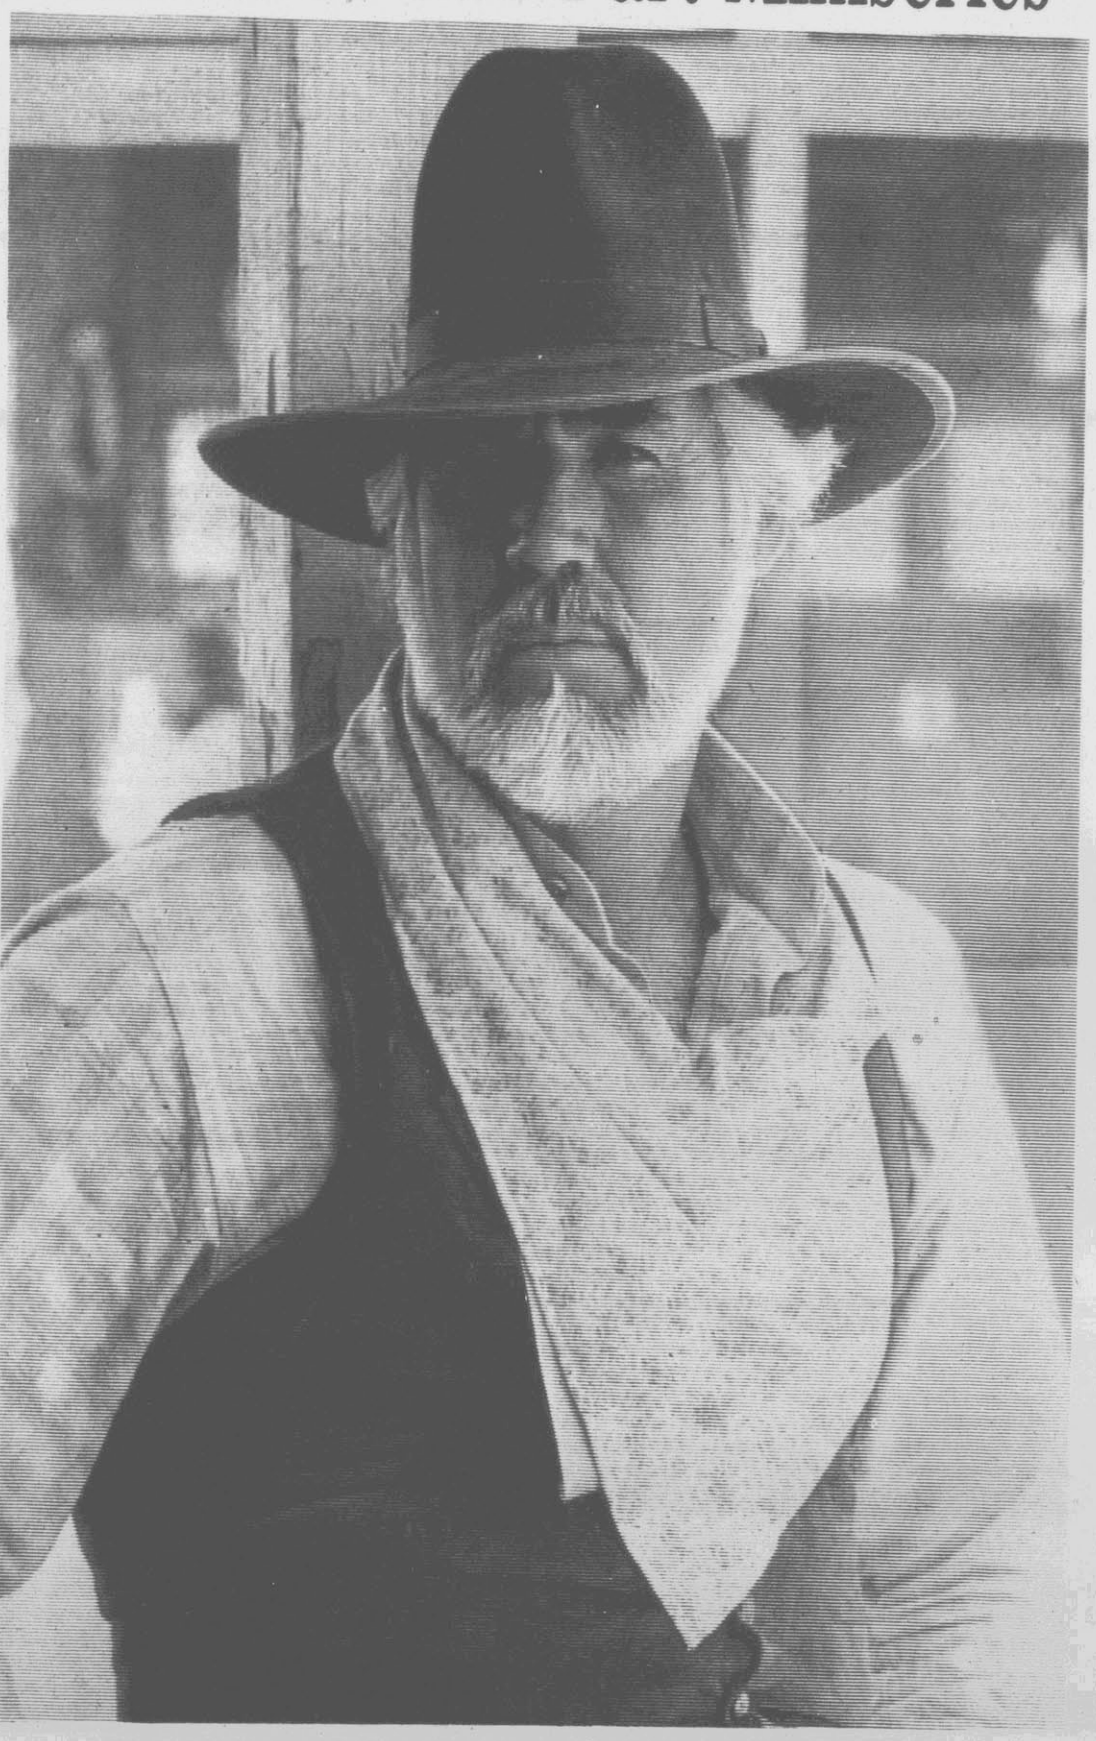

The adventure was filmed last summer on locations primarily in Arizona, where the stifling heat took its toll on the cast and crew; nevertheless, they proceeded bravely through the shooting. Boxleitner — who will have a big night on Nov. 28, since his hit CBS show "Scarecrow And Mrs. King" precedes the first half of the miniseries — recalls the three months of production with mixed emotions: "This project had hung in the wings ever since the first one aired, but it all depended on Kenny's schedule. Suddenly, his manager called me from out of nowhere, so I went right from doing the pilot for 'Scarecrow' into this. Believe me, it was hot out there! Even though I can't say I miss the heat, it was a ball."

There are other familiar TV faces in the cast of the sequel, including character actors Harold Gould, David Hedison, Cameron Mitchell, Mitchell Ryan and Ken Swofford. However, one of the most interesting co-stars is Johnny Crawford, well-remembered by video addicts as Mark McCain, son of Chuck Connors' Lucas McCain in the classic Western series "The Rifleman." Crawford claims he's never lost his zest for acting, though his appearances have been limited to summer stock and dinner theatre in recent years, and the new "Gambler" outing provides one of the juicier roles he's had in a while.

As a bounty hunter named Masket, Crawford reports, "I tag along with Kenny and the others as they chase down the bad guys. My specialty is roping, and even though I can't say I'm an expert in real life, I am an enthusiastic roper; I have been since I was a kid, working on 'The Rifleman' and bugging the cowboys and wranglers on the set to teach me tricks." That persistence paid off, since Crawford is a member of the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association.

Not unlike Boxleitner, Crawford also couldn't escape noticing the temperature at the location sites... a big change from his earlier Western stint, since "The Rifleman" was filmed on a sound stage. "I was lucky," Crawford says, "because I didn't have to wear a vest like Bruce. However, I did have a thick shirt and chaps. I had my pants tucked into my boots, which almost came up to my knees, and the heavy leather chaps over that. At the end of the day, when I took them off, my pants were just soaked from the sweat. I didn't mind it, though, because it was so much fun being on an on-location movie set." The still-youthful actor also claims that the meal catering helped the situation remain pleasant.

As well as still being concerned with moviemaking, Crawford is maintaining his musical career, which yielded the hit single "Cindy's Birthday" during his "Rifleman" days; he's now planning an acoustical album of music from the '20s and '30s ("I've discovered some terrific songs that have been largely forgotten"). Additionally, he's a dedicated silent-film buff; that's part of the reason he's happy to be involved in a project that is such a throwback to the elements that made the movies popular in their earliest years. "There are some terrific characters in it," he says, "and I feel really privileged to be playing one of them."

Kenny Rogers reprises his role of the seasoned, Old West professional gambler Brady Hawkes in the CBS two-part, four-hour miniseries, "The Gambler — The Adventure Continues," airing Monday, Nov. 28 and Tuesday, Nov. 29.

Dahl Joins Cast

Arlene Dahl, film, stage and television star, author and fashiondesigner has signed a long-term contract to star in "One Life to Live," an ABC daytime drama. She will star as Lucinda Schenk, a scintillating Texas beauty who has a way with men and money.

The beautiful, red-haired actress has starred in 28 motion pictures, she has appeared in 18 stage plays, seven of them musicals. She has starred on Broadway in a wide range of productions, including the Tony Award-winning "Applause" and "Cyrano de Bergerac". In television, she has guest-starred in a host of prime time programs, including dramas, comedies and specials.

Ms. Dahl also has authored 16 best-selling books on beauty, health and astrology. And in the world of fashion, she currently is designing a complete fashion line for Vogue Patterns called "In Vogue With Arlene Dahl."

Ms. Dahl has three very talented children: Lorenzo Lamas, now co-starring as Jane Wyman's grandson in "Falcon Crest", Carole Holmes, a recent honors graduate of Georgetown University, and "Sonny" Schaum, 12, who though still a student, has formed his own rock group.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: Could you please give me some information on Jan-Michael Vincent? Is he single or married and where could I write to him? How old is he and where does he live? KIMBERLY SMITH, NEWTON, N.C.

TO KIMBERLY IN NEWTON: Jan-Michael Vincent is an actor by trade and a world-wandering surfer by choice. "When I'm not working I just tend to travel, usually to meet the surf somewhere around the world," says Vincent. Besides his performance in the miniseries "The Winds of War," he has appeared in over 200 television shows and over 18 feature films. Born in Denver, Colorado, on July 15, 1944, and raised in Manford, California, he has been tagged a loner because he is not seen at the Hollywood functions that make the gossip columns. Vincent entered the acting profession cold. He had no acting school, university education or summer stock theater. After high school the peripatetic surfer went to Mexico in search of the big wave. Instead he found a small part in a Robert Conrad movie called "Los Bandidos." After a stint in the military he followed a friend's urging and decided to pursue a movie career. Home for Jan-Michael is Malibu, California, in a house he built with the aid of some surfer friends. He is divorced and has a daughter, Amber. I suggest you write to him in c/o his agent, International Creative Management, 8899 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Ca., 90048.

DEAR MICHELE: Could you tell me about Adrian Zmed? When is his birthday and where could I write to him? DENISE WINKLER, HICKORY, N.C.

TO DENISE IN HICKORY: Adrian Zmed was a talented high school halfback who was already being scouted by college teams during his freshman year when he broke his leg during a scrimmage. He spent the rest of the year in a cast, and when it was removed, he found that the leg was twisted and he walked with a limp. Fortunately, an operation at the end of his sophomore year straightened his leg. It was during this time that Adrian discovered he had a flair for acting. Born in Chicago, Illinois, on March 14, Zmed is the son of a Romanian Orthodox priest who was one of the first people to legally immigrate here from a Communist bloc country. A graduate of the Goodman School of Drama, Adrian lives in Sherman Oaks, California. Fans may write to Adrian in c/o ABC-TV, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Los Angeles, Ca., 90067.

DEAR MICHELE: I enjoy your column every Sunday. Would you tell me what illness did Bob Barker's wife, Dorothy Jo, die of and when. VERNA G. RICHARDSON, MONROE, N.C.

TO VERNA IN MONROE: Dorothy Jo Barker died of cancer in October 1981.

DEAR MICHELE: How may I write to Leonard Nimoy? SPOCK'S FAN, CONOVER, N.C.

TO SPOCK'S FAN IN CONOVER: I suggest you write to Leonard Nimoy in c/o his agent, Glenn Blake Agency, Ltd., 409 N. Camden Drive, Suite 202, Beverly Hills, Ca., 90210.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

Everything is not A-Okay on "The A-Team." First, there was the incident with co-star MELINDA CULEA and her exit from the series. Producers hoped that the boys would settle down and go back to playing cops and robbers peacefully — not so. Rumors are flying that there are at least two of the show's supporting cast who are very unhappy (jealous) over MR. T's popularity and the publicity showered on him. What the disgruntled stars fail to realize is that MR.T is a personality who creates publicity where ever he appears — he doesn't need "THE A-TEAM" for that. It is really sad how soon some celebrities forget the lean years!

MARLA HEASLEY, who appeared on "THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS," is 'trying out' for a part on the series. She has been signed for one episode of "THE A-TEAM." If all goes well — that is if the viewers accept her, but mainly, if she gets along with the rest of the cast — she will become a regular member of the team — lucky girl?

HERVE VILLECHAIZE is flaming at the mouth these days — and not because he left "FANTASY ISLAND." HERVE is practicing his fire-eating act for the "EIGHTH ANNUAL CIRCUS OF THE STARS" to be telecast Dec. 18. However, there is one little problem — his mouth is too small. He repeatedly scorches his lips, causing friends to call out to him "Boss, boss, the flame, the flame."

GHEZA POZAR, who was coach to Olympic gold medalist NADIA COMANECI, will serve as technical advisor and will also appear in "NADIA," the two-hour film about the young gymnast being filmed on location in Zagreb, Yugoslavia. He will coach four actresses during the filming: LESLIE WEINER and KARRIE ULLMAN, who play young NADIA and another young gymnast TEODORA, respectively; and JOHANN CARLO and SIMONE BLUE, who portray NADIA and TEODORA as teenagers. POZAR will be the only person in the film to appear as himself.

SOAP OPERA WEEK

Timoney is back; Maitland diets

By Kimberly Redmond

Recently I saw Ashley of "The Young and The Restless" and Trey of "Capitol" on the show "Tattletales." From what was said during the show I got the impression that they are married in real life. Is this true? — J.M., Hickory, N.C.

Being married is not a prerequisite to appearing on "Tattletales," and actors Eileen Davidson (Ashley Abbott) and Nicholas Walker (Trey) aren't married (and claim they won't be in the near future) although they have been seriously dating for quite some time now. Another soap opera star recently guesting on "Tattletales" (also from "Capitol") was Lana Wood (Fran Burke) and her real-life love, actor Alan Feinstein.

Eileen Davidson

Can you tell me the name of the young man who recently returned to "All My Children" as Liza's sometime boyfriend Alfred? — J.S., Carteret, N.J.

The wealthy and brainy Alfred Vanderpoole is portrayed by actor Bill Timoney, who took a short hiatus from the soap this past year while his character Alfred spent the summer in Europe.

I would like to know why "General Hospital" stars Kin Shriner (Scott Baldwin) and Robin Mattson (Heather Webber) left the soap? — K.B., Euclid, Ohio.

Both actors left the soap in order to pursue other acting outlets. We haven't received any word about upcoming vehicles for either Kin or Robin, however.

On "The Young and the Restless," the actress playing Traci Abbott is supposed to be on a diet. Is the actress really overweight or do they have her padded? — S.M., Boone, N.C.

Beth Maitland, who portrays Traci, was in part chosen for the role because she is overweight. During the course of the story line, Beth has been shedding pounds for real — over 20 so far.

(Have a question about soap operas? Write Kimberly Redmond at 200 Park Avenue, Room 602, New York, NY 10166.)

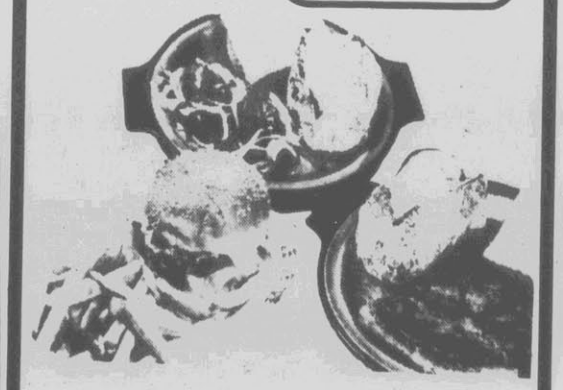

Helen Hunt stars as Tami Maida, a 16-year-old girl who stirs up a sports-minded town in Oregon when she tries out for the local high-school football team in "Quarterback Princess" on "The CBS Saturday Night Movies," Dec. 3. (Stations reserve the right to make last-minute changes.)

ABC Offers Two NFL Night Games

This week, ABC will broadcast two NFL games in the evening — the Cincinnati Bengals versus the Miami Dolphins on "Monday Night Football," Nov. 28, and the Los Angeles Raiders versus the San Diego Chargers on Thursday, Dec. 1 (check local listings for exact times). Both games pit a team destined for the playoffs against a team destined to watch the playoffs on television.

The Dolphins are quarterbacked by rookie Dan Marino (Pittsburgh), whose rifle arm and hair-trigger release have guided Miami back into contention after an untypically slow start this season. The Dolphins have been playing in spurts and before losing to the up-and-coming New England Patriots two weeks ago, they reeled off four straight wins to vault to the top of the AFC Eaast.

The 22-year-old Marino has been playing quarterback for one team or another ever since the fourth grade, when he took over the helm of his Pee Wee league team. Drafted in the first round, Marino became the third player in Pitt history to have his jersey retired (joining Tony Dorsett and Hugh Green).

The Bengals have a highly rated defense to put the pressure on Marino and this late in the season can't afford to let up. Since the return of fullback Pete Johnson, Cincinnati managed three wins in a row, and now, with Ken Anderson back at quarterback, the Bengals are capable of putting together a strong offensive attack. Anderson was sidelined for three weeks after suffering a neck injury after being tackled by Pittsburgh's Keith Gary. Turk Schonert (Stanford) filled in for Anderson.

The Bengals have only played the Dolphins eight times since 1968, when the franchise joined the AFC. Miami holds a 5-3 edge, winning the last two games.

The Bengals are coached by Hall of Famer Forrest Gregg, who came to Cincinnati in December 1979, after the team has recorded back-to-back 4-12 seasons. In just three years, Gregg brought the Bengals from the depths of the cellar to Super Bowl XVI against the San Francisco 49ers.

"The beauty of Forrest Gregg," says Bengals wide receiver Cris Collinswroth, "is that he treats everyone the same. He'll yell at Ken Anderson with the same force that he yells at the last man on the roster if he believes it is necessary."

Gregg, who played 15 seasons as both a guard and a tackle with the Green Bay Packers and the Dallas Cowboys, was described as "the finest player I ever coached" by Vince Lombardi.

Gregg retired from football four times before making his fifth retirement stick. He first "retired" in 1963 to accept an assistant coaching job at the University of Tennessee. Coach Lombardi finally talked him into coming back.

Gregg started both the 1979 and 1980 seasons on the Packers' coaching staff but injuries prompted his return to the gridiron each year. He retired a fourth time before the 1971 season, was released by the Packers, but returned to action with the Dallas Cowboys when Coach Tom Landry offered him a spot on the offensive line. Following Super Bowl VI, he retired for good.

Bleep Bleep

Perry Land, who co-stars as erratic young pitcher Frenchy Nuckles on "Bay City Blues," appeared in the feature film "The Big Red One" with Lee Marvin and has remained good friends with him since.

Lang even does a fair impression of Marvin.

"Lee basically approved of me doing a series," said Lang. "But he's still skeptical of all TV. I like to do an impression of him, but when I do it, you've got to remember that any good Lee Marvin impression means saying a lot of unprintable words."

Enriquez Stars

"Hill Street Blues" star, Rene Enriquez, will soon be playing two key Central American historical figures whose legacies are still reverberrating in Central America.

His current feature film, "Under Fire," sees Enriquez portraying Nicaraguan despot Gen. Anastasio Somoza. In NBC's "Choices of the Heart" next week, he plays the Salvadoran martyr Archbishop Oscar Romero.

"The two of them are as different as night and day," said Rene. "I like to help people, and so did Romero, who was also compassionate. Somoza was a man of enormous ego — which is not unlike many people in my profession."

Begley's New Diet

Ed Begley Jr., co-star of "St. Elsewhere", is no longer pushing the joys of vegetarianism.

"For several years I ate nothing but fruit, nuts and veggies," said Ed. "Now I eat some chicken and fish too. I used to drive people nuts by nagging them about the dangers of red meat, additives and white bread. Now, I just watch my diet and let everyone else handle their own."

Gish Honored

Actress Lillian Gish has been selected as the 1984 recipient of the American Film Institute's Achievement Award, becoming only the second woman so honored in the award's 12-year history. Bette Davis was given it in 1977. The 87-year-old Gish will receive the honor at a dinner/tribute March 1. CBS will televise the event and broadcast it at a later date.

GREENVILLE, N.C.

Family Weekly

NOVEMBER 1, 1981

ASK THEM YOURSELF

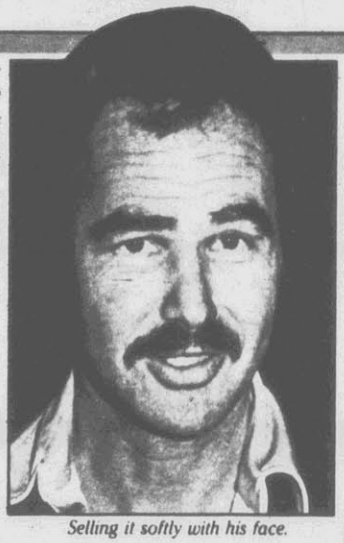

FROM THE "ASK" EDITORS

LOS ANGELES — The Christmas party held on the set of Capitol (early because of the CBS soap's taping schedule) was an unusually dry affair. Neither silver punch bowl of eggnog was spiked, much to the dismay of Capitol stars Rory Calhoun and Lana Wood. "I guess I'll just have a few more of these green cookies," Calhoun said gamely. It seems that CBS Television City, where the show is taped, has banned alcohol from the premises. The tame party policy should suit co-star

Constance Towers just fine, since the mother of four spends 11 hours a day, five days a week, on the set of the soap and then commutes to a second job in Mexico City on weekends, where, as the wife of U.S. Ambassador John Gavin, she serves as official hostess. "When we got married," Towers explains, "we decided that we'd never get in the way of each other's careers."... NBC has ordered producer David Gerber to soap up his For Love and Honor, the network's Friday night answer to CBS's Falcon Crest. Gerber is upset with the edict but will comply with reshooting already filmed sequences, re-editing and moving scenes from one episode to another. What NBC wants, he says, is "pure soaper and action with adventure. There ought to be," he believes, "room on TV for straight drama, for something besides soap."... Burt Reynolds, who heretofore has refused all commercial offers, will team up with Mrs. Ernest Borgnine's Tova 9 cosmetics company to produce a line of men's skin products under the B.R. label. Tova 9 is the name-sake of Mrs. Tova Borgnine.... Actress Liv Ullmann came to town, bearing Hollywood no ill will for the biggest disasters of her career — Lost Horizon, 40 Carats and Zandy's Bride. Liv liked the latter failure, which co-starred Gene Hackman, but of the other two says, "The choice of materials was wrong for me, but it was no one's fault but my own. I allowed myself to be misused, but I still feel kindly about Hollywood." One reason is former California Gov. Jerry Brown, with whom Ullmann had a reunion of sorts. "He was one of my first friends when I came here 12 years ago," she explains, "so it's natural that we meet. I really like him as a human being: He's searching all the time and stimulating to be with." —Robert Windeler

Selling it softly with his face.

WASHINGTON — It's bad enough that George McGovern has to fight big-buck competition to win a chance for the Democratic nomination for President. But now he finds that he even has to remind people who he is. The 1972 nominee was spotted recently in a restaurant here by a woman who turned to her companion and said: "That's a Senator. I've seen him on TV. I know who it is — it's Birch Bayh!"... The Washington press corps may start to take it easy with President Reagan in the future. At a recent White House lawn exhibition to promote a hockey game between the Washington Capitals and the U.S. Olympic team, the President impressed those watching with his newfound skill at whipping the puck past the goalie into the net. Then he turned to a group of reporters, put another puck on the ground and said the next shot was for "the press that keeps asking questions at photo opportunities." Suddenly he thrust the puck toward the press group — reporters and photographers naturally ducked. Later it was discovered that the President's puck was made of Styrofoam. —Jane Ottenberg and Kathleen Maxa

The President puckishly teasing the White House press corps.

NEW YORK — Robert MacNeil, whose The MacNeil/Lehrer Report has been extended to The MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour, says: "We were living proof that TV can be boring — and that one can get away with it. Now we're proving we can be twice as boring — and get away with it."... King Features Entertainment is working on a Broadway musical version of its comic strip, Hagar the Horrible, and producers are considering real-life husband-wife duos to portray Hagar and Helga.... Janet Leigh was strolling down Fifth Avenue with a friend, designer Fontayne, when she remembered an errand at the noted jeweler Harry Winston. Garbed in silks, jewels and furs, the two regular customers entered the store and immediately were ushered to the little Black Velvet room at the back. Protested Leigh: "But I only want — you don't understand..." The staff didn't heed and brought out their gems. Red-faced Janet finally blurted: "Harry Winston gave me a gold pen. I can't find refills for it anywhere. Do you have any?" —Anita Summer

MAUD ADAMS

Are you scared of marriage? —A.D., Charlottesville, Va.

No. Marriage is fine — for people who like to be married. I'm cautious because of what I think it does to a relationship. Marriage should be forever, that's the problem. It's become a binding financial contract, and that doesn't appeal to me. I prefer the romantic idea of a marriage, or a commitment, quite possibly without wedlock. A husband should be a good friend, a good man, intelligent, someone with common sense and a sense of humor and someone who knows the importance of truth. And he doesn't have to be an actor.

ROBERT GUILLAUME

Are you as good with handling your personal finances as you are with the governor's on Benson? —L.M., Gainesville, Fla.

I attended business school at Washington University in St. Louis before becoming an actor. That didn't hurt when it came to balancing my personal budget. Also, acting is hardly a secure profession, and one won't necessarily earn next year what one earns this year. Good budgeting is important to a performer's life style. My record is good compared to our Government's record.

FEARS AND PHOBIAS

BY PATRICE ADCROFT

NEW WAYS TO FIGHT FRIGHT

For me, it is just a rat, a part of the urban landscape that city dwellers like myself prefer to ignore. But for my friend Nancy, the fetid varmint scurrying across the subway tracks is super-rat, the symbol of unspeakable fear. That creature has the power to make her heart beat wildly, send a jolt down her spine and turn her knees to jelly, transforming an intelligent, emotionally-stable woman into a near-blithering idiot.

The terror that grips Nancy's mind and body also has a hold on 20 million Americans who confess to a fear of one thing or another: public speaking (more dreaded than death by some, according to polls), elevators, germs, leaving home, even the fear of fear itself. For two million of these people, the fear mushrooms into a full-blown phobia, drastically altering their day-to-day life. They will go to any extreme to avoid the object or situation that strikes a chord of horror deep within. For instance, one woman suffering from the fear of heights chose her job, doctors and friends on the basis of their first-floor locations. What the fear breeds is panic, a sense of impending doom so potent "that it draws you totally away from reality," explains one phobic.

Phobia panic differs from the anxiety and fleeting fear that all of us fall prey to — even enjoy — on occasion. It's distinct from the delicious thrill a horror flick inspires or the momentary fright experienced when someone walking behind you quickens his pace. First of all, it's irrational. Secondly, it wreaks havoc on the nervous system, making it hypersensitive, so the body can be jarred into a state of panic at the mere mention of the object feared. While it's logical for one's face to turn ashen at the sight of an oncoming tractor-trailer, it would appear a tad unreasonable for a telephone to produce that same kind of terror. Yet a 24-year-old business executive became so distraught upon hearing a telephone ring, that each time it did, he'd bolt from the room. A California phobia therapist saw a patient who admitted to a fear of Italians which was so pronounced that a glimpse of a bottle of Italian wine would cause him to hyperventilate.

The fearless can — and do — dismiss such examples as ridiculous. But the trepidations prove very real to those caught in the phobia trap. Victims have the ability to somehow experience biologically what their imaginations create, and thus a person with a dread of heights can actually feel himself falling, says Dr. Manuel D. Zane, a leading phobia expert and founder of the Phobia Clinic at the White Plains Hospital in New York. The body's chemicals become the phobic's antagonist, for fear releases the hormones that continue to excite the nerves and perpetuate the agony. And that agony can be spawned by any number of places, situations and objects, from amathophobia (fear of dust) to zoophobia (yes, fear of animals).

In an attempt to order the hundreds of phobias people live with, doctors tend to break them into categories: There are social phobias, among them fear of parties, public speaking and eating in front of others; blood and injury phobias; and animal and insect phobias. Dread of driving, flying, heights and closed spaces fit into another category. Agoraphobia, perhaps the most devastating and highly publicized fear, has the moniker "housewife's disease," because 70 percent of the patients seeking help are women. This phobia, which literally means "fear of the marketplace," is in a category by itself and can leave its victims housebound indefinitely.

One executive became so distraught upon hearing a telephone ring, that each time it did, he'd bolt from the room.

Experts disagree on the genesis of phobias, though the consensus seems to be that few are rooted in childhood experience. "Most of the time that only applies to animal-insect phobias. About 90 percent of those start in childhood," comments Jerilyn Ross, senior clinical associate of the Phobia Program of Washington, D.C.

The most likely springwell seems to be acute stress. Anxiety over major life changes and new responsibilities — the birth of a child, a series of job moves — builds and eventually explodes into panic. If this panic strikes while the individual is driving, for example, he'll experience the loss-of-control sensation that's destined to be linked with that particular act. The next time he gets into a car, he anticipates that anxious feeling and his vision may begin to blur, his palms sweat and his heart start to race. Because the symptoms appear to come out of nowhere, he even may question his sanity. In agoraphobics, these attacks can happen in nearly any situation.

But why does this anxiety produce a phobia in only certain people? Do phobics have some predisposition to fear, a chemical time bomb which a certain event or object can set off? "I think there is clearly a biochemical basis," says Dr. Robert DuPont, president of The Phobia Society of America, Rockville, Md. "The susceptibility to phobias seems to be genetic, although what that is exactly still has to be characterized." The fact that agoraphobics have been helped by the drug imipramine, which works by preventing panic attacks, may support this theory. According to Dr. Thomas Uhde, director of the Anxiety and Affective Disorders Unit at the National Institutes of Health, clinical investigators are able to both induce and block panic attacks in certain people. "Therefore, you have the suggestion that there may be an underlying vulnerability to begin with," he says. Eventually, a brain bank will be established that will permit scientists to study more closely the gray matter of agoraphobics for signs that they differ chemically from nonagoraphobics.

Experts have also found instances of phobias running in families, though all members will not necessarily share the same fear. (One woman's irrational fear of burglars — a terror that kept her awake until 4 A.M. each morning — was passed on to several of her children.) And once in a while, a fear will be born of a traumatic incident. The man whose blood would turn to water at the thought of Italians was discovered to have been pummeled by an Italian gang as a youth.

Another common denominator seems to be certain personality traits: Studies have repeatedly shown that agoraphobics are highly intelligent, sensitive individuals. Most phobics also possess vivid imaginations — which prove to be a curse.

For some people, it's perfectly feasible to go through life without ever arresting their phobia. They simply decide to shun any situation that might spark the fear — they'll climb stairs instead of riding in an elevator, for example. But the more frequently an individual dodges the fearsome object or circumstance, the more nagging the phobia may become. A middle-aged Government worker who sought counseling due to a fear of dolls had grown so terrified of these seemingly innocuous objects that he could not bear to look at a doll's picture.

The plight of an agoraphobic is truly tragic. As the number of places in which she feels safe dwindles, the boundaries of her world shrink and the activities often taken for granted, such as going to a wedding in a nearby town or just doing the grocery shopping, become impossible. Unlike the person who suffers from a simple or specific fear, the agoraphobic can be panicked by almost any stimulus. Because of her volatility, the agoraphobic never feels secure venturing outside of her "safety zone."

Despite the racing heart, constricted breathing and trembling that characterize a phobic response, phobics have no greater amount of mental or physical illness than nonphobics. Quite simply, they do not get scared to death. "What I tell people is that these feelings are distressing but not dangerous," says Dr. DuPont.

What is detrimental about a phobia, though, is that it diminishes the quality of one's life. It can alienate a victim from friends and family, destroy a career (the telephone phobic nearly lost his job) or shatter a marriage. Even so, not all phobics are willing — or able — to shake their problem.

Part of the reason: Not all of them realize they're suffering from a phobia. People go from doctor to doctor, convinced they have anything from hypoglycemia to a brain tumor. Oftentimes, physicians dismiss these patients as being high-strung, says Jerilyn Ross. Those individuals who are aware their problem stems from a specific phobia may not want to admit this to others. Phobias aren't singular to our culture: Agoraphobia has been found among primitive tribes, and certain fears sent the ancient Greeks into group frenzies. Modern society, which places a premium on self-control, has produced closet phobics, ones more likely to keep the terror to themselves than to let out a primal scream for help. "I thought if my kids knew," says Brenda Hammeke, mother of four and a recovered phobic, "they would be afraid that they'd get it. It was just better not to tell anyone."

However, more and more phobics are beginning to talk about their problem, and the health community is doing more to meet their needs. Once professional aid is sought, the chances for recovery are excellent: Phobias are generally more successfully treated than any other neurotic disorder. "People with phobias tend to be more intelligent, so they learn [behavior modification] quickly," explains Dr. Arthur B. Hardy, founder of TERRAP, a self-help group in Menlo Park, Calif. Furthermore, the length of time an individual has suffered with a phobia has no bearing on the chances for recovery. Agoraphobics who've remained tethered to their home for some 20 years have found release from their horror in a matter of months.

The mode of treatment can vary from center to center, but many therapists have started to use a desensitization technique. In this step-by-step process, the phobic is introduced to the feared situation gradually and each time applies certain techniques to control his anxiety and eventually conquer it. At the White Plains Phobia Clinic, for example, phobics meet once a week with other phobics and trained specialists to discuss their feelings and learn ways to counter their panic. (These include using relaxation methods and focusing on something familiar, such as sucking on a mint.) They also spend several hours a week confronting their phobia — getting behind the wheel of a car, then driving around the block and, finally, driving on a highway — with an aide. After the eight-week session ends, participants are urged to attend self-help groups and continue their fieldwork with therapists if needed. To date, more than 600 persons have attended this program, and about 90 percent consider their phobias manageable now. "I don't say I'm cured," comments Joann Antonelli, a therapist with the program and a former phobic, "but I've learned that I have the tools to deal with fear. I'm in control."

Recently, a combination of drug and behavior therapy has been gaining wider acceptance in many centers across the country, according to Dr. DuPont. At the University Hospitals of Cleveland's Phobia Clinic, doctors administer antidepressants to help control panic attacks. In the meantime, phobics are also given guidelines for relaxing and changing their behavior, which will eventually allow them to abort their phobic responses without medication.

An innovative technique developed by Christopher McCullough, Ph.D., of the San Francisco Phobia Recovery Center enables agoraphobics to get help without leaving their homes. After contacting the center and talking with one of the therapists on the telephone, patients are sent a home study self-care program, which includes materials on proper nutrition, exercise and several plans — including desensitization — for coping with agoraphobia.

Another option for phobics seeking treatment: consulting a therapist who does private counseling. Although many people prefer the supportive "we're all in this together" atmosphere of group therapy, some individuals respond best to a one-to-one relationship with a professional.

Today more than ever before, phobics have the chance to regain control of their lives, emphasizes Ross. The Phobia Society of America, 6110 Executive Blvd., Suite 1000, Rockville, Md. 20852, provides a list of clinics throughout the country, and several organizations maintain toll-free telephone numbers. "For 10 years I let it rule me," says Brenda Hammeke, who has started a support group for agoraphobics. "Once I learned that I wasn't alone, that others had this and that something could be done, I was determined not to give it another minute of my life." FW

FILTERING OUT THE FACTS ABOUT TAP WATER

By Corless Brown Ferrara

Sales of home water-filtering devices have been overflowing recently. According to the Water Quality Association, which represents water-softening manufacturers and dealers, Americans will spend around $700 million this year on water filters. Some people, responding to the deluge of news reports on pollution, hope that the devices will reduce the levels of contaminants that might be in their drinking water. But how effective are they?

That depends on the filter you choose. There is a variety available, but perhaps the most effective is the granulated activated carbon (G.A.C.) filter. These work in three ways: (1) Suspended particles of dirt and rust — causing cloudiness called turbidity — are sieved out; (2) organic chemicals from pesticides and herbicides are absorbed by the carbon surface; (3) large chlorine molecules, which can produce carcinogens as well as offensive taste and odor, are changed to innocuous chlorides. G.A.C. filters will not remove bacteria, dissolved minerals found in hard water or dissolved metals, such as lead or iron.

A wide range of G.A.C. units is available. Snap-on models for the faucet ($15 and up) can remove more than 50 percent of the odor-causing chlorine and 30 percent of the organic pollutants. Faucet units are useful for improving the anesthetic and safety of mildly polluted water. Larger, under-sink or counter-top units are also available ($25 to $200). Prices vary depending on the size of the filter, which is dependent upon the water's filth.

Carbon filters, however, can have a slight drawback. The carbon surfaces are an excellent breeding ground for bacteria. If the filters remain unchanged, the filtered water may actually contain higher levels of bacteria than water fed into the unit from the tap. "The main chance for harm is in the lack of care and attention to the devices once they are installed," says Bob Spangler, director of public information for the American Water Works Association.

If you suspect you need a filter to reduce pollutants, you can determine the severity of the problem before purchasing a unit. Nancy Wentworth, chief of the state programs management section in the Environmental Protection Agency's Office of Drinking Water, says, "Consumers should begin by writing their state and Federal health or environmental organizations for information on specific drinking water standards." These organizations will send you a report on the maximum levels of pollutants allowed in water. Or write for a free copy of the National Interim Drinking Water Regulations (E.P.A. Office of Drinking Water, Washington, D.C. 20460) for a technical report on Federal standards. You can then compare the levels of pollutants in your water with the state and Federal standards and make a more accurate decision on whether or not you need system filters.

For temporary pollution problems, installing an aerator (a small screen costing about $3) to the tip of the faucet will help evaporate the chemicals. "Most of the volatile organics boil at room temperature, so boiling water for five minutes should also help reduce contamination," according to John Voytek, director of technical services for the National Water Well Association.

If you decide to install a G.A.C. filter, remember to follow three important guidelines to get the best results:

- Change filters frequently. Even when the filter continues to remove noticeable chlorine, it may fail to remove odorless pollutants such as chloroform. Also, a buildup of sediments can greatly diminish the unit's efficiency. Most faucet models need to be changed in one to three months, while under-sink filters should last six months.
- If the unit has not been used for 10 or more hours, run your water at high pressure for at least 30 seconds. This will flush out bacteria and impurities trapped in the unused filter and give you a fresh product to start the day.
- Run the water at the lowest pressure when filling glasses or containers for cooking. The water will be filtered through the carbon slowly, resulting in better filtering and a clean, refreshing drink. FW

Wealthy Man Wants to Give You His Wealth Secret Before It's Too Late!

Dear Friend,

My name is John Wright. Not too long ago I was flat broke. I was $30,000 in debt. The bank repossessed my car because I couldn't keep up with the payments. And one day the landlord gave me an eviction notice because I hadn't paid the rent for three months. So we had to move out. My family and I stayed at my cousin's place for the rest of that month before I could manage to get another apartment. That was very embarrassing.

Things have changed now. I own four homes in southern California. The one I'm living in now is worth more than half a million dollars. I own several cars, among them a brand new Mercedes and a brand new Cadillac. And as of now, I have $178,000 cash in certificate of deposits in just one of my bank accounts in Beverly Hills.

I'm not really trying to impress you with my wealth. All I'm trying to do here is to prove to you that if it wasn't because of that money secret I was lucky enough to find that day, I still would have been poor or may be even bankrupt. It was only through this amazing money secret that I could pull myself out of debt and become wealthy. Who knows what would have happened to my family and me.

Knowing about this secret changed my life completely. It brought me wealth, happiness, and most important of all peace of mind. This secret will change your life, too! It will give you everything you need and will solve all your money problems. Of course you don't have to take my word for it. You can try it for yourself. To see that you try this secret, I'm willing to give you $20.00 in cash. (I'm giving my address at the bottom of this page.) I figure, if I spend $20.00, I get your attention. And you will prove it to yourself that this amazing money secret will work for you, too!

You probably are asking yourself, why is he sharing his secret with me? My response is, "why not". First, I've already made enough money to retire for the rest of my life. Second, my secret is so unique that we won't be competing with each other. Third, nothing is more satisfying to me than sharing my secret only with those who realize a golden opportunity and get on it quickly.

This secret is incredibly simple. Anyone can use it. You can get started with practically no money at all and the risk is almost zero. You don't need special training or even a high school education. It doesn't matter how young or old you are and it will work for you at home or even while you are on vacation.

Let me tell you more about this fascinating money making secret:

FAST MONEY

With this secret the money can roll in fast. In some cases you may be able to cash in literally overnight. If you can follow simple instructions you can get started in a single afternoon and it is possible to have spendable money in your hands the very next morning. In fact, this just might be the fastest legal way to make money that has ever been invented!

ALMOST NO-RISK

This is a very safe way to get extra cash. It is practically risk free. It is not a dangerous gamble. Everything you do has already been tested and you can get started for less money than most people spend for a night on the town.

"WORK" AT HOME

One of the nicest things about this whole idea is that you can do it at home in your spare time. You don't need equipment or an office. It doesn't matter where you live either. You can use this secret to make money if you live in a big city or on a farm or anywhere in between. A husband and wife team from New York used my secret, worked at home in their spare time, and made $45,000 in one year.

SIMPLE

This secret is simple. It would be hard to make a mistake if you tried. You don't need a college degree or even a high school education. All you need is a little common sense and the ability to follow simple, easy, step-by-step instructions. I personally know a man from New England who used this secret and made $2 million in just 3 years.

AGE DOESN'T MATTER

You can use this secret to make money no matter how old or how young you may be. There is no physical labor involved and everything is so easy it can be done whether you're a teenager or 90 years old. I know one woman who is over 65 and is making all the money she needs with this secret.

NO PERSONAL SELLING

When you use this secret to make money you never have to try to convince anybody of anything. This has nothing to do with door-to-door selling, telephone solicitation, real estate or anything else that involves personal contact.

LEGAL AND HONEST

Everything about this idea is perfectly legal and honest. You will be proud of what you are doing and you will be providing a very valuable service.

NO LONG HOURS

It will only take you two hours to learn how to use this secret. After that everything is almost automatic. After you get started you can probably do everything that is necessary in three hours per week.

I know you are skeptical. That simply shows your good business sense. Well, here is proof from people who have put this amazing secret into use and have gotten all the money they ever desired. Their names are not mentioned here in order to protect their privacy but I have full information and the actual proof of their success in my office.

PROOF

- A woman from Oregon started out by using my secret method in its simplest form. She later reported that it had brought her $14,000 in cash.
- A man from Rhode Island applied my secret and with the help of his family, made over $40,000 in a year in his spare time.
- A man from California, who was broke at the time, tried my secret and made $147,000.
- On the basis of my secret, a husband and wife team from Virginia grossed over $100,000 cash in eleven months.
- A man from California made over $265,000 in one year, with this incredible secret.
- I talked to a man from Ohio, who now lives in Santa Monica, CA. He said: "Thank you for sharing your secret...with this amazing, yet simple secret, I received $220,000 in just two months."

As you can tell by now (to say the least) I have come across something pretty good. All in all, as I said in the beginning, I believe I have discovered the sweetest little money-making secret you could ever imagine. Remember — I guarantee it.

Most of the time, it takes big money to make money. This is an exception. With this secret you can start in your spare time with almost nothing. But of course, you don't have to start small or stay small. You can go as fast and as far as you wish. The size of your profits is totally up to you. I can't guarantee how much you will make when you use this secret but I can tell you this — so far this amazing money producing secret makes the profits from most other ideas look like peanuts!

Now at last, I've completely explained this remarkable secret in a special money making plan. I call it "The Royal Road to Riches". Some call it a miracle. You'll probably call it "The Secret of Riches". You will learn everything you need to know step-by-step. So you too can put this amazing money making secret to work for you and make all the money you need.

To prove that this secret will solve all your money problems, I'm not even asking you to send me money. Instead, postdate your check for a month and half from today. Obviously it is not actually money because it is not negotiable for 45 days. You can easily stop payment on it any time you want. I can't cash your check for 45 days before I know for sure that you are completely satisfied with my material.

IMAGINE HOW YOUR WHOLE LIFE WILL CHANGE IF YOU USE THIS SECRET TO GET ALL THE MONEY YOU NEED!

- You won't have to worry about bills.
- You will be master of your own time and fate and nobody can boss you around.
- You will have more time to spend with your loved ones and you will be able to take care of them in emergencies.
- You can have the house you want, the car you want, the vacations you want.
- And most of all, you will finally have PEACE OF MIND!

If you need (or just want) more money, there are a lot of reasons why you should take advantage of this amazing secret. (And I can't think of a single reason why you shouldn't). It will probably solve all your money problems forever. In fact, I am so completely convinced that my powerful secret works money miracles, that I'm willing to give you the most unusual guarantee ever offered. That is, if it doesn't solve all your money problems, I'll return your original uncashed check, plus an extra twenty dollar cash bonus just for doing me (and yourself) the favor of giving the secret an honest try according to my simple instructions.

$20.00 FREE!

There is no way you can lose. You either solve all your money problems with this secret (in just 30 days) or you get your money back plus $20.00 in cash FREE!

Do you realize what this means? You can put my simple secret into use. Be able to solve all your money problems. And if for any reason whatsoever you are not 100% satisfied after using the secret for 30 days, you may return my material. And then I will not only return your original UNCASHED CHECK, but I will also send you an extra $20.00 cashiers check just for giving the secret an honest try according to the simple instructions.

I GUARANTEE IT! I have given references, therefore, there is absolutely NO RISK ON YOUR PART.

ARE TASTELESS JOKES A LAUGHING MATTER?

By Kathy Hacker

In August of 1982, Ballantine Books published a risqué little paperback with the title Truly Tasteless Jokes. For nearly six months, this unsavory stew of mostly recycled gags — cooked up by an author using the pseudonym Blanche Knott — collected dust on store shelves. But then a funny thing happened. Truly Tasteless began to move up best-seller lists. Within a year after its inglorious debut, it had gone through more than two dozen printings — and had spawned a sequel, Truly Tasteless Jokes Two. Perhaps not surprisingly, the suddenly healthy market in sickie humor inspired the competition to trot out Outrageously Offensive Jokes (Pocket Books), Gross Jokes and Totally Gross Jokes (Zebra). The down-and-dirty sweeps were on.

"I couldn't quite believe it," recalls Sallie Neall, mass-market humor buyer for B. Dalton Bookseller in Minneapolis. "Maybe people are just in the mood for a good laugh."

The sudden popularity of these compilations of sex jokes, ethnic japes and riddles about the handicapped, suggests Los Angeles-based psychologist Joy Turek, is no small reflection of society's current sensibilities, or perhaps lack of same. "It's simply more possible to say a tasteless joke today than ever before," she says. "Our culture is in an ever-escalating cycle right now, in which we're having to reach further and further out in order to be shocking. It might be an indication of how much more liberal we've become over time."

Although these paperbacks clearly are tickling a lot of funny bones, they are also drawing criticism from ethnic groups.

"The real harm is the effect they have on children," says Frank Milewski, executive vice president of the New York division of the Polish-American Congress and chairman of its anti-bigotry committee. "If a child of Polish heritage, for instance, is ridiculed with a Polish joke, how will he cope emotionally with that kind of derogation?" he asks. "It takes an insecure individual to get a kick out of these things."

Dr. Harvey Mindess, a psychologist at Antioch West College in Los Angeles and co-creator of a much ballyhooed sense of humor test, doesn't completely agree. "There are various kinds of people who are attracted to tasteless jokes," he says. "Some people are really and truly low class, just utterly and hopelessly crude or prejudiced. Others, though, are not at all that way. Their playful, humorous mind is just very unconventional. There's no offense meant. For them, it's simply a game."

One vociferous defender of the trend is Larry Wilde, a comedian and best-selling author of 30 humor books, including The Absolutely Last Official Polish Joke Book (Bantam) and The Complete Book of Ethnic Humor (Pinnacle). "Something or somebody has to be the butt of a joke, or it's not a joke," assures Wilde, whose humor is considerably milder than Tasteless and its friends. "No matter what you do, you're going to put somebody down, whether it's doctors, lawyers, mothers-in-law, Polish people or Ronald Reagan. That's what humor is and I see nothing wrong with it. It's what you might call 'a human phenomenon.'"

Unfortunately for those who do feel wronged by the joke books, it will be hard to keep a lid on what they view as trash. Coming up: Gross Gifts, Gross Limericks and — Blanche Knott strikes again — Truly Tasteless Three. FW

JOHN LENNON'S CHILDHOOD CHUM

PETE SHOTTON SETS THE RECORD STRAIGHT

UPI

Lennon's playmates: John with George Harrison and Paul McCartney; (inset) Pete Shotton.

With a little help from his friend Pete Shotton, 16-year-old John Lennon started his first band, The Quarry Men, in 1956, and although Shotton never wanted to be a Beatle, he remained one of Lennon's closest chums. He even helped out with some of the group's lyrics, including the words to "Eleanor Rigby." Now, almost three years after Lennon's death (the anniversary is Dec. 8), Shotton, 42, is a successful businessman in England and co-author with Nicholas Schaffner of a memoir, John Lennon In My Life (Stein and Day). Recently he shared his recollections with FAMILY WEEKLY's Mary Ellin Bruns.

Bruns: What are our greatest misconceptions about John Lennon?
Shotton: There was a tendency to put him in the cuddly-toy bracket, and John certainly wasn't a cuddly toy. John was a revolutionary. He had a wicked tongue; he could be very violent at times. But at the same time, I've got many examples throughout the book of his affection, his humor, his generosity, his genius, his love, his humanity.

Q: What was he like as a kid?
Shotton: When he was 5 years old, he was 80 in his head. He was smarter than most of the others, and of course this is the reason that parents, mine included, didn't like John Lennon. He could see through their garbage.

Q: How do you think he would have reacted to your book?
Shotton: I think he would have loved it. It's honest and that's what John liked.

Q: There have been some harsh exposés written about John lately. What do you think of them?
Shotton: I'm fed up with people who are focusing on the unappetizing side of John. It's very destructive and nasty, especially from some of the people who were treated very nicely by him.

Q: Was John a heavy drug user?
Shotton: He liked drugs enormously. He had the most investigative mind that I have ever known — he always wanted to find things out for himself. If somebody said, "That's bad, you know, you shouldn't do this, you shouldn't do that," the first thing he did was go and do it to find out for himself. That's what he did with drugs.

Q: Yoko is coming off pretty badly in some of these books. Do you think she was good for John?
Shotton: She was the best thing that ever happened to him. She was the door that John needed at that time. He had been going through a period of great frustration and disappointment. He was frustrated with the fact that he was a Beatle. He didn't want to be a Beatle when he was 60. He wanted some new goals. He had tried the Maharishi and that had been a total disappointment. He had tried drugs and he realized that that wasn't going to take him where he wanted to go, and when Yoko came along, she gave him a totally new life.

Q: Why did the Beatles break up?
Shotton: John was responsible for the break-up of the Beatles because the [negative] reaction that he got from people, including the other Beatles, about Yoko made him realize that he couldn't be "married" to the Beatles and be married to Yoko at the same time. One had to go, and I think John made the perfectly correct choice.

Q: Do you think there would have been a chance for a Beatles reunion if John had lived?
Shotton: I think the others might have been interested, and there's a possibility that they might have all happened to turn up [at the same place] and play. But there wouldn't have been a reunion as such, because John would have considered that going backwards.

Q: Why do you think there is such a fascination with John, even among today's teen-agers?
Shotton: I think he represents rebelliousness and freedom: "You can step outside. You can be yourself. You can be different."

Q: What do you miss the most about him?
Shotton: Him, totally, him. He was a beautiful guy, and it's surprising that anybody can say otherwise, but then again, not everybody got quite as close to John Lennon as I did. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Marion Long

KING OF THE MOUNTAIN

The Virunga mountain range divides Africa East from West. On the rainwashed slopes of that mountain range there live the mountain gorillas, the greatest of the great apes. From the time she was a little girl, Dian Fossey knew she would one day go to Africa and study these kings of the mountain. In 1967, she took out a loan, made her way into Zaire and became the world's leading authority on the mountain gorilla.

Fossey is author of Gorillas in the Mist (Houghton Mifflin), an account of her life among the great apes. In her book, she describes the gorillas as shy, loyal, gentle to all unthreatening outsiders and perfectly tender with their young. The animals go to great lengths to avoid aggressive behavior but will fight to the death if hunters come to destroy their families.

Today Fossey's work is divided into research and conservation. Her specially trained "commandos" patrol the mountains, destroying traps and arresting poachers who kill the animals for profit. According to Fossey, only about 230 of the animals still exist. She has established a fund (called the Digit Fund, after an especially loved gorilla), and all monies received go exclusively for conservation efforts. Write to: Digit Fund, P.O. Box 25, Ithaca, N.Y. 14841.

NOTHING TO SNEEZE AT

Even though scientists can't find a cure for the common cold, at least they're trying to do something to prevent its spread. Researchers at the University of Wisconsin at Madison are testing a new type of facial tissue designed to stop the transmission of cold germs.

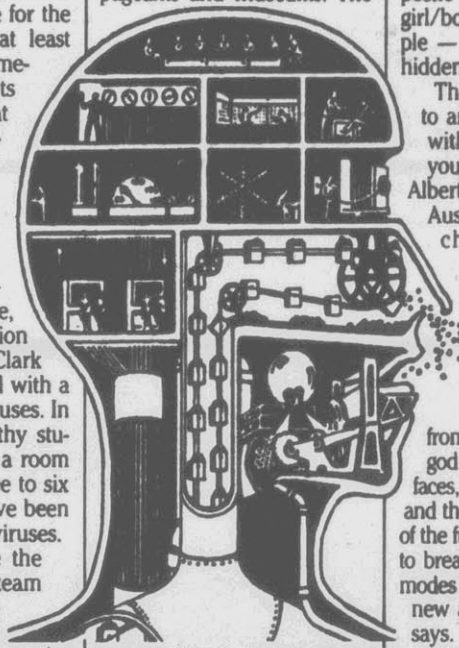

The University researchers say the tissue, developed in cooperation with the Kimberly-Clark Corporation, is doused with a substance that kills viruses. In one clinical test, healthy students are confined in a room for 53 hours with three to six other volunteers who've been inoculated with cold viruses. The cold carriers use the new tissues, while a team of researchers try to track down the spread of the cold. Testing will continue for about a year. Until then, button up your overcoat.

CHRISTMAS TIPS FOR THE JOBLESS

Practically all of psychologist Martin Steinberg's clients are out of work, or about to be. Most have one other temporary disability in common — a dread of Christmas.

However, Christmas needn't be devoid of the spirit of sharing, even for the jobless, says Steinberg, who is with Executive Assets Corporation. "It's critical to preserve traditions," he says. "If you don't have money to spend on videotapes and calculators for your children, stuff their Christmas stockings with dime-store toys or candy bars and fruit."

Other important but inexpensive suggestions include visits to church, community pageants and museums. The key to each is the reassuring contact with family and friends it provides. "Remember," Steinberg says, "there are millions of people who are in the same boat as you are."

THE LONG AND SHORT OF GENIUS

Are you a creative genius? Finding out may be as quick and simple as saying the first thing that comes into your mind when you read the following words: joy, girl, light, slow, black, sour, man, short, smooth, beautiful, high, hard and health.

Creative geniuses tend to think in opposites, according to a new study involving 12 Nobel laureates, 18 mental patients and 113 college students.

The words above are part of a simple word-association test, and if you answered with opposite words — joy/sorrow, girl/boy, light/dark, for example — then you may have a hidden streak of creativity.

The trick is that you have to answer in a split second without thinking about your responses, says Dr. Albert Rothenberg of the Austen Riggs Center, a psychiatric hospital in Stockbridge, Mass.

Dr. Rothenberg calls the process "Janusian thinking." The term comes from the mythical Roman god Janus, who had two faces, one pointing forward and the other backward. "One of the functions of the process is to break away from traditional modes of belief and structure new and deeper truths," he says.

Got that? No? Well, we all have different talents.

FLOWER POWER STILL BLOOMIN'

Many people seem to be fascinated by the 1960's, in part, probably, because the years since have been so different and, in some ways, duller. If you have ever wondered, "Where are they now?" about the political campus activists of the 60's, you'd be surprised to find most of them aren't far from where they were back in the days of the free speech movement.

Dr. Alberta Nassi of the University of California Medical Center at Davis reports that the liberal students of the 60's from Berkeley are more likely to endorse leftist political convictions; work in human services, academic or creative pursuits; show less upward mobility and lower annual incomes. Though they still have doubts about the American system, they are less certain that change occurs only from outside the system.

CLASSIC BEAUTY, SOLID QUALITY

Ancient Greece gave to the world a style of architecture unsurpassed in majestic simplicity. Strong, clean lines and graceful proportions. Emperor's new tribute to this classic, the Corinth, is crafted in solid 3/4" Pennsylvania cherry. Kiln dried and hand matched, this beautiful close-grained hardwood brings warmth to the clock's design. The Corinthian influence is clearly evident in the fluted columns decorated with solid brass acanthus leaves on the capital and base mounts. The broken pediment crown and traditional finial, arched dial face door, straight-waisted sides, pierced chime ports, sculptured raised-base panels and indented base continue the bold theme. The Corinth is perfectly proportioned from crown to base, standing over six feet tall.

EMPEROR MAKES WOODWORKING A PLEASURE

For hours of enjoyment, experience the satisfaction of clockbuilding with Emperor's do-it-yourself kit. This is an easy project and you can do it. Each piece is pre-cut, including miters, mortises and tenons. All pieces are sanded smooth on both sides. Divided swan neck and finial, waist and dial face door, dial frame and basefront are pre-assembled. Complete assembly instructions, all screws and hardware are included. Due to possible breakage in shipment, glass is not included. Each piece may be reordered separately. No woodworking experience necessary.

NO RISK! MONEY BACK GUARANTEE.

If for any reason you are not completely satisfied, return in original shipping carton within thirty days for prompt refund. No questions. No excuses.

SOLID BRASS, SELF-ADJUSTING EMPEROR MOVEMENTS AND DIALS • ONE-WEEK • WEIGHT-DRIVEN • WESTMINSTER CHIMES

Emperor's Model 101-M movement, with dial, is made of solid brass by a well-known West German family firm. Choose from either Tempus Fugit (Time Flies) or Moving Moon with lunar calendar. Both movements are self-adjusting to tick smoothly and accurately so you never have to level your clock. They sound the Westminster chimes each quarter-hour and count the hour with a Big Ben tone. A new silence feature allows you to disconnect the chiming action by simply moving a lever to the "silence" position. Movements include weights, solid brass weight shells, brass-finished bob, pendulum and chimes. All plates are solid brass with pinions of hardened steel. Installation and adjustment are simple, following step-by-step instructions.

OR—If you prefer, you may take a special trial membership and receive

6 ALBUMS—1¢

plus shipping and handling

If you are just an occasional record or tape buyer...if you prefer not to obligate yourself to purchase eight more selections...or if you cannot find 11 selections you want right now—here's a perfect opportunity to "try out" the Club on a special trial membership basis!

Just fill in the special "Trial Membership Application" at the right—and we'll send you ANY 6 records or tapes—ALL for only 1¢, plus shipping and handling. In exchange, you simply agree to buy as few as four selections (at regular Club prices) during the coming three years. Think of it—only four selections and you have three whole years in which to buy them! And that's all there is to it!

As a trial member, you'll enjoy all of the benefits of regular membership as described on the following page—but without any lengthy commitment...you may cancel at any time after buying just four more selections. So if you'd prefer to enroll now under this special "get acquainted" offer—mail the special application today, together with only $1.00 (that's 1¢ for your 6 introductory selections, plus 99¢ to cover shipping and handling). Read the advertisement for details on how the Club works.

NOTE: all applications are subject to review and Columbia House reserves the right to reject any application.

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection now and we'll give it to you for at least 60% off our regular Club prices (only $2.99). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 6 introductory selections. This discount purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 3 more selections (instead of 4) in the next three years. Just check box in application and fill in number you want.

Here's the Red Ribbon "Gift Box" you've seen on TV—use it to get an extra selection

To detach application, cut along dotted line

Where else can you get this much music for only a penny? Nowhere else!—because only the Columbia Record & Tape Club makes this great offer. By joining the Club now, you may have any 11 of these records or tapes—all 11 for only 1¢, plus shipping and handling. And just look at the exciting selection of new hits and old favorites you have to choose from—music to suit any taste!

To receive your 11 albums, just mail the application, together with your check or money order for $1.86 (that's 1¢ for your first 11 selections, plus $1.85 to cover shipping and handling). In exchange, you agree to buy 8 more tapes or records (at regular Club prices) in the next three years—and you may cancel your membership at any time after doing so.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest...plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off our regular Club prices, for a total of up to 19 buying opportunities in a year.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month, or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you'd prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, simply fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified.

You will always have at least 10 days in which to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days in which to decide, you may return it at our expense.

The tapes and records you order during your membership will be mailed and billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $7.98 to $9.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple-unit sets and Double Selections may be higher.) If you decide to continue as a member after completing your enrollment agreement, you'll be eligible for our generous money-saving bonus plan.

10-Day Free Trial: we'll send details of the Club's operation with your introductory shipment. If you are not satisfied for any reason whatsoever, just return everything within 10 days for a full refund and you will have no further obligation. So act now!

NOTE: all applications are subject to review and Columbia House reserves the right to reject any application.

HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Phone arm is moved. 2. Table spot is different. 3. Magazine is missing. 4. Curtain is tied back. 5. Sling is navy blue. 6. Crutch is missing.

- BEST WISHES! Numbers are missing from this greeting card-like sentiment: "If I had _____ wishes, my _____st would be for you, and the _____nd and _____rd that the _____st would come true." Can you fill the blanks?

Insert three, first, second, third and first again in that order.

- Animal Farm! Find the names of four animals hidden among consecutive letters: "Swell! Amazing! Nuts! Rot! Terrible! Scat!" Answer in 30 seconds.

Llama, gnu, otter, cat are four.

- Sum Fun! Take one thousand and twenty and double it. Now, add thirty. Next, add thirty again. Quickly, what is the total?

Total is twenty-one hundred.

- Don't Ask! Why is it cheaper to run a boat than a car? A boat runs on water. What do you get if you cross a bird with a policeman? A feather buster. How can you cut your bills in half? Use a scissors.

SURPRISING FIGURES!

Figures can be made to do many strange things and can afford much fun. The following computations in multiplying by seven, for instance, provide some entertaining results.

Pocket calculators ready? If not, a pencil and paper will do. Multiply by seven each of these nine numbers: 15,873; 31,746; 47,619; 63,492; 79,365; 95,238; 111,111; 126,984 and 142,857.

WAVED ON! All aboard the Holiday Special! To complete the scene, insert lines from dot 1 to 2, 3, etc.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

DECANTER

- - - - - - - -

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 50 points.

Prince® Valiant

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: MERLIN AMBROSIUS! THE VERY NAME STEALS PRINCE VALIANT'S BREATH AWAY. DOES HE LIVE? "NONSENSE," VAL REBUKES HIMSELF STERNLY. YET HE SLEEPS NOT A WINK AND IS A CAPTIVE OF HIS THOUGHTS WHEN A STEWARD TIMIDLY APPROACHES: "SIRE, IT IS MORN AND THE HUNT MUST BE UNDER WAY." GAWAIN INTERVENES.

"YOU LOOK LIKE YOU DRANK A HUNDRED GOTHS UNDER THE TABLE AND THEN DIED IN BATTLE. DRINK THIS AND REST. I WILL TAKE YOUR PLACE."

AS VAL DROPS OFF HE DREAMS OF A TIME HALF A LIFE AGO. GAWAIN WAS BEING HELD FOR RANSOM BY THE LORD OF OSWICK AND VAL HAD GONE AFTER HIM. ONE NIGHT, FROM THE RUINS OF A CELTIC TEMPLE, THERE CAME A VOICE. MOONLIGHT BATHED A HOODED FIGURE.

IT WAS MERLIN, OLD BEYOND YEARS. "HOW DO I SAVE GAWAIN?" VAL HAD ASKED. "WE WHO HAVE SECOND SIGHT MAY NOT REVEAL WHAT WE KNOW TO MORTALS," MERLIN REPLIED. YET HE SPOKE A RIDDLE THAT WAS STUDDED WITH CLUES, AND VAL LEARNED WHAT HE NEEDED TO KNOW.

MOMENTS LATER PRINCE VALIANT'S FRIEND AND TEACHER HOBBLED AWAY ON THE ARM OF NIMUE, THE WATER MAIDEN. HE WAS NEVER SEEN AGAIN.

MANY YEARS LATER, VAL PROWLED THE MOORS IN SEARCH OF MERLIN'S CAVE, WATCHING BATS AT TWILIGHT BETRAY CAVITIES IN OUTCROPS. BUT THERE WAS NO SIGN OF THE SORCERER.

THE HUNTERS ARE STILL OUT WHEN GAWAIN'S POTION LOOSENS ITS GRIP. PRINCE VALIANT FEELS DRAWN TO THE FOREST BY A FORCE HE CANNOT RESIST.
