Tobacco Bill Is Endorsed By President

By The Associated Press

After lobbying by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and other U.S. House and Senate members, President Reagan has endorsed changes in the federal tobacco program before an important Thursday deadline.

The legislation had faced a possible veto because of controversial dairy provisions included in the measure. But the old law required the agriculture secretary to set the national flue-cured tobacco quota on Thursday and North Carolina agriculture officials feared a major cut in the quota would have come without the new law.

While Reagan had until Saturday to decide what to do with the legislation, Helms said he urged the president to sign before Thursday.

The tobacco legislation freezes price supports for the 1984 crop and brings the current system of allotment leasing to a gradual end. Under the new law, quotas are not announced until Dec. 15.

Thursday also was the old deadline for nonfarming corporations to sell tobacco allotments to farmers. Dhe bill gives the corporations another year to divest themselves, and it clarifies a 1982 law to ensure that personal estates and partnerships that own allotments do not have to sell them at the same time.

The freeze, supported by North Carolina's congressional delegation, was sought by growers to make their leaf more price competitive in the world market. The bill also would eventually end the practice of absentee owners of tobacco growing rights leasing those allotments to farmers who do the actual cultivation.

Rep. Charles E. Rose, chairman of the House subcommittee for peanuts and tobacco, said the bill was "not a perfect bill for tobacco or dairy, (but) I believe the tobacco program will be stronger for what we have done."

Reagan signed the legislation as part of a bill that will for the first time give dairy farmers government checks not to produce milk.

Helms, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said the president was faced with "a choice between this bill, and something worse." Helms contended the dairy-tobacco legislation would save taxpayers more than $1 billion compared to current law.

Under the bill, allotment holders who now lease and transfer will have until 1987 to sell the allotments, start farming them or rent the allotment to a grower who will farm the allotment on the allotment holder's farm.

To hold down the costs of the grower-financed program and stem tobacco surpluses under government loan, the bill will continue the price support freeze for the 1984 and possibly the 1985 crops. The support level of $169.90 per 100 pounds, which was the 1982 level applied to the 1983 crop by earlier freeze legislation, will continue.

If the legislation had not been signed, the price support

Death By Vehicle Is Charged Patrolman

CHIEF HOLMES

OFFICER JOHNSON

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Police Chief Ted Holmes said today that his department, following what he termed a lengthy investigation of an "extremely sensitive" issue, has charged a local Highway Patrol sergeant with death by vehicle — a misdemeanor — in a Nov. 12 accident that killed two Greenville women.

Holmes told news representatives that the department that the [illegible] operated by [illegible] Sgt. Stephen Michael [illegible] of Winterville was traveling "in excess of 90 miles per hour" at the time of the wreck.

The Saturday night collision on Memorial Drive resulted in the deaths of Alice Galloway Long, 79, of 1702 E. Fifth St., and Rosa Lee Lang Harrell, 74, of 1106 Rock Springs Drive. Compton and a passenger in the vehicle operated by Mrs. Long were injured in the wreck.

Patrol Capt. Carl Gilchrist said this morning that Compton is still on "injury leave" from the patrol and "has not been suspended."

A spokesman in the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety said today that it is not "usual procedure" to suspend a patrolman for a misdemeanor charge but the de-

Indicators Continuing A Promise

By The Associated Press

The government's barometer of future economic activity, the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, rose 0.8 percent in October, its 14th consecutive monthly increase, the Commerce Department said today.

Since mid-year, the index has been rising at a slower rate than during the first half of 1983, suggesting that economic expansion will continue next year, but at a moderate pace.

Today's report said the biggest contributor to the rise in the index of leading indicators was from an increase in new business formations. The index is made up of 12 indicators used to gauge future economic trends, but only 10 of the figures were available, with six rising in October.

Meanwhile, new hopes for a drop in interest rates lifted the stock market, propelling the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks to a new record on Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average climbed 17.38 points Tuesday in heavy trading to 1,287.20, surpassing the previous peak of 1,284.65 set Oct. 10.

The government, meanwhile, said the nation's merchandise trade account showed a record $8.97 billion deficit in October as exports fell and imports rose.

Among the big gainers on Wall Street on Tuesday were steel, financial, airline, drug and mining stocks. Volume was heavy, with 100.2 million shares traded. Issues that gained outnumbered losers by a 5-3 ratio.

Charles Jensen, an analyst at MKI Securities Corp., said, "there's some hope interest rates after all might not be going up any more and could drop. That, combined with expectations of better earnings prospects for the companies, certainly all adds up to higher prices."

Meanwhile, Robert Sinche, the chief economist at Bear Stearns & Co., told a press luncheon in New York that he expects interest rates to move lower soon.

"The next fundamental move of interest rates will be toward the downside as we move to the early part of next year," Sinche said.

Lower interest rates could mean a lower exchange value for the U.S. dollar, which in turn would be expected to help U.S. exporters.

Convicted Fla. Murderer Robert Sullivan Executed This Morning

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Convicted murderer Robert Sullivan was executed today in Florida's electric chair, ending a 10-year fight against death that won the attention of Pope John Paul II.

Florida thus became the first state to execute two people since the Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty seven years ago. He entered the death chamber at 9:59 a.m., and the first surge of 2,000 volts of electricity began at 10:11. The current was shut off two minutes later.

Sullivan was pronounced dead at 10:16 a.m. by Dr. Cahn Nugtun.

Despite the pontiff's plea for mercy and last minute legal maneuvering, Sullivan was executed for the April 9, 1973, shotgun slaying of Donald Schmidt, an assistant manager at a Howard Johnson's restaurant in Homestead, south of Miami.

The victim's watch and credit cards were found on Sullivan when he was arrested, but the 36-year-old inmate contended he was in a homosexual bar at the time of the killing.

Sullivan fought his case to the U.S. Supreme Court. The Florida Supreme Court and the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta today denied last-minute requests for a stay; his final appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court failed Tuesday night.

Sullivan had been on death row for a decade, longer than any other inmate currently under a sentence of execution.

Witnesses had a clear view of the death chamber through a large window. Sullivan's eyes were watery when he entered, with his head and lower right leg shaved and his pant leg rolled up.

He sat down, was handed a microphone at 10:01 and read passages of the 62nd Psalm written on a legal pad: "And God alone is my soul at rest, because my hope comes from within."

EKG Transmitting Capability For Rescuers

By TOMMY FORREST
Reflector Staff Writer

The call is a "code blue". The person is a victim of a heart attack and not breathing. Rescue members start cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) and establish a communication link with Pitt County Memorial Hospital, allowing the rescue personnel to transmit via radio signals electrocardiogram (EKG) impulses to the attending physician in the emergency department.

The radio system, which will begin operation Dec. 1, is part of a new communication link recently installed by Pitt County for advanced life support rescue squads.

Pitt County Emergency Medical Coordinator Bobby Joyner said the new system is part of a nationally established network in the Ultra High Frequency (UHF) radio spectrum. Squads in Greenville, Winterville and Grifton are equipped with the new radio equipment, with a total of five radio transmitters. These squads, Joyner noted, are advance life support squads, and are trained to administer intravenous (IV) fluids.

Information received on the hospital console can be recorded and a printout made for reference.

Cost of the new system, including a radio repeater, modifications to the Pitt County communications center and the main receiving unit at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Texas Truffles? Importer Hopes Fungi Will Grow

By TERESA H. ANDERSON

DRIPPING SPRINGS, Texas (UPI) — Buried in the Texas hill country, where culinary tastes usually run toward barbecue and tacos, are seeds that could make the state into the truffle capital of America.

Black truffles, ugly little round fungi that for centuries have been considered delicacies by gourmets, are among the globe's most expensive foods, at upwards of $500 per pound retail.

Francois Picart, a native of southern France, hopes to change the high-brow image of what have been called "black diamonds" by cultivating them in Dripping Springs.

Picart says that tiny Texas town, 30 miles outside Austin, has plenty in common with the French fields that for centuries have been the exclusive domain of the black truffle.

In an interview he said he scoured America for a suitable growing spot for them before settling on the the Hill Country, whose well-drained, limestone-rich soil and summer rainfall provide a good growing environment.

"I liked the name," Picart, 36, said of his new hometown. "Obviously, the limestone is here. The Hill Country is a very beautiful place to live. It's very similar to the southern part of France. And people are friendly."

In the summer of 1982, he sent soil samples from Central Texas to laboratories in France, which heartily approved of the Texas dirt for truffle cultivation.

Picart also spent a summer without air conditioning in hot, humid Austin to test the climate firsthand.

"It wasn't too hot for me, so I figured it wasn't too hot for them (truffles)," he said.

Truffles resemble spongy charcoal. Fresh ones impart a strong, earthy flavor to foods such as meat, poultry, eggs, rice and pasta.

They grow 2 feet underground, on the roots of filbert (hazelnut) or oak trees. Difficult to harvest, they must be sniffed out by specially trained pigs or dogs.

They also take years to reach maturity.

Picart, who has lived in Texas about a year, began by sprouting acorns to grow oak seedlings. The seedling roots then are injected with truffle mycelia, the vegetative part of fungi taken from their spores.

The seedlings grow six to nine months in pots of sterlized dirt before they are planted in the earth.

Another five to seven years must pass before the tree forms a "brule," or burned-out circle, around its base that signals the presence of truffles.

Tree and truffle form a symbiotic, rather than a parasitic, relationship, each providing needed nutrients to the other.

Picart will plant about 30 acres of oaks this year, with 250 trees per acre. Allowing for trees that die, and based on a yield of one-half to 4 pounds of truffles for each surviving tree, he hopes to realize about $25,000 an acre by the end of the decade.

"That's the highest (dollar per acre) legal crop in the United States," he said. "There's nothing more profitable."

The Frenchman has trained his pet Labrador, V.K., to sniff out truffles. He said dogs are better truffle hunters than the pigs traditionally used in France because it often is hard to convince a 300-pound porker to let go of the fungi after rooting them out.

While waiting for his own crop to grow, Picart sells oak seedlings to other prospective growers, and imports truffles from France to sell in the United States.

His U.S. customers include the Neiman-Marcus specialty shops, which are selling his imported black truffles in tiny wooden boxes for Christmas.

The price is $60 per 1½-ounce truffle, which Picart said is cheap.

"The market for truffles is already established in the United States with stores and restaurants," Picart said. "But they're sold at $250 a pound wholesale, which winds up being between $400 and $500 retail. That (expense) is really what's hurting the truffle market.

"This year, I'm going to import 20 tons of truffles from France and sell them at $120 a pound, hopefully to get more interest in them. I want to change that image of truffles being too expensive for the average person to cook with."

Dear Abby

Principal Gets Poor Marks Out Of Class

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a school principal. (No city, please.) He is constantly taking his secretary or one of his women teachers to lunch, dinner parties, ball games, golfing, etc., insisting that these are not "dates"—they are just "people" he works with.

He accepts invitations to their homes for birthday, cocktail and dinner parties. I am never included because it's just "some school people" getting together.

He sends them flowers and gifts on all holiday occasions and receives thank-you notes addressed to "My dearest John."

Am I old-fashioned to believe that it is not proper for a married man to send flowers, gifts or invitations to ladies? I am tired of arguing and am ready to drop out.

HIS LONG-SUFFERING WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I think you've suffered long enough. If you think your marriage is worth saving, ask your husband to accompany you for marriage counseling. If he refuses, he is in effect signing your "drop-out" slip. For the record, your husband's behavior is unprofessional, humiliating and demeaning—in other words, your principal has no class.

DEAR ABBY: Last week I attended a beautiful wedding and was told that neither the soloist nor organist had received a corsage. (It is customary in these parts to give one.) Not only that, but I was told that they weren't even given a small gift in appreciaton for their services.

Is this proper etiquette?

"ME" IN TYRONE, PA.

DEAR "ME": No. Corsages would have been a nice gesture, but I think the soloist and organist deserved a more substantial expression of appreciation.

Let me remind my readers that it costs money to take part in a wedding. One must appear well-groomed, with clothing cleaned and pressed, and possibly there's a visit to the beauty parlor or barber shop. And don't forget the cost of gassing up the car to get to at least one rehearsal, as well as to the wedding.

DEAR ABBY: While staying overnight with friends or relatives, occasionally I awaken in the middle of the night freezing cold!

Each time this happens, I am at a loss as to what to do. I am reluctant to awaken the host, but it's a long night when I'm uncomfortable. Should I take an electric blanket and flannel nightie everywhere I go?

COLD FEET IN IDAHO

DEAR COLD FEET: First, check the bedding, and if it appears inadequate for your needs, quietly ask your host if an extra blanket is available. Also, travel with an electric heating pad plus a long extension cord. And if you're going to be out in the boondocks, sans electricity, pack a hot water bottle.

CWF Bazaar Set For Saturday

The Christian Women's Fellowship of Red Oak Christian Church will sponsor its 15th annual bazaar and luncheon Saturday in the church fellowship hall.

The bazaar will open at 10 a.m. and will continue until 2 p.m. It will include a chicken salad lunch starting at 11:30.

Homemade cakes, pies, cookies, candy, country produce, canned pickles, preserves, handicrafts, Christmas decorations and gifts will be featured.

Sandra Stocks is president of the CWF and Sandy Smith and Mary Durham are co-chairpersons of the bazaar.

Combine Frozen Foods In Diet

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Food processing always alters nutritional quality, but "there's nothing wrong with consuming canned or frozen foods as part of a well-balanced diet," says home economist Dorothy Thurber.

The important thing is including daily servings from each of the four food groups — milk, meat, vegetables and fruit and breads and cereals, she said. Ms. Thurber is with the University of California Cooperative Agricultural Extension service in Sacramento.

When certain vegetables are out of season, frozen might be a better choice in terms of both price and nutrients, she said. "Californians are lucky because they can generally get fresh produce year round."

The vegetables are usually quick-frozen shortly after harvest. The blanching process before freezing destroys some nutrients but saves others. It inactivates enzymes that might spoil the food or break down certain vitamins, such as vitamin C.

Mint Chocolate Is Preference

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — People who go for chocolate mint cakes apparently prefer mint chocolate. The mint flavor in Pillsbury Plus Chocolate Mint Cake Mix has been increased by 35 percent in a reformulation of the pudding-included mix. It can be baked in two 8-or 9-inch layers or a 13 by 9 inch sheet cake pan or as a 10-inch diameter tube cake or a 12 cup fluted tube pan or 24-30 cupcakes.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

Each year many thousands of new toys enter the market place. This holiday season will find over 200,000 different kinds of toys for sale in an estimated one million retail outlets.

Manufacturers, distributors and retailers have a legal responsibility for making sure that dangerous types of toys are not sold. Consumer Product Safety Commission inspectors regularly conduct surveys of factories, warehouses and retail outlets to insure compliance with the law. The commission also receives the cooperation of the Customs Bureau to check imports for possible hazards.

Consumers also assist the commission to canvas the market place for dangerous toys. Despite all these efforts, it is impossible to examine every toy. But it is possible for parents and relatives to check every new toy they buy and every old toy around the house for possible hazards.

When buying toys, choose them with care. Keep in mind the child's age, interests and skill level. Look for quality design and construction in all toys for all ages.

Make sure that all directions or instructions are clear – to you and more importantly, to the child. Plastic wrappings on toys should be discarded at once before they become deadly playthings.

Be a label reader. Look fo age recommendations, such as "Not recommended for children under three." Look for other safety labels including: "Non-toxic" on painted toys, "Flame retardent/Flame resistant" on fabric products and "Washable/hygenic materials" on stuffed toys and dolls.

When maintainging toys, check all toys periodically for breakage and potential hazards. A dangerous toy should be thrown away or repaired immediately.

Edges on wooden toys that might become sharp or surfaces covered with splinters should be sanded smooth. Use only paint labeled non-toxic to repaint toys and toy boxes. Examine all outdoor toys regularly for rust or weak or sharp points that could become hazardous.

When storing toys, teach children to put their toys safely away on shelves or in a toy chest after playing to prevent falls and other injuries.

Toy boxes, too, should be checked for safety. Use a toy chest that has a light-weight lid with a safety that can be opened easily from within. For extra safety, be sure that there are ventilation holes for fresh air. Watch for sharp edges that could cut and hinges that could pinch or squeeze. See that toys used outdorrs are stored after play, rain or dew can rust or damage a variety of toys and toy parts creating hazards.

Think toy safety by knowing the seven toy dangers.

Sharp edges – toys of brittle plastic or glass can be easily broken, exposing dangerous sharp cutting edges. Wooden, metal and plastic toys sometimes have sharp edges dut to poor construction.

Small Parts – Tiny toys and toys with small removable parts can be swallowed or become lodged in a child's windpipe, ears or nose. The squeakers in some squeeze toys can be removed and possibly swallowed. The seams of poorly constructed stuffed dolls or animals can break open and release small pellets that also can be swallowed or inhaled.

Loud Noises – Toy caps and some noise-making guns and other toys can produce sounds at noise levels that can damage hearing. The law requires the following label on boxes of caps producing noise above a certain level: "Warning – do not fire closer than one foot to the ear. Do not use indoors."

Sharp Points – Pins and staples on doll's clothers, hair and accessories can easily puncture an unsuspecting child. Even a teddy bear or stuffed toy can have barbed eyes or wired limbs which can cut or stab.

Propelled Objects – Projectiles, guided missiles and similar flying toys, can be turned into weapons and can injure eyes in particular. Children should never be permitted to play with adult lawn darts or other hobby or sporting equipment that have sharp points. Arrows or darts used by children should have soft cork tips, rubber suction cups or other protective tips intended to prevent injury.

Wrong toy for the wrong age – Toys that may be safe for older children can be extremely dangerous in the hands of little ones.

Electric Toys – Electric toys that are improperly constructed, wired or misused cam shock or burn. Electric toys must meet mandatory requirements for maximum surface temperature, electrical construction and prominent warning labels. Electric toys with heating elements are recommended only for children over eight years old. Children should be taught to use electric toys cautiously and under adult supervision.

Under the Federal Hazardous Substances Act many toys have been banned. The Consumer Product Safety Commission continues in its effort to develop new regulations and to test and evaluate the safety of toys and playthings for children.

Elderly Needs Good Lights

COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI) – Moving an elderly relative to a nursing home, retirement village or even a room in your own home can become a happier experience than usual if you show common sense and loving concern, says college professor Ruth Brent.

The University of Missouri faculty member said rooms for the elderly should have good lighting for tasks like reading, and a minimum of background noise to avoid confusing people who are hard of hearing or nervous.

Lots of mirrors can disorient an older person who can't see or move around too well, the assistant professor of housing and interior design said.

Coffee tables are also a poor idea because they're too low and can easily be tripped over.

Wing chairs should be avoided because it is hard for elderly people sitting in them to converse.

Lightweight, movable furniture is a better choice than low and cushiony because it is easier to rise from a higher seat.

The professor warned against slippery linoleum and throw rugs and suggested contrasting colors and textures for walls and floors.

Deep-Dish Pizza Pans Are New

CHICAGO (UPI) – Individual deep-dish pizza pans are new from a Chicago manufacturer of professional and home utensils.

The 6-inch diameter pans come in boxed sets of four for about $15 and can double as small, open casseroles for use in regular or small countertop ovens, including toaster ovens. With a small rack, bought separately, they're ideal open roasters for a Cornish game hen or even a very small chicken.

The tinned steel, commercial weight pans are part of Chicago Metallic Products' Village Baker line.

A recipe brochure is packed with each set.

Point Well Taken

A Census Bureau study tells us American voting habits for the past few years are pretty dismal. Even in a "good year", 1982, less than half of the potential voters took part.

National voter turnout that year was 49 percent, with an increase recorded among all age groups except those aged 18 to 20.

The survey also showed homeowners topped renters 62 percent to 32 percent in voting; college-educated voters were more apt to vote than high school grads (67 percent to 47 percent), and the number of black voters grew twice as fast as white voters in last year's congressional elections, turning out a higher rate than whites in nine states. (Two years earlier they had voted at a higher rate than whites only in two states.)

The Census Bureau found registration makes a difference. "Once people make the effort to register to vote, they usually vote", the bureau reports.

It's a point well made, and we hope campaign workers heed that conclusion. One would think high school teachers intrusted with inculcating responsibilities of citizenship would also encourage their 18-year-olds to register and share in decision-making processes; it might even influence their parents, too.

Good government at every level requires an informed electorate who in turn inform the candidates of their opinions at the ballot box.

If Jesse Jackson's candidacy in 1984 inspires the registration of 2 million additional voters as some supporters hope, it would represent a most significant impact on the nation's electoral processes ... a point which alone makes the Jackson campaign well worth the effort it entails.

Helping The Needy

The Salvation Army officially opened its red kettles collections last week to raise funds for helping the needy at Christmas.

The kettles have been around for many years and are manned by civic-minded citizens. This year the Salvation Army estimates some 600 families will be assisted in this area.

For most of us, the amounts we give to this and other funds to assist those in need at Christmas will hardly be missed. The good they will do, however, will be magnified many times.

It is in the spirit of Christmas to give to the needy through the Salvation Army kettles. Let us do so in the most positive way.

Presidential Libraries Prove Costly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress apparently has approved the Jimmy Carter Library in Atlanta in the same way it has approved similar presidential libraries in the past — by doing nothing.

There is one difference, however. This time the Senate at least held a hearing on the subject.

The Presidential Libraries Act, passed in 1955, requires the General Services Administration to submit all proposals for presidential libraries to Congress.

The law says GSA is free to enter into an agreement for such a library if Congress does not act within the 60 days.

As Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., sees it, however, there is one problem with the way the law is written.

"The act is silent on what Congress is to do to cause a proposal to be modified or rejected," he told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee at a hearing Nov. 9.

The hearing was held on the 50th day after GSA had submitted its proposal, which means the 60 days was about to expire.

Gary Brooks, chief counsel of the National Archives, said he did not think that would foreclose the lawmakers from acting later to veto or modify plans for the library if they chose.

Chiles, however, said the expiration of the 60 days seemed to him "to imply congressional approval" of the library agreement.

Chiles, a long-time critic of the rising cost of libraries and other expenses of past presidents, asked for the hearing.

Chiles told the committee that the cost of presidential libraries has increased astronomically.

When the act was passed, it was estimated that if 15 libraries were built within 100 years it would cost about $1.5 million a year to maintain and operate all of them.

As it turned out, there are now seven libraries and their annual cost to the government averages more than $1.5 million apiece.

Chile said he was not singling out the Carter library for criticism. In fact, according to GSA, it will be more modest in size and cost than any of the last four presidential libraries.

But the Florida senator argued that Congress should have more voice in the matter — a chance to step in and say: "Wait a minute. We don't think this agreement is fair. We don't think you are getting a good deal."

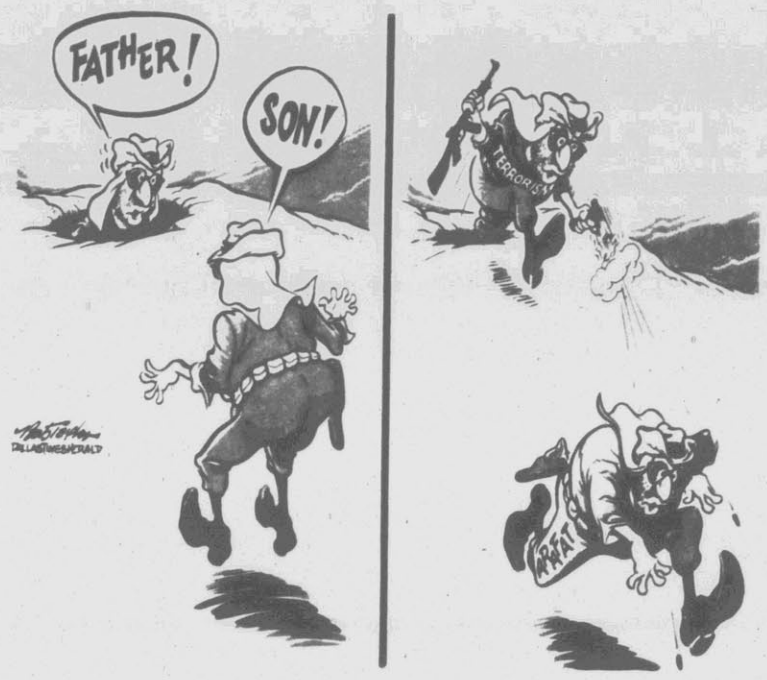

For instance, he said, Congress should have had a chance to review President Lyndon B. Johnson's insistence that admission to the LBJ library be free — although adults are charged 75 cents to $1.50 at all of the others.

Also, he said, Congress did not review President Gerald Ford's decision to have the library and museum parts of his presidential library at separate locations in Michigan, although the act speaks of one site for both.

As for the Carter library, he said, there were unanswered questions about plans for sharing heating and other costs with Emory University, and about the cost and impact of a proposed highway to the library.

He asked whether congressional inaction might not influence the decision of federal highway officials on the environmental impact of the highway, and Archivist Robert M. Warner agreed. "Probably it does have an influence."

Nevertheless the hearing ended with no action and with no agreement on what action Congress could take.

Nov. 27 through Dec. 3 has been designated by President Reagan and Gov. Hunt as National Home Health Week. Home care, the provision of nursing and supportive services to a sick or disabled person in his place of residence, is one segment of the broad spectrum of patient care.

When a patient no longer needs the constant care and supervision provided by a hospital or extended care facility, home health services can provide intermittent nursing and rehabilitative care to the patient in his own home. Home care can work for the short-term convalescent patient who is recovering from an acute illness, the homebound patient who is chronically ill and the patient who is terminally ill. When the patient recuperates at home and medically required services are available, the family has an opportunity to share in his care — a meaningful task to many families. Many times the home environment hastens recovery.

All patients receiving home health care must be under a doctor's plan of treatment, which is reviewed periodically by the attending physician. Homebound patients are visited regularly by registered nurses and licensed therapists to receive treatment as outlined by the physician. Eastern Carolina Home Health Services Inc., a non-profit agency, has served patients in Pitt and Beaufort counties since 1971. The services this agency provides are skilled nursing, physical therapy, speech pathology, occupational therapy, medical social worker and home health aide services. The goal of Eastern Carolina Home Health Services is to provide services which support the family's choice of caring for their loved ones at home and to help the patient maintain the highest level of functioning.

Patients or families of patients who feel they are in need of home health care should ask their physician about ordering the needed services or contact their local home health agency for details.

To the editor:

I would like to commend The Daily Reflector for its excellent coverage of East Carolina University's Maritime History and Underwater Research Program. The recent article concerning the research team's work in Bermuda is a fine example of the work that Mr. Gordon Watts, Dr. William Still and their associates are doing.

The research being done in Bermuda will give us some excellent insights into our own Civil War, a war which not only affected the United Sates but had ramifications throughout the world. Information gathered from the wreck of the Marie Celeste will give us valuable historical data which can be used in the future.

During the past few months you have run several articles relating to the U.S.S. Monitor Expedition also conducted by ECU. I have read these articles with great interest and enthusiasm. The Monitor expedition has brought national attention to ECU. This should give everyone associated with the university, and indeed, the entire state, reason to be proud of this program.

The historical importance of this project cannot be measured. As a coastal state, much of North Carolina's history has been tied to the oceans and waterways. Just off our coast is the infamous "Graveyard of the Atlantic." The research being done by ECU is helping to preserve our heritage and give us something tangible from our past to learn from. We gather insights into how our forebearers lived, fought, and conducted trade, shaping our country as we now know it.

There is still a great deal of work to be done on this project, as well a many others which are in progress or in the planning stages. Mr. Watts, Dr. Still and everyone associated with this program should be commended and encouraged to continue this excellent work.

Again, my appreciation to The Daily Reflector for its coverage of this program. I sincerely hope we will see more articles of this type in the near future.

A Case Of Listening Carefully

According to newspaper reports, subliminal messages are now being inserted into music played in retail stores to get people to buy things. SeveraL companies are producing tapes for clients which have secret messages in them to attack the shopper's brain and unconsciously motivate him to buy a product he hadn't planned to purchase.

I was very skeptical about this information until I went to a shopping mall last Saturday. The music being piped into the mall was Christmas carols, intended to get the people in a holiday mood.

I stopped to buy a chocolate chip cookie, when suddenly something possessed me. While the loudspeaker blared out "We wish you a Merry Christmas," I blurted out the word "Underwear." Everyone in the line looked at me. I grabbed the man behind me by the lapels and said, "I've got to have underwear."

He pushed my hands away, "So what are you standing in the chocolate chip cookie line for? Go to a men's shop."

I dashed down the mall and stopped a uniformed security guard. "Underwear!" I screamed at him. "Give me underwear." He wasn't sure whether to arrest me or give me directions. Finally he pointed me to a large menswear store at the end of the mall.

Two salesmen were standing at the door smiling. One said to the other, "Here comes another one." Then he said, before I could speak, "Third counter to the left, but you have to take a number and wait your turn."

The underwear counter was jammed with people, all screaming and shouting. I said to a man next to me, "Maybe there won't be any left by the time my number is called. What am I going to do if I can't buy any underwear?"

"Do you need some that badly?" he asked.

"I didn't think so, but suddenly I got this craving for underwear while I was waiting to buy a chocolate chip cookie."

"I came into the mall to buy pizza and the same thing happened to me."

My number was called and I bought 50 jockey shorts and 50 undershirts. That's all they would sell me.

I walked out of the store and stopped to look at an artist doing charcoal sketches of children. While I was watching, someone was singing "Jingle Bells" over the speaker.

The word "Wok" lit up in my brain. My eyes became desperate and I started searching for a wok store. I rushed up to a lady at the information booth, but before I could blurt it out she said, "Woks can be found in the basement of the department store at the end of the building."

"How did you know I wanted a wok?"

"Everyone wants a wok when they play 'Jingle Bells.'"

"You mean you have a secret message in 'Jingle Bells'?"

"Of course. Today it's woks, tomorrow it's wax for your floor."

"I don't need a wok," I said.

"Then put your hands over your ears, and you won't get a message."

"What comes after 'Jingle Bells'?"

She looked at her schedule. "'White Christmas' and home computers."

"I don't need a home computer either."

"You don't think you do until Bing Crosby sings it."

"Do I have time to buy a chocolate chip cookie?"

"It depends. After 'White Christmas' they're playing 'Silent Night' and there's going to be an awful crush for hand-knotted Chinese rugs at the end of the mall."

Defense Pays Off

WASHINGTON — When 27 University of Michigan students occupied a campus radiation laboratory recently, they vowed to remain until the administration ceased its participation in military- and defense-related research. Just 48 hours later, the students ended their vigil voluntarily — and unsuccessfully.

Though the protest may have seemed a throwback to more turbulent times, it had a relevant purpose. Military-related research dollars comprise a growing share of campus research funds. In addition to discomfort about the ends of military research, students and faculty worry that institutions of higher education have adopted the Pentagon as their chief lifeline.

Of course, the Ann Arbor school's refusal to surrender to the "Progressive Student Network" was no surprise. In 1982 alone, the University of Michigan enjoyed more than $4.09 million in contracts with the Department of Defense.

But according to an annual Pentagon report, more than 250 colleges and universities received a total of $1.5 billion in project money last year. Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore and Boston's Massachusetts Institute of Technology topped the list by a wide margin, with contracts totaling $235 million and $216 million, respectively. Even small schools such as Ohio's Denison University were on the take ($40,000).

Meanwhile, according to Stanford University President Donald Kennedy, non-defense research dollars, the vast majority of which come from Uncle Sam, have decreased 40 percent since 1968. Kennedy believes that the trend must be reversed for the sake of "hardheaded national interest."

One man's national security is another man's idea of economic shortsightedness. Have we rejiggered our research priorities at the expense of beneficial civilian programs?

A private group, the Scientific Manpower Commission, flashed a warning recently to those who believe the nation's ills can be solved by simply channeling young minds into science and engineering. The group reported that job offers for Bachelor of Science degree holders fell by one-third in 1983 from the level of the year before. What's more, doctorate holders in science and engineering who teach earn the lowest salaries among their peers.

The current peace between the Reagan administration and environmental groups is only a temporary cease-fire. Activists say they'll take aim in January at Richard Francis, the president's choice to lead the Solar Energy and Conservation Board, created in 1980 to help subsidize solar and energy conservation projects.

"It's the same old story," said Scott Sklar, political director of Solar Lobby, an interest group here. "The president nominates a man who wants to destroy the agency he's been hired to save."

Suspicion At Retail

NEW YORK (AP) — A lot more than a resurgence in sales — up 5 percent or 6 percent for the year — is under way at the nation's retail outlets. Suspicion also is rising.

There is, for example, the emergence of high tech at the checkout counter in the form of computerized price scanners faster than a clerk's eye, but which often keep the price of each item from yours.

Diabolical machinery, say some customers who are accustomed to watching the price of each item appear clearly before them, as was the custom ever since the cash register came into widespread use.

But if the impact on some people might be negative that certainly is not the intention of the retailers. They need your business and they need to make a profit on it, which is the reason for the new machinery. It cuts costs.

Cost-cutting is especially important in today's competitive environment, especially in the big-volume, low-margin supermarket industry, where a fraction of a penny saved or lost can be the difference between success and failure.

But even bigger than the talk and action about automation is the matter of pilferage or shoplifting, which we are told is up substantially again this year.

There is little new in that claim, it having been made yearly since the pilferage-control industry, with its consultants and uniforms and dogs and beepers and camera eyes, became big business a couple of decades ago.

Arthur Young, the accounting and consulting firm, puts this year's pilferage increase at 10 percent, but there are other advisers who put their claims much higher, high enough to create a sense of near hysteria.

There seems little doubt that goods are being stolen.

The high number of unemployed, 9.9 million at the most recent official count, suggests that the stress is there. And the open displays, unaccompanied by sales personnel, suggest that temptation and opportunity is there too.

But getting a firm grasp of pilferage statistics, whether by employees or shoplifters, is not as easy as it might seem.

Apprehension and conviction rates, both substantially higher in the past year, are fairly reliable. But estimates by consultants sometimes cannot be substantiated, and claims by some retailers cannot always be documented.

The underground economy, for example, doesn't always obtain goods by theft. Occasionally, it might be supplied by a business person eager for an off-the-books cash sale that is safe from the prying eyes of the Internal Revenue Service. But the resulting inventory discrepancy might be called pilferage.

More easily documented is the impact of high interest rates on sales. This is a credit economy, and consumer credit comes at a relatively high price, many points higher than the much publicized prime rate.

At the end of November, the most highly qualified corporate customers can obtain borrowing rates of 11 percent or so. At the same time, the interest rate on your credit card is probably 19 percent or even higher.

There is a tendency for some retailers and customers to shout "outrage" on measuring this margin, to attribute villainous motives to the provider of the card, and to threaten the card's if not the lender's destruction.

But so far as can be determined, there is nothing diabolical about it. As William Dunkelberg of Purdue University notes, one-half a lender's credit card costs involve such things as postage and paperwork — not the price of money.

—Elisha Douglass—

Strength For Today

Sin is always a delusion. The devil is the chief of chiselers. No one ever goes into wickedness with high anticipations of satisfaction who does not come out of the experience disillusioned and disappointed.

The miser dreams of accumulation, but when he gets his heart's desire, he finds that he cannot enjoy the things he longed for. The intemperate man holds his head after a debauch and declares that he was a fool. Lust is more a matter of mind than of body.

What one does not possess, he looks forward to, but the almost universal experience is that when he at last gets it, the realization is shockingly tame in comparison with the anticipation.

The enticements of sin are always deceptive and offer expectations which can never be fulfilled. A major reason why sin gets a hold on our lives is because we are often simply stupid.

"Be ye wise as serpents," said Jesus, "and harmless as doves."

CAR COLLIDES WITH BUILDING — A car driven by Mary Harris Phillips of 210 Paris Ave. ran into the front of a building at 1203 W. 14th St. Tuesday night, causing damage to the window. Officers said the brakes on Ms. Phillips' car failed when she tried to park the vehicle. After impact the car rolled back and an open car door caused minor damage to another parked vehicle owned by James Corbett. The building was being used for church services, which were in session at the time. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

City Council Schedules Call Meeting Thursday

The City Council has scheduled a special call meeting for Thursday at 7:30 p.m. to complete unfinished business of the present mayor and governing board.

Business on the call agenda includes: public hearings on annexation requests for 22.485 acres on the west side of N.C. 43 south of Oakmont Professional Plaza, 2.951 acres located north of and adjacent to N.C. 43 west of Moyewood, and 8.8 acres on the east and west sides of Tucker Drive;

Public hearings on a request for rezoning .60 acres at the southeast corner of Eastbrook Drive and Luci Drive from shopping center to office and institutional, for zoning 425 acres in the extraterritorial area near Eaton Corp. to unoffensive industry and RA-20 (residential-agricultural) and to rezone 11.1 acres north of Secondary Raod 1529 and east of Secondary Road 1590 from RA-20 to unoffensive industry, and for rezoning 36.59 acres across from Pitt Community College from RA-20 to highway commercial and office and institutional;

Three public hearings on amending the zoning ordinance and one on amending the thoroughfare plan; consideration of an amendment to the City Code to make animal traps available for loan to the public; consideration of four recommendations by the Traffic Commission; acceptance of streets in section three of Tuckers Estates for maintenance;

Consideration of revisions to the manual of standard designs and details; consideration of three community development resolutions and an ordinance establishing a 1983-84 Small Cities-South Evans grant project budget; tax releases and refunds; and amendments to the agreement for transit service between the city and Pitt Community College, and to the sewer capital reserve fund, and consideration of an agreement with the state for replacement of the Hooker Road bridge.

Holiday Hours For Carowinds

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Carowinds officials say the theme park is joining a national trend with its new holiday hours.

Carowinds, usually open from early summer to early fall, is trying out a new Christmas program for the first time this year. The program, called Winterfest, opened Nov. 25 and runs through New Year's Eve.

Park officials say they expect Winterfest to attract 100,000 visitors.

"In fact, we've already met our budget," said Carowinds marketing director Tricia Miller. "We are already making plans for next year's Christmas program."

Carowinds is located about 15 miles south of Charlotte on the South Carolina border.

Winterfest features 30 craft shops, food in the Christmas spirit such as Moravian cookies, hot cider and plum pudding and strolling carolers. About a third of the 77-acre park has been decorated to create a Dickens-like atmosphere.

Ms. Miller said theme parks all over the country are looking at ways to stay open more months. For example, Hershey Park in Pennsylvania is staging a Christmas show this year, she said.

Last year, Kings Island, Carowinds' sister park in Cincinnati, opened during Christmas last year and attracted 275,000 people.

"It's definitely a trend for parks to try to stay open at other times of the year," Ms. Miller said. "Up to now, parks in states other than Florida and California were open only half the year."

The Christmas program is a way for Taft Broadcasting Co. of Cincinnati to recoup some of its $39 million investment at Carowinds.

Taft bought the park eight years ago for $16 million and has spent about $23 million on rides and other attractions.

The park has spent $150,000 on Christmas decorations and another $75,000 on advertising.

Resigning W&M Posts

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — College of William and Mary president Thomas A. Graves Jr. and school provost George R. Healy will step down in the summer of 1985, the school says.

Both men have been at William and Mary since 1971.

Graves, 59, is the 24th president of William and Mary, which was founded in 1693 and is the nation's second oldest college.

He declined after his resignation was made public Tuesday to discuss the reason for his stepping down.

In a statement, Graves noted that two committees studying future priorities and programs at William and Mary are to complete their work during the next 18 months.

"I hope it will be of benefit to the college and its future direction and leadership" to be able to select a president during that same time, his statement said.

Herbert V. Kelly, rector of the Board of Visitors, said a nationwide search for a president would likely begin early next year and the resignations will be accepted when the board convenes Friday.

Harriet N. Storm, a member of the board's executive committee, said the announcement "caught me totally by surprise."

She and others said Graves' biggest mark might come in fund raising.

Greyhound Chairman Sees No Settlement Hope

By LES SCHLANGEN
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Greyhound Bus Lines strikers who voted down proposed pay cuts say they can still bring the company "to its knees" despite the announcement that Greyhound is doubling operations immediately with newly hired workers.

Chief union negotiator Harry Rosenblum and other leaders of the Amalgamated Transit Union, which represents 12,700 Greyhound workers, headed to Washington to meet with the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service officials today. The union planned a counter-proposal to the rejected Greyhound pact, although there have been no negotiations since Nov. 18.

Greyhound Chairman John W. Teets said Tuesday, "We have absolutely no optimism that a settlement will be reached."

Harold Lehrer, one of five strikers picketing in a cold wind outside the Philadelphia terminal on Tuesday, said Teets "underestimated us."

"He thought we'd knuckle down when he issued the first ultimatum (before hiring the strikebreakers). We didn't then, and we won't now."

Teets charged that the voting in which the union turned the company down was a "sham and a disgrace." At a tense press conference Tuesday, he said union leaders misled members by promising a breakthrough in negotiations that would keep their jobs secure.

Teets, chairman and chief executive officer of the parent Greyhound Corp., said union workers' rejection of the company's 7.8 percent pay cut proposal left Greyhound little choice but to "go forward full bore" with hiring replacements.

In Los Angeles, local vice president Jim Cushing-Murray said a boycott planned by the AFL-CIO could still "bring Greyhound to its knees" by keeping the line's profits low.

But Teets said at corporate headquarters in Phoenix that Greyhound would sell its bus line if it did not make sufficient profit.

Greyhound Bus Lines President Fred Dunikoski said "several thousand" union members had crossed picket lines since the strike began Nov. 2, but declined to give an exact figure.

The ATU struck over a contract proposal that had called for a 9.5 percent salary cut. Greyhound says it needs the pay cuts to compete with deregulated airlines and other bus companies.

Greyhound shut down when the strike began, but restored limited service in 27 states on Nov. 17 with new hires and non-union workers.

Teets said Tuesday that Greyhound will be expanding service immediately and expects to boost its runs from its current 10 percent of normal service to 22 to 24 percent in mid-December.

Greyhound has been offering half-price fares to attract riders during the strike. Before the strike the company carried 60 percent of the nation's intercity bus passengers.

Rosenblum, acting president of the 31-member Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, had told reporters Monday that movement on 15 issues other than the 7.8 percent pay cut might bring a settlement.

Among the sore points, Rosenblum said, were a 5 percent reduction in pension benefits, cuts in benefits for new workers and a 30 percent pay decrease for part-time workers.

But Greyhound Corp. President Frank Nageotte said, "My understanding is that we can't discuss the other issues. They are not significant."

The union's vote was 9,181 against the pact to 325 in favor, with 3,000 employees not voting and some ballots invalidated.

"Under the rejected offer, an average Greyhound driver would make $32,238 in salary and benefits," Teets said. "That not only makes him or her the best-paid in the entire industry, but amounts to $12,000 more than the average policeman receives, $13,000 more than the average firefighter and $11,800 more than high school teachers."

Greyhound reiterated its case in a full-page advertisement published in newspapers around the country today.

But union negotiator Rosenblum, who drove a Greyhound bus for 30 years ending in 1977, said that current drivers with as much or more experience say they never have earned that much.

Teamsters Union members rallied at the Philadelphia terminal earlier Tuesday to show support for strikers. A two-block convoy, led by a horse-drawn carriage, arrived at the peak of morning rush hour.

Arson Experts Studying Blaze

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Arson investigators were seeking the cause of a fire that forced evacuation of 1,700 workers from a high-rise building, disrupted some long-distance phone service and sent toxic smoke billowing over the downtown.

As many as 60 firefighters were injured in the blaze Tuesday, which occurred in a 12-story building containing telephone switching equipment, including plastics which emitted acid-laden vapors when they burned, said Fire Department Inspector Ed Reed.

The fire apparently started in a storage room which contained electrical generators and batteries, a Pacific Telephone Co. spokeswoman said.

DEMAND REMOVAL

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea said Tuesday that South Korea had introduced heavy weapons into the demilitarized zone separating the two countries and demanded Seoul withdraw them "at once".

U.S. Is Tightening Its Ties To Destiny Of Israel

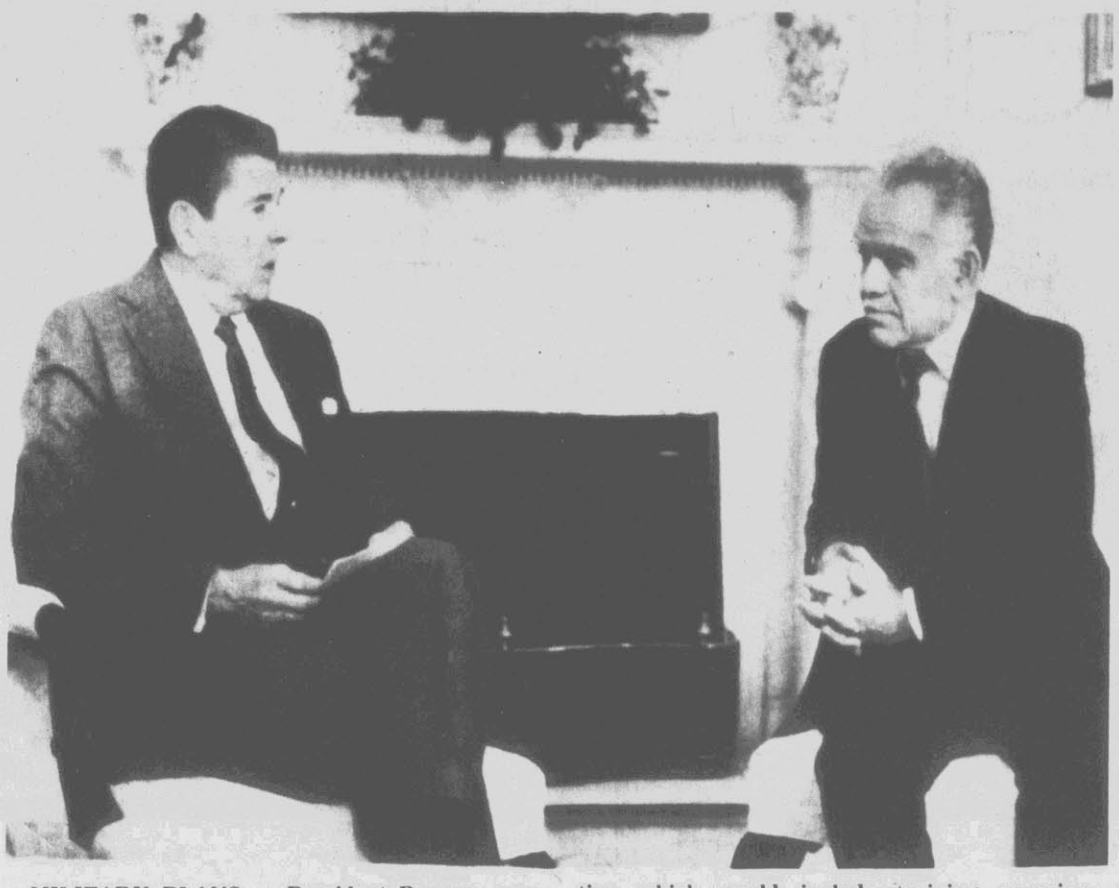

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The series of agreements reached by President Reagan and Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel give a new dimension to U.S.-Israeli relations, while trying to preserve American ties with moderate Arab countries.

For Israel, the package of agreements, some of which still need fleshing out with details, means unprecedented help in bailing out an economy in serious trouble. For the United States, it is another move on the global chessboard against the Soviets.

Shamir's two days of talks produced a general agreement to ease the burden of debt on American aid and to infuse much needed capital into Israeli military industry, one of the pillars of the economy. Talks will begin later on free trade between the two nations.

The two leaders announced the creation of a joint military committee to discuss U.S.-Israeli military maneuvers and to build warehoesec for U.S. equipment in Israel for emergency use. Both agreed to stand by a plan for the coordinated pullout of foreign forces from Lebanon that so far Syria has thwarted.

MILITARY PLANS — President Reagan confers with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir in the Oval Office. The two agreed to establish a joint committee to arrange for military cooperation which would include training exercises, military planning and stockpiling of U.S. equipment in Israel. (AP Laserphoto)

The Israelis were more concerned with the economics of its new relationship with Washington. "We are waging war on the economy," Shamir told Israeli correspondents after his final meeting with Reagan on Tuesday.

Israel's foreign debt is $21.5 billion, the highest per capita in the world. Earlier this month the government announced austerity measures that sent the economy plunging toward a recession and that raised the spectre of widespread unemployment.

Israeli officials speak of the package in terms of "a new period in relations," of a potential economic revolution and of a sharp turn from the critical U.S. attitude toward Israel that marked the last few years.

Reagan was demonstrating a more aggressive posture toward the Soviet Union in the Middle East, intending to show that Washington is watching the Soviet buildup in Syria with concern. Israel experts estimate that up to 7,000 Soviet advisers are in Syria with the latest Soviet military equipment.

Closer cooperation with Israel is "a message to Syria," said a senior U.S. official, who spoke on condition he not be identified. "We concieved of it at a message to the Soviets.".

The package was an implicit admission that the U.S. approach to resolving the Lebanon crisis was going nowhere, say U.S. officials. The Reagan administration now seems to believe that a U.S.-Israeli show of force has a better chance than negotiations of getting Syria to withdraw its occupation forces from Lebanon.

A coordinated Lebanon policy may help Shamir in his domestic politics, smothering much of the anti-war movement in Israel that is pressing for an immediate and unilateral withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon. Shamir has said he will not pull out of Lebanon unless Syria also leaves.

The package fell short of a full defense pact that would give Israel equal status with NATO countries in Europe.

"U.S. policy towards Israel has been and will remain inherently contradictory" because the Americans need to protect their commerical interests in the Arab world, Stuart Eizenstat, a top official of the Carter administration, said in a speech in Israel a few weeks ago.

But American dependency on Arab oil has fallen in recent years. The United States is now producing more oil than Saudi Arabia, which has had to cut back in line with a glut on the market.

And the United States carefully prepared its Arab friends for its tightened relations with Israel. "I sense much less anxiety among the moderate Arabs," said the senior administration official. "We have been telegraphing this move for some time."

AirplaneRolled In FAA Office

ATLANTA (AP) — An empty plane rolled into an office of the Federal Aviation Administration at Fulton County Airport after the craft's engine started up while the pilot was outside turning the propeller by hand.

No one was injured in Tuesday's crash, but the Piper Cherokee was extensively damaged and a window and desk were destroyed, said FAA spokesman Jack Barker.

The pilot, Al Kulikowski, might have been turning the propeller "to get oil going through the engine," Barker said.

Cites Increase In Heart Study

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Dr. Robert Jarvik, inventor of the first permanent mechanical heart implanted in a human, says there has been "a great increase" in research in the area in the year since the device was used to treat Dr. Barney Clark last Dec. 2.

At a news conference Tuesday, Jarvik said the artificial heart program has accelerated greatly despite the time elapsed since Clark's implant at the University of Utah. The 62-year-old retired dentist died March 23 after 112 days on the Jarvik heart.

A university committee will meet Dec. 7 to decide whether to allow a second implant, said committee chairman Dr. John Bosso.

LANGUAGE REQUIRED

PEKING (AP) — All Chinese Communist Party and government officials and army officers under age 50, working in Tibet, were told Tuesday they must learn the Tibetan language.

FIRE DEATHS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Residential fires cause 82 percent of all fire deaths in the United States, according to the U.S. Fire Administration. The administration recommends placing smoke detectors in all rooms of a dwelling, because in a slowly evolving fire enough toxic smoke can be generated to injure or kill a person before the fire is noticed.

TV Set Taken From Home

The theft of a black and white television set from a West Fifth Street home is under investigation by Greenville police. Officers said Randolph Ennitt of 1022A W. Fifth St. reported the theft at 10:10 p.m. Tuesday. Value of the set was estimated at $225.

Thrift Store Opens Thursday

The grand opening of the Salvation Army's new Thrift Store facility will be held Thursday at 9 a.m. at the organization's headquarters at 2337 Dickinson Ave.

According to Salvation Army officials, the new facility has 1,800 square feet and is completely finished on the inside with central heating and air-conditioning. It is located at the rear of the main building. The present Thirft Shop location will be used as a warehouse and storage building.

Copied 'Bills' Being Passed

Greenville police have alerted local businesses to be on the watch for black-on-black copies of $10 and $20 bills that are being passed throughout the city, generally at high volume stores with heavy traffic.

Detective Pete Lavin said the copied versions are surfacing at various local banks in deposits and apparently are targeted for locations where attendants are busy with customers. In some cases, businesses where part-time help is involved in money transactions are victimized.

Lavin said businesses and banks should be alert for bills with serial number L72137453C, Series 1981, and F84463122A, Series 1969C. The detective said the bogus bills have a feeling of copy type paper and the back of the copy will be black. Some of the copies seized were apparently "aged" by wrinkling, he said.

People receiving a copied $10 or $20 bill should notify the police department.

Possession Charge Filed

William Earl Heath of 1619 S. Pitt St. has been arrested by Greenville police and charged with the sale and delivery of marijuana and felonious possession of marijuana, according to Officer Lyn E. White.

He said Heath was arrested Monday afternoon at the intersection of McClellan and Howell Streets. Officers confiscated a quantity of marijuana and $46 in cash, White said.

Bond for Heath was set at $10,000.

Fire Damages Greenville Home

Fire damaged a house early this morning at 1722 Knollwood Drive.

According to Greenville Fire-Rescue officials, the fire was contained to the kitchen and cabinet area around the stove. Officials said the owner, Billy Dail discovered the fire shortly after 7 a.m.

Investigators said a pot of grease on the stove was apprently turned on instead of a pot of water. Damage was listed as moderate.

Tractor Accident Kills Man

A Route 3, Greenville, man died Tuesday when the tractor he had just jump-started from an automobile knocked him down and pulled a rotary mower over him.

According to Medical Examiner Stan Harris, Clifton Carl Cannon, 70, died at the scene, in the side yard of his home, of "multiple trauma". The accident was reported at 1:56 p.m. to the Eastern Pines Rescue Squad, which responded.

Marijuana Confiscated

Greenville police arrested Willis Hoover Whichard of 1500A Ward St. Monday night at his home and charged him with possession of marijuana with intent to sell and deliver, Officer J.R. Teel Jr. reported.

Teel said police confiscated a quantity of marijuana contained in envelopes. Bond for Whichard was set for $10,000, the officer said.

Pinetops Parade Planned

The South Edgecombe Jaycees will present the 10th annual Pinetops Christmas parade Saturday with clowns, dancers, bands and floats.

The parade will begin at 10 a.m. at the interesection of Ninth and Main streets and will move east on Main Street to Second Street and then turn south to Lashley Street. A limited amount of seating will be available on Main Street near the viewing stand.

Bands from nine area junior and senior high schools will perform, along with a performance by the Keystone Cops and Horse Patrol of the Shriner's Club. The parade will also feature several professional and local floats, fire and rescue squad units and Santa Claus.

Annual Gospel Sing Set

Ballards Community Baptist Church's annual Gospel Sing and Special Christmas celebration will be held at 7:30 p.m. Friday. The church is located on Farmville highway, Ballards Cross Roads.

Four Local Traffic Mishaps Reported

Damages estimated at approximately $4,500, but no injuries, resulted from four traffic accidents investigated Tuesday by Greenville police.

Heaviest damage occurred in a 5:22 p.m. accident at the intersection of Greene and Third streets involving vehicles operated by Betty Burt Harris of 110 Woodlawn Avenue, and Alton Gray Smith of 307 McKinley St., Ayden.

Police said Smith was charged with having an expired operator's license and with a red light violation. Damage was set at $1,000 to the Smith vehicle and $900 to the Harris car.

Jacqueline Ann Mayer of 104 Pelletier Place, Jacksonville, was charged with following too closely by officers who investigated a 7 p.m. accident on Greenville Boulevard a half-mile west from Evans Street.

Police said the accident involved vehicles operated by Ms. Mayer and Walter Clifton Martin Jr. of Polkton. Damages were estimated at $1,500 to the Mayer vehicle and $200 to the Martin car.

Anthony Ray Clemons of Route 5, Greenville, was charged with a safe movement violation following investigation of a 7:55 a.m. mishap at the intersection of 10th Street and Brownlea Drive. Police said the accident involved the Clemons car and a vehicle operated by Walter Carroll Byrd Jr. of Route 7, Greenville. Damages were set at $500 to the Byrd vehicle and $200 to the Clemons car.

Gladys Squires Brown of Route 3, Greenville, was charged with a safe movement violation following investigation of a 3:30 p.m. accident on Greenville Boulevard west from Charles Boulevard. Police said the wreck involved vehicles operated by Ms. Brown and Laura Sharp Segrave of 16 Baywood Drive, Winterville. Damages were estimated at $100 to the each vehicle.

Arafat Ruling Out Any Deals With Enemies

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP) — Yasser Arafat today ruled out any deals with his enemies and said he saw no need for major strategy changes despite three weeks of bloody fighting within his Palestine Liberation Organization.

In an interview with three foreign reporters, Arafat claimed Syria's extensive involvement in fighting between his supporters and opponents had discredited the PLO rebels both internationally and among Palestinian civilians.

"The rebellion is finished," said Arafat. "Maybe we are in a critical military situation but politically we are very strong."

He said he saw no need to overhaul his political strategy but might "adjust" it.

He said the PLO should now press ahead "with more efforts on all levels" in support of an Arab League peace plan adopted in 1982, which calls for creation of a Palestinian state while implying recognition of Israel's right to exist.

PLO rebels have been demanding Arafat take a more militant line against peace with Israel and have called for resuming "armed struggle" against the Jewish state.

Arafat's forces, believed to number between 2,000 and 4,000, have been holed up in this northern Lebanon port city since Syrian-backed PLO rebels drove them from the nearby Baddawi and Nahr el-Bared refugee camps in mid-November.

Last Friday, Syria and Saudi Arabia announced a cease-fire plan which called for the evacuation of PLO fighters from the city within two weeks after a detailed departure plan was announced by former Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami.

Karami began his contacts Saturday in Damascus, Syria, but Arafat said he had so far received no official communication on any details for an evacuation.

The Saudi-Syrian plan also calls for "democratic dialogue" to settle disputes in the PLO.

Asked whether he was ruling out talks with his PLO opponents, Arafat replied: "I'm dealing with the masters (the Syrians)."

Rebels in Arafat's own Al Fatah faction began openly challenging his leadership last May, accusing him of indecision, appointing incompetent allies to key military posts and willingness to negotiate with the United States, Israel and conservative Arab states to settle the Palestinian issue.

On Nov. 3, Syrian-backed rebels led by dissident Fatah Col. Saeed Mousa and former Syrian army Capt. Ahmed Jibril attacked Arafat strongholds in northern Lebanon and drove his forces out of their last Palestinian camps in this country.

Arafat said he hoped Karami's mission would complete its work soon so he could leave for PLO headquarters in Tunis, Tunisia, or his military command center in Sanaa, North Yemen.

But Arafat aides, who asked not to identified, said talks in Damascus were virtually suspended because of political problems within the Syrian regime.

They claimed Syrian President Hafez Assad remained incapacitated due to illness and that in the meantime, Syrian officials were reluctant to make major decisions.

Arafat repeated his claims that Syria was massing new forces in the Tripoli area and that they may be planning to resume the fighting.

Arafat gave Syrian troop strength as two divisions, between 9,000 and 12,000 men each. He said the Syrian forces included one brigade of paratroops and commandos.

Shop Opens On Saturday

The grand opening of Twice is Nice Inc., a consignment shop specializing in children's clothing and accessories, will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. with Mayor-elect Janice Buck cutting the ribbon.

The business, located at 1726 W. Fifth St., is owned and operated by Karin Bornstein and Jodi Chaffee, who recently moved to Greenville from Florida and Clinton, respectively. Ms. Bornstein said they met at a Welcome Wagon luncheon here and formulated plans for their new shop.

Ms. Bornstein said the shop will accept on a consignment arrangement clothing for children up to 14 years of age and also furniture, such as cribs, high chairs and swings, as well sports equipment and toys for youngsters in that age group. She said the store will set a price and sell an item and pay the consignor up to 50 percent. Clothing submitted for consignment must not be stained or ripped, she said.

The shop will be open Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Wednesday from 3-8 p.m. to accommodate working parents, and Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Ms. Bornstein said a small play area with toys and books is available at the business for children while parents shop.

24-HOUR STRIKE

MADRID (AP) — Spain's 8,600 plainclothes policemen defied the Interior Ministry Tuesday and launched a 24-hour strike for better pay.

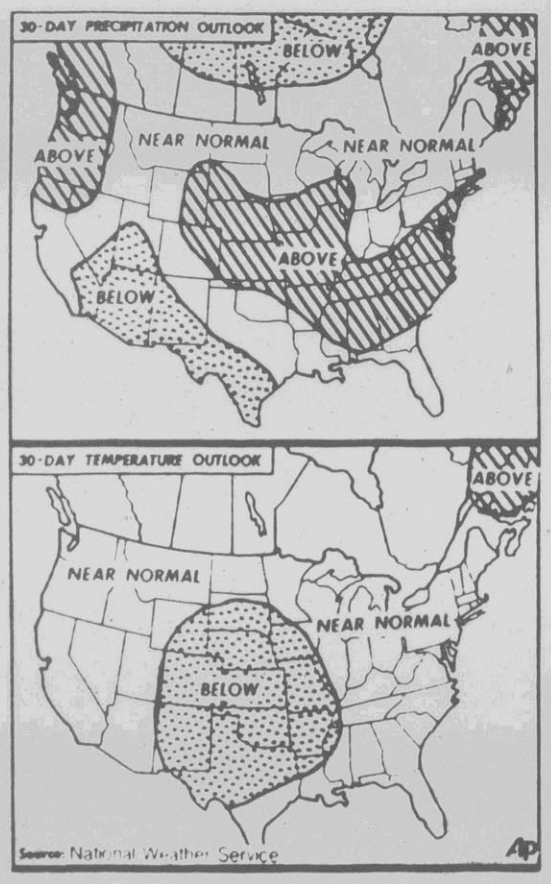

Mother Held In Deaths Of Tots

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — A pregnant mother of four was held without bail today after being charged with drowning her two youngest children, whose bodies were found along the murky Cooper River.

Jeanne Wright, a 25-year-old Camden woman who is expecting her fifth child in March, was charged Tuesday with drowning her 1-year-old son Juan Jose and her 2½-year-old son Jonathan.

Meanwhile, workers dragged the river trying to find Miss Wright's two other children.

Miss Wright was ordered held without bail at the Camden County Jail because capital punishment could apply in the case. A preliminary hearing was set for Dec. 7.

Dutch Police Rescue Kidnapped Beer Baron

By ABNER KATZMAN
Associated Press Writer

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Police rescued multimillionaire brewer Alfred Heineken and his chauffeur early today from a three-week kidnapping ordeal. They spent much of the time chained in concrete cells at an isolated warehouse.

Both Heineken and chauffeur Ab Doderer, seized Nov. 9 by assailants armed with machine guns, were in good condition, according to police spokesman Kees Sietsma, who headed the nationwide hunt for the two.

A ransom of an unspecified amount was paid, and some was recovered, police said. Earlier reports had said the ransom demand ranged between $8 milion and $12 million.

While the rescue was being carried out, police arrested 24 persons believed involved in the kidnapping during a three-city sweep.

Speaking at a news conference, Sietsma said the 5 a.m. raid on the warehouse in an isolated industrial park on the outskirts of Amsterdam, was mounted as a result of an earlier tip.

An anonymous letter received Nov. 16 by a crisis center set up at the brewery indicated that three persons, who operated a "dubious enterprise," in the industrial park, might be involved in the kidnapping, according to Sietsma.

The three operators, who police have not identified, ran a auto wrecking and carpentry firm in the Heining, an industrial park near the Amsterdam harbor.

Police, who had delivered the ransom to a site near the Dutch city of Utrecht on Monday morning, had put the site under surveillance, and raided it when no further contact was made by the kidnappers.

Police at first found no one in a pre-dawn search of the property today, but an alert policeman noticed that a small corrugated iron warehouse contained a secret door.

Upon breaking through the door, police discovered Heineken and Doderer in two separate concrete cells. Each was chained to the wall, and was clad only in pajamas in the unheated building.

A statement issued this morning by the brewery and families of the two men said, "There is enormous joy that Heineken and Doderer have been freed in a perfectly executed operation last night."

The freeing of Heineken, 60, one of the Netherlands' richest and most prominent businessmen, came after one of the largest manhunts in Dutch history. Police combed the country, stopping motorists in the Amsterdam vicinity and intensifying border checks.

The two men were seized outside the brewery's Amsterdam office as they crossed a street to a company limousine which was to take Heineken home.

Although the kidnappers made contact with police the day after the kidnapping, authorities clamped a news blackout on the case the same day at the demand of the abductors.

Several days after the abduction, authorities received a photograph of Heineken and Doderer, 57, holding a copy of a newspaper which post-dated their abduction, according to the Rotterdam daily Algemeen Dagblad.

Receipt of the photograph was confirmed at the time by the Justice Ministry.

The nation's daily newspapers reported several contacts had been made by the abductors, but several of them appeared to be hoaxes.

A crisis center was set up by the brewery to help in coordinating the case, and the firm, the nation's largest beer-maker, announced its willingness to pay a ransom.

Heineken, who is married to the former Lucille Cummins from a Kentucky whiskey-distilling family, has one daughter.

As chairman of the brewery's board of directors, Heineken heads a concern which employs 24,000 people around the world and operates in 145 nations. The company, the largest supplier of imported beer in the United States, was founded by Heineken's grandfather, Gerard Adrian Heineken.

Heineken, known to friends and associates as "Freddy," has for a long time been a fixture on the international social scene, with a villa in Switzerland, and ties to European royalty, including Prince Bernhard and the late Princess Grace of Monaco.

Craig Phillips Proposes Sales Tax For Schools

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — Increasing North Carolina's sales tax 1 cent and imposing a "modest increase" in the income tax assessment scale could easily generate $500 million to improve public schools, the state superintendent of public instruction says.

Craig Phillips on Tuesday recommended a two-year, six-point plan that would increase the state's financing of public education by $500 per student.

"This is still less than $2,000 per child of state educational investment in its children — a figure considerably less than the average amount being spent per child across the country," he told a Salisbury civic club.

Phillips said he hoped the Governor's Commission on Education for Economic Growth and the Legislature's Public Education Policy Council would endorse his plan. Both groups are to make recommendations for the 1984 and 1985 General Assembly sessions.

"The two study committees ... have a great opportunity at a crucial moment in the history of this state to recommend new investments ... for this major change in the quality and excellence of North Carolina's public schools," said Phillips. "This opportunity may not come again."

Tom I. Davis, spokesman for the department, said the expenditures Phillips recommends would require over $500 million in previously unallocated funds in 1984-85. He said Phillips hopes that the expenditures would become permanent parts of the state budget thereafter.

Phillips' spending proposals include:

— A $200 million increase in salaries for school personnel to establish in 1984 and 1985 an "adequate state basic salary" of between $16,000 and $27,000. Each employee would get a raise of about 15 percent.

— $50 million for a "career ladder" that, beginning in 1985, would allow the "best and most effective" teachers to be paid as much as $40,000 a year as they assume more duties and work longer.

— $10 million for on-the-job training for all school personnel "to assure continued improvement in the quality and competence of those who work in the schools." About $100 would be spent on each employee.

— $100 million to hire about 4,500 new teachers, thus reducing class sizes enough to "guarantee the kind of individual attention necessary for quality instruction."

— $150 million per year, beginning in 1985, for school construction in addition to the $50 million per year expected to be raised by full implementation of the half-cent local option sales tax approved this year. Eighty-five of the state's 100 counties levy the tax.

— An unspecified expenditure for 16 "model programs" for 3- and 4-year-olds, a development he said was necessitated by "dramatic" social changes "and new knowledge about how very young children learn."

Phillips' speech came one day after the Governor's Commission on Education for Economic Growth conducted a hearing in which speakers recommended higher teacher salaries, letting teachers work more days and expanded programs for the gifted and talented.

Salvadorans Caught In The Middle

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer

CIUDAD BARRIOS, El Salvador (AP) — "The thing is, if they come one has to be on their side, and if the others come you have have to be on their side. It's not just who you sympathize with."

The young woman, who gave her name only as Regina, sat outside her home on the plaza here, explaining how it is these days in Ciudad Barrios, with the guerrilla war swirling around it and sometimes in it.

Leftist rebels move freely in the area and hold several surrounding villages. Twice, for a day or two, they even took over Ciudad Barrios. When that happens, the Salvadoran army comes.

In Ciudad Barrios (population 23,319), the people are caught in the middle; they do not readily tell outsiders where their sympathies lie. They talk about other things.

A woman named Silvia, standing in her corner grocery store at the edge of the plaza, talked about her cousin's family being driven off the coffee farm where they work because of the fighting.

"They eat poorly," she said. "They barely have enough to buy beans. Corn and cooking oil are what they buy most. Now it has been three days since they have gone to the finca (coffee plantation)."

"The fear is that one of the children will be killed, that there will be a stray bullet," said Angelia Medina, who was working at another small store.

A child and a man were killed in six hours of fighting between government troops and the rebels at the start of the most recent takeover. The army reported six military deaths. There was no report of rebel casualties.

For two days recently, guerrillas patrolled the streets. They gathered people on the church steps, overlooking the plaza.

"They talked about the rich who exploit the poor, the families in San Salvador who have their big houses, and they compared them with thepoor who don't have shoes," said Nancy, a young woman who was there.

The poor here work on the farms, picking coffee or tending trees. The work used to pay eight colones (about $2) a day but low coffee prices and a surplus of labor have dropped it to five colones (about $1.25) a day, Silvia said. Shelled corn, ground and made into tortillas, costs nine colones ($2.25) for 28 pounds. How much a family needs depends on how much else they have to eat.

Some workers lost their jobs when farm owners did not replant after army bombings and others are afraid to go to the fields for fear of being caught in clashes between the guerrillas and army troops, Miguel Angel Salgado said as he rode back to his job a couple of days late because of the takeover.

"They (the rebels) burned a coffee-processing plant and now the people who worked there don't have jobs," said Silvia.

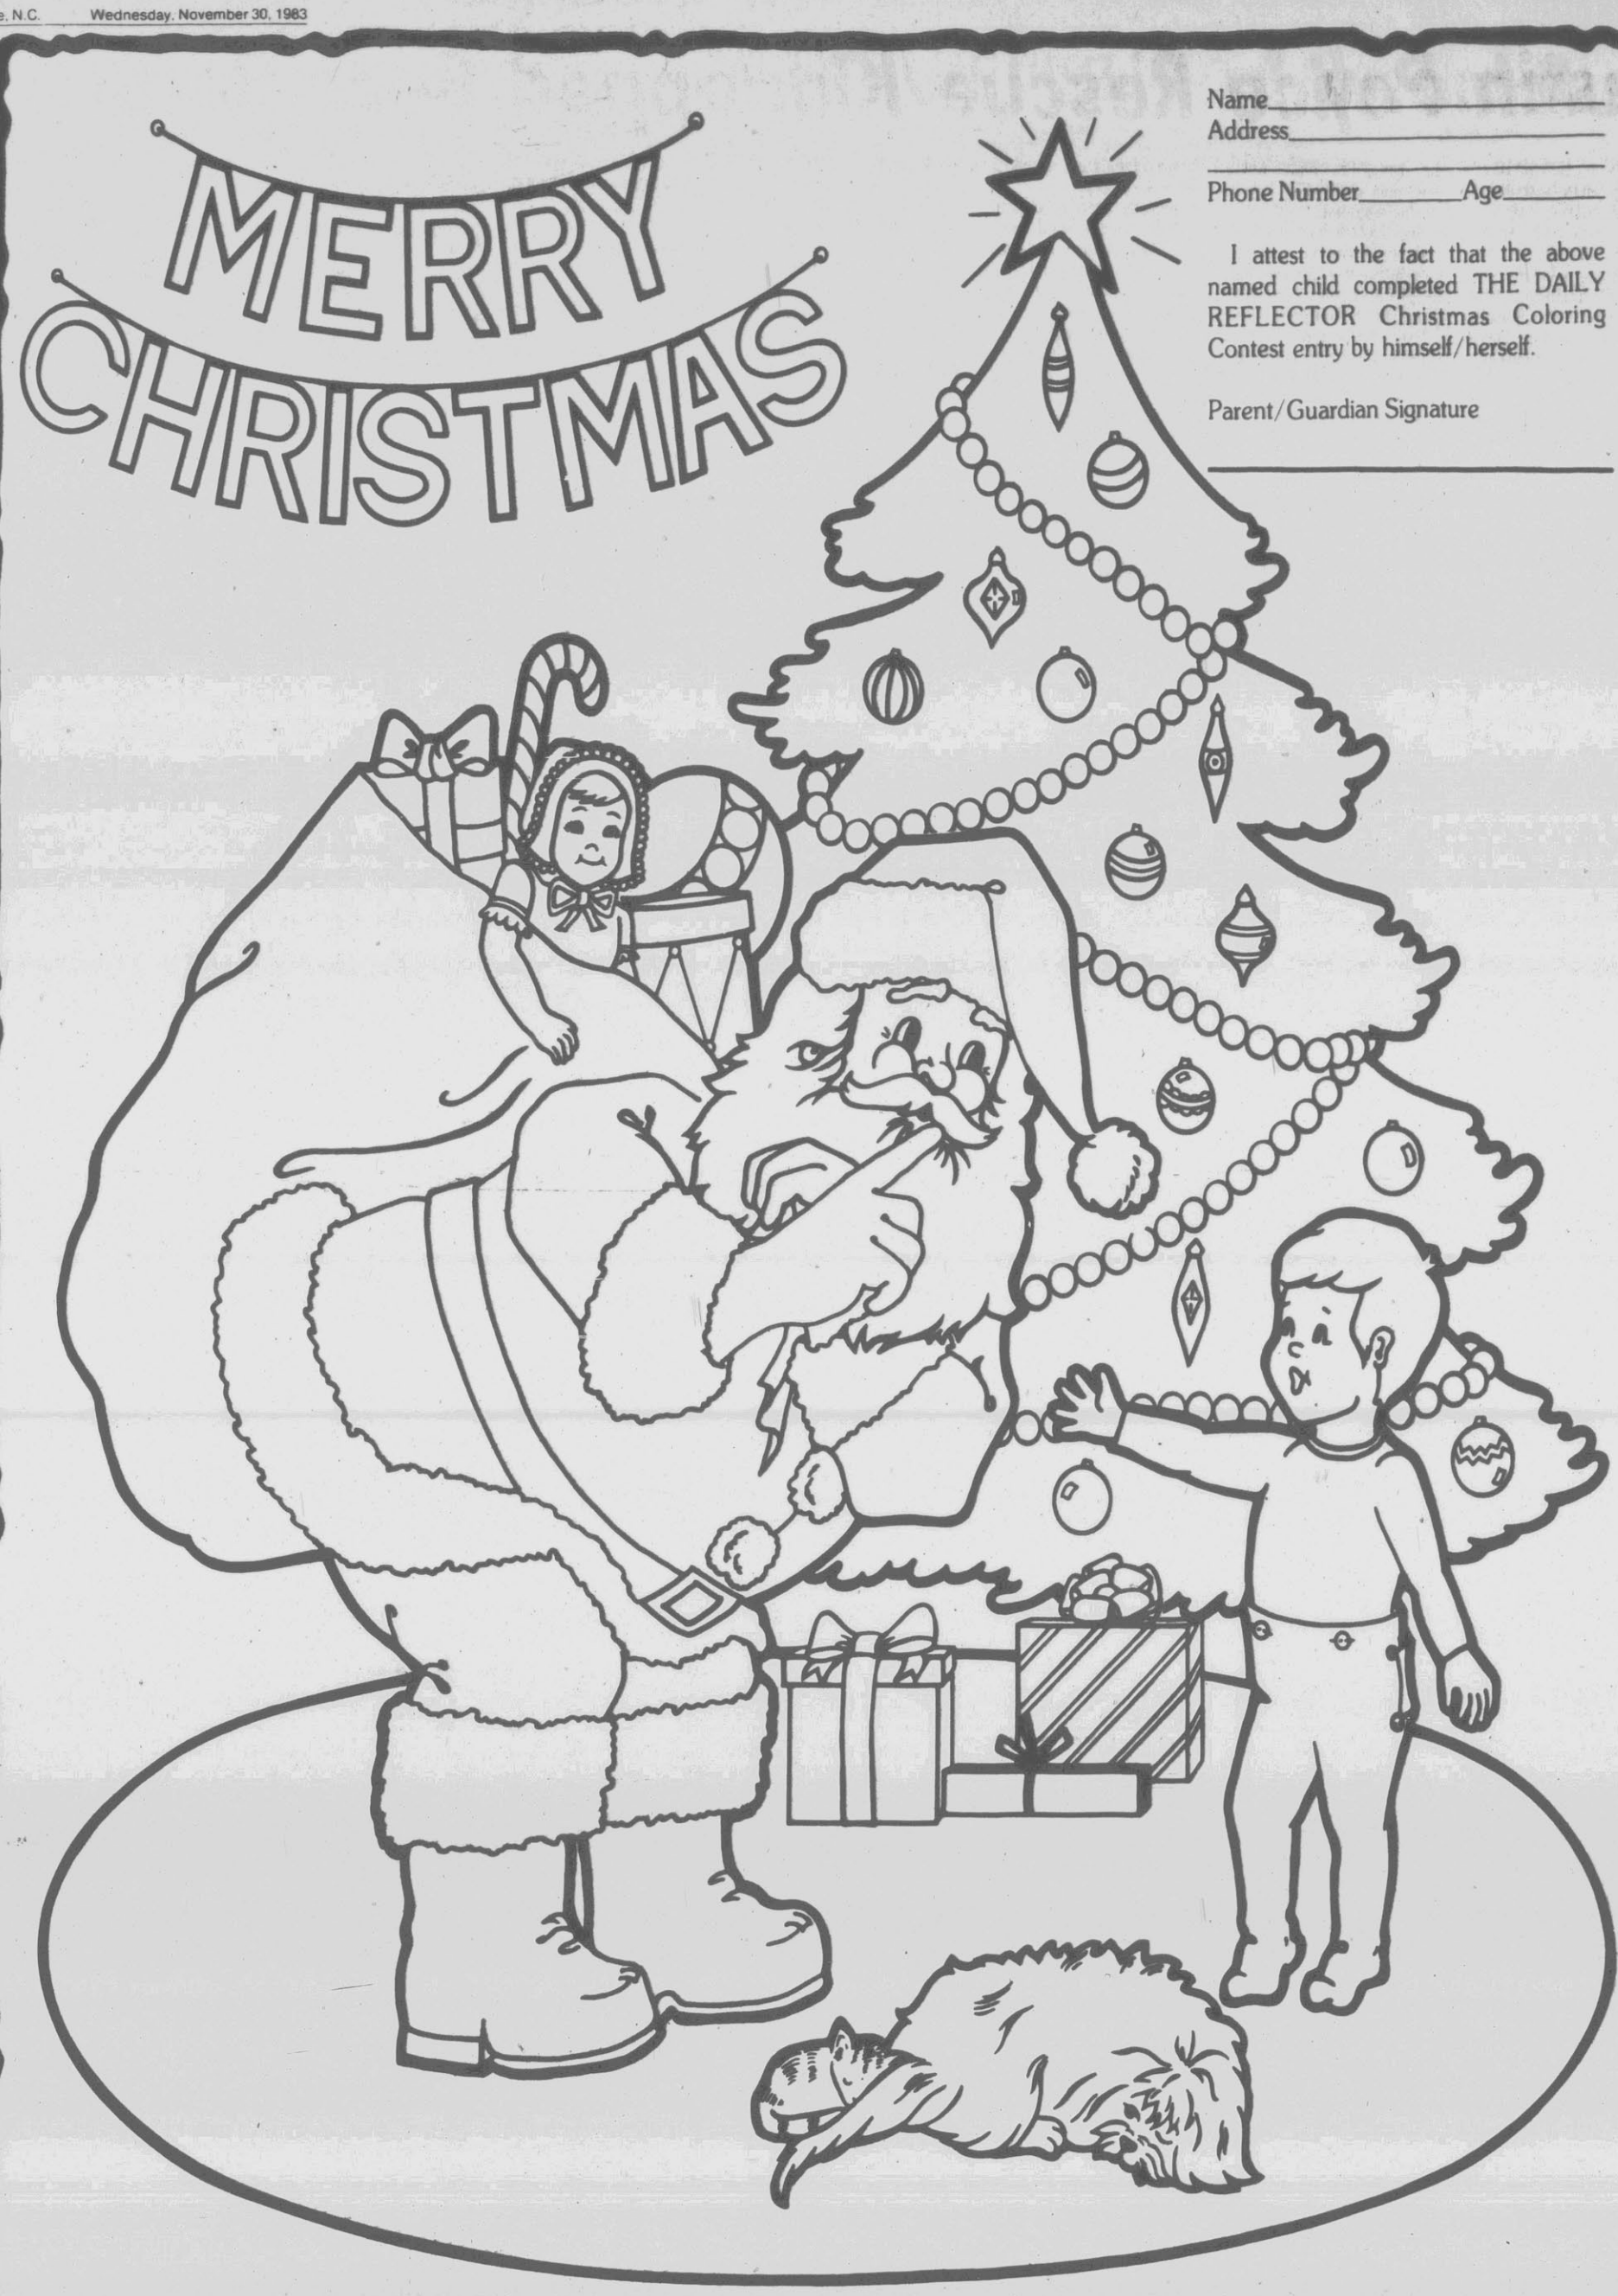

Some townspeople said the rebels burned the processing plant to protest the low wages. A sign painted on a plant wall said it was burned because it was part of an economy that "is used to buy more weapons to massacre the people."

Many young men — those who were not kept at home by their parents — made friends with the rebels and a few left to join them, townspeople said.

"They tell you to join them," said Matias Orellana. "But I can't. I have children." He said he didn't know if he agreed with their ideals.

The day he spoke, soldiers from the U.S.-trained Arce Battalion, their faces splotched with black for camouflage, took up positions on the church steps where the guerrillas had gathered the people. They relaxed on the streets around the plaza, waiting to go into the mountains after the guerrillas.

Testimony In Rita Lavelle Perjury Trial Is Ended

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Testimony in the perjury trial of Rita Lavelle ended on a confusing note as the former Environmental Protection Agency official and a prosecution witness gave totally different versions of a key event.

The case was headed toward the jury today after both sides presented closing arguments.

It will be up to the jury to resolve discrepancies between Ms. Lavelle's testimony and that of William Hedeman, her chief deputy in charge of the government's $1.6 billion hazardous waste cleanup program.

Charged with perjury and obstruction of Congress, Ms. Lavelle is accused of lying to Congress by denying she ever used her EPA position to further the chances of Republican congressional candidates. She is also accused of lying about the date when she first learned that her former employer, Aerojet-General Corp., had dumped wastes at a California site.

The government contends Ms. Lavelle was first told of Aerojet's use of the Stringfellow Acid Pits at a staff meeting on May 28, 1982, and that she lied when she swore the information did not come to her until June 17.

Ms. Lavelle, however, insisted that she doubted the EPA staffer who first told her about Aerojet's involvement and did not stop handling the case until Hedemen gave her better evidence on June 17.

She said Hedeman called her out of another meeting late in the day and told her that the agency had information showing that Aerojet had dumped wastes at the Stringfellow site. She said he handed her a letter to sign withdrawing from the case and she signed it.

Hedeman, who returned to the stand as a government rebuttal witness, said he recalled no such discussion with Lavelle concerning Aerojet on June 17. He testified that he did not himself see a list of companies that had dumped at Stringfellow until five months later.

Ms. Lavelle finished almost six hours of testimony on Tuesday. She insisted during her two days on the stand that she did not lie to Congress last February but instead tried to answer every question put to her "to the best of my ability."

"I had no reason to lie. I just wouldn't lie," she testified.

Under cross examination, Ms. Lavelle testified that she had no recollection of a string of conversations in which government witnesses have testified that she tied EPA decisions to the November 1982 elections.

Under questioning by chief prosecutor Allen Carver Jr., Ms. Lavelle said she couldn't remember telling aides that a Seymour, Ind., dump needed to be cleaned up to help Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., or that a dioxin announcement was needed to help Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., in a tight race.

She also told Carver she couldn't recall saying that EPA funds should be withheld from California to "hit" then-Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., a Democrat.

But she later said, "Sure I discussed politics, but my decisions were not based on politics."

Hedeman also testified that Ms. Lavelle orchestrated the announcement that EPA money would be spent to help clean up a Michigan dump site known as Berlin & Farro. He said Ms. Lavelle timed the announcement to occur during a week in June 1982 when Gov. William Milliken was out of the state so that Lt. Gov. James Brickley, who was running for governor, could get publicity by accepting the federal money.

Ms. Lavelle denied telling Hedeman that this was the reason for her timing of the announcement.

Ms. Lavelle is the only former EPA official to face criminal charges. More than 20 top-ranking employees of the agency resigned under fire earlier this year. If convicted on all charges, Ms. Lavelle could be sentenced to up to 25 years in prison.

Unable Meet Their Requests

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Despite its approval of a record $24.5 million world service budget, the executive committee of the United Bible Societies says it still won't be able to meet all the "urgent" requests for Scriptures.

The budget, approved at a recent meeting here, was a 3.2 percent increase over the current budget but $6 million short of the amount needed to meet the requests, the group said. Inflation and currency fluctuations will wipe out any real increase in purchasing power, it said.

The international organization was founded after World War II to help supply Bibles at no cost. It coordinates the work of Bible Societies in 150 countries and territories.

COGNAC FOR 2000 A.D.

COGNAC, France (AP) — The cognacs that go into the oak barrels this winter for the most part will be making their contribution to the cognac character of blends to be consumed at the end of the year 2000.

According to Jacques Martell, whose family has been in the business for 268 years, the infant cognacs of 1983 will go into the barrels for a stay as long as 60 years.

PIONEER — Dr. Albert Sabin, developer of the oral vaccine that helped rid most of the world of polio, poses for photographers in bed at the National Institute of Health in Bethesdea, Md. The anti-polio pioneer said he is suffering from paralysis of nerve cells throughout his body, brought on by complications of surgery for a spinal cord compression at the base of his neck. Disagree Over Use Of Power

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two leading Democrats disagree on when or how America should use its military power, especially as it was used in the invasion of Grenada.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, national security adviser to President Carter, said Tuesday the invasion was justified but former Sen. Frank Church said it was not.

To Church, former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the Grenada invasion was an unjustified excuse for the Reagan administration to "rout" Democrats politically. But Brzezinski said the Grenada invasion was, on the whole, an exercise in the prudent and restrained use of military force that sent a signal to Cuba and the Soviet Union that "there are limits" to American patience.

Debate Sites

WASHINGTON (AP) — The League of Women Voters decided on Pittsburgh and Dallas as the sites of the final two debates among Democratic presidential candidates.

The Pittsburgh debate is scheduled April 5, five days before Pennsylvania's primary, League President Dorothy S. Ridings said Tuesday. The final debate of the primary series will come May 2 in the Dallas-Ft. Worth area, with the exact site to be decided later.

Charged...

cision must be made by the patrol commander, Col. David L. Matthews. He said Matthews will probably make a decision later today.

The spokesman said that, normally, a trooper would be put on leave until the charges are adjudicated. Compton will not be available for duty for several months due to his injuries, the spokesman said.

Holmes said "the investigation took a long time and it took a long time because it is an extemely sensitive and critical kind of issue and problem to deal with and in doing these things you only make errors by rushing."

Holmes said the police department brought its charges of two counts of death by vehicle "with a very heavy heart."

Police Officer D.C. Johnson, who investigated the accident, said the investigation would have been just as lengthy if the accident had not involved an officer. He said "there was quite a bit to do" and had to be done "no matter who was involved." Johnson said there were several witnesses and tests that had to be performed.

Johnson said, initially, the police had no indication that Compton had been in pursuit when the accident took place or that the patrol vehicle's blue light was on. He said later in the investigation, the police learned that the trooper was pursuing a vehicle and the blue light was flashing.

Police reports at the scene of the accident, however, indicated a pursuit was in progress when the accident occurred. On the following Monday, city police and the patrol denied that Compton had been chasing another vehicle. Today's statement was the first officially acknowledging that a pursuit was in progress.

The police accident report pointed out that the patrol vehicle was traveling south on Memorial Drive "at a high speed" and Mrs. Long's car was "making a left turn from a driveway onto Memorial Drive (headed north)" when the patrol cruiser struck the vehicle in the left side.

Johnson said the two criminal summons charging Compton with death by vehicle were delivered this morning to the Pitt County Sheriff's Department. He said conviction on a death by vehicle charge is punishable by a $500 fine and/or up to two years in prison and is a general misdemeanor.

Bus Accident Takes 5 Lives

LIVINGSTON, Texas (AP) — A Continental Trailways bus hit a truck today and veered down a 40-foot embankment into a creek bed, killing five people and injuring seven others, officials said.

"At this point we have five confirmed dead," said Department of Public Safety Trooper Melvin Hughes. The accident on Highway 59, five miles north of Livingston, occurred at about 5:30 a.m.

Several people were pinned in the wreckage, but all were removed by 8 a.m., DPS operator Mary Blanton said. Helicopter ambulances were dispatched to the scene from Hermann Hospital in Houston, she said.

"A tractor-trailer rig apparently pulled out in front of the bus and was struck in the rear by the bus," Hughes said. "The bus went across the median and over a 40-foot embankment into a creek bed. At this point it looks like there were 12 people on the bus. That includes the driver."

Hughes said seven of those on the bus were injured. The vehicle turned onto its side when it slid down a 40-foot embankment and its nose was "more or less buried into the bank," he said.

Ms. Blanton said the truck driver was unhurt and was the first person to report the accident to authorities.

Shirley Collins, supervisor of the Trailways terminal in Houston, said the bus left Shreveport, La., at 1:55 a.m. and was to have arrived in Houston at 7:30 a.m.

Livingston is about 75 miles north of Houston.

Laser Downed A Navy Drone

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says an Air Force flying laboratory successfully used a high-energy laser beam to destroy a pilotless Navy target drone traveling below the speed of sound.

The intercept occurred Sept. 26 over the Pacific off the California coast, the Pentagon said Tuesday. There was no explanation for the two-month delay in making the announcement.

Lasers are beams of high-intensity light.

Abbie Advises New Activism

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — His once-frizzy hair now trimmed and grayed, Abbie Hoffman, the Yippie activist of the 1960s, claims today's youth are self indulgent and politically complacent.

Furthermore, said Hoffman in a speech to Mesa College students Monday night, he will "never trust anybody under 30."

The decade of the 1980s, said Hoffman, is "The Age of Designer Brains."

"Don't despair because you've seen 'The Day After,'" Hoffman advised. "Get out there and get active. Don't go diving into your fallout shelter."

"It's not a perfect bill," ranking House Tobacco Committee member Walter B. Jones Sr. said in a news conference held in Farmville this morning. "We had to make some concessions to the anti-tobacco members of Congress who are legion.

"Overall, though, I'm pleased with it. It's been hard work getting it passed. I believe we've stifled the opposition for a while longer and it will do our farmers some good."

Joyner said the system is the latest design and will allow better medical treatment in the field and during transportation to the hospital.

Joyner added Pitt County's system is only the third system east of Raleigh now in operation. Others are in Manteo and Wilson.

Looking For Room

Rose High School's Jeff Hopkins (52) looks for room to maneuver in the lane against the defense of Jacksonville's Scott White (behind Hopkins) and Tony Conway (34) during the opening game for both teams last night here. Cards Hold Off Rampants

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's Rampants, down by 21 points, rallied to within four points of Jacksonville last night, but couldn't quite pull it all together and bowed, 72-63 in the opening game for both teams.

Earlier in the evening, Jacksonville's Lady Cardinals crushed the Rampettes, 71-30.

Rose, behind the entire ball game, trailed by 21 points, 55-34 with 2:56 remaining in the third period, but sparked by Carlton Wilson and Mack Walston, rallied out outscore the Cardinals, 15-0 in the remainder of the period. Rose added the first two points of the final period to pull within four, 55-51, but Rodney Anderson hit twice in the first minute of play and moved the lead back to eight.

Rose again rallied to within four, 59-55 with 4:47 to go, but turnovers and the inability to score when it counted cost them the contest.

As can be said for nearly every opening game, it was a sloppy contest. Fouls were aplenty — a total of 50 were called on the two teams. Three players, one for Jacksonville and two for Rose, left with five fouls.

Neither team shot well. Jacksonville scored on just 36.7 percent — that thanks to a six-for-nine showing in the final period. Rose scored on 34.5 percent of its shots.

Turnovers played a big role in the game. Rose had 31 to Jacksonville's 26, but 12 of the Rampant misplays came in the first period when the Cardinals moved ahead for good — and the others all seemed to come just when the Rampants appeared ready to make a move.

Jacksonville enjoyed a 49-44 rebounding edge — mostly coming in the first and fourth period, when the Cards held a six rebound edge.

"The fouls hurt us," Coach Jim Brewington said. "When our first line isn't in there, we're not nearly as strong.

"But I thought we fought back well. I really thought that we could pull it out. When you're so far back, though, it's tough. We just ran out of steam."

Brewington said Jacksonville surprised him by being so ready to play.

The Cards grabbed the lead on a pair of early baskets, but Rose came back to tie it at 4-4. It was the only time however.

David Langley made two free throws and Benjy Taylor canned a baseline jumper and two free throws to run the Cards out to a 10-4 lead. Rose cut it back to four, but late in the period, six free throws helped the Cards take a 20-10 margin at the horn.

Rose reeled off the first five points of the second period, cutting the lead back to 20-15, but Jacksonville came back a few minutes later with 11 unanswered points, running the lead back out to 37-21. The Cardinals held on to lead 41-28 at intermission.

Early in the third period, Jacksonville inched on out to their 21-point margin at 55-34, but Rose put on a rally, as Wilson scored 10 points and Walston, six, to cut it back to 55-49 at the end of the quarter. Four of those points came after the Cards were called for a technical under a new rule that allows only two times out per half — and they called a third.

Jeff Hopkins' two free throws early in the period trimmed it to 55-51 before Anderson scored two straight to open it back to eight, 59-51. Rose again rallied to within four, but the Cardinals cooled the ball off after that, managing either to go to the line or to isolate someone under the basket for a layup, moving back out by as much as ten in the remaining minutes.

Taylor led the Cardinals with 24 points, while Scott White and Anderson each had 11. Rose was led by Walston with 20 and Wilson with 19.

• •

For the Jacksonville girls, it was hardly a test as Rose coundn't seem to find the mark or even control the ball. Jacksonville scored the first ten points of the game, and held a 14-4 lead after one period. It got no better in the second period as the lead grew to as much as 24 points and ended with the Lady Cards up, 31-9.

The lead continued to build in the third period, reaching 29 by the end of the frame — 51-22.

In the final period, the margin reached the final one, 41 points, with about a minute and a half remaining and stayed that way.

Chris Harrold led the Cardinal scoring with 23 points, while Melissa Tyynisman added ten. Rose was led by Sheila Carmon and Lori Whichard, each with eight.

"We looked a lot better than this in our scrimmage," Coach Dennis Gibson said, "a lot, lot better. I knew that we were young, but not that young."

Gibson said he counted 20 turnovers in the first half and a total of 34 in the game for Rose. "That was just one of many things we did wrong tonight. They manhandled us inside and in the transition too.

"I think we'll play better. The worst game of the season is behind us now — at least I hope it is."

Rose returns to action on Friday night, playing host to cross-county rival D.H. Conley.

Chargers Rally Past Roanoke

ROBERSONVILLE — Sophomore Marvin Smith scored 16 points as the Chargers of Ayden-Grifton rallied from a first-half deficit to defeat Roanoke 50-46 Tuesday in high school basketball action.

Gloria Duggins scored the winning basket in overtime to lead the Roanoke girls to a 52-51 victory over the Lady Chargers.

Gary Baker and James Duggins scored 10 points each for Roanoke, while Calvin Peterson and Doug Anderson added seven each for the Chargers.

Ayden-Grifton trailed 20-19 at halftime, but outscored Roanoke 13-11 and held on in the fourth quarter for the win.

• •

Joyce Artis had tied the game at the end of regulation play for Ayden-Grifton at 46-46, but Duggins got behind the Lady Charger defense to take a long pass for the winning score in overtime. Ginya Smith bucketed 19 points for the Redskin girls, while Teresa Brown added 10. Tracy Durant led the Chargers with 14 points, while Cora Faison chipped in 13.

Ayden-Grifton travels to North Lenoir Friday, while Roanoke host North Pitt.

Long Selected To Writers' All-America

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Clemson defensive lineman Willie [illegible] and East Carolina [illegible] lineman Terry Long were named Tuesday to the All-America team of the Football Writers Association of America.

Top-ranked Nebraska, chasing a national championship and a perfect season, placed three players on the team announced Tuesday.

The Cornhuskers, 12-0, were the only team with three All-America selections. Running back Mike Rozier, flanker Irving Fryar and offensive guard Dean Steinkuhler were chosen by an eight-man committee representing more than 700 members of the association.

Nebraska, which has held the No. 1 ranking every week this season, plays Miami in the Orange Bowl on Jan. 2.

Rozier became the top rusher in Big Eight Conference history Saturday, gaining 205 yards in a 28-21 victory over Oklahoma to give him 4,780 in his three-year career.

His 1983 total of 2,148 yards also was the second-best single-season effort in NCAA history, behind Marcus Allen's 2,342 in 1981 at Southern Cal.

Other schools represented on the All-America team are Arizona, Arizona State, Auburn, California, Clemson, East Carolina, Georgia, Illinois, Michigan, Navy, Pitt, SMU, Tennessee, UCLA, Southern Cal and Wyoming.

Long's selection to the team is the third All-America honor he has received in a week. He was earlier named to the Walter Camp team, and the Kodak-Football Coaches Association teams.

Daniels Nets 26 As Vikings Hold Off Pack

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Darryl Daniels scored 26 points and pulled down 12 rebounds to lead D.H. Conley to a 56-55 victory over Washington, but not before the Vikings watched a six-point lead dwindle in the final minute of the opening game for both teams in the 1983-84 high school basketball season.

The Conley girls took a decisive 45-26 victory over the Lady Pam Pack, as Mechio Kornegay paced the Valkyries with 22 points. The Viking jayvee team escaped with a 56-54 win in the opening game of the night.

Daniels drove the lane on a fast break with 55 seconds left in the game to give Conley a 56-50 lead over Washington, but he missed the free throw after being fouled by Earl Randolph.

Washington's Adrian Dudley connected on a pair of free throws to trim the margin to 56-52, as he was fouled outside by Kenny Credle with 30 seconds on the clock.

The Vikings appeared to have the game under control until Donald Dixon pulled down a rebound for Washington, and Steve Austin slammed the ball through the hoop on the fast break to cut the gap to 56-54 with four seconds remaining. Glenn Clemons went up with Austin for the block but missed the ball and slapped the glass for a technical foul.

Randolph, pressed into duty at point guard by an injury to senior Jeff Cox, stepped to the line with two seconds left and swished the free throw setting the final margin. Washington's inbounds pass at midcourt was batted away without any time running off the clock.

The Pam Pack lofted the ball in to Randolph on the second attempt, but he was unable to get the shot away cleanly in traffic as time expired.

"We had the ball in the right hands," Washington Coach Dave Smith said. "It just didn't go down. (Our center and forwards) were supposed to go to the boards to follow the shot, but they didn't get the chance.

"If we had of had Cox, we might have pulled it out. I don't know; that's speculation, but I think he means more to us than one point."

Reggie Smith posted 14 points and hauled in 12 rebounds for Conley, while Glenn Clemons contributed nine points.

"It's always good experience to win one at the end," Conley Coach Shelly Marsh said. "Mistakes are to be expected from an inexperienced team. Right at the end we made some bad mistakes. We had a four-point lead, and they beat us on a fast break with a dunk. The worst that should of happened was they score two points, and we'd have the ball with a chance to run out the clock.

"But our player comes down and slaps the board for a technical foul to cut the lead to one. Right now that's not so bad, but after the first of the year I won't be quite this calm if something like that happens.

"With the exception of our free throw shooting, I thought we played pretty decent. I think one of the most positive things was that we went to the boards well. I was pleased with our zone traps; I thought they looked pretty good.

"It was a good game for us. That's why we always like to open against Washington — they're well coached and it's always a tough game."

Dudley led the Pam Pack with 14 points and pulled in 13 rebounds, with Randolph scoring 13.

Although the Vikings led most of the way, the game was tied four times in the first quarter and three more in the third. Lance King connected on back-to-back field goals to put Washington ahead 37-35 with 4:13 left in the third quarter for the Pam Pack's only lead of the second half after taking the lead four times in the first.

Dudley connected on a field goal with 5:10 left in the second quarter to put the Pack ahead 19-18, but Daniels answered with a pair of free throws for the Vikings. Conley outscored Washington 8-2 over the next two minutes to take a 28-21 lead with 3:21 remaining in the half.

Donald Wilson sank a pair of free throws to give the Vikes the biggest lead of the night at 33-25 with 10 seconds till intermission, but Dudley connected on a follow-shot as the horn sounded to trim the margin to 33-27 at halftime.

Randolph hit on two field goals and Dudley added another as the Pack quickly knotted the score at 33-33 with 5:43 left in the third quarter. The lead teetered until Conley built a 43-37 margin with 30 seconds remaining in the period. Donald Dixon's field goal for Washington set the score at 43-39 going into the final period.

Dixon drove for a layup, and Randolph and Tommy Stanley sank 20-footers for Washington before a three-point play by Austin tied the score at 48-48 with 6:18 on the clock.

Conley built a four-point lead with a 17-foot jumper by Credle with 1:43 to play, but Austin swished two free throws for a 52-50 margin. Smith connected on a 15-foot jump shot with 1:15 for a 54-50 Conley lead to set up the final rally.

"I thought we had certain lapses in blocking out," Smith said. "I felt we should have went after a few more shots. We need to work on our passing more in practice, but that'll come around as the season goes on."

Conley travels to Greenville Rose Friday night, while the Pam Pack hosts West Craven Saturday night.

• •

The Valkyries made short order of the Lady Pam Pack, building to a 19-3 lead 11 minutes into the game. The Pack posted all three of those in the first period, but failed to score until Conley was caught with six players on the floor in the second period.

Karen Barrett posted nine points for the Valkyries, while Evette Moore was the lone Washington player in double-digits with 10.

Conley battled through the playoffs last year after losing to North Lenoir in the finals of the Coastal 3-A Tournament, but lost to the Enka Sugar Jets in the state finals.

"I think it's like someone said, (the state tournament) is like playing another season," Conley Coach Joy Riddick said. "Our young players gained a lot of confidence and experience from it. Everyone coming back from that team has played well for us so far.

"Barrett and (Lisa) Mills have gotten a lot stronger since last year and have worked hard. We're using Trellaney Boyd and Angela Smith at the point guard, and they've improved a lot.

"All we need is a lot of hard work, and we'll be all right."

Greene Central Shakes Off Slow Start, 45-43

SNOW HILL — Greene Central got the 1983-84 high school basketball season off to a slow start Tuesday, as the Rams fell behind 10-1 in the first quarter before rallying for a 45-43 victory over Wilson Beddingfield.

Cyndi Hicks posted 20 point as the Lady Rams cruised to a 59-45 win over Beddingfield's Lady Bruins.

"We were really behind 13-1 early in the second period; I didn't think we were going to score any more," Greene Central Coach Lewis Godwin quipped. "We came out timid; we were hesitant on every shot. Both teams loosened up in the second quarter.

"Our defense was what won it for us, along with rebounding. After our scrimmage (last week), we looked better offensively than on defense. But tonight it was the opposite."

Theodore Edwards led the Rams with 11 points, while Otis Barnes scored 10. Eric Batts paced Beddingfield with 18 points.

The Rams first got on the board with a free throw by Elmer Dixon with less than a minute left in the first quarter. Greene Central took its first lead of the night at 38-37 late in the fourth quarter, as Barnes scored nine of his total including five out of six from the free throw line.

Greene Central visits South Lenoir Friday.

Cynthia Jones added 15 points for the Lady Rams, while Jackie Thompson led Beddingfield with 16 points and Hope Lofton chipped in 12.

Greene Central led by eight after the first period and built to a 14-point halftime margin. Both teams posted 27 points in the second half.

Subs Lead Tarboro By Panthers

By JEFF ALLEN
Reflector Staff Writer

BETHEL — Coming off the bench for the second half, Willie Powell and Curtis Jones helped lead the visiting Tarboro Vikings past the North Pitt Panthers 67-58, last night.

In the girls game, North Pitt was more fortunate. The Lady Panthers shook off an early attack from the Vikings, and coasted to a 45-37 victory for its season opener.

Powell and Jones both assisted the Vikings with outstanding rebounding and shooting under the boards. Jones had 19 points on the evening, while Powell added 10.

"We were just beat on the boards," commented North Pitt coach Cobby Deans.

North Pitt clung to a 15-13 lead at the end of first quarter, and maintained most of the game. Linwood helped the Panthers in the first quarter, with five points while teammate Linwood Harris added four.

Tarboro kept it close until the closing minutes of the first half when North Pitt surged to a 33-25 lead and controlled the ball with a little game of keep away.

After the half, the Vikings got some much needed momentum from a Kenny Hopkins' dunk and guard Rod Rose's nine points. That resulted in a 21-15 edge for the Vikes during the period, pulling them back with two at the end of the frame, 48-46. In the closing minutes, Tarboro played a tight man-to-man defense which North Pitt could not break. The Vikings outscored the Panthers, 21-10 during the period, moving on to easily take the win.

Rose finished the game with 14 points to add to the Vike total. North Pitt was paced by Ronnie Howard with 12, while Donnie Ebron, Linwood Harris and Levon Shaw each had ten.

After a fast-paced first half in the girls' game, the Lady Panthers took control and stiffened their defense to slow the Vikings comeback attempts. Fighting hard under the boards, North Pitt managed to out-rebound and get inside Tarboro's defense to put the points on the board.

The Panthers led after one period, 16-12, and then dashed away to a 28-15 halftime lead. Tarboro attempted a comeback in the third period, trimming the lead back to 32-27, but North Pitt held them off to claim the win.

Lady Bucs Visit Fayetteville

East Carolina's Lady Pirates, after splitting a pair of games in the New York area this past weekend, travel to Fayetteville State Thursday night to meet the Lady Broncos.

East Carolina, currently 2-1, will be seeking to win its second game in a row for the first time this year. Following an opening game win over George Washington, 64-57, the Lady Pirates fell to St. Peter's, 77-52, and then beat Iona, 51-39.

Fayetteville State is 2-2 with a game tonight against Johnson C. Smith College. It will be the second meeting of the two teams. The first was last year in Minges Coliseum, with ECU taking a 91-51 victory.

The Lady Pirates have only one starter in double figures in scoring at this point, as guard Sylvia Bragg is hitting 12.7 points per game. Three others are closely packed behind her, however. Darlene Hedges, the lone senior on the team, has an 8.7 average, while transfer forward Annette Phillips is scoring at the same average. Forward Lisa Squirewell has an 8.3 average and a 10.3 rebounding mark.

"We felt like we played the (St. Peter's) game in slow motion," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "It was the first road game for a lot of our players and I think we were tentative. We came out very flat and still were in the ball game until midway through the second half, but St. Peter's was able to connect on some key second shots and we just didn't respond offensively. We stayed with them in the rebounding category, but we committed entirely too many turnovers (28), and you won't win games this season with that many turnovers."

But the coach was pleased with the way the team bounced back the next day against Iona. "We needed to come back strong and the team responded well.

"Anita Anderson came off the bench and really provided the lift we needed to pull away with the game. She shot the ball very well and hit the boards hard and picked up the team just at the right moment. The thing which excites us the most right now is that there is such a team atmosphere on the club. The chemistry is just the way we want it at this stage of the season where we seem to have different people pick us up each game. That's better than relying on one person each time."

The Pirates will continue their starting lineup of Bragg and Delphine Mabry at the guards, along with Hedges at center and Phillips and Squirewell at forwards.

Fayetteville State is expected to start a totally freshman squad, including 5-11 Sabrina Barnes and 5-6 Frankie McDonald at guards, 5-11 Dimple White at center, and 6-0 Darlene Thomas and 5-6 Janice Turner at forwards. Stats for the Lady Broncos were not available.

East Carolina returns home Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m., hosting UNC Charlotte in Minges Coliseum.

Hines, Staton Take Awards

Wandria Hines and Nelson Staton came away with the top awards at the sixth-annual awards banquet of the Greenville Tennis Association held at Wellcome Middle School.

Hines received the women's singles trophy as the number one player on the ladder, while Staton was the men's singles and doubles champion as well as a finalist in mixed doubles.

A special award was presented to Bobby Short, president of the GTA, for outstanding service to the organization the past two years.

Dr. Dudley Flood of the state department of public instruction was the guest speaker, while Joanna Tyson, North Carolina's Voluteer of the Year for 1982, provided poetry readings by Paul Lawrence Dunbar.

Ward, Rochelle Lead Dixon Over Indians

DIXON — Frankie Ward scored 24 points and Henry Rochelle added 21 more as Dixon High School handed Chocowinity's Indians a 66-55 defeat in the first game of the 1983-84 basketball season last night.

Chocowinity's Lady Tribe also went down to defeat, 63-47.

Dixon spurted away to an early lead, building a 17-10 margin by the end of the first period. The Indians were able to keep in the game, however, dropping only two more points in the second quarter, and trailed, 38-29 at halftime.

In the third period, both teams matched points as the score climbed to 48-39, but Dixon held off any Indian thoughts of a rally in the final period to take the win.

In addition to the points of Ward and Rochelle, Elijah Sharpless added 10 for Dixon. Chocowinity was led by Terry Moore with 22 points, while Kevin Tyree and Mark Smith each had ten.

Details of the girls' game were not available.

Chocowinity and Dixon have a return match on Friday at Chocowinity.

GCA Wins Bethel Tourney

KINSTON — Greenville Christian Academy's boys and girls basketball teams each captured the championship of the season-opening Bethel Invitational Tournament last night. GCA's boys downed hosting Bethel, 63-61, while the Lady Knights topped Wilson Christian, 32-27.

Bethel inched out into a 16-15 lead after one period of play, but the Knights came back with a 20-14 margin in the second quarter to move ahead, 35-30 at intermission.

Bethel again rallied in the third period, 13-9, trimming the lead back to 44-43. But the Knights held them off through the final period, 19-18, to claim the win.

"It really wasn't that close," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "We held a pretty good lead and got into foul trouble. They came back on us, but never took the lead. Our defense was excellent and we had a good team ball game."

Chris Harris led the scoring for the Knights with 16 points, while Mike Bragg and Dan Andrews each added 14 and Brian House had 10. Bethel was led by Ken Pike with 22, while Scott Wilson had 19 and David Smith had 10.

In the girls' contest, GCA opend up a 6-2 lead in the first period and padded that with a 10-6 margin in the second quarter for a 16-8 lead. In the third period, Wilson rallied, 10-1, taking an 18-17 lead. But the Lady Knights pulled away again, 15-9, to gain the win.

Kathy Vernelson led GCA with 17 points, while Melinda Deans had 18 to lead Wilson.

"We won on defense," Thatcher said.

The Knight teams, now both 2-0, play host to Tarboro-Edgecombe Academy on Friday.

Vikings Overcome Forfeits For Victory

JACKSONVILLE — The D.H. Conley Vikings were able to overcome a pair of forfeits to defeat 4-A power Jacksonville 46-21 Tuesday in high school wrestling action.

Stacy McCarter of Conley needed just 33 seconds to pin Bill Estel in the heavyweight division, while Mark Taylor pinned Jacksonville's Jackie King in 36 seconds.

"We forfeited two but were able to win nine of the other matches," Conley Coach Milt Sherman said. "One player was injured working while cutting practice, and the other didn't make the weight."

The Vikings travel to Wilson Fike Saturday at 11 a.m.

98: David Farris (C) p. Chris Owen, 1:54.

105: Mark Taylor (J) p. Jackie King, :36.

112: William Stanley (J) won by forfeit.

Switzer Skeptical Of Top-Rated Huskers

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

About this theory that Nebraska may be the best college football team of all time, Barry Switzer doesn't buy it. In fact, the Oklahoma coach doesn't think the 1983 Cornhuskers are as good as the 1982 version.

Now before the Nebraska faithful starting writing him letters or sending him telegrams, they should know that Switzer does think the Huskers have been "the best team in the country the last two years. They should have won the national championship last year, but they got jobbed (by the officials) at Penn State."

Where did the 1982 Huskers have it over this year's club, which has scored an all-time record 624 points en route to a 12-0 regular-season record, including last weekend's 28-21 victory over Oklahoma?

"They have the same great skill people," Switzer says, "but I thought their offensive line was better last year. They have pretty good people on defense, but I think they were better last year. But their skill people and this year's schedule made up the difference.

"Nebraska's defense is not a great defense compared to other Nebraska defenses. They're certainly not in a league with their 1971 defense. When people discuss that team, they talk about (defensive end Willie) Harper, (nose guard Rich) Glover and (tackle Larry) Jacobson; they don't even mention (tackle John) Dutton, who's still with the (Dallas) Cowboys.

"Who ever really knows who's the greatest? They are the best offensive team we've played that I can remember. They're just so explosive."

The main dynamite caps are quarterback Turner Gill, tailback Mike Rozier and wingback Irving Fryar. All are seniors and Switzer is glad he's seen the last of them.

"I don't care who they've got to take their places — bring 'em on," he said. "I'm glad those guys are gone. They'll have somebody good next year, but I'll take my chances on that. I've got to believe that whoever replaces them won't be as good as those guys — at least not the first year. They're such a heavy load on offense."

Switzer was asked to compare Nebraska's balanced attack with Oklahoma's vaunted 1971 Wishbone ground assault, whose NCAA record of 566.5 yards per game in total offense stood until this season, when pass-happy Brigham Young averaged 584.2. The '71 Sooners, with Switzer as offensive coordinator, still hold the per-game rushing mark with an incredible 472.4.

"It's not fair to compare," Switzer said. "The Wishbone was just born and no one knew how to handle it. They're so much more talented than we were. Rozier averages eight yards a carry coming right at you, while Greg Pruitt (Oklahoma's 1971 rushing leader) averaged nine on the corner, where it's easier to gain big yards. We weren't the sophisticated passing team Nebraska is. In the Wishbone, we threw to one receiver."

The days of all-around team greatness — offense, defense, kicking game — may be gone, but Nebraska has found the formula.

"Good players at every position, with three or four great players at the skill positions is all it takes," Switzer says.

In Switzer's first eight years as Oklahoma's head coach the Sooners lost nine games; in the last three seasons they have lost 12. Which brings to mind the infamous day in 1975 when Switzer suffered his first loss after a 29-0-1 record in what probably was then the toughest conference (Big Eight) in the country. A Sooner fanatic promptly called an Oklahoma City newspaper to gripe that "I told 'em when they hired that guy he'd lose a game every couple of years."

Those days are long gone, perhaps gone forever.

"We've got to recruit well in Oklahoma and Texas," Switzer says. "We've got to have Texas players to supplement the Oklahoma players. If we can get the best 25-30 players in this area, we can play with anybody. But SMU and Texas have hurt our recruiting in Texas some. Other teams are getting better, the schedule is tougher and we're not as talented (as in the 1970s, when Oklahoma won consecutive national championships in 1974-75)."

Ah, the schedule. Oklahoma and Texas play each other every year, but while Texas' other recent non-league opponents have included such non-powers as North Texas State, Utah, Utah State and Oregon State, Oklahoma has played Ohio State, Southern Cal and West Virginia. And the next three seasons include the likes of Pitt, Baylor, SMU, Miami and UCLA.

"In the '70s, we didn't play the Southern Cals and Ohio States regularly," Switzer says. "When we did play Southern Cal, we played them the wrong year (1982 instead of 1983). Texas is enough as a non-conference toughie, but we're going to play the world in the '80s. If we wind up 50-50, it will be an achievement."

Violence 'Routine' In Pot Land

By STEVE LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

EUREKA, Calif. (AP) — Hikers and horseback riders in the Northern California wilderness have been threatened by marijuana growers onto whose plantations they have strayed, and at least 12 murders in three years have been linked to pot cultivation, a state official says.

Attorney General John Van de Kamp told a legislative hearing Tuesday that growers, often on federal land, are so protective of their crops that they guard their territory with vicious guard dogs, electric fences, pungi sticks and other booby traps.

The violence "has become a way of life" in the Northern California counties where an estimated $1 billion of potent sinsemilla marijuana is grown each year, Van de Kamp said.

He was reporting to the Senate Judiciary Committee on an informal survey his office made in the 14 counties that participated in the 1983 Campaign Against Marijuana Planting.

The attorney general told the committee he hopes to triple the concentrated federal-state-local anti-cultivation program next year and is lobbying for $3.6 million in federal funds.

He said the survey found that an estimated 80 percent of the marijuana growers are armed during the summer growing season and nearly all carry guns at fall harvest time.

"Citizens who happen upon marijuana gardens are often threatened by growers, and assaults among growers themselves are increasing," he said.

Humboldt County District Attorney Terry Farmer said the high profits have drawn a big-league, violence-prone grower to the area.

"Commercial marijuana cultivation has brought a new class of outlaw: One who demonstrates little respect for public or private property rights, one who oft-times trespasses on remote forest and ranch lands and then uses booby traps, dogs and automatic weapons to protect his illicit crops," Farmer said.

Van de Kamp said a Humboldt County sheriff's deputy who was hunting was confronted by growers "carrying automatic weapons who warned him to stay out of the area."

In Santa Cruz County, the sheriff received 20 reports "from hikers and horseback riders who had been threatened by growers," Van de Kamp said. U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management employees have also been threatened on public land, he said.

Agents who raided pot plantations during the CAMP program confiscated more than 80 guns and 20 booby traps, he said.

The CAMP program netted about 64,000 plants worth an estimated $130 million, perhaps 10 percent of the state's 1983 harvest.

Van de Kamp told reporters before the hearing that the $1.6 million CAMP program in 1983 had only put a "dent" in California's marijuana cultivation.

"It is only a beginning," Van de Kamp said. "We did not dream we would eradicate all the marijuana in the state this year."

He said he hoped to triple the size of the program to $3.6 million in 1984, start it earlier in the marijuana growing season, remain in the field later in the year, and triple the number of raiding teams from four to 12.

But some law enforcement officials criticized CAMP before the committee, complaining that counties were not given money to prosecute the people arrested.

Humboldt County Superior Court Judge John Buffington described the program as the "forced harvest of a small number of marijuana plots."

No 'Windfall'

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A federal judge ruled in a drug case against a fireman that the "exclusionary rule" provides an unreasonable windfall to the guilty.

The rule bars introduction in court of illegally gathered evidence.

U.S. District Judge Ralph Thompson ruled Monday that when the "exclusionary rule" is applied, "only the undeniably guilty defendant will benefit by the exclusion of valid evidence establishing his guilt."

The judge said that "as a practical consequence ... society will be harmed by being denied the protection it is due."

The exclusionary rule, fashioned by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1914, is meant to keep police conduct in check by tossing out evidence obtained in violation of a person's constitutional rights.

The rule often is blamed by the Reagan administration for freeing criminals on technicalities.

The Supreme Court is scheduled to consider within the next seven months whether the rule should be modified to allow illegally obtained evidence when police make a "good faith" mistake.

Thompson proposed that as an alternative, civil lawsuits can be lodged against offending officers while incriminating evidence, although obtained illegally, is kept intact for use against the guilty.

Profit-Making Hospital Role Is Growing In N.C.

By The Associated Press

Profit-making hospitals are growing in North Carolina, thanks in part to the lack of rate-control and a strong economy, officials say.

"The thing that makes North Carolina so attractive is that we're relatively unregulated," said W.E. "Pete" Roye, director of management services with the N.C. Hospital Association. "There is no rate-control program for hospital rates."

Seven for-profit hospital corporations own or manage 31 of the state's 157 hospitals. Two-thirds of their growth in the state came in the past three years.

"The state is growing, it has a strong economic base, and we want to establish business here for the long term," said L. Stanton Tuttle, president of Hospital Corp. of America Psychiatric Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of Hospital Corp. of America.

HCA, which owns seven hospitals and manages eight others in North Carolina, plans to acquire or build one or two more each year, he said.

The corporation chose Nobdh Carolina as its 1982 target state for cultivating contracts to manage hospitals, Tuttle added.

Officials said more for-profit hospitals are expected to come into North Carolina as corporations build new hospitals and take over existing ones whose owners are tired of struggling with mounting debts and other demands.

Many for-profit chains do not offer services such as neonatal care and open-heart surgery, said Ben W. Latimer, president of Sun-HealthCarolina Hospital and Health Services Inc., a not-for-profit hospital network based in Charlotte.

However, for-profit chains usually do not select patients or cut services when they own the only hospital in a community, Latimer said.

Officials say the growth of for-profit hospitals has helped give rise to increasing numbers of outpatient clinics, where patients undergo surgery and are released within 24 hours.

Some for-profit hospitals also have established convenience medical centers that advertise fast service for minor medical problems at prices cheaper than those for emergency rooms.

Tuttle likened for-profit hospital chains to supermarkets or restaurant chains, which reduce costs through efficient management and economies of scale.

Democrat Sees Help In Deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The huge federal deficit, more than $195 billion last year, is shaping up as the major economic issue of the 1984 election campaign, the chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee says.

Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., declared that criticism of the federal deficit by Republican candidates in 1980 was devastating for the Carter administration and Democrats.

But, he added, "the Republicans also set themselves up for a big fall. And since they failed so miserably on their promise to balance the budget, Democrats are now in a position to score points on what has traditionally been a valuable political issue for the GOP."

U.S. Visa Denials Regarded As A Tough Decision

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is bracing itself for a "public relations nightmare" following its denial of visas to two Central American leaders — one a Marxist, the other a rightist — who represent forces viewed here as major obstacles to the region's democratic development.

"It was a close call," said one official Tuesday of the administration decision to reject the visa applications of Nicaraguan Interior Minister Tomas Borge and El Salvadoran Constituent Assembly President Roberto D'Aubuisson.

The official, who asked not to be identified, said the administration recognized the decision leaves it open to charges of attempting to stifle debate on an issue that has been at the forefront of its foreign policy concerns.

The State Department said the decision was based on an immigration statute permitting it to exclude aliens "whose activities would be contrary to the public interest." There was no further elaboration.

Shortly after the announcement by State Department spokesman John Hughes, Borge said he had been told a month ago by the U.S. Ambassador in Managua, Anthony Quainton, that he would be free to visit the United States. A U.S. official said Borge had been offered no such assurance.

Borge, speaking by telephone to U.S. reporters assembled at the Nicaraguan Embassy, said the U.S. decision was based on a White House desire not to soften its position toward Nicaragua.

He also saw it as a sign of American determination not to undercut the military forces in El Salvador and Honduras, both of which, he said, are suffering from low morale. Both receive heavy backing from the United States.

A U.S. official said Borge, the last founding member of the Sandinista movement still alive, was intent on undertaking a "propaganda mission" here that would have detracted from a U.S.-backed Latin American effort to achieve a solution to the Central American turmoil.

D'Aubuisson had planned a private visit to Miami, where officials say many wealthy Salvadoran exiles view him as a hero and finance him and his ARENA party.

U.S. officials, speaking privately, link the rejection of D'Aubuisson's visa application to the recent upsurge in the activities of rightist death squads in El Salvador.

"He's a scary guy," said one official, speaking of D'Aubuisson. He said D'Aubuisson, once described by former U.S. Ambassador Robert White as a "pathological killer," believes a major impediment to the defeat of leftist guerrillas in El Salvador are the constraints the United States puts on its assistance to that country.

The administration apparently was divided over the visa requests, with one official wondering whether the benefits of the rejection outweighed the "public relations nightmare" the administration will face.

Borge depicted Nicaragua as a free society open to American officials and heading toward democratic rule. He said plans for elections in 1985 will be announced Sunday.

During his proposed visit here, Borge said he hoped to underscore Nicaragua's commitment to removing all Cuban forces from its territory provided the United States withdraws its military personnel from other Central American countries.

But, in contrast to the American estimate that 2,000 Cuban security forces are in Nicaragua, he said the total was only 200.

He noted that many American officials had visited Nicaragua recently and that President Reagan himself would be welcome. "All Americans are welcome except the Marines," he added.

U.S. officials said the main reason for denying Borge a visa was concern that he would attempt to portray Central America's problems primarily in terms of the assistance the United States provides to anti-government rebels in Nicaragua.

By so doing, he would be ignoring Nicaragua's alleged support for Salvadoran rebels and other problems affecting the entire region, the officials said.

They added that the United States wants to do nothing that would divert attention from the efforts of the Contadora mediation group — Panama, Venezuela, Colombia and Mexico — which is attempting to work out a region-wide peace treaty. The group has scheduled a new round of discussions starting Thursday in Panama.

Look For New Security Steps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Security will remain tight at the White House as the Reagan administration begins a search for long-term precautions against possible terrorist attacks, officials say.

Sand-filled dump trucks have been parked at White House gates for a week as protection against a possible suicide truck bombing, such as the one that killed 239 Americans in Beirut last month.

One official said Tuesday the extra security measures resulted in part from an anonymous letter warning of a threat against a government building. Another official said information from several sources, including the Middle East, triggered the increased security.

Both officials refused to be identified by name. One of them said the concern was based, to some extent, about an attack coinciding with a Shiite Moslem holiday.

The Secret Service, which is responsible for protection of the president, refused to discuss the security steps or the reason they were taken. "It is something we've done for security reasons," said spokeswoman Mary Ann Gordon. "As to why, we're not commenting. We take all the threats seriously."

The New York Times reported Tuesday that Reagan administration officials who refused to be identified said the additional security steps were taken because intelligence from the Middle East suggested a pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem group in Lebanon was planning to attack a major U.S. installation either in the United States or abroad.

U.S. officials already have accused the group, known as the Islamic Amal, of involvement in last month's bombing of the U.S. Marine headquarters in Beirut.

Defense Department sources said U.S. intelligence is convinced that about 20 Iranians were trained, probably by Syrian secret police, for the Oct. 23 suicide truck bombing of American military headquarters buildings in Beirut.

Meanwhile, an overheated kitchen motor sent smoke into the White House mess one floor below President Reagan's office Tuesday, a White House spokesman said.

Assistant White House press secretary Anson Franklin said Reagan remained in the Oval Office and was told about the incident, which brought several District of Columbia fire trucks to the White House.

"There was a small electrical problem in the mess. It created a lot of smoke. There's no problem. There's no danger," Franklin said.

WEEPS IN COURT, Jeanne Wright, 25, weeps in a Camden, N.J. courtroom where she was charged in the drowning deaths of her two children, Juan Jose, one, and Jonathan, 34 months. Authorities continue to search Cooper River in Camden for the bodies of Wright's two other children. She was ordered held without bail because capital punishment could apply in the case. Doctor Tells Health Of Presidents

CHICAGO (AP) - When a president has even a minor health problem these days, it's front-page news. His aides hastily call a press conference and give out a multitude of facts, but it was not always so, says Dr. William M. Lukash, official White House physician to Presidents Nixon, Ford and Carter.

From the earliest days of the Republic until relatively recently, the state of the president's health was often veiled in vagueness, if not downright secrecy, Lukash writes in the new 1984 "Medical and Health Annual."

Most people know about George Washington's wooden dentures. Not so well known is the fact that he, as well as Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson, suffered from a variety of chronic disorders including recurrent bouts of malaria.

As the presidency grew in importance, presidential health gradually became a carefully guarded secret, Lukash notes.

In 1893, when Grover Cleveland's doctors found that he had a cancerous growth in his mouth, the public was not informed, Lukash reports. Although Cleveland twice underwent secret surgery in which a part of his upper left jaw was removed and replaced with a vulcanized rubber prosthesis, few learned about it.

Woodrow Wilson's grave illness was also shielded from the public, writes Lukash. In 1919, worn out by the prolonged and rancorous peace negotiations in France and the battle for American entry in the League of Nations, Wilson suffered two strokes that incapacitated him for the rest of his life.

For two years, Wilson lived as an invalid and recluse in the White House. The facts about his health were known only by his physician, one or two close aides, and his wife who, also unknown to the public, assumed many of the president's executive duties.

A similar shroud of secrecy fell over the deteriorating health of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1944, because of his determination to seek a fourth term and a general concern about national security in time of war, Lukash explains.

Although it was later learned Roosevelt was suffering from hypertension and heart failure and may even have had cancer, his physician stated openly that the president's health was excellent.

"The secrecy surrounding his final illness was so complete that public reaction to his death in 1945 was a mixture of shock and disbelief," Lukash writes.

The piercing eye of television changed all that by providing constant and vivid closeups of presidents at work and play, according to the article. The new era of openness and publicity began with the announcement in 1956 that Dwight D. Eisenhower had suffered a serious heart attack.

From the very onset of the illness, all the media were given full access to the president's health records, with press officials and Eisenhower's personal doctor, Paul Dudley White, briefing newsmen at frequent intervals. After recovery, Eisenhower resumed his full duties and even underwent abdominal surgery while completing two terms in office.

Since the time of John F. Kennedy, presidents have been subjected to rigorous diet-and-exercise regimens to help them handle the stress that goes with the office, Lukash points out. Kennedy, an athlete at college, made physical fitness a hallmark of his abbreviated term.

Since then, Presidents Johnson, Nixon, Ford, Carter and Reagan have carefully followed fitness programs, Lukash says. Johnson swam daily, Nixon had an early morning calisthenics program, Ford played golf and skied, Carter jogged and played tennis, and Reagan, the oldest man ever to become president, is an avid horseback rider.

"Each president also has techniques for relaxation that help him unwind and regenerate his energy to meet the heavy responsibilities of office," writes Lukash.

Saudis Fear Polluting Of Red Sea

By RICK SNEDEKER
Associated Press Writer

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — With a giant oil slick polluting its waters to its east in the Persian Gulf, Saudi Arabia is looking with concern as well at the Red Sea to the west, where increased ship traffic and shoreline development pose potential problems.

"The Red Sea is a clean sea, but several things could change that," Abdel-Bar al-Gain, director general of the Saudi Meteorological and Environmental Protection Administration was quoted as saying in a recent interview with a Saudi newspaper.

The article cited the expansion of Egypt's Suez Canal as one potential danger.

The Red Sea is linked to the Mediterranean by the Suez Canal — a facility expanding to accommodate heavier marine traffic and larger oil tankers.

Saudi environmental officials are also concerned about pollution potential at Yanbu, a huge Red Sea industrial port that is under development 190 miles north of hebe.

Fed by new parallel pipelines originating in eastern Saudi Arabia, the Yanbu export terminals began exporting crude oil and liquid natural gas last year.

Another source of worry for the Saudis is the possible ecological impact from the growing number of industrial facilities on the Red Sea, including a new refinery at Yanbu, and plans for mining the sea's mineral deposits.

The Red Sea Environmental Council was formed in the 1970s, under the auspices of the United Nations Environmental Program, and grouped environmental experts from concerned countries on or near the Red Sea.

The group's mandate was to prepare an effective pollution control program for the entire region.

The council met in Jidda Oct. 29-31 and drafted its first comprehensive action plan, calling for collection of wide-ranging scientific data on the marine environment in the region, designation of coastal areas needing immediate protection and creation of a regional administrative body.

Local newspapers quoted Al-Gain as saying that the action plan was expected to be ratified soon by the council, whose member states include Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Somalia, North and South Yemen, Jordan and "Palestine" — meaning Palestinians who claim Israel now occupies their homeland. Jordan and Israel are linked to the Red Sea by the Gulf of Aqaba.

"Once the agreement is ratified, we will begin implementation," Al-Gain was quoted as saying.

Local environmental scientists noted that pollution problems on the Persian Gulf have vividly demonstrated that, when it comes to the fragile marine environment, authorities cannot be too careful.

The damaged oil wells of the Iranian Nowruz oilfield have been spewing millions of gallons of crude since February into the Gulf to the detriment of marine and coastal life of the coastal states.

Shared Refusal To Indict 20

HAYESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two former Clay County Republican commissioners on a grand jury that refused to indict 20 people on vote-buying charges stemming from a special county election were candidates in that election, court records show.

Board of Commissioners Chairman Howard Wimpey and Commissioner Wayne G. West sat on the jury and former Republican Sheriff Hartsell Moore, who pleaded builty Sept. 22 to vote buying in a 1982 election, was baliff for the 1980 grand jury proceedings, records show.

Deputy Attorney General Lester V. Chalmers said Monday he did not know the two commissioners were on the grand jury, but said he saw nothing wrong with them taking part in deliberations involving their elections.

'An Uncommon Love' Part Of CBS' Ratings Tactic

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In tonight's CBS movie, "An Uncommon Love," a marine biology professor falls in love with a student who does more in bed than curl up with a good textbook.

"You're a prostitute?" says the prof, played by Barry Bostwick, in the heat of revelation. She nods affirmatively. "You have sex with men?" She answers yes. "Every day?" She squirms a bit. "Four days a week," she says.

Despite the short workweek, this working girl's life is filled with mental torment and excessive violence. That's what comes with the job for Cynthia Malcolm (Kathryn Harrold), a hooker with a brain who's torn between respectability by day and vulnerability by night.

Television has come a semilong way from the days when it stripped every hooker and found a heart of gold. Earlier this season, NBC had Veronica Hamel in "Sessions," offering a well-intentioned but lifeless psychological profile of a top-dollar rostitute.

"An Uncommon Love," although flawed by standard dialogue, is a sometimes interesting and insightful movie that examines whether there is life after punch-the-clock sex. "It's like mopping the floor," says Cynthia, protesting that her job doesn't impede a normal relationship.

Of course, that isn't the case. TV won't allow a hooker to go away unscarred mentally or socially. So the relationship between Steve and Cynthia is jeopardized by external pressures — his own negative reactions to her work and those of his friends and university colleagues.

One friend doesn't want her at his wedding. The dean of the junior college suggests that Steve's affair could endanger his chances for the vacant department chairman's position. Even Steve's ex-wife criticizes him for letting their young daughter meet Cynthia.

But the strongest obstacles come from Cynthia herself. Unlike other Hollywood hookers, she owns a heart of steel, her defense against dealing with her present and past, which included nine years as a prostitute and an adolescence ravaged by her father who raped her and paid her a dollar for it.

The emotional approaches and avoidances inherent to the relationship between Cynthia and Steve are what helps elevate "An Uncommon Love" beyond the networks' standard sappy, fluffy love story. The script was written by Seth Freeman, former producer-writer on "Lou Grant."

Bostwick and Miss Harrold work well together, each managing through low-key performances to convey feelings beneath the surface that their characters cannot or will not openly express.

The network has a vested interest in promoting Bostwick and making him a recognizable face since he will be George Washington in CBS' miniseries about the first president next spring.

CBS' "Wednesday Night Movie" is scoring 5 percent higher ratings over the network's ineffectual Wednesday night series programming of last season. In that regard, CBS' controversial strategy of having three nights of movies can be considered a success.

The need for six hours of films each week was regarded by some as proof that CBS' series development was experiencing lean times. But Harvey Shephard, CBS vice president for programming, explained that it was a positive move, not a negative one.

He said it is getting more difficult for new shows to succeed in the competitive fall period, when dozens of debuts compete for the viewers' attention and the networks' promotion time. CBS' plan was to introduce fewer new series, scheduling an extra movie night instead.

Then, sometime in the winter, CBS would drop the Wednesday movie and offer more new programs. "We'll have a better opportunity to be sampled in midseason," Shephard said.

The tactic seems to have worked. Of top-rated CBS' five new series, two ("AfterMASH" and "Scarecrow & Mrs. King") are in the Top 15 this season.

Meanwhile, third-rated NBC, which had nine new series, was forced to scramble its schedule. The network added its own third movie night when its four new Friday series ("Mr. Smith," "Jennifer Slept Here," "Manimal" and "For Love and Honor") fell into the bottom 15 in ratings.

UNC Declines A Movie Offer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — University of North Carolina officials "regretfully declined" Tuesday to allow Warner Bros. to film part of a $13 million movie on campus.

The university's refusal jeopardizes the state's chances of landing the production of "Everybody's All-American," said William V. Arnold, director of the North Carolina Film Commission.

Warner Bros. had selected about 60 locations for filming around the state, including Raleigh, Durham, Cary, Wake Forest, Fuquay-Varina, Hillsborough and Nags Head.

But the studio considers Chapel Hill an important location because the movie is based on a novel set in part on the UNC campus.

The book — "Everybody's All-American" by Frank Deford — follows a fictional UNC football hero through the years after his fame has peaked. Tommy Lee Jones will play the title role, with Jessica Lange playing his college sweetheart.

Rollie Tillman Jr., vice chancellor for university relations, said the decision was based on a "tight academic calendar" and that filming would cause "disruptions."

'A-Team' Tops Week's Ratings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's "The A-Team," the third-place network's only hit, ran off with first place in the Nielsen ratings for the week ended Nov. 27 while CBS and ABC were locked in battle for the network standings.

CBS regained first place in the weekly network averages after losing the week before to ABC's highly rated movie about a nuclear holocaust, "The Day After." ABC came in second for the week.

Heart Attack Kills Christopher George

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Christopher George, the star of television's "The Rat Patrol," and "The Immortal," has died of a heart attack at age 54, his business manager says.

Bill Esensten said George died about 3 a.m. Tuesday at Westside Hospital with his actress wife, Lynda Day George of the "Mission Impossible" series, by his side.

"It was totally unexpected," Esensten said, although he noted that George underwent coronary bypass surgery at least five years ago.

In the mid-1960s, George narrowly escaped being crushed to death during filming of "The Rat Patrol," a desert war television series. A Jeep carrying George and co-star Gary Raymond flipped over and landed on the Jeep's gun mount.

George's death shocked his cardiologist, Dr. Pearl McBroom.

"It was just very sudden," she said. "He did not suffer."

Esenstein, who declined to say if the George's son and daughter were at the hospital, said George was working with partners on several film projects that the partners would continue.

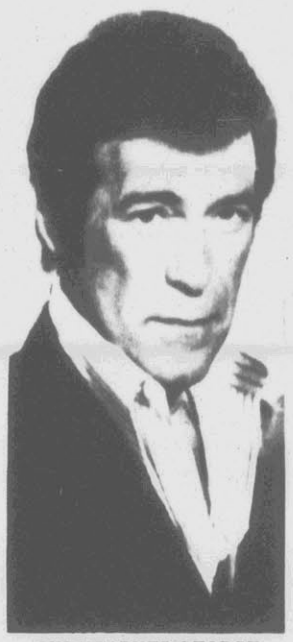

George, born in Royal Oak, Mich., on Feb. 25, 1929, attended the University of Miami in Florida and served in the Marines.

In "The Immortal," which was telecast from 1970 to 1971, George played Ben Richards, a race car driver with antibodies in his blood that made him immune to disease or aging.

He starred in "The House on Greenapple Road," the pilot for the "Dan August" television series that featured Burt Reynolds.

George appeared in the television shows "Last Survivors," and "Voyage into Evil," and the movies, "El Dorado," "In Harm's Way," "The Delta Factor," "Chisum," "Day of the Animals," "Grizzly," "Tiger By The Tail" and "The Exterminator."

He and his wife appeared occasionally on television's "Fantasy Island."

Idea Of Rifle Courses In Schools Shot Down

DUNDALK, Md. (AP) — Along with readin', 'ritin', and 'rithmetic, some believe a fourth "R" — riflery — should be taught at an elementary school to children as young as 6, but the controversial plan has been shot down.

The Baltimore County School Board voted 8-1 against the proposal by recreation officials to re-establish a rifle range in the basement of the Norwood Elementary School in this blue-collar suburb of Baltimore.

The firearms-safety program at the school ended in 1978, 15 years after it started, when a fire department inspection revealed safety code violations. The recreation officials last week wanted the board to approve money to correct the violations.

They envisaged an after-school program in which children as young as 6 could learn how to use rifles.

"Let's face it, most boys have a curiosity about guns and if they can be taught properly, it should be done," said Jackie Harris, president of an area recreation council.

A state lawmaker who is also a county recreation superintendent says the school basement is the perfect setting for the indoor-rifle range.

"We can't find a place that is anywhere near as safe," said state legislator Robert R. Staab.

"They teach sex education in schools, but certainly they don't condone sex in the classrooms," he said. "I see no way that (allowing the rifle range) condones bringing guns to the classroom."

The only way to revive rifle instruction, supporters said, would be to return to the rent-free basement that hasn't been altered since it was used for a range.

The basement — with concrete walls, an 8-foot-high ceiling and a dirt floor — is divided into shooting bays with a 15-foot target range for BB guns and a 50-foot range for .22-caliber rifles.

Before the closing, eight BB guns and about six .22-caliber single-shot, bolt-action rifles were kept in a locked cabinet at the facility, according to Dennis G. Evans, one of the program's instructors.

School officials say they see nothing wrong with teaching youngsters how to use rifles properly — as long as it is not done in a school setting.

"There's no way from a public relations standpoint we could explain on one hand that guns are banned from school property and the presence of a rifle range," said Victor P. DeLibera, a school board member.

DeLibera said he and other board members feared some children might try to take their own rifles to the school's indoor range, risking injury and immediate expulsion.

"It's a question of image," said Roger B. Hayden, school board president. "We're trying to be consistent in what we're telling the kids. We can't allow firearms on school property. We can't fuzzy the issue in kids' minds."

Author, Author

On this date in 1835 the celebrated writer Samuel Clemens—better known as Mark Twain — was born. Clemens did not invent the name Mark Twain. A riverboat captain first used it to sign his column in the New Orleans' "Picayune". Mark Twain was the first author to use a typewriter. "Tom Sawyer" was written on one. Twain was born when Halley's comet appeared, and he died when it next appeared in 1910.

Stevie Wonder Is Choir Guest

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Members of the Overbrook High School gospel choir knew they were going to have a celebrity guest — but little did they know it would be superstar Stevie Wonder.

"They're in awe," said George Allen, the Overbrook Singers' faculty sponsor after Wonder, 33, was escorted onto the stage Tuesday where he joined the choir in singing "You Are the Sunshine of My Life."

"You can be the sunshine of my life," the singer told the students afterwards. "At least, let it be possible that today, in some kind of way, I've sparked some new sunshine of motivation in your life."

Allen said he arranged through a mutual friend to have Wonder visit the school while the singer was in the area to perform at the Valley Forge Music Fair.

Police Trying Future Crime-Fighting Technology

By DARREN LEON
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The computerized cop of the future will likely use satellite photos of the city to chase his suspect.

When the crook is caught, he'll be identified with a 3-D holographic mugshot and could be sent to an island penal colony or put in a deep-freeze for his sentence.

Upon release — or thawing — authorities will keep track of the parolee through a tiny radio transmitter beneath his skin.

These were among the scenarios for law enforcement in the 21st century being discussed at the monthly sessions of Forum 2000, the Los Angeles Police Department's hedge against future shock.

At the meetings, police personnel from clerk to police commissioner learn about new crime-fighting technology, sociological changes and other factors that will affect tomorrow's law enforcement.

Similar meetings a decade ago spawned the department's new Emergency Command Control System, a master command center that automatically relays calls and information to the officers nearest the scene of a crime.

Computer terminals have been installed in each of the department's 800 patrol cars to process incoming calls. They can also provide access to records from local, state and federal agencies.

"It is the largest, most sophisticated communications system of its type in the world," said Deputy Chief Clyde Cronkite, who presides over the Forum 2000 sessions.

"It is the kind of brainstorming in Forum 2000 that allowed this thing to happen, and this brainstorming will allow some of the other ideas mentioned in the forum to happen 10 years from now," he said recently.

At one recent Forum 2000 discussion, Cronkite spoke of an era in which officers wear Dick Tracy-like wrist radios and disable the ignition systems of cars they chase.

But a guest speaker, professor Selwyn Enzer of the University of California, noted that while advanced technology will help catch criminals and keep them behind bars, it will also be a double-edged sword.

"You're going to have information on everybody? They'll jam your information or put in phony information. You'll be arresting each other," Enzer said. "You're going to stop their cars? They'll stop yours."

The use of advanced technology will depend in large part on community acceptance, Cronkite said.

"We've discussed having a satellite that takes pictures of the city every few minutes. We had a policeman shot two months ago — if we had the satellite, we could have blown up a picture of that intersection to see who was there," he said.

"But it depends. Does the community want the kind of system that continuously takes pictures of the neighborhood?"

Money is also a challenge. The Emergency Command Control System, for example, cost $40 million.

The department is currently seeking approval for an extensive word-processing system that would cut down on police paperwork, but they'll probably have to give up five staff positions to get it.

"Some people may see our investment and discussion of the future as cold and impersonal. I don't," Cronkite said. "These devices and procedures would get rid of some of the routines that take up a police officer's time and give him more time for fighting crime."

Meanwhile, the forum, now into its 15th month, continues its prognostication and keeps Chief Daryl Gates informed of its progress. Even if the sessions result only in ideas, Cronkite feels they will have been valuable.

"We hope it will produce more than ideas, but it is a voluntary group. Some people just want to listen to others, and some want to do more than that. I would not want to force this. I'd rather let it run its course, and we'll see how many people subscribe to it."

Some Rain But Drought Lingers

By TOM BALDWIN
Associated Press Writer

KOSMOS, South Africa (AP) — Early rains have turned the mountains around this hamlet to emerald green, but the reservoir that once ran the length of the valley has not risen an inch.

It is springtime in the Southern Hemisphere. Record rains in October and the first week of November have brought some hope that they mean the end of a drought that has destroyed food crops, starved livestock by the thousands and evaporated reservoirs. Some reservoirs are under 10 percent of capacity. Others are empty.

South Africa is normally a food exporter, but this year it has been importing food.

The drought here can't match the misery in the rest of parched Africa, but it is the worst on record for the country. Most black-governed African nations conduct some sort of trade with South Africa, and as South Africa suffers, so do they.

Mozambique's port of Maputo, for instance, is experiencing a drop in its orange exports — 90 percent of which are from South Africa, according to the South African Transport Services, which manages several piers on Maputo's harbor.

The big question is whether the spring rains will continue. Last year the rains arrived on time in December but stopped suddenly the first week of February.

So far, the earth has absorbed the early downpours and water has not reached the reservoirs, which are vital to large-scale irrigation.

"We are waiting to see what our rainy months, December, January and February, bring," said L.H. James, chief engineer of the regional water board.

In some areas, the rainy October did more harm than good. A Department of Enviornmental Affairs spokesman, Anton Steyn, said the cloudbursts have washed away topsoil, and hailstones the size of golf balls have destroyed potatoes and wheat that had been planted early.

The Department of Environmental Affairs says water restrictions will remain in place until reservoirs are 50 percent full, not likely until the end of the rainy season in March or April.

Since last February, residents of the Indian Ocean port of Durban have lived with daily water rationing and some paid for truckloads of sea water to fill their swimming pools.

Water restrictions hit the Johannesburg area in June. They were revised in September, when some communities decided all watering of lawns had to be done by the bucket. It was a violation to even have a hose connected to a tap.

Fifty Pairs Of Legs In Benefit

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — Fifty pairs of legs will be striding, strolling and strutting on stage here Friday, hoping to walk away with some coveted titles — including most luscious, most incredible and most popular.

Some of the contestants will be corporate officers, doctors, police officers and restaurateurs.

Moreover, they'll all be men.

The Mr. Incredible Legs Contest, to be held at Sacred Heart University, is a fund-raiser for the Center for Independent Living of Greater Bridgeport, an organization dedicated to teaching the handicapped to live independently.

The judges will be women.

They'll be looking for the ugliest, lankiest, hairiest, most muscular, most luscious and most incredible legs.

The audience, with the help of a volume meter that registers applause, will choose the most popular.

"The contestants are really getting a kick out of this," says center director Arline Brown.

Implications Now Obsolete

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Instead of referring to a group of crows as "a bunch" of crows, why not call them by their correct name — a murder.

Other seldom used but specific words to describe a "a bunch" of animals include: a knot of toads, a leap of leopards, a leash of greyhounds, a mob of kangaroos, a muster of peacocks, a drift of swine, a brace of ducks, and a clutter, or clowder, of cats.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until noon, you still have the chance to get other persons' cooperation. Wind up conversations and discussions already started. The latter part of the day finds you eager to make changes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Seek out those who can be of assistance to you and then carry through with that plan you have in mind. A civic matter needs attention.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Ideal morning to finish a task you started yesterday and then you have time for some outside affair.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get creative talents working nicely early in the day. Then take them to people who can make any needed changes.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Get everything around you nicely organized and then you can maek those changes where a personal relationship is concerned.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Give full attention to communications in the morning and handle them well. Steer clear of argumentative persons.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Concentrate on minute details of financial affairs in the morning. State what you desire to your partners.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Early morning is best for going after what is most desired of a personal nature, but later avoid extravagance of any kind.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) It is vital that you take care of private matters in the morning, since later, personal affairs may be suddenly changed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Work toward gaining personal goals in the morning. Make progress, but later avoid restlessness on the job.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Handle career work early so that later you can give your attention to personal matters. You will gain your aims.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study into new interests that could prove lucrative in the future. You may have to make changes in vocational matters.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Give your full attention to a business matter of importance in the morning. Later, get into a fascinating new venture.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will prove fascinating to have around and be a model child. Be sure to give praise and affection so that the fine mind here will develop properly. Give good spiritual training early, as well as cultural advantages.

First Discount By Businessman

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Richard Ochoa is only 11, but he's already gone to the dogs. And the young businessman hopes to turn a profit in the process.

Ochoa is the president of Dog Walkers Inc., based in this seaside suburb of Los Angeles.

To announce the opening of his business, he personally handed his neighbors flyers that said: "We will always walk your dog — In snow, sleet, hail or fog."

His published rates: "Big dog — 80 cents; medium dog — 70 cents; small dog — 60 cents."

Unfortunately, business has been slow. So Ochoa is offering his first discount: small dogs — 20 cents.

Malta Bird Feud Spills Into Europe

By CHRIS SCICLUNA
Associated Press Writer

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — Maltese bird lovers and game hunters are locked in a bitter feud that has spread to Western Europe and threatens the Mediterranean island's tourist trade.

The bird lovers — the Ornithological Society — claim that irresponsible hunters and trappers are stripping Malta of its wildlife, a charge the hunters deny.

The Ornithological Society's cause has been taken up by foreign bird-lover organizations and demonstrations have been staged outside Maltese diplomatic missions in West Germany, the Netherlands and Belgium.

These and other foreign groups are advising tourists to stay away from Malta.

The Maltese bird lovers say few birds breed in Malta any more and claim that many of those that come here twice a year on their migratory flights between Europe and Africa are shot by hunters.

The hunters and trappers — the 16,000-member Association of Shooters and Trappers — accuse the bird lovers of wanting to do away with all hunting on the island and they protest that the government-regulated hunting season, from May 22 to Aug. 31, is too short.

They also deny that their members shoot indiscriminately at anything that flies, a common accusation made against them.

Policemen are sent out each hunting season to see that hunting regulations are obeyed. The government has made it illegal to shoot at certain birds and has banned hunters from areas considered to host endangered species.

Those areas include the Buskett Gardens, a valley outside Valletta that is Malta's closest thing to a forest.

Buskett Gardens were laid out in the 16th century by the Knights of the Order of St. John as a place for hunting. Today, it is a place for picnickers, who were instrumental in getting the area barred to hunters with their complaints that they were disturbed and sometimes endangered by shooters.

Alfred Baldacchino, head of Ornithological Society, said his organization will continue to speak out against "the indiscriminate and illegal bird shooting which is carried out mainly for illegal stuffed bird collections."

Alfred Zammit, a spokeman for the hunters' group, rejected the accusation, and charged that the bird lovers were seeking a ban on hunting and trapping in Malta altogether.

"If the majority of Maltese hunters were not decent people, rather than the ruthless killers the Ornithological Society would have the Maltese public and the world to believe, there would not be left in Malta any rabbits, sparrows, blue rock thrushes and other resident species," he said.

The bird-lover society claims that many hunters ignore both the dates of the hunting season and the law barring them from various areas, particularly Buskett Gardens and the Addolorata Cemetery near Luqa Airport.

Most of the birds taken by the hunters are taken to taxidermists for stuffing. Some collections include more than 400 stuffed specimens.

Hunters and trappers also have objected to what they term "unjust intervention" by the foreign groups, such as the German Bird Protection League, which recently staged a demonstration outside the Maltese Embassy in Bonn.

In a letter of protest to the West German ambassador in Valletta, the hunters said the German group's action was "highly slanderous" and constituted unlawful interference in Maltese affairs.

The German group has threatened to boycott Malta as a tourist destination and other organizations have warned of the same action.

Dutch environmentalists recently staged protests outside the Maltese consulates in Rotterdam and The Hague, and Belgians demonstrated outside the Maltese Embassy in Brussels.

Punishment For Acting As 'Civilian'

By DOUGLAS GRANT MINE
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A military Honor Tribunal has handed out its severest punishment to Juan Cesio, a retired army colonel, for "favoring his status as a citizen over his function as an officer."

The charge against him stemmed from his criticism of the military government in speeches during the campaign in October for the election of a civilian government.

Although retired since 1973, Cesio was stripped of his rank and his right to wear his uniform — a punishment that has been applied only a handful of times since it was instituted in 1930.

According to the Argentine military code, no active or retired officer may publicly criticize the armed forces or its members without the consent of the commander in chief of his branch.

Cesio, 57, a member of the center-left Intransigent Party, campaigned for the pabdi's candidate in the presidential bace and denounced murders, kidnappings, extortion and robberies he charged were committed by military units. He also labelled the regime a "dictatorship" and claimed its leaders acted like "feudal lords."

He participated in a march against an amnesty the military awarded itself in an effort to prevent any future punishment for those alleged abuses.

The 1980 Nobel Peace Prize laureate, Adolfo Perez Esquivel, came to Cesio's defense in a statement after the tribunal's decision.

"The sanction befalls one who has raised his voice against serious abuses against the Argentine people, one who endeavored to rescue the dignity of the armed forces while those responsible for destruction and the violations of human rights ... enjoy total impunity," he said.

"If being a citizen first and an army officer second is a crime, then I'm guilty," Cesio said in an interview.

"One of the principal reasons for military coups in Argentina is that military men put their condition as such over their condition as citizens. That is a tremendous educational fault and it must be corrected.

Cesio spent 100 days in a military jail earlier this year for his public comments.

The civilian president-elect, Raul Alfonsin of the centrist Civic Radical Group, has promised to abolish the post of commander in chief of each of Argentina's military branches and replace them with a single chief of staff directly responsible to the civilian defense minister. Alfonsin said he also intends to revise the National Military Academy's curriculum to correct what has been described as its anti-democratic tendency.

But the main threat to the military is Alfonsin's pledge to revoke the amnesty and punish those officers responsible for the indiscriminate and brutal repression of leftists and suspected subversives following the March 24, 1976, coup that ousted President Isabel Peron.

Cesio said in the interview Alfonsin has good reason to believe the new government will be able to break an Argentine tradition of civilian administrations succeeded by military regimes.

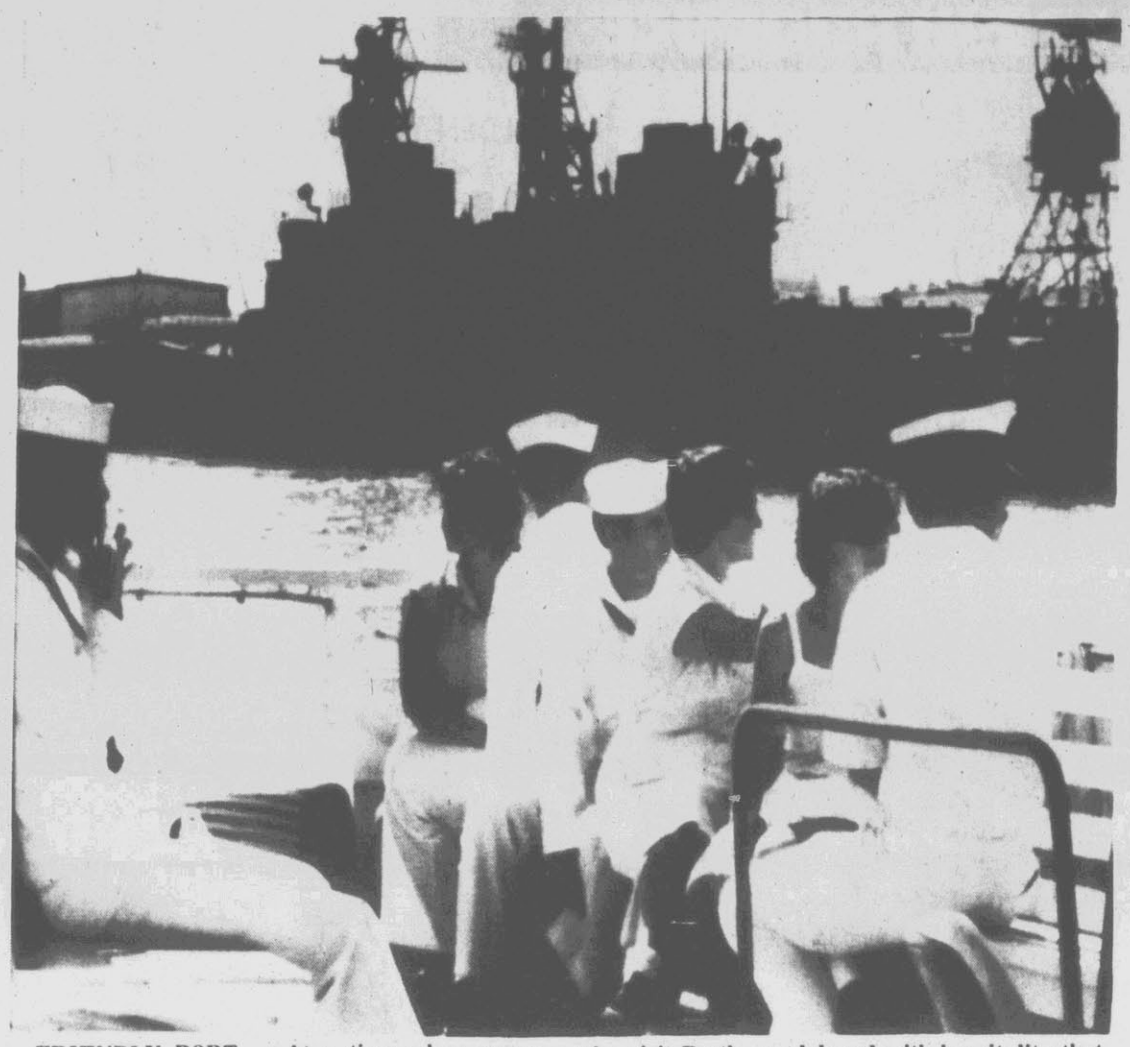

"Never have the armed forces suffered such deterioration and decay as now," he said. "They lost a war (against Britain over the Falkland Islands), their seven years of government have been a total frustration with nothing more than blunders and mistakes, and they have a tremendous sense of guilt. They themselves are anxious to purge themselves."

He added, "The armed forces will regain the respect of the people when they dedicate themselves to fulfilling the role the constitution assigns them."

ZOO HAS A CALF

Americans Welcomed In Perth

FRIENDLY PORT — At a time when many American servicemen are feeling less and less welcome in many places, the sailors and Marines who visit Perth are deluged with hospitality that can't seem to do enough for "the Yanks". (AP Laserphoto)

PERTH, Australia (AP) — At a time when many American servicemen are feeling less and less welcome in many places, the sailors and Marines who visit Perth are deluged with hospitality by a city that lionizes "the Yanks."

U.S. officials say Perth, the capital of Western Australia, is one of the few places left where the American military is truly welcome. It remains an unfailingly friendly port while people in many Western countries express growing doubt about U.S. policy in Grenada and Central America and the deployment of new American nuclear missiles in Europe, said the officials who asked not to be identified.

"People here are great, wonderful," said Chief Petty Officer Dale Yanz of San Diego as he talked with some of the locals. "They really like us."

Every few weeks a U.S. Navy ship or fleet arrives to be greeted with thousands of invitations from local families eager to share their homes.

The captain of one American ship apologized to a local newspaper that he did "not have enough men in my command" to accept even a fraction of the invitations.

"We rarely see similar hospitality," he said.

A survey of 5,000 U.S. servicemen by the state government in 1981 reported that 73 percent put Perth as their favorite port of call over places like Honolulu and Hong Kong. Many of the men emphasized the absence of "the hatred which greets them in some other countries."

"We all look forward to coming to Perth. It's the highlight of an American sailor's cruise," said Yanz, a 16-year-veteran.

On a recent sunny afternoon, the center of the modern city was filled with American sailors and Marines in gleaming white uniforms and olive drab kit after the arrival of a fleet. Passing civilians nodded and smiled at the visitors.

In pairs and groups, the young Americans, sporting cameras and shopping bags, walked up and down. Some glanced in shop windows as others lined up at hamburger and other fast-food restaurants.

Others attended to the age old nautical tradition of meeting the local women.

"It's nice. Almost like being back in the States except they drive on the left," said John Steven, a sailor from Columbus, Ohio. "The people here are real friendly. They really welcome us."

American servicemen travel free on Perth's public transport and many clubs and churches offer their amenities. Some shops accept U.S. dollars, and others offer the military discounts.

At the heart of Perth's affection for the Americans is the "Dial a Sailor" program, which arranges for servicemen to spend time with local families.

Dorothy Sheridan, an organizer of the program, said it is not unusual for a visiting ship to get more than 3,000 invitations.

"As soon as the ships dock people start calling in," she said. "They get inundated with invitations.

The walls of Mrs. Sheridan's apartment are covered with pictures of U.S. ships and their emblems — gifts from crews grateful for Perth's warm hospitality.

After months at sea many sailors are homesick and a visit with a local family helps dull some of the pain of being so far from home, she said.

Asked why Americans are so welcome, Mrs. Sheridan paused for a moment as if puzzled. "They're our allies," she said.

"The feeling for Americans here in Australia is a very good one," said Mrs. Sheridan, whose daughter married a U.S. Marine officer who visited Perth.

Perth, separated by vast deserts from Australia's east coast and 90 percent of the nation's population, tends to feel vulnerable and forgotten by its own government. Its closest big neighbor, Adelaide, is 2,000 miles away.

Cameron Russell, a young Australian, said he approved of the U.S. visits. "It's important for our defense. Hopefully, they'll come and help us if we ever get attacked," he said.

Local businessmen don't deny that the visits are profitable. The state government estimates a fleet visit is worth about $2 million to the metropolitan area which has a population of about 900,000. But the sailors say the friendliness is genuine.

"They're not here to rip our navy off," said Yanz.

Local officials say there have been a few protests when U.S. nuclear-powered ships have visited, but only a few people ever attend.

The U.S. Navy is anxious to maintain its close ties with Perth.

Sailors say they are under strict warnings to behave ashore, and teams remain after a visit to handle unpaid bills and complaints.

Romance is the one area that causes a few problems, and departing ships have to be searched for female stowaways.

"The only gripe I've got is they come and take our women. There are too many of them to do anything about it," said Russell.

Big Green-Up For Athletes

NEW YORK (AP) — When some 1,500 athletes from over 50 countries, plus an expected 250,000 spectators, arrive next June for the International Games for the Disabled, they'll find themselves surrounded by freshly-grown greenery.

Employees of Nassau County's Department of Parks and Recreation are adding 5,000 square feet of temporary greenhouses to the existing 8,000 square feet of greenhousing to raise 55,000 new flowering plants and shrubs. The seedlings will be planted early next spring by a crew of 12 gardeners at Hofstra College's Olympic Village, site of the games.

"The area will be a flowering display for visitors and will show that Americans can grow flowers equal to those of any country in the world," says Frank Piscatelli, park maintenance superintendent.

New Plants Not Sure Solution

CLEVELAND (AP) — Many companies make the mistake of building a new plant instead of utilizing their existing plants, says an expert in the field.

In his book, "The Cost Reduction and Profit Improvement Handbook," Harry E. Figgie says that before purchasing a new plant and equipment it is vital that a company has made certain it is getting peak usage out of the plant and equipment it already owns.

Figgie, chairman of Figgie International, says that in the recent period of mergers and acquisitions many top managers found that they could get three or four times the production from a plant than was the case at the time they inherited it.

Patchwork As Handicap

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in signing a proclamation designating 1983 through 1992 as the "National Decade of Disabled Persons," says the patchwork of federal programs can hinder the handicapped as much as help them.

Reagan said his administration has identified 32 federal agencies funding handicapped research, 42 federal programs to help the handicapped and "more than 100 other programs (that) provide handicapped services and support."

But in his remarks during the signing ceremony, Reagan formally abandoned his administration's efforts to curtail students' and parents' rights under the Education of All Handicapped Children Act.

Checking Out Cyprus Hopes

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Department Counselor Edward Derwinski is visiting Greece to assess prospects for progress in the dispute over the Turkish Cypriot decision to declare their area on Cyprus an independent state.

Derwinski told a reporter the purpose of his mission is "to see what can be done to get progress in any form of dialogue which might develop." The United States has condemned the Turkish Cypriot move regarding the Mediterranean island, announced two weeks ago.

Derwinski, a former Illinois congressman, said he will visit Athens, Nicosia and London during his weeklong trip.

U.S. Businessman Thriving In Midst Of Civil War

By MONTE HAYES
Associated Press Writer

SANTA TECLA, El Salvador (AP) — At 6 feet 7 inches, American businessman Phil Hand is a big presence in this small, war-torn land, and not just because of his height.

Dozens of other Americans conducting business here and many well-to-do Salvadorans abandoned El Salvador when leftist rebels and rightist death squads intensified their campaigns of urban terrorism in 1980.

The 36-year-old Hand decided to stay despite the civil war. In 1981, he invested much of his savings in a small canned food company and took over as its manager.

"People think I'm a crazy gringo for investing in El Salvador. My American and Salvadoran friends questioned my judgment," he said, smiling. "But I had a lot of faith that in the long run the Salvadorans would solve their problems."

In 1982 the Committee of Salvadoran Exporters recognized Hand's efforts by naming him exporter of the year, the first foreigner so honored.

Hand, originally from the San Francisco Bay area, arrived in El Salvador in 1975 as an accountant with a British tobacco company after having spent five years with the firm in Honduras.

Once here, he fell in love with the country's beaches and lakes, its year-round warm weather and, most of all, its "pleasant, hard-working" people. Knowing the tobacco company would transfer him one day, he began looking for a way to stay.

The opportunity came in January 1981 when he and a Salvadoran business associate bought a small canning plant, renamed it Bon Appetit and expanded production.

Besides meeting local demand for specialty items no longer imported because of lack of dollars, the company also began exporting palm hearts, baby corn, ketchup and other products. Most of the exports go to the United States.

"It was the right moment to do it. I'm a firm believer that every problem presents opportunities. You just have to find them," Hand said.

But Hand admitted there are times when he has doubts.

"At times I ask myself what I'm doing here — wouldn't it be easier to be accountant for General Motors in the States?"

Those thoughts usually come after his plant has been shut down all day by a power blackout or when he's having difficulty getting the dollars needed to import bottles and cans.

Guerrilla attacks on the nation's power grid are part of the rebels' campaign to sabotage the economy. The country is also strapped for foreign exchange to finance imports.

Bon Appetit's gross sales this year will be around $800,000, twice last year's figure, but the net profit after three years is less than $5,000.

"What I'd like to do is get it into a nice, medium-sized, well-managed company. I don't have plans to be super-rich. I enjoy what I'm doing right now. I'd just like to be able to live off it," he said.

Hand, with a neatly trimmed beard and thinning, sandy-colored hair, has a lean, athletic build. He keeps in shape by playing in an industrial basketball league.

His participation in the league is a sign of the close involvement with the Salvadoran people that sets him apart from other foreign businessmen. Another sign is his marriage in October to a Salvadoran.

"I thought by staying around I would encourage Salvadorans to stay," he said.

He also takes pride in his company's small contribution to improving the war-wrecked economy.

"It gives me great satisfaction that we've got 35 to 50 people working — there's so much unemployment here," he said.

Hand has never been the target of any threats and only twice has he had run-ins with the leftist guerrillas who have been fighting for four years to overthrow the U.S.-backed conservative government.

Both times occurred at roadblocks outside the capital. Both times he made a "contribution" to the rebel cause and was allowed to pass.

"I don't take a fatalistic attitude, but at the same time you have to maintain a certain faith that things will work out for the best," he said.

For Hand, that faith means going out to dinner at night without looking over his shoulder to see who's following him. It means carrying no gun and not using an armored car.

"There are no guards around here, as you can see," he said, pointing towards the interior of his warehouse in this mountain town of 67,000 people seven miles southwest of the capital.

He said, however, that the atmosphere of violence that pervades El Salvador touches everyone, himself — included.

"We've got a lot of very hurt people here. We have people who've had their whole families massacred. They're bound to feel vengeful," he said. "Even if peace comes tomorrow, there are going to be a lot of problems."

Riverkeeper Monitors Water-Use By Corporation

By RANDOLPH PICHT
Associated Press Writer

PORT EWEN, N.Y. (AP) — Environmentalists call it "a new form of piracy." Exxon Corp. says it hasn't done anything wrong.

But the corporate oil giant has created an uproar by collecting millions of gallons of fresh water from the Hudson River and then transporting it to the Caribbean earlier this year.

"The idea that a corporation can come in, take our water, leave the country and sell it and do it all free of charge is outrageous," said John Cronin, who as paid riverkeeper for the Hudson River Fishermen's Association monitors the river's use.

Last month, Cronin and his group charged Exxon with dumping polluted salt water into the Hudson and then collecting fresh water in its oil tankers for use in its Aruba refinery and to sell to the Caribbean island's government.

In a letter to the corporation, the organization charged that not only were tankers, after delivering oil to Exxon's New Jersey refinery, traveling the 75 miles up the Hudson to load up with water, but that idle tankers were making the journey solely to transport water to arid Aruba.

Sixty tankers, carrying fresh water, have made the trip this year, according to Exxon, 20 making the 1,900-mile journey just for the fresh water. Exxon said it transported some 360 million gallons of water to Aruba in 1983. Cronin and his group claim the corporation has taken between 500 million and 1 billion gallons this year.

"Exxon was getting into the water resource business and the Hudson was a great place to open shop," Cronin said.

Exxon spokesman Joe Morakis says the corporation wasn't violating any state or federal laws or regulations. "We don't think we're the bad guys in this," Morakis said.

He said the practice has been stopped however, and Exxon is getting water for its refinery from "places outside the United States." Morakis said Exxon received $3 million dollars from the Aruba government from June to September of this year for a portion of the water.

"For the sake of example, if we carried 100 gallons to our refinery, we used 90 and gave 10 to Aruba," Morakis said. "We did not sell them the water, we just charged them their portion of the transportation costs."

The point, however, is that the corporation does receive money for it, says Democratic state Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey. "We regard our water as a resource. Exxon has no right to just come in and take it.

"If they want it they should make some compensation for it," he said.

Hinchey, chairman of the state legislative Committee on Environmental Conservation, has scheduled a hearing for Monday to discuss Exxon's activity in the river.

The practice of dumping salt water — taken on as ballast after the tankers unload their oil — and "lifting" fresh water is also being examined by a New York congressman, the U.S. Attorney's office for the Southern District of New York, the state Attorney General and the state Department of Environmental Conservation.

Cronin's group has already informed Exxon that it plans to file a lawsuit against the corporation, charging a violation of the federal Clean Water Act because of the salt water dumping.

And the Department of Environmental Conservation has said it believes Exxon was operating without two necessary permits — to discharge salt water in the river and to take on the fresh water for its own use, said DEC spokesman John Moore.

U.S. Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Mark Lavache in New York City said the Coast Guard does not regulate the practice of taking water from the river, and he added that he knows of no other organization that enforces maritime law. "As far as I know Exxon has done nothing wrong," Lavache said.

If there is no law, Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr., R-N.Y., has said he may introduce one. "We're saying that if it's not illegal to collect the water, maybe it should be," Fish's aide Pari Forood said.

Cronin, 33, who has been working on river environmental issues for 10 years, said unless the practice is stopped Exxon could just be one of many companies "mining" river water.

"There are a lot of nations where water is scarce and a lot of oil companies with idle oil tankers," Cronin said. "I saw down the road a parade of tankers to take our water and sell it all over the world."

Six communities take their drinking water from the Hudson and Cronin said the water intake for Port Ewen, a hamlet of 3,500 people, is only 1,500 feet from where Exxon tankers were dumping contaminated sea water.

"There were sometimes three tankers discharging at once," Cronin said. "And I heard them on the radio coordinating their dumping so none of the tankers would get the contaminated water from one another. Do you think they called Port Ewen?"

Shipping Sacks By The Billion

SCARSDALE, N.Y. (AP) — More than 3 billion multiwall paper shipping sacks will pass through the hands of consumers and manufacturers by the end of 1983, says the Paper Shipping Sack Manufacturers' Association. The sacks are used to package chemicals, pet food, cement, flour, fertilizer and livestock and poultry feed.

The multiwall sacks are normally used to hold materials weighing from 25 pounds to 100 pounds.

The First Beatrix Potter Pewter Figurine "Peter Rabbit"

Created by The New England Collectors Society — a subsidiary of Reed & Barton Silversmiths

- The classic Beatrix Potter art depicting "Peter Rabbit" is beautifully sculpted in solid pewter.
- Each pewter figurine is hallmarked and registered and accompanied by a Certificate of Registration.
- Priced at only $14.50.

Actual Size of Figurine 1¾"

What joy Beatrix Potter brought to the world of children! Her charming stories and delightful illustrations have never been equalled.

"Peter Rabbit" is the first figurine in the Beatrix Potter Pewter Figurine Collection. Each figurine is beautifully sculpted in solid pewter to vividly portray the world famous Beatrix Potter art.

The "Peter Rabbit" figurine is hallmarked and registered by The New England Collectors Society. A Certificate of Registration will accompany each figurine attesting to the exclusivity of this important first edition pewter figurine.

The New England Collectors Society is a subsidiary of Reed & Barton, Fine Silversmiths since 1824

HOLIDAY RECIPE FROM DIXIE CRYSTALS!

NUTTY PUMPKIN CHEESECAKE

Crust
6 ounces package zwieback toast, crushed (1½ cups)
¼ cup Dixie Crystals light brown sugar
6 TBSP butter or margarine, melted
Filling
3 packages (8 ounces each) cream cheese, softened
½ cup Dixie Crystals granulated sugar
1 cup Dixie Crystals light brown sugar
4 large eggs
1 can (1 lb.) pumpkin
1 tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. ginger
¼ tsp. cloves
1 cup heavy cream
Nutty Topping
6 TBSP butter or margarine
1 cup Dixie Crystals light brown sugar
1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts or pecans
Garnish
Orange slices

CRUST: Toss crust ingredients together. Press firmly and evenly over bottom and up side of lightly buttered 9-inch springform pan. Chill. FILLING: Beat cream cheese until very smooth with electric mixer. Gradually add sugars, beating until well mixed. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Beat in pumpkin, spices and ¼ cup heavy cream. Pour into prepared pan. Bake in preheated 325° oven for 1 hour and 40 minutes. Meanwhile, prepare TOPPING: Combine butter or margarine with sugar, mixing until crumbly. Blend in nuts. At end of baking time, remove cake from oven. Sprinkle with topping; bake an additional 10 minutes. Cool cake, then refrigerate several hours or overnight. Garnish with whipped cream and orange slices.

Gas wall heater

Reg. $199.99. Unvented radiant gas heater.

Kenmore water heaters, America's #1 choice

Polyurethane foam insulation is 175% more effective than standard insulation

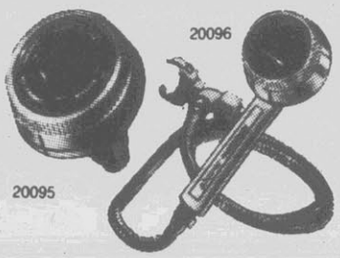

Kenmore Power Miser™ 5 water heaters can save you $269 on gas bills or $337 on electric bills over a 5-year* period when compared to our standard models

169.99 40-gal. electric or 30-gal. gas, reg. $199.99 Installation extra

NEED HOT WATER FAST?

Call Sears for emergency installation (within 24 hours except Sundays and holidays). Or pick up your new water heater and install it yourself.

*Savings calculated in accord with DOE test procedures comparing operating costs of the Power Miser 5 and our standard 40-gal. gas model and 52-gal. electric model, using a gas rate of 62.7¢ per therm and an electric rate of 7.63¢ per kilowatt hour. Your savings may vary.
