Delay Columbia's Return Due To Computer Failure

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Columbia and its six crewmen were forced to delay their return to Earth today after veteran spaceship commander John Young reported computer failure on the shuttle just 4½ hours before this morning's planned touchdown.

The astronauts were in no immediate danger. Only one computer was out, and Columbia has four others, any one of which could guide the ship to a safe landing. The computers operate wing flaps and other spaceship control surfaces during re-entry.

Controllers considered a landing at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., later today.

Mission Control said it delayed the touchdown because it did not fully understand the problem at a critical time when it had to give the crew the go-ahead to close the payload doors and prepare for the engine firing that would take the shuttle back toward Earth.

"We have waved off a landing for this morning," Mission Control said. "We need time to better understand the problem before we commit to re-entry."

Four hours later, the control center said: "We still do not know what happened."

Columbia was to have landed on a desert runway at Edwards at 10:59 a.m. EST after a successful 10-day orbital mission in which the astronauts reaped a bonanza of science data in the Spacelab workshop mounted in the cargo bay.

That landing would have been on the astronauts' 162nd circuit of the globe. The control center said that, assuming the computer problem is resolved, it might bring the crew home on landing opportunities on either the 165th or 166th orbits.

Landing for the 165th would be about 5:17 p.m. (2:17 p.m. PST) and on the 166th, about 6:47 p.m. Forecasters said weather conditions would be good throughout the day at Edwards.

Officials said "there will be no night landing considered," and that the shuttle has enough fuel and other consumables to stay up for two more days.

Young radioed the control center about 5:30 a.m. EST that two of the ship's five computers had failed.

"I think it was the upfiring jets in the nose that made the computers fail," he radioed. "It really hit the vehicle hard."

Minutes later, Young reported Computer No. 2 was back on line, but that No. 1 apparently had "hard failed." Young tried without luck several times to restart it, and finally, the control center told him to declare it failed.

Columbia has four general purpose computers and a backup. Any single one is enough to guide the ship.

Discussing the thrusters, Young said: "I recommend we close the forward RCS (reaction control system) and not run anymore of those rascals."

Controllers agreed and capsule communicator John Blaha told him to shift Columbia into "free-drift" and not to fire the thrusters. Columbia was orbiting at 17,400 mph 150 miles up.

Instead, Young said he would use only small vernier jets at the rear for control.

Then the commander asked, "Want us to continue the preparations for deorbit?" He was about two hours away from firing the shuttle braking rockets.

"Negative," came the reply.

The problem cropped up as Columbia and its Spacelab

Soviet 'Suspends' Talks At Nuclear Arms Forum

GENEVA, Switzerland

(AP) — The Soviet Union today suspended talks on reducing nuclear long-range rockets and bombers, saying deployment of new U.S. missiles in Europe had created a "change in the overall strategic situation."

The suspension of the U.S.-Soviet negotiations was announced at the end of a 35-minute session today and two weeks after the Soviets broke off talks on reducing nuclear medium-range missiles.

It meant that for the first time in two years the superpowers were without a major forum for negotiating reductions in nuclear weapons.

"A change in the overall strategic situation due to the beginning of the deployment of new American missiles in Europe compels the Soviet side to re-examine all the issues which are the subject of the discussion at the talks on the limitation and reduction of strategic armaments," the Soviet news agency Tass said in a Geneva dispatch. "The date for the resumption of the talks has not been set due to this."

U.S. negotiator Edward L. Rowny told reporters outside the U.S. disarmament headquarters. "We regret that the U.S.S.R. has chosen not to set a resumption date for the next round." He added that the United States was "fully prepared" to continue the regular pattern of the talks.

Rowny said the United States proposed to resume the talks in early February, "and we hope that the U.S.S.R. will soon agree on a date for resuming these negotiations which are in the interest of both our nations and of the entire world."

"We cannot agree with Soviet assertions that developments outside the scope of these negotiations require the Soviet Union to withhold agreement on a resumption date," Rowny said.

At a meeting of NATO foreign ministers in Brussels, Belgium, there was no immediate public comment on the suspension of the talks.

The Strategic Arms Reduction Talks — called START — which opened June 18, 1982, would have normally gone into a two-month recess with the resumption date announced at the end of the round.

Rowny conducted 78 sessions with Soviet Ambassador Viktor P. Karpov over 17 months to discuss long-range nuclear forces.

The two sides agreed earlier that today's meeting would be the last of the two-month round begun Oct. 5, but there has been no indication from the Soviets that they will resume the talks in February.

On Monday, Soviet leaders in Moscow said the United States was indulging in "wishful thinking" if it thought the Soviets would resume parallel talks on medium-range nuclear missiles.

The Soviets walked out of those talks Nov. 23 after the arrival of the first of 572 U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles to be deployed in Western Europe by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The Soviets have announced plans to put nuclear missiles in Czechoslovakia and East Germany, increase the number of SS-20s in the Soviet Union and have seabased nuclear weapons aimed at the United States to counter the NATO deployment.

Extended

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Baseball owners, for the second time, extended outgoing commissioner Bowie Kuhn's contract today to give their search committee additional time to find his replacement.

Kuhn's contract was extended until next March 1. Last summer, in Boston, his contract had been extended from its original expiration date of Aug. 15 to Dec. 31.

In the face of reports that the search committee's only viable candidate, White House Chief of Staff James Baker, had turned down the job, it appeared the committee was having trouble finding a new commissioner.

Committee chairman Bud Selig, owner of the Milwaukee Brewers, called the latest extension a "transitory bridge" that "needs to be built at all times like this."

Patience Eroding On Lebanon Chore

By R. GREGORY NOKES

Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS (AP) — The United States and its three partners in the peacekeeping force expressed their determination today to remain in Lebanon. But there were hints their patience could run out if solutions to Lebanon's problems don't soon emerge.

"I'm sure there are the realities of the patience of various publics," said a U.S. spokesman. A British source restated his country's position that its commitment isn't open-ended.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz held a breakfast meeting in his hotel suite with the foreign ministers of Britain, France and Italy, all of which contribute to the 5,600-man force.

The U.S. spokesman said

there was no discussion whatsoever about withdrawing the force, nor is there a plan to increase its size or expand its role. More than 300 troops of the multinational force — including 256 U.S. servicemen — have been killed in Lebanon.

The spokesman said the four ministers, here for a meeting of NATO foreign ministers, were agreed on the urgent need for efforts at national reconciliation in Lebanon to succeed.

The official briefed reporters on results of the meeting on the understanding he would not be identified.

The NATO meeting comes as Italy and Britain question the usefulness of the peacekeeping force in the wake of Sunday's U.S. air strikes against Syrian positions in Lebanon and repeated attacks on the peacekeeping forces.

Neither Shultz, Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Howe of Britain nor Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti of Italy would comment on today's meeting.

But French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson said, "There are no changes that would lead us to change our views — we do not want to give the impression that we would abandon the Lebanese."

"We support President (Amin) Gemayel," Cheysson said. "We would like Gemayel's government to represent Lebanon in its entirety so that the process of

A 'Thank-You' Luncheon For Outgoing Officials

Community leaders honored the outgoing mayor and City Council with a collective expression of thanks Wednesday and welcomed the new mayor and board members during a Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

David Duffus, chairman of the chamber board, said, "On behalf of our Chamber of Commerce which represents the business, industrial and professional community, I say a big 'thank you' to Mayor Percy Cox, Janice Buck, Louis Clark, Stuart Shinn, Judy Greene, Bill Hadden and George Pugh for a job well done."

Duffus also offered "sincere congratulations" to the new members elected to "serve the fastest growing city in eastern North Carolina." The new slate, which will be installed tonight, includes Mayor-Elect Buck and council members Ed Carter, M.W. (Henry) Aldridge, Clark, Greene, Shinn and Hadden.

The spokesman said the outgoing officials "dedicated themselves to good government and the betterment of our city through their dedication to the City Council during the past two years."

Speaking to the new council, Duffus said, "We as a chamber see you as people with a vision and desire to insure a proper and orderly growth of our city that deserves sincerity in planning for the future."

He said, "It has been predicted that by 1995 Greenville will be a metropolitan city. We feel good that a firm foundation has been laid on which to build a city for the future."

Duffus said a book by Hugh Bayless entitled "The Best Towns in America" cites Greenville "as one of America's 50 most desirable cities to live in because of our affordable homes, stable economy, rich cultural and educational opportunities, low crime rates, moderate taxes, reasonable energy costs, safe natural environment, clean, plentiful water, abundant shopping centers and good government."

Duffus offered special thanks to Cox, who served 17 years on the governing board, including six as mayor. He told the mayor, "Your dedication speaks loud and the many things, acts and creative ideas that you have injected into our city, its progress and government will be long remembered."

RING AT ORIGINAL PRICE

Last May while attending an Omega Psi Phi Fraternity in Winston-Salem, I ordered a fraternity ring which cost $260. I made a deposit of $50. The ring was shipped to me in September by the Josten's Company of Owatonna, Minn., and the balance was listed as $342.76. I called the vender and he suggested that I refuse the package, assuring me it would later be reshipped at the original price. I did this and have since been receiving statements for the $342.76 price. I am at a loss as to what to do. I have tried to communicate with the company and further with the vender unsuccessfully. F.S.

Hotline called the company and explained your situation. We were assured that the company always honors its originally promised price and that you would be called immediately and told the date of shipment. You were called that very day, you report, and in less than a week you came in to show us your ring.

Two Rose High students, Hunter Bost and Elizabeth Ellen, are among the seven high school seniors selected as Morehead Scholar finalist nominees for 1984 from District 1, which comprises 20 eastern North Carolina counties.

Selection of the seven from District 1 was announced today. They will compete in the final Morehead Scholarship competition to be held in Chapel Hill in late February or early March.

The other seniors chosen as district finalists are: Emily Blount and Sean Pelan, both of Washington High School, Washington; Benjamin Burroughs, Hatteras High School, Cape Hatteras, and Elizabeth Stanley, Plymouth High School, Plymouth.

Bost, son of Dr. and Mrs. William S. Bost, was the 1983 Greenville Community Ambassador representing the community in Spain during this past summer. He is a member of the National Honor Society and for three years has served on the Student Government Association. He plays on the basketball and baseball teams.

Miss Ellen, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John C. Ellen, Jr., is a member of the East Carolina University Symphony, the Eastern Youth Orchestra and other area musical groups. She is a ballet student and a member of the National Honor Society.

Winners of the 1984 John Motley Morehead scholarship awards will receive four academic years and also summer programs at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. Currently, each award is worth approximately $20,000. The awards are given on the basis of academic, school and community achievements.

Service League Names New Provisionals

New provisional members were welcomed and introduced by Mrs. Edward Smith, membership chairman, at the Monday meeting of the Greenville Service League.

Named were Mrs. Ray J. Boleman, Mrs. F. Spencer Cosby, Mrs. E.G. Crawford Jr., Mrs. Derek P. Dunn, Mrs. William H. Durham Jr., Mrs. J. Harry Hastings, Mrs. Fred Stanley Holec, Mrs. James F. Lewis Jr., Mrs. Carrie Gray Oakley, Mrs. Garry T. Pegram and Mrs. Bill Williams.

A program of Christmas music was presented by Mrs. Smith, soloist, and Mrs. Boyd Lee, pianist.

Mrs. Frank Layne, president, conducted the business session. Mrs. Kelly Barnhill said the next Bloodmobile visit would be at Procter and Gamble Wednesday. The November report included a visit to Pitt Community College where 36 hours were contributed by 12 workers and 73 units were donated; at D.H. Conley High School, 23 workers volunteered 74 1/2 hours and 157 units were obtained; and Nov. 30 at Fletcher Dormitory, 119 units were given with 22 members working 69 hours.

Mrs. C.W. Harvey, hospital activities, reported that 400 tray favors were prepared for the hospital patients at Thanksgiving. A Christmas workshop will be held Dec. 8 and volunteers were asked to help decorate the hospital Dec. 14.

Mrs. Horton Rountree reported the receipt of three memorials to the Laughinghouse Fund and rendered assistance to six patients. Mrs. Norwood Whitehurst furnished three layettes last month and Jo Betts Barrett loaned three items of equipment from the lending chest and had two items returned.

Christmas baskets will be delivered to needy families Dec. 22 and donations were received from the membership.

Mrs. J.W.H. Roberts requested volunteers to help staff the Mental Health office and thanked members for their gifts for Operation Santa Claus.

Mrs. Layne said Jan. 9 is the next meeting date.

A coffee hour was held in honor of the new provisionals.

Children Having Holiday Birthdays Need Attention

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

When a birthday must compete with Santa Claus or New Year's celebrations and deny a child the inborn right to be 100 percent the center of attention on his or her natal day, all's not joyful.

Boys and girls born in December and January claim having a birthday in or near the Christmas and New Year's month means being lost in the gift and party shuffle. That was the finding of a survey conducted by Gregory Brock, associate professor of family studies at the University of Wisconsin-Stout in Menomonie, Wis.

As the parent of a January child, I can testify that it's no fun for parents either to have to drop all the holiday juggling (or recuperation) and focus on a birthday. Cast in the role of Santa's helper and Fairy Godmother within the span of two or three weeks short circuits nerves every time.

January and December children apparently have been able to see through this parental weakness. Brock discovered in his survey of 150 Stout students asked to recall childhood feelings about the month in which they were born.

"College students are at an age when it would be easy for them to remember what their feelings were when they were 6 to 10 years of age," Brock said, explaining why he selected the students.

He said 77 percent of those born in December and January claimed both months are rotten for birthdays.

The students recalled the December and January child's birthday parties lacked the highly-concentrated razzle-dazzle of parties and significant presents experienced by friends or siblings born in other months.

Spring months were recalled as the best to be born. Birthday parties could be held while school was in session and the weather was nice, giving some promise of a good turnout — which mean more presents.

Vacation months were described as less than ideal for birthday celebrations though not nearly as bad as December-January.

Brock said the trouble with the summer is that too many kids are at grandmother's house or visiting the Grand Canyon or otherwise not in the neighborhood. This makes it hard to get up a good crowd for a party. A poor crowd means fewer presents.

Brock said parents should be aware of these negative feelings about December-January birthdays, especially feelings that are acquired between the ages of 6 and 10.

"It is easy for these children to feel left out or to get the sense that their birthday isn't as important as that of a brother or sister. It may create a sense of not being as valued."

This is liable to be the case if parents stint on birthday presents because Christmas buying strains the money supply, Brock said.

He suggested that parents talk through birthday feelings with their December-January children and work out a solution for the problem.

"In some cases, parents might consider having a birthday celebration at another time of the year," he said.

"For very young children, it may be better to give them many small gifts for their birthday instead of one expensive one. The younger children are into quantity."

Brock, who likes September for birthdays, is the father of two, going on three — the third due sometime in December.

"I did this study because we are going to have our first child born in December and my wife and I were wondering what it is like for a child to have Christmas and birthday celebrations in the same month," he said.

"I have several friends who were born in December and they recalled that from a child's point of view it is not the best month to be born."

Brock said the study is significant to parents.

"Children who dislike their birthdays may also acquire feelings of not being wanted, loved and appreciated," he said.

"It is just one of the many factors leading to these feelings, but it is a factor."

"Parents should be concerned about putting some time into thinking about what to do if a child is born close to the holiday season."

"I think it is important that parents take some steps to help these kids feel appreciated on holiday season birthdays."

The childbearing patterns of today's young women (ages 18-34) are very different from those of their mothers' generation, says the American Council of Life Insurance. Unlike World War II postwar brides, women of the Baby Boom generation are often postponing having children. In addition to becoming mothers later in life, they expect to have fewer children, the council says.

Dear Abby

Transportation And Tab Is Question

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: In these days of the "liberated woman," more women are phoning men and asking them out. Not that there is anything wrong with that, but it does raise some questions:

If the woman calls the man, does she pick him up? Or is he expected to pick her up? Who pays the tab? It seems to me that the person who does the inviting should pick up the tab. But some men might not feel right letting a woman treat them.

DEAR NO SIG: When the woman calls the man, the transportation is provided by the person for whom it is most convenient. As for the tab: The person who did the inviting should be prepared to pick up the tab.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old man with a problem I've never heard of before. I'm engaged to a 22-year-old girl named Gina (not her real name). We've gone together for a year, and I thought we knew each other well, but she laid something on me yesterday that set me to wondering.

While shopping for a bedroom set, Gina insisted on a double bed with bedposts. I said it looked kind of old-fashioned, but Gina said that is what she wanted in case we wanted to tie each other up! Abby, the way she said it I'm sure she was serious. I was totally surprised. Now I am wondering if maybe my fiancée isn't some kind of pervert.

I have no desire to be tied up, and I certainly don't want to tie her up. Am I square or is there something wrong with Gina?

DEAR NO TIES: It's time you and Gina had a frank talk about your sexual expectations. Tying up one's partner, or being tied up, is part of a not-uncommon fantasy to heighten sexual pleasure. It's called "bondage." If your fiancée is seriously entertaining these thoughts, it doesn't necessarily mean she's a "pervert." The best rule of limitations is: Anything that goes on between consenting adults is OK as long as it's agreeable to both parties and harms no one.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of the following? My husband and I were shopping last week, and as we were walking along the street, I became very dizzy.

I noticed a cleaning shop nearby where I saw some empty chairs. I told my husband to continue shopping, and I went into the cleaning shop and asked the young man there if I could sit down for a few minutes because I wasn't feeling well. This was his answer: "These chairs are only for people who are having their things cleaned here. If you are sick, go to a doctor."

Please comment.

DEAR MARION: I'm sure that cleaning establishment will never get a penny (or a good word) from you, and I don't blame you. But please, take a few minutes to write a letter, addressed to the owner, describing your experience. Clip this column and enclose it. Be sure to state the day and time it occurred. There is always a chance that some uncaring or poorly trained employee acted without authority. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply, and let me know what happens.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Denver Exhibit Shows Century Of Fashion

By S.J. GUFFEY
Associated Press Writer
DENVER (AP) — When Imelda DeGraw set out to display some of the Denver Art Museum's abundant lingerie collection, she didn't give much thought to the political significance of the whalebone corset.

"Our main concern was not to offend people," Ms. DeGraw confided as she showed a visitor around "Intimate Fashions Then And Now."

"We get a lot of people in the museum and we don't want anyone upset," she explained.

But there is more than a wealth of delicate handwork and luxurious fabric here among lavender walls in a sixth-floor gallery where a century of underpinnings is laid out in style. The exhibit also reflects what women chose — or were allowed — to do, once they were fully dressed.

In the mid-1800s, for example, overdressed might be a better description. A line of mannequins show the necessary components for the fashionable of that day: a loose, thigh-length chemise first, then antaloons, corset, corset cover and a petticoat form stiffened with wire or whalebone. Over that, petticoats galore — up to 10 at a time — then, finally, a floor-length dress.

A life of leisure had real meaning in those days; three to five different complete changes of clothes a day — from the chemise out — were not uncommon, said Ms. DeGraw, curator of the museum's textile collection.

Across the room is an elaborate tucked and embroidered silk "morning dress," the sort worn each day until it was time to change again and "go out." Back home in the afternoon, it was time for a looser, still elaborate, tea dress until the hour came to dress for dinner.

Servants were de rigueur for such opulent behavior. "You couldn't possibly lace yourself up," Ms. DeGraw says of the corsets, adding that an immense amount of someone's time had to go into washing and ironing the delicate items as they were discarded.

A "progression of silhouettes" is how Ms. DeGraw describes changes in fashion over the century. Illustrations that stretch back to Elizabethan England line the museum wall.

Cinched-in, tiny waists —

13 inches around was once the goal — go back at least 400 years, when Elizabethan women encased their torsos in steel to denote their social rank and wealth.

In the 1600s, steel gave way to whalebone and made fortunes for New England's whaling fleet. The fullness of skirts moved from bell shapes to and toward the back. Bustles arrived.

Reproductions of etchings show the apex of 18th-century fashion — the rococo creations of Louis XVI's court in the days before the Bastille fell and leveled couture francais. For a while.

On another wall, an 1883 ad for an electric corset guarantees to deliver "health-giving current to the whole system," though it doesn't explain where the batteries go. Beside it, an illustration doctors used to lobby against corsets, showing the drastic realignment of internal organs that such get-ups would induce with prolonged wear.

In 1851, Amanda Bloomer promoted Turkish-style trousers and a knee-length skirted bodice that allowed for the more natural female figure. The ensemble never caught on, though Amanda's last name was certainly immortalized.

However uncomfortable or unhealthy many underclothes have been, they were beautifully made. A center case shows clothes for little girls and their dolls — traveling seamstresses out-fitted whole families, including favored toys — with the underwear just as lavishly detailed as mama's.

Silhouettes straightened out in the 1920s. Finally able to vote and eager to be part of the upside-down world that followed World War I, women of fashion moved into the straight-lined adolescent look of the flapper.

As acceptance of women's sexuality grew, so fashions changed. Selections from the

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Greg and Louise are in their early 30s. They're the parents of a 12-year-old daughter and a nine-year-old son.

In Louise's words, their marriage is one of those "liberated, non-conforming unions" where she worked at nights and Greg helped in rearing the "little people."

In that role, Greg became a fantastic homemaker, good cook, did laundry, windows and made great novelty cakes on birthdays. "It did something to a woman," Louise wrote, "to overhear your son tell a friend, 'Oh, you don't want to eat over here tonight. My mom cooked.'"

Louise confessed she was fed up with it all — the work, not the marriage. She needed a vacation and couldn't afford one, so what did she do? She joined the Army. Late in October, she left for active duty at Ft. Dix, N.J.

"I know you're a busy woman," she wrote, "but could you possibly write a few humorous words to my husband? He is good person and is going to experience some difficult days."

Louise, you've come to the wrong person. I write humor for a living.

Forget the fact that your life isn't exactly go-

1950s include a garment known as a "merry widow," which looks like a lightweight version of the old whalebone corsets. Indeed, its purpose was to lift the bosom and cinch the waist.

For recent years, the exhibit leans heavily on robes and other night wear — "People tend more to putting less money in lingerie," said the curator.

ing to be a "day at the beach"; you have just volunteered your husband into membership in the loneliest club in the world — the domestic vigilantes who sit your children, feed your dog and keep a light in your window until your next visit.

They unclog your plumbing, fight your roaches, repair your car, shovel snow from your sidewalks and try to remember what you looked like and why they loved you.

Frankly, I hold no hope of cheering Greg up. When the newness wears off the Happy Homemaker, he'll get a little squirrely like the rest of us. He'll talk to himself in the car, hide behind the shower curtain when the kids are looking for him and write a suicide note using his newest skill — calligraphy.

When he is watching his soaps, he will repel the advances of his kids who want to change the channel by holding out a cross like an exorcist. Some night, he will just sit in the car in the garage with all the lights off humming.

He will try to envision his wife in uniform with an American flag flying behind her and him declaring, "I regret that I have but one wife to give to my country."

And don't be surprised if you come home on leave and discover Greg needed a vacation too . . . and went to serve in the Mideast for a couple of years.

The Original French Food Processor

The Robot-Coupe was the first food processor in the world, developed over 35 years ago in France, birthplace of fine cuisine. Through the years we have perfected our invention for use in the great restaurants of France and in the homes of cooks throughout the world.

This work-saver will become an invaluable kitchen aid — one that slices, shreds, chops, mixes, kneads, purees and otherwise accomplishes a thousand tedious cooking chores in seconds. The Robot-Coupe comes with a complete 179 page book filled with recipes for pizzas, pastas and breads, vegetables and salads and an array of tantalizing desserts and appetizers, as well as recipes for meat, fish, soups and sauces. There are a hundred and one things that you can do with this amazing work saver. Once you use this machine, you'll discover just how enjoyable cooking can be. Bon appetit!

The work bowl, cover, pusher and plastic blade are made of shatterproof, heat-resistant Lexan® plastic. Steel blades are manufactured to hold an edge for years. Slicing and shredding discs are also high-quality stainless steel. All parts are dishwasher safe.

The power source of the Robot-Coupe 2000 food processor is a 500-watt, 115-volt direct drive induction motor, which allows you to do heavy duty jobs like mixing doughs. It simply shuts off to keep the motor from overheating and burning out. It also has an On/Off/Pulse switch for quick bursts of power or to let the machine run continually.

Comes Out Ahead

A Michigan research organization says North Carolina taxpayers paid out $4.3 billion to support the defense establishment last year, while the Defense Department spending in the state amounted to $3.6 billion — which spells some sort of “red ink” for North Carolina.

The apparent point was that taxes for defense in North Carolina were a money-loser.

We think otherwise.

For one thing, North Carolinians are historically defense-minded, and the thousands of men and women from this state who are in uniform are proof of that. So, in a real sense, we are supporting “our own”.

Another point: thousands of businesses located near North Carolina’s military bases rely heavily on their patrons in uniform ... evident to any motorist passing through or visiting those communities. It’s a big plus for business, as well as revenue producing.

And finally, if there were no military installations in North Carolina, Tar Heel taxes would still be going toward the cost of national defense; but with those military centers inside our borders, the state is getting the greater part of that outflow back.

The only possible conclusion is that North Carolina comes out ahead.

Happy Days On The Phone Are Gone

SCRABBLE, Va. — A couple of Sundays ago, 70 million Americans watched a fictional disaster on TV. In another three or four weeks, as of January 1, they will experience a real one. We have had the finest telephone service in the world. Those happy days are gone, if not forever, at least for the foreseeable future.

The newspapers and magazines have been filled with stories about the breakup of the giant American Telephone & Telegraph Co. The figures are impressive. AT&T has $155 billion in assets. It has been handling roughly 650 million telephone calls a day through 150 million of its own leased telephones. With nearly 1 million employees, it is the second largest employer in the country. Only the federal government is larger.

Never mind all these millions and billions. For an example of what we can now expect, let me offer the wall telephone in my kitchen. This past Monday it would not ring.

We husbands and fathers know how to take care of such things. I dialed the number listed in our local directory for residential repair service. After a considerable time, this put me through to a young lady in Richmond, a hundred miles away. She inquired of my age, height, weight, identifying marks and mother’s maiden name before asking what trouble I was having.

“We no longer fool with that kind of thing,” said she. “You must call AT&T at 1-800-555-8111.”

So I did. Some awful sense of foreboding caused me to take a stopwatch from my desk drawer. A recorded voice informed me that I had reached the telephone equipment office, but that all lines were busy. The first available agent would discuss my problem with me. Meanwhile, I could listen to Strauss waltzes in the background. The watch ticked off 16 minutes and 22 seconds without further action. I hung up, breathing hard, and tried again. This time I waited 21 minutes and 10 seconds, and I passed the time by swearing at the office dog and reading magazine pieces about our changing telephone service.

The young lady who at last came on the line was in Maryland, 110 miles away. She could not have been more pleasant. A repair crew would come out the following Friday, five days later. She was sorry for the delay in fielding my call. And toodle-oo.

Before the madness known as divestiture, we had a telephone repair office just 16 miles away. Our phones got repaired in a jiffy. Our experience in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia was the universal American experience. The Bell System, up to this melancholy moment, has been the envy of the civilized world. No more.

This is the certain prospect: Our local telephone bills will go up, and in most instances they will go way up. Our service will get worse, and in most instances it will get much worse. This is because the giant AT&T truly cannot waste time, or be much concerned, with repairing the phones it leases to us; this is penny-ante stuff. Hence forth, we subscribers must decide whether a given problem is in the telephone instrument or in the line. If it’s in the instrument, it will take hours and days to get service from AT&T. If we think the problem is in the line, and it proves not to be in the line, our local Bell company will impose a charge of up to $25 for our misjudgment.

How did we bring this disaster upon ourselves? It is because ideologues of both the left and the right successfully trumpeted their causes. On the left, zealots cried “Down with monopoly!” On the right, my crowd hollered “Up with competition!” Intoxicated by our own oratory, we bought the idealistic notion that under deregulation things would be better. We ignored the homely maxim that tells us, “If it ain’t broke, don’t fix it.”

Well, things doubtless will be better for the top brass of AT&T, who now can romp in the playgrounds of computer technology. Doubtless this is a great thing for the stockbrokers also, but it promises to be pure hell for all of us who have a telephone in the kitchen. Here is the biggest corporation in the world, American Telephone & Telegraph, and it lacks either the resources, the heads-up management or the willingness to hire 20 additional operators to man repair lines in the Washington area.

But the thought crosses my mind that maybe some supervisors at AT&T tried to get 20 additional lines installed, and after waiting 37 minutes and 32 seconds for the equipment office to answer, gave up in disgust. If so, they heard a lot of Strauss waltzes.

Strength For Today

John Mark, who wrote the Gospel of Mark, accompanied Paul and Barnabas on their first missionary journey. But halfway through he became alarmed at the dangerous country through which they were traveling and went back home. Paul was furious at his defection.

But Mark recovered from his timidity and youthful weaknesses. He regained Paul’s confidence to such an extent that Paul, toward the end of his life, asked that Mark be sent to him “because he is useful to me in ministering.”

So Mark, who started out badly, turned out well in the end. This has been the life story of many a young person since those ancient days. If a boy has the stuff in him and is honest and diligent, he can surmount almost any difficulty and rise above past mistakes.

So let us not be hasty in our judgments. We ourselves, in the past, have undoubtedly at some time shown weaknesses as great or greater than that of John Mark.

A general moral lapse exists in America. According to the late Gen. Douglas MacArthur, when such conditions exist, either there must be a spiritual awakening or progressive deterioration will lead to ultimate national disaster. Shall we continue our trend toward moral collapse and eventually succumb to atheistic communism or have a spiritual awakening and enjoy freedom?

To the editor:

In recent days a significant first step toward responsible government was taken in Catawba County, where a bipartisan county commission unanimously adopted an ordinance that allows our courts to impose stiff fines and civil penalties on public officials — including these same commissioners — who violate North Carolina’s so-called open meetings laws. These officials have established a precedent that, if followed by other government bodies, could eliminate the kind of mischief that occurs when arrogant or dishonest public agencies conduct their business behind closed doors.

The need for an enforceable “Sunshine” law is obvious. Under present statutes there is no provision for punishing public officials who flaunt their authority by holding illegal secret meetings. Except in Catawba County, the severest action the courts can take against even the most flagrant violators is to plead with them to discontinue their illegal practices. The law that applies to 99 other counties and all other state agencies — including the Legislature — contains no threat of fine or imprisonment. (Imagine how effective our drunken driving laws would be if the only enforcement provision was an appeal to the conscience of the offender.)

Catawba County Commissioners have thus closed a gaping hole in our open meetings laws. I would hope that those who share my interest in a more responsive, responsible government would bring to the attention of persons seeking positions of public trust the need for statewide reform of our ineffectual open meetings laws.

Gratitude Deserved

Following the tragedy in Beirut, it was a happy contrast to see 1,800 Marines return to Morehead City Wednesday.

The Marines disembarked from troop ships to a tumultuous welcome arranged by chambers of commerce in Carteret County and Jacksonville.

Government officials welcomed them and there were traditional yellow ribbons lining the roads to the Cherry Point entrance.

It was a hero’s welcome which was deserved by the returning Marines who have been serving in Lebanon under conditions which make their defense difficult at best.

The Marines have served their nation well and some of their comrades will not be coming home alive. They deserve our gratitude.

Fateful Decision

WASHINGTON — When Soviet negotiators walked out of the Geneva medium-range nuclear arms talks, they triggered a fateful decision by President Reagan to send the Senate a precise list of alleged Soviet SALT violations — the first time the United States has ever accused the Russians of cheating on treaty obligations.

The president has informed top aides of his decision to comply with the Senate’s request, voted overwhelmingly after the KAL 9007 disaster. When the record arrives on Capitol Hill in January, it will end feuding among high-level Reaganites on the cheating issue. This has pitted senior presidential aides James A. Baker III and Michael K. Deaver against Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and, when he served as national security adviser, Interior Secretary William Clark.

The decision follows the president’s own inclinations so closely that he might eventually have blown the whistle on the Soviets even had they continued to negotiate in Geneva. But their walkout warmed the climate for Reagan to finally shrug off restraints.

Reagan’s decision enhances the feeling here that, starting with the Korean Air Lines shoot-down, the Kremlin has been on the run. Backed into a politically weak position by boycotting the Geneva talks, Moscow will be hard put to explain away the carefully researched U.S. record of non-compliance with signed treaties.

That could mitigate anti-Reagan sentiment in the nuclear freeze movement. Boiled down, these are the violations the president will allege:

- Discovery of a huge new radar in Southern Siberia. The Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) calls this an indisputable violation of the Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) Treaty, the heart of SALT I signed by President Nixon in 1972.

- Continued testing of a second “new type” long-range ballistic missile. Only one is permitted by SALT II, the unratified agreement signed by President Carter in 1979 that both countries agreed to abide by.

- The discovery by reconnaissance satellites, not yet publicly known, that Soviet Backfires are deployed as intercontinental bombers on the Kola Peninsula above Scandinavia. As part of SALT II, then Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev pledged in writing that the Backfire never would be used as intercontinental bomber.

- Wholesale encryption of data from missile test flights, a violation of SALT II. Encoding denies the United States its legal right to check on the new weapon being tested.

Beyond these allegations, Reagan may shock the Soviets with another accusation of an entirely different character: a charge of blatant refusal to abide by human rights pledges made at the 1975 Helsinki Conference on European Security. That would carry the president’s attack beyond U.S.-Soviet bilateral relations to affect, perhaps profoundly, European signers of the Helsinki accords.

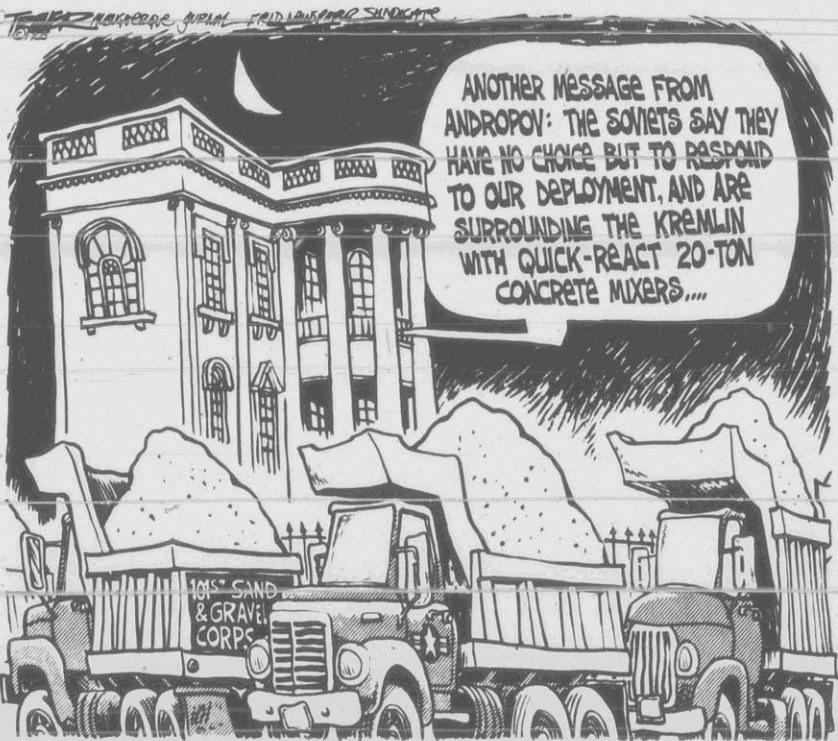

Two documents are not getting final editing touches on Soviet treaty violations. The one to be sent to Capitol Hill is under control of national security adviser Robert McFarlane. The other, written expressly and only for Reagan and a few top officials, is a 300-page document drafted by the General Advisory Committee to the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA).

The second document, kept under lock and key, is said to be an unprecedented examination of every foreign obligation entered into by the Soviets since 1917. It includes the first analysis of SALT violations by non-government, outside specialists, breaking the monopoly on such studies by a small bureaucracy assigned to a U.S.-Soviet commission that sits in Geneva.

Ever since taking office, Ronald Reagan has favored a frank, frontal approach to the Russians on SALT violations. But, like his predecessors, he was always advised: Wait, now is not the right time to move.

The president has ruled otherwise in a courageous, long-overdue decision, helped along by Soviet bullying in Geneva. His whistle-blowing leads the two superpowers into new, uncharted terrain.

To the editor:

The ABC-TV broadcast of “The Day After” has been a great boost for the anti-nuclear movement because it showed THE FACTS — “If there is a nuclear war, the world may end.”

“The Day After” has forced many people to stop living in a fog, believing that our leaders have the situation under control. THEY DON’T. Others have said it much better than I can:

“Soviet and American children live on a nuclear ‘death row.’ In the time it takes a child to fix and eat a bowl of cereal, his (her) world could become a fiery radioactive hell,” wrote Mark Gerzon in a New York Times opinion.

“If deterrence fails, you will get to watch your own wife (husband, baby, mother) eviscerated by flying glass, or decapitated, turned incandescent, starved to death in the cold, or die slowly in excruciating agony, without medical aid,” wrote Stanford University Professor Paul Ehrlich, also in the New York Times.

“The atomic age itself is our joint enemy,” said Peta Kelly, a West German legislator.

“It is nuclear weaponry itself which is unacceptable. As long as nuclear weapons exist, — and are targeted on our adversaries — the threat of nuclear war exists,” wrote Jeffrey Mevissen in a letter to the Washington Post.

The risks are real. “The Day After” can easily become a reality. The movie also lets us hear a fictional president’s message to the citizens of Lawrence, Kan. “America has not surrendered,” are his words. Somehow, it’s not difficult for me to imagine Ronald Reagan speaking them.

We’re living in a dangerous time. “The planet is terminally ill,” wrote Dr. Helen Caldecott, president emerita of Physicians for Social Responsibility. “We are having an acute clinical emergency. Only 24-hour intensive medical care will save this patient. Preventive medicine in the nuclear age must be practiced through the political process.”

The responsibility to avert “The Day After” is ours. Let’s begin.

To the editor:

During the past few months I have sat with quiet contemplation over the question of what would be the best solution to maintaining and improving the quality of educational systems in our area. This is not a new question to people in Pitt County or Greenville.

Fortunately, on at least one of those occasions, I was a student of J.H. Rose High School in a city that was reaping the benefits of fast growth, industrialization and a general economic upswing. At this same period of time, Pitt County and the Pitt County school system was not economically as fortunate as Greenville and the Greenville city school system. During this period of time, due to its needs, the Pitt County school system was instrumental in raising the question of merger.

What were the county’s reasons for wanting to merge? Basically, the reasons were the same then as now — maintaining high levels of education and adequate facilities in the face of limited funds. The racial balancing question fits today’s modern educational concept more than it was emphasized in times past.

What were the results of the cries for help from the Pitt County school system? Well, I can tell you. Those cries for help fell on the deaf ears of the Greenville Board of Education. The real results were that the Pitt County school system found strength in its hour of need. Economizing, emphasizing necessity over want, the courage resulted in an accelerated building program and ambitious goals to raise levels of learning for all county students.

Perhaps the Greenville Board of Education would do well to take a lesson from the Pitt County Board of Education.

I was interested to read, in an advertising column headed, “The Republican Corner” (A flag decorates the column, of course) that “our great country was built on a free market economic system, and Republicans are willing to fight for its preservation.”

The column came out about a week after the Republican president signed a bill which would authorize the payment, by the government, of millions of dollars to dairy farmers for not producing dairy products.

I don’t understand.

I wish to take this opportunity to publicly thank Rep. Walter B. Jones and the dedicated members of his Washington, D.C., staff who have assisted the citizens of Hyde County in maintaining essential primary health care services for our citizens.

Hyde County is a medically underserved area, ranked as a number one priority for additional health manpower recruitment nationally by the Department of Health and Human Services Bureau of Health Manpower.

The citizens of Hyde County have cooperated with the federal government, the North Carolina Office of Rural Health Services and others to create and maintain primary health care services, including medicine, dentistry and home health, for the past several years.

Congressman Jones and his office staff have been important allies in our efforts to deal with the multitude of federal agencies involved with our projects. Without their dedicated sensitive and professional assistance, the availability of primary health care services in Hyde County would still be a dream rather than a reality.

To the editor:

Events of recent weeks and reaction to them confirm that communist plans for domination of the world remain in operation. Their basic plan states, “First we will take eastern Europe, then the masses of Asia, then we will encircle the United States, which will be the last bastion of capitalism. We will not have to attack. It will fall into our hands like overripe fruit.”

How are communists succeeding in their plan? In May 1919, at Dusseldorf, Germany, Allied Forces captured a very significant document: “Communist Rules for Revolution.” As you read these “Rules” now almost 65 years later, keep in mind what you are reading and hearing via news media.

1. Corrupt the young: get them away from religion; interest them in sex; make them superficial; destroy their ruggedness.

2. Get control of all means of publicity, thereby:

- a. Get people’s minds off their government by focusing their attention on athletics, sexy books, plays and other trivialities.

- b. Divide the people into hostile groups by constantly harping on controversial matters of no importance.

- c. Destroy the people’s faith in their natural leaders by holding them up for contempt, ridicule and obloquy.

- d. Always preach true democracy, but seize power as fast and ruthlessly as possible.

- e. By encouraging governmental extravagance, destroy the credit, fear of inflation with rising prices and general discontent.

- f. Promote unnecessary strikes in vital industries, encourage civil disorders, and foster a lenient and soft attitude on the part of the government toward such disorders.

- g. By specious argument, cause the breakdown of the old moral values, honesty and sobriety.

3. Cause the registration of all firearms on some pretext with a view of confiscating them and leaving the population helpless.

Teachers Are Provided Extra Year To Qualify

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina teachers have an extra year to qualify to teach subjects outside their field because of delays in notifying teachers of deficiencies in meeting certification requirements.

The state Board of Education agreed Wednesday to give teachers the extra year — until 1985 — to get the additional course credits to qualify to teach in areas outside their expertise.

The board also heard a report indicating that almost all school units are complying with a 1983 General Assembly mandate to give fulltime classroom teachers a duty-free period each day.

"Nine-five percent of them do not yet know whether or not they have deficiencies and, if so, what they are," said J. Arthur Taylor, director of the Division of Certification.

A teacher is considered out of field if he or she is assigned to teach more than half of the time outside his or her area of certification.

"Few (teachers) would get their note of deficiency in time to register for spring classes," Taylor said, adding that the yearlong delay would let teachers take additional courses to become certified in new areas.

Officials said 8,000 individual forms for adding certification have been sent to the state and 224 certificates have been processed and returned to the school units.

Those assigned out of field this year were given provisional certificates and expected to begin working toward full certification before the 1984-85 school year. The board's action extends that deadline to 1985.

1985-86 school year, a move that's expected to affect about 14,000 of the state's approximately 60,000 teachers.

The Board of Education adopted the certification guidelines in May, after more than two years of study.

Jim Burch, a deputy assistant superintendent, told the board a recent survey showed that only 183 teachers, or less than 1 percent, are not being provided a daily duty-free period as required by the Legislature.

The survey was based on responses from 125 of 142 local school units.

The Legislature set aside approximately $2.1 million a year for the duty-free periods. Of the school units responding, 49 said they used the money to hire additional personnel in elementary schools, 33 in junior or middle highs and 16 in senior highs.

The study indicated that before the Legislature ordered duty-free periods, many high schools but few elementary schools already offered teachers that option.

The survey showed that elementary schools tend to offer duty-free lunches while junior and senior highs offer free class periods.

Eighty-five units were offering duty-free lunches in elementary schools, 55 in junior or middle highs and 61 in senior highs. Sixty-six units were offering a free class period in elementary schools, 95 in junior and middle highs and 101 in senior highs.

The length of the free time ranged from about 30 minutes in elementary schools to 46 minutes in senior highs.

Scientists Say Nuclear War Can Mean Extinction

By LEE SIEGEL
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Survivors of a nuclear war would struggle for survival in darkness and cold and might face mass extinction much like the dinosaurs that are believed to have died after an immense meteorite struck the Earth, scientists say.

"The effects of nuclear war unfortunately have significant parallels to the effects of a giant meteorite," California Institute of Technology geophysicist Thomas J. Ahrens said Wednesday.

Ahrens and other researchers at the American Geophysical Union's meeting conducted a session entitled "Geophysical and Geochemical Consequences of Nuclear Explosions," which drew a standing-room-only crowd of up to 500 scientists.

The studies presented during the session were developed through crude theoretical "models" in which the researchers used data on the atmospheric effects of nuclear tests and natural disasters such as volcanic eruptions to sketch a picture of what Earth might look like after a nuclear war.

Until about two years ago, scientists and policymakers believed a nuclear war would kill a relatively small percentage of the Earth's population in combat zones and didn't believe that widespread deaths could result from disruption of the climate, said Brian Toon, of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center.

But now scientists are moving closer to the long-held belief of "the average man on the street (who) already thought the world would end," he said.

Smoke and dust sent into the atmosphere from cities and forests ignited by a nuclear exchange "could have a major climatic impact — prolonged darkness and gloom, subfreezing land temperatures and dramatic disturbances in weather and precipitation — a harsh 'nuclear winter' in any season," said Richard Turco, a senior scientist at R&D Associates, a Marina del Rey think-tank.

Sixty five million years ago, the dinosaurs and most other animal life on Earth died in the largest mass extinction in the geologic record. Ahrens said there is "strong evidence" to support the still controversial view that the cause was a massive meteorite smashing into the planet.

Both a meteorite and a nuclear war "would loft tremendous amounts of ejecta (debris) into the atmosphere in the form of fine particles distributed worldwide," he added.

"In the case of a five-mile diameter meteorite or comet impact 65 million years ago," Ahrens said, "the resulting dust cloud blocked the sun, reducing global temperatures, leading to a massive extinction of marine organisms, the collapse of the ocean food chain and the extinction of 90 percent of the animal life of that time."

Ahrens said the theorized meteorite collision with the Earth released 10,000 times the energy of a nuclear war, but that the sun-blocking dust and debris sent into the atmosphere by both catastrophes could have similar results.

Toon said the bulk of previous studies on the effects of nuclear war "suggest things would be very nasty, but not cause mass extinction."

However, new studies to be published later this month in Science magazine suggest such extinction is a possibility for the survivors of nuclear blasts, he said.

"We must take into account that the indirect effects felt by survivors of a nuclear war will be as serious as the war itself," and possibly more serious, said Paul Crutzen, of West Germany's Max Planck Institute of Chemistry.

"Large portions of the biosphere (the environment for Earth's living things) will be wiped out — it's a possibility," he said.

The new conclusions could cause some Third World countries, banking on surviving a superpower war, to "put more pressure on the big guys to be more careful," said Stephen Schneider, a climatologist at the National Center for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colo.

Joseph B. Knox, a scientist at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, said uncertainties about the aftereffects of nuclear war "constitute a new element of deterrence."

Lawmen Hunting Pair In Area Robbery Case

Pitt County authorities and agents of the FBI and SBI continued their search today for two men who forced their way into the home of a local banker, tied up his wife and fled with assorted personal property, Sheriff Ralph Tyson said.

Tyson said the agents were asked to assist in the late morning incident Wednesday at the home of C.D. Langston on N.C. 11 just beyond Carolina East Mall. Langston is president of First State Bank of Greenville and Winterville.

Tyson said Langston's wife, Mary, told officers that two men, one of them armed with a handgun, forced their way into her home, tied her up in a chair using an extension cord, and gagged her. Mrs. Langston reported that the intruders then went through the house, taking various items, including sterling silver pieces and jewelry.

The sheriff said that, while the robbery was taking place, a friend of Mrs. Langston's, Roxie Waters, arrived and was at the back door when the two men ran from the house. Mrs. Waters told officers that the men pushed the back door against her and grabbed her pocketbook before fleeing.

According to Tyson, the men apparently fled in a vehicle that had been stolen earlier Wednesday from the parking lot at Carolina East Mall. He said the car, owned by Mrs. Tommy Lee Harrell of Ayden, was found about 30 minutes after the robbery about a mile from the Langston home in the area behind the mall. Tyson said the vehicle's motor was still running, the front doors were open, and assorted pieces of silver, jewelry and money were found scattered on the ground near the car.

Tyson said the men apparently abandoned the Harrell car and left in another vehicle.

He said neither lady was injured in the incident, which was reported at 11:31 a.m. He said Mrs. Langston noted that the men wore ski masks over their faces during the robbery.

Tyson said officers have not yet completed an inventory of the items taken in the incident.

Pitt Schools Air 'Viewpoint'

The school principal's job as an instructional manager will be the topic of this week's "Pitt County Schools' Viewpoint," a radio show aired on several local stations.

Host Barry Gaskins will talk with principals Beth Ward and Charles Long.

The show is scheduled at the following times and stations: Saturday, 7:30 a.m. WITN-FM, 8:30 a.m. WGHM-AM, 8:25 a.m. WOOW-AM; Sunday, 8:30 a.m. WRQR-FM; 1:06 p.m. WNCT-AM, and Monday, 3:05 p.m. WBZQ-FM.

For further information contact Pitt County Community Schools at 752-6106, extension 249.

Junior Wins Scholarship

Karen W. Sneed, a junior accounting major at East Carolina University, has been awarded a Credit Women International scholarship for spring semester.

The $200 award, sponsored annually by the Greenville Chapter of Credit Women International, recognizes outstanding scholarship and citizenship. The recipient must have graduated from a high school in Pitt County.

An active member of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, Ms. Sneed teaches a Sunday School class and leads a Fellowship of Christian Athletes group at J.H. Rose High School.

Plant Breeder Honored

Plant breeder Mark L. Grimsley of Greenville was honored for his contribution to the tobacco industry at a recent Tobacco Day '83 luncheon at North Carolina State University.

Grimsley has been employed by Speight Seed Farms of Winterville for the past 25 years. He has been responsible for developing and releasing 16 varieties of flue-cured tobacco, including Speight G-28 and Speight G-70.

Hart To Be Interviewed

Four Pitt County high school representatives will be among 100 North Carolina teen-agers and teachers who will interview Sen. Gary Hart, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president, during a national live television broadcast Friday.

Delano Wilson and David Wiggins of Ayden-Grifton, Peggy Jenkins of North Pitt and Brian Windham of Farmville will interview the candidates on a 90-minute program which will air at 7:30 p.m. Friday on station C-SPAN, the Cable Satellite Public Affairs Network.

Lecture Set On Algonkians

The Algonkian Indians, the people who met the English on Roanoke Island 400 years ago, will be discussed by an East Carolina University archaeologist Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in room 244 of Mendenhall Student Center on the ECU campus.

Dr. Davis S. Phelps, a professor of anthropology, will discuss the "Advances in Algonkian Archaeology" in his lecture sponsored by Sigma Xi, the university's scientific research society. The lecture will be open to the public.

Phelps is currently engaged in a two-year project aimed at locating and identifying some of the more than 200 Algonkian sites in coastal North Carolina. Included in his research, funded by a $140,000 grant from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, is an effort to find the site of the Algonkian village that was on Roanoke Island when Sir Walter Raleigh attempted to establish a foothold on the continent in 1585.

Cox And Pugh Honored

Percy Cox and George Pugh, who conclude their tenures tonight as mayor and city councilman, respectively, were honored this week with a surprise party given by the city staff. The gathering was attended by 72 people, including city and Greenville Utilities employees, county commissioners and Rep. Ed Warren of Greenville.

Following a roast of the outgoing officials, Cox and Pugh were each presented a book of memory compiled by the staff, containing photographs of the city's 390 employees by departments and divisions with personal notes by many of the workers. The staff presented each official with a collage done by parks and recreation department members showing Cox and Pugh in situations symbolic of their tenures in office. Silver trays were also presented to the retiring board members.

Driver Is Charged

Joe Frank Sparkman of 605 Bancroft Ave. was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 10:30 a.m. collision Wednesday at the intersection of Fifth Street and Moyewood Drive.

Officers said the Sparkman car collided with an auto driven by Kimberlee Haddock Stallings of Route 6, Greenville, causing $350 damage to the Stallings car and $200 damage to the Sparkman car.

Convenience Store Robbed

Greenville police are looking for a man who, armed with a pistol, took an undetermined amount of money from the Fast Fare at 425 Hooker Road Wednesday night.

Detective Sgt. John Ennis said a man wearing a black-and-white striped scarf as a mask entered the store about 9:18 p.m., produced a pistol and demanded the money from the cash drawer.

Ennis said the clerk removed the entire cash tray from the drawer and gave it to the robber, who then left the building. The robber was last seen running toward the rear of the building.

The robber was described as a black man, about 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing 150 to 160 pounds. He was wearing a long grey wool overcoat and a dark cap.

Gospel Sing Scheduled

A gospel sing featuring Heaven Bound will be held tonight starting at 7:30 at Foursquare Christian Center located on N.C. 11 between Winterville and Ayden.

In 1982, Heaven Bound had the top gospel song of the year and this year were voted one of the top 10 gospel groups in the nation.

A miracle service will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m., with Marquita Clevenger of Jacksonville as the speaker. She is a featured speaker in Aglow Chapters.

Larceny Charge Filed

A 29-year-old Greenville man was arrested Wednesday by Pitt County deputies and charged with the October larceny of a bank bag containing over $29,000 in cash and checks from an area automobile dealership.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Jimmie Lee Harris of 401 Darden Drive was charged with taking the bag from the office of Rex Smith Chevrolet on N.C. 11 at Ayden on Oct. 25. He said the firm reported the bag contained $28,847 in checks and seven $100 bills. The dealership stopped payment on the checks, Tyson said.

Bond for Harris was set at $5,000.

West To Speak Monday

Superintendent Eddie West of Pitt County schools will be the guest speaker at the annual Ladies Night of the Pactolus Ruritan Club on Monday at 7 p.m.

Dr. West will speak on issues concerning public education in the 1980s and how they will affect Pitt County schools.

Madrid Airport Death Toll Set At 93

By SUSAN LINNEE
Associated Press Writer
MADRID, Spain (AP) — Survivors of a plane collision that killed 93 people wandered through fog so dense it had closed Madrid's airport to incoming traffic.

A baggage handler said he heard the two planes crash but had to be led to the site because he could not see the wreck, and an American survivor said neither plane should have been allowed to take off in the fog. Barajas International Airport has no ground radar.

The collision Wednesday between an Aviac DC-9 and an Iberia Air Lines Boeing 727 was the second major air disaster in Madrid in 11 days. But it bore eerie similarities to a 1977 collision when two jumbo jets collided at another fog-bound Spanish airport.

Transport Minister Enrique Barón and Iberia President Carlos Espinosa de los Monteros said the DC-9 got lost in the fog while taxiing and collided with the midsection of the 727, then went under it and burst into flames. The 727, preparing for takeoff, was heading down the runway at about 100 mph, officials said. Spokesmen for Iberia, Spain's national airline, and Aviac, a domestic airliner, said 50 passengers and one crew member aboard Iberia Flight No. 350 to Rome died. All 37 passengers and five crew members of Aviac Flight No. 134 to the northern Spanish city of Santander were killed, they said.

The Iberia plane was carrying 84 passengers and nine crew members. Forty Japanese, 12 of them honeymooners, were among the dead. Only six Japanese survived.

An estimated 23 of the survivors of the 727 jetliner were hospitalized, officials said.

"We all heard the explosions, but no one could find the planes," said Antonio Rodrigo, a baggage handler for Iberia who was loading an aircraft at the time of the collision. "We ran out towards the noise. A survivor had to lead us to the wrecks."

Thomas Goltz, 39, a Madrid resident from El Paso, Texas, and his wife Sydney, 32, survived the crash with minor bruises. Goltz, manager of the Singer

Co. in Madrid, said neither plane should have been allowed to take off.

"It (the 727) was just about to take off when we heard this big crunching sound of metal. The plane sort of broke up in pieces and smoke started to fill the cabin," Goltz told The Associated Press by telephone.

"I grabbed my wife and jumped out when the (back) door was open We found ourselves in a sort of field with the co-pilot and a badly burned man. We wandered around in the fog for about 15 minutes and finally were picked up by some people in a jeep."

Oknat Berkawitz, an Israeli who was sitting by the door in the left front section of the Iberia plane, told reporters she heard an explosion, unbuckled her seatbelt, took several steps and "found myself on the ground in the fog."

On Nov. 27, 181 people were killed when a Boeing 747 jumbo jet of Avianca, the Colombian national airlines, crashed five minutes before landing in Madrid on a flight from Paris. Eleven people survived.

Investigators have indicated the pilot of the jumbo misread altitude indicators and believed his aircraft was flying higher than it actually was.

But airline officials said Wednesday's accident was similar to the March 1977 Canary Islands disaster in which two jumbo jets collided on the ground in heavy fog, killing 582 people — aviation history's worst crash.

After Wednesday's collision, three dazed Japanese couples on their honeymoons, the only survivors of the Japanese tour group, were taken to a Madrid hotel by Japanese Ambassador Eikichi Hayashiya.

In Tokyo, relatives gathered at a hotel to await final word on the fate of their loved ones.

"I can't conceive of anything like this happening in Japan. A domestic flight here would not end up this way," said Yoshiyuki Tada, a brother of Michiyo Tada Shinozuka, who had been on her honeymoon.

Kazuko Yuki, an aunt of 36-year-old Shizuko Onishi, said, "I'm resigned to the fact that Shizuko died She went all by herself to Europe and I keep thinking if only she had been with a friend, she could at least have held

Principal Talks To Academic Boosters

Rose High Principal Howard Hurt spoke to the Rose Academic Boosters Club recently about the school's new policy on extra-curricular activity eligibility program, according to a club spokesman.

Hurt told the students that eligibility for athletics will be determined by grades each marking period. More specifically, if a student fails two subjects, a conference will be held with parents to determine if the student should continue extra-curricular participation.

"If the decision is made that the student can continue, a close monitoring system will be established. If the student fails three or more subjects, the student will not be eligible to participate for at least three weeks. At the end of three weeks, a participation decision will be made based on the degree of improvement," Hurt said.

Hurt also appointed the following people to the executive committee during the meeting: Joan VanScoy, Anne May, Dr. Billy Jones, Mary Roscoe, Charles M. Dickens, Mary Anglea Lee and Daisy Best. The following were appointed to the Principal's Advisory Committee: Dr. Billy Bost, Betty Hardee, Mary Akinkeroth, and Betsy Allen.

Students and advisers also discussed scheduled activities to upgrade academics at the school including the all-A honor roll, honors banquet, medical science honors program, model math/science program, drop-out prevention program, quiz bowl and the image committee.

School's Accreditation Is Termed Vindication

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina A&T State University's School of Nursing's accreditation is a "vindication" for the school and the result of hard work, university officials say.

N.C. A&T's School of Nursing, once endangered because its graduates did poorly on the state nursing exam, received accreditation from the National League of Nursing, officials announced Wednesday.

"The latest accreditation makes us all very elated," said A&T Chancellor Edward B. Fort after the announcement was made in New York by officials of the national organization.

"It is a vindication of the master plan initiated for the School of Nursing nearly two years ago. It also validates the outstanding work of Dean (Marietta) Raines, the faculty, and the nursing students. They've done an outstanding job."

The accreditation means the A&T program has been accredited on a state and national level.

"We now have met the requirements for both of our accrediting agencies," said Ms. Raines. "We have worked extremely hard to make sure that we were meeting all of the criteria. We were working together to do it."

A National League of Nursing team visited the A&T campus last October after issuing it a "two-year accreditation with warning" in 1981. The new accreditation lasts eight years.

The school's nursing program was put on probation by the North Carolina Board of Nursing in 1978, and officials warned it could be

Corvette Winner Happy To Be Passenger In Car

There's a little fourth-grader from Seal Beach who has some of the hottest wheels in town — a 1984 Corvette that she's still seven years too young to drive.

Freckle-faced Amy Barlow, who won the sleek machine and a $25,000 check in a restaurant contest, was thrilled to cut the ribbon on the auto Wednesday. But reality may set in April 15.

"I believe she does have to pay taxes on it," said Judy Barlow, mother of the pigtailed winner. "But whatever is left over is a lot more than she had before."

Unlike the hard-driving "little old lady" from Pasadena immortalized in a Beach Boys song of the

Two-Year-Old Is Victim In Fire

RAMSEUR, N.C. (AP) — A 2-year-old Ramseur area girl died Wednesday morning in a fire at a relative's residence.

Randolph County Sheriff's Department Det. Lt. Don Andrews said Lisa Ann Robbins was visiting with a cousin in the small white frame house when the fire started. The 2-year-old lived in the trailer next door, authorities said.

Andrews said there were three people in the residence at the time of the fire, which apparently resulted during an effort to start up a fire in a wood stove. Both were children an 11-year-old girl and a boy of undetermined age, authorities said. Both closed down without quick improvement.

Critics said the program had unqualified faculty and students, didn't provide enough clinical experience for or supervision of students, and assigned students to sub-par facilities for training.

But in the fall of 1981, the school implemented new admission standards and retention policies for nursing students.

Last Sept. 10, officials said the program had improved and that 78.9 percent of the nursing graduates had passed the state exam.

"We have been able to accomplish this by revising the nursing school's retention standards and by providing programs to strengthen the students, such as a special review session," Fort said at the time.

Grimsley Resigns To Aid Hunt Staff

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The deputy secretary of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development will replace NRCD Secretary Joseph Grimsley, who is resigning to direct Gov. Jim Hunt's expected bid for the U.S. Senate.

Hunt said on Wednesday that Grimsley will resign this month and will be replaced in the $51,636-a-year post by Jim Summers, deputy secretary of the department since Feb. 1, 1981. Hunt said Summers, 55, will assume the job on Dec. 31.

Grimsley's new official title is director of the Jim Hunt Exploratory Committee, but a news release from the group left little doubt that the committee has finished exploring and is ready to begin campaigning.

"We're going to run a strong primary campaign and a tough issues campaign in the fall," Grimsley said in a prepared statement.

Hunt is expected to challenge Republican Sen. Jesse Helms' re-election bid.

"We know we're going to have to work hard to win this election, but we believe Gov. Hunt will win it the same way he's won his past three statewide campaigns, with solid issues, an inclusive organization and adequate financing," Grimsley said.

Grimsley, 47, managed Hunt's campaigns for governor in 1976 and 1980 and his drive to be lieutenant governor in 1972. He served as Administration secretary from 1977-1981 except for a time when he took leave without pay to direct Hunt's gubernatorial campaign.

Hunt appointed him NRCD secretary in July 1981. Grimsley also was a special assistant to Hunt as lieutenant governor from September 1974 through January 1976.

Congressmen To Get Pay Hike

money automatically is there under "permanent law" — regardless of how much Congress decides to pay itself.

Meanwhile, the provision was in place applying scheduled pay raises for white collar government workers to members of the House and Senate so long as Congress does nothing to exempt itself from the increases.

Congress did nothing to block the next increase before it adjourned for the year on Nov. 18, thus members automatically will receive the January pay boost.

Also effective Jan. 1, senators' outside income earned from speeches, appearance and writings will be limited to 30 percent of their congressional salaries. House members already are under the same limitation.

Columbia Delay...

cargo were heading home with a treasure chest of scientific knowledge gathered during 10 unprecedented days that proved the value of humans as researchers in space.

"See you back on Earth," Young told Mission Control as he and his crewmates gathered in Columbia's cabin for a final telecast Wednesday night.

Young and pilot Brewster Shaw were to guide the shuttle, with Spacelab in its cargo bay, to the landing.

Once back on Earth, Young and Shaw will fly to their homes near Houston's Johnson Space Center. But Spacelab scientists Garriott, Lichtenberg, Parker and Ulf Merbold will spend a week at Edwards undergoing medical tests to help validate the findings of tests conducted in orbit.

The crew was returning with mixed emotions.

"We'd sure like to spend another 10 days up here, but I don't think they'll let us do that," Lichtenberg said Wednesday. "But it will be good to get back."

For Young, 53, who has made more space trips than any other human, this sixth one may be his last. He hinted before the flight that he might call it quits after this one.

He would go out satisfied that he commanded the most ambitious and most successful manned science mission yet.

Plaudits were ringing in the astronauts' ears even before they headed home.

Mission Control played them taped recordings of congratulatory messages on the international mission from the Chancellor of Austria, Canada's minister of science and technology and the prime ministers of Italy, The Netherlands and Belgium.

Their countries were among 14 whose scientists contributed experiments to Spacelab — which was built at a cost of $1-billion by the European Space Agency and donated to America's space transportation system, whose core is the reusable shuttle.

Researchers waited at Edwards for the scores of samples, thousands of frames of film and reels of data and videotape coming back from space.

Researchers credited the astronaut-scientists — Garriott, Lichtenberg, Parker and Merbold — with rescuing much of the scientific return. Working in two non-stop shifts, the four repaired a number of instruments, revised experiments to give new findings and thought up experiments of their own.

Forbes Winner Realtors' Award

The Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors has named Blanche Forbes of Century 21 B. Forbes Agency here as recipient of the annual Realtor of the Year award.

Ms. Forbes was installed recently as president of the Board of Realtors. A Pitt County native, Ms. Forbes has operated the B. Forbes Agency for three and a half years and has been involved in the real estate business for eight years. She chaired the chapter's Make America Better committee for 1982.

Ms. Forbes, a resident of 803 Greenville Blvd., has three daughters and two grandchildren.

The Realtors also honored Jean Hopper as recipient of the chapter's first Outstanding Service Award. She was 1983 chairman of the Make America Better project, which won state and national awards for community betterment and patriotism, and a state citation for crime prevention.

Ms. Hopper has been in real estate for 10 years and has been associated with Aldridge and Southerland in Greenville for the past two years. She is president of the Women's Council of Realtors and secretary-treasurer of the Board of Realtors. She and her husband, Bill, have three daughters and two sons.

Bob Hope May Go To Beirut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Hope, who has entertained the troops during the holidays starting back in World War II, may not be home for Christmas once again.

A United Services Organization spokesman says the 80-year-old comedian may be entertaining U.S. Marines and sailors stationed in Lebanon.

Details have yet to be worked out, USO spokesman

Paul Regaski said Wednesday.

Pentagon sources, who spoke only on the condition they not be named, said if Hope makes the trip this year he probably will not land in Lebanon but will give his shows aboard Navy ships offshore, with Marines being ferried out to the U.S. fleet.

"It is too hot in the Beirut area for him to go there," one source said.

$1 Billion Price To Cleanup Bay

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Cleaning up the Chesapeake Bay could cost $1 billion and must not be blocked "by those who know the cost of everything and the value of nothing," a U.S. senator says.

Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., speaking Wednesday to a gathering of federal officials and those from states surrounding the bay, called for cooperation in cleansing the Chesapeake of toxic chemicals and other pollutants that have caused fish and plant life to decline.

A massive federal study last year blamed the region's population growth for much of the problem. "The time for study is now over,"

Pope Asks To Meet Detained Assassin

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II has asked to meet with the Turkish gunman who shot him in 1981 so he can personally convey his forgiveness, Italian newspapers said today.

Leading Italian papers, including La Repubblica of Rome and La Stampa of Turin, cited "authoritative Vatican sources" as saying the pope has asked to meet with Agca.

The Vatican announced earlier this week that the pontiff will visit a Rome prison during the Christmas season as part of the celebrations for the current Holy Year of Redemption. It said the prison probably would be the Rebibbia facility where Mehmet Ali Agca is serving a life sentence for the May 13, 1981, attack on the pope and that the visit probably will take place Dec. 26.

However, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, the Vatican's chief spokesman, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that he did not know of any such meeting being planned between the pope and Agca.

The papers said John Paul wishes to tell Agca in person that he forgives him for the attack in St. Peter's Square. Five days after the shooting, the pontiff "sincerely pardoned" his attacker, an action which had no effect on legal proceedings against Agca.

The papers added that Vatican officials have been working with the Italian Justice Ministry on the numerous details a possible face-to-face meeting would involve.

Pope John XXIII celebrated Mass at Rome's Regina Coeli prison on Dec. 26, 1958. Pope Paul VI celebrated Mass there on April 9, 1964.

national reconciliation can continue and lead to a truly representative executive force."

Cheysson was referring to the Lebanese national reconciliation talks in Geneva, which are currently in recess.

The U.S. spokesman said there wasn't any direct criticism of the U.S. air strikes against Syrian positions in Lebanon Sunday, which Washington said were acts of self-defense. But he added that "everybody agreed that escalation is not the name of the game."

A British source, who also insisted in anonymity, said the four partners agreed on the right of each to act in self-defense in Lebanon. But he said stress was placed on the role of the multinational force as "a peaceful one."

The U.S. official said Washington doesn't rule out having at least some of the Marines spend their night on ships offshore, but this wasn't discussed here. If such an arrangement were made, he said, it wouldn't be a weakening of U.S. participation.

"Any suggestion that there is any pending withdrawal of American ground forces from Lebanon has no foundation that I know of," he said.

After the breakfast meeting, the four foreign ministers joined the 12 other foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance for the start of their two-day strategy conference. The ministers will be searching for ways to keep open contacts with the Soviet Union on nuclear disarmament and are likely to continue discussions about the situation in Lebanon.

There was no immediate reaction from the ministers on the Soviet Union's suspension today of long-range missile negotiations in Geneva. The suspension eliminated the last superpower forum for negotiating nuclear arsenals.

Billions Of Bits Of Data From Spacelab Research

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

GREENBELT, Md. (AP) — The world has watched the Spacelab astronauts perform hundreds of experiments producing billions of pieces of data. Ever wonder what happens to it all?

The 10-day mission of Spacelab, scheduled to end Thursday when the space shuttle Columbia lands in California, has generated the expected outpouring of data from the more than 70 experiments aboard.

Billions of bits of invaluable data, which when put together form the numbers, words and pictures that scientists will study, flow from Spacelab each hour.

Scientists and technicians at the Goddard Space Flight Center, near Washington, are on the receiving end of a long electronic pipeline handling the information.

And, with the help of supercomputers, high-speed tape recorders and millions of dollars worth of electronics, they say they have recovered almost every bit of data.

William P. Barnes, head of the high-rate data handling group in Goddard's information processing division, says data from Spacelab flows in at an average rate of 1 million bits per second. And during peak periods, the rate can go up to 48 million bits every second.

"This is a lot of information, by any measure," Barnes said in an interview. "I did a little calculation and figured that if nine days worth of data, coming in at 1 million bits a second, were put into book form, they would stack up to be 2½ times the height of the Washington monument."

The $1 billion, European-built science workshop in the shuttle's cargo bay pours out information from 16 data channels and three voice circuits. This information is relayed through the shuttle to a special tracking and data relay satellite. If temporarily out of range, recorders on the shuttle store the data for later transmission to the satellite.

The satellite retransmits the information to Earth, primarily to a ground terminal at White Sands, N.M. From there, the data goes back up into space to a regular communications satellite and bounces back down to Goddard's Spacelab data processing facility.

At this facility, all data is recorded on high-density magnetic tape recorders and checked for quality by computers and other special equipment. The Spacelab input processing system does initial sorting and cataloging, and makes sure data from each experiment stays together.

This system transfers the information to low-density tapes that can be read by ordinary computers. These tapes go to the Spacelab output processing system which does the initial analysis work and makes copies for the researchers.

Since this first Spacelab mission is sponsored by the European Space Agency, 60 percent of the data will go directly to European scientists from input processing system before the normal second stage of processing, Barnes said.

The space agency has agreed to get all preliminary data from European experiments to researchers within 30 days after the end of the mission and all second-stage information from the output processing system to them in 60 days.

"We shipped the first computer tapes to Europe on Monday," Barnes said, "and I don't anticipate any problems getting it all out on time."

"The system has worked essentially as expected and we are very happy with it," he continued. "Sure, there have been a few problems but nothing major. The key thing is that we have lost no data."

Tobacco Quota Cut Said Set

By The Associated Press
Federal officials are expected to announce next week that they have set 13.5 percent as the new maximum amount the 1984 flue-cured tobacco marketing quota can be cut, a Raleigh newspaper says.

Agriculture Secretary John Block will announce the quota, the amount of tobacco that can be marketed. The News and Observer of Raleigh said in its Thursday editions.

The deadline for setting the quota is Dec. 15.

A spokesman for tobacco growers said Wednesday he was optimistic the cut would be lower, but the newspaper said that according to sources the Reagan administration is under pressure to keep the quota cut at 13.5 percent to help reduce the federal deficit.

Leaders of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina met with Block on Tuesday in an effort to hold down the size of the quota cut.

T. Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the association, said Block was "extremely attentive and sympathetic" to the growers' plea that the quota reduction be kept small.

Blalock said the 13.5 cut would be "extremely negative" for growers.

Blalock said the group told Block that another quota cut after the 10 percent reduction in 1983 would hurt tobacco exports because foreign buyers want a stable and full supply of tobacco.

Last week, the U.S. Department of Agriculture was reportedly considering up to a 16.5 percent cut in the quota. That was the maximum cut allowed under the old tobacco program law, which was changed last week when President Reagan signed new tobacco legislation.

The new rules include several program changes, including a continuation of the freeze on tobacco price supports for the 1984 and possibly the 1985 crops. The level of price supports and the quota are the two main devices for controlling federally supported tobacco surpluses.

See Growth In Economy

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's economy will continue to grow quickly in 1984, according to forecasters from the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and First Union National Bank.

The N.C. Forecast predicted Tuesday the gross state product — a sum of the state's goods and services — will increase 6.3 percent this year and another 4.5 percent next year.

The projections revise upward the forecast's previous view that North Carolina's economy would grow by 4.2 percent this year and 4 percent in 1984.

"1984 is looking a lot more like 1983," said Robert Allsbrook, vice president and economist at First Union.

The latest available figures show the state's economy grew by 17.7 percent in this year's second quarter — the highest quarterly growth rate since the third quarter of 1961 — as businesses rebuilt their inventories and consumer confidence improved, he said.

Eager, Worldwide Market For Even Stolen Gold

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — With 6,800 little gold bars in hand, the thieves who pulled off Britain's biggest robbery could have eager buyers all over the world.
That's the opinion of police, security companies and the insurers who are paying out $36.1 million to the still unidentified owners of the three tons of gold.
Police announced the first arrest in the case Tuesday. Anthony John Black, 31, a security guard at the Brinks-Met warehouse, was charged with conspiracy in the Nov. 26 robbery. He was ordered held for three days of questioning.
But there was no word on other members of the gang, believed to number six men, or the whereabouts of the gold, which, if stacked, takes up the space of a twin bed.

Some officials fear the gold was quickly slipped into clandestine markets abroad.
Since the Bronze Age, the lustrous, heavy metal has been molded into shapes that have survived in their original form for centuries, such as King Tut's coffin with its unique signature of ancient Egypt.
But gold can also be anonymous and untraceable, and at almost $400 a troy ounce, very desirable.
Thieves can melt modern bullion bars to remove identifying serial numbers and assayers' stamps, and then slip them into any number of illicit markets to be transformed into jewelry, bought for hoarding or used to pay for other illicit goods such as arms or drugs.

"Gold is a commodity which is very easily disposed of in the world, particularly if it is melted down and you change its description," John Wheeler, a Conservative member of Parliament, said in an interview.
"You've only got to think of its value in the Middle East, the Far East, Taiwan, or any other place," said Wheeler, who specializes in police matters and is chairman of the British Security Industry Association.
David Powis, a deputy assistant police commissioner, said there are numerous "no questions asked" markets for gold around the world. But he refused to give any further information for fear of tipping the direction of the police investigation.

Asked at a news conference whether it would be hard to dispose of the gold,

Powis said, "It would not be difficult knowing the amount of gold smuggled on the international scene."
Others disagreed.
A source with one of the insurers, who insisted on anonymity, said, "It will be difficult to get rid of gold in that quantity, but the most likely market is the backstreet jewelry market around the world."

It would have to be melted down and would take some time to disperse, the source said, indicating that the insurers "believe the thieves still have it."
The recipient of the stolen hoard could also have been someone in the secret world of international arms trading, said a second insurance company official who asked not to be identified.
"They can handle large amounts of gold, often paid clandestinely. They would want payment in gold if they don't want the transaction to be traced," he speculated.
Other possible markets are in the Middle East, South Asia and the Far East, where hoarding of precious metals is a traditional hedge against hard times or political upheaval.

Illicit gold could be slipped into the legal market and end up as bracelets in India — one of many places where a substantial part of a family's net worth goes on the matriarch's arm or ankle.
Gold hoarded in Vietnam during decades of war has been used to bribe communist Vietnamese officials and buy a way out for boatloads of refugees.
Gold also has been a vehicle for tax fraud in Britain. A court in London is hearing a case involving evasion of $9 million in sales tax on $60 million worth of gold.

The gimmick, according to the testimony, was to buy South African Kruggerand gold coins, which were not subject to the 15-percent VAT when imported into Britain.
Then the coins were melted and sold legitimately as bullion bars, with the purchaser paying the seller the routine 15 percent sales tax, known here as Value Added Tax.
The five defendants are accused of pocketing the $9 million VAT instead of paying it to the government.

Charge Threat To Kill 3 Men

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Police have charged a Winston-Salem man with threatening to kill three people in the Hall of Justice, then breaking a patrolman's nose while fighting with police outside a car dealership.

James Calvin Segers, 46, was accused Tuesday of punching officer M.E. O'Brien in the face and biting him on the right thigh. He was also charged with two counts of resisting arrest and one count of communicating threats.

Economists Watch Inflation Prospects For 1984

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation, the economy's untamed lion of just a few years ago, has been quieted recently and most economists say there's no reason for it to roar back next year.

Many, though, are predicting prices will climb somewhat more than they did this year, and some are even keeping a watchful eye out for worrisome flare-ups later in the year.

Paul Volcker, who as chairman of the Federal Reserve is the nation's chief inflation-fighter, says, "We are in a period of testing."

In a recent speech, he said, "Memories of inflation — and of failed anti-inflation programs — remain strong. The temptation to return to habits learned in the previous decade — to anticipate inflation, to take precautionary steps to protect oneself, or to make up for losses of the past in one fell swoop — could return."

Adds Donald Ratajczak, economic forecaster at Georgia State University in Atlanta, "This is a period of lasting opportunities ... 1984 is our year of really solidifying the gain" made against high inflation rates.

The inflation rate, as measured by the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index, is expected to rise approximately 4 percent this year, just about the same as the 3.9 percent of 1982, which was the best price-showing since the early 1970s.

It was 8.9 percent in 1981 and 12.4 percent in 1980.

For next year, analysts are predicting an advance in the range of 4 percent to 7 percent.

"We still have one more really good year left on inflation," says Allen Sinai, chief economist at Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb Inc. in New York.

Agrees Ratajczak, "I don't see any bad problem next year."

Volcker asserted recently, "Those of us responsible for monetary policy don't mean to let inflation get a head of steam again." The Federal Reserve has helped reduce price increases by restraining the amount of money in banks, checking accounts and wallets.

Even so, Lawrence Kudlow, former chief economist of the federal Office of Management and Budget and now an economic consultant here, sees warning signs already pointing to stronger price rises next year. Consumer prices, he notes, rose at a 5.5 percent annual rate in the August-October quarter.

Analysts generally attribute the recent moderation in prices to last year's recession, worldwide oil glut and abundant harvests.

Next year's expected price pickup is mostly attributed to just the reverse — the healthy economic recovery, stabilizing energy prices and the harsh summer drought which hurt the grain crop in America's breadbasket.

The price rises showing up next year, will, as usual, be most noticeable to consumers at the grocery checkout counter.

Meat prices are expected to climb in the second half of the year because of the effects of the drought. Those prices have been tumbling this fall as producers send their herds to slaughter rather than pay higher feedgrain prices. When supplies diminish next year, the trend should reverse itself, analysts say.

But prices for other goods also may rise. And analysts offer a variety of reasons for that — the economy's return to health, wage settlements negotiated by unions and the efficiency of workers on the job.

Explaining their predictions, analysts say the inflation rate usually goes up in a period of economic recovery as some manufacturers boost their prices to try to make up for lost profits. Corporate profits, though, have soared this year after sharp declines in 1982, which may ease price pressures.

Wages have not risen sharply in the past year, and some unions have even agreed to salary give-backs to hold onto industry jobs, analysts note. Added to that has been a marked increase in worker efficiency.

The salary and productivity trends put less pressure on manufacturers to pass along their increased labor costs to consumers in the form of higher prices for their products.

"Both of those factors have helped enormously in achieving a sharper reduction in inflation than almost any had anticipated," Volcker said in a recent speech.

But he said there also are "some potentially disquieting signs" because "restraint on wages and costs so far has been quite uneven among industries."

Improvement has been greatest in manufacturing and construction, he said.

"There has been less improvement," he said, in finance, utilities and service sectors. Wage hikes have been in the range of 6 percent to 8 percent, or more, he said, "seemingly signaling further upward pressures on prices in those areas."

Indeed, private analysts look for some increase next year in the amount of money unions are able to negotiate in new labor contracts and they also expect slower improvement in worker efficiency, or productivity.

Seed Supplies May Be Short

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina farmers could face shortages of seed supplies for some major crops in 1984, according to the director of the North Carolina Crop Improvement Association at North Carolina State University.

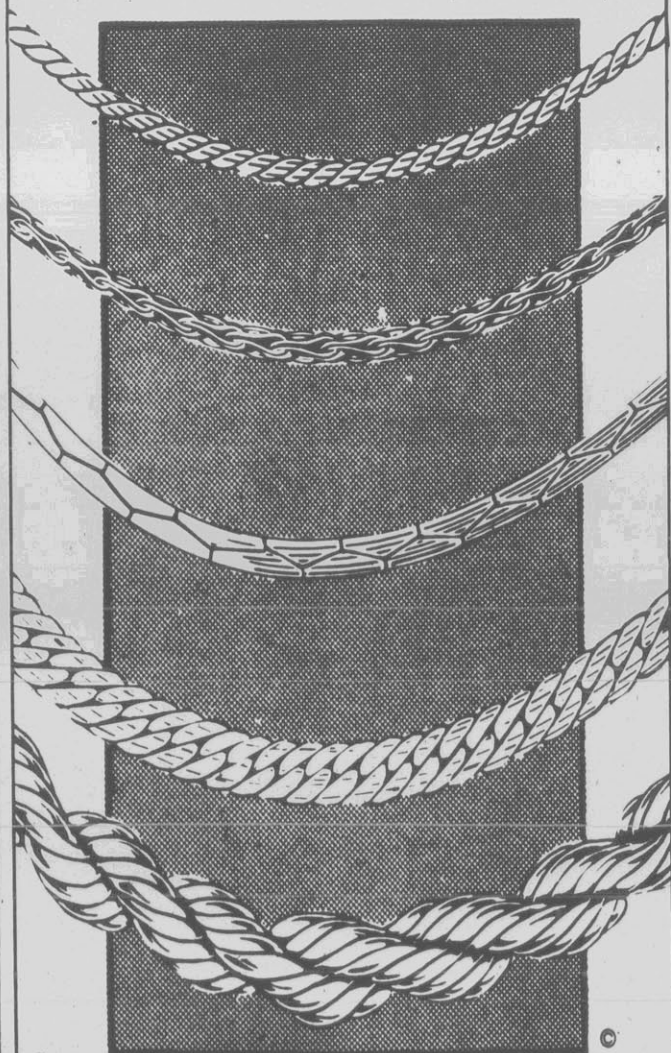

Foil McLaughlin blamed the tight supplies on last summer's drought, which cut seed yields, and larger anticipated plantings of some crops in 1984.

Peanuts and soybeans are the two major crops most likely to be affected by shortages, he said. Corn seeds are being increased this winter in Central America and Florida, and tobacco seed supplies should be adequate, he said.

State, Duke Roll To Easy Victories

By The Associated Press
Eighth-ranked North Carolina State, playing its first home since winning the NCAA basketball title last year, did just what the coach ordered en route to an easy victory over Western Carolina.

N.C. State basketball coach Jim Valvano told his players to try to take command of the game early, which is just what the Wolfpack did as it rolled to a 82-61 victory over the night.

In the only other game involving an Atlantic Coast Conference team, Duke whipped Ohio 82-63.

"We followed our game plan," Valvano said. "It was imperative that we get an early lead and make them play our way."

N.C. State never trailed in the game as it won its sixth game in seven outings before a crowd of 12,400.

Junior forward Lorenzo Charles scored a career-high 27 points and hauled down 14 rebounds, followed by Terry Gannon with 16 and Anthony Webb with 10.

"I'm really pleased with Terry Gannon," Valvano said. "I can't ask for more from him. He doesn't have blazing speed. He plays from the neck up, and he's doing an outstanding job."

Quinton Lytle led the Catamounts with 19 points, followed by Cedric Cokley with 14 and Pat Sharp with 10.

With Charles dominating playing inside and Gannon firing from the outside, N.C. State jumped out to a 23-8 lead. The Catamounts, 3-2, could get no closer than 25-18 with 5:30 left in the half.

The Wolfpack led 35-23 at intermission and upped the margin to 45-29 on Gannon's 20-footer with 14:26 left. Western Carolina trimmed the lead to 47-39 with 11:52 left. But the Wolfpack converted 17 of 20 free throws the rest of the game to take the contest.

Cozell McQueen added 13 rebounds as the Wolfpack won the battle of the boards 44-34.

In Durham, sophomore guard Johnny Dawkins scored 21 points and grabbed 10 rebounds as Duke ran its record to 5-0 — the Blue Devils' longest winning streak in four seasons.

Dawkins, who has scored 128 points in Duke's five victories, dished out a team-high six assists and hit 9 of 11 free throws. Sophomore forward Jay Bilas finished with 17 points and sophomore forward Mark Alarie added 14 points and 8 rebounds.

"I thought we were not as sharp as we have been and we struggled a little bit," Duke coach Mik Krzyzewski said. "But the thing I was pleased with was that everyone still stayed in there. There were a number of opportunities for us to hang our heads and let it effect the outcome of the game, but we didn't do that."

Junior forward Vic Alexander scored a game-high 24 points for Ohio. Sophomore guard Robert Tatum scored 14 points on long jumpers. Senior center John Devereaux, who averages 19.7 points, was burdened by early foul trouble and scored 10 points. Bilas sank all five of his first half field goal attempts as unranked Duke broke to a 43-33 lead at intermission.

The Blue Devils hit 26 of 41 free throws while Ohio, 2-2, made only 11 of 20.

Ohio coach Danny Nee said the Duke crowd bothered his team.

"It takes poise and it takes kids who can play without hearing the crowd to win on the road," he said. "Duke has a great 6th man."

Long Is 2nd Team

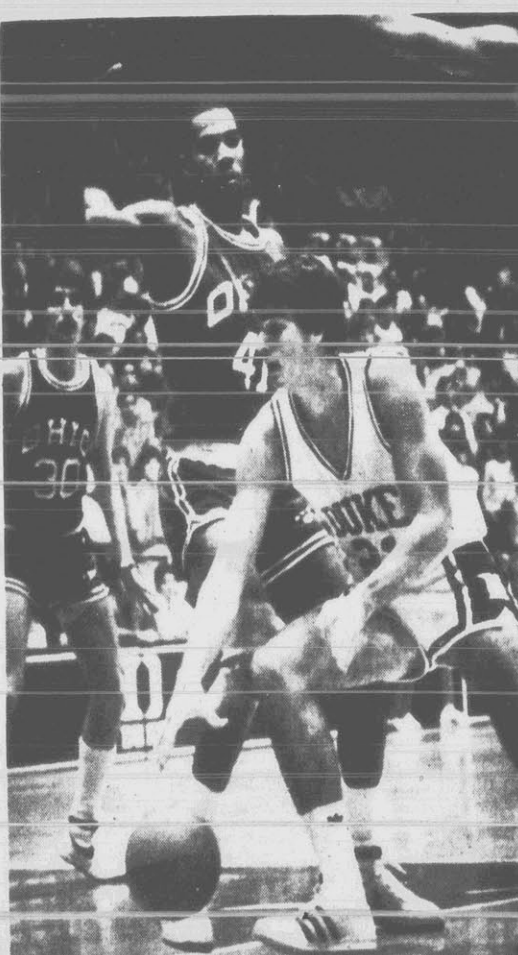

For the first time this year, East Carolina's Terry Long has failed to make first team on a major All-America football team, the United Press-International.

Long was relegated to the second team by the wire service, after making first team on the Coaches, Football Writers, Walter Camp and Associated Press All-America teams.

He had also been listed as a third team selection by Football News.

Long, a 6-0, 280-pound senior from Columbia, S.C., has also been picked to appear in the Blue-Gray Classic in Montgomery on Christmas Day, and in the Hula Bowl, in Honolulu in January.

Conley Captures Fourth Win; Williamston Takes 1st Victory

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's wrestling Vikings won the final three matches on two pins and a forfeit to sew up a 45-24 mat victory over Wilson Beddingfield last night.

The victory was the fourth straight for the unbeaten Vikings, while Beddingfield falls to 2-2 on the season.

"We're very happy with the win," Coach Milt Sherman said. "I feel we're doing well to be 4-0 at this point in the season."

Four Vikings, Reginald Moore, Shawn Hardy, Martin Anderson and Stacy McCarter all posted their fourth victories of the year to remain unbeaten.

Conley travels to New Bern on Tuesday for a 7:30 p.m. match with the Bears.

ROBERSONVILLE —

Williamston High School won its first wrestling match of the season last night, but Roanoke Rapids came away with a pair of wins in a double-dual Northeastern Conference meeting at Roanoke.

The Tigers defeated the hosting Redskins of Roanoke, 30-27, but then lost to Roanoke Rapids, 33-27. Roanoke Rapids also bested Roanoke, 48-18, to come away with a sweep.

The victory left Williamston with a 1-3 record on the young season, while Roanoke falls to 0-4.

Roanoke returns to action next Wednesday, traveling to Tarboro where Edenton will also participate. Williamston is idle until after the Christmas break.

Lady Bears Down Tigers

BEAR GRASS — Mary Rogerson and Amy Lilly each scored ten points as Bear Grass High School's girls basketball team gained a 32-28 victory over Williamston last night.

It was the opening game for both teams. The boys teams met in a scrimmage game later in the evening.

Williamston pushed out into a 9-3 lead in the first period of the game, but the Bears fought back in the second frame and turned things around — exactly — and knotted it at 12-12 at halftime.

The Lady Bears pulled away in the third period, outscoring Williamston, 10-3, to take a 22-15 lead. The Lady Tigers then tried to rally, but fell short.

Bear Grass actually won the game at the foul line, hitting 12 of 20 free throws while Williamston made only six of 14.

Williamston's scoring was led by Timberly Rodgeron with 15.

Bear Grass returns to action on Friday, hosting Jamesville in its opening Tobacco Belt Conference game, while Williamston begins Northeastern Conference play hosting Bertie on Tuesday.

Baker Emerging As Top Exec Choice

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Pitching remains the top shopping priority at the winter baseball meetings, and James A. Baker's status as a candidate for the commissioner's job remains a leading topic of conversation.

The White House chief of staff had emerged as the No. 1 choice to succeed Bowie Kuhn, while no one was saying so for the record. Some cold water was tossed on the conjecture, however, by a published report.

The Washington Post said in today's editions that Baker is almost certain to turn down the job if it is offered. An unidentified source close to Baker was quoted as saying it was "99 percent sure" Baker would not take the job, even though he was interested in it when he was approached by major league team owners several weeks ago.

On the trading front, teams apparently were more than a little willing to pay whatever price needed to get pitching.

The Minnesota Twins surrendered their only 1983 All-Star representative Wednesday, swapping outfielder Gary Ward to Texas for three players including a pair of highly-regarded arms — Mike Smithson and John Butcher.

Montreal and the Chicago Cubs both came up with important new hurlers in a three-way deal constructed by San Diego General Manager Jack McKeon. The Padres' payoff was three young players including a pitcher.

The Expos bolstered their bullpen with the addition of Gary Lucas from San Diego and delivered starter Scott Sanderson to Chicago. In exchange, the Cubs sent two young sluggers, first baseman Carmelo Martinez and third baseman Fritz Connally, and reliever Craig Lefferts to the Padres.

In Wednesday's other deal, slugger Gorman Thomas, who had exercised his right to demand a trade, was dealt by Cleveland along with infielder Jack Perconte to Seattle for second baseman Tony Bernazard.

Meanwhile, Cincinnati signed two-time National League batting champion Dave Parker, who leaves Pittsburgh as a free agent after 10 seasons.

Executive Council meetings started the major league portion of the convention today and a number of owners were discussing Baker, whose name has surfaced as a successor for Kuhn.

"No comment on this one or any other name involved," said Milwaukee owner Bud Selig, chairman of the search committee. "We'll have some comment after my remarks to the owners tomorrow."

Baker, in Washington, offered no help when asked by reporters, "Are you going to play ball?" His only response was an underhand sweep of his pitching arm.

President Reagan's chief spokesman, Larry Speakes, was just as elusive.

The Rangers came to these meetings determined to add some offense and they had the pitching necessary to get Ward, who celebrated his 30th birthday Tuesday.

"We consider Gary Ward a multi-dimensional player," said Ranger Manager Doug Rader. "He has unlimited capabilities."

Ward batted .278 with 19

home runs and 88 runs batted last season and has a career .285 batting average. The price for him, however, was high. Smithson was 10-14 with a 3.91 earned run average as a rookie last season and is considered a top prospect.

"We traded a premium pitcher for a premium outfielder," Rader said. "For us to give up Smithson was just as painful as for them to give up Ward."

Smithson moves into the Twins' starting rotation and Butcher, 6-6 with a 3.51 ERA and six saves last season, joins Ron Davis in the Minnesota bullpen. "We need people to get us (through the early and middle innings) to Davis," said Billy Gardner, manager of the Twins.

The Twins also obtained minor league catcher Sam Sorce in the deal and completed a busy day by resigning infielder John Castino to a four-year contract.

San Diego's McKeon was determined to put together the deal that sent Lucas to Montreal and Sanderson to Chicago. The Expos and Cubs were happy to oblige.

"We couldn't have done this without Jack," said Dallas Green, general manager of the Cubs, who had been stalemated in talks with Montreal's John McHale until McKeon came along. "I'm not sure John and I could have worked it out. We were not compatible."

McKeon solved that, routing Sanderson (6-7 with a 4.65 ERA last year) to Chicago to give Green the starter the Cubs wanted, and Lucas (5-8, 2.87, 17 saves) to Montreal for the left-hander they were after.

For his efforts, McKeon came away with three young prospects. Martinez hit .251 with 31 homers and 94 runs batted in at Iowa and finished the season at Chicago, batting .258 with six homers and 16 RBIs in 29 games. Connally hit .288 with 22 homers and 85 RBIs at Iowa and Lefferts was 3-4 with a 3.13 ERA as a rookie with the Cubs.

Defense To Carry Rams

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

SNOW HILL — Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin got a little bit of a surprise last week in the opening game of the year when the Rams took a 45-43 win over Wilson Beddingfield. It marked the first time the Rams had beaten that school.

"I felt that by the end of the year we might play decently, but our defense against Beddingfield was really good. We were down 13-1 at one point and came back to win," Godwin said.

The defense will have to carry the Rams this year, the coach says, since the offense doesn't have the big punch to win on its own.

Two starters return to this year's team, 5-10 guard Bonerree Johnson and 6-4 center Theodore Edwards. Johnson, however, didn't play until this Tuesday night, having been ineligible until then.

Two other lettermen join them, 6-0 forward Elmer Dixon and 6-1 forward Anthony Thompson.

While Johnson was sidelined, Otis Barnes, a 5-9 point guard, filled in for him, while Maurice Edwards, a 5-10 guard, occupied the other starting spot.

Godwin is hopeful of getting help soon from another sidelined player, guard Mike Cogdell, currently out recovering from injuries sustained in an automobile accident. He also feels he will get good help from guards Mike Fulton and Mike Warren.

So far this year, the Rams have built a 2-1 record, beating Beddingfield and then splitting with South Lenoir.

"We have some offensive problems, but our defense fell apart against South Lenoir (in the loss). It didn't come back until the second half of the other game (with South Lenoir). We've got some new guys, so it's going to take us a little time to become consistent. But we are striving to be more consistent on both offense and defense."

While Godwin said that the field goal shooting has been somewhat erratic — in the 43-45 percent level — he's more worried about the free throw shooting. "The best we've done in three games is 56 percent," he said. "That won't help you much. It seems like when we make the first one, we miss the second. It's just a lack of concentration."

With a lack of height, Godwin feels that the Rams are going to have to work hard to get position. "I thought that really would be one of our strong points; but so far we haven't looked that good."

In the Eastern Carolina Conference race, Godwin looks to SouthWest Edgecombe to be the leader. "They're head and shoulders over the rest of us," he said. But he also likes the looks of Southern Nash, North Pitt and Ayden-Grafton.

"I really don't know where we'll finish. I'm hoping that we'll win some early since we have so many games on the road in the latter part of the season. If we can get off to a good start, maybe we can come in around the middle of the league. Of course, we want to win them all."

Greene Central's girls, off to a 3-0 start, will get their big test Friday night when they face strong North Lenoir. In the three wins, coach Brenda Dail doesn't feel they've really faced a "toughie."

The Lady Rams have plenty of experience, with all five starters from last year and the top two reserves all returning. "We're still young," Dail said, "we're mostly juniors."

There is one senior in the starting lineup, 5-3 point guard Allison Battle. Joining her in the backcourt is 5-7 Cindi Hicks, the leading scorer on the team.

The front court finds 5-8 Antionette Wilkes, and 5-8 Melody Brown at the forwards and 5-9 Cynthia Jones at center.

The two top people off the bench who are back are 5-9 senior center Sharon Wilkes and 5-6 swing Sharon Myatt. All but the two listed are juniors.

Dail also feels she has some strength in 5-8 swing Kim Rogers, a freshman who has seen action in all three games. "She's learning the routine very nicely," the coach said. A fourth reserve, sophomore Dalen Herring saw some action last year and is expected to see more this season.

"So far things have gone well, but North Lenoir will be our first real test. We'll find out then how good we are."

There has been an improvement in the Lady Ram shooting so far, both from the field and the foul line, and that pleases Dail. "One of our goals was to improve our percentages this year."

Rebounding has been strong too, but Dail says that the Lady Rams really haven't been challenged for position under the board, or gone up against players their own size.

"We're a little quicker this year, and that helps the defense. The girls know what the other girls are going to do, too, and can anticipate them."

Dail favors North Pitt in the Eastern Carolina battle, because of their height. She also feels that SouthWest Edgecombe will be in there because of their fine tradition, but she doesn't expect the Lady Cougars to dominate the league as in the past.

"And I'm going to be disappointed if we're not in the top three. I really think we have the potential to be right up there if we can control the game like I think we can."

COACHES' CORNER

By CHARLIE HARRISON
ECU Basketball Coach

Another year and another column. No profound words of wisdom from the mean ole coach this week but a lot of bits and pieces from the Coach's Corner about others and ECU's own.

First of all, I would like to mention the awesome accomplishment of UNC's basketball coach Dean Smith. Coaching as long as he has (23 years) at Carolina is an accolade in itself. Surviving in the coaching profession is difficult and Dean has not only survived, he and his program have flourished. A hearty salute to Dean Smith and his 500 wins at Carolina. He's not only a tough one that survived an effigy hanging in his younger years, he's not only a good one — he's a great one and a hearty thank you from this coach to another.

And in the same vein, with words of congratulations, I would like to thank Ed Emory, his staff, and players for an entertaining and fun year of ECU Pirate football. Unfortunately, we're not in a bowl although, I feel, most deserving. ECU's football team brought all of East Carolina University and all of its programs needed national recognition by their superb performances.

Thanks to you also Pirate football, and may I add, I hope that your season can start a reaction within our student body and community to keep the enthusiasm going.

Our basketball team is young and very mistake-prone because of this youth. I knew it would struggle in December and January, but the effort is there and your support needs to be there as it was with our football team if we are going to create and sustain any kind of successful athlete program image, both in the state of North Carolina and on a national level. We need a continued band of supporters and fans. I hope we can develop and all be a part of a following that will carry over from fall to winter, to spring and then again into the fall and not a group on a band wagon that jumps on and off as the wagon speeds up or slows down.

Football made a prodigious step in the right direction to help all of us here at ECU. I hope you'll all help us in basketball and those of us in other sports by showing your support by your presence at our games.

SPORT LINE

To The Sports Editor:

This past Saturday, WNCT-TV Channel 9, broadcast the movie "Quarterback Princess." It was an extremely touching movie based on a true story. For those of you that didn't watch, it was the story of a young lady who challenged tradition by trying out for a position on her high school football team. She beat the odds and won the position of "Quarterback." She was a strong, determined, and courageous young lady that knew what she wanted and went after it. She didn't expect a lot of publicity, but she certainly got it. A female playing football just wasn't normal. She was unusual and different, and some of her classmates treated her that way too, but with her teammates, it was a completely different story. They respected her for her talents, and one of them even nominated her for "Homecoming Princess." The teammates, knowing she needed a gown for Homecoming, took up a collection and bought her one. She had absolutely no idea that she would win, but she did! She walked up on that stage, accepted her crown, and a football from her teammates as a keepsake. She was moving to Canada and wouldn't be there the next year. The movie ended with her standing on the state, football in hand, with tears running down her cheeks, telling her teammates that she would always, ALWAYS, remember them.

I think that any team that is able to have such a player, the sky would be the limit. Strong, determined, and courageous athletes working together on any team are hard to beat. This "Quarterback Princess" touched the lives of every teammate she had and together they were awesome. We come into this world with nothing, and we're going to leave with nothing, it's what we do with our lives in between that matters!

Mutual Jubilant Feeling On Welcome To Marines

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — As 1,700 Marines who survived the bombing of their Beirut headquarters returned to blaring bands and the arms of loved ones, their commander said the jubilant feeling was mutual.

"They have been good to the country, and the country has been good to them," said Maj. Gen. Al Gray who welcomed the returnees Wednesday at the port of Morehead City, N.C., where tearful relatives cheered and waved signs and flags.

Thousands of yellow ribbons fluttered along the 60-mile route from the port to Camp Lejeune, where the returning 24th Marine Amphibious Unit is stationed and where more reunions were held for the men who lost 240 comrades when a terrorist's dynamite-packed truck exploded Oct. 23. The unit also lost several members to snipers' bullets.

"Thank God, he's safe," said Gladys Harding as her son, Pfc. Keith Ezell, embraced his wife for the first time in seven months.

"We had a lot of fan mail over there," said Lance Cpl. Paul Schoolfield. "People wrote us and told us they were thinking of us. We knew they were."

Even so, Gray, commander of the 2nd Marine Division of which the 24th MAU is a part, said, the hero's welcome "was a real uplift for these men."

The returnees, wearing camouflage uniforms and carrying backpacks and rifles, had spent a violent half-year in Lebanon as part of the multinational peacekeeping force.

"It's been too long. I've been gone too long. I can't believe I'm really back home," said Sgt. George Walker.

"People were out in the streets waving and cheering like we were the biggest heroes in the world," Walker said.

Another Marine in a quieter reunion, leaned his rifle against the glass of a telephone booth and wiped his eye as he said into the receiver. "Hello. Mom. I'm home."

Pfc. William C. Kilmer Jr. on Wednesday saw his son, William Kilmer III, for the first time. His wife, Barbara, drove from Pittsburgh, Pa.,

Tuesday and waited all day Wednesday to meet her husband at Camp Geiger, part of the Camp Lejeune complex.

"I can't describe it," Mrs. Kilmer said. "It's just too wonderful to have him home."

Gray, the commander, had jokingly asked the Marines before dismissing them for the homecoming: "Charlie Company, are you ready to go and do what has to be done?"

The reply, shouted in unison: "Sir, yes sir."

Asked what he planned to do during his leave, Marine hospital corpsman Joe Sutton, whose 7-year-old son Spanky clung to his leg, said, "I'm just going to stay home."

A Little Lead Affects Brains

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Children's brains are affected by lead at levels far below what was previously considered safe, researches at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill say.

Studies of electrical activity in the brains of 100 children showed increasingly pronounced changes as concentrations of lead measured in their blood increased from six to 55 micrograms per deciliter, said Dr. Stephen Schroeder, clinical psychologist at UNC's Biological Research Center.

The current environmental lead standard, set by the Centers for Disease Control in 1979 as the maximum safe level that children can absorb, is 30 micrograms of lead per deciliter of blood.

"Apparently, almost any amount of lead can alter brain waves, but we aren't sure yet when these changes become important to health," he said. "We don't have firm evidence to be able to say that below a particular level you're safe and above it you're not."

Working with Schroeder on the study were Dr. David Otto and Dr. Vernon Benignus of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and Paul Mushak, associate professor of pathology at UNC.

The study has found no physical signs of lead poisoning in the children with very low lead levels, Schroeder said. But the toxic metal may have subtle effects on the children's physical and mental abilities that need to be understood and prevented, he said.

About half the subjects in the research, who ranged in age from 11 months to 6 years in 1977, are the children of people employed at a Raleigh battery factory who brought lead dust home on their clothing, Schroeder said. The others have been identified as being at risk of lead exposure because they lived in older homes with peeling paint.

While heavy absorption of lead can cause convulsions or brain damage and results in about 200 deaths in the United States per year, even relatively small amounts can disturb formation of hemoglobin, the blood protein that carries oxygen to tissues.

First Satellite Launch In 1958

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — The United States launched its first communications satellite 25 years ago.

The satellite, SCORE, was produced by RCA for the Army Signal Corps. It was placed in orbit by an Atlas missile in December of 1958 and relayed voice conversations, code and teletype messages.

Free Medical Care Is Failing Meet A Target

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer
BOSTON (AP) — People who get free medical care aren't much healthier than those who pay part of their own doctor bills — although costless treatment does help poor people with high blood pressure or vision problems, a study today shows.

The research, part of a $78 million study, demonstrates that people are not necessarily better off when they go to the doctor more often. It provides ammunition for those who say cutting back insurance benefits is a way to hold down the rapid rise in the price of medical care.

The project enrolled families in a variety of medical insurance plans. Some got unlimited free care, while others had to pay part of their bills.

People with free care visited their doctors and were hospitalized a third more often.

"For the average, non-elderly American, the additional health care bought by free care didn't do very much, and I don't think there's much doubt about that," said Dr. Robert H. Brook, who directed the study for the Rand Corp.

There are some advantages to free care. The researchers found that poor people's high blood pressure drops slightly, and nearsighted people take advantage of the program to get glasses, so their vision improves a bit.

Otherwise, people who avoid doctors because of the expense are about as healthy.

The federally financed research, conducted on 3,958 people in 2,005 families, was published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Children, the elderly and those with serious disabilities were excluded from the experiment.

Dr. Arnold Relman, the journal's editor, criticized the study for following only relatively healthy adults, employing only a few limited measures of health and observing patients for only three to five years. Still, in an editorial he called it "a landmark study."

The researchers found that the more people had to pay for medical care, the less of it they used.

Free health care had no effect on the bad health habits that are linked to heart trouble and some kinds of cancer. Even though people getting free care saw doctors once, twice or more often a year, they were just as likely to smoke, be overweight and have high blood cholesterol levels as the other people.

The free care plan's effect on blood pressure was its major benefit. This can save lives among people who are at high risk. "If 1,000 50-year-old men at elevated risk were enrolled in a free insurance plan, we could anticipate that 10.5 of them, who would otherwise have died, would be alive five years later," they wrote.

But the doctors said there are cheaper and more efficient ways of accomplishing this, such as screening programs.

The study was conducted between 1974 and 1982 in Seattle; Dayton, Ohio; Fitchburg and Franklin County, Mass., and Charleston and Georgetown County, S.C.

Families were given either free care or were randomly assigned to 14 different cost-sharing insurance plans. Some families had to pay as much as 15 percent of their income on health bills.

Sanford, Belk For Faircloth

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former Gov. Terry Sanford and former Charlotte Mayor John Belk endorsed Democratic gubernatorial candidate D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth Wednesday night.

The two made their announcements at a dinner and strategy session involving about 300 Faircloth supporters from across the state.

Faircloth, a former state secretary of commerce, told the group he's confident he can win in 1984 because he has good advertising, a strong organization and the right position on issues that concern North Carolinians.

He said the issues will be jobs, education, and which candidate has the ability to lead the state.

Designs Toys For Handicapped

By MARLENE AIG
Associated Press Writer
HASTINGS-ON-HUDSON, N.Y. (AP) — Bernadette Carroll had nearly despaired of finding toys for her handicapped 3-year-old daughter — even the simplest Jack-in-the-box was beyond the child's scope.

But then she discovered Dr. Steven Kanor, the special Santa who makes special kids' Christmas dreams come true.

In his basement workshop crammed with toys, wires, batteries and switches, Kanor devises means by which even the most severely handicapped child can play.

"No matter what handicap a kid has, I can design a toy he can operate," said the 47-year-old Kanor, a biomedical engineer by training. "I can make a switch that operates on an eye blink, a touch, a sip, a puff."

Kanor hadn't set out to become Kris Kringle to the nation's 200,000 to 300,000 handicapped children, but now that he does it regularly, he shows an almost religious zeal.

"There are almost no toys for these kids, but they want toys as much as other kids," he said recently.

Once a child learns how to use a switch to make a top spin or a train run, he "can operate a computer, he can communicate and can be educated. He can answer phones. He can do anything in his environment that can be controlled by a switch, and this makes them a useful human being and have a profession," Kanor said.

"Then I thought, what if they got something out of making the movement? If I attached a switch to their head or chest and something happened when the child moved, it was worth it," he said.

So Kanor began adapting conventional toys, from trucks to mechanical bears, so they could be operated by the smallest gesture of hand, head or eye. He sells his creations at cost, most between $30 and $100.

Some toys he gets wholesale by buying in bulk, but mostly he relies on the kindness of seven or eight part-time "elves" and donations from strangers. He supports himself by working as a consultant to United Cerebral Palsy of Westchester and other groups.

"There's little money in this," Kanor said. "So I know why the major toymakers are reluctant to go into the market for only a couple of hundred thousand kids while there are 30 million others to appeal to."

For children like Bernadette Carroll's daughter, Ruthie, the special toys can mean all the difference in the world.

Ruthie has an undiagnosed condition that wreaked havoc with the development of her fine motor control. She can hardly use her hands.

"She used to be so frustrated. She wanted to do things but couldn't, and would have nothing to do with toys," her mother said.

But with the toys bought from Kanor over the past two years, Ruthie "is getting her confidence back. When other children come over, they've never seen the switches and can't make the toy work. She can. She has an edge and can do something they can't," Mrs. Carroll said.

Fieldhouse Bids Killed

WILLIAMSTON — All bids for a proposed football fieldhouse addition to Skewarkee Park have been rejected by the Martin County Board of Education due to budgetary concerns.

The board voted to reject various bids — general contract, plumbing, heating and air conditioning, and electrical. The bids collectively ranged from a low bid of $142,742 to $183,603.

Board members noted that the low figure still is nearly twice the $74,000 amount previously budgeted in the 1983-84 budget.

In agreeing to review their position on the proposed fieldhouse addition, the board members discussed options that include redesigning the facility or an attempt to secure additional funding for a new complex on the Williamston High School campus.

In other actions, the school board approved a new pay scale for substitute teachers with all substitutes to receive $30 a day, and adopted a policy concerning group field trips to the N.C. State Fair. In the future, only sixth graders and high school vocational classes will be permitted to attend as a group. Other students who attend on a school day will be counted as being absent.

Sleep-Driver?

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) — Everyone's heard of sleep-walking, and now police have reported the case of a 15-year-old youth who drove his father's car 27 miles while asleep.

For good measure, he had never driven before.

"I know it sounds incredible but we have no reason to disbelieve the story, it checked out", Chief Inspector Colin Lewis said.

Lewis said police found the shivering youth wearing pajamas and a dressing gown standing in the middle of Southampton at about 3:30 a.m. Tuesday. The youth apparently had gotten out of bed at his parents' home, walked to the auto and — still asleep — drove it to Southampton. The car was not damaged and no charges were filed.

Opening lead: Seven of ♣.

A strong candidate for "Hand of the Year" has been reported by Australian George Havas. It cropped up in his country's national team championship and the declarer was John Stretton.

South showed his strength with a cuebid over the one heart opening bid. When his partner showed general values, Stretton cut the bidding short by jumping to six spades.

West led a heart and declarer ruffed. Since the opening bid marked East with the king of diamonds, declarer crossed to dummy with the ace of diamonds, and was surprised by the great fall thereon. He paused to take stock. Why had East elected to open with one heart on a hand deficient in high cards rather than with a preempt? Declarer decided that the only reason was that East held spade length with his heart suit.

Backing his reading of the cards, declarer led the nine of trumps from dummy and ran it! When that held, he returned to his hand with the ace of clubs and drew all the trumps. With six tricks to play, declarer was down to one trump, one diamond and four clubs. West held three diamonds and three clubs, and the table had three diamonds, two clubs and a heart.

When declarer led his last trump, West was caught in a strip squeeze. He could not let go of a club, for that would set up declarer's club suit, so he was forced to come down to only two diamonds. Declarer now led a diamond to the queen and threw West in with his remaining diamond. Left with nothing but clubs, West was forced to lead away from his jack into declarer's tenace and the slam was home.

In the other room, the contract was also six spades — down two.

Nostalgia Is Bumpy Road

WINTER PARK, Fla. (AP) — Nostalgia may be fine for some, and they may support a plan to strip away the asphalt from streets in this Orlando suburb, revealing quaint bricks.

But, as for George Haddad, "It will be bumpy."

He wondered, "Why are they going back to the primitive way?"

Realists and automobile shock absorbers may not like brick streets, but many people love them, says Commissioner David Currie, as the commissioners scheduled a public hearing for Dec. 13.

Winter Park has many brick streets in its older neighborhoods, but at least 10 streets were paved before an outcry ended the practice years ago.

Much of the work will have to be done by hand because machines can chop up the uneven layer of brick beneath the asphalt, says public works director Joe Compton. And although three city employees know how to lay brick, finding more workers for big bricklaying jobs would be difficult, said City Manager David Harden, calling it "a lost art."

To further complicate things, the 3-inch paving bricks are no longer manufactured, he said.

City officials concede that the brick streets' washboard surfaces slow traffic as if they were little speed bumps.

Minority Vote

UNITED NATIONS

(AP) — The United States and Britain cast the only negative votes on a General Assembly resolution against colonialism.

Wednesday's vote was 141-2 with 8 abstentions. However, General Assembly resolutions are not binding on the membership.

In debate on the resolution, British delegate John W. Margeson objected to a provision calling Britain the "illegal occupying regime" in its dependent territories. "I have never heard such nonsense," he said.

U.S. delegate William C. Sherman took exception to a clause recognizing "the legitimacy of the struggle" of colonial peoples to get independence "by all the necessary means at their disposal." He said that came "perilously close to providing an endorsement for murder and terror."

Changes Ahead For Familiar American Currency

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Picture, if you will, George Washington winking as you move a dollar bill from side to side.

A blue dollar bill, that is. Woven with metal threads carrying information in secret code.

Our currency for the 1990s?

The mental picture goes well beyond what the government is willing to say about plans to change America's folding money in the next few years. And it's probably wilder than what will actually happen.

But changes are indeed coming for familiar old U.S. currency — the first substantial changes in more than half a century. And the possibilities apparently do include colors, coded threads and "optical variables" that change shape when viewed from different angles.

Though officials are secretive about proposed alterations, they are open about the cause: a fear that sophisticated new photocopying machines could soon make counterfeiting much easier than it has been.

Need groceries on the way home from work? Before leaving, just run off some cash on the office copier. Federal officials, studying the problem for several years, don't think that's far-fetched in light of expected technological advances in copiers.

And former U.S. Treasurer Angela Buchanan, whose signature still appears on new currency, real or counterfeit, said in an interview before she left Washington earlier this year, "When you bring counterfeiters into the office-boy level, you really have problems."

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, who is responsible for guarding the credibility of the U.S. monetary system, said recently the threat seemed to be genuine and "the desire to keep ahead of that technology may point to some technical devices" in American currency.

Treasury spokesmen say no decisions have been made on how to change paper money. And they play down the possibility of drastic changes, noting that the government wouldn't want to do anything to lower the respect U.S. currency commands.

However, a decision is close enough that officials felt the need to show a few congressmen prototype bills in a secret meeting last month. Rep. Ron Paul, a Texas Republican, reacted to the secrecy by calling a news conference.

Paul, a critic of even the current U.S. monetary system, said Treasury wouldn't let him keep any of the mock-ups. So he showed the press some artists' renderings of pink and blue bills.

Government officials said that was preposterous. At most, there would be a few "tinted" threads woven into the bills' backgrounds — detectable only at close range by holding the bills up at an angle.

Paul's aides disputed that reaction, saying the colors were much more noticeable. The general public isn't getting a look now, so the proof will have to be in the eventual printing.

Other changes being considered, according to sources in the government and out:

—Holograms, which produce three-dimensional pictures, or plastic strips that would show different images when viewed from different directions. A winking George Washington would never be seriously considered, but one possibility is changeable wording on the Federal Reserve seal on the left front of bills.

—The tinted backgrounds, though Treasury spokesman Robert Levine says the idea of brighter colors was discarded after being "kicked around."

—Coded, metallic threads that special machines could read, thus detecting counterfeiters. However, that wouldn't be much help to people who casually pay out and accept cash every day.

Paul also objected to the idea of such threads or metallic strips on privacy grounds, implying that the government might use it to monitor cash being taken out of the country.

"Americans must have the freedom to travel out of the United States without any restrictions," he said. And he said any attempt to impose restrictions would be "outrageous and a violation of our rights."

His comments seemed to indicate that any major currency change, which would require congressional approval, would not be made without debate.

Levine and other officials have said that a switchover to new currency would take about two years after final decisions are made.

Apparently the new bills would be printed and injected into the economy gradually with old bills continuing to be legal tender.

Secret Service officials, responsible for fighting counterfeiting, have suggested such a drawn-out process could be a problem since bogus copies of the old bills could still be turned out. But Levine said no sudden call-in of old currency was likely.

Since the size of U.S. currency was reduced in 1929, only minor changes have been made, such as the addition of the words "In God We Trust" three decades ago.

Auto Inspection Role Defended

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's automobile inspection program should not be abolished because it helps keep the highways safe, despite claims some mechanics only give vehicles a quick once-over, a state official says.

R.V. Wilkins, commissioner of the state Division of Motor Vehicles, testified before a legislative study committee studying whether the 18-year-old inspection program should be abolished.

"We think the program is working, and it's doing a good job," Wilkins testified on Tuesday.

The program also drew support from two study panel members. "There is some sentiment in the (state) House to do away with the program, but we didn't see it in the committee," said chairman Rep. Aaron E. Fussell, D-Wake.

One out of every five cars in North Carolina didn't pass its state inspection on the first trip last year.

Meanwhile, six percent of the garages licensed to inspect autos had their privileges suspended for passing faulty cars or flunking cars that should have passed.

As complaints about auto inspections have grown nationwide, 11 states have repealed all or part of their laws requiring the yearly checks. Only 21 states, including North Carolina, still require inspections.

Wilkins asked the General Assembly this year to raise the auto inspection fee from $4.25 to $6. One-fourth of the fee would go to hire undercover investigators to monitor suspicious service stations and garages.

"Right now, we're doing it as we can," he said. "We don't have anyone assigned to investigate it full time."

The Legislature tabled Wilkins' proposed fee increase and formed the committee to decide the worth of the inspection program.

Real And Fictional Death In Popular Series

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Lt. Howard Hunter, whose suicide attempt will be foiled in tonight's episode of "Hill Street Blues," is not the first major character from NBC's Emmy award-winning series to be saved by the almighty pencil.

In the first script of the very first episode of "Hill Street Blues," the pepper-and-salt team of Bobby Hill (Michael Warren) and Andy Renko (Charles Haid) both died in the line of duty. Executive producer Steven Bochco's wife, Barbara, who plays Fay Furillo on the show, pleaded for Hill to survive.

"Being a total pushover, I changed that," said Bochco. "We also wanted Charlie to live, but Charlie made it clear that he was going to do another pilot. So there was no way we could have him live. But I told him if his pilot didn't sell, please feel free to come back."

The pilot was shot with Capt. Frank Furillo (Daniel J. Travanti) being told over the phone: "One DOA, one critical." But before that program was broadcast in January 1981, Haid's other commitment fell through, and through the magic of post-production audio dubbing, an updated phone message to Furillo had Hill and Renko clinging to life.

In last week's episode of "Hill Street," Hunter (James Sikking) put a gun to his head, the screen went to black and a shot was heard. Hunter was despondent because he had been revealed as a go-between in a police corruption case 15 years earlier.

But have no fear: the scriptwriters, who control the fates of all our fictional TV heroes, don't let Hunter kill himself.

Tonight's story summary, which NBC inadvertently sent to last Sunday's TV supplements, says: "(Fellow officer) J.D. LaRue becomes something of a hero as he saves Lt. Hunter's life."

"The word didn't get to the guy who prepared the summary that this was supposed to be a cliffhanger," said Curt Block, an NBC vice president for communications.

Bochco and his fellow writers will have to deal with a real death in future stories. Michael Conrad, who played the genial, literate Sgt. Phil Esterhaus, died of cancer Nov. 22.

Esterhaus handed out assignments and philosophy while conducting the dawn roll call, the scene which opens each "Hill Street Blues" episode. He always ended those sessions with the caveat, "Let's be careful out there."

The first program without Conrad will be broadcast Jan. 12. Lt. Henry Goldblume (Joe Spano) will handle that roll call.

A brief text paying tribute to Conrad was carried at the beginning of the Nov. 24 "Hill Street" episode. Last year, a similar dedication was made to actress Dominique Dunne, who was murdered after playing a bit part on "Hill Street."

While MTM Enterprises, which produces "Hill Street Blues," was able to pay tribute to these actors, the production company was prevented from paying on-air respects to a dead actress from one of its programs from the 1970s, "Phyllis."

Barbara Colby had played in one episode when she was brutally murdered. Liz Torres replaced her, but CBS did not allow any on-air explanation why a different actress was playing the same character.

"Maybe because 'Hill Street' deals with death, we can do these messages without rendering an audience incapable of watching the show," said Larry Blaustein, a vice president for public relations at MTM.

As a realistic police drama, "Hill Street Blues" weaves violence and death into many of its story lines.

Odd Marriage On One Channel

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — So what's wrong with putting Beethoven and Foggy on the same cable-TV channel? The wonder is that no one thought of the ARTS & Entertainment Network before now.

If it sounds like the marriage of Hearst-ABC's Alpha Repertory Television Service and RCA's dormant Entertainment Network before now.

The two parties were expected to sign the merger papers today.

And it means, starting Feb. 1, a mix of classical music, like Beethoven's Concerto No. 1 in C, and comedy, like "The Last of the Summer Wine," featuring Clegg, Compo and Foggy, the three elderly gents who get involved in extremely unlikely situations.

There's more, of course, to the new service than that: drama, theater, the cinema, music, opera, dance, art, poetry and literature, conversation.

What's behind the merger? Survival, no doubt, in the increasingly chancy world of cable TV. And that seems to demand a lineup of shows that will appeal to as many people as possible, while attracting advertisers interested in a so-called "up-scale" audience.

It might be Wilkie Collins' "Woman in White" one evening, with "Bach Goes East" the next. "A Midsummer Night's Dream" the third night, maybe British comedy shows "Two's Company" and "Kelly Mon-teith" the fourth.

Though there is no sign that ARTS was anywhere near the precipice, the service, introduced in April 1981, was indeed losing money — a reported $10 million a year.

The Entertainment Channel, built largely on a wide selection of programs from the British Broadcasting Corp., collapsed in a much bigger heap of debt in February. The merger with ARTS probably saves face for some people, and money for others.

ARTS was introduced as a basic service, supported by advertising and available to cable-TV subscribers at no additional charge, and A&E will stay that way.

Cable-system operators, however, will be assessed for distributing the service: a nickel per subscriber each month in the first year, beginning March 11, 6 cents in the second and 7 in the third.

The tactic is not uncommon in cable, though some system operators are reluctant to pay the subscriber fee. So it will cost the new service some viewers: ARTS is available in 12-million homes, and A&E is counting on about 9 million to start.

Will it work?

CBS Cable, which devoted most of its short run to the performing arts, lost an estimated $30 million to $35 million before its demise toward the end of 1982. The Entertainment Channel, a pay service, lost about as much in 10 months, and listed only 45,000 subscribers when service was discontinued.

Commenting in Electronic Media, a trade paper, on the prospect of merger with the Entertainment Channel, Herb Granath, president of ABC Video Services, said, "If the industry can't support what seems to be the last quality cable service, maybe there isn't room for one."

Barter System Suggested For Fostering Better U.S. Image

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The Reagan administration is virtually ignoring a trade avenue that could help feed the world's hungry and bring the United States billions of dollars in new business and immeasurable goodwill, a North Dakota congressman says.

That avenue is barter, the old-fashioned and often complicated process of swapping goods. Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., says the practice is on the upswing, especially among cash-short Third-World countries, and represents a great opportunity for the United States.

"The paradox is that we have the food, and other countries have hungry people, but have no money," Dorgan said Tuesday, suggesting that the hunger problem could be eased through specific swaps of U.S. food for strategic materials like minerals and rubber.

A report requested by Dorgan from the Congressional Research Service found that although there are major barriers to gearing up a large-scale bartering arrangement, the United States could earn as much as $27 billion in new overseas trade if it chose to make the practice a priority.

The study suggested, for example, swaps of wheat, corn and cheese for rubber from Liberia, Indonesia and Malaysia; wheat and corn for iron ore from Brazil and Venezuela; and dairy products for Zambian cobalt and copper.

U.S. supplies of certain "strategic materials," the raw inputs to the manufacture of defense-related goods, come largely from foreign sources. The government tries to maintain stockpiles of those materials, but many of the inventories are low, the study noted.

If the unfilled inventories of defense materials and petroleum were filled through barter of America's farm surplus, and agricultural products were bartered in lieu of some overseas spending for defense installations and development programs, the study said, barter trade could total $27.2 billion.

But Dorgan said his conversations with administration officials have elicited nearly uniform opposition to the idea. The administration

Dog To Get Jury Trial

NORFOLK (AP) — Max, a mixed-breed dog sentenced to death after neighbors complained that he barked too much, faces a jury trial in an appeal of his case.

Jury selection was to begin today in Circuit Court.

Thomas M. Atkinson, a city policeman who owns the dog, has contended that Max never had a barking problem. But neighbors in Atkinson's Forest Park neighborhood said the dog, which resembles a German shepherd, barked for up to 90 minutes several times a week when his owner was not at home.

On Aug. 9, General District Judge Joseph A. Jordan ruled the dog a nuisance and ordered that it be destroyed after Atkinson refused to give up the animal.

The ruling, which received international attention and prompted howls of protest from animal lovers, was appealed to Circuit Court.

In a Sept. 23 hearing, Circuit Judge Alfred W. Whitehurst agreed to a proposal that the matter be dropped if complaints about Max subsided over the next two months.

But when attorneys returned to court Nov. 29, Whitehurst set the case for trial after the city attorney's office declined to drop charges against Atkinson.

"Things are not tranquil" in the neighborhood where Max lives, Martha Rollins, assistant city attorney, said after the court session.

Atkinson's lawyer, Joseph A. Pennington, said he had received a letter from Mrs. Rollins two weeks earlier telling of one complaint. Mrs. Rollins said the issue is not the number of complaints, but "whether there's peace in the neighborhood."

Pursuant to the Order of the Honorable Sandra Gaskins, Clerk of Superior Court of Pitt County, North Carolina, dated the 3rd day of November, 1983, notice is hereby given of the public sale by Wachovia Bank & Trust Company, N.A., Executor of the Estate of Helen A. Snyder, Deceased, of the below described real property on the 9th day of December, 1983, at 10:00 a.m. (noon), said sale to be held at the Pitt County Courthouse door, Third Street entrance, Greenville, North Carolina. The real property to be sold is a lot or parcel of land, with a residence situated thereon located at 311 Meade Street, Greenville, North Carolina, which lot or parcel of land is more particularly described as follows:

"That certain lot or parcel of land situated, lying and being in the City of Greenville, Pitt County, North Carolina, and being Lot No. 3 in Block 'E' of the Johnston Heights Addition, as shown on the plat of said certain map duly recorded in the Register's office for Pitt County in Map Book 2, page 231, which map was made by Henry L. Rivers, Surveyor, on September 12, 1928, to which reference is made, said lot being situated and fronting 64 feet on Meade Street, with a depth of 102 feet, with a width of 66 feet in the rear thereof, and being the identical lot or parcel of land conveyed to Helen A. Snyder by David R. Davis and wife, Vera Davis, by that certain deed recorded in Book K 34, Page 653, Pitt County Registry.

The said sale shall be made to the highest bidder for cash who shall deposit ten percent of the amount of the purchase price at the time of sale as a good faith deposit.

This sale is subject to confirmation by the Court pursuant to N.C.G.S. 1-339.28(a)(3). This 4th day of November, 1983.

Will 'Ignore' Court Ruling

DEFENDS RIGHTS — Elizabeth Bouvia sits in her wheelchair during testimony in which she defended what she believes is a right to self-determination. (AP Laserphoto)

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Elizabeth Bouvia, a quadriplegic who says her cerebral palsy makes life unbearable, has told a court she will carry out her plan to starve to death even if the judge rules against her.

"I am going to refuse the best way I can any nutrients and medical care," she testified Wednesday. "I will ask them to please not do it to me, force-feed her, because I don't have the physical ability to resist."

Mrs. Bouvia, 26, is seeking a court injunction to prevent Riverside General Hospital staff from force-feeding her or giving her medical treatment, but she still wants the hospital to keep her free from pain until she dies.

She told Superior Court Judge John H. Hews: "I have come to this court to ask not to be force-fed against my will."

Hews said he will issue a temporary injunction at the end of the current round of hearings, not a permanent one, meaning another series of hearings will have to be held. He did not indicate what the ruling would be.

Dr. Donald E. Fisher, the hospital's chief of psychiatry, has said he will deny any court order allowing Mrs. Bouvia to starve. He has said he will either discharge her from the hospital or force-feed her.

Fisher testified that he thought Bouvia could be turned away from her decision by treatment or by time alone. "I think the prognosis for this lady is very good," he said, noting "the immensity of the success of this lady" in her completion of high school, junior college and college, plus her beginning work on a master's degree.

He called it "amazing, thrilling" and said the "fact that she has bogged down, become perhaps even dysfunctional" is understandable.

In her testimony before Hews, Mrs. Bouvia said: "I choose no longer to be dependent on others. I have to be taken care of every day of my life and it's humiliating." She said if she were fed through an intravenous tube, "I would try to the best of my ability to pull the tube out with my right hand."

A Riverside County attorney asked the wheelchair-bound Mrs. Bouvia why she did not starve herself when she lived in Bandon, Ore., a coastal town 75 miles north of the California border.

"My father would not leave me alone in my apartment to starve to death," she said. "To do that would be committing a crime."

When Deputy County Counsel Barbara Milliken asked what crime, Mrs. Bouvia said, "The crime of killing someone. On top of that, it's an emotional thing. He's my father and I'm his daughter."

"I'm not asking for anybody to kill me," said Mrs. Bouvia. "I'm asking that the natural process of death take over."

Mrs. Bouvia lived in Oregon about two weeks before her father, Ren Castner, drove her to Riverside, where she checked into the hospital Sept. 3.

A Business In Fabric Decoys

PINCKNEY, Mich. (AP) — For Bonnie Everett, 31, what began as a hobby is now a bird of a different feather.

Three years ago, she opened her own firm to make fabric duck decoys. Starting with ducks handmade from corduroy, Ducks and Co. has expanded to produce ducks made from muslin or chintz and trimmed with ribbons and lace.

The ducks are usually used for decoration, although the firm also makes weighted versions for use as doorstops.

PROTEST SETTLERS — ARAGUAINO, Brazil (AP) — Thousands of Indians have seized a government outpost in this remote Amazon jungle area to protest an influx of settlers on their tribal lands.
