ECU Technology Center To Serve Area Industries

East Carolina University officials this morning announced the establishment of a Center for Applied Technology to channel the university's technological resources more effectively toward stimulating and serving industry in eastern North Carolina. ECU Chancellor John Howell said the university's pool of technological expertise would be made available to industry, local governmental units, and other educational institutions through the center, and that the center would "work to make this region more responsive to high technology applications."

According to Howell, "As a comprehensive university, we have assembled a faculty consisting of several hundred professors with technical knowledge and skill based on extensive academic preparation and research experience. These professionals represent a reservoir of technological expertise located in the heart of eastern North Carolina."

The Center for Applied Technology, a unit within the school of technology at ECU, "will serve as the vehicle to bring this expertise to the region. Through the center's activities, technology transfer will take place both from the university to industry and from industry to the university," Howell said.

While start-up funds are being provided by ECU, once fully operational, the center will generate the majority of its funding from those industries which utilize its services through contract research, training projects and grants.

Howell and Dr. Calfrey C. Calhoun, dean of the school of technology said Dr. Jerry V. Tester will be director of the center. A board of directors and a faculty advisory committee will advise the director of changing technological needs of the region, suggest how the center might best meet those needs and suggest new endeavors for the center.

Tester, 38, a native of Boone, is associate professor of electronics in the department of industrial and technical education and

Inflation Level Runs Low At The Wholesale Level

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spurred by November's 0.2 percent drop, the first in eight months, inflation at the wholesale level is running at just 0.3 percent for the year, the government said today. Food prices last month plummeted 1 percent, their steepest fall since July 1982.

The new report virtually ensures that, for all of 1983, wholesale price inflation will be less than 1 percent, which would mark the economy's best performance in nearly two decades.

Even in advance of today's annualized 11-month calculation, showing an even smaller inflationary gain than had been expected, economists were cheering the year's anticipated results. "Fantastic," exclaimed Edward Yardeni, chief economist for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. And Michael Evans, an economic consultant here, said, "It's amazing considering where we were three years ago" when wholesale prices had surged 11.8 percent.

Prices rose 7.1 percent in 1981 and 3.7 percent last year. Not since 1964, when the gain was 0.5 percent, have wholesale prices risen at a rate below 1 percent.

The Labor Department said energy prices, as expected, also fell in the latest monthly calculation — down 1 percent. Those prices had been off in the previous month after six months of increases.

Detailing the good news for food prices in November, the department said vegetable prices were down 16.3 percent. Fresh fruit prices fell 9.5 percent.

Department economists attributed those sharp declines to improved supplies of bananas, citrus fruits, corn, lettuce, tomatoes and beans.

Beef and veal prices fell 1.6 percent. Pork prices were off 2.9 percent.

Meat prices have been down through the fall as producers sent their livestock to slaughter rather than pay feedgrain prices driven higher by the summer's drought.

Food prices overall had risen a sharp 1.1 percent in October and 0.7 percent in September.

Beirut Area Guns Again Silenced

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An agreement to stabilize the latest cease-fire in the civil war was announced today by Lebanon's warring factions as guns around Beirut were still and the international airport reopened after a 17-day shutdown.

Fifty miles to the north in Tripoli, however, Israel staged its fourth naval assault in a week against PLO chairman Yasser Arafat's loyalists, who are waiting for ships to evacuate them from the northern port city.

In Damascus, the anti-government National Salvation Front announced the three-point agreement to stabilize the cease-fire, which was proclaimed Thursday night after representatives of the Lebanese army, Islamic Druse and Shiite anti-government militias met with Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam of Syria.

Public Works Minister Pierre Khoury said orders were issued to all airport employees to report for work immediately so normal air traffic could resume. The first commercial jetliner was to land at the airport at sundown, he said.

In addition to neutralizing the airport, where 1,350 U.S. Marines are based on peacekeeping duty, the agreement provides for no more shelling of populated areas and public utilities.

Tobacco Quota Cut Predicted To Cost N.C. Farmers $100 Million

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said Thursday the 11.5 percent cut in the flue-cured tobacco marketing quota next year would cost the state's farmers $100 million.

"I am bitterly disappointed," Graham said. "As I had stated before, I had asked that there be no cut in quota. I also said that if a cut had to be made, it should be no more than 5 percent.

"A cut in quota of this magnitude will pose an extreme hardship on our state's tobacco farmers after a poor 1983 growing season and a host of other economic problems," Graham said.

Everett Rank of the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced Thursday that Agriculture Secretary John Block had decided to restrict leaf production next year to 805 million pounds — down from 910 million pounds this year.

U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said he was disappointed with the ruling but grateful that Block didn't impose an even steeper cutback.

"It had been my hope that the quota would have been established in the range of 825 to 850 million pounds, and I argued the case for that with the Office of Management and Budget, the White House and of course with the Secretary of Agriculture," said Helms in a prepared statement.

Gov. Jim Hunt said the decision would have a "serious economic impact in North Carolina."

"But we will have to do the best we can with it, and farmers will have to strive to produce the highest-quality tobacco they can," said Hunt. "I very much hope conditions will turn around so that (Block) can reduce the cut before planting time."

The production quota is part of the federal tobacco support program and is designed to keep domestic leaf competitive on the world market by avoiding an oversupply.

The quota has fallen in recent years as American farmers' costs have risen

Her Church Will Salute Oldest Living Member

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Georgia Foreman has lived to be 99 year old. On Sept. 2, 1984, she'll be 100.

Her will to live, her friends believe, is strengthened by her devotion to a friend she's had for nearly half a century — Mae Bowling, 96.

Mae always says "Don't leave me, Georgia," Mrs. Foreman said Wednesday, "and I say, Honey, I'll be here just as long as the Lord lets me."

Mrs. Foreman is being honored Sunday by Sycamore Hill Baptist Church, 226 W. Eighth St., as its oldest living member. A testimonial fellowship dinner will be held at 12:45 p.m. and Mrs. Bowling will be one of the honored guests.

For the last several years, Mrs. Bowling and Mrs. Foreman have shared virtually every waking hour at Mrs. Bowling's home on Summit Street here. Round-the-clock caregivers provide for the needs of both of them.

Once long ago, Mrs. Foreman was Mrs.

Bowling's housekeeper. Both Mrs. Bowling's husband and Mrs. Bowling's mother, when they were close to death, Mrs. Foreman said, asked her to stay with Mae just as long as she could and she told each of them she would.

"My mother always taught me," she said, "that your word is your bond. So I've done what I said I'd do and it's been a good life."

Mrs. Foreman, a graduate of Latta University and Shaw University Preparatory School, both in Raleigh, was a teacher in the Moye's Run and Holly Hill schools for black children of Pitt County in the early 1900s and an employee of East Carolina College's laundry for many years. She has belonged to the church which is honoring her Sunday since she was 12 years old and she attended Sunday School there since she was about 4, she recalls. The earliest church building she remembers was a converted shop located at the corner of Greene and First Street, later the site of a brick church which was torn down in the early 1970s. She was president of the Pastor's Aid Club of the church for 39 years.

MRS. GEORGIA FOREMAN, 99 ... (left) will be honored Sunday by Sycamore Hill Baptist Church, which she joined in 1896. Accompanying her to the testimonial dinner being given by Mrs. Foreman's fellow church members will be her long-time friend, Mae Bowling, 96 (right).

Printed Hosiery Means A Leggy Look For Winter

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — The beige colored leg is out of fashion in fall and winter hosiery. The animal print is in.

"We haven't even scratched the surface of new, fun designs," said Russell Klein, president of one of the leaders in patterned pantyhose, knee-highs, regular hose and anklets.

"Women just don't walk around with beige legs anymore," said Sunny Miller, designer and vice-president for merchandising with another major manufacturer.

Instead, think of hosiery that is spotted, painted, dotted, flowered, lacy or with oriental motifs.

Some of the most startling are the animal prints.

Designer James Casty, for Easton Print Plant, Inc., Easton, Pa., which makes its own line and also prints for other manufacturers, does real-looking leopard, cheetah and zebra. The splashy cheetah print has been the best seller.

"I just think the need for pattern was there because of hemlines and also the cost of ready-to-wear," company president Klein said.

"Skirts mostly have been short, so there's more leg on display. Then, too, ready-to-wear prices have risen so steadily women will give an old outfit a new look with some snazzy hose. For $10 an outfit can have a total new look."

"I see patterns on the legs as a fashion staple rather than a novelty," Klein said. "We've been changing patterns every four to six weeks."

Klein said there's a lot of glitter in evening hosiery, woven-in vertical stripes of gold or silver, and rhinestone decoration.

"There's been really so little change in apparel styles, the leg has become the accessory item," said Miss Miller, who's with Kayser-Roth.

"And don't forget the year of the sweater and its impact," she continued. "It has spawned a whole textured and patterned look to go with suits and sportswear."

Leg warmers, originally lifted from dancers, also have become a staple.

Some of the patterns have gotten pretty wild. And now, the yarn people are promoting patterns so a woman can knit her own.

Footwear has moved into other orbits too. The classic pump goes on and on, but this year it has a broadened, rounded toe.

Heels come in all shapes and heights, with the American woman still the No. 1 fan of the high spike.

European women favor lower heels, reports the Italian Shoe Center.

And the impact of the Japanese on international style reflects in a softening of some styles, with laced flats that somehow remind you of a baby's bootie. Boots themselves come in all heel heights.

The popularity of the fitness, or running, shoe shows, too, in a new casual series.

"Nobody wants to fit into the mold anymore," said Kathy Phillips, deputy director of the Italian Shoe Center that recently held a fashion show in New York. It featured more than 100 styles from Italy, which bills itself as the leading maker of shoes. That country produces more than 450 million pairs annually, 76 percent of which are exported. Germany and the United States are the biggest markets.

The Footwear Council, representing American manufacturers, said U.S. production totals 498 million pairs yearly, or still ahead of Italy.

Though America buys four pairs of shoes per year for every man, woman and child, as a nation we are ninth in shoe consumption per capita.

Topping the list are France, Switzerland, Austria, Belgium, East and West Germany, Russia and Czechoslovakia.

Someone counted and found that if all the footwear made in Italy in one year could be lined up in pairs, toe to heel, the path would extend up and down Mount Everest 7,750 times.

Holiday Touch

ON-THE-GO SWEATERS — Fashioned to go from office into evening, these sweaters are a natural for the busy holiday season. In rich seasonal colors as well as misty hues, their special features include pointelle stitch necklines softened with a bow and sleeve interest. At left, dressmaker cable pointelle works well with a blazer or to top off a semi-dressy pant or skirt; at right, deeply textured pointelle with tuck shoulder keeps working after office hours. New World Coffee Cake With Different Filling

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

In the food world, styles change. But not so fast as in the fashion world.

Certain dishes become popular for a season or two — like the fondue that several years ago many cooks often served and that now one rarely encounters. Other recipes stay in fashion much longer — but new variations of them appear.

One example of the latter: For a long time most coffee-cake recipes called for white flour and butter as the main ingredients. Then nutritionists began to persuade cooks of the benefits of whole wheat flour and an oil that is high in poly-unsaturates — such as the one made from safflower seeds. Recently I came on an excellent version of a coffee cake using both these ingredients. And the addition of egg whites instead of whole eggs will interest cholesterol-conscious cooks.

As in older recipes for coffee cake, this new one is layered with a delicious filling of brown sugar, cocoa, cinnamon, golden raisins and walnuts. If you use the regular whole wheat flour available in supermarkets all over the country, you'll have a coffee cake on the fluffy side and the filling will have a tendency to sink to the bottom and ring the sides. If you use the heavier stone-crushed whole wheat flour, available in only part of the country or by mail-order, the coffee cake will be less fluffy and the filling more evenly scattered.

NEW-WORLD COFFEE CAKE
Filling, see recipe
1 1/4 cups whole wheat (graham) flour
1 1/4 cups unbleached all-purpose white flour
2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
6 large egg whites

1 1/4 cups sugar
1/2 cup safflower oil
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 1/4 cups sugar
1 1/2 cups milk
Make the filling and reserve. Grease and flour a 10-inch angel cake pan.

On wax paper or in a medium bowl, thoroughly stir together whole wheat flour, white flour, baking powder and salt; reserve.

In a medium bowl, beat the egg whites until foamy; gradually beat in 3/4 cup of the sugar until the whites form peaks that tilt slightly when the beater is slowly withdrawn; reserve.

At once in a large bowl, without washing the beater, beat together the oil, vanilla and the remaining 1/2 cup sugar until combined. Add the reserved flour mixture 1-3rd at a time, alternately with the milk, beating gently after each addition just until blended. Add the reserved egg white mixture and fold in.

Spoon 1-3rd of the batter into the prepared pan; sprinkle with 1/2 of the Filling. Repeat. Add remaining batter.

Dear Abby

Judge Says To Teens: Go Home And Grow Up!

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am now the father of two small children. When I was a teen-ager, our minister read something from your column that contained a powerful message. It went something like this: "Kids, don't sit around asking where you can go and what you can do for entertainment, go home and do something constructive. Grow up!"

Does this ring a bell? If so, can you locate it and publish it again?

ROCKY MOUNTAIN NEWS FAN, DENVER

DEAR FAN: The item to which you refer was written by Philip B. Gilliam, a juvenile court judge from Denver. It was titled, "An Open Letter to a Teen-Ager." It appeared in my column nearly 20 years ago. And here it is:

"Always we hear the plaintive cry of the teen-ager: What can we do? ... Where can we go? The answer is, Go home!

"Hang the storm windows, paint the woodwork. Rake the leaves, mow the lawn, shovel the walk. Wash the car, learn to cook, scrub some floors. Repair the sink, build a boat, get a job.

"Help the minister, priest or rabbi, the Red Cross, the Salvation Army. Visit the sick, assist the poor, study your lessons. And then when you are through—and not too tired—read a book.

"Your parents do not owe you entertainment. Your city or village does not owe you recreational facilities. The world does not owe you a living. You owe the world something. You owe it your time and energy and your talents so that no one will be at war or in poverty or sick or lonely again.

"In plain, simple words, grow up; quit being a crybaby. Get out of your dream world and develop a backbone, not a wishbone, and start acting like an adult.

"You're supposed to be mature enough to accept some of the responsibility your parents have carried for years. They have nursed, protected, helped, appealed, begged, excused, tolerated and denied themselves needed comforts so that you could have every benefit. This they have done gladly, for you are their dearest treasure. But now, you have no right to expect them to bow to every whim and fancy just because selfish ego, instead of common sense, dominates your personality, thinking and requests.

"In heaven's name, grow up and go home!"

DEAR ABBY: What should we do when guests drop in uninvited at the precise moment when our favorite television program comes on?

My husband and I never go out on that night because we want to stay home and watch this particular program.

BUGGED IN BOZEMAN, MONT.

DEAR BUGGED: You can either bite your tongue, turn the TV set off and lie through your teeth about how "happy" you are to see the drop-ins, or you can greet them with, "Hello! We were just about to watch our favorite TV program. We hope you like it, too, because we wouldn't miss it for the world."

Then turn up your set so they won't hear you grinding your teeth.

DEAR ABBY: On a recent trip returning from London, I was driven to near madness by a hyperactive 5-year-old boy who ran up and down the aisles screaming and intentionally ramming people with his toy truck while his parents drank martinis and beamed at him.

After the third time he connected with my second-degree sunburn, I gave up hoping for either the flight attendants or the parents to discipline the child. I told the mother bluntly that the next time the boy rammed me I would probably "ram" him back.

A plane is no place for a child to be running around unsupervised. Also, it was not what I paid a thousand dollars for.

Perhaps major airlines should schedule two or three flights a week for families on long trips—and those of us who want some peace and quiet can fly on the other days when no children under a certain age are allowed on those flights. A sensible idea?

DEB IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR DEB: Sensible indeed. But please don't offer the major airlines suggestions until they resolve their own major problem—surviving.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

States Must Act

The President's commission on drunken driving ran into the same buzz-saw North Carolina encountered when it tried to solve the same problem within its borders.

It proves (one more time) that good intentions do not always make practical politics.

The commission visualized a national law that could be enforced by withholding highway aid. That ran head-on into administration philosophy that final responsibility should be up to the individual states.

We agree with the premise that thousands of young lives could be saved on the highway if the drinking age was raised to 21; and we have heard and seen some reasons to think North Carolina might someday move in that direction — but one step at a time.

Many of the remedial steps projected sound like echoes of legislation adopted by North Carolina in the still-recent past. It suggests our legislators did their work well.

Federal guidelines provide good options for states concerned about raising their own barriers to youthful drinking; but federal enforcement of federal laws to reach that end are simply not realistic. Enforcement of federal laws now on the books is almost a haphazard operation. They net some lawbreakers and a greater number are not caught.

If anything can be done, the chances for some success are better if individual states get into the act.

Rates Hold Steady

No one expects to see utilities rates fall these days, so it is good news indeed when it is announced they won't go up for awhile.

It was announced at the Greenville Utilities Commission meeting this week that water and sewer rates will not be increased Jan. 1. Increases have been coming every six months.

Then it was announced that, although North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency wholesale rates will increase, GUC will hold the line on retail electric rates.

Finally, it was announced that since N.C. Natural Gas's request for a wholesale rate increase had been turned down by the N.C. Utilities Commission, there will be no adjustment of Greenville Utilities gas rates.

We couldn't even hope for a long period of stable utilities rates, but at least Greenville Utilities customers can look forward to a few more months of budgeting within the current rates. That's something to be positive about.

Time To Recover

NEW YORK (AP) — In an impressionistic way, Ronald Reagan's image as a foe of federal spending programs, defense excepted, is unmistakable. But a digital construction of the same image simply cannot be made.

There is no mystery to the disparity between impression and the numerical evidence. In 1980, federal spending was 22.4 percent of gross national product. In 1983 the percentage has risen above 25 percent.

Has President Reagan failed?

Yes, suggests a background paper prepared by the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank whose views perhaps more often coincide with than challenge those of the administration.

But there is time to recover, it says.

To do so, says Stuart Butler, director of domestic policy studies, the administration should consider a new strategy, the transferring of more federal programs and services to the private sector.

In short, it must seek cuts through privatization.

Says Butler, "Existing studies and experience already suggest a number of possible candidates," and then he goes on to name some of them:

Social Security, housing, education, welfare, mass transit, economic development, air traffic control, energy research, postal services, savings insurance, wastewater treatment, federal land usage.

Many people will find the list an incredible one — incredible in the sense that people consider these to be "government programs" that only the federal government can handle. Moreover, each has a constituency.

Those constituencies, says Butler, are why the Reagan administration "has found it so difficult to whittle away at spending. Constituencies put pressure on whittlers. But whittlers cannot exert counterpressure, since the savings they offer seem minuscule when spread over 230 million people.

Therefore, says Butler, the administration should understand the political dynamics and seize the initiative. "It should provide incentives for beneficiaries of federal spending to choose non-governmental alternatives."

Privatization, he says flatly, would give Americans the option of superior services. The public would recognize this, form coalitions behind each private program, "resist fiercely" any attempt to eliminate it, and would, in fact, "press for an expansion of the private role."

Can it be done? It already is being done, says Butler, who describes one of the techniques as "deflecting demand." With this technique you alter demand for federal spending by offering a preferred non-government alternative.

RALEIGH — That must have been some lunch state environmentalists and business lobbyists had in Raleigh on Dec. 8.

Five months ago, as the 1983 legislative session wound down, the two groups appeared ready to go at each other with chainsaws. Each side had a bill regulating the disposal of hazardous wastes and enough support to block the other side's bill. Neither had enough support to pass its own. The result was the biggest failure of the 1983 session — no hazardous wastes regulation law.

But tempers have cooled since late July. Some new ideas are floating around and all the old proposals which locked both sides into non-compromising positions are now off the table. By the time Gene Hill and Charles Case of the N.C. Citizens for Business and Industry, Bill Homan of the N.C. Conservation Council, a representative of the N.C. League of Women Voters and a representative of a

Chatham County citizens group had finished lunch, they'd agreed on a number of ideas. As Holman said, they're pretty optimistic they'll be able to support some kind of legislation next year "that both sides can live with."

"Both sides agreed that we want to get away from landfills," Holman said. "Everybody recognizes that landfills are not the solution."

Currently, North Carolina is not burying its hazardous wastes locally. They're being shipped — 45 million tons annually — for burial in South Carolina.

But the Palmetto state is getting tired of taking North Carolina's dangerous garbage and is moving to slow the flow. North Carolina, therefore, must take some measures to provide for the disposal of its own wastes, said Gene Hill of the business and industry association.

In 1983, all the legislative debate centered on the regulation of landfills.

The state was caught up in the Warren County PCB burial controversy and several bills — filed by individual legislators — would have banned or restricted landfilling. Both environmentalists and business lobbyists made "knee-jerk" reactions to those bills, Hill said, and didn't stop to think if there was a better disposal method than landfills.

"Just about everybody agrees now that we have this hazardous waste and we need to treat it," Holman said. The idea which has both Holman and Hill so excited is the possibility of building a central treatment facility that would either burn the wastes, or recycle, detoxify or biologically treat the wastes. In the end, Hill estimates, less than 5 percent of the wastes would need to be buried in South Carolina and that state would almost certainly be willing to take those wastes if North Carolina agreed to share its treatment facility.

The idea is not an untried one. Dow

Chemical is operating just such a plant in Louisiana and a representative of that company was to appear before a legislative study commission on hazardous wastes this month.

Hill and Holman said they envision the plant being privately owned but state regulated — possibly regulated by the state Utilities Commission.

While the two sides enjoyed a convivial lunch, and are optimistic that a repeat of the 1983 debacle can be avoided in the 1984 short session, they recognize that there are many technical points upon which they'll disagree. For example, when a waste liquid is treated, how safe do you have to make it? The more work done on that liquid, the more it will cost but the less dangerous it will be.

"I'm sure there are going to be some differences of opinion when we get into the real technical minute points," Hill said. "But I think we all see the beauty of the concept when we put it in place."

Public Forum

To the editor:

In response to Mr. Richard D.Kiernan's letter appearing in your Dec. 6, 1983, edition, I would like to say the following:

There are nine federal legal holidays. Yes, I would say at a cost of $5.25 billion each per year and a total of $47.25 billion. We will raise this figure to $52.5 billion when we start Dr. King's Day. This, of course, does not include costs for many other public holidays such as Lincoln's birthday and Good Friday, to mention two.

We are a young county and, in less than 210 years, we have arrived to the 40-hour week, less in some jobs, and soon 10 legal holidays. What will we have in another 200 years? Jefferson's Birthday? Roosevelt's Birthday? Booker T. Washington's Birthday? Einstein's Birthday? Doctors' Day? Nurses' Day? Farmers' Day? Fishermen's Day? Children's Day? When will we work? And after tax to pay for the holidays, how do we — the majority, minority, black, white, rich, poor — pay other bills?

And may I say to Mr. Kiernan — no, the cost argument has nothing to do with Dr. King's race, because his race will be taxed like all other Americans, to pay for these days of lost productivity. And yes, Mr. Kiernan, I agree end all holidays with pay until our government can operate on a balanced budget.

To the editor:

As a dairy farmer in Pitt County, I am very displeased with the compromise bill that was signed by President Reagan this month. Dairymen in North Carolina do not produce any milk that is stored as government butter and cheese, but we have to pay 50 cents for every 100 pounds of milk sold.

As for the $10 for every 100 pounds of milk I do not produce, if I cut my production, I will lose part of my milk base in North Carolina, which is more valuable than the taxpayers' $10 I would receive. I do not plan to sign any contract to receive this money. The consumer will be the loser in the long run if milk has to be shipped into North Carolina to make up for production cuts.

The Conable Bill which N.C. Farm Bureau and N.C. Dairymen supported would have cut the support price $1.50 per 100 pounds of milk. This would have been the best way to eliminate the surplus milk problem in this country.

Strength For Today

"Be ye all of one mind" (1 Peter 3:8).

While we are all disposed to accept this principle as a good one, when we look at the universe as a whole we see that it is characterized by diversity rather than unity. But in human affairs this diversity contains unity within it.

Love converts membership into fraternity. Love binds citizens together in national unity. Love binds parents and children together and sons and daughters into a unity of family life.

The Apostle Peter who wrote these words about unity was thinking of a unity in which there is infinite variety — a unity of purpose, not a unity of mood or disposition. It is 'a unity built upon common trust, love and hope.

It is not the sameness of mere words chanted in union; instead, it is that unity which arises when men and women of common purpose strive to achieve the same ends under God.

Let us be of the same mind in faith and love.

Lebanon: No Win Situation?

WASHINGTON — Evidence that President Reagan stumbled into potentially prolonged military action without bringing along his political base quickly appeared the morning of Dec. 5 when his congressional lobbyists manned the telephones to check Republican leaders on Capitol Hill.

There were no cheers over the previous day's U.S. naval air raids against Syrian positions in Lebanon, resulting in two downed fighter-bombers and eight Marines killed in heavy shelling that quickly followed. Although several Republican leaders gave public lip service to the administration's policy, the prevailing mood was a warning to the White House from the president's men on the Hill that they did not like the drift of events.

Typical was the reaction by House Minority Whip Trent Lott, a Reaganite steadfast in backing the president's hard-line military positions. "I'm not so much worried about where we are, as where we are headed," Lott told the White House in words intended to reach the Oval Office.

Behind Lott stand rank-and-file House Republicans whose unhappiness is muffled only because Congress stands in adjournment. A classic example is Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois, who as a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee usually is a surefire vote for Reagan. In this case, however, he wants the Marines out of Lebanon and will urge Lott to convey his views to the White House after Congress reconvenes Jan. 23.

Thus, Ronald Reagan does not enter upon this military involvement with support that Harry Truman in Korea and Lyndon B. Johnson in Vietnam enjoyed from their political spectrum for direct military involvement by the U.S. in the Middle East.

That is why Secretary of State George Shultz's insistence on rigidly maintaining present policy transmits shock waves of fear through the president's own political advisers. Such inflexibility is shared by military brass who flinch at moving the Marines out of harm's way.

Even the dwindling minority of congressmen who support the U.S. military presence in Lebanon want them evacuated from the Beirut airport — to be repositioned at least on the coastal highway south of the capitol, at best on U.S. warships. But the need to keep the airport open has delayed any transfer of the Marines that would minimize future casualties.

For such tactical considerations to overrule political imperatives is reminiscent of the dreamlike daze through which the U.S. descended ever deeper into the Vietnam quagmire. But Lebanon differs from Vietnam in its earliest stage in its absence not only of political support but a visible strategy.

Reagan supporters outside the administration and some inside as well believe there are only two viable options for Lebanon; a major military escalation that would threaten the Assad regime in Damascus at the risk of a U.S.-Soviet superpower confrontation, or military withdrawal that would cement the de facto partition of Lebanon. Rejecting both options, the Reagan administration drifts along a middle course which has yielded American casualties but not American policy goals.

Herein lies another contrast to the hopeful, early days of Vietnam. There is no hope expressed anywhere in this city that maintaining the beleaguered Marine contingent in Lebanon will result in either Syrian withdrawal or a Lebanese political settlement. Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker is now saying publicly that any contribution by American troops to a diplomatic solution may have ended.

"This a no-win situation," an inside campaign adviser to the president told us. "It is one of those rare conditions where there is high probability of political loss and no chance for political gain." His campaign managers see little political danger in withdrawing the Marines now, but perceive a steady erosion of support for the president so long as the withdrawal is postponed.

If Vietnam was the quagmire that gradually sucked in the U.S., the figure of speech used for Lebanon ever more widely is that of a tar baby which the Reagan administration has grasped. The difficulty of letting go stems from stubbornness, pride and inertia.

But former president Gerald R. Ford, visiting Washington last week, offered a way to disengage from the tar baby. Interviewed over Cable News Network, he told us the U.S. should give this message to the Lebanese factions: "If you don't get going and come up with a viable government in a reasonable time, we're going to withdraw our U.S. Marines." The Ford formula would win overwhelming support from Reagan loyalists in Congress.

Watt's Spirit Lives On

with binoculars instead of shotguns be given the opportunity of shouldering the financial responsibility for conserving fish and wildlife."

What apparently gets Arnett furious is that the Interior Department spends so much money conserving "non-game" animals such as chipmunks, songbirds, porcupines and other wild vertebrates, which aren't worth a shotgun shell.

While the Assistant Interior Secretary may have a valid point, I believe putting excise taxes on so-called "nature lover items" might be unfair. For example, many of us buy birdseed for our own household birds, and bird feeders for our own lawns, which are not located on federal property.

Although there are some people who purchase binoculars for bird-watching, the majority of Americans buy them for horse racing, football games and to peer into other people's apartments.

Some people use sleeping bags in the great outdoors, but far more use them on the living room floor during the holidays when students bring home more friends than there are beds in the house.

There is no reason to penalize the majority of people who buy nature-related equipment for non-federal land use, just to sock the small minority of nature lovers who are out there peering at birds and photographing wildlife trophies to hang on their walls.

I believe a direct tax would be more equitable. Bird-watchers should be made to buy a permit, and charged $1 for every new species they see. Photographers should have to pay 50 cents for every picture they take in a wildlife preserve, and $10 for every photo published in a magazine or book.

Anyone thinking of setting up a tent and sleeping on federal land should be charged the equivalent of a room at a Holiday Inn.

And any family who drives out just for the day to enjoy the scenery could buy a book of tickets which would permit them to look at an unlimited number of trees and beavers for an all-inclusive price of $25.

Non-hunting nature lovers may protest these fees, on "the grounds that hunters and fishermen at least come home with food to put on their tables, and therefore the taxes they pay eventually even out."

But I'm certain Arnett will reject this argument out of hand.

Hunters, by shooting game, are clearing out the forests, so the Interior Department is saved the cost of preserving the wildlife. Nature lovers, by encouraging conservation, only add to the price of the upkeep of our federal habitats.

So let's hear it for Assistant Interior Secretary G. Ray Arnett. By telling bird-watchers that there is no such thing as a free lunch, he's confirmed that the spirit of James watt is alive and well in Washington.

Man-Will-Never-Fly Society To Meet First

KITTY HAWK, N.C. (AP) — A re-enactment of the Wright brothers' first flight will be held Saturday morning, but not before an organization that claims the flight was fictional has its chance to be heard.

The "Man Will Never Fly Memorial Society" will hold what it calls the world's longest happy hour Friday — on the eve of the 80th anniversary of the Wright brothers' first flight on North Carolina's Outer Banks.

Dr. Ed North, a retired physician who has organized the society's meetings for 25 years, said the group's purpose is to have fun and spread its message that only birds fly.

About 300 of the 5,000 members who have paid a $2 lifetime membership will attend the happy hour that starts Friday afternoon and lasts until 10:30 a.m. Saturday when the serious Wright brothers ceremony begins.

One of the society's joking claims is that the Wright brothers' Dec. 17, 1903, flight never occurred and that they actually invented a giant mixer to make bloody Marys, North said.

"Why else would anyone come to the Outer Banks in North Carolina in the winter except to drink," North said.

Every year, he added, his society salutes those people who told the Wright brothers, "You'll never get it off the ground."

The group's slogan is, "Given a choice, we will never fly; given no choice, we will never fly sober."

Regrettably, North lamented, many members of the society arrive in private airplanes for the annual bash.

North said the public image of the society may be one of a large party. But he said his group has made contributions to mankind.

Among the society's "contributions," none serious, are:

- A proposal to recycle airplanes into beer cans.
- A proposal to build a one-way, single lane bridge to allow tourists to walk to the moon.
- A proposal to build an invisible museum for "interterrestrial flying objects."

In the wake of President Reagan's 1981 dismissal of striking air traffic controllers, the society honored Robert Poli, the former head of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Union. He was named recipient of the "Anti-Aviation Hall of Infamy Award" for "keeping people out of the air."

Society members dress in vintage flight gear for their party.

North said people who doubt the claim that man wasn't meant to fly also are invited to attend the party at a Nags Head hotel.

"All you have to do is look at a 747 and you know there's no way it's going to get off the ground, except maybe with a derrick," North said.

Recruiters Flooded By N.C. Enlistees

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Marine recruiters in North Carolina say they have no openings for boot camp until next spring, thanks to a flood of enlistments following the Oct. 23 suicide bombing of Marine headquarters in Beirut.

The Marine Corps now has its largest waiting pool for boot camp in years, officials say, despite the toughest standards in the corps' 208-year history.

"I'd say we're turning away 10 to every one we accept," said Sgt. Daniel McFerrin, public affairs officer for the Marine recruiting office in Raleigh. That office handles recruiting for all of North Carolina and the South Carolina counties of Chesterfield, Lancaster and York.

"Anyone who says 'the Marines will take anyone' ought to come into our office and see for themselves," added Master Sgt. James Cain, a supervisor in the seven-county Marine recruiting office in Charlotte.

In a recent two-day period, he said, his office received 15 telephone calls from men interested in signing up. But after the inquirers answered a few questions over the phone, all were told to look for jobs elsewhere.

Cain said the callers were unsuitable because they didn't have high school diplomas or because they had police records. The Marines are no longer taking borderline prospects, he said.

"North Carolina is in the best shape it's ever been in,"

Cain said. "It's hard to get in. From this district, we don't have any openings for boot camp until March, April and May. I'm already full for June and I've got only a few openings for July."

Nationally, recruiters say Marine enlistments jumped sharply in November. The corps signed up 3,633 men and women nationwide in October. In November, the corps recruited 4,126, about a 13.5 percent increase over October and more than 10 percent over the corps' quota of 3,730 for November.

But Marine officials have differing opinions on how directly the surge of sign-ups relates to the bombing in Beirut, in which 240 U.S. servicemen were killed, and the Oct. 25 invasion of Grenada.

"What happened in Beirut and Grenada in general has created more patriotism," McFerrin said. "More than anything, it's made the jobs of our recruiters easier. They're getting much better receptions when they go into schools."

Indiana Dump To Be Example

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Georgia congressman says an Indiana hazardous waste dump will be used as an example of how the Environmental Protection Agency is handling the $1.6 billion "superfund" toxic waste cleanup program.

Rep. Elliott H. Levitas, D-Ga., says his House Public Works oversight and investigations subcommittee expects to hold seven to ten days of hearings over the next several weeks exploring EPA's action at a toxic waste dump near Seymour, Ind.

The Seymour site was one of the sites mentioned prominently early this year in the congressional investigation of EPA. Allegations surfaced that the court-approved settlement with dumping firms for cleaning up the surface of the Seymour site was a "sweetheart" deal that recovered only a portion of the cost. Levitas said that settlement would be thoroughly investigated.

Safety Air Bag Backer Raps White House Policy

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It is hard to imagine a more scathing indictment from a foe, much less a friend: The charge that the White House is responsible for 9,000 deaths this year and will be responsible for just as many in 1984.

"It doesn't matter to them about the human component," the accuser says. "It doesn't even matter about the cost. It's really extremism, and it's wrong."

The issue: air bags vs. deregulatory fever.

The accuser? A political ally of the president: Mild-mannered John Danforth, Republican from Missouri, the only minister in the Senate. For years he has been crusading for air bags, saying, "It is the single most important thing we can do on highway safety. Its time will come."

At a September hearing before his Commerce subcommittee, Danforth's normal reserve evaporated when he heard Robert Tiernan, a Washington attorney, tell how his 15-year-old son Timmy lapsed into a coma after an auto crash on a rain-slick West Virginia mountain road, then died 336 days later. The boy could have been saved by air bags, his father was convinced.

Danforth gazed at the witness, and shook his head. "God bless you, Mr. Tiernan," he said. He traced administration efforts to dump a requirement for air bag crash protection in all cars not to bureaucrats, but directly to the White House.

The administration "has, by its action, taken on responsibility for deaths on the highway," he said. "It's ideology, that's all it is."

Christopher DeMuth, the official in charge of regulatory policy in Reagan's Office of Management and Budget, vigorously denies Danforth's charge and termed it irresponsible.

"It's saddening to see what is in fact a difficult and subtle issue characterized in such a way," he said. "The fact is, we're trying to do a good job on this."

He said government cannot be blamed for highway deaths simply because it has failed to require passive restraints.

"I don't want to compare it with the seriousness of traffic accidents, but are we responsible for the deaths of people who die falling down stairs because we failed to ban two-story homes?" DeMuth asked. "I suppose we could require everyone to stay home, then we wouldn't have any traffic fatalities."

He challenged Danforth's figure of 9,000 lives that could be saved by the bags, saying it is based on 16-year-old information that is statistically invalid.

The depth of feeling that emerged in the September hearing provides a clue as to why Danforth continues to lead the congressional fight for an air bag requirement after three years of frustration.

Danforth has introduced and pushed through the Commerce Committee a bill that would require major U.S. and foreign automakers to offer air bags as an option on their most popular car lines beginning with 1986 models. He and proponents like the insurance industry think the bags are a reliable, cheap way to save the lives of motorists who can't be persuaded to use existing seat belts.

The administration first delayed, then overturned, a rule requiring passive restraints — either air bags or seat belts that automatically wrap around car occupants — that had been a decade in the making.

DeMuth declined to comment on the rule itself, which is under a Supreme Court-ordered reconsideration. He conceded that there are people in the administration — including OMB Director David Stockman — who have been skeptical of air bags, but said that does not pre- judge the outcome of the new rule-making process.

With safety technology, DeMuth said, the government sometimes does more harm than good through mandatory standards. When regulators announced their intent to have a passive restraints requirement, he said, "it froze the automobile industry's interest in trying any innovation on their own."

Danforth's bill, which began as a strong mandate for air bags in all cars, was vastly watered down when it emerged from the committee.

And even if it were to be approved by the full Senate and make it past Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., the automakers' chief defender in the House, Reagan would veto it, Danforth said.

"That bill is never going to be signed into law by President Reagan with an air bags section in it," the senator said in an interview. "It's the anti-regulatory philosophy."

The very term "air bag" has a connotation of being something strange, some kind of gizmo. People have really unfounded fears. They think it's some scheme thought up by somebody that's going to cost them money and that's going to explode in their faces."

Danforth notes that Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole agrees with him that air bag technology is sound. She has ordered her government car be equipped with air bags.

Twice Taken By A Thief

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Wake County deputies are looking for a burglar who allegedly stole some stereo equipment and a shotgun twice — the second time out from under a police stake-out.

Capt. Tim Lanier said Alexander Hawkins reported the original theft Tuesday and told officers he found the stolen property in a vacant house across the street. Officers urged Hawkins to leave the stolen property there so the burglars could be apprehended when they returned.

Lanier said while officers were discussing the case, the shotgun disappeared, followed shortly by the stereo equipment.

By Thursday, police had arrested Thomas Harold Campbell, 25, of Raleigh and Ernest Glenn Moore, 20, of Wendell and charged them with breaking and entering and larceny. A third suspect was still at large, Lanier said.

He said the sheriff admitted, "It's a little embarrassing."

Federal Agents Seize An Estate

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Federal agents have seized a half-million-dollar Castle Hayne estate, saying it was purchased in 1979 with money made in illegal drug trade.

The estate, known as Rock Hill Plantation, is owned by

Dan Moore Is Backing Knox

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former Gov. Dan Moore is supporting former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox in the 1984 Democratic primary for governor and will serve as a special advisor to Knox during the campaign.

"During his two terms as mayor of Charlotte he headed the second largest government in North Carolina," said Moore, also a former state Supreme Court justice. "This experience will stand him in good stead as he heads our state government."

Moore said that Knox has the necessary experience and knowledge about state government but he also has a "completely fresh approach."

Police Uncover Illegal Lab

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Charlotte police say they have arrested a chemist for an illegal drug laboratory and seized drugs with a street value of $350,000 after a five-month investigation.

Daren Green Jr., 36, of Charlotte, was charged Wednesday with two counts of possessing phenyl-2-propanone; possession of cocaine; simple possession of marijuana; simple possession of cocaine; manufacturing methamphetamine; possession with intent to sell and deliver methamphetamine; and carrying a concealed weapon, a pistol, in his car.

Armand Amato Jr. of New York, U.S. Attorney Sam Currin said. Amato, now in his early 30s, paid $260,000 for the 30-acre estate.

An investigation by a special federal grand jury could lead to criminal charges against Amato, Currin said. The grand jury will begin its work in Raleigh in January. He said grand juries in New York and South Carolina also are investigating Amato.

The estate, which overlooks the Northeast Cape Fear River, includes a large house, 22 horse stables, a swimming pool and a river dock. Officials think Amato moved from the house to New York last spring, Currin said. Until it was seized, the house was for sale for $600,000. He said its tax value is around $500,000.

About 20 federal officials took possession of the property Wednesday, Currin said. They are searching it and making an inventory.

U.S. Marshal William Berryhill escorted reporters and photographers to the property Thursday morning, but the group was not permitted to go inside the house.

The property seizure is the work of a federal drug task force and involved the Drug Enforcement Administration, the U.S. Customs Service, the FBI, the U.S. marshal and the State Bureau of Investigation, Currin said.

It marks the first seizure in the Eastern District of North Carolina under a federal law passed in 1978 to allow such seizures. It is the second largest seizure in the nation since the task force began its work about a year ago, he said.

Amato has not yet been served with notice of the seizure of his property and federal authorities may have difficulty finding him.

Amato has 30 days to file a challenge to the seizure. If he challenges the action, lengthy court proceedings could follow, Currin said. If not, the federal government will put the property up for sale.

Upgrade Security Measures For Vulnerable Sites

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK
Associated Press Writer

Concrete barriers at a Navy weapons base in California, armored patrol vehicles at a nuclear lab in Tennessee, a red alert in New York — America's federal establishment is taking visible steps to defend itself against the threat of radical suicide bombers.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan predicts that foreign anti-American forces, like the ones responsible for deadly bombings at U.S. facilities in Beirut and Kuwait, may "bring the war to our shores" in 1984.

"We should assume it and not be surprised by it," the New York Democrat told a conference on terrorism earlier this week.

Because of the "suicide-mission concept," FBI Director William H. Webster says, such an attack "presumably could just as easily take place in the United States and calls for reasonably prudent measures."

Since the Oct. 23 attack that killed 241 servicemen at the U.S. Marine headquarters in Lebanon and Monday's bombing in Kuwait that killed seven at the U.S. Embassy, physical precautions have been taken from coast to coast to prevent the same thing from happening on U.S. soil.

Gray alerts, requiring increased identification checks and searches of suspicious parcels, are in place at the nation's 7,500 federal buildings.

Top-level red alerts, in which extra guards are added and physical security beefed up, have been declared for federal facilities in five cities in upstate New York — Syracuse, Buffalo, Utica, Watertown and Binghamton. Officials said some red-alert procedures were being employed in Albany, Manhattan and Brooklyn as well.

Three-foot concrete barriers were installed this week in front of the U.S. Mission to the United Nations in New York and the federal courthouse in Brooklyn, and behind gates at six entrances to the Seal Beach Naval Weapons Station in California.

At the 14-story New York City police headquarters in Manhattan, round-the-clock foot patrols have been installed. Parking on adjacent streets has been banned, even by police vehicles. Security also is being improved at every station house in the city.

At the federal courthouse in Manhattan, guards have been posted.

In Washington, where steps to improve security on federal property first surfaced at the White House during the Thanksgiving weekend, security is tight — and getting tighter.

A Pentagon spokesman announced Thursday that security officers will soon take "clearly visible" measures to boost protection. Starting Tuesday, Pentagon police will shut tunnels that normally carry commuter buses, military vehicles and taxis underneath the huge Defense Department headquarters.

Sand-filled dump trucks blocking gates at the White House and State Department have been replaced with 3-foot-high concrete barriers. Visitors are now checked before being allowed on the grounds.

The U.S. Capitol is another Washington facility where security has been increased considerably, changes instituted primarily in the wake of a Nov. 7 bomb explosion in a Senate corridor.

Tourists can enter the building through only four entrances, instead of eight. Hallways adjacent to the Senate chamber are closed off.

In Oak Ridge, Tenn., the Department of Energy has purchased armored patrol vehicles with turrets and guns for use at its nuclear weapons parts plant and nuclear research lab. More guards have been hired, and they're receiving anti-terrorist training.

New guard towers are being erected, a road running past the weapons plant has been barricaded, and Congress is considering restricting the area's airspace.

At the Point Mugu Naval Air Station in Ventura County, Calif., spokesman Dave Casey said security guards no longer wave through the stickered cars of personnel arriving at the base, home of the Pacific Missile Test Center and the airfield used by Air Force One when President Reagan visits his Santa Barbara ranch.

The new precautions have not been without inconveniences, however.

Casey said the intensified security checks at the seaside stations 50 miles north of Los Angeles were causing traffic backups.

There also was a traffic jam Thursday morning outside Brookhaven National Research Laboratory, on New York's Long Island, as officials began checking security passes for all personnel. Two bombs exploded Tuesday in a Long Island building that houses a Navy recruiting station.

Secret Report Hints Obstruction In Murder Probe

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A secret report written for the State Department suggests that El Salvador's defense minister tried to obstruct an investigation into the murders of four U.S. churchwomen, sources say.

And at least one portion of the report discusses an unconfirmed order from a higher authority to soldiers to kill the women, one source said. However, the report concludes there is no com-elling evidence linking high officials to the murders.

All the sources insisted Thursday they not be quoted by name in discussing the report, which was written by retired U.S. District Judge Harold R. Tyler Jr.

The report was submitted to the State Department on Dec. 3, with copies going to congressional committees. Members of Congress were permitted to read the document at committee offices.

The sources said the report suggests Gen. Carlos Eugenio Vides Casanova played a role in trying to cover up the 1980 murders, although it does not accuse him of any specific crime.

The report says as part of the cover-up, the soldiers responsible for the killings were transferred from their airport protection assignments to other areas. And they exchanged weapons with other military men, according to the sources who saw the report.

One source said the report suggests that "the current defense minister, Casanova, is the guy who knew about it a couple of days after the murders. The report says it's not sure he was involved in the cover-up, but there's some evidence to think he was. We know he appointed the heads of two military commissions that investigated the murders."

One investigation reportedly was for publication and the second for internal National Guard use. Military investigators reported in February 1981 that they could not determine who was responsible for the killings and turned the case over to civilian authorities.

After pressure from the U.S. Embassy, the investigation was revived, and it was reported in May 1981 that five national guardsmen were arrested. But the sources said Tyler concluded that the National Guard hierarchy knew who was responsible soon after the murders.

A source said the report found it "quite probable that Vides Casanova knew what happened and was part and parcel of the cover-up." Two other sources confirmed that the report suggests that the general, as head of the National Guard, knew about the alleged participation of the five guardsmen in the killings shortly after the murders.

In discussing the murders, the report said two of the arrested guardsmen informed investigators that their sergeant told them he was ordering the killings on the authority of higher-ups.

But the report found Salvadoran investigators discounted the information and there's no evidence Tyler pursued the development, a source said. Instead, Tyler concludes there's no compelling evidence of involvement by Salvadoran officials.

Several sources said the report concludes that there is strong evidence to believe the five accused guardsmen are guilty.

The four churchwomen — Sisters Ita Ford, Maura Clarke, Dorothy Kazel and Catholic layworker Jean Donovan — were killed on Dec. 2, 1980. Vides Casanova was promoted to defense minister, the country's highest military post, on April 18, 1983.

According to the confession of one accused guardsman, Vides Casanova told a National Guard meeting on Dec. 9, 1980, a week after the churchwomen were killed, that he had received reports that guardsmen may have been involved.

One source said the Tyler report shows that the National Guard leadership largely tried to "ignore the case and hoped it would go away," but that evidence was not destroyed.

Meanwhile, Rep. Mary Rose O'Carroll, D-Ohio, said the report "contains 'startling information which the American people have a right to know.'" She urged Secretary of State George Shultz to make it public.

Ms. O'Carroll has served for three years as the liaison for families of the victims to the United States and El Salvador governments.

The Reagan administration, meanwhile, has granted a request by Vides Casanova for technical assistance to curb right-wing death squads, according to a published report. Today's editions of The Washington Post quoted unnamed State Department officials as saying it had not yet been determined what type of assistance the Salvadoran government would receive.

Death squads have been blamed by human rights organizations for the deaths of 30,000 to 40,000 people since the Salvadoran civil war began in 1979.

Urge Top Priority Go To Waste Incinerator

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An incineration plant to burn hazardous wastes should be a top priority for state government, according to a draft report adopted Thursday by the Governor's Waste Management Board.

The report, prepared by the board's Hazardous Waste Technical Advisory Committee, rejected the use of landfills for untreated hazardous wastes, as well as using pits, ponds or lagoons for disposal.

Public hearings on the report will be held in Charlotte, Greensboro and Wilmington and the final report is expected to become the state's blueprint for dealing with hazardous waste.

North Carolina's hazardous waste facilities generated 6.2 billion pounds of waste in 1982, making the state the 11th largest waste generator in the country.

"The lack of permitted treatment, storage and disposal facilities in the state is hindering the efforts of industrial generators of hazardous wastes to develop long-term, stable management strategies," concludes the committee.

The group urges the state to set as its building priorities an incineration facility followed by a solvent recovery facility and a landfill for storing residues from the other treatments.

Committee chairman Alvis Turner, an associate professor at the University of North Carolina, said the committee favors a commercial facility as opposed to a state facility.

The committee's recommendations were based partly on a review of existing research and were submitted to industry representatives and large waste generators for review and comments.

The committee is made up of professors, industry executives, engineers and specialists. The group has been meeting for almost a year to come up with the recommendations.

Among the committee's other conclusions are that:

- There currently is no reliable way to estimate the number and kinds of commercial treatment, storage and disposal facilities needed in North Carolina.
- Deep-well injection and ocean dumping of hazardous waste should not be used.
- An industry's legal liability for waste transferred through an exchange should be examined. A waste exchange is a clearinghouse for industries that want to get rid of waste or get waste that can be reused as raw materials.

Turner warned that cost was not considered in ranking the technologies.

"The committee feels justified in this approach since cost data are currently unreliable and subject to change," he said.

Complaints Bar Concert

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — An annual holiday concert at Mendenhall Junior High was not held Thursday morning after a parent demanded that songs referring to Jesus be deleted from the program.

Superintendent Kenneth Newbold said the parent began complaining to school officials a week ago and finally appealed to Newbold on Wednesday night.

The superintendent said that under school policy the parent was right in making the complaint and "the principal simply failed to respond."

Principal Charles Wallace was notified about 10 minutes before the assembly program was to begin that religious music must be deleted from the program.

Wallace said he hustled to the auditorium to stop the show and that by the time he and Newbold had finished conferring, the time allotted for the concert had expired and students went back to their classes.

The 7:30 p.m. public performance Thursday night did go on, but without the religious songs.

Newbold said Wallace and concert planners were wrong to include religious music in the concert because school board policy prohibits any use of materials that would offend any religious segment of the school.

coordinator of industrial and technical education. A graduate of Appalachian State University and Texas A&M, he has been at ECU since 1970. He and several colleagues initiated the idea for the center two years ago and he has been active in its organization.

Tester views the Center for Applied Technology as "a technological extension arm of the university... as a pipeline to bring ECU's technological resources to the region."

Tester said he foresees "a more competitive stance for both expansion of existing industry and for attracting new high technology industry through center operations."

Howell said the establishment of the center "represents the commitment this university has toward service to industry in Eastern North Carolina."

"For faculty, it will provide an opportunity to apply research and consulting skills to the solution of business and industrial problems while renewing their own training and development. For students, it will mean more relevant instruction and expanded employment opportunities," Howell said.

"For business, industry and government," according to Howell, the center "represents an opportunity for improved operating systems and service at a lower cost."

Calhoun, who said the school of technology will seek funds from industry to finance the center's operation, said the center will provide "a much needed and unique mechanism for establishing close liaison" between the school of technology and the private sector.

Calhoun said the center will serve as a liaison between organizations needing high technology assistance and individuals who can provide it, perform practical contract research and consultation on technology-related problems; and provide high technology training opportunities through contract with clients.

Tester, author of a newly published book "Electronics Today," said the center will also develop and maintain both a talent bank and a data bank of industrial and technical topics to link people and data to specific community and industrial needs.

Dr. Angelo A. Volpe, vice chancellor for academic affairs at East Carolina, said "there is no doubt that the center will provide a high technology resource and a vehicle for mutual cooperation that will rebound to the benefit of our university as well as industry and government in our region."

The 15-member advisory board of directors, made up of business, government and industrial leaders, "assures industrial and community input on activities and programs within the center," Tester said.

The board includes: Bill Abeyounis of Washington, regional industrial development representative for the N.C. Department of Commerce; Doug Birch, information and training officer with the Naval Air Rework Facility at the Cherry Point Marine Corps air station; Greenville Mayor Janice Buck, president of Buck Supply Co.; Percy Cox, former Greenville mayor and head of Cox Armature Works; Charles Gaskins, a member of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners; Robert Griffin, plant manager of Procter and Gamble Co.; N.C. Phosphate President Ward Grosz; and domestic manufacturers have used a greater volume of foreign leaf in their cigarettes.

In his statement, Helms said there was pressure for an even greater reduction than 11 1/2 percent because there's already a 3 1/2-years' supply of leaf on the market.

Helms said he hoped that changes in the tobacco program that Congress has made over the past two years will help make U.S. leaf more competitive.

Counting expected adjustments for undermarketings exceeding overmarketings, the quota of 805 million pounds translates into an effective quota of about 835 million pounds, Rank said. On that basis, the 1984 cut will be only about 52 million pounds or approximately 6 percent below this year's adjusted quota of 887 million pounds.

In the tobacco program, farmers who produce less than their quota of tobacco in one year are allowed to "overmarket" the amount of the shortfall in the following year.

Rank said that even after the adjustment for undermarketings, the department "felt it necessary to reduce the 1984 quota so that a reduction in supplies would come about in an orderly manner."

The 1984 national acreage allotment will be 404,726 acres, down from this year's 457,516 acres, he said.

Flue-cured tobacco is grown in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

A new Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act signed by President Reagan on Nov. 29 continues a freeze on the support price of flue-cured tobacco — $1.699 per pound in 1984, a level unchanged since 1982.

spread up to half a foot of snow deep into Dixie today, snarling rush hour traffic in cities such as Dallas, while the snowbound Midwest was numbed by a wind chill as low as 40 degrees below zero.

A stubborn storm in the Great Lakes meanwhile turned into a snow machine, with a foot of snow that fell Thursday at Marquette, Mich., topped by 4 more inches today.

From Utah to Minnesota, records were falling as fast as the snow.

The 3.9 inches that hit Minneapolis and St. Paul on Thursday brought the year's total to a record 95.1 inches; in Omaha, Neb., the total stood at a record 64.1 inches; and 21 inches of new snow at the Alta ski resort near Salt Lake City set a new record for November and December of 284 inches.

The death toll from the past few days' weather rose to 10, including a woman found apparently frozen to death less than 20 feet from a mobile home in Mandan, N.D., and two people who drowned in central Pennsylvania in flood-causing rain that finally subsided Thursday.

Snow fell this morning from southern and central Oklahoma and northern Texas into the Deep South states of Louisiana and Arkansas. North Alabama was expected to get snow by nightfall.

Travelers' advisories warning of icy roads went up today for nearly all of northern Texas and Oklahoma as the southern storm lumbered across the region. Wichita Falls, Texas, got 6 inches in six hours while Amarillo had 4 inches and Dallas had about 3 inches by the morning rush hour.

In Oklahoma, 6 inches was measured at Marietta, Ardmore and Tishomingo and 5 inches fell at Waurika.

Police in Shreveport, La., warned of icy roads and bridges and about one to 2 inches of snow fell in southwestern and central Arkansas.

To the north, it snowed today in all or parts of Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, West Virginia, western Pennsylvania and western New York.

Even light snow was treacherous in wind that swept across the Plains and whipped it into "a good old-fashioned ground blizzard," said Mike Bender, a National Weather Service forecaster in Fargo, N.D.

This morning's official low was 23 below zero at Bismarck, N.D. But the wind chill made it feel like minus 43 at Mason City, Iowa, and Fairmont, Minn., minus 35 at Des Moines and minus 20 in the Twin Cities, while piling the snow into 6-foot drifts that forced road crews off highways in southwestern Minnesota. Forecasters in South Dakota warned the cold could be fatal to people and animals.

"We're going into the kind of pattern where you struggle to reach zero during the day," said forecaster Rich Naistat in Minneapolis, adding that another cold blast was "coming straight out of the Yukon."

Daytime highs in parts of North Dakota probably won't surpass 5 above zero before Christmas, said Bender.

The snow Thursday forced at least 130 schools to close in Minnesota and western Wisconsin, with 145 more starting late or letting out early. Schools also closed in much of Michigan, South Dakota, eastern Nebraska and western Missouri, including Kansas City.

Deep drifts and hundreds of minor accidents, including trucks that slid and jackknifed, forced dozens of roads to close.

In the Rockies, the storm that dropped 17 inches of snow at Vail and other Colorado ski resorts was expected to clear out today — just in time to make room for another Pacific-bred storm heading for the region by the weekend, said forecaster Keith Williams in Denver.

In beleaguered Steamboat Springs, Colo., truck driver Scott Covalt looked out Thursday and saw — more snow, for the 34th straight day. The town got about 3 inches of new white stuff.

"It's pretty tiring," Covalt said. "It doesn't look like it's going to let up for a while."

The Falkland Christmas parade will be held Saturday beginning at 10 a.m.

Falkland-area residents who planned the parade are calling it "a city limit to city limit event," with units expected to stretch from one boundary of this, the smallest incorporated town in North Carolina, to the other.

Persuade Judge To Spare Driver

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) —

The parents of a 23-year-old man killed by a drunken driver have persuaded a judge to spare the guilty motorist a jail term and instead require him to perform community service.

Joseph and Doris Parker made their plea for mercy in a "victim impact statement" read by the county prosecutor during the sentencing Thursday of Stephen J. Uhlund, 30, of Severna Park.

The Parkers said they believed "meaningful community service" would serve as a better punishment than jail for Uhlund, who was responsible for the death of their son, William P. Parker, one of eight children.

"Hopefully, we, Bill's parents have instilled in his brothers and sisters the Christian ethics of forgiveness," they said in their statement. "We all hope that Stephen Uhlund understands and has true contrition in his heart and in the end will be a better person."

Circuit Judge Raymond G. Thieme Jr. ordered Uhlund to work 1,500 hours as a nursing assistant at the University of Maryland Shock Trauma Center in Baltimore. The center takes care of the state's worst accident cases.

The judge said that if it hadn't been for the parents' request, he would not have accepted the plea bargain agreement.

State's Attorney Warren Duckett Jr., the Anne Arundel County prosecutor, also said that he would have sought a jail term if the parents hadn't pleaded for mercy.

"In cases like this, there is pressure for incarceration, because the public demands it," Duckett said.

Uhlund pleaded guilty to auto manslaughter, a charge punishable by up to five years in prison. He received a suspended three-year sentence and five years of unsupervised probation. Eight other charges, including driving while intoxicated, were dropped in return for the guilty plea.

Uhlund, a district manager with a car dealership, was described by his attorney, T. Joseph Touhey, as a "clean-cut Jack Armstrong type" who had no previous criminal or driving record.

Touhey said the defendant is "not a drunken bum but a decent human being and this was not a characteristic act. Nobody is suffering more than him and he carries genuine emotional scars for taking another's life. Tears come to his eyes every time he talks of it."

Chapter Officers Installed

The Down East chapter of the Painting and Decorating Contractors of America installed its 1984 officers recently. They were: Gary Whaley of Kinston, president; Linwood Dicken of Farmville, vice president; Cathy Jessen of Greenville, treasurer; Debra Dudley of Greenville, treasurer, and Garland Lancaster of Greenville, board member.

In other business, the club decided to send Ms. Jessen to the Carolinas Council convention in January. She will take the chapter's 1983 scrapbook, which has been entered in competition. The chapter's last scrapbook was named best in the nation in competition involving 250 chapters.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held Jan. 10. For more information, call any of the officers or Cathy at 756-7910 or Debra at 756-7611.

Crawford Re-Elected

Bobby Crawford has been re-elected mayor pro-tem for the town of Winterville, town officials report.

Crawford was unanimously chosen as the town's mayor pro-tem at a recent meeting of the Winterville Board of Aldermen.

Simpson Tag Sale Set

License tags for the village of Simpson will go on sale for $1 at the Simpson Town Hall beginning Jan. 1.

All residents of the town are required to display the tags on automobiles.

Ruritans Install Officers

Bruce Gray was installed recently as 1984 president of the Winterville Ruritan Club. Other 1984 officers include Ervin Spain, vice president; Paul Hunsucker, treasurer, and Keith Knox, secretary. J.H. Weatherington was also installed as a director of the club.

Club members Buck Weaver and Tony Moore will attend the National Ruritan Convention in Tennessee in January, club officials reported.

Lucama Driver Charged

Greenville police charged Thomas Harold Glasgow III of Lucama with driving while impaired following investigation of a 9:30 p.m. collision Wednesday on Eastbrook Drive, 30 feet east of the Greenville Boulevard intersection.

Investigators said the Glasgow car collided with parked cars owned by Joe Edward Williamson of Raleigh and George Washington Davis of 207E Eastbrook Drive, causing $2,000 damage to the Glasgow car, $300 damage to the Williamson car and $2,500 damage to the Davis auto.

Board To Meet Monday

The Pitt County Board of Social Services will meet Monday at noon at the Three Steers Restaurant on Memorial Drive. The meeting will be open to the public.

Riggs Is Reappointed

Gov. Jim Hunt has reappointed Dr. Stanley R. Riggs of Greenville, professor of geology at East Carolina University and a 1983 recipient of the O. Max Gardner award from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, to the North Carolina Mining Commission.

UN Assembly Chooses New Information Order

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. General Assembly approved a resolution backing efforts to create a "world information order" which opponents, including the United States, fear would encourage government control and censorship of news.

The Assembly voted 135-4, with 9 abstentions, Thursday night to approve the resolution and an attached set of guidelines. Voting against it were United States, Britain, Ecuador and Israel.

The resolution called for the U.N. Information Committee to seek assistance from the Commission on Transnational Corporations in connection with the committee's mandate to promote a new world information order.

Third World nations say the new order is needed to counter what it calls unfair coverage of developing countries by large Western entertainment and news organizations. The nations say political upheaval and disasters tend to be emphasized, with news of social progress largely ignored, and that Western media impose their cultural values on the Third World.

The United States has complained that aspects of the new information order promoted by most members of the U.N. Educational and Scientific and Cultural Organization would encourage governments to further stifle free expression and to censor news coverage.

The resolution appealed to governments, organizations and "information and communication media, both public and private ... to disseminate more widely objective and better balanced information about the progress of developing nations and about U.N. activities."

The guidelines said an appeal should be made to "the international media" to support the "efforts of the international community towards global development and, in particular ... the efforts of the developing countries for their own economic, social and cultural progress."

Those abstaining in the vote were Austria, Belgium, Canada, France, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and New Zealand.

In a provision directed at Israel without naming it, the resolution asked the U.N. Department of Public Information to cover all violations of international law involving occupied territories, especially policies that frustrate Palestinians from exercising their "national legitimate rights."

The Assembly also adopted unanimously a resolution reaffirming "strong support for the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and its efforts to establish a new world information and communication order."

Japan's Govm't To $12 Million Addition Planned Fund Robot Project To Williamston Area Center

TOKYO (AP) — The government will provide $85 million to industry to develop robots for handling nuclear materials and hazardous wastes, undersea exploration and other work dangerous to humans, a spokesman said today.

The money will fund an eight-year project involving about 20 Japanese companies, said Noboru Enomoto of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry.

Enomoto, who is in charge of the project, told the Associated Press the robots could be used to repair and inspect nuclear power plants, explore for undersea oil deposits and assist at disasters.

He said the robots will be equipped with advanced, mechanical sensors so they will be able to make their own judgments on a task and surrounding conditions.

They will be made to move over steps, inclinations and uneven surfaces and have one or more multi-joint, multi-fingered "hands" for manipulation.

Japan already leads the world in the production and use of industrial robots.

Enomoto declined to name the companies involved, but the mass-circulation daily Asahi Shimbun reported that they include Hitachi Ltd., Mitsubishi Heavy Industries Ltd., Fanuc Co. Ltd., NEC Corp., Toshiba Corp., and Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries.

The project was officially adopted as one of 18 large-scale international development projects in advanced technology at the June summit of the Western industrialized countries at Williamsburg, Va.

At the conference, Japan was nominated as the "leader country" to coordinate suggestions among other countries and handle the exchange of information on similar efforts in other countries.

WILLIAMSTON — Plans have been announced for a $12 million addition to the Santree Living Center, a retirement community in Williamston.

The center, owned and operated by the National Benevolent Association of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), has retained the architectural and planning firm of Dudley, Shoe & Hite in Greenville to design and supervise construction of a $12 million addition. The center is located on a 30-acre site off U.S. 64 in a wooded area near the city limits.

Projected in the new construction are 156 additional apartment living units; 44 additional independent living units; a 60-bed health care center and a community center containing dining facilities for 200 persons, shop and craft rooms, a library, several lounges and visitor areas, and an indoor pool and whirlpool.

The present center consists of 12 apartment living units and 15 independent living units. Administrative offices and a temporary community center occupy 3 of the independent living units. Currently, 28 residents reside at Santree.

James F. White, Santree's executive director, said "this major addition to Santree will provide a secure, healthy and Christian retirement environment for 320 residents and 60 patients.

"It will also produce substantial economic benefits for Williamston and the surrounding area. In addition to jobs generated by the construction, more than 100 new, permanent jobs, with an annual payroll in excess of one million dollars, will be created."

White said financing will be arranged through commercial sources, with groundbreaking projected for the fall of 1984.

Soviet Confirms A Joint Space Role

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has confirmed for U.S. officials that a Soviet satellite launched this week carried animals in a cooperative space venture with the United States and France, a U.S. diplomat said today.

The satellite, Cosmos 1514, was launched Wednesday and the official news agency Tass said it carried "biological objects" to undergo experiments on the effects of weightlessness and space radiation.

U.S. officials initially could not get confirmation of their belief that the satellite was one scheduled for a Dec. 15 launch under agreement with the United States and France. But that confirmation finally has been obtained, said a U.S. diplomat who asked not to be identified.

Although a U.S.-Soviet space cooperation agreement was not renewed last year, the countries agreed to go ahead with the so-called "bio-satellite" project.

U.S. officials said the agreement called for a monkey and 10 pregnant rats furnished by the United States to be sent into space.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 51.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. 45 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 51.44 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today in a muted response to better-than-expected news on inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 24.80 points in the past three sessions, recovered 1.42 to 1,238.21 by noon today.

But declines slightly outnumbered advances in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened, the government reported that producer prices of finished goods dropped 0.2 percent in November.

The figure made it almost certain that reported inflation at the wholesale level for all of 1983 would come in under 1 percent.

The news sparked a decline in interest rates in the credit markets, and also appeared to lift stock traders' spirits. But analysts said their enthusiasm was subdued by expectations that the Federal Reserve would report a large increase in the money supply after the close.

Among actively traded blue chips, General Electric rose 1/4 to 55 3/8, and International Business Machines added 1/8 to 120 1/8.

The NYSE's composite index gained .07 to 93.60. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .36 at 219.23.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 35.72 million shares at noon, against 37.30 million at the same point Thursday.

Pirates Entertain Drexel Saturday

East Carolina University's men's basketball team, after a two-game road trip that yielded two losses, returns to what has been safe Minges Coliseum Saturday night, hosting Drexel University.

The Pirates, 2-2 overall, are 2-0 against opponents in Minges so far this year.

Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in the contest. Youth Night is being observed at the game, with all youths, 17 and under, admitted for $1, with Pirate Posters presented on a first-come-first-served basis.

The game is only the third home contest among the first 12 games the Pirates play this year. They follow the contest with a road trip to Illinois for the River City Shootout at Bradley University, then play Boston University on the road before returning home to face UNC Charlotte on January 2. Three more road games follow that.

Drexel comes in with a 2-2 record also, having beaten Delaware, 72-55 and Lehigh, 76-58. They lost a close contest to Temple, 61-60 and fell to Bucknell, 66-56.

The Dragons run a three-guard offense, something the Pirates have not faced this year. The backcourt starters include 6-3 sophomore Walter Fuller, 6-1 sophomore Chris O'Brien, and 6-3 freshman Tom Redersen. The center is 6-10 senior Michael Mitchell, while 6-7 Richard Congo, another senior, handles the forward position.

Congo is the leading scorer on the team with a 15.8 average, while Mitchell is hitting 13.8. Fuller is at 9.3, followed by the other two guards, both averaging 8.0.

Mitchell is pulling 9.3 rebounds a game, while Congo is getting 8.3.

East Carolina is expected to start 6-1 senior Tony Robinson at one guard with 6-2 freshman William Grady at the other. Roy Smith, a 6-7½ freshman, will be at center, flanked by 6-5 junior Barry Wright and 6-6 freshman Derrick Battle.

Battle, by the way, was named the ECAC-South Rookie of the Week last week for his play against Duke University. In that game, Battle hit 70 percent of his shots, scoring 15 points and pulling four rebounds.

Wright is the leading scorer with a 13.3 average, while Robinson is scoring 10.8 per contest. Grady has a 6.5 average, while Smith is at 8.3 and Battle at 7.5.

Smith is the leading rebounder, pulling 7.3 per game. While the Pirates didn't play well against Duke in the first half, Coach Charlie Harrison was impressed with the second half play. "We played hard and the guys never quit," he said. "That's very encouraging. They fought back from way down (cutting a 26 point Duke lead to 13), and showed signs of being more aggressive and less tentative in their play."

"The second half the team seemed to finally show signs of playing with some confidence and saying 'hey, we can play this game.' Maybe the team is realizing the reason we do some things in practice and that they do carry over to games. When a team finally understands this, then the group is finally beginning to become a team."

But that doesn't mean everything is rosy in the Pirate camp. "We continue to make little errors on offense and defense. We have a lot of things to iron out. We are still trying to get the feel for each other and understand the proper player rotation. You can't do this in practice against each other. You have to play some games to find out certain things about your team," Harrison said.

Just because the Pirates are back home doesn't mean automatic success, however. "Drexel is a good basketball team and will present a tough game for us. We need a win to turn it around and to go into the tournament on a positive note."

"Drexel will play a lot of zone and will press. Zone defenses are giving us a little problem right now. The Drexel offense is inside oriented with two good players in Congo and Mitchell. The inside game will pose some problems for us. Also, we will not see the three-guard offense much this year."

The Pirates may be without 6-7 senior Jack Turnbull, sidelined with a hip pointer. The incident occurred in practice and left him with some swelling in his hip.

The Pirates leave Monday for Peoria, Ill., and the River City Tournament. They open play against the hosting Bradley squad on Tuesday at 8 p.m. EST. Alcorn State and North Texas State meet in the other game at 10 p.m.

The consolation and championship games will be played on Wednesday night.

Slams Key Battle's Plan

The final two points of the first half for East Carolina against Duke University last Saturday probably went unnoticed by most. But for freshman Derrick Battle, they represented the most exciting points he has scored in a long time.

"People back home had been bugging me about having no slams in the first three games as a Pirate," explained the 6-6 forward from Northern Nash High School. "My best friends wanted to know when I would slam one home. Even my dad was saying get a slam."

"Well, I finally got one near the end of the first half at Duke and then another in the second half. Those two slams represent the biggest thrill I've had so far in basketball at East Carolina."

And Battle was one of the key reasons the Pirates cut a 26-point deficit to 13 points during the second period. The lanky youngster hit seven of ten from the floor and committed but one turnover in 26 minutes of play. His nine second-half points were impressive against the big Blue Devils. And his play in the game also earned him ECAC-South Rookie of the Week honors.

"The Duke game has made me feel a lot better about my game," added Battle. "I was not real happy with my other games, but I just seemed to get in the flow of the game at Duke and shot better. I've got a little more confidence in my shooting now."

Coach Charlie Harrison is much happier with the former most valuable player in the Big East Conference after the Duke performance.

"Derrick was just more aggressive in all phases of his game at Duke," said Harrison. "And we've got to have Derrick and Roy Smith and others continue to improve upon their aggressive play."

"Just as with the other freshmen, Derrick has had his moments of looking very good, but then having some lapses. But I know with time that Derrick is going to be a fine player for us."

At Northern Nash, Battle was a big player on the court, usually the biggest. He had the opportunity to do about anything he wanted and get away with it. But the college game is different.

"I have had to adjust to everyone being big in college," Battle said. "There are several things I can't do here that I did in high school. Also, I played more center in high school than forward."

"But only hard work and oging at it all the time will change the situation. I feel I need to be more aggressive, so I'm trying to give 110 percent to overcome other's heights."

"I am not a real goal oriented person, so I just let things fall as they may and if I give that 110 percent all the time, then things will take care of themselves."

The transition really has not been that hard for Battle. He knew and liked what East Carolina had to offer and his high school coach helped as well.

"Coach (Bobby) Dunn at Northern Nash was much like coach Harrison is here," Battle said. "Both are good teachers, know how to get things done in practice and teach many of the same things. I know coach Dunn always stressed defense so that did not come as any surprise here."

With the likes of Phil Ford, Buck Williams and Charles Pittman as previous Big East Conference MVP plaque winners and playing at big basketball schools like North Carolina and Maryland, how did East Carolina attract Battle?

"I wanted to play immediately and that's the biggest reason I came here," said Battle on a very strong note. "I visited here, liked the school and the coaches, and heard how I could play a great deal in a rebuilding program. There's no way I could sit on the bench for a year or two and then play. East Carolina provided the opportunity I wanted."

Perhaps ECU provided Battle the initial fruits, but now the exciting Battle is providing the fruits for ECU. Entering Saturday night's game with Drexel University, Battle leads the Pirates in field goal shooting at 59 percent, is second in rebounding with 4.8 per game, fourth in scoring at 7.5 and second in blocks with eight.

And the pressure is off. Ever since that slam to end the first half at Duke, Derrick Battle seems to have found himself more at ease in the game. And certainly when he goes home next time, the local folks will cheer and not as when.

Derrick Battle

Lady Pirates Host Cincinnati Saturday

The East Carolina Lady Pirates, after snapping a two-game losing streak last Saturday night, play host to strong Cincinnati this Saturday afternoon at 3 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

The Lady Pirates, 3-3 on the year, lost two straight — to Fayetteville State and to UNC Charlotte — before rallying from ten points down to beat James Madison in their first ECAC-South contest last Saturday.

Cincinnati, however, will present some further problems for the Pirates, bringing in a 4-1 record.

The Lady Bearcats, described by Coach Cathy Andruzzi as the toughest team the Lady Pirates have faced so far, defeated ECU last year, 73-60, at Cincinnati. The Bearcats recently took the championship of the Illinois Classic, downing Wichita State in the first round, then topping host Illinois, 72-68 in the championship. Earlier they beat Kentucky, 84-77 — the first win ever by Cincinnati over that team.

Cincinnati is led by 5-10 junior guard Cheryl Cook, averaging 24.8 points a game. Cook was named the Most Valuable Player in the Illinois Classic.

Two other Bearcats are in double figures, 5-9 sophomore forward Keely Feeman at 17.0 and 6-0 senior center Anita Tersingi at 13.8.

The other starters are 5-8 sophomore guard Carrie Ash, 2.2 ppg, and 6-0 sophomore forward Deanna Fry, 3.6 ppg.

Tersingi is the leading rebounder with a 9.4 average, while Cook is pulling 7.4.

East Carolina is led by guard Sylvia Bragg, a 5-8 sophomore, averaging 11.2 points per game. She is the only Lady Pirate in double figures.

Other starters are expected (Please Turn To Page 19)

Lenoir Rolls Over Paladins

KINSTON — Lenoir Community College greeted Pitt Community College back into interscholastic basketball with a 104-66 romp last night.

It marked the first time in two years that Pitt has fielded a team against community college competition. They played recreation ball last year.

Lenoir built up a 19-point lead in the first half of the game, leading 48-29 at intermission. Then, in the second half, Lenoir pulled further away with a 56-37 scoring advantage.

"I was surprised at the way we hit the boards," Coach Charles Coburn said. "But we just made too many turnovers. We played everyone looking for good combinations and I think, for the first game, we did a good job overall. I think we'll give them a better game when they come to our place."

Rodney Rhoda led Lenoir with 20 points, while John Brown had 16. Frazier Black added 15, while Thomas Beatty, Boyce Wooten and Pearson each had 10. Pitt was led by Albert Brown with 19, while David Joyner had 17 and Otis Payton had 11.

Pitt returns to action on January 9 at 7:30 p.m. against Craven Community College. That game, and all home games for Pitt, will be played at the A.G. Cox gym in Winterville.

Ed Emory was a recent guest speaker at the Durham Sports Club — and received a presentation while there.

The Sports Club presented Emory with an engraved bowl, designated the "First Annual Shaft Bowl." Explained a member of the club in making the presentation, "This is in recognition of the season East Carolina University's football team had this year. They deserved a bowl game and they got the shaft."

From a group of folks that are in the heart of Carolina-Duke-State territory, it's a tribute to be recognized for the accomplishments of the past season.

The suspension of three Kansas City players — plus the play he had during the final 45 days of the 1983 baseball season — has made it quite possible that Williamston's Butch Davis, a former East Carolina player, will be an active member of the Royal front line next year.

Davis was brought up to the parent club after the injury to Willie Wilson and was one of the top players on the team during the final month and a half. Continued play like he finished up with throughout 1984, and Davis would be a prime candidate for Rookie of the Year honors.

Area high schools will be participating in tournament action over the next two weeks. The annual Pitt County Christmas Tournament, played at Rose High School, involves the most local squads. Hosting Rose, along with Farmville Central, North Pitt and D.H. Conley will be involved in the event. Play will be on Tuesday and Wednesday nights with games at 7 and 9 p.m.

And while we may be jumping the gun, games played so far this year would indicate that the first game of the event, between North Pitt and Rose, will determine the championship of the tourney. These two teams have already met twice, splitting.

Elsewhere, Ayden-Grifton and Greene Central will be in the North Lenoir Tri-County tournament along with South Lenoir. North Lenoir's girls and South Lenoir's boys appear to be the favorites there. Dates for this event are December 28-30.

Washington and Chocowinity will be in action in the Washington Daily News Tournament, with Mattamuskeet and West Craven. It could be the 1-A Lakers who will take this one. This tournament will be December 27-28.

And finally, there is the second annual Conley Girls' Basketball Tournament, which runs December 28-30. Seven teams will participate in the event with three games each night. Taking part are North Pitt, Kinston, West Craven, Goldsboro, Rose, Farmville Central and the hosting Valkyries.

For the high school fan, there should be enough action to satisfy. So come on out, they need the support.

USA-USSR Rivalry Sparks Ice Tempers

CINCINNATI (AP) — Center Pat LaFontaine feels animosity growing between Team USA and the Soviet Selects as they get into the deciding games of their six-city exhibition hockey tour.

LaFontaine had a goal and two assists as Team USA came from behind to tie the Soviets 4-4 Thursday night in the fourth game of the series. The game was punctuated by shoving matches between players, which continued briefly after the final horn.

None of the disagreements was serious enough to draw a major penalty, and the two teams shook hands afterward. But LaFontaine thinks the growing familiarity between the teams has sparked tempers.

"I think there is animosity between a few players," LaFontaine said. "They seem to be going at it a little bit."

Coach Lou Vairo described the game as the most physical of the series, which Team USA leads 2-1-1. The series concludes with a game today in St. Louis and one Sunday in Indianapolis.

Vairo said the Americans seemed to lack intensity in the opening period, when the Soviets reeled off three straight goals for a 3-1 advantage just 7:29 into the game, before a Cincinnati-record 14:153 hockey fans.

"I don't think we played with the intensity we needed," Vairo said. "They did. They came out really flying."

David A. Jensen got the Americans their only lead with a rebound goal eight seconds into the game. Just 28 seconds later, Evgeni Popikhin put in a slap shot off a faceoff to start the three-goal Soviet eruption.

Ilya Biakin skated down ice and pushed an unassisted score past goalie Bob Mason, and Victor Shkandruiuk slipped in a break-away goal. Both goals came during Team USA power plays, which have resulted in just one goal in four games.

"We're trying like heck to make adjustments (on power plays), but we're getting intense pressure from the penalty-killing units of the Soviet Union," Vairo said.

Scott Bjuggstad's fourth goal of the series brought Team USA within one, but the Americans fell behind 4-2 on Sergey Odintsov's goal 40 seconds later. Vairo then pulled Mason and inserted Marc Behrend, who would stop the Soviets' last 20 shots.

LaFontaine's fourth goal of the series with 1:45 left in the first period gave Team USA a lift and prevented the Soviets from putting the game out of reach, Vairo said.

With the largest crowd ever to see a hockey game in Cincinnati urging them on with flags and chants of "USA, USA," the Americans tied the score in the final period with some slick stick handling.

"It's the biggest game in the history of the New Orleans Saints franchise," nose tackle Derland Moore said of Sunday's National Football League meeting with the Los Angeles Rams.

The winner goes to the playoffs. And a New Orleans victory would also give the Saints their first winning season since the team was formed 17 years ago.

The Rams, if they win, have a chance to capture the National Conference West title, which would give them a first-round bye.

"So many times I've felt bitter, sitting at home watching other people play on television," said Moore, an 11-year veteran. "I always wondered what it would feel like (being in contention this late in the season). It feels great."

The final regular-season NFL weekend, with several teams still seeking playoff berths, kicks off tonight when the New York Jets travel to Miami to meet the Dolphins.

Rose, now 5-0 on the season, remains idle until a January 3 match at home against Kinston.

GCA Sweeps Chicod Cagers

Greenville Christian swept a pair of games from Chicod Thursday in junior high basketball, with the boys winning 45-27 and the girls 31-15.

Robin House led the GCA boys with 19, while Donald Chapman had 15 for Chicod.

Sandy Johnston paced the GCA girls with 14 points, with Nicole Brinkley scoring 10 for Chicod.

Greenville Christian's boys evened their record at 2-2 on the season, while the girls are 4-0. Both teams travel to Wake Christian January 9.

Ayden.....42
Bethel.....22

BETHEL — Ayden Middle School split a pair of basketball games with home-standing Bethel yesterday. Ayden won the boys' game, 42-22, while the Bethel girls took their contest, 22-12.

Ayden's boys were paced by Ronnell Peterson, who scored nine points. Keyford Langley led Bethel with seven.

The Bethel girls were paced by Lisa Pittman with 10, while Carole Stokes had six to pace Ayden.

Tonight's contest is a warmup for a hoped-for return trip to the Super Bowl for the Dolphins, 11-4, who easily captured the American Conference East Division.

The Jets, a preseason pick to make the playoffs, are at 7-8 and could fall into a tie with Baltimore in the AFC East basement.

On Saturday, the Washington Redskins, 13-2, try to wrap up the National Conference East title when they host to the New York Giants, 3-11-1, while Cincinnati, 7-8, travels to Minnesota, 7-8.

Sunday's games will have Denver, 9-6, at Kansas City, 5-10; Green Bay, 8-7, at Chicago, 7-8; the Rams, 8-7, at New Orleans, 8-7; Philadelphia, 5-10, at St. Louis, 7-7-1; Pittsburgh, 10-5, at Cleveland, 8-7; Buffalo, 8-7, at Atlanta, 6-9; Houston, 2-13, at Baltimore, 6-9; San Diego, 6-9, at the Los Angeles Raiders, 11-4; New England, 8-7, at Seattle, 8-7; and Tampa Bay, 2-13, at Detroit, 8-7.

On Monday, Dallas, 12-3, travels to San Francisco, 9-6.

Pittsburgh has clinched the AFC Central crown and the Raiders the AFC West. And Denver is assured a wild card berth.

It's in the National Conference where most of the playoff berths remain open. Although Washington and Dallas have clinched postseason spots, Washington needs a victory or a Dallas loss to nail down the NFC East title.

The Saints are one of the few teams who can determine their own fate: a win gets a playoff berth, a loss means the season's over. Detroit can win the NFC Central with a victory, despite what anyone else does, and Seattle could wrap up the last AFC wild card with a victory.

The Rams could grab the NFC West title and a playoff berth if they win and San Francisco loses. But in order for Los Angeles to get a wild card, they would need to beat New Orleans, have either Detroit or Green Bay lose and San Francisco beat Dallas.

New England can get a wild card by beating Seattle, if Cleveland loses. Buffalo can get in with a victory, a loss by Cleveland and a tie by the Patriots and Seattle.

Cleveland is in with a victory and losses by Seattle and Buffalo. Green Bay can win the NFC Central if Detroit loses, or can be a wild card by winning and New Orleans losing.

San Francisco can win the NFC West by beating Dallas. The 49ers also can get a wild card even while losing, if Green Bay also loses, or if Green Bay wins the NFC Central title.

Meanwhile, Houston and Cincinnati are looking at next year's college draft. The Oilers and Tampa Bay are battling for the worst record this season, which will give them the first two picks in the draft. But the Cincinnati Bengals own Tampa Bay's No. 1 draft pick.

If Houston and Tampa Bay finish with identical records, the league will determine who gets the first pick by the records of their opponents. Going into this weekend's games, Tampa Bay's foes have a combined 123-116-1 record, while Houston's opponents are 125-115.

Tampa Bay leads that race by 1½ games with 14 games to go.

The Bucs, upset when Bill Capece missed an extra point and a field goal last Monday night that cost them the game, signed a new kicker, Dave Warnke.

Then there are the personal goals to be met.

Detroit's Billy Sims is only 16 yards shy of his third 1,000-yard rushing season. Seattle rookie Curt Warner has 1,333 yards, 125 ahead of Houston's Earl Campbell, in his bid to win the AFC rushing title. Another rookie, the Rams' Eric Dickerson, has already won the NFL rushing title, having 1,728 yards going into his final game. Green Bay's Jan Stenerud broke George Blanda's NFL field-goal record Monday night and could add to his career total of 338.

Chicago's Walter Payton has 1,273 rushing yards, fourth in the NFC and only 16 behind Dallas' Tony Dorsett. Philadelphia's Mike Quick has 65 receptions, 12 for touchdowns, and is within reach of two team records — Harold Carmichael's 67 catches and Tommy McDonald's 13 TD catches.

And then there's St. Louis. The Cardinals are seeking their first winning full season since 1976.

Spartans Struggling

By The Associated Press
The Michigan State Spartans aren't having much trouble this year — except when they play the supposedly weak teams on their schedule.

Earlier this year, Jud Heathcote's Big Ten basketball power was upset by little St. Peter's of New Jersey. And Thursday night, the 17th-ranked Spartans struggled before beating unheralded Brooklyn College 85-72 in the only game involving a Top Twenty team.

"We came out and played in the first half, but in the second half, we didn't open up like we should have," said Spartans guard Sam Vincent, who led all scorers with 22 points. "We had a million opportunities to go up by 30 or 40, and instead of doing that, we always made the bad play.

"You know, we win by 15 and you think maybe we played pretty good, but in all honesty, we didn't play very well. When you play a team of this caliber, you should easily win by 40. It's a win, but we're really not satisfied."

Brooklyn, playing its fourth game in six days and losing two of them by an average margin of 25 points, was led by Rich Micallef's 18 points.

"I'm proud of my team," Brooklyn Coach Mark Reiner said. "We're just a couple of players away from being a very good team. Michigan State has a lot of class and Jud will get them up for the big games later in the season. It's hard to get up for Brooklyn."

Kevin Willis, Michigan State's 7-foot center, scored a season-high 17 points and grabbed seven rebounds, while Scott Skiles had 15 points and Patrick Ford added 13 for the Spartans.

Forum Deals With Attracting Sports

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
What makes sports tycoons run?

"Football and sports is a lousy business," said Donald Trump, multi-millionaire real estate tycoon who owns the New Jersey Generals in the upstart United States Football League. "It's fun. It's cute. But you don't make money. Nobody's in it purely for economics."

"I am," shot back George Steinbrenner, wealthy ship-builder owner of the New York Yankees. "It's not a lot of fun. For most owners, it's an ego trip. But I love the Yankees and I love competition."

Steinbrenner and Trump shared a panel with Madison Square Garden's Sonny Werblin and Fred Wilpon, youthful president of the New York Mets, in a breakfast forum dealing with the future of professional sports in the New York metropolitan area.

Some 800 members of body politic, finance, advertising and the press turned out to hear a wide divergence of attitudes and opinions from these four entrepreneurs, who control much of metropolitan New York's sports diet.

The lively session was sponsored by the New York Post.

Topics ranged from the condition of stadium latrines to peanuts in the shell, the escalating war between the USFL and the established National Football League, loyalty and legal gambling to the future security of Billy Martin in Yankee pinstripes.

The loyalty question arose out of the announced departure of the New York Jets football team from Shea Stadium to New Jersey's Meadowlands, a step taken by the Giants a few years before. One of the complaints of the Jets was that the restrooms were dirty and facilities were generally unsuited for football.

Wilpon called the flight of the Jets "sad," and added: "Kids worship athletes. We feel a responsibility to stay in the area we started. New York deserves a first class football team."

Suspension Might Be Lifted By New Baseball Head Man

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Royals figure to lose Willie Wilson for only about 35 games next spring provided the all-star outfielder shows "a sincere desire to right a wrong."

Wilson, the 1982 American League batting champion, and two other 1983 Royals — outfielder Jerry Martin and first baseman Willie Aikens — were given an official one-year suspension Thursday by baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

But their cases will be reviewed May 15, Kuhn said — by an as-yet unknown new commissioner — with the obvious possibility of reinstatement. Given the normal amount of off-days and weathered-out games in April, officials speculate the players might even miss as few as 30 contests.

Spokesmen for all three said the players union may challenge Kuhn's decision. They also expressed concern that Kuhn will not be commissioner in May.

John Schuerholz, Royals general manager, said he understood that reinstatement in May will depend upon "In general terms, the sort of overall deportment of the players."

"The players must give of themselves in community service, handling themselves as good citizens and showing their sincere desire to right a wrong and to do what they can to solve a bad situation," Schuerholz said.

Wilson, Martin, Aikens and pitcher Vida Blue were snared last summer in a federal probe of drug trafficking in the Kansas City area. Their conversations were intercepted by an FBI wiretap in June and in October, Wilson, Martin and Aikens pleaded guilty to a federal misdemeanor charge of attempting to possess cocaine. All three were sentenced in November by U.S. Magistrate J. Milton Sullivan to three-month terms in the minimum-security federal prison in Fort Worth, Texas.

Blue pleaded guilty to possessing three grams of cocaine and is to be sentenced in Sullivan's courtroom Monday. Kuhn's announcement Thursday did not mention Blue.

In making his announcement, Kuhn noted the players' responsibility as role models for young persons. But Wilson, speaking live on the ABC news show "Nightline," said he felt no such responsibility.

"I understand what he's saying," Wilson said from the Fort Worth prison. "But if he wants to make me a role model, that's fine on the field. Baseball is my job, and I think I'm pretty good at it. But off the field, I'm a role model to my own kids. That's all I have to do."

The all-star outfielder said he was calling for a friend when the FBI intercepted the conversation. He said he had used cocaine a few times "for fun" at "a few parties," but that he had stopped using the drug "a long time" before the fateful call.

Asked if there was a lesson to be learned in the episode, Wilson said, "Don't make phone calls for other people."

William Simpson, Martin's attorney, said the suspension "seriously jeopardizes" the career of the 34-year-old Martin.

Ron Shapiro, Aikens' agent, vowed that the power-hitting first baseman "will play again."

Martin and Blue are free agents after being given their unconditional release by the Royals. Aikens, who hit four home runs against Philadelphia in the 1980 World Series, has been traded to the Toronto Blue Jays for Jorge Orta pending Kuhn's decision. Schuerholz said he and Blue Jay General Manager Pat Gillick would decide today whether the deal was still on.

"I am very disappointed," Jack Sands, Wilson's agent, told the Associated Press from his office in Boston, "that Willie is away from his family over Christmas and being made to suffer the additional blow of knowing that once he is released, he will not be able to get back immediately and show the fans of Kansas City what he can do to help his team win a championship."

"I had hoped the commissioner would be more lenient," Sands said. "In my opinion, having players perform before crowds will be punishment enough because there certainly will be crowds around the league that will be abusive."

Simpson said no good could come from Kuhn's decision.

"This approach to the problem does not help anyone," Simpson said from his office in Columbia, S.C. "It doesn't help baseball. It doesn't help the commissioner's office. And it certainly does not help Jerry Martin."

"There is no question that Jerry's career has been jeopardized. There are some clubs who have expressed an interest in him. But it's going to be very difficult for a club to make a place for him since they've got to bet that he will be available on May 15," Simpson said. "And the decision will be made by a commissioner whose identity is unknown at this time."

Kuhn has told the baseball owners that he will not serve past March 1.

"As far as I know, nobody in the world can tell you who the commissioner will be on May 15," said Simpson.

Shapiro said Kuhn's decision "continues the application of less than an even standard."

"I also think it failed to take into account the players are paying a heavy price already in repaying their debt to society through the criminal justice system," Shapiro told the AP from his office in Baltimore.

"However, Willie Aikens is prepared to deal with whatever responsibility is imposed upon him by this process."

66ERS GREAT TEAM
BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Before it went out of existence in 1968, the famed Phillips 66ers, an amateur basketball team, compiled an overall record of 1,543 victories and 271 losses while playing hundreds of top teams.

Sponsored by the Phillips Petroleum Co., the 66ers played a game in 1961 against the Lebanese national team and won by the lopsided margin of 100 points. The team was berated in the press for not playing hard enough.

Kuhn Suspends Four On Drug Charges

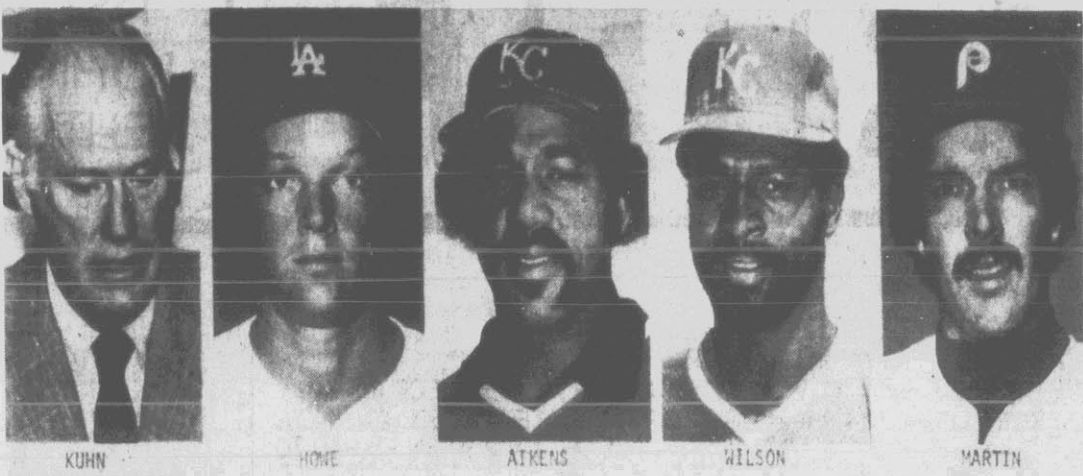

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Bowie Kuhn sounded a stern warning as he imposed the stiffest drug penalties in baseball's history. "We take the drug problem and our role as models for young people seriously," Kuhn said. "We will do what is reasonably necessary to protect the game."

On Thursday, the commissioner's office revealed that it had imposed one-year suspensions without pay on Steve Howe of Los Angeles, Willie Wilson and Willie Aikens of Kansas City and former Royals player Jerry Martin.

In Howe's case, the suspension could last even longer than one year. Howe's suspension cannot be reviewed until Dec. 15, 1984, at which time it could be extended if he has not conquered his cocaine dependency.

Kuhn left open the possibility of ending the other three players' suspensions as early as May 15, when their cases will be reviewed. Kuhn cited their three-month prison sentences for attempted possession of cocaine and public apologies as mitigating circumstances. At the same time, Kuhn said each of the three had admitted during his investigation that they had occasionally used cocaine.

"The two situations are very

Suspended Players

Wilson and Willie Aikens, and Los Angeles Dodger Steve Howe for one year without pay. It was the toughest action baseball has ever taken against drug offenders. (AP Laserphotos) different," Kuhn said in differentiating between the suspensions given Howe and the three others. "In Howe's case, it clearly will be a year and could be longer."

Also facing possible sanction was Vida Blue, a former MVP and Cy Young award-winning pitcher who was cut by the Royals last August. Blue was to be sentenced on a misdemeanor charge of possessing three grams of cocaine on Monday.

Kuhn, who will end nearly 15 years as commissioner on March 1, said the players may work out with their teams during the suspension, but they will not be paid.

"A message?" the commissioner asked rhetorically. "Yes, I think it is a message."

While this message came through loud and clear to baseball's front offices, Wilson said he wasn't sure he agreed fully with it.

Interviewed from prison, Wilson told ABC-TV's Nightline news show that he understood Kuhn's warning,

"but if he wants to make me a role model, that's fine on the field. Baseball is my job. But off the field, I'm a role model to my own kids. That's all I have to do."

Wilson said he had stopped using cocaine long before he was arrested and that he got involved with the police only because he made a phone call to a drug dealer for a friend.

Was there a lesson to be learned in all this?

"Don't make phone calls for other people," Wilson said.

At a news conference in Los Angeles, Dodgers President Peter O'Malley said, "We respect the commissioner's decision. We will certainly abide by it, and, quite frankly, I agree with it."

Howe underwent drug rehabilitation prior to last season, then went on the disabled list last May to re-enter the program. After failing to kick his cocaine habit, Howe was suspended by the club twice and fined $54,000, the equivalent of one month of his $350,000 annual salary.

Howe was 4-7 with 18 saves and a 1.44 ERA in 46 appearances this past season, but he was under suspension when the Dodgers lost to Philadelphia in four games in the National League playoffs.

And, in his statement, the commissioner said Howe failed three cocaine tests as recently as last month.

"I am optimistic that Steve will be pitching again in 1983," O'Malley said, "but he is responsible for his actions."

and it will be up to him to prove that he is capable of returning."

Howe had not surfaced for comment, but his attorney, Roy Bell, called the suspension a "turn-of-the-century, knee-jerk reaction."

"I don't think you should punish someone who has a disease," Bell said. "The guy is ill."

Although Howe will not be paid, Kuhn said that "with the advance approval of the commissioner's office, the Dodgers may, if they desire, advance funds for family necessities...."

Wilson and Martin, both outfielders, began serving their three-month sentences at a minimum security federal prison in Fort Worth, Texas on Dec. 5. Aikens, who is completing a drug rehabilitation program, is scheduled to enter the same facility on Jan. 3.

Wilson, whose .332 average earned him the American League batting title in 1982, was the only player who figured in Kansas City's plans for next season. Aikens, a first baseman, presumably will be traded, and Martin was set free at the season's conclusion.

"Having been handed this decision, we can now look forward to the 1984 season with clarity and plan accordingly," Royals General Manager John Schuerholz said.

"The message is clear — he (Kuhn) cares about the integrity of the sport."

Wilson's agent, Jack Sands, said he felt his client had been through enough.

"I am very disappointed that Willie is away from his family over Christmas and being made to suffer the additional blow of knowing that once he is released, he will not be able to get back immediately and show the fans of Kansas City what he can do to help his team win a championship," Sands said.

The Major League Players Association was expected to file a grievance of Kuhn's sanctions.

"There will be a more formal, more complete reaction tomorrow," acting union head Don Fehr said. "I have just received the text of the letters the commissioner has written. While I have had a chance to glance through them, I have not had an opportunity to study them."

Fehr said a course of action would be determined only after speaking to all the players and their lawyers.

The suspensions were the longest given to active players since the 1945 Mexican League raid on wartime major leaguers. About 20 players, including Mickey Owen of the Brooklyn Dodgers and Danny Gardella of the New York Giants, were suspended for five years for going to play in Mexico. Commissioner A.B. "Happy" Chandler later rescinded most of the suspensions.

In his 15 years as commissioner, Kuhn's longest previous suspension was the half season he gave Denny McLain of Detroit in 1970 on firearms and gambling charges. The longest previous drug-related suspension was the one month given to Alan Wiggins of San Diego in 1982. Kuhn also suspended Ferguson Jenkins, then with Texas, for two weeks on a drug charge in 1980.

Dodgers Will Stand Behind Steve Howe

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The owner of the Dodgers has reaffirmed that the club will stand behind Steve Howe, and the doctor treating the Los Angeles reliever said there definitely is hope for curing the cocaine-dependent young man.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn on Thursday suspended Howe for one year without pay, saying that on three occasions last month the pitcher was tested for cocaine use and each time the tests were positive.

"We respect the Commissioner's decision, we will certainly abide by it, and, quite frankly, I agree with it," Dodger owner Peter O'Malley said in a statement issued by the club. "Baseball and illegal drugs are incompatible and we will not tolerate the use of these drugs by any of our employees."

"However, Steve Howe has the complete support of the Dodger organization in his rehabilitation program. We will do everything possible to hasten the day when Steve can join his teammates."

"I am optimistic that Steve will be pitching again in 1983 but he is responsible for his actions and it will be up to him to prove that he is capable of returning."

Dr. Forest Tennant, an expert on drug abuse who was hired by the Dodgers as a consultant last summer, said Howe had placed himself under his care. The doctor said it was accurate to describe the 25-year-old pitcher's condition as "cocaine addiction."

"We are going to be trying some new approaches with Steve for what is a very difficult problem," said Tennant. "This is not a hopeless situation."

The doctor said he had seen Howe Thursday and "his frame of mind was quite good. He's optimistic. He had a negative urine test today (Thursday) and considerable progress is being made."

Howe was not available for comment.

His attorney, Roy Bell, said he was disappointed by Kuhn's decision "for a lot of reasons, not the least of which is that in 1983 that's turn of the century knee-jerk reaction."

"I don't think you should punish someone who has a disease," said Bell.

Howe's agent, Tony Attanasio, said, "There is not question Steve Howe requires assistance; he needs psychological and medical help. What he doesn't need is the whip and chain and being put in a stock."

The ace of the Dodger bullpen, Howe had a 4-7 record with a career-high 18 saves and a career-best 1.44 earned run average in 46 games during the 1983 season. He struck out 52, allowed only two home runs and issued just 12 walks, seven of them intentional, in 68 2-3 innings.

The 1980 National League Rookie of the Year, Howe spent six weeks undergoing treatment for drug dependency at The Meadows in Wickenburg, Ariz., after the 1982 season. He had well-publicized problems on three different occasions during the 1983 campaign.

Howe's suspension for the 1984 season will be reviewed at the end of one year, Kuhn said.

Howe made $350,000 last year, and Kuhn's statement said that "with advance approval from the commissioner's office, the Dodgers may, if they desire, advance funds for family necessities."

Tom Niedenfuer, a friend of Howe and a fellow Dodger reliever, called the one-year suspension surprising.

"We're all still in a state of shock," he said. "All of us had heard from one month to three months to a year. None of us dreamed it would be the full year's suspension."

"I think the Commissioner reached the point where he believed something had to be done. It's just a tragic day for baseball."

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

A CITY OF REFUGE

ONE OF THE GREAT PHILISTINE CITIES WAS GATH. IT WAS NOTED AS THE RESIDENCE OF A REMNANT OF GIANTS, NAMELY THE ANAKIM. (1 SAM. 7:14) A MEMBER OF THIS RACE WAS GOLIATH WHOM DAVID DEFEATED. GATH WAS ALSO THE REFUGE, ON TWO OCCASIONS, OF DAVID, WHEN HE HAD TO FLEE KING SAUL'S MURDEROUS INTENT. HOW MANY OTHER REFUGEES FROM SAUL'S ANGER WE ARE NOT TOLD, BUT IF IT SERVED AS A REFUGE FOR DAVID AND HIS FOLLOWERS, IT MUST HAVE BEEN LOOKED UPON AS A HAVEN FOR MANY WHO FELL OUT OF FAVOR IN SAUL'S KINGDOM.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — When Judy Muller of CBS News calls people for a story, they can't hide in a "meeting." They can't hide behind a public relations apologist or bureaucratic barrier. And they can't even hide under the covers.

Ms. Muller finds them in bed and wakes them up. As reporter-anchor for "First Line Report," the CBS Radio Network's early morning dose of news and commentary, Ms. Muller tracks down newsmakers before they can shower and shave their responses.

"I'm the only one who starts phone calls with an apology," said Ms. Muller, whose introduction goes like this: "Hello, this is CBS News in New York. I know how early this is. Did we wake you? I'm sorry." Ms. Muller said the advantage of the wake-up interview is that subjects are less guarded. "They often aren't weighing each word so carefully," she said.

Last summer, when she spoke to the late Sen. Henry Jackson about the presidential commission on Central America, he disclosed that Henry Kissinger would head the panel. Until the official announcement came later in the day, CBS was crediting "First Line Report" for breaking the Kissinger appointment.

The pre-reveille call also has a unique disadvantage. Although the newsmaker's public-relations entourage is sleeping, his wife is not — at least not any longer. "I have to hope he rolls over and picks up first," Ms. Muller said.

One time, the wife of Gary Hart, the Democrat Colorado senator running for president, intercepted Ms. Muller's call. Click. No interview.

Ms. Muller, the 36-year-old divorced mother of two grade-school-age daughters, arrives at work at 4 a.m. "For my kids, there's no such thing as mother in the morning," she said. "Often, I'm quite amazed what they're wearing when I see them at the end of the day."

She'll make her calls around 5 a.m., which is early in New York, but even earlier in other places. "Ideally, the best interview is in Tokyo, the worst is on the West Coast," she said.

If she can't find an appropriate news subject, she'll often chat with the CBS correspondents covering what she's analyzing. At first, the reporters were reluctant to leave their objective mode, but now many seem to enjoy the chance to interpret the news.

After the interviews, she edits the tapes and writes her copy, all of which must be turned into a 2½-minute report (four minutes with commercials) before 6:30. "I have the worst deadlines in radio," she said.

"First Line Report" previously was anchored by CBS' Washington correspondents, who would prepare the piece the day before. A year ago, the radio-news fixture was moved to New York, and Ms. Muller keeps it attuned to breaking stories.

Already this week, Ms. Muller has discussed the bombings in Kuwait, drunk driving, capital punishment and death squads in El Salvador — all in conjunction with news stories of the day.

Last summer, she handled one of her most difficult reports: how CBS News covered itself. That was after CBS was ordered by a judge to turn over the Benjamin Report, CBS News' internal examination of a controversial documentary it did on the Vietnam War. The judicial edict was in conjunction with Gen. William C. Westmoreland's $120 million-libel suit.

It was a sensitive issue, and nobody in television or radio at CBS News had reported on the internal report's release. Ms. Muller gulped hard and waited until 5:30 to call Van Gordon Sauter, president of CBS News. He told her, on the air, that CBS should be covering the story.

"It turned out, thank goodness, that he was awake," she said.

Some subjects, however, aren't as lively.

"I once interviewed an astronomer in California about a special telescope," Ms. Muller said. "It was 1:30 a.m. (his time) when I woke him up. Somewhere in the middle of the interview he fell asleep. All we heard was snoring."

Hemsley Among Watchable

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Sherman Hemsley, better known as television's irascible George Jefferson, is easy — as well as fun — to watch, judging by the eighth annual survey from Man Watchers Inc.

Hemsley, along with ABC-TV anchorman Peter Jennings and eight others, was on the group's list of the 10 "Most Watchable Men in the World."

Others selected as easy on the eyeball in 1983 were film star Richard Gere, baseball player Steve Garvey, actors

Christopher Atkins, David Hasselhoff, Jon-Erik Hexum and Stacy Keach; "Hour Magazine" host Gary Collins and race car driver Danny Sullivan.

Man Watchers president Suzy Mallery said the list, announced Thursday, was compiled from ballots submitted by 1,000 to 2,000 Man Watchers members — including a few men.

"The only surprise is that we don't have any politicians for 1983, which might not bode well for the 1984 election," she said.

Film Studio For N.C.; S.C. Office 'Hopping Mad'

By WILL LESTER
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — After her two-week battle to lure Dino De Laurentiis' proposed $1 million movie-making complex from North Carolina failed Thursday, the director of South Carolina's film office was hopping mad.

"I do not understand why they didn't come down here," said Debra Rosen, who had helped mastermind the grab for the De Laurentiis project.

"I felt like they got a better deal down here. I'm getting all these illogical statements. All I know is we were willing to do whatever it took to get them here," she said.

The two-week battle ended Thursday with the announcement that the movie-making complex will be built on property near Wilmington, N.C., rather than near Charleston, S.C.

South Carolina had entered the battle late after hearing that North Carolina had not quite closed a deal with the Dino De Laurentiis Corp. to locate the facility in Wilmington.

The state tried to persuade De Laurentiis, producer of such epics as "King Kong," "Serpico," "Death Wish," and "Flash Gordon," to move into Charleston's County Hall, an 81-year-old former rice mill. It even offered to sell $1 million in industrial development bonds to sweeten the deal.

But De Laurentiis officials said Thursday the decision was based on a variety of factors, including the successful filming recently of Steven King's "Firestarter" at facilities near Wilmington.

The relocation is another example of the Hollywood exodus in which states including New York, Florida and Texas have drained $1.6 billion out of California in the past four years. Reasons cited for the flight from Hollywood include cheaper labor and materials costs in other states.

South Carolina was hurt by an engineer's study that showed County Hall had drainage problems during heavy rain. Any work to correct those problems would have delayed production of a Michael Cimino movie, "The Year of The Dragon." Set construction for that film is scheduled to start in January.

"There was no water damage that couldn't have been dealt with," Ms. Rosen said. "There is water damage in every building in Charleston because it's at sea level."

The De Laurentiis deal would have been a coup for a film office that has enjoyed success in the 1980s.

Since 1981 South Carolina has had such projects as the "Chiefs" TV miniseries, which was shot in Chester, S.C., May through July 1983; the TV movie "Special Bulletin," located in Charleston in January 1983, and "The Big Chill," which was shot in Beaufort from November 1982 to January 1983. "The Lords of Discipline" shot exteriors in Charleston in August and September 1982.

Since 1981, out-of-state production companies spent an estimated $10 million in South Carolina for a total economic impact of about $30 million, according to Lisa Goodwin, assistant director of the South Carolina Film Office.

De Laurentiis spokesman Michael Levett said in a telephone interview that the decision to locate in North Carolina is not unusual for his company, which has not used Hollywood sets for years.

"For the big movies now, the facilities are in Mexico and England, or in Wilmington for 'Firestarter,'" he said.

Papers were filed Thursday in the secretary of state's office in Raleigh establishing the North Carolina Film Corp. as a wholly owned subsidiary of Dino De Laurentiis Corp., said Brent Hackney, deputy press secretary to North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt. "Needless to say he (Hunt) is delighted."

South Carolina Lt. Gov. Mike Daniel, who has taken a special interest in promotion of the film industry in the state, said he was disappointed.

"If the building was dry today, we'd have a deal," Daniel said.

"Local cooperation in Charleston was extraordinary," Daniel said.

"We are dusting ourselves off and going after other film industry projects."

Levett said the Wilmington facility, which already has an 18,000-square-foot soundstage, will be expanded with dressing rooms, a screening room, offices, wardrobes and editing facilities on a total of 16 acres.

The total cost of purchase and renovation should exceed $1 million, he said.

"This is our operating facility," said Levett. "We will be using the facility for three pictures during the next year" and will continue to use it in the future.

"South Carolina was a very attractive proposition — the city of Charleston, the film commission, the approach of the people in the state," said Levett. "This was not easy. But we'd had a wonderful experience with the people of North Carolina."

Duke Inches Closer To A Campus Movie

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Duke University is close to approving the use of its campus for filming of a Warner Bros. movie, a university spokesman said Thursday.

"My strong feeling is that Duke will not say no," said William L. Green Jr. "Any caution on our part has to do with scheduling the use of facilities."

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill turned down the company's request to film "Everybody's All-American" at that campus, saying the filming would cause too much disruption.

Keeping the film in North Carolina depends on securing "Duke as a filming location," said Mark Indig, location manager at Warner Bros.

The studio has been scouting other locations in the area, including downtown Wake Forest and an old stadium that once belonged to Wake Forest University, said Paula Wyrick of the state Film Office.

If Duke approves the project, the studio probably would film some scenes in Wake Forest, Indig said. He

Meese Says Ebenezer Scrooge Generous Soul

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a tongue-in-cheek defense of his comments about hunger in America, presidential counselor Edwin Meese III suggests that Scrooge wasn't such a skinflint after all and may have overpaid his hapless clerk Bob Cratchit.

The way Meese sees it, old Ebenezer "had his faults, but he wasn't unfair to anybody."

Offering a revisionist interpretation of Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," Meese told the National Press Club on Thursday that Scrooge "had bad press in his time."

Meese was likened to Scrooge by a radio commentator last week after the presidential adviser told reporters some people "go to soup kitchens because the food is free, and that's easier than paying for it."

Meese made the remark during an interview with The Associated Press and other news services in which he also said there was no authoritative evidence that children go hungry in America.

He expressed hope that the report by a White House task force on hunger, due out in January, would "get to the bottom of some of these allegations that have been unsubstantiated."

Meese's comments prompted widespread criticism from Democrats and social welfare activists who said they reflect the Reagan administration's insensitivity to the poor.

On Wednesday, President Reagan said Meese's statements were taken "totally out of context," and added "if there is one person in this country hungry, that is one too many."

During his luncheon speech Thursday, Meese said the administration shows compassion for the poor and is dedicated to spreading economic independence to low-income people.

Meese ended his remarks with a reference to the classic Dickens Christmas tale, suggesting that Scrooge's long-suffering clerk wasn't truly needy.

"As a matter of fact, Bob Cratchit was paid 10 shillings a week, which was a very good wage for that time," Meese said. "Furthermore, the free market wouldn't allow Scrooge to exploit poor old Bob."

Cratchit lived in a home not a tenement, his wife didn't have to work and at a time when England did not have public schools, Cratchit could read, Meese said. Furthermore, "he was able to afford the traditional Christmas dinner and plum pudding."

"I just hope everyone understood I was kidding," Meese said later.

But Meese's earlier comments about hunger continued to draw criticism, including an invitation from the president of the National Urban Coalition to take a cross-country tour to see hungry people.

"They're out there," said M. Carl Holman, head of the private, non-profit research organization. "And if Mr. Meese would like to take a tour with us, we would take him on a tour of some of these cities, let him talk not only to city officials but to some of the federal officials who themselves know what's happening."

During his luncheon appearance, Meese was asked if he would accept an invitation to eat turkey neck soup on Christmas Day at a soup kitchen in Oakland, Calif.

"I don't think I'm going to be in Oakland on that particular day," he responded.

The White House and Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, meanwhile, sparred over the speaker's charge that the Reagan administration is holding up $44 million approved by Congress to help state and local agencies distribute surplus food to the needy.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said O'Neill had "done a disservice by trying to play politics" with the issue of hunger. Speakes said Congress approved only $6 million of the $50 million the administration sought for the food distribution program.

Chris Matthews, a spokesman for O'Neill, called the White House response "an absolute absurdity."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact those you want to associate with in the days ahead; make plans together. Use care in driving and in speech.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Begin activities that can improve your weekly routine. Cooperate with fellow workers. Go shopping.

Says Public Is Ready To Pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Illinois Gov. James Thompson says American citizens would be willing to foot the bill to help fight crime, which in turn would help reduce prison overcrowding.

Thompson spoke in support of legislation, sponsored by Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., that would earmark 1 percent of the federal budget each year, or about $8.5 billion, for the fight against violent crime.

"I think the American people would be willing to pay it," he said at a hearing of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on criminal law. "The American people would be willing to pay substantial sums if they could see substantial results in the eradication of violent crime."

Brightened By Lights

HALES CORNERS, Wis. (AP) — Even though the gift came three Christmas late, it's brightening this holiday season for a family, in more ways than one.

The gift was a package of six decorative spotlights that Paul and Janet Smyczek found, along with a note, when they returned home one evening this week.

Shades of Christmas past: The lights were like the ones stolen from their front yard display in January 1980.

"Dear Sir or Ma'am," began the note that reflected a guilty conscience as much as holiday spirit.

"A few years ago my buddies and I ripped these off from you, just when you moved into your new home."

"We did it as an act of vandalism I guess, and we wish to make amends to God and to you. We want to say we are very sorry. Having a big house all lit up at Christmas time brought a lot of love and life to our neighborhood. We sure do miss it."

"We hope these will settle our debt to you. We left the receipts in with the lights in case something didn't work or the colors were wrong. Again, let us say we are sorry."

The note was signed, "Some reformed teen-age vandals," and added, "Merry Christmas!"

Lords Rule It Medicine

LONDON (AP) — Lord Shinwell is 99, so he ought to know what he's talking about when he suggests to the House of Lords that Scotch is a medicine — and therefore members should be able to claim the cost of a dram among their parliamentary expenses.

But a teetotaler in the house, the Bishop of Norwich, proposed an alternative.

"Could I suggest that we have a tax-free day to celebrate Lord Shinwell's 100th birthday when it comes around. I might even be tempted to drink myself," said the Rt. Rev. Maurice Wood.

The discussion came during debate Wednesday on the Conservative government's high liquor tax — $9.91 per liter, enough to raise $1.7 billion a year.

Lord Shinwell, a former Labor Party member of the House of Commons, wondered if the cost of a nip shouldn't be deductible for members of the unelected upper house.

"May I suggest," he offered, "that as ... many (lords) cannot do without it because it is a medicine, could it be included among the expenses they incur?"

Seconding the notion, 83-year-old Lord Boothby explained, "Whisky is about the only thing left that brings guarantees of sustained comfort to mankind."

Life As It's Lived

A 3-Way Hunt For Fresh Tree

By GAIL MICHAELS

I was never much in favor of the back to basics movement in the schools until Meg came home from second grade one afternoon with the information that she now knew how to choose a fresh Christmas tree.

"No kidding?" I said sourly. Supplying Meg with such instructions was like handing safety matches to an arsonist. She would never rest until she had put her knowledge to use. It would be like the time she picked up a pamphlet on juvenile diabetes, then checked herself each morning for a month for symptoms.

"Yes," she replied, "so of course you must take me with you when you choose a tree, and you can't leave me in the car either."

This was indeed a blow. I did not relish the thought of my two savages let loose to run whooping through a Christmas tree lot in the twilight. I might lose one of them, and I knew that neither set of grandparents would ever forgive me for that.

Besides, I did not need any more help in choosing a tree. Taking Phillip along is bad enough. He insists upon being included because he considers himself the more practical partner. "Why quibble over a few dollars?" he always asks when I show my first signs of faintness over a price tag. "You get what you pay for." The tree salesmen love him.

I can't really complain. At the prices we now pay, I feel no guilt whatever about plunging into the branches of a tree to see if the trunk is straight or bowed or if there are gaps between the branches that can't be effectively filled with any ornament smaller than a bowling ball.

I can even beat the tree upon the ground several times to see if the needles will hang around for Santa's admiration.

"But you don't need to do that," my daughter informed me as I prepared to give one particularly tempting tree a good shake. "All you need to do is to pluck off a needle, hold it between two fingers, and bend it. If it doesn't break, the tree is fresh."

Phillip and I were impressed. We administered the test to several other trees before my fears were realized. Meg, whose ego had been inflated by our approbation, had been testing, too.

"This tree is not fresh," she suddenly bellowed.

Zachary stopped racing between rows long enough to pick up the chant. "This tree is not fresh! This tree is not fresh!"

"Be quiet! Both of you!" Phillip hissed. "This is someone's business."

The someone appeared on the scene. "May I help you?" he said with false heartiness.

"Yes," Meg said promptly. "We want a fresh tree. Most of your trees are fresh, but I have found two that are not."

"Oh, really?" said the man.

"Yes, I think you should get rid of them before someone makes a mistake and buys them. Do you want me to show them to you?"

"That's all right," Phillip interrupted with a strained laugh. "We need to worry about our own tree now."

"Just make sure its fresh," Meg said.

Phillip glared at her. "If it's not, we'll let you hold out your arms, and we'll hang the ornaments on you."

I may do that anyway.

Freshman Is Only Age 14

OREM, Utah (AP) — A 14-year-old girl who has attended school "only a few weeks here and there" will enroll next month at Brigham Young University and receive a dean's scholarship, her family says.

Geraldine Hovenden said her daughter Amy had to undergo nearly three months of intense scrutiny by college entrance officials who wanted to determine her social readiness as well as her scholastic ability before allowing her to enroll.

The dean's scholarship will pay half her tuition costs, her mother said.

"She was found to be very balanced," said Mrs. Hovenden. "The examiners certainly did their homework and were very gracious and helpful."

Mrs. Hovenden says Amy was taught at home, along with her eight brothers and sisters.

"We decided to teach school at home nine years ago," said Mrs. Hovenden. "Amy has only attended public school a few weeks here and there."

Amy said she plans on taking general education courses at first, but eventually will major in music with an emphasis on piano performance and teaching.

"I feel excited and a little nervous," said Amy. "But I don't see any problem with being only 14. The other students are just people too."

Amy's father Alan Hovenden, a financial planner, said Amy has always been a high achiever. "She practices three to four hours on the piano every day," he said.

Shah's Twin Sister Talks Of Her Life As An Exile

By GREG MacARTHUR
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — The twin sister of the late Shah of Iran shuttles with her ever-present bodyguards between homes in Paris, New York and Monte Carlo, keeping her brother's memory alive but unable to hold back bitter recollections of his fall.

A small, 64-year old woman, Princess Ashraf Pahlavi was once one of powers behind the Peacock Throne. She was one of the most influential — and in some quarters one of the most hated — people in her brother's empire.

Now she is under sentence of death in Iran for allegedly diverting a fortune in illegal profits to overseas bank accounts, and she receives little sympathy from most of the rest of the Iranian exile community.

The princess denies the charges of corruption by the revolutionary regime of Ayatollah Khomeini but concedes she has "only a few friends, not many."

"Naturally, I feel alone," she said in an interview in French with The Associated Press at her modern, tightly guarded apartment on Paris' Right Bank. "Many people closed their doors to us after the (1979) revolution."

"At night, when I go into my room, that's when all the thoughts come flooding in. I stay up until 5 or 6 in the morning. I read. I watch a cassette. I try not to think. But the memories won't leave you."

The memories are laced with resentment. She blames the Western press for "using lies and propaganda to picture a patriot (the Shah) as a despot."

She blames former President Jimmy Carter for what she calls "betraying" her brother and allowing "the fanatics" to take power in Iran.

Her recent book, "Never Resigned" condemns the West for coming to an "economic accommodation with Khomeini" and ignoring the firestorm that would follow if the Ayatollah succeeded in spreading his Islamic Revolution around the Persian Gulf.

Her hatred for the ruling clergy in Tehran is shared by the thousands of royalists, republicans and Marxists who have made Paris their exile base. But most of them also share a dislike for her.

Former Iranian prime ministers Shapour Bakhtiar and Ali Amini, who have joined in calling on the Iranian people to rally around the Shah's son, Reza II, want no part of her, well informed Iranian sources report.

Reza II, himself, publicly declared in March that he had "renounced my family and relatives and dedicated my worldly possessions to the service of Iran and Iranians."

Known as having a fondness for the European gaming tables, the princess says one of her few real pleasures these days is "to have a few friends over to play bridge... I spend most of my time quietly at home."

In 1977, hooded gunmen fired on her Rolls Royce, killing her lady-in-waiting and wounding her chauffeur as the party returned from a casino in the French Riviera resort town of Cannes. The princess was unhurt.

Two years later, a lone gunman assassinated one of her two sons, Shahriar Mustapha Chafik, on a Paris street.

Nevertheless, Princess Ashraf said she tries "to lead a normal life" despite the threats against her life.

"When I go to the movies, I have to have bodyguards. It's not very pleasant, but one must take a minimum of precautions."

The princess' surviving son was active in international business, but "he isn't doing anything now," she said. "How can he work? He can't work in his own country."

Her daughter is active in conservative royalist circles in Paris and helps publish an exile newspaper.

The princess says estimates of the Pahlavi family fortune are wildly exaggerated.

"After the death of my brother, if we had had the $65 billion some people said we had we would have retaken Iran just like that," she said.

She denies that corruption was extensive during her brother's reign. "In what country is there not some corruption?" she added. "Especially in a country where all of a sudden there is a great deal of money."

Savak, the Shah's secret police, "was no worse than the secret service in Britain or Israel," she said. "There certainly wasn't any more torture in Iran than anywhere else in the world."

The Shah's only mistake was "going too rapidly toward liberalization and democracy... everybody was free — too free in my opinion. My brother shouldn't have freed all the dissidents. It was like water accumulating, eventually you have a flood."

She says she is certain the monarchy will be restored in Iran "because monarchy is in the blood of the people, and they are already asking for the return of their king."

And despite the bitter memories of the last years, Princess Ashraf says she has no regrets about her own role in Iranian history.

"I would want to do the same thing. It's passed, now, only memories. But there were 50 years of grandeur, of glory," she said.

Prince Andrew Assigned Ship

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew, who flew as a Royal Navy helicopter co-pilot in last year's Falklands War, has been given new orders and will report to duty with the frigate Brazen when it comes back from the Middle East for maintenance in April.

In the meantime, the 23-year-old son of Queen Elizabeth II is about halfway through a six-month course in flying the Royal Navy's Lynx choppers at the Portland naval air station in southwest England.

$100 Million To The Philippines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The World Bank is making a $100 million loan to the politically and financially troubled Philippines government.

Unlike most of the bank's loans, this one does not go for a particular project but directly into the Philippine treasury to help the government out of its difficulties. A first $200.3

million was made available to the Philippines in April.

To get the $302.3 million, the government of President Ferdinand Marcos promised to allow in more imports, among other measures. The bank said it has reviewed the government's promises and found the government was making "substantial progress."
