GNP Growth Slowed In Unfinished 4th Quarter

By The Associated Press

The pace of economic expansion slowed to a 4.5 percent annual rate in the yet-unfinished fourth quarter, the government estimated today. In a separate report, the Labor Department said consumer prices rose by 0.3 percent in November.

The inflation rate for the full year might be held to the lowest level since wage and price controls were in effect more than 10 years ago, analysts said.

The estimated 4.5 percent growth in the Gross National Product follows a 9.7 percent growth spurt last spring and a 7.6 percent rise in activity in the summer.

The Commerce Department's "flash estimate" of inflation-adjusted economic growth is subject to later revisions. For example, the second quarter's surge was originally estimated at 6.6 percent growth.

But if the fourth-quarter figures hold, growth for the entire year would be 3.3 percent against a 1.9 percent decline in 1982.

Most economists had said that the growth of last spring was too rapid to be sustained without reviving inflation.

Consumer prices, which rose 3.9 percent in all of last year, increased 3.8 percent in the first 11 months of this year, the slowest climb in inflation since the 3.4 percent of 1971 and 1972.

In a news conference Tuesday night, President Reagan said 1983 was "a banner year for the American economy."

"With the holiday season upon us, I'm delighted to see Americans giving each other the best Christmas present possible, a strong economy that will ensure more jobs and opportunities in the months ahead," Reagan said.

In a pair of upbeat economic reports, the government said Tuesday that housing construction picked up in November while Americans income and spending grew rapidly.

Private economists and government officials said those reports indicated the economy was likely to continue strong growth into 1984. The Commerce Department said personal spending — which includes everything except interest payments on personal debt — rose 1.1 percent last month. It followed a 0.8 percent increase in October and was the largest monthly gain since last May.

Personal income rose 0.7 percent last month, the department said. That was the 10th monthly rise in the first 11 months of the year and compared with a 1.1 percent rise in October.

A separate government report said construction of new housing in November was started at a rate 6.4 percent higher than in October. The November rate of 1.76 million units was 29 percent higher than a year earlier.

Regional Trauma Center

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees heard Tuesday night that PCMH has been designated a regional trauma center, level 2, by the N.C. Department of Human Resources, according to a letter received recently from Dr. Sarah Morrow, human resources secretary.

Hospital president Jack Richardson said reports on attendance of trustees at meetings will be sent to the County Commissioners and seven positions on the board will be filled by the March meeting. Board chairman Henry Leslie is ineligible for reappointment, but six others have served only one three-year term and are eligible for reappointment.

Finance officer Warren McRoy reported that the patient revenue for the hospital is running 9 percent under budget. This is all right, though, he said, because expenses are running 13 percent under budget. The hospital census has been off lately, but has picked up some this month, making this month's census higher than that of last December.

Buck Sitterson, a hospital vice president, reported that DRG financing is affecting the ambulance service of the hospital and which trips it can accept. He said a new ambulance will be put into use soon.

Medical staff chief Dr. Jack Wilkerson reported that the medical staff has decided to retain its own attorney and have a legal affairs committee.

The board voted to draft a letter of appreciation to Dr. Robert Brame for his services to the Pitt medical community while he served as chief of gynecology and obstetrics of the ECU School of Medicine. He has accepted a position with Wake Medical Center in Raleigh and will begin work there Jan. 1.

An addition of $83,000 in fees for architects for the addition to the hospital now being planned was approved. The board also approved a reward system for employees who make cost containment suggestions.

Arctic Weather Glazes U.S. Roads From Texas To Indiana

By DANA FIELDS

Associated Press Writer
Arctic weather already blamed for 40 deaths re-lentled just long enough today to glaze highways across Texas to Indiana with deadly freezing rain that caused "wrecks everywhere," while a new blast of cold sent the mercury in Montana down to 33 below zero.

The eastern reaches of a snowstorm that rumbled down from the Rockies spread today across Nebraska, where 10 inches fell by late Tuesday, South Dakota, Kansas, Indiana, Missouri, Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan. Forecasters predicted the storm would hit the Great Lakes region full-strength late today, dumping 4 to 6 inches of snow on northern Illinois.

"It doesn't look too bright for the central United States," Hugh Crowther of the Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today. He said the new cold wave would push across the Plains into the Ohio Valley and hang on "through the weekend."

North Platte, Neb., awoke this morning to a wind chill factor of 65 below zero, resulting from a record temperature of minus 27 and winds of 15 to 25 mph. The western Nebraska city of Scottsbluff had a wind chill of 60 below.

In Oregon, a small but pesky storm stalled dozens of vehicles Tuesday night in the Willamette Valley, dropping only about 2 inches of snow but prompting "many, many calls from people concerned about their kids on their way home from college" for the holidays, said state police Maj. Tom Phillips. Polk County schools were closed today.

Ice storms brought light snow and freezing drizzle to states along the Rocky Mountains storm's southern edge as warm air turned precipitation to rain that froze up again as it hit the ground.

"Every wrecker in town is doing a good business tonight," said a state trooper in Madisonville, Ky. Light snow and freezing rain spread through the morning across northern Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee and Arkansas.

A 9-year-old girl in Plainview, Texas, died Tuesday night in a crash blamed on ice-coated roads and an Oklahoma woman died on Interstate 35 when her car slid across a median and slammed into an oncoming truck. Police closed a 20-mile stretch of U.S. 270 from Hartshorn to Wilburton early today when it became impassable.

after landing at Sioux Falls Airport on Tuesday, ripping a wing off the plane and starting a fire. All 82 people aboard the plane escaped injury but the driver of the sweeper was killed.

At least 25 records for cold weather fell or were tied Tuesday, with a reading of 24 below zero breaking a 101-year-old record of 17 below for the date in Cheyenne, Wyo. The low hit minus 40 in International Falls, Minn., breaking a record set in 1970, while Topeka, Kan., had a low of minus 16, or 12 degrees lower than the record set in 1924.

And there was no relief in sight as more cold air swept into Montana today, sending temperatures down to minus 33 in Bozeman.

"My kingdom for a chinook," said a forecaster with the National Weather Service in Great Falls, Mont., longing for the warm wind that sometimes offers the West its only relief from winter's cold.

With winds picking up, the wind-chill in Montana could be 60 to 90 below zero on Thursday, the forecaster said.

The cold hampered firefighters in Texas, where an 8-year-old Grandview girl and an elderly Fort Worth woman died in separate house fires blamed on space heaters. In Withee, Wis., five children ages 5 months to 10 years perished in a fire set off by a wood furnace, in which the cold hampered firefighters.

In Milwaukee, where it was 16 below Monday and minus 4 Tuesday, plumber Edward Blau reported receiving 120 calls an hour for broken heating systems.

They were "in tears because it's 30 degrees (indoors) and they're in pitiful shape running hot water just trying to keep the pipes from freezing."

Hundreds of homeless people from New York City westward took refuge in shelters. In Colorado, where Denver hit a record low of minus 13 Tuesday, officials announced an emergency feeding program for elk and deer threatened by snow that is already at mid-February levels.

Here is a state-by-state list of deaths blamed on the weather since Sunday:

Wisconsin five — children killed in the Withee fire; Iowa four — three of exposure and one of a snow-shoveling heart attack; Idaho four — in a single traffic accident; Texas five — one a frozen transient, two in car crashes and three in house fires started in heaters; Oklahoma three — one in a crash and two from carbon monoxide in a stuck car; Colorado two — in separate traffic accidents; Utah two — in single traffic accident; Illinois two — in separate exposures; Montana three — two in traffic accidents, one frozen in a stuck car; Missouri two — in separate traffic accidents; Nebraska two — both in a head-on collision; South Dakota one — hit by plane while sweeping snow at Sioux Falls Airport; Alabama one — exposure; Washington one — a stranded bus driver; Wyoming one — snowmobile crash; Kansas one — car crash.

Actions Taken By Planning Board

By TOM BAINES

Reflector Staff Writer
A developer's request to rezone part of a subdivision to a classification that allows single-family and duplex development failed to gain the endorsement of the Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission, although commissioners supported a petition to annex the property. The board, with two members opposing, voted to recommend that the City Council deny a request by Derek Dunn to rezone 18.43 acres, a portion of Westhaven subdivision's section five, from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to R-9 (residential).

Commissioners then voted unanimously to recommend that the council annex all of the proposed section five of Westhaven, located south of Club Pines development and about 1,500 feet east of N.C. 11.

The motion to recommend denial of the rezoning petition followed appeals by several residents of adjoining Club Pines who expressed opposition to the prospect of two-family development in the area and smaller lots that would be permitted under the R-9 designation.

Griff Garner of 521 Crestline Blvd. in Club Pines said a petition opposing the rezoning is being prepared by home owners in the subdivision. He said the owners feel that R-9 zoning would hurt them and the city, while R-15 zoning, which requires larger lots and does not permit duplex development, would be more suitable.

Bethel Victims Fatally Beaten

A moment of silence in a school gymnasium today marked the death of 17-year-old Sheila Bland of Stokes, one of two people found beaten to death, authorities say, in a Bethel dry cleaning store.

Before the school's traditional Christmas program today, North Pitt students and faculty paused with their memories of Miss Bland, the girl some students called "Grandma" because of her quiet, kind manner.

"The whole thing has made us sick," North Pitt Principal Josh Potter said. "The students are just devastated — very sad — and our entire faculty is heartsick over this incident." Potter and senior class president Marty Warren honored Miss Bland, a student in the school's gifted and talented program, before the Christmas assembly.

Miss Bland and Michael Edmondson, 33, of Bethel were found beaten to death, authorities say, on Monday in Young's Cleaners in Bethel. Edmondson taught exceptional children at John Small School in Washington and was also a graduate of North Pitt High School.

Law enforcement authorities said this morning they still had no clear motive for the killings and that no new information in the double murder investigation had surfaced.

Law enforcement authorities originally said the two were shot to death but Regional Medical Examiner Stan Harris ruled Tuesday they had been beaten and Miss Bland partially strangled. Harris said autopsies indicated that the victims were bludgeoned and suffered compound skull fractures.

Flags at North Pitt continued to fly at half-mast in memory of the two victims today, which was the last day of classes before Christmas holidays and traditionally one of the happiest days of the school year for students and faculty.

The town of Bethel has set up a reward fund for the apprehension and conviction of the murderer(s) of the two victims and contributions may be made to Town of Bethel Reward Fund, P.O. Box 337, Bethel, N.C. 27812. For further information contact Martha Mewborn, Bethel town clerk, at 825-6191.

Tuesday was the last day of school at John Small School in Washington where Edmondson taught. A school spokesperson said "it was a very sad one for us all."

WHY NO LIGHTS?

There are always terrible traffic jams at the intersection of 10th and Cotanche streets and others around town because the stoplights don't have left turn signals. Why doesn't someone put left turn signals up? It would solve a lot of problems. J.R.

North Carolina Department of Transportation Traffic Engineer Gerald England could not be reached for comment. However, according to NCDOT Division Engineer Rick Shirley, "Information from studies the department has conducted on where traffic lights are needed doesn't justify the expenditure on traffic signals at the intersection of 10th and Cotanche streets."

Shirley was not sure when the most recent study was conducted.

College President Goes Back To High School

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD
HAVERHILL, Mass. (UPI) — The slightly greying college president was poring over a physics experiment when a group of curious students ambled over and asked, "What are you doing here?"

Arthur Levine was checking to see if public high schools are as bad as many educators believe, by returning to the classroom 17 years after graduating.

Well aware of the national decline in reading, writing and computation in addition to a general ignorance of foreign affairs and governmental processes, Levine was still appalled that not a single pupil in a global studies class knew about the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada — or cared.

And a senior honors class could think of no heroes other than Boston Red Sox slugger Carl Yastrzemski and movie star Sylvester Stallone.

The moment of truth for Levine had come when the Bradford College president was addressing an audience of high school faculty members and one shouted, "You don't know anything about what's going on" in high schools.

Instead of reacting with indignation, Levine realized his accuser was right.

"I really didn't know from first hand experience," he said.

Leaving behind in his college office piles of books and pamphlets charting the decline of public high school education in America, Levine joined the 1,700 students at Lawrence High School, with its multi-racial population in a working class urban environment.

Admittedly feeling — at age 35 — like "an old codger" totting his books around, Levine said the experience was an eye-opener.

"I knew beforehand that high schools in the United States were in trouble," he said. But he wasn't prepared for a generation so unconcerned about what was going on outside its narrow areas of experience.

With the approval of Principal Margaret Horner, Levine spent a week following the curriculum of a typical college-bound senior, complete with all the homework and exams.

He ate in the school cafeteria and established an easy rapport with his classmates, honestly answering all their questions about who he was and why he was there.

What jolted Levine about the selection of Yastrzemski and Stallone as heroes was the inability of any member of the class to even suggest another hero reflecting strides in humanitarian, political, social or any other endeavor.

"After class I asked the kids if they couldn't come up with someone else," Levine said. "One recalled the 'moon men,' but could not remember the name of a single astronaut."

"There is no sense of world culture or world perspective," Levine said. "They have learned the facts, but not how to put them together."

"We teach history ... but we give no sense of history as a tide or as a cycle, or a sense of what the world is like."

"We cannot afford a generation like this. These are the kids who one day will be asked to make policy for our nation."

Levine returned to Bradford determined to expand the awareness of secondary school students and beef up their basic skills through the flexibility of the college's liberal arts program. Levine said Bradford's emphasis on internships, communication skills and student projects assures a flexibility that is particularly conducive to a cooperative project between the college and the many area high schools.

"It's very easy to throw mud," but the fiscally-wracked high schools do not deserve to be blamed, he stressed. "What's needed are joint endeavors between high schools and colleges, and they can be started at very little cost."

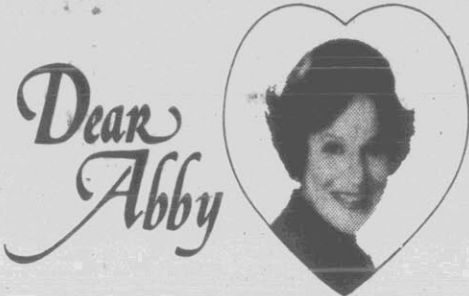

"We need to create the kinds of courses that will give kids a better sense of the issues pertaining to their lives."

With internships giving Bradford faculty and students the opportunity to blend classroom training with practical experience, Levine is planning a series of spot lectures and counselling sessions at high schools aimed at dramatizing the relevance of what's going on in the world.

Community service projects aimed at the high school student and exposure during summer breaks to the college community, "to provide meaningful options for the future," are all part of Levine's vision of a viable way to expand civic awareness.

Levine also is encouraging Bradford students to volunteer as tutors for teenagers finding difficulty in reading, writing and math, and he is planning to open up courses for ambitious high school youngsters seeking the challenge of college level experiences.

"We haven't pushed our high school students far enough," Levine said. "They must start caring."

A Doctor's Wife Questions Calls

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: After being awakened by another phone call in the middle of the night, I feel compelled to write this letter. As a doctor's wife I am continually amazed by the number of people who call their physicians at home for the most trivial reasons.

We are often awakened between 5 a.m. and 6 a.m. by people who say, "I wanted to catch you before you left home; can I get in to see you today?" Abby, how many doctors bring their appointment books home with them? Don't get me wrong—we don't mind phone calls from patients who are legitimately sick, but most of these calls are not emergencies.

The worst ones are from "friends" who call me on my husband's day off and say, "I know your husband is off today and you hardly ever get to see him, but I've had this problem for two weeks ..."

Doctors are people, too, and they need their rest. I wish people would stop and ask themselves two questions before they call a doctor at his home: 1. Is this phone call really necessary? 2. Can it wait until morning?

A DOCTOR'S WIFE

DEAR ABBY: I want to tell you about a fantastic group I recently joined. It's "Encore," a YWCA program specifically designed to meet the needs of a woman following her mastectomy. Encore offers a combination of group discussion and exercise. The discussions provide a supportive atmosphere for women to meet and share common concerns with others who have lost a breast from cancer surgery. (I lost both of mine.)

The exercise session combines gentle floor and pool exercises (to music) to tone, strengthen and develop flexibility in those muscles affected after surgery. If you can't swim, no problem. You don't even have to get your hair wet. I go twice a week for an hour and a half.

You need not be a member of the YWCA, and the class fee is $2.25 per session. Advance registration is not necessary.

Abby, it's so easy for women to participate. I cannot overstate the peace of mind and support Encore has given me in just a few months. Please, please let others know about this wonderful group. It is in about 90 cities in the United States.

MINNEAPOLIS MRS.

DEAR MRS.: Thank you for making it possible for me to spread the word. In checking out Encore, I learned that in order to join, a woman must be at least three weeks post-operative, and her doctor's written permission is required. Also, a woman may join anytime—whether her surgery was performed recently or several years ago. Interested parties should contact their local YWCA.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published the names of congressmen who have bills pending to correct the Social Security "notch" problem. I noticed that they were all Democrats. Are there no Republicans who are for a bill to correct this injustice to our senior citizens?

BORN IN 1919 IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR BORN: Yes. Of the 34 members of Congress who have co-sponsored H.R. 4093 (Edward Roybal's bill), six are Republicans. They are: Matthew J. Rinaldo, New Jersey; Christopher H. Smith, New Jersey; George C. Wortley, New York; Edwin B. Forsythe, New Jersey; George W. Gekas, Pennsylvania; E. Clay Shaw Jr., Florida.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MULLING IT OVER IN MANKATO: I agree with your bumper sticker. If you think education is expensive, try ignorance. Education without common sense is a load of books on the back of an ass.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Cheesecake Pie Has Chocolate Swirls

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
The passion for cheesecake goes on. First it was plain cheesecake made in a springform pan. Then cheesecake topped with strawberries, "as is" or glazed, appeared. Other variations followed — among them cheesecake flavored with chocolate. Need I say it's a great favorite?

But now that families are smaller than they once were, I find cheesecake made in a pie plate rather than in a springform pan is in fashion. It's easy to assemble, it's less expensive than cheesecake made in a springform pan, and there's plenty of it.

With this in mind we offer you a recipe for a lovely dessert — a Chocolate Swirl Cheesecake Pie that has sweet chocolate flavor. Several weeks ago I spent the weekend visiting friends in the country and I brought the pie along to serve as one of the desserts at a dinner party for eight guests. All of them voted for it.

CHOCOLATE SWIRL CHEESECAKE PIE
Graham Cracker Crust, see recipe
Two 8-ounce packages cream cheese, at room temperature
2/3rds cup sugar
3 large eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla

2 teaspoons lemon juice
12 squares (from a 4-ounce package) sweet cooking chocolate, melted and cooled Prepare Graham Cracker Crust.

In a medium bowl, with an electric beater, beat together the cheese and sugar until combined. Beat in eggs, one at a time, then vanilla and lemon juice, until blended after each addition.

Measure 1 1/2 cups of this plain cheese mixture into a small bowl; fold in the chocolate.

Spread half the plain cheese mixture over the bottom of the Graham Cracker Crust. Spoon the remaining plain cheese mixture and the chocolate cheese mixture alternately over the plain cheese layer in the Graham Cracker Crust. Zigzag a small metal spatula, making wide marks with the width of its blade, through the batter to form swirls.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until, when lightly touched with a finger in the center, the filling feels dry — 25 minutes. Turn off oven control and let pie stand in the closed oven for another 15 minutes. Place on a wire rack to cool completely. Chill. Serve cold or let stand at room temperature before serving.

Makes 8 servings.
Graham Cracker Crust: Stir together 1 1/4 cups fine graham cracker crumbs, 2 tablespoons sugar and 1/4 cup melted butter. Press firmly on bottom and sides of a 9-inch pie plate. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven for 8 minutes. Cool completely before filling and baking as directed in Chocolate Swirl Cheesecake Pie recipe.

Cheaper Kinds Of Caviar Are Also Delicious

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Caviar is gaining popularity in this country, but that doesn't mean Americans have gone on a spending spree.

True, sturgeon eggs are still considered one of the world's most luxurious foods, as well as the most costly. But Americans are turning more and more to the roe from lumpfish, salmon and whitefish. They are also called caviar and are delicious in their own right, at a fraction of the cost.

Imported sturgeon caviar, which runs up to $17 an ounce, and its American cousin, which is $9 and over, are still eaten reverently on unbuttered toast with only a little sour cream or chopped egg.

But it is a different story with lumpfish roe from Iceland, which costs a mere $1 an ounce, whitefish eggs from our Great Lakes, which run about the same, and the rarer golden whitefish, which hover around $2.

Both whitefish and lumpfish roe are being used increasingly at cocktail parties as an ingredient in hors d'oeuvres or with cream dips. Golden whitefish roe, which is mild in flavor, is being used in a whole range of dishes from hot pasta to cold salads.

Salmon caviar, which costs about $2.65 an ounce, is an old favorite from Alaska and the Pacific Northwest. It is delicious with scrambled eggs and jellied consommé madrilene.

Caviar is the most perishable of foods, particularly the costly sturgeon roe. When bought fresh, it has simply been salted and vacuum packed and must be kept chilled at all times, but never frozen. Buy only the amount of this delicacy you plan to use and try to purchase it the day you serve it.

Pasteurized caviar, the kind you find on store shelves, does not require refrigeration until it has been opened, whether it be sturgeon or its more humble cousins.

Never cook caviar, because you will hurt its texture and flavor. For hot dishes, add room-temperature roe to the heated food just before serving.

One of the better caviar mixes is this recipe for Chilled Cucumber Soup Romanoff.

2 cans (13 oz. each) cream of vichyssoise, chilled

peeled, seeded and diced

1½ cups sour cream

4 thin cucumber slices for garnish

4 tablespoons lumpfish or golden whitefish caviar

Place 1 can vichyssoise and cucumber in food processor with steel blade and process until almost smooth.

Pour into large bowl. Stir in 1 cup sour cream and remaining can vichyssoise.

Chill two hours. Serve in chilled soup bowls, each garnished with floating slice of cucumber, a dollop sour cream and a spoon of caviar scattered over. Serves 4.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler

Why not get a step ahead financially — end 1983 and enter the New Year in the black? During December, much financial misbehavior goes on — excessive and foolishly spending, over-use of the credit cards and failure to manage for income tax savings which could enhance one's financial position.

This December concentrate thoughts and actions on "financial security" and then carry those thoughts and actions into the new year. Dr. Thelma Hinson, extension family resource management specialist, offers the following suggestions:

"Shaping attitudes, goals and behavior to assure financial success requires determination and self-discipline to act accordingly. Involve the family — all members who spend money — and get each member committed to using money to get the most with the least risks. Reserve a portion of income for the future and plan to live on what remains. For this December, reserve at least 10 percent current income for emergencies and the future.

"Examine and control gift buying and holiday spending practices. Balance spending with the current income available for spending. Make no bills for holiday spending that must be paid from next year's income. Take time to make or select meaningful but low cost gifts that are given in a spirit of love and genuine concern. Make and give a "creative certificate" or use time and talent for a service that is to be delivered at a future date — for example: spring lawn care, home repair, garden tilling, baby sitting, altering clothes, etc.

"Use credit cards only for "cash credit." Cash credit is paying the bill when due, no carry-over of any balance due on which finance charges must be paid. Plan just how much the credit card can be used for cash credit then put it away until next year. Don't mortgage next year's income with your credit cards. To ease the pain of limiting credit card use to cash credit think about how much less you are paying for what you buy — 18 percent annual rate.

*Analyze your tax situation and take income tax options. Consider:

— Establishing savings accounts under the gifts for minors for educating children. Any taxes due on earnings will be taxed at the child's tax rate rather than yours.

— Establishing gift accounts for family members where earnings can be taxed at a lower rate more money is kept at home.

— Using tax-deferred methods (IRA's and annuities) for saving money for use at a time when tax-deductible expenses are expected to be higher or income lower as for educating children and for retirement living. This offers two advantages — money which would otherwise be paid in taxes is put to earning and compounds over time and funds can be used at a time when tax rates are likely to be lower. Thus one's overall financial situation is enhanced.

— Taking capital losses as short terms (less than one year) rather than on long-term losses to reduce taxes. Short-term capital losses offset ordinary income dollar for dollar; whereas two dollars of long-term losses are required to offset one dollar ordinary income.

— Taking capital gains as long term rather than as short term. The current law exempts 60 percent of long-term capital gains. The other 40 percent and short term capital gains are taxes as ordinary income. Contact bankers, insurance agents and CPAs for information on tax-deferred options.

*Act now to enhance future financial security. Put any amount of earnings up to the maximum in an Individual Retirement (IRA) or Keogh (if self-employed) account. The amount of tax reduction is your tax rate multiplied by your contributions to the account. (For example: if in the 25 percent tax bracket, a contribution of $1,000 would reduce taxes by $250. Contributions must be made before the end of the year.

Backdoor Approach

East Carolina University math professor Katherine Hodgkin makes a good point in challenging North Carolina's generosity in granting certification credit to teachers who have been working out of their areas of certification.

Dr. Hodgkin expresses concern over new state regulations that allow school superintendents to grant an hour of semester credit for each year that a teacher has taught out of field, for a maximum of nine hours credit.

In theory, the system may have merit. In practice, it's a different matter.

Work in a field out of an area of expertise does not qualify anyone for that position. How many times have you heard of someone posing as a physician for five, 10 or more years? They weren't granted licenses to practice medicine, were they?

A teacher trained in English who "teaches" math for nine years isn't necessarily acquiring the knowledge needed to guide students who may never again open a math book. The same goes for chemistry, physics, other areas of the natural sciences. As Dr. Hodgkin points out, some teachers assigned to out-of-area classes have been found routinely skipping over material they didn't understand.

If indeed there is such a shortage of math and science teachers, which we doubt, then at least require other teachers to pass certification examinations or their equivalents before getting credit in a new field. Anything less makes it ridiculous for a future teacher to seek expertise in a particular field.

This is a backdoor approach to the certification problem that will, in the short run, only make a system look better on paper while creating even more problems for the future. We need ability, not short-range miracles such as this.

Quality Of Heroes

We scanned a photograph of 175-or-so Medal of Honor winners gathered in New York.

Every one of them was a documented hero ... their feats weighed against thousands of recognized displays of courage that cause lesser men to stand in awe.

The thought had arisen a similar singular quality might be reflected somehow in the faces of middle-aged men and a sprinkling of their seniors. The picture wasn't all that clear; they looked like very ordinary people.

A story of heroism by North Carolinians who had been honored for saving lives included the remark, "If anyone else were there, I think they would have reacted the same way."

But, if this was true, how then does one explain the many who are given an opportunity for heroics and fell far short?

We may never know. Heroism must be something recognizable only after the fact.

—John Cunniff—

Finding A Moral

NEW YORK (AP) — To those of philosophical bent there is always a moral in bad news, such as recessions.

It is claimed, for example, that in bad times people draw closer, mend their materialistic ways, rediscover old virtues, practice restraint, develop ingenuity, and relapse the pleasures of a good book and a simple fireplace.

Self-flagellation is common. "I didn't realize how I had been indulging myself," people say. "I've learned my lesson," is a typical refrain.

In business, companies seek to become lean and efficient. They cut away the overpaid bureaucracy, eliminate sloppy practices, insist on a day's work for a day's pay, close outdated plants, and seek to raise the quality of products.

As earnings fall, the chairman assures shareholders in the annual report that the company is really stronger than it looks because "we have used this opportunity to position your company for the future."

It takes only a glance at the newspapers of mid-1982 to recall the grim mood of the time and the resolutions that were made. And it takes but a glance at the latest news to get the feeling some of the fervor has already worn off.

That conclusion may be reached by viewing some of these temptations: a box of chocolate golfballs for close to $200. Timepieces, whose chief function is to tell the time of day — a free service of the church steeple or bank window — for $12,000. And men's dress shirts, $95 off-the-rack rather than custom made.

"The consumer is basically tired of holding back," explains a retail analyst at the investment firm of Baer, Stearns & Co.

Evidence of the analyst's verdict began appearing months ago — in new-car sales, for example.

An analysis of 1983-model domestic sales showed buyers ordered luxury items — adjustable steering columns, power door locks and windows, reclining seats and more — at a rate never seen before.

In contrast, the analysis, by Ward's Automotive Reports, showed the basic AM radio was installed in just 14.6 percent of new domestic cars, lowest ever recorded. Buyers wanted stereo sets; 43.3 percent specified them, a high.

The latest report of the University of Michigan's Survey Research Center adds its confirmation. "Consumer sentiment," it said, "was more favorable in the third quarter 1983 survey than at any other time during the prior decade."

The record levels of optimism, it said, "point toward a robust recovery in sales of vehicles, houses and large household durables through mid-1984."

"The pace of recovery," it explains, "will not depend on further gains in the willingness of consumers to make large discretionary purchases ..." The willingness is there, the researchers found.

The problem ahead, they suggest, is not at all one of willingness, but of the ability to finance the big purchases without a resurgence in interest rates, which you may recall was a big reason for grim moods in the recent past.

Convincing evidence, you might say, that the old recession has become a distant memory now, and all the vows and promises of 18 months ago have become a faint and only occasionally disturbing echo.

A new economic cycle seems to have begun, and the crowds of Christmas shoppers testify to it.

SANFORD — When Tom Gilmore started running for governor in 1982, he knew he'd need some kind of gimmick to get his name before the public. So he formed a "mom and apple pie" committee that led the fight against four-year legislative terms. After that, he formed a citizens committee to fight infringements on the state's Constitution.

For his trouble, Gilmore collected a pack of glowing editorials but, after almost two years of work, he remained a non-factor in the governor's race. Lined up against veteran statewide officeholders, Gilmore barely registered in the voter preference polls for the May Democratic primary.

So Gilmore went out and looked for another gimmick. He found the "work-day." Gilmore has pledged to work one day at at least 84 different jobs before the primary. He's waited on tables, he's inspected zippers, he's done piecework in a textile mill. He's done a housewife's work and taught school. And, on a farm in Davidson County, he's shoveled cow manure and delivered a bull.

"You can't really understand a person's needs and concerns until you visit his workplace," Gilmore says in his standard stump speech. "I really believe that people really appreciate me driving all over the state not only listening to them but working with them."

On a rainy day in late November, Gilmore came to the Sanford Brick and Tile Co. to work as a laborer in an automated brick factory. This was his 42nd workday. For most of the day, he watched over a machine that stacked 192 bricks every 45 seconds. Gilmore's responsibility was to pick up any bricks the machine dropped.

If the workday works properly, Gilmore will meet with plenty of workers. He'll hear their concerns and they'll hear his pitch. In Sanford, the workforce was small, so he met only a few people. But another component of the workday worked very well for Gilmore that day — the media attention. Gilmore, one of the least known candidates, has been getting front page attention across the state with his gimmick. Melanie Reid, his press aide, reports that every one of the workdays has been covered by the local newspaper and most have been covered by broadcast news, too. In the Sanford case, Gilmore's workday got him press coverage the day before, the day he worked and the day after.

Still, there are plenty of skeptics about the workdays. Other candidates have remarked that they keep Gilmore from his own job, that of building a campaign organization. Gilmore concedes that some of his supporters feel the same way. They debated the workday approach for two months before he adopted it. But he feels that the workdays help him build a grassroots organization of people who've never been politically involved before and help him improve his name identification with the public.

Of the six major Democratic candidates for governor, Gilmore is often considered to be the weakest. A three-term legislator and former deputy secretary of human resources, he's never been in a high profile job. If he's to have any chance of winning, he's got to do something that will set him apart from the pack.

The workday approach isn't new. Tom Harkin used it in 1974 when he ran for an Iowa congressional seat. Bob Graham used it in Florida in 1978 when he ran for governor. Both men were considered longshots. Both won. Gilmore expects the workdays to do the same for him.

OPEC Claims A Victory

NEW YORK (AP) — Not much of a stir was raised when word spread from Alaska a few weeks ago that the best oil drilling prospect in North America was an apparent flop.

But the failure, if it is confirmed in further testing, is seen by analysts worldwide as a major blow to U.S. efforts to reduce its reliance on foreign oil. It also is a victory of sorts for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, whose ability to control oil prices — and thereby to influence the world economy — is weakened when oil is found outside the borders of its members.

Here are some questions and answers to help explain why the Alaskan failure is one of the most important oil stories of 1983:

Q. What made this project so important?

A. Geologic surveys of the area, off the north coast of Alaska, had indicated a high probability that an underground formation called the Mukluk structure was holding huge amounts of crude oil — possibly as much as 5 billion barrels.

Discovery of such a huge oil field is perhaps more critical to U.S. energy security now than ever, because the Prudhoe Bay oil field — accounting for 17 percent of all U.S. oil production — is showing signs of aging. Sometime in 1986 or 1987, experts believe, the Prudhoe field will begin declining at a precipitous rate of 15 percent a year, with a slower decline continuing in the 1990s.

Q. Can't the oil companies find oil in other areas?

A. Small, relatively insignificant discoveries can be expected in the lower 48 states, but Alaska is considered the last hope of finding a huge field on the order of Prudhoe. That is why the oil companies are paying billions of dollars for the right to explore in Alaska. Earlier this year, several oil companies found large oil deposits off the coast of Santa Barbara, Calif., but early indications are that those fields will not rival Prudhoe in size or importance.

Q. What went wrong at Alaska's Mukluk?

—Elisha Douglass—

Strength For Today

A papal emissary went to the artist Giotto many centuries ago and asked for a sample of his work so that the church authorities might know whether or not he was competent to make certain artistic decorations for a church.

Giotto made his reply by drawing a perfect circle freehand. So far as is known, no one had ever done that before, or since.

If we are good in fundamentals, we can be relied upon to be good in what might be called the finalities. If the root is good, the fruit is good. If we are faithful and skillful in that which is least, we are faithful and skillful in that which is much — for much is just the collection of an infinite number of lesser things.

Giotto did not send back an intricately contrived picture to the papal authorities as evidence of his competence. He drew a circle freehand, and that the fact that it was done with unprecedented skill insured his place on the roster of greatness.

—Art Buchwald—

How Do You Certify The Poor?

present address (If you have one. If you don't, address where you slept on previous night).

"List three references (not including members of immediate family) certifying your good character and willingness to pay for a meal if you could afford one.

"Please answer the following questions.

"1. Circle the last time you had a decent meal: a) 24 hours, b) 48 hours, c) one week. (Note: If you have had a decent meal within less than 24 hours, please leave the line as you will not be permitted to enter the soup kitchen.)

"2. Choose one of the following to describe your hunger pangs: a) rumbling in the stomach, b) dizziness, c) depression, d) nausea, e) anger.

"3. Do you have any coins in your pocket at the present time?

"4. List all members of your family who have been to a soup kitchen in the last 12 months.

"5. If you are under 13 years old, did you come here of your own free will or were you forced to by a parent or guardian?

"6. Are you a chronic freeloader? "The following is a math quiz. You have 10 minutes to finish it.

"1. If an American dairy farmer is paid $35,000 a year not to produce milk, how many dairy farmers will it take for the government to pay $1 billion in agricultural subsidies?

"2. If an agri-business receives $200 million a year for not planting wheat, corn or soy beans, how much money can it shelter in taxes under present IRS rules?

"3. If the government cuts out 5 million children from its free lunch program at a cost of 50 cents per child, how much money would it save by cutting off 7 million children?

"This is the essay part of the test. In 200 words describe why you feel you should get a free meal. Please include anecdotes of people you have stood in line with who shouldn't have been there because they could afford to pay for one. These anecdotes will be forwarded to the white House for future presidential speeches on the hunger problem in America."

Once the test is completed it would be handed to a member of the Hunger Strike Force who would feed it into a computer and decide whether the person waiting for a plate of spaghetti and two-day-old bread would be permitted to enter the free food facility.

Those who perjured themselves or failed to give complete answers would be turned over to the Justice Department for prosecution under the "Truth in Hunger" Act.

Applebaum claims the test will have a chilling effect on hunger cheaters, and he hopes to have it distributed to every volunteer food kitchen before they serve Christmas dinner.

In the meantime if you know of any family who is planning to cadge a free Christmas dinner this year, and can afford to buy their own, please call your nearest FBI office immediately. You will help the Reagan administration in the war on hunger cheaters, a war we all have to win before the next election.

See Yule Cheer Being Watched

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
'Tis the season to be jolly, but this year's merry-makers are keeping a cautious eye on how much Christmas spirit they drink, according to bartenders and nightclub managers.

North Carolina's two-month-old driving-while-intoxicated law, they say, is making the holidays a little more subdued.

"People are scared to get on the road, whether they've been drinking or not," said Diana Kersey, bar manager at Chi-Chi's in Raleigh. "It makes people very paranoid to have even one beer and leave a club. I leave at 3 or 4 a.m. and I've been stopped several times myself, just stopped for a check."

"As far as we're concerned, Christmas week and New Year's week are very busy for us," she said. "Last week it was slow just about everywhere with all the shoppers out, but it's picking back up a little bit."

"The last week or week-and-a-half, business has been down with everyone shopping," said Mike Zehring, manager of Bannigan's Tavern in Raleigh. "I'm not hearing people talking much about the DWI law now. People are altering their drinking habits and getting used to it."

"We're seeing more large parties are designating someone not to do a lot of drinking so he can get the rest of them home," Zehring said.

Ron Brande at Syd's in Raleigh, said New Year's is generally a better holiday for his club than Christmas.

"Christmas is more a family holiday," Brande said. "People are spending more time with the family and other things and not doing as much drinking. But New Year's is about our biggest holiday."

At The Sportsman's Tavern, a Raleigh neighborhood bar, Billy Fredre said business was picking up a little bit during the holidays.

"Actually, we're doing better," he said. "We've got a pretty good set of regulars and we've had a lot of other people moving in an out. Normally, we pick up this time of year."

He said his customers were not as bothered by the DWI law as some other clubs.

"There seems to be a lot of concern about it," he said, "but since so much of our business is local, a lot of people just walk home."

Harsh Appraisal Peacekeepers' Bombing Expected

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon spokesman says a forthcoming military report on the terrorist bombing that killed 241 American servicemen in Beirut is likely to have some harsh appraisals because "almost any report that's complete ... would have to be critical."

Other defense sources indicated that a number of the key conclusions reached by a five-member commission appointed by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger will parallel House subcommittee findings released Monday. Meanwhile, three Republican congressmen said "20-20 hindsight" is always better and President Reagan gave a vote of confidence to Marine Corps Commandant Gen. Paul X. Kelley. The president declined to respond to specifics in the House report regarding the bombing itself during a Tuesday night news conference, but disputed any assertion that Kelley gave Congress misleading information.

Replying to a question, Reagan said, "I don't think he was attempting to cover up for anyone."

Kelley told reporters in Beirut two days after the disaster, "I think we have very adequate security measures."

The following week, Kelley said he had been referring to safeguards against a car-bombing and conceded that "our security measures were not adequate to stop a large, heavily laden truck, loaded with 5,000 pounds of high explosive, traveling at a high speed and driven by a suicide driver."

The House committee's five-page document, released Monday, was a "summary of findings and conclusions" of its investigation into the Beirut bombing. The panel's full report, which will include a narrative of the testimony, is expected to be released early in January.

At the Pentagon on Tuesday, spokesman Michael Burch announced that the Weinberger commission has submitted its report on the Beirut bombing and that an unclassified version will be made public after Weinberger has examined the secret version and briefs Reagan.

"I think that almost any report that's complete following the terrible tragedy in Beirut ... would have to be critical," said Burch.

The defense sources who said the Pentagon commission report will echo some of the House subcommittee findings commented on the condition they not be further identified.

Without mentioning him by name, the subcommittee report contended that Col. Timothy J. Geraghty, commander of the 1,800-member Marine amphibious unit then in Beirut, "made serious errors in judgment in failing to provide better protection for his troops."

It said Navy officers with direct command authority over the force shared responsibility "for the inadequate security posture" and that blame reached ultimately to "higher policy-making authority that adopted and continued a policy that placed military units in a deployment where protection was inevitably inadequate."

The three subcommittee members who voted against the report filed "dissenting and additional views" Tuesday contending it was unfair to use "20-20 hindsight" as a basis for

Year In Prison Given Cultists

ALLEGAN, Mich. (AP) — Under a deal with prosecutors, two religious cult members who pleaded no contest to child cruelty will be sentenced to no more than one year in jail for the beating of a 12-year-old boy who later died.

The deal was tentatively accepted by visiting Circuit Judge James Graves. Sentencing was set for Jan. 20.

Larry Branson and Theodore Jones, members of the governing council of the House of Judah, entered the no contest pleas Tuesday in the death of John Yarbough, who died during the July Fourth weekend.

Child cruelty, a felony, has a maximum penalty of four years in state prison and a $2,000 fine. There is no minimum penalty.

criticism. In their five-page statement, Republican Reps. David O'B. Martin of New York, Bob Stump of Arizona and Daniel B. Crane of Illinois said they support the traditional policy that those in the military chain of command must bear responsibility "for all that occurs or fails to occur within their respective commands."

Planning Board...

stated his opposition to the R-9 request, saying that traffic problems already existing in the subdivision would be increased by feeding cars down Crestline to the new development. He said two-family development means more cars and more traffic.

Marty Goldfarb, who also resides on Crestline, said the corridor is already a speedway and traffic makes it difficult to get onto Memorial Drive from the street or to turn down Crestline from Memorial Drive. Goldfarb said he would like to see the traffic problem addressed and alleviated before additional people are channeled through Crestline back to the new Westhaven section.

Attorney Garry Pegram, representing Dunn, said the petitioner was reducing his rezoning request to involve only section five rather than the entire remaining acreage of Westhaven. Pegram said the R-9 request is consistent with the other four Westhaven sections already developed.

The attorney said part of the petitioner's reason for reducing the requested acreage was to make clear to the neighboring property owners his intention to develop section five consistent with prior portions of the subdivision. He said the property will not be developed for multifamily usage.

Lee Murphy, acting city engineer, said the streets serving Belvedere and Club Pines are adequate as traffic carriers. He said residents have expressed an interest in having the speed limit on Crestline reduced from 35 to 25 mph to reduce the safety hazards.

Murphy said the intersection of Crestline and Memorial Drive does not meet minimum warrants or standards of the state Department of Transportation for the placement of a traffic signal. Bobby Roberson, planning director, said that unless the neighboring property owners and Dunn could work out an agreement relative to deed restrictions, the staff would be opposed to the rezoning. It was emphasized that the planning board could not consider covenants or restrictions between the petitioner and property owners in making its decision on the request.

Commissioner Willie Pate said, however, he would feel more comfortable if there were assurances that "the new development would be single-family. He said if Dunn and the adjoining residents had an agreement, he would go along. Otherwise, he said he would oppose the request."

Two motions by Commissioner Jim Ward to recommend that Dunn's request be approved failed to gain seconds. Ward and Rick Miller voted against Rufus Keel's motion to recommend denial.

Roberson said the planning board only makes recommendations to the council and final action will follow a public hearing conducted by the council.

In the only other business item, board members voted to recommend that the council approve a request by Shanandoah Development Co. Inc. to rezone .08 acres on the east side of Tobacco Road from R-9 to R-6, which allows high density residential development. The property is located 155 feet south of Alice Drive.

Roberson said an earlier request by the developer to rezone 17,027 square feet to R-6 was opposed by the planning board and then referred back to the board by the council for further study. He said the company has now reduced the request to 3,527 square feet and the staff has no objections.

One specific criticism in the report involved the decision of U.S. commanders to house so many men in one building.

But the dissenting statement said this decision could be defended because the building was "the most protective structure" in the area to guard against what had been perceived as the biggest threat facing the Marines — artillery, rocket and mortar attacks by Moslem and Druse fighters.

"There is little doubt in our minds that, had the ground commanders dispersed their troops as much as possible and suffered the almost inevitable casualties that would have resulted from the threat ... some would have faulted the commander for failure to use the (building) to safeguard the troops," it added.

"It appears the ground commanders were in a 'damned if they do, damned if they don't,' Catch-22 position."

The dissent also noted that although the Israeli army was experienced in coping with terrorists and had installed "many of the same defenses which the Marines, in retrospect, were criticized for not having," one of their posts in south Lebanon was hit by "a carbon-copy attack" 10 days after the Marine massacre.

The Marine Corps denied the report's accusation that service and other administration officials had given Congress "inaccurate, erroneous and misleading" information in the days immediately after the explosion that demolished the Marine headquarters building near the Beirut airport.

While calling it "inappropriate to comment at this time" on the overall report, the corps issued a statement saying:

"All information provided to Congress by Marines has been the very best information available at the time it was provided. Furthermore, this initial information was recognized as being limited and was so identified by Marine sources during congressional testimony."

Bids Taken For Minges' Roof

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer
Pots on the floor have been in style at Minges Coliseum for the past couple of years, but the splat, splat of water will no longer be the rule as soon as a contractor is chosen to put a new roof on the building.

According to East Carolina University's vice chancellor for business affairs, Cliff Moore, bids were taken for the job Tuesday and construction should begin as soon as 45 days after a contractor is chosen.

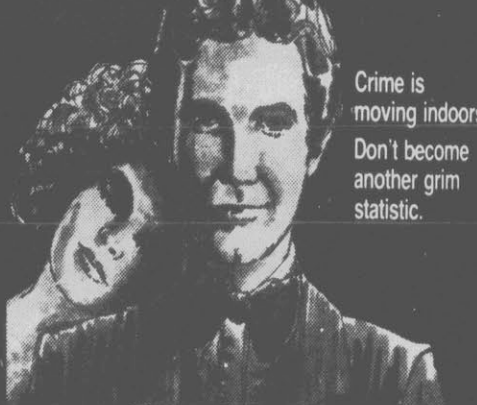

"This will be the first time the 15-year-old building has been completely re-roofed from front to back, but we've had a lot of patch work done before this," Moore explained.

According to Moore, it is not unusual for a building of Minges' size to have problems like this, "and if you don't expect them, you should," he said.

Although Moore said there could be many explanations for why the building is leaking, he said the main problem is how the roof was put on. "It was built on the ground and then jacked-up and put on pilings, but it has to be done this way on a building as large as Minges so it can move. If the roof wasn't built so it could move, it would blow down; therefore, the roof cracks and leaks," he said.

Re-roofing is also on the planning board for five more ECU buildings as well. Bids for that project will be taken very shortly, Moore said.

East Carolina has approximately $320,000 in debt service reserves to pay for the Minges project and the $487,880 for re-roofing the five other university structures was appropriated during the 1983 session of the North Carolina General Assembly by the budget division.

Crime is moving indoors. Don't become another grim statistic.

United Nations Assembly Adjourned With Doubts

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. General Assembly president adjourned a three month session for 1983, suggesting that the world body was wasting time on repetitive resolutions while the state of the world deteriorated.

But Jorge Illueca of Panama also maintained that the forum still provides "one of our greatest assets."

In his speech Tuesday closing the main part of the 38th annual session, Illueca said, "I fear we must conclude that, despite our best efforts, the state of the world has steadily and sharply deteriorated."

"International violence has increased. We have seen applications of military power. There has been a sharp increase in violent acts of international terrorisms and the nuclear arms race has escalated to a higher and much more dangerous level."

On the positive side, he said, 18 heads of state, two vice presidents, eight prime ministers and 100 foreign ministers attended the session.

"The availability of this forum as a center for communications," he said, "continues to provide, in my judgment, one of our greatest assets, most particularly at a time when dialogue is more necessary than ever."

The assembly adjourned at 8:06 p.m., leaving six of the 145 items on its agenda to be dealt with in a resumed session some time in the new year.

Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, addressing a news conference called to review the session, said it had been "relatively successful."

"The United States mission in general and I, in particular, are relatively speaking...satisfied with the results of this General Assembly," she said. "It seems to us that, on most of the issues which we cared most deeply about, our positions, policies and principles have come out reasonably well."

But Illueca noted that the 158-nation body or its specialized committees during the session adopted 63 resolutions on disarmament, 20 resolutions on the Middle East issue and 11 resolutions on the problem of South African apartheid.

Illueca said the South African policy of race segregation surely deserved the strongest condemnation, but asked, "Do we significantly further the cause of eradicating this scourge by adopting 11 resolutions related to that subject during the session?"

"Perhaps we should reverse the trend of an ever-expanding agenda and begin to concentrate on the essential issues with fewer resolutions on each..." he said.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick credited President Reagan's Sept. 26 address to the session with steering delegates away from what could have been a "deeply polarized, major battlefield of East-West confrontation."

She noted the session opened Sept. 20 in the shadow of the Soviet Union's downing of a South Korean airliner, with the loss of 269 lives.

Reagan's speech, nevertheless, was "non-confrontational," Mrs. Kirkpatrick said. "We think it helped to establish a more positive intellectual and emotional tone for the whole year."

In his speech, Reagan urged the Soviet Union to reduce tensions and offered what he described as concessions to end the deadlock in U.S.-Soviet negotiations on limiting medium-range missiles in Europe.

Particularly gratifying, Mrs. Kirkpatrick said, were successful U.S. lobbying efforts that prevented Arab countries from challenging Israel's credentials and discouraged Cuba from trying to get the assembly to debate the status of Puerto Rico.

She also noted that, for the fifth time since January 1980, the assembly had called for withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan. Also, she said, there was "real progress in getting a grip on the U.N. budgeting process."

"The pits" of the session, she said, was a "gag rule" that cut off debate last month before the assembly voted 108-9 to deeply deplore the U.S. invasion of Grenada and to call for the immediate withdrawal of foreign forces from the island.

Of herself, Mrs. Kirkpatrick said, however, she was on the "verge" of considering whether to stay on as chief U.S. delegate.

She recalled that following the replacement of William P. Clark as Reagan's national security adviser she had committed herself to staying through the end of the session and "after that we would have to see."

"And I'm just about to get to the verge of thinking about it," she said.

When Clark shifted to the Interior Department in October and Robert C. McFarlane was chosen to replace him as national security adviser, there was speculation Mrs. Kirkpatrick would resign her U.N. post. She had been depicted during the White House infighting as seeking Clark's job.

Refunds To Consumers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said Tuesday that nearly $15,000 is available for refunds to North Carolina consumers who paid $14.80 for "free" gifts from a Florida firm.

"The money (from United States Testing Authority) is here and we'll soon be mailing refund checks to satisfy the claims already on file with my consumer protection office," Edmisten said in a prepared statement.

Under a consent judgment handed down Tuesday against U.S. Testing, Edmisten's office is authorized to make refunds for all written complaints on file as well as to new complainants with written proof of payment within 90 days.

The judgment permanently forbids the company or its president, W. Ed Herder, from doing business in North Carolina.

Edmisten said the company violated state contest and lottery laws by mass mailing questionnaires about television viewing that were to be returned with $14.80 for shipping costs on "free gifts" worth up to $200.

"U.S. Testing mass-mailed those questionable questionnaires, took people's money and sent back invitations to sales presentations at time-share condominiums," Edmisten said.

State law forbids requiring payment for a free gift.

Child's Slow Growth Is Said Probable Symptom

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Slow growth in children may be a sign of a hidden disorder or disease and should be closely monitored by the family physician, according to a doctor at Duke University Medical Center.

Writing in the November issue of the North Carolina Medical Journal, Dr. Nancy Friedman says the complex process of growth can be affected by many factors.

"The first requirement for normal growth and development is a normal genetic complement," she said. "Children born with disorders of chromosome number or structure are often small at birth and grow poorly throughout infancy, childhood and adolescence."

"In general, tall parents will produce tall children and short parents, short children," she said. "The pattern of growth and weight gain throughout childhood and adolescence is often an inherited trait."

Sometimes, the genetic plan may be upset by an illness or congenital defect.

Slow growth is a symptom of kidney malfunction, bowel inflammation, thyroid disease, cortisone excess and brain tumors, she said.

"This list is alarming, especially if your child's growth rate has slowed noticeably," she said. "But remember that growth is a complicated process, and an intermittent slowing of growth is entirely normal."

Hormone abnormalities are an uncommon cause of growth failure, but they must be considered in the evaluation of any child with slow growth, she said.

"Children who are growth-hormone deficient will often respond well to hormone therapy," Ms. Friedman said. "But it's uncertain if growth hormone will significantly alter the final adult height of children who are not deficient in it. This is a powerful hormone and may have serious side effects if used inappropriately."

Hormonal imbalances must be considered as a possible cause of poor growth, but they aren't at the root of most cases," she said. "The same is true of obesity. Sometimes obesity is simply a result of over-eating."

With many teen-agers, slow growth may not be a consequence of disease or abnormality, she said. "It just takes some longer than others to reach maturity," Ms. Friedman said. "But it's a trying time for the child who appears much younger than he actually is. It's important to be sensitive to the teen-ager's emotional adjustment to delayed puberty."

Face Fine If Overweight

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Division of Motor Vehicles says it will begin fining government agencies Jan. 15 when it catches their trucks violating the state's weight laws.

Private truck owners had complained the state was fining them for exceeding weight limits while letting cities and other government truck owners off with warnings.

R. W. Wilkins, commissioner of motor vehicles, ordered the change after an exchange of letters with state Auditor Ed Rentrow, who had asked why the state did not enforce its laws when government-owned vehicles were involved.

"I felt like the government agencies should be more responsive, maybe, than the private industries," Wilkins said. "We should have ourselves loaded correctly and setting an example."

Currently, when a government-owned truck is found to be overweight, the driver is given a warning.

"I think most of the time they probably handled it at the weight station" where trucks are checked for compliance, Wilkins said. He said government-owned trucks, like municipal garbage trucks, are rarely found to be overweight.

Wilkins said the department issued 2,638 citations for overweight trucks in November.

Goats Acquired A Buick Taste

LONGMONT, Colo. (AP) — Six goats with wanderlust and a taste for Buicks have their owner stymied and local authorities growing gruff.

The herd of two male and four female goats — led by Hilda and Satan — somehow discovered how to butt down the enclosure that is supposed to keep them on owner Eric Amson's property.

Then they discovered nearby Herbert Motors, where they graze on the grass and bushes and frolic among — and on — the cars.

"Actually, they sort of brighten our day," said Bob Knight, sales manager for the Buick dealership. The visits have become so regular, he added, that one salesman has been assigned to chase the goats home.

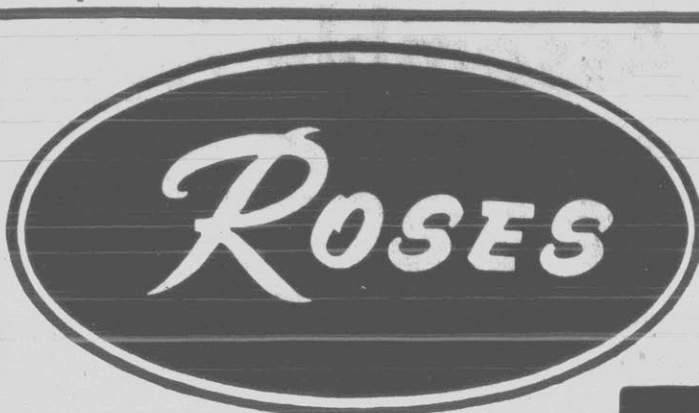

Late last week, the situation got the animal warden's goat, and police served the owner with a livestock-at-large summons.

Cite Risks In Intravenous Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler says a $218,000 grant will be used to study why intravenous drug users contract the deadly disease AIDS.

Although homosexuals are the primary victims of the acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS disease, intravenous drug users are the second-largest risk group.

Rose High Student Is VFW Contest Winner

VOICE OF DEMOCRACY WINNER ... Collette Resnik (center) is presented a certificate in recognition of her winning this year's VFW script-writing contest. The presentation is made by Paul and Bonnie Waldrop, VFW officers and judges in the contest.

Rose High School student Collette Resnik has been named the Pitt County winner of the 37th annual Voice of Democracy Program of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

She and the contest runners-up and their parents and teachers were guests of honor at VFW Post 7032's Christmas party recently.

Each of the five winners presented a three-to-five minute radio script on "My Role in Upholding Our Constitution. The second-place winner was Sandra Braxton of North Pitt High School and the third place winner was Valerie Person of Greenville Christian Academy. Citations from the commanders of Post 7032 and its Ladies Auxiliary went to each of the participants, as well as to their teachers. WNCT Radio was recognized for its assistance in recording each of the scripts. The judges were Jeff Massengill, Woodrow Boyd, Rosalee Boyd, Paul Waldrop and Bonnie Waldrop. The tape of Miss Resnik's script will represent Pitt County in the district contest soon.

Affirm Damage Suits Legal Before The Act

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — People injured in auto accidents involving underage drinkers had the right to sue beer vendors even before the Safe Roads Act took effect, the N.C. Court of Appeals ruled Tuesday. The ruling came in two lawsuits from Alleghany and Forsyth counties filed before the new law took effect. In both cases, a Superior Court judge had ruled in favor of businesses that allegedly sold alcohol to minors. The appeals court reversed both rulings, saying they should have gone before juries for a determination of possible negligence. The court held that the common law in effect before Oct. 1 was the same as the portion of the new anti-drunken driving statute that makes people and businesses that sell beer to minors subject to civil liability. Judge Earl W. Vaughn, writing for the three-member panel, said, "Defendants should not be insulated from liability as a matter of law merely because their conduct was, if anything, an indirect cause of the plaintiffs' injuries. Nor should defendant in the second case be insulated from liability merely because he did not sell beer to the driver, but sold it to another minor, who, in turn, gave the beer to the minor." The court also ruled Tuesday that a State Bureau of Investigation report on a former Wake County school superintendent should be made public. The ruling concerned a 1982 probe of John A. Murphy, who resigned in February 1981 after disclosures that he had employed consultants who in turn had hired him as a consultant and that he had charged personal travel costs and long-distance phone calls to the school system. No criminal charges were brought against him. Judge John Webb said in the court's opinion that "the public interest in having information upon which to judge public officials outweighed the interest of the SBI in keeping the report confidential." The opinion came in a suit brought by The News and Observer Publishing Co. to have the report made public. Separate suits were filed by the Wake County commissioners and by Murphy to get access to the SBI report. The suits were combined for the appeal after a lower court ruled in favor of disclosure. H. Hugh Stevens Jr., a Raleigh attorney representing the publishing company, said it was the first time to his knowledge that a state appeals court had ordered an SBI report released. FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. is cooperating with the Braxton Bragg Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army to airlift a Christmas feast to all 300 U.S. troops on Grenada, officials said Tuesday. The soldiers will also receive 20 Christmas trees, while 50 cases of powdered soft drinks will be given to Grenadian children.

Pilot Glad To Be Alive After Arm And Leg Lost In Grenada

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Capt. Tim Howard, who lost an arm and had his leg mangled in the U.S. invasion of Grenada, says enemy troops kept firing at him even after he lay helpless in a field next to his wrecked helicopter.

Howard, 30, of Pensacola, Fla., is recovering at the Naval Hospital at Camp Lejeune. He was flying a helicopter gunship with Capt. Jeb Seagle of Lincoln, who was killed after the helicopter crashed.

Their helicopter had completed three flights between the USS Guam off the island of Grenada to targets ashore. On the fourth run, made after they refueled, the helicopter team was to circle the capital city of St. George's to help Army Rangers who radioed they were being fired on by what seemed to be a large force.

"We had begun firing some rockets when we were hit with so much anti-aircraft fire I thought they must have been missiles," Howard said in an interview conducted and released Tuesday by the Marine Corps.

"I think a round went through both engines. Next thing I knew, my hand and my forearm were laying on the floor in front of me."

A round severed Howard's right arm and another shattered his leg.

"We were on our way down," Howard said. "I kept yelling to Jeb to grab the stick, but he was up there kind of bobbing back and forth. I think that he had been knocked unconscious. It was a miracle that I hadn't lost consciousness too."

"It took a couple of seconds to clear my head, but somehow I grabbed the stick with my left hand."

Howard guided his helicopter to a field, a feat that was complicated by the fact that he couldn't use his feet to guide the aircraft.

"The bird hit hard," he said of the crash landing. "I couldn't believe how hard it hit. I thought the crash was going to kill us. The next miracle was that Jeb woke up immediately."

Seagle tried to get Howard out of the aircraft and finally ran toward the beach for help, Howard said.

"After Jeb left, I never saw him again," said Howard, who fell out of the helicopter into tall grass.

"Surprisingly, I wasn't bleeding much," Howard said. "The chances of not surviving were astronomical. Nobody was there. The Army was 6 miles away, the Marines were 15 and the bad guys were 300 yards away, which limited my chances."

Ammunition in the burning helicopter was ignited and Howard said the rockets ignited by the fire probably scared the enemy temporarily.

"After the Cobra's ammunition was exhausted, the enemy again started toward the destroyed craft," Howard said. "That's when bullets started hitting really close. I could see their guns and uniforms. I had rounds hit between my legs and I could hear them pop next to my ears. I was laying in an open field. It was a miracle they didn't hit me."

"I was helpless and here they were shooting at me for sport. That made me mad, because sooner or later they would have to hit me, so I waved my middle finger at them in my last act of defiance."

Howard was able to radio for help, but another helicopter dispatched for him was shot down. Finally, another helicopter landed near Howard and he was pulled into it.

"Gunnery Sgt. Kelley Neidigh, the crew chief, pulled me up the steps into the airplane which didn't feel too soft," Howard said. "They were putting themselves in a very dangerous position. I remember the gunny patting me on the leg saying, 'You're going to be all right.' I didn't think I could ever make it because it was too far and I had lost too much blood."

Although Howard lost his right arm and his right leg is held together with pins, he said he doesn't feel sorry for himself.

"I really appreciate the little things like sunrise and sunset now, and my wife, she has been great," he said. "I know this sounds corny but you never realize how much they love you until something like this happens."

Night Vision To Aid Pilots

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Night will become day for helicopter pilots flying over rough terrain while using a new system, according to Hughes Aircraft Co.

The firm says its "helicopter night vision system" is designed to reduce a pilot's work load on low-level missions at night, in bad weather or in hazy and smoky conditions.

As the pilot skims along, an infrared image is projected on his helmet visor to reveal the world outside his cockpit. The image resembles a black and white TV picture. When he looks about, his movements are transmitted from his helmet to a turret at the nose of the ship. The turret is automatically aimed along his line of sight.

New Monetary Sights Set After Secret Meeting

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve policymakers have set the nation's monetary sights for the new year with hopes of keeping the economic recovery going without any new surge of inflation.

With recent price increases relatively subdued, several private economists speculated that the group probably decided during closed-door meetings Monday and Tuesday that there was no need for new restraint on the nation's money supply. At least not yet.

Others weren't so sure, but the policymakers, as usual, weren't saying. A report on decisions of the 12-member Federal Open Market Committee won't be announced for six weeks, though evidence could show up sooner in the form of changes in interest rates.

The committee, led by Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, plays a crucial economic role through its control of the U.S. money supply.

His stated goal is to provide enough money to the banking system to fuel continuing economic expansion as well as low enough interest rates for the simple survival of rate-sensitive industries such as housing and autos.

Too much restraint in the money supply could starve the economy, bringing back the recession. But Fed officials and many economists also feel that sending in a flood of money could bring back the soaring inflation rates that preceded the recession.

Cautions about inflation dangers are still a staple of Volcker speeches, even though this year's price figures seem likely to be the best in a decade.

Aware of that concern, some analysts said the committee may well have voted for more restraint the past two days, choosing at least slightly higher interest rates now as a less evil alternative to higher inflation later in 1984.

Michael K. Evans, president of Evans Economics in Washington, noted that the money supply rose sharply for months after the middle of last year. And he said that, even though money measures have been much more stable in recent months, the committee might well feel it "overdid things ... and is now trying to atone for past sins."

Other economists disagreed.

Roger Brinner, an analyst with Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., said committee members indeed may have been ready to slow the money supply before last week. However, he contended, that last Friday's producer price report showing prices actually fell 0.2 percent in November left the group "not much of a base to say inflation is heading back up."

Allen Sinai, chief economist for Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb in New York, also thought it unlikely the committee voted for "any fundamental move."

However, he said the members might well have decided that if the economy keeps expanding rapidly into next month, "they might agree to a tiny amount of restraint to take the edge off the recovery."

Such restraint might be termed "preventative medicine" against higher inflation and the tighter monetary restraints and even stiffer interest rates that might be necessary to fight that inflation, he said.

Donald Straszheim, vice president of Wharton Econometrics in Philadelphia, said "another argument against a major tightening is the international situation."

That was a reference to the fact that higher U.S. interest rates would be harmful to debt-ridden foreign nations — some of them among the United States' main trading partners.

Voting members of the committee are the seven

Federal Reserve Board governors and five of the 12 presidents of the regional Federal Reserve Banks.

Computer Program Is Aiding In Food Deficit

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — A computer program prepared by a Davidson College undergraduate and his economics professor is attracting worldwide attention among organizations interested in African development.

The program suggests solutions and strategies for reducing food deficits in eight West African countries. It was devised by senior mathematics major Hunter Monroe and by Dr. Clark Ross, chairman of Davidson's economics department.

Ross, who serves as an economics consultant on Africa to the U.S. government, was asked last year to prepare a computer model for the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development in Paris.

He enlisted Monroe's aid, and the pair devised a computer program to project grain production and consumption for each of eight West African countries until the year 2000, given available cultivable land and farming techniques.

The study showed that production of cereal grain would not be adequate to meet the increasing demands of population growth in the region, so the two explored alternatives.

Increasing the production of grains with rain-fed farming proved inadequate, so the pair plotted the amount of irrigated land necessary for each country to become self-sufficient by 2000.

The program has been presented to the OECD and U.S. Aid, as well as the fifth conference of the Club Du Sahel in Brussels.

"The program was exceptionally well received and the participants were very impressed," Ross said. "In fact, the Canadian government has asked for the program for use in their own planning."

The U.S. government will distribute the program as a planning tool for developing countries, particularly those in Africa.

"I spent a summer in Zaire after my freshman year," Monroe said. "I saw how grim the situation was there and became motivated to apply my knowledge of mathematics and computers to problems in the real world. It is extremely gratifying to me to be able to make a contribution to problems in developing countries."

"This program has the potential to help all eight of these West African countries approach self-sufficiency in terms of their food supplies by the year 2000," Ross said. "It's been exciting for me to see the disciplines of computer science and economics come together in such a way as to contribute real solutions to real problems."

Monroe, of Chapel Hill, was selected as a Rhodes Scholar this year.

CRUSADER — Ruth Howard, a Canton, Ill. nursing home resident who turns 77 on Dec. 23, is leading a drive by nursing home welfare cases to raise the $25 monthly allowance they get from the government for personal spending. "I'd like to buy a new pair of shoes," she says, adding that 83 cents a day just won't make it for buying clothes, candy, etc. She has collected 2,100 signatures on a petition to triple the $25 a month. Professional Scrooges Play Santa For A Day

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Temporarily forgetting their images as Scrooges, county bill collectors played St. Nick after receiving a pre-addressed billing envelope from a needy Mexican boy who wanted to reach "Santa Close."

Inside, in Spanish, were the Christmas wishes of 8-year-old Rafael Granados, whose family immigrated to Huntington Beach last year.

Rafael's mother, Adela Maldonado, said her son's new neighbors must have given him the idea. The family had never heard of the custom of writing to Santa when they lived in Mexico.

Speaking through a translator, Mrs. Maldonado said she and her machinist husband didn't have the money to buy Christmas toys. When Rafael asked her about writing to Santa Claus, she told him she didn't think it would help.

But Rafael did it anyway. The only envelope in the house were the orange ones the county had sent to collect the family's overdue medical bills. So Rafael drew a stamp on one of them, addressed it to "Santa Close" and mailed it.

"I figured since this little kid didn't even have an envelope to send it, the family must be pretty poor," said collections clerk Inez Ornelas, who convinced his fellow workers to make the holiday merry for Rafael and his 6-year-old brother, Jose.

Employees at the collections division of the Orange County Auditor-Controller's Office contributed $25 to buy a toy police car, two trucks and two mugs filled with candy canes.

On Monday, account clerk Richard Zamora donned Santa Claus duds and work stopped for the boys' Christmas party.

"It made me feel good that I could do something like that for somebody, even though it's not very much," Ms. Ornelas said.

Collections manager Grady Nichols said the Christmas giving was "a neat thing, because we're normally thought of as heartless around here. We're the Scrooges of the county."

"This is going to ruin our image," Nichols added with a smile. "It'll take me months to get these people mean again."

Monument Holiday Role

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — The community's most prominent Christmas symbol sits at the shopping mall year-round as a monument to this East Texas town's largest industry.

When the Yuletide spirit comes around, Lufkin dresses an oilfield pumping unit as Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened mixed today following fresh evidence that the economy's expansion had cooled off from the blistering pace of earlier this year.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks jumped 6.20 points to 1,248.17 after a half hour of trading. But slightly more stocks fell in price than rose in the early going on the New York Stock Exchange.

Among the bright spots was a decline in interest rates in early trading in credit markets. Prices of long-term bonds, which move in the opposite direction of interest rates, rose more than $5 for each $1,000 in face value.

Fears that the economy was growing too fast has contributed to keeping interest rates high.

Today, however, the Commerce Department estimated the economy is growing at a 4.5 percent annual rate in the yet-to-be-completed fourth quarter. While representing steady growth, the rate is below most analysts' predictions and is down from the 9.7 percent growth surge in the second quarter and the 7.6 percent rise last summer.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said, "There should not longer be fear of inflation or overheating" and the moderating growth "should provide an excellent opportunity for a decline in interest rates."

In a separate report, the Labor Department said consumer prices rose 0.3 percent in November, continuing at pace that could produce the lowest rate of inflation in more than a decade.

Today's early prices included American Telephone & Telegraph, down 1/4 at 63 3/4. AT&T said it would acquire about 25 percent of Olivetti, Europe's leading office automation business, for about $260 million.

International Business Machines rose 1/2 to 122 1/2. General Motors was up 1/4 at 73 3/4 and Xerox gained 1/4 to 51.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial fell 2.64 points to 1,241.97, reversing early gains.

Declines outpaced advances by about 4 to 3 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume rose to 83.74 million shares from 75.18 million Monday.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .16 to 93.64. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.27 at 217.40.

Hunter Dies Of Gunshots

OAK CITY — A 19-year-old Route 1, Oak City, man died of a gunshot wound in a hunting accident Tuesday afternoon.

Martin County Coroner Jerry Beach said James Garland Latham suffered wounds to his face, neck and chest from a shotgun blast, and was dead on arrival at the hospital in Williamston.

According to Beach, Latham and several friends were hunting ducks in a swampy area off N.C. 125, 1 1/2 miles from Latham's home when the shooting occurred, about 4:15 p.m.

Beach said the hunters, who had split up, were making their way out of a wooded area when two of them heard a rustling in nearby bushes.

As one of the hunters, Henry Norman, 17, of Robersonville, swung his shotgun in the direction of the noise, the gun struck a small tree and the weapon fired.

The shot struck Latham, who was in the bushes, Beach said.

Latham's companions carried him to the Oak City Rescue Squad building.

Bland

Sheila Marlene Bland, 17, died Monday in Bethel. She was a resident of Route 1, Stokes. The funeral service will be conducted at 11 a.m. Thursday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Steve Philippi and the Rev. Willis Wilson. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Miss Bland was born in Bethel and lived most of her life at Route 1, Stokes. A member of the senior class at North Pitt High School, she had previously attended Greenville Christian Academy, Stokes Elementary School and Wellcome Middle School.

At North Pitt she was a homeroom officer and had previously been a member of the band and yearbook staff. She was president of the North Pitt chapter of Future Business Leaders of America and a participant in the

From there, he was taken by ambulance to the hospital in Williamston, according to Beach, who ruled the death accidental.

Violence Is Edited Out Of Bugs Bunny

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) —

Bugs Bunny always escapes the shotgun-toting Elmer Fudd with nary a whisker touched, but critics say he and his comic counterparts are being mortally wounded by CBS censors who are editing the violence out of classic Warner Bros. cartoons.

The exploits of Bugs Bunny, Elmer Fudd, Tweety Bird and Wile E. Coyote have been delighting children on Saturday mornings for decades. But the latest generation is seeing versions that are missing the often-violent endings to gags their parents enjoyed, according to the latest issue of TV Guide.

"They make some cuts that are so arbitrary and stupid, you can't believe it," said Chuck Jones, who directed 250 of the nearly 1,000 cartoons Warner Bros. Inc. produced until 1962.

"I think if they're bad for children, they should be taken off the screen completely. If they're not, they shouldn't let these heavy-handed idiots get hold of them and rape them," Jones said.

One example cited by the magazine involves rooster Foghorn Leghorn, who accepts a football containing a lighted stick of dynamite from his arch-nemesis, the dog. Foghorn tosses the football over his shoulder — and then the cartoon cuts to a scene showing Foghorn and the battered pooch talking. Viewers never see how the dog's fur became torn and frayed.

Alice Henderson, vice president of program practices at CBS, refused to comment about the censoring. But Greg Ford of New York, a film historian and critic specializing in animated cartoons, says he thinks the cuts have ruined the jokes.

"I think they should be shown intact or not at all," Ford said. "I think every child knows when the coyote falls off a cliff, it's not the same as the child falling off a cliff."

"The rhythm has changed, and there's obviously something absent. The gag doesn't work anymore," he said.

'Vanished' On Legal Advice

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Mayor Michael Matthews, who vanished from City Hall for 11 days after an FBI raid on his office, says he is back from a Florida vacation and has no plans to resign.

Matthews, 50, said he took the trip on the advice of his lawyer. He declined to comment on a federal probe focusing on land deals in this casino resort.

Authorities have refused to say publicly that an investigation was under way, even after the Dec. 9 raid on Matthews' office.

Bradley Runs Past Sputtering Bucs

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
PEORIA, Ill. — The Bradley Braves outscored the Pirates of East Carolina University 34-16 in the second half to record a 66-41 in the opening game of the River City Shootout Tuesday in the Peoria Civic Center.

The Pirates will play North Texas State at 8 p.m. in the consolation game of the tourney. Alcorn State, a 57-48 winner over NTSU, will play Bradley for the title at 10 p.m.

Roosevelt Davison led the Braves with 17 points, while Booker Johnson chipped in 12. Voise Winters, Bradley's leading scorer until being benched against ECU, grabbed a game-high eight rebounds.

ECU was credited with 20 turnovers in the game against 17 by the Braves. The Pirates shot a miserable 34.8 percent from the field on the night, compared to 53.2 by Bradley.

"I was really upset with their effort the last 12 minutes of the game," ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said. "I think they started feeling sorry for themselves because the shots weren't falling. Hell, we had great shots."

"We didn't have as many turnovers as it appeared, but ours were blatant — they shouldn't've happened. They weren't forced turnovers."

None of the Pirates managed double-digit scoring, but guard Bruce Peartree came off the bench to score eight points in just eight minutes of action.

"We needed Bruce in there with the type of zone they were running against us," Harrison said. "He came in and hit a couple of shots from the outside in the first half. Bruce's effort and attitude has been super. He knows he's not 100 percent, but he can come in for a few minutes at a time and score from outside."

The Pirates held the advantage most of the way through the first half, as the Braves led only briefly before taking the lead for good with 7:15 left till intermission.

Barry Wright got the Pirates on the board first with a drive on a steal with just 15 seconds elapsed. Pat Marshall tipped in a missed shot to knot the game, and Booker Johnson gave the Braves their first lead of the game with 16:19 remaining.

But East Carolina rattled off the next six points to take control at 8-3 with 14:45 left in the half on a free throw by Tony Robinson.

Les sank a free throw to cut the margin to three, but ECU bounced back with four more to lead 12-5 with 11:42 left.

Then the Braves made their biggest charge of the half, outscoring the Pirates 17-4 on strength of Davison and Johnson. Davison finished the first half with 11 points, while Johnson added eight.

Peartree came off the bench in the final five minutes of the half and connected on a pair of long-range field goals to trim the margin to 32-25 at intermission. Bradley led by as much as 10 points twice in the opening half.

"When things went bad is when we got impatient in the first half," Harrison said. "I told them the first five minutes of the second half would be very important. I told them Bradley is the type of team that likes to get into a rhythm and run by you."

"Mentally, we were completely out of the first six minutes of the second half."

The Braves raced by the Pirates with a 19-4 scoring barrage over the first 11:10 of the second half and led 59-31 with 4:17 left on the clock as the Pirates continued to miss from outside. ECU was unable to break open the Braves' zone and turnovers continued to plague the offense.

"The things we thought we were going to have problems with, we handled pretty well," Harrison said. "We handled their half court trap fairly well and controlled the tempo early — we just weren't hitting our shots."

"It ain't gonna come easy."

Myers Leads N.C. State Past A&T By 84-71 Margin

RALEIGH (AP) — Ernie Myers scored 24 points and four other Wolfpack players hit double figures, but North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano still thought his team was flat in its 84-71 victory over North Carolina A&T.

"If you're going to ask me if we were a little flat, yes, we were after the tough loss to Louisville," Valvano said Tuesday night.

Myers entered the game shooting 21.3 percent, and hit eight of nine shots from the field and was eight for 12 from the foul line.

"Yes, Ernie had a fine game," Valvano said. "His attitude has been up and he's worked hard. I'm happy to see it happen for him."

Valvano said he was happy to take an 8-2 record into the new year, where home confrontations with No. 1 North Carolina and No. 8 Maryland await.

"I'd rather play Maryland and North Carolina on the road first, but we've got them at home," he said. "Our kids are going to have to mature fast."

A&T coach Don Corbett said the Wolfpack was the best team the Aggies have faced this season.

"Lorenzo Charles (who had 22 points) continues to impress," he said. "He was intimidating. We played well in spurts but made some errors and they got transition baskets from them. When we had the chance to get back in the game, we'd make a mistake and State would capitalize on it."

The Wolfpack never trailed and held as much as a 20-point second-half lead.

N.C. State opened up a 30-17 lead after Myers came in, but the Aggies, shooting 60 percent in the first half, pulled to within 41-34 at intermission.

N.C. A&T closed to within five, but fell victim to a 10-0 Wolfpack spurt, including six by Charles to make it 55-40 with 14:05 left. With Myers contributing, N.C. State got its biggest lead at 66-46 with 9:21 to go.

The Aggies could get no closer than 82-71.

Cozell McQueen and Russell Pierre each scored 11 for N.C. State and Terry Gannon added 10. McQueen also pulled down 13 rebounds as the Wolfpack outrebounded N.C. A&T 37-23.

Joe Binion had 20 points and eight rebounds to lead the Aggies, who fell to 2-3. Jimmy Brown added 16 points while Eric Boyd had 13.

Peach Sales Running Short

ATLANTA (AP) — With ticket sales 6,000 short of the level needed to keep National Collegiate Athletic Association accreditation, Peach Bowl officials are turning to businesses to buy blocks of tickets.

Art Gregory, chairman of the bowl's selection committee, said 34,000 tickets had been sold by Tuesday. He said 40,000 must be sold to meet the NCAA-mandated minimum payment of $400,000 to each team.

North Carolina and Florida State will meet in the Dec. 30 college football game at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium, to be televised by CBS.

Gregory said the bowl also had not met the NCAA requirement that local fans buy enough tickets to fill 40 percent of the stadium.

Bowl officials on Tuesday announced a new program, Peach Outreach '83, asking businesses to buy tickets for needy children. The game benefits the Georgia Lions Lighthouse for the Blind, a sight conservation and restoration program.

Panthers Rally To Nip Vikes In 2 OTs

Under The Nets

for a rebound. At right, Rose's Carlton Wilson (40) tries to block a shot by Farmville Central's Kent Hardy. Rose and North Pitt advanced to the championship game. (Reflector Photos by Katie Zernelt)

Down by nine points with just under six minutes to go, North Pitt twice dodged a bullet and rallied for a 50-45 double-overtime victory over D.H. Conley in the opening round of the Pitt Holiday Basketball Tournament last night.

The Panthers will take on Rose in the championship game tonight at approximately 8 p.m. Conley and Farmville Central meet in the consolation game at 6:30 p.m.

Conley held a 42-33 lead with 5:54 left and had the ball, trying to increase that lead. But with 3:42 left, Darryl Daniels tried to slam-dunk the ball, missed and hung on the rim. A technical was called and both coaches agreed afterwards that it was the turning point in the game.

Conley failed to score another point in regulation time, while the Panthers reeled off nine in a row after that to tie it at 44-all.

Keith Clark got it going by hitting the technical and Levon Snaw followed with a shot from underneath. Linwood Harris hit a jumper and Linnie Langley hit on two free throws after he stole the ball and was fouled. That closed it to 44-42. Harris was also fouled with 1:38 left after another Conley turnover, and that tied it up.

Conley turned the ball over again with 1:33 left, but forced a jump ball with 45 seconds to go when the Panthers tried to force the ball inside. The Vikings got the tap and with 30 seconds left, Victor Barnes was fouled, but missed the chance to put Conley back on top. Daniels rebounded, however, and with 21 seconds to go, Donald Wilson also had a chance at the line, but missed. Ronnie Howard rebounded for North Pitt, but with three seconds left, Langley missed on a chance to win it for the Panthers.

In the first overtime, Conley dodged its own bullet when Glen Clemmons missed the first of a one-and-one opportunity, but got a second chance on a lane violation by the Panthers. He made both this time and gave Conley a 44-42 lead. But Clark scored two Panther free throws with 54 seconds to go, and Conley again missed on the chance to win it at the line in the final 20 seconds. Steve Mills missed with 19 seconds showing and when Daniels again rebounded, Wilson got another chance when he was fouled driving to the basket. But he missed again and North Pitt got the rebound as time ran out.

In the second overtime, Shaw put North Pitt again for good with a drive to the basket with 1:37 left. After a missed shot by Conley, the Panthers again rebounded and Clark was fouled with 41 seconds to go, making both. That provided the Panthers with a 48-44 lead and then held off Conley the rest of the way for the win.

"They had a few lapses and we were able to make a comeback," Panther coach Cobby Deans said later. "Both teams have young clubs and it stays with you."

Deans said that the Panthers have two juniors on the team up from the jayvee squad of last year and they are still adjusting to the difference. "Conley was able to get a number of offensive rebounds on us and they got them over those juniors to a large part. And they had some turnovers at critical times. But they (Langley and Shaw) are two of our more important members of the team and they are continuing to progress."

Deans said that in the overtime, North Pitt tried to hold the ball for one shot — or an open one, noting that Shaw came up with the crucial basket at the right time for them in the second overtime. "Harris, Clark and Howard all played good games too," he added.

Conley coach Shelley Marsh said that the Vikings had their chances but he felt the technical broke the Vike backs. "This team is so immature as far as experience is concerned that they couldn't get it back after that. We stood tough on defense, but we never got back into the flow on offense. The shooters we sent to the line are our best ones; Wilson was hitting 88 percent coming into this game."

Marsh said he felt that North Pitt played a solid game. "They changed their defenses a lot and we had some trouble with that, especially with the one-three-one zone. And when it was all on the line, North Pitt got tough."

After the Panthers took the initial lead, Conley came back with six in a row to take a 6-2 edge. That was increased to as much as 12-4 in the first period which ended with Conley leading, 14-8.

The Vikings increased their lead to as much as nine, 26-17 in the second quarter, but North Pitt hit a flurry and cut it back to 28-25 at intermission.

Conley again built the lead back to nine in the third period, 36-27, and led, 38-31 as the final quarter got underway.

After the Panthers hit the first basket of the final frame, Mills and Wilson both hit jumpers to give Conley its 42-33 lead before the bottom fell out.

Clark led North Pitt with 13 points, while Mills and Daniels each had ten for Conley.

North Pitt goes to 4-3 with the win, while Conley is now 3-5.

Walston, Wilson Pace Rose Past Farmville Central, 60-53

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Mac Walston scored 17 points and Carlton Wilson added 12 as Rose High School downed Farmville Central, 60-53 to move into the finals of the Pitt County Holiday Basketball Tournament last night.

The Rampants will face North Pitt in the finals tonight at approximately 8 p.m. Farmville and D.H. Conley clash at 6:30 p.m. for the consolation title.

The Rampants took an early lead in the game, spotted Farmville as much as a three-point spread at times in the first half and then pushed out by as much as 12 before wrapping it up.

Several times, Farmville made runs at the Rampants during the final half, but each time, Rose would pull away again, finally leading 60-48 with 40 seconds to go.

"We were in the game there in the third period and let it get away from us," Jaguar coach Mike Terrell said. "It seemed like we cut it back to about six and then missed four easy shots. Then, they got ahead again and we never got back in it."

Terrell said he didn't feel the Jaguars played bad — "it wasn't our best, but we played well in spots. Rose hurt on with their height. They were able to get more offensive rebounds."

Farmville actually outrebounded the taller Rampants, 32-29, but it was on the offensive boards that Rose made its biggest moves.

Meanwhile Rose coach Jim Brewington didn't feel his team played well in the first half, but was pleased by their play in the third quarter. Typically, Rampant teams have a tough time in that period. "The third was a big lift for us. Maybe we're getting it together now," Brewington said.

Brewington added that two of his players were not feeling up to par, Tyrone Smith and Walston. "But I think they'll be ready tomorrow night. I know North Pitt will be."

The meeting between the two will be the rubber match. Each beat the other on its own home floor.

Farmville got the initial lead with a field goal by Andre Vines and a free throw by Kent Hardy. But Rose came back on jumpers by Smith, Walston and Wilson to take a 6-3 lead. Farmville regained the lead at 7-6 as Bobby Evans hit, but Rose moved back ahead, 10-9 on two shots by Walston.

Farmville recovered with nine seconds left as Evans hit a jumper to give the Jaguars an 11-10 lead at the end of the quarter.

Farmville pushed out by as much as five early in the second frame, taking a 15-10 lead. But Rose rallied and a driving layup by Gary Scott put them back up, 18-17. Tony Harris got credit for a basket on goal tending for a three-point edge, but Hardy got a three-point play for the Jags to tie it up.

It was the last time the Jags knotted it.

Harris hit again to put Rose ahead for good, and after Bernard Taylor missed the second shot of a one-and-one, Jeff Hopkins' three point play stretched the Rose lead to 25-21. The Rampants held the lead the rest of the way, taking a 29-26 lead into intermission.

Money For Expenses

LONDON (AP) — The money Bob Hope received from a British pro-am charity golf tournament which carries his name was only for expenses, the comedian says.

"When you're bringing stars over and taking care of them and their fares, it's a hell of a lot of expense there," Hope told the British Broadcasting Corp. in a telephone interview.

"But that's what makes the whole thing glamorous and something that people want to watch."

The British press had quoted organizers of the event, which went bankrupt last month, as telling creditors that Hope received $125,000 in fees and $75,000 in expenses for the Bob Hope British Classic.

Kentucky Overcomes Cincy's Stall For 24-11 Victory

By The Associated Press

By halftime, the second-ranked Kentucky Wildcats had scored just 11 points. In fact, their leading scorers, Sam Bowie and Mel Turpin, each finished the game with just six points apiece.

Still, it was enough as visiting Kentucky overcame Cincinnati's stalling tactics for a bizarre 24-11 college basketball victory Tuesday night.

"I feel sorry for the Kentucky fans who spent money and came all the way up here," said a disgusted Joe B. Hall, coach of the 6-0 Wildcats. "I know the players don't enjoy playing slowdown and you don't enjoy watching it."

Hall even went a little further. "The main thing I have on my mind is the length of our contract (with Cincinnati)," Hall said. "I don't like having a team on the schedule that's going to play that kind of a game."

Hall said that once he got back home to Lexington, he would check the contract between the two teams.

Across the way, Cincinnati Coach Tony Yates was rather pleased with the effort by his 1-7 Bearcats, who were 19-point underdogs.

"This is the only way we could play them," he said. "I'm so proud of the control our players had."

In other Top Twenty games Tuesday night, No. 13 North Carolina State downed North Carolina A&T 84-71 and No. 14 Georgia breezed past East Tennessee State 73-54. Kentucky, which played along with Cincinnati's stall, led 11-7 at halftime. Mark Morris scored five of the Bearcat points in the opening half.

Said Hall, "The options were ours and we chose to play their way."

"I don't understand totally what it means and I don't understand why they play that way," he said.

The second half featured more of the same as Cincinnati held the ball for nearly five minutes and then lost it on a turnover. Then, Bowie scored a basket to make it 13-7 before Mark Dale and Tony Wilson each scored for the Bearcats, pulling them within two points.

Cincinnati, however, did not score again in the game as Kentucky ran off the final 11 points before 16,351 fans.

"There is no way we could run, shoot and pass if we played them conventionally," Yates said. "We wanted to move the ball and be patient and take a good shot and we were."

Top Twenty

Sophomore guard Ernie Myers, who had been in a shooting slump, came off the bench to score 24 points to lead North Carolina State. Myers entered the game shooting just 21.3 percent from the floor but hit eight of nine shots against the Aggies.

Lorenzo Charles chipped in with 22 points for the Wolfpack, 8-2.

Forwards Joe Ward and James Banks scored 15 points apiece to carry Georgia. The Bulldogs used a 17-4 streak midway through the first half to take a 38-26 lead at intermission and East Tennessee State never got closer than 10 points thereafter.

Vern Fleming added 14 points for Georgia, which won its fourth consecutive game in improving to 7-1.

Unranked Teams

In other games, Clyde Vaughan, the Big East Conference's leading scorer, poured in 34 points as Pittsburgh outscored Florida State 102-89. Vaughan, who made 13 of 20 shots from the floor against the Seminoles, averages 24.2 points per game.

Michael Cage, a member of the 1983 United States team in the Pan American Games, scored 37 points in San Diego State's 91-77 victory over Texas. The winning Aztecs out-rebounded Texas 19-2 in the first half.

David Jenkins scored 24 points as Bowling Green became the first Mid-American Conference team in 14 years to win at Ohio State, 70-64. Ohio University, in 1969, was the last MAC team to win in the Buckeyes' St. John Arena.

Sophomore Dell Curry tossed in 34 points as Virginia Tech routed South Carolina 104-76, spoiling the Gamecocks' debut in the Metro Conference.

Xavier McDaniel scored 16 points and grabbed 12 rebounds in Wichita State's 67-59 triumph over New Orleans.

George Singleton scored 23 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to pace Furman over North Carolina at Charlotte 77-71.

Reserve forward Robert Dickerson tallied 19 points and pulled down nine rebounds as Virginia Commonwealth beat Dayton 73-67.

Freshman Mark Beavers sank two foul shots with seven seconds left to lift Duquesne over Detroit 60-59.

Rob Jones had 15 points and Willie Burton added 14 as Tennessee beat Hardin-Simmons 75-58.

Dave Hoppen scored 26 points as Nebraska rallied to nip Wyoming 67-64.

Forward Greg Grant's 20 points led Utah State past Utah 95-86.

Garry Robbins made a free throw with 11 seconds left to clinch Youngstown State's 64-63 victory over Ball State in the championship game of the Cardinal Varsity Club Classic in Muncie, Ind. Drexel, behind Richard Congo's 19 points, beat Butler 70-67 in the consolation game.

Bears Nip Aurora, 52-51

BEAR GRASS — Terry Brown scored with seven seconds left to allow Bear Grass to pull out a 52-51 victory over Aurora High School last night in a Tobacco Belt Conference basketball game.

Aurora's girls won a close one over the Lady Bears, 33-31.

Bear Grass' boys inched ahead, 12-11, after one quarter, but Aurora turned that around in the second period, and took a 23-22 lead into the dressing rooms at halftime.

Aurora pulled further in front, 37-34, during the third period, but couldn't hold off the Bears in the final period as they rallied for the win.

Lawrence Watson led the Bears with 18 points, while Terry Brown hit 12 and James Williams had 10. Arthur Harris and Danny Ethraim each had 11 for Aurora.

The win boosted the Bears to 3-1 on the season.

Aurora's girls shot away to a 12-2 lead over the Lady Bears in the opening contest. That lead was increased to 23-10 by halftime. But in the third period, Bear Grass rallied, scoring 15 whole holing Aurora to just two. That cut the lead totally away and left the two tied at 25-25 as the final period opened. In that, Aurora managed to outscore the Bears, 8-6, to claim the win.

Bernadette Smith led Aurora with 16 points while Amy Lilly had 17 for the Bears, who drop to 3-2. Bear Grass travels to Williamston tonight.

Theismann Is AP's MVP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joe Theismann, honored as the Associated Press National Football League Player of the Year was more surprised by the award than his Washington Redskin teammates.

"There's no way you could pick anybody else after the year he has had," said linebacker Rich Milot.

"If he didn't win it they should pack up the award and put it away because it wouldn't mean a thing. Nobody has meant more to a team than Joe to us," center Jeff Bostic said of the award announced Tuesday.

"I'd hoped for it — but since 1979, I've never counted anything until I had it in hand," said Theismann, remembering the hurt from being left off the Pro Bowl team despite leading the National Conference in passing.

Theismann, the triggerman of the most potent offense in National Football League history, completed 276 of 459 passes, 29 for touchdowns, for 3,714 yards this season. He was intercepted just 11 times. Rushing, he averaged 6.3 yards an attempt, gaining 234 yards on 37 carries.

Last week's 31-22 victory over the Giants, which clinched the division title for the Redskins saw Theismann run for one score and throw for a second as the Redskins overcame a 19-7 deficit.

"When he comes into the huddle the first thing you see is the concentration on his face and the confidence in his voice," says Redskin tight end Clint Didier.

"Joe has more experience than most quarterbacks. There is nothing a team can show him that he hasn't seen before," adds Bostic.

Starting each game, Theismann piloted the defending Super Bowl champions to a 14-2 record this season, tops in the league. The Redskins' 541 points scored is a new league standard, wiping out the previous mark of 513 set by Houston in 1961.

Driven by a need to excel, says Theismann believes the best is yet to come. "I know I can still play better football and I know this team can still get better," he vowed last week.

The overwhelming choice of a nationwide panel of sports writers and sports broadcasters voting for MVP, Theismann received 58 of the 84 votes cast. Eric Dickerson, the Los Angeles Rams' rookie running back and NFL rushing champion, was a distant second with 18 votes.

Miami Dolphins' rookie quarterback Dan Marino received three votes. Two went to Redskins running back John Riggins while quarterbacks Joe Montana of the San Francisco 49ers and Lynn Dickey of the Green Bay Packers and defensive tackle Randy White of the Dallas Cowboys received one vote apiece.

Admittedly unhappy with Redskin owner Jack Kent Cooke's refusal to renegotiate a $2 million, four-year pact he inked last year, Theismann's play never reflected his uncertain status with the team.

"It's always been in the back of my mind," said the Notre Dame All-America, who admits to dreaming of another Super Bowl and reaping the awards of a successful season. "I see myself packing a truck with awards and trophies and backing it up to Cooke's house and unloading it."

Greene Eases Past Bruins

STANTONSBURG — Greene Central held off a Beddingfield rally in the final period and then pulled away to take a 70-57 basketball victory over the Bruins last night.

Greene Central's girls scored in the final seconds to take a 50-49 win in their game.

Greene Central zipped away to a big lead in the first period of the boys' contest, taking a 19-8 lead after one period. Beddingfield inched back in the second quarter, however, cutting the lead to 29-20 by halftime.

The Rams stretched their lead back out to as much as 17 in the third period, before the Bruins again rallied, trimming the margin to 46-31. In the final quarter, Beddingfield rallied within five points before the Rams finally managed to shake loose and pull away for the 13-point victory.

Theodore Edwards led Greene Central with 26 points while Maurice Edwards had 21 and Bonner Johnson had 15. Eric Batts had 20 for Beddingfield, while Don Edwards had 15 and Andre Pegues had 10.

The win boosts the Beddingfield record to 6-1.

The Lady Rams led by one point after the first period, 6-5 and managed to increase that to 20-17 by halftime. In the third period, however, Beddingfield stuck close and trailed by just 35-33 going into the final quarter.

In that, Beddingfield finally pushed into the lead, 49-48, but with seven seconds left. Cindi Hicks made two free throws to give Greene Central the win.

Antionette Wilkes led Greene Central with 13 points while Hicks had 12. Cynthia Jones had 11 and Allison Battle had 10. Jackie Thompson led Beddingfield with 13, while Angie Ballard had 12 and Tracy Hooker and Hope Loftin each had 10.

The Greene Central girls are now 6-1.

Both GC teams play next week in the Tri-County Tournament at North Lenoir.

JV Game: Beddingfield 85, Greene Central 61.

Who's To Blame For Drug Abuse?

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Big-time competitive sports create a lot of pressure, reason apologists, so who can blame the athlete if he gets into a little trouble with drugs or alcohol?

We should feel sorry for these young men, snatched from their environment and transplanted into a new, dazzling world of money and fame. How could they possibly cope, we are asked, when they are surrounded by various, nefarious sorts who would lead them down the path of moral degradation?

How could they possibly resist buying a little cocaine or overindulging in liquor with all that pressure and with all that money in their pockets?

Phooey.

In light of growing research, the excuses just don't wash any longer. Athletes are no more victims of society than anyone else. Their foibles are the same; it's just that sometimes they originate in bigger heads, making them more difficult to find and treat.

If they are sick, they are sick just like anyone else.

The only real difference is that if they become sick by using too many drugs or drinking too much liquor, they adversely affect an even younger population — those who adore them.

"We do not feel that chemical dependency is caused by stress on the job," says Conrad Schmitt, president of the Parkview Centers Inc.

Schmitt's company, with headquarters in Minneapolis, Minn., currently operates six drug and alcohol treatment centers around the country, including The Meadows at Wickenburg, Ariz., where baseball players Darrell Porter and Bob Welch were treated for alcoholism.

A recovering alcoholic himself, Schmitt has heard all the excuses.

"For example," he says, "we had an individual in one of our treatment centers who said, 'Well, you'd drink too if you had my job.'"

"We asked him what he did for a living.

"He said he was an upholsterer.

"You see," Schmitt says, "stress is internal. We don't believe the athlete has any more stressful job than anyone else."

Schmitt says one problem with athletes might be in convincing them they have a problem to begin with.

"They have bigger egos," he says. "They live on adulation, so they might be a little tougher to handle in treatment. It might be tougher to break their delusion. But you would have the same thing with, say, a neurosurgeon — any person living off being a hero."

Schmitt says the telltale signs might be "very subtle."

"But here's what I would recommend: Say, for instance, you have a young man with a fantastic record. Suddenly, he's not up to par. The first thing you should do is screen out chemical dependency as the cause. Check that out first."

"People do bizarre things," Schmitt says, while at the same time denying to themselves that they have a problem."

Sued Bishop, Now Say They've Been Blackballed

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD
HAMPTON, N.H. (UPI) — Roman Catholic nuns who sued their bishop to keep their parochial school jobs watch longingly as youngsters scramble into classrooms only to be taught by others.

The jubilation the sisters felt a year ago has turned into anguish, but their determination to "make the church practice what it preaches" is as firm as ever.

As each week passes without a job offer, the nuns become more firmly convinced their court victory branded them as "troublemakers" throughout the Roman Catholic Diocese of Manchester.

Sisters Justine Colliton, Catherine Colliton and Mary Rita Furlong still live at the convent in the picturesque coastal community that has long been their home, but time is running out with no parochial teaching positions in sight.

"We took a stand, and we've been blackballed," said Sister Catherine. School administrators "are afraid that by hiring us id would look like opposition to the diocese."

While insisting the nuns are not being blackballed, diocese officials could not confirm there will be any positions offered.

The Rev. Norman Bolduc, vice chancellor for the diocese, said, "It's my understanding the diocese will offer them assistance if there are any openings available."

"They are in the same positions as anyone else who left," Bolduc said, adding he is aware of how "qualified" the nuns are.

The three teachers, in addition to Sister Honora Reardon now living in Concord with her mother, took the unprecedented action of suing their bishop in March 1982 after he refused to renew their contracts at the Sacred Heart School. The church contended the nuns were "uncooperative and cliquish."

The sisters — who each have at least 25 years of teaching experience in the diocese — claimed Bishop Odore Gendron violated their constitutional rights by dismissing them without a hearing.

While a Superior Court judge initially threw out the case saying it was a church matter, the New Hampshire Supreme Court ruled a nun has the right to sue her bishop. Legal action ended when diocese officials agreed to recertify the teachers and allow them to remain in the convent until July 1984.

The agreement, reached last May, also said the sisters "will apply for teaching positions within the diocesan school system and will be assisted in that process."

Although there are four schools in the convent area and 31 others in the diocese, "no one has ever called us," Sister Justine said, adding there has been "nothing resembling assistance" either.

The nuns offered to substitute teach, but never were asked, Sister Catherine said. She noted that their request for creation of four positions was turned down.

When Sister Catherine saw in the parish bulletin an opening for an eighth grade teacher and expressed her interest, another applicant got the post with no explanation to the nun.

"There is no precedent for what has happened to us," Sister Catherine said, "but it would seem if there is any justice some active steps would have been taken by now" to ensure teaching spots.

Brother Roger Lemoyne, superintendent of education for the diocese, said, "We have done everything we can to let local school boards know that the nuns are available for employment and are in good standing." "But the boards do the hiring," Lemoyne said, "and probably there's some caution on their part."

While the nuns fill their days with mass, tutoring, visits from former students and animated discussions about labor strife in the secular world they can now identify with, Sister Catherine said as far as the church is concerned, "it's almost as if we were lepers."

Heartening are the many parents on their side, mothers and fathers who formed a group called Save

Our Sisters and pulled their offspring out of Sacred Heart School to protest the dismissals. The number of students has dropped by 50 percent.

Youngsters pedaling bicycles visit the nuns they still adore, with the sisters keeping an ample supply of cakes on hand. Even former students who have graduated spend hours chatting and confiding in the nuns.

But when the company has left, the sisters admit they can't stop talking about their fading hopes and questionable future.

Charge Beating 2 Elderly Men

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Charlotte police charged a man Tuesday in the beatings and robbery of two crippled, elderly men.

One of the victims, who only had one arm, was beaten so badly that he lost an eye in the attack and required a month's hospitalization. The other victim, who is confined to a wheelchair because he is suffering from paralysis, had his one leg broken.

Paul "Mookey" Alexander, 20, of Charlotte, was arrested about 4 a.m. and charged with two counts each of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury; armed robbery and first-degree burglary.

In one of the attacks, Thomas Horton, 61, who is confined to a wheelchair, was home alone on Oct. 24 when someone entered and attacked him with a thick piece of wood. Then his house was ransacked.

The attacker took $7 from inside a desk and a pistol valued at $200 from a bedroom night stand, police said.

In the other attack, John Brantley, 92, said a robber entered his house Nov. 7, beat him, ransacked several rooms and fled with money, a billfold and personal papers.

Investigators said the attacker apparently rang the doorbell or knocked on the door and then smashed Brantley in the face when he answered.

Brantley suffered a fractured skull and lost one eye in the beating and spent nearly one month recuperating at Charlotte Memorial Hospital, police said.

Members of the Elizabeth Community Association began a drive to raise $1,000 to add to a $1,000 Crime Stoppers Task Force reward for information on the attack.

Police Capt. Wade Stroud would not say if someone would receive the reward but said the collection "played a role in the arrest."

Brantley had only one arm, having lost the other in a railroad accident 50 years ago. He retired as a Southern Railway conductor when he was 67.

Watchgeese Protect House

MIDDLEBURG HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — Anyone trespassing onto A.B. Bond's property risks running a-fowl of the law.

Bond, a retired president of Baldwin-Wallace College, protects his house with two watchgeese, Baldwin and Wallace, and the geese take their job seriously.

Bonds, 70, gives his German gray Toulouse geese a daily ration of corn and a tub of water in exchange for the honking and hissing they create when strangers approach.

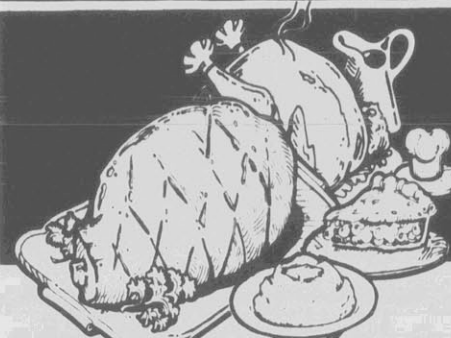

"It's amazing how you can come to love a goose," Bonds said. "They're so responsive when you offer them a small amount of affection."

Baldwin and Wallace, now confined to a pen, will eventually have the run of the couple's five acres.

"We're worried that they'll take up with the (wild) Canada geese and forget that they're supposed to be guarding the house," Mrs. Bonds said.

Made-For-TV Movie Poses A Droll, Amiable Fable

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Hobson's Choice," tonight's made-for-television movie on CBS, could have been called "Aesop's Choice." It's a droll, amiable fable that champions the rights of turn-of-the-century American underdogs, meaning anybody who wasn't male, white and well-off from birth.

Henry Hobson, played to a grouchy turn by the delightful Jack Warden, runs his fashionable shoe shop from the corner saloon, leaving his responsible, yet matronly, daughter, Maggie (Sharon Gless), to handle the business. While she's the brains behind the operation, Will Mossop (Richard Thomas) is the brawn. Will is a shoemaker working in the shop's dank basement, and his creations are works of art, according to one regular customer, played by Lillian Gish.

Will and Maggie differ in status and upbringing, but Maggie respects Will for the strength of his character and pride in his work. As is her style, she doesn't just pursue him in marriage, she demands it, shocking her class-conscious father who deems it his right to choose partners for his daughters.

The fact that this crotchety cheapskate won't provide dowries for his daughters subverts the marriage plans of Vickie and Alice, Henry's giggly, lazy and less-sufficient younger daughters.

Maggie, the feminist of her day, is interested in Will for pragmatic and romantic reasons. Through Will, she hopes to establish a rival shoe shop, providing her the leverage to outwit her father and gain control of her dreams and the destinies of her sisters.

Based on the 1916 English play by Harold Brighouse, which has had other incarnations as a 1954 David Lean film and the 1966 Broadway musical, "Walking Happy," the CBS version of "Hobson's Choice" is given a fresh outlook by its original setting: 1914 New Orleans.

This allows the play's message of a society perverted by rigid class structures to interact with such American traditions as the work ethic and Horatio Alger. Although a bit dated and dry in spots, the result is a whimsical tale that won't be mistaken for today's ever-popular action-adventure genre.

Instead of bullets for punctuation, "Hobson's Choice" relies on barbs and banter, using needles to poke fun at the square edges of the characters and the old-fashioned conventions and castes of the times.

For example: One of Henry's daughters glowingly describes her suitor as a "well-respected lawyer," but Henry says he can't be both.

Warden, who starred recently with Paul Newman in "The Verdict," brings sparks to this irascible character. Looking toward the heavens after being chided by Maggie for his boozing, Henry says "Sometimes I can close my eyes, and it's as if mother never died."

Henry's doctor says drinking his meals is killing him, advising "no more alcohol." To which Henry says, "No more, no less."

Miss Gless, her hair pinned back and her manner upright and rigid, is a worthy rival for Warden. The star of CBS' soon-to-be-resurrected "Cagney & Lacey" gives Maggie a stoic front that underscores her competence in a male-dominated society and keeps her romanticism and passion chomping beneath the surface.

To Miss Gless' credit, it doesn't come off as too-deadly corny when Maggie says to Will: "This is America, and we're entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Even though "Hobson's Choice" was filmed entirely on location in New Orleans, it looks more like a play than a movie. Most scenes are shot in close-quartered rooms and the characters seem to be making pronouncements rather than conversing.

All of which occasionally makes this living-room comedy a bit stilted, but that may be because television doesn't regularly stress dialogue and nuance over flash and action.

So stay with it. As a parable about the comparative value of birthright status vs. hard work and character, "Hobson's Choice" is a cute, offbeat evening's entertainment.

"TOP HERO" — Film star Sylvester Stallone receives "Top Hero of America" award from Jane Platt, publisher of The World Almanac and Book of Facts, on the 20th Century-Fox set of "Rhino Stone" which he is currently filming with Dolly Parton. (AP Laserphoto)

Johnny Cash Again Fighting Drug Fear

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Country singer Johnny Cash — trying to avoid becoming dependent on painkillers — has become the second celebrity this month to check into the Betty Ford Center for treatment of a drug problem.

Cash, 51, entered the facility at Eisenhower Medical Center on Tuesday to help him handle the effects of painkillers he has been taking during a spate of recent illnesses, his manager says.

On Dec. 5, Elizabeth Taylor admitted herself to the center, which treats people for addiction or dependency on everything from alcohol and prescription drugs to cocaine and marijuana. The actress said she had developed a problem with prescription drugs.

Cash was released Friday from Baptist Hospital in Nashville where he underwent surgery for an intestinal ulcer. In recent months he also has been treated for blood poisoning, the result of an insect bite, and for severe muscle spasms in his back, said manager Lou Robin.

"Due to the required medication to help effect the recovery from these various illnesses, Johnny decided to enter the Betty Ford Center at Eisenhower Medical Center ... as a preventive measure now that he is fully recovered and feeling great," Robin said.

In a Barbara Walters interview broadcast Dec. 6, Cash spoke of a long-ago drug problem, when he took as many as 100 barbiturates and amphetamines a day because he "wanted to be John Doe for a little while."

He credited his second wife, singer June Carter Cash, with helping him kick the habit about 20 years ago, and said it was "a miracle — a gift of God" that he is alive today.

"Johnny is planning to resume recording, TV and personal appearances in late February," Robin said.

Victoria Made Hospital Visit

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Bystanders gawked and whispered as Victoria Principal, star of the television show "Dallas," made an appearance of a personal nature at University Hospitals in Birmingham.

The 33-year-old actress went to visit her father, Victor Principal of Warner Robins, Ga., who underwent open heart surgery Tuesday.

Hospital spokesman John Wright Jr. said Miss Principal's 65-year-old father was in satisfactory condition in the cardiovascular surgical intensive care unit.

The convalescence was progressing normally, he said.

House Built In Under 3 Hours

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A building-trade association here set an unofficial world's record for building a house.

A 350-man team constructed a three-bedroom, 1,500-square-foot house from foundation to finished interior and landscaping in 2 hours, 52 minutes and 31 seconds. The team donated the time and materials.

Bobby Daniels, a native of Greenville and drummer with the Kenny Rogers Band, will be honored on Dec. 30 as the special guest of the annual Eppes alumni meeting and parade by former students of the high school once located on West Fifth Street.

The main event of the annual observance day this year will be titled "A Salute to Bobby Daniels," and will take place at 8:30 p.m. in the Greenville Moose Lodge. It is open to the public, with admission tickets priced at $8. Advance tickets can be purchased from Fleetway Cleaners and from Music Unlimited Studios on West Fifth Street.

Funds raised from the evening will go to the Eppes Scholarship Fund.

The son of J.D. Daniels of Ford Street, Greenville, and the late Mrs. Daniels, Bobby Daniels was one of a group of students at Eppes High in the late 1950s that formed their own early rock group. Other members were Marvin Daniels, now with a rock group, and Michael Garrett.

Johnny Wooten, associate chairman for the Eppes Alumni Association, says "this year our plans are to provide a number of music scholarships to both black and white students to attend the ECU Music Camp sponsored by the East Carolina University campus. All the proceeds realized from the Daniels salute will be used for these scholarships."

A highlight of the program will be a video presentation by Kenny Rogers, prepared especially for the Greenville celebration of Bobby

'Cat Clause' In Contract

NEW YORK (AP) — If the largest union at The Wall Street Journal has its way, a new contract would contain a "cat clause."

The Independent Association of Publishers' Employees, deep within its 22-page list of proposals, is demanding that "A cat, and maintenance thereof, shall be supplied for editorial rooms and any other rodent-infested areas."

The union, which represents 1,500 editorial, business, clerical and technical workers, says labor and management have been stymied by a mouse plague at the Journal's New York City headquarters.

"We figure it's time to bring in the felines. Something has to be done about the mice," an unidentified union spokesman said in a union news release.

Larry Armour, corporate relations director for Dow Jones & Co. Inc., publisher of the Journal, would only say it was "commendable that one of our unions has such a good sense of humor."

The union said the "cat clause," listed under "health and safety" provisions, joins more traditional demands involving salaries, health benefits and job security. Its current three-year contract expires Jan. 31.

SWINDLED
LONDON (AP) — A former bank executive faces three months in jail for allowing his branch to be swindled out of nearly $2.3 million by an "experienced con-woman".

By R. BRIERLEY THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer
McGUIRE AIR FORCE BASE, N.J. (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope, carrying thousands of chocolate chip cookies and Christmas greetings, was en route to Lebanon today for his 30th sojourn to entertain U.S. troops.

The 80-year-old entertainer departed with his troupe for this central New Jersey base Tuesday evening, heading for a stopover in Naples, Italy, before he joins the U.S. 6th Fleet off the shores of the divided Middle East nation.

Hope's trip continues a Christmas show tradition that began in 1941, when he entertained World War II troops at March Air Force Base near Los Angeles. But it is the first since 1972, when he took an entourage to Vietnam.

At McGuire, servicemen gave Hope a golf club shaped like the huge C-141 military cargo plane his entourage was boarding.

Hefting the club, Hope said: "Beirut is like a golf course — 18 holes in every building."

After packing 140,000 cookies and 3,000 holiday messages for the 1,800 servicemen in Lebanon, Hope earlier Tuesday joined actress Ann Jillian, Cathy Lee Crosby of TV's "That's Incredible," singer Vic Damone and comic George Kirby aboard a U.S. Navy C-9 plane at the Air National Guard Base in Van Nuys, Calif.

Before takeoff, Hope joked with 200 guardsmen that he'd asked Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger to have the word "Friend"

Police Investigate 4 Collisions Here

An estimated $4,550 damage resulted from four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted when a truck driven by Jimmy Ray Mizell of Route 1, Stokes, collided with a car driven by Charles Max Elks of 1106 W. Wright Road about 3:20 p.m. on Dickinson Avenue at the Clark Street intersection.

Police, who charged Mizell with having improper equipment (brakes), estimated damage at $1,500 to the car and $200 to the truck.

Cars driven by Barbara Crisp Daniels of Route 2, Belhaven, and Julian Anthony Powell of 612 E. 10th St., collided about 12:50 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 400 feet west of the Charles Street intersection, causing an estimated $600 damage to the Daniels car and $900 damage to the Powell vehicle.

A 5:46 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard .2 mile west of the Hooker Road intersection involved cars driven by Floyd Wooten Stanley Jr. of Ayden and Betty Andrews Robbins of Bethel, police said.

Damage from the collision was placed at $300 to the Stanley car and $600 to the Robbins auto.

Cars operated by Clarence Earl Swinson of Route 1, Grimesland, and Homer Brown Louya Jr. of Route 2, Greenville, collided about 1:25 p.m. on Arlington Boulevard, 4 mile west of the Red Banks Road intersection.

Police estimated damage at $150 to the Swinson car and $300 to the Louya auto.

— weighing 3,000 pounds — were donated for the U.S. contingent of the multinational peacekeeping force by the Original Cookie Co. in Cleveland. Hope's hometown.

The Christmas greetings were special editions of the Long Beach (Calif.) Press-Telegram, which printed letters from wives, friends and families of men aboard the battleship USS New Jersey. Its home port is Long Beach.

Hope wanted to entertain the troops in Beirut last Christmas, but doctors and his wife, Dolores, convinced him that a hemorrhage in his right eye was too serious. Instead, he flew to Houston for a Christmas telethon to raise money for the Bob Hope School for the Handicapped in Port Arthur, Texas.

Hope's first overseas Christmas trip was in 1943.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — THE HAMMY VAUDVILLIAN WAS INDUBITABLY AN ABOMINABLE SHOWMAN. Today's Cryptoquip clue: T equals O.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The United States defeated Italy by the narrowest of margins in the 1983 World Team Championship, played in Stockholm. Slams played a key role in the outcome. This one went in favor of Italy.

In one room, the Italians stayed out of the auction, and the Americans reached six spades. Declarer took the percentage play in the trump suit and, when the queen did not drop and the diamond finesse lost, South went down one.

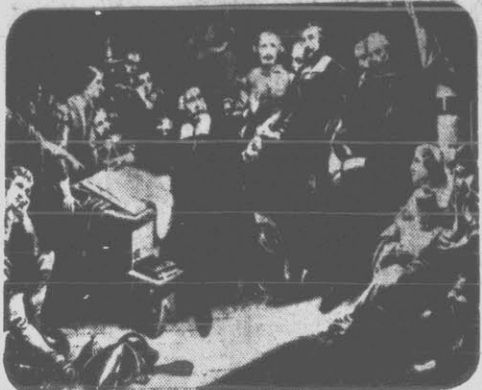

The auction shown took place in the room where Italy sat North-South. North's one club opening bid was artificial.

Mosquitoes Meet Match

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Mosquitoes have met their match in a bacterium discovered in Israel, reports Richard Garcia of the University of California at Berkeley.

The bacterium, known as bacillus thuringiensis, produces spores which contain endotoxin, a poison deadly to mosquitoes and blackflies.

FOCUS

Forced Landing

On this day in 1620 the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock. However, history does not support the story that this landing was their first in the New World. They tried several points around Cape Cod, before making the actual mooring at Provincetown. A small party of scouts made the famous December 21, 1620 landing. The Pilgrims decided to land at Plymouth because their supplies were nearly gone, "especially our beer."

Gideons Not Likely To Return Service

MARION, N.C. (AP) — Gideon International probably will not seek permission to distribute New Testaments to McDowell County fifth-graders, even though the county school board has reversed an earlier decision rejecting the program, a Gideon representative said Tuesday.

The McDowell school board three months ago denied the international Bible society permission to distribute the literature to fifth-graders because it would violate the school's advertising policy and, according to school attorneys, run contrary to constitutional provision for separation of church and state.

The board, after two months of public outcry, backed down Dec. 5 on its refusal, opening the way for the Gideons to resubmit their request. But the Gideons, based in Nashville, Tenn., are unlikely to do so, said Paul Boyd.

Boyd said Gideon International fears legal action from groups outside McDowell County if Bibles are distributed this year.

"We distribute Bibles in 130 countries, and it's real shaky in some of them," he said. "We can't have the press or anyone else saying the Gideons have been kicked out of their own country.

"We're peacemakers, not warmakers. We don't want to do anything that people oppose."

The Gideons have distributed Bibles in McDowell County in past years to students whose parents signed notes of permission. The society gives the testaments free of charge and without advertisement.

Some 11,000 Bibles planned for the fifth-graders at McDowell County have been sent to other Gideon groups in need of Bibles, Boyd said.

Sees Removing Bars To Trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government is pressing for elimination of bars to trade in insurance, shipping and other non-merchandise services.

U.S. Trade Representative William Brock said an American report on the subject to members of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade was "a very exciting and positive step, a giant step."

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Consider the plans that have the broadest scope that you can envision and forget petty things. Concentrate on making a big name for yourself.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are very creative, but update your methods so you don't waste any time. Entertain new contacts well.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study basics well and know how to make needed improvements on them. Listen carefully and do not argue with kin.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can count on partners to show you to enterprise more intelligently. Keep active and succeed. Enjoy a social affair in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Handle your work more efficiently, and you can enjoy more of the good things of life. Show gratitude for good advice.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Your fine ideas can make your talent work like a charm, so get busy and be original. Have a good time with friends. Don't stay out too late.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You are usually concerned with precision matters but now you should think big and want to get big. Drive with care.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Go to a friend who is successful in the field you are interested in to get good advice. Advance and be happy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Listen to others since your ideas are not so good. Then put in motion a new plan of action. Be happy in the evening. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Contact those with different background and ideas to your own; they can give you a better insight. Plan for a trip.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) This is a good day for organizing and expanding business affairs. A direct approach with your mate can improve your relationship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Someone will show you what a sensible person would do to improve your status in life. Entertain this person in the evening.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make your surroundings more functional so that you and others will be happier. Avoid one who is jealous of you.

YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be someone who will have foresight, vision, and logic, and should have a fine college education. One who would do well in any position of importance connected with the government or at the head of some large organization.

Chamber Adopts Budget

A $270,900 budget for 1984 has been adopted by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, along with a program of work that includes seminars, a "legislative watch" and an increase in membership services.

The program of work, according to 1984 Chairman of the Board Jon Tingelstad, includes "far-reaching challenges in community development and economic and industrial development."

The public and governmental affairs division of the chamber will continue its activity in monitoring legislation that affects business, said Tingelstad, as well as hold forums for candidates to air their views on issues. He said the organization and membership division of the chamber will step up its activities in membership services and offer a small business council.

The retention division, he said, will continue the Ambassadors program and the Pepsi breaks.

Christmas Program Held

Pitt Community College held its annual adult basic education Christmas program recently at A.G. Cox Grammar School with over 150 persons attending.

Special guests included Dr. Major Boyd, state ABE director, William Von Schriltz and Philip Evancho, PCC's visiting artist. For further information on ABE call 756-3130, extension 318.

Nativity Tableau Planned

Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church Youth will present a live nativity tableau twice on Friday — from 5 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. and then from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m.

The nativity will include a lamb and possibly other live animals, with approximately 20 persons participating. The production is directed by R. Martin Armstrong III, a minister at Jarvis. The event is open to the public without charge. Jarvis Memorial is located at 510 S. Washington St. in downtown Greenville.

Ambassador Is A Candy Heir

LONDON (AP) — Charles H. Price II has begun his tenure as the new U.S. ambassador to Britain after a horse-drawn carriage trip to Buckingham Palace to be recognized by the queen.

The Kansas City heir to a candy fortune met for 20 minutes Tuesday with Queen Elizabeth II in the palace's ornate 1844 Room. He presented her with two letters — one from President Reagan announcing his appointment, the other affirming the recall of his predecessor, John J. Louis Jr.

Price formerly was ambassador to Belgium.

After the private ceremony, Price returned to the U.S. Embassy in Grosvenor Square, and, in a personal touch, fed sugar lumps to the royal household's bay horses which had carried him, his wife and three of his five children to the palace in three carriages. He then shared a champagne toast with the scarlet-cloaked coachmen.

Price's wife is the former Carol Ann Swanson, heiress to the Swanson's frozen-food fortune.

Although they go to Buckingham Palace, envoys to Britain still are formally accredited to the Court of St. James, the nearby 16th-century palace built by Henry VIII and the main London residence of monarchs until 1820. The palace is now used by royal staff.

Price, 52, who headed the Price Candy Co. and was a heavy contributor to Reagan's election campaign, arrived in London Nov. 15 from Belgium, his first diplomatic post.

Even before his formal accreditation, he was called upon to help smooth strained U.S.-British relations following the American decision to lift a ban on arms sales to Argentina.

Britain opposes weapons sales to its enemy in the 1982 Falkland Islands war. Despite the surrender of its forces on the South Atlantic islands, Argentina refuses to relinquish its territorial claims or acknowledge the end of hostilities.

Price also went quickly to 10 Downing St., Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's official residence, after Saturday's IRA bombing at Harrods, London's noted department. The bombing killed five people, including an American. Price pronounced it "a despicable act of terrorism."

In the weeks before his arrival, the "special relationship" between the United States and Britain faced strains over Lebanon, where Mrs. Thatcher has warned against the danger to American and British troops in the multinational peacekeeping force, and over Grenada, the former British colony invaded by U.S.-led forces over Mrs. Thatcher's objections.

Louis was called home after two years in his post. Published reports, noting his absence during the beginning of the Falklands war, criticized him as being an "Invisible Man."

Daily Mail gossip columnist Nigel Dempster, who disclosed Louis' replacement in September, reported today that former ambassador to London Walter Annenberg, a close friend of Reagan's, "appears to have called the shots" in the embassy changeover. Dempster did not say why this was so.

Martin To Speak At Dinner

Rep. Jim Martin, R-N.C., a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, will be the featured speaker at the Coastal Plain Lincoln Day Dinner in Rocky Mount Jan. 13.

Sponsored by Nash County Republicans, the 7 p.m. dinner will be at the Carleton House Restaurant. Tickets are $7.50 per person, and additional information may be had by calling Nick Faulk at 977-3577, Leon Henderson at 442-3115, or Dr. Faye Eagles at 443-6636.

Marijuana Plants Found

Greenville police confiscated several marijuana plants Tuesday found growing in a vacant lot in the 1200 block of Myrtle Avenue.

Officer L.E. White said the plants were found about 1 a.m. He said the illegal plants were taken to the police station.

Student Is Listed

Jesse G. Yates III of Greenville has been listed in the 1984 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges." Yates is a student at Wilson Technical Institute.

Larceny Investigated

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of a larceny at the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity house at 500 Elizabeth St., which was reported Tuesday. Officer W.B. Price said a sewing machine and kerosene heater were reported taken.

Student Initiated

Mark Earl Grossnickle of 1105 Oakview Drive, Greenville, was one of 69 Duke University students recently initiated into the college's chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, the national scholastic honorary fraternity.

Teen-Ager Is Wounded

A 14-year-old Greenville youth was admitted to Pitt County Memorial Hospital about 12:45 p.m. Tuesday for treatment of a gunshot wound to his buttocks he received in a shooting accident in a wooded area off secondary road 1706 near Brook Valley.

A spokesman for the sheriff's department said Mike Swinson of 3004 Fern Drive was injured when another 14-year-old boy, carrying a .22 caliber rifle, stumbled and fell, causing the rifle to fire.

Extra Garbage Pickup Set

Officials of the village of Simpson have announced the addition of a special holiday garbage pickup in addition to regularly scheduled collections. The regular collection run will be made on Friday, with the additional holiday pickup on Tuesday. Residents wanting to make use of the added service are to have their material ready for pickup prior to 8 a.m. Tuesday.

Warren Heads Study

Rep. Ed N. Warren has been appointed to head a legislative study of the property revaluation program conducted in the 100 counties in North Carolina.

Warren, who was named recently by House Speaker Liston B. Ramsey to the North Carolina Property Tax Study Commission, has been appointed chairman of the subcommittee which will take a close look at the manner in which real property is valued for tax purposes every eight years. Included in the study by the Warren subcommittee will be the question of whether the cycle of revaluation should be shortened.

Warren has been a member of the House since 1981 and is a former member of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners.

Socially Responsible Investments Becoming Available

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — For those who don't like their capitalism straight up, the financial community is offering a different twist: socially responsible investments.

Income without angst. Whether you're a religious pacifist, a solar zealot, a pro-Pentagon ecologist or a left-over '60s idealist, there is a fund designed to make you money without making you feel guilty.

"You don't have to give up anything in terms of yield, safety or access to your money in order to make socially responsible investments," says Julia Parzen, chief financial officer of the embryonic Working Assets Money Fund.

The San Francisco money market fund is the latest entry into an arcane field once dominated by religious groups and now taking hold, say its boosters, in the American mainstream.

Twenty years ago, Christian Scientists loath to invest in alcohol, tobacco or drug companies founded the Foursquare Fund of Boston. Though Foursquare merged with a conventional mutual fund in September, several new funds are prospering and two older ones are healthier than ever.

The grandparents of the current boom are the PAX World Fund, started 13 years ago by pacifist Methodist clergymen, and Dreyfus' Third Century Fund, operated by a major brokerage house.

In September 1982, financial activists in Great Neck, N.Y., founded the New Alternatives Fund for investments in solar and alternative energy sources. A month later, the Calvert Group of Washington, D.C., started two more general social investment funds. Working Assets was born last Sept. 15.

Financial columnists, reporters and advisers are picking up on the trend and fueling it with publicity. The movement has even sparked two of its own newsletters.

From rural Towanda, Pa., editors of the three-month-old "Market Conscience" use computers to track firms compatible with a 60-page social investment guide that took a year to research and write.

"We are the only advisory service making buy-sell recommendations to investors that uses social responsibility criteria," says Clark Moeller.

Of the funds, Calvert appears to have the most comprehensive social criteria. Companies and projects must manufacture safe products in a safe workplace with a process that does not harm the environment, must treat workers fairly, and provide equal opportunities for women and minorities.

The fund will not invest in companies "primarily engaged" in the nuclear energy industry, business activities in South Africa or the manufacture of weapons systems. Alcohol and tobacco companies are also taboo.

PAX World has an outright ban on weapons manufacturers while Third Century invests in McDonnell-Douglas, Honeywell and other large Defense Department contractors. Both employ the same environmental, labor, product purity and equal opportunity standards as Calvert.

Calvert, a year old, offers mutual and money market funds totaling $20 million to the conscientious capitalist interested in promoting companies that offer onsite day-care and other progressive policies.

The Calvert fund boasts a large star-studded advisory

bers: Amory B. Lovins, author of Soft Energy Paths; Robert Rodale, chairman of the health-conscious Rodale Press, and Julian Bond, the Georgia state legislator identified with civil rights causes.

Socially concerned investors should be aware that performance is relative.

Third Century and PAX World averaged only a one on a 10-point scale in 1982 ratings by The Donoghue Group, a mutual funds analyst.

Third Century, a $140 million growth fund, has paid dividends of 80.5 cents per share this year. Shares were worth $6.58 last Dec. 31 and $7.08 on Sept. 30.

The defense ban that has made PAX World an antiwar attraction for Quakers, Mennonites and others cuts out 40 percent of the fund's potential investments. Still, the balanced fund topped the $11 million mark this year and has paid 77 cents in dividends. Shares were worth $10.37 on Dec. 31 and $11.55 on Sept. 30.

"We've hit the middle ground on performance. We have done better than the New York Stock Exchange," says Jack Corbett, vice president of PAX World.

Calvert's $6 million social investment mutual fund, too new to receive a Donoghue rating, has paid dividends worth 44 cents per share this year. Its shares closed at $15.72 last Dec. 31 and $17.58 on Sept. 30.

The group's $14 million money market fund paid 8.89 percent interest for the first three quarters of 1983, or 9.31 percent compounded — slightly above the Donoghue average and comparable to the Working Assets yield.

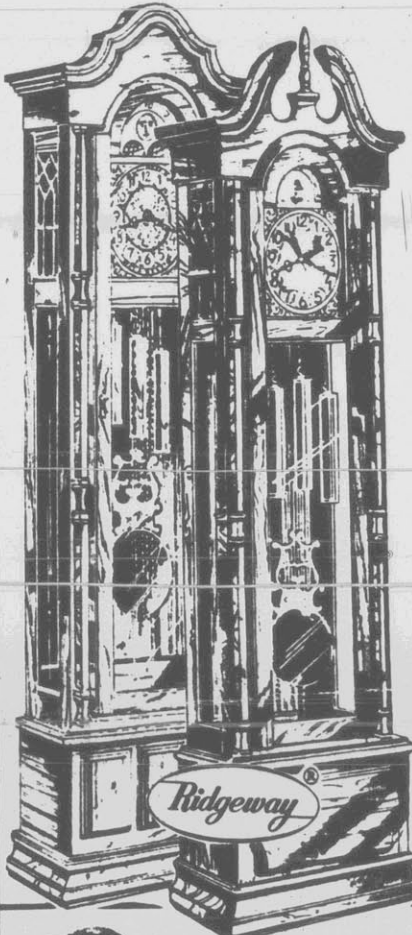

Growth does not appear to be a problem for Calvert or Working Assets, which attracted $1 million in its first three weeks of existence.

Jerry Dodson, the 40-year-old president of Working Assets, says his infant venture is seeking people to invest in small business, family farms, higher education and housing.

"We're not a left-wing fund," he says. "We are hoping for a broad spectrum of Americans. We are part of the mainstream."

A Tall Tale Of Potholes

MIDDLESEX, N.J. (AP) — Every time councilman Victor Capolunghi hit a pothole, something popped into his head. Now all that inspiration has won him first place in a Pothole Hall of Fame contest.

In the "pothole prose" competition sponsored by an asphalt manufacturer, Capolunghi wove an imaginary account of "U-Boat Alley," telling how road crews tried valiantly to fix "the one pothole that defied all previous attempts at being repaired."

They came fully equipped — with "gas masks, ladders, scuba equipment, a rowboat, sonar (to find the bottom), large pumps and powerful spotlights."

However, the Rutgers University's archaeology department gets a court order to halt the work so it can dig for artifacts of an early American civilization.

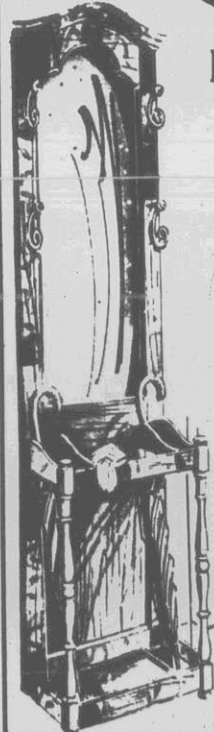

The excavation uncovers auto wrecks dating back to the 1920s, more than 400 hubcaps, and even an abandoned airplane runway. It was full of potholes — built with asphalt from the contest sponsor's chief competitor.

The story ends with the road crew painting a yellow line down the middle of the hole and pronouncing the work complete.

Asked how he came up with such a tall tale, Capolunghi told how, "As I'd drive along and hit a pothole, something would bounce into my head and I'd put it in there."

The contest was sponsored by the Gifford-Hill Co. of Charlotte, N.C. Capolunghi's prize was 10,000 pounds of pavement.

He says he'll donate it to the borough's department of public works.

Former UN Chief Considers Austrian Presidency

By O.C. DOELLING
Associated Press Writer
DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — After spending nearly two years writing and lecturing since being forced out of his job as United Nations secretary-general, Kurt Waldheim is considering a return to public life — with a second bid for the presidency of Austria.

In a recent interview during a visit to this oceanfront resort town, Waldheim said he will make a decision next year on whether to run again for Austria's presidency.

"I don't want to decide on that matter until it is necessary," Waldheim said, looking ahead to the 1986 race for the largely ceremonial post.

In the meantime, he said, he is spending his time writing his memoirs and keeping active on the speakers' circuit.

After 10 years as U.N. chief, Waldheim was blocked in his 1981 bid for an unprecedented third term by China, which insisted on a Third World candidate and vetoed Waldheim during 16 inconclusive rounds of Security Council balloting. Javier Perez de Cuellar, a Peruvian diplomat, finally emerged as the council's compromise choice.

Waldheim, tall and reed-thin, turns 65 in December and is planning to return to his native Austria after completing his memoirs. The book is half-written, he said.

"My approach is not to write a scholarly book but a book which will interest the public," Waldheim said, promising to include a meaty chapter on the world leaders he dealt with as secretary-general, including former President Richard Nixon.

The usually cautious Waldheim angered Nixon in 1972 by urging a halt to U.S. bombing of North Vietnam to avert destruction of dikes. Nixon called Waldheim "well-intentioned and naive" for having been "taken in" by what the American leader dismissed as communist propaganda. Looking back, Waldheim still feels he was right because U.S. officials conceded that accidental strikes on dams could not be ruled out.

Waldheim thinks Nixon was "somewhat nervous" because "he was in a campaign" for re-election at the time. Pressed at a public forum here to give personality appraisals of Nixon and the three other American presidents he knew while serving as U.N. chief, Waldheim laughed off the question, replying: "You see how many American presidents I survived."

Austrian diplomats at the United Nations assume Waldheim will decide to enter the presidential race. If he does, he is expected to have a better chance of winning than in 1971, when he was narrowly defeated by Franz Jonas, longtime Socialist mayor of Vienna.

Waldheim, a former Austrian foreign minister, ran as an independent backed by the conservative People's Party.

He bounced back from defeat to be elected U.N. secretary-general just eight months later.

Like former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, Waldheim lectures on an "ad hoc basis" at Georgetown University in Washington, where he is a research professor for diplomacy and international affairs.

Waldheim, who lives in Washington, also keeps in close touch with many of those with whom he shared the world stage. He is chairman of a new advisory group comprised of 25 former heads of state or government, including West Germany's Helmut Schmidt, Britain's James Callaghan, Japan's Takeo Fukuda and Senegal's Leopold Senghor.

Called the Interaction Council, the group has held a series of meetings in Vienna, Tokyo and New York "to work out proposals for governments on the burning issues of our time: peace and development." Council members plan to take their ideas on tour to the key capitals of the world.

Although the group eventually hopes to attract private funding, it was launched with government grants from Japan, Sweden and Norway.

Meanwhile, Waldheim finds himself in demand as a guest speaker in the United States and abroad. He came to Daytona Beach for two days to speak at various functions connected with local U.N. activities, and contributed his fees to a new Kurt Waldheim chair in international law at Florida State University in Tallahassee.

The former secretary-general still seems to relish public exposure and the chance to win converts to the U.N. cause. "There is no better alternative," he tells his audiences.

DYNAMO STILL — Norm Constantine, right, a 25-year-old recreational therapist and former Penn State Univ. Lion "mascot", teaches martial arts to a student while working for the United Cerebral Palsy Association in 1981. Now Constantine, the victim of a hit-and-run auto accident, lies quietly in a bed in the same rehabilitation hospital where he once taught handicapped patients the martial arts. Constantine was in a coma for seven months after the 1981 accident but now can move his eyes and his right arm and leg. (AP Laserphoto)

N.C. Competency Test Results Indicate Gains

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The latest results from the state competency test indicate hard work and improving curriculum in North Carolina's schools, a spokesman for the Department of Public Instruction says.

State officials say nearly 93 percent of North Carolina's high school juniors who took competency tests this fall passed the reading portion, while 89.9 percent passed the math section.

The latest scores "indicate to us that there's a lot of work going on in the schools with improving curriculum and teaching methods, and students themselves appear to be working harder," said Tom I. Davis, spokesman for the department.

Davis said the overall passing rate among students taking their first competency test increased by about three percentage points over fall 1982. Scores have improved at a similar rate each year since the tests first were given in 1978, he added.

"We're pleased that the progress has been made," said Davis. "The most encouraging thing is that the students in the lower socioeconomic groups are showing vast improvement."

The overall passing rate on reading was 92.8. Among students without handicaps, it was a record 95.9 percent on reading and 93.1 percent on math.

Included in the overall averages are students enrolled in "exceptional children" programs where passing scores in reading were earned by 42.3 percent of the multi-handicapped, 18.3 percent of the mentally handicapped, 63 percent of the hearing-impaired, 87 percent of the visually handicapped, 65.7 percent of the learning-disabled, and 62 percent of those placed in other special education programs. Math scores were similar.

Blacks, Indians and students whose parents had less than an eighth-grade education continue to make the most dramatic improvement, Davis said.

In 1978, 66 percent of the black students passed the math section of the test. This year the rate jumped to 78 percent. In reading, 75 percent of the blacks passed in 1978 and 82.2 percent passed last fall.

Indian students jumped from a 79 percent passing rate on reading and 72 percent on math in 1978 to 86.1 on reading and 80.8 on math in 1983.

Passing rates for whites on the six tests given since 1978 increased from 96 percent on reading and 93 percent on math to 97.1 on reading and 94.9 percent on math last fall.

Students whose parents didn't get past the eighth grade have shown an overall passing rate gain of four points to 71.9 percent in reading.

TIS THE SEASON TO BE JOLLY ... AND SAFE!

During the holidays, your home may be brimming with boughs of holly, shiny ornaments, and twinkling, brightly colored lights. To make sure your home will be as safe during the holiday season as it is jolly, we at your electric utility ask you to heed these electrical safety precautions:

- Check indoor and outdoor holiday lights each year. Make sure all cords are completely covered with insulation, and the sockets are firmly attached to the cords and contain good light bulbs.
- Unplug lights before stringing them.
- Keep lights away from a tree's water source, paper decorations and tinsel—they can cause a fire.
- Use only lights and extension cords labelled for outdoor use when decorating your yard or the exterior of your home.
- Don't overpower your home circuits with too many lights. Keep extra fuses on hand in case you blow a fuse.
- Always unplug all decorative lights before leaving an unattended room or going to bed.

Kids Learn A Response To Stress

By KATHERINE SPRINGER

Associated Press Writer
DERBY LINE, Vt. (AP) — Being a kid isn't always easy, according to the youngsters participating in an innovative stress management program for elementary school students.

For one boy, worry mounts with those inexplicable bumps in the night. For a girl, it comes sometimes when the teacher turns her way.

"When the teacher looks like she's going to call on you, and you just don't know the answer," is what Gwen Bailey, 8, finds particularly stressful.

Nine-year-old Greg Beadle's idea of stress is: "When you hear noises in the night and you can't get to sleep."

The youngsters are learning to identify and cope constructively with these stresses and more — from explaining to your parents why you were late for dinner to having your best friend move away.

The stress management program is offered to all 180 students in the fourth through sixth grades in this small Vermont town on the Canadian border. Psychologist Norman Ledoux, who does individual and family stress counseling through a local clinic, conducts it.

A few parents wonder if the program might actually cause more stress than it relieves, but school officials say no.

"We feel it's a good preventative measure," says school principal David Elwood. "We feel, why wait until the child becomes an adult and has ulcers? I don't think it's good to wait until it happens and then say, 'gee, what could we have done to prevent it?'"

Besides, he argues, elementary school students aren't immune to stress.

"Stress does exist in all kids, although it's sometimes hard to recognize," he said, citing peer pressure, grades and broken homes as common sources of stress. "Parents certainly contribute to stress with their high expectations."

The first section of the program teaches youngsters how to identify stress and how it affects the body. Classes are held in groups of eight or nine, and meet for 40 minutes, 12 times a year.

To relieve tense muscles, the youngsters lie on the floor and tighten every muscle in their bodies, squeezing their faces into a frown and lifting their arms in clenched fists. They then relax every muscle, letting their bodies go limp.

They discuss what makes them tense, then act out ways to deal with such situations.

Example: You just ordered a pepperoni pizza, but the cook mixed up your order and put on peppers, which you hate. Quick — what do you do?

"I'd punch him in the stomach," one child blurts out, slamming one fist into the other with a loud whack.

"Or you could take the pizza home anyway and take the peppers off and put the cheese back on the pizza," a timid voice offers.

The ideal solution might be somewhere in between, says Ledoux.

"We're trying to avoid where a person never speaks up for what's on his mind, or the other extreme, where a person is blowing up all the time," he says.

"Don't be afraid to be assertive — tell him you ordered a pepperoni pizza," Ledoux urges the students, who lean forward in their chairs, clearly enjoying the lesson.

Federal funds pay for the $5,800 program, which school officials are considering offering in junior and senior high schools. A number of school districts around the country have contacted Derby Line asking for information about the program, which is accompanied by stress workshops for parents. Disruptive behavior is reportedly down at Derby Line Elementary School this year, but Ledoux said it is too early to draw conclusions. "We'd like to think we're part of that," he added.

Meanwhile, fourth grader Gwen Bailey says the program has helped her cope with those tense moments in school.

Dating Service For Cats And Dogs A Pet Project

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Know a purebred cat or dog that needs a date? Frank Mashevich will fix them up — and the owner may make some money in the process.

For a small fee, Mashevich's Dog and Cat Dating Service will provide owners of purebred animals a selection of prospective mates — and stud fees — for their pets.

The 25-year-old Russian refugee, who works at a non-profit organization finding jobs for other political refugees, got the idea for the service about six months ago when he and a friend were discussing their problems in finding suitable mates for their dogs.

Mashevich was having trouble finding a mate for his male German shepherd. His friend, who owns a female collie, said he couldn't afford the $100 to $1,000 stud fees commanded by purebred collie breeders.

"I just didn't believe there is no other way," said Mashevich. "But I did some research and found that there wasn't."

So he and a partner, Lenny Gentleman, went into business and the service began operations about two months ago.

Clients can subscribe over a toll-free telephone number. They pay a $39 fee and provide information about their pet's age, breed and color and whether the animal is certified by the American Kennel Club.

In return they get a monthly list of opposite-sex pets of the same breed along with the owners' name and telephone numbers. From then on it is up to the owners to negotiate meetings and stud fees — and to verify their potential mate's pedigree.

"Usually people go to a breeder and they find only one or two, and there's no more choice," Mashevich said. "We give them a good choice."

In addition to offering more potential mates, the service is also bound to result in lower stud fees because it allows for increased competition, Mashevich contends.

"If he (the female pet owner) is not given a reasonable stud fee, he can go to someone else," he explains.

"The stud fee could be nothing. Sometimes the owner of a male dog is willing to do it in return for a puppy" — which can be sold at a profit, Mashevich said.

He stresses that the West Hollywood-based service is not responsible for results, but clients can make as many contacts and efforts as necessary to produce offspring.

So far, the service has about 300 clients represented two dozen dog and cat breeds. Most are from Californians recruited through advertisements in local papers and an appearance on a local pay TV station's talk show.

But he expects to expand once his ads start appearing in such national pet publications as Dog Fancy.

As in human computerized dating services, there is an etiquette to pet dating, dictated mainly by nature.

"Usually female owners contact owners of male dogs," Mashevich said. "They start to worry about it when their dog goes into heat. But we recommend that they think about it in advance, before their dog gets into heat, to find a male who they will mate with."

The service has already attracted a few strange inquiries.

"One man called us to say that his collie had gotten loose in the street and was pregnant," Mashevich recalls. "He wanted to know how he could get an abortion. We referred him to a vet."

The Wonderful World of Medicine

We are studying how the blood circulates. I want to write about it. I am in my first year of high school. I know I'm going to be a doctor so I am interested in this. — Herbert O., Michigan

Dear Herbert:
A brilliant writer once said, "I envy the man who has never read Dickens because there is so much joy in store for him." This is the way I feel about the joy in store for you as a medical student and as a practicing physician afterwards.

A wonderful world awaits you. There are few occupations as exciting as the practice of medicine. There is constant renewal of the pleasures of being able to care for and control the medical destiny of patients. This is an incidental departure from my answer to your question. I just could not resist it.

The complex process of the circulation of blood is particularly remarkable because of its essential simplicity.

The circulation of the blood depends on the heart, the arteries, the veins and the capillaries. The heart is filled with red blood that is saturated with oxygen. With each beat of the heart, blood is pumped into the largest artery in the body, the aorta.

The blood then flows through smaller and smaller arteries, bringing nourishment to every organ, tissue, bone and muscle in the body.

Finally the arteries are reduced in size to tiny capillaries and the blood they contain has all but exhausted its valuable oxygen supply.

Now the return process to the heart begins. Bluish blood that has given up its oxygen enters the veins and is carried back to the heart through larger and larger veins.

When this venous blood finally gets to the heart, it is short circuited into the lungs to pick up the new and vital oxygen it lacks. The blood, now replenished with its life-giving oxygen, is returned to the heart and the cycle of blood circulation starts all over again.

This remarkable mechanism is repeated about 40 million times a year.

From a practical point of view, the circulation of blood is most important. If a blood vessel is broken, closed by a clot or narrowed by arteriosclerotic changes, a wide variety of medical conditions occur. The inadequacy of the flow of blood may be responsible for coronary artery disease of the heart. It may also cause a stroke because not enough blood flows through the brain. In some instances the circulation may be impaired to the hands and to the feet. Coldness of the finger tips and numbness may indicate a deficit in circulation.

Elderly people whose blood vessels are narrowed in the legs may find that walking becomes difficult. Cramps may occur after walking rapidly for a block or two.

There now are the most extraordinary ways to study the blood circulation. Special dyes are injected into the blood stream. These dyes can be followed through the arteries and veins and every part of the body, and can reveal the earliest evidences of trouble. The correction of such conditions can be life saving.

By the time you are in medical school, vast changes will have occurred that we today might consider to be science fiction. In your medical day these will all be a practical reality.

NOTICE TO OWNERS OF PROPERTY IN PITT COUNTY

The listing of property for tax purposes in Pitt County will begin January 3, 1984, and will continue through January 31, 1984.

Any person, firm, corporation or organization owning property in this county as of January 1, 1984, whether real or personal, must list such property within the listing period or be subject to the penalties prescribed by North Carolina Law. Property must be listed in the township in which it is located.

Persons who requested to list by mail should receive their listing forms early in January. These forms must be completed and returned to the office of the Tax Supervisor before the deadline of January 31, 1984.

Bring your social security number and your motor vehicle registration cards with you when you come to list.

Application for the Age and Disability Exemption should be made at the time of listing, but no later than April 15th. Once application is made and approved you will not have to reapply unless circumstances change within the household.

Owners and operators of parks or storage lots renting spaces for three or more trailers or mobile homes are required by law to furnish the Tax Supervisor of the county in which the lot is located, the name of the owner and a description of each trailer or mobile home situated thereon. This list must be submitted by January 15th of each year. Owners and operators failing to comply with the law shall be liable to payment of taxes in addition to a penalty of $250.

Persons having custody of taxable tangible personal property belonging to another firm or individual that is held for storage, sale, rent, or any other business purpose shall furnish the Tax Supervisor a report of such property by January 15th or will be liable for the taxes on the property plus a penalty of $250.

Chile Plans A Colony In Antarctica

By BRUCE HANDLER
Associated Press Writer
SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — This South American country, which has claims to nearly 500,000 square miles of Antarctica, plans to colonize that frozen continent with "ordinary families," including small children, next year.

"We don't know of any other nation that is doing this," said Air Force Col. Hernan Huidobro, the coordinator of the program. "The purpose is to concretely demonstrate Chile's presence in Antarctica and show that our interests there are physical — not just words on some documents."

Six volunteers — two Air Force pilots and four civilians — are to take their wives and children to Chile's Lt. Marsh Antarctic base in February. Unlike Chilean military personnel who have been shifting in and out of Antarctica after short solo stays, the pioneer families are to stay for two years.

The plan is to increase the long-term colonists to 20 families in five years.

"The climate is rough," Huidobro said. "But thanks to the permanent landing strip we inaugurated in 1980, there have been profound changes in the psychological environment in Antarctica."

"Because of constant contact with the mainland, the terrible fear of Antarctic isolation has become a myth — a thing of the past," the officer said. "We don't think the colonist families will have serious problems of adaptation."

Each pioneer family is to get a simple insulated house, near the Lt. Marsh base. A "community house" will offer a library of books and videocassette movies and serve as a spot for social get-togethers.

Under an international treaty that took effect in 1981, all claims by individual nations to slices of Antarctica are suspended for 30 years. Chile and 15 other countries, including the United States and the Soviet Union, have agreed to work together to protect the delicate vegetation and animal life of the southern continent.

The United States has a base at the South Pole, operated by the government's National Science Foundation, and outposts at Palmer Station on the Antarctic Peninsula and McMurdo Station in the Ross Sea area. The average population is about 1,100, including 280 college and university researchers who have study grants from the science foundation.

Chile contends it can express its territorial claims to Antarctica whether other nations recognize them or not. The continental piece shown on Chilean maps as belonging to Chile also is claimed by Argentina and Great Britain, which in 1982 went to war to defend its jurisdiction over the nearby Falkland Islands.

Chilean news media have been filled with stories extolling the virtues of Antarctica. A recent special on the government-owned National TV of Chile network showed typical Chilean "huasos," or cowboys, playing their guitars in front of icebergs and a folk group singing the music of the Andean highlands while standing in front of a sign pointing to the South Pole.

A travel agency is advertising tourist flights to Antarctica during the South American summer.

"I look at this as a personal challenge," said German Camacho, 41, a civilian doctor, who with his wife, Ana Maria, and sons, German, 5, and Francisco, 3, will be among the pioneer Antarctic families.

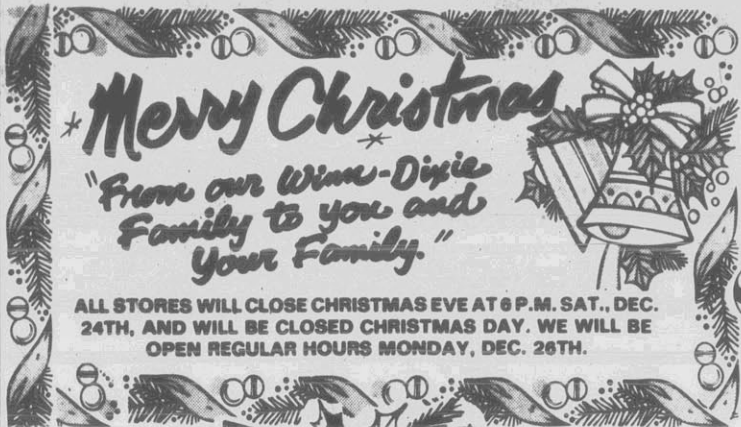

"The patriotic element is secondary," he said in an interview in his comfortable Santiago home. "What's more important is that this is something new — an adventure — a way for us to grow together as a family."

The Air Force has been running training sessions in the mountains east of Santiago for the Antarctica volunteers, teaching them emergency survival techniques in snow and ice.

"We realize what we're in for," said Mrs. Camacho, a volunteer nurse. "We know about the below-freezing temperatures, the 80 mile-an-hour winds and the long winter nights."

Pittsburgh Excavations Boost Urban Archaeology

By KATY BUCHANAN
PITTSBURGH (UPI) — It may have been Mary Burgess' doll.

The broken porcelain head, fine white and with features delicately painted, was among approximately 35,000 artifacts recovered during two unusual archaeological excavations in downtown Pittsburgh — at the site of PPG Industries' new headquarters building and an extension of the city subway system.

From studies of old maps and public records, archaeologists know the Burgess family owned property through most of the 19th century above where the city's new subway lines were laid, near the juncture of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers.

"The artifact is not the most important thing," said Ron Carlisle, one of the archaeologists who led the excavation teams. "But looking at it as a key to a person, then looking at that person as part of a culture, it is."

The uncovering of parts of old cities under new ones is one of archaeology's oldest methods. But in urban America, there is a growing trend toward recognizing value in remnants of the nation's past, and preserving them.

"Previously, the tendency was to dismiss (the potential archaeological value of) urban sites. The thinking was that they had been so disturbed over the years, there would be nothing of value left. And that's not the case," said Lynne Lewis, an archaeologist with the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

Some major cities have archaeologists on staff, she said, to advise on projects that might uncover relics of historical significance.

"One thing that I think people don't recognize is that there are great portions of our past lifestyles ... that we have lost knowledge of just through rapid technological advancement. And it is important to recognize our past," she said.

Most artifacts retrieved from the two Pittsburgh sites came from 34 old brick wells, sunk below the city before the existence of a public water system, into a supply of clean water often called Pittsburgh's fourth river.

The river, its bed carved out by a receding Ice Age glacier, is supplied by water filtered through the sand and sediment of the Allegheny River.

Also uncovered in what was in previous centuries both the city's commercial and residential district were several old building foundations.

Because the wells were sunk deep into the "fourth river," they remained wet over the long years, resulting in remarkable preservation of items tossed into them — particularly material such as bits of fabric and leather, seeds and animal bones that normally would not have survived.

Although Pittsburgh does not have a city archaeologist, discovery of remnants of a previous Pittsburgh did not catch local planners' unawares.

"A year before construction began, we recognized the possibility of finding some remnants ... but we didn't know exactly what they were going to be," said Kathryn Wirth, an archaeologist with Parsons Brinckerhoff-Gibbs & Hill, the transit authority's general engineers.

Because the project was funded with federal money, an environmental impact statement was compiled.

Federal regulations required a written statement that either nothing of historical value would be recovered from the site, or that if anything was found, it would be recovered, said Ms. Wirth.

Parsons contracted with the University of Pittsburgh to be archaeological consultant for the subway project. When anything was found, archaeologists and field teams on call 24 hours a day were summoned to the site. Work was halted and the field teams were given four hours to retrieve the artifacts.

"When we hit the wells, it was just a matter of calling the university and triggering what had been written in the contract," Ms. Wirth said.

When the first well and its contents were uncovered, scavengers began appearing at the site at night, scouring it for old bottles that fetch high prices from collectors.

Dr. James B. Richardson, chief curator for the museum's Section of Man, approached PPG and suggested the museum be allowed to excavate the site.

The two sides reached agreement whereby the archaeologists would excavate, and have the services of construction workers and equipment at their disposal. The PPG Foundation also put up $10,000 to fund the project.

"The construction people were able to isolate the wells for us," said Verna Cowin, a field archaeologist for the museum who directed excavations at the site. "We were able to work many of them as good archaeological units."

Again, the agreement called for construction to be halted for a brief period while museum staffers removed a well's contents.

If time did not permit, said Ms. Cowin, a bulldozer operator lifted the contents out in one shovelful, setting it down where scientists could sift through it undisturbed.

The archaeologists theorize that the private brick wells, some up to 40 feet deep, became huge garbage cans in the 19th century, when the growing city finally installed a public water system and the wells no longer were needed.

"The wells are like ... time capsules. When you had something you wanted to get rid of, you just threw it down the water well," said Ms. Cowin.

"The kind of city we're talking about when these wells were in operation was an entirely different kind of thing," said Carlisle, explaining that rapid industrialization, coupled with a burgeoning population, led to a fouling of air and water — and naturally, to an increase in garbage.

"We believe that these wells became garbage receptacles, because that deals with another problem of 19th-century life: 'What do you do with the garbage?'" he said.

Carlisle and Ms. Cowin said many of the artifacts retrieved were the disposable items of the day: medicine bottles embossed with names such as "Wonder of the World" and "Dr. Hooflander's German Bitters," soda and ale bottles (some still full), chamber pots and spittoons, broken toys and pottery, leftover food.

One well uncovered at the PPG site contained 12 perfectly preserved crocks. Because of their slightly irregular shape, Ms. Cowin theorized they may have been tossed down the well by a frustrated potter who thought they would not sell.

It has been more than a year since the excavations ended in August 1982. Ms.

Cowin estimates it will be another two years before the museum will have all its data assembled into a report.

But the artifacts have provided a special kind of affirmation to what is already known about the area.

The elegant style of the chamber pots found in some wells confirms the presence of a street inhabited by wealthy politicians, lawyers and doctors in the 19th century, said Ms. Cowin.

The artifacts "complement the historical record in a way you never hear about," said Carlisle. "The concept of history in the 19th century was very different. It was very much a great men and great events perspective."

"I'm sure that whoever filled those wells never in their wildest imagination thought that people, a little more than 100 years later, would be very methodically going through them in an attempt to determine what life in Pittsburgh was like.

"It's not a public face (presented by the artifacts). It's about as basic as you can get."

Collectibles In Castoffs

NEW YORK (UPI) — They were thrown into the attic or basement en route to a one-way trip to the junkyard — the radios, appliances and other household items of bygone days.

But these castoffs now are collectibles that still can provide yeoman service, even by today's standards and often at yesterday's prices.

"They don't make 'em like they used to" is a frequent lament of many who yearn for the "good old days" while criticizing the quality of modern domestic items. But there's a practical and fun solution: buy and use the original.

Sources ranging from thrift shops to garage sales to church bazaars to the full-fledged antique shows provide many interesting bargains. For example, a brand-new 1925 Hotpoint iron recently was purchased at a thrift shop in upstate New York. The iron, still in its original box, with wrapping and instructions intact, looks and works perfectly ... for only $3. It is used for pressing shirts, but looks good just sitting on a shelf.

A trip to a Salvation Army store produced a well-preserved General Electric clock radio from the late 1940s — one of the first of its kind. The tube radio — AM only since FM's popularity was still a decade away — sounds fine; the clock keeps accurate time and features unusual Roman numerals. A virtual novelty, and only $5.

A futuristic 1948 Crosley radio was $7 at a New York street fair, and a 1950 Westinghouse model cost $10 at a dealers' emporium in Pennsylvania. Both look and work well.

If air-conditioning isn't a requirement, a brass-bladed fan might provide a cool solution as well as a decorating novelty. A perfect 14-inch Century oscillating fan from pre-World War I was purchased for $55 at a Long Island shopping mall fair; only slightly more than a modern product but far more of a conversation piece. A 1925 Polar Cub miniature fan in nice condition was $15 and provides a kitchen breeze to clear out cooking odors.

Kitchen items are abundant at thrift shops, particularly chrome toasters with decorative side panels. A Hotpoint toaster from the 1920s — the original model where the slice of bread was placed inside a hinged panel and removed manually — is a durable item that sells in the $25-$35 range. The "newer" pop-up models cost less and are more practical: a Toastmaster from the early '50s was $2 at a rummage sale and a perfect '40s Proctor (before the company became Proctor-Silex) with grains of wheat etched on its sides was just $3.

An early 1950s Kenmore mixer (before Sears, Roebuck purchased the company) was obtained for $6 and the original Waring blender from the same vintage was only 75 cents — both are in perfect working and cosmetic condition and are frequently used. A new 1950s Kitchen-Aid coffee mill was located in its original carton at a rummage sale — more pricey at $14 but still a bargain.

Large appliances also dot the marketplace. A 1930 General Electric refrigerator – one of the first top-mounted electric motor models – needed restoration but made for an interesting project. Three days of work – stripping, sanding, spray painting and new rubber molding – and a total cost of $275 produced a beautiful antique white vintage appliance that works perfectly for storing beer, wine and soda. A new refrigerator would have been easier, but more money and nowhere as much fun.

1930s typewriters are readily available, and at good prices. A Remington Noiseless 6 desk model in excellent condition was just $40 at a tag sale and a Remington 5 portable is a durable example that cost $8. Both are cast iron and therefore heavy, but the desk model is a craftsman's work of art and the portable is constructed to take a pounding.

Some items can be converted to uses other than the manufacturer originally intended.

An 1940s RCA Victor Victrola was in relatively poor electronic condition, but its solid blonde mahogany cabinet needed only a cleaning and polish to bring out its original beauty. The unit has two record cabinets that boast enough space for glasses, liquor bottles, etc., and the burnished top is useful for mail, baskets, plants and many other items. A very useful addition... and only $40.

Wind-up clocks frequently are seen. A nice Lux Medalist alarm clock was $10 and the same Long Island flea market produced a venerable Westclox Big Ben from the '20s for $10. A circa 1915 New Haven walnut chime clock is an accurate timepiece that was easy on the pocketbook at $45.

Telephones are becoming more popular, especially the candlesticks from the '20s. A like-new brass Kellogg model was purchased for $100, not that much more than the modern reproductions that have flooded the market. It has been converted to a modular plug and works well with its original transmitter and receiver, rivaling the GE refrigerator for conversation piece status. The original 1930s cradle phones are seen in the $40-80 range; unlike the candlesticks, these have built-in ringers and may be more practical for most households.

There are numerous sources for such items. Thrift shops and "second-hand stores" run by charitable or private interests are listed in local phone books; many are a good source for small appliances. Newspapers can provide helpful hints to garage and tag sales, rummage sales and church bazaars; just exploring these events is an experience.

Finally, there are a number of antique and specialty shops that feature such vintage items. These stores generally have models in excellent working and cosmetic condition ... but at a premium. For example, the aforementioned Crosley radio, bought for $7, was selling for $80 in one New York store. Still, these stores may offer a collector the opportunity to purchase one specific item that may be hard to locate elsewhere.

Buying any vintage household appliance is a gamble, but even a novice to the antique-collectible world can succeed. A few guidelines should be kept in mind:

—Electrical cords should be in good condition. A frayed cord may cause sparks and shorts, and should be replaced immediately. Curiously, old-fashioned lampcord is still available and many electricians will install it at a reasonable cost. For example, the cost of replacing a cord on an vintage Sunbeam iron came to $8.

Rust must be dealt with immediately, as severe rusting will limit the useful life of an older appliance. There are a number of excellent rust removers available and rust-inhibiting aerosol paint will help prevent this problem. Follow the label directions for best results.

—Motors. Generally, working motors in fans, refrigerators and the like will remain that way if properly maintained, which involves periodic oiling and dust removal. Refrigerator compressors seem to last many years with little loss of cooling efficiency, and there are some service shops that will work on the relatively simple designs in most models. Small appliance motors — in blenders, mixers, coffee mills — should not be considered if they spark or smoke.

—Radio tubes. Vintage RCA tubes are fairly plentiful and will fit most radios. There are repair shops and parts outlets that will test and replace faulty tubes. The aforementioned GE radio needed two tubes. Cost: $4.

— Wiring. A non-working toaster, for example, should only be considered if the purchaser is handy with a soldering iron and has testing knowledge. Otherwise, the defective item can be forgotten, as there are quite a few toasters available in a wide range of prices.

—Cleaning. Wood cabinets should be cleaned with wood soap and then polished to prevent drying and cracking. There are preparations available to hide wood scratches. Bakelite and plastic cabinets only need mild soap and warm water; strong detergents can discolor them. Metal exteriors will benefit from an all-purpose liquid or paste polish; glass can be cleaned with any commercially available window spray. Always use a soft, clean cloth.

Popular And 'Scientific'

By JIM SLATER
INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The science of aerodynamics, the thrill of competition and the transportation needs of the future have combined to make human powered vehicles a popular sport as well as a training ground for college students.

"We've undergone a transition from pure science to applied science and then a sporting event," Chuck Champlin, president of the International Human Powered Vehicle Association, said recently during the ninth IHPVA Speed Championships.

"It's becoming more of a sporting event," Champlin said. "It began when people realized aerodynamics can increase the speed of a bicycle. People realized that designs needed to become longer and straighter" to achieve maximum speeds.

The pedal-propelled vehicles come in all shapes and sizes, Champlin said, because entrants range from backyard bicycle builders to research-minded institutions studying aerodynamics, such as M.I.T. and Northeastern.

A group from the University of Cincinnati recently displayed the "Pegasus" at Indianapolis. The vehicle competed in road race events, but school officials said it was mainly an educational project.

The idea behind it was to build a feasible, inexpensive and sturdy means of self-transportation, compared to the less-stable, but faster, competition vehicles.

The Pegasus seats four — two facing forward and two facing the rear — and has achieved speeds of about 50 mph.

The standard shape for a HPV conforms to that of the "Vector," a fiberglass bullet-shaped shell on a steel-chassis reclining bicycle. Champlin called the Vector "the most professional effort that has gone into it. Nobody's come along to equal it yet."

But the independent racer has as great a chance to discover a breakthrough as the computer-supported teams, Champlin said. He cited Tim Gartside of London, who has the world two-wheel record at 51.29 mph as an example of success and non-conformity.

Gartside's "Bluebell" is a reclining bicycle with a nose low to the ground, and an oval-shaped body that rises high in the rear.

"There are various levels of sophistication in customized aerodynamics," Champlin said. "A lot of the guys are building them on their own, and a lot of the approaches are different."

He said about one-third of the competitors are from research and design or student groups and usually utilize a computer.

Cost is a factor, but Champlin said some people build vehicles from discarded parts of an old bicycle.

"We have a guy in San Diego who is putting together a bike for less than $500 and he takes frames he finds in the trash sometimes," Champlin said. But he added that a Vector sells for about $10,000 and some universities have used as much as $70,000 worth of resources on a vehicle.

High speeds require design quality, but it is the human powered aspect that achieves records, Champlin said.

"When it comes down to a world speed record, it takes a monster to make them go those speeds," he said. "It takes a tremendous amount of physical strength and the riders have to be in supreme shape."

The records are 58.89 mph for a one-person vehicle and 62.93 mph for a two-person vehicle. But speed records are fragile marks waiting for another scientific discovery, Champlin said.

"We're still waiting for a good, solid hand-and-foot-powered machine," he said. "We're waiting for a design breakthrough. A good design for a hand-and-foot-powered machine has yet to come along because of steering problems."

EPA Asks For Police Powers

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — An investigator for the Environmental Protection Agency watched helplessly as a truck rolled down Interstate 5 between Seattle and Portland leaking toxic PCB liquids onto the roadway.

The investigator had no legal authority to stop the truck, so it spilled the toxic substance along a 50-mile path until a sheriff's deputy could be found to pull the truck over.

The incident was cited in congressional testimony Monday as an example of why the agency's year-old, 23-member criminal investigation force should be given full police powers.

As it stands, EPA Assistant Administrator Courtney M. Price testified, agency investigators are unable to carry weapons, execute search warrants, make arrests, operate undercover — or even stop illegal dumping when they see it.

All they can do is call for help.

In addition, witnesses told the House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee, some states refuse EPA investigators access to police files, making it impossible for them to check license plates of suspicious trucks or mug shots and criminal records of suspected polluters.

Many states deny agency investigators access to police radio bands. And if an EPA investigator is killed in the line of duty, the survivors would be denied the federal death benefit paid to the survivors of FBI or Secret Service officers.

EPA has been asking since April that its investigators be sworn in as special deputy U.S. marshals, but the Justice Department has refused.

Assistant Attorney General F. Henry Habicht II told the subcommittee that while there "certainly is a lot of merit in EPA's request," the department fears requests such as EPA's could "result in a government of numerous relatively independent and specialized small police forces."

Habicht said the department hopes to have guidelines for granting such authority ready by the end of February. He promised the EPA request would "receive expedited and very serious and careful consideration under the forthcoming standards."

But the chairman of the subcommittee, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., said he could not understand why other federal enforcement officials — including the Agriculture Department's poultry inspectors — are given police powers while the EPA is not.

"The Justice Department's lack of cooperation and failure to act on the EPA administrator's request ... continues to raise serious questions about the president's commitment in this important area," he said.

President Reagan said on May 18 that EPA enforcement efforts were one of the administration's top concerns.

The EPA's call for full enforcement authority was backed Monday by state authorities who said hazardous waste investigation is too dangerous without police authority.

"I would not under any circumstances direct investigators of mine to do investigations like these without being armed," said Steven Madonna, New Jersey's deputy attorney general in charge of toxic waste enforcement.

"I believe that the waste industry is probably one of the most violent industries in the nation today," Madonna added. "There have been murders, threats, arson. Organized crime plays a major role. ... Weapons are commonplace, if not the rule; intimidation and violence are fairly commonplace."

Publishing An English-Language Daily In Beirut

By EILEEN ALT POWELL
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The staff, library and most of the equipment were assembled from scratch. The telephones don't work very well, and periodic closings of the Beirut airport delay some feature and photo material.

But there is no lack of news for the English-language Daily Star, which has returned to newsstands in Beirut after an eight-year absence.

"Putting out a new newspaper is a hassle under the best of circumstances," says Nizar Jwaideh, the editor in chief. "Here, it's a leap of faith."

The Daily Star, the capital's only English-language paper, is "new" in that Jwaideh, a former diplomatic editor for U.S. News and World Report in Washington, and publisher Jamil K. Mrowa had to rebuild the paper.

The debut edition Dec. 6 made it clear that the paper plans to take up where it left off on Dec. 6, 1975, when the nation's 1975-76 civil war forced it to shut down.

"Today we begin again," said the headline on the front-page editorial marking the paper's return. It bore the number 8620, resuming the numbering sequence interrupted eight years before.

"We believe Lebanon will make it," Mrowa said in his opening message to readers, but the paper's headlines continued to reflect the seemingly endless strife of the nation.

The paper's final 1975 edition reported on kidnappings and on Moslem demands for more say in the Christian-dominated government. The first editions last week had stories on car bombs, artillery duels and efforts toward Christian-Moslem reconciliation.

Jwaideh said plans to resume publication began taking shape when "Beirut began to return to life" after the 1982 Israeli invasion.

Mrowa, 33, and his family began securing the bank financing needed to get the paper going again. Mrowa's father, Kamel, had founded the Daily Star in 1952 as a sister publication to his Arabic paper, Al-Hayat. He was assassinated in his newspaper office in 1966 by Pan-Arab leftists.

Hopes for a start-up in September 1983 faded when Druse fighters sided with Shiite Moslem militias in an all-out war with the Lebanese army and Christian militias.

On the early September day Jwaideh's first two American-hired reporters arrived — Tod Robberson, a former Washington Post copy editor, and Michael Hall, an Oakland Tribune editor — ships of the U.S. Navy's 6th fleet began firing over Beirut at the mountain strongholds of the Druse.

"I tried to tell them, 'It's OK, the fleet is celebrating your arrival,'" said Jwaideh. "But I could tell they were having some trouble with it. It's one thing to know there's a war on and another to hear it."

Hall, 28, said he came for the opportunity "to report real news." And, he says, "It's a lot more fun than city councils and zoning boards and the cornucopia of typical city news coverage."

At his six-sided desk in a white-washed office in the heart of West Beirut, the 51-year-old Jwaideh chronicled the paper's logistical problems.

The Daily Star couldn't get its news agency machines hooked up because the only clerk in the government-run telecommunications company designated to accept deposits had taken refuge in a distant mountain village.

Telephones, key reporting tools, often don't yield dial tones for several minutes, if at all.

Intermittent closings of the Beirut airport because of shelling or threats of shelling kept the paper from receiving mailed feature and photo material and forced the editors to delay plans for a Middle Eastern edition.

Most of the nation's best-trained technicians have fled to the oil-rich Gulf states for better pay and less danger.

And worst of all, the pool of journalists skilled in English turned out to be too small to build into an adequate staff for putting out six papers a week. Jwaideh solved the problem with an emergency trip to England to recruit editors and writers.

The paper, which is selling for the equivalent of 40 cents, joins a host of dailies in Beirut: the independent An-Nahar and seven other Arabic-language papers as well as L'Orient-Le Jour and Le Reveil, both in French.

many educated Lebanese out of their homeland and discouraging short- and long-term visits by English-speaking businessmen, students and tourists.

Advertising, too, is scarce. "I don't really expect things to come along until there is a permanent ceasefire here," Jwaideh said.

Past Included 3 Governors

By Dr. H.G. Jones
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Governors must have had a particular fascination for Frances Culpeper.

After all, she married three of them.

Or, maybe she simply like to move around, for one of her husbands was governor of Virginia, another of Albemarle (later Carolina) and the third of Carolina (both North and South).

Frances was born about 1634 at Jamestown, Va. In her 18th year she married Samuel Stephens of Bolthroe Plantation on the Warwick River.

Stephens rose to prominence in Virginia, and in 1662 he was appointed by Gov. William Berkeley to the post of commander of the "southern plantations." Five years later he was commissioned governor of the County of Albemarle "and the Isles and Islets within Tenn Leagues thereof."

Thus for several years Frances probably lived with her husband in the wild and sparsely settled area on the north shore of the Albemarle Sound.

If so, she probably yearned for even the simple amenities of Jamestown, still only a half-century old and little more than an armed camp. There wasn't a public building or village in the Albemarle, and 60 acres of land was promised to English settlers who dared venture into the new territory.

Frances didn't have to stay there long, though, for in 1670

Gov. Stephens died. Strangely, Sir William Berkeley, governor of Virginia and one of the lords proprietors of Carolina, qualified as administrator of the deceased governor's estate.

Berkeley took a fancy to both Stephen's estate and his widow. Within a few months, Frances became Lady Frances Berkeley.

Among the property that Berkeley gained with his new wife was Roanoke Island.

Frances reigned as Virginia's first lady until, following Bacon's Rebellion, Berkeley was removed from office. He died in 1677 after returning to England.

Berkeley, incidentally, had an interesting attitude toward education. He wrote: "I thank God there are no free schools nor printing...for learning brought disobedience and heresy and sects into the world, and printing has divulged them, and libels against the best governments. God keep us from both."

Lady Berkeley, of course, inherited her husband's proprietary share of the vast Carolina territory. She sold it to four of the other proprietors in 1683 for 300 pounds sterling.

Frances next married Philip Ludwell, a native of England, but a prominent Virginia official.

In 1689, Ludwell was appointed governor of that part of Carolina lying north and east of Cape Fear. A couple of years later he was commissioned governor of all Carolina and took up residence in Charleston, leaving a deputy in the Albemarle.

Researchers Can See Arms Race In Bio-Warfare

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Military research in genetic engineering could lead to an escalating U.S.-Soviet biological warfare arms race with potentially catastrophic consequences, according to two academic specialists.

The university researchers, Susan Wright and Robert L. Sinsheimer, warn that the present situation with advanced gene-splicing experimentation may be likened to the emerging field of nuclear weapons technology in the late 1940s.

"Tentative efforts were put forth at that time to seek to prevent a nuclear arms race," they wrote in the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists. "Those efforts failed, and we live in the deepening shadow of that failure."

But a senior U.S. military scientist has sharply criticized Ms. Wright and Sinsheimer for offering alarmist predictions based on "political prejudices" rather than facts.

Dr. William Beisel, deputy director of the Army's Medical Research Institute for Infectious Diseases at Fort Detrick, Md., said genetic engineering research being conducted there and at other military laboratories was "totally open," unclassified and defensive-oriented.

Ms. Wright and Sinsheimer argue that "use of the accumulated knowledge of biology for the construction of deadly pestilence is an ultimate perversion. Yet, unless we renounce the logic of protection and counter-protection, as exemplified in nuclear weaponry, it is a most likely development."

Beisel said that while the factual information presented by Ms. Wright and Sinsheimer was basically accurate, "their conclusions and interpretations are entirely their own and are not based on the facts, but on their own political prejudices."

"We're in the business of trying to protect our troops against all of the naturally occurring micro-organisms and their toxins ... and also against any of those organisms that could be used in a biological warfare attack," he said in an interview.

Ms. Wright, a historian of science at the University of Michigan, is completing a study of government policies toward recombinant DNA research in this country and Britain. Sinsheimer is a biophysicist and chancellor of the University of California at Santa Cruz.

In their article, the two academic specialists quoted a 1981 Pentagon report warning that "recombinant DNA technology could make it possible for a potential enemy to implant virulence factors or toxin-producing genetic information into common, easily transmitted bacteria such as E. coli."

Ms. Wright and Sinsheimer said that in order to develop defenses against such a threat, Defense Department planners "apparently contemplate using recombinant DNA techniques to change or accentuate the properties of disease-causing organisms."

They listed 14 research projects using recombinant DNA technology — four at military laboratories and the other 10 being done elsewhere under government contract — initiated by the Pentagon since 1980.

Several of these studies are aimed at producing vaccines against diseases such as anthrax; Q fever, an acute bacterial infection, and Rift Valley fever, a virulent North African disease that could be encountered by U.S. troops operating in the Mideast or Persian Gulf.

Along with the Fort Detrick facility, other military laboratories involved in the program include Walter Reed Army Institute of Research, in Washington, and the Naval Medical Research Institute, Bethesda, Md.

Outside institutions listed as conducting recombinant DNA work under Pentagon contract included the University of California, San Diego and San Francisco campuses; University of Arizona; University of Massachusetts; Illinois Institute of Technology, Chicago; Case Western Reserve University, Cleveland; University of Kansas; the Salk Institute, San Diego, and the Weizman Institute in Israel.

The United States officially renounced biological warfare in 1969, when then-President Richard M. Nixon ordered the destruction of existing stocks of germ weapons.

Under the 1972 Biological Weapons Convention, signatory nations pledged never to produce "microbial or other biological agents, or toxins ... of types or in quantities that have no justification for prophylactic, protective or other peaceful purposes."

Ms. Wright and Sinsheimer argued that the treaty's wording contains several potential loopholes — and that the enhanced capabilities offered by new genetic-engineering technology "may well provide the incentive to make use of these loopholes."

"In practice, the distinction between 'peaceful' research and 'biological weapons' research could quietly disappear; either could result in the construction of dangerous organisms or products," they said.

Martin M. Kaplan, a microbiologist, wrote in a brief accompanying article that he disagreed with Ms. Wright and Sinsheimer over the potential military importance of genetic engineering.

Military strategists have long been concerned about the unpredictability of biological agents if they are used on the battlefield, Kaplan said, adding that "recombinant DNA technology would not change the military utility of such weapons."

Updated figures provided by Beisel indicated there has been substantial growth of the Pentagon's genetic-engineering research effort since mid-1982.

Beisel said the total number of Defense Department-funded recombinant DNA projects has increased to 35 — eight in-house studies at military labs and 27 contract projects. He added that several of the outside projects mainly involved providing specialized scientific equipment to university laboratories.

Soviet Union's capabilities and intentions regarding biological warfare, Beisel said, is "very hard to generate."

However, he asserted that the use of Soviet-supplied mycotoxin weapons — so-called "yellow rain" — to attack civilian villagers and insurgents in Southeast Asia and Afghanistan "certainly shows a certain amount of intent to frighten us."

Seek To Bar Mis-Use Of Computers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina college and university officials are comparing their efforts to prevent computer misuse to trying to get drivers to slow down — the law exists but some don't comply.

"In some ways, it's kind of like the 55 miles-per-hour speed limit," said Carl Malstrom, director of North Carolina State University's Computing Center. "If people don't regard the law very highly, it doesn't mean anything, so you try to catch the speeders."

"We take all reasonable effort to protect our files ... but a lot of times users don't treat passwords with the right amount of respect," he added.

The possibility that students would use computers to gain access to confidential files prompted Davidson College to revise its honor code to include computer misuse.

John Casey, director of Davidson's Computer Services Center, said his may be the nation's first college to have done so. No other North Carolina college or university requires students to sign a statement of authenticity on papers and tests as Davidson does, he added.

Casey said officials wanted to impress upon the school's 1,400 students that "the kinds of cheating that can arise from computer use are the same kinds of things that people do with papers and books."

Violators are subject to suspension or expulsion.

"This is a strong statement because (computer misuse) is a major infringement," Casey said.

At N.C. State, students suspected of misusing computers have been prosecuted by both the student government and the state, Malstrom said.

However, he said it is impossible to make computer files completely impervious to the tinkering of a mischievous "hacker."

"Really our only protection in the main is personal responsibility," he said, adding that the university tries to get statements on what computer crime is "in the hands of every student."

"We catch the ones who (flagrantly violate the computer abuse rules), but it's just not (feasible) to get the students who are on the fringes," he said. There are at least 6,000 authorized accounts on the university's computer system, he said.

Most computer misuse is "malicious mischief" in which people authorized to use the machines use them for unauthorized purposes, Malstrom said. Once, a student put obscene messages into another person's files.

"It's like having a 'photocopying' machine. It's hard to keep people from using it for an outside interest."

Urge Giving Of Food Reserves

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two congressmen are urging the Reagan administration to immediately use food reserves to save millions of starving Africans, and pay for the emergency program later with a supplemental appropriation.

At a news conference, Rep. Thomas Daschle, D-S.D., said that in addition to food, the Africans need medicine, seeds and transportation equipment. Daschle, a member of the House Agriculture Committee, said the Reagan administration has shown a "willingness to consider" the emergency request and a $150 million supplemental money bill to pay for the food aid.

Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., said "Africa is facing a drought more serious than that of 10 years ago, which threatened 6 million people with starvation and killed millions of heads of cattle."

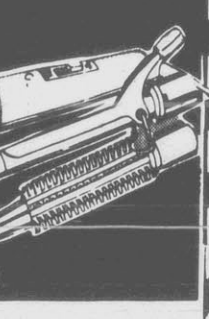

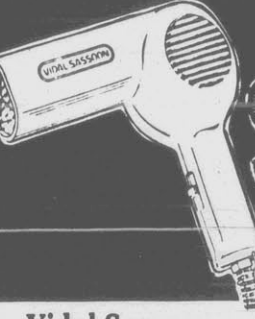

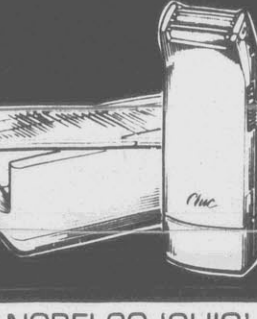

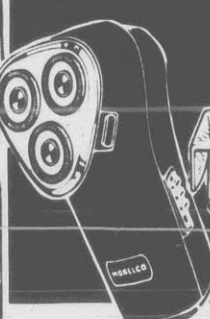

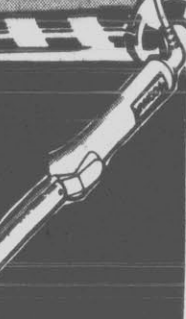

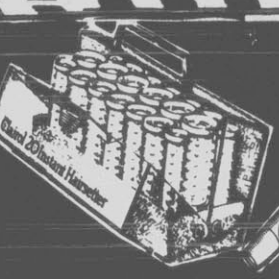

Representatives of several groups also trying to alleviate the problem said the famine threatens 100 million people in 22 countries. Food supplies will be critically low by March, they said.
