Another Near-Blizzard Hits Much Of U.S.

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

A snowstorm that marooned travelers with huge drifts in the Rockies swept into the Midwest and deep into Texas at near blizzard-ferocity today and highways were transformed onto ribbons of ice in many cities from Colorado to New Jersey.

A tornado skipping through south Alabama wrecked several homes, and almost 6 inches of rain at New Orleans caused some flooding as most of the nation was affected by the violent weather that has claimed at least 346 lives since Dec. 17.

"You name it, it's happening this morning," said Bill Sammler of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

The weather service reported near-blizzard conditions near Pampa, Texas, where 5 inches of snow had accumulated. Snow fell across the Lone Star state from the Panhandle as far south as the Midland-Odessa area. Temperatures were expected to sink into the teens in Houston and Brownsville tonight for the second time in a week.

Ahead of the fast-moving system, sheets of freezing drizzle coated highways and power lines across from Texas and Arkansas to New York, while heavy snow fell across much of Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and southern Wisconsin.

Rush hour was chaotic in Midwestern cities such as Columbus, Ohio, and Cincinnati, where icy streets caused so many accidents police were answering only emergency calls.

About 3 to 5 inches of snow was common across much of Missouri and Illinois.

In Utah, where up to 10 inches of snow fell during the night, 16 motorists stranded late Tuesday by mountain snow that drifted across Utah 92 near Alpine were rescued today by a snowcat — a van on treads — after a snowmobile couldn't carry them over the rough terrain, the Utah County sheriff's department said.

Power lines snapped in northern Georgia under the weight of the ice early today, cutting power to an estimated 15,000 Georgia Power Co. customers around Atlanta, 1,000 in Rome, and 500 in Athens.

Citrus growers in southern Florida got a bit of a break, as the temperature warmed into the 70s by 3 a.m. today. That was about 30 degrees higher than at the same hour Tuesday — and 50 degrees higher than the killing cold that hit early Sunday and Monday.

Officials of Florida's $2.5 billion-a-year citrus industry said it was too early to tell how the two-day freeze will affect the price of orange juice, but Francis Horne, manager of a farmers' market in Immokalee in southern Florida, said winter prices of tomatoes, cucumbers and bell peppers "are going to skyrocket."

There was a threat of flash floods today in Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana as warm Gulf air erupted in heavy thunderstorms.

A twister touched down near Andalusia, Ala., about 5 a.m., then skipped to River Falls and Gantt. The tornado destroyed one house, damaged another, and ripped the roofs off several, but no injuries were reported.

Another storm raced out of the Colorado mountains, where it dropped about 8 inches of snow, then left 6 inches in Kansas by late Tuesday before moving into Missouri.

City's Police Department Announces 8 Promotions

By STUART SAVAGE

Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes today announced the promotion of eight officers and a planned change in the department's uniformed division shift structure.

Holmes said Nelson Staton, the department's juvenile officer, and Sgts. R. M. Nichols and John E. Ennis have been promoted to the rank of lieutenant, while Detective George E. Albertine, Cpl. C.J. Hardy and patrol officer D.D. Heinz have been promoted to the rank of sergeant. Patrol officers Angelo S. Fordham and Joe Simonovich, Holmes said, have been promoted to the rank of corporal.

Nichols and Ennis are both Pitt County natives, while Staton is from Raleigh.

Nichols graduated from Farmville High School in 1966, attended East Carolina University for a year, then attended Pitt Community College where he received a degree in police science in 1969. He joined the police department's uniformed division in 1969, was transferred to the detective division in 1974, and was promoted to sergeant in 1976. He returned to the uniformed division in August 1982 and has been an assistant shift supervisor.

Nichols was recognized as officer of the year by the Optimist Club in 1983.

Ennis graduated from Winterville High School and PCC, where he received a degree in police science. He joined the department in 1972, and was promoted to corporal in September 1980. Honored as the department's outstanding officer in 1978, Ennis was promoted to sergeant in February 1982, and later was assigned to the detective division.

Staton graduated from Bethel Union High School, served three years in the U.S. Marine Corps, including two tours in Vietnam and then, while a police officer with the Plymouth Police Department from 1967 to 1971, obtained a degree in police science from PCC.

Propane Gas Explosion Levels A Buffalo Block

By JOHN F. BONFATTI
Associated Press Writer

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Firefighters combed the smoldering ruins of a residential neighborhood today for more victims of a propane gas explosion and fire that killed at least six people, injured 43 and leveled a city block, officials said.

Five firemen and a resident were known dead in the blast at a warehouse Tuesday, and another fireman was missing, officials said.

Of 43 people taken to three hospitals with injuries ranging from severe burns to broken bones and cuts, five were listed in critical condition.

The blast hit around 8:30 p.m., just minutes after three fire trucks arrived in the neighborhood east of downtown to check a report of a propane leak around a bakery supply building and an adjacent four-story brick warehouse, Battalion Fire Chief Michael Angrisano said.

About 15 firefighters were searching for the leak in and around the warehouse when the building exploded with two jarring blasts felt up to 15 miles away. The warehouse, bakery and several houses in the same block were demolished, and windows were broken half a mile away.

"I thought that a nuclear war had hit. I thought the Russians pulled one of them buttons," said Clinton Holloman, 56, a resident who heard the first fire trucks arriving and was leaving his house to see what was happening when the explosion knocked him down.

"If I had gotten there, I probably would have been one of those killed," he said, adding that only his hair was singed.

The debris crushed one fire truck and heavily damaged two others. Thirty-eight homes were damaged, according to James F. Casey of the American Red Cross. A knee-high layer of rubble covered the street in front of the warehouse.

It was not immediately known what ignited the blast. It was also not known what the warehouse contained.

Pentagon Probe Of Beirut Toll Offers 'Ammunition'

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon investigation detailing flaws in security and the U.S. military chain of command that opened the way to the terrorist bombing of the Marines in Beirut is providing new ammunition for critics of the U.S. mission in Lebanon.

The board of inquiry appointed after the Oct. 23 attack which killed 241 servicemen also found that the 1,600 Marines in Beirut face an "increasingly hostile environment" that makes their peacekeeping mission ever more difficult, according to a White House official who declined to be named.

Most of the 166-page report was tentatively scheduled to be released today, except for an estimated 15 to 30 pages of classified material, according to Pentagon officials.

President Reagan, who read the report over the weekend, accepted full responsibility Tuesday for the tragedy that occurred when a terrorist drove a truck loaded with explosives into a building full of sleeping Marines.

Reagan, commander in chief of the armed forces, told a brief news conference that "if there is to be blame, it properly rests here in this office and with this president" and said no lower-level commanders would be punished because they "have already suffered quite enough."

Release of the Pentagon report comes a week after similar criticism was leveled by a House Armed Services subcommittee that examined the worst loss of U.S. military lives since the Vietnam War.

After the bombing, critics said the Marines should be pulled out of Lebanon, suggesting they were easy targets in a nation long torn by fighting between religious groups.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., a contender for the Democratic presidential nomination, renewed that criticism Tuesday.

"For as long as our Marines are in Beirut without a clear, achievable mission, they face an impossible task," Hart said.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., criticized Reagan for refusing to discipline officers if the report so recommends.

"The president would be well advised to implement those recommendations," said Warner.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said "there is plenty of fault to go around, but it is not all the military's fault at all. Real basic mistakes were made by some of the military commanders, but the biggest mistake was putting the Marines there in the first place."

Rep. Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., a member of the House Armed Services Investigations Subcommittee which investigated the bombing, said Reagan is wrong to shield the officers in charge of security from punishment.

"By accepting the blame, he's circumventing any punishment. I think that's wrong," he said.

"I believe that it is incumbent upon Congress to reassess its position on the stationing of U.S. Marines in Beirut, and to do so immediately upon return from the winter recess," Mavroules said. "I would ask of my colleagues that the Marines be removed immediately from their vulnerable positions at the airport to safer positions on land or offshore."

Reagan said he had received the report last Friday.

Before leaving for a California vacation, the president told reporters that the bombing arose from a new

C-of-C Economic And Industrial Council Goals For '84 Announced

Phil Dixon has been named vice chairman for 1984 of the economic and industrial council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, chamber officials have announced.

According to Dixon, the council has adopted the following goals for its 1984 program of work:

•To develop a legislative liaison for development and expansion of industry in the Greenville area.

•To support the institute of technology at East Carolina University and industrial training courses at Pitt Community College.

•To seek ways to expand and increase transportation for the Pitt-Greenville area.

•To actively host all industrial prospects interested in the Greenville area and to study reasons why industry has chosen not to locate in the Pitt-Greenville area and determine what areas must be strengthened to attract industry in the future.

•To continue to attempt to provide buildings and financial incentives to interested clients and to determine which business concerns would be most likely interested in locating in Greenville and develop data necessary for a "mission" group to pursue the prospect.

•To have a data base computerized and updating on a regular basis and work with Pitt County Development Commission to make the data available in an attractive format.

•To continue a liaison between business and agri-business.

•To create better relations with present industry and assist with industrial expansion and to provide a day of appreciation for Pitt County industry in cooperation with the Pitt County Development Commission

•To develop a program for emphasizing retail sales in the Greenville area and to develop a small business council and seminar for small.

•To promote Pitt County as a place to retire and to produce a brochure and advertisement.

•To seek funding for a eastern regional civic center.

•To continue development of the business and health care coalition for the Pitt County area and to conduct a statewide seminar to share information.

•To assist with meeting notices and minutes.

Programs of work for 1984 for the other chamber councils will be released at a later date, organization officials said.

U.S. TESTING REFUNDS AVAILABLE

Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten said today that nearly $15,000 is now available for refunds to North Carolina consumers who paid $14.80 in "shipping charges" to Florida-based United States Testing Authority for "free" gifts in connection with a "television survey" the firm promoted last year.

"The money (from the firm) is here and we'll soon be mailing refund checks to satisfy the claims already on file with our consumer protection office," Edmisten said as he announced a consent judgment that closes the state's case against the Florida promoter.

New complainants who send in proof of payment also will be sent refunds until the fund is exhausted or within 90 days of Dec. 20, whichever comes first. All undistributed funds will be turned over to the state after the court-decreed 90-day period, as part of the company's civil penalty. The judgment permanently forbids U.S. Testing and its president, W. Ed Herder, from doing business in North Carolina.

The state's lawsuit against the company accused the firm of violating North Carolina contest and lottery laws in mass mailings of questionnaires about personal television viewing preferences that were to be returned with $14.80 for shipping costs on "free gifts" worth up to $2000.

"It's illegal in North Carolina to require payment for a free gift or to run a contest without the disclosures required by law," Edmisten said. "U.S. Testing mass-mailed those questionnaires, accepted people's money and sent back invitations to sales presentations at time-share condominiums."

Complaints should be sent to the Office of the Attorney General, Consumer Protection, P.O. Box 629, Raleigh, N.C. 27602.

Homemaker's Haven

Babysitting is a great way to make money but it means taking on a great deal of responsibility as well. Like any job, it requires knowing what is involved, what is expected of you and what you expect of the child's parents. By learning and knowing some of the basic techniques regarding child care, a beginner can soon become a "sought-after" pro.

A babysitter should always act with safety and cleanliness in mind. And to ensure one's own safety, it is important to learn and talk to new employees before taking a job.

If you decide to babysit, ask the child's parents for information that might prove useful. Find out what time they hope to return and write down the phone number at which they can be reached. Also list the numbers of a close neighbor and the family doctor as well as the hospital, rescue squad, police, fire department and poison control center.

Ask the parents about the child's routine, too. Find out what and when the baby should eat, go to bed, rules on TV watching and whether or not a bath is in order before bedtime. If you don't know how to bathe a child tell the parents. A washing up may be all that would be required.

If the infant still wears diapers, and you do know how to change them, ask to be shown. When diapering, always keep one hand on the baby and never leave the child alone for a second. The same rule applies when bathing, a child could fall or drown in seconds. Let a doorbell or telephone ring until you are finished. Be prepared to watch the child at all times when he or she is awake. When asleep, check on the infant every half hour and don't think of going to sleep yourself. Always be ready to handle whatever emergency may arise. Keep the emergency phone numbers at hand.

Youngsters are curious about their surroundings and their desire to learn often gets them into trouble. Take care to prevent dangerous situations. Make certain that any access to stairways is effectively blocked. Always hold a baby securely when the child is on a table, chair or bed. Do not leave a youngster alone for even a second, the infant could easily fall. Pick up toys before children can trip over them. Wipe up spills immediately.

Prevent fires by keeping matches out of a child's reach. Keep children away from heaters, a range, electrical outlets, hot-water faucets, lighted cigarettes or hot drinks.

If a fire should start, get out of the house immediately, taking the child with you. Then phone the fire department from a neighbor's house or phone booth. If clothing should catch on fire, smother the flames by quickly wrapping the child in a heavy blanket or rolling him or her on the floor. Don't let the youngster run — that only fans the fire.

Avoid cuts and scratches by removing from a child's reach such sharp objects as needles, scissors and knives. If a cut occurs wash it with soap and water and cover with a sterile bandage. Ease the pain of a small burn with cold running water.

Perhaps poisoning is the most frightening hazard for a child. Prevent a possible clamamy by keeping your charge away from cleaning products, paints, medicines and any caustic substances that could be damaging to the skin, the eyes, or if ingested. These products should be out of the reach of children preferably locked away in cabinets.

Choking is another dangerous possibility for children. Babies and toddlers are curious and will put anything in their mouths. Check reachable tabletops and floors for beads, rings, buttons, coins and tacks. And never feed a baby hard candy, popcorn, nuts or any food a child might choke on. Do not put pillows or plastic bags in a crib as they could cause suffocation.

The human factor is just as important as safety when babysitting. Treat the child in your care with warmth and consideration. Spend time playing. A child will especially appreciate a game if he or she feels lonely after parents leave. Be firm but reasonable about following a routine. Don't force a child to eat if he or she is not hungry and comfort the infant if he or she wakes up frightened. But don't let the youngster take advantage of you. Acting on your judgement is part of your responsibility as a babysitter.

The final rule of babysitting is to control your own behavior. Do not take food from the refrigerator unless the parents have told you to do so. And make sure things are in the same order when you leave as they were when you arrived. Do not make unnecessary calls or have visitors over while babysitting. Assume your new responsibility in a businesslike manner and you should acquire other babysitting opportunities.

Young Firebugs Set Fires In Treatment

By MARC McFARLAND

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Children who deliberately set fires are allowed to do that very thing at a Portland hospital in an effort to find and eliminate the root of the destructive behavior.

"The fires are a plea for help by children who are depressed, angry or both and don't have the skills to protect themselves from harm," says Dr. J. Douglas Myers, a psychologist and director of the unique, in-patient treatment given to fire-setting children at Cedar Hills Hospital.

Myers said five children have been admitted to the hospital since the program began in June. He estimated in four years of private counseling he has treated 50-70 patients 6 to 17 years old "who had fire-setting as part of their problems."

Children who deliberately set fires, mostly boys, usually are rejected by foster homes and institutions, Myers said.

"Fire-setting children are not accepted for treatment at many homes because of the fear that they will set more fires. Their (social) case workers can't get them in any place. These are kids who usually fall through the cracks until they set a big enough fire that sends them to jail," Myers said.

"The problem for homes is insurance and fire-safety codes, and the children become the lepers of mental health."

Half of the children he has treated privately and at the hospital have been 8 years old or younger, Myers said. Their fire-setting is a "learned" reaction to depression and anger, he said.

"In general, the kids are very depressed," Myers said. "Their feelings have been hurt very badly. Some have been the victims of physical or sexual abuse. They don't know how to feel good about themselves and they lack the skills to deal with everyday problems."

The children generally do poorly in school and suffer from ridicule by their peers or adults, Myers said.

"Because of deep depression or lack of skills, they have learned for whatever reason to take the anger of being hurt and converting it into setting a fire," he said. "In behavior, fire is one of the most powerful symbols."

Fire-setting often is learned by watching others do it or from seeing it on television, he said.

During a child's hospital stay, eventually he is given the opportunity to set a fire in a controlled area, Myers said.

"We safely recreate the event by talking about it, then subtly putting them in a fire-proof area," Myers said. "There, they can color, draw or do whatever they like. There also happen to be matches, a lighter and paper."

"As soon as they ignite it, we stop the test and go out and talk with them — going over step-by-step everything they were thinking and feeling before setting the fire."

The goal of the test is to get the children to understand why they are setting the fires. Once their hostility and feelings of depression are uncovered, they can be taught to deal with those feelings in a constructive way, he said.

"The treatment sounds emotionally strong, but it is balanced with teaching them to be happy and proud of themselves," he said. "The children are hugged and rewarded when they do something good. They are taught how to feel good about themselves."

"Because fire-setting is a learned behavior, they can learn how not to do it. But more than that, they are taught how to feel good about themselves and to become responsible for their behavior."

Parents also receive counseling. The schools attended by the children are contacted to arrange a course of study that will encourage the children to recognize their strengths.

"Children who deliberately set fires often can't read or write," Myers said. "They feel dumb in school. They become dropouts and rebellious."

Kathy Edwards, director of community relations, said the hospital was contacting insurance companies about underwriting scholarship treatment programs for fire-setting youths.

"A lot of these kids come from homes without a lot of financial resources," she said. "For the cost of burning down a garage, they could receive really good treatment."

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A person sleeps better in a cool bedroom.

This from Dr. Richard B. Hornick of the University of Rochester Medical Center.

Hornick says warm air may make a person feel tired but it does not foster good sleeping. When it's warm, you perspire to lose heat. Perspiring is work, and the body can't relax while it's working.

In a cool environment, pajamas and blankets do the work by trapping body heat close to a person. If at times one needs extra warmth, the body generates it by shivering. But if the room temperature doesn't go below 64 degrees, shivering should not be necessary.

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

Associated Press Food Editor

As a devotee of culinary collectibles — like so many cooking buffs these days — I have gathered together a number of modern posters related to food. But I didn't know until recently that a man who runs a poster shop had a collection of old posters of this sort.

I heard about the collection from a friend of mine because the poster specialist is her brother, who attended the Rhode Island School of Design. He is George Dembo, and his shop, Gallery 9, is in Chatham, N.J. Last summer his food poster collection was on display in his shop and he hopes to take it on tour.

The subjects in the collection include cheese, wine, beer, delicatessen fare, salad oil, mineral water and chocolate. The earliest ones date from the turn of the century and were designed by such poster masters as the Czechoslovakian Mucha, the German Hohlwein and the American Edward Penfield.

I was particularly interested to hear that Dembo's collection includes food conservation posters from World War I. One of these is by Lloyd Harrison and was published by the United States Food Administration. It was an attempt to persuade American cooks to use cornmeal and hominy (whole or grits) in order to conserve the wheat that was needed for overseas shipment.

A copy of that poster, loaned to me by Dembo, reminded me that among my collection of cookbooks is one titled "The Corn Book" (War Edition) published in 1918. Among the recipes in the book are a fair number for corn breads. Here is one for Cornmeal and Whole Wheat Muffins inspired by the 1918 compilation. These muffins are hearty fare, fine for everyday meals as well as for special weekend brunches.

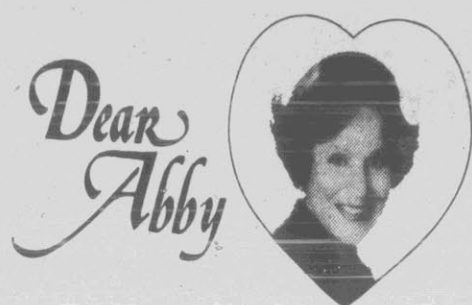

CORNMEAL AND GRAHAM MUFFINS

Host Who Serves Alcohol Is Responsible

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: Are you entertaining for the holidays? Whether you are having just a few friends over, or a houseful, if you plan to serve alcoholic beverages, here are a few timely suggestions:

Many folks (more than you think) prefer something non-alcoholic, so let your guests know that soft drinks, iced tea, fruit and vegetable juices are available, and give them a choice. (It's cheaper, too.)

Always serve something to nibble on with cocktails. (Food retards the flow of alcohol into the bloodstream.)

Don't serve alcoholic drinks in king-sized glasses. They hold too much.

Never "load" drinks or force "just one more" on anyone. That kind of generosity does no one a favor.

White wine (a favorite these days) tends to go down more easily, so people are apt to consume more wine than liquor, but be aware that wine is no less intoxicating. And don't sell beer short as an intoxicant, either.

Never offer a departing guest "one for the road." Stop serving alcohol well before the party is over, and bring out the coffee, tea and snacks. This is to allow the guests who have a buzz on time to sober up before they buzz off.

If a guest shows any signs of intoxication, do not let him drive home! Call a taxi or drive him home yourself. Or insist that he stay all night. (Better your sofa, or even your floor, than a hospital bed—or heaven forbid, the morgue.)

I want to emphatically state that everyone does not have the same tolerance level for alcohol, so the best rule to follow is: If you drink, don't drive, and if you drive, don't drink.

Have a happy, healthy, safe New Year. And if you're a host or hostess, help your friends to have one, too.

ABBY

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column dealing with burying pets, you noted that special arrangements could be made according to "religious preferences." Would you please tell me how I can determine the religion of my pet? I wouldn't want it observing Christmas when it should be celebrating Hanukkah.

EDGAR J. BURNS, PORT ORANGE, FLA.

DEAR MR. BURNS: Pets raised in a Christian home are assumed to be Christian. Pets raised in a Jewish home are assumed to be Jewish. I once knew a terrier in Sioux City, Iowa, named "Tex Lansburg" who refused to eat anything that wasn't kosher.

DEAR ABBY: You published a letter from a reader in Woodside, Calif., who insists that all fat people are gluttons, and there is no way a person can be overweight and healthy. Please give me equal time.

I am a woman who is and has been approximately 60 pounds overweight for years. I will be 70 next month and my blood pressure is the envy of my slender doctor. I am not gluttonous as most people assume when they see an overweight person.

Recent scientific studies have shown that a person who is 10 percent overweight will probably live longer than the person who is 10 percent underweight.

Doctors are now finding that excessive running and jogging can be damaging to one's internal organs as well as to the spine, hips and ankles.

I would like to hear from that reader again when he gets to be my age—if he makes it, that is. Sign me ...

DEAR ABBY: Don't change and don't apologize!

The 20th Convention of the National Association of Parliamentarians in San Francisco passed the following resolution:

"Whereas, parliamentary law has a language all of its own; and whereas, in olden times the one presiding was the only person provided with a chair, while others sat on benches, hence he was called the Chairman; and whereas, since time immemorial the term 'Mister Chairman' or 'Madam Chairman' has always been employed to differentiate between sexes; and whereas, further effort toward sex differentiation is redundant and contrived; now therefore be it resolved that organizations and parliamentarians of the National Association of Parliamentarians must use the term Chairman instead of 'Chairperson,' and be it resolved that all members of the National Association of Parliamentarians should habitually stress the principle that the word Chairman belongs to the title of the office the same as the title of President or Secretary."

Abby, a person should not be more concerned with his or her sex than the position held. Besides, it sounds contrived and unprofessional.

Just thought you'd like to know.

MARLISA BANNISTER, WESTERVILLE, OHIO

DEAR MARLISA: I would indeed. The resolution gets my vote.

On average, women can expect to outlive men and thus are likely to spend their later years alone. The American Council of Life Insurance says this is because women outnumber men nearly 3-to-2 in the over-65 age group, but by nearly 2-to-1 among those over 75. According to the council, in 1982 50 percent of older women were widows compared with 12 percent of older men.

Realistic Ruling

Superior Court Judge James Pou Bailey has ruled that North Carolina's 9-year-old law limiting candidates' spending on campaign advertising is unconstitutional. Bailey agreed with the U.S. Supreme Court in that limits on individual giving will make it less likely that a candidate can be "bought," but he said the limitation on how much money a candidate can raise or spend violates the First Amendment.

His ruling would tend to give the advantage to candidates with well-financed campaigns, leaving behind those struggling to find money needed for a statewide campaign. But it makes sense.

Some of the lesser known candidates for the 1984 races say Bailey's ruling has opened the way for the governorship to be bought. That's not true. The money would have been there, in one form or the other, regardless of how Bailey decided. Jesse Helms has proven that time after time, and Jim Hunt has not suffered when it came time to campaign.

The day when a candidate campaigns on his own funds is long since past. If the candidate can't raise the money to wage a viable, visible campaign, there is little chance of victory.

Bailey took the only realistic avenue open to him, on a constitutional basis and on the grounds of practicality.

Caught In Squeeze

What is a farmer to do?

David L. Kendell, extension economist in public policy and international trade at N.C. State University, reports that the increasing strength of the U.S. dollar against other leading world currencies is one of the major causes for the decline of agricultural exports over the last two fiscal years.

The greater value of the dollar, has made agricultural exports more expensive to world markets. Consequently they turn to other sources.

The dollar is expected to remain strong; therefore, Kendell recommends that farmers not base expansion plans on hopes of increased exports.

The American farmer clearly can produce and the world needs his products. Yet through no fault of the farmer his products have become too expensive for the world's markets.

Economic Goals

NEW YORK (AP) — Being a massive goal-seeking mechanism, the economy in 1984 will be working toward record highs in gross national product, employment, corporate profits, personal income and many other categories.

The goals are out there, put there as always by business economists, stock market analysts, academics and government officials who assemble masses of data and grind out their product in abundance comparable to that of McDonald's.

The goals set last year — even those by the White House — were exceeded, because the vast number of forecasters felt the recovery would be bogged down by high interest rates, consumer caution and a burdensome budget deficit.

This year they are taking a roughly similar approach. The economy, which grew at a 6.5 percent annual rate in 1983, can't possibly duplicate that level in 1984 — or so the consensus of forecasters seems to say.

Here are some of the consensus goals:

GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT — About $1.6 trillion, in "real" dollars.

Real dollars these days are 1972 dollars, a year chosen arbitrarily. Any year would do so long as it was used for both years, the idea being to apply the same measuring stick, rather than an enlarged or shrunken one.

That amount would represent a gain of about 4 percent over 1983's average GNP of $1.54 trillion.

INFLATION — As measured by the consumer price index, about 5 percent, or less than 2 percentage points higher than this year's estimated rate of about 3.3 percent.

An increase, but still not bad, at least when compared with some of the disastrous numbers on the fever chart in recent years: 13.3 percent in 1979, 12.4 percent a year later, 8.9 percent in 1981, and 3.9 percent in 1982.

EMPLOYMENT — A record high number of people at work, averaging out to about 104 million for the year, but probably reaching an annual rate of about 105 million people late in the year.

In other words, if the goal set by many forecasters is achieved, employment would be at a record high, with close to 5 million more people at work in 1984 than in 1982, the year the recession ended.

Though the jobless might average around 8 percent — high when you consider that from World War II to 1975 the rate never reached 8 percent for a full year — it still represents a sharp improvement from 1983's 9.6 percent average.

DISPOSABLE PERSONAL INCOME — Would you believe that many of the forecasters expect it will come to about $1.15 trillion, a remarkable figure that is about $600 billion more than in 1983. And those dollars are real rather than current.

Most remarkable is that anything that can be called disposable is left after all the deductions made to reach this figure, which for practical purposes is sometimes called takehome pay.

It is the gross amount paid to everyone, minus dozens of different taxes at various levels of government. What remains after they get through with your income is yours to dispose of through spending or saving.

CORPORATE PROFITS AFTER TAXES — The goal seems to be about $160 billion, a fair sum and a record to boot, even if the amount is in current dollars, whose buying power is reduced from the previous year by the amount of inflation.

If the goal is reached, it would mean an increase of more than 20 percent over this year's total of about $132 billion, and almost 40 percent over 1982's deeply depressed total.

Impressive, indeed. But someday destined to be met, surpassed and forgotten.

A Moral Victory For Gilmore could spend on advertising.

But Brock's ruling was thrown into question earlier this month when Tom Gilmore, another candidate, sued Brock over a similar interpretation of the state law that limits campaign contributions. Brock had ruled that 1983 contributions didn't count toward 1984 limits. A judge agreed with Gilmore that 1983 contributions do count against 1984 limits. That left Faircloth wondering how much he really could spend on advertising.

Faircloth, former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten are all expected to raise well beyond the $440,700 media spending limit. All three were left in the position of not knowing what to do in the late days of 1983. If they wanted any or all of the double spending benefit of Brock's ruling, they'd have to spend some money in 1983. But they'd have to do so realizing that any money spent in 1983 could be later counted toward their 1984 limits if a judge overruled Brock again. That could leave them without media budgets at the race's end.

Gilmore had originally questioned both of Brock's rulings. But when he got to court, he only contested the contributions limits. While Gilmore doesn't want to see his opponents getting a double-spending limit, he was afraid to even raise the question in court. That's because he, and a quite a few other people, thought the law was unconstitutional. Ask a judge anything about the law and he might throw it out altogether and give Gilmore's opponents freedom to spend all they could raise.

Gilmore, who isn't expected to raise a lot of money, wasn't going to help his opponents get the law thrown out. It would be up to one of the candidate's who's been raising big chunks of money to do that. When they did, they'd be forced to take the accompanying political heat of appearing to be the big money candidate. Edmisten and Knox apparently chose to forfeit the extra 1983 spending rights rather than take the label. Faircloth had to take the label.

Although Faircloth is putting together a strong organization, a big advertising campaign is essential to his strategy. He's less well-known than either Edmisten, Knox, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green or Insurance Commissioner John Ingram. His strong card is his own personal wealth and the money his friends can raise for him. He plans to make himself known through those expensive television ads.

Faircloth went to court and Judge Pou Bailey ruled the law unconstitutional. That decision, unless overruled, will help Edmisten, Knox and Faircloth. But only Faircloth got hit with the big money stigma. Gilmore moved quickly to hurt more candidates when he challenged them all to stay within the original spending limit.

In this round, chalk up a win for Tom Gilmore.

Issue Of Equality Remains Strong

WASHINGTON (AP) — For 37 days in 1982, Sonia Johnson fasted, living only on water. She chained herself to the White House fence. She drew blood with a hypodermic needle and spilled it on a copy of the U.S. Constitution.

Now to further advance her heresy, she is running for president.

Her purpose is not to win — she knows she cannot — but to win the ears for her ideas, which are feminist, radical and unfamiliar.

She says she is willing to die for women's equality, and she finds nothing strange about that.

"I've never seen people get anywhere until they are ready to put their lives on the line for what they believe," she says. "Throughout history, men have been willing to die for what they believe."

Ms. Johnson was a dutiful mother and church organist until the winter of 1979-80. Her radicalization started when the Mormon Church put her on trial and excommunicated her for her outspoken protest against the church's opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment.

In June 1982, in the last weeks before the amendment died for lack of ratification from a sufficient number of states, she and seven other women fasted in the Illinois Capitol in a futile effort to get the Illinois Legislature to approve ERA.

She was emaciated at the end. When she returned to her home in suburban Virginia, near Washington, she was so weak, she says, that she had to crawl up the steps.

"We wanted women in this country to know that there were eight women who thought women's liberty and women's civil rights were worth dying for," she says. "We wanted them to feel worthy of the kind of sacrifice men have always been willing to make."

Cars in Illinois sported nasty bumper stickers: "They were too fat, anyway."

But, says Ms. Johnson, she and the other fasters got thousands of letters from women who said the episode brought home to them how desperately important the issue of equality is to women.

On the day after the ratification deadline, Ms. Johnson and other radical protesters spilled their own blood on a copy of the Constitution on the steps of the National Archives building.

"I just lost all reverence for everything when the ERA failed," she said. "I realized how the system betrays women's trust."

She wrote a book, started lecturing for a livelihood and ran for the presidency of the National Organization for Women, but was defeated as too far out for NOW.

Now she seeks to be the presidential nominee of the Citizens Party, which was founded in 1980 to offer a liberal, anti-corporate, anti-nuclear energy alternative to the other parties.

In the 1980 campaign, its presidential candidate, environmentalist Barry Commoner, got 234,294 votes and finished fifth, behind Ronald Reagan, Jimmy Carter, John Anderson and Ed Clark, the candidate of the Libertarian Party.

The Citizens Party will pick its candidate in June. Ms. Johnson is by no means sure she will be the delegates' choice: She may turn out to be too radical even for a fringe party.

Her political ideas begin with rape. She argues that as long as society casually tolerates the crime of rape it will tolerate all other forms of violence, including nuclear war.

"We don't even know what peace is," she says. "Women are being waged war upon. In our most intimate lives, we are at war. Peace has to begin with peace between the sexes."

Is rape a crime that can, as she suggest, be wiped from the face of the earth?

"We don't know, do we?" she says.

"We've never considered it important enough to find out. We don't even have a presidential commission on it. We ought to have some of our best intelligencees concentrating upon how to change that violent habit of mind."

Ms. Johnson disparages the promises made to NOW by her fellow would-be presidential candidates — those eight males seeking the Democratic nomination — to consider a woman as running mate.

If the Democrats don't nominate a woman for vice president, she says, they may lose the loyalty of millions of women.

"If I am outraged, I cannot be alone," she says. "I can't be the only one."

Keynoter Becomes Democratic Issue

WASHINGTON — Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York, who earlier this year was considered the favorite to keynote the 1984 Democratic National Convention, now is pushing Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for the role.

Cuomo several weeks ago took himself out of any competition to become keynoter, and Sen. Joe Biden of Delaware moved into the front-runner's position. However, Biden notified Kennedy's office recently that Kennedy had "senior claim" on the role and best embodied the Democratic Party tradition. Kennedy, Cuomo and Biden are perhaps the party's best stump speakers.

Although he still would accept, Cuomo refused to put himself into a competition for the honor because he thinks there should be none. When he read in our column in September that National Chairman Charles T. Manatt resented pro-Cuomo pressure for keynoter, he promptly fired off a letter to Manatt taking his name out of consideration.

President Reagan's blunt acknowledgment that a "collapse" of the situation in Lebanon would lead to speedy evacuation of the Marines left his staff aghast that the boss could be so dangerously candid in public.

Actually, White House insiders had heard the president say exactly the same thing in the privacy of the Oval Office. But nobody thought he would go public in a way that would virtually invite Syria to stall any political deal in Lebanon and thus trigger withdrawal of the Marines.

"It absolutely collapsed us," one official said privately. But it's standard Reagan procedure to say out loud what he really thinks, as when he called the Soviet Union an "evil empire."

Secretary of State George Shultz's first reaction on learning of the Syrian capture of a U.S. Navy navigator was to order top aides to call Prince Bandar, the Saudi Arabian ambassador, and ask his intercession with Damascus to free the captured American.

The ambassador was blunt. He told a high State Department official that, by reducing U.S. influence in Riyadh, the new U.S.-Israeli strategic agreement had "taken the high cards" out of his hands in any effort to help the U.S. with Syria.

Nevertheless, the Saudis did make overtures to Damascus, and reported back that the captured navigator was well-treated. But as for getting his release, the Syrians would deal only with the U.S., not a Saudi intermediary viewed in Damascus as lacking clout in Washington.

Strength For Today

"God is light, and in him is no darkness at all" (1 John 1:5). The Bible also says that God is love (1 John 4:8). No darkness in God; no hatred. How different from the concept of God which many of have.

"God is a stern judge. He is going to pronounce down on me and punish me for my evil." We say or think these things often. Of course, judgment is real, but a God who pounces down upon us is nowhere set forth in the Bible.

The which which we see about is is probably nothing at all compared with the celestial brilliance which surrounds the Person of God. The most sacrificial and deep love which humans can have for each other must certainly be nothing at all compared to the love God has for us and the love which "composes" as it were, the Person of God.

In other words, think of God in terms of light, inspiration, happiness, peace, power and vision. God is light. God is love.

Andropov Absent As Russian Parliament Convenes

By ROXINNE ERVASTI
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — President Yuri V. Andropov, ailing and out of public view for 132 days, missed another major Soviet function today as the national parliament convened for its winter session.

Andropov's repeated absence from ceremonies which, according to Soviet tradition and protocol, he should attend are thought to be unprecedented and suggested he is hospitalized with a serious illness.

Reports about Andropov's poor health, which have circulated since he took power 13 months ago and intensified when he was hospitalized last spring, were renewed when he missed the Nov. 5 Kremlin gathering and Nov. 7 Red Square parade marking the anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

The Kremlin insists Andropov is not seriously ill, but his absence from the important events — including a Communist Party Central Committee meeting Monday and Tuesday — clearly indicates his condition is poor. He has reportedly undergone dialysis treatment for kidney problems.

During the Supreme Soviet session today, the Soviets announced a 1984 national budget of 365.7 billion rubles ($461.45 billion) — a 3.4 percent increase over 1983 — that included a token boost in defense spending for the first time in four years.

The Defense Ministry's budget was set at 17.054 billion rubles ($21.52 billion), or 4.66 percent of the total budget, compared with 17.05 billion rubles last year. Western defense experts, however, believe the Soviets spend nearly twice that much for defense, hiding costs in allocations to other ministries.

For a third straight year, the Soviets failed to release figures on the crucial grain harvest.

Andropov holds the dual titles of president and general secretary of the Communist Party, and was virtually required by protocol to be on hand for the Supreme Soviet meeting, where decisions of the Central Committee are ratified.

Since he is head of the party, his absence from its policy-setting committee's winter session this week was likewise believed to be unprecedented.

He has not been seen in public since Aug. 18, when he met a group of U.S. senators in Moscow, but the Kremlin has made a strong effort to maintain his image as leader of the party and government.

The parliamentary session was opened by Alexei P. Shitikov, chairman of the Soviet of Unions, one of two houses of the Supreme Soviet.

The official news agency Tass said the 1,500-plus legislators would "review the draft state plan for socio-economic development and the draft state budget of the U.S.S.R. for 1984."

Andropov has pressed consistently for economic reform, including stricter labor discipline and decentralized management, since he took office after the death of predecessor Leonid I. Brezhnev.

His latest arguments for the moderate reforms were presented to the Central Committee on Monday in the text of a speech he said he could not deliver personally because of "temporary reasons" — presumably his illness.

The Washington Post today reported U.S. government and medical officials believe Andropov has been undergoing dialysis treatment for a serious kidney disease since last summer.

Citing unidentified sources, the newspaper said the U.S. officials believe the Soviet leader is still able to keep control of the government.

Previous Western news reports have said Andropov suffers from heart trouble and diabetes which led to the kidney problems, and at least one report has said he was undergoing dialysis, in which a machine acts as an artificial kidney to cleanse the blood of impurities.

Andropov was the only member of the ruling Politburo not on hand for the Supreme Soviet session.

Reporters attending the session also spotted former Politburo member Andrei P. Kirilenko sitting among the deputies in the hall of the Grand Kremlin Palace.

The 77-year-old Kirilenko, ousted from the leadership in November 1982, had long been touted as a possible successor to Brezhnev, who died Nov. 10, 1982.

Nikolai K. Baibakov, chairman of the state planning committee, opened the parliament meeting with a review of the Soviet Union's economic performance in 1983 and a rundown on the budget and 1984 state plan.

World War I Veterans Fade

By KATHY HORAK
Associated Press Writer
SEAL BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Battered by age, sickness and death, two local World War I veterans' groups will fall out for the last time on New Year's Eve.

"We're just too damn old," says Safety First, 89, past commander of World War I Barracks 2860. It was organized in 1962, the same year the 6,500-home Leisure Home retirement community at Seal Beach opened.

First says only half of the 160 members paid their dues this year and only 12 to 15 attend monthly meetings. As recently as the 1970s, Barracks 2860 had 512 members. Since 1962, 360 members have died.

At Laguna Hills Leisure World, Barracks 1116 commander Steve Lally, 89, said only 14 or 15 of the 225 official members still attend meetings and it's difficult to get anyone to serve as officers.

"I'm disappointed," Lally added. "We were going to disband last year and I persuaded them to carry on at least one more year. The men didn't want to drive in the dark, so we decided to meet in the daytime, but attendance wasn't any better. It was a sure sign they really wanted to disband."

The situation is similar nationwide, according to Veterans Administration spokesman John Scholzen and Muriel Parkhurst, executive director of Veterans of World War I of the U.S.A.

Inc., the Virginia-based national headquarters for groups like First's and Lally's.

Scholzen said Tuesday that of the 4.74 million men and women who served in 1917-18, the VA tallied 297,000 surviving vets as of October compared with 368,000 a year earlier.

A year ago, Ms. Parkhurst's organization had 55,000 active members; now there are 48,000 among the 140,000 soldiers, nurses and telephone operators on its national roster. In 1981 there were 37,000 chapters; today there are 21,000.

"With a death rate up to 225 people per day, especially in winter months, it's not unusual for us to lose up to 85,000 members a year," Ms. Parkhurst said Tuesday. "Our members' average age is 88.9 years, so it's difficult for them to get to meetings — but that in no way diminishes their ability to continue to be proud and continue community activities."

The pride remains evident in articles veterans submit to the Torch, the 12-page newspaper Ms. Parkhurst edits every six weeks, but the Orange County vets whose groups are disbanding say community activities fell off years ago.

Barracks 2860 once sponsored a November parade through Seal Beach Leisure World on what members still call Armistice Day. Infirmities ended it.

"Old age was beginning to creep up on us. We couldn't march," said Larry Westerman, 88, one of the few remaining active members.

Bingo fund-raisers for patients at Veterans Administration Hospital in Long Beach stopped four years ago because of declining attendance and competition from activities sponsored by more than 200 other organizations at Leisure World, said the Rev. Whipple Bishop, the group's chaplain.

Come 1984, the only reminders of Barracks 2860's charity will be its ladies' auxiliary of veterans' wives. First said they'll continue volunteer work at the veterans hospital.

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The status of American radio stations in Greece will be reviewed during U.S.-Greece talks on smoothing out legal details of a new five-year agreement on military bases, the government says.

Small Farms Seek Niche

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The future of North Carolina's agricultural industry may hinge on ways to better use small farm that make up 30 percent of the state's cultivated land, officials say.

"We actually have two categories of small farms," said Dr. Joe Brooks, a horticulturalist for the Agricultural Extension Service in Raleigh. "One is the traditional small farm from which a family is trying to earn a living with limited resources. The other is acreage owned by a person with an off-farm job."

"Whether either type farm succeeds financially depends a lot on the owner's motivation and managerial skills," he said. "The small farmer must find that special niche in the market that he can fill better or just as well as the big farmer."

Practically all the farms in the mountains are small — less than $20,000 in annual sales — as are most farms in the Piedmont, Brooks said. Most of the state's 68,000 farms are west of Raleigh.

Brooks said many small farmers have dropped out over the past 50 years, but others have survived, mainly in labor-intensive operations. The state now has about 2,000 farmers, mostly small, in the Christmas tree business, a type of farming that didn't exist 15 years ago, he said.

"Small farmers are doing a lot of imaginative things," Brooks said. "They are renting garden spots and recreation sites, building catch-out ponds for fish, and boarding horses and other pets that people can not keep in town."

"I've even heard of farmers renting fruit trees (to city families), providing bed and breakfast for tourists, and establishing learning laboratories for urban children whose parents do not want them to lose touch with the soil."

British Reduce Driving Drunks

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Fewer drunks are being found on Britain's highways this holiday season, according to police who credit a $1.2 million "don't drink and drive" campaign and a rash of pre-Christmas jail terms for offenders.

"Usually at this time of the year you can tell when it's pub closing time because the 999 (emergency) phone never stops ringing," said Inspector Christopher Snow, a senior traffic officer in Essex county northeast of London.

"But this year it's been quite different. And a lot of people are now at home enjoying their Christmas who would otherwise have been in hospital."

Returns from a sample of 20 county police forces across Britain show — with the exception of Glasgow — a sharp drop in the number of "breathalyzed" drivers who were found to be intoxicated.

It's a tough law: three whiskeys or two pints of beer for an average drinker can send the breathalyzer over the legal limit.

This is also the first Christmas and New Year holidays that British police have been armed with new "lion toimeters," a faster, more modern version of the old breathalyzer bag.

Normally, about one-third of motorists stopped over the holiday period are over the limit and face fines of up to 1,000 pounds — $1,420 — and six months in jail for a first offense.

In Nottinghamshire, police reported 40 drivers out of 2,337 — or just 1.7 percent — were found to be over the limit. The county has been cracking down on drunk drivers for years, and last year the figure was 8 percent.

In Sussex, the figure was down a third from last year's 25 percent, and other English counties which have so far compiled figures reported similar findings. London, with 210 police stations, won't add up its figures until after the New Year, Scotland Yard said.

Glasgow police reported 80 motorists booked in the first three days of the holidays — double last year's number.

The season is far from over. For many Britons, the Christmas and New Year holidays run for 11 days. Most offices shut Dec. 23 and many were not due to reopen until Jan. 3, although the official holiday ended Tuesday night.

However, police appeared confident motorists had been influenced by the $1.2 million Christmas publicity campaign against drunk driving, launched by the Department of Transport on Dec. 19.

Shortly before Christmas, magistrates at one Essex town, Grays, where drunken driving convictions jumped by nearly 70 percent in a year, jailed eight first offenders for several days. They also were fined 500 pounds and were banned from driving for up to three years.

Paid Price For Two Convictions

NEW YORK (AP) — Granting immunity to a man charged in a $700,000 fraud scheme was "a price the government had to pay" to assure conviction of two other defendants, prosecutors said.

The cooperation of James N. Cooney, a former Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis Inc. account executive, was key in obtaining guilty pleas from William C. Hogan and Robert Blakeney Stevenson, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Andrew J. Levander.

Hogan, 36, the former head of government securities trading at Paine Webber, was sentenced Tuesday to two years in prison for conspiracy and securities fraud.

Stevenson, 36, a bond trader and former Spaulding Securities Corp. vice president, was sentenced to 18 months in prison for conspiracy.

Authorities said Hogan rigged securities trades so that Spaulding profited in 90 percent of its deals with Paine Webber.

Blood Drive Exceeds Goal

The fourth annual after-Christmas bloodmobile at the Moose Lodge exceeded collection goals Tuesday as 324 pints of blood were donated by area residents, according to Red Cross spokeswoman Ruth Taylor.

She said that the county blood committee had set 300 pints as the target for the drive and the goal was met in spite of cold weather outside and a chilly Moose Lodge. Mrs. Taylor said the Pitt Red Cross furnished blankets and portable heaters were brought in to help warm up the collection area. Only nine deferrals were recorded during the day, she said.

Martin College Participates

Martin Community College in Williamston is one of 148 colleges nationally to take part in a demonstration project designed to strengthen the skills of volunteers serving as board members of nonprofit organizations. Dr. Travis Martin, president of the college, has scheduled an organizational meeting of the 13-member advisory committee for "Building Better Boards" at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 5 at the college. Martin will serve as project coordinator. Pitt County members of the advisory panel are Marvin Daugherty of Greenville and Peter Anderson of Farmville.

Economics Textbook Adds Drama

By STEVE JONES
Corvallis Gazette-Times
CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — The nation is entering its worst financial crisis since the Depression.

The U.S. economy is teetering on the brink of collapse, when, mysteriously, a key presidential adviser and his mistress are murdered.

The stuff of a murder-mystery thriller? No, a college economics textbook.

Murray Wolfson, an economics professor at Oregon State University, and Vincent Buranelli, a writer from New Jersey, have produced "In the Long Run We Are All Dead."

"Economics needs to be taught better than it is," said Wolfson, a slight graying man with an energetic laugh.

To make the subject easier to digest, he created a cast of characters who discuss and argue over the workings of the national economy. Unlike a dry textbook, Wolfson's book brings to life economic issues and principles.

Wolfson and his publisher hope the mystery will capture the imagination of professors and students alike.

"There's only one other book like it on the market and it has sold remarkably well," said editor Michael Weber, who says he's convinced the Wolfson book will also do well.

Its lucid descriptions of conservative vs. liberal economic policies put it in a league with traditional textbooks on the subject. Combined with the classic whodunit tale, Weber thinks it's an unusual product.

"This book is intended to be a supplementary text for a (college) course in macroeconomics," the study of gross economic principles that contribute to the national economy.

"There are many thousands — perhaps even a million — students taking macroeconomics courses each year. That's the market we want to reach," he said.

The idea came to Wolfson in 1981 when he was a visiting professor at the University of Southern California. After contacting the publisher, "I sat down at the word processor and slammed out a first draft in about four months."

"Then I discovered I couldn't write a novel," he said.

Buranelli was hired to rework the manuscript. "He cut all my sentences in half, but we kept the same plot line and characters."

The result is a fast-paced novel in which two federal administrators — both economists — turn out to be the bad guys. One is head of the president's Council on Economic Advisers; the other the chairman of the Federal Reserve. Each has a different idea on how to run the economy.

In the midst of the debate, President John Curtin has an emotional breakdown and leaves office. His successor turns to his chief of staff for answers on how to avert economic collapse.

But the chief of staff, and then his mistress, are murdered. Who murdered them? And why?

Wolfson is toying with the idea of writing a sequel, possibly involving a spy who manipulates the price and supply of key raw materials entering the country.

"I'll need a supersleuth with a computer to figure it out," he muses.

("In the Long Run We Are All Dead" is published by St. Martin's Press.)

Probably 'Same' If No A-Bombs

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The post-World War II international situation probably would have turned out much the same even if nuclear weapons had not been invented, according to Professor John Mueller.

Mueller, a University of Rochester political scientist, says that even without the bomb, the experience of the war would have been a sufficiently powerful lesson in the horrors of war to make the world's nations reluctant to launch another major conflict.

U.S. Steel Announces Plans To Cut 15,400 Jobs

By EARL BOHN
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — U.S. Steel Corp.'s plan to do away with 15,400 jobs at 73 plants proves "the futility" of union concessions to save jobs, an angry labor leader said, but the company called its action "unavoidable."

David Roderick, chairman of the nation's biggest steelmaker, announced Tuesday that six plants in the Northeast will be closed, probably by April 1984, and others, including the big South Works near Chicago, will be mostly shut down. The reductions will save U.S. Steel about $650 million in after-tax writeoffs and will likely boost earnings next year by $180 million to $200 million, Roderick said after the company's annual meeting.

"Everybody must be competitive. And if any of us fail to do that, any facility is in jeopardy," Roderick said.

But some union members accused the company of betraying workers, especially after the United Steelworkers Union agreed to a package of givebacks in their latest contract in March.

"It just seemed to whet their appetite. It wasn't enough," said Jerry Guido, president of Local 2670 in Trenton, N.J.

Roderick said the cuts were prompted by high labor costs and by competition from Third World steelmakers, such as Brazil and South Korea. He called the reductions "unavoidable in light of global economic and market conditions."

U.S. Steel lost $487 million in the first three quarters of this year.

The plants to be closed are Cuyahoga near Cleveland; Ambridge, Pa.; Johnstown, Pa.; Shiffler in Lawrenceville, Pa.; Elmira, N.Y.; and Trenton, N.J.

After the announcement, U.S. Steel stock rose five-eighths of a point to 29 1/2, in active trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The company had warned of the closings Dec. 7 and said then some jobs could be saved through cost-saving measures at individual plants.

But the union, having negotiated an estimated $3 billion worth of concessions over 3 1/2 years, accused steel companies of provoking "job wars" between individual locals and adopted a policy against any additional givebacks.

"No further proof of the futility and foolishness of a policy of concession bargaining need be offered than today's announcement," said union treasurer Frank McKee, who is running against acting President Lynn Williams for the pre-

Williams, at a news conference, called on the federal government to protect steel companies against foreign imports.

"Today's decision by U.S. Steel only adds to the urgency of what our union has been fighting for, and that is to take such decisions away from corporate boards and put them into the realm of national industrial policies," he said.

Roderick said about 2,400 of the projected lost jobs could still be saved through limited concessions by individual locals, as allowed in the agreement the USW negotiated last March with seven steelmakers.

"People that don't really understand the economic pressures that are out there in the marketplace are the people that, long-term, are not going to be working in the steel industry," Roderick said.

The company said the closings would eliminate the jobs of 4,590 active and 10,896 already laid-off employees in steel, mining and chemicals businesses in 13 states. In steel, 3,607 active and 7,477 inactive workers will be affected.

The job losses will total about 90 at Johnstown, Pa.; nearly 770 at a fabrication plant in Ambridge, Pa.; about 500 at the Cuyahoga Works near Cleveland; 250 at the fabrication plant in Elmira, N.Y.; 190 in fabrication at the Shiffler plant in Pennsylvania; and 50 in wire rope production at Trenton, N.J.

In cutbacks, the largest job losses include about 2,500 at the Gary Works in Gary, Ind.; 3,100 at the South Works in South Chicago, Ill.; and 3,800 in seven plants near Pittsburgh. Roderick said.

"This town's had it without the mill," said contractor Tom Kaynor in McKeesport, Pa., where U.S. Steel will close a blast furnace, two blooming mills and various

PLANT CLOSINGS — Chairman of U.S. Steel David Roderick announces at a press conference that some 15,400 jobs will be eliminated permanently at 10 steelmaking operations nationwide. (AP Laserphoto) shops at its National Works.

The company said the closings will reduce its steel-making capacity to 26 million tons a year from 31 million tons. It also said it would not import semi-finished steel from Britain under a proposal which would have upgraded the Fairless Works outside Philadelphia.

Roderick said 1,600 employees will be called back to work with the reactivation of steelmaking and flat rolling operations at the Fairfield Works near Birmingham, Ala.

U.S. Steel employs 81,800 people in steel, chemicals, coal and other businesses. The cutbacks affect about 22 percent of its 71,000 steel employees, about 32,000 of whom are currently on layoffs.

The current issue of Fortune magazine ranks U.S. Steel as one the nation's ten least admired large corporations; in that survey of corporate executives, directors and financial analysts it is classified as a petroleum refining company because of its acquisition of Marathon Oil.

CHICAGO (AP) — The cranes and buildings at U.S. Steel Corp.'s South Works lay dormant under a shroud of snow, as if to express the thin hope that the "big, dirty place which people loved" will see another spring.

The company announced Tuesday in Pittsburgh that the plant — once the world's third largest — will be mostly shut down by April 1984, prompting the layoff of another 200 to 300 workers from the current workforce of about 1,150, less than one-tenth the post-war peak of 15,000.

Hopes for construction of a new $225 million rail mill that might have revitalized the South Works were dashed Tuesday with the announcement.

It was seen as another chime in a slow, agonizing death knell for what was once one of Chicago's most robust industrial giants.

Founded in 1880 on the shore of Lake Michigan at the southern tip of the city, the South Works drew waves of Irish, Swedes and Germans. Later came English, Scots, French Canadians, Poles, Slavs and still later, Mexicans and blacks.

"It was the heart and soul of the neighborhood and put bread and butter on people's tables," Alderman Edward R. Vrdolyak said recently, as he recalled the neighborhood where his father ran a tavern popular with mill workers.

"It was a big, dirty place which people loved," said Vrdolyak, whose ward encompasses the mill. "It was stability and a future."

A city within a city, the South Works community had its own police force, fire

RETIRED STEEL WORKER — Frank Gonzales, 61, discusses his 33-year career at U.S. Steel's South Works plant at Chicago. The company has announced operations at department, hospital, restaurants, power plants, telephone, post office and even school systems. The plant's railway system was 135 miles long.

At its peak, it could produce and ship 5.5 million tons of steel annually.

But in the late 1960s signs of decline began to appear, first with Pittsburgh executives' disapproval of an expansion proposal. By the late 1970s, the steel industry across the United States was feeling the recession, and one by one, operations at the South Works were beginning to be shut down.

By spring of 1980, the workforce had been whittled to 3,500, and in early 1982, U.S. Steel laid off nearly two-thirds of its remaining employees. The rail mill construction, which the company said would create at least 1,000 jobs, was put on hold.

Then came Tuesday's announcement.

Illinois Attorney General Neil Hartigan pledged to fight the decision to abandon the rail mill, saying the state already has granted tax concessions and other advantages to U.S. Steel with the understanding that it would be built.

But workers were expressing pessimism.

"I'd be scared to say the plant will still be open in a year," said Noah Robinson, a saw sharpener for 13 years at the South Works.

"It will be rough on a lot of people if they close the mills — not just workers but business people," Robinson added.

Frank Benko, a grocer born in the shadow of the mill 74 years ago, said he and his relatives have depended on the plant for their livelihood. Benko has sold to steelworkers for as long as he can remember.

"My parents had this store," he said, as he walked past sparsely stocked shelves. "I grew up here."

Benko, who lives above the store with his 69-year-old sister, Irene, said the business once made $75,000 a year. Last year, he said, it netted $8,500.

"I tell my sister, 'We just have to hang on — we're not going to give up,'" he said, adding they count on the patronage of retirees.

One of them is Frank Gonzales, 64, who retired on a disability pension in 1978 after a 33-year career at the South Works.

Despite the hernia he blames on his work in the mill buildings that have become ghosts behind his house, Gonzales said he looks back on the way of life that was the South Works and is satisfied.

"If I would live all over again, I would do the same thing," he said. "I would go right back to the company."

Deputy Mayor College-Bound

NEW YORK (AP) — After 10 years in city government, Deputy Mayor Robert F. Wagner Jr. will be leaving New York and going to college.

The 39-year-old Wagner, whose father was mayor of the city, has taken a teaching post at Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government.

Earlier this year Wagner had been Mayor Edward Koch's choice to become city schools chancellor, but was turned down by the state education commissioner — who said he lacked professional education experience.

Koch said Wagner still will head a committee that will study what life in New York City should be like by the year 2000.

Wagner takes the Harvard position at the end of January.

A Pet Lion Can Sleep Anywhere

PALACIOS, Texas (AP) — Automobile tires and giant spools for industrial cable are not ordinary toys for a pet, but Tony Kana's favorite feline is not an ordinary housecat — he's an African lion who tips the scale at 385 pounds.

Like many domestic cats, Samson spends a good part of his time in the back yard, lying in the shade, playing with his toys and staring at passers-by.

And like many housecats, Samson is a finicky eater.

But his diet is a little out of the ordinary.

"I feed him once a day. He eats about 3 to 4 pounds of meat per day and he will eat fish and shark," said Kana, who received Samson as a gift from his brother.

Samson needs this diet because he is a growing boy — growing toward an eventual weight of about 600 pounds, Kana said.

Being a pet has its disadvantages for Samson. He's had to get shots, has had his front feet declawed and has no mane because he was neutered "to take some of the meanness out," Kana said.

And he's not compatible with just anyone.

"You have to know him to get along," Kana said. "I know his moods and can tell when he wants to be left alone."

Kana roughhouses with the big cat one to two hours a day and said Samson especially likes to lie on top of him.

Railroad Museum On Track To Scranton Home

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — All of the sidetracks, derailings and uncouplings have apparently been overcome. Steamtown U.S.A., billed as the world's largest operating rail museum, is moving from Vermont to Pennsylvania.

"I really don't see any hitches. We have a signed contract. There's no doubt they're going through with it," said Scranton Mayor James McNulty, who spearheaded efforts to bring the 100-piece collection of steam locomotives and rail cars here.

The move is seen as mutually beneficial for this depressed coal mining city with a rich railroad heritage and a tourist attraction seeking a wider audience.

"We haven't really pulled into the station yet, but we're way down the track," McNulty said in a recent interview. "We're like the little engine that could. I think I can. I think I can. I did."

The first steam engines are scheduled to fire up their boilers for arrival here in January or February from Bellows Falls, Vt., a village of about 5,000 which had been Steamtown's home since 1966.

Steamtown's first excursion on a 13-mile section of track through the Pocono Mountains between Scranton and Moscow, Pa., is set for June or July. But the entire collection won't be in place until 1985.

"Things sometimes don't go as fast as you like. It takes awhile to get all the papers signed," said Frederick Blount, chairman of the Steamtown Museum board and son of its founder, the late F. Nelson Blount.

"We intend Scranton to be the last and permanent home for Steamtown," he added. "It had a lot of facilities that can be adapted very easily to our needs."

The courtship began 20 months ago after Steamtown officials expressed dissatisfaction with their location. In 1981, it attracted only 17,000 visitors, and Vermont law prohibits billboards on interstate highways, which restricted Steamtown's advertising.

In addition, there are no indoor facilities in Bellows Falls to protect the collection, which includes the 600-ton Union Pacific "Big Boy," the largest steam locomotive ever built, from bitter New England winters.

On March 11, Steamtown directors voted to leave Bellows Falls and entertained offers from several cities. They signed a contract with Scranton on May 13, and Steamtown held its farewell to Vermont in October with a special two-day excursion.

Scranton, a city of 88,000 that had declined as an iron and coal center, is banking on Steamtown as the crown jewel in the revitalization of its downtown.

"It's a marriage between a community that had a great location but no attraction, and a great attraction that had no location," said McNulty, who said Scranton has 20 million people living within a 100-mile radius and is accessible by three interstate highways.

"We're an old northeastern 'Rust Belt' city, but we're also sitting on the new rivers — the interstate highways. That's the advantage Scranton has," he said.

"When coal died, a big piece of us died. We never had an identity after that. Our past is now our future. Everything old is new again, especially the people," said McNulty, a first-term Democrat.

City officials expect to attract between 200,000 to 400,000 new visitors. They see $4 million in additional tourist spending a year because of Steamtown, which must use track owned by three different railroads and special trains for its 285-mile move from Vermont.

As part of its deal, Scranton pledged to raise $2 million over the next three years to finance the move. The city is also negotiating with Conrail to buy a 33-acre railyard that will become Steamtown's permanent home.

For the first year, Steamtown will operate from the lobby of the Hilton at Lackawanna Station, a 75-year-old stone and marble structure being refurbished into a 150-room luxury hotel.

The station was built on a bed of anthracite coal in the days of opulence but has been decaying since 1970, when the last of six railroad companies ceased operations.

Meanwhile, Vermont residents who made a "Save Steamtown" pitch in October convinced museum officials to leave behind a steam engine and cars which will be used for local excursion trips.

"Philosophically, both sides may have won," said Elbert Moulton, executive director of the Brattleboro, Vt., Development Credit Corp., who fought to keep the museum.

"Steamtown wanted assurances for the preservation of the collection. We really didn't have the resources to do it," he said.

"At least we will have a train. We want to keep the memory of steam locomotives going," Moulton said. "What was good for Steamtown was important, whether it's in Vermont or wherever, as long as people remember."

ORDERS RELEASE

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A federal judge has ruled the imprisonment of civilians by military courts was "absolutely contrary to the law" and ordered the release of a man jailed since 1977.

STEAMTOWN HOME — This is a view of Scranton's Lackawanna Station, a 75-year-old stone and marble structure which is being refurbished into a 150-room luxury hotel and which will also be the temporary home of what is billed as the world's largest operating rail museum. (AP Laserphoto)

OYSTER SHUCKER — Danny Wyndham of Wrendaw, S.C., is one of the few left in the oystershucking business. What used to be a common sight in the Lowcountry, is now a rare business. Oysters must be shucked by hand and Wyndham's Seafood produces about 60-75 gallons of shucked oysters from about 147 bushels of shells. Each worker makes about $25 per day, according to Wyndham. FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You will be very tied down to some duties and responsibilities today and it is the right day for you to be most conscientious in carrying through with them. Organize your future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Try to get those payments cut down that have you wrought up and make it easier on yourself in the future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) An associate is applying pressure to make sure you are doing what you have agreed to do. Cheerfully comply.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have to get your work done without fail today, so get at it and it won't be as hard as you had anticipated.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Recreation you were looking forward to may be postponed, so don't let it rile you up. Await a better day.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Home conditions are not to your liking now, so absent yourself for a while. Get busy at what will give you greater income in the future.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Vital data should be gone after early in the day for best results. Postpone any trip you have in mind. Exercise caution while driving.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Plan to economize and do not be drawn into anything that means making a heavy investment of money or property.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Stop feeling so nervous and irritated about something that is really not so important, just smile and take it in stride.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't permit that private anxiety to keep you away from important activities and you soon can make progress.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A dynamic friend can give you good advice, so follow it, though it may mean giving up some frivolity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If some problem or legal affair crops up, take care of it right away, especially if it concerns an older individual.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Use your finest judgment in handling that new project and be sure you have all the facts and figures concerning it.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be rather a slow starter at work or study and have the tendency to procrastinate. Teach your progeny to finish whatever is started before going on to other interests. Then there can be much success during the lifetime.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

On past form Brazil was expected to be a contender in the 1983 World Team Championship, played in Stockholm, Sweden. On the other hand, no one picked New Zealand to be in the running. But such are the vagaries of form that Brazil never challenged seriously while New Zealand lost a semifinal spot on the last board of the qualifying round.

This deal is from the 10th round match between these two countries. In one room the Brazilians bid unmolested to four spades. The bidding shown occurred in the room where Brazil's star, Gabriel Chagas, held the West cards. He and his partner pushed to five diamonds—a contract that could be made if declarer takes the diamond finesse. However, the New Zealanders bid on to five hearts, a contract that seemed safe enough.

It would have been safe had Chagas routinely led either his suit or his partner's. Unfortunately for New Zealand, he hit upon a spade lead, and declarer stood no chance.

East won the ace and shifted to a club. Chagas rose with the ace of clubs and returned another spade for his partner to ruff. The defenders had collected their three tricks before declarer could even get started.

New Zealand was doubly unlucky, because it could have made five spades unless East found an inspired heart lead, or a club lead followed by a heart shift from West. As it was, New Zealand lost 13 International Match Points.

In the match between Taiwan and Sweden, the former made five hearts with an overtrick in one room and five diamonds doubled in the other room for a huge gain.

Auction Schooner For A Second Time

GLOUCESTER, Va. (AP) — A 63-foot schooner confiscated after it was used for drug smuggling will go on the auction block for the second time Friday.

The Endless Summer was sold at auction last March for $67,000, but the buyers got out of the deal when they learned that title problems would restrict their use of the vessel.

Gloucester County officials have decided to sell the sailboat again, murky title and all, rather than allow it to sit untended through the rest of the harsh winter weather.

The Endless Summer has been moored at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science's piers in Gloucester Point since shortly after the abandoned vessel was seized at the mouth of the Ware River in May 1982 with four tons of marijuana aboard. Federal authorities turned the vessel over to the state.

It was sold at the earlier auction to William M. Jordan III, the owner of a York County junkyard and Paul F.M. Shaver III, a real estate developer in Nags Head, N.C.

But the buyers discovered a previously undisclosed restriction would keep the boat from being used in a charter service they wanted to start.

At some point during its 19-year history, the Endless Summer had been registered in Great Britain, and foreign ships are not permitted to engage in coastal trade, such as charter businesses. In the eyes of the U.S. government, once a foreign vessel, always a foreign vessel. Congress had legislation to clear the use restrictions. The bill was passed by the Senate but failed to reach the House of Representatives floor before the holidays.

"We just decided we had to go ahead and sell it because of the potential for deterioration," said Gloucester County Commonwealth's Attorney William H. Shaw III. "We don't want to damage the boat by keeping it there this winter."

Nuclear Utilities Face Billion Dollar Abandonments

By RICHARD T. PIENIAK
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Utilities building over-budget nuclear plants are being forced by economics to consider an almost unthinkable possibility — walking away from multi-billion-dollar investments without ever generating any electricity.

Whether or not the plants ever open, it figures that consumers will foot the bill.

At the two-unit Marble Hill plant in Indiana, for example, the choice is to abandon with $2.5 billion spent, or invest at least $3 billion more with no assurance the reactors will ever operate.

Public Service of Indiana, which is building Marble

Hill, wants to increase electricity rates more than 50 percent over the next six years even though the first unit won't be ready until 1988 at the earliest.

"It comes down to somebody has to pay," says Bill Perrin, a managing director for the investment firm First Boston Corp. "In our society, somebody has to pay for the cost of existence. Somebody has to pay for the luxuries."

Adds Steve Zimmerman, a Standard & Poor's Corp. rating officer. "The owners bear the burden but the ratepayers will share it too."

While Perrin believes utility bankruptcies cannot be ruled out "in the current climate — political, social and financial," he thinks the prospect is unlikely. "The lights are not going to go out."

But even utility officials and state regulators don't rule out the possibility of bankruptcy for utilities saddled with projects up to 12 years behind schedule and more than 1,000 percent over budget.

In Michigan, for example, the state Public Service Commission is studying means of maintaining service if Consumers Power Co., which is building the Midland nuclear reactors, goes under.

"Nuclear economics is not for the fainthearted. The annual cost overruns alone equal the government budgets of many nations," according to a study released two weeks ago by Worldwatch Institute, an independent research organization that analyzes global problems and is financed in part by United Nations organizations.

On Wall street, the massive construction cost overruns have led to drastic drops in stock prices for the utilities involved.

And the bond ratings for a dozen utilities — in Kansas, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Hampshire — have been lowered to speculative grades, raising the cost of borrowing even more.

Some utilities, including Public Service Company of New Hampshire, are paying dividends with borrowed money.

Other utilities involved in nuclear plant construction are at the brink of similar financial ills, with bonds rated at the lowest investment grade.

The common stock of 10 utilities building nuclear plants hit new lows for the year last Thursday, the day after a governor's commission in Indiana recommended abandonment of Marble Hill.

Such stock market problems further increase cost overruns as utilities are forced to pay higher interest rates to stimulate purchase of their bonds.

"Nuclear power plants completed in the United States in the next few years will generally cost five to 10 times as much as originally projected — overruns of more than $2 billion each," Worldwatch said. "And some projects make that figure look like a bargain."

Long Island's Shoreham plant, for example, was supposed to cost $261 million but will cost about $4 billion.

The cost of delay can be as high as $1.5 million per day, mostly for interest payments.

In most cases, utility officials say they'll seek to have consumers pay the construction bills if nuclear projects are abandoned.

"If the state refuses to let us get those costs back in a reasonable way, investors will assume that putting their money into any Indiana utility is risky business. No one is well served by such a policy," warned Hugh A. Barker, chairman of Public Service of Indiana, which is building the Marble Hill plants.

Indiana Gov. Robert D.

Orr's task force recommended that the utility's shareholders "absorb the substantial portion" of all Marble Hill costs and that consideration be given to other financial remedies, including possible elimination of dividends, before any rate hikes are granted.

But Barker said such conditions would require the utility to "risk seriously impairing our levels of service to customers and our ability to raise capital."

Full recovery of costs will be sought by Public Service of New Hampshire if its Seabrook units don't open because the investment was made "in the best interest of the customer," said spokeswoman Myra Rivera.

"They were going to reap the benefit, so if for some reason it's not completed, they should pay the cost."

And pay they will.

Unless another option is devised to cushion what consumer groups call "rate shock," the price of Long Island's electricity will increase about 60 percent over three years once Shoreham opens. Generally, utilities cannot pass along construction costs to consumers until the plants go on line.

For Consumers Power customers, the rate hike would be 27.7 percent when Midland opens, provided the utility is granted two rate increases totaling 14.2 percent in 1984. Consumers in a half-dozen other states can expect rate increases of up to 50 percent once nuclear plants begin operation.

Land Reform Program Extended By Government Of El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The rightist-dominated Constituent Assembly has extended for six months the "land to the tiller" phase of El Salvador's controversial land reform program.

The assembly acted Tuesday night at its last session of 1983 but said there would be no further extensions when the six months expire.

The land distribution program, strongly supported by the U.S. government, is intended to reduce the appeal of leftist rebels who have been fighting for four years to overthrow the conservative government.

The "land to the tiller" phase of the program permits peasants to claim title to tracts of up to 17 acres that they have farmed as sharecroppers or renters.

It applies to farms of 75 to 245 acres.

Agrarian experts estimate as many as 100,000 peasants are eligible to claim a total 500,000 acres under the reform program, but so far only 48,000 have placed claims to about 192,000 acres.

A civilian-military junta decreed the land reform program in March 1980.

Guillermo Guevara Lacayo, a leader of the moderate Christian Democrat Party, said the assembly extended the "land to the tiller" program because many peasants in combat areas had been unable to participate.

Samuel Maldonado, leader of the Democratic Popular Union, which claims some 200,000 peasants and laborers as members, said many peasants who tried to take advantage of the law have been forced off their property by the former landowners.

The first phase of the land reform program expropriated plantations larger than 1,200 acres and divided them among peasant cooperatives.

The second phase, affecting many prosperous coffee farms, sparked the greatest opposition. After months of bitter debate, the Constituent Assembly incorporated that program into the new constitution on Dec. 13, but sharply limited the amount of land that would be affected.

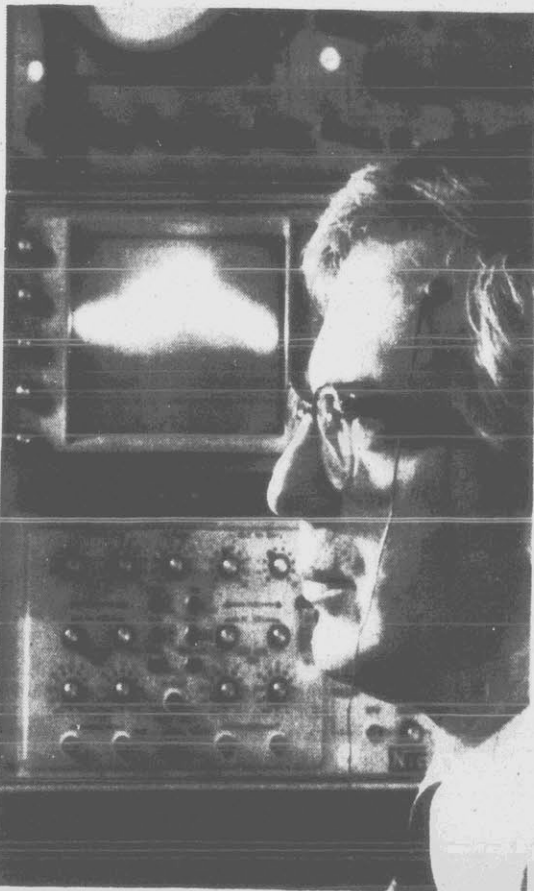

It provides for the redistribution of farms between 600 and 1,200 acres. The original plan, supported by the Christian Democrats, would have applied to farms of between 245 and 1,200 acres.

In another development, a spokesman for the state railway company said leftist rebels destroyed five freight cars in a dynamite attack Monday night on a train in Usulután province. No casualties were reported.

Rail traffic to the eastern part of the country would be interrupted for at least a week until the damaged track is repaired, the spokesman said.

Other guerrillas clashed with army troops engaged in a drive to clear them from an area of northeastern El Salvador.

BRAINWAVE ANALYSIS — Scientists at the Westinghouse Research and Development Center near Pittsburgh use a technology known as "visual evoked potentials" to investigate how brain waves analysis might someday be used to monitor on-the-job stress and prevent serious accidents. By studying brain wave patterns generated by the visual nervous system, researchers can determine how long it takes an individual to recognize and respond to data displayed by such instruments. Stanton then served with the Williamston Police Department for eight years, and obtained a degree in business administration from Martin Community College before joining the Greenville department in August 1981. He was promoted to juvenile officer in September 1982.

Albertine, a Boston native, joined the police department here in March 1977. A police science graduate of PCC in 1982, Albertine has been assigned to the department's detective division for the past five years.

Hardy, a native of the Ayden area, graduated from Farm Life High School at Vanceboro, then did construction work before joining the police department here in August 1977. He was promoted to the rank of corporal in December 1982 and is presently enrolled in the police science curriculum at PCC.

Heinz, a native of Houghton, N.Y., attended Houghton College and received an A.B. degree in education from Bethany College in Sussex, New Brunswick, Canada, before coming to Greenville in 1981 to teach at Trinity Christian School. He joined the police department in June 1982.

Fordham, a Lenoir County native, graduated from Jones Senior High School, served in the U.S. Army and is currently a member of the North Carolina National Guard. Enrolled in the police science program at PCC, Fordham is a graduate of the Army's military police school and was a police officer in Kinston from April 1979 until April 1982, when he joined the Greenville department.

Simonowich, a Virginia native, worked as a machinist at the Norfolk Naval Shipyard, then served two years in the Army in Germany before joining the police department here in March 1971. A Coastal Plain Law Enforcement Academy graduate, Simonowich was assigned to the department's traffic division when he first came to Greenville.

In addition to the promotions, Holmes announced that the department's present structure of four rotating uniformed shifts will change Jan. 29 to include three non-rotating shifts.

Holmes said officers assigned to the day and midnight shifts will work five 8-hour days a week, while officers assigned to the evening shift will work four 10-hour days a week.

The chief said the coming shift changes are based on a recently completed manpower deployment study and are designed to assign personnel according to workload.

According to Holmes, the new shift structure will equalize the workload and response time, maximize officer safety, preformance and efficiency, and "match people to the workload by time of day and day of week," as much as possible.

The chief said too that a support services division will be added to the department's uniformed and detective divisions, possibly by Feb. 1.

He said the new support services division will include records, communications and community relations sections. The community relations section, Holmes said, will handle crime prevention, juvenile and community relations officers.

Port Phosphate Accord Signed

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — The State Ports Authority and N.C. Phosphate Corp. signed an agreement Tuesday for construction of a $31 million phosphate handling operation at the Morehead City port.

The project, a key part of the company's plans to mine phosphate ore in Beaufort County, calls for building facilities on port property and payments to the state.

N.C. Phosphate, which plans to begin shipping phosphate in 1986 from a mining operation now under construction, will add to existing phosphate handling facilities at the port used by Texasgulf Inc.

Company president R. Ward Grosz said the company was committed to overcoming any possible environmental harm from the project.

danger: state-sponsored terrorism.

"I wholeheartedly agree" with the report's finding "that the United States and its military institutions are by tradition and training inadequately equipped to deal with the fundamentally new phenomenon of state-supported terrorism."

"I do not believe therefore that the local commanders, on the ground, men who have already suffered quite enough, should be punished for not fully comprehending the nature of today's terrorist threat," he said.

Almost all the security measures proposed in the report have been implemented, he said.

White House officials said that includes new physical barriers to block future attacks. In addition, they said, Reagan has ordered Pentagon officials to study the possible redeployment of the Marines from near the Beirut airport to ensure their safety.

The investigation also showed that intelligence was inadequate to prevent the attack, but that casualties were properly handled. The injured were evacuated to U.S. military hospitals in Europe despite the presence of nearby Israeli hospitals.

One official said the report concludes that "the entire operational chain of command bears responsibility for a failure to initiate action to ensure the security of the U.S. contingent" of the four-nation, peacekeeping force which has been in Lebanon since last year.

UNC Breezes To Final With Win Over Iona

By The Associated Press
It was an easy night for North Carolina and a tough one for Texas-El Paso although the results were exactly the same: a berth in the finals of a holiday basketball tournament.

North Carolina, a perennial power and the nation's top-ranked team, breezed by Iona 74-61 Tuesday night in the opening of the Holiday Festival Tournament at Madison Square Garden in New York. The high-flying Tar Heels gunned into Thursday night's finals against eighth-ranked St. John's, a 56-52 winner over Fordham in the other half of the opening doubleheader.

Meanwhile, up-and-coming Texas-El Paso, ranked No. 16, squeezed by No. 15 Michigan 72-71 in the Sun Bowl tourney in El Paso and headed into tonight's final against Arizona, a 51-49 winner in overtime over Texas Tech.

In other action involving the nation's ranked college basketball teams, No. 10 Wake Forest walloped Auburn 76-69 in the Gator Bowl tourney in Jacksonville, Fla., and 19th-ranked Oregon State rolled past Boise State 61-42 in the opening of the Far West Classic in Portland.

Top Twenty
With All-Americans Michael Jordan and Sam Perkins, North Carolina's top two scorers, having off-days, sophomore Brad Daugherty scored 22 points to lead the Tar Heels over the outmanned Gaels.

Daugherty, a 6-foot-11 center, scored 13 of his points in the first half as the Tar Heels raced to a 38-20 advantage at intermission. The halftime lead was the Tar Heels' largest of the game and was equaled several times, including 70-52 with less than two minutes to play on two foul shots by forward Matt Doherty, who scored 15 points.

Jordan hit only two of 12 shots and scored eight points while Perkins was one of 11 for six.

"They collapsed on me well," said Perkins, "but that opened things for Daugherty and (Matt) Doherty. We're not a one-man team, even though me and Jordan get the attention."

"Jordan pressed a lot," said Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith. "He's human and has a right to fail. But he didn't quit defensively."

Despite playing with a bad cold, Steve Burt led the Gaels with 16 points.

"Brad Daugherty got them going after a 5-5 tie and we got out of our game plan and panicked — and it was over," said Iona coach Pat Kennedy. "In the second half, we went at them and did a good job."

Chris Mulin and Jeff Allen combined for 15 of St. John's last 20 points to give the Redmen a hard-fought victory over Fordham.

"This was New York basketball the way it was always played," said St. John's coach Lou Carnesecca. "Every shot was magic. We were most fortunate tonight."

Said Carnesecca of Fordham, "We had to chase them up and down Eighth Avenue all night. They played tenacious defense and made big, big buckets. Our foul shooting won the game."

The Redmen made 24 of 28 free throws.

Fred Reynolds converted a pair of free throws with six seconds remaining as Texas-El Paso defeated Michigan. Reynolds, a junior forward, was fouled intentionally as UTEP held a 70-69 lead. His free throws gave the Miners a three-point lead and their eventual winning margin.

"I knew free throws were going to mean the difference," said UTEP Coach Don Haskins, "and we were fortunate that Fred made his. They have a good inside game with (Tim) McCormick and great outside shooters with (Leslie) Rockymore and (Antoine) Joubert."

Eddie Smith scored five of his 19 points in overtime to lift Arizona over Texas Tech. Arizona guard Steve Kerr sent the game into overtime with a 20-foot jumper with six seconds left in regulation.

Anthony Teachey scored 14 points and Kenney Green and Delaney Rudd had 13 each as Wake Forest used a balanced offense to blast Auburn in the Gator Bowl Classic. Ronnie Murphy sank a pair of free throws with 16 seconds remaining and added a slam-dunk just before the buzzer as host Jacksonville upset Villanova 67-63 in the night's other game.

Charlie Sitton scored 16 of his game-high 22 points in the second half to power Oregon State over Boise State in the Far West Classic. Sitton, a 6-8 senior forward, hit 10 of 14 field goal attempts in leading the Beavers to their fifth victory in seven games.

"We had a little better defense with our guards because we were able to keep them rested," said Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller. "With Tyrone (Miller) back, it gives us another strong inside and outside person."

Miller and two other Oregon State players missed the first six contests of the year for selling complimentary game tickets in violation of NCAA rules.

In the second game, Washington State nipped Portland 53-53 as Bryan Pollard and Otis Jennings sank two free throws apiece in the final 2:10 of overtime.

Wills Released On Bail For Car Theft Charge

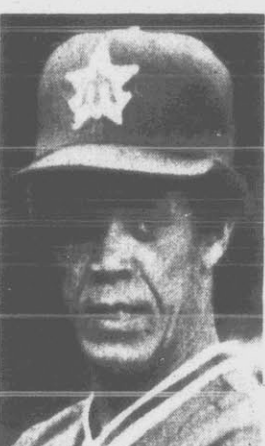

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Maury Wills, former base-stealing king and Most Valuable Player of the National League in 1962, is free on $1,500 bail after police arrested him for investigation of car theft, officers said.

A white substance found in a glass vial beside Wills field-tested positive as cocaine, but further tests were needed to be sure, police Capt. John Sparkenbach said Tuesday. Wills was booked only in the car-theft case.

The former Los Angeles Dodger was arrested at about 5 a.m. Tuesday after two police officers pulled him over on Harbor Freeway when they spotted a broken window on the passenger side, said Sparkenbach.

Wills, 51, who briefly managed the Seattle Mariners, was freed after posting bail. A Dodger executive confirmed that Wills was admitted to an Orange County rehabilitation unit for an unspecified problem last August. Fred Claire, executive vice president of the Dodgers, said the club had urged that Wills go and Wills agreed. Claire said he took Wills to the center.

"A broken window in a newer-model car might indicate it was stolen," Sparkenbach said in explaining why Wills was stopped. "So the officers ran the license plate and our computer system said it was stolen from (nearby)

Maury Wills

Lakewood."

It was listed stolen in April, Sparkenbach said.

"After the stop, the officers observed in plain view a six-inch glass vial with a white substance. It was field-tested positive for cocaine. We'll have to have a lab test on it, also," he said. "Additionally, they observed a clear-glass water-type pipe. That's commonly used in using cocaine."

Sparkenbach said the test-tube vial which had the white substance weighed 20 grams gross (the test tube and the substance). The water pipe weighed 42 grams gross, he said.

Sparkenbach said Wills, who told officers he lives in nearby Playa del Rey and is self-employed, was free on $1,500 bail and is scheduled to appear for arraignment in the Compton court on Jan. 6.

The switch-hitting Wills played for the Dodgers from 1959-66. He was traded to the Pittsburgh Pirates, where he played for two years. He then went to the Montreal Expos in the expansion draft after the 1968 season.

Early in the 1969 campaign, he was traded to the Dodgers, where he played through the 1972 season.

After that, Wills worked as a baseball commentator for NBC on Game of the Week telecasts. He was named as manager of the Mariners before the 1980 season. He was fired May 6, 1981, after allegedly ordering groundskeepers at the Seattle Kingdome to enlarge the batter's box for a game against Oakland. He was replaced by Rene Lachemann.

Wills had a lifetime batting average of .281 with 2,134 hits, 20 home runs, 458 runs-batted-in and 586 stolen bases.

Wills broke the longtime single-season stolen base record of 96 set by Ty Cobb when he stole 104 bases in 1962. That standard has since been broken by Lou Brock and Rickey Henderson.

Wills was called up by the Dodgers as a 26-year-old rookie during the 1959 season and helped spark them to the National League pennant and a World Series victory over the Chicago White Sox. He also helped Los Angeles win world championships in 1963 and 1965.

District Court Judge To Decided Sims' Fate

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. District Court in Detroit is a neutral field, and neither the Houston Gamblers nor the Detroit Lions will have an edge when a judge determines where Billy Sims will play football next season, attorneys say.

Judge Robert E. DeMascio consolidated all further legal action in Sims' contract dispute with the two teams in federal court Tuesday, saying he would decide on Jan. 25 where Sims plays in 1984.

The ruling came after DeMascio refused to dismiss a suit by the Lions of the National Football League seeking to void Sims' contract with the United States Football League's Gamblers.

He also denied the running back's request to lift a Texas court's temporary restraining order barring Detroit from interfering with Sims' contractual relations with the Gamblers.

"There's no such thing as a home field advantage in federal court," said Detroit attorney Edward Bell. "However, trying the case in federal court has tremendous value in that at least there will be some definitive position as to the validity of the contract."

David F. Simon, another lawyer not involved in the case, said the Lions attorneys might get only a "psychological advantage" by having the case heard in Detroit.

"In this case, you prefer to have it in your own backyard," said Simon. "You're in the judge's court every day, and that has a psychological advantage for the attorneys. (Gamblers co-owner Jerry) Argovitz will probably retain local attorneys to negate that advantage though."

DeMascio also prohibited the two teams from talking to Sims about anything related to the disputed contracts.

Argovitz, who had been Sims' agent, wanted the case to be tried in federal courts because of the geographical diversity of the suit's principals.

during the first period of the NBA game Tuesday at the Summit. (AP Laserphoto)

Streak Bothered Clippers Coach

By The Associated Press
Although he was around for only 16 of the San Diego Clippers' near-record 29 game losses in a row, Coach Jim Lynam admitted the streak was bothering him.

"It starts preying on your mind after a while," said Lynam after the Clippers ended a 10½-month string of losses away from home with a 110-95 victory over the Houston Rockets Tuesday night.

"We were very, very aware of it," said Lynam, who is in his first year as a National Basketball Association coach. "It's something you read about all the time. It hinders your ability to play with confidence. It's like you're waiting for something bad to happen."

Forward Terry Cummings and guard Norm Nixon made something good happen against the Rockets by scoring 28 points apiece.

The Clippers, whose last previous road victory was a 112-102 triumph at Golden State on Feb. 17, were three short of the record of 32 consecutive road losses over two seasons by the 1953-54 Washington Bullets.

In other NBA games, it was Indiana 115, Milwaukee 104; Washington 116, New Jersey 106; Detroit 140, Portland 100; Atlanta 112, Dallas 109; Boston 115, San Antonio 100;

Chicago 102, New York 96; Philadelphia 112, Kansas City 109; Utah 111, Golden State 102 and Los Angeles 118, Denver 116.

Houston jumped to an 11-1 lead, but the Clippers fought back for a 27-24 edge at the end of the first quarter as Nixon scored 10 points.

In the second period, Cummings responded with 15 points and grabbing 10 rebounds as the Clippers built a 58-42 advantage.

Cummings, who finished with 19 rebounds, called the streak "just one of those things. I think what bothered me was that we had such a good record at home (9-4) and then we go out on the road and have such a bad record. The streak didn't matter that much to me."

Jazz 111, Warriors 102
Utah won at Golden State for its seventh straight victory as Darrell Griffith scored 27 points, including the Jazz' first 11 of the fourth period.

The Warriors, who got 25 points from Joe Barry Carroll, led by seven early in the final period before the Jazz rallied.

Adrian Dantley scored 22 points and Mark Eaton added eight blocked shots for Utah.

Bulls 102, Knicks 96
Chicago beat New York at home for its sixth straight victory after a 5-14 start as rookie guard Ennis Whatley scored a season-high 21 points.

Whatley's layup with 8:42 left in the third quarter gave the Bulls their first lead of the game at 58-57, but they never relinquished the lead after they got it. New York, which got 24 points from Ray Williams, was outscored 34-17 in the third period.

Celtics 115, Spurs 100

Boston won at San Antonio as Larry Bird scored 38 points to hand the Spurs their fifth straight defeat.

The Celtics, who have won four in a row, held the Spurs to just 40 percent shooting from the field, including 3-of-18 by George Gervin.

76ers 112, Kings 109

Philadelphia won in front of a record crowd of 17,009 at Kansas City on Bobby Jones' three-point play with two seconds left.

Julius Erving scored 29 points and Moses Malone 25 to lead the 76ers, who have won six straight games. Eddie Johnson had 34 points for the Kings.

Pacers 115, Bucks 104

At Indianapolis, Indiana beat Milwaukee for its second straight victory, the first time in more than a year the Pacers won two in a row.

Rookie Steve Stipanovich scored 20 of his team-high 24 points in the first half. Sidney Moncrief led the Bucks with 26 points.

Lakers 118, Nuggets 116

Jamaal Wilkes scored 24 points, including a six-foot jumper with five seconds left that lifted Los Angeles over Denver after the Lakers had blown a big lead at home.

Denver trailed by 17 points late in the third quarter before tying the score at 116-116 on Kiki Vandeweghe's three-point play with 1:11 remaining.

Pistons 140, Blazers 100

At Pontiac, Detroit manhandled Portland as John

Long scored 27 points and Kelly Tripucka 25.

The Pistons led 70-52 at halftime and then turned the game into a rout by outscoring the Trail Blazers 22-10 in the first 5:38 of the third quarter.

Hawks 112, Mavericks 109

Dan Roundfield and Dominique Wilkins led an Atlanta rally in the final minutes as Dallas lost its fifth straight, all on the road.

The Mavericks, who got 32 points from Mark Aguirre, led 92-83 with 8:18 remaining. Wilkins finished with 23 points while Roundfield scored 10 of his 22 in the fourth period.

Bullets 116, Nets 106

At Landover, Greg Ballard, who scored all of his 16 points in the second half, put Washington ahead to stay with 3:23 left.

Ballard's basket put the Bullets in front 105-104 and they outscored New Jersey 13-2 the rest of the way.

Walsh Feeling Good About 49ers Of 1983

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — Coach Bill Walsh of the San Francisco 49ers says he feels just as good about his 10-6 team as he did about the 13-3 team of 1981.

"We're capable of playing great football. The atmosphere now is one of a great football team," Walsh said before practice Tuesday. "The pressure is on, and I wouldn't want to be coaching any other team now. I can tell you that."

It's National Football League playoff pressure. The 49ers, National Conference West champions, are preparing for a Saturday game at Candlestick Park with the Detroit Lions, the NFC Central champs who finished 9-7.

Walsh's 1981 players, most of whom had no postseason experience, handled the pressure very well. They have Super Bowl championship rings to prove it.

"I think we're more talented than in 1981. I've said that all along. We're improved, with players like Bubba Paris, Roger Craig and Wendell Tyler," Walsh said, naming three men who were not on the roster in 1981.

Paris, a 295-pound offensive tackle, and fullback Craig are in their first NFL seasons. Paris missed 1982, which would have been his rookie year, because of a knee injury.

Tyler, the former Los Angeles Rams' running back, joined the team this year and rushed for 856 yards, the most by a 49er since 1977.

In trying to explain why the 1983 team could not match the 13-3 record of two years ago, Walsh said, "We lost a lot of close games, which we won in 1981."

He added, "The opposition is much better now, too."

The 49ers go into the playoffs in good health, except for the loss of Dwight Clark, the wide receiver who suffered a knee injury in the Dec. 19 victory over the Dallas Cowboys.

"We can't let the loss of Dwight Clark affect us. Mike Wilson and Dwight Clark are very similar athletes," Walsh said, referring to the player who will step into the starting lineup in place of Clark, one of the NFL's leading receivers the past four seasons.

"Naturally, Dwight has been a big factor in our offense. But when you get into the playoffs, you don't talk of negatives," Walsh added.

Two years ago, the 49ers beat the New York Giants in their playoff opener and, because of their 13-3 record, were home for the NFC title game in which they beat Dallas.

The Washington Redskins, 14-2, will be the host team for the title game if they beat the Los Angeles Rams on Sunday. If the Rams upset the Skins, the 49ers or Lions will be the host team.

Sipe's Move 'Big Step' For QB

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.

AP — Brian Sipe says his decision to move from the National Football League to the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League is a "big step."

"This marks a big step in my life, a big step in my career," said Sipe, who left the Cleveland Browns after 12 years, including the first two on their taxi squad, to become the Generals quarterback.

"I hope to bring New Jersey a championship. It's something that in this stage of my career is primary. I'm not interested in setting records or goals. All I want to do is win football games and win the championship," Sipe added Tuesday at a news conference where he and Cincinnati Bengals offensive guard Dave Lapham were introduced as the newest Generals players.

Generals Coach Walt Michaels, the former coach of the New York Jets, said, "I don't see why he can't take us to a championship. But no one man can do it. One could, we'd be playing one-man football."

Sipe said the Browns "gambled and lost" by not offering him a contract before the 1983 season began.

"In my mind they gambled. Perhaps they gambled. I wouldn't play well in the summer training camp. Perhaps they thought Paul McDonald would perform better," Sipe said. "They gambled and lost as far as I'm concerned."

Sipe, who just completed the final year of a three-year pact in Cleveland that paid him $315,000 in the final season, signed with the Generals for a reported $1.9 million over two years with an option year.

The 34-year-old quarterback said he reached an agreement with the Generals Nov. 22 and hammered out the final details last week, but he added the Browns were "given ample opportunity to respond" with a better deal. The Browns reportedly offered Sipe $2 million over four years.

Cleveland owner Arthur Modell said Monday, after the Generals announced they had signed Sipe, that the Browns planned to start the four-year veteran McDonald next season.

McDonald, who has started at quarterback several times over the past two years, signed a new contract with the Browns on Dec. 18 that goes through the 1986 season.

"To put Paul McDonald and Brian in the same category is a joke," New Jersey owner Donald J. Trump said at Tuesday's news conference. "Paul McDonald really had very little to do with my decision. My mind was made up more than a month prior to McDonald signing," said Sipe. "My decision was based on the eagerness on the part of the Generals and Donald Trump, in particular, to have me be at or near the center of some good things to come."

"Frankly, that's what turns me on — championships or at least the pursuit of it," he added.

Earlier, in a farewell news conference in Cleveland, Sipe said, "I think it is time for a new experience, new horizons. Twelve years is a long time to be in any one city playing for any one franchise."

"I've been in a competitive rut here," Sipe said. "I feel I can go over to a new league that I feel is gaining credibility by leaps and bounds and in the very near future will be comparable to the NFL."

Sipe guided the Browns to a 9-7 record this past season, capping it with four touchdown passes in a 30-17 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers in the final regular season game. He passed for 3,566 yards this season, with 26 touchdowns.

Sipe's best year was 1980, when he was named the NFL's Most Valuable Player for hitting 37 of 554 passes for 4,132 yards and 30 touchdowns. In his NFL career, Sipe passed for 23,713 yards, with 154 touchdowns.

Sipe will be united in the Generals backfield with 1982 Heisman Trophy winner Herschel Walker, the USFL's rushing leader when New Jersey finished 6-12 last season.

Lapham said he was looking forward to playing for the Generals so "impact guys like Brian Sipe and Herschel Walker can perform."

"I'll do my best to keep Brian clean and keep Herschel untouched. That's what it's all about," said Lapham, a 10-year veteran with Cincinnati.

The Generals traded fullback Dwight Sullivan and linebacker Steve Hammond to the Los Angeles Express for the right to sign Sipe, who played at San Diego State. The Express hold the rights to all players who attended San Diego State.

Sipe and Lapham bring to four the number of NFL starters the Generals have signed since Trump purchased the club in September. Gary Barbaro, an All-Pro safety with the Kansas City Chiefs, and Seattle Seahawks defensive back Kerry Justin will be with the Generals when training camp begins next month in Orlando, Fla.

Trump also said the Generals had signed several other NFL players, but was not ready to make an announcement because they were involved in playoff games.

Parker Not Worried About Fan Reaction

CINCINNATI AP — Dave Parker, the Cincinnati Reds' big catch in this year's free-agent baseball sweepstakes, says he isn't worried about the reception Reds fans will give him in 1984.

"I was well received as an opposing player," Parker, who played 11 years for the Pittsburgh Pirates, said Tuesday. "I think I'll be even better received now that I'm a Red."

Parker, 32, who will be returning to play in the city where he was reared, said he expects to hit .300 and drive in 100 runs for Cincinnati in 1984. Manager Vern Rapp has already told Parker he will play right field and bat fourth in the lineup.

The Reds, rebuilding after two consecutive last-place seasons, have also served notice they expect him to provide field leadership for what will be a young lineup, Parker said.

Asked what his salary is, he quipped, "Somewhere from $20 to a million dollars."

Parker signed a contract reportedly worth $1.6 million for its two years. But he played down the money, saying he is happy to be back in his old hometown and to be playing for the Reds.

GINGERBREAD HOUSE — Fourteen-year-old Brian Conville of Vail (Colo.) shovels the driveway of his home which has begun to look like a real gingerbread house. Snowplows in the area are having a hard time keeping up with snow removal as it has snowed for 48 days in a row. Skiing in the Rockies is excellent, and Vail has received more than twice its average snowfall for this time of year. (AP Laserphoto)

Woman Who Saw Hit-And-Run Death Reports 45 Years Later

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The memory of a speeding car striking a man on a dark country road haunted a woman for 45 years, and she finally confessed that her long-dead stepfather was the driver, police said.

Authorities would not identify the stepfather — dead for 20 years — or the woman. But officers believe the fatal hit-and-run is solved, even though the evidence is circumstantial and there is no one to prosecute.

On Feb. 27, 1938, Peter

Pico, a 44-year-old ranch worker, was found dead on a rural road about 35 miles north of Santa Barbara.

He had been walking home about 3 a.m. when the hit-and-run driver struck. There were no skid marks, indicating the driver never slowed.

No evidence was found, and police eventually forgot the case.

But a girl who was riding in the car remembered.

Last week, Santa Barbara police officer Skip Bond answered a phone call from a Los Angeles woman in her 30s. Her voice was sincere, and the story, though strange, was convincing.

"It sounded like it could have happened," Bond said.

The woman told him she'd spent two months of sleepless nights, tormented by the recurring vision of her stepfather's car striking an object in the road 45 years earlier. She also remembered the distress of being told to keep quiet.

Since the death occurred in an unincorporated area of Santa Barbara County, Bond referred the woman to Lorin McRae of the California Highway Patrol.

She was 8 or 9 years old when it happened, the woman told McRae. She was riding in the car with her stepfather, her mother, brother and sister late one night. Her stepfather was driving without a license, and had the headlights off to evade police.

Suddenly, there was the sound of something being struck.

Her mother told the stepfather to stop because he'd hit a man. He refused, saying he'd get in trouble and go to jail. He insisted he struck a deer.

At home, her parents continued to argue. The stepfather said he could go to jail for driving without a license. Then he went outside and washed the car.

The next day, the girl heard that a man named Peter Pico had been killed the night before in a hit-and-run accident. Her stepfather told the family to forget what happened.

The next year her mother died, and the girl was sent to Los Angeles to live with her grandmother. The stepfather went his own way and died in 1963.

But the woman's flashbacks to the February night continued through the years. And last summer, after her grandmother died, they became much stronger and clearer, she told McRae.

McRae found Pico's death certificate, which said he'd been killed in a hit-and-run accident. He also found the man who investigated the case, Orville H. Ellis, a retired CHP officer, commander and inspector.

Ellis remembered walking back and forth along the highway, searching for evidence, McRae said.

"As far as he can tell, the stuff I've got substantiates her story," McRae said. "It's surprising that everything fit together. It's all circumstantial, of course, and there can be no prosecution in it, but at least it's solved."

He does not know if there are any remaining survivors of Pico, but he knows the woman is resting more easily in Los Angeles.

"She told me that the day she called was the first time she'd had any sleep in two months," McRae said.

Rural Counties Ahead In Draft Registration

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — While North Carolina's draft registration is better than the national average, officials are concerned that young men in rural counties are more conscientious than those near urban centers.

"There may be a little more patriotism out there in rural counties," said William H. McCachren, state selective service director. He said that while the state registered 99 percent of those eligible compared with 96.5 nationwide, only 85 percent of Forsyth County men born in 1963 had signed up through the end of October.

In Guilford County, 90 percent had signed up, while in Mecklenburg County the rate was 80 percent and in Wake County it was 85.

By contrast, mostly rural counties such as Randolph and Rockingham each were over 100 percent.

The number of potential registrants used to determine compliance percentages is only an estimate because it is based on census projections, which accounts for figures exceeding 100 percent.

But McCachren and other officials said those who haven't signed up may simply be unaware of the law.

To remedy that, Mc-cachren, a retired lieutenant commander in the U.S. Navy reserve, has begun a public awareness program.

He asked Col. Donald L. Shaw, a journalism professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and a U.S. Army reservist, to visit radio and television stations and newspapers across the state and hand out information on the selective service system.

Materials are being sent to schools, speakers are being made available for school career-day activities and radio spots featuring N.C. State basketball coach Jim Valvano have been produced.

If there are draft protesters in North Carolina, the selective service is unaware of it, McCachren said. "We have not had any vocal individual to say he's not going to register," he added.

Men who are permanent residents of the United States and its territories are required to sign up within 30 days of their 18th birthdays regardless of whether they are citizens of another country or are physically or mentally impaired.

Those seeking deferment can take the matter up with their local draft board if the draft is activated, which would require congressional action.

The penalty for not registering is a fine of $10,000 and up to five years in prison.

To check for compliance, selective service officials periodically receive a list of names of licensed drivers from the state Division of Motor Vehicles. Those on the list who are eligible for the draft are checked against those who have registered.

Those who have not signed up receive a letter. If they haven't signed up within 60 days, they get another letter.

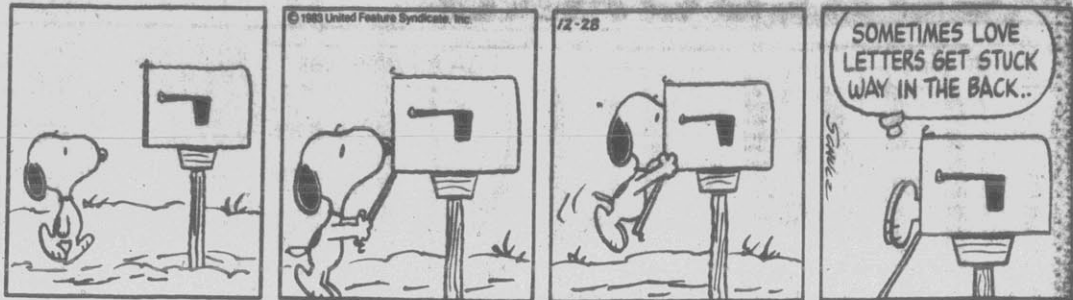

If that doesn't do any good, they get a third letter from the Justice Department telling them their name is being sent to the U.S. Justice Department for prosecution.

"Usually that letter gets a flurry of young men," said McCachren.

Delaware Cuts Its Energy-Use

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Since 1980, Delaware has reduced its total energy consumption by 20 percent.

This, says Honeywell's Energy Management Information Center, is the highest percent reduction in the nation. Hawaii and Montana followed Delaware's lead, each reporting a 9 percent total energy reduction during the same period.

Arctic Air Mass Ends 3-Day Grip On N. Carolina

By The Associated Press
An arctic air mass has ended its three-day grip on North Carolina, leaving in its wake at least 16 weather-related deaths and widespread property damage.

A slow warming trend which began late Monday continued Tuesday, boosting temperatures into the 30s and 40s. The mercury should go even higher today, with highs in the 40s in the mountains to the 60s along the coast.

Along with the warmer air will come widespread precipitation, with occasionally heavy rain in western counties. Lows Wednesday night will range from the 30s in the west to the 60s in the east.

At least 16 deaths had been blamed on the weather as of early today.

The latest reported deaths included Ernest Lane of Wilmington, who collapsed and died of an apparent heart attack early Monday morning when he fled his burning home and Fannie Brown Swinson, 69, who died Saturday night in the Wilmington fire that destroyed her Duplin County home.

In addition, 80-year-old John English was found frozen to death after the Rocky Mount man had been missing since Dec. 23.

Most of the deaths not attributed to exposure were due to fires believed to be caused by faulty heating systems.

Meanwhile, repair crews continued fixing water pipes that froze and burst over the weekend.

In Charlotte, utilities department Director Joe Stowe said crews received hundreds of calls — including 416 requests for emergency water turnoffs since the temperature plunged below freezing at midday Saturday.

"We expect to have a big day today as the temperature goes up and businesses open and find pipes burst," he said.

Greensboro's water and sewer department logged more than 400 calls for help by Monday evening.

"The phones haven't let up all night," said Eva Murphy, a department switchboard operator.

Mike Anderson, a private plumber in Greensboro, said he had a 75-call backlog and had worked 14-hour days recently.

"A lot of people were out of town for the Christmas holidays and when they came back they found water gushing through their ceilings," said Mary Ward, an employee of another plumbing company.

"Our water crew didn't have any holiday," said Stanley City Manager Hugh Hovis Tuesday. "They've been working Christmas Eve, Christmas, the day after Christmas, today."

Hovis said the city crews had to fill their trucks at commercial gas stations because the city's gas pump also fell victim to the cold. It froze on Christmas Eve and didn't start working again until Monday after workers spent two hours melting the frozen line with a light bulb attached to a drop cord.

The Lincoln County Communications Center, reported receiving calls from textile mills that were flooded with water 3 and 4 feet deep.

Plumber Earl McDonald, co-owner of AME Plumbing and Repair in Gastonia, said residents could have kept many of their pipes from freezing had they kept doors to crawl spaces closed, protecting them from wind chill.

Porter suggested some of the breaks could have been prevented if residents had left water dripping in their sinks when the temperatures plunged toward zero.

In Wilmington, plumbers and furnace repairmen compiled long waiting lists and at least one oil dealer told customers they would have to wait two days for heating oil.

It was so cold at Wrightsville Beach that switches on the town incinerator froze, forcing the town to send trash to the county landfill on U.S. 421.

Piedmont residents also had to wage a chilly battle to get their cars and trucks going.

"Diesel engines are hard to crank when it gets cold," said Bill Newell, a tow-truck driver at the Gastonia Auto Clinic. Newell spent much of Monday jump-starting stalled trucks.

Rankin Craig, part-owner of City Wrecker in Gastonia, said the tow truckers' real task will begin if the meteorologists' predictions are right and roads start icing up.

Tokyo's Disneyland Plans To Sell Land

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese owners of Tokyo Disneyland today received authorization to sell 50 acres of unused land near the park that, according to one government official, will yield at least $213.7 million to help pay debts.

Kazunari Yokota, head of land management in the Chiba prefectural government, said the sale was approved after considering "the severe financial situation" the Oriental Land Co. faces due to debts incurred during the construction of Tokyo Disneyland, which opened near Tokyo last April.

The approval breaks a 1962 agreement between Oriental Land and Chiba that the 525 acres of reclaimed land purchased from the prefecture for the construction of Tokyo Disneyland would not be sold to a third party.

Tokyo Disneyland, completed at a cost of $600 million, occupies 201 acres of the purchased land.

The Disneyland owners must pay back at least $398.3 million in bank loans according to Toshio Kagami, managing director of Oriental Land.

Tokyo Disneyland, the third theme-park opened under the world famous Walt Disney name, has drawn 7.5 million visitors so far.

Ex-Missionary Urges Meeting

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP) — A professor of Hebrew and Old Testament at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary has called on Yuri Andropov of the Soviet Union and President Reagan to dismantle all nuclear weapons.

B. Elmo Scoggin, a professor at Southeastern since 1955, wrote letters to both leaders urging them to meet and "agree to dismantle all nuclear weapons, agree to cease making the world a chess board on which to play history's last game." Scoggin, a former missionary to Israel, wrote the letter to fulfill a promise to one of his classes and read it at a breakfast for the school's December graduating class.

Forgotten Musical Of 1937 Is Heading To A New York Revival

By LAWRENCE KILMAN,

Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The idea was to revive a 1937 anti-war musical created by four Broadway giants, including the team that wrote the songs for "The Wizard of Oz." But it took a treasure hunt through archives and closets before a small theater company could reassemble the forgotten book and score.

"Hooray for What," the story of a wacky chemist from Indiana who creates a deadly gas and gets involved in international peace talks, was assembled piece by piece, and finding all the parts took more than six months.

Why go to the trouble of reviving a forgotten musical that includes dated jokes referring to the League of Nations and its pre-World War II Geneva peace talks?

"I think it's a really good musical," said Barbara Vann, one of two artistic directors for the Medicine Show Theater Ensemble, which will revive the musical beginning Wednesday. "It's a pro-peace musical, it's funny and non-polemic and it's got terrific music."

The show was first produced at Broadway's Winter Garden Theater and ran for 200 performances. The music was composed by Harold Arlen, with lyrics by E.Y. "Yip" Harburg, the team that later created the songs for "The Wizard of Oz" and won a 1939 Academy Award for "Over the Rainbow."

The book was written by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, collaborators for a string of Broadway successes, including "Life with Father." Only one copy of the book for "Hooray for What" was found and apparently is all that remains.

"Unfortunately, it's all too topical today," said James Barbosa, the Medicine Show's other artistic director. "It's exactly what's going on in Geneva today — no one is going to give up anything until someone else gives up something."

Ms. Vann and Barbosa, whose 12-member company has put on several other 1930s shows, found the title "Hooray for What" in a book last August, learned it was an anti-war musical and decided to read it.

They checked the Harburg archives at New York and Yale universities, talked to Harburg's widow and son and attorneys for the estates of Lindsay and Crouse. "None of them knew where the book was," Barbosa said.

They finally reached Dorothy Stickney, the actress who is Lindsay's widow. Miss Stickney had a copy "and it seemed to be the only one left in the world. She wouldn't let it out of the house."

But Miss Stickney allowed

Ms. Vann to come to her house to read it, then agreed to allow her attorneys to make a copy.

"If the house had burned down the script would have been gone. So now it will be put in the New York University archives and at the Lincoln Center library so it can't get lost," Barbosa said.

After the book and lyrics were found, the search began for the music. Some came from Harburg archives. Some came from David Bickman, who is writing an Arlen songbook.

"Harold Arlen is quite ill and we didn't want to bother him," Barbosa said. But much of the music was still missing, so Arlen's biographer, Ed Jablonsky, was contacted.

"He got Harold Arlen's permission to go through his closet and found the rest of the music in original manuscript in his original hand," Barbosa said.

When "Hooray for What" opened on Broadway on Dec. 7, 1937, Ed Wynne was the star, Vincent Minnelli the director and Agnes de Mille a choreographer.

The play begins during the Depression in an Indiana town where a chemist has been experimenting with gases. He develops a killer gas and a worker at a munitions factory learns of his discovery.

Through a story that involves spies, counterplots and subterfuge — and a lot of fun — the characters end up in Geneva, where League of Nations countries are holding what are supposed to be peace talks.

A spy steals the formula, but there is a catch — she copies it while looking in the mirror of her compact, so she writes it backwards. A death gas backwards

Hollywood Talent, Management Camps At Odds On Advertising

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Nearly 20 names are crammed into ads for the movie "Christine," and some film industry executives say the cascade of credits is as out of control as the movie's murderous Plymouth sedan.

The "Christine" ad's prolific print includes three mentions each for director John Carpenter and producer Richard Kobritz; two credits for Stephen King, who wrote the book about the car with lethal urges; and the names of the associate producer, two executive producers, one co-producer and the director of photography.

For all those movie-makers, credits represent recognition their colleagues can't miss as well as fatter future contracts. But ego is what prompts many to fight for their credit line.

"I know my mother will be thrilled when my name appears as producer of 'Electric Guitar,'" Arnold Stiefel says of his upcoming concert film. "Since this business is populated by overachievers who had less than wonderful childhoods, it's nice to get a paid-ad credit to make up for that terrible year in the fifth-grade."

The studios, which negotiated many of the credits into contracts as a form of non-monetary compensation, are now complaining about swelling advertising bills, the biggest factor in a recent push by some executives to restrict the fine print.

"In most places in the United States, these names mean little or nothing to the public," says Paramount Pictures Chairman Barry Diller. "They don't sell any tickets. It's getting a little silly."

Diller and other members of the Joint Creative Rights Committee of the studios and Directors Guild of America concede the studios are partly at fault.

But that didn't stop a group of studio executives from placing a recent trade-journal ad urging a reduction in "the cascade of credits" — a call likely to generate hot debate at next year's negotiations with writers' and directors' unions.

"This is like Detroit, where management didn't do its job and now is screaming," says Naomi Gurian, executive director of the Writers Guild of America, West. "They give away these credits in negotiations with lawyers and agents and packagers, and now they're complaining about it."

For example, Burt Reynolds' contract for "The Man Who Loved Women" specifies that his name must appear on any ad that credits the film's director, co-producer and co-writer, Blake Edwards.

So must the names of co-producer Tony Adams, executive producer Jonathan Krane and co-writers Milton Wexler and Geoffrey Edwards.

"It's essentially a chain reaction," says Columbia Pictures' director of contract administration Ivy Orta. "If one is mentioned, they all have to be mentioned."

Producer Marvin Mirisch believes reducing the number of credits would be "beneficial for the entire industry ... You can't read the names anyway on our billboards on Sunset Boulevard. If you try to read that small type, you'll end up in a car accident."

But the Producers Guild of America, an unofficial bargaining group, says the real problem is that studios are crediting people who don't merit it.

"What you see more often than not are people taking producer credits who don't deserve them," guild executive director Charles B. Fitzsimmons says.

"These are usually promoters, agents and packagers, not actual producers. We believe the person who actually made the picture is entitled to credit."

Diller says his committee isn't trying to withhold deserved honors, "but what is the sense of running a group of names to which audiences have no point of reference? The purpose of ads is to sell the movie, not the egos."

Spiro Agnew was the first and only Vice President to resign, right? Wrong. On this date in 1832, John C. Calhoun resigned his post as second in command, citing differences with President Andrew Jackson. Calhoun is one of only two VP's to serve two Presidents — Jackson and John Quincy Adams. There are 27 counties named for Vice Presidents. The largest number — 11 — are named for Calhoun.

Seek Mate For Lonely Giraffe

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It's been a long stretch in solitary for Nicholas, the giraffe at the Indianapolis zoo, but officials say they'll be able to find him some companionship without sticking their necks out.

Nicholas, who was born five years ago at the Brookfield Zoo in Illinois, has fought off a roundworm that has contributed to the deaths of three giraffes at the zoo in the past three years.

But thanks to medication and a special diet, he's regained his health, said zoo curator Julian J. Duval.

Having won his battle with the bloodsucking parasite called Haemonchus contortus means that Nicholas might have some female companionship soon. Zoo officials have started searching for a female giraffe they hope to buy in the spring.

Eastwood Tops At Box Office

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — "Sudden Impact," Clint Eastwood's latest Dirty Harry outing, and "Terms of Endearment," a gentler film that examines a mother-daughter relationship, emerged as box office winners for the Christmas weekend.

But some Hollywood producers and film executives lamented the bitter cold wave over much of the nation that they say cast a pall on their holiday receipts.

"An awful lot of people who normally would have gone to the movies stayed home," said Dick Cook of Walt Disney Productions. "That had to hurt our grosses."

Despite winter's interference, Disney's double bill of "Mickey Mouse's Christmas Carol" and the re-release of "The Rescuers" fared well. Here are the top seven grossing films of the past weekend, followed by the weekend's receipts, the total receipts to date and weeks in distribution:

1. "Sudden Impact," $6 million, $30 million, three weeks.
2. "Terms of Endearment," $4.3 million, $26 million, five weeks.
3. "Scarface," $3.5 million, $15.5 million, three weeks.
4. "Two of a Kind," $2.6 million, $7.8 million, two weeks.
5. "Yentl," $2.6 million, $11.8 million, six weeks.
6. "Uncommon Valor,"

$2.6 million, $7.3 million, two weeks.

7. "Rescuers" and "Mickey Mouse" (Disney), $2.5 million, $6.4 million, two weeks.

Bozo The Clown Now Teaching No-Nos

By FRED ROTHENBERG

AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — At the peak of his business, Bozo the Clown ran a corporate empire he estimates generated $150 million in revenue. Now, he's back in the public eye, preaching his philosophy to kids of all ages that drugs and drink are "Bozo No-Nos."

Larry Harmon, 58, wouldn't be recognized on the street. But once he dons white face, greasepaint, red honker, orange wig, baggy pants and size 18 shoes, he's known worldwide as "your ol' pal Bozo." In his heyday in the 1960s, there were 183 Harmon-trained Bozos performing live on TV around the world.

Next month will mark the 34th consecutive year that "The Bozo Show" has been on TV. WGN in Chicago currently broadcasts it locally and beams it nationwide through some 4,000 cable systems.

Harmon is more than a grown-up kid in a clown suit. He's a sincere, outgoing, energetic spokesman for such causes as UNICEF and CARE. But he's also a shrewd businessman with a showman's flair for promotion, merchandising and kiddie-philosophy.

One of his first breaks in show business was working for Stan Laurel, the long-faced half of the Laurel and Hardy comedy team. Today, he owns the rights to nearly everything connected with Laurel and Hardy.

Harmon was one of television's first entrepreneurs. In 1949, he bought the rights to the Bozo voice from a record company and then created the character for TV. It was the beginning of his dream of spreading laughter.

His method was franchising, the same technique made famous by Col. Sanders and his Kentucky Fried Chicken. Harmon's recipe was cloning clowns to "make them look, laugh and speak like I did. I took the makeup, hair and costume and transplanted me, duplicated me and blueprinted me."

Kids in the 1950s and '60s grew up in different cities watching live Bozos show cartoons, tell jokes and dispense homilies, such as: "It's nice to be important, but it's important to be nice."

But rarely did kids see Harmon, although he has flown to Brazil, Australia and Thailand to fill in for ailing Bozos.

Through his clown schools in Texas, Florida and California, Harmon created an army of Bozos. One graduate was Willard Scott, now the genial weatherman on NBC's "Today" show.

Harmon gave a kid named Fred Silverman his first job in TV — floor manager at WGN. "Bozo was his step to fame," Harmon said. Silverman went on to top programming jobs at all three networks and now is an independent producer.

"My own language is laughter," said Harmon. "I've been all over the world, even visited cannibals and made them laugh. They didn't eat me because they didn't have a recipe for clown a la carte."

In the vernacular, "bozo" means buffoon, which upsets Harmon. "What it really means is a character who offers laughter, warmth, understanding and communication," he said.

Harmon is now traveling

The anti-drug, anti-alcohol campaign is the same message being delivered by Mr. T of "The A-Team," and it's possible that the star of NBC's hit show and Bozo might team up in the future.

Harmon said he is negotiating with "The A-Team" about an appearance.

Imagine this scenario: Mr. T calls Bozo "a fool, a sucker and a clown," and Bozo merely guffaws and tells T, "That's a Bozo No-No."

Boys Lauded In Heroic Rescue

TROY, N.C. AP — Two Montgomery County teenagers are being praised as heroes after they pulled a 16-year-old girl from a burning sports car Thursday night.

Kenneth Sanders and Richard Lynthacum spotted the burning vehicle three miles west of Troy and saw Paige Williams apparently unconscious inside. The two boys yanked her from the burning car seconds before the gas tank exploded.

"We're so grateful," said Paige's mother, Peggy Williams. "We owe her life to these fellows. They did a really heroic thing."

Sanders, 19, and Lynthacum, 17, denied they were heroes. "It's nothing anybody wouldn't have done," Lynthacum said.

Paper War Better Than Ammunition

By VISETSAK SANGUANPONG
Associated Press Writer
NAN, Thailand (AP) — Warplanes that used to drop bombs are now raining leaflets down on one of Thailand's last communist strongholds in an anti-insurgency program that shows paper can be more powerful than ammunition.

Some 6,000 insurgents and their sympathizers handed over their weapons and flags to armed forces Supreme Commander Gen. Arthit Kamlang-ek in a recent ceremony in this rugged northern province bordering communist Laos.

The recent "Operation Bloodless" in Nan province was one of several in the past few years which appear to have won the sympathies of many guerrillas and their supporters, sapping the strength of the once-potent insurgency.

The operations contrast with often counter-productive military measures that were once the heart of the government's strategy.

Col. Pairoj Vannatrong said one of the new government tactics is to have pilots fly over rebel-held areas, dropping leaflets and announcing through a loudspeaker: "We are not using weapons in this operation. We want you to help develop our country. If you wish to surrender, please fly a white flag above your house."

Three days later, white flags were "sprouting all over" in one region where the leaflets were dropped, said Pairoj, the regional deputy commander of a special civilian, police and military team.

He said soldiers then were rushed by helicopter into the settlements with food, clothing and medicine for the impoverished residents.

"The (Communist) Party always promised to provide a good living for us in the future but they did not help," said the headman of a former rebel village. "I ignored the first leaflet from the aircraft, but later there was another and I consulted with our villagers."

Soon after, headman Boon Boon-in, a hill tribesman, and 600 of his followers surrendered.

Military officers in the provincial capital 350 miles north of Bangkok estimate that only several hundred guerrillas and sympathizers are left in Nan.

Countrywide, the ranks of the communists have been slashed to an estimated 3,000 fighters — from some 11,000 in 1978 when the Communist Party of Thailand was proclaiming final victory was in sight.

Confidence in Nan is so strong, in fact, that plans are being made to turn some of the former communist strongholds — invariably located in scenic mountain country — into tourist attractions.

When the fight was primarily military, it was difficult and bloody.

Some 14 major military operations have been staged since 1967, but they were grueling and often ineffectual because the terrain favored the guerrillas.

In one operation, more than 200 soldiers died in ambushes as a 31-mile road was built between two towns in the province.

Nan, considered the last communist stronghold in northern Thailand, once enjoyed a "friendly border" with Laos, which was a major training and rest base for insurgents, as well as a conduit for arms and supplies from China. The relationship ended in 1978-79 when Laos ended its close ties with Peking and moved firmly into the Vietnamese and Soviet orbit.

Kare Tawanton, once known as Comrade Pitak, said in an interview that he spent 10 years with the insurgents in Nan, taking time out for schooling in Laos and then serving as a quartermaster for Chinese weapons destined for Nan.

The 28-year-old has since come over to the government's side. He said he realized his belief that communism would bring a better life to poor farmers was ill-founded.

Officials say poverty among the province's 32,000 people remains a potential danger.

Egypt Sees
New Hope In Birth Rate

By DALIA BALIGH
Associated Press Writer
ZAGAZIG, Egypt (AP) — Egypt has seen the first sustained drop in its population growth in a decade and officials are encouraged, but the population explosion remains what President Hosni Mubarak calls the country's "problem of problems."

There are now 46 million Egyptians and this number increases by a million every 10 months. The people are concentrated in overcrowded cities and in the fertile ribbon of land along the River Nile, an area that takes up less than 4 percent of the whole country.

Egypt presently imports half of its food and agricultural production is steadily falling behind population growth. By the year 2000, the population is expected to reach about 70 million.

Population growth reached a high of 3 percent annually in 1979-1980, but preliminary estimates show a steady decline to 2.6 percent in 1983.
Officials are cautiously optimistic.

"We hope the decrease in the annual growth percentage will continue, there are scientific indications that this trend will continue, but we cannot say 100 percent that this will happen," said
Mohammed Abdel-Salam Salem, director general of one of Egypt's numerous family-planning projects.

Lenni Kangas, director of the population office at the U.S. Agency of International Development here, said the population will continue its rapid growth in the next 25 years.

"We certainly agree with the Egyptian government that the growth is decreasing and this is a good trend," Kangas said. "I get depressed when I think of long-term macro economic terms."

Egypt is U.S. AID's largest population-program recipient. In the past five years, the United States budgeted $67 million for Egyptian family planning, and an additional sum of $102 million has been agreed upon in principle to be paid over the next four years.

Egypt's economic-aid donors in the West are encouraged by Mubarak's attitude toward the population problem, which no Egyptian leader before him dared tackle.

"It is Egypt's problem of problems," Mubarak said in a recent speech. "It deprives us from reaping the harvest of our accomplishments and devours the major part of our development. It is time to take a serious scientific stand to face this problem."

Official figures show that although 90 percent of Egyptians are aware of the population problem, only 26 to 30 percent of women use contraceptives, in comparison to 70 percent in the United States.

To encourage use, the government has subsidized contraceptives and made them easily available through more than 8,000 family-planning centers, health centers and pharmacies all over the country. The pill, the most common method, is sold for 5 cents per cycle, far below free-market price.

Present family-planning policies concentrate on introducing the use of contraceptives and improving the health and education of women and economic standards of the family at the same time. Egypt has a 53 percent illiteracy rate and the annual per-capita income is around $450.

In rural areas, like Zagazig, capital of Sharkeya Province, 52 miles north of Cairo, the use of contraceptives drops to between 2 and 18 percent.

More than half of Egypt's population lives in the countryside, bound by ancient traditions where women have as many children as possible because they bring in extra income when the get older and sons are considered a source of masculine pride.

Egypt's population is overwhelmingly Moslem, and Islam's attitude toward family planning is also seen as an obstacle to family planners.

Diet Effect On Elderly Researched

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — It is, without a doubt, the most expensive hotel in Boston and perhaps anywhere. Guests are cloistered for months on end while scientists feed them with painstaking care.

The idea is to see how diet affects the seemingly unstoppable process of growing old. And it may, if the research succeeds, find ways for old folks to help preserve their bodies far into their retirement years, simply by watching what they eat.

The effects of diet on health have long interested scientists. But getting hard facts is difficult. Compared with a guinea pig or a rat, the human being is an expensive creature to study.

There is no good way to do it unless people can be persuaded to live in confinement for a long time while the experts measure and analyze everything that goes into them, everything that comes out of them and how their bodies change in the process.

This is the goal of the U.S. Department of Agriculture Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University.

Three upper floors of its newly opened building in downtown Boston house a combination hotel and laboratory. Currently it is home to 14 live-in volunteers, and soon this will be expanded to 28. Some stay a day or two, others for six months or more.

It would not be everyone's idea of a good time, even though there are amenities.

Volunteers get comfortable private rooms. They use a rooftop swimming pool, a game room, a library as well as dining rooms and lounges. The center arranges outings to the theater, movies and the beach.

But on the other hand, they must undergo frequent tests to check the effects of their diet on their blood, their bones and their organs. Some have to collect all their feces and urine. At mealtime, they are persuaded to eat everything on their plates.

And they cannot leave the building alone.

If they need to attend a wedding or go to the bank, they must be accompanied by a chaperon. The scientists want to make sure that the volunteers don't spoil their experiments by stopping off for a pizza and beer.

The center recruits these people through churches and elderly groups as well as ads in newspapers and on radio and television.

Why do they come here?

"The biggest motivation is the feeling of making a contribution," said Dr. Robert Russell, the center's director of human studies.

There are other reasons, too. Most of the volunteers are elderly, and some of them are simply lonely.

"We were surprised that a number of people wanted to be in here over Christmas," said Dr. Bess Dawson-Hughes, an endocrinologist. "They didn't have anywhere else they wanted to go."

For others, it's a change of scenery.

"I thought it would be an adventure for me," said Lillian Rosen, 80, who signed up for a five-day stay. "I figured I'd be getting a nice vacation for free. It's as good as any hotel."

The volunteers also receive a daily stipend of $10 or $20, depending on how demanding and unpleasant their tests are. But center officials downplay the money.

"We are looking for volunteers as opposed to human guinea pigs who want a livelihood," said Dr. Jeffrey B. Blumberg, the assistant director.

But the dollars can be an enticement, especially for younger people who are recruited for comparison groups.

"It would be noble to say that I can do something for medical science, and in a way, that's one reason why I'm here," said Robert White, 39, a free-lance graphic artist from Boston. "But I can't deny that the financial incentive was there, too."

However, the daily pay is just a small part of the expense of operating the nutrition center. When all the backup services are taken into consideration, it costs $630 a day for each volunteer.
