Windy Snowstorm Stranding Travelers

By CYNTHIA GREEN
Associated Press Writer

A windy snowstorm building drifts high enough to stop a snowplow stranded travelers in emergency shelters in the Pacific Northwest today while more cold weather records fell from the Midwest deep into the Texas citrus belt.

The death toll from the big chill of the past two weeks climbed past 430 and the damage to fruit and vegetable crops in Florida, Texas and Louisiana topped $400 million.

Freezing rain and snow today prompted winter storm warnings or travel advisories across much of Idaho, Washington, Oregon, northern Utah and north-central Montana.

Record low temperatures were reported in at least 28 cities from the northern Plains to the Great Lakes and south to the Gulf Coast. Some of the coldest readings were noted in Illinois where it was 15 below zero at Springfield, and Indiana, where it was 14 below at Indianapolis. It also was minus 14 at North Platte, Neb.

It was a record 11 below at Toledo, Ohio; Topeka, Kan., and Fort Wayne, Ind.

Another freeze settled on the citrus groves and vegetable fields of southern Texas, where damage to crops from an earlier cold snap had been estimated at $100 million.

The mercury fell to 10 degrees at San Antonio to set an all-time low mark for December that was set only this past Christmas Day. A reading of 8 in Dallas broke a 66-year-old record for the date by six degrees.

In other Texas cities this morning, it was 8 degrees in San Angelo, 9 in Amarillo, 10 in Abilene, 13 in Lufkin, 19 in Austin, 20 in Houston, 15 in Victoria, and 17 in El Paso.

Elsewhere in the South, cities reporting record lows for the date included Nashville, Tenn., 1; Tulsa, Okla., 2; Little Rock, Ark., 5; Tulsa, Okla., 2; Roanoke, Va., 10; and New Orleans, 10.

Authorities have placed a 10-day embargo on the shipment of citrus from Texas and Florida, where freeze damage to crops was estimated at about $300 million.

While that probably will mean an increase in the prices of produce at the supermarket, the deep freeze also is costing the consumer in other ways. The Edison Electric Institute, a trade organization of investor-owned electric utilities, said consumption of electricity between Dec. 18 and Dec. 25 increased 23 percent over the same period last year.

In Texas, insurance officials said the cold spell has caused more than $50 million in damage to property, mainly from broken water pipes.

In northeastern Oregon, stretches of the state's major east-west highway, Interstate 84, were closed overnight because snowslides blocked lanes in the Columbia River Gorge and blowing snow reduced visibility to zero along a 40-mile stretch from La Grande to Baker.

Stranded motorists packed into motels, churches and a National Guard armory in the two towns at either end of the closed portion.

"We've got drifts up there the snowplow can't even go through," said state Trooper Jack Eckrich.

Four to six inches of snow fell in eastern Washington, and officials warned the accumulation had weakened the earlier snowpack, increasing avalanche danger. One slide closed state Highway 2 through Stevens Pass overnight.

Strong chinook winds blasting down the eastern slope of the Rockies, clocked at 70 mph in Livingston, Mont., drifted the snow and created "ground blizzards."

Major roads near Portland, Ore., were closed by more than half an inch of freezing rain Thursday, with ice on runways shutting Portland International Airport for 3½ hours.

About 27,500 customers of Portland General Electric were without power this morning as crews worked to repair lines snapped by ice-topped tree limbs.

In northern Utah, snow and light freezing rain during the night combined with patches of morning fog to make travel hazardous.

The Utah Highway Patrol reported that roads generally were snowpacked in the southern portion of Box Elder County, and there was extensive black ice farther north.

Relief From Bone-Numbing Cold

B-B-B-R-R-R-R-R — Construction workers Floyd Kite, Jeffery Dixon and Mike James get warm by a fire at an apartment complex on Charles Street this morning. Temperature fell once again to below freezing, causing rain that fell Thursday night to become frozen in spots. Forecasters said most of the state would be sunny, windy and cold later today, with highs in the teens and 20s to the west and 30s to the east.

Overnight lows were expected to fall to single digits in the mountains and 20s on the coast. Skies should be partly cloudy along the coast and fair across the rest of the state tonight and Saturday, with highs Saturday mostly in the 30s. The weather outlook for New Year's Day calls for fair skies with highs in the 40s and lows in the 20s.

Jackson On Final Leg Of A Mission To Damascus

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson set out today on the final leg of his journey to Syria, saying he was hopeful of arranging the release of captured U.S. Navy airman Robert O. Goodman Jr.

"We certainly are hopeful," Jackson said when asked during his six-hour stopover at Frankfurt airport whether he expected to bring Goodman back to the United States.

"The point is, if we do nothing, nothing will happen," he told The Associated Press after resting in a VIP lounge after an overnight flight from New York.

Jackson, accompanied by a delegation of U.S. clergymen, left at 2 p.m. for Damascus, the Syrian capital, aboard a commercial flight.

The black civil rights leader told reporters that neither race nor politics played a role in his decision to fly to Damascus. Goodman is also black.

"This is a truly American matter. I have been involved in humanitarian missions in the past," he said.

During an ABC television network interview at the airport, Jackson said it was "really unfair to inject race into this dimension. If Lt. Goodman were white, or Hispanic or Indian or Asian, it would have the same moral imperative ... his presence there is a grim reminder of the low level of relations between Syria and the U.S."

President Reagan has given a cold shoulder to Jackson's initiative, and Syria's defense minister said no release was possible while a "state of war" exists.

Goodman's mother has given her blessing to the trip, but his father said Jackson "should be held responsible" if the effort prolonged the detention.

Goodman, a bombardier-navigator, was wounded and captured Dec. 4 when his attack jet was downed during a raid on Syrian gun positions in Lebanon's central mountains. The pilot of his plane was killed.

Jackson's spokeswoman, Florence Tate, said the delegation would be met in Damascus by someone from the U.S. Embassy, possibly Ambassador Robert Paganelli.

"We don't know what the program there is yet," she said.

Jackson, before leaving New York, said he had "virtual assurance" from the Syrian government that he would at least be able to meet with Goodman, as have Paganelli, the Red Cross, and others.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslems staged nationwide sit-ins at mosques and burned an Israeli flag today to show their support for guerrillas fighting the Israeli occupation of southern Lebanon.

Near the southern port of Tyre, gunmen hidden in an orange grove fired on an Israeli army convoy, U.N. sources said. There were no casualties, but a United Nations convoy was caught in the crossfire, according to the sources.

Spiritual heads of Lebanon's Sunni and Shiite Moslem communities led the sit-ins from Beirut after midday prayers.

And at the Sakiet Al-Ganzir mosque in west Beirut, Moslem youths set fire to a plastic blue-and-white Israeli flag and stepped on its remains. Others chanted anti-Israeli slogans, including, "By fire and gunpowder we will fight the Jews," and some carried banners reading "Lebanon is the graveyard of the Zionists."

In Sidon, Israeli troops with guard dogs entered a mosque and herded out worshippers to conduct a search, state radio and local reporters said. The troops surrounded but did not go into the Zaatari mosque.

Sheik Mohammed Jalaleddin, a religious leader in the southern port city, told The Associated Press that Israeli troops surrounded his home, searched it, confiscated his pistol and took away his son for two hours of questioning before releasing him.

Lawmen Given Pursuit Policy

Greenville police now have a written policy on emergency and pursuit operations of vehicles.

Published earlier this month, the policy is the first time local officers have had a written policy to follow. Department policy on pursuit and emergency operation of vehicles has been passed on by word of mouth in the past.

Chief Ted Holmes, in establishing a written policy, said the move is designed for the protection of local officers as well as the city.

Under the policy, local officers are allowed to exceed the posted speed limits and operate under exceptions to normal rules of the road "only when the necessity of immediate apprehension outweighs the level of danger created by the pursuit or emergency operation."

The policy, which lists factors to be considered — such as the unpredictable reaction of civilian drivers to lights and siren, the chances that other drivers may not see or hear the lights or siren, road conditions, and the nature and gravity of the offense or situation — cautions that emergency of pursuit driving "greatly increases the officer's need to use caution."

Under the policy, lights and siren may be used in emergency situations to clear traffic, except when approaching the vicinity of a "crime in progress" call, and speeds are not to exceed 15 mph over the posted limit.

In life threatening situations, such as a violent crime in progress or in cases where an officer needs assistance, lights and sirens "shall be used" under the policy and speeds "shall not exceed 25 miles an hour" over the posted limit.

Officers must obey traffic signs and signals when entering intersections, unless the intersection appears clear and likely to remain clear, in both cases.

In a normal pursuit situation, lights and siren must be used by officers, and speeds may not exceed 15 mph over the speed limit.

In pursuit situations when officers have reason to believe the person pursued has committed a felony, lights and siren must be used and speeds may not exceed 25 mph over the limit.

In both pursuit situations, pursuit "shall be discontinued" by the initiating officer if, in his judgment, the risks involved outweigh the seriousness of the crime, or the suspect has been identified.

WEATHER

Fair tonight and Saturday with a low of near 15 degrees and Saturday high in the mid-30s.

Looking Ahead

Fair Sunday with increasing cloudiness Monday and a chance of rain by Tuesday. Highs Sunday in 40s, low in 20s; mostly 30s Monday and Tuesday with lows close to 40 in east.

Rural Home Damaged

FIREMEN BATTLE FIRE — Pitt County firemen battle a blaze that caused heavy damage to the home of Larry and Pam Riegel this morning. According to fire officials, no one was home when the fire started in the two-story wood frame house located near Calico off N.C. 43. Fire departments from Black

Jack, Gardnersville, Ayden and Eastern Pines fought the blaze in sub-freezing temperatures causing ice to form on fire fighters' clothing. Cause of the fire was not immediately known. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Mini-Gas War Said Under Way

FILL 'ER UP — Motorists have been taking advantage of low holiday gasoline prices ($1.01.9 per gallon for regular gas) over the past week and Sam Tyson of Route 1, Greenville, is no exception. Several Greenville-area stations lowered prices during the holiday. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

By SUE HINSON

Reflector Staff Writer
There's a little capitalistic enterprising going on in the Greenville gas business these days — enterprising that one gasoline company distributor spokesman who asked not to be identified called a "minor price war."

"A lot of people think the price has been cut down the line, but what we really have here is a minor gas war with a couple of stations, about three, fighting over who's going to give the lowest prices," he said.

"Nobody got a 3-cent per gallon cut, they all probably got a 1 1/2-cent cut and decided to they were so close to go ahead and drop below a dollar."

Those stations, the spokesman said, are offering regular gasoline for as little as 99.9 cents per gallon, while the remainder of stations in the Greenville area are selling their product for approximately $1.05.

"The problem with this," he said, "is that they're depressing the market. For instance in Rocky Mount you won't see 99.9 cents per gallon, you'll see $1.09 which is more realistic and in keeping with what these stations actually pay for their gas."

Police Count Three Collisions For City

An estimated $6,000 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 5:25 p.m. collision at the intersection of Farmville Boulevard and Memorial Drive, involving cars driven by Johnnie Randolph Jones of Route 2, Murfreesboro, and Cynthia Lee Barrier of 305B Eastbrook Apartments.

Damage caused by the collision was estimated at $1,800 to the Jones car and $2,200 to the Barrier vehicle.

Lisa Anne Kooztz of 1919 Sherwood Drive was charged with failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 5:16 p.m. collision on Arlington Boulevard, 150 feet north of the Greenville Boulevard intersection.

Police identified drivers of the other cars involved as Rebecca Dawn Pollard of Route 6, Greenville, and Sandra Clements Garner of 111 Welcome Drive.

Damage was estimated at $800 to the Kooztz car and $200 to the Garner auto. No damage resulted to the Pollard vehicle, investigators said.

Investigation of an 11:41 p.m. collision at the intersection of Heath and 10th streets is continuing.

Officers said a car driven by Melvin Joseph Pontiff Jr. of 303E Eastbrook Drive was struck by a car owned by John Nolan of Route 1,

Why 99.9 cents, you ask? "Well, it's the magic number," the spokesman said. "Gas people will do crazy things sometimes to be the first to drop to 99.9 cents per gallon."

The holiday price contest should come to an end soon, however, he said. "I've heard some of the distributors say they've already received notification of a price raise and we expect to receive word soon as well; so you'd better go and fill your car up now."

Tommy Carawan, owner of Carawan Oil and one of the station owners sellin gasoline at lower prices, said the only thing his company is trying to do is meet the competition the best they can. "It is lawful to do this in a competitive market and all we are trying to do is be as fair to our customers as we can and meet the competition."

However, Hobert Barnes, owner of Barnes Gulf, has not cut the price of his gas — $1.06 per gallon for regular — and is "hurting."

"I'm giving my gas away at that price and am not making anything. I just don't know how long I can hold out," he said. "The thing that bothers me the most about this is that everyone could stay at the same price and still make a profit."

The Nolan car was found abandoned a short time later by investigators who set damage at $200 to the Nolan car and $800 to the Pontiff auto.

Suspect Arson In Fatal Fire

DETROIT (AP) — Arson is suspected in an apartment building fire that killed two people and injured nine others, but investigators said they found no evidence of a firebomb which residents said was tossed into the building.

Residents said they heard gunshots shortly before a firebomb was hurled through a basement window early Thursday, and witnesses said an unidentified man living in the basement ran through the building shouting that someone was trying to kill him.

Investigators found bullet casings but uncovered no signs of a firebomb, authorities said.

"All we're saying is that arson is suspected," said Detroit police Sgt. Daniel Carr.

Charge Attempt To Hire Killers

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — A Haw River man has been charged with solicitation to commit murder after being accused of trying to hire two men to kill an Alamance County deputy because of a grudge.

Ricky Lee Alston was arrested Wednesday by the Alamance County Sheriff's department. He is accused of asking Rayford A. Thompson of Burlington and Leroy Atwater Jr. of Graham to kill Deputy Kenneth Cheek, 32.

Alston is being held in the Alamance County Jail under a $250,000 secured bond.

Cheek last summer issued a search warrant for Alston because he suspected Alston of breaking into a van, according to a sheriff's report. Alston was never charged with the crime.

'Bee Sting' Was A Stray Bullet

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Jennifer A. James thought she had been stung by a bee while feeding her dogs. But when she woke up early Wednesday morning covered with blood, she worried that a broken splintering chair leg had left splinters under her skin.

Doctors at Forsyth Memorial Hospital discovered Miss James, 27, had been struck in the pelvis by what appeared to be a stray bullet. Lt. C.C. McGee of the Forsyth County Sheriff's Department said the bullet was probably fired by a hunter who did not realize it had struck anyone.

Wedding Vows Solemnized In Ceremony On Tuesday

The wedding ceremony of Tamara Layne Garrett and Michael Glenn McKeel was solemnized Tuesday evening at six o'clock in the First Pentecostal Holiness Church here. The double ring ceremony was conducted by Frank Gentry.

Debbie Potter, organist, and Lisa Carraway, vocalist, presented a program of wedding music.

The bride, daughter of Ms. Sylvia G. Stokes of Greenville, was given in marriage by her mother. The bridegroom is the son of Michael Glenn McKeel of Greenville.

Her honor attendant was Cheyenne K. Buck and Michelle Malvaso and Carolyn Dunn, all of Greenville, were bridesmaids. Kim Buck, also of Greenville, was flower girl.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Michael Garrett, Dick Garrett and Jerry McKeel, all of Greenville.

The bride is employed by Candlite Sales in Greenville and the bridegroom is employed by Eaton Corp.

For the ceremony, the bride wore a formal gown of white silkened organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with imported Brussels lace. The fitted bodice featured a sheer scooped yoke of English net embroidered in a floral motif and outlined in re-embroidered alencon lace centered with seed pearls. Appliques of lace extended over the bodice and enhanced the modified natural waistline. The long fitted sleeves were fashioned in the sheer organza applied in the embroidered lace and trimmed at the cuffs with scalloped Brussels lace. The full skirt and attached chapel train were edged at the hemline with Brussels lace. Beaded appliques centered the skirt front. She wore a walking length illusion veil edged in re-embroidered alencon lace. It was attached to a Camelot headpiece trimmed in lace and pearls. She carried a bouquet of white mums, pink carnations and baby's breath.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of mauve knit styled sleeveless complemented by a long sleeved jacket.

The honor attendant wore a formal gown of burgundy satin designed with a V-neckline and modified empire waistline with gathered puff sleeves. She wore a hair comb with silk flowers and baby's breath. Her bouquet was like that of the bride. The bridesmaids were dressed identically.

A reception was held at the Ramada Inn.

Expert Argues For Exercise Instead Of Diet To Lose Weight

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR
United Press International

To lose weight, don't go on a diet, says Vanderbilt University psychologist Martin Katahn.

Katahn says repeated or prolonged dieting just makes it easier to gain weight on less and less food. He says exercise is the key to sustained weight loss.

Katahn is director of Vanderbilt's weight management program and the author of the book "The 200 Calorie Solution".

He recommends that persons who seriously want to lose weight should make time for 200 calories worth of daily exercise. He says a brisk 45-minute walk or the equivalent in tennis, jogging or swimming will take the pounds off.

"Just expending that extra 200 calories a day could mean 20 or 30 fewer pounds of fat on your body within a year," he said.

"Generally, 40 to 60 minutes of steady activity, such as walking, light jogging, bicycling or swimming, done at 60 to 70 percent of your maximum heart rate, will burn the necessary 200 calories and allow women to maintain their desired weight on 1,800 to 2,000 calories a day and men on 2,500 to 2,700 calories a day."

Katahn says his views are based on scientific studies that indicate the body has a pre-ordained amount of body fat and a set-point that helps balance food intake with energy expenditures. He said this is a protective mechanism, a relic of an ancient feast-or-famine existence, that helps prevent starvation.

He said when food consumption drops significantly below the level needed to maintain current weight, the body turns down its thermostat and begins burning calories at a slower rate. He said this built-in method of energy conservation is the reason more than 20 million Americans stop losing weight or lose it very slowly after several weeks on a low-calorie diet.

Katahn said the more severe the diet the more drastic the body's counter measures. A crash diet of less than 500 calories a day can slow metabolism by as much as 45 percent. When eating habits return to normal, a disproportionate amount of fat is put into storage.

He said repeated dieting trains the body to reduce the metabolic rate more quickly and makes unwanted weight even harder to lose by cutting calories.

Katahn said exercise and normal eating is the only effective method of losing weight.

He said dieting rarely works by itself. He said dieting may work in five out of one hundred cases.

And he said dieting deprives a person of one of life's great joys — good eating.

Katahn's rules for losing weight are simple:

1. Do 45 minutes of aerobic exercise each day, preferably a brisk walk.

2. Eat well-balanced meals and don't skip breakfast.

3. Limit alcohol to one drink a day for women, two for men. Alcohol's calories are immediately burned as energy, forcing other food calories to be converted to fat.

4. Remember there is no magic combination of foods or drugs that will burn fat without exercise.

5. Keep in mind that a successful weight-loss plan requires experimentation and persistence. Given two persons of the same sex, age and lifestyle, one may lose weight on 2,300 calories a day while the other gains on 1,700.

BRUNCH FARE
Citrus Compote
Ham & Corn Omelet
Whole Wheat Buns & Coffee
WHOLE WHEAT BUNS

They have a pleasantly light texture.

1 cup whole wheat flour
1/4 cup nonfat dry milk
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 envelope dry yeast
2 tablespoons butter, soft
1 cup very warm tap water (120 to 130 degrees)

1 large egg
1 cup (about) unbleached all-purpose flour

In the large bowl of an electric mixer stir together whole wheat flour, dry milk, sugar, salt and yeast; add butter. At low speed gradually beat in water; continue beating at medium speed, scraping bowl a few times, for 2 minutes. Add egg and 1/2 cup of the white flour; beat at high speed, scraping bowl a few times, for 2 minutes. At low speed beat in the remaining white flour or enough to make a smooth thick batter. Cover bowl; let rise in a warm, draft-free place until doubled — about 1 hour. Stir down batter. Fill buttered muffin pan cups (each 2 1/2 inches across the top and 1 inch deep) 1/2 full. Cover; let rise as previously until doubled — about 45 minutes. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until browned and a cake tester inserted in the middle comes out clean — about 20 minutes. Makes 18.

When packing a lunch freeze a sandwich or use frozen bread to keep it longer.

Dear Abby

Reader Wants To Receive Junk Mail

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I enjoy getting mail. Is there some way I can get my name on a mailing list so I can get what is called "junk mail"? I was told that the post office makes money on every piece of mail it handles, so it encourages it.

I would like to get some junk mail. I am 74 years old. Thank you.

VACAVILLE, CALIF.

DEAR VACAVILLE: It's simple. Just order one item you see advertised in a magazine or catalog: personalized stick-on address labels, flea powder, greeting cards, vegetable seeds, bicycle horn—anything at all will do. I promise you, in no time at all you will need a bigger mailbox, which can also be ordered from one of the many catalogs you will receive after your initial purchase. Once your name goes into the computer, it will breed like a hutch full of rabbits.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating the most wonderful man in this entire world for the last four months. (I'll call him Henry.)

His mother died, and Henry asked me if I would go to the wake with him. Of course I said I would, and I did.

Well, his ex-wife of 16 years showed up. (I would like to make it clear that they were divorced before I got involved with him.) His "ex" did in fact use this occasion to cry on the shoulders of Henry's brother and sisters—not about the death of their mother, but because she and Henry were divorced and he had another woman by his side.

As a result of this, Henry's family asked him not to bring me to the funeral, so he didn't. I can hardly control my rage over this. What should I do?

EXCLUDED

DEAR EXCLUDED: Rejoice. If this hadn't happened you might have gone on thinking Henry was the most wonderful man in the world—instead of a wimp who does what his family asks without thinking it through and with total disregard for your feelings.

DEAR ABBY: A week before Thanksgiving, I telephoned an elderly widowed friend of mine and said, "If you aren't spending Thanksgiving with your daughter, please spend it with us."

She thanked me nicely, then in a very cheery tone she said, "Of course my daughter is coming to get me."

I later learned that this lady did not spend Thanksgiving with her daughter. She stayed home alone and cried all day. Her daughter, I was told, had not invited her, but she was too ashamed to admit it.

I feel guilty because of the way I phrased my invitation. There is nothing I can do about it now, but please print this so others will not be as stupid and thoughtless as I was.

KICKING MYSELF IN BOSTON

DEAR KICKING: Please stop kicking yourself. You meant well. But I'm printing your letter so some other well-meaning person doesn't make the same mistake.

CONFIDENTIAL TO A.J.F. IN EL PASO, TEXAS: Go for it! "Fortune is a prize to be won. Adventure is the road to it. Chance is what may lurk in the shadows at the roadside." Those are the words of one William Sydney Porter, whose pen name was O. Henry. (Surprise!)

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Light of Huntsville, Ala. announce the engagement of their daughter, Laura Alisa, to Freddie Lee Thomas Brock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Freddie L. Brock of Winterville. The wedding will take place Jan. 7.

Editorials

Thank You, Pitt

Looking back on 1983 in Pitt County is similar to looking back on the year for the country as a whole.

There were differences, of course. (We do things better.) Our area ... thanks to an ideal mix of agriculture, business, industry, educational facilities and a growing medical complex ... never did reach the depths of recession that plagued other segments of the nation whose lives were closely tied to one, two or even three economic factors. As a result, we suffered less and found it easier to recoup as the recession ended.

Most of our people had a fine Christmas. We noticed something less likable in the stories of 1983; there seemed to be more crimes of violence than in years past, just as there were stories approaching the disaster level which we never knew before. We suspect they go with population growth, cannot ever be completely avoided, and will be part of the picture as growth continues.

Our year's story included a spurt of new housing construction, business construction and related signals of optimism and confidence in the future. There were other signals.

For instance, city and county school boards received a Research Triangle Institute study which recommended merger of the systems as the best answer to problems they both face. (We look for reaction to those findings in the year ahead.)

Then there were contracts awarded for construction of the first segment of the four-lane U.S. 264 from Greenville to Wilson. (A dream of many years is going to be realized.)

The local medical complex never seems to slow its growth. The ECU Medical School's new radiation therapy center is in progress, and we fully expect another project, or projects will be announced before "Orwell's Year" bows out.

The "eye to the future" was never more manifest than when the Greenville Utilities launched construction on its new wastewater treatment plant ... a facility assuring capability of growth for the foreseeable future.

Yes, it has been a good year; and its proof is that not only were challenges of 1983 met, but steps were taken to assure other good years to come. That says a lot for Pitt County's people. And lest we forget, to them we say Thank You.

—John Cuniff—

Excitement Lacking

NEW YORK (AP) — There isn't this December the usual excitement about the economy for the upcoming year. The consensus forecast looks dull: more of the same as in 1983, although perhaps weakening as the year wears on.

"No local explosions and no virtuoso performances in any sector of the economy," says Albert Sommers, Conference Board economist. The expansion, he forecasts, will be "broadly distributed."

The view delivered by the University of Chicago's Walter Fackler is just as unspectacular. "The momentum of the recovery will continue," he says, "albeit at a declining rate."

None of the usual tensions that Americans are accustomed to living with. No big turning points, no roaring expansion, no record highs, no record lows, no low rumbles, no big stumbles.

Crises? They are there, of course. Who can forget the budget deficit, the trade deficit, the loans that might never be recovered from developing nations? But, it seems, they are destined to be quiescent, like Mount St. Helens. Or, like a mine field, not to be driven through if you can steer around it.

But in spite of the wide agreement, there does remain a big question: How long will the expansion continue? It is in this area that little disagreements grow larger by the month. Everyone agrees that expansions must end. But when?

A casual survey of forecasters who have dared to go out on a limb longer than a year suggests that by the second half of 1985, at the latest, the current expansion should begin running into serious trouble, and that by 1986 a familiar enemy in the form of inflation should have visited again.

That would give the current recovery-expansion a longevity of 24 months or so.

It is unlikely that you could find anyone today who is forecasting an expansion of the magnitude enjoyed in the 1960s, when problems such as exist today weren't even dreamed of.

The 1960s were economically stable, free of inflation for many months at a time, free from the burden of big federal budget deficits, and free for a time even from international military entanglements.

Today's economies are beset by unresolved problems — problems that are dealt with at best for a short period of time, but basically never solved. The consequences of the trade deficit, the budget deficit, the foreign loans have been averted through delaying actions whose effectiveness gradually wears out.

It is for such reasons that economists and others believe that recoveries these days might self-destruct more quickly than those before them.

Maybe so. Nevertheless, 24 months of expansion isn't bad when you match it against the expansion of 1980-1981. That one lasted just 12 months. This one might be destined to last twice as long.

A trend?

WASHINGTON — There is a time to keep silence, said the Preacher, and a time to speak. Some of us who generally support the president have kept silent long enough. It is time to speak on the matter of our Marines in Lebanon. It is time to get out.

When the Marines were dispatched to Beirut 15 months ago, it seemed a useful idea. They were to provide a neutral but powerful presence while the Israeli and Syrian troops withdrew. Thereafter, they were to assist in maintaining order while a viable government could begin to function under President Gemayel. The United States would not be intervening gratuitously or unilaterally; we were asked by the Lebanese government to serve as part of a military presence that would include troops from France, Britain and Italy also.

Given these reasons and circumstances, I for one raised no objection. A few conservative Republicans, notably Barry Goldwater, opposed the operation from the outset. Events have proved that Goldwater's reservations were soundly based. Exactly what he predicted would happen has happened: The Israelis have withdrawn, the Syrians have remained and the fratricidal jealousy of Lebanon's own warring factions has prevented the stabilization that Reagan had hoped to attain.

The two difficulties that perplexed our policy-makers a year ago are still there today. One involves the strength of the Syrians and their Soviet suppliers. The other involves the weakness of the Gemayel regime. It is time to ask ourselves the serious question: How can 1,460 Marines, pinned down at the Beirut airport, contribute to the solution of either problem?

If the Syrians cannot be removed by diplomacy, surely they cannot be removed by force — not, at least, by a force of 1,460 U.S. Marines. If Lebanese leaders themselves are unwilling to make the concessions required of a government of reconciliation, a few platoons of riflemen can do nothing to spur the task along.

The administration insists that the Marines' mission has not been a failure. That view is defensible. Over the past 15 months, the Gemayel government has taken some steps toward reconciliation. The Lebanese army is beginning to fend for itself in the central part of the nation. The Syrians have not launched wholesale invasion.

When all that has been said, the best has been said. There is a time to keep, said the Preacher, and a time to cast away. We have lived up to whatever obligation we may have had to Lebanon and to our allies in the multinational force. It is not necessary for bugles to blow retreat; all that is required is a signal to break camp.

What arguments are offered in favor of remaining? They are mostly arguments of saving face. These are not frivolous contentions. If the United States were perceived around the world as a quitter, as a country that could be intimidated by terrorists, as a weak and unreliable ally, the perception could gravely damage our conduct of foreign affairs. We ought not to withdraw with unseemly haste.

But withdraw we must — and soon. Nothing is to be gained and disaster is to be risked by the escalating warfare between Syrian forces and our own. The president is plainly right to order swift and appropriate retaliation to Syrian attacks; it would be unthinkable to leave our Marines in the impotent position of troops who are shot at but are prevented from shooting back. Yet, it is only a matter of time before small exchanges grow to large exchanges. There is a time of war, said the Preacher, and a time of peace. God knows this is no time for war with Syria — and by extension, with the Soviet Union.

When the Lebanese operation began, no plausible parallel could be drawn with Vietnam. The circumstances were entirely different. Now, I am not so sure. The longer this drags on, the more the agonies of 15 years ago will be recalled. I do not want to see Reagan's re-election jeopardized by futile sacrifices 5,000 miles away. There is a time to hold, say the poker players, and a time to fold. In my judgment, it's time to fold.

Home, Maybe, For The Holidays

Christmas is a trying time for many people. Originally a family holiday, it now divides people as much as it brings them together, especially as the children grow older. I discovered this when I talked to Fritz Newman.

"I guess we'll see Danny for the holidays," I said. She pursed her lips. "Danny isn't coming home for Christmas. He's going to his girlfriend's house in La Crosse, Wisconsin."

"I'm sorry to hear that. You must be disappointed." "Why should I be disappointed? He's a big boy and if he thinks it's more important to spend Christmas with some girl he's only known for six months, in a houseful of strangers instead of with his mother and father, who are shelling out $15,000 a year to send him to college, that's his business."

"I'm glad to see you're not taking it personally," I said. "I guess Danny's in love."

"Maybe he is or maybe he isn't. It could be he thinks he'll have a better time in La Crosse than he will in his own home with the people who raised him. After all, what have we got to offer him, but a bed and three good meals a day?"

"Well, even if Danny isn't coming home, your daughter Sarah and her children will be here."

"I don't think so. Sarah's husband Allan wants to spend the holidays with his parents in Fort Lauderdale. They already sent the airline tickets.

I told her it didn't matter to us, and we could always mail the grandchildren's presents to them. She seemed apologetic about it, but I said not to make a big deal of it. She doesn't owe us anything now that she has her own family. After all, Florida sounds like such a nice place for Christmas compared to Bethesda, and we could always see the grandchildren in the spring and it would save me the trouble of shopping for a big dinner and decorating a large Christmas tree which the whole family used to love to do." "You're a good soldier, Fritz," I told her. "Most mothers would be upset if two of their four children weren't coming home for the holidays."

"Larry isn't coming home either." "He isn't?" "He's going skiing in Vail with a group of people from his office. He told me it would be the only opportunity he had and asked me if I minded. Of course I told him I didn't mind. How can you compare skiing in Vail with a bunch of people from the office with a boring two days talking about Christmases past and dredging up childhood memories that everyone has heard a hundred times?"

"Well, at least he called to ask your permission."

Fritz said, "I called him." "So that just leaves Mary Lou. Surely she'll be home for Christmas," I said.

"She's living here. She doesn't do anything but lie around the house and complain since she lost her job. To be honest I wouldn't mind if she went somewhere else."

"It's funny," I said. "On television all the TV commercials show three generations of families together opening presents and drinking eggnogs. I guess in real life it isn't that simple."

"They don't make children like you see on television any more," Fritz said.

"Home may be where the heart is, but it isn't where the skiing is," I added. "I guess they'll all check in Christmas Day, though."

"Probably, unless all circuits are busy," Fritz said.

"I better be getting along," I said, "to check out what's going on at our place."

"Are your kids coming home?" "We don't know yet. They said if we didn't hear from them by Christmas Eve, we should assume they were."

Strength For Today

An authority on crime said recently in a seminar with Christian ministers, "In almost every criminal I have ever come in contact with I have noted a decidedly un-Christian factor in his background or environment."

"Sometimes this has been divorce, at other times drunkenness in the home, in still other cases the influence of evil companions. I can say that is most cases of criminality I have dealt with, the home in which the individual was raised was almost completely lacking in a spirit of vital religion."

The criminologist went on to say that religion is the only thing which will clear up the sources of infection which blight people's lives and transform them into enemies of society.

Why do we have a religion if not to make it work? "Train up a child in the way he should go; then when he is old, he will not depart from it."

—Rowland Evans and Robert Novak—

Prisoners Are Going Undernourished

WASHINGTON — Poland's studying evidence of systematic denial of vitamins, proteins and other life-sustaining foods to Walesa's imprisoned leadership, the solidarity 11. The evidence, scrupulously collected by a team of French doctors last month, appears credible.

The impact of the cripples of Warsaw on U.S. policy is not yet decided. But in Poland, it is clear — a brutal attempt to drive Solidarity's high command out of the country and so abort scheduled trials. For Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, undernourishment of Walesa's top Solidarity leaders who have been jailed for two years is a desperate policy. He knows that publicity in the West triggered by the trials, no matter how hard the regime tries to conceal its sordid record, would produce outrage. Running the political gamut from the far left to the far right in every Western nation, this outrage would make a mockery of Jaruzelski's efforts to win new economic concessions from the West.

Even without show trials, Secretary of State George Shultz and most — but not all — of his top aides are in no hurry to ease U.S. sanctions. Some presidential advisers would go along with Walesa's own proposals for minor relaxation of the U.S. sanctions: ending fishing restrictions in U.S. waters and opening American airfields again to Poland's commercial airline, Lot.

But considering the disastrous state of Polish economy, that would be aspirin for terminal cancer. What Jaruzelski desperately wants is a moratorium for his immense foreign debts and huge new transfusions of Western cash and credits. Show trials of the Solidarity 11 would make the prospect of such aid remote indeed.

Court Upholds State's Death Sentence

By The Associated Press

The death sentence for James W. Hutchins, convicted in the shooting deaths of two deputies and a state trooper after he and his daughter quarrelled about a bowl of punch, has been upheld by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

A three-member panel of the Richmond, Va., court Thursday rejected a request by Hutchins' attorneys that the execution be delayed to allow the former textile worker to undergo more psychiatric evaluations.

As of Thursday, Hutchins remained scheduled for execution Jan. 13. None of the federal courts in Hutchins' current appeal efforts have granted him a stay of execution.

Jean Benoy, head of North Carolina's Justice Department's western division and whose Forest City office is near the scene of the May 1979 slayings, said Thursday that he considered the court's ruling as "an affirmation that Mr. Hutchins had a fair trial."

"All I can say is that they (the judges) have affirmed that he was ably represented every step of the way during the trial, that finding him guilty was proper and that there were no violations of his rights."

Attorney Roger Smith of Raleigh, who is representing Hutchins in his appeals, said he plans to petition the U.S. Supreme Court to review the decision.

Hutchins contended in his appeals that he was denied adequate representation and that his attorneys should have presented an insanity defense at his trial — arguments that Benoy has maintained have no merit.

Hutchins, who has been on death row in Raleigh for four years, was found guilty of first-degree murder in the deaths of Rutherford County Deputy Sheriff Owen Messersmith, 58, and Highway Patrol trooper R.L. Peterson, 37, and second-degree murder in the shooting of Deputy Sheriff Capt. Roy Huskey, 48.

Huskey was shot with a high-powered rifle as he got out of his car outside Hutchins' house, according to reports. Messersmith was shot at about the same spot when he went to assist Huskey. Officers said Hutchins then sped away from the scene and when Peterson attempted to stop the car a few minutes later, he also was fatally shot.

The shootings sparked a massive, night-long manhunt for Hutchins in the hilly rural areas of Rutherford County. By the time he was captured, an estimated 200 law enforcement officers and a pack of trained attack dogs had participated in the search.

It was disclosed during the search that Hutchins, a textile worker and laborer in the Forest City area, had argued with his 17-year-old daughter, Charlotte Hutchins, over the strength of some vodka spiked punch she had planned to take to a high school graduation party.

The girl called the Sheriff's Department for help when Hutchins began beating her and, when the deputies arrived, Hutchins opened fire.

Superior Court Judge Donald L. Smith of Raleigh, who presided at the September 1979 trial and imposed the death sentence, called Hutchins "the most dangerous man I have ever seen" and added that "it's my opinion that if he were released onto the streets he would kill again." But several neighbors testified that Hutchins had been friendly to them and a good father to his children.

Although a psychiatrist hired by the defense told the jury that Hutchins was abnormally paranoid and felt persecuted by local law enforcement officers, Benoy said Hutchins was found sane and able to stand trial.

If the Supreme Court refuses Hutchins' appeal, only an act of executive clemency by Gov. Jim Hunt could prevent the execution, which would be the first in the state since 1961.

Life As It's Lived

It Boiled Down To Final Word

By GAIL MICHAELS

"I can't find them!" Meg screamed from her room after Phillip had instructed her to put on her bedroom slippers.

I was not surprised. It was a miracle that she could find her room. I had spent 15 minutes the night before trying to locate her bed and had almost dislocated my hip in the process. I think that I stepped on a plastic bowling ball. Then again, it could have been the plastic head my father so obligingly bought for her so that she could learn to apply make-up and dye hair out of a bottle marked "Permanent: do not use near carpets, linoleum, formica or clothing."

I couldn't tell which one I had encountered because two sleeping bags, an old bedspread and comforter off her bed obscured everything else on the floor.

Of course, the clutter was not out of the ordinary. But there did seem to be a bit more junk courtesy of Christmas. I had planned before Santa's arrival to perform my usual routine with the rubber gloves and two garbage bags, especially since we were down to three pairs of Her Majesty underpants and I knew that the rest must be squirreled away in dim corners and inside game boxes. The task was so distasteful, however, that I opted for other more cheerful activities to fill my spare time, like paying bills and mending ripped seams in Meg's clothing.

With my help Meg did eventually find her bedroom slippers. One was in the closet where she would never have thought to look. The other was on top of the books in her bookcase.

"That does it!" I said. "This room is a disgrace."

"It is a bit of a rat's nest," she grinned, apparently unaware that some slight indication of repentance was in order.

"Most rats would consider your statement an insult. I want this room cleaned up now."

"But I cleaned it before Christmas!" she waived.

"Stuffing your menagerie and your dirty clothes under the bed does not count. I want this place spotless. Anything that is left out gets thrown away."

"That's not fair! I have to live in this room."

"You can't even get into this room. Now get started."

Her chin quivered. "This is unreasonable. You don't keep your living space spotless."

"My bedroom doesn't look like the IRA at Coney Island."

"Your desk does."

She had a point. My sewing machine has been missing since October. "Well," I hesitated, "that's different."

"How?"

"I have to work there."

"I have to work here so it isn't different at all."

"Yes it is."

"How?" she persisted.

There was only one logical answer. "Because," I said, "I'm the mother."

Broke Back Into A Prison Camp

MAIDEN, N.C. (AP) — Catawba County prison officials are puzzled over the latest twist in jailbreaks — a man who broke into the state prison unit near Maiden.

Billy Payne, 32, who was released from the camp Dec. 15, was arrested late Tuesday after he allegedly climbed over a 10-foot fence into the camp. Payne allegedly climbed back over the fence, which is topped with barbed wire, when a guard spotted him.

He was arrested minutes later and charged with misdemeanor breaking and entering. He was being held on $500 bond in the Catawba County Jail.

Officers said they still don't know why he went back into the prison camp. "He didn't want to talk a whole lot about it," said Maj. Richard Cannon of the sheriff's department.

More C-of-C Goals Assigned

Burney Warren has been named vice chairman of the organization and membership council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, according to Jon Tingelstad, 1984 chairman of the chamber's board.

The following goals have been adopted as the council's 1984 program of work. Warren has announced:

- To select site, date and plan program of the chamber's annual meeting, to recognize volunteer leadership and the recognize the citizen of the year.

- To schedule and plan the program for the Pitt-Greenville Leadership Institute.

- To schedule dates, plan program and attendance for the chamber's out-of town planning conference.

- To create a social fellowship to enhance business among chamber members.

- To have the chamber's 1984 Program of Work printed and distributed to all chamber members, to make sure every chamber member is offered an opportunity to serve on a task force or committee and to supply membership plaques and door decals to all chamber members.

- To form a membership team consisting of business and professional members, to assist chamber membership salesmen in formulating a prospect list in making direct sales calls with salesmen on a scheduled and call basis and to recognize new members in a monthly newsletter.

Other council programs of work will be announced later, according to Tingelstad.

Alcoholic Judge Fears Future

BARRE, Vt. (AP) — A former Superior Court judge who is an admitted alcoholic says he is frightened about "what the future may hold for me" after his third conviction for drunken driving.

John Morrissey, 54, who served on the bench for 15 years, was sentenced Thursday to at least 20 days in jail by a judge who said, "A judge ought to receive the same punishment as an ordinary citizen."

Morrissey pleaded no contest last month to his third drunken driving charge in seven years, then resigned from the bench.

1	2	NEW YEAR RESOLUTION: USE ENERGY WISELY
8	9
15	16
22	23	24	25
29

Start 1984 off right with a resolution to use energy wisely. You'll save money, and help keep utility rates low. Here are some ideas.

- Insulate your home, including walls, floors, windows, doors, attic, basement and fireplaces.

- Have a professional heating and cooling system maintenance check seasonally. Change filters and clean ducts yourself each month.

- Heat and cool efficiently. Install clock thermostats on furnace and air conditioner...consider an energy-saving heat pump...use attic and house fans effectively in summer...and plant outdoor trees and shrubs to block wind and hot sun rays.

- Use less hot water. Put an insulation "jacket" around your water heater and reduce its water temperature to 120°...wash and rinse laundry in cold water...use your dishwasher only when full...take short showers instead of baths...and install water flow restrictors in shower head faucets.

- Use appliances wisely. Turn them on only when needed...use energy-saving options...check and clean appliances frequently...and read manufacturer's directions.

- Cut lighting costs. Keep all lamps and bulbs clean...use fluorescent lights...install automatic photoelectric cells or time clocks...use sunlight...and turn off all lights when not in use.

For more energy-saving ideas, call us.

So you thought Christmas came and went without a hitch? Truth is some Pitt County children might have awakened to empty stockings had it not been for a few hard-working Greenville Utilities employees.

After all, aging Rudolph's dim light couldn't possibly have guided the famous sleigh to the darkened St. John area where high winds had damaged a utility pole. And Santa surely would have careened uncontrollably down 10th Street had he tried to land on the spot where ice from a water main break made travel hazardous. It was a close call. But it will take more than damage from low temperatures and high winds to keep Santa away. Especially when there are people like Robert Lockamy and Russell Bryan willing to give up their holiday to make it safe for others.

The two GUC electrical department employees worked from 1:30 p.m. until midnight Christmas Eve — sometimes in 4-degree temperatures — making repairs. Then they put in another eight hours on Christmas Day.

"I'm lucky my wife's understanding," said Lockamy, an electrical crew leader who has been with GUC for 15 years. "At work we put all the holidays in a hat and drew for them. I got Christmas."

The weather just added to the sacrifice this year. When Lockamy was high up in the bucket truck making repairs, it was one of the coldest times he can remember.

"Christmas Eve was the worst with that wind (wind chill factor was -30 degrees)," he said. "If it had been freezing rain I don't think I could have stood it."

Assisting Lockamy was Russell Bryan, who was philosophical about the overtime. "It was a job that had to be done," he said.

"We're on call 24 hours a day, no matter what day, time or weather. But luckily I don't have Christmas next year."

Supervising the on-call crews was James Stokes who, after 26 years at GUC, is retiring in a few weeks.

"Christmas Eve was as rough as I've ever seen it," he said. "We had four crews (two men to a crew) out until midnight. My family waited until I got home before they opened their presents."

The weather caused damage to three utility poles, a three-phase line and a pad-mounted transformer. Although none were major repairs, there were isolated outages.

"Because the damage was from one end of the county to the other, we had to call in extra crews. Repair was time consuming," said electric distribution supervisor Haywood Outland. Joining the repair team was Larry Jacobs, Kelly Parisher, Willie Gay, Paul Sutton and Adolph Pollard.

Weather also caused the GUC water and sewer department to work overtime. But with reports of nearly 150 broken water pipes and more calls coming in, the work continues.

"One problem now is that a whole lot of frozen pipes are thawing and water is leaking into peoples' houses," said Jimmy Nethercutt, pipe crew leader. Nethercutt was on the team, along with Lee Johnson, that worked all day on Christmas. Some local businesses had pipes break, sending freezing water onto the streets. The crew also had three water main breaks to repair, one of which left 25 families without water for six hours.

"On Christmas morning I saw my 3½-and-a-half year old daughter open up a few presents before I got the call to fix a water main break," said Johnson. "She was so wrapped up in her presents she probably didn't even miss me."

Wherever there was a broken water line, you could also find Ernest Spruiell, meter department service worker. He put in 34 hours of overtime in three days, shutting off water meters so the pipes could be repaired.

"It wasn't the happiest Christmas Day I ever spent," said Spruiell, after working from 9:30 a.m. until 2:30 a.m. "But it was one Christmas I'll never forget. Lots of people in apartments went away, shut off their heat and had their pipes freeze. Plumbers have all the work they can handle right now."

The GUC gas department's Jay Brown spend his Christmas checking gas pressure at several locations — obviously some gas heaters were not quite up to the low temperatures.

"If Christmas is truly a time to be thankful, then we should give thanks to our utility crews who worked in such difficult weather during the holiday hours to serve our customers' emergency needs," said Charles Horne, director of Greenville Utilities. "And this was just their turn — next week, next month, next year, it will be someone else's. And the same dedicated performance will be shown again."

Many Celebrations To Ring In The New Year

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Many celebrations will be held Saturday night as Greenville citizens ring in the New Year. Champagne will be flowing as 1984 is ushered in with a host of parties at local country clubs, nightclubs and restaurants. A sampling of the New Year's Eve festivities in Greenville includes:

•Attie — Two rock bands, No Vacancy and Panic, will bring in the New Year. The cover charge of $5 per person and $9 per couple includes party favors. Patrons can watch the ball drop in Times Square at midnight on the seven-foot television. Doors open at 8:30 p.m.

•Beef Barn — One third of the restaurant has been set aside for reservations, but the rest of the Beef Barn will be open to the public. A New Year's Eve celebration in the Loft will feature vocalist and pianist Tom Jones from 6 p.m. until. A complimentary glass of champagne will be poured for each patron of the Loft at midnight.

•Brook Valley Country Club — A buffet dinner for Brook Valley members will be followed by a dance. Music will be provided by disc jockey Jeff French.

•Carolina Opry House — Country and country rock music will be performed by Super Grit. Free champagne and party favors will be supplied. Tickets can be purchased at the Carolina Opry House, Apple Records and the Record Bar at Pitt Plaza.

•Greenville Country Club — A prime rib buffet will be served for members of the country club.

•Grogs — The musical entertainment at Grogs will be Lahn and Loftin. The $2 cover charge includes party favors. There will be a special price on champagne at midnight. Doors open at 8 p.m.

•King and Queen North — In the banquet room, the band Reflections will perform beach and top forty music from 9 p.m.-1 a.m. Cover charge will be $6 per person. A special dinner in the dining room includes a choice of stuffed shrimp or a ten-ounce ribeye steak and a half-bottle of champagne for $65 per couple; this price includes admission to the dance in the banquet room plus party favors. The house band, 509 North, will provide music in the dining room. Advance tickets are available.

•Moose Lodge — The annual New Year's Eve dance for members and guests will feature music by the Fortunes Combo.

•Paddock Club — The Paddock Club will serve a buffet breakfast at 2 a.m. Party favors and balloons will be provided. The cover charge will be $5 for members and $8 for nonmembers.

•Papa Katz — The cover charge of $7 for ladies, $9 for men and $15 per couple entitles patrons to free wine, draft beer, and highballs. There will also be free champagne at midnight and party favors, as well as giveaways. Disc jockey John Moore will provide music.

•Ramada Inn — The band Lyxx will play top forty and beach music in Pagentry Hall; tickets are $10 per person. All-you-can-eat specials in the Arbor restaurant include crab legs, beef and burgandy, or shrimp and chablis for $11.95. Those attending the party can reserve a room at the Ramada Inn for $19.84 instead of driving home.

•Tree House — The cover charge of $4 per person and $6 for couples for the New Year's Eve party at the Tree House includes party favors, champagne at midnight and a continental breakfast. Music will be provided by guitarist Bruce Frye.

Skeptical In Assessment Of Spy Case

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE

Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Two

British lawmakers say they are skeptical about Defense Ministry assertions that a South African naval officer convicted of spying did not give the Soviets secret information about the Royal Navy's latest warships and weapons.

Kenneth Warren of the governing Conservative Party and opposition Laborite Ted Leadbitter told reporters Thursday they intend to question Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher about the South African spy case when Parliament reconvenes Jan. 16.

Their comments came after the South African Supreme Court on Thursday convicted Commodore Dieter Gerhardt, 47, and his wife, Ruth, 41, of high treason for spying for the Soviet Union — a crime punishable by hanging.

Sentencing is expected within the next few days.

Gerhardt, former commander of South Africa's Simonstown naval base, admitted in a signed statement after the couple was arrested a year ago that he was a Soviet spy.

Supreme Court Justice G.G.A. Munnik said he rejected Gerhardt's defense of having been a double agent feeding the Soviets incorrect data. That claim was made only after the trial began behind closed doors Sept. 5.

The judge also rejected Mrs. Gerhardt's defense that she first believed her husband was helping Western intelligence. Munnik said he also rejected her claim that by 1980 she realized her husband was aiding the Soviets, but continued to help because he threatened her and their 7-year-old son.

Munnik said Gerhardt began spying as a young officer in 1962 and received cash for transmitting navy secrets to the Soviets and his wife was paid for acting as courier of film and documents since 1972.

The two lawmakers said their main concern is that positions of British warships in last year's Falkland Islands war with Argentina might have been passed on to the Soviets.

Gerhardt was based in Britain for at least three years during the time he was accused of spying, including time spent as the embassy's naval attaché, London's Daily Telegraph reported today.

The newspaper said information supplied by the British and U.S. intelligence services was "largely responsible for trapping the Gerhardts, whose work for the Russians seriously compromised Western defense plans."

When Gerhardt was arrested in January, Mrs. Thatcher was questioned about his contacts in Britain and his activities during the Falklands war. At the time, she said Gerhardt's information on the Royal Navy dated from the 1960s and was out of date.

But Warren and Leadbitter said that in the wake of Gerhardt's conviction they did not find that assurance satisfactory.

"I have always felt the key questions are: who did he know in this country and what has happened to them since?" said Warren. "A man having operated for so long must have built up a repertoire of contacts and our security services must really go through them with a toothcomb."

Leadbitter said the Simonstown base is used by the Royal Navy for refueling and maintenance. South Africa, a former British colony, became independent in 1961 and withdrew from the Commonwealth.

He said Exocet missiles like those used by Argentina to sink one British ship and damage two others during the war were transported through Cape Town to Argentina at the height of the fighting.

"It is a matter of the deepest concern as to the extent to which those circumstances and the activities of Gerhardt combined to the risk of our own security during the conflict," he said.

There has been speculation in the British press about the extent to which the Gerhardts informed the Soviet Union of the West's plans for Simonstown in the event of a world war.

Some Glassy-Eyed Reflections On TV '83

ATTIC
Sat. Dec. 31
NEW YEAR'S EVE
$5.00 ADMISSION / FREE PARTY FAVORS
WITH 2 BANDS
PANIC & NO VACANCY
(final performance ever)

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Reflections on a glossy eye from the 1983 TV world:
A Round of Applause for the Weatherman:
As a ratings gimmick, a station in Dayton, Ohio, invited a studio audience for its early evening newscast. If this stunt catches on, maybe it will improve the performance of the actors on the local news.
Never Underestimate the Power of the Press:
The nuclear disarmament movement latched on to ABC's "The Day After" and scheduled demonstrations and discussions coordinated to the film's broadcast. Press coverage of the activities and the film helped make "The Day After" must-viewing for 100 million Americans.
Before the movie became a political lightning rod, ABC didn't exactly know how to promote its nuclear war film. Would too much hype about death and destruction be in poor taste? Even worse, would it turn off potential viewers?
In the end, ABC let other people do the drumming, and it worked.
A Bloodless Coup for NBC:
NBC's "A-Team" has more bullets flying than any other show, but nobody's been hit this season. Psychologists say the lack of blood and consequences will mislead children.
Maybe so, but this isn't supposed to be reality. For escapist entertainment, we'd rather see "The A-Team" fire cabbages and watermelons and mock the violence on TV than see real violence.

The only direct hit for "The A-Team" is in the ratings.
Can We Talk about Tacky?
Joan Rivers, one of the hosts of the Emmy Award telecast on NBC, put her foot in her mouth, calling James Watt "an idiot" and uttering a profanity. She also changed her wardrobe each time she made an appearance. Where was Johnny Carson when we really needed him?
Penalty for Piling on:
The fuss over Howard Cosell calling Washington Redskins receiver Alvin Garrett "a little monkey" on ABC's "Monday Night Football" seemed a case of hitting Howard when he was down. Of course, Cosell shouldn't have said it and shouldn't have denied he said it. But it was wrong of some pundits, perhaps penalizing Cosell for previous pomposity and egotism, to suggest he's a racist.
When Will This War Ever End?
ABC's "The Winds of War" blustered on and on, 18 hours worth of Robert Mitchum making the world safe for democracy. He met Roosevelt, Hitler, Churchill and Stalin, and we half expected to see his craggy face on Mount Rushmore.
CBS Brought the Troops Home:
"M-A-S-H" spent 11½ years building friendships and 2½ hours saying goodbye. This was the war series to end all war series. Where were you the night of Feb. 28? A TV-record 106 million viewers were saluting TV at its finest.
This Guy Could Sell a Used Computer:
Alan Alda was paid $6 million to plug Atari computers. We don't know about the product, but the pitch was certainly convincing. This Alda is no Mr. Whipple. Maybe he'll get a series someday.

Fred Silverman, whose golden gut supposedly inspired brilliant programming choices at ABC and CBS and so-so selections at NBC, is now an independent producer. His "Thicke of the Night" was heavy on hype and thin everywhere else. His "We Got It Made" is insulting, infantile and ungrammatical to boot.
Best Co-ed Tag Team:
Sam and Diane of NBC's "Cheers." Great comedy comes from believable conflict, and these two lovers mix as well as beer and wine. As one of the show's producers said about their match, "they may fall in love, but they still won't like each other."

SORRY NO PASSES ON "SUDDEN IMPACT"

See UNESCO Hopelessly Politicized, Anti-West

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior Reagan administration officials say UNESCO is so "fatally flawed," so politicized and anti-Western, that they see virtually no chance it can make the changes essential to persuade the United States to reverse its decision to withdraw.

Delegates to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in Paris predict the expected loss of the large annual U.S. contribution, now about one quarter of UNESCO's $200 million budget, will force the agency to trim its staff, and to cut back and re-examine programs.

Some key Reagan administration officials, complaining of allegedly runaway UNESCO budgets, say such steps would provide at least one dose of the strong medicine they say is essential if UNESCO is to be rescued from its own "mismanagement" and domination by radical elements led by the Soviet Union.

Ending a six-month long policy review, the State Department on Thursday accused UNESCO of displaying consistent "hostility towards the basic institutions of a free society."

Jean-Pierre Cot, French delegate to the UNESCO Executive Council, said some of the U.S. complaints were

"well founded," and "some of the criticisms are shared by France." However, the French government had asked the United States not to withdraw, officials in Paris said.

"If the Americans leave, UNESCO will only be able to function poorly," said Cot.

UNESCO Secretary-General Amadou Mahtar M'bow of Senegal said last November that UNESCO would apply for an international loan if the United States pulled out. He did not give details of how such a loan would be solicited or who the lenders might be.

Speaking for President Reagan, a State Department spokesman said the United States will withdraw permanently on Dec. 31, 1984, one year from now.

Secretary of State George Shultz appeared to leave an opening for reconciliation, telling UN Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar in a letter that the year's wait offers UNESCO "a potential opportunity to respond to the serious concerns that have caused our withdrawal."

"We remain open to indications of significant improvement," Shultz said. "We would welcome meaningful changes that would eliminate the suppression of minority views within UNESCO and restore fiscal integrity to the organization."

But if Shultz left an opening, other officials made clear it is only a small one. They said this is true because U.S. concerns have been plain for months, giving UNESCO ample opportunity to change direction.

"Our conclusion is firm," said Gregory Newell, assistant secretary of State for International Organizations. "Our decision to withdraw is not a negotiating tack or a ploy of any sort."

The United States has concluded, Newell said, "there is no conceivable way that UNESCO could change its policies, its direction, its practices, such that we would be enticed to remain."

The Soviet Union reacted harshly to the U.S. announcement, saying through the official news agency Tass that the U.S. withdrawal displayed "imperial haughtiness" toward a United Nations agency which, it said, challenged Washington's course of militarism and adventurism.

But Jean Gerard, the U.S. ambassador to UNESCO, said the organization "seems to be so skewed, so far off course, so fatally flawed, that if we stayed we would become accomplices to something that it is not accomplishing the high purposes for which it was founded."

Unless the United States acts in the next 12 months to rescind its withdrawal notice, 37 years of American participation in the 161-member agency will end officially on Dec. 31, 1984.

The State Department drew up a bill of particulars against UNESCO, accusing it of having "politicized virtually every subject it deals with."

Newell said the United States is particularly upset at a $750,000 "Soviet inspired" disarmament and peace initiative which he said has no place in a cultural and scientific agency, especially since only $32,000 was budgeted for a refugee education program.

He also objected to attempts by some UNESCO members to promote a new "world information and communications order" viewed by many Western news organizations as an organized threat to international press freedoms.

Newell, under questioning from reporters, said that because of currency fluctuations between the U.S. dollar and the French franc, the U.S. contribution to UNESCO for the 1985 fiscal year would be about $28.5 million, significantly less than the current $50 million U.S. share.

Newell said the United States expects to take part in some aspects of UNESCO, even after final withdrawal, including cooperation under the Universal Copyright Convention and in continuing the development of international communications.

Shultz said the United States would try to find alternatives to UNESCO to continue scientific, educational and cultural projects.

Newell said the United States consulted with as many as 50 other UNESCO members and allies before reaching its decision to pull out.

He said the United States found "unanimous agreement with the gravity of the problems." But he offered no evidence any other government has decided to follow the U.S. lead.

"We are neither encouraging nor pushing other nation states to conclude as we have concluded," Newell said.

Air Violations By Old Crematorium

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The smoke rising from the University of Michigan Medical School contains ashes from cadavers, and the state wants to clear the air.

"You and I both have stuff in our bodies that just won't burn," said Dennis Drake of the state Department of Natural Resources' compliance section.

As a result, he said smoke containing non-combustible remains of cadavers spews from a 14-year-old crematorium at twice the rate allowed under state regulations.

A new crematorium that will meet state standards will not be ready until January 1985, and university officials say they will ask next month for permission to use the current Anatomy Department crematorium until then.

A state staff report has recommended the request be approved, since closing the crematorium would "cause unreasonable interference with the medical school's anatomy program."

Such a closing would be costly, since the 225 cadavers used annually by the medical school would have to be burned elsewhere, an associate anatomy professor, Theodore Fischer, said this week.

A spokeswoman for the Michigan Memorial Park in Flat Rock said cremation there costs $150. At that rate, commercial cremation would cost the university $23,750 per year.

All cadavers donated to the medical school are cremated after they are dissected, Fischer said, adding the ashes are packaged individually and buried annually in a mass grave at United Memorial Gardens in Plymouth.

Bowden Hopes For Minimal Turnovers

ATLANTA (AP) — With freezing temperatures expected for Friday's Peach Bowl football game, Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden says turnovers must be held to a minimum against North Carolina or the Seminoles likely will self-destruct.

"We've got to get some turnovers on defense and our offense has got to go out and not make a lot of mistakes," Bowden said Thursday at a combined news conference with Tar Heels Coach Dick Crum.

Despite a 6-5 record, including a 53-14 thrashing by Florida in its final regular season game, the Seminoles are rated a three-point favorite over North Carolina, 8-3, in the 3 p.m. EST nationally televised contest at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

The weather forecast is for temperatures in the low 30s and winds of 15 mph.

"With the expected cold weather, we have got to execute — instead of getting executed," said Bowden, referring to Florida State's 27 turnovers during the regular season, including six against arch-rival Florida.

"I agree," said Crum. "Turnovers will play a big part in the game. It was a big part of our season. One of our problems has been our inability to create turnovers. We didn't get many."

"I hope to see that tomorrow. We also will try to eliminate turnovers," said Crum, whose Tar Heels had 24 during the season while capturing 17.

As for the outcome, Crum said he talked to Bowden on Wednesday night, and both agreed they had no idea of the outcome.

Both teams were scoring machines during the regular season with both averaging better than 30 points a game. Florida State accounted for 353 points and North Carolina accumulated 334.

"High scoring or low scoring, I think you can flip a coin," said Crum.

He said his biggest fear of Florida State is the Seminoles' "potential not just for the big play, but the huge, big play. That puts tremendous pressure on a defense. They've got the weapons to do it, that's the single biggest thing."

Florida State will do it, however, without its No. 1 quarterback, Kelly Lowery. Lowery dislocated his knee late in the season and missed two games and most of the Florida contest. He threw for 1,720 yards and 12 touchdowns and scored eight touchdowns.

Bob Davis started the final three games, but Bowden has elected to give sophomore Eric Thomas of Valdosta, Ga., his first start. Thomas played in three games, rushing 10 times for 24 yards and completing three of eight passes for 51 yards.

Greg Allen leads the Seminoles' running attack with 1,167 yards.

North Carolina boasts a pair of 1,000-yard rushers in junior Ethan Horton and senior Tyrone Anthony as well as quarterback Scott Stankavage, who passed for 1,721 yards and 16 touchdowns during the regular season.

Irish Hold Off Boston College

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The new year is still two days away, but Notre Dame coach Gerry Faust figures he already has a good start on 1984 after watching his Fighting Irish upend 13th-ranked Boston College 19-18 in the Liberty Bowl.

"This is a great start for 1984," beamed Faust, minutes after Thursday night's 19-18 victory in the 25th annual game. "We played a great football team tonight and I'm very proud we could come away with a victory. It was a team effort. This is the beginning of something great."

The Irish utilized the talents of sophomore All-American Allen Pinkett, who rushed for 111 yards and two touchdowns, and junior Chris Smith, who added 104 rushing yards, to serve notice that 1984 could be their year.

"I feel really great with this victory," said Irish senior quarterback Blair Kiel, who hit 11 of 19 passes for 151 yards, including a 14-yard scoring toss to flanker Alvin Miller.

With Pinkett and Miller featured in slashing runs, Notre Dame controlled the ball throughout the contest but still had to survive a late fourth-quarter threat before finishing its season with a 7-5 record.

Boston College quarterback Doug Flutie completed 16 of 37 passes for 287 yards and three touchdowns despite temperatures hovering around 10 degrees and a wind chill factor of zero to capture the game's MVP award and almost lead the 9-3 Eagles to victory.

Boston College cut the Notre Dame lead to one point, 19-18, midway through the third quarter with a 3-yard scoring pass from Flutie to tight end Scott Gieselmann and Eagles' coach Jack Bicknell opted to go for the 2-point conversion after seeing placekicker Brian Waldron slip on the frozen turf on his only extra point attempt.

But Flutie's PAT pass intended for Gieselmann was broken up by Notre Dame linebacker Tony Furjanic and the Irish kept the Eagles out of scoring position the remainder of the game. BC failed also failed on a PAT pass following a 28-yard scoring loss from Flutie to flanker Gerard Phelan in the second quarter.

"We didn't think we could make the kick at that point," Bicknell explained later.

BC blocked two Notre Dame placements.

The Irish fell behind 6-0 early in the first quarter, but roared back to take a 19-6 lead as Pinkett scored on runs of one and three yards and Kiel hit Miller with his scoring pass.

The Eagles trailed 19-12 at the half after Flutie hit Phelan with 7:02 left in the second quarter.

Boston College made one final run at victory late in the fourth quarter but a fourth-down pass attempt by Flutie was broken up at the Notre Dame 22 with only 58 seconds remaining.

"I'm happy with this win... especially for the seniors. They deserved to go out in style," said Pinkett, a sophomore voted Notre Dame's most valuable offensive player.

In games today, 10th-ranked Iowa will take on No. 11 Florida in the Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla., while North Carolina and Florida State, both unranked, meet in the Peach Bowl.

Florida Coach Charley Pell says Iowa quarterback Chuck Long, ranked second in the nation in passing efficiency and owner of most of his school's passing records, gives the Hawkeyes a slight edge.

"He (Long) speaks for himself," Pell said. "He makes things happen... He seems to have command of a game regardless of the situation. You never have a time when he seems to not be in control."

Florida State, 8-2-1, will counter against Iowa, 9-2, with quarterback Wayne Peace, who is the second leading passer in Southeastern Conference history.

At Atlanta, both Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden and North Carolina Coach Dick Crum say the Peach Bowl is an opportunity to end disappointing seasons on a high note.

"Both ball clubs are coming in here with similar situations," Crum explained. "They had high expectations (for the season) and we had high expectations."

Both teams were highly rated early in the season, but North Carolina, after starting with seven straight victories, finished the regular season at 8-3, while Florida State is just 6-5 coming into this game.

The Peach Bowl will start at 3 p.m. EST, followed by the Gator Bowl at 8 p.m. Saturday's only game will match Baylor, 7-3-1 and tied with Oklahoma for 20th in the national rankings, against unranked Oklahoma State, 7-4, in the Bluebonnet Bowl at Houston. The game is scheduled to start at 8 p.m.

There will be five more games on Monday, headed by the Orange Bowl at Miami, matching No. 1 Nebraska, 12-0, against fifth-ranked Miami (Fla.), 10-1, at 8 p.m.

The day's activities will kick off at 1:30 p.m. with the Cotton Bowl at Dallas, featuring No. 2 Texas, 11-0, against No. 7

Georgia, 9-1-1, and the Fiesta Bowl at Tempe, Ariz., pairing 14th-ranked Ohio State, 8-3, against No. 15 Pittsburgh, 8-2-1.

The Rose Bowl, the oldest of the postseason games, will follow in Pasadena, Calif., at 5 p.m., pitting fourth-ranked Illinois against unranked UCLA, 6-4-1.

The other night game Monday will be the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans, with third-ranked Auburn, 10-1, meeting No. 8 Michigan, 9-2.

Seattle's Coach Not Satisfied With Berth

By The Associated Press
Steve Largent has a simple answer for those who say the Seattle Seahawks should be glad just to be in their first National Football League playoff.

"Baloney," says Largent, who has been a Seahawk since the club was enfranchised eight years ago.

Seattle, coming off a 31-7 victory over Denver last weekend in the American Conference wild-card playoff, faces the Miami Dolphins Saturday in one of two conference semifinals. The NFC counterpart sends Detroit against San Francisco.

On Sunday, the Los Angeles Rams travel to Washington, and Pittsburgh meets the Raiders at Los Angeles.

"This is just as important a game for us as it is for them," Largent says of the Dolphins. "If we lose, we get knocked out of the playoffs. We're going into the game with one idea — to win. Don't let anyone tell you differently."

Until this season, Largent, a three-time Pro Bowl selection, was the favorite receiver of quarterback Jim Zorn. But Zorn was benched this season in favor of four-year veteran Dave Krieg, who completed 12 of 13 passes for 200 yards and three touchdowns against Denver.

"Everybody expects them to win and everybody expects us to lose," Krieg said. "Well, we'll see."

Miami, AFC East champions with a 12-4 record and losers to Washington in last year's Super Bowl, were 7½ points favorites over the Seahawks, who finished the season 9-7.

The 49ers, winners of the NFC West with a 10-6 record, were 7-point favorites over the Lions, whose 9-7 record was best in the NFC Central. But Detroit running back Billy Sims says his club has something it never had before.

"Before this year, we didn't have the killer instinct," says Sims, who rushed for 1,040 yards this season despite missing four games with a broken hand.

Sims rushed for a career-high 189 yards in Detroit's 23-20 victory over Green Bay this season, marking what Coach Monte Clark feels was "our turnaround." At that point, the club was 5-6 coming off a loss to Houston.

Quarterback Joe Montana leads the San Francisco attack. He passed for 3,910 yards and 26 touchdowns this season while rushing for 284 yards.

Defending Super Bowl champion Washington had the best record in the NFL this year, 14-2, and won the NFC East. The Redskins are 9½-point favorites to beat the wild-card Rams, 9-7, who advanced to the conference semis by beating Dallas 24-17 last Monday.

Washington Coach Joe Gibbs' biggest problem will be injuries to his offensive linemen. All Pros Joe Jacoby and Russ Grimm have been sidelined during practice this week, as has center Jeff Bostic. They're expected to be ready Sunday, however.

The Redskins are led by the NFL's Most Valuable Player, quarterback Joe Theismann, and fullback John Riggins, who rushed for a career-high 1,347 yards. A revitalized Vince Ferragamo quarterbacked the Rams' upset of Dallas last week.

The Raiders, 12-4 and winners of the AFC West, were favored by 7 points over Pittsburgh, champions of the AFC Central with a 10-6 record. The two clubs, archrivals in the AFC, have not met in the playoffs since 1976, but their 1972 meeting is the best remembered.

The Steelers won that game 13-7 when Franco Harris was recipient of what has become to be known as the "Immaculate Reception" touchdown pass. Harris is one of only four Steelers left from that club. Harris rushed for 1,007 yards this season, leaving him 362 yards shy of Jim Brown's all-time record.

Another 1972 holdover, quarterback Terry Bradshaw, is a doubtful starter for the game. Bradshaw has started only one game for the Steelers since undergoing elbow surgery in March.

"It was a great rivalry, an outstanding rivalry," says Raiders Coach Tom Flores.

The winners of the conference semifinals will meet Sunday, Jan. 8 to determine the who will play in Super Bowl XVIII at Tampa Stadium on Jan. 22.

Frank Chance of the Chicago Cubs had the dubious distinction of being the first man thrown out of a World Series game by an umpire. It happened in 1910 in the series between the Cubs and Philadelphia Athletics.

Opponents Fall Short In Non-League Games

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

AP Sports Writer

Don't mess with the Atlantic Coast Conference, especially the first month of basketball season.

Boasting four teams in the Associated Press college basketball poll, the conference has a 61-6 record against non-league foes through games of Wednesday night. That translates to 90.5 percent through Dec. 28.

Last year, the ACC held a 47-19 record in non-conference games for 71 percent for the comparable period. The best start ever was in 1977-78, when ACC teams won their first 20 games before then-reigning national champion North Carolina lost to William & Mary. By the end of December, the conference was 53-4 for 92.9 percent.

"That was the best we had," said ACC assistant commissioner Marvin Francis. "We're probably playing more holiday tournaments now than we did then."

Including non-conference games after December, teams in the NCAA tournament as well as Wake Forest's appearance in the National Invitation Tournament, the ACC finished 1982-83 at 94-32, or 74.6 percent. In the previous year, the ACC was 92-22 for 80.7 percent.

The best non-conference year was in 1975-76. North Carolina State finished third in the NIT to boost the record to 82-13 for 86.3 percent.

"When you're winning 90 percent after the first month of the season, I don't know anyone who can beat it," Francis said.

Very few conferences have. The Big East is led by Boston College at 7-1. The only blemish on the Eagles' slate is a Christmas Eve loss to Maryland. St. John's dropped to 8-1 following Thursday night's loss to the Tar Heels. Syracuse also lost to North Carolina, and is currently 6-2. Overall, the Big East is 59-17 for 77.6 percent.

The Southeastern Conference has a 43-18 mark for 70.4 percent, while the Big 10 is at 57-10, or 85 percent.

Stanford is off to its best start in 30 years at 9-1 to lead the Pacific-10 Conference. UCLA is next at 8-1 and helps give the league a 57-29 record through Wednesday.

East Carolina University's drive to raise $1 million for its athletic program is still seeking funds, needing some quarter of a million more to reach its intended goal.

But Chancellor John Howell has already written to a number of donors expressing his thanks for the support given.

And he's let it be candidly known that without these funds, the ECU football program probably would have dropped back to the Division I-AA level — something nobody wants.

In his letter, Howell points out that the Pirate Club is also at a new high, having recruited some 1,400 new members during the past year. "Our ultimate goal is to build a membership of 8,000 to 10,000 members, a level which will be adequate to support a top Division I-A program."

But the chancellor said, too, that the work is far from over. "Much remains to be done to continue our efforts for a nationally recognized program. We still need to increase season ticket sales. We have realized an increase of almost 25 percent for football in the last two seasons, with 1983 sales exceeding 5,000. Also, single game ticket sales increased substantially. We must continue this trend in order to have near capacity crowds in Ficklen Stadium. This will be vital as we bring major football teams into East Carolina, which requires competitive guarantees similar to those we now receive on the road." Howell said that in 1983, ECU realized around $800,000 in the seven road games.

"We shall continue to do everything possible to field first rate athletic teams. We will strive to build the Pirate Club to a level of 10,000 members. Promotion and season ticket sales will receive top priority. Our schedules will reflect the trend of upgrading the intercollegiate competition for all our teams," Howell continued.

But he also sounded a note for continued support by all. "Without your fine response, we would have had to consider dropping to a lower level of competition. A Division I-A top 20 team needs more money than a team headed back to Division I-AA. Therefore, we still have work to do. Your continued support will be vital in achieving even more progress."

While Howell's letter was sent to those who contributed to the million-dollar drive, perhaps it could just have easily been sent to every one who is a Pirate supporter in any sport.

Support is vital to any program. Perhaps athletics take more money than other programs, but the rewards are great too.

While East Carolina's football schedule is yet to be announced, there are hopes that 1984 will see a fifth home game for a change.

It is now known that ECU will face Florida State, N.C. State, Southwestern Louisiana, Central Michigan, Pittsburgh and South Carolina on the road. Currently the home schedule includes Southern Mississippi, Temple, East Tennessee State, and Georgia Southern. The latter two are non-Division I-A teams.

Athletic Director Ken Karr is still seeking the 11th team for the schedule, and has all hopes that it will be a home contest for the Pirates.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

POWERLESS ON THE BATTLEFIELD!!

A TRADITIONAL CUSTOM, IN EARLY BIBLICAL TIMES, WHICH WAS A CRUEL BUT EFFECTIVE METHOD BY WHICH WARRIORS WERE MADE POWERLESS... WAS THE CUTTING OFF OF BOTH A MAN'S THUMBS AND LARGE TOES! ACTUALLY, THIS WAS LOOKED UPON AS HUMANE TREATMENT RATHER THAN AN OUT-AND-OUT KILLING. THE SUBJECT'S LIFE WAS SPARED BUT, HAVING LOST HIS THUMBS, HE COULD NOT HANDLE WEAPONS, AND LOSING HIS LARGE TOES MEANT HE COULD NOT WALK LET ALONE RUN ON THE BATTLEFIELD, PROPERLY. A MENTION IS MADE OF THIS IN JUDGES 1:4-7. ADONIBEZEK, A CRUEL AND SUSPICIOUS KING OF BEZEK, WAS GIVEN SUCH PUNISHMENT BY THE WARRIORS OF THE TRIBE OF JUDAH. ODDLY, THIS KING SAW THE "POETIC JUSTICE" IN THIS ACT BECAUSE HED GIVEN THE SAME TREATMENT TO SEVENTY OTHER KINGS WHOM HE HAD CONQUERED. THIS HE REGARDED AS A DIVINE REQUITAL, VISITED ON HIM BY GOD, FOR THE SIMILAR CRUELITIES PERPETRATED BY HIM.

Says Religious Broadcasts Up

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — Religious broadcasting grew by 10.2 percent in the United States during 1983, says the 1984 Directory of Religious Broadcasting. Based on figures compiled by the research division of National Religious Broadcasters, the directory reports a 30 percent increase in religious television programs and films and a 2 percent rise in religious radio programming. "What has been general knowledge of the surging growth in the field of broadcasting ministries is now available in documented form," says Ben Armstrong, NRB executive director.

'Peace Concert' To Be Featured

NEW YORK (AP) — In contrast to the typical New Year's Eve high jinks, a free "Concert for Peace" is being given at the Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine this Saturday evening with noted musicians participating. Astronomer Carl Sagan is to speak and conductor Leonard Bernstein to lead a key prayer for peace. More than 8,000 are expected to pack the cathedral. Prominent participants include the Soviet Emigre Orchestra led by Lazar Gosman, mezzo-soprano Frederika von Stade, baritone William Warfield, pianist Caroline Stoessinger and violinist Dora Schwarzberg.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 12-30

SMHE LTMFYE CYL UYYL FMWTF HE
VHEN FKYT FKJU-VYY SMEN WYMCTLF.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — BRAUNY SWIMMING HERO
HAD MADE BIG SPLASH AT POOL PARTY.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: F equals S.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

Players in the recent World Team Championship seemed to have great difficulty staying out of slam when they were missing two aces. In the final, the U.S. team managed to collect both its aces, and with them the world title. In the semifinal, the U.S. team bid a slam off two cashing aces, but with a luckier result.

North's two diamond opening bid could have been made on a number of hand types. His diamond rebid showed that he had a weak two-bid in hearts. South obviously expected a better suit from his partner and blasted into slam without stopping off to check on whether his side held a sufficient number of aces.

West led the ace of hearts to take a look at dummy. He decided that South had to be void in clubs for his jump to slam, so he continued with a trump. Declarer won dummy's king, and he was quick to seize his opportunity.

He came to hand with the ace of spades and sluffed dummy's remaining spades on the ace-king of diamonds. When the king of spades appeared on the next lead of the suit, it was all over. Declarer ruffed on the table, came to hand with a trump and was able to discard all of dummy's clubs on his remaining high diamond and spades. Even if West's analysis was right and South was void in clubs, it still looks right to lead the ace of clubs at trick two. It is most unlikely that one discard in the South hand would make or break the contract.

Will Propose A Plan For Tots

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state superintendent of public instruction said Thursday he'll propose to the 1985 General Assembly that a statewide pre-kindergarten program be set up for 3- and 4-year olds.

A. Craig Phillips said he and others believe that with society changing, children of that age are ready to enter school.

The program would not be just a day-care operation, but would include an educational environment for the children, he said.

"We would hope that ... we'd acquire funds as we did during the early 1970s (for the kindergartens)," he said.

Phillips said he wanted 16 models set up and that pre-kindergarten programs should be implemented statewide by the end of decade.

"As we learn more about child development, we come closer to the moment that we believe school is the best setting, better equipped in terms of personnel and know-how, to do the job of an educational program for 3s and 4s," he said.

RECOVER VIOLINS
STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Acting on an anonymous tip, police found two 17th century violins worth $200,000 in a luggage locker. The violins had been stolen from the Stockholm Museum in April 1982.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A very good last day of the year to be very definite in thinking about what you want in the years ahead and to make swift and definite plans for gaining such ambitions and goals.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Plan to see persons of different views to your own or contact those at a distance for a more interesting future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are suddenly inspired just how to handle your business matters in the future so that you become more successful.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A blunt partner shows you how to make the future brighter, so listen carefully and follow suggestions given you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You can finish work that needs to be done, but take time to show appreciation to fellow workers.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You may get an unexpected invitation that will bring you pleasure, so accept quickly. Show good intentions to the one you love.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You had better carry through with the plans made by family for New Year's Eve and be happy. Home entertainment is best.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Being active and making many new contacts is good during the day. Be sure to drive with utmost care.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A good day to analyze your financial position as the year ends and know just how you do stand. Plan improvements on property.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can clearly see all the opportunities ahead for the coming year, so be sure to plan wisely. You can become more successful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) This is a good day to see an advisor who can tell you what is best to do in the coming new year. Reach important decisions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Fine day and evening to be gregarious and see as many of your friends as you can, both in business and personal life.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Considering what you have accomplished during this year will give you a better idea of what to do in the New Year.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will never be quiet a moment, so early teach to think before speaking so as not to get into trouble. Give a fine education and add languages to the curriculum. Accentuate history and geography since travel is indicated.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Cancer is Not Contagious

My mother is being treated with chemotherapy. She had a cancer of the breast removed. She comes to visit us and our children a few times a week. My wife seems to be afraid of these visits. Even though she doesn't openly say so, she once admitted that she is afraid that cancer could be caught from my mother. Would you write about this? — Mr. L.S.P., Michigan

Dear Mr. P.: You indicate in the rest of your letter that there is a need for an urgent answer to this problem. I enjoy, of course, the fact that readers write to me but I can hardly understand why you did not go to your best single source of information — namely, the doctor who operated on your mother. The surgeon and the physician who are taking care of her would immediately have assuaged your anxiety and would have relieved your wife of the irrational fear she seems to have.

All physicians today are keenly aware of the emotional reactions of their patients to illnesses, and offer them and their families the security they seek.

Your particular problem might have been resolved by a single telephone call to your doctor. It might have spared all of you the anxiety that beclouds the pleasantness of your mother's visits.

Cancers are not contagious. They cannot be passed on to anyone by contact. Unlike infections by germs and viruses, they are not transmissible.

Although cancers are not contagious, the fear of cancer is most contagious. Unlike infections that are spread by germs to man, the fear of cancer is usually spread by man to man by an inadvertent thought or phrase.

Fear is an insidious disease that grows and thrives in darkness. Talking out one's fears makes them shrivel into insignificance.

Remember that you cannot "catch" any cancers from your mother. You can, however, "catch" a great deal of joy by the sympathetic understanding and support that you give her during this emotionally precarious time for her.

I do hope that your wife wipes out her own fears and helps devote herself to the rehabilitation of your mother.

What does a doctor see when he looks at the tongue and does it in a flash? — Miss R.V., Washington
Dear Miss Y.:

The tongue is very often a reliable indication of some kind of illness. Grandmothers have always used the appearance of the tongue as an index of their own medical wisdom. That, coupled with a kiss on the brow for fever, was their "CAT" scan at the turn of the century. Often they were remarkably right.

Some diseases show a characteristic change of the tongue. A raspberry-colored tongue is often seen during scarlet fever. White patches on the tongue may be due to thrush. Fine tremors occur with thyroid disorders and some nerve conditions.

The surface of the tongue often indicates drug reactions and/or allergic reactions.

In pernicious anemia and nutritional disturbances, changes in the tongue may be one of the earliest signs. The moisture of the tongue is a good guide to the fluid balance of the body.

The tongue is really a great help in diagnosis.

New Jail Has No Locks

NORTH BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Officials postponed the opening of the new $18 million county jail for fear it would have been too open — no locks had been installed.

Anthony W. Pellicane, deputy director of corrections and youth services for Middlesex County, said Wednesday the new Adult Correction Center, scheduled to go into use Sunday, will be opened three to five months late because of a delay in the delivery of the elaborate lock system.

The locks, connected to a computerized, automatic system, showed up last week, but Pellicane said it will take the extra time to install the system and train the employees.

"It's just one of those unfortunate things," said Pellicane.

"You can't open a prison without locks."

Cuba Land Of Shortages And Revolutionary Zeal

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
HAVANA (AP) — The Havana city museum features a "junk pile of history," a junk pile of Coca-Cola bottles, a Shell gasoline sign, the busts of old Cuban dictators. This, the guide explains, is the debris of yesterday's Western imperialism.

A glance out the window finds the debris of today — crumbling tenements of Old Havana, collapsing from years of neglect as Cuban communism struggles through economic crises.

A quarter-century after Fidel Castro's rebels seized power on Jan. 1, 1959 and ended generations of corrupt dictatorships and U.S. domination, Cuba is an island of shortage and revolutionary spirit, of fear and economic uncertainty.

It is a place where a decent education is guaranteed but decent housing is scarce, where food is rationed but good health care is widely available, where national pride is strong but the political system is so tightly organized that no debate is dead.

Above all, however, Cuba is a place where the individual feels neither safe nor secure, even as the country as a whole teeters on a narrow base.

This was a common denominator of the ordinary Cubans' lives, but it was not the only one. Retired Cuban diplomat Roberto Gonzalez said that the old Cuban society was a place where the individual felt neither safe nor secure, even as the country as a whole teeters on a narrow base.

three-quarters of a pound of beef every nine days, at 81 cents a pound.

Aurelio Miro, 69, standing in line with a dozen other people outside a butcher shop, said he eats meat only two or three times a week.

"Of course I'd like more, but at least this much is guaranteed," he said.

Rationing also covers such other staples as rice, sugar and milk, clothing and shoes, appliances and gasoline.

Miro's pension, equivalent to $106 a month, is not enough to buy additional, ration-free pork or chicken at a state-run "parallel market," at a price of $2.38 a pound, or at a "peasant market," where Cuba's few remaining private farmers sell limited produce at still higher prices — 58 cents for a single banana, for example.

But even those with more money — Cuban wages range from about $100 a month to about $500 — often must hunt for quality goods.

In Havana's Cathedral Plaza one recent Saturday, scores of women pushed and shoved to reach a makeshift stand for a chance to buy one of a few pairs of "homemade" shoes for $40. In the ration stores, they can buy only one pair of shoes per year.

The housing shortage developed because of a lack of wood, cement and other building materials, and because of the post-revolution collapse of the private construction industry.

It has reshaped Cuban life. Newlywed couples rarely find their own apartments and must live with parents. Workers sent to other parts of Cuba must crowd into spartan hostels.

In historic Havana's teeming central streets, thousands of city residents still live in 18th-century buildings that, mildewed and cracking, lean against support scaffolds. Some have already collapsed.

The 1981-85 economic plan calls for building 200,000 new housing units. But Cuban officials report gloomily that only 60,000 have been constructed in the plan's first three years.

Despite its economic shortcomings, Cuba's successes are obvious.

Drab Havana no longer has the life or flair of a Rio de Janeiro or Buenos Aires. But neither does it have the squalid shantytowns. Swarms of ragged children do not beg in Havana's streets, as in Mexico City. And although the poorest Cuban eats meat only half the time, untold millions of other Latin Americans never taste it at all.

Cuba today claims — and few dispute it — that it has nine times as many teachers as before the revolution. It also claims it has no major drug-addiction or alcoholism problems. Average life expectancy has reached 72 years of age, on a par with the United States, according to government figures.

These advances are spearheaded by a highly centralized and often oppressive bureaucracy.

If a pregnant woman ignores a checkup appointment, or a child is truant from school, the family will hear from the local Committee for the Defense of the Revolution, a kind of revolutionary block association.

The "CDRs" are the grass roots of a system that reaches up to the Communist Party elite and the National Assembly, which was established in 1976 under a new "People's Power" constitution.

The assembly meets only four days a year, when with little question it adopts bills presented by Castro's Cabinet.

It is elected by local assemblies whose members are chosen in direct popular elections. But campaigning on political issues is forbidden.

Public debate has been extinguished in other ways as well. The newspapers and broadcast stations are voices of the government and party. The only independent institution is the Roman Catholic Church, and its activities are sharply restricted.

Outside estimates of the number of political prisoners remaining in Cuban jails, many from the 1960s, range from 300 to 1,000.

Anti-Castro Cuban exile leaders retort that all of the Communists' schools and hospitals do not justify their monolithic political system.

At least one gray-haired man on Old Havana's San Ignacio Street would agree. Stopped by a foreigner who asked about "La Revolution," the Cuban looked around warily and then spat out:

"It may be all right for the young people. They don't know anything else. In the old days I was only a poor shoemaker, but at least I could do what I pleased.... Freedom has no price."

Can't Get Driveway Off Hazardous Waste List

BELLINGHAM, B.C. (AP) — A man who has been accused of poisoning his neighbors with a toxic waste list has been found out by reading the newspaper.

In a telephone interview Wednesday, a 40-year-old resident of the northwest Washington town said he apparently got on the list after a neighbor called the agency in 1981 and told them I put 450 gallons of PCB (polychlorinated biphenyls) in my driveway.

PCBs were once commonly used in lubricants and cooling oil in electrical equipment, but have been banned since they were found to cause skin and liver damage and other health problems.

In reality, Campbell said, he poured less than 20 gallons of oil from the crankcases of his three cars on about 30 yards of his dirt driveway to hold down dust in 1980.

Nonetheless, EPA officials put his driveway on the list "instead of being logical and calling me up ... or taking the time to check the story," he said.

He learned he was on the list only in October, when a report was published in The Bellingham Herald.

Since then, tests have found PCBs in one of two driveway soil samples, but at a level 1,000 times less than the threshold for concern.

Campbell said that when he called the regional EPA office in Seattle, the only person who would talk with him was "a press-release officer ... who knew absolutely nothing about what was going on."

The agency then sent him only "a list of these (potential hazardous waste) places and a two-page press release that didn't explain anything," he said.

"That's the thing that I think bugged me the most ... the stupidity of the Bureaucracy, that they can pull things like this and it's not up to them to clean things up, it's up to you," Campbell said. "To me it was a big matter, because if I hadn't had The Bellingham Herald to back me up, I'd have had to fight the whole thing — and they weren't listening."

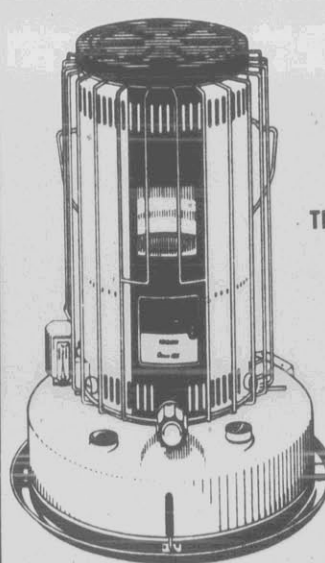

Even now, Campbell's driveway remains in the computer, although it has been put in the "no further action" category, said Deborah Flood, an EPA specialist in Seattle.

"We can't delete from the computer," she said. "EPA will have to decide on a mechanism to remove."

The problem may be resolved at a national EPA meeting in March or April.
