French Cutting Peacekeeping Forces In Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A rocket-propelled grenade slammed into the stone wall surrounding French military headquarters today, and France announced it will reduce its peacekeeping contingent in Beirut by about 500 soldiers, communiques said.

The grenade attack caused no casualties, said a French military statement.

Another communique, issued jointly by the French Foreign and Defense

Ministries in Paris, said about 500 soldiers of the 2,000-man contingent in the multinational force would be transferred at the end of the month to the U.N. force in southern Lebanon. The soldiers were originally in the U.N. force.

"The return to the U.N. force ... obviously does not modify the mission of the multinational force in Beirut, in particular, the French contingent of this force," the joint communique said.

In an account of the grenade attack, state-run Beirut radio said the projectile punched a hole in the wall around the two-story mid-city villa that once served as official residence of France's ambassador to Lebanon and his now headquarters for the French soldiers in Beirut.

French troops fired back to the southwest, where the grenade had come from, said the statement from the French military. It did not say if the return fire found its target. The communique said the Soviet-made grenade was fired from a construction site about 300 yards from the headquarters.

In the southern port city of Sidon, Lebanese reporters said Israeli soldiers arrested a Moslem leader.

Two previous arrests of Moslem religious leaders in the Israeli-occupied south sparked strikes and protests.

Sheik Abdul Rahman Hijazi of the Al-Bun Abu Taleb mosque was arrested after Israeli soldiers searched his home with dogs, the reporters said. The sheik's wife had a miscarriage after the arrest, the reporters said.

A Moslem leader from Sidon, Sheik Mohammed Salm Jalal Eddin, issued a statement urging fellow religious leaders to "organize the confrontation against 'Israeli wanton acts.'"

On Sunday, a bomb gutted the French-Cultural Center in Lebanon's northern port city of Tripoli. There were no casualties in that explosion.

In other incidents Sunday, Druse and Christian militiamen exchanged artillery fire in three villages north of the Awali River, and Lebanese soldiers came under fire in a Christian suburb of the capital, state radio said.

The Israeli military command said a roadside bomb, intended for Israeli soldiers, exploded 45 miles southeast of Beirut as a car with Lebanese civilians went by. Three occupants of the car were injured, it said.

Beirut Radio said another explosion in the area, near Nabatiyeh, was aimed at members of the Israeli-backed militia of Lebanese army Maj. Saad Haddad. It said several people were injured but did not give the exact number.

Haddad was hospitalized Sunday in Israel.

The deputy director of Rambam Hospital in Haifa said Haddad was in "serious but stable" condition today after being hospitalized for fatigue.

Zvi Ben-Ishai, the official, refused to comment on unconfirmed reports that the 46-year-old Haddad has leukemia. The daily newspaper Maariv said Haddad has an incurable disease.

Ben-Ishai said it was against Israeli law to disclose a diagnosis. He said

Castro Declares Revolution Now Is 'Inevitable'

BY CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

SANTIAGO, Cuba (AP) — President Fidel Castro, in a fiery speech under a tropical downpour, declared that Latin American revolution is "inevitable" and the United States cannot prevent it.

"One way or the other, the United States will have to resign itself to living in this hemisphere with different social systems," he said Sunday night.

Castro's speech was the keynote event on the 25th anniversary of the Cuban revolution, a revolution he said has now become "a reality ... with all promises kept."

The familiar green fatigues-clad Castro, his beard now going gray, spoke from the same city hall balcony where as a 31-year-old guerrilla leader, he delivered his first victory address Jan. 1, 1959, after dictator Fulgencio Batista fled Cuba and Castro's rebel forces poured into the island's cities from the mountains.

In the small, park-like plaza Sunday night sat 4,000 invited guests, including Communist Party and government leaders and revolutionary veterans.

Before he spoke, Castro conferred the honor of "Hero of the Republic of Cuba" on this eastern city for its role as "a cradle of the revolution."

The umbrella-less throng sat through a steady shower. But their spirits were undampened — they applauded and cheered

No Leads In Shooting Of Station Operator

Greenville Police said this morning there were "no leads" in the Saturday night shooting of a Greenville service station operator. The investigation of the killing is continuing.

According to Police Detective Sgt. Albertine, authorities had "no information" on the murder of William H. Tripp, owner of Tripp's Bypass Service Center, 101 Memorial Drive.

Tripp apparently was shot, say police, just outside the station after a struggle with his assailant, then staggered back into the building. Witnesses say the gunman headed toward a field adjacent to the station and Village Drive.

Tripp died at Pitt County Memorial Hospital after being taken there by Greenville Fire and Rescue.

New Chamber Leaders Take Office

The new chairmen of the councils of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce assumed their duties today.

Dr. Jon Tinglestad now serves as chairman of the Greenville Council and the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors. Executive vice chairman is Larry Maynard and vice chairman of budget and finance is Jean McConney.

Other new chairmen are: Ayden Council — Billy Nobles, chairman of the board; North Abernathy, vice chairman; and Louis Stanton, vice chairman of budget and finance. Bethel Council — Robert Young, chairman of the board;

Dr. Joseph Smith, vice chairman; Gene Briley, vice chairman of budget and finance; Gritton Council — Mike Phillips, chairman of the board; Dr. William Raspberry, vice chairman; and Brenda Gray, vice chairman of budget and finance.

The boards of directors, working with the vice chairman, adopted their programs of work and their budgets for 1983. The total budget for all the councils is in excess of $3,000,000.

Chamber staff members who will manage the various councils are: Pat Burnette, assigned to manage the Bethel Council; Frances Faust, assigned to manage the Gritton Council; and Chamber President Ed Wakar, assigned to manage the Ayden Council and the Greenville Council.

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce in recent years has become the largest chamber east of Raleigh with over 900 members and is the leading business and professional organization in eastern North Carolina.

The 1983 program of work in all the councils calls for over 1000 volunteers to work on the committees, task forces and special assignments.

The first board of directors meetings for 1983 will be held in Ayden on Jan. 5, in Bethel on Jan. 12, in Gritton on Jan. 17 and in Greenville on Jan. 25.

Suspect Jailed In Bethel Deaths

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

Twenty-three-year-old Harvey Lee Green Jr. of Bethel was arrested Sunday night for the double-murder of Sheila Bland and John Michael Edmondson of Bethel and two counts of armed robbery. Bethel Police Chief Jerry Ratley said today.

Ratley said he picked Green up at his home in Bethel and Green later "made a statement about what took place" on Dec. 19 when the double-murder and robbery occurred in Young's Cleaners in Bethel.

Green is being held in the Pitt County jail without bond.

Ratley said the murder weapon, described as a 2 1/2-foot piece of lead pipe, had been found Friday "a couple of blocks from the cleaners" and had helped lead investigators to Green.

"The motive was apparently just robbery. Things just turned bad on him (Green) and went down hill kind of fast," Ratley said.

Ratley said Green also had some rolled coins in his possession that "we traced back to the cleaners and learned that Green had had possession of them at one time."

Miss Bland, a 17-year-old North Pitt High School senior, and Edmondson, a 33-year-old teacher in Washington, were first thought to have died from gunshot wounds, but Regional Medical Examiner Stan Harris later ruled that they had been beaten to death and Miss Bland partially strangled. Both were found behind a partition at the dry cleaning store on Main Street.

Miss Bland was a clerk at the store and Edmondson was a customer, police said earlier in the investigation.

Ratley would not give Green's home address because "people might harrass his family, which didn't know anything about it (the murders or robberies)."

Syrian King Reportedly To Decide Pilot's Fate

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Presidential candidate Jesse Jackson met today with President Hafez Assad of Syria and said after the 90-minute session that Assad would decide later if he will free Lt. Robert Goodman Jr., the captured U.S. Navy airman.

Jackson refused to answer questions after he made a brief statement to reporters. "We are at a very sensitive stage of this appeal" for Goodman's release, said Jackson, an ordained minister, civil rights leader and a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

He said his meeting with Assad was "warm" and that the Syrian leader "listened intently."

"It was a good meeting. We remain very hopeful," Jackson said. "A final decision will be made later. Hopefully before the day is over we will have a final judgment."

Jackson was taken to Assad's suburban villa, about 10 miles south of Damascus, at about 1 p.m. Only three members of his delegation and none of the Secret Service agents escorting him were allowed to go along.

When the Secret Service agents were told by Syrian guards that they could not accompany Jackson, they objected strongly. After a few minutes, Jackson agreed to leave the Secret Service agents behind.

In a statement after seeing Assad, Jackson said he decided to give up Secret Service protection for a short time "in respect to the sovereignty of Syria, of this government and in confidence in its ability to secure us."

American Troops Tangle In Brawl

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Hundreds of U.S. troops brawled for more than six hours with fireworks and fists, leaving 30 soldiers injured during raucous New Year's celebrations, police said today.

A police statement said the fighting started New Year's Eve when some 500 U.S. Army and Air Force troops began tossing fireworks at each other in the Sachsenhausen nightlife district.

U.S. military police were called in to help German police break up at least 35 fistfights, and authorities confiscated over 500 fireworks during the skirmishes that lasted until 3 a.m. Sunday.

Police said bystanders repeatedly resupplied the soldiers with fireworks after police confiscated noisemakers.

Weatherman Says, Yes, It Was Cold

By the Associated Press

The figures are in, verifying it was the coldest December ever in many cities and abnormally frigid just about everywhere in America.

The average temperature for December had never been so low in at least 26 cities scattered from the Rockies to the northern Plains and south to Texas, where San Antonio and Amarillo suffered their coldest month at any time of year.

The average 24.7 degrees at Amarillo eclipsed the old record of 27.5 degrees posted in 1898. San Antonio averaged 43 degrees for the month.

The average of 18.4 degrees at Colorado Springs, Colo., made it the coldest December there this century while Denver had its second coldest at an average 17.4 degrees.

Colorado Springs also had its heaviest December snowfall ever with 18.2 inches, as did Pocatello, Idaho, at 33.7 inches.

The averages compiled by the National Weather Service cover readings 24 hours a day all month.

Two cities in South Dakota had the coldest readings. Sioux Falls averaged 2.1 degrees, almost 6 degrees below the old mark of 8.0 degrees registered in 1917, for that area's fourth most frigid month on record. Huron, S.D., averaged 2.8 degrees, to beat the 4.5-degree record of 1917.

In Nebraska, the December averages were well below the previous records in Grand Island, Norfolk, North Platte, Omaha and Scottsbluff, and perhaps elsewhere.

"This was the coldest December since the upper Midwest was settled," said John Pollack of the weather service's Omaha office.

At 6.9 degrees, Norfolk's average was well below the 13.1 in 1909 and 1924. In North Platte, the average was 7.5 degrees, compared with 14.6 degrees in 1978; Omaha averaged 7.8 degrees, compared with 15.6 degrees in 1909; Grand Island had an 8.4 reading, compared with 13.5 degrees in 1924, and Scottsbluff averaged 12.4 degrees, compared with 15.4 degrees in 1909.

Other cities with record monthly averages included Des Moines, Iowa, where 9.8 degrees beat the record of 15.2 degrees set in 1963; Peoria, Ill., where the 15.2 degrees narrowly edged out the 1963 record of 15.5 degrees, and Kansas City Mo., which averaged 13.2 degrees as compared with 22.2 in 1909.

Elsewhere, records were posted in St. Louis, 20.4; Tulsa, Okla., 26.7; Fort Smith, Ark., 28.9; Little Rock, Ark., 29.6; and Shreveport, La., 37.5.

Other Texas towns setting records included Wichita Falls, 30.5; Lubbock, 31.7; Abilene, 34.2; College Station, 34.5; Waco, 38.3; Del Rio, 44.6; and Houston, 45.7.

Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire To Continue Her 'No-Nonsense'

EDITOR'S NOTE — For somebody who doesn't relish politics, Mayor Kathy Whitmire of Houston has done uncommonly well. Despite a sudden upsurge of problems, a drooping economy, and some disaffection among erstwhile loyalists, she's now entering her second term, intent on revamping both her office and the city.

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — After a campaign pause lasting just long enough to win by a landslide, Mayor Kathy Whitmire has resumed her no-nonsense rescuing of Houston. Two more years in office, she says, might just be enough to finish the job.

The 37-year-old Mrs. Whitmire is concentrating first on attracting new business to Houston and leading the one-time boom city out of an economic slump. The goal, she says, is to diversify the city's economy so it will not rise and fall with the fortunes of oil.

The mayor also pledged no new taxes for her second term, which began Jan. 2, and a continuation of her "no-nonsense" style of government, including the recruitment of more top management figures for city hall.

And, eventually, Mayor Whitmire hopes to change the very structure of her office. She wants the mayor's job to have a four-year term because an election every other year, she says, is just too often.

"Two years in office is just not long enough to make all the changes that are needed in a city like Houston," she says. "Houston is the only city this large with two-year terms for the mayor."

The main problem with a two-year term, Her Honor adds, is that she has to spend almost half of the term campaigning for the next term. And Mrs. Whitmire, a remarkably successful politician, says she doesn't like politics.

Mrs. Whitmire's lopsided election to a second term surprised many observers because she was so beset by problems and controversy during her first term.

The economy, a Hollywood film, a fashion designer and even the weather created problems for the diminutive blonde with the big glasses and the dress-for-success wardrobe. Friends defected and one even decided to run against her. The police and firefighters were openly belligerent. The city transit system was a nightmare.

She found herself forced to defend against vague criticisms about "style" and "accessibility."

And just three months before the election, Hurricane Alicia smashed into Houston, causing hundreds of millions of dollars in damage and leaving behind an enormous mess.

The troubles started almost as she took office in January, 1981 — just as Houston's oil-driven boom economy cooled, sagged and slumped.

Unemployment, never before a concern for Houston, became front page news. It rose steadily and eventually topped 10 percent. Camps of unemployed and homeless formed about the city, often peopled by economic refugees from the North who could find no work here.

Municipal income shrank by tens of millions of dollars as sales tax receipts declined. The city that once seemed unaffected by crippling limits suddenly felt the pinch.

The city bus service, always terrible, grew worse. Morale in the police department, where rank-and-file officers opposed Mrs. Whitmire, sank even lower.

And then Hollywood inadvertently created an image problem with a movie called "Tootsie" because Mrs. Whitmire bears a striking resemblance to the character played in drag by Dustin Hoffman. Fashion designer Richard Blackwell emphasized the similarity by putting Mayor Whitmire and Hoffman in a last place tie on his "10 Worst Dressed" list, describing her as wearing "Betsy Bloomingdale discarded."

Mrs. Whitmire handled the Tootsie-Blackwell notoriety with humor, turning it to her advantage. "I feel comfortable about what I wear," she said. "I hope Dustin Hoffman does too."

And she didn't change the style that had become almost her uniform — skirted suits with soft blouses and bows or ruffles.

Against the other problems, Mayor Whitmire showed considerable skill in applying what she called "tough, no-nonsense" management.

She recruited experts to run the troubled city departments, ignoring protests because some were from outside Texas.

From Atlanta, she got both a police chief, Lee Brown, and a transit system director, Alan Kiepper.

Brown, Houston's first black police chief, ignored racial animosities and reorganized the department virtually from top to bottom. Kiepper renovated a system plagued by broken buses and canceled or late schedules, improving it so buses were on schedule 90 percent of the time.

When city revenues dipped below expectations, Mayor Whitmire trimmed expenses, cutting services in some areas and planning layoffs of employees, mostly in the parks department. She organized a new garbage collection system that saved $4 million.

And she still managed to pave more than 500 miles of city streets.

In the hurricane cleanup, Mayor Whitmire organized $10 million worth of hauling contracts. City Council members sniped at her for weeks, but by late October some two million cubic yards of debris had been cleared.

She built a reputation for efficient management but also, among some of her supporters and media people, the image of a cold technician, lacking the common touch. "Government is not the place for emotion," she said, ignoring the barbs.

She doesn't relish talking to the press, news conferences have been rare and in interviews she quickly shuts off questions about her personal life.

Mrs. Whitmire, widowed since 1976, took on the odds and establishment candidates in her first bid for elective office and became controller. Her money battles with then-Mayor Jim McConn made a lot of news, and she began to attract a coalition of supporters — Hispanics, blacks, gays, and the new, college-educated junior executives who were beginning to make their influence felt in the Houston business structure.

The coalition showed its strength when Mrs. Whitmire entered the 1981 mayor's race. She outpolled incumbent McConn and 13 other opponents and made it into a runoff against the popular county sheriff, Jack Heard.

Heard ran a cool, confident campaign, largely ignoring Mrs. Whitmire until the 5-foot-tall candidate ran newspaper ads challenging the brawny sheriff to come out and "fight like a man."

When the votes were counted Houston, had its first woman mayor.

But in her race for reelection, Mayor Whitmire faced different problems — an alienated press, the disaffection of earlier supporters and her record.

Bill Wright, who raised money for her first mayoral campaign, filed to run against her. The city's largest newspaper supported Wright. He was able to raise almost a million dollars and gather support from many who had backed Kathy Whitmire two years before.

Mayor Whitmire went into her "campaign mode," making appearances at festivals, giving interviews to surprised reporters and even serving as a disc jockey at a radio station.

The so-called "inaccessible" mayor suddenly appeared frequently at public gatherings and spent hours meeting with various groups.

She took 62 percent of the vote to become the first Houston mayor in 14 years to win re-election without a runoff.

She was quick to spot the irony of the victory.

"We've had tornadoes, we had floods, we had a hurricane," said the mayor at a victory celebration. "Someone on my staff said now we've got to prepare for a plague of locusts."

Only a few blocks away, at that moment, two downtown buildings were covered with grasshoppers in a migration that confounded scientists.

Happy New Year! Fashion proclaims 1984 as the "Year of the Sweater," so make it a resolution to knit a truly smashing sweater as your first project of the year.

Here's a real eye-catcher, highlighted by diagonal cables outlining a moss-stitch center triangle. It's designed to be made in four natural shades of luxurious mohair and alpaca imported from Scotland and directions are written for sizes 8 through 16.

To obtain instructions for making the stunning geometric cable pullover, send your request for Leaflet No. KL-0101 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. K-0101 by sending a check or money order for $57.50 for sizes 8 to 10 or $83 for all other sizes to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes four blending natural shades of Ithistledown (imported mohair and alpaca yarn), full instructions and shipping charges.

Dear Pat: Having enjoyed your knitting tips for several years, I would like to return the favor and share a variation of one of your old patterns. I have used your knit 2 (purl 1, purl 2 together, yarnover, knit 1) many times for scarves and hats.

On my last hat, I discovered a whole new pattern by working on a multiple of 4, plus 3. I start each row with knit 2, work in the regular pattern all the way across and end with purl 1, working every row the same.

It makes a closer pattern, with a beautiful ridge, and is warmer for hats, firmer for scarves. Hope you like this.—Arlene B., Evansville, Ind.

Recently, a reader requested a copy of a pattern stitch I had previously described — a stitch ideal for scarves because it is the same on both sides. I remembered that it was a 1-row repeat and that it involved purling 2 stitches together and making yarnovers.

When I couldn't find the old column, I sat down with needles and yarn and tried to duplicate the pattern stitch from memory and — though it was a very simple one — just couldn't quite get it back.

Then I came across this letter from Arlene B. and gained not only a variation but the old pattern stitch as well. The original version is given in the opening paragraph of Arlene's letter and is worked on a multiple of 4 stitches plus 2. This means that it is worked over any number of stitches evenly divisible by 4 with 2 extra stitches added to the overall number.

To start the pattern, work 2 knit stitches at the beginning of the row and then repeat only those steps down in parentheses over and over across the row. Every row is worked the same.

To work Arlene's version, you would cast on 1 additional stitch, giving you the required multiple of 4 plus 3 and would work every row the same except that you would have that extra stitch at the end of every row, which would always be worked as a purl stitch.

This is a good example of how a minor change in a stitch multiple will give an entirely different look to a pattern stitch. Sit down sometime with yarn and needles and just "play" with pattern stitches. I'm betting that you may come up with a "new" stitch that you can proudly proclaim as your own.

In closing, I might just mention that you will normally find pattern stitch repeats given between sets of asterisks instead of parentheses as given here. Asterisks, however, have a different meaning to some computers and can cause the text of my column to be garbled when received by newspaper computers in some areas. That's why I opt to use parentheses instead.

Cooking Is Fun

- By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
- APPLESAUCE BRAN MUFFINS
- 1 1/4 cups fork-stirred unbleached all-purpose flour
 - 3 teaspoons baking powder
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 2 tablespoons sugar
 - 1 cup whole-bran cereal
 - 1 large egg
 - 1-3rd cup milk
 - 2-3rd cup sweetened applesauce (from a 15-ounce jar)
 - 1/4 cup butter, melted
- In a medium bowl stir together flour, baking powder, salt, sugar and bran. In a small bowl beat egg until foamy; add milk, applesauce and butter and beat to blend; add to flour mixture; stir only until dry ingredients are moistened. Turn into buttered muffin pan cups (each 2 1/2 inches across the top and 1 inch deep), filling them 2-3rds full. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 20 minutes. Best served hot, fresh from the oven, with butter. Makes 12.
- DATE PUDDING
- 1/4 cup unbleached all-purpose flour
 - 1 teaspoon baking powder
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
 - 3 large eggs
 - 1/2 cup sugar
 - 1 cup thinly sliced pitted dates
 - 1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
- On wax paper or in a small bowl stir together flour, baking powder, salt and nutmeg. In a medium bowl beat eggs until foamy; gradually beat in sugar until thickened and lemon color; gently stir in flour mixture until blended; fold in dates and walnuts. Turn into six 6-ounce buttered custard cups, filling each about 3/4 full. Place in a 13 by 9 by 2-inch baking pan; fill the pan with enough warm water to have it come up about as high as the pudding mixture. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until tops are crusty and browned — 45 minutes. Remove cups to a wire rack to cool. Loosen edges and turn out. Serve with whipped cream. Makes 6 servings.

Couple Marries Sunday In Double Ring Ceremony

Lisa Susan Mills and Charles Frederick Owens Jr. were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Willis Wilson in the Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church near Winterville.

Parents of the bride are Mrs. George M. Katje of Newport News, Va. and Alvin H. Mills of Morehead City. Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Owens Sr. of Stantonsburg are parents of the bridegroom.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother and stepfather. Diane Bertram of Beaufort, cousin of the bride, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Diane Avery of Farmville, Melody Resha of Macon, Ga. and Rhapsody Owens of Stantonsburg, sisters of the bridegroom.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Patrick A. Owens III of Wilson, brother of the bridegroom. John Ward of Raleigh and Bradley Mills of Newport News, Va., brother of the bride.

Jimmy Aycock of Fremont was organist. Barry Page, Clifton A. Lynch Jr. and Suzanne Shelton were vocalists for the ceremony.

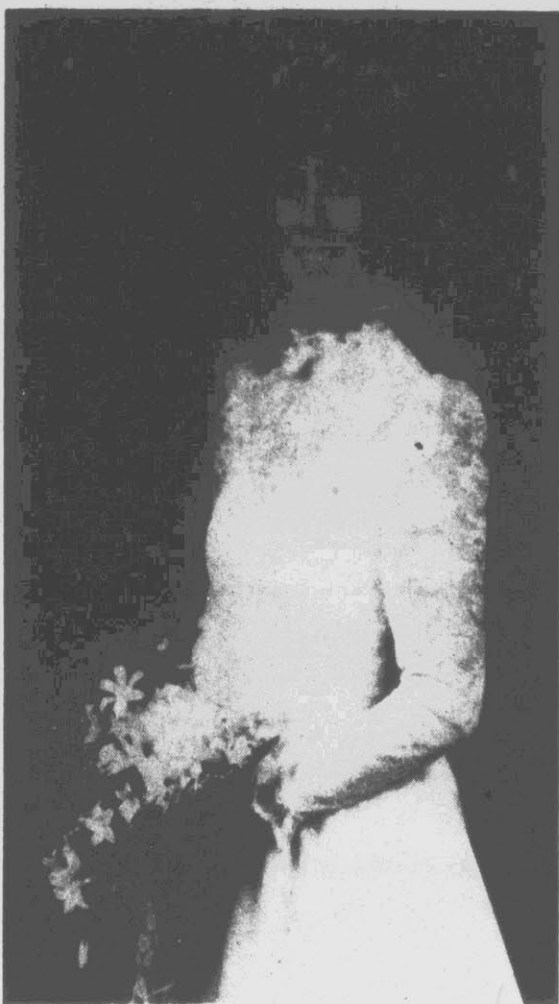

The bride's gown was of ivory bridal taffeta fashioned with a bodice of French imported lace, Victorian sleeves and a full skirt with a chapel length train. Matching lace panels adorned the skirt with garlands of lace at the hemline. She wore a halo of ivory and cranberry silk flowers and carried a bouquet of ivory and cranberry mums, miniature lilies and forget me nots of silk.

Each of the attendants was dressed in a gown of cranberry crepe backed satin featuring a bateau neckline, back drape, winged sleeves and matching sash. Each carried a bouquet of ivory and cranberry silk flowers.

The parents of the bridal couple entertained at a reception in the church parlor after the ceremony.

The bride is a graduate of Menchville High School in Newport News, Va. and attendant East Carolina University. She works at Roche Biomedical Laboratories, Inc. The bridegroom is employed with the Greenville

MRS. CHARLES FEDERICK OWENS JR.

Fire and Rescue Department. He graduated from Saratoga Central High School and attended ECU.

An after-rehearsal dinner party was given by the bridegroom's parents at Parkers Friday evening.

Wedding Vows Are Solemnized Sunday

The wedding ceremony of Mary Brenda Briley and Charles Henry Elliott took place Sunday afternoon at two o'clock. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. David Hill at Sweet Gum Grove Free Will Baptist Church.

A program of wedding music was performed by Mrs. Willie Briley, sister-in-law of the bride. Donna Glisson sang "We've Only Just Begun," "Whither Thou Goest" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Pamela Hulon of Greenville, daughter of the bride, presided at the guest register.

Given in marriage by her children and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of daphne rose lustreglo designed with a ring neckline edged in piping. The gathered bodice featured an inset yoke of ivory French Nottingham lace with covered buttoned closures at center back. Lace trimmed the sleeves and the waistline was encircled with a crushed cummerbund from which fell the flared skirt. She wore a halo of baby's breath in her hair and carried a bouquet of pink and white miniature carnations and baby's breath accented by pink and white ribbons.

Sharon Tyson of Farmville, sister of the bride, was honor attendant and wore a formal gown of dusty pink lustreglo styled identical to that of the bride. She carried an arm bouquet of pink mums accented by pink and white ribbons.

Charles Henry Elliott Jr. of Bath, son of the bridegroom, served as best man. Upon leaving the chapel the bridal couple presented their mothers with a red rose.

After the ceremony a reception was given by members of the family at the local community building. Wedding cake was served by Janie Sutton and punch was poured by Nina Wright, aunts of the bride. Assisting in serving were Louella Pollard, Ann Lloyd, Lillian Gurganus, Hazel Tripp and Pauline Tetterton, aunts of the bride.

Dear Abby

Tuberculosis Still Around, And In Surprising Numbers

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for your article saying that just because a person's TB test came back "positive," that doesn't condemn him for life.

I was drafted for the first World War, but I was put on "hold" when my test for tuberculosis showed "positive." After going through the clinic and having regular check-ups, my TB tests showed negative.

Today I am 89 years old, and I'm still active delivering "Meals on Wheels" to the sick and shut-ins.

JOHN V.H.

DEAR JOHN: Good for you! Although there is far, far less TB today than there was 70 years ago, it's definitely still with us. An estimated 50 million Americans are infected with TB germs; many of them should be treated, but most of them don't even know they're infected. (Some have chronic coughs they attribute to too much smoking; others just feel tired all the time.) A simple test will show whether they have TB.

Times have changed; TB patients no longer go for long hospital stays. Most do not go to a hospital at all. New medicines make it possible for them to get treatment at home, live normally and keep their jobs.

For a free, up-to-date pamphlet explaining how TB is "caught," the symptoms, and how easy it is to cure once detected, contact your local American Lung Association (the Christmas Seal people). Look in your telephone book, or call information. It's a matter of life and breath.

DEAR ABBY: I am really on the spot. I am planning a lovely church wedding with bridesmaids, ushers and "the works," as they say.

My mother just assumed that my brother's children, Cindy, 4, and Richard, 7, will be in the wedding party as flower girl and ring bearer, so she went ahead and mentioned it to my sister-in-law, and now the kids are "practicing."

Abby, I definitely do not want any children in my wedding party! What should I do?

THE SOMETHING BLUE IS SUE

DEAR SUE: Tell your mother to go ahead and "mention" to your sister-in-law that she spoke too soon because you're not having children in your wedding. (And wear a blue garter.)

DEAR ABBY: "L. in Seattle" complained about receiving unwanted or duplicate magazine subscriptions as Christmas presents. L. wrote: "It bothers me to know that a well-meaning friend has spent money on a gift that is unread, then tossed out."

Surely there is a convalescent home in L.'s town—or a veterans' hospital or a jail.

Believe me, my donations of magazines, new or used, are greatly appreciated. And if you don't want your name and address spread around, cut out the label.

S. IN NORWICH

DEAR S.: You get an "A" for an OK suggestion.

DEAR ABBY: "Thin but Healthy" has got to be kidding. (She's annoyed when people ask her if she's anorexic because she's healthy as a horse.)

In the Namib Desert's world of sand, many animal species survive without ever seeing a living plant. Detritus from vegetation far away blows through the dunes every day, and, much like plankton in the sea, provides the basis of the Namib food chain, says National Geographic.

Tonya Edwards, daughter of the bride, distributed rice bags to guests.

The couple will live near Greenville after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

I have been fat, fat, fat all my life, except for three short periods in my adult life when I drove myself nearly crazy reducing to a "normal" size (14).

In 1945 I went to a fat farm and starved. In 1946 I lived on a powdered drink mixed with water, and in 1947 I joined a weight-loss club. I lost over 60 pounds each time, but gained it all back. I simply cannot live on 1,000 calories a day. I get so weak and faint I can hardly walk.

I've had salespeople yank clothes out of my hands and yell, "That's not your size!" Once I described what I wanted in an Easter frock, and the clerk said, "I know what you want, lady, but they don't make clothes like that in your size."

I am 67, and believe me, I've tried everything. I've dieted, cried and prayed, but I cannot hold onto a size 14. Now I've been made to feel like a sinner because I am fat.

My husband says I am nice looking. (He's lying, of course. Who can be nice looking at 5 feet 6 and 190 pounds?) And my doctor says I'm healthy.

I know you can't help me, but I feel better just getting this off my chest.

FAT IN FLORIDA

DEAR FAT: If your husband says you're nice looking and your doctor says you're healthy, believe them. Your problem is how you feel about yourself. You are obsessed with your weight.

What else do you have in your life? Look around. Everywhere you will see large people who come on as confident, attractive and sparkling with personality. It's how you perceive yourself that counts. I know that your weight has been the most important thing in your life for years, but it's not too late to learn how to accept yourself.

It might take some therapy, but you've tried everything else; why not give it a chance?

(If you've put off writing your thank-you notes because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Editorials

Bitterness Can Fade

It was not a happy occasion, but striking Greyhound workers voted to approve a new contract following a seven-week strike.

The workers had to make concessions in wages. A few years ago that would have been unheard of, but there is a new economics at work which dictated the acceptance of the new contract.

Greyhound has been unable to meet the competition of other bus lines because its wage scale was higher than its competitors. In some cases airlines were able to offer lower fares between two points than could be offered by Greyhound. With a situation like that it becomes obvious that Greyhound would eventually be without customers and thus its workers would be without jobs.

It thus became clear to the workers on strike that accepting the new contract was the prudent thing to do. It has to be a bitter pill to swallow to accept cuts in wages when the financial gains were so hard won. Yet, it has happened in other industries, often because products made in other countries were being produced at lower costs.

The efforts of workers are a saleable product which has to be sold in the market place just as all products. When the product becomes overpriced it does not sell.

That does not mean there cannot be future gains for labor. The answer there will be increased efficiency and pride in workmanship. American labor is far from falling apart. There will inevitably be adjustments in wages and working conditions in our rapidly changing society, but there can be an excellent standard of living ahead for American workers.

What's Up, Doc?

Our opinion of censors falls to a new low with reports they are "doing terrible things" to the violent antics of Bugs Bunny and friends.

We assume they are heeding the cry that such comedy "must be harmful to the young" as basis for censorial activity.

We point to grandparents as among the most loving, gentlest and self-sacrificing of the human species. (Perhaps in the realm of rabbits, too.)

Those grandparents made Bugs a star; applauding, enjoying and admiring the cartoon adventurer. Somehow the violence did not prove communicable nor lend itself to unapproved genetic traits.

No matter.

The censors are trying to make sure Bugs Bunny and his cohorts will lose the qualities that made them stars of Hollywood, radio, television and even the comic strips.

May those unrepentant Scooges of comedy be condemned to a lifetime diet of raw carrots and no laughter.

Today it's Bugs Bunny. Tomorrow it may be The Three Stooges.

To arms!

Tax Havens

WASHINGTON — Some of the world's tiniest nations are forcing Ronald Reagan to choose between two pet projects in a dispute over economic assistance for the Caribbean.

Specifically, White House efforts to corral drug traffickers who use certain Caribbean countries as havens from U.S. tax collectors, while boosting aid to the same nations, may prove a bridge too far.

Under the Caribbean Basin Initiative (CBI), which was enacted last August and goes into effect Jan. 1, designated nations must agree to exchange fiduciary information with the Treasury Department in return for lower duties. The Internal Revenue Service, which says that billions of taxable dollars are laundered through offshore banks, would like to obtain data on financial institution activity in certain "tax havens."

Yet both Barbados and St. Vincent, two well-established tax havens among the 11 CBI designees, have recently declared that they'd rather forget their small share of the CBI's benefits than break pledges of confidentiality to their resident banks. Other potential beneficiaries, including the Bahamas, Antigua-Barbuda, and three British colonies — Bermuda, Montserrat and the Cayman Islands — have also declined participation for similar reasons.

U.S. officials, of course, may care little about these ingrates, preferring to dish out bigger shares of the CBI pie to such political priorities as Grenada, Honduras and El Salvador.

But the possibility that more countries will forsake CBI only underscores the problem of trading developmental aid for other purposes. The Reagan administration undoubtedly wants to impede social upheaval in the region as well as catch big-time tax cheats and drug dealers. While its goals may be reasonable, the White House may find that this program, at least, can't accomplish both.

Some young men may have more to fear than the draft when they register with the Selective Service System (SSS). In recent weeks, the SSS offered the names of 11 million men, 18 to 23 years old, to the Parent Locator Service at the Department of Health and Human Services.

"It's too early to tell how helpful this information will be to the states in tracking down absent fathers who aren't supporting their children," said HHS administrator Karry Washington. "But it sure looks promising."

Caught with our pants down? — That's how one State Department official described administration reaction to an announcement by Argentina last month that it had successfully tested a uranium enrichment plant capable of processing fuel for nuclear weapons. As one administration source told Nucleonics Week, the development "represents a startling and dismaying failure of intelligence gathering."

The news must have been particularly disturbing for Reagan administration officials, who've assisted nuclear development in nations like Argentina which haven't signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. Last August, the U.S. approved the transfer of 143 tons of heavy water, essential for nuclear power production, from West Germany to Argentina.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state budget office is hoping that the economic recovery in 1984 will generate a large revenue surplus by the time the General Assembly meets next summer.

That would be a big change from 1983, when legislators struggled to cut fat from programs and raised taxes and fees by more than $100 million a year to make ends meet.

"We hope that as the recovery picks up we will have some big surpluses," said state budget officer John A. Williams. "At the moment we're right on the button."

Williams said the Legislature predicted revenues in 1983-84 would grow by 8.1 percent and it raised taxes by 3 percent. He said that revenues for the year were up 12 percent at the end of November.

The 3 percent tax increase included higher sales tax on new cars, a new tax on used cars and a sales tax on vacation home rentals.

In addition, the budget office is spending only 95 percent of the amount appropriated. Spending levels were cut to 94 percent in 1982-83 when it became apparent that needed revenues would not be collected.

"This year since we've got to have a 12 percent increase to break even ... we felt it would be better to be safe and sure before we started spending all this money," Williams said.

The economic turnaround also is happening in other states across the nation, many who anticipated deficits and increased taxes at an unusually high rate.

Morgan Guaranty Co. of New York predicts that states and local governments will have an overall surplus of $15 billion for 1983 compared with a combined operating deficit of $3 billion in 1982.

Williams said North Carolina had a surplus of about $45 million at the end of the last fiscal year. He said he would be more comfortable with a surplus of about $100 million at the end of this fiscal year.

Part of the problem is that tax revenues are sensitive to fluctuations in the national and state economies, which are almost impossible to predict reliably.

"The sales and income tax really reflect what's going on in the economy," Williams said. "We adjust the operations of government to the revenue that comes in."

Gov. Jim Hunt, state School Superintendent Craig Phillips and others already are looking at ways to spend any surplus money.

Hunt has promised to concentrate on the public schools when he goes to the Legislature to recommend budget adjustments in 1984. His state Commission on Education for Economic Growth is soliciting public suggestions and Phillips has come up with his own package of ideas.

Phillips wants to spend $200 million in 1984-85 to raise teachers' salaries, $50 million in 1985 and beyond for a career development plan, $10 million in 1985 and later for on-the-job training, $200 million a year to improve school buildings.

Williams said he thinks existing taxes will generate enough money for the projects if the economy continues to improve.

No House Calls In Sight

"Hello. Operator, I'm having trouble with my telephone."

"Just a minute. I'll turn you over to our repair department."

"Repair department. What can I do for you?"

"My phone is broken. Can you send someone over to fix it?"

"Is it our phone or one of theirs?"

"What do you mean, 'one of theirs'?"

"Did you buy it from us or somebody else?"

"I bought it from an electronics store."

"Did you notice were it was made?"

"I think it said Japan on the box. At least the instructions that me with it were in Japanese."

"It sounds like one of theirs. we don't fix any phones except our own."

"What do I do?"

"Call the store and find out where they service them."

"Hello, is this Crazy Charlie's? I bought a phone from you last week and it doesn't work. Can you send someone over to service it?"

"Are you off your rocker, lady? We don't make house calls."

"Well, can I bring it in to you to have it fixed?"

"You can if you want to, but we have to send it to San Juan, Puerto Rico, to check it out."

"Isn't there any place in the city that can repair the phone?"

"There isn't any place in the city that can even read the instructions."

"But you gave me a 90-day warranty with the phone."

"Of course we did. We never sell a phone without a warranty. Did you read it?"

"How could I read it? It's in Japanese."

"Well, it says the warranty is good for 90 days except for parts, labor and it going on the blink."

"That's not much of a warranty."

"Why don't you call Tokyo and tell them?"

"Is there anybody you know who can fix my phone?"

"There's a Toyota salesman in Baltimore who moonlights fixing phones that are imported from Japan. His address is 109 Maple Drive. His name is Mr. Ikki."

"Thank you."

"Mr. Ikki, I was told you could fix my phone. I drove all the way from Washington. Can you help me?"

"What is wrong with it?"

"I can't get a dial tone to call out. And it doesn't ring when someone is trying to call in."

"Then you must have bought it at Crazy Charlie's."

"How did you know?"

"All their phones do that. Madam, just by looking at it I can tell you have a very sick telephone."

"I wouldn't be here if I didn't. I thought the Japanese made very good electronic equipment."

"They do, but your phone wasn't made in Japan. It was made in Taiwan and stamped Japan. The Taiwanese are notorious for stamping anything they want to on their goods."

"But can you fix it?"

"I would have to replace the ear and mouthpiece, the dial tone, and put in a new bell."

"How much would that cost?"

"One hundred and forty dollars."

"But I only paid $79 for the phone."

"Crazy Charlie gives good prices when it comes to telephones."

"I'd just as soon buy a new telephone."

"That's what I was going to suggest."

"Who do I buy it from?"

"I would suggest your local telephone company."

"If I buy one from them, how much will they charge me to install and service it?"

"Probably $140."

Strength For Today

People often ask why Peter, who denied his Lord with oaths, was quickly forgiven and received back into the love of his Lord while Judas was unforgiven and condemned.

The difference lay not in what the men did, but in the men themselves. Peter had a bad lapse of conduct, but he did not experience a lapse of faith. Terrorized by the prospect of being arrested, being brought to trial and punished, Peter denied that he knew Jesus, yet never for a moment did he lose faith in his Lord or the things his Lord stood for. Peter could be received back again because while he had failed in many ways, it was the man himself who failed and not his faith.

But Judas lost faith in Jesus, and when he did, he was ready to sell him for 30 pieces of silver. Judas revealed in his betrayal the truth of the statement that God forgives everything but our despair.

Appeasement Ends In Retreat

WASHINGTON — An attempted appeasement of Democratic critics in the Senate resulted in humiliating political retreat for the Reagan administration when USIA Director Charles Z. Wick signed secret terms of surrender.

Hard-driving Charley Wick, one of Ronald Reagan's closest friends, agreed to stop financing political seminars for foreign visitors after liberal Senate Democrats complained about their right-wing orientation and threatened to use the power of the purse against the USIA.

But that looks like the opening wedge against Wick. His high-level supporters told us privately that Wick made a mistake in signing the surrender document that threatens to undermine imaginative, experimental policies he has managed to force on the staid old United States Information Agency (USIA).

Wick felt he had no alternative, and he may have been right. If so, it demonstrates the continued power of the Democrats and their staff network in the Republican-controlled Senate. Helped along by the complaisance of moderate GOP colleagues, it turns back strong ideological currents sweeping out of the Reagan White House.

On Nov. 2, Wick signed a one-paragraph letter addressed simply to "The Honorable Claiborne Pell" and "The Honorable Charles Percy." Wick wrote that he had determined "that there will no longer be any funding in the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs for conferences and seminars on contemporary political or economic issues."

A second sentence carried particularly foreboding overtones. Wick promised that he would "work with" the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, chaired by Percy with Pell as the senior Democrat, "to develop guidelines on other kinds of conferences and seminars in that Bureau." He thereby opened door to the baying Democratic wolves.

The Cultural Affairs Bureau is a principal source of one of USIA's key functions: bringing foreigners here to see America and its curious customs. It has been accused by Pell and the Foreign Relations Committee's other Democrats of financing "conservative" and "right-wing" conferences and seminars for the visitors. Thus, Pell and his colleagues ordered committee staffer Peter Galbraith to summon key Wick aides to Capitol Hill Nov. 2 to extract major concessions on next year's programs and financing.

The ideological preferences of Galbraith (son of famed economist John Kenneth Galbraith) are variously described as ranging from "left-wing" to "moderate." There is no doubt, however, that he knows how to promote the interests of Pell and his other clients. He informed USIA Assistant Director Mark Everson, a Wick protégé, that the agency's request for $12 million — a $5 million increase — for the Cultural Affairs Bureau was vulnerable. Worse, he said, high-restrictive language would be put into the new funding bill "unless I get a letter today" committing Wick to end the bureau's financing of seminars and conferences.

Everson promised to "get to letter." He telephoned Wick and, without further ado, the director authorized the one-paragraph surrender. That satisfied Galbraith on the matter of the restrictive language. Nevertheless, Pell refused the $5 million funding increase. In doing so, the liberal Democrat was backed by the Senate Republican Percy's written policy to let him control committee actions on all USIA cultural programs (in return for which Pell supports Percy on some other committee matters).

Report Blames Latin Discord On Economy

By MARTIN MARRIS
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Economic problems, not external subversion, are to blame for much of the unrest in Latin America and will not be solved until the United States helps countries in the region reduce multibillion-dollar debts, says a report released today.

Present policies are creating a "permanently sick continent on the U.S. doorstep," says the report by a group of Miami-based economists, college professors, business executives and lawyers.

"The consequences of this could prove to be a greater and more pervasive threat to U.S. national security than the problem of Soviet influence in the Caribbean Basin, and extremely harmful to the U.S. economy," says the report, which is based on an eight-month study.

Latin American countries can reduce the $350 billion debt owed to U.S. creditors only if American administrations abandon their policy of maintaining high domestic interest rates and work to slash them through a cut in the federal deficit, the report says.

The report proposes lowering tariffs placed on goods entering the United States from the region; increasing foreign aid; and making aid conditional on improvements in human rights.

Unless such policies are put into effect soon, current aid and policies are simply "putting a series of Band-Aids over a gushing wound," said Alexander McIntire, a graduate fellow at the University of Miami who was coordinator for the report.

"The point that I heard made over and over is that it has to be a concerted effort," McIntire said in a telephone interview. "It cannot be a single effort by the United States that can change this. It has to be interwoven with policies that must be implemented by the countries involved."

McIntire said that if there was an "overarching" issue that came out of the report, it was the debt problem and the call for a reduction in U.S. interest rates.

However, E. Bradford Burns, a sociology professor at the University of California in Los Angeles, said in a telephone interview that the policies suggested in the report are neither original nor likely to work.

"The problems of Latin America are not going to be solved by trade and aid," Burns said. "It's no more than an aspirin, a palliative. It doesn't solve the poverty problem in Latin America."

But he agreed with the report's contention that too much emphasis has been placed on external subversion, despite the successful invasion of Grenada in October.

"Both sides, East and West, play the issue of confrontation," he said. He cited the "endemic poverty" in many Latin American countries, calling it the "fundamental basis for conflict, frustration and revolt."

Louis Nigro, a spokesman at the State Department Operations Center in Washington, said no one was available to comment on the contents of the report.

The report said that direct investment in Latin America by foreign concerns could be increased by extending the authority of the federal Export-Import Bank to provide protection to investors. It called President Reagan's Caribbean Basin Initiative, under which the United States is granting economic assistance and access to U.S. markets, an important component of needed aid.

The panel recommended an increase in all forms of foreign aid with the exception of military assistance, suggesting that the United States should "provide military assistance as needed.

but discourage competitive arms buildups made at the expense of the local economy."

On human rights, the report suggested that "the American administration should 'condition aid and support of governments to respect for human rights,' but without 'applying mechanical formulas.'"

The administration should "state clearly to Moscow and Havana that the severe economic crisis in Latin America, regional conflicts or civil wars cannot be exploited to the detriment of U.S. interests," the report said.

Salvadoran Rebels Destroy Span On Pan-American Road

MERCEDES UMANA, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels destroyed El Salvador's most important bridge, part of the main Pan-American Highway through Central America, in their second major blow to the armed forces in three days.

Armed forces spokesman in the capital of San Salvador and the rebel high command said guerrillas Sunday dynamited the Cuscatlan Bridge as many of the 200 U.S.-trained soldiers guarding the steel span were celebrating New Year's Day. The 1,500-foot bridge was 60 miles east of the capital.

Soldiers guarding the bridge denied that it was dynamited. They told The Associated Press two cannon shells broke the cables supporting a 900-foot section of the bridge, causing it to crash into the Lempus River.

El Salvador was not the only Central American nation where violence marked the new year. In Nicaragua, a government spokesman claimed Sandinista forces killed at least 40 U.S.-supported rebels in battles near the Honduran border, while losing 25 of their own men.

The 42-year-old Cuscatlan Bridge at the border of San Vicente and Usulután provinces was on the major highway to the eastern third of El Salvador, where the rebels are strongest.

"We heard the first artillery shots while we were still exchanging New Year's embraces," said one soldier who was on duty at the bridge, reduced to twisted steel by the attack.

The attack killed five soldiers and one civilian and wounded an undetermined number of troops, said local military sources, who did not want to be named for security reasons. There was no report of rebel casualties.

"We heard the first papayas sail in just as we were giving a New Year's embrace," said one soldier at the bridge. Troops here often call shells "papayas." He said the rebels began shelling at midnight from batteries four miles to the east.

"It was incredible. The shells lit up the whole bridge and deafened us all," said a man living nearby. "The only thing I could see was red lights flying off the hillside."

A road over the 15 of September Dam, 1,500 feet upriver, was adapted to handle traffic over the river. The bridge and the dam, opened 3½ months ago, were heavily guarded by soldiers trained by U.S. advisers.

The insurgents' clandestine Radio Farabundo Martí said guerrillas from the Rafael Antonio Zablah Brigade destroyed the bridge. It said they also blew up a power substation at the dam, blacking out much of eastern El Salvador.

There were "numerous casualties" among both the army troops and civilians, the broadcast reported.

It said the attacks were part of a campaign begun Friday, when rebels from a different group attacked and briefly held the army's 4th Infantry Brigade headquarters in El Paraiso, 36 miles north of San Salvador.

The army had fortified Cuscatlan Bridge after the guerrillas blew up Puente de Oro Bridge, 20 miles downriver in October 1981. The Puente de Oro, on the coastal highway, had been the biggest bridge in Central America.

Engineers have converted a railroad bridge next to the Puente de Oro to carry one lane of traffic. The two bridges were the only links for vehicles crossing the Lempa.

The guerrillas are strongest in the eastern third of the country and some strategists believe they are trying isolate and eventually take over the eastern four provinces.

In Nicaragua, the government spokesman said most of the weekend fighting occurred around San Fernando, located near the Honduran border and about 100 miles north of Managua.

Building Hit By Explosion

DENVER (AP) — An explosion and fire that ripped through a Wells Fargo office, blasting a cleaning woman through a window and destroying 75 percent of the building, apparently was caused by a ruptured propane tank, officials said.

The blast on Sunday, which blew off the roof, tore a huge hole through the entrance and smashed all the windows, apparently occurred when a boiler touched off a ruptured 100-pound propane tank stored in the basement boiler room. Assistant Fire Chief Jim Leiker said.

Investigators planned to continue their probe today, he said.

The cleaning woman, Dia Cha, 22, was listed in critical condition today in the burn unit of University Hospital. A hospital spokesman said she suffered second- and third-degree burns over 20 percent of her body as well as numerous cuts from broken glass.

Two other custodial employees and an architect who were inside the building at the time of the blast escaped injury.

Architect Miles Lantz, whose company of Lantz and Boggio was located in the building, said he was removing Christmas decorations from his second-floor office when he saw Ms. Cha "blow out of the building" by the force of the blast.

Lantz said he thought the propane was being stored in the basement for use in thawing water pipes during the recent cold spell.

The two-story brick and concrete building also housed the Denver branch of the Wells Fargo Bank of San Francisco, the brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch and the offices of the building's owner, Andrews and Co.

"If the explosion had occurred during the week when the building was fully occupied, we would have had quite a few injuries and possibly some casualties," said Denver Fire Chief Myrtle Wise. More than 100 people work in the building on a normal business day.

Wise said the building was 75 percent destroyed. Fire officials declined to place a dollar estimate on damage, but an architect at the scene estimated the structure to be worth about $2 million.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A.

A STIMULATING EXPERIENCE

When you brush your teeth, you clean only the outside surfaces. The toothbrush will not clean between the teeth very well. Gum stimulators are necessary to clean between the teeth to get where the toothbrush cannot and to keep your mouth clean.

The best gum stimulators are soft, wooden wedges that look like triangular toothpicks and are available in all drugstores. They are sold in matchbook types of containers — about fifty to a pack. If they are used with an in-and-out massaging movement, they do a fine job of cleaning the in-between spaces and of stimulating the gum margins.

They provide one of the finest forms of home care available, and I cannot recommend them highly enough. Many dollars worth of dental care per year could be saved in most families if each member conscientiously used these little sticks once a day. The rubber tips on the ends of some toothbrushes just don't compare to the little wooden wedges-sticks. They are simple but of great value.

Tar Heel Plane Crew Survives Emergency Landing In Boston

By DAVID HERN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — With a 20-minute warning to the control tower, Logan International Airport was ready for the worst as a loaded cargo plane with disabled landing gear circled before safely making an emergency belly landing.

As crews sprayed it with foam to keep flying sparks from catching fire, the craft skidded three-quarters of a mile to a jolting stop, and the pilot and three crewmen emerged unhurt, officials said.

The plane, on its way from Puerto Rico, was nearing its destination of Worcester, in central Massachusetts, on Sunday when the landing gear became disabled, airport officials and the plane's owners said.

Pilot Marvin Beier of Greensboro, N.C., radioed that there was trouble with the aircraft, owned by Blue Bell Aviation Inc. of Greensboro, said Pat Moscaritolo, a spokesman for the Massachusetts Port Authority. The plane was carrying 24 tons of computer parts, including some video games.

The runway could not be foamed in advance because crews were uncertain where the plane could land, said Charles Arena, the airport's director of public safety. However, the runway was clear of ice and landing conditions were good when the plane came in.

"The plane threw sparks as it landed and skidded across the runway about three quarters of a mile to a mile," Arena said. "There were a lot of sparks."

Ambulances and foam trucks raced beside the four-engine turbojet CL44 as it landed from the northeast with only its nose gear and left main wheel down, skidded across a grassy plot and turned around on a neighboring runway before stopping.

Beier first tried to land at Worcester and at an airfield northwest of Boston but was diverted to Logan because "the crash crew equipment was more adequate and the runway length was better," said Alex Umstead, assistant director of operations for Blue Bell.

State police said the control tower flashed a Phase 5 "full emergency crash" warning to alert all crash and rescue vehicles. The airport, only moderately busy because of the holiday, closed for about 10 minutes for the emergency, Moscaritolo said.

In another mishap early today, a private airplane carrying Joey Travolta, brother of actor John Travolta, made an emergency landing at the Teterboro, N.J., airport after its landing gear failed to properly descend, airport manager Alex Zuchniewicz said.

The plane, which carried two other passengers and three crew members, landed on its belly, with no wheels, but all aboard exited safely, Zuchniewicz said.

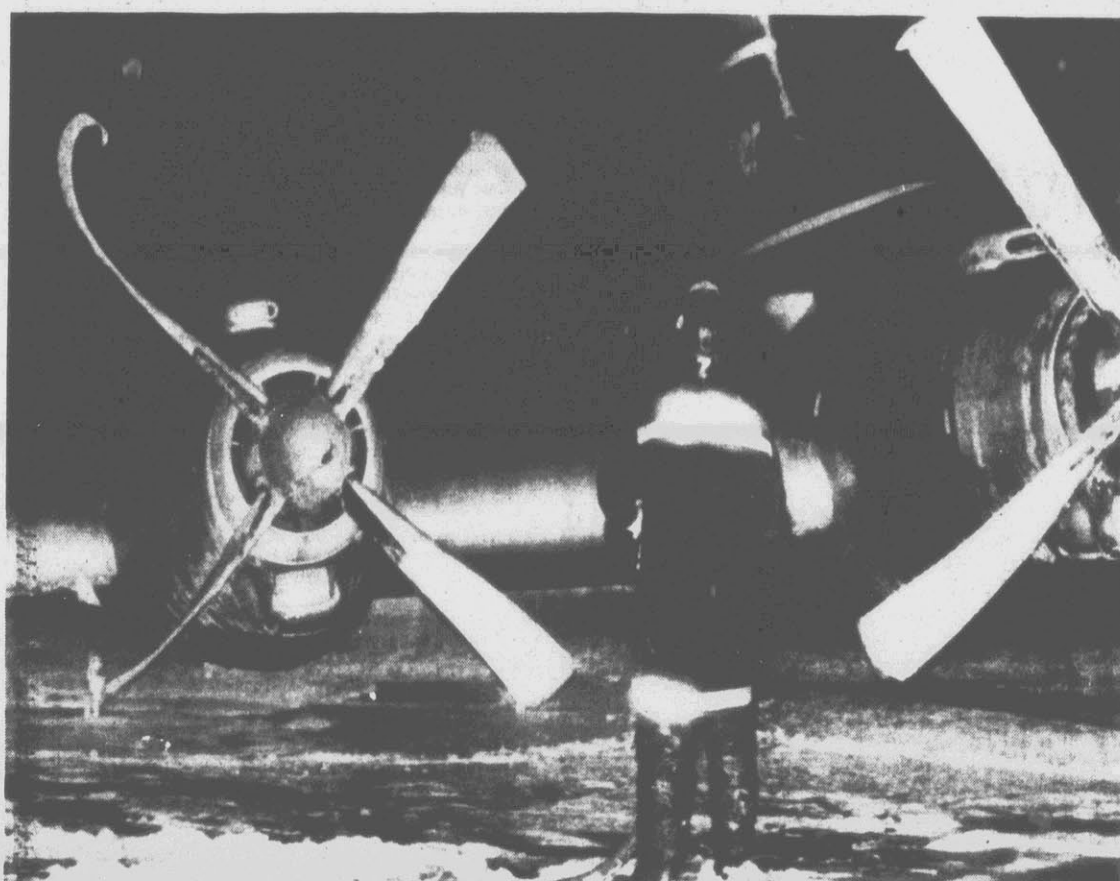

The rented four-engine Jetstar jet was en route from Chicago, and circled the airport for 45 minutes to burn fuel before landing as fire trucks were positioned near the runway, he said.

The aircraft "skidded" to the edge of the main runway and then into a grassy area, "which we wanted them to do... It's nice and soft," Zuchniewicz said.

On Sunday in northwestern Michigan, ice fishermen stood watching as a single-engine plane crashed onto a frozen lake, killing the two Saginaw residents on board, Grand Traverse County sheriff's officers said.

The Piper plane crashed about 300 yards from shore on the southern end of Long Lake, scattering debris over a quarter-mile to half-mile path, witnesses said. Witnesses said it was snowing at the time and visibility was poor, but the cause of the crash was unknown.

In Palm Beach, Fla., rescuers Sunday abandoned an unsuccessful air and sea search for three passengers on a single-engine plane that crashed three miles offshore. Neither the people, all from the Washington, D.C., area, nor the wreckage was recovered, but the pilot was rescued shortly after the accident on Friday.

BENT PROPELLER — A firefighter continues to apply foam to a four-engine turbojet CL44 on a runway at Logan Airport in Boston Sunday night after it made an emergency belly landing due to a disabled landing gear. The cargo plane was en route from Puerto Rico to Worcester, Mass., with about 24 tons of computer parts when it landed. The four-man crew, all from North Carolina, escaped injury. (AP Laserphoto)

It's Income Tax Time

Best Rule Of Thumb In Filing Is: 'Don't Cheat Yourself'

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Do you cheat on your taxes? Not the government. But yourself?

The Internal Revenue Service has started mailing 1983 income tax returns. Employers will distribute W-2 forms by the end of this month.

The sooner you file, the sooner you will get any refund due you. But you could pay more than you have to if you're not careful.

Me thinks thee are entitled to more than two deductions.

The first thing to decide is whether to itemize deductions. It's easier not to itemize; it also could be more expensive.

The government allows all taxpayers a standard deduction. It's called the zero bracket amount and it's built into the tax tables. You don't have to do anything to claim it. If your deductions add up to less than the zero bracket amount, it doesn't pay to itemize; if they add up to more, it does.

The zero bracket amount is $3,400 for married couples filing a joint return and for some widows or widowers; $2,300 for single people and heads of household; and $1,700 for married couples filing separate returns.

The standard deduction was designed to meet the need of the majority of taxpayers. But inflation, rising interest rates and higher state and local taxes have boosted deductions for many taxpayers, and it pays to check carefully before you decide whether to itemize.

The majority of Americans, for example, are paying off a mortgage. The interest on that mortgage is deductible and it may be more than you think.

Suppose you have a $60,000, 30-year mortgage at 13 percent. Monthly payments for principal and interest are $663.72. That's $7,965 a year.

According to the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, $7,790 goes to interest during the first year of the mortgage. In the fifth year, the interest payment is $7,031; in the 10th year, it's $6,785. And by the 25th year, it's still $3,713.

State and local taxes also are "big-ticket" deductible. Homeowners can deduct property taxes. Wage earners can deduct income taxes — another item which, by itself, may add up to more than the entire zero bracket amount.

Sales taxes are deductible for everyone who itemizes. The IRS provides a chart giving estimated sales-tax deductions for families of different sizes and income levels, but, here again, you may cheat yourself if you take only the standard amount. Suppose you bought an automobile in 1983, for example, and paid $7,000, plus sales tax at the rate of 6 percent. The tax is $420 — more than you'd be allowed for all your purchases in most cases if you stuck to the government tables.

Many taxpayers wonder if there's a "safe" level of itemized deductions — a level at which they can assure themselves they won't be audited.

The answer is "no," but the editors at Prentice-Hall, publishers of tax information, say it can help to know the averages for your income bracket. If your deductions are way above average in a particular category, they may catch the attention of the auditors; if they're way below, you may be missing deductions you're entitled to.

According to Prentice-Hall, government figures for 1981, the latest year for which a breakdown is available, taxpayers who itemized claimed deductions ranging from 21.3 percent to 27.1 percent of their adjusted gross incomes, depending on their tax brackets.

Asian Gangs Preying On Own Ethnic Communities

By KATHY MCCARTHY
Associated Press Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — Bearing names like Ghost Shadows and Flying Dragons, they deal in extortion, murder and narcotics, recruiting their "soldiers" from the ranks of recently immigrated 12- and 13-year-olds adrift in a new land.

Chinese, Vietnamese and other Asian gangs, growing increasingly strong, are preying on their ethnic communities nationwide, FBI officials say.

"If you can envision a criminal enterprise that starts out extorting shopkeepers for pennies a day, (and expands) to multimillion dollar narcotics deals, that seems to be the kind of activity (the gangs) are pointing toward throughout the United States and abroad," said Bud Giannetti, head of the FBI's new Oriental organized crime project.

Similar emerging criminal networks have been reported in Asian communities in London, France, Amsterdam, West Germany, Australia and Canada, Giannetti said.

Some recent incidents:
— In Vancouver, British Columbia, at least five affluent Chinese families have been bound and robbed in their homes by young Asian assailants in the last year, police say.

— In Philadelphia, Jade Wong, the 23-year-old manager of the popular Ho Gai Restaurant, was shot to death Aug. 14 when she refused to give three other Asian men the protection money they demanded. They said they were members of a powerful New York City street gang.

— In early September, Moy Lee, a 66-year-old Chinese woman who owns a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Chinese restaurant, was jumped as she arrived home in Wilton Manors by three young Chinese gunmen who then held her family hostage for 12 hours. They told her they had been sent to her house by their New York City gang leader. They left when she gave them $4,000 and promised more later.

Last February, 13 Chinese were shot dead during a robbery at the Wah Mee gambling club in Seattle's Chinatown, but police, Chinese leaders and the FBI say that massacre didn't fit any "gang" mold. The three young Chinese men involved acted alone, authorities said, despite one defendant's claims about involvement by "tongs," or Chinese fraternal organizations. Two men have been convicted in the killings, and a third remains at large.

Giannetti, who recently toured the country to discuss the gang problem with local police, said some cities have had "a very quiet, sometimes very insidious takeover in Chinese communities, of newly landed immigrants with criminal intent."

If Chinese gang crime is a growing problem, so is Vietnamese gang crime, particularly on the West Coast where large numbers of Viet immigrants have settled, law enforcement authorities say.

"We're looking at Oriental organized crime as a probable emerging national crime problem," said Sean McWeeney, head of the FBI's organized crime section, who joined Giannetti in a recent telephone interview from bureau headquarters in Washington, D.C.

The Asian gangs seem most active on the East and West coasts, the FBI said.

Within the next several months, the bureau will decide whether to target Asian organized crime as one of its nationwide enforcement priorities, McWeeney said.

That move, which McWeeney termed likely, would allow the FBI to bring federal laws such as narcotics and racketeering statutes to bear in the battle.

McWeeney and Giannetti stressed the FBI is not singling out Asians.

"It seems that every ethnic group that forms a nucleus within a city has within it certain criminal elements that are engaged in certain organized crime activity," said Giannetti. "We're not just looking at Asian communities, we're looking at all American citizens to protect their rights under the law."

Such crime increased with an influx of Southeast Asian "boat people" arriving in the United States from 1975 onward, Giannetti said.

After a 1965 relaxation of immigration restrictions, large numbers of Chinese fled to the United States from Hong Kong, settling in New York, San Francisco and other large American cities, he said.

Chinese gangs engage in an active recruiting program to bring in "12-, 13- and 14-year-old ethnic Chinese ... who may not be able to succeed in school because of language problems or recent arrival in the United States," Giannetti said.

Newly landed youths have difficulties coping with the language and often their parents are away working, "many times under sweat shop conditions," Giannetti said. Those factors help ease some youths into "peer groups which increasingly are involved in criminal activities," he said.

Another factor in the increase in Chinese gang crime may be the nervousness of Hong Kong criminals about impending takeover of Hong Kong territories by China in 1997, Giannetti said.

"They've been looking for other places to conduct their enterprises," he said. Cities such as San Francisco and Los Angeles have had success in fighting gang extortion by instituting police Asian task. Seattle police Lt. Bob Holter hopes a similar task force can work in Seattle. But solving the Viet gang problem is more difficult, he said, because gang members are often tied to no community.

The influx of Vietnamese at the end of the Vietnam war brought to the United States a cadre of criminals as well as legitimate refugees, some officials say. Using the names of dead people with no arrest records, they formed criminal groups in resettlement camps. The first reported Vietnamese gang surfaced in Los Angeles in 1978, authorities say.

Since then, such Southern California Viet gangs as the Frogmen, Catalina Boys and Thunder Tigers have become increasingly familiar terms.

Some of their leaders reportedly include ex-military men trained by the United States in weaponry and explosives.

The FBI says it has no "information on the makeup of Vietnamese gangs yet," but Giannetti acknowledges he's heard from police around the country that Viet gangs "are a little more violence-prone in an extortion event" than other Asian gangs.

Nor is the problem confined to Chinese and Vietnamese communities. In most major communities that are home to such ethnic groups as Koreans, Thais and Malays, criminal elements in those communities also use the young, newly arrived immigrants as a recruiting base, Giannetti says.

In New York City's Chinatown, Chinese youth gangs like the Flying Dragons and Ghost Shadows have battled for years. The leader of the Flying Dragons, Michael Chen, 33, was found shot to death March 13 a few hours after the bullet-riddled body of another Flying Dragons member was found dumped outside the city. The killings were the 17th and 18th since 1981 that have been attributed to Chinese gang warfare.

Chen's Flying Dragons and the Ghost Shadows both were mentioned as responsible for the worst New York Chinatown violence of recent years, the Dec. 23, 1982, shooting in which a hit squad of three or four masked gunmen burst into the Golden Star restaurant and began shooting. Three young men died, eight others were wounded.

Giannetti said his organization is watching what may be a pattern of systematic extortion of Chinese restaurant owners on the Eastern seaboard but is not yet ready to say which gang it thinks is involved.

Uses Air, Land, Sea Defense

France Seeks Active Arms Plan

By GREG MACARTHUR
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — While the broad political consensus on defense has been breaking apart in many Western countries, it has been strengthening in France, whose independent nuclear course may come as a blessing for NATO.

France is the only country other than the two superpowers with a nuclear defense triad — air, sea and ground-based missiles — and the 1984 budget calls for two new nuclear submarines and development of a new generation of tactical nuclear missiles for the 1990s.

Eighteen concrete-encased nuclear-tipped rockets on the Albion plateau in southeastern France, each with a range of 2,170 miles, are aimed at Soviet industrial and population centers.

Five French nuclear submarines carry an additional 80 missiles. 33 Mirage IV jet bombers have nuclear strike capability and France has developed — but not produced — a neutron weapon.

The defense strategy is based on the "French sanctuary" theory. An attack, conventional or otherwise, directly against French territory has to carry a price so high that an enemy will not even try it.

But France is also the only country in the Western alliance which is not a part of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's integrated military command. President Charles de Gaulle pulled out in 1966, declaring that France alone would decide when, where and how to use its military forces.

NATO forces operate under a command structure that requires agreement of all the participating countries before nuclear forces are engaged.

Since France insists that its nuclear arsenal is independent, "purely defensive" and small compared to that of the United States and the Soviet Union, the French have refused to allow it to be included for discussion in any East-West arms reduction deal.

The Soviets have insisted that the combined force of 162 British and French missiles must be taken into account. The West's refusal was one of the reasons Moscow cited for the lack of progress in the now-suspended Geneva arms reduction talks. Washington has backed the French position and the French in turn have been among the staunchest advocates of NATO's deployment of new U.S. missiles in Western Europe.

When the French withdrew from NATO's military wing, Washington and the rest of alliance accused de Gaulle of weakening NATO and endangering world peace through a short-sighted attempt to recapture France's "grandeur" and gain a little international maneuvering room. But interviews with French Defense Ministry sources, independent French defense analysts and other Western sources indicate that France's defense commitment would never have approached current levels had it remained part of NATO's military command.

Nuclear independence is a source of pride in France, which, according to analyst Jean Klein of the French Institute for International Relations, has had a "rather remarkable continuity" of policy despite the Socialist election victory in May 1981.

Over the years, French Socialists and Radicals have dropped their initial opposition to the nuclear force. They have come to agree with the conservative neo-Gaullists and center-right liberals that a strong national defense is necessary in the face of what they see as an increasingly aggressive Soviet Union. All of them supported the deployment of the American missiles in Western Europe.

Even the Communist Party supports the independent nuclear force, though it would like to see it targeted

"in all directions."

And while millions marched for disarmament in the United States and northern Europe last summer, the French peace movement drew a relative handful. Only the politically weakened Communists opposed the Euro-missile deployment, and because they are part of President Francois Mitterrand's Socialist-dominated government, their criticism has been muted.

France, traditionally a prickly ally, has under the Socialists turned into a major spokesman for a hard line on East-West defense policy — to Washington's delight and with the blessing of the large majority of the French people.

"We have our finger on the trigger, and its much more comfortable to know that you and not someone else is in control," explained a Defense Ministry official, who requested anonymity.

Alain Joxe, director of the Interdisciplinary Center for Research on Peace and Strategic Studies, said independence is "so fundamental that it overshadows all other aspects."

The French peace movement, to the extent that it exists, is dominated by the Communists, who control a dwindling 10-15 percent of the electorate. But the Communists' close ties with Moscow during the crises in Poland and Afghanistan have "vaccinated the rest of the French body politic against it," according to a Western analyst who also requested anonymity.

But NATO is still paying a price for French independence, he added.

"Because the French don't participate in many of the NATO bodies, NATO is weaker for it," he said. "The French have a lot to bring. They've grasped the situation. They should be there telling the other Europeans to start pulling up their socks and contributing more to Europe's defense."

WATER FUN
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A $3.5 million project is underway here to construct a churning white-water rapids. The 1,800-foot "Fury of the Nile" raft course will be the largest addition to the Worlds of Fun theme amusement park since the park opened in 1973. The rapids is slated to open in 1984.

Australia Sees Upheaval Ahead In Spy Service

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The resignation of one of Australia's spy chiefs after machine-gun toting agents in a training exercise raided an unsuspecting hotel has signaled yet another upheaval in the country's troubled intelligence services.

Although Australia rarely plays a major role in world affairs, the nation of 15 million people has at least five covert intelligence organizations engaged in operations from South America to Europe.

Operations reportedly have ranged from involvement in the overthrow in 1973 of the government of Marxist Salvador Allende in Chile to breaking the codes of friendly nations, such as Japan.

While the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and Britain's Secret Intelligence Service reportedly regard Australian intelligence as outstanding, the Australian organizations have been embroiled in a series of scandals at home that have threatened their existence.

John Ryan, head of the Australian Secret Intelligence Service (ASIS), resigned before Christmas upon the disclosure that the overseas agency had a domestic "attack function" the government did not know about.

Ryan was the third of ASIS's six chiefs since its founding in 1952 to be dismissed or to resign in disgrace.

The week before, the Australian Security Intelligence Organization (ASIO) was criticized in a government report for its role in the expulsion of a Soviet diplomat suspected of being a spy.

ASIS's and ASIO's latest problems fueled new demands from within and without the government to disband Australia's intelligence agencies. The left wing of the governing Australian Labor Party has insisted for years that the secret organizations are a threat to the country's freedom and vowed to demand their abolition at the next party conference.

ASIO is the domestic security agency, charged with detecting foreign agents and internal threats, functions similar to those of the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation. ASIS operates overseas to obtain agents and information in other nations, as the U.S. CIA does.

Less well known are the Defense Signals Directorate, which intercepts foreign communications, and the Joint Intelligence Organization and the Office of National Assessments, which analyze intelligence.

A tight net of secrecy surrounds the intelligence groups and the government rarely comments on them. The existence of ASIS was not even known until 1971.

Ryan resigned after ASIS agents threatened the staff and guests of the Sheraton Hotel in Melbourne early in December. A manager was summoned to the 10th floor after a guest said several men were breaking down a door.

The agents scuffled with the manager, threatened people in the lobby with machine guns and herded the staff into a kitchen at gun point before fleeing out a rear entrance, police said. Several of the 12 agents involved were arrested by local police.

Foreign Minister Bill Hayden said the agents were on an exercise in which they pretended to be rescuing a hostage and things had got out of hand. The government had been unaware of the operation or the unit involved and Hayden strongly criticized the ASIS.

The state of Victoria has been trying to obtain the agents' names to prosecute them. The government has resisted, saying some of the agents had run spy networks overseas and naming them could harm the country's relations with some nations.

ASIO was accused just a week before of withholding information and of poor handling of the Soviet diplomat who was expelled, Valery Ivanov. ASIO had warned Ivanov was trying to turn a former leader of the Australian Labor Party, David Combe, into a spy.

A government investigation said ASIO had legitimate suspicions and that Ivanov was a Soviet KGB agent, but that the organization's chief, Harvey Barnett, had improperly withheld information from the government on security grounds.

Apartments Damaged

Greenville firemen battled a blaze for 45 minutes Sunday at Cherry Court Apartments, located off Greenville Boulevard. Four apartments received heavy water and smoke damage, but no apartment residents were injured.

The fire, which was reported at 12:43 p.m., broke out in apartment 101-E when a plumber was using a torch to repair a water pipe in the kitchen, authorities said. The fire spread through the kitchen walls between apartment 101-E and 101-F and into the upstairs bedrooms and attics of the two apartments.

Apartments 101-E and 101-F sustained heavy fire, water and smoke damage. Heavy water and smoke damage was reported in apartments 101-D and 101-G.

Two members of the Greenville Fire Department were treated and released at Pitt County Memorial Hospital for exhaustion.

The fire was under control at 1:30 p.m. and was completely extinguished at 2 p.m., according to reports.

Wilson Church Burns

A blaze Sunday evening destroyed the sanctuary of First United Methodist Church in Wilson. No one was in the building at the time of the fire. Sgt. Charles Vester of the Wilson Police Department said.

Home Builders To Meet

The Greenville Pitt County Home Builders Association will meet Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at the Ramada Inn. The program concerns wood products. Eastern Building Components, a member of the Home Builders Association, will sponsor the meeting.

Reagan Returns To Washington

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, ending a vacation of perfect California weather and lavish parties, flies back to the cooler climate of Washington today to face the harsher realities of the New Year.

In coming days, the president must confront a move in Congress to limit the Marines' stay in Lebanon. On Friday, he will receive the Kissinger Commission's report on Central America. And still to be settled are budget questions stemming from his resolve not to raise taxes in 1984.

But such concerns took a back seat during the last week as Reagan retreated behind the walls of a sprawling, flower-bedecked estate called Sunnylands.

There, at the corner of Bob Hope and Frank Sinatra Drives, the heavily guarded gates opened Saturday night to a procession of limousines bringing some 90 wealthy and powerful guests to a glittering New Year's Eve party at which Reagan and his wife, Nancy, were the stars.

The party, a tradition for the Reagans over the last decade, was given by Sunnylands' owners, millionaire publisher Walter Annenberg, the former ambassador to Great Britain, and his wife, Leonore, Reagan's first chief of protocol.

"We're giving our usual party," was all Mrs. Annenberg would say of the festivities. She declined to tell a local newspaper who was invited, but the White House released portions of the guest list which included about a third of the Reagan cabinet.

Among the celebrity guests on the list were comedian Bob Hope and his wife, Dolores, and singer Frank Sinatra and his wife, Barbara.

As guests arrived at the New Year's Eve soiree, an orchestra played soft music in the pink marble foyer of the Annenberg home, which is perpetually filled with exotic orchids grown on the estate. A Rodin bronze of Eve decorates a reflecting pool at the entrance.

Although this desert resort was jammed with sun-seeking tourists who spoke of the president's presence in town, few except his close circle of friends actually saw Reagan.

He left Sunnylands only twice — once with Mrs. Reagan to attend a party given by their friends, the Earle Jordengens at the Eldorado Country Club, and once alone to make a brief appearance at a New Year's cocktail party for the press corps which travels with the president.

On New Year's Day, the White House press office reported that Reagan had spent the morning "on routine paperwork," telephoned Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., to wish him a happy 75th birthday and played golf in 70-plus degree weather.

Castro ...

their long-time chief three dozen times during his 72-minute address.

After 25 years under communism, Cuba has severe economic problems, seen most clearly in its continued rationing system for meat, rice and other staples, and its critical housing shortage.

Cuban officials had said the relatively low-keyed nature of the 25th anniversary celebration — without military parades or major events in other cities — stemmed from the current austerity drive.

But Castro maintained an upbeat tone throughout his address, reaching a crowd-pleasing crescendo with his attacks on the United States.

Over the 25 years, the Cuban revolution "did not tremble" before the "threat and aggression" of the United States, he said repeatedly.

"Cubans, men and women alike, will fight... there will be enough weapons for all who want to fight when the time comes to defend our freedoms," he said.

Today, Castro said, "tensions have increased throughout the world as a result of the aggressive policies of the present U.S. administration."

The Cuban leader said "social changes are inevitable" in economically distressed Latin American countries. He specifically mentioned Chile, Uruguay and Brazil and he spoke powerfully in defense of Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista revolutionary government and leftist guerrillas trying to topple the U.S.-backed government of El Salvador.

"Cuba cannot export the revolution," he said. "Neither can the United States prevent it."

Castro brought the throng to its feet for the final 10 minutes of his speech when he declared the Oct. 25 U.S.-led invasion of Cuban-supported Grenada "will never be forgotten."

"The excited Cubans chanted, 'Fidel! Fidel!'"

"A fighter never ceases his struggle! There can never be a dishonorable pact with the enemy," the Cuban leader concluded.

At one point, Castro described the "Yankee imperialists" as "Nazi fascists... connivers."

Earlier in his speech, Castro listed what he described as the accomplishments of the revolution, including advances in health and education, and the virtual eradication of unemployment in Cuba.

"Our economy, despite the Yankee economic blockade, has grown at an average rate of 7 percent since the triumph of the revolution," he said, claiming this was one of the highest growth rates in Latin America for the period.

Castro did not mention, however, that Cuba depends heavily on Soviet aid — estimated by U.S. officials to total $4 billion a year, about one quarter of the Cuban gross national product.

Agency Cuts Red Tape To Help Sisters In Reunion After 45 Years

By ROBERT W. THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bureaucrats are often blamed for red tape, but two sisters who hadn't seen each other for 46 years said they would never have spent New Year's Eve together without the help of a federal employee.

Gertrude Behm Farman was a toddler when her mother died and her older sister Helen left the family home in Providence, R.I.

But Gertrude, who had a single, fading photograph and hazy memories, never forgot Helen, and over the years wrote hundreds of letters and made dozens of telephone calls trying to find her.

Mrs. Farman, 51, and Helen Behm Dixon, 63, who hadn't seen each other since 1937, were reunited at Mrs. Dixon's Philadelphia home Saturday.

The matchmaker was Barbara Sumith, an employee of the Social Security Administration headquarters in suburban Baltimore.

Mrs. Farman, who has always lived in Rhode Island, said that when she was younger her five brothers — two of whom are now dead — tried to find Helen.

"I couldn't believe it that no one knew where she went to," said Mrs. Farman. "In fact, I used to get angry because I thought someone must know."

Meanwhile, Helen Behm traveled around the Northeast before settling here in the early 1940s and marrying Albert Dixon.

Mrs. Farman began her search in earnest two years ago. She didn't even know what name her sister was using, she said in an interview Saturday. Relatives recalled that Helen had been dating a fellow named Dixon, but Mrs. Farman thought he spelled his name Dickson.

Last February, at the suggestion of Mrs. Farman's husband, Mel, she contacted the Social Security office in Baltimore.

Ms. Sumith wrote back, confirming that her sister's last name was Dixon but saying the agency had no address for her. She told Mrs. Farman to get back in touch later in the year.

After that news, "I called everybody in Rhode Island with the name of Dixon," Mrs. Farman said.

Whenever a Dixon was mentioned in the newspapers she would write asking if the person was or knew of her sister.

She said she also began calling directory assistance in towns around New England, getting as many addresses as she could of Dixons.

In November, she wrote again to Ms. Sumith, who finally located Helen Dixon in Philadelphia, and forwarded Gertrude's letter.

The letter was delivered Friday afternoon.

"That (letter) was the first thing I opened up," said Mrs. Dixon, whose husband died in 1959. "I figured, 'Oh, my God, can it be my sister?'"

Her son, Albert, and his wife, Marianne, were unable to get Mrs. Farman's phone number, so they sent a telegram, which Mrs. Farman received later Friday.

"I immediately called her," said Gertrude. "I just couldn't believe it, because it's been so long that I've been looking."

On Saturday, the Farmans made the six-hour drive from their home in Warwick, R.I., near Providence, to Philadelphia.

Mrs. Farman said she had very warm feelings about Ms. Sumith and the other people she had dealt with at the Social Security Administration.

"They were wonderful. They were fantastic. Without them, I wouldn't have found her," she said.

Soviets Say New Session Can't Guarantee Progress

MOSCOW (AP) — Better U.S.-Soviet relations and reduced world tension over nuclear arms will not occur simply because officials of the two nations plan to meet Jan. 18 in Sweden, the Soviet news agency Tass says.

Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Secretary of State George P. Shultz are scheduled to meet in Stockholm, but a Tass commentary and an interview by Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov signaled that Moscow would not be easily coaxed back to negotiating limits on nuclear weapons in Europe.

Accusing Washington of "instilling complacency in people," Tass said the United States spreads optimistic statements designed to fool Western publics that "things are going as if nothing has happened."

Western analysts here theorized it would have been difficult for Gromyko to skip the meeting with Shultz.

Talks between the two are to be held before the opening of a disarmament conference, and the analysts said that Gromyko's absence would have dented the Soviet Union's desired image as a peace-loving superpower.

"It goes without saying that neither the Stockholm conference nor bilateral contacts can substitute for the Geneva talks," Tass said.

Tikhonov reiterated the Soviet position that it would resume the talks only if NATO agrees to remove U.S.-built missiles now being deployed in Western Europe. Tass reported Sunday.

"I can only underline that at the talks in Geneva, the Soviet Union had gone as far as it could to find a really just and radical solution to the question of medium-range nuclear weapons," Tikhonov said.

He blamed the United States and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization for escalating the arms race.

The Soviets walked out of U.S.-Soviet talks on medium-range arms reduction Nov. 23, but blamed the Reagan administration for disrupting the negotiations. They had threatened to walk out if NATO went ahead with deployment of new nuclear missiles in Europe.

After the Soviets left the medium-range talks, they briefly carried on with parallel Geneva talks on long-range weapons. But they refused to set a date for resuming those talks or the decade-old East-West troop reduction talks in Vienna.

West Germany has confirmed the first batch of the 108 Pershing 2s it is slated to receive is operational, and Britain made a similar announcement Sunday that new cruise missiles there are ready to fire.

Mr. Johnnie Jenkins, 72, died this morning in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. He was the husband of Mrs. Mary Gilbert Jenkins of the home. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Hardee's Funeral Home.

Rose Kennedy Still Ailing

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Rose Kennedy, hospitalized in fair condition with a viral infection, has been "deluged" with telephone calls from well-wishers, officials said.

There was still no word today on when the 93-year-old matriarch would be released from the hospital, officials said.

The elderly woman has had several family visitors, but "the senator's not here," said St. Mary's Hospital nursing supervisor JoAnn Hadvabny, referring to Mrs. Kennedy's last surviving son, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Doctors feared Mrs. Kennedy was suffering from bronchitis or pneumonia, and she was admitted last Thursday, said Ruth E. Hardy, another hospital spokeswoman. Tests revealed Mrs. Kennedy had a viral infection, she said.

Mrs. Kennedy has been at the family's Palm Beach mansion since November.

Tew
AYDEN — Mrs. Ada Viola Tew, 78, died Sunday. Funeral services will be conducted Tuesday at 2 p.m. at Farmer Funeral Chapel in Ayden by the Rev. Gary Webber. Burial will follow in the Dennis family cemetery.

Redskins Annihilate Rams

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the Washington Redskins aren't the best team in the National Football League, it hasn't been proven to the Los Angeles Rams or the San Francisco 49ers.

The Redskins, using the weapons that took them to a 14-2 regular season record, including a 42-20 victory over the Rams, took apart Los Angeles 51-7 Sunday in a merciless offensive and defensive display. The rout sets up an NFC championship matchup here against the San Francisco 49ers next week.

"How good are they?" asked Rams' coach John Robinson. "I don't know, but I've had enough of them."

"They're a devastating football team," said San Francisco's Russ Francis. "Beating them is going to be a Herculean task."

"It's not that we don't have confidence. We've got plenty of confidence," said guard Randy Cross of the 49ers. "So did General Custer."

San Francisco reached the NFC final on Saturday by defeating Detroit 24-23.

"It was one of those days when we got our hands on some footballs," said Washington's Joe Gibbs, NFL Coach of the Year. "We just had a hot day. We didn't expect this at all."

"It remains to be answered just how good we are," said Gibbs. "Next week will have a lot to say about it."

Washington's John Riggins carried the ball 25 times for 119 yards and three touchdowns — a record fifth straight time the big fullback has rushed for more than 100 yards in post-season play — and NFL Most Valuable Player Joe Theismann hit on 18 of 23 passes for 302 yards and two touchdowns.

"I think something happens to the whole team in the playoffs," said Riggins after the Redskins' 10th straight victory, and their 30th in 33 games. The 44-point margin was the most lopsided in the NFL post-season since 1977, and the biggest since the American Football League merged with the NFL in 1970.

Riggins set the tone early, carrying the ball six times on the Redskins' first possession, with a diesel horn sounding from the end zone. The seemingly effortless 65-yard march ended with Riggins crashing over from the 3-yard line for the score.

"I knew they were a fast starting team, and that was a problem," said Robinson, who took his team farther than had been predicted at the start of the season. "We were out of the game so fast."

"A loss is a loss," he said. "I don't know that it matters how much you lose by."

The thrashing came six weeks after the Redskins, running away with a big early lead, demolished the Rams in Anaheim, Calif.

The Redskins shut the Rams down the same way they did in the regular season, holding Rookie of the Year running back Eric Dickerson to just 16 yards in 10 carries, and forcing quarterback Vince Ferragamo into obvious passing situations.

"I can't run through five or six people," said Dickerson, who rushed for 1,808 yards in the regular season. "I'm not Superman. They (the Redskins) don't give you any holes."

"We were got out of the blocks early and shut down their main weapon — Dickerson," said defensive end Todd Liebenstein.

Ferragamo completed just 20 of 43 passes for 175 yards and three interceptions. Cornerback Darrell Green returned the final interception 72 yards for Washington's last score, the first touchdown as a pro for the rookie.

"We just went out there and tried to mix things up and keep Ferragamo guessing," said Gibbs. "We were ready to play and jumped on the Rams from the start."

In all, the Redskins totaled 455 yards on offense.

Theismann followed the first Riggins score with a 40-yard scoring strike to wide receiver Art Monk and moments later, following an Anthony Washington interception, led Washington downfield, where Mark Moseley concluded the first quarter kicking the first of his three field goals, giving Washington a 17-0 lead.

Any thoughts that the Rams would get back into the game were quickly dispelled when Nick Giaquinto, subbing for the injured Mike Nelms, ran a John Misko punt by 48 yards, setting Riggins up for a 1-yard plunge.

"We had some good blocks and I just hit it right up the middle," said Giaquinto.

Ferragamo brought the Rams back to 24-7 with a 32-yard scoring pass to Preston Dennard, but that was as close to a comeback as Los Angeles would get.

Theismann marched Washington 76 yards in less than two minutes, as wide receiver Charlie Brown beat cornerback LeRoy Ervin twice for 28-yard passes, and covered the last 21 on his second TD pass to Monk. Brown, who sat out most of the second half, finished with six catches for 171 yards.

"We came right back after they scored and capitalized on great field position," said Theismann.

Riggins crashed over once more from the 1 at the end of the half, giving the Redskins an insurmountable 38-7 lead at intermission.

Moseley, with field goals of 36 and 41 yards, and an unbending Redskin defense carried the second half.

Asked when he'd last faced a team as dominant as the Redskins were Sunday, veteran Ram defensive end Jack Youngblood replied, "When we used to play against the Steelers in the 1970s. They're doing it, they're hot. They've got a confidence about them that makes things happen."

Raiders Roll Over Pittsburgh

LOS ANGELES (AP) —

There was some second guessing — on both sides of the field — over Coach Chuck Noll's waiting so long before naming Cliff Stoudt as Pittsburgh's starting quarterback and then yanking him so soon in a pivotal early moment against the Los Angeles Raiders.

There had been speculation all week over whether Stoudt would be the starter in Sunday's American Football Conference divisional playoff, or whether sore-armed Terry Bradshaw would be called upon as he had been once during the season.

Ultimately, Noll chose Stoudt, who was only moderately effective, completing 10 of 20 passes for 187 yards, and getting sacked five times.

His first pass was a 44-yard bomb that set up a field goal. His second one was an 18-yard touchdown — by Raiders' cornerback Lester Hayes with an interception which gave Los Angeles a lead it never relinquished.

By halftime it was 17-3, and the Raiders scored two more touchdowns before the Steelers got their only one — Stoudt's 58-yard pass to John Stallworth in the 38-10 rout that put Los Angeles in next Sunday's AFC championship game against the Seattle Seahawks.

Stoudt said he "had the feeling he would start, but he could never be certain. "I had a lot of confidence in myself," he said, "and had a good week of practice, but there was still a little doubt in my mind

"cause he (Noll) let it go right down until this morning at the pregame meal."

After his 44-yard pass to Wayne Capers on Pittsburgh's second possession, the Steelers reached the LA 1-yard line, facing a third down.

Stoudt handed off to Frank Pollard, who plowed into the middle of the line and — it seemed — just over the goal line for a touchdown.

But the official spotted the ball inches shy of touchdown territory. And on fourth down, Noll chose to play it safe. He yanked Stoudt and his offense and went for the three points on Gary Anderson's 17-yard field goal.

"I was kind of surprised in a way," said Noll's counterpart, Raiders Coach Tom Flores.

"But when you're a coach, you don't want to come up empty."

"Maybe he thought it would be a lift for us if we held them on fourth down," Flores continued. "It was a lift for us to hold them to three points."

Lyle Alzado, the Raiders' defensive end, called it "a coaching decision — but I'm glad they did what they did."

He also was glad Noll went with Stoudt instead of Bradshaw, who had thrown two touchdowns passes as a starter in the Steelers' 34-7 victory over the New York Jets last Dec. 10. Bradshaw injured his arm in that game and was unable to throw with any zip on the ball thereafter.

"I'm glad Bradshaw didn't play," said Alzado. "He makes a great deal of difference in their offense. He sees the whole field a lot better than the other guy. I think, and he gives them confidence."

After that field goal, the Steelers' defense held the Raiders for a second time, then Stoudt tried to beat the LA secondary again, this time passing along the left side to Calvin Sweeney.

But Hayes, who had been beaten, barely, on the bomb to Capers, was waiting this time. "Stoudt never saw me," Hayes said. "The touchdown was inevitable."

In fact, Stoudt did see him, for a moment. "The interception was a play we were working on all week long, after seeing what Lester had done to other people," said Stoudt. "I saw him start to drop off and as soon as I set, he broke on the ball."

Pretty soon, the rout was on. Marcus Allen, who rushed for 121 yards and two touchdowns, started and completed an 80-yard scoring drive that made it 14-3 early in the second period. He began it with a 13-yard run, kept it going with a 17-yard reception and capped it by soaring over the line for the final four yards.

Allen also had a 21-yard run on a draw play that set up Chris Bahr's 45-yard field goal just before halftime and then broke loose on a 49-yard TD run, his longest scoring sprint in two pro years, in the third quarter. The Raiders got two other touchdowns in the period on runs of nine yards by Kenny King and two yards by Frank Hawkins.

The game drew a paid crowd of 90,394, a record for a non-Super Bowl post-season game. It surpassed by 296 fans the record set by the Raiders and Jets here last year.

"The big reason we played so well was that the offensive line did a great job," said quarterback Jim Plunkett, who completed 21 of 34 passes for 232 yards without an interception and was sacked only once. "You're always surprised when you dominate a team in a big game like we did."

"We played as well today as we've played in a long time," Flores added. "I thought we could do a pretty good job defensively. I was glad we were able to score so many points. I was concerned about how we would do against their defense."

Even Noll did some second-guessing of himself. "It looked like we were a tired football team," he said. "I probably made a mistake in coming out here and working a that grass field as hard as we did."

76ers Snap String With Victory Over Portland

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — It was the Portland Trail Blazers' fourth straight loss, but coach Jack Ramsay didn't seem to mind.

"We had a tough game with a very good basketball team," Ramsay said after the world champion Philadelphia 76ers defeated his team 115-103 in the only National Basketball Association game Sunday.

"They all play well together as a team and it is no disgrace to lose to the 76ers. They are still the champions until someone unseats them."

The 76ers had not beaten Portland since Jan. 20, 1982, but with Moses Malone and Julius Erving dominating a third-quarter Philadelphia blitz, the Sixers ran away from the Blazers.

"Portland is a very finely structured team, a team that plays with a lot of intelligence," said Erving, who had 30 points, including 19 in the second half.

"We had good ball movement and finally were able to get the ball to Mo in that third quarter. That made the difference," Erving said.

Malone, held to eight points and six rebounds in the first half as the Sixers nursed a 47-46 lead, exploded for 16 points in the third period.

He finished with a season-high 38 points, 30 in the second half as Philadelphia outscored Portland 68-57. Malone also grabbed 17 rebounds.

Malone and Erving combined for 29 of Philadelphia's 35 third-quarter points as it built a 13-point lead, but the Blazers rallied in the fourth period to cut the 76er lead to three points on three occasions.

The Blazers were sparked in the fourth period by Clyde Drexler and Kenny Carr.

But Philadelphia finally solved Portland's full-court pressure and fed Malone and Erving in the last four minutes to put the game away.

The 76ers, for the first time this season, had lost two straight until beating Portland's challenge Sunday.

In handing the Blazers their fourth straight loss, Philadelphia shot a blistering 61.3 percent, connecting on 42 field goals in 68 attempts. Malone and Erving, who accounted for 29 of Philadelphia's 35 third-quarter points, were joined by Andrew Toney, who had 22 points, 15 in the first half. Toney also led the 76ers with 10 assists.

Mychal Thompson led the Blazers with 19 points and eight rebounds, Jim Paxson added 16 points, and Carr and Drexler scored 14 each.

The Blazers, who shot only 45.9 percent, had trouble containing Erving throughout the game. Blazer forward Calvin Natt, who had 19 first-quarter points as the Blazers and 76ers battled even 25-25, played very sparingly in the second half due to Erving's hot hand.

It was only the second loss in 17 home games for the Blazers this year. The earlier loss was to Los Angeles.

Pinehurst Hotel Set For $3 Million Renovation

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — A $3 million renovation of the historic Pinehurst Hotel and golf complex has helped bring back the "old Pinehurst," say its owners and state officials.

"The old Pinehurst is there again," said Glenn Mays, travel editor with the N.C. Division of Travel and Tourism. "The hospitality is back."

The 83-year-old hotel fell into disrepair from 1967 to 1980 when it had 12 different managers. The roof leaked, the carpets were frayed and the paint was chipped. The hotel also had accumulated a $70 million debt and its reputation was in jeopardy as its occupancy dropped to less than 50 percent.

Then, in 1979 when the famed No. 2 golf course fell from the list of the nation's top 10 courses, the public took notice.

"To not have that golf course in the top 10 is a sin," said Marcus Fields, who ran the hotel in the early 1970s and was called back in 1980 to become president and general manager.

Upon returning, Fields quickly fired 125 employees and launched his plan to return the hotel to the shape that once earned it the nickname "Queen of the South."

The first task was to repair the worn-out greens on the six championship golf courses. In the past three years, more than $1 million has been spent on the Pinehurst courses, including $500,000 on Number 2 alone.

The roof was fixed, and now the hotel is adding solid wood furniture, expensive drapes and plush carpeting in its 45 rooms and hallways.

Last year, No. 2 was rated the world's ninth-best course by Golf Magazine.

Fields said improving the other courses will take five years, but No. 2 is now "better than it ever was" and three other courses are in excellent condition.

The changes have brought highly-prized ratings from national travel groups.

New Year's Unhappy For Dale Brown Despite Win

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Coach Dale Brown called it an unhappy New Year's, even though No. 9 Louisiana State University opened its Southeastern Conference season with a 73-66 victory over Vanderbilt.

"I'm disappointed," Brown said. "In spurts, we looked good, but at 7-1 I'm not happy. I'm not one darn bit happy."

Brown said LSU, which squandered a 15-point lead and had to play catch-up, seemed to be trying to "play it cool and, when you do that, you can get frozen."

In the only other game involving a ranked team over the weekend, No. 4 DePaul beat Creighton 59-57 in overtime on Saturday.

LSU was up by 15 points at halftime, but Vanderbilt rallied behind Phil Cox and Jeff Turner for a 60-57 lead with five minutes remaining.

LSU won on two clutch field goals in the closing moments by Leonard Mitchell, who had 11 rebounds and led Tiger scorers with 18 points. Reserve Jonnie Jones' steal and layup and a field goal by Jerry Reynolds at 3:56 gave LSU the lead for keeps at 61-60.

Mitchell then followed with a rebound basket with 2:08 remaining, and with another 32 seconds later to boost the Tigers' lead to 65-60.

"The fact is that we had them by the throat — and if we didn't make those two turnovers we were in a position to win the ballgame," said Vanderbilt Coach C.M. Newton.

"I was very proud of our team's courage and poise in the second half," Newton said. "A lot of teams down by 15 points against LSU would have folded."

The Tigers scored their last eight points from the free-throw line.

Derrick Taylor added 16 points for LSU, while freshman reserve Anthony Wilson followed with a career-high 12.

Cox topped Vanderbilt, 4-5, with 20 points and Turner added 19. Turner and Cox had 30 of Vandy's 39 points scored in the second half.

Tyrone Corbin's jump shot with three seconds to go lifted DePaul over Creighton.

"I thought we had a chance to win the ballgame," said Creighton Coach Willis Reed.

"But we had some key turnovers there at the end of the first half and could have had a 10-point lead going into halftime. That could have made some difference."

DePaul trailed most of the first half, falling behind the Bluejays by as many as 10 points, 26-16 and again at 28-18 with 57 seconds remaining in the half. DePaul outscored Creighton 9-2 in the opening minutes of the second half to take a 33-32 lead with 17:36 to go.

The Blue Demons led 53-50 when Creighton's Benoit Benjamin was fouled while making a shot with 23 seconds left. Benjamin hit his free throw and DePaul missed its last-ditch shot to send the game into overtime.

Corbin topped all scorers with 14 points, while Benjamin had 13 for Creighton.

"This is what you call winning ugly," said DePaul Coach Ray Meyer. "With eight seconds left we wanted the ball in Corbin's hands because he is an excellent free throw shooter and we thought he might get fouled."

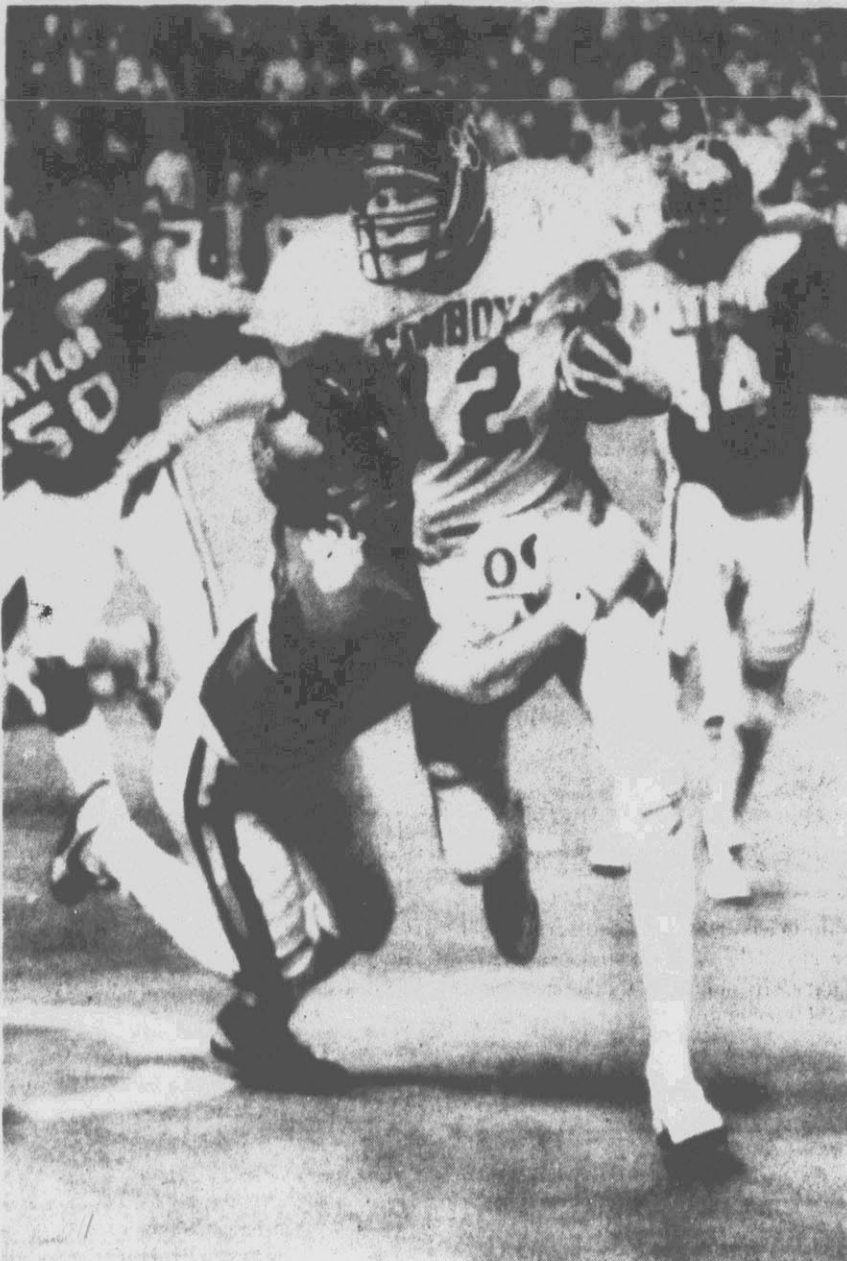

In other action Saturday, Mike Smrek's tip-in with 1:40 left and Mike Trivisonno's foul shot with 50 seconds to go in overtime gave Canisius College a 65-63 victory over Kent State.

Derek Boldon scored 19 points and Central Michigan held Valparaiso scoreless the final 3:19 as the Chippewas posted a 78-67 victory over the Crusaders.

Keith Jones and John Revelli combined for 39 points as Stanford defeated Western Michigan 80-62. Jones scored six of his game-high 20 points during a five-minute stretch in the second half in which Stanford outscored Michigan 16-2 to break the game open.

Ricky Ross scored 24 points, including two foul shots in the closing seconds, to give Tulsa a 70-68 win over Southern of Baton Rouge. Tulsa led 37-34 at halftime, and the teams traded the lead continually in the second half before Ross sealed Tulsa's victory.

In Sunday night action, Luther Burden scored a season-high 33 points to spark St. Louis to a 71-61 win over Drake.

Anderson Back On 'Blue Chip' Roster

HOUSTON (AP) — Oklahoma State tailback Ernest Anderson's stock had plummeted during a season of two injuries and a bout with a bleeding ulcer.

But he returned to the blue chip list Saturday with 143 yards rushing on 27 carries including a one-yard touchdown dive as the Cowboys defeated Baylor 24-14 in the 25th Bluebonnet Bowl.

"I was told that I needed to shine because I hadn't been shining earlier in the year," said Anderson, a senior who aspires to a pro career. "I think I brought my stock up."

But the power-running Anderson first had to convince Oklahoma State Coach Jimmy Johnson that he was ready to play in the first half.

"He didn't want to put me in the game that early," Anderson said. "But I told him I was OK and I kept bugging him until he put me in. I just wanted to end the season right."

Anderson ended the season with a gem of a performance while Oklahoma State quarterback Rusty Hilger wound up his with a most valuable player trophy and a headache.

Hilger directed a 24-point first half surge with touchdown passes of 12 yards to freshman Malcolm Lewis and 26 yards to Jamie Harris. Anderson's touchdown and a 44-yard field goal by Larry Roach gave OSU a 24-7 halftime lead.

Hilger, who hit 12 of 17 passes for 137 yards, suffered a concussion with 16 seconds left in the half when he was nailed by Baylor linebacker Robert Watters. Hilger required seven stitches on his chin and sat on the sidelines in the second half.

Oklahoma State, 8-4, scored on four of its five first half possessions and Baylor's high-scoring offense never could get back in the game. The Bears finished 7-4-1.

Baylor's 5-8, 140-pound Gerald McNeil scored both of Bear touchdowns on a 12-yard catch from quarterback Cody Carlson in the second quarter and a 26-yard halfback pass from Alfred Anderson with 5:07 left to play.

Alfred Anderson was named Baylor's most valuable player in the game with 103 yards rushing on 21 carries. McNeil finished his college career with 10 catches for 163 yards.

"Alfred almost put it out of the end zone on that touchdown," McNeil said. "The ball was tipped but not enough to misdirect it. The season ended like in 1980. I haven't won any bowl games in my career. But I'm an individual who bounces back easily."

Blue Arrives To Serve Prison Term

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Vida Blue, who was both the Cy Young Award winner and the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1971, arrived at the Federal Correctional Institute Sunday night to begin a three-month sentence on a drug possession charge.

Blue joined former Kansas City Royals teammates Willie Wilson and Jerry Martin in the minimum security prison, where the other two began serving three-month terms last month.

"He arrived about 8 p.m.," a spokeswoman said of Blue, 34, who was released by the Royals last August after posting an 0-5 record and a 6.01 earned run average.

Blue, who pleaded guilty to a charge of possessing cocaine, was caught up in a federal investigation of drug traffic in the Kansas City area, along with Wilson, Martin and Willie Aikens, who had been the Royals' first baseman. Wilson, Martin, who was released by the Royals at the end of the season, and Aikens, pleaded guilty to charges of attempting to possess cocaine.

Husker Offense Vs. Miami 'D'

By The Associated Press
The "Irresistible Force" meets the "Immovable Object" in tonight's Orange Bowl.

"We do have the ability to be a great momentum team. We have some people who can put numbers up there awfully quickly," said Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne as he prepared his high-powered Nebraska football team for Miami.

The undefeated and top-ranked Cornhuskers, featuring what former Notre Dame Coach Ara Parseghian calls "the most awesome offense ever assembled," can win their first national championship since 1971 by beating Miami.

But they'll have to overcome one of the nation's top defenses to do it.

While the 12-0 Cornhuskers scored a record 624 points this season, the 10-1 Hurricanes finished fourth nationally in total defense and third in scoring defense, allowing just 9.6 points per game, compared to Nebraska's average offensive output of 52 points per game.

"People have heard a lot about our offense — and we do have a good offensive team," said Osborne, "but we probably haven't played a defensive team as good as Miami."

The contest between

Nebraska and fifth-ranked Miami is one of five bowl games today.

Second-ranked Texas, 11-0, meets No. 7 Georgia, 9-1-1, in the Cotton Bowl; third-ranked Auburn, 10-1, meets No. 8 Michigan, 9-2, in the Sugar Bowl and No. 4 Illinois, 10-1, plays unranked UCLA, 6-4-1, in the Rose Bowl.

Monday's other bowl game, the Fiesta Bowl, involves two teams — No. 14 Ohio State, 8-3, and No. 15 Pittsburgh, 8-2-1 — without title hopes.

The weekend's only bowl game saw Oklahoma State defeat Baylor 24-14 on Saturday in the Bluebonnet Bowl. On Friday, Florida State defeated North Carolina 28-3 in the Peach Bowl, and No. 11 Florida beat 10th-ranked Iowa 14-6 in the Gator Bowl.

Nebraska ranks first nationally in scoring (52 points a game), second in total offense (546.7 yards) and first in rushing (401.7) for the third time in the last four years. The Cornhuskers are led by the explosive backfield trio of Heisman Trophy-winning tailback Mike Rozier, quarterback Turner Gill and wingback Irving Fryar.

There has been some talk that the Cornhuskers rank with the greatest teams in college football history; Osborne thinks otherwise.

"Oklahoma State pretty well took care of that for us (Nebraska won 14-10)," he said. "A national article came out and talked about us being a great football team. But we had hit five nonconference teams at the right time and that made us look better than we really were."

"I told the team that basically we were five games into the season and we hadn't played a great team yet. I told them, 'You're good, but you're not as great as the story says yet.'"

A victory in the Orange Bowl also would equal the club's finest record, the 13-0 mark the Huskers compiled in 1971, the second of two straight national championship seasons. A loss by Nebraska, however, would leave the championship door open for as many as four other teams, including Miami, all playing their traditional New Year's Day bowl games one day late because the holiday fell on Sunday.

Texas, of course, had to win earlier to have any chance at all for the national title. While the Longhorns were playing for a possible national championship, the Bulldogs were trying to prove they can win a postseason game without Herschel Walker. Georgia pulled off the unexpected by going 9-1-1 after Walker skipped his senior year for a big contract in the United States Football League.

"We aren't as good a team this year without Herschel," said Georgia Coach Vince Dooley. "But we proved that we had a senior class that was more than Herschel Walker. This was a team without a star or unusually skilled players, yet they won."

Georgia has not been so lucky in postseason games, having lost six of its last seven.

"We are having more fun this year," said Georgia fullback Barry Young. "The pressure of a national championship is not there so we are relaxed. We proved we can win in the regular season without Walker and now we want to prove we can win a bowl game without him."

Auburn and Michigan will be meeting on a football field for the first time. The Southeastern Conference champions are favored by four points over the Wolverines, who finished second in the Big Ten.

The game in the Louisiana Superdome marks the first Sugar Bowl appearance in Michigan's history and the second for Auburn, which lost to Oklahoma 40-22 in the 1972

New Orleans event.

"They're as good a football team as I've seen all year," said Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler of Auburn. "Not many people give us much of a chance in this ballgame. We like that. We're not shrinking violets. We're as ready as we can be."

Although UCLA Coach Terry Donahue's Bruins have lost four games and are unranked, they are the defending Rose Bowl champions and won six of their last seven games this season.

The trip to Pasadena is the third for Illinois, but its first in 20 years. The Illini routed heavily favored UCLA 45-14 in

Seiko Event To Change

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The complicated format for the $1 million Seiko-Tucson Match Play Championship may be in for some adjustments.

"I think it's an experiment. We'll just have to see what kind of reaction we get from the public and the press," said Homero Blancas, host pro for the first match play event on the American schedule in a decade.

"We may have too many players. The field may be too big. That might have to be adjusted," said veteran Jim Cowert, a two-time winner last season and a member of the Tour's Policy Board.

Colbert, along with 112 other pros who started out in first round play, face eight matches on the way to next Sunday's finals.

"That's a lot of golf, maybe too much," said Colbert.

Eight players get byes into Wednesday's second round and eight more, the leaders of the 1983 Seiko Grand Prix lit, get byes into the fifth round of play Saturday morning and need to win only three times before reaching Sunday's final match, which rewards the winner with $100,000. Total prize money in the regular-tour segment of the two-pronged tournament is $718,000. At the same time, and on the same Randolph Park Municipal course, 24 seniors will compete for $306,000 also with $100,000 to the winner.

The kickoff event on the Tour's $23 million, 10-month, 45-event schedule got under way today with 28 matches in the regular-tour segment and four in the seniors bracket. Another 28 regular-tour matches and four more senior tour matches will complete first-round play Tuesday.

Among the key matches today were J.C. Snead vs. David Peoples, Dave Stockton vs. John Adams, Bill Rogers vs. Curt Byrum, Bobby Clampett vs. Mike Gove, Scott Simpson vs. Andy North and Peter Oosterhuis vs. Howard Twitty.

Receiving byes into Wednesday's second round were Craig Stadler, Mark McCumber, Curtis Strange, Andy Bean, Ray Floyd, Wayne Levi, Fred Couples and Payne Stewart.

The eight leaders from the 1983 Seiko Grand Prix list don't get started until Saturday morning. They are Hal Sutton, Fuzzy Zoeller, Lanny Wadkins, Calvin Peete, Gil Morgan, Tom Kite, Ben Crenshaw and Tom Watson.

Seniors who received byes into second round play were Miller Barber, Gay Brewer, Gene Littler, Charles Sifford, Don January, Rod Funseth, Billy Casper and Dan Sikes.

Drugs, Pine Tar Top 1983

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Adieu, '83. It's gone but not forgotten. A sticky wicket year, what with all that drug stuff, pine-tar bat and murder of a seagull on a baseball diamond, but it was a year that could have used a ton of Elmer's glue.

Everything kept getting unstuck.

The baseball moguls ripped Bowie Kuhn out of his commissioner's chair but kept sticking him back when they couldn't come up with an acceptable replacement. They're still looking.

Sugar Ray Leonard, the most popularly acclaimed fist fighter in the world with the retirement of Muhammad Ali, staged a big spectacular in Philadelphia to announce his retirement and later said, "Oops, I didn't mean it."

Half-heavyweight champion Larry Holmes went to bed one night after telling everybody he had had it up to his battered ears, then woke up the next morning and said, "It ain't so — I'm not quitting yet."

Nothing stays glued.

The New York Yankees were driving toward the American League pennant when Kansas City's George Brett beat them with a ninth-inning home run. But wait a minute. The cagy Billy Martin rushes out to mops and says, "Look, too much pine tar on the bat — it's illegal."

The ump's go into a frantic huddle. The Yankee skipper is right. They measure. Too much pine tar. It's plain in the rules. Brett is out of the game, the home run doesn't count and the Yankees win.

Brett flies into an arm-swinging rage. Billy grins like a cat that's just swallowed the gold fish. The Yankees are jumping with glee.

But hold on, there. It's not over 'til the fat lady sings. American League president Lee MacPhail, after pouring over the rules for close to a week, says the rule book doesn't really mean what it says.

So he reverses his umpires' decision. The Royals win, the Yankees lose. Yankee Boss George Steinbrenner is livid. He publicly says some nasty things about MacPhail, an indiscretion that he ultimately lives to regret to the tune of a $250,000 fine by Commissioner Kuhn, plus $50,000 tab for legal fees.

spring-summer venture for hungry TV fans, suddenly got serious and began plucking off some of the best talent of the older, established National Football League.

Herschel Walker, the ball-rushing Heisman Trophy halfback, vowed he would get his degree at Georgia before surrendering to the lascivious pros but he couldn't resist the multi-million-dollar temptation of the USFL New Jersey Generals and he signed a year early — a resolution which became unstuck.

Line-splitting Billy Sims signed one contract with the USFL Houston Gamblers, then a fatter contract with his current employers, the Detroit Lions, allegedly accepting "earnest" money in advance from each.

Meanwhile, the USFL New Jersey Generals began flirting with the NFL Giants' Lawrence Taylor, the best linebacker in pro football whose contract runs through 1988. Another sticky situation.

Walter Johnson's proud strikeout record of 36 years was unhinged by Steve Carlton of the Phillies, who became "King of the K's," and Billy Martin was hired and replaced a third time as Yankees' manager, making Boss Steinbrenner the champion quick-change artist of all time, with 11 moves in 10 years.

No unsticking matched the removal of the fabled America's Cup from its base at the New York Yacht Club, a trophy the U. S. had held for 132 years and never lost. A hardy band of Aussie sailors did the dirty deed.

Grow men in brass-buttoned blue blazers wept.

Senior Duo Combines For Winning Formula

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Matt Doherty and Sam Perkins came from different sides of the track in New York, but on the basketball court the two forwards have combined to give top-ranked North Carolina a solid frontcourt.

The pair grew up less than 30 miles apart, but their differences are many — including how their basketball talents developed.

Doherty, a 6-foot-8 senior, lived in the Long Island town of East Meadow in a middle-class family of seven. Perkins, a 6-foot-10 senior, was raised along with three sisters by his mother and grandmother in one of Brooklyn's poorer neighborhoods. His father died when Sam was very young.

Last-Minute Hike Fails To Halt Food Cost Cuts

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The old year went out with a round of price increases at the supermarket, but decreases earlier in the year made 1983 a winner for consumers at the grocery.

An Associated Press marketbasket survey shows the average cost of a randomly selected list of 14 food and non-food items was almost 1 percent lower at the start of 1984 than it was a year earlier, despite a price boost of more than 1 percent in December.

Meats were a key reason for both the ups and downs. They decreased in price early in the year because of poor demand due to the recession, but they have started to rise because of the summer drought and the recent cold.

The items in the AP survey were first priced in one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973. Prices have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. The findings are not seasonally adjusted. Nor are they weighted to reflect what portion of actual family spending each item represents.

Among the highlights of the latest survey:

—The marketbasket bill went up during December at the checklist store in eight cities, rising an average of 3.3 percent. The bill went down in five cities, dropping an average of 2.1 percent. Overall, the marketbasket bills rose an average of 1.2 percent last month, the biggest rise since a 1.3 percent jump in May 1982.

December was the second month in a row of rising prices. The marketbasket bill went up in the checklist store in nine cities during November and down in four, for an overall rise of eight-tenths of 1 percent.

—Comparing prices today with those at the start of the year, the AP found that the marketbasket bill was up at the checklist store in six cities, down in six cities and unchanged in one, for an over-all decrease of nine-tenths of 1 percent during 1983. That compared with a 2.9 percent average increase in the marketbasket bills in 1982.

—Meats led the list of items rising in price in December, but they also were a major factor in the 12-month decline. Meats accounted for one-fifth of the items on the AP checklist; they represented two-fifths of the December increases. The price of pork chops went up at the checklist store in eight cities last month; chopped chuck was up in seven cities.

At the same time, however, the average price of a pound of pork chops dropped from $2.61 to $2.43 from the start of 1983 to the start of 1984 and the price of a pound of chopped chuck rose only a penny — from $1.82 to $1.83 — in the same period.

—The dairy counter held bad news for bargain hunters looking for an alternative to meat. Eggs, which usually go up in price during the winter, followed the pattern. The price of eggs was up at the checklist store in seven cities during December.

The weather is to blame for many of the price increases. The summer drought destroyed the corn crop and pushed up feed prices for cattle, hogs and poultry. Egg and chicken prices rose. Some pork and beef producers sold their livestock rather than paying the higher prices, causing a temporary increase in supply and bargains for meat shoppers. That left fewer animals to come to market later, however, and paved the way for price boosts that are expected to continue through next spring. The December freeze also cut supplies of meat coming to market, putting further upward pressure on prices.

A look at the overall number of items in the AP survey showed fewer increases during December than November. During December, 24.7 percent of the items increased, 22 percent decreased, 46.2 percent were unchanged and 7.1 percent were not available.

During November, 29.1 percent of the items increased, 19.2 percent decreased, 45.6 percent were unchanged and 6.1 percent were unavailable.

The day of the week on which the price check was made for the AP survey varied according to the month. Standard brands and sizes or comparable substitutes were used, and items not available on one of the survey dates being compared were not counted in the totals.

The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs were more expensive in one place than another. The only comparisons made were in terms of percentages.

The items on the AP checklist are: chopped chuck, pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, medium white eggs, peanut butter, fabric softener, laundry detergent, tomato sauce, whole milk, all-beef frankfurters and granulated sugar. A 15th item, chocolate chip cookies, was originally included in the survey, but was dropped when the manufacturer discontinued the package size used as a check.

The cities in the survey are: Albuquerque, N.M.; Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, R.I.; Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Proposal To Ban Leaded Fuel Sparking Debate In Chicago

By JOHN DOWLING
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The poison is spewed along city streets and expressways thousands of times each day. It settles in the teeth and bones of children, causing anemia and in some cases nerve and brain damage, critics say.

"It's a perfect example of a substance that should be removed, to the extent possible, from a susceptible population," says the director-designate of the city's Board of Health.

The poison is the lead in leaded gasoline. The scene could be New York, Los Angeles or any other major American city. But in Chicago, a proposal to ban the sale of the fuel has sparked a debate that pits economic arguments against public health concerns.

The proposal, introduced last month by aldermen Danny Davis and Joseph Kotlarz, would prohibit the sale of leaded gasoline by the city's approximately 2,000 gasoline dealers. Leaded gasoline accounts for about 40 percent of the gasoline sold in the city, according to industry figures.

Despite a rift between Mayor Harold Washington's allies and opponents in the City Council, the ordinance has gained broad support. Davis, a backer of the mayor, and Kotlarz, a Washington foe, said they have yet to encounter any opposition to the proposal.

But their bill, expected to be the subject of public hearings later this month, has come under fire from a group that believes its livelihood is at stake — gasoline dealers.

"We will come up against it in the council, and if there's any way to attack it if it were to pass, we would do it," said Robert Jacobs, executive director of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Association.

Health experts say the ordinance addresses a significant shift in the nature of the lead poisoning problem in urban areas.

"The evidence nationwide is that the problem is moving from lead-based paint in ghetto homes where kids eat the chips, to lead concentrations in areas adjacent to heavily traveled roads," said Dr. Quentin Young, recently named to head the Board of Health.

High lead concentrations are found in air and soil adjacent to busy streets and highways, Young said. There it is absorbed by people, particularly children. Their bodies handle the lead like calcium, so that it accumulates in teeth and bones. The results can include anemia, problems with bones and teeth and damage to the central nervous system.

"We don't see anything dramatic," Young said. "A minimal lowering of reading scores, a grade or two, a percentage or two."

Experts say the problem is particularly acute in inner-city neighborhoods, where housing projects and crowded apartment buildings often stand within a few feet of some of the most heavily traveled expressways in the world.

For example, the 16-lane Dan Ryan Expressway, which funnels traffic into the city center from Chicago's South Side as well as much of Illinois and Indiana, runs past the Robert Taylor Homes, one of the nation's largest public housing projects with nearly 30,000 residents.

"Surveys in these areas find 15 or 20 percent of the kids with some level of lead toxicity," Young said.

Foes of the ordinance argue that a ban on leaded gas would put an added economic burden on poor people and blue-collar workers who need cars to get to their jobs.

"The older cars that take regular gas are for the most part used by the poorer people who can least afford to pay more for gasoline," Jacobs said. "People would have to buy premium to get the extra octane that their cars need."

But Davis, whose West Side ward lies in one of the poorest areas of the city, doesn't buy that argument.

"I drive a car that's 15 years old, a 1969 Chevrolet Camaro, and I use unleaded gasoline," he said. "It does nothing to harm the older cars. As far as the price goes, you might be talking about a difference of three cents a gallon now, and if you went to an all-unleaded system I'm not sure even that would exist."

Jacobs also contends that a ban on leaded gasoline would send city residents and suburban commuters flocking to buy the fuel outside of the city, hurting Chicago gas dealers' sales and sapping the fiscally hard-pressed city of needed sales tax revenues.

"Why should a Chicago dealer be put at a disadvantage to a suburban dealer?" Jacobs said.

But the proposal's supporters say they don't expect any significant impact on gasoline sales or tax revenues if the ordinance were to be approved.

"We don't think people will change their habits that easily or that quickly," Davis said. "You're not going to drive across town for a three-cent difference in the price of gasoline."

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES

County Extension Chairman

A year ago Southeast farmers were facing the current year with cautious optimism. The previous year had recorded record crop yields accompanied by relatively low crop prices. This situation was good for the livestock farmer (low feed prices) but gave the crop farmer little help in paying his bills.

The year 1983 began with payment-in-kind and a wet spring. It continued into the worst drought in half a century. Finally normal rainfall resumed in August.

Some farm profits will be made this year due to PIK, a good early corn crop, some irrigated fields and a few good yields of late soybeans. But in general the drought has taken its toll.

Farm profit potential in 1984 depends on several factors including the weather, currency exchange rates, political decisions and administrative actions.

Despite 1983 production shortfalls, the United States still has enough grains and soybeans to meet its demands but the stockpiles of these crops appear to be more manageable with the exception of wheat, which escaped the direct effects of PIK and the ravages of the drought. These shortened stocks of feed grain and oilseeds, however, have boosted their farm price levels.

What does all this mean to the individual producer? Given normal weather in 1984, the crop farmer who can achieve high levels and can take advantage of strong prices can make some profit. But the large debts that many are carrying will absorb most of these profits.

The most optimistic point is that crop prices are higher than a year ago and production costs are not expected to increase dramatically.

Some good opportunities for pricing presently exist. The big burden in farming is the debt load caused by weather, bad decisions and over-expansion during the past decade.

House Panel Gives In To Trip

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When it came to expense-paid foreign travel, members of the House Rules Committee traditionally remained at the airport and waved goodbye to their globe-trotting colleagues in Congress.

After all, it was hard for Rules members to justify such travel to learn about topics under the panel's jurisdiction. Their main job is not to write bills but to be a legislative traffic cop, deciding when a measure goes to the House floor, how long it can be debated and what kind of amendments can be offered.

But things are changing. Rules Committee Chairman Claude Pepper, D-Fla., will lead some of his troops aboard an Air Force jet on Tuesday for a Latin American tour.

Taxpayer-financed like most such travel, it is just one of a number of trips by senators and representatives, sometimes accompanied by their aides and spouses, planned during the two-month congressional recess.

The Rules Committee's itinerary calls for stops in Costa Rica, Peru, Argentina, Brazil, tentatively Jamaica and possibly, for a day, Grenada.

"It's a fact-finding and knowledge-gaining trip," Pepper said in an interview. "This is not a pleasure jaunt. It is not a junket. It is a trip to obtain information about a very important part of the world. ... The State Department encouraged the Rules Committee to make this trip."

Pepper, who said the tour is the first by the committee during his 17 years on the panel, maintained that the travel will help his members do their job better.

"The Rules Committee has jurisdiction over more things than any other committee," he said. "All these things come before the Rules Committee. Our committee needs to know something about what we're doing. Are we supposed to act in a vacuum?"

"This is by a group that hasn't abused the (travel) privilege," Pepper said.

Pepper says he expects a majority of the 13-member panel and the members' spouses to head south with him.

The chairman said the trip will operate under the usual congressional rules: spouses travel free, but the member must pay for a spouse's food.

Pepper's tour will partially duplicate — geographically, at least — an 11-day trip early this month that took eight members of the House Ways and Means Committee to the Dominican Republic, Costa Rica, Jamaica, Barbados and Grenada.

Official Says Rules Needed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The head of the state office that licenses day-care centers says North Carolina needs more inspectors to ensure the centers are safe, but a day-care official says most operators obey the law.

Susan T. Law, the president of the North Carolina Day-Care Association, said most operators are angered and embarrassed by those who do not obey the law because they create bad publicity.

But she said the problem is with the law, not with the operators. She said the lengthy hearing process, few inspections and no fines for violations give people who run day-care centers little reason to fear being caught.

"There is very little incentive, short of the goodness of one's heart, to adhere to the law," Ms. Law said.

John Lail, the head of the state office that licenses the centers, said an increase in the number of inspectors would help. He said there are now only 16 inspectors for 2,254 licensed centers.

"You've got to have the people to get out there and deal with the operators," Lail said.

Lail and others say they're also concerned that there are no training requirements for people who run day-care centers. All that's required is that center operators be 21 and those who care for the children be 18.

They also contend the day-care laws aren't strict enough and are virtually unenforceable because of a cumbersome process to revoke the licenses of people who break the law.

"They're rarely closed up, so it's like giving them a hunting license," said state Rep. Louise S. Brennan, D-Mecklenburg. "Unless people can care for children in a warm, loving way, they ought to be closed up."

North Carolina has the sixth-largest number of day-care centers in the nation with 84,640 children in licensed centers and about 30,000 in home-based day-care.

Lail said the numbers are large because more than half of the women in the state with children under 6 are working mothers — one of the highest rates in the country.

Each of Lail's 16 licensing consultants is responsible for inspecting about 140 day-care centers — and some have had as many as 200. He said the maximum should be 75.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Do not become embroiled in any agreements within your vocational interests. Concern yourself with aspects of your every day job and do it without resentment.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Forget about arguing with others because your ideas are different. Keep your promises. Do nothing to upset your position of security.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Complete the work at hand before going into a new interest which could take more time than you anticipated. Be conscientious.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Use your good judgment; your hunches could be unreliable today. Steer clear of arguments, and avoid being social tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Don't permit household matters to deter you from making progress possible. Don't light into your mate over something trivial.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Concentrate on important routines now and handle communications tomorrow. Think very constructively and logically.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Try to meet the wishes of family as much as possible and avoid any new financial commitments. Don't argue with someone in business.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If you don't get into a family argument, you can carry through very nicely with affairs at hand. Don't overspend for pleasure. Be sensible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get busy at being constructive and stop worrying over something you can do little about. Don't light into family over something small.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Contact experts and find out how to add income. Take care while driving. Relax tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Exercise care in the handling of finances now, or you could make expensive errors. Be more concerned with personal matters.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Collect as much data confidentially as you can in order to formulate a plan. Avoid a group affair where arguments could start. Be happy.

Plant Orders Shaven Faces

HOPEWELL, Va. (AP) — The ICI Americas Inc. plant in Hopewell has told its employees with beards and bushy mustaches to get rid of them by Jan. 16 or look for other jobs.

Plant manager Knox W. Ramsey said only a "narrow mustache will be acceptable for any of the 600 employees who at any time may have to wear a respirator in the course of manufacturing polyester film.

Office personnel who have no reason to go in or around the plant operating areas or utilities are the only ones excluded.

Ramsey said that with the "ever-increasing concerns with inhaling contaminants and the health problems they may cause," the policy is necessary because facial hair can prevent the proper sealing of a respirator.

The shaving directive, Ramsey said, was prompted by a clarification issued about six months ago by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration that stipulates that anyone required to wear a respirator cannot have more than a 48 hours growth of beard.

Some employees contend the facial hair ban is an infringement of their rights.

Orange Bowl Halftime Competes With Game

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Last year, that famous marching band, the London Philharmonic Orchestra, stutted-stepped to the 50-yard line, and ratings for the Orange Bowl broadcast soared by nearly 30 percent.

Tonight, NBC's Orange Bowl will feature a salute to 50 years of halftime shows and, lest we forget, a football game between No. 1 Nebraska and fifth-ranked Miami, which will have a bearing on the national championship.

For football players, halftime means rest and retrenchment. For football purists at home, it means snacks, naps, snow-throwing or bill-paying — anything besides watching bands, baton-twirlers and cheerleaders on TV.

The one exception, though, has been the Orange Bowl, where halftime extravaganzas annually have been turned into prime-time variety shows.

Last year, NBC's audience levels went up dramatically when the first half of the Orange Bowl ended and the real show began. At 9:45 p.m., the game between Nebraska and Louisiana State attracted 8.4 percent of the nation's TV homes. At 10, the London Philharmonic and friends drew 10.8 percent — an increase of more than 2 million homes.

"It's amazing what you can do with the London Philharmonic on a football field," said Dan McNamara, executive director of the Orange Bowl.

NBC's appreciation for halftime's appeal was reflected by the network's first promotional spots plugging its lineup of three consecutive bowl games today. NBC bragged about Ohio State and Pittsburgh in the Fiesta, Illinois and UCLA in the Rose and then the pageantry of the Orange Bowl.

NBC's recent TV spots, though, have shifted the focus to Nebraska-Miami.

In contrast, halftime shows for today's Cotton Bowl on CBS and the prime-time Sugar Bowl on ABC feature football-oriented, feature-and-chat segments.

This is not a traditional year for the New Year's Day bowls. They weren't on Jan. 1, but the day after. That's because the National Football League owns Sundays, and New Year's happens to fall on the pros' most religious day.

So, with an extra day to recover from New Year's Eve revelry, many more viewers may enjoy the sights and sounds of tonight's 50th anniversary spectacular, which will be another Cecil B. DeMille, cast-of-thousands production.

"We don't put on an ordinary college or high-school halftime show," said McNamara in an obvious understatement.

Tonight's golden anniversary show will be a retrospective of past Orange Bowl productions. Choreography will be done by June Taylor, whose dancers starred for years on "The Jackie Gleason Show." The music will be arranged by Milton Delugg, the original conductor of the "Tonight" show band.

"We don't like to say what the show costs, we only say what it's worth," said

McNamara. "We have 1,200 people in the production, and they're all volunteers. If we had to pay them, it would cost $1 million."

In return for their performance and five rehearsals, including ones on Jan. 1 and today, the volunteers get free seats in the end-zone bleachers. "They don't get to see a whole lot of the game," said McNamara. "By the time they get back to their seats from the pre-game show, they have to get ready for halftime."

In addition to the spectacular, there will be short appearances from the bands of Miami and Nebraska. In all, halftime will run close to 30 minutes, and the Orange Bowl received special permission from the NCAA to run 10 minutes long.

Ken Schanzer, NBC Sports' executive vice president, said NBC's contract with the Orange Bowl asks the network to use "its best efforts to show halftime as comprehensively as possible. But we can't cede control of our air to someone else." Schanzer said NBC doesn't pay a separate rights fee for halftime.

"The truth is we love doing it," said Schanzer. "We show some of the band-playing and card stunts at the Rose Bowl as part of the splendor of college football. But, with the Orange Bowl, it's an essential element of the telecast. It's a misperception."

Old Havana Club Still Thrives

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
HAVANA (AP) — "Welcome to Paradise under the Stars!"

The red lights glare. The trumpets blare. And the leggy, legendary showgirls strut and smile their way onto the vast outdoor stage, kicking off another evening at the "One and Only Tropicana" nightclub — a slice of old Havana that thrives in socialist Cuba.

The sequined "choristas" are as outrageously costumed as ever, the music is as brassy, and the daiquiris as sweet. But 25 years after Fidel Castro's bearded guerrillas took command here, Cuba's premier nightspot dances to a different tune.

Where Nat King Cole once crooned to bejeweled American socialites and international gamblers, young daughters of the socialist revolution now high-step for the equivalent of $72 a week before audiences of Hungarian tourists, Soviet sergeants and Cuban workers rewarded with a night on the town.

"When I started here in '58, the admission charge alone was out of reach of the Cuban people," said Pedro Pineiro, who began as a 17-year-old Tropicana busboy and now helps run the huge club.

By the time Castro's victorious rebels rolled into the city in January 1959, the Tropicana had come to symbolize the decadence of 1950s Havana, where U.S.-based organized crime had built hotels and gambling casinos.

and was profiting — along with corrupt Cuban government officials — from prostitution, drugs and other rackets.

Why was this world-famous entertainment mecca, site of sexy shows twice nightly, spared under strict-laced socialism?

"The Tropicana is the musical image of Cuba," explained the club's administrative director, Ricardo Villanueva Russi.

But there is more to it: A "night at the Tropicana" is one of the biggest draws for tourist dollars in this poor island nation, and for Cuban workers it offers a glamorous respite from an often monotonous life.

The glamor and glitter need not worry Tommy Tune, however. The Tropicana is not Broadway al fresco. But Busby Berkeley might have smiled in recognition.

The setting for "el show" is spectacular — an amphitheater overhung with 80-foot royal palms and cobwebbed with ramps and bridges, tree-trunk platforms and staircases. Front and center, ringed by terraces of tables that hold 1,052 patrons, the main stage rises upward toward the sultry Havana night sky as the spectacle begins.

Women Prison Guards Cause Adjustments

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — Some inmates drape sheets over their cell bars or ask male guards to jingle keys if they're patrolling with a woman officer.

At the State Prison of Southern Michigan, the world's largest walled prison, inmates and guards are adjusting to the first women officers in the cell blocks since the institution opened in 1839.

"At first I was somewhat uncomfortable with it, but then I decided police are police — male or female," says 34-year-old Jerry Talson, serving a life sentence for first-degree murder.

It's a situation the state Corrections Department fought in the courts and lost. U.S. District Judge Julian Abele Cook Jr. ruled in 1982 that the department discriminated against women guards by barring them from work in housing areas at three state prisons for men — the Michigan Reformatory in Ionia, the Marquette Branch Prison and the prison in Jackson.

The department claimed it needed a ban to protect the women as well as the privacy of inmates who dress and use toilets in cells with open front bars.

Jackson's medium-security northside complex is the first section of the prison to have women on guard in the cell blocks. Fourteen women are completing training and draw occasional assignments to the housing units.

The northside complex houses about 5,300 men and was the scene of riots in 1981 that left buildings burned and dozens of inmates and guards injured.

Its 8-by-10 cells are stacked five tiers high and are connected by catwalks. Each contains a bed, dresser, sink and toilet. Inmates have access to showers in an open area once a day, but the warden's office is promising to install "privacy screens."

Cathy Brower, 35, spent her first day as a regular guard in a northside cell block last fall and said it was "no big deal."

"Some of them (inmates) see it as a new experience," she said. "Some of them told me they like the idea." Ms. Brower said the inmates have a right to privacy, but "if they don't want to be seen naked ... they know you're coming" and can plan ahead.

Cook's ruling said inmate privacy was less important than ending sexual discrimination against women guards whose careers could be stymied without promotions to the cell blocks.

He rejected the privacy argument, saying it was "based on stereotypical sexual characterization that a viewing of an inmate while nude or performing bodily functions, by a member of the opposite sex, is intrinsically more odious than the viewing by a member of one's own sex."

Cook dismissed department claims that women would draw special hostility from sex offenders, saying the probability of sexual assaults did not warrant discrimination.

Nancy Jones, 40, said her first day of regular cell block duty in the northside complex "went great." She conceded, however, that most of her female colleagues don't want a similar opportunity.

Dan Verlin, an officer helping train the women guards, said they are doing well, but that some male guards are "overly protective" of them, and others have questioned their ability to handle violent situations.

Randy Carl, who trained Ms. Brower, said he's worried about women being assigned to housing areas against their will.

"If the woman doesn't want to work in the block and they put her in there, they're asking for trouble," he warned.

Former Chiefs Say Campaigns Are Changing

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Long strategy sessions in Raleigh hotels, slow bus trips across the state and handshakes on courthouse steps are fading from political campaigns, say four former North Carolina governors who remember those days well.

Democrats Terry Sanford, Dan Moore and Bob Scott and Republican Jim Holshouser agree that campaign tactics they used are giving way to more scientific, sophisticated methods — statewide polls, media experts, airport news conferences and appeals to political action committees.

The former governors agree that the changes are inevitable but not necessarily good.

"The major difference is that the candidates now don't leave anything to chance," said Scott, who was governor from 1969-73. "It's a business. You hire media experts, you hire polling experts, you hire experts in every phase of the campaign to cover every possibility and get the best information you can."

"The candidate is almost incidental except as the product that's being marketed," he said.

Sanford said his campaign was run more on instinct than statistics.

Sanford said he focused more on organization than on media advertising when he ran for governor in 1960. He said television gives candidates a chance to treat issues superficially and to mislead the public.

"I think there's a terrible tendency for candidates to make improvements in all areas."

"One issue that has fallen by the wayside that previously all candidates for governor would have had was an agricultural platform," Scott said. "It doesn't have any impact today. Sure you support the tobacco program in this state but that's about it."

Scott said there was more attention to social issues than economic issues when he ran for governor, partly because the economy was doing so well.

Most of the former governors blame the crowded field in the 1984 governor's race on the 1977 constitutional amendment allowing the governor to serve two consecutive four-year terms.

But they disagree whether the amendment should be repealed.

"To some extent there will only be half as many governors," Sanford said. "A lot of people have the ambition to run but won't get the chance."

Sanford said he supported succession and still does although he's found one possible disadvantage — a loss of enthusiasm.

"I don't think Gov. Hunt has (lost enthusiasm) but there are certain signs that maybe it's not as creative the second time around," Sanford said.

Holshouser said the only effect of succession he sees is more time for some candidates to seek office. He said he continues to support succession because it gives a governor more time to complete work on his initiatives.

Scott said he once supported succession but has changed his mind because he thinks the turnover is good for the state.

Moore thinks the state was better off without succession.

The former governors agree that the office is a powerful one, although North Carolina's governor is one of the nation's few chief executives without the power to veto legislation.

AT&T Breakup Could Spur Tech Revolution

ATLANTA (AP) — The head of a holding company spawned by the breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. says divestiture of the huge conglomerate also may give birth to a telecommunications revolution.

"The possibilities for technology are limitless," said John L. Clendenin, chief executive officer of the Atlanta-based BellSouth Corp., one of the seven new regional holding companies created by the AT&T breakup, which took effect Sunday.

"There have been staggering advances in technology and our company, situated in a high growth area, is in the forefront of this technology," Clendenin said in a statement released Sunday.

BellSouth's operating companies are South Central Bell and Southern Bell, which provide telephone service in Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana.

"Technology has leaped forward into the information age," Clendenin said. "There is a real link between the telecommunications industry and the information age itself."

"The desire for home information is spawning. By the early 1990s, predictions are that more than 100 million people will own personal computers. Those who don't have a home computer will probably use a computer transmission line. Information services will be a lot different than they are today."

BellSouth already is exploring new markets in home information technology. Clendenin cited the recent introduction in Miami of Viewtron, a videotex service marketed by BellSouth and Knight-Ridder newspapers and which allows subscribers to shop, bank and pay bills electronically.

In other areas, Clendenin said BellSouth is exploring possible joint ventures in both regulated and unregulated parts of the telecommunications industry.

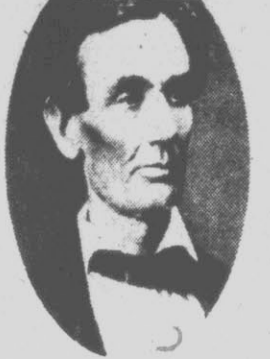

"The telephone network is one giant computer, and because we are very big and have a need for computer based systems, we have very large internal computer information systems capabilities," he said. "We've developed some information management systems for our own use which are very attractive to other utilities."

Clendenin said BellSouth is studying possible joint ventures with cable television companies to provide and bill pay-per-view programming, to build and maintain new cable systems and to handle trouble reports and billing for cable television.

"Technology is pushing our industries toward one another," he said, "and I think there are some mutually beneficial opportunities ahead."

BellSouth is the largest of the seven holding companies created by the breakup of AT&T. With assets of about $21 billion, it ranks within the top 15 of the Fortune 500 industrials.

FOCUS

Historic Anniversary
 Abraham Lincoln issued the famous Emancipation Proclamation 161 years ago today. The Proclamation freed no slaves. But some historians believe that by projecting the Union cause as anti-slavery, Lincoln reduced opposition to the war and kept France and England from entering the conflict. The document promised freedom for slaves in rebellious states only. Slaves in the North remained property until the 13th Amendment was passed in 1865.

Saturday's Cryptquip — IS PEPPY HENRY FORD'S DEFT SIGNATURE HIS "AUTO-GRAPH"?
 Today's Cryptquip clue: A equals P.
 The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQJ82 ♥A95 ♦J62 ♣94
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—When you have adequate support for partner, it is usually advisable to show it as soon as possible. Here, however, you have a dead minimum opening bid, so you should do little to encourage partner—any move he makes toward game should be of his own free will. Rebid two spades.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AQJ63 ♥Q95 ♦5 ♣AK84
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You certainly have the values for a game in hearts. However, your hand could easily produce a slam. You should bid out your shape. Start by bidding three clubs (a "high reverse"), and then raise hearts at your next turn. That describes your hand perfectly.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠QJ5 ♥A8753 ♦96 ♣A76
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 1 ♠ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Don't rebid your hearts simply to show that you have five—two hearts would show a weaker hand with longer hearts, and three hearts is game forcing, showing a very robust suit. You have a balanced hand, and your most probable game, if you have one, seem to be in no trump. Raise to two no trump.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠872 ♥K1065 ♦954 ♣AJ3

The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 1 ♠ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—This is not the hand where you should take a preference to partner's first bid suit. With such a sound stopper in the unbid suit and a balanced hand, you can describe it well by rebidding one no trump.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠872 ♥K1065 ♦954 ♣QJ3
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 1 ♠ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—You have a dead minimum responding hand, and with a minimum you should not make more than one bid unless you are forced to. There is no reason for taking a preference to partner's first bid suit—one spade should be perfectly playable if the opponents allow you to buy the hand there. Pass. Don't rebid one no trump—reserve that action for hands that are slightly better than dead minimum.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠8763 ♥KQJ4 ♦95 ♣762
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 3 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You have an unpleasant hand to bid. If you bid three no trump, partner will expect you to have a solid spade stopper and he might pass when there is a superior contract available. You can't reverse in spades or rebid your hearts, and you shouldn't raise partner's second suit with only three-card support. That leaves just one option—you must take a false preference to three diamonds and wait for partner's next move.
