Lt. Goodman In High Spirits

'They Tried To Scare Me'

By TERRY A. ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy Lt. Robert O. Goodman Jr., appearing in high spirits, slept, prayed and ate a thick steak as he flew from Syria, where he had spent a month in captivity, to a red-carpet greeting in the United States. "They tried to scare me," he said of Syrian harrassment.

He said he would save details of the interrogation "for the debriefing" by U.S. military officers that begin today, but the Washington Post quoted Goodman as saying: "I got hit a couple of times. Face and body, with fists."

Imprisonment over, Goodman was in high spirits during the two-stage flight that took a total 22 hours. The first leg, from Damascus, Syria, to Rhein Main Air Base, West Germany, was in a spartan-like U.S. military cargo carrier. The second leg into Washington was aboard a jet from the presidential fleet.

Goodman, 27, of Virginia Beach, Va., told reporters en route to Germany that his captors had interrogated him immediately after he was taken to Damascus from the crash site.

"They tried to scare me," he said. Asked if the Syrians had shouted and waved guns, he replied: "It was more than just shouting. (But) they weren't trying to hurt me, just trying to scare me."

Goodman, a bombardier-navigator, said his treatment improved Dec. 8, four days after his capture, when he was moved to a different room and allowed a visit by the International Red Cross.

Goodman apparently was held in the Syrian Army Political Department compound in Damascus.

He said he never left the room in which he was detained. Asked what he did all day, he said, "read, read." The four books he read during his month-long captivity were, "Chesapeake," by James Michener, "XPD" by Len Deighton, "Bloodline" by Sydney Sheldon and "Mosaic," he said.

"They gave me tons of bread and rice" as well as other food, he said.

Goodman added that he was nervous, especially about meeting President Reagan on his return to the United States.

"Wouldn't you be?" he asked.

On the flight to Washington, Goodman took a nap in a crewman's bunk, then spent time in the cockpit with the crew. Jesse Jackson, the Democratic presidential hopeful who successfully negotiated Goodman's release, also napped.

Jackson wandered up and down the aisle a few times, laughing and talking with reporters and his aides. But Goodman remained in the forward cabins or the cockpit during the entire journey.

The freed flicr was served a thick steak, baked potato, salad and wine. Several champagne toasts were drunk aboard the plane flying from Syria to Germany.

Goodman changed from the brown jacket, trousers, shirt and white sneakers bought for him by Jackson's group in Damascus to a crisp Navy uniform before the landing at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington.

BACK WITH FAMILY — Navy Lt. Robert O. Goodman, his wife Terry Lynn, daughters Morgan, 2, and Tina, 6, are reunited at Andrews AFB in Maryland this morning after Goodman's flight from Germany. (AP Laserphoto)

Commissioners To Ask A Special Fire District Tax

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners Tuesday adopted a resolution asking the Board of Elections to hold a referendum in March on the establishment of a special fire district tax in the Bell Arthur area.

The board's action came at the request of the Bell Arthur Fire Department, which asked that the special election be held on March 13 at the fire department.

The Bell Arthur department submitted a petition to commissioners last June asking that a fire district tax be established to help fund the volunteer department.

In submitting the petition, fire department representatives said future capital outlay projects are "beyond hope" unless a special tax is established and said the department is in need of a new fire truck that is expected to cost about $54,000.

The petition requesting the vote was signed by 15 percent of the property owners in Bell Arthur's four-mile fire district.

Under the present law, if the fire district tax is approved by voters, commissioners would be able to assess up to 10 cents per $100 valuation within the Bell Arthur district for fire department support. While the law allows a tax of up to 15 cents per $100 valuation, another vote of the property owners would be required to authorize the additional 5 cents.

According to County Manager Reginald Gray, the estimated value of property within the proposed tax district amounts to $37 million, and a 1 cent tax per $100 value would raise about $3,700.

If the referendum passes, the tax district will be responsible for bearing the cost of the election and the costs involved in administration and collection of taxes.

If the proposed tax is defeated, the county will have to bear the expense of the vote.

Gray noted that if the tax is approved, the fire department would have to submit a budget, just as other county departments and agencies do, and the tax rate would be set by the Board of Commissioners.

In a report to the board, Tax Supervisor Jimmie Hardee told commissioners that 29,400 mail listings and 4,000 business listings were mailed to Pitt property owners last week who list their personal and real property for tax purposes by mail. He said the mail listings acount for half the property listings in the county.

Both real and personal property must be listed for taxes before midnight Jan. 31, according to state law.

Tax Collector Bill Smith said his office collected $3.45 million dollars between Dec.

Kearney Park Modernization Said Underway

Modernization work on units in the Housing Authority's Kearney Park development is well under way with some segments of the project moving toward completion, commissioners learned Tuesday night.

Ken Noland, the authority's assistant director, reported that the "contractor is moving along real well" in the 160-unit housing section, particularly in the area of new window installation which is about 94 percent complete.

Noland said furnace installation now stands at 38 percent, while 48 percent of the units have new water heaters and 71 percent have new ranges. Kitchen cabinet work is scheduled on 23 units and 65 percent of that seg-

Pitt School Board Okays Adult Diploma Guidelines

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education has approved guidelines for an adult high school diploma program administered by Pitt Community College that will enable adults to complete the requirements for a high school diploma.

The program will not replace the present high school equivalency certificate program, noted the proposal presented to the board, but would "expand the existing educational approaches for those lacking a high school diploma."

"The GED (graduate equivalency degree) program provides an alternative for the dropout to complete his high school education," according to the proposal. "However, to many the GED program is not satisfactory," it noted.

The high school adult diploma program would contain "a stronger academic emphasis" for persons planning to attend college or enlist in the armed services. School officials noted that the GED is currently not acceptable for enlistment in the armed services.

According to the proposal, students that enter the program must be at least 18 years of age and have been out of school six months except on the written recommendation of the superintendent and principal for students with special needs who are at least 16 years old.

Other program procedures and requirements include:

•Completion of level IV courses shall be the minimum requirement for eligibility for a diploma for those whose placement scores are at or above the top placement level.

•Students must pass the North Carolina Competency Test.

•No units of credit earned in the adult high school diploma program may be transferred to a secondary school.

•The program will stress programmed instruction and individually paced achievement of end-of-course objectives. Curriculum development will be in the direction of an open-entry, open-exit enrollment determined by placement and achievement testing.

•Credit toward the diploma will be awarded whenever the enrollee gives evidence by examination of having mastered the subject matter.

•Diplomas will be issued in the name of Pitt Community College, the Pitt County Board of Education and the

James Files As Board Candidate

Bethel native Eugene James has filed as a candidate for the Pitt County Board of Commissioners from the Belvoir, Bethel, Pactolus and Carolina townships.

"I believe in the future of Pitt County and would like to be a part of the leadership directing its growth and progress," James said in filing.

A Bethel High School graduate, he attended N.C. State University where he received his bachelor's and master's degrees in agricultural education. He began teaching at Chicod High School in 1950 and has taught at Belvoir-Falkland and North Pitt High School Since retiring from teaching in 1978, James has been farming and teaching part time.

During World War II he served with the 103rd Infantry Division in France, Germany and Austria.

He coached basketball and Little League baseball, served as Scoutmaster for Boy Scout Troop 160 for 20 years, and was a Pitt County Memorial Hospital Trustee for 12 years. He is past president of the Ruritan Club.

Weigh Including Two Schools In Registry

By JERRY RAYNOR

The Greenville Board of Education Monday authorized a feasibility study of submitting the names of two city school buildings — Agnes Fullilove and Third Street — for possible inclusion on the National Register of Historic Places.

Maurice C. York, director of the Eastern Office of the North Carolina Division of Archives and History in Greenville, presented the request to the board. York noted that Kate Ohno, who surveyed the architectural resources of Greenville in 1982, had recommended these two buildings as architecturally significant "likely candidates for inclusion in the National Register."

Answering questions by board members, York assured the panel that designation of the schools for the register would in no way restrict use of the buildings, their eventual sale or other

Strickland Will Be A Candidate

Bruce Strickland of Bell Arthur, a veteran member of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, filed as a candidate for re-election this morning.

Strickland has held a seat on the board — representing District 3, which includes Falkland, Farmville, Fountain and Arthur townships — since 1960.

BRUCE STRICKLAND

During his tenure, Strickland has served five terms as chairman of the board, has been chairman of the Pitt County Board of Health, and has been a member of the board of the Department of Social Services, the board of trustees of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority and the Pitt County Development Commission.

Strickland has also served as a director of Pitt County Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Association.

The incumbent is in the tobacco warehouse business and owns and operates several farms in the county.

"I really think Pitt County is one of the leading counties in the state," Strickland said. "I'm glad to have had a part in it's development, and hope to continue. I think we've just scratched the surface in the county's growth and progress.

"My record stands for itself," Strickland added. Strickland and his wife.

Basal Reading Series Developed For Deaf Children Who Know No Words

By MELINDA STOVALL

GREENSBORO — Billy ran his finger under the sentence, reading each word in his second-grade book. But seven-year-old Billy couldn't believe what he was reading.

In the story, a farmer was complaining that it was "raining like cats and dogs." Billy just couldn't understand how it could be raining cats and dogs.

Wouldn't the animals hurt themselves falling from the sky, Billy asked the teacher. How come when it rained, he only saw water, the youngster pressed on.

Trying to explain to a small child that "raining cats and dogs" is just a phrase can be as difficult as describing what chocolate tastes like. But if the youngster is deaf, the task of teaching a child to understand what he or she is reading can be doubly hard.

To help teach deaf children to read, Dr. Cynthia King, an assistant professor in the Division of Communication Disorders at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, has helped to develop a basal reading series that is the only one of its kind in the nation specifically designed for deaf youngsters.

The beginning reading series, called "Reading Milestones," also can be adopted to teach reading to children with learning or reading problems or to those youngsters learning English as a second language.

What makes "Reading Milestones" unique is that the sets of readers and workbooks are designed to teach deaf children to read by beginning at a very basic level and systematically introducing new words and sentence structures or syntax.

"Before, teachers for the deaf simply used reading materials developed for hearing children and tried to adapt them in their instruction," Dr. King said. "For instance, most reading series for hearing children assume that a child beginning to read knows at least 100 words. We started our series assuming that the kids know no words.

"The reason being is that a two-and-one-half-year-old hearing child, for instance, may already have read some words or heard the words used in context," she continued. " A child, deaf from early on, does not have this hearing experience."

Dr. King further pointed out that the average child learning English as a second language — even though he or she does have another language base — also does not have a basic knowledge or auditory experience of what she or he is trying to read in English.

For the youngster learning English, for the deaf child or one with reading problems, learning to read then becomes a language learning process at the same time, said Dr. King, who teached in the Division of Communication Disorders in the Department of Communication and Theatre at UNC-G.

Not only does a lack of vocabulary and/or no experience at hearing English hamper these children's reading comprehension, but this is also true of complex sentence structures found in many of the beginning reading books, she said.

"A national survey done in 1976 of programs for hearing impaired students showed that 46 percent of the programs thought that top priority should be given to developing linguistically controlled reading materials," said Dr. King.

One reason that a basal reading series for deaf children hadn't been developed before is that the knowledge really didn't exist on how to go about it until some research was done, she said.

To that end, Dr. Stephen Quigley of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign — Dr. King's co-author on "Reading Milestones" — was the main force in completing in the late 1970s reasearch in the syntactic structure in the language of deaf children.

In his research with others, Dr. Quigley demonstrated, for example, that the average deaf 18-year-old person cannot understand or use many of the syntactic structures that the average 10-year-old hearing child uses easily. Again, for most hearing children, the syntax of reading materials more often matches the syntax of their auditory language.

These differences between when and how hearing and deaf children begin to understand the various syntactic structures helped to giude the developement of "Reading Milestones."

"I think that it is important to note that this reading series is based on research," Dr. King adds. "It's not that we're just providing cute little books for deaf kids."

The approach of "Reading Milestones" is to control how many and when new words and sentence structures are introduced to the beginning reader. Once exposed to new words and syntax through pictures and stories, the young reader is reinforced with repetitions of the forms.

For example, plurals are introduced during the second level of readers. Only after much practice with plural forms (using the letter "s,") is the student taught irregular plurals (such as feet for foot).

As Dr. King noted, new concepts are introduced with their most common form first; then practice with that one form is provided before variations of the form are introduced.

Repetition of important words and sentences is helped with a workbook of exercises that accompanies each of the 10 readers within each level of "Reading Milestones." That is unique, Dr. King said, since many reading series have only one workbook for the entire set of readers.

"We also try to develop glossary skills and other study skills from the beginning," Dr. King said. "Typically, study skills for hearing kids aren't started until about the fourth grade. That often means teachers for deaf children may wait even longer. My two-and-one-half-year-old nephew can handle the basics of a table of contents. Why wait until the third or fourth grade?"

"Reading Milestones," which took five years to develop, consists of eight levels of readers and workbooks. Five levels have been published, with the remaining three set for print next year. Once a youngster completes all eight levels, he or she should be able to begin using and understanding fourth-grade reading materials.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler

Only the highest officials of the Roman Empire wore boots. In those days, boots were status symbols and not at all practical; they were scarlet in color, knee-high and open-toed.

Today's boots are a basic in everyone's wardrobe — from the traditional cowboy boots to colorful rain boots to the finest high style leather boots. Three types are available: waterproof or water-resistant boots for foul weather, boots of durable leather and casual styling for everyday wear, as well as leather dress boots strictly for dry weather. To get the best performance and longest use from all boots, wear them under the conditions for which they were intended and care for them properly.

Start caring for new leather boots even before wearing them. Apply several coats of transparent paste wax so they will be protected from the elements. Leather boots are not completely waterproof unless they come with a waterproof guarantee. If boots are well-polished they do shed water. Increase water-resistance by spraying the seams and sole line of dark leather boots with silicone. Silicone stains light-colored leather and suede so apply it on dark-colored leather only. There are other products safe for light leathers and suede to increase water-resistance. Check labels. Never use a heavy oil as a waterproofing finish for fine leather boots since it will make them dull and impossible to shine.

Boots should be cared for immediately after they have been exposed to harsh weather. Stuff the toes of wet boots with paper. Dry boots for at least 12 hours and be certain they are placed away from any heat source.

Wash salt off boots as soon as possible to avoid corroding the leather. Make up a solution of warm, sudsy water with a spoonful of vinegar added. Then gently sponge off salt stains. Pay as much attention to cleaning soles and heels as you do to the leather uppers.

Boots need to be rewaxed often to keep them shining and should always be rewaxed after they have been allowed to thoroughly dry out from weather exposures. Start the waxing process by sponging boots clean with lukewarm water and soap. Never saturate the leather and always let it dry completely before waxing. A transparent wax will help the light to medium color leather boots retain their original color and become slightly deeper with age.

Suede boots can be cleaned with an artgum eraser. Serious stains should be handled by a shoemaker.

When soft boots are not in use make then stand upright by using boot trees. Boot trees can easily be made at home. Just roll heavy cardboard into tubes that can be inserted in the boots. Camphor placed in boots helps remove foot odor after wearing.

Boots can be kept in good repair and feet in good health if certain practices are followed daily. First do not wear the same boots every day. Boot linings should be aired a day after use so perspiration has time to evaporate. Otherwise, bacteria may breed in the boots which is unhealthy for the feet and also contributes to the rotting of the boot linings.

Never wear boots indoors all day. Feet enclosed in leather or waterproof boots perspire and the damp, warm environment is a haven for bacteria.

For added warmth, buy winter boots that are roomy enough to allow space for extra socks. Layering two pairs of thin wool socks rather than only one bulky pair provides extra insulation. Don't wear tight stockings, socks or tight boots in winter. Constricted feet feel cold.

With proper care, even fashionable boots of soft leather can last a long time. Keep boots in good repair so the soles don't wear out before the uppers and have heels fixed before they wear down completely.

Whether searching for waterproof boots or dress boots, save money in the long run by buying good quality. While in the store, check the stitching to make sure it is even and sturdy. The inside of the boots, whether lined or not should be smooth from top to toe.

Before making cookies, compare the cost of a packaged mix with your own recipe. It may be cheaper to sue the convenience produce.

Skinless turkey or chicken may be substituted in recipes that call for lean meat. You may need to adjust the herbs and spices.

Frugal Bride's Savings Has Bitter Payoff

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am the divorced mother of two small children. When I married eight years ago, my parents gave me a large, expensive wedding. I am being married again and refuse to let my parents give me another wedding.

My fiance has built a nice little home for us. He is not wealthy, just conservative. We're getting married in my parents' home with only immediate family members and six couples who are very close friends. After the ceremony we will all go to a small neighborhood restaurant for dinner.

I invited the guests by phone and told them all that they would be paying for their own meals. Everyone seemed to think it was OK.

I am enclosing this letter I just received from one of our "close" friends:

"Dear ( ): We regret to inform you that we cannot accept your ill-mannered invitation. To invite people to a wedding and expect them to pay for their own meals afterward shows a definite lack of class, taste, dignity and pride.

"It is really too bad that you can afford to build a brand-new house, but can't see your way clear to pick up the tab for your wedding guests. You two have some nerve! You are just plain cheap and selfish and ought to be ashamed of yourselves."

Abby, were we wrong to ask our guests to pay for their own meals? And what should we do now?

SECOND-TIME BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: I think you went overboard trying to conserve when you asked your guests to pay for their own meals.

If it's not too late, please pay for your guests' dinners and economize somewhere else. The "close" friends who wrote that letter were cruel. A simple "no" would have sufficed.

DEAR ABBY: You have often dealt with the problem of guests who arrive late, but please say something about the boorishness of guests who arrive for a dinner party 15 minutes early.

IRKED HOSTESS

DEAR IRKED: Ask any hostess if she prefers to have guests arrive 15 minutes late or 15 minutes early. I think the lateniks would be more readily forgiven. The 15 minutes before guests arrive are crucial for the hostess. Considerate guests never intentionally show up early.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the lady who was concerned about her husband's habit of talking to the television:

She shouldn't worry. I also talk to the television. For instance, every time I see a rerun of "The Rockford Files," and a beautiful woman comes to Jim Rockford with a sad story about why she wants to hire him as a detective, I always yell, "She's lying to you, Jim!" Does Jim listen to me? No. She hires him. Then he gets beat up by a couple of thugs who have been hiding in his trailer.

I yell at my car when it stalls at intersections. I yell at the wire coat hangers when they fall on the closet floor and get all tangled up. I yell at the door of my clothes dryer when it won't come open, and I yell at it again when it won't stay closed. I have had some very heated arguments with my home computer when it doesn't do what I want it to.

Am I crazy? I think not. It's natural to talk to inanimate objects.

I also talk to myself sometimes. Why not? I'm a fascinating conversationalist and a good listener. Sometimes I argue with myself, and there are even times when I'm not on speaking terms with myself, but I always kiss and make up.

PERFECTLY SANE

No Resolutions For Cerebral Palsy Victim

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — The blinds are open to the winter sunshine. A few potted plants, anonymous gifts, rest on a ledge. Behind the closet door are hundreds of unopened letters for Elizabeth Bouvia.

The brown-haired, 26-year-old quadriplegic is stretched out on her bed, the tube running into her nose a constant reminder of unsuccessful attempts to starve herself to death.

There are no New Year's resolutions here.

"I don't want to spend the rest of my life like this, and I think it is clear that the rest of my 20 years would be in a convalescent home, depending on someone else for the most humiliating of needs," Ms. Bouvia said in an interview with The Associated Press on New Year's Day.

Born with cerebral palsy and confined to a wheelchair, Ms. Bouvia has been trying for several months to convince the courts to let her starve to death while receiving painkillers and hygienic care at Riverside General Hospital.

Her lawyers have filed an appeal with the California Supreme Court.

Meanwhile, she is being force-fed and attended by an around-the-clock nurse. A 24-hour guard is posted outside her door because of two death threats the hospital says she has received.

Officials at Riverside General have said Ms. Bouvia is a "devilish" woman who is basking in the attention her case has generated and doesn't really want to die. Strangers have written to her from around the world, urging her to reconsider her decision.

She remains steadfast.

"I don't see how anyone can tell me I should lead the life I'm leading now because it could be a productive one," she said. "Because to me as a person it (life) is humiliating and agonizing. I don't think anyone — disabled or able-bodied alike — should tell me how I should lead my life."

The furor over her case has obscured her simple wish — to escape from a body that keeps her from ever being physically independent, she said.

"This was a very private matter, but it has become a very big issue. It's been blown out of proportion and, unfortunately, I've gotten lost in there," Ms. Bouvia said.

"I wish the hospital would just let me be, keep me comfortable, and let me die with dignity," she said. "That's the issue we're fighting here."

For the past several years, she has suffered from severe arthritis and has grown more dependent on others, she said.

"I enjoy my life and I will to the very last minute," she said. "I enjoy talking to people, seeing things. But it doesn't outweigh the physical problems I go through day to day."

In her private room, Ms. Bouvia spends her time watching television, looking out the window and talking with her friends and attorneys. She has rarely granted interviews, saying she's "not trying to make any kind of national statement."

She acknowledged contacting the news media to make her problem known but said: "I didn't foresee the publicity being this horrendous. My intention was never to seek publicity."

Superior Court Judge John H. Hews ruled last month that Ms. Bouvia could not starve herself to death at the hospital because exercising her right to self-determination would infringe on the rights of those caring for her. Hews later permitted the hospital to force-feed her.

Doctors at Riverside General, about 50 miles east of Los Angeles, say Ms. Bouvia is fit enough to be released, but that she won't be discharged until a facility willing to take her is found.

She has not eaten since Dec. 19, when she began a fast that had her facing "imminent death" before force-feeding removed her from the danger list, the hospital said.

"It was a very peaceful feeling," she said of the close call. "As far as I was concerned, they just interrupted that peaceful feeling by sticking needles in me."

Ms. Bouvia said she has no New Year's resolutions, because "a couple of weeks ago, I didn't know if I would be here for the new year."

Will she be around for the next New Year?

"I hope not, but there is that chance," she said.

Financial Matters Need Planning

Was there an engagement ring in your Christmas stocking?

"Now is the time to talk over financial matters," says Dr. Thelma Hinson, extension family resource management specialist, N.C. State University. Many families argue over money matters. "Problems occur when two people have different financial goals and attitudes toward money."

Before they tie the knot, couples should talk over how they plan to make and spend money, how they feel about savings, investments and long-range goals. Once they see their differences, they can develop a plan with each one doing some giving and taking.

"This is also a good time to discuss who will keep the family's records. "Somebody has to assume the leadership but it has to be a joint decision," Dr. Hinson says.

Health Care Costs

North Carolina hospitals are clearly being affected by changes in financing of medical care.

The North Carolina Hospital Association reports that hospitals in the state have closed 1,029 beds this fall because of the declining health census. There has been an average reduction of 8 percent in patients since October 1982.

The president of the NCHA C. Edward McCauley said, "The majority of our member hospitals have experienced significant declines, bringing average occupancy statewide under 65 percent."

The decline was attributed to shorter hospital stays, higher insurance deductables, increased use of outpatient services, changing in physicians admitting and discharge patterns, unemployment, competition from physicians and free standing clinics and other hospitals.

The average occupancy per hospital for October was 63 percent and McCauley said two dozen hospitals had to close an average of 30 beds each. There have also been hiring freezes, shorter working hours, reduced wages and cutbacks.

Area hospitals have been affected and, despite its regional referral hospital status, there has been some effect at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Finance Officer Warren McRoy recently reported that hospital revenues were running 9 percent under budget last month. He said, however, that expenses were running 13 percent under the budget. While the hospital census had been off, he reported it had picked up some in December.

Changes are under way to reduce the nation's overall cost of health care. It is affecting hospitals, but that is one of the major cost areas of health care. Hospitals in general will reduce their planning for additional beds and staff increases. So long as the reduction in patients is not so drastic as to put a given hospital in a position where it cannot operate efficiently, the changes will be beneficial to the nation by cutting our health care costs.

Face The Issues

While the election is still months away, everyone knows the Jim Hunt- Jesse Helms race for Helms' U.S. Senate seat is well under way.

And the North Carolina Jaycees have proposed a series of Hunt-Helms debates.

The Jaycees have urged both candidates to run a clean campaign and they see the debates as one way to do this.

N.C. Jaycees President Jim Godfrey said, "We feel that it is in the best interest of the citizens of North Carolina for this campaign to be based soley on the issues at hand rather than on distorted advertising and negative campaign rhetoric."

Certainly an issues-oriented campaign would be in the best interest of our state in this and all other races during 1984.

Could Mondale Be Elected?

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — The cloud persistently hovering over Walter F. Mondale's presidential candidacy even as he methodically moves ever closer to the nomination is typified by the attitude of a progressive young Democrat near the top of his vice-presidential list: Gov. Bob Graham of Florida.

In an interview at the state capitol, Graham was surprisingly blunt to us in laying out his concerns. "The real test of his candidacy," Graham said of Mondale, would come after his nomination. Mondale then would have "to shift his direction so that he becomes electable in November." Implicitly, he is not electable today as a "captive" of liberal special interests, according to ghe goernor.

This harsh assessment is no desperation attempt by Sen. John Glenn to overhaul the front-runner. Rather, coming from a Southern liberal considered a prospective Mondale backer, it suggests the peculiar frame of mind prevailing in the Democtratic Party. The growing consensus about Fritz Mondale's inevitabiliti has not been accompanied by similar optimism about his electability.

At least until Florida's March 13 primary, Graham is committed to a fellow Floridian, former Gov. Reubin Askew. But Mondale, unlike his less-diligent presidential rivals, has prepared for Askew's eventual demise by never failing to telephone Graham whenever he visits the state. Mondale campaign strategist Jim Johnson has privately laid plans for stepped-up courtship of the governor.

Beyond being yet another big-name endorser, Graham has been viewed by Mondale insiders as the most attractive second half of a North-South ticket. Although the imperative of winning Texas may require Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as running mate, Mondale's men would much prefer the younger (age 47), more charismatic, better-looking and, more liberal Floridian.

But Graham's advisers dispute the notion that he and Mondale are ideological soulmates, avowing that the governor is much more conservative and populistic. Most obviously, they part company on capital punishment. Graham permitted the second execution of his administration a few weeks ago, and there could be many more in his remaining three years as governor. One or two condemned men are added monthly to the more than 200 now on Death Row, raising the possibility of officially sanctioned carnage.

That does not bother Graham, who points to public "belief in the moral appropriateness and in the (deterrent) capacity of ... capital punishment" — a belief he shares. As for governors who pledge never to permit an execution, Graham told us they "probably shouldn't have run for office in the first place."

Such hard-line reflection of popular opinion might seem a politically satisfying complement to Mondale's affinity for Democratic activists opposing the death sentence. But political balancing aside, Graham is concerned with his party's dirft from popular sentiment.

He believes the nation has now reached the condition described for Florida 40 years ago by Southern political analyst V.O. Key, who called it an "atomized" state where institutional networks have broken down. Graham sees a more mobile, better-educated American people with superior access to information and "less willing to place reliance" on "third parties" — unions and other components of the Democratic Party coalition.

The education issue that dominated his first five years as governor reflects this concern. Since rousing the ire of longtime allies in the National Education Association (NEA) by successfully passing merit pay for teachers, Graham has been worried about a public conception of organized teachers running contrary to "mainstream" American efforts to achieve bretter education — with Mondale on the side of the teachers.

Graham raised these concerns to Mondale privately at the National Governors conference last summer, warning that he "could become a captive" of the party's special interests. That warning was followed by no discernible change in Mondale's public posture.

Similarly, Graham frets about the surrender of Mondale, along with Glenn and all other Democratic presidential hopefuls except Askew, to United Auto Workers (UAW) demands for trade protectionism. "I happen to be a strong free-trade person," he told us. "From that point of view, I am closer to President Reagan's view than I am to some of the Democratic positions that seem willing to support a protectionist policy."

In calling for federal deficit reduction, Graham said not even Social Security should be immune from trimming. "I don't flinch at that," said the governor of a state heavy with senior citizens. Mondale, Glen et al. — plus Ronald Reagan — certainly flinch.

Thus, Mondale's potential running mate is at odds with the NEA, the UAW and even the old-age lobby. Whether Bob Graham ever is tapped for vice president, he is delivering a stern message: Mondale had better start moving away from techniques and positions that habve brought him to the brink of the nomination if he and his party are to win the public's confidence.

Taping Those Calls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Other people have done what Charles Z. Wick, the director of the United States Information Agency, reluctantly has owned up to doing: taping telephone calls.

Some reporters do it, too.

Anybody can. It is illegal in some states, but not most. The question is whether it's ethical anywhere.

The device itself — a piece of wire, one end of which fits into a tape recorder and the other end of which has a suction cup that attaches to a telephone — is available for a few dollars at shops that sell electronic equipment.

It's not very complicated and is widely available.

Yet there's something distasteful about recording people's telephone conversations without first telling them. If there weren't, why did Wick first deny that he'd ever done it, and only later, faced with evidence to the contrary, modify his statement?

And why did Wick feel obliged to telephone the White House to report that, as spokesman Larry Speakes said, he did not tape the president or Mrs. Reagan.

There's something unsavory here, but it's slippery.

The difference, of course, between Wick doing it and reporters doing it is substantial. People talk to reporters knowing that their words are going to be shared with the world. That's why the reporter is asking questions — to put the answers in the papers.

Wick is a high government official, not a reporter, and people talking to him have no reason to think that their words are going to be put on paper and circulated.

But the issue goes beyond that obvious distinction. The bad taste remains. There's something fundamentally different between taking notes and recording a conversation.

Here's how the conversation might go between the reporter who does it, and wants to keep on doing it, and his conscience, which tells him he oughtn't.

Reporter: Well, what is the big difference? After all, the guy I'm talking to doesn't know whether I'm taking notes or not, so you might say I'm doing that surreptitiously, too.

Conscience: Sure, but notes aren't a verbatim repetition of everything he's said.

Reporter: That's because my note-taking ability is so poor. The recorder gives me the ability to take totally complete notes. Then I'm able to quote my source with absolute accuracy. That's in my interest, but in his interest, too. Anyway, what if I'd been smart when I was a kid and taken a shorthand course in high school; then I could take what you so stiffly call "a verbatim repetition."

Conscience: Shorthand's different.

Reporter: Why? It's verbatim.

Conscience: Yeah, but it's deniable. The source can claim that he's been misquoted. If you produce your shorthand notes, he can say you wrote them later. But he can't deny a tape recording.

Reporter: So your objection is that the guy can't lie and claim he's been misquoted when in fact he hasn't been misquoted, is that it?

Conscience: Well, everybody — even scoundrels — ought to have the right, when cornered, to claim they've been misquoted. It gives them an out. No one ever believes it anyway, I don't think.

Reporter: Wait a minute. You want to protect a source's right to lie while removing a reporter's means of getting accurate quotes? Is that it? What kind of a conscience are you, anyway?

Conscience: Hmmm. Well, there's another ground for objecting.

Public Forum

To the editor:

On Dec. 29, 1983, the U.S. State Department made an official announcement that the United States is reported ready to drop its membership in United National Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organizations (UNESCO), unless the agency makes major policy concessions by the end of 1984.

The State Department complained that, in recent years, UNESCO has mismanaged its budget and provided no accountability as to how the money is used. The American taxpayer pays 25 percent of UNESCO's $200 million annual budget.

What does the American taxpayer get for our hundreds of millions of dollars? Supporting an agency that eagerly follows the Third World Commuist line, ignoring the human rights Western societies hold sacred.

Through its New World Information Order, UNESCO seeks to limit the free flow of news from the Third World by increasing governmental control of news and newsmen — a practice that meets with favor on the Soviet side. The U.N. is working through UNESCO to require licensing of reports in an effort to abolish freedom of the press.

UNESCO has served as a nest for Soviet spies (of the 47 agents France booted out this April, 12 worked for UNESCO). Though the Soviets use UNESCO and other operations to hide their spies, their devotion to the U.N. does not include paying their share of costs. The Soviets are an estimated $180 million in arrears! Why are they permitted to stay if they don't pay!

Not only is the hard-working American taxpayer the main financial underwriter of the United Nations, but our money is being used to subvert our sovereignty, our national security, our economic and social sytem, our representative form of government, and the traditional moral and ethical values of the United States.

Yes, the time has come to press aggressively for U.S. withdrawal from UNESCO and the U.N.

Looking Back

NEW YORK (AP) — You have heard everyone and your brother-in-law tell what the new year will bring, with never a by-your-leave or a curtsy to modesty, and never an assumption of responsibility for what is said.

You have heard them say with manner profound that as January goes so goes the stock market, that you should never invest on Monday morning or Friday afternoon, and that the economy will be good to you this year.

The raw truth, however, is neither easily nor immediately discernable to laymen, or even years later to historians. And the latter will tell you that if you don't know the past you cannot foretell the future.

In that regard, a furious debate exists among historians about the American economic past, in which it is claimed the footings of American history from which many people make their predictions are not what you thought they were.

In spite of the Boston Tea Party and all the assumptions you may have made about it, for instance, England may have poured more money into the American colonies than it took out in taxes. Or so some historians say.

How do they know? By the study of cliometrics, or the use of the same statistical methods employed in economic forecasting, except that they work their way back into the past.

By this technique you may offer evidence that before the Civil War the economy of the South was growing more rapidly than that of the North, and that slave plantations were more efficient than free farms.

Cliometrics, defended by Prof. Robert Fogel of the University of Chicago Business School, suggests it isn't true either that the rich get richer and the poor get poorer.

In the United States, according to the cliometricians, children of the poor generally move up the economic ladder while the kids of the rich tend to slip a bit for any number of reasons, maybe including taxes and lack of motivation.

In Greensboro, N.C., researchers at the Center for Creative Leadership are fond of blasting away business myths by applying scientific methods.

You probably assume, for example, that great business managers don't make big mistakes — errors of the dimension and impact of those you've probably made. Well, it isn't so; successful business managers say so.

Nearer the truth is that successful managers learn how to weather the storm that follows the mistake. "You can't get too concerned about losing millions or you'll become paralyzed," said one. "After all, money is lost every day."

Confidential interviews at the center with dozens of managers revealed "dozens of stories about multimillion dollar losses, personal mistakes and-or being caught in disastrous situations beyond the executives' control."

And who, you might ask, should know more about money and making it grow than bankers? At best, however, you might say their investment record is spotty. As spotty as some of the big-name, independent investment advisers.

The Hulbert Financial Digest measures the performance of many of these advisers, and does so by more than one calculation. Recently it measured some of the biggest names in the business on their volatility versus return.

Things Likely To Be Unsaid

Here are some of the things I doubt you'll hear said in 1984.

From John McEnroe: "Sir, my ball was out, and you called it in. Jimmy Connors deserves the point."

From Jesse Jackson: "I have no intention of making waves in the Democratic Party. The system as it now operates is fair to all the candidates."

President Ronald Reagan: "I received a touching letter from a little girl in Madison, Wisconsin, but I have no desire to read it to you."

Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger: "We overestimated our defense needs, and we're asking Congress to cut our budget in half."

An IRS agent (any IRS agent): "You're right and we're wrong."

Frank Sinatra: "Look at all the photographers. Let's go over and have our picture taken."

John DeLorean: "I believe we have the finest Drug Enforcement Agency in the world."

Yuri Andropov: "I think I'll jog around the Kremlin for a few hours."

Henry Kissinger: "I have no comment."

Nancy Reagan: "What's that little kid doing in the White House?"

Secretary of State George Shultz: "See that the press gets a copy of everything we discussed here today."

Vice President George Bush: "I hope President Reagan isn't going to run, because I'd like to go for it myself."

Rev. Jerry Falwell: "If there is a God, and I'm not saying there is...."

Fritz Mondale: "If I am elected I will continue the policies and philosophy of President Jimmy Carter."

David Stockman: "Mr. President, I think there should be a little more fat in our social programs."

The editor of Pravda: "When we're wrong we're wrong, and we should admit it. The Soviets overreacted when the United States placed Pershing 2 missiles in Europe. They're not the threat to the Warsaw Pact nations that we thought they would be, and we would like to return to Geneva as quickly as possible."

James Watt: "If I had it to do all over again, I would have kept my mouth shut and taken time to smell the flowers."

Anne Gorsuch Burford: "We all make mistakes, but the EPA was my department and I take full blame for the chaos."

Johnny Carson: "I believe a wife deserves every penny she can get when she feels she's been wronged."

A power company executive: "We have just discovered that our new nuclear plant was built with cheap materials and shoddy labor. This is no fault of our customers and therefore we intend to pay for our mistakes without passing on any cost to the consumer."

The Japanese Minister of Commerce: "Japan can no longer export more than it imports without upsetting other nations' balance of trade. We are therefore lifting all restrictions on foreign goods, so other countries may compete fairly in the marketplace."

President Marcos: "It's time we had open elections supervised by an international commission selected by the United Nations."

Madame Marcos: "I couldn't agree with you more."

A Big Ten football coach: "I don't care if he's All-American material. If the kid can't keep his grades up I don't want him on my team."

Fidel Castro: "I've been shaving with this Remington electric for months. I liked it so much I bought the company."

Howard Cosell: "I'd rather not give my opinion on that because I don't know anything about it."

Prince Andrew: "I sorry, dear. I'm third in line for the throne, and it would not be right for me to get into a hot tub with you."

Ayatollah Khomeini: "In the name of Allah, and I'm not saying there is one..."

Release Of Goodman Regarded A 'Peace-Offering'

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials say Syria's decision to release captured Navy flier Robert O. Goodman Jr. may represent a peace offering from Damascus aimed at avoiding future armed clashes such as those last month in Lebanon that raised the specter of open warfare.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Tuesday the release "can only be helpful to the course of relations between our two countries."

Administration officials tried not to appear embarrassed that the release was arranged by a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, Jesse Jackson, who the State Department had sought to discourage from going to Syria to seek Goodman's release.

Shultz expressed appreciation for Jackson's efforts in a statement issued through his press spokesman, John Hughes, who said he saw no contradiction "between the happy outcome and the concerns" voiced earlier. Shultz and Hughec said Ambassador Robert Paganelli also played a key role in Goodman's release.

But while U.S. officials and Mideast experts seemed to agree that Syria's decision to release Goodman may be a signal Damascus wants better relations with Washington, they said a significant improvement is unlikely as long as Syria tries to keep much of Lebanon under its thumb.

While never warm, relations between the Reagan administration and the Syrian government of President Hafez el-Assad deteriorated sharply last year, culminating in U.S. air strikes against Syrian positions in Lebanon on Dec. 4 after Syrian anti-aircraft batteries fired on U.S. reconnaissance planes.

Lt. Goodman was a crew member in one of two American aircraft shot down during the attacks. At the time there was widespread speculation that the fighting could escalate.

Behind the tension is disagreement over Syria's role in Lebanon. Washington was angered by Syria's refusal to withdraw its troops after the Israelis agreed to pull out. Shultz accused Damascus of reneging on an earlier promise.

For its part, Syria is demanding an end to U.S. reconnaissance flights over its positions. It also insists on the withdrawal of the U.S. Marines, who are members of the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has accused Syria of being partly responsible for the terrorist bombing against U.S. Marine headquarters in Beirut on Oct. 23 in which 241 Americans were killed. However, Syria has denied responsibility and U.S. officials concede they lack the "smoking gun" that could prove Syrian complicity.

The administration has also been concerned over Soviet shipments of advanced missiles and other weapons to Syria, as well as the presence of an estimated 7,000 Soviet military advisers in Syria.

President Reagan's special Mideast envoy, Donald Rumsfeld, will return to the region soon and is expected to visit Damascus. Officials said he will make a new sounding of Syrian attitudes and policies to determine whether the two countries can resolve their differences over Lebanon.

Hughes said that for the time being American reconnaissance flights would continue over Syrian positions in Lebanon to help provide security for American Marines. He said Jackson did not make any deals for Goodman's release.

Jackson "offered nothing and was not in a position to offer anything" in exchange for Goodman, Hughes said.

Turning Goodman over to Jackson may have been calculated to embarrass the Reagan administration as the Syrians probably didn't want to turn him over to representatives of the administration that ordered the air strikes.

But one U.S. official said both Damascus and Washington have been seeking to avoid circumstances that could worsen relations and lead to more military clashes. While American reconnaissance flights have continued, there has been an effort to undertake them with a minimum of provocation, he said.

And while the Syrians have continued to oppose the flights, they have not engaged in the kind of all-out attacks that prompted the U.S. retaliatory strikes on Dec. 4, he suggested.

William Quandt, a Mideast expert in the Carter administration who is now at the Brookings Institution, said the Syrians may have concluded they have gained all they can by being tough in Lebanon and, faced with a U.S. willingness to also resort to force, are now willing to see what can be gained by a more conciliatory stance.

One State Department official said the release of Goodman will "improve the atmosphere" between Syria and Washington, if nothing else.

While agreeing with that assessment, Quandt said it doesn't necessarily foreshadow a major change in Syrian policy that could lead to a pull-out of its troops. "We are dealing with a regime with a strong sense of its own interests in Lebanon. That is not going to change just because the atmospherics change a little bit."

Supporting 'Merit Pay'

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Jim Martin, R-N.C., said Tuesday he is the only gubernatorial candidate publicly supporting merit pay for teachers and challenged his opponents to take clear stands on the issue.

"You've got to be able to face it and debate it openly," Martin said, adding that the other Republican and six Democrats vying for governor are worried about losing a shot at the endorsement of the North Carolina Association of Educators.

"The NCAE has taken a position opposed to merit pay called by any name, and opposed to any candidate who favors merit pay," Martin told a group of about 30 Henderson County Republicans at a noon luncheon.

Martin said he is not afraid to voice his opinion to NCAE leaders because he contends rewarding classroom teachers for above-average performance will improve the quality of education.

Martin refused to say exactly where the money to pay for teacher salary increases would come from, although he did not rule out the possibility of a tax increase.

Martin also pledged to repeal the intangibles tax and the inventory tax, saying those "self-inflicted wounds" are hurting North Carolina's ability to recruit and keep industry.

Stop Clock

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Self-styled "commandos" broke into a British-donated clocktower and stopped the clock to protest British control of the Falkland Islands.

The incident Tuesday coincided with the 151st anniversary of British colonial administration of the Falklands, 250 miles off the Argentine coast. Argentina marked the occasion by reiterating its appeal to Britain for renewed negotiations on sovereignty over the disputed archipelago.

Report White House Still Undecided On New Taxes

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, finishing work on another red ink budget he will send to Capitol Hill this month, is still undecided on whether to embrace new taxes to trim deficits, according to Republican legislators who have talked with the president and his budget director.

While the decision on taxes is pending, the legislators say it is clear the Pentagon's original request for a 22 percent hike in military spending will be trimmed.

The issue of taxes is the last major issue to be resolved before the president sends his new budget to Congress, probably on Jan. 30.

Administration officials and congressional sources say decisions made to date on the budget plan for the 1985 fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 would mean spending roughly in the range of $920 billion to $930 billion. The deficit is projected at about $185 billion.

The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that government spending in the current fiscal year will be about $859 billion with a deficit of about $180 billion.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois joined other GOP House members in meeting Tuesday with budget director David A. Stockman on Capitol Hill.

Michel said he expects no surprises or quick deficit cures.

"They're (the administration) just going to pretty much face the facts. I don't think it'll (the budget) be all phonied up and ballooned up," Michel said.

At the White House, meanwhile, Reagan met with Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn.; Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee; and Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

The president's senior economic advisers are worried by the persistent big deficits, but they are split on what measures to use to combat them.

One camp favors quick action, such as immediate tax increases, to shrink deficits.

However, others argue that while taxes must eventually go up, they want to delay action on taxes in hopes of forcing Congress to enact more spending cuts.

Republican senators who talked with Reagan on Tuesday and GOP House members who met with Stockman said it is unclear whether the president will again propose the "contingency tax" he recommended last year. That would have raised about $145 billion over three years, beginning in 1986.

Michel said he expects that the contingency tax idea for an income tax surcharge and an oil excise tax would be recommended again in the new budget.

Dole, who has been pressing for a three-year $150 billion package of tax increases and spending cuts, said after the meeting with Reagan "no decisions have been made ... I think the president has the reluctance we all have that no taxes (should be raised) without substantial spending reduction."

Domenici said, "There're going to have to be some taxes in future years. The question is when do you do those, and that discussion (with the president) did not proceed beyond us agreeing to get together another time with some specific ideas."

Republican congressional sources, who asked not to be identified, said that if a compromise cannot be worked out on a large deficit-reduction package, Senate GOP leaders then may seek a modest package, equally divided between increased revenues through closing tax loopholes and some spending cuts.

Meanwhile, the senators who met with Reagan expressed hope that a compromise figure for defense spending could be agreed on.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger set off a flurry of protests from legislators when he made known late last year that he was seeking nearly $322 billion in defense spending for the 1985 fiscal year — a 22 percent increase over current spending.

Domenici said he told Reagan "that there is a major issue surrounding the defense budget and hopefully we can arrive at some compromise that would be satisfactory to the president. It certainly can't be as high a number as we've heard the secretary of defense talk about.

"Clearly they understand that, at least from my standpoint that I don't think that I can get support on the Budget Committee for that high a defense number," Domenici said.

Baker said, "I don't want to give you exact numbers, but I want to say that I think finally we'll work out a defense number that nobody'll be real happy with, but nobody'll be terribly upset with."

Weinberger reportedly has agreed to trim his request to about $300 billion.

Members of Congress, though, are seeking less than that. Last year, Congress enacted $262.4 billion in defense spending, about $12 billion less that the administration had requested.

COULD ANYBODY LOVE US? — This is a question these two weather-scarred dolls might ask if they could speak. Shorn of hair and stripped of clothing, the two have been discarded as unlovables in a metal garbage can. Perhaps they would be content simply to be removed out of the cold wind and rain to the warmth of an attic. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Opposing Effort To Block Bridge

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An attorney says he'll file a motion for a group of Carteret County residents opposed to a suit by the Morehead City Council that seeks to block construction of a high-rise bridge from Morehead City to Bogue Banks.

Some 30 Morehead City and Atlantic Beach residents have joined the North Carolina Department of Transportation in fighting the suit. Clinton attorney F.E. Wallace Jr. said Tuesday he would file the motion Wednesday to intervene in the suit in Carteret Superior Court on behalf of the residents.

Wallace said he represented residents who thought the Morehead City Council did not act in the best interest of the town when it sued the DOT in November to halt construction of the bridge.

"We just want to point out that the council does not speak for these people," Wallace said in a telephone interview. "They haven't had a voice, and this (the motion) is our voice."

Morehead City officials oppose the planned $12.5 million high-rise, four-lane bridge which is aimed at relieving traffic congestion that occurs when the existing drawbridge is opened for boats. However, the council backs a plan calling for a $24 million bridge to Bogue Banks west of the existing bridge.

Town officials say the DOT-backed alternative would burden the town with local road improvements, lost business and extra police to monitor traffic tie-ups. The town's suit asks that the state be prohibited from building the bridge or improving three nearby streets in preparation for the bridge.

Morehead City Mayor Bud Dixon said Tuesday he was not aware of the motion to be filed, but added that he was not suprised.

"A lot of the business people on the causeway support the transportation department's decision, but we (the council) just don't think it's in the best interest of the entire community," Dixon said.

Moose Gets A Reprieve Given Nights In Garage

WALHALLA, N.D. (AP) — A hunter who believes in shooting moose to "keep them under control" has befriended one and asked fellow hunters to spare her if they spot her in the woods wearing the red ribbon he tied around her neck.

"She's legal game, that's what they tell the hunters, but she is a tame moose," Carl Kartes said. "If anyone shoots her, I'd say they're not much of a hunter.

Kartes, 52, and "Sandy" got together in June 1980 when the game warden wasn't available and the county sheriff didn't know what to do with an ailing calf that apparently had been rejected by her mother. The hunter volunteered to do the parenting.

Kartes said he bottle-fed the calf every two hours for the first few days, using a mixture of condensed milk, syrup and water.

After 10 days, he released the recovering calf in a nearby wooded area. With help from the family's dog, he tracked her down for daily feedings.

The moose and the family dog "got to be just like twins," Kartes said. "If you couldn't find the moose you followed the dog."

Sandy has since lived in the woods and has delivered two calves, Kartes said. But his farm remains her home away from home on cold winter nights where she sleeps in the garage or quonset, he said.

The moose was a regular visitor during the bitter cold weather last month, he said Tuesday night. She left Friday when the temperatures warmed up but, "She knows where the gravy is. ... When it get's cold she'll be back. You can just about bet on it."

In the summer months, she prefers the hills, he said.

Sandy, who weighs 1,000 pounds, stands 8 feet from hoof to head and also likes to be petted, the hunter said.

"As far as myself, I'm not afraid" of an attack, he told a recent visitor. "But with someone else, she might run them off. If she starts to lay her ears back, step behind me."

Ivy Kartes said her husband is the only person Sandy will listen to. "She won't listen to me. Why, she even kicked me once."

Moose hunting became legal in North Dakota in 1977, and this season 30 licenses were awarded in a lottery. Kartes was among the hundreds who applied.

The season begins about the first week in December and lasts 10 days, Kartes said.

'I believe in shooting them," he said. "You have to keep them under control."

But not Sandy. This year, he tied a red ribbon around her neck and asked hunters at a pre-season meeting to spare her.

"A lot of people say, 'Oh, you should lock her up during hunting season,' but I didn't raise her for that. I raised her to go back in the wilds."

A hunter once tracked Sandy but recognized she was the tame moose as he got closer. Instead of shooting the animal, he petted her, Kartes said.

Kartes has never touched Sandy's two calves because he wants them to remain wild. "Listen, because it happened this way doesn't mean it's the right way to do it. You just don't go picking up wild animals," he said.

Burglar Fell Into Capture

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — A Hickory burglary suspect fell literally onto the open arms of the law when a crawl space gave way in a Hardee's hamburger restaurant, police said.

Officer P.K. Woods was called to the scene after employees heard noises above them, said Randy Ross, manager of the restaurant. Shortly after that, Tony Ray Berry, 20, of Hickory, appeared.

"He (Berry) just crashed to the floor with a big piece of the ceiling," said Ross. "The police officer got there just as he fell."

Woods said she was struck by Berry as he fell to the floor in a rear storeroom.

Ross said Berry seemed stunned after he hit. "He wouldn't open his eyes or nothing," Ross said.

Restaurant employees said the burglary suspect apparently entered the ceiling crawl space through the men's restroom.

He was treated for a cut finger at Hickory's Glenn R. Frye Memorial Hospital.

Berry was charged with preparation to commit burglary and jailed under $5,000 bond.

Ross said it will cost about $300 to fix the ceiling.

Fire Cut Off Rail Service

CHICAGO (AP) — Rail service to the city center remained shut down today after a fire which swept through two factory buildings snarled rush-hour bus and rapid-transit traffic when walls collapsed.

Flames leaped 100 feet above the building just west of the Loop before its walls collapsed Tuesday, showering debris onto the nearby Lake-Dan Ryan rapid transit tracks.

The debris forced a cutoff of rail service to the city center from the West Side, said Chicago Transit Authority spokesman Don Yabush.

CUT CRIME RATE

PEKING (AP) — The government says it cut the national crime rate in late 1983 by almost 40 percent through emergency measures enacted to curb an upsurge of lawlessness.

Reagan May Give Time To Problem

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, after receiving a report on crime in public schools, is signaling he may use his influence to draw public attention to the problem.

At a meeting of the Cabinet Council on Human Resources, the president was described as receptive to the idea of devoting at least part of a major speech to the topics of disorder in public schools, according to an administration official, who did not wish to be identified.

After studying the matter, the council concluded that presidential leadership was necessary to help the nation's public school teachers and principals restore their authority in the classroom and achieve educational excellence.

The council gave the president a report entitled, "Chaos in the Classroom: Enemy of American Education," which urged Reagan to publicize the issue.

Gary L. Bauer, deputy undersecretary of education, who headed the task force that developed the report, said after the White House meeting that Reagan was "extremely enthusiastic," but had not yet made any decisions on carrying out the recommendations.

The report, the result of a four-month study by the departments of Education and Justice and the Office of Management and Budget, concludes that action to counteract school violence is unlikely unless the American people demand it.

And, citing the statistic that 60 percent of teachers who were victims of an attack felt principals failed to take appropriate action, the report also said there was overwhelming evidence that the problem was mostly being ignored.

It also said the Education Department may conduct research into prevention of school violence as well as evaluate anti-crime activities under way and collect and disseminate examples of effective school discipline.

The department may hold regional hearings on school discipline to seek solutions and highlight local efforts, it said.

In addition, the Justice Department is prepared to file friend of the court briefs in cases on the side of increased authority of teachers, principals and school administrators to deal with school discipline problems.

The report said the Justice Department will establish a national school safety center to collect and disseminate data on school safety problems. It will include a computerized national clearinghouse to advise parents and school officials of their legal rights in dealing with disruptive students.

The report cited statistics compiled in a 1978 study by the National Institute of Education showing that each month 1,000 teachers were assaulted seriously enough to require medical attention. That study also said that 282,000 students were physically attacked each month in secondary schools and that 2.4 million students had personal property stolen each month.

It also said a 1983 Massachusetts report concluded that the problem had worsened recently.

The president already has spoken out against crime in schools. In a speech Dec. 8 to a group of educators, Reagan said he had asked the Justice and Education departments to find ways to help schools enforce discipline.

"American schools don't need vast new sums of money as much as they need a few fundamental reforms," Reagan said at the time. "First, we need to restore good old-fashioned discipline. In too many schools across the land, teachers can't teach because they lack the authority to make students take tests and hand in homework. Some don't even have the authority to quiet down their class."

Lauch Faircloth First To Enter Gubernatorial Race

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's 1984 political season is off and running as Democrat D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth became the first candidate to officially enter the gubernatorial race.

Faircloth paid his $850 filing fee Tuesday, and minutes later Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, paid a $503 fee to file as the first candidate for lieutenant governor.

Neither of the Senate contenders — Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. or Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. — filed on Tuesday.

North Carolina Board of Elections headquarters was bustling as candidates for offices ranging from District Court judge to governor stopped to pay the filing fee.

The filing period officially opened at noon Monday and runs until noon Feb. 6. Because of the state holiday, candidates did not have a chance to pay the fee by mail or in person until Tuesday.

"My theory is that he that starts first finishes first," said Faircloth, who abrived with several campaign staffers to pay the filing fee and talk with reporters.

"Today marks the start of the real campaign for governor," he said. "It sets the stage for the months to come."

Faircloth said he spent the past six months building a campaign organization, and that the more visible media campaign will begin in the next week or so and accelerate as the May 8 primary approaches.

Voters across the state in 1984 will help elect a president and vice president, governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, treasurer, auditor, school superintendent, attorney general, agriculture commissioner, labor commissioner and insurance commissioner to serve for four years.

They also will elect 50 state senators, 120 state representatives and 11 congressmen to serve for two years.

Two state Supreme Court associate justices and six Court of Appeals judges will be elected to eight-year terms. Voters will elect 10 Superior Court judges to serve for eight years and 90 District Court judges to serve for four years.

Republican Walter Cockerham filed for the 6th Congressional District seat now held by Democrat Robin Britt and Democrat Susan Green filed for the 9th District seat being vacated by Republican Jim Martin, who plans to run for governor.

Associate Supreme Court justices Burley Mitchell and Henry Frye filed for re-election Tuesday. Appeals Court judges R.A. Hedrick, Earl W. Vaughn and Gerald Arnold also filed for re-election.

Filing for re-election were Secretary of State Thad Eure, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham and Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips.

Faircloth has received attention recently for seeking a court clarification of campaign spending limits. The case resulted in an injunction that bars the state from enforcing the limits and a hearing later this week on the constitutionality of the limits.

Faircloth said Tuesday he anticipates spending about $800,000 for the primary. He has held no fundraisers yet and said that's because contributions have been coming in quickly. Faircloth said the campaign has raised about $500,000, of which he has contributed $200,000.

"I promise to spend less of my own money than some candidates in office are spending of the taxpayers' money," he said. "If a candidate has the courage of his conviction ... he should be willing to back up that conviction by putting his own resources in the campaign and I've done that."

Faircloth said the filing signals the real start of the campaign. He said his advertising will deal with economic development, teachers' salaries, opposition to increased taxes and reductions in government bureaucracy.

Jordan's filing attracted top campaign aides, family and supporters carrying red, white and blue signs. He said he filed on the first day, "so everyone would know we are committed to this race and to winning in May and November."

He said he'll concentrate on economic development and education in the upcoming campaign. Jordan said he'll support establishment of a venture capital corporation to link entrepreneurs and investors to help get new businesses off the ground.

Jordan said he's raised about $250,000 so far and his family has contributed "a small percentage of the whole." He said he originally anticipated spending about $800,000 but fundraising will be difficult because the race may be overshadowed by the U.S. Senate contest.

The media campaign will come late in the primary campaign, he said.

"The best dollars you spend are the last dollars you spend," Jordan said, adding that there is evidence that 60 percent of the voters don't make up their minds who to support until the last weeks before the primary.

Starling War Is Launched Early

FAIRFIELD, Calif. (AP) — For the second time in three years, neighbors of the Suisun-Fairfield Cemetery have started battling starlings with shotguns and model airplanes.

This time they hope they are starting early enough to discourage the birds from spending the winter in the eucalyptus trees around the cemetery.

The battle began Tuesday against an estimated 10,000 starlings that began arriving about a week ago.

Hal Biestek, who lives nearby, and a handful of helpers fired 12-gauge shotguns loaded with "shell crackers" — tiny bombs that explode high in the sky.

The Vaca Valley Model Airplane Club sent gasoline-powered, radio controlled aircraft flying over the cemetery.

Biestek said the war would probably persist for the rest of the week.

In late 1981, 200,000 birds settled into the trees and had to be harassed for days with all sorts of noisemakers before they decided to winter elsewhere.

TO VISIT CAIRO

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Prince Talal Ibn Abdel-Aiz, a half-brother of Saudi Arabia's King Fahd, will arrive in Cairo next weekend for the first visit by a senior member of the Saudi family since a 1977 break with Egypt over its peace with Israel.

Senate Bid For Ex-Astronaut

DETROIT (AP) — One-time astronaut Jack Lousma, his eye on the U.S. Senate, says his ideological ties to President Reagan will be an asset in a campaign against Democratic incumbent Sen. Carl Levin of Michigan.

Lousma, 47, who is expected to formally announce his candidacy Jan. 23, said Tuesday: "A Republican is certainly going to have more access to the White House than a Democrat, especially one as liberal as Carl Levin."

Lousma criticized Levin for not representing the people of Michigan and for poor leadership.

He said his military background clearly signals that he is defense oriented. Lousma, a retired Marine colonel, recently returned to his native Michigan after a 17-year career with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

HIDDEN MONEY

PEKING (AP) — Thousands of government accountants who fanned out across the country two months ago have seized $300 million in hidden tax money and industrial profits, the China Daily reports.

Pentagon Learns To Live With The Bell Breakup

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the past two years, communication specialists have mounted an unprecedented planning effort designed to ensure that in war and in peace, the Pentagon will be able to compensate for the loss of "one-stop shopping" with the Bell System.

Government and industry are activating two "command posts," ready to respond to emergencies "without worrying about corporate boundaries," says Lt. Col. Jerome A. Landry of the Defense Communications Agency.

Throughout the long, contentious process that led to the breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph, the Department of Defense was the one government arm that never wavered in its support of a unified Bell System.

Now the brass hats are singing a different tune, born of necessity after the consent agreement that led to Sunday's breakup of AT&T.

Officials say the nation's communications system is just as secure today as it was last geek.

"I've never believed the whole world was going to end on Jan. 1 because of the breakup of American Telephone and Telegraph," says Landry. "It's been more difficult to get things done, but we've managed to get there."

The Defense Department spends more than $860 million a year on leased long-distance communication systems, plus another $500 million on leased facilities on military bases. "We lease about 95 percent of our long-haul system," says Landry, "and the majority of that is from the Bell System."

Concern that the system could be compromised by splitting up AT&T led the Defense Department to oppose Justice Department antitrust efforts. In the end, the Pentagon was unsuccessful; in 1982 AT&T agreed to spin off its 22 local Bell companies into seven regional firms.

And the planning process began, involving industry experts and national security professionals at the Defense Communications Agency (DCA); the Federal Communications Commission and the National Communications System.

Starting this month, a 24-hour-a-day National Coordinating Center will be activated by the National Communications System, an umbrella organization meshing the government's civilian and military emergency systems. The center will work with government officials and representatives of AT&T, Bell and independent phone companies, equipment makers and long-distance competitors.

The new Bell companies, meantime, working through a new corporate entity they own jointly called the Central Services Organization, have activated a special Watch Center to iron out coordination problems, essentially taking over AT&T's role.

Landry describes the two centers as command posts that will work around corporate boundaries whenever necessary.

In many instances, however, the National Coordinating Center won't need to become involved, asserts Marvin Konow, an assistant vice president of the Bell companies' Central Services Organization.

"The same Bell people who were doing the job yesterday (in the field) are doing it now," says Konow. "If this thing is going to work, it's going to work at the grassroots level and I'm positive that's going to happen."

"I think we'll have a better system than before the breakup," adds Mimi Weyforth Dawson, a member of the FCC. The breakup has forced the government "to deal with an old system that had flaws," she explains.

Of course, the breakup raises delicate new issues.

The FCC, says Dawson, will face crucial questions as the Defense Department moves to "harden" or secure portions of the commercial phone network for use in the event of a nuclear attack.

The National Coordinating Center will work with many more firms than just AT&T and the Bell companies. William G. McGowan, chairman of MCI Communications, says the Defense Department appears to have finally realized that companies like his can actually enhance national security by offering "redundancy" — long-distance networks that are separate from AT&T's.

"Before, they had an easy solution with AT&T and they relied on that," says McGowan. "They have options now they never had before."

Perhaps the biggest adjustment for the Pentagon has involved day-to-day business.

DCA officials say they've encountered "increased cost, slower response time and more complex and time-consuming contracting processes" over the past year. The acquisition of equipment must be coordinated with the hookup of phone connections through a local telephone company, along with long-distance circuits from AT&T or one of its competitors.

The Pentagon has responded by urging large firms to bid on Defense projects as a "single-system manager," responsible for end-to-end service while sub-contracting the various pieces. Landry says that effort "is coming along well" and the Pentagon expects to be dealing with six or seven major firms in 1984.

J. Randolph MacPherson, the DCA's regulatory counsel, says the agency nonetheless has warned the various arms of the Defense Department to expect a 25 percent increase in their communications costs between Jan. 1, 1983, and Jan. 1, 1985, because of the breakup, accompanying regulatory changes and rate hikes approved at the state and federal levels.

He and other Defense executives also say, though, they believe the changes will prove beneficial in the long run.

"Their needs are so diverse and so large, they've got to be one of the biggest beneficiaries of competition," agrees McGowan.

Sentenced In Bank Thefts

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A South Carolina fugitive was sentenced to 20 years in prison after he pleaded guilty Tuesday in U.S. District Court to charges stemming from bank robberies in Asheville, Charlotte and Murphy, officials say.

Larry Dale Dayton, 37, pleaded guilty to the four charges of bank robbery with force of threat or intimidation, the first counts in four bills of indictment, according to Kenneth Bell of the U.S. Attorney's office.

Federal attorneys argued that Dayton be denied parole during his 20-year sentence, but Judge Woodrow W. Jones declined to make that recommendation. Jones said he would leave the question of Dayton's release to the parole board.

Dayton was charged with the Sept. 6 robbery of a Wachovia Bank branch in Asheville, the Oct. 20 robbery of a First Citizens Bank office in Asheville and the Nov. 1 robbery of a North Carolina National Bank branch in Charlotte.

Dayton was apprehended Nov. 18, following an unsuccessful bank robbery at the Northwestern Bank in Murphy. A dye bomb in the bag of money foiled the robbery when it exploded in the parking lot.

A state trooper who apprehended Dayton a few hours after the robbery said Dayton carried a toy pistol in his pocket.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today amid continuing uncertainty over the outlook for interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .75 to 1,251.99 in the first half hour.

Losers narrowly outnumbered gainers in the early count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Rising interest rates in the credit markets Tuesday got stock prices off to a sluggish start for 1984.

But many analysts remained hopeful that investing institutions would soon step up their buying of stocks as they pursue their strategies for the new year.

There were also some questions about oil-price prospects as the week began with a new military government taking power in Nigeria. However, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' news agency reported today that the new government had pledged to support OPEC's price structure.

Among actively traded blue chips, American Express rose ¼ to 31⅜; International Business Machines gained ¼ to 122; U.S. Steel was unchanged at 31, and DuPont lost ¼ to 51.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 5.90 to 1,252.74.

Declining issues held a narrow edge over advances on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 71.34 million shares, against 71.84 million Friday.

The NYSE's composite index lost .49 to 94.69. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .63 at 222.38.

Changing Mind Proves Costly

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A state court has ruled that a mother who changed her mind about giving up her baby must reimburse two would-be adoptive parents who provided $3,025 for hospital and medical bills.

The ruling on Tuesday reversed a lower court which had dismissed the request of John and Kathleen Gorden of Philadelphia to be paid back.

Farmville Commissioners Adopt A New Electric Rate Schedule

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville Commissioners Tuesday night adopted a new electric rate schedule that would raise the cost of electricity to Farmville Central High School about $30,000 a year.

Commissioner Mike Dixon expressed concern as to whether the school system was warned about the increase and was assured that their energy officer was advised several months ago. The school is being placed in a large general services category. Previously it has been in the public housing and churches category.

The board was told the school has had a lower rate for some time than the rest of the comparably sized schools in the county and the change makes the cost of services for all large general services users and the whole town more equitable. The cost to the general user will be increased 8 cents per 1000 kwh or about 1 percent per household. The energy charge for seasonal users (mostly bulk tobacco barn owners) was increased .00863 per kwh.

A public hearing was held on a zoning amendment which would permit motor vehicle body shops as a special exception to the zone, Highway Business District. The hearing was called because of the existence of an auto body repair shop opened by Pete Price in the Highway Business District on U.S. 264 southwest of Farmville. Rose Day Evans spoke in favor of allowing the special exception. Fred Trevathan said he thought if the exception were granted that a fence to hide unsightly cars should be required.

The board denied the special exception and asked the zoning board to look into the pertinent section of the zoning ordinance and make a recommendation.

A contract for providing water mains to State Road 1200 West was given to H&W Inc. of Seven Springs for $37,265 and a budget amendment to cover the cost of the project was adopted.

Consideration of an ordinance to establish a motor vehicle tax in place of a motor vehicle license fee was tabled until the planning sessions for budget for the next fiscal year begins.

Also tabled was consideration of whether Edwin Kids' Day Care Center may continue to use the Southside Recreation Center owned by the town.

The board accepted the rules and regulations for use of the new community center recommended by the Recreation Advisory Board. They said they were being accepted as information only, not put into ordinance form.

A report on the cost of demolition of the No. 1 Wastewater Treatment Plant was accepted. According to an estimate made by McDavid Associates Inc., town engineers, only making the site safe, the cost would be $59,206; rendering it suitable for building on would cost $126,260.

An ordinance was adopted reducing the speed limit in the 200 block of South Contentnea Street from 35 to 20 mph from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. on weekdays and establishing three loading and unloading spaces in front of the Creative Days Learning Center. This measure was recommended by Police Chief Ron Cooper after a study of traffic problems on this block.

The purchase of 25 mobile refuse containers was authorized. The cost will be $53 per unit or $1,325, plus tax.

The town administrator was authorized to enter into a customer support agreement with Governmental Programming Services for maintenance of computer software in the town office.

The following appointments by the mayor were approved: Frank Gill and Bet Pippin to the Library Board; David Moore to the Board of Adjustments; and Fred Graham, Alfred Williams, and Sara H. Albritton (reappointee) to the Community Development Citizens Advisory Committee.

A resolution of respect for Joe Kue, who served as a town commissioners from 1979 to 1983, was adopted.

The board heard that beginning this year the town's law enforcement officers retirement funds have been placed under a tax shelter. The effect is that their take-home pay will be increased 2 to 4 percent.

COmmissioner Oliver Murphrey reported on a meeting on municipal electricity load management held in Smithfield. He said he is encouraged to know that money has been being set aside here for some time to make it possible to handle a load management program when it is put into effect.

1 and Dec. 29. Smith also said more than $1 million was collected Dec. 30.

Gray, citing a report prepared by the county's data processing center, said that a total of $8.28 million in property taxes were owed the county as of Dec. 31. The total, for the 10-year period 1973 to 1983, includes $6.12 million in tax on real property and $2.15 million on personal property.

Gray noted that the totals include $5.5 million in tax on real property and $1.15 million in tax on personal property (a total of $6.65 million) from 1983. However, the county manager said much of the $6.65 million will be paid by Jan 6, the last day 1983 taxes may be paid without having to pay interest charges.

Dr. Steve Creech, director of the mental health center, showed the board plans for a proposed 10,000-square-foot building designed to house partial hospitialization, "Willie M." and other mental health programs.

Creech said estimates place the cost of the facility at $350,000, and suggested that about $118,000 of the cost might be provided by the state through "Willie M." funds. The designation applies to a special case of handicapped children.

The board instructed Creech to see if the state money can be secured and indicated that if the state grant is made, commissioners will attempt to fund the remainder of the costs.

Agricultural Extension Service Chairman Leroy James reported that 63,980 pounds of cheese and 11,148 pounds of butter were distributed in December under the surplus commodities program.

James reminded the board of the annual tobacco information meeting, scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Friday at the American Legion Building.

In other business Tuesday, the board adopted a resolution to tax shelter contributions made by county law enforcment employees to the state Law Enforcement Officers Retirement System, and decided to hold a workshop session to review a study of the county jail conducted by the National Sheriff's Association and a draft of a five-year plan to develop a nature center at River Park North.

At a noon meeting with the Pitt County ABC Board, commissioners were told that liquor sales in Pitt were $46,000 ahead of sales in 1982.

ABC Board Chairman Paul Davenport reported Pitt ranked 13th among counties in the state in total sales, 8th in net profit, 7th in interest earned on investments, and 5th in percentage of profit.

Davenport also told commissioners that bids for construction of the new Ayden ABC store will be taken Jan. 18, and said the new facility should be in operation by July 1.

ment is finished. Other work includes: painting, 37 percent; ceramic tile installation, 64 percent; and plumbing, 57 percent. Noland said new doors have not arrived.

Joe Laney, executive director, said the general contractor is also progressing with initial work on the new 40 units of conventional housing in West Meadowbrook. He said hopefully temperatures will be high enough for the contractor to begin pouring concrete footings for the units next week.

Laney said the Section 8 existing housing program is "staying about normal" with 96 of 100 units authorized under the existing housing segment leased and 107 or 109 allowed under the moderate rehabilitation phase under contract. All 60 apartments in the University Towers mid-rise for the elderly are rented.

He said the city has completed work on one of the 20 units allocated for Greenville under the rental rehabilitation demonstration program and progress is being made on seven additional structures.

Four temporary vacancies existed among the authority's 702 units at the end of December, according to Sallye Streeter, director of resident affairs. She said average rents included: N.C. 22-1 (Meadowbrook), $112.55; N.C. 22-2 (Kearney Park), $113.86; N.C. 22-3 (Moyewood), $109.05; N.C. 22-4 (Moyewood), $103.93; N.C. 22-5 (Hopkins Park), $86.26; and N.C. 22-6 (Newtown), $103.43. The overall average for the month amounted to $105.66, she said.

Greenville City Board of Education.

According to the proposal, a program advisory committee, PCC and the county and city boards of education will jointly develop a curriculum. PCC will administer the program and the fees will be regular PCC fees.

Instruction for the program will take place in the PCC Learning Center and in regular PCC classes.

In other business:

•Assistant Superintendent John McKnight reported that the recently released Pitt County scores on the North Carolina Competency Test were lower than the previous year. "They show a decline in the overall passing rate," said McKnight, who noted that the low scores of one school had dipped the county average.

McKnight did not identify the low-scoring school in his presentation to the board, but it was later learned he was referring to North Pitt High School. McKnight told board members his staff was investigating to find "an intelligent explanation" for the low scores. McKnight said he would have a complete report on the scores by the next regular board meeting.

•Superintendent Eddie West reported that Pitt County schools have received a special migrant education equipment grant that will be used for the purchase of two microcomputers, one video recorder and one sound projector.

Candidate In Coonskin Cap

NASHVILLE (AP) — Jack McNeil, clad in a fake coonskin cap and reading a rhyming press release, announced he is seeking the Republican nomination for the Senate seat being vacated by Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr.

"Campaigning for the Senate is a lot like treeing a coon," McNeil said Tuesday, pulling his cap out of a paper bag.

Obituaries

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Dr. Fred Toney Jr. Memorial Award Fund for the Mathematical Sciences Department at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington or to the Lower Cape Fear Hospital.

Young Romeo At The Wheel

WALBRIDGE, Ohio (AP) — A 12-year-old boy behind the wheel of a car stopped by a state trooper explained he was on his way to visit a girlfriend in Toledo, the Highway Patrol says.

Lt. N.D. Bush halted the car Monday just southeast of Toledo, thinking the driver was drunk.

Inside he found the boy from Ypsilanti, Mich., who said he'd borrowed the family car without permission. Bush said he contacted the child's parents and asked them to come drive him home.

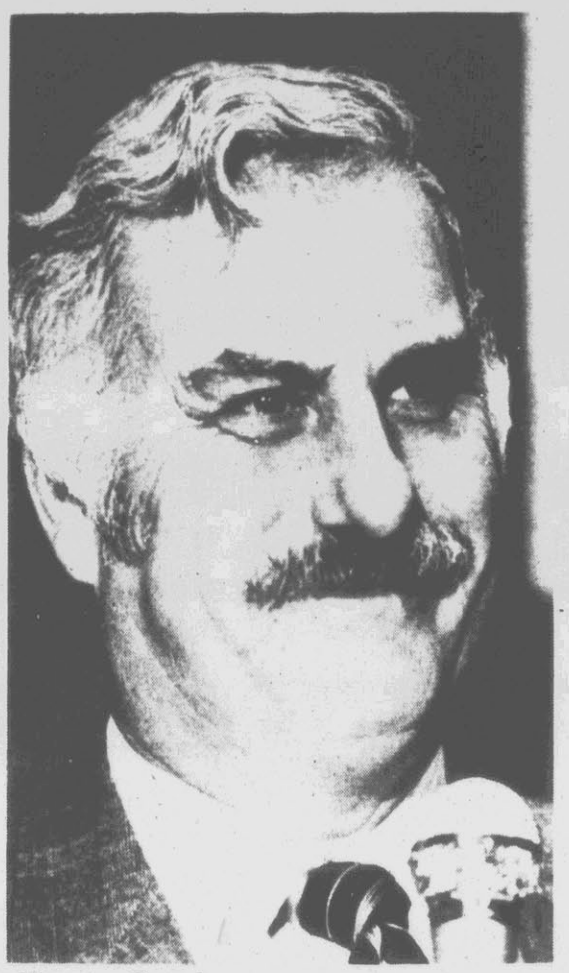
Miami Is #1, Pirates Finish 20th



Happy Coach

University of Miami coach Howard Schnellenberger beams as he holds a press conference early Tuesday morning following his late night win in the Orange Bowl over then number one ranked Nebraska. It began inauspiciously for the University of Miami Hurricanes with seven turnovers in a 28-3 loss to Florida, the worst setback ever suffered by a team destined to become college football's national champions.

It didn't get much better the following week until Jeff Davis kicked his third field goal late in the first half to give Miami a 9-7 over Houston in a game the Hurricanes went on to win 29-7.

But it was all downhill after that and it culminated Tuesday when Miami was named national champion for 1983 by the Associated Press in the wake of a stunning 31-30 upset of No. 1-ranked Nebraska in Monday night's Orange Bowl. It more than made up for the state championship the Hurricanes didn't win.

Meanwhile, East Carolina's Pirates, who were denied a bowl invitation and sat home during the holidays, finished the season in 20th place. It marked the first time in the history of the school that it had closed out the year with national ranking.

"After we got by the loss to Florida and the first half against Houston, we had pretty smooth sailing (until late in the season)," Coach Howard Schnellenberger said Tuesday at a morning-after news conference.

"We were never ahead against Florida and we lost badly. But almost to a man, our football team graded out as winners. We did have a better team than we thought we had coming out of that loss.

"Then we went to Houston, kicked off and they drove 80 yards for a touchdown. But when Davis put us ahead 9-7 for the first time this season, standing on the sidelines with the kids you could sense and feel the relief and all those things you feel when you go ahead for the first time."

By virtue of its thriller over Nebraska that ended the nation's longest winning streak at 22 games, Miami became the second team ever to vault from fifth place to the national championship as a result of a bowl triumph. The Hurricanes also became the first team to capture the newly named Paul "Bear" Bryant Trophy, formerly known as the AP Trophy but renamed following Bryant's death last January.

The Orange Bowl completed a storybook rise for Miami, which had only two winning records in 11 years before Schnellenberger took over in 1979.

Schnellenberger, who played two years for Bryant at Kentucky and was an assistant coach under him for five years at Alabama, during which the Crimson Tide won three national titles, said he was "delighted" about winning the Bryant Trophy, which will be formally presented at a later date.

"I can't think of a more fitting name for the national championship trophy and I'm simply delighted to be a part of the first one," he said. "It feels great. It feels official now."

With 59 of 60 voters responding, Miami received 47½ first-place ballots and 1,168½ of a possible 1,180 points. The Hurricanes were first or second on every ballot.

Nebraska, which was bidding to become the first team to be ranked No. 1 every week from the preseason poll through the postbowl poll, slipped to a second-place finish. The Cornhuskers received 4½ first-place votes and 1,109½ oints.

The other seven first-place votes went to Auburn, which remained No. 3 with 1,079 points following a 9-7 come-from-behind Sugar Bowl victory over Michigan.

Nebraska wound up with a 12-1 record — the Cornhuskers opened the season with a 44-6 rout of defending national champion Penn State in the inaugural Kickoff Classic — while Miami, Auburn, No. 5 Texas and No. 7 Brigham Young all were 11-1.

Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne called the final rankings "fair enough," and added, "I'd like to congratulate Miami for a great game and for winning the national championship. I'm also very proud of our team and the great year the players had."

Asked if he regretted ordering a two-point conversion with 48 seconds remaining when a simple game-tying point-after probably would have given the Cornhuskers the national championship, Osborne said, "I couldn't face my players if we hadn't tried to win the ballgame."

Auburn's Pat Dye said the voting "really doesn't come as a big surprise. Naturally, I'm disappointed. I'm happy for Howard and Miami. Basically, we're good friends."

He and Schnellenberger were on the Alabama staff together in 1965, lived across the street from each other and drove to work together.

"He helped me push my car when it wouldn't start," Dye said.

Georgia jumped from seventh place to fourth with 977 points by edging Texas 10-9 in the Cotton Bowl. The setback ended the Longhorns' hopes for a perfect season and dropped them from second to fifth with 954 points.

Florida, which defeated Iowa 14-6 in the Gator Bowl, shot from 11th to sixth with 823 points for the first Top Ten finish in the school's history.

BYU climbed from ninth to seventh with 804 points following a 21-17 triumph over Missouri in the Holiday Bowl.

Despite its Sugar Bowl loss to Auburn, Michigan remained No. 8 with 649 points, followed by Big Ten colleagues Ohio State and Illinois. Ohio State moved up from 14th to ninth with 640 points by downing Pitt 28-23 in the Fiesta Bowl, while Illinois skidded from fourth to 10th with 594 points after suffering a 45-9 licking at the hands of UCLA in the Rose Bowl

The Second Ten is composed of Clemson, SMU, Air Force, Iowa, Alabama, West Virginia, UCLA, Pitt, Boston College and East Carolina.

Penn State failed to make the Top Twenty for 1983 after beating Washington 13-10 in the Aloha Bowl to finish 8-4-1.

The final regular-season Top Ten consisted of Nebraska, Texas, Auburn, Illinois, Miami, Southern Methodist, Georgia, Michigan, BYU and Iowa.

In the last regular-season poll, it was Florida, Clemson, Boston College, Ohio State, Pitt, Air Force and Maryland tied for 16th, West Virginia and East Carolina, with Baylor and Oklahoma tied for 20th.

Maryland fell out of the rankings after a 30-23 loss to Tennessee in the Florida Citrus Bowl, while Baylor lost 24-14 to Oklahoma State in the Bluebonnet Bowl and Oklahoma did not participate in a bowl game.

Alabama and UCLA moved into the final Top Twenty. Alabama, which had dropped out by losing its final two regular-season games, trounced SMU 28-7 in the Sun Bowl, while UCLA, which did not appear in the rankings at all after being No. 20 in the preseason poll, got back in by crushing Illinois in the Rose Bowl.

ECU, Miami Extend Series

East Carolina University and the University of Miami, national champions and Orange Bowl champs for 1984, have announced a four-year contract, extending the existing pact between the two southern independent schools.

The Pirates, who finished 20th on this year's Associated Press final poll, were already under contract to host Miami on September 14, 1985, in Ficklen Stadium. The new contract calls for two more games in Greenville and two more in Miami.

Specific dates show the Pirates in Miami October 4, 1986, Miami in Greenville on October 31, 1987 and November 12, 1988, and the Pirates returning to Miami on November 4, 1989.

"We are extremely pleased to announce this new four-year contract with the University of Miami," East Carolina Director of Athletics Dr. Ken Karr said. "The Hurricanes provided East Carolina with the best competition available, considering they had just won the national championship of college football.

"Miami and East Carolina have similar goals as independents and we feel this is another very positive step in the right direction for our Pirate football program."

East Carolina came within a pass and five points of defeating the Hurricanes in Miami this football season, falling 12-7. A long pass was caught but knocked loose on the final play in the end zone that would have spelled victory for ECU.

While East Carolina just finished a highly successful 8-3 year, 13-points from being unbeaten, Miami finished 11-1.

Easley Says It's Destiny

SEATTLE (AP) — Maybe, two-time Pro Bowl selection Kenny Easley of the surprising Seattle Seahawks says, this was just something that was supposed to happen.

"You can call us a team of destiny if you want," the talented All-Pro strong safety and former UCLA All-America said. "Right now, it seems like a destiny the way we're playing."

The Seahawks, a team which was referred derisively to by some as the Hee-Hawks just two years ago when they had a stretch of 15 losses in 16 games, are one of four survivors in the Super Bowl derby.

Coming off an shocking New Year's Eve upset over the Miami Dolphins in the Orange Bowl, Seattle will face the powerful Los Angeles Raiders in the American Football Conference title game on Sunday.

The Raiders are favored to win by a touchdown.

"You tell me," Easley said. "This is the first time this franchise has ever won four games in a row. We had to do that to get to this point in the season. That seems like destiny to me.

"If we continue to play like the way we've played the past three weeks ..."

The words trailed off. The implication was clear. The Seahawks, playing in their first playoff ever, are in a position to win Super Bowl XVIII.

The hard-hitting Easley is the heart and soul of a Seahawks' defense that has played key roles in the Seahawks' last four victories; 17-12 over the New York Giants in New Jersey, 24-6 over New England here, 31-7 over Denver in a playoff game here and finally the Miami shocker.

In Seattle's two playoff victories, he has 17 tackles, second highest on the club, and a sack. Despite being hampered by an ailing toe during the regular season, he was voted into the Pro Bowl for the second straight season, this time as an AFC starter.

Earlier in the season, Easley's sore toe kept him from practicing during the week.

Not by coincidence, the Seahawks' defense is playing inspired football since he has been able to practice during the week.

"My play," he said, "has improved quite a bit during the past month because I've been able to practice."

Easley, fourth player picked in the 1981 draft by the Seahawks, plays the kind of intimidating defense for which the Raiders are known.

"I don't think the Raiders will intimidate us," he said. "If the Raiders can win on intimidation, the more power to them. But I don't think that will have an effect on our team."

Interestingly, the Seahawks beat the Raiders twice during the regular season. The Raiders were the AFC West champions while the Seahawks are in the playoffs as an AFC West wild card.

"Whatever happened in the past is in the past," Easley said. "What happens Sunday is what concerns us now.

Lady Pirates Host Notre Dame

East Carolina's Lady Pirates play host to the University of Notre Dame Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Minges Coliseum.

The Lady Pirates will be out to snap a two-game losing streak in the contest, having bowed to N.C. State and North Carolina in the City of Dogwood Classic the last two days of 1983.

East Carolina brings in a 5-5 overall record, but is 4-1 in the relatively safe confines of Minges. Prior to the Classic, played in Fayetteville, the Lady Pirates had won three in a row, all in Minges.

The Lady Irish, however, would appear to be somewhat of a mystery team. Their record, starters and averages were all unavailable at the Notre Dame Sports Information Office this morning.

"We know that they're a good team," ECU Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "They're basically the same team that beat us last year (52-50 in South Bend). They're aggressive on defense and play a motion offense. They're patient and deliberate. They're experienced and they've played some tough teams. For example, they beat UCLA. We'll have to play heads up to beat them."

Andruzzi said from viewing films she didn't think the Irish were as quick as North Carolina. "They don't have a great deal of height, but they use what they have well. They're better than a lot of teams we've played, and they appear to be a smart team. They're role-oriented and fundamentally sound."

Andruzzi hopes to get better play from her own team. "We didn't play as well as we can against State and Carolina," she said. "They're not 30 points better than we are. We played them like we did Fayetteville State and didn't think and execute.

"We didn't play heads up ball and now we have to come back against a good team, but that's part of the learning experience."

East Carolina, too, may have some injury problems, Andruzzi said. Guard Delphine Mabry has been nursing a sprained ankle, while Anita Anderson, the center, has missed several days of practice with a back sprain.

The Lady Pirates are led in scoring by Sylvia Bragg at 10.8, while Anderson is the only other woman in double figures at 10.0. Mabry is just outside ten at 9.8.

East Carolina's next outing will be Sunday at 7:30 p.m. against Fairleigh Dickinson.

Auburn Tops Computer List

Pat Dye's Auburn Tigers, slim 9-7 victors over Michigan in the Sugar Bowl Moday night, captured the championship of the Daily Reflector's Computer Rankings for 1983.

Standings on the poll are based on winning performance against strength of schedule. Six points are awarded to a team each time it wins a game. Then, each time a victim win a game, the first team receives four additional points. Two more points are awarded for each victory won by a victim's victim, ranking three levels of play.

For example, Miami, named tops by the Associated Press, received six points for its 12-7 win over East Carolina. Miami was then awarded four additional points for each game won by ECU, a total of 32. Then, each time one of those eight ECU victims won, Miami received two additional points.

Auburn wound up with a total of 1,140 points for its 11 wins. Nebraska was a distant second with 952 points in 12 victories.

Georgia finished third with 853 points, going 10-1-1. Its tie saw points split evenly between the two schools.

Four was Brigham Young with 848 points, followed by Miami with 846.

The second five are Texs, Florida, Penn State, Illinois, and West Virginia.

The second ten consisted of Clemson, Pittsburgh, Michigan, Missouri, UCLA, Northern Illinois, Tennessee, Iowa, Ohio State and Arizona.

Alabama took 21st place, while Maryland was 22nd. Florida State finished 27th, with North Carolina 35th.

East Carolina finished in 39th place, but it should be noted that the rankings penalize a team which plays non-Division I-A teams. ECU played three teams in Division I-AA. No third level points are awarded for wins against Division I-AA schools, and no second or third round points are awarded for those who played Division II and III schools.

ECU could have had more points had those three been Division I-A schools, and had Missouri held onto its lead over Brigham Young in the Holiday Bowl. Just the latter alone would have upped the Pirates to 34th place.

Other schools included Virginia Tech 38th, Notre Dame 43rd, Wake Forest 63rd, Virginia 67th, South Carlina 71st, Georgia Tech 81st, Duke 83rd, and N.C. State 90th.

The Top 20 teams:

1	Auburn (11-1)	1140
2	Nebraska (12-1)	952
3	Georgia (10-1-1)	853
4	Brigham Young (11-1)	848
5	Miami, Fla. (11-1)	846
6	Texas (11-1)	788
7	Florida (9-2-1)	753
8	Penn State (8-4-1)	684
9	Illinois (10-2)	644
10	West Virginia (9-3)	644
11	Clemson (9-1-1)	613
12	Pittsbugh (8-3-1)	588
13	Michigan (9-3)	584

State, Maryland Begin ACC Play

By The Associated Press

After more than a month to prepare, No. 12 North Carolina State and No. 5 Maryland get down to business tonight — Atlantic Coast Conference style.

The Wolfpack plays host to the Terps in the first ACC game of the 1983-84 basketball season. Meanwhile, five other ACC teams also are in action tonight in warm-ups for upcoming league openers.

Wake Forest entertains Richmond, Duke plays host to Loyola of Baltimore, Clemson squares off against St. Francis, Georgia Tech battles Appalachian State and Virginia meets Virginia Tech in Roanoke.

N.C. State, the defending NCAA champions, is 10-2 while the Terps are 8-1 going into tonight's game at Reynolds Coliseum.

Wake Forest, ranked eighth, carries a 9-0 mark into its game with the Spiders. The contest is the final pre-ACC game for the Deacons, who visit Georgia Tech, 6-1, on Saturday.

Duke, 10-1, also opens its ACC schedule on Saturday at Virginia, which is ranked 20th at 8-0.

Conley Holds Off Jaguars

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley guard Donald Wilson sank seven out of eight free throws in the final two minutes to lead the Vikings to a 62-52 victory over cross-county rival Farmville Central Tuesday in 3-A high school basketball action.

Mechio Kornegay fired in 20 points and Karen Barrett added 11 as the Valkyries of Conley downed the Lady Jaguars 61-45 for their 10th win of the season against just one defeat.

Center Louis Bryant came off the bench to lead the Vikings with 12 points, and Darryl Daniels added 10.

Farmville's Kent Hardy led all scorers with 22 points with flashy inside moves. Toronto Moye followed with 12 points for the Jaguars, while Ronnie Barnes added 10.

"I think Hardy will turn out to be one of the best forwards we'll face," Conley Coach Shelly Marsh said. "He made some incredible moves inside to get around our big men and score.

"But the turning point of the game, I feel, was when we put Daniels and (Glenn) Clemons in the middle of their 2-3 zone to break it open. That along with Bryant pulling down some key rebounds made the difference."

The Vikings out-rebounded the Jags 35-22 on the night, as Daniels hauled down 11 and Bryant eight.

"When it got into the crucial part of the game, their offensive rebounding was the big factor," Farmville Coach Mike Terrell said. "I think they'll be a threat to win the Coastal Conference this year. They played more aggressively than I've seen them in other games."

"We made more of an effort on the offensive boards tonight," Marsh said. "They kept doing the things you have to do to win. (Farmville) did a good job of breaking our press early in the game, but we stuck with it — it's something we're going to have to do.

"Donald (Wilson) is our clutch man at the free throw line at this stage of the season, so we knew we wanted the ball in his hands at the end."

Wilson's free throws in the closing moments put the game out of reach after the Jaguars trimmed the margin to 54-50 with 2:02 remaining on a 17-foot jumper by Moye. Point guard Steve Mills connected on one of two free throws to put the Vikings ahead 62-50 with 12 seconds remaining, but Hardy answered on a pair of free throws with seven seconds on the clock.

"They made a couple of crucial baskets and free throws at the end, and we missed a few," Terrell said. "Our kids played as hard as we could play to win. Overall we looked a lot better tonight than the first two times we played Conley — the Christmas tournament helped us a great deal."

Conley scored the first seven points of the contest, with Clemons capping the burst with a three-point play on a slam dunk with 5:39 left in the opening period. But the Jaguars whittled away the lead as Hardy scored their first six points.

The Jags outscored Conley 11-4 over a 3:30 stretch of the quarter to knot the score at 11-11 with 27 seconds reaming, but Kenny Credle sank an 18-footer to give the Vikings a 13-11 lead at the buzzer.

Conley quickly expanded the lead to four at the outset of the second quarter and eventually built to a 30-22 advantage with 43 seconds left in the half. A pair of free throws by Hardy set the score at 30-24 at intermission.

Clemons connected inside twice in the first two minutes of the third quarter, but Farmville scored the next six points to cut the gap to 34-32 with 2:52 left in the period.

Reggie Smith hit on a pair of free throws for Conley, but Hardy completed a three-point play to trim the margin to one. Bobby Evans swished a 20-footer to give the Jaguars their first lead of the night at 37-36 with 2:03 on the clock.

The lead changed hands two more times before Victor Barnes drove the lane to put Conley ahead 40-39 at the end of the third quarter.

Hardy gave the Jags the lead again with a move inside around a pair of Viking defenders, but Conley regained the lead with a jumper by Credle. The score was tied two more times before the Vikings went ahead to stay on a pair of free throws by Daniels with 5:11 remaining.

Hardy drove inside to set the score at 50-48, but the Conley pulled away when the Jaguars were forced to foul.

"Overall I was pleased with our overall intensity," Marsh said. "We maintained it pretty well throughout the game. We have to to make up for our lack of experience."

Conley evened its record at 5-5 with the win, while the Farmville slipped to 1-8. The Vikings travel to West Craven Friday in their Coastal 3-A Conference opener, while the Jaguars visit SouthWest Edgecombe in an Eastern Carolina 3-A matchup.

Stephanie Newton paced the Lady Jaguars with 15 points including five out of six from the free throw line, while Lisa Lang added 11.

The Valkyries jumped out to a 15-8 lead at the end of the first quarter and ran the margin to 29-15 at halftime. Trellany Boyd and Kornegay connected on field goals as the Conley lead expanded to 18 points with 5:38 left in the third period.

Conley held a 41-23 edge after three quarters as Kornegay connected on a 20-footer at the buzzer.

But Sylvia Williams and Stephanie Newton completed fast breaks for the Lady Jags and Debra Joyner connected from 17 feet out to trim the margin to 42-29 at the 6:16 mark. After Conley sank four free throws, the Lady Jags again cut the lead to 12 on a field goal by Kim Smith with 4:05 left in the contest.

The Valkyries rattled off the next seven points for a 52-33 advantage with 2:35 remaining in the game. But again Farmville rallied, this time cutting the gap to 13 when Lisa Lang completed a three-point play with 2:06 on the clock.

The Lady Jaguars could come no closer, though, as the Valkyries iced the game for their 10th win in 11 outings. The Lady Jags slipped to 5-5 on the season with the loss.

Ross, Chocowinity Slip By Mattamuskeet, 65-59

SWANQUARTER — Reggie Ross outdueled Harry Burrus and Chocowinity High School slipped past the hosting Mattamuskeet Lakers, 65-59, to take over sole possession of first place in the Tobacco Belt standings last night.

The loss was the first of the year for the Lakers who had just won the Washington Daily News Tournament last week — in which Chocowinity finished fourth.

Chocowinity's girls also remained unbeaten in league play with a 69-37 win.

The Indians, paced by Ross' 26 points, fell behind in the early going, 10-8, but took command in the second period of the game. They outscored the Lakers, 20-8, and bulled out to a 28-18 lead at the half.

Paced by Burrus, who scored 24 in the game, Mattamuskeet rallied in the third period, 18-12, and cut the Tribe lead back to 40-36. But Chocowinity held the Lakers off in the final quarter, 25-23, to take the win.

Terry Moore added 18 to the Chocowinity scoring, while Steve Farrow had 12 and Jay Ethridge had 15 for Mattamuskeet.

The win boosted the Chocowinity record to 6-3 overall and 5-0 in the conference.

Chocowinity's girls eased out into a 12-8 lead in the first quarter and never relinquished the lead. The Lady Indians outscored Mattamuskeet, 21-12, in the second quarter for a 33-20 halftime lead. That was increased to 49-23 during the third period. Chocowinity outhit the Lady Lakers, 20-14 in the final quarter.

Wendy Elks led Chocowinity with 23 points, while Kim Green had 13 and Wanda Congleton and Cynthia Gibbs each had 10. Mary Grimmage led Mattamuskeet with 10 points.

The Chocowinity girls are now 6-1 overall and 5-0 in the league.

The Tribe travels to Aurora on Friday.

Bertie Silences Roanoke Rally

WINDSOR — Dale Sanderlin fired in 15 points and Calvin Cooke added 14 as Bertie Senior held off Roanoke 55-48 Tuesday in Northeastern 3-A Conference high school basketball action.

Garrett Baker paced Roanoke with 16 points, while Shawn Chance added 13 and James Duggins 11.

Ginya Smith pumped in 21 points to lead the Roanoke girls to a 63-32 trouncing of Bertie. Gloria Duggins added 18 points for the Lady Redskins, now 4-4 overall and 3-2 in the conference. Coretta Gillam led Bertie will 11 points.

Roanoke held a slim 9-8 lead after the first quarter, but Bertie raced to a 23-15 halftime advantage. The Redskins outscored Bertie 33-32 in the second half, but their rally came up short as they slipped to 4-4 overall while 3-2 against conference opposition.

Cage Dawgs Run Past Tennessee Vols, 71-57

By The Associated Press

Now that football season is over, Georgia can turn its attention to college basketball. And the Bulldogs got right into the spirit during their Southeastern Conference opener against Tennessee.

The 11th-ranked Bulldogs used an aggressive defense to pull away from a halftime tie and came away with a 71-57 victory over visiting Tennessee Tuesday night. The game was the only one of the night involving a Top Twenty team.

"We basically divide the season into three different sections — preseason, conference and conference tournament," said Georgia's Gerald Crosby, who scored 14 points. "Now our goal is the conference championship and we started right here."

Georgia upped its record to 9-1, aided by Vern Fleming's 22 points and James Banks' 20. Fleming scored eight of his points early in the second half as the Bulldogs used a 16-6 streak to take a 50-40 lead.

"Free-throw shooting was the key to us holding the lead in the second half, but the key to the half was our defensive play," said Georgia Coach Hugh Durham. "That's what broke the game open for us."

Tennessee managed just six field goals in the second half, a period in which Georgia made 21 of 23 foul shots.

"Their defense won the game for them," said Volunteers Coach Don DeVoe.

Dan Federmann scored 11 points to lead Tennessee, now 9-4.

In other games, Louisville, which dropped out of the Top Twenty this week after dropping two games in Hawaii, had little trouble in beating Morehead State 85-50. Milt Wagner scored 19 points and Lancaster Gordon had 15 for the winners.

The Cardinals, 6-4, led 34-26 at halftime and outscored the visitors 20-6 to start the second half.

Dwayne Washington scored 28 points and Gene Waldron added 20 to boost Syracuse past Villanova 79-70 in a Big East game. The Wildcats dropped to 3-6, their worst start since the 1974-75 season.

Jimmy Foster scored 28 points and grabbed 18 rebounds, leading South Carolina past Florida State 76-68.

Ricky Johnson's 15 points paced Illinois State over Creighton 63-54 in the Missouri Valley Conference opener for both teams.

Tulsa ran its record to 11-0 as Herbert Johnson scored 24 points in a 121-82 rout of West Texas State. Tulsa leads the NCAA in scoring, averaging 96.7 points per game.

Sophomore George Almones scored 25 points, had 10 assists and three steals in Southwestern Louisiana's 69-58 win over Weber State.

Mark Acres had 24 points as Oral Roberts took a 21-point halftime lead and cruised to a 114-87 triumph over Texas-Arlington.

Senior guard Phil Smith scored 28 points and set a school record for career free throws to pace New Mexico to an 82-74 victory over U.S. International.

Freshman Bruce Lefkowitz scored 13 points to help Penn defeat American 50-47. Lefkowitz's layup gave the Quakers a 40-32 lead with 10:15 remaining.

Senior forward Kenny Wilson tallied 22 points as Davidson overcame a 10-point deficit in the second half to beat Furman 70-65 in the Southern Conference.

Sophomore guard Anthony Watson scored 26 points as San Diego State downed Navy 88-81.

In other games, Phil Robinson, a senior guard, entered the game with five seconds left, ran the length of court and hit a 26-foot jump shot to lift Northeastern over Maine 83-81.

Trinity Christian Blanks Roanoke

Trinity Christian School gained a pair of wins over Roanoke Christian School last night, gaining a 59-28 win in the boys' game and a 30-19 girls' triumph.

Trinity built up a 14-3 lead in the first quarter and was never in trouble after that. By the half the Tiger lead had been built to 23-11. During the third period the lead grew to 43-23.

Maury Harris led the Tigers with 18 points, while Kevin Dunlow had 15 to pace Roanoke.

Trinity's girls scored the first eight points of their game and were never in trouble either. They held a 9-2 lead after one period and upped that to 13-4 in the second. During the third period, the lead increased to 25-8. Roanoke rallied in the final period to cut it to the final 11-point margin.

Renee Deans led Trinity with 13 points, while Deborah Elias led Roanoke with 12.

Exempt Golfers Open Match Play Tourney

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Some exempt golfers — eight from the regular tour and an equal number of seniors — start second round play in the complex Seiko-Tucson Match Play Championship that has been punctuated by criticism.

The two-prong tournament, with separate brackets for the regular tour (with $716,000 in prize money) and the seniors ($306,000 in prizes) is the kickoff event on the PGA tour this season. It also is the first match play tournament on the American circuit in more than a decade.

The format has drawn considerable criticism from a large number of players. The principal point of contention involves the eight players — the leaders on the 1983 Seiko Grand Prix list — who received byes into the fifth round of play Saturday morning.

Both winners and losers came to the defense of the format Tuesday, however.

"I don't want to hear any complaints from anybody playing here," said former U.S. Open champ Hubert Green, who struggled through 22 holes before losing to Mike Nicolette. "If they don't like it, they don't have to play. Nobody is holding a gun to their heads."

Veteran Jim Colbert, a 6-and-5 winner over Dave Eichelberger, agreed that "it's a tough format. It makes it an extremely long week for anybody who has to start in the first round.

"I think there's a place for match play," Colbert added. "I like it once. But I wouldn't like a steady diet of it."

As to the players who gained exemptions until the fifth of six rounds — Fuzzy Zoeller, Hal Sutton, Lanny Wadkins, Cal Peete, Gil Morgan, Tom Kite, Ben Crenshaw and Tom Watson — Colbert said "we all had a shot at getting one of those exemptions. You get it with your golf clubs. And they won it over a six-month period. That's a pretty good test. I believe they earned it."

Dan Forsman, a 4-and-3 winner over Frank Conner, said playing in the first round actually was to his advantage.

"I've already won one match. I've seen the golf course. And I figure that helps," Forsman said. "Now I'm playing Ray Floyd. And I'm not scared of him. After all, anything can happen in match play."

Other seeded players seeing action for the first time today are Wayne Levi, Fred Coupls, Payne Stewart, Craig Stadler, Mark McCumber, Andy Bean and Curtis Strange, and seniors Miller Barber, Gay Brewer, Gene Littler, Charles Sifford, Don January, Rod Funseth, Billy Casper and Dan Sikes.

In some leading matches Tuesday, John Mahaffey advanced 3-and-2 over Clarence Rose, Lon Hinkle beat Tom Jenkins 2-and-1, Larry Rinker went 23 holes for a victory over Jim Simons and Gibby Gilbert upset David Edwards 5-and-4.

In seniors play, Jim Ferree beat Bill Collins 6-and-5, Orville Moody beat Mike Fetchick 2-and-1, Doug Sanders beat Bob Erickson 2-and-1, and Jerry Barber beat Dow Finsterwald 5-and-3.

Bear Grass Rally Tops Bath, 45-39

BATH — Bear Grass rallied in the second half and pulled out a 45-39 Tobacco Belt Conference basketball victory over Bath High School last night. The victory boosted the Bears to 4-3 on the year, 4-1 in league contests.

Bath's girls rolled up a 60-29 win over the Lady Bears, who drop to 4-4 overall, 2-3 in the conference.

Bath managed to inch in front in the first period of the game, 9-8, and the Pirates pulled away in the second frame, 15-8, to up their lead to 24-16 at intermission.

But the Bears put it all together in the third period, outscoring Bath, 13-4, and powering into a 29-28 lead. They again outscored the Pirates, 16-11, in the final quarter to gain the win.

Lawrence Watson led the Bears with 13 points, while B. Bonner had 10 to pace Bear Grass.

Bath wasted little time in establishing a lead in the girls' game, powering out to a 19-10 margin after the first eight minutes. Bear Grass held the Lady Pirates to just eight in the second period, scoring ten of its own to cut the lead to 27-20 at intermission.

In the third period, however, the Bears fell apart, scoring only one point. Bath added 14 to up its lead to 41-21. They finished off the Bears, 19-8, in the final period.

Reddrick had 21 points and Boyd added 18 for Bath. Amy Lilly had 11 to pace Bear Grass.

The Bears play host to Cape Hatteras on Friday.

Schnellenberger Delivers For Miami

MIAMI (AP) — From a bold prediction of prominence for a football program in tatters to landing his private helicopter on the 10-yard line at the Orange Bowl, Howard Schnellenberger delivered a national championship to a city badly in need of something to cheer.

He did it with confidence, humor, an ever-present pipe and a gravelly voice that charmed his wife into saying "yes to everything" when she couldn't make out his words.

Schnellenberger's prediction came true Tuesday night, when The Associated Press named the Hurricanes No. 1. By then, the coach was reduced to squinting painfully into spotlights, his sleepless eyes rimmed with red.

But he wouldn't change a thing, not even the 28-3 loss to Florida that started the Hurricanes' 11-1 campaign. And especially not Miami's surprising, exciting 31-30 upset of previously unbeaten Nebraska Monday night in the 50th Orange Bowl game.

"He is greater than I thought," said Bobby Bowden, coach at Florida State. "What he accomplished in the Orange Bowl might just be the crowning gem of the last 50 years."

Schnellenberger's and Miami's rise to the college football championship began in 1979, when the newly hired coach promised skeptical Miamians a team of national prominence and tradition. At the time, the Hurricanes had been winners only twice in the preceding 10 years. He was the sixth coach in a decade.

But Schnellenberger, a former assistant under Paul "Bear" Bryant and Don Shula, rode a wave of upsets over powers such as Notre Dame and Penn State and and Florida State to respectability and the Orange Bowl berth that made the title possible.

Last week, he upstaged Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne with the helicopter, rented to make his many Orange Bowl engagements without worrying about traffic.

As Osborne and Mike Rozier, his Heisman Trophy-winning running back, gave interviews at the stadium, Schnellenberger descended in the chopper, hopped out and strode over with a horde of reporters to shake hands and exchange compliments with both startled opponents.

Tuesday morning, Schnellenberger and wife Beverlee uncorked their second bottle of champagne, delivered along with a bouquet of orange and green balloons to their victory press conference by a man in top hat and black tie.

Later, the couple dropped in on Vice President George Bush, in town for an anti-crime speech, and gave him a Miami cap.

Everyone else was calling it a miracle, but not the Miami coach.

"I look at this as the University of Miami success story of 1983," Schnellenberger said. "Our team was a team of destiny."

Freshman quarterback Bernie Kosar believes it. He came all the way from Ohio for a chance to star in Schnellenberger's pro-style passing attack.

"It all turned out like Coach Schnellenberger told me it would. He's a prophet. He's the best coach in the nation," Kosar said.

Schnellenberger succeeded Lou Saban five years ago.

Schnellenberger, in his second stint as a Miami Dolphins assistant after losing the top job with the Baltimore Colts in a feud with owner Robert Irsay, applied for and got what seemed a thankless and impossible job.

He became a salesman and PR man, pushing for talented players, boosters, money, exposure and people who'd buy season tickets.

Schnellenberger's first Miami team was 5-6, but freshman Jim Kelly had been discovered. By 1982, Kelly was a candidate for the Heisman Trophy before an injury ended his season prematurely.

The Hurricanes were 9-3, including a victory in the Peach Bowl, in 1980, and improved to 9-2 the following year, when probation kept them out of a bowl game. Last year's club didn't qualify for holiday action at 7-4, and with the offensive line depleted by graduation, this year's team was a mystery at best.

Kosar took his first snaps in the devastating loss at Florida, but the Hurricanes bounced back with 11 straight victories, including the upset of the season against Nebraska.

In defeat, he and his assistant coaches found a surprise. Or maybe they expected it all along.

"When we graded the film, we found that almost to a man, our football team had graded out as winners," Schnellenberger said.

"We did have a better football team than we thought we had coming out of that loss."

They built on the good things with a "retread" offensive line of players who'd been moved from other positions and a motley combination of blue-chip recruits and players who hadn't gotten a serious look from any other schools.

It was the right mixture for the Hurricanes.

Success brought job offers from the National Football League, the United States Football League and other colleges, including Kentucky, his alma mater.

Schnellenberger turned them down, saying he wanted to be No. 1 at Miami.

"What's left? Continuity. Over a long period of time," Schnellenberger said. "I would like very much to retire at the University of Miami, and I hope all the things will happen in such a way that I can."

Floyd Lulls 76ers To Sleep

By The Associated Press

The Golden State Warriors may have lulled the Philadelphia 76ers to Sleepy.

The defending National Basketball Association champions were cruising along with a 90-85 lead early in the fourth quarter Tuesday night when Eric "Sleepy" Floyd scored eight of his career-high 35 points during a 12-0 Golden State streak. The Warriors went on to win 115-106.

"We probably had a false sense of being in control," said the 76ers' Julius Erving. "But then Sleepy got hot and their defense stopped giving us second shots."

"I just took what was there and I've been driving pretty successfully the last 10 or 15 days," said Floyd, a second-year man. He hit 12-of-18 shots from the field and 11-for-11 free throws.

In other NBA games, it was Boston 105, New Jersey 103; New York 117, Los Angeles 105; Washington 103, Detroit 102; San Antonio 137, Utah 124; Milwaukee 104, Cleveland 92; Chicago 102, Phoenix 97; Dallas 119, Houston 117; Seattle 110, Denver 109 and Portland 123, Kansas City 104.

Floyd outdueled 76ers guard Andrew Toney, who connected on 10 of 15 shots for 25 points.

"Toney played good defense," Floyd said. "My shots were just going in. I can't take anything away from him."

The Warriors, despite a 16-18 record, now have consecutive victories over the 76ers and defending Western Conference champion Los Angeles.

"You've got to admit that's pretty fantastic — back-to-back wins over the Lakers and Philadelphia," said guard Les Conner.

But Floyd added, "If we don't take it the right way and get a good streak going, it doesn't mean a thing. But we've got some good talent. We just have to be aggressive and make things happen."

Moses Malone, who usually saves his best for the fourth quarter, went into the final 12 minutes with 26 points and 18 rebounds. But he had only one rebound and no points in the period while being guarded by backup center Darren Tillis.

"Tillis gave us 10 or 11 wonderful minutes," said Warriors Coach John Bach.

Floyd, who had 27 points in the second half, had 15 points in the third period as the Warriors cut a Philadelphia lead from 14 points to five.

In addition to his scoring, Floyd blocked three shots and made two steals before a sellout crowd of 13,335. Joe Barry Carroll added 21 points for the Warriors.

Celtics 105, Nets 103

At East Rutherford, N.J., Boston rallied from a nine-point deficit in the fourth quarter behind the scoring of Larry Bird and M.L. Carr.

Carr had all nine of his points and Bird netted eight of his 22 in the fourth period, when the Celtics outscored the Nets 30-19.

Robert Parish led Boston with 27 points, while Darryl Dawkins led New Jersey with 24.

Knicks 117, Lakers 105

Bill Cartwright had 26 points and 10 rebounds, Bernard King scored nine of his 22 points during a 20-10 New York spurt in the fourth quarter and Truck Robinson contributed 19 points and 13 rebounds for the Knicks against Los Angeles.

Guard Mike McGee hit 16 of 19 shots and scored a career-high 33 points for the Lakers, who lost to the Knicks in New York for the first time in eight games dating back to 1977.

Spurs 137, Jazz 124

At San Antonio, the Spurs won their second straight game under new coach Bob Bass as George Gervin scored 35 points against division-leading Utah.

The Spurs outscored the Jazz 40-26 in the second quarter to turn a six-point deficit into a 76-68 halftime lead, and they increased the margin to 104-89 after three periods.

Mavericks 119, Rockets 117

Mark Aguirre scored 37 points and Rolando Blackman 32 as Dallas won at Houston.

Ralph Sampson scored 27 points for the Rockets, who cut a 14-point deficit to five in the fourth quarter before faltering.

Bulls 102, Suns 97

At Chicago, the Bulls won for the eighth time in nine outings as rookie Mitchell Wiggins scored 12 of his game-high 22 points in the pivotal third quarter against Phoenix.

The Suns led by as many as 15 points in the first half, but the Bulls took the lead for good by outscoring Phoenix 35-19 in the third quarter.

Bullets 103, Pistons 102

Jeff Malone's three-point goal from the corner with one second remaining lifted Washington to a home victory over Detroit.

The Bullets trailed by five points going into the final seconds, but they came back as Rickey Sobers sank another three-pointer with eight seconds left and John Long missed two free throws for the Pistons.

Blazers 123, Kings 104

At Portland, Jim Paxson scored a career-high 39 points and Kenny Carr added 31 as the Blazers broke a four-game losing streak and handed Kansas City its fourth straight loss.

The Blazers outscored the Kings 72-50 in the second half as Paxson scored 14 points in the third quarter and Carr added 13 more in the fourth period.

Bucks 104, Cavaliers 92

Milwaukee won at home as Marques Johnson scored six of his 21 points during a 17-8 run at the start of the fourth period against Cleveland.

Johnson started the final-quarter spurt with two free throws that gave the Bucks a 76-72 lead, and six minutes later it was 91-80.

Sonics 110, Nuggets 109

Seattle won at Denver as Gus Williams scored 30 points, including three baskets in a 90-second span down the stretch.

The SuperSonics trailed 100-99 with 3:47 left before Williams' hot streak gave them a 105-102 lead with 1:51 to go. Kiki Vandeweghe had 41 points to pace the Nuggets.

Rose Matmen Down Kinston

Rose High School's wrestling team gained a 39-32 victory over Kinston yesterday.

Details of the match were not made available.

Rose travels to Northern Nash on Friday.

Jamesville In 76-54 Victory

COLUMBIA — Tracy Peele fired in 21 points and Richie Ange 19 as Jamesville rolled to a 76-54 victory over Columbia Tuesday in Tobacco Belt 1-A high school basketball action.

Columbia's girls needed 16 points from Tasha Clegg and 14 by Greta White to claim a 40-24 win over Jamesville. Robin Gardner paced Jamesville with 10 points. Columbia improved its record to 7-1 on the season, while Jamesville slipped to 0-5 in as many conference games.

Columbia's H. Respass led all scorers in the boys game with 31 points.

"They played a good team game," Jamesville Coach William Johnson said. "We really got together to play team ball; we really rebounded well.

"We hit a lot of good shots which haven't been falling, and we got a lot of second and third shots."

Jamesville raced away to a 28-8 lead in the first period and coasted through the second and third before outscoring Columbia 22-15 in the fourth.

Jamesville now stands at 2-3 overall, with all five games against conference opponents. Columbia falls to 0-8 overall and 0-5 in the conference.

In The Area

Clark Heads Home Builders

William H. (Bill) Clark has been installed as president of the Greenville Home Builders Association for 1984.

Clark and other officers were installed by Nick DeMai from Raleigh, retired executive vice president of the North Carolina Home Builders Association. The new slate includes Ed Tipton II of Tipton Builders, first vice president; Bob Dail of Home Builders Supply Co., second vice president, and Donnie Brewer of Rivers & Associates, secretary-treasurer.

BILL CLARK

Clark is president of Bill Clark Construction Co. and secretary-treasurer of Realty World-Clark-Branch Realtors, a Greenville residential and commercial brokerage agency. He was previously vice president of Cherry Oaks and Lanco and prior to that was assistant vice president for Wachovia Mortgage Co. in Winston-Salem.

He is a graduate of East Carolina University with bachelor's and master's degrees in business administration. Clark is married to the former Gloria Elias of Weldon and they have three sons.

The Greenville HBA has 117 members and meets on the first Tuesday of each month.

School Beautification Started

Belvoir Elementary School is participating in the North Carolina School Beautification Program, implemented through the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction this year.

Students, faculty and several community organizations are involved in the program which emphasizes campus and community environment, school spirit and a beautification of the school grounds. Several activities which are required to compete on district and state levels will take place during the school year. Among these activities are landscaping needed areas on the school grounds as well as providing new playground equipment, conducting a mascot and poster contest and having an Arbor Day celebration. An awards program in April will culminate the activities.

Safety Council To Meet

The Pitt County Safety Council will meet at 12:30 p.m. Thursday at the Greenville Country Club. Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes will be the guest speaker.

Deafness Foundation Grant Set

The Deafness Research Foundation has awarded a $10,000 research grant for 1984 to East Carolina University School of Medicine, with Dr. Robert S. Fulghum as principal investigator.

Dr. Fulghum is an associate professor of microbiology with degrees from Roanoke College and Virgnia Tech. This is the second year that the DRF is funding his project, which is a study of the bacterial basis of chronic otitis media (middle ear infection). Such knowledge, it is hoped, will help develop a vaccine for the chronic form of this prevalent childhood disease.

The DRF is is the largest voluntary organization raising funds for research into the causes, treatment and prevention of deafness and other hearing disorders.

Banks Contribute To Zoo

Two North Carolina banks, North Carolina National Bank and Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., have each made a $55,000 contribution to the North Carolina Zoological Society.

The $110,000 gift will be used to sponsor an animal habitat or an animal collection in the African Pavillon at the North Carolina Zoo near Asheboro.

Both banks have been strong contributors to the zoo for more than a decade. Since 1971, Wachovia has made contributions totaling $100,000. North Carolina National Bank since 1976 has contributed $70,000 to the development of the zoo.

The North Carolina Zoological Society is the private non-profit organization that raises private funds for the continuing development of the state facility.

Man Found Dead In Home

James David Roberson, 69, of the Farm Life community in Martin County, was found dead in his home on Route 1, Williamston, shortly after noon on Sunday.

The Martin County Rescue Squad responded to a telephone call by a friend of Roberson when there was no response to his efforts to get Roberson to answer the front door. Roberson, a retired security guard, lived alone.

Martin County Deputy Sheriff Jerry Beach says there is no evidence of foul play, that Roberson was lying face up in bed. The house was unheated. Roberson was last seen alive when he visited a friend in Washington on the evening of Dec. 25. He was to visit the same friend again Dec. 31 and when he did not show up, the friend went to Roberson's home late Sunday morning to check on him.

Investigation of the death is continuing.

Banquet Held At Church

A banquet was given at Philippi Baptist Church here Sunday for members and friends of the church.

The banquet was given by the church pastor, the Rev. J.C. Purvis, "in appreciation for the love shown to me during the past year of my ministry here." The theme was "I celebrate my love for you."

TV Theft Investigated

Greenville police are investigating the theft of a television from an apartment at 61 Village Green Apartments, according to Officer S.A. Person.

Ms. Person said the theft was reported about 9:27 p.m. Tuesday. She said entrance to the apartment was gained through a bathroom window.

Kidney Foundation Meets

Judith M. Thomas of the transplant division, department of surgery, East Carolina University School of Medicine, will speak at the meeting of the Eastern Carolina Chapter of the N.C. Kidney Foundation Thursday. The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in room 123 of the Gaskins-Leslie Building adjacent to Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The meeting is open to the public.

Services Set This Week

Services will be held at First Timothy Free Will Baptist Church this week.

Tonight at 7:30, Elder J.H. Wilks and the Burnie Chapel Church congregation will be in charge of the service. A prayer meeting will be held Thursday at 7 p.m. Elder J.T. Nobles of Washington, D.C., and the Rock Spring Traveling Choir will render service Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Revival Is Under Way

A revival is under way at Ayden Deliverance Center, 137 E. Second St., Ayden, with services beginning at 7:30 p.m. The Rev. A.J. Clark is the speaker.

The pastor announces that there will be no more services on the third Friday nights and the third Sundays of each month.

PCMH Receives Commendation

Pitt County Memorial Hospital has received a commendation from the American Hospital Association for its efforts to monitor costs and productivity.

PCMH, a 566-bed facility, participates in MONITREND, a management information program offered by the association's Hospital Administrative Services Division. This program allows some 4,000 participating hospitals to compare their costs to those of similarly sized facilities.

According to October 1983 Monitrend information, the average cost per patient day at PCMH was $354. The average cost per patient day for the 56 other teaching hospitals of similar size nationwide was $412. The average cost per patient day in the 26 other teaching hospitals of similar size in the Southeast was $404.

Driver Is Charged

Clarence Cherry of 9 Ford St., was charged with hit-and-run driving, driving while impaired, and driving without a license following investigation of a 5:30 p.m. collision at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Clark Street Tuesday.

Officers, who identified the driver of the second car involved as Stephen Hugh Simmonds of 318 E. 10th St., estimated damage from the wreck at $3,000 to the Simmonds car and $500 to the Cherry vehicle.

Dinner Will Honor Helms

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., will be honored at a dinner at 7:30 p.m. Friday night at the Greenville Moose Lodge.

GLilda McKinney, a local coordinator of the event, said Sen. John East, R-N.C., of Greenville also will attend the dinner.

Tickets for the dinner may be obtained by calling Mrs. McKinney at 756-2233 or the Helms for Senate office at 876-8522.

A member of the Governor's Commission on Education and Economic Growth, Betty Speir, says she believes those attending the commission's regional hearing in Greenville Thursday will hear citizen input that will directly affect the future of education in this area.

"We are interested in hearing the concerns of people in this area about education presently and the future of education," said Mrs. Speir. "We are aware that there are particular concerns in the east and in rural areas that urban areas may not have," she said, "and we want these concerns identified."

Gov. Jim Hunt will chair the public hearing, the third of four scheduled across North Carolina. The hearing will feature several invited speakers on education including Lenwood Padgett, principal of Jacksonville Senior High School; John Dornan, executive director of the North Carolina Association of Educators, and Phil Schlechty, professor and associate dean at the UNC-Chapel Hill School of Education. It will be held at Wahl-Coates School in Greenville from 6:30-10 p.m.

In addition, 90 minutes will be allotted for citizen input during the hearing. A sign-up system for those who want to speak will be available at the beginning of the hearing.

The other regional hearings have "brought forth a variety of interests and needs," said Mrs. Speir, "and I'm sure the same will be true in the Greenville."

Mrs. Speir said she thought the commission would "hear from the business community their concerns and their needs" and that this input "will have a very real impact on the thinking of the legislators in determining the direction of education."

"Many people don't realize what a critical period for education we (the citizens of North Carolina) are currently in," said Mrs. Speir. "Within the next 15 years we will lose about 75 percent of our present teachers. The future (of education) hinges on the kind of teachers we replace them with."

According to Hunt, the commission wants to hear from "experts and lay people alike, from educators, parents, students, business executives and people from a broad range of society."

The Commission on Education for Economic Growth was created by Hunt to "propose and promote the implementation of policies and programs to improve K-12 education," say commission spokesmen. The commission also "seeks to broaden pubic awareness of the link between good schools and good jobs" and to "promote new partnerships and alliances for improving education," the spokesmen said.

The school board also approved a cooperative program of high school education for adults that will lead to the receipt of a high school diploma. The program will be a joint effort involving Pitt Community College and the city and county schools. Superintendent Delma Blinson emphasized that the program would include more academic instruction than the existing GED program, in which adults can take a standard test to receive a certificate of equivalency for high school education.

Detailing the structure of the proposed adult high school diploma program, PCC Learning Center Coordinator Joy Sasser explained that the entry level into the program will be predicated on "competency tests to be given to let us know whether a person needs to complete one, two, or three levels. Work experience," she said, "will enter into the determination of the level of entry." She said the program "is designed in areas of study, not subject matter, with four areas in each of the three areas."

Other elements of the program include individual planning that will allow a student to proceed at a pace suitable for his or her capability and also be compatible with the time a person can devote dependant on work or other circumstances. Admission requirements are that a person must be at least 18 years old and out of school for at least six months. There is no upper age limit, and applicants can have attended any school, in or out of the area. The program meets state education standards as well as those of PCC.

The Greenville portion of work with Pitt County and Pitt Community College was carried out by a committee comprised of Howard Hurt, Jean Creech, Ann Harrison and Rebecca A. Oats.

The policy paper on evaluation of the superintendent received approval Monday night. The policy, up for consideration at two previous meetings, had failed to muster passage with several members objecting to the vagueness of wording relating to a time schedule and a requirement for each member to submit a signed evaluation. In the revised policy paper, each board member is to sign an individual assessment; however, the chairman will then compile a composite assessment representing the position of the board. This composite is the paper to be formally approved and recorded in the minutes of the board as confidental personnel information. The revised policy also stipulates an evaluation date at the first meeting in February or no later than the last meeting in March.

Otrher actions taken by the board were:

•Approval, on a first reading basis, of the policy governing student fees, fines, and charges.

•Authorization for Rose High students to take a field media trip to Washington, D. C. on March 8, 9 and 10.

•Establishment of an annual employee recognition program near the end of the school year. The recognition event would honor all retirees as well as any staff member who during the school year received regional, state or national honors. Employee recognition on this occasion will not be extended to those recognized at the local level. The recognition banquet will be scheduled either on a student holiday-teacher work day or on a Saturday, with the cost to come from the school budget or from public contributions.

Reporting on an earlier request by board members for Blinson to arrange a date for a joint county-city schools public hearing on the merger study, Blinson told the board that county school board members preferred to have their own hearing, but were not in favor of a joint hearing. The date of the first Greenville school board meeting in February, tentatively set for Feb. 6, has been designated as the date of the Greenville public hearing.

In executive session, approval was given to one resignation.

Firm Acquires J.H. Hudson Co.

J.S. Alberici Construction Co. Inc., headquartered in St. Louis, announced that it has acquired J.H. Hudson Inc., a Greenville-based general contracting firm.

Alberici, a 65-year-old company, specializes in industrial buildings, power plants, bridges, dams and other heavy construction. The firm also has other construction-related subsidiaries in St. Louis and Denver, Colo.

Raymond F. Pieper, Alberici president, said the acquisition represents "a major step in our long-range plan for diversification and geographical expansion.

"J.H. Hudson Inc. will be able to provide a full range of construction services to our St. Louis-based clients who have operations in the Southeastern United States," said Pieper.

James H. Hudson, who will continue as president of the firm he founded in 1967, said the company will operate as a wholly owned subsidiary of Alberici and continue to be based in Greenville.

"We have been operating in North Carolina for the past 16 years and have established a clientele of industrial and commercial accounts." he said. "We will continue to serve those clients as we have in the past."

Hudson said, "There will be no significant changes in our operations other than the fact we will have more capability and will be able to expand not only in North Carolina but throughout the entire Southeast with the support of our new parent."

According to Hudson, no changes will be made here relative to existing personnel. Current officers of the firm are E. Lynn Hudson, vice president; A.E. (Gene) Rackley, vice president of sales, and Jeannette Williams, secretary.

Green Hearing Set Jan. 20

A probable cause hearing for Harvey Lee Green Jr., 23, charged with the murders of Sheila Bland and Mike Edmondson during the robbery of a Bethel business place Dec. 19, has been scheduled Jan 20.

Judge H. Horton Rountree scheduled the hearing and appointed Jeffrey L. Miller as Green's attorney. At the probable cause hearing a District Court judge will determine if evidence is sufficient to send the case to trial in Superior Court.

BOSTON (AP) — A judge refused to allow three young white men convicted last month of assault in the death of a black man to remain free while appealing their prison sentences.

The three, all from Boston's Dorchester section, were convicted of two counts of assault with a dangerous weapon by a Suffolk County Superior Court jury Dec. 16 in the March 13, 1982 death of William F. Atkinson, 30.

Prosecutors said the black man was struck and killed by a subway train while fleeing a gang of jeering whites who threw stones at him.

'Jedi' Zapping Its Box Office Rivals

By JAY ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Return of the Jedi," still zapping the motion picture universe eight months after its release, made more megabucks at the box office this past weekend to finish 1983 light years ahead of the Earth-bound movie pack.

The final episode in George Lucas' "Star Wars" trilogy collected $1.8 million nationwide from Friday through Monday, to boost its 223-day total to a staggering $249.3 million, Lucasfilm spokesman Sid Ganis said Tuesday.

The New Year's weekend showing for "Jedi" was far behind some newer kids on the block, such as the $9.1 million taken in by the Shirley MacLaine-Debra Winger drama, "Terms of Endearment," or the $7.7 million attracted by Clint Eastwood's "Sudden Impact," but those movies are likely to be distant memories eight months from now.

"Jedi" even eclipsed its immediate predecessor, "The Empire Strikes Back," released in 1980.

"It certainly beats 'Empire' both in terms of gross and film rentals, and is slightly below what 'Star Wars' (1977) did first time around in film rentals," Ganis said.

"Jedi" U.S.-Canadian film rentals — the amount returned to Lucasfilm and distributor 20th Century-Fox after theater owners have taken their share — totaled about $162.5 million, Ganis said.

In terms of rentals, "Jedi" has moved into the exclusive neighborhood of "Star Wars" and "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial," the two most successful movies of all time.

U.S.-Canadian rentals for "Star Wars" were around $200 million, while "E.T." rentals were in the range of $210 million.

Second in the 1983 box office race was "Tootsie," which starred Dustin Hoffman playing a man pretending to be a woman. That movie, which was released in December 1982, collected $177.2 million, Columbia Pictures spokesman John Flinn said.

In third was Paramount's big sleeper, "Flashdance," which whirled to $95 million at theater turnstyles, Paramount spokeswoman Susan Pile said.

The top 15 grossing films of 1983, according to figures provided by the major studios:

1. "Return of the Jedi," 20th Century-Fox, $249 million.
2. "Tootsie," Columbia, $177 million.
3. "Flashdance," Paramount, $95 million.
4. "Trading Places," Paramount, $90 million.
5. Tie-"WarGames," MGM-UA, $74 million.
5. "Superman III," Warner Bros., $74 million.
7. "Mr. Mom," 20th Century-Fox, $65 million.
8. "Octopussy," MGM-UA, $64 million.
9. "National Lampoon's Vacation," Warner Bros., $61 million.
10. "Risky Business," Warner Bros., $60 million.
11. "Ghandi," Columbia, $54 million.
12. "Never Say Never Again," Warner Bros., $53 million.
13. "The Toy," Columbia, $51 million.
14. "The Big Chill," Columbia, $44 million.
15. "Jaws 3-D," Universal, $42 million.

"Sudden Impact" and "Terms of Endearment," which had collected $41.9 million and $39.8 million, respectively, through Monday, looked to be two of the big films of 1984.

Also finding big audiences this past weekend was "Yentl," the Barbra Streisand film, with $4.5 million for the four days. Its 25-day total was $18.7 million, MGM-UA said.

"Scarface," starrig Al Pacino, and "Two of a Kind," starring John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John, also looked to be big successes in the coming year.

Here were the top films for last weekend, with their four-day grosses, total to date and number of days in release:

1. "Terms of Endearment," $9.1 million, $39.8 million, 41 days.
2. "Sudden Impact," $7.7 million, $41.9 million, 25 days.
3. "Yentl," $4.5 million, $18.7 million, 25 days.
4. "Scarface," $4.4 million, $22.1 million, 25 days.
5. "Two of a Kind, $4.3 million, $14.7 million, 18 days.
6. "Uncommon Valor," $4.2 million, $13.9 million, 18 days.
7. "The Rescuers"-"Mickey's Christmas Carol," $3.9 million, $13.1 million, 18 days;
8. "Silkwood," $3.0 million, $7.9 million, 20 days.
9. "Christine," $2.7 million, $13.5 million, 25 days.
10. "D.C. Cab," $2.6 million, $7.8 million, 18 days.
11. "To Be or Not To Be," $2.4 million, $7.1 million, 18 days;
12. "Gorky Park," $2.23 million, $7.0 million, 18 days.
13. "The Man Who Loved Women," $2.217 million, $6.7 million, 18 days.
14. "Smurfs and the Magic Flute," $2.0 million, $11.2 million, 90 days.
15. "Return of the Jedi," $1.8 million, $249.3 million, 223 days.

Victor Borge Marks Birthday In Copenhagen With Gala Concert

BY BRYAN WILDER
Asssociated Press Writer

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Danish-born pianist Victor Borge, who got his start on the Bing Crosby Radio Show 40 years ago, celebrated his 75th birthday by conducting a gala concert here and said he feels "not a day over 74."

In Danish slightly rusted by 43 years in America, Borge quipped and fumbled through a sentimental two hours Tuesday night conducting the 50-piece Royal Opera Orchestra in the City Hall of Copenhagen — the city where he was born Boerge Rosenbaun in 1909 to Frederikke and Bernhard Rosenbaum.

"My father was a violinist in this orchestra for 35 years. When he got home my mother didn't recognize him," he explained to an audience containing family, friends, officials and diplomats.

His mother was a pianist.

In more serious moments, Borge led the orchestra through the great composers and a medley of Danish folk melodies, ending in a shower of tiny flags of national red and white as fireworks flared fbom the wings.

Though he delights audiences with his improvisational wit, Borge considers himself a musician first and a humorist second, but not a comedian.

He explained in an interview Tuesday: "To musicians I am an absolute musician. To people who want to laugh, I'm a humorist. A comedian is more or less a person who takes advantage of props, like a clown. You can learn comedy but there is no method by which you become a humorist — it's there already, like 'the touch' with a piano. You cannot learn the touch."

Part of the Borge touch is reading an audience, also across national borders.

"I've collected an arsenal of 'safe' routines," he told The Associated Press. "I'm not bound like in a play where you have to say the words just so, and if it doesn't work, there's nothing you can do about it. I can always do something about it. I trust my instincts and take advantage of the moment."

He said his birthday gala was a double celebration.

"It also happens to be the 100th anniversary of the Royal Opera Orchestra. Since one cannot celebrate oneself, you take the opportunity to celebrate the orchestra.

"That way we kill two birds with one stone," he said with typical Borge self-irony.

Borge, a Jew, fled to Sweden in 1940 when Nazi forces invaded Denmark. Then, with both parents dead and the Third Reich occupying his home country, he sailed to the United States in 1941. His breakthrough came a few months later, even before he learned English.

He recalled:

"It was the Bing Crosby Radio Show, three days before Pearl Harbor. People thought the whole thing was my fault.

"I'd had some of my Danish routines translated, so I was reading them without really knowing what I was saying. After that performance I was chosen by U.S. radio commentators as 'Comedy Find of the Year.'"

Borge did 54 Bing Crosby shows, but he said his "big turning point" was the opening night of his first one-man show, at Broadway's Golden Theater in 1953, which drew rave reviews.

"The Broadway debut was completely fabulous," he said. "(Columnist) Walter Winchell wrote that such accolades had never been showered on the Barrymores, and so on and so on. From then on, I was 'in,' so to speak."

His vitality shows in his schedule of 100 to 150 concerts a year. In 1984, they'll include the opera "Carmen," which he will conduct and narrate in Hartford, Conn., two birthday shows at the Hollywood Bowl and nine concerts next December at New York's Carnegie Hall.

"I never feel old until I look in the mirror," Borge said. "My mother would probably die laughing if she could see me now."

Opine Victim Not Using Seat Belt

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A woman killed at Disneyland when she fell off the Matterhorn bobsled ride and was struck by another sled may not have been wearing her seat belt, officials say.

Dolly Regina Young, 48, of Fremont, Calif., had the belt on when the ride began, a park spokesman said. But police Detective David Tuttle said the belt was open when he saw the bobsled at the accident scene.

Ms. Young died at about 3 p.m. Tuesday when she fell off the ride, was hit by the other sled and was trapped underneath it, said Disneyland spokeswoman Laure Dike.

She was pronounced dead at the scene, becoming the seventh fatality at the park, which has hosted more than 230 million visitors in more than 28 years of operation, Ms. Dike said.

Officials said Ms. Young was visiting the park with five friends from Tempe, Ariz., who shared the bobsled with her.

Disneyland publicity supervisor Al Flores said none of her friends saw what happened because she was seated alone in the rear seat of the sled.

The 90-second bobsled ride, attaining speeds of 28 mph, shut down automatically about 30 seconds after the accident, Flores said.

He said the park's "routine, standard operating procedure" is to check passengers twice to make sure seat belts are securely fastened before the twin 1,000-pound sleds, which hold four passengers each, roar around the man-made Matterhorn as on a roller-coaster.

The passengers are required to wear the 3-inch, nylon-mesh belts — which lock at the buckle — and the belts are checked when passengers get into the sleds and again when the cars are dispatched, Flores said.

He said maintenance workers determined that there was no malfunction of the ride and that the seat belt's moorings had not come loose.

Disneyland officials said the death was the second on the Matterhorn roller coaster ride, which winds through a make-believe snow-capped mountain that is one of the park's most visible and popular attractions.

Ms. Dike said the ride will remain closed indefinitely until an investigation is completed.

The last fatality at the park occurred in June, when a teen-ager celebrating his high school graduation and birthday drowned after he and a friend took a maintenance boat from a restricted area shortly before midnight. The victim fell into the river surrounding Tom Sawyer's Island, officials said.

'TV-Starved' Hail Satellite Dishes

By MACK SISK

DRYDEN, Texas (UPI) — For years, ranchers in isolated West Texas — where radio reception is difficult and television stations are non-existent — have driven hundreds of miles each weekend to watch football on television.

But that is coming quickly to an end.

Gleaming white satellite dishes are springing up like mushrooms in the Big Bend area, affording once-lonely cowpokes more television channels than most city dwellers, even those with cable hookups.

"How many channels do the city folks get?" asked a grizzled rancher at Don McIlhaney's Phillips 66 station-store in Dryden, where 11 families live. "We can get up to 60."

McIlhaney's new color television set — it's reception perfect — is the center piece of his store and his six-foot tall dish sits prominently alongside U.S. Highway 90 in the front yard of his old frame house next door.

"I had three or four ranchers come in here last night and watch the New York-Detroit game," McIlhaney beamed.

McIlhaney figures the money he's saving on the weekend trips makes the satellite dish a good investment.

"I used to go to Sanderson every Sunday. I've got to see my Dallas Cowboys. I'd take a motel room where they have cable, and sometimes then the reception wasn't that good. At one time we got together here and got a tall antenna, but we only got one channel and that was a sometimes thing."

Until last year, many area ranchers drove 100 miles or more to Del Rio to sate their tastes for weekend football.

Three weeks after his dish was installed, McIlhaney's television set was the only light still visible in the darkened village hours after he closed his store.

Dryden is located 40 miles west of where Judge Roy Bean, the renowned "Law West of the Pecos," used to dispense liquor and justice at his Jersey Lilly Saloon at Langtry, Texas, and traffic is sparse late at night.

Across the highway at Dryden Mercantile, McIlhaney said the owner had hooked four different households onto one satellite dish, "but (the others) have to watch what he wants to watch." Now five of Dryden's 11 households have satellite reception, he said, and four others have ordered dishes.

McIlhaney said his elderly mother was the first in the area to get a satellite dish for about $5,800 but now the dishes are smaller and less expensive, with the price down to as low as $1,800, a one-time charge.

"After that it's your's," he said. "They keep getting smaller and coming down in price."

Decision Waits On Gene Kelly

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Song-and-dance man Gene Kelly has rented a house while he decides whether to buy another place or rebuild the farmhouse-style residence destroyed by fire Dec. 22.

The dollar loss from the fire in Kelly's home of 40 years, ignited by lights on a Christmas tree, has yet to be determined, said publicist Dale Olson on Tuesday.

"I'm sure it's in excess of $1 million," he said.

Kelly, 71, is waiting for the insurance to be settled before making up his mind about whether to rebuild, Olson said. Meanwhile, he's moved into a rental house in Beverly Hills.

Kelly's 21-year-old son, Tim, and their two dogs are living with thee entertainer, Olson said.

Gene Barry Is Ordered To Pay

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Gene Barry, starring in the Broadway smash "La Cage Aux Folles," and a business partner have been ordered to pay a former partner over $500,000.

Barry, 61, Michael Rafton, a San Francisco area lawyer and banker, and Harold Taines, described in court papers as a millionaire investor who lives in Beverly Hills, set up a photo-processing business in December 1980.

But Taines was forced out by Barry and Rafton in August 1981, according to Taines's lawyer, Jay F. Gordon.

State Justice Arthur W. Lonschein ruled Dec. 29 that Barry and Rafton, through Gene Barry One Hour Photo Process Inc., must pay Taines the $215,000 he loaned the company to get it started — plus $237,000 representing the value of Taines's shares when he was forced out. With interest, the sum will be about $565,000, Gordon said.

Debut For Two TV Comedies

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A comedy that harpoons corporate America sounds like a good idea. A comedy, starring Martin Mull as a TV commentator who's suburban lifestyle could benefit from his own advice, sounds worn but promising.

But "Empire" and "Domestic Life," CBS' new comedies debuting tonight, must be placed in the category of two ideas whose time came and went. Poor execution turned both into dimwitted, exaggerated, humorless programs.

"Domestic Life" offers another warped view of family life. Martin Crane (Mull) and his wife, Candy (Judith-Marie Bergen), are the sniveling juveniles, while the children are wise beyond their years. Ho-hum. Wouldn't it be novel and funny to, one day, have adults act like adults and kids like kids?

Son Harold (Christian Brackett-Zika) is a smart-alecky, butterball kid who's been lucky in the stock market. This inspires wearily predictable humor, cuch as: "Can daddy borrow $20 so we can go out and eat?"

Daughter Didi (Megan Follows) is another of TV's bratty teen-agers, prompting the inevitable jokes about borrowing the car tonight and, in next week's equally unfunny episode, mooning over a Polynesian tribesman she met on a vacation.

Mull has done some nice turns in the right vehicles ("Fernwood 2-Night"), but his usual aw-shucks delivery and phony sincerity are grating and awfully hammy here. He and Steve Martin are the show's creators, which won't enhance their comic credibilities.

Miss Bergen is bland and embarrassing in her attempts at physical humor. According to an industry insider, when "Domestic Life" was an NBC pilot, Valerie Perrine played the wife to a flaky frenzy. "It's lost its wackiness," said the source after seeing the CBS version.

Once again, local TV news, which deserves potshots, gets ludicrously farcical treatment. One co-anchor is a woman (Mie Hunt) who, several times next week, will seductively plug a 28-part series on SEX. The male anchor (Robert Ridgely) is a pompous buffoon and also Martin's leachy neighbor.

Martin does inocuous lifestyle commentaries on the news. In tonight's episode, he suggests that hubbies buy presents for their wives, "and you'll turn down the lights faster than you can say Burt and Lonnie."

"Domestic Life" doesn't have a single likable or intriguing character. That's also one failing of "Empire," but at least "Empire" has an excuse. It's hard to find sympathetic characters when your premise is slashing broadside at the back-stabbers in a conglomerate.

Unfortunately, each conniving executive turns into a bumbling, pea-brained stereotype, mirrored by a bumbling, pea-brained secretary. The characters never come across as offbeat or zany, just childish and vicious.

Wicked satire is fragile merriment at best, but, if done right, "Empire" could have been outlandishly funny, like "Airplane" or its TV derivative, "Police Squad."

And, in some of the sight gags, such as the board room equipped with oxygen tanks and airline sick bags, there is a promising start. But the dialogue never keeps pace, ending up as sick humor, not dark humor.

Patrick Macnee, as Calvin Cromwell, runs Empire Industries with the philosophy that "anxiety breeds excellence." The dignified Macnee is the best thing about "Empire" but he's given little to do, except preside over a board meeting in each of the first two episodes.

The lineup of his fearful underlings includes an aging boozer who blackens his hair (Dick O'Neill), an insensitive snake who uses an affair with his secretary to get what he wants (Michael McGuire), an unscrupulous legal head (Howard Platt), a sadistic, bigoted security chief whose answer to everything is bullets and bombs, and the insecure, unprincipled sales head (Richard Masur) whose wife (Christine Belford) has all the business moxie in the family.

The only honest employee is Ben Christian (Dennis Dugan), the research vice president. Dugan, who was Capt. America on "Hill Street Blues," is an intense actor who seems out of his element playing comedy. Actually, there isn't any right element in "Empire."

Broadcast Jobs See Advances

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The broadcast industry's work force grew hardly at all in 1983 and minorities and women managed to post only modest gains, a new report shows.

The report, prepared annually by the Federal Communications Commission, found the nation's radio and TV stations added only 1,207 new full-time employees during the past calendar year — up from 159,740 employees in 1982 to 160,947 in 1983 — for an increase of less than one percent.

By contrast, the industry had increased its full-time work force by 3.2 percent in 1982 and by 5.2 percent in 1981.

Minorities and women held slightly more of the total jobs in 1983 than in 1982, the agency added, but in each case the gains totaled one percent or less.

The report focuses both on total industry employment as well as on the number of workers in what are considered the highest-paying, top four employment categories. Those categories include officials and managers+ professionals; technicians, and sales workers.

Overall, the FCC said females held 57,532 or 35.7 percent of the total full-time jobs last year. In 1982, women held 55,929 of 159,740 jobs or 35.0 percent of the total.

Minorities, meantime, held 24,558 or 15.3 percent of the total full-time jobs counted in 1983, the FCC said. By comparison, minorities held 24,180 or 15.1 percent of the total jobs counted in 1982.

Women did slightly better, however, in increasing their presence in the highest-paying jobs, the commission said.

Of the total 160,947 full-time positions reported in 1983, 132,773 were listed among the top-four classifications. Women held 35,791 or 26.9 percent of those top-four jobs in 1983, up from 25.9 percent in 1982, the report shows.

Minorities, on the other hand, held 16,988 or 12.8 percent of the top-four jobs last year, up only slightly from the 12.7 percent they held in 1982, the FCC said.

The minority designation includes blacks, Asians, American Indians, Alaskan natives and Hispanics.

Just Wanted To Be Rid Of It

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — An Air Force officer says he always thought about finding a small fortune, but when he found it all he wanted to do was get rid of it.

Lt. Col. John Kolar was driving his daughter to a New Year's Eve party when he spotted a small bag in the roadway. Thinking it was "a little kid's toy purse," he picked it up.

It contained $1,913 in cash and another $813 in checks.

"You always think about finding a fortune, but when I opened that pouch and saw three inches of solid money, all I wanted to do was get rid of it," said Kolar, who serves as a liaison with the Civil Air Patrol.

Kolar returned the money to the man who lost it, Vito Coraci, 38.

"I never thought there were such good people out there in the world," Coraci said. "Trust in God and trust in other people, too."

Gratifying And Trying

By DOUGLAS GRANT MINE
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — These new democratic days in Argentina are both gratifying and trying for the Mothers of the Plaza de Mayo.

The women's seven-year struggle to learn what happened to their "disappeared" sons and daughters — the "desaparecidos," as they are called in Spanish — has not ended with the inauguration of President Raul Alfonsin, a civilian, and the end of the military dictatorship.

But the new government shares the mothers' determination to see justice done regarding the abduction, torture and murder of thousands of suspected "subversives" in the military years.

And the mothers, who under the dictatorship were beaten and arrested by police and villified or ridiculed by some of the public, are being consulted by Alfonsin and hailed by the media for their tireless efforts.

On Thursday of last week, as on more than 350 Thubcdays before, mothers put on white kerchiefs embroidered with the name of their missing child and marched with supporters in a circle in the center of the Plaza de Mayo. The women's group takes its name from their weekly meeting place. The plaza faces Government House, also known as Casa Rosada, the pink presidential palace where Alfonsin works.

Despite the scorching sun of the Southern Hemisphere summer and the year-end vacations, a thousand people marched — three times the average weekly turnout a year ago.

Argentine newspapers in recent days have run macabre photographs of court-ordered exhumations of bodies buried illegally by security forces in "No Name" sections of cemeteries during the years after the 1976 military coup. Weekly newsmagazines carry first-person accounts of torture at the hands of the police or armed forces.

Such media coverage did not exist under the military dictatorship.

"Every day these terrifying things appear in the newspapers," said Maria Adela Antokoletz, whose son Daniel was arrested by security forces Oct. 10, 1976, and has not been heard from since. "It is nothing new for us. But the pictures and testimonies all at once make it nearly impossible to bear."

The 66-year-old woman was one of a half-dozen mothers who spoke with The Associated Press at their downtown headquarters about their expectations and tribulations.

"A mother cannot look at these pictures of skulls and bones without thinking it could be her son," said Mrs. Antokoletz, whose son was 40 when he disappeared.

But, she said, the media coverage "forces the people to open their eyes to the horror of these years. After all the lies they told about us (mothers) being crazy or agents of an international anti-Argentine campaign, they have to admit the truth."

Soon after he was inaugurated on Dec. 10, Alfonsin, a lawyer and human rights activist who heads the Radical Party, ordered the prosecution on torture and murder charges of nine retired generals and admirals who served on three successive military juntas that governed the country from the coup until 1982.

Other charges stemming from disappearances have been pressed against at least five other generals or admirals, including former President Reynaldo Bignone, an army general, who transferred power to Alfonsin last month.

The military regime consistently refused to provide information about the missing, saying only that they were the toll from what the generals termed "the dirty war" against subversion.

Various guerrilla organizations were active here during the mid-1970s. But local and international human rights organizations maintain that many of the estimated 6,000 to 15,000 people who disappeared had nothing to do with the revolutionaries.

"We feel somewhat disconcerted," said Mrs. Antokoletz. "We no longer have an enemy clearly in front of us. This government listens, consults; it has good intentions."

Alfonsin has named a 16-member "National Commission on the Disappearance of Persons" to investigate rights abuses and to forward relevant information to the judiciary. The mothers wanted a bicameral congressional commission to investigate. They wanted a "political condemnation" of the dictatorship by Congress, with sentences imposed by the courts.

Adolfo Perez Esquivel, the 1980 Nobel Peace Prize laureate and a human rights activist, met with Alfonsin before Christmas and said the president told him investigations had produced no evidence that some of the clandestine detention centers might still be operating.

"If indeed none of the disappeared people is alive, we are looking at a case of genocide," Perez Esquival told the AP. "It is a crime against humanity and must be treated juridically as such."

"It is a sad situation for the mothers," said Mrs. Antokoletz.

African Frog Too Durable

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Biologists at the Metropolitan Water District know nearly everything about the African clawed frog — except how to get rid of it.

They can readily tell you this about the amphibian:

—It was imported to this country in the 1940s to be used for pregnancy tests and medical research, then made its way to pet stores and eventually into lakes and reservoirs.

—It's ugly, with glistening, mucous-slick skin.

—It secretes a poisonous toxin through its skin when it is grabbed or bitten by an animal.

—It eats voraciously, preying on young native fish. And it will devour its young when it runs out of other food.

—It multiplies rapidly.

But the water agency doesn't know how to dislodge the frogs from their adopted home in San Joaquin Reservoir near Newport Beach.

The amphibians were discovered in the reservoir six years ago and about all the agency has succeeded in doing is keeping the frogs from spreading to other water systems by erecting giant screens over water outlets.

The problem has worsened since the agency began draining the 3,000 acre-foot reservoir for cleaning and repair two months ago because as the water level drops, the frogs will look elsewhere for homes unless they are destroyed.

Man of Vision

In 1812, a three year-old boy was accidentally blinded by a leatherworking awl in his father's shop. At the age of 10, the boy entered the National Institute for the Blind in Paris. While there, he developed a system of reading and writing for the blind which used holes punched in paper. Ironically, Braille used the very instrument which had blinded him to punch the holes. Louis Braille was born on this day in 1809.

Voters Abroad Face Problems

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American who is away from home on Election Day must get forms notarized at four separate times to vote absentee — a nuisance if you are just visiting another state, but pretty near impossible if you are in a remote corner of the world.

Doing missionary work in Mozambique, for example.

The southern African republic of Mozambique stretches more than 1,000 miles north of the capital, Maputo. Four officers at the U.S. Embassy are authorized to act as notaries.

So the conscientious American citizen in northern Mozambique — if there is one — would have to make four 1,000-mile trips to Maputo.

Said Ursula Shears, in charge of voting issues in Washington for Democrats Abroad:

"You have to take an oath when you send in the federal postcard asking for a ballot, again when you send in a state form that does the same thing, a third time when you register, and fourth time for the ballot itself."

Henry Valentino, head of the Federal Voting Assistance Program, estimates that 4 million to 5 million Americans who live in other countries are eligible to vote — a source of support that candidates hardly tap.

Not all are as isolated as the few in Mozambique. About 2 million are in the armed forces, stationed from Iceland to the South Pacific, and on ships at sea. Another 2.5 million to 3 million are civilians who have retired, or belong to service families, or have jobs that keep them away from home, or just happen to be travelling on Election Day.

Many are U.S. citizens born in Italy, Greece, Poland, Yugoslavia and other lands who have gone back to the old country, where they can live better on a U.S. Social Security pension than they could in America. Some are commuters from Canada and Mexico, the countries which have the largest numbers of American citizens.

For most, the source of voting difficulties are back home. States do not generally require four notarizations, but several require two or three.

Valentino says the main problem is that many states wait until 20 days before Election Day to mail out ballots, and require them back on the day itself, which is not enough time to accommodate slow postal service in many parts of the world. Valentino would like it stretched to 40 or 45 days.

He estimates that outside the armed forces only about 34 percent of those eligible to vote even tried to do so in 1980, compared with a turnout of nearly 54 percent in the country as a whole.

American Citizens Abroad, a non-partisan organization based in Geneva, Switzerland, ran a survey to find out why. Many citizens said they did not know they were eligible.

Some also fear that voting will make them more likely to be asked for state taxes they might not otherwise pay, since each vote in the presidential election must be counted in a particular state or in the District of Columbia. Voting does not in itself make a voter liable for state taxes but it can be used as evidence in a doubtful case.

Generally voters abroad vote from the state where they last lived when they were at home.

Democrats Abroad and Republicans Abroad both arrange for voters to participate in primary elections.

Seeks Clue In Baby Babble

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — The babble of babies, often dismissed as mere noise-making, can provide clues to possible hearing or learning disorders, a professor says.

The absence of babble — or a lack of resemblance of the babble to the parents' native language — by children as young as 3 months can indicate hearing disabilities or physical handicaps in the mouth and throat, said Michael Lewis, professor of pediatrics at the Rutgers Medical School of the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey.

Left uncorrected, such problems can make it difficult for the child to learn, he said in a telephone interview Tuesday. He added that once parents and doctors discover the problem, they can speak louder or have children fitted for a hearing aid so that they do not miss out on further interaction.

Lewis is putting together a program to make parents and doctors more aware of the developmental problems that can plague children between the ages of 3 months and 3 years. It will focus on doctors' screening procedures rather than the children themselves, Lewis said.

The project, which began last fall and will last for four years, is being funded with a $600,000 grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. Similar funding has been provided for related research at Vanderbilt University in Tennessee, the state of Florida, the University of Colorado and the University of Iowa.

Lewis also began a three-year project last fall, funded by a $400,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Education, to study children between the ages of 2 and 5 who have been slow to learn how to talk. He said children in about 60 families will be studied.

"We see too many children at 2 (years of age) who should have been seen a year earlier," Lewis said of the project focusing on the younger group of children. "The later we do it, the more difficult it is."

"The quality and amount of babbling that a child does is a very important indication of communication developments.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JANUARY 5, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until midafternoon you find that you can have a very exciting time and you would be wise to put unusual ideas into execution since you have a good chance they will work. Obstacles arise later.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 1): Contact your most fascinating friends in the morning for assistance with your finest plans. You may find it difficult to contact others after lunch.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) By contacting the influential you can enhance your career a good deal today. Take care later that a partner does not bother you in some way.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be alert to progressive ideas in the morning. Your hunches are good early in the day but not later. Be happy at home.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Do whatever will please your mate during the daytime. Forget that very expensive recreation you have in mind. Be practical.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Contact those in business today. Be very happy at home tonight. Do nothing that can jeopardize your present security.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Put more effort into your regular work and get far better results. Don't let communications irritate you later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get appointments set up for looking into new interests before you get to work on dull money affairs. Show a little spunk.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A good day to get your home fixed up more to your own liking. Then have friends in for luncheon, but not in the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You get good ideas how to add to income in the morning; do something about them right away. Get your property intrinciscally improved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have excellent ideas about gaining personal aims so work on them quickly, and then tonight you can relax. Avoid groups.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Show your originality. Avoid bigwigs who criticise you. Home is your best bet tonight. Set up appointments for later.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Contact a good friend who wants to see you get ahead. Avoid new set-ups later. You can attain some desired wish. Drive with utmost care.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be a New Era person who will fit in very nicely to modern homes, businesses and activities so be sure your progeny has free reign once the lesson of discipline is learned. This is one who will do things differently from others.

Jewish Underground Linked To Holy Site Attacks

By ALLYN FISHER
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli authorities suspect an organized Jewish underground is to blame for a series of grenade attacks against Christian and Moslem holy sites in Jerusalem and the West Bank.

Anonymous callers claimed responsibility in the name of "Terror Against Terror," and some Israeli newspapers have linked the anti-Arab actions to extremists in the Jewish settlement movement in the occupied West Bank.

A Greek Orthodox nun and two Moslems have been wounded in the eight grenade attacks reported since Dec. 9, police said. No arrests have been made.

In the latest attack, booby-trapped grenades went off in two mosques in the West Bank town of Hebron on Friday, the Moslem sabbath, wounding a worshiper.

As in previous attacks near Bethlehem and Jerusalem, an anonymous telephone caller told Israeli radio stations the grenades were planted by TNT, the Hebrew initials for "Terror Against Terror."

The callers reportedly ended each conversation with a slogan such as "Jewish blood is not cheap" or a quotation from Psalm 94, which begins "O Lord God, to whom vengeance belongeth, show thyself."

"Terror Against Terror" was the slogan of a group blamed for setting fire to a leftist party office and telephoned death threats to several moderate Israeli politicians in the 1970s.

But the original group is believed to have disbanded with the jailing two years ago of a key leader, said Yossi Sarid, a Parliament member who sits on the Foreign Affairs and Security Committee, which is investigating the recent bombings.

Sarid said the booby-trapped grenades were of Israeli army issue and the attacks appeared to be the work of a more sophisticated and organized group than the original TNT.

"It is clear that there is one group because the method is always the same," Sarid said.

Jerusalem police spokesman Ziv Rotem said investigators were "checking the possibility" that a single group was responsible.

Israel Television reported Monday night that military authorities set up roadblocks at entrances to major West Bank towns to search for possible TNT members. The report showed soldiers searching an Israeli car, and said the measure was causing unrest among Jewish settlers.

Investigators suggested that the extremist group also may be responsible for arson against Arab-owned cars in a mixed Israeli-Arab neighborhood in East Jerusalem.

The grenade attacks and vandalism are viewed as retaliation for the Dec. 6 bombing of an Israeli bus in a Jerusalem suburb. The Palestine Liberation Organization claimed responsibility for the attack, which killed six Jews and injured 44.

Officials have declined direct comment when asked if they believed TNT also carried out the June 1980 bombings of the cars of three West Bank mayors, two of whom were crippled.

Avraham Achituv, head of the Israeli secret police between 1976 and 1980, has said there was "heavy suspicion" that Jews were behind the 1980 bombing and a July 1983 shooting at the Islamic University in Hebron in which three Palestinian students were killed.

Writing in the leftist Davar newspaper last August, Achituv said there was suspicion that a small, tightly knit group of Jewish vigilantes existed. He blamed the government for not dealing firmly enough with crimes by West Bank settlers.

The recent attacks have been condemned by both Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and his political opponents.

"Any one who understands the ABC of democracy knows that one of the worst dangers to democracy is the existence of an underground," said Sarid, a member of the opposition Labor Party.

Eliahu Ben-Elissar, a member of the governing coalition who is close to Shamir, said in a speech in Haifa that the attacks "make me feel ashamed. Whether it's the work of individuals or an organization, a shadow looms over us."

The independent daily Haaretz said in an editorial Sunday, "Suspicion must be centered on the same Jewish camp that claims in principle that Israel's Arabs have no right to a homeland here."

One of the groups cited by the paper was Kach, a radical settlement movement headed by the U.S.-born Rabbi Meir Kahane, who advocates expulsion of Arabs from Israel and the West Bank.

Spokeswoman Barbara Ginzberg refused to say if Kach was involved in the attacks but told The Associated Press, "We condone terror against terror and we urge terror against terror."

A spokesman for the Council of Jewish Settlements in Judea and Samaria (West Bank) condemned the attacks.

"It is a crime whose perpetrators must be caught and punished," said Israel Harel, whose group represents most of the 30,000 settlers in the West Bank. "To my knowledge this TNT has no roots among us."

Welfare Sleuth Has Seen Abuse

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Gerald York has seen all sorts of welfare abuses as a fraud investigator — from welfare recipients who drive Cadillacs to pick up their benefits to people who buy guns and beer with food stamps.

York, 35, has been Alamance County's chief welfare fraud investigator for six years and is considered one of the state's best. He is often called upon to teach officials in other counties how to nab freeloaders.

In one recent Alamance County case, a "poor" food-stamp recipient was found to own 70 cars.

The man, who because of his large family received about $600 a month in food stamps, would buy two or three old cars for $200 to $300 apiece from dealers who would accept the stamps as cash. Then the cheater would fix the cars and sell them.

"He had a nice little operation going," said York, whose suspicions were aroused after noticing a number of cars with dealer tags parked in the man's yard.

York said a conservative estimate is that 4 to 6 percent of the state's welfare benefits are received fraudulently.

"Investigating welfare fraud is a sticky problem," said Raymond Riddle, state coordinator for fraud detection and prevention in the state Department of Human Resources. "You don't want all the investigators to go out on a witch hunt, intimidate people and step on people's rights; but you have to maintain a program of integrity. You need to find that happy medium."

York recently helped establish a network of welfare fraud investigators in the state's Region II, a 16-county area in the heart of the Piedmont. The group meets quarterly to share notes and discuss successes and failures.

Only about 50 of the state's 100 counties have a fraud investigation program, York said.

Guilford County, second to Mecklenburg in size of food stamp case load in the state, collected the highest amount of repayments between September 1982 to February 1983 — $33,000. At the other end of the scale, New Hanover County collected $39 for the same period.

Food stamps, which have become aa second currency across the nation, bring about 50 cents on the dollar in Alamance County.

Others cheat on the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program and Medicaid, receiving more than they're entitled to get. It's almost a losing battle, but York has never lost a court case.

His three years as a Burlington police officer left him with plenty of savvy in handling investigations, said Ed Inman, Alamance County social services director.

"He knows how to draw warrants and what to do and not do in investigations, and he knows his way around the courts," Inman said. "He's good."

People caught cheating on welfare generally are taken to court. If convicted, they're usually put on probation, fined and ordered to repay the amount received fraudulently. Some lose their aid eligibility.

Seek Expand Justice Dept.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration will seek a $200 million increase in the Justice Department budget for fiscal 1985, with most of the money going toward more federal law officers, a department official says.

The added money, if approved, would amount to an increase of about 6 percent over the department's current budget, Deputy Attorney General Edward C. Schmults said.

The request would bring the Justice Department's budget in the next fiscal year to more than $3.5 billion, representing a more than $1 billion increase since Reagan took office, he said.

VOA Station's Workers Deliver U.S. Messages

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Workers at the Voice of America station northeast of Cincinnati say they're broadcasting more than ever and must constantly tinker with aging equipment so they can deliver the United States' message to far-away places.

There is a 19-member crew at the Bethany Relay Station west of Mason, one of five relay stations in the United States that transmit Voice of America programs.

Besides the Mason station, there are two relay stations in California and one in Greenville, N.C., and Marathon, Fla.

They broadcast in 42 languages at countries all around the globe.

The Voice of America is the global radio network of the U.S. Information Agency, which is aimed at promoting understanding abroad of the United States, its people, culture and policies.

At the 730-acre site in Butler County, transmitters carry to Central and Latin America, Africa and Southern Europe. Three transmitters broadcast at 250,000 watts each — five times the power of the largest American commercial station, said Newman Martindale, station manager.

Programs are received by telephone line from the USIA's studio in Washington and relayed abroad.

"We do no programming or announcing. We don't even have an outlet for a microphone," Martindale said.

Martindale said some thought was given to closing the Bethany station several years ago, but that world conditions like the hostage situation in Iran changed that.

"We're running at a higher level than we did before," he said. "We are carrying more program hours than ever before."

Martindale is enthused at reports that the federal government is considering providing money to update VOA equipment. He says about half of the Bethany station equipment needs it — badly.

"We desperately need some modernization because a lot of our equipment is old," Martindale said. "We make it do, but it's a constant struggle."

Station personnel make many of the parts needed to keep the station on the air, he said.

The Bethany station was constructed in 1943 by the Crosley Broadcasting Corp., which operated it under contract to the federal government until 1963, when the USIA took it over, Martindale said.

It was one of several stations leased by the government during the early days of World War II, he said. The first VOA broadcast went on the air in 1942, 79 days after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Among the considerations for the Mason-area site, Martindale said, were a flat area for the antennas, availability of electricity and an inland location.

The VOA provides a variety of programs for its listeners. News is a major ingredient, but programming also includes sports, music, features and "how-to" programs, Martindale said.

He said jamming, which some governments use in an attempt to keep the programs from reaching their people, was lessening, but has resumed in Poland and some other Eastern European countries.

It's The Way One Speaks

LONDON (AP) — It's not what you say in Britain that counts, but the way you say it, a linguistics expert says, because Britons judge each others' character by their accents more than ever before.

The upper-crust and upwardly mobile middle classers who speak the Queen's English, known technically as "Received Pronunciation," are considered to possess "qualities like honesty, integrity, intelligence, ambition and even good looks," Professor John Honey of Leicester Unoversity said.

But Liverpudlians who talk "Scouse" like the Beatles, Londoners with chirpy Cockney accents, Glaswegians with rough Clydeside burrs and people from Birmingham with vowel-mangling "Brummie" accents command little public esteem, Honey writes in an article in Personnel Management magazine.

"Speakers of the less prestigious accents, especially if their speech contains nonstandard grammar or vocabulary, will have more difficulty than RP speakers of standard English in asserting their rights, whether in court or when stopped by a policeman, or in a tight spot anywhere when credibility is at a premium," the professor wrote.

Top of the list are those with "marked RP," people who pronounce "off" as "orf" and "lost" as "lorst."

"Some, but not all, members of the royal family use this variety," Honey said. "'Bad' may sound more like 'bed' and speakers like Prince Charles move 'abite the hice.'"

That means "about the house."

Cincinnati Church Today Serves As Marketplace

NEW USE — Jim Verdin, co-owner of St. Paul's Church Mart stands in the loft inside the former Roman Catholic Church turned clearing house in Cincinnati.

By JOHN NOLAN
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — A former Roman Catholic church converted to a market for church equipment is more than just a clearing house — it is an effective new marketing concept, a co-owner says.

Once known as St. Paul's Church, the building is now called St. Paul's Church Mart to denote its new purpose.

But Jim Verdin, co-owner of the building and vice president of the I.T. Verdin Co. which operates the mart, considers it more than just a place to sell church organs, vestments, bells, chimes and tapestries.

"It's a whole marketing and advertising concept," he said.

Verdin, who oversaw the $1.3 million renovation of the 1850-vintage building, said the refurbishing had also helped spur rehabilitation of the aging neighborhood where it is located. Some nearby buildings have been demolished or are undergoing rehabilitation.

The red-brick former church, topped by a clock tower and gold dome, occupies part of a block in Cincinnati's Over-the-Rhine neighborhood. The environment is one of narrow streets between aging, brick buildings squeezed tightly together.

The former church, repaired after an 1899 fire, was deconsecrated in 1974 and stood idle until 1981. The Verdin Co., a family founded, fifth-generation firm which makes bells, chimes and carillons for sale to churches, was looking for a base from which to sell its wares and became interested.

City officials, anxious to promote neighborhood renovation, pitched in to help. The city bought the property and sold it to the Verdin family in 1981 for $10 and is helping put in a parking area, Verdin said.

He said of the building's purchase price, "The $10 was nice, but then we had to put about $1.3 million in it."

Vandals had spared the building during its seven years of idleness, but plenty of restoration work remained. Leaking water had ruined some plaster and there was cleaning to do on paintings and stained-glass windows.

The restoration was completed in January 1983 on the 153rd anniversary of the church's completion.

"We didn't destroy the building's integrity," Verdin said. "We kept the original design, we just enhanced it."

The effort didn't go unnoticed. In September, the Ohio Historical Society awarded a historic preservation citation to St. Paul's Church Mart. Marta Tovkach, who manages the mart, accepted the award.

Other firms which make products for churches are displaying wares at the mart, including the Cincinnati-based Baldwin Piano & Organ Co. Firms have also found they can reduce advertising costs by jointly participating in direct-mail sales campaigns.

"Virtually every church amenity is here," Verdin said. "It's worked out very well."

Development Framework

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new industrial and technological cooperation agreement between the United States and China provides a framework for expanded U.S. involvement in developing Chinese industry and commerce, the Washington Post reports.

The newspaper quoted administration officials as saying that the pact may be signed as a high point of next week's visit to Washington by Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang.

The Post said the agreement is modeled on pacts that the United States has with a few other countries including Brazil and Egypt and that it identifies areas of special emphasis in U.S. government-financed studies and private business ventures. The most important areas, said the newspaper, are coal mining, development of oil and hydroelectric power resources and non-ferrous metals.

Do-Nothing Bill Drafted

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Although he is still in his freshman term as a lawmaker, state Sen. James Pappas thinks he has found a "bill for all sessions."

"All I've heard since I came here is that people say we introduce too many bills, we don't do anything, and everything we try to do gets screwed up some way," Pappas said.

In that spirit, Pappas said, he has drafted a "do-nothing" bill for the 1984 Legislature which convenes today.

According to a draft of the legislation, "the Do Nothing Bill will not intend anything, define anything, provide any powers or duties, provide for fees or penalties, it will not declare any emergencies, repeal any statutes or cost any funds."

The proposal continues:

"There are no provisions for the creation of a do nothing agency or department. There already exist too many boards and governing bodies which are fulfilling the requirements of the bill."

Pappas said he realized that even a do nothing bill could run afoul of bureaucracy.

So a section says: "Any action taken under the Do Nothing Bill will violate the letter as well as the spirit of the bill."

But in keeping with the author's intent, "the bill will do nothing to the violators."

Most Zoo Beasts Are Survivors

CINCINNATI (AP) — The frigid weather Ohio has been having lately may not be fit for man but most of the beasts at the Cincinnati Zoo are weathering it, although some other zoos are having troubles.

"Every now and then the ducks get frozen in the ice and can't get loose," says Robert Lotshaw, the zoo's general animal curator.

Since ducks need access to open water for survival, Lotshaw said bales of straw are lined up on the zoo's Swan Lake as a wind barrier to keep the water from freezing.

The abating cold wave which put most of the country in a deep freeze had a more severe effect at some of the nation's zoos. At the Oklahoma City Zoo, 10 of the 500 antelope died.

"They aren't freezing to death," said Oklahoma City zoo veterinarian Ed Ramsay, "but the cold aggravates any problem they already have. It's the sick ones, the old ones and the young ones" that are hurt most, he said.

At the North Carolina Zoological Park in Asheboro, two African crown cranes, normally expected to withstand cold temperatures, are listed in "guarded" condition after being exposed to sub-zero temperatures in their open habitats.

Lotshaw, a zoo veteran of 23 years, said the Cincinnati facility is accustomed to the annual cold weather and that no animals have died because of it this season.

"We start getting ready for the cold weather in advance," he said. "We know sooner or later we're going to get hit so we're usually ready, but I think it took the other zoos by surprise."

Warm bedding, extra food and wind shelter are provided for animals that remain outside during the winter.

Many of the animals prefer the cold.

"Alpacas, llamas and polar bears love this kind of weather," Lotshaw explained. "When it gets really cold we move them inside, but normally they can take winter outside with no problem."

Japanese snow monkeys, as their name suggests, also enjoy the cold weather. The monkeys live on an island in the zoo surrounded by a moat. To make sure the moat water doesn't freeze, a bubble machine keeps the water circulating.

"If the moat froze, the monkeys could walk across the ice and have free roam of the whole park," Lotshaw said.

The handlers are constantly watching animals for frostbite and pay special attention to the birds.

Lotshaw said birds such as crown cranes and domestic chickens are very susceptible because of their exposed wattles and combs, the fleshy skin around their faces and necks.

The muntjaks, members of the deer family, are usually the first to get frostbite.

"Sometimes they just refuse to use common sense so we have to pay particular attention to them. We have to watch for early signs of lameness that might indicate frostbite," he said.

Big Gash Cut In Icebreaker

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Nonstop pumping cleared extensive flooding from the Coast Guard icebreaker Westwind after an Antarctic ice shelf cut a 30-foot gash in its side, the Coast Guard said.

Apparently out of danger, the icebreaker headed for Seymour Island in the Weddell Sea on Monday. No injuries were reported.

The accident happened shortly before noon Sunday just outside the Antarctic Circle, 780 miles south of the Falkland Islands, the report said. The rip was six feet above the water line.

Coast Guard spokesman Ken Freeze said the ship was breaking through summer ice when a shift pushed the vessel into a shelf on a 100-foot ice cliff.

Hope Save 3 Canal Boats

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The remains of three 18th- and 19th-century boats unearthed this summer in a downtown construction pit could deteriorate in warm spring weather unless a special holding tank is found for them.

The boats, found in what was the Great Basin of the James River and Kanawha Canal system, are under the frigid waters of Reynold's Metals Co'.s Tidewater Connection Lock in downtown Richmond.

But as temperatures start to rise in the spring, bacteria and other water organisims will become active and begin to eat away at the boat parts.

The boats still exist only because there was too little oxygen to sustain the destructive organisms under the 20 feet of silt, rubbish and dirt that covered them until the excavation this summer.

Further deterioration can be stopped by soaking the boats for a year in gradually stronger solutions of polethylene glycol, said Lyle E. Browning, archaeologist for the Virginia Department of Highways and Transportation and a director of the Archaeological Society of Virginia.

The chemical displaces the water in the wood and solidifies, Browning said. "Basically it creates a fossil."

Browning said he has been promised that the chemical will be donated once he finds a tank in which to soak the boats. But lining up the tank has been frustrating, and some money is needed to take full advantage of what Browning believes is "one of the most important sites ever got at in this state."

The formation of the James River Co. in 1785 was the "beginning of the first navigation system in the country," Browning said.

"But more important than that ... was that it was the first opportunity anybody ever had ... in an excavation atmosphere to look at the various types of canal boats about which there had been a lot of conjecture, very few drawings, some photographs from the mid-19th century."

The archaeological work on the site is largely the result of the enthusiam of Browning and canal buffs William E. Trout III and James Moore III. They managed to salvage parts of six boats with only $2,500 and donations of euqipment and services.

Browning believes the site may have contained pieces of perhaps 30 more boats. "But we really had more than we could deal with. We had to make some hard decisions. You can spread yourself so thin that you can't get anything done at all."

They decided to save as much as possible of four different types of boats — a packet, a coal barge and two flat bottomed boats called bateau, one from before 1800.

Trout, president of the Virginia Canal & Navigations Society, said the bateaux will make it possible to build a reproduction of the boats and "see if we can rediscover how to navigate one."

But the canal enthusiasts still have to find a soaking tank for the boats, do more research to put their finds in perspective and come up with funding if they are to mount an exhibit.

Premarital Counseling Service

My daughter was married 8 months ago. She is 21 years old and has been working in a bank. It was there that she met her husband, who is two years older than she.

We spent a lot of money for a lovely wedding. Now they want to get divorced. What is it with these young people? This happened to a lot of our friends. I know this is not a medical problem but I would like to have you opinion because I know you are interested in young people. — Mrs. E.D.M., Washington

Dear Mrs. M.:

An "epidemic" is an accurate way to describe the large number of divorces that occur in today's society. The conflict and the heartache associated with separation and divorce often leave indelible marks on the psychological structure of all the people involved.

It would be highly presumptuous if I were to venture an answer to the complexity of the causes of divorce. There are so many factors, that choosing any one to concentrate on would be most ineffective.

I really believe, however, that there is a need for counseling services before marriage takes place. The counseling services that are now available are unfortunately directed to people whose marriages are strained and are at the breaking point. This type of counseling is far less effective than would be a total portrait of marriage, its joys, its conflicts, its stresses, and the need for mutual adjustment.

For many years premarital blood examinations have been required to be sure that no infectious diseases exist in either of the partners who are contemplating marriage.

Why not a premarital service that will actively portray the many problems that may arise after marriage? Unfortunately most young people feel that they know "all the answers" and are quite capable of sidetracking the pitfalls that marriage may present.

Courses in living together could be taught by a group of doctors, religious advisers, psychologists, psychiatrists, social workers, family planners and social scientists. Teaching on a group basis or on an individual one need not be so expensive as to be a burden.

The investment of time in such a prenuptial study group might open avenues of discussion that would ultimately prevent the calamities and the high statistics of divorce that occur today.

Families of young people who are about to be married would learn a great deal about their own attitudes toward their children if they, too, became involved in such counseling services. Far too many parents become deeply involved in the physical and emotional conflicts that arise during the early stages of their children's marriages. They, too, would gain excellent insight into the proper involvement with their children from such sessions.

A successful marriage is an artistic and delicate balance of many forces. Expert instruction would be of tremendous value in helping us fortify ourselves against the lurking threats to that success.

Antelope Faced Disastrous Toll

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Killer weather, a fence blocking access to traditional wintering grounds, pets that turned predator, and trucks and trains appear to have taken a heavy toll on hundreds of antelope in the Red Rim area, wildlife officials say.

"We are starting to see mortality all over this herd unit," said Game and Fish Biologist Dave Moody, who completed an aerial survey of southern Wyoming's Red Rim area Friday. Exact numbers are still being tabulated, but hundreds of antelope appeared to be missing.

Rancher Taylor Lawrence erected the 28-mile fence to protect the range for his livestock, but agreed to take sections of it down in early December after protests from wildlife officials.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — WHICH SCHOOL BOARD'S DECISION WAS BASED ON PRINCIPAL?

Today's Cryptoquip clue: V equals I.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

When you hold a trump stack against Trump Coup Tommy, our bumbler who seems to do well only when everything is going against him, it is sound policy to take tricks when they are offered — you might not get another chance. Some people never learn, as this deal proves.

West's opening bid of one diamond, designed to leave him with an easy rebid should partner respond one no trump, is questionable on this distribution. A bid of one club should leave him in a position where he could handle any response. The rest of the auction, except for North's double, seems as though the players were looking at different hands from the ones in the diagram. West thought he had a lock with his double.

West led the ace of clubs and continued with a low club. Tommy called for dummy's ten and ruffed East's queen. Since West surely held four trumps for his double, Tommy led the ten of trumps at trick three. West decided to make sure of two trump tricks by covering with the jack, and that was that.

Tommy led a diamond to the ace and continued with the queen of diamonds. West covered with the king and dummy ruffed. When East showed out on a high club, the hand was an open book. Since West was obviously void in hearts (he would have led one if he had a singleton), his distribution was 4-0-4-5.

Declarer cashed dummy's other high club, then came to hand with a club ruff. He cashed two high diamonds, then exited with a diamond. West was forced to ruff and lead away from his K-8 of trumps into Tommy's A-9 tenace. The defenders made only one trump trick and the ace of clubs.

Obviously, if West grabs the king of trumps, he must still collect a second trump trick for down one. But then he would not have been able to complain about Tommy's rare talent.

Assessing The Middle East

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Tower, head of the Senate Armed Services Committee, is assessing the situation in the Middle East on a fact-finding tour which includes stops in Syria, Lebanon, Egypt and Israel.

"He will assess the progress of and prospects for negotiations in the area," Tower aide Linda Hill said.

Tower, R-Texas, accompanied by Sen. John Warner, R-Va., departed Andrews Air Force Base late Monday afternoon. Ms. Hill said their itinerary would not be disclosed for security reasons.

You Might Qualify For Scholarship

By BOB SANSEVERE
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — If you are a talented badminton player or a budding rodeo star or a cheerleader or happen to have a twin, you just might qualify for one of the thousands of scholarships awarded by colleges each year.

"Rodeo is a little unusual. It seems so far removed from the university setting," said Casey Hegener, editor-in-chief of Petersen's Guides of Princeton, which recently published "The College Money Handbook," a guide to costs and financial aids at four-year colleges.

The publishers bill the handbook as the first complete guide to all college-controlled sources of financial aid for students. The book lists aid available by college and by the student's subject or skill.

"If you're not eligible for one award, look under another one. Colleges offer them so why shouldn't students know about them," said Ms. Hegener. "As long as colleges offer this much money and awards for non-need scholarships, somebody ought to know about it."

About $15 billion in financial aid is available to students each year through a variety of scholarships at 1,700 four-year colleges across the United States.

Athletic scholarships are available in about 30 sports, the guide says. There are the traditional scholarship sports, such as football and basketball, and the less traditional, such as bowling, martial arts and squash.

Colleges also offer scholarships for freshman in 56 other categories, including debating, church leadership and ethnic background. There are even scholarships for married students, siblings of current students and twins.

While more than 380 colleges offer football scholarships, only three offer scholarships in bowling — Alliance College, Saginaw Valley State College and Temple University, according to the guide.

Temple also is one of four colleges offering badminton scholarships.

"We have our own bowling alley, so it follows that we'd have a team," said Temple Athletic Director Gavin White. "And badminton has become very popular. It started as a club sport, but the scholarships came from a natural outgrowth of interest."

At Temple, the badminton and bowling scholarships are offered only to women. Male students can qualify for any one of 13 athletic scholarships, including football, basketball and fencing.

Anderson College, a religious coed institution in Anderson, Ind., offers no athletic awards but it is the only school in the country that does offer scholarships to handicapped students, the guide says.

The University of North Alabama offers scholarships for winners of the state Junior Miss contest and to the women selected as heads of the cheerleader and drum major squads.

"Whoever wins the Junior Miss is offered a full-tuition scholarship — full room and board," said Charlotte Hill, a financial aid counselor at North Alabama.

At Lake Erie College in Painesville, Ohio, the scholarship awarded to twins comes from a anonymous benefactor who reasoned that it's tough enough to send one child off to school, let alone two who are the same age, according to a school official.

The scholarship offers a full scholarship to one twin, while the other must pay his or her own way.

Open Bible College of Des Moines, Iowa, is the only college in the country that offers scholarships to married students, the guide says, while 10 schools offer awards to siblings of current students.

A Physical Hazard To Musicians

By RAY KOEHLER
Reading Eagle

READING, Pa. (AP) — It may sound strange, but musicians suffer from occupational hazards. Yes, music, which soothes the savage beast, may bring on such maladies as nerve compression, muscle spasms, upper back pains and cystic ganglia.

Like athletes, musicians, particularly string players, are subject to a variety of muscular and nerve dysfunctions of the fingers, hands, arms, shoulders and back.

"These are severe problems for musicians who play a lot," said Dr. David Rosenthal, who plays viola for the Reading Symphony Orchestra and is a specialist in rehabilitative medicine.

Rosenthal is director and founder of the Department of Rehabilitative and Sports Medicine at Suburban General Hospital in Norristown. His patients include string players who have come up lame with muscle and nerve problems.

"Many musicians suffer from tennis elbow and adhesive capsulitis, where there is limited range of motion in the shoulder," said Rosenthal, 54, of Dresher.

"Cellists, for instance, develop upper back problems because of posturing," he said. "Pressure caused by the neck of the instrument pressing against the chest sometimes frightens cellists into thinking they are having a heart attack."

Piano players have problems with elbows, wrists, fingers and hands, and develop muscular spasms in the forearms, neck and shoulders, while bow arm problems occasionally afflict string bass players because of the awkward positioning of the wrist. Bass player Wesley Fisher had two operations to remove ganglia which formed in the wrist of his bow hand.

One of the first of the recorded musical maladies has gone down in history as "Lully's Toe." Nearly 300 years ago, Jean Baptiste Lully was conducting a Te Deum For King Louis XIV of France when a terrible thing happened. Batons in the days were the size and weight of an oversize billiard cue, and conductors used them to beat time by rapping out a steady tac-tac on the floor.

Well, on this sad occasion, Jean Baptiste missed the floor and hit his toe. The toe became infected and Lully died without completing the score of "Achille et Polyxene."

Since then, conductors have tended to favor light, pencil-thin batons with which they beat time in the air.

Rosenthal, who began on the violin at 6 and switched to viola at 15, says he is troubled by a problem which plagues those who hold their instruments beneath the chin — a continual compression causing swelling, pain and cystic formations.

A student of the Juilliard School of Music and a 1960 graduate of Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine, Rosenthal says arthritis is one problem all musicians fear. The formation of calluses on the fingers can also present difficulties.

"Sometimes these calluses become infected and cause problems," Rosenthal said. "But this only happens to musicians who play a lot and is most common to professional musicians."

Rosenthal uses a lot of osteopathic manipulation for string players who develop muscular spasms and tight muscles. And while he has not treated any brass players, Kathy Cooperman, a trumpet player with the Reading Symphony Orchestra, said brass players routinely had to cope with lip problems.

A French pharmaceutical publication has reported on "punk eye," an ocular hemorrhage occurring when the victims overperform the violent leaps demanded by the Pogo, a dance with explosive up-and-down movements in favor among punk rockers.

And the same magazine told of "disco fingers," a muscular dysfunction brought on by snapping the fingers in time to the beat of disco music.

Rosenthal has yet to treat his first case of "disco fingers."

Let Lowe's Design Your Kitchen FREE! Buy Now And Save 10% On Any Style Cabinet

A beautiful, functional new kitchen can be designed just for you by Lowe's professional designers.

Just bring your kitchen dimensions into the nearest Lowe's store and we'll help you find the style of cabinets to suit your taste. Tell us where your windows, plumbing & outlets are and we'll figure out the rest.

Our wide selection of cabinet styles includes everything from Early American to Old English & from conventional styles to special units with wine racks. Your choice.

Lowe's will provide you with a suggested design layout and a free price estimate for the completed project. It's so easy.

And you'll have the satisfaction of a custom designed kitchen area that's put together just the way you want it.

To give you an idea of prices for our seven cabinet styles, we have priced them (at left & below) in 10' sample groups.

The price includes two 12"x 30" wall cabinets, two 30"x 18" wall cabinets, one 60" sink base & one 48" valance. (The faucets and countertops are extra.)

To top off this great offer, Lowe's can have your cabinets available for home delivery normally in 1 week after you order them.

Land And Labor Extra

All Materials To Build This Home (foundation plate up) $28,788*

Saxony, the all-American ranch house! Perfect for a growing family, it has 3 bedrooms and 2 bathrooms. Plus there's a washer-dryer nook, pantry, linen closet & a 528 sq. ft. 2-car garage! (Land and labor are extra.)

"Saxony" Features These Extras

- A pass-through bar from the kitchen to the dining room
- Double-wide bedroom closets
- Beautiful covered front porch
- Easy-to-work-in U-shaped kitchen
- Living room with spacious foyer

Our Homestead® Package System Takes The Hassle Out Of Home Building

1 For one low price, Lowe's will supply all the materials to build the Low-E (low energy) home above, from the foundation plate up. And the price is guaranteed for 90 days – and that guarantee can save you money!

2 Once construction begins, we'll deliver the materials to your lot in building sequence, so there will be less chance of loss due to weather or pilferage. In other words, you won't get caught unprepared!

3 Our Low-E homes exceed normal energy efficient standards. That's because they incorporate extra insulation, extensive caulking, attic ventilation, insulated doors and more. So you save year after year.

4 "Saxony" is just one of many home plans. We offer a wide choice of home styles and sizes – from solar contemporary designs to small vacation cottages. Stop by or mail in the coupon below for free booklets.

LOWE'S Low Payment Credit Plan

Lowe's "New" Low Payment Credit Plan!

Now You Can Finance Major Purchases Of Up To $5,000.

Now at Lowe's, we offer you an easier way to make those major home improvements and larger purchases. It's called our Low Payment Plan, and it's designed to let you finance purchases of $250 to $5,000 for up to 5 years, at competitive rates. The result is a low, monthly payment that fits comfortably into the family budget and brings important home additions, from a new refrigerator to a new roof, within easy reach. Just look for the above symbol! Because of space limitations in our ads, it's impossible to provide full credit details on every item. However, we do supply this information on selected items in our ads, to give you an idea of the size of monthly payments and the annual percentage rate. Lowe's Low Payment Credit Terms are outlined below. Stop by Lowe's today for complete details on our Low Payment Plan.

Lowe's Low Payment Credit Terms:

Your credit must be satisfactory. Our cash price does not include sales tax. The monthly payment price may be slightly lower, depending upon state law. The monthly payment price includes sales tax of 4%. If sales tax differs in your area, the monthly payment will vary slightly. Credit Life and Disability Insurance is available upon request. Delivery charges excluded.

Lowe's Pricing Policy: Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.
