N.C. Ranks Low In SAT Score Survey

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary T.H. Bell, in a bid to dramatize the shortcomings of American schools, today released statistics ranking all 50 states on their dropout rates, test scores, teacher salaries and other measures.

Bell scheduled a news conference today to discuss the state rankings.

The figures showed that among 28 states where college-bound students customarily take the American College Test, the best average was compiled by students in Wisconsin, followed by Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and Colorado.

Among 22 states where students usually take the Scholastic Aptitude Test, the leaders were: New Hampshire, Oregon, Vermont, California and Delaware.

The states with the worst ACT average were from the bottom: Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, West Virginia and, in a tie for the fifth lowest, Kentucky and Tennessee.

Those with the lowest SAT average were: South Carolina, District of Columbia, Georgia, North Carolina and Hawaii.

From 1972 to 1982, college entrance exam scores fell in every state; only the District of Columbia registered an increase.

Some of the figures Bell spotlighted have been publicized previously, but some were being released for the first time from data culled from his National Center on Education Statistics and other sources.

New statistics showed that the high school dropout rate got worse from 1972 to 1982. Only 72.8 percent of ninth graders now stay to get their high school diploma, down from 77.2 percent a decade earlier.

The District of Columbia had the worst dropout rate in 1982, followed by Mississippi, Louisiana, South Carolina and Florida. The dropout rate that year was not available for Georgia, which ranked 49th out of 51 in 1972.

The states with the highest percentage of graduates were: Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa, Hawaii and South Dakota.

"We as a nation are embarking on perhaps the greatest and most broad-based effort at educational reform in American history," Bell said in a statement. "The data collected here will serve as a benchmark for our undertaking. The data ... document the educational problems facing states today."

States in the South pulled up the rear on several measures. But there were some sharp shifts over the decade on various rankings for a wide variety of states.

In 1972, Delaware ranked 29th for the percentage of students who graduated from high school. It jumped to ninth in 1982. Montana rose from 27th to eighth. Maine fell from 18th to 34th and California plummeted from 22nd to 39th. Rhode Island slid from 16th to 31st, while Vermont improved from 41st to 16th.

On pupil-teacher ratios, Georgia jumped from 50th to a tie for 31st, while Massachusetts improved from 20th to a tie for eighth. New York fell from fourth to 21st, while Oregon dropped from 16th to 41st. South Carolina tumbled from a tie for 11th to 33rd, while West Virginia climbed from a tie for 40th to a tie for 19th. Utah pulled up the rear in both years.

On teacher salaries, Alaska remained far out in front with an average salary of $29,000 in 1980-81, up from its pace-setting $14,124 a decade earlier. Wyoming went from 22nd to sixth and Washington from 13th to fifth, while Vermont tumbled from 28th to 50th.

The Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., first disclosed state-by-state SAT scores two years ago. The American College Testing Co. of Iowa City, Iowa, does not make its figures public and Bell said he had to go to state education officials to obtain the averages.

The testing service in Princeton has cautioned the public about misinterpreting the figures.

State Board Of Education Meets Here

Policies for testing handicapped children in North Carolina schools and for the administration of the North Carolina Children's Trust Fund were both approved this morning by the State Board of Education.

Approval action on these two items took place at the meeting of the board being held today in Greenville in the Willis Building. These two policies were presented by the Policy Committee of the board, the first of five committee meetings being held between 10 this morning and three this afternoon.

Primary elements in the policy paper for testing children with special needs as part of the annual testing program in North Carolina include:

- The annual testing program for children with special needs shall be administered consistently and uniformly throughout all N. C. school systems.
- Children who are trainable mentally handicapped or severely/profoundly handicapped will not take part in the regular testing of the annual program.
- All other categories of children with special needs will be tested at their grade placement level, with three exceptions — ninth graders who are educable mentally handicapped and who are performing below the fourth grade level will be tested with a test recommended by the Annual Testing Committee for sixth graders; sixth graders who are educable mentally handicapped and who are performing below the third grade level will be tested with a test for third graders; and children who are so impaired mentally and or physically as to make testing unfeasible will be excluded from testing upon the recommendation of the Administrative Placement Committee. Children so excluded shall be accounted for by the local education agency completing the student information questionnaire section of the test booklet.

Other provisions in the approved testing program are ones to include scores from children with special needs in the total group norms for the state and local education agency, with separate results to be available for children with special needs.

In comments from members on the new policy provisions, it was noted that under the present testing system, it is not known what percentage of scores achieved by children with special needs are included in the national norm, which according to one member

Ingram Becomes Third To File For Governor's Race

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram today became the third Democrat to enter the 1984 governor's race, as his wife paid the $850 filing fee at the Board of Elections.

Ingram, accompanied by his three daughters and son, said 1984 is the 400th anniversary of free enterprise in America, a theme he will emphasize in his campaign.

"I am calling on all our citizens to dedicate North Carolina to a new voyage in free enterprise, where everybody takes up an oar and no one rides for free; a new voyage where no one gets ahead because of special interest connections and no one falls behind to sink because of color, age, sex, or because he or she doesn't have special connections," Ingram said.

Ingram said he is different from the other candidates because he wants to make the state Utilities Commission an elected, rather than appointed, office.

Meanwhile, Democrat Tom Gilmore on Wednesday became the second gubernatorial candidate to file and said some of his foes aren't fully supporting the party platform.

"The winning candidate in this primary should be a real Democrat," Gilmore said at a news conference after paying his fee. "We must protect the title 'Democratic candidate for governor' from becoming a mere political convenience to get into office."

"This is a partisan race for Democrats and until my challengers publicly support this platform, you are looking at the only real Democratic candidate for governor in the state of North Carolina," said Gilmore, a former state representative who also was deputy secretary of human resources from 1978 to 1981.

Gilmore, Ingram and Democrat D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth are the only gubernatorial candidates who have filed for the governor's race.

Faircloth filed Tuesday.

Gubernatorial candidates have until Feb. 6 to pay the $850 fee.

Gilmore said Wednesday that Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has not endorsed the Equal Rights Amendment as the platform recommends, and said he "really questions" whether Faircloth supports the ERA.

A spokesman for the Faircloth campaign, Steve Meehan, said Faircloth had urged the General Assembly to support the constitutional amendment in 1982.

Arlene Pulley, Green's campaign manager, said Green did oppose ERA but supported child support enforcement legislation that helped women.

"We're glad he brought that up," she said. "There is a definite difference in the candidates."

Gilmore said candidates also have failed to address educational and environmental issues outlined in the party platform.

The platform calls for a stronger commitment to excellence in public education and higher funding for public schools and endorses the commitment of the university system.

The platform calls for environmental protection by wise use of soil, water and air.

Gilmore said the Democratic nominee should support the platform because "as governor of this state he is the leader of the Democratic Party."

He said there is room in the party for more conservative candidates but added, "We're talking about the person who is best equipped to head the party in 1984."

Unconstitutional

RALEIGH (AP) — Wake County Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey today declared unconstitutional North Carolina's law limiting political campaign media spending.

Bailey signed an order, effective at about noon today, that prohibits State Board of Elections Director Alex Brock from enforcing the law.

Meanwhile, a lawyer for Brock withdrew motions to consolidate several pending cases involving the issue of campaign spending and contribution limits. Broxton J. Nelson had said consolidation would help avoid unnecessary expense and delay as the 1984 campaign season nears.

Bailey's ruling came in a hearing on one of the cases — that of D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth at 10 a.m. today.

REPAIR DONATIONS ASKED

The building housing American Legion Post 160 — the old fire station at corner of Chestnut and Skinner streets — was severely damaged during the Christmas holidays when water pipes froze and burst. The building is leased from the City of Greenville and Post 160 is responsible for maintenance and repairs.

Repairs of this damage are going to be very expensive, Post Commander Ben Braswell said, and the post is limited in its monetary resources. He asked Hotline to appeal to its readers for donations to assist with the repairs. The donations may be made to American Legion Post 160, P.O. Box 1543, Greenville, N.C. 27834. Inquiries may be made of Ben Braswell, 752-1383.

1983 Proved One Of The Good Years In Construction Activity

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Construction activity in Greenville moved along at a brisk pace during 1983 as building permit values nearly reached $60 million, according to figures compiled by the city's engineering and inspections department.

The total citywide permit figure of $58,459,761 compared with $21,099,713 in building value recorded for 1982. During 1983, there were 1,021 permits issued here, up from 918 a year earlier.

The city reported that in the last 12 years, only 1979's $63,227,328 permit total and 1,472 permits surpassed the 1983 figures. In 1979, the construction total was boosted by approximately $26 million involving the hospital's new nursing tower and the Brody Medical Science facility at the medical complex.

Other construction totals included: 1981, when $21,623,584 was recorded as a result of 1,018 permits; 1980, with $43,023,320 based on 1,215 permits; and 1978, when 1,387 permits represented a valuation of $51,121,930. The 1974 building total of $7.5 million and 503 permits represented the lowest construction figure in Greenville in the last dozen years.

The city said the 1983 figures included: 34 permits for new business construction, totaling $4,263,363; one permit for a hotel (Sheraton), $2 million; five for warehouses, $2,060,733; 143 permits for single family homes, $8,601,974; 70 for duplex construction, $3,970,412; 59 for multifamily, rental, condominium and townhouse units, $23,539,060 (includes the Senior Village nursing facility on U.S. 43 since multifamily units are involved); three permits for churches, $970,000; one for the Greenville Rest Home on U.S. 43, $600,000; and 705 permits for miscellaneous activity and everything not listed under new construction, including additions and alterations, $9,783,153.

While the city does not issue permits for construction activity at ECU, the 1983 figure does include: $2,671,066 reported by the university. However, the permit total does not include Greenville Utilities' new $10.4 million wastewater treatment facility under construction northeast of the city since the plant is outside local jurisdiction.

Lebanese Peace Plan Advancing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese officials reported today that Syria and Israel have endorsed a proposal to separate Lebanon's civil war combatants but they said U.S. Marines should stay in Beirut even if the security plan takes effect.

If the plan is implemented, President Amin Gemayel will ask the nations in the multinational force — the United States, France, Italy and Britain — to keep troops in Lebanon in support of the effort to stabilize Lebanon's cease-fire and extend government control to officials said.

Neither the Syrian nor Israeli governments had immediate comment on the report they had approved the plan.

In southern Lebanon, Israeli occupation forces were attacked three times today, a day after Israel staged its largest air bombardment since it invaded Lebanon in June 1982.

Military sources in Tel Aviv said a grenade was hurled at an Israeli convoy, flattening a tire on one truck but causing no injuries. Earlier, reporters in Sidon said two Israeli soldiers were believed slightly hurt in the attack.

The Tel Aviv military command said a Lebanese man was injured when a mine exploded as an Israeli patrol walked by. And Israeli soldiers safely detonated a grenade that was thrown at them, the military sources said.

Shiite Moslems had vowed retaliation not only against Israel but against the United States in response for Wednesday's Israeli attack, aimed at pro-Iranian guerrilla bases in central Lebanon's Syrian-controlled Bekaa valley.

The state radio said more than 100 were killed and 400 injured in the raid, including many civilians. Searchers hunted today for more victims in the rubble, and residents throughout the area staged a general strike to protest the attack.

Eatery Dodges Zoning Ban

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — Because city zoning bans retail operations at its new location, a Bangor bagel shop has taken on a new identity — as the Bangor Kosher Food Social Club Inc., charging $1 for memberships that bestow the right to buy the rolls with holes.

"It is, and it isn't, the Bagel Shop," said Richard Zabot, who owned the Bagel Shop on Central Street prior to a fire last September and now manages the club on Union Street.

After the fire, the Bagel Shop ran into relocation problems and was unable to find affordable rental space in downtown Bangor. A former Elks Club location on Union Street was suitable, but it wasn't zoned for retail use.

Both the city's code enforcement officer, Albert Smith III, and the Zoning Board of Appeals in December turned down Zabot's request to locate on in the club.

But then a group of residents who wanted to have kosher food available got the idea to form the club, taking advantage of a clause that allows a social and fraternal organization to operate out of the former Elks haunt.

They hired Zabot as its manager. Zabot hired back the former employees of the Bagel Shop.

"It's been a difficult situation to present to the public, but so far things have gone smoothly. We've received more than 160 members today, and lots of encouragement. People are glad to see our products back," Zabot said Monday.

When notified at home that Zabot was back in business, at the Union Street location, Smith said he hadn't heard of the development but would review the matter with the assistant city solicitor.

"I'll be investigating, and it sure sounds like fun," Smith said.

The new location has about double the seating capacity of the old site. A customer who is not a member is allowed one purchase as the "guest of the house," Zabot said. To be a regular, however, an individual must pay $1 for a one-year membership card.

Local Families Are Needed

The American Scandinavian Student Exchange (ASSE) is seeking local families to serve as hosts for 15 Scandinavian, German, Swiss, British and Icelandic high school students who are part of the ASSE exchange visitor program according to Carole Powell, Southern director of ASSE.

The non-profit ASSE is affiliated with the Swedish and Finnish Departments of Education and is officially designated by the U.S. Information Agency as an Exchange Visitor Program.

The students, 16 and 17 years old, are fluent in English and are carefully selected for the program based on their high school performance, good character and interest in the ASSE program.

Families interested in serving as hosts for the 1984-85 school year should contact ASSE's local area representative: Willene O'Neal, 240 Churchill Drive, Greenville.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

The City Control can designate certain areas of Greenville as controlled residential parking area. For more information, call 752-4137. Ask for Engineering.

Concert Statement Shows Only Expenses

NEW YORK (AP) — Although payment for construction of a playground was a condition of Diana Ross' July concert in Central Park, the city has so far gotten only a financial statement from producers showing expenses of $1.7 million, the city's parks commissioner says.

The statement from Anaïd Film Productions and Paramount Pictures, co-producers of the event, shows no revenues and no profits from the show, Parks Commissioner Henry Stern said Monday.

"The statement ... is three months overdue and totally incomplete. It shows no receipts, and it raises more questions than it answers," Stern told The New York Times.

Miss Ross aborted the July 21 outdoor concert on the park's Great Lawn when a rainstorm hit. The next night, she returned to give a full show, and afterwards bands of youths went on a costly rampage through midtown Manhattan.

The concert was televised live around the world by satellite, and a film of the performance has been broadcast several times on pay television.

Under the agreement for Miss Ross' use of the park, the city was to get a 7 1/2 percent share of the television profits for use in building "Diana Ross Playground" on the west side of the park.

"I dreamed of building a playground in the park for some time, and now that playground is going to be a reality," Miss Ross said at the time.

A spokesman for Paramount, Ron Nelson, said the city would get a report on the estimated revenue. "There is no attempt to hide anything," he said.

But he also appeared to dash any hopes for the playground.

"I think it's fair to say that the program will not make any money for anybody," he said.

Parks Department officials also said they had received only $6,000 of the $60,000 they expected from sales of T-shirts, posters and other souvenirs of the concert.

Stern estimated that the city paid $500,000 to $1 million to put on the show, police it and clean up after it.

Stern's deputy commissioner for legal affairs, Wendell Levester, said the matter would be pursued.

Dear Abby

Wife Is Other Woman For Hubby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A year ago, my husband of 23 years (we're both in our mid-40s) left me to move in with a 23-year-old girl he picked up in a bar. Until then we had a good and loving relationship. Then his business failed, which was more than he could handle, so he left.

He didn't leave completely. He keeps many of his personal belongings here, still pays all the household expenses and comes to see me two or three nights a week. (We usually end up in bed.) Of course, we can't see any of our old friends anymore or go out in public because he doesn't want his girlfriend to know about our continuing relationship.

My question: Am I doing the right thing by continuing to see my husband? I think he needs all the love and support I can give him. I'm sure that when he gets things figured out he will want to come back home again. But until then, what about the girl?

I don't want to hurt anyone, but I still love my husband and don't want to let him down when he needs me. What do you advise?

THE OTHER WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: You are to be commended for your loyalty, devotion, understanding and support of a husband who left you to live with another woman. But what kind of man would live with one woman and sneak out to be with another two or three times a week? Take a closer look at this deceitful and mixed-up character. What assurance have you that he will return and be a decent husband again? You are being more a forgiving mother to him than a wife, but if you are happy in that role, 'tis folly to be wise.

DEAR ABBY: I recently announced my engagement, so everywhere I go people congratulate me, then they say, "I'm looking for my invitation." Or they ask the wedding date, and when I tell them, they say, "Oh, great, I can make it!"

I am furious at myself for not saying something on the spot to let them know I had not planned on inviting them. These people who are not my close friends try to bribe me by saying, "If you invite me, I'll bring a nice present." That is not the point. I can't invite the whole blasted community to my wedding!

My parents are retired and can't afford to pay for my wedding, so my fiance and I are footing the bill, and we are limited because of the cost.

How should I handle these people who invite themselves? I hate to hurt their feelings, but I need to let them know they shouldn't expect an invitation.

SPEECHLESS AND FUMING

DEAR S. AND F.: What's wrong with the truth? Tell them you are planning to have a very small wedding because that's all you can afford.

DEAR ABBY: A New York reader wrote that a relative who had died on a trip to Poland was buried there because what should be our next step to determine what the city's rights are in terms of possible revenues," he said.

it would have been too expensive ($7,500) to have his body flown back to the United States for burial. I wondered why cremation wasn't considered. It would have cost much less to have his remains (ashes) flown home. I had always wondered why, with Europe's long history, some of those countries weren't crowded with cemeteries. On my first visit there I learned that as long as someone pays rent on a burial plot, the remains are left undisturbed. But if payments cease, the grave is left in preparation for the next occupant.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

For months now, weather forecasters have been saying this is going to be a record-breaking winter for snow . . . 5,149 inches of it, to be exact.

On what do they base these predictions? Caterpillars. They have thin brown bands across their middles and are moving fast. Squirrels. They're laying in an extra supply of acorns. Onions. They have thick skins and anyone knows thickskinned onions can mean only one thing. Snow.

I could have told you long before this that the winter was going to be a bruiser. Only my premises are more scientific.

Car batteries with a warranty that has run out. Nothing heralds the arrival of a fierce winter like a temperamental battery. The colder it gets, the more independent it becomes. On a blustery morning when you are running late, it will groan and sputter and then go dead. It is only a matter of time before it will demand an audience before it performs . . . like a man from AAA three or four times a week.

Shortage of firewood. Count on record-breaking snows when you see a few branches of twigs at the supermarket being sold for $20 a bundle.

Snow shovel. You know you're in for at least 130 inches of snow when you discover your wife has loaned your snow shovel to the Binghamms who took it with them when they moved to Florida last April.

Dogs' kidneys. There is a strong correlation between snowy winters and dogs' resistance to go out of doors to relieve themselves. Some dogs start as early as September to avoid any traffic patterns around doors leading to the outside. Even owners who stand with the door wide open in the winter and who beg, plead and grovel are faced with dogs with better sense than they have.

People can control their thermal destiny, if they want to. Mild winters can be calculated and planned like everything else. You want sunshine in January, February and March? Buy a new pair of skis. Get a pair of new boots for each one of the kids. Get your furnace cleaned. Stockpile food and supplies. Have rock salt in a handy container outside your front door. And then sit back and watch the sun shine.

I read somewhere where the coldest temperature ever registered on the planet earth was at a Soviet Union Antarctic station at Vostok. The temperature was 128 degrees below zero on July 21 of last year.

They probably asked for it. Some husband probably said, "Look, Anna, I know 200 people are a lot to invite for a party, but we'll cook out and keep the mess outside!"

Gimmicks Aimed At Pocketbook

If losing weight is one of your New Year's resolutions, some of the diet gimmicks on the market may seem attractive.

Unfortunately, these gimmicks are aimed at your pocketbook, not your waistline. "Over-the-counter appetite depressants and quick-and-easy weight loss diets beckon the consumer with magical claims for weight loss, but there is no magical way to safely lose weight quickly," says Sarah Hinton, extension foods and nutrition specialist, N.C. State University.

Dietetic foods are also not necessary. Many dietetic foods, such as candies, cookies and cake mixes contain a form of sugar different from table sugar but are just as high in calories. They are meant for the diabetic rather than the dieter.

Small Count Most

There are, of course, big cities which do a good job managing their public housing facilities; and there are small municipalities which exhibit a callous indifference and ineptness in managing their housing units.

But on the whole, we'd suspect the record of small municipalities is better than that of the big cities.

A million dollars represents a vast sum to small-town America, and is considerably less significant to their big brothers. In small cities there are many anxious and often critical eyes in and out of government watching the management of such sums; government is responsive.

Governing a large city can be almost unwieldy and even remote to its people. The talents of management may be great in the large city, but they are strained to levels of near hopelessness ... exemplified in the report of the HUD inspector general on a high degree of mismanagement in a large number of large city housing units. The potential for losses (a million here, a million there) runs into many billions of dollars.

One might conclude from the bitter and costly experience that public housing money might be more efficiently used in small communities ... slowing the flow of people from rural and Small Town USA to the Big City.

The implications are more complex than space here permits exploring; but the thought is worth pursuing.

Somebody Else

It's always somebody else's fault.

Except when it comes to the White House. We have always remembered, with a glow of appreciation, President Harry Truman's little sign on his desk, "The Buck Stops Here".

So, right or wrong, another president has decided that if there is to be "blame" for the terrorist bombing of the Marines at Beirut, "it properly rests here in this office and with this president".

Naturally enough, not everybody agrees. But it is refreshing that somebody out there can say "stop looking for a scapegoat".

Reagan's Tone

WASHINGTON (AP) — Within a one-week period at the end of the month, President Reagan will unveil his budget, his view of the State of the Union, and his political plans for the election year.

It's going to be a busy month for the president, and one that could set the tone for the rest of the year.

He is facing a Congress seeking an independent path on both the budget and Lebanon, and is showing no progress in stemming the tide of slipping support for the deployment of U.S. Marines in that strife-torn Middle East nation.

Still, the president's aides, looking at a longer-range political picture, are optimistic about 1984. David R. Gergen, Reagan's assistant for communications, said "he's substantially stronger than he was a year ago, helped mostly by the economy."

White House officials, pointing to the continuing economic recovery, say economic matters are less likely to be significant campaign issues as a result of the progress in stemming inflation, bringing down interest rates and restoring economic growth. Rather, they say, international affairs are most likely to play a major role in the presidential campaign.

Within hours of his return to the Oval Office on the first business day of the year, Reagan was conferring with three key Republican senators who are stressing what one of them, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, said is "the necessity to face up to the deficit."

Having completed work on the spending side of the federal budget for fiscal 1985, which begins next Oct. 1, the president is focusing on the key revenue decisions — in other words, how to reduce the budget deficit without cutting spending anymore or raising taxes. The red ink is expected by the administration to reach about $170 billion in the next fiscal year, but other estimates put it higher.

It was only after most of the key budget decisions were made that Reagan brought in the senators on Tuesday. Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, was part of a trio that included Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee and Sen. Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

Domenici, sounding reluctant to go along with Reagan's adamant opposition to tax increases, said "there are going to have to be taxes in future years. The question is when do you do those?"

The three emerged from the budget meeting to also make clear their apprehension about Reagan's use of the U.S. Marines in Lebanon.

Baker, asked whether support for the Marines' deployment was eroding, replied, "I don't think there was a lot of support for them to go there to begin with."

At the White House, the nation is seen to be "passing through a phase now on war and peace," an official said, using a phrase that refers to concerns about Reagan's willingness to use military forces as instruments of foreign policy.

The phase was brought on "by events in the Middle East, with the continuing shooting there, and the fact that U.S.-Soviet talks aren't going on," said the official, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified by name.

"There are no questions there are some risks in front of him next year" dealing with the Middle East and "how people look upon the U.S.-Soviet relationship," Gergen said.

WASHINGTON — The Federal Communications Commission is wrestling these days with a couple of tough issues of law. One matter involves Larry Flynt, the hard-core pornographer. The other involves Lisa, the soft-breathing voice on a dial-a-porn line. In a land of free speech, how far can these characters go?

Take the Flynt case first. Larry Flynt is best known as publisher of Hustler magazine. He is also an announced candidate for president of the United States. When the Congress adopted Section 315 of the Communications Act nearly 50 years ago, no one ever dreamed that a candidate for the White House might run as the self-designated nominee of a Pornography Party.

Section 315 says, in sum, that if a TV or radio station sells time to Walter Mondale or Ronald Reagan, the station must sell time on the same basis to Larry Flynt. The section also says that the licensee "shall have no power of censorship over the material broadcast."

All that is clear enough, but there is another federal law on the books, this one known as Section 1464. It forbids the use of "any obscene, indecent or profane language by means of radio communication." Flynt has made it clear that his campaign commercials will turn the airwaves blue. He proposes to vent his political opinions in an explosion of four-letter words.

The commission met a couple of weeks ago to consider the dilemma, but adjourned without taking action. As this is written, the matter is still pending, but Flynt has the resources to seek court review or whatever the FCC decides.

A brand-new section of the Communications Act will be tested in the dial-a-porn case. This section, signed into law on Dec. 8, prohibits "obscene or indecent" communications by telephone to persons under 18 years of age; the law gives the FCC authority to make rules and regulations and to punish violators. The FCC is now receiving suggestions, through Jan. 23, on what to do about Lisa.

These are picklements. The last time the Supreme Court construed Section 1464, the one having to do with "obscene, indecent or profane" language on the air, was in the Pacifica Foundation case in 1978. That involved a 12-minute monologue by satirist George Carlin called "Filthy Words." A man who was out driving with his young son heard the afternoon broadcast and complained to the FCC. The commission warned the licensee, Station WBAL, to watch its step: one more such offense, and sanctions might be imposed.

The station appealed, and the Supreme Court more or less affirmed the commission. It is hard to tell what the court did. Justice Stevens wrote for a plurality, but in fact he wrote only for himself and for Burger and Rehnquist. Justices Powell and Blackmun concurred in the judgment but for different reasons. Brennan wrote a stinging dissent in which Marshall joined. Stewart wrote a separate dissent in which Brennan, Marshall and White joined. It was not the court's finest hour.

The Stevens opinion contained some brow-knitting language. If the offensive aspects of Carlin's monologue "could be traced to political content," said Stevens, "First Amendment protection might be required." The four dissenters concluded that "indecent" and "obscene" are the same things at law. That which is obscene must have prurient appeal; Carlin's monologue had no prurient appeal; therefore the FCC had no authority to ban it.

Nothing may come of the Flynt affair, though I wouldn't bank on it. It's no great trick to qualify for federal matching money as a presidential candidate. Readers of Hustler, who thrive on dirty jokes, might well back a fling at dirty politics. If this happens, Sections 325 and 1464 will come into head-on collision.

As for the seductive Lisa, my thought would be to limit her recorded moans and sighs to a few post-midnight hours, and to dismiss the whole dial-a-porn business as trivial. But Flynt's case is not trivial. Radio and TV come directly into our homes. Candidates for public office have an undoubted right to air their views, but they have no right gratuitously to shock an unguarded audience. The supreme law of the land doesn't serve as a shield for political sham — and that's what Flynt is proposing.

Old Questions Are Still Around

WASHINGTON — Hand it to good timing. Ronald Reagan has ridden into a new year on the back of America's eighth post-recession recovery since World War II, and he's been able to make himself look like a hero in the process.

But 1984 opens with many of the same long-term economic questions that cast a shadow over 1983. While the federal deficit may weigh heavily on many Americans' minds, at least one other issue — the changing nature of jobs — deserves comparable concern among those, particularly young Americans, who expect to judge the president and/or his party next November.

One could conclude that three years of the "New Beginning" have turned the economy around and made believers out of enough Americans to assure a Republican White House in 1985. For once, the gross national product outpaces inflation: unemployment, which a year ago some optimists have slated at 9 percent or more during 1984, hovers closer to 8.

Despite a slight dip in November, the key economic index performed well enough to prompt rosy outlooks from the likes of Lehman Brothers economist Allen Sinai, who said there was "nothing wrong" with 1983 and that administration policies were largely responsible.

Meanwhile, according to a Washington Post-ABC News poll in December, 46 percent of the public believes that the economy is improving — up from 18 percent a year ago. Of that 46 percent, the poll found nine in 10 respondents credited Reagan with the improvement.

Amid the hoopla, of course, some influential pessimists sit brooding in the corner. Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Dole, R-Kans., and Martin Feldstein, officially the president's chief economic adviser, contend that annual deficits of $200 billion or more are going to hurt regular Americans, if not Reagan himself. Indeed, excessive deficits are destined to keep interest rates too high for American investors and exporters to assure economic growth in the long term.

Most Americans, however, see their futures in more micro-economic terms. Even if deficits shrink and companies invest additional cash, few of us can anticipate where and how that investments will be made. Presidential policies can either help protect the American worker from errant corporate investments, or they can contribute to the mess.

Right now, the bulk of new investment capital (provided mostly by the U.S. taxpayer, according to congressional budget chief Rudolf Penner) seems headed for plant and office automation and high-tech projects. For computer scientists and electrical engineers (even those who perceive Osborne Computer's failure as a bad omen), the future looks reasonably secure.

But jobs bills and education proposals, let alone tax cuts and accelerated depreciation schedules, haven't changed Bureau of Labor Statistics projections that place the bulk of job growth in the lower-skilled, lower-paid categories.

Despite widespread media and academic attention to technology's potential devastation of the middle class, the euphoria over increased growth rates and decreased unemployment has seemingly derailed a debate over whether a two-tiered job market is in the nation's interest.

That debate may receive a slight boost this month at an economic conference in Washington. Organized by Democratic fund-raiser Stanley Sheinbaum of Los Angeles, the meeting will bring together various liberal organizations and economists who are likely to wield policy-making influence should the Democrats regain the White House. Among the key issues will be ways to improve productivity without eliminating jobs.

But Reagan has every reason to confront the issue himself. An economy that's stuffed many middle-class workers into lower-income jobs will inevitably promote political volatility. If the president senses that possibility, too, he might explore the ways in which his tax cuts and defense budget increases are shaping the workplace of tomorrow.

The consequences of ignoring the changing nature of jobs are few for Reagan, the candidate. But for a politician with an eye for the history books, it should be clear that a mere political recovery is no real recovery at all.

Strength For Today

In the famous Cyprus Gardens in Florida, winding paths conduct the visitor among beds and groves full of lush tropical flowers and trees. The paths are well marked with signs telling which way to go or what the names of the flowers and trees are. But some of the most significant trees exhibit their beauty high in the air, and so from time to time the visitor finds himself facing a sign which reads, "Look up."

Look up! This is good counsel whether one is in Cyprus Gardens or anywhere else. Too many people go through life looking down, and they do not like what they see. These are the people who see the bad side of everything. The cities they see are all slums; the jobs they do are all toil; the people they know are all bad.

There is so much in life to enjoy, so much to be thankful for, that it is a shame to miss it. Wherever you are, look up.

Farmer Goes South For His Land

inflation rate is the worst part of farming in Brazil, he says.

Schultz, whose family operates a seed company near Effingham, lived in Brazil and studied its soybean industry. He earned a master's degree from Harvard in 1976 and decided to farm.

"Farm ground was very expensive in Illinois — $2,500 to $3,000 an acre — but it was much cheaper in Brazil," says Schultz, recalling that land was selling for $200 an acre.

Brazil had everything else Schultz was looking for. Land was available to develop, the government was encouraging such investments by Americans, there was a large work force, and at that time the economy was stable.

Although the Brazilian state was nine times as large as Illinois, there was just one asphalt road, poor telephone service and little electricity.

Schultz cleared his land, increased fertility and, in a couple of years, brought soybean yields up to the range of 30 to 40 bushels per acre — good even by Illinois standards. And the climate allowed two full crops a year — soybeans and wheat.

Cheap labor also helped. "You can afford to have more tractors and run them day and night," says

Schultz, noting that a driver earns just $90 a month plus housing. "We also can use fewer chemicals for weed control and put someone out in the field to hoe for $3 a day."

Schultz, 31, speaks Portuguese. He and his wife have homes on the farm in Brazil and in Effingham.

The crops are in and the Schultzes currently are in Illinois for the holidays. They will return to Brazil early in 1984.

There, with the help of eight Brazilian workers, Schultz will raise 2,200 acres of beans, most to be sold as seed. Despite the staggering inflation rate and frequent devaluations of the Brazilian currency, Schultz says he was able to earn about $100 an acre for soybeans last year.

He has seen major changes in his part of Brazil in seven years. The nearest city, Dourados, has grown to 75,000 people, and there is excellent telephone and electric service.

Land prices have climbed to the $500 range, he says.

"I don't know if I'd do it again because the Brazilian economy is in such bad shape," he says. "But it's been a great experience."

DIETERICH, III. (AP) — Farmer Jack Schultz goes so far south for the winter that it's summer. But he can plant a new crop of soybeans while his neighbors in Effingham County still are harvesting the old crop.

Schultz, who grew up in Illinois, now farms 3,000 acres in Brazil.

"The best part is the challenge of going into a new area and developing something from nothing and making it work," says Schultz, who raises soybeans and a little corn and rice in the Brazilian state of Mato Grosso do Sul. "We're the pioneers in Brazil."

Kissinger Report To Propose $1 Billion For Area

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kissinger Commission on Central America is expected to recommend that the United States spend $1 billion in economic and military aid over the next several years to help resolve development and security problems in the region, U.S. officials say.

mission will submit to President Reagan next week. They said the panel, known formally as the National Bipartisan Commission on Central America, is not expected to call for significant departures from the present administration policy toward the region. The commission, which has a Jan. 10 deadline for completing the report, will suggest that the bulk of the suggested aid package be earmarked for economic assistance, consistent with current policy. Alluding to the $1 billion aid recommendation, one official said that figure is comparable to what the United States has spent in the region over the past several years. President Reagan formed the panel last summer, hoping to forge a consensus among liberals and conservatives on policy recommendations that would have broad public and congressional support. Headed by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, the 12-member commission encompasses a wide range of political opinion. Its members include the former Republican governor of Texas, William P. Clements; San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, a Democrat; former Democratic National Committee chairman Robert Strauss; and AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland. In gathering information for the report, the panel made two trips to the region and heard testimony from dozens of expert witnesses, including all former presidents and secretaries of state still living.

Reagan decided to form the commission after his own policies encountered stiff resistance from the Congress, particularly over his support for the government of El Salvador despite that country's poor record on human rights. U.S. officials said that at the insistence of its more liberal members, the panel will urge that continued military aid to El Salvador be linked to improved human rights performance. It will call for maximum U.S. pressure on Salvadoran authorities to end politically-motivated killings. At the same time, the panel also is expected to recommend an increase in military aid to El Salvador on grounds that the Salvadoran Army cannot win the four-year old civil war there if current assistance levels are maintained, the officials said. They said the administration probably will call for a military aid increase for El Salvador later this month, citing the anticipated recommendation of the panel to justify the request. On Wednesday, State Department spokesman John Hughes foreshadowed a request for an aid increase, describing the present aid level of $65.8 million as insufficient and asserting that the Salvadoran government recently has demonstrated a clear determination to take action against human rights violators.

representatives of leftist insurgents would participate. It agrees with the administration's position that the formation of the government must be decided exclusively by the electoral process. The commission also will recommend that Nicaragua not take part in American economic assistance programs, the officials said, unless it holds free elections and respects the principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs of its neighbors. The panel will couple its recommendations for economic assistance with a suggestion that the United States encourage anti-communist reformist political forces in the region. The officials said this proposal is designed to ensure a more equitable distribution of the region's income. There is little doubt that the commission's report will support the Central American peace mediation effort being undertaken by four Latin American countries.

Kissinger already has publicly stated his backing for that process. The so-called Contadora group, composed of Venezuela, Mexico, Panama and Colombia, has been attempting to negotiate peace in the region for the past year.

Study Supports UNESCO Stand

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A researcher at the University of North Carolina says his studies indicate the Third World is not overlooked by the Western press and could support President Reagan's decision to leave UNESCO.

Cultural Organization, an organization founded to promote literacy and education in the Third World and the free exchange of ideas among nations. But State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said UNESCO had "extraneously politicized virtually every subject it deals with, has exhibited hostility toward the basic institutions of a free society — especially a free market and a free press — and has demonstrated unrestrained budgetary expansion."

Somebody, A Stranger, Sharing His Apartment

CAPE CORAL, Fla. (AP) — Frank Steiner says someone has been sitting in his chair. And someone has been eating his food, wearing his clothes and using his shower for the past nine weeks. But the strange Goldilocks story hasn't had a fairy-tale ending. In fact, Steiner says, it's getting to be more than he can bear. Since November, an unknown intruder has been making as many as three uninvited visits a week to Steiner's apartment, entering when Steiner is at work and leaving the place a mess, he said. Steiner said he's reported the intrusions to a somewhat baffled police department and has requested routine patrols past the apartment. "It's real weird," Lt. Richard Brown of the Cape Coral police said today. He admitted that officials were "a little bit skeptical at first," but added they now believe Steiner's report. Brown said police weren't sure if the goings-on were harassment or merely a prank. "It's gotten to the point where I don't keep food in the house," Steiner said. "I'm trying to starve them out." The strategy could be working, Steiner says the rate of visits has dropped to about one a week. Each of the intrusions has taken place between 4 p.m. and midnight while Steiner, a corrections counselor, is at work at the Fort Myers Correctional Center. "They came in through the front door last night," he said Wednesday. "When I got home my key got stuck in the door (lock)." During one break-in, he said, the intruder cooked a pair of steaks left out on the kitchen counter to thaw, and "left the kitchen a disaster." On other occasions the intruder has settled for canned or frozen food, Steiner said. The intruder frequently has used his shower and then changed into Steiner's clean clothes, leaving dirty clothing behind in a heap. Wet towels often are discarded on the bathroom floor, and soap and shampoo spilled in the shower, he said. "At first I thought the clothes were stolen," he said. "But they would turn up a week later."

Steiner says the intruder never touches his valuables. "I have a stereo and a VCR ... they never touch money, the quarters or pennies that are on the table," he said. The intruder could be a transient who knows Steiner's working hours or a former inmate, trying to get even with him for some unknown reason, Steiner theorized. "After the first break-in, I found a note that said, 'I know where you live.' But I thought it was a joke," he said. "I've tried to catch them by not going to work or ... hiding in my car, but it hasn't worked." But he said, "I'm not going to move."

Results of the study have been released periodically and a book, "Foreign News and The New World Information Order," will be released this spring. UNESCO received a final study report and is expected to publish that also, Stevenson said. The report, which examines foreign news coverage in 17 countries, has been quoted and examined in newspapers around the world. The U.S. announced last week that within one year it would withdraw from UNESCO, the United National Education, Scientific and

Congress' Lebanon Views Uncertain

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill listened to the Reagan administration's case for keeping Marines in Lebanon and said it convinced him diplomatic efforts "need to be dramatically accelerated."
Republican leader Robert Michel listened to the same case and said he was "satisfied ... that what we are doing is correct for the time being."

The contrast between the two House leaders' statements may be more apparent than real, however, considering some of the qualifications that Michel added and some of the other things he has been saying.
Talking to reporters after a meeting of GOP leaders with Reagan's national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, Michel said Wednesday that most GOP lawmakers would reaffirm congressional approval for the troops' presence "if they were all given the kind of briefing that we got."

This sounded a lot different from O'Neill's statement Tuesday, after a Democratic meeting with Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Dam, when O'Neill said he would join "many others" in Congress to force withdrawal of the Marines unless the administration acted more vigorously.

Michel added, however, "We have got to speed up that negotiating process just as fast as we possibly can to eventually get to that point that I am sure the speaker and his members are talking about, having our Marines extricated."

On Tuesday, Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said, "It is my feeling that we are no longer really a constructive part of the peacekeeping force there. We are a target and we are causing hostile actions in Lebanon. It would be highly desirable for us now to rotate with other forces that would not be such a target."
Percy said this meant that the mission of the Marines had changed since September, when Congress authorized their presence in Beirut for 18 months, into April of 1985. That authorization specified that the administration would have to seek approval of Congress for any substantial change in the Marines' mission.

tary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, he thinks the administration is on the right track at least for now.
But Michel, who has a large Lebanese-American population in his congressional district, conceded that lawmakers who represent different constituencies might not feel so strongly about support for Lebanon after hearing from voters during the congressional break that ends Jan. 23.
"There could be any number of other districts in the country where frankly the people could care less about what happens to Lebanon," the GOP leader said.

Radar Monitoring On Route Now Intensified

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration has intensified the monitoring of commercial aircraft along the North Pacific route that Korean Air Lines Flight 007 used when it strayed over Soviet territory and was shot down last September.

actions have been taken to increase aircraft monitoring along the northern trans-Pacific route:
— Flights are being tracked by Air Force radar at King Salmon and Cape Newenham in Alaska, with military controllers at the facilities reporting to the FAA center in Anchorage if deviations exceed 10 miles.
— FAA controllers have been stationed temporarily at Shemya Air Force Base about 1,200 miles from Anchorage, at a point almost half way along the U.S.-Tokyo route. The controllers follow planes for 150 miles to establish that they are on the correct flight path.

— Construction has begun — although interrupted by winter — on a new civilian long-range air traffic radar facility at St. Paul Island in the Aleutian chain. The project is expected to be completed by September.
— U.S. commercial airliners have been directed to cross-check their on-board navigation equipment with a new electronic navigation beacon at Shemya Air Force Base to confirm their position. The FAA requirement does not pertain to foreign carriers, but they have been advised they may use the Shemya equipment.

Michel, asked if he agreed that the Marines' mission had changed, said, "I think it is substantially the same."
He did not, however, disavow his Peoria speech, saying only that he had cautioned at the time that he wanted to get back to Washington and hear from administration experts before making any decisions.
Now that he has heard from them, he said after his talk with McFarlane and a separate meeting with Secre-

The senior Republican on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Rep. William S. Broomfield, said voters in his Michigan district "want to see some action" toward getting the Marines home but added that McFarlane had assured the lawmakers that the administration is "moving in several areas that were encouraging."

Weekly Reader To Poll Young

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer
MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Weekly Reader could become the George Gallup of the grade-school set.
With twice-yearly polls, the publication read by about one-third of the nation's elementary school students plans to keep its finger on the pulse of young America — beginning with a survey on citizenship.

on their attitudes and knowledge of drug and alcohol abuse. The 500,000 responses have helped educators and others develop alcohol and drug programs for students, he said.
The citizenship survey will run the last week in January in editions read by students in second through sixth grade and in the junior high school publications, he said. Teachers will tally the results, which are expected to be released in late March.
Students will be asked a range of questions on their feelings about patriotism and the country's leadership and handling of problems like crime, pollution and protection of rights, Johnson said.
Since 1984 is a presidential election year, the fall survey will be on the election. In the following three years, two polls each year will be conducted, sampling students' opinions on different topics. Then the topics will be repeated, to see how students' opinions have changed over the years.
"If we were to find in 1987 that kids' attitudes have changed on drug abuse, that would be very interesting to know," Johnson said. "The implications are really very great."

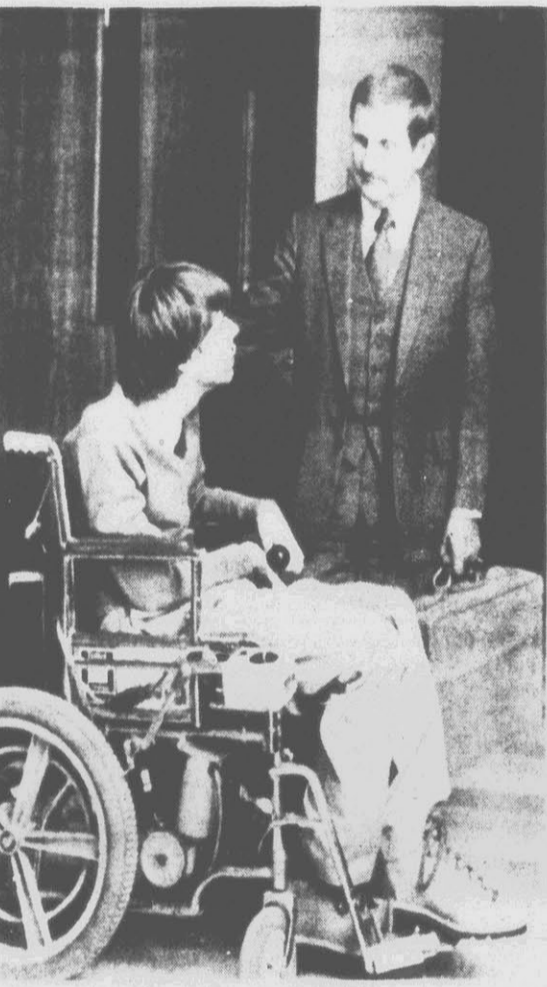

"The question of what the perception of our future voters is of our government is very important," Lynell Johnson, editorial director of Weekly Reader, said in a recent interview.
"That can tell us what is happening in our country," he said. "After all, they're the future."
Polls are not new to Weekly Reader, but they have never before been a regular feature.
Every presidential election year, the publication runs a poll and has found that "the kids have predicted the winner every year since this process started about 20 years ago," except when they chose Robert F. Kennedy in 1968, shortly before he was killed, Johnson said.
Last spring, the newspaper surveyed fourth-, fifth- and sixth-grade readers while its affiliate publications polled junior high school students

Previously, commercial aircraft using the northern most U.S.-Japan route were only followed by FAA radar for the first 200 miles after leaving Anchorage.
FAA officials confirmed the expanded monitoring by radar provides air traffic controllers a better opportunity to determine whether a plane is on a correct track along the air route, which approaches within 11 miles of Soviet airspace.
Flight 007 is believed by aviation experts to have strayed from its course almost immediately after leaving Anchorage. At the time it was shot down over Soviet territory Sept. 1, the plane was more than 350 nautical miles off course.
An investigation by the International Aviation Organization recently concluded that the Korean Air Line jumbo jet was already "about six nautical miles north of (the proper) track" when the plane left space controlled by the FAA radar in Anchorage.
An FAA spokesman confirmed that since Flight 007 was shot down, the following

The increased monitoring includes the use of several military radars to follow the planes for the first 500 miles of the route, with another radar check from a military facility about halfway along the 2,500-mile flight path between Anchorage and Tokyo.

Weekly Reader, published by Xerox Education Publications, reaches about 7 million elementary school students. Secondary school periodicals — Read, Current Science, Know Your World Extra and Current Events — reach about 2 million, Johnson said.
Xerox Education Publications, with headquarters in Middletown, is a division of Xerox Corp.

EXPECT REFUGEES
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Between 60,000 and 100,000 Cambodians may seek refuge in Thai territory because they anticipate dry season attacks by Vietnamese troops in Cambodia, a senior Thai Foreign Ministry official has told foreign diplomats.

New Record By Comet-Recorder

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The astronomer responsible for recording comets logged 23 in 1983, 13 more than in record-setting 1975 and so many that he nearly ran out of letters in the alphabet to name them.
Brian Marsden, director of the International Astronomical Union's Central Telegram Bureau, said Tuesday that he started to get worried in September, when an astronomer in California spotted three comets on three successive nights. Marsden named them 1983q, 1983r and 1983s.
Marsden, in charge of naming new comets observed by professional and amateur sky watchers around the world, this year also labeled the comets discovered by an extremely successful new satellite known as IRAS, or the Infrared Astronomy Satellite.

Crowd On Busy Street Look On As Woman Is Slain

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — A crowd of about 20 people looked on as a deaf woman was fatally stabbed on a busy city street, but "nobody moved to help" her, says a truck driver who passed by and tried to break up the attack.

"I just couldn't understand why people were just standing around and looking," James Greene said Wednesday, a day after 41-year-old Virginia Price died with what police said were about 20 stab wounds.

A 39-year-old construction worker, James L. Forbes, was arrested Wednesday and charged with murder. He was being held without bond in the Newport News city jail, police said.

Greene said he was passing through the city's East

End, an area of urban renewal projects and middle-class neighborhoods, at about 3 p.m. when he spotted the struggle from a distance.

"It looked like they were wrestling," said Greene, a veteran of the Army Special Forces. "It looked like he was hitting her with his fists, but then I saw the knife. That's when I parked my truck."

Greene, who is from nearby Hampton, said he grabbed an ax handle from the truck, ran to the pair and pounded the attacker squarely in the back near the neck.

"He just stood straight up like a grizzly bear. I thought I'd killed him the way I hit him, but it didn't seem to faze him one bit," said Greene.

Then, he said, the attacker reached into his coat pocket.

"I tried my best but I thought he was going for a gun so I just backed off of him. I don't mind helping people, but I don't want to get shot in the process," Greene said.

The attacker backed off and two or three other men chased him, but he got away, Greene said. Another man called police.

"Nobody moved to help the woman," he added.

Police said they have interviewed about 10 witnesses but have been unable to identify the others, several of whom were children.

"I didn't sleep well last night," said Thomas Parker, the man who summoned police. "I thought, maybe, I could have done more than I did."

"It happens frequently that people stand around, watch a crime and don't intervene," said Sgt. James Ledford, a police spokesman.

Several psychologists attempted to explain the phenomenon of the crowd's passivity, which Dr. Bruce Hoiberg said it is known among sociologists as "Bystander Intervention Problem."

"There's a diffusion of responsibility in a crowd," Hoiberg said. "The larger the group, the less likely anyone will be to intervene."

Some witnesses struggle with themselves for having turned their backs, said Dr. William Reiss, although the reactions can "range from passive detachment — forgetting it the next morning — to finding events so distasteful that the person represses it."

"People are genuinely frightened when they witness something like that. That's the feeling I would have," said Dr. Joseph Lassen, director of Riverside Hospital's mental health center.

One East End resident, who asked not to be identified, said, "I can understand why they (the bystanders) were afraid. You don't fool around with junkies. They can hurt you." Police declined to comment on what prompted the attack or whether drugs played any role.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JANUARY 6, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A wonderful day for you to express your most talented capabilities. It would be wise to contact those in positions of power as well as usual allies to get them to go along with you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A good day to concentrate upon your finest ambitions and then to pursue them in a definite way. Bring a group of friends together later.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A good day for expansion where your career is concerned, so get into the right phases of it and accomplish a good deal.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good day for concentrating on a trip or starting on one that can bring you greater success. Listen carefully.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Be more modern in business affairs and gain the co-operation of bigwigs. Plan some amusement with your mate. Be kind.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Contact successful people whose ideas are very different to your own and find out what their secret of success is. Frolic in the evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get those new gadgets that will make your work easier and get you far better results than in the past.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study new forms of recreation that you and your pals can enjoy. The get busy at your special talents. Stop worrying about finances.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Show those at home how to become more efficient and you do them and yourself a favor. But listen to their ideas too.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try modern methods with your present enterprises and you can add to profits considerably. Confer with partners.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have fine ideas today that can easily gain you more assets and property, so do something about them quickly. Relax tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Your judgment and ideas are good and you can gain those personal aims that mean much to you so go after them in a sure way.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A good day to go after more exciting personal goals. Get out of that rut which is making you nervous.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be someone who will get into unusual endeavors that have an element of danger in them so teach to be smart and wear safeguards, but don't try to curb this rare talent. Teach early to save money.

Suit Filed By Teacher

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Gamewell Middle School seventh-grade teacher has filed a lawsuit alleging she was repeatedly denied promotions because of her sex by the Caldwell County Board of Education and Superintendent Kenneth Roberts.

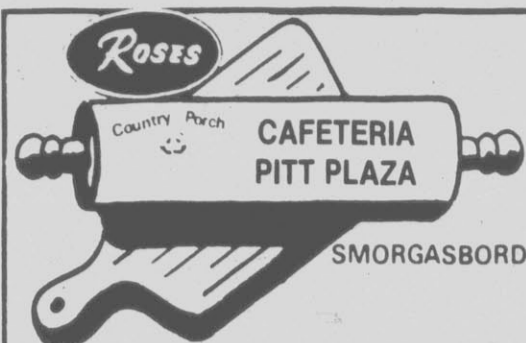

The suit, filed Dec. 22 by Ann Hart Crosby in federal court in Statesville, says Mrs. Crosby was passed over for promotions to assistant principal that eventually went to less qualified male applicants.

Accompanying the suit is a statement by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission that "there is reasonable cause to believe that the allegation regarding the denial of promotion is true ..."

The EEOC review also notes that "all of the principals selected since 1974 had been male, 86 percent of the fulltime asst principals selected had been male, and 75 percent of the parttime assistant principals selected had been male. Further the records show that females who were selected for asst principals positions had been teachers for longer periods of timethan their male counterparts."

The suit seeks injunctive relief, lost wages, court costs and $15,000 for lost professional opportunity, mental anguish and the loss of constitutional rights.

A school attorney said the board disagrees with the EEOC determination.

Dollar Moves To Record High But Exporters Complaining

By The Associated Press
The dollar is back on an upward track, propelled to record heights in relation to the currencies of several European nations by high interest rates, international tensions and technical market factors, analysts say.

This is good news for American travelers because increases in the exchange value of the dollar, which had been slipping in the last few weeks of 1983, make overseas purchases and U.S. imports cheaper. But U.S. exporters complain that a strong dollar makes their products less competitive on world markets and many of America's trade partners in Europe say it hurts their economies.

While the dollar was surging on foreign exchange markets Wednesday, U.S. stock prices were rising as well, posting the biggest gains in more than a month.

The closely watched Dow

Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 16.31 points — the best single-day rise since Nov. 29 — to 1,269.05. Trading volume exceeded 112.9 million shares compared with 71.3 million the day before.

The dollar hit new heights in hectic trading against the currencies of France, Italy, Norway and Finland and reached a 10-year peak against the West German mark Wednesday, and held steady today. Analysts said the dollar was helped by the continuing high level of interest rates, a heightening of international tensions and technical market factors.

Both the dollar and the stock market have benefitted in the past year from political unrest abroad, since investors view the American markets as relatively safer.

The military coup d'etat in Nigeria last weekend has raised speculation that Nigeria, as a major oil producer, might push more oil onto the market and undermine the fragile pricing structure of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. OPEC's news agency reported Wednesday that the new Nigerian military government had pledged to support OPEC price and production limits.

Even so, the British pound came under pressure on currency markets, since a slump in oil prices would be expected to mean lower revenues for Britain from its North Sea fields.

The only currency to gain ground on the dollar Wednesday was the Japanese yen, which turned in a mixed performance.

As the dollar soared in European trading, the French franc fell to an all-time low of 11.7 cents, the value of 1,000 Italian lire dropped to 59.2 cents, the Finnish markka slipped to 16.9 cents and the Norwegian kroner dipped to 12.8 cents.

The West German mark fell to 35.8 cents as the government reported the highest annual unemployment figures since the end of World War II.

In other economic and business developments Wednesday:

—Getty Oil Co. said it has agreed to be merged into a company to be formed by Pennzoil Co. and Gordon P. Getty in a deal valued at $5.28 billion. The 48 million Getty shares not already controlled by Pennzoil or Gordon Getty — the youngest son of the company's founder, J. Paul Getty — are to be purchased for $110 apiece.

—Northeastern International Airways Inc. said it is planning to cut air fares between the Northeast and Florida next month, offering an unrestricted one-way off-peak fare of $75 and a peak fare of $89, beginning Feb. 9, to Fort Lauderdale, West Palm Beach and Orlando. The major airlines currently are charging $99 for one-way fares with restrictions, scheduled to rise back to $119 on Feb. 9.

—A Korean firm building a new steel mill will receive help from the Export-Import Bank in the form of guaranteed loans if it awards contracts worth more than $30 million to two Pennsylvania firms, the board announced.

Gilliam To Chair Meet

BETHEL — State Rep. John Gilliam of Windsor will chair a special legislative commission public hearing here Monday on fire and rescue services in North Carolina.

Gilliam said the purpose of the 7:30 p.m. hearing at North Pitt High School is to determine if fire and rescue services in the state "are being served efficiently and operating effectively from the state government's perspective."

The representative said the services now fall under the jurisdiction of seven departments and 13 agencies in state government and the "Legislature fears that there may be a duplication of services."

The General Assembly created the committee to study and review current statutory responsibilities of the state departments and agencies involved in the delivery of fire and rescue training programs, to analyze the total costs of the state programs, and to study and review pertinent data.

The committee will prepare a final written report to the 1984 General Assembly. Bethel is the site of the first of five hearings planned across the state.

Gilliam is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the 1st Congressional District seat now held by Walter B. Jones.

FOCUS

Back to the Drawing Chip
This week children across the U.S. are returning to school. According to a recent survey, 55,765 public schools use computers in instruction — more than double the number used one year ago. More schools began using computers last year than in all the previous years combined. The average high school now has 11 computers; the average junior high has 7; the average elementary school has 3.5. By the end of 1984 every U.S. school is likely to have one computer.

DO YOU KNOW — What brand of computer is most frequently used in schools?
WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — One Braille "cell" contains six dots.

French People See Prospect Of Terrorist Violence

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — Agents of terror and death, who long have used France as a killing ground for external disputes, appear to have turned against France itself, and the bloody bombings on New Year's Eve have led many people to fear the worst for the future.

International terrorism and murder are nothing new to the French, who for years have watched as bombs and guns felled Palestinians, Iranians, Israelis, Syrians and Americans and settled grudges between Armenians and Turks or Arabs and Jews.

But Saturday night's bombings at the main railway station in Marseille and aboard a high-speed train traveling from Marseille to Lyon which killed four people and injured dozens of others may be a sign of things to come.

As the Paris daily Le Matin put it in Monday's editions: "A country like France must expect in the coming years to be the 'Great Satan' of evil in the world."

And it may be the price France must pay for its increasing role in the Middle East.

Numerous anonymous callers have claimed responsibility for the latest bombings, ranging from those professing to represent Shiite Moslems to a revolutionary army against all non-white foreigners. None of the claims is being given credence by police, who nonetheless say no hypothesis has been rejected.

But speculation is running high that the bombings were the work of a Shiite group called Islamic Jihad, or "Holy War." That organization has claimed responsibility for several attacks, notably the Oct. 23 bombing at U.S. and French military headquarters in Beirut that killed nearly 300, a similar attack on an Israeli headquarters in south Lebanon that killed 62 people on Nov. 4, and the bombing of the American Embassy in Beirut

April 18 in which 69 people died.

The day after a Dec. 21 truck-bombing at a French regimental headquarters in Beirut, Islamic Jihad announced it was giving the French and American contingents of the multinational peacekeeping force 10 days to get out of Lebanon or it would make "the earth tremble beneath their feet."

Many French newspapers and commentators have dwelt on the fact that Saturday's attack came exactly 10 days after the bombing in Beirut and were quick to blame the pro-Iranian organization for Saturday's explosions.

"The New Year's Eve deaths are to be attributed, as those in Beirut, to the Franco-Iranian contention, to the struggle between Shiite Moslems and the West," wrote the Quotidien de Paris.

Though powerful, the bombs in St. Charles station and aboard the train were nothing like the massive truckloads of explosives used in Lebanon. And so far, Islamic Jihad has not manifested itself outside the Middle East.

Fourteen people were killed and 135 injured in terrorist attacks in France during 1982, but most of those either came from home-grown Corsican or Basque nationalists or were aimed at obvious political targets, most of them foreign.

And in 1983, the most serious attack was carried out by Armenian militants in a bombing at the Turkish Airlines counter at Orly airport, killing eight people and injuring 54.

But French authorities have been bracing for a surge in terrorism, particularly in light of the worsening relations with Iran and threats by Islamic Jihad. Saturday's bombings were the third and fourth in the past six weeks.

Police are still trying to determine who bombed two expensive Paris restaurants — the Oree du Bois on Nov. 19 and the Grand Vefour Dec. 23.

There is no shortage of "enemies."

Iran, already unhappy because France harbors much of the opposition to the Tehran government — notably former President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, Mujahadeen leader Massoud Rajavi and former Premier Shahpour Bakhtiar — is further angered by French military support for Iraq in the Gulf War.

The Iranians closed down two French cultural centers along with the commercial attache's office. France retaliated by closing Iran's Islamic Center in Paris and last week expelled three diplomats and five employees at the center.

Islamic Jihad, believed to be made up of Lebanese

Shiites with close relations to Tehran, wants to form an Islamic republic in Lebanon and rid the country of all foreigners.

And the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia has a grudge against France for holding a number of its militants in prison.

As the investigation continues in Marseille and Tain L'Hermitage, France's transportation minister, announced unspecified new measures to prevent such attacks in the future. But beyond tightening controls at borders and airports and stepping up surveillance of suspects, it was unclear what the French could do to stop the bombers.

Newspapers and political figures have condemned the bombings, and the government has vowed that the perpetrators will be caught and punished.

But, as the Marseille newspaper Le Meridional put it Monday: "The most vigorous condemnations, the promises of exemplary punishment, are nothing more than a cry of impotence."

Permitted Role In CIA Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court is allowing the Senate Intelligence Committee to intervene in the case of a former CIA official's widow trying to find out how he died.

The body of John A. Paisley of Washington was found in the Chesapeake Bay in 1978, with a bullet in the head, a week after his sloop was found grounded with no one aboard. He was wearing divers' weighted belts around his waist and chest. Police said they believed he committed suicide.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Tuesday said the committee could intervene in the case of Maryann Paisley, who is seeking documents from the CIA and the FBI under the Freedom of Information Act. The case has been sent back to district court for further proceedings.

Bank Failures Rose In 1983

WASHINGTON (AP) — More banks failed in 1983 — 48 — than in any year since 1939, a figure which the government attributes to sharply fluctuating interest rates in recent years and the long 1981-82 recession.

Alan Whitney, spokesman for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., said 48 federally insured banks failed last year, six more failures than in 1982 and the highest since 60 banks went under in 1939. The insurance fund guarantees deposits up to $100,000 in 14,800 banks.

The savings and loan industry fared better last year. Thirty-three weak associations were merged with government assistance, less than the record 47 posted in 1982, federal officials said.

Veal Leads Terps By Wolfpack, 59-55

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Maryland wants to climb in the college basketball rankings, and in beating North Carolina State in its Atlantic Coast Conference opener the Terrapins may have gotten just the boost they need to continue their quest.

Herman Veal scored 18 points, including a pair of free throws with 1:03 remaining, to lift the fifth-ranked Terrapins to a 59-55 triumph over the Wolfpack, ranked 12th in the Associated Press poll.

In other ACC action, eighth-ranked Wake Forest cruised to an 82-57 victory over Richmond behind Kenny Green's 22 points. Tom Sheehy's four straight points late in the second half broke open a close battle and gave No. 20 Virginia a 74-64 triumph over Virginia Tech.

Dan Meagher scored 23 points and Jay Bilas added 20 — each career bests — as Duke trounced Loyola of Maryland 92-68. Clemson freshman Horace Grant scored 21 points in his first start as the Tigers stopped St. Francis 97-63, while forward John Salley scored 20 points as Georgia Tech defeated Appalachian State 78-61.

Tonight, top-ranked North Carolina meets Boston University as Tar Heel coach Dean Smith tangles with a team coached by one of his former players, John Kuester.

Veal's free throws broke a 53-all tie, and after Wolfpack guard Spud Webb committed a turnover, Adrian Branch converted a two-shot foul to help raise Maryland's record to 9-1.

"Anytime you can win on the road in the ACC it's a good win," Maryland coach Lefty Driesell said. "If we come back and beat William and Mary Saturday and North Carolina next week, we'll be right up there in the rankings."

While Veal scored 18 points to pace the Terrapins, N.C. State's Lorenzo Charles matched that figure. Charles scored 13 of his points in the first half, however, and spent the second half trying to shake a combination of a double team and a tough Maryland zone. Terry Gannon dented that zone with some outside shooting, but not enough to make the Terrapins reconsider their strategy.

"We're not going to force the ball inside. We had the shots. We just didn't hit them," said Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano, whose team is now 10-3. "There's a fine line between an inside game and an outside game. I thought our best percentage was to get the outside shot tonight."

Wake Forest's record is unblemished in 10 games, but its health might be a little suspect. Illness and injuries forced Demon Deacon coach Carl Tacy to shuttle players in and out. During one of the changes, Richmond rallied to cut a 26-10 lead to 30-28 just before halftime.

"I think we got a little tentative at the end of the first half," Tacy said. "We had to do the same things in the second half that we did in the first half to build up the lead again — controlling the boards and, on defense, playing a little more aggressively."

The Cavaliers not only needed Sheehy's shooting, but a strong defense to shut down Virginia Tech's Dell Curry. Coach Terry Holland found that defense and, after Curry had scored 16 points, was held to three points in the last 10 minutes.

"I think the one thing that gave us the edge, and Dave Odum talked me into it on the bench, was that box-in-one defense toward the end of the game," Holland said of the advice given by his assistant. "We were finally able to control Curry."

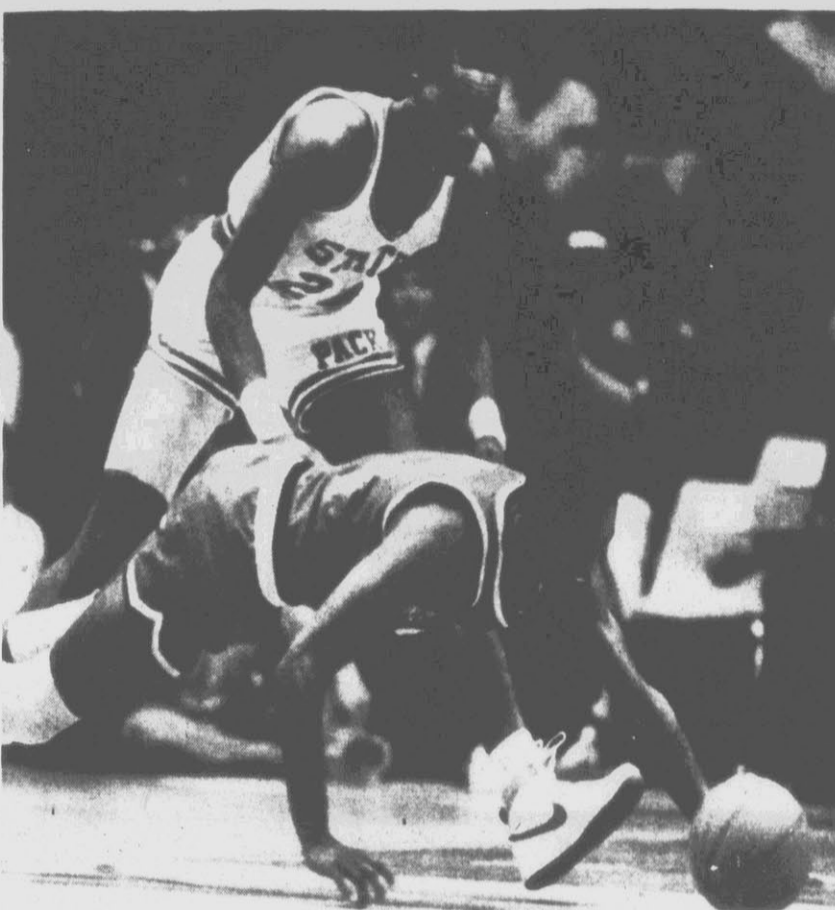

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said his team's defense was "not particularly sharp throughout the game, but there were spurts where we were sharp."

Clemson's victory snapped a two-game losing streak, and included 19 points from Murray Jarman. The Tigers are now 8-2.

Appalachian State held a 16-15 lead midway through the first half, but the Yellow Jackets took advantage of their opponent's foul troubles and rallied for a 38-28 halftime lead which was never seriously threatened. After the game, both coaches sounded more like they were thinking about what was ahead instead of what had transpired.

"I saw some things out of our kids that are going to help us down the road," Appalachian State coach Kevin Cantwell said as his team prepares for the Southern Conference.

"I thought again that we had some really good spurts and some where we didn't play so well," Georgia Tech's Bobby Cremins. "I think Wake Forest will play a great game this Saturday. We can't have any lapses. We'll have to play a great game if we are to win."

Pack In Two Wins

PLYMOUTH — Washington High School swept a pair of Northeastern Conference wrestling matches from Plymouth and Roanoke last night, remaining unbeaten in the league.

The Pam Pack downed winless Roanoke, 78-0, then gained a 38-23 win over Plymouth in the final match of the night. Plymouth beat Roanoke, 63-12.

Roanoke's only wins for the night came in the Plymouth match, where 121-pounder Burgess pinned Spruill, and 140-pounder Anderson also pinned a Spruill.

Washington's wins in the Plymouth match were recorded by Joe Landon, who pinned Darren Johnson in 3:01 at 100 pounds; Brian Stokes, who decided John Spruill, 18-3, at 107; Sean Pheasant, who decided Mike Jackson, 14-0, at 128; Phil Harris, who decided Phil Styons, 19-5, at 134; Lee Ferguson, who pinned Melvin Brown in 54 seconds at 140; Rob Jackson, who pinned Roth Basnight in 5:45 at 187, and David Cuthrell, who pinned Mark Mizelle in 2:33 at heavyweight.

Washington is now 6-0 in league matches and 6-2 overall. The Pam Pack's next outing will be Wednesday at Edenton with Williamston. Roanoke travels to Roanoke Rapids with Tarboro next Wednesday. The Redskins are 0-8 in the league.

Chargers Nip Cougars

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton again pulled a victory out of the hat as Mike Dixon's heroics put them into an overtime, then won the game for the Chargers, 47-45 over SouthWest Edgecombe last night.

Both teams scored ten points in the third period, leaving A-G up, 31-30, as the last quarter got under way. In that, SouthWest inched into the lead, 42-40, in the closing seconds, but Dixon hit with two seconds to play, tying it and forcing the overtime.

SouthWest scored first in the extra period, but Calvin Peterson scored to tie it up once more. After SWE hit on one of two at the line, Peterson again tied it, also hitting the first of two free throws. Dixon then made one of two at the line and after SWE missed, he was fouled intentionally, and made one of

Fine Start For Rose, Conley Matmen

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Two of the more successful wrestling programs in the area are at D.H. Conley and Rose High School.

But both this year are experiencing dropoffs in the number of athletes out for the sports. Rose is forced in each meet to forfeit two weight classes because of the absence of people at those weights, while Conley has only one back-up wrestler on the varsity squad, and is also missing one classification.

But Conley coach Mill Sherman doesn't feel that the sport is on the wane. "It may appear that way at times," he said, "but nationally only soccer and wrestling are showing growth. There are more wrestling teams in North Carolina now than there were five years ago. The problem in this area seems to be the lack of continuity in coaching. So many changes have hurt the sport."

Sherman would appear to know what he's talking about, having been at Conley for a number of years and is the dead of wrestling coaches in the area.

Both Conley and Rose have gotten off to 6-0 starts and both coaches express surprise that things are going so well.

"Based on the fact that we have only five starters back from last year's team, I didn't expect to do so well," Sherman said. "How long we stay undefeated may be questionable, however. We'll find out quickly since we wrestle Havelock and West Carteret soon. They're the favorites this year."

Not being the favorite is unusual for Conley, which has won the Coastal Conference title every year it's been in the league so far.

Meanwhile, Curtis Sendek of Rose — in his first year as head coach with the Ramblers — said that while things have gone well so far, the team still has a lot to learn. "We didn't wrestle well (Tuesday) against Kinston. I think that was due to the Christmas layoff. But we're a lot better than we were last year."

Sendek has seven or eight who were starters last year back, but notes that a lot has changed since last year.

"They were doing a lot of upper body moves last year and we're changing this around. They're doing well and they've picked up most of the moves quickly and the record reflects it."

Both coaches are being guarded about the conference and the sectionals — which again will be held at Conley this year. Conley will also host the Coastal tournament.

"Our aim is for every wrestler to win the conference title," Sendek said. "We're aiming for a peak right at tournament time. We have some good people, but we'll have to wait and see just how much they want it come that time."

Sherman feels that it will be a struggle to retain the Coastal championship. "If we wrestle tough, it will be a battle. We like to win our dual meets, but at the same time, wrestling is a tournament sport and the regular season matches are meant to prepare you for the tournaments."

Sherman added that while he has good kids throughout the program, whether they will contest for sectional honors remains to be seen. "We have the talent, but they'll have to improve to compete on this level. I don't think any one team will dominate the sectionals this year, and if we continue to improve we'll have a shot at it."

Adam Levine, a sophomore who transferred from Illinois and has a good background, is 4-1 at 134, while junior Sherry Frank is 6-2 at 140. Junior Jeff Roberson is 4-2 at the 147 level.

Garry Barrett, a junior, has a 2-5 record at 157, while Ken Daniels, also a junior, has a 2-4 mark at 169. John Nelson is 4-3 at 185, and is a junior.

Tow two best records are in the heavier weights as Marvin Fleming, a senior, has posted a 5-1 mark at 197, and Barry Lyons, a junior, is 7-1 at the heavyweight slot.

David Farris, a freshman who actually weights in at 86 pounds, is handing the 100-pound level for Conley and has a 4-4-1 record so far. Jackie King, a sophomore, has a 5-5 mark at 107 for the Vikings.

Like Rose, however, Conley is forced to forfeit at 114 pounds.

Reginald Moore, a senior who has moved to third place on the career point list at Conley, is 11-1 currently. He's a returning conference champ and second round runner-up, and was a champion in the recent West Carteret Invitational. He leads the team in first takedowns with 11.

Kerry Farris, a junior, is another returning starter at 128, with a 10-3 record which includes a West Carteret title. Joel May, also a returning starter at 134, is a junior with a 4-3 record. "He's our strongest wrestler for his size," Sherman points out.

At 140, senior Shawn Hardy returns, and is 10-2, having won a title at the WRAL Invitational. He has the team's fastest pin so far, in 16 seconds. Martin Anderson, a sophomore, is off last year's JV team at 147, and is 7-5 so far. He has the second fastest pin in 17 seconds.

At 157 is senior Scott Boyle, who has put together a 5-5 record. He has experience, but is starting for the first time.

Backing him up is Sewell Mills, a sophomore with a 0-1 record.

Alton Mobley, a junior out for the first time, has a 3-6 mark at the 169-pound level. Ricky Rice, a junior who won the West Carteret title is 8-3 at 187.

Gerald Harper, a junior who was the runner-up in both the West Carteret and WRAL tournaments, has an 8-2 record in the 197-pound level. Stacy McCarter, a senior, is 10-1 at heavyweight. He was a conference champ last year and the sectional runner-up. He won the West Carteret tournament this year and leads the team in pins with nine in his 11 matches.

To Make 3 Trips

Three charter bus trips are planned by the Pirate Club this basketball season, with the first January 14-15 for the William and Mary game.

Cost is only $52.50 for round trip bus, one night's lodging and refreshments on board. The length of this trip will allow for sightseeing and shopping. Accommodations are for the Holiday Inn-West in historic Williamsburg.

The second trip will leave February 18 for Richmond. Accommodations are at the Holiday Inn-West. Cost is $55 per person.

The final trip of the season is to UNC-Wilmington Saturday, Feb. 25. Cost is only $16.50 for round trip bus fare and refreshments on board. Return is planned for immediately after the 7:30 p.m. game, but if demand warrants, one night's lodging can be included for a total cost of $41. A pre-game social with the Wilmington Pirate Club and Alumni chapters will be held at a time and place to be announced.

For reservations or more information on any of these trips, contact Charles Shavitz at the Pirate Club, (919) 757-6178.

Five Are Drafted

Five members of the East Carolina football team were drafted by the USFL in the first six round yesterday.

All-America offensive guard Terry Long was picked by the Washington Federals in the fourth round, while two defensive linemen, Steve Hamilton and Hal Stephens, were picked by the Michigan Panthers and the Memphis Showboats, respectively.

Quarterback Kevin Ingram was picked up in the fifth round by the Tampa Bay Bandits, while safety Clint Harris was drafted in the sixth by Washington. An unofficial report has Ingram already signed with the Canadian Football League's Edmonton club, however.

The USFL's draft was scheduled to wind up today.

COACHES' CORNER

By CHARLIE HARRISON
East Carolina Basketball Coach

And a Happy New Year to you too! It has been a long December and even the New Year didn't exactly begin with a bang! Keeping one's proper perspective and keeping one's patience is a virtue. The unsuccessful results of our past games have hurt but I've seen progress.

Where the young team was and where it is now is very encouraging to me as I've seen them grow — grow as basketball players and grow as individuals. Only those that are around every day or care to ask know this. This group is special. They've played basketball brilliantly at times and at some point of a game revert back to the old days of yesteryear — that being high school when their size or mere athletic ability could dominate.

Our schedule has been one with a great degree of difficulty. Our opponents thus far are winning 81% of their games in pre-season and several of the less known opponents to North Carolinians were returning four starters from 20 win teams a year ago. No excuses! Just facts.

We will get better. We will survive but it won't be easy.

We have encountered a long road. Snow storms — lost luggage — burst pipes and no heat in hotels in sub-zero weather — missed flight connections — a team flu epidemic — first airline flights for three kids — the second for two more — the first encounter of a dirty player who was a cheap-shot artist — the first trip to the state of Virginia for three freshmen — and the bitter disappointment of getting beat badly after playing so well for thirty to thirty-five minutes.

And what comes of it? Nothing — but, really something. This something is a group of special people that want to succeed. They have received nothing but positive comments of their effort and their behavior and social habits when in the public eye as representatives of ECU.

Nothing good happens without hard work and effort. Nothing that is good remains good unless hard work and good people are involved. This group works hard and they are definitely good people. I can then deduct that something good will happen. I can't predict when but it will happen. I hope you will bear with them and me for that matter and watch a program and good people grow.

The baby must crawl before the baby can walk — the baby must walk before it can run. The boy must train before he can compete. The man must improve and adjust if he hopes to remain good or successful.

Conley Wrestlers

NFL Makes Big Effort To Recruit This Year

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — The party is over and the "big rush" is on for National Football League teams recruiting college players.

Some 320 representatives of the NFL — scouts, general managers, assistants and coaches from every team — have besieged the 66 players gathered for the Shrine East-West All-Star Game at Stanford Stadium on Saturday.

In years past, NFL officials mingled casually with the players, watched them at practice, tried to get a sense of who might fit in with their rosters. This year, it's different.

Stung by criticism that some of the top players last year signed with the rival United States Football League because the NFL didn't pay enough attention to them, the NFL has mounted a vigorous recruitment campaign.

"It's like a big rush of fraternities," Art Rooney, Jr., the Pittsburgh Steelers vice president, said Wednesday night. "There are more scouts than there are players. These games have been getting like social events. We used to just scout the players before the USFL. Now it's taken on a different dimension. It's more serious."

The NFL showed off a propaganda film of game highlights to the players on Tuesday night, then introduced them to some of the team officials in an informal setting. On Wednesday night, there was a talk by a league representative about drugs. The players have received a book "The NFL and You," describing the advantages and fringe benefits of playing in the league.

"I loved it," said Southern Mississippi center Steve Carmody. "I felt the film was talking to me."

It's the kind of scene that also goes on at the Hula Bowl, Blue-Gray Game and the Senior Bowl. But during the week of the USFL draft, held Wednesday in New York, the recruitment is a little more intense.

"We got a complaint last year," said Francis "Bucko" Kilroy, general manager of the New England Patriots. "We did a survey to find out why we lost seven of the people that went to the USFL. One of the reasons was they were completely ignored by the scouting groups. That's why we really have to go out and talk to the people. This year we're going to show more interest in them."

"Last year, I think we were taken advantage of," he said. "This year, we won't be caught standing still. We're here to sell the NFL on merit."

Kilroy said he and his team officials have talked with 42 players since Sunday.

Mike Rozier, the Heisman Trophy running back from Nebraska who was selected No. 1 by the USFL's Pittsburgh Maulers, avoided the "rush" by delaying his arrival until Wednesday night. He bruised his leg in the Orange Bowl loss to Miami on Monday, but was expected to suit up on Saturday.

Rozier is exactly the kind of player the USFL is going to focus on in "selective skirmishes" for the best talent.

Match-Play Labeled A Success By Beman

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Three days of competition remain and golf's leading players are two days from their first match but PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman didn't hesitate to label the $1 million Seiko-Tucson Match Play Championship "already a great success."

"I think it will be very well received," Beman said Wednesday during second round play in the new event that offers more than $1 million in prizes in two brackets.

"But," Beman added, "that doesn't mean that some players don't feel things should be a little different here and there."

That, of course, was in response to player criticism of the format which provided eight golfers with byes into the second round and gave passes to eight others — the leaders of the 1983 Seiko Grand Prix list — into the fifth round Saturday morning.

Those leaders — Fuzzy Zoeller, Lanny Wadkins, Gil Morgan, Hal Sutton, Ben Crenshaw, Tom Kite, Cal Peete and Tom Watson — are assured of $15,000.

Bob Gilder charged that amounts to "appearance money."

"He's wrong," Beman said. "They won that off their performance last year."

"The format answers some of the age-old problems and liabilities of match play."

And, the commissioner said, match play, making its first appearance on the American Tour in more than a decade, will remain on the schedule but added that he did not anticipate "a large number of match play events."

At least one player, senior Don January, will welcome that announcement.

"That's too much like work," said January, the leading money-winner on last year's senior circuit, after his 3 and 2 decision over Jim Ferree.

Two of the leading performers on the regular tour, Ray Floyd and Craig Stadler, were upset victims Wednesday. Each had received a bye in the first round, Floyd, however, watched four sophomore Dan Forsman drop 18 and 12 foot birdie putts on the 15th and 16th holes for a 2 and 1 victory. Stadler blew a 3 up lead with four holes to play and lost to J.C. Sneed's 19th hole birdie.

In some other top second-round matches, Mark McCumber eliminated Bill Rogers 5 and 4, Dave Stockton took Wally Armstrong 1 up, Lee Elder beat John Mahaffey with a 19th hole birdie, Morris Hatafsky surprised Wayne Levi 2 and 1, Jim Colbert got by Mike Nicolette 1 up, Payne Stewart beat Gilder 1 up and Curtis Strange won 1 up over Danny Edwards.

In seniors play, five-time British Open champ Peter Thomson of Australia eliminated Miller Barber 2 and 1, Gay Brewer closed out Roberto de Vicenzo 3 and 2, Gene Littler beat Howie Johnson 5 and 4, Charles Sifford stopped Bill Johnston 1 up, Orville Moody won from Rod Funseth 4 and 3, Dan Sikes went to the 21st hole for a 1 up decision over Dan Sikes and Billy Casper scored a 1 up decision over Doug Sanders.

FOR CABLE TELEVIEWERS IN THE DARK ABOUT THE "SEASON TICKET" ACC BASKETBALL SCHEDULE.

Dear ACC Basketball Fans:

The purpose of this letter is to explain why the "Season Ticket" package of 21 ACC basketball games is being offered on a pay-television basis to ESPN viewers through participating cable systems.

First, a word of background. Last season ESPN telecast 38 ACC basketball games nationwide. ESPN was required to black out these games in the ACC region so that the games could be offered on over-the-air television. In total, 38 games were offered over-the-air. No other college conference in the country offers this many televised games to its regional fans. Nevertheless, viewers have requested more ACC basketball games on television.

With this in mind, we met this past September with the television syndicators (Raycom/Jefferson) of your conference to discuss how we collectively might make more games available to the ACC basketball enthusiast, and provide an alternative to ACC black-outs on ESPN. From these discussions, the "Season Ticket" package emerged.

Let me summarize the key facts of "Season Ticket":

- The "Season Ticket" games are offered in addition to the 38 game over-the-air schedule. Without "Season Ticket," no more than 38 games would be seen this season.
- In order to comply with the agreement protecting the interests of local television stations in the ACC region, ESPN is required to restrict the additional games to pay-cable viewers. We believe that the price of about $3.00 per game is appropriate; the only other way to see a "Season Ticket" game would be to go to the arena and spend considerably more, assuming tickets were available at all. Importantly, the ACC fan should be given the opportunity to buy additional games if desired.
- "Season Ticket" has the support of ACC schools, in part because they will share in the revenues which are needed to support their athletic programs. "Season Ticket" also helps the ACC make more games available to its fans, and the conference receives additional national ESPN exposure for each of its teams, conference receives additional national ESPN exposure for each of its teams, "Season Ticket" provides ACC fans with the opportunity to see more great basketball at a fair price, without impairing the extensive over-the-air schedule. We hope you agree. There are 16 great games remaining, so please call your participating cable operator.

We at ESPN would like to extend our best wishes for the New Year.

Sincerely,

J. William Grimes,
President and Chief Executive Officer

March Of Dimes Reception Set

Chancellor and Mrs. John Howell of East Carolina University will host a reception Monday for the March of Dimes "WalkAmerica."

The reception is aimed at recruiting businesses and industries throughout the Coastal Plains region for "TeamWalk," a part of "WalkAmerica" concept, said Charles Asbell, local coordinator.

"This is not a solicitation effort. 'TeamWalk' is a unique opportunity for organizations to become visibly involved in a community activity, to promote team spirit and to generate funds for the March of Dimes," he said.

Regional sponsors for the event include WNCT-TV and Jaycees in Greenville, Washington, Goldsboro, Wilson, Roanoke Rapids, Rocky Mount, Williamston, Kinston and the Ahoskie Jaycettes.

For further information, contact the March of Dimes office at 758-2542.

Banquet Tickets Available

The Mental Health Association in Pitt County will hold an awards banquet Thursday, Jan. 12, at 7 p.m. at the Ramada Inn here.

In addition to the presentation of awards, officers and directors will be installed. The cost of the meal is $7.50, including gratuities. Anyone who would like to attend may send a check to confirm a reservation to Annual Meeting Committee, Mental Health Association in Pitt County, P.O. Box 167, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Counselor Re-elected To Committee

Mrs. Jean Creech, a counselor at J. H. Rose High School, was elected to a second three-year term on the North Carolina Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. The selection was made at the annual business meeting held in New Orleans. In 1980, Mrs. Creech was the first classroom teacher to serve on the state committee. She also serves as District I Coordinator.

Cars Damaged In Collision

An estimated $300 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 4:46 p.m. collision Wednesday at the intersection of Maxwell Street and Dickinson Avenue.

Police identified the drivers of the cars involved as Connie Taylor Corney of 3008 Phillip Road and Curtis Leland Hastings of 2904 Ellsworth Drive.

No Meeting Planned

The Pitt County Erosion Control Commission will not meet Monday, as scheduled, because no plans have been submitted for review and consideration.

Cash Taken From Vehicle

Greenville police are investigating the theft of $300 in cash from a car parked at the Medical Pavilion on West Fifth Street Wednesday.

Officer R.L. Gorham said Bobbie Ward Daniels of Winterville, reported the theft about 9:10 p.m.

Gorham said the cash was in a wallet locked in the glove compartment of the car, which was forced open. Damage to the vehicle was set at $50.

Honor Service On Bethel Bd.

BETHEL — The Bethel Town Board Tuesday presented a proclamation of appreciation to C.M. Burton Jr., who served as a commissioner for 12 years and recently retired from the board.

The board also issued a proclamation honoring deceased commissioner Richard B. Johnson, who served on the board for four years.

Bethel resident Alverna Morning requested that a street light be installed at the end of Elm Street and that a mobile home located in that area be moved as it is in violation of zoning ordinances.

Dale Holland with Talbert Cox and Associates met with the board to go over the guidelines for the FY 1983 Community Development Block Grant Program. The board voted to adopt the Rehabilitation Grant Loan and Relocation Program Administrative Guidelines. The Contractors Handbook and the Citizen's Participation Plan Uniform Administrative Requirements, all in connection with the Community Development Block Grant Program.

Ricky McGhee from Mid-East Commission presented a financial report for the Community Development Program for the period Oct. 1, 1981-Dec. 30, 1983; he also presented proposed budget amendments for the block grant. The board adopted the amendments as presented.

The board voted to award Harrelson Construction Company a contract for the demolition of a house on Barnhill Street.

The board voted to appoint Delton Perry as town treasurer.

The board voted to send letters of appreciation to the State Bureau of Investigation, sheriff's department, Rufus Edmisten, Gov. James B. Hunt and all the others who helped in the investigation of the murder of Mike Edmondson and Sheila Bland.

Watt Attending A Fund-Raiser

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Former Interior Secretary James Watt will join Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., in Robeson County for an "invitation only" fund-raiser by conservative Democrats for the senator, officials said.

Helms, who is expected to announce soon that he will run for re-election, is expected to meet about 50 people from Robeson and adjoining counties next week at the home of Lumberton resident Tom Gibson, a spokeswoman for the Helms For Senate committee said Wednesday.

The spokeswoman said Watt may address the group informally but there are no plans for him to make a speech.

Organizers hope to raise some $250,000 from prominent area officials for the Helms campaign, said Gibson, who is head of Canal Wood Products Inc. in Lumberton.

The 90-minute fund-raiser will be guarded by off-duty Lumberton police officers to protect against demonstra-

Chamber Council Goals Given For Program In Coming Year

Ray Boleman will serve as 1984 vice chairman of the public and governmental affairs council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, according to Jon Tengelstad, chairman of the chamber's board.

Boleman has announced that the following goals have been set as part of the council's 1984 program of work:

- To coordinate policy positions on national business legislative issues, to plan a visit with congressional and senatorial representatives in the spring and to sponsor a congressional overview for the 1st Congressional District in the summer.
- To publish position papers relating to concerns of chamber members, to include guest speakers at quarterly meetings and to maintain close relationships with congressional and senatorial representatives.
- To coordinate policy positions on state legislative issues, to publish position papers relating to concerns of chamber members, to register a chamber lobbyist with the North Carolina Legislature and to maintain close relationships with state representatives in Raleigh and Greenville.

•To implement "Coffee with Legislators" series on a regular basis, to maintain close relationships with North Carolina citizens for business and industry regarding issues of interest to Greenville and Pitt County and to conduct a candidate forum for the N.C. House of Representatives and Congress prior to the spring election.

•To coordinate policy positions on local business legislative issues, to have a committee attend city council and county commissioners meetings for informational purposes and to promote the representation of other councils on local concerns committee to ensure county unity.

•To mount an effective campaign encouraging voter registration and voter participation, to support progressive planning efforts for city and county comprehensive long-range planning and to conduct a candidates forum for the county commissioners race prior to spring election.

•To continue to expand the Teacher/Work Learn Program, to continue and expand junior achievement and to continue RECAST and monitor closely for possible refinement of the first year's program.

•To continue the career week program, to pursue the articulation of vocational education apprenticeship programs at Pitt Community College and to endorse the Job Training Partnership Act where it affects vocational education.

•To implement an in-depth teacher appreciation campaign, to study, analyze and take a leadership role in educating the business, industrial and professional leadership of the Research Triangle Institute merger study and to form an education tax foundation as an alternative source of school funding.

To pursue industry to find a masters chair or further endeavor for a deserving teacher, to implement an effective school bus safety campaign for all the school year and to seek articulation of apprenticeship programs at PCC by the vocational education advisory committee in tandem with economic education.

Slogans 'Awakened' Moore

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Dan Moore says he never thought of running for governor until he spent 1964 repeating slogans like "Moore or less?" and fighting two Democrats for the gubernatorial nomination.

The race involved tough competition but Moore admits it wasn't nearly as crowded as the 1984 gubernatorial race will be.

"There are so many candidates running (in 1984) it's going to be a donnybrook," said Moore, 77, whose law office reflects his fondness for the job as governor. On the wall is a picture of his inauguration and beside his desk is a large North Carolina flag.

Moore ran in 1964 as a middle-of-the-road candidate with opponent I. Beverly Lake the more conservative and L. Richardson Preyer the more liberal.

In the first Democratic primary, Moore came in second to Preyer. Lake backed Moore in the second primary, allowing "Dan, Dan the mountain man" to win the election. Moore then appointed Lake to the state Supreme Court, prompting questions about whether the two had made an election deal.

Moore, a Sylva native, said the campaign relied on personal campaigning and roadside signs instead of television.

"When I ran, TV was not nearly as important as it is today... I think now the first question arises when you get ready to run is can I raise enough to pay for TV?" he said.

He said a group of his friends convinced him to run for governor.

"I tried to get somebody else to run but they were determined that I be... the sacrificial lamb because my chances didn't look too good," Moore said. "After I got into it, I did my best to win it."

Moore said his family didn't like the idea of him running and it took some time for them to adjust.

His family already had produced a state House speaker, a congressman and three Superior Court judges. Moore already had been elected to the state House by Jackson County in 1941 and had served on the Superior Court bench from 1948 until 1958.

Once in the job as governor, Moore said he was most surprised by the volume of work, the flood of mail and "things to worry you." He said it was nice to leave office and not have to worry about those problems.

Moore is remembered by many for his low-key style and judicial temperament. He headed off a crisis on the controversial speaker ban law by getting it amended to return control over visiting campus speakers to college and university officials.

Many saw him as a steady influence after civil rights leader Martin Luther King was killed in 1968.

"I got out of it (politics) quickly by reason that I went on the Supreme Court the same year," said Moore, an associate justice for 10 years. "By the time I got out of that office I was pretty well weaned."

He said the job on the Supreme Court appealed to him for many of the same reasons he liked the governor's job.

"What you have to do as a governor and as a judge is try to determine the facts involved then base a decision on those facts," he said.

Moore said he never wanted to go to Washington because he loved the state too much to leave. But he has kept track of politics and will serve as a special advisor to 1984 gubernatorial candidate Eddie Knox of Charlotte.

Knox was the youth campaign director for Moore in 1964.

Moore was appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt to lead a highway study commission that projected a financial crisis in 1981 that led the Legislature to increase the state gasoline tax.

As governor, Moore established a highway safety research center, started a motor vehicle inspection program and got approved a $300 million road bond issue.

Aver Infant Mortality Rate Increases In N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The infant mortality rate in North Carolina increased from 13.2 to 13.7 deaths per 1,000 live births in 1982, the Children's Defense Fund says.

North Carolina is one of 11 states that experienced an overall increase in infant mortality rate in 1982 as 1,240 infants under 1 year old died in 1982, the latest year statistics are available.

The Children's Defense Fund said in a report that North Carolina was one of nine states where the deaths of white infants increased and one of 12 where the deaths of black infants went up. The defense fund is a Washington-based child advocacy group.

North Carolina's figures, which are among the nation's highest, continue to increase steadily and so is the gap between black and white infant survival, the report said.

For example, in 1982 the white infant mortality rate for North Carolina was 10.9 per 1,000 live births, compared with 19.6 per 1,000 for non-white babies. In 1981, the rate was 10.7 per 1,000 for whites and 18.3 per 1,000 for non-whites.

Both Raleigh and Wake County — two of the wealthiest areas in the state — had infant mortality rates higher than the statewide average.

Raleigh's 1982 infant death rate was 19.5 per 1,000, up from 18.1 per 1,000 in 1981. Thirty-eight infants died in the capital city.

Wake County's 1982 infant mortality rate dropped by 0.2 percent to 15.7 deaths per 1,000 live births. There were 67 infant deaths in the county.

The discrepancy between death rates for black and white infants also is greater in Raleigh and Wake County than for the state at large.

Dr. Richard Nugent, medical consultant to the maternal child health branch of the state Department of Human Resources, said North Carolina's 89 prenatal clinics had been "inundated with new patients because of unemployment, and at the same time we've lost staff members because of (federal) budget cuts."

But, he added, the reasons behind the increase hadn't been definitely determined.

"We are looking at information... to see if anything in it lends credence to that theory (that cuts in federal services had caused the increase)," said Nugent in a telephone interview. So far, "there's no strong evidence that federal cuts have been responsible."

The Department of Human Resource should issue a report outlining the suspected reasons within a month, he said.

Cigar Stores Upset By Alternative Line

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — Two tobacconists are fired up about a competitor's line of cigars designed to look like high-priced stogies, and they've asked the state attorney general to clip the imposters.

Max Burns, owner of the Humidor One cigar shop, and Jim Simon, of Hill & Hill Tobacconists Ltd., have filed complaints claiming that J.R. Tobacco Co.'s Southfield franchise is using a bait-and-switch technique to sell its Alternatives cigars.

Alternatives, labeled by number, are advertised as being "as close as possible" to brand-name products cost-ting at least 40 percent more. Boxes of 20 cigars carry a picture of the brand they mimic.

"The only thing comparable is the ring (circumference) and the length, and to pretend they're comparable is to deceive the public," said Burns, who also is fighting back with a "Don't Be Switched" advertising campaign and discounts of 35 percent to 45 percent on brand-name cigars.

The attorney general's office served notice Dec. 1 that it intended to sue J.R. Tobacco on a charge of violating the Michigan Consumer Protection Act.

But J.R. Tobacco franchise owner Peter Sobelton headed off the suit by agreeing to hang three signs saying: "The cigar in the J.R. alternative bundle is not the brand name cigar shown on the bundle and the origin of the tobacco may be different."

Sobelton denies that Alternatives showing the high-priced cigars are designed to lure customers into the shop with discounted brand names so they can be sold no-name brands.

Lew Rothman, owner of the New York-based parent company, says a disclaimer on the package is adequate to protect consumers.

But Burns said the print of the disclaimer is too small.

$356 Million Loan For Zaire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The International Monetary Fund is loaning $356 million to the African republic of Zaire, one of the world's poorest countries.

The new loan is repayable in five years — part of it at 6.6 percent interest, the rest at about 10 percent, the IMF announced.

According to the fund, consumer prices in Zaire rose by more than 37 percent in 1982 and reached an annual rate of 57 percent last June.

HELD FOR TRIAL
LONDON (AP) — Two Chicago men have been ordered to stand trial for a 1980 armed robbery in which jewels worth $3.4 million were taken from a store in London's Knightsbridge district. None of the gems has been recovered.

The Grade School Mentality Prevails

THIS IS DOLLY? — No. Female impersonator Danny La Rue, 55, undertook the role of Dolly Levi in "Hello Dolly" that opened in London last month. (AP Laserphoto)

Critics Write Off Impersonator

LONDON (AP) — Critics were ready to say "Good-bye, Danny!" to the first female impersonator to play the lead in a major production of the musical "Hello, Dolly!"

Martin Hoyle, in the Financial Times, wrote that Danny La Rue, who opened the show Tuesday night,

"merely appropriates the role and plays it, if he'll excuse the expression, straight. Never Dolly, he remains a man showing off an inexhaustible supply of frocks, sometimes fleetingly resembling Lucille Ball in a panic."

"There is unlikely to be any more miserable theatrical travesty this year than the sight and sound of La Rue speaking, singing, and dancing his way through the role of Dolly Levi," wrote Nicholas de Jongh in The Guardian.

De Jongh said that La Rue "gives the willful impression of a drag queen on a rather

NEW YORK (AP) — P.V.C., the bum, is out to destroy Chaney, and the victim-to-be asks his boss, Capt. Braddock, for permission to chase the maddened, airborne drug-smuggler in his Incredible Armored Helicopter.

"Look, Mr. Maverick," Braddock says, "you're never going to get my permission to go out and play St. George and the Dragon. That's fourth-grade mentality, and I'm not going to let it happen."

Vandalized

BRISTOL, England (AP) — A gang of youths broke into an underground grotto in this port city and crushed hundreds of sea shells collected from all over the world.

The shells, which were gathered by sea captains in the 18th century, were bought by Merchant Thomas Goldney to decorate the walls and ceiling of the grotto in his garden in Clifton, Bristol.

Authorities said a half-dozen youths battered in a wooden door leading to the cave during the weekend and destroyed countless shells.

down night," adding, "No expense seems to have been spared on the La Rue's sixfold sequence of feathered head-dresses or lilac and crimson gowns: all spectacle without substance."

Irving Wardle in the Times commented that "the task of preserving a female mask, chin up, teeth gleaming, denies him any change in facial expression."

Only John Barber gave the 55-year-old La Rue the critical OK. In the Daily Telegraph, he called the production "less a show ... than a ritual celebration. It is certainly fascinating to see what the male star does when dolled up."

Danny Kaye In Hospital Care

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Danny Kaye, who landed in the hospital after serving as grand marshal of the Rose Bowl parade on Monday, was reported in fair condition recovering from bronchitis.

"He went right from the Rose Bowl. He flipped a coin to determine which side would kick the ball, got into a car and was taken to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center," said Warren Cowan, publicist for the 70-year-old stage and screen veteran.

Kaye, known for his philanthropic work with UNICEF as well as his entertainment activities including his films and the 1964 Emmy award-winning "Danny Kaye Show," underwent quadruple coronary bypass surgery in February.

Braddock has the guy pegged, and the show, "Blue Thunder," starting Friday night on ABC, is that way, too: strictly grade-school stuff.

It sounds like "The A-Team," NBC's successful adventure series, and it aims to be, but falls flat. "The A-Team" at least has the style to be able to laugh at itself.

In "Blue Thunder," the dialogue is comic-book, the storyline revenge and retribution, the action violent.

In the opening scene, before the credits, a police chopper is shot from the air by the malevolent P.V.C. After a brief commercial break, the instrument of retaliation is introduced: "Here she comes, the most awesome helicopter ever built... Blue Thunder."

Within moments, an old school bus, a line of junk cars and several fake buildings have been destroyed — demonstration, only — for a cheering crowd of bigshots and brass hats.

Who needs this?

James Parentino plays Frank Chaney, and Sandy McPeak is Braddock in the adventure series based on the motion picture of the same name.

Former professional footballers Dick Butkus and Bubba Smith take their Lite beer act (you know, the two tux-clad brutes who hope the ballet is in English tomorrow night) to "Blue Thunder," and that's a happy turn of events, though one certain to wear thin before long. How many times can you watch — will you watch — Lyman "Bubba" Kelsey complain about Richard "Ski" Butkowski's disposition?

"You got a mean streak a mile wide," Bubba tells his crimefighter-companion. "Look," says Ski, "that's a bad rap laid on me in football. ... I'm the nicest guy you'd want to meet." That routine is played, in variation, several times in the course of the hour-long show.

Chaney's shtick is a running feud with Braddock, in which he promises — at least twice in the premiere episode — to obey the rules, "unless we don't see eye-to-eye on something." Or words to that effect.

You're supposed to find Clinton Wonderlove (Dana Carvey), who works the computer on Blue Thunder, an amusing and endearing eccentric. He's tiresome.

In the opening installment, "Second Thunder," P.V.C. (Richard Lynch), once a police informant, is willing to kill as many cops as necessary to get back at Chaney. Why he's angry at the 'copter pilot is never really clear.

Though P.V.C. ultimately shoots down a couple of police helicopters, Braddock for some equally obscure reason doesn't want Chaney to fight back. He'll go after the airborne madman, he says, from the ground.

"It's an exercise in futility, Cap'n," Chaney says, initiating the kind of verbal exchange depressingly common to "Blue Thunder." "He's going to make a fool of you."

"No, he's not," says Braddock.

Chaney, in the end ... well, you can guess the rest. Braddock, who's got to be a little twisted himself, doesn't seem unhappy with the outcome.

There's no lesson, no message here, unless it's the simple-minded notion that violence must be met with violence, that no amount of thought or reason can counter a threat to society.

And that's rather disturbing.

Success Is Not Missed

NEW YORK (AP) — "Do I miss the success? Not really," says Don Everly, the older of the Everly Brothers who rocketed to fame in the '50s and now are looking for a comeback with a concert broadcast, and maybe a video disc and tour.

Don, now 46, and brother Phil, 44, famous for such hits as "Bye Bye Love," "Wake Up Little Susie" and "Cathy's Clown," broke up in 1973 when Don put down his guitar and walked off stage, but got back together for a concert in London last September. The concert will be broadcast Jan. 14 on Home Box Office.

"Time has taken care of a lot of things in my life," said Don in an interview Wednesday. "We've resolved our personal differences. I am really happy now — in my life, in my career."

"Do I miss the success? Not really."

But Phil indicated the Everlys aren't taking any chances.

"We now use two mikes instead of one," he quipped.

Thais To Raise Tobacco-Buying

RALEIGH (AP) — Thailand is expected to increase its purchases of U.S. flue-cured and burley tobacco in 1984 in an attempt to replenish the country's depleted stocks, say agricultural specialists at North Carolina State University.

The United States is the only supplier of tobacco to Thailand which, despite its need to import 8,000 to 12,000 tons of quality leaf each year, remains a net exporter of tobacco.

NOTICE OF RESALE
Pursuant to the Order of the Honorable Sandra Gaskins, Clerk of Superior Court of Pitt County, North Carolina, dated the 20th day of December, 1983, notice is hereby given of the public resale by Wachovia Bank & Trust Company, N.A., Executor of the estate of Helen A. Snyder, deceased, of the below described real property on the 4th day of January, 1984, at twelve o'clock p.m. (noon), said resale to be held at the Pitt County

PUBLIC NOTICES

Courthouse door, Third Street entrance, Greenville, North Carolina. The real property to be resold is a lot or parcel of land with a residence situated thereon located at 311 Meade Street, Greenville, North Carolina, which lot or parcel of land is more particularly described as follows:
"That certain lot or parcel of land situated, lying and being in the City of Greenville, Pitt County, North Carolina, and being Lot No. 3 in Block 'E' of the Johnston Heights Subdivision, as will appear on that certain map duly recorded in the Register's office for Pitt County in Map Book 2, page 231, which map was made by Henry L. Rivers, Surveyor, on September 12, 1928, to which reference is made, said lot being situated and fronting 63 feet on Meade Street, with a depth of 102 feet, with a width of 66 feet in the rear thereof," and being the identical lot or parcel of land conveyed to Helen A. Snyder by David R. Davis and wife, Vera R. Davis, by that certain deed recorded in Book K 34, Page 653, Pitt County Register's office.
The said resale shall be made to the highest bidder for cash who shall deposit ten percent of the amount of the purchase price at the time of resale as a good faith deposit.
The resale shall be made with Doug Parker having the opening bid in the amount of FIFTY TWO THOUSAND FIVE HUNDRED FIFTY AND 00/100 DOLLARS ($52,550.00).
This resale is subject to confirmation by the Court pursuant to N.C.G.S. 1-339.28(a)(1).

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — FLEET SHOPLIFTER IN PAINT STORE IS NABBED RED HANDED.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: N equals A.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: King of ♡.

Among the modern methods of signaling, one of the most popular is reverse signals—the play of a high card in a suit denotes a lack of interest, while a low card is encouraging. The theory is that you cannot always afford a high card in the suit you want led or continued, but you can usually spare it in a suit in which you have no interest.

However, this agreement is not necessarily an unmixing blessing, as this hand from the Hungary-Britain encounter in the 1983 European Championship graphically demonstrates. The auction shown is from the room where Great Britain held the North-South cards. South's decision to pull the double is open to question. Observe that the contract will make unless East leads a heart.

Against four spades West led the king of hearts. The Hungarians were using old-fashioned signaling methods, so when East played the ten, West continued with ace of hearts and another for East to ruff. East gave his partner a diamond ruff and West still had to score the ace of trumps for down two.

In the other room the Hungarians also reached four spades, and here, too, the opening lead was the king of hearts. But the British East-West pair, who were using reverse signals, went awry when East followed with the ten and declarer falsecarded with the jack. Now West read his partner for 10-8-2 in hearts, in which case the ten was a discouraging card—East would have played the two to encourage.

After some thought, West decided that his partner probably held two spades, three hearts, eight diamonds and a void in clubs. So at trick two he shifted to a low club. Declarer won and led a trump, and ten tricks sailed home.

Hutchins' Sentence Divides Relatives

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — While lawyers for James Hutchins try to get the U.S. Supreme Court to delay his execution, relatives of the three law enforcement officers Hutchins killed are divided on whether the Rutherfordton man should be put to death.

Attorney Roger Smith said he submitted Hutchins' appeal for a review of his case to the nation's highest court "about mid-day" Wednesday.

"Along with the petition (for the court to review the case), we docketed an application for a stay of execution pending their determination," Smith said.

HUTCHINS

"We're hoping for the best when we do get the response," Smith said. "We're really right now waiting and holding our breath."

Meanwhile, state Attorney General Rufus Edmisten ruled on Wednesday that Hutchins could choose between death in the gas chamber or by lethal injection. One of Hutchins' lawyers said he didn't know which mode of execution Hutchins preferred.

State prison officials, uncertain about whether the 1983 law applied to executions ordered prior to its enactment, requested Edmisten's opinion.

A jury convicted Hutchins of three murder counts in 1979 for killing three law enforcement officers and recommended the death sentence. Unless the Supreme Court intervenes, Hutchins could be the first person executed in North Carolina in 23 years.

Hutchins' execution is scheduled for Jan. 13. If his appeal fails, he would be the first person executed in North Carolina in 23 years.

Smith said Hutchins' appeal was based on the same arguments rejected last week by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va. Hutchins had alleged a variety of errors in his Superior Court trial, including ineffective counsel, judicial intimidation and lack of time to prepare an adequate defense.

Smith said he had "no idea" how long it would take the Supreme Court to decide whether to review the Hutchins case and stay the execution, "but we would expect them to act quickly."

Meanwhile, some relatives of the slain law enforcement officers say they'd like to see Hutchins die while others are not so sure. Others said they'd like to use their own vigilante justice on him.

"I'm a trained officer of the law, and I know when a criminal goes killing somebody I can't go beat up on him or kill him," said

Rutherford County Sheriff Damon Huskey, whose brother Roy was among those Hutchins killed.

"I'm a good Christian deacon who believes in humanity," he said. "I'm not too enthused about him being killed. I'm still for the death penalty, but I'm not too enthused with him being killed. I saved his life one time."

Testimony during the McDowell County Superior Court trial revealed Hutchins shot two Rutherford County sheriff's deputies and later killed a pursuing state Highway Patrol trooper.

The deputies had gone to Hutchins' house after his daughter telephoned for help, saying her drunken father was beating her. She said during the trial that they had argued over whether punch she prepared for a high school graduation party contained too much alcohol.

Also killed were Oweb Messersmith, a sheriff department sergeant, and trooper Robert "Pete" Peterson.

Alice Messersmith, the 60-year-old widow of the slain sergeant, said she harbors no ill will against Hutchins.

"I feel like death is so quick, and I think of how horrible he must feel on death row," she said. "Now we're not opposed to the death penalty, but nor are we waiting with baited breath to see him killed."

But, she conceded, Hutchins should never be returned to Rutherford County. Though she lives secluded in the mountains outside Rutherfordton, some 65 miles west of Charlotte, Messersmith said she's heard inklings of vigilante justice.

"They'd take care of him," she said.

Already such actions had been considered, Sheriff's Lt. Ken Thomas said.

"I'll tell you what would be justice for this boy," Thomas said. "What they'd have to do is tie him up to a horse and drag him up to that house (the murder scene). Then, the next day, they could put alcohol (on the wounds) and drag him up to Spindale, where those people could see him."

But the widow of one of Hutchins' victims is trying to live without hatred.

"I think I'm better if I do not hate this man," said Huskey's widow, Jo Ann Huskey Keyser. "I think you hurt yourself by feeling that way about somebody."

"But I believe if you take a life, you owe one. I have tried not to feel vengeful, but at the same time, I feel this man deserves to die," she said.

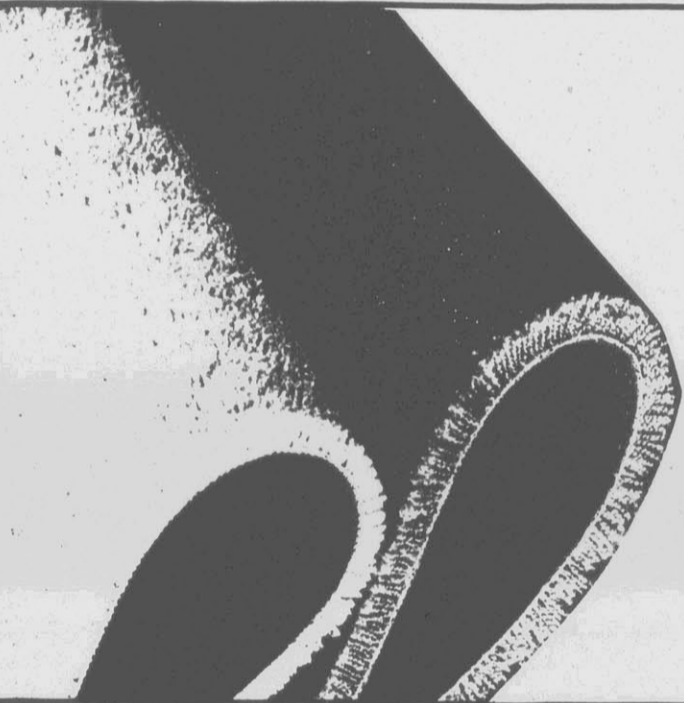

Meanwhile, calls continued to pour in Wednesday to the Rutherfordton sheriff's office as more than 25 people have asked to be allowed to witness the execution in Raleigh.
