Small Farmers Finding Other Income Sources

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Robert May, an agricultural instructor for 12 years at Pitt Community College, has a small farm near Farmville. His major crops are tobacco, corn and soybeans. He and his wife have begun a Christmas tree farm so his daughters can begin saving for their college education.

"Mom and Dad do all the work, and the girls save the money," May said.

Many small farmers like May in recent years have had to find additional sources of income. Small farms, those with less than $20,000 in annual income, still make up about 80 percent of North Carolina's cultivated land. The cost of running a farm has become too much for the small farmer to bear, so many local farmers have used their ingeniuity to find alternate sources of income.

"With the expenses that exist today, $20,000 in farm income does not leave a great deal of profit," noted Sam Uzzell, Pitt County Agricultural Extension agent.

"Most of the people that are in a small farm operation have other work and the farming they do is more or less something they do because they really love it," Uzzell said. "It is exceedingly difficult in today's climate to make a living from farming on any level."

Farmers Urged To Control Disease

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County tobacco farmers must do a better job of controlling disease in 1984 if they want to have a good crop, say tobacco specialists from the North Carolina State Extension Service.

Extension specialist N.T. Powell told about 20 producers that attended Pitt County's annual Tobacco Information Meeting Friday that in 1983 disease losses in the state's tobacco crop totaled $56.6 million, a figure he said was "greater than that of the previous season" and one that reduced the value of the crop by 6.1 percent.

The key to controlling these diseases, he said, was "understanding the cause of each disease, its nature and how it relates to the tobacco plant."

"Control which lasts," Powell told farmers, "can only be expected when management programs are based on such knowledge."

Farmers must do a better job of planning ahead for disease, he said, and incorporate basic management practices such as crop rotation, stalk and root destruction, planting varieties resistant to problem diseases and proper use of chemicals.

Powell identified mosaic as the most destructive disease in 1983 and recommended farmers "be practical" and prevent spread of the virus by using milk or abrasive soap to wash hands before and after working around plant beds.

He also said farmers should do their best to eliminate horsenettle, a weed that virtually always contains mosaic, from their fields,.

Powell said root knot was North Carolina's second most destructive disease in 1983 and reported that several kinds of root knot had now been identified, each with different resistances. "What that means is that you (farmers) may or may not have a resistant

Stray Shell Injures Two More Marines

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A shell struck the edge of the U.S. Marine camp, slightly injuring two of the Americans Saturday during an artillery battle between the Lebanese army and Druse gunners.

In Sidon, witnesses said Israeli tanks swept through the main street, firing machine guns at parked cars and wounding 10 people. A military spokesman in Tel Aviv said a single armored personnel carrier was involved and no one was hurt.

In Damascus, Druse leader Walid Jumblatt said a new Saudi-mediated civil war disengagement plan for Lebanon's warring factions was "not acceptable" as it stands, and refused to meet with the government and rival militias.

A Marine spokesman said the two Americans suffered "minor" injuries when the shell landed near them on the southeast edge of camp during an exchange between Lebanese army positions just south of the Marine base and Druse militiamen in the hills to the east.

Seven Lebanese soldiers were wounded during the fighting at Khalde, just south of Beirut, and at army positions east of the capital.

Republican Sens. John Tower of Texas and John Warner of Virginia were visiting the Marine base as the shelling erupted, but departed on schedule, Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said.

In Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, Lebanese reporters said two Israeli Merkava

Calendars Hot Item For Giving Or Buying

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Today is Sunday, Jan. 8, 1984. Judging from the number of 1984 calendars sold and distributed in this new year, Greenville-area residents are well aware of today's date.

Many local establishments give away small desk calendars and hanging wall calendars and area stores sell a wide range of colorful and often humorous items so that people can keep track of their schedules throughout the year.

Bikini-clad model Christie Brinkley adorns the best-selling 1984 calendar at Waldenbooks, located in Carolina East Mall. Manager Harriett Wisse said that other sought-after calendars include the 365 New Words desk calendar, which features a new vocabulary word for each day of 1984, and the Hunk-a-Month calendar of male pin-ups. Ms. Wisse noted that these three calendars are sold out at her store, and the average price runs about $8.95.

The best selling calendar at Central News, Greenville Square Shopping Center, is the 365 New Words calendar, according to manager Joan Winneberger. "Dog and cat calendars are also popular this year, as are unicorn calendars and the Christie Brinkley calendar," she said. The average retail price of these calendars is $5.95. Although many of the popular calendars are sold out at Central News, Winneberger said that over 25 titles are still in stock.

Helms Tells Local Rally He Has Hunt On The Run

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms predicts he will win re-election in November and, he says, Gov. Jim Hunt is "beginning to understand that."

Helms, a Republican facing a challenge for the Senate seat from Democrat Hunt, was in Greenville Friday night for a campaign dinner and rally at the Moose Lodge that was attended by some 525 persons.

The senator was also honored at a by-invitation-only reception at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Allen Taylor attended by some 125 persons.

At a news conference before the rally, Helms suggested Hunt was finding out that the campaign will be more difficult than the governor thought.

"In the first place he's not going to beat me, and I think he's beginning to understand that," Helms said.

The senator said that at one time Hunt thought that by forming a "coalition of blacks and labor unions and homosexuals and the ultra-liberals and all that gamut of block votes, that he would be a shoo-in."

"But I believe the people have begun to take an interest in the campaign," Helms said. "They may not always agree with me, but I have never given them an occasion where they didn't understand where I stood. I'm going to level with the people of North Carolina."

Helms said Hunt is "running like a scalded dog away" from a discussion of the issues before the May primary.

"I've never suggested a debate," Helms said, but suggested that he and Hunt "just sit down and discuss the issues."

The senator said "I've poked some fun" at Hunt, "but I've never criticized him."

"We don't agree philosophically, but I thought we were friends," and "we were

Seven people were injured Saturday night in the collision of a privately owned vehicle and a car operated by a Pitt County sheriff's deputy, police said.

Greenville Officer Mike Hamil said the injured included Deputy Walter Cobb and six people — three adults and three children — who were in the second vehicle. Their names and the extent of their injuries were not available.

Police said Cobb, responding to a burglary call, was headed west on Dickinson Avenue when his cruiser and the second vehicle collided near a supermarket.

Hicks Seeking Judge's Seat

Donald C. "Don" Hicks of Greenville, public defender for the 3rd Judicial District since 1981 and a former assistant district attorney, has filed as a candidate for District Court judge in the May 8 primary election.

Hicks filed Friday for the position formerly held by Judge Robert Wheeler of Grifton who resigned Dec. 31, "out of my desire to continue to serve the people" of the Pitt-Craven-Pamlico-Carter et County district "as a judge of the District Court."

"I feel my experience as an assistant district attorney, an attorney in private practice, and as public defender has qualified me to assume the responsibilities and duties of District Court judge," Hicks said.

"I have traveled extensively throughout the 3rd Judicial District and have had almost daily contact with this court for the past 9 years. I feel that I know the court's strengths and weaknesses and I would welcome the opportunity and chance to make this court function in a just, efficient and swift manner," Hicks continued.

Hicks, who graduated from high school in Raleigh, received his bachelor's degree in economics from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1970 and his law degree from UNC-CH in 1974. He served in the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve.

Frozen Pipes!

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

With temperatures seldom reaching over the freezing mark over the holidays, local plumbing companies have had their hands full with calls concerning frozen or burst water pipes.

"Last week was the busiest week we've had this year. We were averaging about 25 to 30 calls a day," an owner of a local plumbing company said.

Frozen pipes aren't just a little nuisance, they can cause major problems. One area resident who turned her water off while on vacation came home to find that her pipes had burst. The result: faded carpet, faded scatter rugs, warped stereo speakers, and a wall that had to be torn out in order to fix the problem.

"Pitt Countians just aren't used to this kind of freezing cold weather and don't know what to do when their pipes do freeze," a local plumber asserts.

According to Greenville Building Inspector Jim Kaufman, "One of the biggest misconceptions people have is thinking that when a pipe is frozen it splits. But that's not the case. When a pipe thaws out, it expands and ruptures. This is what causes pipes to burst."

Therefore, Kaufman said, the "first thing to do when your pipes are frozen is to open up all the faucets in the house to allow the pipes to thaw evenly. Pipe expansion during thawing occurs when the faucets are closed. With the faucets open, the expansion will take place throughout the entire system instead of in one area. This will normally keep the pipes from splitting."

Kaufman also warns people not to try to thaw pipes themselves using a torch.

"I would recommend that if anybody was in the position of having to thaw out pipes, unless they're very familiar with the torch method, to not go near any pipes with a torch — it's so easy to set a place on fire."

An alternative method, he said, is using a hair dryer. "Sometimes if there's just a short distance of pipe that is frozen, an electric hair dryer will warm the pipe enough. The hair dryer should only be used if you know exactly where the frozen portion of the pipe is. But don't try this method unless all the faucets are open," he said.

To avoid frozen pipe problems in the first place, Kaufman said, a faucet should be left running if you know temperatures are going to drop below 27 degrees. Pipes normally will not freeze when the water is running.

Area Traffic Fatalities Decline For Second Year In Succession

Capt. Carl Gilchrist, commander of Highway Patrol Troop A, says the motoring public's cooperation, as well as law enforcement, helped reduce the number of traffic fatalities in the 22-county troop for the second year in a row in 1983.

Gilchrist said the number of fatalities due to traffic collisions dropped to 132 last year in Troop A, four fewer than the 136 deaths in 1982. The troop includes the beach areas of Dare, Currituck, Hyde and Carteret counties, which have a heavy traffic flow during the summer months, as well as Pitt County.

According to Gilchrist, the 142 troopers in his command charged 61,292 traffic law violations during 1983, a major portion of which were for speeding violations and driving while impaired.

Gilchrist noted that while the number of traffic accidents and fatalities dropped in 1983, there was also a decrease in the number of drinking drivers.

He suggested that the 15 percent reduction in the number of drivers charged with driving after drinking during the year was due to the enactment by the General Assembly of the Safe Roads Act which set stiffer penalties for driving while impaired and raised the legal drinking age from 18 to 19.

"If the motoring public continues to demand the apprehension and punishment of these dangerous and inconsiderate drivers, we will see this reduction of violations continue in the years ahead," he said.

The officer noted that in addition to arrests made by patrolmen in the troop and accidents investigated, troopers issued 38,855 warning tickets during 1983, including 1,096 for violations of the law requiring the use of child restraints in vehicles carrying young children.

Gilchrist said troopers rendered assistance to 19,511 motorists during the past year, provided relays for blood and drugs requested by doctors and hospitals 143 times; spent 12,185 hours on special assignments at ball games, auto races and civil disturbances, and presented 480 public information programs, plus numerous television and radio safety spots during the year.

He explored the bay's eastern shore for the next two months and then wintered in James Bay. The following June, Hudson, his son and loyal members of his crew were set adrift in an open boat when other crew members mutinied because supplies ran short. Soviets Accuse U.S. Of Lying MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin on Saturday strengthened its hard-line public stand on the disrupted medium-range arms talks, vehemently rejecting Western hopes that the Soviets might soon return to the Geneva bargaining table.

The Communist Party organ Pravda accused U.S. and West German officials of lying about the course of the talks, dismissed NATO's bargaining position as "absurd" and repeated the Soviet refusal to resume negotiations unless the Western allies agree to roll back the NATO missile deployment program.

Pravda said: "The contentions by American and some West European officials that the Soviet Union is on the verge of 'returning to the talks' ... are nothing but attempts to deceive the peoples and absolve themselves of responsibility for the torpedoing of the talks."

Quoting President Yuri V. Andropov's Nov. 24 statement on the Soviet walkout at Geneva, it said the Kremlin would think about resuming negotiations only "if the United States and other NATO countries display readiness to return to the situation that existed before the beginning of the deployment of American medium-range missiles in Europe."

The harsh attack on Western nuclear policy was part of a Soviet campaign that seeks to blame the United States and its allies for the Soviet walkout from the Geneva negotiations last Nov. 23.

Like all such Soviet commentary, which Western analysts believe is aimed in part at fostering West European opposition to the NATO missile program, Pravda's article included warnings about the "danger" of continuing the program.

The Soviets' campaign also appears aimed at the Stockholm security conference that begins Jan. 17. The Kremlin, which usually takes a tough stand before such meetings, has been trying to place the burden for compromise on the NATO countries.

At the same time, however, the soviets also have rejected Western expectations that a planned Stockholm meeting between Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz might be used to lay the groundwork for a return to Geneva.

"Ever since they walked out of the talks, we thought they would return because it is in their best interests to try to prevent full deployment of the missiles," a Western diplomat said Saturday. "The Pravda statement shows they are adhering to their position that the missiles must be removed."

The Soviet Union left the Geneva talks after NATO began deploying the first of a planned 572 U.S.-built cruise and Pershing 2 missiles. The Kremlin then announced that it would begin deploying more missiles of its own in East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

NATO began deploying the missiles to counter an estimated 350 Soviet triple-warhead SS-20s in Europe. The Soviet position, repeated by Pravda, is that a "rough parity" existed before the new NATO deployment.

It said U.S. statements about a Soviet monopoly on medium-range rockets was "sheer invention."

Pravda accused Paul Nitze, the chief U.S. negotiator in Geneva, of "making speeches steeped with lies" about the break in negotiations and added:

"All of these inventions are being zealously parroted by those allies of the United States in NATO who obsequiously participated in the betrayal of European interests. Some people in (west german) are trying particularly hard in this respect."

U.S. Oil Workers Postpone Walkout

DENVER (AP) — A walkout by 50,000 oil-industry workers planned for midnight Saturday was postponed after the president of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union requested a three-day contract extension.

About seven hours before the expiration of OCAW contracts with major U.S. oil companies, union president Joseph M. Misbrener said he was asking all union bargaining committees to "request of the employers an extension of current contracts until 12:01 a.m. Wednesday ... in order to give the collective bargaining process the fullest opportunity to function before pursuing other alternatives."

Misbrener noted that the OCAW is bargaining on 331 contracts, most of which were to expire at midnight Saturday.

There are "many bargaining tables at this time where meaningful negotiations are in process," he said. "We will continue to bargain in a concerted effort to reach agreement ... before the proposed extension terminates.

"Should that effort fail, a decision will be made at that time as to what action by the union would be appropriate."

The union's Oil Bargaining Policy Committee has rejected offers from major oil companies, and union spokesman Jerry Archuleta said the oil companies are "trying to present themselves as distressed."

Archuleta noted that only one major oil company had presented an initial proposal before last Wednesday. In its first and second offers, the Gulf Oil Corp. had included a first-year wage freeze proposal. Its most recent offer, including a 20-cent-an-hour raise for the first year of the new two-year pact, came Wednesday — the same day similar offers were received from other oil companies, Archuleta said.

Hearing Slated In Film Deaths

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A hearing starts Monday for five filmmakers charged with the deaths of three actors during production of "Twilight Zone," in what some lawyers call an unprecedented case that could drive the movie industry out of California.

The preliminary hearing before Superior Court Judge Brian Crahan is to determine if there is enough evidence for director John Landis and four others to stand trial on charges of involuntary manslaughter for the July 1982 deaths of actor Vic Morrow and two children.

Attorney Jerome Berchin, who is suing the filmmakers and Warner Bros. studio for $200 million on behalf of one child's family, said the very prospect of a trial is unprecedented.

"It's already had a very substantial effect in terms of insurance, in terms of who's covered under insurance and in terms of some directors' extreme nervousness about making some kinds of movies at all," said prominent entertainment attorney Tom Pollock.

More than $82,000 in fines, currently on appeal, have been assessed by state health and labor agencies against the movie-makers and Warner Bros., which distributed "Twilight Zone" to theaters last summer.

tanks rammed parked cars and that soldiers in them shot at vehicles and into the air. They said 10 people were slightly wounded from ricocheting bullets or flying glass, and that about 25 cars were wrecked.

Government-run Beirut Radio and Lebanese Christian and leftist radio stations all identified the tanks as Israeli Merkavas, and Ahmed Mantash, a Lebanese who reports for The Associated Press, said he saw soldiers in Israeli uniforms in the tank turrets.

Mantash said the soldiers first fired guns into the air to frighten away people on Riyad Sohl, the city's main thoroughfare, then began firing at parked cars and zig-zagging down the avenue, hitting parked vehicles. The tanks did not fire on cars filled with passengers.

The tanks made two runs down the street, first from the north and through the main public square to the southern end of the city of 250,000 people, then back again, Mantash said in his telephoned report.

At first a military spokesman in Tel Aviv said he believed reports of the incident were an "invention," and quoted field commanders as saying no Israeli forces had taken part in such an operation.

But another Israeli spokesman later said a patrolling Israeli armored personnel carrier shot at an empty car parked in Sidon's main street. As a precaution against car bombs, Israeli regulations forbid drivers to leave their cars empty in the street.

The patrol tried unsuccessfully to find the car owner, then ordered members of the public away and fired a few shots into it to set off any explosives. The spokesman said the car did not explode and no one was injured.

In Damascus, Jumblatt was asked by reporters what he thought of the proposed security plan that would separate Lebanon's civil war combatants. He replied "not acceptable," then added, "This is because the essential points are still to be discussed." He didn't elaborate on what he considered the essential points to be.

Jumblatt, who earlier had said a political settlement would have to follow the security plan, also declared "nothing can be achieved without a prior political settlement."

He said he still hoped the differences "will be solved by political dialogue rather than by guns," and that "today's meeting of the security committee" would solve remaining problems.

Jumblatt said he would not meet with Lebanese army intelligence chief Col. Simon Kassis and Christian officials at a meeting on the security plan, but said his representatives were meeting with the Lebanese officials.

Jesse Comes Up With New Gift For Old Friend

Well, glory to us all, Tom Ellis got a surprise. At least he would have us think so.

Ellis, you recall, is that Raleigh attorney who took a former television commentator and turned him into the biggest money-drawing politician — conservative, liberal or by any other name — this state has ever seen. Ellis has been the mastermind behind that little club formed a dozen years ago to pay off those first-campaign debts of now Sen. Jesse Helms. That little club grew up to be the Congressional Club, a fund-raising, fund-dispensing organization that some say should be labeled a third political party.

That same Ellis is chairman of the Congressional Club, the conceiver of ideas, the purveyor of actions, the confidente of Jesse Helms. Or so the legend goes.

But, no, Virginia, Jesse doesn't always tell Tom what he's up to. Or so Ellis would have you believe.

No, the story now goes, Tom Ellis didn't know Jesse Helms was going to recommend Ellis' son-in-law for a federal judgeship. Helms, in a last-minute phone call, "said he thought he was going to do something that would make me very happy," according to Ellis.

That "something" should have made Ellis happy. The son-in-law, Elizabeth City attorney Terrence W. Boyle, is 38. If nominated by President Reagan — and the president usually follows such recommendations — and if confirmed by the Senate, Boyle would have a life-time appointment on the federal bench.

OK, Boyle probably is qualified for the judgeship. We frankly know only what has been made public since the recommendation was announced. But Helms' action, because of his longstanding close relationship with Ellis, smacks of nepotism as much as if Helms had recommended his own son-in-law.

Helms could have made a wiser choice.

Author Would Only Do Sequel For '1984' Now

Call it an "inside joke".

Some years ago there was an author, Eric A. Blair, who wasn't making a very good living out of his craft. He was an essayist, a satirist and a novelist. Partly because of some unpleasant experiences in the process of life he was also something of an amateur social critic.

There came a day when he combined his talents and produced a work of fiction (a novel), and completed it in the latter part of 1948. He needed a title, and was inspired to transpose the final two digits of the date he completed his tale, and Voila! the book became "1984".

The tale was every bit as frightening and grim as one by Edgar Allen Poe at his best (or worst), and was a big seller. Somehow people lost sight of the fact it was a novel and began looking on the writer as a seer and prophet.

If George Orwell (Blair's pen name) were alive today he would be laughing at the concept of his being a prophet. And while he might secretly revel in the attention his name is getting, he would also be wondering how quickly he could write a sequel.

Alvin Taylor — Sunday Morning Notes

"Hello," a male voice said.

She responded as cordially as she could, failing to identify the voice.

The caller asked how the holidays had been and she replied that everything had gone well.

The conversation went on for several minutes and she finally decided it might be best to determine who she was talking to.

"Are you sure you have the right person?" she asked the caller.

"Why, yes," he said. "We met at the Ramada."

"Well, I haven't been to the Ramada for some time," the lady answered. "What is the name you wanted?" she asked.

"Donna," the caller replied.

Our friend laughed as she explained that was not her name.

The embarrassed caller said his apologies and broke the line, presumably to call the girl he met in the first place.

And another friend returned from the Christmas holidays to find her apartment flooded. It was, of course, the victim of a burst water pipe, brought on by the subfreezing temperatures of the Christmas weekend.

A neighbor had seen the water running from the apartment and shut it off at the outside meter, but not before the carpet and all furniture sitting on it was soaked.

It was a disaster, and one which was repeated all over the city. There is still room for humor, however.

"I'm trying to decide whether to leave the water and have an indoor pool, or dry it out with a heat lamp and have my own steam room," she quipped.

And a New Year arrived last weekend with the usual round of parties, celebrations and contemplations about the future. With it came the resolutions made by various friends as they sought to renew their old dreams and get rid of bad habits during 1984.

"I resolve to have more fun during 1984," one said.

"I resolve to spend less time on frivolous fun," another said.

"I resolve to settle down with one guy," a girl commented.

"I resolve to meet more girls," a male swinger vowed.

"Quit smoking," was a resolve we heard from several people.

"The year 1983 was a pretty good one," someone said. "I resolve not to change a thing.

Joey Ledford — Mondale Has Edge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unless Jesse Jackson's dramatic efforts to free an American pilot held by Syria cause a late surge of support, Walter Mondale appears to be the man to beat for the South's Democratic presidential delegates.

Opinion leaders in the eight states polled by United Press International agree that the former vice president appears to have a good grip on the South, despite Jackson's popularity among blacks and the perception of Sen. John Glenn as a more conservative candidate.

However, Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina and former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew appear to be holding their home states in line despite having little support elsewhere.

Glenn, who had hoped to sweep the South, does have some bright spots. He has the endorsement of Virginia Gov. Charles Robb and may even be leading in Tennessee, thanks in part to the support of his Southern coordinator, Sen. Jim Sasser.

President Reagan will be tough to beat in the region, no matter who gets the Democratic nod.

"Unemployment is down, the economy is improving and Reagan has turned this country around in three short years," said Sandy Riley, executive director of the GOP in Virginia, which hasn't gone to a Democrat since 1964. "I know Virginians are with him."

On the Democratic side, state opinion leaders in Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi and North Carolina say Mondale is leading. That is most important in the first two states, both of which have key early primaries on "Super Tuesday" — March 13.

Jackson, however, may be more of a factor than originally believed. It has yet to be seen what kind of impact his diplomatic efforts will have.

"Now I guess the president has joined the exclusive club of the seven other Democrats in trying to figure out how to deal with Jesse Jackson," said Georgia Democratic Party Chairman Bert Lance after the release of Lt. Robert Goodman. "He's (Jackson) very good at what he does."

"Jesse Jackson's campaign is not just a campaign, it's a crusade," said Tuskegee, Ala., Mayor Johnny Ford. "It's an extension of the civil rights movement."

The Alabama Democratic Conference, the state's largest black group, endorsed Mondale in December despite a determined effort by Jackson. However, the group did suggest Jackson as Mondale's running mate.

Jackson is also troubled by the lack of support from civil rights activists in Georgia. Coretta Scott King, Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young and state Sen. Julian Bond are all backing Mondale.

In addition to Alabama and Georgia, Florida will also hold its primary on "Super Tuesday." In the Sunshine State, Askew is trying to hold off Mondale, who is working hard to siphon off as many of the state's 115 delegates — the largest bloc in the delegate-rich region.

Askew enjoys the support of Gov. Bob Graham and other party officials, but Mondale is building a good organization. The former governor managed just 45 percent of the vote — compared to Mondale's 35 percent — in a presidential straw poll at the state Democratic convention in October.

Polls confirm that Mondale is leading in many Southern states. In North Carolina, a November Gallop poll showed the Democratic frontrunner with 51 percent of the vote to Glenn's 16 percent with 10 percent for Jackson.

Mondale also had a big lead in Georgia in a poll, but the Darden Research Corp. sampling showed Reagan winning over either Mondale or Glenn.

Mississippi Republicans predict a similar outcome.

"I think it is going to be a horse race, but I think we will win it," said Clarke Reed, a Democratic National Committee member from the Magnolia State.

Tennessee is one of the few states in which Glenn appears to be leading Mondale. Jim Neal, the former Watergate prosecutor who is heading up Mondale's campaign, admits that the support of Sasser has a lot to do with Glenn's advantage in the Volunteer State.

"But Sasser can carry Glenn only so far," Neal said, predicting his candidate will overtake the former astronaut.

In South Carolina, Hollings appears to be holding on, despite the candidancy of Jackson, another native son.

"I would think that Senator Hollings would overwhelmingly capture South Carolina," said state House Speaker Ramon Schwartz.

"He's been an outstanding public servant ever since he sought public office, (was) one of the best governors and has done an able job as senator," said Schwartz.

James J. Kilpatrick — Work At Home Has Merit

WASHINGTON — The first rule for pundits, or so we were taught long ago, is that pundits must be decisive. Never mind this wishy-washy business of "on the one hand" and "on the other hand." Let us never fall into the ambivalent swamps of finding "something to be said on both sides."

The rule is fine, but it breaks down in the matter of the Labor Department, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, and a relative handful of little old ladies in Vermont who would like to make a living knitting ski caps and sweaters.

Back in 1938 Congress enacted the first federal law fixing a minimum wage for workers in interstate commerce. Among the industries covered by the act was the outerwear garment industry. An investigation in 1940 found that about 20 percent of all workers in this industry were working in their homes; the investigation also found that employers of the homeworkers were grossly violating wage and hour laws.

The idea of "working at home" conveys pleasant images of a cottage in Vermont, with snow by Norman Rockwell, village scenes by Grandma Moses, and knitting needles gently clicking by a softly glowing fire. The reality was closer to a cold and dirty tenement in New York City, where Puerto Rican children of 10 and 11 were doing embroidery for a nickel an hour. We ought not to wax too sentimental about "homework," or about some of the rapacious employers who willfully exploited poor and vulnerable women.

In 1942 the Labor Department concluded that wage and hour laws could not be effectively enforced in home workshops of the outerwear industry. With certain tight exceptions, all such homework was thus prohibited. Then almost 40 years passed. In December 1980, a month after Ronald Reagan's election, the department began proceedings that would lead some months later to revocation of the 1942 ban.

The department issued all the required notices; it held hearings in Burlington, Vt., and in Washington, D.C. It considered more than 10,000 comments that came in. Finally the Reagan administration concluded that more good than harm would result from a resumption of the practice of homework in the outerwear industry: New jobs would be created; these jobs would amount to "only a small percentage" of the 63,000 production employees in the industry as a whole. A concerted effort would be made to enforce compliance with wage and hour laws. So the 1942 ban was lifted.

In October 1981 the Ladies Garment Workers' Union sought an injunction against the new decree. A District Court judge ruled against the union and upheld the government, but a month ago the D.C. Court of Appeals reversed and restored the ban. The appellate opinion was written by Judge Harry T. Edwards, a young ex-professor of labor law who was named to the court by Jimmy Carter in 1979. Two of the court's aging Kennedy appointees, J. Skelly Wright and Carl McGowan, concurred.

In my own view, for whatever it may be worth, the three liberal Democratic judges simply substituted their own arbitrary and capricious judgment for what they condemned as the arbitrary and capricious action of a Republican Department of Labor.

Craig Webb — Homes

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Municipal zoning officials across North Carolina used to welcome mobile home trailers about as enthusiastically as they greeted swarms of locusts.

But spokesmen for trailer builders as well as city and county governments say that the people in charge of zoning are warming to the idea of having mobile homes in their communities, although most haven't reached the point yet of letting trailer owners set up housekeeping next to traditional homes.

"Here in the office we're getting more and more requests for tours of industry facilities and retail operations," said Patsy Morton, executive director of the North Carolina Manufactured Housing Institute, the industry's trade group. "Cities and counties call us and say, 'We realize we need to take another look.'"

The manufactured housing industry, as it prefers to call itself, produced about 23,000 single and multiwide units last year, more than any other state except Texas or Florida. Census figures from 1980 indicate about one North Carolinian in 10 lives in a mobile home.

With the average single-section unit costing $17,393 in North Carolina, the homes often constitute the only form of permanent housing that lower income people can afford. But families eyeing the mobile home life also must deal with the stigma traditionally attached to the long, boxy structures.

In Mecklenburg County, residents of the rural northern section have protested any zoning changes that would permit manufactured homes to mix with more expensive housing. The Charlotte-Mecklenburg Planning Commission has recommended that the county examine the housing and set up appropriate standards.

"Ten years ago there were all sorts of efforts by some governments to actually exclude mobile home parks," said Edmund Regan, a fiscal analyst for the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners. "My perception at this time is that there is growing acceptance."

He said the feeling now appears to be that "Since you already have so many of them, the best thing you can do is make them look good."

Ms. Morton of the manufactured housing institute believes the turnaround in attitudes began in 1976, when the federal government issued a set of codes governing how manufactured homes would be built. That set a quality standard for the industry, she said.

Developers helped their cause by upgrading the quality of trailer parks, making them more like housing subdivisions. Some also have added shrubbery and buffer zones to separate the trailers from the main thoroughfare.

Despite those changes, manufactured housing builders know their place, Ms. Morton said.

"We don't feel a person with a $20,000 manufactured home would want to put their house in next to a $150,000 home," she said. "For one thing, the land would be too expensive."

But a study by Dr. Randall J. Thomson of North Carolina State University found that manufactured home residents actually are more upscale than their image suggests.

The typical buyer at one Garner mobile home subdivision is 35 years old with two children and a family income of $25,000, he said.

Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer — Babies

LOS ANGELES — For the last two months, our friend Nancy has been on the temporarily disabled list. A 28-year-old, Nancy left her job as a lawyer to have a baby. Hers was a carefully planned maternity leave, with pay.

Unfortunately, in a matter of days, Nancy will surrender her month-old baby boy to a newly hired nurse. While she naturally would prefer postponing the exchange for another two months, she's taken the maximum that her law firm will allow.

As one might suspect, however, lawyers and other well-paid women have it relatively good when a stork appears on the horizon. Most working mothers are not guaranteed paid leaves of absence of childbirth. The current situation can only frustrate many women who assume that they will be able to choose both work and family in the 1980s.

It's optimistic to assume that the Pregnancy Disabilty Act, a 1978 federal statue, extends maternity-leave benefits to all. In fact, the law only requires those employers who offer temporary disability coverage to extend benefits to women who are pregnant. Women employed by firms without disability coverage aren't protected. (Moreover, the law exempts companies with fewer than 15 employees.)

As a result, note the authors of a new Columbia University study, "Maternity Policies and Working Women," less than 40 percent of working women enjoy maternity-leave benefits of six to eight weeks, the period doctors regard as a mother's typical recovery time. The remainder face a catch-as-catch-can scramble for maternity leave, often linking together accured vacation, sick days and whatever time off their employers' informal policies allow.

According to Alfred Kahn, a Columbia University social work professor who co-authored the study, the lack of a federal policy providing income replacement for pregnant workers places the United States behind 117 foreign countries which do so.

Some states, of course, treat mothers better than others. Easing the crunch in five states are World War II-era laws which mandate disability coverage to all workers.

Meanwhile, at least eight other states have taken the minimal step of requiring employers to grant eight weeks' leave without pay to expecting mothers. (About 65 percent of some 1,300 large corporations surveyed in 1980 conceded the latter "benefit" to their female employees.) "It's a start," said Meg Wheatley, a Boston management consultant who has closely studied maternity-leave policies.

"But," Wheatley added, "there are a lot a women who can't afford eight weeks without pay."

In addition to inadequate benefits is the problem of duration. Like our friend Nancy, a period of about four months seems preferable to many women as a model maternity leave. A 1980 study of 815 two-career couples by a New York women's resource group, Catalyst, revealed that the median maternity leave was 12 weeks: 37 percent returned before the ninth week; 31 percent returned to work within 10 to 16 weeks 10 percent stayed out of the work force for more than 34 weeks.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Discourtesy? Rudeness? Negative criticism? Complaints? Just simple little acts of thoughtlessness, in many cases, revert to the home, where parents often are not doers of courteous and thoughtful acts; therefore, children grow up and enter the work world being misfits.

More specifically, how many administrators or principals relieve a teacher's tension by simply saying, "Miss, you're doing a good job"? Or observe tellers in banks or saving and loans companies who see people standing in line to be served and ask, "May I help you?" A more appropriate statement, "How may I help you?" or "I'll help you." Simply standing in line should let them know you wouldn't be standing there if you didn't want to be served. So many tellers or people in similar situations are often not aware of "thank you" or a friendly business gesture.

Likewise, salespeople in stores will continue with their assigned paperwork or orderly arrangement of merchandise, instead of helping the standing customer. Or the doctor's receptionist, secretary or nurse will yell from the window, "What's your problem?" Or you'll patronize a particular company or business and the salesman doesn't say, "Thank you for letting us serve you." May I remind you we could have patronized someone else. If you had no clients or customers, would you stay in business?

Husbands, does your wife know you are proud of her? Do you help around the house? Do you know that many teachers can't teach because of poorly disciplined children. This is one main reason why Johnny can't read, write or count.

It's getting harder and harder to find a courteous person who isn't trying to sell you something. Courtesy costs nothing, yet it buys things that are priceless.

Battle Shapes Up Over Jewish Vote

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's decision to accept help for his West Bank peace plan from Yasir Arafat sent this message to an outraged Israel and a startled American Jewish community: West Bank peace has higher political value than traditional election-year bidding for Jewish support.

Although he did not use such crass language, the president conveyed that message to Secretary of State George Shultz in a recent Oval Office chat. Reagan agreed with Shultz that if Arafat's help brings Jordan's King Hussein into direct talks with Israel, Reagan would not hesitate at applying maximum pressure on the Israelis if they balk at going to the negotiating table.

That sets the stage for Reagan and the Democratic nominee, likely to be Walter F. Mondale, to battle for the small but important Jewish vote. Mondale as nominee would call for policies aimed at pleasing Israel — such as his pledge to move the U.S. Embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem. But Reagan, shifting ground on the Mideast once again after his recent strategic embrace with Israel, will assume an above-the-battle stance based on his search for peace.

The president is convinced that real movement toward West Bank peace could bring him a large dividend of votes even from Jewish Americans, whatever the Israeli government is saying. More probably, it might improve his shaky position with the "peace" vote generally — perhaps narrowing the gender gap, which is particularly wide among Jewish Americans.

That explains the president's much-abused decision to persuade Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak to receive Arafat, the wandering PLO leader, on the journey to North Yemen from his abandoned Lebanese redoubt in Tripoli. Israel condemned the Mubarak-Arafat two-hour meeting as "a blow to the peace process"; Mondale hinted it had sinister connotations; Reagan saw it as a rare opportunity to enlist Arafat in the peace effort.

Behind the scenes, the administration is making unaccustomed exertions to impress on Israel the hard fact that West Bank peace on Reagan's terms is not a negotiable U.S.-Israeli issue. On recent visits to Foggy Bottom, astute Israeli Ambassador Meir Rosenne has been politely but bluntly informed of that fact.

One senior American diplomat told Rosenne that Israel "has to learn to live with" Reagan's Sept. 1, 1982, peace plan, which the Israeli government denounced as a violation of the camp David peace process. Thus, the stage is set for a test of wills between Reagan and Israel on the West Bank issue, a posture for the administration that is not only in abrupt contrast to the recent Washington-Jerusalem strategic linkup but is highly unusual in a presidential election year. Reagan does not intend to lose that battle.

But there will be no battle at all and no West Bank negotiations if King Hussein cannot get consent from Arafat to represent the nearly 1.5 million Palestinians on the West Bank and Gaza in their long struggle to throw off the Israeli Yoke. Shultz, chief author of Reagan's September 1982 proposal for taking the West Bank out of Israel's orbit, grasped the importance of enlisting Mubarak to lobby Arafat long before the PLO chief was thrown out of Lebanon.

No hint of a deal came out of the closed-door Mubarak-Arafat talks in Cairo's Kuba Palace Dec. 22. But the White House's public blessing on that tete-a-tete of two Arab leaders who had been totally estranged ever since Egypt's Anwar Sadat made peace with Israel showed the direction Reagan has taken. The stunning bid for Arafat's help in trying force the West Bank issue to the negotiating table displayed Reagan's confidence and political daring.

Surely there are risks. Arafat, at his political low point, could bow to militant pressure within the PLO and refuse to allow Hussein to speak for Palestinians with Israel. If he does, Democrats will pillory Reagan as naive — at Israel's expense.

That does not seem to worry Reagan or his political aides. "Whatever happens on the West Bank," one senior adviser told us, "Reagan will strengthen his position on the peace issue."

A president on the high road of peace pitted against an opponent practicing election-year business-as-usual to woo Israel's American friends has been seen in a presidential election since Dwight Eisenhower pressured Israel out of Egypt in October 1956. A month later, Ike won in a landslide.

Voting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Postcard registration has been touted in recent years as a way to improve the abysmal American voter turnout record. Does postcard registration increase turnout? An expert on the subject says not much.

Curtis Gans, who has been studying the American phenomenom of non-voting for several years, says merely making it easier for citizens before elections does not guarantee better turnout.

But allowing voters to register on election day or dispensing with registration altogether apparently does help turnout.

In a summary of detailed research into 1982 voting patterns, Gans, director of the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate, says turnouts increased in the one state without registration — North Dakota — and the four states which permit registration on election day — Maine, Minnesota, Oregon and Wisconsin.

At the same time, the 20 states with postcard or mail-in registration laws had a mixed turnout record. Thirteen of them had higher turncuts in 1982; seven had lower showings at the polls.

"This tends to show that the principal procedural problem in improving turnout is eliminating the two-step process of registering and voting, rather than simply making it easier to register," Gans says.

There is another statistic to bolster Gans' tentative conclusion. The study shows that states which have permanent registration — once a voter is on the rolls, he or she remains eligible — have a higher than average turnout record on election days. Specifically, of 13 states with permanent registration, 11 had bigger than average turnouts in 1982; two fell below the average.

Of the 32 states that purge their rolls and require periodic re-registration, the study showed, 18 had larger than average turnouts in 1982, but 14 were under the average.

That leaves the policy question: is registration before election days really necessary?

The argument for registration is obvious and simple — it gives authorities a good check on voting fraud. It not only permits officials to look into the qualifications of potential voters but also locates them by precinct.

Thus, in theory, unqualified voters never will get on voting rolls and anyone who tries to go from one polling place to another to cast more than one vote will be prevented from doing so.

That certainly was desirable in this country when "vote early and often" was the watchword in some areas. No doubt about it, registration was a good way to hinder the practice of voting names on gravestones and voting repeaters.

But those safeguards were installed at a time when voter rolls were kept on paper and couldn't be checked quickly if a challenge was made.

Nowadays, voter records can be put into the memory of computers, which can make the necessary information available within seconds if a question arises about a voter's qualifications.

It would cost a lot of money to computerize all the voting rolls in the country. The question is whether it would be worth it to spend the money to make election day registration practical. The answer depends on just how important the country believes maximizing voter participation is.

Democrats Shape Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the nation's most prominent Democrats, trying to shatter the idea that their party lacks new ideas, have unveiled an election-year program that calls for overhauling the federal tax system and employing more diplomacy in dealing with the Soviet Union.

While not officially endorsed by the party or the leadership of the Democratic-controlled House, the policy manifesto is aimed at helping shape the 1984 debate as Democrats attempt to re-take the White House and the Senate, both now in Republican hands.

The wide-ranging 90-page document, titled "Renewing America's Promise," accuses President Reagan of bringing the country astronomical budget deficits, failing to emphasize diplomacy in foreign policy and arms control, and abandoning women, minorities and the poor.

The policy blueprint is the product of three years' work by House Democrats and was published by the National-House Democratic Caucus, a newly formed organization headed by Rep. Gillis Long, D-La., chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, and Robert S. Strauss, former party chairman. It is an expansion of a similar book issued in 1982.

The group's membership includes 70 House Democrats and 83 other top party figures, among them former defense secretaries Clark Clifford and Harold Brown, investment banker Felix Rohatyn, economist Lester Thurow, and fund-raisers Pamela Harriman and Lew Wasserman.

The document calls for sharp cuts in the growth rate of the national debt by 1988; permanent changes in taxation and the health care system; a new forum for cooperation between labor, industry and government; new public and private investment in research and industry; and a revival of arms control efforts.

"It is imperative that Democrats demonstrate to the American people in 1984 that we are not asking for a return to policies they rejected in 1980, that we have the will to lead and the resolve to make hard choices," wrote Long in a preface.

"This volume helps Democrats to re-establish our identity as the party of growth, for growth is the prerequisite of opportunity," Long said.

Rep. Martin O. Sabo, D-Minn., who played a major role in drafting the report, said the group hopes the document will become part of the party's campaign platform later this year.

Added group member Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., "No longer will Democrats not have a blueprint to answer the question, 'What do you stand for?'"

Central to ensuring future growth and prosperity, the document states, is erasing the built-in deficits which have grown enormously during the Reagan administration.

The group urged Reagan to join with Democrats in an effort to trim $150 billion to $200 billion from the deficit in 1988, mostly through gradual cuts in defense spending and entitlements, and through tax increases.

The report promises: "We will not hurt those Americans who have already been worst hurt by Reaganomics. There is no more 'fat' to trim from programs that feed the needy, educate our children and offer the elderly poor a life of dignity."

Over the long term, the group proposes to scrap the current income tax system and replace it with a modified flat-rate tax on individuals and corporations, eliminating most itemized deductions.

That plan is similar to the "Fair Tax" proposal of Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo.

The program also calls for "imposing stringent controls on escalating health costs." The report notes that of the price of a new car, $600 is attributable to workers' health insurance costs — more than the price of the steel used. And without action to rein in medical fees, the Medicare program will go broke by 1990, according to the document.

The report calls for renewed investment in research and development and in educating and training workers to enhance the U.S. position in world trade. It proposes the nation invest 3 percent of its gross national product in civilian research each year; help universities improve their laboratories; and devote more money to student aid programs.

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — As President Reagan ponders his soon-to-be-announced decision on whether to seek re-election, he needs to be concerned about the political implications of any prolonged involvement in the Middle East, as well as the state of the economy.

Although the percentage of Americans who say we made a mistake sending Marines to Lebanon has declined slightly over the last two months, nearly half (45 percent) presently hold this view. An earlier survey found 64 percent holding the belief that it is either very or fairly likely that our involvement in Lebanon could turn into a situation like Vietnam.

The president's popularity at this point in time, however, continues at 53 percent approval, the highest level in two years, sustained in considerable measure by growing public optimism over the economy and favorable reaction to the operation in Grenada.

An examination of recent history, however, shows that two of Reagan's predecessors — Harry Truman in 1952 and Lyndon Johnson in 1968 — bowed out of the race for re-ection largely because of mounting public opposition to U.S. involvement in the Korean and Vietnam wars.

During Truman's presidency, only 20 percent of Americans in August 1950, shortly after we made a commitment to help South Korea, aaid our involvement was a mistakend 43 percent approved of Truman's overall performance in office.

By March 1951, and after Communist China had invaded Korea, the percentage who said we had made a mistake had shot up to 50 percent while President Truman's popularity rating had declined to 28 percent.

A similar pattern emerged during Johnson's presidency. In the first measurement on our involvement in South Vietnam, in August 1965, only 20 percent said our getting involved in that conflict was a mistake and President Johnson's job performance rating was 64 percent.

By August 1968, those saying "a mistake" had climbed to 53 percent while Johnson's rating had slipped to 35 percent.

The question asked in recent Gallup surveys and the results:

"Do you think the U.S. made a mistake in sending the Marines to Lebanon, or not?"

Americans have been involved in Lebanon for 16 months, since the Marines landed in Beirut in August 1982 with the limited purpose of escorting the Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat and his men out of the area.

The latest results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,504 adulta, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period November 18-21.

For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

Politician Found News Short

Back in June 1959, Time magazine carried an article which it entitled "Blackout in Kannapolis."

The article pointed out that the Kannapolis Daily Independent, then controlled by textile magnate Charles A. Cannon, had not mentioned the name of state Rep. Bedford W. Black for the previous six weeks although the legislator had been busily making news that affected both the state and Cabarrus County — where Black lived and the Independent was published.

The article in Time also discussed the control which Cannon exercised in Kannapolis, then one of the largest unincorporated towns in the world. Cannon owned most of the business and residential areas in Kannapolis.

Time quoted James L. Moore, publisher of the Independent, as saying that Black, a Kannapolis attorney who had defeated a Cannon candidate in the legislative race the year before, was a "controversial figure" and the ban on use of his name was imposed because "we figured he was just using the paper for a sounding board. We just thought he was seeking publicity."

"I had nothing to do with it," Cannon asserted when asked about the blackout of Black. He charged that reports he was the source of the ban came from "the biggest liar in North Carolina." He did not elaborate.

"Some people have always been afraid of the truth," was Black's reaction when asked for comment on the ban.

Moore said the blackout on the legislator was his own decision and denied that it was taken at Cannon's bequest. He said he had directed the Independent's staff to strike out Black's name from all news articles, even from wire service dispatches from Raleigh.

"Keeping Black out of the paper was not easy," Time said. "He is a consistent newsmaker, often gets into other papers. Last month, carrying a United Press International dispatch from Raleigh that mentioned Black five times, Moore made five pinpoint deletions.

"Fortnight ago, when the other representative from Kannapolis, Dwight Quinn — supply superintendent for Cannon's mills — killed a Black-introduced bill (a measure calling for revaluation of Cabarrus property in 1962 instead of 1967), the Independent story mentioned the executioner (Quinn) but not the victim (Black)."

Time pointed out that "Cannon owns the Independent building and the ground it stands on, and his son-in-law owns a controlling interest in the paper."

In campaigning for his seat in the House the year before, Black had promised the voters that if he was elected he would "owe no obligation except to the people." He defeated E.T. Bost Jr. of Concord, a former House speaker and veteran of 10 terms in the Legislature, after the initial vote count ended in a tie. A long-delayed recount gave Black a 21-vote victory over Bost, an attorney with close ties to Cannon. Black had won despite his charge that the ballot boxes were in terrible condition, some of them without locks and that nine of them had been stored in Cannon Mills during the period after the election instead of being turned over to the county board of elections.

Black, the son of a Wesleyan Methodist minister, had not always fought Cannon. As a boy growing up in Kannapolis he had worked in the mills as a laborer during summer vacations from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. He then worked as a reporter on the Independent until around midnight. In high school he found time to play football and basketball and to be elected president of his junior and senior classes.

During World War II, Black left Wake Forest College without his degree to serve in the Army Air Corps. After the war, he studied law under Claude Love who later became an assistant state attorney general. He borrowed from Charles A. Cannon to finance his law course, but repaid the loan shortly after he was admitted to the bar and had begun his law practice in Kannapolis.

During the waning days of the 1959 Legislature Black encountered strong opposition on important Cabarrus County legislation from Quinn and state Sen. Carlyle Rutledge and the Cabarrus County Commissioners.

Farmers ...

The economy in the 1980s has affected the price of farm equipment and supplies; it is hard for a small farmer to buy the equipment he needs to run his farm.

"In 1972-1973, you could buy a 100 horsepower tractor for less than $10,000 and now the same tractor lists for over $30,000," said Kelly Barnhill of Hendrix Barnhill Co., Greenville.

Barnhill said that rising prices have reduced the amount of equipment a small farmer can afford to purchase. "We are not selling as much farm equipment now because the farmers are simply not able to buy it," he said. "The farmers are caught in a tight pocket squeeze and until they can get back in a profit mode, they cannot buy any new equipment or have any expansion."

The small farmers realize that their farming income must be supplemented so that they can afford to continue farming.

"The agricultural situation has been difficult for the past several years," May said, in a recent interview. "Tobacco has been cut back and the drought in recent years has made it tough for the farmers. The net farm income from agriculture is down from what it was in the mid-1970s."

Arnold Parris of the Production Credit Association in Greenville said, "The problems for the small farmer day to day are becoming greater. I think there is still a place for the small family farmer, but I feel that more and more we will see this type of farmer look for other ways to supplement his income by taking jobs in other phases of our economy."

Because of the drop in net farm income, as well as the high cost of running a farm, small farmers are having to find extra jobs in order to keep their agricultural interests.

"Whether the small farm succeeds financially depends a lot on the owner's motivation and managerial skills," said Dr. Joe Brooks, a horticulturalist for the Agricultural Extension Service in Raleigh. In a recent Associated Press article, Brooks was quoted as saying that many small farmers have dropped out of farming in the past 50 years, but others have survived, mainly in labor-intensive operations.

"The small farmer must find that special niche in the market that he can fill better or just as well as the big farmer," Brooks said. "Small farmers are doing a lot of imaginative things. They are renting garden spots and recreation sites, building catch-out ponds for fish and boarding horses and other pets that people can not keep in town.

"I've heard of farmers renting fruit trees (to city families), providing bed and breakfasts for tourists and establishing learning laboratories for urban children whose parents do not want them to lose touch with the soil."

Brooks added that the state now has about 2,000 farmers, mostly small, in the Christmas tree business, a type of farming that did not exist 15 years ago.

Many small farmers in eastern North Carolina have found success in using their individual resources to add to their farming income.

"Some farmers use their own equipment and do jobs for others, because everyone can't own all pieces of equipment," May said. "One of our students (at Pitt Community College) is going to start a peach orchard to suppplement his income. Many farmers do crop farming in the spring and summer and parttime work during the winter."

Harold Smith, also an agricultural instructor at Pitt Community College, added, "Selling firewood off the farm, growing truck crops such as sweet potatoes, tomatoes or collards and taking a second job part time in a skill such as carpentry are ways a small farmer can gain additional income."

"It is hard work to harvest vegetables," said Robert Harrell Jr., a grower for the Farmers Market in Greenville. "We (at the Farmer's Market) try to sell our product at the going rate the supermarkets have. We (small farmers) have to pick our own vegetables, and if we hire someone else, we are lucky if we break even."

Historian Says German POWs Had 'Hogan's Heroes' Life In U.S.

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Tales about the Louisiana prison camps where thousands of German POWs spent World War II could have come from "Hogan's Heroes" but turned out to be true, says a historian who interviewed many former captives.

Some of the compounds were more camp than prison, said Dr. Matthew Schott, a history professor at Southwestern Louisiana University. For example, it is said POWs who were supposed to pick 100 pounds of cotton a day in Ruston got away with less by training a big dog to jump in their bags before weighing.

Sexual liaisons between POWs and local women were not unusual, and at a camp in Gueydan, prisoners are said to have manned machine guns in towers while their guards enjoyed a Christmas party, said Schott, a professor at Southwestern Louisiana University who began research about German POWs three years ago.

He and Rosalind Foley, a Lafayette novelist who suggested the project when she was collecting background material for a book, traveled to Europe to interview 25 of the former Lousiana POWs last October.

Some of the stories were reminiscent of "Hogan's Heroes," the television comedy about Americans held in a German POW camp.

"We went there ... to see how much the verbal accounts we collected from Louisiana people had been exaggerated," Schott said. "Frankly, we were skeptical about stories of prisoners of war guarding themselves and sneaking out of camp to meet the local girls.

"But after asking the Germans, 'Did it happen?' and hearing their responses, we can only conclude: Such things did happen."

Schott said up to 50,000 German prisoners — including many who had been in Erwin Rommel's Afrika Korps — spent time in Louisiana.

"Only Texas and California harbored more of them," said Schott. "There were never more than 20,000 in the state at one time, but the authorities moved prisoners around the U.S. frequently during the war."

He said camps at Livingston, Ruston and Fort Polk housed 4,000 to 4,500 POWs each, and 50 side camps around the state held 100 to 1,150 prisoners each.

The Germans, whose field work brought them side by side with black field hands, often countered criticism of Hitler's belief in Aryan supremacy and anti-Jewish policies by pointing out that white Americans discriminated against blacks, said Schott and Ms. Foley.

Some information came from interviews with former camp guards and planters who had employed prisoners. Schott also went through written records and reports by groups such as the YMCA, which regularly inspected camps to make sure Geneva Convention rules were upheld.

In fact, many U.S. civilians and soldiers complained that POWs got more and better food, drinks and cigarettes than they did, Schott said.

At camps Polk and Ruston, the prisoners reportedly dined on delicacies including German pastries. Camp Livingston had a library of 10,000 books, most of them German textbooks. Camp Polk, where American actor George Montgomery was an officer, had an orchestra and elaborate theater where Helmut Wildt, a leading actor in Berlin's Schiller Theater, got his start.

variety of tobacco," Powell cautioned, "and that chemicals may or may not be effective on the root knot."

He said crop rotation is a good control for root knot and listed small grains and fescue as the best rotation crops for root knot control. Vegetables and corn, he said, are the worst two.

Powell also said farmers should watch carefully for the knots on their plants and call the Extension Service promptly after spotting them.

Extension Specialist Gerald Peedin told growers that although the weather was a problem-producing factor in the 1983 crop, production mistakes played an important role also.

"We had some production problems," said Peedin. "Some tobacco did not stay in the field long enough and we had some MH residue problems." He said farmers need to pay more attention in 1984 to practices that will help their crop stand up to stressful weather conditions.

"How well a crop can tolerate a drought or a wet spring like we had in 1983 is up to the plant's root system," said Peedin. "And how well that root system develops is up to you (the farmer)."

The specialist said soil pH is very important to the development of a root system, and said a pH of between 5.5 and 5.9 is ideal. "Once you get above that pH level, toward 6.0 or above, yield decreases," he noted.

"I believe in soil testing," said Peedin. "You need lime but not too much. Over-liming can cause maganese deficiency."

Peedin emphasized the need for high wide rows in the tobacco fields. "This is a good practice especially in Pitt County where you have some fields that don't drain perfectly," he noted. "Too much water causes the root system to rot."

The specialist recommended applying two bands of fertilizer three inches down from where the plant's root system will be when set out. "Tests have shown that fields fertilized by banding, especially two bands, have a higher yeild than fields fertilized by broadcasting," Peedin said.

He also cautioned that incorrect applications of herbicides can injure the root systems of plants and that farmers should take care to follow label directions. "Tests have also shown that the use of combination disk rather than a cutting disk does a better job of mixing chemicals into the soil," Peedin said.

The specialist said farmers should also check with the local Soil and Water Conservation Office to find out the soil types on their farms because "some people in Pitt County who aren't subsoiling need to be and some who are don't need to be."

Charles Pugh, extension economist, told farmers that the recently announced termination of lease and transfer in 1987 would begin to have an effect on economics in 1984.

"For many this (termination of lease and transfer) means they have to make a decision," he said. "Farmers considering whether to raise the acreage on their on land should consider several items including, the disease situation and conditions on the farm."

"Owners considering leasing should think about the efficiency of the lessee, the items he will furnish and the use of the rest of the farm," Peedin added.

Pugh said he thought moderate inflation in 1984 could mean that some production costs will level off in the coming year. Demand for the crop, he added, is not predictable at this time because it will depend on the condition of the American dollar abroad.

A publication tilted "1984 Tobacco Information" is available free to tobacco farmers at the Pitt County Extension Office. The booklet contains the latest production information compiled by the N.C. State Extension Service. For further information contact Mitch Smith, Pitt tobacco agent, at 752-2934.

"I respectfully request that the people of the county let me continue to serve as a member of the Board of Commissioners," Gaskins said after filing for re-election.

"Pitt County is a great and progressive county and through continued effort and cooperation with all the people," he said, "it will continue to progress and continue to excel in the quality of life for those living here."

According to Gaskins, "The county is in excellent fiscal condition, without an increase in the ad volorum tax rate in three years," and "is providing services to the citizens of the county comparable to any of the other counties in the state."

ATTENTION GREENVILLE CITIZENS

In 1983 the Greenville City Council adopted a new method of billing and collecting the annual motor vehicle property tax.

Until this year, citizens of Greenville have been required to purchase metal license plates in January for each of their vehicles. This is no longer necessary. Instead of metal plates, the City will include a $5 motor vehicle tax for each vehicle on the annual tax notice. Plates will be available for those citizens who would like to have them.

Plates purchased in January, 1983, were valid until December 31, 1983. Therefore, the 1983 tax billing for those vehicles was only $2.50 which covers the six-month taxation period from January 1 through June 30, 1984.

Vehicles registered and listed on and after July 1, 1983, are subject to the full tax of $5.

Questions pertaining to the City's new motor vehicle property tax law should be directed to the Collector of Revenue at 752-4137.

Stars Found

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — An orbiting telescope that used infrared light to scan the heavens discovered 200,000 new stars and about 20,000 new galaxies before going blind last year, scientists said Saturday.

"We didn't dream the sky would be so rich and complex as it has turned out to be," said Nancy Boggess of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Scientists will be busy with data collected by IRAS — the Infrared Astronomical Satellite — for "years and years and years," said David Black of NASA's Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif.

"The mission exceeded all reasonable expectations and met even some optimistic ones," he said.

Black said it has been estimated, for example, that 100 billion stars exist in our galaxy "and we only have been able to see visually a few of them."

He said those located by IRAS were of a type not as bright as those known before.

NASA is working at top speed to produce a catalog of the satellite's findings and publication is expected by early fall, Ms. Boggess said.

Calendars ...

One of the funniest calendars, according to Angie Barrineau of The Book Barn, is the Plain Jane Workout Calendar. "This calendar makes fun of Jane Fonda's Workout Book," Ms. Barrineau said. "Plain Jane wears an exercise outfit like Jane Fonda, but she's really tacky. One of the exercises she does is opening the refrigerator door as many times as possible."

Ms. Barrineau, who is in charge of ordering the calendars at The Book Barn, said that the book store orders calendars from 10 different companies and has about 60 titles in stock. The prices range from about $2 to about $13.

Over 1,000 1984 calendars have been sold by Taff Office Equipment Co., according to Jehu Taff. Desk blotter calendars and flip-type desk calendars on a stand are the best selling types of calendars for the office supply company.

"Most businesses buy their calendars in or before December," Taff said, "but individuals wait until after the first of the year to buy calendars for their home and personal use. Our sales to individuals have really just started this week."

In addition to the hundreds of 1984 calendars that have been sold, many area business establishments give away free calendars to their customers.

"Used to be, everybody gave away calendars and now there are not as many businesses that do," said Walker Allen of W.L. Allen Oil Co. in Greenville. "We have been giving away calendars for 30 years. A lot of advertising is thrown away and is not used, but we think this (calendar give-away) benefits us and the customer."

Allen said his company has given away most of the 1,000 calendars that were ordered this year. The two sizes of wall calendars distributed by the oil company contain color pictures showing a different American scene for each month of the year.

"The calendars are given out when the delivery person makes an oil delivery," Allen said. "If we make a mistake and miss getting a calendar to a customer, they let us know because a lot of people depend on them."

A tradition for Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. is the large wall calendar featuring bird dogs that the bank distributes each year.

"Guaranty Bank started giving away calendars with bird dogs on them many years ago," said Burke Barbee of Wachovia. "When we merged with them in 1960, we continued the tradition. The pictures are changed every year, but the calendar always features a bird dog."

According to Barbee, the large wall calendar measures four feet long and three feet wide.

The bank annually distributes 1,200 of the wall calendars to local businesses. "We have a list of customers who have received the calendars for years, and we still use the same list," Barbee said. "To the best of my knowledge, no individuals receive the calendars. I understand that people write their names on the calendar so they can have the bird dog picture to frame at the end of the year."

Frank Hemingway of Bethel Pharmacy said that his drug store has already distributed 3,000 free almanac wall calendars. "The regular calendar information is on them, plus such things as weather information and when to plant and fish," Hemingway said.

State Farm Insurance agent Earl Thompson has personally delivered almost 750 desk calendars for 1984. "There are a few calendars left for customers to pick up in the office," Thompson said. "I also have pocket calendars made out of plastic that I use for a calling card and send in the mail in letters." The recipients of the State Farm calendars include the city of Greenville offices, motor companies, policy holders, banks and department stores.

George Wilkerson of S.G. Wilkerson and Sons Funeral Home said that he personally picks out the picture that will go on the funeral home's hanging calendars each year. "We have had some beautiful pictures on the calendars," he noted. "This year's calendar has a picture of a grist mill."

Wilkerson said 5,000 small hanging calendars have been given away this year. About 350 of the larger hanging calendars, usually used in businesses, have been distributed. The third type of calendar Wilkerson's Funeral Home provides each year is the desk calendar. Wilkerson said that 2,000 desk calendars have been given out.

"We always give away 150 desk calendars each year," said Bill Williams of Bill Williams Real Estate. "We have been giving calendars away for what seems like a century. I know we have given them away for the past 23 years at least."

Williams said that his real estate company used to mail the desk calendars to their patrons, but that now the calendars are either hand-delivered or are distributed to customers when they come into the office.

Calendars seem to be a hot item in the beginning of January. By this time in the new year, each reader probably has in his posession a new 1984 calendar with which to keep track of appointments. If not, maybe some calendars are still to be found in the Greenville area.

Reagan Urges Parents To Help Erase Rudeness And Violence From Schools

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, saying the nation's public schools are filled with "rude, unruly behavior and even violence," urged Americans on Saturday to help teachers regain control of their classrooms.

"The sad truth is, many classrooms across the country are not temples of learning, teaching the lessons of goodwill, civility and wisdom important to the whole fabric of American life," the president said in his weekly radio broadcast.

"Many schools are filled with rude, unruly behavior and even violence," Reagan added.

Citing a 1978 report of the National Institute of Education, Reagan said that each month 3 million secondary school children were victims of in-school crime.

"I don't mean ordinary hijinks, I mean crime," he said, speaking from the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., in the Catoctin Mountains, where he is spending the weekend with his wife, Nancy.

"Each month, some 2½ million students were victims of robberies and thefts and more than 250,000 students suffered physical attacks. In large cities, the problem was so bad that almost 8 percent of urban junior and senior high school students missed at least one day in the classroom per month because they were afraid to go to school," he said.

But Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif., delivering the Democratic response to Reagan's address, said "the lack of discipline is only a symptom of the deteriorating state of this country's educational system."

"This is brought about in large part by this administration's cuts in educational programs including cuts in the school lunch program, cuts in student aid, and the attempt to eliminate the Department of Education," Matsui said.

Reagan said that each month, 6,000 teachers are robbed, 125,000 are threatened with physical harm and at least 1,000 are assaulted so severely they require medical care.

"One psychiatrist who treats teachers said many of them suffer symptoms identical to those of World War I shell-shock victims," said Reagan. "It's that bad."

Saying children need good education more than ever, Reagan added: "But we can't get learning back into our schools until we get the crime and violence out. It's not a question of anyone asking for a police state."

He urged Americans "to renew our commitment to school discipline," and said the Departments of Education and Justice were doing all they could to help turn the situation around.

"So please, if you have discipline problems at your school, find out what you can do to help," he said. "By working together, we can restore good order to America's classrooms and give our sons and daughters the education they deserve."

On another matter, Reagan reported that last New Year's weekend "was the safest on our highways in 35 years. Our efforts to keep drunk, violent drivers off the road are beginning to show progress."

Matsui, a member of a House group monitoring events in Lebanon, also said U.S. troops should be withdrawn from that country immediately.

"The president's ill-conceived and ll-defined Middle East policies have more than failed, they have turned deadly," the congressman said. "We are no longer a peaceful influence, we are a lightning rod for terrorism."

Chinese Premier Visiting Hawaii

HONOLULU, Hawaii (AP) — Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang toured Pearl Harbor, watched a Polynesian dance revue, and sipped tea at a formal ceremony Saturday on the first leg of a two-week visit to the United States and Canada.

The plane carrying Zhao and his 70-member entourage, including Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian and deputy cabinet secretary general Chen Chu, landed at Hickam Air Force Base at 7:27 a.m. (12:27 p.m. EST), said Col. Peter Sloan, Hickam director of public affairs.

He was met by Gov. George Ariyoshi and his wife; Adm. William Crowe, commander-in-chief of U.S. forces in the Pacific, and other dignitaries.

He then went to a tea eeremony at the base, and later visited the USS Arizona Memorial in Pearl Harbor.

At the Arizona, Zhao took a flower lei that had been presented to him earlier, and dropped it into the water above the sunken ship where 1,117 men died during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941.

He was then give a U.S. flag that had been flown briefly over the site earlier that day.

Zhao next went to the Polynesia Cultural Center in Laie, where he saw a Polynesian revue which included a Samoan fire dance.

Before the performance, Zhao toured the complex, which includes reconstructed villages displaying different island groups around the Pacific.

Zhao declined to make any statements or speak with reporters during the morning.

Helms ...

elected to work together for the best interest of the state."

Asked about Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson's trip to Syria and the release of Navy Lt. Robert Goodman, whose fighter-bomber had been shot down during U.S. air strikes against Syrian positions in Lebanon in December, Helms said, "It was a set up job clearly intended to embarrass the Reagan administration."

However, Helms said he was glad Goodman was freed.

Saying Jackson's trip was "so clearly orchestrated," that "it was almost as if they had a written script," Helms suggested "the senario was just too pat not to have been planned, and there was no doubt in my mind at any time that exactly what happened would happen. It was orchestrated, it was so clearly orchestrated."

While Jackson's actions in the Middle East were an apparent violation of the Logan Act, a 1799 federal law prohibiting private citizens from negotiating policies with foreign governments, Helms said the law has never been enforced.

The state's junior senator, John East of Greenville, was also at the news confrence and told reporters, "I will do everything I possibly can to see this fine man (Helms) is re-elected."

Later at the rally, East said 1984 may be "the most critical election year in U.S. history," and said "Sen. Helms and I both are thankful for the support" received from "rank and file Democrats."

Urging voters to re-elect President Ronald Reagan, East said front-running Democratic candidate Walter Mondale is "far to the left of the political spectrum." The choice "between Reagan and Mondale is clear. If you want a weak economy, a weak foreigh policy, a weak national defense," East said, vote for Mondale.

The re-election of Helms "is the next most important race in the U.S.," East said.

"Senator Helms is a statesman and you know where he stands. He is a good, decent, honest, courageous man and he deserves to be re-elected," East said.

According to East, "nothing is more important to the well being of this state than the tobacco industry." Helms, East said, is chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, an effective supporter of the tobacco program, and "to eliminate the chairman of that committee would be a foolish, foolish thing to do."

Helms, who followed East on the program, told the gathering, "this is where it all started," explaining that his first campaign appearance after filing as a candidate for the senate in February 1972 was at the Greenville Moose Lodge.

Saying "more and more Americans are understanding what our choices are," Helms said, "I'd rather be a right winger than a wrong winger."

Voicing support for what he termed fundamental rights, Helms said "one of the most enormous problems in the public schools" is busing children "across counties" to school. "Millions of dollars and millions of hours are wasted," because of forced busing.

Voicing support for Reagan, Helms said when Reagan was inaugurated, the prime interest rate was 21½ percent and the inflation rate was "12 to 14 percent."

Now, the senator said, the prime interest rate "is half that" and the rate of inflation is 3½ percent to 5 percent.

"I enjoy the Senate. I love it's traditions," Helms said. "When the day comes I have to sell my soul to stay in the U.S. Senate, I'm coming home."

Refering to his opposition to creating a national holiday in honor of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Helms said a well-known Senate collegue told him "if it had been a secret ballot, there would not have been five votes for it."

Voicing support for a strong national defense, Helms also said "the best way to avoid war is to be able to fight and win one." And he said the U.S. needs to do "whatever is necessary" to stop the spread of communism is Central America.

"Cuba and Nicaragua are gone. We let Vietnam and Cambodia fall" to the communists. "How much better it would be for us to work with our anti-communist friends in Central America," before more nations fall, he asked.

He also voiced suport for a reduction in federal spending, which he said would help the nation's economy.

Helms told the gathering that a last minute amendment he introduced before the passage of the budget — "'The put up or shut up ammendment' I called it" — received 41 votes. "What if it had received 10 more votes?"

The amendment, he said, would have cut federal spending 10 percent across the board with the exception of funds for national defense, Social Security and interest on the national debt.

Helms said in closing, "1984 is a make or break year for just about everything you and I hold dear. We can't sit this one out. All we need is to start restoring this country's principles ... dedication, perspiration, inspiration.

"If everybody does a little bit, we're going to come out all right."

Death Plot Hinted

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Explosives and electronic gear found after rent ran out on a storage locker outside Washington, D.C., may have been part of a plot to assassinate President Reagan and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin in 1981, the Arizona Republic reports.

The explosives — twice as powerful as dynamite and enough to level a city block — were obtained in Arizona by an international businessman who was selling communications equipment to the Palestine Liberation Organization, the Republic said in a copyright story for Sunday's editions.

It said the material was placed in the locker in Alexandria, Va., by a Jordanian described as a Palestinian activist the day before Begin arrived at the White House in September 1981.

The businessman, Harold Eugene McDowell, and Jordanian Abdul-Hafiz Mohammed Nassar pleaded guilty more than a year later to one count each of conspiring to illegally possess and transport explosives across state lines. McDowell was placed on probation; Nassar was sentenced to five years in prison.

McDowell obtained the material for Nassar, who came to the United States in 1973 and was operating a store in Albuquerque, N.M., the Republic said. It said McDowell was paid $52,000 for the explosives and various electronic equipment.

The Republic said it developed its report from court documents, reports obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, interviews with law enforcement officials and other sources it didn't identify.

It also said Justice Department, FBI and unidentified federal officials took various steps to thwart its investigation.

In Washington on Saturday, FBI spokesman Roger Young said: "At first blush, I think that the Arizona Republic has jumped to a conclusion which can't be substantiated." He said it was a "quantum leap" between finding explosives and saying they were part of an assassination plot.

On the allegation that the bureau tried to hinder the probe, he said, "I can tell you we didn't. The last thing we do is try to thwart anybody's investigation. That's ludicrous. We may have at some point in time said 'no comment,' but thwarting is not an appropriate word."

Roanoke Rapids Area Evacuated

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (UPI) — Seven railroad cars of a Seaboard Railroad System train derailed Saturday, spilling sulfuric acid in the downtown area and forcing the evacuation of nearby residents.

Shirley Jones, a communications officer for the Roanoke Rapids Police Department, said authorities notified her they contained the spill in a ditch beside the railroad track less than three hours after the mishap occurred.

Police said the train derailed about 5:24 p.m. No injuries were reported.

Authorities said they used sand to form a dike in the ditch and neutralized the acid with lime.

"As far as I know they've advised they do have it under control as far as they know," Ms. Jones said.

Initial reports indicated another unknown sodium-based chemical also spilled. But E.S. Wilkes, Seaboard's division superintendent, said his reports indicated only an undetermined amount of sulfuric acid spilled. Wilkes said he believed the other railroad cars contained salt and wood chips.

Wilkes said the train, a "yard engine," served several plants around the area and traveled between the yard and the plants delivering supplies.

"Apparently the city is really protecting everybody," Wilkes said.

Ms. Jones said she received estimates that between 25 and 35 people were evacuated from a one block area, but said the number of evacuees might change.

Witnesses said authorities had blocked off at least a four block area at times during the night. Authorities estimated people within that area of the mishap also could be evacuated, but were not sure if that would be necessary.

Most of the evacuees said they made arrangements to stay with friends and relatives. Authorities also set up a shelter at the T.J. Davis Recreation Center to house others if necessary.

A spokesman for Seaboard advised authorities to evacuate the area because of the possibility of a fire from the tanker's contents. No fire had been reported.

Seaboard employees were on the scene along with members of the Environmental Protection Agency, the Department of Transportation, firefighters, rescue workers and police.

Cubans To Join Talks In Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Foreign ministers of the Contadora group and Central American countries met Saturday to discuss a peace plan at a time when the region is more troubled than at the start of the peace effort a year ago.

Panamanian government sources said a Cuban delegation would arrive Sunday to join the talks — an unexpected development. Panamanian Foreign Minister Oyden Ortega has said both the United States and Cuba are crucial to any Central American peace agreement.

There was no word on who would be in the delegation, but the sources said the Cubans would listen to and talk with the Contadora foreign ministers.

Although progress in the talks has been glacially slow, the effort by the Contadora group — Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela and Panama — is the only widely seen hope for a peaceful settlement of Central America's conflicts and has kept the opposing sides talking.

The weekend meeting opened Saturday afternoon, delayed by the late arrival of Colombia's foreign minister, Rodrigo Lloreda. The meeting is closed, and the only statement issued to the press Saturday afternoon said the talks were "proceeding on course."

The officials are discussing a plan submitted two weeks ago on how to carry out the Contadora process, emphasizing demilitarization of the region.

In addition, four of the five Central American nations are to present a proposal that emphasizes elections.

That plan, sponsored by El Salvador, Guatemala, Costa Rica and Honduras, was announced Friday night by Honduran Foreign Minister Edgardo Paz Barnica.

On Saturday, Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto of Nicaragua — the only Central American nation not party to the plan, called it a "a rejection" of the Contadora process.

Among other things, the proposal calls for free civilian elections, which would exclude military political parties or those based on popular militias such as exist in Nicaragua.

Commenting on the proposal submitted two weeks ago, D'Escoto said some parts of it "will have to be fixed," but did not say what Nicaragua's objections were.

A third proposal was expected to be presented by Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, but no information on that plan was immediately available.

The meeting is expected to end Sunday or Monday. It is the fifth time the foreign ministers of the nine countries have met here in the past year to try to work out a solution to regional tensions.

All five Central American nations express faith in the Contadora process, aimed at decreasing militarization of the region, removing foreign military advisers and establishing democratic governments.

Last September, the five Central American nations agreed in principle to a 21-point Contadora plan.

The plan includes a moratorium on arms acquisitions in the area after Feb. 29 and an inventory of arms aready there. It also includes:

— A timetable for the phasing out of foreign military advisers

— Plans for free, broadly-based elections

— Identification and suppression of "irregular forces" in the area, which apparently include right-wing death squads in El Salvador, anti-government rebels fighting in Nicaragua and any leftist support for active and fledgling guerrilla movements in the area.

VICTIM — Jason Reece, 11 months, of Hayesville smiles during a recent photographic session. Jason is one of only five persons ever known to have a disease known as pyruvate decarboxyalase deficiency — a gene disorder for which there is no cure. (AP Laserphoto)

Tar Heel Child Has Rare Illness

HAYESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Philip and Teresa Reece face $50,000 in medical bills for their 11-month-old son — and the bills keep coming in.

Jason Lee, the Reeces' only child, suffers from a rare disease that will eventually kill him.

"We owe everybody. I had to quit work to stay with Jason. It's been hard. When someone calls about a bill, I just tell them to get in line and we'll pay when we can," said Mrs. Reece, 20.

She said Friday that Jason Lee has been hospitalized 17 times since April. He suffers from pyruvate decarboxyalase deficiency — a gene disorder for which there is no cure.

The affliction is so rare that there is no layman's description, said a spokesman for a group of physicians in Atlanta who specialize in genetic diseases.

Mrs. Reece said she has researched the disease and knows of only four other cases in the United States. One child lived 11 years with the disease. The other three died in infancy. Jason already has lived longer than expected, and he has been treated by 35 doctors for his illnesses.

Recently the Reeces received more bad news — Jason has cerebral palsy.

Jason was rushed recently from Murphy to Atlanta during a particularly critical bout with the disease at the cost of $969 for the flight. Medical personnel at Murphy Medical Center helped pay for gas and food money for the trip.

The Reeses have qualified for Medicare and rental assistance and they hope to receive aid from civic organizations that support children's hospitals.

The couple had health insurance until they no longer could make the $184-a-month premiums.

Some Clay County residents responded to the Reeces crisis after the weekly Clay County Progress headlined Jason's story in an article the week before Christmas.

A trust fund started by a Sunday school class at Truett Memorial Baptist Church has raised more than $3,000. A benefit sing at Hayesville High School raised $600 Thursday night.

"I knew marriage and being a mother would be hard work," Mrs. Reece said. "I've never been a church-going person. But God's gotten us through. You've got to live every day like it's your last. We just treat Jason normally, but you've really got to have a special love to get through something like this," Mrs. Reece said.

Vessel Named For N.C. Man

SEATTLE (AP) — The commissioning Saturday of the USS Halyburton paid tribute to William David Halyburton Jr., a Canton, N.C. native who gave his life trying to save fallen comrades on Okinawa.

The U.S. Navy held a ceremony for the ship, a guided missile frigate, at Todd Pacific Shipyards in Seattle.

Halyburton, a pharmacists' mate in the Navy, was posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor for his attempt to give medical aid in battle during World War II.

On May 10, 1945, Halyburton dashed up a hill onto an open field where Americans were suffering many casualties under heavy Japanese fire. He reached the Marine who lay farthest away and tried to defend him with his own body and administer medical aid. But Halyburton, too, received fatal wounds.

Halyburton, a graduate of New Hanover High School in Wilmington, N.C., had been enrolled at Davidson College in Davidson, N.C., where he planned to study for the Christian ministry. He put aside college to serve in the Navy.

His mother, Mrs. William D. Halyburton of Spartanburg, S.C., broke the bottle over the bow of the USS Halyburton when it was launched Oct. 13, 1981. She and other family members attended Saturday's commissioning ceremony in Seattle.

The 453-foot vessel's weapons include surface-to-surface and surface-to-air missiles and anti-submarine torpedoes. It is designed with equipment for two helicopters, a propulsion central control station and bridge control console from which one crew member can direct the ship's direction and speed.

The ship will take a crew of 186 enlisted men and 15 officers. It is scheduled to depart Seattle in mid-February for its homeport of Charleston, S.C.

The Halyburton is the tenth Oliver Hazard Perry class guided missile frigate built by the Seattle shipyard. Todd has built seven for the U.S. Navy and three for the Australian Navy. Three others — two U.S. and one for Australia — are still under construction.

MUSICAL PASSPORT

NEW YORK (AP) — Regina Kohn played her violin to get into the United States.

When she arrived at Ellis Island in 1923, she was threatened with deportation because the Rumanian quota, under which she qualified, was exhausted. The 38-year-old violin teacher was told by the Immigration Board that if she could play "Traumerei" on her violin she would be allowed to enter the U.S. She played the number with so much feeling that she was immediately admitted as an artist.

Some 30 years later, Ellis Island ceaed to operate as an immigration center. The Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Centennial Commission has been formed to help raise some $230 million to restore and preserve both national monuments.

NCSU Trustees Call For More Pay For Faculty

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State University is not offering competitive faculty salaries, which could affect the school's objective of becoming a world-class university, the school's board of trustees said Saturday.

In a unanimous resolution, the board expressed concern about the school's ability to maintain its objectives unless the competitive disadvantage in salaries is eliminated.

James A. Hackney III, chairman of the board's personnel committee, said a 1982 survey by the American Association of University Professors compared salaries of faculty members among comparable universities.

The survey, he said, showed North Carolina State was near the bottom fifth of the rankings.

In presenting the resolution on behalf of the committee, Hackney said state residents are aware of salary complaints by public school teachers, but believe that the university system provides adequate salaries for its faculty.

"We would like to dispel any misconception that the faculty have been taken care of," Hackney said.

He said if the school is to meet its objective of excellence, it must be able to attract and retain faculty of the highest quality. He said many talented faculty members have been lost because the university had not been able to offer competitive salaries.

He said the 1983 AAUP report will probably show the university has dropped even further in the salary comparison rankings.

The resolution said that average salaries for a full professor in 1982 at the University of Virginia were 18.5 percent higher than at NCSU, 11.6 percent higher at Duke, and 7.4 percent higher at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

TV Series May Cite Lost Colony

WILMINGTON (AP) — A film company is considering using remote Bald Head Island as the setting for a three-part television series on the Lost Colony and the Roanoke voyages of the 1580s.

The joint British and American production, tentatively called "Roanoke," is expected to open the American Playhouse series season on PBS in January 1985, said Bill Arnold of the N.C. Film Office.

Arnold said the production company, First Contact Films of New York and Washington, was attracted to Bald Head because it is remote and relatively undeveloped — possibly the closest thing to 16th century America.

"They have to recreate the way things were in 1580 when nothing was here," Arnold said.

But the island's remoteness has created production problems involving transportation, telephone service and housing. Unless the problems can be solved, the series may be filmed somewhere else, said producer Robin Maw.

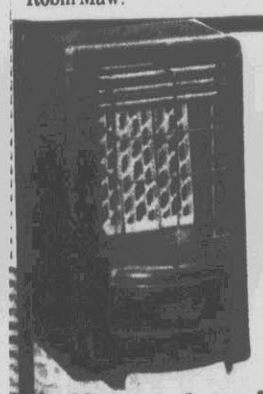

"We really want to film in North Carolina, because it's where it all occurred," Maw said. "But we might not be able to. That would disappoint all of us."

Production officials said a decision should be made in the next few days on the $4 million project.

Arnold said if the decision is made in favor of Bald Head, the production crews could move into the area within a week. The project is expected to take five months, with filming beginning in March.

The three-part series is being co-produced by First Contact, Entertainment Events Ltd. of London and South Carolina Educational TV. It has been in the planning since 1979. Filming was delayed a year because of financing problems, Arnold said.

The story is based on British attempts to colonize America, which began in 1584, and the establishment of a colony on Roanoke Island. The settlement, which disappeared by 1590, has become known as the Lost Colony.

Appeal Awaited For N.C. Inmate

From Wire Reports

RALEIGH — A lawyer for triple murderer James W. Hutchins said Saturday he does not know when the U.S. Supreme Court will rule on a request to delay Hutchins' execution, which is scheduled for Friday.

"There's no way to have such an idea" when the court might rule, said Roger Smith of Raleigh.

"When you file documents like that, they just disappear behind a curtain of mystery and you wait. It's hard on everybody," he said.

Smith declined comment when asked how Hutchins was reacting to the wait.

On Friday, Hutchins chose to die by lethal injection instead of the gas chamber.

If the execution is not delayed, he would be the first North Carolina death row inmate to be executed since 1961 and the first to die under a law enacted last year allowing executions by injection of a lethal dose of barbiturates.

Hutchins was convicted of first degree murder in the May 31, 1979, slayings of Rutherford County Deputy Sheriff Owen Messersmith, 58, and State Highway Patrol trooper R.L. "Pete" Peterson, 37. He also was convicted of second degree murder in the shooting death of Deputy Sheriff Roy Huskey, 48.

The two deputies were killed as they arrived at the Hutchins home in response to a call from the family about an argument. Hutchins then fled in his car and killed the trooper, who was participarting in a search.

His conviction was upheld by the state Supreme Court and the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals last month upheld the conviction.

The case has never been before the U.S. Supreme Court. His lawyers asked the court last week to review the conviction. They contend Hutchins had a conflict with his original lawyer during the trial that limited the effectiveness of his defense and the fact the trial judge refused to delay the case for further psychiatric examination.

Lawyers for the state Justice Department have opposed any delay in the execution. In documents filed with the Supreme Court, the state argued there is no evidence a delay of Hutchins' trial would have resulted in further helfpul psychiatric evidence and denied the claims Hutchins' trial defense was ineffective.

The method of execution chosen by Hutchins involves intravenous injection of sodium thipental, a powerful anesthetic.

Dr. Luigi Cubeddu of the University of North Carolina Medical School pharmacology department said sodium thipental would cause unconsciousness in 10 to 20 seconds.

"It stops the breathing," Cubeddu said. "There's no doubt it is lethal, but the lethal dosage would vary from patient to patient.

"The patient would lose consciousness first, and then by pushing the dosage much higher you can stop respiration," he said. "But the person would be asleep when that happened."

Hutchins is one of 34 inmates on Death Row in North Carolina, said Patty McQuillan of the state Department of Correction. She said 16 whites, including a woman, are waiting execution, as are 17 blacks and an Indian. All of the condemned inmates were convicted of first degree murder, the only capital offense in North Carolina.

Since 1910, Ms. McQuillan said, North Carolina has executed 278 men and two women for first-degree murder, 71 for first-degree rape and 11 for first degree burglary.

"That averages out to about 10 to 15 executions per year up to 1961," she said.

Hutchins' decision comes just two days after the 48th anniversary of the gas chamber's use in North Carolina. The gas chamber replaced the electric chair, which the state had used since 1910.

Before 1910, when counties carried out executions locally, hanging was the most common method used. The first prisoner executed by the state in the electric chair, with the first execution being Walter Morrisson of Robeson County on March 18, 1910, for rape.

Klan And Nazi Group Facing Trial Monday

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — Nine Ku Klux Klansmen and American Nazis go on trial Monday on federal charges of violating the civil rights of five communists shot to death during a 1979 "Death to the Klan" rally.

The federal trial is one of several that followed a bloody shootout that erupted when a group of Nazis and Klansmen showed up Nov. 3, 1979, at an anti-Klan march in Greensboro, N.C., organized by the Communist Workers Party.

Five of the men facing trial before U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery were acquitted of murder charges in a state court in 1980.

The federal court, noting the publicity generated by the shooting and subsequent events, issued a gag order to prosecuting and defense attorneys.

There is a consensus in the legal community that it may be difficult to seat an impartial jury. Defense attorney Fred Harwell said that "everyone recognizes this (trial) is going to be lengthy."

The nine defendants, including former North Carolina KKK Grand Dragon Virgil Griffin, were indicted April 21, 1983, by a federal grand jury that had been considering the case for more than a year.

The other defendants are: Edward Dawson of Greensboro, an ex-Klansman and police informant; David W. Matthews, a Klansman from Granite Falls; Jerry P. Smith of Maiden, a Klan security officer; Klansman Roy C. Toney of Gastonia; Coleman B. Pridmore, a Klansman from Lincolnton; and Nazi Party members Jack W. Fowler Jr., Raeford M. Caudle and Roland Wood, all of Winston-Salem.

The indictment alleged the conspiracy began in October 1979 when Griffin, Smith, Matthews and Pridmore decided at a state Klan meeting to attend an anti-Klan rally in Greensboro sponsored by the CWP.

Two days before the rally, Dawson allegedly distributed posters throughout Greensboro showing a silhouette of a man hanging from a tree that warned:

"Notice! to the Traitors, Communist, Race-Mixers and Black Rioters, Traitors beware. Even now the cross-hairs are on the back of your necks — KKK. It's the time for old-fashioned American Justice."

Conspiracy?

JEFFERSON, N.C. (UPI) — Syria orchestrated the release of a Navy pilot to the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson as part of the Soviet Union's general plan to embarrass the Reagan administration, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said Saturday.

Helms said he knew Jackson was going to see Lt. Robert Goodman released even before the Democratic presidential candidate headed to Syria. Goodman had been held by Syria since December, when his fighter-bomber was shot down during U.S. air strikes.

"I think the Syrians did (orchestrate the release)," Helms said during a news conference before a luncheon in Ashe County.

"They are in the periphery of the Soviet bloc. I mean, they are very close to the Soviets, and the Soviets use surrogates all over the world to do things of this sort and they would like to embarrass the Reagan administration."

Helms said he believes Jackson got involved in the events of last week because the minister was familiar with representatives in the Syrian Embassy in Washington.

Late Friday, Helms had told reporters in Greenville that Jackson's trip was "clearly orchestrated" to embarrass the Reagan administration. His comments Saturday, however, pinned most of the blame on the Syrians.

Forest Sale Is Scuttled

By The Associated Press

The Uwharrie National Forest will not go on the auction block to raise money for the government, an official of the U.S. Department of Agriculture said Friday.

John B. Crowell Jr., an assistant U.S. agriculture secretary, told the Winston-Salem Journal the department has dropped plans to ask Congress for permission to sell up to 6 million acres of national forest land, including most of the Uwharrie forest.

President Reagan raised the idea of selling forest land in 1982 as part of a plan to dispose of unneeded federal land to help reduce the national debt. He estimated the sale would raise about $17 billion over five years and could help avoid the need for new taxes.

Crowell said the plan to sell forest land was scuttled because of opposition from Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the chairman of the Agriculture Committee, and Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, the chairman of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

Since the sale would have to be approved by those Helms' and McClure's committees, Crowell said, it became obvious to the Reagan administration that it could not muster the needed support.

"So the plan has been placed on hold with no prospect for being taken off hold in the foreseeable future," Crowell told the newspaper.

David Felmet, the director of the state Park, Parkway and Forest Development Council, said Friday he thought public reaction against the sale helped stop the proposal.

Northeastern Wins, 69-61

ECU Rally Falls Short

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

BOSTON, Mass. — Mark Halsel and Reggie Lewis fired in 19 points each as Northeastern held off the Pirates of East Carolina University 69-61 Saturday at Matthews Arena.

Barry Wright broke out of a scoring slump with 21 points on the night, while Bruce Peartree followed with 17. Peartree was listed as doutful prior to the game with an ankle sprain suffered in practice Friday.

Freshman center Leon Bass started his first game for the Pirates, and fouled out with 14:37 left with nine points and a pair of blocks.

Halsel established a new Northeastern career rebounding record but shared top game honors with ECU guard Curt Vanderhorst with 10 each.

Although less experienced and smaller, the Pirates outrebounded the Huskies 39-35. But ECU also held the high side of the turnover category, committing 18 compared to nine by Northeastern.

In the end the game was won at the free throw line, as the Huskies got 21 points at the charity stripe while the Pirates managed just 13. Northeastern shot just 68 percent from the line, while the Pirates shot 58.

"We played awfully hard," ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said after the Pirates dropped to 2-8 on the season. "We just can't get over the hump. I like their personnel and the way they use them.

"I thought Leon Bass played well; he can catch the ball and score inside. And Barry Wright played well inside tonight."

The Huskies slowly built to a 53-41 lead at the 9:08 mark of the second half after leading 36-31 at halftime. But the Pirates rattled off the next 10 points to trim the margin to two points with 4:57 remaining.

The Huskies outscored ECU 11-3 over the next four minutes to set the score at 64-54 with 1:05 on the clock.

Again the Pirates refused to submit, with Wright scoring the final seven points of the game for ECU.

"We're getting better," Harrison said. "We grew up a little tonight — came a little closer as a team. They see they can play together and get results."

The Huskies held a 36-31 advantage at halftime after leading by as much as eight once in the first half. The Pirates cut the margin to one on a field goal inside by Bass with 7:53 left until halftime.

East Carolina suffered through a four-minute drought early in the game after trimming the Northeastern lead to 7-6. The Huskies rolled up a 14-6 margin with 13 minutes left in the first half, as Reggie Lewis connected on a free throw.

But the Pirates refused to surrender without a fight. Wright connected on a pair of free throws, then stole a pass and drove inside for a layup to trim the margin to 14-10 with 12:08 till intermission.

After Braswell sank a free throw for the Huskies, Peartree pumped in a 20-footer to cut the gap to three points. Wes Fuller added a field goal for a 17-12 Northeastern lead but missed the free throw attempt after he was fouled by Bass.

A follow-shot by Bass and a drive inside by Wright brought the Pirates to within a point at 17-16 with 8:56 on the clock. Again the Huskies added a field goal for a three-point margin at the 8:45 mark, but Bass answered for the Pirates.

Northeastern pulled out to a 25-19 advantage with 6:11 left in the half on four points by Braswell and two more from Halsel. But again the Pirates cut away the lead and came to within two points with three times before the Huskies scored the last three points of the first half.

Skins Face 49er Roadblock

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Redskins' express, rolling over opponents for the past five months, faces a mighty roadblock Sunday, when the defending Super Bowl champions host the San Francisco 49ers in the National Football Conference championship.

Riding on the outcome is $18,000 a man, a trip to the Super Bowl and, for the Redskins, a chance to go down in history as one of the sport's great teams.

A Washington victory will allow the Redskins to become the first NFL team since the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1979 and 1980 to advance to successive Super Bowls. Victories Sunday and in the Super Bowl Jan. 22 would make the Redskins the first NFC team to win consecutive Super Bowls since the Green Bay Packers accomplished the feat in the first two games, in 1967 and 1968.

The Redskins beat Miami 27-17 last January to capture Super Bowl XVII. The 49ers won the year before, beating Cincinnati 26-21.

"They are the champions and have proven themselves worthy of the title all season," said 49er Coach Bill Walsh.

"The 49ers provide our toughest challenge of the season," countered Washington Coach Joe Gibbs, the NFL's Coach of the Year. "This one is for all the marbles. Both teams know what it takes to get to the Super Bowl and both teams will be fighting to the end."

The NFC champ will go for the Super Bowl crown against the winner of Sunday's AFC championship game between the Los Angeles Raiders and the Seattle Seahawks. Washington, which finished with an NFL-best 14-2 record, has beaten both of those AFC teams this year. The 49ers, who finished with a 10-6 regular season mark, did not play either team.

The Redskins will carry a 10-game winning streak into the game, to be played before a sellout crowd at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium and a national television audience. Kickoff is 12:30 p.m. EST. The 49ers have won four in a row including a 24-23 come-from-behind effort against Detroit in last week's semifinal.

The Redskins set a regular season scoring mark with 541 points and continued their assault last week; trouncing the Los Angeles Rams 51-7.

Statistically, the Redskins finished second in the NFC on offense (No. 2 rushing, fourth passing) and No. 7 on defense (tops against the run and 14th against the pass). The 49ers finsihed third offensively (fifth rushing, third passing) and No. 5 in defense (sixth against the run and seventh versus the pass).

The Redskins' biggest asset is their ability to hold on to the ball combined with an uncanny knack for taking it away from others. A plus-43 takeaway margin includes at least one interception in each of the team's last 16 games and 34 total interceptions for the year. The Redskins, meanwhile, are averaging 1.12 turnovers a game, an all-time league low.

The game will feature the league's Most Valuable Player, Redskin quarterback Joe Theismann; the league's top scorer, Redskin kicker Mark Moseley (161 points), and Redskin running back John Riggins, who set a new single season touchdown record with 24.

There also will be 11 players who were selected for the Pro Bowl — Theismann, linemen Jeff Bostic, Joe Jacoby and Russ Grimm, wide receiver Charlie Brown, defensive tackle Dave Butz and safety Mark Murphy for the Redskins, and quarterback Joe Montana, defensive end Fred Dean, cornerback Ronnie Lott and safety Dwight Hicks for the 49ers.

The game shapes up as a battle between the power of the Redskins and the finesse of the 49ers.

To be effective, the Redskins must run the ball with Riggins (1,347 yards and 24 touchdowns) behind the blocks of the "Hogs" line of Bostic, Grimm, Jacoby, George Starke and Mark May.

The 49ers will counter with a three-four defense anchored by nose tackle Pete Kugler. The play of Kugler and inside linebackers Riki Ellison and Jack Reynolds should determine the outcome of the game.

Success on the run on first and second down will allow the Redskins to keep the 49ers guessing on third down plays and keep San Francisco's designated pass rusher, Fred Dean (17½ sacks) on the bench.

When the Redskins do throw, Theismann (29 touchdowns, 11 interceptions), will look to Brown and Art Monk.

In the secondary for the 49ers will be a group of agressive, hard hitting backs led by Lott and Hicks.

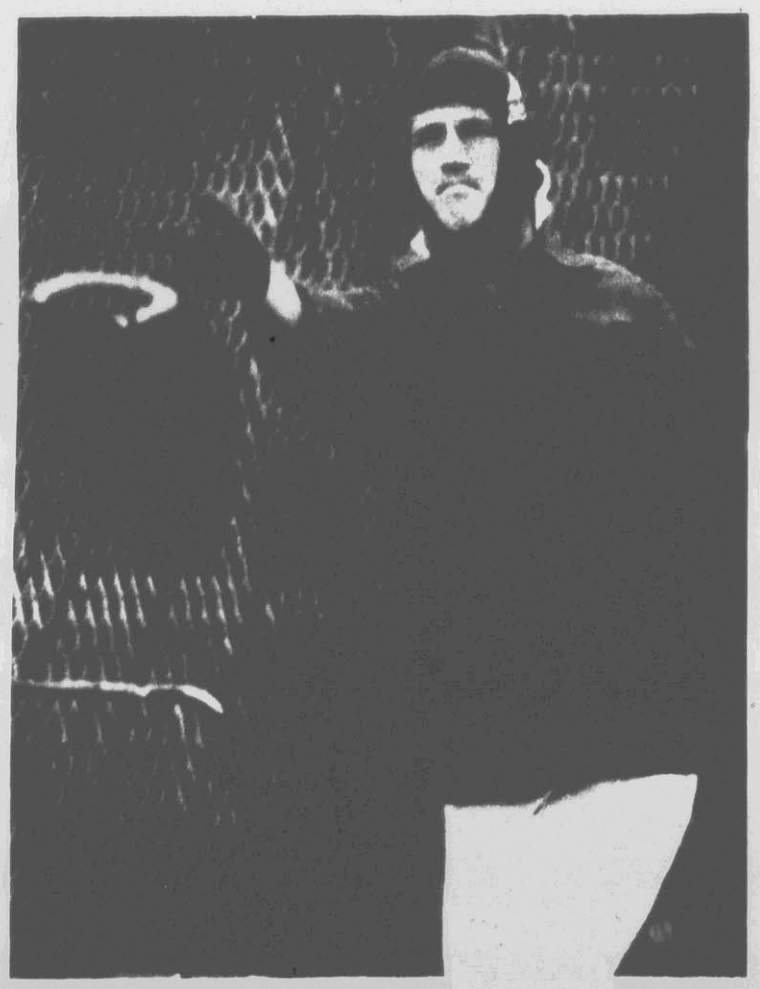

Offensively, the 49ers are built around Montana. Fleet-footed and the possessor of a strong, accurate arm, Montana completed 65 percent of his passes for over 3,900 yards, 26 touchdowns and 12 interceptions during the regular season.

The San Francisco running game features Wendell Tyler (856 yards) and rookie Roger Craig (725). They will be asked to run against the top rushing defense in the league.

The San Francisco passing attack has been hurt by the absence of Clark, who will be replaced by Russ Francis and rookie Mike Wilson.

Freddie Solomon remains the 49er's deep threat. Averaging better than 23 yards a catch, Solomon will go one-on-one with Redskin rookie Darrell Green. The speedster from Texas A&I, one of the world's fastest sprinters, was credited with seven tackles, six deflections and one interception in last week's victory over Los Angeles.

The game could be decided early. The Redskins have outscored opponents 127-42 in the first period this season.

Perkins Paces Heels To Win Over Wolfpack

RALEIGH (AP) — Top-ranked North Carolina had just whipped defending NCAA champion North Carolina State Saturday, but Wolfpack Coach Jim Valvano wasn't disturbed, saying, "I don't feel like it was a 21-point beating."

"I'm not ashamed or embarrassed by this one," he said after the 81-60 Atlantic Coast Conference loss. "Carolina is a great club. Whatever they need, it's there. They have inside strength, great board play and they can shoot it."

Undefeated North Carolina, posting its 10th victory, broke open a close contest in the second half when the Tar Heels' Sam Perkins had 16 of his game-high 22 points. The 6-foot-10 senior hit on 8-of-12 from the field.

It was the ACC opener for the Tar Heels, while 12th-ranked N.C. State, 10-4, is 0-2 in the league.

All-American Michael Jordan and freshman Kenny Smith added 18 points apiece for the Tar Heels, who shot 50 percent from the field. Jordan paced North Carolina with 12 rebounds, while Brad Daugherty had 10. N.C. State shot only 37 percent from the field and was outrebounded 40-34.

Carolina pulled away in the second half after leading 34-31 at intermission and 34-33 after Lorenzo Charles of the Wolfpack hit on a drive on the first play after intermission.

"I think the first five minutes in each second half have got to be the most important part of every game," Jordan said. "We did all the things we are capable of doing. We just busted the game open."

North Carolina then went on a 15-2 spree, with Perkins contributing seven points, to take a 49-35 lead with 14:06 to play. A N.C. State run midway in the second half fell short when Charles missed some key free throws.

"Lorenzo missing three one-and-one chances when we were within 10 doesn't help you in a game like that," Valvano said.

"Sam Perkins did a great job defensively on Charles in the second half. We didn't start him on Charles in the first half because we were afraid of foul trouble," North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said.

The Wolfpack cut the margin to 55-47 with 9:49 left on Ernie Myers' jumper, but that was as close as N.C. State could come.

The Tar Heels then went on a 14-4 spurt, capped by Perkins' three-point play, giving them a 69-51 advantage. During that time, Charles, N.C. State's leading scorer with 20 points, missed the front end of three one-and-one foul shot opportunities.

A capacity crowd of 12,400 at Reynolds Coliseum watched the Wolfpack attempt vainly to shoot over the Carolina zone.

Terry Gannon, hitting on long-range jumpers, added 14 points for the Wolfpack, while Myers had 10 points.

In the first half, North Carolina overcame a 15-14 deficit, with Jordan and Smith combining for 10 points to give the Tar Heels a 23-16 lead. The Wolfpack was hampered by turnovers, but twice cut the margin to one point before freshman Joe Wolf hit a field goal at intermission for the winners.

Raiders And Seahawks Clash In AFC's Final Collision

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three years ago, they were upstarts out of Oakland with an asterisk next to their name. Now the Los Angeles Raiders are the establishment trying to fend off a challenge from an unexpected source.

The challengers are the Seattle Seahawks, new to the playoffs. But their coach, Chuck Knox, has traveled this road often. In five years with the Los Angeles Rams, five division championships. In five years with Buffalo, two trips to the playoffs, And now another in his first year in Seattle.

No head coach in National Football League history has had more success in fewer years with more teams.

The asterisk is emblematic of adequacy rather than supremacy in the NFL. It is the statistical equivalent of "close, but no cigar." Or, in this game, no title. Just a back-door admission to the playoffs.

Only twice in the post-merger history of the NFL has a wild-card team even reached the Super Bowl, and only once has it emerged a winner — the Oakland Raiders of 1980, who first had to knock off the American Conference's West Division champions, the San Diego Chargers, to get there.

"What impresses me about them," Raiders tight end Todd Christensen said of the Seahawks, "is what impressed me about us three years ago. They appear to be a team of destiny and that, a lot of the time, is a lot more scary than their ability.

"I think we have a collection of better athletes, but that, really, at this time of the season, is irrelevant. The year we won the Super Bowl, there were at last three teams better than we were."

"The hardest thing is to get to the playoffs," said Raiders Coach Tom Flores. "After that, anything can happen. I'm well aware of what can happen to a wild-card team that gets hot. We did it in 1980 and became world champions."

Now it is the Raiders who are division champions and the Seahawks who are just one step away from a shot at the Vince Lombardi Trophy. It's not all that improbable. They did it twice during the season, 38-36 in Seattle and then 34-21 in Los Angeles. A year ago, Miami got a shot at it by beating the New York Jets a third time in one season.

What would seem to be all that improbable, however, is that the Seahawks are playing Sunday's AFC title game to begin with.

After all, through the 16 games of the 1980 season, the Raiders were every bit the equal of the Chargers, each finishing at 11-5. It was only when the NFL played its hole card, the tie-breaker, that the Raiders were dealt a wild card.

But this season, while LA ran away with the western title with a 12-4 record, outscoring the opposition by 104 points in the process, Seattle sputtered from start to finish, never winning more than two in a row, finishing just one game over .500 at 9-7 and scoring just six points more than it allowed.

Then there was the business of playing Denver, the AFC's other wild-card team. The Seahawks won in a breeze, 31-7.

So they'd won their first playoff game ever — but they'd been at home against an equally mediocre team, the skeptics scoffed. Wait'll they get to Miami, the experts said.

The Dolphins don't lose very often at home. Add in the Don Shula mystique and ...

So much for mystique. The Dolphins played the second half like a pickup team and Seattle won again, 27-20.

After the game, but before the Raiders had played Pittsburgh in the other divisional playoff, someone asked Dave Krieg, the Seattle quarterback, whether he'd prefer to face the Steelers or LA. "I like to play where it's warm," he said. He got his wish. The Raiders pulverized Pittsburgh 38-10.

And, as they were a weekend ago, the Seahawks take the field as one-touchdown underdogs. "Everybody thinks we're a bunch of nobodies," fumed Ron Essink, their left tackle.

Perhaps they lack a Fun Bunch or a Fearsome Foursome. But Krieg was every bit the quarterback Jim Plunkett of the Raiders was once he became Seattle's starter, finishing second among the conference's passers.

And nobody on the Raiders was close to matching rookie Curt Warner's 1,449 rushing yards and 13 touchdowns.

"One thing about Seattle. The offense is not that complicated," Flores said. "The guy that's carrying the ball is pretty good and they're blocking for him.

"We're playing good football and we're playing against a team that's playing good football. They're hot. They're on a roll."

Knox agreed.

"In the last three weeks, we've played our best football," he said. "By the same token, the Raiders are a much better team than when we last saw them ... I don't think beating them twice is going to have anything to do with what happens Sunday."

Dawkins Sparks Duke By Virginia

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Johnny Dawkins' 20 points led four Duke players in double figures as the Blue Devils defeated 20th-ranked and previously unbeaten Virginia 78-72 in the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball opener for both teams Saturday night.

Mark Alarie added 16 points, Tom Amaker 13 and David Henderson 10 for the Blue Devils, 12-1.

Virginia, losing for the first time after a 10-0 start, got 19 points each from Othell Wilson and Rick Carlisle. Jim Miller added 17.

The loss snapped Virginia's 14-game home winning streak and was only the second defeat in the last 50 games at home for the Cavaliers, playing for the first time in four seasons without Ralph Sampson.

Duke led 40-29 at the half but saw Virginia battle back to tie the score at 44-44 on a turnaround jumper by Miller with 13:38 to play. But following six ties and four lead changes over the next eight minutes, the Blue Devils used an 11-2 run to take control of the game.

Trailing 61-58 with just under six minutes remaining, Duke got baskets from Amaker and Henderson to go on top 62-61. After Ricky Stokes hit a pair of free throws to give Virginia the lead, Alarie sank both ends of a one-and-one to put Duke ahead for good 64-63 with 4:35 remaining.

Following a Virginia turnover, Amaker converted a 3-point play to put Duke up 67-63, and a pair of Henderson free throws made it 69-63 with 2:21 to play.

Jordan Is Not Too Worried

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Michael Jordan's jumper is still a little off, but top-ranked North Carolina didn't seem to need his offense in Saturday's 81-60 rout of No. 12 North Carolina State.

Coming into the game as a 50 percent field goal shooter, the 6-foot-7 guard hit six of 17 attempts, but canned all six of his free throws and grabbed 12 rebounds, four of them on the offensive boards.

Despite the lack of touch 10 games into the season, Jordan is not too worried. He did score 18 points in 32 minutes, dished out three assists and blocked two shots.

"All of the shots I've taken have been very good," Jordan said. "You have those days, and you don't have those days. I feel comfortable about my play."

Jordan said he thought N.C. State might have had an edge on the Tar Heels after last season's emotional victory in Reynolds Coliseum. Therefore, he said it was necessary to seize control and take the Wolfpack partisans out of the game.

"We didn't want the crowd to determine our play," Jordan said. "We wanted to go in there and concentrate on what we had to do and do the basic, fundamental things we do in practice."

Lack of fundamentals were what doomed the Wolfpack, especially in the first half when it was within a basket of taking the lead on several occasions. Trailing 23-22 after a Lorenzo Charles jam and a Tar Heel miss, center Cozell McQueen bounced a pass off a referee, which Matt Doherty turned into a layup.

McQueen later scored on a three-point play to bring N.C. State to within 28-27, but Charles missed the connection on an alley-oop. Steve Hale converted the miss into a jumper. Finally, Ernie Myers double-dribbled and Sam Perkins scored on a baseline jumper.

N.C. State settled down in the second half, but the Tar Heels broke away with the aid of a 17-4 spurt, highlighted by seven points by Perkins.

"If we didn't have those unforced turnovers, the one's where we dribbled it off our foot, or where we threw it out of bounds, we had opportunities to go down to the locker room tied or maybe ahead," Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano said. "In the second half, I think we hung for awhile. But we got tired and they wore us down a little bit."

About the only thing N.C. State established from the game was a new starter. Myers, who scored 10 points, will replace tiny Anthony "Spud" Webb, primarily for the size.

"He's gotta play, so he starts," Valvano said. "We're gonna stay with him the rest of the season."

Hoch Gains Golf Semifinal

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Scott Hoch, the only survivor from the first round, scored upsets Saturday over Hal Sutton and Tom Kite and advanced to the semifinals in the Seiko-Tucson Match Play Championship.

Hoch, a winner of two titles in four seasons on the PGA Tour, knocked off Sutton, the 1983 leading money-winner and Player of the Year, 3 and 2 in the morning round, then unleashed a 6-under-par blitz to swamp Kite 4 and 3 in rainy afternoon play.

"Against Sutton, I did what I had to do," said Hoch, who now has won six matches and faces two more tests in the chase for the $100,000 first prize.

"When I got him down, I didn't let him get back up. When I went up on the eighth, I put the hammer down."

Against Kite, "I wanted to get up early and keep the pressure on him," Hoch said. And that's just what happened. He went in front with a birdie on the second hole, didn't make a bogey and closed out Kite by winning the 12th through 14th, two with birdies.

Hoch will play Tom Watson in one semifinal match Sunday morning. Watson beat Jim Dent 3 and 2 in morning play then held off Lon Hinkle 2 and 1 in the afternoon.

The other semifinal will match Lanny Wadkins against Gil Morgan, who took the Tucson title as a medal-play event last year. Wadkins, four down after 11 holes, rallied against Ben Crenshaw and won with a par on the 19th hole when Crenshaw failed to get up and down from a bunker. Morgan advanced with a 4 and 3 decision over Mark Hayes, his neighor from Edmonds, Okla.

"It's very trying, playing one of your good friends," Morgan said.

Of the semifinalists, only Hoch had to start play in the first round. The other three were among the eight leaders from the 1983 Seiko Grand Prix list who were given byes into the fifth round of play Saturday morning.

"It's a grind," Hoch said. "I think it's an unfair setup. You shouldn't give anybody a bye into the fifth round. The third, maybe, but I can't see giving them a bye all the way to the fifth."

Fuzzy Zoeller and Sutton were the top two seeds and both were eliminated in their opening matches, Sutton by Hoch and Zoeller 1 up by Hayes.

In the other morning matches, Hinkle upset Calvin Peete 6 and 5, Kite edged Victor Regalado 1 up, Crenshaw required 20 holes to get by Richard Zokol, Wadkins beat T.C. Chen 6 and 4 and Morgan got past Keith Fergus 1 up.

A $100,000 check also awaits the winner of Sunday's Don January-Gene Littler match in the seniors' finals. The loser will get $60,000.

"Amazing," said Littler. "When we started playing out here, first place was $2,000 — and that looked pretty good."

"Even if I lose," January said, "it'll be the biggest check of my life."

January beat Billy Casper 4 and 3, and Littler defeated Peter Thomson, a five-time British Open champion from Australia, by the same margin.

Young Guides West In Hula

HONOLULU (AP) — Steve Young of Brigham Young University passed for one touchdown and ran for another to lead the West to a 21-16 victory over the East in the annual Hula Bowl all-star college football game Saturday.

Jim Sandusky, a receiver from San Diego State, was named the outstanding offensive player. He had seven pass receptions for a total of 124 yards.

Freddie Gilbert, a defensive end from Georgia, was the outstanding defensive player as he was credited with six tackles, including three which resulted in a loss of 21 yards.

The West scored just one minute, 10 seconds into the game. Jeff Leiding of Texas recovered an East fumble on the East's 12-yard line on the third play from scrimmage. Two plays later, Young hit Dave Lewis of California with a four-yard pass for the score.

Leiding left the game in the third quarter with an elbow injury.

Young scored on an 11-yard run with 8:07 remaining in the first quarter. A 52-yard pass from Young to Sandusky led to the touchdown.

Jeff Hostetler of West Virginia took over at quarterback for the East after Duke's Ben Bennett was unable to move the team in two series.

Hostetler led the East on an 80-yard touchdown march, which included a 34-yard pass to Cliff Benson of Purdue, and was capped by a 17-yard run by Iowa's Norm Granger for the score.

The East got the ball again under the Hula Bowl rule allowing the trailing team to receive the kickoff.

But Lupe Sanchez of UCLA intercepted a pass by Bennett at the goal line to stop the East's effort to tie the game.

The East took to a ground attack in the third quarter, capping a 72-yard touchdown drive with an eight-yard pass from Hostetler to Kenny Jackson of Penn State.

The East kept the ball, but was unable to move. Young returned as West quarterback and drove his team to the East 38 yardline, where an offside penalty on fourth-down forced a punt at the beginning of the fourth quarter.

Hostetler led the East on another ground attack deep into West territory, but he fumbled on the West 3, with Rick Bryan of Oklahoma recovering for the West. Three plays later, Gilbert tackled Young in the end zone for an East safety.

The East took the ball on their own 15 with 2:30 remaining in the game. Hostetler led the attack to the West's 32 but was sacked by Reggie Singletary of Kansas State.

Hostetler came back, moving to the 22 and a first down, but Sanchez made another goalline interception to end the game.

East Carolina all-American Terry Long played for the East team in the game.

Tech Hands Deacs First Defeat

Big And Little

Wake Forest's 5-3 guard Tyrone Bogues (14) dribbles between 6-9 forward John Salley (22) and center Yvon Joseph (54) of Georgia Tech at Atlanta Saturday after an intercepted pass. Tech beat previously unbeaten Wake, 68-66, in the ACC game. (AP Laserphoto)

ATLANTA (AP) — Scott Petway never had a chance to carry out the designed play, so he took the shot himself, hitting a 15-footer from the left baseline with only three seconds remaining, to give Georgia Tech a 68-66 upset victory over eighth-ranked Wake Forest in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game Saturday.

"I heard the coaches yelling at me to get the ball to (Mark) Price, but he was too well covered, so I dribbled the ball around, watched the clock and took the shot," Petway said of the game-winning basket that snapped Wake Forest's 9-game winning streak.

"The play was designed for Price or (Yvon) Joseph, but Petway said to heck with it," said Coach Bobby Cremins of the Yellow Jackets. "It was a great shot. They did a super job of denying Price the ball."

Cremins added, "It was a credit to our kids that they hung in there. They just hung in and hung in and we won. It was a fantastic basketball game."

"Petway hit a good shot under pressure," Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy said. "Tech is a very good basketball team and we have to give them credit for their play.

"It's still only one game," Tacy said. "There are a lot of contests left, and we will be back."

The Jackets, who trailed most of the way in the ACC opener for each team, tied the game at 64 with 2:50 to play when Joseph sank a turnaround four-footer.

Wake Forest, 9-1, regained the lead when Danny Young sank two free throws, but Joseph got the Yellow Jackets even at 66 when he hit a short hook shot 1:11 from the finish.

Young, who had hit his first four free throws in the game, then missed the front end of a one-and-one, with Tim Harvey claiming the rebound for Tech. The Jackets held the ball until 11 seconds remained, calling time out to set up the last-second shot.

East Gains Win In Shrine Bowl

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Alabama's Joey Jones scored touchdowns on a diving catch of a 45-yard bomb and a seven-yard run off a reverse, leading the East to a 27-19 victory Saturday in the 59th Shrine East-West Game.

College football's oldest all-star show, which drew a crowd estimated at 75,000 at Stanford Stadium and was nationally televised, brought in some $300,000 for the 22 Shriners' hospitals for crippled children.

The East struck first, capitalizing on the recovery of a fumbled snap on the West's 17-yard line. Miami defensive lineman Tony Fitzpatrick, a late entry in the game, made the recovery. Four plays later, Buford Jordan of McNeese State bolted over from the three for a touchdown.

After Sean Pavlich of the Air Force missed a 47-yard field goal attempt for the West, the East went ahead 14-0 on Jones' catch in the end zone of the 45-yarder from Florida quarterback Wayne Peace.

Nebraska quarterback Turner Gill cut the deficit for the West to 14-7 on the first series of the second quarter when he connected on five of five passes in a 76 yard drive and scored on a 12-yard rollout.

The West got the ball back a minute later on an interception by Texas' Craig Curry, who returned the ball 39 yards to the East four-yard line. Gill scored from the one on third down to make the score 14-13, but Pavlich missed the extra point.

Jones, named the game's most valuable offensive player, gave the East a 20-13 lead with 1:20 left in the half when he ran untouched into the end zone on a reverse from the seven, capping a 75-yard, 11-play march directed by Alabama teammate Walter Lewis.

Jesse Garcia of Northeastern Louisiana kicked a 30-yard field goal early in the third quarter as the East stretched its lead to 24-13.

UCLA's Kevin Nelson ran two yards for a touchdown after the West recovered a fumble early in the fourth quarter to help the West to close the gap to 24-19.

EC Women Top Navy

East Carolina's Lady Pirates swam to a big victory over the Naval Academy yesterday, setting one freshman record and qualifying for the NCAA Division II nationals in another Saturday afternoon.

East Carolina's men weren't as lucky bowing to the Midshipmen in their half of the meet, 78-35.

East Carolina's women took a 95-47 victory in their meet, winning ten events. There were three double winners for the women, as Scotia Miller took the 1,000 and 500 freestyles, Jessica Feinberg won the 100 and 200 breaststrokes, and Jean Keeting took the 50 and 100 freestyles.

The 400-yard medley relay team of Lori Livingston, Cindy Newman, Feinberg and Keating qualified for the nationals with a time of 4:09.95, while Keating, Newman, Miller and Cyacee Poust set a new freshman record in the 400 freestyle relay in 3:43.755.

In contrast, the men won only four events against Navy.

"The men didn't swim poorly," Coach Rick Kobe said, "it's just that Navy is that much better. The girls swam fantastic. They really had an excellent meet."

Tarkanian, NLV Defeat Aggies

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Danny Tarkanian scored 18 points and dished out 12 assists Saturday, pacing 18th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas to an 87-66 Pacific Coast Athletic Association basketball victory over New Mexico State.

Tarkanian connected on eight of 14 field goal attempts, most over an Aggie zone, and also had a game-high seven steals as UNLV improved to 11-1 overall and 2-0 in the conference.

New Mexico State, 3-7 and 0-2, out-rebounded the Rebels 43-34, but the Aggies hit only 38 percent from the floor.

UNLV rolled to a 56-38 halftime lead and coasted from there.

An eight-point flurry that ended with dunk by Richie Adams at 9:28 gave the Rebels their biggest lead of the game, 76-51.

UNLV's Jeff Collins led all scorers with 23 points, while Eric Booker came off the bench for 15. Lindsay McElmell and Elston Jones had 14 and 13, respectively, for New Mexico State. The Aggies' leading scorer this season, Steve Colter, was just three-of-16 from the floor and finished with 10 points.

Turpin Leads Kentucky By Bengals

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Kentucky senior Melvin Turpin found a way to end the Wildcats' frustration at Louisiana State: a season-high 35 points to lead his second-ranked team to a 96-80 victory over the No. 9 Tigers on Saturday afternoon.

"This is a good win for us. It is one we wanted because we had some problems the last tree times down here," said the 6-11 center, who also had a game-high 13 rebounds. "I felt comfortable and relaxed out there and they did a good job of getting me the ball."

Turpin hit 15 of 17 shots from the field and five of six free throws as the Wildcats' awesome front line dominated the rebounding. Kentucky held a 45-36 rebounding edge and LSU didn't have an offensive rebound basket until late in the first half.

"Turpin was sensational. When he is ready to play he is as fine a player as there is in the country, and he was ready to play tonight," said Kentucky Coach Joe Hall as his team pushed its record to 10-0 on the season.

"It was an important win for us. It was a game that meant a lot to us in a number of ways," added Hall. "Our defense early was excellent. Turpin and (Sam) Bowie came up with some blocks and we were intimidating inside."

LSU Coach Dale Brown labeled Kentucky "a great basketball team. They deserve to win.

"We could have played better — we played some freshmen and I think down the line we'll be a better team. We're not down in the dumps because we fought them to the very end," he said.

The Wildcats never trailed. They built a 25-10 lead in the first 10 minutes as Turpin scored 12 points. He had 25 points in the opening half as Kentucky raced to a 43-33 lead.

Sophomore forward Kenny Walker chipped in with a season-high 22 points and Jim Master, returning from a one-game suspension, added 13 as Kentucky pushed its conference record to 2-0 and won at LSU for the first time in four years.

Turpin hit 10 of 11 shots from the field in the first half and grabbed nine rebounds. He also got the Wildcats off to a quick second half when he hit his first three shots. His previous high this season was 25, in a victory against Kansas.

LSU, 8-2, cut Kentucky's lead to eight points several times in the second half — the last time at 64-56 on Derrick Taylor's basket with 9:19 to play.

However, Kentucky ran off six straight points to again build a comfortable lead.

Taylor led LSU with 21 points. Leonard Mitchell added 13 and Jerry Reynolds 12 as LSU fell to 2-1 in the conference.

NCAA Checks On Scalping

DALLAS (AP) — A remark by a Miami football player about scalping Orange Bowl tickets has caught the attention of the NCAA, The Associated Press learned Saturday.

David Berst, director of enforcement, said no investigation was planned, but he was waiting to hear from Miami officials on the incident.

The remark was heard by several thousand people who still were in the Orange Bowl Tuesday night celebrating the dramatic 31-30 victory over Nebraska which gave underdog Miami the national championship. The Kansas City Star quoted the unidentified player as saying over the public address system, "I sold two tickets tonight for $300 each, and I feel like I got scalped."

The practice of players' selling tickets for amounts greater than their face value has figured in some of the NCAA's biggest probation cases, including Southern Cal and Clemson. The Miami football program went on a two-year NCAA probation, with one year of sanctions, in November, 1981. A Miami spokesman said Saturday the player — whom he declined to identify — is a well-known joker.

"It was just an off-hand, silly comment made in the celebration of the moment," Ron Steiner, Miami sports information director, told the AP. "Nobody here took it seriously because we don't think there's any way it could be true."

"We're aware of the quote in the newspaper," Berst said when approached about the incident. "There is an NCAA rule that prohibits ticket scalping, of course. In isolated instances, the rule affects the eligibility of the student-athlete who is involved in the violation. I'm sure that University of Miami athletic officials will review the matter and contact us about it."

Berst and other NCAA officials are in Dallas for the annual NCAA convention.

Steiner said he had no doubt that Miami coaches would speak to the player.

"Of course, our coaches will talk to him," Steiner said. "A lot of people just don't know how to take a joke, including a lot of media people."

Georgetown ..... 74 Seton Hall..... 63

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Forward Bill Martin came off the bench to score 15 of his 17 points in the second half and grab 12 rebounds to lead fourth-ranked Georgetown to a 74-63 Big East Conference basketball victory over Seton Hall Saturday.

Center Patrick Ewing added 12 points and five rebounds and forward David Wingate chipped in with 11 points as Georgetown boosted its record to 12-1 overall and 2-0 in the conference. Seton Hall, which finished last in the Big East last year, fell to 7-6 and 1-2.

Georgetown, which had to rally to take a 29-27 halftime lead, saw a 10-point second-half advantage whittled to two before erupting with a 13-4 surge to take a 62-51 lead on Martin's two free throws.

Andre McCloud's three-point play pulled Seton Hall to within 49-47 with 10:14 to play, but Martin converted a three-point play and hit a jumper to start the Hoyas' run.

Seton Hall closed to 66-60 on Ken Powell's layup with 2:08 to go, but Martin converted two foul shots with 2:06 to play and sank one of two free throws seven seconds later to give Georgetown a 69-60 lead. Martin converted 11 of 17 foul shots.

McCloud led Seton Hall with 12 points and eight rebounds.

Seahawk Win Could Hurt

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Few of Reno's legal sports bookies were nervous last summer when fans of the Seattle Seahawks began putting unusually large sums of money on their National Football League team to go to the Super Bowl.

Those same bookies now are a little unnerved as pro football's perennial doormats are one victory shy of a date in Tampa Bay. Seattle plays the Raiders in the American Football Conference championship game in Los Angeles Sunday.

Last August, the Seahawks went off at 100-1 to win the Super Bowl and 50-1 to win the AFC title.

"If they win, we're crushed, killed, slaughtered," said Mike Fernandes, the sports book supervisor at the MGM Grand-Reno. "If anybody else wins, we're OK."

In an interview with the Reno Gazette-Journal, Fernandes added that the MGM is not the only one sweating out the Seahawks' playoff drive.

"From what I've heard, everybody is buried on the Seahawks. People didn't care what the odds were. They never asked. They just said, 'I want to bet on the Seahawks.' People always bet the longshots, but this was unusual. They never stopped."

Fernandes added, "I don't know how they knew. But they knew."

Chuck Travella, sports book manager at Karl's Silver Club, agreed that a Seahawk championship would be "painful."

"It could cost us 50 grand to $75,000. There's nothing that could be much worse than that."

But Travella insists he's reasonably relaxed. "This is their first playoff. They have two to play, two very good teams. The Raiders aren't going to let them beat them three times, are they?"

Oklahoma.....98 Syracuse.....91

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Sophomore forward Wayman Tisdale scored 33 points Saturday as the Oklahoma Sooners extended their record to 12-1 by defeating Syracuse 98-91 before a crowd of 22,122 in the Carrier Dome.

Tisdale scored 19 points in the first half, shooting eight for 11 from the floor. Freshman Tim McCalister scored 26 for Oklahoma, 20 in the second half to balance Tisdale.

For the Orangemen, 8-3, Rafael Addison led with 24 points. Sean Kerins scored 21 points, 14 in the second half for the Big East squad.

Oklahoma, representing the Big Eight, led from the start and never was tied again after the game was deadlocked at 10-10.

Syracuse was down by 14 points, the Sooners' largest lead of the game, with 3:43 left, but closed within seven points while limiting Tisdale to two points down the stretch.

Oklahoma also got 12 points from Darryl Kennedy and 11 from Calvin Pierce.

Other Syracuse players in double figures were Gene Waldron with 15 points and Andre Hawkins, who guarded Tisdale, with 13 before Hawkins fouled out with 1:45 to go in the game.

Boston College....74 Villanova.....63

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Junior guard Michael Adams scored a career-high 34 points and went over the 1,000 mark as 17th-ranked Boston College defeated Big East rival Villanova 74-63 Saturday in the first game of a Palestra college basketball doubleheader.

Terence Stansbury scored 20 points and Granger Hall added 16 to lead Temple to a 87-75 victory over Penn State in the second game.

Adams had 14 points in the first half as the Eagles, 10-2 overall and 2-0 in the Big East, took a 36-30 lead by intermission. BC took its biggest lead at 54-42 on a free throw by Roger McCready with 10:12 left in the game.

Villanova rallied to within 60-56 on a jump shot by Harold Pressley with just over four minutes left, but free throws by Stu Primus and Adams gave the Eagles a 66-59 advantage at the 1:35 mark.

Jay Murphy added 23 points for the winners, while Pressley had a career-high 20 points for Villanova, 3-7 overall and 0-2 in league play.

Eagles Fly By Conley, 48-43

VANCEBORO — West Craven rallied in the final quarter and pulled out a 48-43 victory over D.H. Conley's Vikings Friday night in the opening Coastal Conference basketball game for each team.

Conley's girls romped to a 62-37 win in their contest.

Conley leaped ahead in the first period of the boys' game, pulling out into a 12-4 lead in the first eight minutes. But West Craven began to warm up in the second quarter, and outscored the Vikes, 15-12, cutting the lead to 24-19 at halftime.

West Craven clipped another point off the margin in the third period, and trailed only 36-32 as that frame ended. In the final quarter, West Craven outhit Conley, 16-7, pulling ahead to take the win.

Tim Cox led the Eagles with 15 points while Reggie Jordan added 11. Conley had no one scoring in double figures.

Conley's girls also forged out into an early lead, holding a 16-5 margin after one half. But, unlike the boys, they held and continued to pull away. Conley outscored West Craven, 10-8, in the second quarter and took a 26-13 lead into the dressing rooms.

Conley added another point to its lead in the third period, making it 40-26. The Valkyries then outscored the Lady Eagles, 22-11, in the final quarter.

Karen Barrett led Conley with 24 points, while Mechio Kornegay added 13. Beverly Peele led West Craven with 20.

Conley's boys are now 5-6 overall and 0-1 in the league while the girls are 11-1 and 1-0.

North Lenoir Trips Greene In OT

WHEAT SWAMP — Greene Central, after twice beating North Lenoir in earlier meetings, found itself on the short end of a 39-38 overtime game Friday night.

The Rams, with a number of chances to win the contest both in regulation and during the overtime, just couldn't hit the needed points and Jimmy Core's basket with two seconds left gave the Hawks their revenge.

In the boys' game, both teams pushed in six points in the first period and the Rams managed to inch into a 16-14 lead at halftime. The two matched points in the third period, which ended with the Rams leading, 28-26.

In the final period, the Rams moved out into a 35-32 lead, and had several chances at the free throw line to increase the lead. Instead, they missed and North Lenoir took advantage of it to finally tie it up at 35-35 on a Larry Johnson shot.

That forced the two into overtime and in that, the Rams moved ahead, 38-37 and again had the chance to score more at the foul line, but missed. Core then hit with two seconds left to give the Hawks the win.

Core finished the game with 14 points for the Hawks, while Boneree Johnson had 18 and Theodore Edwards had 13 for the Rams.

North Lenoir's Lady Hawks zoomed out to a 12-4 lead in the opening period but couldn't hold onto it. The Lady Rams rallied, 17-11, in the second quarter and cut the lead back to just 23-21 at the half. But another 15-8 margin in the third period moved the lead back out to 38-29. North Lenoir then outscored the Lady Rams, 15-10, in the final quarter to wrap it up.

Deedee Phillippee led North Lenoir with 13 points while Veronica Chapman added 12. Antionette Wilkes and Cynthia Jones each had ten for the Rams.

Greene Central's boys drop to 9-2 with the loss, while the girls are now 8-3. The loss by the boys snapped an eight-game winning streak.

Conley Dumps Eagle Matmen

HOLLYWOOD — D. H. Conley's wrestlers had an easy time of it with West Craven Friday night, rolling to a 71-6 victory.

That left Conley unbeaten in eight matches this year and they are 2-0 against Coastal Conference competition.

The lone Conley loss was a forfeit at the 114-pound level. Conley also earned forfeits in four other weights. In the remaining eight weights, the Vikings took pins in each, except at 157, where Scott Boyle recorded a 20-1 superior decision over Melvin White.

"We went up against a young and inexperience West Craven team," Coach Milt Sherman said. "We used it as kind of a tune-up for our Tuesday match with West Carteret." That match, to be held at Conley at 7 p.m., will be the last home match of the year for the Vikings and possibly their most important. West Craven, winner of both its own invitational tournament and the Washington tournament, is the favorite to wrest the title from Conley this year.

"I expect it to be a real barn-burner," Sherman said.

Greenville rallied, however, and Chris Harris scored with five seconds left to tie it at 44-44 and sent the game into overtime. In the extra period, however, GCA couldn't keep up and Wilmington gained the four-point win.

Tim Reagan and John Long each had 16 for Wilmington with Keith Campbell adding ten. Harris had 14 and Van Andrews had 12 to lead the Knights.

The Lady Knights are now 4-1 on the year while the boys are 4-2.

"This was our first game after the holidays, and we looked it" Coach Dale Thatcher said. "But Wilmington has a good club, too."

Neikro Signs With Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Phil Niekro learned to throw the knuckleball from his father. Now, with three sons of his own and nearly 20 years of major league service to his credit, Niekro has joined the New York Yankees so he can continue to throw it.

Niekro will turn 45-years-old on April 1, the day before the 1984 baseball season opens. He signed a two-year, no-trade contract that will take him through the 1985 season.

On Friday, when he signed the contract, reportedly worth $1.4 million plus incentives, Niekro became the oldest active player in the club's storied history — 1½ years older than outfielder Johnny Cooney, who played for the Yankees in 1944 at the age of 43½.

The question was bound to arise. How long could Niekro continue to get batters out with his flutterball?

"I honestly can't answer that," Niekro said at a news conference to introduce him to New York. "All I can say is I feel great, and as long as I can keep pticking, managers and owners have to keep putting me out there."

Reassurance came from other quarters.

Hoyt Wilhelm, perhaps the best-known knuckleballer of all time and a prime Hall of Fame candidate, not only was the last man to no-hit the Yankees, in 1958, but he pitched until 1972, when he retired at the age of 49.

"I saw Phil pitch three times at the end of last season on TV," Wilhelm said, "and I feel he can still pitch and contribute on the major league level. I still think of him as a young man. I was just getting started on my career at 45."

Like Wilhelm, Niekro has thrown the knuckleball his entire major league career, which began in 1964 with the Milwaukee Braves and continued with the Braves until last season, when he was cut.

Niekro was born in Lansing, Ohio in the heart of the Eastern Ohio coal fields, where his father was a miner and an amateur baseball player.

"He was a big guy," Niekro said of his father, "and he used to be a pretty good pitcher. I can remember him striking out, like, maybe 150 guys in a season. Then, he hurt his arm. Another coal miner taught him how to throw a knuckleball, and he taught me."

Now, Phil, his brother Joe, who plays for Houston, and Charlie Hough of the Texas Rangers are the only knuckleball pitchers left in the game.

"Once us three guys go, will there be anymore? I don't know," Niekro said. "How many knuckleball coaches do you see? They don't teach it in the major leagues. You get to the big leagues with a good fastball or a curveball. Not too many guys sign out of high school with a knuckleball, but I didn't have a good fastball or curve. I got guys out with a knuckleball.

"A lot of coaches discourage young players from throwing the knuckleball because if something goes wrong, they don't know what to talk about," Niekro said. "The pitching coach at Atlanta used to come out to me and say, 'You're on your own.' When I had trouble, I used to sit down with my brother and talk."

Niekro comes off a mediocre season in which he went 11-10 with a 3.97 ERA, although he was 9-4 after June 26. The Braves cut him after the season, apparently feeling he had reached the mandatory age of retirement.

"I know I'm still valuable as far as winning in the big leagues goes," Niekro said. "I don't believe in age. I have yet to find anything in the basic agreement that says I have to retire at a certain age."

Judge Bars Pay Cable

WILMINGTON (AP) — A judge ruled Friday that a Wilmington cable television firm must broadcast its regular signal from the Entertainment and Sports Programing Network, including Atlantic Coast Conference basketball games scheduled to be blacked out.

New Hanover County District Judge Elton G. Tucker issued an injunction after a suit was filed against Vision Cable of Wilmington. Alley Hart, George Chadwick and Billy H. Mason charged that ESPN has not broadcast all of its sports programming because it blacked out games sold as part of the "Season Ticket" pay-TV package.

Under the Season Ticket arrangement, cable television subscribers pay a fee to watch 23 ACC basketball games not offered on commercial television or through regular ESPN programming. The package is applicable to the five ACC states.

District Court Judge Charles E. Rice issued a temporary restraining order Tuesday which prohibited Vision Cable from blacking out regular ESPN programming, which includes the Season Ticket package.

Goose Goes To The Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Those smiles creasing the faces of the San Diego Padres' starting pitchers weren't mustered just for media cameras. They were grinning because "Goose" is coming to San Diego to make their jobs easier.

"Goose" is Rich Gossage, the talented free-agent relief pitcher who agreed Friday to a five-year, $5.5 million contract with the Padres.

Even before he signed on the dotted line, Gossage and the San Diego brass were talking pennant, although the Padres have never done better than the .500 records of the last two seasons.

"I look forward to having a lot of fun," said the 32-year-old Gossage, who spent the last six seasons with the New York Yankees. "To have fun is to win. Going all the way is the only satisfaction that I get out of a season."

Padres President Ballard Smith called the Gossage signing the latest example of "trying to get serious about developing a championship club."

"There aren't very many outstanding relief pitchers in baseball and certainly we feel we have one of the most outsanding in the history of the game," Smith added. "There's no question that if there was one thing this team needed to get for the 1984 season, that was someone who could come in and get that last out."

Scott Paces Rose By Knights, 53-44

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Gary Scott provided the needed punch to hold off successive rallies by Northern Nash, as Rose High School opened its Big East Conference play with a 53-44 win over the Knights Friday night.

Rose's girls also chose the moment to win their first in nine outings, gaining a 61-52 victory over the Lady Knights in their game.

Scott, scoring 15 points in a starting role for the Rampants, helped boost Rose out to an early 14-point spread. And although the Knights rallied to as little as two points away, Rose was able to keep command with key rebounds and crucial free throws.

The game was actually won at the stripe, where Rose canned 17 of 28. Northern Nash made one more field goal than did Rose, 19-18, but hit just six of 19 tries at the line.

Rose held a commanding rebound edge, 49-38, in a game that saw neither team play well offensively. Rose shot only 39.1 percent, while Northern was a cooler 35.2. Northern committed 28 turnovers to Rose's 24.

"It wasn't pretty, but we won and that's the important thing," Coach Jim Brewington said. "It's a big win for us to start the conference season with."

Brewington said the Rampants got a little careless toward the end, making several turnovers that allowed Northern to keep it close. "But we got a few key rebounds and hit our free throws and that helped us win. Gary really had a good game, too and we needed it."

The two leading scorers for the Rampants, Carlton Wilson and Mack Walston weren't on their usual game, scoring only five and nine points respectively. "Carlton got into early foul trouble and wasn't in the game that much. Mack didn't do much there until the end but he helped then.

"Northern is a young club, and we felt that if we played good defense we could beat them. They're awfully quick, though, and that caused us some of our troubles."

For a while it looked like the Knights might not find the basket. Rose scored the first ten points of the game, with Scott providing the first five. Jeff Hopkins added a three-pointer to that and then Hunter Bost hit from the baseline for a 10-0 lead with 4:42 to go.

Northern, which missed a pair of free throws in the third minute of the game, finally got one as Jarrod Moody made the second of two free throws with 4:25 left.

Rose however, added a tap-in by Hopkins and two free throws by Wilson to go up 14-1 before Nash got its first basket, that coming with 2:51 left as Moody hit from the lane.

Rose led at the end of the quarter, 16-3.

But after the Rampants made it 17-3 on a free throw by Hopkins in the first 30 seconds of the second period, Rose went the next four and a half minutes without a point and Northern took advantage to rally by scoring 11 of its own. That cut the lead back to 17-14 with 3:21 left.

Bost stopped the skid with a drive and Scott stole the ball for another basket, then hit again just before the horn to give Rose a 23-14 edge at the half.

After seven minutes of play in the third period, Rose still held its nine point edge, but Northern scored three baskets, two of them by Dennis Williams, in the final minute to cut the margin to 29-25 at the buzzer.

Ronald Tabron then scored 18 seconds into the final period to cut the lead back to two, 29-27, but Wilson hit a turnaround jumper and Walston got two free throws to open the margin to six. With 3:48 left, Walston hit to run it to 41-33, and two free throws by Tyrone Smith opened the lead to ten again, 45-35 with 1:20 to play. Rose finally led by 12, 49-37 on a goal-tending call on a shot by Scott, and that — with 45 seconds remaining — sealed it for the Rampants.

Northern was led by Marvin Macklin with 15, while Williams hit 11.

The Rose girls, down by as much as eight in the second period, fought back and took a nine-point lead early in the final period and held onto it for their first victory of the year.

Rose took the lead early, but Northern came back to tie it at 8-8 before Rose held a 14-12 lead at the end of the first quarter. Then, after Rose scored the first basket of the second frame, Northern ran off ten straight to move ahead, 22-16. After Rose scored again, two free throws by Carol Edwards and a basket by Monica Harris gave the Lady Knights a 26-18 lead.

Rose rallied and cut the lead back to two, 26-24, then trailed only 30-29 as Vickie Parrott hit two free throws with two seconds left.

The lead then changed hands five times before Rose took it for good on a rebound by Niansa Outlaw at 39-38 with 3:29 to go in the third quarter. Outlaw hit again and Sheila Carmon stole the ball for a layup. Doris Richardson then scored to up the lead to 45-38 and Rose held a 47-40 lead as the final quarter opened.

Carmon scored from underneath to open the fourth and give Rose a 49-40 lead. Northern rallied, however, cutting it back to 51-48, before Lori Woolard made a three-point play, followed by a drive by Richardson and a basket off a rebound by Carmon that opened it to 58-48 with 1:47 left.

An extremely pleased coach Dennis Gibson said, "I really don't know what to say in this position. But it's nice to be in it (a winner) for a change.

"I expected Northern to play us in a man-to-man defense and we worked on it all week. We shifted Doris to the backcourt (she usually brought the ball up) and that really helped us a lot. We got balanced scoring for a change too and that was another big factor.

"We're getting better and better," Gibson said. "But we've still got to cut down on turnovers: we make too many. And we didn't hit the boards like I thought we should have. We'll have to work on that more too."

Rose was led in the game by Richardson who scored 19 points and Carmon and Parrott with 11 each. Northern was led by Harris and Sharlene Hunter with 13 each while Teresa May hit ten.

Rose's girls are now 1-8 on the year, and 1-0 in the conference, while the boys are 6-3 overall and 1-0 in the league. Northern's boys fall to 5-4, 0-1, while the girls are 4-5 and 0-1.

Hatteras Tops Bear Grass

BEAR GRASS — Cape Hatteras built up a good-sized lead in the second and third periods, then withstood a Bear Grass rally for a 64-50 basketball victory Friday night.

Bear Grass' girls easily downed their coastal visitors, 47-31 in their game.

Hatteras inched out into an 11-8 lead in the first quarter of the boys' game, then held the Bears to eight points while adding 13 of their own. That gave Hatteras a 24-18 lead at the half.

The third period really did the most damage as the Bears scored only two points while Hatteras was adding 20. That ran the lead out to 44-20. The Bears rallied, 30-20, in the final period, but it wasn't enough.

William Jones and Lonnie Woods each scored 19 points to lead Hatteras, while Joey Hammond added 14. Lawrence Watson had 11 and Terry Brown, 10, to lead the Bears.

Bear Grass' girls ran out to a 13-4 lead in the first quarter and were never in trouble after that. They outshot Cape Hatteras, 15-5 in the second quarter for a 28-9 halftime lead. Things got no better for the visitors in the third period as the Lady Bears upped their lead to 43-19. Bear Grass allowed a 12-4 rally in the final quarter.

Amy Lilly scored 10 points to lead the Bears, while no one scored in double figures for Hatteras.

Southern Nash Free Shots Dump Panthers

BETHEL — Southern Nash cashed it at the free throw line during the final period and eased past North Pitt, 56-50, Friday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game.

North Pitt's girls remained unbeaten in league play, however, downing the Ladybirds, 37-25.

North Pitt's boys are now 1-1 in league play and 5-5 overall. The Pant-HERS climb to 2-0 in the league and 7-3 overall.

Southern Nash hit only 10 of 17 free throws in the whole game, but nine of 13 of them came during the final period when the Firebirds finally managed to pull away from the Panthers and claim the victory.

Southern held a 12-10 lead after one period, but North Pitt came back, 20-17, and took a 30-29 lead at the half. Both teams scored ten points each in the third period, leaving North Pitt up, 40-39, as the final quarter got underway.

But in that, the Firebird free throws helped them to a 17-10 margin over the Panthers — giving them the win.

Lonnie Artis had 16 points, Kelvin Craddock added 15 and Terry Battle had ten to lead Southern, North Pitt was paced by Linwood Harris with 17 and Ronnie Ebron with ten.

Southern also took the early lead in the girls game, 7-5, and managed to hold onto it in the second period, 7-6, to take a 14-11 lead at the half. North Pitt began to rally in the third period, 9-7, but still trailed, 21-20, as the last quarter began.

In that, however, the Pant-HERS outshot the Ladybirds, 17-4, to waltz to the victory.

Sherry Bradley led North Pitt with 15 points, while Ellen Lewis had 12 to lead Southern.

ECU's Sam Jones Hopefully Is Headed For The Olympics

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

As a basketball star at East Carolina University, "Sam" Jones became one of the university's outstanding all-time female athletes.

She capped her career at East Carolina by becoming the first recepient of The Daily Reflector's Collegiate Athlete of the Year award.

This summer, however, the stakes will be just a little bit higher as Sam sets her sight toward an Olympic medal.

But it won't be in basketball. Nope, this time, it's in the little known sport of team handball, something Sam only discovered when she had concluded her basketball career at East Carolina.

She's been active in the sport for only a little more than a year, but she's already regarded as the fourth best woman player in the country in it. Recently she's been in the area, visiting her family in Dudley, just outside Goldsboro, and renewing some acquaintances at East Carolina.

"I just had to come by and see some of the football team. They had a great season this year, and I'm really proud of 'my boys.'" she said.

Sam related that this past fall she was sitting in the lounge at the team handball training center at Lake Placid, N.Y., with the televison giving the news. "They were talking about New York and California, when suddenly they said something about East Carolina's football team. I just couldn't believe it. I didn't know how to react."

Shortly after Jones played her final basketball game at ECU, she was approached about trying out for team handball. She not only liked what she found in the sport, but went to the National Sports Festival that summer as a member of the South team. When that was over, her play had been good enough to land her a spot on the U.S. National team that spent several weeks in Europe playing teams there in seven countries.

"Team handball is a big sport over there," Jones said. "It's like the third biggest sport. They have it on television, just like we have basketball over here."

Surprisingly, however, the U.S. Nationals won 12 games on the trip, helped along by Sam's play.

But after returning to this country, Sam elected to return to school to complete her education, but rejoined the team last January to begin preparations for the 1984 Olympics.

"Really, I've only been playing the sport about 14 months all told," she said. Right now there are 20 people on the training list for the national team, with 12 to make it. She is among the 12 now on the list to make another trip to Europe next month.

Then, it'll be back to this country and to the West Coast for the national tournament, and from those who attend there, the Olympic team will be selected.

The actual chances of winning a medal in the Olympics is considered slim for the U.S. in the sport. "We're definitely the underdogs and we're supposed to be beaten badly," Sam said. "But we beat some good teams in Europe. We're coming along."

Meanwhile, it's back to Lake Placid for Jones and her teammates, continuing to prepare for this summer in Los Angeles. Lake Placid, by the way, is used as the training site for the sport since it's close to Canada. "And they have teams there that we can play against," Jones explains.

And maybe, by the time summer is over and the sport gets a little more exposure, there'll be a few more fans in this country, too.

Roanoke Nips Tarboro

ROBERSONVILLE — James Duggins hit with 13 seconds left and provided Roanoke High School with a 70-68 Northeastern Conference basketball victory over Tarboro Friday night.

Tarboro's girls rolled to a 52-40 win in their game over the Lady Redskins.

Tarboro inched out into a 16-15 lead in the first period of the boys game, but Roanoke turned it on in the second period and charged ahead. A 16-8 margin allowed the Redskins to take a 31-24 lead into intermission.

But the Vikings fought back in the third period, 28-18, and regained the lead, 53-46. The Redskins were not to be denied, however, fighting back, 21-15, with Duggins providing the winning basket.

Garrett Baker led the Redskins with 19 points while James Hines had 17 and Duggins had 10. Curtis Jones led Tarboro with 21 points, while Kenny Hopkins had 13 and Tony McLean had 10.

Tarboro's girls edged in front, 9-6, in the first period, then added to that in the second, 14-11. That gave the Valkyries a 23-17 halftime edge. Tarboro came back to increase that to 37-28 in the third frame, and finished off Roanoke with a 15-12 margin in the final quarter.

Val Battle led Tarboro with 14 points, while Kim Mills had 12 and Belinda Winnagan had 10. Roanoke was led by Gloria Duggins with 23.

Roanoke's boys are now 4-5 overall and 4-2 in the Northeastern, while the girls are 4-5 overall and 3-3 in the league. Roanoke plays host to Williamston on Tuesday.

Creswell Nips Jamesville

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville's Bullets missed out on two scoring opportunities in the final 30 seconds and bowed to Creswell Friday night, 63-62, in a Tobacco Belt basketball game.

Jamesville's girls, however, claimed their first win of the year, taking a 44-19 win over Creswell.

Jamesville's boys are now 2-4 in the league, while the girls are 1-5.

Both teams scored 15 points in the opening period, but Creswell took control in the second period with a 16-7 advantage. That made it 31-22 at the half.

Jamesville fell further behind in the third period as Creswell outhit the Bullets to up the lead to 49-34. But in the final quarter, Jamesville rallied, 28-14 and closed the gap to just one point.

But a turnover cost them the ball and after Creswell missed at the free throw line, the Bullets had one more chance with 12 seconds left, but failed to get off a good shot.

Ezro Webb led Creswell with 20 points while Darrell Mercer added 18 and Danny Moore had 11. Jamesville was led by Tracy Peele with 18 points, while Richie Ange had 17 and Robert Harris had 16.

Jamesville's girls got almost all they needed in the first quarter of their game. That period ended with the Lady Bullets up, 16-0. The Bullets again outhit Creswell, 11-6, to run the lead to 27-6 at halftime.

Jamesville upped the margin to 39-11 in the third period and allowed an 8-5 rally by Creswell in the closing frame.

Sydney Getchell led Jamesville with 13 points, while Robin Gardner added 11. No one hit more than seven for Creswell.

Bertie Rally Stalls Pack

WASHINGTON — Washington High School, unable to hit at the free throw line in the final period, saw Bertie rally and then take a 55-47 overtime victory in a Northeastern Conference basketball game Friday night.

Bertie's girls also came away with a win, downing Washington, 36-34.

Bertie raced out to a 12-4 lead over the Pam Pack in the first quarter of the boys' game, but then had to hang on as Washington rallied to cut the lead to 24-21 at intermission. In the third period, Washington cut two more off the lead and trailed by just one, 30-29, as the last period opened. The Pam Pack outhit Bertie, 16-15, in the final period, with Steve Austin hitting a 20-footer with eight seconds to go to tie it up. But the Pack also was zero for four at the line in the period — losing the chance to win it outright.

In the overtime, Steve Hayes scored six points to lead Bertie to a 10-2 advantage and the victory.

Calvin Cooke led the Bertie scoring with 20, while Hayes added 14. Washington was led by Austin with 12.

Bertie's girls pushed out into a 15-8 lead during the first quarter, but Washington rallied in the second, 12-4. That put Washington into a 20-19 lead at intermission.

In the third period, Washington inched the lead out to 28-25, but they couldn't hold on. Bertie rallied in the final quarter and gained the 36-34 victory.

Andrea Gilliam led Bertie with 10, while Glenda Dailey had 15 to pace Washington.

The Washington boys are now 2-3 in the leagu eand 4-7 overall. The girls are 0-5, 2-7. Washington travels to Tarboro on Tuesday.

Black Ducks In Trouble — Waterfowl hunters along the eastern seaboard have traditionally considered the black duck a prize. One of the wariest of waterfowl, it's a delicacy on the dinner table. There is growing evidence, however, that the balck duck is in trouble — and for a variety of reasons. Over the past few decades, the population of this fine game bird has steadily dwindled. In an effort to stabilize black duck populations, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and individual states within the Atlantic flyway have agreed to shorten hunting seasons and reduce bag limits to reduce the harvest of black ducks in the flyway by 25 percent.

"In the past 30 years, the population of black ducks in the United States and Canada has dropped from five million to less than two million birds," said Grady Barnes, section manager for research and regulations for the division of wildlife management of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission. "This represents a steady population decline of about 1.5 percent per year. Population fluctuations are normal, but this steady erosion of a waterfowl population is certainly cause for alarm."

The factors which are affecting black duck populations are complex and not fully understood. However, wildlife biologists feel that acid rain, hybridization of black ducks with mallards and heavy hunting pressure are all playing a part in the decline of the black duck.

"Acid rain is hurting black ducks by lowering the quality and productivity of their nesting and breeding habitat," Barnes said. "Most black ducks nest in the forests of eastern Canada and England, and this region has been hit hard by acid rain. Black ducks — both young and adults — feed heavily on aquatic insects and other invertebrates in these northern marshes, and acid rain has killed much of this aquatic life. Since the overall productivity of these marshes is lower because of acid rain, the region just can't support the numbers of black ducks that it did in the past."

The mallard and the black duck are closely related, and are even members of the same family. However, the birds differ in habits and ranges. The mallard is originally a prairie bird while the balck duck inhabits coastal salt marshes and swamps in eastern forests. Changes in land use have introduced mallards into areas which were formerly black duck range, and the two species readily hybridized. Unlike most hybrids, the offspring from a black duck-mallard cross are fertile and continue to breed. In some areas where black ducks and mallards are found together, up to 10 percent of the birds are hybrids.

"Traditionally, the eastern forests always formed a barrier between mallards and black ducks," Barnes said. "As large blocks of forest were cleared for agriculture and other uses, mallards moved into these areas and encroachedon the black ducks' range. The release of domesticated, pen-raised mallards compounded the problem. These birds readily hybridize with the black duck, and the hybrid offspring lose the wild traits associated with the black duck. The black duck also has much more specific habitat needs than the more adaptable mallard. In areas where the two are found together, mallard and hybrid populations generally grow and black duck populations decline. With this declining population of black ducks and the increased hybridization with mallards, we fear that the black duck could be 'genetically swamped.'

"Eventually, the black duck could even disappear as a species if the situation continues."

A final factor in the decline of the black duck is hunting pressure. The black duck is the leading bird in the waterfowl harvest of most northeastern states, and usually ranks fourth or fifth in North Carolina with and average of 10,000 birds taken annually. A U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service study conducted from 1976 to 1980 showed that hunting mortality was high for young black ducks. Shorter season in North Carolina will also help protect small resident populations of black ducks which breed and winter in coastal salt marshes from New Bern north through Currituck Sound.

"We hope that reducing the harvest of black ducks by 25 percent with the Atlantic Flyway will halt their continued decline," Barnes said. "Problems with hybridization and acid rain will continue, but hunting is the only factor over which we have control. If the decline continues at its currect rate, further cutbacks in hunting seasons and bag limits may have to be made in the future."

Special Canvasback Season — A special canvasback season, the first in many years in coastal North Carolina, will open Tuesday morning. This special season will be open in a designated area with a permit required for all hunters who participate. The bag limit is four a day not to include more than one female. Special permits are available in Greenville through the Waterfowler's Den & Gift Shoppe and in Washington at the True Value Hardware Store.

SPORT LINE

To The Sports Editor:

I am angry. I hurt for the players, coaches, and staff of the 1983 East Carolina University Football team. Without doubt the finest assemblage to ever wear the purple and gold, their accomplishments were unrewarded during the recent bowl games. At one time, before television began to wield its powerful financial influence, bowl bids were extended based on won-lost records and strength of schedule, among other criteria. When teams with 6-5 records, such as Notre Dame and Mississippi, or those in season ending slumps such as North Carolina and Kentucky, are invited to participate in post-season competition, it makes a sham and mockery of the bowl selection process.

East Carolina may lack the media attention and name recognition of an Alabama or Texas, but would have been a worthy participant in any bowl game because of its exciting, aggressive style of play and loyal fans anxious to show support on the road. The media, especially television, exerts too much power today in events ranging from politics and government to athletics and entertainment. When a talented group of winning young athletes is ignored because of television's obsession with high ratings and even higher advertising revenues, it places college football on a par with the professional game, removing some of the lustre and excitement from amateur athletics.

With hard work and a dedication to excellence, East Carolina will soon be among college football's elite. The groundwork has been laid, as evidenced by being the ONLY team from this state to finish the season nationally ranked. With many talented athletes returning in 1984, it will be impossible to overlook this deserving program once more. A very proud voice cries out from the East. In the not too distant future, the entire nation will know what so many others already do..."It's great to be a Pirate!" and it's getting even better.

Q. I received a small Norfolk Island pine as a Christmas gift. Do these plants grow rapidly? I'd like to use it as a Christmas tree in the future. (R.J., Durham)

A. The Norfolk Island pine is a slow-growing house plant. Under average home conditions, it typically grows three to six inches a year.

Q. I want to install a bird feeder in my garden. If I start feeding the birds now, will I have to continue putting out feed all winter? (L.D., Rockwell)

A. Yes. You need to continue once the birds begin depending on an extra source of feed. A feeder will also draw other birds into the area. There may not be enough food in the area for these additional birds if you discontinue.

Q. I read about a strawberry grower whose plants produced berries in the fall because he set out his plants in August instead of in the spring because of bad weather. I wouldn't mind having fresh strawberries in the fall. Is it advisable to do this? (M.S., Raleigh)

A. The flowers and fruit the grower had on his plants this fall were initiated last fall in the strawberry nursery. Normally, the dormant one-year-old plants received from nurseries are transplanted in the spring and allowed to grow and develop one full season before being allowed to bloom. Because the yield of berries from these nursery initiated flowers is usually less than two ounces per plant, most strawberry growers forget this small initial crop and concentrate their efforts on growing large healthy plants which will produce anywhere from three-fourths of a pound to one pound of berries the following spring. The grower you read about simply delayed the appearance of the nursery initiated flowers by holding his plants in cold storage all spring and summer. With this late planting, I'm afraid he can expect one-half the normal crop in the spring. Allowing these nursery flowers to fruit at this time of year will further delay the growth of foliage and roots before the winter months.

Tips On Creating Space At Home

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Sooner or later, it happens to almost everyone. The living space that once was more than adequate is suddenly too small.

In the 19th century, Americans could simply light out for the frontier when space got tight at home. But eventually there was no more frontier. Then came the era when moving to the suburbs was a popular choice.

Today, many Americans have found that their options have suddenly shrunk as building and land costs have risen and higher interest rates have made mortgages a sometime thing.

So when a new baby comes or a parent moves in or a new business or hobby is begun, some families find they must stay put and rearrange the home they have to pack more living inside the same four walls.

The problem has led to a spate of articles and books on domestic space planning. One of the books on the subject is Virginia Carry's "Double Duty Decorating." This clearly-written volume offers some excellent suggestions on how to get more mileage out of the rooms you already have. A number of the ideas are illustrated with drawings by Robert Penny.

In an interview, Mrs. Carry, a former decorating editor and a writer, said she used her own experience in revamping a New York City apartment to accommodate two children and to provide work-at-home space for herself and her husband.

She confided her first efforts were not very successful. After the first baby was born, she converted the family's spacious kitchen into a kind of room for all seasons. In addition to cooking and dining, the kitchen was used as the laundry, play area and television watching spot. In addition, a convertible sofa turned one end of the room into an occasional guest room, and Mrs. Carry's home office was also located in the kitchen.

"It just didn't work," she said. "Even though we have a large three-bedroom apartment, everyone was constantly in the kitchen, and I couldn't get any work done." The experience led her to formulate her first rule for double duty decorating: limit proposed activities in a room to a few.

After her second baby was born, she developed a more successful scheme that led to her recently-published book.

This time, she relocated some activities to rooms that were under-utilized. The dining room became her home-office. One end of the room was fitted with shelves and sequestered behind a newly-built partial wall. The laundry was moved to a large closet in one of the children's bedrooms and the kitchen remained the family's cooking, dining and social center.

Guests are no longer expected to bunk on the convertible sofa. Instead, they are accommodated in one of the children's rooms. The girl moves in with her brother and shares his bunk beds while guests are in residence.

Looking around for under-used space to find a place for her husband's desk and bookshelves, Mrs. Carry settled on the foyer which was revamped and a former door eliminated.

Other ideas she has used to gain more functional rooms in the apartment include the addition of a chaise in the master bedroom. "It provides a comfortable place other than the bed to lie down and watch television or read," she said.

The Carrys also have pressed a large closet into service to store oversized paraphernalia such as bicycles. She says, too, that every household needs a secret space which can hold messy or bulky items out of view for a while.

The Carry household has several such places. Her favorite is the space beneath the high-skirted beds in the master bedroom and in her daughter's room.

Under the four poster in her own bedroom go cardboard boxes which contain out-of-season clothing, toys that are not being used, slipcovers and linens too good to throw away but not currently needed.

She advises readers to consider the space beneath their beds for extra storage space. In order to conceal boxes, plan on using a bedskirt to the floor. Other possibilities include skirted tables which can be file cabinets and folding screens which can go in front of items stored in one corner of a room. A more permanent storage area can be created by building a low platform in a room. The platform top can be lifted to provide shallow storage space for items such as books and suitcases.

Mrs. Carry noted, however, that any storage spot or other idea for using space more efficiently that requires a great deal of effort to get to probably will not be used.

"If you have to move a coffee table and four chairs to open a sofa which you then have to make up into a bed, most people would probably simply roll up in a blanket on the couch and go to sleep," she said.

("Double Duty Decorating" is published by Scribner's.)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I have to redo some picture frames and want to put on gold leaf instead of using gold enamel. How is the gold leaf attached to the frame?

A. — With a special kind of contact cement. You can purchase it where you buy the gold leaf, which is sold mainly in art supply stores.

Q. — The last time I cut a piece of glass for a broken window pane, the edge where I made the cut was very rough. I have a similar job to do. How can a rough edge, if it happens again, be smoothed? I am afraid a regular file will not do it right.

A. — Use what is called wet-dry sandpaper. Put a little oil along the rough edge, then sand it carefully. Don't apply too much pressure.

Q. — I have read that putting a few drops of vanilla extract into a gallon of paint will help eliminate the bad odor from the turpentine. Is this true?

A. — It won't eliminate the odor. It will merely disguise it and make it more agreeable to smell. Nothing will get rid of the odor of turpentine while paint is drying better than plenty of ventilation. It is also safer.

Q. — How do you get to the faucet spindle over a bathtub, the kind that is recessed into the wall? I know how to change a washer, but I can't figure out how to reach the nut inside the wall.

A. — Tell your problem to a hardware or plumbing supply dealer and ask him to sell you a special wrench that will fit into the recess and turn the nut. After that, the procedure is the same as with a regular faucet.

Q. — To repair the metal flashing on a roof, I intend to cover the hole with a piece of the same kind of metal. Does the new piece have to be nailed down?

A. — No. Make the patch large enough to overlap the hole several inches, then keep it in place with a generous amount of roofing cement.

Q. — A few years ago I refinished a piece of furniture after first removing the old finish with a commercial varnish remover. The job came out all right, but removing the old finish was a messy job. I now have a similar refinishing task, but this time I would like to find some other way of getting off the old finish. It has been suggested to me that this can be done with a solution of lye, vinegar and water. Can you tell me which are the correct proportions for the mixture and how I should go about it?

A. — Because lye is a dangerous chemical for anybody but a professional to use, I never recommend it. Not only can it cause injury to the user, it also can be damaging to certain kinds of wood, turning them black. When it is used, it is mixed with water, but the mixing must be done a certain way in a certain kind of container. The vinegar is not part of the solution, but is used as a rinse after the job is completed. Removing the old finish on furniture is always a messy job when there are many coats of finish to be taken off, which usually is the case. Nevertheless, it is a lot better than risking injury and a bad result with a lye solution.

Q. — I am going to install hardboard on a yard building. How long should the nails be? Or, to put it another way, how far should the nails penetrate into the framing members?

A. — The nails should go at least one inch into the framework. Be sure you take into account any other material you are using in addition to the hardboard, which might be building paper, building paper and sheathing or just sheathing.

Q. — Can you tell me something about alkyd paint? I intend to use some shortly. Is water the proper solvent for it?

A. — Alkyd paint is made from a synthetic resin called alkyd. It dries very hard and is extra durable. Some types require overnight drying, some can be given a second coat in from 4 to 6 hours. Water is the solvent for latex paint, not alkyd. The alkyd's solvent is turpentine or mineral spirits.

Q. — The toilet tank in our downstairs bathroom sweats constantly and leaves a puddle on the floor. Is there some way to correct this?

A. — This is one of the most frequently asked questions. The sweating is condensation caused when high humidity in the house settles on the cold surface of the tank. There are several ways to correct this problem. One is to find a way to get the humid air out of the house, such as via an exhaust fan or wall vents to the outside or even occasionally opening a window. Another is to place a kind of foam insulation on the inside walls of the tank. A kit to do this is sold in some specialty stores or plumbing supply houses. The kit contains the foam and the proper adhesive. Since the tank must be dry to accomplish this, follow the instructions on drying the tank and shutting off the water to it. The best solution, but the most expensive, is to hire a plumber. He will install a mixing valve so that lukewarm rather than cold water will be in the tank. The tank then will not be cold and there will not be any condensation.

Rugged Beauty in Dramatic Contemporary

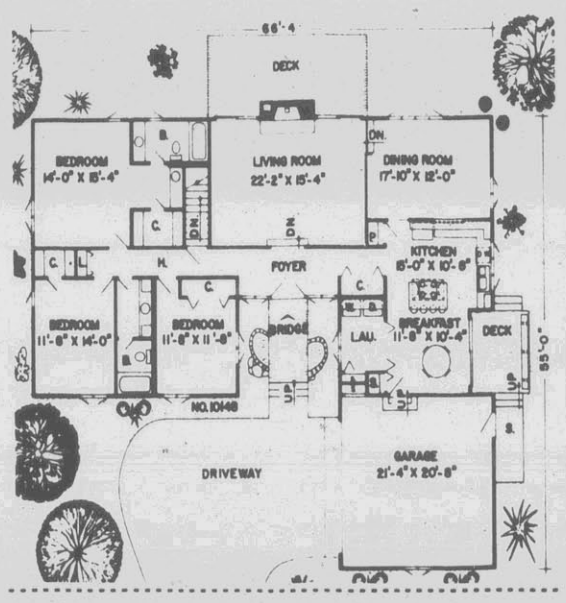

By Jerry Bishop

Sliding glass doors, decks and a unique redwood bridge contribute to the rugged beauty of the Cheyenne, a three bedroom contemporary design. In slightly over 2,000 square feet of living space, the plan blends three bedrooms, including a lavish master bedroom, with formal and informal living areas and gears itself for enjoyment of the outdoors.

A novel redwood bridge introduces the home and leads, through double doors, to the foyer. Ahead, the sunken living and devotes a generous amount of space to it. The dining room at right, spanning nearly 18 ft., will satisfy any formal entertaining needs.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

While the router and some other power tools are used in place of the wood chisel quite often these days, the chisel remains one of the most commonly used of all hand tools. There are innumerable occasions when a wood chisel and only a wood chisel will do the job at hand.

A wood chisel, by the way, is called that because it is used on wood, not because it is made of wood. The ordinary wood chisel is made of steel, usually but not necessarily with a wooden or plastic handle. Those handles are never struck with a hammer. If the job requires more force than your hands can supply, a mallet or something with a soft face should be used.

There are some wood chisels made from one piece of forged steel which are designed for heavy-duty work and can be struck with a ball peen hammer or a light sledge. When working on wood, however, the average do-it-yourselfer will have no need for anything but a regular wood chisel that has a wooden ob plastic handle.

There are many variations of wood chisels. The most common are the tang socket chisels. The tang chisel is for use with the hands and has part of the thin end going into the handle. With the socket chisel, which is hit with a mallet, the handle fits into the open end of the chisel.

To help remember which is which, the tang chisel has a pointed end, the socket chisel has an opening at the end. Three or four wood chisels are sufficient for the kind of work the average person will do in his or her home workshop. A good set would be four chisels ranging from a quarter-of-an-inch to one inch.

It has always been said a sharp tool is safer than a dull one. This is never more important than in the case of a chisel. When one of your chisels gets even the tiniest bit dull, sharpen it or get it sharpened. You can make it even safer by keeping both hands behind the work whenever you are using it, which means you should never cut in your own direction.

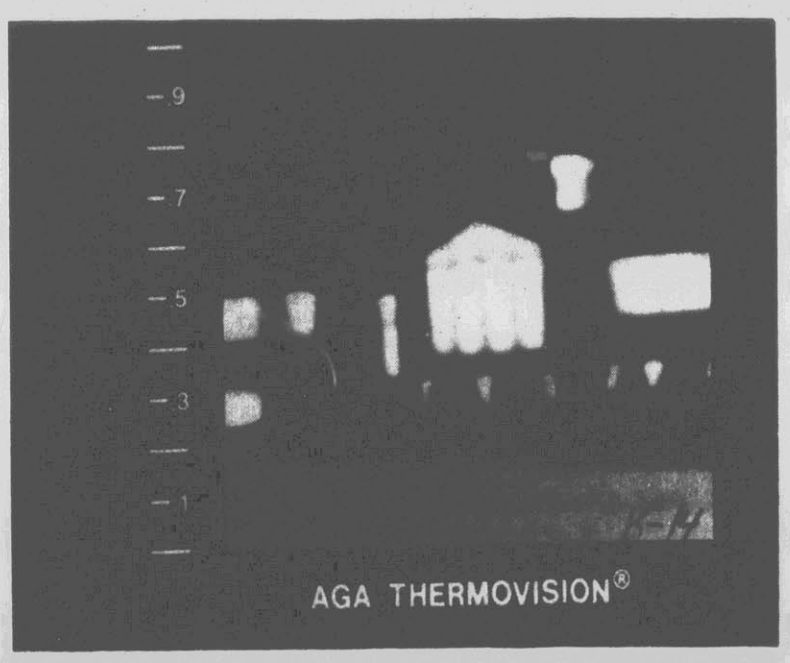

Always cut with the grain and fasten the work whenever possible. The beveled side of the chisel should always be face up when cutting. How can you tell when to manipulate the chisel with your hands or hit it with a mallet? You'll be able to determine it quickly once you have used a chisel a few times, but the easiest way when you first start using one is to follow the general advice that you can use your hands when cutting softwood, but you need a mallet with hardwood.

Chisels used for cutting metal are generally known as cold chisels. The kind you usually see and use is a flat chisel. It is an all-purpose tool and can be used for a variety of tasks. When you have to cut a rivet or split a nut, the cold chisel is the weapon for it, but it also can be employed for cutting or breaking almost anything made of metal. With most jobs of this nature, but especially when chipping, wear safety goggles.

There are many other metal-cutting chisels of different shapes. Each serves a specific purpose. Among these are chisels with wide blades, used most often by electricians and mechanics who work on floors. These and nearly all cold chisels are hit with a hammer, but don't swing away too freely. Watch what you are doing, and do the cutting a little at a time. No matter what kind of job you contemplate that requires a chisel, remember you can get one of the specialty chisels to make your task easier.

Name Change Affecting Logo

BURLINGTON (AP) — The American Telephone and Telegraph breakup may be confusing to customers, but it's also a little baffling to employees of Western Electric.

AT&T gave up ownership of 22 local Bell System companies Jan. 1, and those companies will continue providing local telephone service under the old names. But the parent companies, like Western Electric, have selected new names. So Piedmont residents who are familiar with Western Electric will be seeing a change.

Western Electric will become AT&T Technologies Inc.

That change has meant taking the bell symbol off every piece of stationery, door, car and other company property seen by the public by Dec. 31.

But Tom Booth, Western Electric's public affairs and media relations specialists, says there's even more to it than that.

Booth says employees even had to have the bell punched out of their their identification cards.

"It was like saying goodbye to an old friend," Booth said. "It will take a while to get used to because we've been called Western Electric for so long."

Booth said Western Electric officials didn't know until mid-December what the new name would be.

"For a while, we didn't know if the name was going to be AT&T-Western Electric, vice-versa, or what," Booth said.

Tar Heel Wins Sweepstakes

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A Benson, N.C., woman received a $10,000 check Friday from Caesar's Hotel and Casino as the winner of a hotel sweepstakes.

Laura H. Lee, 51, said she had gone to Atlantic City for the past three years to celebrate her birthday, and won the Slot Fever Sweepstakes drawing last month after her name was picked from more than 30,000 entries.

She said when she got the notice she had won, she thought it was a joke by some friends.

Precious Metals Prices Fall In Active Trading

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Precious metals prices fell sharply in heavy trading Friday on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

Silver and gold both were falling early in the session when the Mexican government announced that it intended to increase silver production by 35 percent next year, said Jack Boyd, vice president for commodity research in New York with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

Although the increase would have a small impact on the market, "psychologically, it was sufficient" to prompt a sharp selloff and silver fell by the 50-cent limit, Boyd said.

In the background, said Boyd, was the dramatic and persistent strength of the U.S. dollar against major foreign currencies, which tends to draw investment dollars away from metals and into dollar-denominated vehicles.

Gold settled $7.60 to $8.80 low-er with the contract for delivery in January at $367.90 and silver settled 50 cents lower in all delivery months with Januabi at $8.04 a troy ounce.

Livestock prices fell sharply after making early gains and pork bellies were higher on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Early buying was said to be a continuation of a sharp rally on Thursday. Volume was heavy but the buying fell off later in the session.

Some of the selling came as traders liquidated their positions to take profits, sources said. Commercial concerns, those that deal in animals and meat products, were among the sellers when prices reached their highs in the February contract, said John Ginzel, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

Hog prices were under pres-sure amid indications that meat packers would be in the market for fewer animals next week, sources said.

Pork bellies advanced as the supply will be reduced if the hog slaughter declines, they added.

Cattle settled .30 cent to .88 cent lower with February at 67.95 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .20 cent to 1.33 cents lower with January at 68.87 cents a pound; live hogs were .28 cent to 1.22 cents low-er with February at 52.12 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were .10 cent lower to 1.32 cents higher with February at 64.27 cents a pound.

Soybean futures prices were sharply lower, and corn and wheat were mixed at the close of trading Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Soybeans declined amid anti-cipation that exports will fall short of the 810 million bushels that the Agriculture Department has projected, said Leslie Herren, a grain analyst in New York with Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

Many analysts believe that the strength of the U.S. dollar against major foreign currencies has curtailed interest among foreign buyers.

Wheat and corn were fairly steady despite the selling influence from the soybean pit.

Wheat settled $1\frac{1}{4}$ cents lower to $\frac{1}{4}$ cent higher with the contract for delivery in March at $3.58\frac{3}{4}$ a bushel; corn was $2\frac{3}{4}$ cents lower to 3 cents higher with the contract for delivery in March at $3.30\frac{1}{2}$ a bushel; oats were $2\frac{1}{4}$ cents to $2\frac{3}{4}$ cents lower with March at $1.81\frac{1}{4}$ a bushel; and soybeans were $\frac{1}{2}$ cent to $25\frac{1}{4}$ cents lower with January at $7.64\frac{1}{2}$ a bushel.

Mike Paulenoff, a tropical products analyst in New York with Smith Barney, Harris Up-ham and Co., said there were no new developments affecting cocoa to influence prices and it appeared that profit taking by speculators jarred the market.

As the prices declined, preset orders to sell were triggered and that gave further steam to the downward move, he said.

Paulenoff noted that although prices retreated about $300 a ton this week, they had advanced about $800 a ton in the previous eight weeks and the upward trend appears to be intact.

Orange juice prices advanced on the Cotton Exchange in New York amid continued uncertainty about the amount of damage sustained during the recent freeze in Florida.

Paulenoff noted that two to three weeks remain in the freeze season and "speculators wouldn't want to be on the short side of it."

Orange juice settled 2.25 cents to 5 cents higher with the contract for delivery in January at 143.25 cents a pound; cocoa settled $88 to $115 lower with January at $2,546 a metric ton, which is 2,204.6 pounds.

Texaco's Bid Shows Shift In Oil Industry

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco's stunning $10 billion bid to swallow Getty Oil Co. speaks billions about the profound changes under way in the oil business.

Texaco's takeover offer — by far the largest in history — is dramatic evidence that even the biggest and most far-flung American oil companies consider it more attractive to buy oil reserves on Wall Street than to drill for them.

And Getty's willingness to be gobbled up demonstrates the intense pressure felt in the boardrooms of oil companies influenced by members of founding families.

It was the maneuvering of Gordon Getty, sole trustee of the Sarah C. Getty Trust and the youngest surviving son of J. Paul Getty, that led to Texaco's takeover bid. Getty management, led by chairman Sidney Petersen, had sought to retain control.

At Superior Oil Co., Howard Keck, son of the company's founder and until recently one of its top executives, is inviting a takeover despite the opposition of Superior management. Superior is one of the most successful U.S. oil producers.

To help explain this tumult in the oil patch, experts point to geology: Many oil companies simply are not finding new oil fields as fast as they drain existing ones.

Texaco, for example, saw its worldwide oil reserves plunge 59 percent between 1978 and 1982. If its deal with Getty is completed, it will double its reserves in one stroke, as well as expand its total assets by 37 percent. Using the commonly accepted measure of annual sales, Texaco would remain the nation's third-largest oil concern, behind industry leader Exxon Corp. and No. 2 Mobil Corp.

The usually conservative, slow-moving Texaco burst into the Getty power struggle last week, first with a deal to buy just the 11.8 percent of Getty's stock held by the J. Paul Getty Museum for nearly $1.2 billion. Within hours, it had won approval from Getty directors on a bid for 100 percent of the company's stock. Texaco reportedly offered $125 apiece for Getty's 79.1 million shares, or $10 billion.

The Sarah C.Getty trust, named for J. Paul Getty's mother, holds the largest block of Getty Oil stock — 40.2 percent. Forty-eight percent of the stock is publicly held.

Pennzoil Co., a smaller oil company that also is looking to beef up its oil reserves, had won a deal to share control of Getty with Gordon Getty in a deal valued at about $5.2 billion. The ink was hardly dry on that agreement when Texaco acted.

For now, Getty has agreed to be taken under Texaco's wing, but analysts note the deal may face court challenges as well as a government antitrust review.

Although the timing probably was a coincidence, Texaco was among a group of oil companies that learned just one month ago their nearly $1 billion drilling project off the north coast of Alaska was a bust.

Buying Spree Keeps Going

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumers began the new year in a buying mood, as a spending spree that lifted the economy out of recession more than a year ago shows no signs of letting up.

Some measures of consumer confidence climbed to all-time highs this past week while retailers and automakers reported the strongest sales in years and the volume of stock market trading shattered records.

Economists said consumers' willingness to spend has been spurred by rising employment and moderation in inflation.

Consumer prices have been held to the lowest level in more than a decade and unemployment continues to fall. The government said Friday that the 1983 drop in the civilian unemployment rate, to 8.2 percent in December from 10.7 percent a year earlier, was the best labor market recovery from a recession since 1951.

And with the U.S. economy purring and inflation still under control, the dollar soared to new highs.

The extended buying binge has surprised analysts, who had been predicting the consumer-led economic expansion would be running out of steam by now.

"It looks like consumers are taking on a new burst of enthusiasm," said Edward Yardeni, chief economist at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., a New York securities firm.

Major retailers reported double-digit sales gains in December, and analysts said receipts did not falter after Christmas.

Sears, Roebuck and Co., the nation's largest retailer, said sales last month topped $3 billion for the first time ever, and that the 17.5 percent sales gain in December from a year earlier was the strongest showing since 1977.

U.S. automakers ended 1983 with a surge in sales, to snap the industry's longest slump since the Depression of the 1930s. The 6.8 million cars sold last year was up 17.2 percent from a year ago and the highest since the 8.2 million models sold in 1979.

The Commerce Department predicted 87 percent of the nation's manufacturing industries would increase shipments of products this year, compared with the 72 percent that improved in 1983 and the mere 31 percent in 1982.

"It's a very self-sustaining well balanced recovery," Yardeni said. "Every indicator suggests it's all systems go, full throttle ahead."

With the outlook considerably brighter than it was a year ago, consumers now have more money to spend and are more willing to spend it.

Sindlinger & Co. Inc., a private firm that has been sampling consumer sentiment for 29 years, said that in the week ended last Wednesday, it recorded its highest reading of overall consumer confidence since 1973. And it reported a record number of consumers said their current income was higher than it was six months earlier.

The consulting firm also said expectations of wage increases are at the highest level since May 1973, with 45.9 percent of those questioned saying they expected an increase in pay in the next six months and only 12.4 expecting lower earnings.

But the growth in consumer confidence also brought a warning from Albert Sindlinger, who founded and heads the Media, Pa., consulting firm.

"I don't like the belligerence we're getting on expected wages," Sindlinger said. "It's the first time I've been concerned about a rise in confidence."

Sindlinger said the high expectations of consumers could collide with the Federal Reserve Board's anti-inflation policies of limiting the growth of funds available for spending.

"I'm worried that this heavy rise in confidence will top out in an interest rate rise," said Sindlinger.

In other business and economic developments this past week:

—Publisher Rupert Murdoch said he may launch a proxy fight to gain control of Warner Communications Inc. Earlier in the week he asked the Federal Communications Commission to block a deal that would give Chris-Craft Industries Inc. control of 19 percent of Warner's voting stock.

Tables By The Water

PICNIC TABLES . . . are located at several points in Goose Creek State Park. The ones here, under oak and pine trees, are at the waterfront site along Goose Creek used for swimming in the summer months.

Goose Creek State Park, An Ideal Site For Outdoor Winter Ventures

SMALL GRASSES . . . with their colorful seed clusters are one of many enyoyable discoveries for young and old alike.

In many respects it is an eastern North Carolina Garden of Eden. With the exception of a winding paved road into the park, several leaf-strewn walking trails, a few parking lots, discreetly placed water fountains, a scattering of rustic picnic tables, and small toilets — the woods and waterways of Beaufort County's Goose Creek State Park are an untouched wilderness.

Here, nature is permitted to follow its own cycle. Fallen limbs and trees are allowed to decay. Small trees and native shrubs are canopied by yellow jasmine vines, green-leafed in winter, fragrant with brilliant yellow blossoms in April. Strong woody vines — wild grape, coiling rattan, and tough slender swamp and green briars, entangle themselves around trees in their skyward growth. Nature's acrobats, these vines reach across open spaces where delicate tendrils grasp a limb for new directions in exploration.

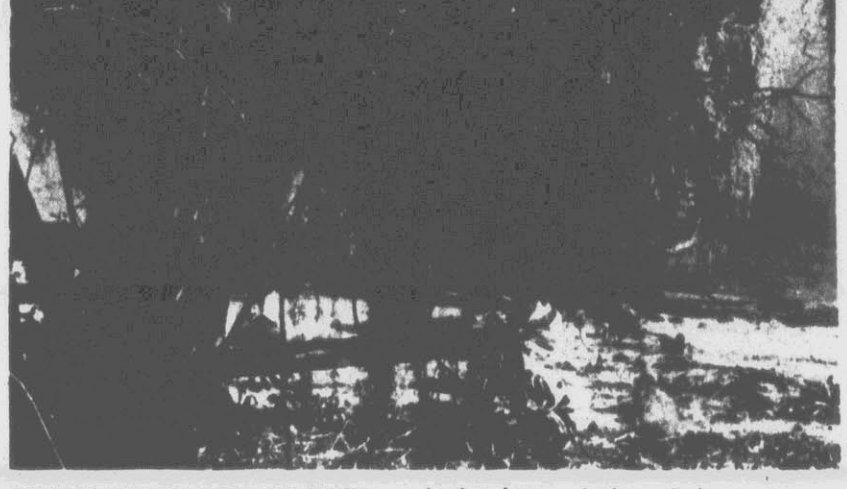

Spanish moss, also known as vegetable horsehair, is the primary attraction at Goose Creek State Park. The moss is prevalent throughout the south, and in this park it thrives in massive concentrations. The long growths of the silvery-grey plant cascades like lacy scarves from tree branches at ground level on up to the higher reaches of pine, black gum, myrtle and live oak trees.

Winter months are ideal for seeing Goose Creek Spanish moss in its full splendor. Lovely at any time of year, in winter, when leaves have fallen from hardwood trees, sunlight filters through the trees, highlighting the draperies of moss in light and dark areas. It is a wonderfully quiet, mysterious world.

All trails eventually lead to the shores of wide, placid Goose Creek, where natural arcades along the Live Oak Trail frame cypress knees and the heart of dead trees in the water to give an illusion of water-enclosed sculpture gardens. Dried leaves of tall grasses along the water's edge rustle taffeta music in response to the slightest breeze. A random breeze also stirs the veils of Spanish moss into airy dances.

James Sessoms, a staff member at the park, notes, "Winter is a good time to visit the park for those who wish to see swans, egrets and herons as well as winter song birds. In the swamp area, handrails have now been installed on the ramps over the watery area for the convenience of visitors." He adds that "a number of special events are being planned for the spring and summer, but many people find visiting the park at this time of year a pleasure."

Any reasonably warm winter day is an opportune time to visit Goose Creek Park. It is an especially intriguing place for children interested in nature. Winter visits have the advantage of not having to be concerned about ticks or mosquitoes. Even on relatively chilly days, the density of the woods provides a sheltering warmth, a feeling of welcome.

MYRTLE, SPANISH MOSS, AND VINES . . . are some of nature's abundant beauties to be enjoyed in the park. A large variety of hardwood trees, shrubs, and vines — grape, rattan, briar — grow in profusion throughout the park area.

Goose Creek State Park in Beaufort County, about 40 miles from Greenville, offers many winter pleasures.

Accent On Living

MUSIC MAKERS . . . Beds of tall water grasses, dried and gold in winter months, rustle with delicate music any time the cold-crisped leaves are touched by passing gusts of breezes.

CYPRESS KNEES . . . in shallow shore water along the shoreline look very much like a couple engaged in watery meditation. A sparkle of sun is reflected on the water through a thick drapery of Spanish moss.

FACILITIES AVAILABLE IN THE WINTER MONTHS

During winter months, Goose Creek Park is open daily from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Rest rooms and water fountains are closed throughout the park at this time of year; however, these facilities are available at the Visitors Center just as you enter the park. Here too, visitors can pick up maps showing the various trails and points of interest in the park. Picnicking is allowed, with visitors asked to clean up and deposit trash in cans provided. Camping in the rough is permitted at camp sites, with registration at the office required. For more information, call 923-2191.

HOW TO GET THERE

Wedding Vows Solemnized Saturday

MRS. JESSE HAROLD HAWKINS III

SUFFOLK, Va. — Diane Lynn Bridger and Jesse Harold Hawkins III were married Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the First Baptist Church here by Dr. Gary B. Thompson in a double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Alton Bridger of Suffolk, Va. and Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Harold Hawkins Jr. of Route 2, Bath.

Dr. E. Robert Irwin presented organ music and the Rev. David Chambliss was soloist.

Dana Harris of Virginia Beach, Va. was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Donna Kolts and Jennifer Weaver of Chesapeake, Va., Jane and Jean Sauve of Greenville, N.C.

She carried an arm bouquet ofth rubium lilies, sweetheart roses and white fuji pom pons. The bridesmaids were dressed identically and carried similar flowers.

The flower girl wore a gown styled with a white lace bodice with a ruffle, high neckline of lace, Juliet sleeves of lace and a cummerbund. The full skirt was accented with a ruffle. She carried a single rubium lily with burgundy and white streamers.

The couple will be living in Greenville after a wedding trip to Central and Southern Florida.

Cranberries Turn Into Turnovers

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

At this time of year a cook's fancy may turn to using a holiday food, still on hand, in a new way. That's what we did with some leftover cranberry orange relish.

That relish — invented many years ago by a New York City home economist — has become a classic American offering at Christmas time, and it has been used in many ways. But interestingly enough, we were unable to find a recipe using it as a filling for baked pastry turnovers. A search through our large collection of leaflets and booklets plus several books on cranberry cooking and lore revealed no turnover recipes in which even plain cranberries appeared.

The next step, naturally, was to develop a turnover recipe in my own kitchen. Here it is for your consideration.

CRANBERRY ORANGE RELISH TURNOVERS

¼-pound stick butter (½ cup), soft
3-ounce package cream cheese, soft
1 cup unbleached all-purpose flour
Cranberry Orange Relish, well drained (see Note)
Milk

In a medium bowl with a wooden spoon beat together the butter and cream cheese until blended. Gradually stir in the flour until blended. Turn out onto a sheet of saran and shape into about a 4-inch square; wrap tightly; chill until firm enough to handle.

On a prepared pastry cloth with a prepared stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll dough so it is just a little larger than a 12-inch square. Trim edges; save the trimmings to make an extra turnover. Cut the 12-inch square into nine 4-inch squares.

Drop about a tablespoon of the Cranberry Orange Relish off center on each square. Fold each over to make a triangle; press edges with fork tines to seal well. Prick each top with the fork in 4 equidistant places. Place, well apart, on an ungreased cookie sheet; brush tops with a little milk.

Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until golden brown — 15 minutes. Remove with a wide spatula. Serve hot or warm.

Makes 10.

Note: In my kitchen our original Cranberry Orange Relish called for 1 unpeeled, seedless medium orange (cut into 8 wedges); 1 unpeeled, cored, medium McIntosh apple (cut into 8 wedges); a 12-ounce bag (3 cups) cranberries and 1 to 1½ cups sugar.

To use our method: in a food processor with the metal blade process half the orange wedges until finely chopped; add half the apple wedges and process until the apple is fairly fine. Empty the mixture into a container. With the metal blade, chop half the cranberries until fine; add to the orange-apple mixture with half the sugar and stir well. Repeat with the second batch of orange, apple, cranberries and sugar. Before using, tightly cover, and refrigerate overnight.

To use your own leftover Cranberry Orange Relish or some made by our recipe as a filling for the Turnovers, drain enough to make 2-3rds cup and stir in 2 teaspoons all-purpose flour.

By Erma Bombeck

Every decade, a maternal messiah emerges to lead parents out of the wilderness of child-raising.

They are called authorities in parental techniques.

Does your child have a bedroom that will have to be cleaned before you can have it condemned? There is a way.

Did the schedule of their chores burn up when the aquarium caught fire? There is a way.

Do baby-sitters come only when combat pay and hospitalization benefits are offered? There is a way.

Can you set a full table without visiting their room first? There is a way.

When you ask them to drop their dirty clothes off in the kitchen, do they ask, "Where is it?" There is a way.

The experts call their solution "positive reinforcement," and it's been arouud for a long time. Children understand how it works better than adults do.

It has never worked for me.

Years ago, after I had tried kindness, compassion, anger and threats to drown their puppy, I turned to "positive reinforcement." A psychologist, whom I admired, said parents made too much of things and reacted too strongly. All you had to do was lay out a situation, then praise the child for it. If a child, for example, left a book on the floor, all I had to say was, "There's a book on the floor," and he would arrive at the decision of what should be done with it.

To test the theory, I put a book on the floor and said to the first child to arrive, "There's a book on the floor." He said, "I know, I nearly broke my neck tripping over it. Better pick it up," and disappeared. The second one came by and when I told him of the book said, "You're real quick today."

I got so disgusted I never tried it with the third one. The other day, after I viewed his bedroom, I thought I should give him the chance to redeem "positive reinforcement" from my doubts.

So when he asked me to go to a movie with him I said, "I'd love to go with you, but I have to do all the work you didn't do today."

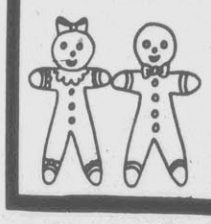

There was genuine concern written all over his face. "How much more do you have to do?" he asked.

"There's your dirty clothes all over the floor, your dirty dishes under your bed to take out, your bed to make, your trash to be carried out, your wet towels to take to the laundry room and your floor to be vacuumed."

He put his arm around me. "Why don't you just get up earlier tomorrow morning and do it?"

If there's a way . . . I've lost mine.

1983 Food Facts Told

If you were a member of an average family of four in 1983, you all consumed 2½ tons of food says Rachel Kinlaw, extension foods and nutrition specialist, N.C. State University.

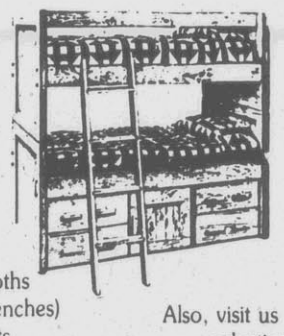

This includes 629 pounds of red meat; 260 pounds of poultry; 1,233 pounds of dairy products; 51 pounds of seafood; 88 dozen eggs; 336 pounds of fresh fruits; 13 pounds of frozen fruits; 400 pounds of fresh vegetables; and 598 pounds of flour and other cereal products.

One U.S. farm family feeds 78 people — 52 in this country and 26 abroad. Total agricultural production is more than twice the levels of 1930 even thought the agriculture resource base has not changed much.

Because of farmers' productivity, food costs 16.6 percent of our disposable income today, compared with 17 percent just five years ago and 23 percent in 1951.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Because this is the season when pumpkin reigns, you may be interested in a recipe for a Dark and Spicy Pumpkin Cake.

The recipe comes from Carol Kroll, who works as a full-time law-school librarian. Her participation in her community's good works brings her lots of appreciation — and so does the home baking she shares with her friends and neighbors.

One of Mrs. Kroll's daughters, who is particularly fond of her mother's Dark and Spicy Pumpkin Cake, attends college away from home. Every once in a while her mother mails her one of the cakes, and it travels well.

I thought this might interest you because a reader once wrote me she had made 50 of my own Pumpkin Walnut Cakes and had sent them all over the United States as holiday gifts. Maybe Mrs. Kroll's Dark and Spicy Pumpkin Cake will have the same adventurous fate.

PUMPKIN SPICE BUNDT CAKE

3½ cups unbleached all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
3 teaspoons baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground allspice
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
½ teaspoon ground cloves
4 large eggs
2 cups sugar
1 cup safflower oil
1-pound can solid-pack pumpkin
2-3rds cup water

Grease a 12-cup bundt pan.

On a sheet of wax paper or in a medium bowl stir together the flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, allspice, cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves.

In a large bowl beat the eggs until foamy; add the sugar, oil and pumpkin; beat until blended. Add the flour mixture ½ at a time, alternately with the water, beating after each addition until smooth.

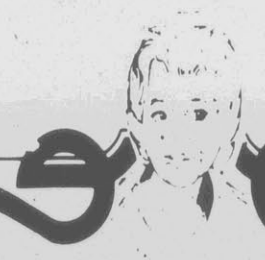

Turn into the prepared pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — about 1 hour. Place pan on a wire rack to cool for 10 minutes; with a small metal or plastic spatula loosen edges. Turn out onto the rack to cool completely.

Store, tightly wrapped, in the refrigerator. Serve at room temperature. If you like, sprinkle cake with confectioners' sugar.

Her Demands Run Out Of Control

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, living on a small, limited, fixed income. I have a 30-year-old divorced daughter who has been living with a rather well-to-do 35-year-old man for the last two years. They have decided to get married, and they think that I should put on a $10,000 wedding.

Abby, I do not have $10,000. I tried to borrow on my house, which is not paid for, but because of my age (63), I am not considered a good risk. I am unable to work and do not want to borrow from my relatives.

Am I wrong in thinking that a couple who have been living together should have a small wedding and pay for it themselves? I gave her one wedding already.

I was told that if I didn't come up with the $10,000 wedding, my daughter (who is my only child) will never speak to me again. Please rush your answer to me. I am desperate.

CAN'T SLEEP IN N.Y.

DEAR CAN'T SLEEP: Do not go into debt to give your daughter a $10,000 wedding. And don't worry about her never speaking to you again. You will hear from her—as soon as she needs something.

DEAR ABBY: Shortly after my boyfriend (whom I'll call Joe Blow) got divorced from his wife (whom I'll call Peggy), she married someone else. That marriage lasted 11 months, after which Peggy started to call herself Mrs. Joe Blow again.

Abby, Joe and I plan to get married one day, then I will be Mrs. Joe Blow. This will be confusing with Peggy going around calling herself Mrs. Joe Blow.

This is causing a lot of arguments between Joe and me. I say that once Peggy and Joe were divorced, she gave up the right to use his name. Joe says he doesn't care what name she uses as long as she leaves him alone.

Peggy uses the excuse that she is using his name only because she wants to have the same name as her children. Is that good enough? And is it legal?

THE FUTURE MRS. JOE BLOW

DEAR FUTURE: Legally a person may use any name he wants as long as it's not used for fraudulent purposes. Since Peggy has children named Blow, it seems reasonable that she would want her name to be the same as her children.

She is not "Mrs. Joe Blow"—she is "Mrs. Peggy Blow"—and if you want to be Mrs. Joe Blow, lay off, or you'll blow your chances.

DEAR ABBY: My dear, sweet 83-year-old mother has been an invalid for nearly five years. She lives with me and rarely gets out, except to go to the doctor's. Being unable to walk is the least of her problems. She's a diabetic and practically blind, and can no longer watch TV or do needlework to help pass the time. In spite of her disabilities, she's cheerful and uncomplaining and would love to have company, but very few of her old friends come to see her or bother to call anymore. When she had her health, she entertained beautifully and had many friends, but now she sits alone day after day, forgotten.

When I meet some of her old friends on the street or in a store, they ask with a genuine look of concern, "... and how is your dear mother?"

I give them all the same answer. "She's about the same, thank you."

Abby, I have all I can do to keep from saying, "If you really care how my mother is, why don't you pick up the telephone and call her? Or go to see her once in a while? It would mean so much to her."

But since I don't have the courage to say it, I hope you will print this letter. I'm sure there are many others who feel the same as I.

NO NAME, NO TOWN

DEAR ABBY: I am a fairly competent young woman who can usually handle any given situation, but at this point I am ready to explode.

Once again I have been surprised by my mother-in-law, who lives 125 miles away. She gives me absolutely no notice. She just gets into her car and drives here! Abby, she must know several hours in advance where she's heading. We both have telephones, and it doesn't cost that much to call. She could even call collect and I wouldn't mind.

Lucky for her someone has always been here when she pops in. I wish just once she'd come and find the house locked up with nobody home. It might teach her a lesson. I've begged her to give me a little notice, but she never does.

What can I do? Sometimes I've made plans for the day, and when she surprises me I just can't leave her. Her excuse: "I didn't want you to fuss."

When she's here, my husband (her only son) pays very little attention to her, so guess who has to entertain her? Help me, Abby. I can't take much more of this.

HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: Roll with the punches. When she pops in, if you've made plans, just take her at her word—don't "fuss." Pop out and go about your business. Maybe she just likes to drive.

DEAR ABBY: Recently, my husband and I had our first child, which happens to be my parents' first grandchild.

Two months before I was due, my mother called and said she wanted to be with me during the delivery. (She and Dad live 1,200 miles away.) I thanked her and said that I preferred that she wait until the baby was at least 2 weeks old. She pouted, her main concern being, "What will I tell my friends?"

After the baby was born, I called to tell her and Dad that they were grandparents of a healthy girl and to come in about two weeks. The very next day they flew to be with me!

Maybe I had better explain that my mother and I were never close. She is a perfectionist who found something wrong with everything I ever did. I really love her, but we can't get along.

Mom and Dad stayed at our small home for eight days. She tried to take over caring for the baby and made a total wreck of me, so I finally had to ask her to please go home and come back in a few months when things were calmer. All she could say was, "What will my friends think of me flying all that way for only eight days?"

Now she's angry with me. It's been three weeks and she refuses to speak to me. How can I reach her, Abby? This silence is very painful.

NEW MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Write and tell her that you really love her and want to have a good mother-daughter relationship, but she must realize that even though you are her "child," you are a grown, mature woman—and a mother yourself now—and she must treat you like an adult. Counseling (here we go again!) from an objective professional could do wonders for her.

Boy Scouts To Appeal Order To Hire Woman

By JUDD EVERHART
Associated Press Writer

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The Boy Scouts of America says it will fight an order requiring it to offer a scoutmaster's post to a 65-year-old grandmother, who a hearing officer called "well-qualified" due to her past as a "de facto scoutmaster."

Catherine Pollard, of Milford, the mother of two Eagle Scouts, has served periodically as an adult volunteer since 1953. She complained to the state Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities in 1976 after regional and national Boy Scout officials rejected her application for a scoutmaster position.

"The facts make it abundantly clear that the Quinnipiac Council denied Catherine Pollard the position of scoutmaster ... solely because of her gender," hearing officer Helen Z. Pearl wrote in a decision released Wednesday.

The decision said Mrs. Pollard was "unusually well-qualified for the position" and noted she was "acting de facto scoutmaster" while Troop 13 in Milford was without one between 1972 and 1976.

But Michael Whittaker, a Boy Scouts spokesman at national headquarters in Dallas, called the ruling "clearly erroneous" and said it would be appealed in Connecticut Superior Court.

"The decision clearly infringes on the fundamental American (right) of freedom of association whereby our government does not have the right to dictate how private membership organizations can carry out the purposes for which they are organized."

In addition, Whittaker said, "We feel the position of scoutmaster should be held by a male because boys at that age need a male role model."

The Boy Scouts allow women to hold any paid and most volunteer positions, with the exception of scoutmaster, assistant scoutmaster, Webelos leader and "lone counselor," a person who helps individual Boy Scouts not attached to a troop.

"I wasn't surprised," Mrs. Pollard said after the decision was released. "If you can give good leadership, it should be utilized, whether it's male or female leadership."

Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said he was "extremely pleased" with the decision and had told Mrs. Pollard that his office would continue defending her position on appeal.

Ms. Pearl rejected the argument that the Boy Scouts are a private membership organization. She noted that the scouts receive money from public giving, such as through United Way agencies.

Of a possible appeal, Mrs. Pollard said: "I'm going to continue to fight. You shouldn't jeopardize these boys' future just because you can't find a scoutmaster."

Southwest Cooking: The Real Thing

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

If you are interested in regional American cooking, "Cuisine of the American Southwest" by Anne Linsay Greer (Cuisinart Cooking Club-Harper & Row) is worth looking into. Since her college days in Arizona and California, the author says she has "loved this colorful and tasty cuisine."

Then residence in Texas and cooking for her family, plus a dozen years of giving cooking classes, confirmed her enthusiasm for the subject. And visits to nearly every large Mexican-American community in the Southwest allowed her to do a remarkable amount of research.

A large-format book, with lavish color photographs, "Cuisine of the American Southwest" has an excellent chapter on the ingredients needed for what has come to be known, according to Mrs. Greer, as Tex-Mex, Cal-Mex, Santa Fe Style and Sonora Style cooking. Explanatory illustrations of the ingredients as well as substitutions for some of these hard-to-find foods are included.

There is also a chapter on equipment and techniques. Although Mrs. Greer is a devotee of the food processor, and many of her recipes give directions for using it, she also includes some "hand" methods.

A number of menus – ranging from a Chile Con Carne Party to a Festive Indoor Barbecue – are outlined. The recipes cover wide ground. There is a chapter on Relishes, Salsas and Fillings – which the author calls the "salt and pepper" of the Southwest. Another on Morning Meals has ideas for breakfasts and brunches.

There's a delightful section on Beverages. Appetizers and Snacks are here, too, as are Soups, Salads and Vegetables. Sandwiches featuring flour and corn tortillas that are folded or rolled, fried, grilled or heated in the oven, have savory fillings. Main Dishes and their Accompaniments, Breads and Pastries are treated. Recipes for desserts round out the book. And to encourage cooks, theres' a list of mail order sources for the special ingredients included in some Southwestern cooking.

Although the following salad recipe was designed for Christmas Eve, it is good during many months of the years. The jicama included is a slightly sweet crisp tuber that is becoming increasingly available all over the country. And the papaya called for is no longer considered exotic – nowadays you can buy this lovely fruit in many supermarkets.

ANNE GREER'S SOUTHWEST SALAD

1 small jicama
4 fresh beets, cooked until tender or 1 can cooked shoestring beets, drained and chilled
2 oranges
1 fresh papaya
1-3rd cup pine nuts
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
Vinaigrette Dressing, see recipe
Lettuce leaves

Peel the jicama being sure to remove both the outer peel and the inner fibrous coating. Cut the jicama and the beets into matchstick size slices in a food processor or by hand.

Peel the mango or papaya and cut into strips. Peel the oranges, removing all the white membrane; section, reserving 3 tablespoons of the juice for the Vinaigrette Dressing.

Saute the pine nuts in the oil until lightly browned. Drain on paper towels. Wash and dry the lettuce and use to line a deep platter.

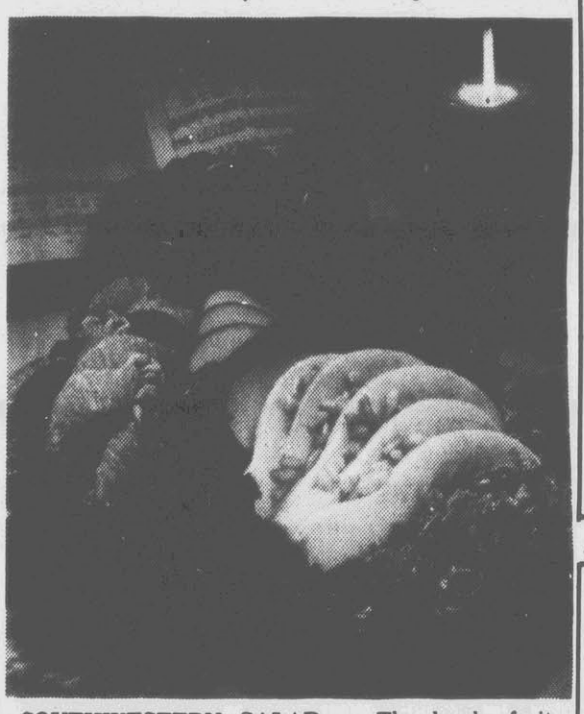

Make the Vinaigrette Dressing.

Arrange the salad atop the lettuce in the following manner: compose the vegetables and fruits in separate rows, sprinkle the pine nuts over the top and serve the dressing separately. Let everyone dress their own salad selection. Serves 3 to 4.

VINAIGRETTE DRESSING

In a screw top jar or in a food processor using the metal blade thoroughly combine 2 tablespoons cider vinegar, 2 tablespoons red wine vinegar, 3 tablespoons fresh orange juice, 1/2 cup safflower oil, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon salt or to taste, 1/8 to 1/4 teaspoon pure ground red chile powder or cayenne pepper.

SOUTHWESTERN SALAD – The lovely fruit, papaya, stars in it.

Campaign Drive On For New Museum Of History Building Funds

RALEIGH — North Carolina's Cannon family, through its philanthropic foundation, has made a gift toward a new home for the North Carolina Museum of History.

L. Vincent Lowe, Jr. of Wilson, chairman of the museum's campaign steering committee, announced the gift following the first meeting of the steering committee several weeks ago.

The new Charles A. and Ruch C. Cannon Museum Center of the North Carolina Museum of History will consist of a renovated facility formerly occupied by the North Carolina Museum of Art and a newly constructed annex in downtown Raleigh. The Museum of History has announced the autumn of 1985 as its tentative opening date for the new complex.

The center is being named in honor of Charles Albert Cannon and his wife, Ruth Coltrane Cannon. Mrs. Cannon died in 1965, and Mr. Cannon died in 1971.

The late couple was active in a wide range of affairs in North Carolina. He was an industrialist (Cannon Textile Mills, Kannapolis) who was often called upon for service to the state in the hours of need. Mrs. Cannon was an ardent advocate of preserving North Carolina's historic sites and was a force behind the development of the Elizabethan Gardes in Manteo and the rebuilding of Tryon Palace in New Bern.

At the request of the Cannon Foundation, Lowe has not disclosed the amount of the Cannon bequest for the new museum building.

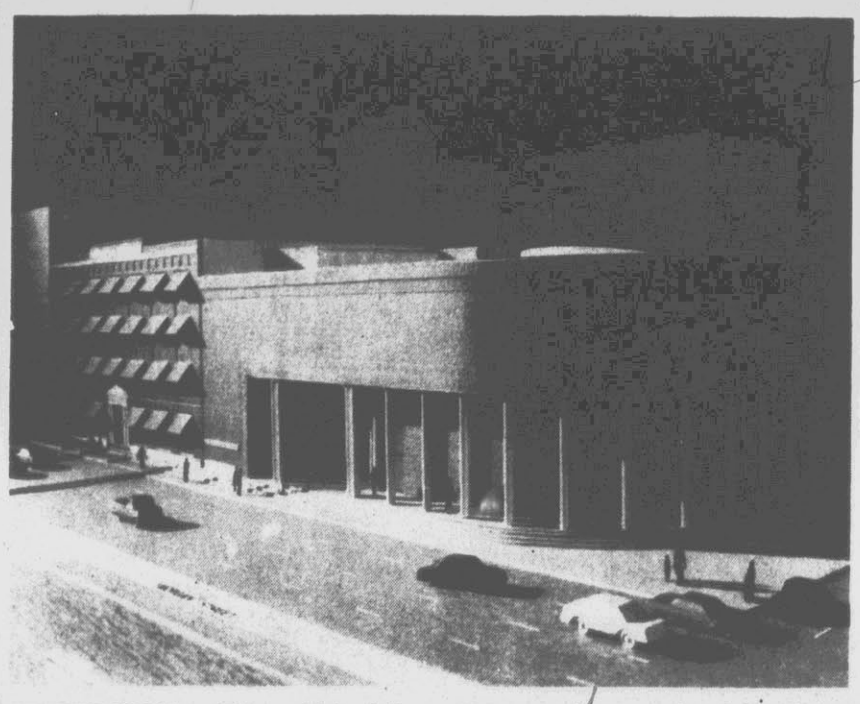

To supplement fund raising for the building, the N.C. Museum of History campaign is seeking to raise $3.5 million for the new museum. The campaign already has a pledge of $1 from the N.C. General Assembly, contingent upon the remaining $2.5 million being raised from private and other sources.

The North Carolina Museum of History, a section of the Division of Archives and History, Department of Cultural Resources, is currently housed in the Archives and History/State Library Building on East Jones Street in Raleigh. It has three floors with an exhibit area of 14,500 square feet. The first floor contains a permanent chronological exhibit of North Carolina "From the Stone Age to the Space Age." The mezzanine houses permanent speciality exhibits including North Carolina sports, transportation, furniture and fashions. The only changing gallery in the museum is housed on the second floor, where special exhibits are shown. (Closing the area to the public is often entailed while new exhibits are being prepared). Recent special exhibits have included "N.C. Currency," "N.C. Textiles," "Carousel Fantasy," and a "Juried Exhibition of N.C. Crafts."

The collection of the museum now includes more than 350,000 items — of which only about a tenth can be displayed at any one time. The collection is noted for its Civil War uniforms, North Carolina silver, flags, currency and Bechtler gold coins.

The North Carolina Museum of History began in 1983 as an unsolicited "orphan" collection in the state museum of Natural History in the Agricultural Building. In 1898 the collection was moved into a separate room of the natural history museum and became the "Hall of History."

Individuals, businesses or organizations wishing to make a contribution to the fund raising campaign for the new museum building, or who would like to receive more information can telephone 733-9652 or write to: The North Carolina Museum of History Campaign, 109 E. Jones Street, Raleigh, N. C., 27611.

MUSEUM MODEL — This model is of the proposed Charles A. and Ruth C. Cannon Museum Center of the North Carolina Museum of History which will occupy the building formerly housing the North Carolina Museum of Art on the corner of East Morgan and Blount Streets in downtown Raleigh. Plans call for extensive renovation of the existing structure and construction of an annex. The model was prepared by Samuel B. Ashford, Inc., a Raleigh architectural firm. (Photograph courtesy N. C. BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Oil reserves are often confirmed in the laboratory by chemical analysis of rock samples, according to Ben Powell.

Unable To Cope, A Few Viet Vets Live Wild In The Woods

FORKS, Wash. (AP) — Hiding out in Washington's wilderness, "trip-wire" veterans are almost never seen. But a few are there, shunning society and living by the skills they learned in the Vietnam jungle, the state veterans' affairs director says.

"Trip wire" was the phrase U.S. servicemen used for the unseen, deadly traps the Viet Cong laid along trails to snare and maim GIs on patrol. It also applied to certain soldiers who developed a knack for finding those traps and dismantling them.

Now state officials are using the phrase to describe a very small percentage of veterans who, unable to cope with the stress of their war memories and the disapproval they faced upon returning home, disappeared into the woods to live the only way they felt comfortable.

"Out there in the woods are wonderful, loving people who just want to be left alone, who are saying, 'I don't want a world where I am going to be spit on and have tomatoes thrown in my face,'" said Bruce Webster, a Port Angeles psychologist who works with veterans.

About 85 trip-wire vets have re-entered society since the state Veterans Affairs Department began an outreach program, said department director Randy Fisher. He said he did not know how many more there might be.

With a $100,000 grant from the state, Fisher and Mike McWatters, a private consultant and veteran who says he himself hid for two years in New York's Adirondacks, began the counseling service in August.

Last summer McWatters did a survey to determine how many of the state's 100,000 Vietnam-era veterans needed counseling but lacked programs. He found about 1,000, and a number of them were vets whose existence resembled that of 19th-century mountain men.

LOST IN THE WOODS . . . Ingoring cold and damp weather, Marvin, a former "trip-wire vet" who served in Viet Nam, has stripped down to track a mountain lion on a forest trail near Forks, Washington. (AP Laserphoto by Russ Carmack)

Marvin, a 33-year-old ex-Marine who did not want his last name published, says he lived as a woodland shadow off and on for 10 years, tracking and trapping animals, wearing buckskin clothes, living in caves and hollow tree stumps.

He was one of several trip-wire vets interviewed by the Tacoma News Tribune for a series of stories this week.

"There's a lot the public don't know — and probably will never know — about what happened in 'Nam," he said. "The only job skills I have are those that might be useful to a hit man for the Mafia."

Marvin said he spent four years in Vietnam as a Special Forces Scout before being wounded in 1971. When he returned to the United States he headed for the woods, holing up in Colorado, Wyoming and Montana and ending up in Washington. He avoided all human contact, he said, because "I couldn't stand to be touched."

He said he suffered from paranoia and nightmares. Since he sought counseling a year ago, Webster diagnosed him as a victim of post-traumatic stress disorder — a psychological illness in which symptoms show themselves years after the event that caused them.

Bill Maier, 35, says he was another trip-wire vet. An ex-Marine who saw heavy combat during his Vietnam stint, Maier said he sought refuge in the woods from his recurring nightmares.

But his sanctuary became his torment, for the isolation became too much. "I became afraid of everything," he said. "I had to get out. Everything was closing in on me."

Maier sought help from Webster, his former high school track coach, and now says, "I feel I'm getting well again." He spends much of his time going back to the woods to find other trip-wire vets and urge them to seek counseling.

Trip-wire vets are not "loonies," Fisher said. They are troubled and confused men who cannot come to terms with their post-traumatic stress disorder. In a demanding and complicated society they cannot control their feelings, but in the wilderness — where they know they can survive by their wits — they feel secure, he said.

"I know of one vet who went into the woods naked, came back out later with full leathers (animal hides for clothing), had gained 40 pounds and was armed" with weapons he made, McWatters said.

Some Having Pin-ups Of Themselves Made

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Women who've got it and want to flaunt it in pin-up photos for their husbands or boyfriends have been quietly coming to Peggy Stewart's portrait studio for several years.

"A lot of women want to do this sort of thing, but unless they know you and they work up their courage for a long time, etcetera, etcetera ..." Miss Stewart said.

It's only a minor sideline — a few such commissions in a year — but the response to a classified advertisement this fall was enough to start Miss Stewart thinking about a new ad, for one-of-a-kind valentines.

The sexy shots are usually "lingerie shots" rather than "Playboy" centerfolds, she said. For one thing, "most people just don't want to do nudes."

Miss Stewart said her first "boudoir photography" jobs were four or five years ago. In the beginning, she said, all such commissions came at the request of customers who had bought more conventional portraits from her.

"People would call up and explain to me that they wanted a little more intimate type of photograph. It was not something I decided to do on the spur of the moment," said Miss Stewart, 54.

She decided to begin advertising in a local weekly newspaper after reading an article in "The American Photographer," a major photography magazine, by a woman who did similar work in Iowa.

"I said, 'Well, I guess it's time to advertise,'" said Miss Stewart, who opened her Carrollton Avenue studio in 1966, after working for another photographer on the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

The ad she took out in September got about seven or eight responses from women — and an equal number from men, who were turned down.

"I just tell them I don't do that, that it's strictly for women," said Miss Stewart.

Women who responded to the ad included a physician, a model, housewives, "one young-looking grandmother who said, 'It's for my new friend,'" and Shawn, 26.

Shawn, who didn't want the world to know her last name, said it took her three months to work up the courage to decide that her boyfriend's Christmas present would come from Miss Stewart.

"It was a surprise, because he reads 'Playboy' and he's always making jokes about it. So I thought, 'I'll surprise you,'" said Shawn.

So she went out and bought some sexy lingerie "like you see in old movies," and — still very nervous — made an appointment.

"If it had been a man (photographer) I wouldn't have been able to do it," she said.

Miss Stewart's matter-of-fact and understanding attitude also played a big part in getting good pictures, Shawn said.

Catholic Charities Help Cambodian Farmers In California

BY SUSAN RUEL

STOCKTON, Calif. (UPI)— It is a bizarre sight for the San Joaquin Valley: barefoot Cambodians wearing sarongs, jackets, and headties working a vegetable field by hand.

It is 90 degrees. When they finish they jump, fully clothed, into an irrigation ditch to cool off.

"It's ironic that in one of the most agriculturally developed areas in the United States, we're helping these refugees do Third World-style farming," said Fred Scheil, one of four Catholic Charities workers advising the eight refugee families.

The fluctuating market price of Chinese longbean can make spirits sink or soar among the group. These families are trying to get off welfare by earning their living from the earth, by hand, as they did in the old country.

In the field, eight Cambodians are picking, drying, and bunching longbeans. Advisor Mark Scot is somewhat surly, having been up all night driving to San Fbancisco, where he failed to sell the longbeans at a reasonable profit. He says he wishes eight more workers had shown up to pick and weed.

Everyone is discouraged that the price of longbean has plummeted from about $1.25 to 25 cents a pound, due to a sudden flowering of the longbean crop down at Fresno.

Yet all have hopes the price will rise again, when the beans in Fresno run out, said Scot, who spends most of his days — and nights — in a hastily constructed teepee in the fields.

The Catholic Charities workers advise the Cambodians on the vagaries of the American market, and grapple with whether they should encourage these farmers to keep farming in a U.S. economy in which 500 farms go out of business every week, said Scheil.

The refugees themselves, who range between the ages of 36 and 59, have organized a cooperative farm on 14 leased acres near Stockton. They grow longbean, broccoli, and an assortment of melons.

By saving and borrowing, the Cambodians put up enough capital to launch their venture as a non-profit training program. Although some work as many as 12 hours a day in the fields, any profit realized must be pooled to pay off debts and invest in seeds and equipment for next year, Scheil said.

Otherwise, farmers participating in the program could lose their welfare benefits because they are "working," Scheil said.

"They very much want to better their situation through work. They say that over and over," he said of the project, which has been in existence for only six months.

Although the refugees have "thousands of years of subtle knowledge of soil, water, seed, and plant care" behind them, they depend for technical assistance on their four advisers: Scheil, Scot, Larry Pauling, and Miguel Vasquez, who have agricultural experience in the Philippines, Guatemala and other Third World countries.

"We don't go out and search out people to be farmers," Scot said. "They came to us."

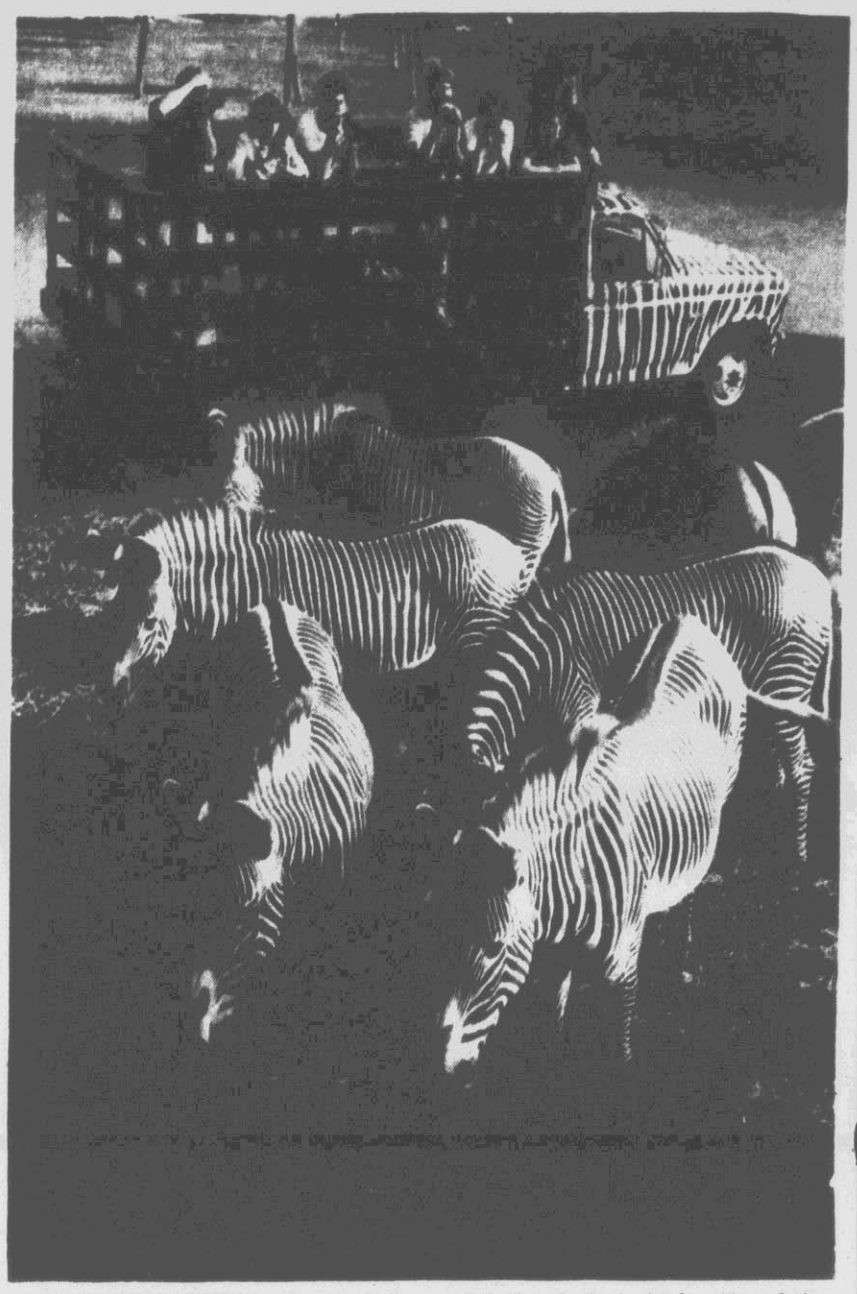

Since the Cambodians have only been in the United States for about two years, they are filled with questions on climate, soil, sunlight, and other variables of the temperate zone. Scot said.

Used to the rain-soaked, exhausted soil of the Mekong Delta, the refugees are pleased with the robustness of North American vegetables, but tend to want to drown their fields in water, Scot said.

This monsoon-bred habit led to clashes with the San Joaquin valley irrigation authorities, who permit farms only two watering days per week. The differences were arbitrated by the four advisors, all of whom have master's degrees in international agriculture from the University of California at Davis.

The longer days in California mean both weeds and crops grow faster, and the bamboo stakes with which they strung up longbean plants back home had to be replaced in America with cuttings from a nearby almond orchard.

"But the biggest difference they have to face is that the market in Southeast Asia is more reliable. There is no gambling involved in terms of marketing price," Scott said.

The 90-minute tours also pass large herds of giraffe, antelope, waterbuck and other animals — the culmination of the park's 25-year committment to the preservation of these exotic species. Steve McQueen's Boy

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Even with his face painted white and a Halloween skeleton costume on, the resemblance is unmistakable. He is Steve McQueen's boy.

There's the same neatly combed blond hair, and the same narrow face and spare, tight-muscled frame. Chad McQueen at 22 is now pursuing his father's profession, acting in his second film, "The Karate Kid."

It's a martial-arts movie, but not your ordinary chop-socky. "The Karate Kid" is a Columbia Pictures release directed by John Avildsen ("Rocky") and produced by Jerry Weintraub ("Oh, God!").

On a recent, rainy day, the company was working at a closed-down school in the San Fernando Valley, filming a Halloween dance. Dressed in a skeleton costume, McQueen chatted about his budding career in a dressing room he shared with two other actors. He doesn't get the star treatment — yet.

Acting was inevitable for Chad. His father was a superstar. His mother, Neile Adams, was a lead dancer in musicals. Chad grew up on movie sets.

"When my parents divorced, my sister, Terry, went with my mother and I went with my father," said young McQueen. "I traveled all over the world with Dad on just about every picture he did but 'The Great Escape.' I was in Taiwan for 'The Sand Pebbles,' in France for 'Le Mans,' in Jamaica for 'Papillon.'

"I remember once on the 'Nevada Smith' location when I was very young, I wandered off and everyone was hunting for me. Boy, did I get swatted by Dad!"

Among the things McQueen learned from his father was a sense of competition. He was racing minicycles at an age when most boys are trying to master a two-wheel bike. Because of his slight build, he didn't qualify for football or basketball.

But in one area he was no competitor: his schoolwork.

"My parents wondered why I wasn't getting A's in school," he said. "When I was in the sixth grade, they found out I had dyslexia. It's a reading disability, and both my father and mother had it. I learned how to deal with it."

No pampered Hollywood kid, Chad worked in a gas station to earn $2,000 for his first car, a 1949 Chevy truck which he still owns. He also worked on his father's films as production assistant — a euphemism for "gofer." He became an expert racer of motorcycles and hot cars, then started to think about an acting career.

"When I told Dad about it, he told me to get a copy of the play 'A Hatful of Rain,' then get into school. So I went down to Samuel French's and bought the play, then I enrolled with Lee and Anna Strasberg. The first scene I did in class was 'A Hatful of Rain.'"

UNC English Professor Noted Book Reviewer

By RAMONA JONES
The Raleigh Times

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Edmund Fuller, English professor and author, turns out some of the nation's most influential book reviews from his tiny, cluttered study in North Carolina. Fuller has reviewed books 22 years for The Wall Street Journal.

Fuller has been writing his weekly column, "Bookshelf," for The Journal since 1962. He mails in the column since he moved to Chapel Hill three years ago from Connecticut. His subjects vary — fiction, history, biographies, science.

"I have to remember the audience," he said. "The Journal is the largest circulating paper in the world (nearly 2 million). That's a huge readership with lots of tastes. I have to remember I'm not writing for just one vein. I try to strike a balance, so I don't always ride my own hobbyhorse."

Fuller, 69, said he reviews everything from Sam Ervin's "Humor of a Country Lawyer" to Marc Gallant's "The Cow Book" to Daniel J. Boorstin's 750-page history of the world, "The Discoverers."

He calls himself a maverick, not because of what he reviews but because of the opinions he expresses.

"I think there was, and still is, a tendancy in modern literature to get away from the Judeo-Christian Hellenistic view of man which gave rise to Western civilization," he said.

"The image of man has eroded in an age when a great deal of faith has eroded."

Fuller said he stands firmly on the values and principles he believes are essential to civilization. He's a family man with four grown children and nine grandchildren and a staunch Episcopalian layreader. His values and beliefs influence his opinions.

"Early on, I laced into Norman Mailer," Fuller said. "Too often women are portrayed as zombies, created purely for the sexual exploitation of the men in the novel. . .Only a few writers are still writing about marriage and family and the fundamental values of life."

He also has a mild feud going with John Updike.

"When 'Rabbit is Rich' was published, I attacked it savagely in my column," Fuller said. "And it didn't surprise me when it won a Pulitzer and the American Book Award. It just happens to be I think I'm right."

Fuller said Updike is an extremely talented writer but is an example lately of the "unbridled vulgarity" found in much contemporary literature.

"Literature reflects the time in which it's written, but do you reflect that time neutrally or do you reflect it in celebration of things like the death of the family?" he said.

One of Fuller's favorite writers is Walker Percy.

"He's a tremendous writer," he said. "My fellow critics agree, but not necessarily for the same reasons. I think he's a gifted writer with profound insight into the human condition."

His small study, with a view of a rock-filled yard near Chapel Hill, is lined to the ceiling with books. Attached to a desk buried under masses of papers and volumes is a lamp that swings from his typewriter on one side to the leather arm chair on the other. It's there that he does much of his reading.

"It's my factory," Fuller said. "I just cannot keep order, I get so overwhelmed. I spend the greater part of every day and occasionally some evenings in here."

He feels mornings, when he's freshest, are the best times for writing. Afternoons are reserved for revising and retyping and for reading.

His only regret is that he can review only a few of the thousands of works published.

"From my youth, I've been a voracious reader," Fuller said. "To open a package and find a new book never ceases to be stimulating to me.

"It's painful to me to see the number of books that are published and are never seen by any reviewer. But I have finite time and space. Even The New York Times Book Review is miniscule compared to the number of books that are published."

Book News

By WILLIE MAE GIBBS

Among new books at Sheppard Library is a fascinating autobiography of a person who deserves to be called a "living legend."

Fitzgerald, Hemingway, and Waugh wrote about Bricktop, a scrappy redhead "colored girl" from West Virginia and Chicago. T.S. Eliot put her in a poem, and Cole Porter wrote "Miss Otis Regrets" for her to sing. She is credited with giving Duke Ellington his first New York break and giving guidance to a young Josephine Baker.

Bricktop taught the Black Bottom to the Prince of Wales and the Charleston to the Aga Kahn. Schiaparelli gave her gowns and Jascha Heifetz came to her club to sit with the jazz band and play. So goes her book, "Bricktop," co-authored by James Haskins — telling it all in a lighthearted, amusing way, dropping names on every page. Everbody who was anybody haunted Bricktop's club in the Paris of the 1920s and 1930s and Mexico City and Rome of the following three decades. She played the role of friend, entertainer, confidante, mother hen, and occasionally banker to them all.

In her salute to Bricktop, Diana Ross comments that Bricktop is a woman who has always known where she was going and for what reason. Her ability to combine an unerring eye for talent and chic with American brashness and an eminently European sophistication has resulted in her becoming the toast of two continents. Her book is crammed with anecdotes about the rich, powerful, and famous of several decades.

Expressing his admiration for Bricktop, John Hammond says he was always astonished by the hold that she had on her very sophisticated audiences. Although her story includes an array of famous names and places, Bricktop has retained a healthy sense of her own identify, and it is her story, not theirs, that she has chosen to tell. "Bricktop" is the life story of an original 100 percent American Negro with a trigger-Irish temper" — a life that has always been exuberant, elegant and truly remarkable.

ANOTHER OLD WINDOW — A surprisingly large number of photographers are addicted to searching for photographic examples of weathered old windows, preferably with broken panes that provide both inside areas of solid black and reflections from dusty glass. The one here, photographed in Beaufort County, has four large panes, bits of peeling paint adhering to sash frames, and an interesting pattern of torn tar paper at the top of the two bottom panes. Slice Of Old Havana Survives In A Nightclub

AP News Special
By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

HAVANA (AP) — "Welcome to Paradise under the Stars!"

The red lights glare. The trumpets blare. And the leggy, legendary showgirls strut and smile their way onto the vast outdoor stage, kicking off another evening at the "One and Only Tropicana" nightclub — a slice of old Havana that thrives in socialist Cuba.

The sequined "choristas" are as outrageously costumed as ever, the music is as brassy, and the daiquiris as sweet. But 25 years after Fidel Castro's bearded guerrillas took command here, Cuba's premier nightspot dances to a different tune.

Where Nat King Cole once crooned to bejeweled American socialites and international gamblers, young daughters of the socialist revolution now high-step for the equivalent of $72 a week before audiences of Hungarian tourists, Soviet sergeants and Cuban workers rewarded with a night on the town.

"When I started here in '58, the admission charge alone was out of reach of the Cuban people," said Pedro Pineiro, who began as a 17-year-old Tropicana busboy and now helps run the huge club.

By the time Castro's victorious rebels rolled into the city in January 1959, the Tropicana had come to symbolize the decadence of 1950s Havana, where U.S.-based organized crime had built hotels and gambling casinos, and was profiting — along with corrupt Cuban government officials — from prostitution, drugs and other rackets.

Why was this world-famous entertainment mecca, site of sexy shows twice nightly, spared under strait-laced socialism?

"The Tropicana is the musical image of Cuba," explained the club's administrative director, Ricardo Villanueva Russi.

But there is more to it: A "night at the Tropicana" is one of the biggest draws for tourist dollars in this poor island nation, and for Cuban workers it offers a glamorous respite from an often monotonous life.

The glamor and glitter need not worry Tommy Tune, however. The Tropicana is not Broadway al fresco. But Busby Berkeley might have smiled in recognition.

The setting for "el show" is spectacular — an amphitheater overhung with 80-foot royal palms and cobwebbed with ramps and bridges, tree-trunk platforms and staircases. Front and center, ringed by terraces of tables that hold 1,052 patrons, the main stage rises upward toward the sultry Havana night sky as the spectacle begins.

The company — 38 dancers and singers, backed up by a 36-piece orchestra and 35-voice chorus — race through 20 numbers in 90 minutes, the dancers often materializing suddenly among the palm fronds and catwalks above the crowd.

The showgirls — mostly tall mulattas, since Cuban men like it that way — carry more costume atop their heads than on their bodies. The feathered and fanciful headdresses wobble three feet high as they trot up and down stage.

Waiters in black tie, meanwhile, meander unhurriedly among the white-clothed tables, carrying Cuban beer, Portuguese wine and the ever-present rum daiquiri.

By the time of the grand finale, amid blue smoke and flashing lights, some less svelte chorines have been infiltrated into the dancing line, and the starting team shows its fatigue. The terpsichoreal synchrony is not always music to the eyes.

But the show is always alive and sometimes inventive, and the smiles never fade.

"Their professionalism is another product of the revolution," young interpreter Hernando Soto proudly told an American visitor.

Most of the dancers are graduates of special performing arts schools. Their dreams are not of the "Great White Way," but of landing a spot in the Tropicana touring company that performs in Europe and elsewhere — international travel is a treasured prize for a Cuban.

The revolution is part of the show. Among the rumbas, ballads and classical Spanish rhythms, the dancers perform numbers ridiculing the rich Cubans of the past and celebrating the emancipation of Cuban slaves a century ago, an event identified as part of a process culminating in the Castro revolution.

"You can't differentiate between politics and culture," noted Russi.

All this for the price of a 5-peso ($5.81) minimum for food and drink — not enough, said Russi, to cover the $2-million annual production cost.

"This is the cheapest cabaret in the world," he boasted, and for a moment this "people's showman" sounded like any hard-selling Las Vegas impresario.

Young Gypsy Joseph Galalta Appointed To United Nations

GYPSY DELEGATE — Joseph Galalta, a 29-year-old Job Corps consultant, is the first Gypsy appointed to represent his people before the United Nations. He said reversing the stereotype of Gypsies would be his first priority and vowed to work to fight persecution of Gypsies and to preserve their language, Romany. (AP Laserphoto by Mark Crosse, Reno Gazette-Journal)

By JOHN ROLL
Associated Press Writer

SPARKS, Nev. (AP) — The days when Europe's elite hunted Gypsies for sport are gone, but old prejudices linger and the world fails to recognize that "Roms" have the same problems as other minorities, says the first Gypsy to represent his people at the United Nations.

Joseph Galalta of Sparks was recently appointed by the Romany Union to represent Gypsies before "non-governmental" organizations of the United Nations. His appointment came after the United Nations granted "roster status" to the union, an international organization of Gypsy leaders formed in the 1970s.

Galalta's status will enable him to represent Gypsies at meetings and gives him the right to "oral and written intervention," but he will not have a vote in any U.N. body, said Virginia Saurwein, chief of the U.N.'s Non-governmental Organizations Unit.

Galalta, 29, said in an interview that his top priority will be to help end stereotypes of Gypsies and to inform the public of problems facing the group.

"For centuries, Gypsies have had a history of nothing but persecution," Galalta said. "The time is here now that sterotypes about the Roms end." Rom, a derivative of Romany, is the word Gypsies prefer in describing themselves.

Gypsies are a nomadic people with particular folkways and a unique language who live on every continent. They are believed to have originated in northwestern India. There are an estimated 5 million Gypsies in the world, including 250,000 Americans.

Galalta said the American media perpetuates false stereotypes of Gypsies as fortune tellers, drunks and organ grinders. The media also has failed to record the horrors that Gypsies faced in Adolf Hitler's death camps, he said.

"Long before Hitler went after the Jews, he stole Gypsy children and sterilized them, but no one records that," he said.

The world has largely forgotten that 500,000 Roms died in concentration camps, but the pain of that experience still lingers for many Gypsies, Galalta said.

"As far as I know there is not one memorial — not even a plaque — marking Rom victims of the Holocaust. We're not demanding one, but it's necessary for people to know," he said.

He also said that in European countries, particularly Sweden, Gyspies were hunted like foxes 200 to 300 years ago.

He said a primary concern now is the preservation of Romany, the language of Gypsies which Galalta said is being lost in some areas and bastardized in others.

While he insisted he's "no communist," Galalta gave the Eastern Bloc high marks for programs that require Gypsies to learn their language.

Galalta said he would push for Gypsy study programs modeled after black and Hispanic culture courses at universities.

"Being ignored is our biggest problem," Galalta said. "Simply being ignored can be an act of persecution."

American Roms have made progress in being assimiliated into th mainstream of society Galalta said. But he note that a group of Gypsies sti lives in a tent city outside Paris.

Galalta said that the Rom who inhabit the "shant town" roam around for couple of days after periodi raids by police and the return to the tent city, read to repeat the cycle.

Long Run Plays In London Still Top Favorites

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Governments and hair styles may come and go, but two London plays — a farce and a mystery — remain popular productions with a combined total of 45 years on stage.

Agatha Christie's "The Mousetrap," currently in its 32nd year, played its 12,923rd performance at the St. Martin's Theater on the West End, London's Broadway, Dec. 17.

That same evening at the Garrick Theater, Alistair Foot and Anthony Merriott's "No Sex Please, We're British," now in its 13th year, marked its 5,217th performance.

"I thought it would run a year," said Allan Davis, the director of "No Sex Please, We're British," recalling his initial feeling at the show's first performance.

Davis had thought that the farce, about a young couple beseiged by an unwanted shipment of pornography, was the funniest play he'd ever read when he first saw the script in 1970.

But he had no idea the farce would take off as it has, recouping its initial $22,000 investment "hundreds of times over." He said that part of the show's success derives from its apparent immunity to critical aspersions and language barriers.

"Fortunately, it's not a show that depended on the critics, some of whom were very snide," Davis said. "They wanted it to be more like 'Oh, Calcutta!,' which we soon outpaced. They shouldn't think they're coming to a play by Noel Coward, because that it's not."

Davis pointed out that "No Sex Please" has been very successful in such diverse locales as South Africa, Japan and Italy.

But the show was not a success on Broadway, where it ran for five weeks 10 years ago. Efforts to secure Joel Grey for the lead fell through, and the play was done "for jokes, not seriousness," Davis said.

"Farce is a serious business," he said.

The staying-power of "The Moustrap" is even more noteworthy, since other Christie plays — "Go Back for Murder," "Rule of Three" and "Witness for the Prosecution" — have enjoyed lengthy runs without aspiring to the Guinness Book of World Records.

Sir Peter Saunders, producer of the show since its world premiere in Nottingham Oct. 6, 1952, says he had "no remote idea" that the show would become "one of the sights of London."

Although he said that his profits are "between God and my accountant," he confirmed that the show has grossed $11 million in London alone and has been presented in 41 countries, including a six-month run off-Broadway 25 years ago.

Saunders attributes the thriller's success to "tender, loving care" at its opening and to an amount of repeat business surprising for a whodunnit.

"One colleague of mine had four children and saw it four times, once with each child. He finally gave up having kids because he couldn't imagine seeing it again," he said. "People like to come with friends and see their reactions, and some see it again because they can't remember who did it."

To keep the show fresh, Saunders has adopted a policy of hiring a new director and cast each year. The current director, Peter Dews, whose upcoming projects include "Julius Caesar" and "Romeo and Juliet," had no difficulty tackling a purely commercial assignment such as "The Mousetrap."

"It's a cleverly worked-out piece of stagecraft," Dews said, "and it would be very boring if I treated everything like a literary endeavor.

"Plays are for giving pleasure, and God knows 'The Mousetrap' has given a lot of pleasure over a lot of time."

The Bonfils Story: A Legacy Of Light

By Will H. Rockett, associate professor, Seton Hall University, New Jersey

Photographs by Felix, Adrien, and Lydie Bonfils, Courtesy Harvard Semitic Museum

An old man with tools for fluffing up mattress stuffing.

The Arabic phrase musawwir shamsi — one who makes pictures by the sun — is probably the earliest Arabic term for photographer, and traditions has it that scholars, in considering Islamic prohibitions against graven images, decided photographs merely recorded the shadow cast by God's sunlight.

There was, nevertheless, opposition to photography among most religious groups in the Middle East, and, as a result, visual records of peoples, monuments and scenes of the region have been usually made and preserved throughout history by foreigners.

Among the best examples of this are the famous Roberts Prints, by 19th-century British artist David Roberts (See Aramco World, March-April 1970). Another earlier example is the encyclopedic record made by some 2,000 European artists, draftsmen and skilled engravers who accompanied Napoleon Bonaparte's army on its 1798 Egyptian campaign and helped to produce the 20-volume Description de l'Egypte (See Aramco World, March-April 1976). A monumental work, Description incorporated generally excellent drawings of the ruins and monuments of Egypt.

Then, in 1839, Louis-Jacques Mande Dageurre ushered in the age of photography with a public announcement of the first practical photographic process — the daguerreotype — and within weeks, reportedly, so-called "Excursions Daguerriennes" began recording the sights of the East for an avid European audience.

For years before that, Western interest in the Middle East had been whetted by the then-widespread knowledge of the Bible, and by such travel literature as Alexander William Kinglake's "Eothen," and William Makepeace Thackeray's Notes on a Journey from Cornhill to Grand Cairo, published under the pseudonym "Titmarsh." As a result, hardy — and wealthy — souls had begun to add Egypt and the Holy Land to the "Grand Tour" itineraries, and they in turn began to publish reminiscences and sketches that stimulated still more interest.

Now, with photographs, travelers could begin to capture such exotica with greater fidelity than was possible with pen and ink

Most of the earliest European photographers of the Middle East — Horace Vernet, Joly de Lotbiniere and others — were daguerreotypists, but Maxime Du Camp, who accompanied Flaubert on the poet's 1849-51 excursion to the Middle East, got excellent results with paper negatives, and Francis Frith, photographer and publisher, secured a firm place in the history of photography using glass negatives.

Toward the end of the 19th century, middle class Europeans were beginning to travel in such great numbers that some observers had begun to object. Journalist William Howard Russell, for example, protested in The Times that tourists ". . . crowd the sites which ought to be approached in reverential silence . . ."

Like their counterparts today, these travelers also demanded keepsakes — and thought that they had a right to them. A Father Geramb, for example, reportedly told Muhammad Ali, the ruler of Egypt in 1833, that "it would hardly be respectable, on one's return from Egypt, to present oneself in Europe without a mummy in one hand and a crocodile in the other." Thus, when some governments in the Middle East began to crack down on such looting, daguerreotypes and other forms of photography offered travelers an attractive alternative — particularly when they were made and marked by "Bonfils."

Bonfils was by no means the only good photographer of the period; between the time Daguerre introduced his process and the time Bonfils began to take and market photographs, some 200 known photoraphers were in business — some of them quite good. In Luxor, for example, prints by a man named Beato were on sale, and in Istanbul prints by a photographer named Sebah could be sent home rolled up in metal tubes. But few of them compared to the photography produced by the Bonfils family — as Gratien Charvet, founder of the Societe Scientifique et Litteraire in Ales, France, would vehemently argue.

The man who wrote the introduction fo the Bonfils' 1878 collection of photographs, Souvenirs d'Orient, Charvet said enthusiastically that the "collection of photographs of the Orient's principal sites — initiated, executed and completed bv Monsier R. Bonfils with unequaled perseverance — should be regarded as one of the most considerable achievements — picturesque, artistic and scientific — of our epoch."

Despite this, The Bonfils family had virtually disappeared from history by the time Father Carney Gavin and his staff at Harvard University began to dig into the family history. "All we know of Bonfils," said photographic historian Beaumont Newhall at the time of discovery of the photographs, "is that he was a genius."

As recently as two years ago, Gavin wrote in the journal Nineteenth Century: "No one remembers the photographers Bonfilfs — not even the Sub-Prefect M. Maurice Bonfils — not even the staff of the Evangelical Library in nearby Saint Hippolyte dedicated to collecting biographies of local sons — not even the region's oldest printers and photogaphers. And at the time of Felix Bonfils' death in 1885, no obituary nor even notice was published in local journals."

Since then, however, Dr. Gavin and his staff have learned a lot about the Bonfils family. In fact, it was two of Dr. Gavin's volunteers — Al and Phyllis Weisman — who first turned up evidence that there was more than one Bonfils photographer: in a New Hampshire barn, they came across the effects of a missionary who had photographic prints signed, "A. Bonfils." "Until then," Dr. Gavin said. "we had found only F. Bonfils.

"They were an incredible family," said Dr. Gavin. They were descendants of Theodore, the emperor of Abysinia, and are related through marriage to the actor Peter Ustinov. One of them, Adrien, was alternately a sergant brigadier of the Chasseurs d'Afrique, a photographer in his father's studio and a Beirut hotelier. The father, Felix, was the son a a wood-lathe worker, but built up a photographic business with connections in Cairo, Alexandria, Paris and London, as well as Beirut and Ales, the Bonfils home in France. And when Lydie Bonfils, the third photographer, left Beirut in 1916, it was an an evacuee on the deck of the U.S.S. Des Moines.

Little of that was known at first, but bit by bit over the last 12 years, research by Dr. Gavin and his staff has pieced the story together. It is a story of affection, piety and devotion — to each other and to their adopted homeland, Lebanon — and it begins in the small French town of Ales about 1860 when the family Bonfils set off to Beirut one after the other.

The first to go was Felix Bonfils. Born in 1831, Felix took up the trade of bookbinding, but in 1860 joined General d'Hautpoul's expedition to the Levant to end an outbreak of factional fighting. Evidence suggests that Felix became a photographer sometime after his return from Lebanon, possibly as an amateur. Then, however, when his son Adrien fell ill, Felix remembered the cool green hills around Beirut and sent him there to recover. With him went Felix's wife Lydie Bonfils, and when she returned, apparently as enthusiastic as Felix had been, they decided to return en famille.

Since Felix was by then working in Ales as a printer, producing heliogravures — a photographic process invented by Abel Niepce de St. Victor, cousin of the man frequently called "the father of photography," Joseph Nicephore Niepce — he decided to try and support himself in Lebanon by taking up the trade of la photographie. Though it may seem like an odd decision, it turned out well: in 1867, the Bonfils family arrived in Beirut and four years later Felix reported the results of what must have been staggering labor: 15,000 prints of Egypt, Palestine, Syria, and Greece, and 9,000 stereoscopic views.

These negatives were made on glass plates, coated with a collodion solution sensitized with silver nitrate. The plates had to be prepared on the spot — usually in a tent in the Middle East, although Francis Frith occasionaly used cool tombs and temples as well. Then they were exposed and developed immediately afterwards. Prints could be made later, quite literally by sunlight: paper impregnaterd with a silver salt solution was stretched against the glass plate in a frame, and then exposed out of doors under direct sunlight.

Though the prints, golden in tone, were beautiful, the photographers had to use eggwhite, or albumen, as a binding agent on the paper and this eventually became unpleasant since the Bonfils family apparently prepared the egg-white themselves. Lydie Bonfils in 1917 was heard to mutter, "I never want to smell another egg again," and supposedly forbade them at her breakfast table thereafter.

The process could also be dangerous — particularly in the hot climate of the Middle East. As Frith wrote, "When (at the Second Cataract, one thousand miles from the mouth of the Nile, with the thermometer at 110 degrees in my tent) the collodion actually boiled when poured upon the glass plate, I almost despaired of success."

The second Bonfils photographer was Felix's son, Adrien. Born at Ales in 1861, Adrien was six when the family moved permanently to Beirut. Like his father he did military service — as a brigadier in a cavalry regiment in Algeria — but on the death of Felix in 1885, he returned to Beirut to take over the family business, and was soon setting off on new photographic expeditions and launching publishing projects that easily matched Frith's in quality and quantity.

It was Adrien to whom a London agent named Mansell was referring when he wrote, in 1892, to a certain David Gordon Lyon, "I hear from Bonfils that he has made an additon of 150 views to his Egyptian series — shall send these to you when I receive them."

This, says Dr. Gavin's staff, seems to be the first reference to what was becoming the Bonfils collection and to the man who took it upon himself to acquire the photographs: Professor Lyon, the first curator of a new museum in Cambridge, Massachusetts: the Harvard Semitic Museum. Founded in 1899, with donations from Jacob Henry Schiff of the New York banking house of Kuhn, Loeb & Company — HSM, according to its charter, was intended to provide "a thorough study and a better knowledge of Semitic history and civilization, so that the world shall better understand and acknowledge the debt it owes to the Semitic people."

To that end, Lyon began to collect artifacts from the Middle East, particularly the Bonfils photographs. It is not known whether he realized how valuable they would be in archaeology, but it's unlikely. It is only now, Gavin says, that researchers are coming to realize the value of photographs. "Librarians have learned to pay careful attention to handwritten notes and diaries, as well as to books and manuscripts. Curators carefully tend sketch pads and old engravings as 'works of art.' But photogaphs . . . have until recently remained forgotten."

Nevertheless, Dr. Gavin says, Lyon did work hard at collecting Bonfils photographs. "Lyon's interest was encyclopedic; one can infer from the Mansell note that he's told the agent he wants all the photographs." Furthermore, he nearly succeeded; despite occasional difficulties with U.S. Customs, he secured nearly half of what was available and went on to catalog them, giving them English titles and museum code numbers.

This is known, because Adrien himself had issued three catalogs, organizing 1,684 photographs into nine groups covering Lower and Upper Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Anatolia and Greece. In addition, there was a series of 25 "panoramas" consisting of two or more separate pictures which, when placed side by side, showed broad cityscapes of such Eastern centers as Cairo, Jaffa, Jerusalem, Damascus and, of course, Beirut. The series was rounded out by a selection of Egyptian views and costumes — including desert scenes and a wedding and a collection of scenes and costumes of Palestine and Syria.

As these catalogs suggest, Adrien's output was prolific. But in addition to this expansion of his father's business, he was also experimenting with mechanically colored prints — they were done in Zurich, by the photochromie process — and made four trips to Philadelphia to explore publication opportunities, including a proposed New Testament Illustrated with Photographs, and a book on the journesy of St. Paul.

Meanwhile, the Bonfils family had added a third photographer to its roster. Lydie Bonfils, a fact that emerged when the HSM staff found a reference by an English clergyman named Manning.

Lydie, it seems, had decided that mixing albumen for her husband and son was not enough, and apparently got involved in portraits and costume studies in the Beirut studios; descendants, in fact, have confirmed that she worked in the family's Beirut studio for some time after he son abandoned the trade in the early 1900s. There is evidence too that she ranged more widely. In Brummana, a member of the Maksad family told of "Lady Bonfils" stopping a Druze shaikh to pose for her one morning, just after the outbreak of the First World War. And her own photo, according to Nitza Rosovsky, an historian of old Jerusalem, appears in one of the prints in the Harvard cache; she is standing on the pyramid at Giza.

Thus Lydie, despite a growing distaste for eggs, apparently continued the business after Adrien had begun to turn his attendtion to a proposed medical spa in the mountains of Lebanon — even issuing her own catalog until the First World War forced her removal from Beirut and broght an end to the prolific photographic output of this remarkable family.

By then, however, the work of the Bonfils family was not only extensive, but of an unparalleled quality. It is, in fact, an incomparable legacy to both history and art — for reasons that Dr. Gavin explains in detail in The Images of the East.

For one thing, writes Gavin, "Bonfils prints were meticulously processed originally." Although only 18 glass negatives are known to have survived (the rest were washed clean to make fresh negatives, lost in troubled Beirut, even smashed to provide lensmakers with fresh "ground glss" during a shortage in the 1950s), the original prints are virtually grain-free, thanks to the albumen emulsion and the fact they were made directly from contact with the plates. Consequently, writes Dr. Gavin, the prints "can often yield invaluable visual data to modern image enhancement techniques."

In addition, the Bonfils subject "were selected in a consciously encyclopedic spirit that has preserved a vast range of data for the geographical, ethnographic, biblical, archeological, architectural and historical studies that Bonfils intended to promote."

This was certainly true of Adrien — as his introduction of the unpublished, photographically illustrated Bible proves:

> Twenty centuries have passed without changing the decor and physiognomy of this land unique among all; but let us hasten if we wish to enjoy the sight. Progress, the great trifler, will have swiftly brought about the destruction of what time itself has respected . . . Already in the ancient Plain of Sharon . . . The immortal road to Damascus has become no more than a . . . railway!

To Adrien, his family's duty ws quite clear:

> . . . before progress has completely done its destructive job, before this present which is still the past has forever disappeared, we have tried to speak, to fix and immobilize it in a series of potographic views.

Such foresight at that time is amazing since very few of the photographers of that period nor their subjects were conservators. Mardik Berberian of Amman, son of one of the first Armenian photographers in Damascus, told Dr. Gavin that many pictures were lost because no one cared for them:

> "We loved those pictures . . . but no one was interested then. Those who had sat for portraits had died; Amman was shown as a mere village; all the places we had photographed have changed so much we couldn't imagine anyone ordering a new print from those old negatives."

Even today such attitudes are not uncommon. "Everywhere in the world people are unaware they such such photographs," said Gavin. "Most people don't realize that they've captured that moment . . . that will never come again."

The Bonfils family, fortunately, did realize what they had — and kept them. Thus their photographs include shots taken decades apart, another reason why the Bonfils collection is incomparable. Indeed, Dr. Gavin wrote, "Bonfils' activity spanned the period when the most profound changes began to alter Eastern landscapes and ways of life irretrievably, so that the family was consciously able to record scenes unchanged for millennia as well as (toward the end of Adrien's activity) the advent of occidental technology and mores."

The Bonfils's records have practical as well as historical value. Some years ago, for instance, at an Oxford conference, Subhe Qassem, Dean of Science at the University of Jordan, told Dr. Gavin he could "identify virtually every tree in the picture taken around Jaffa. That means I can tell you how these people are living and how the agricultural year is going for them." Such are the things we can learn today about our past from photographs that might have been scrapped in the normal course of the photographer's career.

At that same conference, a geologist named Finzi, said that archeologists could make more of a contributionto modern science if they could "tell us how man has lived with the soil through the centuries." Dr. Gavin showed his photographs of Jordan in the last century to Finzi, and Finzi said such a photographic record could revolutionize geology and agronomy. "I can see where the topsoil is in the picture, and if we can tell how it's moving, then we can plan for the nutrition of the future." This approach, geomorphology, — may still be highly theoretical, but the work of the new photo-archeologists like Dr. Gavin may well make it a reality.

No one is making greater use of the photographs than the archeologists themselves. Experts have used Bonfils photographs to help preserve facades and an arch at Petra. "The arch," noted HSM's photographic historican Elizabeth Crella, "had collapsed long ago. Our photographs show the arch with such clarity, stone by stone, that it is possible to reconstruct it."

Another example had to do with a Bonfils panorama of the Roman forun at Philadelphia, now engulfed by Amman's business district, but still remarkably well preserved when Bonfils took the photograph. Still other photos promise help in restoring the interiors of stately old Damascene palaces, long forgotten by Damascenes themselves.

American Indians used to call photographs "soul-catchers," because they believed a part of their spirit was lost when they were photographed. But today the reverse is true: archeological photography is helping the Middle East to recover the spirit of the past.

This is particularly true regarding the men and women of the past whose lives, skills, and character the Bonfils photographs capture with love and respect. "The Bonfils enjoyed a very special rapport with their sitters," says Dr. Gavin — and the photographs do seem to suggest a close relationship between photographer and subject, one reason, perhaps, why the portraits have a special power.

In the Bonfils photos, the landscapes, the cityscapes and the ancient ruins, are bathed in the golden light memories bring to bear on places still dear to us in dreams. But it is the human face taht most clearly speaks to us in these photographs — faces of dignity, of grace, of serenity. Such protraits — an old man with a mandaf, for beating mattress stuffing into freshness, a woman posed with a cigarette; a man with great mustachioes, bedecked in the full gear of the tourist-guiding Dragoman, a girl of Bethlehem, dressed in her best embroidery — are, along with the landscapes and cityscapes, indeed a legacy of light.

Stairway to the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, Jerusalem.

A Dramatic Discovery

On October 14, 1970, two persons, thought to be young women, placed a bomb in Harvard's Center for International Affairs. Fortunately, no one was injured — more fortunately, the explosion unearthed 28,000 photographs of the Middle East from the 19th and early 20th centuries, including 800 by the Bonfils family, the subject of this article. The photographs had been stored in crimson boxes under the eaves of a fourth floor attic where they had long been overlooked.

In the years since 1974, Dr. Carney Gavin and his assistants have been able to patiently establish something of the history of the Bonfils family and the remarkable photographs they left as a legacy to mankind.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

According to the most recent statistics, the average age of the cars on U.S. highways and byways is seven years and rising. And the trend is bound to continue as long as auto prices make inflation look like the tortoise in Aesop's fable. Unfortunately, the hare isn't falling asleep.

The auto industry just cannot seem to understand that, given the choice between food and shelter and, transportaton, the average American will choose food and shelter every time. That's why Phillip and I are both driving cars that are ancient even by current standards. Phillip's Toyota will be nine years old in February, and my Chevy station wagon is 11.

Neither one is in good health, and we have seriously considered euthanasia. But so far one glance at a representative sticker price is enough to make us opt for transplants. Thus, our incontinent foreigner limps along with a new alternator, and our homegrown tank draws stares and laughter from car salesmen and mechanics.

Naturally, this makes me very defensive. I'll be the first to admit that the rubber around the doors is disintegrating, that her rust spots are not particularly attractive, that the insulation hanging from the inside of her hood is a nuisance, and that the creaking and groaning of her movable parts is positively painful. But were we ever to experience ground war in our vicinity, she'd be my first choice for shelter.

Phillip isn's as confident about my safety. "Neither car is reliable any more," he told me. "I really think that now is the time to sit down and see if we can fit at least one new car into our budget."

"At least one?" I croaked.

"At least."

I decided that if he wasn't attempting deadpan humor, he had lost his mind. "We can't fit a new frying pan into our budget, much less a car."

"There's no need to exaggerate."

"Sweetheart, if you think that's exaggeration, then you've lost touch with reality. I've been frying without a handle for two years."

"I knew that."

"I've been putting sheets on the bed upside-down because the seams at the top have come out. I have a refrigerator that molds. I have a washing machine that thinks it's a Solid Gold dancer. I'm the only thing around here that doesn't need a replacement, and I'm not too sure about that."

"I realize that we have a few problem areas around here, but I have to have a reliable means of getting to work."

"Have you thought about a bicycle?"

"Gail, I have a 45 minute commute."

"All the better for your health."

"Would you be realistic? I don't relish the thought of being stranded on the interstate after working late. And I don't want you and the kids to break down in the middle of nowhere."

"I broke down in the middle of nowhere two weeks after we moved to Tennessee."

"Would you be serious? If you can think of an alternative to a new car, just name it."

Set Dialogues To Seek Unity

NEW YORK (AP) — Representatives of Eastern Orthodox and Lutheran churches have begun theological dialogues, and expressed hope that the two traditions may find common ground for unity.

At the first session of 11 Lutheran and six Orthodox theologians, Archbishop Iakovos, primate of Greek Orthodoxy in North and South America, said the church is essentially one, but "we have failed to demonstrate this belief all these years."

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands that we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series, we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

Canada's emergence as a world bridge power came in the 1964 World Team Olympiad, when it reached the semifinals. Since then, spearheaded by the technical excellence of Sammy Kehela and the tenacity of Eric Murray, Canada has been a force to be reckoned with, although the breakup of the Murray-Kehela partnership has weakened the team.

Sammy Kehela has always been regarded as one of the world's great technicians. As a result, the considerable skill of Eric Murray has often been overlooked. Here's an example of his card-reading ability from the 1978 World Team Olympiad.

You don't preempt Murray out of the auction. When the bidding got back to him, he had no trouble reopening with four spades, despite the fact that he had, in effect, only 8 working points.

West led the three of hearts, and declarer was faced with a nearly impossible task. He was looking at a heart loser, one in diamonds and perhaps two in clubs. In addition, he had to worry about the queen of trumps.

East won the ace of hearts and shifted to a diamond. Declarer won in dummy with the king and paused to take stock. For his jump to four hearts on little in the way of high cards, it seemed probable that West would have distributional values, so Murray decided to play him for a singleton trump. Declarer cashed the king of trumps and continued with a spade to his ten. He had surmounted one hurdle when West discarded a heart on this trick.

Now Murray found a play that is so simple that it is easy to overlook. He cashed the ace of trumps and led a low diamond toward the eight on the table. If West hopped up with the queen, he would be end played in three suits. To avoid that, he followed low and East won the jack. East could not play a club without setting up a second club trick for declarer, so he returned a heart. Murray countered elegantly by sluffing a club. West won the queen, but the board's jack of hearts was set up to take care of the remaining club loser.

Note that Murray's play cost nothing. If diamonds were 3-3 and East could return a diamond, Murray could still rise with the ace and take a club discard on the 13th diamond.

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITY

It was your dream home until the furnace broke. Now it's a nightmare.

Imagine. You search everywhere to find the resale home of your dreams. The one with the right setting, the right floor plan, the right price. And you find it.

Then, six months after buying, the furnace breaks down, the plumbing starts to leak, or the water heater dies a cold death. Suddenly, your dream home becomes a nightmare of unexpected and costly repairs.

It doesn't have to be that way. As your local ERA Member Broker, we can help you buy a home that's protected against expensive surprises. We do it through our exclusive Home Buyers Protection Plan, the finest home warranty in America.

BPP covers all major working components of your home against repair or replacement for one full year after you assume ownership. Coverage includes heating systems, central air conditioning, plumbing, hot water heater, electrical systems, duct work, and all built-in appliances.

Should anything break down, one toll free call will start a repairman on his way to take care of the troublemaker. Even in the middle of the night if it's an emergency situation. And all you ever pay is a modest deductible charge.

So when you look for that dream home, be sure you look for the Buyers Protection Plan. Because with BPP, you can spend your money on the things you want to do instead of things you have to do.

Farmers Suffer Withdrawal Pains in Wake of EDB Ban

By KEN KLEIN
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — U.S. farmers — from peanut planters in Florida to pineapple growers in Hawaii — are suffering withdrawal pains after the ban on the effective but dangerous pesticide ethylene dibromide.

"The alternatives to EDB are more expensive and less effective," summed up Bruce Hawley, assistant director of the American Farm Bureau Federation in Washington.

Some farmers also worry that substitute pesticides could be in short supply.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency suspended EDB as a soil pesticide Sept. 30 after it was discovered in drinking water in Florida, California, Hawaii and Georgia.

The agency announced intent to cancel EDB as a grain fumigant, but that action has been delayed because opponents requested hearings.

In Washington, pressure was building on federal regulators to set a tolerance level for EDB in food because researchers in Florida found traces of the pesticide in national brands of grain products.

Florida's agriculture commissioner stopped sale of certain wheat and corn products containing 1 part per billion or more EDB, a standard recommended by State Health Officer Stephen King. King said EDB is a potent carcinogen.

If the federal government adopts the 1-part-per-billion threshold, perhaps 25 percent of America's stored grain would be considered unacceptable for market, said the Farm Bureau.

Emergency federal action against EDB and the prospect of further restrictions have crystallized a national dilemma: Consumers expect affordable food, but they don't want contamination from farm pesticides needed to control destructive insects.

Farmers say they're caught in the middle.

"You can't blame the farmer," said Florida Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner, dean of state farm officers. "They had no way of knowing EDB would create problems."

Before it was suspended three months ago, EDB was an unrestricted pesticide with widespread use in agriculture.

"It's been accepted for years, and then, all of a sudden, we get a cannon shot across the bow," said Jack Angell, a spokesman for the American Farm Bureau Federation in Park Ridge, Ill.

The national agricultural use of EDB was estimated to be 30 million pounds a year, mainly as a soil pesticide to control nematode rootworms and other pests, according to the Farm Bureau.

Since 1961, EDB was a key weapon in Florida's program to fight nematodes in citrus groves.

Now, the citrus industry must turn to other anti-nematode pesticides, such as Temik. However, Temik has been found in Florida drinking water, and it's already under state restrictions.

Fruit shippers can still use EDB as a post-harvest fumigant, but the federal government has proposed cancellation.

"We really don't have anywhere to turn to at this point," said Jim Emerson at Seald-Sweet, a major citrus exporter based at Tampa. "And we're under a directive from a foreign government, Japan, to certify that Florida citrus exports are insect free."

The citrus industry is exploring "cold storage" — lowering the temperature during shipments by sea — but the technique hasn't been perfected.

Grapefruit picked early in the season are susceptible to chill damage caused by cold storage treatments en route to Japan, said Emerson.

In Hawaii, the papaya industry is "working feverishly to come up with an alternative" for treating tropical fruit for export, said Lyle Wong, chief of the state Department of Argriculture's pesticide branch.

Researchers have suggested alternating hot and cold treatments in attempts to kill insect eggs and larvae, said Robert Souza, director of the Papaya Administrative Committee.

Another possible substitute to post-harvest pesticide fumigation is gamma radiation to kill fruit flies. Agriculture leaders admit that this process could produce emotional consumer resistance.

Meanwhile, Hawaiian pineapple growers have had to turn to an alternate soil pesticide known as Telone II in the wake of the suspension of EDB. However, it's not considered as effective, said Wong.

"Telone II is more expensive," said the Farm Bureau's Hawley, who questions its effectiveness in clay soils. "EDB was cheaper and more flexible because it worked under a variety of soil and climate conditions."

Further, Telone II could be hard to get, say farm experts in Florida and Alabama.

The EDB suspension won't have much impact in some states. For example, the Wyoming Department of Agriculture says the regulatory action had little or no impact because EDB had limited use in that state.

The Colorado Forest Service uses EDB in its fight against the mountain pine beetle that is killing trees on the Western Slope of the Rockies.

Tim Reid's New Look On 'Simon And Simon'

By Joe Haviland

In his new role as Downtown Brown on CBS' "Simon and Simon," Tim Reid has shed more than just the flashy threads of Venus Flytrap on "WKRP in Cincinatti."

"With Venus I was more flamboyant, wiry, had an ear pierced, long hair and flashy clothes," says Reid, who spent four years playing the ultra-cool, super hip radio deejay. "With the character of Downtown Brown, I wanted to be totally different, so I gained a little muscle weight, working out with weights (adding 20 pounds to his body weight and a total of 17 inches of muscle in his arms, torso and legs); I cut my hair shorter; and made the guy into a sort of tennis bum, a guy who wore sweats. He's not a great dresser, not that he can't be, he's not interested in that thing, he's interested in police work and he knows that he's going to be down in the dirt with his job, so he dresses accordingly."

In the series, Reid plays a no-nonsense, occasionally quick-tempered cop, who is a "loner, a one-man task force" who gets the job done even if it sometimes requires bending the law out of shape.

"I thought of taking his character from some of the old police story episodes where you see a guy who's totally dedicated to his job," says Reid. "My character is that type of guy."

Downtown Brown's arrangement with the detective team of A.J. (Jameson Parker) and Rick (Gerald McRaney) Simon is a supportive one: "You do for me, and I'll do for you." And that's just fine for Reid, who wanted his character to add something to the show and not fade into the background.

"I didn't want the character to be a sidekick," says Reid. "That was one of the things that worried me, at first, when considering the show. I wanted to be the guy who is involved in the story, so that when Downtown Brown comes in, he's got something to add to help keep the action of the story going.

"Downtown Brown plays on his own intuition," continues Reid. "Instinctively, he is a very good cop. We didn't want to make him a super cop. We didn't want to make him a guy who could make a bomb out of paper clips. We didn't want to make him a "Mission Impossible" type. We wanted him to be a guy who had done a lot of things, a man of many traits but master of none."

Tim Reid stars as the no-nonsense cop, Downtown Brown, on "Simon and Simon," airing Thursdays on CBS.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: I would like to know more about the actor who plays Boone on the series "Boone." Where could I write to him? DARLENE ZIMMERMAN, CONNELLY SPRINGS, N.C.

TO DARLENE IN CONNELLY SPRINGS: Tom Byrd was born in the Philippines on May 18. A natural for the role of aspiring country singer Boone Sawyer, Byrd's mother encouraged him to study guitar when he was seven. "I've always been a great lover of music," says Tom. He also sang in his church choir. Byrd attended Northwestern University where he performed in various college productions strumming his guitar. After appearing in several stage productions, he headed for California in 1981 where he landed guest starring spots in the TV series, "Facts of Life," "Quincy," "Laverne & Shirley" and "The Powers of Matthew Star." Yes ladies, he's still single! Tom resides in Hollywood, California, where he enjoys swimming and tossing a frisbee. The 6'2", 175-pound actor has brown hair and green eyes. Fans should write to him in c/o NBC-TV, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Ca., 91523.

DEAR MICHELE: I just saw the movie "The Outsiders" and I would like to some information on two of the actors. Could you tell me more about C. Thomas Howell, who played Ponyboy Curtis and Ralph Machio, who played Johnny Cade? KRYSTYNE BISER, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

TO KRYSTYNE IN FAYETTEVILLE: C. Thomas Howell was born December 7, in Los Angeles, California. The 16-year-old actor, who has light brown hair, recently portrayed Scott Morgan on the television series "Two Marriages," as well as starring in the film "The Outsiders." Howell has a featured role in the soon-to-be released movie "Tank," starring Shirley Jones and James Garner. Tom's parents are divorced and his father, Chris Howell, is a stuntman. The C. in his name stands for Christopher, his father's name. He lives with his mother and step father, Frank Ballow, a producer, in the San Fernando Valley. A former California Junior Rodeo Association Champion, Tom has five horses at home. In addition to caring for them, he also enjoys football, snow and water skiing, and riding his dirt bike.

Native New Yorker, Ralph Macchio is not only an actor, he is a dancer, having studied jazz and tap since childhood. During a dance performance when he was 16, he was discovered by a talent manager. His first screen appearances were on commercials, and on his first audition for a film role, he was given the starring part of Chooch in the feature film "Up the Academy." After landing the role of Jeremy on television's "Eight Is Enough," Ralph became a teen-age idol with young fans, a fact which often embarrasses him. He is an intense actor, whose ambition points in the direction of a Robert De Niro or Robert Duvall. He is currently appearing in the critically acclaimed feature film "The Survivors." In addition to acting, Ralph is a sports enthusiast who excells at hockey, which is his favorite sport.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

Comedian DON KNOTTS will be honored by his friends and colleagues at a celebration honoring his 35-years in show-business. During his long career he has been awarded five Emmys in the 'Best Supporting Actor' category. The cast of his current series, "Three's Company," JOHN RITTER, JOYCE DEWITT, PRISCILLA BARNES and RICHARD KLINE are the sponsors and hosts of the event which will be held Tuesday, Jan. 9 in Los Angeles.

Tributes and honors will shower DON — but, knowing JOHN RITTER — I am sure there will be some 'tricks along with the treats.'

JACKSON fans take heart! The JACKSON six are reuniting. A multimillion dollar deal has been set with PEPSI COLA, who will sponsor a USA tour for the group. However, there is a stipulation that the JACKSONS appear in a PEPSI TV commercial.

The last time the six JACKSONS recorded and toured together was in 1976.

MICHAEL JACKSON, the most famous of the brothers, was recently named the winner of this year's AWARD OF MERIT, and will be honored on the 11th annual presentation of "THE AMERICAN MUSIC AWARDS," which will be telecast live on Jan. 16.

SOAP OPERA WEEK

Hall signs for three; One more for Northrop

By Kimberly Redmond

Is it true that Deidre Hall and Wayne Northrop might be leaving "Days of Our Lives"? — M.F., Frostburg, Md.

At a recent New York City press conference it was announced that Miss Hall (Marlena Brady) had signed a new three-year contract with "DOOL." Northrop (Roman Brady), however, had only signed on for another year as Roman, admitting that he'd like to get back into nighttime TV (he was on "Dynasty" before coming to "DOOL") and film work.

Can you tell me something about Michael Zaslow, who portrays David Renaldi (Reynolds) on "One Life to Live"? — P.G., Rumford, Maine

Born in Inglewood, Calif., Zaslow grew up on the streets of New York. He appeared with the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera Company and in several Broadway plays, including "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof." On nighttime TV he had a recurring part in "Star Trek" and guested on several other series. He appeared briefly on "Search for Tomorrow" and then on "Guiding Light" as Roger Thorpe, which is to date his most memorable soap role. Zaslow's film credits include a co-starring role in the film "You Light Up My Life."

Can you tell me if pro golfer Tom Watson is any relation to Marshall Watson, who portrays Ernie Ross on "As The World Turns"? — M.S., Macomb, Ill.

Yes, Tom and Marshall are brothers and each is very supportive of the other's careers, with Marshall attending Tom's golf tourneys and Tom visiting Marshall at "ATWT."

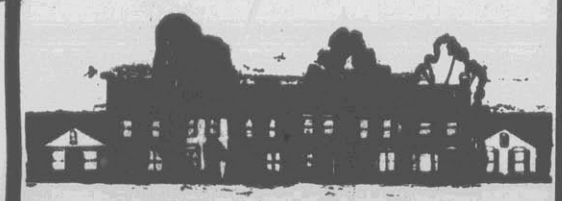

How many husbands has Audrey Hardy had on "General Hospital"? — P.S., Eastlake, Ohio

Moncrief Happy With Bucks

All-NBA guard Sidney Moncrief will be wearing a Milwaukee Bucks uniform through the 1987-88 season, thanks to renegotiating his contract recently. Moncrief, who signed without fanfare or threats of a holdout, can be seen on ESPN, Sunday, Jan. 8, as the Bucks take on the Detroit Pistons.

Moncrief has quietly and efficiently established himself as one of the best players in the NBA. The 6-4 guard with great leaping ability was named to the All-NBA first team last season, the second team the year before — the same placings he earned on the league's All-Defensive team. Last season, he was named the first winner of the NBA's Defensive Player of the Year award. He has also helped the Bucks to division titles in each of his four NBA seasons.

"Why, oh why, did I ever pass up that man?" moaned Dick Vitale, the ESPN commentator who as coach of the Detroit Pistons picked Greg Kelser ahead of Moncrief in the 1979 college draft. "I guess that's why I'm sitting here now instead of coaching."

Moncrief, who averaged 16.9 points per game in his four years at Arkansas, was the fifth player picked in 1979, and he has developed into one of the NBA's superstars.

"I think he's the best all-around player in basketball," says Bucks coach Don Nelson, "because he plays both ends of the court so well."

"We've known for the last couple of years that Sidney is definitely one of the best all-around basketball players in the NBA," says teammate Marques Johnson. "This year he's really showing it offensively. Before he always used to average 19 to 20 points per game but now he's out around 25 points per game plus doing the usually stellar defensive job."

If he's not a household name, it's only because Moncrief doesn't receive the media attention he would if he played in New York or Los Angeles. But that didn't stop Moncrief from signing a new 5-year deal to remain in Milwaukee.

"The key is being happy and to be in an environment where you're comfortable," he explained. "I have that in Milwaukee. Everybody would like to be recognized as one of the top basketball players in the league, but there are factors that help compensate for a lack of recognition. This is my type of town. The fans are fair and they're very dedicated to the sports program."

Body Building

Sandahl Bergman, Alexandra Paul, John Aprea and David Naughton have been cast in starring roles in "Getting Physical," a new motion picture-for-television for CBS.

"Getting Physical" explores the world of female body-building, tracing the story of a young woman who uses it as a means of self-defense after she is attacked by two men.

Franco Columbo, the former Mr. Olympia and Mr. Universe, is technical advisor and Rachael McLish, two-time Miss Olympia winner, and Lisa Lyons, a pioneer of female body-building, will make cameo appearances.

Sports Series Return To ABC

Three ABC Sports programs have returned to the air for another season — the "Professional Bowlers Tour" and "Wide World of Sports" and "SportsBeat." All three shows air on Saturday afternoons.

The "Professional Bowlers Tour" has been a finalist for the Emmy award for outstanding live sports series in each of the last two years. Over $2 million in prize money will be at stake during the series of winter tournaments, with a record weekly average of nearly $150,000.

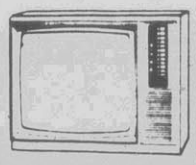

Among those vying for that prize money will be Marshall Holman, Tom Milton, Joe Barnardi, Mike Durbin, Steve Cook and Wayne Webb, the top six returning money winners from 1983.

Chris Schenkel, a four-time Sportscaster of the Year, and commentator Nelson Burton, Jr., an active PBA Hall of Fame bowler, will once again report the action.

"Wide World of Sports" will cover an array of winter sports in its first quarter, including the United States Figure Skating Championship, and World Cup Skiing.

Battles for both World Welterweight titles will be aired on "Wide World of Sports." Viewers will see WBC Champ Milton McCrory against challenger Milton Guest, and WBA champ Donald Curry take on challenger Marlon Starling.

ASK ME ABOUT TV

By Val Carew

On "The Fall Guy," who are Lee Majors' buddies and where can I write them? — A.F., Belmont, N.C.

Colt's (Majors) buddies include his cousin and "business partner," Howie Munson (Doug Barr), stunt woman Jodie (Heather Thomas) and bail bondswoman Terri (Markie Post). You can write to all of them in care of the series at 20th Century Fox Television, 10100 Pico Boulevard, Los Angeles, CA 90212.

What is the name of Michele Lee's (Karen Fairgate on "Knots Landing") ex-husband. Also has Howie Mandel of "St. Elsewhere" been on any TV comedy shows? — S.M., Trenton, N.J.

Michele is divorced from actor James Farentino. Howie Mandel has appeared on both comedy and talk shows. He is a regular on the syndicated show, "Make Me Laugh."

Is "Silver Spoons" off the air? — N.A., Yardley, Pa.

No. NBC's "Silver Spoons," starring Ricky Schroder, Joel Higgins and Erin Gray airs Saturday evenings.

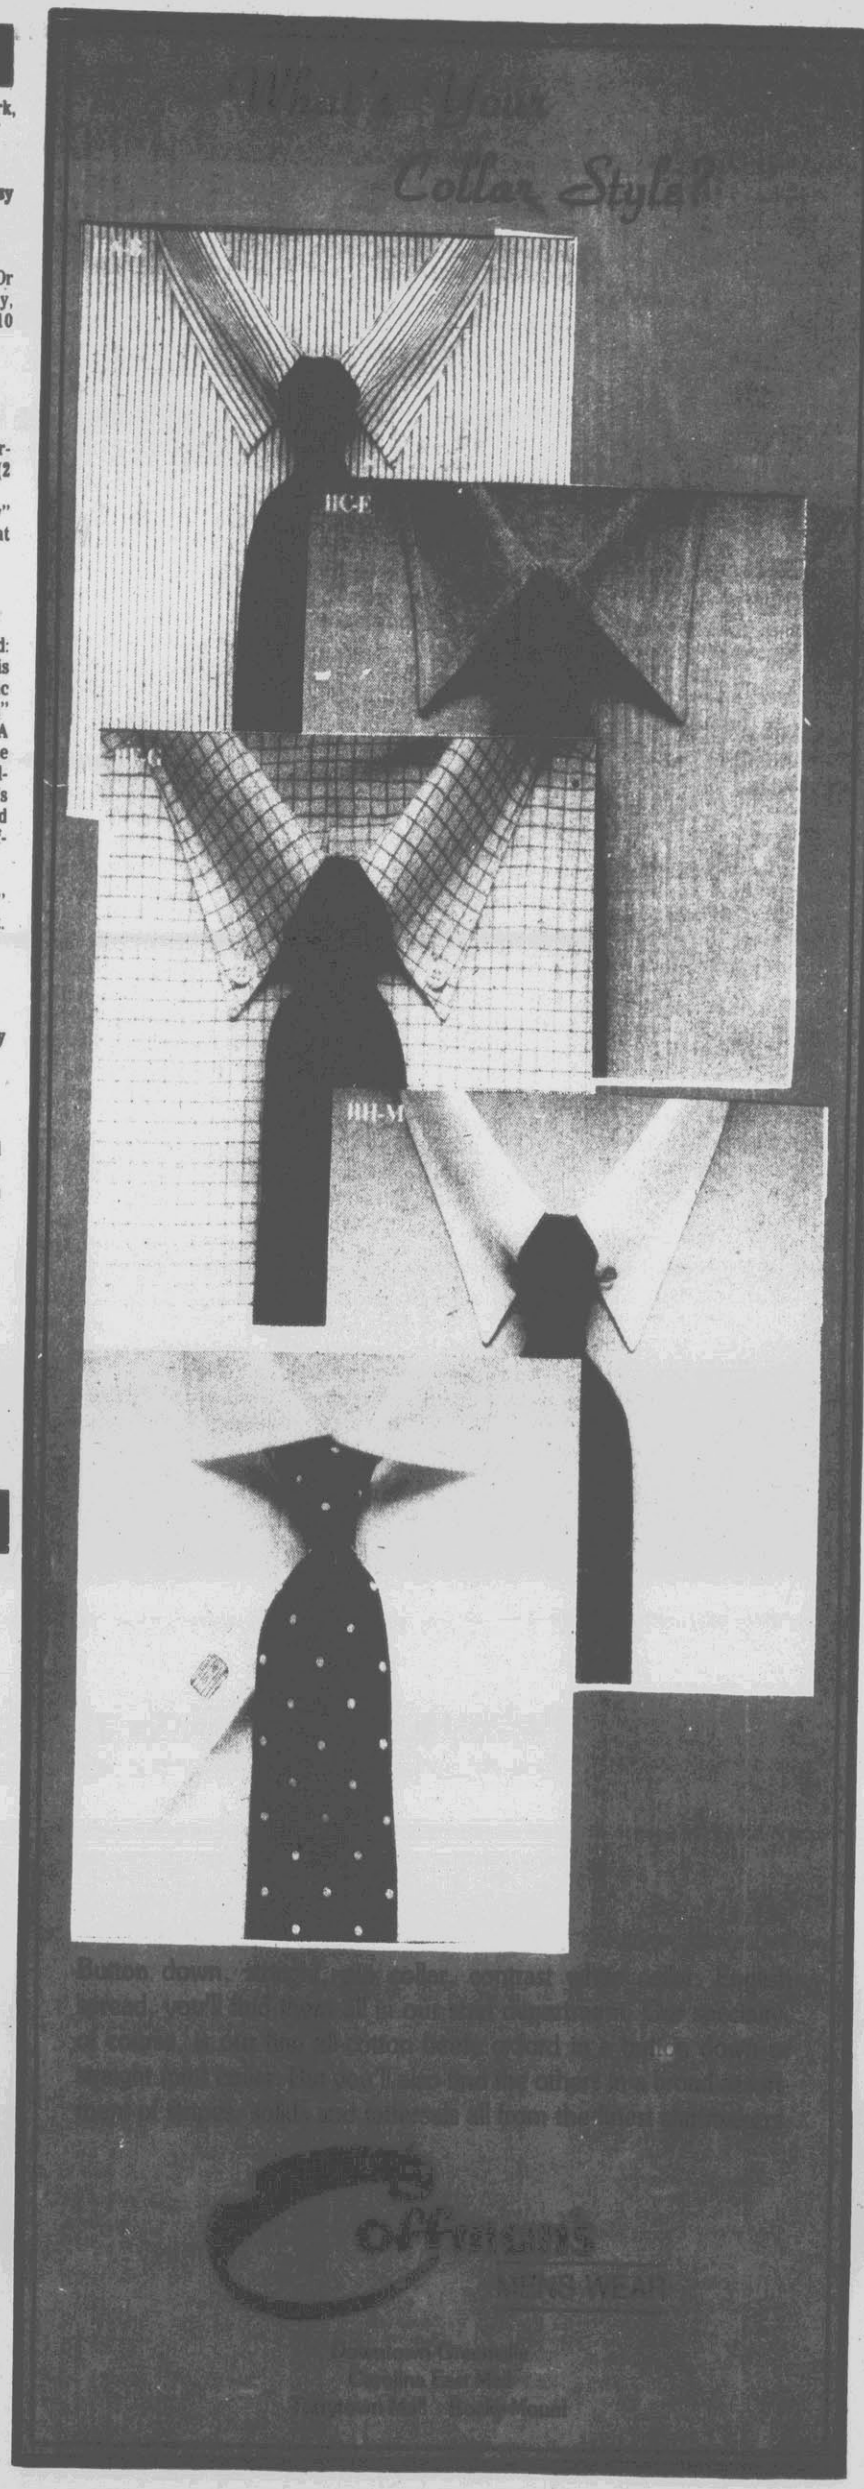

Please tell me what happened to "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers?" — R.B., Union, Mich.

The one bride and the seven brothers danced off into TV's Never-Never Land before the other brothers got a chance at wedded bliss.

Give it to me straight. Is the "The Greatest American Hero" coming back to TV? I really love William Katt, the series star. Where can I write to him? — L.S., Eagen, Minn.

I hope you can take this — the show will not be returning to TV. It was produced by Stephen Cannell Productions, which is now busy with "Hardcastle & McCormick" and "The A-Team." Write to Katt, marking the letter to be forwarded, in care of Stephen Cannell Productions, 7083 Hollywood Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90028.

Why you need the PROTECTION PLUS Hospital Plan

It's a well-known fact that the cost of hospital care continues to climb at an alarming rate. That's why most of us carry some form of health insurance—whether it be a group policy, major medical coverage or even Medicare—to share in the cost of a hospital stay.

But have you stopped to consider that as hospital charges go up, so does your share of the bill?

Most health policies pay only 80% of your hospital bill—and in years past, that may have been enough. But today, with the average cost of a trip to the hospital reaching over $1,900.00*, your share could be difficult to handle.

If you were just returning home from the hospital, would you be able to write a check for your share of the bill? If not, would you have to take money out of your savings? Or worse yet, would you have to look for help?

That's why we've designed the all-new PROTECTION PLUS Hospital Plan. The cash benefits you collect could mean the difference between getting through a financial crisis and having to look to your savings or elsewhere for help.

That's why we say:
We're here when you need us.

* American Hospital Association

This touching letter came from one of our policyowners recently and I'd like to share it with you.

Dr. Lempka
Chairman, Board of Directors

Physicians Mutual Insurance Company
Omaha, Nebraska

Gentlemen:

During the late afternoon hours of Monday, March 15, I mailed you a claim for my wife's hospitalization from mid-January to early February.

Yesterday afternoon our postman delivered a Physicians Mutual Insurance Company letter to our house. Coming this soon after my claim had been mailed, I assumed that your letter was a request for some additional information concerning my wife's chronic illness, and her latest hospitalization. However, when I opened the envelope, I was amazed to find it contained your claim settlement check, dated March 17!

Considering the time normally required for mail to travel between Texas and Nebraska, your claim settlement actions must have been accomplished the very same day my claim was received in your office! Although I have become accustomed to your usual prompt claims settlements, I would like everyone involved in processing this particular claim to know they have established a new record for "speedy settlements" for which Physicians Mutual Insurance Company can be proud. God Bless All!

Sincerely,
Lewis C. Williams, Jr.

Here's how your PROTECTION PLUS Hospital Plan helps you beat the rising cost of hospital care!

Pays you $50.00 a day, $1,500.00 a month!

You'll collect these cash benefits whenever you are hospitalized for a covered sickness or accident. In fact, you'll collect when your doctor places you in the hospital for any reason—even a simple check-up.

Pays you $75.00 a day, $2,250.00 a month for Cancer, Heart Attack

Your benefits increase 50% if you or any covered member of your family is hospitalized for cancer (including leukemia and Hodgkin's disease) or heart attack (acute myocardial infarction).

Pays you double benefits $200.00 a day—$6,000.00 a month for you and your spouse

Under the Husband-Wife or All-Family Plans, you'll collect double your regular benefits during the time you and your spouse are both in the hospital—due to the same or different accidents.

Pays cash benefits in addition to any other insurance

You'll collect benefits over and above any other insurance—including group policies, major medical, workers' compensation—even Medicare.

That's what makes your PROTECTION PLUS Hospital Plan so important—because many health policies pay only 80% of your hospital bill. This is the ideal way to get the cash you need to help cover the remaining costs.

Pays benefits directly to you

Your benefit check will go directly to you unless you tell us otherwise. The money is yours to spend as you wish—to help pay the hospital bill, the doctor's bill, or even household expenses.

You'll be in direct contact with us from the time you enroll—right up to when you receive your benefit check in the mail. You'll get fast, direct service everytime! Furthermore, your benefits are not subject to state or Federal income tax.

You get lifetime coverage and benefits

There is no limit to the number of days you can collect benefits. That means you'll be protected even if you're hospitalized for the rest of your life!

Pays maternity benefits, too

You're covered for normal childbirth when pregnancy occurs anytime after your policy is issued. And there's no added cost for this coverage!

We can't cancel your protection or raise your rates individually

No matter how old you become or how many claims you have, we GUARANTEE never to cancel or refuse to renew your PROTECTION PLUS Hospital Plan. Only you can cancel your coverage.

What's more, you can never be singled out for a rate increase. In fact, the only way we can raise your rates is if we do so for all policies like yours in the entire state. Your rate will not change when you move from one age group to another . . . even if your health changes.

Pays full benefits for all ages

Now you can protect your entire family with $50 a day benefits for all, regardless of age.

Since hospitals charge the same rate, we feel it's only fair that everyone collect equal benefits. So unlike some plans, this PROTECTION PLUS Hospital Plan pays full cash benefits for everyone.

Pays from the very first day

You'll collect cash benefits the FIRST DAY and EVERY day you're hospitalized for a covered sickness or accident.

You're covered in any hospital in the world, including federal and VA hospitals. However, nursing homes and convalescent, extended-care or self-care units of hospitals do not qualify.

Pre-existing conditions are not covered for the first year

Old health problems (those that became evident or were treated before the effective date of your policy) are not covered for the first year of your policy. But once that year is up, these pre-existing conditions are covered!

If you are 65 or over you will be covered for cancer, heart attack, stroke, hernia, disease or disorder of the prostate, tuberculosis, cataracts, emphysema, cirrhosis or diabetes if your hospital confinement commences more than six months after the effective date of your policy..

Reduced benefits for mental illness

Half benefits are paid for up to 30 days' confinement due to mental illness.

You can't be turned down!

We guarantee to issue your PROTECTION PLUS Hospital Plan (P510 Series) regardless of your age, health or family size. As soon as we receive your completed application, we will issue your policy and put it in force.

Your coverage begins immediately—even before your policy arrives in the mail.

Of course, we can issue only one policy to you on a guaranteed issue basis.

If you're already a Physicians Mutual policy owner and would like information about additional coverage available, please write for details.

RONSTADT: THE GAMBLE PAYS OFF BIG

A smash new album, different from anything she's ever done, mirrors changes in her life —and how she feels about herself.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

FROM THE "ASK" EDITORS

LOS ANGELES — George Burns will celebrate his 88th birthday on Jan. 20 by serenading 800 waitresses at Atlantic City's Bally Hotel. The bash is for women only, and that includes the reporters covering the cosmic event. Joked Burns: "I don't know if I can handle 800 women; three or four of them may have to come back the next day." He is already planning his 100th birthday at London's Palladium, a celebration slated to last for two weeks. Meanwhile, Burns will immerse himself in the movie Oh God! III, in which he'll play God and the devil. . . . It may only be a supporting role, but Jack Nicholson got paid in buckets — $1 million — for playing the inebriated ex-astronaut in Terms of Endearment. —Robert Windeler

WASHINGTON — Florida Gov. Bob Graham worked as a stagehand grip for a day on the set of Stick, the movie Burt Reynolds is directing in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. It wasn't admiration for Reynolds that gripped the Governor; he was simply making good on a campaign promise to work for one day at different occupations around the state. He began with the rest of the crew at 7 A.M. and, even at that uncivilized hour, took note of the long delays while cameras and shots were arranged. Remarked the Governor: "It's just like waiting for the legislature to act." . . . When Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor recently spoke at a dinner sponsored by the Women's Bar Association of the District of Columbia, no one expected the bonus of commentary from her husband, John, a Washington attorney who was on hand for the speech. He explained that, in marrying Sandra, he was following the judicious advice of his father, who encouraged wedlock with a woman who could produce income. Admittedly, Sandra's salary as a Justice ($96,700) is considerably more impressive than the sum she made on her first job after marriage — a newspaper delivery route. But, as Mr. O'Connor told the Women's Bar Association, it was a very sensible career move. "The route produced steady income, taught her humility, gave her regular exercise and kept her close to the news." —Kathleen Maxa and Jane Ottenberg

The O'Connors: tales of courtship.

Graham: Clowning with actress DeAnna Lund on the Stick set.

NEW YORK — For Doubleday editor Jackie Onassis it seems there's no such thing as a simple lunch out. She and some colleagues made a recent foray to a Manhattan restaurant called The Press Box, but the name should have been warning enough. By the time the check was paid, news of the celebrated diner was out, and a press conference formed outside the eatery. So the former First Lady made a swift exit through the back door, weaving her way around the restaurant's garbage cans. . . . Ice Pirates, M-G-M's new space fantasy, is supposed to include special effects never before projected on the silver screen. For the more down-to-earth, the love scenes between Robert Urich and Mary (Dallas) Crosby are vaunted as the steamiest ever filmed. . . . James Caan is the latest to join the ranks of celebrities penning grunt-and-stretch tomes. The book, tentatively titled James Caan's Workout Book, will be published by Simon & Schuster later this year. . . . Producers have signed former General Hospital knockout Janine Turner to play the role of Tom Byrd's girlfriend in the anemic NBC series, Boone, hoping that a new face and figure will attract viewers. —Anita Summer

MARY FRANN

co-star of Newhart

Did you know Bob Newhart before taking the role as his wife? —H.M., Wichita Falls, Tex.

I met him briefly at the network with the producers and writers in connection with the show, and again when we read together. When I got to know him better, his wacky sense of humor surprised me. He lapses into spontaneous humor if he's amused, or a monologue if he wants to be serious. One thing I especially appreciate: He's never too busy or too distant; he's always ready for you on a professional level.

KEVIN DOBSON

star of Knots Landing

Did you ever turn down any roles that you now wish you hadn't? —I.T.L., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

I rejected quite a few, but the only one I regret turning down was Magnum P.I. When I read the script, I didn't think it was right for me. I still think my inclination was correct. Now I see how much Tom Selleck does with the role; he was born to be a star. I also regret not being able to take part in the movie Princess Daisy. But I was already in Knots Landing. Shame — I missed going on location in Paris and London.

RONSTADT: THE GAMBLE PAYS OFF BIG

© Robert Maass/Photoreporters

Like many rock stars, Linda Ronstadt has made her share of headlines that have had little to do with music. Whether running off for a well-publicized 1979 African vacation with then-California Gov. Jerry Brown, or candidly admitting to "recreational" drug use, she's sometimes seemed the very picture of the lost soul. Yet recently she took a bold step in a different direction: At the risk of turning some rock fans off, she recorded What's New (Elektra/Asylum), a collection of pop standards arranged by orchestra leader Nelson Riddle, who worked for many years with Sinatra. At 37, has Ronstadt suddenly come of middle age? As well as her fans? Whatever the explanation, What's New has become her fastest-selling album ever. Her plans now include cutting a follow-up of oldies and a starring role as Mimi in a production of the opera La Bohème in New York City. Recently, over lunch at a Manhattan restaurant, Ronstadt talked about her music and her life with FAMILY WEEKLY Associate Editor Mary Ellin Bruns.

Bruns: I understand your father introduced you to the songs on your new album.
Ronstadt: He did. My father, Gilbert, is a wonderful crooner and also sings Mexican music really well [he is part Mexican]; he actually made a living at it at some point, but then he went back to work at my grandfather's hardware store, because that made more sense if you wanted to eat. I remember my father buying my older sister, Suzi, a Billie Holiday record, and he used to sing "What'll I Do" and "Someone to Watch Over Me."

Q: What else do you remember about the songs?
Ronstadt: I remember one time I was out driving and heard Frank Sinatra singing "What's New" on the radio, and I almost drove off the road. I said, "That's the most beautiful song I've ever heard. I'm just dying to learn that." I've always loved those songs. It's just that I never quite had the nerve to record them. I mean, they're very, very difficult. You can't cheat. You have to know what you're doing.

Q: So you're happy with the way What's New turned out?
Ronstadt: Yes, I'm very proud of it. I'm more proud of it than of any album I've ever made. I don't listen to my records just to listen to them; I don't think very many singers do that. If they do, maybe there's something wrong with them, a strange kind of narcissism. To hear one of my records just drives me crazy; I have to put my fingers in my ears. But this record actually didn't bother me. I had to listen to it a lot and it didn't make me throw up, so I know that's a good sign.

Q: Was your father helpful on the project?
Ronstadt: Oh extremely, because he's so musical and talented that I value his opinion. He's not very generous with his compliments, which is not to say he's stingy, but he just doesn't tell you he likes something unless he does, and when he does tell me he likes something, I'm really pleased. He heard the album in all of its stages: I played it over the phone for him. I'd call him and say, "I got the orchestra in here today. Listen to this." Then I'd crank it up. The first time he heard it, he went, "Boy, you've been listening to Billie Holiday," and I went, "Uh-oh, I'd better tone it down," because I didn't want to copy too much. I've always liked singing with my father and with my brothers and sisters.

Q: Do you still do that?
Ronstadt: Every time the family gathers in Tucson [Ariz.], we sing together, and the new ones are coming up, too, my sister's and my brother's kids. My older brother Peter's little girl has just got a beautiful voice, and the last time I was home, she became the new addition to the family harmony configurations. My older brother and his daughter and I were singing trios, and it was just great. My younger brother, Mikey, sings and runs the family hardware store now and invents things. My maternal grandfather was also an inventor.

Q: What was he like?
Ronstadt: He used to hide under the table and grab our toes; I was terrified of him. He was such a nice man, but he was very explosive and he'd get really excited and carried away. He used to lock himself in the basement for a week at a time. My grandmother would bring him his meals and he'd be down there inventing the grease gun or something like that. He was one of the pioneers in developing latex. I remember the latex: We used to tie each other up with it — you couldn't get out no matter what. It cut the circulation off. He tried to invent runproof stockings one time by dipping them in rubber and baking them in an oven. And my mother [Ruthmary] would have to go to school in these beautiful silk stockings that had been baked into this smelly thing that wouldn't run and looked kind of like you had an artificial leg — my poor mom!

Ronstadt (center) at a 1983 Radio City Music Hall concert: the new direction.

Gary Gershoff © Retna Ltd.

Q: What sort of person was she?
Ronstadt: Oh, she was wonderful. [She died two years ago.] All she hoped for, I think, was that one of her four children would be a scholar, and we're not scholars. She taught us all to read before we went to school — thank goodness. We never would have learned otherwise. My older brother was the only one who graduated from high school even. He's chief of police in Tuc-son. The rest of us are just hopeless. And Mom was always interested in everything but herself. She was never vain, although she was very attractive when she was younger. She liked to learn about bugs; she wanted to be a forest ranger. It makes me kind of sad. I saw a thing on television, a profile of some girl forest ranger who lives up in the Yukon somewhere. I thought how my mother would have liked doing that, but instead she got us. My dad was such a cowboy — a real cowboy, but one who was cute and educated and could read and sing. Well, my mother never had a chance once she saw him. He roped her, she was snagged and she didn't get to be a forest ranger because she was wrangling children.

Q: Do you think your siblings ever envy your way of life?
Ronstadt: My little brother was a professional musician for a while, and he does a lot of recording in Tucson now. I think he has a much better time in the music business than I do, because he's got all the comforts of living near his family in the place where he grew up, and he gets to tinker and putter with music. He doesn't care whether he's in the greater part of the world of the music business.

Q: Do you envy your siblings' settled, family-oriented lives?
Ronstadt: I do sometimes, but I would never have been happy like that; I was too restless. I was restless when I was born: I came out of the womb saying, "When's the next bus? When's the next event? What are we going to do now?"

Q: Do you remember singing as a toddler?
Ronstadt: The first words that I was able to muster out of my mouth were those asking my mother and father to play their instruments — my father to play his guitar and my mother to play her ukulele. I always sang, I sang harmonies. I was only 3. My brother taught me how to do it. He said, "Listen to this. This is the harmony." I was singing the melody, but he said, "This is the harmony. Put that in." I went, "Oh, wow, that's great. Is this how you do it?" Then I could sing the harmony.

Q: What was school like?
Ronstadt: Sometimes it was nice and sometimes it was horrible. One of the schools I went to was never pleasant, and then I went to another school for a year. It had a different order of nuns that were a little bit better educated, and that was really great. That's my one good memory of what school could be if you really liked it. I remember everything from that year, and that was fifth grade. I remember the report I did on the Middle Ages. I remember all my book reports. Everything was fun all of a sudden, but then, for some reason — I think it had to do with some strange kind of loyalty to my best friend, whom I had left back at the other school — I went back to the first school and was promptly miserable again, I mean miserable. It was really an unpleasant experience, that school was.

Q: What about high school?
Ronstadt: I didn't like high school. I went at a time when Tucson was experiencing a real boom-town mentality, and there were a lot of weirdo East Coasters moving in. And it was a pretty racy high school; the social thing was very heavy. I never really was very good at being a socialite. I remember high school as being a tremendous amount of pressure, social pressure.

Q: To be cool?
Ronstadt: Yeah, and I remember not wanting to have to cater to it.

Q: What did "cool" people do?
Ronstadt: They wore Capezio shoes and lambswool sweaters and went to all the football games and got really emotional about it. I could never really get behind that idea of getting so hysterical about the football team. And I wasn't learning. It was frustrating.

Q: Did being so close to your family make it hard to leave home?
Ronstadt: It was very hard, and I remember I just did it all in one day. I just said, "I have to go." They weren't mean about it or anything like that, they were sad. My mother was very worried. I was 17.

Q: At the beginning of your career, you were romantically involved with some of your producers. Did that cause problems?
Ronstadt: It really didn't. It's just that people go, "Oh, you know, she's having an affair with the producer." I did very little of that compared to people who marry their managers and stuff like that. The fact remains that those are the people you meet and with whom you have the greatest amount in common. Some fans wonder why movie stars marry movie stars. Well, they meet each other on location. It would have been a little weird for me to have an affair with my dentist, who was probably the only other human being I saw at the time. I didn't have a lot in common with my dentist.

Q: Is it hard adjusting to celebrity?
Ronstadt: Yeah, because your friends say you've changed, but really they've changed. Sometimes they treat you with more deference, and you're indulged in ways that aren't good; and sometimes they treat you with reverse deference and give you a hard time.

Q: Did you ever think, "I can't live up to other people's expectations of me"?
Ronstadt: Oh yeah, I used to think I couldn't live up to them. I couldn't understand why in the world people bought tickets to my concerts.

Q: Is there anything difficult about being a woman in a business dominated by men?
Ronstadt: The world is a business dominated by men. I think that if you're good and reasonable in the way you conduct yourself, you will do well; and if you're not good and unreasonable in the way you conduct yourself, you will have trouble no matter what sex you are.

1983 Annie Leibovitz/Contact Press Images

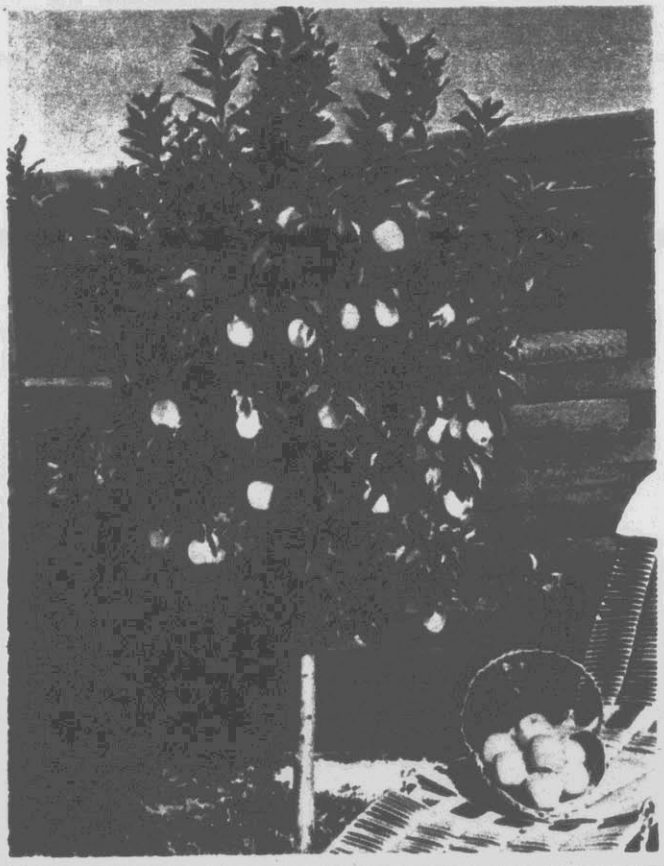

Q: Touring as much as you do must get rough sometimes. What is it like to be on the road?
Ronstadt: The road is hard; it's not a really healthy place to be. I need a lot of exercise on the road. I run and I go to the gym — you have to do it. Half the band goes to the gym, the other half goes to the bar. I'm with the gym half: I take good care of myself.

Q: Does it get lonely?
Ronstadt: It does. It gets boring, too, excruciatingly boring. I started studying languages so I'd have something to do.

Q: Do you still get stagefright?
Ronstadt: Always. I think everybody does, whether they admit it or not. My

Q: You said once that domestic bliss was the highest form of happiness? Do you still feel that way?
Ronstadt: I'm not sure. I'm not saying that it's better than anything else. It is a form of emotional high. So is singing, so is having a rich life and so is not being in a trap. Not being in a trap is a very advanced form of domestic bliss.

Q: You've never married. Does being a musician get in the way of forming lasting relationships?
Ronstadt: Maybe it does, but only because choice is the enemy of commitment. And I don't know that other people's marriages last so well when they're staying home. I think marriage is something invented by human beings. It's not a biological institution.

Q: Does it bother you to have the press constantly scrutinizing your love life?
Ronstadt: I think it's stupid. I think, "Who cares?" They don't get it right 95 percent of the time. It's totally beside the point.

Q: Did it annoy you that the media talked about Linda Ronstadt and Mick Jagger, Linda Ronstadt and Jerry —
Ronstadt: I never had a romance with Mick Jagger. You know what I mean? He's a friend of mine; we used to play music together sometimes; I sang with him on stage once.

Q: One music critic said that no matter how much your songs deal with vulnerability, you seem to be a strong person.
Ronstadt: Strong doesn't make you not vulnerable. Sometimes weakness makes you less vulnerable. I was always kind of strong-minded, even when I was 3 years old. I wasn't exactly the kind of person you tried to boss around. I was not inclined to boss other people around, but I was not inclined to be bossed either. And there was nobody to boss me, really: I grew up in the desert.

Q: Where is home for you now?
Ronstadt: I have places in New York City and Los Angeles.

Q: Do you prefer one to the other?
Ronstadt: I don't like either one.

Q: Where would you like to live?
Ronstadt: Nairobi, maybe. Yeah — it felt like home when I was there. I mean, I can't live in Nairobi — they're having a revolution every two or three minutes — but off the top of my head, I would say Nairobi. If you ask me next week, I might say something else.

Q: Do you feel more comfortable with celebrity now?
Ronstadt: I don't think anybody ever gets used to it, but I've learned more sophisticated ways to cope with it. You just learn to do things more quietly.

Q: Are you still restless?
Ronstadt: Yes, but I'm not unhappy, and I enjoy my work. I think there are two major requisites for not being a totally miserable human being, and the first one — absolutely the first one — is to like your work, whatever it is. The other thing is to have nice people to work with. If those two things are O.K. in your life, you've got about 99 percent of it licked. FW

California Millionaire Wants To Share The Wealth

You think times are tough and you've got problems?

Well, I remember when a bank turned me down for a $200 loan. Now I lend money to the bank — Certificates of Deposit at $100,000 a crack.

I remember the day a car dealer got a little nervous because I was a couple of months behind in my payments — and repossessed my car. Now I own a Rolls Royce. I paid for it in full — with cash.

I remember the day my wife phoned me, crying, because the landlord had shown up at the house, demanding his rent — and we didn't have the money to pay it.

Now we own five homes. Two are on the oceanfront in California (I use one as my office). One is a lakefront "cabin" in Washington (that's where we spend the whole summer — loafing, fishing, swimming, and sailing). One is a condominium on a sunny beach in Mexico. And one is snuggled right on the best beach of the best island in Hawaii — Maui.

Right now I could sell all this property, pay off the mortgages, and — without touching any of my other investments — walk away with over $750,000 in cash. But I don't want to sell, because I don't think of my homes as "investments." I've got other real estate — and stocks, bonds, and cash in the bank — for that.

I remember when I lost my job. Because I was head over heels in debt, my lawyer told me the only thing I could do was declare bankruptcy. He was wrong. I paid off every dime.

Now, I have a million dollar line of credit; but I still don't have a job. Instead, I get up every weekday morning and decide whether I want to go to work or not. Sometimes I do — for 5 or 6 hours. But about half the time, I decide to read, go for a walk, sail my boat, swim, or ride my bike.

I know what it's like to be broke. And I know what it's like to have everything you want. And I know that you — like me — can decide which one it's going to be. It's really as easy as that. That's why I call it "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches."

So I'm going to ask you to send me something I don't need: money. Ten dollars to be exact. Why? Because I want you to pay attention. And I figure that if you've got $10 invested, you'll look over what I send you and decide whether to send it back...or keep it. And I don't want you to keep it unless you agree that it's worth at least a hundred times what you invested.

Is the material "worth" $10? No — if you think of it as paper and ink. But that's not what I'm selling. What I am selling is information. More information than I give when I'm paid $1000 as a guest speaker. More information than I give in a one-hour consultation for $300.

But you're really not risking anything. Because first, I don't want you to send me any money — at least none that I can use. Instead, as a token of your sincerity, send in your check or money order and postdate it for six weeks from today. You see, it's not really money because it's not negotiable — besides, I won't even touch it for six weeks anyway.

In this way you'll have plenty of time to receive my material, look it over, try it out and prove to yourself that everything I am telling you is true.

I know what you're thinking: "He got rich telling people how to get rich." The truth is — and this is very important — the year before I shared "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches," my net income was $216,646. And what I'll send you tells just how I made that kind of money...working "part time"...a few hours a day...about 8 months out of the year.

It doesn't require "education." I'm a high school graduate.

It doesn't require "capital." Remember I was up to my neck in debt when I started.

It doesn't require "luck." I've had more than my share. But I'm not promising you that you'll make as much money as I have. And you may do better. I personally know one man who used these principles, worked hard, and made 11 million dollars in 8 years. But money isn't everything.

It doesn't require "talent." Just enough brains to know what to look for. And I'll tell you that.

It doesn't require "youth." One woman I worked with is over 70. She's travelled the world over, making all the money she needs, doing only what I taught her.

It doesn't require "experience." A widow in Chicago has been averaging $25,000 a year for the past 5 years, using my methods.

What does it require? Belief. Enough to take a chance. Enough to absorb what I'll send you. Enough to put the principles into action. If you do just that — nothing more, nothing less — the results will be hard to believe. Remember — I guarantee it.

You don't have to give up your job. But you may soon be making so much money that you'll be able to. Once again — I guarantee it.

I know you're skeptical. Well, here are some comments from other people. (Initials have been used to protect the writer's privacy. The originals are in my files.) I'm sure that, like you, these people didn't believe me either when they clipped the coupon. Guess they figured that, since I wasn't going to deposit their checks for six weeks, they had nothing to lose.

They were right.

'Made $50,000 just fooling around'

"In February 1974 you sent me (for ten bucks) your Lazy Man's Way to Riches. Since then I have made approximately 50 grand ($50,000) just fooling around on the basis of your advice. You see, I really am lazy — otherwise I could have made 50 million! Thank you!"

R. McK., Atlanta, GA

"...received $24,000.00 in the mail the last 45 days.

E.G.N., Matewan, WV

Made enough to retire at 41

"If it hadn't happened to me, I wouldn't have believed it...A few years ago, I had nothing to lose. I was unemployed and broke. I didn't even own a car and I lived in a cheap apartment. My total assets were half of a Ducati Motorcycle, and my liabilities could be read on my BankAmericard statement.

"Now, thanks to you and the 'Lazy Man's' program, I have made enough money (at age 41) to retire in style. Let me assure you that I have not 'come into' any money by inheritance or marriage or by any other means except through the practicing of your program..."

R.A., Huntington Beach, CA

From $50 to $565 per week

"...when I sent for your (Lazy Man's Way to Riches), I was delivering the L.A. Times for $50 per week...Now...I earn an average of $565 per week, have $7,000 in the bank and a condominium that's worth $85,000..."

J.N., Culver City, CA

'There's no stopping me'

"Since I've got your (Lazy Man's Way to Riches) in July, I've started 4 companies...there's no stopping me and I'm so high I need chains to keep me on the ground."

M.T., Portland, OR

'Wow, it does work!'

"Oddly enough, I purchased Lazy Man's Way to Riches some six months ago, or so, read it...and really did nothing about it. Then, about three weeks ago, when I was really getting desperate about my financial situation, I remembered it, re-read it, studied it, and this time, put it to work and WOW, it does work! Doesn't take much time, either...I guess some of us just have to be at a severe point of desperation before we overcome the ultimate laziness, procrastination."

J.K., Anaheim, CA

Made $70,000

"A $70,000 thanks to you for writing The Lazy Man's Way to Riches. That's how much I've made...

"I use this extra income for all of the good things in life, exotic vacations, classic automobiles, etc. Soon I hope to make enough to quit my regular job and devote full time to making money the easy way..."

D.R., Newport Beach, CA

$260,000 in eleven months

"Two years ago, I mailed you ten dollars in sheer desperation for a better life...One year ago, just out of the blue sky, a man called and offered me a partnership...I grossed over $260,000 cash business in eleven months. You are a God sent miracle to me."

B.F., Pascagoula, MS

'Steadily upward ever since'

"I ordered Lazy Man's Way to Riches in June...by September, my career was launched and has gone steadily upward ever since."

Mrs. B.A., Walnut Creek, CA

$7,000 in five days

"Last Monday I used what I learned on page 83 to make $7,000. It took me all week to do it, but that's not bad for five days' work."

M.D., Topeka, KS

What I'm saying is probably contrary to what you've heard from your friends, your family, your teachers, and maybe everyone else you know.

I can only ask you one question.

How many of them are millionaires?

So it's up to you.

Six weeks from today, you can be nothing more than a little older — or you can be on your way to getting rich. You decide.

The wisest man I ever knew told me something I never forgot: "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money."

Don't take as long as I did to find out he was right.

I'll prove it to you, if you'll send in the coupon now. I'm not asking you to "believe" me. Just try it. If I'm wrong, all you've lost is a couple of minutes and a postage stamp. But what if I'm right?

Some have called it a Miracle. Some have called it Magic. You'll call it "The Secret of the Ages."

As for me, I thank God that before he died Millionaire Joe Karbo left, for all to share, the secret of "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches." The above story, which is in his own words, is his gift to you.

Because of the nature of this special offering, we can guarantee delivery only to the readers of this publication who respond within the next 10 days.

After that date, orders will be filled on a "first come, first served" basis as long as supplies last.

To order, write your name and address on the coupon and send it with your $10 today.

Remember, the only way to guarantee prompt delivery is to respond today.

If you have any questions, you may call us at (714) 898-4357 during normal business hours. Make your check or money order payable to Financial Publishers.

PROOF!

Don't take my word for it. These are excerpts from articles in newspapers and magazines:

Time:
He only works half the year in his stunning office on California's Sunset Beach, and even when he's there he puts in short hours...In other words, Joe Karbo...is the prototype for..."The Lazy Man's Way to Riches."

Money:
Joe does more than dwell on personal problems; he solves them
Which is a nice change: Karbo almost went bankrupt back in '62...

Boston Herald-American:
The book has drawn hundreds of letters from persons who have profited by it...

Los Angeles Herald-Examiner:
"Going broke was the best thing that ever happened to me," explains Joe Karbo who went from one business trouble to a million-dollar business fortune...

Forbes:
After bouncing around show biz, advertising, and real estate, he made his fortune...$250,000.

Money Making Opportunities:
Maybe Joe Karbo has the secret. Don't you think you owe it to yourself to find out what it is all about?...I just finished it — and I'm off on a vacation myself. Get the idea?

The Boston Globe:
Jay Haws of Chico, Cal., said the pep talk...in "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches" has "changed my life," and upped his freelance graphic designer income from $2000 to $30,000 annually.
"I'm not rich yet," said Haws, "but I see the light at the end of the tunnel...It gave me the swift kick in the pants that I needed."

Long Beach Independent:
He's programmed the path to riches for the lazy man.

The Kansas City Star:
He prints statements like "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money." He should have added that too many people these days are too busy earning a living to do any living.

Sworn Statement:
"On the basis of my professional relationship as his accountant, I certify that Mr. Karbo's net worth is more than one million dollars."

But now Franklin Heirloom Glass has created just such a collection for you—25 original glass miniatures crafted exclusively for this collection by master glassmakers from around the world.

There's a sculptured pale green vase in the jade-like glass prized by the ancient Chinese. A many-faceted paperweight with the rich gleam of Bavarian-style lead glass crystal. A delicate lampwork unicorn formed by a steady hand shaping glass over a white-hot jet of flame. A sparkling dome of brightly-colored millefiore, its tiny rods of glass magically transformed into a field of flowers.

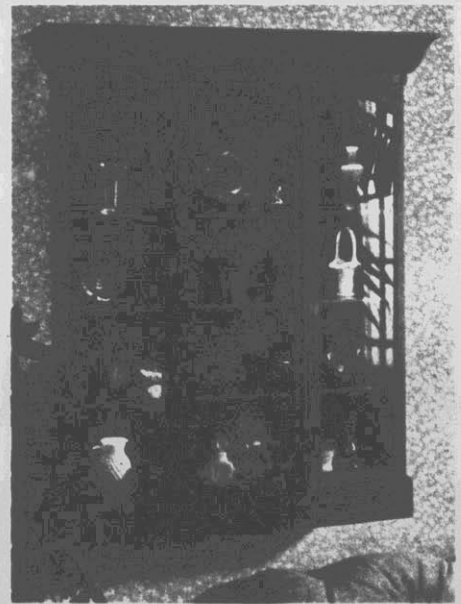

Here is glass that looks as though it's carved from tortoise shell. Cranberry glass with a special reddish tone that can only be achieved with pure 24 karat gold. Opal glass ... amethyst glass ... ice glass ... and many other varieties. And all have been fashioned into wonderfully detailed miniatures you can display with pride in their own curio cabinet—provided to you at no added cost.

Together the Curio Cabinet Glass Miniatures form a truly remarkable collection. One you will cherish ... and that your children will someday treasure as an heirloom.

GREEN PEPPERS STUFFED WITH MEDITERRANEAN RICE

1 cup converted white rice
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1½ teaspoons salt, or to taste
1 medium tomato, peeled and chopped
6 green onions, chopped
⅓ cup chopped, pitted ripe olives
1 clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons olive or vegetable oil
6 medium-size green peppers
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

1. In medium saucepan, bring water to boil. Add rice, butter and 1 teaspoon salt. Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes. Remove from heat and let stand covered until all water is absorbed, about 5 minutes.

2. While rice is cooking, combine tomato, green onions, olives, garlic, oil and remaining ½ teaspoon salt; mix well.

3. Cut tops off green peppers, remove seeds and core. Scallop edges with paring knife. In about 4 cups of boiling water, parboil green peppers until crisp-tender, about 5 minutes. Drain well.

4. Stir tomato mixture into hot cooked rice. Fill peppers with this mixture, using about ⅔ cup for each and mounding high. Sprinkle lightly with Parmesan cheese. Serve hot or at room temperature.

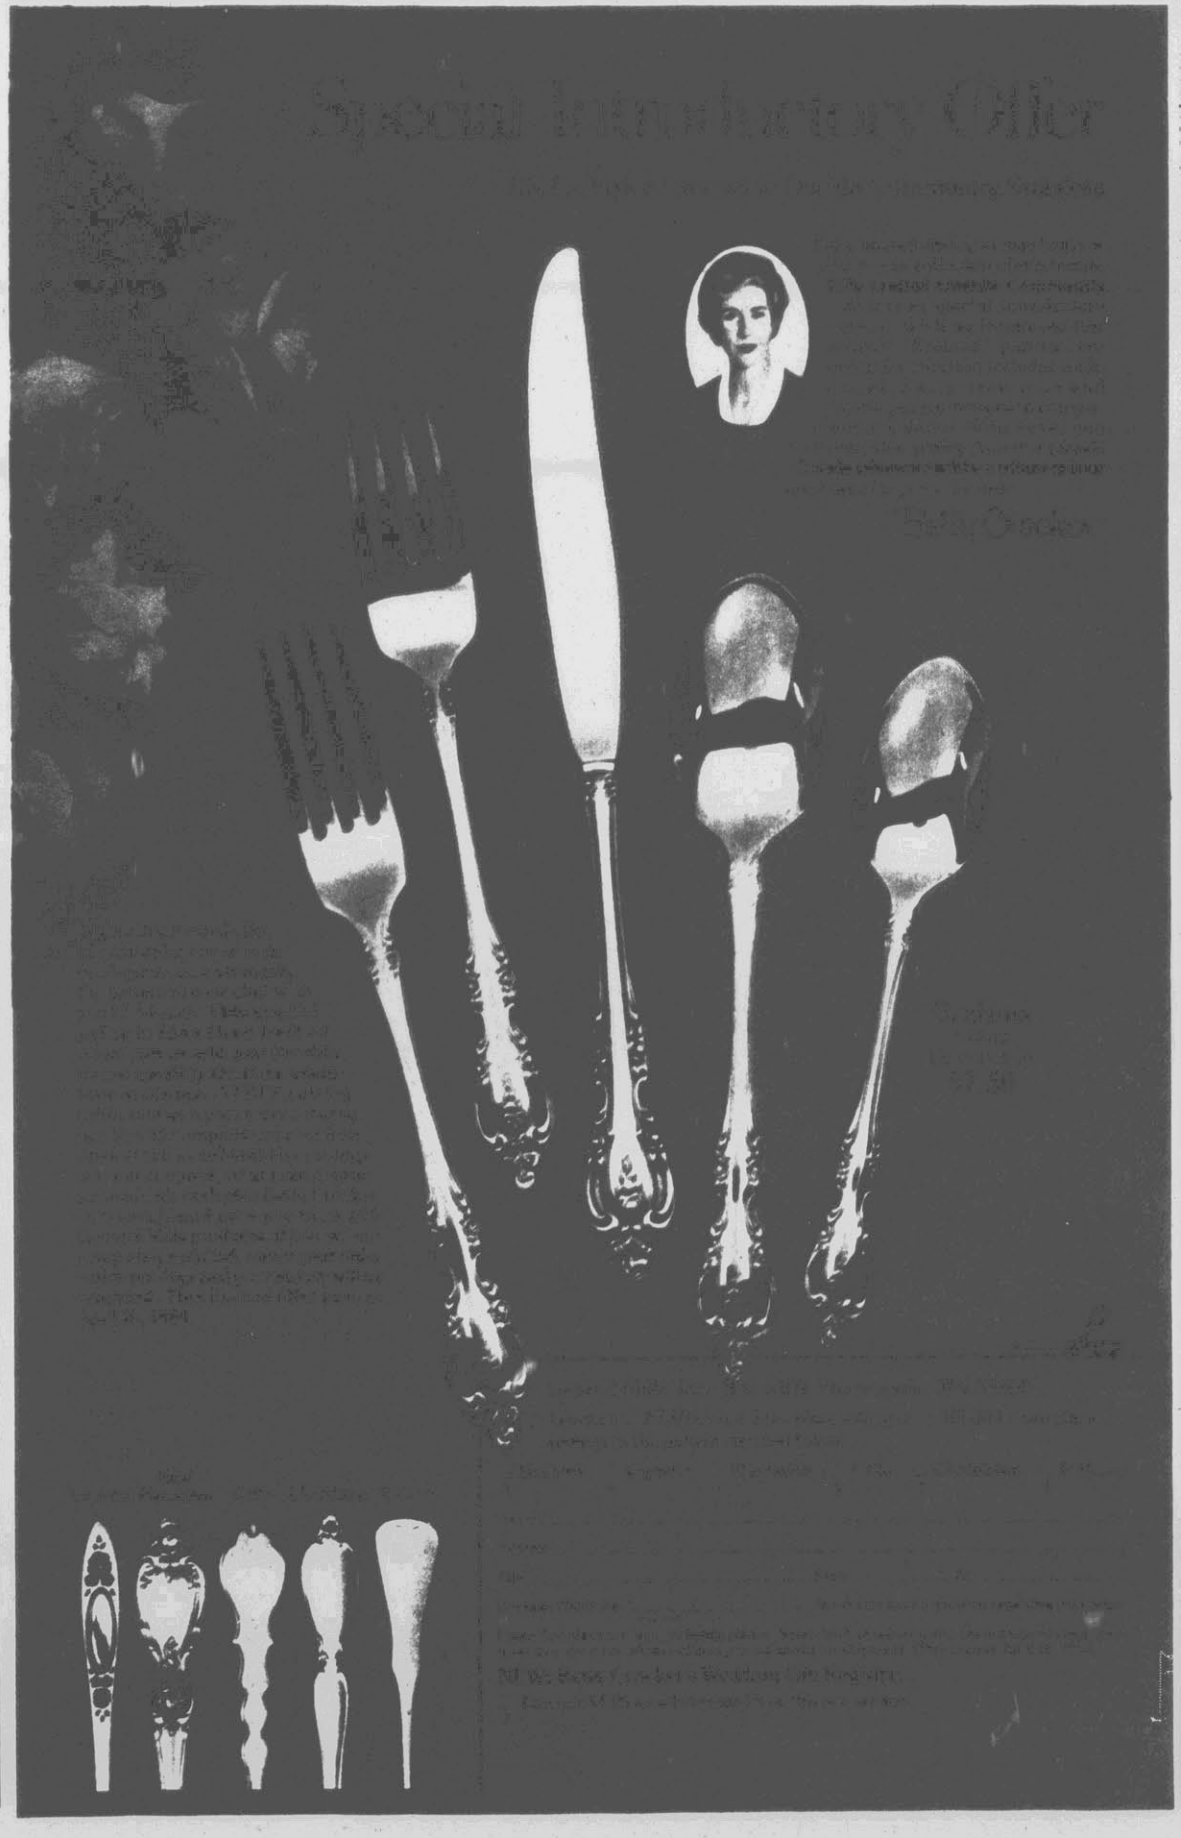

Makes 6 servings

Note: This recipe can be prepared ahead, refrigerated and served cold. To serve hot, cover and heat in 400° oven for 20 to 30 minutes until heated through.

GOLDEN VENETIAN FISH

1 lb. boneless fish fillets (sole, halibut or snapper)
3 tablespoons flour
Vegetable oil for frying
2 tablespoons olive or vegetable oil
2 medium onions, sliced ½-inch thick and separated into rings
1 large clove garlic, minced
1 cup white wine vinegar
1 cup water
½ cup golden raisins
1 bay leaf
½ teaspoon salt, or to taste
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
2 tablespoons toasted pine nuts
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

1. Cut fish into 1½-inch pieces. Roll in flour to coat. In large skillet, heat ½-inch depth of oil over medium-high heat. Fry fish pieces in single layer, turning once, until fish is opaque and surfaces are lightly browned. Drain on paper toweling, then arrange in single layer in shallow dish.

2. In large skillet, heat the 2 tablespoons oil over medium heat. Add onions and garlic; sauté 3 minutes. Add remaining ingredients except nuts and parsley. Increase heat to high; cook uncovered for about 15 minutes, to reduce liquid by one-fourth.

3. Pour reduced broth over fish and sprinkle with pine nuts. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate 8 to 12 hours.

4. To serve: Bring to room temperature. Place portions on individual plates, spoon some of the liquid over each serving and sprinkle with parsley.

5. This is an excellent dish as a first course, to serve with white wine in your living room before guests are seated at dinner.

Makes 6 to 8 appetizer servings, or 4 main-dish servings

8 whole, large chicken breasts, split, skinned and boned
¼ cup olive oil
½ cup lemon juice
¼ cup finely chopped parsley
1 teaspoon oregano leaves
1 teaspoon salt, or to taste
½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
Bouquet of parsley sprigs

1. Prepare chicken breasts for marinating.

2. In shallow glass, porcelain or stainless pan, combine olive oil, lemon juice, parsley, oregano, salt and pepper; stir to mix.

3. Arrange chicken in marinade; turn to coat both sides. Cover and place in refrigerator for a few hours or a day to marinate.

4. Just before serving, place drained chicken breasts on rack and grill 3 to 4 minutes per side, 4 inches from heating element or 7 inches from hot, glowing coals.

5. In small saucepan, heat marinade and let boil uncovered about 10 minutes to reduce.

6. Arrange grilled chicken on serving platter or board, pour reduced marinade over and garnish end of platter with a bouquet of parsley.

COST CONSCIOUS?

CHECKING UP ON HEALTH INSURANCE

By Kate Kelly

With health costs rising faster than any other type of personal expense, a single accident or extended illness could completely wipe out your savings and assets if you're without adequate insurance.

You or your spouse may already have coverage as a job benefit, and if so, family members may presently be included or generally added at a reasonable cost.

If you do not have a plan through your employer, shop for a group policy through a union or professional or fraternal organization to which you belong. This is usually less expensive than an individual policy, and you need not have a physical to qualify. However, if group coverage is not available to you, compare prices and benefits on individual contracts with several insurance agents or companies.

As you review your present coverage or shop for new options, expect to pay for routine doctor visits. What's key is to insure against the health problems that cannot be absorbed by the family budget.

Types of Payments

Health-insurance benefits typically fall into three categories: full coverage, flat-fee payment or a shared-cost arrangement. Some plans, usually hospitalization insurance, pay 100 percent for a specific period of time. Other policies may place limits, paying a flat fee on surgical and medical costs.

Insurance can also have a system of deductibles and co-insurance. The deductible is the amount you must contribute before the insurance company starts making payments, and co-insurance is a method of sharing costs, usually 75-25 or 80-20, with the individual paying the smaller amount. The larger the deductible or co-insurance percentage you can afford, the lower your premiums.

Now ask yourself these questions:

Exactly what is covered? Read carefully, noting inclusions and exclusions. If you have a health problem, there may be a waiting period before coverage of that condition begins.

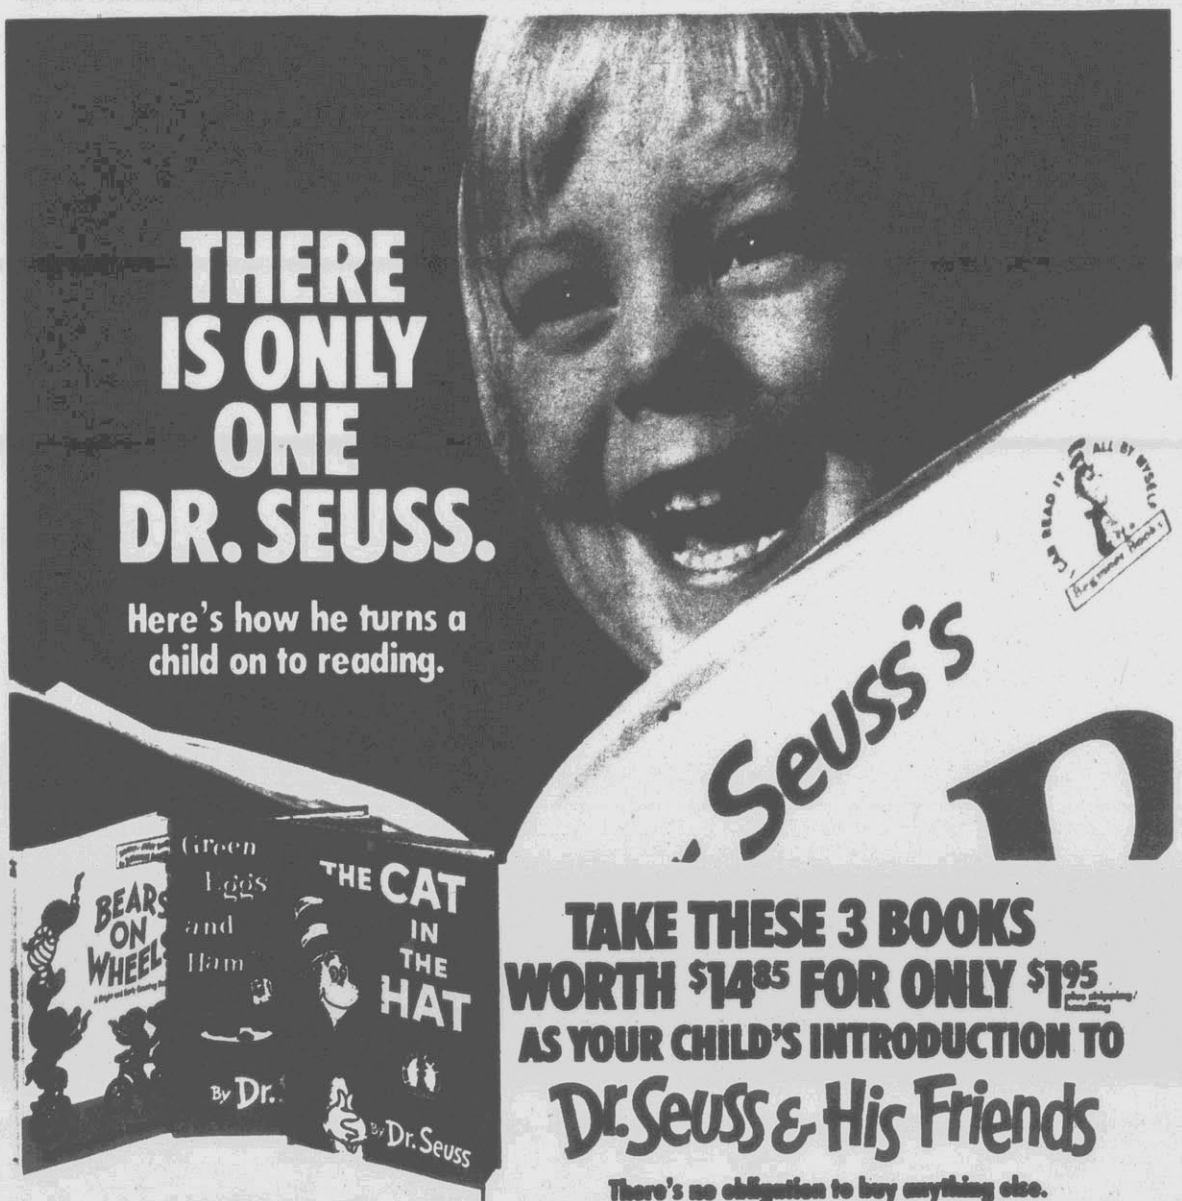

Is there a deductible? And if so, how much? How is it applied? For example, is it per person or per family?

With co-insurance, is there an amount above which the company pays 100 percent? This is to your advantage.

Is the policy noncancelable by the company? If so, you can continue to renew at market rates.

A new trend in health care, which is actually an alternate form of insurance, is the health maintenance organization (H.M.O.). For a relatively reasonable monthly or quarterly fee, you can generally receive hospitalization and surgical coverage as well as constant preventive health care. FW

Kate Kelly is a writer specializing in business and consumer topics.

When it comes to helping children discover the joy of reading, nobody does it like Dr. Seuss. His marvelous stories, appealing characters, and colorful illustrations are so full of fun, kids return to them again and again.

The words are just right for young readers, too. They're in large, clear type. They often tell the story in rhyme. And they're so closely related to the pictures that, with a little help from Mom or Dad, even pre-schoolers can start reading all by themselves. And the best part is that when a child is turned on to reading by Dr. Seuss and his friends, he generally stays turned on to reading for life.

A HAPPY START FROM THE ONLY BOOK CLUB WITH DR. SEUSS.

This is a wonderful time to introduce your child to Dr. Seuss and his friends, and these three books are ideal starters: "The Cat in the Hat" by Dr. Seuss, "Green Eggs and Ham" by Dr. Seuss and "Bears on Wheels" featuring the famous Berenstain Bears. We'll send your child all three, which cost $14.85 at the regular retail price, and bill you for only $1.95 plus shipping and handling.

PLUS BIG SAVINGS, A FREE GIFT.

So send now. And along with three introductory books for less than the price of one, we'll include, free, The Cat in the Hat canvas tote bag shown on this page. It's a gift your child will love and it's yours to keep free even if you should decide to return the three books and tear up the bill. Please read full details in the order form, then fill it out and mail it today.

THE DEEPENING CONCERN ABOUT GROUNDWATER

Mena Dolobowsky

By Michael D'Antonio

Beneath the blacktop and the wheatfields of America courses a giant system of unseen streams — a water supply twice as big as all of the country's rivers, ponds and lakes combined. It is estimated at 50 quadrillion gallons. Half of the nation's drinking supply, 21 billion gallons a day, is drawn from these mighty aquifers. But this source of clean, life-sustaining water is threatened by an insidious kind of pollution: chemicals and wastes that seep into the soil and then enter the water supply. This may be America's next, and toughest, environmental challenge.

In the past 10 years, state officials and the Federal Environmental Protection Agency have found more than 7,700 sites where underground water has been spoiled.

- In Gray, Me., 16 private wells were closed when toxic chemicals from a nearby landfill were found in the water.
- In South Brunswick, N.J., the municipal groundwater supply has been polluted by nearby industries.
- In the San Gabriel Valley in California, agricultural spraying has polluted groundwater and spoiled more than 30 wells.
- In Florida, ethylene dibromide, a pesticide that is suspected of causing cancer, was recently banned; since then, it has been detected by environmental researchers in about 300 of the state's drinking-water wells.
- Across the country, 75,000 to 100,000 underground storage tanks are leaking gasoline each year, posing a potentially serious threat to underground water supplies.

Although the problem is not ubiquitous, it does seem to be growing. "There's not a polluted well in every town; most people are drinking good water," says Wendy Gordon, a science associate with the Natural Resources Defense Council (N.R.D.C.), an antipollution group based in Washington, D.C. "But groundwater pollution is spreading rapidly. As Government officials test more wells, they find more problems. Of 466 wells tested last spring, they discovered problems at 28 percent of them."

The most common "and the most dangerous" groundwater pollutants, she explains, are industrial chemicals, which often find their way into the soil at dump sites and manufacturing facilities. Before dumping was more carefully regulated, chemical wastes were often simply buried along with other garbage. In many cases the chemicals have seeped into the ground and into the water supply, where, because of

106 POUNDS IN 5 MONTHS*

"Hi! My name is Jean Alexander. It wasn't so long ago I weighed 261 pounds. It's important to me to remember those days - important to remember the bras that fastened in the front - The booths I avoided in restaurants - The help I needed to buckle my shoes and the anguish I felt when the airline stewardess needed an extension to fasten my seat belt.

Thanks to THE ROBANN CLINIC PROGRAM the weight is off and it's going to stay off. From now on I'm in charge of my life."

"Thank you for your very fine product. I've lost a total of 38 pounds. I've learned enough with your help to make it."
—J.T.; Bellville, MI 48111

"I am deeply grateful and thrilled beyond words."
—S.M.; Baltimore, MD 21227

REACHING YOUR GOAL IS GREAT but the unique thing about THE ROBANN CLINIC PROGRAM is not the weight you lose but the method to keep it off after you lose it. You can't cheat on this program because you'll be eating 90% of the foods you now eat. We do not try to re-educate your stomach or your taste buds - It would be a losing battle anyway. This program makes adjustments to your normal way of living.

"You may have more orders as everyone asks how I have lost my 25 pounds and still eat great."
—B.L.; Newton, IA 50208

YOU'LL BE DIETING WITHOUT FEELING LIKE A DIETER.

THE ROBANN PROGRAM is not trying to change your lifestyle - only your weight. "Jean is one of the most successful people to realize the incredible weight loss possible with the Robann Clinic Program.

"I am so pleased with my weight loss success. Never before have I been able to lose weight without being hungry, which was my downfall."
—D.E.; Sturgeon Bay, WI 54235

AS YOU START TO LOSE WEIGHT (on any program) your body metabolism begins to resist any further weight loss. This is the primary reason, generally after about 30 days, that so many advertised plans become ineffective. To overcome this DEAD END PLATEAU syndrome, we have gathered together eminent professionals in their field - Medical and Dietary. THE ROBANN PROGRAM they have created is designed to not only reach your weight loss goal but to maintain it.

THIS ADVANCED TECHNIQUE uses three different formulas. Each has it's own 30 day supply. THESE FORMULA changes are scientifically planned to overcome any resistance your body builds against further weight loss.

"So far I have lost 45 pounds and feel like a million."
—J.L.; Spring Valley, NY 10956

their sturdy composition, they can stay unchanged by nature for a century or more. Modern disposal sites are built with linings that contain the chemicals, but at thousands of old dumps, Gordon explains, wastes are leaking through corroded containers and into water supplies.

In each case, just restricting the contamination is expensive and difficult, and removing it is even tougher. Aquifers move slowly, but once pollution enters them, it can travel for miles. Engineers have experimented with pumping water out of the ground, cleaning it and pumping it back in, but drilling and filtering costs are high. Another solution is to dam the flow of polluted aquifers with deep clay walls, but that approach only stops the spread of the contamination.

In the meantime, communities must deal with the health risks of this pollution. Leaky septic systems and pipes contaminate water with viruses and bacteria that can eventually lead to an outbreak of illness. Industrial pollutants also can cause immediate medical problems and in addition, chemicals that are known carcinogens pose long-range cancer risks.

In Woburn, Mass., the parents of leukemia victims blame groundwater pollution for their personal tragedies. Five local children have died and the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta says the city's leukemia rate is twice the national average. The parents say water from wells contaminated by industrial solvents is responsible for the 20 cases diagnosed in a 10-year period in one neighborhood.

Studies attempting to link the water and the disease have been inconclusive. However, the community has commissioned a new study, which they hope will aid in their legal action against companies they believe are responsible for the pollution.

Woburn resident Anne Anderson, whose 12-year-old son, Jimmy, died of leukemia in 1981, believes the Government should require polluters to compensate victims for their losses. She recently testified before Congress on a proposed victims' compensation law. "So many people just have accepted this," she says. "I can't."

Congress is looking at ways to stem groundwater pollution, and the Reagan Administration is joining that effort. But while groups like the N.R.D.C. have begun the lobby for a national monitoring and groundwater-protection program, the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, William D. Ruckelshaus, warns that new programs will take time. And the Reagan Administration is leaning toward state-controlled projects.

"There is no quick solution," Ruckelshaus told a Congressional hearing last summer. "The problems we face are the result of decades of neglect of this vast resource."

Still, polluted wells are being discovered every week, and Congress is hearing the complaints from back home. Many members say the country cannot wait for states (which frequently lack the necessary expertise and funds) to develop programs, and that aquifers, which often flow from state to state, are also a Federal responsibility.

Stricter land-use management may be the real solution.

"Aquifers obviously don't recognize state boundaries," explains Representative James Florio (D-N.J.), whose industrial state has suffered serious groundwater pollution. "Right now there is no uniform approach and too little cooperation between the Federal and state governments in addressing a dangerous threat to public health."

Several programs have been proposed in the House, including one that would designate important aquifers as "special protection areas" where industrial development would be limited and chemical dumping tightly controlled. Those special areas would be designed to shelter underground sources where alternative drinking water supplies, such as lakes and reservoirs, are not available. Current action in Washington should produce a prevention program by 1984, according to Representative Florio and other key officials. Industry is also concerned about groundwater contamination. "The oil industry is trying to do a great deal about underground water pollution," says Arthur Wiese, a spokesperson for the American Petroleum Institute (A.P.I.) in Washington, D.C. He adds that for the past 15 years the A.P.I. has been making recommendations to communities on how to find and fix leaks in gasoline storage tanks.

In the long run, N.R.D.C.'s Wendy Gordon concludes, "stricter land-use management may be the real solution. We're on the frontier now, looking for answers. One of the big ones may involve telling people how they can use their land: where they can create landfills and where they cannot. That will be difficult for some people to take, but if we are really going to be committed to protecting our water, a vital resource, that's the answer." PW

DAY-BY-DAY

CALENDARS THAT DO MORE THAN MARK TIME

By Joanne Kaufman

It used to be that people could count on Nick's Garage, the local bank or some life insurance company to supply their calendars every year. The notion of going into a store and parting with good money for one seemed as preposterous as deciding to buy a road map.

No more. Whether it's because gas stations and banks have cut down on calendar giveaways, or because people have decided they want to mark off the days with something jazzier than quaint village scenes or puppies spilling out of red bow-tied baskets, calendar sales have become big business in the publishing world.

Ray Curletti

Consider the array for 1984: regional calendars (Minnesota Weather Guide, California Surfer, Beautiful Colorado, Historic New Mexico); art calendars (Monet Masterworks); literary lights (Jane Austen) and calendars devoted to cats, flowers, foods, medicines, unicorns, dogs, nature scenes and scantily-clad sun worshipers of both sexes.

For this year, Felicia McCann, magazine and accessories buyer for B. Dalton Bookseller in Minneapolis, Minn., previewed no less than 750 calendars before selecting 50 for the chain. "It's more acceptable now to have them on your wall than ever before," says McCann. "It's considered an art form. Also, you can buy them as a gift for someone else as well as for yourself."

Explains Dr. Arlene Kagle, a psychologist based in New York City: "It's something that says, 'Remember me.' Calendars have become individualized, personalized. There's one for just about any interest or idiosyncrasy. Selecting one for a friend shows that you know something personal about the recipient."

Some calendars have sold better last month than was anticipated. According to McCann and Susan Barkan, a buyer at the East Coast book chain Barnes & Noble, 1984's best sellers include both the familiar — the Sierra Club, Garfield the Cat, the 365 Days (of Love, Jokes, Sports Facts) — and one not-so-familiar category: "beefcake," male models in skimpy clothing and provocative poses.

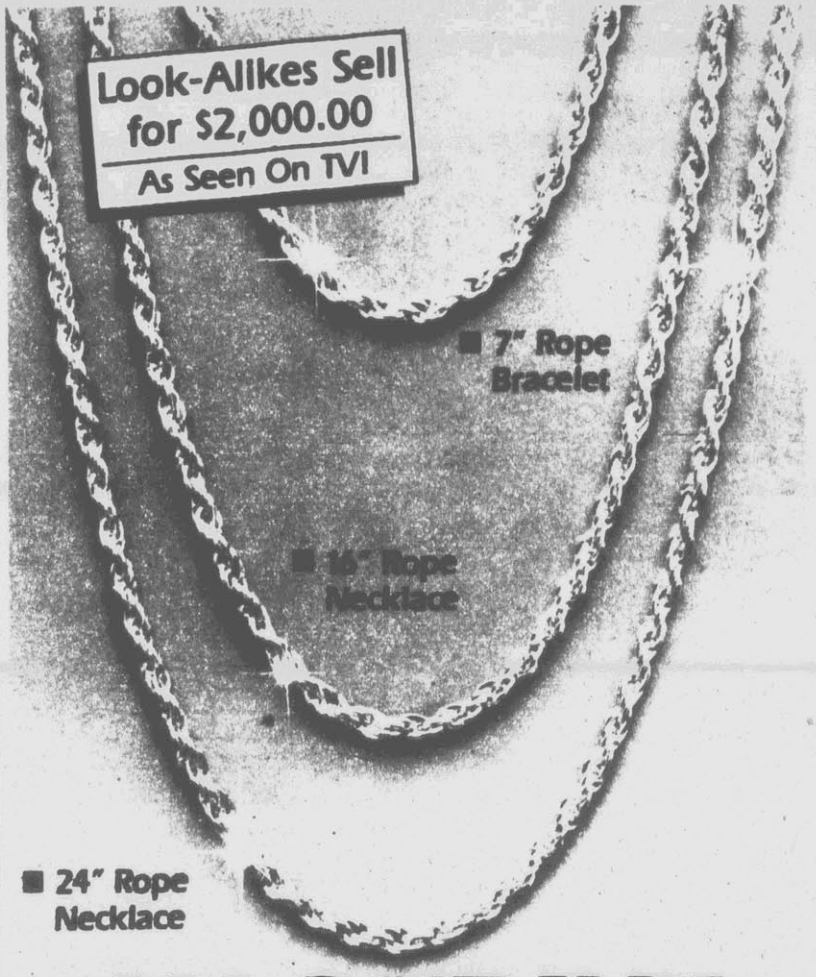

Those calendars are selling like hotcakes — or perhaps more to the point, like the cheesecake of old. Simon & Schuster Publishing Co. reports that all editions of their 1984 Hunk-a-Month calendars (110,000 copies), Hunk-a-Day desk calendars (80,000) and Cheeks (50,000) are virtually sold out.

Television programming may partially explain the phenomenon. Shows like Magnum P.I., which stars Tom Selleck, and Remington Steele with Pierce Brosnan, probably helped stimulate demand. Simon & Schuster editor Melissa Newman explains that "beefcake calendars are the perfect bachelorette party gift. Women do a lot of comparison shopping to see which calendars have the cutest guys." Newman recalls with particular amusement the teenager who carefully leafed through one of the "Hunk" calendars and indignantly declared, "There are no redheads here." But, as she points out, it's not just young women who are buying: it's grandmothers, too.

Says Dr. Kagle: "Seen in the best possible light, beefcake calendars are letting women show as much interest in men and their bodies as men have always shown in women and their bodies." And in the worst possible light? "Women are starting to see men purely as sex objects in some cases."

One thing is certain: Even as publishers are remaindering the 1984 calendars, they are also starting to think hard about 1985 models. "To work, calendars have to be geared to a very specific interest," says Newman. "People buy one calendar, not five. They're not like books. If you do a celebrity calendar, you better do a hot celebrity. You have to make it unique, or if it's one that everyone else is producing, do it better than it's been done before." PW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Marion Long

CAT-ROBICS?

The comic-strip feline Garfield gives a whole new meaning to the concept of "fat cat." In fact, it would seem that the orange and black tabby can stomach just about anything except exercise. Lest his nose-in-the-air, belly-out-to-there attitude reach endemic proportions, there is a new illustrated mail-order book of cat calisthenics called Purrfect Puss.

Kimble Mead

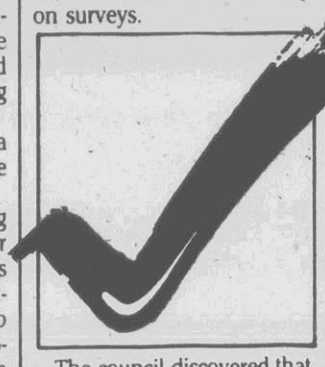

"We were down on the floor doing our own workouts, when we noticed that our cats were really getting involved," says Chicagoan Anna Allar, who co-wrote the guide with her sister, Linda Thebes. And since their vet had just mentioned that their felines were less than svelte, they decided to cat-alogue some slimming activities for their pets.

One good exercise: Tie a toy to your wrist and entice the cat to pursue it.

The sisters are also offering a line of matching T-shirts for pets and owners. Speculates Allar — without a trace of cattiness: "I suppose there's no end to what we can do. Videotapes are a possibility. If we could get a lot of cats together in one room and put them into tights and leg warmers, maybe we could even give Jane Fonda some competition."

A BOLSTER FOR POLLSTERS

With 1984 being a major election year, you can be sure the pollsters will be out in full force. But do people really buy what public opinion polls have to say? To find out, the U.S. Census Bureau recently asked the Committee on National Statistics to do a survey on surveys.

The council discovered that people have a lot more confidence in Government-sponsored polls than in those administered by private companies, agencies or individuals. Not only do they have faith in the Government's promise to keep the survey results private, they also trust the results' reliability and the surveys' quality.

Those who habitually decline to be part of a survey say it's not because they resent the bombardment of questions, but because they "just don't care about" the subject under scrutiny. It was a first survey for 44 percent in the poll.

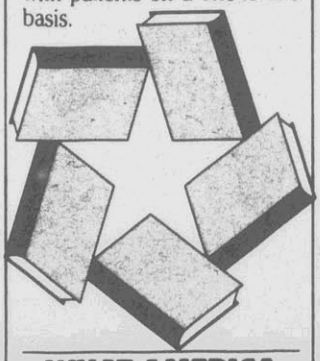

NEW TACK FOR FAST TRACKERS

It's hardly unusual for a therapist to have a caseload of patients who've made it in the business world and then, around age 40 to 45, discover that career success doesn't live up to its glowing press notices.

What is unusual is for a therapist to have patients in the 25-year-age range with such problems. And yet more and more of them are turning up.

"It's something like an accelerated midlife crisis," says Richard Beery, a psychologist at the University of California at Berkeley who's written a report on the phenomenon. According to Dr. Beery, the problem has emerged because many young aspirants made career choices based on demand and security, without considering their own personalities and interests. It's the reverse of what happened in the 60's, when the call of the campus was "Do your own thing" and anything that smacked of traditional career goals was considered a cop-out.

Rather than suggest that these unhappy young professionals find new careers, Dr. Beery advises changes that are "within the framework of their training." For example, he recommended that a tense attorney relocate himself into a less-pressured line of law practice and encouraged a disillusioned surgeon into family practice, where he could deal with patients on a one-to-one basis.

HE'S GOT A SECRET

Ever since author William Poundstone's book Big Secrets came out last fall, people have been viewing him as the man with all the answers. His tome, defined as "the uncommon truth about all sorts of stuff you are never supposed to know," delivered the previously-classified formula for Coca Cola and the contents of the secret Kentucky Fried Chicken coating, just to name a few.

Readers are now writing in asking for all sorts of information. Surely, Poundstone must know the ingredients in a White Castle hamburger and those secret rites of the Knights of Columbus? Says Poundstone, who is astonished by all this: "I've literally been asked, 'Who really killed John Kennedy?' and 'What really happened at Chappaquiddick?' It's amazing: You do a few secret recipes and they think you can answer anything."

HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Difference: 1. Door handle is missing. 2. Shirt is different. 3. Feathers are missing. 4. Baby is smaller. 5. Purse is missing. 6. Suitcase is moved.

Junior Whirl

by Hal Kaufman

• ANY OLD PORT! Each of the following terms begins with the word PORT: 1. PORT radio. 2. PORT steak. 3. PORT cement. 4. PORT case. How quickly can you fill the blanks?

1 Portable 2 Porterhouse 3 Portland 4 Portfolio

• Murky Math! The answer is 327. You've taken a number, doubled it, turned the answer upside down and divided by three. What number did you take?

It will work with ninety three

• Waxing Wise! Safety slogan for highway users and others in the new year: "Let's do more in' ___ to keep alive in' ___." Fill blanks to complete verse.

Insert '84 and '85, respectively

• Pun Pen! Forfeit — what an elephant has on the ground. Fetish — on the plump side. Hard tack — ailment with chest pains. Isotope — Admission of stupidity

SEE MAGIC IN MOTION

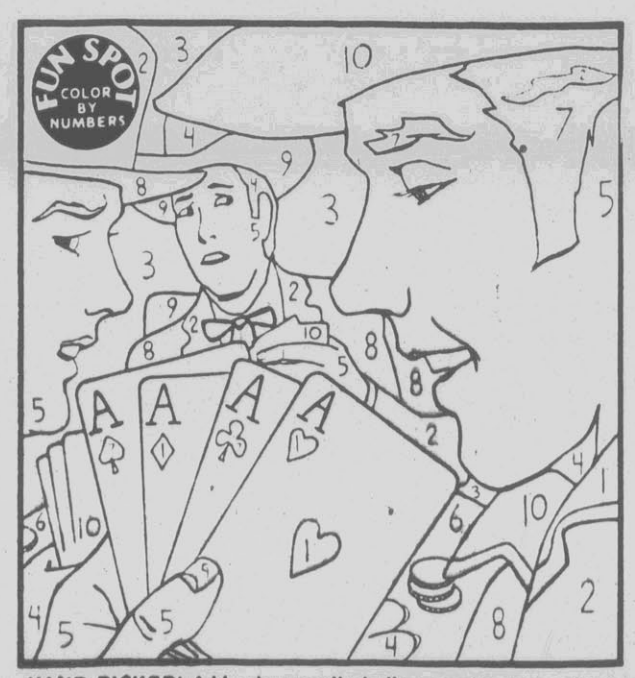

Try this stunt with an ordinary wooden coat hanger and a coin. Place the coin at the center of the hanger crossbar (see illustration above).

Now, gently swing the hanger from side to side, increasing speed until the hanger makes a complete loop, and continue to keep it spinning.

Once the coin is balanced and the hanger spins around, centrifugal force will keep the coin in place. Of course, it may take some practice to get the knack of spinning the hanger.

SLAP SHOT! It takes two to tango and two players to score a goal above. Which of four paths nets the puck?

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

THEORIST

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 30 points.

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: AS THE NEW YEAR BEGINS, VAL TAKES HIS FAMILY BACK TO CAMELOT WITH THE HUNTING PARTY. ARN ALONE REMAINS BEHIND: ARN, PARKER OF ORR, WHO RULES THE EASTERN REACHES OF BRITAIN IN KING ARTHUR'S NAME. CASTLE ORR IS NOW HIS HOME. WILL HE SHARE IT ONE DAY WITH MAEVE? ARN'S EYES STEAL TO MERLIN'S RING

IN ITS SPARKLING GEMS ARN GLIMPSES NO ANSWERS BUT ONLY MYSTERIES. WHAT IS MAEVE'S SECRET? HOW CAN HE WIN HIS SPURS?

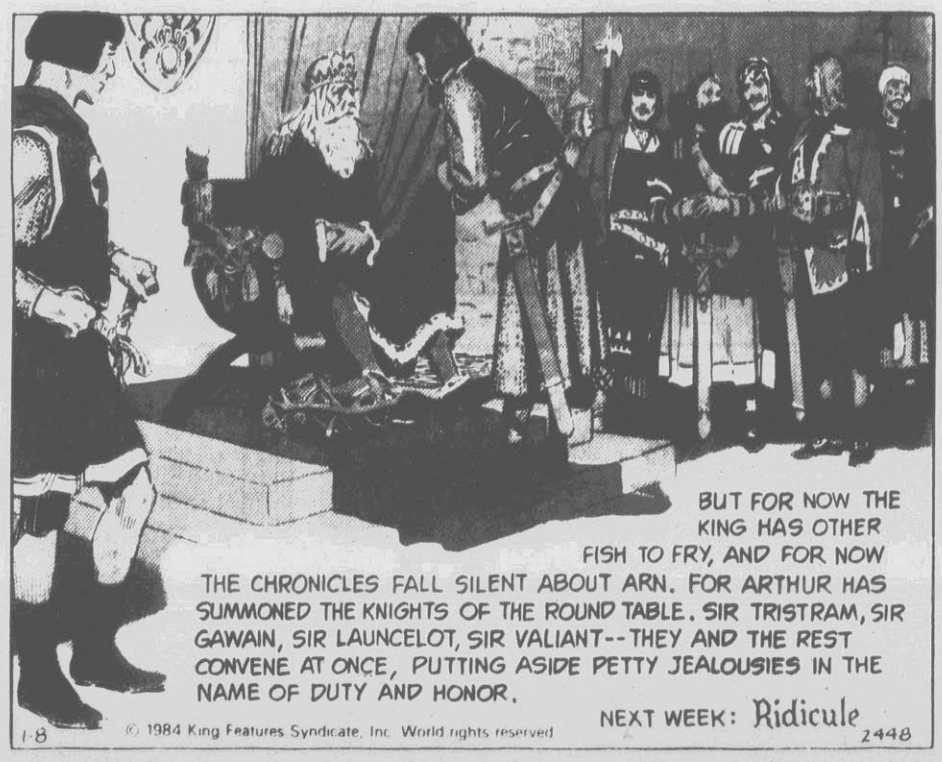

MUCH WAS DESTROYED IN THE GREAT SACK OF CAMELOT MANY YEARS HENCE BUT THE CHRONICLES THAT SURVIVE REPORT THAT ARN GOVERNS ORR WELL. THE SAXON INVADER HAD LEFT MANY A WIDOW--PROVIDING WIVES APLENTY FOR THE SAXONS WHO SETTLE PEACEABLY.

THE SAXONS KEEP THEIR OLD WAYS. ON A HILL THEY ERECT A PAGAN ALTAR. THE DAYS OF THE WEEK THEY STILL CALL AFTER THEIR GODS: TIW'S DAY, WOTAN'S DAY, THOR'S DAY, FRIG'S DAY. "I DO NOT THINK THE CUSTOM WILL CATCH ON," ARN WRITES HOPEFULLY TO KING ARTHUR.

ARTHUR KNOWS BETTER. THE BLOOD IS BEING MIXED. A NEW RACE AND TONGUE SHALL OVERTAKE THE ISLE. CAMELOT'S DAYS ARE NUMBERED.

BUT FOR NOW THE KING HAS OTHER FISH TO FRY, AND FOR NOW THE CHRONICLES FALL SILENT ABOUT ARN. FOR ARTHUR HAS SUMMONED THE KNIGHTS OF THE ROUND TABLE. SIR TRISTRAM, SIR GAWAIN, SIR LAUNCELOT, SIR VALIANT--THEY AND THE REST CONVENE AT ONCE, PUTTING ASIDE PETTY JEALOUSIES IN THE NAME OF DUTY AND HONOR.

"1984," EH?..
ANYTHING IN THERE ABOUT WHO WINS THE IOWA CAUCUSES?..
NOW THAT WE'RE INTO 1984 I THOUGHT I WOULD TRY READING GEORGE ORWELL'S PROPHETIC NOVEL OF THE SAME NAME.
UH HUH.
AND SOME OF HIS PREDICTIONS HAVE COME TRUE.
YOU KNOW... THE ALL-POWERFUL STATE AND ITS EVIL DICTATOR..
THE TOTAL LOSS OF HUMAN FREEDOM, THE DOUBLE-TALKING PROPAGANDA...
-THAT'S ACTUALLY HAPPENING TODAY IN LOTS OF PLACES.
-I MEAN THAT'S RIDICULOUS, ISN'T IT, UNCLE COSMO?
UNCLE COSMO?

WELL! NOW I'VE SEEN EVERYTHING!
LUCKY EDDIE TALKING TO A PRETTY GIRL!
WHY DO THEY CALL YOU LUCKY EDDIE?
IT'S BECAUSE I HAVE SUCH TERRIBLE LUCK
I THINK IT'S BECAUSE I HAVE THE WORST SENSE OF TIMING IN THE WORLD
IF A DOOR IS SWINGING OPEN SOMEWHERE IN SCANDINAVIA, I WALK INTO IT. IF A PIE IS THROWN, IT HITS ME.
I'M ALWAYS GETTING IN TROUBLE OR MISSING A GREAT OPPORTUNITY! IT'S AWFUL! NOBODY LIKES A LOSER.

by Jeff Millar & Bill Hinds
TODAY WE CONTINUE WITH OUR PROBE OF ACADEMIC ABUSES...
WELDON THUDLEY WAS IDENTIFIED BY NCAA INVESTIGATORS AS THE STUDENT WHO WAS PAID BY THE ESU ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT TO TAKE MORE THAN 300 COURSES UNDER THE NAMES OF 30 DIFFERENT SCHOLARSHIP ATHLETES.
SPORTALK
I ENJOY LEARNING, TANK. AND I MADE HIGHER GRADES WHEN I TOOK THE COURSES LATER UNDER MY OWN NAME.
LK
DID YOU EVER RECEIVE SPECIAL CONSIDERATION BECAUSE YOU WERE AN "ATHLETE"?
NEVER, TANK. I HAD TO STUDY AS HARD FOR "MY" GRADES AS ANY NON-JOCK STUDENT
DID YOU EVER HAVE REASON TO THINK THE PROFESSORS MIGHT BE IN ON THE SCAM?
WELL, ONCE A PROFESSOR LET ME MOVE TO THE FRONT ROW OF THE LECTURE HALL. BUT HE SAID HE'D LET ANY GUY WHO WAS 7 FOOT 2 HAVE ROOM FOR HIS LEGS WHETHER HE WAS A SCHOLARSHIP ATHLETE OR NOT.
