Rep. Jones To File For 11th Term

U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones of Farmville announced that he planned to file today with the state Board of Elections for re-election to his 11th term in the U.S. House of Representatives from the 1st Congressional District.

Jones made his announcement this morning at a breakfast meeting in Washington, N.C., where area supporters donated his filing fee.

"My campaign will be based upon my voting record which, I feel, is consistent with the views of the majority of the citizens of the 1st Congressional District," the Democrat said. "Additionally, my entire congressional career has been dedicated to serving my constituency in all matters of mutual interest in the 21 counties in which I have the privilege of representing."

As chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, Jones is one of only 21 full committee chairmen in the House. He said that as committee chairman for the past three years, he has been successful in upgrading what he termed the previously antiquated Merchant Marine fleet, permitting the fleet to better compete in world trade.

The representative said he has added 55 new aircraft and 16 new vessels to the Coast Guard fleet and has added $1.76 billion in capital improvements to Coast Guard equipment and facilities in an effort to enable it to better perform its search and rescue missions and drug enforcement and other assigned duties.

WALTER B. JONES

Jones is also the ranking member of the House Committee on Agriculture. He said that in this capacity, he has been successful in recent years in maintaining the present tobacco program, as well as other farm programs, "in the face of overwhelming opposition."

He said he has been recorded by the National Education Association as having a 100 percent voting record in support of education and educational programs.

Jones was first elected in 1966 in a special election to succeed the late Herbert C. Bonner and he has served continuously since that time.

"I feel that my 18 years of seniority, which cannot be bought or transferred, is vital to those that I serve," said Jones. "This seniority will permit me to continue to provide the high level of personal service that the citizens of my district richly deserve and have every right to expect."

219 Calls

Fire-Rescue Chief Jenness Allen said that during December the city's fire-rescue department responded to 219 calls, including 197 rescue calls and 22 fire reports.

Allen said the 197 rescue responses included 154 in the city and 43 in the county. The chief said rescue personnel transported 153 city residents, 53 county residents and 20 non-residents during the month.

He said 1,690 miles were traveled on rescue calls, including 1,078 in the city and 612 miles in the county.

Utilities Inch Into Automation

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission Tuesday night took the first step toward office automation by approving the pilot installation of a microcomputer in the electric department and a terminal to access the commission's accounting system computer in the personnel department.

The move came as commissioners reviewed an office automation feasibility study conducted by the Center for Urban Affairs and Community Services at North Carolina State University.

Gary Miller of the urban affairs center told commissioners that the center staff, working with GUC employees, developed seven alternatives, ranging from maintaining the current level of operations or procurement of a centralized stand-alone word processing system, to procurement of an office automation system.

Miller said the final recommendation is to acquire seven microcomputers, all with work processing software and one with the capability of communicating with the commission's accounting computer.

He noted that,in addition to word processing, the microcomputers could be used for data base management, spread sheet calculations and other tasks.

In approving the pilot installation, commissioners followed a staff recommendation which suggested that the use of the two units would give hands-on experience to persons who will be using the microcomputers and allow time to evaluate software packages before other units are purchased.

Miller said full implementation of the plan would cost between $28,000 and $55,000.

GUC Director Charles Horne told commissioners that the cold weather in December resulted in a 25 percent increase in electric power and an 80 percent jump in the use of natural gas, over November levels. He noted that the low temperature in December was 4 degrees, as compared with a low in December 1982 of 19 degrees.

The commission also approved a contract with John C. Proctor & Co. for $8,600 to conduct an audit of the GUC books for the current fiscl year.

Supreme Court Overturns 1982 Ruling

Freer Hand In Oil Exploration Leases

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in an important ruling on the environment, today gave the Reagan administration a freer hand in leasing tracts off the California coast for oil exploration.

In a 5-4 ruling, the court overturned a 1982 appeals court decision that said then-Interior Secretary James Watt illegally leased 29 offshore tracts to oil companies.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco ruled in August 1982 that Watt could not lease the offshore areas until he determined the sale is consistent "to the maximum extent practicable" with California's coastal zone management plan.

But the Supreme Court said today that the sale of the leases is exempt from review under the state plan.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, in her opinion for the court, said outer continental shelf leases "involve submerged lands outside the coastal zone" governed by the state plan.

Also, she said, the lease authorizec companies "to engage only in preliminary exploration. Further administrative approval is required before full exploration or development may begin."

The ruling is a big victory for the administration which had claimed the 9th Circuit ruling "invites chaos for the activities of the federal goverment as a whole."

The Justice Department had argued that the appeals court decision "obliterated the difference between a direct and indirect" impact that the leasing of offshore land may have on the environment.

The state of California, local governments and environmental groups lined up against the administration.

They contended that once the leases are approved it is too late, as a practical matter, to control exploration and development which might damage coastal areas.

At issue are 29 tracts, worth hundreds of millions of dollars, in the Santa Maria Basin off central California.

Meanwhile, Interior Secretary William Clark, who succeeded Watt, said Tuesday he was currently reviewing Watt's five-year offshore leasing program and would soon be announcing certain changes.

Clark said Watt's basic progam would "remain the same" but that he planned to make revisions in the leasing process. He said this would include greater consultation with coastal states.

Watt's program, which set a goal of offering virtually the entire U.S. coastline for lease by 1987, has drawn strong criticism from states, environmentalists and members of Congress for opening up too much offshore acreage.

Last October, Congress imposed a 20-mile buffer zone along the Southern California coast, which put that area off-limits to leasing through September of this year. Congress also imposed similar restrictions off the coasts of Massachusetts and Florida.

Judge Files For Re-Election Bid

District Court Judge E. Burt Aycock Jr. has filled for re-election to the post he has held for the past seven years.

A 1960 graduate of Greenville's Rose High School, Aycock received his undergraduate degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1965 and his law degree from UNC-CH in 1968. He was engaged in private practice in Tarboro and in Greenville until becoming an assistant district attorney in 1973.

Aycock was elected to the District Court bench in the 3rd Judicial District, which includes Pitt, Craven, Pamlico and Carteret counties, in 1976 and was re-elected for a second term in 1980.

With the retirement of Chief District Judge Robert Wheeler last month, Aycock has served longer than any district judge in the four-county district.

Recently elected secretary-treasurer of the N.C. Association of District Court Judges, Aycock, in addition to his other duties, is certified by the N.C. Administrative Office of the Courts as a specialist in handling juvenile cases because of special training and experience.

Lebanon Factions See Artillery Exchanges Delay Separation Plan

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Artillery battles flared in the hills above the U.S. Marine base today, and the state radio said last-minute "hitches" had forced the delay of a plan to separate Lebanon's warring factions.

The government called off an alert for Lebanese troops who had been ready to deploy and enforce the plan to set up buffer zones between rival militias.

A Marine spokesman, Maj. Dennis Brooks, said the artillary exchanges north of the Beirut airport camp lasted an hour this morning but did not involve the Marines. "It was very heavy for a while. It's quieted down now," he said.

State radio reported sporadic fighting near Beirut's Shiite suburbs and around the Druse-inhabited hills above the Marine base.

The radio said Lebanese troops stationed at the Khalde highway intersection southeast of the Marine base traded artillery and mortar barrages with Druse gunners on the neighboring Aramoun hills.

Army positions and Shiite militiamen also exchanged artillery, mortar and machine gun fire in the southern suburbs and near the Italian-policed Palestinian refugee camp of Chatilla, the radio said. It said no casualties were reported.

A few rocket-propelled grenades exploded over the Christian sector of Beirut during the exchanges, causing schools and shops in several suburban areas to close down, the radio added.

Reporting on the enforcement of the proposed security plan, the government radio said more negotiations were needed to "avert a setback during implementation." The plan seeks to separate feuding factions in Beirut's southern suburbs and the nearby Chouf Mountains.

About 3,000 troops and 350 policemen had been ordered by the government to assemble at several points in east and west Beirut to be ready to enforce the plan. Government officials said the U.S., French, Italian and British units of the multinational force had been notified of the order.

"The government is continuing contacts to resolve the hitches that stand in the way," the state radio said without elaboration.

State Rep. John Gillam, who recently announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination to Congress from the 1st District, was honored Tuesday in Greenville and in his home town of Windsor in Bertie County.

Gillam is opposing long-time incumbent Rep. Walter Jones, who announced today he would file as a candidate for re-election.

Gillam was guest of honor at a noon luncheon in Greenville Tuesday attended by about 50 Greenville and area supporters. At 3:30 p.m., officials and townspeople of Windsor held an appreciation day parade for Gillam in the Windsor Community Building.

Windsor Mayor L.T. Liverman welcomed Gillam and assembled guests, with Cofield Mayor Nellie Melton giving the invocation. State Rep. J.J. (Monk) Harrington spoke briefly and introduced special guests. Robert Spivey

Parents Support Group Helps Child Abusers

By JUNE WALTER
Sunbury Daily Item

SUNBURY, Pa. (AP) — There is nothing outwardly shocking about Carol. She is a pleasant-appearing woman who is approaching middle age.

But it is her "averageness" that is surprising when this curly-haired woman tells of beating her son, pushing him down the stairs and kicking him for good measure.

Carol is a recovering child abuser.

The Sunbury area woman, who prefers not to be fully identified, described herself as "clean" since Christmas 1981. Everything isn't perfect yet, but her relationship with her four children keeps improving, she said.

Carol is a member of Parents Support Anonymous, a group formed two years ago to help child abusers. She was willing to tell her story so that other frustrated parents would seek help.

Carol said her husband had been unaware of her darker side. She said she had threatened the children against telling him. But the last incident, the one where she pushed her son down the stairs, was witnessed by him. "My God, Carol, what's the matter with you?" she recalled him saying.

She said she had realized she was an abuser while watching a film at White Deer Run Treatment Center where she was recovering from alcohol and drug abuse. "I saw myself on the screen. I started to cry." When the tears ended, she called her sponsor, Lou.

Lou, also a recovering child abuser, did the groundwork to form the support group.

Carol said she had hated being a child abuser, but didn't know how to stop. Each time she abused her children, she would vomit.

"That's how sick I was of myself," she said. She was afraid to get help, frightened that her children would be taken away.

Her third child got most of the physical abuse, but Carol admits to emotionally abusing the others — cursing them, belittling them, neglecting them.

"I couldn't stand to be touched. I didn't want anyone to hug me," she said. But inside, she said, she was yearning for the affection she felt her mother denied her as a child.

Ironically, it is her third child that she is especially close to now; it is no longer traumatic to share a hug or a kiss.

"He's a very good boy," Carol said. "I'm very proud of him ... of all of them. Before, I never gave a damn."

Parents Support Anonymous, which borrows many aspects from Alcoholics Anonymous, helped Carol stop abusing her children. "It was hard to stop ... once excuses were taken away from me."

And she faced another problem: how to pay attention to her children, especially when she had to correct them.

She recalled her first abuse-free confrontation. Her 6-year-old daughter had run out in front of a car. Before she punished the little girl, she called Lou and reviewed the incident and what discipline was necessary. When the child was disciplined, it was not from anger but to stress the recklessness of the conduct, Carol said.

"It's OK to want to abuse — you just don't do it," Carol said. Instead, when the frustration builds, she suggested, hit a pillow, take a walk, do exercise or go off alone and scream. Carol has tried all the methods, plus sitting beside the Susquehanna River and being calmed by the water.

Overcoming child, drug and alcohol abuse is a daily struggle for Carol. Although she says she sometimes doesn't want to go to the weekly support meetings, she's always glad after she gets there. And sometimes, there's even some laughter during the meetings. "I laugh now because if I don't laugh sometimes I cry," she said.

The group's membership fluctuates. Carol said there were only three regular members of the group, a result perhaps of the difficulty of admitting the need for help. Child abuse "carries a lot of stigma to it," she said.

Carol has gotten a lot of support from her children to overcome her problems. Once, Carol had gotten dressed up to go to an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting. As she came out of the house, her little girl pranced up and down the sidewalk saying, "Look at my mom, doesn't she look pretty? She's going to an AA meeting."

And before, she said, her children didn't want to bother her or come to her or would put their arms up defensively if she reached out to them. Now they're always around, she said, pleased with the change.

"I like my kids," Carol said. "I never did before."

Tropical Island Offers Quiet Life

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer

CHUB CAY, Bahamas (AP) — It doesn't show on many maps and it probably won't ring a bell with most travel agents, but here — 125 miles east of Miami — is a tropical vacation island without a city, traffic lights, souvenir shops or crowds.

"It's the isolation," say Charles and Barbara Vose of Oklahoma City, explaining the attraction many find for this semiprivate paradise in the Berry Island chain of the Bahamas.

Others come for what anglers say is one of the best fishing "holes" in the hemisphere. Only 600 yards from shore are the big ones — blue and white marlin, sailfish and tuna.

At one end of the 7-mile by ½-mile island is the "Tongue of the Ocean" — a dogleg of blue water where big game fish feed. The flats on the north side are abundant with lobster and Chub Cay's pristine beaches are littered with an assortment of shells. Offshore coral reefs are home for a wide variety of marine life that divers and snorkelers rarely see.

There's little history to Chub. Most of the island remains untouched and undeveloped except for a half dozen scattered homes outside the bounds of Chub Cay Club, the island's only center of activity.

Bahamians never lived here before Lou Doherty and a few affluent friends purchased the island in the late 1950s to build a private marina and fishing resort. Now, about 40-50 natives from other islands are employed here.

Doherty, a professional horseman living in Miami, supervised construction of the harbor, marina and club which was called Crown Colony Club until it was sold about five years ago.

"There wasn't even a palmetto shack in those days," recalls Doherty, who describes bonefishing around the island as "the best I've seen."

The island is owned by a group of nine headed by James Greer of Houston. He owns a chain of hotels and a large Texas construction company.

The club-marina covers 940 acres and membership numbers about 200. Initiation is $500 and annual fees are $1,500.

For members, 20 motel rooms are available for $90 per night or they may rent one of nine individually owned villas ranging from $225 a day for a two-bedroom beach home to the Voses' four-bedroom, four-bath picturebook retreat for $3,500 per week.

Near the 75-slip marina are two restaurant-bars — Harbour House for members and The Flying Bridge Restaurant and Bar for nonmembers. These are the only eating places on the island.

Available to the public are 18 motel rooms at $75 daily.

There are only two ways to get here — sail the main boating route between Miami and Nassau or fly by charter or private aircraft. (There's a 5,000-foot airstrip where the Bahamian custom service has a tiny office.)

Whether you come by sea or air, general manager Richard Yax will be there to greet you. He and his wife, Ann, have spent the past three years making everyone feel at home.

Visitors rarely hear a telephone ring here. There are only two phones on the island and both are in the club's office.

While tied-up yachts and the club's membership list reek of wealth, there's no snobbishness on Chub.

"It's totally different from home where there are so many obligations," says Mrs. Vose, watching a sunset. "Here, you don't have to put your shoes on and no one cares."

BAKED POTATO FILLING — A Pennsylvania Dutch specialty.

Baked Potato Filling Is Good

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

If you visit the annual Pennsylvania Dutch Festival held in Kutztown, Pa., at the beginning of July, you may taste an utterly delicious (but plain and simple) dish that, in my opinion, is just right to serve at home in the winter.

The dish is Baked Potato Filling and it is part of the help-yourself-to-as-much-as-you-like dinners served in great field tents on the huge grounds of the festival.

These dinners include such other Pennsylvania Dutch specialties as Chicken Corn Soup; Sweets and Sours (all sorts of pickles); Schnitz un Gnepp (dried apples and dumplings); Apple Butter; and Amish Vanilla Pie.

But back to Baked Potato Filling. I find it great to serve with a cut-up baked chicken, turkey roasted without stuffing, baked ham or boneless smoked pork shoulder butt. If you try the becie, I hope you agree.

BAKED
POTATO FILLING

3 medium (about 1 pound) potatoes, peeled and quartered
¼ cup milk
2 large eggs
1-3rd cup finely chopped parsley
Salt and pepper to taste
5 tablespoons butter
2 medium-large onions, finely diced (1½ cups)
4 slices (each about ½-inch thick) firm-texture bread, cut into ½-inch cubes (about 3 cups)

In a heavy 2-quart saucepan cover the potatoes with about 1 inch of boiling water; boil, tightly covered, until tender-firm — 20 to 25 minutes. Drain well and mash until smooth. Beat in milk, eggs, parsley and salt and pepper.

In a 10-inch skillet heat 2 tablespoons of the butter; add the onion and cook gently, stirring often, until golden brown. With a slotted spoon, remove the onion and add to the potatoes. In the 10-inch skillet over low heat, melt 2 more tablespoons of the butter; add the bread cubes and toss to coat with the butter. Spread bread cubes on a large cookie sheet and bake in a preheated 300-degree oven until crisp and lightly browned — 20 to 30 minutes. Fold into the potato mixture.

Turn into a buttered 1-quart baking dish and smooth the top. Melt the remaining 1 tablespoon butter and drizzle over the potato mixture. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until top is golden and crusty — 35 minutes.

Makes 6 servings.

SUPPER FARE
Sausage Casserole
Potatoes & Green Beans
Apple Betty & Beverage

SAUSAGE CASSEROLE
Repeated by request.

16-ounce package small link pork sausages
2 medium onions, cut in thin strips
1 medium green pepper, chopped medium-fine
16-ounce can solid-pack tomatoes, undrained
6-ounce can tomato paste
27-ounce can sauerkraut, drained (2¼ cups)
2 tablespoons light brown sugar
1½ teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
Salt and pepper to taste

In a large skillet in 1 cup water simmer sausages, uncovered, for 5 minutes; drain off water. Brown sausages on all sides; remove and reserve. Drain off all but 2 tablespoons drippings from skillet. Cook onion in drippings until golden; stir in green pepper, tomatoes (broken up), tomato paste, sauerkraut, sugar, Worcesderchire sauce, salt and pepper and reserved sausages. Turn into a 2-quart oblong baking dish (about 12 by 8 by 2 inches). Bake uncovered in a preheated 375-degree oven until very hot — about 25 minutes.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Freeze leftover tea to use as ice cubes in iced tea.

Homemaker's Haven

Blankets last longer and give the best service when they are kept clean. A clean blanket has a fluffy nap that traps warmth and it is less likely to suffer insect damage than a soiled blanket.

Always read care instructions before cleaning a blanket. Some may specify drycleaning. Blankets that are labeled "handwash only" may be drycleaned. Electric blankets, on the other hand, can only be laundered; drycleaning damages the insulation on the wiring. Some wool blankets are specially treated for machine washability. When available, follow the laundry instruction on the care label for any blanket.

In general, washable blankets can be laundered in the following manner. Measure the length and width of a wool blanket. Pretreat spots or a soiled binding with a liquid detergent or a paste of water and granular detergent. Wash only one large blanket at a time.

Set the washer for a warm wash and cold rinse. After the washer has filled add detergent. If a granular product is used, agitate to dissolve. Stop the washer and distribute the blanket loosely and evenly around the agitator. Soak for 120 to 15 minutes. Then use a one minute gentle wash cycle. Let the water pump out and after a one minute spin, slowly advance the timer to the deep rinse. Rinse for one to two minutes and allow the washer to finish the wash cycle automatically.

A fabric softener may be used in the washer or dryer to help reduce static cling and make a blanket soft and fluffy.

Depending on the construction of the blanket, synthetics and those made of cotton can be washed on a permanent press cycle.

Dry a wool blanket on the high temperature setting. To absorb moisture and dry a blanket more quickly, place three or four dry towels in the dryer. Preheat the towels for three to five minutes. This helps absorb moisture, dry blankets rapidly and avoid pilling caused by long tumbling. Place the blanket in the dryer with the warm towels. Set dryer cntrol for about 20 minutes. Check the blanket after 10 minutes. Remove while still slightly damp to avoid shrinkage.

Place blanket on flat surface or over two lines to finish drying. Stretch the blanket to its original shape. When the blanket is completely dry, brush gently to raise nap. Press binding with a cool iron if needed.

Do not tumble dry washable knitted woolens. Instead trace the outline of the blanket on a clean piece of paper. After washing, block by finger pressing gently to this outline. Let the blanket dry to this shape.

Synthetic blankets and those made of cotton may de dried using the permanent press cycle and temperature. Use higher heat setting if the dryer has no permanent press setting. Dry completely; do not overdry to avoid wrinkling. Remove blanket from dryer as soon as the machine stops.

For line drying, hang a blanket over two parallel lines. Smooth and straighten edges. When partially dry change the position and straighten.

Dear Abby

Forced Heirship: Ancient Law Stirs New Controversy

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Stuck in Louisiana," who complained because in Louisiana, children automatically fall heir to their parents' inheritance whether they are deserving or not. As a third-year law student at Tulane University in New Orleans, I have studied this subject under the direction of several legal scholars who are expert in this area of law.

Louisiana's forced heirship laws are derived from ancient Roman law in existence before the birth of Christ. They are virtually identical to those found in almost every modern country today with the exception of the United States and Great Britain.

The purpose of forced heirship was based on the concept that a parent who brings a child into the world must ensure that the child is adequately cared for. Our laws simply place the burden on the parents rather than society.

I see no unfairness in this.

KALISTE J. SALOOM III

DEAR KALISTE: Read on for a copy of a letter sent to Louisiana State Sen. Fritz Windhorst:

'Dear Fritz: I attach a Dear Abby column that I found rather interesting. This law affects me personally and has been sticking in my craw for quite a while. I really think forced heirship in any form is unjust, and even though the regulations were relaxed somewhat, it is not enough.

"As Abby stated in her column, no one should be told to whom he or she must leave hard-earned dollars.

"Is there any chance of this law being struck down in the near future? That we are the only state that has it says something for its validity.

"Happy New Year!—(Signature Withheld)"

And now a Baton Rouge attorney has his day in court:

DEAR ABBY: "Stuck in Louisiana" is partially correct. Louisiana law does exalt the family unit with some consequent diminution in property rights, by requiring that when parents depart for the next world, a portion of their estate goes to the children they left in this one unless the parents have good cause to disinherit them.

Article 1621 of our Civil Code lists the following 11 just causes for disinheriting one's children:

1. If the child has struck the parent or even raised his hand to do so.

2. If the child is guilty of cruelty, crime or grievous injury toward the parent.

3. If the child has attempted to kill the parent.

4. If the child has accused the parent of a crime that bears the penalty of capital punishment—with the exception of high treason.

5. If the child has refused to feed a hungry parent.

6. If the child neglects to take care of an insane parent.

7. If the child has refused to ransom the parent while he or she was held captive.

DEAR MR. D.: First, get another doctor. Then get two dictionaries—one for yourself and one for the doctor who didn't know what an endocrinologist was.

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to the bride who invited 31 singles to her wedding and complained because 14 of them accepted and indicated they were bringing a guest.

We are surprised that the bride would assume that 31 single people would jump at the chance to attend a wedding alone. Would the bride want to attend a wedding and leave her fiance or boyfriend at home? Why should married couples get the privilege of coming in "twos" just because they are married?

We are two single women who would feel more comfortable being escorted to a wedding. We realize the bride has a limited budget and we sympathize. We can't offer a solution, but we must speak out for many singles who resent being discriminated against because they are not married.

K. AND V. IN L.A.

DEAR K. AND V.: If the bride (or groom) invites a single friend whom he knows is engaged, living with or going with someone, then good manners would dictate inviting the "significant other." But (and sorry to discriminate against those who don't have anyone special), most brides resent a single's presumptuousness in "digging up" a date for the occasion.

Cook Offers New Gift Idea Homemade Packaged Feasts

By LAURIE LOEWENSTEIN
Bethlehem Globe-Times

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — A fragrant serving of stuffed grape leaves STOP A sublime salad of greens, homemade cheese and black olives STOP Flaky layers of baklava glistening with honey STOP.

No, don't stop!

The friends and associates of Bethlehem's Rose Douvanis have a seemingly unstoppable appetite for her homemade specialties, and now the unstoppable cook has come up with a new way to satisfy them: the Meal-O-Gram.

For a moderate fee, Mrs. Douvanis will prepare a homemade meal to order, package it steaming hot and have it ready for pickup at her home.

The idea was born recently during a telephone conversation with her sister, Helena Yacoub, now living in Oregon.

"Helena used to work in Allentown City Hall with Jacqueline Poe, and she wanted to do something different for her birthday," Mrs. Douvanis said. "She wanted to treat her to a Middle Eastern meal."

The Bethlehem cook volunteered to act as the substitute good fairy and to prepare a special menu for Mrs. Poe.

"I called up Jackie, wished her a happy birthday and told her that, courtesy of Helena, she was to be treated to a Meal-O-Gram."

The pair agreed upon a date and the menu.

And so, Mrs. Douvanis packaged a feast of baba ghanough (eggplant with sesame paste), hors d'oeuvres, charcoaled kibbe patty, stuffed grape leaves, Syrian bread, tossed salad with homemade cheeses, baklava and ma-mool (pastry with date filling) for the birthday celebration.

And it was even prepared so that Mrs. Poe could reheat the leftovers.

"It was like heaven," said Mrs. Poe. "It was so good. She really is the best cook."

Although Mrs. Douvanis excels in Middle Eastern food, she also offers menus with Greek and Italian themes.

"I'm an adventurous cook," she said, "and I'll try anything."

One Is Enough

Fidel Castro came out of the hills of Cuba a quarter-century ago to displace dictator Fulgencio Batista's regime on the island nation only a TV wave-length from Florida.

Castro's revolution, at the time, was popular; gone was the dictator, here now was the peoples' leader. Cuban newsmen, who less than two years later were to be exiled, have recalled a Castro who strolled into Havana's newsrooms unannounced at all hours of the day to learn the latest news of the world, to exchange cigars with reporters and editors, sometimes to try his hand at cards during off-duty hours.

Those same newsmen also recalled the changes that came quickly as Soviet influence became more commonplace, and the word "communism" took on more prominence in any description of the Castro-led rebels. Newspapers were censored or closed quickly if they disagreed with the official Castro word.

Castro, then 31, gave his first victory speech on Jan. 1, 1959. It was covered fully by the free press of the world. In the next two decades, news accounts from Cuba were censored, biased or non-existent. Americans got their news from Cuba primarily through Radio Havana — actually a series of government-controlled stations — monitored by the major news services in Miami or Key West.

Only in the last few years have U.S. newsmen been allowed to return to Cuba, and then their movements are restricted.

It was in this setting that Castro again gave a victory speech on Jan. 1, 1984, proclaiming to the world and especially to the United States that his revolution has become "a reality ... with all promises kept."

"One way or the other, the United States will have to resign itself to living in this hemisphere with different social systems," Castro declared. That can't be contradicted, even if one wanted to do so.

But Cuban-style government, or revolution, or whatever it is called, does not have to exist in this hemisphere other than in Cuba. That was shown in Grenada.

Fond Farewell

One little-noticed change for 1984 is the optional use of the distinctive green and white Greenville municipal license plate.

The tag will no longer be required, although motorists can continue to use their old ones or pick up a new one at the municipal building. The amount paid for the tags will be added to the annual property tax bill as a motor vehicle tax.

We don't argue with the change since not providing the license plate will save the city some money, and it served no useful purpose in vehicle identification.

We do, however, mourn its passing. There are few from Greenville who haven't had the experience of spotting a Greenville license plate hundreds of miles from home, perhaps in the mountains of North Carolina, perhaps in a far-off state.

There was nothing like the Greenville license plate, and it could be picked out in a long line of approaching vehicles. No doubt it will gradually disappear and it will be missed.

Arab Strategy

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Visits by Yasser Arafat and a senior Saudi Arabian figure have thrust Egypt back into the limelight of Middle East politics, but major problems block Egypt's full return to Arab political life.

Despite a growing feeling that it is time to end Egypt's diplomatic isolation, no Arab state has come up with an accepted formula for restoring Egypt to the Arab League as long as it remains committed to the 1979 peace treaty with Israel.

President Hosni Mubarak has made clear he will not abrogate the treaty — a move that would severely strain Egypt's vital economic, political and military links with the United States and Western Europe.

Egypt hopes instead that if peace talks can begin involving the Palestine Liberation Organization, Jordan and Israel, the treaty will no longer be seen as a barrier to Cairo's return to Arab diplomatic ranks.

However, the Egyptians are keenly aware that these are factors over which they have little direct control.

And with Arab political ranks deeply divided and the PLO in shambles, prospects for decisive peace moves in the coming weeks seem uncertain.

Egypt's efforts to improve ties with the Arab world received a major boost Dec. 22 when Arafat paid a surprise visit to Cairo, publicly embracing Mubarak only two days after being driven from his last base in Lebanon by pro-Syrian Palestinian hardliners.

Arafat's visit was followed by favorable comments in Arab newspapers, which praised the meeting as a reaffirmation of Egypt's support for the Palestinian cause. Shortly afterward, Egypt and Jordan signed a joint trade agreement which ended the economic boycott Jordan imposed along with most other Arab states in wake of the peace treaty.

Less than three weeks later, Saudi Prince Talal Ibn Abdel-Aziz, a half brother of King Fahd, became the first member of the Saudi royal family to visit Cairo since the desert kingdom and 16 other Arab countries broke ties with Egypt over treaty.

But the Saudis have made it clear they oppose individual Arab states restoring formal diplomatic ties with Egypt pending approval by an Arab summit, tentatively set for late March in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

"It is very important to put Egypt back in Arab ranks," King Fahd told the Kuwait newspaper Al-Rai Al-Aam. "But such a decision should be adopted by an Arab summit."

Western diplomats and other observers expect such a move would be strongly opposed by Syria and Libya, and it remains uncertain if other Arab states would risk a showdown with the radicals as long as Egypt remained committed to peace with Israel.

Proof Will Be Needed In '84

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dealing with federal budget deficits is a lot easier for presidential candidates than for presidents.

"We must balance the budget, reduce tax rates and restore our defenses," said candidate Ronald Reagan in September 1980.

President Carter was skeptical, but that didn't faze his Republican challenger.

"Mr. Carter says he can't meet these challenges, that he can't do it," responded Reagan. "I believe him. He can't. But I refuse to accept his defeatist and pessimistic view of America. I know we will do these things and I know we will."

In fact, the candidate predicted the federal budget would be balanced by the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 1982.

Now comes Walter Mondale. He was Carter's vice president in those days and no doubt painfully aware of the political impact of Reagan's pledge to balance the budget.

He's also aware that it was a promise Reagan was unable to keep. Budget deficits have soared to record levels — "$200 billion a year as far as the eye can see," is Mondale's description and few economists would dispute that.

It still was possible in 1980 for a candidate to promise a balanced federal budget without his audience shouting him down as a fool or scoundrel or both.

Balanced budgets have moved beyond the realm of credibility.

Mondale is a cautious man. So, when he decided it was time to make a pledge to cut budget deficits, he talked about getting them down to $100 billion, maybe a shade below that.

In the context of just four years ago that would be taken as a rather modest goal. But it raised the same skeptical questions Reagan received in 1980.

Like candidate Reagan, candidate Mondale was confident.

"I can bring that spending down," he said.

Yeah, but how, the skeptics asked.

"I will be telling you as we go precisely how I intend to do it," he said.

Not only is Mondale's deficit cutting goal more modest, but he has given himself four years to achieve it, "by the end of the first term."

Reagan's balanced budget was based on two miracles.

He would cut at least $195 billion in five years by eliminating waste and "outright fraud," from federal programs. By concentrating on the money wasted and stolen, he could make substantial cuts without eliminating any federal programs. Secondly, his tax cuts would stimulate a flood of new revenue that would more than make up for the loss resulting from lower tax rates.

To those who doubted it would work that way, Reagan referred to his experience as governor of California and said, "I know that the things I am talking about here will work because they did work in a state that is a microcosm of our nation."

Mondale's rhetoric was far more cautious.

When asked whether he could say where his savings would be found, whether he could give specific dollar figures, the former vice president responded, "Sometimes I will, sometimes it will be impossible."

That answer may have been too honest and Mondale caught heat for it.

"A secret plan," scoffed Democratic rival John Glenn.

Mondale cited some of the areas he was certain could yield savings — big ticket weapons systems, the farm program, and health care.

But about all a candidate can offer is broad outlines and his confidence that somehow he can make the system work better for him than it has for the incumbent.

Reagan thought it was possible. He thought his formula would work. It didn't.

Now his Democratic challengers are calling him on it and saying they can bring the deficits down.

Maybe, they can. But they may have to convince a skeptical public first, that their economic forecasts are any better than his were.

The Pentagon Knows Best

"I'm in a jam," I told Fetzler, who works in the Pentagon.

"What's the problem now?"

"I want to do a story on the lousy camouflage fatigue uniforms the Army is issuing to its men."

"Why are you in jam?" he asked.

"Because if I write it I'll just be confirming what Secretary of State George Shultz and President Reagan said about American reporters not being on our side any more."

"What's wrong with the fatigues?"

"You should know better than I do. They're too heavy for the tropics, they are made of 50 percent nylon and don't breath, and when they get wet it takes forever for them to dry."

"They weren't meant to be used in the tropics. They were meant to be worn in northern Europe."

"Then why didn't the Army issue the troops going into Grenada lighter uniforms?"

"Because we didn't have any. But we're working on one right now."

"I found this out, but if I write it, Shultz and the president will think I'm on Castro's side."

"Why do you have to write it?" Fetzler wanted to know.

"Despite the complaints, the Army is going ahead and ordering 13.4 million more sets at a cost of $432 million. They've already issued 6.4 million at a cost of $205 million and the GI's hate them."

"The people in the Pentagon know what's best for the GI's. After all, they're generals."

"Then you think I better not say anything about it?"

"If you did you'd be giving aid and comfort to the Kremlin, which is what the press likes to do."

"What about the comfort of the American soldier?"

"That's none of your business. Why don't you write about what's good in the Army and not always what's bad?"

"Don't get me wrong. I'm on 'our' side," I said. "But obviously the Army goofed and refuses to admit they made a mistake. I don't want our boys fighting in the tropics in heavy fatigues."

"Would it surprise you to know the Pentagon is aware of the bad reviews on the battle dress and has appointed a commission to study it?"

"It wouldn't surprise me at all," I said. "But why are they going ahead with the $432-million order when there's a question if they're any good or not?"

"Because it's going to take 12 to 15 months to design and test a new fatigue uniform."

"Didn't the Army test the one they have now in the tropics before they ordered it?"

"That's just the kind of question that makes the president wonder if you people are on our side," Fetzler said.

"I'm not trying to make waves," I protested. "My problem is that where the American GI is concerned he should at least be dressed for the war he's asked to fight in. And if he isn't, the American public should know about it."

"When the Pentagon makes a mistake it is perfectly equipped to admit it. It doesn't need a bunch of Sandinista-loving reporters to tell the country what we're doing wrong," Fetzler said.

"But wouldn't a story on the uniforms stop the Army from wasting the taxpayers' money?"

"The money's a drop in the bucket compared to the damage you could do to our troops if they find out their battle clothes will make them sweat," Fetzler told me.

"I guess you're right. If you were me and wanted to prove your loyalty to America what would you write?"

"If you really want to prove you're on 'our' side, why don't you write a story on now tacky the Cuban fatigue uniforms are compared to ours?"

Strength For Today

The importance of Christian fellowship as a rewarding result of church attendance is often underestimated. To meet in a sanctuary with people who hold the same beliefs as we do, who press toward the same objectives, and who in general share a common outlook on life, means for most of inspiration, support amid the temptations of life and comfort in sorrows.

The Apostle Peter is such an outstanding biblical character largely because he was more like the average, weak, stumbling but well-intentioned Christian believer than almost any other figure in the Bible.

It is interesting to note that he was alone on the night he committed his great sin by denying Jesus. Perhaps if there had been one other disciple with him he might have had more courage.

The fellowships and moral support of Christian believers bring joy to the living of a Christian life.

Question Of Ethics Raised

WASHINGTON — Among the key issues in Japan's parliamentary elections last month was the ruling party's tolerance for ethical misconduct. Japanese voters, who denied that party an outright majority, apparently believed that its tolerance was excessive.

In the United States, voters will have a chance next November to judge the ethical behavior of Ronald Reagan's administration. The last three years have provided enough food for thought. At this point, however, it seems that Americans worry less than the Japanese about ethics in government.

It's uncertain, of course, where a current Justice Department investigation of insider stock trading will leave former Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Thayer, one of those involved. Meanwhile, year-end disclosures of USIA Charles Wick's fetish for surreptitious telephone tapping are perhaps a measure more of stupidity than wicked intent.

But these revelations conform to a list of questionable activities by top Reagan aides. Among the better-known examples are the lucrative stock deals that William Casey has made since becoming director of Central Intelligence; former national security adviser Richard Allen's receipt of a $1,000 gift from Japanese courtiers at the White House; Reagan confidant Michael Deaver's exploitation of office to write a diet book, and Attorney General William French Smith's attempted use of a generous tax shelter scheme.

Less frequently discussed but equally irksome practices might inclue vice presidential chief of staff Daniel J. Murphy's enthusiasm for luxurious travel at government expense, and the travel and hiring practices of Assistant Defense Secretary Lawrence Korb, who received a mere reprimand in an internal report last year.

While Jimmy Carter might have paid deeply for such excesses by subordinates, Reagan seems to have escaped serious political damage so far. Compared to foreign policy and the economy, ethical concerns have had little bearing on his public approval rating. The president appears immune to the questions of ethical judgment confronting his aides.

But a chief executive who delegates almost unlimited authority inevitably encourages errors and excess. Though Reagan may escape direct questions of personal impropriety, the behavior of those under him may be a fitting reflection on his administration.

Only one black nominated by President Reagan has been confirmed to a life-time federal judgeship. This record compares unfavorably to that of Jimmy Carter who, by the end of his third year in office, had placed 25 blacks in such posts. Reagan aides cite an inability to locate qualified black judges who share Reagan's conservatism as the principal reason for the administration's poorer showing.

PEDESTRIAN INJURED — Greenville Fire-Rescue Department workers attend to Ruby Coward, 54, of 2521 Memorial Drive after she was struck Tuesday by a vehicle while crossing the street in front of her house. Police investigators identified the driver of the vehicle involved in the mishap as Eric Sinclair Jr. of 97 Lancaster Drive. No charges were made in connection with the 11:50 a.m. collision, which caused an estimated $200 damage to the Sinclair vehicle. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Movie Cited As Basis For Declaring Mistrial

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — A nationally televised movie about incest has been cited as a reason for a mistrial in the case of a man accused of raping his girlfriend's 13-year-old daughter.

Roanoke Circuit Judge Kenneth E. Trabue on Tuesday said the Monday night airing of the movie "Something About Amelia" partly was responsible for his decision to order a new trial.

He also cited news accounts about a California sex abuse case and a Roanoke Times & World News story about the local case involving a 34-year-old Roanoke man.

The trial started Monday, but when the mother failed to bring her daughter to testify Trabue continued the trial until Tuesday and issued a warrant for the mother's arrest on a charge of obstruction of justice.

During the continuance, ABC broadcast "Something About Amelia" and the media carried stories about a child-molesting case in California.

Those two events and local coverage of the trial prejudiced the jury, said defense attorney Randy Leach, who asked for a mistrial or dismissal.

Although jurors said they hadn't read the local news accounts of the trial or seen the television movie, one juror said he heard a radio broadcast Tuesday morning about the California case.

In that case, child-molesting charges against a man were dropped after his 12-year-old stepdaughter refused to testify against him. The California child had been placed in solitary confinement for eight days when she refused to testify.

Trabue said he did not believe the jury "had been tainted" by one juror hearing a radio broadcast, but he was granting the mistrial so everyone involved could get "a calm reflection on the charges."

"I am satisfied there might be an issue of whether the defendant could have a fair trial if the child testifies" with the recent publicity, Trabue told the jurors before dismissing them.

He also said it "would appear to the defendant that the court had coerced the child to come to court" by issuing the warrant, Trabue said.

Trabue withdrew the warrant against the mother, but told her she was responsible for bringing her daughter to court Feb. 9 for a new trial.

The judge said he wanted the child to testify without any "undue influence from anybody."

The child's mother testified that she didn't know she was to appear in court until Monday because the child had not been subpoenaed.

She also testified that her daughter became hysterical and ran out the door when told she had to go to court Monday.

"I wanted to testify but I was scared," the child said.

Aviatrix Plans To Trace Amelia Earhart's Route

By SIOBHAN MORRISSEY
Associated Press Writer

MARLBORO, N.J. (AP) — Grace McGuire wants to reopen an old case from the annals of aviation, the disappearance of Amelia Earhart on her 1937 round-the-world flight.

To solve the mystery, she plans to retrace and complete Miss Earhart's projected route this summer in a renovated Lockheed Electra 10E, the same model plane the famed aviator was flying when she vanished.

Calling her flight "Project Destiny," Ms. McGuire said she believes it will show the disappearance was not related to a spying mission, as some have theorized, but rather that the plane simply ran out of gas.

Ms. McGuire, 36 and a native of Paisley, Scotland, had never heard of Amelia Earhart until she took up flying in the United States 15 years ago. She had originally planned to become a professional bagpiper but became interested in flying when she settled in Rumson, N.J.

"After my first lesson I said I'd never fly again because the instructor spun the aircraft," Ms. McGuire said. "I came back within a week."

She grew curious about the Earhart flight when her flying friends started calling her Amelia, joking about her slight resemblance to the ill-fated flier.

"I thought the trip would be a nice tribute to Amelia," she said. "I feel we owe her something. She deserved better luck."

On July 1, 1937, the plane carrying Miss Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, disappeared in the Pacific between Lae, New Guinea, and Howland Island, a narrow stretch of coral barely two miles long.

Ms. McGuire sees the 18-hour leg to Howland Island as the trickiest phase of the trip. Her plane will carry enough fuel to fly 21 hours, and even with perfect weather conditions it will be difficult to locate the tiny island, she said.

"If I can't find Howland, I'll just have to fly to Canton Island which is about 400 miles southeast," she said. "I really don't want to have to do that."

For authenticity, Ms. McGuire will pilot a twin of the Earhart plane. She found the Lockheed Electra 10E in a field outside Orlando, Fla., in 1981. Built in 1935, it is just seven months older than the one Miss Earhart flew. Pan Am and Varig Airlines had used it as a 10-seater passenger plane.

"The plane was a wreck; the right engine had caught fire the year before I bought it," she said. No longer airworthy, it was being stripped for parts by its owner.

When she asked the Federal Aviation Administration if they knew of any other Electra 10E's that she might buy for parts, they told her she had the only one registered in America.

To renovate the plane, Ms. McGuire enlisted the help of several members of the "99s," an international flying organization of women founded in 1928 by Amelia Earhart.

The "99s" helped gut the interior to make room for the extra-large gas tanks needed for extended flight, just as Miss Earhart had done. They also helped strip off 10 coats of paint to restore the plane to its original unpolished aluminum.

The flier calls her plane Muriel in honor of Miss Earhart's younger sister, who lives in Massachusetts.

The only deviation from the old flight equipment will be the addition of a modern radio and intercom system, she said, explaining that Miss Earhart and Noonan had communicated "by passing notes on a bamboo pole. It was too loud to shout above the engines."

As Noonan did, her navigator — as yet unchosen — will rely upon celestial navigation.

When finished, the repairs, outfitting and fueling of the plane will have cost almost $1 million, she estimated.

"Once I bought the plane, I knew there was no turning back," Ms. McGuire said. "I've literally mortgaged my future for this."

Ms. McGuire said she had borrowed money from her family and friends and sold everything she owned, including her small plane, car and an autographed Charles A. Lindbergh print.

She quit her job as a flight instructor to devote more time to "Project Destiny" and now depends on the support of six sponsors.

Ms. McGuire will fly about 29,000 miles in six weeks, cruising at a speed of 150 mph. She plans to fly from Miami to Puerto Rico and South America. Her itinerary then indicates an equatorial route that will take her to Africa, Asia and Australia. After that she will stop in New Guinea, on Howland Island, Hawaii and in Oakland, Calif. Her final stop will be Miami.

The aviator said she would be asking the Navy to help her with radio contact near Howland Island.

"I would really like to have a Coast Guard cutter out there as a back-up," she said. Miss Earhart was in radio contact with the Coast Guard before she disappeared.

Ms. McGuire scoffed at some of the theories about Miss Earhart's disappearance, including speculation that she had been spying on Japanese-held Pacific islands for the U.S. government. The theory commonly holds that she crash-landed, was taken prisoner and died of dysentery.

"She just ran out of gas" while searching for Howland Island, Ms. McGuire said.

Finding Water Now A Science

WORTHINGTON, Ohio (AP) — "Some people believe you can find water by voodoo techniques," says David Nielson of the National Water Well Association, but "they don't realize how sophisticated a science water exploration has become."

He named three new techniques used by modern well drillers.

One uses electrical resistance to determine the depth at which water lies and also measures how much water there is.

A second locates water by detecting temperature changes at the surface of the earth.

The third uses advanced aerial photography equipment. The pictures show fractures in bedrock where high-yielding water sources are often hidden.

Hope To Retry Larry Layton

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Prosecutors plan to retry former Peoples Temple member Larry Layton after obtaining favorable court rulings in the use of evidence against him.

Layton is the only person prosecuted in the 1978 slaying of U.S. Rep. Leo Ryan in an airstrip ambush outside Jonestown, Guyana.

His first trial ended Sept. 26, 1981, after the jury failed to agree on charges of conspiracy to murder Ryan, a California Democrat, and U.S. diplomat Richard Dwyer.

Strike Threat For Fieldcrest Raised

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — A union spokesman says workers at five Fieldcrest Mills plants in four states — including two plants in North Carolina — could strike in March over a contract dispute.

George Justice, assistant regional manager of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textiles Workers Union based here, said Tuesday that based on the company's response during the last round of negotiations in October, "a strike will be difficult to avoid."

The current contract at plants in Eden and Stokesdale along with Fieldale, Va., Columbus, Ga., and Phoenix City, Ala., expires March 1, and negotiations for a new contract have not begun.

Justice said the union is seeking an improved group insurance plan for workers and their families, job security guarantees and more fringe benefits.

He said Fieldcrest has made two requests that are "ridiculous." Those requests, he said, would give the company the right to set any kind of work schedule for its employees, and would allow the company to subcontract for all work at its plants.

"These are people's lives we're dealing with," said Justice. "A lot of the workers in these plants are nearing retirement, they can't breathe, and all they can do is sweep.

"To allow the company to subcontract for this type of work, which they'd like to do, is a disgrace. No union would agree to that, and we're not going to let them force it down our throats."

Haven Newton, Fieldcrest's vice president of industrial relations, said he was surprised by Justice's statements.

Hutchins Awaiting Supreme Court Decision

RALEIGH (AP) — Condemned murderer James W. Hutchins and his attorneys will spend today awaiting a U.S. Supreme Court decision on an appeal to delay his scheduled Friday execution.

If the court rejects the appeal, Hutchins would be the first prisoner executed in North Carolina since 1961, and only the second prisoner in the nation to be executed by lethal injection.

Hutchins was convicted in September 1979 of murdering two Rutherford County deputy sheriffs and a state trooper on May 31, 1979. Hutchins was sentenced to death for two of the killings and to life in prison for second-degree murder for shooting of one of the deputies.

Hutchins contends he was denied "effective assistance" from the two lawyers who represented him during his trial, but the prosecution contends Hutchins would not cooperate with his attorneys.

Meanwhile, Hutchins is not eating some meals and other Death Row inmates are refusing to cooperate with meal routine, prison officials said.

"Wouldn't you be a little upset?" Department of Correction spokesman Patty McQuillan said when asked why Hutchins was not eating.

She said Hutchins refused lunch and dinner on Saturday, lunch on Sunday and breakfast and lunch on Monday and just drank milk on Tuesday.

Guards have been sifting through the food by hand since Hutchins was placed in controlled custody on Friday to make sure there is "no contraband, from razors to drugs," she said.

She said she didn't know how many of the remaining 33 Death Row inmates are refusing to go to scheduled meals at the prison dining hall. But she said those prisoners are getting the food they need from the prison canteen.

"The warden and deputy warden say they have no written documents" saying that the prisoners are protesting the execution, Ms. McQuillan said. "They are assuming that there appears to be a passive support."

Under ordinary procedure, condemned inmates are escorted from Death Row to controlled custody in one of four holding cells near Central Prison's gas chamber about 24 to 72 hours before execution, said Ms. McQuillan.

But Hutchins was placed in a special holding cell on Friday, she said. That means he eats alone and must be placed in restraints when he comes out of the cell.

"The warden can move him at any time," Ms McQuillan said. "It's not to protect him from other inmates, but to protect him from himself — suicide attempts."

Once moved to the cell near the execution chamber, the inmate may meet with his family or attorneys in an adjoining room. He constantly is watched by the prison staff.

During the execution, a screen is erected to prevent the witnesses from watching the trained staff member administer the lethal injection. A saline solution first is pumped into the inmate's veins. Ms. McQuillan said that is followed by an anesthetic, sodium thiopental, to put the inmate to sleep and a fast-acting barbiturate, tavulon, to kill him.

Prices Rising On Vegetables

GREENSBORO (AP) — The recent freeze that ruined much of Florida's fruit and vegetables has translated into rapidly rising prices in North Carolina for produce.

A spot check of several counties found the cost of cabbage, green beans and squash has risen as much as 100 percent since cold, freezing rain, sleet and snow battered the Deep South from Texas to Florida.

The severe weather destoryed about 75 percent of Florida's vegetable crop and caused undetermined damage to citrus fruit.

In fact, Florida produce is so weather-beaten that North Carolina produce managers are turning to the West Coast and elsewhere. The cross-country shipping costs are causing still higher prices, retailers say.

A Florida citrus expert has predicted that orange juice prices could reach a record high as a result of late December's severe cold.

One of the products that has risen most in cost at local supermarkets is cabbage, which produce managers say was all but wiped out in the Florida freeze.

Green beans, which averaged 69 to 79 cents a pound before Christmas, are selling for more than a dollar a pound at several supermarkets. Squash also has doubled from its pre-holiday price of 49 to 59 cents a pound.

Although grocery buyers will pay double for some produce, they may not be able to find other vegetables and fruit. All types of greens are either nonexistent or in short supply in local stores.

"Our greens are wiped out completely," said one Greensboro retailer, whose store gets its greens from a South Carolina supplier. "We haven't had any since that hard freeze. We ran out of collards New Year's week. We could get them, but the quality is not any good."

AUSTERITY WORKS

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A government report says an 80.8 percent rise in the cost of living during 1983 is a sign the government's austerity program is working. The report said if inflation had continued at the 1982 pace, it would have reached 250 percent last year.

Concert Rehearsals Scheduled

The Greenville Choral Society will hold rehearsals, for its spring concert, beginning Jan. 24 at 7:30 p.m. at Immanuel Baptist Church, 110 S. Elm St.

Interested persons who wish to join the group do not need an audition, but voice placement is required. Placement takes about five minutes. Dr. Rhonda Fleming, director of the society, will be at Immanuel Church from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday for determining voice placement.

Safety County Meets

Police Chief Ted Holmes spoke at the recent monthly meeting of the Pitt County Safety Council, discussing traffic safety.

Holmes talked about the high rate of traffic accidents in the city and suggested that the layout of the city lends itself to a high rate of mishaps. The chief made the group aware of things occurring with the enforcement of traffic laws.

New officers named recently by the Safety Council's board of directors include: James Vincent, president; Charles Mayo, vice president; Polly Dail, secretary-treasurer; Margaret Register, recorder; and H.P. Norman, chaplain.

The council meets on the first Thursday of each month at 12:30 p.m. at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. A spokesman said dues may be sent to Polly Dail at 205 S. Pitt St. in Greenville or paid at the next meeting. Visitors do not have to join the council in order to attend.

Break-In Investigated

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of a break-in at Greenville Storage Co. on Atlantic Avenue that was reported at 8:13 a.m. Tuesday.

Officer R.L. Gorham said 115 cases of peas, 110 cases of ketchup, 40 cases of cake mix, and a case of toilet paper were stolen.

Student Recitals Planned

Two students in the school of music at East Carolina University will present their junior recitals at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. The recitals are free and are open to the public.

Oboist Roy Keith Hall of Stedman, a student of David Hawkins, will be assisted in his program by Kerry Carlin, piano; Karen McCall, soprano, and Robbie Lassons, bassoon. He will play works by Bach, Poulenc and Telemann.

Jonathan C. Sills of Laurinburg, flutist, a student of Beatrice Chauncey, will be accompanied by Kerry Carlin, piano. For his program he has selected works by Popp, Kennan and Prokoffief.

Police Family Unit Meets

The Greenville Police Family Association held its monthly meeting Monday night at the home of Martha Jackson.

Guest speaker for the meeting was Mrs. Lou Everett. Marlene Anderson was elected vice president.

The next meeting will be held Feb. 13 at the Greenville Police Hut.

Property Reported Stolen

Greenville police are investigating the theft of property from a vehicle parked at Doc Moore & Sons' Pest Control on Dickinson Avenue, which was reported about 9:35 a.m. Tuesday.

Officer J.E. Fleming said a power saw and 100 foot-long drop cord were taken.

Announce Agenda For City Council

Public hearings on two requests for rezoning head the City Council's agenda for Thursday's 7:30 p.m. meeting at city hall.

The council will consider a request by Shenandoah Development Co. to rezone from R-9 to R-6 (residential) a portion of a lot in section three of Tucker Farms development on the east side of Tobacco Road, south of Alice Drive, and a request by Derek Dunn to rezone from RA-20 to R-9 section five of Westhaven subdivision located south of Club Pines and east of N.C. 11.

Other business slated for consideration includes: scheduling of a public hearing on the proposed annexation of section five of Westhaven subdivision; five items recommended for approval by the Traffic Commission; the acceptance for permanent city maintenance of the cul-de-sac portion of Harrow Circle in Singletree Farm subdivision;

A revision to the by-laws of the board of trustees of Sheppard Memorial Library concerning the annual meeting date; a resolution appointing a representative to the Mid-East Commission; budget amendments; tax releases and refunds; a contract with the Greenville Area Preservation Association;

Adoption of a resolution to elect a tax shelter for employees' contributions to the law enforcement officers' retirement system; adoption of resolutions authorizing the sale of property by quitclaim deed; a lease agreement with Bronson Matney of Coin and Ring Man of Key Sales Inc. for the lease of a parking lot; and a request by Matney for a privilege license to operate a pawnshop.

Drinking Driver Level Said High

CHICAGO (AP) — Studies by three medical examiners indicate up to 90 percent of fatal highway accidents may involve drivers who have been drinking, a level a researcher called "far higher than has been supposed."

Dr. Robert R. Stivers of Fulton County, Ga., based his conclusion on 46 fatal accidents in which blood-alcohol tests were taken. It showed 91 percent involved a driver who had been drinking, and 84 percent a driver who was legally intoxicated.

Two other pathologists, who reported on 31 traffic fatalities in St. Louis County, Minn., and an unspecified number in Nueces County, Texas, said their findings agreed with Stivers'. The figures were compiled by the Skokie-based College of American Pathologists.

But researcher James C. Fell of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, which says 50 percent of highway fatalities involve drivers who are legally intoxicated, cautioned that statistics on alcohol involvement are difficult to collect. He said he suspected the samples in the new studies "were biased."

We Had Rain, Wind, And A Misplaced Squirrel

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Rain, wind and a misplaced squirrel made Tuesday night interesting, weather-wise, for Pitt County.

According to Greenville Utilities' Water Plant, 1.81 inches of precipitation fell in Greenville between 8 a.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. today, turning fields and lawns in the area into ponds and testing the stress point of most communities' drainage systems.

The nearly two inches of rain left streets and highways across the county rain slick but local public works and North Carolina Department of Transportation officials reported no unusual problems this morning.

In Greenville, a public works spokesman said an early-morning check showed the streets were "wet, but OK." Drainage from the often-heavy overnight rain was normal, said the spokesman.

Wet streets contributed to several accidents in Greenville Tuesday, including a wreck involving a Pitt County Sheriff's Department car driven by Deputy Jeffrey Macon Haddock of Route 1, Grimesland, that went out of control after running into a puddle of water on Charles Street near Stratford Arms Apartments, around 11 p.m.

Police said the car struck a utility pole guy wire and an entrance sign at the apartment complex, damaging the car, the sign, the light and a second vehicle.

Around the county, the story was the same: wet streets and roads with water standing but no major problems.

In Ayden a nut-eating rodent rather than the weather caused problems for the town's electrical system, said Utility Director Jordan Horne. A squirrel that strayed into a lightning arrester on an electrical transformer caused a one-hour outage around the Pines subdivision, he said. The creature was dispersed by the voltage, Horne said, and had to be located and removed by utility workers before power was restored.

He noted that this was the second "squirrel-related outage" the town had experienced in a week. "We've decided it must be squirrel season," the director said.

In Greenville a tree limb that fell on a high voltage line at Fourth and Holly streets caused a short outage in the area of Fourth and Jarvis streets, said Malcolm Green, superintendent of GUC's electrical department. Utilities reported no other problems during the wind and rain, he said.

No ice was reported on streets and roadways this morning but by 11 a.m. temperatures had dropped to 31 degrees Fahrenheit — below freezing. Highs today will be in the 30s and temperatures tonight will dip into the 20s, according to the National Weather Service. Cold, windy conditions will continue into Thursday.

May Be Linked To 13 Crimes

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — A man identified by police and prosecutors as a suspect in the bludgeoning deaths of a newspaper editor and his family has not been charged in those slayings, but has been ordered held under maximum $200,000 bond on an unrelated burglary charge.

He may be linked with 13 other crimes, including rape, robbery and battery, police said.

Calvin D. Perry III, 18, of Fort Wayne, was arraigned Tuesday in Allen Circuit Court on a burglary charge for the Jan. 5 burglary and beating of a 78-year-old woman. Authorities said Perry has made admissions against himself in connection with the Sept. 19 slayings of Dan Osborne, 35, editorial page editor of the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel; his wife, Jane; and their 11-year-old son, Ben.

Faded Fads

The "Cabbage Patch" craze is only the most recent in a long line of fads to sweep the nation. During this week in January, 1957, the first Frisbee appeared on the market. The original Frisbees were actually pie plates from the Frisbee Baking Company of Connecticut. The company that manufactured the Frisbee was also responsible for producing the Hula Hoop. The Hula Hoop originated in Australia as a piece of bamboo exercise equipment.

Abandon Caution For Shot At $10 Million Lottery

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO (AP) — The richest lottery ever in Canada has normally frugal people tossing caution to the chilly winds this week, putting their dollars down on a spectacular long shot and dreaming of a $10 million tax-free payoff.

The purse for the weekly Lotto 6-49 draw is bulging like never before because no one has picked the right combination of numbers for six weeks in a row.

Canadians, who normally save twice as much of their income as Americans do, are lining up in long queues at stores from Halifax to Vancouver to take a chance for $1 — the equivalent of 80 U.S. cents.

The odds against winning are 14 million to one, but lottery officials say they expect to sell about 40 million tickets, in a country with a population of 25 million.

To win the grand prize, estimated at $10 million Canadian ($8 million U.S.), a lottery player has to choose six numbers from one to 49 — and get them all right. If there is more than one winner, they share the pot.

Every Saturday night, the draw of six numbered balls from a spinning barrel is televised nationally.

This week's press of customers is playing havoc with the lottery system's computers, with even worse expected later.

"There should be lineups from here to Hawaii," Vancouver drugstore owner Ike Gaynor predicted.

Among those who bought early was Quebec Premier Rene Levesque, who commented on the public obsession with the lottery, but still bought six entries on Monday.

"We all have the right to dream," Levesque said.

Raymonde Laxton, a widow who lives with her four children in Longueuil, Quebec, won $1,070,076 Canadian (about $800,000 U.S.) last year, but is trying her luck again.

"I think it's fantastic, a sum like that," she said. "Normally I buy $10 worth of tickets each week, but last week I spent $49 because I think that's my lucky number."

She got four of the six numbers right last week, good enough to win a consolation prize of $50 and encourage her to ante up $49 more this time.

The largest lottery payoff ever in the United States was $8.8 million last July in Pennsylvania. Because the Internal Revenue Service takes a big slice from any American winnings, U.S. lotteries usually make their multi-million dollar payouts in annual installments.

Canada doesn't tax its lottery windfalls, so the payoff comes in one lump-sum check. But the thousands of Americans who cross the border to join the action should be warned that their winnings are taxable back home.

A Buffalo man who cashed in $500,000 in a Canadian lottery in 1977 tried to emigrate to avoid paying the tax and wound up owing the U.S. government more than he won in the first place.

Besides the government-run lotteries, Canada allows gambling on horse races. There are no off-track betting parlors, and casinos are banned, despite occasional proposals to make some out of the way spot — such as Uranium City in northern Saskatchewan — into a tourist attraction to rival Las Vegas.

Enthusiasm over the lottery riches has brightened a winter that has been uncommonly cold and snowy even for Canada.

But the country's largest newspaper, the Toronto Star, ran an editorial saying it is "hypocritical for governments to turn themselves into dream merchants."

The newspaper said the projects supported by lottery profits — such as recreation, medical research and cultural activities — should be paid for with tax money.

"Putting that sort of temptation in people's paths — and reinforcing it with hype that makes you feel almost silly if you don't rush out and buy a ticket — is a strange and distasteful business for governments to be in," the Star said.

But elsewhere in the paper one article about the lottery began "Don't wait — do it now!" and another told of a Star reporter's effort to consult a psychic to get the right six numbers.

"Listen, if I knew, I'd be putting my numbers in this week's draw," the psychic replied.

Block Urges No Hysteria

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John Block, saying the threat to human health still isn't known, is warning against public hysteria over possible contamination of food supplies and groundwater by a cancer-causing pesticide.

Block, after a meeting with the heads of the Environmental Protection Agency and Food and Drug Administration, as well as major agricultural groups, said Tuesday that while contamination by ethylene dibromide, EDB, is a major concern, it does not warrant panic.

"We're all concerned about residue in foodstuffs, but at what level?" Block said. "... There is a lot we don't know about EDB. It appears there is some hysteria out there that really isn't warranted."

In the latest developments, Florida on Tuesday stopped sale of a lemon cake mix after traces of EDB were found in a sample, and California authorities banned importation of citrus fruit fumigated with EDB until tolerance levels are determined.

The cake mix ordered was the 77th grain product the state has banned because of EDB contamination since Dec. 9. Spokesmen for the food industry have protested that Florida's 1-part-per-billion threshold is too strict.

Block met for an hour Tuesday with EPA chief William Ruckelshaus and Mark Novich, FDA's acting administrator. Also attending were more than a dozen representatives of agriculture trade groups and state organizations, ranging from the National Grange to the National Governors Association.

The meeting was closed to the public, but Block said afterwards the session was simply "an opportunity to review the problem and get a better understanding of it."

Ruckelshaus agreed and said he hopes to hold similar meetings with other groups, including consumer organizations.

Fire Destroys Old Theater

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Authorities are investigating a early-morning fire that destroyed Dilworth Theatre, a 45-year-old neighborhood landmark in Charlotte.

The fire was reported at 3:15 a.m. Tuesday and nearly 40 firefighters were called to the scene, authorities said. It took firefighters about two hours to bring the first under control.

The Dilworth, Charlotte's only non-chain regular movie house, relied mostly on walk-in trade and was known for its karate movies.

The theatre opened in 1939 as a second-run movie house, although in the 1940s it had a reputation for running current releases.

Elite Corps Watches World On Behalf Of Vatican State

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) — An elite corps of 200 church diplomats serve as the pope's eyes and ears in 107 countries around the world, combining a political mission with religious duties.

The United States on Tuesday became the 107th nation with formal diplomatic relations with the Holy See. The countries range from Communist Yugoslavia to fundamentalist Moslem Iran, from heavily Protestant Britain to predominantly Roman Catholic Brazil.

Like other diplomats, the Vatican envoys represent their head of state, in this case the pope, in political affairs.

But as representatives of the Roman Catholic Church and the Holy See, they also give voice to the special concerns of church teaching, religious liberty and other theological and humanitarian issues.

Thus, the papal envoy in Iran, acting on papal instructions, made appeals to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini for the release of the U.S. hostages seized in November 1979.

@articularly in Catholic countries, the Vatican envoys often have access to sources that other diplomats might not have. Vatican observers say the expanded relations with the Vatican could open up for Washington new channels of information from sensitive areas, such as Latin America and the Middle East, where churchmen have been active in the search for peace.

Papal diplomats in Chile and Argentina laid the groundwork for Pope John Paul II to mediate the territorial dispute over the Beagle Channel that brought the two predominantly Roman Catholic countries to the brink of war. Vatican specialists are continuing efforts for a solution.

John Paul has said the Vatican seeks "to promote and to maintain a climate of mutual trust and of dialogue with all the living forces of society, and, therefore, with the authorities who have received the mandate of fostering the common good."

While the sons of Roman nobility once made up the backbone of the Vatican's diplomatic corps, today's envoy is a graduate of a rigorous two-year course at the Pontifical Ecclesiastical Academy.

The potential diplomats, who must be priests under the age of 35, take courses in the history of Vatican diplomacy, diplomatic protocol and international law. They must be proficient in two foreign languages as well as Latin, the language of the church.

They aim to work their way through the Vatican's foreign service system to the top-level, ambassadorial posts.

The diplomatic corps in still heavily Italian, although the Vatican has moved since the 1960s to make it more international. There are seven Americans among the group.

The envoys report to the Council of Public Affairs, the Vatican's equivalent of the State Department, which has a staff of 40 diplomats.

One of the most important and time-consuming functions for men in the field is to advise the Vatican on candidates for bishops. Ambassadors themselves automatically gain the rank of archbishop.

Vatican diplomats this century have included two men who later became pope, Pius XII and John XXIII. Pope Paul VI also served briefly in the Vatican's foreign service.

Although the Vatican has increased its diplomatic ties in recent years with the addition of such countries as Britain, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Nepal and the United States, it has no formal ties with such countries as the Soviet Union, China, Israel, Jordan and the pope's ntive Poland.

Yitzhak Minervi, a former diplomat in Rome and now the Israeli Foreign Ministry's inspector general, said in a television interview last week that it was important to have relations with a body that has more than 790 million followers, "and we should strive to have relations" with the Vatican.

Premier Olof Palme of Sweden, after meeting with John Paul last October, said diplomatic ties were important "because of the rising importance of the pope in international questions such as peace and Third World development."

Greece established diplomatic relations in 1979, despite previous opposition from the Orthodox Church. Although tension still exists between the churches, a Foreign Ministry spokesman describes relations as "good and virtuous."

"Things are only perfect in heaven," said a Vatican spokesman in Athens.

Pipeline Fire Brings Delays

MOSCOW (AP) — A fire last month at a key pumping station along the Soviet Union's 2,800-mile natural gas pipeline to Western Europe will delay the start of the station by six months, a Western businessman said today.

Several control panels, crucial to the operation of the station, and other expensive equipment were destroyed in the blaze on Dec. 15 at the Urengoi pumping station at the head of the pipeline in western Siberia, said the businessman, asking not to be identified by name or organization.

No one was believed injured in the fire, which was controlled quickly, he said.

The Paris bureau of the Washington Post reported that there had been an explosion, but the businessman was unable to confirm that and said he had no reports on the cause of the fire or a damage estimate.

The fire caused no damage to the pipeline itself, which stretches Urengoi to Uzhgorod, on the Czechoslavakian border.

A guard at the pump station spotted the fire, which broke out among some boxes containing expensive control equipment, the businessman said.

The damaged pumping station, which houses five turbines, is the largest of the 41 stations on the pipeline.

The businessman said he did not expect the pipeline to be completed until the end of 1985, a year behind schedule.

Police Learning Body Language

SHEFFIELD, England (AP) — The South Yorkshire police are adding a new weapon to their arsenal of crime-fighting techniques: the ability to read clues hidden in body language.

The idea, Chief Inspector Brian Mordew of the community relations department said Sunday, is that learning how a person is thinking or behaving by his movements, posture or speech could help police improve their performance. So, a behavioral psychologist has been recruited to teach the officers what those signals mean.

"It may be an officer will find a person more responsive if he takes a certain approach or way of speaking, and we may also learn how a policeman can offend members of the public without intending to do so," Mordew said.

Now, presumably, if a masked man runs from a bank with cash spilling from a suitcase and stops to rub his chin suspiciously, officers will know something strange is indeed in the works.

ZONAL DISCUSSION

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Nuclear policy experts from five Balkan countries will meet in Athens next week to discuss the possibility of turning the Balkans into a nuclear-free zone, the government says.

LASER TOOL

PEKING (AP) — Chinese researchers are using laser acupuncture to cure infertility in dairy cows, the Xinhua news agency reports.

was master of ceremonies.

In remarks before his Windsor audience, Gillam said, "I believe we can shake up some things in eastern North Carolina and in Washington. ... We can tell Raleigh and Washington that we're tired of waiting for whatever bone they may toss us; we can tell them that we're going to take charge of our political and economic destiny ... and we can tell them we are doing it now."

Outlining plans for his campaign, Gillam announced his intention to hold numerous "town and crossroad meeting across this 21-country district ... people will have an opportunity to talk with me personally."

Differ In Way To Use Power

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A woman's career development is different from that of a man, according to Lucinda Wilcox of the University of Rochester Adult Counseling Center.

One example, she says, is different ways of using power.

"Girls are taught to use manipulation or dependence to get what they want," she says. "Boys learn how to work with peers and authority figures through team sports or the armed services. Later, in the workplace, men are generally more comfortable in stating their goals, the steps they want to take to get there, what they want to be paid for their work.

"Women usually have to learn how to communicate their wants directly, without coming across as attacking their supervisors or co-workers."

ASK INTERVENTION

LONDON (AP) — Friends of two Soviet Pentacostalists, who they said are seriously ill in prison camps, have asked the International Red Cross to intervene and provide treatment.

Helms' Critic Now Candidate

MINT HILL, N.C. (AP) — A Mint Hill businessman says disagreements with what Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has done lately spurred him on to challenge Helms for the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate.

George Wimbish, 40, a sales agent for electrical manufacturers, became Helms's first primary opponent since 1972 when he filed for office Tuesday in Raleigh.

"I don't agree with a lot of the things (Helms) has done of late," Wimbish said. "He has fallen quite a bit out of grace with me and other people," Wimbish said. "He literally controls who is going to run in North Carolina, or has in the past, and I don't think that's proper. Frankly, I feel I can do a better job than he's done."

Wimbish said he also believes that Helms "is running for president more than he is for re-election to the Senate."

Wimbish describes himself as a conservative in general agreement with the policies of the Reagan administration.

He said that running against an incumbent makes his candidacy a long shot.

"I guess if I didn't try, my chances are zero," he said. "If I try at least I have some chance."

Helms is expected to be challenged by Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt in the fall general election. Helms is expected to file before Congress reconvenes Jan. 25. Hunt's announcement is scheduled for Feb. 4.

Helms already has raised $1.7 million. A now-defunct committee dedicated to Sen. Helms's defeat, the N.C. Campaign Fund, raised almost $1.3 million last year.

Harrill Jones, a Gastonia Democrat, has announced for the Senate race. So far, he has not filed at the N.C. Board of Elections.

Seek $10 Million For Viet Kids

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers are trying to win $10 million for 73 Vietnamese orphans who survived the April 1975 crash of an Air Force transport 26 days before the fall of Saigon.

The 73 children all were adopted by people living outside the United States, most of them in France. In federal court, lawyers for the children and their parents contended the children suffered brain damage from lack of oxygen caused by sudden decompression of the airplane when a door blew off. The crash killed 135 people.

Series Of 5 Collisions In City Traffic

An estimated $15,550 damage resulted from a series of five traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a four-car collision on Evans Street, .6 mile south of the Howell Street intersection about 5:19 p.m.

Drivers of the cars involved were identified as George Whittington Lanford of 2109 Southview Drive, Annie Kite May of 100 Brinkley Road, Deborah Delores Babb of Evans Trailer Park and Martha Mullen West of Route 7, Greenville.

Police, who charged Ms. West with failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident, estimated damage at $4,000 to the West car, $1,500 to the Babb car, $400 to the May auto and $150 to the Lanford car.

Investigators said a Pitt County Sheriff's Department car driven by Deputy Jeffrey Macon Haddock of Route 1, Grimesland, went out of control after running into a puddle of water on Charles Street near Stratford Arms Apartments, about 11:02 p.m.

Officers said the car struck a utility pole guy wire and an entrance sign at the apartment complex. The force of the impact with the guy wire broke a light from the top of the pole, which fell onto a parked car owned by Shelton Brooks Wooten of 11 Ford St.

Damage was estimated at $3,500 to the car driven by Haddock, $250 to the Wooten car, $1,000 to the sign, and $250 to the pole and light.

A four-vehicle collision, involving cars driven by Donald Langley of 411 W. Roundtree Rive and Edith Marie Duff of 200 Williamsburg Road, and Jeffery Harold Davis of Route 8, Greenville, and a truck operated by Samuel Glenn Jones of Route 2, Greenville, occurred about 5:40 p.m. at the intersection of Greenville and Arlington boulevards.

Police, who charged Langley with driving while impaired, estimated damage at $700 to the Langley car, $200 to the Duff auto, $400 to the Jones truck and $500 to the Davis vehicle.

An estimated $800 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 4:26 p.m. mishap on Memorial Drive, 100 feet south of the Trade Street intersection.

Drivers of the vehicles were identified as Ellen Joan Dennison of Route 1, Farmville, and Gary Michael Hill of Route 8, Greenville.

Stephen Edwards Jones of Cannon Court Apartments was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 5:08 p.m. collision on Charles Street, 18 feet north of the Oakmont Drive intersection.

Investigators said the Jones truck collided with a car driven by William David Painter of 206 E. Seventh St., causing $300 damage to the truck and $800 damage to the car.

Charge Two In Shotgun Killing

CARTHAGE, N.C. (AP) — A 16-year-old Moore County youth and a 23-year-old woman are charged with murder in the shotgun slaying of the woman's husband, whose body had been found in a river.

Rosalyn Lynn Bostic Davenport and Steven Lee Warren Byrd, both of Carthage, were charged Tuesday in the death of Barry David Davenport, 29, said Moore County Sheriff James Wise.

Davenport's wife and sister had reported him missing Saturday, Wise said.

The Little River near Vass was searched after tire tracks were found near the area Monday. Davenport's fully-clothed body was found about 3 p.m., hidden under debris in the water.

Wise said it appeared Davenport died of a shotgun wound in the neck.

Mrs. Davenport and Byrd were charged about 5 a.m. Tuesday after questioning by sheriff's deputies, Wise said. He said Byrd often had kept the Davenports' three children.

The motive has been established, Wise said.

Trace Fires To Space Heaters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission says more house fires are being traced to space heaters bought by budget-conscious Americans.

"While the number of residential fires has declined about 11 percent since 1978 ... the number of heating equipment fires has risen over 20 percent," commission chairman Nancy Harvey Steorts says.

The commission said there were 217,000 fires and 860 fire deaths in 1982 involving home heating equipment.

Mrs. Steorts said the major problem stems from supplemental home heaters such as wood-burning stoves, kerosene heaters, gas-fired space heaters and electric space heaters. Though they are generally safe, she said, "too many accidents are happening because consumers are using them incorrectly."

"NO SUGAR COOKBOOK"
USES NEW SWEETENER

For people who prefer not to use refined sugar, or can not have it for health reasons, the "NO-SUGAR COOKBOOK" by Addie Gonshorowski is just what they are looking for.

Addie began creating recipes without sugar when members of her family were on sugar restricted diets. Finding good recipes almost impossible, she created her own.

Addie published the first book of sugarless recipes in 1977, revised and enlarged it in 1980, and has sold over 100,000 books. Her newest the "NO-SUGAR COOKBOOK" has been published in 1983 and takes advantage of the newest sweetener, "Equal"® low-calorie non-saccharin sweetener.

The cookbook offers a wide variety of cakes, pies, cookies, ice cream & desserts that are sweetened with mostly fruits and saccharin-free sweeteners.

The "NO-SUGAR COOKBOOK" contains 100 pages and is a handy 8½-5½ inch size, easy to read, perfect bound with durable cover.

The price is $5.99 each or two books for $10.99, including postage. Available from: AD-DEE PUBLISHERS, INC., P.O. BOX. 5426-3 GRNC, EUGENE, OREGON 97405.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today in a carryover of the selling that set in late Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 4.51 to 1,273.97 in the first half hour.

Losers took a 4-3 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

In both Monday's and Tuesday's trading, the market made brief runs past the Dow Jones industrials' record closing high of 1,287.20, reached last Nov. 29.

But each time selling intensified and stock prices turned back to finish the session with a loss.

Analysts said this pattern had disappointed some investors who had been looking for new highs in the Dow after its 28-point rise on heavy volume in the first trading week of the new year.

Among today's early volume leaders, Merrill Lynch dropped 3/4 to 34 1/8; General Motors lost 3/4 to 78 1/4; International Business Machines slipped 1/8 to 122 1/8, and K mart was unchanged at 32.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 7.74 to 1,278.48.

Losers closed slightly ahead of gainers on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 109.57 million shares, against 107.10 million in the previous session.

The NYSE composite index fell .49 to 97.09. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index edged up .02 to 227.24.

Bankruptcy For Former Premier

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Nguyen Cao Ky, the flamboyant fighter pilot who was premier of South Vietnam during the war in Southeast Asia, has filed for bankruptcy in federal court.u

Ky, who settled in Orange County in Southern Califoria seven years ago, said in papers filed to seek protection of federal bankruptcy law that he is $615,000 in debt.

The bankruptcy petition, filed last month and amended Thursday in federal court, claims Ky owes $20,000 to Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, Nev.

A spokesman for the casino said it does not disclose gambling debts.

Ky listed $27,000 in annual income from a liquor store he owns in the run-down Buena Clinton section of Garden Grove.

The former premier referred all questions to his attorney, Philip A. Putman, who was not immediately available for comment.

Recently, syndicated columnist Jack Anderson alleged that Ky was involved with terrorist Vietnamese gangs and escaped his country with about $8 million worth of gold, diamonds and currency.

Ky denied the allegations, which were reprinted in an Orange County Vietnamese-language newspaper.

Marc Than, a loan officer with a Vietnamese-run finance company, California Continental Investors Inc., said Ky "has been paying his bills."

California Continental, with offices in Washington, D.C., and Huntington Beach, Calif. was listed as Ky's major creditor, with Ky owing the company $250,000 in business loans.

The other major creditor listed was F.J. Hanshaw Enterprises, which operates Ky's liquor store in Garden Grove. The petition said Ky owes Hanshaw Enterprises $175,000.

Rocky Mount Tops Rampants, 57-45

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

ROCKY MOUNT — Tyrone Pride and Michael Earl each canned 16 points to pace Rocky Mount High School to a 57-45 Big East basketball victory over Rose High School last night.

Rose's girls, however, won for the first time ever in Rocky Mount, taking a 61-53 victory to remain unbeaten in league play.

The Gryphons were red hot from the field but didn't have too many tough shots, taking most of them from no more than five feet from the basket. They hit on 27 of 44 attempts for a blazing 61.4 percent.

In contrast, Rose missed a number of layups and rebound chippies and wound up with a cold 18 of 54 for 33.3 percent.

The Gryphons also controlled the boards after the first quarter of play. They finished with a 32-28 edge in rebounding, but outrebounded Rose, 25-17 in the final three quarters.

"We just couldn't seem to hit," Rose coach Jim Brewington said afterwards.

"They were much quicker than we were, and if I had it to do over, I would play them different." And, Brewington added, when he does it to do over — in the Greenville rematch later in the year — he will do it differently.

Brewington also felt that the way the Rampants played Rocky Mount — using straight man-to-man most of the way — was the cause of the rebounding problems.

"It was just one of those games. And it's awfully hard for us to win in Rocky Mount, too."

Rose got the opening basket, but Rocky Mount quickly pushed through its first three shots to take a 6-2 lead as Rose was missing four times.

Carlton Wilson broke the drought off a fast break and Tyrone Smith drove in for a layup to tie it at 6-6. Wilson then tossed back a missed shot to put Rose back ahead, 8-6.

Earl tied it for Rocky Mount, but Mack Walston hit on the back end of a two-shot foul for a 9-8 edge with 3:27 left.

Rocky Mount again rallied, however, with Earl hitting from the baseline and Pride making two from underneath for a 14-9 margin. Rose cut that back to 14-13 by the end of the quarter.

Walston put Rose back up and the two traded the lead until Keith Evans hit with 6:07 left to put Rocky Mount back ahead, 20-18 and Rose never caught up again. Jerome Smalls followed with a basket from the lane and minutes later, Pride was credited with a goal on a goal-tending call and Rocky Mount led by six, 26-20, with 2:11 left. The half ended with Rocky Mount up, 28-22.

The third period saw the two trade points until the final 1:17 when Rocky Mount got three straight, each by different players, to extend the lead to 11, 45-34.

The Gryphons, who hit eight of ten in the third period, came back with five of seven in the final quarter as they slowly pulled out to a 13-point lead, 51-38 on a basket by Pride with 3:25 to play. Rose cut it back to nine, but never came closer.

In addition to Pride and Earl, Anthony Dupree added 10 for the Gryphons.

Rose was led by Wilson with 17 and Walston with 15.

The loss left Rose with a 6-4 overall mark and a 1-1 Big East record. Rocky Mount climbs to 4-6, 1-1.

Rocky Mount's girls pumped in the first six points of their game, and ran out to a nine-point lead in the first quarter of play before Rose took command and gained the victory.

Rose, which didn't get off a shot until 4:49 remained, saw Rocky Mount steaily inch away, gaining a 17-8 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Rose rallied behind the play of Doris Richardson and inched back, cutting the lead to 21-19 before another Lady Gryphon spurt make it 29-21 with 3:16 to go in the half.

But the Rampettes kept battling, and trimmed the lead back to two, 32-30, at intermission.

Niansa Outlaw tied it up in the first three seconds of the third period, but Rocky Mount regained the lead on a bakset by Jewel Sharpe. Richardson then tied it up and Sheila Carmon stole the ball for a 6:45 basket that gave Rose the lead, 36-34, for the first time.

Rocky Mount moved back in front, 40-38, but Pam Smith hit a jumper and Vickie Parrott hit two free throws to put Rose back ahead, 42-40. Outlaw hit again and Richardson scored with 20 seconds left for a 46-40 lead at the end of the quarter.

Rocky Mount trimmed it back to two, 48-46, before Rose managed to inch away again, hitting their last six points at the line for the eight-point win.

Richardson led the way with 23 points, while Lori Woolard had 11.

Rocky Mount was paced by Sabrina Lewis with 16, Sharpe with 13 and Sabih Hamid with 11.

The Rose girls are now 2-8 overall and 2-0 in league play. Rocky Mount falls to 2-6, 0-2.

The Rampants play host to Beddingfield on Friday.

JV Game: Rocky Mount 57, Rose 44.

Hall Of Fame

Harmon Killebrew (L), Luis Aparicio (C) and Don Drysdale were elected to the baseball Hall of Fame by the Baseball Writers Association of America Tuesday. Aparicio is famous as a slick fielding shortstop and base stealer, Killebrew as a home run hitter and Drysdale as a pitcher. (AP Laserphoto)

Newly Elected Hall Members Displayed Variety Of Talents

NEW YORK (AP) — Luis Aparicio, Harmon Killebrew and Don Drysdale, who thrilled baseball fans in three different ways, are the newest elected members of the Hall of Fame.

Killebrew made his mark as a home-run hitter, Aparicio as a slick-fielding shortstop and basestealer and Drysdale as a pitcher, but they each carried their own area of strength to a spot in the Cooperstown, N.Y., shrine. Formal induction will be Aug. 12.

In balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America, which released the results Tuesday night, Aparicio was named by 84.6 percent of the voters, Killebrew by 83.1 and Drysdale, who made the Hall in his 10th year of eligibility, by 78.4. A player has to be named on 75 percent of the ballots to be elected.

Killebrew, in his fourth year on the ballot, is the first member of the Minnesota Twins, who started in 1961, to make the Hall of Fame. Aparicio, in his sixth year of eligibility, is the first Venezuelan.

A total of 403 members of the association voted in the election, so 303 votes were required. Aparicio got 341 votes, Killebrew 335 and Drysdale collected 316, only 13 more than he needed.

"It's a great moment," said Drysdale just as he was leaving a golf tournament in Rancho Mirage, Calif. "I really don't know how to react. But I'm just very happy that so many of my friends were around when I heard about it."

He said he was able to share the news with former teammates Duke Snider and Sandy Koufax and former major league manager Gene Mauch.

Killebrew and Aparicio were not available for comment, although a news conference was scheduled in New York today.

Relief specialist Hoyt Wilhelm, who appeared in more games than any other pitcher in baseball history, missed election by 13 votes.

"If you miss by only 13 votes, there's always a chance next year," said Wilhelm, 60, contacted in Sarasota, Fla. "What the heck, it's up to the writers, and if they don't vote for you, they don't vote for you."

Aparicio, Killebrew and Drysdale represent the largest group of players elected by the writers since 1972, when Yogi Berra, Sandy Koufax and Early Wynn were inducted.

Killebrew, 47, began his career in 1954 with the Washington Senators, as a 17-year-old out of an Idaho High School. He stayed with the team — later the Twins — for most of his career, playing his final season, 1975, with the Kansas City Royals.

He finished with 573 homers, more than any right-handed batter in the American League, but his lifetime batting average was only .256.

Aparicio began his career in 1956 with the Chicago White Sox, with whom he played for seven years. He played five years with Baltimore, returned to the White Sox for three more seasons, and finished his career with the Boston Red Sox.

While Killebrew is the prototype of a Hall of Famer, Aparicio is the antithesis. Many standouts at the shortstop position — Pee Wee Reese, Phil Rizzuto and Marty Marion — have been ignored in recent voting.

Aparicio was both a brilliant fielder and a potent offensive force during his 18 major league seasons that ended in 1974.

He never played a position other than shortstop in any of his 2,581 major league games; stole 506 bases and had a lifetime batting average of .262.

Drysdale played his entire career with the Dodgers, both in Brooklyn and Los Angeles.

His 209 victories, a Cy Young Award in 1962, when he was 25-9, and his six consecutive shutouts and 58 straight scoreless innings in 1968 were career highlights.

Drysdale, who pitched for 14 years, finished with 2,486 career strikeouts and a lifetime record of 209-166.

Ross Fires In 27 To Lead Tribe Win

CHOCOWINITY — Reggie Ross fired in 27 points to help Chocowinity maintain an unblemished Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference mark with a 67-58 victory over Bath in Tuesday high school basketball action.

Terry Moore connected on eight field goals for 16 points for the Indians. Galen Brady led Bath with 13 points, while Augustus Satchel added 12 and Billy Bonner 10.

Chocowinity pulled away to a 33-18 lead at halftime, then outscored Bath 15-12 in the third period. But Bath posted 30 points in the final quarter compared to 19 for the Tribe.

The Chocowinity girls suffered their first conference loss of the season, 46-36. The Lady Indians are now 6-1 in the Tobacco Belt while 7-2 overall.

Chocowinity rolled out to a 13-9 lead in the first period, but Bath came back with an 11-6 margin to take a 20-19 lead at the half. Bath again outscored the Lady Tribe, 11-4, in the third period to run its lead out to 31-23.

Vanessa Reddick led Bath with 25 points, while Kim Green had 15 for Chocowinity.

Chocowinity's boys are now 7-0 in the conference and 8-3 overall, while Bath slipped to 1-5 against league opponents.

The Indians entertain Bear Grass Friday.

Division I-A Autonomy Is Sought

DALLAS (AP) — Upper-division football schools hoped to get a reconsideration of the question of Division I-A autonomy as the 78th NCAA convention drew to a close.

A short time after the convention's dominant issue was settled — presidential powers over NCAA affairs — a new and equally bitter controversy arose over the rights of the top football schools to vote exclusively on their own legislation.

"This is a clear message," said Otis Singletary, president of the University of Kentucky and president of the College Football Association. "If we're never going to have relief, we've got to look at other alternatives."

Asked to specify, Singletary answered, "That's all I'm going to say."

Taking it a step further, Vince Dooley, Georgia football coach, said later he was ready for the top football schools to pull out of the NCAA.

But Dooley said he would not try to lead a movement away from the NCAA.

"I'm just one voice. It's just my own opinion," he said.

The measure was defeated by a clear margin in Division I and Division II. The count against I-A autonomy in Division I was 170-129 and 93-50 in Division II. Division III obviously approved the measure, but no exact count was taken.

"I cannot speak for anybody else," Dooley said. "I certainly don't have any authority to speak for the University of Georgia. I have long been an NCAA man, and loved the NCAA. But if I had anything to do with the issue of Division I-A football in the NCAA I would be convinced at this time we cannot operate within the NCAA as it is presently structured."

The battle over proposal No. 35, which would have set up a 44-member Board of Presidents with the power to veto actions by the convention, came to a vote after more than two hours of debate. Its defeat was followed by a near-unanimous adoption of No. 36, which creates a 44-member presidential commission without the power to set policy and make rules independently.

Backers of 35 said they had at least set the stage for greater supervision of athletic matters by university presidents.

"Certainly, we would have preferred 35," said Derek Bok, president of Harvard. "But we do have a presidential commission and it will be a major step forward."

Sponsors of No. 35 amended the original proposal in the final hours to dilute the powers originally called for in the proposal.

Under terms of No. 36, the members of the presidential commission will be elected by a mail vote of all chief executive officers of NCAA schools.

The preservation of the NCAA's policy of one-school, one-vote seeemed at the heart of the debate which began at 10 a.m. and went past noon. The debate was almost exclusively among college presidents.

Arliss Roaden, president of Tennessee Tech, was one of the most outspoken critics of No. 35.

"It is based on a false assumption," he told the packed convention hall. "I oppose the concentration of extreme power in the hands of a few people. I simply do not like the idea. Does any such mechanism exist in any responsible organization?"

Roaden's remarks were greeted with sustained applause from backers of No. 36. And backers of No. 35 applauded a speech by Joseph Pettit, president of Georgia Tech.

"The idea of a town meeting just does not work for us anymore," he said with a wave of his hand around the huge room. "We are not a town anymore. We're a good-sized city. No. 35 is not perfect, my friends, but it is a start. It is an opportunity for us to effect legitimate improvement."

In another vote Tuesday, a measure was turned down to give Division I-A its own legislative meeting in June.

Conley Pins Patriots

HOLLYWOOD — Gerald Harper, Conley's 197-pounder, was down 4-2 after one period, but quickly reversed things, gaining a pin over Steve Yurko to insure a 36-28 wrestling victory by the Vikings over West Carteret last night.

The win left Conley unbeaten in four Coastal Conference matches and 9-0 overall.

"West Carteret was ranked 13th coming in and we were ranked 15th (in the state)," Coach Milt Sherman said. "They had beaten us by 20 points in their own tournament, which they won, last month."

West Carteret, along with Havelock, had been picked to be the ones most likely to have a shot at dethroning Conley's perinnial champions this season, but the Vikes topped both in home matches. They still have to go on the road to both places, however.

"Havelock will be a lion's den when we go down there and West Carteret will be a tough place to wrestle at also. The league is so well balanced between the three, however, that it would be impossible to predict who will win any of them."

Havelock beat West Carteret in their lone meeting so far, back in December, taking a three-point victory.

West Carteret jumped off to a 15-0 lead over Conley before the Vikings fought back to win. Along the way, Shawn Hardy got a 7-4 decision over Willie Cowperthwaite at 140 pounds. Cowperthwaite is the defending conference champ and had won the West Careteret tournament. Then, at 147, Martin Anderson pinned Kafer Peele in 15 seconds, the fastest pin by a Viking this year. Peele had beaten Anderson in the tournament earlier this year. That brought the match even at 18-18 at the time.

The Vikings return to action on Thursday, traveling to White Oak.

Summary:

Hatteras Tops Bullets, 74-61

HATTERAS — Cape Hatteras High School jumped out to an early lead and rolled up a 74-61 victory over Jamesville High School last night in a non-conference basketball contest.

Jamesville's girls got some key free throws from Robin Gardner to pull out a 31-30 overtime victory in their game.

The Bullets fell behind early in the boys' game as Hatteras built up a 20-12 lead during the first period. Hatteras continued to pull away, outscoring Jamesville, 24-11, in the second quarter. That left the host team in front, 44-23, at intermission.

Jamesville was able to cut one point off the lead in the third period, but still trailed, 60-40, going into the last quarter. In that, Jamesville outscored Hatteras, 21-14, but fell far short.

William Jones led Hatteras with 25 points, while Lonnie Woods added 21 and Joey Hammond had 12. Richie Ange led Jamesville with 17, while Tracy Peele had 14.

Hatteras pushed out into an 8-2 lead in the first quarter of the girls' game, but was unable to hold it. Jamesville came back, 16-8, and pushed into an 18-16 lead at the half. In the third period, Jamesville inched further ahead, 28-24, but Hatteras then rallied to take a 31-30 lead. Gardner hit with about 20 seconds to go at the foul line, and tied it up, with Hatteras failing to get off a shot before the horn.

In the extra period, neither team scored until Gardner was fouled in the act of shooting with about 30 seconds to go. She made the first but missed the second, and Jamesville was able to hold on the rest of the way to claim the slim victory.

Gardner led Jamesville with 16 points and was the game's only double figure scorer.

Jamesville's boys are now 2-5 overall, while the girls are 2-5 also. The Bullets travel to Mattamuskeet on Friday.

Hardy Paces Jaguar Win

KINSTON — Kent Hardy fired in 27 points as Farmville Central took a 63-61 overtime victory over North Lenoir Tuesday in high school basketball action.

Wilhemenia Cratch scored 18 and Veronica Chapman 14 to lead the Lady Hawks to a 66-56 victory over Farmville in the girls game. Stephanie Newton paced the Lady Jaguars with 24 points, while Joy Peaden added 11.

Bobby Evans and Ronnie Barnes bucketed 10 points each for Farmville Central. But North Lenoir's Larry Johnson led all scorers with 30 points on the night. Jimmy Core added 10 for the Hawks.

Farmville led 33-29 at halftime and held a seven-point edge going into the fourth quarter. The Jaguars built to a 10-point lead in the final period, but missed free throws allowed the Hawks to get back in the game.

"We played well in spots — as well as we have all year" Farmville Coach Mike Terrell said. "We had a couple of breakdowns on defense. In the last couple of minutes of the ball game, we missed four winning points in a row."

The Lady Jaguars trailed by five at intermission, but North Lenoir pulled away with a 15-10 advantage in the third quarter.

The Jaguars, who entertain North Pitt Friday, are now 2-9 overall while 0-2 in the Eastern Carolina 3-A race. The Lady Jags dropped to 5-7 on the year.

Rams Defeat North Pitt

SNOW HILL — Greene Central "dodged the bullet" twice Tuesday night against North Pitt as the Lady Rams survived a 50-48 scare and the boys took a 61-57 victory in Eastern Carolina 3-A high school basketball action.

Cyndi Hicks paced the Lady Rams with 20 points, while Anntionette Wilkes fired in 12 and Allison Battle 10. Sherry Bradley led the Pant-HERS with 14 points, with Deloris Pittman adding 11 and Sudie Sharpe 10.

Theodore Edwards pumped in 24 points to lead the Rams to their 10th win in 12 outings, including a 2-0 conference mark. Anthony Thompson added 13 points and Boneree Johnson 12 for Greene Central.

Linwood Harris paced North Pitt with 16 points on the night, while Keith Clark contributed 14 and Linny Langley 10 for the Panthers.

After trailing most of the game, North Pitt's girls knotted the score with 23 seconds left on the clock. But Melody Bowen sank a field goal inside with three seconds left to put the game away for Greene Central.

The Lady Rams trailed 38-34 going into the final quarter after a 27-27 halftime score, but they outscored the Pant-HERS 16-10 in the final period.

Greene Central sank nine of 14 free throws in the fourth quarter of the boys game to ice the win. The Rams led 27-19 at halftime but were outscored in the third quarter 18-15 and 20-19 in the fourth.

North Pitt slipped to 1-2 in the conference and 5-6 overall with the loss. The Lady Rams improved their record to 2-0 in the conference and 9-3 overall, while the Pant-HERS are now 2-1 and 7-4.

Greene Central hosts Ayden-Grifton Friday, while North Pitt travels to Farmville Central.

EBA Gains First Win

E.B. Aycock's Jaguars won their first game of the season last night, downing Rocky Mount, 45-42.

Marion Barnes led the Jaguars in the win with 16 points while Terry Warren added 14.

The Lady Jaguars rolled up a 54-35 win in their game. Kim Dupree led Aycock with 22 points while Betsy Puily had 14 for Rocky Mount.

The EBA girls are now 2-0, while the boys are 1-1.

Aycock travels to Beddingfield on Friday.

AYDEN — Ayden Middle School split a pair of games with Woodington yesterday.

Ayden's boys took a 38-32 victory. Eric Blount led Ayden with 14 points. Ray Koonce had 12 and Reggie Kennion had 13 for Woodington.

In the girls' game, Woodington took a 38-20 win. Susan Hill led the winners with 11 points, while Ruby Dail had seven for Ayden.

Rose Matmen Top Gryphons

Rose High School's Marvin Fleming gained a pin in his match and enabled the Rampant wrestling team to withstand a rally by Rocky Mount last night for a 36-30 victory.

Rocky Mount won four of the last six matches, with Fleming taking a pin over Cedrick Mercer at 197-pounds to seal the victory. The other win in the string came at 157 where Gary Barrett won by forfeit.

The win kept Rose's unbeaten string alive at eight straight now.

The Rampants travel to Wilson Beddingfield on Friday.

Belhaven Tops Bear Grass

BEAR GRASS — Belhaven High School swept a pair of Tobacco Belt basketball games from hosting Bear Grass last night. Belhaven won the boys' game, 39-34 and took the girls, 53-35.

Bear Grass managed to inch into the lead in the first period of the boys' game, 8-6, but was unable to hold to it. Belhaven came back and outscored the Bears, 10-8, in the second quarter and tie it at the half, 16-16.

In the third quarter, Belhaven pushed ahead, leading 27-24 as the final quarter began. In that, the Bears were outhit, 12-10, as Belhaven claimed the win.

Michael Reddick led Belhaven with 13 points. Lawrence Watson led the Bears with 14 while Darryl Brown added 10.

In the girls' contest, Belhaven streaked out to a 16-6 lead in the first quarter and was never caught. The Lady Bears rallied, 15-10, in the second period but still trailed, 26-21, at intermission. Belhaven increased its lead to 40-31 in the third frame, and outscored Bear Grass, 13-4, in the final quarter.

Telly Colton led Belhaven with 24 points, while Amy Lilly had 13 for the Bears.

The Bear Grass boys are now 4-2 in league play and 4-5 overall. The girls drop to 2-4, 5-5. Bear Grass returns to action on Friday at Chocowinity.

Southern Nash Rolls Past Chargers, 75-59

STANHOPE — Kelvin Crudup fired in 23 points as Southern Nash shot 68 percent from the field and defeated Ayden-Grifton 75-59 in Eastern Carolina 3-A Conference basketball action.

Cora Faison connected on 12 field goals for 24 points and the Lady Chargers held off a second-half rally by Southern Nash to take a 52-43 victory

Terry Battle added 15 points, while Chris Hawkins and Lonnie Artis had 10 each for the Firebirds. Doug Anderson led Ayden-Grifton with 16 points, and Calvin Peterson added 14 and Mike Dixon 12 for the Chargers, now 2-1 in the conference and 8-3 overall.

"We just couldn't stop them on defense," Chargers Coach Bob Murphrey said. "They shot the ball exceptionally well; our defense couldn't do anything.

"We just didn't have much success. I didn't think we played a bad ballgame; they're very impressive."

Southern Nash held a slim 29-27 halftime margin, but the Firebirds came alive and outscored A-G 22-13 in the third quarter and 24-19 in the fourth.

"I think we've got a good shot at them at home," Murphrey said. "That's a difficult place to play. I'll be surprised if anyone in our league goes down there and wins.

"I think were coming along pretty well; our inside play is improving. I don't think tonight is any indication that we're not getting better. It was just one of those nights when the other team is doing everything right."

Tracy Durant added 13 points as the Lady Chargers posted their fourth win in 11 outings, including two out of three in the conference.

Ellen Lewis scored 14 and Scarlett Jones 13 for Southern Nash.

The Lady Chargers led 32-21 at intermission before being outscored 22-20 in the second half.

Ayden-Grifton visits Greene Central Friday.

Knights Fall Short, Bow To Bethel, 49-48

KINSTON — Greenville Christian narrowly missed a pair of victories as the boys team fell to Bethel 49-48, and the girls lost 51-46 Tuesday in high school basketball action.

After trailing 20-19 at halftime, the GCA boys fell behind 33-29 at the end of the third quarter. But the Knights rallied in the final period to outscore Bethel 19-16.

The Knights got the ball out of bounds with eight seconds on the clock, but their final shot missed the target at the buzzer.

Greenville Christian connected on just six out of 16 free throws in the game.

"(Free throw shooting has) plagued us all year long," GCA Coach Dale Thatcher said. "If we had made one one or two more it would have helped.

"I'm still convinced we have a good team. We had the ball with eight seconds left and took aa short jumper that fell away, and that was the game."

Scott Wilson led Bethel with 20 points on the night, while David Smith canned 12 and Timmy Griffin 11. Mike Bragg scored 14 and Chris Harris and Brian House 10 each for Greenville Chirstian, now 4-3 on the season.

Jenny West fired in 20 points and Bobbie Harrell added 13 to lead Bethel past the Lady Knights. But Kathy Vernelson led all scorers with 23 points in the contest.

Greenville Christian held a 25-22 advantage at intermission but scored just four points in the third quarter while Bethel posted 11. Bethel outscored GCA 18-17 in the final period.

"We had one girl out sick, and I think we were kind of missing her" Thatcher said. "Bethel shot amazingly well from the line. Jenny West got hot toward the end. They got hot, and we couldn't stop them."

Greenville Christian's girls slipped to 4-2 with the loss. GCA hosts Falls Road Friday.

Lefty Has A New Version

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell has come up with a basketball version of Abbott and Costello's "Who's On First?" baseball routine.

Asked at a news conference Tuesday who would guard North Carolina's flashy Michael Jordan in Thursday night's game, Driesell said: "Herman (Veal) and I don't know."

What the irrepressible Lefty meant, of course, was that Veal would get the unenviable starting assignment against Jordan, but that he would need help.

"One person can't guard Michael Jordan the whole game," Driesell said. "That's too tough."

Driesell said he would employ a variety of defenses as the fifth-ranked Terps, 10-1, face North Carolina, the nation's No. 1 team with a 10-0 mark, before a sellout crowd of 14,500 at Cole Field House.

While declining to tip his hand in advance of the Atlantic Coast Conference struggle, Driesell cracked: "Generally speaking, there will be a man on Jordan, no matter what we play. We don't want Jordan running around out there loose."

Jordan, a first team All American choice last year who is averaging 14.7 points as a junior, is just one of the many talented players on the Tar Heels' roster.

"North Carolina has always had great players," Driesell said while also praising senior center Sam Perkins and freshman guard Kenny Smith. "This may be one of their most talented teams."

Driesell, while suggesting that Perkins likely would be a high pick in the next National Basketball Association draft, added as a joke, "and I hope Jordan comes out of school. . .I think he should."

Although Maryland has had some success against Perkins in the past, Driesell noted: "I don't think you can guard Perkins one-on-one, although Ben Coleman is physical and matches up pretty good with him."

Coleman, a senior averaging 14.6 points to Perkins' 16.9, has incurred three quick fouls in two recent games and had to spend a lot of first half time on the bench.

"He can't afford to do it in this game," said Driesell, who added he might sit Coleman down this time after two fouls and give Mark Fothergill more playing time, "depending on the tempo of the game and the score."

To prepare for the expected North Carolina traps on defense, Maryland has been bringing the ball upcourt in practice against eight defenders.

"We ready to play an emotional game," Driesell said. "It's going to be hard-hitting underneath the boards. I know basketball is supposed to be a non-contact sport, but they're aggressive and we're aggressive."

"We're looking forward to trying to upset them," he said. "It should be a good game."

Roanoke Tops Williamston

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School broke open a close game in the final period and took a 48-39 victory over Williamston in a Northeastern Conference basketball game last night.

Roanoke's girls also came away with a victory, downing the Lady Tigers, 45-33.

Williamston's boys pushed into a 14-10 lead in the first quarter of their game, but Roanoke began to rally in the second frame. The Redskins outscored their guests, 11-9, and trailed only 23-21 at intermission.

Those two points were wiped away in the third period, which ended with the score tied at 31-31. Then, in the final quarter, the Redskins pulled away, 17-8, to take the victory.

Garrett Baker led Roanoke with 24 points and was the lone scorer in double figures.

Roanoke's boys climb to 5-2 in the league and 5-5 overall, while Williamston drops to 1-5, 3-5.

In the girls' contest, Roanoke shot away to a 14-2 lead after one period and was never in trouble. The Lady Redskins held a 27-12 lead at intermission and swelled that out to 33-14 in the third quarter. Williamston was allowed a 19-12 rally in the final period.

Gloria Duggins and Sheryl Randolph each scored 14 points to lead Roanoke, while Teresa Brown added 10. Kim Bowen had 11 and Timberly Rodgers had 10 for Williamston.

The Roanoke girls are now 4-3 in the league and 5-5 overall. Williamston is 1-5, 2-7.

Williamston plays host to Washington and Roanoke travels to Roanoke Rapids on Friday.

Patriots Nip Conley, 52-46

MOREHEAD CITY — Donald Johnson pumped in 16 points and David Yancey 12 as West Carteret held off D.H. Conley 52-46 in Coastal 3-A Conference high school basketball action Tuesday.

Mechio Kornegay fired in 27 points to lead the Valkyries to a 53-47 rally over West Carteret. Karen Barrett added 10 for Conley. Stephanie Moore led the Patriots with 20, while Donna Lawrence added 15.

Victor Barnes paced Conley with 12 points, and Louis Bryant added 10.

The Vikings held a 23-20 advantage at halftime, but West Carteret trimmed the margin by a point in the third quarter before blowing by Conley with a 19-12 burst in the final period.

Conley is now 0-2 in the conference while 5-7 overall. The Valkyries improved their conference mark to 2-0 while 12-1 overall. Conley travels to White Oak Friday for another Coastal 3-A Conference matchup.

Tarboro Takes Two From Pack

TARBORO — Tarboro High School rolled up a pair of wins over Washington in Northeastern Conference basketball action last night. The Vikings downed the Pam Pack, 59-51, while the Valkyries came away with a 50-29 win.

In the boys' game, Washington gained the early lead, taking a 13-8 advantage in the first period. Both teams pushed through 12 points in the second quarter, leaving Washington in command, 25-20 at intermission.

But in the third period, Tarboro came out red hot, firing through 24 points while holding the Pack to just ten. That put Tarboro into a 44-35 lead. Washington was able to cut but one off that in the final quarter.

Kenny Hopkins led Tarboro with 16 points while Curtis Jones had 15. Adrian Dudley led Washington with 14 points.

Tarboro's girls ran out to a 12-2 lead in the first quarter and were never caught by the Lady Pack. Tarboro boosted its lead to 22-7 at halftime and held a 37-16 lead going into the final quarter.

Pam Long led Tarboro with 13 points while Winnegan had 10. Gloria Sherrod had 11 to lead Washington.

The Pam Pack visits Williamston on Friday.

Mammals With Insect Lifestyle Excite Scientists

By D.J. FREDERICK
Nat'l Georgraphic
News Service

WASHINGTON — Colonies of the naked mole rat, an extraordinary African mammal that behaves like an insect, have been set up in laboratories at the University of Michigan and Cornell University.

The naked mole rats' appearance is almost as bizarre as their behavior. The almost hairless rodents have bodies resembling little sausages and two protruding front teeth that makes them look like pocket-size walruses.

They've been described as "one of God's ugliest creatures", but in the eyes of some beholders, the weird-looking animals are beautiful to watch because of their behavior.

"They're the most insect-like mammals I've ever seen", says Paul W. Sherman, assistant professor of neurobiology and behavior at Cornell.

"Their social behavior is one of the mammal finds of the century", comments Richard D. Alexander, a University of Michigan biology professor.

Unlike most mole rats, which live alone or in small family groups, naked mole rats congregate in large underground colonies with an extensive tunnel system and a large central nesting area. Found mostly in Kenya, Ethiopia, and Somalia, they subsist on large tubers that grow deep in the ground there.

Jennifer U.M. Jarvis, a zoologist at the University of Cape Town in South Africa, pioneered naked mole rat studies with her work in Kenya. She found more than 80 of the animals in a single colony and suspects that many more commonly group together.

Partly supported by the National Geographic Society and assisted by Jarvis, Sherman and Alexander collected their mole rats in Kenya, then brought some back to their respective universities where they set up colonies in laboratories.

In the dimly lit labs, the mole rats — 63 at Michigan and 90 at Cornell — scamper through a series of clear plexiglass tunnels that are intersected by nest boxes.

Casual visitors entering one of the labs ... darkened to simulate underground conditions in the wold ... sometimes think they've blundered into a chicken coop by mistake. When they're riled, the rodents chirp like baby chicks.

But it's their insect-like behavior that most intrigues scientists.

As with termites, a worker caste composed of both sexes keeps the tunnels clear of obstructions, forages for food, and provision the nesting area.

All the breeding in a colony is typically done by a queen and one or two dominant male consorts, although the worker caste is not sterile.

"It's most unusual," says Alexander. "Naked mole rats are the only mammals with a caste that surrenders its breeding rights without constant friction or fighting.

Similar to certain bees and wasps, the queen — usually the largest female in the nest — rules this closed society by constantly asserting her dominance. Observes Sherman, "She simply doesn't lie around being groomed all day, but is often on the move. When encountering workers, she sometimes bumps or touches them, and in the narrow confines of a tunnel she steps over her subjects or they usually move below her."

In the lab at Cornell, litters produced by queens have averaged about 10 pups. Fully grown, the smallest mole rats weigh about half an ounce, the largest two ounces. They measure roughly three to five inches from snout to tail tip.

Despite their small size, they're long-lived rodents. Jarvis is still studying some in South Africa that she collected in Kenya 10 years ago.

Digging and earth-moving are favorite naked mole rat activities. Burrowing through the ground, the rodent chisels with its oversize front teeth and packs the walls of its tunnel by pushing with its snout.

Tunneling is a two-tiered effort. The mole rat at the front of the digging chain roots out a pile of dirt and moves it between its legs backwarfd toward the tunnel opening to a fellow worker, who kicks it out. Then the animal moves back to the front for more digging by crawling gingerly over other workers, who are moving slowly backward with their loads of dirt.

"It's like a Caterpillar tractor tread of moving mole rats, pushing inexorfably forward," says Sherman.

But beneath this normally friendly, cooperative society lies a competitive demon, often unleashed when the queen disappears. "Absolute mayhem sometimes ensues when a queen is taken out of a colony," says Sherman.

"Animals attack each other. There is a tremendous competition to be part of the power structure, and it's all expressed when the breeder disappears. Things don't settle down until another female becomes dominant and starts breeding."

Then peace comes, and the naked mole rat reverts to its industrious insect-like behavior.

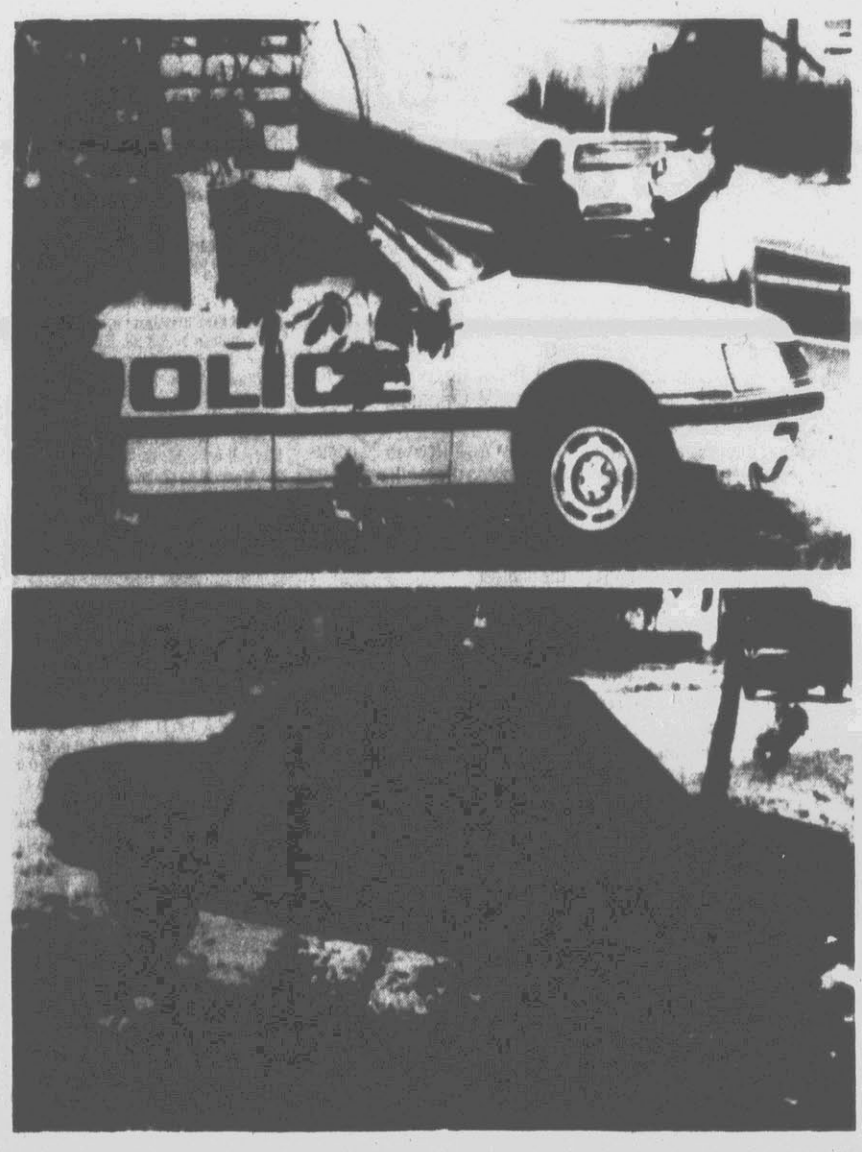
The naked mole rat from Kenya, Ethiopia, and Somalia, shown here in a scientist's hand, has researchers excited over its curious insect-like behavior. In the wild, the tiny mammals congregate in large underground colonies that are dominated by queens. Colonies are now being studied at the University of Michigan and Cornell University.



PATROL CAR REPLICA — Police on the Gold Coast, Queensland, Australia, have come up with an unusual idea — the highway patrol car you have when there is none available. Motorists have been slowing down after seeing the car (top) which looks real. But a quick glance in the rear view mirror reveals a plywood replica supported by stands. The dummy police car comes in three parts and is a blown-up clor photograph. Traffic officers believe the car serves as a deterrent to speeders. (AP Laserphoto)

Candidate Fund-Raising And Spending Reported

RALEIGH (AP) — State Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, and former House Speaker Carl Stewart of Gastonia were the top two fund raisers in 1983 for the lieutenant govenor's race, according to campaign treasurers' reports.

Stewart, a Democrat, raised $111,561.72 by Dec. 31, 1983, and spent $102,416.04, the report said. Jordan reported contributions of $211,175.80 and expenditures of $195,181.66 for the year.

"I haven't felt the need to spend any more money than I have," said Stewart. "Obviously (Jordan) needs to spend a great deal more."

Jordan responded that he wasn't ashamed of raising as much as he did, adding, "I just wish it didn't cost this much to run a campaign."

Stephen S. Miller of Cumberland County, the Carolina ...hts of the Ku Klux Klan c... ate for lieutenant governor, reported raising $50 and spending the same amount.

Treasurers' reports for two more gubernatorial candidates were made public Tuesday.

They showed that former East Carolina University Chancellor Leo Jenkins raised $5,425 and spent $2,161.04. The JGM Committee, one of the groups raising money for Republican Congressman Jim Martin, raised $5,585, borrowed $4,000 and spent $9,585.

Reports received by the state Monday showed Attorney General Rufus Edmisten leading the field of candidates with contributions of $793,603.22 and expenditures of $785,013.82.

Trailing Edmisten were:

— Former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox, $517,523 in contributions and $60,000 in loans total of $577,523 in receipts; $579,785 in expenditures.

— D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth of Clinton, $368,735 in contributions and $190,000 in loans for total receipts of $558,735; expenditures of $511,836.

— Tom Gilmore of Julian, contributions of $204,138, including $65,700 of his own funds; expenditures of $152,188.

— Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, contributions of $137,669 and expenditures of $121,702.

— Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, contributions of $113,170 and expenditures of $108,070.

— Robert Hannon of Greensboro, contributions of $1,987 and a loan of $1,829 for total recepits of $3,816; expenditures of $3,205.

Salvadoran Plans Illegal U.S. Entry

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Marta is planning to become one of the 300,000 Salvadorans who have fled the violence and deteriorating living stardards here in hopes of finding a better life in the United States.

She intends to to it illegally — by crossing the U.S. border from Mexico.

She wants to learn all she can to give her the best possible chance to carry out her plan so she and her two sons can join her husband, who she said is already living in the United States.

In a sense, Salvadorans like Marta are very much like the "feet people" President Reagan says would flock to the United States if leftist guerrillas win their drawnout civil war against the U.S.-supported conservative government in El Salvador.

Marta, a who is 36 years old and has tightly curled, red-tinted hair, now works as a servant for a salary of 425 colones a month — the equivalent of $114. Che would be delighted to get a job as a maid, she said, once she reaches Dallas, Texas, where her husband lives and works.

Asked if she isn't afraid to set out on her first long journey without the proper papers, Marta's tone of voice becomes defiant.

"Afraid? Why? Everyone feels fear, but you have to pray to God and have faith."

Marta could enter the United States legally, if she could afford it and planned to stay only a short time. She would have to buy a round-trip plane ticket and obtain a tourist visa permitting her to stay for an allotted period. But there also would be a record of her entering, and the possibility would exist that she could be tracked down if she overstayed her visa.

So, Marta said, she is trying to determine the best way to travel from Mexico City to the northern Mexican city of Monterrey, 145 miles south of the U.S. border.

She asks around for the name of a Monterrey hotel in case she has to tell a Mexican immigration agent where she will be staying in Mexico.

Marta already has set her vacation in May as the time to start out.

"My motive is to improve living conditions," she said, agreeing to be interviewed so long as her identity was not disclosed. "You know the situation we've got here is pretty bad."

Jose, Marta's 35-year-old husband, left for the United States in August He made it on his second attempt.

Two years ago, Marta said, he tried to reach the United States on a journey that included two days of walking day and night. But she added that he was stopped by Mexican immigration agents close to the U.S. border and "he couldn't pass."

This time he managed to meet in northern Mexico a "coyote" — an agent who specializes in taking undocumented people across the U.S. border for a fee.

Marta doesn't know how much her husband paid, but he reached Dallas and has written that he has found work in construction.

"He feels very happy, because he has work," she said. "He's always had this idea of going to better himself." Jose worked as a taxi driver and truckdriver in El Salvador.

She insists that it is mostly economics and not politics that is behind her decision to emigrate.

"Perhaps five or six years of savings, then maybe return here to buy a house," Marta said. "We all need to get along."

Although she is aware of the deaths here — more than 39,000 civilians killed during the war — Marta said her only firsthand experience with politics or violence have been the times she had to walk home after firefights interrupted transportation to her home in an outlying poor neighborhood.

"This doesn't end, and you don't even know who is who," she said. "I don't get involved in any of those problems."

Marta will be traveling with her two boys, aged 6 and 4, whom she has not told yet about her plan.

Wintry Storm For East From Virginia To Maine

By The Associated Press

A blustery winter storm blasted the East Coast from Virginia to Maine today with up to a foot of snow as it turned highways into skating rinks, while in the Midwest the mercury plunged way below zero, to a low of minus 27 in Minnesota.

At least two deaths were attributed to the snow and cold. And icy roads were blamed for a 13-vehicle pileup Tuesday night in eastern Pennsylvania, police said.

The season's first major snowstorm to hit the Eastern Seaboard left a foot of snow in Utica, N.Y., 10 inches in southern Maine, 8 inches in the Pocono Mountains in eastern Pensylvania, 5 inches in Baltimore and 3 inches in Newark, N.J., by early today.

From Richmond, Va., to Portlad, Maine, officials urged motorists to stay off the roads unless absolutely necessary.

The snowstorm originated Tuesday in the Gulf of Mexico, veered off the North Carolina coast, then turned its fury on the Northeast.

"Nobody is going to say when this is going to quit," Harry Gordon of the National Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today. "Storms like this you have to play pretty cautious because so many things are involved."

Gordon said southern Maine and parts of Massachusetts would have more than 12 inches on the ground before the system moves out to sea today.

It was the heaviest snowfall in the Atlantic Coast states since a blizzard last Feb. 12-13 killed 65 people and crippled big cities with almost 2 feet of snow.

In the Midwest, meanwhile, a second winter cold wave settled in, with the mercury plunging to 27 below today in International Falls and Hibbing, Minn. The band of subzero readings reached from North Dakota to northern Ohio.

The temperature was 22 below at Marquette, Minn., and 12 below in Toledo, Ohio. Lansing, Mich., broke its record for Jan. 10 just before midnight when the mercury fell to 18 below. In Chicago, it was minus 2 degrees.

Louisiana and Mississippi, still recovering from the Christmas weekend Dixie freeze, also got another chilly blast, with temperatures dipping into the 30s overnight.

"New Orleans will be facing temperatures similar to those of the holiday weekend and citizens are advised to take precautions, especially with regard to water pipes," said Harold Katner, director of the city's Sewerage and Water Board.

Officials in many New England communities where the heaviest accumulations were expected declared emergencies Tuesday night and began efforts to clear roads clogged with snow, particularly along the coast where forecasters expected gale-force winds to whip off the Atlantic and pile snow in drifts.

Boston Mayor Raymond L. Flynn said the snow emergency was costing the city $40,000 dollars an hour.

In New York, the season's first major snowstorm brought out 1,400 city workers and 300 salt spreaders as officials tried to keep the roads clear.

"Our people have told us to expect blizzard-like conditions," said Sanitation Department spokesman Martin McGinley. "We're crossing our fingers and hoping it won't be that bad."

Police in suburban New York reported slick roads and some minor accidents.

"I guess some people are sliding off the road," said a Rockland County rescue dispatcher.

Most of Maryland and Delaware headed into today's morning rush hour with 2 to 4 inches of snow on the ground. Again, police reported that the slick roads had produced a rash of fender-benders.

Baltimore Gas and Electric Co. said downed power lines left 300 customers without electricity, but it was not yet determined whether the outage was weather-related.

The snow Tuesday stretched from Arkansas, northern Mississippi, western Tennessee and Kentucky to New England, closing 22 school systems, most in central Kentucky.

Police in Washington County south of Pittsburgh blamed the storm for the death of James Reed, 72, who was killed Tuesday when his car collided with the rear of a slow-moving tractor trailer and careened into a coal truck on Interstate 79.

In Clayton, Mo., police said Tuesday that William B. Turner, 61, died Monday partially as a result of hypothermia brought on by living in his unheated home.

Ice on Interstate 78 in Bucks County, Pa., was blamed for a 13-vehicle pileup that left four people injured, none seriously, officials said.

Environmental Groups In N.C. Found 'Young'

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Nearly half of the state's environmental organizations have been established since 1980 and two-thirds of the groups focus on local issues, according to a North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research study.

The study and a directory of the state's private environmental groups were released Tuesday.

The 89 groups surveyed have a combined membership of 60,000 but 40 percent of the groups have fewer than 100 members each and budgets of less than $1,000, the study said.

"Ever since the first European settlers declared this area to be 'the goodliest land under the cope of heaven,' its residents have boasted of their preciouss heritage of natural resources," said the summary of the report by Lisa Blumenthal.

"The deep affection is being translated to deeper concern," the report said.

The study was funded by a grant from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation. The center, a non-profit and non-partisan organization, sent surveys to 200 groups believed to be private environmental organizations. There were 108 environmental groups identified and 89 returned the questionnaires.

The study also says that:

— The environmental groups are concentrated in the Research Triangle and the Triad areas. The Raleigh-Chapel Hill-Durham area contains 32 groups while the Greensboro-Winston-Salem area contains nine. There are 71 counties with no environmental group.

— The largest group is the N.C. Wildlife Federation with 30,000 members. It is followed by the N.C. Public Interest Research Group with 9,000, Sierra Club's N.C. Chapter with 5,300 and the N.C. Nature Conservancy with 3,800. The rest have fewer than 1,500 members.

— The Wildlife Federation also has the largest budget, $250,000 in 1982. It is followed by the N.C. Nature Conservancy with $168,798, the Carolina Wetlands Project with $105,000 and the rest have less than $100,000 budgets.

— The groups with the largest budgets have the most staff members. The N.C. Nature Conservancy has five fulltime staffers, the N.C. Wildlife Federation has four fulltime and one parttime, the Carolina Wetlands Project has three fulltime workers.

— About 21 percent of the groups deal with coastal management, 19 percent with wetlands areas, 19 percent with hazardous wastes, 17 percent with pollution, 15 percent with rivers, 15 percent with water resource management, 15 percent with wilderness area designations and 15 percent with land-use planning.

— The groups are following several different methods for accomplishing their goals. About 37 percent lobby in the Legislature, 11 percent conduct education efforts and 7 percent do grassroots organizing. Others are taking opponents to court or buying up natural habitats to protect them.

To Close Plant In Rocky Mount

ROCKY MOUNT, Va. (AP) — Burlington Industries says it will close its Rocky Mount plant within the next nine to 12 months as part of a regional consolidation plan.

About 100 workers will lose their jobs in Rocky Mount when the plant, which makes bed sheets, shuts down, but company officials said most of them will be offered jobs elsewhere in the Burlington system.

The announcement was made Tuesday when Rocky Mount plant Manager Tom Price met with Franklin County and Rocky Mount officials.

Price told the officials the move was one of three plant closings in an effort to consolidate regional operations. The Rocky Mount operation will be moved to Burlington, N.C., as will offices currently in Greensboro, N.C. Another plant in Durham, N.C., will close and its operations will move to Brookneal.

Lost Control Prior To Crash

REHOBOTH, Mass. (AP) — A tractor-trailer that collided head on with a school bus filled with kindergarten pupils had struck a tow truck before losing control and careening across the highway, police said.

The accident Tuesday killed the drivers of the truck and bus and injured 15 children, two critically.

The bus, which was thrown on its roof by the impact, was taking kindergarteners home from Anawan School, the principal said.

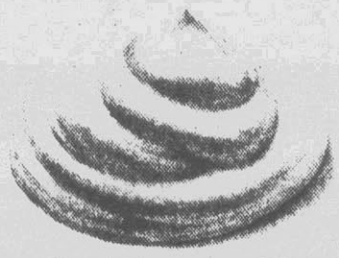
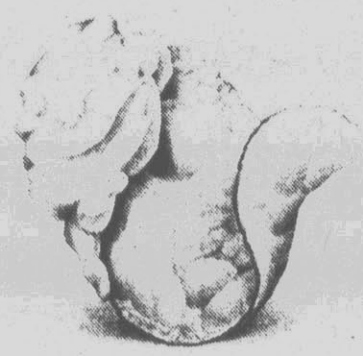
HOW TO DIP INTO FRESH INGREDIENTS,


SMOTHERED IN FRESH SOUR CREAM,


WITHOUT LEAVING YOUR CHIP IN THE DIP.
Here's how our BREAKSTONE'S GOURMET DIPS end up with a taste that's easy to love and a texture that's easy to dip. We start with real, creamy, fresh, natural sour cream. Next we add special ingredients that make each of our five gourmet dips so special. Mounds of mushrooms and green herbs; or toasted onion bits; or crunchy bacon and onion; or a spicy blend of Jalapeno pepper and natural Cheddar cheese; or for sea-food lovers, real Chesapeake Clams (and lots of them).
Then each is blended to be smooth and creamy, not too thick—not too thin.
So, if you've got gourmet tastes, sink your chips into our delicious dips. The only thing that'll crack is the smile on your face. © Kraft, Inc. 1983

Fighting For 'Nuke Dump'

By CHET BROKAW
Associated Press Writer

EDGEMONT, S.D. (AP) — While many communities are battling to keep nuclear garbage out, businessmen in this small ranching town are fighting to bury up to 1 million cubic feet of low-level nuclear waste each year under the rolling grasslands of southwestern South Dakota.

The businessmen say a nuclear waste dump could mean up to 300 new jobs for the area, almost doubling employment in this community of nearly 1,500 people. Local opposition to the site is hard to find, but opponents in other parts of the state are campaigning to prevent creation of the dump without voter approval.

"The closer you get to here the less opposition you get to it, and the farther away you get the more opposition you have," said Edgemont banker Don Hanson. "There's not a person in this county that would support this issue if it would be harmful to the environment or the water supply."

Hanson is a spokesman for a Chamber of Commerce committee that has invited Chem-Nuclear Systems Inc. of Columbia, S.C., to build a nuclear waste dump at Igloo, an abandoned U.S. Army bomb storage depot eight miles south of Edgemont.

Chem-Nuclear officials have said they'll seek permission to build at Igloo if geological conditions are suitable. They estimate the dump could generate $5 million to $8 million a year in state taxes and fees.

A coalition of groups concerned with the environment, including the Black Hills Alliance and the Farmers Union, has started a petition drive for a statewide vote in November on the nuclear waste issue.

If the petition gets on the ballot and passes, voter approval would be required before South Dakota could allow a dump site in the state or join a nuclear waste disposal compact with other states.

At Igloo, cattle and sheep graze near old buildings and military barracks with broken windows and faded paint while farmers raise hogs in concrete-lined bunkers where bombs were once stored.

Dick Rood, who has raised hogs in the bunkers at Igloo for 11 years, said he'd like to continue living there if the nuclear waste dump is built.

"I can't see where it would be any danger really," Rood said, "The sooner the better."

Hanson said the 12,500-acre abandoned munitions depot appears to be a perfect site for a nuclear waste dump. The water supply is more than 3,000 feet below the surface and a thick layer of shale would prevent radioactive material from getting into the water, he said.

The plan to create a nuclear waste dump hasn't stirred much emotion in Edgemont because the town's residents are used to living with radioactivity, supporters of the dump said.

"People who live here a while know they're not going to turn green or glow or come down with cancer tomorrow," said Chamber of Commerce President Harold Wyatt, who sells insurance and real estate.

Hundreds of thousands of tons of radioactive tailings still sit on the edge of town near a uranium mill that closed in 1974. The federal government considers the tailings a potential health hazard and plans to bury them several miles outside town within the next several years. It also is cleaning up radioactive tailings from private property around town. Uranium ore still lies under the countryside surrounding Edgemont.

The low-level nuclear waste that would be buried near here comes from hospitals, industries and nuclear power plants. It includes radioactive material that decays within 300 years and longer-lived material that is greatly diluted.

But Edgemont residents qualify their support for the proposed nuclear waste dump, saying they would welcome it as long as they can be convinced it would be safe.

"I really haven't talked to too many people who are dead set against it. They have some questions is all," said Bret Fox, who works at the idle uranium mill.

"There's a lot of unanswered questions," Fox said. "I'm not completely convinced, but I'm not afraid of it."

Wyatt said the Chamber of Commerce support for a nuclear dump doesn't mean Edgemont is willing to rush into something dangerous.

"We're not just grasping at anything to bring in hordes of people or industry," Wyatt said. "It would be nice if IBM would put an electronics plant here, but we really can't count on that."

Businessmen said Edgemont's economy has gone boom and bust repeatedly as the uranium mill opened and closed, the Army bomb depot was built and abandoned, and the fortunes of area ranchers and the railroad fluctuated with the rest of the economy.

"You've got to admit, there's not too much going on in Edgemont," said Eddie Anderson, who works oil fields in nearby Wyoming.

"The economic benefits are self-evident," Hanson said. "If it isn't safe, then the jobs aren't worth it."

Four Assigned Space Mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — The official word was yes, then no, now yes again for four scientists named to a space shuttle mission in 1986.

The four men were told by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration last Thursday that they had been selected by a special committee to train for the Spacelab 4 flight. On Friday, the agency retracted the announcement because details were incomplete. But NASA said this week that two of the four will be selected to fly and work in the space laboratory for seven days, while the other two will be alternates and members of the ground team.

They are Dr. Millie Hughes Wiley Fulford, an assistant professor of biochemistry at the Veterans Hospital in San Francisco; Dr. Francis Andrew Gaffney, assistant professor of cardiology at the University of Texas Health Science Center in Dallas; Dr. Robert Ward Phillips, an assistant professor at Colorado State University, and Dr. Bill Alvin Williams, research sciences group leader in toxicology from the Environmental Protection Agency in Corvallis, Ore.

Expert Has Some Advice On Chilly Fun

By DONNA M. DAVIS
United Press International

Dedicated anglers will don hooded parkas, gloves and rubber boots this winter to go ice fishing. Paul Schiff has some advice for them.

"Usually the best ice and the safest ice is the first ice," said Schiff, educational supervisor for the Ohio Department of Natural Resources' wildlife division and a self-termed "ice fisherman extraordinaire."

"If you've never been ice fishing, it's best to rely on experienced fishermen to tell you when the ice is safe," Schiff said.

Fishermen also can check with state game protectors, park managers or marina operators about ice conditions at a particular spot. According to the Division of Wildlife, 3 inches of new ice can support a man's weight and 4 inches of new ice will support a group of people.

It takes several days of temperatures in the teens for that initial ice to form. Later in the winter, the ice becomec thicker and murkier and fish are harder to find. The ice-fishing season usually is in full swing by mid-January in the northern tier of states.

Schiff said ice fishermen must be wary of ice floes that break off from the main body of ice. Every ice-fishing season, several stranded fishermen must be rescued from floating chunks of ice.

In addition to making sure the ice is safe, Schiff recommends ice fishermen dress as warmly as possible, with thermal underwear a must.

Schiff said it is important to include a rope and a life jacket with your gear.

Light line and small hooks should be used for ice fishing. The rod, Schiff said, "is nothing more than a unit to hold the line" and is usually light-weight and short.

Don Dutton, who owns Don's Bait store in Curtice, Ohio, said rods can cost from $2 to $8 but "many people make their own."

A necessary piece of equipment is a spud-bar or a commercial ice auger for cutting holes in the ice. Take along a scoop to clear out the hole. In Ohio, state law requires the hole be no more than 9 inches in diameter, to prevent fishermen from falling in.

An auger, Dutton said, costs between $20 and $35 and a scoop, $2 to $3.

The wildlife division also suggests using a 5-gallon plastic bucket as a seat, tackle box and fish bucket.

Small minnows or ice-flies tipped with insect larvae are good bait for bluegills or perch.

For larger fish such as walleye and northern pike, fishermen can use bigger minnows and a "tip-up," which holds the bait at a set depth. When a fish bites, a flag on the tip-up pops up.

Once the fisherman is out on the ice with his gear, "the trick is locating the fish," said Schiff, who noted that fish tend to gather in schools near oxygen and a food supply.

"Fish don't stop feeding in the winter," he said. "Sometimes it's wise to look around until you find a school. Once you find it, the fishing could be better than in the summer."

Those schools of fish, said Schiff, could be anywhere from a few feet from shore to several miles out on the ice.

"Shanty towns" are a clue to a good fishing area, Schiff said. On Lake Erie, many anglers rent the wood, steel or canvas structures for $15 to $20 a day and huddle inside the shanties around coal-fired or kerosene heaters, waiting for the fish to bite.

The heaters in the shanties are set on pallets to keep the surrounding ice from melting. Some fishermen turn their shanties into mini-homes complete with radios, food and drink.

ASSUME CONTROL

BERLIN (AP) — For the first time since World War II, West Berlin has taken control of the mass-transit trains in its sector. An agreement transferred controll of the S-Bahn to West Berliners, but ownership remains with East Berlin.

Communists Comment On '1984'

By ERIC WAHA
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) — Communist critics are sniping at "Nineteen Eighty-Four," George Orwell's famous novel about life in the ultimate totalitarian state — and a book banned in the Soviet Union and Eastern bloc countries.

But the modern British classic is widely known in Eastern Europe from smuggled copies and translations published by underground presses.

Loyal Communists never liked "Nineteen Eighty-Four" because Orwell's super-state "Oceania" — where "Big Brother is watching" and governmment critics disappear as "unpersons" — has been compared to life under communism.

Recent commentaries in East Germany, Hungary and Poland suggest that authorities are concerned that the revival of Western interest in Orwell's novel might spill over into the Soviet bloc.

Earlier this month, an East German newspaper charged that the new wave of interest in "Nineteen Eighty-Four" may have been fueled by people gho wanted a "rebirth of the Cold War."

The Volkszeitung (Peoples' Newspaper) of Leipzig branded the book "the best seller of the Cold War" when it was published in the West in 1949.

"It remains to be seen whether the expectation will be fulfilled of those who want to provide the ideological background for the rebirth of the Cold War with an Orwell renaissance."

A sales manager at East Berlin's international bookstore said, "The book has never been published here, and consequently we don't carry it."

Nor is the book — or other Orwell novels — on sale in the Soviet Union.

In 1977 at the Moscow Book Fair, the Soviets confiscated an English-language copy published by the New American Library.

Customs officials allowed a copy of "Nineteen Eighty-Four" into the country for the 1979 fair, but banned Orwell's "Animal Farm" — a satire widely interpreted as a slap at Communist officialdom.

American publishers have since stopped trying to bring in literature that might offend Soviet officials.

"Nineteen Eighty-Four" was mentioned last January in Literary Gazette, the organ of the Soviet Writer's Union. Vitaly Korbish claimed that Orwell's "vision of the future is becoming a reality — in the United States."

Orwell books aren't sold in Czechoslovakia, Romania and Hungary. But literary critics and some members of the reading public are very familiar with his name and works.

The Budapest literary and cultural weekly Uj Tuekor (New Mirror) carried a page-long article on Orwell in its New Year's issue.

Of "Nineteen Eighty-Four" it said: " Orwell still had time to live to see that in the period of the increasingly frigid Cold War, an effective weapon had been forged from his work toward the ideological fight against communism."

The Hungarian weekly contended that the novel "can be hardly related accusingly to the present-day realities of socialism (communism)."

The Leipziger Volkszeitung took a similar tack. It claimed "Nineteen Eighty-Four" is "infinitely remote from real socialism."

Going one step further, the newspaper added, "It cannot be overlooked that Orwell's 'Nineteen Eighty-Four' has parallels with the real world of imperialism ... through the increasingly total surveillance of citizens (in the West) by computers."

A long official silence on "Nineteen Eighty-Four" was broken in Poland with a commentary on Orwell in the December issue of Zdanie (Opinion). Poles said it may have been the first time the book was ever mentioned in a state publication.

Orwell should "not be held responsible" for the "myth" created by right-wingers that he was an "instrument of anti-communism and ant-Sovietism," the Polish magazine said.

WEST ♠ J 8 5 3 ♡ 10 7 4 3 ◇ J 10 9 ♣ 5 3
EAST ♠ A K 10 9 4 2 ♡ Q ◇ K 7 4 3 ♣ 6 4

SOUTH
♠ 6
♡ A K J 9 8 6
◇ A 8 6 5
♣ 9 8

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
3 NT	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

Periodically, we are taken to task by a reader for being old-fashioned. Specifically, we are accused of ignoring all modern conventions. That is not quite the case. We do ignore some conventions because of their complexity; and we don't write about others because we doubt their worth. To illustrate, here's an example of a convention that we feel we can do without – the gambling three no trump opening bid. This hand is from the 1983 Asia and Middle East Bridge Championships.

North's opening bid of three no trump is typical of the convention – it shows a solid, seven-card minor suit and not more than one stopper outside the suit. South judged well that his hand was suitable for slam, so he bid six clubs – the suit he knew belonged to his partner.

Observe that, as the cards lie, six clubs by North cannot be defeated. But after the jack of diamonds lead, most of those players who declared from the South hand found the contract too much for them. The opening lead was covered by the queen and king and won by the ace. Most declarers led a high heart and, when the queen dropped, they first cashed one high club before leading a second heart. That would have worked had West held a singleton trump as well as a singleton heart, but on the actual distribution the contract quickly went down two.

Actually, the hand can be made even with the jack of diamonds lead. Declarer wins the ace, cashes one high heart and then runs all his clubs, reducing the hand to:

NORTH
♠ Q 7
♡ 5
◇ 2

WEST ♠ – ♡ 10 7 4 ◇ 9 ♣ –
EAST ♠ A K ♡ – ◇ 7 4 ♣ –

♡ A J 9
◇ 8

Now declarer simply throws West in with a diamond. West is forced to lead a heart into declarer's tenace, and he takes the last three tricks.

Ordered Hire 8 More Blacks

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) – Surry Community College needs to add eight blacks to its staff by mid-1985 to meet the requirements of the U.S. Department of Education, says college president Swanson Richards.

To meet that goal, the college will adopt a new hiring policy, Richards said Monday.

Find Blockade Runner Wreck

CAROLINA BEACH, N.C. (AP) – Researchers say they may have found one of four iron-hulled Confederate steamers that ran aground 120 years ago after being trapped by Union gunboats off the North Carolina coast.

Divers recovered a pipe on Tuesday in Carolina Beach Inlet from the prevously uncharted wreck of a Civil War blockade runner. But rough seas prevented researchers from identifying the ship.

Divers found a steam-powered windlass mounted on the vessel's bow and brought up a 4½-foot section of steampipe, said Richard Kimmel, an archeologist for the Army Corps of Engineers.

The wreck is in "good condition from an archeological standpoint," said Gordon Watts, an East Carolina University underwater archeology instructor who made the dive Tuesday under contract with the corps.

Officials said it is too early to know whether extensive salvage of the wreck is justified. Any salvage attempt would be difficult and costly because of the currents and waves, Watts said.

A corps dredge used along the Carolina Beach Inlet struck the wreck in August, and Watts said the vessel probably was only 3 feet below the surface at low tide and posed a navigational hazard.

During the Civil War, the Union blockaded Southern ports to disrupt the Confederate economy, Watts said.

At first, sailing ships were used as blockade runners. But as the Union blockade strengthened, the fastest steamships were used, Watts said.

Historical documents indicate that four ships – the Hebe, the Douro, the Venus and the Lynx – were run aground and burned in 1863 and 1864 near where the wreck was found Tuesday.

Three blockade runners have been found in the area, but none have been identified.

90-Year-Old Found Guilty: Food Theft

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) – A 90-year-old woman has been convicted of stealing less than $1 worth of food from a supermarket.

General District Judge Joseph A. Jordan Jr. on Tuesday found Leona R. Mould guilty, sentenced her to 30 days in jail, then suspended the term for one year conditional upon her good behavior.

Mrs. Mould was charged with taking a bag of peanuts worth 50 cents, a banana, and an apple from a Farm Fresh Supermarket.

The maximum penalty would have been a $1,000 fine and 12 months in jail.

Carrying a cane and wearing a yellow scarf, the bespectacled woman told Jordan she did not mean to take the items without paying. They were in her bag while she paid for other items collected in a shopping cart.

"I just forgot" to pay for the food, Mrs. Mould testified.

"I live a clean life," Mrs. Mould told Jordan. "I did smoke, but I gave that up a year ago."

But Jordan was unswayed.

"It doesn't really add up that she forgot those items and not the others," the judge said. He said the woman apparently was supplementing her fixed income of $409 a month.

Attorney Catherine Willis, who handled the case without fee, said that because Jordan suspended payment of the court costs – which Mrs. Mould could not pay – as well as the jail time, said she did not plan to appeal the case.

Jackson Paces 'Grammy Gold'

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The new crop of nominees for the record industry's top honors, led by Michael Jackson's best-selling "Thriller," shows once again that commercial success is the surest route to Grammy gold.

All five nominees in two of the three top categories — record and new song of the year — have at some point occupied the top spot on Billboard's Hot 100. Of the album of the year nominees, only Billy Joel's "An Innocent Man" and David Bowie's "Let's Dance" failed to reach No. 1 on the LP charts.

Winners in a record 67 categories will be announced at the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences' 26th annual awards ceremony, set for telecast Feb. 28 on CBS.

Jackson's "Thriller" has been the No. 1 album 24 weeks — though not consecutively — and was responsible for 11 of Jackson's record dozen nominations including record, album and separate song of the year nominations for "Billie Jean" and "Beat It," both No. 1 singles.

The versatile Jackson also picked up male vocal performance nominations in pop, rock and rhythm & blues categories; two R&B songwriting nominations; and — with "Thriller" co-producer Quincy Jones — a nomination for producer of the year.

Jackson and Paul McCartney are up for the best pop group vocal award for "The Girl Is Mine," another "Thriller" track. And Jackson also turned up in the children's record category for his narration and vocal work on "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial."

Another No. 1 album, the soundtrack to the film "Flashdance," also cleaned up with nine nominations, including album of the year and best original TV or film score. Two No. 1 singles from the LP, Michael Sembello's "Maniac" and Irene Cara's "Flashdance ... What a Feeling," are competing for record of the year, and "Maniac" earned a song of the year nomination for Sembello and co-writer Dennis Matkosky.

Britain's popular rock trio, The Police, held the No. 1 album slot for 19 weeks with "Synchronicity," which is up for album of the year and best rock vocal group performance. The album's No. 1 single, "Every Breath You Take," earned record of the year and pop group vocal nominations for the group as well as a song of the year nomination for its writer, Police lead singer Sting.

Moyers To Unravel An Entire Century

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bill Moyers may be the most extraordinary broadcast journalist of our times.

With the keenest of sensibilities, he closely examines what others might gloss over. Tonight he begins taking a walk and ends up unraveling an entire century.

That process starts with the first installment of "A Walk Through the 20th Century with Bill Moyers," an every-other-week series of 19 documentaries on Wednesday nights on public television.

As executive editor, host and writer on this exceptional series, Moyers enlightens our present by dusting off our past. History, says Moyers, is one of our best protections against the vision in George Orwell's "Nineteen Eighty-Four."

"It's not irrelevant that Big Brother banished history so he could manipulate reality," Moyers said in an interview. "The surest way to undermine people's intelligence is to wipe out history."

On Moyers' journey backwards and forwards, he uses film, some of it never broadcast before, to chronicle "the only century to ever take moving pictures of itself."

It's become a common sight on television, whether on CBS or the Public Broadcasting Service, to see Moyers strolling with common folk, listening to common folk and learning from common folk. It's a rare gift, indeed, to be able to move easily among presidents and ordinary people, and never talk up or down to either.

Later in the series, Moyers will examine historical figures such as Theodore Roosevelt, and Adolf Hitler and Franklin Roosevelt, together, in "The Democrat and the Dictator." There also will be documentaries on cars, the weapons of war and propaganda.

But the journey begins tonight, quite unconventionally, with a more personal piece. In "Marshall, Texas; Marshall, Texas," Moyers returns to the town in eastern Texas where he lived until he left for college 30 years ago.

However, this is much more than a biographical scrapbook. Marshall, Texas — in its earlier small-town ways, its racial segregation and its current face of change, compromise and modern convenience — represents the sociological evolution and social revolution of America in the 1900s.

"So many of us now live in urban areas," Moyers says tonight, "we forget that at the turn of the century, America was a nation of small towns." He calls the Marshall, Texas, of the 1980s "a new town perched on the memory of one that's gone."

While Moyers was growing up in Marshall, he never knew James Farmer, the future founder of the Congress of Racial Equality, who was raised at the same time on the other side of the tracks.

"That's the paradox," Moyers said, "growing up well-churched and well-taught and not knowing the reality of how other people lived."

In tonight's program, Farmer recalls the indignity of being forced to sit in the Paramount Theater balcony, known to blacks as "the buzzard's roost." Farmer goes on to say that the contradictions of his experiences in Marshall helped stimulate the birth of CORE.

Some of tonight's show is serious; some of it is pure fun, particularly when Billy Don, as he was called in his younger days, chews the fat with his old teachers about the time he broke a neon sign or tells fish stories with the town's legendary moonshiner, Wyatt Moore.

"A Walk Through the 20th Century" was originally meant to run on CBS Cable, but "The Democrat and the Dictator" was the only episode shown before the service died deeply in debt.

To the rescue came Chevron, which had funded Moyers' landmark "Creativity" series. The oil company provided $2 million to get the 19-part series produced and on thhe air.

"A Walk Through the 20th Century" is an immensely valuable viewing experience for adults, but perhaps even more so for children, who have little firsthand perspective of modern history.

Getting the guided tour from Billy Don Moyers is about the best introduction TV can offer.

Forklifts Make An Art Gallery

VERNON, Calif. (AP) — Forklifts were the key implements used to create an "art gallery" on the walls of an industrial plant.

As a volunteer project, the employees at St. Regis' bag packaging plant here decided to reproduce famous artworks as colorful murals. Using the plant walls for a canvas, the workers used one forklift to hold a projector, which produced an oversized image of an original painting. A second forklift lifted a worker to the "painting" to reproduce it.

John Brown, manufacturing manager, says "the interior of the plant was a typical industrial gray.

NOTICE OF SALE
NORTH CAROLINA
PITT COUNTY

TAKE NOTICE, that in accordance with Section 115C-518 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, the Greenville City Board of Education, having decided that the real property described herein is surplus and unnecessary for school purposes, will sell to the highest bidder, for CASH at 12:00 Noon on WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 25, 1984, that certain parcel of land located in the City of Greenville, County of Pitt, State of North Carolina, described as follows, to-wit:

Lying and being situate in the City of Greenville, Pitt County, North Carolina and being more particularly described as follows: BEING all of Lot #16, in Block "C", of the Cambridge Subdivision, Section II, as shown on a map prepared by Rivers and Associates, Inc., recorded in Map Book 25, at Page 30, Pitt County Registry.

THE SALE WILL BE HELD AT THE SITE OF THE SAID PROPERTY.

The improvements on the aforementioned property include a new brick veneer house with passive solar design, with living room, foyer, family room with fireplace for a free-standing wood stove or furnace, kitchen, three bedrooms, and two and one-half baths and laundry room.

The sale will remain open for ten (10) days to permit the making of an upset bid. A ten percent (10%) deposit in cash, or by certified check or cashier's check will be required on the date and at the time of the sale.

The Greenville City Board of Education reserves the right to reject any and all bids. The Board will deliver a Deed and possession of the property described herein to the successful bidder, after approval by the Board of the bid, upon payment of the full purchase price.

The house on the property described herein was constructed by the Rose High School Carpentry and Masonry classes. Additional information pertaining to the property described herein may be obtained by contacting Robert E. Stewart at the office of the Greenville City Board of Education, at 431 West Fifth Street, Greenville, North Carolina, or by telephone at (919) 752-4192.
