Counter-Fire From Marines At Beirut

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

U.S. Marines unleashed rockets and mortar fire to repulse a heavy attack today by militiamen on their base in Beirut, while U.S. special envoy Donald Rumsfeld, visiting Damascus, met for the first time with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

Elsewhere in Beirut, police reported an Egyptian diplomat and the wife of a French envoy survived separate attacks by gunmen, and shells from anti-government gunners crashed onto the capital's eastern Christian sector for a second straight day, reportedly killing two civilians and wounding 12.

Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said there were no reports of casualties or damage at the U.S. base at Beirut airport. He said the southeastern perimeter of the base came "under attack by a heavy concentration of small-arms fire" from a building to the east.

The Marinec, part of the multinational peacekeeping force, then beat back an attempted "infiltration" by firing back with small arms, machine guns, 60 mm mortars, shoulder-fired rockets and anti-tank guided missiles, Brooks said.

The fighting forced the international airport to shut down for an hour before operations resumed.

In Damascus, Assad, who had declined to meet Rumsfeld during two previous visits, warned in advance of today's session that "peace in Lebanon cannot be established under the American gun barrel." There were no immediate details on today's meeting.

Rumsfeld met Thursday and again today with Foreign Minister Abdel-Halim Khaddam of Syria, but there also was no word on those talks. Rumsfeld has visited Syria twice since he became Reagan's Middle East envoy last November.

At the French Embassy in Beirut, a spokesman said one of two people riding a motorcycle today shot Elaine de Chico, wife of the director of the French Cultural Center in the capital.

Embassy spokesman Eric Coulaf said Mrs. de Chico, 47, suffered a "superficial" wound on her chin as a bullet grazed her. He said the attack occurred when she was driving from the west Beirut area where she and her husband live. She was taken to the nearby American University Hospital, he said, and the assailants escaped.

Beirut police said an Egyptian diplomat escaped unharmed when gunmen in a speeding car fired at him Thursday.

Police said the second secretary of the Egyptian mission, Hamdi Salah Lozy, was riding in a car with French diplomatic license plates in west Beirut when unidentified gunmen in a Mercedes fired four rounds from a silencer-equipped pistol. The assailants missed their target and fled, police said.

Police said it was not immediately known whether the attack was against the Egyptian diplomat or the car with French license plates. French diplomats and soldiers in Beirut have been the target of frequent attacks that police blame on Shiite Moslem extremists loyal to Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Hutchins' Execution Is Blocked

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge in an impromptu hotel-room conference blocked today's execution of convicted police killer James Hutchins, and the case went to the U.S. Supreme Court for a decision on whether the state can proceed with the lethal injection.

Chief Justice Warren Burger, refusing to rule on an early-morning appeal by North Carolina officials, referred the case to a full-court conference today, said Supreme Court spokeswoman Toni House. The justices had voted 7-2 to reject an appeal by Hutchins' lawyers on Wednesday.

Judge J. Dickson Phillips of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals stayed the execution at 12:05 a.m. today, less than six hours before it was due to be carried out.

If the Cepreme Court removes the stay, Hutchins could still be executed today, prosecutors said, adding that they believed Phillips didn't have jurisdiction in the case. State law requires a condemned prisoner to be executed between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m.

But Hutchins' lawyers say state law requires a new execution date to be set, between 60 and 90 days from when the stay was granted.

"State law is clear on that, there is no question that the clock stops this time, that a new date must be set," defense attorney Joseph Cheshire V said.

Hutchins, 54, was sentenced to death in 1979 for the rifle slayings of two sheriff's deputies who were investigating a report that he had beaten his teen-age daughter, and that of a state trooper who later pursued him.

If executed, he would be the 12th person put to death since states revised capital punishment laws thrown out by the Supreme Court in 1972.

After Hutchins was told of the stay at 3 a.m., he smiled and lay back down on his cot in Central Prison, state Corrections spokeswoman Lee Alford said. This morning, Hutchins ate a breakfast of eggs, fried bologna and applesauce, Ms. Alford said.

His lawyers based their appeals on claims that jury selection at his trial was flawed because death-penalty opponents were excluded from the panel and that Hutchins was insane at the time of the killings and remains so.

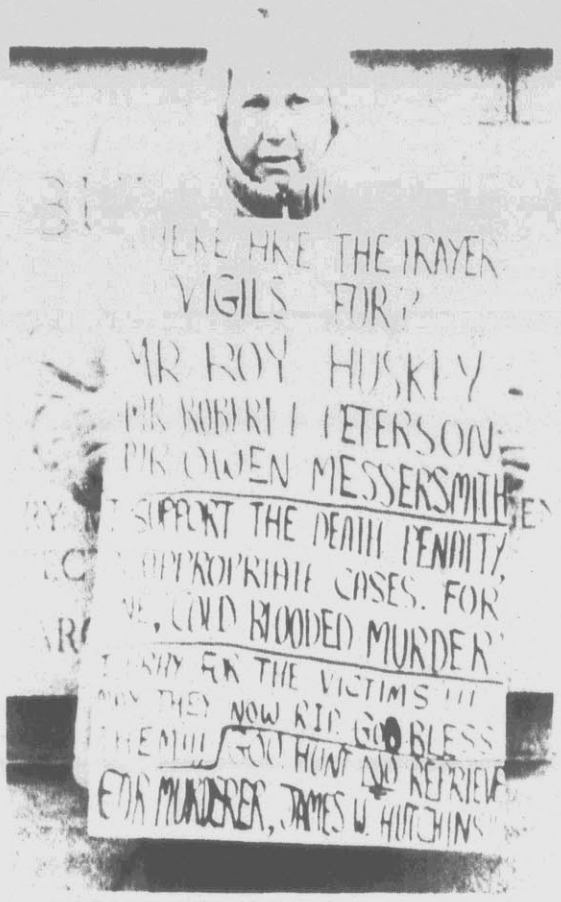

The Supreme Court on Wednesday rejected contentions that it was unconstitutional to impose the death penalty on someone who committed crimes while suffering from mental and emotional disturbance and that Hutchins' trial lawyer was ineffective and had too little time to prepare a defense.

As the condemned man waited late Thursday in a cell 10 paces from the death chamber, his wife pleaded with Gov. Jim Hunt for mercy, while a sister of one of the victims collapsed in a Capitol hallway after demanding to see the governor.

Hunt, a supporter of capital punishment, said was still reviewing the case and had taken no action this morning. On Thursday he said he had been moved by the 15-minute meeting with Hutchins' wife, Geneva.

"Here is a man's wife saying, 'Please save my husband's life,'" Hunt said. "It is a serious matter. I have to do what's right and I hope to make the right decision."

Hutchins, who selected lethal injection over the gas chamber, would be the second person in the nation to die by that method, and the first person executed in North Carolina since 1961.

Death Penalty Is Continuing Issue Of Debate

BY JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The scheduled execution of North Carolinian James W. Hutchins has raised questions about the death penalty around the state. Local educators and spokesmen for the medical, legal and law enforcement fields have varied ideas about this aspect of the criminal justice system.

Several of those interviewed stressed that the death penalty is not a deterrent to violent crime.

Hutchins' execution, scheduled for 6 a.m. today, was delayed when a federal appeals court judge issued a stay shortly after midnight. The U.S. Supreme Court was scheduled to consider lifting the stay later today.

Hutchins was given the death sentence for murdering three law enforcement officers in 1979.

The 54-year-old Rutherford County man selected lethal injection over death in the gas chamber under a law approved last year by the Legislature. He would be the first person in North Carolina to die by lethal injection and the second in the nation, and the first person executed in the state since 1961.

"As far as I'm concerned, the death penalty for first degree murder is a constitutional penalty, as the Supreme Court has held it to be," said Dr. Tinsley Yarbrough, chairman of the political science department at East Carolina University, "but I doubt that the death penalty will normally serve as a deterrent to crime.

"I think that we've had such infrequent use of the death penalty in the past because the constitutionality of the death penalty has been clouded; the states were reluctant to use the death penalty. Now that the Supreme Court has made it clear that the death penalty is acceptable as a punishment for murder, I think we will begin to see a fairly large number of executions," he said.

"There probably is a lot of public sentiment for the

Approval Given Rezoning Petition After Revision

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

A revised rezoning petition that sought less acreage than an original request submitted several weeks ago gained the approval of the City Council at the newly elected board's first regular meeting Thursday night.

The council, following a public hearing, approved a request by Shanandoah Developdment Co. to rezone part of lot 1, block A of section 3 of the Tucker Farms development, located on the east side of Tobacco Road, south of Alice Drive. The property will be rezoned from the R-9 residential designation to a higher density R-6 zone that permits multifamily and duplex development.

The petition was submitted initially for 17,027 square feet from R-9 to R-6, according to Bobby Roberson, planning director. After the Planning & Zoning Commission and council failed to endorse the petition, the developers reduced the amount of property involved in the request to 3,527 square feet. The commission then followed the recommendation of the planning staff in urging council approval.

Council members voted to continue until February consideration of a request by Derek Dunn to rezone section 5 of Westhaven subdivision, located south of Club Pines and east of N.C. 11, from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to R-9.

Mayor Janice Buck said the city had received petitions from both the developer and from residents who oppose the rezoning to continue the matter. The planning board, meeting last month, voted to recommend that the council deny Dunn's request for rezoning approximately 62.28 acres.

A public hearing on the proposed annexation of section 5 of Westhaven was set for the next regularly scheduled meeting of the council.

The council followed the recommendation of the Traffic Commission in approving five items. They involved requests by Mrs. Margaret Herring of 602 Queen Anne's Road to reduce the speed limit from 35 mph to 25 mph on Queen Anne's Road from Bremerton Drive to Wesley Road; by Michael Bell of North Carolina Health Services to establish a loading-unloading zone on the north side of Bonner's Lane in front of the Bonner's Lane Day Care Center;

By Don Carothers of Davidson & Jones Construction Co. to temporarily remove parking until Aug. 31 on Seventh Street from James Street to Cotanche Street; and by Frank Craft of 808 Dickinson Avenue to remove the loading zone at the Dickinson Avenue address and to change to limited parking on Dickinson from Ficklen Street west to the second alleyway. In addition, an ordinance modifying traffic regulations to erect stop signs at several locations in the city was approved. The intersections include: south side of Largo Road at Tucker Drive, north side of Carol Court at Tucker Drive, east side of Tiffany Drive at White Hollow Drive, and the south side of Chesterfield Court at Tobacco Road.

In other business, the council:

— Adopted resolutions authorizing the sale by quitclaim deed of property on the north side of Willow Street to John C. and Margaret N. Coughlan for $500, and property on the south

Honor Six For 'Contributions'

Mary Jo McKenzie

Kenneth Dews Jr.

Maureen Shannon

Johnny Lee Craft

Lee Garrish

The Greenville Jaycees on Thursday night honored six contributors to the Greenville and Pitt County community — two educators, a farmer, two law enforcement officers and a fire-rescue person.

Mary Jo Little MacKenzie of Route 1, Grimesland, was named the outstanding Pitt County schools' educator. A media center instructor at G.R. Whitfield School in Grimesland, she is also associated with Balloons Aloft of Greenville. The recipient of the 1983 Teacher of the Year Award for Whitfield School, she was educated at East Carolina University.

Maureen Shannon is the Greenville schools' educator honored. She is a special education teacher at Third Street School and has B.S. and M.A. degrees from East Carolina University. She operates a tutoring service during summer and has worked in the East Carolina University Summer Science Camp. A United Cerebral Palsy Foundation volunteer, she was selected in 1983 as Third Street School Teacher of the Year.

Kenneth K. Dews Jr. of Route 1, Winterville, was named the outstanding farmer. A graduate of East Carolina University with a B.S. and a master's degree, he has been a farmer seven years. His tobacco, corn, soybeans and wheat crops are supplemented by a pick-your-own strawberry operation. He is president of the Pitt County Farmers Market and has been a local state director of the Jaycees.

Johnny Lee Craft of Grifton is the outstanding young Pitt County law enforcement officer. He is employed by the Pitt County Sheriff Department as a deputy. A graduate of the Coastal Plain Law Enforcement Academy, he is a member of the Grifton Town Board and the Grifton Volunteer Fire Department.

Police Detective Lee Garrish is the outstanding young law enforcement officer for Greenville. A graduate of Pitt Community College, he is a U.S. Army veteran.

John Fisher of Greenville is the outstanding young fire-rescue person of the year. A graduate of Florida

Nicaragua Regime Says Kissinger Report 'Failure'

By JUAN MALTES
Associated Press Writer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government says the Kissinger Commission report on Central America, which urges more covert U.S. aid to anti-Sandinista rebels, is a "failure" which advocates a "policy of pressure."

Leftist guerrillas battling the U.S-backed government of El Salvador also condemned the report Thursday, calling it an "insane course" and "genocide against our people."

But Kissinger defended the report in a news conference with Latin American reporters, saying more military aid to El Salvador is consistent with efforts for Central American peace.

The report, presented Wednesday to President Reagan, called for $140 million in military aid to El Salvador and $8 billion in economic aid for Central America over five years, beginning in 1985. It also warned of a direct Soviet-Cuban threat to E.S. interests in the region.

The commission said continued covert U.S. aid to the anti-Sandinista rebels could help produce a negotiated settlement with the Sandinistas, who have ties to Cuba and the Soviet Union.

The official Soviet news agency Tass today said the report called for U.S. suppression of the revolutionary movement in Central America, and would provide for "the complete domination of U.S. imperialism in the continent."

A separate analysis in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda called the report "yet another attempt by the White House to set up a propaganda smokescreen to justify its hegemonistic course with regard to Central American countries."

In Managua, junta coordinator Daniel Ortega said the report "tends to strengthen the policy of pressure on Nicaragua." Another junta member, Sergio Ramirez, called the report a "failure ... because it does not reflect Central American reality."

In an interview with the official Nueva Nicaragua news agency, Ramirez said the report contradicts the recommendations of the four-nation, peace-seeking Contadora group.

The group, composed of Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela and Panama, favors a reduction in arms and foreign military aid and advisers in the region. There are U.S. military advisers in El Salvador and Cuban military advisers in Nicaragua.

On Sunday, Nicaragua and four other countries approved a regional peace plan which, although stripped of some Contadora recommendations, urged free elections and removal of foreign military advisers. Joining Nicaragua were El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Costa Rica.

In El Salvador, leftist rebels denounced the Kissinger report for recommending what they said is "an intensification of the war and genocide against our people."

A broadcast by the rebel Radio Farabundo Marti said, "At the same time they talk of peace, the Yankees intend to increase by 200 percent aid to the moribund regime of (Salvadoran President) Alvaro Magana."

Magana called the report "very responsible, serious and comprehensive."

The broadcast also said, "The only difficulties that Kissinger and Reagan have at this time is that the American people and Congress are not supporting this insane course aimed at the submission of poor and small peoples."

In a news conference via a satellite television hookup from Brussels, Belgium, to journalists in five Latin American cities, Kissinger defended the report by the commission, formally known as the National Bipartisan Commission on Central America.

"In our view, if the urgent economic, social and political reform measures are not taken, the internal situation in the countries can only worsen. Therefore, the security problems can only get more complicated," the former secretary of state said.

He said the United States must commit itself "to a long-term effort not just to deal with the security problems, but to bring about the political, economic and social aspirations of the people of the area."

A spokesman for Guatemala's military government, Col. Edgar Djalma Dominguez Lopez, challenged the commission's report on human rights violations in that country. He denied the army is guilty of "brutal behavior and extensive abuses of human rights" in its campaign against an entrenched leftist insurgency.

In Mexico City, the independent newspaper El Universal said in an editorial the report shows U.S. unwillingness to accept the Contadora proposals and overemphasizes military factors rather than social and political problems.

Foreign Minister Rodrigo Lloreda Caicedo of Colombia said the report "gives the impression that this is a positive step."

Christine Craft Wins $225,000 In Her Suit

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — A federal jury today awarded Christine Craft $225,000 in damages on her claim that KMBC-TV management made fraudulent promises when hiring her to co-anchor the news.

The ruling came in the retrial of her lawsuit against Metromedia Inc., former owner of the station.

Ms. Craft, 39, claimed she accepted the co-anchor job at KMBC-TV after the station's managers told her they were interested in her journalism skills. After she was hired, the management spent much of their energy criticizing her appearance, she alleged.

Ms. Craft had asked for $500,000 in actual damages and $3 million in punitive damages in the civil suit. She was hired as co-anchor in November 1980 and demoted to reporter in August 1981.

The seven-woman, five-man jury heard the case before U.S. District Judge Joseph F. Stevens, who had overturned a fraud ruling in her favor in the original trial in Kansas City.

In closing arguments, Ms. Craft's attorney, Dennis F. Egan, said, "They (the management) felt from day one 'she wasn't quite what we want but we'll go with her.'"

But, "day by day by day the obsession was with her appearance," Egan said.

The station's then-news director, Ridge Shannon, and general manager, R. Kent Replogle, after assuring her during the hiring procedure that they liked her appearance and were interested in her journalism talents, spent most of their time picking apart her makeup and clothes, Egan said.

Ms. Craft said in her testimony that she had made it clear she was not interested in the job if her appearance had to change.

Defense attorney Donald W. Giffin replied that Ms. Craft was never promised that KMBC-TV would not make modifications in her appearance, and that Shannon made it clear to her that the station was using consultants to help several of its on-air personalities.

He said Shannon and Replogle did not intend to make changes when Ms. Craft was hired, but they became necessary to enhance her chances of succeeding in the Kansas City market.

"They did believe in her. But once you state a plan or intent, things change. That's life. Not every love at first sight ends in a marriage contract," Giffin said.

Stevens told the jurors they should not be swayed by publicity surrounding the case or anything they might recall from Ms. Craft's trial last summer.

On Aug 8, a six-member jury in Kansas City awarded Ms. Craft $500,000 on the fraud count of her suit and recommended to Stevens that he uphold her sex discrimination and equal pay claims against Metromedia.

Stevens later threw out the fraud verdict as excessive, ordering a new trial on that charge. He let stand the equal-pay verdict but rejected the sex discimination claim.

Big Tax Bite

Virginia Electric & Power Co. announced that it will pay about $12 million in North Carolina state and local taxes in 1983, including $11,789 to Pitt County and $1,613 to the city of Greenville.

Other counties receiving checks include Martin, $104,962; Edgecombe, $36,836; Nash, $15,598, and Beaufort, $11,484.

In addition to Greenville, other eastern cities and towns receiving checks include Roanoke Rapids, $75,758 (the largest city check); Washington, $5,557; Williamston, $28,431 (the largest town check); Plymouth, $13,630; Elizabeth City, $6,246; Tarboro, $8,569; Murfreesboro, $5,116; Bethel, $1,558; Robersonville, $1,749, and Jamesville, $1,014.

Vepco said the total tax bill includes about $10 million for taxes on gross receipts and about $1.6 million for property taxes.

New Agancy To Spur Dialogue

NEW YORK (AP) — A new agency to promote theological dialogue between Christian and Jewish scholars, the Institute for Jewish-Christian Relations, has been set up by the American Jewish Congress.

Unlike most Jewish-Christian associations, the new institute is for examining theological issues and connections between the two faiths, rather than considering social, ethical or political matters.

"Nothing is more critical to religion today than current Christian efforts to formulate a Christian theology of Judaism," says Henry Sigman, AJC executive director.

As its first project, the institute announced co-sponsorship with the Vatican, among others, of a conference Jan. 16-18 in Lucerne, Switzerland, on organic links between Judaism and Christianity, the first time the Vatican has joined in a Jewish-Christian dialogue dealing exclusively with theological issues.

Death Penalty...

death penalty in the abstract," Yarbrough added. "I think that people are horrified at things people like Hutchins have done and they think people who commit those type of crimes ought to forfeit their lives."

Yarbrough said that he does not think Hutchins' execution would stop other people from committing murder.

"When people are planning a murder, they are not planning on getting caught, and life imprisonment does not stop people" from killing others, he said.

Greenville trial attorney Milton Williamson said, "In my opinion the news media pays entirely too much attention to the defendant and his rights and forgets the victims and their families.

"The death penalty is a necessary evil" for dealing with people who commit violent crimes, Williamson said.

"A large amount of research has been done on the death penalty in the past several decades," said Dr. James Mathis, professor and chairman of the departmen of psychiatry at ECU, "and there is not a shread of evidence that the death penalty deters violent crimes. In fact, there is some evidence that says that it increases violence, because the death penalty says that killing is all right under certain circumstances."

Dr. Mathis said that the public supports the death penalty "because of lack of information or misinformation" that the death penalty deters violent crimes and "because of vengence; the public wants to get revenge" on the people that commit violent crimes.

"I don't think the death penalty prevents crime," said Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes. "I think it is vindictive and punitive. Yet, I believe we should have it as a part of our judicial process.

"If we don't have that kind of a feature in our judicial system some victims' families would not be satisfied and would feel compelled to take things into their own hands," the police chief said.

Television evangelist Jim Whittington recently sent a telegram to Gov. Jim Hunt asking that the governor use his power to intervene and call off Hutchins' execution.

According to Whittington, the telegram read in part: "Taking one man's life will not stop crime any more than it has war ... The question that comes to my mind ... is how and by what rule of thumb you pick the next one to die ...

"This is a test and if a silent majority don't speak up now, we could end up with a mass massacre in the name of law and order. Mr. Hitler believed he was doing the right thing when he killed millions of Jews. Let's don't become guilty of the same on a smaller scale."

Dr. John Ball, associate dean of the school of allied health and social work at ECU, said, "It is assumed that in some ways the death penalty is supposed to serve the needs of society. I doubt that that is true."

Because research findings reportedly indicate that the death penalty does not deter others from committing violent crimes, "it is questionable as to whether there is such a need for the taking of a life," Ball added.

Kathryn Grzelkowski, professor in sociology at ECU said, "I feel that we are a civilized enough society that we should be able to find options to killing individuals even if they have killed others.

"When someone commits murder, it is not just an individual act, but arises out of social consequences and should be treated as a social issue and a social problem, not just as a personal issue and a personal problem," the sociologist said. "Therefore, it is society's responsibility to find a more humane way of dealing with those individuals who we deem are dangerous to society. We should be able to develop institutions that can protect society."

Wesley Letter Carries Advice

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The key to effective preaching is to be "neither too loud nor too long," advised the 18th century founder of Methodism, John Wesley.

His view is contained in a handwritten letter of Nov. 18, 1765, presented by the Lewis Mohr family, descendants of a Methodist bishop, to Melrose United Methodist Church here as part of its celebration of American Methodism's bicentennial.

The letter, written to a young minister before he was sent to America, also advised him never to "sit up later than a quarter to 10" unless he was involved in a "watchnight prayer service."

Doubts North Korea Sincere

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz is doubting the sincerity of North Korea's proposal for a conference on unifying the divided peninsula because of its alleged involvment in the deaths of 18 South Korean officials last fall.

But Shultz said Thursday the proposal should be studied to determine if there was a chance for "worthwhile discussions."

While Shultz said he favored discussions to ease tensions between the two nations, he said he understood South Korea's demand for an apology from North Korea for the Rangoon bombing attack as a condition for reunification talks.

Former NOW President Calls Gender Gap Key To Female Influence

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International

Feisty Eleanor Smeal says "women will elect the next president" of the United States — without speculating who.

To make it easier, she expects women to follow her "another pound of spaghetti" theory of organizing and raising funds.

The former president of the National Organization for Women insists the title of her new book — "Why and How Women Will Elect the Next President" (Harper & Row -Colophon Paperback, $6.95) — does not overstate her case.

"I worded the title that way to empower women," Ms. Smeal said. "And if they use my 'another pound of spaghetti' theory of organizing and fund-raising, the women of America will be successful.

"People make organizing and fund-raising so complicated. Organizing in general is like preparing a spaghetti dinner.

"The recipe is the same whether you're serving many people or a few — for many you just throw in another pound of spaghetti and make more sauce.

"Once you have the recipe down, it's easy to increase it. My theory is that bigger is not necessarily more complicated or more difficult. We have the recipe down."

Ms. Smeal sees the "gender gap" as the springboard women will use to land control of the presidential election. She talked about it in an interview and expands on it in her book, to be published in February.

The gender gap is recognized by some political scientists and politicians as a powerful new voting bloc. Following the media's development of the exit poll, it was learned that women as a class do vote differently than men.

The polls, conducted as people left voting areas, showed that differences between the way men and women vote cut across class, age, party and racial lines. They are determined by women's attitudes and experiences toward certain issues.

"These issues include abortion, unemployment, inflation, violence in and outside the home, childcare, equal rights for women, social serices, defense spending and war," Ms. Smeal said.

Women also have a voting advantage in numbers. Ms. Smeal said an estimated 6 million more women than men will cast votes in the next presidential election. Women comprise some 53 percent of the voting age population.

Ms. Smeal said the percentage of women who are registered to vote has been increasing since 1972 while the rate of men registering has decreased, adding to the power of numbers for women voters.

But numbers alone would mean nothing if women voted the same as their fathers or husbands, as political scientists claim was the case for many years, Ms. Smeal said.

"The women's vote, significantly different from men's, will be the wild card in the 1984 presidential sweepstakes," Ms. Smeal said.

"President Reagan is aware of the gender gap but seems to have made a decision to go with the traditionalists, hoping to get away with it," Ms. Smeal said, when asked if she expects gender gap campaign strategy to influence the present occupant of the White House, if he seeks another term.

"He seems to be ignoring the changes in women's lifestyles. In this administration there appears to be a stopping of improvements for women — a stopping of going forward — and there appears to be a reversing of a trend to more opportunities for women.

"I feel strongly that this presidential election is going to be crucial for women and for the country.

"I believe during the decade of the '80s women increasingly will be a part of the political action for those reasons. We're still at the stage of opening doors but some doors are being opened and that is what's important."

"Fewer women than men approve of Reagan's presidential performance," Ms. Smeal writes.

"In July, 1982 ... a Gallup survey found 48 percent of the men approved of Reagan's record, but only 38 percent of the women approved. The gender gap was 10 percent.

"One year later, in July 1983, a subsequent Gallup survey found 51 percent of men and only 34 percent of women approving of Ronald Reagan's presidency — a 17 percent gender gap.

"This gap has ranged from 8 percentage points to 19 points, usually hovering around the 10 point mark. If a 10 percent or greater gap between women and men persists, the Republicans are not likely to be in the White House after 1984."

"The gender gap derives from the fact that women's circumstances are still so different from men's," Ms. Smeal, mother of two, said.

"Women are paid 59 cents for every $1 men make; homemakers are frequently without adequate financial security in case of divorce or widowhood; females are not only the more likely recipients of the government's social service programs but traditionally are also the caretakers — the teachers, nurses, social workers.

"No wonder women view budget cuts differently: We have been more dependent upon government services, from mass transportation to social security."

Ms. Smeal claims women view issues differently and have different interests from men because sex discrimination imposes upon them a different set of experiences.

Ms. Smeal left the presidency of NOW in December 1982 after nearly five years in that post. Producing the book, lecturing and compiling The Eleanor Smeal Report, a newsletter for women's rights activists, have taken much of her time since.

She has a son at the Massachusetts Institute for Technology and a teenage daughter preparing for college.

The report has about 1,000 subscribers, she said.

"You don't do any of this just for money," she said. "The book is a call to action and a handbook showing women how to organize."

Ms. Smeal's step-by-step guide to political effectiveness for women tells how to work the "another pound of spaghetti" theory, how to register a political action committee and even even what color clothes to wear while campaigning.

"Most women candidates will find that too many items in their wardrobes either do not project authority or are wrong for television," she writes. "To help you achieve the appropriate look, here are some tips I've learned painfully.

"Wear solid colors in medium shades — like periwinkle blue, or rose. Avoid prints and checks. They are distracting, especially on television.

"White and pastels also don't work for either television or public speaking. White fabrics can glare, and too-light fabrics look faded. Any color worn should be at least a shade darker than light tan.

"Don't show too much skin. People will not take you seriously if you look more like an entertainer than an officeholder."

Nutrition Seminar Set For Jan. 27

ECU News Bureau

"The Many Faces of Food and Nutrition," a daylong seminar on the relationship of nutrition to physical stress, cost to the consumer and meal planning will be offered at East Carolina University Jan. 27 at the Willis Building.

Topics and speakers are: "Nutrition, Stress and Sports," Dr. Melvin Williams, director of the Old Dominion University Human Performance Laboratory, Norfolk, Va.; "Merchandising," Doris Zumsteg, food service specialist for Dudley-Anderson-Yutzy Public Relations, New York; "How To Put Sunshine in Your Menus," Blake Swihart, executive chef for the Florida Department of Citrus; and "Why Children Eat What They Eat," Dr. Kathryn Kolasa, chairperson of the ECU department of food, nutrition and institution management.

The seminar is sponsored by the ECU School of Home Economics and ECU Division of Continuing Education in cooperation with the Florida Department of Citrus.

The program has been approved for continuing education credit for participating professionals.

For information and registration materials contact Nutrition Seminar, Division of Continuing Education, Erwin Hall, ECU, Greenville, 27834.

Planning Meet Is Scheduled

The Pirate Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association will meet Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. for a planning session.

The meeting will be held at Three Steers. The new board and committees will discuss plans for 1984.

Membership in ABWA includes belonging to the National American Business Women's Association as well as to the local chapter. For information call Ann Worley at 758-3034 or Nina Redditt at 752-6410.

Sports, Outdoor Show Planned

RALEIGH — The first duck calling contest ever held in North Carolina will be at the Southern Sports and Outdoor Show April 26-29 at the State Fairgrounds.

The contest is just one of many activities Ducks Unlimited will sponsor at the show. They're also planning a limited edition water fowl print sale, a silent auction and various wildlife experts to talk with show visitors.

The show is not just nature and outdoor oriented. There will be hot air balloons, hang gliding, sports and antique cars.

Show hours will be 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and from noon until 6 p.m. Sunday.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Dear Abby

'Disrupting' A Life Sometimes Saves It

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Recently a problem occurred that I hope never occurs again, but in case it does, I want to know how to handle it.

A friend who lives 300 miles away started writing letters containing threats of suicide. She is divorced with a 6-year-old daughter. I became concerned, so I telephoned her. At first she seemed normal, then she became hysterical and started shouting things that made no sense at all. Among other things she threatened to kill her daughter and then commit suicide. Then she hung up.

I was terribly worried, so I called her back. She went into a rage again, vowing to kill her child and herself. Then she hung up again.

I tried frantically to reach her mother, her brothers and her ex-husband, who live near her, but I could reach no one. Finally I called my neighbor over who urged me to notify the police in my friend's town, so that's what I did.

The police picked her up and she was subsequently hospitalized. She's better now, but she has never forgiven me for "disrupting her life."

My husband says I was wrong to have called the police, but what were my alternatives? I couldn't take a chance on her carrying out her threat. If I had called a minister or psychiatrist, she wouldn't have let them in. How would you have handled it?

GOOD INTENTIONS

DEAR GOOD: Just as you did. It's sometimes necessary to "disrupt" a life in order to save it. I hope your friend comes to realize that you acted in her best interests. In the meantime, don't judge her too harshly. She could still be far from well.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am the grandmother of a very smart, strong-willed, 20-month-old boy who resides in a state in which seat belts for children under 4 years old became mandatory right after the first of the year.

No matter how tightly this child is strapped into his seat belt, he can pull a "Houdini act" and wiggle out of it. I have seen him do it twice, even while he was wearing a bulky winter coat!

He refuses to ride in a car unless he's sitting on someone's lap, and he absolutely will not stay buckled in any kind of seat belt. Spanking, bribing and reasoning have not worked. I am worried sick that his mother will have an accident while trying to force that child to stay buckled up. Please help.

MISSOURI GRANDMOTHER

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: There is an obvious power struggle going on between your daughter and her young son—and the boy is winning. Advise her to consult her local safety council (motor vehicle division) for some helpful suggestions. And if this precocious 20-month-old is already calling the signals, your daughter should take a course in parenting, or the boy will have her jumping through hoops before he's 3.

Appearance Awards Given

Two community appearance awards were presented last night at City Hall to the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Burger King on 10th Street.

The awards were from the Community Appearance Commission for 1984. Making the presentation was Beatrice Behr, chairman of the commission. She also designed the certificates.

Others receiving certificates are City of Greenville Recreation and Parks, Carolina Office Equipment, Pitt Plaza Business Council, East Carolina University, Douglas Caldwell, True Value Hardware and Margaux's.

The Beautification, Clean-Up and Litter Control Committee was created by the City Council in April 1979 and in January of 1982, the name was changed by the City Council to Community Appearance Commission.

The commission meetings are held the first Thursday of alternating months.

DEAR ABBY: I recently celebrated an "important" birthday and received many lovely cards.

A friend casually mentioned (on seeing the stack of cards) that I would be very tired by the time I had written thank-you notes for all those cards.

Abby, does a person have to write thank-you notes for cards?

WRITER'S CRAMP

DEAR CRAMP: No one "has to" acknowledge anything. But those with the best manners acknowledge everything—cards included.

Partial Success

We have yet to read of any heads rolling in the case of the forger vs. the North Carolina Corrections Department, but these things presumably take time. The basic narrative dates back to last May, and goes something like this:

Clifton Dickens, serving a life sentence for burglary, was set free from the medium security unit at Creswell on May 12 on the basis of what appeared to be official papers that lacked only the county seal.

The prison office sent the documents back to the Martin County Clerk of Courts, where it was stamped, and Dickens then was released.

Subsequently, on examining the papers, they realized the signature of a judge had been forged, there were typing mistakes, misspelled words and grammatical errors. But that was long after their inmate was no longer an inmate. The Corrections Department records manager said of course her staff does read court orders, but "what we mostly look for is the seal".

Corrections Department Secretary James C. Woodward, on surveying the damage, conceded he just didn't know how many other inmates could be free because of forged court documents.

There is a suspect in the case.

A convicted forger is thought to be the source for any number of red faces and official embarrassment as well as at least two sets of forged documents ... the Dickens papers and others intended to secure his own release from prison last July. He struck out on that one. The papers were quickly identifiable as forgeries.

Which goes to prove that neither forgers nor the Department of Corrections can win them all.

Avoid Danger

Once again U.S. military forces on duty in a hostile part of the world have come under fire.

A helicoptor was shot down by Nicaraguan troops Wednesday. The pilot was killed and two crewmen injured.

The Army helicoptor was a part of U.S. military maneuvers in Honduras. The manuevers, named Big Pine, were a joint exercise with Honduran forces.

There is clearly danger everywhere that U.S. military forces venture now, whether it be Beruit, Grenada or South America. We must do what we can to avoid placing our military men in situations of unnecessary danger.

Hardison Still Causing Problems

RALEIGH — It doesn't appear that Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenior, will be a candidate for lieutenant governor this year. But that doesn't mean he's stopped causing headaches for Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, who is a candidate for that office.

Hardison talked about a run for lieutenant governor for several years. He started slowly, however, and was considered for behind both Jordan and former House Speaker Carl Stewart, another candidate. Despite considerable speculation that he would not enter the race, he insisted that he would, and he went to considerable expense to prove it. For example, he hired professional campaign help and paid for hospitality suites at party functions. Several weeks ago, however, he conceded that he'd probably run for another term in the Senate and forget the race for lieutenant governor.

That should be good news for Jordan. Although a political moderate, Jordan has attracted conservative support, especially from businessmen. With Hardison out of the race, he can expect to pick up more of that support. It's such good news, in fact, that it may cause Jordan problems.

There long have been rumors that Hardison was floating his candidacy only to gain leverage with Jordan. Hardison's strength in the Senate relies to a great extent on the committee appointments he gets from the lieutenant governor. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green was quite generous to Hardison, making him Appropriations chairman. Hardison would like the same arrangement with the next lieutenant governor.

But several years ago, when Jordan began his campaign, he vowed he'd shake up the Senate leadership. Those words were music to Hardison's enemies. Supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment, environmentalists, organized labor and liberals were tired of butting heads with, and losing to, the powerful Hardison.

Opposition to Hardison doesn't stop with those opposed to him ideologically. Many conservative legislators complain privately that he is a man far too willing to use power brutally. Anyone who crosses Hardison gets burned, these senators say, and they're tired of that intimidation.

When Hardison failed to announce his candidacy this fall, rumors began to spread that he and Jordan were copping a deal — something like an important committee chairmanship for Hardison if he doesn't run. That kind of talk, however, threatens Jordan's base of support with ERA supporters, environmentalists, and others.

In an October interview, Jordan was emphatic in stating that Hardison would not get a major appointment if he, Jordan, was elected lieutenant governor. He said Hardison would always be an important senator but he would not be appointed Appropriations chairman. In filing this month, Jordan was less forceful. He said he had not made any deal with Hardison. He promised change in the top ranks of the Appropriations Committee. But he refused to say that Hardison would be denied a major committee chairmanship. "I hate to turn all of Hardison's people off," Jordan quipped.

Stewart refuses to comment about any "deal" but does charge that Jordan "doesn't have the political will to affect change." He says Hardison will force himself back into power if Jordan is lieutenant governor, whether Jordan wants it or not.

Jordan, then, is caught in a vise. He wants Hardison's help but, in taking it, he risks losing many of the first people to line up behind him. Many of those people supported Stewart in his losing 1980 campaign for lieutenant governor. Talk of a Jordan-Hardison deal makes than think about returning to Stewart in 1984.

Corporate War

NEW YORK (AP) — Executives in many industries will be closely watching the corporate realignment announced this week by General Motors because, says an industry watcher, there is more there than meets the eye.

The restructuring, says Prof. Eugene Jennings, is a streamlining effort to prove that America's biggest manufacturer can produce its products more efficiently and profitably than foreign competitors.

"There will be no more cat-and-mousing with foreign competition," says Jennings. He contends "it is war," the battle to be fought mainly with the Japanese, now the most efficient makers of compact automobiles.

If successful in overcoming Japanese marketplace successes, says Jennings, GM will become a case study for American producers of other products that have encountered foreign competition in their domestic markets.

"The nation would be the winner," he said, recalling that to date few companies have been able to fight Japanese competition in such varied areas as television sets, steel and watches. "It will give them courage to battle."

In this context, the GM announcement takes on far more significance than has generally been attributed to it, says Jennings, who teaches at Michigan State University and advises corporate chairmen and presidents.

As announced, the reorganization establishes two integrated car groups to function as self-contained business units — almost, in fact, as entirely separate companies, each with its own products, engineering and marketing. One group is to concentrate on regular and large-size or "comfort" cars, the other on compacts. But for the time being dealers would not be affected.

Jennings calls such a restructuring rare, a "total corporate realignment" that eventually will affect every corner of the organization and touch on every aspect of the way in which it conducts business.

For one thing, he says, it returns GM to the basics of marketing, manufacturing and management after a time in the 1960s and 1970s when it sought to solve problems by money and people rather than strategy and wisdom.

It also means a commitment to compact cars that is so strong, says Jennings, it can only mean an attempt to surpass the Japanese in that area and make GM as dominant there as long it has been in the larger car market.

He discounts arguments of those who claim the company will never be able to produce more efficiently than the Japanese, contending the realignment itself will produce efficiencies to help offset expected wage increases.

GM also has an agreement with Toyota Motor Corp. to produce 250,000 Japanese-designed subcompacts a year at an idle GM plant in California. If the project gets rolling — Chrysler Corp. challenged the deal in an antitrust lawsuit Thursday — GM will be able to study Japanese techniques closely.

Jesse Takes On The World

"Hello, this is Jesse Jackson's campaign headquarters. No, the candidate is not here just now. He's in Moscow trying to Persuade the Soviets to come back to the disarmament talks in Geneva. No, I'm sorry, Mr. Shultz, I don't know how to reach him ... I believe he has an appointment with Mr. Andropov this afternoon, and is dining with Mr. Gromyko tonight before taking off for Peking to discuss the China-Taiwan dispute with Deng Xiaoping. Yes, Mr. Secretary, he fully understands he's not speaking for the United States, but is only acting as a concerned citizen. I'll tell him that you called.

"Jesse Jackson's headquarters. The candidate is not here. Who is calling, please? Mrs. Thatcher ... Margaret Thatcher? It's so nice to talk to you. Unfortunately the candidate is out of the country. Can I be of help? Yes, he does plan to stop in Northern Ireland. I'm sorry you feel this is an internal matter for Her Majesty's Government. But Mr. Jackson believes you haven't given enough attention to the problem, and if he can get the British troops out we'll all be better for it, won't we? Please don't shout, Mrs. Thatcher. You should be happy that someone with Mr. Jackson's statesmanlike qualities is willing to get involved. Yes, Ma'am, I'll tell him what you said, but I doubt if the candidate will cancel his trip.

"Jesse Jackson's campaign headquarters. I'm sorry, the candidate is still out of the country, Monsieur Mitterrand. Yes, I did see his press conference with the Corsican separatists. But Mr. Jackson was just speaking about the moral justification for a free Corsica, and did not go into the political issues. I regret you're upset, Mr. Mitterrand. No, I don't think you can talk to him now. He's flying to Cyprus to talk to Turkish and Greek officials about the partition of that island ... No, Mr. Jackson doesn't expect France to give up Corsica without being compensated for it. He made his position on Corsican liberation very clear to Barbara Walters on ABC. We'll send you a tape of it. Au revoir.

"Jesse Jackson's headquarters. Oh hello, John. Thanks for calling. Tell Jesse things are going really well. The candidate has been on the three major news shows every night for the past month. He got four minutes on his visit to El Salvador, three when he visited Kadafi, and five when he went to Brazil to renegotiate their loan with the United States. Ted Koppel has had him on "Nightline" all week explaining his plan to settle the Israeli-PLO problem, and Time magazine put him on the cover three weeks in a row. Where are you now? You're at the Vatican talking to the Pope about Poland? Did they let in the camera crew? Great. The Mondale and Glenn people are going crazy. And the White House is fuming. The president called a news conference the other night on foreign affairs and nobody came.

"Where are you going from Rome? ... You don't know? Jerry thinks you ought to hop over to Iraq and then stop off in Tehran and see if you can bring about a cease-fire between those two countries. But don't go unless you have assurances you'll meet with Khomeini. Tell the candidate we're holding down the fort here.

"Jesse Jackson's headquarters. The candidate is not here. Who's calling? Oh hello, Mr. President. Yes sir, I did give him your message that you wanted him to call you, but he's been terribly busy. Yes sir, I did tell him what you said — that the American president, according to the Constitution, is in charge of foreign policy, and that Mr. Jackson is making your job much more difficult by negotiating with all the world's leaders. But he wanted me to assure you that he is not making any promises to them which will be impossible for you to keep. Oh, there was one other thing he told me to ask you if you called. Is it possible for him to use Air Force One while he's traveling abroad? Some of the Third World countries are very difficult to get to by commercial plane."

Strength For Today

We often hear the expression that hindsight is better than foresight. Certainly we have passed through situations we can look back upon and say, "if I had known then what I know now, everything would have been different."

Neither foresight nor hindsight are sufficient in themselves to bring about satisfactory living. They are twins. They belong together. Often we wish we might be able to pierce the future and see what it has in store for us. One of God's great mercies is that he has spared us that ordeal.

But although none of us can foresee the future, we can see certain patterns emerging if we thoroughly analyze our past and are willing to profit by both the achievements and mistakes which it reveals. If we understand our personal history, we ought not to be completely surprised and taken aback by our future.

Teen Professionals Make A Choice

WASHINGTON — On the first Monday of 1984, tennis whiz Andrea Jaeger held court at an electronics store in suburban Maryland, signing autographs and chatting with customers about the hardships of travel on the women's tennis circuit. For Jaeger, a veteran of four years on the professional tour, working on a holiday didn't seem unusual.

"You can't expect to live the life of a normal teen-ager when you're making the kind of money I am," explained Jaeger, 18, who pocketed $261,954 last year. "It's a business type of world I'm in."

Jaeger is only one of the better-known members of a noticeably expanding club; the teen-age professional. Blessed with exploitable talents, many young Americans are foregoing the less certain rewards of education for the higher percentage shots in their particular fields. Their choice of life in the fast lane is a reflection of the times, but it's also a misreading of the future.

On the tennis circut alone, dozens of teen-agers have proven that it pays to turn pro early. Aaron Krickstein, 16, who turned professional only last October, has already won $17,000. Carling Bassett, 15, a second-year pro, collected $87,168 in tournaments last year. A pro since 1981, Kathy Rinaldi, 16, won $85,732 in 1983.

Other professions, including films and music, have continued to draw talent from the sub-18 group. More recently, high-technology firms have come to rely on young computer programmers, some of whom have dropped out of high school to start their own software companies.

Amid the well-publicized success stories, however, many child phenoms risk failure in a number of ways. Take Jim Nitchals, 21, for example. In 1980, Nitchals dropped out of Torrey Pines High School in San Diego, Calif., to start a firm that wrote programs for videogames. Three years later, Nitchal's firm is all but defunct, and he has gone to work for another computer company in Northern California.

While Nitchals insists that the experience was educational, he regrets its impact on his personal life. "I have trouble now relating to people on a personal level," he conceded. "I guess my personal life isn't what it should be. Maybe I spent too much time at work."

Of course, parents are often to blame for the overemphasis on adolescent success. It's still a measure of one's own self-worth to have produced and raised competent offspring. In many cases, talented children have found themselves offering parents a vicarious feeling of accomplishment, if not a thrill similar to that of owning a prime race horse.

Younger parents may be even more obsessive. They have helped spawn the superbaby phenomenon. We've known friends who've solicited congressional assistance to place their 3-year-old children in private schools. As members of the baby-boom group, these new parents have fought long and hard to survive fierce job competition, and they'll do almost anything to free their kids of the same burden.

Indeed the perceptions that compel so many teen-agers are wedded in recent experience. Anyone who has watched older siblings or listened to reports about gloom in the job markets can't help but feel wary of the future. In this context, the drive for early success, whether in sports or videogames, is a natural response.

But time and numbers stack up on the side of teen-agers today. In 1990, there will be 3 million fewer young adults competing for jobs than in 1980, and 4.5 million fewer in 2000. College administrators are already concerned with these projections, as are employers.

Tip By Psychologist To Avoid Impulse Affliction

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A seemingly bright student who does poorly on an achievement test and a skilled golfer in a slump may have a common affliction: impulsiveness, a North Carolina State University psychologist says.

Simply put, impulsiveness is acting without thinking. In many cases, the remedy is equally simple: disciplining oneself to slow down, assistant psychology professor N. William Walker says.

"A key to dealing with impulsiveness is in learning to relax and in acquiring the ability to slow down the thought process to a point where you can consider all the alternatives in solving a problem," Walker said in an interview.

An impulsive test taker "sees a group of possible answers, impulsively points a finger and says, 'that's the correct one,' without ever thinking it through," he said. Reflective students, who take time to consider answers carefully, almost always outscore their impulsive counterparts on IQ and achievement tests.

Walker said his research shows that impulsive students, who constitute between 20 and 30 percent of the typical grade school class, can raise their scores simply by taking about five extra seconds to answer each question.

By the same token, when the "anxious golfer takes the time to relax and visualize the perfect swing before addressing the ball, he's dealing with impulsiveness in a very effective way," Walker said.

Impulsiveness that has become an integral part of a person's psychological essence is hard to overcome, he said. But children can be helped by knowledgable parents and teachers who know how to spot them. Currently the best methods are visual matching tests and observation, but more research is needed on identifying impulsive students and modifying their behavior, he said.

"When a student is impulsive, easily distracted, has a short attention span, has little patience or can't concentrate, he is lacking skills that must be learned by grade schoolers," Walker said. "These factors are more important to a child's school performance than IQ or achievement. When these problems are identified, something should be done."

Teachers or parents can help impulsive children by setting a good example and by encouraging them to "stop, count to five and analyze" before answering questions, he said. As impulsive people grow older, they can assume more responsibility for disciplining themselves.

Walker disagrees with some psychologists who believe impulsiveness lessens as a child passes through adolescence.

"I believe it merely changes shape," he said. "Many of us are just as impulsive as shoppers as children are as test takers. We want a new dress or a pair of pants, and if the store doesn't have the item in our size or color, we're likely to go for another color or accept an ill-fitting size."

Impulsiveness may be rooted in physiological factors, but which ones are unknown, Walker said. If they could be discovered, perhaps medical solutions could be developed.

"It's very iffish at this point, but you can see the ramifications," he said. "The penal system is full of extremely impulsive people who just lost control for a minute and broke the law. The story's the same in many child abuse cases. All of us get violent impulses, but some can control them and others need help."

Defends Barring Foreign Photogs

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A government photographer today told the panel investigating Benigno Aquino's assassination that foreign journalists were kept away so the airport's media staff would have exclusive coverage of the opposition leader's return from exile.

Jolly Riofrir, the photographer, testified that he and foreign photographers missed the shooting of President Ferdinand E. Marcos' chief opponent on Aug. 21 because they were kept inside holding rooms in a terminal at Manila airport.

From there they could not see Aquino step off the plane which brought him home on the last leg of his journey from the United States, Riofrir said. Aquino was shot moments after he disembarked.

The government contends that the assassin was Rolando Galman, an alleged Communist who was killed almost immediately by soldiers on the tarmac. Aquino's family has charged that soldiers killed Aquino and that the government was involved in the assassination.

Riofrir said he and Col. Vicente Tigas of the Presidential Security Command had control of local photographers, who also didn't see the shootings.

Tigas earlier testified he thought Aquino was coming out through the terminal.

Riofrir said the minister of media affairs, Gregorio Cendana, had agreed to a request from regular airport reporters that they have exclusive access to the gate where Aquino was to arrive.

Security men blocked journalists who had accompanied Aquino on the flight from seeing him leave the plane.

No photograph of the actual killing has surfaced among scores of negatives turned over to the fact-finding board headed by Corazon Agrava, a retired judge.

In another development today, a businessmen's group called for Marcos to either "lead us or leave us."

The Businessmen's Committee for Reconciliation, an organization of executives, economists and professionals, issued a statement accusing Marcos of failing to promote national reconciliation.

On Thursday, Marcos dropped sedition and subversion charges against more than 60 people arrested during anti-government protests in September. Most of them are students who were arrested when police broke up demonstrations protesting Aquino's assassination and demanding that Marcos resign.

In November, Marcos ordered the demonstrators released from military custody.

Jaycees Plan Jelly Sale

Larry Harrison, president of the Greenville Jaycees, has named Ken Smith as chairman of the chapter's Jelly Week activities which begin Sunday and continue through Jan. 21. Smith, scheduling supervisor at Yale Materials Handling Corp. here, will coordinate the local drive to raise funds for the North Carolina Burn Center in Chapel Hill.

Smith said Greenville Jaycees will canvass the city during the week, selling jars of jelly to aid the operations of the burn facility.

According to Smith, a balloon ride event for the public Saturday from 3-7 p.m. at the former King's Department Store parking lot will open the activities. He said an individual will receive a jar of jelly and a balloon ride for a $2 donation.

The sales goal for the Greenville Jaycees is 66 cases. Smith said that while the jelly sale is being held in conjunction with the annual observance of Jaycee Week, jelly will be available for purchase from any member of the Jaycees throughout January.

Board Favors Salary Hikes

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Board of Community Colleges says a 10 percent salary increase for its personnel is at the top of its list of budget priorities.

"The ability to meet salary requirements is the single most important item that must be recognized by the General Assembly during the short session (of the Legislature)," Bob Scott, president of the Department of Community Colleges, said Thursday as the board approved budget priorities.

Scott told the board that additional funds were critical to the system's ability to retain and hire competent instructors.

"Pay for instructors in North Carolina's community college system is second from the bottom in the South, according to a recent study released by the Southern Regional Education Board," he said.

Scott said the department was doing a study on salaries in the state's community and technical colleges that would be ready in the spring.

"The case has been made," said state Treasurer Harlan Boyles, a member of the board. "There is very strong feeling throughout our system that we must do something about salaries."

Other items on the board's priority list included funding to educate and train mentally handicapped adults, upgrade faculty in high technology areas and allow instructors to return to private industry to sharpen their skills.

The budget list totals more than $58 million, excluding salary increases.

The board asked community college officials to obtain figures on how much it would cost to give all personnel a 10 percent salary increase and reinstating merit pay.

In other business, the board approved new standards for the system's 220 vocational and technical curriculum programs.

The standards include a title, a description and standard lengths for skills training programs.

"These standards are a major step in our efforts to ensure quality in our programs and to give business and industry a more clear understanding of what they can expect of our graduates," said Dr. Sanford C. Shugart, vice president for program services.

Decide To Join Church Council

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — After six years of observer relations with the Kentucky Council of Churches, the Roman Catholic Archidocese of Louisville and Diocese of Owensboro have decided to become full members of the state interdenominational body.

This will bring all three of Kentucky's Roman Catholic dioceses into the council of 15 Protestant and other denominations. The Covington diocese joined in 1982. "It makes sense for us to do together the things we can do better together," says Catholic Bishop John McRaith of Owensboro.

Ecumenical Ties Soften Vatican Envoy Criticism

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Now that the U. S. government and the Vatican have acted to restore full diplomatic relations, some Protestant resistance persists, but on a lessened scale and in a moderated tone.

Along with scattered sharp protests and charges of favoritism toward one church, much Protestant reaction was tempered, and some supportive, as was the case among Jewish leaders.

Bishop James W. Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, president of the U.S. Catholic bishops, says the step "is not a religious issue" but helpful in U.S. diplomatic interests.

In general, ecumenical cooperation and deepened understanding between Roman Catholicism and other churches in modern times have diminished the old, mutual suspicions and rancor.

The effect "has certainly mitigated" Protestant opposition to the step, says the Rev. Dean Kelly, church-state expert for the National Council of Churches.

"It's not the bugaboo it once was," he says, adding that the new U.S.-Vatican links won't upset interchurch relationships on the American scene, as some critics have maintained.

"We have many close cooperative relations with Catholics, and this is not going to disrupt those," he said in an interview.

Although the council of most major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations, on the basis of action by their representatives in 1951, still officially opposes a U.S. embassy to the Vatican, Kelly said:

"It's not that much of a front-burner issue for us as it was in the 1950s. At that time, we and others viewed Catholicism as a big problem in church-state issues. But I don't think that's true today."

He said he still thinks "the idea of the government sending an ambassador to a church is weird" and "totally inappropriate." While the Vatican is technically a state, he added, "it's so tiny it would be of no interest were it not headquarters of a worldwide church."

Some denominations, chiefly Baptists and Seventh-day Adventists, energetically fought the move. So have the National Association of Evangelicals, made up of relatively small, conservative denominations, and Americans United for Separation of Church and State, a group stressing that principle.

It and possibly others indicate they will challenge the step in court, but it appeared questionable if a court would intervene in the president's handling of foreign policy.

The United States, in its first 50 years, maintained diplomatic relations with the papal states, but Congress in 1867, in a time of much anti-Catholic sentiment in this country, blocked such ties — a ban repealed last year.

Former President Harry Truman in 1951 sought to reopen formal ties, but Protestant outcries stopped it.

Neal C. Wilson, president of Seventh-day Adventist Church, which lately has run newspaper ads against the present move, says it entangles "the United States with a religious entity" and grants "preference" to one religion over others.

Forest Montgomery, counsel to the NAE, says that while reocgnizing the Vatican is involved in "many meaninful political and diplomatic exchanges," its main function is as a church. He says diplomatic relations with it gives "the appearance of the imprimatur of the United States upon the head of a church."

The Rev. James M. Dunn, executive director of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, says that besides elouding the U.S. principle of church-state separation, the step could hurt American missionary work abroad.

"Anti-Christian and anti-American sentiment is so strong in many parts of the world that even slight evidence of a U.S. papal partnership jeopardizes the credibility of missionary ventures," he says.

Another Baptist, the Rev. Jerry Falwell, leader of Moral Majority, while opposing the step, saw no "massive Protestant reaction" against it. He cites a fading away of past anti-Catholic attitudes in this country.

"John Kennedy defused most of that," he says, referring to the first Catholic to become U.S. president. "I don't think prejudice toward any group exists today at the boiling level it once did."

A United Methodist theologian, the Rev. J. Robert Nelson of Boston University, maintained the step was neither contrary to church-state separation nor showed preference for a particular church.

"It represents the unique reality of the Vatican state in being both a church and state," he says.

Electronic Snoopers Cleared Out By Professional, At Price

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When curiosity overcomes obedience to the law and people turn to electronic eavesdropping and phone-tapping, Norman I. Perle goes to work, clearing homes, offices and yards of bugs planted by some "low-life criminal."

For the 45-year-old professional debugger, "Finding a wiretap or an electronic surveillance system on one of my clients is a tremendous rush."

Part of the thrill might stem from the risk involved. Once, Perle says, he traced wires from a closet wall in a condominium to a telephone equipment room near the elevator. When he opened the door, the eavesdropper came at him — swinging a Boy Scout hatchet. The weapon missed Perle as he ran in the opposite direction.

Perle says he's debugged offices for all kinds of businesses and homes for those involved in marital breakups, but has never installed a bugging device, despite a cash offer of $67,000 to bug a Century City attorney.

Some clients, he says, are so shocked at discovering that someone has broken in to invade their privacy that they become physically ill.

"The horror of actually seeing it in front of them is such a trauma," Perle said Wednesday from his home-office in the San Fernando Valley. "The bottom line is that the person who put it there is a felon. Somebody had to go out and hire a low-life criminal to put in a device."

Perle has about 25 steady clients who pay him to make regular sweeps of their offices. About 60 percent of his business is with law firms.

"The ethics of business, of employers listening in on their employees' conversations, or the employees listening in on the employers, one business listening in on another business, is unfortunately commonplace within the business community," he said. And that includes the entertainment industry.

"Drive by any Hollywood studio with a special surveillance receiver, and you'd find so many wiretaps going on between one production company and another, you wouldn't believe it," he said.

One on occasion, he said, a car pulled up beside him as he left a "sweep" job and a man pointed a gun at him.

"I knew as soon as I saw that car that they weren't going to ask me for directions," he said.

"As I dove down to the seat where my weapon was, I caught my shirt on the door handle and ripped it half off, rolled out the door and fell on my shoulder. I did a somersault and landed flat on my back. By the time I stood up, I had practically knocked myself out and my shirt was off," he said.

"The guy was just so shocked to see this kind of thing that he took off.... He didn't have a clear shot at me anyway," Perle said.

Perle also evaluates magnetic tapes to determine their authenticity for trials.

He determined as faked an audio tape that Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt claimed would show an informant had threatened John Z. De Lorean if the automaker tried to back out of a narcotics deal. Three weeks after Perle said the tape was not real, Flynt admitted in court that it was a fake.

Perle also determined that a tape provided an alibi for a defendant by listening to the background noise of airplanes and finding from the flight patterns that the client really had been where he said he had been.

Bullet Train Said Likely U.S. Failure

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the technology is available, high-speed "bullet trains" are likely to fail in this country unless they are given government subsidies, concludes a new congressional study that was quickly rebuffed by the trains' advocates.

The report Thursday by Congress' Office of Technology Assessment said the high speed train system, already popular in Japan, France and Britain, wouldn't attract enough riders in this country to make a profit.

Plans for high-speed rail projects are well along in southern California between Los Angeles and San Diego and in Florida on the Tampa-Orlando-Miami corridor. They also have been considered in a half dozen other heavily traveled parts of the country.

"As a private company we look forward to proving the Office of Technology Assessment wrong," said Pamela Engretson, spokeswoman for the American High Speed Rail Corp., which is handling the California project.

Robert W. Blanchetde, president and chief executive officer of the TGV USA Co., declared that the high-speed trains "can and will succeed in the United Sates, particularly in Florida" where his company plans to develop a system patterned on the French trains.

First U.S. Casualty By Hostile Fire In 'Big Pine II'

By MONTE HAYES
Associated Press Writer

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The Army helicopter pilot killed when his aircraft was downed by Nicaraguan gunners was the first American fatality from "hostile" fire since the beginning of Big Pine II, joint U.S.-Honduran military exercises under way here.

The exercises, which began in August, reached a peak in November when more than 5,000 American troops and 6,000 Honduran soldiers participated. They are expected to end in February. The Pentagon says about 2,900 U.S. soldiers currently are taking part.

Officials in Washington who insisted on anonymity disclosed this week that the Defense Department is considering another big exercise — Big Pine III — which would probably start in June. The first Big Pine exercise was held a year ago.

The Sandinista government in Nicaragua charges that the exercises are a prelude to an invasion by the United States or bi CIA-supported Nicaraguan rebels. Honduran and American officials insist the exercises are intended to improve the defensive capability of the Honduran armed forces.

But together with the presence of U.S. fleets ordered off both coasts of Central America last summer, the exercises were intended as a warning to the Sandinistas to restrain their alleged support for revolutionaries in other countries.

The Reagan administration charges that the Sandinistas sent arms to Salvadoran leftist guerrillas, while Honduras holds them responsible for training a small guerrilla group that quickly was controlled here last year.

The Sandinistas have threatened several times to invade Honduras or take some sort of military action, claiming that Honduras is giving sanctuary to Nicaraguan Democratic Force rebels who cross the border into Nicaragua.

The Democratic Force rebels, once called "freedom fighters" by President Reagan, have increased their activity in northern Nicaragua since early December, mounting a series of big attacks in their fight to overthrow the Sandinistas.

The area where the American pilot was killed is just across the border from the scene of the heaviest fighting in northern Nicaragua.

Recent testimony before the U.S. Congress showed the CIA has been supplying the rebels with money, training and weapons. In tacitly admitting this, administration spokesmen have said the CIA aid was part of an effort to exert pressure on the Sandinistas but have denied seeking to overthrow the Nicaraguan government.

Big Pine II involves more than war games. The American presence now is visible from the large embassy complex in Tegucigalpa to the clusters of U.S. troops found at small town cafes.

The close ties the Honduran government of President Roberto Suazo Cordova and the military are building with the United States have made some Hondurans uneasy about the potential for being drawn further into Central America's troubles.

As part of the exercises, U.S. military engineers have been building airstrips which would be vital for moving troops rapidly around the country if war flared with Nicaragua.

TheU.S. Army Corps of Engineers and Navy Seabees are expanding dirt airstrips at Puerto Castilla on the Caribbean and in San Lorenzo on the Gulf of Fonseca, both considered strategic sites.

They also are upgrading the airstrip at El Aguacate, in the mountains 130 miles northeast of Tegucigalpa. The Sandinistas claim the pilot of a rebel plane shot down over in Nicaragua last September had taken off from there.

The U.S. helicopter shot down on the Honduran border Wednesday was reported to have been on a routine flight from San Lorenzo to El Aguacate.

The border area between Cifuentes and Las Trojes where the helicopter made its forced landing has been the scene of scattered but intense fighting between the army and rebels trying to sneak into Nicaragua.

American officers here said at the beginning of Big Pine II that U.S. troops would not participate in military exercises close to the border in order to prevent any incidents.

But Honduran soldiers patrolling the road to El Aguacate told an Associated Press reporter in September that American soldiers based there frequently accompanied them in search of leftist guerrillas in the jungles on the Nicaraguan border.

At the time, U.S. officers denied they knew this was happening, but they admitted American helicopters were used to shuttle Honduran troops around the area.

Although not part of Big Pine II, 120 American military advisers are also training 3,600 Salvadoran soldiers in anti-guerrilla tactics at a base they set up in Puerto Castilla, on the Atlantic coast.

Such training cannot be carried out in El Salvador because the Reagan administration has imposed a limit of 55 American noncombat military advisers in that area.

FBI Suggests General Was Masking Suicide

By KRISTIN GAZLAY
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An Army Reserve general found hanged at Fort Sam Houston could have disguised his suicide as a murder by looping a noose around his neck, tying his hands behind his back and stepping off a second-floor stairwell, the FBI says.

FBI agent Julian Delarosa said Thursday that investigators have discounted terrorism in the death of Maj. Gen. Robert G. Ownby, who was discovered bound and hanged Wednesday in the headquarters building at the fort, where he led the 90th U.S. Army Reserve Command.

The FBI meanwhile said a handwritten note had been found in Ownby's office saying he had "startled" some intruders in the building at "1145 hours" and was going to investigade.

In Washington, Pentagon officials told The New York Times that the investigation centered on suicide, although murder had not been ruled out. The officials said they were looking into Ownby's mental condition, the status of his business and personal affairs and related matters for a possible motive.

Pinned to Ownby's sweater was another note bearing the typewritten message, "Captured, tried, convicted of crimes by the U.S. Army against the people of the world. Sentenced and executed."

The general's glasses, jacket and wallet were found in a neat stack near the body and there was no sign of foul play, the FBI said. Pentagon officials said the note could have been "a diversion."

"The possibility of the victim having placed the belt around his own wrists has not been ruled out," an FBI statement said.

Delarosa, assistant agent in charge of the FBI office in San Antonio, said, "As far as we are concerned, we are conducting the investigation as a crime on a government reservation, not as a terrorist investigation."

Ownby, who was married and had three children, was to be buried today at Fort Sam Houston National Cemetery.

Blood was found on the general's body, but the FBI quoted Bexar County Medical Examiner Vincent DiMaio as saying the blood could have dripped from Ownby's nose and mouth during the hanging.

DiMaio ruled asphyxiation by hanging as the cause of death and said the general had no "preliminary marks or bruises indicating a struggle."

Someone might fake a murder "because of an insurance policy; they might feel it would disgrace the family; there are religious reasons, social reasons," DiMao said.

He also said he had seen people who had hanged themselves by placing a loop around the neck, then pulling the hands together behind the back and jumping off a high stair.

Investigators placed the time of Ownby's death sometime between late Tuesday and 6:40 a.m. Wednesday, when an employee found the body. The FBI said the handwritten note was apparently written late Tuesday night, despite its opening reference to "about 1145 hours," military jargon for 11:45 a.m.

"I started out of the building and caught a glimpse of some people in the building who moved toward the back of the building. I don't know who they are or what they are doing. They were apparently startled. I came back here to call the MPs (military police), however, I cannot get any of the telephones to work. Just as a precaution I am placing my office keys in my shoe. I will call the MPs as soon as I can get to a phone."

Base spokesman Capt. Rudy Purificato said Ownby often worked late and probably would have been alone in the building late Tuesday.

Bob Butler, who described himself as the general's "dearest friend," told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that he doubted Ownby killed himself.

"This was the most perfect father and husband in the world," Butler said. "In my own mind, somebody was waiting in there. I just feel like it was somebody he recognized and they made a martyr out of him."

In Washington on Thursday, Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch said that as a precaution, "senior officers in reserve forces are being reminded to take prudent precautions for their own safety."

Ownby, who in February 1982 became one of the youngest two-star generals in the Army, supervised about 4,500 reservists in 63 combat units throughout Texas and in Bossier City, La.

He owned Bristow-ONB Corp., which manufactures steel doors and frames.

Arrest 6 In Theft Ring

HIGH POINT (AP) — Six High Point men have been arrested on charges of operating a burglary ring that covered a four-county area, Guilford County Sheriff's Department detectives said Wednesday.

Two others from High Point have been charged with receiving stolen property in the investigation.

Det. Sgt. Steve Shaver said the burglary ring operated during daylight hours in Guilford, Davidson, Alamance and Forsyth counties.

As of Wednesday night, 59 felony charges had been filed against the eight suspects, including 37 counts that resulted from Guilford County Sheriff's Department investigations.

Shaver said his office has no figures on the total amount of property taken in the four counties.

Charged with receiving stolen property are Danny Keith Green, 35, and Ricky D. White, 33, detectives said.

The six charged with breaking, entering and larceny are:

Bruce Wayne Torrence, 23, 21 charges; Ricky Workman, 21, nine charges; Anthony Stewart, 22, eight charges; Terry Dwane Douglas, 22; Ronnie Sellers, in his 20s, three charges; and Keith Torrence, in his 20s, two charges.

Each of the suspects had been freed by Wednesday on bonds, ranging from $10,000 to $18,000. Preliminary hearings for the eight will be held Jan. 25 in Guilford County District Criminal Court.

Gasoline Prices Continuing Drop

RALEIGH (AP) — The price of regular gasoline in some North Carolina cities has dropped below $1 per gallon for the first time in a year, although severe cold has slowed the reduction, merchants say.

W. Ray Edwards, past president and current spokesman for the N.C. Service Station Association, said Wednesday in a telephone interview from wilmington that 10 to 12 stations there are selling self-service regular for 99.9 cents per gallon.

Stations in Raleigh, Jacksonville, and Fayetteville also have dipped below $1 a gallon, Edwards said.

Quentin Anderson, spokesman for the Charlotte-based Carolina Motor Club, said prices should continue falling throughout the state over the next few months.

The holiday cold snap caused wholesale prices to rise again, because demand for home heating oil increased, said Darrell G. Peoples, treasurer of the service station group.

Face Warrants

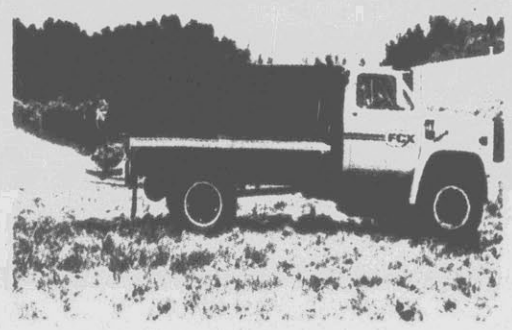

By The Associated Press

RALEIGH (AP) — Warrants will be issued for drivers who sign their North Carolina insurance certification when their liability insurance is not in force or has lapsed.

R.W. Wilkins, commissioner of the Division of Motor Vehicles for the state Department of Motor Vehicles, said his department is reviewing as many as 1,800 registrations per month on a random basis.

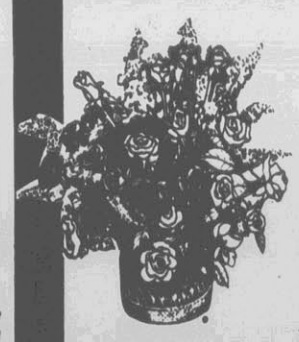

"We want the vehicle owners in this state to realize the serious consequences of falsifying the certification of liability insurance when they sign their registration cars," Wilkins said.

Chrysler Going To Court To Block Joint Venture

By NANCY BENAC
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chrysler Corp. is going to court in its crusade to block the proposed joint carmaking venture between two of the world's largest automakers, with Chrysler hoping the judiciary will do what the Federal Trade Commission has not.

"In a democracy, when you are foreclosed by the executive branch, you have the option of going to the judiciary to get the law enforced," Chrysler general counsel Richard Goodyear said Thursday in announcing a lawsuit meant to head off the joint venture between General Motors Corp. and Toyota Motor Corp.

Chrysler filed its antitrust lawsuit against the two automakers in U.S. District Court in Washington in the wake of the FTC's decision last month to give the project tentative approval. Final FTC approval is expected after a 60-day public comment period ends next month.

GM and Toyota hope to annually produce up to 250,000 cars in a front-wheel-drive version of the Toyota Corolla called the Sprinter at an idle GM plant in Fremont, Calif. The cars would be sold under the Chevrolet nameplate.

Chrysler's lawsuit claims the carmaking deal and the coordination that it would foster between the largest and third-largest automakers "is the antithesis of the robust competition that the antitrust laws are designed to foster."

It adds that GM's "Japanese strategy is designed to and will enhance GM's stranglehold on the entire automobile market."

Stephen Guittard, vice president and general counsel for American Motors Corp., said the Chrysler lawsuit "will flush out details of the GM-Toyota joint venture that have been kept secret by the FTC."

When asked to comment on the lawsuit, Ford Motor Co. spokesman Tom Foote in Detroit said the company's officials "just haven't made any decision yet."

Goodyear said the lawsuit may take months to settle, but that a favorable court ruling still could be issued before GM and Toyota could start producing cars late this year.

"This is a clear and unambiguous violation of the antitrust law," Goodyear said. "Any judge who studies the matter carefully ... will understand that, and having understood it, will stop it."

GM Chairman Roger Smith defended the joint venture and said its legality already has been attested to.

"They (Chrysler) can do anything they want," Smith said. "The FTC had done one of the longest studies they have ever conducted on anything and has come out and said they think there is nothing wrong with what we're doing. And obviously, we wouldn't do something illegal."

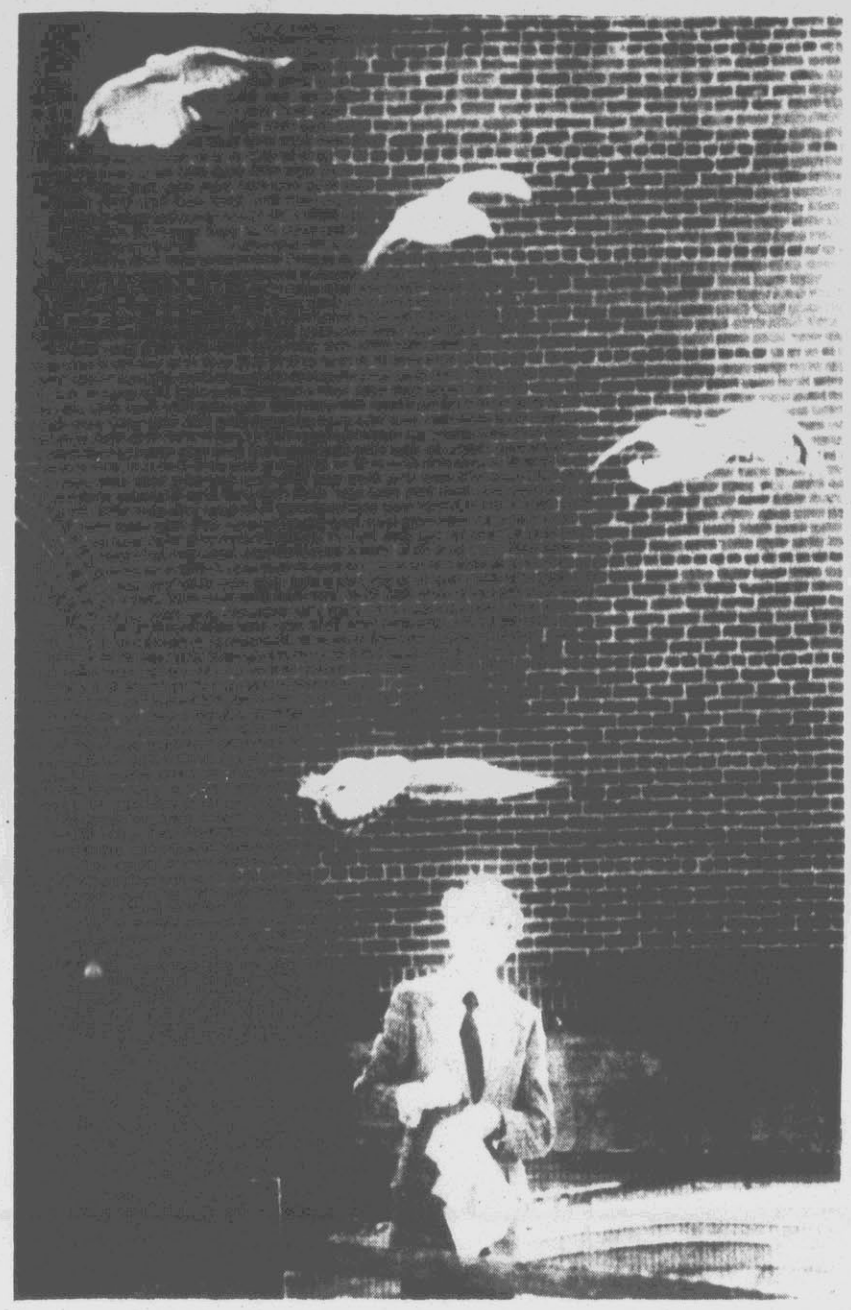

Earl Kintner, attorney for Toyota, said the Japanese automaker intends to "vigorously defend against the complaint."

"I think that the matter properly rests in the Federal Trade Commission ... and that's where it should stay for a final decision."

Smith has said the joint venture would create 12,000 jobs. But Chrysler attorney Joseph Califano said the 12-year project could cost the American auto industry 300,000 jobs because the Japanese will supply many of the parts and equipment needed in the venture.

Goodyear noted that Chrysler itself has dealings with a Japanese automaker and said the lawsuit was not intended as an "anti-Japanese move." He said the size of GM and Toyota are what prompted concern over their joint venture.

"There is ... a built-in opportunity to collude between General Motors and Toyota and to discuss between each other how they will jointly carve up the United States market," Goodyear said.

Driving Record Points Will Become Costlier

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Reinsurance Facility says that motorists with points on their driving records will be assessed at least 6.6 percent more for basic insurance starting April 1.

The facility, which provides liability insurance for drivers considered high-risk, voted Thursday to increase its surcharge 45 percent in an attempt to recover $47.2 million in losses dating from 1977.

The surcharge is now 18.7 percent. Drivers with any violation on their record during the past three years pay that percentage more for liability insurance, on top of a higher rate they must pay as a result of the violation itself.

For policies sold after April 1, the surcharge will jump to 27.2 percent, including a 22.4 percent charge to cover past losses and a 4.8 percent charge to offset anticipated losses in the next year.

That is the highest surcharge since the facility began making such a charge in 1977.

The increased surcharge would amount to an extra $12 per year for a minimum liability insurance policy purchased by a Raleigh resident who commutes less than 10 miles to work and has two points on his driving record, according to an example given by a spokesman for the Reinsurance Facility.

That driver today would pay $182 per year for the minimum policy, which is limited to payments of $25,000-$50,000 for bodily injury and $10,000 for property damage.

The new rate on that policy will be $194 after April 1, a 6.6 percent increase.

The dollar increase would be larger for a driver with more than two points on his record, because that driver would be paying more than $182 for insurance today and the surcharge for the Reinsurance Facility is computed after the policy's price is raised by the insurance company.

Any driver with points on his record must pay the Reinsurance Facility surcharge, whether or not he is insured through the facility.

State law asys the facility must operate at no profit and no loss, but it has lost money steadily since 1977. Losses between 1977 and 1981 totaled $20.6 million. For the year ending Sept. 30, 1983, the facility lost $26.6 million on private passenger car insurance.

Reminded Farm Is A Business

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The financial health of North Carolina farmers will depend on their treating farms as businesses and using business management techniques, experts say.

The four-hour "Managing for Profit" session is part of the N.C. Agriculture Extension Service's attempt to raise farm income by encouraging farmers to become business managers as well as crop and livestock producers.

"Farming can and will be profitable in the 1980s, but only for good managers," extension agent Geoff Benson said.

Spaceship Challenger Is Now On Its Launch Pad

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Spaceship Challenger sat poised on its launch pad today while technicians began three weeks of testing and tuneups for an eight-day mission in which spacewalking astronauts will practice orbital repair techniques.

Challenger's return to space is set for Feb. 3, and the 10th shuttle flight is expected to be the first to return to Florida for landing — if the weather is good.

The 3½-mile rollout to launch complex 39A was completed late Thursday, with the shuttle's massive crawler-transporter taking about six hours to complete the journey over a rock-bed roadway from the Vehicle Assembly Building.

Challenger was outfitted with three new auxiliary power units, borrowed from its new sister ship, Discovery, as a safety precaution.

Two of the three units aboard Columbia failed during its California landing last month, and an investigation is still under way to make sure that doesn't happen again.

"All indications right now are that the new units will do the job on Challenger," said spokesman Mark Hess of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The mission's primary goal is to launch into stationary orbit two commercial communications satellites, one for Indonesia and the other for Western Union.

But much of the flight will be devoted to a series of rendezvous maneuvers using an inflatable balloon as a target, plus the "extravehicular activities" of two of the mission specialists.

Using special rocket-powered backpacks, Bruce McCandless and Robert Stewart will be the first astronauts out of the shuttle without a tether line. They will spacewalk out to a platform slowly revolving at the end of the orbiter's 50-foot-long mechanical arm.

The practice will usher in a new phase of shuttle operations in which astronauts will routinely intercept, repair and service orbiting spacecraft. The first actual attempt will be a repair mission on the solar-observing Solar Max satellite in April.

The rendezvous with the balloon is designed to evaluate the navigational abilities of the shuttle, its crew and ground control.

McCandless and Stewart are scheduled for two five-hour spacewalks. They will replace electrical connectors attached to the platform, which also will carry eight experiments that later will be returned to the orbiter's cargo bay.

The two mission specialists will be at the launch pad Monday along with mission commander Vance Brand, pilot Robert L. Gibson and mission specialist Ronald E. McNair, who will be the second black U.S. astronaut in space. The astronauts will participate in a simulated countdown in preparation for their flight.

Hess said the Florida landing "is an important objective" of the coming flight, particularly because an earlier attempt had to be scrubbed because of bad weather around Cape Canaveral.

"We do have the option to extend the flight a day or two if the weather is bad the first time around," said Hess.

A final report to NASA on what caused the fire aboard Columbia is expected before Challenger is launched.

For now, NASA officials say Columbia's problems were caused when leaks of the propellant hydrazine ignited and caused mini-explosions in the shuttle's tail section. But the ship and its crew were never in danger because it takes only one functioning unit to operate the flight control surfaces, landing gear, steering, brakes and nose wheel.

A deformed washer was discovered in the main fuel control valve of one of the units. "The analysis to this point is that age and use, plus longtime exposure to hydrazine, may have caused the problem," said Hess.

Consultant Policy Study

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A University of North Carolina official says policy may have to be changed to avoid potential conflicts of interest because most outside consulting work done by UNC System faculty members in 1982-83 was for private contractors.

Of the 6,000 UNC faculty members, 1,117 notified their campuses they intended to engage in outside consulting work, Raymond H. Dawson, the system's vice president for academic affairs, said Thursday.

Estimating that most consulting work several years ago was for federal agencies, Dawson said he was surprised that the administration's review of it found that most work done last year was for private firms.

"With so much work being done for private firms, rather than federal agencies," he said, the system's consulting policy "should include better safeguards against potential conflicts of interest."

Dawson's comments came in a meeting of the Personnel and Tenure Committee of the UNC Board of Governors.

His report was based on notices of intent filed by faculty members. Dawson said he didn't know how many of the faculty members actually had done outside consulting.

More than half of the faculty members who filed notices taught at two campuses — N.C. State University in Raleigh and UNC-Chapel Hill.

Dawson told the committee that UNC official still were reviewing consulting activites to determine whether changes were needed in the policy on consulting.

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

THE ARK GOING BEFORE--- MEANT VICTORY!

THE ARK OF THE COVENANT HAD BEEN MADE SPECIFICALLY AS A RECEPTACLE FOR THE TABLES OF STONE ON WHICH WERE INSCRIBED THE TEN COMMANDMENTS. A DESCRIPTION OF ITS CONSTRUCTION IS GIVEN IN EX. 25. BUT MORE THAN THAT, THE ARK WAS USED AS A TALISMAN ON MANY OCCASIONS. IT WENT BEFORE THE ISRAELITES WHEN THEY LEFT MOUNT SINAI EITHER IN THE VAN OR AS THE EXPRESSION MAY DENOTE, "LIKE A KING IN THE MIDST OF HIS TROOPS," LEADING AND DIRECTING THE MARCH, WHILE THE PRIESTS WHO HAD ACCOMPANIED IT SIGNALED THE ORDERS OF YAHWEH, HIMSELF. IT WENT IN ADVANCE OF THE PEOPLE, WHEN THEY CROSSED THE JORDAN RIVER, IT WAS CARRIED IN THE MIDST OF THE HOST FOR SEVEN DAYS AROUND JERICHO, BEFORE THE WALLS OF THE CITY FELL DOWN. (JOSH. 6:1-20) MORE AND MORE, SUCCEEDING GENERATIONS OF ISRAELITES CAME TO ANTICIPATE COMPLETE VICTORY WHEN THE ARK WAS BROUGHT OUT ONTO THE FIELD OF BATTLE, PARTICULARLY IN THEIR MANY, MANY BATTLES WITH THE PHILISTINES. SO MUCH SO, THAT BEFORE A BATTLE TOOK PLACE.....

Prize Money To Six Projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $50,000 Albert Einstein Peace Prize that went to Chicago's Cardinal Joseph Bernardin is being allocated to six projects to spread the message of the U.S. Catholic bishops' letter against nuclear warfare.

They range from a video program based on a symposium about the letter for use in schools to aid students attending the University of Notre Dame Academy of @eace in Jerusalem to development and distribution of a 60-second radio spot announcement featuring Pope John Paul II speaking on nuclear catastrophe.

The grants were made by a bishops' committee of the U.S. Catholic Conference, to which Bernardin turned over his prize money to help promulgate the teaching letter. He had been awarded the prize as chairman of a committee that drafted the letter, adopted by U.S. bishops last May.

Holy Mission Services Planned

Worship for Holy Mission United Holy Church will be held at the home of Pastor Shirley Atkinson, 609 Vanderbilt St.

At the Sunday morning service at 11 a.m. at Holy Mission, Missionary Annie Dixon will speak. Sunday at 7:30 p.m., Eldress Mattie Ann Smith of St. Rest Holiness Church will be the guest.

Prayer revival will be held Monday through Wednesday at 7:30 each night.

Saturday at 7:30 p.m., Missionary Dixon will speak at Mount Zion Church of God in Christ. Pastor Atkinson and the choir will render service at Guiding Light Temple of Faith, Farmville, Thursday.

Service Planned Sunday

A service will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. at the Missionary House of Prayer. The church is located at 129 E. Second St., Ayden.

Bell's Chapel Plans Services

Quarterly meeting will be held at Bell's Chapel Holy Church Sunday at 11 a.m. and at 3 p.m.

The afternoon service will be rendered by Elder Booker T. Wiggins and the congregation of St. Paul Holiness Church, Kinston.

Jim Smith was born in Asheville, N.C. in 1939. He is a graduate of the Baptist College at Charleston, S.C., with a Degree in Business Administration. His business activities over the past twenty (20) years have all been in a manufacturing plant atmosphere. He is currently Personnel Manager with ITT Telecom in Raleigh, N.C.
Jim had never heard of the Full Gospel until he attended a Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship breakfast meeting in Raleigh, in 1979. He received the Baptism of the Holy Spirit shortly thereafter and life now has a completely new meaning. The Lord has used Jim and his lovely wife in many ways. Jim puts God first in his life and God has blessed him in so many ways he wishes to share with you.
Jim is currently President of the Raleigh Chapter

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices headed lower today after the collapse of an early rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up almost 7 points in early trading, was down 6.07 at 1,273.24 by noontime.

Losers slightly outnumbered gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. But the rally came to an abrupt halt as the Dow Jones industrial average approached the record closing high of 1,287.20 set last Nov. 29.

Retailing issues declined broadly. J.C. Penney dropped 1 to 55¾; K mart ¾ to 32¼; Sears Roebuck ⅞ to 38⅛, and Federated Department Stores 1¼ to 51½.

Comdisco dropped ⅞ to 14⅜ on top of a 5½-point loss Thursday, when the company said it had lower earnings in its most recent quarter.

The NYSE's composite index fell .26 to 96.79. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .34 at 227.08.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 48.61 million shares at noontime, against 39.81 million at the same point Thursday.

Wholesale Prices Rise At Slow Pace; Retail Sales Score Gain

By The Associated Press

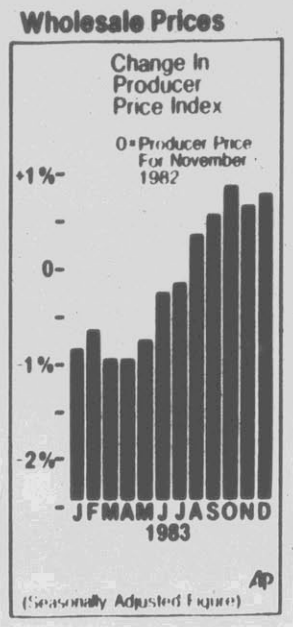

Wholesale prices edged up 0.6 percent in 1983, the slowest pace since 1964, and retail sales climbed 9.1 percent last year as the economy emerged from a recession, the government said in separate reports today.

The Labor Department said wholesale prices were held down last year by a record 10 percent drop in gasoline prices and a 15.8 percent drop in home heating oil costs

The 0.6 percent rise in 1983 was down from the 3.7 percent increase in 1982 and was in sharp contrast to the double-digit surges in 1979 and 1980. It was the lowest inflation rate at the wholesale level since the 0.5 percent increase of 1964.

In December, wholesale prices rose 0.2 percent, the report said.

The Commerce Department reported retail sales rose 0.1 percent in December, pushing the 1983 total 9.1 percent above the performance of 1982. The 10.5 percent sales gain during the fourth quarter was the sharpest rise since 1978.

Earlier government reports indicated that the consumer credit boom is continuing, and that businesses, too, are stepping up their spending plans as the economy grows stronger.

Consumer debt rose $4.67 billion in November, the Federal Reserve Board reported Thursday, a growth rate of 15 percent that suggests consumers are increasingly willing to assume more debt as the economy exhibits more signs of strength.

Although such monthly increases are generally viewed as a sign that consumers are taking on more credit, the government's report does not specify how much of the month's gain can be attributed to additions to credit and how much due to repayment of existing debt.

The Federal Reserve said debt outstanding for car loans rose $1.2 billion in November, a slowdown from the $1.8 billion rise of the previous month.

Offsetting this slowdown were increases in debt on revolving credit cards, such as those issued by stores and banks, and in another category that includes cash loans.

In a separate report on business investment, the Commerce Department said executives plan to boost spending for modernization and expansion this year by an inflation-adjusted 9.4 percent, the fastest pace of capital spending since 1977.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said that could mean more jobs and help "restore U.S. technological leadership."

The report said a survey of non-farm businesses in November and December showed managers planning to increase capital spending to $333.3 billion this year. Inflation-adjusted capital spending fell 3.5 percent in 1983.

The report showed a 13.3 percent increase in spending planned this year by manufacturers, with those producing cars and electrical machinery gaining the most.

In other economic and business developments Thursday:

—The major auto companies said the number of U.S. autoworkers on indefinite layoff fell to 107,500 this week from 108,400. Separately, the industry journal Automotive News said the carmakers planned to build 10.6 percent more autos this week than last week, when work was limited by the New Year's holiday.

—Chrysler Corp. said it had taken its battle against the proposed joint carmaking venture between General Motors Corp. and Toyota Motor Corp. to court, filing an antitrust lawsuit that contends the deal is "clearly illegal."

—A group of former government economic officials told President Reagan and Congress that the past two years' gains against inflation could be wiped out if the federal deficit is not reduced significantly from last year's record $195.4 billion.

—The Labor Department said new applications for unemployment compensation rose by 8,000 in the week ended Dec. 31, to 421,000.

—Warner Communications Inc. won a round in its battle to block a possible takeover move by publisher Rupert Murdoch. A Delaware state judge denied Murdoch's request for a temporary restraining order that would have stopped a proposed stock swap between Warner and Chris-Craft Industries Inc.

—The Securities and Exchange Commission said it is investigating the possibility of wrongdoing in securities transactions prior to the largest municipal bond default in the nation's history. It had said earlier it was looking into bonds that were sold to finance nuclear power plants for the Washington Public Power Supply System, which declared itself in default.

—A former bank official pleaded guilty in Oklahoma City, to conspiracy charges in a scheme that contributed to the collapse of Penn Square Bank. Thomas S. Orr approved loans for the purchase of thoroughbred horses in return for a 10 percent commission from the buyers or a profit on horses that he owned, a prosecutor said.

Green Says He Is A Candidate

RALEIGH (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green today said he will seek the Democratic nomination for governor, despite a "shameful attempt to maanipulate" the justice system and keep him out of the race.

"A lot of people thought I would never be here today," Green said in a statement prepared for his 11:45 a.m. announcement. "In fact, some of them set forces in motion which resulted in almost a million dollars of taxpayers' money being spent to keep me from making this announcement.

"But thanks to a just God and the fact that our system of justice works — despite this shameful attempt to manipulate it — I am here; I am going to announce; and, with God's help and your help, I am going to win."

A Wake County jury in October found Green innocent of bribery and conspiracy charges related to the federal Colcor investigation of corruption in southeastern North Carolina.

Green said he did not intend to offer "superficial solutions and false promises" during his campaign.

"Words are not deeds, and there are no simple and painless solutions to the problems that confront us," he said. He said the state must find ways to improve education, provide for the elderly, create jobs and balance economic growth and highway development.

"With your help, fellow citizens, we shall be deserving of this victory because it is to us that the people look for government of compassion, understanding, responsibility and for honest purpose," he said.

Claiming Heavy Toll Of Rebels

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Soviet-backed Afghan forces killed at least 106 rebels during battles in six provinces, Radio Afghanistan reports.

The biggest battle occurred in Paktya province, near Pakistan, where 88 guerrillas were killed and 83 anti-tank and anti-personnel mines were seized, according to the Pushtu-language news broadcast on Thursday.

The radio said the other deaths occurred during battles in Herat, Baghlan, Kunduz, Kandahar and Balkh, but it did not break down how many were killed in the battles or say when the fighting occurred.

Radio Afghanistan, monitored in India, also quoted President Babrak Karmal as saying that Soviet troops would remain in the country until "our frontiers are made safe," the same broadcast said.

According to Western analysts, there are more than 105,000 Soviet troops in the rugged landlocked country.

An informed Pakistani source said Thursday in Islamabad that the Soviet Union has not offered a timetable for withdrawal of its troops, although it has told Pakistani officials it does not want a prolonged military stay.

There had been earlier reports that the Soviet Union had told Pakistan it would withdraw its troops over an 18-month period in return for Pakistani assurances that it would halt the insurgents' flow of fighters and arms across its border.

The source, who spoke on condition he not be further identified, said that "Sovietization" appears to be occurring in Afghanistan.

He said thousands of Afgan students, soldiers and officials are trained each year in the Soviet Union, there are plans to broadcast Soviet television to the country and there are proposals to increase economic ties with the Soviet Union.

Afghanistan, a nation of 3 million people, is bordered by Iran, the Soviet Union and Pakistan.

Assert Diocese 'Flouted Law'

GOETEBURG, Sweden (AP) — The Goeteburg diocese of the Church of Sweden has been convicted of flouting a Swedish law guaranteeing equality for the sexes after Swedish female Pastor Sylva Edvall was turned down for a local pastorate in favor of a man with less experience and fewer qualifications.

Charging discrimination, she got the post and a symbolic $1,000 in delayed compensation.

Airports Get Newer Systems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sophisticated electronic landing systems will be installed at 172 airports over the next five years under a $90.6 million contract announced by the Transportation Department.

By 1986, airports in the Boston, Washington and Denver areas as well as parts of Alaska will be equipped with the microwave equipment made by Hazeltine Corp. of Greenlawn, N.Y., department officials said Thursday.

The system, which is designed to make landing easier in poor weather and allow more landings at a given time, will be installed at more than 1,250 airports by the year 2000, the Federal Aviation Administration said.

Uphold Rule On Funeral Pricing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court has upheld a Federal Trade Commission rule requiring funeral directors to give customers an itemized list of prices.

The FTC reported Thursday that the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., had disposed of several legal challenges to the rule that were waged by the National Funeral Directors Association.

The association has said in the past it would go to the Supreme Court to block impelementation of the rule, which is scheduled to take effect on April 30.

Claim Omission On Diet Colas

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group has charged the makers of some diet colas containing the new sweetener Nutrasweet are neglecting to inform customers their products are also sweetened with saccharin.

The Center for Science and Public Interest said Thursday that advertisements for Diet Coke, Diet Pepsi and Diet Rite colas are deceptive because they do not include a mention of saccharin.

The organization said it would ask the Federal Trade Commission to prohibit ads promoting Nutrasweet in the products unless they mentioned saccharin. Tom Mattingly, a spokesman for Coca-Cola USA said the company was simply promoting Nutrasweet as it would any new ingredient.

Intended Victim Is Happy Hubby Free

RICHMOND, Texas (AP) — A woman who listened to tapes in which her husband discussed having her killed insists he is innocent and says she's delighted he has been sentenced to five years' probation.

"I feel good, very relieved. I just didn't know what to expect," Deborah Lemelson, wxo is pregnant, said after Leonard Lemelson Jr. was sentenced Wednesday for solicitation to commit murder.

Mrs. Lemelson, a 30-year-old sales clerk, continued to live with her husband even after hearing two tapes in which her husband discussed her murder with an undercover police officer. She attributed the conversation to her 25-year-old husband's drinking problem.

"He was an alcoholic and people don't understand what that means. It was just all talk, all lies," she said.

Officer B.P. MacDonald of the county's Major Crimes Task Force posed as a contract killer and secretly taped the May 10 conversation. Also present during the conversation was Pete Brysch, a friend whom Lemelson had asked to find a killer for hire.

Brysch reported the request to county authorities and later introduced Lemelson to MacDonald, authorities said.

According to evidence at the trial, Lemelson told MacDonald he would pay a killer $20,000 after he collected on his wife's $150,000 insurance policy.

Jury foreman Allen Leonard said the jury convicted Lemelson because "the tapes were most incriminating."

But Leonard added, "We want to give him a chance to prove a productive citizen in the future as his wife believes."

ECU Tries To End Frustrations

Saturday night, the long, long road finally comes to an end, and Coach Charlie Harrison and his East Carolina basketball Pirates are hopeful that there's a light at the end of the tunnel, too.

The Pirates travel to Williamsburg, Va., for a 7:30 p.m. Saturday meeting with defending ECAC-South regular season champ William & Mary. It's the eighth road game out of 12 so far this year, and after it, the Pirates open a three-game home stand — their longest of the season.

And — much to the disappointment of the coaching staff, the Pirates are still looking for a victory on the road. East Carolina, in fact, is mired in a nine-game losing streak, tying the school record.

"It's killing me (the losing streak)," Harrison said. "I have nightmares about it. But I don't want the kids thinking about it. I just want them thinking about what they need to do to get better. I don't want them thinking about mistakes or the past, just on what they need to do to eliminate the little things that have caused us to be where we are. And it is the little things. The players are getting better individually, but they just haven't emerged as a team."

William & Mary, meanwhile, hasn't had much success either. The Indians come into the game with a 2-7 record, but they've played some outstanding opposition along the way. Their losses have come to such teams as Duke, Old Dominion, Virginia Commonwealth, Virginia, Maryland and Wake Forest.

"They are missing the kids they lost (to graduation)," Harrison said. "Like us they are having to rely on younger kids without that much experience who haven't been able to take over for a first-team all-conference player and a second-team all-conference player. But they are still more experienced than we are."

Harrison said that the Indians have stability in their back court, but that that group is having to carry the load for the Indians.

Going into the Wake Forest game, the Indians had only one scorer in double figures, but presented a very balanced starting lineup. Junior guard Keith Cieplicki, 6-4, is the leading scorer at 14.3 per game. The other starters include 6-2 junior guard Tony Traver, 6-7 junior center Herb Harris, 6-6 junior forward Kevin Richardson, and 6-6 senior forward Gary Bland. Bland is hitting 8.8 points a game, while Richardson is scoring 8.0, Traver, 9.3, and Harris 2.1.

The Indians also went through a coaching change over the off-season as Bruce Parkhill moved to Penn State. But his brother Barry, who had been an assistant, took over the head job.

Harrison will be looking for his first victory over the Indians, who beat the Pirates three times last year, twice in the regular season and once more in the league tournament. That last game, however, was not decided until the final seconds, as the Indians gained a three-point win, ralying from five down with three minutes to play.

East Carolina, which has been experimenting with its starting lineup, will go with the same group which started the last two games, 6-1 point guard Tony Robinson, 6-1 guard Curt Vanderhorst, 6-10 center Leon Bass, 6-5 forward Barry Wright and 6-6 forward Derrick Battle.

Wright, at 11.0, is the only player in double figures for the Pirates.

"I just can't get a feeling for what we can do with someone coming off the bench or staying with them," Harrison said. "The performances in games and in practice is so erratic. It's hard to make decisions when you base it on something and then the exact opposite thing happens.

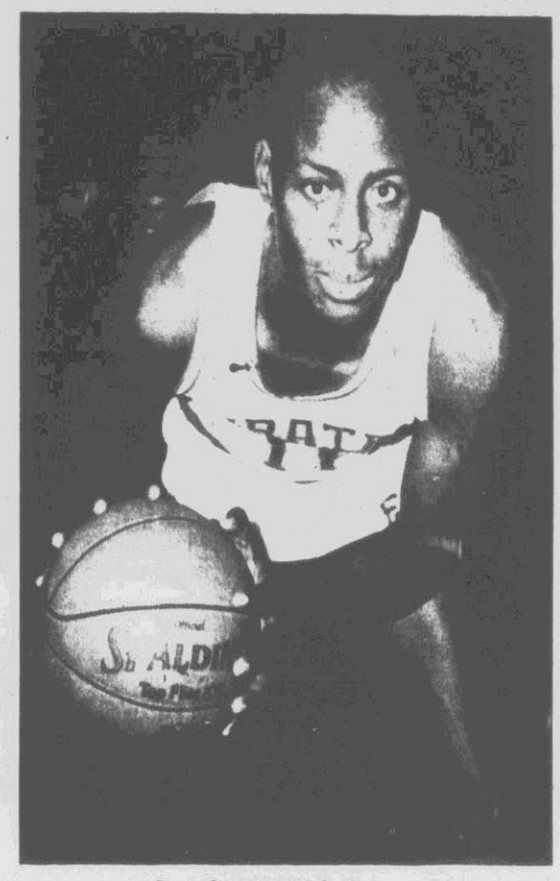

"We've been in the position to do some nine things. We're one pass away from a great shot — we're getting good shots most of the time, but we are taking a few with bad decisions. We're one step away from getting the charge, getting the offensive rebound, getting the defensive rebound. It seems like the operation is a success, but the patient keeps dying."

Harrison said he is still hopeful that some one is going to step forward and take command of the situation on the floor. "So far, it just hasn't happened."

But the Pirates will keep on trying, keep on getting better, Harrison thinks. And one night things will fall into place.

Harrison is hopeful that sometime will happen Saturday night.

Following the game, the Pirates open a three-game home stand against Francis Marion, Richmond and UNC-Wilmington.

Perkins Sparks Heels By Maryland, 74-62

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Sam Perkins, more vocal and demonstrative than usual, was a bit out of character. Otherwise, he turned in a vintage game.

After urging his teammates to come out of their apparent lethargy, Perkins scored 26 points, snared 12 rebounds and led first-ranked North Carolina to a 74-62 victory over fifth-ranked Maryland Thursday night.

The triumph was the 11th straight for the unbeaten Tar Heels, including 2-0 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Maryland is 10-2, with a 1-1 ACC record.

"Our guys were quiet before the game," said Perkins, a 6-foot-9 senior. "I could see a letdown coming. I didn't want them to get intimidated, so I had to supply leadership."

While it may have been difficult to measure Perkins' vocal contributions, his game performance made a painful impact on the partisan sellout crowd of 14,500 in Cole Field House.

Perkins had lots of support, particularly from Michael Jordan who scored 21 points, but t was Perkins who applied the crushing points after the Terps pulled to within 63-62 with 2:05 left.

First, he sank two free throws after being fouled by Ben Coleman. He was fouled again after rebounding a missed shot, and the three-pointer made it 68-62 with one minute remaining, and the Tar Heels scored the game's final 11 points.

Jordan, who scored nine of North Carolina's last 17 points, added 12 rebounds, three assists, two blocked shots and a steal to his all-around effort.

In addition to looking for Perkins on the inside in the second half, the Tar Heels' defense perked up after intermission.

"We went into a zone for a long stretch and limited them to one shot," Perkins said. "We took them out of their offense, and they took some hurried shots."

"Perkins and Jordan are their two horses, and we didn't do much to contain them," said Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell.

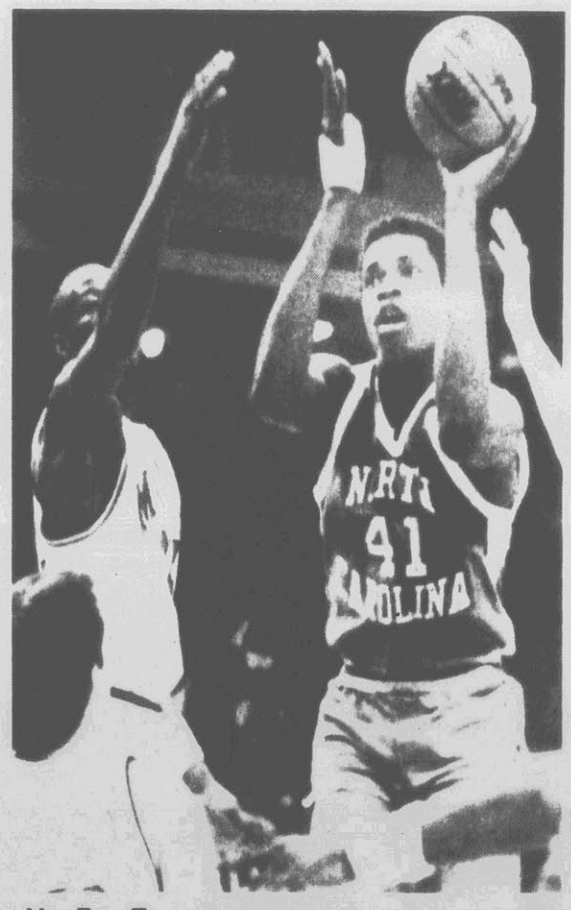

Len Bias scored a season high 24 points and Adrian Branch had 19 for Maryland. But Coleman, the team's leading scorer, was held to eight while going 3-for-10 from the floor.

"The main thrust of our defense," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, "was to stop Coleman. We didn't want him to beat us. (Brad) Daugherty and his friends did a good ob."

"Ben didn't have one of his better nights," said Driesell, conceding the obvious. "When he gets eight and his man gets 26, that hurts."

North Carolina led 32-31 at halftime, and the see-saw battle continued until the final two minutes.

"If they are No. 1, we are not far behind," said Driesell. "I look forward to playing them again."

ESPN's ACC Blackouts Bow To Court Orders

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH — Officials of Entertainment and Sports Programming Network now know just how far Atlantic Coast Conference basketball fans will go to see their favorite teams — all the way to a court of law.

Armed with lawsuits at each end of the state and beyond, attorneys convinced judges to lift the Season Ticket pay-television blackout, allowing viewers to see Thursday night's ACC battle between Maryland and top-ranked North Carolina.

North Carolina took a 74-62 victory to raise its unbeaten string to 11 games.

By the 8 p.m. tipoff in College Park, Md., cable viewers in many cities were watching the game, originally scheduled to be blacked out as part of the Season Ticket arrangement as judges issued temporary restraining orders.

"Now the courts are trying to preempt our rights to the contract," said ESPN executive vice president for marketing Roger Werner. "In effect, that causes the product to be stolen. We are damn well gonna defend our rights."

Temporary restraining orders were issued in Catawba, Cleveland, Union, Stanly, and for parts of Mitchell and Madison counties. Orders were also issued in the cities of Durham, Fayetteville, Greensboro, Monroe, Albemarle, Burnsville and Spruce Pine.

Earlier orders were issued in Wilmington and Orange County, while Asheville's cable system showed the Tar Heel-Terrapin game without court action.

One hour before the game, Clearview Cable, which serves Burnsville and Spruce Pine, was ordered to open the Season Ticket package to all cable subscribers. Judge Philip Ginn issued the order.

Werner said ESPN and Raycom own the rights to Season Ticket, adding that all the ACC has done is sell the pay-television rights.

"We do not have the right to show those games on cable or on local television," he said.

In addition to his dilemma with the courts, Werner said adverse publicity and reaction have hampered Season Ticket.

"The negative press and court action contributed to an attidude on the consumer's part that this programming was gonna be free," Werner said. "I don't blame consumers for not signing up if they think a week later it's gonna be given away to the neighbors who don't sign up."

Subscriber interest has been spotty throughout the ACC region, but Werner said he expected the package to return next season.

"The basic logic of the thing, I think, will prevail," he said. "If we have to fight it all the way to the Supreme Court to prove this, we will do that."

Under the Season Ticket plan, the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network provides the extra ACC games at a special price to ESPN customers. Those who do not subscribe to the games do not receive the signal as long as the game is in progress. In most instances, alternate programming is provided.

The same games are provided free to ESPN customers outside the ACC region.

In Roanoke Rapids, officials for TeleCable there said Thursday they have been struck by an act of vandalism and threats on the lives of two employees. One spokesman speculated that the threat was directly related to the Season Ticket package, which is not offered there.

TeleCable vice president Gordon Herring threats were telephoned to an answering device prior to Wednesday night's North Carolina State-Virginia game, also part of the Season Ticket package. Local manager Gilbert Portela said a cable was cut just before a Dec. 21 doubleheader carried by Season Ticket.

"We feel it is just a crank call, but you have to take things like that seriously," Herring said of the threat, adding that his firm is offering a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible.

Vikings Crush White Oak

JACKSONVILLE — D.H. Conley's Vikings continued unbeaten in Coastal Conference matches last night, downing White Oak, 45-22.

Of the 13 weight classes, only six were actually wrestled as seven resulted in forfeits — Conley giving away two of those seven.

The win was Conley's 10th overall and fifth against Coastal competition.

Six members of the team now have at least ten wins on the season. They include Reginald Moore, 15-1; Stacy McCarter, 14-1; Shawn Hardy, 13-3; Kerry Farris, 13-4; Gerald Harper, 11-3, and Ricky Rice, 10-3.

Conley will return to action on Saturday, January 21, hosting top ten ranked Cary, along with Manteo and Cape Hatteras in a quadrangular meet starting at 12 noon.

Summary:

100 — David Farris (C) won by forfeit.
107 — Mark Parker (WO) won by forfeit.

Vanderhorst Is Liking His Role

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

When the 1983-84 basketball season opened, East Carolina guard Curt Vanderhorst was relegated to a role on the bench. But in the fifth game of the year, against Drexel University, Vanderhorst turned in his best game of the year, scoring 15 points, and found himself in a starting role the next time out.

He's been a starter ever since, averaging 9.0 points a game since then.

But not starting didn't bother him. "I never worried about not starting," he said. "It was a role I had to play (being a reserve) and I tried to do the best I could in that role."

But now, as a starter, Vanderhorst, a sophomore from Fayetteville, admits that he feels a little more pressure on him. "I know that everyone is looking at you to produce when you start. If you don't someone will be pushing you for that job."

As a starter, Vanderhorst has tried to assume a leadership role on the team. "Some of the younger players will ask me questions, both on and off the court, so I try to point them in the right direction. Then, if I happen to be on the court with all freshmen, then I try to get everyone going."

The losing streak bothers Vanderhorst, but he feels that much of it comes from the younger players not having made the transition yet from high school to college. "They'll all be in the game and then they go blank. In high school, they played for 32 minutes and didn't have to play hard the whole time. But now, they have to play 40 hard minutes, and they're just not used to it yet. It's tough having to learn it through experience on the court, and it's costing us. But hopefully we can get over it soon."

Vanderhorst, meanwhile, says he hasn't thought much about the losing skid of the Pirates. "Instead, I try to think about what can be done, how we can get better and win. We shouldn't be looking at the negative things, but try to find positive things to think about."

Saturday night, Vanderhorst will make another start against William & Mary in the second ECAC-South game of the year for the Pirates. "They're good, and they have more experience than we do, and that's a factor in their favor," he said. "They're better than their record, but I feel like if we can do the right things for the whole game, then we'll have a good chance to win."

McEnroe Advances

Third-seeded John McEnroe eyes the ball for the return against Johan Kriek during the $400,000 Volvo Masters Tennis Championship Thursday night in New York. McEnroe, the reigning Wimbledon champion, defeated Kriek, 6-4, 6-2, to advance to the semifinals and a meeting Saturday against top-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden. (AP Laserphoto)

Wilbur Matches Promise

By The Associated Press

Dwight Wilbur told his Villanova teammates during a last-second huddle that he would sink the winning basket to upset fourth-ranked Georgetown.

He didn't belive it, though.

But when a Villanova play designed to go elsewhere broke down, Wilbur got the ball in the right corner and hit an 18-footer that lifted the Wildcats to a 65-63, double-overtime victory over Georgetown in a Big East Conference game Thursday night at Landover, Md.

A few miles away, top-ranked North Carolina stayed unbeaten by downing No. 5 Maryland 74-62. In other top games, No. 7 Houston beat Texas Tech 88-66; No. 8 Texas-El Paso breezed by San Diego State 75-59; No. 13 Fresno State topped Cal-Santa Barbara 69-51; No. 14 Nevada-Las Vegas routed San Jose State 105-77 and No. 20 Tulsa topped Oral Roberts 84-78.

With the score tied 63-63, Villanova used its last timeout with 16 seconds remaining to set up its final strategy. It was then that Wilbur told Harold Pressley that he would make the winning shot.

"I didn't believe it then and I still can't believe it now," Wilbur said. "I was the last option on the play. We were going to go to Pressley and if we couldn't get inside, then one of the guards would shoot."

"When I shot the ball, I thought we were in for another overtime," said the sophomore guard.

Georgetown, 13-2, had overcame a six-point deficit in the final 23 seconds of regulation. Michael Jackson's 22-foot jump shot at the buzzer sent the game into overtime at 59-59.

Neither team scored in the first overtime as both teams misfired from the floor and the free-throw line.

In the second overtime, Villanova's Frank Dobbs, who had missed two shots in the final 13 seconds of the first extra period, scored four quick points to put the Wildcats ahead. A jump shot by Jackson and two foul shots by Patrick Ewing, who had been held scoreless for 24 minutes, tied it and left it up to Wilbur.

Wilbur scored 10 points while Pressley had 17 points and 17 rebounds.

Top Ten

North Carolina and Maryland played on even terms in College Park, Md., until the final two minutes, when the Tar Heels pulled away in the Atlantic Coast Conference matchup.

With North Carolina leading 63-62 and 2:05 left, Sam Perkins scored five consecutive points and Michael Jordan added four to seal the victory.

Perkins scored 18 of his 26 points in the second half and Jordan added 21 as undefeated North Carolina won for the 11th consecutive time.

Len Bias had 24 points for Maryland, which had a nine-game winning streak snapped and fell to 10-2.

Houston's Akeem Olajuwon asserted himself with 18 points, 10 blocked shots and a career-high 25 rebounds as the Cougars won their 28th consecutive Southwest Conference game.

Michael Young led the visiting Cougars, 14-2, with 21 points. Houston raced to a 25-8 lead and never got within six points the rest of the way.

Tempers flared in the second half when Texas Tech's Tony Benford and Houston's Eldon Franklin exchanged blows and were ejected.

Sophomore center Dave Feitl hit 10 of 12 shots from the field and scored a career-high 24 points to lead Texas-El Paso. The host Miners, 14-0, took the lead two minutes into the Western Athletic Conference game and stayed ahead the rest of the way.

Second Ten

Senior forward Bernard Thompson scored 17 points as host Fresno State had little trouble with Cal-Santa Barbara.

Thompson scored eight of his points in the final two minutes of the first half as the Bulldogs, 11-2, took a 35-24 lead.

Ed Catchings scored 18 points to pace visiting Nevada-Las Vegas. The Runnin' Rebels scored the final nine points of the first half to take a 43-26 lead.

Nevada-Las Vegas improved to 13-1 with the Pacific Coast Athletic Association victory.

Steve Harris scored 25 points and Ricky Ross had 24 as Tulsa held off crosstown rival Oral Roberts. Tulsa, 14-0, took the lead for good when Ross sank a half-court shot at the halftime buzzer to give the Hurricane a 39-37 edge.

Unranked Teams

Guard Rick Olson scored 29 points and Cory Blackwell added 25 as Wisconsin upset Michigan State 81-74 in the Big Ten. In other conference games, sophomore center Roy Tarpley's 17 points and 12 rebounds powered Michigan over Minnesota 66-62; Craig Anderson made two free throws with seven seconds left to lift Iowa over Northwestern 42-39, and Jim Rowinski's 21 points helped Purdue beat Ohio State 63-52.

Senior Ricky Norton scored a career-high 20 points, guiding Arkansas over Southern Methodist 70-69 in a Southwest Conference game.

In the Pacific-10 Conference, Steve Beck's layup with three seconds left in overtime gave Arizona State a 64-62 victory over Washington State, Alvin Vaughn made four free throws in the final minute to give Washington a 55-53 victory over Arizona, and Blair Rasmussen had 15 points as Oregon crushed Southern California 80-49, the Ducks' most decisive victory in the two teams' series.

Xavier McDaniel had 28 points and 16 rebounds while Aubrey Sherrod contributed 27 points, leading Wichita State past Drake 90-77 in a Missouri Valley Conference game.

Jay Humphries scored 22 points and Vince Kelley 16 to lead Colorado over Marquette 66-62, sending the Warriors to their fourth straight loss.

Mike Brown scored 25 points and grabbed an Atlantic 10 Conference record 22 rebounds to lead George Washington past St. Bonaventure 72-58.

In other Atlantic 10 games, Terence Stansbury's 21 points helped Temple down Massachusetts 83-66, David Griffin scored 22 points as Penn State downed Duquesne 63-53, and Tony Taylor scored 28 points to give Rhode Island a 98-91 victory over West Virginia.

McEnroe, Wilander To Meet In Volvo Semifinal Match

NEW YORK (AP) — The explosion was expected and expensive. But when it was over, the tempestuous John McEnroe advanced to the semifinals of the $400,000 Volvo Masters tennis championships where he will meet top-seeded Mats Wilander.

"I think there's definitely a possible chance" that the winner of their Saturday encounter will be considered 1983's top tennis player, McEnroe said after disposing of Johan Kriek 6-4, 6-2 in Thursday night's quarterfinal.

Wilander, who has beaten McEnroe in all three of their 1983 meetings, agreed after he advanced with a 7-6, 6-2 victory over Spain's Jose Higueras.

In today's quarterfinal, reigning U.S. open champion Jimmy Connors played surprising Tomas Smid of Czechoslovaia. The winner will face the survivor of tonight's quarterfinal pairing between two-time defending Masters champion Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and Ecuador's Andres Gomez.

Saturday's semifinals, as well as Sunday's final, will begin at 12:30 p.m. EST and will be televised nationally by NBC. The winner of this elite 12-man field will collect $100,000, with $60,000 going to the runnerup.

And, besides the money and the crown, the title as 1983's top player could hinge on the outcome here on the Supreme Court at Madison Square Garden. The four Grand Slam titles — the French Open, Wimbledon, the U.S. Open and the Australian Open — were split among four players, three of whom are still in the running for the Masters championship.

Only Yannick Noah, the first Frenchman in 37 years to capture the French Open, is sitting on the sidelines after being shocked by Smid in an opening-round match.

McEnroe captured his second Wimbledon singles title in July and Wilander took the Australian Open in December, beating McEnroe in the semifinals and Lendl in the final. It was the Swede's first grass court title.

The last time McEnroe defeated Wilander was in their first meeting, and their only encounter indoors. That was an epic 6½-hour Davis Cup struggle in St. Louis in 1982 when McEnroe outlasted his Swedish opponent 9-7, 6-2, 15-17, 3-6, 8-6.

Since then, Wilander has beaten McEnroe, who finished the 1983 season atop the Atari-ATP computer rankings and was named by his fellow players as the ATP Player of the Year, on clay in the French Oppen, on cement at the ATP Championships in Cincinnati and on grass at the Australian Open.

"It's exactly the same thing that happened to me and Lendl," McEnroe said about Wilander's recent successes against him. "You get up to play certain people and then for others you don't get mentally prepared.

"For me, when I first started playing, it was Connors and (Sweden's Bjorn) Borg, and then it was Connors and Lendl. And now a new guy comes in who I have to prepare myself for.

"I know that that's what makes tennis interesting," McEnroe said. "I just hope that I can rectify the thing with Wilander sooner than I did with Lendl."

Where McEnroe is impulsive, Wilander is calm. McEnroe plays a devastating serve-and-volley game; Wilander prefers to stay on the baseline, making an occasional and usually successful trip to the net. McEnroe wears his feelings on his face, scowling or speaking up when he feels a line call was unjust. Wilander is stoic, appearing to take everything in stride.

"I think it will be an interesting match," the Swedish right-hander said of Saturday's semifinal. "I was surprised when I beat him on grass, but I know I can beat him.

"However, I know I don't have to play very badly to lose to him. My passing shots and serve will have to work well" in order to win, he said.

Despite the score, McEnroe's victory over Kriek wasn't an easy one. Neither player could hold serve in the first four games.

Then, after McEnroe broke his South African-born opponent in the ninth game, his temper got the best of him.

After he was wide with a forehand down the line, giving Kriek a 15-30 lead in the 10th game, the New York left-hander slammed his graphite racket to the court. The racket splintered and the broken head went crashing into the curtain at the back of the court, just missing two lineswomen.

He was given a warning for abuse of racket by referee Charles Beck of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and later fined $500 by the Volvo Grand Prix supervisor Ken Farrar.

Cable of North Carolina, Inc., to show the scheduled Season Ticket games as part of standard programming was construed to include the entire Alert system. Alert subscribers in Selma, Garner, Reidsville, Cherry Point, Cary, Wake Forest, Guilford County, Farmville and Wendell were able to see the Tar Heel-Terrapin contest.

"The language was broad enough to order Alert Cable TV of North Carolina to broadcast all ESPN programming including Season Ticket at no additional charge to all subscribers of ESPN," said Alert attorney John Dortch.

Three attorneys in Monroe filed suit in a last-ditch effort to prevent Monroe Cable TV, Inc., from blacking out the North Carolina-Maryland game. Union County District Court Judge Kenneth Honeycutt issued an order forbidding the firm from interfering with, blacking out or otherwise disrupting the programming on any of the 19 channels for which subscribers pay a basic charge.

Honeycutt ordered officials from Monroe Cable to appear in Union County District Court next Thursday to show cause why the order should not be continued until the merits of the case can be reviewed.

A Lynchburg, Va., circuit judge ordered Lynchburg Cablevision not to black out Season Ticket games.

Judge Sam Johnston ruled in favor of William Davidson and temporarily enjoined the system from blacking out the remaining games in the package.

A South Carolina attorney said he is looking at the North Carolina decisions to determine if they can be applied within that state. Dennis Autry of Columbia said there may possibly be a suit filed off local subscribers were led to believe that everything broadcast by ESPN would be shown locally.

Junior High Basketball

BETHEL — Wellcome Middle School swept a pair of junior high basketball games from Bethel Thursday, with the girls winning 38-22 and the boys 38-36.

Gwen Pilgreen paced the Wellcome girls with 20 points, while Keisha Pilgreen added 10. Lisa Pittman led Bethel with 10 points.

Wellcome's girls are now 3-0 on the season, while Bethel slipped to 1-2.

In the boys game, Ashley Sheppard had 26 points for Wellcome. Bethel was led by Billy Hardison with 11 and Keyford Langley with 10.

The Wellcome boys are now 2-1, while Bethel maintains a 1-2 mark.

Ayden 45
Grifton 21

AYDEN — Ayden Middle School took a pair of junior high basketball games from Grifton yesterday.

In the boys' game, Ayden gained a 45-21 triumph. Ronell Peterson led Ayden with 14 points, while Eric Blount added 11. D. Peterson and F. Woods each had five for Grifton.

Ayden's girls took a 20-11 win in their game. Jessalyn Woods led Ayden with six, while L. Williams paced Grifton with four.

Whitfield 44
Chicod 30

GRIMESLAND — Whitfield's boys took a 44-30 victory over Chicod Thursday in junior high basketball, while the Chicod girls won 31-13.

James Smith led Whitfield with 12 points, while Chapman paced Chicod with 10.

Nicolle Brinkley fired in 21 points to lead the Chicod girls' victory.

The Whitfield boys improved their record to 6-1 overall and 2-1 in the conference, while the girls slipped to 1-6 overall and 0-3 in the league.

Redskins Resume Practice

WASHINGTON (AP) — The NFC champion Washington Redskins resume practice after four days off, preparing to defend their National Football League championship in Super Bowl XVII against the Los Angeles Raiders.

"It gives them a chance to get away from things and get refreshed," Coach Joe Gibbs said of the break. The team plans to practice again Saturday at Redskin Park, near Dulles International Airport in Chantilly, Va., before resting Sunday and taking a charter flight to Tampa, Fla., late Monday.

The meet the AFC champion Raiders in Tamps Stadioum Jan. 22.

Running back John Riggins, who really hits his stride once the Redskins reach the playoffs, was honored Thursday with the Bert Bell Award, presented to the NFL outstanding player by the Maxwell Club of Philadelphia.

Riggins will receive the award at the club's annual banquet Feb. 22 in Philadelphia.

Quarterback Joe Theismann, who received the award last year, was a finalist, along with Los Angeles Raider tight end Todd Christensen, Los Angeles Rams running back Eric Dickerson, Miami quarterback Dan Marino and Seattle running back Curt Warner.

Riggins has rushed for more than 100 yards in a record six playoff games. In selecting Riggins for the Bert Bell award, the Maxwell Club focused attention on the comments of 49ers Coach Bill Walsh after his team's defeat at the hands of Washington in the NFC championship gae last Sunday.

"They (the Redskins) have an advantage because of the way he (Riggins) plays with power and stamina," Walsh said. 'He hands out punishment for 60 minutes. He is a real difference in their team."

Riggins injured his jaw in that game, but X-rays showed no fractures. The running back underwent X-rays again Thursday after experiencing continued pain, but again the results were negative.

Ross, Kornegay Lead Area Prep Scoring

Chocowinity's Reggie Ross and D.H. Conley's Mechio Kornegay are the leading scorers in the Quad-County area through games played Tuesday night.

Ross has a comfortable lead over the rest of the male scorers in the area with his 21.2 mark for the Indians. Second is Greene Central's Theodore Edwards at 18.5, followed by Farmville Central's Kent Hardy at 17.0.

Kornegay heads the female scoring list with a 21.5 mark, just over a half-point ahead of Ayden-Grifton's Cora Faison. Faison checks in with a 20.9 average. Third among the girls is Roanoke's Gloria Duggins at 17.3, followed by Kathy Vernelson of Greenville Christian at 16.7.

Greenville Christian is the top offensive team in the area, averaging 61.9 points a game. Rose is second at 58.7.

Williamston is the top defensive team, allowing 48.0 points a game, while Greene Central is second at 49.2.

The Rams of Greene Central have the best winning margin, outscoring opponents by 7.9 points per game. Greenville Christian is second at 6.9.

Chocowinity's girls are the top offensive team at 54.5, followed by Greene Central at 51.0. Greenville Christian is the top defensive team at 30.5, followed by Jamesville at 37.1.

Simons Leads Hope Event

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Jim Simons cited two factors — a return to his teacher and an exercise program — that helped produce what he called a "once in a blue moon" round.

Simons, a three-time winner in 12 previous seasons on the PGA Tour, scattered nine birdies across his card in a spectacular 63 that provided him with a three-stroke lead Thursday in the second round of the five-round, $400,000 Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic.

"I've gone back to Jimmy Ballard (a well-known teaching pro) and that's helped," Simons said. "I'd worked with him before I won the Memorial five years ago. Since then, I've kind of gotten sidetracked."

And, he said, dedication to an exercise program has provided him with added length.

"I'm all the way up to average," said Simons, who now combines his Tour play with a concurrent career as an investment executive for a national financial firm. "I've never been that long before.

"It seemed like the courses were all getting longer and old Jim was getting shorter.

"It's given me a good feeling about this year."

Simons, in a mild slump most of last season, did not make a bogey in his solid effort, missed only one green at Indian Wells and played a fine third shot to within five feet to save par there.

He rolled in five birdie putts from the 8-12 foot range, made a long one of about 30 feet, came within 4 inches of holing a 6-iron shot for an ace and capped his effort with a 4-wood second shot over water that set up a 2-putt birdie-4 on the final hole.

He completed two rounds of this five-day, 90-hole event with a 132 total, 12 under par.

Ronnie Black, who scored his first Tour triumph last season, was second at 135 after a 68 at Bermuda Dunes.

Johnny Miller, John Mahaffey, Tim Norris and Jack Renner were another stroke back at 136.

Miller, a two-time Hope titleholder and winner of his last two starts, had a second round 69 and Norris 68, both at La Quita. Mahaffey shot a 70 in the mild afternoon at Indian Wells and Renner, a slender little native of this desert resort area, shot 67 at Eldorado.

The touring pros play one round on each of the four courses (all carry a par of 72) with a different set of amateur partners each day. After 72 holes, the amateurs drop out and the field is cut to the low 70 scorers for the pros-only finish Sunday at Bermuda Dunes.

The amateur field includes a number of show-business celebrity friends of the host comedian. The bulk of that group — and most of the gallery — was at Eldorado, where 1983 leading money-winner Hal Sutton had former President Gerald Ford as one of his amateur parters. Sutton, the PGA champion and Player of the Year, could do no better than a 76 and a 144 total.

Bahr Set — If Needed — For Role Of Hero In Super Bowl

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — While Chris Bahr isn't looking to join Jim O'Brien as a Super Bowl place-kicking hero, he'll be ready if given the opportunity.

"I'd much rather see us with a 21-point lead with five minutes to go," the Los Angeles Raiders place-kicker said before practice Thursday. "But that doesn't mean I wouldn't accept and enjoy a challenge like that.

"I guess that would be the ultimate challenge you could have in my position."

Bahr is aware that only once in the past 17 Super Bowls has a last-gasp field goal determined the outcome.

O'Brien, in his rookie season, kicked a 32-yarder with five seconds remaining to give the Baltimore Colts a 16-13 victory over the Dallas Cowboys in Super Bowl V on Jan. 17, 1971.

Bahr, completing his eighth National Football League season, needs few words to sum up the life of a place-kicker:

"Kickers are like used cars. Nobody notices them until they break down."

Bahr has done very little breaking down in helping the Raiders earn their berth opposite the Washington Redskins in Super Bowl XVIII at Tampa, Fla., on Jan. 22.

Bahr joined the Raiders in 1980 after being released by the Cincinnati Bengals and responded by scoring a career-high 98 points.

Then, he clicked on six-of-seven field goal attempts and all 12 conversion tries as the Raiders marched through the postseason on their way to Super Bowl XV, where they beat the Philadelphia Eagles 27-10.

During the current playoffs, Bahr has been perfect, making all four of his field goal attempts and all eight of his conversion tries as the Raiders advanced to the Super Bowl by beating Pittsburgh 38-10 and Seattle 30-14.

Bahr isn't as well-known as Washington's Mark Moseley, who became the first place-kicker ever to win the NFL's Most Valuable Player award when he did so in 1982. But he's been more effective than Moseley recently.

Moseley had his problems during the NFC Championship game between the Redskins and San Francisco last Sunday, misfiring on four field goal attempts.

However, given a fifth chance, Moseley connected on a 25-yarder with 44 seconds remaining to give the Redskins a 24-21 victory.

"Everybody's had that kind of day," said Bahr. "To his credit, he missed four but made the one that won the game. It's not always how many of how many you make.

"That's what you're asking him to do, make the big one. We're all asked to do that. I think if your team's playing well, you tend to kick better. And I think your good kickers are the ones that make those kicks."

Bahr made three of those kicks in a five-week period this season, giving the Raiders a 40-38 win over Dallas, a 22-20 triumph over Denver and a 27-24 victory over Buffalo.

What was he thinking about at those moments?

"You're just trying to keep your mind as blank as you can, go through fundamentals, make a good swing.

"That's easier said than done, to blank everything out. That's your job. Those are the situations that make it fun, to have that opportunity to do it. That's something that a lot of people don't have the opportunity to do."

Bahr, whose brother, Matt, kicks for the Cleveland Browns, admitted he'll be at least a bit nervous on Jan. 22.

"There'll be butterflies," he said. "The other players get hit a few times early in the game and relax. We're the one position where we're not into the flow of a game.

"I don't know that there's so much nervousness, although there's going to be some there. It's excitement."

Senior Bowl Gives Scouts Chance To Examine Field

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Coach Don Coryell of the San Diego Chargers says college football players looking for a future in the pros should jump at a chance to play in the Senior Bowl.

"Any player that doesn't accept an invitation to this game just doesn't have confidence," Coryell said Thursday night.

"We try to give everyone an opportunity to show what they can do," he said.

Mobile is filled with professional scouts representing the National Football League, the United States Football League and the Canadian Football League during the week of practice leading up to the Senior Bowl game, set for a 12 noon (CST) kickoff at Ladd Memorial Stadium on Saturday. The game will be televised nationally on cable by ESPN.

"Here we go out and hit, there's a lot of contact drills," said Coryell, who with his Chargers staff is handling the South All-Star team. "There's a lot of one-on-one work. It gives the scouts a chance to see what the players can do."

The South squad will feature a trio of Southeastern Conference quarterbacks — Walter Lewis of Alabama, Wayne Peace of Florida and Kelly Powell of Mississippi.

Lewis drew the starting nod and will have the benefit of throwing to two of his Crimson Tide wide receivers, Joey Jones and Jesse Bendross.

Jones, who caught two scoring passes in last week's East-West Shrine game, will start, but Bendross will be the backup to Louis Lipps of Southern Mississippi.

The North, coached by Kay Stephenson and his Buffalo Bills staff, will open with Colorado State's Terry Nugent at quarterback, backed up by Frank Seurer of Kansas, who set a Big Eight Conference career record by passing for 6,410 yards. Nugent threw for 7,103 yards during his four seasons at Colorado State.

Both coaches watched the opposition practice Thursday.

"I was very impressed," Coryell said of the North. "I should have taken our players out there, it would get 'em fired up."

"I don't know if we'll be able to complete a pass," Stephenson said. "They've got some big defensive backs. They can play. They are a very talented football team."

The South secondary features Mossy Cade, the All-American who helped Texas secure its ranking at college football's top defensive team.

Leonard Coleman of Vanderbilt and Tony Lilly of Florida, a pair of All-SEC performers, also will start in the South secondary along with Daryll Jones, a replacement for his All-American teammate at Georgia, Terry Hoage.

The North defense likely will be geared to an exceptional linebacking corps that includes Carl Banks of Michigan State and Jackie Shipp of Oklahoma.

The North has won seven of the last 10 Senior Bowl games, cutting the South's series lead to 16-15-3.

Ex-Actor Ronald Reagan Sees A Stage Version Of His Movie

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty-four years ago Ronald Reagan played a compassionate American soldier in the movie "The Hasty Heart" with Patricia Neal, cast as a hospital nurse. He saw a stage version of the story for the first time Thursday night and gave it a good review, but said he had felt mixed emotions about attending.

Reagan and his wife Nancy shared the presidential box at the Kennedy Center with actor Burt Reynolds, who is executive producer of the show, and comedian Dom DeLuise.

"I really came here with mixed emotions," Reagan told the cast backstage after the play. Saying it was the first time he had ever seen it performed as a play, Reagan commented, "I didn't quite know how I'd feel. I feel good."

"The Hasty Heart" is about soldiers recovering at an allied hospital in Burma during the war and their attempts to be friendly with a Scottish soldier who doesn't know he is is dying.

In what was considered one of his best movies, Reagan played "Yank," an American recuperating from malaria. Patricia Neal played a nurse and Richard Todd played the Scottish soldier, "Lachie," a role that won him an Academy Award nomination.

In the Kennedy Center stage version, Yank is played by Curt May, who has appeared in a number of television series and in the films "Blowout" and "The Incredible Two-Headed Transplant." Lachie is played by Robert Urich, star of the television series "Vegas," and the nurse is played by Urich's wife, Heather Menzies, who has appeared in a number of television series and in the recent movie "Piranha."

As for May's performance in the role of Yank, Reagan said it was, "just great." Asked if May played it better than he had, Reagan replied, "The business I'm in, the proper thing for me to say is, you bet."

May said he had tried to see the movie version of the story, but couldn't find it anywhere. He told Reagan that Thursday night was the "highlight of my career."

SMURF FOR A DAY — Paul Green, principal of Cobb Middle School in Tallahassee, Fla., is shown in an 8th grade classroom Thursday as he dressed like a smurf. The outfit was in response to a promise he made to his 8th graders that if they came in first in the county on their Florida basic skills test, he would treat them all to pizza and dress like a smurf. New Chairman Is Non-Human WASHINGTON (AP) — Appropriately, a non-human has been chosen as honorary chairman of the National Wildlife Federation's annual National Wildlife Week.

The distinction of being the first of his kind to be so honored goes to Kermit the Frog, one of Jim Henson's most popular Muppets, who will appear in public service announcements promoting the federation's theme: "Water — We Can't Live Without It."

"Who knows more about the importance of clean water than a frog?" said Jay Hair, executive vice president of the organization.

Hair said more than 20 million students, teachers and conservationists are expected to participate in the observances March 18-24.

Past chairmen include news correspondent Walter Cronkite, actor Robert Redford and singer Loretta Lynn.

Robert Conrad Takes Over Military School

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Hard Knox," tonight on NBC, is a throwback to those movies made in World War II to lift morale on the home front ... positive, patriotic and achingly predictable.

They're all there: the steely-eyed commanding officer dedicated to tradition, his loyal but ill-humored topkick ready to knock heads to keep the troops in line, the gung-ho kid determined to bust a gut for promotion, the misfit eager for expulsion.

And they all say just what you expect them to say:

Capt. Cole (referring to Col. Joseph "Hard" Knox): "Doesn't it bother him that so many people hate him? ... I don't see how he takes it."

Master Sgt. Tuttle: "He's a Marine."

But there's something different about "Hard Knox," too. The story is set in a rundown military school in Illinois, the captain is a woman and "Top" Tuttle has a heart.

"Hard Knox" probably was not meant to be funny: Robert Conrad, who plays Joe Knox, is serious, really serious, about the Marine Corps. Remember "Baa Baa Black Sheep" on NBC in the mid-'70s, with Conrad as Maj. "Pappy" Boyington, the real-life World War II flying ace?

There are some amusing moments in the movie, undoubtedly intentional though again, predictable, and the film is, on the whole, inoffensive and sometimes mildly diverting.

Knox is a decorated Marine flier with a quarter-century in the service — "22 kills and every medal they've got" — when he's told he's been grounded, for medical reasons.

"Sir," he tells the base commander, "you married a beautiful woman. My wife sits out there on the tarmac. ... When I ask her to roll over, my God, she rolls over."

He's told to take 30 days anyway, then come back to a desk "with wings," whatever that means. He decides to spend part of his vacation at Garfield Military Academy, his alma mater.

Knox finds the school in disrepair and the cadet corps totally without discipline. Gen. Garfield (Bill Erwin), confined to a convalescent home, talks Knox into taking charge of the school .. . for two weeks.

Predictably, "Top" Tuttle (Red West) arrives the next day, on leave, to help his old boss.

Knox deals first with Marilyn Cole, the academic principal, who suggests that the career leatherneck stick to administration, and she'll handle the students. Before long, she's in uniform, and called "Captain."

Ultimately, Knox arranges a "red and white war" with nearby Vickers Hill Military Academy, and the competition leads to a confrontation between Pascoe (Stephen Caffrey) and Bridley (Ricky Paull), two Garfield upperclassmen desperate for recognition.

"Hard Knox" clearly was produced as a pilot for a prospective series. His two weeks at Garfield up, Knox hints that he might be there when the cadets return Monday.

Footnote: Conrad recently gave $25,000 to the Marine Corps Scholarship Foundation for the children of Marines killed in the Oct. 23 massacre in Beirut.

Award To Eric Sevareid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retired CBS commentator Eric Sevareid will receive the National Press Club's 1983 Fourth Estate Award, given each year for recognition of a lifetime of contributions to American journalism.

Sevareid, 71, served as war correspondent, chief Washington reporter and news commentator during a 38-year career with CBS. He retired in 1977.

Club President Don Byrne announced the award Thursday and said it will be presented at a dinner in March.

Anxious To Get Stevie

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singer-songwriter Stevie Wonder says Motown Records executives are eager for him to get back into the recording studio now that his dream of establishing a national holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr. has become a reality.

"They call me every day to tell me how many records Michael (Jackson) sold," said the 33-year-old Wonder, who put his recording career on hold for most of the last three years while promoting the honor for the slain civil rights leader.

But music "is not as important to me as this," he added.

Wonder will give a concert Sunday at the Capital Centre outside Washington to honor King, whose Jan. 15 birthday will be celebrated as a holiday beginning in 1986.

"Dr. King was blackskinned," said Wonder. "But I believe there is a Dr. King that lives in every culture and every color and background in the world."

Cholesterol Risks Said Lessened By Drug Therapy

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many people at risk of heart disease because of high cholesterol levels that cannot be lowered by diet alone can be helped with drug therapy that reduces blood fats, says a major government study.

Results of the $150 million, 10-year study released Thursday said consistent use of cholesterol-lowering drugs can cut levels of these blood fats by 19 percent and reduce heart disease risk by up to 40 percent.

Researchers also said the clinical trial conclusively proves their long-held belief that reducing the levels of fatty cholesterol in the blood cuts the risks of heart disease for everyone.

The Coronary Primary Prevention Trial, originally designed to find out if a drug that alters cholesterol levels can decrease disease and heart attack, ended up proving much more, experts said.

"This is the first study to demonstrate conclusively that the risk of coronary heard disease can be reduced by lowering blood cholesterol, as we previously suspected," said Dr. Basil M. Rifkind of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, the branch of the National Institutes of Health that sponsored the study.

There has been considerable circumstantial evidence from previous human and animal studies that cholesterol reduction cuts heart disease, but none has been conclusive until now, Rifkind said.

Dr. Robert L. Levy of Columbia University, a heart disease expert who headed the heart institute when the study began, told a news briefing the findings apply to more than the middle-aged men with high cholesterol levels used in the study.

"Now, for the first time, we have conclusive evidence that people can do something about heart disease by lowering their cholesterol," Levy said in an interview.

"The study showed that the greater the reduction of cholesterol toward normal levels, the greater the reduction of heart attack events," he continued. "Because of this direct relationship, the results can be extrapolated readily to other groups."

Experts estimate that more than 40 million Americans have moderate to high blood levels of cholesterol and other fats.

Heart disease is the No. 1 killer in the United States, each year claiming 550,000 lives and costing the nation $8 billion in direct health costs, experts say. The researchers estimated that if all Americans reduced cholesterol levels by 25 percent, this would lead to a 50 percent cut in the incidence of heart disease.

Cholesterol is a fatty substance naturally found in the body that at higher levels has been implicated in atherosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, which in turn leads to heart attack and stroke. With this condition, cholesterol, minerals and fibrous tissue combine to form layers of material called plaque which narrow vessels and restrict blood flow.

Cholesterol has different effects depending upon what molecules carry it through the body. Cholesterol carried by so-called low density lipoproteins, or LDLs, is considered the type that causes heart problems. However, cholesterol carried by high density lipoproteins, or HDLs, appears to protect against heart disease.

Animal fats are considered a major source of cholesterol in the human diet and doctors believe dietary reductions of these fats will cut the risk of heart attack and other coronary problems.

The new study, which involved 3,806 men who were studied at 12 medical centers, showed that lowering cholesterol reduced the incidence of heart attacks by an average of 19 percent, said Rifkind.

The results also show that reducing cholesterol reduces incidents of painful angina by 20 percent and the need for coronary bypass operations by 21 percent.

The participants, aged 35 to 59, all had high cholesterol levels that were not easily modified by diet when starting the trial. Half the men were given daily doses of a drug called cholestyramine, which removes the detrimental low density cholesterol from the body, and the others received a dummy drug. Both groups were instructed to eat low fat diets.

Over the length of the study, the drug group experienced a total cholesterol reduction of 13.4 percent and a low density cholesterol reduction of 20.3 percent. These were 8.5 percent and 12.6 percent greater reductions, respectively, than obtained in the placebo group, researchers said.

Bogus Papers From Prison Print Shop

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Inmates at a state penitentiary may have used a prison print shop to counterfeit money orders, birth certificates and driver's licenses, and whoever was responsible did "a pretty good job," a federal official says.

The official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said authorities don't know how many inmates at the New Mexico State Penitentiary near Santa Fe might have been involved in the alleged counterfeiting.

An investigation by the U.S. Postal Service and the Secret Service now centers on Jessie Sandoval, a 26-year-old recent parolee charged Thursday with passing a counterfeit money order, said Corrections Department spokesman David Roybal and U.S. Attorney William Lutz.

Sources said the money order apparently was produced in the prison print shop. The shop, manned by 210 inmates, has been closed since a search Tuesday but will probably reopen today, Roybal said.

Ken Rommel, special assistant for investigations at the Corrections Department, said, "At this stage I don't think there's that many people involved."

Rommel said a few prisoners have access to the equipment that would have to be used for counterfeiting.

The federal official said other documents, including birth certificates and driver's licenses, apparently had been produced and that the counterfeiting was a "pretty good job" done on an offset press like the one at the prison shop.

"We have very sophisticated printing equipment" at the penitentiary, Rommel said.

Prison officials began an investigation after bogus money orders were found on inmates in November, according to Roybal.

State prison officials would not confirm that the investigation concerned counterfeiting, but a spokesman later said "a reasonable person could conclude that."

Mixed-Up Dog Bit The Police Officer

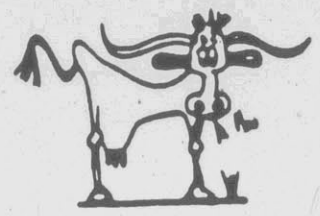

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A sheriff's dog bit a city police officer twice, while the burglar or burglars got away.

The plainclothes officer, who asked to remain unidentified, was one of two investigating an early-morning burglary at a clothing store. The attack dog was summoned because police thought the burglar might still be in the store, deputies said.

The large, black German shepherd was released inside the store, and the plainclothes officer and his partner "attempted to stay behind and out of the way of the K-9 handler and the dog," the officer wrote on his report.

However, the dog and officer wound up facing each other in the middle of the store.

"Not knowing what to expect, I just stood still," the officer wrote.

1-13

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 1-13

YKT MDWT EVHITHTEE GWLTE VF DHVVS, EMNE, "LY'E SN VBF BLYIK-IHMGY."

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — WHERE LONELIEST BLACKBIRDS DRINK — THE CROWBAR.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: N equals Y.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Cannot Afford Government Job

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation says he is leaving his government job, which pays about $60,000 annually, because "I can't afford to stay."

Edwin M. Jones, 66, said Wednesday he was returning to the New York-Connecticut area to resume private law practice. His resignation was accepted by Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, chairman of the corporation's board of directors. The corporation is a government-run agency that insures private pension plans.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

Tommy's day was made — he had been invited to play for his club in a team match against the local country club. His joy was not tempered by the fact that he was a last-minute replacement, and then only because the other members of the team felt that it would be inappropriate to have the club captain's seven-year-old daughter fill in.

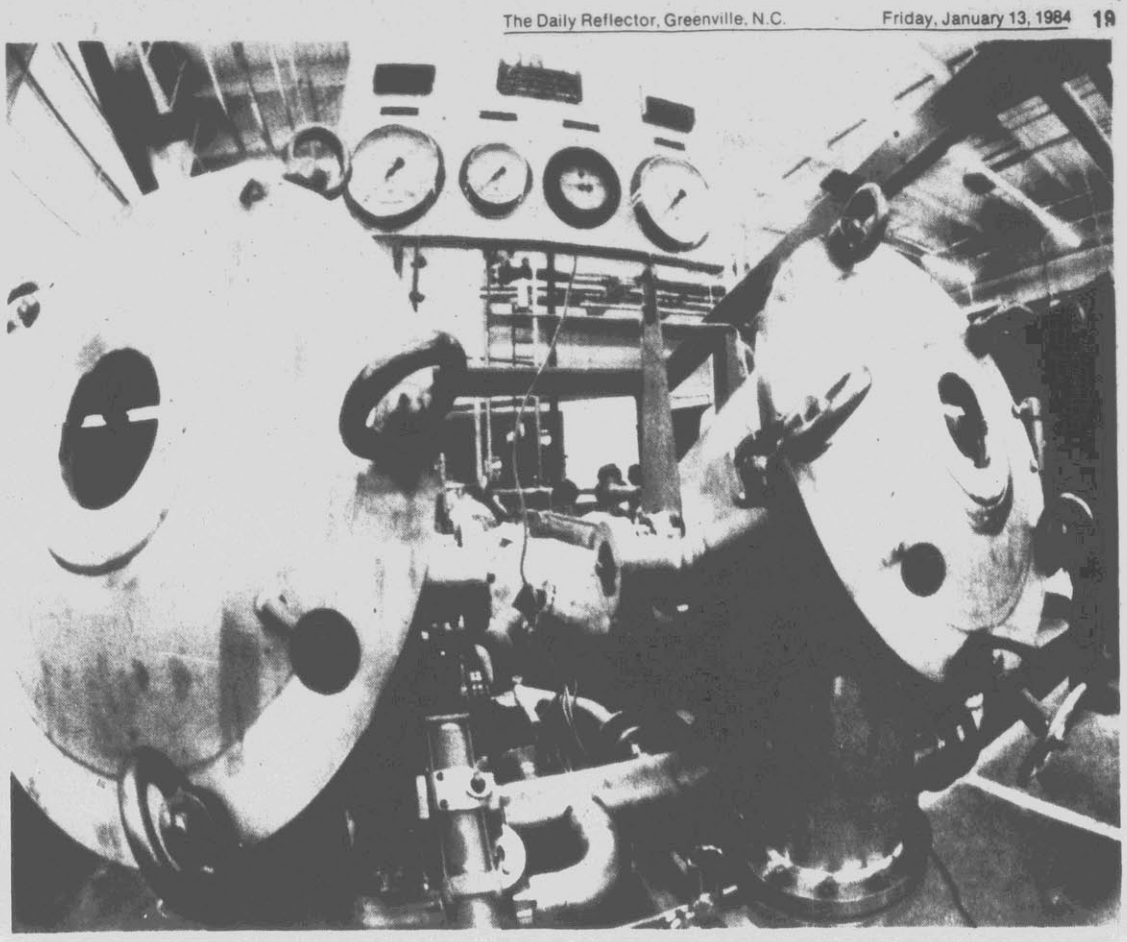

As we all know, Tommy was a hacker except in one case: when trumps broke badly he became Bob Hamman and Benito Garozzo rolled into one! Soon this hand came along.

The bidding was the same at both tables. North's opening no trump was standard and South, with his unbalanced hand, correctly looked for game in hearts rather than no trump. With a ruffing value and three good trumps, North wisely chose the suit contract.

At both tables the lead was the ten of spades. Both Easts won the ace and returned a spade. The opposition declarer won the spade and cashed ace-king of hearts, and he now could not avoid losing two heart tricks and a diamond for down one.

Fortunately, Tommy was in his element. He knew the hand was cold unless trumps broke 4-1 — not even he could handle a 5-0 break. There was nothing he could do if East held four trumps, but if West held four trumps and East's singleton was the eight, the contract could still be made.

At trick three Tommy led the nine of trumps! West did the best he could by covering with the ten. When dummy's king fetched the eight, it was all over. Tommy returned to his hand with a club and led a trump toward the A-7. West played the jack, the table's ace won and the seven of trumps forced out the queen. No return could harm Tommy, and he still had a club entry to his hand to use his six of trumps to draw West's five!

Life As It's Lived

The Price Of A Right Decision

By GAIL MICHAELS

We had planned to leave Tennessee for North Carolina on the Tuesday after Christmas, but Phillip happened to catch the 6 p.m. weather report on Monday.

"Sleet and freezing rain are predicted to hit our area early tomorrow morning, and to continue throughout the day," the weather girl drawled. "Traveler advisories are already being posted in parts of middle Tennessee."

Phillip jumped up. "If we want to get across the mountains, we're going to have to leave now."

I halted my search for the pink fairy wing among the 500 pieces of Meg's Christmas puzzle and stared at him, "But we aren't packed."

"We'll pack right now."

"But we haven't had dinner."

"We'll have dinner on the way."

I could feel myself slipping into a major panic. "You aren't kidding, are you?"

"Of course not. Now let's get moving and see how fast we can get out of here."

"But all my clothes are at the cleaners," I wailed. "You promised me you'd pick them up tomorrow morning before we left."

"You have one pair of wool pants in the cleaners," he said impatiently. "Don't try to tell me that's all your clothes."

"You want to make a bet?"

Naturally, he did not bet, and I did not win. At 8:30 that evening our bedraggled foursome trooped out the door to a car packed with presents, suitcases, teddy bears, comforters and blankets; in short, everything that we could possibly need except my navy blue wool pants. Phillip even remembered to pack a Thermos full of coffee.

"You want some?" he asked as we headed for the interstate.

I would have preferred anesthesia. But as there was none available, I had to settle for brief catnaps from which I awoke with my neck bent permanently sideways. In between naps I entertained myself with visions of all the expensive Christmas leftovers that would go bad in the refrigerator because I had not had a chance to transfer them to the freezer.

Occassionally, my thoughts turned to the den, where Zachary had hidden the 500 puzzle pieces among the new toys while we were packing.

At 3 a.m., we were fortunate enough to find a lovely motel room in Durham. Because the maid had neglected to change the sheets, our sleeping bags came in handy. We made it to Bethel before lunch on Tuesday, and I wore the same corduroy jeans for the next five days.

Nevertheless, upon returning to Tennessee, we were assured by a good friend that we had made the right decision. "It was awful here," she declared. "The pipes froze, and we couldn't take a shower for three days. An on Tuesday we tried to take my sister to the airport, and we were stuck on the interstate for over eight hours."

"There," Phillip said. "Doesn't that make you feel better?"

I bent from the waist so that I could compensate for the angle of my neck and look him in the eyes. "Not much."

Modernizing Collins-Aikman

FARMVILLE — Collins & Aikman will spend over $8 million to expand and continue modernizing its Farmville plant, according to Charles O'Bryant, vice president of manufacturing for C&A's Knits Division, who said the capital expenditures impact every area of the facility.

"A key expenditure affecting all employees will be the installation of a 2,400-square-foot cafeteria," said O'Bryant. "That will replace two existing canteens, better tying our plant community together and improving food service."

The spokesman said the company is building a 75,000-square-foot greige (undyed) fabric warehouse on the plant's west side which will incorporate the latest in materials handling equipment. He said the freed-up space will house additional fabric processing equipment and the new cafeteria.

Also planned are additional knitting, dyeing and finishing equipment, further computerization of the dyeing operations and the installation of computers to monitor quality and productivity, O'Bryant reported.

"I can't overstate the role that our employees have played in getting us the improvements," he said.

"We are growing because our customers ranging from Detroit's auto manufacturers to the producers of sportswear believe in us and have faith in our products."

O'Bryant said he expects the majority of the projects to be in operation by mid-year.

Set New Programs In Mental Health

The Pitt County Mental Health Center is planning four new structured group programs, each with a mix of teaching and experimental learning, for the spring. The four new programs to be offered are for depression management, weight control, transition management and elimination of self-defeating behaviors.

Each consists of six two-hour weekly sessions led by a group facilitator.

The depression management program is said to enable participants to recognized sources and signs of depression, help them understanding the relationship between coping and depression, and teach strategies for coping. The weight control program will teach behavioral techniques for changing eating habits and allow weekly weight check with group support. The transitions management course will teach and give support to those who wish to develop strategies for coping with change in their lives.

The elimination of self-defeating behaviors program will address such behaviors as boredom, disorganization, worry, feelings of inferiority, nail biting, negativism, perfectionism, procrastination, promiscuity, psychosomatic illness, smoking and underachievement. The program will help each participant identify his or her self-defeating behaviors, teach responsibility for doing the behavior and for choices made and prices paid in using the behavior, and identify and confront the fear of changing the behavior.

Each program, a six-week session, will cost $25. Those who would like to participate may call Archer Heinzen at the Mental Health Center, 752-7151.

Charged On Intervening

GASTONIA (AP) — A 37-year-old Christian school principal who intervened in a dispute between a teacher at the school and her husband has been charged with first-degree murder in the husband's shooting death.

Edward Allen Deneve, principal of Temple Christian Academy, was released Wednesday on $2,500 bond.

He is accused of shooting Homer Hickman Asher in the back with a rifle.

Police said the victim and his wife, Cathy Asher, had been separated since November because he allegedly had been physically assaulting her.

The Ashers had an argument Wednesday, and Mrs. Asher went to the home of Deneve and his wife. Asher followed and became violent, smashing his wife's car windshield and windows with a tire iron, police said.

Deneve, hearing the commotion, came outside and convinced Asher to leave.

Later, a frightened Mrs. Asher asked Deneve to come to her home. He took a gun for protection.

As he drew near, police said Deneve saw Asher suddenly back out of the driveway, driving erratically.

Deneve told police that, meaning to scare Asher away, he raised the gun and fired shots in the general direction of the car's rear license tag. The Deneve was hit in the back.

Require Formal Hospital Bids

RALEIGH (AP) — Publicly-owned hospitals must comply with a state law requiring formal bids when they buy a large quantity of an item estimated to cost more than $10,000 a year, an assistant attorney general said.

Grayson G. Kelley's advisory opinion was directed at Craven County Hospital in New Bern, but he added that the opinion applied to all publicly-owned hospitals not excepted by law. The opinion is his and not an official opinion of the attorney general's office.

Fred M. Carmichael, general counsel to the Craven hospital, said he disagreed with the opinion.

"My bottom line opinion is that I think it needs some attention by the General Assembly," Carmichael said.

Three Cylinders Were Explosive

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Juanita Payne had three metal cylinders in the basement of her home and spent time trying to get rid of them. She said she didn't feel safe with them, and she had reason to feel uneasy.

Winston-Salem police told the woman those cylinders were bombs. The explosives were removed from her home.

Officials described two of the bombs as mortar rounds and the third as an 18-inch rocket, all relics of World War II or the Korean Wa

Lost Money In Conservation

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's largest wildlife conservation group lost money in 1983 for the second consecutive year and is in financial difficulty, according to its president.

H. Ray Taylor of the N.C. Wildlife Federation, Inc., said the federation was experiencing severe cash flow problems but that there was no chance it would go out of business.

To fix its financial problems, Taylor said, the federation would have to "change our method of fund-raising, get some folks that have been slow and lazy off their butts."

Two directors said at a Raleigh meeting that unpaid debts totaled as much as $110,000, including some unpaid payroll taxes.

'REMOVED' HIM

MOSCOW (AP) — The second secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Soviet Georgia has been removed because of his failure to handle personnel problems in collective and state farms in the Central Asia republic, Pravda reports.

REFITTING CARRIER

TOULON, France (AP) — The French aircraft carrier Clemenceau, which arrived here for refitting last week, will leave Toulon about Jan. 25 to return to waters off Lebanon, its captain says.
