Shultz Challenges USSR

Disarmament Talks Begun

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz today challenged the Soviet Union to remove the Iron Curtain dividing East from West in Europe. He proposed renewed arms control talks and new methods to reduce the risk of inadvertent war.

"This division is the essence of Europe's security and human rights problem, and we all know it," Shultz told delegates at the opening session of a 35-nation European security conference. He said the United States does not recognize the "artificially imposed division" of Europe or the wall that "heartlessly splits Germany in two."

With negotiations on nuclear and conventional forces stalled elsewhere in Europe, the conference is the only forum for East-West military talks. It also is the setting for the first high-level meeting between the United States and the Soviet Union in more than four months.

Both Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko said on arrival Monday they are here to negotiate seriously. Their meeting Wednesday will be their first since an angry encounter Sept. 8 in Madrid, Spain, which included a confrontation over the Soviet downing of a Korean Air Lines jetliner a week earlier.

Shultz did not offer any new U.S. initiatives or concessions to the Soviets to induce them to fix a date for resuming the stalled Geneva talks on intermediate-range and strategic nuclear missiles or the suspended Vienna negotiations to reduce conventional forces in Central Europe.

He proposed a six-point plan for increased exchanges of information about military movements by NATO and the Warsaw Pact nations in order to reduce the risks of inadvertent war caused by "miscalculation or misunderstanding."

The tragedy of World War I, "when nations stumbled blindly into a disastrous war" must not be permitted to recur, Shultz said.

The measures included: —Exchanges of information about the organization and location of NATO and Warsaw Pact military forces.

—Annual previews of military exercises.

—Advance notice of significant military exercises.

—Invitations of observers at such exercises.

Rose High Seniors' Test Grades 'Below Average'

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

In state high school reading and math competency tests administered in 1983, Rose High School seniors scored slightly lower than the state average in reading and 3.6 points lower than the state average in math. In comparison to Region 1, a 17-county area that includes Pitt County, Rose seniors scored higher in reading and lower in math than the average for other schools in the region.

The percentage of Rose students passing the competency tests, and figures showing comparative passing percentages statewide and in Region 1, were presented by Rebecca Oats and Ann Harrison to the Greenville Board of Education Monday night.

These figures, reflecting percentages of students satisfactorily passing the tests in Greenville, the region, and state are:

- Reading test: Rose High, 91.3; Region 1, 88.2; state, 91.9.
- Math test: Rose High, 85.8; Region 1, 86.4; state, 89.4.

A total of 367 seniors took the reading competency test at Rose, with 366 taking the math test.

In response to a question from member Ernest Brown, Mrs. Harrison said the percentages in achievement in each category have not been broken down into sex and race. "It would be interesting to see such a report," Brown commented.

The annual competency tests are first administered to juniors, then a second competency test is administered at the senior level. Students failing to pass either of the first tests

Pitt Commissioners Indicate May Cut Leaf Allotment Value

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners Monday indicated that they might reduce the value of tobacco allotments in April when meeting as a board of equalization.

Commissioners told Tax Supervisor Jimmy Hardee to figure an 11.6 percent decrease, based on the federal reduction in allotments.

Board members agreed with Chairman Bob Martin, who said "it's hard to tax people for something they don't have."

The board took similar action when meeting as a board of equalization last year.

Commissioners Monday also gave tentative approval to move to a single financial and compliance audit of county records.

The action came after Deputy State Auditor Jimmy Binson told commissioners that seven state agencies and about 25 counties are now using the single audit concept, which has been a requirement since 1979.

Binson said the single audit concept, which allows private auditors to handle compliance audits as well as the regular financial audit, is an effort "to cut out as much confusion and duplication as possible."

In the past, governmental units, such as Pitt County, have hired private firms to do financial audits. The same governmental units, if they receive federal funding for one or more programs, would then be visited by one or more audit teams to make sure rules and regulations governing the federal program money were being followed.

Binson said under the single audit concept, in which private auditors would do both financial and compliance audits, units of government shouldn't be faced with "any duplication of work that has already been done." He also said the state auditor's office is "fully committed to this process."

Although Benson said the cost of the single audit would be higher than the county is

William Fulford Rites Planned On Wednesday

Dr. William E. Fulford Jr., 53, president of Pitt Community College, died this morning.

Fulford, who became president of PCC in 1964, had been on a voluntary leave of absence since June 1983. His funeral will be conducted at 4 p.m. Wednesday at the Farmville Funeral Home.

"We here at the college feel a great sense of loss," Dr. Ed Bright, PCC's dean of instruction, said. "He has served the people of this county and the students of this college inspirationally and well."

Dr. Charles Russell, acting

DR. WILLIAM E. FULFORD JR.

Clifton Everett Sr., chairman of the PCC Board of Trustees, said, "Doctor Fulford has served Pitt Community College and its forebearers, Pitt Technical Institute and the industrial education unit prior, since the time of its creation."

"Under his leadership as president, the college has grown to its present ability to serve about 2,500 students and has developed programs which have visibly increased opportunity for people of Pitt County which might not have otherwise been available. It has contributed materially to the economic welfare of Pitt County and the surrounding areas," Everett said. "Doctor Fulford's leadership will be missed, but the organization which his foresight and leadership began will carry on."

A resident of Farmville most of his life, Fulford was a graduate of N.C. State University where he received his bachelor's degree in 1953. He obtained a master's degree from East Carolina University in 1960, and a doctorate in administration from Duke University in 1968.

He had been a vocational agriculture teacher at South Edgecombe High School in Pinetops from 1955 to 1962 when he joined Pitt Technical Institute as associate director. He also was a farmer, a businessman and a research instructor for N.C. State University.

A member of Monk Memorial United Methodist Church near Farmville, he served as chairman of its board of stewards and as a certified lay speaker and adult Sunday School teacher.

His memberships included the American Vocational Association, the American Educational Research Association, the American Council on Basic Education, the Pitt County Advisory Council on Mental Health, the Advisory Committee of the Sheltered Workshop, the Pitt County School Consolidation Advisory Committee; the N.C. Educational Association, and honorary memberships in Phi Delta Kappa, Kappa Delta Phi, and Epsilon Phi Tau. He served on the board of directors of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and as president and chairman of the board of the Alcohol Corporation of America.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Betty Gay Fulford of the home; a daughter, Mrs. Cynthia Kaylor of Raleigh; his mother, Mrs. W.E. Fulford Sr. of Farmville; two brothers, Robert Fulford of Farmville and Donnie Fulford of Raleigh, and a sister, Mrs. Dot Walston of Birmingham, Ala.

ECU - Public School Teacher Exchange Set

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University has become the first university in the state to establish a university-public school teacher exchange.

The plan, which will be implemented in the spring, was approved Monday afternoon by the university's policy-making Council on Teacher Education.

The exchange program was a specific goal of the General Assembly's joint resolution adopted in June 1983 calling for improvement in "the quality of teaching in the public schools."

Dr. William C. Friday, president of the University of North Carolina, stated, "Once again East Carolina University has taken the initiative to implement important legislation. I am very pleased they have made the decision to move ahead."

Under the approved plan, ECU faculty members in teacher education and other disciplines would be encouraged to volunteer to go into the public schools under one or more types of specified exchange opportunities. Pairings would be made with public school teachers and administrators choosing similar exchange opportunities, who would then be placed in campus instructional roles at ECU.

The new teacher exchange program would give the 150 teacher methodology instructors at ECU the opportunity to change places with public school teachers.

Dr. Charles Coble, acting dean of the ECU School of Education and director of teacher education, said he expects initially that at least 10 percent of the teaching methods faculty of the university will apply for exchange teaching experience. The number includes faculty members in mathematics, science, English, history, library science and other arts and sciences departments, and from the schools of education, music, art, business, home economics and technology.

Within five years, under the systematic and on-going program envisioned by the committee, all appropriate faculty members will have the opportunity to participate, Coble said.

"I think the program will give the university people the opportunity to refresh their memories about how life in the public school classroom is," said Dr. Parmalee Hawk, a member of the teacher exchange planning committee. "Many of us (university teachers) have not had an extended period of interaction in the public school classrooms in a long while. The idea of the program is to refresh our memories so we can better prepare the teachers who will be going out into the public schools."

Procedures for participation by public school teachers are to be worked out by local school boards. Superintendents of both local school districts, Greenville and Pitt County, serve as members of the ECU Council on Teacher Education.

"We are very enthusiastic about the proposed formal program," said Dr. Delma Blinson, superintendent of the Greenville schools. "However, we do not see it as a radically new venture. We already have extensive exchange and involvement of ECU faculty in the school system. To a limited extent, our staff has been involved in ECU classes and activities."

"The new program is a formalization of those activities." (Please turn to Page 2)

ECU Offers Adult Classes

Several evening classes in languages and literature are among the spring semester offerings to area adults by the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education. The classes are open to interested persons and are non-credit courses.

"Short Novel Masterpieces," a new course offering scheduled for Tuesdays, Feb. 14-April 10, from 7:30-9 p.m., will emphasize group discussion of works by such novelists as Tolstoy, Kafka, Camus, Unamuno and Conrad.

Language classes scheduled are "Survival Italian" (Tuesdays and Thursdays, March 13-April 19, 7:30-9 p.m.) and "Conversational German" (Tuesdays, Feb. 14-April 24, 7:30-9 p.m.).

Another language course, "From Soup to Dessert" (Thursdays, March 15-April 5, 7:30-9 p.m.) is designed for travelers or for persons who seek familiarity with foreign restaurant menus.

Further information about these and other evening classes is available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, Erwin Hall, ECU; telephone 757-6143.

Nominations Being Sought

Nominations for the Gritton Citizen of the Year Award are being sought by the Gritton Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, according to Mike Phillips, chairman of the board of the Gritton Council.

Names and resumes of nominees should be sent to Gritton Council, Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 133, Gritton, N.C., before Feb. 1. The award will be presented at the annual meeting scheduled for Feb. 16.

Phillips said nominees must meet the following qualifications: must have made significant contributions to the Gritton-Pitt County area, must have involvement in civic activities that enhance the livability and profitability of the area, must have a business involvement for the good of the community and must possess a good reputation.

Nomination forms are available at Custom Installations, First Citizens Bank, Murphy Brothers, George Saleeby Insurance or at the chamber office, 752-4101.

Ahoskie Driver Charged

Lois Elayne Williams of Route 1, Ahoskie, was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of an 8:05 a.m. collision at the intersection of Reade and Cotanche streets Monday.

Officers said the Williams car collided with an auto operated by Kimberly Kilpatrick Bronsteen of Greenville, causing $450 damage to the Bronsteen car and $500 damage to the Williams vehicle.

Health Agency To Meet

The Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency will meet Jan. 25, at 7:15 p.m. at the Ramada Inn. Further information about the ECHSA meeting, or a 5 p.m. meeting of the ECHSA project review committee may be had by calling 758-1372.

Innkeeper Accuses Diner

Charles Nathaniel Moore of 1300 W. Third St., was arrested by Greenville police Monday on charges of defrauding an innkeeper following a 6:47 p.m. incident at the Riggs House Restaurant at 1201 Dickinson Ave. Officers said Moore allegedly ordered three sandwiches, then refused to pay for them.

Drug Charges Filed

Three Greenville residents have been arrested on drug charges following investigations by Greenville police.

Jackie Lee Dupree, 30, of 803 Bancroft Ave., was arrested Monday on two counts of the sale and delivery of heroin. Officers said Sylvia Payne Mills, 26, and William Henry Mills, 27, both of 717A Hooker Road, were arrested Friday on charges of possession of marijuana, and possession of schedule IV drugs.

ties and we think in that manner it will be an improvement," the superintendent added.

Blinson said he thinks the new exchange program will be a success. "We will probably have more teachers volunteer for the program than we will have spaces for initially," he said.

Exchange opportunities for both university personnel and public school personnel will include full-time involvement for one- or two-week periods in which participants would exchange complete instructional duties.

Other options for university personnel include unit teaching, single class teaching, small group work, team teaching (two teachers working together), teacher assistant or substitute teaching. Any option chosen would be sustained for a period of time.

For public school personnel, options in addition to methods and laboratory instruction include short and special presentations, seminar and team teaching.

The committee which devised the teacher exchange plan consulted public school teachers, who were "cautiously excited" about the idea of the exchange, according to committee member Wende Allen.

"The public school teachers expressed concern about being qualified to instruct on the university

The program will include underwater video of the Cayman Islands, provided by Tom Harwell. Dinner reservations should be made by calling 756-9339 or 785-1444.

Murders Charged

Harvey Lee Greene Jr., 23, of Bethel was indicted by a Pitt County grand jury Monday on two counts of first degree murder and two counts of armed robbery in connection with the beating deaths of Sheila Marlene Bland, 17, and John Michael Edmondson, 33, at Young's Cleaners in Bethel on Dec. 19.

Greene was arrested Jan. 1. He is scheduled to be arraigned on the charges in Superior Court on Jan. 30.

The indictments charge Greene with using a 27-inch long, 1-inch diameter pipe to beat Miss Bland and Edmondson to death after taking $3.50 in pennies from Miss Bland and $20 in cash from Edmondson.

Miss Bland, a student at North Pitt High School, worked part time at the cleaners. Edmondson, a teacher in Washington, was apparently a customer. They were found in the business an hour after it was scheduled to close.

Greene, who is at Dorothea Dix Hospital for a court-ordered psychiatric evaluation, is represented by court-appointed attorneys Jeffrey Miller and Howard Cummings.

Collier Death Ruled Suicide

Donald Allen Collier, 45, former area manager of Carolina Telephone Co. here, died Monday from what the Nash County Medical Examiner said was an apparent suicide at the grave of his son in Rocky Mount.

Dr. Robert Zipf, the medical examiner, said Collier, 45, a native of Rocky Mount, died of a contact gunshot wound to the right side of the head. The elder Collier was employed by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce at the time of his death.

Collier's only son, a teen-ager, died several years ago in what was also said to be a suicide.

level," she said, "but after we talked, they realized they had a lot of things to share about being out in the field."

Applications for exchange teaching will be received by the ECU Office of Teacher Education and reviewed by the Teacher Exchange Committee. The committee will arrange appropriate pairings.

All participants will attend an initial orientation and arrange dates for "shadowing," the on-site observation of all anticipated activities prior to the actual exchange. At the completion of the exchange experience, participants will complete evaluation forms for a report.

"We (educators) stand to learn a lot (from the program)," said Coble.

"The concept of this type of exchange is good," he added. "Now we will see how workable it is."

'Unfound' Also Part Of Legend

BOSTON (AP) — Poor old James Michael Curley. It's getting so memories of the legendary Irish-American mayor linger not for what he did, but for what he left behind and cannot be found.

First, the ornate mahogany desk Curley used during his four terms in City Hall between 1914 and 1950 disappeared. The new mayor, Raymond L. Flynn, wants to see it.

Now, Massachusetts license plate 576 is missing. The plate is believed to have originated with Curley and has been passed from one mayor to the next ever since.

The plate had been on the mayor's official car, a station wagon, since Flynn took office Jan. 4.

But it was gone Monday, and another one was in its place, when Flynn called for the car for the first time to take him to ceremonies honoring the late Martin Luther King Jr., said press aide Francis Costello.

Earlier in the morning, the car had been sent to the Dorchester section to fetch an 11-year-old boy who was to speak at the ceremony.

Costello said the plate was believed to have been on the car when it was sent to a city garage within the previous 10 days to have a radio installed.

"The mayor is concerned about the missing plate," said Costello. "It, like the desk, is part of the Curley legacy."

Soap Star Plays Another Role As Fashion Adviser

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — The many roles that Linda Dano plays would outdo anything concocted for a television soap opera heroine. And soap opera heroine she is.

Miss Dano, a former model and self-proclaimed workaholic, balances the jobs of starring in a television series, being a specialty fashion consultant, wife, stepmother, and workwoman on restoration of a New England-style farmhouse in Connecticut.

"God forbid I should sit down and rest," said the brunette beauty, who stars as the opulently dressed Felicia Gallant in "Another World" on NBC-TV.

"I'm up by 5:30 most mornings," she said, "but boy, by 4:00 p.m. I begin to lag."

Miss Dano, 40, is head of a fashion shopping company called Strictly Personal that she established two years ago as an outgrowth of her acting career.

"I have always loved fashion," she said, "so what I do is take all the work of shopping from the people I dress. They don't have to worry about clothes."

"I don't buy anything I don't like personally. I stay away from avant garde things. Most of the people I dress are those who live fairly ordinary, day to day lives, and this means house, street and business clothes. Rarely fancy evening dress."

"Television being what it is, most of the clothes have to be photogenic from the chest up. You don't have many occasions for full-dress regalia."

"I always have to consider size too. Mostly I shop for the six, eight to 10 group. Right now one television personality has me out looking for size 14."

"And you have to be aware of color. I rarely deal in blacks or darks. But because of the camera I do a lot of jewelry, a lot of sweaters, things to dress up from the chest up."

"The way the characters in the so-called soaps dress has a big fashion impact," she said in an interview. "I used to think we were appealing mostly to an audience of women. But thanks to all the taping techniques, our audience has expanded to men, to the family. You'd be surprised at how much mail our one show gets from the masculine audience. Sports figures! To me it's so hilarious to think of some of those big, no-neck athlete guys watching the soaps."

Lina Dano seemed destined for her career, as in any good soap, from the beginning.

"I always wanted to be in fashion," she said. "I studied at the University of California at Long Beach, at the University of California in Los Angeles, and went on to study art and design at other West Coast schools."

She is married to Frank Attardi, an artist in the advertising business in New York, has a couple of grown stepchildren, and the couple is busy with restoration of a 200-year-old farmhouse in Ridgefield, Conn.

"If I weren't such a workaholic," she said, "I'd settle down right now and scrape off some more old paint and things like that." At present, she is consultant to wardrobes of stars in "One Life to Live," "All My Children," "Loving," "As the World Turns" and "Guiding Light."

"The reason I treasure my own business is that I am the boss; I can do the television and other acting roles (she was under contract with 20th Century-Fox). But here I can know if I get tired, as I often do, that this belongs to me. "If a job is fun, you can do a zillion things. But I can tell you, if my husband said suddenly, 'Let's go Africa,' I'd knock the whole thing of career off, pack everything in and we'd go."

A FORMER MODEL...and current television soap opera heroine, Linda Dano is also a specialty fashion consultant. "I always wanted to be in fashion," she said. (UPI Telephoto)

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

The organized people of this world — all six of them — who insist that "everything has a place" are really out of it!

Everything does NOT have a place, which is precisely why "catch-all" or "junk" drawers are born. They're as vital a part of the American scenes electricity or indoor plumbing.

They're like compost heaps — the older and the higher they are, the better and richer they become.

I entered marriage quite deprived. I not only did not have a button box, but I didn't even have the makings of decent catch-all drawer. Within six months, I had one of the finest in the neighborhood. The secret?

First, you start with a large drawer, usually in the kitchen, in which a bottle of glue or nail polish has spilled in the bottom. This is what makes the expired coupons and old rubber bands stick together, making a firm bed for the rest of the junk you're going to add.

Near the back should be the things you need the most: a hammer, screwdriver, ice scraper for removing snow from the car windows, chewing gum, new fuses, appliance warranties and emergency phone numbers.

I like to store hibachi sticks and a broken ruler so that every time the drawer is opened they catch and you can't open the drawer anymore, nor can you close it.

Toward the front are the floating candle wicks, floral wire, a half deck of cards, box of sparklers and a spool of chartreuse thread with a needle that draws blood every time you open the drawer.

Catch-all drawers must be maintained. That means every time you go by one, you must open it and shove something in. An old cork, a knotted shoelace, a cat collar, a packet of airline almonds, an unidentified key, or a death notice of someone you don't know. It all adds to the mystery.

Catch-all drawers are not confined to the home. One of the best monuments to clutter I ever saw in my life was the middle desk drawer of a schoolteacher. When she finally got it opened, it was like an active volcano. Everything in it was restless and moved slowly and rhythmically. She threw in a used corn pad, slammed the drawer shut quickly and said, "You have to keep feeding it."

Mousetraps are overrated for getting people to beat a path to your door. If you have a good catch-all drawer, you can write your own ticket.

Dear Abby

Teens Fight Drunk Driving With A 'Contract For Life'

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: A life-saving effort has just come to my attention that I think deserves publicizing.

It's called the "Contract for Life"—an agreement signed by parents and teen-agers in an effort to reduce the number of deaths involving drunk drivers.

SADD (Students Against Driving Drunk) was launched two years ago in Marlboro, Mass., by Robert Anastas, a teacher from Wayland High School in Wayland, Mass., after two of his students were killed in a car crash.

The part of the contract to be signed by the teen-ager states:

"I agree to call you for advice and/or transportation at any hour, from any place, if I am ever in a situation where I have had too much to drink, or a friend or date who is driving me has had too much to drink."

The part signed by the parents states:
"I agree to come and get you at any hour, any place, no questions asked and no argument at that time, or I will pay for a taxi to bring you home safely. I expect we would discuss this issue at a later time."

"I agree to seek safe, sober transportation home if I am ever in a situation where I have had too much to drink, or a friend who is driving me has had too much to drink."

Although the SADD program has already reached 3 million teen-agers in the United States and Canada, I would like to see it in every high school.

For a free information kit, write to: SADD, "Contract for Life," Corbin Plaza, Marlboro, Mass. 01752.

DEAR ABBY: My wife began withholding sex soon after our marriage—10 years ago. We have two children, so it wasn't total abstinence (once or twice a month). Over the last nine years, it got less and less, until two years ago when she said, "No more."

I am not demanding, abusive or repulsive and I expect only conventional and normal relations, perhaps once a week. We are both Catholic—married in the church.

I asked her what she would do if I insisted. She said she would consider it "rape." What rights have I in this matter?

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: If you were to "insist"—force your wife to have sexual relations against her will—you would be guilty of rape. You have a "right" to expect a fulfilled marriage, which includes sexual relations. This is part of the marriage contract.

Talk to your priest. You may qualify for an annulment.

DEAR ABBY: Three years ago, I married a 36-year-old man I'll call John. It was his first marriage and my second. I was a 40-year-old divorcee with two children, 10 and 8. John adopted my children and considers them "his."

My problem is John's mother. She loses no opportunity to tell me that she would like some "real" grandchildren—meaning John and I should have at least one child together.

Abby, I do not want another child at my age and I have told my mother-in-law that very plainly. So has John, but she harps on it constantly, hoping to change our minds. I don't want to be disrespectful and tell her off, but I have to get her off my back.

John tunes her out, but she's getting to me. Help! Sign me...

AN "UNREAL" DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

DEAR UNREAL: Take a lesson from John and tune her out. She can "get to you" only if you let her.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
DEAR CECILY: During the holidays a friend brought me a gift of a few small jars of salmon caviar. Can you suggest some ways to use them? — PLAIN JANE.

DEAR PLAIN JANE: One way to use a small jar of salmon caviar to advantage is as a topping for a dressing to accompany avocado halves stuffed with shrimp salad. This combination is fine to serve at a luncheon for guests. The recipe follows.

scallion
2 small or medium ripe avocados
Lemon juice
Lettuce
Lemon wedges
2-ounce jar salmon caviar
Fresh dill sprig, if desired

To serve at a cocktail party or as an hors d'oeuvre before a party dinner, you can make a dip of cream cheese blended with sour cream. Turn the dip into a serving bowl, cover and refrigerate. Just before serving, top it with salmon caviar. If you put the bowl in the center of a tray and surround it with cauliflowerets and zucchini and carrot sticks, you'll have an attractive offering. I like to parboil the vegetables when I use them this way but you can, of course, serve them raw.

If you prefer to offer a spread rather than a dip, you may like this combination. Mix mashed hard-cooked eggs with mayonnaise and lemon juice, turn into a serving bowl, cover and refrigerate. Just before serving, top the egg spread with salmon caviar and serve with crackers.

Make up the Dill Dressing and refrigerate.
Shell and devein the shrimp. Bring the water to a boil; add the salt, peppercorns, bay leaf and lemon slices; boil 2 minutes. Add the shrimp; bring to a boil again; cook until shrimp turn pink — 1 to 2 minutes. Remove from heat; let stand 2 minutes; drain and cool.

Pin Awarded Paul Jewett

Greenville Shrine No. 7 held its meeting Wednesday at the Masonic Temple. Paul Jewett, a 25-year member, received a pin.

Making the presentation was Emma S. Youmans, Worthy High Priestess, and Albert E. Youmans, Watchman of Shepherds. Jewett gave a talk concerning his past activities in the Shrine and in the Masonic Lodge.

Jean Tharp gave a report on Christmas gifts during the holiday season. Margaret Gray, Ruth Forrest, Josephine Harper and Mrs. Tharp mailed cards and delivered poinsettias.

Victoria Hart presented a material objective report and distributed leaflets.

Meeting hosts and hostesses were Ruth and Lon Forrest, Clifton Stokes, Elizabeth and Elwood Edwards.

Reserve 4 whole shrimp for a garnish. Cut the remaining shrimp crosswise into small chunks; toss with the celery, scallions; cover and chill.

At serving time, cut the avocados in half lengthwise, twist apart and remove pits; brush cut surfaces with the lemon juice; arrange on lettuce on individual plates. Spoon shrimp mixture into the avocado cavities. Garnish lettuce with the reserved shrimp and, if used, the lemon wedges. Spoon some of the Dill Dressing over the shrimp mixture and garnish with some of the salmon caviar.

Turn the remaining Dill Dressing into a small attractive bowl and garnish with the remaining salmon caviar and, if used, the dill sprig. Pass with the salads.

— C.B.

Makes 4 servings.

SHRIMP AND AVOCADO SALAD
Dill Dressing, see recipe
1/2 pound medium-size shrimp
3 cups water
2 teaspoons salt
2 peppercorns
1 bay leaf
2 lemon slices
3 tablespoons finely diced celery
1 tablespoon finely diced

Turn the remaining Dill Dressing into a small attractive bowl and garnish with the remaining salmon caviar and, if used, the dill sprig. Pass with the salads.

Makes 4 servings.

Game Cookery Class Planned

A wild game cookery class will be held Jan. 23 starting at 7 p.m. at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service office.

Rick Hamilton, forestry specialist, and Jim Kea, area agricultural extension agent, will conduct the class. Pre-registration is required.

Call 752-2934, extension 370, to preregister by Jan. 19. The fee will be $2.

The class will cover how to handle and care for game while still in the woods or field, how to prepare the game for the freezer and how to cook it for family meals. Dishes prepared in the class will be sampled by the audience.

Care Is Needed

The U.S. Supreme Court, by ruling out state review of offshore leasing for oil exploration, has made it easier for the Interior Department to lease tracts off the California coast and, by inference, off the coasts of other states.

The state of California and environmental groups were lined up against the administration.

Recent history has made it abundantly clear that offshore drilling is feared by a large and vociferous share of the public; and many states are nervous over the prospect.

This has to be balanced against the very large revenues enjoyed by states who do have offshore oil wealth (including California); and the very real concern, by people who have to bear the ultimate responsibility, that the United States never again be caught in the bind represented by the oil embargo of the recent past.

We'd suggest extraordinary care in the leasing process is in order. It would take something less than a major disaster to stir such an outcry that it would become politically impossible to harvest that natural resource for the national good.

Common Sense

A 10-year study has concluding the not-so-surprising result that lowering of blood cholesterol reduces heart attacks and heart attack deaths.

The study was coordinated at Chapel Hill and included 3,806 middle-aged men who had high blood cholesterol levels. For those who reduced the levels there was a 24 percent reduction in coronary heart disease deaths and non-fatal heart attacks were reduced by 19 percent.

It has long been suspected that high blood cholesterol levels eventually clogged the arteries, leading to heart disease, high blood pressure and strokes. While this study relates to middle aged men, it is assumed that the same conditions apply to the public in general.

The study reiterates what most of us know, that reasonably good living, eating and sleeping habits contribute to good health. Virtually every study shows that eating a balanced diet, proper exercise and getting adequate sleep contribute to health and longevity. Most of us, at times, ignore this common sense approach, but there is no medical magic to substitute for it.

Political Threat

WASHINGTON — A Republican revolt against President Reagan's indecisive follow-through on space-based missile defense carries a political threat into the presidential campaign that could undermine his much-heralded defense buildup.

The still-shrouded revolt, led by Sen. Malcolm Wallop, threatens to kill the long-controversial MX missile unless the Pentagon stops procrastinating and moves quickly ahead with a national defense against nuclear missiles based on current laser technology.

If Wallop, followed by other conservative Republicans, switches against the MX, gleeful Democratic presidential candidates with new ammunition. At work here is that familiar phenomenon in the administration of Ronald Reagan: a president clear in his own mind, in this case that his country desperately needs a defense against missile attack, but unable to drive an unresponsive bureaucracy.

Wallop, a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee who is listened to, declared war in a tough, confidential letter to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger in late November attacking Under Secretary Richard DeLauer. To hear DeLauer warn about the cost of space-based laser defense, he said, "was the last straw for me." If DeLauer spoke for the administration, Wallop told Weinberger, "then with a heavy heart I will work to defeat ... funding for all major missile programs." That would include both laser missile defense and the MX, destined for deployment in Wyoming.

Across the board, congressional Republicans were unhappy with DeLauer's November testimony to the House Armed Services Committee. Although he had kind words for Reagan's space-based missile defense proposals, he seemed to kiss them off on the basis of unacceptable cost. "You'll be staggered at the cost," he said. "All (the new technologies) are likely to cost on the order of a trillion dollars."

To Wallop and other backers of Reagan's misnamed "Star Wars" missile defense, cost is being used as a hobgoblin to present full-speed development of a workable system based on chemical lasers already tested. If current technology is ruled out as not good enough for missile defense because the Soviets will someday harden the skins of their missiles, Wallop told Weinberger, then the MX missile must also be ruled out as an offensive weapon soon to be vulnerable to Soviet defenses.

"If it is so relatively easy to harden missiles against first-generation lasers," Wallop wrote Weinberger with a hint of sarcasm, then the U.S. would be derelict to deploy vulnerable MX missiles. "Let's not bear the heavy costs and expose the people of Wyoming to danger and disruption for the sake of things that will be easily countered."

Behind Wallop's sharp tongue are months of Republican anguish at go-slow administration bureaucrats obstructing Reagan's clear desire to deploy space-based missile defenses, switching U.S. nuclear doctrine from deterrence based on balance of terror into active defense.

"I cannot imagine the security of the world depending on two guards who are holding cocked .45 pistols at each other's head," the president said privately at one of his first briefings on the new potential of space-based laser defense.

That evocation of the Reagan's has hardened and deepened in the nearly three years since he voiced it. It has become an emotional force in his perception of the nuclear issue and his conviction that mutual assured destruction — MAD — is a policy of madness.

But his bureaucrats, worrying about Soviet reactions and the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty (despite evidence that the Soviets are tearing it to shreds), show no equal fervor. Wallop's threat to kill the MX might convert that bureaucratic resistance into actual — and unaccustomed — support.

Conservative Group Moves Into State

RALEIGH — A recently formed conservative political group is beginning to organize itself in North Carolina. Citizens for America, which is based in Washington, D.C., hopes to develop a grassroots conservative organization in every congressional district in the United States.

The group is headed by Lew Lehrman of New York. Lehrman, the self-made millionaire founder of Rite-Aid drug stores, was one of the political surprises of 1982. Coming from political obscurity, he upset the Republican Party machinery in New York to win the party's gubernatorial nomination and then lost a close race to democrat Mario Cuomo. He is thought to have ambitions for the White House.

Lehrman, a strong supporter of Ronald Reagan, started Citizens for America last summer. The group has a paid staff of 22 and a $1.5 million budget. It has already organized itself in 150 congressional districts, said David Carmen, director of policy and communications.

Lehrman's group differs from the many other conservative political action committees — such as the National Congressional Club of Sen. Jesse Helms — for several reasons. First, according to tax law definitions, it's not political. It's educational. Therefore, it won't seek out conservative candidates for office, endorse candidates or give them financial help.

The second major difference — and the approach which Carmen says makes it unique in the nation — is its focus on local media. "We're trying to build a national civic league, not unlike Common Cause or the League of Women Voters, based in every congressional district in the country and made up of 20 to 30 conservative civic leaders" of all parties, Carmen said. The local leaders will then use their standing in the community to assure that conservative viewpoints on national defense and fiscal matters are represented in the local news media.

The local leaders will also lobby their local congressmen on the conservative issues which CFA endorses. Carmen said the group will stick with defense and fiscal matters and, therefore, is not likely to get involved in conservative social issues such as abortion and school prayer.

Two of the economic issues which Carmen specified are urban enterprise zones where businesses would get tax incentives for locating jobs in high unemployment areas and a line item veto for the president. (A line item veto allows an executive to veto one spending item in a bill without killing the whole bill.)

Lehrman's nephew, who is also named Lew Lehrman, was in North Carolina several weeks ago and met with Tom Ellis, head of the National Congressional Club. Ellis said the meeting was cordial and that he'll support CFA. He said he doesn't expect to become involved with it, however. "We've got enough to say grace over, already," he said. Ellis said he gave Lehrman the names of prominent conservatives across the state.

Organization of the group, however, will certainly be slowed. Lehrman (the nephew) has suffered two collapsed lungs in the past month and was in a Miami hospital last week. Carmen said the young man is responsible for organizing much of the Southeast and decisions on a timetable for moving ahead are in limbo pending an evaluation of Lehrman's health.

Although both Ellis and Carmen said they don't expect any "turf fights" over CFA's move into the state, the possibility certainly exists down the road. Some national observers see CFA as the start of Lehrman's bid for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination. Carmen denies that. But, if Lehrman does run, he might find Ellis lined up behind another candidate, like Rep. Jack Kemp of New York.

Public Forum

To the editor:
The emphasis in this letter written by Robert M. Hawthorne and published in the Providence, R.I., Journal seems to be that hate hurts the hater. My father sent it to me and I'd like to share it with your readers:

George Washington warned, "The nation which indulges toward another an habitual hatred is in some degree a slave."

Washington was speaking of the danger of hating the British, thereby robbing the young nation of its strength. What would he think of our habitual hatred of the Soviets today, which makes us slavish mimics of every tank, battleship and ICBM the Soviets are reported to possess? Hatred is a cancer which destroys individuals as well as nations. A slave, according to Webster, is "a person who has lost control of himself and is dominated by something or someone."

There are many people, probably a majority in the U.S., who have been systematically taught to hate communism, especially the Soviet Union. Three generations of Americans have been fed a steady diet of "evil issuing from Moscow." Nothing is said of the positive side of communism. Most people would say there is no positive side. Our president said, "Communism is the source of all evil."

We know that this is not our American ideal, but the danger is great. Anything short of hatred of communism, worldwide, is considered unpatriotic. No politician seems brave enough to break step. We seem to have no choice but squander our substance on what President Eisenhower called the military-industrial complex, at the expense of public improvements. In the land of the free, we face slavery.

Charlotte Purington

To the editor:
On Monday, Jan. 23, concerned Christians from all over the United States will be in Washington, D.C., to take part in the March for Life taking a stand on the issue of abortion. We intend to let our legislators know that we stand against legalized abortion. The Bible tells us in Exodus 20:13, "Thou shalt not kill," but we have allowed the lawmakers of our land to pass a law which makes it legal to kill an unborn baby.

Christians of Pitt County, let's take our stand. We are just as guilty as the one who has or performs an abortion when we do not speak out and we allow this practice to continue. Be bold! Write to our legislators and let them know we are against legalized abortion. Don't be afraid to speak out. Don't worry about what that friend is going to think when you speak out. Don't worry about what that family member is going to think — or that employer or fellow employee. Be concerned with what the Lord expects of us. Let's take our stand NOW.

If you are not able to go with us to Washington, please support us in prayer. We cannot let this practice continue without making our convictions known. People, let's set about to please God, not people.

Courts Are Drowning

WASHINGTON — Chief Justice Warren Earl Burger returned to a familiar theme two weeks ago in his annual year-end report on the state of the judiciary. He said, in effect, that our judicial system is drowning in lawsuits — in cases that take too long to settle and cost too much to fight out in court.

The chief's complaint has ancient lineage. Except for the lawyers, no one ever has had a good word to say about going to trial. Ambrose Bierce once defined a lawsuit as "a machine which you go into as a pig and come out of as a sausage." A Chinese proverb teaches us that he who wins his lawsuit will lose his money.

Burger had some data to support his point. "The public costs of private litigation are enormous," he said, "and often can cost taxpayers more to process than is at stake in the litigation." In 1982 more than 8 million lawsuits were filed in state and federal courts. Don't let that figure slip by. We are talking of at least 8 million plaintiffs and at least 8 million defendants. When account is given to class-action suits and to suits with multiple parties, we are talking of 20 million persons suing one another. Every year the taxpayers must foot a $2 billion bill just to process these mountains of legal papers.

The chief cited a study by the Rand Corp. In California the jury trial of a typical civil case costs the public approximately $8,300. Other data suggest that half of the plaintiffs who insist upon trial will win no money, and half of those who do win will get judgments of less than $8,000. In Wisconsin a recent study found that the median amount sued for is only $4,500.

There is bound to be a better way, in Burger's view, than to rely upon the costly and time-consuming process of a full-blown trial. Most cases, to be sure, never go to trial; they are settled by the lawyers as a trial date approaches. But in the meanwhile — and it can be a very long meanwhile — both the taxpayers and the litigants suffer the expense of filings and counter-filings, interrogatories and responses, motions and counter-motions. It all adds up.

Burger's thought is to explore the uses of arbitration. Here he cites the example of the Court of Common Pleas in Allegheny County, Pa., which began experimenting with court-supervised arbitration 30 years ago. In 1980, about 60 percent of all cases filed in that court were assigned to arbitration. The parties were given three months in which to settle their dispute. Roughly half of the suits were thus resolved. The other half went to arbitration at the end of 90 days. The average cost to the taxpayers was only $65 per case.

Litigants are generally satisfied with the Allegheny County system, Burger reported. Even though an arbitrator's decisions are not binding, only one-fourth of the awards are appealed and three-quarters of those are dropped or settled before trial. The plan has worked so successfully that last July the jurisdictional limit on cases qualifying for arbitration was raised from $10,000 to $20,000.

The chief justice has other ideas for reducing the cost and speeding the outcome of litigation. He is impatient with abuse of the process known as "discovery," by which lawyers probe through depositions for weaknesses in the opposition's case. He is even more impatient with frivolous lawsuits that are brought primarily for their nuisance value. Last year the Supreme Court ordered one litigious fellow to pay damages to the other side "for bringing a frivolous appeal."

Burger has no illusions that the flood of litigation will subside. The United States has more lawyers per capita than any nation in the world, but it has fewer judges per capita than some European countries. Thus Burger renewed his appeal for at least 43 additional federal district judges. The problem is especially acute, he noted, in southern Florida, where criminal cases — most of them drug-related — have created a log-jam of record proportions.

As Burger many times has remarked, the problem of improving our system of justice is primarily a problem for the states and not for the federal government. The big, spectacular cases are mainly federal cases, but the bulk of litigation can be found down at the local courthouse. If the situation ever is to be relieved, both levels of jurisprudence will have to try harder.

Bean Soup Differs From The Menu

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tourists often purloin menus from House and Senate restaurants to get the recipe for the world-renowned bean soup served day in and day out on Capitol Hill.

But those who go back to their kitchens with their mouths set for the real thing could be a bit disappointed if they take the recipe literally.

It seems the bean soup recipe in the House varies slightly from the one in the Senate. Not only that, but one culinary official admits that chefs in some of the Capitol Hill kitchens do "add a pinch of this or that seasoning" — a practice not alluded to in the printed version shown to the public.

So does the famous bean soup amount to any more than a hill of beans?

To find out, Michigan Democratic Sen. Carl Levin, whose state produces the white Michigan navy beans in the soup, brought in food critic Richard Olney to taste test a bowl as television cameras and reporters recorded the event.

"It needs more salt, more pepper and a little butter," sniffed the French-based writer.

Levin replied: "The Senate chef will be informed immediately!"

Pressed on how he would rate the bean soup, Olney said that "on a scale of 1 to 20, I give it a 15."

As for any more complaints, John Hitzel, director of the Senate kitchens, later commented: "Well, 700 bowls a day speaks for itself — you can't argue with success." And, he said even when the Senate is out of session, the restaurants ladle out up to 400 bowls a day.

According to the Senate, it was in the early 1900s that Sen. Fred Thomas Dubois of Idaho or Sen. Knute Nelson of Minnesota made it mandatory that bean soup be on the Senate menu every day. If you believe the House tale, it was a humid day in 1904 when Speaker Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois, perusing a menu that had no hot soup, shouted: "Thunderation, I had my mouth set for bean soup. From now on, hot or cold, rain, snow, or shine, I want it on the menu every day."

Here's the Senate bean soup recipe: Take 2 pounds of small Michigan navy beans, wash, and run through hot water until beans are white again. Put on the fire with four quarts of hot water. Then take 1½ pounds of smoked ham hocks, boil slowly approximately three hours in covered pot. Braise one onion chopped in a little butter, and, when light brown, put in bean soup. Season with salt and pepper, then serve. Do not add salt until ready to serve. (Serves eight persons)

But there's no call for the onion on the House menu. And, before cooking that recipe demands that you first cover the 2 pounds of beans with cold water and soak overnight. Then you drain and re-cover with water, add the smoked ham hock and simmer slowly for about 4 hours until the beans are cooked tender. Then add salt and pepper to taste. Just before serving, bruse beans with large spoon, enough to cloud.

Squabble In Congress Is Blocking Highway Money

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — While higher gas taxes spurred road construction last year, a squabble in Congress is now blocking the flow of more than $5 billion in new federal money and stalling highway projects approved only last summer. "It's kind of like a yo-yo. You get (programs) accelerated, and then you get set back, and now you're waiting for another acceleration," complained Dick Braun, transportation secretary in Minnesota. Minnesota has $73 million worth of interstate highway projects ready for contracting, but no federal money has been available since last October because of the dispute on Capitol Hill.

Florida has $8,000 left in federal interstate money from the past fiscal year. "That doesn't even get a bulldozer out on the job," said Pat McCue, federal programs director for the state highway department. He said $135 million in Florida projects would be threatened if federal money wasn't released by April.

estimate bill behind, failing to agree after several congressmen tacked on amendments that would require money be spent on specific highway projects in a half dozen states.

program" this year, warned Indiana Gov. Robert D. Orr, the chairman of the transportation committee of the National Governors' Association.

nesota — now find themselves in the most precarious situations, said highway officials.

"We were ready to get the tunnel projects done in January, but every month's delay (in getting federal money) delays final completion," said McCready.

Set Standard In Police Fitness

NEW YORK (AP) — The police department is laying down the law: No more bellies hanging over belts, not if New York's finest intend to keep their claim to that nickname.

explained this week that a good showing on the physical fitness test will mean a little something extra on exam scores for promotion to sergeant through captain.

Stymied by protests that earlier attempts to set weight limits and physical fitness guidelines were arbitrary or discriminatory, the department has decided to award bonus points on civil service exams to officers who pass a yearly fitness test.

All it takes is a little agility, as in the following exercises:

—In 50 seconds or less, run up about three flights of stairs — plus 20 more feet — to a 120-pound box and move it five times across 20 feet.

—In less than 13 seconds, drag a 120-pound dummy 15 feet and return it to the starting point.

Lt. Walter Doyle, an aide to the chief of personnel, Ready? Go!

Federal Highway Administration figures show at least 30 states face similar predicaments. They have little or no interstate funds left over from previous years, and state money, which in some cases had been temporarily used to keep the federal programs going, is running out.

"We're at the point now that if we don't get (federal money) soon ... it's going to start slowing us down significantly," said Ron McCready, director of transportation planning in Arizona.

He said Arizona had used state money to avoid canceling some interstate contracts since last October, when the fiscal 1984 federal funds provided by the passage of the nickel-a-gallon gas tax increase should have become available. "Now we're really tapped out," McCready said.

Held up by the congressional wrangling is about $5.5 billion for interstate construction and repair. The money has been allocated but cannot be dispersed until Congress makes a cost estimate for the entire interstate system.

Normally, that's a routine procedure. But when Congress recessed a week before Thanksgiving, it left the cost

The nation's governors and state highway officials, along with the highway construction industry, plan a vast lobbying effort to win release of the federal highway money when Congress returns Jan. 23.

"To delay action any further will seriously impair the states' abilities to ... maintain an effective (highway construction)

Faced with mounting pressure from the states, congressional sources said they believed the House and Senate would move quickly to clear a highway cost estimate bill.

"I think there will be a sense of urgency to move on it quickly," said a staffer of the House Public Works Committee, who asked not to be identified. He said Rep. James Howard, D-N.J., chairman of the committee, and Rep. Glenn Anderson, D-Calif., chairman of the surface transportation subcommittee, "are seeing the pressure beginning to build from governors and states."

Ironically, the states that moved most aggressively to take advantage of the increased federal interstate money — among them, Florida, Arizona and Minnesota — now find themselves in the most precarious situations, said highway officials.

In Minnesota, for example, interstate road projects in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area were sped up last year, and officials had hoped additional contracts could be let in January.

"We have $73 million worth ready to put under contract that we can't go with," said Braun, the transportation secretary. The stall in Congress has held up contract lettings in November, December and January, he said.

Likewise, a major push that moved ahead construction of the Papago Freeway in Phoenix also is threatened, Arizona officials said. They are awaiting $80 million for construction of two critical drainage tunnels.

John Gentile, director of the highway division at the Associated General Contractors of America, said the dispute in Congress has confused the industry and slowed momentum on many highway programs around the country.

"The pump is primed and then all of a sudden the tap is turned off," Gentile said. "Everybody's plans were altered."

Navy Investigates Chaining Of Sailor

By DENNIS GEORGATOS
Associated Press Writer
SAN DIEGO (AP) — A sailor who tried to commit suicide was chained in a hangar on the deck of the USS Meyerkord for seven days "for his own safety" as the ship traveled to join the search for debris from the Korean jet shot down by the Soviets, a Navy spokesman says.

"Medical evacuation was not feasible at the time, the ship didn't have a way to get him off," said Lt. Cmdr. Ron Morse, a spokesman for the Naval Surface Force, U.S. Pacific Fleet.

"The action was taken out of concern for his own safety and that of his shipmates. He was not being punished," Morse said Monday. Nevertheless, Morse said the Navy is investigating the confinement of Seaman Leon Dillard, who was tethered to a 6-foot chain in the frigate's helicopter hangar between Sept. 29 and Oct. 5.

"Within the limits of his restraint, he was able to enjoy freedom of movement, stand, lie down or sit as he saw fit," Morse said. "He was under 24-hour supervision, provided with adequate sleeping arrangements and normal rations."

The confinement began when Dillard attempted suicide by ingesting an undetermined number of pills, Morse said.

"As a result of this suicidal gesture and his earlier threats, the commanding officer (of the Meyerkord) determined it was in the best interest of the individual and his shipmates he be restrained in the heli hangar," Morse said.

"We're not psychiatrists out there.... You can't apply the same standards as you would ashore," he added. "You've got to have some means of preventing him" from killing himself.

Morse said the ship was small and that there wasn't a brig aboard.

Attorney Allen Edmunds, who represents Dillard, said his client had been under a great deal of emotional stress after learning of his brother's death while at sea, according to a report Monday night by KFMB, the CBS affiliate in San Diego. Morse said he did not know anything about Dillard's brother.

Edmunds told the station that Dillard consulted the ship's medical corpsman after he said he started hearing his dead brother's voice.

The corpsman reportedly advised that Dillard be removed from the ship. However, the Sept. 1 Soviet downing of Korean Air Lines Flight 007 had occurred, and the Meyerkord had been ordered to assist in the search for debris and bodies in the Sea of Japan.

Due to the urgency of the ship's mission, Meyerkord Cmdr. William D. Center decided the only "prudent alternative" was to confine the sailor until he could be evacuated, Morse said.

On Oct. 5, before the Meyerkord joined the task force, Dillard was transferred to the USS Elliot, then taken to the Naval Hospital in Yokosuka, Japan, for psychiatric evaluation.

"That was the earliest possible opportunity to transfer seaman Dillard," said Morse.

Morse said Dillard has been returned to his command in San Diego, and is awaiting court-martial proceedings. He said the counts allege that Dillard left his watch station, showed disrespect to superiors and intentionally attempted to injure himself to avoid duty, in addition to a marijuana-related offense.

Morse said those proceedings had been delayed while Dillard had consulted with a civilian attorney.

Edmunds couldn't be reached Monday night. A message left with the service answering his office phone number was not returned. His home phone number is not listed.

An Exception For N.C. Light Sentence Custom

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina judges generally sentence women to lighter prison sentences than men for felonies, but that trend doesn't carry over to misdemeanors, sociologists at North Carolina State University say.

Dr. Matthew T. Zingraff said evidence that "gender-role expectations" may affect sentencing emerged from a study of the sentencing of 9,464 felony and misdemeanor offenders imprisoned from 1969 through 1977.

The study was done by Zingraff and Dr. Randall J. Thomson, both associate professors in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology. It separated types of crimes and used statistical controls to eliminate the effects of race, court location, number of sentences involved, earlier sentences, age and degree of culpability.

"It's like the judge comes up and says, 'I normally give so many years for this offense; I'm going to give you 12 years less because you're a woman,'" Thomson said of women convicted of felonies.

But the researchers said they found no evidence that the lighter sentencing trend applies to misdemeanors. In fact, for the offense of child abandonment, they found women received harsher sentences.

Zingraff said a judge may see a woman who commits a murder as an aberration and let her off with a lighter sentence.

"Women are not typical murderers," he said. "It's not routine, it's very, very different."

But women who abandon their children may be violating the judge's expectations and may be death with more harshly, he suggested.

The results of the study, to be published in 1984 in the International Journal of the Sociology of Law, show sharp differences in sentence lengths for second-degree murder, manslaughter, larceny and forgery.

Men convicted of second-degree murder received an average sentence of 10,877 days, while women received an average of 6,691 days. Adjusted for control factors, the difference was 4,583 days.

Sentences were shorter and the difference smaller for the other felony crimes. Sentences for men were longer by 29 months for manslaughter, 18 months for larceny and five months for forgery.

The researchers found no significant differences between men and women in sentences received for simple assault, passing worthless checks and shoplifting.

But on a child abandonment conviction, the average woman received a sentence 42 days longer, they said.

Zingraff and Thomson said differences may disappear at the misdemeanor level because judges there have little discretion and tend to dispose of minor cases quickly and routinely.

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Many North Carolina farmers are skeptical about a new federal dairy program, but state officials say some farmers may find it hard to refuse the program.

The new program offers payments to farmers who contract by Jan. 31 to cut back on milk production for the next 15 months. But many farmers say they won't participate in the program because it could cost them more to meet all the requirements than the payments they'd receive.

Agriculture officials say farmers' reactions have been primarily negative in recent meetings held to explain how the controversial programs will be carried out.

Officials say farmers have questioned whether some of the rules can be properly administered, and say they are skeptical about how effective the program will be in reducing the national milk surplus.

But Douglas L. Reece, the dairy extension agent for Forsyth and Yadkin counties, said some dairy farms already qualify because of reduced milk production during the past year from drought, disease or other reasons. And, because of that, Reece said it will be hard for those farmers to refuse to participate.

About 15 percent of the state's dairy farms had a decrease in milk production last year, according to estimates by dairy extension specialists at North Carolina State University in Raleigh.

Queen Elizabeth II and her family received a 3.78 percent increase in their multimillion dollar allowances — just enough to avoid a "significant reduction in the scale or style of royal occasions."

The queen's annual pay rose to 3.95 million pounds ($5.5 million), from 3.7 million pounds last year, then worth $5.6 million. The allowance slipped in dollar terms because the value of the dollar has risen against the pound.

The allowance for 83-year-old Queen Mother Elizabeth will be 334,000 pounds ($474,280). The queen's husband, Prince Philip, receives 186,500 pounds ($246,830).

Princess Anne, 33, the queen's daughter, gets 116,200 pounds ($165,004). Her younger brothers, Prince Andrew, 23, and Prince Edward, 19, each receive 20,000 pounds ($28,400).

Heir to the throne Prince Charles, 35, earns more than 400,000 pounds ($568,000) a year from his estates in the Duchy of Cornwall.

But operators of the remaining 85 percent — those who have had no decrease in their production — are taking a harder look to see if it would be better to sign the contract or stay out of the program, he said.

The new dairy program is the result of compromise legislation passed by Congress last November and signed into law by President Reagan on Nov. 29. The U.S. Department of Agriculture issued ruled Dec. 30 on how the law is to be administered by its production-control agency, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Final interpretation of those rules was presented last week to ASCS employees in county offices across North Carolina, along with a two-page summary outlining how the program is to be administered.

Basically, the program offers a farmer a contract in which he agrees to reduce his milk sales in return for an incentive payment of $10 per hundred pounds of milk taken out of production for the 15-month period that began Jan. 1.

The farmer chooses an amount from 5 percent to 30 percent that he will reduce from his 1982 milk marketings, or the average of his marketings for 1981 and 1982.

Ready To Tell Fraud Story

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former executive of General Dynamics Corp. who fled the country in 1982 is offering to give federal prosecutors details about allegedly fraudulent contract claims filed with the Navy, The Washington Post reported in today's editions.

The newspaper quoted an unidentified source close to P. Takis Veliotis as saying the former corporate executive is nearing an agreement to meet outside the United States with Justice Department officials to provide details as well as to seek immunity from prosecution.

Veliotis, who ran General Dynamic's Electric Boat Division before he resigned in 1982, was indicted last summer on federal charges he shared $2.7 million in kickbacks with another company vice president. Veliotis is living in Greece, where he is a citizen.

Justice Department spokesman John Russell declined to comment Monday night on the report.

The newspaper said a General Dynamics spokesman in St. Louis denied the allegations.

The Post reported that Veliotis alleges that senior General Dynamics officials deliberately underbid a Navy contract to build 18 688-class nuclear attack submarines.

Veliotis also alleges that a 1978 settlement in which General Dynamics received $639 million from the Navy was based on fraudulent claims filed by the company, the Post said.

No One Claims Lottery Prize

TORONTO (AP) — Three days after officials announced the winning ticket in Canada's richest lottery ever, no one has come forward to claim the tax-free prize of almost $14 million.

The ticket — bearing numbers two, 12, 29, 31, 44 and 46 — was sold in Ontario. Lottery officials say they know the exact area where the ticket was bought, but won't identify it publicly until the winner or winners get in touch with them.

The winner must be identified to the public, but has a year to collect the prize before it is forfeited and tossed back into the pool.

The ticket, announced after a draw Saturday, won $13,890,588.90 Canadian dollars — about $11.12 million U.S. The jackpot had been growing since Dec. 3 because for six weeks in a row no one picked the right combination of numbers.

The odds against selecting the correct number — which remain constant regardless of tickets sold — were about 13.9 million to one. But based on the number of tickets sold, mathematicians calculated the odds at 135.7 million to one that a single ticket would take the whole pot.

More than 65 million tickets were sold since the jackpot began mushrooming, and it is not yet known whether the top prize was won by a one person, split among a conglomerate of workers or friends, or perhaps was confiscated by a U.S. Customs inspector enforcing a law against bringing back foreign lottery tickets.

While some said the winner should wait a while to step forward into the envious eye of the public, others warned of possible lost interest of between $3,000 and $4,000 a day.

Meanwhile, the Lotto 6-49 contest gets back to normal Saturday, offering the grand prize winner a paltry $500,000 or so.

The largest lottery payoff ever in the United States was $8.8 million last July in Pennsylvania. But U.S. lottery winnings, unlike those in Canada, are taxable.

Indiana Utility Pulls Out Of A Multi-Billion Project

By ROB WRIGHT
Associated Press Writer
MADISON, Ind. (AP) — Public Service Indiana's decision to scrap the $2.5 billion Marble Hill nuclear power plant will likely force emergency rate increases and business losses in the surrounding community, company officials and residents say.

The shutdown, announced Monday, coupled with last week's flat denial of a license to start up an Illinois nuclear plant, was also playing havoc with the stock market for utility issues, analysts said.

Indiana's largest electrical utility pulled out of the Marble Hill project because it is "financially unable to proceed," utility Chairman Hugh A. Barker announced after a directors' meeting Monday.

Barker said the utility will file an immediate petition with the Public Service Commission for about $105 million in emergency rate relief to cover operating costs and winding-up expenses at Marble Hill. Two groups announced they would oppose the hike.

"Even with the most stringent internal cost controls, we have not been able to generate a sufficient amount of cash to continue to operate our system, much less to finance construction at Marble Hill," Barker said. While apparently dooming the plant, the pullout by the utility, which owns 83 percent of Marble Hill, does not mean the project is officially canceled. That decision depends on Wabash Valley Power Association, a group of power cooperatives which owns the rest of the plant.

Wabash officials will meet soon to discuss what to do, said spokesman Craig Palmer. "We feel that there is just too much money invested to date to discount any feasible option," he added.

The project was announced in January 1975 with a projected completion date of the first reactor in 1983 and the second unit in 1984. In January 1976, the utility estimated construction would cost $1.4 billion, but the estimate has risen to $7 billion or more.

The plant's first reactor is 60 percent complete, and the second unit is 30 percent complete. Construction was delayed 18 months while the Nuclear Regulatory Commission investigated charges of construction flaws.

The 150 workers at the plant were informed of the company's withdrawal Monday, utility spokesman Brad Bishop said.

Workers expressed anger and prepared to seek unemployment compensation, while a popular tavern nearby prepared to close.

"It's usually packed for breakfast," said Charles Stewart, owner of the Marble Hill Inn, "but this morning I think the cook said she fixed four eggs."

He said he would close the 6-year-old tavern unless another company takes over the plant. "Millions of dollars have been spent here, but this is it," he said.

"I can't see it reopening," said construction worker Al Barger, a 49-year-old father of three. "I'll just have to find something else to do."

Bishop said it's doubtful the plant could be converted to other uses. "I would expect it to sit there," he said.

Others affected by the utility's cancellation include the common stockholders of Public Service, who face a 65 percent loss of their dividend income. The board of directors announced a quarterly dividend cut that it said would save the utility $100 million this year.

Barker said owners of Public Service stock have lost $750 million as the company's financial condition deteriorated.

Public Service stock was one of the 10 most actively traded issues on the New York Stock Exchange on Monday, closing down 1 1/2% at 10. It was 24% on Dec. 31, 1982.

"The market is very sensitive to the nuclear problem," said analyst Linda Caldwell of Duff & Phelps. The market "overreacted a little bit," she said.

The most actively traded stock Monday, dropping $3.75 to $22.50 a share, was Commonwealth Edison, which plans to appeal the Nuclear Regulatory Commission licensing board's unconditional denial last week of an operating permit for the Byron nuclear plant in Rockford, Ill. The commission cited lapses in construction quality control.

Public Service tried unsuccessfully last year to obtain approval to charge customers for construction work in progress at Marble Hill, claiming the move would save the utility and customers in the long run because it would have to borrow less money. The state Public Service Commission refused to approve the request.

Better Records Urged Farmers

By The Associated Press
North Carolina farmers, with prospects of another bleak year ahead, need to improve their record-keeping so they can cut costs and plan marketing strategy, agriculture experts say.

Dr. Chester D. Blalock, the director of the state Agricultural Extension Service, said farmers were hit by barrage of problems in 1983 as drought and other adverse weather conditions struck at the same time farmers were getting low prices for their products.

Blalock said farmers need to improve their record-keeping to try to stay ahead while also coming up with some new strategies, like the one used by Tom Bernard, a Caswell County tobacco farmer.

Bernard said he and his father switched their upland tobacco to more fertile river bottomland and invested in soil-conservation measures.

Erosion problems on their hilly upland have been overcome by planting small grain crops and grasses that feed 150 beef cattle. Bernard said they used a federal cost-sharing program for the soil-conservation improvements.

"Our yields are up, but our quality is down," Bernard said of the switch to bottomland. He said the quality is affected by brown spot and other diseases that thrive in moist conditions. But he said additional work on soil drainage could solve some of the problems.

"We continue to have ups and downs in farming, and those staying in business pay attention to the basics in good times and bad times," said Dr. R.C. Wells, an economist and assistant extension director.

Meanwhile, Joe Stoker of Alleghany County said his membership in the local Dairy Head Improvement Association had helped him with records on his dairy herd.

"I wasn't in the dairy business long when I realized it requires more records than I had imagined," Stoker said.

Again Ponder Evidence Rule

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is considering, for the second time in less than a year, whether to soften its "exclusionary rule" barring all illegally obtained evidence from criminal trials.

The court was to hear arguments today in two cases from California and Massachusetts in which it is being urged to carve out a "good faith exception" to the 70-year-old rule.

One of the most controversial of law-and-order issues, the exclusionary rule is meant to keep police conduct in check by tossing out evidence obtained in violation of someone's constitutional rights.

The rule often is blamed for letting criminals go free on technicalities.

The high court appeared close to altering the rule last spring in a closely watched case from Illinois, but the justices decided that case on another issue. "We reserve for another day the question of whether the exclusionary rule should be modified," the court said then.

After hearing today's arguments, the justices will take a tentative vote in the matter Wednesday afternoon. Announcement of the court's decision is expected by July.

The Massachusetts case perhaps offers the best illustration of how fine a line the exclusionary rule can draw.

The badly burned body of Sandra Boulware, 29, was found in a vacant lot in the Roxbury section of Boston on Aug. 5, 1979. An autopsy disclosed that the victim was severely beaten and set afire while still alive.

When police officers sought a warrant to search suspect Osborne "Jimmy" Sheppard's home the day after the murder, no suitable warrant form could be found on that Sunday afternoon.

Instead, the officers used a document for drug searches, and a judge signed it. A search of Sheppard's home turned up incriminating evidence, and it was used at his trial.

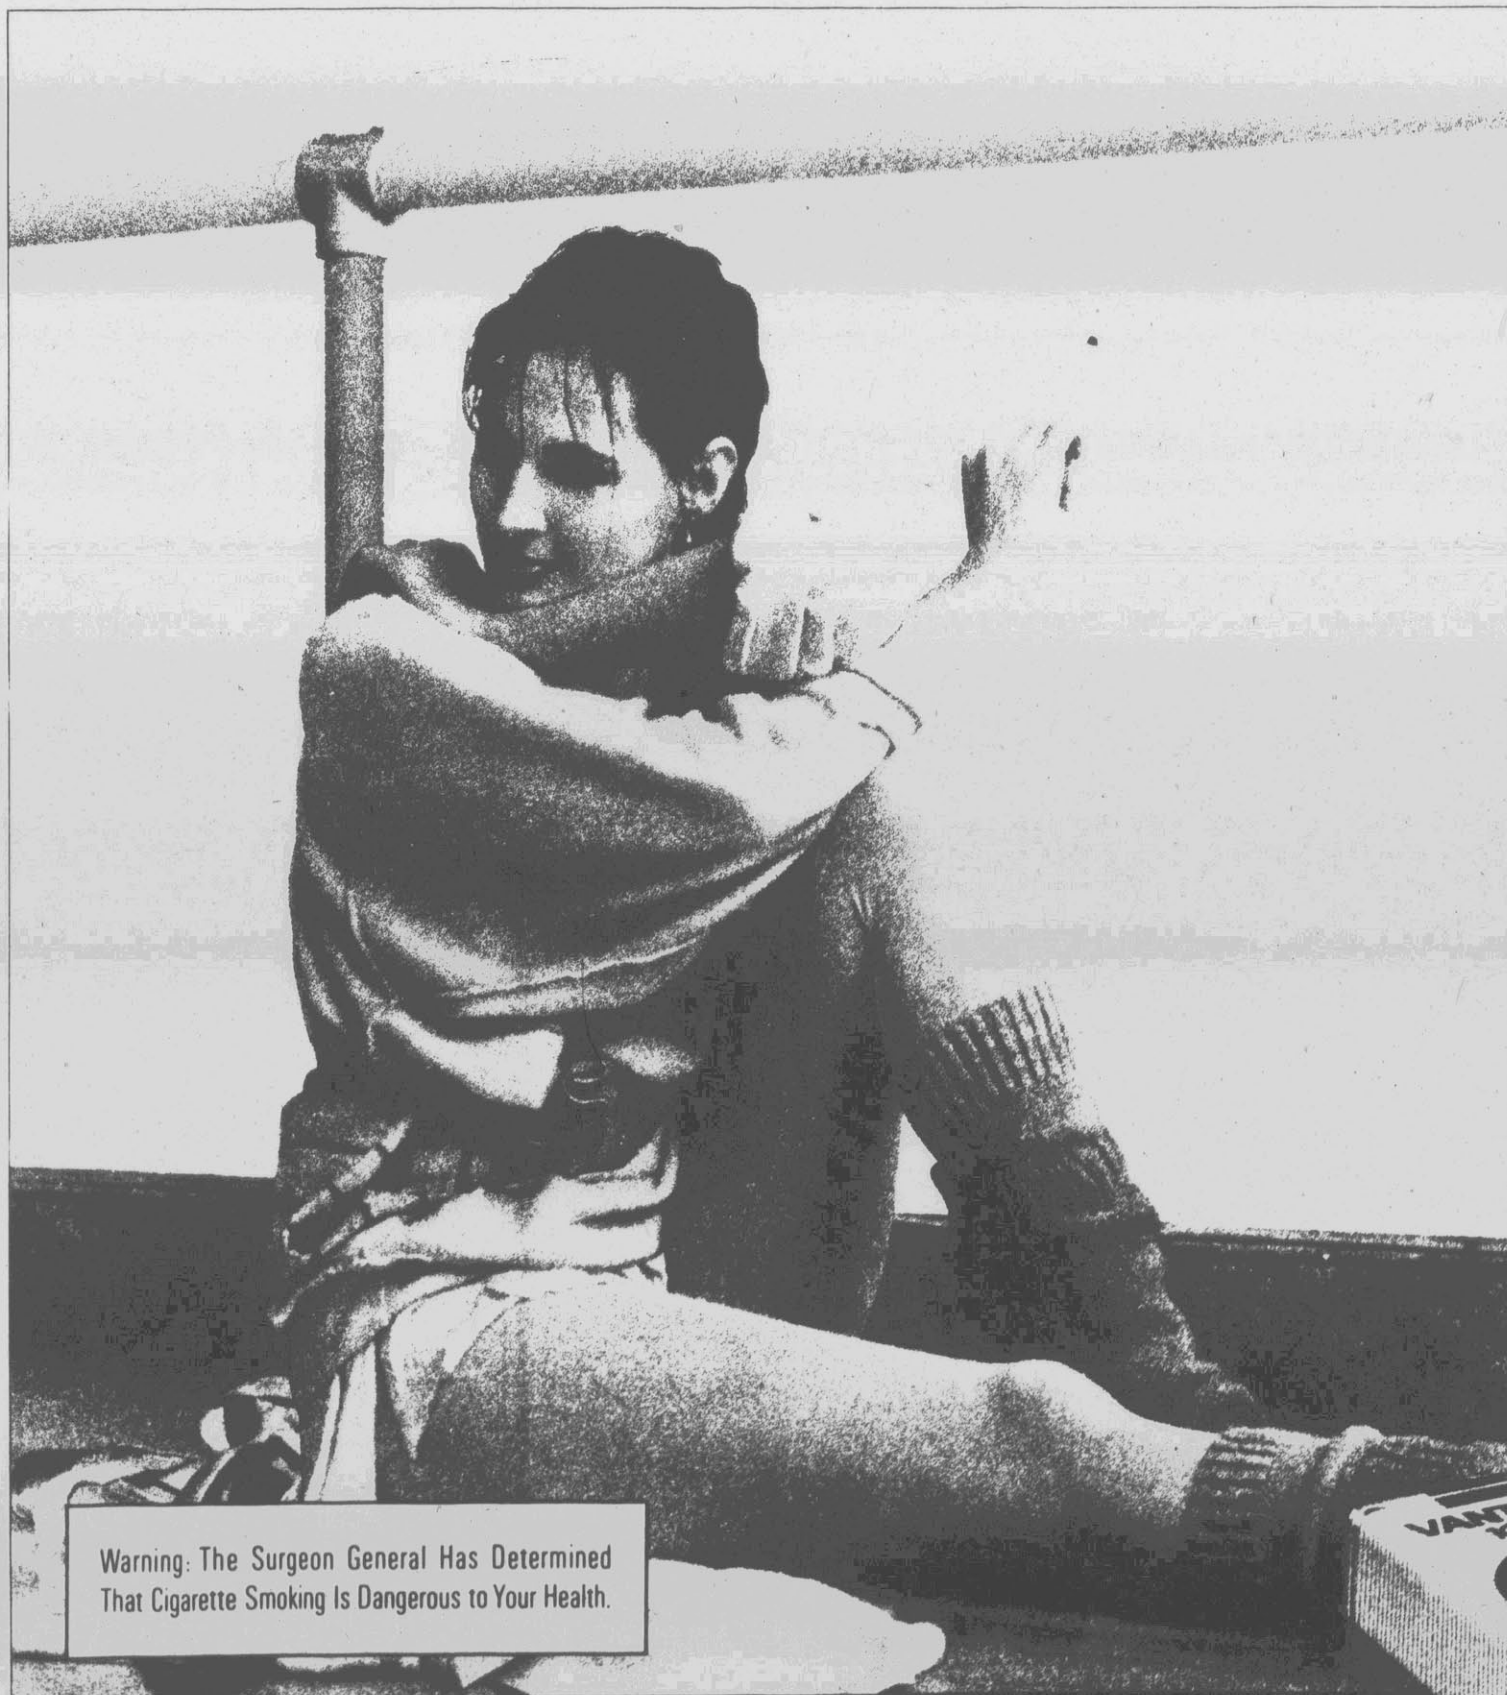

But Sheppard's murder conviction was thrown out and a new trial ordered because the warrant form only applied to searches for drugs.

The Massachusetts Supreme Court said that even though the police operated in "good faith," they conducted the search on the authority of a defective warrant.

In the California case, a federal judge disqualified as evidence some drugs seized in a police raid in Burbank prompted by a tipster's call. The judge said there was not sufficient "probable cause" to obtain a warrant so the ensuing search was unconstitutionally unreasonable.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld that ruling even though the police may have acted in "good faith."

To date, only one federal appeals court has recognized a good faith exception to the exclusionary rule — the 5th Circuit court embracing Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas.

The final weighted average is 57.95 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market tone for next week is firm and the live supply is light to moderate for a good to very good demand. NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices turned mixed today, reversing early gains, as traders looked for clues on the course of the economy and interest rates. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down 11.72 points over the previous two sessions, slipped another 2.10 to 1,265.49 at noon.

About as many stocks rose in price as fell in the midday rally on the New York Stock Exchange. The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 12 to 96.63.

Analysts said recent government reports pointing to a slowing of the economy's expansion have created confusion among traders.

Investors are awaiting a report Friday on economic growth during the final three months of last year. Last month, the government estimated fourth-quarter growth had slowed to an annual rate of 4.5 percent from 7.6 percent last summer and 9.7 percent last spring.

Moderation in the pace of economic activity, it is hoped, would lead to lower interest rates while increasing prospects for sustained growth. But analysts also said traders are concerned that a cooling off of the economy might cut into business profits.

Digital Equipment was among the day's leaders, up 1 1/4 at 87, following a 7 1/2-point spurt Monday. Last are given a second opportunity to take the test. Details on the status of textbooks at Rose High were provided by the board by Superintendent Delma Blinson. He told the board that 67 students in "world cultures, U.S. history and government classes" have been without textbooks since the beginning of the school year.

Teachers have been compensating for the lack of textbooks by lectures, hand-outs, reading assignments," Blinson explained. He noted that "textbooks for these courses are due to be on hand by January 24."

The problem, Blinson claims, "lies in the procurement of textbooks. The first problem is that the General Assembly does not budget enough funds to purchase textbooks in anticipation of actual needs. Textbooks are not purchased in advance and warehoused. The number of textbooks in each particular subject are purchased on an estimate of need basis."

When demand exceeds first purchase, Blinson said, "this creates a shortage of available textbooks."

Blinson said the ideal situation would be budgeting for textbooks at the secondary level in the same manner as that used for purchasing books for the elementary grades. Also, in funding for high school textbooks, the state budgets on the basis of $8 per book, when the average cost now amounts to $12 per book. "This, you can see," Blinson commented, "leaves a wide money gap in funds for purchasing books."

In the case of textbooks for the 67 students in world cultures without books, Blinson reported that when ordered, it was discovered that publishers of the needed books were out of stock, and had to go back to the printers for another printing to meet back demands — a time consuming proposition.

The board approved a motion by Frank Grooms that "the school administration be in a position to commit itself to contracting two positions for minority candidates in February." The resumes of the two candidates chosen will be brought to the board for action.

This action followed a report given by Martha Coffman and Joe High, two of the community members of the Affirmative Action Committee. Both praised the work that has been achieved by the committee and pointed out that the policy drawn up after 23 meetings averaging one and one-half hours each has drawn favorable response. Other systems have asked for copies of the policy for use in preparing their affirmative action guidelines.

"We feel it is a model policy," Mrs. Coffman said. "And it is economically, educationally, socially and legally defensible."

Supreme Court Rules Taping TV Shows For Private Use Is Legal

other electronics company sold the devices for the primary purpose of recording copyrighted material.

The suit was filed by Universal City Studios and Walt Disney Production. The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco ruled in October 1981 that use of the machines violated federal copyright law.

The appeals court ordered a federal judge to devise remedies to compensate for copyright infringement. But that action was postponed pending the appeal to the Supreme Court.

Justice John Paul Stevens, in his opinion for the court, said that taping television shows for viewing at a later time does not violate copyright law.

"One may search the Copyright Act in vain for any sign that the elected representatives of the millions of people who watch television every day have made it unlawful to copy a program for later viewing at home," Stevens said.

He added that "It may well be that Congress will take a fresh look at this new technology. ... But it is not our job to apply laws that have not yet been written."

The decision did not appear to rule out the possibility that motion picture producers may sue individual owners of the machines to try to prove such people are using the machines for illegitimate purposes.

For example, it might be illegal for a user to tape a motion picture and charge neighbors to see the movie.

But, as a practical matter, the industry is more likely to press its case before Congress.

Because the court's decision is an interpretation of what Congress intended when it amended federal copyright law in 1976, Congress will be free to undo the court ruling.

Stevens was joined in today's decision by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices William J. Brennan, Byron R. White and Sandra Day O'Connor.

The dissenters were Justices Harry A. Blackmun, Thurgood Marshall, Lewis F. Powell and William H. Rehnquist.

Blackmun, in his dissenting opinion, said the motion picture industry deserves to share in the profits from use of the machines to view television shows at a later time.

"Because time-lifting of the (motion picture) studios' copyrighted works involves the copying of them, the studios are entitled to share in the benefits of that new market," said Blackmun.

The case has preoccupied the high court for more than a year. It heard arguments in the dispute during the court term that ended last July but issued no ruling and did not give any reason for postponing its decision until this term.

Additional arguments were presented to the justices in October.

A New High

East Carolina University has registered the largest spring semester enrollment in its history, Registrar J. Gilbert Moore announced today.

The actual student enrollment on campus is 12,563, Moore said. This is an increase of 88 students over last year's spring semester high of 12,415.

According to Moore, it represents "a continuing gradual but steady increase" at a time when forecasts called for declining enrollments in most major colleges and universities.

ECU has sustained a slight increase in enrollment over the past five or six years and the spring semester enrollment is traditionally lower than that for the fall semester.

Moore said the ECU School of Medicine now has 221 students.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Eloise Holland Collier of Rocky Mount; a sister, Mariam Collier of Kinston; a brother, Jerry Collier of Rocky Mount, and his maternal grandfather, A.T. Holland of Nashville.

The family will receive friends from 7-9 p.m. tonight at Johnson Funeral Home, Rocky Mount. At other times the family will be at the home of his mother, Box 60, Country Club Drive.

Kept On Firing, Then Arrested
 KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — A store owner who allegedly kept firing bullets into a robber who already had collapsed has surrendered to authorities to face a charge of attempted second-degree murder. His attorney says.

Ray Verbanic, 58, was charged Monday in the Jan. 3 death of 21-year-old Nathaniel Bell, who was shot eight times after the holdup at Verbanic's liquor store. A coroner's jury ruled that Verbanic was justified in firing the fatal shot, but he should be brought to trial to determine whether the other shots were fired with intent to kill.

Verbanic's client acted in self-defense, said his lawyer, Carl E. Cornwell.

WHY FILE RETURNS EARLY?
 There are some very good reasons for you to file your 1983 tax return as soon in 1984 as you can get your information together.

To begin with, you can skip the fourth estimated tax payment due January 15 if you file your 1983 tax return and pay any balance due by January 31, 1984.

If you have a refund coming and file your return before the peak filing season which is February through June, your return should be processed in ten rather than twelve weeks, and you'll have your refund sooner.

If 1983 was an unprofitable year for your business and your tax return is going to show a "net operating loss," file as soon as possible. Then, if you paid income tax in the three prior years, your 1983 "net operating loss" can be carried back to those prior years for a tax refund. Your application for such refunds can only be made after you file the tax return for your current loss year.

If you invested in business equipment in 1983 and did not have enough tax liability to use the investment tax credit you earned, file early so you can carry back unused 1983 credit for refunds from prior years when you did pay taxes.

Filing early will allow you to decide at the beginning of 1984 whether to increase or decrease your withholding allowances. If you have a sizeable balance due or refund on your

Redskins, Raiders Game Could Be Replay

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Sunday's Super Bowl could be a not-so-instant replay of one of the National Football League season's most memorable games.

If you could pick the pairing for this centerpiece showcase based on exciting games during the season, Washington and the Los Angeles Raiders would have been strong candidates after the shootout they staged in the season's fifth week last October.

The Redskins won 37-35 in a game so full of twists and turns that it read like an Alfred Hitchcock screenplay and left both teams drained.

"One for the history books," was the way Washington quarterback Joe Theismann described it after completing 23 of 39 passes for 417 yards and three touchdowns. "It was like a heavyweight championship fight, and this one went all 15 rounds."

At halftime, Washington led 17-7, with LA's touchdown constructed on a 99-yard pass play by Jim Plunkett and Cliff Branch. On the TD, Branch pulled a hamstring, sidelining him for the rest of the game. The Raiders already were playing without running back, Marcus Allen, who was nursing a hip pointer.

When Mark Moseley kicked a field goal on Washington's first possession of the third quarter, the Redskins seemed comfortably in control, 20-7.

Suddenly, though, the Raiders recovered. Calvin Muhammad replaced Branch and caught TD passes of 35 and 22 yards from Plunkett. Then tight end Todd Christensen grabbed a 2-yard TD pitch and Greg Pruitt returned a punt 97 yards for another score.

Four touchdowns in less than 14 minutes had given Los Angeles a 35-20 lead in the fourth quarter. But just as the Raiders weren't done when they were far behind, neither was Washington, even though the clock showed just 7½ minutes to play.

Theismann brought the Redskins back, hitting Charlie Brown for an 11-yard TD and then, after Washington recovered an onside kick with 6:07 to play, Moseley kicked a 34-yard field goal.

That made it 35-30 and after the Redskins' defense forced LA to surrender the ball again, Theismann hit Joe Washington, who made a dazzling, diving catch for the 6-yard TD that won it for Washington. Theismann completed nine of 12 passes for 190 yards in the comeback and even had 33 seconds left at the end.

Raider linebacker Matt Millen shook his head at the roller-coaster nature of a game.

"I sure thought we had it," he said. "But, then, even after their last touchdown, I still thought we'd win. That's the Raider way."

In fact, they tried. The issue wasn't decided until Vernon Dean intercepted one last, desperate bomb launched by Plunkett, who had passed for four TDs and 372 yards.

The final interception was one of seven LA turnovers, ominous dark clouds for the Los Angeles offense. Two weeks later, with the turnovers and sacks mounting, Plunkett was replaced by Marc Wilson.

LA went with Wilson for three games before he suffered a broken shoulder, forcing Plunkett back to the starting lineup. For the final seven games, operating with a more controlled offense, he flourished, producing a 99.7 passing efficiency rating. Projected over a full season, that would have been good enough to lead the league.

Besides the changeover at quarterback, first to Wilson and then back to Plunkett, the Raiders have had some other changes since they last met the Redskins.

Allen and Branch, of course, are both back in working order at the running back and wide receiver slots. Vann McElroy, the free safety, and right cornerback Ted Watts also were banged up then but are healthy now. Watts has since been replaced in the lineup by Mike Haynes, a six-time Pro Bowl selection, whose status in a disputed trade was clouded when the first game was played.

The Redskins are essentially the same team LA played in October. After considerable shifting in the secondary, Washington settled on a unit of Darrell Green and Anthony Washington at the corners and Ken Coffey and Mark Murphy at the safeties. Only Murphy was set the first time they played.

Will the Super Bowl be as good as the first meeting between these teams?

"You can expect a war," said Raider defensive end Lyle Alzado, "because it was a war the first time."

Wildcats Slip In Polls

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a landslide vote for No. 1 North Carolina. But for Kentucky and five other Top Ten teams in the weekly Associated Press college basketball poll, it was a case of mild slippage.

The 12-0 Tar Heels, who last week knocked off a pair of Atlantic Coast Conference rivals (No. 5 Maryland 74-62 and No. 12 Wake Forest 70-62), were rewarded with all 62 first-place votes and 1240 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The point system is based on 20 votes for first place, 19 for second, etc.

Conference play provided several surprises this week, yet nobody could have been more surprised than previously second-ranked Kentucky. The Wildcats, 12-1, were trounced by unranked Auburn 82-63 last Friday, so they become the new No. 3 team, exchanging places with DePaul.

The undefeated Blue Demons, who edged St. Mary's, Calif., but crushed Alabama-Birmingham, also improved their homecourt record to 99-3 since the late 1970s. DePaul, 11-0, received 1160 points.

Georgetown, 13-2, which was upset by Big East rival Villanova 65-63 in double overtime, and Maryland, 11-2, each dropped two places to Nos. 6 and 7, respectively.

The new fourth- and fifth-ranked teams are from Texas: Houston, now 16-2, and undefeated Texas-El Paso each climbed three notches, respectively. The Miners, 14-0, are one of four NCAA Division I teams still unbeaten.

Nevada-Las Vegas, 14-1, continued its steady climb in the poll to No. 8, while UCLA, 10-2, which lost to Pac 10 rival Oregon 62-51, fell three places to No. 9.

Rounding out the Top Ten is Illinois, 12-2, which lost to Indiana in overtime 73-68, but beat Ohio State 55-53.

The lone team to drop out of this week's Top 20 was Georgia, previously ranked No. 15. The lone newcomer is Big 10-leading Purdue, which re-entered the poll at No. 19.

The biggest improvement was shown by undefeated Tulsa, 15-0, which entered the poll last week at No. 20 last week and is now No. 13.

At No. 11 is Oregon State while Wake Forest remained at No. 12.

St. John's became the fifth team in last week's Top 10 to slide. After losing to No. 16 Boston College 69-67, in Big East play, the Redmen dropped four places to No. 14. Also dropping four places was Louisiana State, now No. 15. St. John's lost again Monday night, 63-61 to Pitt in overtime, while LSU overwhelmed U.S. International 104-66.

Rounding out the Second Ten are Fresno State, No. 17; Memphis State, No. 18, and Oklahoma, No. 20.

Branch Anxious For Rematch Against Redskins In Tampa

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The last time the Washington Redskins saw Cliff Branch, it was from behind. The speedy Los Angeles wide receiver is anxious to give them another look from that direction.

"I can't wait for Sunday to get here," said Branch on Monday, after the Raiders had arrived at this site of Super Bowl XVIII. "I think Washington is vulnerable in the secondary. I'm healthy, I'm ready."

Branch, who is completing his 12th National Football League season, was on the receiving end of a 99-yard touchdown pass play during the Redskins' wild 37-35 victory over the Raiders on Oct. 2 in Washington.

The play came in the second quarter, cutting Washington's lead at the time to 10-7. While it was a big play for the Raiders, it also was a big play for the Redskins since Branch suffered a hamstring injury on the play and had to sit out the rest of the game.

"I missed the next five games, too," recalled Branch, who holds the NFL record for receiving yardage in postseason play with 1,195 yards in 20 games. "I'm just glad I didn't have to undergo a knife (surgery)."

On Sunday, Branch will be in the starting lineup for a third time in Super Bowl competition. He believes he'll be a member of the winning team a third time.

"This is what you go to training camp for," said Branch, who helped the Raiders trounce Minnesota 32-14 in Super Bowl XI and whip Philadelphia 27-10 in Super Bowl XV. "We're ready, no question about it."

"There's a lot riding on this game. We want to be world champions. We can't let these guys win it two years in a row, no way."

The Redskins, 16-2, topped Miami 27-17 in Super Bowl XVII last Jan. 30 and are favored by three points over the Raiders, 14-4.

"We want to play the Redskins," said Branch. "It's fitting that we're playing them. We think we owe them something."

"They won't have the home field advantage and their fans this time," he added. "We're on neutral turf now."

Branch, a 5-foot-11, 170-pounder, was asked if the Raiders planned to pick on any particular member of the Washington secondary.

"We're just going to attack, period," he said. "We don't try to pick on one individual or one side of the field. We'll put the ball in the air. We'll go deep. We're just going to play Raider football."

Branch smiled when he talked about what he called Raider football.

"We're not America's team, that's for sure," he said. "We're a very intimidating team and we do a lot of talking. We like that. It's part of the Raiders' image. We are winners."

Will the Redskins be intimidated?

"I can't really say," he replied. "They probably figure they're intimidating and physical, too."

Branch feels that though the current Raiders team is very good, he played on a better one seven years ago.

"I thought the best team was the 1976 team, it lost only one game (while winning 16, including the Super Bowl)," he said. "In 1980, we had a lot of character."

"This team is a lot different. We have a great defense. (Running back) Marcus Allen is a triple threat for us, and he didn't play against the Redskins last time (because of a hip injury). And we're hungry."

Fans Greet Skins At Tampa Airport

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Flowers and saddle bags, John Riggins and the Washington Redskins are in Florida and ready for Super Bowl XVIII Sunday against the Los Angeles Raiders.

The defending National Football League champions' arrival here Monday night was witnessed by more than 400 fans who cheered and serenaded their favorites with Washington's fight song, "Hail To The Redskins."

The largest cheers were reserved for quarterback Joe Theismann and Riggins, the latter dressed with a military flight jacket, an ascot, a red flower and motorcycle saddle bags draped over his shoulder.

"We are here and ready for the Raiders," said Redskin defensive end Dexter Manley.

"It's wonderful to get to Tampa and get down to business," said Theismann.

The team worked out Monday in Washington after snow was cleared from its practice field. The snow also delayed the team's flight by 45 minutes.

Redskin Coach Joe Gibbs, taking note of the weather the team left behind, echoed Theismann's sentiments.

"The players had a lot of zip at practice today. I think they were ready to leave town. It's great to be in Tampa. This is the exciting time for us," he said.

The game holds extra meaning for Gibbs, who served as an assistant coach here under John McKay of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

"To come back as a head coach in the Super Bowl before all of my friends is special," Gibbs said. "It's a dream come true."

The Redskins-Raiders meeting in Tampa Stadium will serve as a rematch of a foul-plagued game the two teams played earlier this year, which the Redskins won, 37-35.

"I'm looking forward to playing them again," said Manley. "It's my type of game, brute strength against brute strength."

Pitt Tops St. John's In Overtime

By The Associated Press
Unranked Pittsburgh is an unheralded team trying to establish its credentials, a fact that 14th-ranked St. John's learned the hard way.

The Panthers led St. John's by as many as 10 points in the first half and nine in the second half, then held on in overtime to beat the Redmen 63-61 Monday night.

"Our kids persevered," said Pitt Coach Roy Chipman. "The kids played so hard, they just decided they weren't going to lose the game."

Billy Culbertson missed two shots in the final nine seconds of regulation, but atoned for the misses by twice sinking one of two free throws in the final 16 seconds of overtime to seal Pitt's first victory in four Big East games this season.

Coach Lou Carnesecca's Redmen, who fell from 10th in the rankings last week after losing to No. 16 Boston College Saturday, took a 59-57 lead in the overtime. But Ron Stewart and Mike Moses both missed 1-and-1 free throw opportunities and Pitt's Chip Watkins tied the score at 59-59 with a pair of free throws with 1:54 remaining.

St. John's then turned the ball over on a five-second violation and Williams followed up a missed Culbertson shot to give Pitt the lead for good at 61-59.

St. John's, now 11-3, had a chance to pull out the victory with five seconds remaining when Watkins was unable to inbound the ball. But Willie Glass, frantically trying to get off a shot, lost the ball in a crowd around the basket and Culbertson was fouled.

He then made one of two free throws with two seconds remaining as the Panthers beat the Redmen in Pittsburgh for the second season in a row.

At Baton Rouge, LSU, 10-3, overwhelmed USI's 2-22 Gulls. Freshman center Nikita Wilson scored 17 points and reserve center Don Redden added 15.

LSU jumped out to a 12-5 lead in the first 3½ minutes and U.S. International never got closer than five points thereafter. All 14 LSU players got into the scoring column, while Brett Crawford led USI with 20 points, 16 on free throws.

Four USI players fouled out, leaving the Gulls, who lost their seventh straight game, without any reserves at the end.

Georgia, which was ranked 15th last week but fell out of the ratings, tipped Mississippi State 54-52 to raise its season record to 11-3.

Mississippi State trailed by as many as eight points in the second half, but tied the game at 52-52 when Chauncey Robinson hit a layup with 4:25 left followed with another basket after taking down the rebound of a missed shot with 37 seconds to go.

Joe Ward then pumped in a wobbly, off-balance eight-foot jumper with just two seconds remaining to give Georgia the road victory.

Tech Wins As Coach Moans

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech won its 11th game of the season, defeating Augusta College by 18 points. But Coach Bobby Cremins called it "a nightmare and a disappointment."

Cremins said he felt Tech's play in the Monday night college basketball game was sloppy and below the team's par.

"We just got a little complacent, I was overconfident," Cremins said after the 75-57 victory. "I thought the team was mature and was just going to go out there and take care of business."

"We just weren't able to do it."

Tech was led by center Yvon Joseph, who scored 26 points and grabbed 11 rebounds despite playing with a sore shoulder.

Joseph said the absence of injured reserve center Tim Harvey meant he had to put forth the extra effort.

"We didn't have the big men," he said. "I felt I had to shoot a lot, I had to go to the boards to get the ball, I had to be strong inside."

The Yellow Jackets led Monday night from the opening moments. Tech scored the first six points and built leads of up to 10 points in the first half, which ended with the score 34-27.

Tech, 11-2, took advantage of the Jaguars' poor shooting and expanded the lead in the second half to as much as 20 points.

Augusta's Jay Jahn, who has been averaging 28 points per game, made only one field goal and was held to six points. As a team, the Jaguars hit 26 of 72 shots from the floor.

"Tech forced us into many mistakes," said Augusta Coach Marvin Vanover. "They did an excellent defensive job on Jahn; they're an impressive defensive team."

Mark Price added 14 points and Bruce Dalrymple 13 for Georgia Tech.

The Jaguars, 6-7, were led by center David Gray with 11 points and 10 rebounds.

Noting that Monday's game came one day after Tech defeated defending national champions North Carolina State in an Atlantic Coast Conference game, Cremins said: "I think we all got caught up in everybody telling us how good we are. I do everything possible not to get caught up in that, but we do."

In action tonight in the ACC, Duke, 14-2 and 1-1, travels to Wake Forest, 11-2 and 0-2, while Clemson, 11-2 and 2-0, is at Maryland, 11-2 and 2-1.

John, Martina Net Champs

LONDON (AP) — Americans John McEnroe and Martina Navratilova were named today as the world tennis champions of 1983 by the International Tennis Federation.

They will be presented with their trophies at a dinner in Paris during the French Open Championships, which begin May 28.

The champions were chosen by a committee of three former Wimbledon champions, but McEnroe was not a unanimous choice.

Fred Perry and Donald Budge voted for him, before he had won the Volvo Masters title in New York last Sunday. But Lew Hoad, the third member of the panel, favored Swede Mats Wilander.

A statement from Budge, who coordinated the voting, said: "After lengthy consideration we felt that McEnroe should get the verdict for three reasons. Both of us are convinced that for all the progress Wilander has made over the last 12 months, McEnroe remains the most excitingly talented competitor in the game today."

"In addition, McEnroe won Wimbledon, which most people including the players regard as the biggest and most important tournament in the world."

"Just how close it was for us to decide is reflected by the fact that for the first time our verdict was not a unanimous one. Lew agrees that McEnroe is the best player, but felt that he must vote for Wilander on his overall record and the fact that he beat McEnroe three times on three different surfaces during the year."

Wilander lost his French Open title, losing to Yannick Noah of France in the final, but he beat Ivan Lendl to win the Australian Open for the first time.

Navratilova, the 1983 Associated Press Female Athlete of the Year, is the controlling force in women's tennis, having lost just two matches in the last year.

Chocowinity's Boys, Girls Ride Wave Of Success In Basketball

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Staff Writer

CHOCOWINITY — Riding a wave of success, Chocowinity High School seems to be enjoying the top of the heap in the Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference basketball standings, as both the boys and girls squads hold 7-1 league marks.

The Indians are a veteran tribe, with four seniors in the starting rotation. Only 6-3 sophomore center Henry Harris cracks the first five as an underclassman.

Melvin Tripp is Chocowinity's diminutive point guard at 5-7, while Reggie Ross excels as the shooting guard. Tripp won the point guard position from Ty Moore, who held the slot at the start of the season. But Chocowinity Coach DeWayne Kellum said Tripp is "still weak at the point, but he's coming along."

"Big" forward Mark Smith, 6-1, and small forward Terry Moore join Harris on the front line of the team which has posted an 8-4 overall mark.

"That would be a small lineup even in 1-A basketball," Kellum said. "But that's been the key to our success. We like to control the tempo of the game."

Ross has been the Indians' scoring leader from the outset of the season averaging nearly 20 points an outing, including 34 against 3-A West Craven in the Washington Daily News Christmas Tournament.

"He's our everything .nan," Kellum said. "He can handle the ball when we're against a pressure defense; he leads the attack on our fast break."

Mark Smith saw some action for us last year, and he's a big key to our inside game. But he can hit from 15 to 20 feet out consistently.

"Harris is young, but he's getting better as the season progresses. He's a good leaper, so we're going to need him against bigger teams. Terry Moore was off a little before Christmas. We need him to balance the scoring, and we need him to go to the boards — he's got to help us down low."

The Indians get support from 5-8 Roy Hooker, their "utility" player, and 6-2 senior Kevin Tyree.

"Roy Hooker is a real strong player; he goes in for anybody," Kellum said. "He's a good offensive rebounder but not a good shooter from outside, yet."

Tyree would be playing more, but he tore ligaments in his ankle before Christmas, and that's a slow process of coming back."

Kellum cites the Indians' 65-59 win at Mattamuskeet as one of their biggest of the year, but remains cautious about the remainder of the schedule.

"We broke a long home winning streak at Mattamuskeet," Kellum said. "Things have molded together for this team faster than we thought, but everybody in the conference is big competition this year. It's a lot closer than it's been in a long time; there's nobody you can take a rest on this year."

"We've got a chance to go all the way if they want to. I'm glad that they're not letting non-conference losses bother them."

For the Lady Indians, first place is nothing new — nor is sharing that slot with Belhaven Wilkerson. Chocowinity finished the 1980-81 season as the North Carolina champions with an unblemished 29-0 record.

Four starters graduated from that unit. But after some early-season lumps, the 1981-82 team posted a 24-5 mark and finished as runner-up at the state tournament.

Senior forward Wendy Elks leads the 1983-84 Chocowinity team, averaging 13 points per game. Junior forward Kim Green, 5-9, and 5-10 senior center Rhonda Mizelle round out the front line for the Lady Tribe.

Junior point guard Cynthia Gibbs and senior Wanda Congleton start in the Chocowinity backcourt.

Junior Vina Warren comes off the bench at either forward or guard, while Twanda Gerald adds relief on the baseline.

"Gibbs was more or less pressed into the point guard role," Indians' Coach Larry Knox said. "She has good size; at 5-8, she's bigger than most other guards but still quick enough for the position."

"Green and Elks are natural athletes, and Congleton has worked hard at it, as well."

After losing the opening game of the season at Dixon, the Lady Indians won seven in a row before losing at home against Tobacco Belt rival Bath. Even with the loss, Knox remains optimistic about his team's future.

"We lost to Bath by 10 points," Knox said. "But we fouled a lot at the end, and they made them. The game was closer than the margin indicates, but we didn't really play."

"We're a fast break team, and I like to press full court. We force the ball to the side and trap it there. But we'll play man-to-man in order to force the tempo."

Last year's squad posted a 19-5 record, losing in the first round of the state tournament to eventual champion North Carolina School for the Deaf. This year, the Lady Indians "can go all the way," according to their coach.

"This team has the possibility to win the state championship," Knox said, "and I don't think I'm going out on a limb saying so. I've been instilling in them the idea that they can go as far as they are willing to work for. This is not the best group I've had here because I've had a state championship team, but they have the potential to equal the best."

Skins 'Invite To A Mugging' By Raiders

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Officially it's Super Bowl XVIII, pro football's great spectacular, but to the defending champion Washington Redskins it's like being invited to a mugging.

Joe Theismann, the Redskins' MVP quarterback, insists that part of his preparation has been nightly strolls through the toughest sections of the nation's capital "to get myself mentally in a frame of mind to get beat up."

Theismann's concern is for his Sunday opponents, the Los Angeles Raiders, who pride themselves in being the toughest, roughest, meanest scoundrels on either side of the Great Divide.

Their reputation precedes them. They are the "Intimidators," the renegades, the black hats, the unwanted and unloved, eager to get even with the world.

They revel in the role model in which they have been cast. They inherited it back in the 1960s in the era of the Ben Davidsons, Dan Birdwells, George Atkinsons and Jack "I Was a Paid Assassin" Tatum. It's an image they not only are of no mind to change but wish to embellish.

They break your jaw with an elbow. They knock you down, step on your face with a cleated shoe and then pivot.

They are proud of being the game's bully, the roughneck who'll bust up the saloon at the toss of a coin. Their greatest admirers are the Hell's Angels, who zoom up on motorcycles to watch practice.

Coach Tom Flores and quarterback Jim Plunkett are both rather mild-mannered exceptions to the Raiders' norm but neither seems eager to disavow the Raiders' legacy.

Asked at a team meeting how he controlled his demons, Flores, tongue in cheek, said, "I throw in a piece of raw meat and exit real fast." When he dares reenter the lockerroom, he adds, "I usually have a guy in back with a machine gun and some guys on the sides with whips."

Plunkett, a former Heisman Trophy winner discarded by New England and San Francisco and twice benched by the Raiders, paints a graphic picture of his teammates in his autobiography.

"These guys are crazy!" he writes.

"The Raiders frequent bars — the kind you drink in and the kind they lock you up behind. When I came to Oakland it wasn't a typical day if someone wasn't arrested or the police didn't call up looking for a player. The Raiders ran their own missing persons bureau."

He recalled that Warren Wells ran pass patterns with an attempted rape charge over his head and later went to jail, John Matuszak once spent time in a straightjacket after police found a .44 pistol and bayonet in his car and Marv Hubbard reveled in bar fights.

"Al Davis's history is that of finding society's incorrigibles and dressing them in football uniforms," Plunkett added in his book.

Davis runs the franchise, a maverick who defies the establishment and strides the sidelines in a black leather jacket dark glasses, looking like a Darth Vader.

Even the Raiders' logo is characteristic — a black shield showing the head of a pirate with an eyepatch and two crossed swords.

The Raiders gained their reputation as brigands in the 1960s when their home base was Oakland. They had a giant named Ben Davidson, who flaunted a handlebar mustache; a fierce but lovable odd ball named Dan Birdwell plus the crushing George Atkinson and the ferocious Jack Tatum.

In 1967 Davidson broke Joe Namath's jaw. When friends asked what happened, Namath replied, "I ran into a tough piece of meat." Tatum paralyzed Darryl Stingley with a vicious hit and later wrote a book in which he said such violence was a mandate of the sport.

Birdwell's wife is said to have refused to let him play with the kids when he got home because he couldn't restrain his natural roughness.

Al Davis has built the Raiders' roster year after year with bullies, castoffs and malcontents. They include Ted Hendricks, a 6-7, 235-pound linebacker, discarded by Baltimore and Green Bay; kick returner Greg Pruitt, a washout at Cleveland; "killer free safety" Burgess Owens of the New York Jets and linebacker Lyle Alzado, a fugitive from Denver and Cleveland.

Alzado, a clean hitter, is the most intimidating of the present Raiders — a bearded, brutish giant of 6-3 and 260 pounds, who earned his chevrons in the stabbings, street fighting and poverty of a Brooklyn ghetto.

They're strong and mean, these Raiders, but when you call them that, smile.

Junior High Basketball

Greenville Christian swept a pair of junior high basketball games from Tarboro-Edgecombe Academy, with the girls winning 33-16 and the boys 43-10.

Page Bragg led the GCA girls with nine points, while Mary Hyman paced TEA with five.

In the boys contest, Brad Dixon fired in 15 for Greenville Christian, and Chris Galley led TEA with four.

GCA will be in action again January 26 at home against Wake Christian.

GRIMESLAND — Shelton Boyd pumped in 12 points to lead G.R. Whitfield to a 36-26 victory over Bethel Monday in junior basketball action, while the Bethel girls won 24-12.

Jenkins led the Bethel girls with nine points, while Susan Manning, Laurie Boyd and Mildred Pollard had four for Whitfield.

Whitfield plays at Wellcome Middle School Thursday.

By The Associated Press
Navy demolitions expert Bill Renton blasted his own American course record and leads going the second half of the U.S. Olympic Team four-man bobsled trials at Lake Placid, N.Y.

The sailor from Norfolk, Va., had runs Monday of 59.34 seconds and 1:00.09.

Renton, the first driver on the track on Monday, set the previous American course record of 59.43 seconds last January. Ekkehard Fasser of Switzerland holds the all-comers record of 58.99 seconds on Mount Van Hoebenberg, set on Feb. 27, 1983.

The first driver ever to record a sub-one-minute single heat on the 16-curve chute, considered the world's fastest and most dangerous, was Meinhard Nehmer of East Germany at 59.86 during the 1980 Winter Olympics.

In second place entering today's final heats was 32-year-old Brent Rushlaw of Saranac Lake, N.Y., the only driver to post consecutive sub-one-minute times — 59.69 and 59.86.

Renton's 1:59.43-second combined time left him 12-hundredths of a second ahead of Rushlaw.

Renton and his teammates, Bob Kaufman and Steve Alexander of Houston and Carl Flanagan of Virginia Beach, Va., put together a 4.94-second push in the first 50 meters. The push is considered essential to a good time because it provides early momentum.

American Steve Mahre won a World Cup slalom ski race in Parpan, Switzerland Monday, but was then disqualified because he was wearing the number of his twin brother, Phil.

Steve Mahre, who accidentally wore his brother's number, won both runs of the race, finishing with a combined time of 1:46.90. Phil, who finished sixth in 1:48.13, also was disqualified for wearing Steve's number.

Marc Girardelli of Luxembourg was declared the slalom winner with a time of 1:47.19. It was his second World Cup victory.

The National Figure Skating Championships begin today in Salt Lake City with more than 200 skaters set to compete in novice, junior and championship events in men's and women's, pairs and ice dancing.

Organizers also said that 1,220 men and 360 women so far have sent in registration forms. The total of 1,580 athletes also is the largest number ever recorded for the Winter Games. The previous record was set in Grenoble, France, where 1,359 athletes took part in 1968.

Some 200,000 tickets to the Winter Games have been earmarked for sale abroad, while 400,000 are being sold in Yugoslavia. Most are being offered in group sales, with organizers saying only a small number of tickets will be offered individually prior to the events.

A.G. Cox of Winterville took a pair of junior high school basketball games from Wellcome yesterday.

Cox won the girls' game, 38-31. Stephanie Smith led Cox with 20 points while Lisa Haddock added 16. Gwen Pilgreen had 15 and Keisha Pilgreen added 14.

Cox' girls are now 4-0 while Wellcome is 3-1.

In the boys' game, Cox took a 44-34 victory. M. Best led Cox with 17 points, while Ashley Sheppard led Wellcome with 17.

Wake Aide Joins Bengal Grid Staff

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Wake Forest assistant football coach Bill Urbanik has been named defensive line coach for the Cincinnati Bengals of the National Football League, school officials have announced.

Urbanik, a Wake Forest assistant the last six years, was in Cincinnati on Monday to finalize his agreement to join the Bengals and first-year coach Sam Wyche.

"Only 28 men in America are privileged to be defensive line coaches in the NFL, and Bill Urbanik's opportunity to join this elite group only makes apparent to everyone what we here at Wake Forest have known the past six years — that he is an outstanding coach," Wake Forest head coach Al Groh said Monday in announcing Urbanik's departure.

The top three in each of the championship competitions will close in on berths on the U.S. team bound for the Winter Olympics in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia.

Olympic organizers in Sarajevo said Mexico has become the 47th country to register for the Games, making it the largest number of countries ever to participate in the Winter Games — nine more than competed in Lake Placid four years ago.

Music Awards Night Is Michael Jackson Salute

THRILLING — Singer Diana Ross rushes to embrace Michael Jackson after Jackson was honored with a special Award of Merit by industry

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Jackson, whose "Thriller" album started and ended 1983 atop the national charts, won eight awards for an unprecedented triumph at the 11th annual American Music Awards ceremony. Jackson's sweep Monday night included pop and soul album honors for "Thriller," favorite male pop and soul vocalist, pop and soul video awards for "Beat It" and colleagues Monday night during the American Music Awards. Looking on is fellow entertainer Kenny Rogers. (AP Laserphoto)

favorite pop single for "Billie Jean." The only other multiple award winner was country quartet Alabama, which took favorite country group, favorite country album for "The Closer You Get" and favorite country video for "Dixieland Delight." But as Alabama's Teddy Gentry put it, "I don't think anybody can compare to Michael Jackson. He's had a year that most artists can only dream of."

STILL COUNTRY FAVORITES — Members of the country rock group "Alabama" acknowledge the audience Monday night after being honored as favorite country group during the 11th annual American Music Awards. (AP Laserphoto)

In addition to the seven regular awards, the 25-year-old Jackson became the youngest-ever recipient of the special Award of Merit, which honored his career contributions to musical entertainment.

Presentation of that award was preceded by tributes from Yul Brynner, who described Jackson's presence as "like an explosion"; Diana Ross, who termed Jackson "a dream in motion"; and Jane Fonda, who called the singer-songwriter-dancer-producer "a miracle."

Jackson went into the awards with 10 nominations in eight categories, and his stranglehold was broken only by Lionel Richie, the host of the two-hour ceremony televised by ABC. Richie took soul single honors for his number-one hit "All Night Long," and was clearly surprised.

"Unbelievable," Richie said on winning the award. He later told reporters backstage at the Shrine Auditorium that Jackson's honors were "long overdue." Jackson had won five American Music Awards in previous years.

Jackson accepted his plexiglass, pyramid-shaped trophies with thanks to a long list of people including "Thriller" co-producer Quincy Jones, his parents "who brought me into the world," disc jockeys "who played the records," the American public and "the girls in the balcony."

"I just hope I didn't leave anybody out," Jackson said earnestly in accepting one of the later awards of the night.

Clad in a red sequined military-style jacket, a single black sequined glove and aviator sunglasses, Jackson came backstage briefly to pose for photographers with his date, actress-model Brooke Shields, who topped him by several inches. But the singer, who has a reputation for being as shy offstage as he is electrifying onstage, declined interviews.

Other winners in pop categories were Daryl Hall & John Oates as favorite group for the second straight year, and Pat Benatar, who picked up favorite female vocalist honors, an award she won two years ago.

Barbara Mandrell, winning her fourth straight favorite female country vocalist award, also paid tribute to Jackson, saying he was an entertainer "my children can look up to." Male country vocal honors went to an absent Willie Nelson, his fifth American Music Award.

Kenny Rogers and Dolly Parton shared the country single trophy for "Islands In The Stream," Rogers' 13th American Music Award and Miss Parton's second.

Rounding out the soul winners were Aretha

Franklin with her third female vocalist prize and her fourth award, and Gladys Knight & The Pips, who picked up their third favorite group award, their fifth American Music Award.

Nominees for the awards were determined by year-end charts of major record industry trade publications. Winners were picked by a survey of 20,000 representative members of the U.S. record-buying public.

Philip Roth's Story Dramatized For Public Television Tonight

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "The Ghost Writer" tonight on public television is a remarkable adaptation of Philip Roth's novel about a writer who believes he has met a living Anne Frank — the Dutch girl who lived hidden with her family for months before dying in a Nazi concentration camp — in a farmhouse in rural New England.

Beautifully cast and meticulously staged, the 90-minute "American Playhouse" production is evidence that television can dramatize an exquisite and complicated work of literature with feeling and a light touch.

Indeed, Roth's own involvement in the production — he gets credit for the adaptation, along with Tristram Powell, the director — may have ensured a faithful translation to the small screen. Roth agreed to work on the script after two earlier drafts were rejected.

The dialogue is drawn from the book, and the consequence is an occasional lapse into conversation probably more easily read than overheard. Segments of the novel, published in 1979, are skipped over altogether, though the story itself is not altered for the sake of the script.

Each scene is carefully framed, with a good deal of attention to background and shadow.

Mark Linn-Baker, who plays Roth's hero, Nathan Zuckerman, is simply outstanding, and Powell's decision to cast a relative unknown, Paulette Smit, as Amy Bellette, the dark-haired young woman Zuckerman believes is Anne Frank, was truly inspired.

Roth, who was not involved in casting that part, says of Miss Smit in an article in the current issue of TV Guide magazine:

"I was impressed first by the softly Semitic features that did somehow recall ... the childhood photos of Anne Frank, and then by the actress' simple sincerity, a candid, unspoiled style that could well have made her the unknown object of Zuckerman's passionate obsession."

The dark-haired Miss Smit, who was born in Curacao, lists "Homecoming" and "Firepower" among her motion picture credits. Linn-Baker appeared in "My Favorite Year" with Peter O'Toole and in Woody Allen's "Manhattan." He currently is featured in the Broadway musical "Dooonesbury."

"The Ghost Writer" was the first in a trilogy of novels with Nathan Zuckerman as the central figure. "Zuckerman Unbound" was published in 1981, and "The Anatomy Lesson" last November.

The "American Playhouse" dramatization is set two decades ago. Zuckerman has angered his parents with a story based on a dispute over money involving two relatives.

The elder Zuckermans seek the help of a trusted family friend, Judge Leopold Wapner, who writes to Nathan suggesting that he re-read "The Diary of Anne Frank," the journal kept by the teen-ager while she and her family were hiding from the Nazis in a concealed Amsterdam apartment.

The judge suggests, though does not say, that the book and the contemporary Broadway production of "The Diary of Anne Frank" might help young Zuckerman appreciate his Jewish heritage.

"Do you practice Judaism?" the judge asks Nathan in a "questionnaire" accompanying his letter. "If so, how? If not, what credentials qualify you for writing about Jewish life in national magazines?"

Nathan, seeking support — "moral sponsorship" — for his work, is invited to the home of E.I. Lonoff (Sam Wanamaker), a reclusive writer whom Zuckerman admires. Lonoff lives in the hills of western Massachusetts with his wife of 35 years, Hope (Claire Bloom), and teaches one day a week at nearby Athene College.

Miss Bellette, a former student, is there when Nathan arrives, helping Lonoff organize his papers.

Miss Bellette does — in Zuckerman's mind, anyway — resemble the girl whose countenance has come to symbolize courage in the face of anti-Semitism, and her slight accent is, indeed, suggestive. "If A.B. was A.F.," he reasons, "as I thought she was, or was ..."

"American Playhouse," entering its third season, continues Jan. 24 with Ken Howard in "Pudd'nhead Wilson," based on the book by Mark Twain, and Jan. 31 with Sam Shepard's stage play, "True West."

McCartneys Cut Vacation

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — Former Beatle Paul McCartney and his wife, Linda, decided to cut short their vacation in Barbados and return to London after being fined $100 for marijuana possession.

The pair pleaded guilty on Monday, after police acted on a tip and raided their luxurious, five-bedroom villa Sunday night, authorities said.

In court, a police officer testified that the 41-year-old McCartney was found with 10 grams of marijuana and his wife with seven grams.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — DID CHIEF MEDIEVAL LETTER CARRIERS HAVE COATS OF MAIL?
 Today's Cryptiquip clue: I equals F.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

 Opening lead: Four of ♠.

Don't lose your concentration just because a contract looks simple. Distribution can play strange tricks. This hand, dealt in a recent team match, proves our point.

Because of his distribution, North probed for a major-suit fit. When South denied four cards in a major, North chose the no trump game since he felt that nine tricks would be easier to come by than the 11 required for five clubs.

At both tables, the opening lead was a low heart. East covered the queen with the king and South won the ace. At one table declarer saw no problem. He led a club to the jack. East won the ace and returned a heart. Declarer finessed the nine, West won the ten and forced out declarer's remaining stopper.

Only when West showed out on the next club did declarer begin to realize his predicament. Now his only hope for the contract was that West had started with six hearts and East had the ace of spades. But that was not the case, and declarer ended up with only seven tricks.

The second declarer foresaw the possibility of a 4-1 club break. To guard against that, he crossed to the ten of diamonds at trick two and led a club to his king. East was forced to play, and declarer did not mind if West won the ace, because his heart tenace could not be attacked from that side.

When the king of clubs held, declarer crossed back to the table with the king of diamonds and now led a spade to his queen. Again, East could not rise with the ace without setting up the rest of the suit for declarer, and again declarer did not mind if West gained the lead with the ace.

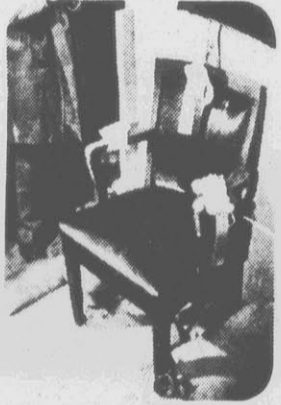

The spade trick brought declarer's bag to eight tricks — four diamonds, two hearts and one in each black suit. It was now a simple matter to lead another club and set up the ninth trick in that suit. The defenders were powerless to prevent declarer from fulfilling his contract.

Plan Visits To African Nations

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's Crown Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko will pay return visits late next month to the African nations of Zaire and Senegal, the Foreign Ministry says.

A ministry spokesman said Tuesday the royal couple will represent 82-year-old Emperor Hirohito on the two-week tour, the third to Africa by the emperor's eldest son and daughter-in-law.

Death Row

A firing squad in Utah executed Gary Gilmore on this date in 1977. It was the nation's first execution in over 10 years. About two-thirds of the states now have a death penalty. The most preferred method is electrocution. In 1890 William Kemmler was the first criminal to be electrocuted. Thomas Edison first suggested the use of an electric chair. He wanted to prove that alternating current — an idea promoted by one of his rivals — was deadly.

Investigate A Shooting Death

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Police are continuing to investigate a bizarre shooting that left a Charlotte man dead early Sunday at a nightclub.

Leroy Boyd, 19, was found lying face down about 200 yards west of the nightclub.

Police said Boyd was clutching a small-caliber derringer pistol in his right hand. He had been shot once in the left shoulder and once in the back.

Major Bill Helms of the Monroe Public Safety Department said the shooting occurred after Boyd was asked to leave the nightclub because of "objectionable dancing" during a dance contest about 3:30 a.m. Witnesses told police Boyd fired two shots into the club, where about 200 people were gathered, as he got to the door.

Police said Boyd fired two more shots in the direction of the nightclub as he ran, but no one was injured. He reportedly fired another shot at three club employees who were chasing him. He turned and ran into a shopping center parking lot, where he collapsed.

Helms said none of the witnesses reported seeing any weapon other than the victim's. Police are checking a report that a man was seen in the parking lot of the nightclub with a rifle.

Planning Explore Undersea Volcano

RALEIGH (AP) — Underwater volcanoes, which may provide a habitat for some species never before seen, are one of the last unexplored areas of biology, a North Carolina State University researcher says.

"It's an unexplored realm of biology," said Dr. Lisa A. Levin, an N.C. State biological oceanographer. "There are relatively few biologists studying the deep sea."

Ms. Levin, a specialist in benthic ecology, the study of organisms on the ocean floor, will use a submarine to explore the rugged underwater volcanoes in the eastern Pacific Ocean next year.

Ms. Levin said she plans to examine two sets of volcanoes, or seamounts, with one dive set for the spring and the other for the fall.

"In the past, it hasn't been possible to sample the seamount slopes from a ship," Ms. Levin said in a news release. "You were likely to damage you equipment."

Efforts to dredge the rugged slopes of the underwater volcanoes produced mangled specimens, she said.

But now researchers can use deep-diving research submarines to dive down to the volcanoes. Ms. Levin will use a submarine called the "Alvin," a small submarine equipped with arms, lights and cameras.

The Alvin will take the scientists down more than 2,000 meters — well over a mile — to the volcanoes.

"The seamounts themselves are structurally similar to other volcanoes, except they're underwater," Ms. Levin said.

But because they are underwater, they provide an unusual environment, she said. The volcanoes enhance and alter currents and, in some cases, spew out warm water and sulfides, which feed bacteria that serve as a food source for some sea animals, she said.

"My research investigates what is there, how the animals live and reproduce," Ms. Levin said. "The deep sea is noted for having extremely high species diversity. I'm asking, 'What's the effect of an island habitat on diversity in the deep sea?'"

Ms. Levin learned that two geologists planned to use the Alvin to examine the structure of volcanoes off Acapulco, Mexico, and San Diego, next year for the National Science Federation and the U.S. Navy. She then sought and won a Navy contract allowing her to collaborate with a biology program sampling and photographing volcano life during the trips.

It is not the first time Ms. Levin has explored underwater volcanoes. She accompanied geologists on a cruise to four seamounts off Mazatlan, Mexico, several years ago.

On next year's trips — her first actual dives onto seamounts — Ms. Levin said she expects to find some new life forms and some other life forms similar to the samples brought up by the geologists off Mazatlan.

Ms. Levin will use videotapes and filmstrips to record what she sees, and the films will then be studied for features in the sea mud that might reveal the structure and activities of tiny communities, she said.

"One of the main reasons for studying the sediment is to learn how deep-sea communities are structured," Ms. Levin said. "This is a different kind of sediment than you see on much of the deep sea floor."

Lumber Mills Rebound; New Plants On Hold

By The Associated Press

A two-year depression appears to be behind the state's lumber industry, but officials say the rebound has not yet sparked construction of new mills or new jobs.

Federal Paper Board Co. in 1981 broke ground for a new sawmill in Anson County, but the mill has never been built. Company officials said they have purchased some equipment for the $22 million facility, but want more evidence that lumber demand will grow stronger.

"There are some good signs in the industry, but we have to project on hold to see which way things are going," said Federal Paper Board's J.C. Barnes. "Although there's a lot of talk about housing starts, we still see some rather suppressed demand for lumber."

The lumber industry employs about 31,400 workers in North Carolina, with manufacturers' shipments totaling nearly $2 billion in 1980, the latest figures available.

Officials say most of the rebound so far is due to expansions or revamping existing mills.

"There's no doubt we're doing better now," said George Culp, secretary-treasurer of the W.H. Culp Lumber Co. in Stanly County. "For some of the boys, times were tough in the last couple years, but everybody survived and things are looking pretty good for 1984."

Culp Lumber is building a new multimillion-dollar sawmill with computer-aided saws that scan logs to determine how best to cut the wood.

In Mount Gilead, Jordan Lumber & Supply Co. is completing a $2.4 million renovation and adding a computer-aided saw that will double production and increase the work force from 100 to as many as 175.

Jordan Lumber general manager Ron Kincaid said the company "decided on the expansion based on all the information we could get and we expected that housing, construction and users of our lumber products would be coming out of the recession by now."

"With maybe one or two exceptions, all the mills that had shut down in '82 are back in operation again," said John Milliner, executive vice president of the Georgia-based Southeastern Lumber Manufacturers Association.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JAN. 18, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until noon, you have the opportunity to use your own cleverness to put across some interesting plans that you think the public or some group would like very much.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) There is an opportunity for you to add to present security in the morning. Later, you may encounter opposition from a jealous person.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You can communicate well during the daytime and make big headway. Avoid tension at home in the evening.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) The morning brings an opportunity for gaining added success. Later, use tact to avoid arguments and displeasure.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You find the right way of gaining private aims in the morning. Later, take care not to overspend on anything.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You can finally get that personal affair nicely straightened out this morning. Later, see only those friends who are peaceful and pleasant.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You are inspired how to gain a personal goal. Go after information you need quietly. Refrain from being selfish with your mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Some extra benefits from your work are possible. Avoid a good friend who is not in a good mood at this time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A new project can bring accomplishment. Steer clear of an angry higher-up. Assiduous application to your career is needed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Doing something thoughtful for your mate can bring pleasure. Don't try to change anything. Drive less hurriedly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Morning is fine for working on some special civic or business matter. Tonight, do nothing to upset your mate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You can work admirably in the morning. After lunch, a partner is apt to give you some trouble, so be prepared.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Morning is best for arranging pleasure for the evening. Get right at the duties facing you and handle them well.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have the ability to dream up new projects and get them to work like a charm. Be encouraging and give as much education as possible. The temper is apt to be short, but as the years go by, self-control will be learned.

Blue Law Is Near Repeal

HIGH POINT (AP) — The High Point City Council came two steps closer to repealing the city's Sunday blue law Monday.

A public hearing on the law ended with several council members, including Mayor Bob Wells, saying there is a near-unanimous consensus for repeal among council members.

City police say the law is hard to enforce because it allows some stores to be open, but regulates what items they can sell.

Following Monday's hearing, the council voted unanimously and without discussion to refer the matter to the council's Public Safety Committee.

That four-member committee met after the council session and voted unanimously, and again without discussion to recommend, that the council repeal the laws. The council will act on that recommendation at its meeting Thursday.

Under the law, most retailing establishments must close from 2 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Sundays.

The law allows gas stations, or convenience stores that sell gas, news stands, drugstores, hotels and restaurants to stay open.

Wells, who initiated the council's latest look at its blue laws about a month ago, said Monday's hearing was quiet compared to a similar public hearing in 1975, the last time the council considered changing the law. More than 100 people packed a courtroom in the county office building to comment in that hearing, he said.

Valuable New Hospital Plan Pays Cash Benefits Up To

$60<sup>00</sup> a day      $420<sup>00</sup> a week      $1,800<sup>00</sup> a month

from the very first day for accidents, after 5 days for illness

Collect up to $60.00 for every day in the hospital

You'll receive up to $60.00 a day for any covered accident or illness. You'll continue to collect benefits for as long as you're hospitalized—even for life if necessary.

Up to $240.00 Double Daily Accident Benefits

You'll collect up to $240.00 a day ($120.00 per person) if both you and your insured spouse are hospitalized at the same time as the result of any accident. Depending on the plan you select, this feature could be worth as much as $7,200.00 a month!

$20.00 a day for Home Nursing Care

You collect $20.00 for every 8-hour shift a registered, licensed practical or vocational nurse spends in your home. This nursing care must be ordered by your doctor and begin within 5 days after any covered hospitalization. These additional cash benefits continue for a period equal to your hospital stay—up to one full year.

Up to $5,000.00 for loss of limbs or eyesight

The American Citizens Health Plan will pay you an additional $5,000.00 in compensation for the loss of any two limbs or sight in both eyes within 90 days of an accident ($2,500.00 for the loss of a single limb or sight in one eye).

Optional Cash Benefits

All children covered for a single monthly premium
You'll receive up to $30.00 a day for each child hospitalized for any covered accident or illness when you add Children's Coverage to your basic plan. One premium covers all your unmarried dependent children from birth to 19 years of age.

Maternity benefits also available

Your wife will receive up to $60.00 a day for each day she's hospitalized for pregnancy and childbirth when Children's Coverage and Maternity Benefits are added to your basic plan. The mother must be insured for the entire pregnancy. Benefits will be paid from the first day for as long as needed. Miscarriage is also covered.

Cash benefits paid directly to you

All benefit checks will be made out to you or anyone you choose. You can use the money to pay the hospital or your doctor—or spend it any way you choose. It's entirely up to you!

The cash benefits you receive do NOT count as "income" for tax purposes. This helps to make every dollar go further as you use these benefits to meet your needs.

Unlimited Cash Benefits

The American Citizens Health Plan will pay you as long as you're in the hospital for any covered accident or illness—even if you're hospitalized for the rest of your life. There are no limits on how long you can collect benefits!

You can never be cancelled

We can never cancel your insurance protection—no matter what your age or how much you collect in benefits—as long as you pay your premiums on time. Only you can cancel.

Pre-existing conditions:

You won't be covered for pre-existing health problems during the first year (any new conditions will be paid for immediately).

Pays in addition to any other insurance

To help pay your medical bills and everyday household expenses, you'll receive a check in addition to any other insurance benefits you collect. Even if you're entitled to "free" medical care at a VA or government hospital, we'll still pay you full benefits.

Your Guarantee of Satisfaction

When you receive your policy in the mail, look it over carefully. Discuss it, if you wish, with a trusted advisor. Feel free to compare this Plan with other policies of this type. If, for any reason, you decide that you no longer wish to participate in the plan, simply return your policy within 30 days of issue and we will promptly refund your money. In the meanwhile, you will be fully protected while you are making up your mind.

James Sloan
M. A. Sloan
American Citizens Health Plan

Your premiums stay the same year after year

Your premiums will NOT go up as you grow older and you cannot be singled out for a rate increase. Your premiums will only change if there is a general rate adjustment on all our policies of this type (Series HOSP-6601) in your entire state.

Guaranteed Acceptance (you can't be turned down)

You and your entire family will be accepted automatically in the plan of your choice—no physical examination required—no health questions to answer. You cannot be turned down!

Coverage reduces at age 65 Read how American Citizens Health Plan pays in addition to Medicare!

When you reach 65, the American Citizens Health Plan will pay you up to $30.00 a day (50% reduction of benefits provided those under 65) to tie in with Medicare during the first 60 days of hospitalization. Then, just about the time when Medicare benefits are reduced, we will pay you up to $60.00 a day beginning with the 61st day for as long as you are in the hospital.

Your economical monthly premiums include $20.00 a day for Home Nursing Care, Double Accident Benefits, and up to $5,000.00 for loss of limbs or eyesight as outlined above.

You are not covered for...

In order to keep rates down and guarantee that everyone will be accepted with no medical questions asked, there is a limit of only one policy per person.

Also, some exclusions are required: losses resulting from acts of war, nervous or mental disorders, or use of narcotics; normal pregnancy, unless Maternity Benefits have been selected; and confinement in a nursing home or convalescent care facility as defined in your policy.

Economical Monthly Premiums

The chart below shows how little it costs to insure yourself and other family members. Remember, just ONE DOLLAR protects your entire family for the first 30 days from the time your policy is issued. So please ACT NOW—the sooner you apply, the sooner you are protected!

Age	$60.00 a Day Plan	$40.00 a Day Plan
Under 40	$11.20	$ 7.45
40-49	13.10	8.75
50-59	15.90	10.60
*60-69	17.90	11.95
Optional Benefits
All Your Children	6.10	3.95
Children & Maternity	11.60	7.75

Rates DO NOT increase as you grow older.

Pays from the very first day for accidents and after five days for illness

*When policyholders reach age 65 or over both plans provide 50% of the Daily Hospital Benefit selected for the first 60 days of hospitalization and 100% thereafter.

**One premium covers all unmarried dependent children from birth to 19 years of age (regardless of number) for 50% of the Adult Daily Hospital Benefit selected.
