'State-Of-The Union' To Raise A Reagan Curtain

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, using his State of the Union speech tonight to raise the curtain on an anticipated re-election campaign, will tell the nation it has moved "from the problems of the '70s to the solutions of the '80s," a senior White House official said.

The president will use the address to endorse a manned space station and budget reform proposals, the official said.

All but the finishing touches were completed on the speech the president will give from the well of the House of Representatives at 9 p.m. EST, before an audience of senators, members of the House, the Cabinet and diplomatic corps, as well as a nationwide television and radio audience.

The president's aides view the address as a key political document and one of the first salvos he will fire in the 1984 presidential campaign. It precedes by four days the five-minute speech he will deliver from the Oval Office Sunday night disclosing his political plans.

Even before the day of the State of the Union speech arrived, Reagan's policies were drawing renewed fire, and not just from Democrats.

Former President Gerald R. Ford urged Reagan on Tuesday to stretch out the defense budget, and impose new taxes as well, to stem what he called the "dark, ominous cloud" of deficits approaching $200 billion for years to come.

In a pre-emptive strike at the president's speech, Rep. Jim Wright of Texas, the House Democratic leader, said that the nation's priorities had grown "cruelly deranged" at the White House, with spiraling military spending draining human resources.

He delivered a virtual campaign platform to reverse Reagan's policies, "to revive the American dream, to renew the American spirit, to rekindle America's faith in our future."

The senior White House official, speaking on the condition that he not be identified by name, said Reagan would keep the speech free of details about new initiatives. Instead, he will set out themes that are likely to reappear in campaign speeches if he seeks a second term.

"The theme of consistency is going to be his State of the Union message," the official said, mentioning Reagan's continued effort to achieve an economic program of budget and tax cuts, a foreign policy aimed at containing the Soviet Union, and a defense policy aimed at building up the nation's military.

"He'll cite the record, from the problems of the '70s to the solutions of the '80s," the official said.

One White House official said Reagan would tell the nation "what he tried to do in domestic and foreign policy in the first three years, how he's tried to change the role of government."

The official, speaking on the condition that he not be identified by name, said the president would emphasize his effort to achieve "a new beginning" for the nation — echoing the Reagan campaign theme of 1980 — without pointing an accusing (Please turn to Page 10)

CHECKING FOR LEAKS — A representative of the Greenville Utilities Commission checks a window for air leaks in a home that has been weatherized by GUC and volunteers. Twenty Greenville homes received the special treatment, which included plastic storm windows and weatherstripping, last Saturday.

Cold Shut Out By Utilities' Work

After 15 years in her tiny West Third Street home, 82-year-old Carrie Peton was considering a move.

"It was so cold in that house," Ms. Peton, a widow since 1935, said. "All that cold air was coming through cracks around the windows and doors. But now that Greenville Utilities put up that plastic, I think I'll stay."

Ms. Peton's home was one of 20 weatherized in Saturday's "Winter Warm-Up," sponsored by Greenville Utilities. Volunteers from East Carolina University, Pitt Community College and GUC installed plastic storm windows, weatherstripping and water heater jackets, hoping to plug costly leaks — and give the houses a fighting chance against temperatures like Saturday's chilling 22 degrees.

"I appreciate all the help I can get," Ms. Peton said. "I can't afford these things; there's no extra money to buy storm windows or anything."

The weatherization was at no cost to the needy families; their names were furnished by the Salvation Army and the Pitt County Council on Aging.

"It was a real community effort," GUC Program Director Susan Bizzaro said. "Area churches and Greenville Utilities contributed funds which were used to purchase materials."

In the weeks prior to the Winter Warm-Up, homes on West Third, Contentnea and South Pitt streets were inspected by GUC Energy Services officers.

"We determined that the major sources of heat loss were gaps around the windows and doors," Energy Services Officer Robbie Tugwell said. "With the plastic and weatherstripping, the houses will be a lot tighter. No matter what type of fuel used, the houses will need a lot less. And there will be less air infiltration."

Ray Pettitt of Pitt Community College volunteered five hours of his weekend to the project.

"There was a real need for this," he said. "Those people were wonderful. They were pleased that people thought enough of others to work during their spare time. I really enjoyed myself because of the reception these people gave us."

Coaxing Congress On Lebanon Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, seizing the initiative on a touchy election-year issue, is urging Congress to keep the Marines in Lebanon while Middle East mediator Donald Rumsfeld tries to pry some conciliation from Syria.

But while Reagan told Republican leaders Tuesday that "we've made genuine progress," Rumsfeld described the Syrians as a stubborn obstacle to arranging a government of national unity for Lebanon.

And Reagan, in a letter Monday to two key House Democrats, Lee H. Hamilton of Indiana and Les Aspin of Wisconsin, said Syria and the Soviet Union were complicating U.S. diplomatic efforts.

Reagan wrote the letters and visited Capitol Hill before the newly convened second session of 98th Congress could get started on moves to bring the Marines home.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz was following up today with closed briefings for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and is scheduled to swing over to the House side on Thursday.

Congress initially authorized Reagan to keep the Marines in the Beirut area until the spring of 1985. All the Democratic candidates for the presidential nomination are urging a withdrawal, while Reagan is depending on Republican unity to resist the election-year challenge.

"In Lebanon, the peace progress has been slow and painful, but we've made genuine progress," he told his political allies in the Senate on Tuesday.

But Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said more than half the House Democrats who voted to support the continued presence of the Marines in Lebanon have changed their minds.

FCC Officially Defers Phone 'Access Charges'

By NORMAN BLACK

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission, making good on its promise of last week, voted today to delay the telephone "access charges" that consumers and small businesses were to have started paying in April.

The agency, in a unanimous vote, said it had received no public comments over the past week that would prompt it to change its mind on postponing the imposition of the fees until mid-1985. The FCC had tentatively decided to take that step Jan. 19.

Telephone customers had been scheduled to begin paying the new access fees in April, with residential users paying $2 a month and business customers up to $6 a month to their local phone company. Under today's order, only large businesses — those with more than one line — will begin paying the fees in April.

By its vote today, the commission committed itself to making a final decision on the fate of access charges late this year after conducting neg studies on whether the fees pose any threat to universal telephone service.

Assuming the agency sticks to that timetable, the earliest that access charges could be implemented would be during the late spring or summer of 1985.

The decision was something of a mixed blessing for consumers because it also means an end to any major reduction in long-distance rates. The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. had been preparing to reduce its long-distance rates by more than 10.5 percent before the delay was ordered.

The question of long-distance rates and access charges are intertwined because the new access fees would replace revenue that is now collected from long-distance callers. Currently, local phone rates are held down for all customers — including those who don't place long-distance calls — through hidden payments that are built into the rates paid by long-distance users.

The FCC wants to eliminate that "contribution," or subsidy, paid by long-distance callers to encourage competition in the long-distance industry and discourage large corporations from building private phone systems. It argues that all customers should bear the burden of supporting their local phone company.

Before the FCC decided to delay the fees, local phone companies had expected to receive roughly $3.5 billion in monthly access payments in 1984 from residential and business customers. The payments by large businesses are expected to generate about $1 billion annually, meaning the remaining $2.5 billion will continue to be collected from long-distance callers.

Today's vote was expected to help cut short a Senate debate on a bill that would declare a two-year moratorium on the imposition of access fees.

While Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the bill's sponsor, argues Congress should place in law a moratorium to ensure the FCC doesn't act precipitously, a coalition of senators led by Sens. Bob Dole, R-Kansas, and Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., maintains legislation is no longer necessary.

ECU Faculty Senate Urges Higher Salaries

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer The Faculty Senate at East Carolina University, saying salaries at the 16 campuses of the University of North Carolina System are too low, adopted resolutions Tuesday asking for a 15 percent cost-of-living pay hike and a 7 percent merit pay raise.

One resolution by the Faculty Senate, which represents about 950 ECU faculty members, asks that ECU Chancellor John Howell convey to the ECU Board of Trustees the faculty's "deep concern" over the present pay level.

The other resolution asks the Faculty Assembly of the University of North Carolina System, which represents faculty members at all UNC schools, to "convey to the Board of Governors and to the General Assembly the faculty's deep concern in these matters," and to seek "an across the board cost of living increment of no less than 15 percent and an additional 7 percent increment for merit recommendations ... (and) seek additional funds to eliminate the disparities between male and female faculty salaries."

According to the resolutions, which were adopted unanimously, North Carolina ranks 45th in the nation in average salaries for the top three academic ranks for male professors. Salaries for female professors, the resolutions said, "average only 84 percent of that male average."

In calling for a vote on the resolutions, Faculty Senate Chairman James Smith said the board of trustees of N.C. State University "adopted a resolution on Jan. 7, expressing concern over the low salaries of their faculty as compared to similar institutions."

"That board was concerned ... (and) wanted to draw the attention of the governor and the members of the General Assembly to the comparative facts of the matter. I think we at East Carolina should do likewise," Smith said.

Commenting on the Faculty Senate action, Howell said this morning that, "in principle, I endorse their taking an action like this." He added "I'll probably be doing some work toward the same end." The faculty salary level, Howell said, is "our most critical problem."

"We need to do something to make it clear that if the university employees are overlooked in this, that we (Please turn to Page 16)

Pitt County Volunteer Leaders Given Special Recognition Tuesday

A salute to Pitt County volunteer leaders was held Tuesday night at a recognition night and dinner. Certificates were presented to approximately 100 men and women throughout the county.

Making the presentations were Leroy James, county agricultural extension chairman; Evelyn Spangler, home economics extension agent, and Dale Panaro, 4-H extension agent.

Sue May, retired extension agent from Pitt County, was keynote speaker. In an oratorical dream, she envisioned a ship leaving the harbor with all volunteers aboard.

"In your mind, picture your local church and school without volunteers. What would the county be if they were no volunteer fire departments, rescue squads, scout leaders, United Way, Extension Service, homemakers or 4-H?"

"Everyone here has served as a volunteer in some capacity. No matter how large or small the contribution — it's all important," she said.

Mrs. May quoted the following from President Ronald Reagan, "Voluntarism is a cornerstone of the American way of life and a fundamental characteristic of our American heritage. The generosity and civic-mindedness of the American people has long been a noted aspect of our nation."

"We cannot do for others unless we do for ourselves. Volunteers, I congratulate you and I salute you," she said.

Mrs. May was introduced by Sylvia Wheelless, chairman of the State Advisory Council, Community Resources Development.

Greetings were extended to the group by R.L. Martin, chairman, Pitt County Board of Commissioners. "You are rendering service to your county and community as well. Volunteers are a way of life here and the County Commissioners appreciate it," he said.

VOLUNTEER LEADERS' RECOGNITION NIGHT ... speaker Sue May, center, is pictured with Leroy James and Sylvia Wheelless.

Dr. Tom Hobgood, Northeast District extension chairman, was a special guest. "I commend those who received recognition. You've got a lot to be pleased about in Pitt County. Voluntarism is a cornerstone of extension," he said.

James paid tribute to First State Bank, North Carolina National Bank, Planters National Bank, Production Credit Association, Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. and Pitt County 4-H Council as sponsors for the evening. Certificates of appreciation were also given to the Pitt County Commissioners.

Mrs. Panaro unveiled a Norman Rockwell print which was given to the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service by the 4-H 1983 State Fair Committee. The print is titled "County Agricultural Agent."

Other special guests were Susan Nobles, chairman, and Hattie Thompson, Pitt County Advisory Council. The People's Plan 87 booklets were shown to the group by Mrs. Spangler.

In August 1954, Hurricane Carol hit the United States, killing 68 people and causing several millions of dollars in damages.

WINTER WATER TEMPERATURES

Do you sometimes find partially cleaned glasses or specks of undissolved detergent on your dishes after they've gone through your dishwasher's wash cycle? Poor washability can be the result of many factors, such as the method of loading the dishes into the dishwasher, the use of too little or too much detergent, excessively hard water, or possibly a mechanical failure.

However, if you should develop a washability problem with your dishwasher during the winter months, there is a possibility that the temperature of the water entering your dishwasher is too low. The temperature of the water is an important factor in dissolving detergent, removing food soils, and drying dishes properly.

HEAT LOST IN PIPES
As water travels through the hot water pipe during the winter months, the temperature of the water may drop 10-15 degrees, depending on the location of the water heater and the distance the water must travel through the pipe to the dishwasher. Therefore, even if your water heater is set at 140°F., the water temperature may be only 125-130°F. when it reaches the dishwasher.

Most dishwashers require the temperature of the inlet water to be a minimum of 140°F. for best washing results. As the temperature is reduced, the removal of greasy and oily soils becomes more difficult; spotting and filming of dishes may occur; and drying may be incomplete.

Baroque, Contemporary Wedding Music Win Over Old Standards

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — This year's brides will be marching to a different beat — probably Baroque music.

Gone are the wedding days when, as by rote, Richard Wagner's bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" began the ceremony and Felix Mendelssohn's wedding march from "A Midsummer Night's Dream" ended it.

"The vast majority of brides and grooms are saying that they do not want and will not have those two things played at their wedding," said Jere Farrah, a veteran organist for weddings and a staff member of New York's Mannes School of Music.

"They want stately, dignified but festive music for the religious ceremony, and Baroque music of the 17th century by English, French and German composers fills the bill. Save the schmaltz for the reception."

The American Guild of Organists notes both the Wagner and Mendelssohn pieces are from 19th century theater works and cannot be considered sacred music.

The Guild's list of appropriate music of religious inspiration, quite a bit of it from the Baroque period, includes the following professionals:

"Trumpet Voluntary" by Jeremiah Clarke, "Jesu Joy of Man's Desiring" by J. S. Bach, "Marche Romaine" by Gounod, "March No. 1" including Beethoven's "Hymn to Joy" by John Lee, "Coronation March" by William Walton, and "Rondeau" by Jean Mouret.

The list of recessional includes Clarke's "Trumpet Tune," "Rigaudon" by Andre Campra, "Sortie in F Major" by Cesar Franck, "Psalm XIX" by Benedetto Marcello, "Fanfare" by Don McAfee, and "Toccata Pontificata" by Gordon Young.

Recommended vocal solos include David Young's setting of "The Lord's Prayer," "God of Love" by Milton Dietrich, "O Perfect Love" by Phil White, and "The Gift of Love," an American folk tune arranged by Hal Hopson.

Still a favorite for Catholic weddings is "Ave Maria" and, for Protestant weddings, "Oh, Promise Me."

Most of this music is available on records or tapes for the budget ceremony held in the home or garden. Record stores rent tapes of wedding music suitable for the entire ceremony. You can even borrow them from some libraries.

At the other end of the spectrum is the ceremony with a choir and real trumpets for the fanfares. Keep in mind that your friends might consider this pretentious and best left to royalty.

Get an early start on planning wedding music. Bride's magazine recommends consulting your church organist or synagogue cantor as soon as you have set a date. If you are marrying at a hotel or in a banquet room, consult the manager about arrangements.

If you want a vocalist, violinist, accordionist or string quartet, your organist or the banquet manager will suggest reliable musicians or you may have talented friends or relatives who can provide music. A local high school or music college can recommend student musicians.

Dear Abby

Unwed Mom Wants Others To Know Choices

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I recently found myself pregnant, and like many other young girls in this situation with no marriage in sight, I had a very big decision to make. I was in no position to support myself and a child.

I considered having an abortion, but when the time came, I couldn't do it; I knew that I had to give that little life a chance.

I then considered adoption, and with my parents' support, I placed my baby for adoption. The unhappiness I suffered was a small sacrifice for the joy I gave a child-less couple.

Abby, I want to tell others facing what I faced that there is an alternative to abortion that can make someone happy at the same time.

The pain I suffered was worthwhile in the end. I know that my baby is being raised by parents who really want a child and are able to handle the responsibility of being parents. I couldn't.

NO REGRETS IN MISSOURI

DEAR NO REGRETS: You are to be congratulated for your courage, maturity and unselfishness. Thousands of childless couples are praying for the kind of gift you have made possible. God bless you.

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorced woman with two daughters, ages 8 and 11. I have custody of the girls, but their father has them every other weekend.

My "ex" has recently remarried and joined his wife's church (Baptist). Our children were baptized Catholic and have always attended Mass every Sunday with me.

My "ex" now wants to take the girls to Baptist services on the weekends he has them. He says that neither he nor his pastor sees anything wrong with this.

I think consistency in their religious upbringing is very important—that going back and forth between the Catholic church and the Baptist church will confuse them, so my "ex" should take the girls to Catholic services when he has them for the weekend.

He doesn't see this as a workable solution. Your opinion is needed.

CONSCIENTIOUS MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I agree that consistency in religious upbringing is essential. The minutest ex-husband proposes between the Catholic and Baptist churches could get your daughters off on the wrong foot.

DEAR ABBY: You stated that the widow of "John Smith" should call herself "Mrs. John Smith." I don't agree with you. I have a name, and I am a person in my own right. In the wedding ceremony it says, "Till death do you part." Well, if your husband dies, you are no longer married. I don't want to feel like I belong to someone who is dead. I am not his possession.

Of course, I will still use his last name, which became our family name, but if there is no "John Smith," how can there be a "Mrs. John Smith"? It doesn't make any sense at all.

LASER LIGHT

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Light someday may be the "key" that controls the world's fastest large-scale computers.

University of Rochester scientist Joseph H. Eberly and two former associates have patented an optical switching device that uses laser light to replace electric current.

By using light pulses shorter than a picosecond (one-trillionth of a second) and by reducing the need for cooling components that increase computer size and the distance an impulse must travel, a "light-powered" computer could perform near-instantaneous switching and logic functions, says Eberly.

EARLY DIAGNOSIS

BOSTON (AP) — Research scientists here say they have found a way to identify an abnormal feature of chromosomes that appears in victims of Huntington's disease.

The disease affects about 40,000 Americans.

Symptoms of the disease usually don't appear until age 40, and children of victims stand a 50 percent chance of inheriting the disease. The scientists say their discovery could lead to a test within two years that could be used on adults.

Avoid IOUs

There is an inherent risk in candidates' bidding for financial support and endorsements of the diverse special interests that make up their constituency during the weeding-out process of primary campaigns, and later in the final "run for the money" of elections.

Candidates have but one commodity they can exchange for the support they seek from organized groups, and that is promises. A candidate who reaps the most support from organized interests can build up an awful lot of IOUs ... and there's the rub.

Suppose a candidate with intense support of eight or 10 large organizations of diverse interests wins his party's nomination, and ultimately is elected to the high office he seeks. He is then literally inhibited in his policy decisions as the office-holder.

His power to decide the best possible options for his government is crippled by the IOUs incurred during the campaign for high office. The result: second-, third-, or fourth-best option.

It's a dangerous way to operate anybody's government; especially ours.

Safe Pregnancy

Alcohol is so accepted in our society that many view moderate drinking as harmless.

If we don't drive while impaired, lose our jobs, or wreck our families, what is the harm?

Well, the experts say there is danger to the fetus of pregnant women who drink at all. Even pregnant women who drink moderately run the risk of delivering babies of low birth weight, and possibly other problems, according to Pitt County Health Director Dr. Robert Ehringer. He recommends that women even considering pregnancy cease consuming alcoholic beverages.

The main concern of prospective mothers and, indeed, all of society is that infants be born in as good health as possible. The best advice concerning drinking while pregnant seems to be: don't.

TV May Improve

WASHINGTON — Last week's Supreme Court decision allowing home recording of television programs prompted us to think of our friend Ron.

Since connecting a video cassette recorder to his television last year, Ron, 26, has regularly invited guests to his home to view feature movies and films of rock concerts, all rented from an establishment nearby.

Yet, by his own admission, he has used his VCR rarely, if at all, to record television programs. "Who'd want to own that stuff?" he asks incredulously.

That question, of course, mattered little in the high court's long-awaited ruling. If anyone copies a program simply to "shift" the time of his own viewing, he's acting within the law, said the justices. Congress, they added, must deal with the other possible situations.

But Ron speaks for many home-video nuts, who, at least for now, are a fairly affluent bunch. They've forfeited several hundreds of dollars principally to escape the garbage for which television programmers are famous. While they might use the machine to record a news broadcast, soap opera or major movie, they find little else worth the price of a blank cassette.

This isn't to suggest that the much-concerned "creative community" of artists, directors and producers doesn't deserve some share in the increasingly popular video rental market.

But implicit in the VCR's future success will be a much wider public dissatisfaction with the quality of what Hollywood produces for television. For years, producers and advertisers have been able to forego the higher end of the consumer market for a less demanding side. As video technology becomes more affordable — industry groups foresee VCRs in 38 (up from less than 10 percent today) of American households within four years — the television networks may be forced to deliver an improved product, or else.

During the next two years, the Justice Department plans to double the number of attorneys assigned to environmental law enforcement, says Mary Walker, deputy assistant attorney general in Justice's Land and Natural Resources Division. Yet the question remains whether there'll be an increased workload to match.

The Environmental Protection Agency referred only 45 civil cases to Justice for prosecution during the last quarter of 1983. During the same period in 1982, when Ann (Gorsuch) Burford was still administrator, the EPA forwarded 50 cases.

Despite the increased number of older adults returning to school, the Bureau of Labor Statistics says that the demand for college and university faculty members will decline 15 percent by 1995. College teaching ranks ninth in the bureau's list of America's 20 most quickly contracting occupations.

One figure that certainly entered into the bureau's calculations was the declining rate of U.S. population growth. In 1983, the population grew 2.1 million, to 234,883,707. Though comparable to those of the previous two years, the .9 percent increase fell far short of the 1.6-1.9 percent increases of the baby-boom years.

In 1982, according to a recent Treasury Department report on Caribbean tax havens, banks in only five nations and possessions held approximately $313 billion in foreign assets. The countries or colonies cited were Bermuda, the Bahamas, the Cayman Islands, Netherlands Antilles and Panama. The estimated amount was 100 times that needed to finance their exports in 1982.

Democratic presidential candidates cost taxpayers more than Republican contestants, if the first disbursement of federal matching funds is any indication. Six Democrats received nearly $9 million in federal matching funds; three qualified for more than $1 million.

At this point in 1980, only Jimmy Carter had qualified for at least $1 million. Four major Republican candidates at that time — Howard Baker, George Bush, Bob Dole and Ronald Reagan — had qualified for little more than $2 million combined.

Unitary Tax Finds Little Favor

RALEIGH — After the U.S. Supreme Court ruled last year that California's unitary tax law was constitutional, many states adopted similar laws as a way to wring extra taxes out of international firms doing business within their borders.

It doesn't appear, however, that North Carolina will be joining that movement. Gov. Jim Hunt has come out against a unitary tax and this month an important legislative study committee recommended that the General Assembly issue a strong statement of opposition to it also.

Under a unitary tax system, a state can reach out and tax the worldwide earnings of multinational and foreign firms doing business in state. North Carolina currently taxes only a percentage of the American profits of businesses located in state.

Paul Lawler of the N.C. Citizens for Business and Industry and a former state auditor of foreign businesses gave this example. Say that Big Byte Computer Corp. has 5 percent of its American sales, 10 percent of its American payroll and 15 percent of its American property located in North Carolina. The state would then average those three percentages and tax Big Byte of 10 percent of its American profits.

If the state moved to unitary law, it would first calculate the percentage of world payroll, sales and property located in North Carolina and then tax that average percentage of world profits. Let's say that it figured out to 5 percent.

California and the other 23 states which have adopted the unitary approach found that it would increase their tax collections. New York adopted the rule and expects to collect an extra $75 million this year. Florida expects an extra $95 million. The tax commissioner of North Dakota was recently quoted as saying that the unitary tax "reduced the shellgames large corporations can play, shifting profits to other jurisdictions to avoid paying their share of taxes."

A state gains revenue, Lawler explained, when its multinational and foreign firms make greater profits outside the United States than they are making inside. Let's go back to Big Byte. If they make $10 billion U.S. profit, then North Carolina will tax 10 percent, or $1 billion. But, if they make $30 billion profit worldwide, then under the unitary law, North Carolina could tax 5 percent, or $1.5 billion. The pot of profits available to be taxed goes up when worldwide profits are included but that is offset to a degree because a state can claim a smaller percentage of sales, payroll and property.

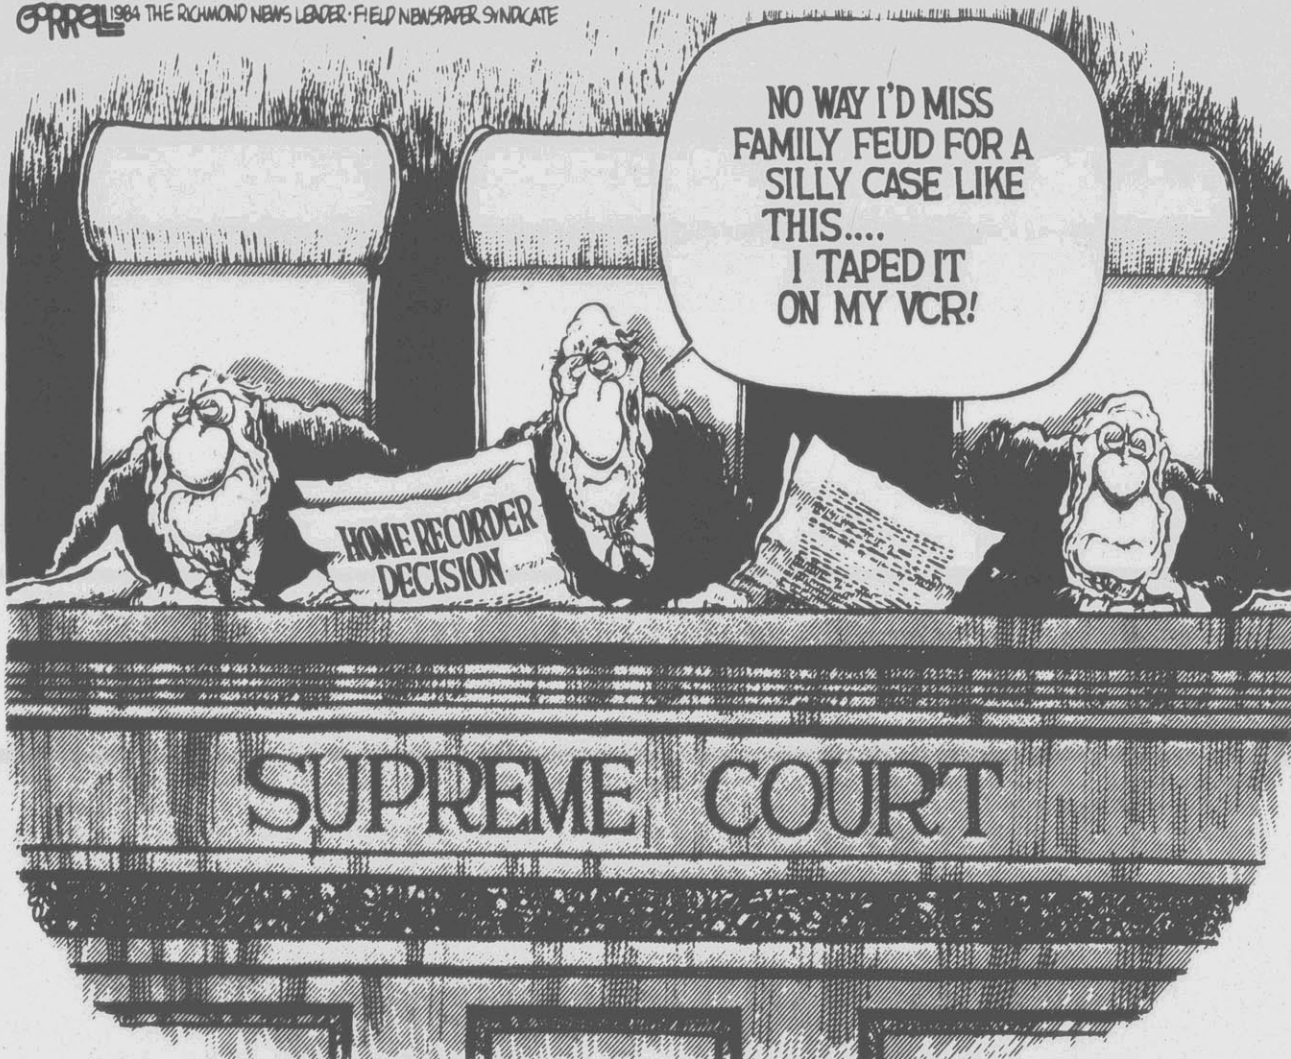

Lawler said that so far as he knows, North Carolina has never studied whether it would make more or less money by going to the unitary tax. (Under this law, it's possible for a corporation's taxes to go down and several international firms which are losing money abroad actually favor the unitary tax.)

But Hunt and the legislative study committee are fairly certain that they're not at all interested in the tax, either way. Opponents of the tax rule say it would seriously harm North Carolina's ability to recruit foreign and multinational firms to the state. In addition, it would create an administrative nightmare for those international firms already located here.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, chairman of the Revenue Laws Study Committee, said his committee passed a resolution opposing the unitary tax to demonstrate a point: Not only is there little support for a unitary tax here, there's strong opposition to it. He was saying that his committee wants to put the idea in a coffin long before it is hatched.

Market Tips Replace Diamonds

Well, it appears that diamonds are no longer a girl's best friend.

The resignation of Deputy Secretary of Defense Paul Thayer, caused by SEC allegations that he provided "insider" information to friends when he served on corporate boards in private life, has repercussions far beyond the business world.

The SEC has charged that Mr. Thayer, while not profiting personally from the tips, helped several friends become rich, one a beautiful Texas divorcee with whom he had a "very close personal relationship."

If the charges are true, or even if they aren't, it's going to change the financial arrangements between men of substance and the "other woman."

"Hello, Sweetie Pie. I had a terrible day. Give your Big Daddy a nice warm kiss, and a nice cold, dry martini."

"It's been so long, Big Daddy, I thought I'd die."

"I had a board meeting in San Francisco, and then I had to fly to New York and meet with my investment bankers. But I brought you a little surprise from Tiffany's. It's a diamond necklace."

"I don't want to know from diamonds. What's the latest poop on the Archer takeover of Magnum Electronics?"

"Now, Honey Bun. You know I can't talk about what goes on in the Archer boardroom."

"Then make your own dry martini."

"If you promise not to tell anyone, we're going to announce our takeover intentions tomorrow afternoon."

"So what do I do, Big Daddy?"

"Archer's will probably go down and Magnum's is certain to go up. Sit down on the couch and rub my neck."

"What happened in New York?"

"Nothing happened in New York."

"I thought you told me Snow White Petroleum was going to acquire Stonebridge Communications, which had just merged with Fungus Chemicals."

"The deal fell through because Snow White has secretly made a deal with Calypso Avionics."

"But I bought 40,000 shares of Stonebridge at 57 on your say-so. It's now at 45. Why didn't you let me know?"

"I heard about it when I was in the hotel room with my wife. How could I call you?"

"So your wife is still more important to you than my stock portfolio?"

"I didn't say that, Barbie Doll. I'll make it up to you. I just came from a board meeting of Turtle Express. They're going to report a 50 percent earnings profit for their first quarter. The stock should go up four points after the announcement."

"Oh, Big Daddy, what a wonderful tip. Let me take your tie and shoes off."

"That's more like it, my Sugar Candy. Do you love me?"

"Of course I love you. What gives with Rupert Murdoch?"

"What do you mean what gives with Rupert Murdoch?"

"Do you have any inside information on whether he'll get control of Warner's or not?"

"I don't know, baby, and I don't want to talk about Rupert Murdoch now. I've got a lot of loving to catch up on. Then you can cook me a nice big steak dinner."

"Are you sure you aren't holding anything back on me, Big Daddy?"

"What would I hold back?"

"Should I still stay long in soybean futures?"

"Damn it, I'll tell you when to sell your soybeans. Now are we going to have any fun or aren't we?"

"Of course we're going to have fun, Big Daddy. But first I have to slip into something more comfortable so I can call my broker."

Strength For Today

"Bury me on my face," said the Greek philosopher Diogenes. When he was asked why, he replied: "Because in a little while everything will be turned upside down."

Diogenes expected that a great cataclysm would come shortly after his death. Even at this early date he was not alone in this expectation. In a museum in Istanbul is a little piece of papyrus on which is the oldest piece of writing to come down to us.

It says, "Times are not what they used to be. Children no longer obey their parents, and everybody wants to write a book."

Yet the expected and prophesied cataclysms seldom come. If they buried Diogenes on his face, we can be sure the old sage stayed in that position until his body turned to dust. The day has not yet come when everything is turned upside down, and probably never will.

Actually, prophesying doom is often a way in which we rationalize an unwillingness to work for a better world.

Serving The Public Can Help

eral people in the Chicago area.

Johnson & Johnson spent $50 million on a nationwide campaign to recall the entire product, an expenditure Burke says he had little choice in making if the company's credo were not to be considered meaningless and misleading.

As a result, says Burke, his company has regained more than 90 percent of the business enjoyed prior to the tragedies.

The credo, hanging in Johnson & Johnson offices throughout world, begins with a preamble: "Institutions, both public and private, exist because the people want them, believe in them, or at least are willing to tolerate them."

In keeping with the credo, Burke told an Advertising Council meeting last November, the company's first responsibility is to customers — doctors, nurses, patients, mothers. Next, employees. Then community. Finally, shareholders.

After the Tylenol experience, Burkee's staff compiled a list of other companies that lived by a social credo, based on two criteria:

First, they had to have written, codified principles expounding the belief that serving the public was central to their being. Next, there must be solid evidence that the ideas had been practiced for at least a generation.

In all, 26 large companies were found, but Burke declined to name them until now. Eleven were dropped for lack of comparable data — Prudential because it is a mutual company; Levi Strauss, Johnson's Wax and Hewlett-Packard because they were private 30 years ago; and McDonald's because it didn't exist.

The first measurement was of profits.

The 15 companies showed an 11 percent profits growth compounded over 30 years, better than three times the growth of gross national product in the same period.

Said Burke in his summary to the Ad Council: "The GNP is now 2½ times greater than it was 30 years ago. The net income of these companies is 23 times greater!"

Shareholder benefits were measured next, the basis being an investment of $30,000 made 30 years ago in a composite of the Dow Jones industrial average, which today would be worth around $134,000.

"If you had invested the same $30,000 — $2,000 in each of these 15 companies instead," said Burke, "your $30,000 would be worth over $1-million."

Egypt's Ties With Israel Are Fading

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt's slow re-emergence on the Arab diplomatic scene comes at a time when its relationship with Israel, which flowered after the 1978 Camp David agreement and the peace treaty a year later, is wilting.

Many Egyptians feel the United States needs to push Israel into concessions on the Palestinian issue in order to revive the peace process launched more than six years ago by the late President Anwar Sadat.

"We have gone about as far as we can," said one senior diplomat, who asked not to be identified. "Many things are possible now, but they all depend on some movement by the Americans."

Five years after Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin signed the historic treaty, relations between the two former adversaries have deteriorated to little more than "a cold peace."

Gone are the optimistic forecasts of joint projects, increased trade and booming two-way tourism.

Egypt and Israel still maintain diplomatic relations, but there has been no Egyptian ambassador in Tel Aviv since September 1982. President Hosni Mubarak withdrew the envoy to protest the massacre of Palestinians in two refugee camps in Israeli-occupied south Beirut. Egypt says the ambassador will not return until Israel improves the "climate" in the region.

In a recent interview, Mustafa el-Said, minister of external trade, said the Egyptian people "have proved their true nationalism by not responding to normalization with Israel."

Egypt's state-controlled news media have sharply condemned Israel's continued occupation of south Lebanon, accusing Israeli troops of brutality in responding to guerrilla attacks there.

In the meantime, Egypt slowly has been mending its ties with other Arab states, which were severed after the 1979 treaty.

Egypt recently signed a trade agreement with Jordan, virtually ending the economic boycott imposed by King Hussein after the treaty. Press reports from Jordan say Mubarak will visit Amman and Baghdad, Iraq, possibly in February.

Despite Syrian and Libyan opposition, the Islamic Conference Organization invited Egypt to resume membership in the Moslem group, raising hopes Cairo might be allowed to return to the Arab League after the Arab summit, scheduled for March in Saudi Arabia.

Although Mubarak has vowed Egypt will not renounce the treaty with Israel, King Hassan II of Morocco quoted Mubarak as telling him the Egyptians now considered the Camp David agreement, which led to the treaty, as "dead."

Not surprisingly, the Egyptians blame Israel for failing to develop the relationship.

Mubarak canceled a planned trip to Israel in 1982 because Begin insisted the Egyptian leader visit east Jerusalem, which the Arabs consider occupied Arab territory but the Israelis view as part of their unified capital.

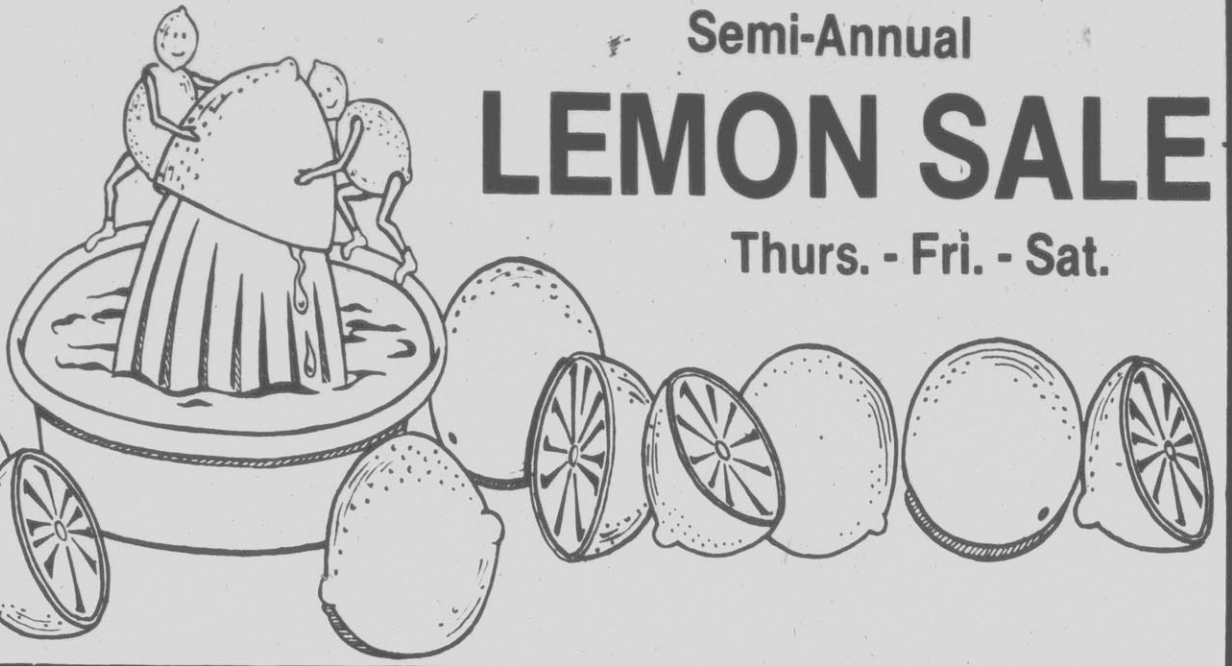

Talks between Israel and Egypt on Palestinian autonomy, also provided for in the Camp David agreement, broke down over Israel's demand that sessions be held in east Jerusalem. Egypt considers east Jerusalem's future status a subject of those negotiations.

"It would have been difficult enough for any Arab leader to have gone to Israel at all," said one Western diplomat, who refused to be identified. "But insisting that he set foot in east Jerusalem would have been humiliating."

Tourism also has not developed as expected. One reason is that the Egyptian Coptic Orthodox Church has forbidden its members to visit Israel until Israel returns to its control a monastery at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem. The monastery, seized during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, was given by Israel to the rival Ethiopian Coptic Church.

Precinct Meeting Set

Greenville Precinct No. 3 will meet at the West Greenville Gym tonight at 7:30 p.m. The meeting is open to the public.

Two Wrecks Investigated

An estimated $5,400 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 5:04 p.m. collision at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Red Banks Road, involving cars driven by Ronald Cleveland Buck of Route 2, Ayden, and Jennis Edward Wainwright of Route 1, Grifton.

Damage was estimated at $1,000 to the Buck car and $3,000 to the Wainwright auto.

Cars driven by Marie Bradshaw Speight of Route 4, Williamston, and Betty Taylor Coburn of 121 Greenwood Drive collided about 5:57 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 200 feet north of the Millbrook Street intersection, causing $800 damage to the Speight car and $600 damage to the Coburn auto.

Guest Reports Bag Taken

Greenville police today were looking for a woman who allegedly took a suitcase containing $400 in cash and other items from a second floor room at the Holiday Inn early this morning.

Officer David Nichols, who said the theft was reported about 2:39 a.m., said that, in addition to the cash, the bag taken from a room occupied by Heinrich Muhr of Kaarst, Germany, contained an estimated $500 worth of clothing, Muhr's passport and $1,120 worth of German travelers checks.

The officer quoted Muhr, who speaks little English, as saying he was awakened by a knock on his door. After opening the door, a woman entered, told Muhr she thought friends were staying in the room, then left after picking up Muhr's bag.

Nichols said Muhr was in the United States visiting various TRW plants. Muhr had been scheduled to return to Germany today.

Plywood Missing

Greenville police are investigating the theft of 15 sheets of plywood from a parking lot at Quail Ridge condominiums. Officer R.S. Sawyer said the plywood was reported taken about 10 a.m. Tuesday.

TV Set Reported Stolen

Officer W.C. Widener said Greenville police are continuing their investigation of the theft of a television from a house at 1504 E. Fourth St. The officer, who said the theft was reported at 11:06 p.m. Tuesday, said that in addition to the television, a cable television selector box was also stolen.

Camera Taken From Truck

A camera valued at $600 was reported taken from a truck parked at Pitt Plaza Tuesday. Officer P.W. Worthington, who said the theft was reported at 3:48 p.m., said a window was broken to gain entrance to the vehicle.

Child Abuse Is Charged

Greenville police Tuesday arrested Mary Alice Harris, 21, of 1202A W. Fifth St. on felony child abuse charges following investigation of an incident that occurred in November.

Detective Sgt. George Albertine reported that Ms. Harris allegedly pushed her 3-year-old son, causing him to strike a wall, knocking one of his front teeth out. Albertine reported that Ms. Harris took the child to a dentist on Nov. 7, and that three other teeth had to be removed.

Tax Deadline Approaching

Pitt County property owners have only a few days left in which to list their property for tax purposes without the addition of a penalty for late listing.

Tax Supervisor Jimmie Hardee said today that Tuesday is the last day for listing without penalty. He said a penalty will be added for property owners who list on Feb. 1 or after.

According to Hardee, about 70 percent of the 58,000 property tax listings expected this year have been made so far.

The tax supervisor said "a big percentage" of the mail listings have not been returned, and noted that mail listings not postmarked before midnight Jan. 31, will be subject to a penalty.

About half the property in the county is now listed by mail, Hardee said, pointing out that his office sent out about 29,000 mail abstracts.

He noted that the tax office at the courthouse and other listing places throughout the county will be open a half-day on Saturday for persons unable to list their property on weekdays.

Guard To Help Students

As a preliminary to the Financial Aid Workshop which will be held at Rose High at 8 p.m. Thursday, the Army National Guard will present "The Funding Game" in all government classes during the school day. The presentation is designed to dispel myths about financial aid and to assist students in learning how to go about packaging for financial aid.

Several informative sessions have been planned for seniors and parents from 7 to 8 p.m. prior to the Financial Aid Workshop.

ACS Denies Any Oversight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Cancer Society denies allegations that it has not supported efforts to rid the environment and workplace of cancer-causing chemicals.

In a letter released by the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a group of scientists called for the society to use its considerable influence to work against chemical carcinogens other than cigarette smoking.

Charges For 2 Brothers

Two Route 1, Chocowinity, brothers have been arrested by Pitt County deputies on charges of posing as termite exterminators and collecting checks from a homeowner for alleged treatment services, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

He said deputies arrested Joseph Junior Pritchard, 19, last Friday and Willie Earl Pritchard, 32, on Tuesday and charged them each with false pretense in connection with the incidents. Willie Pritchard was also charged with having no operator's license after he allegedly ran from his car after being stopped Monday in the Moyewood section, Tyson said.

The sheriff said the Pritchards are charged with going to the home of Rosa D. Smith on Route 1, Grimesland, on three occasions and identifying themselves as exterminators. He said one of the men allegedly went under the house and sprayed water while the second man received checks for the services. Tyson said Ms. Smith wrote two checks for $90 each and one for $94. The two $90 checks were cashed in Greenville, he said, and Joseph Pritchard was arrested as he attempted to cash the $94 check.

Bond for Willie Pritchard was set at $600, while his brother was placed under $500 bond, reported Tyson.

Dog Bite Stopped Delivery Of Mail

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — There's an embargo on mail delivery to one midtown street — and all because of "a little ole black and white dog."

The mailman-biting dog has prompted the cutoff of regular mail delivery to his owner and the other residents of Windsor Avenue, with the U.S. Postal Service standing behind the letter carrier.

"A little ole black and white dog can screw up the whole motto of the U.S. post office department," said resident Thomas L. Clifford.

Until daily mail service resumes, he said, an amendment should be made to the Postal Service motto "about neither rain nor snow nor gloom of night staying a carrier from his rounds."

The mail trouble began when the postal service announced the dog's owners had refused to chain the dog after the postman was bitten more than two weeks ago.

Since then, residents have received mail irregularly and in bundles, with the explanatory stamp: "Attacking Dog."

first she allowed the offender, a 1-year-old Australian shepherd called Socks, to go back outside. But she said has kept the dog indoors for two weeks.

During that time, Clifford contends he has received mail at his house only four times. Otherwise, he joked, he got "air mail — nothing."

"It's kind of a Russian roulette," said Robert Wright, director of customer services.

Chief Justice Failed To Act

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger unaccountably failed to act in recent days on an urgent request by eight newspapers to end secret jury selection in the trial of nine Klansmen and neo-Nazis.

After being told he had waited too long, Burger allowed the request to be withdrawn Tuesday.

Burger's highly unusual delay, ironically, coincided with a Supreme Court decision — written by the chief justice — promoting greater public access to jury selection.

Lawyers for the eight newspapers that sought to undo a federal judge's decision to exclude the public and press from jury selection in the trial in Winston-Salem, N.C., were allowed to withdraw their request Tuesday, since it had become moot.

Burger had been asked for help Jan. 17, and the letter seeking to withdraw that request was received by him Monday.

In the interim, the trial jury was chosen with the public and news media excluded. Opening arguments were given Monday.

There was no explanation as to why Burger did not act on the request. Receipt of the letter withdrawing the request was not made public until The Associated Press inquired as to the status of the case.

On Jan. 18, the Supreme Court ruled unanimously that news reporters and the public have a constitutional right to attend jury selection in criminal trials — and that their right can be infringed only as a last resort.

The decision also said that trial judges who close portions of the jury-selection process most often should provide transcripts for public scrutiny within a reasonable time.

"The presumption of openness may be overcome only by an overriding interest based on findings that closure is essential to preserve higher values and is narrowly tailored to serve that interest," Burger said in deciding a California case.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery is presiding over the trial in Winston-Salem, in which nine defendants are charged with civil rights violations stemming from the Nov. 3, 1979 shooting deaths of five Communist Workers Party members during a "Death to the Klan" rally in Greensboro.

Winn-Dixie Is Expanding

Winn-Dixie announced that work has begun on an expansion of the firm's Rivergate Shopping Center store that will add about 6,000 square feet of space to the existing facility.

Claudia Smith, store manager, said Winn-Dixie exercised its option to expand by taking in two adjoining facilities on the west side formerly occupied by Headlines Beauty Salon and Luu's Oriental Wholesale and Retail Imports.

Smith said the additional space will give Winn-Dixie approximately 25,800 square feet and provide more floor area for non-food items, perishables and general grocery stock. He said the delicatessen will not be affected by the expansion work, which will involve the removal of the west wall.

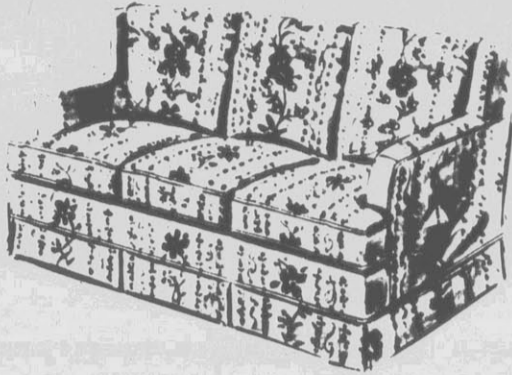

While the adjoining shops are not as deep as the present Winn-Dixie store, Smith said the new addition will be extended to "square off" at the rear of the facility. Upon completion by the middle or latter part of the summer, Winn-Dixie and Eckerd Drugs will have adjoining stores.

Smith said the project will also necessitate the incorporation of a revised entrance and exit format involving new doors on each side of the store front to reflect the widened facility. A sidewalk canopy is also planned.

A Citizens' Suggestion Box has been placed in the lobby of City Hall. Your ideas and requests will help the City provide the best quality public service.

Nineteen students at Rose High, sophomores and juniors, have been named as 1984 nominees to attend Governor's School. Selection of students chosen to attend the special school will be announced at a later date.

Some will be chosen to attend the Governor's School at Salem College in Winston-Salem, others are chosen to attend at St. Andrews College, Lenoir.

The 19 Rose High students nominated are 14 girls and five boys, with nearly half — nine — in the field of violin studies.

The nominees and their fields are:

•Andrea Bath, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Bath, violin. Andrea is a member of the Greenville Chamber Players, has performed in the N.C. All-State Orchestra and in the Sunday in the Park Orchestra, is active in church, and is the recipient of a Cannon violinist camp scholarship.

finger at previous administrations, political parties or the Congress. The president and his aides have already tipped his hand in the area of the relatively few policy initiatives that will be included in the speech.

The president will announce his decision that a manned orbiting station should be the cornerstone of the nation's future in space, according to government sources. It would be operational early in the next decade, would signal a permanent U.S. presence in space, and could expand to such objectives as a manned lunar base and expeditions to Mars, said the sources, who asked not to be identified. White House science adviser George A. Keyworth said recently that the president wants to "recapture the vision of Apollo" and maintain U.S. leadership in space at a time when the Soviet Union is pursuing ambitious space plans.

Reagan will renew his support for a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget, despite growing criticism from both conservatives and Democrats for his failure to narrow the gap between spending and income.

A White House official said Reagan would express concern about the size of the annual deficit and commit himself once again to reducing the red ink figure, which his aides say will reach $180 billion in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. It was a record $195.4 billion in fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30.

The president has already disclosed that his speech will include a pitch for congressional authority to veto individual segments of spending bills, a practice known as "line item veto," rather than being forced to sign or veto an entire bill that contains one unsatisfactory section.

Reagan also was said to be likely to propose steps to curb acid rain, an environmental problem that has

Negotiations Said Amicable

REIDSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The first session of contract negotiations between Fieldcrest Mills Inc. and the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union was "very amicable," a Fieldcrest official says.

The current contract between Fieldcrest and the ACTWU expires March 1. Fieldcrest employs about 9,000 workers in North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Virginia. There are about 2,700 hourly workers at 10 area plants.

Representatives from both sides met Monday from noon until about 3 p.m. in a conference room of the Holiday Inn in Reidsville, said O.L. Raines, Fieldcrest's regional personnel manager.

Raines declined to discuss the issues discussed. He said a second conference has been tentatively set for Jan. 30 at the same location.

Suspect Death Was A Suicide

A 63-year-old Greenville man died Sunday of an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound to the chest, according to a police department spokesman.

Lt. David Bullock identified the victim as Clarence E. Tripp of 106 Columbia Ave. Bullock said the incident was reported at 4:43 p.m. Sunday.

Dr. Stan Harris, Pitt County medical examiner, could not be reached this morning for an official ruling on the cause of death.

Steel Industry Trying Restrict Foreign Imports

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Steel industry boosters from mill towns to Capitol Hill are hoping that worker layoffs, staggering losses and election-year politics will bring government action to restrict the amount of foreign steel being shipped to the United States.

The most popular strategy calls for industry executives, the United Steelworkers union and steel-state legislators to unite behind a bill that would limit steel imports for five years to 15 percent of total U.S. consumption — substantially less than the current total.

Bethlehem Steel and the USW announced Tuesday that they were pursuing an alternate route to the same goal with a sweeping trade complaint seeking quotas or tariffs against all foreign steel shipments. In their complaint to the International Trade Commission, they contend the imports — fairly traded or not — are eating into their jobs and profits.

"There's no disagreement over objectives. The industry is going down a series of different paths to get there," said Robert Peabody, president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, which has not joined the Bethlehem suit.

The trade group and most of its members, worried that the Bethlehem petition will produce no results or unsatisfactory ones, are lobbying hard for the quota bill.

"We're looking for something that will reduce imports either by agreement or legislation," says Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., chairman of the House Steel Caucus. "We want to see the import bill passed but we'll take what we can get. It probably will have to be some kind of compromise with the White House."

A worldwide steel quota is anathema to the Reagan administration.

Deputy Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer said at a Jan. 10 briefing, "There's a difference between a global quota and putting limits on imports to resolve an unfair trade suit."

But Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., chairman of the Senate Steel Caucus, said individual trade complaints filed by steel companies against various countries and products would impose barriers "even more stringent" than the proposed 15 percent cap.

"As they (administration officials) become faced with the reality of those suits, they may come to believe the quota legislation will be more helpful than harmful," Heinz said.

Murtha said he doubts the president ever will publicly support an international quota, but he expects unemployment in the industry to grow if the situation does not change.

"If the election tightens up during July and August, that's when we'll have the most possibility of getting things worked out," said Murtha.

The steel industry lost more than $6 billion in 1982 and 1983. Employment has rebounded from an all-time low of 151,000 in November 1982 to more than 240,000 a year later, but remains far below the mid-'70s peak of 453,000.

The industry is now operating at about 68 percent capacity after having cut nearly 10 percent of its production capacity last year. Further cutbacks are in the offing, as U.S. Steel demonstrated with its plans to close several facilities and eliminate 15,400 positions across the country.

Both labor and management blame the slump on imports, which accounted for 20.3 percent of the U.S. market in the first 11 months of 1983. American steel companies themselves bought nearly 5 percent of the imports in the form of unfinished slabs.

Domestic steel companies historically have opposed worldwide quotas and instead sought tariffs and quotas on a country-by-country, product-by-product basis. But last fall U.S. Steel chairman David Roderick said the industry had reversed its position and will back a blanket quota law.

"It's going to be an uphill job to convince the House, Senate and the administration that this is an appropriate temporary solution," Peabody said. "But we are certainly going to try to do it."

The House quota bill, introduced in November just before Congress recessed for the holidays, has 40 sponsors. Murtha intends to try for 100. With such widespread support and a hearing promised by Florida Democrat Sam Gibbons, chairman of the Ways and Means trade subcommittee, he hopes to force the bill onto the floor.

Heinz said he expects to introduce a quota bill in the Senate after strengthening requirements that profits be reinvested in steelmaking facilities — a provision sought by the union in the House bill as well.

"We want to assure that the benefits of having a quota, which could be considerable profits, simply don't go to banks and shareholders and, for that matter, to labor unions," Heinz said.

A quota would also provide quicker, more efficient relief than the nation's cumbersome trade laws, said Heinz, who has introduced bills to reform those laws. He said the quota bill is the only way to channel industry profits into steel modernization.

Short of approving a worldwide quota, the administration could try to negotiate a voluntary agreement with Third World nations and others responsible for surging imports. The president also could initiate a comprehensive unfair trade case and, if harm to domestic firms is found, impose some combination of duties and quotas on various products.

The latter course was followed last year in the case of stainless and other specialty steel products. The result was a mix of duties and quotas that the industry considered insufficient but better than nothing.

There are 16 trade cases involving a dozen countries and products pending before the Commerce Department and the International Trade Commission. U.S. Steel is poised to file cases against two additional nations while Bethlehem Steel expects to petition under a different section of the law for steel quotas and tariffs on a global scale.

Trucking Industry Sees Year Of Higher Taxes

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

North Carolina trucking industry officials say they are gearing up for a year of increased highway-use taxes, keen competition and rate cuts that may force small carriers out of business.

But they say efficient companies will prosper in 1984 despite further deregulation of the industry and an 82 percent hike in road use taxes.

"It won't be easy to be profitable this year, but it can be done if a company is well operated," said Franz Hoscher, president of Charlotte-based Thurston Motor Lines. "There will be no room for bad management if a trucking company is to survive and prosper."

"Last year was a good year for us and we're looking for a better year this year, despite more taxes and competition," said Raymond Parks, manager of Overnite's Greensboro terminal.

Under the Transportation Assistance Act of 1982, the tax for a five axle tractor semitrailer will increase from $1,746 to $3,182 on July 1. The same legislation increased gasoline taxes for motorists, including truckers, by 5 cents last April.

Other taxes have been applied to tires and to the sales of trailers over a certain weight.

According to the North Carolina Motor Carriers Association in Raleigh, an 80,000-pound tractor-trailer traveling 80,000 miles a year will pay $4,823 in taxes by 1985, up from $2,274 last year.

Congress approved the taxes to support highway repairs.

Trucking-company officials say the increased costs will be passed along to their customers.

"We have to pass it to the consumer," said John Youngblood of Youngblood Truck Lines in Fletcher. "There is no offsetting benefit to it."

Trucking is a $1.5 billion industry in the state, according to the American Trucking Association in Washington. Since the Motor Carriers Act of 1980 deregulated the industry, the number of licensed interstate carriers in North Carolina jumped 25 percent to 4,517 in 1983.

Since deregulation, freight carriers have been able to provide service where they choose at the price the market will bear. After July, truckers will lose the antitrust immunity that allows them to join regional rate-setting bureaus.

Fierce competition brought about by deregulation has forced 365 trucking firms nationwide out of business, ATA figures show. In North Carolina, dozens of trucking companies have declared bankruptcy or merged with larger carriers, said Elbert Peters, executive vice president of the state Motor Carriers Association.

Peters said he believes competition among carriers in the state peaked last year.

"I don't foresee as much competition this year as last year," Peters said. "Rate cutting and competition will continue but not at the same pace. There will probably be some more regional carriers that merge with larger companies looking for a regional market."

Holscher said he expects 1984 to be a "shake-up year" in the trucking industry, with inefficient companies failing.

"In the deregulated, rate-cutting environment, only so many companies can make it," he said. "But in a way, it's good. Only well-managed companies will make money and stay in business. That means the consumer is the winner in the long run."

TV Surveillance Of Suspects Is Raising Questions

By MARK HEINRICH
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Tiny cameras concealed by the FBI in two apartments used by four reputed members of the shadowy Puerto Rican nationalist group FALN rolled for more than 130 hours over six months. What the lenses captured — including bomb-making and weapons-stockpiling, according to the FBI — provided what prosecutors considered the only means of convicting the four. But on Jan. 10, the eve of their trial on bomb plot charges, U.S. District Judge George N. Leighton banned the videotapes on grounds that they amounted to "unreasonable search and seizure." "The home is a sacred place in this country," he said. His decision, which the government has now taken to the appeals court level, has legal authorities questioning whether society can be protected from terrorists skilled at outwitting more conventional technology like wiretaps. The FBI won court permission for the surveillance by demonstrating "probable cause" to believe that crimes were being planned. They based their argument on "hundreds of hours of debriefing" by a convicted FALN member-turned-informer and on the defendants' use of disguises, false names and zigzag routes to throw off possible pursuers.

claimed responsibility for more than 100 bombings in the United States since 1974. Ten FALN members are serving long prison terms for bombings in the Chicago area. They were convicted in 1981 after a tumultuous trial in which the defendants shouted down the judge with political rhetoric and called him a "clown" and "puppet" of government authority they did not recognize.

If Leighton's ruling is upheld, terrorism will get worse in the United States, says a former Justice Department prosecutor who wrote the federal legislation governing electronic surveillance.

"With terrorists, it's virtually impossible to turn them as witnesses because they're ideologically motivated," said G. Robert Blakey, now a law professor at University of Notre Dame. "You can't infiltrate them because they only deal with people they've known for years, and very early on they ask a person to engage in unlawful contact, which a police officer cannot do."

"That leaves electronic surveillance, but unfortunately these people do not always talk about what they're doing; they just do it. So if you can't videotape them, you deprive the law of an absolutely essential tool."

"That will mean a few more buildings blown up, a few more innocent people losing their lives," he said. Leighton ruled that the audio evidence was admissible under federal law, but that videotaping inside a private residence was not sanctioned. He urged an appeal, saying the legal issue was unprecedented and "too important" for one judge to decide.

The 1968 Omnibus Crime Act does not address the use of hidden cameras because that investigative technique was rarely used at the time. But that has changed with the development of the "minicam," a miniature camera which was instrumental in the convictions of congressmen who took bribes in the Abscam case.

That case differed from the FALN inquiry because the suspects were taped outside their homes and undercover FBI agents in the suspects' presence knew they were being taped, the Puerto Ricans' defense attorneys say.

Hartzler contended that the cameras recorded activity in a "bomb factory," not a home, and thus the defendants did not have "a reasonable expectation of privacy" — as Thomas argued.

N.C. Officials Defend State Education But Seek Improving

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's public schools have been unfairly maligned in national comparisons, but there is plenty of room for improvement, state lawmakers and other officials say. "We put education in a high priority with respect to our ability to pay," said state Treasurer Harlan Boyle, who noted that a survey placing North Carolina 45th on education spending also put the state in the top five on percent of budget spent for education.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, chairman of the Public Education Policy Council's finance subcommittee, said in a meeting Tuesday that such surveys fail to account for such factors as lower wages, taxes and overhead in determining the quality of education.

Dr. Charles D. Liner of the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill agreed that wages only 91 percent of the national average and a lower cost-of-living might hurt North Carolina's image. "We don't have to spend as much as Alaska or New York (to achieve the same results)," he said.

Liner said North Carolina has led the nation in equalizing the educational differences between the rich and the poor. "We have a very powerful equalizing school system," he said, adding that by providing most school funding at the state level, North Carolina holds down differences that might be generated when affluent counties use local taxes to bolster education.

But he said there is no legal way to eliminate the edge held by the rich. "The wealthier units will always be able to outdo the poorer units," he said. Liner said the state is working to change its policies from those designed to guarantee minimum competence to those providing flexibility so each county can design programs to meet its needs.

Dr. Howard Maniloff of the Department of Public Instruction said pilot projects giving more leeway to schools in eight counties should provide valuable insight.

"Most states provide their local units more discretion than we do in North Carolina," he said, adding that each county has come up with a different way to use money allocated to them in blocks.

One county suggested paying teachers with good attendance for unused sick days, while others earmarked funds for librarians, computers, better pupil-to-staff ratios or new facilities, Maniloff said.

Systems participating in the experiment are in Jones, Pitt, Wake, Bladen, Mecklenburg, Guilford, Catawba and Transylvania counties.

"The basic assumption is that local units can make better decisions about spending money on education than Raleigh can," Maniloff said.

"They could do 15 percent more with less restrictions," Boyle added. When the project has been analyzed the General Assembly will be told how each system performed and the projected costs or savings of similar statewide projects, he said.

Trudeau Trying Reduce Tension

TORONTO (AP) — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, frustrated in his efforts to see Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov, today began an eight-day trip to Czechoslovakia, East Germany and Romania in a continuing bid to reduce East-West tensions.

In recent months, Trudeau has pressed his initiative with leaders of the Western alliance in Washington and elsewhere, with heads of neutral countries, and with Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang.

He has tried to arrange a meeting with Andropov, who is in poor health, or with other top Soviet officials. Last week Trudeau's aides said he had received a letter from Andropov saying a meeting was possible at "a time in the not too distant future."

A senior Canadian official, briefing reporters on condition he not be identified, said the chief purpose of Trudeau's trip to the East bloc countries is to "reinforce the great stake the middle powers have in reducing tensions."

Trudeau's plane landed at Prague's old Ruzyně airport after an overnight flight from Ottawa. Accompanied by his 10-year-old son, Sacha, Trudeau was welcomed by Premier Lubomir Strougal, Foreign Minister Bohuslav Choupek, Defense Minister Martin Dzur and uniformed children holding red carnations.

Trudeau was to hold talks with Strougal this afternoon, and was to meet Thursday with President and Communist Party Chief Gustav Husak.

He flies to Switzerland on Thursday to participate in an international business conference.

On Monday, Trudeau travels to East Berlin for talks with President Erich Honecker, then leaves two days later for Romania, where he is scheduled to meet with President Nicolae Ceausescu.

Canadian officials said Czechoslovakia and East Germany were chosen in part because the Soviet Union is installing new SS-21 missiles in those countries in response to the deployment of U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe.

Romania has managed to conduct an independent foreign policy despite its ties to the Soviet bloc, and Ceausescu has publicly endorsed Trudeau's peace efforts.

Trudeau, 64, launched his initiative with a speech last October, saying the threat of nuclear war was too important to leave only to the superpowers.

U.S. Elections Make USSR 'Unsure'

By ROXINNE ERVASTI - Associated Press Writer
 MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. officials here say continuing strident attacks in the Soviet press on the Reagan administration indicate the Kremlin isn't sure which path to take in its relations with Washington during this U.S. election year.

They maintain President Yuri V. Andropov's illness is a factor in what they see as a lack of firm decision-making on ties with the United States, but they say they remain optimistic.

The Soviet press is controlled by the government and its commentaries are seen as a mirror of official thinking.

In advance of, and after, President Reagan's speech Jan. 16 devoted to U.S.-Soviet relations, the press characterized it as an empty election-year ploy designed to counter a hawkish image.

A commentary by the Novosti news agency distributed to the Western press here said Reagan's speech at first "appeared to be extending an olive branch to the socialist nations." But it said the idea was quashed after U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz's comments at last week's East-West security conference in Stockholm, Sweden, about a "heartless" division of Germany.

Soviet press accounts of the Stockholm speech by Shultz, and to a lesser extent his meeting there last Wednesday with Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, said there was no U.S. overture for better relations, especially in regard to disarmament talks which the Soviets walked out of late last year.

U.S. officials have said the meeting was without the strong rhetoric that characterized Gromyko's address, in which he referred to U.S. "maniacal plans" for nuclear war. Tass, the official news agency, transmitted an account of the meeting before it was over, and indicated Gromyko gave a tough lecture to Shultz.

A senior U.S. official here speculated that the Soviets are pursuing, with rhetoric, an earlier-decided course aimed at dampening Reagan's re-election chances and promoting dissatisfaction with Reagan among U.S. allies.

On the other hand, "they aren't giving us a consistent signal of not wanting to deal with us," the official said.

The diplomat, who asked not to be identified because of the sensitivity of his post, said he sees the Soviets as being in a "run-up" to the U.S. presidential election.

He said the election is "undoubtedly obsessing Soviet decision-makers," who he speculated don't know whether to "sit on their hands" or begin some major dialogue with the United States soon.

Until some high-level decision is made to seek a thaw in the strained ties, he indicated, the official press is likely to continue characterizing superpower relations as almost hopelessly soured.

The diplomat said there have been some signs the Soviets have decided to deal with the Reagan administration, including sending Gromyko to meet Shultz in Stockholm.

He cited a Soviet agreement to hold talks in Washington this Friday to resolve an old Bering Sea demarcation dispute, and agreement to confer on improving emergency White House-Kremlin communications — the so-called "hot line."

U.S. diplomats say they think the Soviets, having previously decided to take a hard line toward Washington, just need time to alter it should they decide to.

With Andropov ill, Western diplomats here assume that top military officials now have a major say in policy; after the Communist Party the military is the next leading force in the country. The U.S. diplomats say the continuing hardline stand in the disarmament arena probably reflects this.

Andropov, who has not been seen in public since Aug. 18, was quoted by Tass on Tuesday as reaffirming the Soviet refusal to resume talks on limiting medium-range nuclear missiles until U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles newly deployed in Western Europe are dismantled.

But Tass said Andropov, in an interview with the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, agreed with Reagan's call for a U.S.-Soviet dialogue but only if the United States retreats from "positions of threats and pressure."

Before Andropov's interview with Pravda, some small signs of a swerve were detectable.

Television commentator Valentin Zorin said after Reagan's speech Jan. 16 that the president had avoided the "abusive language" which has so stung the Soviets, but complained that no major new initiatives have been made.

A Tass political analyst, Yuri Kornilov, complained in a commentary distributed to Western correspondents that the U.S. press is telling Americans that the Soviets are taking a tough line toward the U.S. government. But he suggested some optimism, saying Washington did not "point blank" reject Soviet proposals in Stockholm on reducing arms and tensions.

The senior U.S. diplomat said it is too early to tell what the Soviets will decide to do on major U.S.-Soviet issues before the election. He suggested they may wait to see who the Democratic presidential nominee is.

Have A Suspect In Escape By Woman

RALEIGH (AP) — Prison officials say they have a suspect who may have aided the escape of a woman imprisoned at the Correctional Center for Women for killing her child.

Kathy Matthew Jones, 32, convicted seven years ago in the shooting death of her 3-year-old daughter, remained at large Tuesday after her Monday morning escape.

The SBI and authorities in Wake, Johnston and Harnett counties are continuing the search for Mrs. Jones and three or four masked people who overpowered a prison guard, used his keys to unlock a prison gate and set her free.

SBI District Agent Dan Gilbert said the escape was well-planned and that the accomplices had a car waiting nearby to make the getaway.

"We do have an individual we very much want to talk with," Gilbert said, declining to add who the suspect is.

A guard was jumped from behind while standing outside his guard post watching

Mrs. Jones leave an upholstery enterprise building inside the prison gates.

Authorities believe his assailants waited in a wooded area and jumped the guard as Mrs. Jones reported for work in the upholstery building about 6:30 a.m. They were wearing ski masks and at least one was carrying a stick or pipe.

At least one of the accomplices is a woman, said Correction Department spokesman Patty McQuillan.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Cambodian resistance guerrillas alleged in a statement received Tuesday that Vietnamese troops used toxic gas in battle several times this month.

The statement said the latest attacks came last Friday and Saturday during heavy fighting near the central portion of the Thai-Cambodian border, "seriously suffocating" four guerrillas.

Claim System A 'Lightwave Highway'

CHILLED TO THE BONE — Though it appears that the recent sub-zero weather has literally frozen Professor Michael Finnegan's pet to the bone, he's actually pulling a gorilla skeleton across the Kansas State University campus in Manhattan, Kan. Finnegan, a professor of sociology and anthropology was pulling the skeleton which is used in anthropology and biology classes from one building to a class in another. (AP Laserphoto)

HOLMDEL, N.J. (AP) — Researchers say they have taken a step toward creating "lightwave highways" using an experimental system that in one second can send 1 billion information bits — the equivalent of 100 novels — a distance of 75 miles.

Officials at Bell Laboratories, the research and development arm of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., say the laser light system eventually may be used to deliver a wider range of services, including those for home computers.

It also could reduce the cost of sending information because fewer electrical components would be needed and less space would be required for the equipment, the researchers said. They did not speculate on when it might be commercially applicable.

"The success of this experiment is a major step toward lightwave highways able to carry huge amounts of voice, data, video and graphics across continents and under oceans," said Paul Henry, head of optical systems research at Bell Laboratories.

"The longer the allowable distance between signal boosters, the more economical such transmission systems will be," he said.

AT&T considers the system a record in distance covered in a second by 1 billion information bits — a gigabit.

The signal was sent in October through 75 miles of glass fiber thinner than a strand of human hair, said Bryon Kasper, a researcher in the Lightwave Systems Research Department.

The Bell researchers were in New Orleans today to present a paper at a fiber communications conference outlining the lightwave system, a company representative said.

In the experiment, incoming light was converted into an electrical impulse at the receiver, said Kasper.

The transmission was carried out without electronic equipment between the transmitter and the receiver, Kasper said. The experiment showed that 1 billion bits of information can be sent 75 miles before the signal has to be regenerated, Kasper said.

After 75 miles, the signal becomes weaker and errors can crop up, he said. For example, in the transmission of 100 novels, a lower case letter might erroneously show up as an upper case letter.

"It would definitely reduce the cost of existing communications services and possibly allow many new services to be provided, which previously have been uneconomical," Kasper said.

He added that possibilities for the system in the home computer field "are almost infinite."

Typical expansion of service would include linking home computers to a central library system or an entertainment service that could offer movies such as those now offered on video cassettes, Kasper added.

He said Bell Laboratories achieved another record in August when it sent 420 million bits of information 100 miles.

Warmer Temperatures Spawn A Lot Of Fog And Foul Odors

By The Associated Press
A welcome warm spell that melted off a morning ice storm in the Northeast turned to trouble when it spawned a thick foggy shroud that grounded airplanes for hours, snarled evening traffic — and trapped a foul odor over metropolitan New York.

Tuesday's rise in temperature caused as many problems as it relieved when the fog settled in just as motorists who had inched through a slippery ice storm in the morning began heading home.

"It was by far the worst day of the year for motorists," said police Lt. Robert Falzarano of Passaic Township, N.J.

The most unusual development was the mysterious stench, likened to rotten garbage or burning rubber, that hung over metropolitan New York and northern New Jersey. Thousands of curious residents called authorities before the smell dispersed early today, with New York City's emergency 911 number logging 5,000 calls between 5 and 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

New York Fire Department spokesman John Mulligan blamed the stench on a "temperature inversion" — occurring when the ground is colder than the air — that trapped fumes from the area's petrochemical plants.

In this situation, the National Weather Service explained, "Particulates thrown into the atmosphere, whether from industry, automobile exhausts or other sources, are not dispersed." The fog, which slowed traffic and forced the periodic cancellation of flights at airports in the mid-Atlantic states Tuesday night, began to lift early today. Temperatures were expected to remain above freezing today throughout most of the nation, and "I don't think we'll get down to the real cold territory for a while," said Gene Hathaway of the National Weather Service.

A heavy fog also disrupted flights in Atlanta on Tuesday, diverting incoming planes, delaying takeoffs for hours and forcing the cancellation of scores of flights, officials said. Thousands of stranded passengers crowded the terminals overnight as the airlines struggled to get their schedules back to normal.

In Newark, N.J., the soupy mist and rain had reduced visibility to zero by 3:30 p.m. Tuesday, barely clearing to half a mile by 10 p.m., said Harry Woodworth of the National Weather Service.

Airlines at all three major airports in the New York area, LaGuardia, Kennedy and Newark, reported cancellations or delays of up to 40 minutes through the afternoon, and Washington's National Airport closed for incoming flights for 2½ hours.

Three people were killed late Tuesday when a light plane crashed in heavy fog about a mile from the airport in Groton-New London, Conn., said authorities who were trying to determine the cause of the crash. The victims, whose identities were not known early today, were en route from Waukegan, Ill., to southeastern Connecticut, officials said.

The evening mess followed freezing rain, sleet and snow that hit the Northeast during the morning rush hour, causing scores of fender-benders, snarling commuters for hours and even posing a hazard to pedestrians. One man died in a car accident on an icy highway in New Jersey.

Portions of major roads were closed and many schools shut or opened late in Maryland, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Traffic on Route 202, a major commuter artery in Philadelphia, was "absolutely, horribly stopped" for up to two hours in places. Route 17 in Ridgewood, N.J., was closed in both directions because of accidents, as was the Merritt Parkway in Greenwich, Conn.

Trains and buses in the New York area were running up to 30 minutes late because of the weather, authorities said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today with average issues leading the way.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial climbed 6.28 to 1,249.16 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 3-2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Energy stocks have perked up lately with the help of some favorable earnings reports for the fourth quarter of last year, and talk that the outlook for the industry is improving.

Cold weather over much of the nation this winter has bolstered demand and prices for heating oil. And analysts reason that consumption of energy should increase if economic recovery continues in the industrialized countries.

Interest in the group also has been spurred by a lively pace of takeover activity lately.

Among actively traded energy issues this morning, Halliburton rose 7/8 to 38 1/4; Unocal 3/4 to 37; Texaco 1/4 to 37 3/8, and Occidental Petroleum 1/4 to 28.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 1.57 to 1,242.88.

Advances held an 8-7 edge on declines at the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 103.05 million shares, against 82.01 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .54 to 95.86. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .17 at 224.31.

Confidence Votes Set In Israeli Parliament

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's Parliament today debated whether to bring down Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's coalition government because of its economic policies, but Shamir picked up key support before two no-confidence motions reached the floor.

The raucous debate began late this morning, after two undecided groups indicated they would provide the votes needed to keep the government in place.

Labor Party leader Shimon Peres opened the opposition assault, declaring "the time has come to go to new elections to give the people a chance for an alternative."

"The government," he said, "has to stand in judgment for the economic collapse. The government has turned the people into those who enrich themselves and those who have become impoverished."

Peres was interrupted by catcalls, and the debate quickly deteriorated into a fist-shaking shouting match.

Later, Shamir's finance minister, Yigal Cohen-Orgad, was repeatedly shouted down — often for several minutes at a time — as he struggled to deliver a statistics-laden speech designed to put the government in better light.

Across the street, about 500 demonstrators gathered in a park and denounced the economy. One sign read: "We are all living below the poverty level."

Prior to the debate, Israel Radio said Ben-Zion Rubin, deputy minister of labor and welfare, met with Cohen-Orgad and then said his small TAMI party would fall into line rather than defect.

Earlier, two members of the Liberal Party whose votes had been in doubt said they wouldn't join the bid to oust Shamir, whose 3 1/2-month-old coalition has 64 seats in the 120-seat Knesset, or Parliament.

The coalition has been threatened by Israel's continuing economic woes, including a large budget deficit, public employees' strikes and inflation gauged at 190 percent for the past year.

The future of the coalition appeared to hinge on the three votes of TAMI, which speaks for underprivileged Sephardic Jews from North African and Middle East countries. Its three Knesset members have demanded that taxes be adjusted for the poor.

But as debate began, Israel

Army radio quoted TAMI leader Aharon Abuhazira as saying he would vote with the coalition against the no-confidence measure. The radio said Cohen-Orgad had agreed to introduce a minimum wage bill and alter tax brackets for the poor.

The debate opened with visiting West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl in the Knesset chamber's gallery for dignitaries. Three members of the Knesset walked out in protest, according to Israel radio, but they were expected to return for the vote.

Coalition loyalty appeared shaky than during two previous no-confidence tests survived by Shamir.

Missiles Are Sent To American Ships

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some ships in the U.S. fleet off Lebanon and near the mouth of the Persian Gulf will be equipped with Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to protect against possible kamikaze suicide attacks, the Pentagon says.

Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch acknowledged Tuesday that the Stingers were requested by commanders because of concerns about an increased threat of suicide attacks against U.S. ships, possibly by small planes that may be flown either by Iranians or Syrian-backed fighters.

It was understood that the Stingers, bazooka-like weapons fired by shoulder, are being placed primarily on amphibious ships and auxiliaries which lack the anti-aircraft armament with which warships are equipped.

Burch said the fleet in the Mideast region has been placed on an "increased state of readiness" because of some intelligence reports of possible suicide strikes.

Burch said, "We recognize there is the potential for a terrorist-type attack against ships of the fleet" and that the increased vigilance, as well as the shipment of Stinger missiles, are precautionary measures.

Burch declined to discuss the number of Stingers sent to the fleet nor the ships which received them, although he implied that some older combatant vessels were getting them along with amphibious ships and auxiliaries.

The Stinger, which is about five feet long and weighs about 34.5 pounds, is designed to hit aircraft at a distance of about three miles. The missile travels at supersonic speeds and homes in on the heat generated by the engines of its targets.

Friendly Start To Hong Kong Parley Faculty Senate.

PEKING (AP) — The new leader of China's team negotiating the future of Hong Kong said today that he looks forward to a "satisfactory result at an early date" in the talks with Britain.

Assistant Foreign Minister Zhou Nan's remark to reporters came at the opening of a new round of talks. On Tuesday, Hu Yaobang, the Chinese Communist Party's general secretary, said an agreement "acceptable to both countries" was now possible.

Britain's 99-year lease on the New Territories, the bulk of the colony's land mass, expires in 1997. The trading and financial center on China's southeast coast has been occupied by Britain since 1841.

Britain's new ambassador in Peking, Sir Richard Evans, also attended the talks for the first time and said he had been warmly received by the Chinese. He added: "I'm looking forward to useful and constructive talks today, tomorrow and hereafter."

The negotiations began in October 1982 after Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher visited Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping in Peking.

The Sunday Times of London reported this week that Britain has conceded sovereignty to China and no longer seeks a formal British administrative role over the colony of 5.5 million people after 1997. The talks now reportedly are concentrating on guarantees of Hong Kong's social and economic systems.

Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang had stressed that Hong Kong would retain its present life style for at least 50 years after the change of sovereignty. But while it will have a form of self-government, the Chinese say final control will be in Peking.

will get into a situation as bad as public school teachers are in now," Howell said. "We've had the same problems of salary freezes and tight budgets that they've had. Our economic situation, as a group, is also not good. Our salaries may be higher, but we have people with considerably higher credentials."

Howell continued, "I hope they have some success. I hope they get some response."

The chancellor also said, "When I think of salaries, I include all other employees of the university, too. About half our work force, a great many people, are in other sorts of positions here ... administrative, housekeeping, auxiliary positions of all sorts."

The problem of low salaries, Howell said, "is one that all chancellors and the general administration will be working on."

UNC System President William Friday, in a telephone interview today, said "Last Friday, at a meeting of the Board of Governors, I indicated to them that faculty salary increases are the number one priority throughout the university budget requests, and I certainly intend to pursue that."

Friday also said, "I appreciate what the Faculty Senate (at ECU) has done and that action will be very useful."

Hunt Holds Off Rose For 71-59 Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Wilson Hunt outscored Rose High School 12-5 in the final three minutes of the second period and then held off a Rampant rally at the end to take a 71-59 Big East basketball victory last night.

Hunt's girls also came up with an upset victory in their game, taking a 50-36 win over the Rampettes.

The defeat left Rose with a 2-3 Big East record, 7-6 overall. Hunt boosted its record in the conference to 2-3 also and is 4-9 overall. The Rose girls drop to 3-2 in the league and 3-10 overall, while Hunt is now 2-3 and 4-9.

Turnovers hurt the Rampants early as they committed 13 in the first period, most of them unforced, in trying to get to the basket too quickly. That allowed Hunt to score eight straight points and erase a five-point Rampant lead. Then, in the second period after closing the gap and tying it at 22-22 with 3:03 left, Rose was outscored 10-2 over the next two and a half minutes as the Warriors broke out in front again.

The Rampants then fought back within five twice, but ran out of gas.

"We just played sloppy," Coach Jim Brewington said. "I really thought that we'd have a better shot at them, but we just had too many turnovers. The only time we really played ball was in the fourth quarter."

"I guess it's the worst game we've played. Our minds just didn't seem to be in it tonight. No one did a really good job for us. We had so much foul trouble and that hurt us too," he said.

"We've just got to get back on our feet and regroup."

The 13 turnovers — out of a total of 25 — in the first period really hurt Rose. The Rampants moved out into an 8-3 lead halfway through the period, but then the turnovers allowed the Warriors to rally, scoring eight in a row for an 11-8 lead. That margin held at 13-10 at the end of the first quarter. While Hunt was scoring the eight points Rose didn't get off a single shot.

Hunt stretched the lead out to as much as six, 20-14, before Mac Walston led a rally that ended when Hunter Bost hit a jumper with 3:03 left to tie it up at 22-22.

But again, Rose fell apart, suffering four turnovers in the final three minutes that led to Hunt's pulling away again, this time by eight, 32-24 with 29 seconds left. Carlton Wilson hit a three-point play to cut it back to 32-27, but Darren McClure's long jumper with six seconds left made it 34-27 at halftime.

In the early minutes of the second half, Hunt made its biggest move, pouring in 11 points while holding Rose to just two. That made it 45-29 after three minutes. That margin grew more, however, reaching 17 at 50-33 on a free throw by Kenneth Cox before Rose rallied with in 11, 52-41, at the end of the quarter.

Rose continued its rally in the fourth period, cutting it to as little as five, 62-57 with 1:34 left. Then, after another exchange of baskets, Hunt hit on three of four free throws, and added two baskets to run back out to the final 12-point margin.

Reggie McCray led Hunt with 21 points while Charles Jones added 20. McClure had 12 and Anthony Best had 11.

Rose was led by Walston with 21 while Wilson had 17.

The Rampette girls suffered an almost similar fate, running out to an early seven point lead, then falling apart.

After the two swapped the lead a couple of times, Rose moved ahead at 4-3 and added three more baskets for a 10-3 lead at the end of the first quarter.

But in the second period, Rose managed only two free throws — no baskets — and Hunt rallied to move into a six-point lead. Led by Janise Mangus and Michelle Hale, the Lady Warriors moved ahead at 12-11 and ran out to an 18-12 lead by hitting nine of ten free throws in the period.

The foul line continued to be the biggest problem for Rose the rest of the night. Hunt cashed in on 26 of 34 free throws, with Rose making just six of 17. Three Rampettes fouled out of the game, Doris Richardson, Cindy Humphrey and Niansa Outlaw. No one fouled out for Hunt.

Hunt continued its blitz of the Rampettes during the early minutes of the third period, running its lead out to 11 points. 27-16 before Richardson and Sheila Carmon sparked a rally that closed it to five points, 27-22, and then to four, 31-27 with 1:07 left.

But Hunt scored the final four points of the quarter and then added the first ten in a row in the fourth period to up the lead to 18, 45-27, before the Rampettes got going again. And by then, it was too late.

"We just couldn't do anything right tonight," Coach Dennis Gibson said. I really don't think that we've recovered from Friday (a loss to front-running Wilson Fike).

We played a lot better in that game.

"The fouls killed us. They took it to us at the line. Their pressure bothered us too. We managed to get the ball into our end of the court and then froze up against it. We just didn't execute."

Hale led the Hunt scoring with 17 while Mangum and Jamie Mills each had 11. Richardson led Rose with 12.

Rose returns to action on Friday, traveling to Elizabeth City Northeastern.

Play Set In Tourney

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson, a winner the last time out, opens a four-tournament Western swing this week in the enriched Isuzu-Andy Williams San Diego Open golf tournament.

"I'm very enthusiastic about playing. I'm eager and ready to go," Watson said before a practice round over the Torrey Pines Golf Club course.

The tournament, which announced recently an increase in its purse from $300,000 to $400,000, begins Thursday with Watson the obvious favorite in the 156-man field.

He won the first tournament of the year, the Seiko-Tucson Match Play Championship, and served notice he's eager to resume the dominant role in world golf he surrendered last season.

"I just didn't play that well last year. And, with the birth of my son, I took a lot of time off, maybe didn't play as much as I should have."

"This year, I'm more eager to play than I have been in some time. I'm working on some changes in the swing that I know will help. And I'll be playing a heavier schedule this year, too," he said. That includes the next four tournaments.

"I had one prime goal this year: win and win early. I did that," he said. "Now I want to win often."

And this is one of the tournaments where he has had frequent success before. He's won twice in this event and was a strong contender last season.

Collins Making Mark Early In NFL Career

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

When you're a running back coming out of a college which posted a 47 record during your senior year, it would be a little unreasonable for people to expect you to be one of the most valuable players in the National Football League after just three seasons.

It might be. But that's exactly what former East Carolina University back Tony (a.k.a. Anthony, A.C.) Collins has done in his brief career with the New England Patriots. Collins led the NFL in rushing for several weeks, while becoming an equal threat as a receiver out of the backfield.

"I came along a lot faster than most people expected me to," Collins said. "But I was confident of myself; I always have been. Being confident is just part of my nature."

Collins' agent, former ECU assistant coach Ken Hutcherson who is now with the Greenville office of E.F. Hutton, said the former Pirate standout has a unique feature built into the contract they recently negotiated. While million dollar contracts have become a trademark of professional athletics, Hutcherson said Collins is the first player in the NFL to have a lifetime income guarantee included in the provisions of his deal.

"Even if they cut him tomorrow," Hutcherson said, "he's still guaranteed in writing to receive a certain amount over the rest of his life. That's something no one else has; he should be quite comfortable now."

Collins admits the "big money" offered to top running backs by the founding United States Football League eased the renegotiation process.

"I had a little contact with one of their teams," Collins said. "But we renegotiated with New England, and I'm happy with the deal. I like the area and the people. Everything seems to be coming together for me."

The new four-year deal was negotiated after Collins finished the 1983 season leading NFL rushers in yards per carry, as well as being in the top five runners in average yards per game.

The Patriots fell short of their hopes of a playoff berth under first-year head coach Ron Meyer, and Collins said the new coaching staff and system were not necessarily factors in New England's 8-8 finish in the AFC East.

"We messed up our own chance to go to the playoffs this year," Collins said. "We lost a couple of games that we should have won. The coaches had us prepared for every game, but we just didn't always come through. You can't blame them for that."

"The new system might have been a problem for some of the older guys; coach Meyer believes in discipline. But I came from a disciplined-oriented program in college, so I was used to it."

Collins teams in the Patriots' backfield with quarterback Steve Grogan and runningback Mose Tatupu, a combination Collins' thinks will turn New England into a playoff contender in the next campaign.

"We're definitely headed for the playoffs, no question about it," Collins said. "We're more confident with ourselves than we were when this season began. We work together real well."

"Sometimes Mose will break a long one, and that makes me feel good because it takes some of the pressure off of me. I feel very comfortable working with this backfield.

"I want to lead my team in rushing and make it to the Super Bowl, but that's nothing new. (The Super Bowl) is your goal. If you go into a season believing you can't go, then you shouldn't start in the first place."

Collins has kept up with the progress of his former teammates at East Carolina with the help of his nephew, junior fullback Reggie Branch. The 1983 Pirates' 8-3 record is a sign of slow growth on a directed path, according to Collins.

"That was one of the best if not the best team East Carolina has had, especially considering the caliber of the competition they were against," Collins said. "They were very under-rated. I'm sure they deserved a bowl bid, but there's a lot of politics involved."

"I still know most of the players.

They've got a lot of talent. I'm not sure how many of their players will be drafted, but it'll be more than any other year."

Collins found his way to the ECU record book in a rather dubious manner: returning a kickoff 100 yards in 1980 for the Pirates' only points in a 63-7 thrashing in their first meeting against Florida State. Ironically, it was a 47-46 loss at FSU in 1983 which first drew the attention of the media to Pirates.

"I knew when I first went to the Patriots that I was going to be returning kicks for a while," Collins said. "But I knew if I worked hard enough I would get a chance play in the backfield."

"I think the biggest thing is to always think positive — think the best will happen and it will. That's how I started out — believing that I would make it to the top. That's the biggest thing."

Sooners Outrun Oklahoma State, 115-100

By The Associated Press
The venerable basketball rivalry between Oklahoma and Oklahoma State is called the "Bedlam Series" for obvious reasons, and the 159th renewal certainly lived up to the name.

Playing before a noisy, standing-room-only crowd of 11,463 at Norman, the Sooners and Cowboys staged one of their typical wild shootouts Tuesday night with Oklahoma outgunning Oklahoma State 115-100.

"The way they played tonight, they're a Top Ten club," Oklahoma State Coach Paul Hansen of the 11th-ranked Sooners.

Held to 10 points in the first half, Oklahoma center Wayman Tisdale broke loose for 26 in the second during which the 16-2 Sooners poured in 71 points and broke or tied several records in the process. The Sooners set a club mark and tied a Big Eight high with their second-half point total, and set a conference record by hitting 26 field goals in the final 20 minutes.

In the only other game involving a ranked team Tuesday night, No. 18 Georgia was upset 77-69 by Florida.

Top Twenty
Five Oklahoma players scored in double figures, but Tisdale's 36-point, nine-rebound performance stood head and shoulders above the field.

"You just don't play a guy like that every day," said Hansen. "He's so strong. He was awesome tonight."

After hitting the 30-point level for the fourth straight game, Tisdale said that he felt "stronger now than ever. Tonight, I felt really good out there."

He finished with 14 of 23 field goals and eight of 13 free throws, leading the parade of Oklahoma scoring. David Johnson added 24 points and freshman Tim McCalister had 19, all in the second half.

Joe Atkinson, Oklahoma State's 6-7 center, had a career-high 30 points to lead the Cowboys. Ray Crenshaw added 24 and grabbed 12 rebounds.

"I knew if Oklahoma State wanted to come in and run with us, we'd score that many points on them," said Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs, whose team boasts a 92-point-per-game scoring average, second best in the country. "But I was a little surprised they scored as many as they did."

Eugene McDowell scored five straight points on a dunk and a three-point play, wiping out a four-point deficit and triggering Florida over Georgia.

Throughout the night, the Gators' inside game proved too much for Georgia. After they got the lead, the Gators' second-half free throw shooting of 20 of 27 kept them in front. Georgia got only seven free-throw chances after intermission, making five.

Ronnie Williams led the Gators with 22 points, while McDowell added 18 for Florida. "Florida dominated us on the boards," Georgia Coach Hugh Durham said. "We just didn't have the conviction to get after them in that area of the game. Our strength is in the backcourt. Our strength didn't end up where we wanted it to be and their strength dominated."

Unranked Teams

In other action, Charles Barkley scored 18 points and Chuck Person added 17 as Auburn held off a late Tennessee rally to win 79-72. It was only the fourth time in 33 trips to Knoxville that Auburn has beaten the Volunteers.

Chris Mullin scored 15 of his game-high 29 points in the final eight minutes to spark St. John's to a 63-62 victory over Seton Hall. Mullin said the Redmen played "sloppy but we hung tough. Winning this one prevented a long ride home."

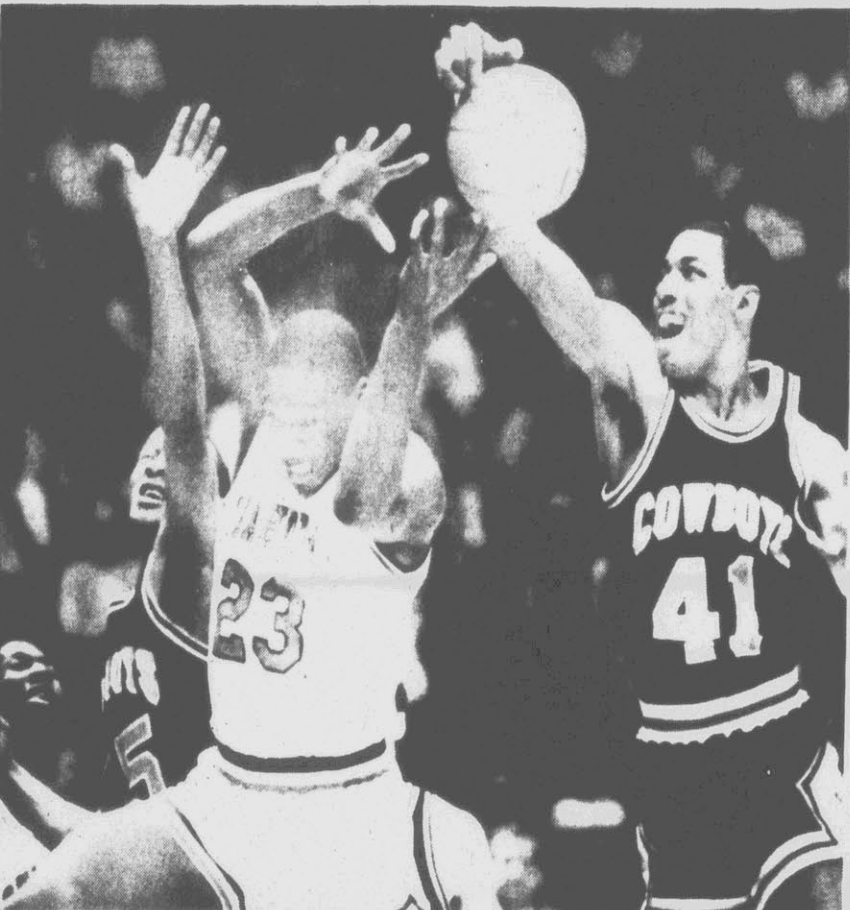

Albert Butts scored 25 points as La Salle defeated Penn 96-85; Randy Cozzens converted 14 of 15 free throw attempts and scored a season-high 28 points to spark Army to a 67-56 victory over Colgate, and J.J. Crawl drove for two baskets in the final 30 seconds as West Virginia held on to beat St. Francis (Pa.) 74-69.

Lopez Set For Return To Rigors Of LPGA

NEW YORK (AP) — Motherhood may have changed Nancy Lopez's approach to the game of golf.

"I can't go discoing every night anymore," she says. "Of course, I never did that before."

Lopez and her husband Ray Knight, a baseball player with the Houston Astros, became parents last November when daughter Ashley Marie was born. Besides having a little bundle to carry along with her to tournaments, Lopez says the increase in the size of her family has given her a new outlook.

"I want to play," she says, "but I think my family is more important to me now. I've really learned what a family is like — I mean, there always has been my father and mother. But having my own child, I think it's important that she's with her father."

"There'll be a struggle there. I hope it doesn't hurt my game."

Husband Ray currently is with Nancy and Ashley as Lopez prepares for the first tournament of the season this weekend, the Mazda Classic of Deer Park at Deerfield Beach, Fla. The family will stay together until Knight has to leave for spring training next month, "and then we'll try to see him whenever the Astros are playing at home."

"I really had a good time being pregnant," Lopez said Tuesday in a telephone interview from Florida. "I might do it again. Not right away, though. I'll wait until Ashley's a little older. But it was a wonderful experience, and Ray was with me the whole time."

Lopez, 27, a two-time Player of the Year, played only half a season last year. She withdrew in the second round of the Peter Jackson Classic in Montreal last July with stomach pains, and that was the last time she has picked up a golf club with serious intent.

Lopez, who has battled a weight problem throughout her golfing career, said she weighed 195 when the baby was born. She's now down to 147.

"I feel pretty good right now," she said. "I'm hitting the ball real well. I'm just anxious to see how I'm going to handle the pressure ... the pressure might make me play better."

"But I've never been off for so long," she said. "My life had been golf, golf, golf, golf, since I was 18 years old. Having those months off was really nice."

Despite playing only half a season, Lopez won two tournaments — the Elizabeth Arden and J&B Scotch Pro Am — and $91,477 last year. She was Rookie and Player of the Year in 1978 when she won nine tournaments, including five in a row. She won Player of the Year again in 1979 and is sixth on the all-time money list with career earnings of $1,043,153.

"I really didn't want to play as much this year," she said. "But Ray kind of talked me into it. He doesn't want me to feel like my golf career is coming to an end. He doesn't want me to come to him and say, 'I wish I had played more.' He knows my career is important, and he thinks that maybe I should feel it's a little more important than I do."

"Ray is proud of me. He works out with me, watches my swing and learns more and more about me. He pushes me to practice."

"This might be a really good year for me."

Gray Headed To Oklahoma

By The Associated Press

It's a new season for Mel Gray, and a new league as well.

"Hopefully, he has something left," said Oklahoma Outlaws Coach Woody Widenhofer, whose United States Football League team signed Gray on Tuesday. "He is a real leader and a class guy."

The 35-year-old Gray was a four-time All-Pro selection during 12 seasons with the National Football League's St. Louis Cardinals. He retired before the start of the 1983 season, but came out of retirement to sign with the USFL team. The Outlaws acquired the league rights to Gray from the Birmingham Stallions for a future draft choice.

Widenhofer made the announcement as the Outlaws, led by former Tampa Bay Buccaneers quarterback Doug Williams, opened training camp on the campus of the University of South Florida at Tampa Bay.

"We will get rid of any players I think can't play," Widenhofer said. "I don't care if I have to cut the entire football team. We had 80 players for our mini-camp last week, and it wasn't any problem getting rid of 70. I don't want a football team just to have a football team. I want to have a winning team."

In other USFL developments Tuesday, quarterback Bobby Hebert, tight end Mike Cobb and defensive back Clarence Chapman remained holdouts as the Michigan Panthers continued training camp in Tempe, Ariz.

Hebert started all 18 USFL games last year for the league champion Panthers and was Most Valuable Player in the championship game victory over Philadelphia. He wants to renegotiate his contract, on which he has four years left. He was paid $209,000 last year, including his $80,000 base pay, an $80,000 signing bonus, incentive and playoff money.

Hebert was the USFL's highest-rated passer last year with 3,568 yards and a league-leading 27 touchdowns. Without Hebert, the Panthers have only one experienced quarterback in camp — Whit Taylor, last year's backup. The only other quarterbacks in camp are John Leister of Michigan State and Robert Ambers of Grambling.

Herbert's agent, Greg Campbell, said his client should be paid more than former NFL quarterbacks Brian Sipe of Cleveland and Cliff Stoudt of Pittsburgh, recent defections to the USFL.

"If those guys are worth $500,000 a year, Bobby Hebert is worth a million a year. You just don't sign long-term contracts for a little bit of money every year. He signed his life away, so to speak," Campbell said from Natchitoches, La.

"I think we're a lot closer. I'll do whatever Greg tells me to do, that's why I hired him," Hebert said from his home in

Cut Off, La. "It's not unreasonable at all when you look at all those other quarterbacks. They're making maybe five or six times more than I am, and here I've proven myself."

The Panthers, meanwhile, said they have agreed to a series of one-year contracts with wide receivers Derek Holloway and Frank McClain and linebacker Ray Bentley. Holloway and McClain have signed through the 1986 USFL season, and Bentley through 1987, said Mike Keller, Panthers' director of operations.

The Panthers also waived wide receiver Harold Brown and traded tackle Ken Bungarda to Arizona for the rights to quarterback Cliff Olander, who is in camp.

In Mesa, Ariz., defensive lineman Mitch Callahan and wide receiver James Hood from Arizona State were among 11 players signed by the Oakland Invaders.

The roster additions brought the number of players in uniform to 70 on the second day of pre-season training camp. About 30 veteran players are scheduled to report later in the week.

Former St. Louis Cardinals wide receiver Dave Stief signed a multi-year contract with the Arizona Wranglers. Stief, 28, a five-year NFL veteran, was released by St. Louis this year. He captained the Cardinals' special teams unit in both 1981 and 1982 and as a receiver caught 67 passes in 68 games for 1,034 yards and five touchdowns with a 15.6-yard average per reception.

Wranglers General Manager Bruce Allen said the 6-foot-3, 195-pound product of Portland State "has the experience to help us and can be one of the best receivers in our league."

The Wranglers also announced the release of 10 players to get their roster down to the USFL limit of 92. Meanwhile, the trial to determine where Billy Sims will continue his professional football career begins in federal court in Detroit today with franchises in rival leagues claiming the services of the star running back.

U.S. District Judge Robert E. DeMascio will decide whether Sims continues with the Detroit Lions of the NFL or moves to the Houston Gamblers of the USFL. He has signed five-year contracts with each.

Sims signed a $3.5-million contract with the Gamblers on July 1 and an undated agreement Nov. 12, the USFL team said. He received $197,608 in July as part of a $1-million signing bonus, according to a Gamblers' announcement.

Sims also signed a $5-million contract with the Lions on Dec. 16, the NFL team said.

Suits were filed in various courts both in Michigan and in Texas, but they eventually landed in federal court at the request of all parties because of the geographical diversity of the principals.

Conner Forms Group To Pool Cup Efforts

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Yachtsman Dennis Conner, determined to win back the America's Cup he lost last September, says he hopes to challenge the Australians for sailing's most-coveted prize with the support of a national organization under the banner of the San Diego Yacht Club.

Conner, whose loss to Australia II ended more than a century of American dominance in the race, announced the formation Tuesday of America's Cup '87, a national coalition of yacht club organizations that will form the backbone of his effort.

Conner, commodore of the San Diego club, said he notified the New York Yacht Club of his plans on Monday.

The NYCC has sponsored America's champion since the schooner America beat a fleet of British boats around the Isle of Wight in 1851, and was to decide in April whether it would choose Conner to represent it again.

"The New York Yacht Club deserves recognition for upholding the best tradition in yachting for more than a century," said Conner, who sailed for the NYCC last September and in 1980.

"But because of the enthusiasm and support we've received for fielding a national effort, we feel this is the appropriate path to take, Conner said.

"Our goal was to make America's Cup '87 a truly national group with the sole purpose of winning the cup for America rather than for any particular club or region," said Conner.

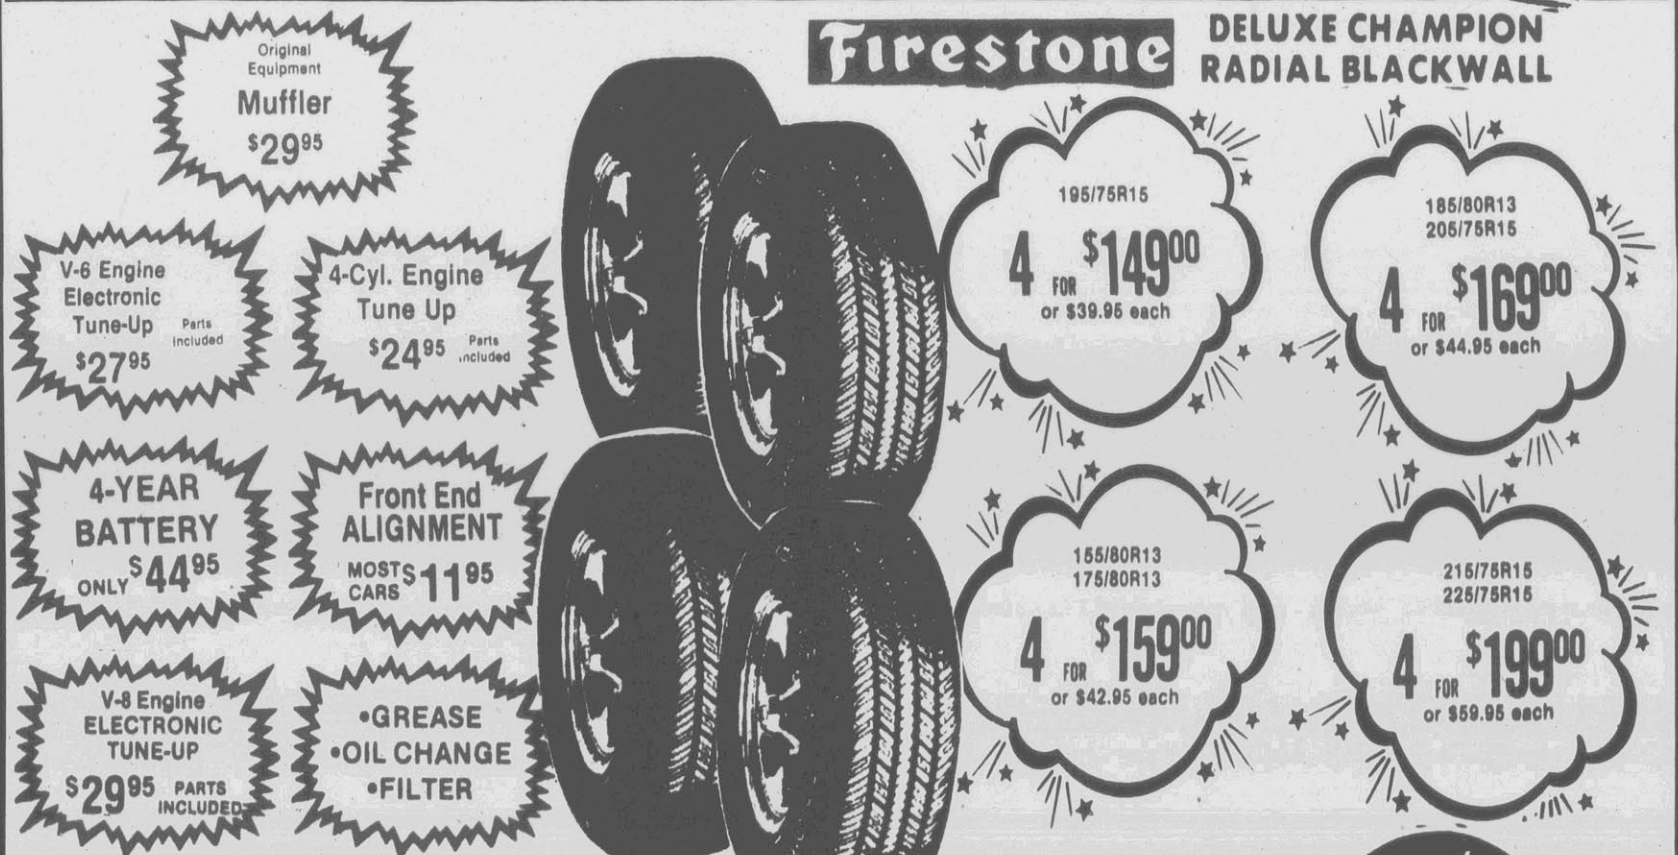

He said America's Cup '87 will issue its challenge to the Royal Perth Yacht Club of Western Australia through the San Diego Yacht Club; but if the cup is won and brought back to the United States, the national coalition of yacht clubs would determine how and where future defenses will be conducted.

The next race will take place Jan. 31, 1987 in the Indian Ocean off Fremantle, Western Australia.

Conner, in his boat Liberty, lost the cup to Australia II off Newport, R.I., last September.

Conner had said earlier this month that he wanted to represent San Diego in the challenge to win back the Cup, but that he would go with the NYCC club if he was chosen again because he needed $12 million to build two or more boats and stage a campaign halfway across the world.

Ak-Sar-Ben, a race track located in Omaha, is Nebraska spelled backward.

Petty Splits Away From RahMoc Racing Team

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Richard Petty won't be driving for RahMoc Racing during the 1984 NASCAR Grand National season, The Charlotte Observer reported Tuesday.

The newspaper quoted a Petty associate who asked to remain anonymous that the sport's all-time winningest driver had split with the Newell-based team owned by Bob Rahilly and Butch Mock.

The same source said that Petty would drive for a team headed by Mike Curb, the former California lieutenant governor, The Observer reported.

Petty, Rahilly and Mock could not be reached and did not return telephone calls to their offices.

But Louise Lofin, who said she was Petty's "bootkeeper" at Petty Enterprises in Level Cross, said Petty would make a statement Wednesday when participants on Charlotte Motor Speedway's annual "Media Tour" visit Petty Enterprises.

Petty left the shops this season after 25 years, turning over their operation to his son, Kyle, 23, also a driver.

The elder Petty, winner of seven driving championships and 198 Grand National races, including seven Daytona 500s, at first said in late October that he would drive for an organization headed by Curb.

Veteran Buddy Parrott would be the crew chief and Rahilly would build the engines. The STP-backed team would be headquartered in Kannapolis.

Then, during the Western 500 at Riverside, Calif., in mid-November, the Petty-RahMoc pairing was announced. Curb still was to be indirectly involved, with Parrott taking the title of team manager and STP continuing as sponsor.

Something apparently went sour with the second plan, and The Observer said this may have been centered around failure to reach agreement on a contract.

"However, this doesn't mean that Richard is returning to Petty Enterprises to race," the source close to Petty told the newspaper. "Although he and Buddy Parrott will work out of those shops for awhile, it's strictly an emergency measure. Petty Enterprises is Kyle's deal.

"Richard and Buddy will be returning to Plan I with Mike Curb, with the exception that Rahilly will not be building the engines. They'll be racing out of Kannapolis as soon as possible."

A deal reportedly has been struck with Robert Yates, who built the engines that powered Bobby Allison to the 1983 Grand National championship, to also provide motors for Petty.

The source wouldn't say how seriously the return to Plan I, an eleventh-hour move, will affect Petty's chances for victory Feb. 19 in the Daytona 500, the season opener. The Observer said.

A decision on who will take over RahMoc's cars will have to come soon, with the Daytona 500, the sport's biggest, richest race, less than a month away. The Observer said Mark Martin, 25, may be a candidate for the RahMoc ride.

$25,000 For Kidney Price

ANOTHER — Edward J. Bailey, shown with his wife Carol, says he wants to sell one of his kidneys for $25,000. The money would be used to help pay his wife's medical bills. (AP Laserphoto)

RALEIGH (AP) — A Raleigh man says he decided to try to sell one of his two kidneys to pay for better treatment for his wife because he felt doctors would work harder if he paid them more than Medicare or Medicaid provides.

Edward J. Bailey said he thought previous operations hadn't cured his wife because they were paid for through public assistance.

"In my own mind, I know it's the way they figure it, these doctors. They care for the money more than anything," he said. "You see it on television all the time the miracles (doctors can) perform."

But the president-elect of the medical staff at Wake Medical Center, where Carol Bailey, who suffers from chronic pain, had her four latest operations, disagreed.

"We have a hospital-wide quality assurance program that specifically addresses these issues," Dr. Jerry Hartzog said. "Medicare-Medicaid patients can and do, as far as I know, get equal care to that of private patients."

Bailey, an unemployed cook, took out a classified advertisement in December in the "Sale Miscellaneous" section of the Southside Shopper. He has taken out the ad again this month in hopes of more serious replies.

"Kidney for sale, white male, good health, $25,000," the ad reads.

Bailey said, "You can live with just one (kidney). I figure I could help someone else out as well as myself."

He said some of the responses to the ad were "funny." One was from an insurance company that hoped he could help sell its policies in his housing project. Another caller appeared to want Bailey to rob a bank.

"He thought I was interested in easy money," Bailey said. "When I told him I wasn't interested, he didn't tell me too much."

His wife has answered about six other calls, but the callers didn't leave their telephone numbers, perhaps because of her slurred speech, she said.

Mrs. Bailey, 36, said she suffered lingering brain, back and leg damage when, at age 6, she was hit by a car in Raleigh. She spent 3½ years in a coma and couldn't walk or talk again until she was 13.

Neither comes easily today — even after 15 operations. And she said pain still wracks her back.

"I cry a lot with my pains," she said. "The doctors say there will be no relief. My husband says that with the ($25,000) he is hoping to find some."

Doctors are divided over Bailey's attempt to sell his kidney.

"Frankly, nobody with any professional ethics would touch the thing," said Benjamin S. Shepard, who manages the state Division of Health Service's organ donation program. "What hospital administrator or surgeon would really participate in (a kidney) removal with a mercenary motive?"

"The implications for the poor people of the United States who need kidneys and other organs would be devastating if organs were only available to the highest bidder," said Dr. Ralph R. Bollinger, Duke University's chief of surgical transplantation. "We depend on voluntary organ donations."

But the president of the N.C. Medical Society said Bailey was within his legal rights to try to sell his kidney.

"It would be my opinion that if an individual wants to ... and a physician wants to or is willing to do it (the operation), there is nothing illegal about it," said Dr. Jack Hughes, a Durham urologist.

Radio Saw Banner Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The typical American radio station enjoyed a banner year in 1982 with its pre-tax profits more than tripling, a new survey shows.

The survey, performed annually by the National Association of Broadcasters, found the typical station enjoyed a pre-tax profit of $51,100 in 1982 on net operating revenues of $542,300. By comparison, profits in 1981 totaled $15,800 on operating revenues of $457,600.

The 1982 profit margin for a typical station was 9.42 percent, up sharply from 1981's figure of 3.46 percent. Overall, 1982 was the best year for radio stations in at least eight years, the NAB said.

The association's "typical" figures for 1982 are the median, or mid-point, of the operating results submitted on a confidential basis by 1,238 stations across the country. They can be somewhat misleading, since the survey found 403 of the reporting stations actually said they lost money in 1982 compared to the 835 which reported profits.

Of the stations reporting profits, the pre-tax income typically totaled $109,500, a profit margin of almost 18 percent, the NAB said.

By contrast, the typical American TV station returned a pre-tax profit of $1.25 million in 1982, up roughly 25 percent from 1981, a previous survey found. The typical TV station reported revenues of $5.37 million in 1982.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR is getting an exciting, fresh new look!!!

In a recent survey of Pitt County residents 91% agreed with the statement, "THE DAILY REFLECTOR is well organized and it is easy to find what I want to read". "The new, updated look will make your local newspaper better than ever."

*RMH Research, River Edge, N.J., December, 1983

Starting Wednesday, February 1, THE DAILY REFLECTOR will change from the current 8-column format to a cleaner, easier-to-read 6 column format newspaper.

Over the past several years, the newspaper industry in the United States has been working on a plan that would standardize the size of all newspapers published in this country. So far, over 90% of the daily newspapers have voluntarily agreed to change to the new standard by July 1, 1984.

A LOOK AT THE OLD AND THE NEW!

OLD 8 COLUMN

This column is an example of the old look. It represents the narrow newspaper columns of the past which are giving way to the wider, easier to read look of the six column format.

Experts have long contended that numerous eye movements from line to line make reading tiresome and difficult. And, they say, the frequent hyphenations which are necessary in a narrow column make comprehension poor.

The Daily Reflector will be changing from this old format on February 1, 1984 to the new 6-column format.

NEW 6 COLUMN

This column is an example of the new look! It represents the wider and easier to read appearance of the six-column format, which will soon be replacing the narrower newspaper columns of the past.

Experts have long contended that numerous eye movements from line to line make reading tiresome and difficult. And, they say, the frequent hyphenations which are necessary in a narrow column make comprehension poor.

The Daily Reflector will be changing to this new format on February 1, 1984.

NLRB Upholds Right Of Employers To Relocate

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In its second major pro-management decision this month, a federal labor relations panel has upheld an employer's decision to move operations to a non-union plant to avoid paying wages negotiated under a labor contract.

The decision, which was released Tuesday by the National Labor Relations Board, carries broad implications for unions seeking to prevent their employers from closing unionized plants and relocating to non-union settings to cut labor costs.

As was the case in a decision issued two weeks ago, Don A. Zimmerman, the lone Democrat on the four-member board, dissented from the majority ruling by Reagan administration appointees.

In the earlier ruling, the board's majority held that a company lawfully fired a man who refused to drive an unsafe tractor-trailer rig because the man had not acted collectively with fellow workers — and thus was not covered by provisions of labor law giving sanction to "concerted activity" by workers.

The plant relocation ruling involved a decision by the management of the Milwaukee Springs division of Illinois Coil Spring Co. to move its assembly operations from Milwaukee, Wis., to a non-union facility in McHenry, Ill. Although the move was never made, the company had sought to lower its unit labor costs by seeking wage concessions from 100 UAW employees in Milwaukee.

When the unionized workers rejected management's proposal for wage concessions, the company announced it would move its Milwaukee operation to the non-union plant.

The UAW challenged the company's plans, saying the relocation move violated provisions of the National Labor Relations Act, a nearly 50-year-old law that protects the rights of workers to organize and bargain collectively. And the NLRB held in October 1982 that the company had violated the law.

The company filed a petition for a review of the board's decision by the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and the court remanded the case to the National Labor Relations Board here.

The majority decision, which reversed the board's 1982 stance, was signed by board chairman Donald L.

Dustin and members Robert F. Hunter and Patricia Diaz, all Reagan administration appointees.

Since the 1982 decision, the board's political complexion has changed from liberal to conservative. Conservatives now hold three of the four seats. One seat is currently vacant. Two years ago, two Democrats and a liberal Republican who has since retired formed a liberal majority on many decisions.

In the latest decision, the board's majority took the position that a company may relocate from a union to non-union plant — even while a contract with a union is in force — if the company has satisfied any obligation it has to bargain about the decision. Such a move would have been barred only if the union had specific contractual language prohibiting management from unilaterally making the decision to move, the NLRB said.

The October 1982 decision in favor of the UAW suggests that the board at that time may have concluded that the company's relocation decision violated sections of the law prohibiting alteration of previously negotiated wages and benefits without the union's consent, the three-member majority said.

"While it is true that the company proposed modifying the wage and benefits of the contract, the union rejected the proposals," it added. In his dissenting opinion, Zimmerman said he concluded that the company, by seeking to relocate while a contract with the UAW was still in force, and without the union's consent, "acted in derogation of its bargaining obligation" under provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

N.C. Hurt Less In Budget Cuts

By The Associated Press
North Carolina has lost $887 million in federal funds during President Reagan's three years in office, but the state has suffered less than most, according to a public employee union study.

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees said Tuesday that the impact of federal budget cuts in North Carolina and other Southern states had been felt most in social programs such as child nutrition.

The Tar Heel state ranked 40th among the 50 states plus the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico in terms of the impact of Reagan budget cuts, the union said.

The union said North Carolina's state and local governments have lost $149.06 per resident.

In comparison, the District of Columbia lost the most funds — $682 per resident — while Texas lost the least — $110 per resident, according to the union.

However, the union said the Tar Heel state was among the 10 states hurt most in handicapped education, vocational and adult education and child nutrition.

The union said North Carolina has lost $41.9 million in child nutrition programs during the Reagan administration.

The study was based on funding of 172 federal programs that represent about 90 percent of federal aid to state and local governments. The union compared funding levels in 1981 — when Reagan took office — with what the levels would have been had budget policies stayed the same and costs of the programs had been allowed to rise with inflation.

The union said state and local governments have had to manage with almost 20 percent less federal aid during Reagan's three years.

The state-by-state budget analysis was released at a news conference on the eve of Reagan's State of the Union message today. It said state and local governments had lost $42 billion in federal aid during the three years of the Reagan administration.

State officials who track federal spending said Tuesday they had not seen the union study and said North Carolina did not have similar cumulative figures for comparison.

However, Harvey M. Lincoln, a senior policy analyst in the North Carolina Department of Administration, said: "I would guess it's in the ballpark. There's no question there have been cuts."

Marvin K. Dorman, deputy state budget officer, said the state's loss to budget cuts "could be that large."

Dorman said the latest figures showed the proposed federal budget cuts for fiscal 1983, which ended July 30, were estimated to cost state and local governments $275 million.

Dazzling Adaptation Of 'Lear' For TV

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "We that are young shall never see so much, nor live so long."

Those closing lines of Shakespeare's "King Lear" describe the tragic action that has just unfolded on stage. But the passage will take on extra meaning for viewers who watch the dazzling television adaptation of the play to be broadcast Thursday night on the ad-hoc Mobil Showcase Network.

They will see Laurence Olivier, considered by many the greatest actor of his generation, in what is likely to be his last major Shakespearean performance. Alongside his filmed protrayals of such Shakespearean figures as Hamlet, Othello, Henry V and Richard III, it is a performance that will be studied and marveled at long after Olivier and his fellow actors are dead.

For Olivier, now 76, the production represents both a triumph over adversity and a reaffirmation of his genius. A triumph, because in recent years he has battled a series of illnesses whose names would fill a medical dictionary — including cancer, pneumonia and a rare muscle disorder called dermatomyositis.

They have left him weakened, and, many thought, unequal to the physical demands of acting Shakespeare.

A reaffirmation, because over the past decade Olivier has displayed his acting abilities mainly in a series of commercial movies — from "Sleuth" to "Clash of the Titans" — that may have brought him a long-sought financial security, but did little to enhance his reputation.

Modern audiences might have wondered what set this actor apart, unless they had seen his brief appearance as the decrepit Lord Marchmain in the miniseries "Brideshead Revisited," broadcast on public TV in the fall of 1982, or watched revivals of his classic films, from Shakespeare to "Wuthering Heights" and "Rebecca."

Olivier says he turned to Lear — the project was filmed for British television and shown there last year — because, "If you're 75, it's damned hard to find parts."

"Lear is the only star part for an old man in dramatic literature that I know of," he adds. "I've never heard of a good play about Methusalem."

With his typical nonsense approach, Olivier has described "King Lear" as the story of "an old fool — a selfish, irascible old bastard."

It is that, but it is of course, much more. The plot, which Shakespeare derived from historical chronicles, tells of an aged, overbearing monarch who gives away his kingdom to two hypocritical daughters who flatter him, disowning the one daughter who truly loves him because she refuses to fawn.

His action leads to the direct consequences — he is humiliated, driven mad, and finally gains self-knowledge only to die of a broken heart after his faithful daughter, Cordelia, is murdered.

The part requires tremendous range. At the outset Lear must be both majestic and cantankerous; when he realizes his daughters' treachery, he grows vicious in his diatribes ("How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child"); later, cast out into a thunderstorm, he challenges nature in a mighty curse ("Blow winds, and crack your cheeks!"); he becomes meek and peaceful as he gains Cordelia's forgiveness, and in his final speech over her body gives way to pitiful despair.

The televised "Lear" is Olivier's second time playing the part. The first was in 1946 at London's Old Vic Theatre.

"I was 39. It was a character part for me then," Olivier recalls. "When you're younger, Lear doesn't feel real. ... Now it's a straight part for me. Absolutely straight. When you get to my age, you ARE Lear, in every nerve of your body."

Audiences are likely to agree that Olivier IS Lear, even though some unusual steps were taken to make his performance possible and the play has been substantially cut to fit within the three-hour format.

Partly as a concession to his age and health, his speeches were filmed in very short takes over several weeks. Because the producers feared Olivier would be too weak to lift actress Anna Calder-Marshall, who played Cordelia, they suspended her from wires for the final scene in which he enters carrying her lifeless body.

But these measures will matter little to the viewer who gets to hear Olivier's seamless, and apparently effortless, delivery of Shakespeare's lines. Listen as he almost gleefully banishes his faithful Kent for taking Cordelia's side ("Away! By Jupiter, this shall not be revoked"). Or as he mourns his daughter's death ("Thou'lt come no more, Never, never, never, never, never!") giving each succeeding "never" a different inflection, every one more heart-rending than the last.

The production, directed by Michael Elliott, is justifiably billed as "Laurence Olivier's 'King Lear,'" but the supporting cast is distinguished, starting with his daughters, played by Dorothy Tutin, Diana Rigg and Miss Calder-Marshall. Leo McKern is a moving Gloucester, and Jeremy Kemp makes a vivid and frightening Cornwall. The performance is introduced by Peter Ustinov, looking slightly ridiculous in full evening dress as he wanders among the ruins of Stonehenge.

Amusement Park Suing

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Knott's Berry Farm has countersued the parents of a 4-year-old, charging they were negligent in allowing their son to be run over by a stagecoach at the amusement park, an attorney said.

The complaint in Orange County Superior Court alleges that Craig and Alice Kramer of Mesa, Ariz., were not supervising the child, Shawn, when he fell beneath the horsedrawn stagecoach Nov. 25, Knott's lawyer Kenneth Garrett said Tuesday.

The child spent 26 days at University of California-Irvine Medical Center for treatment of a collapsed lung, a broken leg and broken jaw, then returned to Arizona Dec. 21 with his parents.

When a competent declarer knows the distribution, a defender can find that trying to guard two suits is an impossible task. Consider this hand from the recent Fall North American Championships in Miami.

North's bid of four spades almost led to disaster. Since South could have doubled four clubs had he been interested in hearing about spades as well as hearts, he read his partner's bid as a cue-bid in support of hearts, so he cue-bid his ace of diamonds. This led to the precarious contract of five hearts.

West started with the queen of clubs and the defenders soon had their book. East might have posed

New Factory Is Operating

RALEIGH (AP) — Imperial Cleveite of Chicago has begun operations at a $4.5 million factory in Morrisville, Gov. Jim Hunt said Tuesday.

Hunt said 100 jobs will be filled at the 42,000-square-foot facility by mid-year.

"I am delighted to welcome this internationally acclaimed industrial components company to North Carolina," said Hunt. "Imperial Cleveite's decision to locate here reflects our state's growing success in attracting metal-working industries."

More Americans are getting married now than at any time in the nation's history, according to a recent government report. About 2.5 million were wed in 1982. By age 25, half of all men in this country are married. New Hampshire has the lowest marriage age — a boy must be 14 and a girl 13. Columbia, South Carolina, has the highest proportion of unmarried males: 57 percent. The highest proportion of unmarried women — 59.6 percent — is in Brookline, Mass.

Thousands Use N.C. Archives

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Many people wouldn't think of spending a sunny afternoon — or a rainy afternoon, for that matter — in the North Carolina Archives, but officials say the collection serves some 20,000 researchers a year.

And about 90 percent of those who use the record holdings are looking into their lineage, said Archives Director Bill Price.

"We used to only get ladies who were interested in getting into the DAR," Price said. "But since the television show Roots, we've seen people who are trying to establish a story of their family. They aren't interested in who begot whom. They want to assess something that designs them."

The Archives is the state's holding center for official documents dating from 1593 to 1983. It contains the official records of the colonies and the state, the earliest of which is a Spanish document from the 16th century.

The collection includes the signatures of each American president from George Washington to Ronald Reagan and the Carolina Charter, which is one of its most valuable documents.

"The primary value of the Archives is to the historical or geological researchers," Price said. "We promote and preserve the history of the state in all forms. That gets us into the question of what's history and what isn't."

Price said that means the state Archives is not only the largest preserver of state records, it is also the largest destroyer.

"We would prefer these decisions be made by historians rather than politicians," Price said.

The division concentrates on the history of people forgotten by past historians, Price said. He said these are the stories of ordinary people, but it helps people understand what shaped the times and the lives of those who lived in past eras.

And that, Price said, helps people understand where they came from. The interest in lineage seems to have peaked since the telecast of "Roots", but Price said he can tell the difference in the age of people who are searching for the story of

Participate In Talent Search

DURHAM (AP) — More than 29,000 seventh graders from North Carolina and 15 other states are participating in Duke University's annual academic talent search.

Dr. Gordon Stanley, assistant director of Duke's Talent Identification Program, said the 1984 figure is 6,000 higher than last year's.

Most of the students will take the Scholastic Aptitude Test later this month, and those who score highly will be eligible for TIP award ceremonies, special summer residence programs at Duke, and help in finding state and local programs for the academically gifted.

Stanley said 5,280 North Carolina seventh graders will take the SAT this year, the second highest of the 16 southern and mid-western states in the search area.

Texas is first with 6,175, and Florida is third with 2,799.

4 WAYS TO SAY
"CHARGE IT"

Wautaga High School Senior Has 'Cupid Computer'

COMPUTER CUPID, John Gmuender, a senior at Wautaga High School in Boone, is becoming a Computer Cupid with a program he designed to match personalities, likes and dislikes of his fellow students. (AP Laserphoto)

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — An 18-year-old senior is rapidly becoming known as the Computer Cupid of Wautaga High School.

John Gmuender has his fellow students buzzing about a computer program he created to match personalities through a compatibility questionnaire.

"It's sort of neat," Gmuender said.

The idea for the computer compatibility service was the result of a need — for money to finance a class physics trip to Disneyland.

"We needed some real good way to make money. It's working pretty good," Gmuender said.

Gmuender and his fellow classmates will visit EPCOT Center and Disneyland Feb. 1-5, thanks to the money they've made through the service. The trip will also land them in Florida just in time to see the shuttle blastoff.

Wautaga High School science teacher Patti Blanton helped Gmuender turn his idea into reality while seniors Sandi Hamilton and Lisa Smitherman helped him design the questionnaire before running it through his word processor.

Among the questions are name, sex, birthplace and grade. Other questions include:

- "Of these words, the one that best describes me is: 1. Quiet, 2. Friendly, 3. Ambitious, Outrageous.
- "I enjoy dating: 1. One person regularly, 2. A variety of people.

"It's okay for couples in public places to: 1. Kiss passionately, 2. Kiss occasionally, 3. Hold hands, 4. Wait to display any affection until they are alone."

Students are also asked about the use of obscenities, the world situation, a military draft, religion, test taking, their favorite music, alcohol and kissing on the first date.

One probing question is: "You just found out that someone you really care for smokes marijuana, you would: 1. Drop him/her fast, 2. Tell him truthfully that you do not approve, 3. Tell them you don't care for it, but it would not affect your relationship, 4. Great. I smoke it too."

Gmuender worked two summers to buy an Apple IIE printer and computer which he has at home. The Apple does the sorting and matching of student information during the night.

"It was running at four o'clock in the morning," said Gmuender, who has to get up every 90 minutes to send another list through the machine.

The computer compatibility service may be new at the school, but it's the main topic of conversation in the halls between classes.

"I'm going to get mine tomorrow ... it might be good for some people," eleventh-grader Jimmy Webb said.

But junior Brenda Keller said she had already met her "match-ups" and didn't like any of them.

"I've already found him," she said.

Students who pay the fee for the service receive a list of 10 candidates for compatibility within their class. A percentage of compatibility is also given.

And while there have been no positive proof that the service has produced any pure, original, state-of-the-art prototypes of love, Gmuender is still hopeful.

"I imagine they are still making their moves, if they are," Gmuender said.

Gmuender acknowledged he sent his own questionnaire through the computer. But he's not saying anything about what the computer said about his perfect match.

Registering By Phone At BYU

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Brigham Young University is testing a computer system that will allow students who have been accepted for admission to sit comfortably at home and press the buttons on their touch-tone telephones to register.

"This probably is the best possible way to achieve the greatest efficiency in using the university's resources," said Dr. Robert Spencer, dean of admissions and records.

"University admissions and registration systems across the country are pathetically managed, wasting large sums of money," he said. "Major portions of their budgets involve classroom space, payroll and curriculum. Registering by telephone can save in all three areas."

BYU, Spencer points out, already has a national reputation among universities for its computerized admissions and records system, developed largely by Garth Rasband, assistant dean for University Student Information (USI). Representatives of more than 200 schools have visited the campus to learn about it and some have copied it exactly.

Walter Nicholes, a former technician for AT&T and now director of USI technical support at BYU, engineered the addition of touch-tone registration to the system with hardware support from Perception Technology.

Using a catalog with codes and instructions issued at admission, students can call the computer. A human-sounding voice welcomes them and gives instructions. They are asked to enter a Social Security number and a personal I.D. number. The computer confirms the spelling of their last name and asks them to enter codes for the classes they want.

Classes can be added or dropped by pressing buttons. When a class is dropped it immediately becomes available to another student. When added it is recorded immediately. The computer informs students when classes are filled. Department chairmen can monitor the process.

A list of classes for which the student is registered can be obtained by pressing a button; the computer voice will read it off. When registration is complete, the student presses another button, which instructs the computer to print and send the schedule.

Spencer said many decisions must be made about how the system will be used. Faculty members can step completely out of the drop-add situation or they can maintain control. Classes could be tied up before fees are paid or they could remain open until payment is received.

The concept has been tested by students and presented to the Deans' Council. The student council and administrative bodies have yet to consider it, but it is expected to be in operation by fall.

Lebanese Refugee Family Has Found Home In A Schoolhouse

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Nemaat Mahmoud, her eight children and the families of her husband's three brothers share three dingy rooms in an old schoolhouse and hope for the day when they can again have homes of their own.

"At nights when I can't sleep, I think of our situation, how we are forced to live," says Mrs. Mahmoud, 47. "I think of my children, who should be in school, and that they ask me for money but I don't have any to give."

The Mahmoud family is among an estimated 250,000 Christian, Moslem and Druse people driven from their neighborhoods and villages by more than eight years of sectarian fighting in Lebanon.

Sunni Moslems, the Mahmouds have a place to live with 14 other families in the abandoned two-story school in the heart of west Beirut thanks to action by the Grand Mufti of Lebanon, Sheik Hassan Khaled, the nation's highest-ranking Sunni religious leader.

They are better off than some other families, living in bomb-damaged or abandoned buildings in Beirut, in that they have electricity and running water.

But the few toilets in the building are overtaxed, and the rooms are damp from lack of heating.

Mrs. Mahmoud complains that problems like these have caused illnesses, like asthma, to break out in the family.

Her family's miseries began in 1975, when the outbreak of full-scale civil war in Lebanon drove them from their homes in the Karantina neighborhood of east Beirut.

After several years of moving to and from the homes and apartments of friends and relatives, the Mahmouds settled in Khalde, six miles south of Beirut, and the brothers built several small concrete-block houses.

Mrs. Mahmoud said her family was forced to abandon their house after it was damaged by shellfire during the Israeli army invasion of Lebanon in 1982. Last year, despite militia fighting in the Khalde area, the family tried to return to their house, only to find that it and neighboring homes had been bulldozed.

"We stayed in a mosque for a while, but then came to Beirut," Mrs. Mahmoud said in an interview.

The family pays no rent for the schoolhouse. Men and boys who are able to work take odd jobs, such as driving taxis, to bring in money that allows the 30 family members to buy food.

Meals — often only bread and vegetables — are cooked on kerosene stoves in the center of each of the three rooms they've been assigned. Mats scattered around the tile floor serve as chairs by day and beds by night.

Two of Mrs. Mahmoud's nieces — Tharwat, 15, and Najah, 20 — say the war has cost them more than homes.

Tharwat, now living in the schoolhouse with her husband and 10 members of his family, recalled that she was preparing for her wedding when the Israelis invaded.

"My wedding dress, among other wedding preparations, burned in our house," she said. "What are they going to do with us? Are they ever going to provide us with homes?"

Najah said that during the civil war in 1975, Christian militiamen "grabbed Tharwat from the arms of her father before they killed him. Now she has grown up and is married and will soon have children, and still we are in war."

Mrs. Mahmoud's 8-year-old daughter Sabine says she misses her friends.

"The kids here are too young for me to play with," she said. Still, she understands why the family cannot yet return to Khalde. "The father of one of my friends lost his leg when a shell hit their house."

Mrs. Mahmoud said the dislocation has been hardest on her 18-year-old daughter, Hoda.

"When she hears an explosion or shooting, she runs barefoot to the streets. She even gave up praying for awhile so it would not hinder her from fleeing in times of danger."

Said Hoda, "I pray now. I pray to God so the situation improves and we can have a home of our own and go back to the days when we were happy."

"I also pray and thank God because we could be in a worse state."

Urge Public To Eat Less Meat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Humane Society of the United States wants Americans to eat less meat to protest what it describes as inhumane conditions on factory farms.

The society has presented photos of chickens jammed together in giant egg factories, sows tethered in one spot their entire lives, and cattle kept in small cages where they cannot turn around.

Close confinement creates stress on animals, increases the risk of disease and leads farmers to use drugs and chemicals which may cause other problems, Dr. Michael Fox told a news conference.

"I'm not saying that farmers are cruel; they're in a cruel economic bind and they're being forced to adopt these systems," Fox said.

Quadriplegic Finds Help In A Gadget

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
WESTMONT, Pa. (AP) — Ever since he crushed his spinal cord making a tackle in a high school football game, Eddie Chubek has been unable to use his arms or legs.

But thanks to the efforts of a friend, he can now use the phone, listen to eight radio channels and a police scanner, turn on the TV and record player and activate the house lights, all through puffs of breath and the help of a computer.

"I can't scratch my nose, but I can call Paris, France," said Chubek, who calls in news tips to several local radio stations from his living room bed.

Now the friend, Joseph Sobieski, makes similar systems for other quadriplegics. The systems cost less than $1,000 each.

"You can turn anything on or off that uses a switch," said Sobieski, 72, the retired president of Miller-Pickering Corp., an air-conditioning manufacturer.

He has spent eight years refining the system, in which puffs of breath activate sail-shaped switches. The switches, in turn, command a relatively inexpensive computer to do programmed functions such as lock or unlock doors and raise and lower adjustable beds. A word processor can even be attached to write letters or print messages if the user is unable to talk.

"Quadriplegics are completely dependent on others for every physical need. They can't do anything for themselves," Sobieski said in an interview. "But the computer gives them control of their life again to some extent.

"It's surprising what a guy with one of these machines can do," Sobieski said. "This isn't new. I didn't invent it. I put a bunch of parts together and made it work. But it's cheap and available. That's what makes it different."

Sobieski has built several devices to help quadriplegics. One is a reflection of light or a twitch of an eyebrow. More expensive and sophisticated systems are voice activated.

Spinal cord injuries have paralyzed an estimated 200,000 Americans, and each year there are 15,000 new injuries, according to the National Spinal Cord Society, a non-profit agency dedicated to finding a cure for spinal cord damage.

Sobieski built his first unit in 1975 to help Chubek, of nearby Central City, whose spine was crushed 35 years ago when he was 16. Sobieski built a switch that allowed Chubek to answer and dial the phone with a puff of breath. Then, he refined and upgraded the system to do other chores.

"It was like Christmas that year. It gave me a little bit of independence, to know that I could do something for myself," said Chubek.

Meanwhile, Sobieski hopes that someone will take over production of the JB Robot because of his age and the demands on his time.

"I'd like someone to take it over, maybe a foundation of some sort. I just can't keep doing it," said Sobieski. "It doesn't take an aerospace engineer to handle it. Any amateur electronics hobbyist can put this thing together."

Neighbors At The Reopening

WASHINGTON (AP) — The remodeled National Theater, a fixture in the White House neighborhood since 1835, reopened with two neighbors in attendance: President Reagan and his wife, Nancy.

The theater is featuring the Broadway musical comedy "42nd Street."

"Watching them sing and dance as they did made me wonder if I was seeing the reason my own career took a different turn," the former movie actor said Monday on stage in brief remarks to the cast and audience after the final curtain call.

The theater was dark for more than a year during its renovation, which Reagan said was done "without a penny of government money."

Singapore Takes Crime 'Seriously'

SINGAPORE (AP) — No-body accuses this island republic of being a cesspool of crime or vice. Sex-seeking tourists from Japan shun squeaky-clean Singapore in favor of more readily available pleasures in Bangkok or Manila.

Law and order is taken very seriously by the 24-year-old government of Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew. Convicted drug traffickers face the noose and 14 have been hanged so far. Suspected subversives may be held for years without being charged or tried.

Those guilty of lesser transgressions such as littering and jaywalking are fined. Official campaigns are brought to bear on anti-social behavior not deemed worthy of legal action.

Tipping is officially discouraged. An annual courtesy drive tries to inculcate polite behavior. Men with long hair are served last in many government offices.

An Education Ministry official plans to have every student from first grade to junior college take turns cleaning their school classrooms and toilets starting next year as is done in Japan and South Korea.

"With generation after generation doing this in schools it is no wonder that their public toilets are clean and the general cleanliness of their cities is higher," said the official, Tay Eng Soon.

However, a series of actions this year seems to demonstrate that officials feel there still is room for improvement.

There has been a massive anti-crime sweep involving more than 6,000 lawmen and women. Other crackdowns have hit foreign prostitutes, scantily clad bargirls and bawdy acts by pop groups.

Poorly-lit saloons have been told to turn up the lights. "New wave" barbershops have to get rid of massage booths: Uncensored videotapes have been confiscated.

A man was sentenced to a year in jail for possession of a subversive tombstone. The minister of culture suggests outlawing the chewing of gum.

"Operation senjata" (weapon), a three-week anti-crime blitz cut down preventable crimes, a police spokesman said. The island-wide sweep netted 384 suspects, 198 of whom are wanted by the police.

Hundreds of prostitutes, many of them identified by police as from Thailand, have been deported in the past eight months — some of them several times.

Cocktail lounge and nightclub hostesses have to wear uniforms starting March 1 after licensing agents found it difficult to distinguish between hostesses and female customers. Uniforms must be "suitable" with no bunny costumes, swimwear or indecent attire.

The lighting in bars and nightclubs now has to be "bright enough so that all persons anywhere in the premises are clearly visible to each other," according to an official ruling.

Labor, immigration and anti-vice officers have raided more than 100 barbershops. Dozens of them must demolish all cubicles, remove massage tables and turn up the lights.

The Rainbow Lounge lost its entertainment license after police objected to crude, vulgar and obscene remarks by a pop group.

Tan Chu Boon, 40, was sentenced to a year behind bars for "having under his control" the tombstone of his brother on which was engraved in Chinese characters an inscription regarded as subversive under the internal security act. The brother, Tan Chay Wa, 33, was hanged last year for possession of firearms.

Suppiah Dhanabalan, who is cabinet minister for both culture and foreign affairs, opened the attack on gum chewers. "I personally consider it rather obnoxious seeing very good looking boys and girls walking about with their jaws moving like cows chewing cud."

It became an expensive social problem when used gum was stuck under chairs, on elevator buttons or dropped on the floor, Dhanabalan said. Singapore Broadcasting Corporation plans to drop chewing gum advertising.

Blocked Ducts Cause Tearing Eyes

My vision is very good but I seem to have more and more bother with my eyes. My left eye tears a lot. Even the appearance of my lids seems to have changed since my 66th birthday. Is this normal? — Mrs. G.R., California
 Dear Mrs. R.:
 The process of aging often causes changes in the skin around the eyes and in the appearance of both the upper and lower lids — even in people who have perfectly good vision. There is no set age at which these changes occur — the aging process actually begins at birth.
 Sometimes the small muscles around the eyes lose their elasticity. The upper lid may droop. The lower lid may even turn outward. A wide variety of unpleasant symptoms may occur if these conditions are not treated and corrected.
 There are some simple, gratifying and safe operations for the improvement of many of these problems. These are done by plastic surgeons and by eye surgeons with a special interest in plastic reconstruction.
 Now about your tearing. A tiny duct carries tears through an opening in the lower lid near the nose. When the duct is clear, excess tears flow directly into the nose. When it is obstructed, the tears, nature's mechanism for lubricating the eyeball, overflow and they run down the face. There are a number of reasons for an obstruction of the tear duct, known as the naso-lacrimal duct. The exact cause can be determined by probing the duct, instilling dyes in the duct, and by other techniques. When the cause is found, it almost always can be rectified.
 Unfortunately, many elderly people assume that their condition is beyond repair and therefore do not seek the opinion of a specialist. Age itself is no reason for accepting unpleasant discomforting symptoms without seeking help and guidance.
 What do you think are the most common causes for indigestion? — Mr. O.D., Nevada
 Dear Mr. D.:
 The inadequate chewing of food, overloading the stomach, or eating too rapidly are some of the reasons for indigestion. Emotional stress and tensions definitely interfere with proper digestion.
 Some people are allergic or sensitive to specific foods. They learn, or should learn, by past experience which food or which combinations of foods should be avoided.
 Physical or organic reasons for indigestion such as gall bladder disease, liver ailments, stomach ulcers, indiscriminate use of tobacco and alcohol, and hiatus hernia can all produce indigestion.
 It is obvious, therefore, that the possible reasons for indigestion must be completely checked out before adequate treatment can be started.

'Protesting' On Rooftop

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Michael Hickey has endured gales, rains, snow, frost and sub-freezing temperatures. For more than 60 days, he has perched atop Gartree Prison, proclaiming he didn't commit the murder that sent him to prison for life.

Hickey is just one of scores of roof protesters among the 44,000 British prisoners housed in 120 overcrowded and mostly Victorian-era prisons whose architecture makes roof-climbing relatively easy.

They've been talked down, dragged down and washed down by firehoses at prisons from the English Channel to Scotland. But some, like Hickey, are harder to budge than others.

Hickey, 22, has been on top of the prison, located about 90 miles north of London, since Nov. 24. Hickey has surpassed the previous record of 47 days for the longest rooftop sit-in, say prison officials. They have made no attempt to force him down Monday was his 60th day on the roof.

During 1982, the last year for which statistics are available, there were 22 sit-ins on prison roofs, according to the Home Office, which runs the prison system. They caused $1.1 million in damages.

In the worst of last year's demonstrations, seven inmates — including four convicted IRA guerrillas and Palestinian terrorist Fahad Mihiy — spent six tense days during May on the roof of top-security Albany Prison on the Isle of Wight off England's southern coast.

They clambered onto the roof after a 90-minute riot, and while there knocked bricks from a water tower and caused other damage. They climbed down peacefully after getting extensive press coverage. Damage to the prison, mostly the roof, was put at about $1.4 million.

On Jan. 10, 1983, 12 inmates fled to the roof of Peterhead Prison, near Aberdeen, one of Scotland's toughest jails, after going on an early-morning rampage. They came down at mid-afternoon after firefighters and police trained firehoses on them.

On Feb. 25, there was a rooftop protest at Holloway Prison in north London, where 32 women arrested during anti-nuclear protests at the U.S. cruise missile base at Greenham Common were being held.

Twelve other women from the camp got on the roof and unfurled banners, sang peace songs and danced around until police climbed up and dragged them down ladders.

Other roof-sitters work alone or in pairs.

Mark Leech, 26, and Stephen Robinson, 25, protesting rejection of their parole applications, scrambled on top of Long Lartin maximum-security prison at Evesham on Christmas Eve. Having been left by police to "weather it out," they came down Jan. 2.

Martin Foran, 38, the previous record holder, spent seven weeks alone atop Nottingham Prison in the English Midlands protesting his 10-year sentence for three armed robberies he said he didn't commit.

He climbed down on July 21, 1982 after it was announced in the British Parliament that his case would not be reopened, and was transferred to Gartree, where Hickey is now.

Before his current protest, Hickey and his cousin, Vincent Hickey, 29, spent three weeks in May on the roof of Long Lartin Prison in Worcestershire.

The two Hickeys and another man, James Robinson, 49, were convicted and sentenced to life in prison for the 1979 murder of a 13-year-old paperboy, Carl Bridgewater, shot to death after walking into a farmhouse during a robbery.

All three claim another man did it, but an appeals court has rejected their applications for a review of the case.

Sarah Cawthra, deputy director of Prison Reform Trust, a lobbying group, said the common thread in most rooftop demonstrations was a sense of desperation and the need to vent complaints.

"Nearly all these protests occur at high-security prisons where people are serving life sentences, and there's no chance of escape," she said.

Ms. Cawthra said she does not condone such protests, but added, "If you get some chap on the rooftop, eventually some journalist will notice him, his newspaper will want to know why he's up there, and that's a good way to get your point across."

Urge Vote For Citizen Penn

WASHINGTON (AP) — William Penn, the idealistic Quaker who founded Pennsylvania and made it a haven of religious freedom, was never an American.

But now a garish billboard on a Washington block lined with suggestive marquees, peep shows and adult bookstores is urging Congress to change that.

"Congressmen!" exclaims the sign, which overlooks a parking lot. "William Penn's 'Holy Experiment' is a proven success. Please support House Joint Resolution 233."

The billboard, put up this week, is the newest twist in a campaign to make William and Hannah Penn the nation's third and fourth honorary citizens. Only Winston Churchill of England and Raoul Wallenberg of Sweden have won the honor.

"Penn was the architect of religious freedom and really of the whole First Amendment," said Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa. "He was so far ahead of his time," added Rep. William Goodling, R-Pa.

The upper class, London-born Penn jolted English society in the late 17th century by joining the plain-talking, pacifist Quaker sect. King Charles II owed him 16,000 pounds and, in lieu of the money, Penn asked for a land grant in the New World so Quakers might escape persecution in England.

In 1681, he established Pennsylvania, but he didn't go to America to see it until more than a year later. He stayed for two years and returned to England. His only other visit to Pennsylvania was in 1699 to settle some government problems. He returned in 1701 to London where he stayed until he died 17 years later.

The first article of the colony's "Great Law," a humanitarian code adopted in 1682, guaranteed liberty of conscience. The actual land, though Penn's by royal decree, was settled only after Indians living on it had been compensated.

The Senate already has passed Specter's resolution giving citizenship to the progressive Quaker couple. The House bill introduced by Goodling is still in committee.

Long dresses, breeches and tri-cornered hats dotted a small but jubilant group of Penn supporters beneath the still-wet billboard sponsored by the Philadelphia, Pa. Boosters Association and donated by Rollins Outdoor Advertising.

They seemed undisturbed by the taverns, liquor stores and X-rated movies within sight of their sign for Penn, who once prayed that newborn Philadelphia would be preserved "from such as would abuse and defile thee" and "kept from the evil that would overwhelm thee."

The Penn citizenship effort began more 10 years ago when Elaine Peden of Philadelphia was helping her children do their homework.

"The more I learned about William Penn, the more intrigued I became," she said.

According to Mrs. Peden, the Pennsylvania Legislature tried on the state's 200th anniversary to exhume the Penns from their graves outside London and rebury them in Pennsylvania. However, British authorities prevented the move.

Air Rescue Service Is Marking 15th Anniversary

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Dramatic, lifesaving incidents are a daily occurrence for Air Evac, a hospital-based medical air rescue service that is celebrating its 15th anniversary this year.

Since it was founded in 1969, the rescue service has flown thousands of patients ranging from car-accident to heart-attack victims, under every kind of emergency situation, reports Larry T. Cooper, program director.

It has rushed "high risk" mothers to emergency rooms, brought in drug overdose cases, saved the lives of countless premature babies, has flown in organ donor teams with their precious cargo and has transported blood, drugs and other needed medical supplies.

"The advantage of hospital-based rescue is that hospitals are prepared to receive emergency patients and, in fact, are informed the moment an emergency happens," says Cooper.

According to Cooper, a former Air Force fighter pilot, Air Evac pioneered the concept which has now been copied throughout the United States. It was the idea, he said, of Dr. Harry L. Reger and Stephen M. Morris, the latter then with the Samaritan Health Service and now chairman and chief executive officer of SamCor Inc., the parent company in Phoenix.

Their aim, Cooper said, was "to combine knowledgeable hospital and knowledgeable aviation personnel."

"Most of the fixed-wing air ambulance services (at that time) consisted of pilots willing to take a seat out of an airplane and lay a blanket on the floor for a patient," Cooper explained. "They had few medical skills. Air Evac put hospital-trained nurses and paramedics in the air, with pilots who knew something about emergency rescue."

"The planes, too, were equipped for medical transport. And the service was connected to hospitals whose staffs were highly trained in emergency medical care as well as having the resources of a variety of medical specialists."

Today, Air Evac has 21 flight nurses, 20 paramedics, and six helicopter pilots and several fixed-wing pilots all experienced in air emergency rescue, Cooper notes.

It has two pressurized fixed-wing aircraft designed for high altitude, cross-country transport, and two twin-engine specially designed and equipped helicopters.

Each is a mini-hospital outfitted with the most modern lifesaving equipment, including cardiac monitoring devices, respirators and more. Cooper described them as "airborne intensive care units and flying emergency rooms combined."

Air Evac nurses are CCRNs, having at least three years of critical care experience and have completed a 400-hour flight nurse training course, among other requirements. Paramedics who fly as members of the helicopter team only have similarly rigorous training in emergency care.

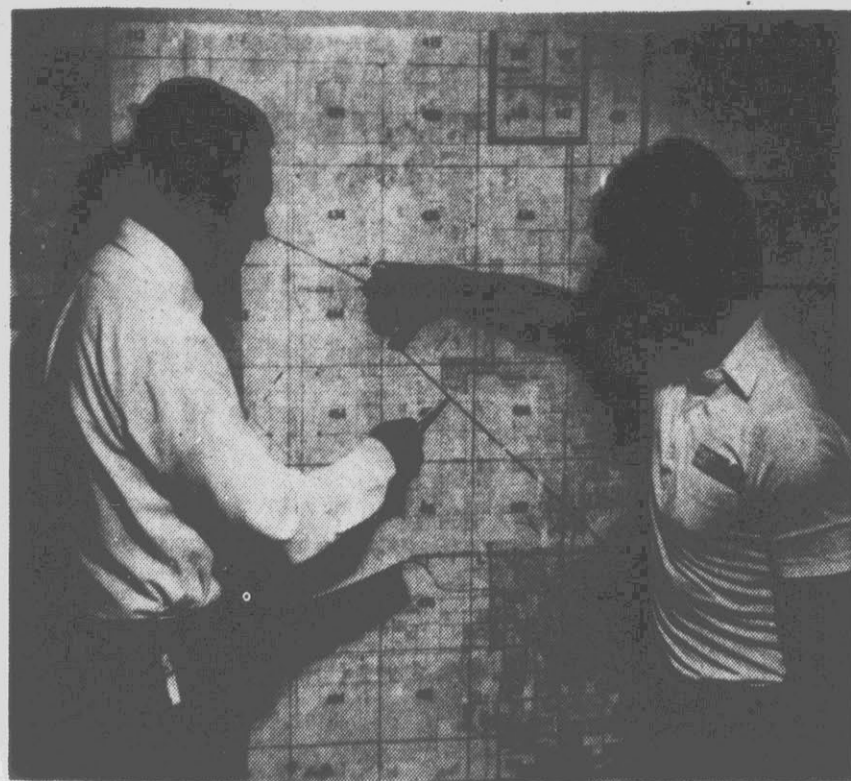

In the air, paramedics and nurses can begin emergency procedures that can mean the difference between life and death to a critically ill patient, Cooper points out.

In 1983, Air Evac teams, always on 24-hour alert, flew some 3,035 patients on more than 2,972 transport flights. Cooper estimates that since its founding it has flown over

1 million miles. In addition to serving the Southwest, Air Evac uses its pressurized fixed-wing Cessnas to transport patients non-stop cross-country, taking patients with acute medical needs to a specific specialty hospital or treatment center.

Conservative Complains Queen Too Solicitous For Non-Whites

By EDITH M. LEDERER Associated Press Writer LONDON (AP) — A right-wing lawmaker's accusation that Queen Elizabeth II pays too much attention to non-whites is sparking controversy over her dual role as Britain's head of state and leader of the multiracial Commonwealth.

Enoch Powell, a leading campaigner against non-white immigration to Britain, voiced unusually sharp criticism of the queen, saying she has showed more concern for the Commonwealth and Britain's immigrant minorities than for the mass of her British subjects, 96 percent of whom are white.

The conservative Daily Telegraph called Monday for a "serious public debate" on the queen's role as head of the Commonwealth, the 48-nation association of Britain and its former colonies that represents a quarter of the world's population.

The evident target of Powell's attack was the queen's Christmas Day message, which referred to her visit to India during the November Commonwealth conference and a conversation with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. It included a plea to close the gap between rich and poor nations by greater interdependence and less nationalism.

The 57-year-old monarch avoids political disputes and speaks in generalities at public engagements. When she opens Parliament every year, the government of the day writes her speech outlining its legislative program.

Powell, a member of Northern Ireland's Protestant Ulster Unionist Party, accused ministers of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government of writing the queen's recent speeches and putting a non-white bias "in the sovereign's mouth."

But Buckingham Palace press secretary Michael Shea said the queen wrote the Christmas message herself. Shea noted that the queen is head of state of 17 countries including Britain.

"The queen has all her people at heart, irrespective of race, creed or color," he said.

Powell's views on race have attracted widespread publicity since 1968, when he predicted a bloodbath if non-white immigration to Britain went unchecked. A former Conservative health minister, he left the party in 1974.

In a speech Friday to Leicester businessmen, the 71-year-old Powell said the queen's speeches "suggest that she has the interests and affairs of other countries in other continents as much or more at heart than those of her own people."

He said they also suggested that "even here in the United Kingdom she is more concerned for the susceptibilities and prejudices of a vociferous minority of newcomers than for the great mass of her subjects."

Powell's remarks have split the right wing of the Conservative Party and brought into the open a simmering discontent in some sections of the party over the queen's Christmas broadcast.

"I did not feel so much attention to Mrs. Gandhi was appropriate for a Christmas broadcast," said right-wing Tory lawmaker John Stokes.

But fellow Conservative Jill Knight said: "Enoch Powell hasn't a shred of right to suggest that he knows better than her majesty what she should say."

Britain's conservative newspapers also were split.

The Sunday Telegraph said there is a danger that "the more successfully she identifies with all the various Commonwealth cultures, creeds and political systems, the less complete could become her understanding of the British."

But The Daily Mail said Powell had "virtually accused the queen of being unpatriotic" and told its readers: "She needs no lectures in duty to Britain from anybody. She is a straightforward and sincere woman and need feel no inhibition about expressing at Christmas or any time her instinctive concern for others — whatever the color of their skin."

Powell came under strong attack from opposition leaders.

Deputy Labor Party leader Roy Hattersley said: "Powell has got to get it into his head that a large proportion of the British population is black — West Indian and Asian — and they are the queen's subjects and every bit as patriotic and loyal as he is."

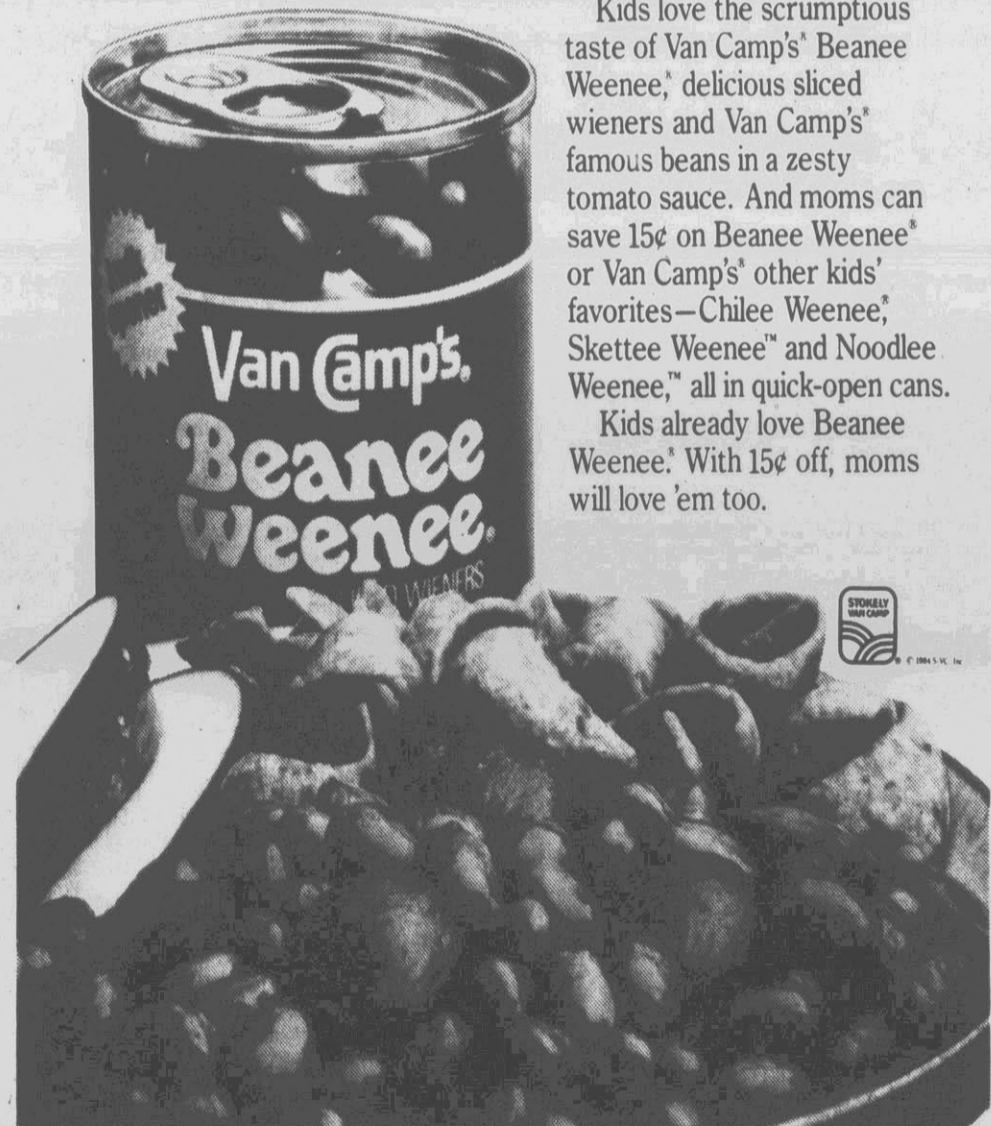

Liberal leader David Steel said the queen's broadcast "contained a refreshingly wider vision of the problems confronting our world and the need for international brotherhood than is commonly heard from more narrow-minded politicians, of which Mr. Powell is the narrowest."

Good Summer Water Supply

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says heavy rains and snow in the western United States over the winter will bring abundant water supplies next summer.

Peter C. Myers, chief of the Agriculture Department's Soil Conservation Service, says the agency's first snowpack survey of the season Jan. 1 showed that precipitation last fall and so far this winter has been "very heavy" for the second consecutive year.

An Attitude Of Caution On Spending

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Consumers are starting 1984 in a conservative mood about money, according to a new survey which found that nine people in 10 would rather save or invest extra dollars instead of spending them.

Karen Olshan, vice president and manager of corporate research for BBDO Inc., the advertising firm which conducted the survey, said in a telephone interview that it is not clear whether people will keep a permanently tight rein on spending or whether they are simply being cautious after holiday shopping.

"Whether it reflects the economy ... is hard to know," she said.
The people polled were asked what they planned to do with any money they had left after meeting expenses. Fifty-seven percent said they would put it in a savings account, 34 percent said they would invest it and 9 percent said they would spend it.

The poll was based on a nationwide sample of 200 people, interviewed during the first week of January.

Ms. Olshan pointed out that previous BBDO surveys showed a pattern of after-Christmas conservatism toward spending, followed by a mid-year loosening of the pursestrings. In a January 1983 poll, for example, only 12 percent of those questioned said they would spend any extra money they had, while a June 1983 survey showed 25 percent planning on spending.

At the same time, however, when the poll respondents were given a list of discretionary activities like eating out or taking a vacation and asked whether they planned more, less or about the same as last year, very few indicated plans to step up spending.

Only 12 percent, for example, said they would eat more often at expensive restaurants; only 19 percent said they would go to the movies more. The activity showing the most promise was buying clothes; 41 percent said they planned to buy more clothes this year than last.

Asked about the outlook for their personal finances, the people questioned generally said they expected them to get better, with higher-income consumers expressing more confidence.

Among those with an income of $20,000 or less, 41 percent said they expected their personal finances to improve, 37 percent said they expected things to stay the same, 17 percent said things would get worse and 5 percent said they did not know.

Among those with an income of $20,000 or more, 54 percent said finances would improve, 39 percent said they'd stay the same and 7 percent said they did not know.

In January 1983, only 23 percent of those in the under-$20,000 group and 49 percent of the over $20,000-group said things would get better, while 22 percent of the lower-income respondents and 15 percent of the upper-income respondents said things would get worse.

"There is no question in our thinking that Americans seem to feel better about themselves and their country than they have in a long time," said Ms. Olshan.

The positive feeling Americans have about the country is reflected in their buying intentions, although Ms. Olshan said the intentions don't always translate into action.

Poll respondents were asked whether they would be likely to buy American or foreign brands of clothing, cars, television sets, wine, stereo equipment and video equipment this year. More than 80 percent said they were more likely to buy American clothing and cars, 75 percent said they'd buy U.S. televisions, 66 percent opted for American wine and about 55 percent picked domestic stereo and video equipment.

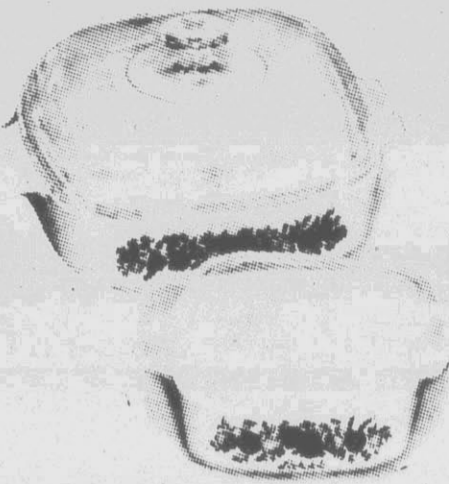

Ms. Olshan conceded that despite what people in the poll said, sales of imports remain strong. "To some extent, it (the poll) is a reflection of attitude as much as, or more than, behavior," she said.
