Announces Goals Russell Chosen PCC President

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. Charles E. Russell, the acting president of Pitt Community College since June 1, 1983, was elected president of the institution Thursday by the board of trustees.

Board Chairman Clifton W. Everett Sr. said the action came following a discussion on the manner in which to fill the vacancy created by the death Jan. 17 of Dr. William E. Fulford, who was on a leave of absence for health reasons.

"The prevailing opinion of the board was that the matter should be addressed and the prevailing sentiment was for Dr. Russell to fill the president's position," Everett said.

Although Russell "was elected unanimously," Everett said, the action must be approved by the State Board of Community Colleges, which will meet Feb. 9.

A native of Jamesville, Russell received a bachelor's degree from N.C. State University, his master's from East Carolina University and a doctor of education degree from N.C. State.

Russell was administrative assistant to the president of the N.C. Farm Bureau in Raleigh from 1961 until he came to PCC in 1971 as director of adult basic education and director of public relations. He was named assistant to the president in 1975 and held that post until named acting president in June of last year when Fulford was granted a leave of absence.

In an interview this morning, Russell said his first priority would be to "help make the best better ... improve the quality of our programs" so the school will provide "the highest quality of instruction that can be had."

The new president said he will also work to "continue to improve and strengthen the relationship between this institution," and local area businesses, industry, secondary schools and East Carolina University, in an effort to "better serve everyone."

Russell said his third goal as president of PCC will be to "secure additional facilities," which are needed if the school is to continue "our open door policy" of admissions and continue the task of providing for the job training needs of business and industry.

"I want to create and foster an atmosphere," Russell said, in which "the faculty and staff can achieve their personal professional goals as well as the goals of Pitt Community College."

"We've been trying to enhance the image of vocational and technical education ... provide the type people want to be a part of. This is where the future is," Russell said, suggesting that the school would add new "high-tech type programs" as facilities become available.

Pitt Community College, established in 1961 as an industrial education center, is the 12th largest of the 58 schools in the state's community college system.

With some 2,800 students, PCC has 190 full-time employees and about 100 part-time employees, with a budget of $7.5 million.

Russell said about 75 percent of the students are enrolled in technical programs, while 15 percent are vocation students. About 10 percent are in college transfer programs.

"The growth that we've had ... that growth is due to Dr. Fulford's leadership. He worked extremely hard," Russell said.

"We have an excellent faculty, excellent staff. The deans here are seasoned, experienced people. With their help, and the help of the faculty and staff, there are tremendous opportunities ahead of us," Russell said.

Dr. Ray Minges Is Named Citizen Of Year By C-of-C

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. Ray Donald Minges, former chief of surgery and chief of staff at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and a community leader, has been named "Citizen of the Year" by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Minges received the chamber's award Thursday at the organization's annual meeting.

Minges, a native of Claremont, began a private surgery practice in Greenville in 1953. He was chief of surgery at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and served as chief of the hospital medical staff for three years beginning in 1960. He served as president of the Pitt County Medical Society and served on the board of directors of the North Carolina Medical Society.

"From the time he began his practice until he closed his office almost 20 years later he never turned away a patient because of lack of financial resources," said David J. Whichard II, who presented Minges his award.

"Indeed, he devoted a large measure of his time in active medical practice to charity patients. Minges was one of the Pitt County organizers of the Mental Health Association in North Carolina and served on the organizational committee to establish the Century Club at East Carolina University, the forerunner of the Pirates Club.

In addition, he has been active in ECU's University Foundation, the ECU Medical Foundation and the Summer Theater Endowment Fund.

For 20 years Minges served as a member of the Greenville Utilities Commission and on the board of State Bank and Trust Co. and its successor, NCNB National Bank. He was overall chairman for the fund drive that raised $1 million for the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center. His involvement in Ducks Unlimited has brought him recognition nationwide.

Minges' awards include Book of Golden Deeds in 1966 and the E.B. Aycock Award for service to local schools. "Almost everything that has touched the life of this community in recent decades has felt the impact of this man," said Whichard. "There were major community efforts such as the initial fund-raising effort to build Ficklen Stadium where he served on the steering committee."

"There followed the effort years later to expand the stadium to its present capacity and our citizen of the year chaired the campaign which raised more than $900,000 in the Greenville area."

Agree Resume Troop-Cutting Negotiations

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The stalled East-West negotiations on troop reductions in Europe will resume March 16 in Vienna, according to a NATO spokesman.

The decade-old negotiations were interrupted Dec. 15 when the Warsaw Pact refused to agree on a 1984 resumption date.

The new talks take on added significance as the last remaining East-West arms forum since the collapse of two sets of missiles talks in Geneva, Switzerland, last month.

Moscow's readiness to resume the bargaining process was suggested by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko at the start of a disarmament conference in Stockholm earlier this month. He made the offer to U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich Genscher of West Germany.

Belgian Ambassador Robert Lebacqz, speaking on behalf of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, told the Austrian Foreign Ministry that the Western alliance had decided Wednesday to accept the resumption date.

Shultz said in a televised interview last Sunday that the United States was agreeable to renewing the talks as the Soviets proposed.

The Mutual and Balanced Force Reduction Talks, as the negotiations are official known, are aimed at cutting conventional forces and armaments in Central Europe. Twelve NATO countries and seven Warsaw Pact nations are involved in the negotiations.

U.S. delegation spokesman John Karch would not confirm or deny a published report that President Reagan had decided not to change the Western negotiating position.

The talks have been stalled over the "data issue," with the Western side insisting on clarification of the manpower of both military alliances before practical reduction moves can take place.

Reagan Says No Tricks In Plan To Shave Deficit

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, responding to Democrats' fears of an election-year ambush, asserted today there was no political trickery behind his plan to shave the budget deficit by $100 billion through bipartisan negotiations.

The president, at a breakfast meeting with Republican members of Congress, said, "I want you and your Democratic colleagues to know that I'm serious about negotiating a down payment on the deficit. This is not a political posturing, as some suggested."

However, Democrats in Congress are suspicious about Reagan's proposal and say they will wait to see the president's new budget and his ideas for shrinking government red ink before accepting his invitation to the bipartisan talks.

The president told the GOP group that every area of spending would be subject to negotiations.

"I'm not ruling anything out as beyond the bounds of legitimate debate," Reagan said today, addressing congressmen seated at 16 tables in the chandelied East Room.

"But I do think that we should try to concentrate on the less contentious issues. If we all focus on what's 'doable' we can get something done for the American people," he said.

Reagan's offer is either "a great opportunity or a very good political ploy," said Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, senior Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee.

Republicans, meanwhile, see the talks as the only chance at passing deficit-reduction measures amid the campaign atmosphere on Capitol Hill.

"This is our best shot — and it may be our only shot — at doing something constructive about the deficits" this year, said House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois.

During his State of the Union address to Congress Wednesday night, the president offered to have top White House aides negotiate with a bipartisan delegation from Congress on ways to trim the budget deficit by $100 billion over three years. He called it "a down payment" on deficits that are stuck at a level of nearly $200 billion a year.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said Thursday that during such talks the administration would consider that "everything is on the table." But he quickly added that the administration prefers to start the effort by closing tax "loopholes," reducing domestic spending and eliminating waste in government.

The president has adamantly opposed reductions in military spending or increases in taxes.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., insisted Thursday that the president has to be willing to go along with reductions in military spending and increases in taxes or there will be no compromise.

Congress already has made a "down payment" on cutting deficits by enacting — at Reagan's urging — domestic spending cuts over the past three years, O'Neill said. "Now, it's the president's turn to make a similar down payment in the area of defense spending."

The speaker also said he wants to know more about what Reagan has in mind.

She has been a den leader for more than 10 years and is presently training chairman for cubbing in the Pitt District. She served as a committee member for Troop 452 at the First Presbyterian Church here. She was chairman for the ECU Council Pow Wow in 1982 and has served on both cubbing and scouting Roundtable staffs. She earned Wood Badge Beads in scouting and cubbing and has received the District Award of Merit and training awards in cubbing and scouting.

Translating System Is Based On Computer But Needs Human Help

By SUSAN OKULA
Associated Press Writer
WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — It has been a technological dream for years: a machine that turns out accurate, grammar-perfect translations from one language to another.

Engineers on several continents have tried to create such a machine. So far, no computer has been able to completely replace a human translator.

A young U.S. company, however, is marketing the next best thing: a semiautomatic translation system, based on a computer, with a human adding the finishing touches.

"Our approach is interactive — the machine and the translator work together," says Ron Mahoney, president of the 3-year-old company, Automated Language Processing Systems (ALPS). The computer automatically translates much of the text, but recognizes and indicates to a translator phrases or words that could present problems. The translator then selects or types in the proper words.

ALPS is offering systems that translate English to French, German, Spanish and Italian and a system that translates French to English. Computers have had a tough time handling the nuances of language, and for good reason.

Take the French word "dejeuner." As a verb, it means "to eat lunch," but it has no one-word English equivalent. It can also be a noun meaning "lunch." Preceded by the word "petit," it means "breakfast."

Similarly, the English word "free" has at least two translations into French — "gratuit" if the word means "free of charge" or "libre" if it means politically free.

Jack Rapport, the regional manager of ALPS for the northeastern United States, cites another potential problem for a machine. He says the English phrase "the spirit is willing but the flesh is weak" could be translated by a machine as "the wine is good but the meat is rotten."

Partly for these reasons, computer translation so far has usually been used for straightforward, technical material. In Luxembourg, the European Economic Community has experimented with machine translation for economic and governmental texts.

Mahoney and Rapport, in interviews in their Westport sales office, emphasized that their systems were directed toward lengthy translation jobs; they cited as an example the translation of a personal computer manual several hundred pages long. The ALPS product is based on years of research at Brigham Young University in Utah. Professors there were working, in part, to translate the Book of Mormon, the fundamental religious text of the Mormon religion.

ALPS, based in Provo, Utah, is stepping up the marketing campaign for its product, and has sold systems to companies including Xerox and Computervision, a company that specializes in computer-aided manufacturing and design.

Mahoney, a former vice president with Texas Instruments, said he believed the $5 billion worldwide market for translation services would grow in coming years by 5 percent to 10 percent annually.

John Raser, a spokesman for Xerox Corp. in Webster, N.Y., said his company had bought ALPS equipment after a careful comparison of other computer-aided translation systems on the market. He refused to comment on how the system has worked, saying only that Xerox was using the equipment for a project it doesn't want to discuss publicly.

Jesse Kalfel, manager of documentation for Computervision in Bedford, Mass., said his company decided to go with computer-aided translation because it believed it would be more cost-effective and faster. The ALPS equipment is being used to translate a 12,000-page document into French, he said. Kalfel said it was too early to evaluate the system.

Youth Serves On Park Committee

By JIM HARRIS
Texarkana Gazette
LOCKESBURG, Ark. — The only difference between Travis Liggins and the 15 other members of the city park committee is his age. The other committee members are adults, Liggins is 13. He is the youngest member of a park committee in the state.

"Usually there are a bunch of 80-year-old women trying to tell kids what they want to do," said Ida Margaret Stone, who nominated Liggins for the post. "Every park committee in the state should have a young person on it."

Mrs. Stone says city parks are for young people and she believes they deserve representation on park committees. But she did not nominate Liggins just because he is young.

Being on the committee is not an honorary thing. Committee members work in the park cutting brush, raking leaves and making minor repairs.

Liggins was doing the work without being on the committee, she said.

"His mother and daddy were on the committee and he usually came to the meetings with them, but he also works hard at the park," Mrs. Stone said.

Every time the committee worked on the park, Liggins was there, she said.

Donna Gallaher, city secretary, said Mrs. Stone had nominated Liggins this year and the other members were all for the idea.

"There were no questions asked. It was just done. I don't think it took two minutes to get it done. A motion was made, a second came and Travis was elected," Mrs. Gallaher said.

Liggins says he spends more time working at the park during the summer months than at other times of the year. "During the school semester, I usually don't have much time. I still go to the meetings and work on weekends," Liggins said.

He plans to remain a member of the park committee "until I die."

"I plan on going to college, but I will still be on the committee. I just won't be able to work as much," said Liggins, who is in the eighth grade.

"The state Department of Parks and Tourism was delighted" when they found out Lockesburg had a 13-year-old on the committee, Mrs. Gallaher said. The commission also approves of the city's park, she said.

"We think the park is terrific, and for a small town it is the best we have ever seen. The people in Little Rock are also real pleased with it," Mrs. Gallaher said.

Family Is Supportive Of Her 'Rewarding' Volunteer Job

By MARTY SHEETS
Freelance Writer

For a moment, the screeching siren from an emergency vehicle startles nearby residents, who wonder about its destination — a fire, an accident, a trauma — and its possible occupants.

The moment passes quickly and people return to their lives.

But for Greenville native Evon Wilson, the moments have just begun. Mrs. Wilson is an E.M.T. — an emergency medical technician.

five years.

In looking for a rewarding volunteer job that would complement her regular work day, Mrs. Wilson began an EMT course at her sister's persuasion.

"My sister dropped out, but I found out right away it was the thing for me," she said. "I liked the people and knew most of them anyway. I joined the Eastern Pines Rescue Squad that first month." The 25-member squad serves one of the largest rescue districts and five fire districts in Pitt County.

To become certified as an EMT, Mrs. Wilson completed a grinding three-month course, including 10 hours of hospital training. The course met each Tuesday and Thursday evening.

"My family was very supportive," said Mrs. Wilson. "I practiced a lot on them and wrapped and re-wrapped them in bandages. My husband stayed with the children and really drove me on to finish the course."

"I have found the only way you can accomplish something like this is to jump into it — and do it. But you really have to push yourself," she said.

When an emergency call requires both fire and rescue, both parents are called to duty at the same time. Allen, 6, and Robbie, 9, have to go with them, but they remain in the family vehicle under adult supervision.

"The boys have learned from observing and they know a lot about emergencies," said Mrs. Wilson. "They're fantastic kids... if they weren't, we couldn't do this."

But even with a supportive family, "sometimes it gets rough," said Mrs. Wilson, with a laugh.

"While I was on duty recently, my husband was at home fighting smoke from a pan of butter beans I left on the stove," she said. "I've now learned to check the stove before leaving home."

Mrs. Wilson is on call on nights and weekends and volunteers between 60 and 80 hours a month. Others who work night shifts pull duty during the day, she said.

In regard to her volunteer work, Mrs. Wilson said: "I don't enjoy the wrecks, but I do enjoy being able to help people. The tragic and worst thing is that, sometimes, I can't help them more."

Part of her job involves giving psychological support to the sick and their family members, she said.

"It brings you closer to lots of people. And the job doesn't end when you drop them off at the hospital. I think about some people for days and often follow-up on patients in the hospital."

Her work with the rescue squad has affected her personally and has changed her views on life and death, she said.

"I have a lot more compassion for my fellow man," said Mrs. Wilson. "No one considers race, religion or monetary worth in an emergency situation. The experience has also helped me to understand and to appreciate life more."

Once while Mrs. Wilson was on duty, a call came in that a pedestrian had been hit by a car.

"All the way to the accident, I thought, 'Please, let him be alive.'

In spite of efforts to revive him, the pedestrian died.

"His body was still warm, and I wished I could have breathed life into him," she said. "But it was too late."

The intoxicated driver of the car was at the scene.

"I feel sorry for these people, too," she said. "Many people don't realize how much damage even a small amount of alcohol can do. They think it can never happen to them."

Mrs. Wilson's medical training hasn't ended with her EMT certification. Last summer she and nine squad members, along with members from 250 other squads, attended Rescue College in Durham. The volunteers took courses and climbed ladders in mock rescue missions from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. in weather conditions that reached 100 degrees. The college, which meets one weekend a year, awards diplomas after four consecutive years of training.

Mrs. Wilson also plans to take another three-month course to become certified as an EMTI — an emergency medical technician intermediate. With that certification, she'll be able to administer advanced life-support systems, such as intravenous drips.

"My long-time goal is to become a paramedic, if Pitt County decides to use that service," said Mrs. Wilson.

Mrs. Wilson's satisfaction with her volunteer EMT work has rubbed off on her volunteer fireman husband. He has joined the rescue squad and is now working on certification as an emergency medical technician.

"Why would a busy woman with a husband, two young sons and a full-time job outside the home join a rescue squad?"

"For years, my husband, Woodie, has been a volunteer fireman for Eastern Pines," she said. "He works for Greenville Utilities during the day."

"He was doing a good deed and the many thanks he got from people in the community was rewarding. I enjoy my job very much but decided I needed to do something outside of work, too."

Mrs. Wilson has worked in the Greenville Operations Center for Wachovia Bank and Trust for 10 years. She began as a proof operator, processing checks, and has been a research and adjustments clerk for the last

Needlework Artist To Attend Show

CHARLOTTE — Belle Boger of Mocksville remembers when she and her sister would get up at 4 a.m. to hang out clothes and fix breakfast for their brothers so they could get on to their needlework.

"We would do anything to be sewing — to do things with our hands," she said. And today, the situation is no different. She is still creating handiwork that occupies her time.

She will be at the Southern Living Show Feb. 25 through March 4 at the Charlotte Merchandise Mart here. She's been coming to the show for 14 years and visitors will find her surrounded by plaques and pillows of all sizes.

Using no store-bought patterns, she devises her formats by blocking out a design on graph paper. "The important thing is to start in the middle with the design to get it to come out even," she said. She often gets requests to buy her patterns but doesn't sell them.

Ms. Boger learned cross-stitch in the mid '70s and since then, despite the fact that she's also mastered the arts of ceramics, woodworking and primitive painting, it has become her main hobby and business.

The show hours are 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. weekdays and Saturdays and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sundays.

Mrs. Sutton Gives Talk

The meeting of the Greenville Garden Club was held last week at the home of Phoebe Owens. Mrs. Eugene Sutton gave a program, using slides, on Japanese and Italian gardens.

Reports were given by chairmen of the civic concerns, conservation and garden therapy committees. The new project "Teaching About Conservation" to third graders in area schools was discussed. Requests have been received from other schools.

Members will lend aid to a flower show school to be held in the eastern area of North Carolina. A donation to the CARE program will be made to help finance a soybean project in Costa Rica this year.

Assisting meeting hostesses were Mrs. Robert Crouse, Mrs. R.E. Laughter and Mrs. M.G. Martin.

Lena Bell Clifton, sister of Mrs. Martin, was a special guest.

Dear Abby

Do Pets Have A Religion Choice?

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, the subject of "religious preferences" for pets came up, and you said, "Pets raised in a Christian home are assumed to be Christian, and pets raised in a Jewish home are assumed to be Jewish."

Abby, not all pets accept the religion of their masters, even though you once knew a Jewish terrier who refused all food that wasn't kosher. That canine puts my Boston terrier, Benny, to shame!

When I was 9 years old, one Friday my mother had thoughtlessly prepared a lunch of pork and beans. I saved the day by suggesting, "Give the pork and beans to Benny—he's not Catholic."

She did, and Benny gobbled it up!

THE REV. TOM HAYES, PASTOR, HOLY CROSS PARISH, SANTA BARBARA, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I just returned from visiting my sister in Hawaii. She has two children, Sonny, 6, and Girlie, who is nearly 3.

The first day we were there, we were all sitting around talking when Sonny walked over to his mother, unbuttoned her blouse and began to nurse! Sis acted as though it was nothing unusual; in fact, she was very cooperative while that 6-year-old boy stood there nursing!

I almost fell out of the chair! Later I asked Sis privately why she hadn't weaned the boy long ago, and she said she had, but after Girlie was born, Sonny became jealous, so to keep him quiet she started giving him her breast after she finished nursing Girlie, and now she couldn't break him of it.

When I told her I thought it was psychologically unhealthy for the boy, she became defensive and insisted there was nothing wrong with keeping him "happy" this way.

Abby, my sister is an intelligent, educated woman. I would like your opinion.

MAINLAND VISITOR

DEAR VISITOR: I agree with you. It is a very unhealthy situation.

There is a strong possibility that your sister resumed nursing Sonny not only to pacify him and alleviate his jealousy, but also to fill an unconscious need in herself to be needed.

In any case, it is imperative that your sister discuss this with her doctor. And the sooner, the better.

DEAR ABBY: I know I did a foolish and dishonest thing, but it's too late now and I'm in terrible trouble.

The Carter administration in 1980 cited the 5-year-old Helsinki human rights agreement to attack the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan.

Two years ago I married a man who was divorced and had three grown children. He's 45 and I'm 36. We agreed that we would have no children.

I wanted just one child from him so I cheated and went off the pill and became pregnant immediately. When I told him, he hit the ceiling. He has given me a choice—him or the baby. Abby, I want this child, but I love my husband and don't want to lose him.

I thought he would change his mind about having another child once I got pregnant, but he's firm in his decision and now I'm in a terrible position. Please help me.

IMPOSSIBLE DECISION

DEAR IMPOSSIBLE: In order to make a decision you can live with you need professional counseling with a therapist who will hear both you and your husband out. Please don't make any decision until you get this kind of help. And urge your husband to go with you.

Maria von Trapp Has Birthday

STOWE, Vt. (AP) — Maria von Trapp celebrated her birthday in style — but a little bit early.

The matriarch of the famous singing family, immortalized in the Broadway musical and movie "The Sound of Music," had a big party last week as part of the festivities marking the opening of a new lodge at the ski resort the family has operated for decades.

But she didn't actually turn 79 until Thursday.

Baron Georg von Trapp, who died in 1947, his wife and children settled in this town a few years after they fled Nazi-occupied Austria in 1938.

Should N.C. Try That Tax Amnesty?

Confirmation Likely

The prospect of Edwin Meese III as a future attorney general is certain to dismay some people who remember occasions when his mouth ignored the caution signals from his usually sharp mind.

We see that occasionally in the best of public servants; and this administration has had its share.

The nominee is known for some good qualities, too. He is conceded to be conscientious, a hard worker, a trustworthy friend, and a person who calls things as he sees them.

As attorney general he would be surrounded by advisors as well as rules of conduct that presumably would be one more curb on his trait of self-expression.

His selection for assignment to the Justice Department might draw the charge of "cronism" except for a point of precedent. Presidents are prone to appoint those whom they know well, and trust. The memory of JFK tapping his brother for the same post is still fresh.

The Kennedy reasoning holds good today: he needed someone in the sensitive position on whom he could completely depend.

For these, and for lesser reasons, we presume confirmation of Ed Meese as the new attorney general will come to pass.

Self-Help, Too

Volunteers from ECU Pitt Community College and Greenville Utilities Commission joined forces to weatherize 20 homes recently in a program sponsored by Greenville Utilities.

The program involved putting up plastic storm windows, weatherstripping and installing water heater jackets. The work was done for the elderly and needy and at no cost to them. We applaud the efforts of these volunteers.

The program should tell all of us that there is much that we can do to minimize the cost of energy in our homes.

Much of the work can be done by any able bodied person and it can mean real savings in fuel bills as well as better heated homes.

Zeroes For Retiring

NEW YORK (AP) — By the reckoning of some financial advisers, "zeroes" could be just the right number for your retirement savings plan.

Zero, in this case, is shorthand for one of Wall Street's most popular new ideas in recent years, zero-coupon investments.

Merrill Lynch introduced them two years ago under the trademark Treasury Investment Growth Receipts, or TIGRs. Several other Wall Street firms quickly came out with their own versions based on Treasury securities, and the same principle has since been applied to corporate bonds, municipal bonds and bank certificates of deposit.

As innovative as they may be, zero-coupon investments function in a way that should be familiar to anyone who has ever dealt with U.S. savings bonds.

They offer no periodic interest payments, hence the name "zero-coupon." Rather, they are sold at a fraction of their face value, and gradually rise to that value as they approach their maturity dates.

At recently prevailing rates, noted The Outlook, a weekly advisory publication of Standard & Poor's Corp., a hypothetical zero-coupon Treasury security could produce a return of $1,000 after 20 years on an investment today of about $100.

A broker or other financial institution creates a zero-coupon investment by buying, say, $1 million of a specific security such as a Treasury bond, depositing it with a bank or other custodian, and then selling part interests in the package it has created, with varying maturities, to individual customers.

As interest payments on the original bonds accumulate with the custodian, they are not passed through to the customers, but are used to pay off those customers whose "zeroes" are maturing.

This setup allows packagers to sell zeroes with maturities ranging from a few months to nearly 30 years. So savers should be able to find a zero that comes due very close to any target date of their choosing — for example, the year they expect to retire.

One primary selling point of zeroes is that they provide a known return at a set future date on a saver's investment. They serve as an automatic compounding machine.

With a conventional bond, the interest rate is fixed. But that provides no guarantee of what the money paid out in the future will be able to earn upon reinvestment.

For ordinary investors subject to taxes, zeroes have a significant drawback. Though their owners get no checks, interest is nevertheless considered to be earned and received year by year, and must be reported as income on tax returns.

In the case of a tax-deferred program such as an individual retirement account or Keogh plan, however, that problem is of no consequence. All earnings under such plans are free of tax obligations until you begin withdrawing from them, normally when you retire.

Like the bonds on which they are based, zeroes of course carry some risks. In the interval between their creation and maturity, their value fluctuates with the ups and downs of the credit markets.

Furthermore, with any credit investment there is some risk, however small, of default. Conservative investors making long-term plans for retirement usually try to minimize this risk by seeking out the best-quality issuers available.

Credit risk is especially important in the case of zero-coupon investments, Standard & Poor's points out, because every penny you have in the deal remains tied up in it from the moment of purchase until you sell or the investment reaches maturity.

For that reason, S&P says, zeroes based on U.S. Treasury securities — which are considered the ultimate in safe investments — may be the best choice for many investors, even if their yield is lower than that offered by other zero-coupon issues.

"The bottom line for IRA and Keogh investors," S&P concludes, "is that dollars put into zero-coupon securities can create a sizable nest egg by retirement."

RALEIGH — Tax officials in Massachusetts picked up some national attention for themselves recently when they offered amnesty to delinquent taxpayers. Anyone who had neglected to pay his or her taxes could go into a tax office, pay the taxes and the required interest and rest easier knowing that the state would not prosecute them.

Massachusetts borrowed the idea from several other states which had already tried it. What distinguished the Bay State from the others, however, was the amount collected. Original hopes, according to news reports, were for $6 million. The state actually collected close to $40 million.

Should North Carolina try the same thing? The head of the Legislature's Revenue Laws Study Committee says he thinks the General Assembly ought to consider it. "The idea is to collect the money, not lock people up in jail, so I'd be happy to have this committee look into it," Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said in an interview.

Legislators and staff, in informal conversation about the amnesty program, raised several questions about the success such a program would have in North Carolina. First, they questioned if there are as many tax delinquents here as in Massachusetts. Secondly, they asked if the threat of prosecution here is as serious as in Massachusetts.

Taxes in North Carolina are not low but they're nowhere near as bad as in the state that's been dubbed "Taxachusetts." Commerce Clearinghouse reports that in fiscal year 1981 the total state and local tax burden in Massachusetts was $1,348 per capita as opposed to $805 per capita in North Carolina. Considering what a taxpayer would have to gain by breaking the law and not paying his taxes in North Carolina, one legislative staffer guessed that not many people dodge state taxes here. (No official estimate on tax dodging exists.) If they're going to cheat, he said, they'll do so where they'll save more money — on their federal returns.

Another factor which distinguishes the two states is the punishment meted out for tax evasion. In Massachusetts, tax evasion is a felony. In North Carolina, it is a misdemeanor. (A move was made in the 1983 General Assembly to make tax evasion a felony but it did not pass.) In offering amnesty to a potential felony, Massachusetts was making a much more alluring proposition than North Carolina could make with only its misdemeanor penalties hanging over someone's head.

It can be argued, therefore, that North Carolina would not be as successful as Massachusetts because tax fraud is probably not as great a problem here and the offer of amnesty would not have as much appeal. But the Legislature, with a full committee review of the proposal, could order studies done to prove or disprove those two assumptions.

Deputy Commerce Secretary Jim Senter said his department hasn't given any study to the idea, but that in light of Massachusetts' success, they'll probably do so in the near future. If and when they do, they'll find that the head of the income tax division, B.W. Brown, opposes an amnesty program.

"We are enforcing the law now," Brown says, "assessing penalties to many people. We have a lot of ways of finding the people who don't pay their taxes." The state gets information from banks, other financial institutions and from the federal government. Also, the Legislature this year provided the department with a larger staff of prosecutors to pursue tax fraud cases.

Brown said he doesn't oppose leniency for those who voluntarily pay off taxes they have previously dodged. "We give them consideration," Brown said. He just doesn't want to let them off the hook entirely.

Dunkirks For Consumers

WASHINGTON — A high-ranking official at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission privately told us he would like to have given this advice to the nuclear power industry last week: Quit producing plants and get into the spare parts business.

Nuclear industry moguls obviously wouldn't have gone for such wisdom, but it reflected widespread reaction to the industry's worst battering since the 1979 accident at Three Mile Island. Recent news has added new fuel to the long-standing debate over whether nuclear power can be safe and affordable:

- * The Public Service Co. of Indiana said it was abandoning a half-finished nuclear power plant on which $2.5 billion had already been spent;

- * Contending that the project's "astronomical costs are clearly unaffordable," a committee of the Cincinnati City Council unanimously adopted a resolution calling for the abandonment of the beleaguered Zimmer nuclear power plant;

- * The NRC licensing board denied Commonwealth Edison permission to operate the $3.5 billion Bryon Nuclear Power Station near Rockford, Ill.;

- * The Energy Department announced that, for 77 percent of the nuclear plants in operation, final construction costs were at least double initial estimates.

During recent years, of course, nuclear power has undergone similar doses of realism, yet endured. Though the nuclear industry hasn't received a new order for a plant in the U.S. in five years, it's still at work on 53 projects.

But victims of the Northwest's multibillion-dollar Washington Public Power Supply System (WPPSS) fiasco — where the state's ratepayers were billed up to $120 apiece last year to finance new power plants, only to learn later that the plants will never be built — aren't the only ones bearing the costly burden of blind commitment to nuclear power.

In Long Island, for example, consumers learned recently that the nearly-finished Shoreham plant would add another $470 to the average household's yearly electric bill. In Arizona, ratepayers face a possible increase of 55 percent as a result of two plants; for plants in Pennsylvania (Limerick), New Hampshire (Seabrook) and Louisiana (Grand Gulf), the proposed increases have been 45, 90 and 100 percent, respectively.

Meanwhile, within the next several months, the NRC will solicit suggestions for public comment on how utility companies will assess possibly the biggest cost of all: the permanent shutdown or "decommissioning" of those nuclear plants whose functional life has expired. Of the 88 commercial plants now operating in the U.S., at least 51 will require mothballing or complete dismantling between 2003 and 2012. That is, if they don't require closing beforehand.

Though decommissioning is not some unexplored science, its use has been principally limited to federally-sponsored research reactors and others of relatively low output. Its potential price for larger reactors has been estimated an initial power plant-construction costs, but the safe removal of bricks, mortar and radioactive components could cost much more.

Apprehension about the eventual price tag has prompted the Legislatures in five states — California, Colorado, Maine, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania — to require public utilities to establish separate trusts for decommissioning.

But in keeping with its tradition of rosy scenarios, the industry has resisted predictions that yet another Dunkirk lies ahead for consumers. Indeed, it's likely to fight any major effort to set aside trust funds that it can't use for purposes other than decommissioning and over which it must share control.

The decommissioning dilemma calls to mind an insensitivity apparent in $11 million worth of adds, paid for by the pro-nuclear U.S. Committee for Energy Awareness, assuring consumers that "the sun will come out tomorrow" but that "today is what gets us to tomorrow."

Consumers have heard that siren's song before. That fact that it's still sung reflects a nuclear-industry-wide belief that its position has been misrepresented by the media. Little does the industry seem to realize that the facts speak for themselves.

The Corporate Unitary Tax

NEW YORK (AP) — Pressed for new sources of revenues, states this year are focusing on the corporate unitary tax, a relatively new device that won clearance last June from the U.S. Supreme Court.

Large corporations, especially multinationals, are furious about the concept, which is bound to raise their overall taxes as well as complicate decisions on matters such as future plant locations.

Their anger contrasts with relief among legislators in many states that have already employed the device, and more that are planning to, as a means of resolving or relieving their fiscal plight.

Under the unitary tax concept, a company working within a state can be compelled to pay tax on the basis of its entire domestic or worldwide operations, rather than solely on the performance of its local facilities.

As a consequence, a corporation with profits from operations throughout the world might have to pay income taxes to a state even though its facilities there are money losers.

The impact is being felt by both domestic and foreign companies. While Japanese companies seem particularly unhappy, companies everywhere are seeking to develop opposition through their own magazines and letters to shareholders.

Twelve countries have filed complaints with the Unitary Tax Working Group, a presidential commission appointed to resolve the controversy but which didn't. And two of the 12 have halted renegotiation of tax treaties.

As more states consider such taxing, the responsibility for dealing with the issue has risen steadily in the corporate hierarchy, from tax departments to top-level managers, some of whom are expected to take their case before a conference of governors scheduled for February 25 in Washington, D.C.

Already, 12 states have implemented worldwide unitary taxation: New Hampshire, Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, Oregon, Utah, Alaska, California, Colorado, Florida, Indiana and Massachusetts.

Strength For Today

When the shepherd boy, David, went out to fight Goliath of Gath, he knew he had victory within his grasp because he had already conquered himself.

First of all, he had won a victory over his temper. David had also conquered fear. As men talked in trembling voices about the might of Goliath, David's calm words were, "Let no man's heart fear because of him." For David had met the lion and the bear, and having done this he declared that Goliath should be as these creatures, since he had defied the armies of the living God.

Last of all, David had conquered unbelief. There was no doubt in his mind that there was only one God, Jehovah, and to him all men were bound in duty and love.

David had conquered his temper, his fear, and unbelief. After that, he was ready for Goliath of Gath. And to this day it is true that we never conquer anything or anybody until we conquer ourselves.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I write in response to the letter written by Peggy Greene to your paper regarding the candidacy of Eddie Knox for Governor. The voters should know the full facts which prompt my letter.

Eddie Knox did not oppose the concept of a medical school at East Carolina University, but he did oppose a bill pertaining to the school because of the uncertainty of the planning and funding of the school. To the contrary, it was Eddie Knox who encouraged then-Lieutenant-Governor Jim Hunt to create an ad hoc committee to help work out the planning and funding for the medical school. We should remember that the Board of Governors, Governor Holshouser, and many others opposed any type facility. From the meetings of the ad hoc committee came the plans to phase the East Carolina Medical School into our health training and care program. Eddie voted for the final bill which included appropriations to get the school started.

The medical school was built principally during the five years that Eddie Knox served as chairman of the North Carolina Advisory Budget Commission. Under his tenure, over $138 million was recommended for the East Carolina Medical School and the legislature approved $134 million of those recommendations. Governor Hunt recently in a televised interview in Greenville confirmed Eddie's commitment as supportive.

Mrs. Greene's letter alludes to Knox's position on gun control. All Eddie has ever done on guns is to attack the criminal element who abuses the privilege that all of us believe law-abiding citizens of good character should have. Eddie did not, as the Greene letter alleges, "request that all of us register our guns." His proposal applied only to pistols and only where they were carried away from one's home or business, and the permit suggested was identical to the permit now required to purchase a pistol. Incidentally, Eddie owns pistols and shotguns and enjoys hunting.

It is regrettable that the campaigns of other candidates do not stick to the merits, for when they do Eddie Knox excels.

To the editor:

At the grocery store, a lady asked: "Have you done any more adaptations of Krylov's Fables?" I said yes. She said, "Why don't you send one of them to the paper?" I said OK.

A lion who was fond of raising chickens found that some of his birds had escaped. Some, he suspected, had been stolen. Lion called in Friend Fox and said, "I need to build something to house the chickens and I have heard that you are knowledgeable in developing and building. Will you help me?"

"Yes!" said the fox. "I will help you build a large, impregnable box to keep the chickens in." And the fox worked assiduously, displaying at last a very fortress for which Lion praised and thanked him.

Every day, Lion inspected the chicken house. There was much clucking and cackling within, and everything appeared to be tight. But one day, peeping inside, Lion was taken aback; he could see no chickens. How could that be? Lion went carefully around the building, checking and checking. All was locked up tight. Again Lion checked. And again. Then he found what he was looking for. "Ah! Here! A secret sliding door," he said and cried "Fox, Fox, Fox, gone with the chickens."

The moral? In going a building with a fox, E'en though thou buildest but a box, Beware before, beware behind, Lest cunning fox do steal thee blind.

Pitt Red Cross Is Cited For Efforts

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — The Pitt County Red Cross was recognized recently at a conference sponsored by Tidewater Regional Blood Services for its blood collections efforts in 1982-83.

RED CROSS CITED ... Mike Colombo, Pitt County blood committee chairman, and Ruth Taylor of the Red Cross display a plaque presented to the local chapter recently in Williamsburg.

Ruth Taylor, executive director of the Pitt chapter, accepted an engraved plaque during the awards banquet of Williamsburg Conference 1984 citing the unit for distinguished performance for recording the most improvement in scheduling donors for bloodmobiles.

Mrs. Taylor also received plaques for the chapter's meeting 100.25 percent of its collection goal and for posting a 31.2 percent increase in the summer production of blood, traditionally a difficult time of the year for meeting blood quotas.

Dick Carney, administrator of the Tar River Blood Center in Greenville, and other representatives of the center also attended the conference, which was held for Red Cross executives and volunteers from North Carolina and Virginia.

ECU Medical Center Is Toured By Candidate

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The East Carolina University Medical Center is a major force in the expansion of industry and population in eastern North Carolina, a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor of the state said Thursday.

State Sen. Bob Jordan of Mount Gilead toured the Brody Medical Sciences Building while campaigning in Pitt County.

"There had been some rumors circulating that I had not been supportive of the medical school," Jordan said. "One of the reasons I am here is to reiterate my support for the university and the medical school."

Jordan credited the medical school with improving the quality of life in eastern North Carolina.

The senator said that, to ease unemployment in the state, those people who are unemployed must move to where jobs are available or the jobs must move to where the people are unemployed. He sees the East Carolina University medical complex as helpful in both these areas.

"This medical complex is even more important than most of us even anticipated when this idea was discussed in the early 1970s," Jordan said. "The whole medical complex is an enticement for industry and retired people to look at eastern North Carolina even more favorably. This is important in helping the state grow."

Jordan sees the research in biotechnology being done at the university as an asset to the state.

"Biotechnology is going to open up tremendous opportunities in the east," he said. "I proposed a bill in the Senate to support biotechnology in the state; I support the funding of the program in a major way to fully capture the opportunities of progress so we can increase areas of animal health, production and disease resistance.

"The expansion of business due to biotechnology research will equal $50 billion in industrial expansion between now and the year 2000," Jordan said. "Biotechnology will overshadow microelectronics — and East Carolina University will be an integral part" in the research.

Jordan was elected to the state Senate in 1976 and has served as chairman of the Base Budget Committee and the Administrative Rules Committee. He was a member of the task force for the N.C. Board of Science and Technology and of the Southern Regional Education Board, among others.

Skated Into Weddings

WESTBROOK, Maine (AP) — Rena Godin always encouraged her daughter and three sons to roller-skate. But she didn't realize they would roll right into their future spouses' hearts.

All four children met their future mates at a roller rink in nearby Portland.

Six years ago, when Tina, now 25, and her brothers were all single and living with their parents in Westbrook, Tina met Fred Adams, also of Westbrook, while skating.

"We started talking, then we skated the 'couples' skates, and the next thing you know we were walking down the aisle," she recalled. They had considered skating down the aisle, but her parents "weren't too thrilled about that idea."

The middle brother, Louis Godin, 27, was next. That same summer, his wife-to-be, Lori, came in from Hollis to skate. They met, they skated, and they wed.

Two years later, it was 23-year-old brother Dennis's turn to fall to Cupid's arrow. Dennis met Debbie, and they skated away into matrimony.

And soon after, the oldest brother, Michael, 29, met his second wife, Julie, at the rink.

Now when the four children get together for their monthly Sunday skating session, it's like a family reunion in motion.

The name of the rink? Happy Wheels.

Pitt Chairman For Lauch Faircloth

Bryant Kittrell of Greenville has been named Pitt County campaign chairman for Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Lauch Faircloth.

In announcing Kittrell's selection, Faircloth said "It's a great honor to have Bryant on our team. He is a symbol of the quality of support we are receiving all across North Carolina."

"With Bryant's leadership and the friendships I've established there over the years, I'm confident we will run extremely well in Pitt County. Our steering committee is getting to work and we will have the best political organization in the county."

Kittrell is an account executive with Interstate Securities in Greenville and involved in property development in Pitt County. A 1974 graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Kittrell is a member of the Greenville-Martinsborough Lions Club, the Noon Day Rotary Club, and past chairman of the Congressional Action Committee for the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Faircloth, 56, a Clinton businessman and farmer, has served in the administrations of Governors Terry Sanford, Bob Scott and Jim Hunt. While Faircloth was Secretary of Commerce, new and expanding industry in Pitt County announced $142.9 million in investments resulting in 2,517 jobs.

Kittrell said Faircloth "has helped Pitt County in the past and will provide the leadership to continue our county's growth. Lauch Faircloth has the type of leadership and experience to be the best governor North Carolina has had this century."

Scholarships To Med Students

RALEIGH — The Air Force is offering more than 200 scholarships that can ease the financial strain of medical school and allow students to concentrate on their studies, says Capt. A.V. Voorhees.

The four-year Armed Forces Health Professions Scholarships pay full tuition plus cost of books, fees and laboratory expenses, as well as more than $500 per month of living expenses.

Participation is based on competitive selection.

There is a two-year Air Force service obligation for the first two years a student is in the program. Thereafter, there is a six-month obligation for every six months or less participation.

Further information is available from Capt. Voorhees at Suite 202, 4109 Wake Forest Rd., Raleigh, N.C. 27609.

Justice Blackmun Lifts The Veil On High Court

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — The venerable U.S. Supreme Court is made up of "nine prima donnas" who have nicknames such as "the pornographer's friend" and are provided with the same brand of cough drops day after day, says someone who should know — Justice Harry Blackmun.

During a three-day fellowship at Dartmouth College which ended Thursday, Blackmun treated faculty, students and the public to a rare and humor-filled glimpse of the inner workings of the nation's highest court.

"One of us we call round the conference table 'the warden's friend' because he always votes in favor of the warden and against the poor prisoner who wants to get out," he told an audience Wednesday night.

"We call another one the 'schoolboy's friend' in segregation cases, we call a third 'the pornographer's friend' because he's a First Amendment absolutist.... They could call me 'the alien's (foreigner's) friend' only because of some things I've written. We make fun of each other along those lines."

Blackmun said some of his fellow justices disapproved of his Dartmouth trip, during which he dropped in on classes and participated in informal discussions of government, politics and other subjects.

"We normally don't do this kind of thing," he said. "Some of my colleagues are critical of me for venturing into the open country."

"We're all eccentrics," he added. "We're nine prima donnas. We have eccentricities and we have biases, I suppose, although none of us admits it."

Blackmun told of the white plastic trash cans that have replaced brass spittoons at the bench where the court hears oral arguments and described the cough drops with which the justices are supplied.

"What bothers me is they're always Luden's cough drops," he said. "They're not Smith Brothers.

They're not any other kind. I've wondered, there must be some kind of antitrust case in that."

During the World Series, before weekday games were switched to night games, Blackmun said one justice instructed his clerks to listen to the radio and then passed game scores down the bench, much to the dismay of Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who is not a baseball fan.

Blackmun told of watching the late Justice William O. Douglas writing furiously behind a mound of books while court was in session. Blackmun passed him a note asking, "Bill, what are you doing, writing another opinion during the middle of oral arguments?"

"Yes," Douglas wrote back. "This lawyer was done 20 minutes ago, but he didn't know it."

On a serious note, Blackmun, 75, predicted significant changes in the court during the coming four years because of the age of the justices, who now average 69.

"I certainly must assume that in the next presidential term the court will change considerably," he said. "The next election will have a profound effect upon the Supreme Court of the United States."

He also said there is no sense of security in being only one of nine justices. "Don't ever think," he said, "that because there are nine on that court that there is not a very continuing, definite sense of loneliness in the decision-making process."

Blackmun, who worked his way through Harvard with odd jobs such as janitor and milkman, said he has found the Supreme Court to be his most difficult job.

"I thought I worked hard in practice, I thought I worked harder at Mayo (Clinic) when I was there (as clinic counsel). I thought I worked still harder in the court of appeals. But this is the toughest," he said.

"Most of the cases we take are difficult. They involve emotional issues. They tend to keep one awake nights."

"I always fear the April-June crunch when we madly try to get all of the opinions out," he added.

Last year, more than 5,000 cases were filed with the Supreme Court, more than double the caseload 15 years ago.

In the future, Blackmun said, the framework of the Constitution will have to be expanded to laws governing the sea and outer space.

"We see a constant seething economic, domestic, ethical, or if you will, legal struggle," he said. "Yet I am not discouraged about it. For it all is a striving among us as a free people to evolve that which is right and that which is fair."

Call For State Control Media

By KENNETH L. WHITING
Associated Press Writer
JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)

Information ministers from 68 non-aligned group of nations today studied a draft document declaring the right of governments to control the flow of news.

The Associated Press obtained a preliminary copy of the declaration, which is to be issued Monday at the end of the five-day conference.

"Every developing country has the right to exercise full sovereignty over information, both that concerns its day-to-day realities and that diffuses to its people," said the first of 14 points in the document.

"The right to free communication, within the limits fixed by the desire for the common good and respect due to the law, institution and individuals, is guaranteed by the state...."

The draft went on: "Every nation has the right and obligation to determine its own cultural identity...."

It called for a free and balanced exchange of news among non-aligned states "linked and oriented to the support of the new international economic order." This envisages among other things a massive transfer of technology from the developed to the developing world.

"The exchanges should be in the nature of 'constructive news' covering social, economic, cultural, scientific, technical and other items which portray the efforts underway in the non-aligned and developing world to improve the quality of life among its peoples and promote measures to sustain a steady increase in the standards of living of its peoples," the draft said.

It called for the strengthening professional bodies, improvement of communications and promotion of international understanding, but offered no concrete steps.

The tour is open to students not currently enrolled at ECU, but all participants must be enrolled in ECU's summer school to join the summer session in Italy.

Further information about the program is available from Dr. Ryan, Brewster Building, Room A-102, 757-6249, or from Ms. Laudati at the music library, 757-6250.

Participants must have completed application, had interviews with the directors and made a $100 deposit by March 2.

Board Of Directors Meets

The board of directors of the Pitt County Council on Aging met Monday and elected new officers.

Lauretta Lewis was named chairperson, Josephine Reaves vicechairperson, Dr. Patricia Dunn secretary, and Beth K. Clark treasurer.

Driver Is Charged

William Earl Stocks Jr. of Route 1, Hookerton, was charged with careless and reckless driving and hit-and-run driving following investigation of an 11:52 p.m. collision Thursday in a parking lot behind 204 N. Elm St.

Officers said the Stocks car collided with parked cars owned by Kathy Diane Mayo of 204 N. Elm St. and Annie Laura Hodges Mayo of Route 6, Washington. Damage was estimated at $600 to the Stocks car, $1,800 to the Kathy Diane Mayo car and $100 to the Annie Laura Mayo vehicle.

4-H Officers Elected

Antoinette Suggs was elected president Thursday night of the Pitt County 4-H Council. Other officers are Tonya Carter, vice president; Wayne Bass, secretary-treasurer, and Amber Harris, reporter.

Dr. David Chenoweth was the guest speaker for the session held at the county agricultural extension office. The council made plans for the annual 4-H Retreat March 16-18 in Murfreesboro.

Student Reports Robbery

Greenville police are looking for two men who took $100 in cash and a watch valued at $150 from a man at the intersection of Albemarle Avenue and Alley Street early this morning.

Investigators said Rashid Abdulziz Alkhatat of 300 Kings Row, a student at East Carolina University, told officers two men, dressed as women, threw him to the ground and robbed him. The incident was reported at 3:12 a.m.

Eye On Voters, Senate Voters Repeal Pay Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to repeal a $2,400 pay raise for members of Congress is headed for House action after winning a hearty 66-19 election-year endorsement from the Senate.

The Senate took less than an hour of debate on Thursday in voting to kill the automatic 3.5 percent automatic pay raise members of Congress received on Jan. 1.

"This is a good start on that down payment President Reagan was telling us about," Sen. Roger W. Jepsen, R-Iowa, told colleagues. He was referring to Reagan's State of the Union appeal on Wednesday for Congress to join him in making a down payment this year in trimming soaring federal deficits.

The repeal bill is now before the House, which is expected to go along with the Senate action.

"In an election year, there's no way to stop the bill," said one congressional leadership aide who did not want to be identified.

The move would return congressional salaries to $69,800 a year, the level before the Jan. 1 cost-of-living increase that boosted them to $72,200.

"We are in hard times. Our country is going broke. It is hard for us to ask for cuts to be made in other areas while we accept this salary increase," said Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., the prime sponsor of the repeal bill.

Sens. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., claimed the higher salary was justified.

Metzenbaum suggested that, in voting to kill the pay hike, senators were exhibiting political cowardice.

He said cutting lawmakers' salaries would perpetuate the image of the Senate as a chamber of wealthy men and women. "It has too often been described as a rich man's club. It oughtn't be that way," he said.

Goldwater said members deserve the higher pay, living in a high-cost area like Washington, D.C.

"I realize we're paid a lot. But if you look around his town and see secretaries and stenographers making $40,000 and $45,000, I can't think $72,200 is a big salary," Goldwater said.

Citizen Of Year...

In addition, Whichard noted, Minges was active in "the seeming everyday things which are required to make the life of a community full and rich."

For example, he said, "The Friday nights devoted to being team physician for the local high school football team. Helping with Babe Ruth baseball, the Boy Scouts, Band Boosters, the Salvation Army, United way, Wildlife Club, the art museum."

Whichard noted that Minges' involvement has "touched the lives of all our citizens from the very youngest to the elderly; from the most humble to the those in seats of power and authority."

A report on 1983 chamber activities was also given by former chairman of the board David Duffus, in which he listed the chamber's highlight activities for the year, including:

- East Carolina University Coach's Reception.
- Promotion of the ECU Cooperative Education program.
- Publication of a Who's Who in Business.

•Economic Conference for development and recruitment of industry.

•Reception for legislators in Raleigh.

•Coffee talks with legislators sponsored throughout the county.

In addition, said Duffus, the county councils of the chamber each had individual achievements in 1983.

The chamber ended the year, he added, "very satisfied with our financial position now."

Dr. Jon Tingelstad, 1984 chairman of the chamber's board, told members that a poll of those attending the organization's out-of-town planning conference indicated that education was the prime concern for 1984. "This perhaps reflects a nationwide concern," he said.

Notable events for 1984, Tingelstad said, include the upcoming opening of the Sheraton, initial work on the Cypress Glen Retirement Home and Eaton Corporation's metamorphosis into Yale.

HELI-STAT AND BUILDER — Frank Piasecki, of Philadelphia, poses in front of his "Heli-Stat" in what he says is to be the world's largest aircraft at the Lakehurst Naval Air Station. The Navy blimp that is to sit on top of the steel structure holding four helicopters is still in hangar in background. When finished, the craft will be 10 stories high, 43 feet longer than a football field, and wider than an aircraft carrier. The craft, a "lifter" called an albatross by a congressional committee, has been in the works for more than four years. (AP Laserphoto)

Cranston Creates An Image Of Man Running For 3rd Place

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
CARROLL, Iowa (AP) — Television lights flooded the stage of the Holy Spirit School gymnasium and reporters crowded the bleachers as former Vice President Walter F. Mondale spoke at the annual dinner of Carroll County Democrats.

When Mondale finished, Sen. Alan Cranston rose to speak. With a loud clatter, the television crews packed their equipment and the reporters stampeded for a waiting press bus to accompany Mondale to his next stop.

That left the Carroll County Democrats and exactly two reporters — no floodlights, no crowded press section.

The California senator insists such incidents don't discourage him, but they do throw into sharp relief the state of his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Front-runner Mondale, with his silver-streaked shock of hair, his Secret Service agents and his ever-present press entourage, projects an aura of success.

The lanky Cranston, with his jokes about his baldness, his meager retinue and his earnest warnings about the arms race, comes across as a man trying for third place.

That, in fact, is exactly what he says he is doing. Over and over, on his most recent tour of Iowa, he told audiences that his objective is to win a "clear" third in the state's Feb. 20 precinct caucuses and in New Hampshire's presidential primary on Feb. 28.

That, he argues, would put him in a better position to overtake the more conservative Glenn in later primaries and then go head-to-head with his fellow liberal Mondale. Sergio Bendixen, Cranston's campaign manager, concedes "it will be difficult in Iowa ... and even more difficult in New Hampshire" for Cranston to emerge in a "clear fashion" as the winner among the second-tier candidates.

Aides to the other candidates concede that Cranston has an excellent state organization, headed by John Law, a former executive director of the Iowa Democratic Party.

"In spite of the organization, Cranston is still an unknown quantity here," says Chuck Gifford, political director of the United Auto Workers, which supports Mondale. "That is awfully hard to overcome on a personal basis."

Yet Cranston soldiers on, slogging through his third Iowa winter since announcing in December 1981 that he was considering a race for the White House.

On a flight from Des Moines to Council Bluffs, he tells a reporter he is not disturbed by the relative lack of press attention. Of the Carroll County meeting, he says, "I was there for the Iowans."

He says he chose to pass up Secret Service protection, at least for now, because, "It keeps you from the people," and would interfere with the small, informal meetings he likes to hold.

At a meeting room in the Raccoon Valley Bank in Adel, Cranston sits on a table, his legs spread, his feet not quite reaching the floor, and answers questions.

Yes, he says, he will make "major efforts to make significant cuts in aspects of military spending."

No, he says, he does not see "evidence of any significant progress in dealing with the underlying problems of the economy."

In a vacant storefront building in Council Bluffs, rented for a month for use as a phone bank, he spends two hours telephoning potential contributors around the country.

"Forgive me for being so bold as to immediately get to the subject of money, but I am going to need it," he tells one.

To another, he says, "We may be able to overtake John Glenn, if not here, then later. He is beginning to fade. I think."

Law says the campaign is receiving $50,000 to $100,000 in campaign contributions a week, but had to use most of the $1 million in federal matching funds it received to pay off a $700,000 campaign debt.

In a line that never fails to get a laugh, the 69-year-old senator tells audiences he has more energy than any of the other candidates "with the possible exception of Jesse Jackson."

Still, he gets tired. At Trecek's Dairy Delite on U.S. 30 in Logan, while a mother hushes her squalling toddler, he says "Lebanon" when he means "Grenada" and "cotton" when he means "tobacco."

That night in Council Bluffs, he tells supporters, "I thank you for what you will do, and I urge you on. It just could be that we could transform the world."

Former Child Actor Recalls When Tarzan Was His Jungle Father

CHULA VISTA, Calif. (AP) — Forty-five years ago, John Sheffield's parents spotted an advertisement in a Hollywood trade journal that asked, "Do you have a Tarzan Jr. in the house?"

They were convinced their son fit the bill, and they were right as young Sheffield passed a screen test at MGM studios, beating out 300 other youngsters for the part of "Boy," the cinematic son of Tarzan.

Sheffield was just 8 when he first met the popular film star, Johnny Weissmuller, who was playing Tarzan at that time.

"He was a fine guy. He was like a father to me," Sheffield says of Weissmuller, who died in Mexico last week at the age of 79.

Sheffield, now 52, starred with Weissmuller in five Tarzan movies between 1939 and 1949, spending much of his formative years clad in a leather loin cloth in the backwaters of Florida, where much of the jungle footage for each production was shot.

Sheffield says the first thing he had to do was learn to swim, and he had the best teacher — Weissmuller himself, who was a record-setting Olympic swimming champion.

Sheffield recalls he got his first lesson at the Hollywood Athletic Club, prior to the filming of "Tarzan Finds a Son," which also starred actress Maureen O'Sullivan as Jane.

JOHN SHEFFIELD

"Big John got into the deep end of the pool and told me to jump in," he says. "I jumped in like he told me. He grabbed me as I was thrashing around and when I put my foot on his knee to catch my breath, it was like I was standing on a rock. He was so strong. It was like standing on dry land."

"Today's swimmers are specialists. But he did it all — up-river, down-river, sprints and long-distance. He was like a motorboat in the water."

Although Sheffield rarely saw Weissmuller after he left show business 30 years ago, he says his Hollywood father was always "kind and tender toward me."

"He was always looking out for me. We worked with a lot of live animals and a lot of times, when they got tired, the animals would get feisty," Sheffield recalled.

"There was this one big chimp who got pretty mad one day and was about to bite me while we were on the set. But Big John stuck his leg between me and the chimp and he was the one who was bitten," he said. Weissmuller's rush to rescue his young co-star was a central theme in their movies, which included "Tarzan's Secret Treasure," "Tarzan's New York Adventure," "Tarzan Triumphs," and "Tarzan and the Huntress."

Sheffield went on to make seven jungle-genre films, among them "Bomba the Jungle Boy" and "The Lost Volcano," before ending his film career in the mid 1950s.

"I wasn't into the crowds and adulation. You got to love it to be in that business," says Sheffield, who is married and has three children.

Although he has been out of show business for years, Sheffield says he has paid keen attention to the recent Tarzan films, complimenting the modern versions "as nice clean entertainment."

But, while he compliments Weissmuller's successors, Sheffield reserves his highest praise for his Tarzan.

"The others were good, but Big John was the best. I believe that," Sheffield says.

First To Know

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt told newspaper publishers, editors and reporters Thursday at the North Carolina Press Association awards ceremonies that he plans to run for Senate in 1984.

"I just want you to be the first to know that I will be a candidate for the U.S. Senate in 1984," Hunt told the group.

Hunt said he was breaking the news to them first. That brought a chuckle from the group, since the news media has been reporting for months that Hunt would run.

Boy May Have

New Resistance

HOUSTON (AP) — A 12-year-old boy who must live in a sterile bubble to protect him from sickness has grown some disease-fighting cells since his bone marrow transplant, but a few more months are needed for a "conclusive report," his doctor says.

The boy — identified only as David — showed "encouraging signs" in growing more white blood cells and immunoglobulin, another component of the immune system, since receiving the marrow Oct. 21, Dr. William Shearer said Thursday.

Shakespeare Is County's Choice

By HOYT HARWELL
Associated Press Writer
ANNISTON, Ala. (AP) — The county's Citizen of the Year is a man who needs no introduction, who was — in his own words — "a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy."

Forsyth, he joke not, it's William Shakespeare.

Each year The Anniston Star honors a citizen who has done the most for Calhoun County.

In choosing the bard, who died more than 367 years ago, the newspaper said Shakespeare is responsible for 100 jobs in the county and an enterprise expected to generate $50,000 in city sales taxes this year, as well as much attention from around the state.

Since Shakespeare couldn't be on hand himself, accepting in his behalf Thursday night was Martin Platt, artistic director of the Alabama Shakespeare Festival since it began 12 years ago.

"I've known him for a long time," Platt said. "If he could be here, he would certainly have waxed eloquent about how happy he is to be accepted in a world so different from the world he lived in."

The honor annually goes to a person who has done the most to help the town philanthropically, industrially and culturally.

"In trying to pick that person this year, we realized that all of those descriptions of real people applied to the spiritual father of the Shakespeare Festival," said Chris Waddle, managing editor of the newspaper.

"One reason we decided to honor Mr. Shakespeare this year," Waddle said, "is that a permanent theater for the Alabama State Theater is being built in Montgomery and although the summer festival is expected to continue in Anniston, this is the last year we could give the award to a hometown boy. After this, we will have to share him with Montgomery."

$432 Million In Bonds Are Sold

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Local Government Commission sold an issue of $432 million in electric revenue bonds Thursday on behalf of the North Carolina Municipal Power Agency Number 1.

The sale will allow for refunding of $275 million in outstanding bonds, and provide funds to repay bond anticipation notes due July 1, according to the North Carolina Municipal Power Agencies.

The agency will issue an estimated total of $2.39 billion to finance its share of costs associated with the construction of Unit 2 at Catawba Nuclear Station near Charlotte. The agency has owned 75 percent of that unit since 1978. It is scheduled for completion in 1987.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

SACKCLOTH AND ASHES

WHENEVER SACKCLOTH AND ASHES ARE MENTIONED IN THE BIBLE THE EVENT HAS TO DO WITH GREAT MOURNING AND REPENTANCE. THE FIRST MENTION IS IN GENESIS, CHAPTER 37, AN ACCOUNT OF JACOB'S GRIEF WHEN HE IS TOLD HIS SON JOSEPH HAS BEEN KILLED BY AN EVIL BEAST. THE ACTUAL GARMENT WAS A COARSE CLOTH MADE OF CAMEL'S OR GOAT'S HAIR. IT WAS VERY ROUGH MATERIAL AND THEREFORE UNCOMFORTABLE TO WEAR. ONLY THE POOR WORE IT, HABITUALLY, AS AN EVERYDAY GARMENT, OR ROUGH HERDSMEN, OR RAGGED PROPHETS FROM THE WILDERNESS. IT PROBABLY BECAME A SYMBOL FOR SORROW AND MOURNING BECAUSE THESE ANCIENT PEOPLE MANIFESTED THEIR GRIEF BY BRINGING DISCOMFORT TO THE FLESH. TO HEIGHTEN THEIR ABSOLUTE DESPAIR THEY ALSO SPRINKLED ASHES UPON THEIR HEADS. WE ARE TOLD IN THE BOOK OF JONAH THAT THE PEOPLE OF THE GREAT CITY OF NINEVEH, FROM THE KING ON DOWN TO THE LEAST OF BEGGARS, DONNED SACKCLOTH AND POURED ASHES OVER THEIR REPENTANT HEADS.

Some Are Critical Of 'Hunger' Report

NEW YORK (AP) - Several Protestant leaders have criticized the report of President Reagan's Task Force on Food Assistance, saying it erroneously implies that church soup kitchens can help solve the hunger problem permanently.

"The soup kitchens are an emergency measure, not the solution," said Claire Randall, general secretary of the National Council of Churches. Noting that increasing numbers of people are coming to church feeding programs, she added:

"Churches won't be able to continue to meet that increasing problem indefinitely. The church can handle some emergencies, but it is not a permanent answer to the problem."

No Ghost-Chasing In Blessing House

STROUD, England (AP) - Prince Michael of Kent, first cousin of Queen Elizabeth II, had two priests bless his manor house, which is reputedly haunted by a blacksmith's ghost, but one of the priests today denied news reports he had tried to banish a ghost.

"It was an ordinary house blessing, which is customary to give when a Catholic family moves into a house," said the Rev. Tom Curtis-Hayward after two British newspapers portrayed the ceremony as an effort by two members of the royal family to chase away a ghost.

Stories in the Daily Star and the Daily Express said the ghost is believed to be that of a blacksmith who was hanged for sheep-stealing 300 years ago on orders of a previous owner of the house in western England. The ghost supposedly appears each year on Jan. 25, the anniversary of the blacksmith's death.

"The prince and princess have not experienced any problems with the ghost," said Curtis-Hayward. "The princess told me she didn't have any concern about this ghost and wasn't interested in it. The ceremony was nothing to do with the ghost."

The Roman Catholic priest said he went from room to room with Prince Michael, 41, and his wife, a 39-year-old former Austrian baroness, sprinkling holy water and accompanied by an Anglican priest, Canon Roger Grey. At the end of the tour the prince and princess joined in prayers with the Catholic and Anglican priests, Curtis-Hayward said.

Look For New 'Breakthrough'

NEW YORK (AP) - With U.S. and the Vatican restoring diplomatic relations after a 116-year break, a Jewish leader says Jews "have a right now to expect another breakthrough" - Vatican diplomatic recognition of Israel.

Rabbi Mark Tanenbaum, international affairs director of the American Jewish Committee, says Jews see benefits in the new U.S.-Vatican links, since Pope John Paul II has become a "major moral force" against the spread of communism.

However, the Southern Baptists' president, the Rev. James T. Draper Jr. says they are virtually united in opposing President Reagan's restoring of ties with the Vatican. Draper says the action "has endangered the support of millions of evangelical Christians" for him.

Students Will Hold Service

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) - Manteo High School students have scheduled a special service Monday in memory of a classmate who died Wednesday in a shooting in the school parking lot.

Patrick Jennette, 18, died of apparently self-inflicted wounds to the head. Dare County Sheriff's authorities said Jennette had apparently set his car on fire, and then took a 20-gauge shot gun from the car and shot himself in the head.

Jackson Avers Poor Neglected

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The country's elderly and poor have been shortchanged as a result of President Reagan's emphasis on military spending, Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson says.

Jackson said at a news conference on Thursday in Charlotte that President Reagan failed to reveal any new plans for helping disadvantaged Americans in his State of the Union address Wednesday night.

The president "did not discuss any commitment to help women, to change work laws for poor people who can't make a living, for the elderly, for the disabled or for any minorities," Jackson said. "Instead, he talked about moral values and do-rights."

"We must continue to fight this administration," he said. "There is no evidence at the bottom of the economy that recovery is coming."

Jackson, who brought his presidential campaign to Charlotte after spending part of Thursday campaigning in Alabama, also criticized Reagan's plan to keep Marines in Lebanon, saying they have no role in that country.

"Our boys are there on a suicide mission," he said. "It's a place of guided missiles and misguided leadership."

Jackson also said that since the president was elected, 5 million more people have gone on welfare, more people are out of work and there is more poverty and malnutrition.

At a rally Thursday night, a standing room only crowd of about 3,000 people packed into a Charlotte community center to hear Jackson speak. The crowd had to wait about 90 minutes for their candidate to make an appearance, but the wait didn't dim the enthusiasm of the supporters, who jumped to their feet when Jackson walked in and cheered and sang gospel songs.

Jackson used the rally to recruit black voters. He asked people who were not registered to vote to raise their hands. About two dozen people did so and were ushered out to four tables set up to register voters.

Jackson began his address at the community center by chanting, "I am somebody, respect me, I can be what I want to be."

Jackson, who stood in front of a banner bearing the message "Jesse Jackson For President In 1984" said minorities will win national offices in the election this year.

"We must remove the artificial ceilings and barriers that limit people from growth," he said. "Hope is in the air, help is on the way."

Jackson was introduced by Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt, who returned to Charlotte Thursday night from Washington where he was attending the National Mayor's Conference. Gantt was elected Charlotte's first black mayor last November.

Before Jackson arrived at Park Center, local leaders took turns praising him.

The Rev. George Battle, pastor of Gesthame AME Zion Church, told the crowd, "Come November, (Jackson) will be the man in the White House."

Charlotte businessman Rex Harris, who will coordinate Jackson's campaign in North Carolina, said Jackson must make a good showing in the state in order for Democrats to win a Senate seat and the governorship.

Find Witness

Patricia Brett of 305D Azalea Gardens was ordered held under a $1,000 cash bond Thursday for failing to appear as a witness in the trial of Highway Patrol Sgt. Stephen Michael Compton on misdemeanor death-by-vehicle charges earlier this month.

Compton was charged in connection with a traffic accident Nov. 12 on Memorial Drive which resulted in the deaths of two women.

Compton's trial was set for Dec. 20, but Assistant District Attorney Mary Easley of Brunswick County, a special prosecutor for the trial, asked for a continuance when Ms. Brett failed to appear. Ms. Easley told District Judge Phillip Redwine of Raleigh that Ms. Brett was a key witness.

When Ms. Brett failed to appear in court for the trial on Jan. 9, Judge Redwine issued an order for Ms. Brett's arrest. Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Ms. Brett was taken into custody in Florence, S.C., and returned to Greenville and jailed on Jan. 19.

In addition to the charge of failing to appear, Ms. Brett has been charged with false pretenses in connection with a check she gave to a local beauty parlor, Tyson said. District Court Judge Lee Lumpkin set bond in the false pretense case Thursday at $2,000.

No new date has been set for the Compton trial.

Deficit...

House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas, who would represent House Democrats in the bipartisan talks, said he is concerned about Reagan's "proven propensity for going back on agreements and turning them into public relations ploys."

He added that if Reagan has "$100 billion worth of ideas, why doesn't he put them in his budget?" O'Neill said that when Reagan first proposed the talks during a telephone conversation on Wednesday, the president suggested that the first meeting be Thursday. O'Neill said that he and Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., would not agree to any meeting until they have seen the budget Reagan will submit to Congress next week.

"It's obvious from what we see today the speaker and the minority leader feel it's a trap," Chiles said Thursday. Democrats are wary of being drawn into talks that Reagan could use to deflect any blame for deficits while accusing them of refusing to compromise on proposals he knows they cannot accept.

O'Neill said he refuses to repeat the situation that developed in 1982 when a "gang of 17" senators, representatives and administration officials held more than a dozen secret meetings to try to hammer out a compromise budget. That exercise failed when an unprecedented face-to-face meeting between Reagan and O'Neill in the Capitol ended in disagreement.

ECU Faces League Foes On Road

With a long-sought victory behind them, the East Carolina basketball Pirates take to the road again Saturday and Monday for games in places that have been unkind to nearly everyone — and especially to the Pirates.

Saturday evening at 7:30 p.m., ECU visits James Madison and the Pirates have yet to win in Harrisonburg, Va. Monday, they travel on to Annapolis, Md., to take on the Naval Academy in another 7:30 p.m. game. The Pirates have yet to win there either.

Both contests are ECAC-South ventures.

James Madison has not been too friendly of a place for anyone. The Dukes are 6-2 at home and 8-8 overall, following a 57-55 overtime loss to Richmond on Wednesday night. They are 1-2 in the league.

Navy, meanwhile, is 8-1 at home and 21-2 there over the past two years. The only loss this season on the Midshipmen's home court was to the league-leading Spiders, who took a 75-61 victory there when several starters were sidelined with the flu.

The Pirates and Dukes met twice last year, splitting ECU won on its home court, 43-41. Madison, however, gained revenge for that, taking a 76-56 victory in the Convocation Center game. The closest the Pirates have come there has been 11 points.

The Dukes, despite losing four of their five starters from last year's NCAA team, have been successful despite being in a rebuilding year. They have beaten Navy and lost to Virginia by only three, also falling to Southern Methodist by the same margin, and to Old Dominion by just two. The Dukes are starting two freshmen, one of them a player the Pirates sought during the last recruiting campaign, Greensboro's John Newman. The 6-5 forward is averaging 6.3 points a game and 3.5 rebounds.

Derek Steele, a 5-9 senior guard, is the leading scorer for the Dukes with a 12.5 average. The other freshman starter is 6-3 guard Eric Brent, hitting 9.3 per game. The other forward is 6-4 Greg Moston, 8.3 per game. Center Keith Bradley, a 6-7 senior, is scoring 6.0 points per game. He is nursing a sprained ankle, however, and his status is uncertain. His backup is 6-9½ sophomore Eric Esch, hitting 6.4 per game.

Esch is the leading rebounder, with 5.3 per game. East Carolina is expected to start Leon Bass at center, Keith Sledge and Derrick Battle at forwards, Curt Vanderhorst at big guard and Tony Robinson at the point.

"Madison is their typical team," Coach Charlie Harrison said. "They may be rebuilding but they've got their system ingrained in their players. Their older kids have been through it all before and they have a winning tradition, especially at home."

Harrison said snapping the 12-game losing skid of the Pirates against UNC-Wilmington Wednesday night, 44-43, gave the team a mental boost, but the team was still young, and winning on the road comes hard to a young team. "They know that they can win now, and that will help us. But it's difficult to take a young team on the road and win. That's one reason our season has been like it has." Navy is currently 15-5 with a game Saturday night against George Mason. The Middies are enjoying one of their best seasons. The Midshipmen are on a five-game streak now, and they feature the league's leading rebounder in 6-7 sophomore forward Vernon Butler, pulling 8.5 per game. Butler is also the leader in field goal percentage, hitting 63.0 percent of his shots.

The Midshipmen had four of their five starters in double figures going into this week's play. Butler leads the way with a 15.4 average, while 6-2 senior guard Rob Romaine is scoring at a 14.8 clip. Senior center Cliff Maurer, 6-10, is hitting 11.4, while 6-6 sophomore guard Kylor Whitaker is hitting 10.4.

The fifth starter is 6-3 senior forward Mike Jones.

"Navy is a very tough place to play in too," Harrison said. "They virtually have the same faces as last year."

Harrison said that while he would like to win both games in the swing, he would be very satisfied to come home with a split. "I'm sure that the kids are going out to win their both and so am I. But I think we can get at least a split. But we're going to have to play well."

East Carolina returns home next Saturday to face George Mason.

Lady Pirates Face Gamehens

East Carolina's Lady Pirates continue their current road trip Saturday afternoon, playing the University of South Carolina. Tipoff at Columbia, S.C., will be 4 p.m.

East Carolina brings an 8-8 record into the contest, the first of two meetings between the two schools this year. They meet late in the season in Greenville. South Carolina holds a 6-2 edge in the series between the two schools. Their last meeting was back in the 1982 NCAA regionals, when the Lady Gamecocks took a 79-54 romp over ECU. The last Lady Pirate win came back in 1975 when ECU gained a 74-64 victory. South Carolina was 6-5 earlier in the week with a game scheduled with Southern Mississippi.

The Lady Gamecocks are a high scoring team, averaging 77.1 points a game. They are allowing 72.7. That's in comparison to the Pirates, who are scoring 56.8 points a game and allowing 59.4.

South Carolina is led by 6-0 sophomore forward Brantley Southers, hitting 17.7 points per game. Southers scored 20 points as a freshman in the last meeting with the Pirates, still her career high.

Three other starters are also in double figures. They are 5-11 junior forward Marsi McAlister, 12.9; 6-3 sophomore center Sharon Gilmore, 13.8, and 5-9 sophomore guard Mindy Ballou, hitting 11.6. Ballou is a Carteret County native, having played her prep days at West Carteret.

The fifth starter is 5-9 sophomore Gwen Lynch, scoring 7.0 points a game. Regular Renee Najarian, scoring 9.2 points a game, is questionable for the game with an injury.

Southers and Gilmore are the leading rebounders, each pulling 8.8 per game.

The Lady Pirates are expected to start Delphine Mabry and Sylvia Bragg at the guard slots, with Annette Phillips and Lisa Squirewell at the forwards. Either Darlene Hedges or Anita Anderson will be at the forward position.

Bragg is the leading scorer for the Lady Pirates with a 12.3 average, while Mabry is hitting 10.4. Squirewell is just out of double figures, hitting 9.7 a game. She is also the leading rebounder with an 8.0 average.

The Lady Pirates will close out their road trip on Wednesday, traveling to William & Mary for an ECAC-South contest. The Lady Pirates are currently 2-0 in the conference. They return home next Saturday afternoon to play host to East Tennessee State.

Soccer Tourny

The second annual Budweiser-East Carolina Indoor Soccer Tournament will be held on Saturday with preliminary competition beginning at 8:30 a.m. The finals are slated to get underway at 6 p.m.

East Carolina will be entering two teams in the competition, and will be hosting teams from the Kinston Soccer Club, Pembroke State University, N.C. Wesleyan, the Buies Creek Soccer Club, Pfeiffer College, the University of Richmond, Virginia Wesleyan, Atlantic Christian College and the Pfeiffer Alumni team.

"Indoor soccer is a very exciting and fast moving sport," ECU soccer coach Robbie Church said. "Fans will really enjoy the game because it is usually a high score affair."

There are a few differences between outdoor and indoor soccer, the major one being the size of the playing area. Also, there are 10 minutes halves played in indoor soccer compared to two 45-minute halves played outdoors.

All action will take place in Minges Coliseum and there is no admission.

Rams Hold Lead Share; Lady Cougs Take First

SNOW HILL — Greene Central held off a Southwest Edgecombe rally in the third period and went on to record an 80-67 Eastern Carolina Conference win over the Cougars, holding to a share of first place in the league standings.

SouthWest's girls, however, knocked off the Lady Rams, 58-52, to take over sole possession of first in the league. The two teams came into the game tied for the top.

Greene Central raced out to a 24-16 lead in the first period of the boys' game, and were never caught after that. They outshot the Cougars, 20-14, in the second quarter, powering out to a 44-30 halftime lead.

"We didn't seem to come out fired up for the third quarter and they did," Coach Lewis Godwin said. As a result, the Cougars outshot Greene Central, 17-10, and trimmed the lead to as little as four during the period. The Rams took a 54-47 lead into the final period. In that, however, the Rams adjusted and pulled away again, outscoring Southwest, 26-20, to take the win.

Theodore Edwards led Greene Central with 27 points, while Anthony Thompson added 20 and Boneree Johnson had 18. SouthWest was led by Kevin Knight and Columbus Sharpe, each hitting 15, and Darrell Clark with ten.

In the battle for first place in the girls' standings, SouthWest inched into an 10-9 lead after one period. The Lady Cougars were able to add a point to that in the second quarter and took a 22-20 halftime lead. In the third period, however, the Cougars pulled away, building up a 43-31 edge. The Lady Rams rallied in the final period, but fell short.

Phyllis Gorham led the way for the Cougars with 29 while Pam Gorham added 21. Cynthia Jones led Greene Central with 13, while Anntionette Wilkes had 12 and Allison Battle had 10.

The Rams play host to Farmville Central tonight.

State Spoils Coach K's Celebration With Win

By TOM FOREMAN Jr., AP Sports Writer

Duke basketball coach Mike Krzyzewski has a new contract, but he'll have to wait awhile before he gets to celebrate.

The Blue Devils watched North Carolina State take a 12-point lead just before halftime, rallied to within two in the closing minutes, then dropped a 79-76 decision when freshman Bennie Bolton converted a three-point play with 1:13 left.

In other Atlantic Coast Conference action, Georgia Tech set up Saturday's road match with top-ranked North Carolina by taking a 59-52 victory over Clemson.

Duke won its 14th game on January 11 by beating Appalachian State and has been stuck on 14 ever since. There were three straight ACC losses before Bolton nailed down N.C. State's triumph and took a game Krzyzewski thought he might have been able to court.

"Overall, I'm not pleased because I thought we could beat this team," said Krzyzewski, who signed his new pact on Wednesday.

N.C. State dominated the boards, many times limiting the Blue Devils to one shot and taking a 40-25 edge in rebounds. Cozell McQueen grabbed 13 rebounds for the Wolfpack.

Duke also failed to negate Lorenzo Charles in the first half and he responded with 14 points en route to a game-high of 27.

Charles said the difference was the play of teammate Anthony "Spud" Webb, whose 19 points came on a variety of drives and jumpers.

"Spud's been playing well," Charles said. "That's the key to our offense. Opponents can't concentrate on me and let him go."

Another factor was N.C. State's shooting. The Wolfpack shot 61.2 percent from the field, including 72 percent in the first half. From the free throw line, N.C. State hit 19 of 22 attempts while Duke was 12 of 25.

Doug McNeely's free throw with 1:42 left pulled Duke to within 74-72, but Bolton, who replaced Ernie Myers after he had fouled out, hit a baseline move and added the free throw to leave the Wolfpack at 13-7 and 2-5.

Mark Alarie scored 27 points for Duke, 18 of which came in the first half. Johnny Dawkins, still missing his shooting touch, had 11 points on four of 15 from the floor. Meagher and David Henderson finished with 10 apiece.

In the recent Duke demise, Dawkins has his 23 of 68 field goal attempts for 33 percent. For the season, he is shooting 49.1 percent.

Meanwhile, Georgia Tech paid Clemson back for an earlier loss.

"We owed them one," Georgia Tech sophomore center John Salley said after Tech boosted its ACC record to 4-1 mark to take over sole possession of second place. The victory also avenged the Jackets' only league loss this season, a 10-point drubbing by Clemson, now 2-3 in the ACC.

Illinois Slips By Michigan State, 46-40

By The Associated Press
Michigan State Coach Jim Heathcote liked the defense, but didn't think much of the officiating.

"One call usually doesn't make the difference, but in a low-scoring game like this it can," he said.

Heathcote referred to a traveling call on Scott Skiles late in the game that denied the Spartans a potential game-tying basket and ninth-ranked Illinois went on to a 46-40 Big Ten basketball victory over Michigan State Thursday night.

"I'm tired of the officials guessing on the traveling calls in this league," Heathcote said. "There's an emphasis on calling traveling and the emphasis is on guessing."

Aside from that, Heathcote was pleased with his team's defense which contributed to a record low point total at Assembly Hall in Champaign, Ill. The 46 Illinois points were the fewest scored by a victorious Illini team since the auditorium opened in 1963 and the 86 total points were the fewest by two teams. In other action involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 6 Nevada-Las Vegas beat California-Santa Barbara 100-68; No. 12 Tulsa stopped Creighton 75-64, and No. 15 UCLA tripped Southern Cal 75-69 in overtime.

Top Ten
Quinn Richardson hit three clutch field goals in the second half to help the Illini cause. Richardson, who finished with nine points, hit baskets while the Illini were in the throes of a 4-for-20 second-half shooting slump.

"Anytime you have somebody shoot that high in the Big Ten, you want him to put it up," Henson said of Richardson, who entered the game with a 70 per cent field goal average in Big Ten action this season. "If he's got the open shot, he should take it."

Both teams shot far below their average from the field. Michigan State made 33 per cent of its field goal attempts, while Illinois hit 40 percent. Richie Adams and Ed Catchings scored 18 points apiece to lead a balanced Nevada-Las Vegas attack that buried UC-Santa Barbara. Catchings also had a game-high 10 rebounds as the Rebels raised their record to 17-1.

"Offensively, we did a tremendous job getting shots early in the game," said UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian. "Our man-to-man defense wasn't working very well so we switched to a zone and that's when we blew the game open. I'm surprised because we never practiced a zone defense, but we weren't able to stop them with the man-to-man."

Second Ten
Steve Harris scored 17

Trinity Rolls By Lifegate

Trinity Christian scored the first eight points of the game and rolled to an 83-32 basketball victory over Lifegate Christian last night.

The win was the tenth straight for the Tigers, who are now 11-2 on the season.

Maury Harris led the Tigers in the game with 19 points while Art Reynolds had 16 and Steve Stevens added 12.

The Tigers pushed out to a 24-8 lead in the first period and upped that to 45-12 by halftime.

They continued to pull away in the third, holding an 18-10 margin. Trinity finished off Lifegate with a 20-10 margin in the final quarter.

Trinity will play host to Goldsboro tonight.

points and Herb Johnson added 15 to lead Tulsa past Creighton. Eleven Tulsa players saw action as the 17-1 Hurricane broke open a close game in the second half by capitalizing on Creighton's miserably field goal shooting.

The Bluejays hit only 25 of 68 field goals, or 37 per cent, for the game.

Ralph Jackson scored five of his 17 points in an overtime period to lead UCLA over Southern Cal. Jackson made two free throws after 49 sec-

Southern Cal's Wayne Carlander led all scorers in the game at UCLA's Pauley Pavilion with a career-high 31 points.

New NCHSAA Director Has Mixed Emotions

By TOM FOREMAN Jr., AP Sports Writer

CHAPEL HILL — Charles Adams says there are too many emotions involved to give his true feelings on being named new executive director of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association.

"I have some extremely mixed feelings. Some happiness, some sadness, a little nervous, extremely humble," Adams said upon official word that he would succeed longtime friend Simon Terrell as NCHSAA executive director.

"I never ever thought until recently about this situation," Adams said. "Even though it wasn't a goal, today it's become a reality. I appreciate it and I'm very happy."

Adams played for Terrell when he was a student at Cary High School and later coached there himself. Both men joined the association in 1967 when Terrell was named director.

In December, Terrell announced he was retiring effective June 30, and the search was launched for a successor. Adams was chosen from 32 applicants, six of whom were interviewed by the search and screening committee last Thursday.

The committee made its recommendation public during the meeting of the association's board of directors in Chapel Hill.

"This is an equally happy occasion for me as for Charles," Terrell said. "He'll provide you with some of the best leadership you've ever had if you give him the same support you gave me."

As an assistant to Terrell, Adams was responsible for directing interscholastic football, basketball and baseball. He also headed the North Carolina Athletic Officials Association, which included 5,000 officials in seven sports. His duties there included supervision, evaluation and assignment of officials to post-season contests.

"Somebody asked me the other day have I thought about what would happen if I didn't get the job," Adams said. "I've got a good position. If things work out, fine. If they don't I've still got something I've enjoyed for the past 17 years."

Adams takes command of an association which serves 334 member schools and offers programs in 17 sports for more than 90,000 boys and girls.

"The program has always been for the boys and girls of the state," Adams said. "Basically, it's a chance to give them a wholesome environment to participate in. The people in this state, especially the boys and girls have been blessed with great leadership."

A replacement must be found for Adams, and a committee is scheduled to report to the board of directors with a recommendation on April 30.

respect to free agents," Donald Fehr, acting executive director of the players association, was quoted as saying in today's editions of the New York Times. "We feel that happened in Henderson's case and it damaged him."

The players association has contended in the past that teams have engaged in a conspiracy against free agents by shying away from a player as long as his former team remains interested in him.

Lee MacPhail, head of the owners' Player Relations Committee, said he would have no comment until he had an opportunity to study the grievance.

NEW YORK (AP) — Seattle outfielder Steve Henderson has charged the 26 major-league teams with a conspiracy that forced him to re-sign with the Mariners after he failed to catch on with another club as a free agent.

A grievance filed Thursday on Henderson's behalf by the Major League Players Association seeking unspecified damages maintains the teams illegally interfered with Henderson's rights as a free agent and violated a clause in the basic agreement which says that "clubs shall not act in concert with other clubs."

Experts Talk On Contracts

DETROIT (AP) — The Houston Gamblers say they will call their own expert sports agent to counter Robert Wolf, who testified on behalf of Detroit Lions All-Pro running back Billy Sims in his bid to break a contract with the United States Football League team.

Wolf, a well-known Boston sports attorney, testified Thursday in the U.S. District Court trial of a lawsuit filed by Sims to break his contract with the USFL expansion team.

Sims has signed contracts with both the Gamblers and the National Football League Lions, but has said he prefers to stay in Detroit.

Wolf, who has negotiated more than 1,800 contracts for 400 athletes in virtually every sport in America, testified Thursday that Houston co-owner Jerry Argovitz had a clear conflict of interest when he continued to act as Sims' agent after becoming co-owner of the Gamblers.

Houston attorney Stephen D. Susman conceded that Sims' lawyers had scored heavily with Wolf. The Gamblers' attorney said, however, that he intended to call his own expert witness — Cleveland sports agent Greg Lustig — next week.

The contract tug-of-war over Sims was scheduled to continue today before Judge Robert E. DeMascio in U.S. District Court and Elbert Hatchett, the running back's lawyer, promised to put the plaintiff on the stand.

"Billy's next," Hatchett told reporters. At issue is whether Sims, the 1978 Heisman Trophy winner out of Oklahoma, will remain with the Lions or play for the Gamblers.

Hatchett got Argovitz to admit a day earlier during testimony that he failed to notify the Lions when Sims was getting ready to sign his July 1 contract with the Gamblers — thus letting pass an opportunity to perhaps drive the running back's price up even higher.

The man Susman really wants, however, is Sims. "I think it's time they call Billy," Susman said, lighting up a cigar in the corridor. "Bet you a dollar they don't. But, I think it'll be important to hear Billy's story in his own words instead of through Elbert Hatchett."

Before his testimony, Wolf was permitted to study a packet of material related to the case. The material included letters in early June between Lions attorney Frederick C. Nash and Argovitz, an offer from Argovitz to the Lions which defined a com-

North Lenoir KO's Valkyries

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's Vikings gained a 62-53 victory over North Lenoir in a Coastal Conference basketball game last night. However, in a battle of league unbeaten, North Lenoir's girls came away with first place all alone after taking a 53-49 win over the Valkyries.

The Vikings powered out into a 16-10 lead in the first period of the boys game, but saw the Hawks rally in the second period. An 18-12 advantage by North Lenoir erased the Conley lead and left it tied at 28-28 at intermission.

Conley regained command in the third quarter, however, outracing the Hawks, 18-8, to take a 44-36 lead to take into the final period. In that, Conley held off North Lenoir, 18-17, to take the win.

Donald Johnson led Conley with 15 points, while Steve Mills, Lewis Bryant and Reggie Smith each scored ten points. North Lenoir was led by Larry Johnson with 18 and Johnny Johnson with 10.

Conley's girls and North Lenoir, both unbeaten prior to the game in league play, battled on even terms most of the way in the first half. The score was tied after one period, 8-8, with Conley in-

Say 'Task Force' Needed For N.C. Beach Erosion

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — The state's top environmental official says a special task force is needed to confront "drastic erosion problems" on beaches along the Outer Banks.

The North Carolina Coastal Resources Commission is expected to act today on the proposal by James Summers, secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Summers said on Thursday that the task force should consider the causes of erosion and the possible solutions.

"We need an effective management system," Summers said, "that includes setback regulations, land acquisitions for beach access (and) local land-use planning."

The coastal commission, a 15-member panel that regulates major development in environmentally sensitive areas on the coast, is also expected to consider a request to establish a separate task force to deal with another controversial issue — drainage of lowlands.

A subcommittee recommended that a task force be set up to "determine the responsibilities and legal rights of the CRC with respect to water quality." The subcommittee said on Thursday that the task force is to have a "special focus" on the Albemarle and Pamlico sounds, peat mining and land clearing.

Summers told the commission that the proposed task force on erosion would work with local government officials in Dare County, where beach erosion is threatening oceanfront buildings.

Summers said the state's response to erosion was one of the most critical issues facing the coastal management program.

North Carolina faces "the difficult task of solving serious, short-term problems without harming the public use and benefits of our beaches," said Summers, who was recently appointed to succeed Joseph W. Grimsley as natural resources secretary.

Grimsley resigned to work with the U.S. Senate campaign of Gov. Jim Hunt.

The commission's planning and special issues committee recommended that the commission give the proposed erosion task force guidelines for temporary erosion response methods, such as beach replenishment instead of "hardening structures" with seawalls and breakwaters.

Orrin Pilkey, a Duke University geologist involved in research on how the ocean changes the shore, told the commission that a review of erosion control efforts in Florida indicated the long-range impact of beach stabilization would be degradation and destruction of the public beach.

"My immediate impression after driving between Cape Canaveral and Miami is that North Carolina looks like a pristine wilderness compared to that situation," Pilkey said.

He said beach nourishment is more popular than seawalls, but pumping sand on the beaches also has flaws.

But he praised the idea of a task force.

"I would suggest now is a good time, with this task force, to break some new ground," Pilkey said. "We could establish areas where beachfront houses could be moved to. We could make it so that (the Federal Emergency Management Association) pays rather than the state when houses fall into the ocean.

"We could think about pumping sand on the back side rather than the front side of barrier islands. There are a lot of alternatives we can explore before stabilization. Stabilization should be viewed as a last resort," he said.

The proposal for a task force on land drainage was mainly in response to a proposed $40 million plant in Washington County that would convert peat to methanol. The peat would be mined from coastal areas.

More than a dozen representatives of fishing and environmental groups appeared before the committee, calling for quick action to prevent pollution of estuaries and seafood nursery areas.

The committee was criticized repeatedly Thursday for not taking stands on the impact of peat mining and on the future of coastal water quality.

Todd Miller of the state Coastal Federation has led the fight for closer scrutiny of the state position on maintaining water quality in coastal estuaries.

Miller said that peat mining and other land-clearing operations along the northeastern coast has allowed fresh water to enter into the salt water estuaries. He said that the runoff interrupts the life cycles of small fish dependent on the unique ecosystem.

"It seems the responsibility for tackling this issue is being passed from one agency to another," Miller said. Jerry Gaskill, chairman of the state's Marine Fisheries Commission, added, "We have in eastern North Carolina critical, existing problems regarding fresh water and water quality. The time has come for us to look at the cumulative impacts of numerous projects of land clearing and development."

Pennies Added Up To $1,165

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Back when Ben Franklin said, "A penny saved is a penny earned," the effort seemed worth it because the humble coin could still buy a great deal.

But by the 1980s, taco restaurant owner Eugene Villarreal Jr. decided a penny was too much trouble to carry around. So two years ago he began discarding his 1-cent pieces into a glass jar.

The collection of castoff coins grew to fill 25 one-gallon jars that formerly held sauce or jalapena peppers — and old Ben has been proven right.

On Thursday, Villarreal took the coins to InterFirst Bank, where tellers poured them into automatic counting machines and watched in amazement as the tally grew to $1,165.

"I called the bank yesterday to make sure they wouldn't charge me for counting them," said the thrifty restaurateur.

Two Are Shot After Argument

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — An 18-year-old Monroe man and his sister were shot Wednesday night after an argument at the end of a basketball game, police said Thursday.

Scott Coffey, 18, and Hattie Coffey, 22, were listed in serious condition Thursday, each with bullet wounds in their necks.

Capt. Bobby Kilgore of the Monroe Public Safety Department said Daniel Spellman, 25, of Monroe, was charged with two counts of assault with intent to kill.

Kilgore said the shootings occurred after an argument at a Monroe recreational center. He said he didn't know what caused the argument.

Hurricane-Force Winds Lash Southern California

BLOWN OVER — California Highway patrolmen inspect a moving van that was blown over on its side by a gust of wind on Interstate Highway 5 in Irvine, Calif., about 45 miles south of Los Angeles. (AP Laserphoto)

By CYNTHIA GREEN
Associated Press Writer
Hurricane-force winds that killed three people and knocked out power for half a million customers lashed California today, whipping up brush fires that burned more than a dozen homes, as more rain swelled brimming rivers in the flood-ravaged Northwest.

The windstorms with gusts up to 100 mph Thursday claimed the lives of a driver whose van was hurled several hundred feet over a cliff, a Yosemite park worker who was crushed by a tree and a man who was electrocuted by a downed power line.

In the Pacific Northwest, rain this morning threatened to further bloat ice-jammed rivers that have forced hundreds of people to flee floodwaters. Temperatures were expected to remain well above freezing, with snowmelt swelling the waterways.

Elsewhere, up to 3 inches of snow powdered Michigan and dense patches of fog descended on Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas and Alabama.

Forecasters warned of winds reaching 70 mph across Southern California today as the state reeled from gusts that uprooted trees, overturned heavy trucks and forced the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to scratch the piggyback flight of the space shuttle Columbia to Edwards Air Force Base.

Up to 20 homes were evacuated in the La Canada-Flintridge area of Los Angeles County after a 26-acre wind-whipped brush fire destroyed or damaged 12 houses, Los Angeles County Fire Capt. Gordon Pearson said today. In the Angeles National Forest, 30 small blazes started by a downed power line joined to close 11 miles of the Angeles Crest Highway and burn at least two homes.

In Modjeska Canyon, east of Orange, seven homes were evacuated after four fires blackened 1,200 acres and edged within two miles of the residences, Orange County Fire Department spokesman Chuck Murphy said. More than 440 firefighters battled the blazes early today, attempting to cut a fire break to halt the flames' progress.

Another fire burned 75 acres on Bedford Peak above Orange County's Silverado Canyon.

Winds carried a spark from sawdust burners at an American Forest Products lumber mill in the Madera County community of North Fork, igniting a $5,000 blaze that destroyed four lumber drying kilns, said state forestry dispatcher Chuck Jay.

About 500 residents of Pinecrest, a vacation area 130 miles east of San Francisco, were isolated by downed trees and power outages, sheriff's spokesman Mark Bennett said. Falling trees damaged at least three dwellings and a ski lodge.

"It's progressed into quite a disaster," said California Highway Patrolman Ben McThorn.

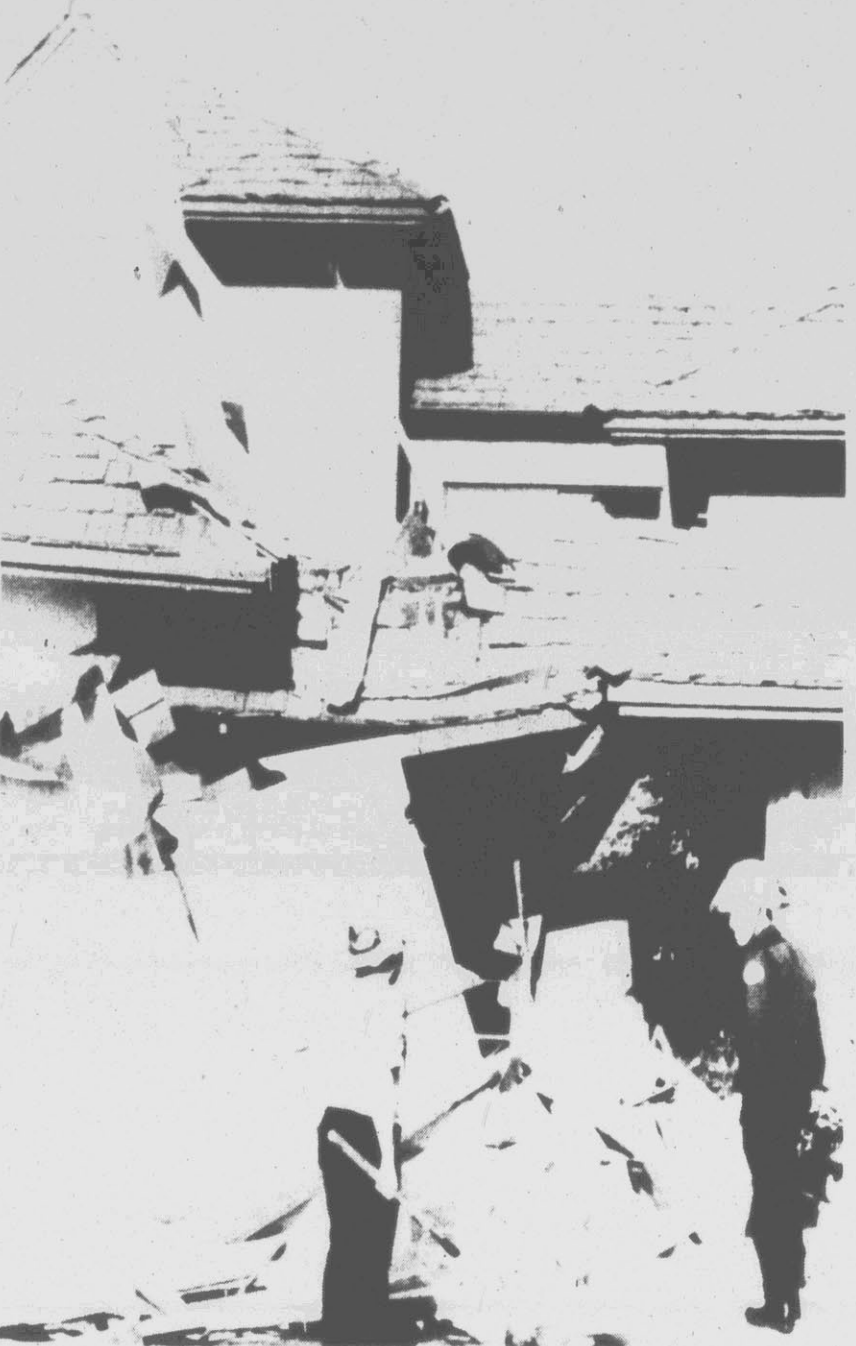

Hundreds of power lines were blown down, with 46,000 Southern California Edison customers still without electricity late Thursday in the foothill communities of the San Gabriel Mountains and 78,000 more in Los Angeles. More than 520,000 customers experienced some power loss earlier, officials said.

Yosemite National Park was closed to incoming traffic and the National Park Service advised 700 overnight guests to stay in buildings designated safe from wind, said spokeswoman Lisa Dapprich. A 23-year-old employee of the park's concessionaire, John Douglas Callaway, was killed Thursday when a 2½-foot-thick pine tree fell on his canvas-roof tent-cabin, she said.

A 29-year-old man was electrocuted by a downed power line in Canoga Park, said Los Angeles Fire Department spokesman Noel Murchet.

A 47-year-old La Crescenta man who pulled his van into a turnout on the Angeles Crest Highway near Los Angeles was killed when a 100-mph gust hurled the vehicle down a cliff, said Sheriff's Deputy Bob Stoneman.

A mile of the Hollywood Freeway was closed because large panes of glass were blowing out of a building under construction, California Highway Patrol Officer Norman Spargur said today. No one was hurt.

ROOF BLOWN OFF — Firefighters in Newport Beach, Calif., inspect the wreckage left when high winds ripped the roof from the rear of this home and blew it into the front yard of neighboring residents Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

An apartment building and several nearby homes in West Hollywood were evacuated late Thursday when supplies started flying from a hotel under construction. A Red Cross shelter was set up at a local high school.

The winds are emanating from a particularly strong high pressure system in the Pacific Ocean, and were expected to continue throughout today, said Harry Gordon of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Flood warnings continued today across central Washington, and a flash-flood watch was posted for the Salmon River in Idaho.

Residents of about 60 homes in the town of Salmon, Idaho, were put on alert to be prepared to evacuate Thursday as officials diverted the ice-clogged Salmon River in two places. On the other side of town, the brimming Lehmi River forced more than 300 people to flee their homes last week and the area remained evacuated today.

Idaho Gov. John Evans earlier this week estimated flood damage in the state at more than $3 million.

In Washington, more than 60 people returned to their homes after the Yakima River crested at Yakima and dropped below flood stage at Ellensburg. However, a flood warning remained in effect today.

One-way traffic was reopened Thursday on the Mount Baker Highway, where washouts had isolated the town of Glacier, Wash.

DROUGHT vs. EXPORTS
NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The drought in Somalia has cut into livestock exports which could lose the nation $100 million in anticipated revenues in 1984, Radio Magadishu reports.

Life As It's Lived

Misinterpreted All Too Often

By GAIL MICHAELS

I left Meg at a friend's house for an overnight visit with strict instructions that she not put anything else on her eyes. We had been battling a stubborn eye infection for several weeks, and the first thing she had done after she had arrived was to try out her friend's play mascara.

"Nothing else," I repeated as I applied Vaseline to her lashes. "If you can't promise me that, then you had better not stay."

"Oh I promise, Mommy," she said solemnly. "Nothing on my eyes."

But when I arrived the next morning, Meg's eyes were ringed with black clown make-up. I was furious. "I promised that I wouldn't put anything on my eyes. You didn't say anything about around."

"I shouldn't have had to. I am really very angry."

"This is what always happens," she sighed to her friend's mother. "I misinterpret what Mommy says, and she takes it as deliberate disobedience."

Unfortunately, I encounter these misinterpretations all too often. Meg thrives on technicalities. She could probably teach F. Lee Bailey a thing or two. I am positive that she would introduce us to the Miranda Rule without a qualm if we weren't so obviously unreasonable. But we are. We never listen to her side, she frequently howls. But how anyone could listen to her side without wanting to throttle her is a problem Phillip and I have never quite solved.

The other evening, for instance, Phillip asked the children not to run inside the house. Five minutes later Meg was streaking down the hall.

"Young lady, I thought I told you not to run!" Phillip shouted.

"I'm not running," Phillip's face got beet red. "Don't tell me that! I saw you!"

"But Daddy, I wasn't running. I was jogging."

"Go to your room!" he roared.

After listening to her sob inconsolably for 10 minutes, I crept upstairs. "You know why Daddy is punishing you, don't you?"

"Because he thought I was running but I wasn't."

"No, it's because you keep splitting hairs in order to keep yourself out of trouble."

"When did I split anybody's hair?" she wailed.

"What I mean is that you know you're doing something that will make us angry, but you think that if you interpret what we say narrowly enough, you can still stay out of trouble. But it's still disobedience."

She was quivering. "You just don't understand me, that's all."

"I understand that being a kid is not easy. Mischief is awfully tempting. But being a parent is not any easier. Daddy and I not only have to keep your outer self safe; we have to protect your mind and your character."

She looked at me in disbelief. She doesn't understand me either.

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

Lynn Deas of Schenectady, N.Y., and Beth Palmer, Silver Spring, Md., won the Life Master Women's Pairs Championship at the recent Fall North American tournament. Accurate defense on this board gave them a top score and helped them on their way to the title.

Note South's decision to overcall one spade. With unguarded honors in the rounded suits (hearts and clubs), she did not feel that her hand merited a takeout double, followed by a spade bid should partner respond in clubs.

West led a club, and declarer rose with the ace, sacrificing her king, to obtain an entry to the table. The ten of diamonds was covered by the king and taken by the ace, and declarer adopted less than the best line when she elected to continue with the queen and jack of diamonds.

East ruffed the third diamond, cashed the ace-king of hearts, then reverted to a club. Declarer ruffed, and tried to ruff a diamond on the board with the nine of trumps. East overruffed with the jack and continued with clubs. Declarer ruffed with the king.

Those of you who believe that aces were made to capture kings would overruff for down one. But the ace of trumps is sure to take a trick, and West had been watching the spots. She realized that, if she refused to overruff, she would be guaranteed a second trump trick. So she simply sluffed a diamond and sat back to wait for two trumps tricks. Down two was worth all the matchpoints.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR is getting an exciting, fresh new look!!!

In a recent survey of Pitt County residents 91% agreed with the statement, "THE DAILY REFLECTOR is well organized and it is easy to find what I want to read". The new, updated look will make your local newspaper better than ever.

*RMH Research, River Edge, N.J., December, 1983

Starting Wednesday, February 1, THE DAILY REFLECTOR will change from the current 8-column format to a cleaner, easier-to-read 6 column format newspaper.

Over the past several years, the newspaper industry in the United States has been working on a plan that would standardize the size of all newspapers published in this country. So far, over 90% of the daily newspapers have voluntarily agreed to change to the new standard by July 1, 1984.

A LOOK AT THE OLD AND THE NEW!

OLD 8 COLUMN

This column is an example of the old look. It represents the narrow newspaper columns of the past which are giving way to the wider, easier to read look of the six column format.

Experts have long contended that numerous eye movements from line to line make reading tiresome and difficult. And, they say, the frequent hyphenations which are necessary in a narrow column make comprehension poor.

The Daily Reflector will be changing from this old format on February 1, 1984 to the new 6-column format.

NEW 6 COLUMN

This column is an example of the new look! It represents the wider and easier to read appearance of the six-column format, which will soon be replacing the narrower newspaper columns of the past.

Experts have long contended that numerous eye movements from line to line make reading tiresome and difficult. And, they say, the frequent hyphenations which are necessary in a narrow column make comprehension poor.

The Daily Reflector will be changing to this new format on February 1, 1984.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) The promises you have not completed where partners are concerned can be handled nicely now. Be more alert.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Get caught up on all those small tasks ahead of you and they are soon cleaned up. Avoid a bothersome person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Bring those wishes closer by applying yourself seriously to gain them. The evening is fine for being with a loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make improvements to civic and credit affairs that apply to you. An influential person will then give you backing you desire.
