Looks Forward To Debates Reagan Officially A Candidate

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan returned to the Oval Office as a candidate for re-election today and told reporters he likes the idea of a debate with his Democratic opponent.

With his supporters predicting a close, tough election and his opposition saying voters will "reject four more years of danger, four more years of pain," the president ducked a chance to make his own prediction.

"You know me," he said. "I never say anything like that. I'm superstitious."

The president made the remarks as he walked past the Rose Garden to the Oval Office at 8:58 a.m. EST. White House staff members took the highly unusual step of letting photographers and reporters into the garden to allow them to watch Reagan, on the morning after he announced his candidacy.

He defended his tax cut program as one that has benefitted a wider range of people than that offered by John F. Kennedy, saying the Kennedy tax cut gave the wealthy and business a higher percentage of tax relief than his.

"Our tax program is fair," the president declared. Asked whether the deployment of U.S. Marines in Lebanon would become a campaign issue, Reagan replied: "It depends how long they are there."

Asked if he would debate his Democratic opponent, Reagan said: "I support debates. I favor that idea."

Reminded that the Democrats have been attacking him, he said: "When have they not? We'll have some interesting discussions."

Reagan ended any lingering doubts about his political plans with a paid political broadcast Sunday night in which he said, "Our work is not finished."

The president also made it clear he wants George Bush to continue as vice president.

On his first day as a candidate for re-election, the 72-year-old president's schedule began with a meeting with arms negotiator Edward L. Rowny. He had a midday speech to religious broadcasters while his wife, Nancy, planned to visit his campaign headquarters.

"It was a mutual decision," Mrs. Reagan said in a statement. "I support him fully."

Reagan, who turns 73 on Feb. 6, is the oldest person ever to serve as president and his age and possible objections by his wife were usually cited in speculation that he might decide against a second term.

But the president clearly is ready to run.

In an interview with Newsweek magazine, Reagan gave a preview of his strategy against Walter F. Mondale, the front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"I think he has tried to be all things to all people," Reagan said of Mondale. "And I think he's made more promises than probably can possibly be kept."

The president quoted one of Mondale's Democratic opponents as saying the former vice president's promises would push federal budget deficits to $400 billion.

Mondale was in San Francisco Sunday night and when asked about Reagan's attack on him, replied, "it's just beginning to dawn on this administration that they're in trouble."

Mondale added that the Republican president "has a record he can't run away from."

Bush said today that "I'm very happy that the president indicated ... that he was happy to have me as his running mate, so I think we've got a pretty good combination going."

The vice president, appearing on NBC-TV's "Today" show, agreed that winning a second term "is tougher. Nobody is taking this election for granted. ... There isn't an overconfidence either in the campaign or the White House itself."

Asked if he thought Mondale would be the Democratic Party standardbearer, Bush replied: "I would like to hedge on that one. But right now, I can read like anyone else, read the polls, and I guess the seven other Democratic candidates would say he's the front-runner."

Reagan's four-minute announcement speech, carried on the major television and radio networks at a cost of about $400,000, described the nation three years ago as dangerously weakened in defense, humiliated in Iran, and "on the brink of economic collapse from years of government overindulgence and abusive overtaxation."

By contrast, he cited declining inflation and interest rates in a rebounding economy and said he has "restored credible deterrence and can confidently seek a secure and lasting peace, as well as a reduction in arms."

"But our work is not finished," he added. "We have more to do in creating jobs, achieving control over government spending, returning more autonomy to the states, keeping peace in a more settled world, and seeing if we can't find room in our schools for God."

The president was no more specific about his second-term goals. Neither did he mention trouble spots like Lebanon, where more than 260 U.S. servicemen have been killed, or

Near-Blizzard Blasting Iowa Into New England

By RON SIRAK
Associated Press Writer

A winter storm nearing blizzard ferocity with winds gusting to 60 mph dumped up to 8 inches of snow today from Iowa to New England, closing highways with drifts and snarling traffic at rush hour.

By contrast, record warm temperatures Sunday on the West Coast lured 350,000 people to the beaches in the Los Angeles area, where the mercury was in the low 80s. The 62 degrees at Portland, Ore., tied the record for the warmest reading ever in January.

However, it was ice box weather again in much of the Midwest and Northeast, with New York City expected to get 4 to 6 inches of snow by Tuesday morning.

Schools were closed in much of northern Iowa where several roads were blocked by snowdrifts. During the night, winds gusted to 62 mph at Sioux City and 59 mph at Shenandoah and accumulations ranged from 3 to 7 inches across much of the state.

Police reported 50 accidents in southeastern South Dakota as the storm got cranked up Sunday, including a 15-car pileup on a road between Interstate 29 and the town of Tea in Lincoln County where snow driven by 39-mph wind reduced visibility to near zero.

It began with a seven-car pileup and grew.

"Another bunch of cars came, and they got into it," said Craig Jensen, a state police dispatcher. "Then another bunch of cars came and they got into it, too."

In Iowa, Lee Sorensen, a state police communications operator in Atlantic, said one state trooper led 15 cars off Interstate 29 in the western part of the state about 9 p.m. Sunday night because the drivers couldn't see in the blowing snow.

"People were really confused," Sorensen said. "They couldn't hit their turnoffs. They were just stopping. They didn't know what to do."

The fast-moving storm also knocked out the power to 12,000 to 14,000 homes and businesses temporarily Sunday in Sioux Falls, S.D.

By mid-morning today, snow prevailed from Wisconsin across Michigan, where up to 8 inches accumulated. It also was falling from eastern Iowa and northeastern Missouri across the northern two thirds of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, northern Pennsylvania, upstate New York and northern New England.

The National Weather Service reported 8 inches of snow on the ground this morning in St. James and Redwood Falls in southwestern Minnesota and 5 inches in the Indiana cities of Kokomo, Lafayette and Wabash.

"Gusts across the central Midwest will continue from 45 miles per hour to 60 miles per hour today and cause near blizzard conditions this morning," said Harry Gordon of the National Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo.

In Idaho, flood-weary residents around the Salmon and Lehmi rivers got break from some cold weather but cast a wary eye today as officials warned that "anything could happen."

The 3,300 residents of the mountain town of Salmon, Idaho, got a break Sunday when temperatures dipped to 9 degrees, helping control the river flooding that has kept 350 people out of their homes since last week.

Idaho State Police Dispatcher Kathy Zaux said flooding on the ice-jammed Salmon and Lehmi rivers was stable with temperatures at 9 degrees, but the National Weather Service kept a flood warning in effect.

About 125 homes have been evacuated since flooding began earlier this month.

Another 'Firefight' For Beirut Marines; 2 Hurt

By G.G. LABELLE
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. Marines today fired tank cannons and small arms at Shiite militiamen who shelled the American base at Beirut airport. Two civilians were reported killed and at least 17 people, including two Marines, were reported injured.

Maj. Dennis Brooks, a Marine spokesman, said two Marines were slightly wounded, were treated on the scene and returned to duty after a mid-morning clash that lasted about an hour.

Fighting erupted again at 2:30 p.m. and continued into the early evening, but there were no immediate casualty reports from the second exchange.

A spokesman for Amal, the main militia force of Lebanon's Shiite Moslems, said two Shiite civilians were killed and at least 13 other people, including one militiaman, were wounded by Marine fire near Hay el-Sellum, east of the airport.

"They (Marines) are chelling Hay el-Sellum heavily. It is very bad," said the spokesman at the west Beirut office of Amal leader Nabih Berri.

Brooks said he did not have information about injured civilians.

"We are sorry about any civilian casualties," he said. "But the bottom line is that we are taking fire from the area, and we have to defend ourselves."

Lebanese state radio said two civilians were wounded at Beirut airport, which was closed by the morning shelling, reopened and then closed again as shells from the hills slammed into its parking lot in the afternoon.

Brooks said the Marine base came under small arms and rocket-propelled grenade fire twice — once in the morning and again from the same positions in the early afternoon. The Marines shot back with 60mm mortars and small arms, he said.

Local radio stations said the afternoon fighting also involved Lebanese army positions near the Marine base and in the hills east and southeast of the Lebanese capital.

The spokesman at Amal headquarters said the first clash erupted when an Amal militiaman was shot and wounded by Marines near their airport perimeter.

"Urgent contacts between the Amal leadership and the Marine command succeeded in halting the one-hour clash," the spokesman said. He declined the use of his name.

Brooks said the Marines had come under sniper fire and then were shelled by mortars and rocket-propelled grenades.

A spokesman for the Progressive Socialist Party, standard bearer of the Druse community, said Druse militiamen were not involved in the hostilities.

The last previous shelling attack on the Marines on Jan. 15 prompted a naval retaliatory barrage from the U.S. battleship New Jersey against Druse gunners in the hills southeast of Beirut.

Druse leader Walid Jumblatt met Sunday in Libya with Col. Moammar Khadafy, the head of that country, according to the official Libyan news agency, which did not say what they discussed. The Druse, a sect based on Islam, have received support both from Libya and Syria.

TRIBUTE TO RESCUERS, HOSPITAL

My husband and I had an automobile accident in Pitt County Tuesday, Jan. 17. We were hit on my side, the passenger side. I immediately began having chest pain. The Greenville Rescue Squad was quickly on the scene. These young men put their skills to work at once. Not only were they accomplishing the task of removing me, but they were reassuring me everything was going to be okay. The young man attending me was named John. I don't know his last name, but this letter is meant for all the Johns, Bills, Toms and Henrys on that squad. I want their captain and the people of Greenville to know what a great job they do.

My husband and I were also treated gently and informed what was being done as we were being treated at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. We were given a number from the computer, but were treated as humans. I am grateful for all our care following this accident. Mrs. Nick (Rena) Lewis, Route 2, Box 256A, Belhaven 27810.

Student Housing Complexes Spreading

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

The concept started in Austin, Texas, according to Jim Pinson, not because of any real need, but because people wanted to show what they had. They wanted symbols of prestige — braggin' rights.

More than that, it just made good economic sense to be the owner of a condo or the proprietor of an apartment building for students to stay in while finishing college.

Apparently, the concept is catching on and is becoming more practical. Greenville now has a 24-unit, suite-type, student apartment building called Pirates Landing on Dickinson Avenue, and another condo-style complex, Ringgold, rising from the ground near East Carolina University's Mendenhall Student Center. Similar structures can already be seen in Chapel Hill, Raleigh, Wilmington, Athens, Ga., and Clemson, S.C.

Pinson, a representative of Ward Property Brokers, the company behind Ringgold, said both alternatives, either apartment or condo, provide students with a bit more privacy, "give them a nice place to live and are accessible to campus and downtown."

Jeannie Allegood of Wilmington has bought one of the 125 planned units at Ringgold and said she is looking forward to a two-fold benefit. "As a serious student, my daughter will have security and comfort while completing her education. And I feel I will recoup what I spend on her schooling," she said.

East Carolina University student Randy Mews moved into Pirates Landing a few weeks ago with three of his friends and said he is having "a good time."

"I used to live in a dorm, but when this opportunity came up I felt the change would be good academically as well as on the personal level.

"Here (Pirates Landing), I have my own room and can better budget my time and don't feel pressured to go to this, go do that, with all the guys like I did in the dorm," he said.

Connally Branch of Realty World Clark-Branch Realtors, the company that runs Pirates Landing, said each unit in the complex is similar to a college dorm suite.

"Each unit has a hall that opens up into a common area where there are some cabinets, a sink and a microwave. Off this area are four large bedrooms complete with beds and desk-type structures and closet space." Each unit has two full bathrooms.

"We also have plans to build a common deck for the students as well as an outside

Farm Scene

Ass't. Agricultural Extension Agent

Although the year has just barely begun, several persons have raised questions concerning tobacco arrangements for 1984. Probably the most popular question concerns lease rates for the upcoming year. "How much tobacco should I lease or rent for this year?" Before one attempts to answer this question, there are a number of items to examine. How much does it cost to produce an acre of tobacco? How will the new farm bill affect the tobacco industry? Can I expect to improve my economic condition through the addition of more allotment? As one explores these questions, let us look at the point of view of both the landlord and the tenant.

The landlord, whether he or she be the owner of an apartment or a tobacco allotment, is interested in obtaining a fair price for his or her commodity. The price represents fairness in both parties being able to achieve a profit. The allotment holder is interested in the "quality" of the tenant. "What kind of job will he do if I consent to lease him my farm and tobacco poundage?" A responsible tenant is conscientious enough to maintain the fertility of the land, to prevent erosion of valuable topsoil, to control serious weed problems which might occur in a given field. A good tenant is receptive to the attitude of the landlord. The landlord is familiar with the farm and may be able to offer helpful suggestions on trouble spots located on the farm. With lease and transfer to be eliminated after 1986, a landlord may be interested in having the allotment to be grown on the farm so as to protect the allotment for the future.

Just as the landlord, the tenant is also interested in a good price. The tenant needs to be especially aware of the asking price because only he knows what price is affordable to pay for rent while expecting to receive a profit.

This is only achieved through a production budget. "How much does it cost me to raise a pound of tobacco?" The production budget will reveal this. "With the 1984 tobacco again falling victim to the legislative knife, does my landlord take this into account?" A cut of 11.5 percent means less tobacco and this means less money coming in from the allotment. "Can I afford to pay the same price?" Proximity can become another factor to consider. "How close is the allotment to my operation?" This question lurks bigger and bigger with the elimination of lease and transfer. The further that I have to travel means higher production costs to raise that pound of tobacco.

Whether one is a landlord or a tenant, these are questions which are worthy of much thought. Payment or acceptance of an improper amount could result in economic distress. Let us begin the 1984 tobacco season on a positive note by not creating burdens too heavy to carry.

GLOBE, Ariz. (AP) — Marine Sgt. James Lopez received a hero's welcome when he returned to his hometown after 15 months as a hostage in Iran. But now his family is moving because his father can't find work.

His son is studying at the Citadel in South Carolina, where he expects to become an officer in three years. When the Marine came home, he and his family met President Reagan and hobbled with senators, congressmen and governors. Later Lopez was the center of the biggest parade in Globe's history.

"You know when Jimmy came home, I never thought we'd be in a fix like this," his father said Saturday, noting that he's been out of work almost two years. "Everything was so nice then and everyone was so happy."

THE VANILLA ICE CREAM CURE
Here's one cure for a dental problem that you are going to like! The medicine for the cure is vanilla ice cream. Discomfort after surgical curettage (scraping of the tissue deep under the gum) is normal. The tissues may bleed and there is a tendency for the area to swell.
The best home remedy for this problem is vanilla ice cream. Not strawberry, which has little seeds that can get into the area, nor chocolate, which contains cocoa, an irritant. Take some vanilla ice cream on a spoon and place it on the area. The cold of the ice cream acts as a styptic. It stops the leakage of tissues. It also limits swelling since cold helps reduce swelling after a dental procedure. It is also more practical to place a spoonful of ice cream in your mouth than an ice bag. The butterfat in the ice cream acts as an emollient as it flows in an soothes the area.
Ice cream also contains lecithin, which is a wetting agent. It helps the butterfat penetrate. There may be a slight initial shock from the cold ice cream, but the area will feel better immediately. By the way, you can swallow the ice cream.

Four Collisions In Greenville Sunday

No injuries but several charges and over $3,000 in damages resulted from four traffic accidents investigated Sunday by Greenville police.

Officers said a warrant for Jeremiah Wilkins of Route 2, Robersonville, was issued charging him with leaving the scene of an accident following investigation of a 3:55 p.m. mishap on Roosevelt Avenue 10 feet south from Fifth Street. Police said the accident involved cars operated by James Thomas McLawhorn of 1519 W. 14th St. and allegedly Wilkins. No injuries occurred and damages were estimated at $200 to the McLawhorn vehicle.

Police said Wilkins was later charged with driving while impaired following a 6:45 p.m. accident on Memorial Drive three-tenths of a mile north from West Third Street. Officers said Wilkins' car struck a guard rail in the one-vehicle accident. Damages were set at $500 to the car and $300 to the guard rail.

William M. Bagliani Jr. of 2004 Rangercrest Drive, Raleigh, was charged with driving with an obstructed windshield following investigation of an 8 a.m. accident at the intersection of Fourth and Pitt streets. Police said the wreck involved the Bagliani vehicle and a car driven by Robert Glen Elks of 1210 Dickinson Avenue. Both drivers reported injuries but were not transported. Damages were set at $500 to the Elks car and $400 to the Bagliani vehicle.

A 10:36 p.m. accident on Dickinson Avenue east from Center Street involved vehicles operated by Charlie James Whichard of Greenville and Earnest Lee Hardy of Grimesland. No charges were preferred and damages were estimated at $675 to Hardy's car and $575 to the Whichard vehicle.

Oppose Zoos' Buying Gorillas

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — An international wildlife group says allowing U.S. zoos, including the North Carolina Zoo, to import rare and valuable gorillas and mandrills will encourage poaching and further reduce their numbers.

The North Carolina zoo has applied to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service for permits to import a pair of female gorillas from the United Republic of Cameroon in Africa, according to zoo director Bob Fry.

They are among two male and five female gorillas sought by Miami animal broker Matthew Block. Block said if negotiations with the Cameroon government are successful, the other five gorillas will go to zoos in Memphis, Tenn., and Columbus, Ohio.

The sheer bishop sleeves were styled with a fitted undersleeve trimmed in tiers of scalloped patterned schiffli lace. The full skirt and attached cathedral train featured graduated borders of scalloped schiffli embroidered lace. She wore a fingertip length illusion veil edged in lace attached to a Juliet headpiece trimmed in lace appliques beaded with seed pearls. She carried a cascade of stephanotis and ivy.

Each of the attendants was dressed in a formal gown of burgundy satin. The sleeveless gown featured rolled fabric straps with a fitted bodice and corded satin enhanced the modified natural waistline. The gown was complemented by a matching satin jacket designed with a ruffled regal collar with ruffled satin on the long sleeves. They carried tailored bouquets of mixed white freesia and pink tulips accented with greenery.

The flower girl wore a formal gown of burgundy satin with a matching burgundy satin sash. She carried a white basket decorated with silk flowers.

A reception was held at the Holidome.

Dear Abby

Battered Woman Has Cheerless Christmas

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: On Christmas Eve my husband and I got into an argument and he hit me in my eye with his fist. It felt like he had knocked my eyeball back into my head, so I went to the emergency room where I was X-rayed. Luckily no bones were broken.

When I got home he hit me under the chin, causing a knot to appear, so I took my two kids and went to a friend's house for the night. He followed me, forced the door open and demanded that I go home with him. I refused, so he lighted the curtain with a cigarette lighter and left. Fortunately, my friend and I were able to put the fire out.

The next day when I went home, the place was a wreck. My clothes were all ripped up, lamps broken, etc.

When he came home he said he doesn't even remember hitting me. Then he said he was sorry. Well, being sorry doesn't help my face any. He could have blinded me or broken my chin.

I don't love him anymore and he sure couldn't love me and treat me this way. Abby, I don't want him here. Is there any way I can get him out and keep him out? And how can I keep him from bothering me? He's 26 and I'm 31.

ABUSED IN ATLANTA

DEAR ABUSED: Contact your nearest shelter for battered women. The people there not only provide abused women with temporary shelter, they tell them how to protect themselves from further abuse. Be prepared to get a restraining order against your husband. If he violates that order he will be locked up. He sounds like a sick man, but that doesn't excuse his brutal behavior. First, protect yourself and your children. Then insist that he be examined by a psychiatrist.

Please write again and let me know how you're doing. I care.

DEAR ABBY: A guy I work with said he was a little short just before Christmas, so he asked if I could let him have $50 until after the first of the year.

I gave him the $50 and so far he hasn't said anything about it. Do you think he's forgotten?

BIGHEARTED

DEAR BIG: Not yet. But give him a little more time and he probably will.

DEAR ABBY: I had to laugh when I read your readers' suggestions on how to turn down a date without hurting a man's feelings. Most people recommended honesty.

Many long years ago, I was a showgirl in New York. A dear man asked me if I would go out with him. He was easily a head shorter than I was. I turned him down as gently as I could. (I didn't say, "You're too short for me"; I said, "I'm too tall for you.")

The next day I received two dozen long-stemmed roses with a card that read, "Can I help it if I like long-stemmed roses? Thanks for your honesty." It was signed "Shorty."

It warmed my heart, so I called him up and asked if it was too late to change my mind. He said no. He took me out after the show that night, and the night after, and the night after, etc.

You guessed it, Abby. I married the guy, and if we make it until April of '84, we'll celebrate our 50th wedding anniversary.

Natural increase — the excess of births over deaths — added 1.7 million persons to the U.S. population in 1982. The rate of increase was 7.4 persons per 1,000 population, a 3 percent increase over the previous year, data from the National Center for Health Statistics show. Both higher birth rates and lower death rates contributed to the overall rise in the rate of natural increase for 1982.

Teach Your Children Well by Acolia Simon-Thomas Children's Services Social Worker

Preschool children learn through their daily living experiences. As parents, you are the most significant person in your child's preschool life and his first teacher. It is from you that the child's early needs of development are met. The quality of your relationship with your child is critical to his development. If you are warm and affectionate toward your child and follow a few simple practices, you will be an effective teacher, helping your child learn simple skills that he will build on as he grows.

Keep the following ideas in mind as you help your child learn to perform the activities necessary for daily life.

1. Be positive in your approach. Acknowledge the child's success in each new task.

Minimize his mistakes and show him the right way immediately.
2. Break more complicated operations into separate steps. Present one step at a time beginning with the simplest.
3. Develop a good working relationship with your child based on mutual respect. If the child does not pay attention or try to do as you ask (when you are certain he can) stop the activity or put the toy you are working with away. Don't beg or bribe. The learning time you spend with your child should be fun for both of you.

Survival Desired

The era of large farming operations, with efficient use of expensive equipment, is often seen as the wave of the future.

Indeed, in many ways it is already here and in our own area large tobacco growers lease the acreage from small farms to grow enough tobacco to justify the investment in modern harvesting and curing equipment.

But, according to one farm expert, the small farm makes up 80 percent of North Carolina's cultivated land and the future of N.C. agriculture may depend on making better use of the small farm.

Dr. Joe Brooks, a horticulturalist with the Agricultural Extension Service, says there are two types of small farms. One is the traditional farm on which the owners are trying to make a living from their crops. The other is farm land owned by persons who have jobs and incomes from other fields.

He noted small farmers have been imaginative. Some 2,000 are now growing Christmas trees, a relatively new crop. Some rent garden spots and recreation sites. There are ponds for fishing and barns for boarding horses and other pets.

Dr. Brooks said he had heard of farmers renting fruit trees, providing bed and breakfast for tourists and developing learning laboratories for urban children.

The desire to hold on to the family land is fierce and some do it by taking jobs in business or industry, while others innovate. Either way it is desirable that the family farm survive.

Future Doubtful

"Made in Hong Kong" is as familiar in our country as is the knowledge that the colony is a bastion of free enterprise and is administered by the British.

Hong Kong's time of ties to Great Britain appears limited, however, as the British 99-year lease approaches its expiration year of 1997. Upon that expiration the New Territories will revert to China which, as we all know, is now communist.

Published reports say the British government no longer expects to have a role in the administering of Hong Kong after 1997 and is turning its attention to negotiating a free enterprise role for the colony when it comes under communist China's control. Reportedly the Chinese are promising continuation of the present life style in Hong Kong for 50 years. Given the incompatibility of the communist and capitalistic systems it must be seen whether such a promise can be kept.

Arafat Returns

WASHINGTON — Yasir Arafat's sudden transformation from political cripple to reaffirmed leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization dims President Reagan's hopes for an election-year start on West Bank peace. It also renews Arafat's power while crushing fragile plans to give his people a homeland.

Arafat's Houdini-like escape from political oblivion has humiliated Syrian President Hafez Assad, who tried to destroy him by arming and directing a PLO rebellion in Tripoli late last year. But Arafat's recovery also is bad news for Reagan, undercutting U.S. plans for Jordan's King Hussein to negotiate a West Bank settlement for the Palestinians. The king will not negotiate without Arafat's consent.

Instead of consenting, a politically resurrected Arafat can be counted on for more of the maddening equivocation that has been his trademark in finding a settlement of the Palestine problem, which lies at the heart of the Israeli-Arab struggle. A weakened, vulnerable Arafat was viewed here as a possible convert to the Reagan peace plan and consequently a help in the president's re-election bid. A resurgent Arafat holding out for unacceptable terms before giving a green light to Hussein returns the Reagan plan to the dustbin.

Arafat climaxed his Houdini act at the Islamic summit in Casablanca. Leaders of 1 billion Moslems, who were supposed to be concentrating on Iran's threat to the Persian Gulf and the Soviet war in Afghanistan, were talked by Arafat into a resolution reaffirming the PLO as "the sole and legitimate representative of the Palestinian people." That followed his official purge of pro-Syrian dissidents and a streamlining of his authority.

Whatever his shortcomings in establishing a state for his scattered people, Arafat has played internal Arab politics with skill. He has re-established himself among Persian Gulf states as the legitimate leader of countless Palestinians residing within their borders. Thus, he pulls what tribute he needs from the oil coffers of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the Arab Emirates.

The Gulf states fear and dislike Assad, leading them to give shrift to the Syrian-backed dissidents in Damascus. Despite their military victory over Arafat's loyalists, they are left out in the cold fringes of the Arab world and treated as unwanted stepchildren.

"Unless Arafat has offered a secrecy quid pro quo to his Islamic allies," a high administration official told us, "the resolution (of Casablanca) vastly enhances his bargaining power." Arafat is now less likely than ever to dilute his power as "sole representative" by letting Hussein bargain on the West Bank.

It is theoretically possible that the pro-American Islamic states — Pakistan, Turkey and Saudi Arabia — extracted a secret concession from him pledging that he would let Hussein bargain. But such a concession would be unusual, and quite the opposite seems more likely: that Arafat will hang tough on the West Bank issue, while working on rebuilding his influence. So much for Ronald Reagan's aspirations for an election-year political triumph in the Middle East.

Besides his Islamic supporters, Arafat is finding plenty of allies. He is subtly encouraging French President Francois Mitterrand to adopt an independent Mideast policy, free of American restraints; he whispers in French ears that it will take a Mitterrand to bring true peace to the region. Arafat hopes this will lead to his triumphant return to Paris in a virtual state visit. Similar diplomacy with lesser Western states is planned for the immediate future.

The U.S. has made only one gain so far with Arafat since he left Tripoli, and that was tangential. His visit to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak opened the door for the Islamic nations to take Egypt back into the fold for the first time since Egyptian-Israeli peace. The return of the Egyptians to Islam gives Washington another friend there.

But that is a far cry from Reagan administration hopes a few weeks ago when Arafat and Mubarak met for revival of Reagan's overriding objective: ending Israel's 16-year occupation of the West Bank.

CHAPEL HILL — When there are seven candidates in the running for one Democratic gubernatorial nomination, each candidate must struggle to clearly separate himself from his opponents.

At a forum conducted by the N.C. Federation of College Democrats, that struggle reached almost comical proportions as one candidate after another found some question on which he could announce that "I am the only candidate sitting here who..."

Tom Gilmore started the "only candidate" ball rolling by saying, "I am the only candidate running for governor who stands for excellence in public education and is willing to ask for a tax increase to achieve it."

Eddie Knox followed quickly on his heels. "I am the only candidate who has been recently personally in touch with the people," Knox said. His point was that he'd just finished a term as a mayor.

Insurance Commissioner John Ingram was next and said he was the "only candidate on this platform today who has called for an elected Utilities Commission." Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green said he'd be the only gubernatorial candidate who would have any direct input on the question of capital punishment when it comes before the General Assembly this spring. Robert Hannon claimed to be the only black man running for governor. (No one challenged him on that point.)

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten was the only candidate who did not specifically use the words, "I am the only candidate."

Interestingly enough, some of the "only candidate" claims were a bit bloated. Gilmore claimed to be the only candidate willing to ask for a tax increase to improve the schools. But Knox and Hannon have been saying the same thing.

Gilmore has also said he's the only candidate who supports the entire Democratic Party platform but, when asked, all the other candidates except Green said they too supported the entire platform. Gilmore is one, however, who first challenged the others to say they supported the platform.

Green, 62, claimed to be the oldest Democrat in the bunch. But Hannon, 69, was quick to note that he's older.

There were some areas where the candidates really were alone on an issue — they just didn't brag about them. Green, as mentioned, was alone in refusing to endorse the entire platform. That's because he's also alone among the Democratic candidates in opposing the Equal Rights Amendment and that's in the platform. Green also was alone in opposing government funding of abortion.

Gilmore was alone in opposing the death penalty. He suggested, instead, a true life sentence with no hope for parole. Hannon had a confusing answer on this question in which he said that maybe a defendant who had killed three people "ought to go, too." But then he said he opposed capital punishment.

Knox was the only candidate who had a one word answer to a question. He said "yes" when asked if he endorsed the entire platform. Lauch Faircloth was also an "only." He was the only candidate not to show.

When the race is over, some of the losing candidates will console themselves with statements like, "We had some issues we wanted discussed and we did that." Now, however, they're complaining because the other candidates are stealing their issues. Hannon noted that "I was the first candidate to call for starting teachers' salaries of $20,000 a year." Edmisten has called for the same thing. Gilmore complained after the forum that Knox was stealing his issue on the need for televised debates.

Sharing A Shelter In The Rain

In President Reagan's "I'm Not Really Mad at the Russians Speech" last week he ended by saying, "Just suppose with me for a moment that an Ivan and an Anya could find themselves, oh say, in a waiting room, or sharing a shelter from the rain or a storm with a Jim or a Sally. And there was no language barrier to keep them from getting acquainted."

"Would they then debate the differences between their respective governments? Or would they find themselves comparing notes about their children and what each other did for a living?... And as they went their separate ways maybe Anya would be saying to Ivan, 'Wasn't she nice? She also teaches music.' And Jim would be telling Sally what Ivan did or didn't like about his boss. They might have even decided they were all going to get together for dinner some evening soon."

Mr. Reagan's point, I believe, was that if people got to know each other one on one, they wouldn't want to go to war.

While getting Jim and Sally and Ivan and Anya together is a very nice scenario for peace, I think it's more important for Ronnie and Nancy and Yuri and his wife to find themselves sharing a shelter from the rain or storm.

"Hi, my name's Ronnie Reagan and this is my wife Nancy. We're originally from California."

"My name is Yuri Andropov and this is my wife Tatyana. We are hardline Communists."

"That's neat. We're rock-ribbed conservative Republicans. What do you do for a living?"

"I used to be the head of all Secret Police. Now I am the leader of the Soviet Union — when I don't have the flu."

"Hey, how about that, Nancy? Yuri here is the president of a superpower just like me. We have a lot in common."

Nancy turns to Tatyana. "Do you have to give a lot of state dinners?"

Tatyana replies, "Every night I have to give a state dinner. I never have enough china."

"It seems that's my problem, too."

Who makes your clothes?"

"Oscar of Belorussia. Who makes yours?"

"It is very beautiful. But then you are a beautiful lady..."

"She's darling, Ronnie."

Ronnie says, "Tell me, Yuri, what bugs you the most about being President of the U.S.S.R.?"

"The Party bosses. They are always telling me I'm doing something wrong."

"Isn't that funny? That's what bugs me the most about being president of the United States. I don't mind the opposition. But I sure get mad when my own people keep telling me I'm screwing up."

Nancy says to Tatyana, "How do you get along with your children?"

Tatyana replies, "Don't ask."

Nancy laughs, "Me, too. I guess we'll never close the generation gap."

Ronnie says to Yuri, "So what's the toughest thing about your job?"

"Balancing the budget, providing jobs and keeping the U.S.S.R. No. 1."

"I can't believe it. Here we are, strangers caught in the storm and we have the same common problems, interests and aspirations. How about the four of us getting together for dinner sometime and working out a plan to avoid blowing up the world?"

"I'd like that very much, Ronnie. Here is my hotline number. Call me day or night."

"Great. And here's my card. If I'm not at the White House, try the Camp David number. We're always there on weekends."

That night as Ronnie and Nancy are getting out of their soaking clothes, Nancy says, "Wasn't she a lovely person? Did you know she also plays the balalaika?"

And Ronnie says, "He's a first class guy. He told me that before he invaded Czechoslovakia in 1968, his real ambition was to be a movie actor."

Strength For Today

The Bible speaks frequently of the power of sin. Both in the Hebrew and the Greek one of the most prominent of the words meaning "to sin" has the basic meaning of "missing the mark."

To sin means to miss the mark. There are people so under an evil power that they seem to go through life missing the mark all the time. They are tempted to lie and be dishonest.

When they find themselves confronting a situation involving the temptation to be sexually immoral, they find their will power simply refuses to operate. They easily fall into the habit of hating people. They are unkind to the ones who love them the most.

We are dealing with a real power when we are dealing with sin. But we are also dealing with a real power when we are dealing with religious faith, with confidence in God, with reliance upon Jesus Christ as rescuer.

Power against power. Make your choice.

Bad News Follows The Good

NEW YORK (AP) — The president's celebration of the economy in his State of the Union Message last week may have been almost perfectly timed to coincide with a peak in good news and good feelings about the economy.

That, at least, is what seems to be suggested by some of the less-than-sparkling reports and commentaries that have begun to work their way into the news summaries.

The very next day, for instance, the Commerce Department told of a record $69.4 billion U.S. foreign trade deficit for 1983, and expectations of an arrearage that might exceed $100 billion this year.

That the deficit has a lot to do with the weakness of European economies and the relative strength of the dollar doesn't lessen the ominous nature of the news. Eventually, it is widely agreed, trade deficits mean trouble.

And today, the Conference Board, a non-profit, largely business-supported research organization, gave its opinion on the other big deficit. The budget deficit that everyone claims should be shrinking but apparently isn't.

"Even under prosperous economic conditions," said Michael Levy, a board economist, "federal budget deficits are likely to hover around $200 billion during the next several years."

That is, he cautions, if the economy remains fairly strong. Should it stumble, he says, the deficit might rise to around $275 billion to $300 billion, unprecedented and, to most people, ominous figures.

Though the president declared "there is renewed energy and optimism throughout the land," it didn't seem to be reflected in the stock market, which has begun struggling under the burden of uncertainty.

Some of that uncertainty seems to have developed out of a suspicion that last year's strong gains in corporate profits might not continue, and that in fact the rate of gain may have slowed during 1983's final quarter.

Energy and optimism do indeed seem to be rampant in some areas of the marketplace. New-car sales by the major automakers rose nearly 26 percent in the mid-January sales period, and consumer credit is at a record high level.

But shortly after the president delivered his message of confidence and optimism, clients of Sindinger & Co., which has been measuring a very high level of consumer confidence, were receiving their weekly analysis that began:

"Confidence Peaking? After weeks of strong growth, our consumer confidence levels have begun to show more uneven performance, indicating they may be nearly peaked out."

Even the weather might have conspired to deliver a statistical blow. As the president spoke the price impact of cold waves that destroyed citrus crops and damaged livestock were not being felt fully. They will.

Donald Ratajczak, the Georgia State University economist who has made a reputation of anticipating government statistics, estimates that when results are in they will show January food prices rose 1.4 percent over December.

All this might amount to no more than a few shots sprayed from a BB gun. Nobody really knows at this point. And it has been suggested that at the consumer level the president's own popularity might even offset bad news.

According to Albert Sindinger, "The timing and degree of the ups and downs in retail sales are guided more by presidential popularity levels than any other factor."

Most polls show President Reagan is highly popular. Conceivably, his confidence — and element in his popularity — could be contagious, giving a lift to economic activity when it is needed.

The Pricing Paradox

How The Auto Insurance Rating Works

By CRAIG WEBB
RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Think of your auto insurance agent as a bookie.

His job is to figure the odds on what'er you can survive the year without smashing the family car. If you go accident-free, he wins. If you pay him a $100 premium and then turn in a $2,000 claim, the agent better have had more success with his other customers.

Like a bookie, the insurance agent can tap a data bank of tout sheets and tipsters. There are math whizzes at the home office who figure out all the angles. Male or female? Live in the city or country? They've got you pegged.

That's how the system works in most places, but not North Carolina. In 1975, Insurance Commissioner John R. Ingram led a campaign at the Legislature that outlawed rates based on a driver's sex or age. Replacing it was a system that depends heavily on a driver's traffic records and accidents in setting rates.

The major difference lies in that the former system penalizes people who are accidents waiting to happen, while the latter only punishes those who "prove their badness," as one Ingram consultant puts it.

Insurance industry leaders never have stopped griping in the years since the rating changes took effect, nor have they helped Ingram's system work by checking driver's traffic records regularly. A UPI study found insurance companies in 1981-82 assessed drivers for fewer than 40 percent of the Safe Driver Insurance Plan points that were generated between 1979 and 1981.

A traffic conviction or accidents counts from one to 12 SDIP points and raises a driver's rates 10 percent to 450 percent. The surcharge can be imposed on policies that are begun or renewed for up to three years after the conviction or accident.

But UPI found that seven of the 10 largest auto insurance writers in North Carolina check most driver's policies only every two years, and more than a third of the 19 firms questioned check just every three years or more. Many said they passed up the checks because their clients were showing a good "loss ratio" — that is, the drivers' habits didn't cost the insurers any money in losses.

Insurers also dislike what Ingram's system does to a driver's rates. A Charlotte man with a clean record who gets caught speeding 66 mph will pay a $40 fine to the district judge. But to the driver's insurance company, that ticket means $282 worth of rate increases over the next three years.

"We shouldn't have a system that's so punitive that it just puts fear in people, to make them hide from agents and not even make claims," said Benjamin F. Seagle III, a lobbyist for Aetna Life and Casualty Insurance Co.

The General Assembly tried to lessen the fear a bit in 1983 by absolving drivers of the 10 percent surcharge for speeding less than 10 mph above the legal limit. That "one free bite of the apple," nas legislators billed it, is good only if the speeding citation was the first ticket received within a three-year period and did not take place in a school zone.

But the Legislature kept the rest of the system, showing its continued commitment to a far different idea of fairness than insurers traditionally follow.

Insurance's classic definition is that it spreads out the cost of something no one person can afford to pay on his or her own. Few people keep on hand the $50,000 that North Carolina requires for minimum liability coverage in an accident. So everyone contributes a small amount in order that a few can draw on the money pile.

But not every group draws from that pile at the same rate. National statistics show unmarried males under age 25 are involved in nearly twice as many accidents as married men under 25, and young people of both sexes cause more accidents than older adults.

Consequently, insurance companies in most states charge much higher rates to bachelor males under 25. But the firms cannot in North Carolina, because under the Ingram philosophy it is unfair to penalize good drivers just because they are part of a rotten bunch.

Ingram's next target is territory-based rating. In North Carolina, minimum liability coverage can vary sharply. For a driver with no points on his record, commuting to work less than 10 miles one way, the same coverage ranges from $98 to $151 a year depending on where a person lives.

The differences with a small area can be striking; the coverage that costs $109 in Winston-Salem goes for $130 in Greensboro and $145 in High Point.

Insurers justify the differences by arguing that drivers in higher-rated territories, on the average, cause more losses. But Ingram says rates for a driver who doesn't cause a loss should be the same in urban

High Point as in rural Hyde County.

"If you're going to have a safe driver point system, where you do in fact charge people more for their bad driving record, okay," he said. "Now if ... you are already penalizing those people who are causing the rates to go up in High Point, then why should you penalize people who live in High Point again?"

LeRoy Boison, a consultant to North Carolina's insurance industry, said if Ingram's philosophy was carried to the extreme, drivers wouldn't have to pay anything until after a loss.

"What you're going to do is have ugly high rates, because only the people who cause the accidents are going to be hit," he said.

Bernard Parker, vice president and general manager of Nationwide Insurance, believes Ingram's bans on sex, marital status and age as rating factors have stood in North Carolina only because the state's insurance rates are among the cheapest in the nation.

"When you have a rate as low as we've got in North Carolina totally, and when this loss can be picked up by having the population pay $3 to $4, nobody says anything," Parker said. "But let the difference get to as much as $100 a year. Then you'll hear people talk."

Auto Insurance Not Apt To See Those Rate Cuts

By CRAIG WEBB
RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Three years ago, Dan Hargett wrote a property insurance policy for a condominium complex in Charlotte that cost $17,000.

"The next year, I quoted $6,800 for the same coverage — and I didn't get the policy," he recalled. "They thought I had screwed them the year before, but that's how much the market had changed."

Hargett's experience has been replayed thousands of times across North Carolina in recent years as firms slashed property insurance premiums, often by more than half.

"In the commercial field, it's so cutthroat out there that, golly, it's just like a yo-yo," said Benjamin F. Seagle III, an attorney for Aetna Life and Casualty Insurance Co. "It's been a rat race, but that's what we want."

Insurance experts credit that race to two factors. First, state law permits an insurer to offer whatever kind of commercial insurance at whatever price it wants. That differs from private home and auto insurance, in which the entire industry must get the insurance commissioner to approve the kind of coverage and rates it can offer.

Bernard Parker, head of Nationwide Insurance's North Carolina operations, said that having to file en masse stifles the introduction of new products.

"When we turned loose the commercial lines in North Carolina, the market opened up and we had some innovation," he said. "Some of it was ridiculous, but it was innovation."

The other factor was that insurance companies in recent years have been able to avoid rate increases because they were making so much money investing the dollars they got from premiums. Interest rates have dropped since the early 1980s, however, so rate-slashing isn't as advisable today as it was a few years ago.

Because of those elements, insurance experts say that auto insurance is unlikely to see the same kind of rate cuts.

"Commercial lines have altogether different factors," said Donald Zimmerman, regional manager for State Farm Insurance. "Nowhere could we warrant that if you have an open, competitive system the rates would drop."

Infractions And Points Assessed

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Here is a list of the infractions for which Safe Driver Insurance Plan points are assessed, and the surcharges those points carry. Seek 2nd In Escape Gang

RALEIGH (AP) — Cumberland County authorities and State Bureau of Investigation agents are seeking a second person suspected of helping convicted child killer Cathy Mathews Jones escape from prison last week.

Sonya Dee Simmons of Hope Mills has been charged with kidnapping and escape by the use of a deadly weapon in the connection with Mrs. Jones' Jan. 23 escape from the Women's Correctional Center in Raleigh, said SBI agent Daniel E. Gilbert. He said Simmons also goes by the alias Anthony Simmons.

Mrs. Jones, 32, who was serving a life sentence for the 1976 shooting death of her 3-year-old daughter, escaped through a gate near the prison's upholstery building.

An undetermined number of accomplices had come out of a wooded area near the prison, threatened the guard with a stick or pipe, taped his mouth shut and stole his keys.

On Saturday night, James David Valdez of Fayetteville was arrested in Fayetteville by SBI agents working with local police, Gilbert said.

Valdez, who was charged with kidnapping and escape by the use of a deadly weapon, was being held in the Cumberland County Jail on $100,000 bond.

Ms. Simmons was released from the Women's Correctional Center in September and was acquainted with Mrs. Jones, said center director Jennie Lancaster.

Gilbert said Ms. Simmons and Valdez also knew each other, but he declined further comment on their relationship or the circumstances of Valdez's arrest Saturday.

Six Die In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press
Six people — including two pedestrians — were killed in weekend traffic accidents on North Carolina roads, the state Highway Patrol reported today.

Charlie Lee Savage, 36, of Colerain was struck and killed by a vehicle passing a second vehicle Saturday night on N.C. 25 two miles south of Harrellsville in Hertford County.

A car traveling west on a rural road one mile east of Garner in Wake County ran over and killed David Griffith, 41, of Garner on Saturday night.

In other fatalities, Regina Louise Howard, 23, of Waynesville died Friday night when the vehicle she was driving ran a stop sign and struck another vehicle on U.S. 276 five miles south of Waynesville.

Carolyn Gaines Hunter, 41, of Sanford was killed Saturday morning when the car she was driving ran off a rural road south of Sanford and overturned.

Wilborne T. Robinson, 58, of Huntsville, Texas, died Saturday afternoon when a vehicle ran into the car in which he was riding on a rural road five miles west of Greensboro.

Clifdon McCollum, 38, of Fairmont was killed early Sunday morning when the car in which he was a passenger ran off a rural Robeson County road south of his hometown, hit a ditch bank and overturned.

The fatalities brought the state's death toll for the year to 68, compared with 73 at the same time last year.

Resolutions Are Tabled

RALEIGH (AP) — Delegates to the 168th annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of North Carolina tabled controversial resolutions on Nicaragua and abortion.

The resolution on Nicaragua would have urged the U.S. government not to intervene in the internal affairs of Nicaragua. It was tabled Saturday after discussion on whether the resolution was ineffectual or was worded too strongly.

"There are a lot of people who are just opposed to the present government in Nicaragua and others who were confused by conflicting speeches," said the Rev. Lex S. Matthews, diocesan Director of Christian Social Ministries.

The resolution on abortion recommended a policy that would permit "termination of pregnancy...where it has been clearly established that the physical health of the mother is threatened seriously."

Last year's convention passed a resolution recommending abortion for the woman's mental as well as physical well-being.

After several speakers said the new resolution made no provision for abortion in the case of incest or rape, the convention voted to table it.

Solicitation License Argued

RALEIGH (AP) — State officials have recommended that a solicitation license for the American Foundation for the Deaf be revoked because the group "did willfully misrepresent and mislead" solicitors and the public in fund-raising drives.

Arthur Desrosiers Jr., a hearing officer for the state Division of Facility Services, made the recommendation last week. If the recommendation is upheld by division director Jim Wilkerson, the foundation can appeal to Superior Court.

A Center For Science, Math Training

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Young scientists and mathematicians crowd around computers throughout North Carolina, but nowhere in the state can technology-minded youngsters receive the training found at the North Carolina School for Science and Mathematics in Durham.

"I am interested in science, and at the school I can really pursue my interests," said Maya Ajmera, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R.C. Ajmera of Greenville. Maya, who is interested in a career in scientific research, was a 10th grader at J.H. Rose High School when she was selected to attend NCSSM her junior and senior years.

The North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics is a public residential high school for academically gifted young North Carolinians with interest in and potential for high achievement in the fields of science and mathematics.

The school is different from other high schools in the state. The computer is a major part of all the classes taught at the school. All students have access to the computers and must show proficiency with the equipment before graduation.

"The Vax computer is popular at school," Maya said. "It is really a big thing with the students. You can send mail on it and play games."

Besides the emphasis on computers, the school differs from other high schools in other ways. Students work with local scientists and mathematicians in universities and industries. They are required to participate in community service and school service work. And all the students attending the school have a common goal — a career in science or mathematics.

NCSSM was established by the North Carolina General Assembly in 1978. There is no charge for room, board, tuition or fees.

An October 1980 article about the school in Time magazine quoted Gov. Jim Hunt as saying, "I pushed it (NCSSM) because I'm concerned about the loss in productivity in American industry and the loss of our competitive edge in the whole technological field. At the high school level, we simply are not doing the best job we can do."

The school is located in Durham, in the Research Triangle area, on the 27-acre campus which was formerly the home of Watts Hospital.

"The Research Triangle area, which includes Durham, Chapel Hill and Raleigh, is home to four major universities and has an abundance of educational, cultural, religious and recreational activities, which are a major enhancement to the NCSSM academic and residential program," a school pamphlet notes.

Students are identified for enrollment in their sophomore year of high school and spend their junior and senior years at the school. They are selected through a highly competitive process that includes a review of standardized test scores and past academic performance, personal interviews and student essays. An admissions committee comprised of North Carolinians in science and education reviews all data and makes selections.

In the fall of 1983, nearly 400 11th and 12th grade students were enrolled at NCSSM. The student body, from 85 of North Carolina's 100 counties, was 54 percent male and 46 percent female with 24 percent minority students.

Phillip Evans, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Evans of Greenville, attended D.H. Conley High School before being accepted at NCSSM. He hopes for a career in physics and computer science.

Phillip said that the intelligent student does not feel unusual at NCSSM. "The school makes you feel more usual and not almost like you are outside of society," he said. "You learn that each person is part of the whole, while at my old school, we (students with high levels of achievement in science and mathematics) were considered different."

Maya said that leaving home to go to school was a big adjustment for her. But she said that making friends at the school was easy. "Everyone who comes (to NCSSM) is in the same situation and understands and is looking for friends, too," she said.

The faculty of NCSSM is comprised of professionals with advanced degrees in their disciplines and extensive experience as teachers. Of the full-time faculty, all have master's degrees and 44 percent have doctorates.

The classes at NCSSM are smaller than those in most public high schools. Maya said there is an average of 17 students in her classes.

"There is more interaction between student and teacher," she added. "You get close to the teachers and they think of you as both a student and a friend."

"There are so many more classes to choose from," said NCSSM student Maria Kelly. Maria, who previously attended J.H. Rose High, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kelly of Greenville.

"The school requires you to take certain courses like biology, chemistry and physics for graduation," Maria said. "If you've never been exposed to them, it will help you make a decision."

Also required for graduation are English, foreign language, mathematics, social science and physical activity.

"The schedule is more like a college schedule," Phillip said. "The science classes have one and a half hour labs and we have eight classes that meet three days a week."

Students are encouraged to select an advanced sequence in at least one subject and also to sample several areas of study through electives.

All academic areas, both required and elective, make use of the computer as an integral part of the curriculum.

Before graduation from the school, each student must also complete two years of work service and one year of community service and demonstrate computer proficiency.

Through the work service program, a student spends

N.C. Counties See Economies Holding

By The Associated Press

When Watson Seafood and Poultry Co. of Rose Hill went bankrupt last April after 27 years in business, Duplin and neighboring Pender counties braced for bad times.

The counties prepared for up to $15 to $20 million in lost wages and services to poultry production when the family-owned chicken business closed.

But the poultry business still seems to be sound in the counties.

"The impact, fortunately, is not as great as feared," said Rose Hill Mayor Ben Harrell. "The downtown hatchery has been sold and is now in operation. The impact has been lessened considerably."

Most of Watson Seafood's 120 employees have been laid off as the business winds down. The closing has also forced the layoff of 250 people on one shift at Rose Hill Poultry, which processed chickens for the company.

But a local Employment Securities Commission official said he has not seen a large number of people looking at unemployment claims.

"I believe a lot of them have found jobs elsewhere or with some companies that bought Watson's hatcheries," said office manager Dennis Kirby.

An outbreak of avian flu in poultry in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and northern Virginia has put a higher demand on the poultry business in North Carolina.

The flu outbreak has also boosted demand for Watson's fixed assets.

"I guess it's true when they say one man's misery is another man's pleasure," said Coastal Production Credit Association's attorney Richard L. Burrows. "The company's breeders and other equipment has been bringing in better than expected prices."

The Watson hatcheries were sold to Hy-Cross Co. of Lititz, Pa. Watson's owed more than $3 million, but through the sale of the hatcheries and other assets, the debt has been reduced to about $2.1 million.

Third Suicide Shocks Suburb

QUAKERTOWN, Pa. (AP) — The third teen-age suicide in two months has shocked this Philadelphia suburb, but a high school official says the school wants to "face this and do what we can."

Sixteen-year-old Michelle Qurashi, a junior at Quakertown Community High, took her own life last week, two months after her boyfriend jumped to death at a quarry in a suicide pact with another youth, who also died. Miss Qurashi had discovered the bodies.

Miss Qurashi died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the chest, Bucks County Coroner Thomas J. Rosko ruled after an autopsy Saturday.

Fred G. Shipman, director of pupil personnel services at the high school, said the school wants to "face this and do what we can ... to respond to this, and not look the other way."

Greater Security At American Embassies Abroad

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. Embassy in Stockholm is using boulders. In London, 3-foot concrete shrubbery tubs are in place. And in Rome, a steel barrier will rise at the push of a button to block the main gate.

American embassies in many world capitals are putting up obstacles to discourage terrorist attacks like the one last April when a truck carrying dynamite slammed into the American Embassy in Beirut. Sixty-three people, including 17 Americans, died in the blast.

None of the barriers looks quite like the ugly cement-filled oil drums that served as bomb shields at the embassy in Saigon, but the days when anyone could walk into an American Embassy almost as easily as into a supermarket are past.

"Lots of our embassies around the world were built at a time when you didn't have walking or driving bombers all over the place. They've got to be upgraded in today's world," said an official at the U.S. Embassy on tree-lined Dag Hammarskjöld Boulevard in Copenhagen.

The Danish police have lent cement-bottomed barricades to the American Embassy for temporary use while a permanent blockade is designed.

Most embassies are in highest-rent districts, so crude anti-tank barriers are out. The American Embassy in London, which occupies one section of elegant Grosvenor Square, has put 12 big shrubbery tubs in two staggered rows in front of the main entrance, and more tubs block side entrances.

Joked one embassy staffer, "We're just growing flowers."

Some American embassies have resorted to sand-filled dump trucks like those that ringed the White House in Washington late last year before permanent barriers were installed.

Though the Mideast attacks, including a bombing at the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait on Dec. 12 that killed two people, have been blamed on pro-Iranian elements that oppose U.S. policy in the region, tightened security also appears necessary for other reasons.

In West Germany, where there have been widespread protests against the deployment of U.S. intermediate-range nuclear missiles, security at many American installations also has been increased. There are more armed guards, and trucks loaded with sand and sand-filled barrels partially block entrance roads to slow speeding vehicles.

In Denmark, two bricks were thrown through plate-glass windows during an anti-American demonstration the day after U.S. troops invaded Grenada.

Access to many embassies was tightened noticeably after Islamic revolutionaries took over the U.S. Embassy in Iran in 1979 and held 52 Americans hostage for 444 days.

Though it was acknowledged that the small contingents of Marine guards assigned to embassies would have little chance of blocking a large mob of people, bullet-proof glass and metal-detectors were installed in public areas in many embassies.

Visitors would have to pass through remote-controlled double doors, with an embassy staffer to escort them in and out of the building.

With the heavy casualties of the Beirut attacks, however, more severe measures have been taken outside the embassies — and not only in the Middle East and Europe.

The U.S. consulate in Hong Kong has a truck blocking the rear entrance. It was placed there in late December when a group of Iranians with false passports was arrested, sparking newspaper speculation that they were on a terrorist mission.

In Peking, cars and vans blocked entrances to the U.S. Embassy for a time after the Lebanon bombings, and security was also tightened at the legations of Britain, France and Italy — America's partners in the Lebanon peacekeeping force.

The embassy in Peru, which has been the target of bomb attacks by Maoist guerrillas, recently installed an iron grid in front of the entrance.

In December, boulders were placed in a row on the lawns of the American Embassy in Stockholm to prevent vehicles from crashing into the building. The boulders were intended "for rock and flower garden improvement of the environment," an official said.

The embassy in The Hague has placed several trash bins filled with sand in front of a seldom-used entrance on a busy street, and pylons have been sunk into the street to prevent parking in front of the building.

Spokesman Sam Wonder said the actions were taken as "a prudent measure" after the Middle East bombings.

Reagan Running...

Central America.

Democratic presidential candidate Alan Cranston of California, campaigning in Iowa, said, "As long as Americans are dying in Lebanon and Nicaragua, and as long as American families believe that the economy is not improving for them... Ronald Reagan is in for a difficult time in his bid for re-election."

At a hotel four blocks from the White House, Reagan supporters watched his speech and chanted, "Four more years, four more years."

The president opened his re-election campaign with his opinion poll ratings on the rise and a campaign treasury of $4 million building rapidly.

But his Democratic opposition was quick to declare him a candidate for defeat and to focus on the record budget deficits — $195.4 billion last year — of his presidency.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, one of eight candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination, said the president was "passing along $200 billion debts to our children."

Another Democratic candidate, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina, said, "The only things the Reagan administration will leave the next generation are dreams, deficits and a dangerous world."

One of the sharpest attacks on the president came from House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., who said:

"Ronald Reagan has been a divider, not a uniter. He has divided our country between rich and poor, between the hopeful and the hopeless, between the comfortable and the miserable. He has not been fair and the people know it.

"The American people will reject four more years of danger, four more years of pain," O'Neill said.

Productivity Up In 1983

WASHINGTON (AP) — Business productivity rose 3.1 percent last year, the best showing since 1976, the Labor Department said today.

The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics, comparing production output in the private sector with the number of hours people worked, said the overall improvement was paced by the fastest manufacturing productivity gain in 20 years.

The calculation excludes the farm economy. When agriculture was included in the government's productivity gauge, which measures the volume of goods and services produced in an hour of paid working time, worker efficiency rose at an annual rate of 2.6 percent.

Solid gains in production efficiency are considered essential to keeping U.S. firms competitive with their international rivals.

President Reagan, expressing concern that U.S. business productivity growth rates have trailed those of other industrialized nations in recent years, established a national study commission to analyze the problem. The panel's final report will soon be presented to Reagan.

U.S. business productivity grew at average annual rates of about 3 percent from 1948 to 1965, but has slumped in recent years to little or no growth.

The 3.1 percent annual rate of increase in nonfarm business productivity was the best since the measure advanced at an annual rate of 3.2 percent in 1976, the bureau noted in its report.

The report also said that workers' compensation per hour increased 5.6 percent in 1983, the smallest gain since 1967.

Unit labor costs, which account for about two-thirds the value of a company's output, rose only 2.4 percent last year, the smallest increase in this category since 1965, the BLS said.

The overall 3.1 percent annual rate of increase in nonfarm business productivity last year reversed a trend toward declining growth, and even some losses, in recent years. In 1982, for instance, nonfarm business productivity actually declined at an annual rate of 0.1 percentage point.

Although worker efficiency improved across the spectrum of the economy, the performance in the manufacturing sector, which had been hardest hit by the deep business slump of 1981-82, was the most impressive.

Today's report showed that productivity in manufacturing advanced at an annual rate of 6.6 percent, the best performance in two decades.

Avian Flu Remains A Threat To State

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Avian influenza will remain a threat to North Carolina's poultry flocks for months despite precautions against the virus, agriculture officials say.

That's because the virus is easily spread across long distances and is hard to kill, said Dr. Terry B. Ryan, director of the state Department of Agriculture's diagnostic laboratories for livestock and poultry diseases.

Outbreaks of avian flu have wiped out nearly 10 million chickens and turkeys in southeastern Pennsylvania since November. The disease has spread to six flocks in the Harrisonburg area of northern Virginia.

Another outbreak could occur anywhere, including North Carolina, where poultry and eggs bring in more than $800 million a year in gross farm income.

As one precaution, farmers are being urged to keep visitors out of their poultry houses.

"It is almost impossible to go into (an infected poultry house) and not get your clothes contaminated," Ryan said.

In addition, monitoring for the disease is being set up at the department's poultry laboratories, where farmers periodically send blood samples from their flocks for routine checks for signs of other poultry diseases.

Four poultry shows that are ordinarily held in the spring have been canceled. Ryan said the decisions to cancel the shows were made voluntarily by each show committee.

Pick Prisoner

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — George Papadopoulos, serving a life prison term for heading a 1967 coup that established a seven-year military dictatorship, has been chosen leader of a new right-wing political party.

More than 400 delegates of the first assembly of the National Political Society cheered and shouted "Let George Papadopoulos go free!" when a motion was offered Sunday to name him as the party's leader.

Asking Help In Legal Logjam

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Connecticut is asking lawyers to serve as referees in an experiment aimed at unjamming its backlog of civil cases.

Sixty members of the bar will be sworn in Tuesday as referees in non-jury cases. After hearing cases, they'll make recommendations to the Superior Court, which will rule.

It marks the first time that individuals other than retired judges are being used as trial referees in the state's courts. It also is the first time civil cases above $15,000 can be heard by someone other than a judge or a retired judge acting as a referee, said Chief Justice John Speziale.

Superchicken

In 1970, Perdue Farms began crossbreeding for a better broiler. Since then, the White Rock Cornish hybrid has grown more meaty and tender through genetics and nutrition. For the growers, these and other advancements have meant improved feed conversion, faster growing flocks, and extra pay for a better product. For example, in 1973 it took 60 days to produce a 4 lb. broiler. Today it takes only 52 days.

Perdue still spends more than most companies on research and quality control. In the highly competitive poultry business, standing still won't keep you ahead. That's why Perdue's veterinarians, nutritionists, and geneticists keep working to develop a "superchicken." In the meantime, the market for Perdue's superior chicken increases every year. In fact we're planning to open a second shift at our Robersonville processing plant to help us meet this growing demand. As a result of our expansion, Perdue needs 145 more broiler houses. So if you're a North Carolina farmer who'd like to grow with us, get in touch today. Call collect 1-795-4151 or send in the coupon below.

Teachers Back Combined Plan

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A compromise plan combining merit pay for top teachers with across-the-board salary increases goes before the Legislature's finance committees this week after winning the support of the state's largest teachers union.

The plan, which gained the backing of the Tennessee Education Association with its promise of job security as well as raises, also requires a one-cent increase in the state's 4.5 percent sales tax and increases in business taxes to raise $351 million.

Gov. Lamar Alexander has been pushing for a merit pay system for public school teachers for a year, but it took several revisions of his proposal — and a headcount showing the proposal would pass the Legislature — to gain the union's endorsement Saturday.

barbecue grill," Branch said. "It's like the Taj Mahal," one of Mews' roommates said.

One- and two-bedroom units are now for sale at Ringgold, Pinson said. Each unit comes completely furnished down to the "sheets, pots and pans, even a can opener, the whole smear," he said. "All a student will have to do is hang up his or her clothes, put books and the shelf and go," he said.

Branch said ECU's growing student population is one reason his company invested in Pirates Landing. "The student population has gone up gradually here over past years. Not only that, the students seem to be more affluent," he said.

ECU Student Housing Director Dan Wooten said the university population has been growing slowly over the past five or six years. While the housing situation at the school is not critical, he said temporary situations have been necessary over the years. "Third-bed situations are what usually arise," he said. However, the room shortage straightens itself out by the spring semester of each academic year, he said.

Asked if he felt private student housing options would hurt the university, Wooten said he thought it was too early to tell. "But I don't think it will have a tremendous effect either way," he said.

Catholic School Week Events Set

This week has been designated Catholic Schools Week, with "Beacon of Hope" as the theme.

Sister Imelda, principal of St. Peter's School on East Fifth Street, Greenville, has announced activities for the week. Spelling bees will be held in each class today. Students will be allowed to wear "regular" clothes instead of uniforms Tuesday. A talent show will be held Wednesday. Family day, with families invited to visit for class and lunch, will be held Thursday and no homework will be assigned so families can spend that evening together. Friday is Debate Day. Teachers will be honored at mass Sunday and will be given the opportunity to rededicate themselves to Catholic education. St. Peter's serves grades one through eight.

Neither Motive Nor Suspects

NEW YORK (AP) — Police had no motive or suspects in the slaying of an unidentified man whose body was found wrapped inside a discarded rug by three Columbia University students.

The students had picked up the rolled-up carpet from a sidewalk Sunday. "They thought they were going to decorate their little dorm room," said Lt. James McKenna. "Then they unrolled it and found a body inside."

Police described the body only as that of a black male in his 20s. McKenna said the man had two bullet wounds to the head.

Jordan Leads Way in Costly Victory

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Victory always comes at a price, and top-ranked North Carolina paid a hefty fee for its 90-79 triumph over No. 10 Louisiana State.

While Michael Jordan scored a season-high 29 points, including 23 in the second half, point guard Kenny Smith suffered a fractured wrist while driving for a layup late in the second half. He is out indefinitely, according to team officials.

Smith was breaking away for the basket when LSU's John Tudor knocked him to the floor. Jordan then retaliated for the act by pushing Tudor into the front row of the seats at Carmichael Auditorium.

"I got me a little frustrated and a little angry," Jordan said. "I just took it in and I apologized."

Officials called a flagrant foul on Tudor and Smith hit one of two free throws. They also called a technical foul on Jordan and Derrick Taylor hit the shot.

North Carolina coach Dean

Smith said he won't tolerate that sort of behavior. "I know (Tudor) didn't do it on purpose," Smith said. "Michael won't come to a teammate's defense like that again."

LSU coach Dale Brown said Jordan should have been heading for the showers after the push. "I don't deny what Michael did because I would have done the same thing. He was protecting one of his players," Brown said. "Tudor didn't try to hurt anybody. It was an aggressive foul. But according to the rules, Jordan should have been ejected."

By the time the dust had cleared, however, the damage had been done. Trailing 52-46, Jordan scored five points to bring the Tar Heels to within 52-51 with 13:05 left. Jerry Reynolds, who had 29 points for LSU, hit a follow shot with 12:43 left to give the Tigers a 54-52 lead. Smith came back with two free throws at 12:18, while Damon Vance hit the front end of a two-shot foul at the 12:07 mark to give LSU a 55-53 lead.

Sam Perkins and Brad Daugherty scored on layups to give North Carolina a 57-55 lead. LSU tied the score on a dunk by Reynolds but Perkins hit two free throws and Smith added a layup to start a Tar Heels run that would give them their 17th straight victory.

North Carolina hit 14 of its last 17 shots in the second half and closed the period at 17 of 25 for 68 percent. The Tar Heels were 31 of 56 for 55.6 percent.

Brown said 10,000 screaming Tar Heel fans and Jordan's run might have had something to do with his team's running out of gas. He added, however, that Taylor might be demoted from his starting role.

"... If we don't get a point guard to run the offense exactly the way we want our offense run," Brown said, "then we'll find another point guard. Derrick has not played like he did as a freshman. I think he's trying to take too much on his shoulders."

Perkins had 19 points and tied a career high with 17 rebounds. Smith had 14 for the Tar Heels.

Taylor added 13 for LSU, 12-5, while Nikita Wilson and Leonard Mitchell had 12 apiece.

Always Room To Improve

DENVER (AP) — Far be it from Magic Johnson to criticize the system that's made him a millionaire.

Ditto Larry Bird, Julius Erving and Sidney Moncrief.

However ... there's always room for improvement, right?

Right, said a sampling of the National Basketball Association's most brilliant players. They were asked, during a break in All-Star Weekend festivities in Denver:

"If you could change one thing about the NBA, what would it be?"

Only one of those polled declared that everyone should remain just as it is. Everyone else had at least one change they'd love to make. And no one had to go off and think a while before answering.

Not surprisingly, favorite targets were the 82-game regular-season schedule and the brutal travel it entails.

"I would cut back to 60 or 65 games," said Johnson, the great guard of the Los Angeles Lakers. "That would make for a better situation for everybody."

Johnson's altered format would call for more games between the top East Coast and West Coast teams. He and others would cut back on travel by playing a short series in opposing cities.

"It would be nice to have a Friday-Sunday series," he said.

Erving, the Most Valuable

Player in last year's All-Star game and the sport's dominant superstar, took aim at the schedule-maker.

"I would do something about the three-games-in-a-row policy," said Erving. "No team should have to play three in a row. Two is bad enough, and three is impossible."

Mark Aguirre of the Dallas Mavericks takes issue with Johnson's attempt to cut back on the number of games.

"I like the 82 game-schedule," he said. "But we could cut down on the travel by playing a series in a city, say two games in three or four days in the same town. That would put more intensity into the games because, for one thing, there's no way you'd want to stay in a city and lose two straight."

Kelly Tripucka of the Detroit Pistons flatly declares that the schedule is too long.

"I think you could take 10 or 20 games out of the schedule and not hurt anything," he said. "With a 62-game season, everybody would have to get out quick and get going. Now, with an 82-game season, everybody says, 'It's a long season,' and takes a while to get going."

Larry Bird, the Boston Celtic perennial all-pro, would make "several changes," he said, but No. 1 would be the schedule.

"I'd like to see the East teams play the West teams at least twice a year, or more," Bird said. "There are a few of the rules I'd change, too."

Moncrief would alter the NBA's playoff format.

"I think the best-of-seven series should be just for the championship," said the Milwaukee guard. "The others should be the best-of-five. The shorter series would make the preliminary rounds even better."

Kiki Vandeweghe of the Denver Nuggets would encourage more community involvement among the players.

"If more players lived in the communities they played in, a lot of good things would happen," said Vandeweghe.

Murry Named To ECU Staff

Don Murry was announced today as the new offensive coordinator at East Carolina University by head football coach Ed Emory.

Murry comes to East Carolina after one year as offensive coordinator at the University of Southwestern Louisiana and replaced Art Baker, who has joined the staff of Florida State University.

Murry and Emory are no strangers. The two worked together for five seasons at Clemson University, 1973-78. Murry serving there as offensive coordinator and Emory as offensive line coach and running back coach.

Murry also served on the staff at The Citadel in 1971 when the Bulldogs were number four in the nation in total offense and in the top ten in the nation in scoring.

Prior to the year at Southwestern Louisiana, Murry was offensive coordinator and quarterback coach three seasons at Oregon State. He also served at the University of Wyoming for three seasons.

"I feel Don Murry is one of the best qualified teachers and organizers for our position," said Emory. "I've tried to hire him on three other occasions and persistence has finally paid off the fourth time."

"Don has been an option coach most of his career and we wanted someone with solid experience for our job. He has signed a multi-year contract and we are most pleased to get him for our staff."

The 40-year-old native of Warren, Ark., quarterbacked Arkansas A&M to a 15-4 as a starter and lettered for four years.

Murry has already arrived in Greenville and begun his new duties with the Pirate football staff.

Lofton Is New Papa

HONOLULU (AP) — While most players in the Pro Bowl game went to bed early the previous night to get some sleep, Green Bay Packers wide receiver James Lofton was busy delivering a baby.

"He was my coach," Beverly Lofton said here Sunday while resting in Kapiolani Children's Medical Center, where she gave birth Saturday night to a 9-pound, 8-ounce boy.

Mrs. Lofton said her husband remained with her throughout the delivery of their first child, and then got some sleep before starting for the National Football Conference all-star team, which beat the American Conference 45-3.

"He was a little exhausted," she said. "But now he thinks he's a pro baby deliverer."

The couple decided to make plans to have the child in Hawaii when Lofton learned he would be playing in this year's game.

"My doctors said it was all right to fly," said Mrs. Lofton. Mrs. Lofton watched the game on television from her hospital bed.

"The baby's here with me," she said. "Maybe he (James) will do something special."

Mrs. Lofton said the baby is to be named David James, a reversal of the first and middle names of her husband. She said she and her husband planned to remain in Hawaii until March 1.

"We love coming over here, it is such a special place for us," she said.

Bertolaccini Tops Tourney

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Beating back challenger after challenger, Silvia Bertolaccini clung to a precarious lead before pulling clear by three strokes to win the $200,000 LPGA Mazda Classic at Deer Creek.

Bertolaccini, a native Argentine who now lives in Pompano Beach, Fla., started the final round Sunday one stroke ahead of the field, and went on to fight off some of the biggest names on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

"Nothing more than positive thinking," Bertolaccini said after a three-under-par 69 in the final round produced an eight-under 280 finish.

"I played this round at least 10 times in my mind the past week. I knew I could win," the 34-year-old said after scoring her first tour victory since 1979 and taking the $30,000 first prize. Bertolaccini's total earnings last year were slightly more at $33,930.

Lauri Rinker gave Bertolaccini the most pressure, but finally fell off at the 17th hole.

"After the 17th I knew my chances were slim and none," she said.

Rinker, with a 71, emerged from the pack and finished alone in second place with a 283 total to collect $18,000.

"Playing with Lauri helped. She kept putting pressure on me and finally the crucial hole of the tournament was the 17th where I scored a birdie and she bogeyed," Bertolaccini said.

Defender Pat Bradley, who missed birdie putts at the 12th and 13th holes to halt her charge, and Jan Stephenson, the Australian who blamed an inability to score on the 16th, a par-5 hole, finished in a tie, one stroke behind Rinker.

Other challengers — such as LPGA career money winning leader JoAnne Carner, who double-bogeyed the ninth when she hit over trees and into water; Patti Rizzo, who started her day with a bogey; and Kathy Postlewait, who was two over on the front nine — wound up tied at 285.

"Like I said, I was out to play the best I can and to win," Bertolaccini said. "I kept thinking how nice it would be with my birthday (she will be 34 today) and I can call my parents at home in Argentina and tell them I won."

Smith Lost 'Indefinitely'

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Freshman guard Kenny Smith will be out indefinitely after fracturing his left wrist during top-ranked North Carolina's 90-79 victory over Louisiana State, North Carolina sports information director Rick Brewer says.

Brewer said the time limit was indefinite until doctors can evaluate the injury.

Smith was driving for a layup in Sunday's game when he was sent sprawling to the floor by LSU's John Tudor. Officials called a flagrant foul on Tudor.

Moments later, Tar Heel guard Michael Jordan shoved Tudor to the floor. Jordan was assessed a technical foul and Derrick Taylor hit the shot. Smith had hit one shot of the two-shot foul earlier.

"It got me a little frustrated and a little angry," Jordan said. "I just took it in and apologized."

North Carolina coach Dean Smith said it's not likely the act will be repeated.

"I know (Tudor) didn't do it on purpose," Smith said. "Michael won't come to a teammate's defense like that again."

LSU coach Dale Brown, who called Jordan a great athlete, said the action should have resulted in an ejection.

"I don't deny what Michael did because I would have done the same thing. He was protecting one of his players," Brown said. "Tudor didn't try to hurt anybody. It was an aggressive foul. But according to the rules, Jordan should have been ejected."

LSU trailed 78-71 after the exchange. Tudor later fouled out and Jordan, who finished with a season-high 29 points, didn't score any more points following the incident.

Koch Wins In Playoff

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Gary Koch stood around for almost an hour after he'd finished play, calmly waiting for the other leaders to finish.

A time of tension, this waiting to see if he'd be in a playoff? Very antsy, right? Fingernail biting time, eh?

Not at all, said Koch.

There was, by his reasoning, nothing to be nervous about.

"I didn't think I had a chance," said Koch, who came from six shots off the pace Sunday with a 7-under-par 65 that propelled him into a successful playoff against defending champion Gary Hallberg in the San Diego Open golf tournament.

"Right up until the time he missed that putt, I didn't think I had a chance. It might have helped me. Since I didn't think

I had a chance, I didn't have a chance to get nervous."

But when Hallberg missed a 4-foot par putt on the 72nd hole, when he had to settle for a bogey-6 on the hole that had yielded birdies by the dozen, Koch suddenly had a tie for the top, the first time he'd been there in four days.

In the sudden death playoff, Koch and Hallberg made routine pars on the first extra hole and Koch won it on the second, rapping in a 10-foot birdie putt after Hallberg had played three shots.

The victory, the fourth of Koch's nine-year PGA Tour career, was worth $72,000 from a $400,000 purse and came on a 72-hole total of 272, 16 shots under par on the 7,002 yard South course at the Torrey Pines Golf Club.

Hallberg, who had scored his first career victory in this tournament a year ago, held a one-stroke lead and appeared to have his second consecutive San Diego title in hand when he stood on the 18th tee.

"I was thinking just hit it down there, get your par and get out," he said.

But he drove to the right, played back to the fairway with his second, put his third in the fringe and then 3-putted from about 30 feet, missing from four feet on his second try.

The bogey finished off a round of 68, dropped him back into a tie for the top and provided Koch with the playoff opportunity that he converted into a victory.

"The chances are 99 out of 100 that he'll make par or better on that hole," Koch said, and repeated: "I never thought I had a chance."

"It was fortunate for me, but very unfortunate for him."

Hallberg's lapse on the 72nd hole, was only one in a series of misfortunes experienced by leaders or would-be leaders in the final round.

Payne Stewart, who led through the second and third rounds, had it all go sour. From the lead, he shot 78, including 42 on the back nine, and finished in a tie for 23rd at 279.

Andy Bean, holding a 2-shot lead and apparently poised to run away from the pack, hooked his drive into the ice plant on the 14th, had a series of misadventures in the canyons leading down to the Pacific beaches and eventually staggered away from the hole with a triple bogey-7. He finished with a 72 and a tie for 7th at 274.

And Chip Beck came to 18th needing a birdie-4 to join the playoff. But he missed a putt from about 6-7 feet, shot a 70 and tied for third at 273 with Craig Stadler, Dan Pohl and Don Pooley. Stadler closed with a 67, while Pohl and Pooley each shot 68.

Tommy Nakajima, a tour member from Japan, set the course record with a 63 and vaulted into a tie for 11th at 275.

'Lucky' East Again Tops West, 154-145

DENVER (AP) — After the East All-Stars downed their West counterparts for a record fifth straight year, Isiah Thomas insisted that there was only one reason for the winning streak — luck.

"We've just been lucky. There are 24 great players out there and it's just luck that determines which side wins," Thomas said of the East's 154-145 overtime victory in the National Basketball Association's 34th Annual All-Star Game Sunday.

"I can't say we had better players, there were 24 great players out there today and we won, that's all," said Thomas, the game's Most Valuable Player.

After going scoreless in the first half, Thomas, of the Detroit Pistons, fueled a late East surge with deft ball-handling and 21 points to lift the East to victory.

"It's special to win. This game just takes care of itself," Thomas said. "Everything you do just seems to turn out right.

"My job today was to move the ball around and make things happen and keep everybody happy. I think everybody on our team was happy, because we all got involved with the game."

Thomas got 10 of his points in a third-quarter surge that saw the East squad steadily slice away at the West's 76-62 halftime advantage and narrow the gap to 107-99 at the end of the period.

"Everything I said in the dressing room at halftime they started to listen to in the third quarter," said the winning coach, K.C. Jones of the Boston Celtics.

With 3:50 left to go in regulation, the East had rolled to a 128-119 lead and appeared to have the game in hand.

But Seattle's Jack Sikma triggered a dramatic West rally, capped by Magic Johnson's basket that tied it at 132-132 with 20 seconds remaining.

Both teams had a chance to win in regulation, but a 20-footer by Boston's Larry Bird with about six seconds left only nicked the hoop. The West got the rebound, but a desperation jumper by the Lakers' Johnson from outside the three-point line hit only the backboard.

Thomas opened the overtime period with a three-point play, and the West never threatened after that.

Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers tossed in six of his game-high 34 points in overtime and the 76ers' Andrew Toney hit nine of his 13 points in the extra period.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles, making his record-tying 13th All-Star appearance, finished with 25 points to lead the West.

It was the third overtime game in NBA All-Star history, all won by the East, and the second in four years. The East's 154 points was an All-Star record, and so was the combined 299 points.

Johnson, of Los Angeles, and Sikma finished with 15 points apiece, and Kiki Vandeweghe of Denver had 14 for the West.

Bernard King of the New York Knicks, who helped key the East's second-half rally, wound up with 18 points.

The losing coach, Frank Layden of the Utah Jazz, said Thomas deserved the MVP award.

"Isiah had a great game. He hit some tremendous shots under pressure," Layden said. "He played well, they executed well, and made some really big baskets." Jones agreed.

"Isiah Thomas gets a capital 'A,'" Jones said. "He is so good. It's totally unusual to see a player who can do it all so well. He has the ability to make a pass and lead the break at 100 miles per hour. He can hit the outside jumper, too. Other than that, he's just an average ballplayer."

After the game, a smiling Thomas happily told a mob of reporters what the MVP award meant to him.

"We're the greatest basketball players in the world," he said. "There aren't any better players anywhere. The greatest basketball players in the world got together and played today. And I was the greatest player in the world today."

"You can't even imagine what it's like. There's no way to imagine it. I imagined this happening just like me marrying Princess Di," he said.

NFC Rolls To 45-3 Victory

HONOLULU (AP) — Joe Theismann, who helped the Washington Redskins become the highest-scoring club in National Football League history, brought his act to Hawaii and started the Pro Bowl scoreboard flashing.

Theismann shattered two Pro Bowl passing records and ignited an National Conference scoring onslaught that ended in a 45-3 victory over the American Conference in Sunday's all-star game. Both the 45 points and the margin of victory also were Pro Bowl records.

Theismann completed 21 of 27 passes, rewriting the Pro Bowl standard of 17 completions set by Dan Fouts last year, and threw for three touchdowns, tops ever in the annual NFC-AFC clash.

And he played just over half the game, sharing the quarterback duty with San Francisco's Joe Montana.

"You put a group like this together and football is really fun," said Theismann, who guided the Redskins to an NFL-record 541 points during the regular season.

Asked if his performance, which earned him Player of the Game honors, helped ease the pain of the Redskins' 38-9 Super Bowl loss to the Los Angeles Raiders a week ago, Theismann answered: "No, I didn't come out here for that."

While the National Conference's offense was piling up the points, its defense was throttling the potentially high-powered AFC offense.

The NFC logged a Pro Bowl-high eight sacks of San Diego's Fouts and Kansas City's Bill Kenney.

Tampa Bay's Lee Roy Selmon and Washington's Dave Butz logged two sacks apiece, and safety Nolan Cromwell of the Los Angeles Rams ran a Fouts interception 44 yards for a touchdown.

NFC Coach Bill Walsh of the San Francisco 49ers was duly impressed by the performance of his squad.

"I think this could be the greatest group of players ever put together on one team," he said. "The quarterbacks, the receivers, the linebackers and defensive linemen are particularly impressive."

"It's hard to explain how a game like this turns into such a one-sided affair ... We may have had a little more incentive since the NFC Redskins lost the Super Bowl last Sunday."

Although Theismann, who started off with 11 consecutive completions, had the most spectacular outing, a couple of NFC runners also turned in fine performances.

Atlanta's William Andrews included a pair of touchdown catches in his five receptions for 49 yards, and he also rushed six times for 43 yards.

Eric Dickerson of the Los Angeles Rams, who gained

1,808 yards to lead the league in rushing and become its top rookie runner ever, led the Pro Bowl rushers with 46 yards on 11 carries.

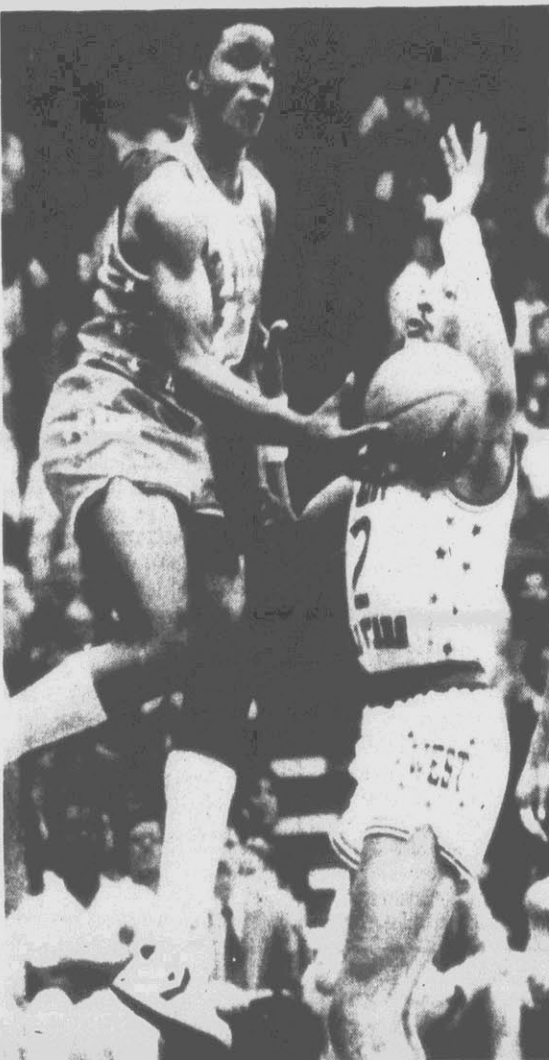

Fouts managed seven completions in just nine attempts for 103 yards, while Kenney connected on only seven of 32 throws for 80 yards.

"How many sacks did they have?" Kenney asked. "And that's not to mention the balls they knocked down. Both of my thumbs are jammed; this game was rough."

"We just made too many mistakes and the NFC took advantage of them," said Seattle's Chuck Knox, who coached the AFC squad.

Sarajevo Set For Olympics

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — More than one week before the Winter Olympics start, the host city is ready for the world.

The years of physical preparations have paid off. Now the Games are in the hands of the citizens and they seem anxious to please this invasion force of foreign journalists and athletes.

There was the case of two Olympic visitors who, on their first night in town, set out shopping for a deck of playing cards. Their taxi driver took them all over the city. After an hour or so, when he became convinced that the search would be fruitless, the driver solved the dilemma by simply taking the customers to his home and turning over two of his own, rather worn but still usable, decks.

There was no charge for the cards, but the cabbie's tip was substantial.

Americans can afford to be generous. The local currency is the dinar and each dollar produces about 127 of them. So a steak dinner costing 800 dinars is really less than $7, a culinary bargain.

A typical restaurant meal seems to go on and on with course after course delivered to the table. The food is well done and heavily spiced. You wash it all down with sljivovica. This plum brandy, pronounced slee-vo-veetsa, is a clear, rather innocent looking liquid which is anything but innocent. Even if you miss the pronunciation, the waiter will know what you want. And he will smile when you order it.

At one restaurant, strolling musicians played folk tunes but included a slice of Americana with a Yugoslavian rendition of "Oh, Susanna."

There is an old world charm about the city. The narrow, cobblestone streets and cramped shops are a culture shock for Americans accustomed to wide highways and sprawling shopping malls. Sarajevo also is secure. The city is swarming with police and soldiers, and they are not here to direct traffic.

Every key intersection even remotely involved with the Games is guarded, and passport checks, especially after midnight, are routine.

The security force carries machine guns and a no-nonsense air. If you look even mildly suspicious, they blow a shrill whistle. The whistle means stop and when you hear it, you don't ask questions. You stop.

Sometimes, they don't bother blowing the whistle. That's worse.

One adventurous group of reporters set out on a little walk their first night in town and decided, like your average Americans, to take a shortcut.

It was a mistake. They never realized they were on the border of the building housing Olympic officials, an ultra-sensitive area. Then, one of them felt the business end of the machine gun in his back.

His explanation, complete with frantic waving of press credentials, was fast and, fortunately, accepted. The group moved on, taking the long way around, and giving wide berth to the machine guns.

The rail link from Belgrade to Sarajevo is the Bosna Express and modern trains make the daily runs of 230 miles or so. People stop along the way to watch the trains bearing the Olympic Logo pass by. The cars are in marked contrast to the regular drab green commuter ones that run here and look like something straight out of a 1940 Peter Lorre movie.

The trip is mostly over flat lands and you could just as easily be riding through the midwestern United States.

It seems to snow in sections here with long stretches of snow-covered roads abruptly changing to grass-covered countryside with no trace of winter. In Sarajevo itself, there is no snow to speak of and on Sunday, it rained for most of the day.

Ask about the snow — these are, after all, the Winter Olympics — and a guide smiles and gestures toward the mountains. When it is time for the competition, she promises, there will be snow.

Costello Whips Curry For WBA Light Title

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — The punches might have come easily, but the words did not for Billy Costello, the new World Boxing Council super lightweight champion after a 10th-round technical knockout of Bruce Curry.

"I'm at a loss for words, I just feel so good right now," said Costello, 27, after the Sunday night championship bout at the Beaumont Civic Center. "It hasn't hit me yet, I'd like to thank God, and my trainer," Victor Valle.

Costello's eyes filled with tears, and Valle rushed up to embrace him. After regaining his composure, Costello, of Kingston, N.Y., said he had been confident of victory going into the fight, and that Curry, from Fort Worth, Texas, was open for left hooks constantly.

"He was open and I just was biding my time," Costello said. "That's why I just laid there and countered him. I knew sooner or later that I was going to catch him with combinations."

Referee Richard Steele stopped the scheduled 12-round bout 56 seconds into the 10th.

The victory kept Costello's record unblemished at 27-0 with 17 knockouts. Costello, who came in at the 140-pound limit, appeared to be just too strong for the 27-year-old Curry, 139½, who saw his career record drop to 34-8. The fight with Costello was the third defense of the crown Curry won from LeRoy Haley in May of 1983.

Curry tired noticeably in the seventh through ninth rounds as his legs began to fail him and his punching power diminished.

A left hook followed by an overhand right dropped Curry for an eight-count early in the 10th. He struggled to his feet and retreated to a corner where Costello pummeled him with lefts and rights.

League Real Winner

DENVER (AP) — The real winner in the National Basketball Association's 34th All-Star game was the league itself, said the coach of the losing side.

And Frank Layden, for at least the second time in two days, could not resist taking a shot at sports spectacle which recently fell a bit short of expectations.

"You heard all the Super Bowl hype for a month and you saw what they got," he said, referring to the Los Angeles Raiders' 38-9 thumping of the Washington Redskins. "This was a very intense game, a very professionally played game. In the Super Bowl, the hype deflated like a dirigible."

In fact, they stayed past the scheduled end as the back-and-forth game wound up in a 132-132 deadlock in regulation.

In overtime, the East All-Stars, led by Isiah Thomas, Julius Erving and Andrew Toney, took command and kept it to emerge with an unprecedented fifth straight All-Star victory, 154-145.

"This was a great All-Star game and showed what our game really is," said Layden, coach of the Utah Jazz. Layden's West squad looked for all the world like it would break the East stranglehold as it bolted to a 14-point halftime lead and led by eight entering the final period.

But it was not to be. With Erving scoring a game-high 34 points and Thomas, the Detroit Pistons' 6-foot-1 guard, dishing out 15 assists and scoring 21 points, the East increased its lead in the 34-year matchup to 23-11.

Thomas, the shortest man on the floor, was voted the game's Most Valuable Player, but it was Toney who scored nine points in overtime.

"They came to me a few times down the stretch and set it up so I was isolated," said the Philadelphia 76er guard, a teammate of Erving's.

The unlikely hero of them all for the East was Detroit center Bill Laimbeer, who was named as a replacement for Philadelphia Center Moses Malone after Malone, who led all players in fan balloting, had to drop out with an ankle injury. Laimbeer did not score in the first three quarters, but rammed home 13 points in the fourth when the East caught up and went ahead.

"Isiah hit me in position for a few easy baskets," he said. "I was just in the right spot at the right time. If Moses hadn't sprained his ankle, I would have been waiting in Cleveland for our next practice."

Thomas, who was the NBA's youngest all-star ever when named to the team two years ago at the age of 20, made no effort to disguise his happiness at winning the MVP trophy.

"On this day in Denver I was the greatest basketball player in the world," he said. "I can tell my kids, my mom, and my brothers I was the world's best. I may not be the best tomorrow, though."

Lewis Thinks He Can Break 30-Foot Barrier

NEW YORK (AP) — Carl Lewis has been threatening to become the first long jumper to break the 30-foot barrier, and he thinks this is the year he will make it.

"I think I can beat the world record outdoors this year, and I think I can jump 30 feet," he said Friday night after smashing his world indoor best with a remarkable leap of 28 feet, 10½ inches in the Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden.

Lewis' winning effort, on his final attempt, equalled the second-longest jump ever — indoors or outdoors — and was 9¼ inches farther than the previous world indoor best of 28-1 that he had set nearly two years ago.

The 22-year-old from Willingboro, N.J., ranked the world's No. 1 long jumper, also had soared 28-10¼ in the USA Championships last summer at Indianapolis. The world record is 29-2½, by Bob Beamon of the United States in the 7,400-foot altitude of Mexico City in the 1968 Olympic Games. Lewis, the 1983 world champion and the overwhelming favorite to win the gold medal in this year's Los Angeles Olympics, came close to breaking the 30-foot mark in the 1982 National Sports Festival at Indianapolis.

One jump, on which it appeared he had broken the barrier, was ruled a foul. Even the mild-mannered Lewis protested, contending he not stepped beyond the foul line on the takeoff board. Officials, however, overruled him.

Later, the jump was measured at 30-4.

Surprisingly, in the Millrose Games, Lewis, the final jumper in the competition, was trailing Larry Myricks going into his last attempt. Myricks had matched his career indoor best with a leap of 27-6 on his final try. Lewis' best until that point was 27-2¾.

A loose board at the start of the runway had been giving him trouble in his approach to the takeoff board. After Lewis' fifth jump, Coach Tom Tellez told him to move the start of his run back about a foot.

He did — and it worked perfectly.

Lewis also had help from his sister, Carol, the American indoor record holder in the women's long jump. She held down the takeoff board as her brother made his thunderous rush down the runway.

"When a long jumper gets a good one, he knows it right away," said Lewis. "As soon as I left the board, I knew it was at least 28-6."

It was a lot longer than that — 4¼ inches longer, to be exact, and exactly 4¼ inches short of Beamon's record.

It was a remarkable jump, especially in view of the short runway and the hard landing pit.

"This was my best jump ever, indoors or outdoors," reasoned Lewis.

The start of the long jump competition had been delayed more than a half-hour when it was discovered that the long jump pit was "only" 28-4. That hardly would have been enough for the incomparable Lewis.

Kansas upset Victim Of Villanova

By The Associated Press

Even games on consecutive days couldn't slow down North Carolina, yet the nation's top-ranked basketball team may be in for trouble because of an injury.

The 17-0 Tar Heels overcame a strong first-half effort by No. 10 Louisiana State Sunday, pulling away in the last 20 minutes to a 90-79 victory. That was on the heels on Saturday's 73-61 victory over Georgia Tech.

In the LSU game, however, North Carolina lost freshman guard Kenny Smith indefinitely with a fractured left wrist. North Carolina led 78-71 when Smith was sent sprawling as he drove for a layup. LSU's John Tudor was called for a flagrant foul and the Tar Heels' Michael Jordan, angered by the play, shoved Tudor to the floor and was assessed a technical foul.

"I know (Tudor) didn't do it on purpose," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "Michael won't come to a teammate's defense like that again." LSU Coach Dale Brown, whose team also lost 80-78 to unranked Auburn Friday night, said, "I thought it was a lack of confidence on our part down the stretch. You don't match basket for basket against the top-ranked team on the road."

As for the fouls by Tudor and Jordan, Brown said, "Tudor didn't try to hurt anybody. It was an aggressive foul. But, according to the rules, Jordan should have been ejected."

Brown was not unsympathetic of Jordan's actions, explaining, "I would have done the same thing. He was protecting one of his players."

Jordan scored 23 of his season-high 29 points against LSU in the second half as North Carolina overcame a 37-34 halftime deficit. Sam Perkins added 19 points and a career-high 17 rebounds for the Tar Heels.

Meanwhile, No. 16 Arkansas lost 58-54 to unranked Villanova at Philadelphia Sunday. Dwayne McClain scored 20 points, including a tip-in with three seconds left, to pace Villanova.

On Saturday, No. 2 DePaul routed 15th-ranked UCLA 84-68; Notre Dame tripped fifth-ranked Maryland 52-47; Marquette upended 14th-ranked Louisiana 65-60; third-ranked Kentucky stomped No. 18 Georgia 64-40; No. 4 Georgetown ran past Pittsburgh 63-52; sixth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas turned back Fullerton State 82-75 in overtime; No. 7 Houston trounced Baylor 84-58; Eighth-ranked Texas El Paso tripped New Mexico 60-59; No. 9 Illinois outlasted Michigan 75-66 in four overtimes; No. 11 Oklahoma fell to 13th-ranked Memphis State 69-65; No. 17 Wake Forest got past No. 19 Virginia 84-76, and No. 20 Syracuse defeated St. John's 78-74 in overtime.

Villanova, which lost to Notre Dame on national television a week earlier, got the big plays from McClain Sunday.

"It was a very big game for us," said McClain. "We didn't want to lose two weeks in a row on national TV."

For Arkansas, it was the second straight loss. The Razorbacks lost to unheralded Rice 65-62 Friday night.

Tyrone Corbin scored 18 points and Kevin Holmes had 17 and sparked a second-half burst for DePaul that buried UCLA. A 15-4 spree moved DePaul to a 76-56 lead and the Blue Demons, now 16-0, were able to coast the rest of the way at UCLA's Pauley Pavilion, where UCLA has lost only 18 games in 19 years.

Kenny Fields had 16 points for the Bruins, but only two in the second half, and Ralph Jackson was held to 12.

"We wanted to contain Kenny Fields and Ralph Jackson and dominate the boards," said DePaul Coach Ray Meyer. "We certainly did that."

Unranked Notre Dame came up with its sixth straight victory as Tom Sluby scored a game-high 19 points and helped ice the triumph with five points in the last two minutes.

Marquette ambushed Louisville on its homecourt as Kerry Trotter's 3-point play put the Warriors on top 53-50 with 3:50 remaining. That was Marquette's first lead of the second half, but the Warriors stayed in front with the help of 10 free throws in 12 tries.

Top Ten

Melvin Turpin tossed in 18 points and pulled down nine rebounds, leading Kentucky past Georgia. The Wildcats scored 18 straight points in the second half, holding off Georgia for 10 1/2 minutes with a tough zone defense.

Georgetown's Patrick Ewing scored 20 points, grabbed nine rebounds and blocked five shots, against outmanned Pitt. Frank James hit two free throws in overtime to help Nevada-Las Vegas beat Fullerton State. The Runnin' Rebels hit 15 of 21 free throw attempts in the overtime.

Seven-foot Akeem Olujuwon had five dunks, 22 points and 12 rebounds for Houston as the Cougars, in beating Baylor, gained their 31st consecutive Southwest Conference triumph. Luster Goodwin hit a jumper with six seconds left to give UTEP a come-from-behind victory over New Mexico.

Efrem Winters scored 23 points and keyed a flurry of free throws in the fourth overtime period, carrying Illinois to its marathon victory over Michigan. The four overtimes were two short of the Big Ten's record of six overtimes, set by Minnesota and Purdue in 1955.

Second Ten

Keith Lee ended a scoring slump with 22 points and grabbed 18 rebounds, leading Memphis State over Oklahoma. Lee, a 6-foot-10 junior who had scored only four points in each of his last two games, outplayed Oklahoma All-American Wayman Tisdale, who was held to 12 points.

Mark Cline scored 20 points and Delaney Rudd added 18 as Wake Forest broke open a close game in the second half and beat Virginia. Andre Hawkins assisted on one basket and scored two in the first 1:06 of overtime and Syracuse survived seven consecutive misses on one-and-one free throw opportunities late in the game to beat St. John's.

Steckel New Mike Coach

HONOLULU (AP) — Continuity has been a hallmark of the Minnesota Vikings in their 23 years of existence, and their new coach seems well-suited to carry on the tradition.

Les Steckel, a Vikings' assistant who was formally announced Sunday as the successor to Bud Grant, is only the third head coach in the club's history.

"I'm fortunate to get this job with a great organization and I'm fortunate to inherit some fine football players," said Steckel, who has a three-year contract with the club. "I think it will be a nice, smooth transition."

"Consistency is one thing we have in common," Steckel said of the man he's replacing. "Consistency is a fiber that runs through Bud Grant, and I realize how important it is to have consistency in your lifestyle and in your approach to football."

Steckel, boyish-looking at 37, obviously is very highly regarded by Vikings President Max Winter, General Manager Mike Lynn, and by Grant, who will remain with the organization in a yet-to-be-determined role.

Grant, who flew into Hawaii to inform Winter of his decision to quit, formally announced Saturday that he was ending his coaching career so that he could have more time for other interests.

He said he told Steckel a few years ago that he had the potential to be a head coach in the National Football League.

"I also told him to be patient," said the 56-year-old Grant. "We talked a lot about

SKI ANNIVERSARY WOODSTOCK, Vt. (AP) — The first ski tow came into being on the Woodstock slopes in 1934 and the area is celebrating its 50th anniversary this winter with a three-month long observance.

Parts from the original tow, which was powered by a Model T Ford truck, were found in a nearby barn last summer. The plan is to reassemble all the parts for one last sentimental journey at Gilbert Hill.

Steckel has been called a perfectionist and a "workaholic," and he added, "I say, 'What's wrong with a guy who works hard and tries to do a good job?'"

The new coach said he could hardly believe the swift turn of events that thrust him into the job.

"I was shocked when Bud announced he was retiring," Steckel said. "Bud called me Friday night and told me they were offering me the job. Saturday I flew to Hawaii."

"I'm still kind of numb from it all."

Cher Surprised, MacLaine Confident Over Award

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Cher was a surprised winner, but Shirley MacLaine was frankly confident of her victory as the Hollywood Foreign Press Association handed out its 41st annual Golden Globe awards.

"I did expect this," Miss MacLaine said as she picked up a best dramatic actress award, one of four won Saturday night for the movie "Terms of Endearment."

Saw Factor In A Crisis

SEATTLE (AP) — New York Metropolitan Opera star Jerome Hines says an appearance he made in Moscow at a critical time in U.S.-Soviet relations may have helped defuse the Cuban missile crisis.

Hines, who was in Seattle to perform in Verdi's "La Forza del Destino," recalled that Soviet ships carrying nuclear missiles were en route to Cuba and President Kennedy had proclaimed the U.S. naval blockade of the island when he was on stage in Moscow in the title role of "Boris Godunov" in October 1962.

The 62-year-old singer, an evangelical Christian, said he'd prayed that God would send Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev to the performance that night.

As the curtain rose, the 6-foot-6 Hines, whose booming bass voice has won him starring roles all over the world, marched out behind a minor player carrying a banner of Christ. "I thought, 'OK, commies, here's your Savior,'" Hines recalled.

The film, tracing the rocky but loving relationship between an overbearing widow and her daughter, also snagged best drama, best screenplay and a supporting actor award for Jack Nicholson.

But Miss MacLaine was the movie's only winner to accept in person at ceremonies taped for nationwide television broadcast later.

"Give me these things and I show up every time," she quipped. "I sure deserve it."

Cher, the singer who was honored for her supporting performance as the troubled friend of an anti-nuclear activist in "Silkwood," won appreciative applause from a

Beverly Hilton hotel audience that seemed to enjoy her revealing black leather miniskirt as much as her funny, flustered acceptance.

"I don't have any speech prepared because I just didn't think I was going to win this," she said. "Just look at my dress until I can think of something."

When the laughter died down, she thanked her mother, former husband Sonny Bono and her two children "for believing in me when all you Hollywood moguls wouldn't give me a job."

Another winner who professed astonishment was Julie Walters, who co-hosted the awards show with John

Forsythe of television's "Dynasty" and was named best actress in a comedy for her performance as a hairdresser-turned-scholar in "Educating Rita."

"Blimey!" Miss Walters exclaimed. "This looks like it's a fix, (but) you know it's not — they sent my $2 back."

Michael Caine, who co-starred as Miss Walters' alcoholic university don, won the comedy actor award.

"Yentl," Barbra Streisand's musical about an Eastern European woman who passes for a man in order to attend yeshiva at a time when such studies were forbidden to women, earned best musical and best director honors.

"I feel very grateful to have had the opportunity to make this film, and that to me is its own reward," said Miss Streisand, who produced, directed, co-wrote and starred in the movie.

"Flashdance" won awards for its score and the hit song "Flashdance... What a Feeling."

The best dramatic actor award was shared by Tom Courtenay, who played an elderly actor's servant in "The Dresser," and Robert Duvall, the aging country singer in "Tender Mercies."

"Fanny and Alexander," Swedish director Ingmar Bergman's saga of love and loss in a well-to-do turn-of-the-century family, was named best foreign film.

Paul Newman was the previously announced winner of the Cecil B. de Mille award, presented by the foreign press association's board of directors to honor career achievement.

In television categories, the big winner was "The Thorn Birds," a miniseries about an Australian outback family. It earned the best miniseries or TV film award, the miniseries actor award for Richard Chamberlain and supporting player honors for Barbara Stanwyck and Richard Kiley.

Forsythe won the drama series-actor award for "Dynasty," which was also named best drama series.

President Reagan's former wife, Jane Wyman, picked up the drama series actress award for "Falcon Crest," while Ann-Margret won the miniseries-film actress award for her portrayal of a dying mother in "Who Will Love My Children?"

In comedy series categories, "Fame" was named best show, Joanna Cassidy of "Buffalo Bill" best actress and John Ritter of "Three's Company" best actor.

STUMPED FOR WORDS — Cher, giggling with surprise at winning a Golden Globe award, said "Just look at my dress while I think a minute." (AP Laserphoto)

RETIRING — Veteran NBC News correspondent Edwin Newman, 65, is retiring after his last scheduled appearance Tuesday night on The David Letterman Show. Newman's career with the network spans 35 years. (AP Laserphoto)

Advising Higher Pay, Standards

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt's education commission is recommending better pay and working conditions for the state's public school teachers and tougher promotion and graduation standards for students.

Those and other recommendations are included in the commission's 22-page draft blueprint submitted this weekend to the advisory committee of the N.C. Commission on Education for Economic Growth.

The advisory committee is scheduled to review the plan on Tuesday and propose changes. The full commission will receive the plan Feb. 14.

The draft by the governor's commission also calls for establishing a cabinet to coordinate education reform, a commission that would recommend in January 1985 a "career-growth program" for teachers and a short-term commission to consider consolidation of the state's teacher-education programs.

The commission, a panel of business, community and education leaders appointed by Hunt, is scheduled to make its report in April. It held four public hearings late last year and this month to gather public comments on education reform.

The draft proposal recommends the 1984 Legislature appropriate funds to increase the teacher salary range, currently $13,660 to $19,680. The staff left blank the level of funding needed this year, but recommended using several steps to reach a range of $18,000 to $34,000 a year for teachers who have completed a two-year period of initial certification.

It also recommends the governor and Legislature appoint a commission to develop a salary schedule for outstanding teacher who assume additional responsibilities.

It also calls for freeing teachers from non-instructional duties as much as possible and developing an evaluation process for teachers.

The report says the state should continue the minimum competency test as a requirement for graduation, but should review requirements in a proposed new curriculum.

Promotion from each grade should be based on successful performance on specified requirements in the new curriculum, the staff said. High school graduation would be based in part on successful completion of the new competency standards.

The report says the state should fund free summer schools for students not successfully meeting requirements for promotion from grades 3, 6 and 9.

Local school boards should also prepare a plan for free Saturday schools manned primarily by volunteers, to provide enrichment classes, tutoring sessions and extracurricular activities, the report said.

Recants Her Testimony

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — A 22-year-old woman who received a life sentence in a plea bargain now says she committed a murder for which two men received a death sentence.

In a statement filed in the Cabarrus Clerk of Court's office Friday, Betty Jean Howie says she alone stabbed Edith Ritch to death July 8, 1981. She gave the statement to attorneys for Francis Marion Anthony and Andrew Weddington "Sonny" Craig, who were sentenced to death in the slaying based on her testimony.

"Peace be unto you. Of my own free will I want to correct a lie that has caused Frances and Sonnie to suffer," the statement read. "I did stab the woman. No one helped me. I've found the Lord in my life and I know I'm doing the right thing..."

Attorneys Jim Johnson and Erwin Spainhour of Concord said Ms. Howie wrote her statement Jan. 18 in their presence. They have filed a postconviction motion asking the two men's convictions be set aside and charges against them dismissed.

Anthony and Craig, both of Charlotte, were convicted of first-degree murder in Cabarrus Superior Court March 3, 1982. They were first scheduled to die May 20, 1982, but the execution was automatically stayed when they appealed. A new execution date has not been set.

Mrs. Ritch's body was found under a truck beneath a bridge with more than 30 knife wounds to the chest area. Ms. Howie testified she, Anthony and Craig attacked Mrs. Ritch and her husband, who were drinking under the bridge.

She said they beat the husband, took his truck battery and radio convertor and left him for dead on the river bank. She said they then stabbed the wife to death.

She told court officials she didn't know why the three committed the crimes.

Believe Arson In Hotel Fire

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A 14-story hotel damaged in a smoky weekend arson fire that injured 34 people has partially reopened, its management said.

Fire department spokeswoman Leslie Brewington said investigators are convinced the blaze at the Howard Johnson's, which sent 300 guests scrambling to balconies in the predawn hours Saturday, was "definitely" set by an arsonist. Police had no suspects however, said department spokesman Jack Stacey.

The blaze started in a small lobby area outside an elevator on the seventh floor of the 8-year-old hotel, Stacey said. Investigators are convinced arson is involved because of burn marks found at the scene and the way the fire spread through the building, he said.

Old Salt

The Great Salt Lake in Utah has risen 5.2 feet since September of 1982. That is the highest seasonal rise ever measured during the 136 years of record keeping. The rapid rise has caused an estimated $250 million dollars in damage. The Great Salt Lake has never frozen over. It is only about 13 feet deep. But it is the remnant of a much larger lake that was 1,000 feet deep. The lake is salty because its waters do not drain away, but instead evaporate.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the capital city of Utah?

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South vulnerable, you hold:

♠AK5 ♥83 ♦K98 ♠AKJ74

The bidding has proceeded:

East South West North

1 ♥ Dble Pass 2 ♣

Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—You have a very good hand indeed. Nevertheless, you need fair values from partner if you are to make 11 tricks at a club contract; three no trump is the most likely game, provided that partner can control hearts. Therefore, we would do no more than bid three clubs now. This is a most encouraging move, and if partner shows any signs of life, we will, of course, bid game.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A6 ♥K8654 ♦KQ8 ♠QJ10

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

2 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—There are those who would bid three clubs to see whether they might get a three heart preference from partner. However, we have seen suit contracts go down on a bad break when there are 12 tricks off the top at no trump. With your 15 points and balanced hand facing a partner who has a balanced 19-20, we would make the value bid of six no trump.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KQ987 ♥KJ98 ♦K107 ♠8

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♣ Pass 2 ♦ Pass

2 ♥ Pass 3 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—We know many players who would bid three no trump now without giving any thought to what partner is saying. Partner has a good hand with at least five diamonds and, probably, four clubs. While it might be right to play three no trump, you cannot rule out a game, or levels as early as next month, Blanton said. Meanwhile, state agencies have been testing groundwater and grain for EDB and state officials are compiling data for setting interim state standards in case EPA does not act quickly.

The Environmental Protection Agency in September issued an emergency order stopping the manufacture and sale of EDB as a grain fumigant, but Blanton said the order did not prohibit its use on grain by people who already had it.

The EPA could issue regulations on EDB tolerance even slam, in spades, hearts or diamonds. Just complete the picture of your hand by bidding three diamonds. You don't have to do more—the auction is forcing to game.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South, with 60 on score, you hold:

♠AQ8 ♥KQ7 ♦AQ98 ♠J53

The bidding has proceeded:

East South West North

1 ♣ Dble 1 NT Pass

Pass Dble Pass 2 ♥

Pass Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—You have done all you can. Partner knows that you have a strong hand because you have, to all intents and purposes, forced the bidding to the two-level vulnerable against two opponents who are in the auction. If partner had anything, he would have competed further. Pass, and try to defeat them.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AJ52 ♥A85 ♦AQ ♠KQJ3

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♣ Pass 1 ♦ Pass

2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Perhaps you should have opened two no trump. On this auction, it is a close call between a jump to four spades and a jump shift. With your wealth of controls and excellent fit, we feel that a jump to four spades doesn't quite do your hand justice. Therefore, we would start with a jump to three diamonds, then support spades later.

Q.6—As South vulnerable, you hold:

♠A9852 ♦J107 ♠AK1076

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♣ Pass 1 ♦ Pass

1 ♣ Pass 2 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—You opened one club with the intention of bidding spades twice to tell partner that you have at least ten cards in the black suits, and we see no reason why you should change your mind now. The problem comes if partner then bids three no trump—should you stay there, or should you remove to four diamonds to show your three-card support for partner's suit?

Much Wheat Contaminated

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina mill owners who were found to have wheat treated with a cancer-causing pesticide in storage bins are being educated about the fumigants they use by state officials.

Leonard F. Blanton, food and drug protection division director, told the state Pesticide Board Thursday that large quantities of wheat treated with ethylene dibromide have been found in mills across the state.

He said although officials thought North Carolina's 20 grain mills had stopped fumigating wheat with the cancer-causing pesticide, a considerable amount of EDB-treated wheat was in storage.

In some cases, he said, wheat had already been treated with EDB when it arrived at the mills. He said mill operators would not know if the wheat had been treated unless they did sophisticated tests.

"We've done a lot in the past few weeks to educate the mills as to the fumigants they are using," he said.

Blanton said that some mill owners learned for the first time from state inspectors that the trade-name pesticide they were using contained EDB.

He said officials knew of one mill that had about 90,000 bushels of wheat treated with EDB. He said he did not know how many bushels of wheat treated with EDB were in storage statewide.

"When (mills) have large quantities of wheat, they may have a problem they can not do anything about," Blanton said. He said mills that operated year-round received supplies of wheat grown in the state and in the Midwest.

The Environmental Protection Agency in September issued an emergency order stopping the manufacture and sale of EDB as a grain fumigant, but Blanton said the order did not prohibit its use on grain by people who already had it.

The EPA could issue regulations on EDB tolerance
