Negotiation Bid Hint Arms Control Trade-Offs

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, seeking an election-year breakthrough in stalled arms control talks, is telling the Soviet Union that it might trade some U.S. strategic advantages to limit other Soviet nuclear weapons. The United States will also consider merging two separate sets of talks involving long-range nuclear missiles and nuclear weapons in Europe, chief U.S. arms control negotiator Edward Rowny said Monday. "We believe our advantages in bombers and cruise missiles can be traded off for their advantages in (land-based) ballistic missiles," Rowny said, suggesting one proposal. A day after President Reagan formally announced that he is a candidate for re-election, Rowny met with Reagan at the White House and then sounded the conciliatory note toward the Soviets. Rowny denied there was a political motive in the timing of the meeting, but polls have consistently shown that one of Reagan's weakest areas is foreign relations and arms control. "The president has always had a deep commitment to arms control," Rowny said. "He's not going to make arms control a political issue." Rowny said that if the Soviets agree to resume the talks, the United States is willing to offer "trade-offs." "We are now in a position, when we return to the table, to make a breakthrough," Rowny said. "It's in their interest to come back." Reagan, asked about the prospect of resuming nuclear arms control talks with the Soviets, charged. "They are the ones who have been adamant." He said the United States remains flexible and his message to Moscow is: "We'll be at the table. Come on back." He spoke on ABC's "Good Morning America" in an interview taped Monday for broadcast today. Rowny heads the U.S. team that was negotiating to try to limit long-range nuclear arms in the START talks. A separate effort was aimed at cutting nuclear weapons in Europe, but the Soviets ended both negotiations when new U.S. nuclear-tipped Pershing 2 and cruise missiles were deployed in Western Europe last month.

Lawmakers Offered Red Ink Budget

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is kicking off his sales campaign for an approximately $925 billion, red-ink budget for the 1985 fiscal year with a White House meeting of Republican legislators.

The budget for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 will not be submitted to Congress officially until Wednesday, but the president summoned GOP members of the House and Senate today for a discussion of the spending plan which is expected to project a deficit of $180 billion.

While details of the budget have not been revealed publicly by the administration, its outlines have leaked out steadily for the past several weeks, including:

—A request for about $305 billion in military spending authority, about an 18 percent increase from the current authority.

—Startup money for an $8 billion manned space station.

—Net domestic spending cuts of $4 billion to $5 billion.

—Tax increases, through the closing of various loopholes, of about $8 billion.

—More money for the Environmental Protection Agency.

—About a 6 percent increase, about $200 million, in the Justice Department's budget, primarily to strengthen crime fighting activities.

Meanwhile, Reagan's call for bipartisan talks on trimming $100 billion from federal budget deficits remains on hold while congressional Democrats await the details of the budget and any new ideas Reagan has to offer for cutting the record deficits — which are projected to remain at about $200 billion a year without action.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., remained skeptical of Reagan's invitation for talks, which have yet to materialize since last Wednesday when Reagan issued his election-year offer for a bipartisan congressional delegation to discuss deficit reduction measures with White House officials.

No meetings are expected until after the president sends his fiscal 1985 budget to Congress on Wednesday.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday that the administration was "prepared to sit down and negotiate" and he insisted the president's offer was "no play."

O'Neill, however, said, "He's (Reagan) playing the game of ... pass the buck to the group you invite down (to the White House) so it's cleared from your desk."

Asked if he thinks the talks are a "phony trick," O'Neill nodded affirmatively and replied, "My opinion."

O'Neill said Democrats will not be drawing up any plans of their own before they hear specifics from the administration. "My team will be coming down (to the White House) to listen," O'Neill said.

In a related development, some House Democrats, led by Reps. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., chairman of the House Democratic campaign committee, and David R. Obey, D-Wis., have discussed the idea of giving Reagan the "line-item veto" he requested last week in his State of the Union address.

Reagan wants the authority to hold down government spending by vetoing individual items in money bills instead of the entire bill, as he must do under current law.

Campaign strategists have said that giving Reagan that authority on an "experimental" basis for one year — the 1984 election year — would put him on the spot to actually start cutting programs.

O'Neill said a deal is being discussed to grant the line-item veto for a year, if the president agrees to freeze military spending for a year.

However, O'Neill emphasized he is not endorsing such a plan.

"I'd have to look into it far deeper," O'Neill said.

In the Senate, Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said that at Reagan's request he will be reconsidering his opposition to the line-item veto.

Shiite Militia Say Clash With Marines 'Accident'

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem militia leaders today ordered their fighters to observe a cease-fire and described as "accidental" the series of battles Monday that killed one U.S. Marine and three Lebanese civilians. Three other Marines were wounded in the day-long clashes, and spokesmen for the Shiite militia group Amal and at south Beirut hospitals said the Marines' fire killed a 9-year-old girl and two other civilians, and wounded 22 people.

An Amal spokesman said militiamen in Shiite neighborhoods near the Marine base at Beirut's airport were told to "strictly adhere to the ceasefire and refrain from any form of attacks on the Marines."

"Yesterday's collision was accidental, not the result of a particular animosity by either side," said the spokesman at Amal headquarters. "Our men said the Marines fired first and they (the Marines) said they fired because they were shelled."

"Things have been straightened out mainly through direct communication between the Amal command and the Marine command," said the spokesman, who asked to remain anonymous. The cease-fire took effect Monday night.

Lebanon's state radio said U.S. jets from warships offshore staged reconnaissance runs at dawn today over the city and the surrounding hills. Residents said the planes released scarlet heat balloons to deflect ground-to-air missiles, but radio stations said the jets drew no ground fire.

The Marine who died Monday was the 259th member of the peacekeeping force killed in Lebanon since the Marines were deployed in Beirut in September 1982. His name has been withheld until his family is notified. Four other U.S. servicemen not in the peacekeeping force were killed when the U.S. Embassy was bombed last April. Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said that in each of Monday's clashes, the Marines fired only after they were attacked.

"We have no way of knowing what we hit, and what casualties there were," Brooks said. "We are sorry about any civilian casualties, but the bottom line is that we are taking fire from the area and we have to defend ourselves."

In the Shiite neighborhood of Hay el-Sellum, Amal fighters showed Associated Press reporters a school bus with four bullet holes in one side and fresh blood on two of the 12 seats. The bus was carrying children from a Shiite school when it was hit, the Amal militia said.

Airport officials said four other Lebanese civilians suffered shrapnel wounds in shelling Monday that forced suspension of air traffic for two hours in the morning and one hour in the afternoon.

Today, Brooks said the Marine base was "very quiet."

Asked about the wounded marine who was evacuated for treatment on a Navy ship offshore, Brooks said: "The best I've been able to come up with so far is stable. We're still checking with the doctors."

The other two wounded

Marines were treated on shore and returned to duty.

President Reagan's Middle East envoy, Donald Rumsfeld, was in Jerusalem today, after meeting twice Monday in Damascus with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam. Syria backs anti-government militia forces in Lebanon and has an estimated 30,000 troops there.

Rumsfeld told reporters that Khaddam suggested, "I have been wrongly briefed in Washington and that I should stay here a couple of days in order to allow him to brief me on the situation."

Beirut radio stations said a focal point in the mediators' efforts is replacement of the multinational force in Beirut with United Nations troops from neutral nations.

Anti-government Druse militiamen of Walid Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party took no part in the hostilities Monday, a party statement said. But it reported Druse gunners were involved in artillery and rocket duels with Lebanese troops on the Souk el-Gharb Hills above the Marine base.

The Druse are a secretive sect whose creed is based on Islam.

Indicators Now Point 'Upward'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main gauge of future economic strength rose 0.6 percent in December, the 15th increase in the last 16 months, the Commerce Department said today.

The forecasting gauge, the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, is a compilation of a dozen forward-pointing statistics including figures on employment, inflation, stock market prices and orders for goods that will be produced in the future.

The increase in December reversed a dip of 0.2 percent in November, which had been the first drop in the index after 14 straight advances during which the index posted strong month-to-month jumps as the nation pulled out of the 1981-82 recession.

However, the decline for November was revised to a slight 0.2 percent drop rather than the preliminary estimate last month of a 0.4 percent decrease.

The 0.6 percent increase for December appeared to bolster the Reagan administration's predictions that the economic recovery will continue through 1984.

Today's report said that four of the 11 available indicators rose in December, with the biggest contribution coming from a change in business and consumer borrowing.

Judge Running For Reelection

Judge H. Horton Rountree announced today that he is a candidate for re-election as District Court judge in the 3rd Judicial District, which includes Pitt, Craven, Carteret and Pamlico counties.

In his announcement statement, Rountree said, "Our judicial district, with East Carolina University, the Marine Air Station at Cherry Point, and the tourist attractions of Carteret and Pamlico counties, poses a variety of problems for the judicial system. I feel that my 30 years experience in the practice of law in all courts and my 14 years in the General Assembly, where the development of the Uniform Court System was one of my priorities, have given me an insight into the performance of my duties as a judge."

Rountree has been solicitor of the Pitt County Recorder's Court, commissioner of the town of Farmville, assistant attorney general of North Carolina, a seven-term

NECKLACE FOUND

Mrs. Bernie Dean Worthington found a gold necklace in front of New Planters Bank in Ayden around Jan. 1. She has advertised extensively to locate the owner and has not. The person who lost the necklace may claim it by calling 746-3269 and correctly describing it.

PET FOSTER HOMES SOUGHT

The Pitt County Humane Society has asked Hotline to make an urgent appeal for persons to provide foster homes for the many cats and dogs now being kept temporarily by the society.

"These abandoned pets would be 'pound-bound' were it not for the few volunteers who are trying to accommodate the load," Christina Purinton of the Humane Society said. "If you have a fenced yard with a sheltered dog house, garage or shed and are willing to keep a dog and/or puppies until they are adopted, the Humane Society will provide food and guidance. Temporary indoor homes for cats also are needed. There are still cold nights ahead this winter and the plight of these animals, especially nursing mothers and pups, is of great concern."

Anyone who can help is asked to call Bobbie Parsons, 756-1268, immediately. Volunteers are also needed to help with existing facilities, especially on Saturdays, Mrs. Purinton said.

To be eligible for consideration by the national committee as a recipient for the Bronze Keystone Award, a person must have served 15 years or more as a full-time professional worker or member, and must have achieved outstanding results in Boys Club work.

Triplett was presented the award by Griff Garner, vice president for special projects.

After that presentation, club President Ed Stanley cited the years of service at different locations by Executive Director Chet Emerson and presented him the Bronze Keystone Award, the highest award of the national Boys Club of America.

Triplett, a sophomore at D.H. Conley High School, is the son of Charles and Judy Triplett. Selection of a member of the club for the youth of the year award is based on several criteria, including attendance, academic achievement, attitudes, and club or community involvement.

Triplett has worked as a camp counselor with the club, coached basketball, is on the soccer team at Conley, and is active in church work at Parker's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church. Selection of

Women Battle For Place In Israel's Religious System

By BARBARA KINGSLEY Associated Press Writer JERUSALEM (AP) — They are accepted in their native America, but in the spiritual center of Judaism where the ultra-Orthodox hold sway, they are a rarity and some would say a threat.

Kinneret Levine Shiryon, 28, and Gail Shuster-Bouskila, 31, are Israel's only women rabbis, although they are not recognized as such by the Orthodox religious hierarchy.

Both women are working quietly and separately to beat the system that shuns their Reform beliefs and denies them a place as religious leaders.

"When I came here and I started telling friends I was a rabbi, their reaction was much laughter," said Mrs. Shuster-Bouskila, who left Evanston, Ill., in 1978 to become Israel's first woman rabbi. "They just could not comprehend it. I was not a man with a beard and black coat."

Mrs. Shuster-Bouskila was ordained at the Reconstructionist Rabbinical College in Philadelphia, Pa., and interned at a small synagogue in Adelaide, Australia.

Only about 25 percent of the Jews in Israel consider themselves to be religious. But the Orthodox play a key political role. They also control nearly all houses of worship and run the rabbinical courts which have exclusive say over marriage, divorce, funerals and other religious rites.

Conservative, Reform and Reconstructionist movements that thrive in the United States are not officially recognized in Israel although there are a few small congregations.

Mrs. Shuster-Bouskila teaches at the Young Judean Jerusalem Institute and Mrs. Shiryon prepares adult education classes for the Reform congregation in a Tel Aviv suburb. Both lead tours through the Diaspora Museum in Tel Aviv, which is where they met after Mrs. Shiryon came to Israel from Los Angeles a year ago.

Mrs. Shiryon recalled in an interview the reaction of a group of Orthodox students who started shouting and berating her during a museum tour when she told them she was a rabbi.

"They told me I was destroying Judaism, and because I was a woman, the Jewish family as well. To the (Orthodox), if you are secular, you don't threaten them. But if you're progressive, you're a threat. That's the problem."

Michael L. Klein, dean of Hebrew Union College and Jewish Institute of Religion in Jerusalem, which ordains Reform rabbis, said in an interview: "Of all the democracies in the world, the only one that does not grant equal rights to all Jews is Israel. Being Reform and being a woman makes it doubly difficult."

Mrs. Shuster-Bouskila, a mother of two sons who lives in Jerusalem, attempted in 1982 to start non-Orthodox religious classes with a group of parents. But the project was torpedoed when the Ministry of Education refused to approve it.

Mrs. Shuster-Bouskila sees education as a way to increase the ranks of Israel's non-Orthodox population, which accounts for less than 1 percent of the 3.4 million Jews in Israel.

"The problem is numbers," she said. "If people were here that demanded that kind of service they would have more jobs for people like us. My first goal is to see in the Jewish schools in Israel a stream of non-Orthodox classes that would be Jewish in a way I know can be taught."

Mrs. Shiryon, who has a 6-month-old girl, turned down an offer last year to head a congregation because she was about to become a mother. She said she would seriously consider accepting any future offer because she believes that being a woman leader of a congregation provides a role model that would pave the way for change.

"Judaism freed women from the tie of the mitzvah (duty) of daily prayer because women were the baby-makers," she said.

But she added that the Orthodox rabbis have changed the original intent of the tradition which held it was unfair for women to have to both pray and care for children.

"Now the rabbis say if a man is not obligated to pray, she can't participate spiritually," Mrs. Shiryon said.

Mrs. Shiryon contended that both men and women Jews in Israel are seeking a middle ground between secularism and Orthodoxy.

"You don't have to be a Jew from the ghetto," she said. "People say they want to experience Judaism. They believe it is cut off to them. You have to educate people. I am not out to make the world Jewish, just the Jewish world Jewish."

Experts disagree on whether women will eventually be accepted into the rabbinical fold here. Klein said he was "very pessimistic."

"There has been a terrible regression over the past five to seven years in all matters of religious freedom and equality," he said.

But Mrs. Shiryon is more optimistic. She said that after she was berated in the museum by the Orthodox students, several of the girls stayed behind.

"They were very curious," she said. "I wouldn't say they agreed with me. But they saw another way. All the verbal barbs from the men were worth it."

Pasadena Caterer Writes Of Concern

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: First, "Stuck in New Jersey" got stuck for $664 when 16 guests failed to show for a catered wedding. Then another reader wrote to say that "Stuck" need not have been stuck. She could have instructed the caterers to pack up the dinners for her to take home and put in her freezer.

I can't speak for all caterers—only myself—but unless the party is held in the client's own home with refrigeration immediately at hand, packing food to go presents some awesome responsibilities, which I refuse to assume.

After food leaves our supervision, we cannot be responsible for it. Often the host or hostess will go elsewhere to "unwind" after the party, and lobster thermidor left for "a few hours" in a warm car can spoil rapidly.

We will fill a fridge, and our responsibility ends there. But fill up a car with leftovers—no way. We could lose our shirts, shorts, shoes and insurance.

PASADENA CATERER

DEAR ABBY: I am a 22-year-old woman with a terrible problem I've had ever since I was very young. I am embarrassed by underarm perspiration rings that reach down to my waist. This problem persists regardless of the

Check Sodium Content Charts For Accuracy

A person on a low-sodium diet goes into a fast food restaurant. He chooses a large chocolate chip cookie rather than salted french fries. Is he sticking to his diet?

Probably not. He is trying, but there is sodium in many places, says Sarah Hinton, extension nutrition specialist, North Carolina State University.

"Salt is out number one source of sodium, so avoiding the salt shaker is a good first step. But sodium is found in many foods we eat, often where we wouldn't expect it to be," Mrs. Hinton says.

Sodium is used in prepared foods as a preservative, as a "flavor enhancer" and as a substitute for higher priced ingredients. It is found in almost every kind of processed foods: baked goods, luncheon meats, canned and frozen foods, cereals, candy, cheese, condiments and ice cream.

"Anyone who has been put on a low-sodium diet by a doctor may want to check sodium content charts. They may find some surprises," says Mrs. Hinton.

A typical fast food serving of french fries (69 grams) contains 115 mg. of sodium. But a typical fast food serving of cookies (63.4 grams) has 330 mg. of sodium.

Here are some other measurements of sodium: 3 ounces dried beef, 3,657 mg. while 3 ounces corned beef has 804 mg.; 960 mg. in an instant bouillon cube and 370 in two slices of typical fast food pepperoni pizza; 500 mg. in 1 teaspoon of monosodium glutamate (the flavor enhancer) and 191 mg. in one ounce of typical potato chips.

A half can of undiluted cream of mushroom soup has

1,210 mg. while a package of dried cream of mushroom soup has 572 mg. of sodium.

Sodium content in other foods includes: 2 mg. in a half cup of fresh asparagus and 271 mg. in half a cup of canned asparagus; 1 mg. in an ounce of either quick or old fashioned oatmeal compares with 252 mg. in a package of instant oats; 710 mg. in a complete loin of pork frozen dinner and 156 mg. in two cups of the typical antacid; and 83 mg. sodium in a half cup of homemade vanilla pudding compared with 200 mg. from the same amount of pudding made from a mix.

I once heard that there is a surgical procedure to correct this problem. Can you tell me anything about it?

DRIPPING WET IN PA.

DEAR DRIPPING: Before considering surgery, I urge you to see an endocrinologist. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: A reader recently asked you what an endocrinologist was. He said he had asked his doctor and his doctor didn't know.

Instead of answering his question, you told him to buy two dictionaries, one for himself and one for his doctor, then find another doctor.

Abby, you missed a good opportunity to educate your readers. Being an endocrinologist myself, I am frequently asked that question, and this is my reply:

Endocrinology is the study of hormones and the effects of deficiencies and excesses of these hormones. The endocrinologist specializes in a wide range of problems, such as calcium and bone problems, menstrual disorders, pituitary abnormalities, excessive hair growth in women and undersized children, to name a few. But the most common endocrine disorders are diabetes and thyroid disease.

ENDOCRINOLOGIST, RICHMOND, VA.

DEAR ABBY: I do not like to be touched—meaning grabbed or clutched or jabbed—even in a playful or non-threatening manner.

My reaction (I naturally draw away) is taken as a rejection by some people, but I can't help it—that's just the way I am.

Am I alone or not? I am a male, age 37, if that makes a difference.

TOUCH-ME-NOT

DEAR TOUCH: You are not alone. Many people dislike being touched. They feel a certain violation of their space—and they react negatively.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Even if it's still wintry outside, you'll have a touch of spring in your heart while making these charming spring baskets with pastel plastic canvas and brightly colored yarns.

Easter eggs and baby chicks will delight your favorite youngster, while the floral baskets are eye-catching centerpieces for a special party meal. Use them later as flower containers or "clutter catchers" wherever you want a cheery spot of color.

These are quick and easy springtime projects, using only the simplest stitches for the design areas, with no background stitching necessary on the pastel canvas. Fancy stitches can be used for borders but are not necessary.

To obtain beginner-easy directions for making the Spring Baskets, send your request for Leaflet No. NL-0129 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler (The Daily Reflector), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29577.

Or you may order Kit No. N-0129 by sending a check or money order for $11 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges and contains full instructions and materials for making three baskets. Please specify your choice of pink, blue, yellow or green for the canvas; coordinated yarn colors will be selected for each canvas shade.

Maggie Lane's "Gold

SPRING BASKETS...can be used as baskets or "clutter catchers."

and Silver Needlepoint" was first published in a hardcover edition a few months ago with a retail price of $22.50. The good news for Lane fans is that it is now available in paperback—but still with all the beautiful color of its more expensive counterpart—for $14.95.

As with almost all of Maggie Lane's needlepoint books, the theme is Oriental art and it is exquisitely done with particular emphasis on the use of metallic threads to highlight the designs.

Extremely practical hints are given for working with metallic threads that otherwise could only be learned through many trial and error sessions. Typical of the down-to-earth advice is a drawing and description of what the author calls a shoe-box contraption for keeping various separate strands.

In addition to specific information on metallic threads, there is other good basic advice on materials selection, following the charts, blocking the canvas and finishing the projects. Also excellent stitch diagrams are included.

The bulk of the book, however, consists of marvelous graph charts of imaginative Oriental designs—so lovely that your fingers will literally "itch to stitch!"

The elegant projects range in size from a little 7 1/2-by-9 3/4 inch "Silver Cloud" evening purse to a 32-by-63-inch "Swans and Lotus Flowers Scroll." Small or large, each is a work of art.

"Gold and Silver Needlepoint" is published by Charles Scribner's Sons, 597 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. If not available at your local needlework store or bookstore, inquiries should be made to the publisher.

("Pat's Pointers: The Needlepoint Handbook" by Pat Trexler has organized needlework instructions for easy crafting by beginners and veterans alike with a host of patterns to please every needlework enthusiast. To order this 200-page book, send $8.95 plus $1 postage and handling to Pat's Pointers Needlepoint Handbook, in care of this newspaper, 4400 Johnson Drive, Fairway, Kan. 66205. Please make checks payable to Universal Press Syndicate.)

You're suffering from a communications gap if you need to make an appointment to talk to your teenager. Or if you can't find words to talk to your offspring even when both of you are hanging around the house.

It's also a communications gap when you find words but can't be heard over the "Walkman" plugged into junior's ears.

The communications problem is one that Ruth Bell of Los Angeles and her co-author, Leni Zeiger Wildflower, take on in "Talking With Your Teenager, A Book for Parents" (Random House, $8.95).

For kids to remain silent for a day or so at a time can be perfectly normal, and parents should understand that, Ms. Bell said in an interview.

"If it goes on for weeks or even a month, seek help. There's probably a problem," she said, citing the possibilities of drug use, an identity crisis or illness.

Ms. Bell, one of the original 11 in the Boston Women's Health Collective that produced the best-selling "Our Bodies, Ourselves" (Simon and Schuster, $9.95), said it helps to think back to one's own adolescence when attempting to understand the normal teenager-parent communications gap.

She and Ms. Wildflower, a health educator for a private girls' school in Los Angeles, say that isn't going to make it any easier to bridge the communications gap, but it will help parents to better understand it.

"We know from our own experience how difficult it can be to try to hold a conversation with an adolescent who is disdainful of everything you say or do," the two say in "Talking With Your Teenager."

Ms. Bell, mother of a 14-year-old and an 18-month-old baby, said that after hundreds of interviews with parents and adolescents, she recommends three strategies to open up communication channels and keep them unplugged: be honest, be informed, and do all you can to build your child's self esteem.

"Say to your teenager, you can only be you and you want the teenager to be himself or herself — nothing more, nothing less."

If you are talking about sex and feel peculiar, Ms. Bell said, level with the kid, saying exactly why you feel all thumbs.

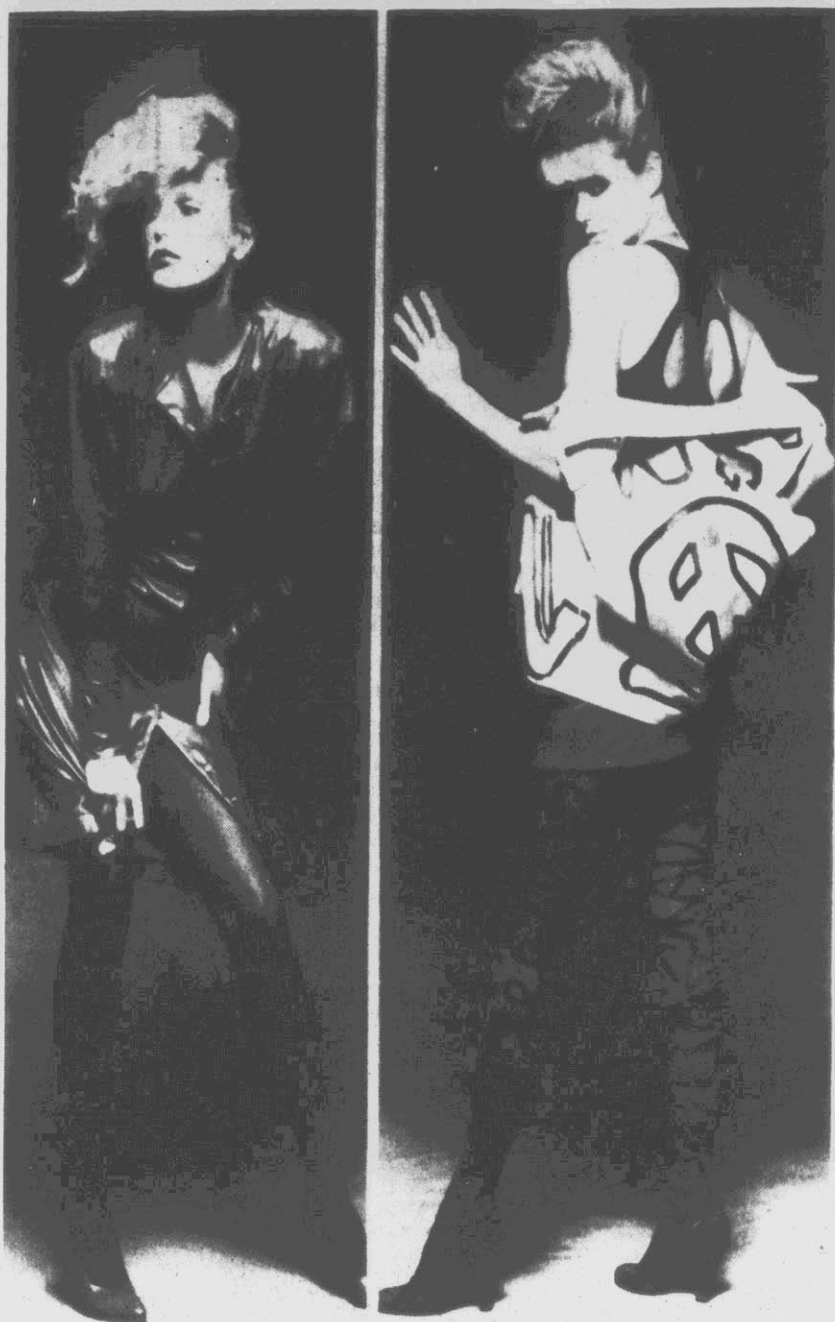

"Say, 'I feel strange, odd, inadequate or uncomfortable talking to you about sex.'"

At that point the teenager may open up and, in a perfectly honest exchange, may say he or she feels oddly about talking sex with you, too. In theory, that should break the ice.

Ms. Bell said some parents clam up because the subject is sex because they feel talking about it will make the kids go out and try everything discussed.

"It is a fact, however, that those talking about it with parents behave more responsibly than those who don't discuss it with parents."

Ms. Bell said the book contains information that will help parents to be informed about teenagers and alcohol, drugs, sexually transmitted diseases, birth control and other topics of concern.

"Helping your teenager build self esteem is crucial,"

Ms. Bell said. "A crucial issue of teenage years is that the teenager feels unsure of his or her identity."

"Try to help the kids get through the teenage years with high self-esteem. Praise and love them; let them know that they are loved just the way they are; be compassionate when there is difficulty."

The book contains no cookie cutter formulas to help parents weather their teenager's adolescent years.

"We say here are some things some parents told us they do in certain circumstances when dealing with their teenagers, providing a range," Ms. Bell said. "And then we say maybe there is something here that might fit your situation — or something you can adapt."

Ms. Bell trained in family therapy at the Cambridge Family Institute in Cambridge, Mass. Previously, she earned a bachelor's degree at the University of California, Berkeley. She holds a masters in education from Harvard.

Carrot Soup Recipe Combines Peanut Butter And Nutmeg

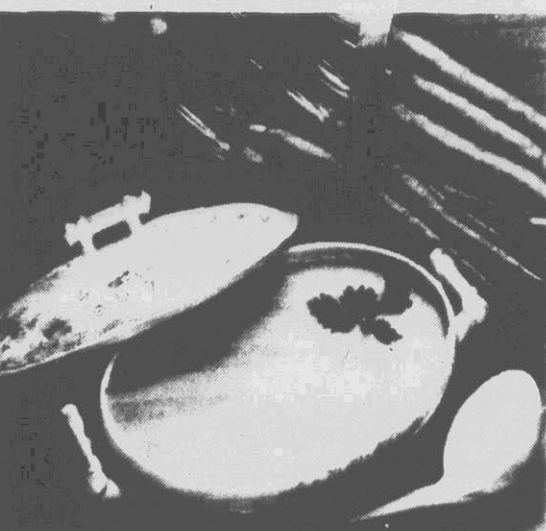

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

The most famous carrot soup in culinary history is the French Potage de Carrot called Crecy (Potage de Carottes, dite Crecy). Made with cooked peeled carrots, consomme and a little rice, it is seasoned with onion, salt and sugar and enriched with butter.

In 1896, when Fannie Farmer's "The Boston Cooking-School Cook Book" first appeared, a recipe for "Crecy Soup" was included. Miss Farmer based her recipe on the French one but omitted the rice and thickened the soup with flour.

For many years after Fannie Farmer, recipes for American carrot soups were sparse. But in recent years they have appeared in abundance and in several versions. One version uses a white sauce base. Another version uses only cream for flavoring and thickening, and sometimes includes potatoes.

One of the most interesting carrot soup variations I have found was given by Trader Vic, CARROT SOUP — It's seasoned surprisingly and delightfully.

the well-known restaurateur and cookbook author. This recipe adds nutmeg and a soupcon of peanut butter — a piquant and surprising combination. You may want to try this adaptation of the Trader Vic recipe.

CARROT SOUP
1 small (1 1/2 ounces) onion, finely chopped (1/4 cup)
1 pound carrots minus tops, pared and sliced 1/4-inch thick (4 loosely packed cups)
Two 13 1/4-ounce cans clear chicken broth
3/4 cup water
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 1/2 tablespoons cream-style peanut butter
1/4 cup heavy cream
Parsley sprigs for garnish, if desired

In a 3-quart saucepan bring to a boil the onion, carrot, chicken broth, water and nutmeg; simmer, covered, until carrots are tender — 20 minutes. Cool enough to whirl in an electric blender.

In the blender, whirl half the carrot mixture until smooth; turn into a saucepan. Turn the remaining carrot mixture into the blender and add the peanut butter; whirl until smooth; add to the first batch of soup. Stir in the cream.

Reheat soup, stirring often, and serve at once. Or refrigerate in a tightly covered container and reheat at serving time. If used, garnish with parsley. Makes 6 servings.

Style Makers For 1983 Told

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Eight television actors and two movie stars have been named the Top 10 Male Style Makers of the Year for 1983 — the men who most influenced national trends in hair, fashion and lifestyle.

The list was compiled this year for the first time by the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association.

NHCA president Larry Johnson said they were chosen because they best personify personal style, masculine attractiveness and a high degree of likability.

The association selects a Top 10 list of women annually for the same reason. The 52,000-member trade group represents hairdressers, men's stylists and salon owners, who voted in a nationwide balloting in October 1983.

The winners are television stars Pierce Brosnan of "Remington Steele," John Forsythe of "Dynasty," Gregory Harrison of "Trapper John, M.D.," David Hasselhoff of "Knight Rider," Lee Horsley of

Test Material, Remove Stain

Has the fabric puckered and shrunk? Did the colors bleed? If so, call a professional cleaner.

If all is okay, attack the real grease spot. First remove as much of the stain as possible by scraping the area with the dull side of a knife. Then sponge the area lightly with a dry-cleaning fluid, such as chlorethane. Use the fluid sparingly, being careful not to soak the fabric. Pat up the fluid and loosened grease with a clean cloth.

If there is still some discoloration from dirt in the grease, sponge the area with a lukewarm solution of detergent and water. Then remove the solution by sponging the area with a clean cloth which has been dampened with clear, cold

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Early last year I wrote a column on military wives saying they had never been honored for their contribution to understanding throughout the world and personal sacrifice to this country they represent.

Last September, Margaret Hudson of Columbus, Miss., made history. She became the first wife to be so honored. When her husband, Col. James D. Hudson, retired from the Department of the Air Force, Margaret was given a special certificate of appreciation.

The tribute was three lines long. It said she had earned "grateful appreciation for her own unselfish, faithful, and devoted service. Her unflinching support and understanding helped to make possible her husband's lasting contribution to the Nation."

There were a lot of memories between those three lines.

Support. A husband who flew 30 missions to Germany in WW II, participating in the Korean War and the Berlin Airlift.

Unselfishness. An if-not-single-then-escorted parent who attended family birthdays, Christmas and graduations alone.

Understanding. Never knowing where her husband was assigned or when (and if) he'd be back. And the hard part: staying overseas when he returned to the States and not being allowed to go with him.

Contribution. In Bolivia on diplomatic duty where she was assaulted, becoming the first woman assigned overseas to be injured. A revolution where their home was invaded by 36 soldiers with machine guns.

Appreciation. Two tours of Vietnam.

Margaret Hudson would be the first to say she is not unique in the annals of wives whose job it is to follow and wait.

Military wives, as well as others whose husbands follow orders, have been doing it for years since some warrior picked up the first rock.

The point is, every 15 seconds in this country an award is given for something. (If you're counting country-Western performers, make that every two seconds.)

Awards make you feel good every time you dust them. They don't cost a lot, but every time you look at them, you remember how great you felt when you received them.

Margaret accepted her award before a group of 50 people. There were no news media there. Coffee and doughnuts were served.

Forgive me, Margaret, but I had to share this with 31 million readers: They're applauding. I hope you can hear it.

Wise Choice

The Pitt Community College Board of Trustees moved quickly to fill the position of president left vacant with the death of Dr. William E. Fulford.

They turned to a tried and trusted administrator, Dr. Charles E. Russell. He had been acting president since June 1, 1983, when ill health forced Dr. Fulford to take a leave.

Chairman Clifton W. Everette Jr. said it was the board's feeling that the "matter should be addressed." Furthermore, he said, "the prevailing sentiment (on the board) was for Dr. Russell to fill the president's position."

Everette noted the action was unanimous and subject to State Board of Education approval when it meets Feb. 9.

President Russell brings years of service and dedication to the trust he has been awarded. He joined the PCC staff in 1971 as director of adult basic education and director of public relations. He became assistant to the president in 1975. He has the educational and administrative background. He also has the additional experience of having served as acting president, prior to assuming the position permanently. Certainly, no one is more qualified to lead Pitt Community College.

We expect to see improvement in all areas at PCC under Dr. Russell's presidency.

Unique Concept

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan has said President Reagan will propose major changes in the tax system next year if he is re-elected.

The changes would involve fewer deductions, but lower taxes.

Secretary Regan also said the president would propose to lower the deficit by bringing the rate of spending increases below the rate of increases in federal revenues. In other words, if the federal government foresees a 10 percent increase in revenues next year, it might spend only 5 percent more, thus reducing the deficit by 5 percent.

Now there's a unique new concept. Perhaps we could call it, living within your means.

Vacuum Economy

NEW YORK (AP) — During the past year the American economy has been like a big commercial vacuum cleaner, sucking in tremendous amounts of foreign goods and services, and investments too.

It was a remarkable achievement, keeping some debt-laden foreign economies, such as Brazil and Mexico, from falling into even deeper trouble than already existed for their poorly managed economies.

In all, Americans absorbed $269.88 billion dollars of foreign-made goods and services, and in the second and third quarters of the year American banks actually drew in more money from abroad than they lent there.

A remarkable performance, indeed, but was it a good performance or a poor one? And was it a consequence of a well-managed American economy or one that was out of control?

It depends upon the viewpoint. Because U.S. imports exceeded exports by more than $69 billion, the U.S. gross national product was lower than it might have been.

Because of a growth in trade deficits in the fourth quarter of 1983, for example, the economy grew 4.5 percent. Had the trade deficit not risen, GNP would have grown at a 6.7 percent rate.

Moreover, thousands of U.S. jobs were lost — perhaps more than a million in the past three years. In a sense, the jobs were exported. Many of the imported goods and services could have been produced domestically.

Why weren't they? One good reason is that they could be produced abroad for less than in the United States, not just because of lower wages but partly because foreign currencies fell in relation to the value of the dollar.

When that happens, and it has been happening since 1980, it causes U.S. exports to be priced relatively higher and foreign-made goods lower. In three years, American export prices have in effect risen by 30 percent or so.

Unless the dollar falls and foreign currencies rise, an undetermined number of U.S. jobs might go abroad. Will it fall? A great many financial analysts have been expecting it to do so for the past year. It hasn't.

However, with European economies gaining strength, the probability now seems more real. As their economies improve, partly because they have been good exporters, these countries should be in a better position to import.

Understanding the causes of the imbalance in trade is just as confusing.

Is it because of sound American policies that make the United States stronger than other nations, and therefore more able to import?

Or is it a consequence of economic mismanagement?

Don't look for any agreement on an answer, because there doesn't seem to be one or, in fact, any likelihood that there will be.

Donald Regan, the Treasury secretary, suggests that it is the very soundness of the American economy that makes for the distortions, especially in regard to the desire of Europeans to invest in the United States.

He has considerable support from some analysts, who argue that investment capital is attracted to the United States because this country represents hope and stability, in contrast to fears in Europe that socialism will grow.

But there are contrary opinions, the strongest of them being that what makes the United States so attractive for investors and foreign exporters is the poor manner in which its finances are handled.

There is the budget deficit, for example, which critics argue has forced interest rates higher than abroad, attracting foreign investments in the United States and further pushing up the dollar's desirability and value.

About the clearest thing in the entire mix is that the dollar cannot continue to rise indefinitely in relation to other currencies, if only because all economic trends come to an end.

The big question is whether the trend ends suddenly with a disruptive bang — or corrects itself slowly.

RALEIGH — When the Democratic candidates for governor get together, you can expect the same old thing almost every time. Regardless of what group he's addressing, Tom Gilmore will start his speech by saying, "I want to commend you for your good work."

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten will quote former Sen. Sam Ervin's promise not to "trespass on time nor encroach on eternity."

But there's one candidate in the field who is so refreshing in his unpredictability that he can almost save the show by himself. He doesn't have much chance of winning but at least he keeps the audience awake for the frontrunners. He's Robert Hannon, former professor at N.C. A&T University, the only black man in the race.

"I'm running for governor of North Carolina and I might get elected," Hannon told the N.C. Federation of College Democrats in Chapel Hill. Looking down the table at five other white candidates that day, he said, "They're going to split up the vote ... I've got the black votes. I don't need but 300 white votes and I've got you." When the audience burst into applause, he hastened to quieten them. "It's my time, don't clap too long."

Hannon, 69, has a high-class academic record behind him. He's a graduate of A&T and he went on to earn a master's degree at Harvard and a doctorate at the University of Michigan. He says he's taught economics, political science and practically every other social science. He ran for lieutenant governor in 1972 but withdrew and ran for the U.S. Senate in 1974, finishing seventh in a field of 10 candidates for the Democratic nomination.

It's not a professorial manner which distinguishes him on the campaign trail. It's more his outrageous sense of humor. That's not to say that other candidates, especially Lauch Faircloth and Jimmy Green, don't drop good one-liners. But their humor is cautious. Hannon's knows few boundaries.

Speaking of the need for a teacher's pay raise, Hannon said he'd finance it through higher alcohol taxes. "When I do that, some of you aren't going to be able to buy it and you'll live 20 or 50 years longer," he said.

Last fall, at a meeting of officers of North Carolina savings and loan institutions, Hannon said he had all of his money in one institution and that he'd written the president of that S&L seeking a campaign donation. "I haven't gotten it yet and so I'm going to take all my money out," he said. He's putting it in another S&L; if they don't contribute, he says, he'll move his money again.

Sometimes Hannon pokes fun at his opponents. "My wife and I had a pair of rocking chairs on the porch for 40 years. I woke up the other morning and they were gone. I'm sitting here next to (Attorney General) Rufus Edmisten. I want my chairs back."

When Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green claimed to be the oldest Democrat in the field, Hannon barked, "I'm older than Jimmy Green."

He says other things which are funny only because of his delivery. For example, he chastised the other candidates for claiming to be best qualified for the job. The qualifications, he noted, are laid out in the Constitution, "and all of us have those qualifications." But in his rising and falling raspy voice, those words tickled the college Democrats audience.

The other candidates seem willing to humor Hannon. They laugh along with the audience. Most likely, no one considers him a very serious threat. He has no real political credentials. He doesn't appear to even have much understanding of some of the issues.

It would be easy to call Hannon's candidacy a joke. It would be just as condescending to call it pathetic. The man has some things to say and, with his ability to draw laughs, he's getting people's attention.

Quietness

WASHINGTON — A lull seems to have settled this month on news from South Africa — as much of a lull as we ever are likely to see in the debate over that beleaguered land. Negotiations over "Namibia," as the United Nations would like to name South West Africa, continue to sputter along. Warfare in southern Angola has become a chronic condition.

In this period of relative quiet, it may be useful to put certain events in perspective. By our own contemporary standards, South Africa's treatment of its indigenous black population is indefensible. To borrow a famous phrase from our own jurisprudence, the blacks of South Africa have no civil rights the white man is bound to respect.

On the matter of South West Africa (Namibia), the popular view is that South Africa is "illegally" occupying its mandated territory, and that South Africa is "defying international law" in refusing to surrender the people who live there to the South West African People's Organization (SWAPO). This view has become so set in concrete that it seems immovable. It merits a closer look.

Americans, it seems to me, sorely need a sense of history and a sense of humility in passing judgment upon South Africa. In the long view, we should ask ourselves: What right have we to assert that we are holier than they? I would submit that nothing in the recent history of South Africa's "homelands" policy surpasses the brutality that we imposed upon Indian tribes little more than a century ago. This past week saw The New York Times and The Washington Post bemoaning the forcible removal of 3,000 Swazis to a tribal reservation 20 miles away from their ancestral community. Well, we had our Indian Removal Act of 1830, and we moved 100,000 Indians a thousand miles and more.

On this business of civil rights for South Africa's blacks, it becomes us to speak modestly, for we have much to be modest about. Let us recall that our Constitution of 1787 — the Constitution that Gladstone praised as the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man — treated Negroes as "other persons." They were not even whole "other persons." They were three-fifths of other persons. Under the Constitution, at least 20 more years of slavery were specifically sanctioned. This great Constitution required the return of runaway slaves.

After the Civil War three amendments were added to the Constitution. One of them ended slavery, a second sought to ensure blacks "equal protection of the law," and a third said that the right to vote could not be abridged on account of race. That was in 1870. It has taken us 100 years to make good on part of those guarantees. If at any time in that century 70 percent of the U.S. population had been black, would the ruling white population have embraced "one man, one vote"? Tell me about it.

Let us look in the mirror on the matter of South West Africa. It has a population of 1 million; it is larger than Texas. Its 12 ethnic groups speak at least 15 languages. South Africa inherited the territory under a mandate from the League of Nations after World War I. Who are we to say that, under the circumstances, South Africa has done poorly by these people? We have not done so marvelously with our own minorities, and we have had such advantages as a common language and a fruitful land.

Why has South Africa dragged its feet in granting independence to newborn Namibia? It is because South Africa, with great justification, fears that the leaders of SWAPO, backed by the Soviet Union and propped up by Cuban troops, swiftly would overpower any paper safeguards erected by the United Nations. This would put a communist base on South Africa's west flank, and it would put non-communist insurgents in Angola in a vise.

Candidate Offers Refreshing Note

Jackson Sets A Trend

WASHINGTON — An incident at a college lecture hall recently suggests why the Rev. Jesse Jackson's presidential campaign could become a cause celebre among younger voters.

During a question-and-answer session at Georgetown University, a student long-windedly asked Jackson whether the candidate, as president, would spend billions of dollars on social programs when the benefits of such spending were unclear.

Sensing a possibly bigoted undertone to the question, other students in the audience hissed. But Jackson gracefully grasped the lectern with one hand and motioned for silence with the other.

"Part of our job (in this campaign) is to hear people and let them hear us," the preacher explained in his essential Jackson form. "To be patient in the transition as people develop is important. Your obligation is to dialogue. A no-talk policy and a laugh-at-other-people-policy is not a good policy."

Ten years ago, a more confrontational Jackson might have handled his tendentious inquisitor with something less than an olive branch. His obviously non-combative posture today partly reflects the secure role that the civil rights leader has carved for himself in Democratic political circles as a result of his efforts in Syria on behalf of Navy pilot Robert Goodman.

But Jackson isn't really campaigning for president as much as he is for the unofficial position of Democratic Party conscience. He's called not only for Ronald Reagan's defeat, but also for a more representative party structure and ideological consistency. For that reason his candidacy is different from the others and possibly more appealing to those who can appreciate someone willing to challenge the party internally.

A packed and appreciative house at generally-conservative Georgetown may indicate why Jackson has brought his sermon to 40 campuses in the last two months. If anybody can appreciate the reverend's unconventional approach, politician-weary college students can.

Just as the Democrats are trying to attract blacks and women, the only two black women in the House — Democrats Cardiss Collins of Illinois and Katie Hall of Indiana — face tough primary battles. Collins' chief primary opponent, also black, has been endorsed by Chicago Mayor Harold Washington. Meanwhile, Hall, who was appointed to her seat after the death of an incumbent, may have to fend off three white challenges.

An Army judge recently issued a decision that might be of interest to women who are considering a part-time military career. Joseph H. Rouse, chief of the general claims division of the U.S. Army Claims Service at Fort Meade, Md., ruled that a former reservist could not collect damages from the Army for the rape she suffered while quarantined in her barracks.

The victim, Betty Ann Buckmiller, 26, has since filed suit against the Army in U.S. District Court in San Francisco.

While previous studies have suggested that high-tech expansion won't help college graduates with liberal arts degrees, recent analysis by one university professor indicates that many engineers may go unwanted, too. According to Henry Levin of the Stanford School of Education, only 15 percent of all jobs in the electronic component industry are technically oriented.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Regarding your feature article, "Rise in Pregnancy Blamed on Lack of Sex 'Realism'" (1/22/84), the content does not substantiate the headline. The article reads, "for the five-year period from 1978-81, the pregnancy rate in Pitt County for women aged 15-17 declined 11.8 percent" and "for women aged 18-19 the pregnancy increased by 9.2 percent," which averages to a slight decline in the combined groups, not a rise as indicated in the headlines.

The birthrate dropped 29.4 percent for those 17 and under and 19.2 percent for those 18-19. WHY? The reason is obvious from the abortion statistics and the statement of a social worker, "Abortion is the most common choice of the pregnant teen-ager ..." I wonder how many of these girls would go through the abortion if they were given the opportunity to hear the heartbeat of the child they carry. How ironic that one pregnant woman is given the best of prenatal care while another is given the option of abortion (killing of an unborn child), in some cases with our tax money.

A look at statistics for births and abortions in Pitt County indicates that abortion is a major method of birth control in the teen-age group. In 1981, there were 207 births and 204 abortions to girls, ages 15-19. White teen-agers aborted at the rate of 75 abortions per 1,000 pregnancies. Isn't it sad that some of the babies weren't given the opportunity to be adopted?

Acknowledging the psychological and emotional characteristics of adolescents, one can readily concede the probability that a significant percentage are willing to take their chances with sexual intercourse as long as contraceptives and abortion are readily available, and the latter is legal and proclaimed "a woman's right."

To the editor:

February is Afro-American (Black) History Month. The theme is "Black Americans and their Struggle for Excellence in Education." This month recognizes the many contributions of black Americans who have enriched our American heritage and have given so much to this nation's progress in all walks of life and at great personal sacrifice.

By making Americans aware of the achievements and the contributions of black Americans from the earliest history of our nation, we help to set the record straight and bring all Americans to a better understanding of our past.

The list of outstanding black Americans includes Dr. Carter G. Woodson, founder of Black History Month; Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.; Harold Washington, Chicago's mayor; Mary McLeod Bethune, the first black woman to serve as adviser to a U.S. president; Henry Frye, first black to sit on the N.C. Supreme Court; Dr. Charles Drew, originator of the blood bank system that saved millions of lives in World War II; Harvey Gantt, Charlotte's first black mayor; right here in our city, Ed Carter, the first black mayor pro-tem; J.J. Brown, Ayden's first black mayor pro-tem; and Keith Gatlin, the University of Maryland's basketball guard, who is a freshman from Grimesland, among a long list of others I could name.

Black History Month is very relevant today because it continues to serve as an amendment to America's recorded history and serves to expose our young blacks to role models, but everyone can draw strength from these black pioneers of the past. America owes its gratitude to them for their inspiration, their legacies and their contributions toward shaping this nation. Each and every day during Black History month can be eventful and knowledge-building. Black Americans have shaped our history and will surely be an integral part of our destiny.

No charges were preferred following investigation of a Monday afternoon accident on Evans Street near the Arlington Boulevard intersection that damaged three vehicles.

Police said the 1:32 p.m. mishap involved vehicles operated by Alonza Hall Jr. of 437 Evergreen Drive, Winterville, Coleen Jones Cargile of 306 Crown Point Road, and Johnnie Earl Thompson of 404 Kirkland Drive.

Officers, who said Mrs. Cargile reported an injury but was not transported, estimated damages at $1,200 to the Thompson vehicle, $400 to the Hall vehicle, and $300 to Mrs. Cargile's car.

He said Velma Warren of 109 River Bluff Road reported that she parked her car at the restaurant and went inside. She told police that when she left the building she noticed a man drop something and run. Worthington said Ms. Warren reported that she found several items from her pocketbook on the ground.

The officer said the value of the pocketbook and contents was estimated at $98.98, while approximately $39.98 in property was recovered.

The theft was reported to police at 6:45 p.m.

The "Informathon" series, pioneered by CHN, will become a monthly feature on Lifetime. "Informathon" is a four-hour health special, covering a single health issue, with panels of health professionals available for viewers to call through a toll-free telephone number for personal advice.

THINK ABOUT IT THIS WAY

N.C. Radio-Telephone Said Still Inoperable

RALEIGH (AP) — After more than three years — and the expenditure of at least $115,000 — the state's new radio-telephone system still doesn't work, North Carolina officials say.

The system was supposed to link state agency supervisors in Raleigh to their subordinates traveling almost anywhere in the state. But because the towers that are supposed to carry the radio messages haven't been properly equipped, the system remains inoperable.

North Carolina Labor Commissioner said the story of the system is "the kind that's so sad, you can't cry; you have to laugh at it."

Brooks faults the Department of Administration for the system remaining inoperable.

"Each time they say, 'Well, about six months, it'll be operational,'" Brooks said. "Every time we asked, it was going to be just about six months from now."

"The assurances I have been given ... are so positive and absolute that, when you're faced with no alternative, you rely on those guarantees," Brooks said.

"And we're relying. We're at the mercy of those folks to get their system in place," he said.

Department of Administration officials in late 1980 began planning the radio-telephone system that would allow supervisors in Raleigh to use their telephones to contact the subordinates on the road.

Brooks, whose staff is scattered across North Carolina, endorsed the idea in a letter in November 1980.

Two months later — Jan. 9, 1981 — Arnold Zogry, then a top executive in the Department of Administration, said the system could be "operational within nine to 12 months."

Acting on that, the Labor Department bought 100 radios — at a cost of $25,000 — discarded by the state Highway Patrol when it upgraded its system. The radios remained in storage for more than a year before labor officials were assured the system was close to being operational.

In the fall of 1982, the Labor Department agreed to pay $49,700 to have the radios modified and installed. The installations began in the spring of 1983.

Since then, 42 of the radios have been installed, but the system has yet to work because the seven towers needed to transmit the messages lack the proper equipment.

Gale L. Hawks, head of the state telecommunications office since January 1983, blamed the delay on personnel changes, the need for a stress analysis on two towers, bad weather and technical problems.

Cops Keep Up With Fashion

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Even cops have to keep up with the fashion of the day — so Chief Robert Wadman is taking the Omaha force from polyester to polished by banning leisure suits.

The order, effective May 1, reverses a department policy instituted in 1975 that allowed detectives to wear the inexpensive jacket-and-slacks combinations while on duty.

"Leisure suits will no longer be acceptable civilian attire for sworn personnel," Wadman's order states. "Business clothing styles have changed dramatically since 1975, when leisure suits were approved for use by the division. They are no longer accepted as appropriate business-like attire."

Writing Center Is 'Different'

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

No more rows, no raising hands. That's not the way to do it, at least not at East Carolina University's writing center. You sit in a circle, made partly of couches, chairs and wooden desks with gum underneath — the ones with vulgar words and things like "Susie loves Bear" scrawled across the top ... and talk.

About you, about what you think, about the guy you saw the other day (the one walking along trying not to look like he was looking), about changes in society, about bulldogs and how they're born. You talk about those things and how those things relate to writing, to research papers, to your ability to communicate. And that talk, informal as it may appear, is the key to getting beginning writers off the ground, according to Writing Center Director Dr. Pat Bizzaro.

"The problem with a lot of beginning adult writers today is that they carry with them some notion of the rules of writing. But oftentimes those rules are inflexible even though different writing tasks ask that they become flexible," he explained.

"For instance, when I informally surveyed some of our students about rules that they believed to be true about writing, the majority of them said that at one time or another they were told not to use 'I' in an essay.

"They should be able to. When they can't use the first person singular, it closes off that personal experience for them."

Looking for what you want to know, for what interests you, for what you would like to share with others will make research tasks involving writing a bit easier. And will more than likely, Bizzaro said, "make that paper better."

Students from varying educational persuasions offered at the university are being introduced to these ideas and others this semester during a series of workshops on preparing research papers — a task, Bizzaro said, everyone at the university — freshman and sophomore, junior and senior — can expect to face several times in their college careers.

During the workshops, which began Monday and will run through Feb. 20, Bizzaro, the graduate student who man the center, and students seeking guidance gather together to discuss a variety of topics, verbally going through the library, filling out note cards ... going through the whole process of presenting research interestingly.

These meetings are being held 31 different times each week, with anywhere from three to six groups of 10 going at each of those 31 times.

Bizzaro warned, however, that anyone desiring to attend, "both people in the university and in the community," should pick several alternate times because the center might be full. (See schedule below.)

This series of workshops is not the first to be conducted in the writing center, however. Last term, 13 writing sessions presented by the faculty and staff of ECU's English Department were attended by more than 250 students, Bizzaro said. In addition, students were helped with writing problems on an individual and small group basis throughout the semester.

"One thing I found out for sure last semester, something I suspected to begin with, is that no two writing centers anywhere on earth are the same," he said.

"Finding out what the university's and the community's needs were in terms of support for writing, as well as what we do here — offer a service to all of the departments in the university and to this area — are two of the most important things we have done so far," he said.

Schedule:
Mondays — 9 a.m.-noon and 3-4 p.m.
Tuesdays — 9-11 a.m. and 1-4 p.m.
Wednesdays — 9 a.m.-noon and 2-4 p.m.

Affirm Govm't News Control

By GHAFUR FADYL
Associated Press Writer
JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)

Information ministers from the non-aligned movement ended a five-day conference by affirming the right of governments to control the flow of news.

The ministers also complained about "the pervasive hostile propaganda" of industrialized countries and adopted a Cuban-sponsored resolution demanding an immediate halt to radio broadcasts directed against the national interest of another country.

Without mentioning the United States by name, the resolution adopted Monday referred to "the plan being implemented to set up a radio station to broadcast against Cuba, under the name of the illustrious Cuban patriot Jose Marti" — a reference to Washington's Radio Marti project.

The 80-nation conference, in its final declaration, complained of "pervasive hostile propaganda by developed industrialized countries, especially through the electronic media, against the non-aligned countries."

The 28-point declaration called for expansion and closer cooperation in the non-aligned news agencies' pool.

In affirming the right of governments to control the flow of news, it said: "each country must be able to develop its own public communications policies and systems, free from external interference or intervention, in accordance with its history, its social values, its cultural traditions, its political and development priorities."

An Indonesian-sponsored resolution called on the world's mass media to join in "resisting the sharp polarization of the world into hostile and armed camps in easing international tension in the cause of a just and lasting peace."

The resolution called on the media "to eschew tendentious reporting in all its manifestations and to desist from propagating materials, which directly or indirectly may prove detrimental or prejudicial to the interest of any member of the non-aligned movement."

Sisters Meet After 24 Years

HONOLULU (AP) — A cocktail lounge hostess who stopped into another establishment one afternoon found out the manager was her sister which she hadn't seen in 24 years.

Vickie Walters, born Kyong Ja Quon, began talking with Kay Baldwin, born Sung Cha Quon, when they discovered each had a father who worked as an engineer on trains linking North Korea with China and Manchuria.

"After we each said those things, we just looked at each other for a long, long time," Walters said. "Then she (Baldwin) said 'mother's name was' ... and we both said it together, 'Ok Boon Chun.'"

Happy April 15.

Now we can take a bit of the edge off that date that strikes terror in the hearts of American taxpayers.

With an NCNB IRA, you can ease your taxes by:

1. Contributing now or before April 15, and taking your deduction in either 1983 or 1984, whichever works best for you.

2. Avoiding taxes on the interest your IRA earns every year, until you start withdrawing money from your account.

And, even people who have a pension plan where they work can also invest up to $2000 a year in an IRA with us. (If you're a working couple, you can also invest up to $4000.)

The new IRA at NCNB. One of the biggest tax breaks in American history is right in your neighborhood.

Come see us. But do it before you file your 1983 taxes. So that you can get started on the first of your many happy returns.

Working individuals can contribute as much as 100% of their salary or wages, up to a maximum of $2000 ($4000 total for working couples). Substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal. All depositors insured to $100,000 by FDIC.

U.S. Manufacturing Decline Continues

By ROBERT FURLLOW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. manufacturing, a main force behind the nation's rise to world power, is falling behind foreign competition and putting future American leadership in question, according to a study commissioned by nine of the nation's manufacturing giants.

The study's recommendations: Shape international policy to help U.S. industry as well as meet political goals, tailor tax laws to encourage more investment at home, reduce interest rates and bring down the overvalued dollar by cutting the federal deficit and somehow find a way to slow a 30-year stream of recessions.

National policies have fallen short in all of these areas, contributing to an industrial decline relative to Japan and other nations, said the study released today by Data Resources Inc., a Lexington, Mass., economic forecasting firm headed by Otto Eckstein, who was a White House economic adviser in the Johnson administration.

Sponsors of the study, which was aimed at finding "the scope and the causes of decline in competitiveness of U.S. manufacturing industries," were American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Bethlehem Steel Corp., Burlington Industries Inc.,

Deere & Co., E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., Eastman Kodak Co., Ford Motor Co., Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. and Texaco Inc.

Until such economic and financial policies and conditions are dealt with, attempts to solve the problems of specific industries "have little prospect of success," the report said.

"No degree of cleverness on the part of management, no new-found cooperation between employers and workers, no industrial policies by the federal government can overcome the handicaps of an overvalued dollar and a domestic economy disrupted by credit crunches and recession every three or four years," it said.

It also asked, "Can the United States continue to play the role of guardian of the Western world, with its heavy political, economic and military burdens, with a weakening manufacturing economy?"

The report did not criticize any particular presidential administration and said some of the problems — such as a relatively high dollar value that favors foreign exporters — go back to the end of World War II.

The report said America's traditional role in the world economy had become "much diminished" by the early 1980s, with manufacturing's share of U.S. employment dropping rapidly while the share was dipping by lesser amounts in Europe and holding steady in Japan.

From the early 1970s to the early 1980s, it said, output of American steel products fell 16 percent and production of motor vehicles, appliances, TV and radio and nonferrous metals barely rose.

The reasons given included: —Much smaller investment in manufacturing than in Japan, primarily because of the relatively high cost of raising money in the United States — a problem it said could be alleviated by tax changes and lower interest rates.

—Seven recessions since 1950, causing uncertainties that led businesses to insist "on quick payoffs and excessively cautious expansion plans."

—Emphasis in high-technology investment on military and space programs

"at the expense of other industries that also have important scientific and engineering tasks."

—A postwar policy in which "we deliberately encouraged recovery and growth of other countries, closing our eyes to the protectionist elements in the goals" of those nations.

—The value of the dollar, which has remained high partly because high U.S. interest rates lure foreign money.

The report said, "A century-long industrial development process raised U.S. living standards manifold, made U.S. gross national product nearly 40 percent of world output and provided the nation with the means to become the political leader and military protector of the Western world, while concurrently meeting the social needs of its population."

But it added that "without a strongly advancing manufacturing industry, the U.S. economy is hardly likely to maintain its progress in the decades ahead," even with expected gains in industries that deal in services rather than manufactured items.

Billy Graham In Hospital's Care

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — The Rev. Billy Graham, admitted to a hospital suffering from acute infection and exhaustion, remains in "satisfactory and improving condition," a hospital spokesman says.

The 65-year-old evangelist was admitted Monday to a hospital affiliated with the Mayo Clinic and is being treated with antibiotics and decongestants for acute sinus and left inner ear infections, a spokesman said.

An aide said Graham's unexpected hospitalization forced the evangelist and his wife, Ruth, to cancel an invitation from President Reagan and first lady Nancy Reagan for a visit and overnight stay at the White House this week.

Graham, who recently completed a three-week trip to England to arrange for an upcoming three-month British crusade in the spring, will be hospitalized until about the end of the week, doctors said. He was admitted Sunday to Methodist Hospital in Rochester. "Physicians felt that hospitalization and a period of rest were necessary because of a combination of acute infection, high fever and exhaustion," the clinic spokesman said.

Graham aide T.W. Wilson said the evangelist had been in "much pain prior to coming to Mayo Clinic." During January, Graham kept one of the "most intensive schedules of his ministry," including television, newspaper, magazine, radio interviews and recordings, he added.

Last Thursday, Graham addressed 12,000 clergymen in England and Wales. The Grahams were guests of Queen Elizabeth and were hosted at a reception given by the Archbishop of Canterbury for church leaders. He also met with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Graham has canceled all engagements for the next two weeks on the advice of his doctors, Wilson said.

N.C. Election Bds. Told To 'Carry On'

By The Associated Press
Election boards in counties whose legislative districts were voided by a federal court decision should keep the candidate filing period open as planned until Monday's deadline, State Elections Director Alex Brock says.

"The only sound advice you can give anybody is to tell them to keep filing," Brock said Monday. "Then, whenever the General Assembly does whatever it does, you can make adjustments."

The state may appeal Friday's decision by three federal judges or may call a special session of the General Assembly to redraft five House and two Senate districts found in violation of federal voting rights laws. The judges gave North Carolina until March 16 to draw new districts that concentrate the black vote, but the Legislature is not scheduled to convene until June 7.

State Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, a member of the legislative leadership that will decide this week what course to take, favored appealing the decision. "I'm getting tired of the court's stem running the country," he said Monday.

The affected districts are Mecklenburg County's eight-seat House district and the four-seat Senate district including Mecklenburg and Cabarrus counties; four House districts representing Forsyth, Wake, Durham, Nash, Edgecombe and Wilson counties and a Senate district covering all or part of nine northeastern counties.

Legislative attorneys were scheduled to meet today with Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, Royall and other legislative leaders.

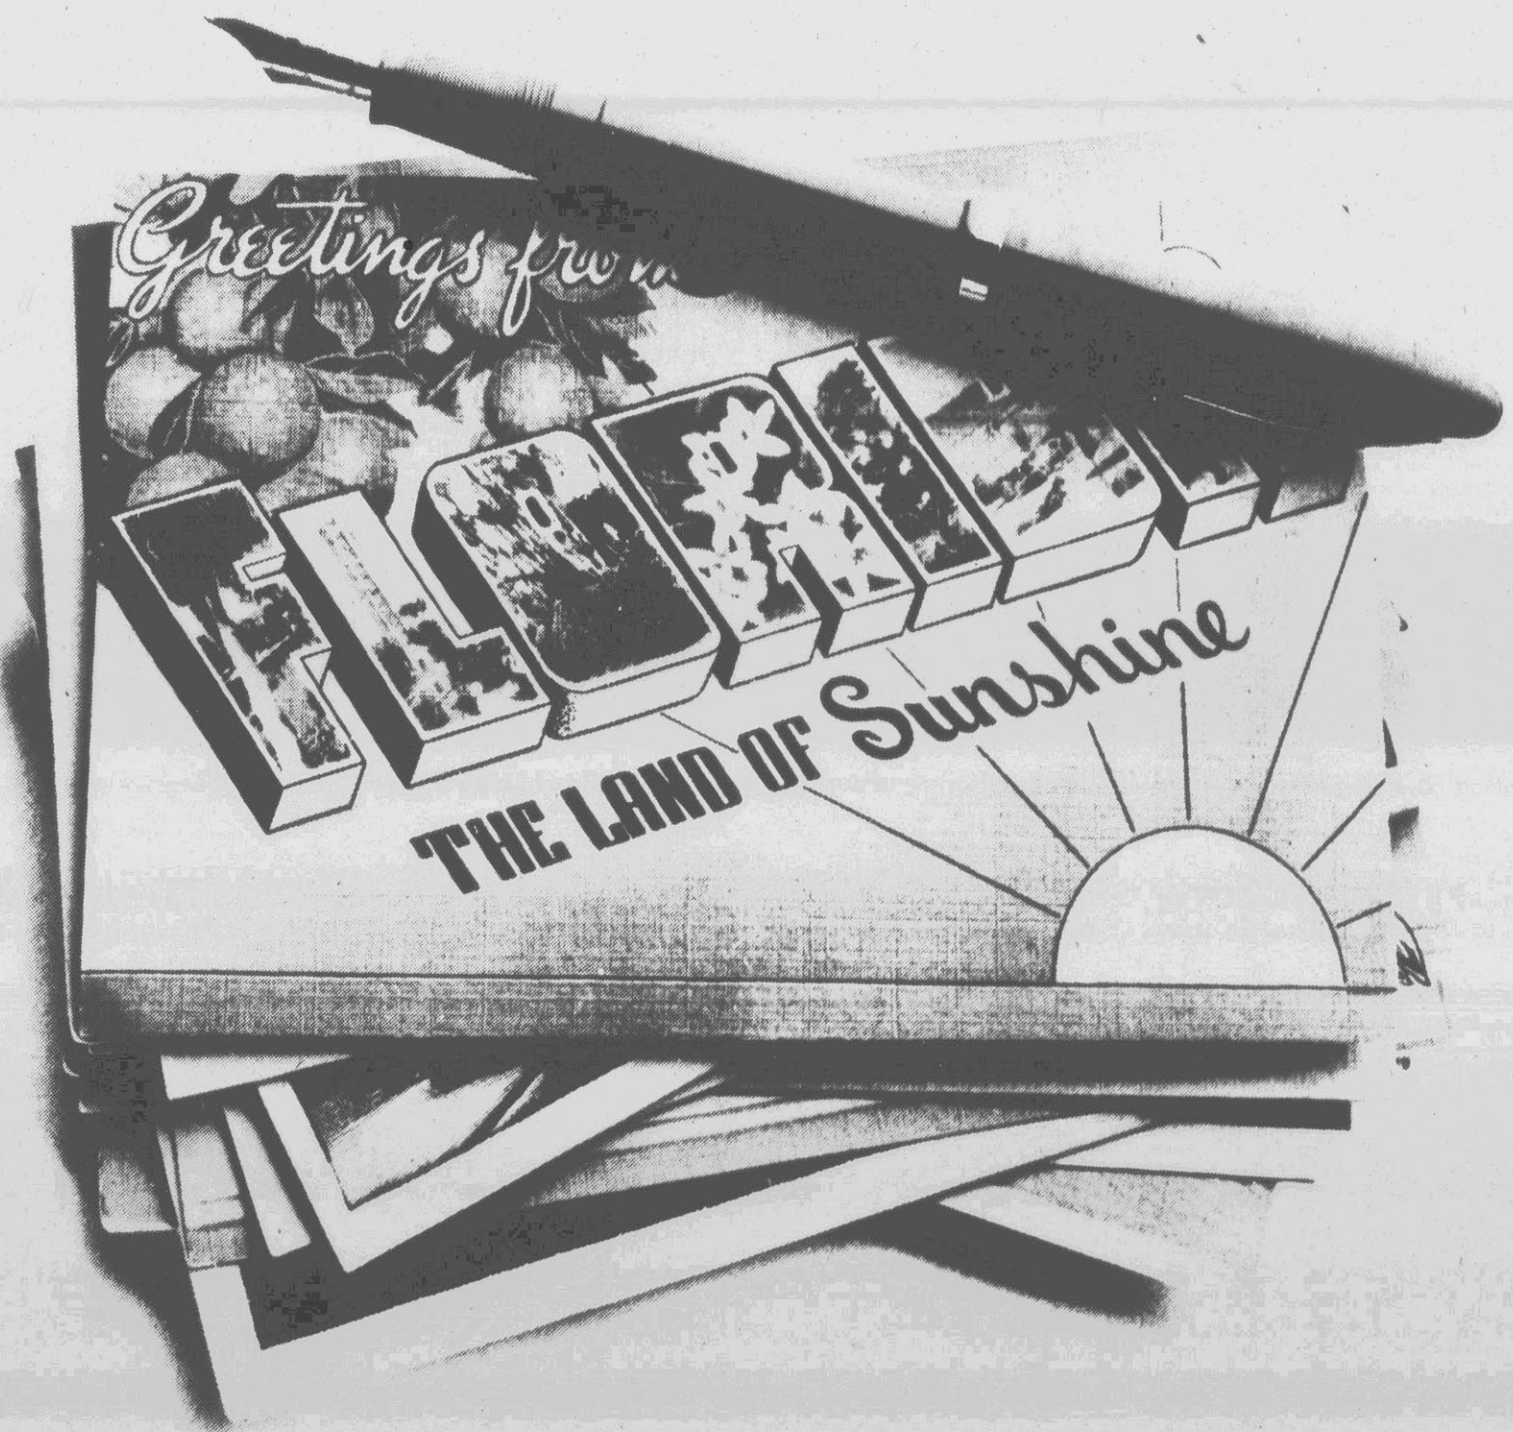

"I think we'll move to stay the order as regards the primary, since we're so close to the primary," said Terry Sullivan, head of the general research section of the Legislative Services Division.

NEW YORK (AP) — A stock market slump continued today with technology issues leading the broad decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 8.48 points Monday and off 65.12 points since Jan. 6, fell another 4.18 points to 1,217.34 at noon.

Nearly two stocks fell in price for every one that rose in the midday tally on the New York Stock Exchange.

Commodore International

was among the big losers, plunging 5 1/2 to 36% after a delayed opening. The company earlier announced the resignation of four executives and said plans to increase production capacity for its Commodore 64 computer had pushed back the introduction of a new model. Xerox, which said earnings in 1984 would not meet earlier estimates, fell 3% to 45%. National Semiconductor fell 1 1/2 to 14% but International Business Machines was unchanged at 113%.

Meanwhile, analysts said traders were disappointed with the lack of progress in reducing the growth of federal deficits and with the persistently high level of interest rates.

In economic developments, the government said today that sales of new single-family homes jumped 28.5 percent in December, a much stronger performance than analysts had been predicting. Earlier in the day, the Commerce Department reported that its main economic barometer, the Index of Leading Economic Index, rose 0.6 percent in December following a 0.2 percent decline in November, its 15th monthly gain in the last 16 months.

NL Industries topped the active list in the early going on the NYSE, down 1/4 to 14%, in trading that included a block of 1,165,700 shares changing hands at 14 a share.

Big Board volume reached 47.76 million shares a third of the way through today's session, against 48.67 million in the same period Monday. The NYSE's composite index fell .29 to 93.83. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .97 at 216.56.

Learning The Stock Market's Secrets

Members of the eighth grade gifted and talented class at A.G. Cox School have begun studying the stock market.

Students have followed the stock process, learned to read the stock market report in newspapers, discussed current trends, calculated dividend earnings and learned basic investment principles. Some of the students have begun playing a simulation game that allows them to experience the trading on the market.

Four students followed the trading on the market Monday, learning about local facilities for investments and working with brokers. Hall Dunn and Mark Schaffer spent the day at Interstate Securities. Stefani Unverforth and Cathrine Beckwith were a Wheat First Securities for the afternoon. The eighth-graders will report their experiences to their classmates.

DO IT YOURSELF!
 (Know When Not To)
 Being a "do it yourself" person can be satisfying and economical in some situations. As you assemble your data for your 1983 tax return, you may wonder if you shouldn't "do it yourself."
 The more complicated your affairs, the more likely you are to save time and cut your tax bill by using a professional tax return preparer. Here's a quick check list that you might use. If any of these situations applied to you in 1983, you will be better off using a professional and saving the do-it-yourself route for some other project.
 • If you had income from any extraordinary source: life insurance, pension or profit sharing plan distributions, or law suit settlements, for example.
 • If your income went up substantially and income averaging will apply.
 • If you had foreign source income.
 • If you acquired business or rental property.
 • If you sold your residence, your business, ranch or farm.
 • If you were active in commodities or the stock market.
 • If you moved from one state to another and will be required to file multiple state returns.
 • If you purchased from or sold to relatives or were engaged in other "related party" financial transactions.
 • If you operated your office or business out of your home.
 • If you had large, uninsured casualty losses.
 • If you went through a divorce and have alimony, child support, or property settlement concerns.
 • If you had expenses connected with your employment; i.e., away-from-home, travel, or entertainment expenses.
 • If any business investments or personal loans have become worthless.

Midshipmen Power By Pirates, 79-61

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — For the second time in as many outings the East Carolina University Pirates outscored their opponent from the field, only to come up on the low side of the final score.

Vernon Butler scored 26 points including 16 out of 18 from the free throw line to lead the Naval Academy to a 79-61 ECAC-South victory over the Pirates Monday. In all, the Midshipmen outscored ECU 29-9 from the free throw line.

Kylor Whitaker added 16 points for Navy and Rob Romaine 12 as the Midshipmen lifted their record to 2-3 in the conference and 16-6 overall.

Sophomore guard Curt Vanderhorst posted a career-high 22 points on the night, including 10 of 14 from the floor. Keith Sledge pulled down seven rebounds and Vanderhorst and Derrick Battle grabbed five each as the Pirates held a slim 27-25 edge in that category.

After making just 10 out of 22 shots from the field in the first half, the Midshipmen blistered the nets on 15 of 17 attempts in the second half for 64.1 percent overall. East Carolina shot a respectable 51 percent from the floor but connected on just nine of 17 free throws compared to 29 of 42 by Navy.

"We executed well on offense in the first half and our defense did a good job," ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said. "I told them at halftime there was three things Navy would probably do in the second half, and that's exactly what happened."

"They beat us to death physically inside. They went to their strength and the officials let them — we let them. Our kids are just not strong enough yet to competing that way."

Navy trailed 28-26 at intermission after leading most of the first half, but the Midshipmen bounced back to take the lead as Butler posted the first seven points of the second half for a 33-28 margin with 18:01 remaining.

Whitaker canned a pair of field goals and Butler added two of his free throws as Navy built a 46-38 lead at the 12:07 mark.

William Grady and Vanderhorst helped the Pirates cut the gap to two points less than two minutes later, but Romaine came alive with three of his field goals to lead a 10-3 scoring bulge as Navy's lead again expanded to nine.

A 17-footer by Vanderhorst and a pair of free throws by Leon Bass trimmed the margin to 56-51 at the 6:52 mark. Butler connected on two from the charity stripe, but Bass answered with a hook shot on the other end as the Pirates cut to 58-53 with 5:40 left in the game.

Then came the turning point of the game for ECU, as point guard Tony Robinson fouled out with 5:23 remaining. Whitaker added two free throws for Navy and Sledge answered with a field goal for the Pirates to stay within five points.

But from there the Pirates were forced to foul, and the Midshipmen responded by sinking 11 out of 12 from the line while outscoring ECU 19-4 in the final 4:09 of the game.

"When Tony went out it really hurt us," Harrison said. "Curt is capable of playing the point, but I think he's just not comfortable at that position now. Even still, if we had hit on the free throws we did get, the score would have been closer."

"The final score doesn't reflect the type of game it was. We were forced to foul late in the game and they made their free throws."

The Pirates found themselves in an unusual position at halftime — leading the game by a 28-26 margin and holding the edge on the boards as the Midshipmen were unable to utilize their advantages of size and experience.

The Pirates used their speed to erase the 11-point lead Navy mounted at the 11:53 mark. Butler and Mike Jones controlled the inside lanes early in the game, bucketing six points each while the Mids rolled up a 19-8 advantage.

ECU held a 19-11 rebounding advantage, with Vanderhorst and Sledge pulling in five each. Vanderhorst paced the Pirates with 10 points in the half.

But then ECU went to a pressure defense to force Navy into turnovers.

After Bass scored inside, Sledge popped in a 19-foot jumper and Vanderhorst added a pair of field goals before Roy Smith capped the scoring burst with a move inside to trim the margin to 19-18 with 7:10 left in the opening half.

Price used a back door play to get around Smith to set the Navy lead at three, and Butler added a free throw for a 22-18 gap.

But again the Pirates went on a scoring tear, as Grady sank a follow shot inside and Robinson swished another from 15 feet out to cut the margin to 24-22. Battle slammed home the tying bucket after a Robinson steal with 4:56 to play.

After Gary Price heaved an air ball from the free throw line, Romaine sank a pair to put the Midshipmen up by two at the 3:32 mark.

But Vanderhorst dropped one in from 19 feet and Battle scored inside to put the Pirates ahead at intermission.

The Pirates, now 3-14 on the season while winless in five ECAC-South outings, host George Mason Saturday in league rematch.

Lady Pirates Face William & Mary

East Carolina's Lady Pirates seek to get back on the winning track Wednesday night — and maintain their perfect record against ECAC-South teams — when they travel to Williamsburg, Va., to face William & Mary.

Tipoff is set for 5 p.m. and the game will be broadcast live over the Pirate Sports Network.

The Lady Indians were 6-11 overall and 0-2 in the league at the last reporting period — with one game left against George Mason before playing the Pirates.

William & Mary lost to Navy, 63-48, and to Richmond, 52-51, in their other two league contests.

The Lady Pirates are 2-0 in the conference and 8-9 overall after bowing to South Carolina on Saturday afternoon.

The game will be only the fourth meeting between the two schools — ECU winning all three. The last meeting, however, was three years ago, when ECU rolled up a 108-49 victory.

William & Mary's probably starters include no players with double figure scoring. They are 5-11 senior forward Janet Hanrahan, averaging 5.5; 5-9 senior forward Sandy DeSilvio, averaging 7.2; 6-2 senior center Betsy Becker, hitting 7.1; 5-3 senior guard Vicki Lutz, leading the team at 8.1; and 5-6 Debbie Taylor, a sophomore guard scoring 5.2 points a game.

Karen Jordan, who scored 23 points and 17 rebounds in two games a week ago, was the ECAC-South Rookie of the Week last week. She hit on 10 of 20 shots from the field in the two games and added three steals.

The contest is the last of the current road trip, as the Lady Pirates return home for games Saturday and Sunday.

Saturday afternoon at 3 p.m. in Minges Coliseum, the Lady Pirates host East Tennessee State, while Georgia Tech visits Greenville on Sunday at 3 p.m.

Lions, Gamblers Battle Over Sims

DETROIT (AP) — Attorney Steve Susman says he hopes to prove through questioning of Billy Sims that the All-Pro running back knew more about contract negotiations with the Detroit Lions and Houston Gamblers than he now admits.

Susman, lawyer for the Houston Gamblers football team, spent all of Monday questioning Sims in U.S. District Court from documents that the lawyer claims were given to Sims by his then-agent Jerry Argovitz during the course of the contract talks.

During testimony, Sims admitted that he "might have" seen some of the documents, but he can't recall seeing some of them. He added that he often signed papers given to him by Argovitz without seeing them.

Sims signed contracts with both the Gamblers of the United States Football League and the National Football League's Lions last year. He later sued to have the Gamblers' contract voided on the grounds that Argovitz had a conflict of interest while acting as both his agent and part owner of the team.

Testimony in the suit continued today.

During his testimony, Sims admitted that he wanted to help Argovitz build the Houston franchise, but added that the only reason he signed a contract with the USFL team was that Argovitz lied to him. When asked by Susman whether he believed that Argovitz "intentionally lied to you to get you to sign a contract with the Houston Gamblers," Sims replied, "Intentionally, yes."

Asked to elaborate on his charge, Sims said he believed Argovitz lied to him "due to the fact that he knew ongoing negotiations were going on with the Lions when I signed (with Houston)."

He added that he felt Argovitz had "frankly not been fair with me from the beginning . . . with the Lions negotiations."

Questioning Sims about his relationship with Argovitz, Susman asked whether "you ever considered yourself like his son," and the running back responded, "Yes, I did."

Driesell Suspends Branch, Rivers

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Two University of Maryland basketball players, charged with possession of marijuana, have been suspended by the university's head basketball coach, Lefty Driesell.

Driesell announced the indefinite suspension of starter Adrian Branch and substitute player Steve Rivers in a prepared statement Monday, after learning of their weekend arrest.

"The suspension will remain in effect until further investigation of this incident," Driesell said. "As the head basketball coach, I am concerned for the personal welfare of these two individuals and hope that these implications do not adversely affect their future," he added.

Dick Dull, the university's athletic director, said both he and John Slaughter, the chancellor of the university campus here, concurred with Driesell's decision.

"This department does not condone, nor will it accept the use of, or association with, illegal drugs by any student-athlete," Dull said. "The use of controlled substances, we believe, represents a danger to the health of student-athletes and a threat to the integrity of intercollegiate athletics."

Branch, 20, and Rivers, 21, were arrested Saturday night, along with Mizette V. Coakley, 23, of Silver Spring, after the players returned from a 52-47 roadtrip loss to Notre Dame. They were released on their own recognizance, pending a hearing which was to be set at a later date.

Robert Law, spokesman for Prince George's County Police, said the arrests were made by undercover members of the county's drug enforcement task force, which was operating in nearby Hyattsville.

Law said officers observed a car being "approached by a man, and there was an exchange from the car to the man on the curb and vice versa." Law said the undercover officers followed the car and called for uniformed officers to assist in a traffic stop.

"As the car was stopped, officers observed a passenger attempt to conceal an object under the front seat," said Law. The occupants of the car were asked to get out, and officers "recovered two small packets from under the right front seat," he said.

Law said Branch was the driver of the car, and he identified Coakley as the girlfriend of one of the players. All three were formally charged with possession of a controlled and dangerous substance.

Branch, a 6-foot-8 junior who plays both guard and forward, had scored just nine points in his last two games as his season scoring average dropped to 12.1 points a game.

In his first season, Branch set a Maryland freshman record 442 points and led the Terps with a 15.2 average. He was the scoring leader again as a sophomore at 18.7. In three years, he has started 73 games and missed two because of injuries.

'Gutty Call' Leads Duke Past Georgia Tech, 69-68

By The Associated Press

Duke used a "gutty call" to nip Atlantic Coast Conference foe Georgia Tech in the final seconds and North Carolina State continued its resurgence with a victory over nonconference foe Missouri.

David Henderson hit the second of two free throws after being fouled as time expired to give Duke a 69-68 basketball victory over the Yellow Jackets Monday night.

In the only other game involving an ACC team on Monday, junior forward Lorenzo Charles scored 20 points to lead four N.C. State players in double figures as the Wolfpack defeated Missouri 66-53.

Duke, which blew an early 15-point lead early, overcame a nine-point deficit in the final 4:37 to snap Tech's Alexander Coliseum winning streak at 14 games.

Tech tried to run out the clock over the final two minutes but lost the ball three times to open the door for Duke.

Tommy Amaker cut the lead to 68-66 with a layup with 2:16 to play, but missed the free throw that followed. After Mark Alarie tied it at 68 with 49 seconds left, Henderson stole a pass by freshman Bruce Dalrymple and was fouled as he put up a shot at the buzzer.

"The play at the end was a gutty call," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said. "We were hoping that I would run a play right there at the end. I thought about calling time out, but I wanted to go ahead and run the play. I thought we would get something out of it."

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said the Blue Devils "knew coming in that we were going to face a very good basketball team."

"I thought in the last four minutes of the ball game every one of our kids made some big plays. I thought defensively we did some nice things," he said.

Duke, 16-5 overall and 3-4 in the ACC, surged to a 43-28 lead with 2:20 left in the first half — the biggest deficit Tech has faced this year. But the Yellow Jackets, 14-4 and 4-3, used a 12-0 spurt to cut the margin to 43-40 at intermission and then tallied the first six points in the second half for a 46-43 lead.

Johnny Dawkins led Duke with 20 points, Alarie added 19 and Henderson had 11.

Dalrymple paced the Yellow Jackets with 18 points, and Price added 16.

In Raleigh, N.C. State used a 14-7 run early in the second half to pull away from a 34-25 halftime lead. The biggest Wolfpack lead of 48-32 came with 12:36 left on Ernie Myers' 21-foot shot from the corner.

Charles hit 8 of 10 shots from the floor, as the Wolfpack shot 60 percent from the floor in the first half and was 52 percent for the night.

Charles enjoyed a rare treat against the Tigers, not facing the normal double-team he's seen in recent weeks.

"I kept looking around. I thought they were running a trick," Charles said. "I really didn't understand that."

Missouri coach Norm

Stewart said nothing he tried on Charles seemed to slow him down.

"He was so strong. We tried to front him, and that gave him some board position and he got some put-backs on us," Stewart said.

Williams Leads Hoyas

By The Associated Press
Michael Jackson couldn't make it, so understudy Reggie Williams took over and made beautiful music for the Georgetown five.

"I didn't realize he (Jackson) wasn't going to play until he went onto the floor to warm up," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "At that point, I put Reggie in the starting lineup. He did an excellent job. He does a lot of things now by mistake, so when he learns how to play he's going to be dangerous."

All Williams did Monday night was pump in 22 points to lead fourth-ranked Georgetown to an 80-67 victory over No. 13 Syracuse before a crowd of 30,758 in the losers' Carrier Dome.

Elsewhere, third-ranked Kentucky pulled away in the second half and whipped Tennessee 93-74, ninth-ranked Memphis State got 29 points and a last-second block from Keith Lee to hold off Virginia Tech 63-62, No. 17 Louisville downed Southern Mississippi 63-56 and No. 18 Georgia Tech "celebrated" a rare appearance in the Associated Press Top Twenty by losing to Duke 69-68 when David Henderson hit the second of two free throws after time ran out.

Top Ten

Although Jackson's injured ankle was too sore for him to play, Williams' performance was a case of deja vu. Last year, Jackson, then a freshman guard, scored what was then a Carrier Dome record 31 points to help Georgetown beat Syracuse.

Williams had plenty of help. Sophomore David Wingate added 18 points and 7-foot center Patrick Ewing, held scoreless in the first half, scored four baskets in the second half and keyed a tough zone defense that slowed down the high-scoring Orangemen.

It was the first Big East Conference setback for Syracuse, 14-4 over-all and 8-1 — eight consecutive victories was a Big East record — in league play.

Georgetown is 18-2, 7-1. Rafael Addison led Syracuse with 18 points.

Georgetown trailed 37-34 at halftime, but Ewing put the Hoyas in the lead for good 52-51 on a layup with 8:38 remaining. In the next 39 seconds, Bill Martin sank a basket and Williams made two free throws for a 56-51 lead.

"They (Syracuse) were playing a zone and collapsing on him (Ewing)," Thompson said. "The important thing was for the other players to capitalize. Patrick becomes a playmaker by accident when he's double- and triple-teamed; he doesn't have to touch the ball."

Kenny Walker scored 18 of his 21 points in the second half as Kentucky turned back Tennessee and improved its record to 16-2 and 7-2 in the Southeastern Conference. Walker brought the Rupp Arena crowd to its feet with a backward stuff to give Kentucky a 77-62 lead with 5:02 left.

The Wildcats, who led by 14 points in the first half and by 10 at the intermission, let Tennessee score seven straight points to pull within 54-53 with 11:21 remaining. But Kentucky outscored the Vols 23-9 in the next six minutes, with Walker scoring 10 points on two dunks and a pair of three-point plays.

"It's been that way all year. I don't know what it is," Walker said of his second-half performance. "I had two fouls and sat out a lot of the first half. So I came out after halftime like I was starting over again."

Lee's heroics against Virginia Tech paced Memphis State to its eighth straight triumph and gave the Tigers a Metro Conference record of 6-0 and 15-3 overall. Lee, who also had 11 rebounds, blocked a 20-foot shot by Dell Curry with five seconds left that could have meant victory for Virginia Tech. Bobby Parks added 16 points for Memphis State, which trailed by 10 points in the first half.

"I told the boys when we were down by 10 to play defense and get back in the game one basket at a time," said Coach Dana Kirk.

Second Ten

Louisville, 13-5 overall and 6-0 in league action, kept pace with Memphis in the Metro as sophomore forward Billy Thompson scored 18 points and pulled down eight rebounds against Southern Mississippi. Louisville used an 8-1 spurt at the start of the second half to erase a 28-27 deficit and the Cardinals' full-court pressure defense forced Southern into 18 turnovers.

In addition to Thompson's 18 points, Milt Wagner and Lancaster Gordon each had 14 points and Charles Jones added 11. Southern Mississippi was led by Curtis Green with 20.

"We played well in the first half, but they just made everything," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum. "I wanted us to put a little more pressure on them in the second half, and I think we did that."

Duke blew a 15-point lead against Georgia Tech and then overcame a nine-point deficit in the final 4:37 before Henderson was fouled as time expired. His free throw snapped Tech's 14-game home court winning streak.

The losers tried to run out the clock in the final two minutes, but were victimized by a steal and two turnovers. With 49 seconds remaining, a basket by Duke's Mark Alarie tied the score 68-68. Tech was holding for the final shot when freshman Bruce Dalrymple made a move toward the basket only to have the ball stripped by Henderson, who dribbled the length of the court and was fouled by John Salley as he put up a shot at the buzzer.

"The play at the end was a gutty call," said Tech Coach Bobby Cremins. "We were hoping that we would run a play right there at the end. I thought about calling time out, but I wanted to go ahead and run the play. I thought we would get something off of it."

Smith's Progress Checked Daily

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)

The progress of North Carolina point guard Kenny Smith, who broke his wrist in the top-ranked Tar Heels' 90-79 victory over LSU on Sunday, will be monitored daily, team officials say.

Smith will probably be out of action for a month, said team physician Dr. Joseph DeWalt. Smith's injury was diagnosed as a fracture of the scaphoid bone, and DeWalt said a cast has been placed on the wrist.

"We plan to follow Kenny's progress daily," DeWalt said. "We will re-evaluate his condition in one month."

Smith, a 6-foot-2 player from Queens, N.Y., has been the Tar Heel starting point guard and averaged 10.1 points per game and 5.2 assists.

North Carolina coach Dean Smith said sophomore Steve Hale and junior Buzz Peterson will share time at the point guard position.

"We're disappointed for Kenny because he has been playing so well and was making good improvement defensively," Smith said. "I just hope this won't be too big of a setback for him. I'm disappointed for our team because Kenny has played a major role in our success. He will certainly be missed."

Smith said playing without the freshman point guard will require some adjustments, and the first test will come against Clemson Wednesday night.

The re-evaluation date would come before the last week of the regular season, but DeWalt said it was too early to say if Smith might return at that time.

Teammate Michael Jordan said the loss of Smith could mean trouble for the top-ranked Tar Heels.

"We have to have Kenny,"

Jordan said Sunday before the extent of Smith's injury was known. "He's the guy who makes us tick. If there's anything seriously wrong with him, we could be in trouble."

Smith broke the wrist when LSU's John Tudor fouled him while attempting to block a dunk shot. Both players were well above the rim when the foul occurred, and Smith was slammed to the floor.

Smith also received a chin cut that required three stitches to close.

Tar Heels Top Polls

NEW YORK (AP) — North Carolina, which overcame three Top 20 teams last week and remained unbeaten, kept its huge lead atop the Associated Press weekly college basketball poll in rankings released today.

But for the first time in three weeks, North Carolina's support as the No. 1 team was not unanimous. A panel of 62 sports writers and broadcasters rewarded Coach Dean Smith's squad, 17-0, with 61 first place votes, while the other first-place vote went to No. 2 DePaul.

North Carolina received 1,239 points in the voting and DePaul collected 1,171. The balloting system awards 20 points for each first place vote, 19 for second, etc.

North Carolina — which downed No. 15 Wake Forest 100-63, No. 18 Georgia Tech 73-61 and No. 14 Louisiana State 90-79 — must face the next month without freshman guard Kenny Smith, who suffered a broken wrist in Sunday's game against LSU.

DePaul, 16-0, defeated Princeton 50-39 and routed UCLA 84-68, handing the Bruins only their 18th loss in 297 games at Pauley Pavilion.

While Kentucky and Georgetown remained at Nos. 3 and 4, respectively, four teams did some climbing in the Top Ten.

Thanks to Notre Dame's upset of previously fifth-ranked Maryland, Nevada-Las Vegas, Houston, Texas-El Paso and Illinois all moved up a notch to Nos. 5, 6, 7, and 8, respectively.

A newcomer in this week's Top Ten is Memphis State, which defeated No. 12 Oklahoma last Saturday 69-65. The Tigers are now No. 9, coming up from 13, while Maryland slipped to No. 10.

There were three teams to this week's poll. Purdue, tied with Illinois for the Big Ten lead, re-entered the rankings at No. 16 while Georgia Tech and Auburn appear for the first time this season at Nos. 18 and 19, respectively.

The three casualties: former No. 16 Arkansas, which was surprised by Rice and Villanova, Georgia and Virginia, previously Nos. 18 and 19.

Also in the Second Ten, Tulsa, 17-1, climbed a notch to

THE DAILY REFLECTOR is getting an exciting, fresh new look!!!

In a recent survey of Pitt County residents 91% agreed with the statement, "THE DAILY REFLECTOR is well organized and it is easy to find what I want to read". The new, updated look will make your local newspaper better than ever.

*RMH Research, River Edge, N.J., December, 1983

Starting Wednesday, February 1, THE DAILY REFLECTOR will change from the current 8-column format to a cleaner, easier-to-read 6 column format newspaper.

Over the past several years, the newspaper industry in the United States has been working on a plan that would standardize the size of all newspapers published in this country. So far, over 90% of the daily newspapers have voluntarily agreed to change to the new standard by July 1, 1984.

A LOOK AT THE OLD AND THE NEW!

OLD 8 COLUMN

This column is an example of the old look. It represents the narrow newspaper columns of the past which are giving way to the wider, easier to read look of the six column format.

Experts have long contended that numerous eye movements from line to line make reading tiresome and difficult. And they say, the frequent hyphenations which are necessary in a narrow column make comprehension poor.

The Daily Reflector will be changing from this old format on February 1, 1984 to the new 6-column format.

NEW 6 COLUMN

This column is an example of the new look! It represents the wider and easier to read appearance of the six-column format, which will soon be replacing the narrower newspaper columns of the past.

Experts have long contended that numerous eye movements from line to line make reading tiresome and difficult. And they say, the frequent hyphenations which are necessary in a narrow column make comprehension poor.

The Daily Reflector will be changing to this new format on February 1, 1984.

Turnbull Eyes $30,000 Virginia Slims Prize

HOUSTON (AP) — Wendy Turnbull has bought a new home in Florida and likes to spend her spare time on the women's pro tennis tour reading up on ideas for decorating.

A check for $30,000 would help her decorative touch and Turnbull moved a step closer to that prize Monday night with a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Great Britain's Amanda Brown in a first round match of the $150,000 Virginia Slims Tournament of Houston.

Turnbull, 31, who also maintains a home in Sandgate, Australia, took care of house cleaning quickly against Brown, needing only one hour to move into the second round despite an inconsistent serve.

"I am famous for three-set matches but I'm happy with a two-setter for the first round," Turnbull said. "I'd never played her before and I have trouble with people I've never played."

Turnbull struggled with her serve but made up for it with the quickness that earned her the nickname of "Rabbit."

"It's definitely a challenge to get to those drop shots," she said, "and I'm still getting to them."

Turnbull made a low percentage of her first serves although she was broken only once in the match — in the sixth game of the first set. In that game, Turnbull served an ace and double faulted on successive points.

Brown, ranked 86th in the world, fought off one match point before Turnbull won it on two backhand errors by Brown, the second sailing into the net on a return of service.

In earlier first round matches, Manuela Maleeva, Bulgaria, defeated Catarina Lindqvist, Sweden, 7-5, 6-3; Pam Casale, United States, defeated Beth Herr, United States, 6-1, 7-6 (7-2).

Rousing Adventure Film Ready

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "The Master of Ballantrae," tonight on CBS, is a lusty, visually appealing adaptation of Robert Louis Stevenson's classic novel of sibling rivalry run amok.

Producers of the three-hour, made-for-TV movie rewrote Stevenson to give the story a happy, albeit slightly ominous, ending. Otherwise, they did all their work in England, Scotland and Wales, and the effect is an air of period authenticity sullied only by Richard Thomas' dismal effort to sound like a Scotsman.

The movie, another impressive "Hallmark Hall of Fame" production, is set in 1745.

Thomas, a silly sight in pigtail and tricorn hat, plays Henry Durie, who becomes master of Ballantrae by default when his elder brother, James (Michael York), leaves home to join Bonnie Prince Charles' fight to reclaim England for his father, the deposed King James II, and is killed in the battle of Culloden.

Or so it appears.

James, of course, survives his seemingly mortal wounds and lives to hound and haunt his hapless brother for years.

After Culloden, he escapes from England with his Irish companion, Burke (Timothy Dalton), on a pirate ship, and eventually they conspire to subvert and then kill Captain Edward Teach, the infamous Blackbeard. They cart off Teach's treasure, and bury the loot in America.

Ultimately, James decides to return to Scotland and recover what he considers his own. "He shall pay for this," James vows to Burke. "He sits in my place. He courts my intended. He claims my name."

It's not really Henry's fault, but he's such a bloodless hero that it's difficult to feel for his plight, even when Alison Graeme (Finola Hughes), James' "intended," tells him:

"If you want me now, Henry, you can have me. I'll offer you no love, but you deserve better than you've had."

Not much of a commitment, but Henry is willing to marry the dark beauty ... and take her fortune.

James' motives are less than noble. It's plain he wants the estate, and his "intended," for the wealth they will bring him. He finds his father Lord Durrisdeer (John Gielgud) a sympathetic, if unwitting ally.

"You must not begrudge your brother his place," the elderly man tells Henry. "I certainly feel gratitude for all you have done, and I'm sure James does, too."

But James is neither grateful, nor gracious: "With all your dull, solid qualities," he tells his brother, "I've never known a woman who didn't prefer me. And that pertains, as we both know, to your own wife."

Even Henry can't let that pass, and an artfully staged swordfight ensues. James "dies" a second time, though by the time the family reaches the scene of the duel, his body has disappeared.

York is terrific as the villainous James, especially alongside Thomas' sappy Henry. And, of course, Gielgud is impeccable as Lord Durrisdeer.

The supporting cast is superb, notably Ian Richardson as Mackeller, who is hired by Henry to oversee the family estate, Brian Blessed as the wacky, marvelously evil pirate, Teach, and Nicholas Grace as James' "Indian gentleman" companion, Secundra Dass.

Stevenson undoubtedly did not intend his novel to be read at a single sitting, and compressing a sweeping and melodramatic tale told on three continents into one evening is risky business. The movie jumps from Scotland to frontier America to India without preamble, and that kind of globe-trotting can be unsettling.

In contrast, the pace is quick and ultimately satisfying.

It's as if the filmmakers took Lord Durrisdeer's admonition to Henry as their own:

"Either speak your piece or hold your tongue. But spare me your equivocation."

Consolidation continues to be the way of life for cable-TV. Lifetime, the result of a merger of Daytime evening.

The 24-hour basic-cable service will feature programming on health, family, lifestyles and personal relationships.

Jackson May File Suit Over Fireworks Burns

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pop star Michael Jackson may file suit for damages because of injuries he suffered when fireworks set his hair on fire during filming of a commercial, his lawyer says.

The 25-year-old singer is recovering quickly and won't have to cancel any scheduled appearances because of the accident, said Larry Larson, a secretary for Jackson's tour manager. A tour reuniting the singer and his brothers is still scheduled for May, he said.

Jackson hopes to attend a New York party being given Feb. 7 by Epic Records to honor the Guinness Book of World Records' inclusion of his "Thriller" album as the most successful in recording history by a single performer, attorney John Branca said Monday.

Branca said Jackson is considering suing whoever was at fault for the mishap that burned his head Friday during filming of a commercial for Pepsi-Cola.

"I think it's an outrage that this thing has occurred at all," Branca said. A decision on legal strategies will be made after a review of the film and five camera-angle reference videotapes is completed today, he said.

Branca said "no final decision" has been made on whether to make film of the accident public. He had earlier indicated it would be.

Jackson was hurt during filming of the last scene of the Pepsi commercial, which was to be broadcast during the Grammy Awards on Feb. 28. A review of videotapes indicated that a mistimed firework sprayed Jackson with sparks and set his pomaded hair aflame, said Jackson's physician, Dr. Steven Hoefflin.

Branca said Jackson wanted to thank his friends and fans "for the love, flowers, telegrams and support they have been sending him.... He especially wants to thank his dear friends Jane Fonda, Brooke Shields, Diana Ross, Yul Brynner, Liza Minnelli, John Travolta, Quincy Jones and Paul McCartney."

In Purchase, N.Y., officials of the Pepsi-Cola Co. met Monday to decide what to do about the two big-budget commercials Jackson starred in, said Ken Ross, a company spokesman.

Neither the soft drink company nor Jackson's attorney would discuss how much the commercials cost, but during filming Ross said "all stops have been pulled out" for the ads.

Hoefflin issued a statement Monday saying Jackson was continuing his recovery and was "in good spirits." He reiterated that no surgery would be considered for several weeks, until he sees how much of Jackson's scalp and hair return to the palm-sized burn area.

Hoefflin said Sunday the singer will receive outpatient treatment away from the hospital, with doctors on call.

Jackson, nominated for 12 Grammy Awards, already has won eight American Music Awards this year. His "Thriller" LP has sold 20 million copies, making it the second largest selling album in history behind "Saturday Night Fever." It is the largest selling album ever by a single performer.

Will Wed When 'Find The Time'

LONDON (AP) — Swedish actress Britt Ekland, 41, is saying she'll marry her 22-year-old drummer boyfriend — Jim McDonnell of the pop group Stray Cats — "whenever we find the time," a magazine reports.

Ms. Ekland also said she considers her relationship with McDonnell "the best I've ever had."

The actress, once married to the late Peter Sellers, was quoted by Women's Own magazine as saying: "It has nothing to do with age whatever. He's a very intellectual person. We're right for each other mentally and emotionally.

"He has taught me a lot of things — in many ways he's a lot more mature than I am."

Miss Ekland said part of "the excitement" of being her age is that she has "all this knowledge and experience — and has finally learned how to use it."

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area Monday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was .32. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 32 percent of your hot water needs.

Tomorrow President Reagan is scheduled to submit his 1985 fiscal year budget, which is expected to include a $180 billion deficit. If you placed dollar bills end-to-end, a trip to the moon and back would require about 5 billion dollars. That means the projected 1985 deficit — in dollar bills — could reach the moon and back 35 times! President Reagan's proposed military budget will cost taxpayers $38 million an hour during the next five years.

DO YOU KNOW — In what year did the federal government last have a budget surplus?
MONDAY'S ANSWER — Salt Lake City is the capital of Utah.

Just one week from his 81st birthday Oswald Jacoby, with some help from Edgar Kaplan, Norman Kay, Bill Root and Richard Pavlicek, won the Reisinger Board-A-Match team event at the Fall North American Championships in Miami. The latter four were the defenders in the event.

There has never been a more popular win. Jacoby, who is fighting cancer, becomes the oldest player ever to win a major U.S. championship, and he has earned a spot in the Trials to select the team for the 1985 world team championships. We hope that he wins that one, too.

Fine play by Ozzie won a full board for his team on this deal from the final. He stretched a little for his free bid of two spades, but caught his partner, Edgar Kaplan, with a good hand. Note that Kaplan put no strain on his partner. He raised to four spades—had he bid only three, Jacoby surely would not have bid again.

Against four spades West led a low diamond. Declarer won in dummy and led a heart to the king and ace. West now decided to be brilliant and underled his ace

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — More than $1 million in filtration equipment has been donated to the University of Rhode Island Foundation to study how pollutants can be removed from air and liquids.

Fram Corp., which made the donation, will also underwrite the services of two scientists for 18 months to develop advanced research in automotive and industrial filtration.

CRIES IGNORED BERLIN (AP) — Police say neighbors ignored cries for help from the wife and two children of an engineer who killed them with a hatchet before setting himself afire Monday.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will literally roam the universe and should have as comprehensive an education as possible, including political training. Teach early to be more cooperative with others since there is the tendency to be overly independent.

AARP Offers Retirees Assistance On Tax-Filing

Retirement is a time to reap the harvest of one's life, a time to collect on the dues paid for decades. Having income from a pension, Social Security and maybe a small nest egg makes it possible to enjoy this time of life.

For many retirees it's not that easy. Retirement can be a time of personal struggle that demands a financial balancing act. Whether your retirement is a bountiful harvest or a high-wire feat, it's important that you get all you're entitled to at tax time, says the North Carolina Association of CPAs.

As the tax deadline nears, be sure you know how much money you can earn before you must file a return, how much you may earn before losing some of your Social Security benefits, if you're eligible for a tax credit to the elderly and where to go for help with filling out your tax return.

If you are 65 or older, you can claim extra exemptions: one as a taxpayer plus another exemption for your age. If your spouse is also 65 or older and you file a joint return, you claim four exemptions. This means that individuals do not have to file an income tax return unless income is $4,300 or more. That's $2,000 in exemptions plus $2,300 for the standard deduction, or zero bracket amount as it is now known. If you are married and file a joint return, you do not have to file unless your combined gross income is more than $7,400.

If you receive Social Security benefits, you can earn some extra income without losing any benefits. If you are over 65 but under 70, you can earn up to $6,600 without losing any benefits. For each $2 you earn above $6,600, you will lose $1 of your benefits. If you are 70 or older, you can earn any amount without losing any benefits.

Retirees receiving Social Security benefits should also be aware of a new wrinkle in the tax law that could expose benefits to taxation next year.

To determine if your 1984 benefits will be taxed, add up your adjusted gross income, half of your annual Social Security benefits and any interest you receive from tax-exempt bonds. For individuals, if the total of those three numbers is greater than $25,000, you will pay tax on half of your benefits or half the excess above $25,000, whichever is less. For married couples filing jointly, if the sum of those three numbers is greater than $32,000, they will be taxed in the same manner.

Anyone 65 or older should know about the tax credit for the elderly. It can cut as much as $375 from a single taxpayer's bill, and $562.50 from the tax bill of a couple filing jointly. The credit is mainly for those who do not receive Social Security benefits, so the income limitations are tight. Still, more than 200,000 people received the credit in 1981.

To qualify for the credit you must receive less than $208 a month in Social Security benefits if you are single. If you are married and both you and your spouse are over 65, you can receive no more than $312 a month in Social Security benefits. In addition, single people applying for the credit must have an adjusted gross income below $12,500. A qualified married couple must have an adjusted gross income below $17,500.

Figuring the credit can be complicated, however. If you think you pass the Social Security and income test for receiving the credit, you may want to get some help in figuring out what you're entitled to. And help is available.

The American Association of Retired Persons sponsors a free nationwide outreach program that helps the elderly file income tax returns. Last year, the Tax-Aide program assisted more than a million persons through their 19,000 IRS-trained volunteers. If you are unable to go to them, Tax-Aide volunteers will come to your home.

License Plate Idea Rejected

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Some states feature the state flower, others the state bird — but Indiana legislators just couldn't get hip to a license plate featuring the state rock star.

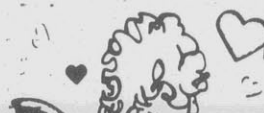

In a tongue-in-cheek amendment answering complaints about the new rainbow-colored "Wander Indiana" plates, Rep. Charlie Brown suggested a replacement on Monday featuring supersinger Michael Jackson, who hails from Gary.

The sample shown by Brown, who represents Jackson's hometown, bore the slogan "Beat It to Indiana," with a picture of the entertainer dividing the reference to his hit song "Beat It" and the state name.

The House rejected the Jackson plates, as well as Brown's alternative offerings — a plate featuring a picture of American League rookie of the year Ron Kittle, also from Gary, and a third depicting rock singer John Cougar Mellencamp of Seymour.

DIVIDED TOWN MOUNT VERNON, N.Y. (AP) — This city has literally been divided in half since 1894 by a 26-foot deep trench created by the tracks of the New Haven Railroad, which cuts through the heart of the downtown business district.

City officials say the division has been a barrier to the area's development.

Reasons For Low N.C. Auto Insurance Rates Cited

By CRAIG WEBB
 RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolinians enjoy some of the lowest rates for auto insurance in the United States, but the factors that caused those bargain premiums appear likely to push prices up in the future. North Carolina had the fourth-cheapest insurance rates for private passenger auto coverage in 1982, according to a study by industry researcher A.M. Best Co. The state's rate was $210.72 per car, compared with the national average of $298.30. New Jersey, at $455.80 per car, had the most expensive rate of all states and the District of Columbia, while Alabama trailed the pack at $190.55.

Industry experts cite several reasons for North Carolina's bargain rates. Among them:

— Settlements in North Carolina lawsuits traditionally total less than the national average. One reason why may be the law banning suits by drivers who were partially at fault for an accident, although attorneys who want that law changed disagree.

— "It's a good conservative climate here," said Benjamin F. Seagle III, a lobbyist for Aetna Life and Casualty Insurance Co.

— Semi-private hospital rooms in North Carolina from July through September 1983 cost an average of $126 per night, the second lowest price in the country. District of Columbia hospitals were the nation's most expensive at $297 per day.

— North Carolina has the sixth lowest urban population rate in the country. Just 48 percent of the state's residents live in communities with over 2,500 people. Even North Carolina's largest city, Charlotte, had just 314,000 people in 1982, ranking it only 47th largest in the nation.

— North Carolina stood 40th in per-capita income in 1981, meaning that settlements to repay lost income do not have to be as large as in wealthier states.

— North Carolina had 11,105 motor vehicle thefts in 1982, far below the totals of such states with similar populations as Indiana (17,871) and Massachusetts (55,995).

— The state's moderate climate cuts the number of weather-related mishaps. Ironically, safe driving has nothing to do with the state's good rates. North Carolina in 1980 had more traffic deaths per 100,000 people, per 100,000 vehicles and per 100 million vehicle miles than the national average.

No matter what state an insurance company serves, it must take in enough money to cover losses and pay expenses. That income can come either from the premiums the firm collects or from dollars it makes by investing the premiums.

In the late 1970s and early 1980s, when interest rates soared, insurers could afford to forego rate increases because they were raking in so much money from their investments. Rises in insurance rates trailed general growth in the Consumer Price Index from 1973 through 1981. But the break for consumers ended about 1982, when interest rates began falling. Since 1981, the index for auto insurance has risen 20.77 percent compared with just 11.27 percent for all consumer items.

In North Carolina, there are signs the rates will edge closer to national norms. A study by Jury Verdict Research Inc., an Ohio-based study group, found that personal injury verdicts in North Carolina were 15 percent below the national average in 1978-82, but just 3 percent under in 1979-83.

"Traditionally, North Carolina verdicts have been much lower than the national average," said Bill Thorpe, an attorney from Raleigh who has spent the past 30 years handling personal injury cases. "I'd say in the last six years, the verdict in spotty areas (of the state) seems to be coming up with verdicts in other parts of the country. Juries are beginning to recognize the high cost of medical care and replacing labor." Demographics also matter. Most of the 1.3 million people predicted to fatten North Carolina's population by the year 2000 are expected to live in the Piedmont. That will increase traffic density, making accidents more likely — and thus triggering higher rates.

Car Struck By Crashing Plane

GREENSBORO (AP) — A plane making an emergency landing — apparently because of mechanical problems — avoided apartment buildings and utility lines but hit a car and crashed in a busy suburban area of Greensboro, killing the pilot and injuring three others.

The pilot, the Rev. Dr. Clyde Parker, pastor of First Wesleyan Church of High Point, died on Monday in the crash of the single-engine Cessna airplane. Staff Duty Officer Dwight Nesbitt of the Greensboro Police Department said.

Injured were Parker's son, Ronnie Parker of Kernersville; Kenneth Maddox of Salisbury; and William Earnhart of Mebane, Nesbitt said. Maddox was taken to the Chapel Hill Burn Center where he was listed in critical condition, Nesbitt said.

Earnhardt and Parker were treated and released at Moses Cone Hospital, he said.

Greensboro Police Major Sylvester Daughtry said that it was "extremely fortunate" that the death and injury toll wasn't greater.

The plane crashed about 2 p.m. on Cone Boulevard at the intersection of Lawndale Avenue, Nesbitt said. Federal Aviation Administration officials said the plane was practicing approaches to the Greensboro-High Point Airport when the engine stalled and the plane crashed.

The plane reportedly struck a car, veered and burst into flames. The crash occurred less than 100 yards from two sets of apartments and only a half-block from a Sears Catalog Order plant.

R.L. Powell, chief of the Greensboro Fire Department, said the occupants of the car were not seriously injured.

"It felt like the rear of my car was hit by lightning," said Sam Foy of Greensboro, the driver of the car. "All of a sudden I felt I was going 100 miles an hour."

"I slammed on brakes and hit a sign on the median. I looked to my right and saw that I had been hit by a plane," he said.

Nesbitt said traffic was snarled around the crash scene.

Hail 'Best' Lavatory

LONDON (AP) — A British company that makes bathroom and lavatory fittings has offered a tip of the lid to the public lavatory near St. Paul's Church in Covent Garden — the first recipient of the company's "Golden Loo" award for Britain's best-maintained public facilities.

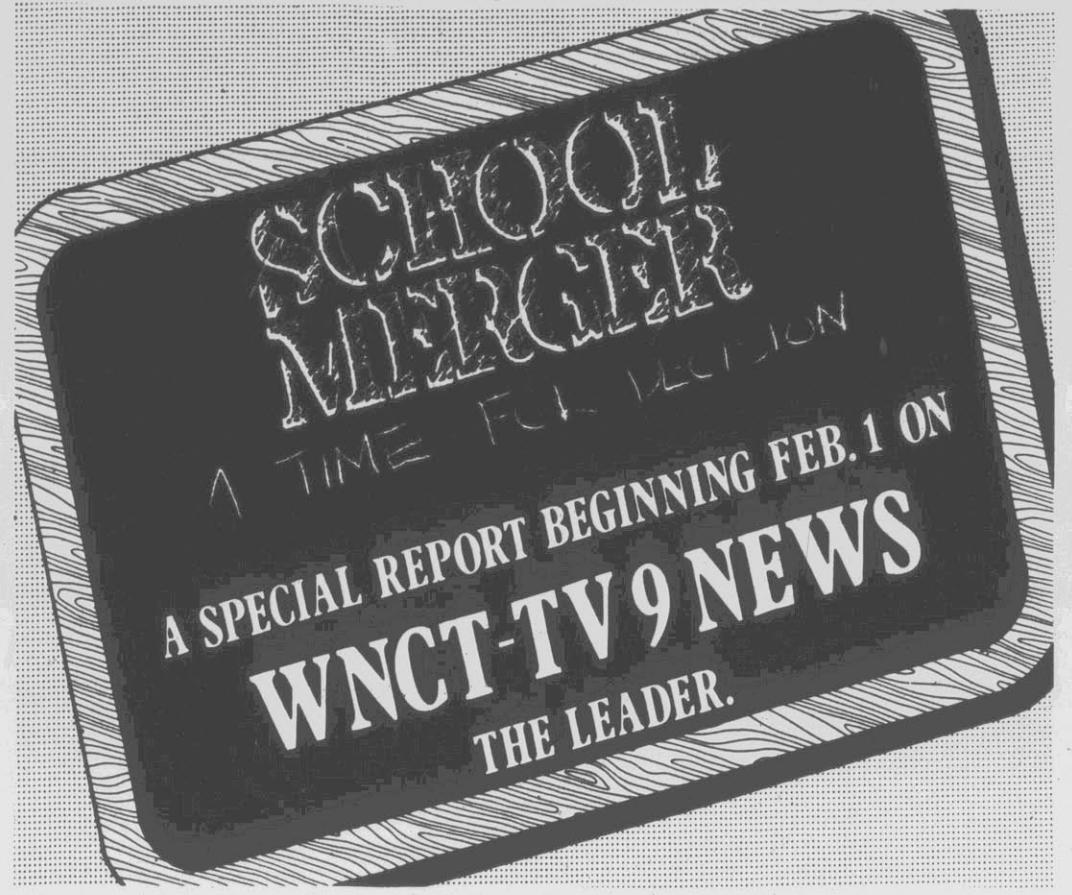

Twyfords Bathrooms Ltd., of Stoke-on-Trent, announced Monday that the award — a mahogany toilet seat trimmed with gold braid — would be given to the Westminster Borough Council, which runs the lavatory.

But company spokeswoman Joyce Quarrie noted that the real flush of success belongs to lavatory attendants Les Harding and Reg Bedwell, who used their own money and spare time to transform the basement bathroom from unspeakable to commodious — by keeping it meticulously clean, hanging flowers from the ceiling and prints on the walls and installing a stereo system.

"The women spend a lot of time in here," Bedwell said. "Sometimes they bring their kids in and all dance to the music. They recommend us to their mates (friends), and on Saturdays there are enormous queues outside."

Tributes to Harding and Bedwell's work are displayed on a bulletin board outside. "I've really enjoyed it here," wrote Charlie of Catford. "Smashing, really smashing," wrote the girls of Priory School in Portsmouth. Commented an American gent, "A real comfort station."
