$925.5 Billion Budget For Congress To Haggle Over

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today sent Congress a $925.5 billion budget plan for 1985 that would rein in domestic spending for another year but press ahead with a military buildup. The result: a $180.4 billion deficit that will occupy much of Congress' attention.

Despite the hefty budget deficit, the financial blueprint offers no major action — either through sharp spending cuts or a major tax hike — to wash away the red ink.

If the president's financial guide is followed, there would be a decade-long freeze on domestic spending, after adjustment for inflation.

Nevertheless, the deficit would impose huge burdens. The budget projects that taxpayers will pick up a $164.7 billion tab just in interest payments on the national debt in the upcoming fiscal year that starts on Oct. 1. Those payments are estimated at $149.5 billion this year.

The deficit hit a record $195.4 billion in the 1983 fiscal year and is projected at $183.7 billion this year.

Reagan, in his message accompanying the document, took note of the red ink, saying:

"Only the threat of indefinitely prolonged high budget deficits threatens the continuation of sustained non-inflationary growth and prosperity. It raises the specter of sharply higher interest rates, choked-off investment, renewed recession and rising unemployment."

He called for the deficit problem to be "laid to rest" through a bipartisan effort to curb spending.

He also urged, as he has previously, enactment of constitutional amendments that would require a balanced budget and give the president line-item veto authority so he could pare individual items from appropriations bills rather than accepting — or rejecting — the measures in total.

In an election year, the administration apparently decided against adding controversial spending cuts or taxing proposals to its financial blueprint, especially since the likelihood of Congress heeding such suggestions — even to pare the troublesome deficits — is considered slim.

Overall, the blueprint calls for spending $925.5 billion next year, up from the $853.8 billion estimated for this year.

As a result, government spending would account for nearly 24 percent of the value of nation's output of goods and services in 1985, above the 22.4 percent in 1980, the year before Reagan took office.

The budget document lauds the administration efforts to keep domestic spending under control. It said spending on domestic programs would run $523.1 billion next year, virtually the same as last year, when adjusted for inflation.

Underpinning the budget plan are the administration's assumptions that the economy will continue expanding at a solid pace through the end of the decade, despite the deficits that private economists worry could sink the recovery.

The projections also forecast that inflation, interest rates and unemployment will decline.

With that rosy economic outlook, the deficits are projected to decline to $152 billion in 1988 and $123.4 billion in 1989.

Overall, the budget blueprint urges spending cuts of about $9 billion in a variety of non-defense programs, about half of which would be wiped out by fresh increases in other areas.

Turning to the military, the document asks Congress to boost spending next year by 14.5 percent, to $264.4 billion, by far the biggest increase for any major agency. After discounting for inflation, the boost would be 9.3 percent.

No major new weapons are proposed. But tens of billions of dollars would go for 40 MX nuclear missiles, almost two dozen ships and hundreds of planes, tanks and other armaments. There would be a 5.5 percent pay raise for the 2.1 million men and women in uniform.

The administration also wants more money for foreign aid, both economic and military, which would rise less than $500 million to $15.2 billion. The biggest chunk would go for Israel and Egypt.

There would also be a sizable increase in aid for Central America, but Reagan wasn't expected to spell out the exact amount until later in the week.

The budget asks for $150 million in start-up money for a permanent manned orbiting space station that is estimated to cost $8 billion or more by the time it is launched in 1992. More money also would go to kick off ambitious research projects in astronomy, agriculture, physics and atmospheric sciences.

To help pay for the increases, the president urges Congress to tighten some of the loopholes he says now exist in the tax code. They would include placing restrictions on tax-exempt leasing; altering the system of taxing life insurance companies and limiting the growth in private purpose tax-exempt bonds.

He also suggests that, starting next January, employees be required to pay Social Security and income taxes on the the health insurance premiums, now paid by their employers, that are in excess of $175 per month, or $2,100 per year for a family plan. Premiums paid below those sums would still be excluded from taxation.

In a reversal of Reagan's past efforts to trim federal school aid, the president wants a $15.5 billion budget for the Department of Education in 1985, an increase of $100 million.

The education budget would cut back some campus-based student aid programs, but increase College Work-Study funds by $300 million and provide bigger Pell Grants for the neediest students — up to $3,000 a year instead of $1,900.

Reagan also wants Congress to approve tuition tax credits for parents who send their children to private or parochial schools and agree to let middle- and lower-income families set up special savings accounts for their children's education.

The president is asking that spending for most social programs stay about the same, although reductions — rebuffed previously by Congress — are proposed again for Medicare, Medicaid and welfare. Some of these reductions would actually reduce outlays from present levels while others would only reduce projected growth.

Spending on the food stamp program would drop to $10.8 billion, from $11.3 billion this year.

A slight increase — from $1.1 billion this year to $1.3 billion next year — would be posted in a special nutrition program for pregnant women and their children.

The amount of money spent on welfare — under Aid to Families with Dependent Children — would be reduced by $373 million to $7.1 billion, even though the number participating would stay about the same at 10.4 million.

The budget for the Department of Housing and Urban Development would be pared sharply by $3.2 billion to $10.5 billion.

Few changes are suggested for the financially troubled Medicare program. The administration does call for savings of $1 billion in the program, including a freeze on doctors' payments, and steps to boost revenues by $503 million.

The budget also recommends a 6.6 percent increase for the Justice Department to $3.74 billion. Part of the increase would go to hire 1,000 new employees for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, to help cut the flow of illegal aliens into the United States from Mexico.

More money would be spent to snare federal income tax protesters and tax cheats.

The president is seeking $3.9 billion for a job training program next year, about the same as last year, to help prepare more than 3 million of the unemployed for permanent jobs.

Dropped Again

Jim Hannan, manager of the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission, announced today that unemployment dropped another one-tenth of one percent in Pitt County during the month of December — from 7.4 to 7.3 percent.

This was only slightly above the lowest rate for 1983, which was 7 percent in October. The December rate for unemployment compared to 8.9 percent for the same period in 1982.

The December rate for 1983 represents 3,480 unemployed workers in Pitt County.

The December statewide total unemployment rate was 7.3 percent, representing 216,200 unemployed workers. The national unemployment rate in December was 8 percent, the lowest since November 1982.

In Brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here, at a glance, are highlights of President Reagan's proposed budget for the 1985 fiscal year, which starts next Oct. 1:

Spending: $925.5 billion, an increase of $71.7 billion over fiscal 1984.

Revenues: $745.1 billion, an increase of $75 billion.

Deficits: The budget foresees a fiscal 1985 deficit of $180.4 billion, down from the 1984 deficit of now estimated at $183.7 billion. Deficits are forecast to drop to $152 billion by 1988.

The national debt: Interest on the national debt is expected to total $164.7 billion in 1985, up from $149.5 billion this year.

Taxes: Reagan urges tightening loopholes he says now exist in the tax code. They would include placing restrictions on tax-exempt leasing, improving the system of taxing life insurance companies and limiting the growth in private purpose tax-exempt bonds. He also suggests that, starting next January, employees be required to pay social security and income taxes on part of the health insurance premiums, now paid by their employers.

Defense: The budget calls for $264.4 billion for the Defense Department, up 14.5 percent. There would be a 5.5 percent pay raise for the 2.1 million men and women in uniform.

Foreign Aid: The administration also wants more money for foreign aid, both economic and military, which would rise less than $500 million to $15.2 billion. The biggest chunk would go for Israel and Egypt.

Space station: The budget proposes $150 million in start-up money for a permanent manned orbiting space station that is estimated to cost $8 billion or more by 1992.

Education: A record $15.5 billion budget is proposed for the Department of Education in 1985, an increase of $100 million. Reagan also proposed tuition tax credits for parents who send their children to private or parochial schools and to let middle- and lower-income families set up special savings accounts for their children's education.

Social Programs: Spending for most social programs stays about the same, although reductions are proposed again for Medicare, Medicaid and welfare. Spending on the food stamp program would drop to $10.8 billion, from $11.3 billion this year.

Housing: The budget for the Department of Housing and Urban Affairs would be pared sharply by $3.2 billion to $10.5 billion.

Justice: The budget recommends a 6.6 percent increase for the Justice Department to $3.74 billion. Part of the increase would go to hire 1,000 new employees for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, to help cut the flow of illegal aliens into the United States from Mexico.

Labor: The president is seeking $3.9 billion for a job training program next year, about the same as last year, to help prepare more than 3 million of the unemployed for permanent jobs.

See N.C. Share As $1.4 Billion

By The Associated Press
North Carolina's $1.4 billion share of the $926 billion federal budget for fiscal 1985 includes money for the proposed Randleman Dam in Randolph County but recommends cutting funds for the Appalachian Regional Commission.

Harvey Lincoln, an analyst with the N.C. Department of Administration's Office of Policy and Planning, said North Carolina's share of the budget being studied by Congress is about the same as in 1984.

In addition, Social Security payments to individuals in North Carolina and the cost of operating the state's five military bases could push federal money coming into North Carolina to more than $10 billion.

Although no specific amount is allocated for the Randleman water project, President Reagan's budget assures that construction money will be there if Congress approves the proposal. Legislation to permit construction of the dam passed the House last year but was removed from an omnibus funding bill by the Senate Appropriations Committee. Supporters hope to restore it in a conference committee. The ARC, a 19-year-old anti-poverty agency operating in parts of 13 states, recently established a non-profit foundation to collect private donations to carry on some of its work. Commission officials said they expect Congress to renew the agency's funding for another year, however.

The budget does not contain money for the construction of jetties at Oregon Inlet. Floyd Lupton, administrative assistant to Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., said Tuesday that Jones will not seek any more money for the jetties until Congress acts on legislation to transfer land to anchor the jetties from the Interior Department to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Reagan's budget would also end the funding of the Economic Development Administration, which was established in the mid-1970s to provide public works jobs in areas of high unemployment. Several grants have been made to northwestern North Carolina towns.

Ann E. Elmore, federal liaison for the N.C. Department of Public Instruction, said the state should receive about the same amount of money for education that it got this year. She said the budget contains a request for a $206 million increase in the government's education block-grant program. Schools use that money at their discretion.

Urge N.C. Appeal Court's Ruling On Redistricting

RALEIGH (AP) — Some state leaders are urging that North Carolina appeal a ruling calling for the General Assembly to redraw five House and two Senate districts because they violate federal voting rights laws.

State Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, said he thinks North Carolina should appeal because the ruling, if allowed to stand, "would be a terrible precedent ... not only for North Carolina but the country."

Adams said the ruling would signal that identifiable groups of minorities can force lawmakers to draw political subdivisions in which they become the majorities.

Adams said the ruling also divides coalitions of Democrats, unfairly helps Republicans and lessens public confidence in the Voting Rights Act.

"I don't see any alternative to appealing," Adams said.

State Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, who has studied the decision, said that he also favors appealing the ruling.

"I'm getting tired of the court system running the country," he said.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey said he will poll legislators later this week to decide what to do about the ruling by three federal judges on Friday. The judges gave the state until March 16 to draw new districts that concentrate the black vote.

The General Assembly is not scheduled to convene until June 7 for a short budget session.

"I'll see what the majority wants to do," said Ramsey, who sent House members a copy of the ruling and a memo outlining their options Tuesday. He said he wanted to give them time to read the information before he asks them which option they prefer.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, who presides over the Senate, was out of his office Tuesday and could be reached for comment. His press secretary, Vernon Morton, said he understood that Green would meet later this week with legislative leaders.

Ramsey said the Legislature could appeal the decision, ask for a stay, allow the judges to redraw the districts, meet and redraw the districts itself or choose a combination of those alternatives.

Terry Sullivan, head of the general research section of the Legislative Services Division, said he expects the Legislature to move to stay the order as it relates to the May 8 primary.

Officials said it could take months for the U.S. Supreme Court to act on an appeal, leaving North Carolina free to conduct primaries as scheduled. Once primaries have been held, the state could argue for no changes in the November elections, with changes held until the regular legislative session in January.

Meanwhile, state Elections Director Alex Brock urged election boards in counties whose legislative districts were voided to keep the candidate filing period open as planned until Monday's deadline.

"The only sound advice you can give anybody is to tell them to keep filing," Brock said Monday. "Then, whenever the General Assembly does whatever it does, you can make adjustments."

The affected districts are Mecklenburg County's eight-seat House district and the four-seat Senate district including Mecklenburg and Cabarrus counties; four House districts representing Forsyth, Wake, Durham, Nash, Edgecombe and Wilson counties and a Senate district covering all or part of nine northeastern counties.

Critical Care Nursing Called Stressful Work

By JOHN DINGMAN
Associated Press Writer
JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The battle for a human life begins in the emergency room, but often is won in a hospital's intensive care unit.

And a very "select group of nurses" is needed for the critical care fight, says Karreen Edwards, who heads that area at Mississippi Baptist Medical Center.

"Not every nurse can handle the stress and the frustrations of the job, she says, and on a national basis, those in the assignment rarely last more than two years before seeking other duty.

While there "is a feeling of helplessness when you realize that your best efforts cannot produce results," Mrs. Edwards said, this is more than offset by the knowledge that critical care can save patients who might not otherwise survive.

Nurses who work in critical care need more than good medical skills, Mrs. Edwards said, with communication high on her list of requirements when looking for a recruit to treat critical injuries or illnesses.

"They need to be compassionate and understand what it takes to handle a patient and his family" when they are dealing with a life-threatening situation.

"I may know, and the nurses may know that the patient will pull through, but the nurse needs to be the kind of person who can convince the patient and the family of that," Mrs. Edwards said.

In many cases, she said, the nurse is more important in this process than the doctor because many patients want to hear a report on their condition from the nurse who has "held their hand and comforted them."

Mrs. Edwards said doctors often were so pressed for time they could not always find the opportunity to become as close to the patient as the nurse does. And, she added, many doctors have come to realize that communicating with the critically ill and their families is a skill best entrusted to the specialists.

Death brings the greatest feeling of helplessness to the entire medical team, especially when it is necessary to ask the family to make a decision on continuation of life support for a brain-dead patient, and get permission for organ transplant grants, she said.

Mrs. Edwards says long conferences between members of the medical team are held before the family is approached and again, the critical care nurse often is the one who explains the proper approach.

"Some nurses never really learn to handle the problem," she said, and they react in different ways.

"I have seen them giggle, and frequently cry, or even disappear at a time when a family needs them most," Mrs. Edwards said. "But there always is someone on the team astute enough to understand what is happening and move in to fill the gap. They understand there comes a time when you cannot cope with an individual moment."

With the stress and special knowledge needed, critical care nursing has become more and more of a specialty, replacing in many instances the old concept of a private duty nurse.

Mrs. Edwards says it is much easier to train a specialist in the many skills needed, and it is more efficient to provide the specialized equipment in one area, rather than try to disperse it throughout a hospital for private duty nurses.

Nurses are not assigned to critical care nursing unless they want it, and are committed to it, she said.

"When I interview a nurse, I look at the way she smiles, and try to determine if she understands how important it is to communicate with a patient and the family," Mrs. Edwards said.

She must be someone who is not dependent on her machines to know the condition of a patient, but who can report quickly on what is happening because of personal knowledge.

Even when death is the result, the special skills are needed.

She recalled the case of a boy who died after being hit by an automobile, and his mother at first criticized his care.

Mrs. Edwards says when she talked with her, it developed she just wanted to know how her son had reacted in his final hours.

"Did he move, did he call her name, was anyone with him, and did the nurse hold his hand in the last moments," were the real questions, Mrs. Edwards said.

And that, she said, is when the skills, the compassion and the dedication are needed in the tough job of helping the family cope with their personal catastrophe.

Dear Abby

Face-Lift Lifts Spirits, Raises Some Doubts

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband died when my son was 3, so I went to work as an aide in a hospital to support myself and my son. It wasn't easy, but it was worth the effort because he has just graduated from college.

My problem: About five months before my son was to graduate, I looked in the mirror and thought, "You look like an old lady. If you go to your son's graduation looking 20 years older than the other mothers, your son will be ashamed of you." So through the generosity of a plastic surgeon I met at the hospital, I had a face-lift. It cost me only $1,500, and it was worth it to make my son proud of me.

He was very pleased when he saw me, but the women I work with were cold and unfriendly. (One said, "Even $1,500 is a lot of money to a woman in your circumstances.") Abby, many of these women spend $20 and $30 at the beauty shop every week.

Please tell me I didn't do anything so terrible. Or do you feel the way they do?

UNHAPPY

DEAR UNHAPPY: You deserve to be happy. But unless you do things to please yourself, you never will be.

You had a face-lift for the wrong reason—to please your son. (He may have been just as proud of you the way you were.) And now you're "unhappy" because the women at work "think" you did something wrong.

You, my friend, are the most important person in the world. Be good to yourself, and don't worry about what others may think.

DEAR ABBY: A group of us girls were gathered at our weekly card club when a question was asked by one of the members:

"Is it possible for a husband to come home, undress and get into bed with his body reeking of someone else's perfume, then deny that he was with another woman?"

The majority said it is not possible, so we decided to ask you.

THE THURSDAY GROUP

DEAR GROUP: It's possible for a husband to deny it, but in view of such overwhelming circumstantial evidence, it would be impossible to believe him.

DEAR ABBY: When you advised the young girl who wanted to get married to go to college first because one day she might have to support herself and maybe a child, too, it really struck home with us.

My husband and I tried to convince our daughter of that very thing, but she refused to believe that one day she might have to support herself and a child. Well, after five years of marriage and a darling little son, that's exactly what happened. Her husband suddenly decided that the responsibilities of marriage were not for him.

The responsibility, of course, became our daughter's, so she and her son are now living with us, and she's gone back to college to become a registered nurse.

It's difficult for all of us, but we are glad we can give her the assistance she needs to become self-supporting. How much easier it would have been if she had finished her training and then married and had a family.

Abby, if all the young girls out there who should have taken that advice, but didn't, were laid end to end, they would reach from UCLA to the University of Maine.

Step Forward?

It is difficult to find a silver lining when a U.S. Marine and Lebanese civilians have been killed in Middle East fight.

Maybe there is one in this incident, however. The Shiite Moslem militia leaders said yesterday the battles were accidental and involved both sides believing the other had fired first.

They said militiamen had been ordered to adhere to the cease fire and not to attack the Marines.

Perhaps this is a step toward peace, or at least understanding of the U.S. Marines' role in Beirut as a peacekeeping force. It is certain that the United States does not want a war in Lebanon. Our sole role there is to assist in providing the atmosphere in which a stable government can develop.

Priority List

Last week saw formal announcement of a privately funded system linking parents and police in 26 major cities across the nation, to gather, process and share information on missing children and suspects.

It has been a long time in coming.

Children (and adults) presumably have been among the "missing" since the world was young.

Not very much could be done about it until the age of quick communication and rapid record systems came on the scene.

The strangest facet of all is the new system is privately inspired and privately funded. It was set up with the aid of a grant, and is expected to begin operations financed by corporate gifts.

One of the founders observes that the police can trace automobiles, stereos and even chainsaws — if the serial number is recorded. But children, he says, are a low priority item.

Maybe to police, but not to most parents.

Reason For Cheering

NEW YORK (AP) — There is good news in housing. But how long will it last?

The good news is that housing affordability by almost any measure has improved over the past year, the result of rising incomes, fairly stable prices and, by today's standards, only small increases in borrowing rates.

The National Association of Realtors says that only 29 percent of gross family income is now needed to own and operate a house, compared with about one-third of income just a year or so ago.

That is reason for cheering these days, though in the perspective of time it isn't good. You may remember that from the 1930s to 1975 almost any lender would decline to let you spend more than 25 percent of income on a house.

That formula went the way of most financial rules of thumb in the late 1970s, when some buyers actually put more than one-half their annual incomes into paying the mortgage, insurance, taxes, heating bills and the like.

Compared to that, last year's performance certainly was an improvement. In 1983, according to Advance Mortgage Corp., whose figures differ some from the Realtors, average operation and mortgage costs were "only 34 percent" of household income. In 1982, the percentage was 43 and in 1981 it was 42.

The trend, therefore, is definitely with the person who wants to own a house — and by inference, just as surely with the person who wants to sell one.

Without a doubt, 1983 was a better year for housing. The government reported Tuesday that a surge in new homes sales last month pushed up sales for the entire year by 53 percent over the depressed levels of 1982. The 625,000 houses sold in 1983 were the most since 1979.

But in housing, fears are never set to rest. Will the trend continue?

It could be continued, suggests the MIT-Harvard Joint Center for Urban Studies, if ... If, it says, "interests rates continue to fall, energy costs remain stable, and housing prices do not rise too rapidly."

After studying the possibilities for the U.S. Gypsum Co., it reaches the conclusion that there are reasons for concern.

"The first is that the federal deficit remains enormous and that the Federal Reserve is unlikely to continue expanding the money supply at current rates," it says.

Interest rates therefore could rise over the next few years, it continues, adding to pressure from rising home prices, which it says are once again "increasing substantially faster than inflation."

Either an increase in mortgage costs or sustained price inflation "could stall the housing market recovery altogether," the MIT-Harvard study states.

The cheers about improving affordability, therefore, become a bit muted when dropped into the perspective of yesterday and tomorrow.

NEW YORK (AP) — When the government reported last week that the United States racked up its biggest trade deficit in history in 1983, the U.S. business community groaned. We're losing out to foreign competition, they moaned.

Politicians sounded distressed, too. The trade deficit is costing jobs, they said.

No one, it seemed, had a kind word for the record $69.4 billion deficit.

Thus it may come as a surprise to learn that the imbalance in U.S. trade with other countries is not all bad. Here are some questions and RALEIGH — In 1936, young Thad Eure used a little age discrimination to defeat incumbent Secretary of State Stacy W. Wade. "Give a young man a chance," the 36-year-old Eure said repeatedly during his campaign to oust the 61-year-old Wade. It worked. Eure won, ending Wade's career after only one term.

In 1976, a young Fayetteville man by the name of George Breece tried to turn the tables on Eure by using the same campaign pitch Eure had used in 1936. "Give a young man a chance," Breece asked the voters as Eure, then 76, sought an 11th term. Eure narrowly won in 1976 but he went on to smash Breece in a 1980 rematch.

Now, the man who calls himself "the oldest rat in the barn" is using his old campaign slogan again. At age 84, seeking a 13th term, Eure is asking the voters to once again "give a young man a chance." Sporting a plaid jacket with a big red bowtie and matching kerchief, Eure said in an interview. "Strange enough, I'm using the slogan again because I am a young man. I've been to the doctor before every election and he's given me the green light."

In the 1984 Democratic primary, Eure may be facing his toughest challenge yet. Wake County Commissioner Betty Ann Knudsen, 57, is trying to avoid the issue of Eure's age, focusing instead on what she thinks could be done with the office. But she admits that in almost every appearance she makes someone raises the question of Eure's age.

Independent observers of the race — other elected officials, party workers, reporters — report that they have heard people ask if Eure hasn't had enough of a chance. Whether or not he's done a good job, isn't it time to let someone else hold the office?

That argument is always made

— "It's time for a change," Eure says. But he has "the highest hopes that anyone could have" about reelection. "Nobody in the state has accused me of being dishonest, of not being attentive to my duties. I'm here at 8 o'clock in the morning and I'm the last one to leave in the afternoon. No one has ever accused me of being disloyal to the Democratic Party and I think that in the Democratic primary, all of that will pay dividends."

Mrs. Knudsen makes two points on the campaign trail. She says it's time that the operation of the secretary of state's office was modernized. The thousands of public documents under the secretary's care should be microfilmed, stored on computer and made more accessible to the public. Eure says he's already started that process.

She also says that the secretary of state should expand his publications program to provide the citizenry with more information about state government. Eure answers this proposition by taking a bulky volume of his office's book, "History of North Carolina," from his desk.

This is a race that will pit old time politicking against the most modern grassroots techniques. Mrs. Knudsen has a computer keeping track of her organization. Eure is working through the contacts he's made during his six decades as a prominent Democrat. Mrs. Knudsen has buttons and bumper stickers already printed. Eure has printed only a little label sticker that says "Volunteer for Thad Eure."

In his office in the Capital, Eure has an old wooden Breece campaign sign. The wood has been sawed apart and remodeled into a rat barn. Breece came close to winning in 1976 and Mrs. Knudsen may do well in 1984. But Eure fully expects to be the Democratic nominee and to win a 13th term in November.

Tax Rebellion Gains Strength

UTICA, Mich. — Beleaguered Democratic Gov. James J. Blanchard quietly took up arms against Michigan's tax rebellion last week by attending a fund-raiser in a suburban private home and was greeted by pickets demanding his recall from office — symbolizing a nationwide menace to the Democratic Party.

Blanchard came to suburban Macomb County to support state Rep. Mary Ellen Parrott, an underdog in a special election for a state Senate vacancy. The seat was one of two whose Democratic occupants were removed in recall elections for supporting the governor's 38 percent tax increase a year ago.

Democrats privately concede enough signatures could be collected to put his recall on the ballot, in which case, "he is a goner" (in the words of one Democratic insider).

Short of terminating Blanchard's political career, the tax rebellion spells big trouble for the 1984 model of the Democratic Party, first seen in Michigan a generation ago. A coalition of organized labor, school teachers and minority groups, it depends on the white workingman's acquiescence in heavy taxation needed to supply social services for the black inner city, which in turn supplies massive voting support for the party.

The white worker's restiveness, reflected in votes for George Wallace in 1972 and Ronald Reagan in 1980, became outright rebellion in 1983 when the newly elected Blanchard sprung his tax surprise.

Widespread rage on the factory floor turned into political activism for a few — especially Dan Powers, a 25-year-old Ford worker who had been active in campaigns of liberal Democrats, most recently Jim Blanchard in 1982.

"In Michigan, 703,000 people were out of work, and I was one of them (he since has been rehired)," Powers told us. "I was madder than hell. All they had for us was higher taxes." Such "mad" Michiganders formed the recall movement, whose populist nature worries industrialists and establishment Republicans. They would prefer that the tax rebels let the politicians take over now.

Powers and his fellows rebels have no such intention, considering themselves heirs of the Bostonians who threw the king's tea overboard. A third state senator is likely to be recalled, petitions are being circulated against 15 others (in the 38-member Senate) and ouster efforts against House members are beginning. A constitutional amendment on the November ballot would roll back Blanchard's tax hike and require popular approval of future tax increases. Finally, lurking in the background is the attempt to recall the governor.

Blanchard's strategy is to defuse the tax rebellion rather than crush it. His new budget freezes spending, cuts welfare while increasing education money and gradually rolls back taxes. But operatives for the AFL-CIO and the National Education Association (NEA) believe he is only appeasing the enemy and wish he had started months ago "educating" the public why higher taxes were needed.

While Blanchard considers the turmoil a recurring protest against government, one local Democratic professional contemptuously calls it "our people looking for more take-home pay so they can buy more snowmobiles and motorboats." Candidate Holmes views that syndrome as his party's opportunity: "Without even knowing it, a lot of these life-long Democrats are turning into Republicans."

If so, they are Republicans markedly different from William Milliken, who finished 14 years as governor in 1982. Dan Powers and Kirby Holmes agree there are no substantial policy differences between Bill Milliken and Jim Blanchard. The Michigan Tea Party, while immediately benefitting Republicans, is a rebellion against the bipartisan governing class's conduct in Michigan.

Strength For Today

Lord Nelson was able to win his great victory at Trafalgar for a number of reasons. One was the mobility of his ships. They were fast-sailing, and even more important, could be maneuvered quickly.

The reason for this was that a short time before the battle, Nelson saw to it that the barnacles were removed from all his ships. By contrast, the French frigates, not serviced in such a fashion, were clumsy and not able to respond quickly in a moment of danger.

Anyone who has a bad habit has something which acts upon his life like barnacles on ship bottoms. To all outward appearances one's powers of adjustment may seem quite adequate, but consciously or unconsciously, the person knows that he or she would be sluggish in a crisis.

So let us get the barnacles off our lives, if we hope to meet every crisis.

Trade Balance Isn't All That Bad

answers to help explain the growing deficit in U.S. international trade, and its effect on Americans:

Q. What does the deficit count?

A. While the government has several measures of its financial and business dealings with the rest of the world, the $69.4 billion deficit is in merchandise trade. In 1983 the United States imported $69.4 billion more in goods, such as automobiles, tape recorders, oil and other products, than it sold abroad. The trade deficit does not include transactions involving services — such as research, consulting or legal fees — or currency or investment transactions.

Q. How did the trade deficit get so big?

A. The popular school of thought cites the strength of the dollar as the main reason. When the dollar's value increases relative to the currencies of other countries, U.S. goods sold in U.S. dollars become more expensive to foreign buyers. By the same token, foreign goods become less expensive to Americans. The result is a decline in U.S. exports and an increase in U.S. imports. Last year, U.S. exports fell 5.5 percent and imports increased 5.9 percent.

Q. What's bad about that?

A. The imbalance means American companies are losing export business. Economists at Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. in New York estimate U.S. agricultural exports fell about 25 percent in the past three years. U.S. machinery exporters have seen the trade surplus in that category fall from $23.9 billion in 1980 to an estimated $8.5 billion last year. The dropoff in exports has cost jobs. David Ernst, an economist at Evans Economics in Washington, estimates the loss of U.S. export business since 1980 has cost 1.5 million jobs.

Q. How can this be good for consumers?

A. On the import side of the trade balance equation, it means Americans are paying less for goods from other countries. It also means the general rate of inflation — even as it applies to U.S.-made goods — is held in check by the competition from abroad. "It puts the consumer more in the driver's seat," said Donald Maude, an economist at Merrill Lynch Economics in New York.

Shultz Tells Salvadorans Erase Extremism

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
CARACAS, Venezuela, (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz arrived here today to help celebrate 25 years of democratic rule after telling leaders in El Salvador the same path is open to them if they defeat "barbaric extremism."
Shultz will attend the inauguration Thursday of President-elect Jaime Lusinchi, a ceremony that will mark the fourth consecutive peaceful transfer of power here from one party to another.
Shultz's visit to this bulwark of Latin American democracy followed a day-long stay in El Salvador. There, he declared Washington's neutrality in the March 25 presidential elections, despite longstanding U.S. hostility to one major candidate, Roberto d'Aubuisson, the country's leading rightist politician.

D'Aubuisson was among six candidates who attended a lunch Tuesday hosted for Shultz by the provisional president, Alvaro Magana. Shultz told reporters afterward he had a "straightforward" discussion with d'Aubuisson. Asked whether he was reassured by the encounter, Shultz replied that he was.
His conciliatory tone contrasted sharply with the way the State Department has dealt with d'Aubuisson since 1980.
Because of d'Aubuisson's alleged ties with rightist death squads, the Carter administration expelled him from the United States after he entered the country without permission 3½ years ago. Former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador Robert White has called him a "pathological killer. Two months ago, the Reagan administration denied d'Aubuisson a visa to visit America.

Yet d'Aubuisson is regarded as having a fair chance of winning the March election, a prospect that makes State Department officials nervous.
D'Aubuisson opposes the U.S.-backed land reform program in El Salvador. In addition, he has attempted, with some success, to appeal to nationalistic sentiments in the country by denouncing American statements over human rights abuses by the Salvadoran armed forces.

On Tuesday, Shultz was careful not to give d'Aubuisson fresh anti-American ammunition. During a toast following the luncheon at Magana's residence, Shultz spared the Salvadoran armed forces direct criticism and instead praised their "increased professionalism."
He also expressed sympathy for the problems the military is encountering in combating a "vicious guerrilla campaign" during the four-year civil war.

D'Aubuisson, chain-smoking during Shultz's 20-minute performance, applauded at the conclusion.
The Reagan administration believes its interests will be best served if Christian Democrat Jose Napoleon Duarte wins the March balloting.
Duarte, who served as unelected president from late 1980 to the spring of 1982, is seen as the candidate most committed to the reform process the United States believes is necessary for the Democracy to take root.
Shultz did not ignore the problem of rightist death squads, but on several occasions he suggested it should be viewed no differently from leftist violence.

"Our governments agree that much remains to be done. Death squads, as well as terror, have no place in democracy, and I mince no words in saying that here or anywhere else," Shultz said.
But he also credited the government with "significant progress" in reducing the level of violence, asserting it has been reduced by as much as one third of what it was a couple years ago.
Shultz suggested that El Salvador's greatest problem is the refusal of the leftist rebels to lay down their arms and to take part in the upcoming elections.

Lebanon's Army And Shiites Exchanging Fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese army troops and Shiite Moslem insurgents traded sniper fire and rocket-propelled grenades in Beirut's southern suburbs today, and two attacks were reported on Israeli soldiers in southern Lebanon.

The state radio said two Lebanese soldiers were wounded when army positions in the southern suburb of St. Michael came under fire from nearby Shiite militia posts.

Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said it was quiet today around the U.S. Marine base at Beirut International Airport. One Marine was killed and three others wounded Monday in battles with Shiite militiamen, while Shiites said Marine fire killed three civilians and wounded 22 others.

The Marine Corps office in Washington identified the slain Marine as Lance Cpl. George L. Dramis of Cape May, N.J.

In southern Lebanon, three civilians were slightly wounded this morning when an unidentified gunman hurled a hand grenade at an Israeli patrol in the provincial capital of Sidon, reporters in the area said.

No Israeli casualties were reported.

Israeli troops sealed off the area, searched for the assailant and arrested about a dozen pedestrians. The detainees were ordered to pull their shirts or sweaters up to cover their faces before they were marched into an armored personnel carrier and taken away, the reporters said.

The state radio said the attack came a few hours after Israeli troops blocked the road between Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, and the mountain village of Jezzine for one hour and searched the area for land mines.

The radio said an Israeli army post in Daoudieh, about six miles southeast of Sidon, came under machine-gun fire early today. It gave no details.

On Tuesday, diplomats from Finland, Australia and the United States were in Damascus, Syria, and Beirut radio stations said the officials were negotiating to replace the 4,400-man multinational force, including the Marines, with United Nations peacekeepers.

Donald Rumsfeld, President Reagan's special envoy, later left Damascus and went to Israel for talks with officials in Jerusalem.

In Tel Aviv, the daily newspaper Haaretz reported that Rumsfeld told Syria the United States was willing to make concessions involving Israel's troop-withdrawal agreement with Lebanon if the Syrians help maintain calm in southern Lebanon.

It said that might allow Reagan to withdraw the Marines from Lebanon.

Syria has demanded cancellation of the Israel-Lebanon agreement, mediated by the United States. The pact calls for Syrian, Israeli and Palestinian forces to leave Lebanon. Peace leader Walid Jumblatt, the main Lebanese opponent of President Amin Gemayel's administration, told the Italian ambassador in Damascus, Aldo Pugliese, that he would agree to Italian participation in a U.N. force, according to a Jumblatt spokesman who asked not to be named.

Jumblatt also held an "important meeting" with the Soviet ambassador in Syria, Vladimir Youkhine, who delivered a letter from Soviet leaders, said the spokesman, who did not elaborate.

Compromise Bank Regulation Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of controversy, federal regulators have agreed on a plan to streamline the government's watchdog apparatus for banks by setting up a new agency while reshuffling some of the Federal Reserve Board's jurisdiction over the banking system.

The proposal, which still needs congressional approval, would pare back the Federal Reserve's responsibilities but not as sharply as earlier suggestions. Fed Chairman Paul Volcker had reportedly fought to retain a significant monitoring role in banking.

The proposal, announced Tuesday, also would shear the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which insures deposits in 14,800 banks up to $100,000, of its day-to-day supervision of banks. Thus, the FDIC would become solely an insurance agency.

The new bank agency — to be called the Federal Banking Agency — would be formed out of the office of the comptroller of the currency and would remain in the Treasury Department. It would monitor all national banks, putting it in charge of roughly 60 percent of all banking deposits in the country.

In a statement, the regulators said they had unanimously approved the plan which "would constitute a sweeping revision of the federal regulatory system for commercial banks."

The Fed's jurisdiction now extends to some 5,000 bank holding companies and about 1,000 state banks that are part of the Federal Reserve system.

Under the proposal, the new banking agency would write the so-called laundry list of permissible banking activities. The Fed could disapprove the rules but only if two-thirds of its board of governors decided an activity would be likely to seriously impair the banking system.

Easier To Pay Than Fight Bill

BROCKTON, Mass. (AP) — Saying it was easier to pay the disputed bill than wade through all the paperwork, a scientist has sent a cashier's check for $1,909.47 to Massachusetts General Hospital to save his 81-year-old mother's house from the auction block.

The Brockton house was to be sold next week to settle a 5-year-old hospital bill that Robert Ward of Houston says has already been paid.

A court ruling last July gave the hospital the right to put Rose Ward's house up for sale to collect part of a $20,000 hospital bill for brain surgery in 1979.

Ward, who sent the check Tuesday, claims his records show the hospital may have received payments from health insurance, Medicare, and the Veterans Administration totaling $221 more than what is owed.

Record Sum For Education

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL, Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan proposed today a record $15.5 billion budget for the Education Department, reversing three years of attempting to curtail spending on schools.

Education Secretary T.H. Bell said the overall $100 billion budget increase was small but significant, reflecting both heightened national concern about improving schools and the political reality that Congress is unlikely to cut education funding.

"If enacted, it would be the largest education appropriation in history," Bell told a news conference. "We need to give (Reagan) credit for that."

The president, in his budget message, said, "I have devoted considerable time this year to the problems of our schools.... It has been extremely gratifying to observe the response all across the country to my call for a renewed commitment to educational excellence." The spending blueprint includes a $250 million increase in a $479 million block grant program, which Reagan said states and local schools could spend on "education reform without federal prescription and interference."

It provides level funding for the department's nearly $3.5 billion remedial education program for the disadvantaged and $1.1 billion to help teach the handicapped. Some training funds for special education teachers would be cut.

It would steer $6.5 billion in aid to college students, including bigger Pell Grants for the neediest — up to $3,000 instead of $1,900. But the number of students getting grants would drop by 290,000 to 2.3 million in the 1985-86 school year.

All students would be expected to provide $500 in self-help to get grants, and all would have to show need to get guaranteed loans. Families would have to contribute more of their discretionary income toward college costs. Some campus-based aid programs would be sharply curtailed, but College Work-Study funds would be raised by 53 percent to $850 million.

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., chairman of the House higher education subcommittee, said the budget proposal would prevent hundreds of thousands of qualified young people from attending college. "These recommendations would also push us a step closer to an income-stratified system of higher education in which the wealthy would attend private schools and others would attend public schools," he said.

Reagan did not renew past attempts to cut funds for bilingual education, vocational classes and Indian education, but he again asked Congress to wipe out about $43 million in civil rights training, women's educational equity and Follow Through programs.

Mary Hatwood Futrell, president of the National Education Association, criticized Reagan, saying he was giving "us pretty much the same budget in fiscal 1985... while asking for $50 billion more for defense." Two years ago, Reagan tried to cut the education budget to $10 billion, and he sought $13.2 billion for 1984. Former President Jimmy Carter unsuccessfully asked for $15.6 billion for the fledgling department in fiscal 1981 and $17.1 billion for fiscal 1982.

Reagan called anew for a $50 million program to help states deal with shortages of math and science teachers, and he is seeking $76 million through the National Science Foundation to improve math and science instruction.

The budget did not include any federal initiative to lure brighter students into teaching, as Bell had said it might.

O'Neill Plans Back Mondale

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., the nation's highest-ranking elected Democrat, plans to endorse former Vice President Walter F. Mondale for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination, Democratic sources say.

Mondale will visit the Capitol today for the early afternoon endorsement, the sources said.

O'Neill himself would not confirm the report directly.

However, he said he would have "a statement on a presidential candidate" sometime today. Of Mondale, the Massachusetts Democrat said: "He's an old friend from way back." Endorsing a candidate before the Democratic National Convention, to be held in July in San Francisco, marks a departure for O'Neill, who will be co-chairman of the convention.

In 1980, O'Neill refused to choose between President Carter and Democratic challenger Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, claiming his role to preside over that year's Democratic convention forced him to remain neutral.

However, O'Neill's backing of Mondale had been expected for some time.

U.S. Steel Eyes A 'Turnaround'

By EARL BOHN
AP Business Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — U.S. Steel Corp. Chairman David Roderick predicted a "major turnaround" would follow the firm's worst year, when the nation's largest steel producer lost $1.6 billion, but trading in its stock was delayed today.

U.S. Steel delayed trading in its stock pending an announcement planned for about 11 a.m. EST. There was no word what the announcement would involve.

In its report Tuesday on 1983 earnings, U.S. Steel also said it suffered its worst quarterly loss — $983 million for the last three months of 1983, for the largest quarterly deficit in U.S. corporate history.

"Last year, the corporation took a series of painful but necessary steps to strengthen its business segments, especially steel," Roderick said in a prepared statement.

"As the economy continues to strengthen, we anticipate that our three major business components, and the corporation in total, will be profitable throughout 1984," he said. "We are looking forward to a major turnaround in financial results in 1984."

Late last year, Roderick announced U.S. Steel would close six plants, trim operations at 24 others and eliminate 15,400 jobs in an effort to become more profitable.

The annual deficit included a $1.15 billion pre-tax write-off from the plant closings and cutbacks.

Karlis Kirsis, steel analyst for Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins Inc. of New York, said Roderick had reason to be optimistic.

"Steel has turned the corner not only in increases in demand but also in their philosophy. They're implementing major cost-reduction programs and they'll continue to do so," he said.

Kirsis predicted domestic steel shipments would increase to 84 million tons in 1984, up from 67 million tons in 1983, as the capital-goods sector uses more steel and replenishes inventories that declined by 5 million tons last year.

U.S. Steel's steel businesses posted a 1983 operating loss of $634 million, $218 million better than 1982 results despite only a modest increase in shipping levels and a $381-million decline in sales.

Oil and gas operations earned $1.1 billion before foreign income taxes totaling $588 million, compared with 1982 income of $1.2 billion before foreign taxes of $572 million.

BUSINESS DAMAGED — Greenville firemen prepare to go up on the roof of Styles Unlimited beauty salon on East 10th Street as they fight a blaze that caused heavy fire and smoke damage to a storage room and ceiling area of the shop. Fire Chief Jenness Allen said the fire, reported at 5:47 p.m. Tuesday, destroyed the contents of the storage area and was contained in the attic. Allen said Carolyn Nichols, who reported the fire, sustained a burn injury to her right hand. The cause of the fire had not been undetermined. Allen said. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Koch Effective As Book-Seller

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — New York Mayor Edward Koch has proved to be an effective book salesman, especially when the book is his own.

In Albany on Tuesday, the mayor spotted his autobiography, "Mayor," on display in a bookstore window at the Empire State Plaza.

He went in to see if it was actually in stock or if only the cover was being displayed, and as a crowd gathered Koch agreed to autograph some copies.

Securities 'Missing'

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The FBI says it is investigating the apparent theft of a bag containing $6.2 million worth of negotiable and non-negotiable securities in transit from Portland to Los Angeles Jan. 10.

An FBI agent in Los Angeles said Tuesday that $3.12 million of the missing securities was negotiable and could easily be sold for cash.

Brinks Inc. has offered a $50,000 reward for information leading to the recovery of the bag's contents.

The bag was one of four being shipped from Portland brokerage houses and financial institutions to New York via Los Angeles, said FBI agent Dorwin L. Schreuder.

Weinberger Urges Defense Outlay

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger promised Congress today that Pentagon budget increases "can begin to slow dramatically" in fiscal 1987 if it allows the Reagan administration to pursue its record military buildup.

Weinberger asked to spend $264.4 billion in fiscal 1985, which starts Oct. 1. This amounts to a 14.5 percent increase over this year's spending level without accounting for inflation and a 9.3 percent increase if inflation is taken into account. If approved, that would bring the cost of the administration's defense program to $883.3 billion in the four years since it began "rearming America."

In a 297-page report, Weinberger contended "we have made great progress" in restoring the military balance with the Soviet Union. He and Reagan have blamed "a decade of neglect" by previous administrations for allowing U.S. defenses to slide.

"Unfortunately, we cannot make up for a decade of neglect in only three years of higher defense budgets," Weinberger said.

"If we stop in mid-course, we will only endanger the progress we have made in recent years, and invite speculation by friends and adversaries alike that the United States can sustain neither its will nor its leadership," he added.

"By the same token, if we are allowed to continue on the path we have set, we can look forward to a time, only two fiscal years from now, when defense increases can begin to slow dramatically."

The defense secretary said the United States has not regained military parity with the Soviets.

He said the Soviet buildup of strategic nuclear missile and bomber forces "shows no sign of slowing." And he said the Soviets have widened their advantage in numbers of conventional weapons "by producing major weapons at rates exceeding those of the United States and its NATO allies combined."

However, Weinberger insisted that "we have a lot better position now than in 1981" when the Reagan administration came into power.

With much of the Reagan administration program already under way, the fiscal 1985 budget contained no surprises and few significant new elements.

It calls for spending nearly $1.8 billion on the much-touted Reagan plan to drive for a virtually impregnable anti-missile defensive shield, probably based in space, by the end of the century.

Only $250 million of this would be "new money," Weinberger said, explaining that the rest of the nearly $1.8 billion would be shifted from other less promising anti-missile programs.

The administration also is making a third attempt to win congressional approval to start producing a new generation of nerve-gas shells and bombs, something Congress has rejected twice previously. It requested $121 million to prepare for this production.

And Weinberger said the budget proposes about $200 million for a highly controversial Mideast crisis strike force that, under an administration concept, would be made up of Jordanian soldiers trained and equipped by the United States.

The administration's overall request, which Weinberger described as "prudent and responsible," seeks budget authority totaling $305 billion. This amount, some of which would be spent in future years, is about 13 percent over the authority granted by Congress for this year.

While appealing to Congress to "let us again work together," Weinberger criticized lawmakers for denying the Pentagon about $15 billion in budget authority in fiscal 1984. He said the 1985 budget "recovers some of the ground lost due to congressional action" on this year's budget.

According to budget documents, the Air Force would get $104.3 billion in budget authority in fiscal 1985, the Navy and Marine Corps $96.7 billion and the Army $72 billion.

The remainder is earmarked for various defense agencies and retirement pay. The Pentagon notified Congress that it is making bookkeeping changes in the retirement system designed to more accurately reflect those costs.

The new budget carries forward major strategic programs, which Weinberger said will result in "a proper balance" with the Soviet Union in long-range nuclear weaponry by 1989, if allowed to reach their planned potential.

Among other things, the new budget provides for:

—Forty of the new MX intercontinental ballistic missiles at a cost of slightly over $5 billion, an additional 34 new B-1B bombers for $8.2 billion and continued development of an advanced Trident II submarine-launched missile for $2.2 billion.

—One more giant Trident submarine to carry that missile for $1.8 billion; $465.2 million for "aggressive" development of a new, small and mobile land-based missile with a single warhead; $226.3 million for pushing development of a satellite-killing weapon; and $396.4 million to improve porous U.S. defenses against bomber attack.

—Purchase of 720 M-1 tanks and 710 armored vehicles from which infantrymen can shoot on the move, as well as 292 light armored vehicles for the Marine Corps.

—Twenty-three new ships and six conversions to move the Navy's fleet closer to the 600-warship objective. Included are four nuclear-powered attack submarines, three missile-armed Aegis cruisers, a guided-missile destroyer and reactivation of the World War II battleship Missouri.

—Purchase of 48 F-15 and 150 F-16 jet fighters for the Air Force, along with 24 F-14, 84 F-18 and 32 AV-8B warplanes for the Navy and Marine Corps.

The administration proposed increasing the number of men and women in uniform by about 30,000, to a level of 2,166,000.

As widely reported, the Army plans to create a light infantry division of about 10,000 men, which Weinberger said will be "a flexible, widely deployable force, particularly well-suited for contingency operations."

This will be the Army's 17th division, the first such addition since 1975.

The budget proposes a 5.5 percent military pay increase, costing $2.4 billion, and a 3.5 percent pay hike, costing $800 million, for the nearly 1.1 million civilians employed by the Defense Department.

Say U.S. Plans Honduras Stay

WASHINGTON (AP) — A contingent of 1,000 American military personnel will remain in Honduras after finishing a series of exercises known as Big Pine II. The Washington Post reports in today's editions.

The Post, quoting unnamed administration sources, said Gen. Paul Gorman, commander in chief of the Southern Command in Panama, is pushing the Defense Department to establish permanent or semi-permanent naval and air facilities in Honduras.

Gorman's request has touched off a debate in the Pentagon about how much U.S. military presence is needed to challenge leftist influence in Central America.

The newspaper reported that senior administration officials are trying to restrain Gorman so that Congress won't conclude that the Big Pine II exercises, which involved as many as 5,000 U.S. servicemen at a time, were used surreptitiously to establish a network of U.S. bases in Honduras.

Maj. Robert Shields, a Pentagon press duty officer, would not comment on the report the Pentagon plans to leave 1,000 troops in Honduras after Big Pine II ends late this month.

Insurance Laws A 'Struggle'

By CRAIG WEBB

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — It's the Twilight Zone of the Legislature, a world where even those accustomed to the General Assembly's bizarre style soon become disoriented.

Visitors to House Insurance Committee meetings during the past three years saw proposals vanish and then reappear with different bill numbers, legislation saved from certain death by a clerical error and proposals teeter without end between passage and failure.

It's confusing to participants as well as observers. Many representatives possess little more than a vague understanding of basic insurance principles months after meetings begin. At one such session, a member asked why insurance companies cannot treat drivers like she used to handle schoolchildren.

With such strange goings on, the House Insurance Committee has become a group few legislators want to serve on and most reporters avoid covering. It also helps explain why auto insurance bills are among the hardest measures to pass in the Legislature.

The last major change was introduced the day after the session began in January 1981 but not passed into law until the session's final day in July. Along the way the bill was killed by committees in both chambers, revived, extensively amended but eventually changed back to a form looking remarkably like it did on filing day.

"It has always been fraught with emotion," lobbyist Michael S. Olson said of auto insurance legislation, "because it's mandatory and it's something that affects everyone. It's a dynamite issue, and it is inevitably far more complex than it appears to be on the surface."

Olson, who represents agents, is one of 27 registered lobbyists for insurers or agents. The group ranks among the largest forces at the General Assembly — larger even than the banks and utilities. Olson figures the industry has spent more money to influence the General Assembly during the past two decades than any other group.

Auto insurers can afford to lavish so much attention on the Legislature. They took in $882.2 million in auto premiums during 1982, more than all of North Carolina's clothing or drug stores recorded in sales the same year.

In addition, insurers can concentrate almost solely on Raleigh because Congress' McCarran-Ferguson Act of 1945 entrusted nearly all regulation of insurance to the states.

North Carolina has one of the most controversial of regulators: Insurance Commissioner John R. Ingram. Since 1972, he has waged war against the insurance industry and anyone who sides against him.

Ingram counters the insurance industry's lobbying effort by spending many hours talking to legislators and by regularly taking two or three aides to legislative meetings. North Carolina's other state department executives rarely make such shows of force.

Despite the abundance of lobbyists and Insurance Department officials who want to influence the legislators, House Insurance Committee members often become confused about auto premiums. Rep. Edith Lutz, for instance, spent all of 1983 trying to figure out why speeders get their rates increased even though they didn't cost insurance companies any money in losses. "I never did get an answer for that," the farmer's wife from Cleveland County said at year's end. "It still bothers me."

"There's a feeling of 'Who do you believe, who do you look for for factual information?'" said Rep. Mary Seymour, D-Guilford. "There's (staff attorney) Bill Hale, but he's just one person."

Partly because of that confusion, partly because some legislators work for insurance companies, the committee members tend to divide themselves between those who side with Ingram and those who prefer the insurers. They often deadlock on votes, leaving it up to the committee chairman to tip the balance.

In 1981 that job was held by Mrs. Seymour, whose pro-industry views won her a barrage of criticism from Ingram. But in 1983 Mrs. Seymour took another committee chairmanship and the gavel went to Rep. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, whom Ingram calls his friend.

The result was clear every time Hightower exercised his option and created a tie vote on a bill, thus keeping it in committee, and every time he decided to postpone action rather than see a favorite bill defeated.

Even when Ingram did manage to get a bill out of committee in 1983, he faced trouble in the Senate, a more conservative group that showed little interest in the commissioner's ideas.

Ingram enjoyed more success in other years. In 1975, he won passage of a law banning the use of sex or age as considerations in setting rates. He also continued the habit set by the previous insurance commissioner, Ed Lanier, who routinely rejected proposed rate increases.

The insurance companies fought back in 1977 when they pushed through legislation that lets them impose rate increases while appealing Ingram's rejections in court. Since then they have won nearly every one of their appeals, but Ingram says he shouldn't be held accountable for his failure to win in court.

"It's virtually impossible to win under that law," he said.

Pay $13 Postage On A Postcard

KALISPELL, Mont. (AP) — The cost of postage has been climbing in recent years, but even someone used to inflation would have to blanch at the sum the county paid for a recent mailing — $13 a postcard.

Flathead County inadvertently paid $2,730 instead of $27.30 to mail 210 postcards last week.

Donna Peterson of the county clerk's office blamed a broken postage meter.

The county has sent a special envelope to each of the voters who received the card, asking that they be returned. That's the only way the county can get credit from the post office, officials say.

One batch was returned by the postmaster in nearby Whitefish, who noticed the overpriced cards, which were sent to notify voters about new polling places.

Kohl Cabinet To Vote On General

By SUSAN J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Cabinet met today to discuss whether Defense Minister Manfred Woerner should keep his post despite his controversial dismissal of a top NATO general accused of patronizing homosexual bars.

Woerner fired Gen. Guenter Kiessling on Dec. 31 after seeing a military counterintelligence report labeling the four-star general a security risk because he allegedly was a regular patron at two gay bars in Cologne. The dismissal was made known Jan. 4.

Sources in Kohl's Christian Democratic Union party said the chancellor was likely to tell his 16-member Cabinet today that he is inclined to let Woerner stay in office, despite opposition calls for his ouster, if Woerner can come to terms with Kiessling.

It was hoped Woerner could reach an agreement with Kiessling to give the general an apology and a departure with military honors, the party sources said.

Kiessling, 58, has denied the allegations, sued "unknown persons" for slander, gone to court to fight his forced early retirement and appealed to Woerner publicly to "restore my honor."

A spokesman at the Defense Ministry, where the Cabinet met, said today that Woerner is ready to meet with Kiessling to discuss the affair.

However, Erwin Horn, an opposition Social Democrat on the parliamentary committee investigating the case, said his party would "in no way" be satisfied with an arrangement between Woerner and Kiessling.

Horn, in a newspaper interview, was quoted as saying the scandal has become "a crisis of trust" for the West German army and that Woerner should resign because "he can no longer be a model for half a million soldiers."

A former NATO comrade, British Gen. Sir John Hackett, was quoted Tuesday in London as saying Kiessling was the victim of a Soviet smear campaign.

Hackett, commander of NATO's Northern Army Group from 1966-68, was quoted in Jane's Defense Weekly as saying the KGB had obtained four goals: Kiessling's army career is finished, Woerner will have to resign, NATO has been adversely affected by the scandal, and West Germany has been "greatly confused."

The scandal exploded in Kohl's absence last week when the Defense Ministry confirmed Woerner had met with homosexuals in mid-January in what appeared to be a belated attempt to gather evidence against the already-fired Kiessling.

Kohl, who had been on a five-day trip to Israel, returned Sunday to find the opposition calling for Woerner's resignation and his own conservative party divided over the minister's status.

source indicated that blame for the scandal may shift to the counterintelligence agency that produced the allegations against Kiessling.

"Mistakes have been made, and they will be dealt with," said the source, who asked not to be identified.

Kiessling was released from a Munich army hospital Tuesday where he had been since last week for treatment of an undisclosed illness.

The hospital confirmed he had been released, but his whereabouts were unknown.

Copter Parts For Guatemala

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is preparing to ship $2 million in military helicopter parts to Guatemala's rightist government, moving ahead on a sale delayed last year because of an upsurge in human rights abuses.
State Department officials said Tuesday the sale will go through even though the Guatemalan government's human rights performance has not shown any clear improvement. It was not certain, however, exactly when the UH-1H "Huey" helicopter parts would be sent.
One U.S. official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said

Guatemala's human rights situation has "not gotten any worse" since President Efraim Rios Montt was ousted in a military coup last August, and that the administration felt it was "legally committed" to the sale, initially approved a year ago.
Meanwhile, two private human rights groups, Americas Watch and the American Civil Liberties Union, claimed that recent U.S. pressure has failed to curb government-sponsored killings in El Salvador. They charged that human rights abuses there are "as bad as ever."
"November and December 1983, when that (U.S.) pressure was particularly strong, were among the worst months of the year if measured by the numbers of political murders tabulated by the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of El Salvador," the two groups said in a 74-page report.
Last November, the State Department delayed final permission for the Guatemala helicopter parts sale to signal displeasure over the suspicious deaths of two employees of a U.S.-funded educational program and the disappearance of another. The period had also seen an upsurge in right-wing death squad activity allegedly linked to the government.
But a department official said that despite the two-month sale delay, the Guatemalans have not curbed death squad activity or conducted a "good-faith" investigation into the killings of Guatemalan nationals employed by the U.S. Agency for International Development.
On the plus side, however, the official noted that the new government of Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores has disbanded secret tribunals that Rios Montt used to try and execute suspected leftist guerrillas.
U.S. and Guatemalan officials said the decision to lift the hold on the sale was conveyed last week to Guatemalan officials by Frederic Chapin, U.S. ambassador to Guatemala.
The deal will be the first official U.S. sale of military equipment to Guatemala since 1977, when military aid was suspended because of allegations of widespread human rights abuses.
Since taking office in 1981, the Reagan administration has sought to resume military aid to Guatemala and draw the strategically placed country more directly into regional efforts to combat leftist influence in Central America. But Congress has repeatedly resisted any aid, citing continued reports of government-sponsored political murder.
State Department officials said the helicopter parts sale does not constitute military aid to Guatemala since the country will be paying the U.S. government for the equipment. Congressional Democrats, however, have protested the sale. Late last year, 51 congressmen signed a letter urging the deal be stopped.
The long-standing Guatemalan request for helicopter parts was initially approved a year ago amid signs that Rios Montt had reduced death squad activities in the cities. But the Guatemalan government said it lacked the money.
Then last fall, after Mejia Victores had ousted Rios Montt, the Guatemalans said they were prepared to buy $2 million worth of parts. But by that time, U.S.-Guatemalan relations had chilled, largely over the deaths and disappearance of the AID employees, who had been hired to teach Spanish to the country's Indian population.

Private human rights organizations, including Amnesty International and Americas Watch, have long considered Guatemala one of the worst human rights violators in the hemisphere. That nation's government, however, denies the reports of widespread human rights abuses.
In the report on El Salvador, Americas Watch and the ACLU said the U.S. campaign to improve that government's human rights record has failed because the Salvadoran armed forces believe the administration's determination to prevent a leftist guerrilla victory guarantees U.S. aid will never be cut off.

Relying on figures compiled by Tutela Legal, a Catholic church agency, the Americas Watch-ACLU report said 2,615 non-combatants were killed in the last six months of 1983 by government security forces and allied paramilitary groups. The six-month total is slightly higher than the 2,527 killings recorded during the first six months of the year.
In a Jan. 16 report to Congress, the State Department said the number of political murders had declined sharply in the last half of 1983. Relying on reports in El Salvador's pro-government press, it said the number of deaths averaged 104 per month over the past six months compared to 177 a month during the first half of the year.

Chip Plant Launched

DURHAM (AP) — Mitsubishi Electric Corp. officials say that they hope a $29 million semiconductor plant will begin manufacturing 3 million chips per month by January for marketing by the company's Sunnyvale, Calif., branch.
Mitsubishi broke ground on Tuesday for its 125,000-sq-ft plant with a traditional Japanese ceremony and plaudits from Gov. Jim Hunt for the state's attraction to high-tech industry.
"As governor of North Carolina, I want to say again to the corporate leaders of Mitsubishi how much we appreciate your decision to build your first East Coast facility here in North Carolina," Hunt said.
"When completed, this first phase facility will employ more than 200 North Carolinians in the assembly and testing of microelectronic memory chips," he added. "And within five years, Mitsubishi officials tell me the size of this Durham County facility could more than triple, installing complete chip manufacturing facilities and employing hundreds of additional workers."
Mitsubishi officials and Hunt wore ceremonial coats and used wooden pestils to pound steamed rice into cakes in a ritual reserved for holidays and special occasions.
Among the reasons for Mitsubishi's move into North Carolina was the lack of a unitary state tax on the income of corporations and their foreign subsidiaries with operations similar to that within state boundaries, said Kazuo Wantanabe, president of the new subsidiary.
"We have not increased corporate income taxes and we have refused and will continue to refuse to adopt a unitary tax or similar taxing measures," Hunt said.
Wantanabe also cited the state's educational network.
"One of the benefits that the state provides to new industry at state expense is employee training," said E. Calvin Gillie, director of adult and continuing education at Durham Technical Institute.
In late October, 30 people underwent a three-week, 120-hour training program at DTI tailored to Mitsubishi's needs, teaching them production, testing and something about Japan history and culture.

Tops In Travel Nightmares

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Lost luggage and canceled flights have ruined many a vacation, but a monstrous trip that also featured a hurricane-tossed schooner and tarantulas in the bathroom have won a Maryland woman the "Frankenstein Award" for the ultimate travel disaster. The award is the lighthearted creation of New York businessman Charles E. Reilly Jr., a frequent traveler who was once bitten on the leg by a boy in an Atlanta elevator. Reilly noticed that almost everyone who travels has a horror story to tell, and he began collecting them. Then he got the idea for a contest, publicizing it in business magazines and through travel editors.

"It's amazing that some of these people who wrote in think we're a focal point for their anger," Reilly said Tuesday. "We got reams and reams. It got kind of out of hand." Reilly heard from a man who was mistakenly threatened by an irate husband with a gun. He heard from a woman who was pinned to the floor of her hotel room by a collapsed television console.

But none of the nearly 600 entries collected during the past year topped the story of Dolores Allen of Takoma Park, Md., a Washington suburb. Mrs. Allen's 1969 "vacation" cruise in the Caribbean was awe-inspiringly awful.

First, the airline that was to take her to Antigua went on strike. Her alternate flight took her there via Philadelphia and Puerto Rico. Half her luggage was lost.

Engine trouble delayed the schooner in Antigua. Mrs. Allen and 32 other passengers were put up in a local hotel at the shipping line's expense — a hotel with no air conditioning in the tropics. The courtyard and the bathrooms were inhabited by huge tarantulas.

"They were big and horrible-looking, the biggest spiders I'd ever seen," she said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

Mealtime was a disaster. The cuisine featured warm goat's milk, "with the taste and consistency of boiled chalk," she said.

When the group was allowed to board the schooner, they found roach-infested staterooms. After two days at sea, the ship brushed the edge of a hurricane and everyone — including the captain — became seasick. Bilge water sloshed into the cabins, ruining the remainder of Mrs. Allen's luggage.

The next day, the engines and refrigerators failed. The ship smelled of bilge and rotting meat. Powered by the wind, the ship came within sight of Guadalupe, but then the breeze calmed and they sat for three days without moving. Water ran out and passengers washed and brushed their teeth with bottled soft drinks.

The jinxed cruise ended when a wind finally took the schooner back to Antigua.

Mrs. Allen said she learned of the Frankenstein contest from a newspaper article and decided to enter "because it just seemed like the natural thing to do." She said she wasn't interested in taking the two-day business seminar offered as a prize, but probably would accept the weekend trip to New York, where the seminar will be held.

Reilly said the contest was all in fun, and the response was so overwhelming he plans to do it again this year. Entry deadlines won't be announced until July, he said.

Book Admission

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A defense attorney said he will appeal the latest convictions of Joseph Kallinger, who was found guilty of murdering his teen-age son and another boy after confessing to the crimes in the book "The Shoemaker."

Common Pleas John Geisz, rejecting an insanity defense, announced the first-degree murder verdicts Tuesday for the deaths of Joseph Kallinger Jr., 14, and Jose Collazo, 10.

Kallinger is serving a 30-to-80 year sentence in a mental institution for terrorizing and robbing a group of women in 1974. He also was sentenced to life for killing a New Jersey nurse and got a 42-to-51 year sentence for the attempted rape and robbery of another woman.

Execution Date Set In March

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — A judge set a March 20 execution date for a 19-year-old man a jury found guilty of murder and sentenced to death for suffocating a wealthy Sea Island couple.

Kenneth Blanks was convicted Tuesday in the deaths of William and Meril Roberts, whose bodies were found in separate bathtubs at their home on the exclusive resort island last July. Authorities said Roberts, 61, a retired oil executive, and his wife, 52, died of asphyxiation after their heads were bound with cloth and tape.

A second man charged in the killings swallowed poison and died last August.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices turned upward today in what analysts described as a technical rally after the market's recent declines.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 66.06 points from Jan. 6 through Tuesday's close, rose 1.68 to 1,222.26 in the first half hour.

Analysts took a 4-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers said no big surprises appeared to be in the offing in President Reagan's budget proposal, being sent to Congress today.

They said traders remained concerned about the wide deficit between the government's income and outlays.

In today's other economic news, the Commerce Department reported that new factory orders rose 1 percent in December, following a 2 percent increase the month before.

Today's early volume leaders included Merrill Lynch, up 1/4 at 31 1/2; DuPont, up 1/4 at 50; Mobil, unchanged at 30 1/2, and Northwest Industries, down 1/4 at 48 1/2.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped .94 to 1,220.58.

About eight stocks fell in price for every seven that rose on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 113.51 million shares, against 103.12 million Monday.

The NYSE's composite index rose 20 to 943.3. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .62 at 216.91.

Rose Rally Nails Kinston

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Down by 11 points with 4:30 to go, Rose High School's Rampants turned on an incredible finish and pulled out an 84-79 victory over Kinston's Vikings last night in the Big East Conference.

Led by 25 points from Carlton Wilson and 20 from Jeff Hopkins, the Rampants put together an outstanding comeback from as far back as 16 points in the contest to pull it out.

Rose's girls also rallied from behind but couldn't hold on, losing a 56-52 overtime battle with the Valkyries.

While Wilson and Hopkins scored the points and helped led Rose to a 38-25 rebounding edge, it was the defensive play of sophomore Dwight Smith that may have been the key to the whole thing. Smith came up with several key steals, including the one that allowed Rose to take the lead for good with 30 seconds remaining.

Another key event was a technical foul on Kinston's Joel Shackleford just after the 6-10 junior had been fouled himself. It helped Rose rally from three down to tie, eventually going on to win.

"The kids never gave up," Coach Jim Brewington said. "Several times they could have, but they didn't. The boards helped us a lot tonight and we shot well too."

Rose trailed by 16 points, 30-14, seconds into the second period, but slowly but surely rallied against the Vikings. Early in the third period, they scored eight straight points to take a 48-47 lead, but couldn't hold it. Kinston came up with eight straight of its own to take a 59-52 lead late in the period.

Rose cut it back to three, 63-60, but the Vikings then seemed to break it open with eight more in a row, four each by Travis Freeman and Andre Jones. That gave the Vikings a 71-60 lead with 4:31 left in the contest.

But the Rampants just would not die. They ran off eight straight, cutting it back to 71-68, with Wilson scoring four of those. Then, after Jones made two free throws, Tyrone Smith scored once and was credited with another as Shackleford knocked his shot out of the basket. That pulled it to one, 73-72.

With 1:30 left, Shackleford was fouled by Hopkins, and the officials apparently didn't like something he said afterwards, slapping a technical on him. While the big center canned both free throws, Mac Walston made the "T" at the other end, and when the ball was put into play, Walston was fouled. He missed this time, but Hopkins was there to throw the miss back, and it was tied at 75-75.

With 1:01 left, Shackleford hit on an Alley Oop, giving the Vikings the lead again, 77-75. However, Hopkins tapped back a missed shot and Dwight Smith stole a pass and fed Tyrone Smith for the go-ahead layup that made it 79-77 with 30 seconds to go.

Rose created another turnover and Wilson scored a three-point play on the drive to the basket with 17 seconds to go, making it 82-77 and it was all over.

"I just can't say enough about the play of Wilson and Hopkins tonight," Brewington said. "They played great. It was one of Carlton's best and Jeff's best by far. But I've got to give a lot of credit to (Dwight) Smith. He made some great defensive plays."

"To come back from 16 down against a Kinston club is something. They played inspired ball. I told them that as long as they hung in there they had a chance and they believed me. I'm proud of them; this is one of our biggest wins. Anyone who missed this one missed a great game."

Although Rose tied it at 2-2, the Rampants never led in the first half. Kinston, after taking a 6-4 lead, scored nine straight to run its lead out to 17-4, and later in the period upped it to 15, 27-12.

Kinston then scored the first two baskets of the second period to lead by 30-14 — a 16-point spread.

Rose then calmed down and took command of the game after that. The Rampants outrebounded the Vikes, 16-4 in the period and cut the lead back to as little as four, and trailed 42-36 at the end of the quarter.

Although the Rampants took a 48-47 lead midway the period, they couldn't hold it. They regained it at 52-51, but again fell behind as they were outhit, 10-2 the rest of the quarter.

But in the final period, despite falling back by 11, Rose pulled it out.

In addition to the point totals of Wilson and Hopkins, Walston scored 15 and Tyrone Smith had 12.

Kinston was led by Travis Freeman with 21 while Rodney Davis had 20 and Shackleford had 18. Both teams are now 3-4 in the league while Kinston is 9-7 and Rose is 8-7 overall.

In the girls game, Rose, down by nine at the end of the first period, rallied and took a 48-47 lead late in the contest, only to see the Valkyries tie it up with 15 seconds left, forcing an overtime.

Down by eight at 45-37 with 4:30 left, Rose came back and knotted it on Vickie Parrott's layup with 2:36 left at 45-45. Cynthia Williams put Kinston back up by one, hitting the second of two free throws, but Niansa Outlaw scored on a three-point play with 36 seconds to go, and Rose led, 48-46.

Cathy Murrell scored on the first of two free throws, and Rose appeared to have the ball on the rebound, but Terry Sims came up with it and was fouled, hitting the second of two to knot it.

Both teams suffered turnovers in the time left, and Rose failed to get off a decent shot at the horn.

Doris Richardson put Rose ahead at the start of the overtime, but Sims scored on a three-point play, then added another basket for a 53-50 lead and Rose never overcame that as the Valkyries made good on three of six free throws in the final 33 seconds to hold on to the win.

The two teams swapped the lead back and fourth until Rose led, 8-7 with 2:30 left in the first quarter. The Valkyries then reeled off ten straight to take a 17-8 lead at the end of the frame. Rose came back, however, and trailed by only two, 27-25, at halftime. Rose then tied it up once, at 29-29 before falling back again, 37-31 at the start of the final quarter.

"We made a couple of turnovers there in crucial times," Coach Dennis Gibson said. "Otherwise, I thought we played a pretty good ball game. Their press gave us some trouble at times and we could still use another good guard in there to help us handle the ball."

Kim Williams led Kinston's scoring with 15 points, while Cynthia Williams had 13, Murrell had 10 and Sims had 10.

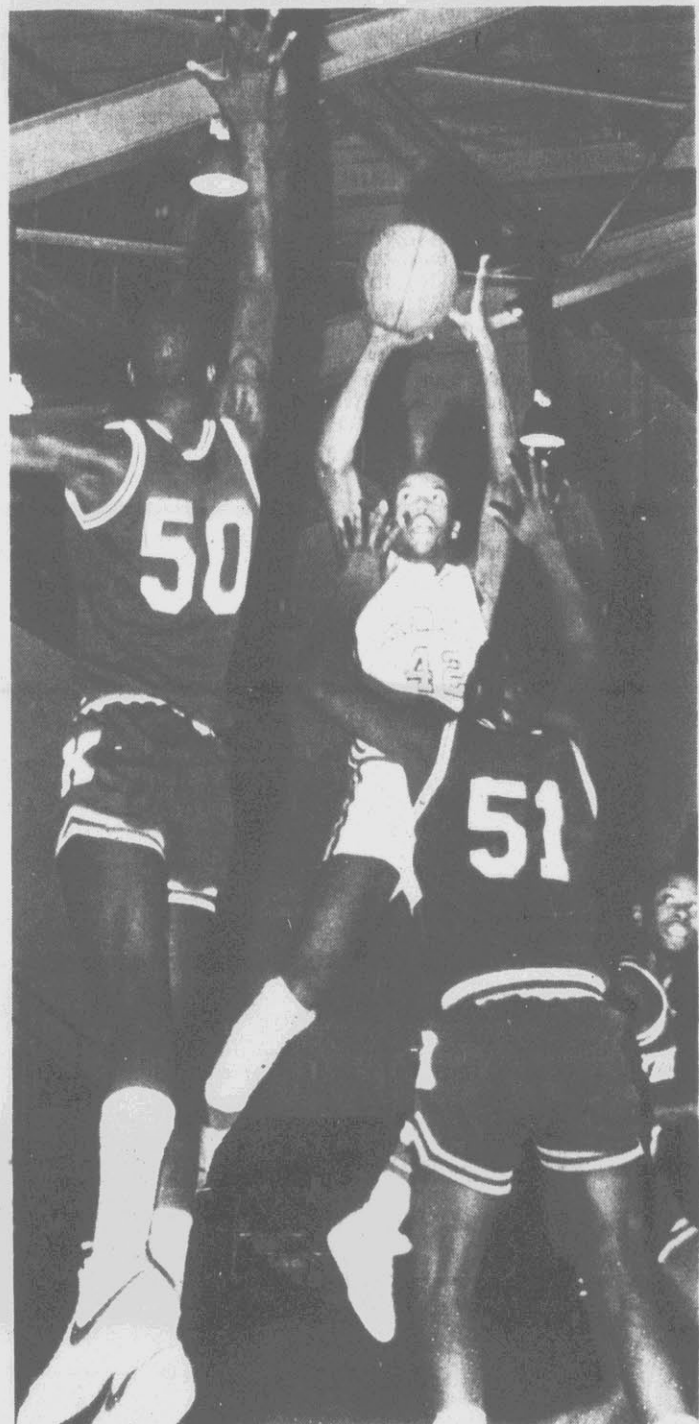

Rose was led by Richardson with 19, while Sheila Carmon had 10. The loss drops Rose to 3-4 in the league and 3-12 overall. Kinston is now 4-3 and 8-6.

Rose travels to Northern Nash on Friday, starting the second swing through the league.

Vikings Hold Off Rams, 60-44

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — The D.H. Conley Vikings watched a 23-8 first quarter lead disappear but placed four players in double figures to defeat Havelock 60-44 in Coastal 3-A Conference basketball action last night.

The Valkyries maintained the lead during the first half of their game but fell behind in the third quarter and never regained the lead as the Lady Rams posted another upset, 52-49. Havelock upset league co-favorite North Lenoir Friday night.

Darryl Daniels wielded the hot hand during the Vikings first quarter rally and finished with a game-high 16 points. Donald Dawson fired in 13 points for Conley, while Louis Bryant and Reggie Smith chipped in 12 each.

Tony Moore led the Rams, now 1-3 in the conference and 5-10 overall, with 15 points, while Chris Moore added 10.

The Vikings dominated the boards early in the contest and continued to hold the edge most of the night, as they finished with a 41-33 edge. Daniels hauled down 12 caroms for Conley, while Bryant grabbed 10.

"When we got our big lead early," Conley Coach Shelly Marsh said, "Donald was hitting from outside and we hit the boards well."

"Unfortunately, we let them back in the game with defensive letdowns. I was not really surprised we had some letdowns; they're coming off exams and haven't worked that much in the past week."

Nonetheless, Conley blazed the nets in the first quarter, as Daniels scored on three moves inside before Dawson connected on a pair from 18 feet out. Mike Bell finally got the Rams on the scoreboard at the 3:44 mark with a jumper, but Dawson pumped in another from outside to maintain a 12-2 Conley edge.

After Kenny Roberts scored for Havelock, Bryant completed a three-point play and Smith scored on a fast break to put the Vikings ahead 17-4 with 2:26 left in the period.

Conley outscored the Rams 6-4 in the closing minutes of the opening quarter for a 15-point lead.

Conversely, the second period was dominated by Havelock, as the Rams held an 18-8 scoring edge. Moore had three field goals and Ananis Jenkins added a pair as the Rams trimmed the margin to 31-26 at intermission.

After Moore sank a follow shot five seconds into the third quarter, the Vikings posted 11 unanswered points for a 42-28 margin with 4:45 remaining. But once again the Rams came alive on offense as Butch Fisher bucketed his only two field goals of the night to spark a 10-0 scoring blitz through the end of the period for a 42-38 Conley advantage.

Once again Moore canned the first field goal in the fourth quarter, and once again Conley responded by posting 12 unanswered points to take a 54-40 lead with 3:37 left in the contest. Daniels led that spurt with a tip in and a move inside.

"They've got a scrappy ballclub," Marsh said. "They're going to surprise some people; no one better count them out."

The Vikings lifted their record to 3-2 in the conference and 9-8 overall and will entertain West Carteret Friday.

Susan Childers pumped in 15 points to lead the Lady Rams to victory. Jenny Bell added 14 points and Pat Abel 11.

Mechio Kornegay paced Conley with 22 points on 11 field goals but missed all five of her attempts from the free throw line. Karen Barrett added 17 points as the Valkyries' record slipped to 3-2 in the conference and 14-4 overall.

Conley held a 19-12 after the first quarter, but the Lady Rams trimmed the margin to 27-23 at halftime. The Valkyries managed just 10 points in the third quarter while Bell posted eight of her total in the period. Abel netted five points Childers four as Havelock built to a seven-point advantage before Kornegay's layup at the buzzer cut the gap to 42-37.

Conley's Lisa Mills dropped in a 15-footer to open the fourth quarter, but Childers muscled free inside twice to give the Lady Rams a 46-39 lead with 7:19 remaining.

Debbie Patrick connected from the corner for the Valkyries, and Sharon Stobel responded for Havelock. After Kornegay drove the baseline to trim the margin to 50-43 with 3:40 on the clock, the Lady Rams missed the front end of a one-and-one opportunity twice and added a turnover to allow Conley to battle back.

Kornegay connected on a follow shot and Barrett made the first of two free throws twice to cut the Rams' lead to three with 42 seconds left. But Bell sank a pair of free throws to put Havelock ahead 52-47 with 34 seconds left. Kornegay drove the length of the court for a layup with 15 seconds remaining, but time expired on the Valkyries hopes of a rally.

Conley slipped to 3-2 in the Coastal race while 14-4 overall, while Havelock boosted its league-leading mark to 4-1 with an overall record of 13-3.

Havelock Beats Conley; Title Tied

HAVELOCK — Havelock won five of the final six weights and pulled out a 34-30 wrestling victory over D.H. Conley last night, sending the league's regular season title into a three-way deadlock.

Conley, Havelock and West Carteret all finished with 6-2 league records, each splitting with the other. That left them, at season's end, tied for the championship.

The conference's championship meet will be held Saturday at West Carteret. It was earlier scheduled for Conley, but the league switched it to West Carteret this week.

Conley is 13-3 overall.

SouthWest Defeats Farmville By 62-49

FARMVILLE — Darryl Clark pumped in 19 points to lead SouthWest Edgecombe to a 62-49 victory over the Farmville Central Jaguars in an Eastern Carolina 3-A high school basketball matchup Tuesday. The Lady Cougars utilized a balanced scoring attack to defeat Farmville 50-33 in the girls game.

Kelvin Knight added 10 points for SouthWest in the boys game, while Kent Hardy led the Jaguars with 11 and Ronnie Barnes had 10.

SouthWest shot out to a 16-2 lead in the first quarter as the Jaguars came out cold. Farmville and SouthWest Edgecombe played evenly through the final three periods, but the hole in the Jaguars dug themselves into in the first quarter was too deep.

Phyllis Gorham paced the Lady Cougars with 16 points on the night, while Teresa Mayo added 14 and Pam Gorham 12. Joy Peaden led the Lady Jaguars with 11 points.

Farmville's boys are now 0-8 in the conference and 2-15 overall while the girls are 3-5, 8-10. SouthWest's boys are 6-2, 13-5, while the girls are 8-0, 15-3.

Ayden-Grifton Nips Aycock In Overtime

PIKEVILLE — Calvin Peterson scored a basket and Doug Anderson blocked a shot to allow Ayden-Grifton to escape with a 49-48 Eastern Carolina Conference basketball overtime victory over C.B. Aycock last night.

Aycock's girls pulled off a 60-49 upset of the Lady Chargers, winning their first game against league competition.

Aycock built up a 13-10 lead in the first period of the boys game, but the Chargers rallied, 20-12, in the second period. That put Ayden-Grifton into a 30-25 lead at the half.

Aycock again came back, outscoring the Chargers, 11-6, in the third period to knot it at 36-36 at the horn. The Falcons then built up a seven point lead with four minutes to go, but the Chargers forced a few turnovers and rallied with Mike Dixon hitting a field goal and Marvin Smith making a free throw to tie it at 45-45. The Chargers then had a chance to wrap it up in regulation, but missed.

In the overtime, Peterson's basket with 30 seconds left gave the Chargers a one-point lead, and Anderson managed to block Aycock's final shot at the basket to preserve the victory.

Anderson led the Ayden-Grifton scoring with 13 while Marvin Smith added 10. Wade Fuller had 13, Ray Spruill had 11 and Perry Jones had 10 for Aycock.

The Aycock girls shot out into a 17-8 lead in the first period of their game and never looked back. They held a 35-25 lead at the end of the half. In the third period, Ayden-Grifton rallied, 11-6, and cut the lead back to 41-41, but a 19-13 advantage by Aycock in the final period snapped the Lady Falcon losing streak against ECC teams.

Kelly Malpass led Aycock with 34 points while Dawn Whitley added 12. Cora Faison led Ayden-Grifton with 21 with Cynthia Hicks adding 10.

Ayden-Grifton's boys are now 5-3 in league play and 11-6 overall. The girls fall to 3-5, 5-12. Aycock's boys are 1-7, 5-11 and the girls are 1-7, 2-15.

Ayden-Grifton plays host to Southern Nash on Friday.

Tigers Overcome Grace By 54-43

ROCKY MOUNT — Trinity Christian School rallied and gained a 54-43 victory over Grace Christian last night. The win was the 12th straight for the Tigers, now 13-2 on the season.

Trinity had its problems in the first half, however, falling behind 17-14 at intermission, scoring only three points in the second quarter. In the third period, however, Trinity finally found the range and used its speed to help move out into a 28-22 lead at the end of that frame. The Tigers then outpointed the Eagles, 26-21, in the final quarter to come up with the win.

"I know we missed between 10 and 15 shots within five feet of the basket," Coach Don Southerland said. "Our boys were simply not hustling in the first half."

Art Reynolds led the Tigers with 14 points while Rodney Brown had 10. Dennis Brooks paced Grace with 26 while Scott Smith added 10.

Indians Nip Lakers

CHOCOWINITY — Mark Smith and Terry Moore sparked a Chocowinity rally in the final period last night and the Indians pulled out a 62-56 victory over Mattamuskeet to stay close on the heels of front-running Creswell in the Tobacco Belt basketball conference.

Chocowinity's lassies also came away with a win, downing Mattamuskeet, 64-36.

The Lakers entered the final period with a 41-36 lead and appeared headed for a victory. But Smith scored 11 points, including nine of ten free throws, while Moore pushed in 10, including four of four at the stripe, to spark a 26-15 scoring margin by the Tribe. That was enough to turn it around.

Chocowinity had led at the end of the first period, 12-8, but the Lakers outscored the Tribe, 19-8, in the second quarter. That left Mattamuskeet up, 27-20 at the half. The Indians rallied, 16-14, in the third period, but still trailed by five going into the final quarter.

While the Lakers held leading scorer Reggie Ross to just nine points, they couldn't hold back Moore, who finished with 21 and Smith, who had 19. Harry Burrus had 28 and Jay Ethridge had 10 for the Lakers.

Chocowinity is now 9-3 in the league and 10-7 overall while the Lakers drip to 7-4, 11-6.

Chocowinity's girls all but wrapped it up in the first period, racing out to a 25-2 lead in the first eight minutes. They slowed it down in the second quarter and settled for a 12-9 edge, making it 37-11 at intermission.

The Lady Tribe upped the lead to 58-17 in the third period and then allowed a 19-6 rally in the final period.

Wendy Elks and Kim Green each scored 16 for Chocowinity while Cynthia Gibbs added 14. Sheila Perry led Mattamuskeet with 10.

MARGINAL PLAYERS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — They're called marginal players and Russ Bollinger, a reserve guard and tackle for the Los Angeles Rams, is one of them. They are borderline candidates to make the team every summer in training camp.

"Pro football is a lot easier on you mentally if you are an established star or have been a regular for several seasons," Bollinger said. "Every year when I go to training camp there are so many players whose ability is close to mine that I have to win my job all over again. It was that way for seven years with the Detroit Lions and again when I moved to the Rams. It will be that way in training camp of 1984."

Chocowinity is now 10-2 in the league and 12-3 overall. The Lakers drop to 3-8, 5-10.

Chocowinity closes out its home season Friday, hosting Aurora.

Southern Tops Pitt

STANHOPE — Southern Nash held on to a share of first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference with a 66-49 victory over North Pitt last night.

The North Pitt girls came away with a 48-33 win in their game.

The Firebirds, now 6-1 in league play, are tied with idle Greene Central for the league lead. North Pitt slumps to 3-5 in the conference.

The Firebirds raced to a 20-12 lead in the first period of their game, then slowed to take a 10-9 advantage in the second frame. That made it 30-21 at halftime.

Southern Nash again pulled away in the third period, 19-14, building the lead to 49-35. They finished off the Panthers, 17-14, in the final quarter.

Ronnie Artis led Southern with 17 points while Chris Hawkins added 13 and Kelvin Crudup had 12. North Pitt was led by Keith Calrk with 12.

The Pant-HERS pulled away from Southern in the first period of the girls' game, taking a 12-8 lead. They outscored the Ladybirds, 14-3 in the second quarter to take a 26-11 halftime ledge. That was held in the third period, which ended with North Pitt leading 34-19. Both again matched points in the final period.

Delores Pittman led North Pitt with 14 points while Sherri Bradley hit 11. Ellen Lewis led Southern with 12 while Barbara Bryant had 10.

North Pitt's girls are now 5-3 in the league and 11-7 overall. Southern is 1-6, 3-14. The Firebirds are 12-5 overall while North Pitt is now 8-10.

North Pitt plays host to Greene Central on Friday.

Pitt Paladins Gain First Win

WINTERVILLE — Pitt Community College captured its first win of the season last night, downing Cape Fear, 79-73.

Pitt led most of the way, taking an early 19-9 lead during the first ten minutes of the game. They held off a rally by Cape Fear during the final ten minutes and took a 37-29 lead into intermission.

In the second half, Pitt maintained its lead throughout most of the way before Cape Fear rallied once more and cut the lead to as little as four in the final three minutes. But again the Paladins held them off to pull out the victory.

"We didn't shoot well in the first half, hitting only 36.8 percent. We pulled that up to 46.5 for the game, but we've got to improve on that," Coach Charles Coburn said. "We are still having problems with the easy shots under the basket, but I feel good about our coming out with a win."

David Joyner led Pitt with 26 points, while Albert Brown added 19. Earnest Hymond pitched in 11 more and William Rollins had 10. Tart led Cape Fear with 25 points, while Moore had 18 and Lesine had 16.

Pitt is now 1-3 overall and 1-1 in conference play. The Paladins next game is Feb. 9 at Craven Community College.

Peele's 19 Leads Bullets' Victory

JAMESVILLE — Tracy Peele fired in 19 points as Jamesville posted three players in double-digits en route to a 62-53 Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference victory over Columbia Tuesday.

Tasha Clegg scored 12 points and Kim Simpson 10 to lead Columbia's girls to a 43-27 win over Jamesville.

Richie Ange pumped in 15 points and Robbie Harris 14 as the Bullets raised their record to 5-7 in the conference and 5-8 overall.

Harold Hill swished a game-high 20 points, while Harmon Reiss added 19 and Andre Bailey 11 for Columbia.

Jamesville jumped out to a 21-13 lead after the first quarter, but Columbia held a 15-6 scoring edge in the second period to take 28-27 halftime lead.

"We started out making good passes, finding open man for easy layups," Jamesville Coach William Johnson said. "In the second quarter, we made some bad passes and they intercepted a few."

"Then in the second half, we settled down to playing sound — playing by our game plan. If the good shot was there we would take it, if not we'd wait.

"It's going to be a rat race in the conference, especially in the middle of the pack. If we play well Friday at Creswell, that could tell a lot about where we'll finish."

Gatlin Shines In Starting Role

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Maryland coach Lefty Driesell calls the 10th-ranked Terrapins' 67-66 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Virginia Tuesday night "a good win under the circumstances."

On Saturday, Maryland was upset by unranked Notre Dame. That night, starting wing guard Adrian Branch and reserve Steve Rivers were arrested on a misdemeanor charge of possession of $10 worth of marijuana, prompting their indefinite suspension from the team Monday by Driesell.

The Terrapins got balanced scoring Tuesday night, including 14 points from 6-5 freshman guard Keith Gatlin, who started in place of Branch.

"The kids played with a lot of poise," Driesell said. "I'm real proud of our ball club. We're still undefeated on the road in the ACC. We needed this one for a lot of reasons."

Asked if his team missed Branch in the lineup, Driesell responded: "I don't know. We won the ball game and that's all I know. If you win you don't miss anyone."

Mark Fothergill's only field goal of the game with 14 seconds left to play propelled Maryland to the win. Fothergill's short hook from five feet gave Maryland a 65-64 lead.

Rick Carlisle then missed a jumper from the right corner for Virginia, and Maryland's Jeff Adkins hit a pair of free throws with three seconds left to wrap up the Terrapins' 14th win in 17 starts. Maryland is 4-1 in ACC play.

Kenton Edelin added a meaningless basket at the end for Virginia, now 12-5 overall and 2-5 in the ACC.

The loss marked the first time in four years Virginia dropped three straight games, prompting concern from Cavalier coach Terry Holland.

"This was a very tough loss for us. The toughest part is that we get so close but still don't seem to be able to beat people," Holland said. "We can compete with everyone but we can't quite seem to get over the hump and beat anyone."

Virginia was paced by freshman forward Tom Sheehy with a career-high 27 points. Sheehy had scored only 30 points in Virginia's first six ACC games.

Fellow freshman Olden Polynice was the only other Virginia player in double figures with 10.

"Sheehy had a great game for us," Holland said, "and that certainly helps us as far as looking ahead to the next game. We've played every team in the ACC now and we've proved to ourselves that we can compete with them, but that's obviously not enough."

Greenville Christian Academy ran off a pair of victories over Wilson Christian last night. The Knights won the boys' game by a lopsided 58-29 score, while the girls took a 33-29 win.

The Knights jumped into a 14-6 lead in the first quarter of the contest and never looked back. They outscored Wilson, 20-11, in the second period, building up a 34-17 halftime lead.

In the third period, Greenville upped its lead to 47-27 and outscored Wilson 11-2 in the final quarter.

"We had a good first half," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "Turnovers hurt us in the second half, however, but the guys never stopped hustling."

Dan Andrews led Greenville with 21 points, while Todd Boykin had 12 to lead Wilson.

In the girls' contest, Wilson gained an 8-3 lead after one period, but the Lady Knights rallied, 10-6, and cut the lead to 14-13 at the half. Greenville moved through the third with an 8-5 edge, and inched ahead, 21-19. They then outthrust Wilson, 12-10, in the final quarter to take the win.

Kathy Vernelson led Greenville with 23 points while LuAnn Lane had 11 and Melinda Deans had 10 for Wilson.

"We used some new things on defense and that carried us through," Thatcher said. "We also made some key free throws down the stretch."

The Knights are now 9-6 while the Lady Knights are 7-5. They travel to Falls Road on February 10 for their next game.

Simmons Shows Optimism On USFL Future

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Commissioner Chet Simmons has expressed optimism for the future of the United States Football League and said better players were expected to boost attendance and television ratings this year.

Marcus Dupree may not be one of those new players, however.

Simmons called the signing earlier this month of Mike Rozier, the 1983 winner of the Heisman Trophy, by the Pittsburgh Maulers a USFL plum. But he declined to say whether the league would bid for Dupree, the former Oklahoma running back who has dropped out of the University of Southern Mississippi because the NCAA would not permit him to play next season.

"I think that really, in my best interests, I cannot comment on that," said Simmons while attending a media luncheon. "There is a case in Los Angeles. From what I was told... the judge said that our eligibility rule is, per se, a violation of antitrust laws."

The case to which Simmons referred was a decision relating to a suit filed on the West Coast by former Arizona punter Bob Boris against the Arizona Wranglers of the USFL.

Boris has since signed with the Los Angeles Express of the same league. Dupree became another possible target, much the same as Herschel Walker a year ago, when it was announced earlier in the day that the former Oklahoma star was leaving Southern Mississippi.

"I think the biggest accomplishment for this league was that we got through our first year," Simmons said. "I think for credibility it was very important."

Simmons listed average attendance of 33,000, up from 25,000 in the league's first year, and a television rating of 7, up from 6 last spring, as viable targets for the USFL in 1984.

"What I wasn't excited about last year was our quality of play. I think that coming out of the box, without preparation, the play was dull," the former network television executive said. "But as we went the year and began to sign some players, the quality changed. By the end of the year, the quality was good."

Simmons said the USFL's emphasis, despite a money war in its formative stage, remains quality of play combined with fiscal responsibility.

"We do not want to go against the National Football League dollar for dollar to get a player. We have made 900 jobs available," he said.

Prime prospects for USFL expansion beyond the six new franchises which will be starting the league season on Feb. 26 include Indianapolis, said Simmons.

The commissioner said evening time slots for USFL games are under consideration along with a possible shifting of the schedule eventually to the fall in competition with the NFL.

"There is some sentiment. Part of the work of the committee is to take a look at that, but we proved we could play in the spring and succeed," said Simmons.

A break-in at the home of David Harry Cook, 110 Farmhouse Place, resulted in the theft of a small quantity of Tylenol tablets from a hall closet and caused damages estimated at $200 to the residence, Greenville police reported.

Four persons were injured and damages totaled an estimated $1,800 in three traffic accidents investigated Tuesday by Greenville police.

Officers said two injuries occurred in a 6:09 p.m. three-vehicle wreck on 10th Street 120 feet east from Cedar Lane. Police said vehicles operated by Allison Cooper Perkins of Route 7, Greenville, Lindsay Faye Payton of 142 Cypress Gardens, and Lloyd Cleveland Lancaster of 102 Lakeview Drive, were involved.

Investigating officers said Ms. Perkins and Ms. Payton were injured. Ms. Perkins was charged with failure to reduce her speed to avoid an accident. Damages were estimated at $400 each to the Perkins and Payton vehicles and $200 to Lancaster's vehicle.

Connie Lynn Greene of Glendale Court was charged with failure to reduce her speed to avoid an accident following investigation of a 10:40 p.m. accident on East Greenville Boulevard east from Red Banks Road toward Arlington Boulevard. Police said Ms. Greene was injured in the accident, which involved her car and a vehicle operated by Milton James Allen of Route 2, Greenville. Damage to the Greene vehicle was set at $2,000, while the Allen vehicle sustained an estimated $300 in damages.

Danny Lee Paramore of Route 1, Winterville, was injured in a 2:45 p.m. accident on Greenville Boulevard at East 14th Street. Police said the wreck involved vehicles operated by Paramore and Harold Fay Jackson of Pinetown. Jackson was charged with a stop light violation and damages were estimated at $600 to his car and $200 to the Paramore vehicle.

Countdown Begins Today For

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown for America's 10th space shuttle mission began today with the crew predicting the journey would open "new frontiers" for servicing satellites and building the permanent orbiting station President Reagan has endorsed. Among the "very spectacular novelties" planned for the five-day flight aboard the shuttle Challenger are the first space walks without lifelines. Two of the five astronauts are to move away from the shuttle with a backpack propelled by nitrogen gas jets.

Liftoff from Cape Canaveral is scheduled for 8 a.m. Friday. Test conductor Andy Browne began the countdown at 2 a.m. today with the "call to stations," summoning more than 50 engineers and technicians to the control center three miles from the launch pad. Commander Vance Brand, pilot

Burden To Insurers

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — What started as an attempt to foil junk mailers ironically has become an extra financial burden to auto insurers. Copies of a driver's traffic record used to cost $1 from the state Motor Vehicles Division, but during the past three years the price has jumped to $4.

Because of those increases, auto insurers say it has become increasingly more difficult for them to financially justify buying the driving records to see who has gotten traffic convictions. Those convictions are supposed to be converted into surcharges that boost drivers' rates anywhere from 10 percent to 450 percent.

Fearing mass mailers would use driver's license lists to blanket the state, Miller replied by calling for a charge of $3 per MVR. Few people — none of them insurance representatives — opposed him. Last year the MVR charge went up again, this time to $4. A cash-hungry state budget was the reason why.

The Tenth Shuttle Flight

Robert Gibson and mission specialists Bruce McCandless, Robert Stewart and Ronald McNair arrived here Tuesday from their Houston training base and told reporters they anticipated an exciting mission.

Essentially, they said, it will be a rehearsal for the next flight, in April, when another shuttle crew will attempt to capture and repair a defective satellite named Solar Max.

McCandless and Stewart will test the backpacks, moving without tethers as far as 300 feet from Challenger. In April's flight, an astronaut will use the backpack to secure Solar Max so it can be brought into the shuttle cargo bay for repairs.

McCandless and Stewart also will practice techniques for replacing an electronics box on the Solar Max, a $100 million dollar package that failed in orbit shortly after it was launched four years ago.

To practice the maneuvers needed to close in on Solar Max, Brand and McCandless will eject a 6½-foot-diameter inflatable balloon, let it drift away and then track it down.

"We have sort of a potpourri flight — a mission of many elements," said McCandless, who will be the first to test the backpack on the fifth day of the mission. "It will open new doors and new frontiers in space walking, for the following flight, the Solar Max repair mission, and it also will have important application for the space station."

The station, which President Reagan called for last week in his State of the Union message, would be built in orbit by astronauts wearing such backpacks. Untethered astronauts would also service unmanned science and manufacturing platforms orbiting near a station.

"We're looking forward to a very exciting flight. It is full of very spectacular novelties," said McNair, the second black astronaut named to a U.S. space flight.

The astronauts landed their jets Tuesday on the 15,000-foot runway where Challenger is to touch down Feb. 11 to complete the first true round-trip space flight — from Cape Canaveral to Cape Canaveral.

"We're hoping the weather will cooperate and we'll have the honor of being the first to land back here," said Brand.

Rain and clouds foiled the only previous attempt to land a shuttle at Canaveral. That was on the seventh flight, in July 1983, when the touchdown was diverted to Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., site of eight of the previous landings. The other returned to White Sands, N.M., because of bad weather at Edwards.

Brand and Gibson were airborne again within an hour after their arrival Tuesday, practicing landings on the runway with a Gulfstream jet outfitted to handle like a shuttle.

Michigan State Senate Vote Shows A Strong Anti-Tax Feeling Continues

By JACQUELYNN BOYLE
Associated Press Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The election of two Republicans to replace Democratic state senators recalled in a tax protest — giving the GOP control of the Michigan Senate for the first time in a decade — shows "anti-tax fever" is as strong as ever, the winners say.

"You have elected not a person, but an entire philosophy," state Rep. Rudy Nichols said Tuesday after winning one of the Senate seats vacated in November when state Sen. Philip Mastin and David Serotkin became the first legislators in Michigan history to be recalled.

"David Serotkin was kicked out of office on one issue — taxes," said the man elected to replace him, former Republican state Rep. Kirby Holmes.

Mastin and Serotkin were targeted by activists angry over a 38 percent state income tax hike which Gov. James Blanchard pushed through the Legislature last year to deal with deficits he pegged at $900 million.

Blanchard, a Democrat, and at least 15 other lawmakers also have been targeted for defeat for supporting the increase.

The election results gave Republicans a 20-18 edge in the Senate, the same margin held by Democrats before the recalls.

In an unofficial count from Mastin's district north of Detroit, Nichols defeated Democrat Stanley Kurzman, a lawyer, by a better than 2-1 margin, 18,599 to 7,838. Tisch Independent Citizens Party candidate E. Leonard Howarth received 897 votes, and Libertarian William Hollander trailed with 443.

In Serotkin's Macomb County district, Holmes, who lost to Serotkin in the 1982 election, beat Democratic state Rep. Mary Ellen Parrott by an even wider margin, 21,935 to 8,181. Tisch Party candidate Nancy Fagge received 1,046 votes, and Libertarian Virginia Cropsey had 691.

Democratic leaders said they were not surprised by Tuesday's results, blaming voter apathy and low turnout. In Mastin's district, only 18 percent of the registered voters cast ballots, and in Macomb County, northeast of Detroit, 23 percent of those eligible went to the polls.

"I don't think the odds were thin," said Sen. William Faust, a Democrat who loses the power he held as majority leader to appoint committee chairmen and control the flow of legislation.

"I don't think it's necessarily any indication of what will happen in the fall, but we've got a lot of work to do," said State Democratic Chairman Richard Wiener.

But GOP leaders took the vote as an endorsement of conservative fiscal policies.

"I think it means that recall and anti-tax fever is as strong as it was when Sens. Mastin and Serotkin were recalled," said Sen. Phil Ar-thurhultz, the GOP floor leader. "I don't see any waning of it."

"I predict more recalls," said Holmes. "If the Legislature and the governor don't get the message from the people, we'll just keep sending it until they do."

Mick Steiner, head of Citizens Against Unnecessary State Expenditures, the group that engineered Mastin's recall, said support for Republicans is on the upswing because voters "don't want another liberal Democrat."

The budget boost approved in March increased the flat-rate tax to 6.35 percent from 4.6 percent. The rate dropped to 6.1 percent Jan. 1 and is scheduled to fall to 5.35 percent in 1985. With the increase, Michigan finished fiscal 1983 with a $24.5 million budget surplus.

Holmes and Nichols will take office after the results are certified, and the Senate will then reorganize under the Republicans, who have not controlled the chamber since 1974. Democrats control the House by a 63-47 margin.

By law, Mastin and Serotkin were forbidden to run in the special elections, which cost taxpayers in each district about $50,000, officials said.

Richter Records A Nuclear Test

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — An underground nuclear weapons test conducted at the Nevada Test Site registered 4.5 on the Richter scale, seismographic stations at the University of California-Berkeley reported.

The test, code-named Gorbea, was conducted on Tuesday at 1,273 feet beneath the surface of remote Yucca Flat, some 85 miles northwest of Las Vegas, said Department of Energy spokesman Jim Boyer. It had an explosive range of between 20,000 and 150,000 tons of TNT.

The test was the first announced at the desert site this year and the 617th announced shot since the nation's nuclear weapons testing was moved there in January 1951. Not all tests are announced.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as measured on seismographs.

February is American Heart Month. As many as 1.5 million Americans will have heart attacks this year. About one-third of those will be fatal. School Gym A Monopoly Board

VAN WERT, Ohio (AP) — Monopoly is a big game — literally — at Van Wert High School, where the gymnasium was turned into a giant Monopoly board for a three-hour fund-raising game.

The players used plastic foam dice with two-foot square surfaces to determine their moves over the 4,900-square-foot board. They bought utilities and real estate with money measuring 6 inches by 17 inches.

Karen Kobart, 12-year-old advertising manager of the school newspaper, the Cougar's Roar, said the newspaper hoped to raise $2,500 from the Saturday event.

Miss Kobart brought up the idea of using the game three years ago as a way to send the newspaper staff to journalism workshops at Columbia University in New York and Ball State University in Muncie, Ind.

She said the staff got permission from Monopoly's manufacturer, Parker Brothers, in Beverly, Mass., as long as the game was used only for the fund-raiser.

Peter Jennings, More Than Script-Reader

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter Jennings is paid almost a million dollars a year to anchor ABC's "World News Tonight," and it's evident from "Inside Story," Friday night on public TV, that he does plenty more than read a script someone else has written.

Jennings is shown at one point in "The Anchor," as this half-hour edition of the show is called, batting out the lead to an upcoming story while a two-minute, taped report is on the air. "Sometimes, I'm terribly nervous," he says. "Things are going wrong all around you, and you'd better be nervous."

Once back on camera, Jennings appears cool and collected, but then that's his job ... or part of it. In a broader sense, he is "World News Tonight" and will be held accountable by the network, for the company he keeps.

"His success," says Hodding Carter, chief correspondent for the weekly series on media performance, "is measured by his ability to attract an audience."

"What some have called the triumph of the anchor over the news," Carter says, "is really the triumph of the business of television over the anchor."

"The Anchor" intends, presumably, an examination of the job in general, though what emerges is a fascinating, if small-scale, portrait of Jennings himself, a veteran reporter frustrated, at times, by a job that confines his work to a desk.

Roone Arledge, Jennings' boss as president of ABC News and Sports, recognizes the problem. "It's tough for anybody who becomes an anchor," he says, "because it is a nuisance. I mean, there are lights, and there's makeup, and there's what color background there should be — stuff that has absolutely nothing to do with journalism."

No doubt Jennings would agree with that, though he does look for the best in his new role: "It is a challenge ... to redefine it a bit," he says, meaning the anchorman's job, "to bring to it the kind of ideas and influence you can't bring to it as just a correspondent."

Jennings recalls that he had to decide, not long ago, whether to use film showing a tiny body being lifted by rescue workers from the rubble of a bombed-out building in Beirut. He chose to use the segment — a judgment the reporter in the field would not have to make — and some viewers complained.

"I get tired of people not caring about violence," he says. "I don't think I would do that again in a hurry. But every day, you make those kinds of decisions."

Perhaps it's best that Jennings himself dominates the "Inside Story" piece. Volumes have been written on the anchorman's work, and the business of TV news — notably Ron Powers' "The Newsmakers" and, more recently, "The Evening Stars" by Barbara Matusow.

"The Anchor" couldn't hope to cover as broad and complex a topic in a half-hour of television time; indeed, Jennings' higher-paid competition — Dan Rather at CBS and NBC's Tom Brokaw — are mentioned only in passing.

What it does do, in an admirable way, is offer the viewer a peek behind the scenes, and an extraordinary look at the man on the job.

While on the subject, Arledge is quoted in the current issue of Newsweek magazine as saying, "What really upsets me is that half the special stuff Rather and Brokaw are doing these days are ideas I suggested when we discussed their coming to ABC." And, the article continues, still quoting Arledge: "I guess they couldn't erase it from their minds."

Arledge has since said that's not what he meant, that perhaps the Newsweek reporter misunderstood what he intended to say.

"I've said publicly in the past I think NBC and CBS copy everything we do," the ABC News executive explained in a subsequently published account of the flap. "But I've also said publicly what I think of — the high regard I have for — both Tom and Dan."

'60 Minutes' And 'Dallas' Up Front

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Perennial CBS favorites, "60 Minutes" and "Dallas," led the way as the network took eight of the top 11 spots to win the weekly Nielsen ratings in the week ending Jan. 29.

The magazine show "60 Minutes" was first and right behind it was the prime-time soap opera "Dallas," as CBS swept the top four positions in the ratings.

It was the second victory in a row for CBS, which got a lot of help the week before from the Super Bowl. ABC was first the week before that, largely on the strength of its controversial movie "Something About Amelia."

Third-place NBC took two places in the Top 10 and second-place ABC took one.

CBS was first in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings with a network average of 19.3. ABC was second with 16.5 and NBC was third with 14.7. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 19.3 percent of the TV homes were tuned to CBS.

For the season-to-date, CBS remained in first place as the season ended its 18th week. The ratings: CBS 18.2, ABC 17.1, NBC 15.1.

Tied for third were two CBS shows, the movie "The Lost Honor of Kathryn Beck" and "The Jeffersons." Marlo Thomas starred in the movie as a woman whose life is ruined by police and media attention after she spends the night with a man who turns out to be a suspected terrorist.

Alan Alda, absent from the networks since the end of "M.A.S.H.," made a guest appearance on the premiere episode of "The Four Seasons." It may be that Alda not only helped the "Four Seasons" off to a good start but gave a boost as well to two neighboring shows.

"The Four Seasons" was seventh for the week, and its Sunday neighbors did even better. "Alice" was sixth and "The Jeffersons" was tied for third. Alda's movie, which inspired the new series, was telecast a week ago Monday and finished in a tie for 14th place.

Here are the week's Top 20 programs:

- "60 Minutes," CBS, a rating of 27.2 or 22.8 million households.
- "Dallas," CBS, 26.3 or 22.0 million.
- Movie: "The Lost Honor of Kathryn Beck," CBS, 22.7 or 19.0 million.
- Tie: "The Jeffersons," CBS, 22.7 or 19.0 million.

- "Alice," CBS, 22.4 or 18.7 million.
- "The Four Seasons," CBS, 22.3 or 18.6 million.
- "The Love Boat," ABC, 22.1 or 18.5 million.
- "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, 21.8 or 18.2 million.
- Movie: "Mike Hammer: More Than Murder," CBS, 21.6 or 18.1 million.
- Tie: "TV Bloopers and Practical Jokes," NBC, 21.6 or 18.1 million.

- "Webster," ABC, 20.5 or 17.1 million.
- Tie: "AfterMASH," CBS, 20.5 or 17.1 million.
- Tie: Movie: "The Four Seasons," 20.5 or 17.1 million.
- Movie: "The Amazons," ABC, 20.4 or 17.0 million.

Albee Speaks Of The 'Very Best'

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Edward Albee spoke in terms of the "very, very best" as he announced eight recipients of the 28th annual Brandeis University Creative Arts Awards.

"These are given for absolute excellence," said Albee. "Neither fashion nor artistic politics stands a chance against the goal of absolute value."

The recipients include playwright Sam Shepard, author William Maxwell, choreographer Jerome Robbins and sculptor John Chamberlain. They will receive medals for a lifetime of achievement.

Citations for talented younger or avant-garde artists will go to Paula Fox in fiction, the Mabou Mines company in theater arts, Joel Shapiro in sculpture, and the School of American Ballet in New York for dance.

As awards chairman Albee, 55, did not get to vote, but he said Tuesday that he tries to steer the Arts Commission at the university to "the very, very best."

The presentations will be made April 26 in New York.

House Demo Leaders Push Lebanon Pull-Out

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. and other top House Democratic leaders are lining up support within their own party for a resolution calling for the "prompt and orderly withdrawal" of U.S. forces from Lebanon.

The Democratic plan does not set a specific timetable for the pullout, but calls for a progress report from the president to Congress within 30 days on what steps he has taken to accomplish the withdrawal. Although the resolution would not carry the force of law, it represents a major departure from congressional sentiment last fall, when both the Democrat-run House and the Republican-led Senate voted to allow President Reagan to keep the Marines in Beirut through mid-April 1985.

O'Neill said the administration has not justified keeping Marines in Lebanon. "The policies of the administration are unexplained and the American people do not know why our Marines are there," he said late Tuesday after the resolution was drafted at a Democratic strategy session on Lebanon.

O'Neill was to present the withdrawal proposal today to a closed-door caucus of all 267 House Democrats. Party endorsement of general terms of the resolution was expected.

"We want to bring those boys home as quickly and as safely as we can," O'Neill said. He said Democratic leaders shied away from any formula setting specific dates for the withdrawal, such as the 60-day pullout being pushed by Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., preferring to leave that up to the administration.

But asked by reporters what "prompt and orderly withdrawal" meant, O'Neill responded: "prompt removal is immediate or right away."

House aides said the measure would be brought up within the next few days before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. The panel's chairman, Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., was a principal drafter of the 8-page resolution.

It will be brought before the full House, possibly as early as next week but more likely not until mid-February, House leadership aides said.

The resolution, in its present form, states that a prompt withdrawal of U.S. troops is a desire of Congress. Thus, it would also require Senate approval.

Democratic House leaders decided not to try to write the proposal as a law because that would require presidential assent, and would surely provoke a veto that probably could not be overridden, aides said.

The proposed resolution calls for "the prompt and orderly withdrawal of our Marines in the multinational force in Lebanon."

O'Neill, like many high-ranking House Democrats, supported the legislation last September allowing the Marines to stay in Lebanon for 18 months. But O'Neill now says he can no longer support such an extension.

An earlier draft of the Democratic resolution would have given Reagan 30 days to come up with a plan for the withdrawal.

The new, more strongly worded version directs him to begin the withdrawal right away, and then to report to Congress 30 days after the resolution is adopted on what he has done to accomplish the withdrawal.

If Reagan refuses to begin bringing the troops home, then he would have to report to Congress in 30 days on "why he hasn't accomplished it," O'Neill said.

O'Neill said he hoped to get some Republican support for the measure when the full House takes it up. But House Minority Whip Trent Lott, R-Miss., said he, for one, "would like no resolution."

"We'd like to see exactly what they're talking about. It's still a possibility we could support something, but it depends on what's in it," Lott said.

The resolution was endorsed late Tuesday by an 18-member group of House Democrats, led by Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., which has for several months served as O'Neill's advisory panel on Lebanon.

O'Neill noted that a majority of the panel had, like himself, originally supported the 18-month extension, but that members had changed their minds as a result of recent developments in Beirut, beginning with the terrorist bombing of the Marine compound in Beirut last October.

Meanwhile, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee sidestepped the Lebanon issue entirely on Tuesday. It was scheduled to take up a variety of withdrawal proposals, including a six-month pullout plan proposed by Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md.

However, it got bogged down on other issues and committee aides said the panel may take up the Lebanon issue next week.

Prison Stay For Flynt

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal judge has sentenced Larry Flynt to 15 months in prison for contempt of court after a six-hour, obscenity-laced hearing in which the paraplegic Hustler magazine publisher was gagged and handcuffed to his wheelchair.

Flynt, 43, crippled by a 1978 assassination attempt, was calm at first on Tuesday when U.S. District Judge Manuel Real ruled him in contempt for a Dec. 12 outburst before a federal magistrate.

At the court's invitation, Flynt spoke for about five minutes.

"I either want to be free or put me away forever," he said.

Real then sentenced him to six months in prison, and Flynt began yelling obscenities and screaming: "Give me more! Give me more!"

"That will be another six months," Real snapped.

The judge then tacked on 90 days for the additional contempt shown at Tuesday's marathon hearing, during which U.S. marshals wheeled Flynt in and out of the courtroom, on occasion muzzling him by placing their hands over his mouth.

"I'm crazier than hell," Flynt declared during his rambling, tearful appearance. "I want a competency hearing."

On Monday, another federal judge declared Flynt competent to stand trial on a charge of desecrating the U.S. flag. Flynt had spent two months undergoing psychiatric tests at a federal prison in Springfield, Mo.

Tuesday's hearing stemmed from an outburst before Magistrate James W. McMahon after Flynt was arrested for violating terms of his bond by flying to Alaska. He had been released on bond in connection with the John Z. De Lorean cocaine trafficking case after he refused to disclose the source of video and audio tapes involving the case.

Flynt's attorneys, whom he fired and rehired during Tuesday's hearing, called witnesses including well-known atheist Madelyn Murray O'Hair and members of Flynt's staff. The witnesses spoke of Flynt's physical disability and recent emotional turmoil.

LOCAL SCENE — This photo was taken by Charles Bissette from Bissette's Drug Store when it was located across Evans Street from its present location. The view is down Dickinson Avenue and the old State Bank Building is on the right. The military unit on parade suggests that it was the early days of World War II. Remember? A hint: the old type helmets being worn by the soldiers were phased out early in World War II.

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

No one knows how to bid free hands—experts are as much at sea as neophytes. This hand is from the recent Far Eastern Championships in Hong Kong.

When the Australians held the North-South cards, they quick time. After East passed, South chose that as his opening bid. With the queen of trumps dropping, 13 tricks are easy.

The bidding shown occurred when Australia sat East-West and Taiwan held the North-South cards. The Australians were using a weird bidding system—the Strong Pass. Part of the system requires an opening bid on all hands that are below opening bid strength in normal methods. That accounts for East's rather strange initial action.

South made a takeout double and North's doubt of one heart was for penalties, in case his partner also held hearts. South, however, jumped in diamonds to show a strong suit. After North introduced his clubs, South tried Blackwood, and here confusion set in.

We do not know what prompted South to bid five no trump—even if his partner showed a king, it would not have clarified the situation. For most people who use Blackwood, a bid of five no trump does more than ask for kings—it implies that the asker's side has all the aces.

Certainly North seemed to interpret the bid that way. He felt he had considerably more than he had shown in the bidding to this point, so he confidently bid a grand slam. Unfortunately, he chose to bid it in no trump.

After checking to make sure that it was his lead, South doubled with confidence. He did not make the mistake of underleading his aces of hearts.

Trio Used A Bazooka

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — Three high school seniors admitted they shot a man with a homemade bazooka while on the prowl for "hippies, longhairs, vagrants, commies and welfare recipients."

Lawyers for the 17-year-old youths relayed the admissions in a conference with Santa Cruz County Superior Court Judge Roland Hall, who scheduled a juvenile court sentencing hearing Feb. 10.

From a car, the three used a bazooka fashioned from plastic pipe and a homemade rocket tipped with an explosives-packed nose cone to shoot Kevin Caporaletti, 23, of Santa Clara, as he strolled near downtown Santa Cruz on Dec. 4.

The suspects told police they were trying to run "hippies, longhairs, vagrants, commies and welfare recipients" out of Santa Cruz, an oceanside resort town about 40 miles south of San Francisco.

Caporaletti suffered severe wounds in the back and arm, as well as burns. Doctors said he could have been killed if the projectile had entered his back just inches to one side.

Two of the boys who admitted to charges of assault in the bazooka attack and other charges stemming from mail box bombings facing maximum 4½-year terms in California Youth Authority institutions.

The third suspect, who fired the weapon, admitted those charges and another of inflicting great bodily injury. He could be jailed for 7½ years.

All three have been in custody in juvenile hall since their arrest Dec. 9.

Phoenix Fights Back At Influx Of Vagrants

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The air here is warm and dry. The sky is clear. The orange trees are heavy with fruit.

Such pleasures at midwinter have drawn about 3,000 homeless people from colder regions to downtown Phoenix, where vagrants last year set up a "tent city" bothered tourists and office workers and hurt the city's image.

This year, Phoenix is waiting. Advertisements on bus stop benches proclaim that "Downtown Is Fighting Back" and encourage workers to report to the police such crimes as panhandling, public drinking, littering — even lying on public property.

And the City Council, which wants to build a shelter for the homeless, has heard heated debate over whether the shelter should be a small facility or a six-block, $25 million "campus" with a cafeteria, health clinic, referral center, dormitory and low-cost hotel.

Council debate on the shelter continued past midnight one night last week with no decision on the first step — finding a site. It is on the agenda again at Wednesday's meeting.

The homeless issue in Arizona, which surfaced when thousands of transients showed up two winters ago, has become emotional. Some residents oppose building shelters for the homeless, arguing that such facilities only encourage out-of-state vagrants to travel here.

A Chamber of Commerce task force on downtown crime began a campaign this winter to keep the homeless off downtown streets. A pamphlet distributed among the 31,000 downtown workers shows a tattered man sleeping on the grass and asks: "Why are 31,000 people afraid of this man?"

The answer, according to the pamphlet: "Because his behavior is unpredictable."

"People who work downtown are confronted every single day by people who yell at them and throw things at them," said Sandy Cowen, owner of the downtown ad agency that developed the campaign. "But because the homeless look so tattered no one wants to call the cops."

"We really encourage unacceptable behavior by ignoring it," she added. "When you step over the drunks, you're not helping them and you're not helping yourself."

The city's new mayor, Terry Goddard, has made construction of a shelter his top priority.

"Every big city in the Sun Belt has a sizable population of people who have no shelter," Goddard said a few days after his inauguration in January. "The unique thing about Phoenix is that it has refused to deal with the problem."

But Goddard said he doubted the "campus" plan, proposed by the local St. Vincent de Paul Society, would be approved. "I don't see the city spending that much on the homeless after years of spending nothing," he said.

Goddard, the first Democratic mayor in this city in 35 years, favors a reception center and city shelter providing temporary homes and "only the most elemental necessities for people who are desperate," he said. "Bunkbeds in a warehouse and sanitation facilities do not a hotel make."

A recent study of the homeless population here indicated that about 20 percent were alcoholics, 20 percent were mentally ill, 15 percent were elderly or disabled and 5 percent were other types of social misfits. The remainder — 40 percent — were considered able to work. The study was conducted by an organization of municipalities in Maricopa County, which includes Phoenix.

The "tent city" of 1983 is now a vacant lot; a new fence assures that. Two temporary shelters were opened by private charity groups — the Salvation Army and St. Vincent de Paul — but the charities say they can't afford to keep them open much longer.

Dozens of transients sleep in Library Park, a few blocks west of the copper-domed Arizona capitol. The benches have been removed to discourage overnight guests, and tanned, bearded, disheveled men roam it like pigeons on an abandoned plaza.

A man in a plaid coat pushes a grocery cart full of possessions. A second man, shuffling on the heels of his shoes, carries a bedroll under his arm. The residents of Library Park sleep sitting up, their backs against decorative orange trees that produce a fruit too sour to eat.

"I don't believe we're doing something wrong, but sometimes the city does," said Bill Aguilar, 59, who has lived in the park since he quit his job in Colorado last winter.

Extra foot patrols have been stationed downtown this year to keep the homeless away from tourists and workers in the area.

"It gets to be a big game," said Ron Vasquez, a police officer on one of those patrols. "They see us. We see them. And they know their alternative is going to jail if they don't behave."

Rex Staton, unemployed and homeless, was here last winter and returned shortly after Christmas this winter. He follows the racing circuit as a mechanic and ends up in Phoenix when the season ends, he said.

"It's a lot better for us around here this year. It was a circus then," said the 26-year-old Staton, who grew up in Kokomo, Ind.

The homeless problem here has hurt the city's attempts to attract new businesses downtown.

The directors of Rostland Corp., visiting from Toronto on a sunny Saturday last winter, toured the plot of land where they planned to put up a 28-story downtown office building. In a park across the street, dozens of men in ratty clothes, smoking cigarettes down to the filter and carrying their belongings in plastic bags, trudged aimlessly back and forth.

The businessmen canceled the deal, forfeiting more than $100,000 they had already put down on the property, according to Vern Schweigert, chief operating officer of the company's Arizona subsidiary.

The homeless live, for the most part, in the shadow of downtown, within a few blocks of the Salvation Army headquarters, the St. Vincent dining room and the 7th Avenue Hotel, which advertises rooms at "Depression Rates — $3.50 and up."

But they are watched closely when they stray east, near the towering office buildings, luxury hotels and new civic center. Panhandling, drunkenness and yelling obscenities there will earn them a quick trip to jail.

"We put them in jail and they're let out, but at least they're away from the downtown area for a night," said Officer Tim Taylor, Vasquez's partner.

The city "spends a tremendous amount of police manpower moving transients from one part of town to another, just shuffling them along, giving them essentially police escorts," the mayor said.

Ernest Grote, 41, carrying a suitcase and his guitar, arrived here after Christmas from Stephenville, Texas, where he had sold used cars. He's one of the transients who came in search of work.

So far, he's been unsuccessful. He sleeps in Library Park.

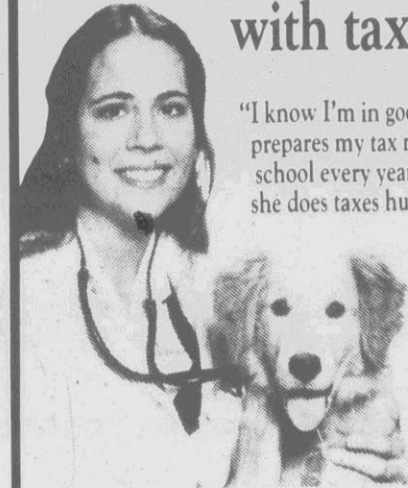

"If these people who have good jobs would just come out and hire one guy, there'd be a lot of work for everyone," Grote said.

Although he said he understood the city's effort to keep transients from sleeping on the benches and streets downtown, he wishes workers weren't so afraid of the homeless.

"I stopped to tie my shoe the other day and a woman got all excited," he said. "I guess she thought I was going to hurt her. "This life is a good lesson," he said.

"I take the same care with animals that Block takes with taxes."

"I know I'm in good hands when Block prepares my tax return. My preparer goes to school every year to get special training. And she does taxes hundreds of times. Training and experience — that's what makes you good at your job. I'll care for the animals and let Block take care of my taxes."

4 WAYS TO SAY "CHARGE IT"

Freedom Denied By Parole Bd.

NEW YORK (AP) — A three-member parole board has denied a bid for freedom by Winston Moseley, who stalked and stabbed Kitty Genovese 20 years ago as 38 witnesses did nothing, because of the seriousness of his offense, a spokesman said.

Moseley, 48, was sentenced to die 20 years ago for Miss Genovese's murder, which became a national symbol of public apathy, but his life was spared when New York's death penalty was thrown out and his sentence was commuted to life. He became eligible for parole this year.

Spokesman Paul Young said Moseley will not be eligible for parole again for two years, he said.

Congress Pressured For A Housing Package

By JIM LUTHER

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just a year ago, members of Congress were lining up by the dozens to demand repeal of tax withholding on interest and dividends. Now they have a new cause: extension of a federal housing-aid plan that has been branded inefficient and a huge tax loophole for the rich.

The mortgage subsidy is a classic example of a tax benefit that is enacted for a lofty purpose — in this case, promoting home ownership — and becomes so popular that it can't be ended, despite evidence it might not be working as intended.

The tax exemption for mortgage bonds expired Dec. 31. Last week, the first of the 1984 session, more than two dozen separate bills were introduced to revitalize the program. Since three-quarters of the members of the House and Senate endorsed the bonds last year, extension is a good bet, despite objections of the Treasury Department and the General Accounting Office. It would cost $2.2 billion over the next five years.

The House Ways and Means Committee approved a bill last year that would have extended the tax exemption for another five years. But the measure bogged down in the House after the committee insisted the extension be accompanied by new restrictions on another tax-exempt bond, known as private-purpose industrial development bonds.

Under the old law, state and local governments could issue mortgage revenue bonds that, because they were exempt from federal income tax, could be sold at lower interest rates and still attract upper-income investors. In turn, the money would be lent to first-time homebuyers at three to four percentage points below the going market rate for mortgages. On a $42,000, 30-year mortgage, that subsidy would cut a monthly house payment by about $80.

This subsidy comes at no cost to the local government or the homebuilder. The federal treasury foots the bill.

The General Accounting Office concluded last year that 74 percent of the benefits went to bond lawyers, investors and other middlemen, and that most of the remainder benefited middle-income families that probably could have gotten along without a subsidy.

The housing industry said the GAO report was flawed and ignored the benefits that homebuilding yields for the economy, and that many families would be unable to buy a home without the subsidy.

"In 1982 ... more than one-third of all first-time homebuyers in this country received financing through the use of mortgage revenue bonds," Rep. Bill Boner, D-Tenn., told colleagues last week in urging extension of the program.

"In addition to providing housing opportunities, this program creates jobs and generates a considerable amount of state, federal and local tax revenue," said Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark.

Because of those revenues, the program is a favorite of governors, mayors and county officials — a key reason the Reagan administration is having trouble blocking renewal of the subsidy.

But an even more important reason is that those same state and local officials are opposing major restrictions that the Treasury Department wants to impose on tax-exempt bonds industrial development bonds. Those restrictions are a part of the same bill that would renew the mortgage bonds.

Industrial bonds are issued by state and local governments and the proceeds used for two broad categories of projects. The government can use the money to build schools, roads and similar public projects or turn it over to a private developer to build a shopping center, fast-food restaurant or similar commercial enterprise. Profits from the new business would pay off the bonds.

It is the latter use that has raised concerns in Congress and the Treasury Department. So many private-purpose bonds are being issued, authorities say, that interest rates for public-use bonds are being driven up, meaning cities and counties will have to pay more to build schools and roads.

Last year, a record $77.3 billion worth of tax-exempt bonds — including mortgage and industrial bonds — was sold, and 52 percent of that total was for private purposes. That cost the federal treasury $8.5 billion.

The bill written last year by the Ways and Means Committee would renew mortgage bonds for five years and pay for the extension by restricting private-use industrial bonds. Local officials, developers, the bond industry, retailers and others standing to benefit from the industrial bonds put such pressure on the House that the entire package was put aside for the year.

But now it's back, and it's a good bet that whatever tax bill Congress considers this year will include some kind of changes in the bond programs.

Check-Use Is Growing

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans wrote more than 40 billion checks during 1983 — approximately 100 million checks each day, according to industry figures.

The check is used in over 90 percent of all financial transactions in the United States, statistics show, making the bank check the mainstay of the country's funds transfer system.

"More than 130 million Americans have checking accounts," says Lee A. Ault, chief executive officer of Telecredit Inc., which provides check and credit card authorization and other services to subscribers throughout the United States. The 40 billion checks written on those accounts last year were responsible for the transfer of more than a trillion dollars, he adds.

Check use in this country is growing at the rate of about 6 percent a year, according to Ault.

"The check is an ingrained habit," Ault points out. "While the introduction of in-home banking, debit cards and electronic shopping will eventually slow the growth of check usage, it will continue to expand at a fairly steady rate throughout this decade."

Ault predicts that by 1990 Americans will be writing more than 60 billion checks a year.

A major reason for this growth is that allowing paying by check has become a commonplace customer service, he says.

Burning Toxic Wastes In Gulf Ignites Critics

By SYDNEY RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A plan to burn 330,000 tons of toxic chemicals at sea worries many residents of coastal regions along the Gulf of Mexico who fear pollution of the gulf may damage their way of life.

"It (the gulf) means everything to us," said Sue Ann Fruge, who organized the Gulf Coast Coalition for Public Health to fight the plan. "It's the place where many people earn their livings. It's where we play. And along with Mexico, it defines who we are."

Mrs. Fruge and her neighbors became concerned when the Environmental Protection Agency announced it would allow an Illinois company to burn 330,000 tons of toxic chemicals 200 miles from shore.

The concern turned to anger. A public hearing last November drew more than 6,100 citizens, the largest such meeting on an environmental issue in a decade, according to the EPA.

Jack Ravan, the EPA assistant administrator for water, will make a decision on the permit this spring. He says the level of public opposition to offshore incineration will be taken into account in making the decision.

"We may have to stop what we're doing and re-examine the entire direction we've been taking," Ravan said. "It may be time for us to ask ourselves again, 'What is our policy with regard to the ocean?'"

The Gulf of Mexico site was designated in 1976 by the EPA which licensed Chemical Waste Management Inc. of Oakbrook, Ill., to conduct two at-sea test burns of liquid organic chemicals, including PCBs, polychlorinated biphenyls. PCB was once used as an electrical coolant until its manufacture was banned in 1977.

Since 1976, the EPA has proposed two other ocean incineration projects, one in the Atlantic Ocean off the Delaware-New Jersey coast and another at an unspecified location in the Pacific.

"One of the reasons the agency saw at-sea incineration as a viable alternative was the belief that public opposition would be less than opposition to land-based disposal," said Steve Schatzow, director of the EPA's office of water regulations and standards.

The agency was surprised by the level of "grassroots opposition" to the plan.

Opponents make up a broad cross-section of interests, including commercial and sport fishermen, farmworkers, tourist industry groups, environmentalists, doctors and even the states of Alabama and Texas.

Chemical Waste Management says it has tried to reassure coastal residents that the incineration process is safe.

"We realize that people are concerned about ocean incineration, but this project has been the most thoroughly tested and monitored burn in the world. And, we have 11 years experience in this field," says Bob Reincke, a company spokesman.

More than 88 billion pounds of toxic waste are generated annually by U.S. industries, from giant corporations to the corner dry cleaner. The EPA estimates that 90 percent of these wastes have been dumped improperly.

The EPA proposal calls for liquid organic chemicals to be hauled by truck to Mobile, Ala., pumped into an incinerator ship, Vulcanus II, and then transported into the gulf for burning. The chemicals are destroyed by high temperatures.

Two controversial test burns were conducted by the company in 1981 and 1982, at a cost to taxpayers of $300,000, before the permanent permit was tentatively granted.

Even more controversial has been the relationship between Chemical Waste Management and the EPA which came to light during the shakeup at the agency last year.

In 15 years, Chemical Waste Management grew from a small garbage collection service into the world's largest waste disposal corporation, reporting revenues of nearly $1 billion.

In 1981, while the incineration permit was pending before the EPA, Chemical Waste Management subsidiaries were charged with violating toxic waste regulations in at least seven states and faced a number of lawsuits alleging anti-competitive practices.

Several suits from among those filed are still pending, company officials say.

Last February, Rio Grande Valley residents learned that James Sanderson, chief policy adviser to former EPA director Anne Gorsuch on the ocean incineration project, was also a paid representative of Chemical Waste Management.

Local opponents then hired their own experts to evaluate the test burn report. They say what they learned scared them.

The EPA's report, prepared by a consulting company under contract to Chemical Waste Management, did not deal with a "worst case scenario" of how the Gulf of Mexico would be affected by a major spill or the sinking of the incinerator ship, the opponents say.

Nor did the report provide a complete picture of what chemicals were being released through the smoke stacks. And the test results detailed in the report could not be evaluated, since the EPA has not set standards for ocean incineration.

Opponents of the project also believe the test burns were not adequately monitored and will not be monitored closely enough in the future.

"This is typical of EPA's philosophy of disposing of toxic wastes in such a fashion that you don't really know what's going on," says Lloyd Bletsch of the Audubon Society.

"The middle of Gulf of Mexico is not exactly the kind of place where citizens can help monitor the disposal of toxic wastes," he said.

Change By Computers

NEW YORK (AP) — "The traditional role of the secretary as one who types and gets coffee is being challenged every day by the potential of the automated office," says a Yale University sociologist.

"Secretaries are looking to increase communication with their bosses and enhance their positions because of their new-found know-how," adds Dr. Rosabeth Moss Kanter.

"Bosses, however, are reluctant to perceive automation as an upward step for their office workers, and some bosses prefer that secretaries simply follow directions and work priorities that they set," notes Ms. Kanter in reporting on a Honeywell survey of managers and secretaries.

That is the essence of the "coming office coffee clash — a possible mismatch between the desires and abilities of secretaries and the preferences and perspectives of managers," according to Ms. Kanter, author of "The Change Masters: Innovation Through Productivity in the American Corporation."

"Secretaries want to change their role — to become part of the team — and take on more challenging and responsible assignments," she says. "Managers want to maintain current roles and, in some cases, even increase the distance by using automation to eliminate rather than increase communication with office workers."

Many managers don't know how to make the secretary's role more inclusive, she points out. They don't give secretaries more opportunity to be part of the team because they have never been part of the team themselves.

"They don't give office workers more information about the importance of their work in a whole project because many of them do not get similar information from their bosses," she explains. "This unfortunate picture is still true of too many American companies."

"However, technology may be changing the way we think, because new technology often changes social relations," she adds. "Despite limitations posed by traditional organizations, technology may itself increase communication between bosses and secretaries because office automation will not work without it."

Columbia Sponsors Japan Study Tour

NEW YORK (AP) — A two-week study tour focusing on places important in the cultural, intellectual and social history of Japan will be sponsored this spring by Columbia University's Division of Special Programs and the Department of East Asian Languages and Cultures.

Dr. H. Paul Varley, professor of Japanese history at Columbia and author of "Japanese Culture" and "The Samurai," will lead the tour, which begins May 17 and ends June 2.

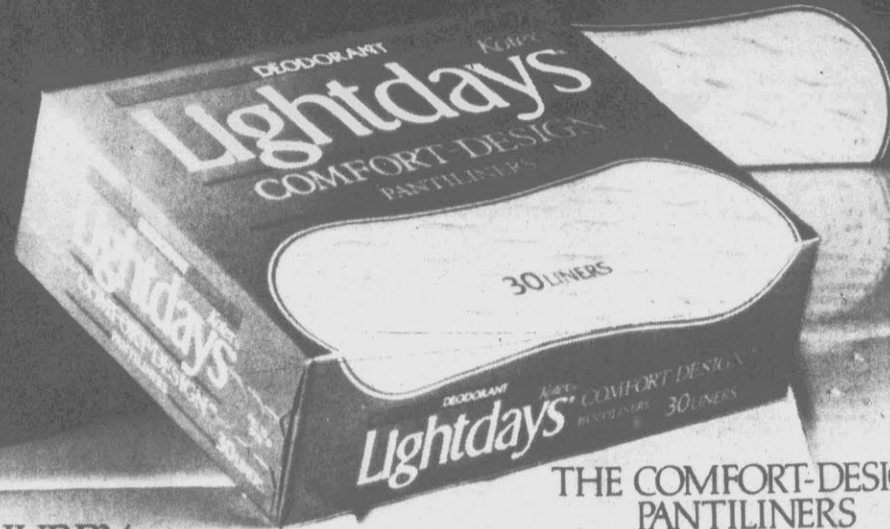

The tour will include ancient Nara, the imperial capital of Japan during the eighth century; Kyoto, seat of the Japanese imperial court from 794 until 1868; the Oyamazumi Shrine, Tokyo, Kyushu Island, Hiroshima and Nagasaki, among other places.

Craft Talent Evolved Into Pattern Business

By JEFF BARNARD

Associated Press Writer
TOLEDO, Ore. (AP) — A Toledo grandmother has turned a talent for making people say, "Awww, isn't that cute," into a line of patterns for baby quilts, fabric dolls and Christmas decorations that have sold over 4 million copies.

"Many people can craft as well or better than I can, but they lack a design. That was a need I could fill," said Gwen Andrews, who started The Gingham Goose on her kitchen table in 1976.

That's when she decided to quit her job as credit manager for the Sears department store in neighboring Newport.

The business now employs 16 people, mostly local women in this town of 3,200 in the coastal foothills, who stuff the patterns and instructions into plastic bags at their homes for distribution. The most popular shows a little girl wearing an oversized sunbonnet.

Following her decision to give up a regular paycheck to become an entrepreneur, Mrs. Andrews determined to put her flair for creative sewing to work. She turned the carport in her home into a shop, selling goods she, her mother, mother-in-law and daughter turned out.

As each of her four grandchildren was born, Mrs. Andrews made a baby quilt, which went on display in the shop.

So many people asked to buy patterns for the quilts that Mrs. Andrews decided it was time to expand. That was 1979.

Using jar lids and platters to trace the designs and working at her kitchen table, she turned out eight patterns — four quilts, three dolls and a Christmas wall-hanging set.

With an initial investment of $10,000, she and her husband, Vern, had 1,000 copies of each pattern printed, packed them into their camper and went to a quilt show in the central Oregon town of Sisters.

"I sold so many I lost my voice," Mrs. Andrews said of the original 360 patterns sold.

The Andrews took the patterns to a quilt show in Portland, where Stan Gray of E.E. Schenck saw them and offered to distribute them.

"They were unique and very well presented — very professionally done," Gray said.

Through Gray, the Andrews landed a contract with VIP, a division of Cranston Print Works in New York.

Until recently, VIP distributed Gingham Goose patterns through the United States and to such far-flung spots as Saudi Arabia, Japan, Australia and Great Britain, where they are bought mostly by Americans living abroad, Mrs. Andrews said.

E.E. Schenck has now taken over all distribution, keeping the entire operation based in Oregon.

"I guess the thing that made the patterns work was the way it makes you feel good," Mrs. Andrews said. "Something makes people say, 'Awww, isn't that cute,' when they look at it."

The first quilt, "Amy Sue Sunbonnet Girl," is still the best seller of the 54 patterns The Gingham Goose offers. The whimsical profile of a bloomed little girl reaching for a bird with heart-shaped wings has sold 200,000 patterns and is going strong, earning a place of honor on the wall over Mrs. Andrews' sewing machine.

The business quickly outgrew the kitchen and carport, so Andrews built a barn to house the pattern operation. As the shop and pattern business grew even more, they took over the whole house, so the Andrews built a new one higher up the hill.

Andrews quit his job as a boiler fireman at the Georgia-Pacific mill to become vice president of The Gingham Goose.

Among his duties is overseeing the packaging done by local women working in their homes.

"They'll go into a shop and if our patterns aren't on the right hook, they'll straighten them out," he said. "We've talked to other people in Portland and Sacramento (Calif.) who say they can't keep people, but we have the same people we started with."

In return, the Andrews have steadfastly refused suggestions they move the operation to Portland, to be closer to the distribution center.

"It's small-town people that have made this happen," Andrews said.

Shock Has Persisted

RUTHTON, Minn. (AP) — One suspect is buried in an unmarked Texas grave, another is living with his lawyer. The bank has a new boss. The farmhouse is still vacant. And the mayor says Ruthton is still in shock more than 100 days after two bankers were killed in an ambush.

"I don't think things will calm down for a while," said LeRoy Burch, a bait salesman and mayor of the southwestern Minnesota town of 332 people. "It's hard for a small community like ours to accept when two prominent businessmen get snuffed out by a lunatic who's gone off the deep end."

On the drizzly morning of Sept. 29, after drinking coffee at Alene's Restaurant, Buffalo Ridge State Bank President Rudy Blythe, 42, and loan officer Deems "Toby" Thulin, 37, drove to a vacant farm a few miles north of Ruthton to meet a potential buyer.

Waiting behind the house with a 1-gauge shotgun and a .30-30 rifle, authorities say, were Steven Jenkins, 18, and his father, James, who had lived on the 10-acre farm until Blythe foreclosed on a loan four years earlier.

A bullet punctured Thulin's throat. He died instantly. Blythe was nicked in the shoulder, possibly by the same shot, then chased into a ditch along Lincoln County Road 7 and shot three more times.

After vanishing in thick fog and eluding police for four days, Steven Jenkins turned himself in to authorities in Paducah, Texas. His dad put the shotgun in his ear, Texas officials said, and blasted off the left side of his head.

A purported suicide note found Jan. 6 at the scene of Jenkins' death said "I killed Rudy Blythe." Cottle County, Texas, Sheriff Frank Taylor contended the note was planted, but a handwriting analyst hired by Steven Jenkins' lawyer said there was "nothing to indicate a forgery."

Alene Lindahl, who runs the only restaurant on Main Street, said she didn't think the case would blow over until the end of Steven Jenkins' murder trial, set to begin March 20. "I'd be lying to you if I said people don't talk about it anymore," she said. "What else is there to do? There's only 300 people in this town."

Lois Trout owns the Polar Bar across the two-block-long Main Street in this 95-year-old town, named after a railroad baron's daughter.

"Anyplace you go you've got kooks," she said. "It's just in small town USA you'd never suspect it. It's just a shame to waste two lives over nothing."

Finds Best Revenge In His Humor

By GENE SCHROEDER
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — According to an old Spanish proverb, living well is the best revenge.
But Robert Vare, director of the New School for Social Research's New York Comedy School, disagrees. He says "writing humor is the best revenge."

As Vare explained in an interview: "The conventional wisdom is that humor is a low art form, because it seems to have a minor ambition — which is nothing more than to make people laugh. I think the best humor operates on much deeper currents than is generally acknowledged. Humor just wouldn't work if there weren't a serious idea behind the joking."

"I think that because a humorist works so hard to disguise his serious intention, people often don't understand how serious humor basically is, or how powerful it can be."

As for revenge, Vare says, "if you have some things that get you irritated out in the world, it's the best way to feel vindicated about them."

Vare, who teaches a humor writing workshop, often asks his students if they can think of a more powerful statement about the nuclear bomb than the movie, "Dr. Strangelove," which he describes as a scathing satire and a far more powerful statement than a thousand editorials about nuclear warfare.

In the same vein, Vare believes newspaper cartoonists and comedians such as television's Johnny Carson "had a lot to do with ending the Vietnam War."

"Humor is an underrated form, and parody is an underrated form," he says. "There is so much you can do with it, and when well executed it can really make a serious, scathing point."

Vare was one of two principal editors of a best-selling parody publication, "Off The Wall Street Journal," and last year founded a humor publishing company incorporated under the name of American Parody and Travesty (AP&T).

The firm's first publication was a parody of Playboy magazine called "Playbore," which Vare says sold between 650,000 and 750,000 copies during the first two weeks it was on the newsstands.

"In choosing Playboy as our target," Vare says, "we are satirizing our sexual times. You know, these are pretty grim times, sexually speaking."

"We take sex so seriously with our endless medical reports on new diseases, such as herpes and AIDS...and our endless obsession with sex surveys, with statistics about our sex lives and with advice about our sexual problems."

"It's time we took sex a little more lightly and stop trying to analyze it. It's time we started getting a laugh out of sex again."

Agency Referred Fewer Civil Suits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Environmental Protection Agency regional offices are referring fewer civil suits involving pollution violations to Washington since William Ruckelshaus became EPA administrator, much to the disappointment of a House committee chairman.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., says that EPA's 10 regional offices referred only 19 civil enforcement cases to Washington headquarters from Oct. 1 to Dec. 31, "distressingly fewer than" the 22 cases referred during the same period in 1982, "when the agency was in turmoil and the enforcement efforts were most unsatisfactory."

The drop was particularly noticeable in hazardous waste cases, Dingell said. There were no cases referred for action under the $1.6 billion "superfund" toxic dump cleanup program, he said, and only one case under the federal toxic waste disposal law.

Report 1982 Saw Divorces Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Center for Health Statistics says fewer American couples divorced in 1982 than in 1981, marking the first yearly decline in 20 years.

Some 1.18 million couples ended their marriages in 1982, a drop from the 1.21 million divorces in 1981 and 1.19 million in 1980, the center reports. These figures compare with 845,000 divorces in 1972 and 413,000 in 1962.

The divorce rate was 5.3 per 1,000 population in 1981, equating a record high set in 1979. Preliminary data showed the rate fell to 5.1 per 1,000 in 1982.

Juan Now Back At Old Stand

By KATHY HORAK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A year ago he was in protective custody on orders from juvenile authorities concerned over his gypsy life at Los Angeles International Airport. Today friends say he seems happy, healthy and glad to be back there.

Juan, the young mute whose residency at the nation's third-busiest airport captured national attention, "has become an unofficial member of the cast here," says Lt. John Zorn of the city Police Department's airport detail.

"He's found a niche somewhere," Zorn said in an interview.

"I'd say he probably knows hundreds of people here — not on a first-name basis because he can't speak — but he still has a kind of unofficial guardian who provides a home for him from time to time, and I wouldn't be surprised if other people take him in occasionally."

Juan's informal guardian is Mellie Thompson, an airport janitor who discovered him sleeping under a bench about three years ago. She brought him clothes, food and toiletries and when his situation became the subject of media reports and official concern, offered to adopt him.

Juvenile authorities took him into protective custody in December 1982 until a judge turned him over to Mrs. Thompson's temporary custody.

No one's ever pinned down where he came from, but a card found in his pocket bearing the name Juan Tovar Bohlete led authorities to conjecture he's Colombian. Although he communicates only through gestures, he understands Spanish and made sense of his court proceedings through an interpreter.

Mrs. Thompson was prepared to move him permanently into her home, but bone scan tests put his age at 19 — too old for formal adoption. Juvenile Court Judge Randolph Moore Jr. dismissed his case last February.

He headed right back to the airport and his former "job" — bringing luggage carts to stands that automatically dispense a quarter for each return.

Although she's on disability leave from her airport job, Mrs. Thompson still sees her young protege and maintains a room for him at her house.

"He's doing fine," she said after their last visit over dinner at the airport. She told Juan she was en route to Houston for Christmas with her family.

About a week later, Juan turned up at Houston's airport.

"I just don't understand how he got to Houston, but my brother saw him there at the airport," Mrs. Thompson said.

Three days later, the interpreter at his custody hearing told her he saw Juan back at Los Angeles' airport, displaying the bus ticket that got him back.

"I think he's smarter than anyone thinks," Mrs. Thompson laughed.

A few weeks before Christmas, she got a call from police in Phoenix who contacted her after Juan showed them photos and her telephone number.

She doesn't know how he got there either, but when police complied with her request to see if a local shelter would put him up, they discovered he'd already spent several nights at the one she'd suggested.

Lt. Zorn said police used to get complaints that Juan was sleeping in public areas or getting himself into restricted areas, "but we haven't had a call of a problem-solving nature in more than six months."

"A year ago he was a problem," Zorn added, "but I think he's pretty much learned what's accepted and what isn't."

Suspect Pesticide Residue Is DDT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency believes evidence of the banned chemical DDT, recently found in four western states, can be traced to the use of the pesticide dicofol.

EPA spokesman Al Heier says the agency is studying the effects of dicofol, which has been in wide use for only a few years.

"The manufacturers are going to have to get the residue of DDT out, or reduce it to very, very low levels to keep their product on the market," Heier said. DDT is a byproduct in the manufacture of dicofol.

DDT, which stands for dichloro-diphenyl-trichloroethane, was banned in the United States in 1972, after it was found that the pesticide was threatening the survival of birds and ultimately, the health of humans.

A 1983 federal study, which is still in draft form, detected increased levels of DDT in Arizona, California, New Mexico and Texas, but offered no conclusions about the source of contamination.

General Motors Sees Diesel Problem Grow

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alan Foss was sold on the advantages of a diesel when he paid nearly $20,000 for a new Cadillac Seville three years ago.

He was willing to spend extra for an engine that would free him from long gasoline lines. Now Foss says "it's been a disaster."

The car has been in for repairs more than 70 times in three years, beginning only 20 miles out of the showroom. Even worse, now that GM has provided a new engine and the car seems to be running well, nobody wants to buy it.

"I've taken my car into the dealer I bought it from. The salesman looked at me very pleasantly, put his arm around my back and said, 'Look Al, why don't you take it somewhere else and sell it. We really don't want it here,'" recalls Foss, a Chicago-area general contractor.

More than a million people bought General Motors diesel cars between 1977 and 1981, expecting a hedge on skyrocketing gas prices and durability. Instead, thousands of them complain about one headache after another. Some have gone through two and three engines.

Problems hit the cars almost as soon as they hit the highways — fuel injection systems failed, head gaskets blew, crankshafts broke and engine blocks cracked. According to one survey in 1979 of owners of early model diesels, three out of four cars encountered engine trouble.

Peter Lopes of New York says his Oldsmobile diesel was towed so often that his insurance company — which picked up the cost — canceled his policy. "They said, you're not maintaining your car," Lopes recalled.

The 1979 Cadillac Seville diesel owned by Peter and Diane Halferty of Seattle has gone through three engines — the first failure coming after only 3,000 miles. Halferty estimates he has spent more than $18,000 to keep the $20,000 car on the road.

After the third engine, he put an ad in the Seattle newspapers — "Has your GM diesel auto engine failed? Ours has, let's take action." — and gave his phone number. There were more than 200 calls, and "Consumers Against General Motors" was born.

Today, said Mrs. Halferty, she has been in touch with an estimated 25,000 people from across the country who are having problems with GM diesels. The group still has a lawsuit pending against GM, and other suits abound.

Around the country other groups have sprung up, taking such names as "Lemon on Wheels" (New York), "General Motors Diesel Users Demanding Satisfaction — GM-DUDS" (Chicago) and "Disgruntled Diesel Owners Group — D-DOG" (Virginia).

Although the automaker declines to discuss settlements, leaders of various owner groups say GM has replaced engines, done other work beyond the warranty period and, in some cases, agreed to cash settlements, although the compensation varies widely.

Auto industry trade publications have estimated that GM already has paid more than $4 million in compensation stemming from the diesel problem. Halferty estimates the figure to be much higher, but GM would not confirm any figures.

But GM does not deny trouble with many of the V-8 diesel engines built by Oldsmobile but also found in 1978 through 1981 Cadillacs, Chevrolets, Pontiacs, Buicks and small GMC trucks.

"We'd be less than candid if we said we haven't had some complaints ... from owners of the earlier (diesel) models," acknowledged Dave Hudgens, a GM spokesman in Detroit.

But GM's critics have accused the automaker of haphazardly rushing the cars into production to take advantage of the strong demand at the time for diesels and to meet fleet-wide government fuel economy requirements.

"These cars never should have been sold," declares Clarence Ditlow, director of the consumer-group Center for Auto Safety, which charges that the failures stem from GM converting a V-8 gasoline engine into a diesel instead of designing a diesel from ground up.

Key parts of the system such as the crankshaft, fuel injection pumps, and filtration mechanism couldn't stand up to the increased strength requirements and higher operating temperatures of the diesel, the critics argue.

"The engine went through the normal engine development process," said GM spokesman Hudgens. "On a new product sometimes when it's the first one ... sometimes things go wrong. We do continually improve our products ... trying to make them better."

Although many of the car owners have received or appear to be close to winning settlements that compensate them for past repairs and even cost of rental cars, GM so far has balked at demands being made that it also reimburse for loss in the cars' resale value.

Scholarship Offer Is 156 Years Old

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — Maura Nolan will get free tuition when she attends Dartmouth College next fall, thanks to a 156-year-old offer the Ivy League school made to residents of her hometown of Wheelock, Vt.

Ms. Nolan, 16, was admitted to the college as an early-decision student. She is the first female and only the seventh resident of the northern Vermont town of 400 to take advantage of Dartmouth's offer, which will be worth more than $40,000 in tuition fees over four years.

The arrangement stems from rentals Dartmouth collected from school-owned acreage that eventually became the town of Wheelock. During a visit to the town to collect the rents in 1828, Dartmouth's sixth president, the Rev. Dr. Nathan Lord, reportedly declared, "Whenever any Wheelock boys are ready for college, send them along and there will be free tuition."

Originally an all-male institution, Dartmouth began admitting women as candidates for the A.B. degree in 1972.

Solar Oasis Is Aimed At More Food

By BARBARA ABEL
The Tucson Citizen
TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Some day, lettuce, beans, fish or flowers may grow and thrive in downtown Minneapolis in mid-winter, thanks to an experiment in Tucson.

The experiment, tentatively called "Solar Oasis," is an effort of the University of Arizona Environmental Research Laboratory — folks on the cutting edge of solar energy applications, seawater food production and space gardens.

The oasis, located on the laboratory's site behind Tucson International Airport, "is a prototype of what could be downtown," says its director, Carl N. Hodges. "Here we've integrated many of our efforts — solar heating, controlled-environment agriculture, aquaculture — and put them into a system that could be used in communities in the future."

The Solar Oasis combines what Hodges and his colleagues learned from their contributions to the Land Pavilion at Walt Disney World's EPCOT (for Experimental Prototype Community of Tomorrow) Center in Orlando, Fla. The UA group was the primary scientific consultant for the pavilion, which demonstrates how researchers are increasing plant production.

"From Disney, we learned that you could combine entertainment with education," Hodges said. "Part of our mission is letting the public know what we're doing and helping them learn to do it themselves."

Hodges foresees other oases being built — in schools, civic centers, commercial areas, "lots of ways."

The solar oasis in Tucson is not quite finished. It is awaiting a special insulating canopy to shield the plants and fish from cold at night. The canopy is two layers of polyethylene through which insulating foams are injected at night, creating a greenhouse effect.

The material has been used as a greenhouse roof in other demonstration projects at the lab, and scientists here have found that it reduces night heat loss by as much as 5 percent.

To make sure the environment stays agreeable, the oasis also has a fogging system that keeps the temperature under the canopy low in summer. In winter, it protects plants from freezing.

In a small pond are catfish, soon to be replaced by tilapia, a fish that keeps its water clean by eating algae and whose wastes make excellent fertilizer.

Bordering the pond is a row of Boston-type lettuce, and elsewhere under the canopy are regular cabbage, Chinese cabbage, kale, turnips, lettuce, onions, radishes, carrots, beets and herbs — all plants that withstand low night temperatures well.

But Hodges and Merle Jensen, the lab's chief research horticulturist, are not growing their garden for nothing. Soon, they believe, similar gardens could be grown inside public places.

"Rather than just planting ficus, you could grow vegetables or other food crops in ornate and beautiful ways," Jensen said. "We learned that from EPCOT."

In addition to their beauty, the gardens can teach the public how to grow vegetables at home — indoors or out — depending on the climate.

That's important, Jensen said, noting that public demand for vegetables has grown dramatically in recent years.

The per-capita consumption of lettuce has soared from 12 or 14 pounds 10 years ago to approximately 27 pounds today, he said. And seed companies are reporting huge increases in sales in recent years.

Hodges and Jensen and their staff also are working with the UA College of Architecture to develop a folding material that could enclose the sides of their oasis and be rolled away when the temperature rises.

Threatening Note For Commandant

WASHINGTON (AP) — A three-foot-long pipe containing a note apparently threatening the life of Marine Corps Commandant Paul X. Kelley was discovered over the weekend near his home at the Marine barracks, the Pentagon says.

The note said, "This is your life Gen. Kelley. Here is your ability to stay alive." Pentagon spokesman Jay Farrar said. He said the note was found Saturday morning near a historical marker near the commandant's house.

Farrar said the discovery had led to the posting of additional Marine guards near Kelley's quarters, about eight blocks southeast of the Capitol.

District police and the FBI had no immediate comment on the discovery, and it was not clear whether the note was a serious threat or a hoax.

MR. BUDGET — Cary Pete Modlin, who some call "Mr. Budget", is the assistant director for budget review for the Office of Management and Budget. (AP Laserphoto)

'Mr. Budget' Is King Of Budgetary Figures

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — At this time of the year in Washington, Pete Modlin is king of the numbers.

He's a bureaucrat who pushes and prods politicians, insisting that they make up their minds, settle their differences, and figure out how much money they want from Congress in the next fiscal year.

He doesn't care what the numbers are, he just needs numbers.

His job is to take federal agency funding requests and do the technical work necessary to fashion the president's new budget, a $900-billion-plus spending proposal.

The 62-year-old Modlin is assistant director for budget review of the federal Office of Management and Budget, a job that pays $67,800 a year. Informally, he's known as Mr. Budget, but his boss, OMB director David Stockman, is the name most associated with the budget.

Modlin says his job — generally 12 hours a day, Monday through Friday, and a few more hours on weekends — is being "production manager" for the budget process.

He makes no policy decisions on whether more money or less should go to the Pentagon or to the food stamp program. Those questions are left to the president and his political appointees.

"The budget is the single, most comprehensive decision-making event in the federal government. Nothing else is like it," he says.

He said the budget has taken on more importance in the Reagan administration "because it has been used to change the trend of government, and it is a device for doing that. If one changes the resources going into activities, one can change their trend."

Modlin, who's been the assistant director since 1981, joined the government in 1951 after college — he's got degrees in accounting and economics — and has spent all but a few years, when he worked for the president's Council of Economic Advisers, at the budget office. He's only the fifth person to hold the top numbers job since 1939.

"Pete's role is absolutely indispensable," says budget office spokesman Edwin L. Dale Jr. "Pete is the man in charge of the numbers."

The results of Modlin's work will show up most noticeably on Wednesday when President Reagan submits to Congress his budget outline for the 1985 fiscal year, which starts on Oct. 1.

Five thick documents come out at about the same time to detail, explain and analyze the president's decisions.

The work on the 1985 documents started early in 1983 when the budget-makers sat down and made tentative plans.

In the summer, the president set out rough spending ceilings for each department and agency as guidance on what he wanted to see when they sent in their money requests in September.

Few agency wish-lists remained within those ranges so the budget-makers spent part of the fall trying to fit the numbers within the president's guidelines.

Out of that work came Stockman's recommendations for each agency's budget in 1985.

Many of the agencies didn't like what they saw so they appealed the decisions. In this administration, there are three levels of appeal — to the budget office, to Stockman and key presidential aides Edwin Meese and James Baker, and finally to the president himself.

Most of the 1985 budget decisions were made by Christmas but some key ones — like whether a tax package would be included to help pare the deficits — were put off until the last few weeks.

Those decisions can be delayed only so long because the administration is required to get the budget to Congress 15 days after it reconvenes.

Modlin finds it difficult sometimes to get officials "to take it seriously when one says we've got to have that decision today."

"Getting the data base settled ... really is the important thing," he says, referring to the base from which the final tally for spending requests is built. "Until we get that settled, we think we know how things are coming out, but we are always surprised."

It's a never-ending fight. "Before the ink is dried on these (budget) documents, something will have changed," he says.

There can be last-minute changes. Once, he recalls, President Lyndon Johnson wanted a late alteration. It meant someone had to go through the already printed documents, slice out pages and paste in new ones.

Modlin's work doesn't end once the documents are sent to Congress.

The budget office tracks the spending plan as it goes through congressional committees, analyzing actions taken there and responding to requests for more information.

On occasion, Modlin has gone up to Capitol Hill to try to clear up confusion about budget figures.

He doesn't, though, offer advice on how much Congress should spend on various programs. That's up to the 535 senators and representatives.

"It is extremely difficult to reconcile all these competing claims," he says. "Each (member of Congress) can tell you how to solve this problem. The trouble is it takes a consensus of both houses."

Doesn't he find that frustrating? "I worry about things I can control," he replies.

Better Roads, More Detours

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's roads and highways may be a lot less bumpy for car drivers this year, but they'll find their routes much more filled with twists and turns, reports an agency that monitors the condition of U.S. roads.

Despite the best of planning and use of the latest road maps, many drivers will find their travel routes altered by arrows and signs reading "detour," warns Donald S. Knight, executive director of TRIP, a non-profit highway research and information agency.

The detour signs already are being posted with increasing frequency because many states have finally begun allocating additional funds to long-postponed road repair and maintenance projects, Knight says.

In addition to the detours, Knight says, motorists also face bridge closings and lane restrictions as construction activity temporarily turns four-lane highways into two-lane roads.

TRIP attributes this stepped-up construction activity to recent federal and state increases in the amount of funds being allocated for road and bridge maintenance. Last April 1, the federal government began levying an additional 5-cent gasoline tax. The states, in turn, must provide their own local matching funds to be eligible to receive the federal dollars. As a result since Jan. 1, more than half of the states have raised their own state gas taxes.

"However, we need to realize that this is just the beginning," Knight says. "Right now, better than 68 percent of the nation's paved roads are in need of either resurfacing or reconstruction. In addition, more than 44 percent of the nation's bridges are classified as either 'structurally deficient' or 'functionally obsolete'."

"This backlog alone already carries a price tag of more than $320 billion," he notes. "And that does not consider the additional miles of roads and even more bridges that are continuing to fall into disrepair. These deteriorating facilities are being added to the list of deficiencies even as we try to work on reducing the existing list that we have already compiled."

Knight adds, "It is becoming ever more painfully obvious that we must finally come to grips with this continually increasing road and bridge deterioration before the problem becomes too enormous to handle."

"The end result is that motorists may often find the road over the river and through the woods may also mean over a detour and through some slower, reduced-lane roadways. Convenience will temporarily give way to road crews and pavement trucks working to improve the safety and efficiency of the nation's road network for all of us."

Variations In Computer Play

NEW YORK (AP) — Boys and girls as young as 3 play with computers in different ways, and expect different results from computer activities, according to researchers at the Children's Television Workshop, producers of Sesame Street.

During the testing of the company's new computer software, researchers found that boys like to play at the computer by themselves, while girls are more apt to play with a friend, take turns at the game, and then discuss the outcome. The boys, for instance, tend to be more interested in games where they can conquer, zap or chase something or someone.

Sexism at the computer? Not at all, says Leona Schauble, director of educational development for the CTW Software Group. Some of the difference may be due to the attitudes of parents and teachers.

"But it does mean that those of us who create games for children must be aware," she says. "If we want to present girls with equal opportunities to become familiar and comfortable with the new technologies, we have to take the different interests of the sexes into consideration and design games that will be appealing to both girls and boys."

Plant Therapy Is Proven Helpful To Patients

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — It may look like an ordinary greenhouse, but the large glass structure on the psychiatric campus of Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center here nurtures not only plants, but also the human spirit.

Plant therapy — as work in the Hillside division's greenhouse is sometimes called — is credited with creating remarkable changes in the lives of many patients. Psychiatrists and activities specialists at the medical center have noted that caring for plants often gives withdrawn patients emotional rewards that build a bridge to other people.

Initially, many of the 30 men and women working in the greenhouse are suspicious of people, but not of plants, according to Estelle Douglas, director of the Department of Rehabilitation Activities.

They raise flowers from seedlings and cuttings, do floral arrangements, conduct research on plant diseases, and sell in the greenhouse. In season, they cultivate flower beds, plant Japanese rock gardens and raise vegetables for their own use.

In the process, says Ms. Douglas, they gain confidence and self-esteem in being able to nurture living things.

When a middle-aged carpenter with a severe problem of alcoholism arrived at Hillside, he was hostile and socially isolated, Ms. Douglas recalls.

"Growing plants offered him a gentle focus of attention that gradually broke through barriers of alienation and apathy," she says. "At first he refused any contact with other group members. All he would do is water the plants."

"Then the work grabbed him. As he trimmed plants, made cuttings, repotted, checked for insects and disease, he began to relate to the greenhouse group leader Maria Marrone, who has been an activities specialist at the hospital for 34 years. That also marked the beginning of a notable difference in the patient's interaction with other people."

In combination with psychotherapy and medication, rehabilitation activities are an important part of treatment at Hillside. Psychiatrist Dr. Philip Goldberg says patients who find other types of activity unacceptable are often willing to work in the greenhouse.

"People feel peace among plants," he points out. "Plants are alive, something to touch and handle, but also safe. They provide pleasure, hope, expectation. They even help bring acceptance of the workings of nature, for when a plant dies, you have to replace it and get on with raising the next plant. That means making the best of something when it passes its bloom, giving it up and moving on."

For three hours every day, the routines of caring for plants provide a needed structure of meaningful activity for the greenhouse group, Ms. Douglas says. Not only do they enjoy hands-on-experience, but they participate in planning each work task and setting standards together with the rehabilitation staff.

"Plants can stimulate a caring response," she explains. "At the greenhouse we often see lost contacts with life renewed, connections with other people restored, a sense of responsibility developed."

The greenhouse at Hillside is one of a number of small group workshops in which work is part of therapy and a link to normal life. There is a boutique for clothing and crafts, a carpentry shop, ceramics center, clerical pool and commissary, all developed as therapeutic activities run by patients.

Rehabilitation therapists say these activities share a common goal: to treat the healthy part of the patient, and to offer hope of eventual achievement and independence.

Humor Goes Far In Business

By GARRY MITCHELL
Associated Press Writer

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — "I used to work at a radio station in Manhattan. I'd get in my car during rush hour, drive around and report on the helicopter traffic."

The joke is one of Wayne Drummond's collected bits of humor, written on index cards and legal pads, recorded on cassettes. He uses them to preface speeches in his exploration of the business world.

That joke derives its humor from taking a fairly simple situation and "flipping it," explained Drummond.

Collecting jokes is part of the young entrepreneur's daily activity, besides his three part-time jobs, including his own fledgling consulting firm, Achievement Consulting.

A local radio talk show host has a habit of calling Drummond's answering machine during a lull in the call-ins to broadcast his thought for the day.

If positive attitude could be sold, Drummond would already be rich.

"Each day when I wake up I tell myself every day is a great day. I'm going to get better and better. You are where you are, what you are because of dominating thoughts that occupy your mind."

Drummond came to Mobile from his hometown of Spartanburg, S.C., as a salesman for Carnation, his first job out of graduate school, but the company took back the job last June in a sales-force reduction.

Now he's working on attitudes — management attitudes, selling vitamins, frozen food, and time-management advice. But the advice usually comes with a bit of dry wit.

"I'm a bachelor, and a lot of jokes concern bachelor life: I was asleep the other day and a roach woke me up and said, 'Hey, we got ants.'"

"I can teach anyone to remember jokes. First of all, you have to tell yourself, 'I can remember jokes.' If you have a negative attitude, you can't remember."

He says he uses this one on his parents when they press him about marriage: "What I really want is a dog. I love pets. Now I have a house, back yard and fence. But I travel a lot and can't afford to keep a dog. That's why I need a wife. So when I date a girl for the first time, I ask her what kind of dog she likes."

Situations present the best opportunity for a laugh, he said.

"I was in the grocery store the other day and saw 'lite' pancake syrup. This doesn't make sense. You can lose all the weight you want by eating pounds of pancakes?"

First Warning

PEKING (AP) — China's Communist government is warning the offspring of party officials that they must obey the law and not abuse their status.

The warning was contained in a letter written by Chen Yun, a senior member of the party Politburo. It was published on the front page of several major newspapers over the weekend.

There was no official explanation for the letter; but there have been several reports in recent months of children in Communist Party families who commit crimes with impunity, thinking their status protects them.

Special Prices In Effect Through February 20

Lowe's Pricing Policy: Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by our selling area. While we believe our reference retail prices do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)
Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.

Lowe's "New" Low Payment Credit Plan!
 Now You Can Finance Major Purchases Of Up To $5,000.

Now at Lowe's, we offer you an easier way to make those major home improvements and larger purchases. It's called our Low Payment Plan, and it's designed to let you finance purchases of $250 to $5,000 for up to 5 years, at competitive rates. The result is a low, monthly payment that fits comfortably into the family budget and brings important home additions, from a new refrigerator to a new roof, within easy reach. It's just that easy. As a result of certain space limitations in our ads, it's impossible to provide full credit details on every item. However, we do supply this information on selected items in our ads, to give you an idea of the relative size of monthly payments and the annual percentage rate. Lowe's Low Payment Credit Terms are shown at right. Stop by Lowe's for the complete story on credit.

*Lowe's Low Payment Credit Terms:

Your credit must be satisfactory. Our cash price does not include sales tax. The monthly payment price may be slightly lower, depending upon state law. The monthly payment price includes sales tax of 4 percent. If sales tax is different in your area, the monthly payment will vary slightly. Credit, Life and Disability Insurance is available upon request. Delivery charges are excluded.
