Shuttle Challenger Is Back In Orbit

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The shuttle Challenger returned to orbit this morning, carrying five astronauts on an adventurous mission to test a $10-million jet-pack that for the first time will put man in free flight across the vacuum of space.

It was the perfect birthday gift for retiring launch director Al O'Hara, who helped see the shuttle through its first 10 flights. "We were 57 milliseconds late," an official said with satisfaction.

If the weather cooperates next weekend, the shuttle is to make its first Florida-to-Florida roundtrip, landing here in eight days.

The "Buck Rogers flight" began with rumbling liftoff at 8 a.m. EST. The 100-ton shuttle flashed to life and rose swiftly on 7 million pounds of thrust generated by its powerful engines.

"Roger, Houston, this is really a great ride," said commander Vance Brand as Challenger darted through partly cloudy skies, twisting over the Atlantic Ocean. On a southeast heading, its trail of fire and smoke was visible for miles to the tens of thousands who watched liftoff from ocean and riverfront viewing spots.

It was Challenger's fourth trouble-free launch and shuttle operations manager Tom Utsman said, "It's become a very nice flying machine."

"Everything very normal," Mission Control told the astronauts as they settled into orbit 190 miles above Earth.

The main order of business following launch was afternoon deployment of a commercial satellite. The jet-pack tests are to begin next Tuesday when two astronauts are to move outside the shuttle, propelled by bursts of gas from canisters built into their pack.

Brand, 52, has twice before been in space. The other four crewmen, all first-timers, are Robert Gibson, 37, pilot; and mission specialists Ronald McNair, 33, Bruce McCandless, 46, and Robert Stewart 41. McNair is the second black assigned to a U.S. space mission.

Stewart, a lieutenant colonel, is the first Army officer to fly in space. McCandless is a Navy captain and Gibson a Navy commander.

The astronauts are to land here a week from Saturday on the 15,000-foot concrete runway just four miles from launch pad 39A. A shuttle crew tried last July to return to the Cape, but was foiled by weather and diverted to California.

The paying business of flight, delivery of communications satellites, is to be concluded on day two.

McNair Almost Gave Up Science

By RICHARDE E. MOORE
A&T University News Bureau

Black astronaut Dr. Ronald McNair, a North Carolina A&T State University graduate who is taking part in U.S. Space Mission ST-11 which launched this morning, says he almost abandoned the idea of seeking a scientific career in favor of majoring in music.

"In fact," McNair said, "I majored in music for a short while when I went to A&T, because I got psyched out by what I saw in the physics department."

McNair, however, returned to the study of physics after he decided "that it wouldn't be fair to give up the study of physics without giving it a chance."

That decision might be credited with helping the young laser physicist to launch a successful career that would see him graduate from A&T in 1971, earn a Ph.D. degree in laser physics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and then become in 1978 one of three blacks out of 11,000 applicants to be selected for the astronaut program.

When McNair went into space as a research specialist, he was the first astronaut from a historically black university and only the second black to enjoy a space ride.

In a recent telephone interview, McNair said he does not attach any special significance to his race.

"I'm certainly looking forward to this mission, because it means an opportunity to me to do something meaningful for others and also something I'll never forget," McNair said. "I have trained for this mission for five years, and I feel like I am ready for it."

He said the preparing for the mission has given him as much satisfaction as the actual mission itself probably will give him. "The preparations have been phenomenal," he said. "My involvement is in the scientific tasks of the mission. I've spent a lot of time trying to get my procedures down. This is not going to be a joy ride. It's very serious, and I don't have the luxury of viewing it any other way."

According to National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials, McNair will be one of two astronauts on the mission who will fly freely in space, using nitrogen-powered jet packs attached to their space suits. That exercise is intended to show how jet packs can be used to assist in repairing broken satellites in space.

McNair was employed as a research scientist at the Hughes Research Laboratory when he learned that NASA was looking for appli-

Unemployment At Another Low Point

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's civilian unemployment dropped to 8 percent last month, the lowest since October 1981, as a record 103.2 million people held jobs, the government reported today.

The 0.2 percentage point decline from December's seasonally adjusted 8.2 percent was the fifth straight monthly improvement in the rate.

The ranks of those officially listed as jobless dropped from 9.2 million to just over 9 million last month.

Since unemployment hit a post-Depression peak rate of 10.7 percent in November 1982, the rate has dropped by 2.7 percentage points and 4.2 million Americans have gone to work.

A separate unemployment rate, which includes the 1.68 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States, fell from 8.1 percent to 7.9 percent in January, said today's report from the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The bureau's Current Population Survey of some 60,000 randomly selected U.S. households, on which the unemployment rate is based, showed that nearly 250,000 people were hired in January.

At the White House, Marlin Fitzwater, a deputy presidential press secretary, noted the combined civilian-military rate and said that "breaking the 8 percent barrier is significant in that it puts us very close to our predicted unemployment rate at the end of 1984, 7.8 percent."

He said that the figure for new jobs in January, 250,000, "is the best news for those categories of the unemployed who have the hardest time finding jobs, namely our youth."

"Young people have the highest unemployment rate often because the economy must create new jobs for them," Fitzwater said. "Those new figures show the economy is still expanding and that holds the best promise for new job creation."

The overall 8 percent civilian rate was the lowest since joblessness stood at 7.9 percent of the civilian labor force in October 1981, long before the recession forced layoffs for workers and doomed hiring prospects for job-seekers.

In an economic report to Congress this week, President Reagan called the labor market improvement gratifying, but said that unemployment "remains unacceptably high."

The administration has forecast that the combined civilian-military unemployment rate will average 7.7 percent this year, compared to a 9.6 percent average in 1983 and a 9.7 percent average in 1982.

A separate survey of business payrolls, which is not used to calculate the monthly jobless rate, showed that employment in that category rose by 285,000 last month to 91.9 million.

Factory workers put in longer hours, too, the report said, noting that the average factory workweek rose 25 minutes, to 40.9 hours in January.

Today's report showed "significant drops in unemployment" for all population groups except black teenagers.

The jobless rate for black teens dropped only slightly, from 49 percent to 47.9 percent, the report said.

The employment gains last month were widespread, although the bulk of the new hiring took place in the construction and manufacturing sectors, the report said.

Among the various population groups, these were the January unemployment rates, as compared to the previous month:

- Adult men, 7.3 percent, down from 7.4 percent.
- Adult women, 7.1, unchanged.
- Teenagers, 19.4, down from 20.1.
- Whites, 6.9, down from 7.1.
- Blacks, 16.7, down from 17.8.
- Hispanics, 11.2, down from 11.6.

Indeed, Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, said in testimony prepared for the Joint Economic Committee of Congress that "a comparison of the current recovery with that following the severe 1973-75 recession highlights the vigor of labor market developments since the end of 1982."

He is the former president and general manager of Hunnicutt Inc. of Bethel.

Hunnicutt received his bachelor's degree in business from ECU and has completed a two-year non-degree program in accounting at ECU.

LIFETIME SUBSCRIPTION?

My husband and I were "selected" to receive a lifetime subscription to "Better Living" Magazine for $4.95. I couldn't understand the low price, but I sent in the money Nov. 7, 1983. I haven't received anything and wonder if I have made a $4.95 mistake. C.A.

Hotline called Better Living and learned that you are on the spring mailing list to receive your first issue. We inquired as to how any magazine can be so inexpensively offered and were told that this is a 30- to 50-page tabloid that comes out quarterly. Salvation Army Chapter Is Hailed For '83 Achievements

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Former Salvation Army Commander Ernest W. Holz praised the Army's local chapter Thursday night for its efforts to meet "the growing need" resulting in assistance cutbacks by government.

Holz, now a Salvation Army commissioner, spoke at the local organization's annual report meeting.

"I commend you for your excellent report," said Holz. "It indicates all the fine work done in this county. I commend each individual who has served humanity through the instrumentality of the Salvation Army."

According to the 1983 report, Salvation Army income locally last year totaled $149,058, while expenses amounted to $150,188. The balance at the end of year equaled $18,151.

Secretary Julian Vainright noted that the organization has had a 370 percent increase in the budget since 1970.

For its Christmas projects, the Salvation Army raised $41,381 through letter appeals and kettles and other income. The money raised was used to assist 3,046 persons during the Christmas season.

The University City Kiwanis Club raised $2,870 for the Christmas fund and was awarded a mounted bell as the first place senior division club. The Future Business Leaders of America at J.H. Rose High School received first place in the youth clubs category by raising $492 for the organization.

According to the annual report, 325 Salvation Army workers spent 1,000 hours visiting 1,592 persons; 2,294 persons in Pitt County were assisted by the comprehensive assistance

Cabbage Patch Doll Raises Money

By BETH NELSON
PCMH Medical Writer

Sixteen-month-old Courtney Caraway is a miracle — a laughing, cooing, toddling miracle. She can ask for milk, reach for her mother and act bashful with strangers. She is, in most ways, like other children her age.

But from the first day, Courtney's life has been a struggle. Her mother, realizing that her pregnancy was not going normally, had come to Pitt County Memorial Hospital to deliver. Courtney was born five weeks premature by Caesarean section Sept. 2, 1982. She was immediately rushed to the hospital's neonatal intensive care unit, where a bevy of doctors and nurses worked to assess her condition.

Courtney's parents, MacDonald and Tammy Caraway of Winterville, remember the grim picture neonatologist Dr. John Wimmer painted for them. They wondered if their daughter would live.

Several of Courtney's key organs, including the urethra and anus, had not fully developed before birth, making her body unable to expel its wastes. Related complications like jaundice, an enlarged heart and premature lungs made it even more difficult for her to survive.

Despite the odds against their daughter's survival, Courtney's parents pinned their hopes on her recovery. They visited her every chance they got, with the encouragement of the neonatal staff.

"It's really amazing what they can do here," Tammy Caraway said. "I'm sure she wouldn't have made it a few years ago."

After a week of intensive care at PCMH, Courtney was transferred to Duke University Medical Center in Durham. Social workers at PCMH arranged for her parents to stay indefinitely at the Ronald McDonald House in Durham so they could visit her often.

And slowly and steadily, Courtney has grown stronger. Since birth, she has undergone seven operations, most of them to reconstruct the organs that were not developed at birth. At least one more major operation will be needed.

The road ahead appears rugged for Courtney. Because of her incontinence, toilet training will be difficult, her mother said. And when she is older, she may still have problems with excretion. Nevertheless, her parents consider it a miracle that Courtney, their beloved only child, is alive.

They credit her survival to Pitt Memorial's neonatal unit. And they recently came up with a tangible way to thank the hospital for the care Courtney has received.

Last fall Courtney's maternal grandparents bought her a Cabbage Patch doll complete with birth certificate and adoption papers. In December, Cabbage Patch dolls became the rage in the toy business and, as Christmas near, they were in short supply.

"We decided," Courtney's father said, "to auction off the Cabbage Patch doll and give whatever we would make to Pitt County Memorial Hospital."

WSFL Radio conducted the auction just before Christmas and the doll brought $325.

Last month the Caraways presented a $325 check to Dr. John Wimmer and Dr. Stephen Engelke, with other neonatal staff present. "The people here will always be in our hearts because they saved our little girl's life," MacDonald Caraway said. "We're grateful."

Dad Suspends Girl's Romance In Overtime

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, Roger (not his real name), is in big trouble with my parents because they caught him in my room at 2 a.m. My father told Roger that he was not to come back until they (my parents) told him he could.

I totally understand their reasons for this, but I am afraid to even bring up the subject because my father might blow up. Roger would like to come over and apologize to my parents and ask for a second chance, but I'm afraid to even mention his name.

I love Roger and want to be able to see him again, but how can I arrange it?

AFRAID TO BRING IT UP

DEAR ABBY: Allow for a cooling-off period of about two weeks. Don't sulk or moon around or act deprived or mistreated. Then tell your parents that Roger wants to come over and apologize to them in person and ask for a second change to be accepted.

Most parents would accept a sincere apology and agree to a second change. And if yours do, Roger had better respect your parents' rules, or his real name will be "Mud."

DEAR ABBY: After reading about "Tex Lansburg," the terrier you knew in Sioux City, Iowa, who would eat only kosher food, I had to write.

My oldest daughter is married to an orthodox Jew, so not only does she keep kosher, she buys special food for the Passover holiday.

The first year she was married, we all went to her house for Passover, and I saw her feeding her goldfish Passover matzo meal instead of the usual fish food! I told her the fish would surely die. She said theirs was a Jewish home and the goldfish would have to eat whatever they ate. Well, the fish loved the matzo meal! I'm sure it knows when Passover is near because it becomes very frisky.

You may think this is funny, but it's a true story.

MARGARET FREEMAN,
SAN DIEGO

DEAR MARGARET: Thanks for a wonderful fish tale.

DEAR ABBY: You were wrong to tell that 21-year-old mother to leave her 3-year-old daughter at home or she could kiss her boyfriend goodbye. The mother said the child fussed and spoiled her evening when she took her on dates with her boyfriend.

If her boyfriend can be upset by a 3-year-old, then she should kiss him goodbye now. What would he do if they married? Slap the child around for fussing?

I speak from experience. I was a 21-year-old widow with a baby. When I met the man I eventually married, I took the child everywhere he went. That way I had a "father" for my baby as well as a boyfriend.

Many a widow and divorcee will marry a great guy who isn't any kind of a father — thus child abuse, and in the end, no marriage. I say, take your child with you on dates. You will sure weed out the bums fast.

HAPPILY MARRIED
FOR 34 YEARS IN TEXAS

DEAR HAPPILY MARRIED: I agree that a single woman with children to raise should not marry a man who doesn't love children. But I wouldn't recommend taking a child along on the first date, or there might not be a second.

Second Wind Hall Of Fame Award Goes To Juanita Elks

Juanita Elks of Greenville received the Second Wind Hall of Fame Award for her community volunteer services Thursday night. Her counted volunteer hours at Pitt County Memorial Hospital are 1,197.

State Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. made the presentation at the meeting of Alpha Nu Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa. After receiving the plaque, Mrs. Elks said, "I'm honored ... in 1983 I had good news and now I have good news in 1984."

"The purpose of the Second Wind Award is to give recognition to those senior citizens who have given generously of their talents and experience to the benefit of their communities through activities in clubs, churches and other organizations. The award is for people — for people who continue life with zest and imagination, people whose lives have shown service to others and who continue to give of themselves," said Shirley Moore, chapter president.

Mrs. Moore said Mrs. Elks chairs the chapter's Altruistic Committee, buys gifts and delivers them to the chapter sponsored forgotten nursing home patient, to the foster child and the Cherry Hospital patient. She collects and delivers gifts to Operation Santa Claus, collects magazines and takes them to the ICU waiting room at the hospital and collects and delivers donations of yarn, thread and scraps for the Rehabilitation Center at the hospital.

Mrs. Elks has organized a network of volunteers that are previous cancer patients and their mission is to give whatever aid and support current cancer patients need, Mrs. Moore said.

According to Etsil Mason, director of volunteer services at PCMH, Mrs. Elks is one of the top 10 volunteers out of 300 at the hospital. On Oct. 11, 1983, Mrs. Elks received the Governor's Volunteer Award for Pitt County in the Senior Citizen Division.

Jones and Oscar Moore, husband of the group's president, were special guests at the meeting. Jones' wife, Joe Anne, is a chapter member.

Letha Jones presented a slide program on preschool high quality education and Faye Dempsey spoke on fraternity education. Barbara Parker, chaplain, gave the devotional on "Brighten the Corner Where You Are."

A Valentine decorating theme was used.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

The Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office has scheduled an educational meeting on "Estate Planning." The meeting will be held at the Extension Office Feb. 14 at 9:30 a.m. and again at 7 p.m.

The meeting will be of interest to all persons 18 years of age and older. The purpose of the program is to create an awareness on the part of property owners of the problems associated with transferring property between generations. Basic information about the concepts of estate planning and the reasons for developing estate plans will be presented. Program participants are Charles McLawhorn, attorney; Nancy Warren, NCNB trust officer; and Evelyn L. Spangler, home economics extension agent.

Some of the questions to be answered at the meetings are: What happens to my property if I do no estate planning. Why make a will. What happens to jointly-owned property if one owner dies and How can I minimize the estate and inheritance taxes?

What happens if I give my property away. How can I provide for the continuation of my business after my death, and Why might there be a need for insurance in an estate?

Estate planning is an involved process. But the worst mistake a property owner can make is to assume that it doesn't matter — and do nothing. Interested persons will want to attend and then see their lawyer, banker or other counselor for further assistance.

Preregister by calling 752-2934, extension 370.

Look Homeward

We hope governors of the 50 states were listening to, or carefully read newspaper accounts of, Ronald Reagan's decision to seek another term.

When the president got to the words "but our work is not finished", he referred to "achieving control over government spending, returning more autonomy to the states ...", which means more than the casual listener (or reader) may have absorbed.

(Of course, during an election year all bets are off. No one can afford to hurt feelings of the electorate with a budget that is going to cost votes. But the years to follow are a different story.)

"Achieving control over government spending", is about federal spending — not over state, county or city. What he said was that while the federal government had a huge deficit to combat, states, counties, cities and towns should look less to the federal treasury for filling their needs; and if there are tax cuts at the federal level, local governments will have to make up the difference with their own tax programs.

The point was almost underlined by words that followed: "returning more autonomy to the states".

Think about it. "Autonomy" is largely lost on relinquishing local responsibility. Money sources require a measure of control on how the money they make available is used.

It follows that, if there are no federal tax increases, and local governments need more funds to improve or continue their programs, it is going to be up to their legislators, commissioners and council members or aldermen to find those sums. In the long view, it should cost less to taxpayers because of its passing through fewer hands and local watchdogs are more apt to be "watching" how the funds are used.

Continued economic prosperity is essential, of course; but as federal funding shrinks, levels of local government will have to make up the balance by tapping local resources.

You can bet that fabled bottom dollar, people in local government will not be happy about the prospect.

Efficiency Needed

A major part of the $925.5 billion budget proposed by President Reagan with its $180.4 billion deficit is a $305 billion defense budget.

It represents a 13 percent increase over the military budget of the present year and comes in the face of cuts in other areas of federal spending.

It seems clear that the United States military has problems. They may not be, however, problems that more money can solve. There is too much rivalry between the branches of service and too much duplication in the weapons systems each are developing. Throwing 13 percent more money at problems like that is not going to solve anything. It only contributes to the burden on the taxpayers and the increased deficit.

The administration and Congress should not be too anxious to grant large military appropriation increases until there is assurance that the funds now being spent are used with efficiency.

Few Similarities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is Ronald Reagan another Hamilton? Does Walter Mondale resemble Jefferson? Would anyone take Jesse Helms for another Daniel Webster?

Probably not. Today's leaders don't look like the leaders of yore to most people, and whenever an election approaches, people wonder why.

The question is often put this way: Where have all the great men gone?

It's an old question. In the middle of the last century, historian Francis Parkman did some hand-wringing over it.

"Out of three millions, America found a Washington, an Adams, a Franklin, a Jefferson, a Hamilton," Parkman wrote. "Out of 20 millions she now finds none whose stature can compare with these."

Ironically, Abraham Lincoln, surely among the greatest of Americans, was just about to rise from the pool of common men at the very moment that Parkman was busy lamenting the shortage of leaders in America.

Richard D. Brown, a professor of history at the University of Connecticut, recalls Parkman's unease and airs the great man shortage anew in an essay in American Heritage magazine.

Brown's answer is: We don't want them. We're more comfortable with ordinary folks at the top. Maybe better off, too.

Gerald R. Ford must have thought so. A few days after the presidency ascended upon him, Ford went before the House and proclaimed: "I'm a Ford, not a Lincoln." There was much applause.

It is interesting to measure today's candidates for the presidency against the qualities that founding father John Adams thought a president ought to have. He raised a qualification that even the League of Women Voters doesn't press in its questionnaires for candidates.

Conservatives Want Clark To Return

WASHINGTON — Conservative Republicans in Congress are quietly pressing President Reagan to bring Interior Secretary William P. Clark back into the White House — this time as chief of staff — in a second Reagan term.

The message to Reagan from leaders of the Republican Steering Committee, comprised of some 30 conservative senators, is still low key. It will take on hard urgency after Nov. 6 if Reagan is re-elected. The conservatives will fight to keep Michael Deaver, deputy chief of staff, from succeeding James A. Baker III in the top job following his expected post-election departure from the White House.

Never happy with Baker, the conservatives were deeply upset by the departure of their ally, Edwin Meese III, to become attorney general. Joe Coors, the Colorado brewer and conservative activist, made his displeasure known to the White House in behalf of the president's "kitchen cabinet."

The "senior Soviet official" quoted in recent news accounts as saying that the U.S. can have an arms control agreement with the Soviet Union by July is Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, but Reagan administration policy-makers are not taking his peace offering at face value.

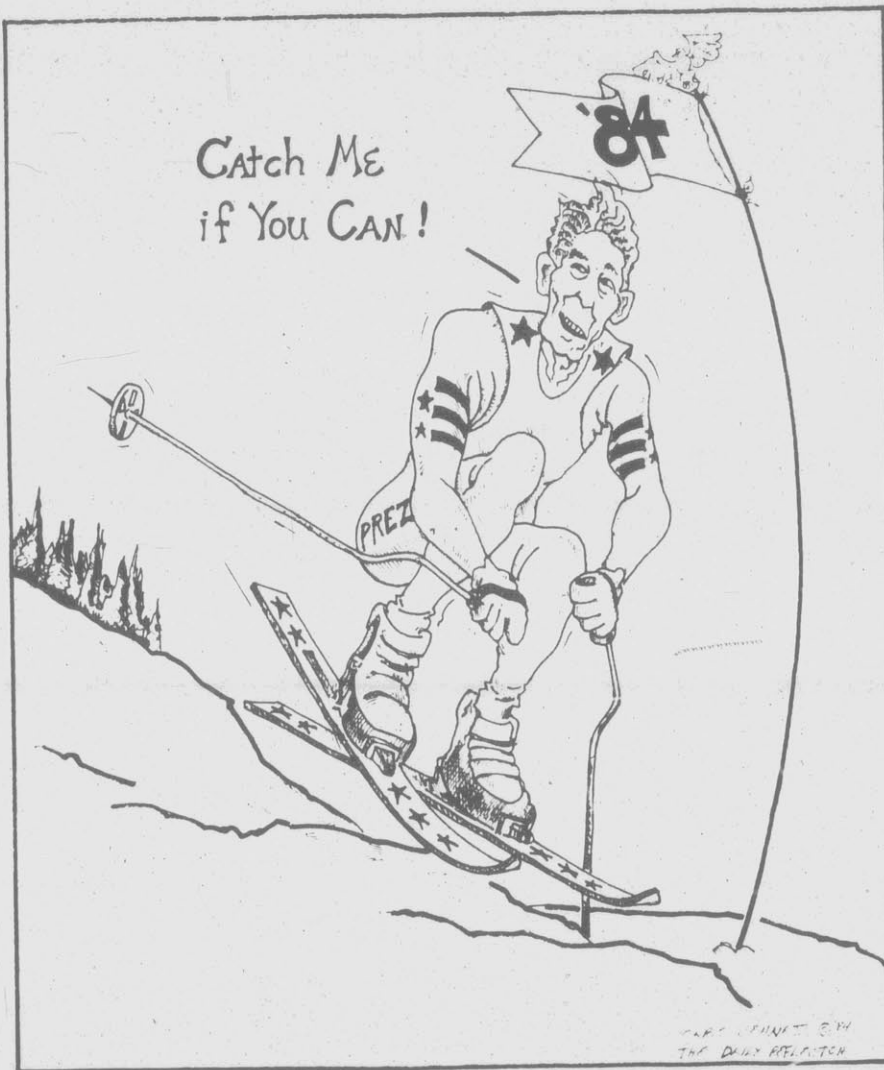

While the Kremlin's propaganda machine continues to blast President Reagan, the wily Dobrynin passes the word to journalists and diplomats in Washington that agreement can be easily attained. The administration suspects that this is less of a sincere bargaining offer than part of Moscow's grand plan to soften the U.S. negotiating position.

Nevertheless, some U.S. officials concede that Dobrynin's leaks may reflect the Kremlin's judgment that Reagan probably will be re-elected and it is better to deal with him now than next year. If so, the president may soon be faced with what amounts to a Soviet offer to sign an up-to-date version of President Jimmy Carter's never-ratified SALT II treaty.

McGeorge Bundy, considered a Vietnam War hard-liner as President John F. Kennedy's national security adviser 23 years ago, has returned to Washington on a brief lobbying mission: to persuade the Reagan administration to end its boycott of an international scientific organization that has been subverted by the Soviet Union.

The International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis, headquartered in Switzerland, was financed by the U.S. to the tune of $2 million a year. That vital contribution ended when the State Department decided Moscow was using it to acquire Western intelligence for use in military technology.

Bundy, a leading critic of President Reagan's nuclear weapons policy, wants the boycott ended. He is scheduled to see Jack Matlock, the president's top Soviet adviser on the National Security Council staff, and two high officials in the State Department. But his mission seemed doomed before it started.

Learning To Take The Rap

More and more companies are now holding seminars on how executives should deal with the media. In the past, businesses (big business in particular) handed out press releases through their public affairs vice presidents and that was that. But as the press keeps badgering our nation's businessmen, they are finding themselves in front of cameras, blinking into bright lights and running the risk of losing control of their story.

There are hundreds of experts making large fortunes showing corporation big shots how to deal with the media.

"All right, gentlemen. I'm going to give you your first hypothetical case for this war game. Word gets out your company has produced a headache powder that causes convulsions, and also fillings to fall out. Mr. Chairman, what is the first thing you do?"

"I telephone my insurance company and find out if the product is adequately covered by my liability policy. If it is, then I call a press conference and announce we will continue manufacturing the powder."

"Why?"

"Because if we stop, we'll be admitting the charges are true, and we'll be opening ourselves up to a lot of frivolous lawsuits."

"Fair enough. Now I'll make it harder on you. Mike Wallace shows up with a crew from '60 Minutes' to find out what is going on. Do you let him in or not?"

"I let him in, but I don't talk to him. I turn him over to my research director, Dr. Rich."

"Right. Okay, Dr. Rich. You are now on camera. Mike Wallace is holding a dead white hamster in his hand and says, 'Would it surprise you, Doctor, that this rat used your headache powder?' What's your answer?"

"I tell Mike we have no evidence to substantiate that the product, when used with caution, would damage anyone's health."

"Weak, Doctor, very weak. Mike Wallace pulls a report out of his briefcase which he reads from: 'This FDA study, which I know you received eight years ago, indicates that almost everyone exposed to your powder was subject to catatonic convulsions. Why didn't you make this report available to your superiors?' How do you deal with Mike on that one, Doc?"

"I reply that I did turn the report over to management."

"No you don't, Dr. Rich."

"What do I do?"

"You get the hell off camera. Once Wallace confronts you with the FDA report, you can't fake it anymore, and you refer him to the company lawyers. Where are the lawyers? All right, Wallace is knocking down the door. He smells blood, who's the head legal beagle?"

"I am, sir. Timothy Wadlipp IV."

"Okay, Wadlipp, Wallace shows you the report and wants to know why your company is still making the stuff. How do you respond?"

Public Forum

To the editor:
Back in October you carried a column of mine in which I opposed a federal holiday to honor Martin Luther King Jr. The thrust of the column went to King's associates in the years before his death in 1968.

I spoke of evidence that linked King to the Highlander Folk School in Tennessee, and I described the school as a communist training center. My concern was entirely with events and individuals approximately 25 to 30 years ago.

I am dismayed to learn that my comments may have been misinterpreted to apply to the school today. This certainly was not my intention. I have no knowledge of the current political affiliation of the Highlander Folk School, if indeed it still exists. I retract any implication that the Highlander Folk School is now a communist training center, and I apologize for any such inference that may have been drawn.

Sincerely,
James J. Kilpatrick

How Do You Make Budget Cuts?

NEW YORK (AP) — Few things seem dearer to the heart of Ronald Reagan than cutting the size of federal government and building up the private sector.

Why then has federal government activity under Reagan accounted for a greater ratio of the country's total output — approaching one-quarter — than under any recent president, Democrat or Republican?

In that figure lies a tale of frustration and a warning too. If the most powerful figure in the country cannot cut the budget, who can? And if the budget cannot be cut, or taxes raised, can financial problems be avoided?

Government spending in fiscal 1983 amounted to about 24.7 percent of gross national product, compared with about 22.6 percent in fiscal 1980, when the president took office and promised to cut costs.

Those promises are still being made, as you can hear or read about every day, but if cuts finally are achieved, they still might leave the ratio higher than for any president since World War II.

Under Jimmy Carter, rebuked by Reagan for his spending propensities, the ratio never got above 22.6 percent. Under Richard Nixon the ratio got down to 19.8 percent in 1974. Lyndon Johnson's highest was 21.5 in 1968. And back in 1956, Dwight Eisenhower managed to lower the rate to 17.2 percent.

A lot has happened since Eisenhower's days, including a heightened interest on the part of Americans for the good life, provided if need be by the federal government.

The willingness to pay for the good life, however, apparently has not risen proportionately.

Cut health care? Can anybody cut health care? Rarely. Individuals haven't been able to do it in their own personal affairs. Doctors dislike the very idea of saying who should be aided and who left to die. Insurers have failed at the job. Hospitals too.

Health care is one of those untouchables, made so by its nature. It is open-ended; there is no limit to what can be spent to improve health or prolong life. Those who willingly settle for the less-than-perfect car in order to keep costs down find it infinitely more difficult to do so with health care.

In fact, those who so advocate might find themselves construed as the enemy.

Cuts in education, Social Security and welfare aren't much lower on the scale of acceptability. Environmental spending is high on the list of untouchables. And defense, by presidential preference and perhaps need is in a special category of its own.

Each of these areas also has its own pressure groups, and each has learned how to apply the pressure in Washington. Lobbying in the old days was a pursuit of amateurs compared with the sophisticated techniques of today.

Where, therefore, do you cut? And how do you cut? And how do you cut and remain in office? And since cutting seems to have become stalemated, how do you lower interest on the national debt, the tab for which keeps rising?

The problem is obvious to everyone — the president and Congress and voters and recipients and others, by whatever category they choose to be addressed.

But somehow the questions and the issue itself seldom if ever get addressed in a practical manner.

Economist Fears Tobacco Program Collapse

RALEIGH (AP) — The Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. may be heading for collapse, bringing down with it the federal tobacco program, a North Carolina State University agricultural economist says.

"Stabilization cannot survive for more than three or four years with present government policies and economic trends, and without Stabilization the tobacco program can not exist," Dr. W.D. Toussaint said.

But Fred G. Bond, general manager of the Stabilization Corp., disputed the warning by Toussaint.

"We are not making any plans to go out of business," Bond said.

John H. Cyrus, tobacco affairs chief for the North Carolina Department of Agriculture, said Toussaint "could be right." But Cyrus said his feeling is that the program will survive the next few years.

Stabilization is the centerpiece of the government's effort to maintain tobacco income through a system of poundage quotas and price supports. Tobacco that fails to sell for at least a penny per pound above the support price is held under loan by the co-op until it can be sold to private companies.

Toussaint said stabilization is in peril because of its huge stocks, the freeze on tobacco prices and legislation requiring the tobacco program to operate at no net cost to taxpayers.

Stabilization currently holds about 770 million pounds of tobacco, including about 441 million pounds from the 1982 and 1983 crops.

Toussaint said the price freeze will probably help sales, but also will complicate Stabilization's situation. The co-op can no longer count on escalating prices to repay the Commodity Credit Corporation for its operating funds and interest, he said.

Farmers are being assessed 7 cents per pound of tobacco they sell to cover Stabilization's costs. But Toussaint estimated that will provide only $60 million in 1984, less than half what the co-op needs.

He said a sizeable increase in worldwide tobacco production has also hurt the tobacco program and leaf farmers. He said imports of foreign tobacco jumped 30 percent in 1983, while exports of U.S. cigarettes dropped 11 percent and domestic consumption dropped 5 percent.

"No one was happy about the 11.5 percent cut in quota for 1984, but even with this reduction Stabilization could get from 200 to 250 million pounds of the crop," Toussaint said.

He said the collapse of the tobacco program would probably cause leaf prices to drop to about $130 to $140 per hundredweight. That is about the current cost of production, once the cost of quota has been subtracted.

He also said land values would drop, tobacco production would likely increase and the industry would see fluctuations in production and prices. He said those fluctuations would probably not be as wild as they were in the 1930s before the tobacco program was created.

Toussaint, a senior faculty member in the areas of tobacco economics and policies, said his admittedly "pessimistic views" are strictly personal. He said he was not speaking for his department or colleagues.

Meanwhile, Cyrus said he thinks that changes will be made in the federal tobacco program to prevent the collapse of Stabilization and that four years from now the program could look "entirely different."

"If it looks like we're not getting out of the woods, the chances are very good there will be further adjustments in program," Cyrus said. "I don't think we're going to sit idly by and not do anything and let Stabilization fold up."

Patient Is Recovered

A 19-year-old Pitt County Memorial Hospital patient was returned to the hospital's psychiatric unit unharmed late this morning after threatening highway patrolmen with a broken bottle, according to Sgt. Coy Blackman.

Blackman said the Kinston man, who left the hospital without permission, walked up to the scene of an accident on the Stantonsburg Road about 10:45 a.m.

The sergeant said Trooper A.G. Wright "saw the boy ... wet and dirty ... jump into a truck and lock the door."

Blackman said Trooper Wright and Trooper Walter Featherston "talked him (Herring) out" of the truck, but Herring picked up a bottle, broke it and attempted to hold the officers "at bay."

However, Blackman said the troopers continued to talk to Herring in an effort to calm him, and were finally able to place a coat around the youth and take the broken bottle.

Herring was then returned to the hospital, unharmed, Blackman said.

Western Union and the Indonesian government each are paying NASA $10 million to deliver their satellites. After McNair and Stewart release them from the cargo bay, rockets will boost them into stationary orbits 22,300 miles out.

Much of the rest of the trip is rehearsal for the next flight in April when another crew is to capture and repair a satellite named Solar Max.

The adventures begin Tuesday when McCandless and Stewart are to strap themselves into chair-like backpacks and become the first humans to venture into space without a safety rope.

They will move 300 feet away from Challenger on tiny thrusters of nitrogen gas from 24 jets and then maneuver back to the open cargo bay. They will glide slowly, about 2 feet per second.

"It will take us about 15 minutes to move out 300 feet," McCandless said. A second jet-walk is scheduled for Thursday.

Only one will leave the bay at a time, with the other remaining behind to assist if necessary. Brand and Gibson will be alert to steer Challenger alongside the space-walker for a rescue in case of trouble.

Because of the jet-packs, the mission has been dubbed the Buck Rogers flight. But McCandless and Stewart will do it differently than Rogers, the 1930a comic strip hero who slept 500 years to awaken in the 25th century. He didn't need a bulky space suit and he jetted among the planets, fighting evil-doers, by donning a belt of a synthetic material he called invertron.

Neither considers the tests risky.

"Each MMU (Manned Maneuvering Unit) has two complete control systems and the thrust is so low there is no possibility that we'll be sent spinning out of control," McCandless said.

During the April flight, an astronaut will go by backpack to secure Solar Max, a $100-million sun-study satellite that failed four years ago because of a defective electronics box. The box will be replaced and the satellite returned to a useful work in orbit.

On previous spacewalks, astronauts were connected by lifeline to their ship. But crews need to move freely through space for satellite repair and servicing missions and for constructing large structures like the permanent manned space station endorsed last week by President Reagan.

cants for the space program. "I saw a notice on the bulletin board," he recalled, "and then I got a notice in the mail. The reality that I might be selected came later."

McNair said that, as a youngster growing up in Lake City, S.C., he had a multitude of interests: "At one time I wanted to major in geography, and I wanted to be a baseball player." He said he began to love physics and mathematics by the time he reached high school because "those subjects challenged me most." At A&T he began to think about a career in scientific research.

In the limited time he is not giving to scientific research, McNair enjoys karate and saxophone playing. He has published professional article on the physics of karate in Scientific American and the American Journal of Physics.

program of the Salvation Army in 1983.

"The people in this community are neighbors and they feel responsible for their fellow man," Holz said. "A growing part of the population is poor. There is a growing intensity of poverty and a growing need for the Salvation Army and other public assistance groups to fill the gap" created by government cutbacks in assistance.

"We (the Salvation Army) depend on the public to help us and then we try to manage the money and make it go as far as we can," Holz said. "We've been able to serve needs and survive for the first 118 years because of our adaptability. We have been willing to make changes as needs have changed, yet we have been true to our principles."

The advisory board officers for 1984 were installed at the meeting. Jimmy Sutton is the new chairman and vice chairman is Robert Martin. Julian Vainright will serve as secretary and the treasurer is James Sullivan.

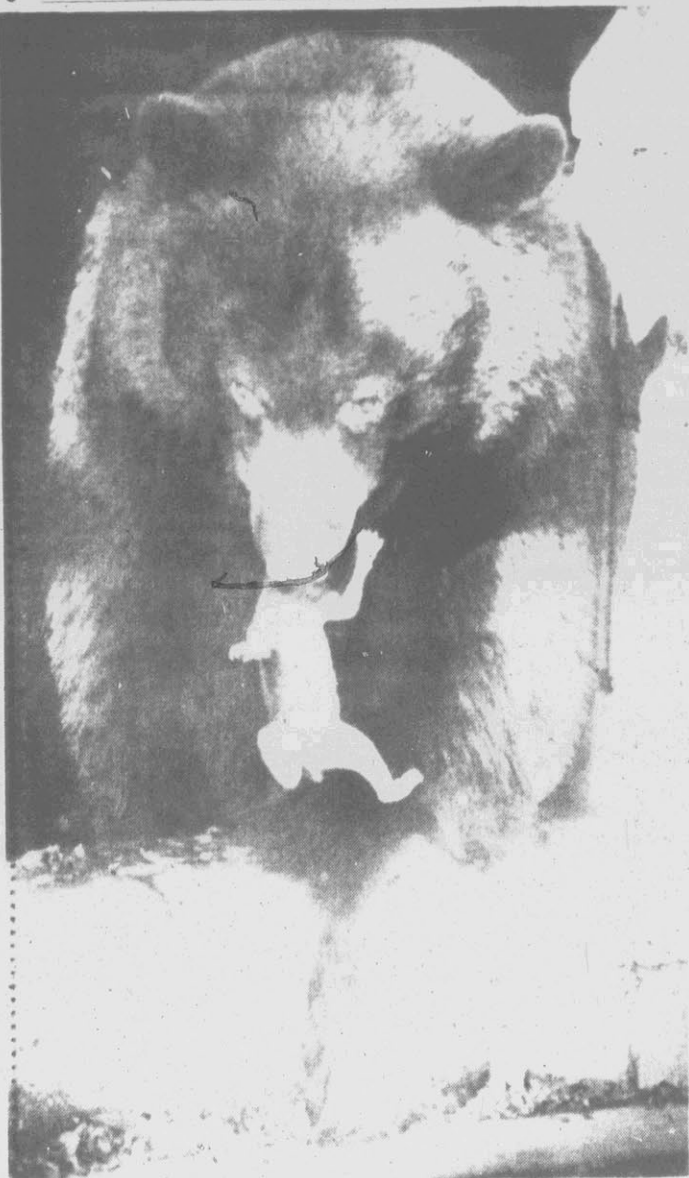

New advisory board members elected for 1984 were installed. The new members are Pete Eure Sr., Alton Gardner, Frank Gill, Will Harper and Larry Mallard.

Reception For Hunt

Gov. Jim Hunt will be honored at a reception at the Greenleaf on Memorial Drive, across from Pitt-Greenville Airport, between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. Saturday.

Hunt is scheduled to announce his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate at 11 a.m. at James B. Hunt High School in Wilson County. The Greenville reception will cap off a series of activities planned in conjunction with the announcement.

The reception is being sponsored by the Pitt County Jim Hunt Committee, and proceeds from the $50-per-ticket reception will go to the state Jim Hunt Committee, which is organizing Hunt's bid for the senate.

Betty McCain, co-chairman of the state Jim Hunt Committee, said, "Since this reception is being held on the day of the governor's announcement, it is a very special event. We look forward to seeing all of our supporters from Pitt and surrounding counties at the announcement that morning and again at the reception in the evening."

Tickets are available from Kenneth Dews (756-3721 or 756-6165), Betty Speir (825-8741), or Sam McLawhorn (524-2518), and also at the door.

Gift Will Buy 'Robot' For ECU

GIFT FOR ECU TECHNOLOGY — Officials of the Sperry Corp. present a check for $5,000 to East Carolina University Chancellor John M. Howell and Dr. Jerry V. Tester, right, director of ECU's Center for Applied Technology. Making the presentation are Sperry sales manager Ray Richardson of Raleigh and Michael Covington, manager of Sperry's Greenville office. (ECU News Bureau Photo)

East Carolina University is buying a teaching robot with a $5,000 gift from Sperry Univac to help equip an automated manufacturing teaching laboratory at ECU.

Dr. Jerry Tester, professor of electronics and director of ECU's newly established Center for Applied

Technology, said the robot is designed as a laboratory instrument and will be used "to study how robots work, how robots are programmed and to allow students to perform experiments using computers to control movements of the robot, simulating production type activity."

Proceeds of the Sperry Univac gift will be used to defray certain initial costs of establishing offices of the Center for Applied Technology, a university-wide clearinghouse of technical expertise which can render assistance and undertake research for industries and local governments in the region.

Beirut Scene Of Bitter Fighting

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Government troops and Shiite Moslem militiamen fought house-to-house today with guns, bayonets and swords at a key gateway to Beirut, police said. At least 29 people were reported killed in those battles and in artillery barrages around the city.

Police also said more than 100 people were wounded since the heavy fighting broke out Thursday, including an Italian soldier and a French soldier serving in the multinational force in Lebanon. The two soldiers were wounded by stray rounds.

The Voice of Lebanon radio station of the Christian Phalange Party said Shiite activists in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley threatened to storm Zahle, the nation's fourth-largest city, if the Lebanese army tried to storm Shiite suburbs of southern Beirut.

The radio said the Shiites rolled artillery and rocket launchers onto hilltops overlooking the predominantly Christian city of 150,000 and shelled it twice today, killing five residents and wounding 11.

The battles were among the heaviest in recent months and occurred as President Reagan and Democrats in the U.S. House of Representatives argued over a resolution pending in Congress calling for the prompt withdrawal of Marines from the Beirut area. The escalated fighting also came at a time when the embattled government of President Amin Gemayel was trying to arrange a method to disengage Lebanon's warring factions.

Marines serving with the multinational force went on "Condition One," their highest state of alert, when two rockets crashed near their base at Beirut airport shortly after midday, Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said.

Brooks said no casualties were reported at the base. Elsewhere, shelling shattered windows at the residence of U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew, but no one was hurt there, an embassy spokesman said.

Dozens of people were buried in the rubble of buildings collapsed by shots from tank canons or lay bleeding on street corners that ambulances could not reach, police said. These victims were not counted in casualty figures, which police began compiling when the fierce ground fighting broke out Thursday afternoon.

Three Lebanese army soldiers and two militiamen were among those reported killed. Hospitals appealed urgently for blood donations.

Beirut airport, where 1,350 U.S. Marines are stationed, was reopened at midmorning. It had been closed to traffic for 15 hours after the fighting began at the Galerie Semaan highway entrance to Beirut on the south.

Lebanese army troops and members of Amal, the nation's largest Shiite Moslem militia, battled in hand-to-hand combat at several shell-ravaged apartment buildings overlooking the gateway, which is part of the Beirut-Damascus highway, police said. The police said some of the fighting involved bayonets and swords.

Later in the day, two Associated Press reporters at the edge of the combat zone said the two sides had stopped trying to advance on the ground and were trading machine-gun and small-arms fire.

Planning Map Bay

ECU News Bureau
Geologists are undertaking a study to map the physical features of the bottom of Onslow Bay on the southeastern North Carolina continental shelf where immensely rich deposits of phosphates have been found.

The scientists will classify the types of carbonate hardgrounds in the seabed.

"Utilizing this data base, we will classify the types of hardgrounds and associated features such as scarps, channels, bottom forms and so forth, and begin to map their distribution within Onslow Bay," Dr. Stanley R. Riggs, East Carolina University geologist, said.

Riggs, whose work led to discovery of vast deposits of phosphorites in the continental shelf, is principal investigator for the new study. The initial phase has been funded with a $10,270 grant by the University of North Carolina-Sea Grant College Program.

Data being studied has been collected over the past five years by Riggs and other investigators.

Onslow Bay curves into the southeastern North Carolina coast in the area between Cape Lookout and Cape Fear.

City Saw 3 Wrecks

An estimated $8,700 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 7:45 p.m. collision at the intersection of 10th and Evans streets involving cars driven by Malcolm Jones Howard of 212 Chowan Road and James Russell Wiley of 700 E. 10th St.

Police, who charged Howard with failing to stop for a red light, estimated damage at $4,000 to the Howard car and $2,500 to the Wiley auto.

Bartley Gerald Bay Sr. of Washington, N.C., was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 4:06 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial and Mall drives.

Not Enough Sun, Sand For King

MALAGA, Spain (AP) — As if there weren't enough sun and sand in Saudi Arabia, King Fahd has flown in from Riyadh to spend some time at his Marbella palace on the sunny coast.

The king arrived Tuesday accompanied by an entourage numbering about 20. It's not known how long he'll be staying.

When the king touched down on Spanish soil, an officer of King Juan Carlos' household and local authorities were on hand to greet him.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE NAME OF THE GAME WAS--HOSPITALITY!

IN THE ANCIENT BIBLE WORLD HOSPITALITY WAS REGARDED AS ONE OF MAN'S BEST VIRTUES. EVEN THEIR MANY LAWS REFLECT THIS CONCERN FOR THEIR FELLOW MAN. THE LAW RESPECTING THE STRANGERS IN THEIR MIDST (LEV. 19:33,34) MAKES THIS CLEAR AND THE LAW CONCERNING THE POOR (LEV. 25:14) GIVES THE PATTERN OF CONDUCT THEY WERE TO FOLLOW. MANY PASSAGES FROM THE NEW TESTAMENT ARE IN LINE WITH THE TRADITION OF THE OLD TESTAMENT IN THAT WE ARE URGED TO "FOLLOW AFTER HOSPITALITY" (ROM. 12:13) AND TO ALWAYS REMEMBER ABRAHAM'S EXAMPLE (HEB. 13:2) AND "USE HOSPITALITY ONE TO ANOTHER WITHOUT GRUDGING" (1 PETER 4:9). SOMETIMES THE DEGREE OF HOSPITALITY WAS OVERPOWERING AS IN THE CASE OF ELIEZER WHO WAS COMMISSIONED BY ABRAHAM TO FIND A BRIDE FOR HIS SON ISAAC. ELIEZER FOUND A BRIDE, REBEKAH, AND WAS ANXIOUS TO RETURN HOME--BUT NO WAY! THE EXTENT OF THE GENEROSITY OF REBEKAH'S FAMILY KEPT HIM VISITING WEEK AFTER WEEK UNTIL THE POOR FELLOW WORRIED THAT HE WOULD NEVER SEE ABRAHAM AGAIN.

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market advanced slightly today amid hopes for an improvement in the country's foreign trade position.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 1.57 points Thursday, rose another 32 1/2 to 1,214.30 by noontime today.

Gainers led a 7-5 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said a sharp decline in the dollar this week against major European currencies raised hopes of improved prospects for the many U.S. companies that do a substantial part of their business overseas.

The dollar's record-setting advance of the past four years has made American goods more expensive in foreign marketplaces, while imports have had a price edge in the United States.

Among today's early volume leaders, Pfizer rose 1/4 to 39 1/2, Johnson & Johnson 1/2 to 39 1/2, and Coca-Cola 1/8 to 51 1/2.

In the domestic economic news, the Labor Department reported that the civilian unemployment rate fell to 8 percent in January from 8 1/2 percent in the previous month.

The NYSE's composite index dropped 19 to 94.09. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .04 at 215.30.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 49.53 million shares at noontime, against 48.81 million at the same point Thursday.

Pour Into Court To Pay Fines

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Police continuing a crackdown on a five-year backlog of unserved arrest warrants say more than 850 violators have poured into city courts to pay fines.

Since Tuesday, 182 people have been arrested for traffic violations, misdemeanors and even some felonies. Lt. David Cupello said Thursday.

And at least 850 have turned themselves in to avoid being hauled in to jail, although it may be more, Cupello said. "The number of surrenders, people who walk in here, is still heavy," he said.

Arrest Two On Break-In Count

Greenville police have arrested Michael Drum Smith of 1101 N. Washington St. and Glen Pearson of 1503 Mill St. in connection with a break-in Monday at Julian's Foreign Car Repair on North Greene Street.

Detective Lee Garrish said Smith was charged with breaking and entering in connection with the case, while Pearson was charged with possession of stolen property.

Garrish said an estimated $2,500 worth of tools were taken in the break-in. The officer noted that all but about $200 worth of the tools have been recovered.

Pirates Hosting George Mason

East Carolina University's men return home for a single appearance Saturday night, hosting George Mason in an ECAC-South contest at 7:30 p.m.

The Pirates will again be attempting to shake a losing skid, having lost two in a row since they snapped a school record 12-game slide. They'll also be attempting to win their first league contest of the year.

But that attempt will come against the team picked by most to win the ECAC-South this year — although at this point they are a little off the mark.

The Patriots are only 3-2 in the league, trailing front-running Richmond by two games. The Pats are 15-3 overall, however.

East Carolina is currently 0-5 in the league and 3-14 overall.

Following the Mason game, the Pirates are off to the midwest for a pair of games in the state of Illinois. They face Eastern Illinois on Monday in Charleston, Ill., then travel on to Macomb, where they'll face Western Illinois. The two games are pay-backs for visits to Greenville in 1982.

The meeting with Mason will be the second for the two teams this year. The Patriots grabbed off an 83-66 victory in the first — the opening league game for both teams. In that game, Carlos Yates, who was supposed to continue a two-game suspension by Coach Joe Harrington, came off the bench instead to score 18 points and lead the Patriot scoring. He was aided by Ricky Wilson with 14, John Niehoff with 13 and Rob Nieberlein and Rob Rose, each with ten.

The Pats have won three of their last five, with both losses coming in league play — to William & Mary and Richmond.

East Carolina continues to be up and down on the court, playing at times with near brilliance and at other times like the rookie team it is. The Pirates start one senior, Tony Robinson, along with one sophomore and three freshmen.

Sophomore Curt Vanderhorst, however, has come on strong of recent, scoring in double figures the last three games, and hitting 20 or more in the last two. He has boosted his average to 9.9, best among the Pirates.

"Curt is playing with a lot of confidence now. He's looking for his shots and his teammates are looking for him to shoot the ball," Coach Charlie Harrison said.

Robinson currently has a 6.5 average. The other starters include Leon Bass, hitting 3.3; Derrick Battle, 6.0; and Keith Sledge, 5.2.

Another freshman, William Grady, scoring 6.5, has been playing well of late too.

The Pirates have lost — at least for now — two players in the last week. Bruce Peartree, a junior guard, has opted to put his emphasis on academics for the rest of the year and has also indicated he may transfer. Barry Wright, who missed the James Madison-Navy trip with bronchitis, is also no longer playing. Harrison said that Wright, too, is concentrating on academics now. "Barry won't play until he shows academic progress toward being a part of the team next year," Harrison said.

Yates, of course, is the star for the Patriots, but stopping him is not the answer, as seen by the scoring in the first meeting of the two when five scored in double figures. Yates, a 6-5 junior forward, currently averages 22.9 points a game and is pulling 4.6 rebounds. The leading rebounders are 6-5 sophomore forward Rose and 6-4 senior center Ricky Dillard, with 6.6 and 6.3 rebound averages, respectively. Rose is scoring 12.5 points while Dillard has a 7.6 average.

Also in double figures is Wilson, a 6-3 sophomore guard, at 16.4, while Niehoff, a 5-10 senior guard, is scoring 8.9 points a game.

Eastern Illinois is currently 8-9 with a game Saturday night against Illinois-Chicago on Saturday.

The Panthers are led by 6-4 sophomore forward Jon Collins at 18.9, while 6-11 sophomore Center Kevin Duckworth is scoring at an 11.8 pace and 6-5 sophomore guard Tim Tyss is hitting 11.2.

Western Illinois, meanwhile, is 10-8 following a 60-53 loss to Wisconsin-Green Bay Wednesday night. The Fighting Leathernecks have been experimenting with their starting lineup and have used a number of players as starters.

They are led, however, by 6-7 senior forward Todd Hutcheson, scoring 16.3 points a game.

J.D. Dykstra, one of their leading players, averaging 15.9 points a game, has been sidelined with a skull fracture, but may be ready to return in time for the ECU game. They have two other games prior to playing the Pirates.

ECU returns home the following Saturday to play host to William & Mary in an ECAC-South game.

"I know I've said it before, but this team is getting better, both individually and collectively," Harrison said of his youthful squad. "We're not as good as we need to be, but as long as we continue to improve and work hard, that's all I can ask of them. That, and that they go out and play to win."

"Right now I'm a little concerned about their being intimidated by Mason. We played scared up there at the start and never recovered," Harrison said.

National Honor Accorded Barnes

Ronnie Barnes, head athletic trainer for the New York Giants professional football team, has been named Professional Athletic Trainer of the Year by the National Athletic Trainers Association.

Winners of the award, now in its eighth year, are selected by their peers, the over 4,500 certified athletic trainers throughout the country.

Barnes will receive an inscribed plaque at ceremonies to be held Monday in Cincinnati, Ohio. Additionally, a $4,000 check will be donated in his name to the NATA Scholarship Fund. The Trainer of the Year Awards program is sponsored by Nutrament, a fitness and energy food.

A 1974 graduate of East Carolina University, Barnes has also done graduate work at East Carolina and holds a masters degree in health administration from Michigan State University.

Originally from Wilson and a graduate of Fike High School, Barnes became interested in the profession of athletic training while a junior in high school. "I was a good athlete, but not big enough to compete," Barnes said. "I weighed about 98 pounds. So I asked my coach how I could stay involved with athletics and he suggested athletic training. Then I got a scholarship to attend East Carolina and work in the training room."

After graduation, Barnes became East Carolina's first assistant trainer. From 1977-79 he served as assistant trainer at Michigan State while pursuing his masters.

Since 1975, Barnes has been associated with the New York Giants. He began by caring for the athletes at the Giants' summer camp. In 1979 he was named Director of Medical Services and assumed the position of Head Athletic Trainer in 1981.

Barnes has been active in the profession. He is a past president of the Michigan State Trainers Association and has worked to secure state licensure of athletic trainers in both Michigan and North Carolina.

He has served the NATA on its Board of Certification since 1979 and as chairman of the Examiners Development Committee of the Board of Certification.

Additionally, Barnes was appointed by the governor of North Carolina to serve on the Governor's Advisory Committee for Sports Medicine.

A teacher as well as a practitioner, Barnes has taught at East Carolina and at Michigan State.

He is the son of Mrs. W.R. Barnes of Rocky Mount and the late Mr. Barnes.

Can't Handle Nice Weather

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The sun was shining brightly. The temperatures were balmy. The wind was but a gentle breeze off Carmel Bay.

And some of golf's most celebrated names — including Tom Watson — simply couldn't handle the unaccustomed conditions at the 43rd Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

The tournament is famed for the howling winds, driving rain, occasional sleet and snow, squalls and storms that punish the three Monterey Peninsula courses and the men who play them.

This year, however, the weather has taken a 180 degree turn.

"Good weather," said Bob Murphy.

"Very pleasant conditions," said Thomas Gray.

"Perfect weather," said Jim Nelford.

Those three took advantage of the unusual Crosby conditions for 5-under-par 67s and tie for the first-round lead Thursday. Murphy, who scored his last victory nine years ago, and Nelford, a left-handed putter from Canada, played usually-tough Spyglass Hill. Gray, who shaved his beard this week to change the luck that has seen him miss the cut in his last three starts, was at Pebble Beach.

Cypress Point, which often yields some of the lowest scores in this old event, this time produced the most misery.

Watson, a two-time Crosby champion and winner of the first event of the season, had a 77. Johnny Miller, with a 40 on the front, and Fuzzy Zoeller, shot 74. Andy Bean had a 77. So did David Graham, a former U.S. Open and PGA champion. Jerry Pate was at 76.

Jack Nicklaus, making his first start of the season, offset an eagle and two birdies with a double bogey and two bogeys and matched par 72.

"The greens were very, very fast. You get on the wrong side of the hole, get the ball in the wrong position and you're in big trouble," said PGA champ Hal Sutton, one of the few able to handle Cypress with a 69.

Cris Collinsworth, the Cincinnati wide receiver, also handled it. He was the amateur partner of Mike Donald, who had a 74. Collinsworth, with an 18 handicap, helped the team a whopping 13 shots, giving them the pro-am lead at 61.

He was not the only amateur to gain attention, however. Singer Johnny Mathis scored a hole-in-one on the 15th at Cypress Point. Former President Gerald Ford, Nicklaus' partner, helped on three holes, giving the Nicklaus-Ford combo a 69 before the largest gallery of the day.

And Peter Ueberroth, chairman of the Los Angeles Olympics Organizing Committee, had to interrupt his round with pro Barry Jaekel to deny reports he had been named to

Lady Pirates Host Two

East Carolina's Lady Pirates play host to a pair of non-conference foes in games in Minges Coliseum Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

The Lady Pirates host East Tennessee State University Saturday at 3 p.m., while Georgia Tech visits ECU on Sunday, also at 3 p.m.

The Pirates will be trying to snap a two-game losing streak with the games. ECU lost road contests at South Carolina and William & Mary during the past week. The losses dropped the Pirates to 8-10 on the season. The latter loss was the first against an ECAC-South opponent in three starts.

East Tennessee brings in an 11-6 record, having won two of its last three games. The Lady Bucs are currently scoring 63.6 points a game while holding their opponents to just 60.

Oddly enough the leading scorer for the Lady Buccaneers doesn't start. She's Tammy Larkey, who plays about half the time. She is scoring at a 16.9 average while pulling 8.8 rebounds.

The starters feature two players in double figures, Regina Blair and Punkie Mills. Blair, a 6-1 junior forward, is hitting 14.2 points and is the leading rebounder at 9.6 per game. Mills, a 6-0, senior forward, has a 14.0 average.

The other starters are 6-3 senior Leigh Jaffke, 5.8 ppg; 5-8 freshman Kim Skala, 6.9; and 5-5 junior guard Lori Hines, 9.5.

East Carolina leads the series between the two schools, 4-2, but lost last season's meeting, 63-54. ECU won two years ago, in the last game played in Greenville, 76-63.

Georgia Tech, meanwhile, is 7-11 with a game Saturday night. The Lady Yellow Jackets are led by 5-7 senior guard Kate Brandt with a 15.6 average. She is the only one in double figures.

The other starters include 5-4 freshman guard Tory Ehle, 6-0 sophomore Jennifer Leachman, 5-8 senior forward Mary Rucker and 5-10 junior Cindy Cochran. Cochran has a 9.4 average, followed by Rucker at 8.4, Ehle at 8.4, and Leachman at 6.8.

Cochran and Rucker are the leading rebounders at 6.6 and 6.1, respectively.

The meeting between the two will be only the second. ECU beat the Lady Jackets, 80-46, two years ago in Atlanta.

The Lady Pirates starting lineup was uncertain, but is expected to include Jody Rodriguez and Sylvia Bragg at the guards, Lisa Squirewell and Annette Phillips at forwards and Darlene Hedges at center. Bragg is currently the leading scorer for the Pirates at 12.3, while Delphine Mabry, slowed by a leg injury, is hitting 10.4.

The leading rebounders are Phillips and Anita Anderson, both getting 5.6, while Hedges is pulling 5.2 per game.

Steelwheels Host Spinners

The Greenville Steelwheels will host the Palmetto Spinners from Greenville, S.C. Saturday at 7 p.m. in the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center gymnasium.

The Spinners come into the game with a 13-5 record and are still in the running for a National Wheelchair Basketball Association playoff berth.

The Steelwheels are now 7-9 on the season.

Golfer's Dilemma

replace Bowie Kuhn as Baseball Commissioner.

One stroke off the lead at 68 were Mark O'Meara and a pair of rookies, Willie Wood and Corey Pavin. Wee Willie and O'Meara played at Pebble Beach, Pavin at Cypress.

The group at 69 included Sutton and Hale Irwin, at Cypress; Jim Roy, Mark Hayes and Jodie Mudd, at Pebble Beach; and David Edwards at Spyglass.

Olympics Surrounded By Controversy

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Wars of fire and ice hit the XIV Olympic Winter Games today with disputes over ice hockey, speedskating and the traditional torch relay next summer overshadowing the approach of the Games.

With the Winter Olympics only four days away:

•An International Olympic Committee official said he was ready to question the amateur status of Finnish goaltender Hannu Kampure in a hockey hassle that potentially could involve as many as a dozen players from six nations, including the United States and Canada.

•Eric Heiden, who won five gold medals in speedskating at the 1980 Winter Olympics, was accused of abandoning his sport by a current U.S. speedskater, Erik Henriksen. Today, another U.S. speedskater backed Heiden's decision to retire from the sport.

•The IOC reaffirmed the Los Angeles organizers' right to stage a run for money at the '84 Summer Games. The Greeks today renewed their opposition to selling the relay to sponsors to raise money for charity. A Greek Olympic official said the people of Greece might bar the way to Olympia, the traditional starting point of the relay.

The Olympics get under way Tuesday with six hockey games, including a matchup of the United States and Canada. The game took on added significance when the U.S. Olympic Committee said it would protest the eligibility of four Canadian players. The Canadians have hinted they will expose the questionable eligibility of two players on the 1980 U.S. team, which won the gold medal at Lake Placid, N.Y.

Willi Daume, chairman of the IOC's Eligibility Committee, said Thursday that Kampure "did not follow the rules." Kampure played in one game with the Edmonton Oilers of the defunct World Hockey Association in 1979.

The IOC, ruling body of the Games, has the authority to declare any athlete ineligible.

As Daume questioned Kampure's eligibility, the Finns said they would question the eligibility of 10 players from six nations. It was not immediately known what other nations or players might be dragged into the dispute.

The U.S. has been more specific about its questions concerning the amateur status of four Canadian players: Mark Morrison, Dan Wood, Mario Gosselin and Don Dietrich. Morrison played in nine games for the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League two years ago, while the other three are under contract to NHL teams.

Representatives of the USOC and Canadian Olympic officials are to meet on Monday to discuss the dispute, according to F. Don Miller, executive director of the United States governing body.

Miller said today, "We will not file any protest until after we've had that meeting."

In an interview at the Olympic Village Thursday, Henriksen, 25, of Champaign, Ill., told The Associated Press that Heiden had "disappeared from our sport for four years," at a time when speedskating "could have used a personality, an Arnold Palmer-type of personality, someone who could court public exposure."

Four years ago at Lake Placid, N.Y., Heiden became the first Olympian to win five individual medals in one Games, capturing all the men's events. After the Games, the taciturn, semi-reclusive Heiden played club hockey in Norway, then became a professional bicycle racer.

"He won everything there was to win," U.S. speedskater Kent Thometz of Minnetonka, Minn., said today. "There is really no point in skating anymore when you do that."

The preparations are complete for the first Winter Games in a Communist country and the official opening ceremony is on Wednesday.

The men's downhill is the first medal event of the Olympics, scheduled for noon Thursday Sarajevo time, which is 6 a.m. EST.

Meanwhile, the International Olympic Committee began a two-day meeting Thursday at which its director, Monique Berlioux, upheld L.A.'s right to pursue sponsorship money for its Olympic flame relay.

The organizers of the 1984 Summer Games plan to charge sponsors $3,000 per kilometer for the U.S. leg of the traditional torch run that will deliver the Olympic Flame from Greece to the Summer Games' opening ceremony next July 28. The money will be donated to charity.

Despite the philanthropic intent, the plan drew fire from the mayor of Olympia, where the flame begins its journey. The Greeks complained about commercialization of the relay.

"If they go ahead with it, we may tell the IOC that if they want the torch lit at Olympia, they'll have to come and do it themselves," Greek IOC member Nikos Filaretos told the AP today. "And they might just find the way barred because there is considerable public feeling about it."

Filaretos and Nikolaos Nissiotias, another Greek IOC member, planned to meet later today with Juan Antonio Samaranch, IOC president.

"The Olympic torch and the flame are the property of the IOC, not of Olympia," Berlioux said Thursday. "... we decided on the details of the torch relay, and we had already approved Los Angeles' plans last November."

Wake Downs Ga. Tech

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

WINSTON-SALEM — All No. 15 Wake Forest wanted was a second chance, and when the Demon Deacons got it, they took advantage of it and claimed a 78-74 overtime victory over 18th-ranked Georgia Tech.

Guard Delaney Rudd gave his team that extra opportunity when he sank his jumper from the corner with 35 seconds left in regulation. He then contributed seven points in the overtime to guide Wake Forest to an Atlantic Coast Conference victory.

The victory raised Wake Forest's record to 14-4, 3-4 in the ACC.

"I knew if we could get it into overtime, we could do the things that got us the lead," Rudd said.

Wake Forest's first chance seemed to be safe when it built a 52-37 lead on the strength of a 12-4 run after intermission. Georgia Tech retaliated with an 18-4 explosion in the next seven minutes to pull to within 56-55 at the 7:27 mark.

After Mark Cline hit a 15-footer, layups by John Salley and Anthony Byrd and two technical free throws by Mark Price gave the Yellow Jackets a 61-58 lead with 4:05 left.

"A number of things led to their comeback," Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy said. "They are a very good team and we knew they were capable of making a couple of runs. We showed some impatience on offense during their comeback."

Anthony Teachey scored on an alley-oop for Wake Forest, while Byrd hit the front end of a one-and-one to give Georgia Tech a 62-60 edge with 44 seconds left. It looked as though the Demon Deacons would hold for the final shot when Rudd fired away just nine seconds later.

"We just took the shot that was open. You can't wait too long," Rudd said. "If you wait too long, you might not get it back."

Price missed Georgia Tech's

last-gasp for victory with two seconds left.

Rudd scored on a layup and Teachey added a dunk to get Wake Forest ahead by four in the overtime. The Demon Deacons charged to a 73-68 lead before the Yellow Jackets mounted one last drive and got to within 74-72 on Byrd's jumper with 36 seconds left.

Cline and Rudd hit two free throws apiece, however, putting Georgia Tech away.

"It was a great basketball game," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said. "I'm really proud of our kids. They played their hearts out."

"We have a very young team.

We're going to learn," he added.

Anthony Teachey led Wake Forest with 22 points on 10 of 11 from the field. He has now hit 17 of his last 18 field goal attempts. Rudd finished with 15, while Danny Young had 14, Cline added 11 and Kenny Green scored 10.

Price led Georgia Tech, 14-5 and 4-4, with 18 points. Byrd, who replaced an injured Bruce Dalrymple, scored 15 points. Yvon Joseph chipped in 13 and Salley had 12.

Dalrymple suffered a leg injury in the first half and was taken to a Winston-Salem hospital for treatment. He is a probable starter for Saturday's game at Maryland.

Ross, Faison Hold Onto Scoring Lead

Reggie Ross and Cora Faison continue to lead the area's scoring races in games played through Thursday. The two have led the race the past three weeks.

Ross, of Chocowinity, paces the boys' attack with a 19.1 average, followed by Greene Central's Theodore Edwards at 18.7. Third is Farmville Central's Kent Hardy with a 16.9 mark.

Faison, of Ayden-Grifton, holds a 20.4 average, while D.H. Conley's Mechio Kornegay continues second at 19.8. Kornegay led the area in the first report, four weeks ago. Third is Greenville Christian's Kathy Vernelson, up to 18.8 this week.

Trinity Christian is the leading boys' offensive team at 61.6, just ahead of Jamesville at 61.3. Trinity is also the leader in defense at 44.6 allowed per game. Rozier's Comments 'Misunderstood'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Reporters misunderstood Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier's comments about receiving help from alumni while he played football at the University of Nebraska, his attorney says.

"When the interview was conducted, he didn't really have an opportunity to explain the situation," said Art Wilkinson, a Philadelphia lawyer who represents about 40 athletes, including the All-America running back.

The Pittsburgh Press quoted Rozier Wednesday as saying he "had some people send me money" and "some alumni helped me out" during the 1983 season at Nebraska when he became the second player in major college football history to gain 2,000 yards rushing in a single season.

Wilkinson said Thursday that Rozier, now earning $3.1 million in a three-year contract with the Pittsburgh Maulers of the United States Football League, got by in college with the help of gifts from his family and neighborhood friends, and dinners from enthusiastic Nebraska alumni.

According to Wilkinson, the running back didn't get a chance to explain himself, and his interview was cut short between practice sessions at the Maulers' training camp in Melbourne, Fla.

Press reporter Ron Cook said Thursday night that Rozier, in another conversation, said he had not been misquoted but clarified his earlier remarks. Cook, who said he planned to write another story about Rozier's comments, did not elaborate.

Wilkinson also denied another published report that Rozier had accepted gifts from people working for his former representative, Mike Trope, and other potential agents.

"That's entirely incorrect," said Wilkinson. "I know it through my association with Mike and his family. They just aren't that kind of people."

"I think I've become a pretty good judge of the type of person who's going to take money and who isn't, and when Mike tells me he didn't, I've got to believe him," Wilkinson said.

Wilkinson said that Rozier was referring to having dinner with some of the alumni when he said he had received help.

"He wasn't talking about cars or anything like that," said the lawyer. "There are alumni from all schools who are excited about having some kind of contact with ballplayers."

Wilkinson said Rozier had received gifts of money from his family in Camden, N.J., and "neighborhood folks who cared about him."

"They weren't sending money because he was an athlete, but because they were longtime friends of the family."

A New Turn In Loni Anderson's Life

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Loni Anderson's life has taken a 180-degree turn — professionally and personally.

She's put her romance with Burt Reynolds on the back burner, starred in her first melodrama, packed daughter Diedre off to college and acquired an entirely new look.

For the first time in her life, too, Loni is living alone.

The most startling of Loni's changes is visual. Gone is the soft, muzzy halo. The bangs have disappeared. Her blond hair is longer, giving her a sophisticated, woman-of-the-world look.

She's down to a size 2 and looks to be no heavier than 100 pounds. But Loni, unlike many another star who has lost weight, doesn't appear anorexic.

Her new look may be seen Feb. 5 when Loni stars in ABC-TV's two-hour movie, "My Mother's Secret Life," playing a high-priced San Francisco call girl whose 16-year-old daughter turns up unexpectedly.

Her role is the antithesis of the sweet, cuddly Jennifer she played for four years in "WKRP in Cincinnati." The part also is a dramatic switch from Loni's three previous TV films and her co-starring role with Reynolds in "Stroker Ace."

"My Mother's Secret Life" is a calculated risk for the diminutive, wide-eyed Loni, an attempt to break a mold.

"I've wanted to change my look personally and professionally for quite a while," Loni said. "When I did 'WKRP' too much attention was paid to my figure. I wanted to go beyond that."

"Until now I had a total Jennifer look. It's time for me to look different, try different things and go in different directions."

"It would have been inappropriate for the hooker I play to look like Jennifer. When I met our director, Robert Markowitz, he said I looked soft and vulnerable. The hooker is hard as nails without any feelings for anyone."

"I never played anyone hard and tough. My teeth and dimples are never seen in the film. I never smile. The hardest thing I had to do was be emotionless.

"Being the mother of a teenager myself, it was really difficult to fight my maternal instincts in scenes with the girl who plays my daughter. I had to kill any hint of vulnerability. I guess I did. The crew began calling me 'the ice queen.'"

Loni is, in fact, a clone of Jennifer inside and out.

Among actresses her age, with her professional experience, twice married and divorced, a mother and actress, Loni is remarkably naive and trusting. There is an aura of vulnerability, not to say innocence, about her.

She never uses vulgar language. She can still blush, and frequently does. She is an instinctive lady who generates gentlemanly behavior from the men she works and plays with.

It would sound ridiculous coming from another actress, but Loni was convincing when she said playing a hooker was a traumatic experience.

"Ellen Blake is a woman who takes money for sex," she said. "She turns three tricks in the film, and that scared me. In one suggestive, semi-nude scene I had to remove myself intellectually and emotionally from the character. "Going to bed with a man for money is something I couldn't do in a million years."

"TALK TO ME, PART II"

Gilmore, Knox Want Candidates In Debate

GREENSBORO (AP) — Tom Gilmore and Eddie Knox say they would like to see televised debates between gubernatorial candidates because the public can't make "intelligent decisions based on canned half-minute political ads."

"A discussion of the issues is much better than short commercials and useless slogans," Gilmore, a former state legislator, said Thursday night at a forum sponsored by the state Association of Community-Based Alternatives for Youth.

Meanwhile, a third Democratic candidate for governor — Lauch Faircloth — outlined a three-part plan to upgrade the "Willie M" program that provides treatment for disturbed youths who display aggressive behavior. Six other Democratic hopefuls pledged to support programs for troubled youngsters at the forum.

In a letter to David Price, chairman of the state Democratic Party, Gilmore said the party should take the lead in organizing debates so that all the candidates could participate.

"If ... you feel that you cannot take such an active role in this process, perhaps you could facilitate our finding another neutral party to work with this concept," Gilmore said.

Gilmore suggested that public television be asked to broadcast the debates. Knox, however, last month sent letters to every TV station in the state asking that they participate by donating air time. Knox said the League of Women Voters or "another impartial public interest group" could moderate the debates.

Knox, in a letter to a Raleigh television station, said he was "amazed at how a few talented advertising people can slickly package a candidate to make him look impressive in these quick 30-second spots. They are, in many cases, quite deceptive."

"The public cannot make intelligent decisions based on canned half-minute-long commercials. Candidates cannot afford to purchase enough time on television to present a true reflection of their stance on the issues. In many cases the most that can be communicated is an image which may or may not be true," said Knox, former Charlotte mayor.

Elsewhere in the campaign, Faircloth told the community alternatives group in Greensboro that the Willie M program needed to be strengthened without excessive spending. The Legislature has budgeted $22 million to help some 1,000 people classified as Willie M youngsters.

"People in this state are compassionate," said Faircloth, former state commerce secretary. "And they want a compassionate government. But people also have a built-in concern about such a rapid increase of public expenditures."

Faircloth recommended a three-pronged approach to the Willie M program, including:

— Ensuring the public Willie M funds are "being spent in most effective manner possible."

— Organizing cooperation between the various communities running the program.

— Making sure that youths referred to the program are qualified.

State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, also a candidate for governor, spoke in favor of programs for young people, saying "without them there is no tomorrow."

Candidate Rufus Edmisten, state attorney general, called community-based alternative programs "absolutely essential for an effective continuum of services for our youth." He promised to boost the current $4.5 million devoted by the state to such programs until it reaches "in excess of $17 million per year eight years from now."

Gilmore also said he would increase the program's funding, while Knox said he was encouraged by the decline in juvenile crime.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, another gubernatorial candidate, criticized the court-ordered Willie M program.

"This program has, in effect, moved to the front of the waiting line a specific class or group of children for whom the state must provide special services, to the exclusion of all others," said Green.

"My own thoughts about this issue — and I am not alone in expressing them — is that the federal court was not the place to address it," Green said. "And it raises the possibilities that there may be other so-called special cases that may attempt to find solutions in the judicial system."

Victim Is Moved Out-Of-State

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A 15-year-old sexual abuse victim who spent 10 months in protective custody as a witness in a child molestation case was sent to an out-of-state boarding school to give her "one chance to begin a normal life," a prosecutor says.

The girl is a witness against six men accused of sex and perversion charges involving using her as a prostitute when she was 12 years old. All six defendants are free on bail.

Deputy District Attorney James Reilly said Thursday the girl had been held in custody because of a death threat against her and a prosecutor and because she was considered a potential runaway.

Supreme Court Rules Dealership Responsible

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — An automobile dealership can be held liable for the death of a man killed after he stopped because a wheel on his new car came off, the state Supreme Court has ruled.

John O. Hairston was killed on Interstate 85 after the wheel to his car fell off. His wife, Betty, had asked for damages from Haygood Lincoln-Mercury Inc.
Testimony indicated that Hairston was examining his car when a van parked behind him was rammed into Hairston's car. The Court of Appeals had ruled that loose lug nuts allowing the wheel to come off were not the proximate cause of death, but the Supreme Court said "from evidence presented at trial the jury could reasonably infer that defendant's negligence was a proximate cause of Hairston's death."

The court also ruled Thursday that two plants near Tarboro may not switch electricity suppliers from the municipality to Virginia Power and Electric Co.

The coe-bit Polylok Corp. and its subsidiary, Polylok Finishing Corp., located about a mile from Tarboro, were required by law to stay with the city system because reasonable service had been provided since 1970 and Polylok doesn't fall into any assigned electrical area.

The ruling upheld a 4-3 decision by the state Utilities Commission and reverses one by the North Carolina Court of Appeals.

In other rulings:
— The court found no error in the murder conviction of Anne Speight Hinson in the 1982 Scotland County slaying of her husband, David Floyd Hinson and in two rape convictions against James Harden Horner of Chatham County, who was convicted of raping his 9-year-old daughter.

— Don Orlando Lattimore of Rowan County was ordered resentenced after the court decided his 40 years plus life was too harsh for second-degree murder and attempted armed robbery.

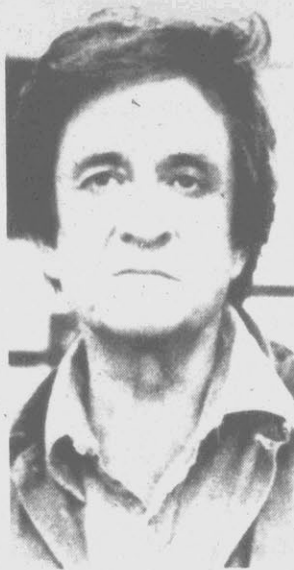

— No error was found in the case of Grover Franklin Bauguss of Wilkes County, convicted of first-degree murder in perpetration of a felony, although Justice James Exum dissented from that decision. Bauguss had claimed the trial judge erred in denying a motion to suppress some evidence.

— The court found the trial judge "did not err in finding as an aggravating factor that the defendant committed perjury at trial" in the armed robbery conviction of George Harris Thompson of Cleveland County.

— The conviction of Lesly Jean of Onslow County on three charges of first-degree sexual assault and one count of rape and two consecutive life sentences were upheld by the Supreme Court with Exum dissenting. Attorneys for Jean had argued that the trial judge erred in denying motions to suppress the victim's identity and in not allowing defense attorneys access to the victim's statements before voir dire cross examinations.

— The court also reversed and remanded a Granville County malpractice case after plaintiffs said the trial judge was mistaken in not making special instructions to the jury. The jury had found Dr. Charles W. Stout not negligent in treating Marie Wall. Suits seeking damages were filed against Stout by Mrs. Wall's guardian ad litem, Betsy Sanders, and Mrs. Wall's husband, J. Garfield Wall.

HEADS HOME — Johnny Cash is heading home this weekend after spending 45 days at a drug rehabilitation center in Rancho Mirage, Calif., to overcome a dependence on painkillers. The medication was taken while being treated for pneumonia and a stomach ulcer. His wife, June, says the entertainer "lost quite a bit of weight" during hospitalization. (AP Laserphoto)

Medical First

The first woman physician in the U.S., Elizabeth Blackwell, was born on this day in 1821. When Geneva College medical school admitted her, they had been confident she wouldn't accept. But in 1849 Miss Blackwell graduated at the head of her class. Later, she established a hospital in New York with an all-woman staff. Presently one of every six doctors in the U.S. is a woman. In the Soviet Union, four of every five doctors are women.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, FEB. 4, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Although there can be some possible upsets early in the day, you will find that it is possible for you to maintain some pretty definite advancement towards future goals.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) While secretive situations are working themselves out, you have the time to plan the future more wisely.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You may be disappointed by a friend in the morning, but later you find that others are congenial and helpful.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can handle outside duties very well, except in the early morning, so keep busy. The evening is fine for socializing.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) There may be some small change in some venture you have started, but take this in your stride.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Some small slight on the part of your mate should be forgotten and more thought can bring greater happiness. Drive wisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may not agree on one point with partners, but be willing to compromise and all is well. Attend a social function.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get at those important duties for which you have little time during the busy work week. Take health treatments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Fine another kind of pleasure that does not cost too much so that you need not get into debt. Avoid an irate loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get that situation at home fixed up before you go out on the town, as you want to do. Conversations prove interesting.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be more careful in driving and then you can visit friends and relatives. Be careful with money today, too.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Even if one financial affair is disappointment, look into various other that can prove to be most successful.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Carry through with plans you made instead of doing something drastic. Go after your personal aims in the evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will easily get tired of projects begun and will quickly turn to other things, so teach to be more persevering. Teach to be more objective and avoid hypersensitivity and a martyr complex. Emphasize sports and health.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

You can't afford to relax when playing a hand. One moment of absentmindedness can cost you your contract, as this hand from the Far East Championships demonstrates.

If the auction looks rather strange, it is because the Australian ladies were using some unusual conventions. South's bid of two clubs inquired about two-card major suits, and two diamonds denied one. Three clubs asked for four-card suits up the line, and the heart fit was belatedly uncovered. South showed good judgment in being satisfied with four hearts; she knew there would be wasted values in diamonds. West led a low spade. Declarer rose with dummy's ace, then cashed the high diamonds for three club discards. The nine of hearts was covered by the jack and won by the ace, and a spade was led to the jack and king.

East made a valiant attempt to defeat the contract by continuing with another diamond. Declarer ruffed with the seven and North discarded her remaining spade. This was the end position:

Declarer cashed the ace of clubs and then led the queen of spades. West ruffed with the six and dummy overruffed with the queen. Declarer ruffed a club in hand for her ninth trick, and all she had to do for her game-going trick was to ruff a spade with the five of trumps. If East overruffed, the ten of trumps would be high.

Unfortunately, declarer had apparently lost track of the trump spot cards, and she ruffed with dummy's two. East overruffed with the three, cashed the king to draw declarer's last trumps, and scored the ten of diamonds for the setting trick.

Bargains In Auto Insurance

By CRAIG WEBB
RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina's auto insurance rates may have been created equal, but bargains abound today.

Smart consumers can cut their premiums substantially by shopping for the best liability, collision and comprehensive auto coverage. Some drivers might want to switch to another company — or to two companies. Others need only check with their agents to make sure they are getting the cheapest possible rates.

Trying to save money was pretty futile prior to 1977, because few companies offered lower rates than the industry standard.

Then and now, all insurance companies must file a joint request to offer a certain type of insurance. Individual firms can ask to deviate below that rate, but hardly any did because most felt they weren't making enough money even with charges at the legal limit.

Changes began to occur in 1977, when the General Assembly let companies invoke rate hikes over the insurance commissioner's objection. Money from the increases has to be held until after the courts rule on whether the commission or the industry was right. Usually the industry wins.

Insurance companies got extra relief in 1981 when the old 6 percent limit on rate increases was changed to one tied to the Consumer Price

Index. Even that limit was dropped last year.

The result has been a flowering of rate reductions.

Thirty-eight firms now offer reduced rates under various circumstances, Lamar Gunter of the North Carolina Insurance News Service said. Some of the biggest — including Nationwide, Travelers and Farm Bureau — offer deviations of 10 percent.

Standard Guaranty leads the pack with a rate 22 percent below the normal rate, while Integon Indemnity Co. gives a 21 percent rate cut to drivers who have three or more points on their record.

Besides checking around for good rates, drivers also can:

- Raise the deductible, which is the amount a driver must pay on a loss before the insurance company takes over. Hiking a $100 deductible to $200 can cut collision and comprehensive rates 25 percent, said John Watkins, assistant director of the North Carolina Rate Bureau. Even a $500 deductible may be worthwhile if a high-priced auto is involved.

- Re-examine whether collision insurance is needed for an older car because companies pay for damages totaling only up to the vehicle's book value as determined by various rating companies.

"If you've got a $100 to $200 premium and the car is worth only $400, do you want to pay that much?" Gunter asked.

- Get policies from different companies for liability and collision coverage if the combination produces a lower total cost.

- Keep an eye on mileage. Companies figure rates in part on whether the vehicle is used for pleasure, for driving to work more or less than 10 miles one way, for business or for farm use. A Charlotte resident with no points on his record pays $199 a year for liability coverage if he drives more than 10 miles to work, but just $151 if he drives less.

- Join a car pool. People who handle driving duties no more than two days a week or two weeks out of every five, going more than 10 miles one way, can save 24 percent if they live in a city and 31 percent if their house is in the country.

- Keep a car's insurance costs in mind when deciding whether to buy it. The industry rates vehicles by their accident rate and repair costs, and uses those ratings to figure the cost of collision and comprehensive insurance.

- A Pontiac Firebird Trans Am, for example, costs $126 more a year for collision and comprehensive coverage than autos with similar showroom prices. Meanwhile, a Buick Regal Limited 4-door sedan could save a driver $113 a year below the rates for a comparably priced auto.

— Fight being ceded to the Reinsurance Facility. That's the pool where the insurance companies put drivers whom they consider too risky to insure themselves (state law forbids the companies from rejecting a prospective customer outright). All the state's insurance companies share losses incurred by the drivers in the facility, but they also give up any profits those drivers cause by going without accidents.

Because the facility's rates are supposed to pay their own way, people decided to it with points on their record pay a base rate that's 10 percent to 14 percent higher than those in the so-called "voluntary" market.

For a Charlotte-based driver with one minor traffic ticket who commutes less than 10 miles to work, the rate in the facility is $277. The rate from a regular insurer would be $195.

The important thing to remember is that one company's risky driver could be another's likely good customer. Therefore, drivers who discover they are going to be put in the facility should contact other companies. The other firms might consider those drivers less of a risk — and thus offer lower rates.

New Jersey Has Gamblers' Clinic

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey, opening its first clinic to treat some of the state's estimated 65,000 compulsive gamblers, will offer round-the-clock crisis help and won't bill patients for counseling, but will charge for laboratory tests, officials say.

About 250 compulsive gamblers and their families will be treated annually at the Mental Health Institute at John F. Kennedy Medical Center, Riley Regan, director of the state Division of Alcoholism, said Wednesday.

At the center, a $70,000 state grant will fund the Compulsive Gambling Treatment Center, which will provide social and medical services and referrals.
