Kremlin Announces Yuri Andropov Died Thursday

By ROXINNE ERVASTI

Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — President Yuri V. Andropov died Thursday at age 69, the Soviet Union announced today. He led the Communist Party for 15 months, ailing and out of public view the final six months of his leadership.

The announcement of his death ended months of reports that he was seriously ill with kidney and heart problems and suffering from diabetes. He had not been seen in public since Aug. 18, when he met with nine U.S. Democratic senators. The Kremlin withheld announcement of his death for nearly 24 hours, and there was no word on a possible successor.

But if the Kremlin rulers decide to turn over the reins of power to a younger generation, the names most frequently mentioned are Grigory V. Romanov, 61, and Mikhail S. Gorbachev, 52.

Andropov's death was announced at 2:20 p.m. (6:20 a.m. EST) by the official Soviet news agency Tass, on its English-language wire. Tass said he died Thursday, but did not give a cause of death.

The only official comment on Andropov's health came when he missed the early November parade through Red Square. Officials said then he was suffering from a cold.

Andropov's brief tenure was marked by a deterioration of relations with the United States and the rupture of talks between the superpowers on limiting both strategic and medium range nuclear weapons. Relations were subject to additional strain on Sept. 1, 1982 when the Soviet Union shot down a South Korean jetliner with the loss of 269 lives.

Andropov, former head of the KGB secret police for 15 years, took the leadership of the nation of 280 million people after the death of President Leonid I. Brezhnev on Nov. 9, 1982. Brezhnev led the country for 18 years.

He started a campaign to crack down on corruption and enhance labor discipline and had placed his proteges in many key positions of the Soviet hierarchy.

Although Andropov was known to be ailing, the Kremlin issued a series of statements and speeches bearing his name and officials continued to insist until the end that he was functioning and making decisions.

The Soviet people heard the news when a black-suited announcer read the death announcement slowly and sullenly on Soviet television. He said:

"The Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, the Presidium of the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers with deep sorrow inform the party and the entire Soviet people that Yuri Vladimirovich Andropov, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, president of the Presidium of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet, died after a long illness at 16 hours 50 minutes on Feb. 9, 1984.

Andropov, an outstanding leader of the Communist Party and of the Soviet state, a staunch fighter for the ideals of Communism and for peace, will always remain in the hearts of the Soviet people of the whole progressive humanity."

The same report followed shortly afterward on the Russian language Tass wire and Soviet television showed a photograph of the Kremlin, interrupting its programming.

City Council Acts To Streamline Meetings

By TOM BAINES

Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council took steps toward streamlining its meeting format Thursday night with the adoption of a resolution implementing the use of a consent agenda that will apply to business items deemed routine and noncontroversial.

The move, aimed at expediting the public business of the board, will allow the council to consolidate business the city manager feels can be handled as a single item through one motion. All other business on the regular agenda will be considered in the conventional one-by-one fashion.

For years, the council has faced meeting agendas that often included an assortment of routine items that required board action but generally warranted little more discussion than a motion for approval and a vote. When those items were accompanied by several controversial agenda matters, meetings were lengthy.

Under the new format, "there shall be no debate or discussion by any member of the council regarding any item on the consent agenda, beyond asking questions for simple clarification." If a council member objects to inclusion of an item on the consent agenda, that item will be considered individually.

The resolution stated that "it is desirable to expedite the public business and provide additional time for deliberation by the council on matters requiring such deliberation." The board gave the resolution unanimous approval.

After adopting the new format, the council put the vehicle to use as it approved five items of business under the consent agenda segment with a single motion of approval.

During regular business, the council followed the recommendation of the Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission in approving a request for annexation of section five of Westhaven subdivision, located south of Club Pines and east of Westhaven. The property, containing about 40 lots, involves 18,433 acres. The developers will install water and sewer at their expense.

In a related item, the council continued until the March meeting consideration of a request to rezone section five of Westhaven from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to R-9 (residential). The attorney representing Derek Dunn, the developer, requested the continuance.

A request by Landvest Enterprises and Carl Darden to rezone the Lorane C. Hamilton property, involving .529 acres, at the northwest corner of Fifth and Holly streets was approved. The developers sought rezoning from office and institutional to R-6 (residential).

The council endorsed a request by Dr. James M. Williamson to rezone

Israeli Jets Raid Syrian-Held Ridge

By G.G. LABELLE

Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli jets attacked targets on a Syrian-held mountain ridge east of Beirut today, the state radio said. American and European nationals began evacuating the war-ravaged Lebanese capital.

As many as 12 Israeli jets bombed and strafed military positions in and around the central mountain town of Bhamdoun, nine miles southeast of Beirut on the road to Damascus, setting off several fires, the radio said.

It said the air strike was apparently in retaliation for the firing of three Katyusha rockets into northern Israel from southern Lebanon.

The "Voice of the Mountain" radio station of Druse leader Walid Jumblatt and his Progressive Socialist Party also reported the air raid and said Druse insurgents were firing ground-to-air missiles at the aircraft.

In Tel Aviv, a military spokesman said warplanes struck two buildings used as staging points for attacks against Israeli forces, and hit several artillery pieces. All of the targets were destroyed and all Israeli planes returned safely, the spokesman said.

It was the first Israeli air raid against guerrilla bases in Lebanon since Jan. 4, when Shiite Moslem militia targets in Baalbek were bombed.

Israel Radio also reported today that Israeli tanks and armored personnel carriers crossed Israel's Awali bridge front-line in south Lebanon and moved to within seven miles of Beirut on the coastal road. It said the patrol reached the bridge at Damour, a Christian-held area, before turning back.

Reports of the Israeli raid came as American, British, Canadian, Australian and Cypriot citizens assembled on a seafont boulevard in mostly Moslem west Beirut for evacuation by helicopter.

Shiite Moslem militias seized control of the western sector this week and units of the Lebanese army defected to the rebels.

Shooting and shelling continued along the frontier between Beirut's Moslem and Christian sectors as the evacuation proceeded.

The visitation and observation will be carried out by state education representatives who will make recommendations to the committee which will make the final selection from the three finalists.

Hunt Spends A Busy Day Campaigning In County

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

Gov. Jim Hunt, campaigning for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate, toured the TRW plant and Pitt Community College in Greenville Thursday, then visited A.C. Monk Co. in Farmville, before traveling to Fayetteville.

Hunt said his visit to Greenville was made "to talk about the great needs of agriculture" and to "visit some of the fine industrial companies."

At TRW, Hunt said "we have to have strong policies" in the field of agriculture, and "a strong and competitive economy," as well as "a strong defense."

Plant Manager John McGara

briefed the governor, Hunt's Pitt County campaign manager Kenneth Dews, and Tom Taft, a Democratic candidate for the state Senate, on TRW operations and discussed the need for training skilled workers and being competitive in world markets.

The talks also revealed that many TRW workers were raised on local area farms but sought non-farm employment.

McGara, who said TRW is a leading supplier of rack and pinion steering components and suspension ball joints for vehicles, said TRW began operations in Greenville in the spring of 1979 with 87 employees. Today, McGara said, the plant employs 260 workers operating on three shifts.

Following the tour of the plant, Hunt said TRW is "one of the best" industries in the state and among the best in the world.

The governor also stressed the necessity of having good jobs, such as TRW provides, available to North Carolinians and a good educational system to "train our young people for jobs."

At lunch at Parker's Barbecue Restaurant on Memorial Drive, Hunt circulated through the restaurant, speaking to customers and asking for their support in his bid to unseat Republican Sen. Jesse Helms.

"One of the main reasons I'm running," he told one group of customers, "is to do something for agriculture."

"I picked a good day to visit the campus," Hunt told Pitt Community College President Charlie Russell during an afternoon visit to the campus, and congratulated Russell on his confirmation as president of the school.

Russell had been acting president at PCC since June 1, 1983. He was elected president by the school's board of trustees late last month and the election was confirmed Thursday morning by the State Board of Community Colleges.

During his visit to PCC, Hunt toured a number of classes and talked with students and faculty members, stressing the importance of a good education.

Hunt asked one class "what needs to be done to get the word out" about the availability of vocational and technical education programs.

Responding, the students suggested

I was told about being able to help someone stay on a life-support machine by saving cigarette packages. Where can I get more information? E.H.

Hotline has dealt with this question several times over the years. There is no market for used cigarette packs and no way they can be redeemed for assisting one's fellow man, so far as we've ever been able to ascertain.

Brewer is president and treasurer of Rivers and Associates Consulting Engineers Inc., president of Holly Ridge Development Corp. and vice president of Brewer and Marshall Construction Co.

Brewer received a bachelor's degree in mathematics in 1971 from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and a bachelor's degree in civil engineering in 1974 from North Carolina State University.

He is a member of the Professional Engineers of North Carolina, National Society of Professional Engineers, North Carolina Wastewater Treatment Plant Operators, North Carolina Water Works Operators Association, Greenville Kiwanis Club, Memorial Baptist Church and Pitt-Greenville Home Builders Association. Currently, he is serving as secretary and treasurer of the home builders organization.

"I feel, with Donnie's outstanding qualifications that he will have a tremendous impact on the promotion of housing for the people of North Carolina. We are pleased to have him serve on the Housing Commission," Green said.

Endorsements For Candidates

RALEIGH (AP) — The U.S. Chamber of Commerce has endorsed the re-election bid of Republican U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, while his Democratic opponent, Gov. Jim Hunt, won the backing of North Carolina's largest black organization.

Helms, who has a 91 percent voting rating from the chamber of commerce on business issues, won its endorsement despite the efforts of Hunt lobbyists, who asked the group to withhold an endorsement.

DONNIE W. BREWER

The 11-member North Carolina Housing Commission was created by the 1983 General Assembly to oversee and update the state housing action plan. In addition to Brewer, the lieutenant governor, who has three of the 11 appointments, has appointed Ed Tipton of Greenville and Joe E. Harris Sr. of Elkin.

John A. Kochevar, public affairs manager for the national chamber, said Thursday that North Carolina chamber members supported Helms' endorsement by a 7-1 margin.

The General Baptist State Convention, which comprises most of the state's predominantly black Baptist churches, said Thursday it was endorsing Hunt. The convention has about 400,000 members.

It is the largest statewide group to endorse candidates in North Carolina.

Man Prescribes Female Doctor For His Wife

DEAR ABBY: I am 38 and my wife is 37. We've been married for 18 years and I love her with all my heart. So here's the problem: It bothers me that she goes to a male doctor. I have asked her to find a woman doctor, but she says she likes her doctor and doesn't want to change.

I can't stop thinking about the fact that another man sees my wife's body, and it's tearing me up inside. I know it sounds sick, but I can't help it. We have two children, and I don't know how I ever got through it. I try to hide my feelings, but I always end up hurting her.

I can't for the life of me understand why a woman would want to go to a man doctor. I would never have a woman for my doctor. Never!

Help me deal with this, Abby.
UPSET IN BALTIMORE

DEAR UPSET: Pity you would never have a woman doctor because one examination by a competent female physician would convince you that her interest in your body is strictly professional.

I assure you, your wife's physician gets about as "turned on" looking at your wife's body as an automobile mechanic looking for a leak in the radiator. If you can't overcome this hang-up without professional help, I advise you to get it.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't throw this away thinking its from some foolish little girl because I'm 22 and consider this a serious problem. My boyfriend is a Seventh-Day Adventist and he says his religion doesn't approve of jewelry of any kind, so I shouldn't expect a wedding ring!

Maybe I'm silly, but I can't imagine being married without one. Does it say somewhere in the Bible that wedding rings are a sin? I know I won't die without one, but all my married friends have wedding bands, and I won't feel really married without one.

WANTS A RING

DEAR WANTS: It's true, there is no "wedding ring" in the marriage ceremony of the Seventh-Day Adventists.

The church frowns on jewelry, but some members do not consider a wedding band "jewelry," and after they are married they wear them on their own. It is not a sin.

You are apparently not a Seventh-Day Adventist, so I advise you to talk to a local pastor of the church and ask for some educational material about what is expected of members.

Recent Brides Honored Saturday

A dinner party was held Saturday night at the Roanoke Valley Country Club honoring recent brides, Jan Green, and her daughter, Josette Rogers VanHorn of Bear Grass.

They were recently married to Dixie E. Green, Greenville businessman, and Drew VanHorn, director of student activities at Elon College, respectively.

Hosts and hostesses included Williamston Mayor and Mrs. Robert Cowan, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Eason Lilley Sr., Mr. and Mrs. W.O. Peele, Judge and Mrs. Joseph Thigpen, and Judge and Mrs. Elbert S. Peel, all of Williamston, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Winslow of Hamilton.

If some perfectly good kitchen appliances are scratched, touch them up with paint specially formulated for appliances. Most paint and hardware stores carry the touch-up paint.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old single female and also an agent with a large insurance company. I am in a predicament facing many single women my age.

My boyfriend and I live together, and because of a previous marriage (mine), we have decided not to include marriage in our future. However, we would like to have children. I'm afraid that my company would frown upon motherhood without marriage, but I feel I am within my rights to have a child if it will be brought up in a stable, loving home. We've considered saying we are married to ensure company approval, but we prefer to be honest.

Hardison Says 'No' Deal Made

RALEIGH — "Hogwash!" That's what Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenior, thinks of recent charges that he dropped out of the race for lieutenant governor because he struck a secret deal with another candidate, Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery.

Hardison, who is now running for re-election, recently introduced Jordan at a meeting of Kinston political leaders. A Raleigh news report of the event said Hardison had "endorsed" Jordan, but Hardison denies that. He says that the report was accurate, however, in stating that he described Jordan as "conscientious and dedicated" and a "man of integrity."

That "endorsement" report set off another round of speculation that Jordan and Hardison had struck a deal. Hardison, in a short interview in the Legislative Building, said, "I hadn't talked to Bob Jordan, more than to say hello, since the end of the (1983) session." He denied making any deal.

Jordan and former House Speaker Carl Stewart are locked in what many believe is a nip and tuck race for the Democratic nomination. Stewart is claiming that Jordan's election would mean a continuance of the current Senate leadership. His supporters, and some politicians who would otherwise appear to be neutral in the race, have been saying that Hardison got out of the race and agreed to support Jordan in exchange for an assurance of a good committee assignment in 1985.

Jordan's folks are now starting to fight back. Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, called this reporter aside recently to repeat his strong support of Jordan. "Those of us who are not in the establishment (leadership) of the Senate would not be supporting him if things were not going to remain in the status quo," Winner said. He said Jordan had promised him 18 months ago that if elected he would "open up the Senate" and he said Jordan has assured him on three occasions that no deal has been made with Hardison.

Sometimes, bad press can be very helpful. Robert Pence, the FBI's top agent in North Carolina, told the N.C. Press Association at its winter meeting that he was misquoted the first time he spoke publicly in the state. Pence says that he told reporters he hoped to fight crime at every level but that he was misinterpreted as saying North Carolina was riddled with crime at every level.

The misunderstanding proved fruitful, Pence said. The ensuing flap "ironically got people aroused and they started calling me saying, 'You're right, and here it is.' As a matter of fact, we're still working on some of these cases" several years later, Pence said.

When Pence took his current job, he opened a telephone line like which people could use to report corruption. That telephone number was widely reported at the time and many calls came in. The number of calls has dropped recently so here's the number: 704-372-5488.

Credit

NEW YORK (AP) — While most interest rates have plunged from record heights over the past three years, finance charges on credit-card borrowing are stubbornly stuck at all-time highs.

Yet consumers seem eager to keep using plastic money, with credit card debt growing at an annual rate of more than 20 percent late last year, and with more than $70 billion in outstanding loans.

Economists say retailers do not appear worried that high rates on charge cards will hold down sales. It was a surge in consumer spending, after all, that drove the economy back to recovery from a painful recession.

"There has been no outcry and people are paying the rates," said Edward Yardeni, chief economist at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., a New York investment firm. "Historically, consumer rates have been stickier, both going up and coming down."

And interest rates have been coming down.

For example, the cost of raising money at banks has more than halved in the past three years.

The Federal Reserve System's charge for loans to banks has dropped from an all-time high of 18 percent in 1981 to the 8.5 percent that has prevailed for more than a year. The interest on overnight loans between banks has dropped from more than 20 percent in the first week of 1981 to about 9.5 percent.

Business borrowing charges also have slipped.

The prime lending rate, the base upon which banks compute interest rates on short-term business loans, has fallen from a record 21.5 percent in December 1980 to the 11 percent level that has prevailed since last August.

Rates on loans for buying homes and cars also are lower, in part because of flexible financing terms, such as adjustable rate mortgages and longer repayment periods.

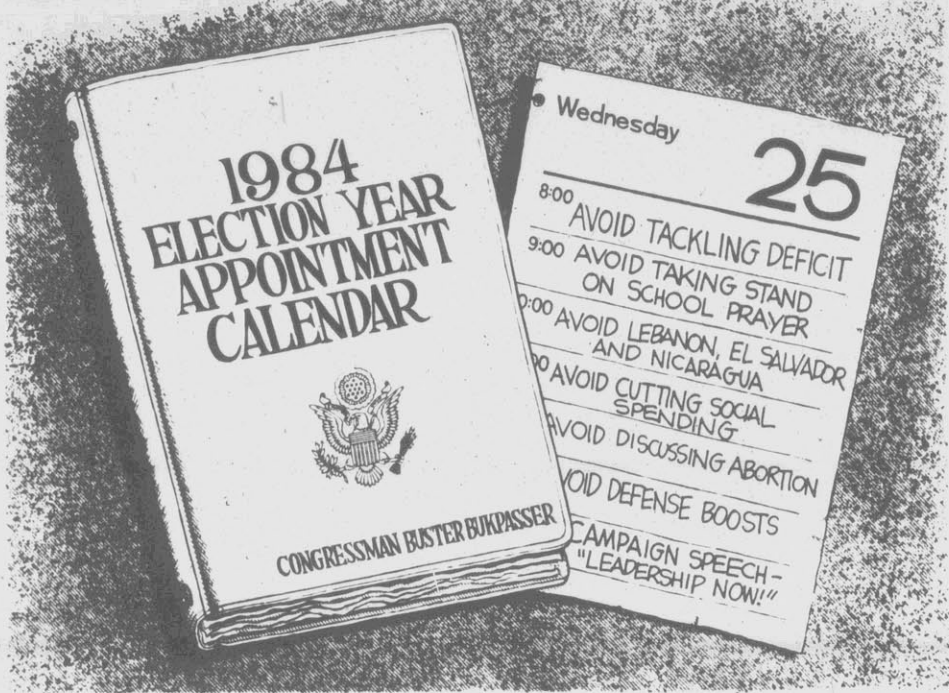

But annual interest rates on charge-card purchases have climbed to an average 18.75 percent nationwide from 17.41 percent banks started charging customers' annual fees for card use and many states lifted the interest rate ceilings for such borrowing.

In addition, credit card companies are paid by merchants, collecting a commission averaging 2 percent to 3 percent on each sale charged on a card.

At the same time, some cardholders have avoided paying any interest on credit card purchases by paying bills regularly, said Sandra Shaber, an economist at Chase Econometrics, a private consulting firm in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

Those borrowers take advantage of a provision of many cards that allows consumers to defer payment of purchases for more than a month before interest starts accumulating on the debt.

Gas Bills Bring Misery

WASHINGTON — It's become a routine. The mailman delivers the monthly gas bill for our office, we take one look at the exorbitant totals and the usual suspects — Ronald Reagan and big oil interests — drop another notch in our esteem.

This year, in fact, the gas bill is about 50 percent higher than what it was last. If one's pocketbook governs his vote, the Democrats would seem to have our support wrapped up.

But a 1984 Democratic presidential candidate is heavily responsible for our misery of late. His name is Walter Mondale, Prince of Fairness. The cold winter of '83-'84 has highlighted a fact that might have gone unnoticed in a warmer year: 'Ol Fritz doesn't always stand up for the little guy.

Mondale and former boss Jimmy Carter are responsible for one of the biggest consumer hold-ups in recent history: the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978. The law allowed the price of newly discovered natural gas to rise 10 percent yearly until Jan. 1, 1985, when all price controls would be lifted.

Carter predicted that the law would increase gas-heating costs by 8 percent annually but also claimed that it would encourage the private sector to look for new gas supplies.

Since then, however, consumers of natural gas for heating have only been discouraged from keeping their thermostats at a reasonable temperature. For example, while a New England household paid an average $379 for gas between November 1977 and March 1978, it paid $631 for even less gas five winters later.

During the same period, gas-heat consumers in the Mid-Atlantic states saw their average bills rise $176, or 48 percent; for those in the Eastern-North Central region, the increase was $189, or 67 percent.

When price controls are ended next year, the average household cost will probably soar another $100 per year, according to the Washington, D.C.-based Citizen/Labor Energy Coalition. If next winter is as cold as this season has been, Carter's 8 percent calculation will look ridiculous.

The Mondale camp insists that its man, as vice president, was only following the directive of Carter and then Energy Secretary James Schlesinger in his efforts on behalf of the deregulation bill during 1978.

But the facts reveal Fritz to have been more than loyal to this commander-in-chief. Indeed, during the 1978 Senate debate, he directed pro-deregulation forces. "He was a tyrant," says one former Senate Democrat who helped lead opposition to the bill.

In 1981, after Reagan had forced him into a period of self-described introspection, Mondale accepted a $43,750 consultant's job with the Salt Lake City-based Northwest Energy Co., proponents of the Alaskan natural gas pipeline. That fall, Mondale lobbied Congress on behalf of legislation that would have forced gas-heat consumers to pay for the project. (While Congress sanctioned the proposal, Northwest Energy wasn't able to obtain sufficient bank backing to complete the project.)

When the press first hounded Mondale for falling into the oil lobby's pocket, he steadfastly denied any such suggestion. Oil interests, in fact, did not dominate contributions to the Mondale political action committee — Committee for the Future of America — during 1981-1982. The most significant contribution might have been the $5,000 given in 1981 by John McMillan, then president of Northwest Energy, who, along with his wife, also gave Mondale's presidential campaign $2,000 in 1983.

But to this day, Mondale has allowed neither inflated home-heating costs (nor a 41 percent drop since 1981 in drilling for new gas) to temper his enthusiasm for deregulation.

Meese To Have Say In Platform

WASHINGTON — Although he is leaving the White House to become attorney general, conservative Edwin Meese III will still be President Reagan's agent in drafting the Republican platform.

That provides a security blanket for conservatives worried about the failure to replace Meese at the White House with another conservative. Meese's role, as well as the preponderance of right-wingers on the platform-drafting staff, suggests the party document will be more conservative than Reagan administration policy — particularly on social issues.

A footnote: Some conservatives suggested that Reaganite Jerry Carmen, who soon will leave his General Services Administration (GSA) job for a diplomatic post in Switzerland, should be brought into the White House. West Wing pragmatists killed the idea.

After the most serious study ever given the matter, the Reagan administration has decided that ailing Soviet President Yuri Andropov holds all the essential reins of power in the Kremlin.

With Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) analysts in charge, the study has been accepted as virtual proof that despite his serious illness and his long absence from public view, the former KGB boss really is running the show.

But what is not known about

Andropov may be more important than what is: whether, in the words of a high White House official, he is "a pragmatist who would listen to his military and renew nuclear negotiations with the U.S. or a neo-Stalinist who will concentrate only on a whirlwind arms build-up." This official's answer: he is both. That means both a renewal of arms talks and a massive Soviet nuclear buildup.

Only hours after a 90-minute face-to-face briefing on the Reagan administration's charge that the Soviets have violated several treaties with the U.S., former president Jimmy Carter told a nationwide television audience on ABC's "Good Morning, America" that he was never sought out by Reagan for help or advice.

Although the briefing by Arms Control Director Kenneth Adelman was not publicly billed as a Reagan effort to learn Carter's arms-control thinking, Carter offered plenty of advice, free of charge, which Adelman took back to Washington with him in Georgia.

The next day administration officials were stunned when the former president failed to mention the long talk he had with Reagan's top arms control official. Instead, Carter complained that while he had received helpful advice from Gerald Ford, his predecessor, Reagan was ignoring him.

Standing Firm

President Reagan has ordered the Marines pulled out of Beirut. He had no choice, and the decision, as the White House described it, was "prudent."

Critics immediately jumped on the presidential order as confirmation that Reagan's policies on Lebanon were wrong from the beginning; that is not necessarily the case. Reagan's goal in Lebanon, of restoring peace, obviously has failed, but the concept — of providing a multinational peacekeeping force to stabilize the internal strife in Lebanon — was as solid as anything could be against the montage of religious and ethnic diversity in the country.

Civil war, not outsiders (although Syria obviously has been involved), caused the breakdown in Lebanon this month. The Marines' stay there, along with the British, French and Italian troops, has been costly but it also bought several months' time for the Gemayel government and provided for the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon.

Announcement of the Marines' planned withdrawal coincided with the release of U.S. naval commanders to order bombardment of inland targets in support of the troops remaining loyal to Gemayel. It's a symbolic gesture, as there seems to be little hope for Gemayel's government to survive, but at least it shows that the United States isn't just pulling up stakes and running, as some would have us do.

Commitments such as those made to the recognized government in Lebanon should be honored.

More Warnings

The warnings keep coming. Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker warned this week that continued high deficits could produce recession or other economic catastrophes.

The stock market was listening that day and the averages plummeted.

If the deficit is not controlled, Volcker said, foreign trade will remain poor and the dollar will be vulnerable.

Chairman Volcker and others had sounded the warning before, and it has to be recognized that as the federal deficit continues to grow there will be upward pressure on interest rates and on the inflation rate.

The deficit is the government's number one economic problem at this point. It must be reduced through lower spending, and even increased revenues if necessary.

—Art Buchwald—

Celebrating

You should have been in Washington, D.C. last week. The whole town was celebrating the president's 1985 budget.

I dropped into a pub near the Capitol the other evening for a quiet drink and found the place jammed with people.

"Why the crowd?" I asked the bartender.

"The 1985 budget is going to be announced on television in a few minutes. Where have you been for the last few weeks?"

"Shut up!" someone yelled, "and turn up the set."

The bar quieted and we all looked up nervously at the screen.

Secretary of the Treasury Donald Regan, in a black tuxedo, came on the stage, told a few jokes, and then said, "And now — heeere's Ronnie's Budget! May I have the envelope please?"

David Stockman, the head of the Office of Management and Budget came out and handed the envelope to Regan, who ripped it open. "I'm always nervous when I do this," he said as the audience tittered.

Regan read from the card. "The budget for fiscal 1985 is an all time high of 925 billion, 500 million dollars!"

Almost everyone in the bar cheered, and waved pompoms.

Mr. Regan continued reading, "The deficit will be 180 billion, 400 million dollars, but could reach an even 200, if both parties work at it."

Again we all cheered and raised our glasses.

Regan said, "David, who were the big winners?"

"The military and tax cuts."

"And the big losers?"

"Domestic spending across the board."

The bar went wild, people slapping each other on the backs, and kissing strangers.

"It's the best election year budget a president has ever come up with," a guy who had white House lobbyist written all over him shouted in my ear.

"It's not a bad deficit either," I shouted back.

"It's a beaut," he yelled. "I'll buy you a drink."

The bartender poured our drinks and said, "That will be 10 bucks."

"Put it on my deficit," the lobbyist said.

"And who's going to eventually pay for it?" the bartender wanted to know.

"My kids will," the guy said, breaking himself up, "and if they don't my grandchildren will."

The man on the next stool was staring silently into his drink.

"Hey fellow," my drinking pal said. "Didn't you just hear the news? We almost got a trillion dollar budget."

"I hate deficits," the man said.

"What are you, some kind of fiscal nut?"

"I happen to be a Democratic

1.28 acres, located on North Memorial Drive 200 feet south of the intersection with North Greene Street, from highway commercial to unoffensive industry.

A third zoning petition, submitted by William E. Dansey to rezone 4.05 acres at the southeast corner of the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Mulberry Lane, was also adopted. Dansey sought rezoning from R-6 to office and institutional.

Three amendments to the city's zoning ordinance were endorsed following public hearings. The amendments reflect a new section regarding lot widths; the creation of four new zoning classifications specifically addressing single-family development; and new minimum setbacks for the single-family residential districts. The board also adopted an ordinance amending the zoning map to reflect the new zoning districts.

Council members voted to appoint Bruce Wardrep, currently an alternate on the Greenville Board of Adjustments, as a regular member succeeding John Moore, who has resigned. Wardrep will serve Moore's remaining term, which expires in June. Don Brown was appointed to succeed Wardrep as an alternate on the board.

Items handled under the new consent agenda segment included:

- Approval of a request to reduce the speed limit on Dellwood Drive from Red Banks Road to Greenville Boulevard from 35 mph to 25 mph;
- Approval of a request to reduce the speed limit in Brookgreen subdivision from 35 mph to 25 mph;
- Scheduling of a March public hearing on a revision to the thoroughfare plan;

- Approval of the low bid of E.F. Craven Co. of Greenville ($21,850) for a used crawler bulldozer; and

- Adoption of an ordinance amending the city code relative to the discharge of firearms within the city. The amended section states that, "It shall be unlawful for any person to fire or discharge any firearm, including guns, rifles, pistols, pellet guns, air guns or air rifles within the city, on or off his premises, except that this section shall not be construed to prohibit any law enforcement officer or authorized employee in the division of animal control from discharging a firearm in the performance of his duty, nor to prohibit any citizen from discharging a firearm when lawfully defending person or property."

slacks and one red shoe that matched the description of clothing Mrs. Gabriel was wearing when she disappeared, deputies said. The purse contained an identification card with Mrs. Gabriel's name, deputies said.

Redmond said investigators believe the clothing was planted.

"That area was searched thoroughly several times (in the days after the disappearance)," he said. "We don't believe they have been out on the ground since last July. It's like they were thrown there for us to find."

Mrs. Gabriel, married and the mother of a teenage daughter, was believed to have been on her way to appraise a Lake Norman property when she disappeared.

More Arrests In School Break-In

Two more arrests have been made by the Pitt County Sheriff's Department in connection with a Feb. 3 break-in at D.H. Conley High School, Chief Deputy Brooks Oakley reported today.

Oakley said deputies arrested Ward A. Markley, 17, of 3107 Briarcliff Drive, and Grant Boswell, 18, of Route 8, Greenville, on charges of breaking, entering and larceny at the school. Officers earlier arrested 21-year-old Greg Smith of Route 3, Greenville, in connection with the incident.

Oakley said various items including several calculators and school supplies were reported taken in the break-in and damages estimated at approximately $2,000 occurred to the facility and school property. Some property has been recovered, Oakley said.

Investigation is continuing, he said.

Edmisten In Pitt County Today

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, was to hold a press conference in Greenville today at 2 p.m. to discuss North Carolina's economy.

Edmisten was scheduled for a series of press conferences across the state during the day to release a position paper titled "Jobs and Economic Excellence," which notes North Carolina must protect the traditional industries the state has as well as seeking new industries to create more jobs.

In the paper Edmisten also states that North Carolina must compete successfully in world markets and to do this must retrain many of its workers and must expand research and development operations.

Edmisten says the state's environment is "one of our strongest assets and we must preserve it."

The Greenville press conference was to be held on a farm on the Stantonsburg Road one-tenth mile east of WNCT radio.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration may reroute flights at three major airports and prohibit or limit them in other areas to avert the threat of terrorist air attacks on nuclear weapons facilities.

If regulations are adopted, flights could be rerouted at the San Francisco, Denver and Dallas-Fort Worth airports.

Preparing Plans For Districts

RALEIGH (AP) — Two statewide black organizations say they plan to unveil later this month a plan for redrawing legislative districts in 16 North Carolina counties.

The North Carolina Association of Black Lawyers and the North Carolina Black Caucus will present their proposal at a public hearing in Raleigh scheduled for February 25, said Irving Joyner, president of the black lawyers' group.

The North Carolina Association of Black Lawyers and the North Carolina Black Caucus will present their proposal at a public hearing in Raleigh scheduled for February 25, said Irving Joyner, president of the black lawyers' group.

"We're going to be pushing for single-member districts in every area covered by the order," said Joyner, referring to a court order last month that North Carolina revise its 1982 reapportionment plan.

Members of the two groups met this week in Raleigh to draft a plan for five districts in the state House and two in the state Senate covered in a Jan. 27 order by a three-judge panel.

The plans will be presented to legislative delegations in all of the affected districts, Joyner said.

The federal panel ruled that the 1982 plan illegally diluted black voting strength in the affected legislative districts by submerging black majorities in predominantly white districts.

The court gave the General Assembly until March 16 to draw new single-member district plans for House Districts 8, 21, 23, 36 and 39 and for Senate Districts 2 and 22. If the state doesn't have a plan by then, the judges said they'd make one themselves.

Joyner said legislators were eyeing proposals to create small, black single-member districts within much larger, predominantly white multi-member districts. However, the Raleigh Times quoted lawmakers it didn't identify as saying that idea wasn't receiving serious consideration.

State officials, meanwhile, have asked the court to stay its order until after the May 8 primary. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten has said that otherwise, the state could not redistrict and conduct an orderly primary before the general election next November.

Black voters who filed the 1979 lawsuit that prompted the court order have asked that its effect not be delayed.

A spokesman for the state attorney general's office said he expected the judges to act on North Carolina's request for a stay within the next few days.

Decline In Colleges

RALEIGH (AP) — Enrollment is declining in North Carolina's community college and technical school system, largely because of the improving economy and higher tuition and fees, officials said Thursday.

During its regular monthly meeting, the system's board learned that enrollment is down 4.9 percent in curriculum programs and 2 percent in extension programs, officials said.

Tom King, vice president for financial services, added that the figure was system-wide and that enrollment was up at some schools.

Bob Scott, president of the community college system, said the economic upswing had reduced unemployment and encouraged people who might have gone to school to get a job instead.

But Scott said a "primary factor" in the enrollment decline was the tuition and fee increase imposed last year by the Legislature. Tuition was raised from $39 to $51 a quarter, while avocational and practical skills courses were made self-supporting.

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles, a board member, suggested asking the General Assembly to roll back tuition and fee hikes in some programs.

In 1982-83, the community college system served more than 613,000 people — one of every seven adults in North Carolina.

Spacewalkers Aver Free Flights Pave Way

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's two spacewalkers, who call themselves "Flash Gordon and Buck Rogers," said today their free flights outside the shuttle paved the way for repairing a crippled satellite on the next mission and for building space stations piece-by-piece in orbit.

Calling his jet-pack "a beautiful flying machine," astronaut Robert Stewart said, "Absolutely, it's ready for the the Solar Max flight."

"I concur," agreed Bruce McCandless.

The jet-powered backpacks, which Stewart and McCandless flew less during two untethered space walks, are to be used by another shuttle crew in April to retrieve the Solar Max satellite for replacement of a defective electronics box. The satellite has been ailing in orbit since it was launched four years ago.

Challenger's five crewmen discussed their mission in a long-distance news conference as they neared the end of their journey, heading for the first shuttle landing in Florida on Saturday, with their flight log reflecting both major disappointments and the exhilarating successes of man's first unanchored space walks.

Reporters at the Johnson Space Center in Houston asked the questions.

Beyond Solar Max and the service

ing of satellites, McCandless said their successful checkouts of the jet-pack opens the way for astronauts "to do construction work on space stations," linking together sections brought up by the space shuttle. With President Reagan's recent endorsement of a permanent orbiting station, that work is expected to start early in the 1990s.

Asked to assess the mission, commander Vance Brand said the failure of two communications satellites to fire into the proper orbits was "an extreme disappointment," even though they were deployed properly by Stewart and Ronald McNair.

Pilot Robert Gibson said the space walks "put us on top of the world," and Brand added: "We accomplished what we needed to set the next mission in motion for satellite repair."

Brand disclosed that the spacewalkers referred to themselves as "Flash Gordon and Buck Rogers" and he said the crew got an unexpected bonus when a foot restraint floated away from the shuttle during the second space walk, and he guided Challenger close so McCandless could reach out and grab it.

"We always have to be ready to go and rescue an astronaut and this was a good unscheduled practice," he said.

What's it like to be hanging out in space, 300 feet from the mother ship, with no safety line?

"I was most impressed by the spectacular panorama," McCandless replied.

Said Stewart: "My impressions were of the immensity of the entire universe and looking around and seeing the circle of the Earth and the horizon and thinking, what a beautiful Earth, what a beautiful flying machine."

After the session, commander Brand and his crew shut down experiments and stowed gear as they prepared to return to Earth on Saturday. They checked their flight control systems and pronounced them in perfect working order.

The landing target Saturday is a 15,000-foot runway just four miles from the launch pad from where Challenger started its journey last Friday. Touchdown time is 7:16 a.m. EST.

Earlier pessimism that bad weather would again delay or cancel a first landing attempt at the Kennedy Space Center here turned to optimism Thursday as an expected storm moved away from the area. "Right now, it's looking real good for KSC," the astronauts were told.

The weather forecast called for light, scattered clouds, unlimited visibility and winds 9 miles an hour out of the south.

The only previous attempt to land a shuttle in Florida, last June, was erased by fog and rain, with the flight diverted to Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., where eight of the nine earlier flights have ended. One mission returned to White Sands, N.M., because of wet runways in California.

NASA wants to start landing the shuttle at Cape Canaveral regularly to save money and cut down turnaround time between flights.

Spacewalkers McCandless and Stewart were in the spotlight again Thursday as they went outside the ship for a second time to test-fly their jet-powered backpacks, maneuvering without safety lines in and around Challenger's open cargo bay as the ship sped along at 17,400 mph 170 miles above the Earth.

For more than six hours they tested tools and techniques that will be used on the next shuttle mission in April when another shuttle crew is to retrieve and repair a defective scientific satellite named Solar Max.

There was one disappointment. They had to cancel an attempt to hook their bodies to a large box rotating slowly on the end of the shuttle's 50-foot robot arm when the arm did not respond properly to commands. The box was to have been spun slowly once every six minutes — the rate at which Solar Max is rotating.

Gillam Speaks To Greenville JCs

By CHRIS BENNETT
Reflector Staff Writer
State Rep. John Gillam, speaking Thursday night before an audience of Greenville Jaycees, vowed to "start charting a path to the future" in eastern North Carolina.

Gillam, a two-term member of the state House who is seeking the Democratic nomination for the 1st District seat in Congress, spoke against legislation subsidizing the shipping interests and maritime unions by raising the final cost of exported farm products. Gillam said incumbent Rep. Walter B. Jones, his opponent in the primary, had lost touch with the needs of the people of North Carolina.

"We can aggressively pursue negotiations to resolve trade barriers used to block our farm exports from foreign markets," he said. "It is time the American State Department started working for the American farmer instead of the farmer working for the State Department."

Gillam also questioned why the channel at Oregon Inlet has not been stabilized after 15 years of attempts to get federal assistance, stating that, "Our fishermen are making suicide voyages each time they venture through this shifting inlet."

Gillam said North Carolina should "put jobs at the top of the list," especially in search of "small, clean industry compatible with our rural and small town values and way of life. I strongly support the establishment of regional job centers to encourage smaller industries."

He said the regional job center concept must also be applied to the vocational training of these industries and suggested that it be done through "support of our community college system."

He called for a "concentrated effort to upgrade the highways to and from job centers," stating that "our roads are in such bad shape that they not only hamper industrial development and are insufficient for getting goods to the market, but are downright dangerous." Gillam said that, in order to bring industry to North Carolina, a cooperative effort between government officials needs to be established. He said he was not opposed to federal tax incentives to encourage industry to locate in areas of high unemployment.

JIMMY RECUPERATING — Jimmy Tontlewicz sits on his mother's lap Thursday at Children's Memorial Hospital in Chicago where he was taken last month after he was rescued from the icy waters of Lake Michigan. Mrs. Tontlewicz recently said her son now recognizes her, and walks. (AP Laserphoto)

RALEIGH (AP) — More than 100 state labor leaders have had their chance to question Democratic candidates for governor, and now they must decide which candidate — if any — to endorse.

Democratic gubernatorial candidates took turns Thursday fielding questions from the labor leaders, who are looking for someone to back in the May 8 primary.

One of the most difficult endorsements may be in the 10-way race for governor. A number of candidates can count supporters among the labor group.

Chris Scott, state AFL-CIO president, said candidates were asked about their stand on recruiting new industry to the state, workers compensation, unemployment benefits and jobs.

"What we're looking for is good government," Scott said.

The 115-member panel of the state AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education will recommend candidates to the full 300-member COPE. The larger group will vote Saturday whether to endorse the recommended candidates.

The group represents 145,000 members of the state AFL-CIO. It already has endorsed Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt in his bid to unseat Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

"We can offer them very little in the way of money," Scott said. "We do make a real sincere effort to educate our members what the issues are and where the candidates stand. ... There also is a large cadre of people here who like to get involved in politics in campaigns."

The group planned to make endorsements in the primary for governor, lieutenant governor and Council of State. The panel considered candidates for lieutenant governor Wednesday, governor on Thursday and Council of State offices on Friday.

The panel needs a majority vote to recommend a candidate and a two-thirds vote is needed for the COPE endorsement.

The endorsements will be announced Saturday, but former House Speaker Carl Stewart said he has been notified his name will be recommended to COPE.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

"SPIRITUAL WICKEDNESS IN HIGH PLACES"

THE BIBLE SPEAKS OF "SPIRITUAL WICKEDNESS IN HIGH PLACES" (EPH. 6:12) SOMETIMES THOSE IN AUTHORITY USED THEIR HIGH OFFICE FOR THEIR PERSONAL GRATIFICATION. THE BIBLE RECOUNTS NUMEROUS EXAMPLES OF THIS CONDUCT. DAVID'S SEDUCTION OF URIAH'S WIFE, ELI'S DRUNKEN SONS, JEZEBEL'S GREAT WICKEDNESS IN HER PAGAN WORSHIP. IN DAVID'S CASE, GOD SENT THE PROPHET NATHAN OUT OF THE WILDERNESS TO REBUKE HIS SINFUL BEHAVIOR. AGAIN, THE LORD PICKED A HUMBLE PROPHET FROM THE WILDERNESS TO BEAR THE DIRE TIDINGS OF THE EVENTUAL DESTRUCTION OF ELI'S SONS FOR THEIR UNFORGIVABLE BEHAVIOR. IN JEZEBEL'S CASE, THE GREAT PROPHET ELIJAH WAS BROUGHT FORTH, AGAIN OUT OF THE WILDERNESS, TO PREDICT VIOLENT DEATH FOR HER MOCKERY OF GOD. IT IS INTERESTING TO NOTE THAT, INVARIABLY, THE HIGHER THE PERSONAGES...THE MORE HUMBLE THE MESSENGER FROM GOD!

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted some modest gains today, rebounding from its recent sharp drop.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down more than 44 points over the week's first four trading days, rose 7.02 to 1,159.76 by noon today.

Advancing issues held a 4-3 edge on declines among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said some traders were buying blue-chip issues on the theory that the market's decline in the last several days had gone to unwarranted extremes.

But they also observed that inflation worries persisted. The government reported this morning that the producer price index of finished goods posted a larger-than-expected 0.6 percent increase in January.

The last time the index of price trends at the next-to-last point in the distribution system rose that much was November, 1982.

Word of the death of Soviet President Yuri Andropov appeared to have no decisive impact on the market. Analysts noted that the news came as no great surprise to traders who had previously presumed that he was gravely ill.

Pan American World Airways led the active list, up 1/8 at 7 3/8. A 618,100-share block traded at 7 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index gained .30 to 90.02. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.51 at 206.22.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 42.82 million shares at noon, against 57.14 million at the same point Thursday.

Pirates Hosting William & Mary

East Carolina's basketball Pirates return to Minges Coliseum Saturday night seeking their second straight ECAC-South victory as they host William & Mary. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

The Pirates defeated George Mason University last Saturday night in Minges for their first league win of the year, but came home from a two-game road trip to Illinois still looking for a victory on the road. The Pirates played poorly in a loss to Eastern Illinois on Monday night, but rallied and nearly pulled out a victory Wednesday at Western Illinois. East Carolina, down by 16 points in the first half, rallied and took a brief three-point lead before finally bowing, 65-62. William & Mary, a 76-62 victor over UNC-Wilmington last night, comes into the game having won five straight contests. They currently stand second in the ECAC-South with a 3-2 record. The Indians are 10-10 overall, but are winless on the road — just as the Pirates are — with an 0-9 mark. The Pirates and Indians met earlier in the year in Williamsburg, with William & Mary taking a 64-48 win. The Indians — not including last night's scoring — had three players hitting in double figures. They are led by Keith Cieplicki at 14.2, while Kevin Richardson is scoring at an 11.3 clip. Tony Traver rounds out those in double figures with a 10.9 average.

Gary Bland is just under double digits with a 9.5 average. Richardson is the leading rebounder with a 6.2 average. One things the Pirates are going to have to cut down on is the number of fouls against them. In several games during the past weeks, the Pirates have outscored their opponents from the floor only to be out shot at the line. It has been the difference in the game on several occasions.

The Indians are a good shooting team from the stripe, with a 72.8 percentage. Cieplicki is the number four free throw shooter in the country with an 87.5 percentage, having hit 42 of 48. Three others on the team hit at 80 percent or better. The Indians are also a good shooting team from the floor, hitting 52.0 percent. Richards leads among the regulars with a 58.2 average.

East Carolina has no players in double figures, although guard Curt Vanderhorst has been hitting at a better than ten-point clip in recent weeks.

The game is the first of two straight home games for the Pirates. They entertain Howard University of Washington, D.C., on Tuesday night.

Prep Swim Meet Here

East Carolina University and McDonald's will sponsor the annual Atlantic Seaboard Interscholastic Swimming and Diving Championships for the 29th consecutive year at Minges Natatorium starting today.

The meet, which began in 1956, will bring together over 80 boys' and girls' high school swim teams from all over the east in 1984.

Last year's defending champion, Calvert Hall of Towson, Md., will return to put its title on the line. Calvert Hall, 17-time Maryland state champion, has collected 12 team victories in the ASISDC. Their strongest challenge could come from Vineland High School, which meet director Ray Scharf classifies as a "sizable entry."

In girls' competition, Scharf sees Mercersburg Academy (Pa.) as "looking extremely strong," and should unseat four-time winner the Peddie School.

Diving preliminaries will get underway tonight at 6:30, with swimming prelims starting Saturday at 8:30 a.m. Finals for both diving and swimming are scheduled for Saturday at 5:30 p.m.

The event is being held at the Minges Aquatic Center on the ECU campus and is free of charge to the public.

ODU Women Top ECU

NORFOLK, Va. — Old Dominion University, ranked in the top ten — and with a recent victory over the number one ranked Louisiana Tech team — had little trouble with East Carolina University's Lady Pirates last night, rolling up a 72-47 victory.

The Lady Monarchs, now 15-4 on the season, shot 50 percent from the floor and held a 37-29 rebounding edge of the Pirates in gaining the victory. ECU shot only 41.2 percent, hitting 11 less field goals.

"We did all right," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said afterwards. "We weren't going to run with them; we weren't going to press and we didn't want to let the crowd get into the game. We sat back, played a conservative man-to-man and I think we did all that pretty well."

Andruzzi had nothing but praise for the Monarchs. "I think they're awesome in terms of what they're capable of. But I think we kept our poise on the court, especially for a young team."

The Lady Pirates didn't score for nearly four and a half minutes, while Old Dominion was scoring the first nine points of the contest. The Monarchs steadily pulled away in the game, substituting freely after the midpoint of the first half. Old Dominion led by as many as 20 in the first half and held a 33-17 edge at halftime.

In the second half, the Monarchs continued to pull away, moving out by as much as 26 points.

Tracy Claxton led the Old Dominion offense with 19 points and she also pulled off a game-high 10 rebounds. Medina Dixon added 13 points while Liz Connahan added 11 and Regina Miller had 10.

East Carolina was led by Lisa Squirewell and Delphine Mabry, each scoring 14 points. Mabry led the Pirate rebounding with six. The loss drops the Lady Pirates to 9-12 on the season. They travel on to the nation's capital this weekend to face American University Saturday at 2 p.m. and George Mason on Sunday at 2 p.m. The latter game will be broadcast over the Pirate Sports Network.

Two Could Play Again

HYATTSVILLE, Md. (AP) — University of Maryland guard Adrian Branch and senior reserve guard Steve Rivers could play basketball again this season, now that the Prince George's County District Court has granted a motion to move up the date for his trial on misdemeanor drug charges to Friday.

Branch, Maryland's leading scorer in the past two seasons, and Rivers were suspended indefinitely from the team after being arrested Jan. 28 and charged with possession of $10 worth of marijuana.

Holland Admits Heels #1 After Virginia Falls, 85-72

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia basketball coach Terry Holland is willing to call North Carolina the best college team in the nation, even if Tar Heel coach Dean Smith isn't.

"I think we saw a truly awesome basketball team tonight. I don't think there's a college team anywhere close to them," Holland said Thursday night after No. 1-ranked and unbeaten North Carolina posted an 85-72 victory over Virginia in an Atlantic Coast Conference matchup.

Smith, whose team's 21-game winning streak this season is the longest of his career, wasn't as anxious as Holland to heap praise on the Tar Heels, who are now 9-0 in the ACC.

"It's awfully early in the year, but we are potentially a very good basketball team," Smith said. "It is ridiculous that we are undefeated at this point with the schedule that we play."

Sam Perkins scored 27 points and Michael Jordan added 24 to lead North Carolina.

"Perkins and Jordan were fantastic," Holland said. "I don't think I've ever seen two players play that well on the same court. We hoped we would be able to guard Perkins and Jordan better than we did, but the way they were playing, I'm not sure anyone could have guarded them."

Jim Miller paced Virginia with 23, while Othell Wilson added 15 and Rick Carlisle chipped in 13. The loss dropped Virginia to 13-7 ad 3-7 in the ACC. It was the worst loss for Virginia since an 85-62 setback against Maryland in the 1981 ACC tournament.

Perkins was 10 of 11 from the field and seven of seven from the free throw line. The 6-foot-9 senior forward needs just 31 points to become the fifth North Carolina player to score 2,000 points in his career.

Perkins also added a game-high 11 rebounds to move past Billy Cunningham and become the Tar Heels' all-time leading rebounder. He now has 1,072 rebounds.

Jordan and Perkins were backed by Matt Doherty and Steve Hale, who added 11 and 10 points, respectively.

Up by just 20-17, North Carolina took charge, outscoring Virginia 21-9 over the final eight minutes of the first half to take a 41-26 intermission lead.

A three-point play by Perkins, a fast break layup by Jordan and a jumper by Perkins boosted North Carolina to a 10-point lead, 27-17, with 6:49 left in the half.

The lead was still 10 at 35-25 just under two minutes before the break, but a Buzz Peterson jumper, Doherty's breakaway dunk and another Peterson jumper, countered only by an Olden Polynice free throw, gave North Carolina its 15-point intermission cushion. Ricky Stokes came up with a pair of steals and quick layups to open the second half, bringing Virginia to within 11, 41-30, but that was as close as the Cavaliers would get.

North Carolina connected on 32 of 49 shots from the field for the game, 65.3 percent, and outrebounded Virginia 30-27. Sophomore center Brad Daugherty helped Perkins under the boards with 10 rebounds.

Weather Hinders Olympic Events

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — The International Olympic Committee today sent a message of condolence to Soviet sports officials over the death of Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov, but they said the 1984 Winter Games would go on. That is, if the weather permits.

A Balkan snowstorm postponed for at least two days an attempt by American Bill Johnson to make Olympic history in the men's downhill ski race, while the U.S. hockey team's chances of repeating history came to an abrupt end. Also delayed were speed skating events as nearly a foot of snow fell in the downtown area of Sarajevo and at the nearby Zetra complex, which includes an ice rink and speed skating oval. More than eight inches of snow fell at the finish area of the men's downhill at Mount Bjelasnica. Snow was predicted to fall off and on for four more days.

Johnson, of Van Nuys, Calif., was considered a favorite in the downhill, which was rescheduled for Sunday. No American man has won an Olympic Alpine event in the Games' 60-year history.

IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch sent the message to Soviet Sports Minister Marat Gramov, who is in Sarajevo.

It said: "Upon learning of the sudden death of President Yuri Andropov may I extend the deepest condolences on behalf of the entire Olympic movement. Our thoughts are with you and all members of your National Olympic Committee at this time of grief for your nation and athletes."

Soviet sources in Sarajevo said the Soviet Olympic team would be instructed from Moscow on what action it would take in view of Andropov's death, which was announced today.

Reaction to news from Soviet athletes and coaches at the Olympic Village was brusque. Most refused to comment, although one coach said: "I simply can't believe it."

Yugoslav law calls for one day of mourning for the death of a prominent foreign leader. Yugoslav officials had not made a decision when to observe this day, but past practice has been to wait until the day of the funeral.

Although a communist country, Yugoslavia is not aligned with other Eastern Bloc nations under the Soviet umbrella.

The only time an Olympic Games has been formally interrupted was in Munich in 1972, after 11 Israeli athletes and coaches were killed in a terrorist attack. Competition was suspended for one day.

Going back only four years in the Games' history, there was a gold-medal performance some called miraculous. Against great odds, the 1980 U.S. hockey team upended the Soviets and went on to win the gold medal at Lake Placid, N.Y.

But, with a second straight loss, 4-1 to Czechoslovakia Thursday night, the 1984 hockey team's hopes of even advancing to the medal round were dashed.

"They worked very hard. They are a great bunch of players," U.S. coach Lou Vairo said. "They're very good boys, and if 250 million people want to point a finger at them, I'm still behind them 100 percent."

The only medal event not postponed or delayed by the snowstorm today was the men's 30-kilometer cross-country event, won by Nikolaj Zimiatov of the Soviet Union in 1 hour, 28 minutes, 56.3 seconds. Alexander Zavalov won the silver, and Gunde Svann of Sweden took the bronze.

Bill Koch of Eugene, Ore., straining against a bad cold, finished 21st, the top American. Koch won a silver in the 30 kilometers at the 1976 Games at Innsbruck.

The Winter Games yielded their first gold medals on Thursday, to East German Karin Enke, who won the 1,500-meter women's speed skating event in world-record time, and Marja-Liisa Hamalainen of Finland, who won the women's 10-kilometer cross-country race.

The Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League said Thursday they had made a contract proposal to Vladislav Tretiak, goaltender of the world champion Soviets. Montreal General Manager Serge Savard said he liked the Canadiens' chance of signing Tretiak, if the decision were left to Tretiak.

Enke's victory began what is expected to be an East German domination of women's speed skating, and Enke has threatened to trim that to a one-woman domination. She also entered today's 500 meters, delayed by the storm until this afternoon, and she said she would decide whether to race in the 3,000 meters after competing in the 1,000 on Monday.

"I'd like to win four gold medals," she said.

The men's 500-meter speed skating event also was delayed until at least late this afternoon.

In the second day of luge competition, three East German women extended their 1-2-3 stranglehold. Steffi Martin was first with a combined time of 1:23.402 finishing in 41.863 today. The top American was Bonny Warner of Mount Baldy, Calif., who held onto eighth place.

Torsten Guerlitzer of East Germany moved past first-run leader Ernst Haspinger of Italy after two runs in the men's luge. With a time of 46.205, Guerlitzer had a two-run total of 1:32.382. Haspinger fell to fifth. Frank Masley of Newark, Del., was 14th.

The luge medals are determined by aggregate time over four runs.

Caldwell Leads Hawaiian Open

HONOLULU (AP) — Rex Caldwell says he'll return a borrowed driver before he returns to the Mainland.

Then he thought about it a moment and added: "Maybe."

Driving, said Caldwell, has been the central problem in his slow and uncertain start this year. Riding a string of three consecutive runner-up finishes — two of them playoff losses — Caldwell had acquired $95,233 in winnings at this time last season. This year, he's won $2,038.

In something approaching desperation, he plucked a driver from the bag of one of his amateur partners after completing play Wednesday in the pro-am, put it in play Thursday in the first round of the $500,000 Hawaiian Open and promptly shot a no-bogey, 7-under-par 65.

"That's the first time this year I've been able to see the green from where I hit the drive," Caldwell said.

He shared the 18-hole lead with Calvin Peete, who also said he'd had driving difficulties. But he didn't borrow a club. He simply had his broken.

"I guess the airlines did me a favor," said Peete, who found the shaft on his driver had been broken on the flight to Hawaii. He put a new, much lighter shaft in it, and, he said, "drove the ball very well. Driving, in fact, probably was the strongest part of my game."

Peete, who played the back nine in 31 and had birdies on his last two holes, and Caldwell shared a one-stroke lead over Mike Sullivan and Gil Morgan, who had 6-under-par 66s on the 6,881 yard Waialae Country Club course.

Defending champion Isao Aoki of Japan, the 41-year-old veteran who is the first Japanese to win on the American Tour, rewarded his huge gallery with a no-bogey round of 67 that included an eagle-3 on the 13th hole.

He was tied with Ken Green and Fred Couples, who had a share of the lead until he made two trips into the sand and took a double bogey on his 17th hole.

Payne Stewart, Bill Britton and Scott Watkins were at 68.

Hale Irwin, winner of last week's Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, and PGA champion Hal Sutton topped a large group at 69.

Tom Watson, the five-time British Open champion who has missed two cuts in a row, saw his difficulties continue on the front side. He played it in a fat 40, but put on a birdie-birdie finish to salvage a respectable round of par 72. U.S. Open title-holder Larry Nelson also shot 72.

Both must improve today, however, if they are to qualify for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Pam Pack Upsets Bertie Sr., 52-44

WINDSOR — Jeff Cox fired in 15 points as the Washington Pam Pack posted its sixth consecutive game shooting over 50 percent from the field in a 52-44 victory over league-leading Bertie Senior High School Thursday in Northeastern 3-A basketball action.

Bertie had lost just one game in 12 previous Northeastern Conference outings, while the Falcons now own a 14-5 overall record. The Pam Pack improved its conference mark to 8-5 on the season with an overall tally of 10-9.

Coretta Gilliam paced the Bertie girls with 12 points as they held off the Lady Pam Pack for a 41-36 victory. Andrea Gilliam added 10 points for Bertie, while Gloria Sherrod fired in 11 points and Glenda Daly 10 for Washington.

Bertie's girls are now 6-7 in the conference and 7-10 overall, while the Lady Pam Pack slipped to 4-9 in the league and 6-11 overall.

The Pam Pack connected on 19 out of 36 shots from the field for 52.7 percent, as Earl Randolph and Steve Austin umped in 14 points each. Stacy Lee and Calvin Cooke led Bertie with 12 points apiece.

Washington held a 22-17 advantage at halftime and increased that margin to eight after three quarters. Washington entertains Tarboro tonight with a chance to earn a share of the tie for second place in the conference. Tarboro is now 9-4 in Northeastern action and tied with Edenton, while the Pam Pack moved into a tie for third with Plymouth.

'Tobacco Road' Well Done

That old favorite of 40 and more years ago, "Tobacco Road," holds up well with age. In the hands of the fine cast assembled by director Edgar Loessin, the East Carolina Playhouse production provides a fine projection of both the comic and poignant aspects of the play.

"Tobacco Road" opened Thursday night at McGinnis Theater on the East Carolina University campus and will be on stage at 8:15 p.m. tonight and Saturday night, then again on Monday and Tuesday nights.

In today's world of federal and state doles to help alleviate the suffering of the destitute, it's difficult for the younger generation to realize the desperation millions of Americans experienced in the dark days of the Depression. Granted that Erskine Caldwell in his novel, and Jack Kirkland in his play version of "Tobacco Road," might to a degree have exaggerated the degeneracy that poverty can breed, there is yet as much truth as fiction in this slice-of-life depiction of the Lester family in red-clay Georgia.

Despite his clumsy way of expressing his gut feelings, Jeeter

Lester (Tom Hull) has a deeply ingrained love for the piece of sterile land he lives on — once his, and before him, his ancestors. It is his security, the only thing to sustain him as age encroaches and the dread of death sometimes haunts him. In his own way, too, he feels a bumbling affection for his snuff-dipping wife, Ada (Mavis Ray), who has borne him 17 children; for his split-lip ugly-duckling daughter, Ellie May (Crisa Warren), and his sassy teen-age son, Dude (Brian Cottle).

Jeeter's dream of staying on his home soil until the day he dies is obviously doomed by his lethargy to do anything positive — except when the occasion to beg or steal food momentarily prods him into high gear.

Tom Hull is magnificent in this demanding role. He has generous support from Mavis Ray as the listless wife who clings to three hopes in life — enough snuff and vittles to counteract her aching pleurisy, a decent dress to be buried in, and high hopes to see her pretty daughter Pearl go off to Augusta. Pearl is the only one of her 17 sired by someone other than her man Jeeter.

Ingrid Wright is wonderfully plump and brassy as the preaching, praying Sister Bessie Rice who manipulates her connections with God to seduce strapping 16-year-old Dude into becoming her husband — with Brian Cottle giving a finely tuned performance (part rebel, part L'il Abner) as the youth willing to sacrifice himself for the sake of having the widow's new car to drive and blow the horn.

Hal Wells has a fine grasp of the character of Lov Bensey, Pearl's love-sick husband. He vacillates between anger and self-pity in his efforts to make the girl wife in fact as well as name. Jeanne Resua as Pearl is as physically beautiful and timid as all claim her to be.

Others in the cast — Crisa Warren, the pathetic, neglected ugly child; Mary Vars as the aged, wordless, totally intimidated Grandma Lester; Boyce Cutchin, the arthritic, shuffling neighbor; and the two outsiders not garbed in rags — Mike Pitts (Captain Tim) and Alan McCoy (George Payne) are each totally effective in lesser roles.

Gregory Buch again scores with a splendid set which includes a cabin, corn crib and well of weathered boards set in a hard-packed earth yard with broomstraw in the background, and a real Chinaberry tree. The set is complimented perfectly by Patrice Alexander's dull, ragged costumes and David Downing's lighting.

Theater patrons who have seen this old favorite long ago will find renewed delight in this production. Younger people who have not seen it will be in for a revelation in this piece of Americana.

One minor carp. A bit of judicial

IN FINE FORM — Red Skelton tickled and ribbed the California Legislature with one-liners and off-hand remarks as the state's politicians gathered to praise the 70-year-old comedian for his talents and present him with an official proclamation Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

Mudd Returning To NBC's Team

NEW YORK (AP) — Roger Mudd is back on the back of the bus.

That's the terminology for the wandering reporters who make as many stops on the campaign trail as the candidates, and Mudd will soon join their ranks again after reaching a reconciliation with NBC on new assignments Thursday.

Mudd, who had virtually disappeared from the airwaves since being dumped from the "NBC Nightly News" Sept. 2, said he's now buying a plane ticket to Iowa and hopes to be reporting from there next week. His new title is NBC's chief political correspondent.

Mudd said in an interview from his Washington office that he was "delighted" to officially be getting back to work. "For a political reporter in a presidential election year, this is the penultimate, to get out and see for yourself what's going on and then report about it and write about it."

Mudd has been going to his NBC office every day, but has kept himself off the air because of a legal disagreement with the network. "My position was they had breached my contract," Mudd said. "If I had gone on the air doing work not normally done by anchors, it would have signaled that I had acquiesced to the breach of my contract."

Declining any specifics, Mudd said contractual readjustment had been negotiated "that satisfies both sides."

Mudd's original contract, which had seven more years to run, called for him to be sole anchor of the "NBC Nightly News." He had ignored that stipulation in allowing Tom Brokaw to join him as co-anchor in April 1982, only to have NBC steal his anchor seat a little more than a year later.

Asked if he was still bitter, Mudd said: "I had my share back then, but what I've got now is something that is a pleasure to me." He said published reports that he was balking at appearing on the same broadcast as Brokaw were "a disservice, not only to me, but to Tom. I have no idea who put that out. But it was never an issue. It was not true. It never came up once."

To many observers who think Mudd is the best political reporter in broadcasting, Mudd is back where he belongs — stumping with the candidates, buttonholing congressmen on the steps of Capitol Hill and throwing hardballs at would-be presidents.

His hourlong interview with Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., on CBS four years ago has been cited as one factor in Kennedy's downfall as a candidate. Under calm and forceful questioning by Mudd, Kennedy appeared evasive and fuzzy in his thinking.

"Roger Mudd has earned an enviable reputation as one of the best political reporters in the United States," said Reuven Frank, president of NBC News who announced Mudd's return to the active list Thursday. "And his presence in an important position will strengthen all our political reporting."

Claim Property Buried To Avoid Paperwork

CHERRY POINT, N.C. (AP) — Government-owned materials worth as much as $1 million stored at the Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station have been buried to avoid the paperwork needed to dispose of the property through normal channels, a New Bern newspaper says.

The Naval Investigative Service is looking into allegations that materials worth from $300,000 to $1 million were buried at the base during the summer of 1982, the Sun-Journal reported in its Thursday editions.

The newspaper said the burial operation was allegedly carried out by the Facilities Maintenance Division in violation of federal regulations for disposal of surplus property. Because that property is usually sold at auction, the burial cheated the government out of revenues estimated in six figures.

During its yearlong probe, NIS has interviewed Facilities Maintenance workers at least since last March and spent months recovering the materials, sources told the newspaper.

per. But no disciplinary or legal action has been taken against the management-level civilians named in those interviews as directors of the burial.

A Cherry Point official confirmed NIS has been investigating since last May the dumping of asbestos-lined pipe and drums of hazardous chemicals and confirmed the investigation targets Facilities Maintenance.

But the official version of the investigation contends it is more limited in scope and began more recently than reported by the sources, who said NIS has been aware of the dumping since February 1983, the Sun-Journal said.

Earlier, some Facilities Maintenance employees tried to alert U.S. Rep. Charles Whitley, D-N.C., to the dumping. They met with Lewis Renn, Whitley's administrative assistant, in the fall of 1982 and detailed specific instances of the burial work, Renn said last week.

Buried were a wide range of building materials high-pressure steam pipe, other types of pipe and pipe fittings, high-grade insulation and sheet metal and drums of hydraulic fluid, among other items, the newspaper said.

Sources told the Sun-Journal that the materials were buried in the Facilities Maintenance compound and in at least three landfills on the base, including one near a residential area.

A civilian employee who said he participated in the burial of the insulation told the newspaper that a crew of six worked about a week disposing of the material. He estimated the value of the materials at more than $80,000.

Allegations that power transformers were disposed of at a station dump site prompted the current NIS investigation, said Capt. D.E. Miller of Cherry Points Joint Public Affairs Office.

The transformers allegedly contained oil laced with PCBs, a highly toxic chemical linked to cancer in laboratory animals.

The allegations were investigated even though base records showed no transformers unaccounted for, Miller said.

The dump site was located on May 24, 1983. In the process of clearing the site, no transformers were found but asbestos-lined pipe and drums of hazardous chemicals were found, says a statement written by Miller in response to questions from The Sun-Journal.

The drums of hazardous chemicals contained transmission fluid, Miller said. He said an investigation is still in progress to determine who dumped the material and when the hazardous material was dumped.

Profit Hospital's Care Said Costlier

RALEIGH (AP) — For-profit hospitals in the state charge significantly more than not-for-profit facilities for the same surgical procedures, according to a study by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina.

"From the charge experience of subscribers, we conclude that receiving care in a proprietary hospital is, in most cases, significantly more expensive than care in a nonproprietary hospital of similar size, said the report, issued Thursday.

"We also conclude that the higher charges at proprietary hospitals are primarily for pharmacy and medical-surgical supplies and, to a lesser extent, operating room and anesthesia charges."

The study also said "in some hospitals ... charges increase very rapidly for several years following the sale to a for-profit organization."

The study by Dr. Sandra B. Greene, director of health economics research for Blue Cross, analyzed charges to patients who had undergone gallbladder removal, a hysterectomy or normal child deliveries. It was reported Thursday to the Legislature's Committee on Public Health Facilities.

I.O. Wilkerson Jr., director of the state Division of Facility Services, said the report was the first of its kind in North Carolina.

Harrison T. Ferris, administrator of Raleigh Community Hospital, and J. Lewis Ridgeway, executive director of Edgecombe General Hospital in Tarboro, said rates at their for-profit hospitals had been approved by Blue Cross. Ridgeway noted that proprietary hospitals pay taxes, while some not-for-profit facilities receive tax subsidies.

Ms. Greene said the study reviewed charges at six hospitals in the state that are owned by for-profit hospital chains and compared them with not-for-profit institutions. She said larger hospitals should be expected to charge more than smaller hospitals because the larger facilities have more expensive equipment for more sophisticated surgery.

In Raleigh, however, Raleigh Community, which is owned by Hospital Corp. of America, charged an average of $3,317 for a gallbladder removal. The larger Rex Hospital and Wake Medical Center — both not-for-profit — charged an average of $2,653 and $3,085 respectively.

The study found Raleigh Community's room rates were between those at Rex and Wake Medical, but pharmacy charges at Raleigh Community were $690 for a gallbladder operation, while Rex charged $362 and Wake Medical $543.

Ferris said no conclusions could be drawn because Raleigh Community's charges were not higher in every case.

Convicted Two Bail Bondsmen

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Three Charlotte men, including two bail bondsmen, have been convicted in Mecklenburg Superior Court of selling three ounces of cocaine to an undercover agent.

The jury of six men and six women deliberated about 30 minutes Thursday before convicting Terry Bernard Duncan, 24, his brother Howard Duncan, 24, and Dwight Lindsey, 26, on one count each of trafficking in cocaine and one count of sale and delivery of cocaine.

Terry and Howard Duncan operate Duncan Bonding Co. of Charlotte. It is the second time in less than a year that Terry Duncan has been convicted of selling cocaine.

Mr. Lindsey and the Duncan brothers were arrested in March 1983 exact date 1983 following a drug raid at at Charlotte motel. An undercover SBI agent said the men sold her three ounces of cocaine for $6,000.

Bar More Than 3 Patrol Cars

ROBBINSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Graham County Board of Commissioners has taken the license plate from a patrol car purchased with public donations by Sheriff A.J. Peterson.

Peterson said the car, a used Highway Patrol vehicle, was bought in early January. He put a permanent license plate issued to the county on the car.

In late January, the county attorney, William E. McPeters Jr., wrote Peterson and told him to remove the license plate and turn it over to the commissioners. Peterson said he removed the license plate, although he needs every patrol car he can put on the road.

County Manager Jackie Ayers, Commission Chairman Tony Ayers and Commissioner Harry Owens removed the license plate from another Sheriff's Department car several days later.

Owens said the commissioners have told the sheriff they will support only three patrol cars, and any money he collects from the public could not be used to purchase and obtain title to property in the county's name.

Peterson said citizens have donated $3,300 to his department because they know he is understaffed and the department doesn't have enough equipment.

Food Costs Spur Wholesale Price Increases

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices surged 0.6 percent in January — their biggest one-month rise in 14 months — as food prices skyrocketed 2.7 percent, the government said today.

Pacing the sharpest food price climb since August 1980 were a 9.2 percent gain for pork prices, a 7 percent increase for vegetable prices and a 3.2 percent hike for beef prices.

The overall gain surprised analysts, who had expected that the moderate increases of recent months would be recorded in 1984. Last year's 0.6 percent rise had been the best 12-month showing in two decades.

And, while analysts had expected food prices to rise last month as a result of the harsh winter weather that devastated crops, livestock and poultry in much of the South and Midwest, the size of the increase had not been forecast.

Meat prices had fallen in the autumn as producers sent their livestock to slaughter rather than pay feed prices sent sharply higher by the summer's drought. But, with supplies diminished, meat prices are resuming their climb. In December, beef prices were up 6.3 percent.

As for last month, food price gains were also posted for poultry, up 2.9 percent; fish, up 5.6 percent; coffee, 2.6 percent. Fresh fruit prices fell 3.5 percent.

Over the last year, food has become steadily more expensive. Vegetable prices have risen 50.5 percent; egg prices have gained 66.1 percent, and poultry costs have increased 24.5 percent.

Today's report from the Labor Department recorded a 1.2 percent decline in energy prices. The calculation, which reflected December price activity, reflected the largest single-month decline since April and the sixth decline in the last seven months.

Gasoline prices fell a sharp 1.6 percent, about the same as in the previous two months, while home heating oil prices plunged 3.4 percent, more than double the two previous months' declines. Natural gas prices rose 0.9 percent.

Over the last 12 months, energy prices have fallen 6.9 percent. Gasoline prices are off 9.3 percent and heating oil prices have dropped 10.8 percent.

Analysts expect those costs to begin climbing in the next few months, however, because of heating oil supplies diminished during the winter.

The energy price calculations reported today lag a month behind the rest of the Producer Price Index for finished goods because energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most recent index.

Price changes that show up at the wholesale level are a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level. The Consumer Price Index, though, checks for a broader range of items, including housing and medical care, than does the wholesale inflation index.

In all, wholesale prices fell a seasonally adjusted 0.2 percent in November and rose by 0.2 percent in December.

Detailing last month's price activity, the Labor Department offered these details:

—New car prices rose 0.3 percent, the same as in December. Light truck prices were up 0.8 percent, a bit ahead of the December increase.

—Capital equipment costs rose 0.1 percent, half the 0.2 percent gain of the preceding month.

All the changes are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

If last month's 0.6 percent increase held steady for 12 months, the yearly advance would be 7.8 percent. The annual rate reported by the department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly prices than the figure made public.

In all, the Producer Price Index for finished goods stood at 289.4 in January, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $28.94 last month.

Prices had risen 7.1 percent in 1981 and 3.7 percent in 1982.

Most analysts are forecasting that wholesale-price inflation will be somewhat higher this year than last, running in the range of 2 percent to 4 percent, partly because of higher food prices and a pickup in industrial prices as the economy continues gaining strength.

Compared to recent years, however, that is good news, the product in analysts' eyes of the 1981-82 recession, which has helped hold down gains in labor costs and led to improved worker productivity.

Last year, prices at the retail level rose a modest 3.8 percent, the best showing since 1971 and 1972, when government price controls restrained increases.

A strengthened dollar, which makes foreign goods cheaper than U.S. products, has also helped restrain a surge in prices.

Seek Limit Debate Over Death Penalty

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — There will be a limit to the tales of ghastly murders and mistaken convictions during Senate debate before the expected passage of a bill to restore the death penalty for certain federal crimes.

The Senate voted 65-26 Thursday for a motion that limits debate to a maximum of 100 hours on the measure, designed to renew use of capital punishment for such crimes as treason, espionage and murder on federal property.

The chief sponsor of the legislation and a lobbyist working against it agreed the vote indicates the legislation will pass after the Senate returns from a recess Feb. 20.

In debate so far, opposing forces have tried to outdo each other with terrifying but true stories to embellish their arguments.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., leading a filibuster against the bill, told how he personally defended an innocent man who spent 30 horrible years in prison before his chief accuser admitted she lied on the witness stand.

Chief sponsor Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. and other supporters countered with tale-after-tale of victims who were raped, murdered, and then mutilated.

Supporting the motion to stop the filibuster were 43 Republicans and 25 Democrats; 18 Democrats and eight Republicans voted against it.

The death penalty, while still on the books for several federal crimes, was rendered unusable by the Supreme Court's 1972 decision in the case of Furman vs. Georgia.

The court held that because of unlimited discretion given the judge and jury under the laws then existing, executions amounted to cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the Constitution's Eighth Amendment.

The Senate measure is designed to bring federal law in compliance with the ruling by setting out uniform procedures to follow in death penalty cases.

Thurmond said after the vote to limit the filibuster, "I think it indicates passage of the bill."

John Shattuck, chief lobbyist for the American Civil Liberties Union, acknowledged the margin was "an indication there appears to be votes to pass the bill in the Senate."

But Shattuck, who is fighting against passage, predicted the measure would not get through the House and contended portions are unconstitutional.

He said the legislation still provides too much discretion by allowing a judge or jury to consider unspecified aggravating circumstances before imposing the death penalty.

Thurmond, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said he plans to schedule a meeting with Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee — where death penalty legislation would likely encounter strong opposition.

Thurmond added, "I hope the president will talk to Rodino. 'I'm going to ask him to do it.'"

The bill would authorize the death penalty for treason, espionage, homicide on federal property, and attempts to kill the president when the chief executive was injured or almost harmed.

It also could be imposed in cases where death results from explosives, aircraft piracy, murder of foreign officials, and kidnapping.

The NAACP Legal Defense Fund, which represents many prisoners under death sentence, said it knows of 1,289 inmates on death row. The organization said 12 prisoners have been executed since the Furman case and 38 states have passed death penalty statutes designed to meet Supreme Court standards.

FBLA To Host Hour

The D.H. Conley Chapter of Future Business Leaders of America will hold a refreshment hour for all school personnel Feb. 16 as part of its celebration of National FBLA/National Vocational Education Week, Feb. 12-18.

The teacher and staff appreciation committee, co-chaired by Stephanie Creech and Staci Davis, is planning the event.

Other activities during the week will include announcements on the school intercom and spotlights on radio and television. A newspaper will be published and distributed to all students enrolled in business courses.

In addition, chapter officers will present the monthly Winterville Ruritan Club program Monday. A March of Dimes project HELP (Health Education Leads to Progress) will also take place during the week. Canisters will be collected from each homeroom and a party will be given to the homeroom contributing the most money.

The highlight of the week, according to chapter adviser Mary Thomson, will be participation in the district competitive events Tuesday at East Carolina University. The following students will compete: Ragan Spain, Mr. FBLA; Lori Dennis, Miss FBLA; Lisa Mayo, job interview; Lynn Page and Sandra Staton, business graphics; Lisa Watson, clerk typist I; Tina Buck, clerk typist II; Carolyn Pearsall, accounting I; Ann Hardy, public speaking, and Jeff Taft, officer candidate.

Second Recall Of Flour Is Ordered

RALEIGH (AP) — A second recall of flour contaminated with the pesticide ethylene dibromide, which has caused cancer in laboratory animals, has been ordered by the state Department of Agriculture.

Family Friend Brand Self-Rising Enriched Flour, milled by King Milling Co. in Stokes County, was recalled because samples were found to exceed the limit of 150 parts per billion, officials said in a prepared statement Thursday.

Tests showed the flour to have EDB residues ranging from 153 to 246 parts per billion. The North Carolina Board of Agriculture on Monday established a limit of 150 parts per billion.

"The product batches are not coded so it was necessary to remove all of the brand from store shelves," said Leonard Blanton, director of the North Carolina food and drug protection division.

Ensley Co-Chairman For Faircloth Race

Lauch Faircloth, a candidate for the Democratic nomination as governor, has announced the appointment of Ramona Ross Ensley as co-chairman of his campaign in Pitt County.

"I'm proud somebody who has been so actively involved in community leadership as Ramona will be co-chair of my campaign in Pitt County," Faircloth said. "She is an outstanding addition to our campaign team."

Mrs. Ensley is administrative assistant to the district attorney in Pitt County, is a special registrar, and is active in the Democratic Party as historian of the Democratic Women. She is also assistant secretary to York Memorial AME Zion Church in Greenville, and secretary to the American Legion Auxiliary Post 160.

Mrs. Ensley's husband, Dr. Donald Ensley, is a professor at East Carolina University and director of minority affairs for the state Democratic Party.

Faircloth, a businessman and farmer from Sampson County, has served in the administrations of three North Carolina governors, including terms as secretary of commerce and chairman and member of the old Highway Commission.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 2-10

ATW GHAEKEVWUH' BESE AWGV TGH
 VGKC HAGU BSGCWUH.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — THE CHEF'S GARBLED THEORIES ON COOKING ARE HALF BAKED.
 Today's Cryptiquip clue: E equals O.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.
 Pakistan has done well in recent world championship events. Their team is led by the brilliant, though occasionally erratic, Zia Mahmood. He and his partner, Salim, were the only pair to get to slam on this deal from the 1983 World Championships.
 Zia opened a weak no trump, and Salim's two diamonds was forcing Stayman. North showed his hearts, and South forced with two no trump, asking partner for another suit. North showed his clubs, and South introduced his spade suit. When North now bid four diamonds as a cue-bid in support of spades, South went straight to slam, since he knew that his partner had to be 3-4-2-4 with a doubleton king of diamonds.

The diamond lead made South's task easy. He took his two high diamonds and ruffed a diamond with the eight of trumps. He came back to hand with the queen of hearts and ruffed another diamond high. Dummy's remaining trump was the vehicle for declarer to enter his hand to draw trumps and claim twelve tricks.

Life would have been more difficult after a trump lead. Since East can discard a heart on the third diamond, declarer will have no fast entry to his hand after ruffing the fourth diamond. If he leads a club, West will win the first club and give his partner a heart ruff for down one.

If declarer reads the distribution, he can lead a club at trick two. East wins and leads a second trump, which prevents declarer from ruffing two diamonds on the board. However, South can recover by ruffing one diamond in dummy, crossing back to the queen of hearts and then leading out all of his trumps. West is caught in a red-suit squeeze. He cannot guard against both the long heart in dummy and the long diamond in declarer's hand, so the slam comes home.

Gets 15 Years For A Bombing

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — An 18-year-old Conover man who pleaded guilty to bombing the Catawba County Sheriff's Department last December has received a 15-year prison sentence.

Jerry Lee Crooks entered the plea and was sentenced Thursday in Catawba County Superior Court.

He confessed that he put a pipe bomb on a window ledge of a detective's office on Dec. 8, 1983. No one was hurt when the bomb exploded shortly after 9 p.m. although the only person in the office, a secretary decorating a Christmas tree, was knocked down.

The bomb was wrapped with electrician's tape and contained explosive powder. Authorities said they could not determine how the bomb was detonated.

Education In ROTC

Army ROTC scholarships can provide thousands of dollars in education assistance to high school students who qualify, according to Col. Carl Grantham, ROTC instructor at D.H. Conley High School.

Army ROTC scholarships cover college tuition, laboratory fees and include an allowance to purchase textbooks, classroom supplies and equipment. Scholarship winners receive a tax-free subsistence allowance of up to $1,000 each school year the scholarship is in effect. Students are also paid for attending the ROTC Advanced Camp during the summer between their junior and senior years.

The scholarships are awarded strictly on merit and can be used at 315 colleges across the country that have Army ROTC. Selection is based on college board scores, class rank, participation in athletics, extracurricular activities and demonstrated leadership potential. Candidates must be seniors, qualify medically and pass a physical aptitude examination.

Interested students may obtain an application by writing to Army ROTC Scholarships, P.O. Box 9000, Clifton, N.J., 07015. Completed applications should be mailed to Army ROTC Scholarships, Fort Monroe, Va., 23651 and must be received before Dec. 1, 1984.
