Marines To Begin A Beirut Pullback

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today ordered U.S. Marines to begin this weekend their pullback from Beirut to Navy ships off the Lebanese coast, though a contingent of 500 American military personnel will remain, the White House said.

Larry Speakes, the White House spokesman, said the president made the decision formally in a session with his national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger had prepared a report for Reagan that outlined the withdrawal timetable.

One official, who insisted on anonymity, said Thursday that the pullback of the Marines, who were sent to Beirut 17 months ago as part of a multinational peacekeeping force, will be completed 30 days from today.

In fact, the initial phase of the redeployment is already under way with the moving of some equipment from the Beirut airport to the ships to which the Marines are assigned.

Meanwhile, Beirut radio reported that President Amin Gemayel of Lebanon has agreed to renounce his government's May 1983 troop-withdrawal agreement with Israel, and to endorse an eight-point Saudi plan that will allow him to remain in office.

While revealing the timetable to reporters, the White House official was adamant in rejecting the notion that the redeployment, or the Saudi diplomacy in the region, signal a failure of U.S. policies in the Middle East.

"Look at what is happening here in the framework of two years of effort," he said. "There have surely been setbacks, bad ones, but I think we have to recognize that there have been substantial gains."

As an example, he cited the exodus of the Palestine Liberation Organization from Lebanon. "It was not until the multinational force went in that the United States was able to broker the departure of 5,000 (Palestinians) from Beirut," he said.

"The striking outcome is that there is even more deeply felt today an awareness of the imperative of solving the Palestinian problem and a recognition that only the United States can advance all the parties toward a solution," he said.

He also said the Lebanese government has shown it is willing to take risks in an effort to establish a representative government that would include all of its various factions.

Maintaining he was "very puzzled" by any assertion of waning U.S. influence in the area, the official said that the United States "is acknowledged by the states in the area as central to the peace process."

The official insisted there was no reason for Secretary of State George P. Shultz to cancel his planned vacation in the Bahamas.

Stewart, Jordan In 'Forum' Last Night

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

About 60 persons were on hand as two candidates for the Democratic nomination as lieutenant governor — Carl Stewart and Bob Jordan — faced each other at a candidates forum sponsored by the Pitt County Young Democrats Club here Thursday night.

Each candidate made introductory comments, then the two responded to a dozen prepared questions. State YDC President Ronnie Thompson of Morganton, who posed the questions to Jordan and Stewart, said it was the first such forum among candidates for lieutenant governor this year.

In his introductory remarks, Stewart, a member of the General Assembly for 14 years and speaker of the House of Representatives for two terms, said, "I bring to this race" experience in presiding over a legislative body and the knowledge of "how best to handle bills."

A Gaston County lawyer, Stewart suggested that the lieutenant governor "has the ability to set policy" through the appointment of Senate committees and committee chairmen, and he pledged to "work with the governor, not against the governor," in an effort to help fashion policies and programs for the state.

"The real issue" of the lieutenant governor's race, Stewart said, is "the kind of leadership" the Senate will have. "I don't think we've had effective leadership in the Senate" over the past few years. "I would change that ... want to change that ... change the Senate from a good old boy's club" to a "responsive legislative body."

Major issues facing North Carolina, Stewart said, include improvements in public education and in the state's correctional system, the need to lessen adult illiteracy, and the need to balance industrial expansion with protection of the environment.

Jordan, a Montgomery County businessman who has served four terms in the Senate, said "there are some clear choices in this race. I believe we have responsible government ... sound government. We have good government and a great state.

"I'm the candidate that's had the experience in creating jobs in small business," Jordan said, through the expansion of his lumber business over the years to what he said is "the largest" business of it's type in the state.

Jordan, saying it is the Senate that gives power to the lieutenant governor, emphasized, "I am committed to see that we open up the process ... have better debate" and "not cater to the vocal few," but rather "listen to the needs of all."

Jordan sugested that school teachers and other state employees should receive pay hikes, and efforts should be made to increase industrial development.

However, Jordan said, "We have to see that jobs are spread out over the entire state, not centered in the Triad or the Research Triangle area."

Responding to a question dealing with teacher pay and low student test scores, Jordan suggested that teachers' pay be increased to attract more qualified teachers, and take action to "help teachers have more time to teach ... less paper work." He also suggested paying teacher extra for tutoring slow students.

Stewart, responding to the same question, stressed "a committment on my part to strengthen" the education system in the state.

"The advent of the community college system is one of the greatest things to happen in North Carolina," Stewart said, responding to a question about how best to improve wages and provide more job opportunities.

Stewart said all schools in the state should be utilized in an effort to "do something about adult illiteracy," and make those people more qualified to hold jobs.

He also said the community college system, which provides voca-

Healthy Signals In Reports Of GNP

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy grew at a healthy annual rate of 4.9 percent in the final three months of 1983, the government said today amid mounting signs that the first part of 1984 will be even better.

The Commerce Department reported that the real gross national product, the inflation-adjusted value of the nation's output of goods and services, performed even better than a preliminary estimate of 4.5 percent made last month.

While the revision to 4.9 percent wasn't as high as some economists were predicting, it still reflected an even better economic performance than the government had originally thought.

The increase came primarily from better showings in housing construction and business investment, the Commerce Department said.

The revised 4.9 percent figure for the fourth quarter did not change the 3.3 percent increase in real GNP for all of 1983, which the government announced last month.

The annual increase was still the best showing since 1978 and reflected the economy's strong showing during the year as it pulled out of the recession.

With a slew of bright economic indicators released this week on the business experience in January, economists are predicting an even better showing for the first quarter of 1984.

Some analysts have said real GNP should grow 6 percent this quarter, spurred by increased business investment and higher consumer spending.

However, that pace is not expected to last through the year even though continued improvement is expected.

The 1983 advance followed a decline of 1.9 percent in 1982 — the worst drop-off since 1946 — and a 2.6 percent increase in 1981.

The revision of the fourth quarter still left the performance of the last three months of the year bhind the torrid rate of 9.7 percent and 7.6 percent posted in the second and third quarters as the recovery was really picking up steam.

Economists have said the slower growth now is welcome because too fast a pace would trigger increased inflation.

Congressional Club Under FEC Probe

RALEIGH (AP) — A petition filed by federal election officials against the National Congressional Club and another group with ties to Sens. Jesse Helms and John East may have been politically motivated, the executive director of the club says.

The Federal Elections Commission filed the petition Thursday against the Congressional Club and its affiliate, Jefferson Marketing, saying the groups have refused to answer questions about their operations.

Carter Wrenn, the club's treasurer and executive director, said he was "deeply concerned" about the FEC action.

"I wonder if it is politically motivated and that the FEC might have violated their own regulations" to keep investigations confidential, Wrenn said.

He said he couldn't comment on the probe because of its confidentiality rules.

In the civil action, the commission said the two groups had not responded to certain queries and provide documents since it began an investigation last year.

The FEC asked the U.S. District

ECU Center Combats Aphasia-Dyslexia

By LESLIE TODD
ECU News Bureau

An otherwise bright and lively young child seldom speaks and can't form short sentences. This child may be suffering from developmental aphasia, a relatively common difficulty in understanding and/or speaking our language.

A third-grader tries hard to complete her assignments but routinely confuses or reverses words or letters. She may be a vicitm of dyslexia, a reading disability often accompanied by difficulties in spelling and writing.

Developmental aphasia and dyslexia are speech and language roadblocks for thousands of people, ranging in age from toddlers to adults. The causes for these disabilities are complex, and the programs for combating them must be carefully mapped out on an individual basis.

But almost all of those who suffer from aphasia or dyslexia can be helped, either to overcome their disability or to lessen its impact on their lives.

In North Carolina, two centers, one at East Carolina University and the other in Boone, provide diagnostic services, evaluation, treatment or counseling for those who are affected by aphasia or dyslexia.

Both centers were established in 1972 by the Scottish Rite Masonic Foundation, a non-profit organization which provides funding for developmental aphasia and dyslexia programs across the country. At ECU, the program is operated in close cooperation with the Department of Speech, Language and Auditory Pathology (SLAP), a division of the School of Allied Health and Social Professions.

"The Scottish Rite program at ECU serves eastern North Carolina in terms of aphasia and dyslexia much like the Mayo Clinic serves the nation in the field of neurologucal diseases," says Dr. Sal DeMarco, director of the ECU center. "We have the equipment, materials and trained personnel to act as the region's primary source of aphasia-dyslexia evaluation and treatment."

The ECU center's service area generally stretches from Raleigh and Fayetteville eastward to the coast. Last year, 374 individuals were evaluated and 66 received treatment or other services from the program. According to DeMarco, these figures will rise in the future.

Clients are introduced to the center through schools, private doctors, pediatricians or self-referrals. Most are young children, but ages vary from 12-month-old infants to college students.

In each case, a thorough evaluation is performed to determine the exact nature of the learning disability and its root causes. Evaluations usually require at least two hours of observation and testing and some take eight or more hours to complete.

"We work with school psychologists, counselors and speech pathologists; classroom teachers, parents, doctors, principals, anyone who has worked with or observed the client," explains Carol Batts, dyslexia specialist at the ECU center. "A good evaluation almost always means more than a series of tests. Seeing the child in a classroom situation, for example, can be critical in identifying problems."

"Each individual's case is so unique that it's impossible to follow just one or two standard practices," adds DeMarco. "The right approach must take into account the client's age, the exact nature of the disability and the type of local services that are available to carry out the treatment.

"In a general sense, you could say that we concentrate on identifying a client's strengths and weaknesses, and choose a treatment that builds on the strong points."

Processing of all cases falls to a small staff made up of director DeMarco; part-time dyslexia specialist Batts; a secretary; and a part-time clinical supervisor. Supervised assistance in evaluation and treatment is also provided by 20 to 30 graduate students in the SLAP department.

Treatment programs are performed at the ECU facility for clients who reside in Greenville or surrounding counties. Those who cannot commute to the clinic are provided with treatment programs that can be administered by their school speech pathologist, a local specialist or through a classroom teacher. In these cases, the center provides continuing consultation, evaluation and treatment materials; and acts as a clearinghouse for new information on speech and language disabilities.

According to DeMarco, one of the ECU center's primary goals is to expand its out-reach service to include more clients from outside the Greenville area.

"We are working hard to make people aware of the services we offer," says DeMarco. "It's important that people learn about developmental aphasia and dyslexia and know that in almost all cases, something can be done to correct or ease the problem."

Some of the possible signs of developmental aphasia, DeMarco says are:

•The child is not producing 2-3 word sentences by age 3.
•The child is difficult to understand after age 3.
•The child omits noun and verb endings ("ing" and "ed" for example) after age 5.
•The school-aged child demonstrates difficulty in remembering or recalling what is said.
•The school-aged child has difficulty expressing himself clearly.

Three possible signs of dyslexia are:

•The child reverses words and letters when reading or writing.
•The child has difficulty in copying letters.
•The child has trouble recognizing and/or recalling letters, shapes and words.

"We deal with the 'unexplained problems,'" observed DeMarco. "The clients we see are normal or above average in intelligence but are not reaching their potential because of a speech or language problem.

"Getting to the root of these problems and finding ways to eliminate them is what our center is all about."

COCONUT CHICKEN

It's an easy oven dish.

3-pound (generous) frying chicken, cut up
1 large egg
1½ cups loosely packed flaked coconut (from a 7-ounce package)
¼ cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
¼-pound stick butter, cut in 8 pats

Wash and dry chicken. Beat egg until foamy. With a sharp knife or in a food processor chop coconut very fine — there should be 1 cup. Stir together flour, salt and pepper. Dip chicken, 1 piece at a time, in egg; roll in coconut and then in flour mixture. Preheat oven to 400 degrees. In the oven, in a 3-quart baking dish (13½ by 8¾ by 1¾ inches), heat butter just until it melts. Arrange chicken, skin side down, in butter in baking dish. Bake in the 400-degree oven for 30 minutes; turn chicken skin side up; continue baking until tender — 20 to 30 minutes longer. Scbape up drippings with a spatula and, if you like, serve with chicken accompanied by rice. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Patients' Parents Can Face Trouble

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The parents of many children who undergo lifesaving liver transplants often face emotional troubles after the operation, according to the preliminary findings of a Children's Hospital study.

Parents feel anxiety over the health of the child and guilt about the death of the donor who provided the organ, said Joanne W. Miller, a psychologist and one of six people conducting the research.

"I think nearly all parents feel very torn over the fact that another child died to save their child," she said.

She said some parents become overprotective, affecting the child's social and psychological development.

But even with such problems, "the parents were in universal agreement that the operation was worth doing," Ms. Miller said.

According to the researcher, the worries are at a peak during the first two or three months after the operation and diminish over time.

Linda McNeeley of Darien, Conn., the mother of the first child to survive a liver transplant in Pittsburgh, said she didn't know what to expect after the operation.

"I was afraid his immune system would not be functioning normally," she told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. "I was afraid he would be very sickly. I felt like I had to keep him in a bubble."

Mrs. McNeeley said her 5-year-old son, Todd, has been "extremely well" since he came home from the hospital on June 6, 1981, and that her fears were unfounded.

"As time went on, he's really done well," she said.

Ms. Miller and her colleagues have completed interviews with 25 parents and children. The children are among the 73 youngsters who have undergone transplants since Dr. Thomas Starzl started doing the procedure in Pittsburgh three years ago.

The information gathered in the study will be used to help future liver recipients and their families.

Despite the problems, "the parents were in universal agreement that the operation was worth doing," she said.

David Yomtoob, 15, of Niles, Mich., received a new liver $2\frac{1}{2}$ years ago. David, who plays soccer and baseball, said he feels "excellent" and has learned to live his life one day at a time.

He said his parents worried about infections when he first came home from the hospital.

"But at the hospital they had been told not to worry, that they should treat me like any other normal kid," he said.

The researchers usually begin asking families about their fears before the operation. Then, they speak with the families at six-month intervals after the child has been discharged from the hospital.

Ms. Miller said many parents also worry about the side effects of cyclosporin, a drug which prevents the liver from being rejected. Patients must take the drug for the rest of their lives.

In children, the medication can cause hair growth on eyebrows, upper lips, arms and legs.

"Many mothers are very resourceful in finding cosmetics to help deal with the problem," Ms. Miller said.

Dear Abby

A Million Thanks May Be Too Many

DEAR ABBY: I usually agree with you. However, I did a double take when I read the following item:

"Dear Abby: I recently celebrated an 'important' birthday and received many lovely cards.

"A friend casually mentioned (on seeing the stack of cards) that I would be very tired by the time I had written thank-you notes for all those cards.

"Abby, does a person have to write thank-you notes for cards? — WRITER'S CRAMP

"DEAR CRAMP: No one 'has to' acknowledge anything. But those with the best manners acknowledge everything — cards included."

Come on, Abby, you must be kidding. I hope you are snowed with letters from readers protesting your answer. I can see it now. "Thank you for the birthday card." Then the recipient sends a card saying, "Thank you for your card thanking me for my thank-you card." Than a card in return, "Thank you for the thank-you card thanking me for my thank-you ..."

I think I will go out and buy some stock in Hallmark Cards.

V.T. MOON, DUARTE, CALIF.

DEAR MR. MOON: You are right, of course, but I can't say I wasn't warned. My editor suggested that I rethink my stance, but I held firm in the belief that those who remembered an "important" birthday with a card should be thanked along with those who had sent a costly gift. ("It's the thought," I thought, "that counted.")

Bear in mind, I was alluding only to "important" birthdays — not to ordinary birthdays, Christmases, anniversaries, get-well cards, etc. But had I thought it through (which I did not), even acknowledging cards for "important" birthdays needs some qualification.

For example, Cary Grant, that magnificent living legend who recently celebrated a well-publicized "important" birthday, must have received 50,000 cards from well-wishers around the world. Obviously, Cary Grant cannot thank everyone who sent him a card — so there goes my logic.

Let's just say that I was wrong. So if anyone out there sends me a "condolence" card for this collossal gaffe, don't expect a thank-you card from me.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to hear from women who have had babies in their 40s. How do they handle it when strangers say to their child, "I'll bet Grandma spoils you!"

They take us for grandmas. I like the looks on people's faces when I tell them I'm the mother. They always say, "Oh, I'm sorry!"

Well, I'm not. My baby was no accident. She's a gift — like the rest of my children.

Speculation Only

When the new Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko came to power he inherited the Yuri Andropov hierarchy as well as the established bureaucracy, policies and programs ... and problems.

As the saying goes: it all went with the territory.

On that basis alone, it is tempting to believe that even if the new leader is inclined to soften Kremlin attitudes toward the West, it will be a slow and difficult process to change the established course of U.S.S.R. policy.

Too, Chernenko has been a Communist Party member since he was 20 years old, and habits of party discipline do not change in days, weeks or months. He will have to be imaginative beyond the ordinary to venture outside the old guidelines of thought and conduct to brashly insist on an early aboutface in Soviet relations with the United States.

Given time and the development of personal power and authority in the Kremlin, it is one of those conceivable changes an optimist would hope was in the wings.

Logic dictates that unless there are already strong forces favoring a live-and-let-live attitude toward the United States, any Chernenko moves in that direction would be painfully slow.

Washington has little choice but to continue its efforts toward a meeting of minds with Moscow. The goal at least carries with it a nothing-to-lose, and much to gain for the world at large.

And at best, these contemplations can only be looked upon as speculation.

Best Isn't Enough

Winning isn't everything, but in the international microcosm of Olympic competition, it's all there is.

And six medals — only three of them gold — in Sarajevo isn't enough to make the United States a winning nation. Even with Bill Johnson's and Scott Hamilton's gold medals Thursday America can only finish fifth among the nations of the world.

Time and time again American athletes have indicated on television interviews that they're out there doing their best and having a good time and if they win while doing it, that's fine.

That's not an attitude that attracts medals.

Winning is more than having a good ski run, for example, and a good time. It's more than doing your best, its not having "best" as a limitation. It takes talent, ambition and wanting to win above all else.

A U.S. crosscountry skiier who finished well below third place in his competition said in an interview that winning wasn't that important to him; what was important, though, was that he did his best.

That's a cop-out of the worst kind. We don't go to the Olympics to do our best, we go to win.

In a world where athletic ability progresses further and further "above the rim," a competitor can never forget, as many of America's Olympic athletes have, that the opposite of winning is losing.

The Jims Have Control In N.C.

RALEIGH — They've been in control since 1972 and, to cover all their bases, they've got two candidates running for governor this year. Of whom am I speaking? Not the Republicans, not the Democrats, the liberals or the chamber of commerce. It's the Jims.

That's right, since 1973, this state's top two elected officials have been Jims. There was Gov. Jim Holshouser and Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt in 1973 followed by Gov. Hunt and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green from 1977 to present. Now, with Hunt forced to retire, Rep. Jim Martin is the almost certain Republican nominee for governor and Green is a Democrat candidate. The Jims are obviously out to keep control of the Governor's Mansion although they've failed to get a single one of their kind on the ballot as a candidate for lieutenant governor.

This is not just a Jim conspiracy. It's really much wider. It's a conspiracy of the "J's." Since 1980, the state's two U.S. senators have been "J's," John East and Jesse Helms, and then there are the congressmen, Jim Martin and Jim Broyhill. In the Council of State, there's Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham, Labor Commissioner John Brooks and Insurance Commissioner John Ingram.

In the state Senate, there are seven J's. In the state House, 20. Undoubtedly, those numbers would be higher but for the other letter conspiracy, the ABCs. In the Senate, seven members have last names beginning with A, B or C. That's probably not a great disproportionate share. But in the House, 34, more than a quarter of the membership, are A, B or C. And, since House members often move into the Senate, the ABC conspiracy appears to have a bright future.

To get serious for a paragraph, the ABC conspiracy is a recognized political phenomenon. Legislators have noted that midway along the alphabetic voting board in the House chamber stands the name Holmes. Using their keen political brains, they've deduced that voters often pull the first lever they see upon entering the voting booth. But, with the ABCs in control, don't expect names on the ballot to be listed any way other than alphabetically.

Outside the Legislature, the ABCs don't do that well. They own only four coungressmen and two members of the Council of State and they haven't had a governor since Gov. Cherry.

One force sure to gain power next year is the Funny Middle Name Group.

All of the major Democratic candidates for governor — with the exception of Hayden Edward Knox — have odd middle names. Knox apparently found his own first name funny enough that he chose to be known as "Eddie" instead. There's Rufus Lige Edmisten, Tom Odell Gilmore and James Collins Green. John Ingram's middle name is Randolph which isn't odd outside of the fact he was middle-named after his home county.

Then there's Duncan McLauchlin Faircloth. No wonder he calls himself "Lauch." Since few people can figure out how to pronounce "Lauch," and since some people call him Lurch or Launch, Faircloth's nametag usually includes the phonetic "Lock."

At campaign headquarters for Republican Martin, no one knew the middle name of their candidate. After a lengthy search, however, they learned that Martin's middle name is Grubbs — like the middle names of the Democrats, a family name. Martin's campaign manager — a man who is fully aware of these conspiracies — let it slip that the JH faction has a firm control of the J Conspiracy. They are Hunt, Helms and Holshouser, Martin manager Jack Hawke said.

Strength For Today

Years ago a great saint wrote these words: "Beware of emptiness — empty hours, empty hands, empty companions, empty words, empty hearts. Draw not evil spirits as a vacuum draws air. To be occupied with good is the best defense against the inroads of evil."

Jesus told a parable about a man out of whom a demon had been cast. But no attempt was made, after the evil had been cast out, to fill the man's life with good. Accordingly, a host of demons more evil than the one which had been cast out came into the man's heart.

We need to remind ourselves constantly that there is nothing worse for us than an empty life. Evil has to be met head-on with good.

Less Painful

NEW YORK (AP) — Income-tax time will be a little less painful for many married couples this year, thanks to a change in the rules covering families in which both spouses work.

On their return for 1983, such a couple can take a deduction of up to 10 percent of the pay received by whichever of the two had the smaller income, up to a maximum write-off of $3,000.

The new rule, a provision of the tax law passed in 1981, is designed to ease the burden of the so-called marriage penalty. The tax code, with its many quirks, usually results in a bigger bill for two-income married couples than the same people would have to pay if they were single.

The two-income deduction was introduced in 1982, but in that first year it was limited to 5 percent of the lower earner's income, or a maximum of $1,500. Now that it is up to full strength, it can result in some very pleasant surprises for taxpayers eligible to take it.

Consider the example of a family in which one spouse brought home $22,000 and the other $18,000 last year. Their deduction of $1,800 lowers their taxable income from $40,000 to $38,200.

The deduction is spotted advantageously on the tax forms, too — not on the schedule with itemized deductions like home mortgage interest, property taxes and union dues, but in the section where "adjusted gross income" is calculated. Thus, it may be taken whether you itemize other deductions.

Tax experts point out, however, that the deduction is available only to couples who file joint returns, and covers only "earned" income — defined as wages, salaries, professional fees and other payments for services rendered.

It doesn't apply to dividends and interest. Also excluded are payments of deferred income, pensions and annuities, and money paid to one spouse as an employee of the other.

"For example," says Commerce Clearing House, a Chicago-based publisher of tax information, "if an individual is the sole proprietor of an antique shop and employs his spouse as an assistant in the business, the wages paid to the spouse do not qualify for the two-earner deduc-

Military Retirement Costs

WASHINGTON — Pentagon boosters have long claimed that military retirement benefits are crucial to maintaining a qualified officer corps. But a recent study by a private policy group based here illustrates the extent to which those benefits are ripping off taxpayers and may be counterproductive.

This year, military pensions will cost $16.7 billion, or 17 percent more than they did in 1981. The median benefit will be three times as large as that provided by private-sector pension plans.

But beneficiaries will have not contributed one penny to their pension plans, making military retirement the second most expensive entitlement program funded exclusively with tax dollars. As the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities points out, the most costly entitlement program, Medicaid, provides benefits to more than 14 times as many people.

Meanwhile, the wealthiest fifth of U.S. households will receive 60.8 percent of the military pension budget (the top two-fifths will garner 83 percent). About 92 percent of all military pensioners retire with maximum benefits (50 percent of basic pay after 20 years, 75 percent after 30) before their 50th birthday (the median retirement age is 43). And two-thirds of all military retirees have jobs.

Indeed, the Pentagon's pension program gives pilots, engineers and other highly skilled personnel every incentive to retire at their peak earning age and after the government has already spent substantial funds training them.

That may be the Pentagon's way of encouraging a few good men to devote their early careers to military service.

But women and children shouldn't have to suffer budget cuts to pad the checking accounts of captains and colonels. Nor may the Defense Department want to encourage a brain drain as national security becomes even more a matter of technical know-how.

There were grumblings in Vice President Bush's office as Ronald Reagan prepared to announce the redeployment of U.S. troops in Lebanon last Tuesday. In light of the crisis, Reagan asked Bush to postpone for 48 hours a five-day trip to Europe originally scheduled to begin last Wednesday. Bush's staff, however, saw in the delay request a White House desire to assure Reagan a full weekend at his California ranch.

According to a high-ranking U.S. diplomat, last month's rioting in Morocco was not the work of Soviet, Islamic fundamentalist and Israeli agitators, as alleged by Moroccan King Hassan II. The diplomat also said that, during a crisis in which hundreds may have died, the Moroccan government made special efforts to have foreign reporters flown out of the country.

Despite Ronald Reagan's pledge to cut the bureaucracy, federal civilian employment increased by 47,000 in 1983. Seven Cabinet departments — Agriculture, Commerce, Defense, Interior, Justice, Transportation and Treasury — gained civilian employees. Bu the federal work force is still 34,000 below the level when Reagan took office.

In closing, we hear that the Rev. Jesse Jackson has chosen former Justice Department official Barbara Honneger to handle women's issues for his campaign. She resigned in frustration over lax Reagan administration efforts to eliminate sexually discriminatory language in federal laws. Yet, even some feminist groups are wondering about the wisdom of Jackson's choice since Ms. Honneger's performance in office received mixed press reviews.

CIA Tipped The Balance

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency tipped the balance against pressuring Israel to attack Syrian-controlled gun positions near Beirut in conjunction with the Marine pullout, overruling the State Department at a time when Secretary George Shultz was out of town.

CIA Director William Casey and his Mideast analysts gave President Reagan this warning: An Israeli attack clearly designed only to help the U.S. would further diminish American influence in the Arab and Islamic world.

State Department officials who successfully pushed the new U.S.-Israeli strategic agreement last year wanted to test it by urging Israel to send its war planes against Syrian gun positions. Insiders said privately that if Shultz had been [illegible] top-level meetings on the Marine withdrawal, Casey might have lost out.

Conservative Republican legislators attending the first session of budget "down payment" negotiations were surprised and cheered by toughness of a key White House representative: presidential assistant Richard Darman, considered evil incarnate by many right-wingers.

Darman, a onetime aide of liberal Republican Ellictt Richardson and a leader of the White House "pragmatists," made clear at the negotiating session that President Reagan would not bow to Democratic demand for higher taxes and lower defense spending. That was in sharp contrast to his role as a compromise-seeker two years ago during similar budget negotiations.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill regretted, at least for a time, his emotional criticism of President Reagan's Lebanon policy during a White House session with congressional leaders, confiding to an old friend: "I hope I wasn't rude to the president."

Rude or not, Reagan was angry after his run-in with the speaker. It was by order of the president himself that White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters the next day that the Democrats were playing "partisan politics" with Lebanon. The president himself joined the sniping by suggesting the speaker was ready to "surrender" in Lebanon.

It was only a small boo-boo because Vice President George Bush did not get upset and joked later about it, but he was put down unintentionally by attorney general-designate Edwin Meese III at ceremonies celebrating President Reagan's announcement of his re-election bid.

Introducing top administration officials at a large meeting in Constitution Hall where the president outlined second-term hopes to his political appointees, Meese referred to Jeane Kirkpatrick as "the best ambassador this country has ever had at the United Nations."

Meese had forgotten that Bush, seated beside the president on the platform, served as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations from 1971 to 1973. When Bush spoke, he wryly repeated what Meese had said about Ms. Kirkpatrick, adding: "And I am in a special position to know."

Moved In With Prelate's Family

SAGINAW, Mich (AP) — In an unusual way of marking the recent observance of Christian unity week, Saginaw's residence-hopping Roman Catholic Bishop Kenneth E. Untener moved in with the family of Episcopal Bishop William J. Gordon for the period.

Untener, who abandoned his bishop's mansion when he became bishop three years ago and adopted the habit of moving periodically from one parish rectory to another, says his stay with Gordon and his wife seemed to please both their flocks.

Even "if we can't share the same Eucharistic table, at least we can share the same supper table," Untener says. The two, who plan to expand such live-in ecumenicity to include others, say they found they agreed about most things. But Gordon, a jogger, says of Untener, who plays hockey for recreation:

"He didn't get me to play hockey, and I didn't get him to jog."

Conclude Less Discrimination

NEW YORK (AP) — A new study finds that executives in various major corporations generally agree that there is less discrimination against Jews in the corporate world than in the past. But some Jewish executives believe their Jewish identification still is a handicap at the higher executive levels.

The findings were based on attitudes of 75 Harvard-trained business executives, both Jews and non-Jews, in a report issued by the American Jewish Committee. The study was prepared by psychology Professor Richard L. Zweigenhaft of Guilford College in Greensboro, N.C.

Hunger Report Said Low Blow

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Lutheran editor says the report of a presidential task force that there is no major hunger problem in the United States is a "low blow" to churches whose reports document such a problem.

The Rev. Edward R. Trexler, editor of the Lutheran Church in America's magazine, The Lutheran, recounts growing demands on churches for domestic feeding programs and says:

"The brushing aside of church reports on domestic hunger is only one of a number of issues on which the administration chooses not to listen to the churches."

Plan Album Of Wesley Hymns

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An album of hymns by early Methodist leader Charles Wesley is being issued in celebration of this year's observance of the 200th anniversary of the beginning of organized Methodism in America.

Baritone Steven Kimbrough, who teaches church music at Scaritt College, performs and selected the 16 recorded hymns, including "O For a Thousand Tongues to Sing" and "Jesus Lover of My Soul."

Quick Change

Greenville police said this morning that local businesses should be watchful for "quick change artists" operating in the area.

Detective Pete Lavin said three incidents have been reported in as many days in which a black male, about 5 feet, 7 inches tall and driving a black and burgandy-colored car, has pulled the quick change sceme.

The detective said the man would puchase a small item and give the clerk a $20 bill. Before that transaction is over, he will present another bill for change, confuse the clerk, and walk away with $20 of the store's money.

Lavin said the best way to prevent a store clerk from being taken is to complete one transaction before starting another. "If you get confused, stop, shut the cash drawer, and start over," Lavin suggested.

Aussie Visitor Is Writer, Counselor

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

From the sparkle in her eyes to her crisp Australian accent and her stylish peppered-with-grey hair, Patricia Russell is a youthful woman.

She says her 22 years working with young women in Elizabeth, Australia, has kept her perspective fresh and when she talks about her life, her work and her concerns, that perspective is apparent.

"Working with young people has broadened my horizons tremendously," she says. "I've had so many good experiences."

"In my work I was able to talk to them (youth) the way their mums did," she added, "and they were able to respond back to me in that way. We had a special relationship."

Mrs. Russell is a renowned youth leader and Church of Christ member in Elizabeth. She is a grassroots organizer of the Girls Brigade, an organization similar to the Girl Scouts, and is the author of two books for young women, "Jottings To God" and "A Gift of Love." She is a frequent visitor to classrooms in Australia, where she tells youth about the importance of looking after their bodies, minds and spirits.

This week Mrs. Russell visited Dr. Harold Deitch of Hooker Memorial Christian Church in Greenville and spoke to students at Greenville Middle School. In addition, she will speak Sunday at Red Oak and Hooker Memorial Christian churches at 10 a.m. and 11 a.m.

She says she tells youths they have a responsibility to look after both their bodies and their characters. "I tell them it's not enough to be clean and beautiful outside, they must be that way on the inside also," she said.

Young people in Australia, noted Mrs. Russell, have the same needs of American youth. "They have many of the same troubles," she said. "We (Australia) have our share of mixed-up young people also, young people with problems."

Mrs. Russell became a youth leader in her teens and when she came to Elizabeth as a young married woman she started a Sunday school and a Girls Brigade chapter. When she served on the Brigade's National Programming Committee she did writing for the organization and from this writing evolved the nucleus for her first book, "Jottings To God."

"This book is verse and it deals with the thoughts of a young girl as she leaves her childhood days and begins coping with life as a teen," she said. "It contains situations young girls are freequently confronted with when growing up."

Mrs. Russell said that although she opposes abortion, she doesn't want to be labeled anti-abortion. "What I am for is the mums who want their babies," she said. That's what her second book is about.

"When the abortion movement was strong in Australia a few years ago I heard so much for and so much against but I never heard anything about the women who were carrying babies and wanted these babies and were happy," she explained.

"That's what 'A Gift of Love' is about — it traces a woman's experiences from the time she finds out she's pregnant until the child is born and begins to grow from the point of view of a woman who's happy to be giving birth," she said. "I don't want to get put in any category. This book was for the middle of the line."

Her two most rewarding experiences, said Mrs. Russell, both evolved from her Girls Brigade work.

"When I first started I was very young and I had one girl that was just an average girl, nothing special to call attention to her," she said. "Her family shifted, she moved and I didn't see her for ages. When I did, she was married and had children and was in the Brigade — I had no idea she would ever go on to be involved as adult and this was very rewarding."

Another time, a woman Mrs. Russell had in Girls Brigade as a youth asked her if she could put her children in Mrs. Russell's Brigade chapter, even though it involved an out-of-town drive. "I told her yes, and she did, and now her teen-age daughter, whenever I see her, goes out of her way to speak to me and make me feel special. That's two generations."

In addition, Mrs. Russell said youth work brought her closer to her children, particularly her three daughters. "I was able to share things with them I wouldn't have otherwise," she said. "And the fact that two of them have gone on to become youth leaders themselves is most rewarding."

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

THE DEMON OF JEALOUSY

IN THE BIBLE, AS IN MODERN TIMES, JEALOUSY HAS BEEN A MOST DESTRUCTIVE FORCE. TAKE THE CASE OF SAUL, FIRST KING OF ISRAEL. SAUL HAD NO REASON TO BE JEALOUS OR WORRIED ABOUT HIS KINGDOM UNTIL HE DISOBEYED THE PROPHET SAMUEL. THE DISOBEDIENCE STEMMED FROM A VICTORY SAUL HAD SECURED OVER A PHILISTINE KING. SAMUEL HAD ORDERED HIM TO WAGE A WAR OF EXTERMINATION AGAINST THESE ENEMIES OF ISRAEL, INCLUDING THEIR KING. BUT SAUL SPARED THE KING. SAMUEL THEN TOLD SAUL (I SAM.15:11) THAT HE WAS REJECTED OF GOD---AND THEN THE TROUBLE STARTED! SAUL WENT INTO GREAT FITS OF MELANCHOLY AND DAVID WAS CALLED ON TO PLAY MUSIC UPON THE HARP TO SOOTHE HIM. BUT LO AND BEHOLD, WHEN DAVID SLEW GOLIATH, AND BECAME A NATIONAL HERO, VICIOUS JEALOUSY TOOK POSSESSION OF HIM AND FROM THAT TIME ON HE WAS SUBJECT TO EVEN WORSE FITS OF DEPRESSION AND INSANE BEHAVIOR...UNTIL HIS DYING DAY!

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices managed some scattered gains today in a market still bogged down in interest-rate uncertainties.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.61 to 1,159.55 by noontime.

Gainers and losers were evenly balanced in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said many traders were troubled by the outlook for Federal Reserve credit policy. Some observers said it was quite possible that the Fed would soon tighten credit, given recent growth in the money supply and abundant signs that economic expansion is continuing at a brisk pace.

Even those who disagreed with that view conceded that all the evidence of late left little room for the central bank to relax its restraints on monetary growth in the near future.

This morning the Commerce Department put the annual growth rate of the gross national product, after adjusdment for infladion, at 4.9 percent for the fourth quarter of last year. Earlier, fourth-quarter GNP growth had been estimated at 4.5 percent.

Beatrice Foods rose ⅝ to 33¾. Nestle S.A. of Switzerland denied rumors that it was planning a takeover bid for the company.

The NYSE's composite index rose .25 to 90.08. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .05 at 206.12.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 33.31 million shares at noontime, against 35.13 million at the same point Thursday.

tional and technical training, should be "sustained and embellished" to meet the needs of the unskilled.

Stewart said industrial development efforts should also be increased.

Jordan suggested that "retraining is the byword ... provide more vocational education programs ... adult illiteracy programs."

Asked about improvements to the state's highway system, both candidates said they favored completion of the four-laning of U.S. 264 and predicted that I-40 would be completed to Wilmington.

"Highways help industrial growth," Jordan noted, and suggested that if the economy continues to improve, the state may consider another bond issue to help complete a number of highway projects.

"I tend to favor the present system," of a governor-appointed Utilities Commission, Jordan said, when asked whether he would prefer an appointed or an elected commission. "It seems to me you elect the governor and the governor is responsive to the people."

Stewart said that he would be "somewhat reluctant to support a change," because, "in general, the Utilities Commission of North Carolina is acting responsibly."

Both candidates agreed that the state should participate in the leasing of off-shore oil leases with the federal government, and work through officials in Washington to strengthen the tobacco program.

On the question of the death penalty, Jordan said, "It seems to me that we may be in a situation where a sentence can never be consumated." He suggested establishing a commission "to study this."

Stewart, saying he voted in favor of capital punishment while a member of the House, said the present law "is not perfect but on the right track. I'm not sure I'd do anything to tamper with it."

A state lottery?

"I'm not in favor of a state-sponsored lottery," Stewart said, and "it ain't going to pass if I'm elected lieutenant governor," he emphasized.

Although "I voted against it in committee," according to Jordan, he voiced support for a public vote on the question.

Asked their opinion on veto power for the governor, Jordan said, "I'm not in favor of a change in the veto law," while Stewart said, "I think it would be a good thing ... but not likely to occur in the near future."

FEC Probe...

Court in Raleigh to compel both groups to answer subpoenas and orders for information and documents about their activities.

The FEC said its probe in part involved the activities of the club and Jefferson Marketing in a 1982 congressional campaign in North Carolina.

Helms has no official position with the club, established originally to help raise funds to pay off debts from his 1972 Senate campaign. Since then, it has supported him and East, along with other conservative candidates and causes.

Helms, R-N.C., was honorary co-chairman of the club until last year. East, R-N.C., is now its honorary chairman.

Claude Allen, spokesman for Helms' re-election campaign, said the club wasn't connected to the campaign and declined further comment.

East, campaigning in Raleigh for Helms, also declined comment.

The government investigation is the result of a complaint filed in 1982 by U.S. Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C.

Rose has alleged Jefferson Marketing made illegal corporate contributions to his Democratic and Republican opponents in 1982 through cut-rate television advertising services.

The opponents, Democrat Thomas Gibson and Republican Edward Johnson, used a Jefferson Marketing-produced TV ad that criticized Rose for making a trip to Brazil at taxpayers' expense with an aide he has since married, Joan Teague Rose.

Rose also alleged that Jefferson Marketing, a corporation not subject to federal campaign disclosure and contribution limits, was in effect a single organization with the National Congressional Club, a political action committee covered by the federal laws.

Referring to the Rose allegation, the FEC said in documents filed in Raleigh that it had found "reason to believe that violations have occurred."

The FEC said Wrenn, Jefferson Marketing president Douglas Davidson, and the president of the bookkeeping firm for both groups had refused to answer some questions when FEC lawyers took sworn depositions in September.

Pirates Visit ECAC-South Leader

East Carolina University's men's basketball team travels to Richmond, Va., Saturday evening to test the ECAC-South-leading University of Richmond Spiders in a 7:30 p.m. game at Robins Center.

Richmond comes into the game with a 6-1 league record, having lost only in a road game to George Mason within the conference. The Pirates are 1-6 in the conference — their only victory coming in a 70-68 victory over George Mason in Greenville.

Overall, the Spiders are 16-7, and aiming for a 20-victory season as well as the conference championship. They've won ten of their last 12 games, and their record to date is their best start in over 30 years.

In exact contrast, the Pirates are currently 4-18 — and on the verge of their worst season ever. The 18 losses has tied the school record for the most losses and a defeat at the hands of the Spiders Saturday night would establish a new record.

Richmond won the first meeting between the two schools, in Greenville, 61-55.

The Spiders have put together a potent group of players led by last year's ECAC-South Rookie of the Year John Newman. The 6-7 sophomore forward is averaging 22.0 points a game and pulling 6.7 rebounds. In the first meeting with the Pirates, in Greenville, Newman scored 17 points, best on the team that night.

Two others also score in double figures. They are 6-9 senior center Bill Flye at 13.4 and 6-2 junior guard Kelvin Johnson, scoring at a 13.2 clip. The other two starters are 6-5 sophomore forward John Davis, 7.0, and 5-10 sophomore guard Greg Beckwith, 4-4.

Davis is the team's leading rebounder with a 7.5 average, while Flye is jerking away 6.3 a game.

Flye scored 11 points and Davis, 10, in the first game between the two schools.

The Spiders will come into the game following a major win for them, a 56-51 victory over cross-town rival Virginia Commonwealth. At home, the Spiders are 11-2, losing only to VCU in the finals of the Times-Dispatch Tournament, and to Marquette, the latter by 59-55, before a crowd of 7,800.

But while the Spiders are playing to their potential, East Carolina youngsters have still to reach theirs.

"I don't think ever in the history of East Carolina basketball has a group of talent ever been assembled as good as these kids," Coach Charlie Harrison said. "But, they have to go our and play the game and play consistantly for 40 minutes. We are not doing that and have not done that all season."

Harrison has been greatly concerned about the Pirates getting soft on offense after gaining a lead. In their last two games, the Pirates came back out on the floor after intermission and played poorly. They were guilty of turnovers, poor shots and less than great defense.

"I'm concerned about our team backing off from pressure and aggressive play," the coach said. "In the last few games the guys have hidden when the pressure came or threw the ball right in traps for turnovers. Everytime anyone gets aggressive, our kids act like there's a bomb in the ball and they are afraid it will explode on them."

There have been some bright spots for the Pirates, however, mostly in the scoring efforts of Curt Vanderhorst, the lone sophomore putting in much playing time. Over the last eight games, he's averaged 17.1 points and has an 11.2 mark for the season.

Freshman swing man William Grady has also come on lately in the scoring, hitting 11.4 over the last nine games. He has a 6.7 mark for the season.

The ECU-Richmond game will be the first of five games that will wind up the season, all against teams the Pirates have played earlier in the year. After Saturday night, the Pirates host Navy on Monday (first game won by Navy, 79-61), travel to UNC-Wilmington on Saturday, Feb. 25 (first won by ECU, 43-41), close out the road slate against Campbell in Fayetteville (ECU won 75-66) and finish at home against James Madison (JMU won 71-57).

McKinney, Cooper Ousted On Foggy Course

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — A foggy slalom course tripped up two of America's best skiers today and stifled U.S. medal hopes following its first double-gold performance of the XIV Winter Olympic Games.

Tamara McKinney of Lexington, Ky., and Christin Cooper of Sun Valley, Idaho, both favored to win medals, missed gates on their first run down the Mount Jahorina slope. They were the only U.S. entries.

Unheralded 19-year-old Paoletta Magoni of Italy, a virtual unknown in the top ranks of international skiing, mastered the tricky course to take the gold medal in a time of one minute, 36.47 seconds, coming from fifth after the first run. Her best finish in four World Cup seasons had been a sixth place.

Perrine Pelen of France won her second medal of these Games, taking the silver in 1:37.38. Pelen was the bronze medalist in the giant slalom on Monday. Liechtenstein's Ursula Konzett finished in 1:37.50 to win the bronze.

Eighteen of the 45 starters fell or missed gates on the first run.

McKinney had the fastest intermediate time, but missed a gate when she hooked the tip of her ski about halfway down. Cooper was also having a good run when she missed a gate in the upper portion of the track.

"In slalom, you have to take as many chances as possible, as many chances as you can get away with, and I just took one too many," said McKinney, 21. "I felt like I was skiing well. I felt like I had a good chance to do something. I just hooked a tip and that was it. It's over."

The United States, however, was still savoring victories by a reformed maverick on skis and a whirling dynamo on skates.

It started Thursday morning with Bill Johnson's sizzling, sometimes airborne dash down Mount Bjelasnica. It ended with Scott Hamilton's suspenseful triumph on ice, and it left the United States fifth in the medals standing with five — three golds and two silvers. The leading Soviets had 21 and the East Germans 19.

Johnson was tossed off the U.S. squad in 1982 because he was out of shape and rebellious. At Lake Placid in 1980, he could do no better than serve as a slope test runner for the real talent. But on Thursday, "Wild Bill" was brillant.

In one minute, 45.59 seconds, he shattered European dominance of the downhill and gave the United States its first men's Alpine gold ever. No American male skier had ever finished better than fifth in an Olympic downhill, and no American woman has won the event.

Johnson had predicted his victory and said later, "I put a lot of pressure on myself. If I had gotten second, I'd be a real bum."

Hamilton's gold medal in men's figure skating — the first for America since David Jenkins did it at Squaw Valley in 1960 — capped the United States' best day at the 14th Winter Games, taking some of the sting out of a thin American medal harvest.

In the only other medal event today, the Soviet Union held off last-lap surges by Norway and West Germany to win the 30-kilometer biathlon relay. Kjell Soebak of Norway challenged Soviet anchorman Sergei Buligin, but had to settle for the silver. The West Germans took the bronze.

The hockey medals round was to begin today with the Soviet Union, 5-0, facing Canada, 4-1, and Czechoslovakia, 5-0, against Sweden, 3-1-1. In a match for seventh place, the U.S. team, 1-2-2, faced Poland, 1-4. For fifth place, it will be West Germany against Finland.

Also scheduled to begin was the four-man bobsled competition. Two runs were set for today with the final two on Saturday.

Defending world champion Rosalynn Sumners, 19, of Edmonds, Wash., slipped to second in the women's figure skating Thursday, but was primed for a gold medal assault in Saturday's free skating finale.

If Sumners can win a gold, she will be the first American woman to do so since Dorothy Hamill in 1976, and it would mark the first U.S. sweep of the singles titles since 1956 when Hayes Alan Jenkins and Tenley Albright did it.

The finish by the 23-year-old Johnson, coupled with the 1-2 finish by Americans Debbie Armstrong and Christin Cooper on Monday in the giant slalom, gave the United States its best Alpine showing in 32 years.

Shut out of medals so far in speed skating, hockey, the Nordic events, luge and bobsledding, the U.S. team was looking for someone to ignite them.

Johnson stepped forward.

"I was nervous 20 minutes before the race, but I started to cool down," he said. "In the starting gate, I just said, 'Relax, relax, you've got it.' I feel fantastic."

To beat Europe's best, he counted on his ability to make up ground by gliding in the flat portions of the course. He did precisely that, making up time on the bottom third of the run, which is flatter.

"This is my course. I can go straight faster than anybody here," he said.

His time was .27 seconds faster than Peter Mueller of Switzerland. Austria's Anton Steiner won the bronze at 1:45.95. Franz Klammer, the 1976 Olympic downhill king from Austria, finished 10th.

Most of the previous downhill races have been won by Austria, and Johnson, with typical frankness, said, "I was glad to stick it to the Austrians. They think they should win it every time."

On the medals stand Thursday night, with flag-waving Americans chanting, "Wild Bill, Wild Bill," he waved his arms in big circles, exhorting them to sing along as the U.S. anthem was played.

"This is both America's medal and mine," he said.

Asked what it meant to him, Johnson e men's free-skating segment, a speciality he had won 15 consecutive times.

But the mounting pressure took its toll.

"Tonight wasn't really representative of what I've been doing," said Hamilton, who apologized to his coach after finishing second to Canada's Brian Orser in the free skate.

"I'm a little embarrassed," added Hamilton, who said he became overcautious and "just popped two jumps."

"He's never skated like this since I'm been with him," said Don Laws, Hamilton's coach.

But it was good enough to win, and, Hamilton, fifth in the 1980 Games at Lake Placid, was delighted.

"The whole last four years has been for this night," said the 5-foot-3, 110-pound Hamilton, who credits taking up skating for his recovery from a childhood disease that stunted his growth.

"I feel like I fell off the edge of the world," said Hamilton, who skated in a red, white and blue suit and unfurled Old Glory for a triumphant tour around the rink.

In the women's figure skating, East Germany's Katarina Witt overtook Sumners with a near-perfect short program for a factored placement lead of 2.2 to 2.6 over Sumners.

Area Wrestlers Enter Sectionals

Ten area wrestlers, five from Washington, four from D.H. Conley and one from Roanoke, will be in action Saturday at the Eastern Sectional Wrestling championships, taking aim at a berth in the state championships.

The Eastern Sectionals will be held at Goldsboro High School, with the top four finishers from the Greenville and Fayetteville sectionals colliding for the honor of moving on. The top four finishers — that is, anyone winning a first round match — will advance to the state meet, set the following weekend in Winston-Salem.

While D.H. Conley captured the Greenville Sectional title with 104½ points, Washington had one more qualifier for the regionals. Washington had two first place winners, a second and two thirds. Conley had two firsts, a second and a third. Roanoke's lone advancer was a second place finisher.

Advancing for the Vikings will be 115-pound champion Reginald Moore and heavyweight winner Stacy McCarter. Also moving on to Goldsboro will be 122-pound runner-up Kerry Farris, and consolation winners Shawn Hardy at 135-pounds.

Washington will be represented by 101-pound winner Joe Landen and 141-pound champion Lee Ferguson. Also going on to Goldsboro will be 129-pounder Phil Harris, who finished second, and Brian Stokes, 108, and Kent Keyes (148), both of whom finished third.

Turner's Shot Upsets Illinois

By The Associated Press

The Illinois basketball team knew it would be Eric Turner taking the last shot for Michigan. The problem was, the Illini couldn't do anything about it.

"We would have liked to double-team Turner and we discussed it at the timeout, but we just didn't get it done," said Illinois Coach Lou Henson after Thursday night's 62-60 upset by the Wolverines.

Turner, Michigan's best clutch player, scored 22 points and hit a baseline jumper with two seconds remaining to lead Michigan's triumph over the nation's seventh-ranked team.

"I was trying hard to get open at the end," Turner said. "I wanted the ball — if not to shoot, then to pass to the open man. But, really, I wanted to be the one to shoot at the end. I didn't shoot with a lack of confidence."

The upset was one of three in college basketball, as No. 11 Purdue was beaten by Michigan State 63-53 and No. 15 Washington lost to Oregon State 64-52. In other action, fourth-ranked Houston beat Texas Tech 78-53; No. 5 Nevada-Las Vegas whipped Pacific 92-52; No. 12 Tulsa took an 82-80 victory over Creighton; 17th-ranked Indiana stopped Iowa 49-45 and 20th-ranked Temple routed Rhode Island 85-68.

Top Ten

Before his winning shot, Turner had pulled the Wolverines into a 60-60 tie with a jumper from the left corner with 1:20 remaining.

"I didn't know when it left my hand if it was going in," Turner said of his game-winner. "It felt like a good release, but I still wasn't sure until it went in."

Efrem Winters was high for Illinois with 16 points.

Michael Young helped Houston overcome a sluggish start with 20 points, and Akeem Olajuwon added 14 to lead the Cougars over Texas Tech. The Cougars extended their record of consecutive Southwest Conference victories to 36 and ran their conference mark this season to 12-0.

"We worked hard all week in practice, but when we came out we weren't mentally sharp," Houston Coach Guy Lewis said. "It was tough the first half, no question about it. But the second half, our offense got untracked and we played with better instinct."

Richie Adams collected 18 points and 11 rebounds as Nevada-Las Vegas rolled past Pacific with a tough defense.Adams, the Rebels' center, was the top scorer in a well-distributed offensive attack. Eleven of the 12 players used by UNLV scored. Reserve guard Eric Booker was second high man, with 14.

Second Ten

Sam Vincent and center Kevin Willis each scored 15 points to lead Michigan State's upset of Purdue.With the Spartans holding a 48-45 lead with 4:32 remaining in the contest, Willis scored seven of his team's next 10 points and grabbed several key rebounds on the defensive end as Michigan State took a 57-51 lead.

"When you play a good team like this, you have to get yourself up for it," said Willis. "We told ourselves in the locker room at halftime that we had to play better and harder defense and not allow any second shots or for them to get the ball in the hole at all."

Steve Harris scored 25 points to lead Tulsa over Creighton. The Blue Jays had taken a 74-69 lead with 3:32 to play in the second half, but Tulsa scored the next nine points.

Ricky Ross' dunk shot with 1:45 remaining tied the game at 74 for Tulsa and sent it into overtime. Carlton McKinney's field goal 16 seconds into the extra period gave Tulsa the lead for good.

Oregon State got 19 points and 10 rebounds from forward A.C. Green to knock off Washington and move into a tie with the Huskies atop the Pacific-10 Conference standings.

Green scored 14 points in the second half and made nine of 11 free throws as Oregon State won the game at the foul line. The Beavers made 24 of 31 free throws while Washington didn't make a foul shot in only three attempts.

Indiana's Mike Giomi scored 17 points and Steve Alford made three free throws in the final minute as the Hoosiers dealt Iowa its seventh straight Big Ten defeat.

"I think the game tonight could be summed up by saying two teams had to take an examination," said Iowa Coach George Raveling after the Hawkeyes' blew a seven-point second-half lead. "The exam was on mental discipline and basketball intelligence. Indiana got an 'A' and Iowa got a 'D.'"

Terence Stansbury tossed in 22 points and Granger Hall added 21 as Temple remained undefeated in the Atlantic 10 Conference by beating Rhode Island. The victory left the Owls with a 13-0 league record and 19-2 overall.

Others

In other action, Keith Thomas and Mark Davis teamed for 35 points as Old Dominion beat Jacksonville 62-55; Charles Bradley scored 19 points to lead South Florida to a 67-63 win over North Carolina-Charlotte; Mike King had a career-high 28 points as West Virginia defeated St. Bonaventure 81-68, and Paul Schultz hit a pair of free throws with 56 seconds remaining to lead Northwestern to a 61-60 victory over Ohio State.

Also, John Hempel contributed 29 points as Massachusetts upset St. Joseph's (Pa.) 93-89; Mark Price scored 21 as Georgia Tech took a 68-50 win over South Carolina; Xavier McDaniel collected 18 points and 16 rebounds to lead Wichita State to a 78-67 victory over Indiana State; Kelvin Scarborough scored 13 as New Mexico took a 62-54 victory over Wyoming; Chris Nikchevich connected on four straight free throws in overtime to lead Brigham Young over San Diego State 94-92, and Blair Rasmussen scored 37 points to lead Oregon to a 78-73 decision over Washington State.

Ross, Kornegay In Scoring Lead

Chocowinity's Reggie Ross held onto his area high school scoring lead, but the margin grew smaller over the past week.

And D.H. Conley's Mechio Kornegay, tied last week for the lead with Ayden-Grifton's Cora Faison, has inched into the lead this time around.

This is the final regular season listing, and the next to last for the year. The next listing will be the last — at the conclusion of the season for all teams.

Listings include games played through Wednesday night.

Ross goes into the final game of the regular season with an 18.8 average. Second place is still held by Greene Central's Theodore Edwards, at 17.3, while Farmville Central's Kent Hardy is close behind at 17.1. Edwards was held to only four points Tuesday against Southern Nash — the only time this year he has not been in double figures.

Trinity Christian leads in boys' team offense with a 60.9 average, and the Tigers also head the defense, allowing 45.8 points a game. Thus, Trinity also has the best winning margin, whipping opponents by a 17.6 points per game average.

Kornegay took the lead this week among the girls with a 20.4 average, while Faison fell off to 20.3. Roanoke's Gloria Duggins is third at 18.4.

Chocowinity's girls have the best offense at 54.7, while Trinity's girls are best on defense, giving up 28.3 points a game. Chocowinity has the top winning margin, 15.8 points a game.

Yarborough, Allison Claim Twin Victories

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Cale Yarborough went with raw horsepower and Bobby Allison had the handling as each dashed away to a victory in the $100,000 Uno Twin 125-mile qualifying races.

Yarborough's triumph in the first of Thursday's 50-lap races on Daytona International Speedway's 2.5-mile oval was not surprising.

The three-time Winston Cup champion, who is the defending champion in Sunday's Daytona 500, set an all-time track record here last Sunday when he won the pole position for the $1.1 million race with a lap averaging 201.848 mph.

"Everybody knew Cale had a strong car," said Bill Elliott, whose Ford Thunderbird edged Buddy Baker's Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS by about three feet in the battle for second behind Yarborough. "He got a little break and he just blew away from us."

After a rash of early caution flags — three in 23 laps — Yarborough's Hardee's-sponsored Monte Carlo tucked in between Baker and Elliott.

That's the way it stayed until lap 43 when Yarborough, who had started from the pole and led the early laps, shot past Baker on the backstretch and pulled away.

History shows that being in second place going into the last lap is often the key to winning at Daytona. But Yarborough didn't need a late slingshot maneuver to win this time.

"Buddy didn't want to be first. He slowed down and I could tell he wanted me to go past," Yarborough said. "He slowed down so much, I had to go, but I guess Elliott thought there was something wrong with Baker's car and slowed down just for a second.

"When I did go out front, I figured if I could run flat out and stay out of traffic, maybe I could get away from them. I don't think I could do it again Sunday. That was just a situation where it did work."

Allison, the defending Winston Cup champion, also took the lead for good and moved off to a solid victory in the late going of the second qualifier.

He chased Terry Labonte, who had nailed down the other front row starting post in Sunday's race with a qualifying lap last Sunday of 200.325, until a crash by rookie Randy LaJoie halted the race for one hour and 38 minutes.

LaJoie, in his first Grand National race, suffered no serious injuries but was hospitalized overnight for observation.

Once the green flag did come out on lap 23, Labonte moved into the lead.

Allison, driving a Hardee's-sponsored Buick Regal, moved up to second on lap 39, then shot into the lead on the backstretch of lap 42. He crossed the finish line about two car-lengths ahead of Harry Gant, who edged Labonte by about three feet for second. Both Gant and Labonte were in Chevys.

Positions three through 30 for the 26th Daytona 500 were determined in the qualifiers, with Allison and Elliott earning second-row posts, followed by Baker and Gant in the third row, Neil Bonnett and Benny Parsons in the fourth row and Geoff Bodine and Richmond in the fifth row of the 40-car field.

The last 10 spots on the grid were filled by using qualifying laps turned in earlier this week.

Among the drivers making it into the field on that basis were 1972 Daytona 500 winner A.J. Foyt, seven-time race winner Richard Petty, Joe Ruttman, and Dave Marcis.

In their four losing games in the Super Bowl, the Minnesota Vikings were outscored, 95 to 34.

Trinity Ices Top Seeding

The Trinity Christian School Tigers jumped off to a 15-4 lead in the first period and rolled up a 70-46 victory over Immanuel of Edenton last night, clinching first place seeding in the upcoming conference tournament, and no worse than a tie for first place.

Art Reynolds paced the Tigers with 28 points while Maury Harris added 14. The Trojans were led by Robbie Holland and Mike Ange, each with 12 points, while Steve Harrel added 11.

After jumping off to their early lead, the Tigers continued to race away, outscoring Immanuel, 21-12, to take a 36-16 lead into the dressing rooms at the half.

Immanuel finally managed to get a little offense going in the third period, outscoring the Tigers, 16-11 to cut the lead to 47-32. The Trojans then scored the first four points of the final quarter to cut the lead to 47-36, but Trinity then pulled away to score the next six points and put the game away.

Trinity is now 17-2 on the year and has won 16 in a row. The Tigers travel to Goldsboro tonight to visit Faith Academy.

Trinity's girls received a forfeit victory over Immanuel.

Jackets Defeat South Carolina

ATLANTA (AP) — Coach Bobby Cremins saw some second half signs that he hopes indicate his Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets out of the doldrums that have resulted in five losses in six games.

"We picked up the zip some in the second half," Cremins said Thursday night after the Jackets registered a 68-50 college basketball victory over South Carolina.

"Being on the road has been rough," Cremins said. "We just lost some confidence, some zip. In the second half, I saw some signs of the old team we had."

Tech struggled through the first half before taking the lead for good at 27-25 when Mark Price drilled a 20-footer in the closing seconds.

Price then added 13 of his game-high 21 points in the second half as Tech quickly took control of the game and lifted its record to 16-7. Price, who hit 9 of 14 shots from the field, also had five steals, most of them in the second half.

Yvon Joseph carried the Jackets through the first half, scoring seven of his 19 points during an 11-0 run that enabled Tech to turn a 14-6 deficit into a 17-14 lead. Tech eventually built a 25-17 advantage late in the half before Carolina's Harold Martin and Scott Sanderson, son of Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson, tallied two baskets each to tie the game before Price's late go-ahead shot.

"We played a gutsy first half," Carolina Coach Bill Foster said. "They only thing that kept us from being tied at halftime were a couple of free throws missed."

The Gamecocks generated little overall offense, with Jimmy Foster carrying most of the load with his 16 points — including Carolina's first 10 points in the second half. Foster was benched for the first five minutes of the game for missing the team bus to Atlanta Wednesday.

"We tried to get balanced scoring but we couldn't get scoring from anyone but Foster for a long time," Coach Foster said.

Freshman Bruce Dalrymple added 15 points for Tech, nine of those in the second half. Dalrymple also had game-high totals of 11 rebounds and nine assists.

U.S. Hopefuls Miss Gates In Slalom Run

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Olympic women's slalom was a wipeout for the United States today, as medal favorites Tamara McKinney and Christin Cooper missed gates on their first run and were disqualified.

The mistakes capped an especially disappointing Olympics for McKinney, the defending World Cup overall champion. McKinney, who did not participate in the downhill, skied poorly in the first run of the giant slalom on Monday. She clocked the fastest time on the second run, but finished fourth.

Today, McKinney had the fastest intermediate time on her first run of the slalom, but she missed a gate when she hooked the tip of her ski about halfway down the course. Cooper also appeared to be having a good run when she missed a gate in the upper portion of the track. The 1984 Olympics are over for both of them.

"In slalom, you have to take as many chances as possible, as many chances as you can get away with, and I just took one too many," said McKinney, 21, of Squaw Valley, Calif. "I felt like I was skiing well. I felt like I had a good chance to do something. I just hooked a tip and that was it. It's over.

"I made some mistakes in giant slalom, so maybe I was trying twice as hard in slalom. I would like to have done what I'm capable of doing here, but I didn't. We still have half a season of racing (on the World Cup circuit) left to go. I might take out some of my frustrations on those races."

Cooper, 24, of Sun Valley, Idaho, said she was "just sorry I didn't do it. When you race in the Olympics, you don't race for fourth place. It's win or nothing. That's what you have to do."

Cooper won a silver medal in the giant slalom, finishing behind teammate Debbie Armstrong.

Bill Marolt, the U.S. Alpine director, called the mishaps "unfortunate. This is a good event for us and we really had a good chance for medals.

"Both Tamara and Christin were charged; they really wanted it. Some days luck is with you and some days it isn't. Today, we had two first-seeded girls who could win, and both go out. It's a tough deal."

SPACE-AGE TENNIS

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Space-age tennis rackets? Why not?

Prince Manufacturing Co., a producer of rackets, uses boron fiber in manufacturing them. Wood was the only material in tennis rackets until 1968 when the metal ones came into being.

Boron Fiber, used in aerospace technology, is a lightweight material which is rated 135 percent stronger than steel.

Oscar Nominations To Winners, Losers

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Both box office winners and losers showed up on this year's list of Oscar nominees, which contains several surprises along with the expected "Terms of Endearment" sweep.

A mother-daughter drama with more than a few comic touches, "Terms of Endearment" reeled in 11 Academy Award nominations Thursday, more than any other film. They included best picture and, for James L. Brooks, a TV sitcom veteran in his first directorial outing on a feature film, best director and adaptation screenplay.

"I'm drinking flat champagne," a happy-sounding Brooks said in a telephone interview from London. "None of us saw this coming."

The film's stars, Shirley MacLaine and Debra Winger, are both up for leading actress honors, and Jack Nicholson and John Lithgow are squared off in the supporting actor category.

"The Right Stuff," the $28 million epic about the fibst U.S. astronauts, took eight nominations, answering the prayers of its creators who hope the attention will draw the audience the film until now has lacked.

Released in October by the Ladd Co. and Warner Bros., the film's gross to date is only $15.7 million, compared with the $72.7 milllion "Terms of Endearment" has drawn since December.

"I hope it means a geat deal," Ladd Co. President Alan Ladd Jr. said of the nominations, which will be widely publicized in newspaper ads planned to support the film's expansion this weekend from 87 to nearly 600 theaters.

"The Right Stuff" had been expected to score big in the Oscars, but not Ingmar Bergman's "Fanny & Alexander," which the veteran Swedish filmmaker says will be his last feature. The elaborate period piece, which took third place in total nominations with six, was well-received by the critics, but foreign-language films rarely score multiple nominations.

"Fanny & Alexander" is currently playing in only 31 theaters nationwide, and the film's domestic gross stands at $5.6 million.

Notably absent from the list of contenders was Barbra Streisand, who was unable to muster a single nod for producing, directing, co-writing and starring in "Yentl."

The film did, however, get five nominations from the motion picture academy's 4,000 voting members, including three for its music.

"The Dresser," "Silkwood" and "Tender Mercies" won five nominations each. "Return of the Jedi," the conclusion of the "Star Wars" trilogy which has scaled the upper reaches of the box-office galaxy, scored in only four production categories.

Besides "Terms of Endearment," nominees for best motion picture of 1983 were: "The Big Chill," "The Dresser," "The Right Stuff" and "Tender Mercies."

For best actress, Miss MacLaine and Miss Winger are up against Jane Alexander for "Testament," Meryl Streep for "Silkwood" and Julie Walters for "Educating Rita."

"The Dresser," about an aging thespian and his trusty manservant, supplied two of the four best actor nominees who hail from Great Britain: Albert Finney and Tom Courtenay. The other two Englishmen are Michael Caine for "Educating Rita" and Tom Conti for "Reuben, Reuben." Robert Duvall, the country singer of "Tender Mercies," was the only American nominated.

The best supporting actress contenders are Cher, "Silkwood"; Glenn Close, "The Big Chill"; Linda Hunt, "The Year of Living Dangerously"; Amy Irving, "Yentl"; Alfre Woodard, "Cross Creek."

Besides Nicholson and Lithgow, the nominees for supporting actor are Charles Durning, "To Be or Not to Be"; Sam Shepard, "The Right Stuff"; Rip Torn, "Cross Creek."

Alongside Brooks and Bergman on the director list are Australian Bruce Beresford for "Tender Mercies"; Britain's Peter Yates for "The Dresser; and Mike Nichols for "Silkwood."

For best foreign-language film, "Fanny & Alexander" is up against Spain's "Carmen," France's "Entre Nous," Hungary's "Job's Revolt" and Algeria's "Le Bal."

"Yentl" and "Flashdance" dominated the best song category with two nominations each: "Papa, Can You Hear Me?" and "The Way He Makes Me Feel" from "Yentl," and "Flashdance ... What a Feeling" and "Maniac" from "Flashdance." The other song nomination went to "Over You" from "Tender Mercies."

Three Britons who turned their own stage plays into screenplays won screenplay adaption nominations: Harold Pinter, "Betrayal"; Ronald Harwood, "The Dresser"; and Willy Russell, "Educating Rita." Julius J. Epstein, a Hollywood veteran who wrote "Casablanca," was nominated for "Reuben, Reuben," and Brooks rounded out the list.

Best original screenplay nominees are Lawrence Kasdan and Barbara Benedek, "The Big Chill"; Ingmar Bergman, "Fanny & Alexander"; Nora Ephron and Alice Arlen, "Silkwood"; Horton Foote, "Tender Mercies'; Lawrence Lasker and Walter F. Parkes, "WarGames."

Th 56th annual Academy Awards will be presented April 9 at the Los Angeles Music Center. Johnny Carson returns as emcee for the live ABC telecast.

TRIPLE NOMINATION — Albert Finney, left, prepares for a performance as King Lear with the assistance of his dresser, Tom Courtenay, in a scene from the film "The Dresser". Finney and Courtenay were both nominated for the Academy Award for best actor Thursday by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. "The Dresser" was nominated for best picture. Jerry Lee Cool Over Tax Claim

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — "Honey, this is just a breeze," singer Jerry Lee Lewis said after pleading innocent to a tax evasion charge and being released on $100,000 bond.

"I feel good," the 48-year-old country-rock star, a veteran of brushes with the Internal Revenue Service, said Thursday. "I'm living and breathing ... I got a good lawyer."

An indictment issued Tuesday charged Lewis with one count of hiding his assets to avoid paying the IRS approximately $944,000 in taxes, penalties and interest for 1975 through 1981. Authorities couldn't locate him, however, until he showed up with his lawyer Thursday to surrender to the U.S. marshal in Memphis.

Sporting sunglasses, a dark suit and white shirt with ruffled cuffs, Lewis arrived at the federal building in a Lincoln Continental. Two lawyers and a young woman in a fur jacket accompanied him into the marshal's office.

He was fingerprinted and photographed, then taken to a courtroom where he slumped in a chair, chewing gum, as U.S. Magistrate James Allen explained the tax evasion charge.

A friend, Kenny "Red" Rodgers, posted his house and nightclub as security for the bond.

"I've known him 15 years," said Rodgers, owner of Hernando's Hide-A-Way, a Memphis nightclub where Lewis occasionally performs. "I was just glad to do it."

Over the years, federal agents have seized cars, jewelry and other property from Lewis. In 1981, the IRS auctioned the Memphis residence of his late wife, Jaren, and sold it for $102,000.

Mikhail Might Defer Resigning

NEW YORK (AP) — Ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov might remain as artistic director of the American Ballet Theater past the June 16 deadline he set for resigning, his spokesman says.

The 36-year-old Soviet emigre on Thursday offered the executive committee a new proposal indicating his willingness to stay past that date, said Edgar Vincent.

In accordance with an agreement with ballet board chairman Melville Straus, however, no details will be released until the entire committee has had a chance to study the proposal, Vincent said. The panel is scheduled to meet on the matter next week.

Vincent also declined to discuss Baryshnikov's reasons for making the new offer, adding, "I wish people would stop trying to read his mind and trying to interpret his motivations. It makes for nothing but idle gossip."

Baryshnikov offered to leave the job after the company lost money during an unusually long season — [illegible] months — at the Metropolitan Opera last year. The board refused his resignation.

Permit NCNB To Buy Fla. Bank

WASHINGTON (AP) — NCNB Corp., a Charlotte, N.C., bank holding company, has been given permission to buy Ellis Banking Corp. a Bradenton, Fla., bank holding company, the Federal Reserve Board says.

A brief board statement, dated Wednesday, said reasons for the approval would be announced later.

Five of the board's seven governors voted for the acquisition. Governor Nancy Teeters voted no, and Vice Chairman Preston Martin did not vote.

Lebanon Christians Left A Dead Village

REMOVING BODIES — Two Druse militiamen remove the bodies of the sister and nephew of one of the fighters (on right) from the village of Kfar Matta in Lebanon's Chuf mountains, Thursday. Christian Phalangist militiamen massacred more than 100 civililans from the village in September 1983. The bodies were found after Druse militia drove the Lebanese Army and Phalangists from the village yesterday. (AP Laserphoto)

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The decomposed bodies of scores of people allegedly massacred by Christian militamen were found in a mountain village, along with a blood-stained pillow bearing a message apparently from a foreign newsman.

"Please tell my family I love them," said the message, which included the family's address. It was signed "Clark."

Clark Todd, 38, the London bureau chief for the Canadian television network CTV, bled to death from a shrapnel wound just below the heart suffered as he was covering the Lebanese civil war in the Chouf Mountains.

His body was taken from the village of Kfar Matta, 15 miles southeast of Beirut, a week after his death by the International Red Cross.

Western reporters, including a CBS television crew, were taken Thursday to the village by Druse fighters who captured the area from the Lebanese army two days ago.

Druse said Christian milidiamen killed more than 100 people there during the three weeks of fighting that followed the Israeli pullout from the Chouf in September. After the Israelis left, rightist Christians of the "Lebanese Forces" militia seized Kfar Matta, which was home mostly to Druse, a secret sect that is an offshoot of Islam.

Last fall, Druse fighters claimed the Christians had gone on a killing spree in Kfar Matta, and Christian militia leaders denied the claim. Until now, Western reporters had not been able to check out the claim because of the continued fighting.

The CBS film, viewed later in Beirut, showed scores of bodies of men, women and children, some piled in houses and others scattered in fields near the village.

It showed corpses of more than a dozen children. There also was a skeleton holding another in its arms — apparently a mother and child.

The Druse said more than 100 bodies were found.

There were corpses in bedrooms, living rooms and around dining room tables. Dining rooms that appeared to have been set for breakfast could be seen, the rotten bread, jam and cheese and tea cups still on the tables.

A militiaman pointed to two bodies, and in a choking voice identified them as "my aunt and my mother." The militiaman was not identified.

In one house there was a pile of 12 corpses, believed to be that of the village's Druse sheik and his family.

A Red Cross spokesman said Thursday that the organization's workers had seen many dead civilians in Christian and Druse mountain villages.

"We went to many other villages in the Chouf and saw many dead civilians, both Christians and Druse," said Serge Caccia, the spokesman.

Asked whether the Red Cross knew of mass killings in the villages, he said, "We don't know whether they were killed by shelling or in crossfire, but we saw dead people.

"It is beyond our job to investigate whether it's a massacre or not," Caccia said. He added that at the time, the security situation did not permit the Red Cross to spend much time in the villages "and we wanted to do all we could to rescue those still alive."

He said Red Cross workers has seen bodies in Bmariam, a Christian village where Christian militiamen maintained there had been a massacre by the Druse.

Listed 3 Accidents

An estimated $5,200 damage resulted from three traffic accidents investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted when cars driven by George Alton Gurganus Jr. of 205 N. Library St. and James Russell Zep collided about 6 p.m. on First Street, 75 feet east of the Library Street intersection.

Police, who set damage to the cars at $1,500 each, charged Zepp with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident.

Cars driven by Julian Lee Myers of 123 Aycock Dorm and Glenn O'Neal Faison of Route 1, Turkey, collided about 6:59 p.m. at the intersection of 10th and Cotanche streets, causing $1,000 damage to the Myers car and $200 damage to the Faison car.

Police said an estimated $500 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 4:40 p.m. collision at the intersection of Evans and Howell streets.

Drivers of the vehicles involved were identified by investigators as James Andrew Shaw of 409 Holly St. and Jo Ann Burns of B9 Glendale Court.

Officers charged Ms. Burns with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of the collision.

Transfusions For 'Bubble Boy'

HOUSTON (AP) — To combat persistent internal bleeding in his gastro-intestinal tract, David, the 12-year-old "bubble boy," is receiving daily transfusions of blood that has been irradiated to kill any germs.

Doctors said Thursday they still had not determined the source of the bleeding, hampering David's battle against an illness brought on by a bone marrow transplant, graft-vs.-host disease. The transplant was to help him develop defenses against infection.

David was in "serious, but stable" condition, said Susannah Moore Griffin, a spokeswoman for the medica team. David is the oldest living victim of natural severe combined immune deficiency and until recently had lived since birth in sterile plastic "bubbles."

Conservative Trend Seen In Southern Congressmen

ATLANTA (AP) — A new study indicates Southern congressmen have become more conservative during the past 20 years — a trend not shown by the voters who elect them.

Southerners in Congress represent "a conservative albatross around the neck of Congress and the nation," said Georgia state Sen. Julian Bond, who announced the results of the study at a news conference Thursday.

Bob Hall, director of the Institute for Southern Studies, a non-profit research and education organization based in Durham, N.C., and co-author of the study, contended at a news conference that conservative Southern congressmen do not reflect the views of their constituents.

He and Bond said opinion polls consistently show Southerners with political views very similar to the rest of the nation.

By failing to participate actively in the political process, Hall said, many progressive Southerners have permitted their congressmen to become "the lowest common denominator" of political leaders.

One part of the institute's study compared the ratings given congressmen from 1963 to 1982 by the liberal Americans for Democratic Action and the conservative Americans for Constitutional Action.

The average ADA rating for a Southern House member was 37 in 1963, compared to an average of 50 for other representatives. The rating for Southern congressmen dropped to 23 in 1982, while the average for the rest of the nation's representatives stood at 51. The ratings are on a scale of 0 to 100, with 100 being the most liberal.

The average ACA rating for Southern House members was 49 in 1963 and 64 in 1982, compared with 44 for other representatives both years.

The ACA ratings also are on a scale of 0 to 100, with 100 the most conservative mark.

The average ADA rating of 20 for Southern senators in 1963 increased to 31 by 1982, while the rating for non-Southern senators went from 59 in 1963 to 50 in 1982.

The average ACA rating for Southern senators went from 51 in 1963 to 67 in 1982, while the average rating for other senators went from 31 in 1963 to 49 in 1982.

"Whether it's the environment, equality for women, civil rights, populist economic issues, the arms race or U.S. intervention abroad, the South repeatedly delivers the decisive bloc of votes in Congress to weaken or defeat liberal initiatives," Bond said.

The institute also looked at 20 roll call votes and compared the actions of Southern congressmen on such issues as civil rights, the environment, women's rights and foreign policy.

Based on the votes, the institute scored each Southern congressman on a scale of 0 to 100, with 100 being the most liberal.

Sens. Dale Bumpers and David Pryor of Arkansas, Ernest Hollings of South Carolina and James Sasser of Tennessee ranked as the most liberal Southern senators. Bumpers had a score of 82; Hollings, 80; Pryor, 77; and Sasser, 75.

The most conservative Southern senators, according to the institute, were Jesse Helms and John East of North Carolina, Jeremiah Denton of Alabama and Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, with scores of 0, 5, 10, and 15 respectively.

Helms and East could not be reached for comment and did not return telephone calls, but East aide Jerry Woodruff said, "We must be slipping if they even gave us a 5."

Hall said Helms' zero score was based on "wrong" votes on all 19 of the key bills in the survey in which he cast a vote. East differed with Helms on one vote to receive his score of 5 by voting against accelerated space-based last weapon development, Hall said.

In the same study, North Carolina's House delegation ranked as the most liberal in the South with an average score of 50. Scores for North Carolina House members ranked from a top of 72 for Democrat James M. Clarke to a low of 10 for Republican Jim Martin, who is running for governor.

Among House members, 39 of the 116 Southerners scored 15 or less, including 13 — all Republicans — who had a score of 0. No Southern GOP congressman scored above 25.

The four most liberal Southern congressmen in the institute's ranking were Mickey Leland of Texas (96), William Lehman of Florida (93), Harold Ford of Tennessee (90) and Henry Gonzalez of Texas (90).

Hall said all 11 House members who scored above 80 are black, Hispanic, Jewish or "come from districts which least fit the WASP (white, Anglo-Saxon protestant) mold of the Old South."

Trimathon On Feb. 29

Feb. 29 is the kickoff date for Trimathon '84, a month-long program at Pitt County Memorial Hospital being offered by the hospital's dietitians. The program is in conjunction with National Nutrition Month in March.

Dietitianist Dawn Vail, who has coordinated the program, said it incorporates the goal of weight reduction, increased awareness of nutrition and improvement in the individual's overall health.

Hospital employees are pledging to improve their health by joining five-member "Bod Squads" with leaders responsible for weekly weigh-ins and keeping track of points members can accumulate by attending lectures, viewing films, taking part in exercise classes, etc. Additionally, talks will be given on diabetes and heart disease as well as good nutrition for expectant mothers.

The range of topics to be covered in the Trimathon '84 is wide — from what to wear when jogging to diet pills and fad diets. Talks, demonstrations and exercise classes will be given by ministers, physicians and local exercise experts. Workshops will demonstrate how to enjoy eating wisely and well.

Local businesses taking part in Trimathon '84 include Bond's Sporting Goods, The Body Shop, Greenville Athletic Club and Nautilus.

Lost Supporter For City Share

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cities have lost a key congressman's support for legislation that would allow cities to collect a 5 percent franchise fee from cable television systems.

Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., chairman of the House communications committee, has proposed instead that city governments be allowed to collect a franchise fee totaling no more than 4 percent of a cable operator's annual gross revenues.

Of that 4 percent, he added, no more than 3 percent could be used by the city to support a local regulatory office to oversee the cable system. The remaining 1 percent should be set aside for the production of local public access programming, he suggested.

One Person, One Vote Decided Years Ago

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Are residents of Palisade, Colo., 164 percent more important than people living in Kensett, Ark.?

Or 140 percent more important than people in Brooklyn, N.Y.?

Or even 100 percent more important than those of Chicago's Ward 1?

If you said "no," then you agree with the United States Supreme Court, which decided just 20 years ago that it isn't fair for some congressional districts to have bigger populations than others.

So, the court said on Feb. 17, 1964, districts should be as nearly equal in population as possible.

Before the court acted, some congressional districts had five or six times more people than others, and generally people in rural areas had more influence than cities and suburbs because they shared their congressman with fewer voters.

Palisade, Colo., forexample, sent Wayne N. Aspinall to Congress, where he represented only 195,551 people.

But Wilbur Mills of Kensett, carried dhe responsibility of representing 517,264 Arkansans. There were 471,001 people in Edna F. Kelly's Brooklyn district, and 393,209 Chicagoans were represented by Roland V. Libonati.

Overall, at the time of the decision, the nation's 20 most populous districts held nearly 14 million people, while the 20 least populous held only about 4.5 million, explained Gordon E. Baker, political science professor at the University of California at Santa Barbara.

Now, things are quite different.

Don Starsinic of the Census Bureau said that after the 1960 redistricting, the average population deviation between districts was 17 percent. But after the 1970 redistricting, with the court ruling in effect, the average deviation dropped to four-tenths of a percent.

The typical House district held 437,000 people in 1964, but more than half of the 435 districts varied by more than 10 percent. Today the average has 519,000 people, and only 18 vary by more than 5 percent, Starsinic said.

The Senate was not affected by the ruling.

In its 6-3 decision on Congress, the high court abandoned years of reluctance to interfere in another branch of government. And within months other cases followed, extending the principle to state legislatures.

"Clearly it made a very significant difference in Congress," said political scientist Norman J. Ornstein of Washington's American Enterprise Institute.

"First of all, obviously it reduced the rural dominance, and to some extent even stranglehold, on the Congress," added John Banzhaf, a professor at George Washington University's National Law Center.

This happened primarily because equalizing populations gave more voting power to cities and to the fast-growing suburbs, he said.

"Rural districts, in part due to nature of slow change, would continue to send the same person back to Congress term after term after term. The result was that major committees were dominated by people from rural districts," said Banzhaf.

"Within a few years we began to see reforms take place fueled by numbers of non-rural Democrats, many of whom would not have had districts to run in otherwise," Ornstein said, there were "changes in the committee system, increases in staff, added subcommittees, open meetings, a whole series of things that really transformed Congress."

Because key leadership posts were no longer limited to a few figures from small rural areas, it became easier for outsiders, such as Jimmy Carter and Jesse Jackson, to get into the political battle, he suggested.

This has been particularly helpful to people with views more popular in cities than rural areas, such as those backing liberal causes, consumer problems, environmental protection, gay rights, women's equality, and so forth, Banzhaf said.

But, he added, it has also had a negative consequence — encouraging gerrymandering, the rigging of political districts to elect favored people.

Baker also noted that the before the decisions of 1964 many state legislatures had one house apportioned by population and the other by geography, resulting in many states where different parties ruled each chamber — a natural check on gerrymandering.

With the requirement that both houses of these legislatures conform to the one-person-one-vote mandate, more and more are controlled by a single party, freeing the hand of politicans to draw lines to their liking, he suggested.

Have 'Til Tuesday To File Response

By The Associated Press

Chief Justice Warren Burger says foes of North Carolina's redistricting plan have until Tuesday to file a response to the state's appeal of a ruling striking down parts of the plan.

On Tuesday, state Attorney General Rufus Edmisten asked Burger, who issued his deadline Thursday, for emergency help in delaying a ruling that requires some legislative districts to be redrawn by March 16.

At the same time, the state filed an appeal of last month's ruling by a three-judge federal panel. The panel later refused to delay the effect of its ruling until the U.S. Supreme Court could hear an appeal.

The ruling said parts of the state's 1982 redistricting plan violate the Voting Rights Act, although some districts were declared nondiscriminatory by federal officials.

The ruling came in a suit filed by Ralph Gingles and other minority voters who argued that the redistricting plan unconstidutionally diluted their voting strength. They said the plans submerged potential single-member districts with black majorities in multi-member districts with black minorities.

Leslie Winner, a Charlotte attorney who represented the plaintiffs with the help of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, said Thursday she was preparing the response to the state's appeal for presentation on Tuesday.

She said the response would include three basic arguments:

— That the state has not shown it would be irreparably harmed by the judges' order while the appeal is pending.

— That the plaintiffs would be irreparably harmed "if we have to go through another whole election with a system that has been declared illegal."

— That the state has not demonstrated that its appeal is likely to be successful.

The three-judge panel had ordered the state not to hold elections in state Senate districts 2 and 22 and House districts 8, 21, 23, 36 and 39 until changes are made to restore minority voting power. The judges said they would redraw the districts if the General Assembly failed to act by March 16.

Primaries had been scheduled for May 8 and the dealine for candidates to file was Feb. 6.

"If a new plan of apportionment is adopted between now and the scheduled primary it will be nearly impossible for the state to conduct orderly elections according to the present schedule," the state said in its appeal.

Suing To Open Papers Of NSA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union is suing the National Security Agency to open to the public the papers of cryptologist William F. Friedman, who retired from the NSA in the mid 1950s.

The lawsuit was filed in U.S. District Court on behalf of six library and history associations and researcher Jay Peterzell. Friedman's papers are filed at a library on the campus of Virginia Military Institute in Lexington.

In the suit, the ACLU said Friedman intended that his collection should be available to scholars, researchers and the public.

Assassinations In Europe Frustrate

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — The murder in Rome of the American head of the Sinai peacekeeping force is the latest in a string of killings in Europe that have roused concern as a threat to democracy and normal diplomacy.

Despite frustration and anger, there is little indication that the Western powers have been able to take effective, concerted action to prevent the killings.

In the past few weeks there have been two killings in Paris — an exiled Iranian general and the ambassador of the United Arab Emirates — and in Britain, an Indian diplomat was kidnapped and slain by Kashmiri separatists.

On Tuesday, gunmen killed Leamon "Ray" Hunt in Rome, shooting the 56-year-old director-general of the Sinai Multinational Force and Observers as he arrived home in his car.

The "Fighting Communists," a faction of the Red Brigades terrorists, claimed responsibility. A caller to a Milan radio station cited a variety of reasons for the killing, including opposition to the Camp David Middle East accords, Italy's membership in NATO, the presence of Western troops in Lebanon and the installation of U.S. missiles in Europe.

Such varied motives frustrate intelligence agencies that try to prevent attacks. And the usual method of attack — abduction or shooting in the street — circumvents the heavy security measures that have turned many embassies and diplomats' homes into fortresses.

U.S. Vice President George Bush said in Paris on Wednesday that the United Nations had been impotent in taking action against international terrorism. "We are deeply concerned about the increase in terror to effect political change," Bush said after learning of Hunt's death. "Part of our concern in Lebanon relates to such terror.

"The world ought to stand up regardless of system and say enough is enough and try to figure out how to do something about it," he said.

Commented a Scotland Yard spokesman, who spoke on condition his name would not be used: "There's always a problem with these new groups. We're aware of the main ones like the PLO, but occasionally you get new ones. We have to be as aware of them as we can, but we can only hear of them through other forces and intelligence agencies."

Armed police guard all embassies in the British capital. The main threat in London is held to be Irish Republican Army guerrillas, who occasionally carry their campaign east from Northern Ireland. Their most recent big attack was the December car-bombing at Harrods department store that killed six people.

But the British police, like other forces on the continent, also have to deal with "outside" terrorists who bring in conflicts that rage or simmer in the Middle East, South Asia and elsewhere.

Assassinations have been common in France in recent years, and Premier Pierre Mauroy noted that virtually all the killings were by and of foreigners, motivated by distant conflicts.

Terrorist killings have been condemned in NATO communiques for the past several years as "a threat to democratic institutions and to the conduct of normal international relations." A communique issued after the NATO foreign ministers' conference last December said the ministers "reiterate their determination to take effective measures for the prevention and suppression of such criminal acts."

But following Hunt's death, NATO officials in Brussels told The Associated Press that no one at NATO headquarters is actively attempting to coordinate action against terrorism.

One NATO source, who would not be identified further, said the communique references to terrorism are "empty words."

Nonetheless, there have been reports that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency is working with friendly countries to create an anti-terrorism network to improve the exchange of information about terrorist activities in the Middle East and Europe.

The Wall Street Journal, reporting from Washington on Feb. 6, said the CIA also was establishing a center to evaluate the intelligence data. There has been no official confirmation of the report.

Such coordination could help to guard against attacks on representatives of the major powers, but might not be so useful in preventing the kind of killings seen in recent weeks.

In France on Feb. 7, a lone gunman killed former Gen. Gholam Ali Oveissi, 65, the brutal military governor of Tehran under the late shah, and his brother Husein. The Islamic Jihad movement claimed responsibility.

The next day, a gunman in Paris killed the ambassador of the United Arab Emirates, Khalifa Ahmed Abdulaziz al-Mubarak. That killing was claimed by "the Arab Revolutionary Brigades."

Arab ambassadors in Paris have asked for more protection.

In Britain, security was increased for Indian diplomats after the kidnapping and murder of Ravindra Mhatre, 48, assistant commissioner at the Indian consulate in Birmingham. Before the diplomat's body was found on Feb. 5, a previously unheard-of group called the Kashmir Liberation Army demanded the release of prisoners held in India, including Kashmiri separatist Mohammad Maqbool Butt. Butt then was awaiting execution, which was carried out later, for murder.

See No Hope Of Curbs On Spreading Deserts

By JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A goal of curbing the spread of the world's deserts by the year 2000 is no longer possible, and "global catastrophe" could result, a top United Nations expert says.

"Desertification," the deterioration of productive land into deserts, continues without letup at the rate of 14.8 million acres a year, according to Gaafar Karrar, chief of the desertification branch of the U.N. Environmental Program based here.

At that rate, Karrar told journalists Thursday, "We could lose one-third of the world's existing arable area by the end of the century."

In 1977, 94 nations agreed in Nairobi on a "plan of action" to arrest the spread of deserts by the year 2000. But Karrar, a Sudanese microbiologist, said that goal is no longer feasible, primarily because of governments' inadequate financing and lack of political will.

"We have to look at this as a colossal problem," said Karrar, ghose agency released a packet full of grim statistics.

Desertification currently affects about 100 nations, most of them in the underdeveloped world and many of them in Africa, said a UNEP report.

The spread of deserts threatens 35 percent of the earth's land surface, or about 45 million square miles, and 20 percent of its population — about 850 million people — the report said.

"Seventy-five percent of this area and 60 percent of the population are already affected," the report added. "If the present march of desertification continues, by the year 2000 the situation will have become a global catastrophe."

Karrar said, "There isn't actually anywhere in the world that is immune from desertification," which UNEP defines as "the diminution or destruction of the biological potential of the land" which "can lead ultimately to desert-like conditions."

The scientist quoted a survey by another U.N. agency, the Food and Agriculture Organization, which estimated that the annual loss of food production caused by desertification amounts to $26 billion.

With growing populations competing for use of a diminishing amount of productive land, mass starvation could be in the offing, Karrar said. The United Nations estimates that 1 billion of the world's people already are underfed.

There has been some success in combating the spread of deserts in such developed countries as the United States and Australia, which have the needed resources and technology, Karrar said. But in the underdeveloped world the successes have been few and far between.

China has had moderate success stabilizing the sand dunes of the Gobi desert by planting trees and shrubs, according to a UNEP report on the projects.

Other anti-desertification measures which have been used around the world include digging artesian wells, installing sprinklers and irrigation pipes, and using small solar units to curb the cutting of trees for fuel.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — MIND READER'S APT OFFSPRING, IN FIRST GRADE, DOESN'T MIND READING.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: Y equals D.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

TAKE THE BETTER ODDS

Both vulnerable. South deals.

◇ J 8
♣ K 4 3

WEST
♠ K J 6
♡ J 7 4
◇ K 6 5

SOUTH

◇ A Q 10 9 7 4 3
♣ A 7 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	6 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

Sometimes, there is little to choose between two lines of play. At other times, however, one line will have a considerable edge over the other. Consider this hand.

South had a difficult rebid problem. No bid was perfect, and three diamonds was perhaps as good a choice as any. Jack doubleton now became adequate support, so North set the suit by raising, then jumped to slam when South showed interest with a cue-bid.

West led a club, and declarer decided that a trump finesse was his best shot for the contract. Therefore, he won the opening lead in dummy and ran the jack of trumps. West won and continued with a club, and in the fullness of time declarer lost a club for down one.

The trump finesse was a 50 percent chance. Declarer can give himself a much better shot at the contract by trying to set up a long spade for a club discard. Chances of a 4-3 spade division are slightly over 62 percent — more than 12 percent better than the finesse.

Declarer must time the hand well. He should win the opening lead in hand, cross to the ace of spades and ruff a spade with the seven. Now he leads a low trump toward dummy. Assume that West wins the king and continues with a club. The table wins, and declarer ruffs another spade high. He crosses to the jack of trumps and ruffs another spade to set up the fifth card in the suit.

Declarer is in hand to draw the last trump. He can then cross to the ace of hearts, sluff his remaining club on the good spade, and claim his contract.

Building Homes In Risky Areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Weather Service, pointing out that more Americans are building homes in flood-prone areas, says 204 people died in floods last year.

Property damage from flooding in 1983 totaled more than $4 billion, the agency said.

Over the past 40 years, weather service director Richard Hallgren said flood deaths have averaged about 100 a year and damage about $2 billion.

Face Fee Hikes For Phone Links

WASHINGTON (AP) — Companies competing with American Telephone & Telegraph Co. for long-distance phone calls are facing an estimated 45 percent increase this spring in the fees they pay for local phone connections, an industry official says.

"Based on this FCC order, we are projecting an increase of about 45 percent over what we pay now; from $235 per line per month to somewhere between $335 and $355 per line," Gary Tobin, a spokesman for MCI Communications, said . "We don't like it, but this is a marked improvement over the $400 or $500 that the commission was talking about last year."

The new projections were developed late Wednesday following the long-awaited release by the FCC of an order explaining its latest decisions involving telephone "access charges."

As promised last month, the order says residential and single-line business customers will not have to pay any type of access charge to their local phone company before June 1, 1985.

Unconcerned By Lag In Reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service says it isn't concerned that the number of federal income tax returns filed through the first week of February was down sharply from the same period a year ago.

Through Feb. 3, the IRS had received 1.46 million returns, compared with 2.26 million through Feb. 4, 1983. The IRS issued 539,000 refunds totaling $273 million, down from 1.28 million refunds totaling $798 million in 1983. The average refund dropped to $507 from $622.

"January is never a representative month," IRS spokesman Larry Batdorf said. "Sometimes it starts off heavy and then drops off; sometimes the opposite occurs. You can't really gauge by the early returns."
