ECU Fees, Dorm Rent May Be Increased

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Student fees and dormitory room rent will increase next year for students at East Carolina University if the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina gives approval.

On recommendation of the board's student life committee, ECU trustees adopted a resolution Friday calling for student services at the university to be maintained at their present level, with the exception of student health services, which the committee said should be increased.

As a result of the action, most fees would increase to cover the cost of operations and maintenance. The Board of Governors, not ECU's board of trustees, will set the amount of the fees.

However, the tentative fee increases would add $15 to the present $70 athletic fee, $3 to the present $21 intramural-recreational services fee, $2 to the $16.75 media board fee, $1 to the present $7.75 fee for the Student Government Association, and $4 to the present $47 fee for operations and debt service for Mendenhall Student Center.

The largest fee increase would add $30 to the present $69 for student health services to provide needed medical equipment, improved psychiatric services and computerized student health records.

There would be no increase in the $10 SGA transit fee, the $1.50 student fund accounting fee, or the $17 fee for student union programs.

The tentative schedule also calls for a reduction of $15 in the $36 debt service fee, because all bonds issued for construction of Minges Coliseum, built in 1968, have been paid off.

In addition to the fees, $20 will be added to the present $870 room rent if approved by the Board of Governors.

The proposed fees and student housing together produce an overall 5.1 percent increase over the present level.

The board also approved the transfer of some $510,000 in excess money from the Minges Coliseum bond sinking fund to the athletic department.

C.G. Moore, vice chancellor for business affairs, said the money will be used to pay off the half-million dollar athletic department debt run up during the three-year administration of former Chancellor Tom Brewer. Moore noted that the department of athletics has operated during the past two years under Chancellor John Howell without a deficit.

The trustees adopted resolutions approving the purchase of a house and lot at 1003 E. Fifth St. for $51,500 to be used to provide parking facilities; the purchase of a building at 1705 W. Sixth St., valued at $220,000, although no purchase price has been settled on, and an expenditure of $195,000 to reroof Mendenhall Student

Midwest Storm Could Be Winter's Strongest

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

A powerful blizzard stormed into the Plains with winds gusting as high as 100 mph Saturday, spreading snow from the Texas Panhandle to the Dakotas and halting travel across parts of the Midwest with chest-high drifts.

Blizzard warnings were posted in the southeastern plains of Colorado, the Oklahoma Panhandle, southwestern and north-central Nebraska and southwestern Minnesota, and many highways were barricaded or impassable.

"It could well be the strongest snowstorm of the winter in the Midwest," said Hugh Crowther of the Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. "It certainly ranks at the top."

Thousands of stranded travelers packed motels and truck stops as the storm swept out of the Rockies, where it had deposited up to 2 feet of snow earlier, and pushed toward the Great Lakes, fanning up to a foot and a half of snow with winds gusting up to 60 mph across Kansas and Nebraska into Iowa and Minnesota.

Meteorologist Steve Byrd in Omaha, Neb., noting that 17 inches of snow already had fallen in parts of that state, said, "The bad area is going to be northeast Nebraska tonight, where they'll have 20 inches on the ground."

In southwestern Minnesota, 10 inches of snow had fallen in some areas by Saturday evening, and the snow and gusty winds were expected to spread across the entire southern part of the state by morning.

"We're expecting winds gusting in the 30 to 40 mph range and there'll be a lot of blowing snow later on tonight," Les Coleman, a meteorologist for the weather service in Minneapolis, said. By late afternoon, Luverne in the extreme southwest had 10 inches of snow and zero visibility because of strong winds, he said.

In the Texas Panhandle town of Stratford, the snow was hurled by winds gusting between 75 and 100 mph.

Wind gusts of 75 mph also were clocked at Boise City, Okla., where U.S. 287 was closed in both directions. Ben Harris, an employee at the Shamrock Truck Stop said, "You couldn't find a parking spot here if you wanted to. We're packed, with about 300 to 400 truckers."

At Oberlin in northwestern Kansas, police dispatcher Jeanne Pachner said, "There's people stranded at the church, at the schoolhouse, and I'd imagine all the motels are filled up."

In eastern Colorado, where nine highways were barricaded, including Interstate 70 from 35 miles east of Denver to the Kansas border, Limon Police Chief Jim Trahern said all roads into town were closed with drifts of 4 to 5 feet.

"Unless someone went around the roadblocks, the roads are cleared of motorists," he said.

In the northeastern Nebraska town of Norfolk, where 14 inches of snow had fallen by noon, mail carriers couldn't make their appointed rounds.

Sign-Up Extended

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John Block on Saturday pushed back the sign-up deadline for 1984 commodity price support programs by three weeks, reversing his earlier stance, saying farmers need more time to realize how urgent it is that they sign up.

"It has become obvious more time is needed if we are going to get the participation we must have for the sign-up this year," Block said in a news conference at the Des Moines Airport.

Block predicted at least 50 percent of wheat farmers would sign up by the Feb. 24 deadline for a program under which they receive guaranteed price protection in exchange for cutting their planted acreage. But there are indications of a far lower sign-up.

Block said he has changed summer fallow rules so the requirements will be the same as they were in 1983 and previous programs. Prior to this action, Block said the acreage designated for the 1984 programs could not have been land intended for summer fallow in the current year. He said other provisions of the 1984 programs will remain unchanged.

Future Dorm Housing Will Face More Stringent Rules

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Future developers of dormitory housing in Greenville will have more stringent requirements to meet than three projects approved by the city last year because of changes in regulations late in 1983.

City Planner Bobby Roberson said dormitories — those at East Carolina University — were built in areas zoned for office and institutional use, and the regulations were lenient. The only restrictions were that a building could not cover more than 40 percent of the lot or be more than 90 feet tall, and that off-street parking be provided at the rate of one-fourth of a space per bed.

Assured that ECU would not be providing additional student housing, and seeing the possibility of private dorm development, the city, in August 1983, increased the parking requirement to three-fourths of a space per bed, Roberson said.

So the three private dormitory developments approved last year by the city — the conversion of the old Wilkerson's Funeral Home property on Evans Street to dormitory space (construction on this project has not begun), the building of Pirates Landing, and Ringgold Towers, adjacent to ECU property at the intersection of Seventh and Cotanche streets — had simply to cover no more than 40 percent of the lot, not exceed 90 feet in height, and provide three-fourths of a parking space per bed, Roberson explained.

Pirates Landing and the old Wilkerson property could provide ample on-site parking, according to Roberson. Not so with the Ringgold project, which is now under construction.

Roberson said Ringgold, with 216 beds, needed a minimum of 162 spaces. Only 105 were available on-site.

So, to conform with requirements, Ringgold developers secured 20-year leases on two lots within 300 feet of the project, which provided an additional 70 parking slots.

Pointing out that city regulations allow developers to provide 50 percent of the parking on-site, with the rest within 300 feet of the development, Roberson said under those conditions Ringgold complies with the regulations.

However, Roberson noted that Ringgold units will be individually owned. So in order to insure adequate parking, the city has tied the parking requirement to the deeds of the individual units at Ringgold.

"If adequate off-street parking is not provided when the lease on the satellite parking lots runs out, the units will have to be vacated," Roberson explained.

In order to provide more control over future dormitory development, the City Council, in October, adopted a new set of regulations.

While dorm developments will still be allowed in office and institutional zones adjacent to the ECU campus, such projects will require a special use permit, and the site must contain a minimum of 1.25 acres, Roberson said. The new regulations will also regulate the number of occupants alowed in a development according to a land use intensity formula, and creates new set-back requirements.

Ayden Woman Is 'Mother Of Year'

A Pitt County woman who gave up teaching because she couldn't be "a successful mother and career woman at the same time" carried her choice to perfection: she's the mother of the year in North Carolina for 1984.

Alma Braxton Worthington and her husband, Wilbur Worthington, live on their farm east of Ayden. But she was in Raleigh last week to beat out seven other candidates in the statewide competition sponsored by the North Carolina Mothers' Association.

Mrs. Worthington, now 71, made the decision to leave teaching when her first children, twins Melvin L. Worthington and Milton W. Worthington, were born 46 years ago. The twins, both of whom are ordained ministers, later were joined by a sister, Jeanette W. Davis.

But the decision to become a full-time mother didn't keep Mrs. Worthington at home.

In the late and 1930s and early 1940s, she petitioned Virginia Power and Light Co. and the town of Ayden to put in electric transmission lines, met with county and state officials to get local raods paved and petitioned Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. for service to the area.

She has also served on the Pitt County Board of Education, helped organize a local high school band and raised money for a bookmobile.

Mrs. Worthington said her husband "stayed at home with the babies" on Thursdays so she could do volunteer work.

Mrs. Worthington, who said a mother's job never stops, now has seven grandchildren.

"It's like looking down a railroad track," she said. "You keep thinking you're going to see the end, but you never do."

In recent years Mrs. Worthington has done most of her volunteer work with the N.C. Farm Bureau, which she has been a member of for 40 years. She has also taught Sunday school classes and is a member of Liberty Free Will Baptist Church in Ayden.

Mrs. Worthington will represent the state in the national "Mother of the Year" competition.

Detox Center Sought For Pitt

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Council on Alcoholism recently passed a resolution calling for the development of alcohol and drug detoxification services in the county.

The members of the council say a detoxification service is needed in the county, where the number of persons who abuse alcohol is estimated to be 6,000, according to figures provided by Jim Ayers, director of the N.C. Council on Alcoholism.

"There is no coordinated effort in the county to help a person dry out," said Rozanne Faulkner, president of the Pitt County Council on Alcoholism, in a recent interview. "Detoxification is a medical procedure. People die trying to get off alcohol without medical assistance."

The service proposed by the council would have a 24-hour-a-day open door admission policy for males and females of all ages, races and faiths with drug and alcohol problems. Screening, evaluation and supervision would be provided by medical personnel, and clients would be attended by a nurse or physician's assistant 24 hours a day with a medical doctor on call for emergencies, according to the resolution.

The purpose of this proposed service would be to help a person who is "unable to make responsible decisions or becomes an unmanageable problem for families, law enforcement officers or the community at large" because of alcohol abuse, the resolution states.

"We are asking the County Commissioners to look at our resolution and look at the fiscal possibilities of a detoxification service," Ayers said. "The service won't cost much more than what is already being spent on helping intoxicated people."

"There is no detoxification program in Pitt County," said Faulkner. "The result is a waste of taxpayers money in terms of time spent working with intoxicated people."

At the present time, law enforcement officers, rescue squads and the emergency room at Pitt County Memorial Hospital deal with intoxicated persons. The members of the council say those persons who abuse alcohol can be cared for more efficiently through detoxification services.

"The police can keep an intoxicated person for four hours without charging him, and then he is back on the street," Faulkner said. "The emergency room can admit someone with medical problems along with intoxication, but if there is no medical problem, then the emergency room is a waste of time

Syria Denounces 'Peace' Plan

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Saudi Arabia said Saturday it hoped to gain Lebanese and Syrian agreement on a new peace plan, but Syria denounced the plan's call for a simultaneous withdrawal of Syrian and Israeli troops.

Druze militiamen and Lebanese army troops traded artillery and rocket fire despite a new appeal by President Amin Gemayel for a cease-fire.

"We all ought to make a historical stand, save ourselves by ourselves and brush aside our aging differences," the official National News Agency quoted Gemayel as saying.

Gemayel, addressing a group of Lebanese reporters in his palace of Baabda, called for "an immediate and unconditional cease-fire as a step towards reviewing the Lebanese problem as a whole among ourselves."

But hours after the president's appeal the fighting was still going on. The Druze Voice of the Mountain radio blamed the army for escalating the fighting, and the pro-government Phalange radio said the Druze were responsible.

The fighting around Souk el Gharb, the army's last stronghold in the mountains overlooking Beirut and only 3 miles from the presidential palace in suburban Baabda, came amid a flurry of diplomatic contacts over the peace plan.

Gemayel's government Friday announced an eight-point "package deal" that included abrogation of Lebanon's May 17 troop withdrawal agreement with Israel as well as governmental reforms and political concessions to Moslem rebels.

The agreement would allow for an Israel withdrawal from southern Lebanon and the normalization of ties between the two countries. However, Syria denounced the agreement and refused to withdraw its troops until Israel pulled out. Israel said it would go only when Syria did, leaving the situation in u standoff.

"We have no official Syrian rejection of the plan. Saudi Arabia will continue its efforts to bring the points of view together," Saudi Foreign Minister Saud Al Faisal said on state-run Damascus radio after meeting in Damascus with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

But Syrian officials denounced the peace plan as "an open trick" because it calls for a simultaneous withdrawal of Syrian and Israeli troops from Lebanon and security arrangements to protect Israel's northern border.

ECU Trustees ...

Center.

Trustees also adopted a resolution, to be forwarded to the Board of Governors, expressing concern over low salary levels at the university, and asking for a cost of living pay hike as well as merit pay raises for faculty members and staff employees.

The resolution adopted by the board came from the Faculty Senate. The original resolution, adopted by the Faculty Senate Jan. 24, and endorsed by Howell after changing the wording to include all university personnel, asked for a 15 percent cost-of-living pay hike and a 7 percent merit pay raise for faculty members.

In other business, trustees adopted resolutions expressing sympathy to the family of former ECU football coach Jack Boone, a member of the faculty for 35 years, who died recently, and expressing "deep appreciation" to coach Ed Emory, his staff, players and "all whose efforts contributed to the university's great success during the 1983 football season."

Board Chairman Ralph Kinsey announced that the date for the next board meeting has been tentatively set for April 27 in Greenville. Kinsey also said the board will meet in Morehead City on July 1, when a morning business session will be followed by a tour and cruise aboard the Research Vessel Hatteras.

Howell, in a report to the board, said action by the Board of Governors earlier this month setting a uniform admissions policy for the UNC system will have little effect on ECU.

Howell said the only change in requirements set by the new policy, which takes effect in 1988, will increase ECU's present requirement on one unit of science to three science units.

and money; emergency room care is the most expensive treatment for someone who is intoxicated."

According to Ayers, "The council became interested in the problem in August when the regional detoxification center was phased out of Cherry Hospital. Other counties, such as Onslow County, have developed a detoxification center and have found that the intoxicated people can be treated in a constructive manner cheaper than they can be dealt with through the emergency room."

Last year, 2,000 Pitt County citizens signed a petition calling for a detoxification service, Faulkner said.

"The Walter B. Jones Alcohol Rehabilitation Center is not a detoxification center," she noted. "That is where people go after they have made the decision that they want help.

"The key purpose of detoxification is to dry someone out so he can make a responsible choice for his life and the lives of his loved ones," Faulkner added. "He needs to make a decision if he wants to get help."

The council drafted the resolution which was approved unanimously at a board of directors meeting Feb. 9.

"Representatives from Pitt County rescue squads and police forces, ministers and representatives from the Mental Health Center attended the meeting, and each felt this service would help them in their own area," Faulkner said.

The Pitt County Council on Alcoholism was organized in 1980 and there are now over 100 volunteer members. The primary purpose of the council is to educate the public about alcoholism and bring awareness to the problems.

Nine Injured As Fire Damages Old Home

SEATTLE (AP) — People jumped off roofs and scrambled down ladders to escape flames from a blaze in a 75-year old mansion that officials say was started early Saturday by careless smoking. At least nine people were hurt, one critically.

About 20 people in the 16-bedroom house fled when the fire was reported at 4:42 a.m. Neighbors put extension ladders to windows to help some residents descend. Others made their way to roofs about 12 feet from the ground and jumped, witnesses said. Others dashed out doors.

A resident, Bob Powell, 24, said he discovered the fire when he arrived home and opened a living room door. "The couch was on fire," said Powell. "Flames were climbing the wall, the carpet was burning."

Fire officials said the flames quickly swept across the carpet, up a wall and up two open stairwells.

Powell ran from the main floor to the third floor and back, warning people.

A party was held Friday night and residents and guests were sleeping in various places around the house when the fire broke out, said Darrell Shields, 15, who was asleep in the main-floor library when someone yelled, "Fire!"

"There were lots of people yelling. I smelled smoke. I heard people yelling 'Help! Fire!'," Shields said.

The cause of the blaze "was definitely a smoking material — a cigarette or cigar or something — that was located in the living room couch," said acting Seattle Deputy Fire Chief Tom Olson.

Two injured women were taken to Harborview Medical Center and later transferred to Virginia Mason Hospital for treatment for smoke inhalation, said hospital spokeswoman Cynthia Taylor.

Cynthia Messer, 19, was returned to the intensive care unit of Harborview in critical condition, said Ms. Taylor.

Storm Disrupts Democratic Fight In Iowa

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A blizzard of telephone calls and political rhetoric hit Iowa Saturday as Democratic presidential candidates fought for support in the last weekend before the state's precinct caucuses.

A real snowstorm played havoc with campaign schedules.

Former Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida was forced to cancel campaign appearances in the western part of the state because of snow falling at the rate of 3 inches an hour. Sen. John Glenn of Ohio was forced to cancel three appearances and Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado missed five scheduled stops.

Glenn flew through a heavy snowstorm to Sioux City, where he told a news conference, "I obviously hope to do very well in Iowa.

"If every one of my supporters got out 10 more supporters we could take this thing," he said.

Glenn, who has made a campaign issue of Walter F. Mondale's support from organized labor, also said many rank-and-file labor officials are resentful "that they were not asked" which candidate the AFL-CIO should support.

"There are just as many sensible center Democrats within the labor movement" as in the rest of the Democratic Party, he said.

Anticipating such criticism, AFL-CIO officials conducted extensive surveys of rank-and-file union members to determine their presidential preference before endorsing Mondale.

At a news conference in a Des Moines soup kitchen, Hart called the Reagan budget deficits "this administration's Vietnam" and offered his own plan to reduce them.

Mondale used a five-minute radio broadcast to appeal to his backers to attend the Monday night caucuses. "Don't take anything for granted," said the former vice president. "You are needed."

The Mondale campaign bought radio time on 13 Iowa stations immediately following President Reagan's paid political weekly broadcast. The president urged people to demand that the House pass a revision of federal criminal laws that has cleared the Senate.

A native of neighboring Minnesota, Mondale also told Iowans in the taped appeal, "I am your neighbor and friend, I know Iowa."

Sen. George McGovern campaigned in a farm community and at Trainland U.S.A., a model train exhibit in Colfax. The former South Dakota senator said he chose the site to dramatize his plan to rebuild American railroads.

McGovern said he would cancel the MX missile and B-1 bomber and put the money into railroad improvement which he said "would contribute more to the security and prosperity of the country than moving ahead on these redundant and unnecessary strategic weapons systems."

Mondale himself was campaigning in New Hampshire, site of a Feb. 28 primary, as was Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California was in Massachusetts and planned to be in Iowa on Sunday.

In Providence, R.I., the Rev. Jesse Jackson said he will not go to Nicaragua next week, but plans a trip to the Latin American country next month.

The Democratic presidential hopeful said an early trip was precluded by campaign obligations rather than doubts about the leftist Sandinista government's dedication to human rights and free elections.

He said he will make a fact-finding tour of Nicaragua and several other countries in Central America sometime after the heavy primary schedule of early March.

Nicaraguan diplomats had trailed the Jackson campaign for two days in an attempt to convince him to attend a celebration Tuesday of the Sandinista rise to power. The government has said it will use the occasion to announce a timetable for elections.

Even though not all candidates were in the state, the campaigns of the six contesting the caucuses — all except Jackson and Hollings — were making thousands of phone calls throughout the weekend to get their supporters out to vote.

Mondale's effort was getting a big boost from phone banks set up by the AFL-CIO, United Auto Workers and the National Education Association urging their members to support Mondale.

Hart's budget plan was a combination of defense cuts, tax increases and boosts in domestic spending that he said would reduce the federal deficit to $78 billion by 1989, based on economic assumptions by the Congressional Budget Office.

"If you make more optimistic assumptions, those deficits shrink substantially below that," Hart said. "If you were to adopt the president's assumptions, that deficit would be at zero. Indeed, it might even show a surplus."

Hart's tax increases were aimed principally at high-income taxpayers.

He would place a 5 percent surtax on those with an income of more than $100,000 and cap the final year of Reagan's tax cut for those making more than $50,000 a year. He would push "a partial and temporary deferral of indexing" of income tax rates that would save $45 billion a year by 1989 and impose a 10 percent surtax on corporate income, designed to raise $12 billion a year by 1989.

In the tax area, Hart's ideas are similar to those put forward by Mondale and Glenn.

The Colorado senator said he would cut an average of $28 billion a year from Reagan's defense budget and would add $20 billion in new spending each year, with the money going for education, nutrition, job training, housing and rebuilding the nation's roads, bridges and sewers.

"Other candidates, including the front-runner, seek to simply divide up a shrinking economic pie more fairly," Hart said. "That is not the option that this country faces. The option is to make the pie grow again."

Most of Mondale's Democratic rivals were saying they expect him to get about 50 percent of the delegates chosen in the caucuses Monday.

"Mondale will be in the 50 percent range or over," said Jerry Vento, Glenn's campaign manager. He said he expected Glenn to finish second with between 15 percent and 20 percent.

Five Inmates Flee Tennessee Prison

HENNING, Tenn. (UPI) — Five "extremely dangerous" convicts pulled guns on their guards in a field Saturday, commandeered three vehicles, riddled two others with shotgun fire and escaped in different directions, authorities said.

No one was reported injured, but a prison official said the escapees — including two convicted murderers and a rapist — blew out the back window of a prison vehicle that was chasing them.

"A prison employee, Wayne Douglas, was pursuing the three and he pulled them over. But the shotgun blew out the rear window of the prison vehicle," said Dick Baumbach, assistant to Tennessee Correction Commissioner Ernest Pellegrin.

He said the convicts also shot out the tires on a private vehicle as they made their escape about 11:35 a.m. EST.

The convicts made their break while working with a group of inmates in one of the farm fields at Fort Pillow.

"Three of them pulled pistols on two correctional officers," Baumbach said, and were joined by two others who jumped into a prison vehicle and fled.

"I understand they now have three vehicles," Baumbach said. He did not know how the inmates got the other two, but said officers "believe they are still in the general area."

The Tennessee Highway Patrol said the inmates headed in three different directions.

Baumbach said the five are "extremely dangerous and armed." He said that in addition to the three pistols the escapees used to threaten the guards, they took a pistol and shotgun from one of the guards and a radio and uniform from the other.

The five were identified as:

Randolph Oliver, 33, of Shelby County (Memphis area), serving life plus 35-40 years for robbery, rape, aggravated rape, assault to commit murder and robbery with a deadly weapon.

Ronald Freeman, 41, of Knox County, serving 198 years on two counts of first degree murder.

Riley Arzeneaux, 26, of Shelby County serving 25 years for second-degree murder.

Silvester Alexander, 33, of Shelby County serving a 40-year sentence for robbery with a deadly weapon.

James Clegg, 30, Shelby County, serving life as an habitual criminal.

Italy, Vatican Sever Alignment

ROME (UPI) — Italy and the Vatican signed a new agreement governing their relations Saturday that ends Roman Catholicism as the state religion and establishes the church and state as "independent and sovereign."

Socialist Prime Minister Bettino Craxi and Vatican Secretary of State Cardinal Agostino Casaroli signed the 14-article Concordat.

The new Concordat replaces one that dictator Benito Mussolini signed with the Vatican in 1929 and eliminates many of the privileges he granted the church in hopes of obtaining its support for his Facist regime.

The Concordat will not go into effect until it is ratified by the Vatican and the state.

Government ratification will be withheld until a state-church commission considers regulations governing taxation of certain church property. The panel has been given six months to complete its work.

Vote Tabulators Are Way To Go In Pitt Elections

While it appears now that Pitt County will still be using antiquated paper ballots and pencils in the May 8 primary, voters here could be using modern vote tabulators in the November general election.

Since competitive bids for the equipment must be taken, county officials say it is unlikely that it can be purchased and built in time for the primaries.

However, the County Commissioners instructed the Board of Elections to proceed with the preparation of specificications for bids in anticipation of having the voting equipment by November.

The tabulators will cost about $3,400 each and the models being considered accept paper ballots which are in turn tabulated. The equipment prints out totals at the end of the day and, in the event of malfunction, the paper ballots are still available.

It is clearly the way to go. Totals will be available more quickly on election day and the polling places can remain open longer since the long and tedious tabulating time is eliminated.

Nor should officials entirely give up on having the equipment by May. Once bids are taken and the low bidder determined, it could be amazing how quickly the equipment could be delivered if the matter is negotiated effectively.

Ethel Merman: One Of The Greatest

The trouble with legends is there is so little one can add to them; they are already known to the world.

Basically, that is the story of Ethel Agnes Zimmermann. (Who would think an Ethel Agnes Zimmermann could ever light up the world?) She was a secretary who sang a little bit for spending money ... was "discovered", and the rest is history.

Of course, the world didn't know her as Ethel Zimmermann, nor Agnes Zimmermann; but as Ethel Merman she lit up theaters of Broadway, glorified the silver screen and entranced home audiences via radio and television.

Composers and lyricists knew their songs were being showcased at their very best when Merman sang them; and she had the best songsmiths of any era behind her. Among them were the Gershwins and Irving Berlin.

For more than 40 years Ethel Merman was a bright, bright star in a galaxy of stars. When she died, all 36 Broadway theaters dimmed their lights ... a gesture reserved for only the greatest. That was Ethel, all right.

Sunday Morning Notes

ECU basketball coach Charlie Harrison has had a rather miserable season this year, what with his young team being defeated more times than anyone would like to recall.

Things could only get worse, and they did. The coach, who has a good driving record, got a speeding ticket.

An ECU alumnus, Phil Dixon, represented him in court and pleaded with Judge Jim Martin, who is also an ECU grad, for leniency.

The judge pondered the case and decided to allow a prayer for judgment, which means that the coach can keep his license.

Any man who has lost 12 straight games deserves some consideration, the judge said, and he didn't want to do anything that would adversely affect the coach's recruiting.

The judge said a condition of the judgment was that Coach Harrison go out and recruit some fine prospects.

Seems like a splendid decision to us. Any collegiate football coach who has lost 12 games straight has been punished enough.

Patsy Moore, who contributes articles to The Daily Reflector, has noted some more personalized license plates.

One from Virginia reads "Footie", and a Maryland plate reads "Eden".

There is a North Carolina plate which reads "Oh Yeah."

Last week I wrote about snow. On Sunday I saw J.B. Kittrell Jr., who noted that it was a strange subject to be writing about on that particular Sunday. Indeed it was. Last Sunday was a sunny, balmy day and thoughts of snow were the furtherest thing from local residents' minds.

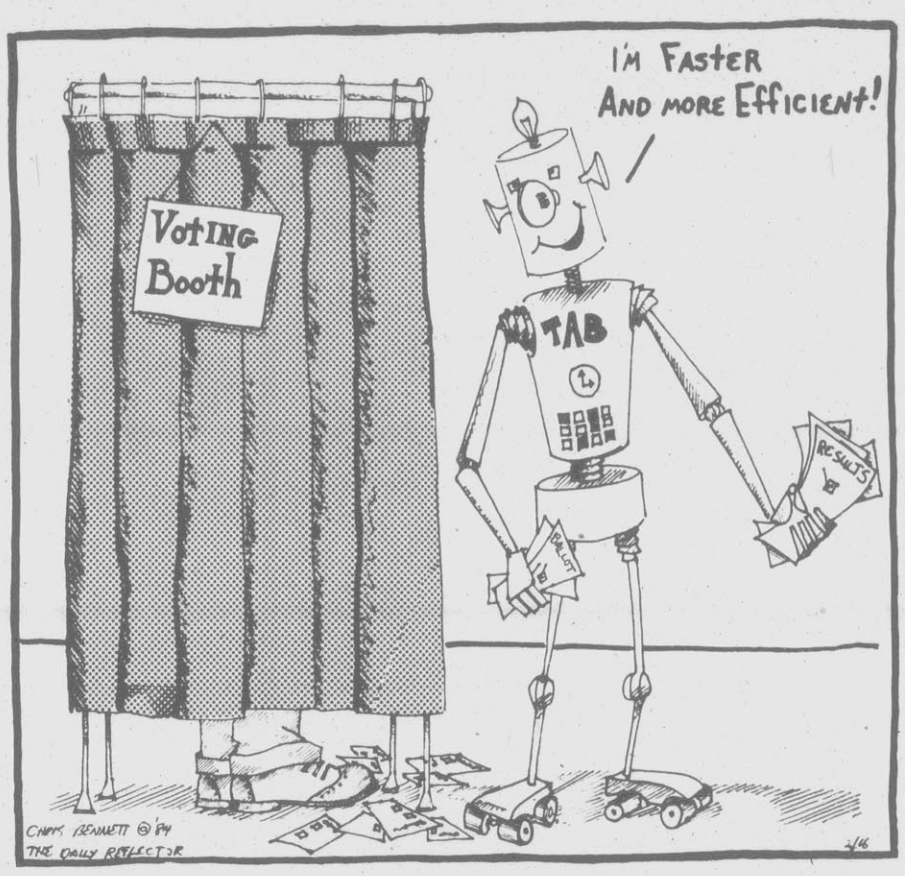

The spring weather continued through most of last week, complete with people in shorts and even coeds in bikinis seeking tans in preparation for spring break.

Since this is written several days prior to publication, I wouldn't bet on what the weather will be like on publication day. Maybe it won't be snowing, but don't put away the woolies yet. Winter is not over.

One office smart alec heard my dour prediction about more winter being ahead on a pretty day last week.

"Maybe this ain't spring," he quipped, "but I'll sure take it until the real spring comes along."

Well, think positive.

Vacation

WASHINGTON (AP) — During his three years in office, President Reagan has spent 175 days in California — an average of one day out of six.

He was in California when U.S. jet fighters shot down Libyan jets over the Gulf of Sidra. He was in California when U.S. Marines in the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon suffered their first casualties. He was in California when the Soviets shot down a South Korean Air Lines jumbo jet.

And last week, he was in California when Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov died.

So, what did he talk about when he sat down to chat and pose for photographers during his first formal meeting in the Oval Office after returning from the latest vacation? The events that occur while he's on vacation.

Reagan was meeting with King Hussein of Jordan on Monday when the king asked about the trip.

"I was on the phone more than I was on the horse," Reagan said. "I've decided presidents don't have vacations. They just have a change of scenery."

Reagan complained about a problem he had with the fireplace in the five-room ranch house he calls home in the Santa Ynez Mountains about 30 miles northwest of Santa Barbara.

He was overheard telling the king that he had built a big fire in the fireplace, which is raised above the floor, when some logs tumbled out.

"The fire fell onto the floor," Reagan said, relating the difficulty he had getting it back into the fireplace "without burning my hands off."

Secretary of State George P. Shultz questioned whether the president kept a pair of fireplace gloves handy for just such emergencies.

"No, but I think I should. I've decided fireplace tongs are not very practical," Reagan replied.

The president isn't the only one having fireplace problems.

Larry Speakes, Reagan's spokesman, likes to keep a fire smoldering on chilly days. It's stoked up in the morning, and throughout the day a log or two are thrown on to keep his spacious office cozy.

While Speakes was at a meeting elsewhere, a Secret Service agent came padding down a nearby hall and up to the spokesman's open door. It might be a good idea, he suggested, to open the flue just a bit more.

It turns out the smoke had drifted down one hallway, turned right up another, passed through a doorway, and could be noticed outside the Oval Office.

Political Surprise

RALEIGH — If an award is given for the biggest political surprise of the 1984 season, the N.C. Association of Educators certainly has to be considered the frontrunner right now.

The political endorsement of NCAE was highly sought by the six major Democratic gubernatorial candidates this year. NCAE has 40,000 members and an organized political operation to boot. NCAE has computerized voting lists, members highly trained in political campaigning, a large warchest and a good claim to the hottest issue of the year: education.

So NCAE went ahead and endorsed Tom Gilmore, a Julian nurseryman who is generally accepted to be the leading contender for last place among the six major candidates. Does this make any sense?

Let's analyze the move. Be warned that since this reporter does not have a telephone tap on the minds of the NCAE members who made the endoresement, this analysis involves speculation — both on his part and on the part of his coffee break cronies.

NCAE may have decided to go with Gilmore for the stated reason. That is, he is the best candidate for governor from their perspective. Gilmore is nowhere in the polls now and, if he does win, NCAE could rightly claim to be the kingmaker. Gilmore would owe everything to the teachers and he could be expected to start paying back with his 1985 budget.

But let's approach the endorsement from the other angle. As one crony so succinctly stated it, "NCAE doesn't know who is going to win. But they know who isn't — Tom Gilmore." So, maybe NCAE backed Gilmore thinking that he doesn't have a chance. If you laugh at that, remember back to mid-January and the published talk that NCAE might not endorse anyone. With six candidates in the running, none the clear frontrunner, NCAE members were expressing doubts about backing the wrong horse. The fear is to be on the losing side and to have set yourself up as a clear adversary of the man who'll draft the state's budgets from 1985 to 1989.

NCAE couldn't cop out of the 1984 race, however, and still expect to be taken seriously in the future. So maybe they found the next best thing — the almost certain loser. Gilmore is such a longshot that the other candidates don't even spread rumors about him. His press secretary reports that some papers have been reluctant to list him as a "major" candidate.

By picking Gilmore, NCAE hurts two of its friends, Eddie Knox and Rufus Edmisten. But it didn't have to choose between them. Odds are that one or both will be in the run-off and that Gilmore won't be. So NCAE can quickly join camp with Knox or Edmisten then.

On the other hand, NCAE may have gotten into the good graces of three other candidates: Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, Insurance Commissioner John Ingram and Lauch Faircloth. None of these three really expected NCAE's endorsement, but they feared that Knox or Edmisten could be launched into a dominating position by it. When NCAE picked Gilmore, "We were delighted," an aide to one of these candidates said.

Chasing A Deficit

NEW YORK (AP) — Rarely has so large a posse gone after a social menace with such savage determination, vowing to cut it limb from limb and end forevermore its predatory attacks.

They caught the beast allright, and they have come up with several thousand ways to destroy it. Even millions of ways, perhaps, because almost everyone who thinks at all has offered suggestions.

But the beast hasn't been dismembered — why it hasn't even been slain. After all that effort, it beast seems destined to remain alive, simply because the hunters can't agree on how to kill it. Yes, it should be killed. But how?

The beast, of course, is the federal budget deficit, one of the few things in modern times that has united the vast spectrum of political thought from right to left and up and down the age and income scales.

The Grace Commission offered 2,478 "separate, distinct and specific" recommendations for $424.4 billion in government savings over three years.

The Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank, offered a 110-page plan it said would slash $119 billion from next year's deficit.

The Congressional Budget Office offered 138 specific suggestions for correcting the imbalance between government income and spending.

Your brother-in-law probably offered several hundred specific suggestions. Thousands of kids in classroom were asked by teachers for their suggestions. Hundreds of academics have had their say in the matter, and some have grants to continue their research. Every corporation chairman has offered his advice. And untold numbers of politicians and office-holders at local, state and federal levels have dutifully offered their opinion that the deficit is immoral.

The beast is caged, but the discussion goes on.

J. Peter Grace, who headed the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control, has become one of the most popular podium performers in the nation, with audiences apparently having an insatiable demand for spending facts.

If his commission's warnings are not needed, he told an audience recently, deficits might grow from the $195 billion of 1983 to the $2 trillion of the year 2000.

No audience can fail to be awed by such fantastic numbers, nor can they fail to be amazed by stories of waste, such as:

—The U.S. Forest Service gave away $235 million of firewood in 1981.

—It costs the Army $4.20 to process a payroll check versus $1.00 in the private sector.

—The General Services Administration employs 17 times as many people and spends almost 14 times as much on total management costs as a comparable private sector firm.

—Half the government's computers are so old that manufacturers no longer service them. Additional personnel expenses, therefore, amount to $600 million annually.

The question now is how to cut up the beast, the answer to which is likely to be long delayed.

Correcting A Mess By Voting

WASHINGTON — In his budget message of Feb. 1, President Reagan called for congressional action this year on two constitutional amendments, one to provide a "line-item veto" for future presidents, the other to compel adoption of a balanced budget. I would oppose both of them, out of a general prejudice against tinkering with the Constitution, but the proposals merit discussion.

This is what the president said: "Where Congress lacks the will to enforce upon itself the strict fiscal diet that is now necessary, it needs the help of the executive branch. We need a constitutional amendment granting the president power to veto individual items in appropriations bills. Forty-three of the 50 states give this authority to their governors. Congress has approved a line-item veto for the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the trust territories. It is now time for Congress to grant this same authority to the president."

Reagan addressed the proposed balanced budget amendment more briefly. More than 30 states have petitioned Congress for a constitutional convention at which such an amendment could be put out for ratification. "If you want to make it happen," said the president, "it will happen."

If Congress wants to pursue the line-item veto, Congress might take a leaf from the book of the Confederate States of America. It is generally forgotten, but the Confederate constitution contained this provision: "The president may approve any appropriation and disapprove any other appropriation in the same bill. In such case he shall, in signing the bill, designate the appropriations disapproved; and shall return a copy of such appropriations, with his objections, to the House in which the bill shall have originated; and the same proceedings shall then be had as in case of other bills disapproved by the president."

A persuasive case can be made for the procedure. Pork barrel politics, like the poor, will be always with us. Every year the appropriations bills are larded with pet projects that cannot truly be justified in the national interest.

For a specific example, consider the National Endowment for the Arts. The president is proposing to reduce its funds in 1985 to $143.8 million, down 12 percent from the $162 million in the current fiscal year. Influential members of the House and Senate are hopping mad. They want to restore the whole amount and more. Suppose a bill were sent to the president including an item of $175 million for the endowment. Under the line-item procedure, a president could veto that one item and return the bill for further action. If two-thirds of each house voted to override, so be it. If the veto were sustained, a compromise figure would have to be found.

But the case for a line-item veto is only persuasive; it is not convincing. In most states the gubernatorial power is used almost wholly to correct duplications or to make technical changes. Constitutional amendment ought to be a last resort. The need is not self-evident.

Not even a persuasive case can be made for the proposed amendment on a balanced budget.

The answer to the fiscal mess that confronts us is not to be found in constitutional gimmicks. The answer lies in electing responsible people to Congress. Once we do that, the rest will take care of itself.

Campaign Reporting Office Works Year-Round

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina's political season ends Nov. 6, but the campaigns won't be over until sometime next year for workers in one state office.

The Campaign Reporting Office of the state Board of Elections will spend several months after the election completing audits of campaign spending reports filed by candidates for statewide and legislative offices and political committees set up to support candidates.

"When we close out one election year, we are already setting up for the next one," said Rosemary Haddock, head of the reporting office.

North Carolina's campaign reporting act requires candidates and political committees to make regular reports listing contributions and expenditures.

The law sets a $4,000 limit on the amount of money or services that can be given to. The limit applies to each election, so a candidate involved in a primary, runoff and the November general election can receive a maximum of $12,000 from an individual contributor or political committee.

Cash contributions of more than $100 are banned and the names of donors giving $100 or more must be reported. Gifts from corporations or businesses are illegal.

"It's a complicated system that has miraculously worked out to a manageable task," said state Elections Director Alex K. Brock, who helped write the law during the 1973 session of the General Assembly.

During an election year, Brock said the reporting office becomes "a paper factory" generating "mountains" of documents that must be checked.

Ms. Haddock said there are about 400 candidates and committees representing candidates and 150 political action committees that will be required to file reports this year.

Candidates must prepare between four to six reports, and those from well-organized candidates are several hundred pages long.

The required reports are an organizational report due 10 days after a candidate files for office; a spending report before the primary; post-primary and post-runoff spending reports; a pre-election spending report; and a final report after the November elections. Candida5es who lose in a primary or runoff must file their final reports within 45 days after they are defeated.

Each of the spending reports is reviewed by the campaign reporting office staff.

"I don't know if the work is hard per se; it's a matter of detail," Ms. Haddock said.

During non-election years, she and a secretary run the office, but during ancampaign year several part-time workers are hired to keep up with the work.

"They do a very commendable job, considering the amount of paper they ahve to handle, process and get in order," Brock said.

Although many people claim the law can be circumvented, Brock said spot checks are made to verify contributions.

Each report is studied for possible violations of the law and candidates or contributors are asked to explain any discrepancies.

Brock said one frequent problem involves checks written to a candidate on a business account but intended as a personal contribution. In those cases, the donor is asked to provide a clarification, since business contributions are illegal.

Ms. Haddock said many people are unaware of a provision of the law requiring people who make independent expenses for a candidate to make reports if they spend more than $100. She said a person who pays $100 out of his own pocket to print yard signs for a candidate would be required to make a report.

Problems also arise because some are unaware a political committee has legally been formed anytime two more more individuals receive money or spend money on behalf of a candidate.

Infuriating The Right

WASHINGTON — As he was indignantly denying the need for Joe Coors or any conservative activist other than himself in the White House, Ronald Reagan routinely approved an event certain to infuriate his right-wing constituency: an April 1 presidential reception for Trilateral Commission members.

The Trilateralists are seen by the conservative movement as symbolizing the international establishment targeted by Reagan's right-wing populist supporters of 1976 and 1980. The commission members — consisting of business, intellectual and political leaders from the U.S., Western Europe and Japan — are far from the communist sympathizers portrayed by the paranoid right, but tend to an elitist, anti-populist world view. Thus, the April Fool's party at the White House illustrates insensitivity there, shared by Reagan, toward his core constituency.

The most conservative president since Calvin Coolidge faces trouble from the right to succumbing to the establishment on issues far more important than the Trilateral Commission. Back-bench House Republicans are nearing open revolt protesting Federal Reserve Board and State Department policies that threaten calamities for the economy and Lebanon. Reagan's State of the Union, enveloped in euphoria, seems buried in a past more distant than Jan. 25.

It was during this euphoric afterglow that Chase Manhattan Bank Chairman-emeritus David Rockefeller informed the White House that the Trilateral Commission was meeting at Washington's Mayflower Hotel April 1-3. The famed international banker, symbol of the Trilateralists, asked whether the commission's members might be received by the president.

The reception was quickly approved, with the stipluation that it be announced eventually by the White House rather than by the commission. When the April 1 date appeared on Reagan's closely held advance schedule, one politically astute insider assumed it was a tired April Fool's joke. When the Trilateralist reception disappeared from a later schedule, he was sure of it.

It was no joke, and the removal from the schedule apparently represented a bungled attempt at security rather than a cancellation. White House insiders defend the decision on grounds the Trilateralists have been entertained by heads of government in Japan and Western Europe. Besides, they say, David Rockefeller has helped the president on many issues — especially the Caribbean Basin initiative.

However, deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver jealously guards the president's time from visiting delegations, and is unrelenting in turning them down (he has yet to give the green light for the president to meet fundamentalist Baptists, a true Reaganite constituency, later in April). In truth, Deaver is an unabashed admirer of the Eastern Establishment in general and the Rockefellers in particular.

But what about Ronald Reagan? Did he not remember the 1980 New Hampshire Republican primary when his strategists, worried about George Bush's substantial lead, exploited rank-and-file concern over Trilateralists with a nasty — and effective — attack on the future vice president's past connections with the Commission?

The future president joined the fun, suggesting Bush's Trilateralist links "should be investigated." Reagan charged the Carter administration "has been unduly influenced by the Trilateral Commission" in reacting too passively to communist aggression. While no president ever slavishly follows the excesses of past campaigns, Reagan might have remembered the muzzle velocity of the Trilateral issue.

But the notion of the president vetoing a Deaver-approved date is exotic. That is why the right wanted Attorney General-designate Edwin Meese III replaced as Cabinet-level White House counselor by a conservative: precisely to alert the president to such unseen dangers as a Trilateral Commission reception. Brewer Joseph Coors of Golden, Colo., a member of the president's largely-defunct "kitchen cabinet," volunteered (perhaps as a stalking horse for a less controversial conservative).

But finally free of amiable Ed Meese, the West Wing "pragmatists" — led by chief of staff James A. Baker III and Deaver — were not about to accept hard-nosed Joe Coors as a substitute. Coors picked up only mixed conservative backing, and the coup de grace was administered by the president's assertion there already is a conservative in the White House: Ronald Reagan (a line used earlier by Deaver).

One New Rightist who is a Reagan loyalists warned that the April 1 reception could encourage an independent right-wing candidacy (probably Rep. Ron Paul of Texas). But there are more subtle repercussions. Reaganites who hardly worry at all about David Rockefeller and the Trilateralists are still concerned where their leader has gone.

Judicial Opinion

Judge John J. Parker was properly considered one of the fairest judges who ever sat on the bench in the United States. So you can realize how anguished the jurist was when he realized that on the eve of the Nuremberg trial of top Nazi leaders after World War II he had drunk a toast calling for the "speedy conviction and execution of all the defendants."

Parker's gaffe came at a party given by Robert Jackson, the U.S. Surpeme Court justice who served as the American prosecutor at Nuremberg. The party honoring Andrei Y. Vishinsky, the first Soviet ambassador to the United Nations, came just before the trial was to begin.

Robert E. Conot tells about the party in his engrossing account of the trial, "Justice at Nuremberg," which was published last year. He wrote: "After numerous toasts, when most of the celebrants were no longer seeing or hearing too clearly, Vishinsky raised his glass and jovially exclaimed: "To the speedy conviction and execution of all the defendants."

"Hear! Hear!" echoed about the room as glasses were drained. It was only afterward that Parker realized what he and the other judges had done. They had drunk to the execution of the defendants before the start of the trial.

According to Conot, Parker was "as conscience-stricken as if he had hanged a man in error." That night Parker, who had been appointed by President Truman to serve as an alternate judge at Nuremberg, went to see Frances Biddle, the principal American judge.

"Biddle tried to console him," wrote Conot, "by assuring him that no one had noticed, and that, in any case, such a bibulous faux pas was nothing to worry about." But Parker kept shaking his head. "Supposing Drew Person (a Washington columnist) gets hold of it? Can't you see the headline: 'American Judges Drink To The Death Sentences Of The Men Whom They Are Trying.'"

Conot also told how Parker scored a triumph of sorts when the Army, in an excess of propriety, provided high-backed, throne-like chairs for the principal judges but only modest armchairs for the alternates. Parker, who considered the two sets of chairs a deliberate slight of the alternates, complained to Biddle during the noon recess. He wanted to know what the alternates were doing there and argued that they should have the same rights as the principal judges.

"The upshot was that the modest chairs were hastily removed, and all the judges henceforth received royal seats," Conot wrote. "The judges agreed among themselves that they were all to be equal, rewriting, in effect, if not in legal terms, the charter of the tribunal." Though officially only four votes were recorded on any issue, in practice eight voices were heard.

After the trial — in which 18 men were convicted with 11 sentenced to death and only three acquitted — Parker defended the legality of the trial in a speech to the American Judicature Society of Atlantic City. Doubtless aware the trial had been likened to a "lynching party," Parker asserted there was adequate basis in international law to punish persons found guilty of waging aggressive war, for those convicted of violating the laws of war and those adjudged guilty of crimes against humanity.

"Nowhere can be found a stronger warning against the dangers of intolerance and race prejudice ... " Parker said. "Nowhere is more clearly demonstrated than in the records of this trial the eternal truth that the foundations of a state are not merely physical, but are spiritual and moral and that when its spiritual and moral foundations are destroyed no state can live or ought to live."

Parker, a native of Monroe, graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1907 and got his law degree there in 1908. He practiced law at Greensboro and Monroe before moving to Charlotte in 1922 to head the law firm of Parker, Stewart, McRae and Bobbitt.

In the meantime, he had run unsuccessfully as the Republican candidate for Congress, attorney general and finally, in 1920, for governor. He got 230,000 votes, more than any Republican candidate had ever received.

However, his campaign so impressed the victor, Cameron Morrison, that he supported Parker for appointment as judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals and later for the U.S. Supreme Court.

In 1925, President Calvin Coolidge appointed Parker to the Circuit Court, and in 1930, President Herbert Hoover appointed him to the U.S. Supreme Court. However, the U.S. Senate rejected the Supreme Court appointment by a vote of 39 to 41. The switch of just one vote could have brought confirmation and a seat on the nation's highest court. The rejection of Parker, who would have been the only Southerner on the Supreme Court, was credited to the opposition of blacks and organized labor. Union spokesmen excoriated Parker because of a decision he had made upholding the so-called "Yellow Dog Contract," in which workers were required to promise in writing that they would not join a labor union during the course of their employment. The NAACP opposed him because while running for governor in 1920, he had advised blacks not to take part in politics.

Ironically, during the years that followed, Parker remained on the Circuit Court where he wrote decisions that caused many labor leaders and blacks to change their attitudes toward him. He had become a spokesman for liberal interpretation and enforcement of labor laws and civil rights decisions.

Meaning

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Bipartisan" is a four-letter word.

In this election year, children should be shielded from such words, and those speaking them should be admonished to bite their tongues.

For complicated reasons, bipartisan seems to take on a different meaning when the calendar turns to one of the years in which we elect a president.

At that point, it no longer is a word of compromise, cooperation and conciliation. It becomes:

— A dirty word to throw at your political enemy, as in "I'm bipartisan and you're not. Nyah, nyah, nyah."

— A shield to hide an unpleasant truth: that nothing of substance will be done in Congress or the White House that isn't tinged with and guided by partisan politics.

— A handy way to spread the blame, as in forming a commission to do something unpleasant such as to explain why a U.S. ship accidentally fired on Portland, or to find ways to trim the deficit.

Which brings us to the point: No one should be the slightest bit surprised if a "bipartisan" working group of congressmen and White House officials fail in discovering $100 billion or $200 billion or even $2.98 of deficit-reducing budget savings or tax increases.

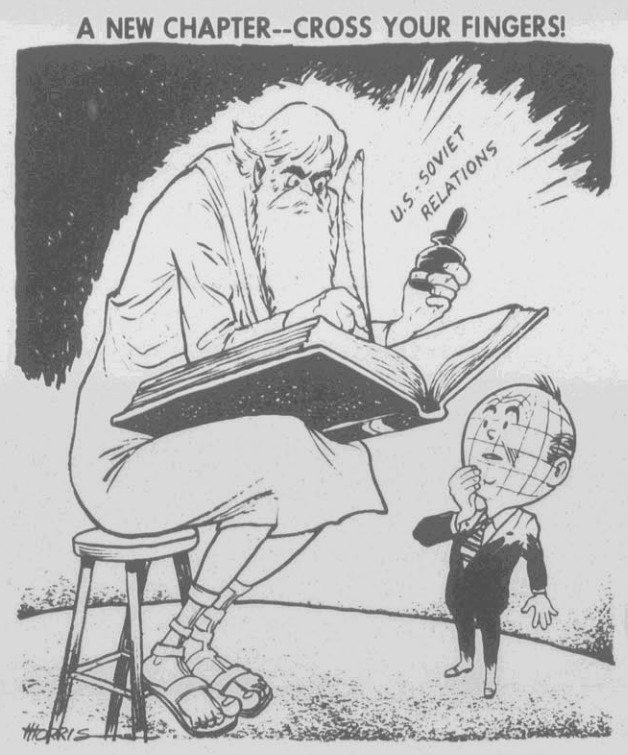

To expect such a commission to succeed in an election year is to expect one side or the other to sacrifice itself and its party, to hand a big election advantage to the side that appears to give in the most. Neither side could afford to refuse to be part of such an effort, but neither side could afford to let it succeed too well.

If this bipartisan deficit panel doesn't find ways to cut the deficit, then what will it do?

The answer already is becoming apparent: play cards. Not poker or hearts, but political cards.

None of this means that there won't be some deficit cutting this year. It is already clear, for example, that the 13 percent increase in the military budget won't survive Congress intact.

What it means is that anything that does happen will be tinged with partisan politics, and less of substance will happen than meets the eye.

One-Upping The President

WASHINGTON — Lester Brown's Worldwatch Institute one-upped President Reagan the other day with a "State of the World" report. But unlike Reagan's State of the Union, the institute's message didn't suggest a world standing tall.

First, some of the good news:

* World population growth has slowed from 1.9 to 1.7 percent per year. China, with more than a fifth of the earth's people has reduced its rate of increase to 1 percent. And 12 nations, all European, have stopped it altogether.

* Global consumption of oil has dropped to 2.15 barrels for every $1,000 of economic output to 1.74, or almost 20 percent, in the last five years. In the United States, where the use of gasoline and heating oil has dropped markedly, firewood provides twice as much "delivered" energy as nuclear power. Industrial firewood use even outstrips residential.

* Despite severe drought in Africa and the U.S., the world produced almost 1.5 billion metric tons of grain last year.

New some of the bad news:

* The world experienced a net gain in population of 79 million in 1982.

* The decline in world oil prices has diminished some of the economic incentive to explore and develop renewable energy resources. Meanwhile, primarily due to the use of coal and wood as energy sources, the earth's forests annually shrink by acreage about the size of Hungary.

* World population has a higher growth rate than grain production. Moreover, the world is losing about 7 percent, or 23 billion tons, of its topsoil to erosion every year.

Worldwatch isn't the first to spot these trends. Its information, infact, comes from public sources and has concerned many long-range planners for some time.

As Brown also argues, some key remedial steps — particularly increased resource conservation and birth control — would neither require new technologies nor eliminate jobs. Others, like easing the military's drain on national treasuries and renewing global cooperation of environmental matters, may simply be a function of U.S. commitment.

But "Now that the world is beginning to share America's early concern (about the environment)," says Brown, a 49-year-old agricultural specialist, "we're not providing the leadership."

Abdication might seem a harsh charge given the self-interested nature of nations. "State of the World — 1984" shows that the external debt owed by developing countries, now estimated at more than $700 billion, has encouraged fast-growth policies that are environmentally debilitating. In a zero-sum world, one country's conservation success is often another's marketing failure.

It's also tough to expouse the cooperative ideal of conservationists when superpower relations sputter, war strategies preoccupy many government leaders and once-humble nations thumb their noses at Uncle Sam.

At home and abroad, however, America hasn't set an adequate example for others to follow. It still uses more oil per unit of economic output than any other country, including the Soviet Union. It recovers about a quarter of its wastepaper through recycling, or about the world average (Japan and the Netherlands recover about half the paper they use(. It allows federal deficits to cause havoc for a world of borrowers who rely on U.S. interest rates.

Meanwhile, Washington, has undermined international negotiations on ocean resources and infuriated the Canadians over acid rain. When the Kenyans offered to accept a center for the study of renewable energy, the U.S. blocked the proposal. The 1972 Stockholm conference on the environment, when America was very much in charge of an evolving international movement, seems a distant memory.

By force of necessity, conservation could begin to thrive with or without U.S. inspiration. While industrial nations will adapt to their dwindling resurce base more quickly than others, members the the Third World could find economic salvation in conservationist solutions.

But the precarious state of the world's most important assets provides every reason for the U.S. to care as well. On a small planet some problems are everybody's. Indeed, they only become worse if left unattended.

U.S., Soviets End Nuclear Arms Talks

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Soviet and U.S. delegates on Saturday adjourned three days of talks on restricting nuclear arms to countries already possessing them. American officials said the two sides made progress but declined to release details.

The nuclear nonproliferation talks were believed to be the first consultations between the superpowers since the change in Soviet leadership Feb. 13.Private contacts on arms-related issues between Moscow and Washington have become rare since the Soviets suspended nuclear talks with the United States late last year.

"We made progress," said Richard T. Kennedy, ambassador-at-large for nuclear affairs from the U.S. State Department. "We have a better understanding of the nature of the problem and of each others' programs and efforts in this connection."

Another American official, speaking privately, said the meeting was never directly jeopardized by East-West tensions, but the chill was felt.

"The need to improve general relationships was clear on both sides, I think," he said, describing the talks as "businesslike and constructive." He declined to elaborate.

Kennedy said the two sides planned to meet again before year's end but the date and venue were still undecided.

"The talks covered the complete spectrum of nonproliferation questions," said Kennedy. They dealt primarly with strengthening the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency's safeguard system, created to stop the increase in the number of countries with nuclear weapons, he said.

The United States and the Soviet Union are parties to the agency's 121-nation Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty, which went into force on March 5, 1970. Of Britain, France and China, the other nations the agency considers nuclear powers, only Britain has also ratified it.

The suspended Soviet-U.S. negotiations on arms reduction are not under the agency's purview.

The non-proliferation talks are the third in a series that began in December 1982, and were initiated that October by U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

The American official who asked not to be named suggested the non-proliferation talks affected direct superpower arms negotiations at least indirectly.

"Obviously if there's an opportunity for the two sides to get together on issues as this one where they have a substantial agreement in general interest, that obviously helps to keep an atmosphere of open lines," he said.

Newspaper Says U.S. Helped Transport Arms In Honduras

By United Press International

U.S. and Honduran military trucks secretly transported a shipment of U.S. arms and other war material apparently destined for war games to an "unknown destination" inside Honduras, a Honduran newspaper said Saturday.

In Nicaragua, the leftist Sandinista government charged President Reagan's new special envoy to Central America, Harry Shlaudeman, is "the CIA's man" who helped bankroll the 1973 coup that ousted Chilean President Salvador Allende.

The daily Honduran newpaper El Tiempo said, "A new important shipment of war equipment from the United Stateswas unloaded last Thursday" at the Caribbean port of Puerto Cortes, 120 miles north of Tegucigalpa.

"The military materials were transported the following Friday night to an unknown destination via Honduran and U.S. army roads," the newspaper said, citing a reliable source.

The newspaper said the military cargo would probably be used in the third phase of joint U.S.-Honduran military maneuvers, to be called "Grenadier I" and scheduled to begin this year, possibly in June.

The paper also reported that U.S. helicopters and Army planes have landed at the air base at San Pedro Sula, "presumably bringing war equipment from the United States."

The daily said that this month two shipments of war materials have been unloaded onto the Puerto Cortes wharf for secret transport.

El Tiempo said its sources confirmed they had seen containers labeled "U.S. Army" on the wharf.

The U.S. Embassy in Tegucigalpa was not immediately available for comment about the report.

In Nicaragua, a headline in the official government newspaper Barricada said, "The CIA's man has replaced Stone."

President Reagan nominated career diplomat Harry W. Shlaudeman, 57, as special envoy to Central America to replace former Florida Democratic Sen. Richard Stone, who resigned effective next month.

Schlaudeman was deputy chief of mission at the U.S. Embassy in Chile in 1973, and became a subject of controversy after he later denied to the House Foreign Affairs Committee that the United States had intervened in Chilean politics.

Subsequent disclosures showed the CIA had been deeply involved in Allende's ouster, with a reported $7 million in covert funds channeled to oppositon groups.

Elsewhere in the region, Guatemala's chief of state said Friday a constituent assembly to be elected in July will not have the power to oust him by appointing a provisonal president.

Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores said, "If you want a dictator you may get one. I don't want a dictatorship in Guatemala, but it seems like there are people who do."

Local observers say preventing the assembly from naming a provisional president could insure Mejia's — and the Guatemalan army's — control over the government for from one to two years more. Mejia took power in a coup Aug. 8, 1983.

DISEASE CAUSE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A possible new form of life — called a prion — may be the cause of Alzheimer's disease and other degenerative neurological illnesses.

A research project, headed by Dr. Stanley B. Prusiner at the University of California-San Francisco supported by R.J. Reynolds indicates prions show similarities to formations of abnormal compounds found in the brains of victims of Alzheimer's disease. The illness leads to degeneration of the nervous system and mental deterioration.

Prusiner says if further research establishes that prions — composed of protein and infectious material — cause the disease then it is important to realize the disease is not contagious by contact.

Cat Killings

INDIANAPOLIS — Publicity over the beating deaths of nearly 100 cats in an eastside neighborhood has brought widespread public support and donations to a reward fund ranging from $1 to $500.

News accounts have prompted phone calls from animal lovers around Indiana and even Ohio who have offered to give money and advice, and the reward fund has reached nearly $2,000.

The pace of the killings slowed through late January and early February, but last Sunday 35 cats, most of them clubbed to death, were found on a street in the neighborhood.

No Hard Leads

LEESVILLE, La. — Detectives hunting for five holdup men who swooped down on a bank in a stolen helicopter and made off with about $163,000 said Saturday they had "some good information" but no hard leads in the search.

The five, armed with M-14 carbines and wearing blue overalls like those worn by SWAT teams, landed at a branch of the Merchants and Farmers Bank on Wednesday and stole about $163,000.

Mob Contract

CHICAGO — A convicted cocaine trafficker says mob figures put a $100,000 contract on the life of former Mayor Jane Byrne, allegedly because she didn't push hard enough for legalized gambling.

The Chicago Tribune reported its account of the plot came from federal agents.

Federal authorities said they have no evidence that any effort was made to carry out an assassination, the Tribune said.

Tax Battle

VANCOUVER, Wash. — A nasty little tax war in the laid-back Pacific Northwest has the sister states of Washington and Oregon at each other's throats, with unseemly name-calling and threats.

Oregon touched off the political battle by quietly jacking up the state income taxes of many of the 40,000 Washington residents who work in Oregon. The extra tax bill is $200 a year for many people.

Washington is responding with cries of outrage and threats of retaliation in the form of a "commuter tax" on every Oregonian who crosses the border to work in Washington.

Washington also is preparing a court challenge.

Coup Planned?

MIAMI — Three men arrested in a cocaine bust may have planned to finance a coup in Guatemala with drug-deal profits, organized crime detectives say, but defense attorneys call the theory nonsense.

Arthur Nehrbass, commander of the Metro-Dade Organized Crime Bureau, confirmed that his office has developed information linking a cocaine deal to a possible coup.

"Our investigation indicated that approximately $17 million of embezzled Guatemalan funds were taken to Peru, where perhaps as much as 1,000 kilograms (2,200 pounds) of cocaine was purchased," Nehrbass said.

Advance Party

PEKING — A United States advance team arrives Monday to plan details of President Reagan's April visit — the first trip to China by a U.S. president since 1975.

Negotiations have gone on for months about where and when Reagan will visit, the size of his party, where they will all stay and how the news media will cover the trip.

Informed U.S. diplomats now say Reagan probably will be here for six days at the end of April, and his party will number about 650.

Funeral

ATTERIDGEVILLE, South Africa — Thousands of mourners on Saturday attended the funeral of a 14-year-old black schoolgirl killed at her high school in a clash between students and police.

The death last Monday of Emma Sathekge, who was run over by a police vehicle, came at a time of scattered but growing student boycotts of black high schools across the country.

Boycotting students are demanding elected councils and repeal of a law making 19 the maximum age for black high school students — which prevents some students from graduating.

Lost And Gone

INDIANAPOLIS — An appliance store owner says he accidentally dropped the store's receipts — $3,141 — in a mailbox instead of a bank depository, and now the Postal Service says the money has vanished.

William C. Renner, 64, said postal inspectors told him a postal worker stole the money and they are investigating. But they have given him little hope of recovering the money, he said.

Union Charge

COMMODORE, Pa. — United Mine Workers President Richard Trumka charged Saturday that stricter enforcement of safety regulations would have prevented the mine explosion here that killed three workers and injured 10 others.

Rescue teams carried the three bodies to the surface early Satruday, more than 43 hours after the apparent methane explosion. Two rescue teams of eight miners worked all day Friday to ventilate poisonous, explosive gas from a tunnel in the mine, where about 120 miners were working when the gas apparently exploded Thursday.

MIA Search

BANGKOK, Thailand — The highest-level U.S. government delegation to visit Vietnam since the end of the war heads to Hanoi on Sunday in an effort to resolve the fates of some 2,500 Americans servicemen who did not return.

The five-member team will be led by U.S. Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Armitage and will include Ann Mills Griffiths, executive director of the National League of Families, a private lobby group concerned with the issue, said the Vietnam News Agency.

The U.S. government said in a statement the trip was not related to reports that Vietnam was prepared to hand over the remains of three Americans to the Vietnam Veterans of America. But it said the visit was "mutually agreed on by the two sides," and the U.S. government hoped any remains would be handed over on a "government-to-government" basis.

Prison Escape

ALEXANDRIA, La. — Deputies have recaptured six of nine prisoners who climbed down a homemade rope from a fourth-floor jail cell, and a search was on for the three who were still loose, officials said Saturday.

Deputies said they learned about the escape when they caught a man allegedly trying to crack a safe Friday night, asked where he was from, and were told, "The Rapides Parish jail."

The prisoners got out by sawing through cell bars and climbing down from the fourth floor on a rope made of sheets and towels, deputies said.

Drug War

WASHINGTON — Despite a multimillion-dollar campaign against narcotics, federal officials concede that the amount of cocaine reaching this country from Latin America last year was substantially higher than in 1982 and that the final estimates may approach twice as much as the 45 metric tons to 54 metric tons smuggled in during 1982.

Aside from cocaine, the war on drugs achieved some substantial victories during 1983, including a reduction in the supply of heroin and a leveling off of the marijuana supply. In addition, arrests and convictions were up, seizures of heroin and cocaine were up, and seizures and forfeitures of drug traffickers' money and assets were up.

Body Returned

WASHINGTON — The body of Leamon Ray Hunt, chief of the multinational force in the Sinai, was returned Saturday to the United States from Rome where he was murdered last week by terrorists.

Hunt, 56, died in a Rome hospital on Wednesday, an hour after he was shot by two men who opened fire on his car with automatic weapons as it stopped at a traffic light.

Hunt was director general of the 11-nation Sinai force, which includes some 800 Americans. The observer force was set up in 1981 to monitor the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty which provided for the return of the Sinai to Egypt.

Marines Conducting Exercise

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Amphibious ships carrying about 8,000 U.S. Marines set sail Saturday for a three-week exercise designed to test the defense of northern Norway, Marine officials said.

Most of the Marines from Camp Lejeune, Cherry Point Marine Air Station and New River Marine Air Station left Morehead City in 11 ships, said Lt. Cmdr. James Kraft, director of the Navy Port Control Office. Two more ships were leaving from Wilmington and Charleston, S.C., he said.

A 14th ship was undergoing "quick repairs" after heavy seas damaged it a few nights ago, and its troops were assigned to another ship, Kraft said.

Capt. Craig Fisher, a Camp Lejeune spokesman, said he could not confirm that any of the troops participating in the exercise would later replace the 22nd Marine Amphibious Unit, now serving as the landing force for the Sixth Fleet off the coast of Lebanon.

A reception in honor of Middendorf will follow his address, with Chancellor and Mrs. John M. Howell as hosts at the chancellor's home.

The ECU-Phi Kappa Phi Symposium will continue through Wednesday. Except for the ambassador's address, all sessions will be in the Nursing School auditorium on the ECU campus. All sessions abe open to the public.

An ECU Russian language professor, Dr. Maria Malby, will present a paper dealing with Russian author Leo Tolstoy's "realities for 1984."

Among the papers scheduled for presentation is an examination of the power and responsibility of the American news media in times of conflict. Another paper will present an economic analysis of the origins of war and peace.

Papers dealing with civil defense against nuclear attack, health and public health challenges following nuclear attack and human rehabilitation as a moral responsibility are to be presented during a Tuesday afternoon panel session.

Need Computer Use

RALEIGH (AP) — The Legislature should allocate $28 million over the next two years to give every public school student access to a computer, a legislative committee says.

The legislative committee on computer training did not vote on the recommendations in a meeting Friday, but informally agreed on several points.

The committee will recommend that all students — kindergarten through 12th grade — work with a computer for at least 30 minutes a week, and that every school receive one microcomputer for every 50 students, panel officials said.

The $28 million, two-year program would also give all public school teachers basic computer training. The panel also will recommend that colleges and universities require education majors to have basic computer training before graduating or being certified to teach.

ISLAND MUSIC ... provided by the Burt Massengale Orchestra is enjoyed by Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Taylor, left, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Taylor. The bandstand was transformed into a grass hut.

Charity Ball Has Aloha Paradise Theme

The Greenville Country Club provided a tropical setting for this year's Charity Ball. The serene beauty of the make-believe islands was threatened by an erupting volcano, Mauna Loa, which was viewed by ball patrons as they arrived at the club.

Massive bamboo and native plants decorated the entrance where guests were greeted by King Kamehameha (James Barnhill) and invited into his lush garden. He was dressed for the ocassion, in a Hawaiian orange ceremonial cape and headdress.

The club's foyer was transformed into "Aloha Paradise" and decorated with tropical plants and brightly colored flowers. Colorful birds were perched in nearby trees and watched as Mr. and Mrs. Frank Layne and Mr. and Mrs. L. Frederic Robbins Jr. greeted guests. A lighted, flowing fountain featured lavender orchids floating in the swirling water.

Mrs. Layne is president of the Greenville Service League, which sponsors the annual charity ball for the benefit of the Laughinghouse Hospital Fund. Mrs. Robbins was overall ball chairman.

Leaving the garden area, guests entered an island paradise where tiki gods were standing guard. Stately palm trees were displayed near the dance floor and the ceiling was decorated to given the illusion of an outdoor pavilion.

The walls of the ballroom featured tapa cloth wall hangings and travel posters surrounded by greenery and flowers. The bandstand was decorated as a tropical grass hut, surrounded by greenery. Colorful tropical flowers were entwined in the greenery and tropical birds were hanging from perches on the outside of the grass hut.

The Fieldcrest Room was highlighted by a large colorful lei of silk flowers placed in the bay window. The Grill Room featured a Hawaiian surfer, dressed in native clothes, complete with his surfboard.

The buffet table was centered with a mound of tropical fruit accented by a roasted pig. A traditional island feast was served.

Individual tables were accented with runners of greenery and grapes. In the center of each table was an arrangement of tropical torch ginger flowers in colors ranging from pale yellow to orange. Tall yellow candles flanked each arrangement.

A typical island atmosphere was enhanced in the lounges with flowing fountains and colorful travel posters.

Usheretts for the evening were Susan Carter, Jennifer Crane, Susanna Hudson, Catherine Tingelstad and Emily Wilkerson. They were dressed in brightly flowered Hawaiian print halters with sarong skirts. The girls presented each patron a lei as they entered the ballroom and a Vanda orchid was given to each lady.

Assisting Mrs. Robbins were: decorations, Mrs. Lawton Nisbet; bandstand, Mrs. James H. Hudson and Mrs. Ed Harris; ceiling, Mrs. Edward Seykora and Mrs. Thomas Burkart; dinner, Mrs. Leon Moore, Mrs. Allen Taylor and Mrs. J.T. Little; driveway, Mrs. Raymond MacKenzie Jr. and Mrs. Ray Cannon; entrance, Mrs. John S. Whichard and Mrs. Richard J. Gavigan; finance, Mrs. Bernard Vick.

No Penalty Assessed In Blast

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Radiator Specialty Co. does not have to pay $1,700 in penalties assessed after a fatal explosion at the company's Union County plant, a state administrative hearing officer has ruled.

Darrell Hancock of Salisbury ruled Friday that the company's production line was a hazardous area requiring special equipment. But he vacated $1,000 in penalties assessed by the state Occupational Safety and Health Administration, saying the company was not negligent in operating the Indian Trail plant.

He also dismissed one of three citations that the company appealed, vacating a $700 penalty.

State OSHA officials cited the company after the November 1980 explosion killed two people and injured more than 50. The plant makes and packages automotive products, some in spray cans using aerosol propellants.

Fire inspectors said a spark from an electrical motor ignited hydrocarbon gases leaking from overhead pipes and caused the explosion.

Robeson Schools Testing Business, Industry's Needs

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — An experimental program in Robeson County is trying to solve the problem of blending business and industry resources with the needs of public schools.

Lumberton resident Eric Prevatte and the Lumberton-Robeson County Chamber of Commerce are coordinating resources with the needs of five school systems and the local technical college through the Robeson County Math-Science Education Committee.

Jerome Melton, former deputy State Superintendent of Public Instruction, has been named coordinator for a similar statewide program. He says Robeson County is 'particularly significant experimentally' to the success of the program.

"When the state committee was formed in 1982, we had three objectives or primary goals: To increase the involvement of the business community in local education programs, to improve the quality of math-science teaching and to challenge students to take more math and science and to continue their studies in these fields," Melton said. "These are to be found in the program there in Lumberton."

The panel, which is now part of the chamber structure, is designed to act as a liason between local schools and area business and industry. It determines the schools' needs and locates an industrial match for those needs.

As an example of the type of business-education cooperation, Prevatte told committee members of numerous automobile parts donated to Robeson Technical College by his company, Prevatte Auto Parts, Inc., and of technical service obtained from Ford Motor Co. for mechanics classes at RTC.

Wheeler Manufacturing, Chrysler's authorized remanufacturer for the eastern United States, has donated two automobile engines to the Robeson Tech mechanics classes.

The engines, which are scheduled to arrive March 19, will have strategic parts cut away to expose the internal parts of the engine. Also, C.V. Bailes of Carolina Power and Light Co. has volunteered scrap metal for use in welding classes in local schools.

Prevatte is appointing two liason representatives from each school system in Robeson County to assess the needs of schools and to report back to the panel.

One of the group's first projects is judging the Feb. 24 Science Fair at Lumberton Senior High School. Plans are also being made to sponsor a tiered essay competition in the school systems to promote a better understanding of the American free enterprise system.

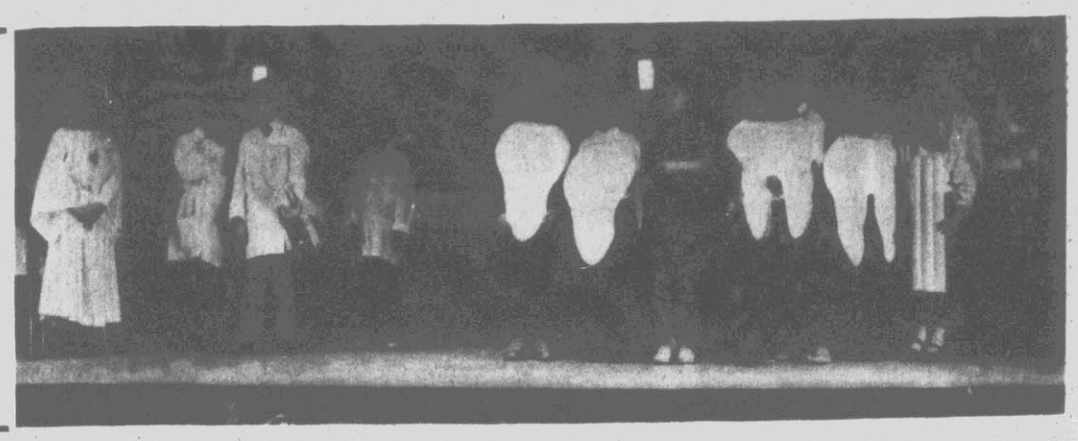

"Other programs will include offering local industry an opportunity of providing personnel to teach single-shot courses in science and math-related areas such as computers, biology, physics and chemistry," Prevatte said.

Other programs detailed by the committee include work-study experiences in industry during the summer for students and teachers; equipment for shops, labs and classrooms; counseling and motivation to increase enrollments in math and science; and lending time and personnel for use of expensive equipment during non-peak time for instruction and services functions.

The committee also will compile a speaker's list for local schools, listing speakers in various businesses and industries.

Convicted Killer Facing Death

CHARLOTTE (AP) — An 18-year-old Charlotte man who killed three people and wounded another during a January 1983 shooting rampage could be sentenced to death Monday.

On Friday, a Mecklenburg County Superior Court jury convicted Wonald "Butch" Westmoreland of first-degree murder in the shooting deaths of his best friend, Joseph Johnson, and two counts of second-degree murder in the deaths of Patsy Blakemore and her 8-year-old son, John "Jay" Blakemore.

The jury will reconvene Monday to decide whether Westmoreland, a West Charlotte High School senior at the time of the shootings, should be sentenced to life in prison or death for the first-degree murder conviction. He also faces a maximum of life in prison on each of the second-degree murder charges.

Wearing a gray suit, Westmoreland sat expressionless Friday afternoon as the verdict was read. His 35-year-old mother, Louise Westmoreland, wept.

"He's my only son," she said. "I don't have any comment."

Prosecutor Phil Howerton and David Maloney believe Westmoreland killed Johnson and shot 24-year-old Bryant Butler because he was angry about being thrown out of their apartment following a scuffle.

Westmoreland did not testify, but defense attorneys James Ferguson and Calvin Murphy argued that prosecutors failed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Westmoreland committed the murders.

There were no eyewitnesses to the slayings of Patsy and John Blakemore, but a ballistics expert testified that the shell casings found at both murder scenes came from the same weapon.

Butler identified Westmoreland as the gunman who shot him after he opened the apartment door. Alberta Cochran testified that Joseph Johnson, her fiancee, told her that Westmoreland had shot him.

Two other men, including Joseph Johnson's brother, Gary Johnson, testified that they spotted Westmoreland with a rifle moments after the shootings.

How To Profit From Planters IRA Before You Grow Old.

Never mind that it's called a retirement account. More than likely, you're already aware of an IRA's long-term benefits.

You can enjoy a tax cut right now simply by opening an IRA at Planters.

So take a look at what a Planters IRA can do for you right now.

Planters IRA Can Save You Hundreds On Your 1983 Taxes.

That's because a contribution to a Planters IRA is completely tax deductible right now. And Federal Law lets you make a hefty IRA contribution, at that. Up to $2,000 for a single working person, $2,250 for a married couple with one working spouse. And as much as $4,000 for a married couple with both working. That's more than the standard deduction for a kid.

And that can mean a substantial reduction in your taxes this year.

In fact, we can show you just how much your tax cut can be, right now. Notice the charts below. Simply find your tax bracket on the first chart and match it with Year 1 in the second chart. According to a $2000 IRA contribution, that's your tax reduction. Several hundred dollars you won't be paying Uncle Sam this year. The third chart shows the effective annual yield of your IRA including your tax savings.

If you'd like even more facts and figures on your IRA, Planters can give you that, too.

Planters Will Give You A Free Personal IRA Analysis.

In a matter of minutes, Planters can project how many thousands you can save in taxes by age 65. Also, how many thousands you can make in interest. The value of your IRA at retirement. Just about anything you'd like to know.

And it costs you nothing.

You don't even need an appointment. Just come into any Planters office, anytime.

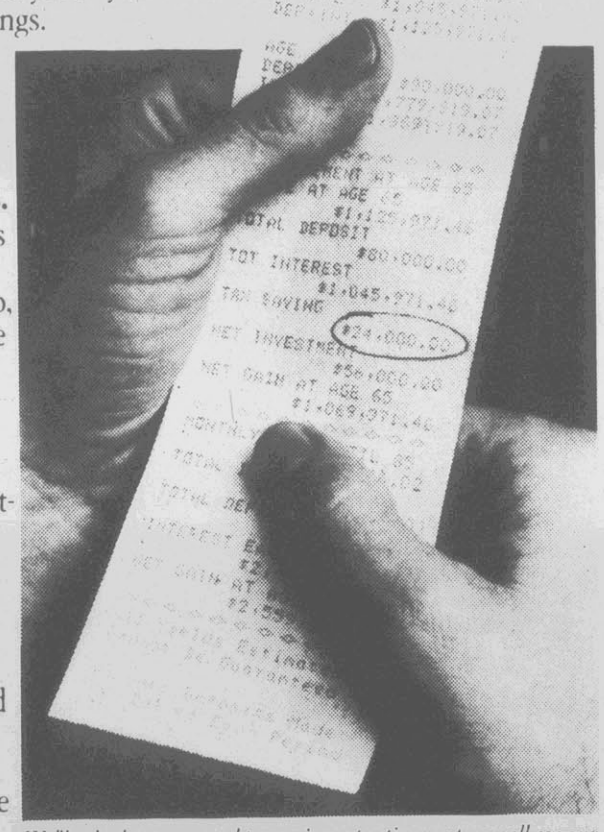

With basic information, like your age and tax bracket, our computer will analyze what a Planters IRA can mean to you in dollars and cents. Now, years from now, and during retirement. You'll receive a comprehensive report to take home with you. And we'll be glad to answer any questions about IRAs that you may have.

Planters Will Lend You Money For Your IRA.

That's how important an IRA is. Because of its tremendous tax advantage now and large interest accumulation for later, no one should be without one.

So we're making loans expressly for IRA contributions.

That way, you can deduct your IRA deposit this year and earn interest on your account, while being able to deduct the interest on your loan.

We'll calculate your total tax savings at retirement, as well as your exact tax savings this April. Absolutely free.

Quite simply, an IRA is one of the best-all-around investment opportunities available today. So come into Planters soon.

Our retirement account is meant to be enjoyed right now.

Drillers Seek Crude In S.C.

By BRUCE M. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

WILLIAMS, S.C. (AP) — Like an alien war machine in a science fiction movie, a giant steel framework rises like an apparition above the thickets of loblolly pine and the fertile, sandy fields.

Day and night an incessant rumbling is heard from the 150-foot structure as three huge 900 horsepower diesel engines push drill bits deeper and deeper into the earth's crust. The search is on for Carolina crude.

In a scene reminiscent of East Texas or Oklahoma, the Essex Oil and Gas Corp. of Dallas has been wildcatting for the past six weeks at a site a few miles from this Colleton County community.

It's the first wildcat well drilled in South Carolina in some 20 years. The crew from Delta Drilling of Tyler, Texas, has pushed to a depth of 2,000 feet and Essex has state permits to search as far as 13,750 feet.

The firm has spent $1.5 million on seismic tests. Company Vice President Stan Sherrill is hopeful there's black gold below, but a gusher is no sure thing.

"If we can do seismic tests and know whether there's oil or gas or not there wouldn't be any dry holes today. When you're in an area like this wildcatting, your chances are one in ten of getting any oil or gas," said Sherill, a slender man with reddish hair and beard and wire-rimmed glasses.

"Only one out of four of those wells will produce. So you're talking about a one in 40 chance," he added. "A lot of people have said that searching for oil and gas is 10 percent science and 90 percent luck."

Although oil prices are down, Sherrill says Essex is "obviously here looking for a field ... so we're going to take those chances because we feel this is going to be a high-risk, high-yield proposition. If we hit, we plan to make a lot of cash.

"On the other hand, chances are, we're just going to lose a lot of cash," he said.

Drilling to the $2\frac{1}{2}$-mile depth would cost about $5 million, company officials say.

State geologists say the firm is drilling into a structure known as a Triassic basin formed by fresh water lakes and subsequent faulting of the earth about 200 million years ago.

George Siple, a geologist who serves as technical adviser to the state Water Resources Commission, says such drilling "has never been tried anywhere in this state," although oil has been found in similar structures elsewhere.

All of the dozen or so wells drilled in South Carolina to this time have come up dry, Siple said. But the deepest was only 2,600 feet and Essex may go five times that far.

In the past, when wildcatters drilled through unconsolidated dirt and sedimentary rock, they stopped when reaching so-called basement complexes of harder basalt or granite, thinking there were no lower sedimentary rocks containing oil or gas.

But Sherrill said tests have shown there are often lower sedimentary strata formed of rock or organic fragments.

"We have found today there is not something as true basement. If you have the money to drill you'll find sediments a lot of times on the other side," he said.

Whether Essex will find oil in lower sediments in the Triassic rock isn't clear.

"If I knew the answer, I would be rich," said Pradeep Talwani, an associate professor of geology at the University of South Carolina noted for his studies of earthquakes in the state.

He doubts oil would form in such structures "although it may have migrated" through the strata from offshore points.

Essex Geologist Dan Ziegler said, "I'm confident this geologic provence has potential. All the areas we're exploring on the East Coast haven't been explored before."

Last year the firm drilled a pair of wells in North Carolina. One showed signs of oil and gas but didn't produce in commercial quantities. However, Ziegler said similar formations have produced oil in Brazil, West Africa and "all over China."

At the Colleton County site, a crew of eight workers is busy at any one time during the round-the-clock operations. Roustabouts handle the drilling operations while engineers and geologists constantly check samples of soil spit out of the hole for signs of oil or gas.

As the heavy engines power the drill bits, a solution of mud is forced into the hole to bring up debris caused by the drilling. At lower levels, compressed air is used.

As the well is drilled through the aquifer, or watertable, pipes are sunk in the shaft to prevent seepage into the groundwater.

Essex and its parent company, Southeastern Exploration and Production Co., have leased mineral rights to some 300,000 acres in a five-county area. The leaseholders are entitled to one-eighth of the oil found on their property.

Essex, which has set up its local headquarters in a nondescript white house in this community of 205, went to area landowners as long as four years ago seeking mineral rights.

Now that drilling has started "people are just curious. They're not excited one way or the other," said Mayor Howard Speaks. He said most realize the odds against coming up with a producing well on the first attempt.

"It's just not generating a bunch of excitement yet," he said.

Although reporters and television crews have made their way to the drill site, Colleton County Council chairman Thomas Fennell said there hasn't been a lot of discussion around the county about the drilling.

"But if they hit some of that Texas tea, there will be a lot of talk about it," he predicted.

Sherrill said the drilling operations could take six to eight months but "then again we could be gone in two."

"There's one thing I'll guarantee you. When we do hit oil, we'll have a party," he said.

GOP Is Tagging Reagan

By CRAIG WEBB

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Carl Horn's congressional campaign brochures shout it out: "A Reagan Conservative!"

Page One quotes the president in a personal letter to the Charlotte man. Page Two chronicles Horn's service to Reagan as a federal attorney. And Page Four carries a promise that "Carl Horn will team up with President Ronald Reagan to reduce the size of the federal government, and to reaffirm traditional American values."

North Carolinians can count on Horn's approach being mimicked by dozens of other Republican candidates, all hoping Reagan's popularity will carry them to victory as well. Even Sen. Jesse A. Helms, with his millions of dollars in campaign funds, carried advertisements showing him with the president.

It's happened before. President Richard Nixon's smashing victory in North Carolina in 1972 has been credited with helping Republicans James E. Holshouser Jr. win the governorship and Helms capture a Senate seat.

"In my opinion, President Reagan — and Jesse Helms, too — are both critical to our success in North Carolina," state GOP Chairman David Flaherty said. "When you've got the top two leaders on you're ticket, you're going to sink or swim with them, so you've got to support them."

Reagan appears more likely to swim. A January poll by Darden Research Corp. found that, in North Carolina and eight other Southern states, Reagan beatsformer Vice President Walter Mondale 61.1 percent to 35.1 percent.

Helms, meanwhile, is considered nearly even in a race against the Democrats' likely challenger, Gov. James B. Hunt Jr.

Former Congressman Gene Johnston of Greensboro, who heads the Reagan-Bush campaign in North Carolina, says he probably would have been re-elected in 1982 had Reagan been on the ballot. Instead, he lost narrowly to Democrat Robin Britt.

"The key thing is who goes to the polls and votes," Johnston said. He said one survey found that in 1982, only 42 percent of North Carolina's registered Republicans voted compared with 52 percent of the Democrats.

Horn said he decided to center his 9th District campaign around Reagan not so much because of the president's popularity but because he makes campaigning easier.

"We're not intending to be, nor are we rubber stamps of the president's policies," Horn said. "But we're very much part of the mandate that we expect him to receive in 1984. So in the interest of communicating in the language that people are thinking in, we put it in those terms. It's like shorthand."

Johnston said Reagan could be an even greater help if his name were put on the same line of the election ballot as the rest of the Republicans, thus making it easier for Reagan supporters to vote a straight GOP ticket.

But state Elections Board Director Alex K. Brock said state law prohibits grouping the presidential and state races. The Senate campaign is considered a state election and can be grouped with the others, he added.

At Lady Pirate Classic

Cheyney Repeats

Cheyney University scorched the nets for 54 points in the second half after leading by a point at halftime to defeat Marshall 94-68 and repeat as the champions of the Converse Lady Pirate Classic Saturday at Minges Coliseum.

Yolanda Laney paced Cheyney with 33 points, while Sandra Giddins posted 19 points.

Giddins was selected as the tourney's most valuable player, while Laney, Karen Pelphrey of Marshall, Katrina Fields of Fairfield and Delphine Mabry of host ECU were selected to the all-tournament team.

East Carolina erased an eight-point deficit in the final 1:18 to send the consolation to overtime, but Fairfield utilized ECU's foul trouble to take a 58-56 victory.

Fairfield led most of the way, building to a nine-point lead with 11 minutes left in the first half before ECU trimmed the margin to 26-21 at intermission.

Fairfield's biggest advantage of the second half was eight points at 42-34 with 5:43 remaining and again at 51-43 before the Lady Pirates rallied.

Delphine Mabry drove in for a layup and Jody Rodriguez added another to cut the gap to four. The Sylvia Bragg popped in a 20-footer and Rodriguez capped the surge with a short field goal with 17 seconds remaining to knot the score.

Fairfield called timeout to set up a scoring opportunity, but the Lady Stags desperation effort sailed off target to send the game to overtime.

Jan Bethea got the Lady Pirates on the board first in the overtime, and ECU increased the advantage to three on a free throw by Bragg with 2:23 remaining.

Then with 15 seconds left, Alison Martinsky connected on a move inside and sank a free throw to set the final margin. East Carolina called timeout, but the Lady Pirates' final shot missed and was rebounded by the Lady Stags.

"I was just very pleased with our team," ECU Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "I can't say enough about the comeback of these girls. We played so intelligently; they never gave up."

Katrina Fields led Fairfield with 20 points and 15 rebounds for a two-game tourney total of 54 points and 29 rebounds. Martinsky added 15 points and 11 rebounds for the Lady Stags.

"Our game plan was to stop Fields," Andruzzi said. "We practiced today on sagging in. We were willing to give them the perimeter shots."

Bragg paced the Lady Pirates with 20 points, while Mabry and Rodriguez added 13 points each.

"We wanted to full-court press the whole game," Andruzzi said. "We hope this performane can carry over to the next few games."

The Lady Pirates are now 10-15 overall on the season and host South Carolina Tuesday. Fairfield improved its record to 21-4.

Balanced Attack Lifts Spiders, 60-50

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

RICHMOND, Va. — The University of Richmond, leader in the ECAC-South, placed four players in double figures led by John Newman and Bill Flye with 16 each and took a 60-50 basketball victory over East Carolina Saturday night.

Kelvin Johnson added 14, while John Davis had 12.

East Carolina, shorthanded to start with, was plagued by fouls and eventually saw two players foul out, while three others finished the game with four.

Leon Bass, the 6-10 freshman who has been starting of late for ECU, did not dress after suffering a slight concussion during practice on Thursday. Roy Smith, another freshman, started in his place.

Curt Vanderhorst continued to spark the Pirates on offense, scoring 17 points. William Grady added 12, while Tony Robinson hit 11.

The Pirates were hampered by going nearly the last six and a half minutes without a score. Only two free throws and a basket by Robinson, the latter with three seconds left in the half, prevented a blanking.

Then, after the Pirates got back in the game with a rush at the start of the second half, the Pirates again suffered a lapse and a couple of turnovers allowed the Spiders to pull away again.

Harrison called the lapse in the first half one of the keys to the loss. " We got unaggressive on offense. The kids thought that they were getting fouled and they got intimidated," he said.

"But they played their hearts out. They played hard. I think we've proved over the past few games that we can play on the road and win. But the kids haven't learned to believe in themselves yet. They just have to believe and they can win.

"It doesn't get easier. We've got Navy Monday and then two more on the road and then James Madison."

Harrison was pleased with the play of Smith, saying "He did all that we asked of him. But Leon makes a bigger target in there, especially when they are in a zone."

The loss drops the Pirates to 4-19 on the year, snapping the school record for losses in a single year. They are 1-7 in the ECAC-South.

Richmond climbs to 17-7 overall and 7-1 in the league.

East Carolina stayed with the Spiders during the first 13 minutes of the first half, but when Richmond switched from a zone to a man-to-man, the Pirates began to turn the ball over and take a few bad shots.

As a result, the Pirates went 6:03 without a field goal and got only two free throws in the meantime. Richmond, during the drought, pushed through 11 points and ran out to as much as a ten point spread before Robinson's final shot with three seconds left cut it to 28-20 at intermission.

The Pirates never led during the half, but did manage to tie it up five times between 6-6 and 14-14. But a three-point play by Davis upped the lead to 17-14, and after Grady scored with 6:36 left, Flye also made a three-pointer, and Richmond led 20-16.

Then, the Spiders switched for a few minutes to their man defense and created some offense from their defense, moving out to a 26-16 lead before Robinson snapped the string with two free throws at the 1:23 mark. ECU had gone 5:13 without a point.

The Pirates ran off a string at the start of the second half, pulling within three and had the chance to cut it to one before a couple of turnovers allowed Richmond to pull away again.

After the two teams swapped a couple of points, Robinson hit a free throw and Grady followed with four straight to make it 30-27.

But Johnson hit a jumper and Newman made two free throws to stop the Pirates, and although the two teams swapped points for the next few minutes, Richmond began to pull away. Johnson hit a jumper and when Grady fouled Davis under the basket, the Spider guard hit the first to run the lead out to 45-36. Flye added another basket to give the Spiders an 11-point lead at 47-36.

A few minutes later, Flye scored five straight to run the lead to 14, 54-40, with 4:32 remaining to play.

ECU cut it back to as little as ten, but could get no closer the rest of the way.

ECU is at home on Monday night in Minges Coliseum, hosting Navy.

After finishing the 1983 season ranked 20th in the Associated Press poll, the Pirates of East Carolina University face another tough schedule in 1984 as announced by Director of Athletics Dr. Ken Karr.

The 1984 season features a season-opening rematch with Florida State University in Tallahassee on Sept. 1. East Carolina dropped the 1983 opener against the Seminoles 47-46, but the contest began the flow of nationwide attention the 8-3 the Pirates received during the season.

CHAPEL HILL — With one week to ponder its loss to Arkansas, top-ranked North Carolina fired up its basketball machine again and posted a 95-71 Atlantic Coast Conference trouncing of North Carolina State.

Michael Jordan was at the controls, scoring a season-high 32 points. He said the victory was a result of a good week of practice.

"The loss came at a wrong time because we had a week to think about it," Jordan said. "We were very anxious to play, get the loss out of our systems. So we concentrated on what coach asked and we just came out and executed properly."

Tar Heel coach Dean Smith said his team executed very well in the second half and credited Jordan for part of that effort.

"Jordan was sensational offensively and looked like he was returning defensively, too," Smith said. "He was finding the holes to get his shot."

N.C. State coach Jim Valvano said his hopes of defending the NCAA title are not ruined by the loss, but those dreams now hinge on the remainder of the season.

"The whole season comes down to these last four games and the ACC tournament," Valvano said. "We still have our goals."

The Tar Heels, whose 21-game winning streak was broken seven days ago in a loss to Arkansas, broke quickly and left the Wolfpack in a hole it could never recover from.

N.C. State's turnovers combined with North Carolina's pressure defense gave the Tar Heels a 20-6 lead in the first six minutes. Jordan had six of those points.

Alarie Leads Duke In Upset

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Mark Alarie missed a chance in regulation to give 19th-ranked Duke an upset victory over No. 13 Wake Forest, but he made up for it in overtime.

Alarie hit a layup with three seconds left in the extra period Saturday as the Blue Devils defeated the Demon Deacons 79-77 in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game.

The victory gave Duke sole possession of second place in the ACC with a record of 21-5 and 6-4 in the conference. Wake Forest fell to third at 18-5 and 6-5.

Alarie's winning shot came on a pass from David Henderson, who earlier had fed him the ball with time running out in regulation. The first time, Alarie's jumper with one second left dribbled off the backboard, sending the game into overtime tied at 73-73.

"When I caught the ball, I didn't really know where I was on the court," said Alarie. "I stumbled and I couldn't get off a good shot."

But the Alarie-Henderson combination succeeded the second time around.

"David was pressured, so he just went to the middle," said Alarie. When Wake Forest's Anthony Teachey left Alarie to cover Henderson, "I felt David would throw the pass. The dunk was easy."

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski was pleased with the victory and the way his team held together after blowing a 20-point halftime lead.

"We dominated the first half, they dominated the second half and the overtime was played with both teams playing well," Krzyzewski said. "When you lose a lead and go into an overtime, there is a tendency to just pack it in."

Tulsa then came back and tied the score 28-28 with 9:28 remaining before halftime and went on to gain a 56-46 lead by intermission.

Kleine was the only player in double figures for Arkansas, 21-4 overall and 11-1 in the league. The Longhorns fell to 6-17 overall and 2-10 in the SWC.

Arkansas led 25-21 at halftime and limited the Longhorns to 10 points in the final 11 minutes in pulling away to the comfortable victory. Texas built an 11-6 lead, but Arkansas took control with the help of 15 turnovers by the Longhorns.

Karl Whillock led Texas with 12 points.

Auburn.....81
Georgia.....63

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Chuck Person scored 21 points and Charles Barkley added 16 Saturday as Auburn turned back Georgia 81-63 and moved into a tie for the lead in the Southeastern Conference college basketball race.

The Tigers and Kentucky have 10-3 SEC records. Kentucky, idle Saturday, visits Vanderbilt on Sunday.

Georgia led only once in the game, at 15-14 in the first half, but pulled within striking distance when Horace McMillan hit a baseline jumper to make it 64-59 with 4:47 left in the game.

Barkley and Person then led another Auburn surge, and the Tigers' 74 percent free throwing shooting kept Georgia at bay.

Barkley had a game-high 11 rebounds and also led in assists with five. He hit eight of 10 attempts from the field. Person pulled down 10 rebounds and was 8-of-11 from the field. Greg Turner added 15 points for Auburn.

Joe Ward led Georgia scorers with 13 points. Richard Corhen had 12, Vern Fleming 11 and James Banks 10.

Auburn, 16-6 overall, needs two more victories to record its best season since 1975, when the Tigers were 18-8.

Georgia dropped to 6-8 in the SEC and 14-9 overall.

Fordham.....82
Manhattan.....62

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Samuels scored 18 points, leading four Fordham players in double figures as the Rams routed Manhattan 82-62 Saturday in a Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference basketball game.

Manhattan fell to 7-17 overall and 1-12 in the conference, with its sixth straight loss and 12th in the last 14 games.

Pirate Schedule...

University of South Carolina, Oct. 27.

"We are excited about our schedule in 1984, as we feel we continue to offer our Pirate fans an exciting lineup of top calibre teams," Karr said. "It is another tough schedule and will offer yet another top challenge to Coach Emory and his staff. But the staff and players met the challenge a year ago, reaped tremendous rewards, and I expect they will do likewise in 1984.

"Our fans will have two games within our backyard, in addition to the home slate, with games at N.C. State and South Carolina.

"Just as exciting as our total 1984 schedule is our home schedule for 1985, which we are delighted to be able to also announce at this time. Without question, our five games in 1985 is the finest lineup of college football teams ever to play in Ficklen Stadium in a single season."

Those five home games in 1985 are: top-ranked University of Miami, University of South Carolina, University of Tulsa, Temple University and University of Southwestern Louisana, all Division I-A teams.

Projecting football scheduling through 1989, Pirate fans can expect to see continued scheduling with Miami (home games in 1985, 1987 and 1988), Tulsa, South Carolina, Florida State, West Virginia, Illinois, Southern Mississippi, Southwestern Louisiana and N.C. State.

West Virginia, originally scheduled for Ficklen Stadium in 1987 and 1988, has moved forward and will play instead at East Carolina in 1986 and 1987. Florida State is also slated, along with Miami, for the 1987 home schedule.

The Tulsa series, home-and-home for four games through 1989, is the latest effort of expanding the Pirate schedule to cover nationally noted football teams. All scheduling noted above has developed since the arrival of Dr. Karr to the East Carolina campus in 1980.

"Again, we note our commitment to Division I-A football at East Carolina University and a commitment to excellance in the division," Karr added. "Our scheduling efforts have been difficult, but we continue to increase the number of quality teams on our schedule, as well as, exhibit the ability to be competitive against the best."

The complete 1984 schedule: Sept. 1 at Florida State, 7 p.m.; Sept. 8 TEMPLE, 7 p.m.; Sept. 15 at Central Michigan, 1 p.m.; Sept. 22 GEORGIA SOUTHERN, 1:30; Sept. 29 at N.C. State, 7 p.m.; Oct. 6 at Pittsburgh, 1:30; Oct. 13 at Tulsa, 7:30 CDT; Oct. 20 EAST TENNESSEE STATE (Homecoming), 2 p.m.; Oct. 27 at South Carolina, 1:30; Nov. 3 at Southwestern Louisiana, TBA; Nov. 10 Southern Mississippi, 1:30.

DePaul, Memphis St. Fall In Upsets

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Ed Young hit a twisting bank shot with one second left to give the University of Dayton a come-from-behind 72-71 upset of No. 3 DePaul in college basketball Saturday.

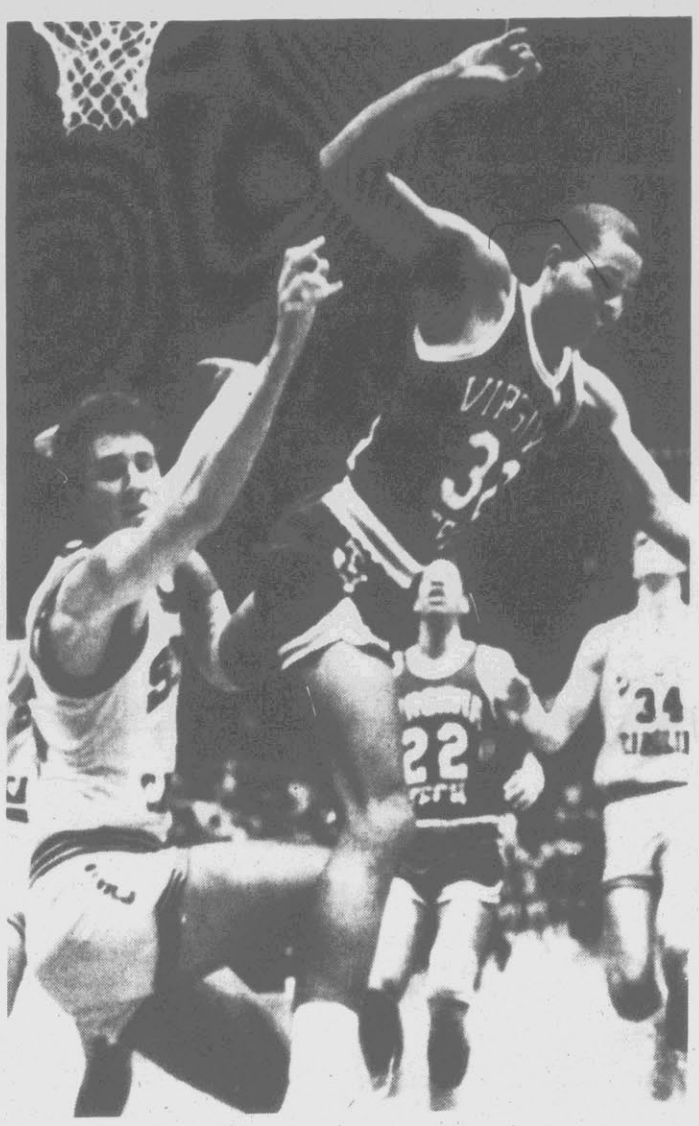

DePaul, 19-2, saw an 11-point lead fade away in the last 6:13 of the game, and missed three free throws in the closing minute that could have secured the lead. Dayton improved to 15-8 with its second straight home-court victory over DePaul.

Guard Larry Schellenberg hit two free throws with 13 seconds left to bring Dayton within 71-70. DePaul's Raymond McCoy was fouled, but missed his first free throw with 11 seconds left. Schellenberg rebounded and passed to Roosevelt Chapman, who fed Young for the winning shot and Dayton's only lead of the second half.

Forward Tyrone Corbin had a game-high 27 points for DePaul, 17 of them in the first half as the Blue Demons took a 34-29 halftime advantage. DePaul led 65-54 with 6:13 to play before Dayton started its furious comeback.

Dayton rolled off 10 of the next 13 points and eventually cut the lead to 69-68 with 32 seconds left on Schellenberg's tip-in, setting the stage for Young's winning shot.

Chapman led Dayton with 19 points, but guard Sedric Toney sparked the second-half comeback by scoring all but two of his 16 points after the intermission. Young had 18.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Fred Reynolds hit two free throws with 20 seconds left in overtime and then tipped in a missed shot to help 10th-ranked Texas-El Paso defeat Wyoming 73-66 in a Western Athletic Conference victory Saturday.

The 6-4 senior forward scored four of his game-high 27 points in the overtime period. The victory improved UTEP's record to 22-2 overall and 10-2 in WAC play. Wyoming fell to 13-11 and 6-6.

Troy Washpun was the high scorer for Wyoming with 20 points. Rodney Gowens added 19 and Jamal Hosey had 14 to help the Cowboy attack. Luster Goodwin backed Reynolds with 10 points and was the only other Miner in double figures.

Washpun's layup tied the game at 61-61 and sent the game into an extra period. Hosey's jump shot then gave Wyoming an early lead in overtime.

The Miners, however, then rallied, hitting four buckets and four free throws.

El Paso dominated the first half of play, trailing only once, at 2-0 after the first 90 seconds of play. The Miners led by as much as 10 points in the first period, but Wyoming pulled into a 31-31 halftime tie.

Wyoming took a 33-31 lead early in the second half, before a dunk by Reynolds tied the score again. The lead changed hands eight times in the second half, with Wyoming going ahead by as much as three points and UTEP leading by as many as five points with 47 seconds remaining in regulation.

Reynolds gave the Miners the 60-55 edge with another dunk, but Gowens cut the Miners' advantage to one and, after a UTEP free throw, Washpun tied the game at 61-61.

Louisville 85

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Louisville Cardinals, behind Milt Wagner's 34 points, stopped eighth-ranked Memphis State's 12-game winning streak 85-78 in a Metro Conference basketball game Saturday.

It was the highest point total scored by a Cardinal player this year. Wagner took control of the game in the second half after scoring 18 points in the first half. He triggered Louisville to a 46-40 lead as the Cardinals scored eight straight points.

The Cardinals kept that lead until 6:30 remained when Memphis State, down by four, got baskets by Willie Becton and Phillip Haynes to tie the score at 60.

Haynes led the Tigers with 18 points while Becton and Andre Turner each scored 16. Turner, however, committed eight turnovers.

With the score tied, Wagner and Manuel Forrest began a run that accounted for the next 11 points as Louisville went ahead 71-62. The Cardinals were helped with 18 straight free-throws in the final 10 minutes.

Louisville went to the line 25 times in the second half and converted 23 free throws.

Forrest had 13 points for the Cardinals while center Charles Jones had nine rebounds.

Memphis State now is 19-4 overall and 9-1 in the Metro while Louisville dropped to 17-8 and 9-2.

Purdue (11).....67
Michigan.....64 (OT)

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Steve Reid scored 14 of his 18 points in the second half and two more in overtime to lead 11th-ranked Purdue to a 67-64 Big Ten basketball victory over Michigan Saturday.

The victory assured the Boilermakers of retaining at least a share of the Big Ten lead with an 11-2 conference mark. Purdue is 18-5 overall. The Wolverines slipped to 6-6 in the Big Ten, 14-8 overall.

The stubborn Wolverines, hoping for a repeat of their upset victory over No. 7 Illinois on Thursday night, led 30-27 at halftime.

However, Reid, a 5-foot-9 junior guard, found the range from about 30 feet out and began bombing the Boilermakers back into the contest.

Purdue finally grabbed a 35-34 lead on a pair of free throws by Greg Eifert with 15:39 remaining and the lead changed hands several times the remainder of the second half.

A 15-foot jumper by Reid tied the game 55-55 with 3:35 remaining. Michigan then ran down the clock, playing for the last shot. However, the Purdue defense kept the Wolverines out of range and Antoine Joubert's forced jumper at the buzzer bounced off the rim.

The Boilermakers didn't make a basket in the overtime, but didn't need one as Mark Atkinson hit four free throws, while James Bullock, Ricky Hall, Curt Clawson and Reid each hit a pair.

Jim Rowinski had a game-high 22 points for Purdue on five baskets and 12 free throws while Bullock finished with 10 points.

Roy Tarpley was high for Michigan with 19 points, including seven in the five-minute overtime. Eric Turner scored 14 points for Michigan and freshman Joubert finished with 10.

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Center Kelvin Hildreth scored 15 points to lead hot-shooting Mississippi State's Bulldogs to a 70-51 basketball victory over Mississippi in their battle to avoid the Southeastern Conference cellar.

The Bulldogs tied a school shooting record for one half as they hit 88 percent after intermission, connecting on 14 of 16 shots as they turned a 6-point halftime margin into a runaway.

Mississippi State finished with a 61 percent shooting average as the team broke a 6-game conference losing string. The Bulldogs' last league victory came at Oxford, when they beat Ole Miss 64-56.

Ole Miss hit on only 44 percent of its shots from the field and was in foul trouble for most of the second period.

The winners, capitalizing on a patient offense and aggressive zone defense, broke open a tight game midway the first half and led 29-23 at intermission. They used a 28-22 rebound margin to help them prevent any Rebel comeback.

Mississippi State had five players in double figures, topped by Hildreth's 15 and 12 each from forward Tony Robinson and guard Ken Harvey.

The Rebels got 20 points from guard Eric Laird but had no one else in double figures.

The victory pushed the Bulldogs' record to 8-15 overall and 3-11 in the SEC, while Ole Miss dropped to 7-15 overall and 2-11 in the conference.

Neither team shot well in the first half, when the lead changed hands repeatedly until the Bulldogs went ahead for good at 13-12 on a jumper by Chauncey Robinson with 10:42 left.

Smith Named Pirate Play-By-Play Voice

The Pirate Sports Network, voice of East Carolina University athletic events, will have a change in the play-by-play voice for Pirate football in 1984.

Ken Smith, current play-by-play announcer for basketball and assistant athletic director for public relations, will assume the same radio post for football starting with the spring game broadcast on April 14.

Smith will work with color analyst Dave Hart Jr., who joined the network this past football season and is also assistant athletic director for marketing.

"We have elected to move our entire radio network operation in-house," explained Dr. Ken Karr, director of athletics. "This is something we have wanted to do for some time, but only this coming year will we be in a position to realize the total change.

"The 15 years of service by Jim Woods as play-by-play voice for East Carolina and the eight years of color commentary by Lee Moore was of great asset to our University's athletic program and we would like to publicly thank both of these men for their efforts.

"We feel our total program can be better served and marketed through our radio network by using day-to-day hands-on experienced athletic department personnel. What we are doing is not without precedent in college athletics."

Smith, who came to ECU in 1974, has a degree in radio/television broadcasting and spent nine years in sportscasting including high school and college play-by-play of football, basketball and baseball. In 1983, Smith was given the J. Robert Marlow Award by the North Carolina Association of Sports Broadcasters for outstanding contribution to sports broadcasting and service to NCASB.

In conjunction with the play-by-play position, Smith will continue in his assistant athletic director's position but will also become more heavily involved in electronic media work, highlight film productions, television production, advance work and expansion of the radio network.

"As our football program continues to grow, we have need for greater development of our electronic capabilities," Karr added. "We shall have Ken Smith pursue these areas.

"Our pursuit of continued publicity will also be enhanced, not only by the expanded electronic work, but also with the hiring of a sports information director to carry on the already developed media operations of the past."

EASTERN CAROLINA CONFERENCE PAIRINGS

Prep Cage Tournament Pairings Set

Tournament time has arrived for the state's 3-A, 2-A, and 1-A conferences, and this area will see four conferences begin their post-season clashes starting Monday night.

The 4-A leagues still have one more week of conference play before they enter the post-season blitz.

Following are the pairings for the areas' conferences:

Eastern Carolina Conference

Southern Nash captured the top spot for the Eastern Carolina's Conference boys' tournament and will receive a first round bye. SouthWest Edgecombe gained the top seeding and the bye in the girls' division.

The league tournament will be played at Farmville Central with three games each on Monday and Tuesday and two each Wednesday through Friday.

Monday's pairings send the #4 Farmville Central girls against #5 Southern Nash at 5:30 p.m., while the number #4 Ayden-Grifton boys will face #5 North Pitt at 7:15. That will be followed at 9 p.m. by #2 SouthWest Edgecombe against #7 Charles B. Aycock.

Tuesday, the #2 Greene Central girls face C.B. Aycock at 5:30 p.m., with #3 North Pitt's girls taking on #6 Ayden-Grifton at 7:15 p.m. The evening ends with the #3 Greene Central boys facing #6 Farmville Central at 9 p.m.

Wednesday, SouthWest Edgecombe meets the winner of the girls 4-5 game at 6:30 p.m., with Southern Nash's boys facing the 4-5 winner at 8:15 p.m. The other semifinal round will be Thursday night at the same times.

The championship will be determined on Friday at 7 and 9 p.m.

The top four teams will advance to the District II tournament at Ayden-Grifton the following week. A lower bracket team must win the tournament to knock the number four team out.

Coastal Conference

The Coastal Conference championships will be decided beginning Monday and Tuesday at the sites of the higher seeded teams. The semifinals and finals will be played at West Craven High School.

West Carteret's boys have clinched the regular season title and will receive a bye in the first round, as will the D.H. Conley boys, who have taken the #2 slot.

In the girls' standings, North Lenoir won the regular season title, while Havelock took second place, each earning first round byes.

The girls' first round will be played Monday night. #4 West Carteret will host #5 West Craven, while #3 D.H. Conley entertains #6 White Oak. Both games will be played at 7 p.m.

Tuesday night, the boys' first round games will be played. West Craven, seeded fourth, hosts #5 North Lenoir, while #3 Havelock takes on #6 White Oak. Again both games are at 7 p.m.

Action moves to West Craven on Wednesday, as the upper bracket #1 and the West Craven-West Carteret winner clash at 7 p.m. for the girls, and 8:15 p.m. the boys. The remaining semifinals are Thursday at the same times, with the finals on Friday.

Again, the top four teams advance to the District II tourney at Ayden-Grifton the following week, with the #4 team dropping out if a lower ranked team wins the tournament.

Northeastern Conference

The Northeastern Conference tournament will get underway at Williamston MOnday night, with play continuing through Saturday night.

A preliminary game was played last night between Roanoke Rapids and Williamston, which tied for eighth place, to determine which team would advance into the #8 spot in the seedings.

Monday, #4 Roanoke girls face #5 Bertie at 5:30 p.m., followed by two boys' games. Plymouth, ranked #4, takes on #5 Edenton at 7 p.m., followed by #3 Edenton against #6 Roanoke.

Tuesday, #3 Edenton meets #6 Ahoskie at 5:30 and #1 Tarboro faces #8 Williamston at 7 in a pair of girls' games. The #1 Bertie boys face the Williamston-Roanoke Rapids survivor at 8:30 p.m.

Wednesday, the #2 Plymouth girls face #7 Washington at 6:30 p.m., while the #2 Tarboro boys take on #7 Ahoskie at 8 p.m.

The semifinals are set for Thursday and Friday at 6:30 and 8 p.m., with the finals on Saturday night at the same times.

The top four teams advance to the District I tournament the following week at Weldon. A lower bracket team must win the tournament to advance.

Tobacco Belt Conference

The 1-A Tobacco Belt Conference won't begin its tournament until Tuesday night. The girls' first round will be played that night at the higher seeded team's home court. The boys' first round will be Wednesday night also at the higher seeded school. All will begin at 7 p.m.

In the girls' first round, #1 Belhaven faces #8 Jamesville, with #4 Aurora taking on #5 Bear Grass. The #3 ranked Bath meets #6 Columbia, while #2 Chocowinity meets #7 Mattamuskeet.

The boys' first round sends #1 Chocowinity against #8 Belhaven, while #4 Bear Grass faces #5 Bath. Mattamuskeet, ranked #3 meets #6 Aurora, and #2 Creswell takes on #7 Jamesville.

The semifinals and finals will be played at Washington High School. Two games will be played nightly Thursday through Saturday at 7 and 8:30 p.m.

The top three teams advance to the District tournament the following week. The number four-seeded team, either the number four regular season finisher or the tournament winner — if a lower seeded team — will face independent Cape Hatteras on February 28 at Columbia for the fourth spot in the district lineup.

Gamecocks Down Va. Tech

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Brad Jergenson's only basket Saturday came with four seconds left in the game to lift South Carolina to a 69-67 Metro Conference basketball win over Virginia Tech.

South Carolina led for most of the game, taking a 36-33 halftime advantage after a 10-2 sput just before intermission. Early into the second period, the Gamecocks jumped out to a 10-point lead.

But Virginia Tech fought back to tie the contest at 66-66 on a 17-foot jumper by forward Bobby Beecher with 17 seconds remaining in the game.

Thirteen seconds later, Jergenson scored on a rebound of a missed jump shot by guard Jimmy Hawthorne to seal the South Carolina victory.

The Gamecock win avenged a 104-76 loss to the Gobblers in December.

Jimmy Foster led South Carolina with 27 points and 13 rebounds, while Hawthorne added 14 points and Gerald Perry had 10.

Perry Young paced Virginia Tech with 24 points and Dell Curry added 14.

South Carolina raised its record to 11-12 overall and 4-6 in the conference. Virginia Tech dropped to 15-7 overall and 7-4 in Metro play.

Mercer 72
Georgia Southern 68

MACON, Ga. (AP) — Sam Mitchell scored 22 points, including a pair of free throws with two seconds left to put the game out of reach, as Mercer snapped Georgia Southern's six-game winning streak with a 72-68 triumph Saturday in a Trans America Athletic Conference basketball game Saturday.

Mitchell broke a 33-33 halftime tie when he drilled a three-point basket with 18:48 to play and the Bears led the rest of the way. Another three-point goal by Mitchell gave Mercer a 53-43 advantage with just under 13 minutes remaining.

Southern clawed back and cut the lead to 69-68 when Reggie Watson hit a 14-footer with 1:46 to play. The Eagles later had a shot at a tying basket, but Watson's 14-foot attempt was blocked by Tony Bolds before Mitchell hit the game-clinching free throws.

Bolds had 15 points and Pete Jeter 11 for Mercer, which lifted its record to 12-11 overall and 6-6 in the TAAC by capturing his homecoming game.

Bill McNair of Southern led all scorers with 24 points, Eric Hightower added 14 and Morris Hargrove 11. The Eagles fell to 16-8 and 8-4.

Tennessee 75
Florida 74

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Senior guard Tyrone Beaman hit eight out of eight free throws through two overtime periods Saturday to lead Tennessee to a 75-74 victory over Florida in Southeastern Conference basketball.

Beaman hit 12 for 12 from the foul line, including the last two baskets of the game with six seconds remaining in the second overtime, to overcome a 74-73 Florida lead.

He had 16 total points along with the Volunteers' leading scorer, senior forward Willie Burton, to lead Tennessee in scoring.

Florida forward Ronnie Williams, who put the Gators one up with a basket at :11 in the final overtime, finished with a game-high 21 points and 12 rebounds. Vernon Delancy had 18 points for the Gators.

Tennessee, with its second victory over Florida this year, improved its record to 15-11 and 6-8 in the SEC. The Gators fell to 12-10 and 7-6 in the conference.

In a game marked by good defensive play on both teams but 50 percent field goal shooting for each, the Volunteers overcame a stubborn Florida press and zone to take a 30-29 lead at the end of the first period.

More than 6,200 fans in the Stephen C. O'Connell center screamed as Florida took the lead 33-32 with 18:50 to go in regulation on a Eugene McDowell dunk. The two sides exchanged leads, with Tennessee going out by five, 46-41 with with nine minutes to play.

Tied 55-55, Florida had possession with a minute to go and tried for a last-second shot but Delancy's pass to Williams was high and wide at the :06 mark.

Veal Gives Terps Victory In 3 OTs

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Herman Veal scored a basket off a rebound as the buzzer sounded to lift Maryland to a 66-65 victory over Clemson Saturday in triple overtime.

It was the ninth straight Atlantic Coast Conference loss for the Tigers, who are 2-9 in the ACC and 12-11 overall. Maryland is 5-4 in the conference and 15-6 overall.

Maryland center Ben Coleman put the game in overtime with a rebound basket with one second left for a 59-59 deadlock at the end of regulation.

Clemson scored on a basket by Raymond Jones in the first overtime, but Adrian Branch also scored for the Terps to deadlock the score at 61-61 going into the second overtime period.

Neither team scored in the second overtime and Maryland missed a chance to win when Branch's 25-footer bounced off the rim with four seconds to play.

Jeff Adkins gave Maryland a 3-point lead in the final overtime, but Clemson went ahead 65-64 on two baskets by Anthony Jenkins after Branch and Adkins missed the first attempt on bonus free throw opportunities.

With Clemson leading 65-64 and eight seconds to play, Maryland got the ball inbounds and called timeout at midcourt. After the pause, Branch missed a jumper from the right side and Veal tapped the ball back in for the winning bucket.

The Terps Coleman led both teams in scoring and rebounds with 21 points and 10 rebounds. Jenkins led the Tigers with 19 points and eight rebounds.

"We had a chance to put it away in the third overtime, but we missed a critical freethrow that allowed Clemson to get back in the game," said Maryland coach Charles "Lefty" Driesell.

"We were very fortunate that Veal got the rebound and put it back in. I guess that we have had a little luck on our side these last two games," he said referring to a two-point win over Dayton.

If Maryland had some luck, Clemson is still looking for some. The Tigers have lost their last four league games at home by a total of eight points.

"I feel sorry for Clemson," Driesell said. "They have had a lot of tough luck lately. If they could have won the (close) games that they have played they would be in second place in the conference."

Clemson coach Bill Foster noted, "We gave up too many offensive boards (rebounds). We tried to lessen the possessions in the game by taking a lot of shots under 15 seconds on the shot clock. We showed a lot of poise on offense.

"It takes a lot of luck in this game and we just don't have any," Foster said.

Houston (4).....74
Virginia.....65

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Michael Young scored 22 points and the fourth-ranked Cougars held off a late second half shooting spree by Virginia to preserve a 74-65 college basketball victory Saturday.

Houston, 23-3, was leading 61-47 midway in the second half when the Cavaliers started a charge led by Othell Wilson, who scored 11 of his 13 points over the final 10 minutes of the game.

Tempers flared in the final minutes when Houston's Akeem Olajuwon apparently elbowed Virginia's Olden Polynice in the face as the two players ran down court. Polynice fell to the floor and left the game for good after shouting and pointing a finger at Olajuwon.

Wilson's late shooting display helped the Cavaliers cut Houston's lead to 69-64 with 2:28 to play. But Houston, despite poor free throw shooting in the final minutes, held on for the victory.

Houston missed eight free throws over the final three minutes of the game but free throws by Eric Dickens and Derek Giles helped keep Virginia at a distance.

The Cavaliers, 14-9, had three turnovers in the first three minutes of the game as the Cougars took a 10-2 lead and held a 36-28 margin at halftime.

Jim Miller led Virginia with 16 points and Polynice finished with 10. Olajuwon scored 12 points and Alvin Franklin added 13.

Lady Bucs Ousted; Cheyney Survives

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina University rallied from 22 points down in the second half but came up short as Marshall took a 78-68 victory in the opening game of the Converse Lady Pirate Classic Friday at Minges Coliseum. In the nightcap, nationally-ranked Cheyney University held off upset-minded Fairfield 74-69 to qualify for the finals.

Fairfield's Katrina Fields connected on 13 of 21 shots from the field to set a new tournament record with 34 points in the contest, and also set a new mark with 18 rebounds as the Lady Stags slipped to 20-4 on the season.

Marshall's Karen Pelphrey fired in 13 out of 19 from the floor for 28 points on the night, while teammate Kim Shepard added 20 and Tywanda Abercrombie 10.

ECU guard Delphine Mabry paced the hosts with 22 points in the contest, but Anita Anderson came off the bench to boost the Lady Pirates with 14 points, 14 rebounds and a pair of blocked shots in just 20 minutes playing time.

East Carolina suffered through shooting just 38 percent from the floor after slumping to 32.4 percent in the first half. Meanwhile, Marshall completed the contest with a 46.2 percent effort from the field.

The Lady Pirates trailed 41-29 at halftime !nd the Thundering Herd quickly built the margin to 22 points as Pelphrey and Tywanda Abercrombie combined for 10 points during an 11-3 scoring bulge for a 54-32 Marshall lead with 15:59 left.

Mabry's outside shooting and Anderson's play inside kept the Lady Pirates from losing more ground, and Marshall led 66-49 with 10 minutes remaining.

Then the Lady Pirates posted their best offensive spurt since the opening moments of the game, as they rattled off eight unanswered points to trim the margin to 66-57 with 8:01 remaining. Mabry connected on four free throws and Anderson added two during that spurt.

Marshall built the lead back to 12 points twice in the closing minutes of the game, the latter with 2:22 left on a pair of free throws by Shepard.

But the Lady Pirates refused to surrender, and the Thundering Herd needed seven free throws in the final 1:45 to put the game away.

"They scored on the same play over and over," ECU Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "They ran the play with Pelphrey and then they ran the back door. They got the exact shot they wanted.

"We missed 15 free throws — that would have won the game for us. We didn't go for the three-point play when we could have.

"In the past, we've executed the scouting report, but we didn't do it today."

The Lady Pirates spent much of the first half on the free throw line but managed to make just seven out of 15 attempts.

East Carolina scored the game's first basket on a move inside by Phillips with just over a minute elapsed and held the advantage through the 12:05 mark. The Lady Pirates led by five points four times during that stretch.

But Marshall called a timeout with the Lady Pirates leading 14-9 with 14:04 till intermission and quickly took the advantage on the scoreboard.

Pelphrey and Karla May scored inside for Marshall as the Thundering Herd outscored ECU 13-4 over the next six minutes to take a 22-18 lead with 7:59 left.

Phillips connected on a pair of free throws and Rodriguez sank the first of two attempts to cut the gap to 22-21 with 7:11 left in the half. But again Marshall mounted a scoring drive, this time rolling up 10 points while the Lady Pirates managed a lone free throw as the Herd took a 32-22 edge at the 3:30 mark.

Marshall continued to manuever inside for easy baskets, but the Herd took its biggest lead of the half at 39-26 on a 15-foot jumper by Pelphrey with 1:24 remaining.

"I thought Delphine did a great job for us playing with an injury," Andruzzi said. "But the first half really killed us; weren't in the game in the first half. We weren't concentrating."

Rampettes Avenge Loss To Demons

Doris Richardson pumped in 18 points and Shelia Carmon added 14 as the Rose High School Rampettes avenged an earlier thumping at the hands of Wilson Fike with a 47-46 upset of the Big East 4-A Conference leading Lady Golden Demons Friday.

In the boys game, Andre Virgil fired in 23 points to lead a quartet of Wilson Fike double-digit scorers as the Golden Demons trounced Rose 68-40 in Big East action.

Linda Barnes paced the Fike girls with 24 points on the night, while Teresa Atkinson added 11 as the Lady Golden Demons suffered their first defeat in 12 conference outings. The victory was just the fourth of the season by the Rampettes in 12 Big East contests.

Rose rallied for a 26-18 halftime advantage after leading by two after the first period. Fike cut the margin by a point in the third quarter, then outscored Rose 15-9 in the final period as the Rampettes held on for the upset.

"It was the biggest win of my career," Rampettes Coach Dennis Gibson said. "All season we've had a lot of adversity; it's a big tribute to the players and the program. I felt like we played four good quarters o solid basketball.

"We forced them out of their press early in the game, and they went back to a zone. We got tired at the end, but we called a timeout to get reorganized.

"A key factor was our three sophomores (Pam Smith, Chris Holec and Vickie Parrott); they rested our experienced players a lot.

"Fike's outside shooting was not as effective as it was at Wilson; they were well off the shooting percentage they had the first time we played".

John McNeal added 15 points, while Michael Hillard and Charles Howard posted 12 each for Fike, now 9-3 atop the conference standings and 15-5 overall.

Dwight Smith netted 12 points as the Rampants lone double-figure scorer.

Rose trailed by just two points at the end of the first period, but the Golden Demons came alive to outscore the Rampants 19-6 in the second quarter. Fike continued to build the lead through the second half after leading 30-15 at intermission.

The Rampants slump to 5-7 in the Big East and 10-10 overall.

Rose travels to Wilson Hunt Tuesday night in another Big East matchup.

Peugeot reinvents the big wagon
It's bigger than the best-selling imported or American wagons.
With its back seat up, it holds even more than the hold-over dinosaurs from Detroit.
Yet—here's a pleasant surprise—this is one big wagon that is designed not to wag its tail clumsily from side to side on the highway.
The Peugeot 505 GL wagon. Huge inside. Not too huge outside. A wagon with the road handling of a European sedan.
We've got it. Come and try it.

SouthWest Downs Greene Central

SNOW HILL — SouthWest Edgecombe defeated Greene Central 63-50 Friday to finish tied with the Rams for second place in the Eastern Carolina 3-A Conference race, then won a coin toss to take the higher seed in the draw.

In the girls clash, the Lady Cougars got 18 points each from Teresa Mayo and Phyllis Gorham to down Greene Central 49-47 on a fourth-quarter rally and avoid a deadlock for first place in the conference.

Pam Gorham added 11 points for SouthWest Egdecombe, while Cyndi Hicks paced the Lady Rams with 17 points and Cynthia Jones chipped in 14.

Greene Central's girls finished the season at 10-2 in the league while 17-5 overall. SouthWest concluded its campaign at 11-1 against Eastern Carolina opposition and 18-4 overall.

Kevin Clark paced the Cougars with 19 points on the night, while Darrell Clark added 16, Earl Wooten 11 and Jesse Forbes 10. Theodore Edwards led the Rams with 15 points, while frontcourt mate Anthony Thompson posted 14.

The score was knotted 29-29 at halftime of the boys game, but the Rams went cold on offense in the third quarter as SouthWest held a 16-4 scoring edge. The Cougars expanded the lead in the fourth quarter to finish the season with an identical 8-4 conference mark, while 15-7 overall, Greene Central finished the year 16-6 overall.

The Rams were without the services of top guard Boneree Johnson, who is hampered with an elbow injury.

"Johnson not being out there effected the team," Rams Coach Lewis Godwin said. "We just didn't get anything going. I didn't expect we'd play like that; we looked like we had just been to a wake. They wanted the game more than we did.

"In the third quarter, we probably threw it away 10 times. We haven't played that sorry all year. We'll probably play one more (game) if we play like we did tonight."

Greene Central's boys will play tournament host Farmville Central Tuesday at 9 p.m., while the Lady Rams play Tuesday at 5:30 against C.B. Aycock.

Moore, Ross Pace Tribe

COLUMBIA — Terry Moore pumped in 24 points and Reggie Ross canned 20 to lead Chocowinity to a 75-67 victory over Columbia to insure sole possession of the Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference regular season championship in Friday basketball action.

In the girls game, Chocowinity dumped Columbia 54-31 as the Lady Tribe finished second in the final standings behind Belhaven. Wendy Elks posted 15 points and Rhonda Mizelle 12 as Chocowinity notched its 13th win in 16 conference outings.

Kevin Tyree added 12 points for the Indians, which topped the league with a 13-3 mark along with a 14-8 overall record. Harmon Respess led Columbia with 14 points.

The Tribe will face Mattamuskeet in the opening round of the conference tournament.

"This is the first time our school has won it outright," Chocowinity Coach DeWayne Kellum said. "We were picked fifth in one poll and sixth in another before the season. We've got a senior team. They ended the season last year with an upset win in the conference tournament, and it just carried over to this year.

"They've worked hard for it. They care about every game; they want everything they can get."

Chocowinity held a seven-point edge at halftime a cruised through the second half to claim the title.

Bear Grass Tops Bullets

JAMESVILLE — Lawrence Watson fired in 18 points to lead Bear Grass to a 50-43 victory over Jamesville Friday in Tobacco Belt 1-A high school basketball action.

In the girls clash, Amy Lilley posted 10 points to lead the Lady Bears to a 26-23 victory over Jamesville. Renee Brown paced Jamesville with 10 points.

The Lady Bears capped their season at 7-9 in the league and 11-10 overall, while Jamesville finished 3-13 in the Tobacco Belt and 5-13 overall.

The Bear Grass girls will open the conference tournament at Aurora Tuesday.

The victory lifted the Bears record to 8-8 in the conference, while Jamesville slipped below .500 with a 7-9 finish.

"It was just one of those flat nights," Jamesville Coach William Johnson said. "We missed a lot of free throws (12 out of 21) and that hurt us. Our inthusiasm and everything just wasn't there."

Darrell Brown chipped in 10 points for the Bears, while Tracy Peele and Horacie Stokesbury posted 10 each for the Bullets.

Chargers Topple Panthers, 49-44

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton got the win it needed to lock up fourth place in the Eastern Carolina 3-A high school basketball race as the Chargers defeated North Pitt 49-44.

But in doing so, Ayden-Grifton also set up a rematch against the Panthers Monday at 7:30 in the first round of the conference tournament.

In the girls game, North Pitt outscored the Lady Chargers 16-6 in the final period to claim a 58-48 finale victory and third place in the Eastern Carolina Conference with an 8-4 mark.

Marvin Smith posted 15 points, Mike Dixon 13 and Calvin Peterson 10 for the Chargers, who finished the season at 7-5 in the conference and 13-9 overall. Keith Clark and Linwood Harris paced North Pitt with 12 points each.

"We did shoot well at free throw line," Chargers Coach Bob Murphrey said. "We've had some good free throw shooting nights off and on all season.

"It's going to be a challenge for us to see if we can get up to play North Pitt again. I felt like we were really ready for them (Friday). I thought we played a real patient game on offense and played well on defense, also."

The Chargers took a seven-point lead at the end of the first quarter, but the Panthers narrowed the margin to 25-22 at the half. Ayden-Grifton added two more points in the third quarter, as the teams played evenly in the final period.

North Pitt finished the season at 6-6 in the conference and 11-11 overall.

Deloris Pittman pumped in 19 points to lead the Pant-HERS, while Sudie Sharpe added 18. Cora Faison led the Lady Chargers with 24 points but fouled out with 4:30 left in the game.

After that, Ayden-Grifton failed to score again until 24 seconds remained on the clock. North Pitt held a slim lead at the time but managed to pull away.

The Lady Chargers finished the season with a mark of 3-9 in the conference and 5-17 overall.

Taylor Named Top Defender

NEW YORK (AP) — Linebacker Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants was named Friday the National Football League's Defensive Player of the Year for the second successive year by the Seagram's Seven Crowns of Sports panel.

In balloting by the panel of 10 NFL assistant coaches, the former North Carolina player received four first-place votes and 176 points to one first-place vote and 146 points for runner-up Howie Long, defensive end for the Super Bowl champions, the Los Angeles Raiders.

Defensive end Mark Gastineau of the New York Jets, runner-up to Taylor in last year's balloting, was third this year with 142.2 points and Tampa Bay linebacker Hugh Green was fourth with 130 points.

Taylor received a $5,000 check and a trophy.

The Seven Crowns of Sports football competition is divided into three categories — the defensive player (Taylor), the interior offensive lineman award, to be announced later this month, and the overall $10,000 winner determined by a computer analysis of statistical achievement. That award went to Eric Dickerson, the Los Angeles Rams' running back and NFL rushing champion, two weeks ago.

Fishing Contest Awards Made — A spectacular run of bluefish late in the year pushed the number of citations awarded in the 1983 North Carolina Salt Water Fishing Tournament to a near record level.

Over 2,500 citations suitable for framing were given to anglers who caught certain eligible species weighting over specified minimum weights. This was about 200 more than the previous year and nearly equal to the record set in 1978 when white marlin and yellow fin tuna were especially plentiful.

Plaques well be mailed soon to those who caught the largest fish in each of 25 categories. The tournament is sponsored by the N.C. Travel and Tourism Division.

More awards were made for bluefish (618) than any other species, up 800 percent over 1982, including one for a 25 poinder that may be the second lagest bluefish ever caught on hook and line.

Sailfish were also up dramatically from 44 awards made in 1982 to 128 last year, and increase of 190 percent. Declines were noted in channel bass (down 31 percent), white marlin (down 37 percent) and tuna (down 28 percent). Modereate gains were made in blue marlin up 19 percent and cobia up 27 percent.

"The big run of blues before Christmas is what did it," tournament director Joel Arrington said. "In late November, it looked like we would have under 2,000 citations for the year, about the same as '80 and '81, and considerably less than 1982. But the run was at least as good as the great ones of the early 1970s, and many of the fish were huge. We recognized 71 bluefish over 20 pounds."

Although no new state records were set by fish entered in the tournament, many outstanding catches were made, including 27 channel bass weighing 50 pounds or more. Wayne Warden of Winston-Salem caught the 25 pound bluefish north of Oregon Inlet on November 18 before the main bluefish run began.

Zachary Garcia of Kitty Hawk caught one of the largest blue marlin recorded andywhere in the world last year when he boated a 945 pounder off Oregon Inlet. A white marlin caught by Fred Arnold of Lexington, Ken., also off Oregon Inlet is, at 101 pounds, one ounce, very near the state record of 118½ pounds. Most of the white and blue marlin and the sailfish entered in the tournament were released alive. Special release citations were awarded for them as well as for 31 channel bass over 46 inches long.

Arrington said rules for the 1984 contest, which begins March 15 and ends on December 31, will remain the same. Rules brochures will be available free on request after March 15 from the N.C. Travel and Tourism Division, 430 N. Salisbury Street, Raleigh, N.C. 27611 or call in-state toll free 800-334-1051, out of state 800-438-4404.

Conservation Club Honored — Sixteen community conservation clubs have been selected by the National Wildlife Federation to receive the federation's 1983 President's Award for exceptional achievement during the last year.

All the clubs belong to a state affiliate of the National Wildlife Federation, the nation's largest conservation organization with over four million members and supporters.

The winners, chosen by NWF President Benjamin C. Dysart from 6,000 eligible clubs in 51 state and territorial affiliates were cited for accomplishments in effective conservation action and environmental education programs, and for their contribution to their state affiliate.

The 16 clubs were congratulated by Dysart fo their "collective efforts which have served to emphasize the importance of an alert, active and aggressive community club as the essential ingredient of na efficient state federation."

The winner selected in North Carolina is the Wake County Wildlife Club affiliated with the North Carolina Wildlife Federation.

Fund Passes $2 Million Mark — When an Apex couple bought a lifetime gift subscription to Wildlife in North Carolina magazine for their three year old daughter last October, they had no idea that it would ultimately lead to their family meeting with North Carolina Governor James B. Hunt Jr. However, the gift subscriptionthat the couple bought pushed the N.C. Wildlife Endowment Fund over the $2 million mark.

This fund is supported by the sale of lifetime hunting and fishing licenses, lifetime subscriptions to Wildlife in North Carolina magazine, and tax deductible contributions. Only the interest earned from the principle of the Wildlife Endowment Fund can be used for wildlife programs, and as the fund grows it will play a big role in supporting wildlife conservation programs in the future. To celebrate this landmark occasion, Hunt presented the daughter and her parents with an elaborate plaque at a meeting in the governor's office in Raleigh on Feb. 2.

Ice Battles Close Games

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — A pair of golden battles on ice close the XIV Olympic Winter Games. America's Rosalynn Sumners Saturday headed into a tight finale against East Germany's Katarina Witt for the women's figure skating crown, and the Soviet hockey team sought to atone for its defeat by Team USA four years past.

The women's figure skating event climaxed at Zetra Arena with the free skating program. The hockey showdown comes today with the Soviet Union meeting Czechoslovakia in the final hours of these Games.

In addition to the figure skating medals, five of the remaining gold medals were being contested today, and Marja-Liisa Hamalainen of Finland took the first of them to become the first triple gold medalist of the Games.

The 28-year-old cross-country skier, who earlier won the 5-and 10-kilometer races and took a bronze medal in the relay, won the 20-kilometer race in one hour, one minute, 45 seconds. She became the second athlete to win four medals at these Games, joining speed skater Karin Enke of East Germany.

Raissa Smetanina of the Soviet Union was second. Norway's Anne Jahren took the bronze.

Igor Malkov of the Soviet Union won the endurance run of the speed skating races, the men's 10,000 meters. He took revenge on silver medalist Tomas Gustavson of Sweden, who had beaten Malkov in the 5,000 meters earlier in the week.

Malkov's time was 14 minutes, 39.90 seconds. Gustafsson was .05 seconds behind, and the bronze medal went to Rene Schoefisch of East germany, who was clocked in 14:46.91.

Other events on the schedule were the 90-meter ski jump and the four-man bobsled.

With just six events remaining in the Games, the Soviets lead the overall medals race with 23. The East Germans are next with 20 but lead the Soviets in the gold rush 7-5.

As of Friday the United States had won five medals — three gold and two silver — its lowest number since it won four in 1936 at Garmisch, Germany.

Witt, the reigning European champion, leads on the basis of the compulsory and short programs. But Sumners, the 19-year-old world champion from Edmonds, Wash., is close behind and — she says — in just the right place to carry off the crown.

"I don't really have any pressure," Sumners said after practice Friday. "I'm chasing now. When there's something you want and it's not yours, you want it all that more."

Shrugging off any suggestions of pressure, the 18-year-old Witt described herself as "feeling good." Her program, performed to a medley of "I've Got Rhythm," "Embraceable You," and "Mona Lisa," includes four triples, double axels, a camel spin, pirouettes and graceful step sequences.

Sumners' routine is a virtual duplicate of the one she used to win the U.S. national championship last month in Salt Lake City. Skated to "Overture to Gwendoline," "Amazing Grace" and "Limpid Brook," it's an athletic display of double axels and fast skating between the triples.

Tiffany Chin, 16, of Toluca Lake, Calif., is in a three-way tie for sixth place and still contending for a bronze medal.

The Soviets, bidding to recapture the hockey gold medal they lost to the United States four years ago at Lake Placid, crushed Canada 4-0 Friday night while Czechoslovakia blanked Sweden 2-0.

The Americans, denied the medal round, defeated Poland 7-4 in a consolation game Friday to take seventh place in the hockey competition, their worst-ever Olympic finish.

"I don't think we have to apologize for our team's performance. We were .500, and that's nothing to be ashamed of," coach Lou Vairo said.

On Mount Trebevic, meanwhile, the East German four-man bobsled steered by Wolfgang Hoppe led after Friday's first two runs — one of which shattered the course record — and was heavily favored to finish the last two comfortably ahead.

Though Americans have so far been shut out for speed skating medals this year, the U.S. contingent has derived a small measure of pride from the fact that so far, none of Eric Heiden's five gold-plated times at Lake Placid have been surpassed.

Heiden, a commentator for ABC here, said Friday: "The 10,000 could be the easiest one to break. I think (Sweden's) Thomas Gustafson will win that one." but it hasn't been that easy so far.

Barnhill Sets Mark

Kelly Barnhill of Rose High School set a new meet record in the 50-yard freestyle Friday at the sectional swim meet held at Minges Natatorium.

Barnhill finished the event with a time of 22.11, while his 49.8 was third in the 100 free style.

Paul Mark Kelly took first in the 100 breaststroke for the Rampants with a time of 2:03.

The Rose 200 medley relay unit of Barnhill, Kelly, Les Turner and Michail Uhlman also qualified for the state meet to be held next weekend in Greensboro.

Rose Results:

Kelly Barnhill: 1st 50 free 22.11; 3rd 100 free 49.8

Paul Mark Kelly: 1st 100 breast 2:03

200 medley relay (Kelly, Barnhill, Les Turner, Michael Uhlman) 4th 1:46.00

Betsy Barnhill: 6th one-meter diving

Chris Vansant: 7th one-meter diving

Kate Jameison: 8th one-meter diving

Girls 200 medley relay (Annissa Boyer, Arlene Song, Lisa Wallace, Lou Ann Wallace) 8th 200 medley relay.

President's Call Quiets Hamilton

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Scott Hamilton, whose nerves held like stanchions of steel when he won the Olympic gold medal in men's figure skating Thursday night, acknowledged Saturday that he froze when President Reagan called from the White House.

"It was a congratulatory call and the usual things were said," said the 5-foot-3, 110-pound ice wizard from Denver.

"I had been to a medalist reception ... and was going to a team dinner on the mountain when the call came to the Village around 6 o'clock Friday night."

Happy 30th Joe!

Ailing Dr. J Nets 39 In Sixers Win

By The Associated Press

Julius Erving wasn't at his best, but you'd never know it.

Erving went into the Philadelphia 76ers' game Friday night against the New Jersey Nets feeling weak from the flu.

He left with 39 points, including the first 14 of the fourth quarter and 19 overall in the final period, to lead the 76ers to a 114-109 National Basketball Association victory.

Erving played 37 minutes, hit 17 of 25 shots from the field, sank all five of his free throws and grabbed six rebounds — hardly the statistics of a sick man.

"I maneuvered and got open," Erving said. "I had four left-hand shots that dropped in."

"I almost penciled Julius out because of the flu," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham, "and to get a performance like that . . . Well, I just hope he is as sick for Sunday's game (against the New York Knicks)."

New Jersey Coach Stan Albeck said: "He is the greatest player in the NBA."

In other games Friday night, it was San Antonio 111, Chicago 109; Denver 141, Los Angeles 138; Boston 111, Seattle 100; Dallas 129, Phoenix 123; Milwaukee 105, Utah 91; and Washington 96, Portland 87.

While Erving played despite his illness, Philadelphia center Moses Malone returned after missing nine games with a sprained ankle to score 15 points and grab 13 rebounds.

The Nets led 107-104 with 1:44 remaining, but Erving hit a basket to cut the deficit to one-point. Albert King, who led New Jersey with 22 points, then fouled Malone and was assessed a technical foul by referee Billy Oakes when he argued the call.

Erving made the technical foul shot to tie the score at 107 and Malone sank one of two free throws to give the 76ers a 108-107 lead.

"The call on King I find unbelievable," Albeck said. "When the game is on the line, you don't call a technical foul."

Micheal Ray Richardson scored a field goal with 57 seconds left to put the Nets ahead 109-108. Then New Jersey center Darryl Dawkins fouled Bobby Jones, who made two free throws to break the 11th tie of the fourth quarter and put the 76ers ahead to stay.

Spurs 111, Bulls 109

Reserve guard John Lucas hit a 15-foot hook shot with two seconds remaining to lift the San Antonio Spurs to their fifth straight victory on the road, a club record. The Spurs had a 2-22 road record before they began their current win streak. Lucas came off the bench in the fourth quarter to score five of the team's six baskets.

Nuggets 141, Lakers 138

Alex English scored 35 points, including two free throws with 22 seconds left, and Dan Issel added 31 as the Denver Nuggets edged the Los Angeles Lakers. Both Earvin "Magic" Johnson and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 33 points.

Celtics 111, SuperSonics 100

Larry Bird scored 30 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and had 13 assists as the Boston Celtics snapped the Seattle SuperSonics' 11-game home-court winning streak.

Bird and Kevin McHale each scored four points in a 12-2 burst midway through the fourth quarter. Jack Sikma and Tom Chambers led Seattle with 18 points apiece.

Mavericks 129, Suns 123

Mark Aguirre scored 42 points and Rolando Blackman added 37 — each of them matching their season highs — as Dallas handed the Phoenix Suns their 14th straight loss on the road.

Aguirre, who had his third 42-point game of the season, hit a crucial three-point play with 1:07 remaining. He was fouled as he muscled in for a basket and sank the free throw to give the Mavericks a 123-116 lead.

Bucks 105, Jazz 91

Sidney Moncrief scored six points during a 16-6 Milwaukee spurt midway through the fourth period, helping the host Bucks defeat the Utah Jazz for their fourth straight victory. Marques Johnson led the Bucks with 22 points. Moncrief and Junior Bridgeman each added 17 points.

Bullets 96, Blazers 87

Jeff Ruland scored 24 points and pulled down 16 rebounds as the Washington Bullets handed Portland its second straight loss at home. It was only the fourth home court defeat for the Trail Blazers in 28 games this season.

Trinity Crushes Faith

The Trinity Tigers used a balanced scoring attack to upend the Conquerers of Faith Academy Friday night, 80-53. The Lady Tigers were also victorious, overcoming an early deficit to defeat the Lady Conquerers, 28-20.

In the boys contest, Maury Harris scored 10 first-period points to propel the Tigers to a 19-8 lead. Faith outscored the Tigers 12-9 in the second period to cut the lead to 28-20.

The pace picked up in the second half as both teams pressed and used the fast break. The Tigers outscored the Faith team 23-17 in the third period as Jimmy Powers led the way scoring eight points. With a 51-37 lead entering the final stanza, Timmy Pendew led a surge for the Tigers scoring eight points. They outscored their opponents 29-16 in the final frame for a final 80-53 margin.

Art Reynolds led the Tiger scoring with 16 points while Harris had 14. Darryle Wells chipped in 12 points and Peaden and Powers had 10 points each as all five Tiger starts hit double figures. Tim Ritley led Faith with 16 points while Junior Fields had 10. The Tigers are now 18-2 on the year following their 17th consecutive triumph.

In the girls game, the Lady Tigers fell behind 6-2 before pulling even at 6-6 as Rhonda Pittman hit a shot to close the first quarter. Both teams turned the ball over repeatedly in the second frame and only pushed in three points each as the half ended knotted at 9-9.

The Lady Tigers pushed in six points in the third period while holding the Lady Conquerers to five for a 15-14 lead going into the last quarter. The Tigers pulled away in the final frame outscoring the hosts 13-6.

Sheila Everett led the Lady Tigers with 13 points and Renee Deans had seven. Amy Sutton had seven to lead the Lady Conquerers.

The Lady Tigers are now 9-1. The victory was their ninth straight after an opening season loss.

Trinity travels to Hookerton to play Mount Calvary in its next game on Tuesday.

SPORT LINE

To The Sports Editor:

ECU lost a great supporter. Those of us that knew and loved Jack Boone lost a loyal friend. The world lost a Christian gentleman.

Jack Boon was cut from a different mold than most coaches I have known. When I played for him my respect for him grew each day. Over the last 35 years my admiration for him as a coach, teacher and builder of men knew no bounds. He had the finest football mind I have ever known. Jack was responsible for laying the groundwork for the sports status ECU enjoys today. He was a moving force to get ECU into the Southern Conference. Many days and nights were spent by him in traveling North Carolina and Virginia selling ECU football and soliciting scholarship money to help players.

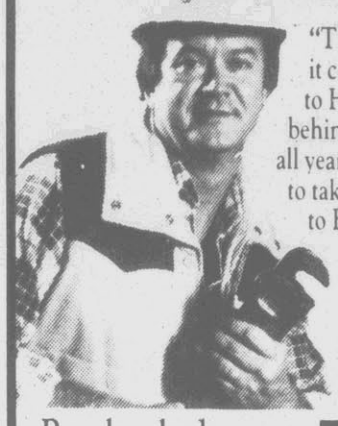

Jack always set an example for his players to follow. Not once did I ever see him display his temper in an unsportsmanship manner. Profanity was not a part of his vocabulary. Parents were thankful he coached their sons. The players were his special pride and he felt a compassion for and a desire to help each of them.

I was so thankful that Ed Emory had the wisdom and foresight to ask his friend and former coach and teacher to help him with the ECU football team. Jack had a great love for Ed and I am sure the feeling was mutual. Ed's eyes told the story of his feelings the day of the funeral.

Jack passed on as we all must do one day. The record and contribution he made to his fellowmen will survive the passage of time. I am sure the angels are shouting from Heaven, "Well done thy good and faithful servant."

Senate To Consider Repeal Of Alaska Oil Export Ban

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — National security, a record trade deficit and jobs will be weighed when the U.S. Senate considers legislation to permit the export of 200,000 barrels a day of Alaska oil to Japan.

Exports of Alaska oil were banned under the law that allowed construction of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline to the Prudhoe Bay oil field in the 1970s, shortly after the Arab oil embargo.

The House has approved an extension of the Export Administration Act, with the ban intact. But Sen. Frank Murkowksi, R-Alaska, is offering an amendment that would permit the exports and, he says, help Alaska, the rest of the nation, Japan and Mexico.

It is an issue that has arisen periodically since the Prudhoe Bay oil began flowing, and one that has stirred the emotions of Alaskans, who note that oil states in the Southwest are free to export.

The senator and others propose selling the oil to Japan and replacing it with Mexican oil, which would be cheaper to transport to the U.S. Midwest and East Coasts.

Murkowski says the export of Alaska oil would increase tax revenues, decrease the United States' trade deficit with Japan, reduce the dependence of the Japanese on Mideast oil and offer Mexico a way to help retire its huge foreign debt.

Opponents, led by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., argue that exporting oil would hurt national security and could put U.S. maritime workers out of work.

Howard Marlowe, who heads the Washington, D.C,-based Coalition to Keep Alaska Oil, says the law already permits the export of oil, but only after a number of criteria are met — including a showing that it would benefit thbenefit the U.S. consumer."Consumers would still pay the same for Alaska oil" if the ban were lifted, he says.

Murkowski and his supporters acknowledge their chances are slim, at best, but maintain it is just a matter of time before the rest of the nation agrees with them.

"The economics of it really make a lot of sense," says Juneau lawyer Jim Clark, who has led the lobbying effort to lift the ban. "It's inevitable that this is going to happen."

Because of a glut of crude oil on the West Coast, and the fact there are no pipelines to carry the surplus to the East and Gulf coasts, Alaska oil is shipped by supertankers to Panama. From there it travels to the Atlantic via a pipeline and then is carried by smaller ships to refineries along the Gulf and eastern seaboards.

"We, in effect, export the oil now," Clark says.

CONSERVATION COMMITTEE . . . chairman Mary Little presented a series of classes on conservation for third graders at G.R. Whitfield School.

PREPARING MATERIALS . . . for third grade conservation classes are Greenville Garden Club members, left to right, Mary Little, Ann Davis, Christine Helms, Frances Burns and Phoebe Owens.

Third Graders Learn About Resources

A message directed to third graders in several schools throughout the county was on natural resources — to be appreciated, enjoyed and protected.

This was the purpose of the Greenville Garden Club's Conservation Committee through a series of four lessons taught in city and county schools.

Volunteer teachers (Garden Club members) were Christine Helms at Sadie Salter, Lib Steig at Pactolus, Nancy Walters at Third Street, Emily Edwards at Falkland, and Mary Little at G.R. Whitfield. Hazel Rouse and Katherine Highsmith were aides and Rhoebe Owens served as recorder.

"The plans were secured through the Ladies Auxiliary of Soil and Water Conservation at a state convention. On June 22, 1983, the Conservation Committee and other interested members met to discuss the program. It was decided to commit the Garden Club to develop the project and take it as far as it would go — both in time and scope," said Mrs. Little, chairman of the conservation commitdee.

A worshop was held in November of last year to prepare materials and five complete kits containing teaching aids were prepared. The women were assisted by Albert Coffee and Ruth Smith of the Soil and Water Conservation Service; Willie Pate, director of Environmental Health, and county and city administrative and supervising personnel in the school offices.

"Principals and teachers of five schools requested the unit for a total of 13 third grades. The enthusiasm they have exhibited has prodded us to work hard to ensure success," said Mrs. Little.

The children in Lynn Taylor's third grade at G.R. Whitfield School in Grimesland had the following comments on their conservation classes.

•"I want to be a conservationist because it means a lot to me." — Lecuricas Montez Tee Williams

•"I learned a lot about conservation. I like keeping my city clean and I do. Being a conservationist is fun — it helps you learn to be a conservationist by keeping your city clean and picking up after other people and keeping the streams clean." — Allison Kate Phillips

•"I have learned all seven natural resources. It is fun being a conservationist. The seven natural resources are important to all of us. Why? Because if we don't use our natural resources right, we won't have any water, plants, wildlife, air, minerals and people." — David Lee Williams

•"Being a conservationist is a very important job. Most conservationists care about their land. They don't pollute. Pollute means to throw trash out in the rivers, lakes, streams, ditches, roads and fields. But I wonder why people don't care?". — Misty Lynn Smith

•"Conservation is important for us. It is important for animals and all the people. Conservation helps to clean streams and streets. Conservation means natural resources and they are soil, water, air, plants, minerals, wildlife and people. There are seven natural resources." — Tamikia Jones

•"I have learned what conservation means. It is important because if we don't conserve our natural resources, we will run out of them." — Johnna Leigh Far

•"A conservationist is ome one that keeps the streams and ditches. Conservationist means to pick up trash." — Michael Todd Hardee

•"Mrs. Little has taught us to be conservationists. We have enjoyed her being with us. Conservationists are supposed to help our natural resources and stop pollution. I have enjoyed our lessons." — Thomas Barnes Cole II

•"We have learned not to waste natural resources. I have liked Mrs. Little to come and teach us about conservation." — Amy Leggett

•"Conservation is a good word. I learned what conservation is and I enjoyed the lessons. I had a good time." — David Weldon

•"I learned a lot about conservation. I learned about water and people and air and soil and plants and minerals." — Steven Boone

•"I want to be a conservationist because I want to protect all the natural resources. If we don't protect our natural resources, we would not have anything. All the natural resources are important to us. For example, if we didn't have water, we would be thristy." — Kimberly Ann Tetterton

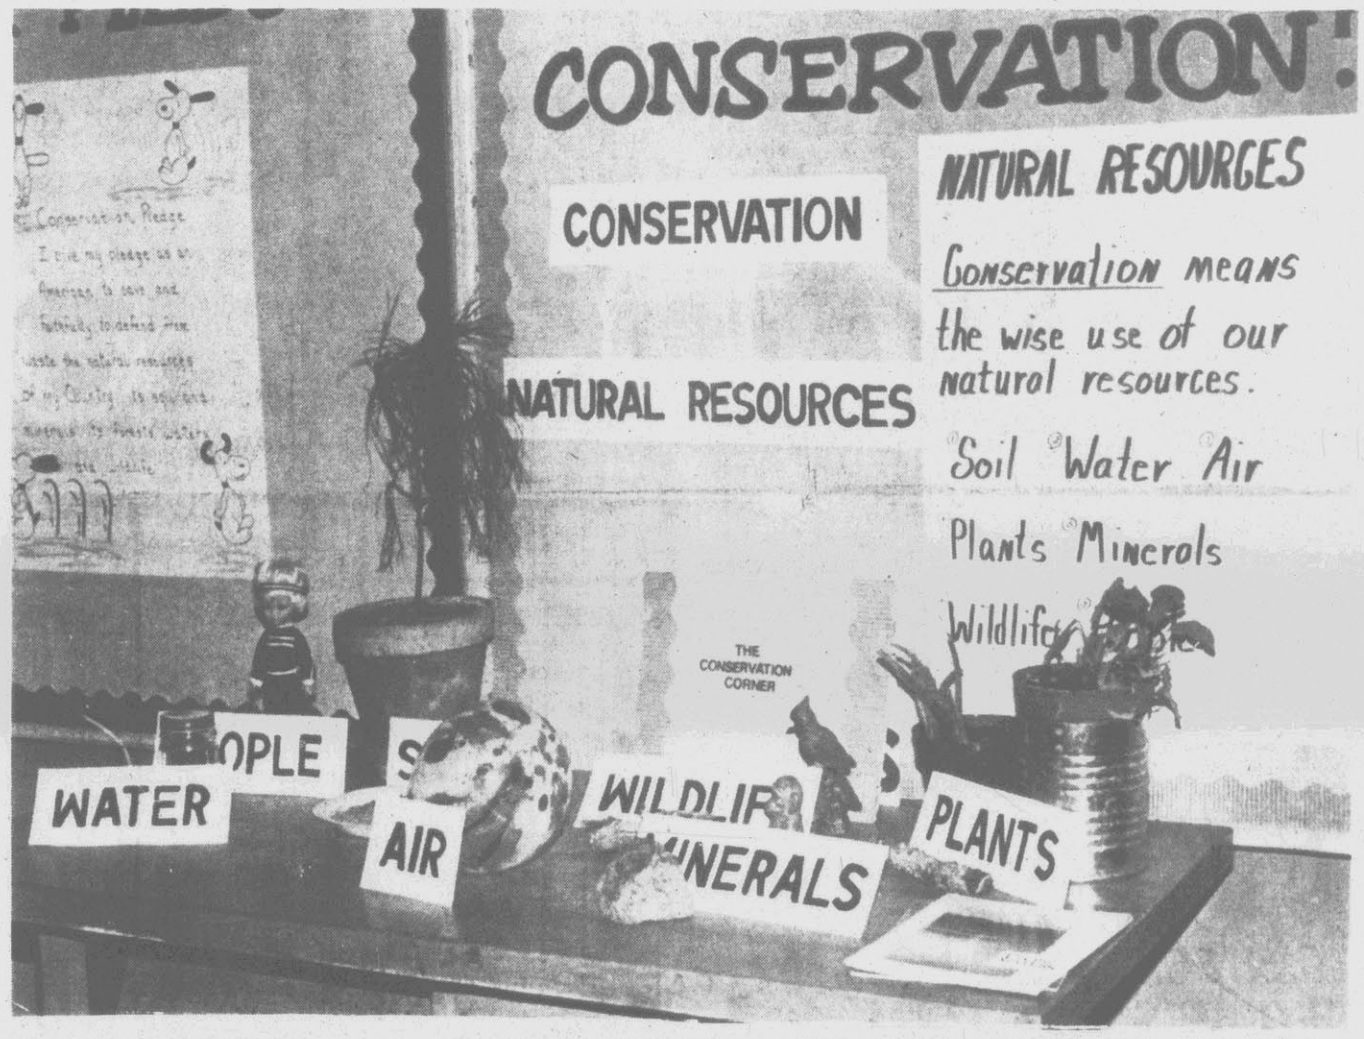

•"We have learned what conservation means to — to help clean up our community and ditches. Conservation means the wise use our soil, water, air, plants, minerals, wildlife and people." — Tracie Dawn Heath

•"I learned in Mrs. Little's class, you need to keep places clean and don't throw things in ditches." — Deshawn Mechettie Thompson.

•"Conservation is very important to us. It is very important to me because keeping thing clean in our future, we might meed it." — Michael Douglas Ross

•"Conservation is important to me because I like keeping the road clean and our country. I have learned what conservation means and I have enjoyed the lessons because I have learned what ti means. I have enjoyed working with Mrs. Little." — Kizzie Elain Wilson

•"I want to be the best conservationist because you can learn a lot. You've got to keep streets, streams, roads, grass, yards and forrest clean." — Keisha Rena Jones.

Weaver Finds Pleasure In Creating Originals

By ANNE SHULTES
Doylestown
Daily Intelligencer

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (AP) — There's a mystique about sitting at a loom, lost in the artistry of weaving bright yarns into a beautiful design, producing a rug so glorious that it doesn't end up under foot but hangs on the wall like a painting.

Alice Pickett of Doylestown makes such rugs, but she finds her hours at the loom anticlimactic, even boring. She hates to admit it, but sometimes while she's weaving she watches TV. To her, the intensity and adventure come when she sits down with a pencil and graph paper to create a design.

She can make a Lightning Rug, bright red shot through with a yellow zigzag that seems to vibrate; or a bold geometric pattern composed of tiny stripes of many colors; or a tapestry-like weave that comes out of a shaft-switching technique; or a picture made up of little blocks, like something from a computer.

"I try very hard to do original ontemporary design," Mrs. Pickett says. "The whole joy of doing it is to do something different and original."

Mrs. Pickett is not pleased to hear people compare her rugs to those made by Navajos or early American settlers. She rejects such imitation both because she works from her own vision and because of the market value of her rugs — $30 a square foot and heading higher.

"I couldn't make as much money as I do, rehashing colonial things," she says.

Mrs. Pickett gets $620 for her average-size 43-by-70-inch rug, turning out about 20 a year on a loom that completely fills what was supposed to be her dining room. She sells them through an interior design firm with an affiliated art gallery in Boston, through the Artisans' Cooperative in Chadd's Ford, and occasionally at shows.

"Artists aren't supposed to be monetary," she says, "but it's nice to be able to go out and buy yarn and not feel guilty afterward."

When Mrs. Pickett designs a rug, she starts with a sketch. Then she sits down with the graph paper and does a careful rendering of every curve and angle. When she plans the colors, as often as not she decides to dye the yarn herself. She wants shadings so gradual that one color will slide into another with no obvious line between the hues.

Although her rugs are modern, she doesn't consider them avant-garde. She says what she's doing is combining traditional techniques in a new way.

"I do original designs," she says, "but there is a lot of super-unconventional fiber work being done out there. My mind doesn't work that way. I have this functional idea behind most of my work."

Not every rug Mrs. Pickett weaves turns out successfully. She tells of one drawing, a stylized landscape with trees, that was one of her best. It turned into a rug that failed on every count, and she still doesn't know what to do with it.

"The day I took it off my loom, I said, 'It's a bomb.' I tried giving it to my parents but they didn't want it," she says. "I thought about hanging it on my wall, but I don't want to look at it."

Many of her rugs are in homes, others in the executive offices of corporations where art is purchased as much for its investment value as for its looks. Signed on a label sewn on the back, the rugs are the kind of investments that increase in value over time.

Mrs. Pickett has hundreds of rugs to her credit. Some are one-of-a-kind, others are limited editions, executed in different colors. And she has made one rug, the Sunrise rug, about 30 times, to fill orders.

Mrs. Pickett, 31, majored in textile design at Rhode Island School of Design. She has had her work displayed in the Philadelphia Craft Show, in several galleries and, currently, in Reykjavik, Iceland, as one of 58 artists invited to participate in a two-month show sponsored by the American ambassador.

She will also exhibit by invitation next spring at the Textile Museum in Washington, D.C., where she will be artist-in-residence May 10-13.

While some artists find it difficult to part with their works, Mrs. Pickett says she's not emotionally attached to hers — she just binds or fringes the ends and ships them off.

"Nobody wants to be a weaver and have an attic with 100 rugs in it," she says.

February 12-18 has been National Vocational Education Week, and here at Rose it has been observed in many ways. The FHA-HERO organization sponsored many events, including a fashion show on Thursday that featured prom dresses and tuxedos for the upcoming Junior-Senior Prom. They also held a bake sale on Valentine's Day, and distributed apples and held a coffecake day on Friday as part of a celebration of their own "teacher appreciation day." There has also been a notice on the school marquee in the front yard, and announcements made in the morning to make people aware of the week. Be on the lookout for an upcoming column about the entire vocational program here at Rose. We're proud of our teachers and our students.

Anne-Lynne Davis, a junior at Rose, is a semi-finalist in the competition to represent our state in the Senate Student Exchange Program. This program takes two students from each state (one per Senator) and sends them on a two month tour of Japan. Anne-Lynne has been nominated by the school and made it to this last round of competition along with eleven other students from across the state. She will go to her last interview this Monday, so good luck, and best wishes for the competition!

The ECU School of Nursing, in conjunction with our guidance department, is sponsoring a session for seniors concerning the transition from high school to colege. The session will start on February 28. For more information, contact the guidance department.

The Food Services class will be serving a luncheon for the District I Association of Colleges and Schools on February 23. The class is taught by Mrs. Tschetter, and also helped provide refreshments at the reception held for Mrs. Creech last week.

Susan Hill Shows Slides

The Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority held its meeting at the home of Bonnie Martin. Susan Hill presented a slide program on Camp Rainbow.

This is a summer camp for children with cancer. Brothers and sisters of the campers also participate. It will be held June 13-15 at Camp Don Lee in Arapahoe.

Georgia Potter, president, conducted the business session. Three fund raising projects were presented by the ways and means committee including a doughnut sale March 31, a hot dog wagon at the Spring Festival downtown in April and a yard sale on May 5.

Camp Rainbow and epilepsy have been selected as the group's major projects for the year.

Ms. Potter was named Valentine queen at the group's recent Valentine banquet.

Gifts were exchanged by secret sisters.

Asian Mothers Older, Better Educated

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — American women of Asian and Pacific Island origin are more likely than other women to be older, college-educated and married when they have children, a government population survey shows.

The study entitled "Characteristics of Asian Births: United States, 1980," also said that the number of such births rose 30 percent in 1980, largely because of immigration. This compared with an 8.4 percent increase in all births, an 8.1 percent rise in white births and a 6.9 percent rise for blacks.

The National Center for Health Statistics, which released the study Wednesday, uses the shortened term "Asian" to refer to Asian Indian, Chinese, Japanese, Hawaiian, Filipino, Cambodian, Korean, Laotian, Vietnamese and other Asian or Pacific Island groups.

About 72 percent of Asian mothers in the 1980 survey were born outside the United States compared to 10 percent of the white or black mothers.

There were only 78 out-of-gedlock births for every 1,000 Asian babies born compared to a rate of 110 per 1,000 for whites and 553 per 1,000 for blacks. Among Asians, the Chinese had the lowest out-of-wedlock ratio at 33 per 1,000. Hawaiians had the highest at 270 per 1,000.

"One factor that contributes to the lower overall out-of-wedlock ratio for Asian mothers as compared with white and black mothers is their comparatively older ages, because out-of-wedlock childbearing is more common at younger ages," the report said.

Most (57.9 percent) of the Asian mothers lived in the West. Some 16 percent lived in the South, 13 percent in the Northeast and 13.1 percent in the North Central states.

About 75 percent of the Japanese and Filipino mothers lived in the West. Almost 25 percent of the Chinese mothers lived in the Northeast, but few other Asian mothers did, the study showed.

The largest proportions of Asian mothers were in California (32 percent), Hawaii (16 percent) and New York (6 percent). More than one-third of the Chinese, Japanese and Filipino mothers and almost 30 percent of the Asian Indian, Cambodian, Korean, Laotian and Vietnamese mothers lived in California.

By 1980, about one third of the Southeast Asian refugees who settled in the United States had located in California.

The study showed that excluding Hawaiians, Asian mothers are likely to be considerably older than black or white mothers. Only 6 percent of Asian mothers were under age 20 in 1980 compared with 14 percent of white mothers and 27 percent of black mothers.

Some 23 percent of Asian mothers were between 20 and 24 compared to 34 percent of white mothers and 36 percent of black mothers. And, about 35 percent of Asian mothers were 30 years or older compared to 20 percent of white and 15 percent of black mothers.

Hawaiian mothers had the lowest median age at 24.4 years compared to 29.4 years for Chinese mothers, the oldest group among Asian mothers. The median age for white mothers was 25.9 years and that for black mothers was 24.2 years.

The data on educational attainment was sketchy because California, Texas and Washington, where 41 percent of Asian births occurred, did not request the information on birth certificates.

But in the states that did collect such information in 1980, some 10 percent of Asian mothers had completed fewer than nine years of schooling compared with 4 percent of white mothers and 5 percent of black mothers. The proportion that had completed high school (80 percent) was nearly identical to that of white mothers and 25 percent higher than the comparable proportion of black mothers (64 percent).

By contrast, some 30 percent of Asian mothers had completed college, nearly twice the proportion of white mothers (15.6 percent) and almost five times that for black mothers (6.3 percent).

Japanese mothers had the highest median years of schooling (14.5) followed closely by Chinese mothers (14.4). Hawaiian mothers had the lowest median years of schooling among Asians (12.6). The figure was identical to that for white mothers and slightly higher than that for black mothers (12.3).

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

Choice Of Dress Involves Too Many

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter from the 22-year-old bride who invited her future mother-in-law to go along and help pick out her bridal gown:

I don't know what kind of relationship the bride had with her own mother, but I can tell you the day my daughter invites her future mother-in-law along to help pick out her bridal gown, I will be busy elsewhere. And the two of them can pay for whatever they purchase together!

MRS. A. IN PINCKNEY, MICH.

DEAR MRS. A: So far, to my surprise, the mail is running 2-to-1 in favor of your point of view. But read on for a heartwarming letter for the opposing view:

DEAR ABBY: I was very proud of my daughter when she asked her future mother-in-law to come with us and help pick out her bridal gown. The three of us went shopping together and had a wonderful time!

Her future mother-in-law was thrilled because, since she had only sons, she thought she'd never know the joy of helping a daughter pick out a wedding gown.

IRENE INST. PETERSBURG, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: You were asked what you thought of a woman who would play cards in her home the same evening she buried one of her parents.

Thank you for saying it's not possible to make a fair judgment without knowing what was in that woman's heart.

Abby, people often laugh and carry on after a funeral to keep from breaking down, because if one breaks down, the rest would follow.

BEEN THROUGH IT

DEAR BEEN: It's true. But what's wrong with breaking down? It's appropriate for one who has lost a loved one to break down and weep — and even to cry out in anger, "God, why me?"

My advice to those who feel the pain of grief would be: Don't try to put on a show of "strength" — cry your heart out. Tears are healing.

•••

DEAR ABBY: After 13 years of marriage, I am seriously considering calling it quits.

For the last three years, "Don" has worked away from home on various construction jobs. When our chidren aren't in school, we go wherever he is to be with him. He is never on one job long enough for us to move there.

Don has always been overly jealous, even though I've never given him any reason to be. The problem is that it keeps getting worse. Abby, I have never fooled around and Don knows this, and in his more rational moments he says he loves me so much he's afraid someone might lure me away from him.

Last Sunday a car turned into our driveway, and Don said (right in front of the children), "That must be Mommy's boyfriend, checking to see if I was home."

The phone is worse. He always answers. If it's a wrong number, he says, "Probably one of your boyfriends calling to see if I'm home."

How do I convince Don that I love him? Frankly, I am glad to see him leave. I want our marriage to work, but I don't see how much longer I can put up with his insultng accusations.

HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: Persistent, excessive jealousy without provocation is a sickness. Tell your husband that if he really can't control it, he should see a shrink because you have had it with his groundless suspicions. And by the wy, there's an old French saying, "A man rarely looks under the bed unless he's been there himself.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

It started out as threat.

A mother who works outside the home told her children if they called her at the office one more time after school and whined, "There's nothing to eat!", she would do something drastic. (And possibly illegal.)

The threat materlized one afternoon after the fourth of her four children called to complain that all the snack boxes in the house were empty, the contents of the refrigerator had died, and the cookies left over from Christmas were "icky." A landmark decision was made. If the kids didn't like what she bought, let them do the shopping and find out for themselves how far the money went, and what the choices were.

Thus it came to be that at 10 a.m. one Saturday morning in February, four small children, ages five to 14, entered a supermarket with $60 and instructions to buy lunches and snacks for the entire week.

They fought over which cart to pick. They fought over who was going to push it. They fought over who would hold the money. They fought over which aisle to go down first. They fought over who was going to work the calculator.

Every purchase was a Supreme Court decision. Was the dog really worth the 25-cent can of dog food to feed him? Did they really need clean sponge to wipe up around the sink for 89 cents or could they stand the pollution of the old one for another week? Could they tough it out on a small container of ice cream at $1.69 instead of the large one just under $4?

An hour later they were struck with panic when the kid operating the calculator reported the total was in excess of $1,040. When they discovered he was in error, they ordered him out of the store.

The three of them approached the check-out counter with severe apprehension. Also an assortment of soft drinks, chips and dips, crackers, cakes, gum and bananas. Another child abandoned ship when he argued that a bag of tortilla chips would put them over their $60 limit and the other two voted to "go for it."

The bill came to $45.97. They brought up from their jeans pockets $1.80 worth of coupons and ended up with $15.83 in change.

There was not a single phone call during the entire week to mother. Shopping by committee had worked.

I had a friend who did the same thing once with catsup. Sick of all the arguments at the table, she bought each one of her four boys a large bottle of catsup and put their names on it.

It's an old motherhood adage, but it still flies. Starve an ingrate . . . feed a responsibility.

Designer Willi Smith Puts Modern Art On The T-Shirt

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Not all art is meant for the museums or home wall hangings. Designer Willi Smith is putting it on that great American institution, the T-shirt.

There will be no reproductions of the Old Masters across American chests, however. Smith is featuring 20 contemporary American artists.

"We have the new Rembrandts," the designer said in an interview. He slipped out of his dark knit sweater and into a T-shirt with a splashy black on white violin, sort of a free form, from the artist Armand Arman.

Said Arman, "I put paint on a violin and smashed it on paper to get the traces of a broken violin. I'm a sculptor basically.

"The first visual art was body painting. Before painting caves, they painted themselves.

"The T-shirt is not haute couture. It's for everybody and makes design come alive.

"Once Picasso made a drawing on the back of a girl. But if T-shirts had been popular then, he would have done it on them."

"If one person walks down the street wearing a T-shirt, one thousand can see it," said the artist, Les Levine. "Art is liberated from walls and suddenly the streets become a museum."

Smith agreed. "Museums intimidate," he said. "This way we are bringing the artist closer to the people. It's really street art. I want to see us involved more with art in the community."

"We started with T-shirts because it's one of the most popular items of clothing," said Laurie Mallet, president of Smith's WilliWear firm. "EV-erybody wears them. Our idea was to bring fashion and art together; both are creative fields."

The idea really was born last May when the artist Christo draped Key Biscayne, Fla., with miles of pink fabric. Smith made T-shirts for the workers.

Smith stills sells the Christo shirt, but only with the artist's name, no other art.

Said designer Jmith, "For this project, we tried to get a broad spectrum of artists. Most of them we knew."

The range is from the graffiti designs of Tommy Scharf, Keith Haring, Angel Ortiz and Futura 2000 to the temperamental "liquid crystal" design of Ed Schlossberg — that changes colors as the body temperature rises and falls — to the work of other artists such as Les Levine, Dan Friedman and Jenny Holzer.

All the Ts will be 100 percent cotton and retail at $37.

"I met some resistance from some of the artists at first," Smith said. "But these people represent our art today. The reluctance came from those who didn't see fashion as art."

"The criss-crossing of mass production and art is intriguing," said Alison Sky of SITE, the architectural firm. "Collaboration is what our age is about in terms of art — it's experimental and it could break into something dynamic and original."

Good News For Farmers:

Soft Drinks Are Now Loaded With Corn Syrup

By LUCY BIGHIA

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Seed caps and tractors aren't about to replace swimsuits in soft drink commercials, but the jingles could start to edge out country western tunes in tractor cabs.

The corn sweetener fructose, which is derived from corn starch, rapidly is replacing sugar in soft drinks, said Andrea Roberts-Gillaspie, executive director of the Nebraska Corn Board.

"We envision that by the end of this decade, one in three bushels of corn produced will be converted into high fructose corn syrup, and that the soft drink industry will be the major user of that," said Paul O'Hara, executive secretary of the Nebraska Soft Drink Association.

Lois Princ, a state Health Department dietician, said studies have shown fructose to be just as sweet as or slightly more sweet than table sugar, depending on the type of fructose used.

This year, the soft drink industry's fructoce consumption netted farmers an additional 8 cents to 9 cents a bushel, Ms. Roberts-Gillaspie said.

"The average farmer really doesn't realize how important the soft drink industry is to him," she said.

Last spring, Coca-Cola announced it would use a mix of 75 percent corn syrup and 25 percent sugar in its fountain syrup. Coke previously used a 50-50 fructose-sugar mix in its cans, bottles and fountain syrup.

Pepsi-Cola followed suit by saying it would go to a 50-50 mix in its cans and bottles. Pepsi previously restricted its use of fructose to fountain syrup.

Since 45 percent of all sugar used in the United States is imported, using a domestic sweetener like fructose drastically undercuts the price of imported sugar, Ms. Roberts-Gillaspie said.

And when the importer is a soft drink firm, that means increased competition for American corn, she added. Coca-Cola, for example, uses 10 percent of all sugar consumed in the country, and Pepsi-Cola follows a close second.

"The farmer has got to realize that the soft drink industry is making a new market for him, or at least is expanding a market for him, and the soft drink industry has to realize that the farmer's production of corn can help cut the price of imported sugar," she said.

The relatively unknown aspect of fructose has prompted the Corn Board and the soft drink industry to launch a major advertising campaign aimed at Nebraska farmers and consumers, Ms. Roberts-Gillaspie said.

"We don't want consumers to grab up a label, see 'high fructose corn syrup' and panic," she said.

The campaign also is geared at stressing the relationship between soft drink consumption and corn production.

She said the campaign — which will include billboard, radio and newspaper advertising — is scheduled to start in December and will be partially funded by the soft drink industry.

And while increased fructose use in soft drinks may be good news for the farmer, it is not necessarily good news for the consumer, nutritionists said.

Ms. Princ, the Health Department dietician, said the effects of fructose on the human metabolism have not been researched thoroughly.

Ms. Princ said some studies have suggested fructose would be helpful for people suffering from diabetes because it is metabclized and raises the blood sugar level slower than regular sugar.

"But there haven't really been any real long-term conclusive studies on the use of fructose ... so the use of it for diabetics is still somewhat questionable," she said.

"Gram per gram, sucrose (table sugar) and fructose have the same amount of calories. So from that point of view there is no real advantage, it doesn't really reduce calories," she said.

Karen Creswell, a dietician at Lincoln's Health Central, expressed similar reservation about the benefits of fructose for diabetics.

Diabetics usually can tolerate fructose better than other sugars, but the corn sweetener still raises the blood sugar level, she said.

Another problem with fructose, Ms. Creswell said, is that some people cannot tolerate the sweetener. That means soft drink makers may have to go to more detailed labeling to warn consumers with potential fructose intolerances.

"Even in my own family, I have a son who tolerates the usual amount of fructose in fruit, but with some of the new soft drinks he has a lot of difficulty," she said.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

HELEN WITTY'S BLONDE BROWNIES

½ cup (1 stick) unsalted butter, at room temperature
¾ cup (packed) light brown sugar
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup coarsely chopped walnuts
½ cup (3 ounces) semisweet chocolate pieces (optional)

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees, with an oven rack in the center position. Grease an 8-inch square baking pan.

In a mixing bowl (using a wooden spoon) or in the large bowl of an electric mixer, cream the butter until soft, then beat in the brown sugar, and finally the egg and vanilla. Beat until fluffy.

Sift together the flour, baking powder, and salt. Stir the flour mixture into the creamed mixture, then stir in the walnuts. Spread the batter in the prepared baking pan. Sprinkle the optional chocolate pieces evenly over the top of the dough and press them down slightly with a rubber spatula.

Bake the brownies in the center of the preheated oven for 25 to 30 minutes, or until they have begun to pull very slightly away from the sides of the pan. Cool the brownies in the pan, set on a wire rack. Cut the panful into squares or bars when completely cool. The brownies may be stored, covered, in their pan, or wrapped in plastic wrap or aluminum foil, or in a pastic bag. They will keep for up to several days at room temperature, for up to several weeks in the refrigerator, or even longer in the freezer.

APPLIANCES

CLEVELAND (AP) — Improvements in major home appliance sales indicate 1984 will be a strong year, according to an industry spokesman.

Vincent A. Chiarucci of White Consolidated Industries says, "We have more reason to be positive this year than we did in 1983.

"Consumers are increasingly confident about the future and are now making purchases which they postponed. Unemployment is down. Retail sales are up. And, in an election year, the party in power will do what it has to do to strengthen the economy and keep inflation under control."

Sybil Ferguson's Tips On Slimming Children

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Chums snicker and chuckle behind backs of obese boys and girls. Coaches bench them. But those aren't the worst troubles for chubbies who are 20 percent or more overweight, according to diet guru Sybil Ferguson.

"The odds against an overweight adolescent becoming an average-weight adult are approximately 28 to 1," Mrs. Ferguson, Diet Center's founder and director said in an interview.

The problem won't go away until the parents of millions of obese boys and girls open their eyes, in her estimation. They need to embark on a behavior and dietary modification course, rescuing the offspring while there's time.

Some parents may be blind to the problem because they, too, are obese. If one parent is 20 percent overweight, the official obese level, there's a 40 percent chance children will be, too, Mrs. Ferguson said. If both parents are obese, there's an 80 percent chance kids will follow suit.

"When you consider 86 percent of overweight boys and 80 percent of overweight girls will become fat adults, we're headed for quite a health problem," she said.

"Overweight adults are at special risk for high blood pressure, stroke, diabetes, degenerative joint diseases, cancer, hernias, gout, gallbladder disease, heart attack, respiratory problems.

"Obesity at 14 initiates the degenerative process on the coronary arteries that kills at 44."

Mrs. Ferguson said in the past decade the percentage of young Americans who are obese has risen from 10 percent to 15 percent.

"Now it is an extremely acute problem affecting an estimated 3 million nationwide," she said.

"The major reason, I think, is that 52 percent of American women are working and making quick meals, picking up fast foods and not making meals from scratch anymore.

"Food also is used by some mothers as pacifier or as reward or punishment. Research shows one of 10 mothers use food as punishment — If you come home late again you won't get supper.

"One out of four uses food as a reward — You've been good; here's a piece of cake.

"One of three uses food as a pacifer — Here's a candy bar. Don't cry anymore."

The high calorie, high starch, high fat, and even empty calorie drinks and snacks accompanying sloppy dietary habits fuel the fat child's proess the entire family alters its eating habits, provided these guidelines:

—Reinforce self-esteem of children. Do not nag or belittle or demean. Frustration can lead to a lot of snacking.

—Analyze what the family consumes.

—Children should eat at least one fresh fruit per day.

—Dieting children need to eat on a schedule. Eat on time before hunger drives them to snacking on the wrong food. Fruit snacks are best for dieting children.

—Serve whole-wheat or other grain cereals at breakfast instead of sugar-coated cereal. The sugar energizes quickly but when it wears off the blood sugar level dives, causing the child to be sluggish in the middle of the morning. Whole grain cereals have staying power that lasts until lunch time.

—Lunchbag tips: whole-wheat breads have longer staying power but you may need to start with cracked wheat until the child gets used to eating them. Pita shells also provide a good base for a sandwich. Use tuna, lean beef, turkey or eggs, with sprouts and vegetables for added crunch. Always include a piece off fruit and some raw vegetable.

Mrs. Ferguson is the mother of five grown children and 12 grandchildren, none of them overweight, she said.

Raising Funds For The State Zoo

ASHEBORO — The North Carolina Zooligical Society has announced a $1.4 million campaign to complete the African segment of the North Carolina Zoological Park, according to Mrs. J. Tylee Wilson, chairman of the society.

"More than half of the $1.4 million goal has already been contributed or pledged," she said. "The society will aggressively seek not just to meet the goal this year, but to surpass it."

Major contributors to the campaign for the purchase of all animals and plants in the African Pavillion and the African Plains sections include the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., NCNB National Bank, Lance, Inc., First Union National Bank and others, according to Mrs. Wilson.

When the African phase of the zoo is completed, the Zoological Society will have provided nearly 1,000 animals and 8,000 plants.

Mrs. Wilson was elected chairman of the Zooligical Society on Jan. 11, after serving three years as chairman of the society's development committee. She sees the fund raising for animal and plant purchases as the No. 1 priority of the society.

"The Zoological Society has the primary responsibility for purchasing the animals for the zoo," Mrs. Wilson said. "No matter how beautiful and realistic the zoo facilities are, the animals are really what people come to see."

Also elected to positions on the Zoological Society board of directors were James H. Millis Sr., vice chairman; Paul Stephanz, treasurer, and D. Wescott Moser, secretary.

The North Carolina Zoological Society is a non-profit organization of volunteer directors and a small staff who raise money for the zoo. Since its formation in 1968, the society has raised more than $6 million for animals, plants, education programs and zoo construction. The society will host benefits, sell zoo memberships and make hundreds of personal visits to individuals and businesses to help meet the $1.4 million goal.

"Individuals and businesses are urged to invest by sponsoring single animals, entire animal collections or individual habitats in the African Pavillion," Mrs. Wilson said.

"Those of us working to develop this zoo really feel like we're bequeathing something to future generations of North Carolinians," she said. "A zoo is not a static resource for someone to see once and enjoy. It's something that changes every year. There are births and deaths, and new animals and plants are added every year. And the zoo appeals to everybody, not just a certain segment of the population."

When complete, the North Carolina Zoo will be divided into six zoogeographic area to accommodate the animals and plants native to those areas and a "World of Seas" exhibit. The 300-acre African section is the first area to be developed.

Within the African section are seven habitat areas designed to allow the animals to live in surroundings as much like their natural environment as possible. The plains habitat covers approximately 60 open acres and will be populated primarily with gazelles, impalas and other hoofed animals.

The 40,000-square-foot African Pavillion provides a controlled environment for animals and plants found in forest, swamp and other areas of Africa. More than 195 animals that could not otherwise survive in the North Carolina climate will be housed in the Pavillion.

The R.J. Reynolds Forest Aviary, a glass-domed tropical forest habitat for plants, birds and small animals and reptiles, is also part of the African section of the zoo. It was opened to the public in August 1982.

"Even when the African phase is completed, the society will not rest on its laurels," Mrs. Wilson said. "The zoo's next stage of development will be the continent of North America. A public education center will be included in that phase. More than 70,000 students from all counties in the state come to the zoo each year, and the educational center will be a real asset to the students.

"The North American phase of development will also include an animal medical care facility, and facilities to display the significant animal and plant species of this continent — from the arctic to the desert — in both indoor and outdoor natural habitiat," Mrs. Wilson said. "The society will continue to work closely with the state government on this next major phase."

The North Carolina Zoo is one of two state-owned zoos in the country. When it is completed, the 1,371-acre zoo will be one of the largest natural habitat zoos in the world.

ANCIENT WEALTH

DETROIT (AP) — "Wealth of the Ancient World: The Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Herbert Hunt Collections" is being shown at the Detroit Institute of Arts through March 24.

The exhibition was organized and circulated by the Kimbell Art Museum of Fort Worth, Texas. It features Greek and Roman antiquities assembled by the Hunt brothers.

The show includes 15 painted vases, 38 small-scale bronzes, and 112 rare gold, silver and bronze coins. The 165 objects being shown span more than 1,000 years, from about 700 B.C. to 400 A.D.

After closing in Detroit, the exhibition will travel to the Dallas Museum of Art.

New Medal Honors North Carolina War Dead

HONORING NORTH CAROLINA WAR DEAD . . . This medal of gold, platinum and enamel, designed by Kathleen Doyle, will be placed by Gov. Jim Hunt in the memorial at the amphitheater at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington, Va. on Friday.

By PEGGY HOWE
N.C. Department Of Cultural Resources

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt will honor North Carolina's war dead in ceremonies to be held at Arlington National Cemetery at 10 a.m. Friday. The governor will place a handcrafted gold, platinum and enamel medal in the Memorial Amphitheater at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington, Va.

The medal, by designer Kathleen Doyle of Penland, will take its place among the more than 35 other states' memorials to fallen heroes.

The citation on the metal plaque below the medal reads: "This medal is hereby dedicated to the memory of all North Carolina veterans who rest in honored glory in Arlington National Cemetery and cemeteries throughout the world," and is signed "Gov. James B. Hunt Jr., Governor of North Carolina, 1983."

Maj. Gen. John L. Ballentine, commanding general of the Washington District, will be host for the ceremonies which will include an honor guard, color guard and two platoons of service men.

After brief remarks, Hunt will present the medal and plaque to the general and place a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Following the bugler's rendition of "Taps," the group will move inside the amphithater where the North Carolina memorial will be put in place.

Present for the ceremony, will be, in addition to the governor and the craftsmen, several North Carolinians who first suggested the medal and other dignitaries.

The presentation is the culmination of several years' efforts to honor North Carolina's veterans with an appropriate memorial at Arlington.

During the 1981 session of the General Assembly, Sen. Robert Jordan sponsored Senate Bill 793, "An Act to Provide a Memorial to North Carolina's War Dead at Arlington National Cemetery," which authorized the medal to be commissioned.

A three-member selection committee chose Ms. Doyle's design after reviewing proposals from several artists from around the state.

The design incorporates an outline of the state surrounded by the sea on a clear night with stars above mountains, representing North Carolinians who died in wars on land, on the sea, and in the sky.

Several other craftsmen had a part in the making of the North Carolina memorial. Michael McMillan handcrafted the box. The ribbon on the medal was handwoven of blue and gold silk by Chealsea Miller, and the plaque beneath the medal was hand engraved by Tim Buchanan.

In planning the ceremony, Hunt said, "North Carolina is very proud of her veterans and very pleased to add this handsome North Carolina medal to the others honoring all Americans who have died in wars from the Revolution to the present.

Tobacco Museum Planned For Pitt

The Pitt County America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee, chaired by Gladys Howell, has launched its plans to construct a tobacco museum in Pitt County.

For several years, eastern North Carolina had led the flue-cured tobacco farming industry in production and innovation. The museum will house artifacts and exhibits about the evolution and social impact of the tobacco industry in North Carolina.

Developments in planning the tobacco muesum have escalated in the past few weeks. A floor plan recently proposed to Mrs. Howell and the committee includes ideas for various displays and artifacts. Mrs. Howell, wife of East Carolina University Chancellor John Howell, said the committee expects an on-going, diversified audience for the museum, which will likely keep daily hours year-round to serve city-county schools on field trips, 400th Anniversary visitors, tourists, historical associations and people who have an interest in local history.

Local groups have offered the committee their assistance on the museum project. American Legion Post No. 39 has provided a site and a log building, located at the "Village of Yesteryear" in the Pitt County Fairgroundd, to house the museum. The committee is currently planning renovation of the building.

The ECU Regional Development Institute is providing support services for the committee. RDI and the university provide consultation services in planning, administration and construction through participation by RDI personnel, ECU faculty and student interns. Dr. Richard Laing, development specialist in Cultural Affairs at RDI, is coordinating ECU's involvement with the America's 400th Celebration.

The idea for the museum was born last spring as Pitt County's primary contribution to the statewide celebration of the 400th anniversary of Sir Walter Raleigh's Roanoke Island settlements. Raleigh sent the first British explorers to North America in April, 1584.

The America's 400th Anniversary Celebration, hosted by the state of North Carolina, starts this April in Great Britain, continues in Manteo in July and runs until August 1987.

The North Carolina America's 400th Anniversary Committee authorized North Carolina counties to form local committees.

In addition to Mrs. Howell, other members of the Pitt County committee. Other members are Mrs. Willie Mae Carney, Bethel; Charles Gaskins, Greenville; Donald Lennon, Greenville; Harry Leslie, Greenville; Henry Oglesby, Grifton; Mrs. Herbert Paschal, Greenville; Dr. John Tilley, Greenville; Burney Tucker, Winterville; Les Turnage, Greenville; Ed Walker, Greenville; Kay Warren, Greenville; David Whichard, Greenville; Norman Wilkerson, Greenville; Mrs. R.T. Williams, Farmville; Mrs. Woodrow Wooten, Falkland, and Mrs. Irma Worthington, Ayden.

The graphic arts process used to produce a lithograph is planagraphic. The artist draws directly on a flat stone or specially prepared metal plate. The stone is dampened with water, then inked. The ink clings to the marks, but not to the dampened areas. When paper is pressed against the stone, the ink is transferred to it.

A Review

Kinship Between Old And New Art Forms

Lucy R. Lippard, "Overlay: Contemporary Art and the Art of Prehistory," New York: Pantheon Books, 1983, 266 Pages, 333 Illustrations, $30 hardcover, $16.95 paperback.

The joy of discovery, enlightenment, fills every page of "Overlay," Lucy Lippard's new book on prehistoric art and contemporary art. Our basic socio-aesthetic needs, those of both prehistory and the present, and how these needs, when considered by the artist effect our response to the art itself is the underlying theme of the book. In spite of the time distance between prehistoric art and ourselves the monuments are viewed or rather sensed by Lippard as very real to us today. Their aesthetic and social function are so intimately intertwined that we react to their power and message in a very natural way. It is this necessity for existence which was inherent in prehistoric art production that Lippard parallels by citing selected contemporary artists and the relevancy of their works to social and aesthetic requirements. Although we may be familiar with the subjects discussed, Lippard's personal perspective in viewing both prehistoric and contemporary art offers us a fresh look at each.

Meaning in art, a natural ingredient in the creation of prehistoric art and all too often absent from contemporary art, is a recurring topic to be found in the six chapters which compose the book. Lippard states, "I'd like this book to suggest the restoration of symbolic possibility in comtemporary art ... Perhaps what the prehistoric stone monuments still communicate is simply people's need to communicate and the need for symbolic intermediary that has always allowed the desires of makers and receivers to merge and interact." Picking up on the resolution of nature and culture found in prehistoric art works, contemporary artists whom Lippard sees as identifying with ancient shrines and monuments are trying to avoid alienating their work from their social milieu thereby creating an art that has a function in its social context.

While Lippard may have felt she slighted women and their art in previous writing, in the second chapter, "Feminism and Prehistory," she forcefully demonstrates women's role in art beginning with prehistory. The identification of woman with nature is supported with positive rationale. Lippard points to the impact prehistoric myth and imagery has upon contemporary women's art. The combination of primitivism and feminism "testifies to a basic need, expressed by men as well as women, to reevaluate the socio-aesthetic structures and values of the society in which we live."

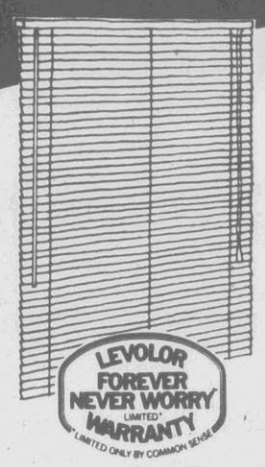

In discussing the paradox of goals of the Minimalists and Conceptualists, Lippard suggests that in "art about elementary systems there is a certain longing for precision that is simultaneously anti-technological and anti-romantic." The complexity of modern society makes it difficult for artists to know their inner self and thereby work from instinctive reactions to life around them. Therefore, they attempt to go back to learn for themselves how mankind learned, again linking themselves to the past.

Lippard's desire to see contemporary art take on the power and meaning of prehistoric art is probably best exemplified by those artists working with reclamation of sites — "places where society had made such a mess that only the artist playing god could change it." Robert Smithson, Robert Morris, Helen and Newton Harrison are examples of artists who have taken on the job of revitalizing land polluted by man. The Harrisons planted a forest at Artpark in 1977 reclaiming land contaminated with chemicals. They also planned to plant crops working with a nearby Indian Village thus involving local residents in the process of reclaimation. The art form became process and product.

"Overlay" is a rich fund of information which because of its intent to relate one culture or time period to another is structured by making comparisons. More like a metaphor, the writing style of the book is inspired by the art which is its subject. Straight forward and direct in approach, Lippard has the art of reflecting on her subject, demonstrating a learned background of her material and yet never writing in such a manner that the writing takes dominance over the art form which she wishes to put forward.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By LINDA M. STANCILL

Puzzling, fascinating murders of yesterday emerge in two new books recently added to the library's collection.

A celebrity murder of 50 years ago is revived by Hamilton Darby Perry in "Libby Holman: Body and Soul." A true story of power and money, gentility and celebrity, prejudice and envy, illicit sex and alcohol in Depression America, it depicts the shooting of Zachary Smith Reynolds, heir to the Reynolds tobacco fortune.

Eight months after Libby, the rising torch singer on Broadway, married Reynolds, he died of a gunshot wound in the head. The shooting followed a party at the family home in Winston-Salem. Libby was indicted for murder, then suddenly the charges were dropped. The case never went to trial, but made the headlines of newspapers across the country. The question still remains — did Reynolds kill himself or did Libby shoot him?

Now years later, Perry has uncovered one very important piece of evidence, the private transcript of the secret inquest following the shooting. This evidence, combined with further research and interviews, has produced a remarkable story of the legendary singer.

William Hanchett revives another murder from the pages of history in "The Lincoln Murder Conspiracies." He presents an account of the hatred felt by many Americans for President Abraham Lincoln during the Civil War and examines the many theories, hypotheses and speculations put forth since 1865 concerning those presumed to have aided, abetted, controlled or directed the murderous act of John Wilkes Booth in Ford's Theater the night of April 14.

For more than a century people have been devising conspiracy theories to explain Lincoln's assassination. Hanchett unravels the tangle of misconceptoms and false ideas to present Lincoln's murder as the political finale to the Civil War.

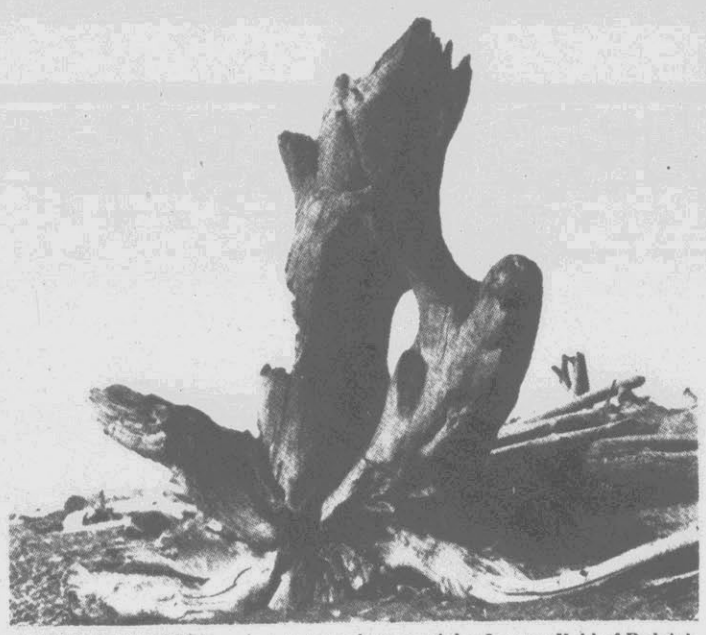

With precision and humor he attempts to put previous theories to rest and set the record straight.

IT WENT PLACES — Six cents in U.S. postage paid for a lot of traveling and numerous attempts to locate the addressee of this letter. Mailed Feb. 13, 1958, from San Francisco to Maj. James E. Nitch at the Pentagon in Washington, D.C., the letter followed Nitch, who had left Washington in early February for an overseas assignment in Japan. Since the major took leave before arriving in Japan, the postal services there, under military postal regulations, made extensive attempts to locate the addressee. After 15 attempts through Central Directory and area directories, the letter reached Nitch on April 2, 1958, the day after he reported in to Hq USARISC, Camp Zama, Japan. It also bears a post office offical seal stamp (center, top and bottom) to show the letter was received in damaged condition at the 7th Base Post Office.

After Blackout Years, Tina Turner Returns

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Tina Turner, on the threshold of stardom again after her traumatic split in 1976 from husband and partner Ike, gave a hearty guffaw and talked about those years.

They were a "total blackout," she said, and it's taken that long to pay off the debts she ran up when she walked out on Ike in Dallas after one fight too many. She had only the clothes she was wearing, 35 cents in her pocket and a gasoline charge card.

"I'm finally back in the black," she said in a recent interview in the elegant marble and glass drawing room of the exclusive St. James' Club off London's Piccadilly.

And, she said, "There's no hard feelings."

Tina, now a feline 45, has a hot single out — Al Green's classic, "Let's Stay Together." It's fast climbing the charts. She's also made a sexy video of the tune for Music Television in the United States.

But she got nothing in her divorce from Ike after 16 years of marriage and stardom as the wild lady of soul. She gave Turner everything: royalties, tapes and property. The judge thought she was nuts. The guitarist had discovered her when she was 17 singing in St. Louis nightclubs.

She had to start again from scratch to repay the promoters of shows that had been scrapped when she walked out.

After the split, she tried cabaret. But that was too stifling for her high-energy, gutbucket style. She got a band together and went back on the road, working the cheap joints and putting the pieces back together.

"Starting over on my own was rough," she said. "People didn't think I could do it without Ike. He'd controlled everything.

"But this time, I was doing it for me. The first four years, I was ... working small clubs, that sort of thing. Promotors just didn't believe I'd be a draw on my own."

There were a few bad places, she said, and she knew she'd make a few mistakes. But she didn't mind.

"I knew I'd learn from them," she said. "I had a dream and it brought me back to life. I wasn't going to be beaten."

Promoters tried to get her into black leather and be more sexually explicit. But she refused. "I like it nice 'n' rough, but they wanted more," she said.

The turning point came in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in 1977. She went on as the opening act for The Four Seasons. Soon, the offers were better.

Two years ago, Rod Stewart invited her to join his Christmas special in Los Angeles, beamed by satellite around the world, and she blew him off the stage. The Earth Mother was back.

Her solo career really took off last year when she toured Europe and Britain. Her first hit, "Let's Stay Together," was recorded with Heaven 17, a British band.

She made a triumphant return to London last December. Her dynamic stage act, all raunch, slit skirts, wild wigs and sizzling sexuality, won raves.

Now she's about to start a 26-city British tour and will issue a new single this month — a vamp version of the Beatles song, "Help." She'll also record an album with her five-man band and two backup singers.

"I'm really singing so much better these days," she said. "With Ike, the key was always too high, the tempos too fast. Now I'm doing it my way."

She enthuses about British musicians, a love affair that goes back to 1966 when Rolling Stones superstar Mick Jagger invited the Turners to tour with them in the United States.

"The musicians here have a real feel for black music," said Miss Turner, who is black. "It's a gut feeling. As soon as I get together with musicians here, there's an instant connection."

When she's not on the road, which isn't often, Miss Turner lives alone in a 10-room, plant-filled house in California with a pool — "my little luxury" — and a cat named Maxie.

She says she ditches the wigs, putters around the garden and meditates. A few years back, she gave up the Baptist religion pounded into her as little Annie Mae Bullock in Nutbush, Tenn., and became a Buddhist.

That's light years from the image of the dervish-dancing predator — the embodiment of every man's fantasy — that she gives on stage.

"I'm not shy," she said ingenuously. "My stage act isn't me necessarily. It's just what I do. I'm a loner. I don't need to be surrounded by people. I have relationships, but nothing too serious."

She says she's not looking to get married again. "I'm finally independent and free," she said.

Winner In N.C. Opera Auditions

Carla Connors was chosen as a winner in the North Carolina District Metropolitan Opera Auditions held Feb. 11 in Winston-Salem. Miss Connors, a soprano, will now advance to the regional auditions in Atlanta on Feb. 25 where she will compete with 13 singers for the chance to sing in the semi-finals at a later date in New York.

Miss Connors, a private voice teacher, is currently working on a doctoral degree in vocal performance from the University of Michigan, where she received her masters degree. Her husband, Timothy Hoekman, teaches piano and accompanying at the School of Music, East Carolina University.

Winner of the 1982 University of Michigan Concerto Competition, Miss Connors sang the role of Susanna in the university's production of "The Marriage of Figaro." In 1982, she also performed the role of Anne in "The Rake's Progress" under the direction of the film director Robert Altman. She has sung the role of Rosalinda in "Die Fledermaus" with the Michigan Opera Theater, and has performed in several other operatic roles.

NEW YORK (AP) — An exhibition celebrating three centuries of Irish life in New York City and the 200th anniversary of the Society of the Friendly Sons of Saint Patrick in New York is on display at the New-York Historical Society through April 1.

Seeking Personnel For Elizabeth II

RALEIGH — Elizabethan mariners and colonists to work at North Carolina's newest state historic site are needed for employment from about June 23 until Sept. 3. Requirements for applicants are a flair for the dramatic, a vivid imagination, the ability to learn a new language, (Elizabethan English), and a willingness to climb into the rigging of a 16th century sailing vessel.

This covers in general what the staff of the Elizabeth II State Historic Site will be seeking in persons to work in Manteo this summer during the celebration of America's Four Hundredth Anniversary.

The site will use a technique called "living history" to give visitors an understanding of life on board during the Roanoke Voyages. Visitors will be able to talk to the mariners and colonists as if they had just arrived in the new world. Not only will the shipboard interpreters speak and dress like Elizabethans, but they will perform daily tasks to give visitors an idea of how the vessel worked.

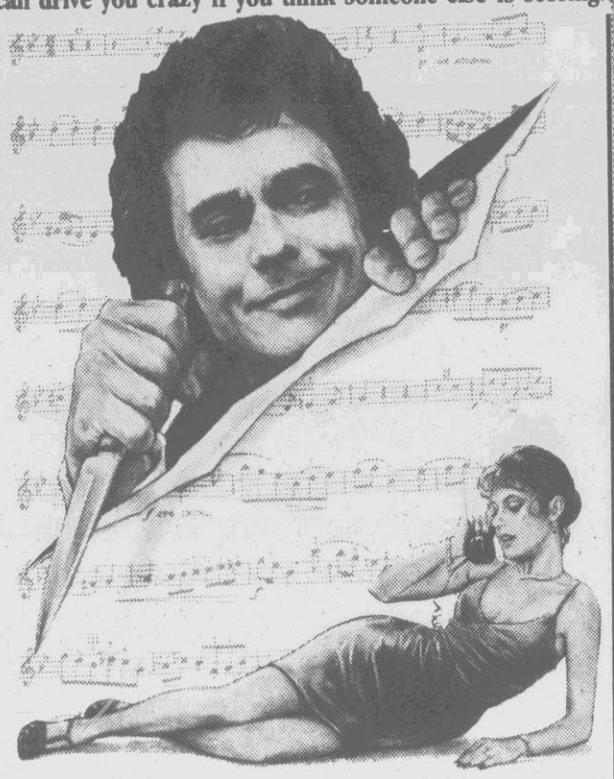

To find interpreters for these summer shipboard roles, the staff of the Elizabeth II will hold open interviews in Manteo on March 3. Since the ship which originally made the voyages had an all male crew, the shipboard interpreters will consist of men only.

A female history interpreter will help greet visitors before they arrive at the ship, and the staff will be interviewing candidates for this position as well as for the eight men.

For more details, call the Elizabeth II site manager at 473-5522.

Free Performance By National Opera

The National Opera Company will make its annual visit to East Carolina University Friday in a free performance of the Rossini comedy, "The Italian Girl in Algiers," in ECU's A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall at 8 p.m.

The 10 principal singers will be accompanied by members of the East Carolina University Orchestra. The opera, under the direction of company music director Don Wilder, was staged by William Beck of the North Carolina School of the Arts. It will be sung in English.

The story deals with a search by a beautiful Italian lady for her shipwrecked lover. She is captured by henchmen of Mustafa, the Bey of Algiers, who had just expressed his determination to secure "one of those fiery Italians" for his harem. The Italian girl is shocked to find the object of her search a prisoner in the household of the Bey, about to be married to the Bey's former wife who has been cast aside to make room for the newest harem acquisition — that fiery Italian woman.

Rossini introduced a number of innovations in opera — he substituted more musical numbers for the long recitatives; he followed Mozart's lead and gave leading roles to bass singers; he composed most of his prima donna parts for mezzo-soprano, and he wrote out the ornaments and embellishments for his arias, insisting the singers sing the written notes and not candenzi of their own choosing.

The National Opera Co. was founded in 1948 by the late A.J. Fletcher of Raleigh. The troupe recently returned from a tour of Midwestern and Southeastern United States.

Bath Recital

ECU News Bureau

Pianist Charles Bath, chairman of the East Carolina University School of Music keyboard faculty, will perform in recital Feb. 26 at 8:15 p.m. in the Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall.

Dr. Bath's program will include Haydn's "Variations in F Minor," the Chopin "Ballade in F Major," four preludes (Opus 23) by Rachmaninoff and a sonata by American impressionist composer Charles Griffes.

Now in his 18th year at East Carolina, Bath previously taught at Wichita State University and in the preparatory department of the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y. He has been piano soloist with several orchestras and has given piano and chamber music recitals throughout the United States.

The recital is free and open to the public.

CHARLOTTE CONCERT

CHARLOTTE — The final of three church programs given by the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra will be presented at 8 p.m. March 2 at the First United Methodist Church, 501 N. Tryon St., Charlotte.

ATW To Present 3 One-Act Plays

AYDEN — The Ayden Theater Workshop (ATW) will present a change-of-pace production scheduled to open at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 1 for three performances — the other two at 8 p.m. Saturday and at 2 p.m. Sunday, all in the Ayden-Grifton High School Auditorium. Admission is by season ticket or by individual tickets purchased at the door prior to the performance hour.

Three one-act plays will be presented, with three first-time directors on the scene.

The opening play, Richard Lortz' "Voices" is being directed by Don Watson, whose acting work with ATW includes an appearance as the mad Russian in "See How They Run."

This will be followed by Laurence Osgood's "Pigeons," to be directed by Winki Phillips. She is a veteran actor in ATW productions, including her performance in the title role in "Mame."

Mitchell Riggs, a senior at Ayden-Grifton High School, has just received notification of acceptance to the North Carolina School of the Arts for 1984-85. Mitchell has been in ATW shows since he was 12, and will be directing Edward Albee's "The Sandbox."

Each of the plays deal with different, yet provocative views of human relations — manipulation, aging, grief, dying — as well as humor, mystery and pathos.

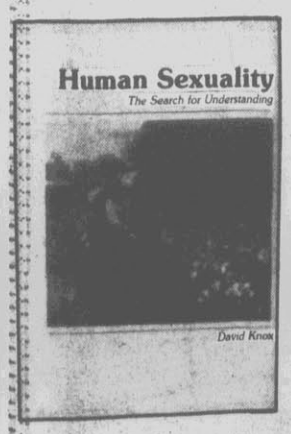

An added point of interest in the production of these three one-act plays will be an opportunity for the audience to interact with the directors and cast at the final curtain — to share their thoughts and questions on human conditions as portrayed by the actors in the plays.

ATW, a theater group comprised both of students at Ayden-Grifton and members of the community and area, is funded by the town of Ayden, the Grassroots Program of the North Carolina Arts Council, and the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

Duo Recital In Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — Toccatas and Flourishes, an organ and trumpet duo, will be in performance Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Martin County Auditorium on the campus of Williamston High School. This is the final Martin County Community Concert Association offering for the 1983-84 season.

Organist Richard Morris, from Atlanta, has appeared in recital at Carnegie Hall, at Lincoln and Kennedy Centers and on NBC television. Trumpeter Raymond Mase, a native of Meriden, Conn., is a member of the American Brass Quintet and the American Symphony Orchestra. He has performed with the Boston Pops, and serves on the faculty of several schools, including the North Carolina School of the Arts.

The two are currently on a winter tour that extends from British Columbia to Florida.

Tickets will be available at the door prior to the 8 p.m. performance hour. Also, season memberships for 1984-85 can be purchased at Tuesday night's concert.

The first news sheet in English, printed in England, appeared in 1621. It had no name but is generally considered the beginning of English journalism.

ECU Black Students Gave Performances

ECU News Bureau

Six black students in the East Carolina University School of Music presented local programs to commemorate February as Black History Month.

Performers were pianist-bassist Val Parker of Kinston; sopranos Paula Jones of Fayetteville, Daphne Dunston of Washington, D.C., and Tremaine Waddell of Wilmington, and tenors Anthony Jackson of Washington, D.C., and Charles Maxwell of Raleigh.

Their program of early black religious music was presented at Mendenhall Student Center on Jan. 29 to inaugurate ECU's annual Black Arts Festival, and at Wellcome Middle School Feb. 13 as part of the school's Black History Month observance. This performance was arranged by Regina Scott, Wellcome's media coordinator.

'Tannhaeuser' Airs Saturday

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Wagner's music drama, "Tannhaeuser," will be broadcast live from the Metropolitan Opera House beginning at 1:30 p.m. Saturday over WITN Radio, 930 on the radio dial. The Saturday live broadcasts of opera are sponsored by the Texaco Co.

The "Tannhaeuser" cast includes Teresa Zylis-Gara as Elizabeth; Tatiana Troyanos as Venus; Richard Cassilly in the title role; Allan Monk as Wolfram; and John Macurdy as Landgrave. Jemes Levine conducts the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra.

Five ECU Dance Performances Scheduled

GREENVILLE — A varied program of modern, ballet and jazz dance will be presented by The East Carolina Dance Theater on Feb. 24-25 and again Feb. 27-29 at 8:15 p.m. in McGinnis Theater on the ECU campus in Greenville.

Members of the ECU dance faculty have choreographed eight pieces to music ranging from traditional bluegrass to Gregorian chants, contemporary jazz and electronic forms.

Of the eight dances, two will be performed to original scores: "Crooked Sky" choreographed by Patricia Weeks, and "Why ..." choreographed by Jerome Jenkins.

"Crooked Sky" got its name from an old American Indian term used to describe the rugged rocks in the Southwestern United States. Using that image, Dr. Otto Henry of the ECU School of Music composed the music, and Ms. Weeks set the dance in architectual terms using angular shapes and designs. According to Ms. Weeks, "My inspiration actually came from the years I spent in Utah, and the intricate designs I saw in the rocks of that region. As I worked on the choreography, I began to see the dancers moving like the wind and water, carving patterns in the sandstone."

"Why ..." is dedicated to the wives and families of the Marines just recently killed in Lebanon and shows the strengths of women — how they communicate support for one another without the use of words, only feelings. The music for this piece was composed by Sara Otto of the University of Iowa, and is the result of inspiration she received from Jerome Jenkins' dancing.

Other dances to be presented include a rousing, foot-stomping barn dance, "Down the River and Up the Creek," choreographed by Patricia Pertalion. With a cast of eight women and six men, it is divided into five sections using music of the old-time bluegrass genre.

"Moods of Jami," choreographed by Mavis Ray, is an energetic piece using some of the more famous music of famed composer Scott Joplin; "Let Perpetual Light Shine," by choreographer Pat Downey-Kuhn, is an unusual dance adapted to Gregorian chants.

In its entirety, the production will feature some 45 dancers from the ECU Department of Theater Arts. Selected pieces have been scheduled to go on tour of eastern North Carolina in early March.

Reserved tickets are on sale at the McGinnis Theater Box Office, corner of Fifth and Eastern streets in Greenville. The Box Office is open each weekday from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Reservations may also be made by calling 757-6390.

'Joseph' Play Set For Raleigh

RALEIGH — "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," based on the story of Joseph in the Old Testament, will be presented in Memorial Auditorium, Raleigh Feb. 22-23.

The musical is by composer Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice, who also created the Broadway hits "Jesus Christ Superstar" and "Evita."

Performances each day will be at 8 p.m. Ticket information and reservations are available by calling the North Carolina State Universtiy Center Stage Box Office at 753-3104 weekdays from 10 to 6.

Blacks Pioneered In Scientific Discoveries

PERFORMED HEART SURGERY ... WORKED AT FOREFRONT ... Ernest Everett Just worked at the forefront of marine biology in the 1920, but the widespread atmosphere of racism and other experiences drove him to a self-imposed exile in Europe. With the spread of Nazism and Facism, he returned in 1940 to the United States, where he died a year later. (Smithsonian News Service Photo courtesy of the Oxford University Press)

WASHINGTON — Fact, some say, is often more interesting than fiction. Certainly the facts surrounding Benjamin Banneker's life prove that point. In Revolutionary Era America, Banneker, a tobacco farmer and the son and grandson of freed African slaves, left an important mark on the world of science. He was the first of his race to contribute to science at a time when most American blacks were relegated to slavery.

Despite racial obstacles and discrimination, many blacks expanded Banneker's legacy with impressive scientific achievements: pioneering work in open-heart surgery, advances in agricultural chemistry, research leadilng to the development of blood plasma and blood banks and important work in cell biology, to name a few.

Banneker, however, "was probably the first black man of science in the modern world", says Silvio Bedini, historian and keeper of rare books at the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C. Bedini's book, "The Life of Benjamin Banneker," clarifies some of the misconceptions about the man.

"People have overlooked his true achievements," Bedini says. For instance, in Banneker's 1791 work with Maj. Andrew Ellicott to map out the boundary of the Federal territory, now the District of Columbia, "Banneker was not a surveyor and did not work in the field."

Indeed, at the age of 60 and in poor health, Banneker was prevented from such vigorous activity. Instead, using the most sophisticated instruments of his day, he maintained a field observatory clock, making the astronomical observations necessary for establishing latitude and longitude lines for what became the nation's capital. "This was a far greater achievement", Bedini says.

Another myth about Banneker is that he worked with Pierre-Charles L'Enfant to draft the actual plans for the city of Washington. Some stories have even suggested that, when the Frenchman was fired from the project for insubordination, Banneker reproduced the complex plans from memory. Bedini says these stories are completely unfounded.

Banneker particularly enjoyed arithmetic, and, at age 22, he built a clock, without ever having seen one. For him, working out the ratios of gears and wheels was a mathematical exercise. The finished timepiece, which made him somewhat of a celebrity among neighbors in the region, was still working when he died more than 40 years later.

In 1788, Banneker, then 58, began to study astronomy. He had watched with fascination the nightly observations of the stars by his young friend and neighbor, George Ellicott, and was delighted when Ellicott loaned him books as well as instruments, promising to instruct him in their use.

When business demands delayed Ellicott, Banneker taught himself the difficult astronomical and mathematics texts. In fact, he caluclated the ephemerides — positions of celectial bodies — for a series of almanacs, a project that would tax the best student of the subject. The almanacs bearing his name, were widely distributed in the United States as well as in England between 1792 and 1797, their publication supported by the abolitionist societies of Maryland and Pennsylvania.

Banneker, Bedini says, "was in no way oppressed by his color and circumstances." Because his parents were industrious, he lived comfortably on the farm they established in Maryland, his freedom guaranteed by their legal status as landowners.

Other black scientists were not as fortunate. George Washington Carver, for instance, was born a slave in rural Missouri in 1860. His owner and foster father, Moses Carver, recognized his quick mind and sent the young Carver to an all-black, one-teacher school. In high school, Carver performed brilliantly. He applied to Highland University in Kansas and was immediately accepted with a scholarship. But when he arrived at the school, an indignant university official turned him away because he was black.

Undaunted, Carver eventually enrolled at Simpson College in Iowa, then transferred to the Iowa Agricultural College, where in 1896 he earned a master's degree in agriculture. By this time, Carver's work in plant pathology led to his discovery of plant fungi, particularly a species then unknown in the United States that attacked maple trees.

Booker T. Washington, noted black educator and one of the few black spokesmen then recognized by the white community, soon asked Carver to accept a teaching and research position at Tuskeegee Institute in Alabama, where Washington was president. Carver accepted and was appointed director of agriculture and of a research and experiment station — 20 acres of impoverished soil.

Carver and his students, however, immediately planted nitrogen-fixing cow peas, a legume that re-enriches soil. A few crops later, he harvested an astonishing amount of cotton from the same plot of land. Farmers began seeking his advice. Carver's message to them: Rotate your crops and consider new crops — such as the peanut, for which Carver developed many marketable uses. That would benefit the soil and make money, too.

Carver, sheltered in a black institution, was able to do his work despite the Jim Crow laws imposed in the late 1870s after the end of the Reconstruction Period. But those laws of racial segregation inhibited many others, and over the years reinforced racial prejudice in the white community. By the 1920s and '30s, racism had become institutionalized — "a psychological set", says Kenneth Manning, author of Black Apollo of Science: The Life of Ernest Everett Just,(Oxford University Press, 1983).

Just was a case in point. Born in 1883 in Charleston, S.C., he started life in an atmosphere of poverty, disease and death. Most white doctors would not treat poor blacks, and as an infant, Just lost a brother and sister to cholera and diptheria. When he was almost 4, his father died from alcoholism.

Somehow, Just's mother, Mary, rose above the tragedies in her life to become the founder of a new black community in Charleston and to push young Just towards an education.

Eventually, he studied at Dartmouth and at the University of Chicago, where he earned a doctoral degree. By the 1920s, Just was working at the forefront of marine biology. His work centered on the fundamental role of the cell surface in the development of organisms.

Like many blacks at the time, Just didn't suffer one major incident or series of incidents of racism; rather, racism was an overall influence on his life and work. At the prestigious Marine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass., where Just spent summers doing research, his family was clearly unwelcome. At Howard University (now a leading black university) in Washington, D.C., where Just spent the academic year, conditions in terms of funding for his research and the university's general academic standards, became so frustrating that he exiled himself to France in 1938. There he hoped attention would be focused on his work. But the Nazi invasion of France in 1940 forced his return to the United States. He died one year later.

As a biologist, "Just wasn't moved by eugenics" — the study of hereditary influence on human ability — according to Manning. Just did, however, demonstrate the importance of environment on the development of an organism, and that, Manning notes, was "a small attack on genetic determinism". This was a belief which, because it could be stretched to imply that an individual's abilities and place in society were determined by his or her genetic makeup, was often used to support racism.

One historian has referred to Just's experiences as "eerily contemporary".

Moreover, Manning says, "There is still no great representation of blacks in the sciences." While the actual number of blacks in higher education and the sciences has increased, the percentage of blacks participating in the sciences has not significantly increased since 1970, according to the Scientific Manpower Commission in Washington, D.C.

Efforts are being made, however, to increase black representation. The Marine Biological Laboratory, for instance, recently created the E.E. Just Fellowships in biology to encourage black participation there, and other programs across the country are aimed at involving blacks and other minorities in the sciences at all age levels.

Still, examples from history of courage, perseverence and achievement can enlighten and inspire. Dr. Daniel Hale Williams, for example, helped pioneer open-heart surgery in 1893. At a time when any surgery was risky at best, Williams entered the heart region of a stabbing victim and repaired the pericardial sac. Or consider Dr. Charles R. Drew — a leader in research on blood plasma in the 1940s and carried out research on the methods necessary for creating blood banks. Ironically, Drew resigned as president of the New York City office of the American Red Cross when U.S. military officials insisted — and the Red Cross agreed — that blood being sent to soldiers fighting in World War II be separated according to race.

Dr. Montague Cobb, 70, a retired professor of anatomy at Howard University, knew Drew, Just and other distinguished black scientists. He remembers the last years of the Jim Crow era. "The generation to which I belong was like the offensive line on a football team", Cobb says. Members of that generation and other black scientists before and after them brought down barriers and created "holes" that provided room for more blacks and other minorities to participate in science.

But, Cobb says, "We don't have enough fast backs, and we need them to run through the holes because they won't stay open indefinitely."

Dreams And Nightmares Reflected In Art Of The 20th Century

Text By David M. Maxfield,

Smithsonian News Service

"In the early 20th century, the vision of a future society (was) unbelievably rich, leisured, orderly and efficient — a glittering antiseptic world of glass and steel and snow-white concrete.

"But the ideal set up by the party was something huge, terrible and glittering — a world of ... monstrous machines and terrifying weapons, a nation of warriors and fanatics ... all thinking the same thoughts." George Orwell, "1984"

Orwell's dire predictions for 1984 may still be just nightmarish fiction, but from the turn of the century through the 1920s, there were scores of intellectuals, writers and artists who actually did draft blueprints for a utopian world of the future.

There were all sorts of idealistic scenarios and plans, among them manifestos for spiritual fulfillment, drawings for wondrous cities and an architectual model for a great thrusting tower to be built in Moscow, challenging the Russian people to create a shiny new world. Like Utopia itself, it has never been built.

Not only in Russia but throughout Europe, many artists were convinced that the time was right for constructing a more perfect civilization, and indeed, it seemed that Americans, guided by their optimistic expectations, were building just such a society.

Yet in the wake of events of the past 50 years, and now at a time when Westerners look negatively at world-saving schemes, that earlier goal seems a fantasy. "We have become so accustomed to considering the ideas of utopian dreamers as naive, or potentially dangerous, that we find it difficult to understand their commitment, their enthusiasm," says Valerie Fletcher, author of "Dreams and Nightmares: Utopian Visions in Modern Art" and the curator of a related exhibition at the Smithsonian's Hirshorn Museum.

These visionary artists and thinkers lived in a era of great advances — and easy confidence — in science, technology and industry. It was a hopeful period when Europeans, looking for relief from time-worn customs and political headaches, thought they could see ahead to a world of dynamism, precision, order, abundance, cleanliness and efficiency.

Even four years of blood and tears on European battlefields did not stifle the hope. By the time war broke out, a generation of young European artists was convinced that a revolution of values was needed to wipe away the old imperial powers that had harshly and selfishly ruled on the Continent. "Dreams of a new era for mankind not only survived the war, they were fueled by it," Fletcher says. For many, it was the "war to end all wars."

The hope was nurtured by the Russian Revolution, which had shown that an ancient repressive regime could be overturned, and by the founding of Germany's Weimar Republic in 1919 with its promise of progressive reforms. The Hungarian artist Laszlo Moholy-Nagy spoke for many when he said: "Utopia, that is the goal of truly living men, that is the idea for which one (longs) to die ..."

In that era of hope, utopian goals ranged from spiritual ideals to practical concerns. Such artists as Kasimir Malevich in Russia, Wassily Kandinsky in Germany and Piet Mondrian in Holland distrusted modern materialism. They set their sights on a more profound (and difficult to define) spiritual awareness that, in Kandinsky's words, would "lead us into the realms of tomorrow." Mondrian's now-famous horizontal and vertical line arrangements were designed, that artist once explained, "to bring to fore the inner harmony of all life."

On the concrete level,there were artists who set to work to create new architectural environments for humanity as it supposedly struggled for perfection. In America, especially, some argued that the new art should reflect the power of assembly lines and steps toward standardization because these promised a life of plenty. Thus, the painter Louis Lozowick contended that art could reveal to the public the geometric beauty of new factories and urban centers.

"Beneath all the apparent chaos and confusion," he wrote, is "order and organization which find their outward signs and symbols" in the verticals of smokestacks, the squares of streets, the arcs of bridges, the cylinders of gas tanks.

"Artists who espoused geometric abstraction," Fletcher points out, "believed that if people could learn to perceive logical relationships, they would apply these qualities to life and recreate the world on a more reasoned and cooperative foundation."

The fascination of the utopian artists with science and technology extended even to making man himself over into a machinelike image. The idea of man-as-machine, Fletcher notes, was intended as a positive analogy: If man would evolve and develop to be as logical, rational and productive as machines, he presumably would be better off.

This "new man" fascinated many artists. In 1931, Oskar Schlemmer created a shining version of a 10-foot relief figure cast in nickel-plated steel wire and zinc. The man of metal was decidely humanistic when contrasted with the vision of F.T. Marinetti, a poet, who argued that "nothing was more beautiful than a great humming central electric station." He prophesied an inevitable merger of man and machine, "a constant interchange of intuition, instinct and metallic discipline."

Some utopian artists even planned to make over the natural landscape. Artist Giacomo Balla envisioned an artificial garden of colorful, abstract flowers, their forms implying, Fletcher notes, "an altogether new nature over which man exercised control."

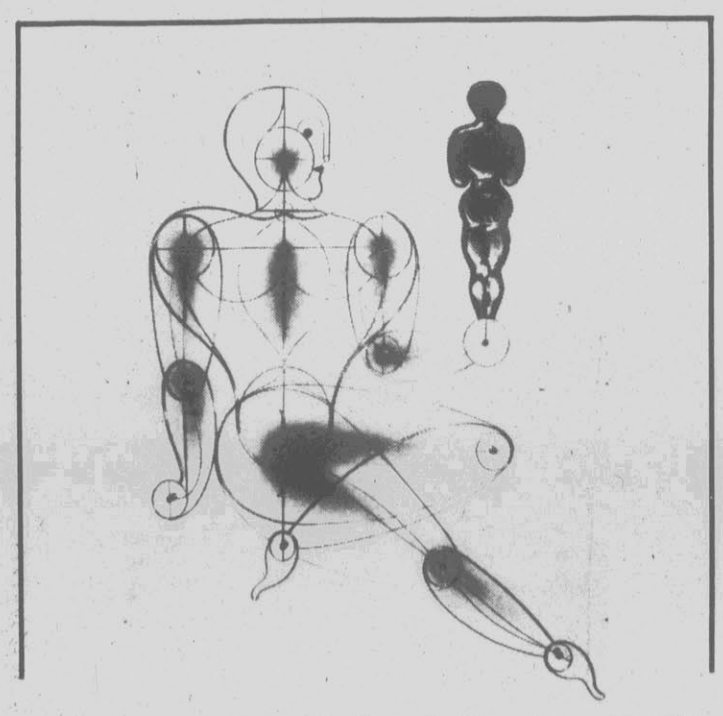

The centerpiece of many utopian plans called for the creation of new cities. Italian artist Antonio Sant'Elia foresaw fantastic, soaring structures linked underground by swiftly moving pavements. American artists imagined crisp, clean cities and industrial sites, while some Germans planned spectacular, colored-glass architecture — glittering jewels — that would also provide emotional and spiritual beauty.

This vision was soon shattered. By the 1930s, the road to Utopia began to be littered by nightmare realities — first by the turmoil of worldwide depression and Hitler's rise to power, then by bloody purges of Stalinism that soured Soviet idealism. Next came the horrors of World War II, the cruel heritage of the atomic bomb, spirit-deadening Cold War and the international troubles that rage today.

Inevitably, questions arose in the artistic and intellectual community: This Utopia, would it be such a perfection after all? Were the proposed cures for society's ills not far worse than the disease? If society went down the road of ultrapowerful government, behavioral modification, a controlled economy, the primacy of science and technology, the creation of a machinelike "new man," would there be happiness — or slavery — at road's end?

The warnings of a failed future came as early as the 1920s. The artist George Grosz was caught up in the dream of a utopian society when the German revolution broke out after World War I. He joined the Communist Party, but by the middle of the decade he was disenchanted with its authoritarianism. When Hitler rose to power, Grosz immigrated to the United States, confessing to "unbelief in any form of progress ... I have no more illusions." Later, in the painting "The Pit," he depicted a totally nightmare world, a burning city in a great hole overrun by rats, a world without focus or reason.

Portrayals of both dreams and nightmares are extremes, Fletcher suggests. But artists must continue to dream dreams, and visualize nightmares, in order to raise valid questions about society, she says. "Without them, the world would be a poorer place."

DREAMS GONE ASTRAY ... In the early 20th century, many artists envisioned a more perfect future world: dynamic, orderly, clean, efficient. But these dreams turned into nightmares in the wake of world depression, war and the atomic bomb. Typical of the dream aspect in 20th century art is Oskar Schlemmer's "Homo," painted in 1931.

Housing Space Is At A Premium In Bustling Activity Of Hong Kong

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

If you have noticed that Hong Kong seems to be in the news more often these days, you are correct.

The lease by which Great Britain continues to oversee Hong Kong is due to expire in 1997. As a result, the future of the area is unclear at present. It is possible Hong Kong will become a division of the People's Republic of China, under terms which remain to be worked out.

Meanwhile, its 5.2 million residents wait and wonder about the future of what is said to be one of the world's busiest and fastest-paced cities.

Most local residents are carrying on as usual, though some professionals are leaving the colony to establish themselves in the United States and other countries, according to Dr. Philip Chi Kuon Kwok, chairman of Wing On Holdings Ltd., which owns one of the colony's largest department store chains.

Recently in New York to promote Hong Kong's foreign trade with the United States as part of an economic mission, Kwok offered an interesting picture of what life is like for ordinary residents especially regarding home and home furnishings buying decisions.

The department stores his family runs, which were founded by his grandfather in 1907, sell home furnishings in one main store and six branches.

Becoming an adult — even getting married — does not necessarily mean an individual will move out of the parental home. Young people must often wait until they can find a place to live, he said, and housing is expensive and scarce.

Housing is a major preoccupation of the government; about 35,000 housing units are constructed each year under government sponsorship, mainly in high-rise buildings. According to Kwok, perhaps as much as half of the population is housed in such buildings.

Since space is at a premium, most apartments are very small. As a result, local residents tend to favor lightly-scaled, Scandinavian-style modern furniture which can hold many belongings in a small space and which can be added to in modular units as possessions increase.

As in Europe, residents of the apartments are expected to furnish their own appliances and fixtures, although some apartments do come with equipped kitchens.

Nevertheless, many buy kitchen appliances which are imported mainly from Japan. These tend to be both smaller and less expensive than in the United States. A refrigerator, stove or dishwasher might cost between $150 and $200 and is consequently more affordable than in the United States.

Hong Kong is a free port and there are few excise taxes and no sales tax. Many goods are imported, said the executive, including most of the merchandise on sale at his company's stores.

The territory itself lives by exporting goods. Hong Kong is the largest exporter in the world of clothes, toys and watches and is now engaged in an attempt to increase its home furnishings exports.

Tourism is also an important industry, since more than 2 million foreign visitors come to Hong Kong each year, said Kwok.

The locality has a reputation for being even faster paced than New York. According to Kwok, this is a well-deserved reputation.

Nevertheless, he added, many urban-based Americans would feel at home in the territory since the brands found in the stores and styles of life are similar to those in large cities in the United States. There are, for example, about 30,000 street vendors, Kwok said.

As in the United States, when one first moves into a new home, one is likely to visit local stores to buy housewares, dishes, furniture and other necessities.

There are many small stores in Hong Kong, which compete briskly for business. As a result, markups on home furnishings products are lower than they might be in the United States. It is typical to mark up goods about 30 percent, whereas in the United States markups on home furnishings are often double the wholesale price.

Interior designers ply their trade in Hong Kong, as they do in the United States. However, most middle-income residents would be unlikely to use the services of a decorator. Nevertheless, a number of homes do not look too different from city apartments in New York or other large cities here.

Most people select Western style furnishings, said Kwok, because "the traditional Chinese furniture and accessories are just too expensive."

ON THE HOUSE

One of lacquer's advantages is also its biggest disadvantage. It dries very rapidly.

Because of this quality, lacquer was developed many years ago as a substitute for varnish, which usually required at least overnight drying before a second coat could be applied. Lacquer enabled professional wood finishers to put on several coats in a single day with special spraying equipment.

Since most do-it-yourselfers did not have first-class sprayers in the 1920s, when lacquer was formulated from various chemicals, nonprofessionals usually got poor results. Either their sprayers were not efficient enough or they applied the lacquer with a brush. Either way, the beautiful finishes seen on good furniture could not be achieved.

Things have changed somewhat. Over the years, manufacturers have turned out what are called brushing lacquers. They can be applied with brushes to produce excellent finishes, yet they require both knowledge and care to get such results. They may not dry as quickly as spray lacquer, but they still dry faster than other finishes.

The stroking, using a full brush, must be done evenly and rapidly without going back over the same areas. The lacquer is flowed on, not brushed back and forth. As soon as one section is covered, the bristles must be dipped into the lacquer and an immediate start made on the adjoining section, blending the second part into the edges of the first. This merger must be accomplished before the first section begins to set, which can be a matter of seconds.

If you have never worked with lacquer and plan to do so, practice with it a bit on scrap wood. Dilute the lacquer with 50 percent of lacquer thinner. If you don't, you might run into a thinner that is not completely compatible with the lacquer, resulting in a less-than-ideal finish. After a couple of practice runs, you will know whether to utilize the 50-50 combination or reduce the percentage of thinner.

As with any finishing material, what you do to it after the final coat has been applied will determine how well it looks and how durable it will be. You can sand it very lightly with a fine grade of "wet" sandpaper, using water as the lubricant or you can rub it with a fine grade of pumice powder and either water or oil.

For a high gloss, follow the pumice-water treatment with a rottenstone powder-water rubdown. Or you can simply use a rubbing compound. Waxing will help to preserve the finish.

When you purchase lacquer you intend to use with a brush, you will find the container label sometimes identifies it as brushing lacquer and sometimes doesn't. If the label does not make it clear which kind it is, ask the dealer. If he doesn't know or seems uncertain, buy a brand that makes the distinction.

In rubbing the surface of lacquer, whether with pumice or rottenstone, a felt pad is excellent. Always rub with the grain and apply only light pressure. This light pressure also goes for any sanding that is done, either between coats or on the final coat.

Lacquer can be bought in spray cans, which are especially good when finishing fairly small objects. If you buy and use one, carefully follow the instructions on the container's label. That goes whether you are using such a spray can for the first time or the 10th time, since different manufacturers use different formulas that require slight differences in usage.

After the final coat of lacquer, run your fingers over the surface lightly and you will be able to detect irregularities in the surface that will help you determine whether sanding is necessary. Even if the surface is very smooth, but you want a satiny rather than a glossy finish, the pumice rub is in order. The rottenstone rub is needed only if the pumice treatment has produced a finish that isn't glossy enough and you want to restore the gloss.

(The techniques of using lacquer, varnish, shellac, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743.)

Q. Should daffodils be fertilized in the spring? (R.E., Wingate)

A. Fertilize daffodils in the fall (about Nov. 15) and just as they begin to emerge in the spring with 8-8-8 fertilizer. Use three pounds of fertilizer per 100 square feet of bed. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticultural specialist)

Q. What are some sources of Oriental vegetable seeds? (E.W. Chapel Hill)

A. Oriental vegetables have become so popular that some of these are listed in the major seed catalogues. However, two firms that specialize in Oriental vegetables are: Tsang and Ma International, 15556 Laurel St., San Carlos, Calif. 94070 and Kitazawa Seed Co., 356 Taylor St., San Jose, Calif. 95110. (Larry Bass, extension horticultural specialist)

What is the difference between determinate and indeterminate tomatoes? (R.S., Saluda)

A. Determinate tomato vines are bushy and generally grow three to five feet when supported. The harvest period for this type vine is not very long because the fruit is set over a short period. Most of the fruit ripens at once. Determinate varieties tend to stop blooming after setting a heavy crop of fruit. However, if the plants are to be grown in containers or a new crop of transplants are to be grown in the fall garden, a determinate variety would be a good choice. Some determinate varieties are 'Bonus,' 'Walter,' 'Homestead' and 'Fantastic.' Indeterminate varieties have a longer blooming period and set smaller quantities of fruit over a longer time span. This bearing pattern makes indeterminate tomatoes the best choice if spring-planted tomatoes are to be carried over into the fall garden.

Teachers, Take Note!

National Newspaper in Education (NIE) Week is coming March 5-9, 1984. The Newspaper in Education program encourages the use of newspapers for a variety of educational purposes. National NIE Week emphasizes the importance of reading and writing and is a cooperative effort of the International Reading Association and newspapers.

Teachers, use ads, maps, graphs, and schedules to teach reading and math. Show students how to write news stories, editorials, ads, and reviews. Also have them write letters to the editor and use newspapers to update research projects. Ask them to discuss the judgments that are made in interviews and editorials. Most important, have them read daily to develop the habit of reading and to keep well informed.

Locally, THE DAILY REFLECTOR has an intensive NIE program complete with newsletters, student presentations, teacher workshops, tours, activity sheets and manuals, and an NIE lending library. To find out more about the NIE program at THE DAILY REFLECTOR, call 752-6166, ext. 312. Or write: NIE Coordinator, THE DAILY REFLECTOR, P.O. Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27835.

Seven Women Facing Death In Florida's Electric Chair

By WALTER PUTNAM
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A woman who claimed she had an affair with the doctor she shot, a battered wife convicted of murder in an alleged love triangle and a notorious "Ten Most Wanted" killer are among the handful of women who have been sentenced to the electric chair in Florida.

When Andrea Hicks Jackson was handed the death penalty Feb. 10 for the murder of a Jacksonville policeman, she became the seventh woman condemned to die in Florida since electrocution became the ultimate punishment in 1924.

Although 200 men have died in Florida's electric chair and 210 are on death row, no woman has been electrocuted in the state. The sentences of all but Mrs. Jackson were later commuted to life in prison.

Mrs. Jackson, 25, was convicted of shooting Officer Gary Bevel five times when he tried to arrest her May 17 for filing a false report on a vandalized car.

She joins eight other women among more than 1,200 condemned prisoners in the United States.

Two other women sentenced to die in Florida were named Jackson. Two of the other six were from Duval County, including the first, Bertha Hall.

Records on the women and their whereabouts are sketchy, but R.P. McLendon of Starke, a retired prison official and an authority on execution in Florida, said Andrea Hicks Jackson is the seventh to receive the death sentence.

Mrs. Hall was 23 when she and Gordon Denmark, 22, were sentenced Oct. 9, 1926 to die in the killing of her grocer husband, J.H. Hall.

Denmark at first told police Mrs. Hall plotted the murder, gave him a gun and plied him with liquor before the act so they could run away together.

By the time of the trial, both denied they had had a love affair. Witnesses backed up her claims that her husband had beaten her on numerous occasions and that she feared for her life.

Newspapers of the era said Mrs. Hall was the first woman sentenced to death in Florida. The death sentences of Mrs. Hall and Denmark were commuted in 1929 by the state pardon board.

Billie Jackson was sentenced in Duval County on Feb. 1, 1927 for the stabbing death of her roadhouse musician husband, Hugh.

Mrs. Jackson claimed her husband came at her with a gun after she told him she wanted a divorce. But a doctor said Jackson was stabbed while lying down.

When commuting her sentence seven months later, Gov. John W. Martin, the chairman of the pardon board, said testimony against Mrs. Jackson "was extenuating and there was some question as to whether the circumstances were such as to warrant the death penalty."

In Live Oak on Aug. 3, 1952, Ruby McCollum, the wife of an alleged gambling kingpin in Suwannee County, shot down Dr. C.L. Adams, a newly elected state senator, in his office.

The alleged motive was a squabble over a medical bill. Although the judge never allowed it to come out at trial, a book was written four years later that alleged Adams had fathered one of Mrs. McCollum's children. The book, "Woman in the Suwannee County Jail" by William Bradford Huie, was never sold in Florida because of its sensational nature.

Mrs. McCollum, now 73, spent two years in the jail awaiting death until the Florida Supreme Court reversed the sentence. She was sent to the state mental hospital at Chattahoochee before retrial and remained there 20 years before being released to her family and placed in a foster home near Silver Springs.

Irene Laverne Jackson, her son and another man were sentenced in Pasco County April 24, 1962 for murdering her husband, Johnnie, for insurance purposes.

Mrs. Jackson's sentence was reduced by the courts the following year. She was paroled in 1972 and discharged from the prison system in 1980, said David Skipper, a Corrections Department spokesman.

Still serving time at Broward Correctional Institution are Marie Dean Arrington and Sonia Jacobs.

Mrs. Arrington, 50, was sentenced Dec. 6, 1968 for murdering June Ritter, the secretary of the Lake County public defender.

State Attorney Gordon Oldham said Mrs. Arrington, out on appeal bond after a manslaughter conviction in the death of her husband, was seeking revenge against the public defender who unsuccessfully defended two of her children on felony charges.

Clad in pajamas and a housecoat, Mrs. Arrington escaped from the women's prison in Lowell the morning of March 1, 1969 by cutting through a heavy window screen.

She became the second woman ever to be named to the FBI's "Ten Most Wanted Fugitives" list since its inception in 1950.

Tar Heel Woman Won Fight To Get Social Security Benefits Restored

THOMASVILLE, N.C. (AP) — "They have put me through hell! They have really worried me to death."

Those are the words of Billie Sue Harp; a fragile, but fierce 52-year-old woman who recently won an appeal for Social Security disability benefits previously denied.

Like thousands of other disability recipients across the state and nation, Ms. Harp was removed from payment rolls in the federal government's attempt to cut beneficiaries. Like many of those who argued their case, she eventually was reinstated.

But not without reapplication and reconsideration for benefits, multiple physicla examininations by different physicians, court appeals, paperwork, anxiety, and a host of other inevitable personal responses accompanying a monetary waiting process of over a year.

Living in the Pilot community off old U.S. 29, on Route 1, Thomasville, Ms. Harp offers sympathetic encouragement for members of the support group which she heads. The group, called the North Carolina Concerned Organization, is one of the many statewide, non-profit organizations established to assist persons having difficulty obtaining Social Security benefits.

As a support group representative, Ms. Harp helps group members interpet correspondence from the state disability determination office, as well as from Social Security Administration headquarters in Baltimore. She has accompanied members for doctors appointments and, along with 242 others, signed petitions locally, demanding improved SSA regulations.

Of those signing the petitions between August and December 1983, Ms. Harp said 50 percent appealed their benefits denials and regained disability pensions. The other half, she said, has either been denied or is still in limbo, a place where many pensioners have found themselves since 1980, when Congress mandated an accelerated review process of disability rolls.

As a result of the congressional amendment, 701,451 persons nationwide were reviewed during the last fiscal year and 296,137 were terminated from SSA rolls.

Statewide for the same period, 19,722 persons were processed, resulting in a 28 percent, or 5,546-person cut from North Carolina's disability list.

The problem, though, is not so much the act of reducing the nation's 2.6 million disabled workers, as it is the process by which the cessation is being carried out.

Because of periodic reviews, many disabled persons have been eliminated, often having experienced no medicl improvement. Some have even died of their claimed ailment shortly after being dismissed from the rolls.

Based on some circumstances, governors of many states have attempted to rally against the federal regulations through moratoriums and class-action lawsuits, forcing Congress to take another look at the disability program.

Having been employed in public work since 1945, Ms. Harp had worked for five years at Pittsburgh Plate Glass in Lexington before doctors ruled her disabled in 1975. She had undergone numerous operations and had displayed problems with acute bronchitis and musculoskeletal impairment.

In March 1983, the Social Security Administration issued the North Carolina disability determination office orders to conduct a periodic review on Ms. Harp. She was denied benefits and appealed the decision.

The SSA ordered her to see a doctor of its choice for a series of tests and X-rays. She again was determined able to work, but appealed to an administrative law judge and was evaluated by a medical expert.

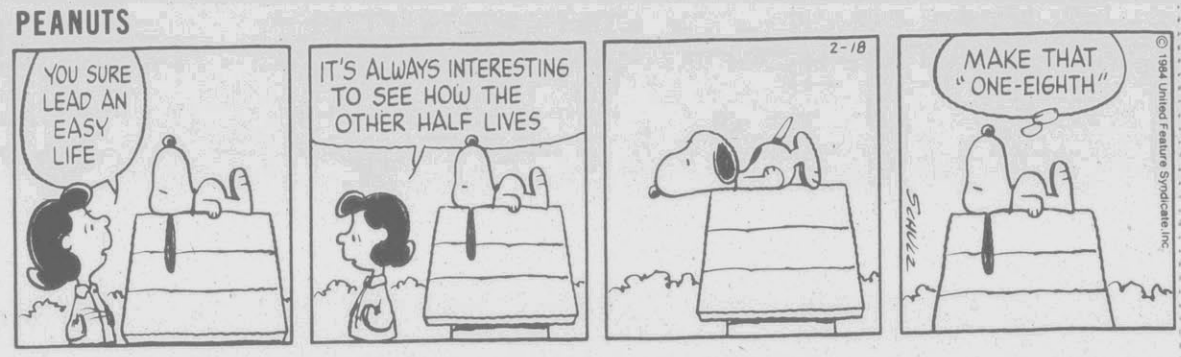

In November, she received a letter saying the administrative law judge, appointed to settle disputes before they reach the federal court system, had overturned the state's decision to deny disability payments. The decision finally was approved by national SSA office last month.

Although her own legal battle is over, Ms. Harp said it made her more aware of not only the drawn-out appeals process, but the efforts of others who were disabled and lost their benefits as well.

Ms. Harp said she encounters about one person per month who applies for disability without needing it, thinking it's a way to get easy money. She said she thoroughly "checks out" anyone she represents.

Ms. Harp said when she turns down members, it is because they do not have enough medically determinable disability to warrant benefits. Often, she said, the individual may possess "a good enough education," allowing them to easily move into a less difficult job position.

Soaring Hospital Bills Take Up 42 Percent Of Health Expenses

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

From aspirin at a few cents a pill to an operating room at a few hundred dollars an hour, America's hospital bill is soaring. It is rising faster than the rate of inflation and faster than the gross national product. It is even rising faster than the federal budget.

Hospital charges make up the biggest chunk of U.S. health care expenses — 42 percent, up from 30 percent in 1950. Hospital expenditures in 1982 were $135.4 billion, according to the Department of Health and Human Services. That's 35 times what they were in 1950.

A random check by The Associated Press of about half a dozen cities showed that a routine adult appendectomy cost anywhere from about $1,800 to $3,200, depending on where you are, how long you are hospitalized, how many tests and drugs are required and what the surgeon charges.

That total does not include the services of personal physicians; their fees are extra, usually based on the number of times they visit you in the hospital.

Since most hospital bills are paid by someone other than the patient — by commercial insurers or by the government through Medicare and Medicaid — many people have at best only a hazy idea of what they are spending.

Look at what has happened to hospital bills:

In 1950, they accounted for 1.4 percent of the GNP; in 1982, they accounted for 4.4 percent. The GNP itself grew elevenfold from 1950 to 1982, but hospital expenditures rose three times faster — multiplying by 35. Even the federal budget went up only half as fast as hospital costs.

From 1980 to 1982 alone, the over-all Consumer Price Index went up by 17 percent; the segment measuring hospital charges rose by 30 percent.

Where is the money going?

The AP decided to look at the bill for an appendectomy, a common operation that is fairly standard from patient to patient. It selected eight hospitals, picking small- to medium-sized communities instead of big cities where research facilities often attract more complicated cases. It chose non-profit hospitals in the general range of 100 to 200 beds, a typical size according to the American Hospital Association.

Hospital and health insurance representatives interviewed for the survey pointed out there were several factors to keep in mind when looking at a hospital bill.

— The charge on your bill represents not only the cost of your care, but also the cost of caring for other patients. Hospitals with a large number of charity cases often have higher charges because the paying patients — the ones covered by insurance — must underwrite the cost of the free care. The paying patients must also cover the difference between hospital costs and reimbursements by Medicare and Medicaid.

— The amount you are billed for an individual item probably doesn't reflect the cost of that particular item. George Maroney, administrator of Memorial Hospital, a 150-bed facility in Carbondale, Ill., said the real cost of taking care of a patient in a semi-private bed was much higher than the amount charged.

"If you charged the actual amount for that, room rates would be $350 or more and there would be a public outcry," Maroney said. "So you take some of the costs and shift them over, charge in other areas. For instance, charging $17 (more than the actual cost) for a CBC, a complete blood count. Most hospitals do it. You take the cost and spread it out..."

The practice of spreading out the cost is why you may be billed $1 or more for a pill you can buy at the drugstore for only a few cents.

— Expenses depend partly on your doctor. "We don't control what happens to the patient — the physician does," said Maroney. "We provide the services, but physicians order tests and procedures and determine how long patients stay. We're just carrying out the orders of physicians." Another administrator, Mike Mazzarella of Northern Dutchess Hospital in Rhinebeck, N.Y., explained that one appendectomy patient stayed only three days because "her surgeon is hip on early discharge."

The largest part of the hospital bill is often for the room. The AP found charges for a semi-private room ranged from $134 at Grace Hospital in Morganton, N.C., to $220 at St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Junction, Colo. The charge covered the bed, routine nursing care and meals. (The Health Insurance Association of America said that as of July 1982 the average daily charge for a semi-private room in U.S. hospitals was about $180.)

The typical appendectomy patient spends from three to five days in the hospital and from 30 minutes to an hour in the operating room.

Other charges on the bill include the recovery room (another half hour to an hour), anesthesia, intravenous fluids for nourishment after the operation, X-rays, blood and other laboratory tests, medical and surgical supplies like bandages and thermometers, and drugs, ranging from simple painkillers like aspirin to sophisticated medicines to prevent infection.

Many hospitals also offer what they call a "convenience kit," including basic toiletries like toothpaste, at a price of $5 to $10. In some cases, it's provided only if the patient asks; in other places, the kit — and the charge — are automatic.

Surgeons' and anesthesiologists' fees are generally billed separately; they contribute about $700 to $1,000 to the total cost.

— Bethania Regional Health Care Center, Wichita Falls, Texas: H.V. Kaufman, administrator at the 204-bed facility, said the average hospital charge for a routine appendectomy would be $1,300; the surgeon and anesthesiologist would add about $900. Kaufman did not provide a complete breakdown of the typical bill but said the cost of a semi-private room was $140 and the average patient stayed four days. A television is extra: $4 per day. The charge for the operating room for the hour-long surgery would be $237 an an hour in the recovery room is $75. A complete blood count is $16.75. Aspirin are 35 cents each. Minor medical and surgical supplies are included in the cost of the room.

— Riverside Hospital, Jacksonville, Fla: Phil Milhoan, a spokesman for the 183-bed facility said the average bill for a routine appendectomy was $2,469.73, not counting the surgeon's or anesthesiologist's fees which he could not provide. Milhoan gave these details: room charge, based on a daily rate of $146 (TV is optional at $3 per day) and an average stay of 3.5 days, $511; lab services, $394.40; X-ray, $41.40; operating room, $425; recovery room, $95; drugs, $418.07; operating room supplies, $291.40; drugs used by the anesthesiologist, $172.20; and miscellaneous supplies, $121.26.

Trio Passes Exams

Two assistant professors and one clinical instructor with the East Carolina University School of Medicine have passed the written and oral examinations of the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology.

Dr. Sudhakar Madakasira and Dr. Bruce R. Berger, both with the department of psychiatric medicine, became board certified in January of this year.

Dr. Judith Yongue, a clinical instructor and the first graduate of the department of psychiatric medicine's residency program to take the board exams, also became certified in January.

Madakasira, a graduate of Sri Venkateswara Medical College in Tirupati, India, has been with the school of medicine since August of 1981. Berger, a child psychiatrist and graduate of the University of Minnesota School of Medicine, joined the medical school in August 1983.

Passage of the boards certifies expertise in psychiatry and affords an individual the official professional recognition of his peers.

VICTORIAN PHOTOS

NEW YORK (AP) — With the invention of photography in the mid-19th century, a Victorian printer, Francis Frith, sold his business and set out to photograph the Middle East.

Frith soon became the first mass producer and distributor of photos used for framing, postcards and book illustrations. Sixty of these photographs, along with stereographs and books from the New York Public Library's collections, are on view at the library through April 20.

AUSTERITY ACTION

LONDON (AP) — The Conservative government says public spending will not exceed the inflation rate in the next three years so taxes can be reduced and public borrowing eliminated.

By and large, composers of chess and bridge problems are not among the world's greatest players. Perhaps the reason is that they are always looking for problem positions, rather than practical solutions. One notable exception to this rule, however, was the late Paul Lukacs. Not only was he a composer of many of the world's best single dummy problems, he also represented Israel in international competition.

This hand cropped up in the Trials to select Israel's team for the 1965 European Championships. There was nothing unusual about the final contract, and it was reached at most tables in the event on an auction such as the one shown above.

West led the queen of hearts, and declarer was faced with entry problems. He had to set up his diamond suit, while keeping East off lead in the process. In addition, he could not afford to cross to the table with a spade to lead a diamond from the board, because the defenders could win and knock out the ace of clubs, which would remove the entry to dummy's third spade.

So declarer ducked the opening lead and won the heart continuation. He cashed the king of spades and entered dummy with a spade to the queen. Now he led a low diamond from the table. Lukacs unhesitatingly jumped in with the queen!

Had East played low, declarer would have been able to pass the diamond to West. No return from West would have harmed him and, with diamonds breaking favorably, the contract would have sailed home. As it was, declarer had to capture the queen with the king, and now he had no entry back to his hand to make his long diamonds.

We have seen this type of play before, but invariably when the long suit has been on the board. Not many players would make it in this position, with the long suit concealed in declarer's hand.

Hamlin ages gracefully in 'Master of the Game'

By Peter Meade

In the miniseries "Master of the Game," based on Sidney Sheldon's novel, Harry Hamlin ages from 17 to 65. He hopes the nine-hour CBS production, airing on three consecutive evenings beginning Sunday, Feb. 19, will allow his acting career to flourish.

A youthful-looking 32-year-old, Hamlin still hasn't aged enough facially to advance past being considered for juvenile roles. Yet playing the character of Tony Blackwell, an artist with a stutter in "Master of the Game," required specific preparation.

"The aging was no problem, but Tony does a lot of things I don't do," says Hamlin. "So I hired a speech therapist to help with his stuttering and I worked with a painter."

Hamlin spent 10 days in a Canadian cabin perfecting his brush strokes. When he returned to Los Angeles he didn't bring back any canvases and he never did show any of his work. Hamlin also took horseback riding lessons because the role required he ride one of the fastest race horses in England.

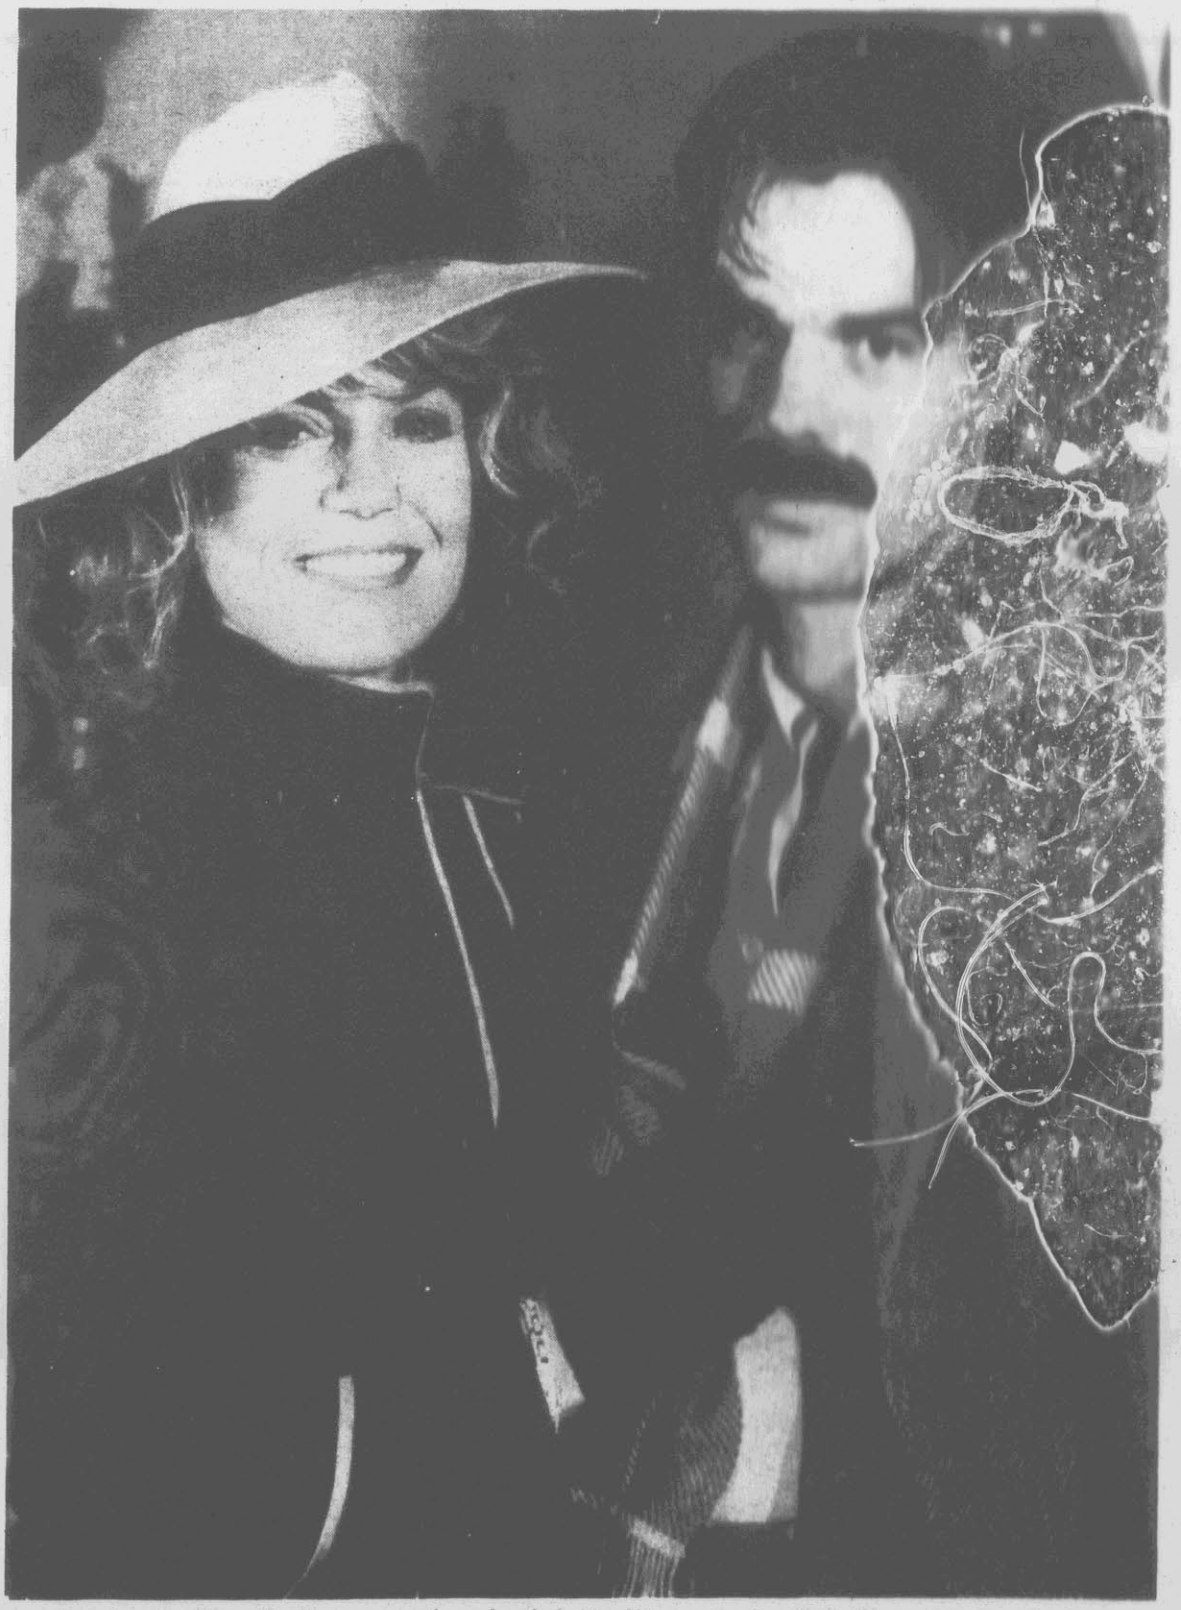

Hamlin has always wanted to act and after graduating from Yale in 1974 he was set on a career in the theater. His transition from a repertory theater actor to films and television, however, has followed a natural progression, although he has tried to suppress it at times.

"I never made a conscious move to say, 'OK, now I'm going to become a film actor.' I just fell into it by accident," says Hamlin. "When the opportunity was presented to me, I had a decision to go to England to study Shakespeare or go into a leading film role (in 'Movie, Movie'). George C. Scott, my favorite actor, was in the film, so I decided to do it. I would never have done it if I had to go to Hollywood and scratch around, find an agent and knock on doors. The movie industry doesn't appeal to me as much as the stage.

"But it's a paradox," continues Hamlin, "because the more you get involved in movies the more it has a tendency to get its hooks into you."

To remove the hooks, Hamlin has returned to the theater. He is currently in New York starring with Nancy Marchand in Clifford Odets' "Awake and Sing." He plans to do one or two plays a year to counterbalance his film work.

Although he has appeared in "King of the Mountain," "The Clash of the Titans" and "Blue Skies Again," Hamlin is best known for his performance as a homosexual writer in the 1981 film "Making Love," which also starred Kate Jackson and Michael Ontkean. He realizes the role was a "major gamble," and he says one day we'll all find our names on a plaque for bravery

Dyan Cannon and Harry Hamlin star as a mother and son locked in a bitter emotional conflict in "Master of the Game," a nine-hour, three part miniseries based on the novel by Sidney Sheldon, airing Sunday, Feb. 19, Monday, Feb. 20 and Tuesday, Feb. 21 on CBS

HBO premiere films

Two HBO Premiere Films, "Sakharov," starring Jason Robards and Glenda Jackson, and "The Blood of Others," with Jodie Foster and Michael Ontkean, have completed principal photography and will debut on the pay-cable service later this year.

"Sakharov" is the biography of Andrei Sakharov, the dissident Soviet nuclear physicist whose defense of human rights has made him a prisoner in his own country. Robards and Miss Jackson portray Sakharov and his second wife, Elena Bonner.

"The Blood of Others" is a dramatic love story set against the background of war-torn France and the heroic Resistance movement of World War II.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: I have a friend who is an authority on every subject. Her latest revelation is that Lloyd Bridges and the actor who plays Max on "Hart to Hart" were members of the Communist party. Please tell me she is all wet. We both read your column every week and I'd love to scoop her. — H.M.

To H.M.: I'm happy to hear you both enjoy my column, however, I'm afraid your friend has won this round. During the 1951 meeting of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, which delved into alleged Communist infiltration in the film industry, Lloyd Bridges admitted to past membership in the Communist party. He, along with other Hollywood celebrities, identified an additional 300 Hollywood actors as past or present members. Lionel Stander (Max on "Hart to Hart") was one of those so identified.

DEAR MICHELE: Can you please tell me if Paul Michael Glaser of "Starsky and Hutch" has a glass eye in his right eye? I say he does, my brother says he doesn't. — L.F.

To L.F.: To my knowledge, Glaser's eyes are both his own. Perhaps you're thinking of Peter Falk, who played the TV detective Columbo, who does, indeed, have a glass eye.

DEAR MICHELE: Could you please tell us what the lovely actress Donna Reed has been doing since the demise of her weekly television show? — F.Z.B.

To F.Z.B.: Sixty-three-year-old Donna Reed says she "never really retired," but just decided to indulge herself with some free time. "I'd been working steadily for 25 years, plus raised four kids, so when I sent the last off to college, I decided it would be nice not to act for awhile," says Miss Reed. "I wanted to sort out my life, spend time with friends, that kind of thing. I've spent the last 17 years having an absolutely wonderful time. I packed my bags and traveled around the world, I've taken up photography, read a great deal, become involved with the Another Mother For Peace movement, been 'feedin' me soul', so to speak. I only wish I'd been smart enough to take some free time earlier in my life. It was foolish not to."

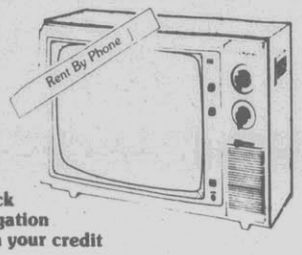

Married to her third husband, U.S. Army Col. Grover Asmus since 1974, the couple lived in Seattle for almost three years while he worked on the Alaskan pipeline project. They returned to Beverly Hills in 1977 and she emerged from her self-imposed retirement. After nixing several vacuous female roles, she appeared in the four-hour miniseries "The Best Place to Be," telecast on NBC in September 1981.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

Now there's an Elvis to call your own. Three models of Elvis Presley dolls will soon be joining the Marilyn Monroe models in stores around the country. Approved by "Graceland," the $90 model comes with gold-trimmed white suit and boots, a scarf, microphone, belt buckle and finger ring. For $225, your Elvis will come with porcelain head, hands and legs attached to a "soft poseable body." The ultimate Elvis, at $2500, is dressed in a Hawaiian outfit, sporting a diamond belt buckle and a scarf from his own personal collection.

"Dynasty" collectibles for "Dynasty" fans: Through a record-breaking licensing deal, "Dynasty"-inspired products will be available later this year. There will be dolls, jewelry, men's and women's clothing, luggage, game boards, housewares, cosmetics and a Charles of the Ritz perfume named "Krystle."

Jerome and Bridget Dobson, head writers at various times for "General Hospital," "Guiding Light" and "As the World Turns," have been signed by NBC to create a new daytime serial. The drama, tentatively titled "Santa Barbara," will be set in that picturesque California beach community and will delve into the various social and economic strata of the town. Celebrities will weave in and out of the story lines, since many of them live or vacation there. Production is scheduled for this summer.

On the lighter side is Dolly Parton. Miss Parton lost 35 pounds before she began filming "Rhinestone" with Sylvester Stallone. "It wasn't easy," she says. "Now that I've lost all this weight and everyone seems to have noticed, I hope to never use the word 'diet' again!" She has brought the new year in with a new look and a new album, "The Great Pretender," an LP of classic oldies and her most pop-oriented album to date. The album cover shows off Miss Parton's new figure.

SOAP OPERA WEEK

Soaper Noone sings success on 'AMC'

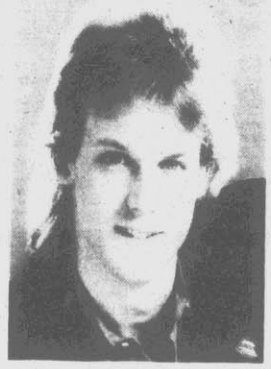

By Kimberly Redmond

I'm a fan of "All My Children" and I'd like some information on actress Kathleen Noone who portrays Ellen Dalton. — E.H., Conner, N.C.

One of four talented sisters, Miss Noone's first professional performances were as a trombone player. She also had a successful singing career and she appeared in nightclubs and dinner theaters. Deciding to turn to acting, Miss Noone enrolled at Southern Methodist University where she studied to perfect her thespian skills. She appeared in regional theater and repertory productions and landed roles on "Love of Life," "As The World Turns" and "One Life to Live" before she assumed the role of Ellen on "AMC." Miss Noone is single, lives in Manhattan, and has been dating Lawrence Keith who portrayed Nick Davis on "AMC."

I'd like to know if Eileen Davidson (Ashley Abbott) and Doug Davidson (Paul Williams) of The Young and The Restless are related. M.M.B., Seabrook, Md.

No, Eileen and Doug aren't related although their names are spelled the same.

Doug Davidson

As a long-time "As The World Turns" fan I'd like to know what happened to the lady who played the role of Nancy Hughes. I notice that there's references to Nancy having moved to Arizona on the show. — J.A., Fort Meade, Fla.

Actress Helen Wagner returned this past fall as Nancy when she appeared in scenes taped for Tom and Margo Hughes' wedding, but it was a one-shot only. Miss Wagner left "ATWT" in 1982 when her contract came to an end and the writers "ran out of storyline" for Nancy, who's presumably been living out-of-town with an ailing sister.

Three join 'Parade'

Syndicated columnist Art Buchwald, and sports commentator John Madden, have been signed to contribute regular features to "The American Parade." CBS correspondent Morton Dean joins the regular reporting staff, Diane Sawyer, Bill Kurtis and Andrew Lack, in the one-hour prime-time series to be anchored by Charles Kuralt.

Each week the series will take a look at America and offer a "parade" of its people, places, issues and events.

Woolridge grows with changes in Chicago

The more things have changed on the Chicago Bulls, the more Orlando Woolridge has grown. In the past three seasons, the length of his NBA career, the Bulls have undergone enough changes to make the 6-foot-9-inch forward become one of the top products of the 1981 draft.

Woolridge was selected in the first round of the draft, after an impressive four-year stint at Notre Dame. He was considered by Bulls General Manager Rod Thorn as a fundamentally sound player with the size and quickness to star in the National Basketball Association. However, because of contract negotiations, he missed the crucial rookie-year training camp and the first two weeks of that season. Although he appeared in 75 games in 1981-1982, he averaged only 7.3 points per game.

Concurrently, the Bulls were struggling and making major changes, including the firing of Coach Jerry Sloan. Thorn took over 20 games into Woolridge's rookie season and the club finished a notch above the cellar in the Central Division.

For the 1982-1983 season, the club hired former Los Angeles Laker coach Paul Westhead and traded longtime center Artis Gilmore for a pair of bruising front-liners in Dave Corzine and Mark Olberding, moves which assured Woolridge of a key role in the rebuilding program.

Woolridge compiled a 16.5 scoring average in Westhead's complicated offense, but the club still foundered in fourth place through most of the season. The situation worsened when Woolridge tore ligaments in his right knee and missed the final 24 games of the season.

This past off-season the Bulls again restructured the coaching staff, hiring veteran Kevin Loughery from the Atlanta Hawks to replace Westhead. The club also acquired three first-round draft picks — Sidney Green, Ennis Whatley and Mitchell Wiggins. The influx of young talent and Loughery's new offense have greatly benefited Woolridge, who leads the Bulls in scoring.

"I feel real comfortable in Kevin's offense because we're doing a lot of slashing, a lot of cutting, a lot of posting up and I've been getting into the action," says Woolridge. "I've been getting the ball about 20 feet from the basket, facing up and getting good scoring opportunities.

"I've also had some good success playing defense because I'm using motion on the other end to make my man work so hard it detracts from his offense."

Loughery is convinced that Woolridge has the making of a top-flight NBA forward. "He has to improve on his concentration and a little bit on his outside shot," says the Bulls coach, "but his potential in this league is close to being unlimited."

"He has flexibility," adds Assistant Coach Fred Carter. "He can take the ball to the basket since he has the strength, the quickness and the jumping ability.

"One of the major things has been getting Orlando to shoot the jump shot. If you can't shoot the jump shot in this league and you're a player who primarily goes to the basket, people will sag off on you."

Asner in ABC pilot

Ed Asner will star as a businessman in the garment industry in "Off the Rack," a half-hour comedy pilot sold to ABC. It is being considered as a potential series for next season.

Dressing for the Interview

Every interviewer will agree that the way you are dressed for the interview is extremely important. Many potential employers will inspect you from head to toe. When you consider that many companies will interview more than one-hundred applicants for a position, it makes good sense to insure that you're properly dressed.

A dark suit, preferably a navy, navy pinstripe, grey, or grey pinstripe should be worn for the first meeting.

A white shirt should be worn for each interview (Some large companies require that their employees wear nothing but white shirts).

A conservative stripe or foulard tie is preferred. Don't make the mistake of wearing a linen tie in the winter or a wool one during spring or summer. A burgundy stripe with some navy blue and/or grey usually looks very nice with either of the aforementioned suits.

Dark shoes, preferably a dark leather tassel or lace-up is best. Light colored loafers won't cut it (a fresh shine would be a good idea too). Wear a belt that matches your shoes.

We want to offer you high quality choices when it comes to making that important decision on a suit. Our selection includes suits by Austin Reed, Hart Shaffner & Marx, Hickey Freeman, Chaps, Polo University, and Corbin. We want to make sure you understand the difference in tailoring, fabrics and styling that our clothing delivers.

A navy blazer is permissible. But it must be worn properly with a conservative stripe tie. Grey pants are generally the best to wear with the blazer (khakis are too casual for an interview). Again, dark shoes are best.

Make sure that your clothes are clean and pressed.

Some self-proclaimed professionals say that you should work your way up to your best looking suit. In other words, save the best for last to make the lasting impression when it comes down to the final cut. This makes sense until you consider that you want to make a good enough impression at the first interview to be asked back for the second. This is a decision you must make for yourself.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

FROM THE "ASK" EDITORS

LOS ANGELES — You might say that Matthew Laborteaux, star of CBS's Whiz Kids, is perfectly *type*cast. Though his style used to be hunt and peck, he took lessons so he'd look like he knew what he was doing in scenes where he has to work the computer keyboard. Laborteaux, formerly of Little House on the Prairie, now boasts a speed of 65 words a minute.... Ed (Lou Grant) Asner, more active as a union president (he heads Screen Actors' Guild) than actor, just finished a TV pilot, Off the Rack, due to air in May. He also hopes to star in the movie The Branch Rickey Story. Rickey was the Brooklyn Dodgers' manager who broke baseball's color line in 1947 by hiring Jackie Robinson. The title role was originally offered to Gregory Peck — an ex-S.A.G. president himself — but the men's physiques just didn't match up. Rickey was a stocky 5-foot-9; Peck is a lean 6-3. Certainly all concerned with the project must be hoping that The Branch Rickey Story fares better than the musical version of Jackie Robinson's life, which appeared on Broadway two seasons ago. The First definitely proved to be a strikeout.

— Robert Windeler

ASNER: WHO'S ON FIRST

WASHINGTON — It must have been a pleasant surprise for Secretary of State George Shultz when some of his staff organized an impromptu birthday party for him at Ireland's Shannon Airport on his way back from an eight-day overseas trip. The 63-year-old Shultz received a special gift: a photo of him dancing at a recent White House fête with Ginger Rogers. To his delight, Rogers had inscribed the photo, "For the first two minutes, I could swear I was dancing with Fred." When Shultz's office called and asked for the autograph, she replied, "Sure," as long as the Secretary would agree to sign one for her. How does the Secretary of State really cut the rug? "He's nice," was Rogers's coy response. "A very diplomatic dancer."

—Jane Ottenberg

BELAFONTE-HARPER'S DARING WITH DAD

NEW YORK — The sofa that's being used for Diane Keaton's seduction scene in her new film, The Little Drummer Girl — from the John le Carré thriller — ought to get at least featured billing. Perhaps even an Oscar nomination for Best Supporting role. After all, the battered divan, found by producers in a London theater, had a $4,500 price tag.... Shari (Hotel) Belafonte-Harper can certainly carry off her Calvin Klein jeans in great style. But her singing in the Calvin commercial indicates that she has some trouble carrying a tune. Nonetheless, she has finally convinced her father, Harry, to record an album with her....The endlessly suave Roger Moore is on the lookout for a young lookalike to play his former TV title role, The Saint, in a film about the famed detective. Moore, who last sainted in 1969, is co-producing the movie.... The first thing that Martina Navratilova does after she sets down her tennis rackets in a new location is to order three hamburgers. Not for herself — for her dogs. They're on hand for every one of their master's tournaments.

NAVRATILOVA: TENNIS IS NO MATCH FOR HER DOGS

KEATON: THE DIVAN IS DIVINE

That's called puppy love.... Richard Gere is a guy with a new doll. He showed up at a New York nightclub with the lady tucked under his arm, and the disco owner immediately developed a Saturday night fever. Not because fans started closing in on Gere or that the actor started closing in on his date. It's just that the young lady was a Cabbage Patch doll and required as much protection as the American gigolo.

Would everlasting life be a boon or a curse to mankind? —D.G., Dover, Del.

It would be a blessing to those who have curious minds and an endless appetite for learning. The thought that they have forever to absorb knowledge would be very comforting for them. But for others who feel they have learned all there is to learn and whose minds are closed, it would be a dreadful curse. They'd have no way to fill their time.

VANESSA WILLIAMS

Miss America

We know about all the glamour of being Miss America. But are there experiences that can take some of the sparkle away? —L.S., Lake Charles, La.

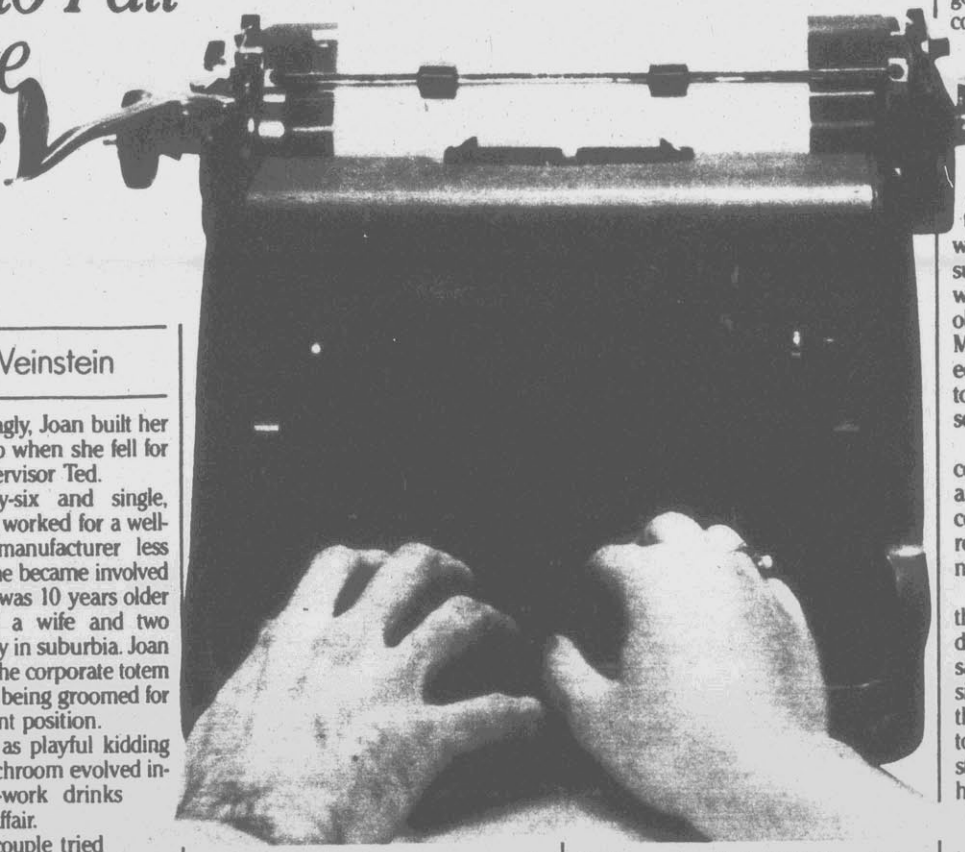

As a dancer, I need to exercise, but with my busy schedule, I don't have time for my workout. And then there's food. In the first few weeks after the contest, I gained three pounds from all the lunches and dinners. That's because I did what my mother taught me as a child: I cleaned my plate. But my mother and hosts are going to have to understand that now I just taste, not finish, everything.

Water Cooler Romance: Does It Pay to Fall In Love On the Job?

Ray Curletti

By Bob Weinstein

Unknowingly, Joan built her own trap when she fell for her supervisor Ted.

Twenty-six and single, she had worked for a well-known computer manufacturer less than a year before she became involved with her boss, who was 10 years older than she and had a wife and two children tucked away in suburbia. Joan was low person on the corporate totem pole, while Ted was being groomed for a senior management position.

What started out as playful kidding in the company lunchroom evolved into occasional after-work drinks and eventually an affair.

As much as the couple tried to keep the relationship under wraps, co-workers sensed what was happening; before long the entire division knew about it. Joan's colleagues resented the liaison and felt she would use it as a catapult for her career. Management, alarmed that disharmony in the ranks would affect productivity as well as morale, decided to step in and rectify the situation.

They wasted no time. Ted was summoned to the executive vice president's office, where he was read the riot act. Then two options were presented to him: Either she would go, or he would have to relinquish his supervisory position. Two weeks later, Joan was terminated — with a good recommendation, of course — and Ted, despite feeling guilty and sheepish, retained his job and soon after reingratiated himself with management.

There is nothing new about individuals meeting on the job. What better place to stoke the sparks of romance than the work setting, where men and women can easily become intimates as they share common interests and strive to achieve mutual goals. The atmosphere is often lively, charged and extremely amicable.

But now there's more opportunity than ever. Over the past 15 years, the work environment has changed drastically. With the sexual revolution, the feminist movement and technological innovation creating new employment opportunities, women have stepped out of their traditional backup, supporting role and are on the road to achieving equality in the workplace. Include the rise in female heads of households due to the staggering divorce rate, and it's not hard to see how times have created a more egalitarian work environment, an ideal breeding ground for relationships. One magazine survey of young working women in cities found that 44 percent of the respondents had dated men they'd met through the job.

While the corporate setting is conducive for love, experts, company recruiters and high-level executives report that it can pose untold problems for the couple and for the company. Robert Quinn, a psychologist at the State University of New York at Albany, conducted a study recently on office affairs and concluded that the disadvantages far overshadow the advantages. Having gleaned material from questionnaires distributed to several hundred employed individuals, Quinn reports: "Romantic relationships can be a serious practical problem because they sometimes destroy the smooth functioning of organizations."

Disadvantages cited in Quinn's research include loss of respect from other workers, lowered productivity, poor attendance, favoritism of the romantic partner, gossip, lowered morale and hostility and complaints from co-workers. On the plus side, a very small number of the respondents listed greater teamwork, improved productivity and lowered tensions. But scarcely 10 percent of the relationships studied could be said to have benefited overall office morale.

Some companies forbid office dating, but generally policy on this issue is unwritten and vague.

Speak to a random sample of corporate executives and chances are they'll echo Quinn's conclusions. "Whether it's the man or the woman in the power position, we're dealing with sexual politics, and it's bound to have some impact on work and morale," says a high-ranking Chicago textile executive. "Inevitably, one member of the affair is going to favor the other. If it's a highly competitive office where workers are going out of their way to achieve and rise on the corporate ladder, it can pose monumental problems."

Though some companies do have written policies forbidding interoffice dating, generally protocol and policy on this subject — whether it be among peers, bosses and subordinates or executives — are unwritten and vague. "The reasons are obvious," says Jack Bramlage, the Mead Corporation's director of executive search. "It would be discriminatory. You can't tell a worker whom to see and whom not to see."

Dave Peterson, AT&T's director of corporate personnel, reports that there are no policies or restrictions in his company regarding the organizational romance. "Each case is different and, naturally, handled differently."

A spokesperson for I.B.M. asserts that "It's a personal concern and we don't really care if employees in the same office date." But, he adds, the situation can become touchy if one of the people in the relationship happens to be a manager. "We do have a rule stating that a manager cannot manage his or her spouse," he says. "The question is: Can a manager date one of his or her employees? We have no written rule governing this. However, we counsel our managers to be sensitive about any kind of behavior that might give other employees the impression that there is favoritism in the office."

John F. Johnson, executive vice president of Lamalie Associates, a Cleveland-based executive search firm, points out that "Inevitably, when you have single career-minded people working for the same firm, relationships are bound to happen," Johnson adds. "If they're handled with discretion, they pose few problems. However, it's a different story when one person is married and the other is single. I don't want to touch that one with a 10-foot pole."

How much a company frowns on a relationship usually depends on the positions and marital status of those involved. Take 28-year-old Stan and 26-year-old Susan, salespeople employed by a fashionable Philadelphia department store. Separated only by a few counters, Stan sells men's clothing and Susan sells women's cosmetics. They dated for a year, had a brief affair, broke up for six months and are now living together, contemplating marriage. It's not a secret to any of the employees or to management. Neither of them feels they have to disguise their feelings, and as far as their supervisors are concerned, the relationship represents no threat to either employees or management.

Similarly, the interoffice affair between co-workers seldom upsets the corporate machinery. Laurie and Jack, both single, 34 and copywriters for a prestigious New York advertising agency, have been dating for almost eight months, and they haven't had any repercussions from either management or colleagues. They work near each other, share danish and coffee at midmorning, exchange advice and cigarettes throughout the day ("Working together makes the relationship even nicer," says Jack). And you'd have to be blind not to realize that they are involved with each other.

Says one secretary, "Have an affair with the wrong person and you could play Russian roulette with your career."

More important, it's perfectly clear that their relationship creates no problems. One doesn't have seniority over the other, and they're in noncompetitive writing areas.

When you wend your way up to the middle-management level, however, and into the rarefied atmosphere of the executive suite, the issue becomes tricky and dangerous. That holds particularly true for a married employee having an affair with someone on the job. As one outspoken executive secretary of an Atlanta-based clothing manufacturer puts it, "Have an affair with the wrong person and you could wind up playing Russian roulette with your career."

Says the Mead Corporation's Bramlage: "For the most part, a couple has to confront the real issue, which is that it's not going to work with both of them inside the same operation. It's just too compromising because of the potential for pillow talk."

Bramlage adds that in most company romances involving managers or executives, the woman, because she's generally lower on the career ladder, gets the short end of the stick and either has to find a new job or move to another department or division.

Women today are not always going quietly. In a recent article titled "Managers and Lovers" in the respected Harvard Business Review, senior editor Eliza Collins points out that woman's role within the organization has become more powerful, and so if told she must leave because of an interoffice affair, "she may sue, file sexual-harassment charges or simply make the executive's workday a series of unpleasant confrontations and embarrassing moments."

As soon as an interoffice romance blossoms into a marriage, corporations discover that matters have to be handled differently. The consensus is that, like the organizational affair, companies would rather not have to deal with the dual-career couple issue either. But deal with it they must.

"At the very top levels of a corporation, most companies still continue to have prohibitions against spouses working together," explains John Johnson of Lamalie. "More than anything else, most high-level executives have blinders on when it comes to keeping both spouses. They fear that it opens the company up to question. There is also concern that the spouses will help each other in terms of providing valuable information. There are many perceived opportunities that may not necessarily be real."

Jack Bramlage is also pessimistic about employing dual-career couples and says it's become one of the major issues of the last decade. "Some companies have no problem with both spouses working for the same organization," he says. "But we try to avoid it if we can. If you've got one that works and the other that's a real dud, you've got problems. Or if you fire one, you've lost two."

On the other hand, Dave Peterson of AT&T says his company is supportive of dual-career couples. "I'm sure there are individual problems, but from a corporate standpoint, there are no major problems that we have to face. We take a stand that one or the other should not be in a position to influence the career or the salary treatment of the second party. Outside of that, we don't discourage it at all."

In fact, when one spouse is transferred to another office, I.B.M. goes as far as to extend special relocation privileges. "When we relocate an employee with an I.B.M. spouse, the spouse receives priority placement at the new location," says the I.B.M. spokesperson. "They go to the top of the list to be considered for openings."

An official for General Electric Co. stresses that dual careers have become a fact of doing business today. "We even tie it into our recruiting efforts on campus," he says.

Whether organizational romance or dual-career couples is at issue, the present forecast is for further confusion — and possible heartbreak. We're in a transition period at this time, with old policies (written and unwritten) under scrutiny and new policies that are still in the making. FW

The International Olympic Committee announces

THE 100 GREATEST OLYMPIC STAMPS

IN GOLD ON STERLING SILVER

An official collection of the world's most significant Olympic stamps re-created in the form of authentic, precisely detailed minted miniatures — the first ever authorized by the International Olympic Committee.

A Limited Edition.

Advance Subscription Deadline: February 29, 1984.

THE INTERNATIONAL OLYMPIC COMMITTEE has authorized the issuance of an unprecedented collection in honor of the forthcoming 1984 Olympic Games.

Because of its significance, the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee has joined with the International Olympic Committee in presenting this historic tribute.

The collection will portray the 100 greatest Olympic stamps of history—from nations all over the world, and from every time period. It will take the unique form of finely crafted miniatures minted in 24kt gold electroplate on sterling silver, and the official minter for the complete series is The Franklin Mint.

For collectors, for Olympic enthusiasts and for those who seek to acquire official issues of lasting interest and significance, this series represents an extraordinary collecting opportunity.

Official stamps that honor great Olympic events

The Olympic stamps commemorated in this collection have been selected with the assistance of an international panel of philatelic experts, from the hundreds of such stamps issued over the years. They include the famous "chariot driving" stamp of Greece from the very first series of Olympic stamps; the valuable 1928 Netherlands 30 cent Olympic stamp; the beautiful "Goddess of Victory" stamp issued by Britain to honor the 1948 Olympic Games; plus stamps that portray ancient sports, stamps bearing official symbols of the various Olympiads and stamps depicting masterpieces of art such as The Discus Thrower. 100 great Olympic stamps in all.

Finely crafted re-creations in miniature

Each gold on sterling miniature will recapture the official stamp it portrays with complete accuracy and detail. In every case, the craftsmen of The Franklin Mint have worked from the actual stamp to re-create the design. Thus, every fine line and distinguishing feature may be clearly seen. For example: the flame of the Olympic torch on the 1956 Australian 7½ pence stamp. The flags of many nations on the $2 Canadian stamp honoring the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal. And the 20 different designs of sporting events on the 1968 5-peso Olympic stamp of Mexico. This degree of detail is all the more remarkable considering the miniature size of these minted stamps.

A limited edition—at a guaranteed price

The gold on sterling miniatures will be sent to subscribers at the convenient rate of two per month, and the issue price of $7.50 will be guaranteed for each miniature. The collection is being issued in a limited edition, which will be permanently restricted to the exact number of valid subscriptions entered by the end of the Olympic Games in August 1984. After that time, it will never be offered again.

To subscribe, mail your application to The Franklin Mint, Franklin Center, PA 19091, by the advance deadline of February 29, 1984.

PEOPLE QUIZ

SIR NAMES: A CLUE TO THE MALE PHYSIQUE?

By John E. Gibson

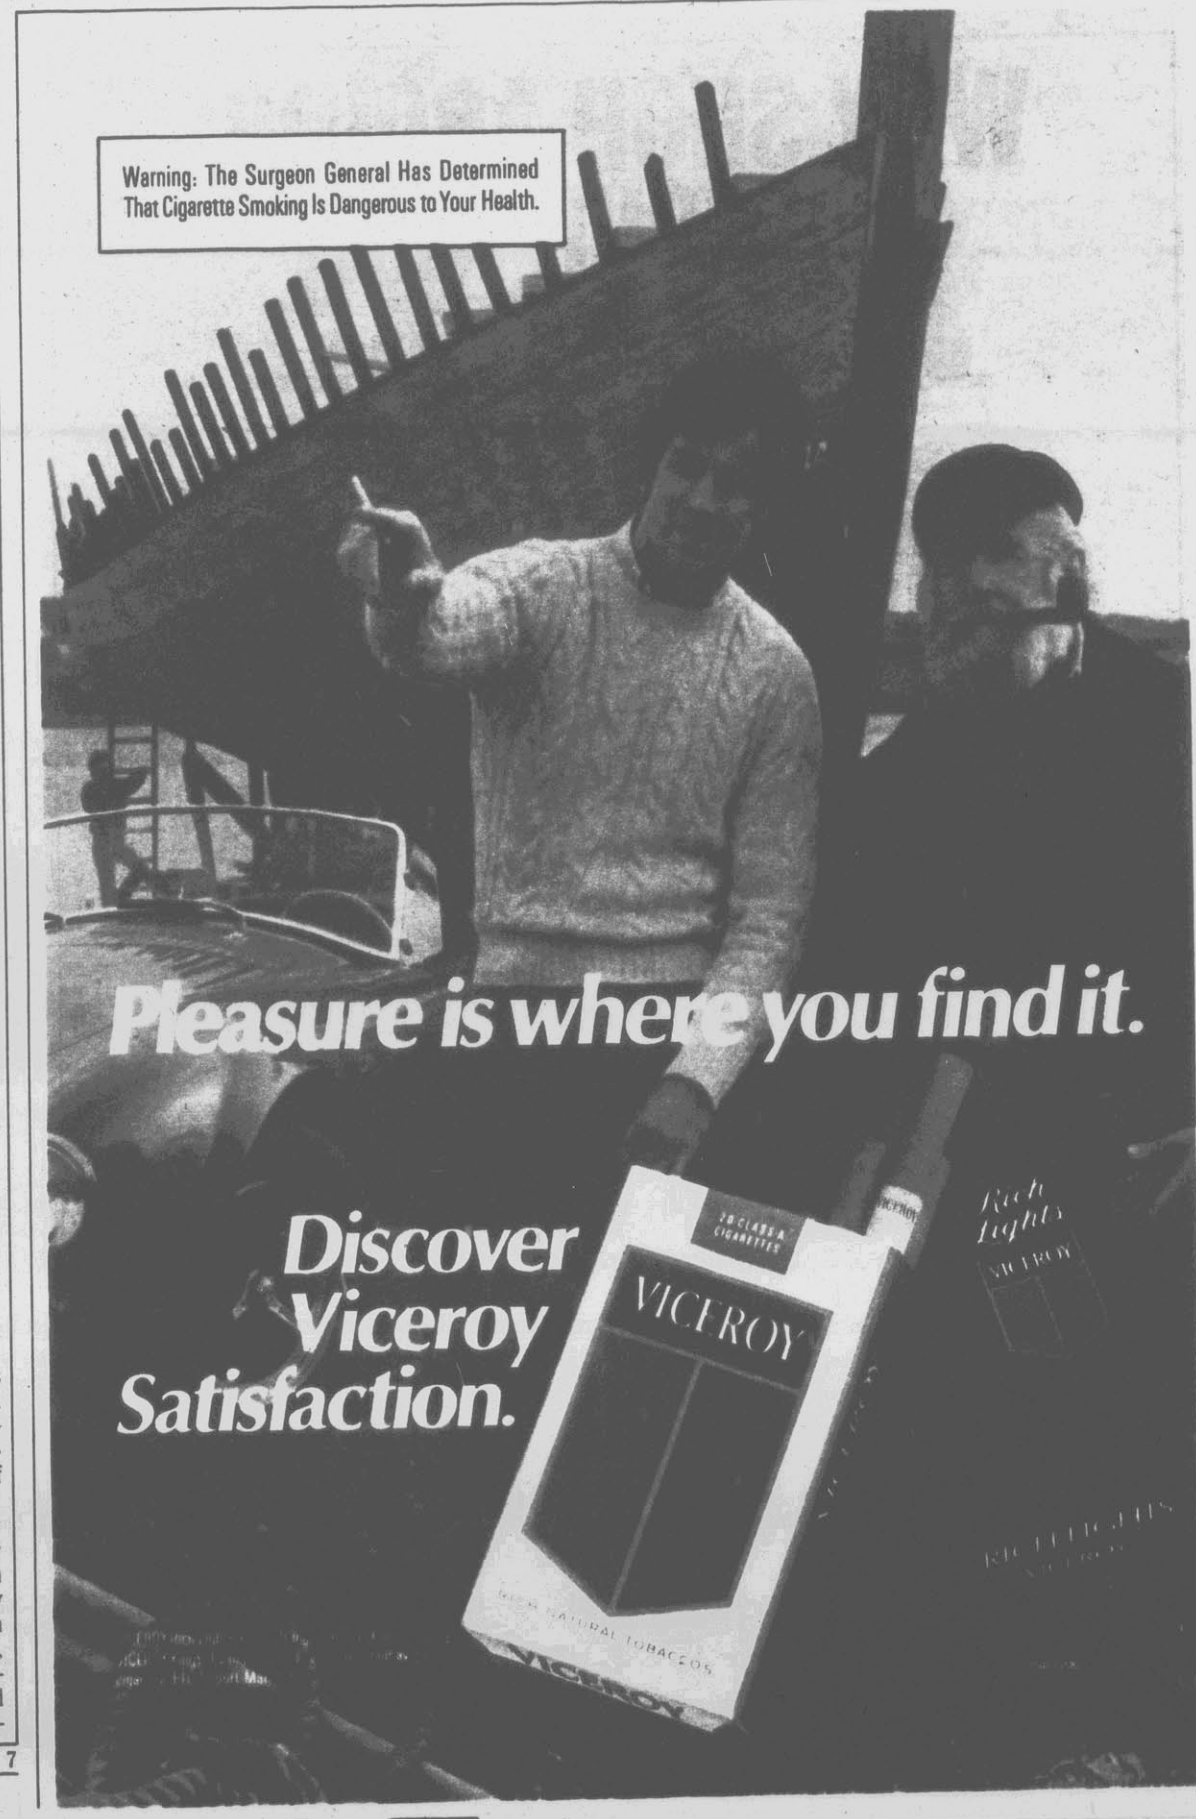

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. How you are perceived depends on the form of your first name you use.
2. An unusual first name is not an advantage; a person must try to succeed in spite of it.
3. Most children named after their fathers don't like their first names.
4. Women tend to have more intriguing first names than men do.
5. Your surname, if you are a man, can give a clue to your body build.

ANSWERS

1. True. People who use the formal form of their first name — Robert instead of Bob or Bobby — are considered by others to be "more introverted and cultured than persons identified by familiar or adolescent name forms," according to a University of California study. Since a person usually chooses his own preferred name form, it can be expected to reflect his personality and how he perceives himself.
2. True. Studies show that persons with unusual given names are likely to have problems in personal adjustment, social life and school. However, in certain cases an uncommon first name can have the opposite effect, serving as a stimulus to achieve goals by causing an individual to think of himself as something special or outstanding.
3. False. A team of Temple University behavioral scientists studied children's attitudes toward identical first names of parent and child. Boys who have the same first name as their fathers were asked whether they "like, feel neutral, or don't like" their names. The majority said "like."
4. True. Florida State University studies show that men's first names tend to fall into the ordinary, garden-variety category, while women have more distinctive names that "carry a connotation of mystique or attractive uniqueness."
5. True. Psychologists at the University of Munich studied the relation of body size and family names. Body size in humans is strongly determined by genetic factors, and physique is often relevant to a person's profession, especially in some manual occupations. The researchers hypothesized that, since surnames were first assigned during the Middle Ages to indicate a father's profession, descendants of people named Smith (one who forges with a hammer, a worker in metals) would differ physically from those named Tailor (or Taylor).

All male persons named either Smith or Taylor in two metropolitan areas were sent a questionnaire to determine such characteristics as height and weight, preference for sports, hobbies and suitability for professions requiring either strength or agility. They found significant differences in all categories and in the expected directions. FW

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

FOR STUDENTS: A LESSON IN GOOD EATING

By Marilyn Hansen

It's every mother's nightmare. Her child leaves home for his first apartment and eats potato chips and dip for dinner every night. He doesn't exactly enjoy it, mind you, it's just that nobody ever taught him the difference between a saucepan and a skillet. But now, Dede Napoli serves first-time-away-from-home kids everywhere with her book, The Starving Students Cookbook. Each recipe is simple, nutritious and — most important — explicit. The directions even explain which utensils to use. Here's a sample of the book's recipes. So relax, Moms, but remember to keep sending your students those homemade cookies.

QUICK MINESTRONE SOUP

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 zucchini, chopped
Handful of leftover cooked meat, chopped small 1 can (16 oz.) whole tomatoes, cut up
1 can (8 oz.) green beans (or any leftover vegetables)
1 can water (use emptied tomatoes can)
½ envelope dry onion-soup mix
Small handful uncooked elbow macaroni

1. In saucepan, on medium heat, heat oil; stir in zucchini and meat. Cook for 2 minutes.
2. Add tomatoes, green beans and water. Bring to a boil.
3. Stir in onion-soup mix and macaroni. Cover and cook 10 minutes on low heat.

Makes 2 servings

Note: Very filling. Great on a cold night.

ALL-DAY BEEF STEW

1 lb. lean beef stew meat, cubed
4 carrots, cut in chunks
2 onions, cut in chunks
2 stalks celery, cut in chunks
1 can (15 oz.) whole tomatoes, undrained
¼ cup minute tapioca (important)
Dash of thyme and oregano
Pinch of salt, or to taste
1 heaping teaspoon instant coffee
1 beef bouillon cube (or 1 teaspoon instant bouillon)

1. Preheat oven to 250°. Dump all ingredients into large ovenproof pan and cover.
2. Cook in preheated oven for 7 hours (or for 5 hours in a 300° oven). Stir a couple times during cooking if you get the chance.

Makes 2 to 3 servings

Note: You'll love the aroma when you come home starving after classes all day.

COOKED FRESH SPINACH

1 bunch spinach*
¼ lemon
1 tablespoon margarine
Salt and pepper, to taste

1. Wash spinach. Fill sink with water and dump loose spinach in. Break off stems at root, holding under water. (Spinach leaves and stems are both tasty.)
2. Shake off excess water and stuff spinach into saucepan. Add a couple spoonfuls of water, cover and cook at medium-low heat for 5 to 10 minutes, or till tender.
3. Drain spinach and squeeze lemon on. Add margarine, salt and pepper to taste.

Makes 1 to 2 servings

*Use whole bunch; it shrinks when cooked.

PLAN AHEAD

SHOULD YOU HAVE A FINANCIAL PHYSICIAN?

By Nanci Nicholson

Rita Gnaseo

During the past several years, consumers have been offered an increasing variety of options for investing their money and a flood of facts on how to manage it. But how does an individual sort all this information out?

Introducing the financial planners. They're specialists who provide a complete analysis of your economic situation and a plan to help you reach your financial goals. As Arthur I. Sherman, a senior vice president at Shearson/American Express, explains, "Financial planners are physicians who are able to diagnose a client's fiduciary ills."

There are, of course, numerous strains of monetary ills; consequently, there are many types of physicians and various cures.

Planning services are offered across the country through an assortment of organizations, according to the Institute of Certified Financial Planning (I.C.F.P.). These include large service corporations — such as Shearson/American Express, Prudential-Bache and Merrill Lynch — and smaller banks, insurance companies, consulting firms and independent experts.

How much it will cost you depends on the organization. Financial planners at the large outfits generally operate on a commission basis; smaller concerns may charge according to a fixed or an hourly fee.

Take some time to find the one best suited to your needs. First, note the types of operations you'll want to avoid. Stephen Jones, vice president of the Council of Better Business Bureaus' legal affairs division in Arlington, Va., points out that customers should be wary of any firms recommending "unorthodox investment strategies." For example, those promising exceptionally high profits or huge tax breaks. Telephone solicitations and seminars that boast "get-rich-quick" schemes should also be shunned.

Next, you'll need to decide whether a small or large outfit is better for your requirements. According to Jim Flynn, vice president of Merrill Lynch, large corporations offer clients the most up-to-date information, the largest menu of services and products and better security. "The individual may go out of business," says Flynn. "But chances are good that a large outfit is going to be around for a long time."

However, Mary Merrill, an independent consultant based in Madison, Wisc., believes that smaller operations can provide more time and personal attention for clients with modest incomes. Merrill works on a fee basis rather than on commission, and because of this, she believes she can be more objective about a client's needs than a big company broker. "People on commissions are not planners," she declares. "They are salespeople."

Robert Adler, a vice president in the municipal bonds department at Shearson, takes the middle ground. "Whether you go to a big or a small firm is less important than whom you'll be dealing with. Regardless of the company, some brokers will only sell you what's hot that day and not be concerned about your long-range goals."

While Adler maintains that a larger firm can deliver more products than its smaller counterpart, there is good reason to go with a small outfit if it specializes in the one service you really need — say, tax shelters or tax planning.

The bottom line is that you should choose a financial planner with as much care as you would choose any other professional. Some guidelines:

- Ask friends for recommendations and check any firm you're considering with the Better Business Bureau.
- Request a short meeting with the planner to discuss how he or she will work. Ask about the services offered and payment procedure.
- Establish a solid business relationship with your planner at the outset. Don't be afraid to ask for professional references, educational experiences and length of time in the business.
- Give all appropriate details about your finances to your planner so you'll be given the best advice.
- Report poor service to the I.C.F.P. in Denver, Colo., or to the International Association of Financial Planning in Atlanta, Ga. FW

You can read.
You can rest.
You can sleep.
You can make phone calls.
You can eat breakfast
You can watch television.

You can exercise.
You can snore.

Sixth in a Series of Interviews with 1984's Presidential Candidates

AP/Wide World

John Anderson captured the imagination of the American people with his longshot bid for the Presidency in 1980, but when the votes were counted in November, he had received barely under 7 percent. That was enough, however, to entitle him to Federal matching funds for the 1980 campaign.

Although Anderson, 62, hasn't officially announced his candidacy for this year, he is working full time on establishing the National Unity Party to pick up where he left off four years ago. He will be its chairperson and leading spokesperson, and the betting in Washington is that he will carry its banner in the fall elections. Washington writer David J. Lynch continues his special campaign coverage for FAMILY WEEKLY with this interview of John Anderson.

Lynch: What do you see as the major concern of America's families?
Anderson: I think Americans are worried about whether or not the current economic recovery can be sustained, whether or not jobs will be plentiful in the future. Another concern is whether we're really building a more secure and stable world in which peace will not be threatened by a war between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R.

Q: What level of aid, if any, should the Government contribute to day-care centers?
Anderson: Primarily, the Federal role should be to help families that cannot otherwise provide their children with access to these facilities. For middle- and upper-income families, I would increase tax credits for child care and also offer financial incentives to industry to take a more aggressive role in day care for their own employees.

Q: What level of abortion aid should the Government provide?
Anderson: Freedom of choice is a constitutional guarantee that cannot be taken away by a Federal or state statute. We cannot say that something is a right and then delimit that right because of a person's income. I reason, therefore, that funding [for abortion] under the Medicaid program is a Government responsibility.

Q: What level of Federal aid should there be for birth control?
Anderson: Certainly the same argument can be used: We don't deny acceptable medical attention to the poor. I think birth-control devices fall within the legitimate category of services, and there shouldn't be discriminatory treatment with respect to the provision of those services.

Q: Do you approve of Federal Government legal intervention in cases where parents in effect decide not to prolong the life of a seriously deformed child, such as in the case of Baby Jane Doe?
Anderson: Well, I was disturbed by what seemed to be an unwarranted intrusion by the Federal Government into the patient-physician relationship.

Q: What's your reaction to the growing involvement of the Roman Catholic Church in issues of national security, particularly the nuclear freeze debate?
Anderson: I think the action of the Catholic Bishops' conference in the statement of May 3, 1983, on the nuclear question represented an honest and sincere effort to bring some of the best minds together on what the position of the church should be. I have commended their statement because I think it is the kind of moral question on which the church does have the right to express an opinion.

Q: Do children raised by two working parents receive as good an upbringing as those raised with one parent at home?
Anderson: There are kids who have suffered because of the absence of both parents from the home. My real concern is for children of elementary-school age; older children do not present so serious a problem. But I think we have to realize that we've gone beyond the age when women were supposed to be solely concerned with children and kitchen. We have to find ways that, through day-care centers, we can fill any vacuum that may be created by absent parents.

Q: Should sex education be taught in the public schools?
Anderson: Yes. I think sex education is important, but it ought to be supplemented by parental guidance. FW

Insecticide Awarded Third Patent

ROACH PRUFE, #1 in Three University Tests

The University of California and the University of Nebraska have just released two independent studies that have been published in the Entomological Society of America Journal. In the studies, thirty-one well known consumer and commercial insecticide products were tested in heavily roach infested homes and apartments. Confirming an earlier University of California published report, ROACH PRUFE's patented formula again took the #1 spot as the most effective roach killer. In the new University of California report, ROACH PRUFE was tested against the sprays and powders commonly used by the exterminators, and was the only product in the twelve-week study that showed 100% control. In the University of Nebraska study, well known consumer aerosol, fogger, and dust products were tested. Here again ROACH PRUFE provided the best results in their eight-week tests.

Disease Carriers Odorless, Easy To Apply

Alan Brite, holder of seventeen U.S. and foreign patents, has just been awarded his third patent on ROACH PRUFE. Brite says: "Because roaches simply do not recognize ROACH PRUFE as an insecticide, they do not try to avoid it by scattering to other parts of your residence as they do with other insecticides. Plus the electrostatically charged powder sticks to the roach's body and is then carried back into the walls and spread among the other roaches. The result is you kill not only the roaches you see, but also those hiding and multiplying in the walls."

ROACH PRUFE is odorless, non-evaporating, non-staining, and non-flammable. The powder is simply applied with a teaspoon under kitchen appliances and in other hidden areas. It can be used in homes, schools, hospitals, restaurants, plus new construction.

ROACH PRUFE is available at most hardware stores or it can be ordered direct from the manufacturer by sending a check or money order for $8.90. This includes postage for the one pound container. Add tax in California. One pound covers up to a nine room residence. You'll need an extra pound for a basement or garage. Send to Copper Brite, Inc., Dept. 12 at 5147 W. Jefferson Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90016. Copies of the 3 University tests are available by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Copper Brite, Inc., Dept. A.

JUVENILE DIABETES

THE DISEASE THAT ISN'T KID STUFF

By Stephen Fried

More than 11 million Americans have diabetes. The majority are afflicted with a form of this disease that strikes in middle or old age and is usually fairly easy to control with a special diet. But 10 percent of the diabetic population suffers from life-threatening juvenile diabetes, so called because those who contract it are most often under age 20. They also require a stringent health regimen, including daily insulin shots.

While the victim of maturity-onset diabetes still has the ability to produce insulin in limited quantities, the juvenile diabetic cannot make any of his own and thus must rely on injections of the hormone, which is necessary for the metabolism of carbohydrates, including sugars. Without the medication, he would literally starve to death, because his body could not use the food he had eaten.

Shary Flenniken

By adhering to the routine his doctor prescribes, the patient can lead a relatively normal life. However, because managing the disorder means altering everything from exercise to diet, the juvenile diabetic needs the additional aid of psychological support from friends and family members.

"If you wanted to design a disease geared for maximum disruption of families, you couldn't do much better than juvenile diabetes," says Dr. Lester Baker, director of the endocrinology/diabetes division of Philadelphia's Children's Hospital. "It can't be managed daily by a doctor, so the family has to handle it in the home. It involves giving injections that can be painful, and testing urine and blood — things most people don't want to be involved with. And it eliminates spontaneity. What a nondiabetic takes for granted, a person with diabetes must stop and think about first."

Researchers aren't completely sure of the genesis of this illness. It seems that sufferers are born with a predisposition to it, which is then triggered by a common virus. Because their bodies can no longer control insulin production, juvenile diabetics must not only replace the hormone, but endlessly monitor their food intake as well. They need to maintain a delicate balance between what they eat — which is transformed into blood sugars — and the hormone they inject to metabolize those sugars. If too little insulin exists, the body slowly wastes away. If too much is present, shock and coma can result. "The pressure is unbelievable sometimes," says the mother of a teen-age juvenile diabetic. "I cry a lot. It's better than your kid having a disease that's going to kill him in a matter of months or years, but it's not a whole lot better."

Even with the best care, the average juvenile diabetic will have his life expectancy cut by 30 percent from the time the condition becomes active. Diabetics are also 25 times more prone to blindness than nondiabetics, 17 times more prone to kidney disease and twice as prone to heart disease. But until something better than simply "controlling" the disease comes along, complications unfortunately are inevitable. Some new advances have been made, though, such as an electronic pump to create a more even insulin flow and devices to more accurately observe sugar levels in the blood. The only real hope is research into preventing and curing the disease.

The leading expert in the field, Dr. Paul Lacy at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, is studying a procedure that is believed to offer the most promise: the transplanting of working insulin-producing cells into the diabetic's body. According to Dr. Lacy, this procedure, which has been successful in animal trials, will start to be tested on humans sometime this year.

These advancements, however, only come to diabetics who live in major cities and get premium health care. The real tragedy of juvenile diabetes is that it often goes undiagnosed. Early detection can make a considerable difference. If your child shows the symptoms of diabetes — which include increased thirst, excessive urination, weight loss coupled with increased appetite, sluggishness, itching and slow-healing cuts and bruises — consult your family physician. Should you require additional information on this illness, call the national Juvenile Diabetes Foundation hotline. Their toll-free phone number is (800) 223-1138. FW

GETTING PERSONAL WITH

LETTY COTTIN POGREBIN

HAPPILY MARRIED . . . AND STILL A MS.

Letty Cottin Pogrebin today looks much as she did 20 years ago when she married her lawyer husband, Bert: shoulder-length blond hair swept back with combs framing a pretty, heart-shaped face. But her views on the role of women have evolved considerably. It was after writing her first book in 1970, How to Make It in a Man's World, that she found herself—to her surprise—a feminist. She went on to co-found Ms. Magazine and author Growing Up Free: Raising Your Child in the 80s, Getting Yours and the recently published Family Politics: Love and Power on an Intimate Frontier (McGraw-Hill). Pogrebin, 44, lives in New York City with her husband and teen-age son (her twin daughters are in college). Writer Stephani Cook recently met with her for FAMILY WEEKLY to talk about what she thinks feminism has to say to mothers.

Cook: Your book talks about "nonsexist" child raising; sounds complicated, doesn't it?

Pogrebin: The fact of the matter is that nonsexist child rearing is much easier than sexist child rearing, because one need not be as overly self-conscious. Children themselves naturally resist the sex-role stereotyping we're used to thinking of as normal.

Q: There are people who worry about being too casual about gender identity. Not you?

Pogrebin: We do not put a child in peril this way; rather it allows us to focus on the youngster's individual needs. He or she can discover the essence of his or her self without being forced into a mold. What I'm suggesting is not to encourage less but to encourage more, to open up the other half of a child's life. I'm not looking for role reversal any more than for "role appropriate" behavior: a nonsexist can—and should—as easily raise a football player or homemaker as he or she can raise boys and girls who do not conform to such traditional role expectations. Kids are who they are, some typical and some different. We should encourage these differences.

Q: Is there a good quick "test" for a raised parental consciousness?

Pogrebin: Sure. Look at your kid's room: Could it as easily be for a child of the opposite sex? It's not a matter of taking away 32 dolls; it's a matter of adding the truck or basketball that's missing. Nonsexist child rearing adds to the choices. It adds what may have been left out.

Q: What do you think is the future of the family?

Pogrebin: Some people believe that we must choose between the old-fashioned, authoritarian family or no family at all. This is like the soggy, gray, boiled asparagus I had to eat as a child and loathed. When I grew up, I found out there are many ways to cook asparagus so that I'll like it.

Q: You certainly didn't start out as a feminist, did you?

Pogrebin: No, hardly. When I wrote How to Make It in a Man's World, I was a vice president in publishing, but at board meetings I was the one to make coffee and take notes. I was successful, complacent, a woman who did things that were agreeable to men and who didn't make waves. I got into the women's movement because I thought I might be attacked by the feminists for my book, which was manipulative, adaptive and espoused a sort of go-along-to-get-along strategy. I wanted to prepare myself by reading all the feminist material available so I could refute what they were saying. But I found myself electrified by all that I read. It became clear that I would have to count myself as a feminist.

Q: Still, you have had such a "conventional" life.

Pogrebin: There's no denying that details of my biography help defuse objections to my position. It's part of our susceptibility to packaging in general. Unfortunately, packaging is what people tend to look for and trust, rather than substance. . . . It's really an accident that I lucked out with a good marriage; I didn't work at it; I didn't do anything different from anyone else. There are plenty of women who haven't been as lucky as I in that respect. The important thing about marriage is not that two people become one, but that each becomes two. Bert and I are just incredibly compatible; I can't imagine life without him. Going down the aisle was the happiest moment of my life. FW

But now there's good news—exciting news—from one of the world's leading medical institutions:

Researchers there, treating 4,000 hypertensive men and women, succeeded in reversing 85% of the mild cases and 51% of the severe cases—all without using any drugs!

How was it done? Where did this crucial experiment take place? Why did the doctor who conducted the study hail it as "the first scientific proof of what many of us have been seeing in our offices for years"?

It's all explained in a fascinating, 40-page booklet called "The Natural Way to Control High Blood Pressure"—together with a host of other valuable insights to help you cope with blood-pressure problems:

SITTING PRETTY?

Mr. T. is not the sort of chap who can stand to play a mere supporting role. Do you suppose, then, that he'll actually take the news about a new Mr. T. chair sitting down?

Explains the furniture's creator, Pat Waldron, "I was just working on designs one day, when I let my imagination go" (a courageous guy, this Waldron). The result? Mr. T.'s sideburns make up the armrests; the back is comprised of his forehead, hair and eyes; the seat resembles the former bodyguard's flattened cheeks, nose, mustache and upper lip; and the fierce lower lip, chin and beard hold up the chair's bottom, which flips up to make a leg rest.

Waldron is only in the first stages of marketing his design, but he has high hopes for it. The chair certainly would make a fine conversation piece, and comfortwise, well, it just might fit you to a T.

DON'T FUDGE THE FACTS

Nutritional wisdom has long held that sugar should be eaten in moderation. Sure, it gives a quick energy boost, but that eventually gives way to a feeling of depletion. For more lasting energy, experts have recommended the complex starches — found in foods like potatoes and spaghetti — that are broken down into sugars gradually.

So much for nutritional chestnuts, says Phyllis Crapo, a Stanford University dietitian. After feeding 16 test subjects a variety of foods, she and her colleagues found that the starch in some foods — carrots, for example — enters the bloodstream even more rapidly than the sugar in honey does. And here's a real scoop: Ice cream breaks down more slowly than cornflakes do. According to Thomas Wolever, a professor of chemistry at Oxford University, the degree of processing and the amount of heat used in cooking seems to affect the breakdown rate of carbohydrate molecules, which turn into sugar.

The new findings are obviously important to individuals who must monitor their blood sugar levels, like diabetics. But the test results should not be considered encouragement to start mainlining jamocaalmond fudge.

"Although we're a long way from fully understanding what all this means," says Crapo, "we'd advise people to think twice before adopting high-carbohydrate diets."

TUNING OUT

For the past decade, parents, teachers and sociologists have expressed concern about the prevalence of violence on television. But according to a survey by the International Coalition on Television Violence, American TV doesn't depict nearly as much mayhem as its Japanese counterpart does.

To view what the survey describes as "the most violent programs in the world," tune into Japan's Fuji and Asahi networks, which feature samurai and detective shows of unrelenting fierceness. Ranked second for savagery is CTV, a commercial network in Canada. How were the U.S. networks ranked? ABC, NBC and CBS, in that order.

The coalition arrived at these rankings by simply tallying up the number of violent acts per hour. In general, commercial TV was found eight times rougher than public broadcasting systems. And though Japanese TV got a thumbs down for shows like Space Cobra and The Village Team, there was some consolation in the study. U.S. pay-cable services — like HBO, Showtime and The Movie Channel — were adjudged as being more ferocious than seven samurais put together.

WHISTLING WHILE THEY WORK

Everyone knows that career women are not paid as well as their male competitors and that they tend not to move up the corporate ladder as rapidly. Yet, according to a study by SRI International, a California research firm, women are more positive about their jobs than men are.

Of the career women polled, 60 percent felt adequately recognized for their performances, compared to only 48 percent of career men. Among other findings, SRI learned that, on the average, females are slow to be promoted and earn substantially less then males, but despite the differences "they seem to be able to find support and meaning in their work."

THERE'S NOTHING HIDDEN IN OUR FINE PRINT. Here's how the Club Plan works:

You'll get seven books for only 99¢ plus shipping and handling, when accepted as a member. We reserve the right to reject any application. However, once accepted, if you are not completely satisfied with your introductory books, return them within 10 days at our expense to cancel your membership and owe nothing.

Club Magazine: You'll receive the free Club magazine about every four weeks (14 times a year) describing our Club Selections along with over 100 Alternates, which will save you up to 50% off publishers' edition prices. The Featured Selection may sometimes be two books offered to you at a single low price, for even greater savings. The Extra-Value Selection always saves you up to 60% off the publishers' edition prices. In addition, up to four times a year, you may receive offers of special selections, always at big discounts.

If you want both the Featured and Extra-Value Selections, do nothing—they'll be shipped automatically. If you'd prefer one of the Club Selections, an Alternate or no book at all, indicate this on the reply form and return it by the date specified. You'll have at least 10 days. A charge for shipping and handling is added to all shipments.

Club Editions: Our books, selected from all major publishers, are complete hardbound editions sometimes altered in size to fit special presses.

Return Privileges: If you do not have 10 days to decide and receive Selections you don't want, you may return them at our expense.

Your Commitment: You agree to purchase just six books at regular low Club prices during your first membership year, from the hundreds offered. You may then continue to enjoy all the benefits of Club membership with no further obligation or you may resign at any time.

For over 50 years our members have enjoyed hardcover books at savings of up to 50% off publishers' edition prices.

HOMES COTTAGES

IT'S A FACT! You can save 10 years of monthly payments and nearly $50.00 per month financing a $35,000 home.

Jim Walter offers one of the biggest values in the home building industry, 10% MORTGAGE FINANCING. When you plan to build a new home and finance it, even a difference of only 1%, 2% or 3% in the financing rate can, over the term of the mortgage, mean the difference of thousands upon thousands of dollars.

For example, when you finance a $35,000.00 house at 13% over a period of 30 years, your payments will last 10 years longer. Each payment will be nearly $50.00 per month more and you will have spent an extra $58,000 more than if you finance a Jim Walter-built home of the same amount at 10% annual percentage rate. And the more you finance, the more staggering these figures become ... the greater your savings become with Jim Walter Homes.

• YO HO HO! Edward Teach, the pirate, also known as Blackbeard, may have been the subject of this report: TEACH, THIS SLAUGHTER LOVER, HIS FALL NEARS. By Removing one letter from each word, a new, less somber sentiment is made to appear. What letters?

Remove the first letter of each word.

• Sum Verse! A hundred and fifty, when joined to a tree, results in a conflict that jars you and me. Can you explain how this is so?

CL (150 in Roman numerals) added to ASH forms CLASH.

• Say What? It belongs to you yet your friends without buying, borrowing or stealing it, use it much more than you do. What is that?

It's your name.

• Riddle-Me-This! Why did the snake stay indoors? Anaconda the weather. Why are press conferences like shooting stars? They're media-rites.

Prince Valiant

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

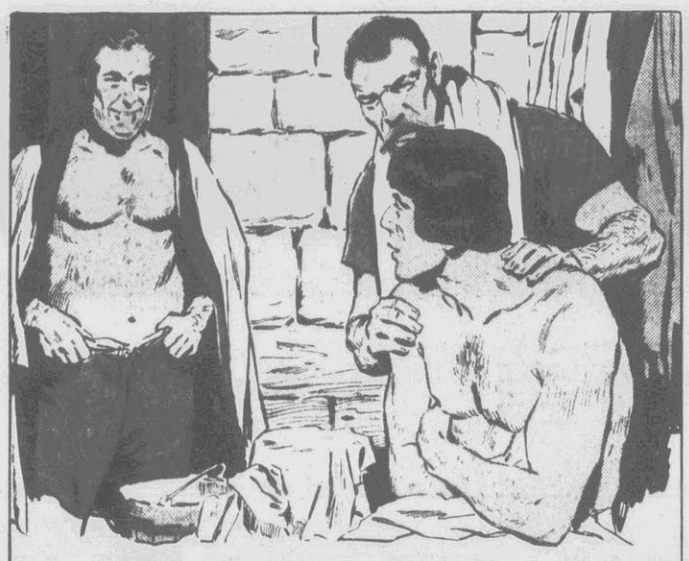

Our Story: FOR A YEAR THE HILL PEOPLE HAVE BEEN HAUNTED BY A SAVAGE BEAST. WHY HAS CAMELOT FAILED TO ACT? PRINCE VALIANT VISITS THE "SCRIPTORIUM." ALL REPORTS MEANT FOR KING ARTHUR'S EYES ARE OPENED IN THIS ROOM, AND FROM HERE GO FORTH THE KING'S ORDERS AND REPLIES. VAL IS MET BY DUNSTAN, THE IMPOSING CHIEF SCRIBE.

DUNSTAN EYES VAL SHARPLY. "NO WRITTEN MESSAGE HAS MENTIONED A BEAST," HE SAYS. "NO SUMMONS HAS COME BY WORD OF MOUTH."

WHAT BECAME OF WALDO'S WARNING? CONFUSED, VAL DECIDES TO CLEAR HIS HEAD. HE ENTERS THE TRAINING ROOM WHERE THE SQUIRES ARE WRESTLING. RUBBED WITH OIL, VAL WILL TEST HIS OLDER MUSCLES AGAINST SOME YOUNGER ONES.

• HE DOES NOT GET THE CHANCE. "IF IT IS A MATCH YOU WANT, SIR VALIANT, THEN A MATCH YOU HAVE," BOOMS A FAMILIAR VOICE. IT IS DUNSTAN'S. "BUT...YOU ARE A MONK," VAL STAMMERS. "BEFORE THAT I WAS A SOLDIER," DUNSTAN LAUGHS. "AND A GOOD ONE. SHALL WE?"

THEN HE STRIKES, THANKING YUAN CHEN FOR INSTRUCTION IN THE CHINESE FIGHTING ARTS. DUNSTAN GOES DOWN.

TALLER AND HEAVIER, DUNSTAN IS A FORMIDABLE FOE. MANY TIMES VAL IS PINNED. FINALLY HE KENS THE MAN'S WEAKNESS: DUNSTAN IS BLIND IN ONE EYE. VAL KEEPS TO THE MONK'S RIGHT, CIRCLING BEHIND.
