Italy Withdraws Troops In Beirut

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Government troops fought off rebel attacks on the strategic mountain town of Souk el-Gharb today, and Italy withdrew its peacekeeping troops from their positions in Beirut. The U.S. Marine contingent of the peacekeeping force has begun moving equipment and non-combat personnel from its base at Beirut's airport, and an American source said today he expects the Marines to be out of the city by next week. "The redeployment plan has been approved, and the Marines are just awaiting the order to execute it," said the source, who asked not to be identified. "I don't expect the Marines to be at the airport next week."

Police said 16 people were killed and 60 wounded in battles overnight in central Beirut and at Souk el-Gharb, which overlooks the presidential palace and the Marine base. The army garrison at Souk el-Gharb is under attack by Druse insurgents, while the fighting in Beirut pits Shiite Moslem militiamen against army troops and Christian militiamen along the line dividing the capital's Moslem and Christian sectors.

The Italians abandoned their positions in west Beirut's Sabra and Chatilla Palestinian refugee camps by midmorning to board landing craft headed for navy vessels off shore. An Italian spokesman said 100 members of the 1,400-man contingent would stay on shore as a clean-up crew, 300 would remain on ships off Beirut, and about 1,000 would sail home.

President Reagan's national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, said on Sunday in New York that the 1,200 Marines remaining at the airport had begun their pullout also. McFarlane said the Marines "are moving already and I'm sure there are some aboard ship by this time." He said all would be aboard the ships by mid-March. But a spokesman for the Marines in Beirut said today that although they were loading equipment onto the ships, they had not received orders to start the troop redeployment.

"We don't have the orders yet," said Air Force Capt. Jack Giese. "The equipment going out is support equipment." Giese said such support personnel as cooks and supply workers had been flown out. He referred to the evacuees as "extras" and said "nothing is going on" concerning the movement of combat troops.

The Reagan administration said last week that the Marines would start pulling back from their bunkers to 6th Fleet ships off the coast of Beirut over the weekend. The Marines will remain in the Mediterranean, McFarlane said. "Their mission will remain what it has, to respond wherever they are needed, and if that is Lebanon, then Lebanon is where they'll go," he said during an interview on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley."

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said its warplanes on Sunday hit Palestinian guerrilla bases at Naameh near Damour, 12 miles south of Beirut along the Mediterranean coast, and at Bhamdoun and Hammana in the central mountains.

Radio reports said Syrian batteries in the mountains fired on, but did not hit the attacking planes.

Western reporters who have covered the fighting along the coast said they have not seen Palestinians around the coastal areas, although they are known to have had positions at Bhamdoun.

Before the air raids were announced, Cabinet Secretary Dan

Meridor warned in Jerusalem that Israel would not let the Palestinians build bases inside Druse lines.

Police said the raids killed at least three people and wounded 19 in Naahme and Damour.

The air strikes were the first by Israel since Syrian-backed Druse and Shiite rebels shoved the Lebanese army out of positions south of Beirut last week, placing the government of President Amin Gemayel in jeopardy. The Druse, Shiites and Syria have subsequently rejected an eight-point reconciliation plan offered by Gemayel.

In Syria, Shiite leader Nabih Berri publicly demanded Gemayel's resignation as a condition for a peaceful settlement, saying, "This is an irrevocable demand."

Berri commended early today (Please turn to Page 8)

'Real Season' Opens In Iowa

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer
DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Democrats officially begin the process of picking their presidential candidate today with former Vice President Walter F. Mondale looking for an opening victory in Iowa's precinct caucuses on the long trail to the nomination this summer in San Francisco.

The candidates have all but wrapped up campaigning in the longest, most expensive "exhibition season" yet, as eight Democratic men fight for the right to challenge President Reagan in the fall elections.

Today, as the Rev. Jesse Jackson says, the "regular season" begins.

Reagan, who has no significant opposition for renomination, was flying into the state for a brief visit today designed to steal some of the thunder from the Democratic caucuses and fire up the GOP partisans going to their own caucuses tonight.

But a new Iowa Poll by the Des Moines Register said he trails both Mondale and Sen. John Glenn of Ohio in hypothetical general election contests. Mondale led Reagan 53 percent to 39 percent in the telephone survey of 1,003 adults across the state Feb. 12-16, with Sen. John Glenn of Ohio beating Reagan 50-39.

In his prepared remarks, Reagan sounded the themes of the fall campaign, ridiculing the Democratic hopefuls as big spenders too closely tied to special interest groups.

"If the big spenders get their way, they'll charge everything on your "Taxpayers Express Card." And believe me, they never leave home without it," the president said. "Aren't these people who talk so much about fairness for all Americans the same ones who can't see you unless you belong to a special interest group?"

Mondale, leading in the polls both here and in New Hampshire where the first primary will be held next week, stopped short of claiming victory.

"I think we are doing well in Iowa," he told reporters in Jacksonville, Fla. "Iowans will now decide. I'm content we've done everything we could to deal with the issues."

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, locked in a tight race for the No. 2 spot behind Mondale, made one last campaign swing here Sunday before heading for New England.

Mondale was campaigning in Illinois today, before flying back tonight for what his campaign has planned as a victory celebration. Sens. Gary Hart of Colorado and Alan Cranston of California, former South Dakota Sen. George McGovern and former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew were scheduled to do a little last-minute campaigning and telephoning around the state today.

Jackson and South Carolina Sen. Ernest F. Hollings made little effort here, preferring to concentrate on New Hampshire and its Feb. 28 primary.

Perhaps 100,000 Iowa Democrats will gather in living rooms and schools across the state to be the first Americans to officially pass judgment on the eight hopefuls. The weather forecast was for a moderately chilly night with no new snow.

A poll by the Des Moines Register found Democrats likely to go to the caucuses giving Mondale 44 percent of their votes, far more than any other candidate.

Since the poll results are based on interviews with only 66 Democrats who said they will definitely go to the caucuses, the sample error margin is plus or minus 12 percentage points.

Manteo Rushing Its $10 Million Facelift

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's 400th anniversary is not far off and construction crews are working double shifts to finish a $10 million facelift of the Manteo waterfront in time for the July celebration.

Thousands of people are expected to visit Manteo this summer to celebrate the anniversary of the arrival of the first English-speaking colonists.

In anticipation of the celebration, construction began last week on more than 100,000-square-feet of retail businesses, condominiums and parking in the Roanoke Island town of about 900 people.

Boardwalks along the waterfront will connect condominiums with shops, a marina and a pedestrian walkway that will take visitors to the dockside of the Elizabeth II, the $650,000 16th century sailing vessel launched last year.

Four hundred sailing vessels will kick off the celebration July 13 by sailing from Elizabeth City to Roanoke Island. Former newscaster Walter Cronkite will lead the flotilla to open the three-year celebration.

Manteo's new downtown, developed by the James Rouse Co. of Baltimore will be the showcase for the anniversary. The same company rebuilt Philadelphia's historic downtown and the Waterside festival market in Norfolk.

The 50,000 visitors expected July 13 will find a festival in the old English tradition, with costumed street vendors, musicians and performers. The new waterfront will be hung with banners and stages will be set up for balladeers, cloggers, West Indian reggae bands and storytellers.

Roving minstrels will use the small streets and lanes to amuse their audiences and mimes will follow the Elizabethan streetcars that will offer food to visitors.

Fireworks are also planned for the kickoff celebration, as well as a special performance of The Lost Colony.

A special reception is also planned for British visitors in the 10-acre Elizabethan Gardens.

A special Roanoke Voyages commemorative stamp will be issued by the Postal Service the same weekend.

Communists To Tell Their Side

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Communist demonstrators are expected this week to tell for the first time their side of the 1979 anti-Klan rally in Greensboro in which five of their comrades died.

The communists refused to testify in a 1980 murder trial stemming from the Nov. 3, 1979, confrontation with a caravan of Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis.

The civil rights trial of nine Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis was scheduled to resume Tuesday because today was a federal holiday.

An attorney for the Greensboro Civil Rights Fund, a group representing the legal interests of survivors and associates of the victims of the shootout, said Communist Workers Party members are willing to testify now because they believe prosecutors are more serious about seeking convictions.

"It appears that the prosecution is seeking convictions against the Klan and Nazis, whereas that was not at all apparent during the state proceedings," attorney Lewis Pitts said.

Martha Nathan, widow of Dr.

Michael Nathan who was killed at the rally, was jailed for contempt of court during the 1980 trial when she stood up in court and yelled, "This trial is a sham."

Her colleague, CWP associate Tom Clark, was jailed for contempt at the same trial when he told the judge, "I've got nothing but contempt for these proceedings."

In the state trial, six Klansmen and Nazis were acquitted of murder and rioting charges. Five of those defendants are among the nine defendants currently being tried in federal court on civil rights charges.

Pitts and demonstration survivors would not discuss their testimony because of a gag order forbidding any potential witnesses, defendants or attorneys from discussing the case publicly.

"I would certainly like to talk to you about why we are testifying in this trial and not in the other one ... but I can't," said Dr. Paul Bermanzohn, a New York psychiatrist who was at the 1979 rally.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Keep springtime alive all year round with this exquisite "Carolina Garden Afghan," made in a series of squares that, when joined, form the trellis and popcorn diamond design. Step-by-step directions without abbreviations are written with the beginner in mind.

To obtain directions for making the Carolina Garden Afghan, send your request for Leaflet No. CL-0219 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler (The Daily Reflector), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. C-0219 by sending a check or money order for $47 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes yarn, instructions and shipping charges. Superior quality 4-ply Wintuk yarn in natural is furnished for the background and an assortment of colors in a fluffy brushed acrylic for the flower centers.

Identification of crochet hook sizes can be confusing — not just to the beginner but for many who have crocheted for years. Perhaps one day hook sizing will be standardized with all hooks identified in millimeter sizing. Until that day arrives, however, the following information may be helpful to you.

Crochet hooks are made in steel, plastic and aluminum. The steel hooks, for the most part, are used for very fine work on thin crochet threads, while the plastic or aluminum ones are for heavier threads and yarns.

The steel hooks are identified by numbers. The lower the number, the larger the hook. The higher the number, the smaller the hook. When millimeter sizing is used the opposite is true.

In the United States, most plastic or aluminum hooks are identified by letters, with A being the smallest and Q the largest. In addition, there is an old and a new lettering system used in this country while a different identification is used in United Kingdom countries.

If you are thoroughly confused at this point, you can see why it would be a tremendous boon if all hooks were standardized in millimeters.

The most important thing for you to realize is that you should be using whatever size hook gives you the gauge listed for any given pattern. Even though a hook size is suggested on each set of directions, you will not necessarily use that size.

Regular readers know how often I stress the importance of using any size implement (hook or knitting needle) that will give you the specified gauge. And,

Children Of Divorce Extra Cautious On Marriage, Parenthood, Study Shows

By SUSAN RUEL
BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Children of divorce look back on their childhood with lingering sorrow and are extra cautious before marriage and childbearing, a 10-year study shows.

"Although the greater majority of those young people today are economically self-supporting or still enrolled in educational programs and are law-abiding as well as relatively stable in their choice of residence, a significant number share the sense that their childhood and adolescence were significantly burdened by the parental divorce," says Judith Wallerstein, visiting senior lecturer in the University of California at Berkeley's School of Social Welfare.

In a recent lecture based on her study, Ms. Wallerstein said she found their feelings of anger at their parents had abated since she last interviewed the 100 young people five years ago.

Most of the respondents are from white, middle-class homes in northern California.

"Overall, these youngsters emerged as young adults that take economic responsibility for themselves," she said. "Of those still in school, a significant number are working at part-time or full-time jobs to support their way. Some youngsters with very wealthy fathers are working their way through the university by a combination of part-time jobs."

Ms. Wallerstein interviewed the subjects at several intervals after their parents' divorces.

Her research at the 18-month interval revealed a split between the sexes, with young boys feeling more vulnerable and troubled than the girls in their behavior at school, on the playground and at home.

In her latest study, she said, a new pattern was emerging among the young women, many of whom left home after high school graduation to live with older men.

"These young women are attractive, intelligent and, in some instances, highly talented. Yet they are worried, even despairing, fearful of being rejected in their search for a man who would care for them and burdened by an anxiety, which they related directly to their parents' divorce," she said.

"A few among them were consumed with the anxiety that relationships could not be trusted from minute to minute," Ms. Wallerstein said. "Said one: 'How can you expect commitment when anyone can change his mind?'"

The study did not focus on the significance of who initiated the divorce or how that variable might affect boys and girls differently.

Most of those surveyed were eager for monogamous, lasting relationships, but the majority agreed marriage should not be entered into early or hastily.

"These young people remained critical of their parents for having made the mistake of a misguided or foolish marriage," the sociologist said. "They were especially critical of their parents for not having rectified or recognized the mistake before the children were born."

As a result, the young adults favored living with a lover for several years prior to marriage, then waiting a few more years before having children, Ms. Wallerstein said.

Her research also suggests children of divorce develop stronger ties with siblings. "It seems that when the relationship between the parents weakens and disrupts, adolescents often turn towards each other, to huddle together and protect each other, to love each other, to remain intimate with each other, and perhaps most of all, to remain faithful to each other," she said.

because tension varies from one individual to another, the hook or needle size needed will differ also.

Don't be afraid to use old hooks from which the size has worn off. When you are making sample swatches to test your gauge and find that you achieve the gauge with an unmarked hook, don't be concerned that you don't know what size it is.

So remember — the only size that really counts is the finished size of the crocheted or knitted item you are making and the "right" hook or needle size for you is the one that gives you the right gauge.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A

OVERDENTURES

There is a new way to make dentures which vastly improves the retention of dental plates and has become a boon to denture-wearers. Hopeless teeth are no longer extracted. Instead, root canal treatment is performed, then the teeth are cut down to the level of the gumline. The roots of the teeth remain imbedded in the jawbone and the presence of these roots prevents the bone under the gums from shrinking. This preserves the ridges and gives good retention and support for the dentures.

Another method is to cement metal studs on top of the embedded roots. The studs protrude about 1/4 inch. Corresponding snaps are fastened to the denture. All the individual needs to do is to snap the denture onto the studs and there are no more worries about slipping dentures. An overdenture can give you a more natural feel than a conventional denture because your own natural root tips transfer tactile sensations directly into your bone. That makes the overdenture feel more "real."

Salvation Army Offers Family Lost-And-Found

DEAR ABBY: When I saw the item in your column letting people know that the Salvation Army is expert at locating lost relatives, I had to write.

I am Dutch and my wife is of Ukrainian descent. We were married 32 years ago in Sydney, Australia, and later moved to the United States. We learned that about half my wife's family was "missing." A friend suggested that I contact the Salvation Army, so I did. I gave it as much information as I could about these missing relatives.

After two years the Salvation Army advised us that my wife's sister had been married and was living in Chicago! Contact was made with that sister, who had located another sister in Poland!

Thanks to the Salvation Army we were able to track down all our relatives with the exception of one brother. Is it any wonder I am eternally grateful to it?

A.C.S., ANCHORAGE, ALASKA

DEAR A.C.S.: Here's another touching testimonial:

DEAR ABBY: Last Dec. 22, my wife called her brother in Chicago to wish him a "Merry Christmas," only to be told that the apartment-hotel where he lived had burned two weeks before — that her brother was not among the listed dead or injured, but he couldn't be located.

My wife immediately called all our Chicago trying to find him. Thank God we called the Salvation Army's missing persons division in Chicago, for that was the one organization that got the job done!

The people at Salvation Army located my wife's brother, unidentified at the Cook County morgue — possibly just days away from a potter's grave, and miserable days of wondering by his family for the remainder of their collective lives as to what happened to him.

Thanks to the Salvation Army and its concern for others everywhere, my brother-in-law now lies peacefully at rest beside his mother and father in Tennessee. His living loved ones still grieve his loss, but that loss would have been many times greater if he had never been located.

We wish to give a special thanks to those customers that were understanding, kind, and even expressing bits of humor to our personnel. Whose order should we have refused? Funeral flowers, ones last expression of love for a family member, loved one, or friend, hospital orders to the sick, wire orders, and so on... This was a decision we could not make, so we tried to take and fill all orders although some orders were late getting out. You can help us solve this problem by placing your wire and local orders three weeks in advance. Again, we extend our thanks to those who understood and our apologies to those who did not.

To Our Employees

Cox Floral Service, Inc. wishes to extend a special thanks to all our employees during valentines for their loyalty, long hours, and hard work; expressing their love, talents, and creating bouquets with lasting love. To our designers arranging roses with thorns in their hands, with no time to get them out, so our customers wouldn't be disappointed.

To our employees cutting and conditioning choice flowers.

To our employees patiently trying to process wire orders, with circuits all across the country busy, many times taking hours to get your wire order completed, and for the times they tried and were unable to complete your wire.

To our delivery personnel, trying to get your flowers delivered on time. It was impossible with the weather conditions, three inches of rain causing high water, slowing the loading and delivery time. For their patience when they arrived at a home and no one was there, leaving a note and returning the flowers and placing many telephone calls trying to reach the recipient, making sure their flowers could be delivered and received.

To our employees cheerfully helping the customer that braved the rain and wind to place an order personally.

Woes Continue

There are new woes for American grown tobacco. Imports increased sharply last year because tobacco can be produced with less expense in foreign countries.

It is an old story of cheap labor in other countries. Since labor is a large part of tobacco production cost, it is difficult for American farmers to compete with their higher labor costs.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture reported that imports increased 30 percent to 239,178 tons in 1983, while exports decreased by 8 percent to 237,888.

The USDA said duty-paid imports exceeded leaf exports for the first time.

The strong U.S. dollar, increased competition from other countries, less demand, high U.S. prices and foreign exchange shortages in some nations were blamed for the change.

In addition the U.S. exported $1.12 billion in cigarettes, which was down 18 percent.

Some of the conditions which brought about the import increase may change as economic conditions change. There has to be concern, however, for the inroads foreign growers seem to be making in the American market. What needs to be done is clear, although how to do it is complicated indeed. We must produce a better quality tobacco for the American and foreign markets, and re-establish U.S. grown leaf as superior ... and we must continue efforts to reduce the overall cost of producing tobacco.

Where Did They Go

In this day of "modern" political campaigns, we feel the question must be asked: Whatever happened to those press conferences and "meet the public" sessions that were held on the courthouse steps.

Candidates this year aren't even coming close to the courthouse. In fact, they aren't even coming to town.

In the last few days, just think back:

First, Gov. Hunt came to Pitt on a campaign swing. Where did he go? To a farm equipment dealership.

Second, Attorney General Rufus Edmisten came looking for votes for his gubernatorial campaign. His choice for a "press conference" site? To quote his publicity spokesman, "an old abandoned country store with tobacco barns in the background" on Stantonsburg Road.

And then state Sen. Bob Jordan, who wants to be lieutenant governor, wound up on a farm near Haddock's Crossroads. You couldn't even point to it from the courthouse. At least one reporter never found the place.

Are they trying to say the votes this year are all down on the farm?

Fender Benders

NEW YORK (AP) — You can never tell what the economy will produce next, despite the efforts of several hundred thousand people who, to one degree or another, earn a living by claiming to see the future.

They write letters about the stock market, they run research projects in banks, they occupy chairs in academe, they occupy slots at the Federal Reserve, they hold titles in government, they advise the president.

But so far as can be determined, none of them told Americans that with the improvement in the economy they would start bending fenders at a greater rate than in the late recession.

Word from the Insurance Information Institute suggests that automobile accidents have grown more frequent as the economy improves and as people become more active in pursuit of their selling and buying goals.

Sean Mooney, institute vice president-economist who studies 12 key states to compile his statistics, found a 5.6 percent increase in accident frequency between the third quarter of 1982 and the same months of 1983.

More disturbing, says Mooney, is that the worst of the three months — July, August, September — was the final one of the quarter. In September, he reports, accidents jumped 10.2 percent over the same month in 1982.

Since then, of course, consumers have been even more active, especially around the Main Streets and malls at Christmas time, and in January too. Statistics for those months are still being compiled.

From Cornell University comes word of another economic change that might disturb those who fight for women's equality. Men, according to the report, continue to control the bulk of farmland in private ownership.

Women did make gains, according to the analysis of government data by rural sociologist Charles Geisler, agricultural economist Nelson Bills and others. In 1946 women owned only 11 percent of farmland; in 1978, they owned 15 percent.

However, say the analysts, land owned by women in 1978 was relatively less valuable than in 1946. They explain that the actual size of farm units owned by women has declined, and that small units may be worth less than big ones.

RALEIGH — When N.C. Opinion Research Inc. released its poll on the race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, one candidate claimed the lead while two others said the poll grossly underestimated their strength.

In reality, the poll shows that this race has no leader and no recognizable line between frontrunners and darkhorses. The poll shows that people are not only refusing to decide how they'll vote, some are un-deciding. The poll showed a greater percentage of undecided voters in late January than in late September.

The poll was conducted by political consultant Walter DeVries and showed that his client, Eddie Knox, had taken a two-point lead over Attorney General Rufus Edmisten. It was the first poll released publicly that showed Edmisten out of the lead and it confirmed the widespread feeling in political circles that Edmisten's campaign is floundering.

Edmisten dismissed the poll as self-serving on Knox's part. Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, who fell to fourth place in the poll, tried to reassure his supporters that polls never accurately reflect his strength. (He's got history on his side in that regard.)

How accurate is the poll? If you compare it to a poll done by another Democratic candidate, it looks sound. A source in that campaign said DeVries' results generally coincided with theirs. That is, Knox in front but not gaining greatly while Edmisten and Ingram slide.

The problem with this poll comes Knox's interpretation of it. If he thinks it shows him moving ahead, he's wrong. He took first place by default when Edmisten and Ingram dropped behind. Also consider that, by design, the poll was taken immediately after a Knox TV advertising blitz. DeVries does that to catch his candidate's standing at a high point and to make it appear that his man has momentum. But even with the ads, Knox had gained only three points, from 16.7 to 19.7 percent, in four months. On the other hand, Edmisten and Ingram haven't been advertising.

The poll also showed that Knox's lead is attributable entirely to his strength in Charlotte. In media markets outside the Queen City, Knox gets voter shares very much in line with those of Edmisten, Lauch Faircloth and Ingram. Knox gets 41 percent of the vote in Charlotte and that pushes him ahead statewide. If he wants to gain in the future, he'll have to do so elsewhere. He's pretty much tapped the Charlotte area's potential. A concentrated base of support like that could also easily come under siege from others.

The big winner in the Knox poll was Lauch Faircloth who rose to third — up 9.7 points — after a TV blitz. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green gained two points.

In general, the poll shows a leveling off of support for four candidates with Green still within striking distance and Tom Gilmore still curiously low despite his endorsement from the N.C. Association of Educators.

This is the time when the race should be shaking out. Some should be moving ahead while others fall behind. This poll shows that the shake-out has not yet occurred. To get to the current leveled-off situation, Knox and Faircloth have had to gain while Edmisten and Ingram have had to fall.

It is not clear at all, however, if the movement which brought these four candidates to their current positions is sustainable. The poll may simply be a reflection of the ad blitzes two conducted at polling time. Give this race another month. If Knox and Faircloth continue to move, it will indicate a shake-out is developing and then the other four candidates will have to struggle to hold the support they currently have.

Strength For Today

Be not anxious. Thus said our great Master himself. But how is it possible to obey such a command? Who can be otherwise than anxious in a world constantly under the threat of nuclear warfare? Who can avoid anxiety in an environment in which all the former ways of doing things are rapidly being changed?

How can it be expected that people can face the possibility of unemployment because of age or a downturn in the economy and not get worried. Who can think of his business, his bank account, his debts or his securities and not toss about considerably every night?

Yet, viewed simply from the common sense viewpoint, worry does no good. Spiritually we damage our faith; socially we spoil happiness for ourselves and others.

Someone has said, "Anxiety does not empty tomorrow of its sorrows; it empties today of its strengths."

History Tells Of A Turnabout

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the election campaign, neither presidential candidate addressed a black issue or a black audience. Now that he was in office, the new president blithely discarded letters from black leaders begging for an appointment.

With black men being strung up and slain by white mobs once every other week, what blacks wanted to see the president about was a law making lynching a federal crime. But he ignored the issue. At no time in his first term would he say a public word against lynching.

What little contact the president had with representatives of the black race was often carried on through his valet and maid, Irvin and Elizabeth McDuffie.

The president was Franklin D. Roosevelt. The time was the 1930s. The country was truly two separate societies, one black, one white, and the black society was almost powerless. Most blacks couldn't vote. Most lived in the South, where they were kept from voting.

How this group of people came to abandon their almost religious fervor for the Republicans — the party of the Great Emancipator, Lincoln — is told in a new book by Princeton University historian

Nancy J. Weiss.

The book, "Farewell to the Party of Lincoln," explores that enduring shift in black loyalties, and, along the way, sheds some light on present-day politics.

The reason, of course, was economic. Blacks suffered severely in the Depression, and Roosevelt's relief and reform programs gave them bread, housing and hope.

But it did next to nothing about segregation. Even FDR's New Deal programs embraced the pervasive segregation of the times. Public housing was segregated housing. Blacks who came to work for the government could not eat lunch in the segregated cafeterias in government buildings.

Roosevelt did nothing about any of it.

Asked about lynchings at his press conferences, he declined to comment.

Black reporters weren't admitted to his news conferences.

"Mr. Roosevelt," said Roy Wilkins, the pioneer civil rights leader, "was no friend of the Negro. He wasn't an enemy, but he wasn't a friend."

But then something happened. Roosevelt sought re-election and, strange as it now seems in light of his landslide 1936 victory over Alfred Landon, he wasn't completely confident of winning. The urban Northern black vote was worth wooing.

At the Democratic convention of 1928, in Houston, black alternates and black spectators had been fenced off behind chicken wire. There were no black delegates. Blacks were Republicans. That was that. And both parties could ignore them.

At the Democratic convention of 1936, 10 black delegates and 22 alternates were seated and black reporters sat in the press section. The platform was still silent on black issues, but a black clergyman delivered the invocation ("followed immediately," Ms. Weiss reports, "as if to remedy the damage, by the singing of 'Dixie'").

The Republicans paid attention, too. In advertisements aimed at black readers, they promised "the abolition of the horrible discrimination established in such agencies as Unemployment Relief, Social Security Law, the Civilian Conservation Corps, the National Youth Administration and other emergency agencies by the Southern-controlled, Roosevelt New Deal Democratic administration."

In the election, blacks voted on-essidely Democratic, and the political system paid them off in a timely matter.

In 1937, some 390,000 blacks were employed on Works Progress Administration projects; 10,000 black children were cared for daily in WPA nursery schools; 35,000 black youngsters attended school with National Youth Administration help.

None of this helped pass anti-lynching legislation. Roosevelt did nothing to break a Southern filibuster against a House-passed bill. He allowed Mrs. Roosevelt to watch the debate from the public galleries — he never did anything to keep her from revealing her egalitarian sympathies — but he remained silent, in respect of the Southern grip on power in Congress.

Nonetheless, the Roosevelt story shows how dramatically bloc politics can bring about change. Fifty years later, it is the Republicans who are making the argument to the nation's blacks that the Democrats are taking them for granted and that a show of independence will serve their interests.

Brothers Lehman Make Their Mark

WASHINGTON (AP) — To many people, the name Lehman brothers conjures up a Wall Street investment firm. But to followers of government, the phrase means something else — the three brothers who hold national security positions in the Reagan administration.

The most visible, of course, is John Lehman Jr., the outspoken 41-year-old secretary of the Navy who has publicly feuded with other senior Pentagon officials, defense contractors and Congress.

Lesser known are his two brothers — Joseph, 37, the chief spokesman for the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, and Christopher, 35, a presidential assistant who is a coordinator of defense matters for the National Security Council. Unrelated to the trio is Ronald Lehman, an arms control specialist on the National Security Council.

All three Lehman brothers are influential in national security because they are adept at playing politics in a city which has raised that game to an art form, say officials who would discuss the trio only on condition they not be named.

"They know a lot of people in town and they have a lot of connections," said one congressman who declined to be named. "They are good at playing the game of coalition-building and they know how to cover their flanks, which is important in Washington."

Influential brother acts are nothing new to Washington, with the Kennedy family standing above all others.

In the past three decades, other famous Washington brothers have been John Foster and Allen Dulles; Walter and Eugene Rostow; McGeorge and William Bundy; Nelson and David Rockefeller; President Eisenhower and his brother, Milton; Sen. Carl Levin and Rep. Sander Levin, the Cranes, and the Burtons.

The three Lehmans, along with a fourth brother and a sister, were raised in Glenside, a suburb north of Philadelphia. Steve Lehman, 26, works for a Seattle engineering firm while Patricia Lehman Loesch is a mother of five living in Jenkintown, Pa.

John Lehman Jr. was the first to come to Washington. After receiving degrees from St. Joseph's College, Cambridge University, and University of Pennsylvania, he moved here in 1969 and worked for Henry Kissinger on the National Security Council staff. He is also a 20-year veteran of the naval reserve.

Chris followed in 1975 when, after also graduating from St. Joseph's, he began working for Sen. Harry Byrd of Virginia. He later worked briefly for Sen. Robert Griffin of Michigan and Sen. John Warner of Virginia before joining the Reagan administration in 1981, where he was director of the division of strategic planning before moving to the National Security Council last year.

Joseph, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and later Georgetown University, entered national security through the Abington Corp., a consulting firm set up by brother John. He joined the Reagan administration in its early days.

Letter-Bomb Alert Just A Precaution

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Major Gen. Al Gray says his warnings to wives of U.S. servicemen stationed in Lebanon about possible letter bombs was part of ongoing anti-terrorist training at Camp Lejeune.

Gray, commander of the 2nd Marine Division from which troops assigned to Lebanon were drawn, said he knew of no incidences of letter bombs or package bombs being sent to wives of servicemen in North Carolina.

"To my knowledge, there have been no letter or package bomb threats in this area," Gray said on Sunday. "I just wanted to put the whole thing to bed."

The News and Observer of Raleigh on Saturday quoted unnamed sources as saying Gray had issued warnings to wives of Marines stationed in Beirut about a possible threat from terrorists through letter bombs.

Gray said that at a meeting with wives of men assigned to the 22nd Marine Amphibious Unit on Feb. 11, he merely gave out some tips of a general nature which, he said, "were some of the same things given the husbands during their training."

He said the conference with the wives came at their request.

The wife of a Marine currently serving in Lebanon, who said she attended the conference told the Wilmington Star-News that wives were urged to be on the lookout for letters which had a typed return address, a postmark other than that of the Fleet Post Office, or of letters and packages with too much postage.

The woman, who asked not to be identified, also said letters and packages from foreign countries where they didn't know anyone or from companies they have never heard of were also mentioned.

Marines and sailors in the division have been and will continue to receive anti-terrorist training for their protection, Gray said. He said that was necessary "because of the kinds of people you're apt to run into where Marines go."

Suspect Death By Natural Cause

WILLIAMSTON — An abnormal cardiac rhythm has been determined as the primary factor in the sudden death of Augustus Smith, Jr., according to Dr. Robert R. Sloss, an assistant to area medical examiner Dr. Lawrence Harris in Greenville.

Sloss said that additional tests were being conducted, but that it appears at this stage that Smith's death was due to natural causes.

Smith, a full-time student at Martin Community College, was playing recreational basketball at the school when he collapsed at about 1:30 p.m. Friday. The Williamston Rescue Squad reported to the scene. A spokesman for the squad said that Smith had no pulse or respiration when rescue workers arrived on the scene. CPR was administered with no response, with Smith pronounced dead on arrival by doctors at Martin General Hospital.

Martin Community College Dean of Student Affairs said that Smith's "medical file indicated he was in good health with no health problems or allergies of any type." He said he called Roanoke High School, where Augustus graduated, and his file there did not show any health problems.

Investigating Plant Break-In

Pitt County deputies were investigating today a break-in at the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. plant on the eastern bypass that resulted in damages to the facility and the theft of cash and ice coolers, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

He said damages estimated at $500 occurred in the incident, which was reported at 7 a.m. today. He said approximately $58 in cash and at least two coolers were taken.

Entrance was gained on the east side of the plant, he said, noting that two doors were damaged.

Topdressing with nitrogen is a very important practice in profitable small grain production. It can often mean the difference between a high yield and a low one. This nutrient is crucial because it promotes tillering, ensures a large number of heads, and promotes more kernels per head and more weight per kernel. All lead to increased yields.

The best way to apply the nitrogen for a given crop is through a split application. Ideally, this is done with one application occurring in February and one application in March. The total amount has been boosted to 125 pounds per acre in contrast to the 80 pounds that was once recommended. The newer varieties are bred in a manner which makes them able to utilize more nitrogen. Use of an even higher rate may cause lodging in some small grain varieties. A higher rate may also increase susceptibility to glume blotch.

The amount of nitrogen to be applied can be reduced where small grain follows peanuts and soybeans. These residues may supply as much as 50-60 and 30-40 pounds per acre, respectively to the small grain. In addition, with the cost of nitrogen, higher rates will increase cost of production.

Where small grain will be grazed, if possible, split the application also.

Copper is also important in small grain production. Unlike nitrogen, it is needed in very small amounts. It's role in small grain production is associated in some way with chlorophyll and enzyme activity.

Two-five pounds of actual copper can be applied in the fall as a dry fertilizer application. This will provide a sufficient level for several years. Cooper can also be applied as a foliage spray. This application can occur up until the middle of March but this method lasts for only one season. No more than one-half pound should be applied with this method.

Weed control is another consideration of wheat producers. Generally, the combination of Banvel plus 2,4-D amine will control a greater number of different winter annual broadleaf weeds. This combination may be tank mixed by the grower.

Small grains should be treated in the fully tillered stage before the plant begins to joint. This is usually when the grain is four to eight inches tall, around late February or March in North Carolina. Spraying grain too young (before tillering) or during rapid jointing, heading, and flowering stages can reduce yields. Better results are obtained when day temperatures are above 50 degrees.

For ground application use a properly calibrated sprayer to apply the herbicide in 15 to 20 gallons of water per acre. Use flat spray or whirl chamber nozzles for even distribution of the spray solution.

Where small grains are topdressed with nitrogen solution and applied through a sprayer giving uniform spray coverage, 2,4-D, Banvel, or 2,4-D plus Banvel can be applied in the nitrogen solution. Maintain continuous agitation during all mixing and spraying operations. Apply immediately, the same day it is prepared. Do not store the spray mixture. There may be some temporary leaf burn, but this should not reduce yield.

Producers should be especially aware of wild garlic. Considerable dockage can be result with severe problems. Nitrogen fertilization plus herbicide is needed for control of this weed. Treat infested fields with two pints of 2,4-D per acre. This amount will not effectively kill wild garlic, but the production of aerial bulbets will be reduced. Also, the tops of garlic plants will be bent down in order that a grain combine may be set high enough to pass over them without picking up garlic bulbets. ## Five Dead In Wrecks

Five people died in weekend traffic accidents on North Carolina roads and highways, including a Rowland man who drove over 100 miles per hour trying to elude South Carolina police, the state Highway Patrol reported.

Weighing Rule For Funeral Flag

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The Burlington town council Tuesday will consider an ordinance requested by police to require all cars in a funeral procession to display a small flag.

No North Carolina laws govern funeral processions. Only tradition and courtesy provide that drivers in a funeral turn on their headlights, and that passing motorists pull over until the mourners have gone by.

"We've got to make people realize that tradition is one thing and reality is another," said Capt. Tommy J. Bray of the Burlington Police Department.

Bray said he believes flags similar to ones used by some funeral homes on hearses and limousines might help prevent such accidents.

Mondale Running Big Risks In Iowa's Kickoff

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The expectations couldn't be much higher for Walter F. Mondale, and that's the clearest danger today for the front-runner in Iowa's traditional kickoff of the Democratic presidential campaign. Anything less a first-place finish in the Iowa precinct caucuses would devastate Mondale's chances of being the 1984 Democratic presidential nominee. No one in the Mondale organization or in the campaigns of his Democratic rivals expects the former vice president to finish anywhere but on top of the field.

That expectation is supported by public opinion polls as well as the candidates' telephone canvassing. The post-caucus debate is certain to focus on whether Mondale finished far enough ahead of his competition.

Winning isn't everything for Mondale. The health of his campaign will be judged by the margin of victory.

A narrow victory would severely wound his candidacy and require him to come back strongly in the New Hampshire primary on Feb. 28.

On the other hand, if he captures half the vote in the big field, Mondale will come out of Iowa a tough candidate to beat.

"We'd like to see some distance between number one and number two," said Don Foley, a spokesman for the Mondale campaign in Iowa.

Mondale's opponents are playing the usual political game of setting the highest possible standard for the front-runner.

"Mondale will be in the 50 percent range or over," said Jerry Vento, campaign manager for Sen. John Glenn.

"When you talk to people who have made up their minds, it's over 60 percent (for Mondale)," said Sergio Bendixen, Sen. Alan Cranston's campaign manager.

Bendixen added that if Mondale got 60 percent or more "the fight for the nomination may be over before it begins."

The key is turnout. Mondale campaign officials believe their candidate has solid support in Iowa, but they fear many of his supporters will stay home because they think he's a sure winner who doesn't need their votes.

To counter that, Mondale's final campaign thrust in Iowa emphasized the need to attend the caucuses.

"Don't take anything for granted," said the former vice president in a five-minute paid radio speech. "You are needed."

In Iowa appearances, Mondale would remind supporters that President Reagan planned to visit the state on caucus day and he urged them to send the Republican president "a message" by turning out in force at the caucuses.

A big Mondale turnout would have an important message for Democrats.

A lingering perception has been that Mondale does not excite voters, even those who are inclined to support him.

Cranston called the phenomenon the "passion gap" and suggested Sunday that it might result in a low turnout that could hold the Mondale vote well below the formidable numbers registering in his favor in the latest Iowa poll.

A big Mondale turnout would help do away with the talk of a passion gap.

Four years ago, more than 100,000 Iowa Democrats attended caucuses to express their preference in the contest between President Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. Most predictions are that the 1984 turnout will fall below that record level.

The size of the turnout also is a test of the ability of organized labor to come through for the candidate they endorsed for the nomination and an indication of whether that endorsement will be an asset or an albatross.

Glenn and Sen. Gary Hart have tried to portray Mondale as the candidate of the labor bosses, not the rank and file.

"Walter Mondale set out to get the bosses, the power brokers, the king makers last year, get all their endorsements," said Glenn. "Now the people are going to the polls and they don't need to be led around by a leash, they can make up their own minds."

Labor leaders went out of their way to obtain the views of the rank and file before endorsing Mondale. The Iowa caucuses will provide the first indication of whether their effort drummed up the same enthusiasm for Mondale among the rank and file as exists among the leadership.

Clairvoyant County

Thousands of Iowans will be taking part in their state's caucuses today. Amazingly, the residents of Iowa's Palo Alto County have correctly picked the country's next President in all 22 elections since William McKinley beat William Jennings Bryan in 1896! Only Crook County in Oregon has a similar record. Iowa has the nation's highest literacy rate. And Iowa farmers provide about 10 percent of the nation's food supply.

Have A Plan For District Changes

By The Associated Press
A black group is proposing a plan for redrawing seven state legislative districts to comply with a federal order that would add at least four more blacks to the General Assembly.

The group, composed of leaders from the Black Lawyers Association and the North Carolina Black Leadership Caucus, has proposed dividing the multi-member districts covered by the order into single-member districts, said Irv Joyner, president of the Black Lawyers Association.

The proposal provides for at least four majority black districts, with additional districts having a substantial number of blacks, Joyner said.

A three-judge panel on Jan. 27 ordered North Carolina lawmakers to redraw the districts by March 16 because they discriminate against blacks. If state lawmakers fail to do so, the judges said they'll redraw the districts.

The black group's proposal, approved over the weekend, would increase to 16 the number of blacks in the Legislature, Joyner said.

Opine Operation Saved An Eagle

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — An official of a bird rehabilitation center expressed optimism that a 4-hour operation has saved the life of a bald eagle hit in the leg by a high-powered rifle bullet.

The bird with a 7-foot wingspan was discovered by a hiker in the Texas Hill country last week.

"His leg is a mess, but we're optimistic we can save his life," said George Stewart, co-founder of the Phoenix Bird Rehabilitation Center after the surgery Saturday.

The eagle, one of about 12,100 American bald eagles in the United States, according to the National Wildlife Federation, must undergo several more operations over the course of a year before it can be set free, Stewart added.

The group plans to oppose other proposals calling for predominantly black single-member districts, with the rest remaining at-large. Members also said Sunday they planned to present the proposals this week, and to lobby for the districts to be redrawn as ordered by a three-judge panel.

Group leaders also said blacks will seek further court action if they were not satisfied with new districts drawn by the General Assembly.

"We are not going to leave that to the political leaders to decide for us how the lines should be drawn," Joyner said.

The districts involved are House districts in Mecklenburg, Durham, Forsyth and Wake counties; a House district that includes portions of Edgecombe, Wilson and Nash counties; the Mecklenburg-Cabarrus Senate district; and Senate District 2, which includes Northampton, Bertie, Hertford, and Gates counties and parts of Halifax, Martin, Washington, and Chowan counties.

The state has appealed the federal ruling, asking Chief Justice Warren Burger for an emergency stay of the judges' order until the U.S. Supreme Court can hear the appeal.

Burger is not expected to rule on the state's request before Tuesday, the deadline he set for responses from attorneys who challenged the seven districts. A class-action suit on behalf of black North Carolina voters was filed in 1982 under Section 2 of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

The Other State Bird

Everybody knows that North Carolina's state bird is the cardinal. But if you looked around eastern North Carolina, you'd probably find more Perdue broilers than red birds.

Over 500 farmers in this state now raise more than 100 million Perdue broilers every year. And these birds are processed at Perdue's processing plant in Lewiston or Robersonville. These broilers get their start in North Carolina as well. Perdue breeder growers in this state ship their eggs to our hatcheries in Murfreesboro, Kenly and Halifax. And their feed? It's North Carolina-grown corn and soybeans purchased by Perdue and processed at feed mills located in Wilson and Cofield, North Carolina.

Facilities like these have helped make Perdue one of the nation's largest broiler producers, and the largest supplier of fresh poultry to the northeast market! And the demand for our products continues! In fact, our broiler plant in Robersonville is planning to open a second shift. As a result, Perdue needs 145 more broiler houses to support the expansion. If you'd like to grow with us, get in touch today. Call collect 1-795-4151 or send in the coupon below.

Medal To Sarajevo

By LARRY GERBER
Associated Press Writer

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — The buses ran. The phones worked, most of the time. Only the weather refused to cooperate in making the XIV Winter Olympic Games a smooth operation, and even that finally worked out.

Any doubters had to admit that Sarajevo, once best known as the Balkan backwater where an assassination triggered World War I, had presented its best face to the more than 15,000 foreigners who came to the Games and the millions watching on television.

"We are extremely satisfied with what happened here in Sarajevo," said Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee.

"Particularly, I think the whole atmosphere we had here in Sarajevo ... is really an example for the whole world," Samaranch told reporters as the Games drew to a close.

There was a dispute over ice hockey eligibility, and one cross-country skier was disqualified for using steroids. Other than that, the competition itself was practically the only news in town.

Even the death of Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov did not interrupt these Games, although the Olympic flag and those of some communist countries were lowered for a day of mourning.

Nor were there any of the political squabbles which marred the two previous Games. In fact, Chinese and Taiwanese athletes competed against each other for the first time in any Olympics and made informal contacts at the Olympic Village.

There was nothing like the transportation foul-up that plagued Lake Placid in 1980 or the troops of scowling soldiers who crowded the streets and venues at the Moscow Summer Games.

Staging the costly show wasn't easy for a city in one of the poorer regions of a poor country. When Sarajevo was awarded the Olympics in 1978, it had one ski hill, with one hotel on it, and limited tourist space downtown. Now there are 11 hotels, 20,000 beds and enough lifts to handle 12,500 skiers an hour.

That building went on during the country's worst economic crisis in 35 years. And even as organizers heralded the slogan "Everything Is Ready," visitors to Sarajevo could see a vision of chaos little more than two months before the Games began Feb. 7.

Power outages brought on by drought and debt had plunged the city and much of Yugoslavia into darkness. Candles could be seen flickering in windows. Downtown streets were hopeless snarls of cars and pedestrians.

Playwrights Told To 'Be Prolific'

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Christopher Durang, author of the Obie award-winning "Sister Mary Ignatius Explains It All For You," has some down-to-earth advice for budding playwrights: "Be prolific."

But he and other playwrights at a Yale University seminar agreed that the stage for new playwrights seems to be shrinking.

"People can't afford to take the risks they used to take 10 years ago," said Oscar Brownstein, chairman of the play writing program at the Yale School of Drama. "The playwrights are there, but they're not always being produced."

Wendy Wasserstein, author of "Uncommon Women and Others" and more recently of "Isn't It Romantic" agreed.

"This season, only three new American plays opened on Broadway," she said at the seminar Friday at the Yale Repertory Theatre.

Some of the best theater is beyond the bounds of Broadway, according to Durang, who said regional theaters provide an outlet playwrights didn't always have.

He urged playwrights to be persistent. "If you think a play is good, keep revising it."

Church For Deaf Lost Its Stereo

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Silent Lutheran Church for the Deaf says it needs new stereo equipment.

The Rev. Wally Waite reported to police that audio equipment worth $600 was stolen last week, the second time such equipment has been taken.

The equipment is used by the choir, because it allows deaf singers to feel the rhythm of hymns through the floor, Waite said.

Jumblatt repeated his previous demand that Gemayel should step down.

Israel's defense minister, Moshe Arens, said Sunday that Israeli troops would remain in Lebanon "as long as there is not a Lebanese government that can provide a credible commitment that it would prevent terrorist action against Israel from southern Lebanon." He also was interviewed on the Brinkley show.

Gemayel dispatched Foreign Minister Elie Salem and his national security adviser, Wadih Haddad, to Washington for talks with the Reagan administration on ways to resolve Lebanon's crisis.

Old Manuscript Said 'Beautiful'

LONDON (AP) — A professor who once found a Joseph Haydn composition in an Austrian monastery says a manuscript of the 18th century composer found by a farmer in a cupboard is in "beautiful condition."

Professor H.C. Robbins Landon of the music department at University College at Cardiff says the 16-page manuscript in the neat handwriting of the Austrian composer is of two movements from a Mass of 1786 that was probably never performed.

Farmer John McClintock, 59, said by telephone from his home in County Antrim in Northern Ireland on Sunday that he was going through the cupboard to see if he had anything of value to sell when he "came across a musical album, which had been collected by my great-aunt Anne. In it was this folder."

The manuscript is expected to fetch between $29,000 and $36,250 at an auction at Christie's in London next month.

Mahre Twins Boost U.S. Spirits

Fastest Trio On Snow

Phil Mahre (center) is flanked by his twin brother Steve (left) and French skier Didier Bouvet on the podium on Mt. Bjelasnica Sunday after the men's slalom, the final alpine event of the 1984 Winter Olympics. Phil Mahre won the gold, while Steve Mahre took the silver and Bouvet the bronze. (AP Laserphoto)

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Lifted by comeback twins Phil and Steve Mahre, the United States closed out the 14th Winter Olympics on a flag-waving high and an eye toward Calgary in 1988.

As the Olympic flame flickered out Sunday, officially ending the 12-day sports carnival, winter athletes from 49 countries paraded out of the flag-bedecked Zetra ice arena to the applause of 5,000 spectators.

"See you in Calgary," was the cry, in song and farewells, as the $135 million extravaganza ended on a snowy night.

Organizers predicted that the Sarajevo Games, among the smoothest ever, would finish in the black.

As expected, the Soviet Union regained the overall medals title, edging East Germany 25-24. But the East Germans, who beat out the Soviets in the 1980 medals race at Lake Placid, headed home with the most golds — nine to the Soviets' six.

Finland, near-invincible in the Nordic events, was third with 13 medals, four gold, three silver, six bronze; Norway was fourth with three gold, two silver and four bronze, and the United States was fifth with four golds and four silver.

The Mahre brothers' stunning 1-2 finish in the men's slalom kept the United States from suffering its lowest medals harvest in 20 years.

Using walkie talkies to coach one another between runs, the 26-year-old twins from Yakima, Wash., gave the highly successful U.S. Alpine team a crowning finish.

"I gave him comments after the first run," Steve said. "After his second, he said, 'OK, here's what you've got to do to beat me.' We believe in one another. He's my best coach and I'm his best coach. If I don't win, he'd better."

Phil Mahre had another reason to celebrate. His wife gave birth to a son in Scottsdale, Ariz., on Sunday, but he didn't learn of it until after the race.

Asked which was more important to him, he replied, "What a ridiculous question. I feel good with this medal, but I wish I were home right now."

Phil will join his wife, Holly, in Scottsdale on Tuesday. They have a 17-month-old daughter, Lindsey.

This is Phil's final season on the World Cup ski circuit, and his run Sunday was a brilliant conclusion to a 10-year skiing career. And the 1-2 finish marked a rebound for Phil and Steve from a disappointing World Cup season.

"It has finally come together at just the right time," Phil said. "My slalom has been good all year, but I just haven't concentrated enough. I concentrated better today."

Phil has been World Cup overall champion three times, but Sunday's victory marked his first gold medal in either Olympic or World Championship competition. He won the silver in the slalom at the 1980 Olympics.

Steve was the gold medalist in the giant slalom in the 1982 World Championship, but he generally has skied in the shadow of his more successful brother.

ECU Releases List Of 1984 Grid Recruits

East Carolina University head football coach Ed Emory announced today the completion of football recruiting with the signing of 30 players to grants.

The list includes six junior college players and 24 high school seniors. Among the prep group, seven come from the top 25 list from the state of Virginia.

"We feel we had an excellent year recruiting," said Emory, who is starting his fifth season with ECU and coming off an 8-3 season. "We were very patient this year, going after selected players at key positions."

"Needs were great at quarterback, defensive back and defensive end. We feel we have captured a great group in all three areas that will aid us very soon.

"Our scope was more nationwide this year than statewide. And we went right to the wire with some of these players and recruited them away from other very good football schools."

At quarterback, junior college transfer Robbie Bartlett of Citrus Junior College could well fill the gap of graduated Kevin Ingram, having been named All-America and most valuable in an all-star game in California. Also, incoming freshman Lewis Wilson of Foley High School in Foley, Ala. was a highly sought after, much honored high school quarterback.

Bobby Clair, 6-0, 200 fullback from Northeast Oklahoma Junior College and originally Hartsville, S.C., will be a major addition to the backfield, according to Emory. His JuCo clubs have been ranked second and fourth in his two years there, as he earned most valuable player honors.

Tim Orr, a high school All-America from Hampton, Va., was one of the most sought after linemen in the country. Orr is 6-4, 240 and runs a 4.8 40-yard dash. His teammate, defensive back Winston Guy (6-1, 180), was also highly recruited with 4.5 speed in the 40.

Linebacker John Britt was the final catch for ECU and one of the best of the year. Leading the best defensive team in the district for three consecutive years, Britt was named in one recruiting report as one of the nation's top 125 high school players.

In addition to Guy at defensive back, ECU locked in one of North Carolina's top players, Barriet Easterling of Hoke County High in Radford. At 6-3, 190, Easterling becomes one of the biggest defensive backs in the Pirate camp. He's joined by All-America JuCo Keith Ford of Sacramento Junior College.

Robert Majette, another 6-3 back from Lake Taylor High in Norfolk, was one of seven recruits by ECU of the top group in Virginia. The others include wide receiver Andre Fields of Norcom High in Norfolk, defensive tackle Walter Bryant of Lake Taylor High, and linebacker Ken Taylor of Bethal High in Hampton.

"I think we had the best collective recruiting year ever by a single school from the Tidewater area," Emory added.

The recruiting class shows 10 players from within North Carolina; nine from Virginia; two each from California, Alabama and Florida; and one from South Carolina, New Jersey, Oklahoma, Mississippi and New York.

Nears End Of ECU Career

Gilchrist Rides Waves

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Herb Gilchrist is, as far as the East Carolina University basketball program is concerned, a paradox. He is a senior playing for the fourth year for the Pirates.

Over the past few years, there have been few people to have stuck with the Pirates throughout their career. Many have moved on to pastures that appeared to be greener. Some of them could have helped the program; some were not missed.

But Gilchrist, who played more as a freshman than he has since then, has remained through thick and thin, and he thinks that he has gained from it.

"There were times I felt like packing my bags like several others have done. But I stayed, and I think I've made myself a better person for it. I've grown up some."

"I've learned to deal with things that don't go just like you think they should. And I haven't regretted my decision."

Gilchrist says that ECU has been good to him and he appreciates what has been done for him over the past four years. Now, with his career winding down these next few weeks, he is taking aim on completing his education.

Not that not playing hasn't hurt. "There were times that I thought that maybe I could play somewhere else. But not everyone plays. Everyone comes out of high school thinking they can, but it's different in college, and you just have to find your role in the team's situation."

That role, Gilchrist feels, is as a bench leader and, at times, a "traffic cop." Gilchrist can be seen at times up off the bench, directing traffic on the floor and giving advice to the other players.

"Herb is a smart person," Coach Charlie Harrison says. "He could make a good coach."

"Sitting on the bench, you see some things that you don't see on the floor," Gilchrist said. "If I see something that will help a player position himself on the floor, I'll point it out."

But as to getting into coaching himself, Gilchrist isn't sure that that is for him. "You have to be sort of a unique person to be a coach. It can be a hassle. Being a coach means you have to deal with 13 or 14 different guys and putting up with them. It takes a lot of guts to be a coach. If you don't win, then there's a lot of pressure on you, and I'm not sure that I want that."

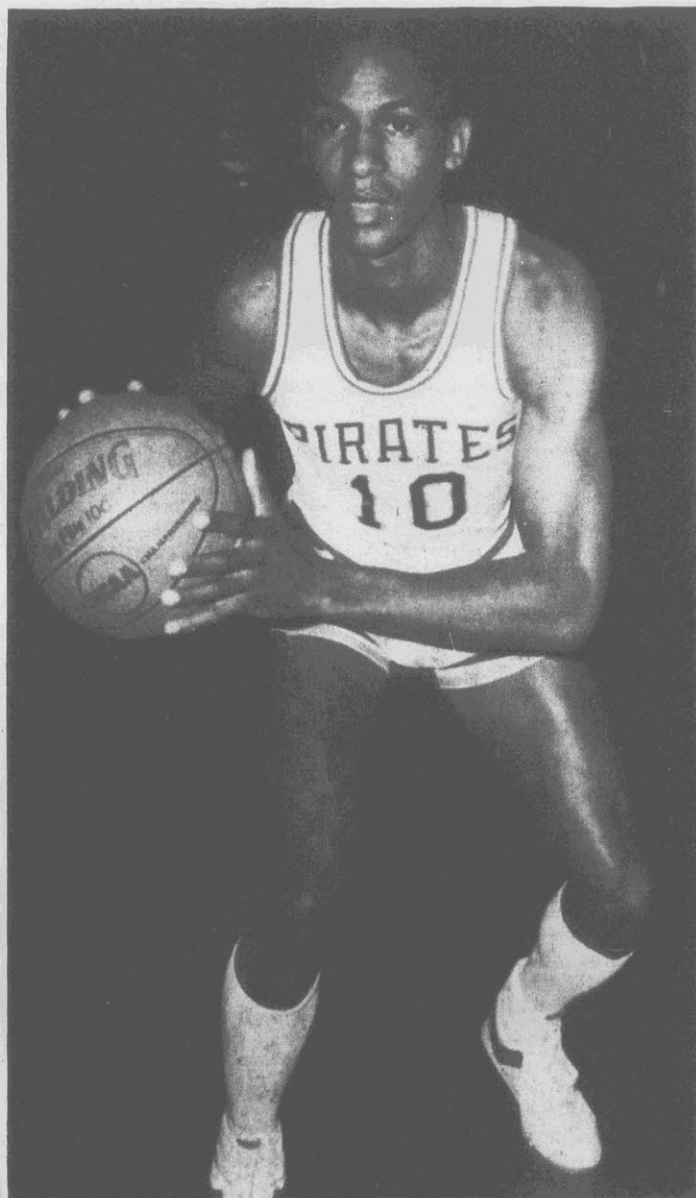

Instead, Gilchrist, a clothing and textile major, hopes to enter that field upon graduation.

As one of the two seniors on the team — point guard Tony Robinson, who transferred in as a junior, is the other — Gilchrist feels that the best is still ahead for the Pirates. "It's tough to build a program when year in and year out, guys are coming and going. You can't build a team like that. It gets frustrating."

"But I believe that in time, if these guys will stick with East Carolina and get experience they'll have a successful program. But they have to keep these guys here if they want to build."

And, they can take a pointer from Gilchrist — a senior who didn't bail out when things got rough.

East Carolina will play host to the U.S. Naval Academy tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Minges Coliseum. The contest is an ECAC-South game, and will be the next to last home contest for the Pirates. ECU then travels to UNC-Wilmington on Saturday, to Campbell next Wednesday, and then closes out the regular season on Saturday, March 3, hosting James Madison in another league game.

Heels Clinch ACC Title

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

AP Sports Writer

North Carolina guard Michael Jordan turned in a weekend performance that left two opponents vanquished and enabled the top-ranked Tar Heels to clinch the Atlantic Coast Conference regular-season title.

Jordan poured in 32 points to key the Tar Heels to a 95-71 rout of North Carolina State on Saturday. Then Sunday, Jordan scored 25 points — 19 in the second half — as the Tar Heels rallied for a 78-63 victory over Maryland.

The triumphs helped North Carolina capture the ACC regular-season title. The Tar Heels are 23-1 overall and 11-0 in the ACC.

"We're excited about winning the regular-season championship. That has been one of our goals," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "One of our goals is also to improve and we need to continue to do that."

In ACC action Saturday, Duke climbed into second place in the conference with a 79-77 overtime victory over No. 13 Wake Forest, while Maryland took a 66-65 triple-overtime victory over last-place Clemson.

Virginia ventured outside the conference and absorbed a 74-65 beating at the hands of No. 4 Houston.

The Tar Heels used a 15-0 streak to erase a 53-52 Maryland lead gained on Len Bias' jumper with 10:09 left. Ben Coleman was called for a technical foul after Bias' score, and Sam Perkins converted the free throw to spark the Tar Heels to 15 straight points and a 19-2 run.

Jordan scored 11 points in the outburst and finished with 25.

"We get the breaks at the right time," Jordan said. "When we get it inside and get Sam going, and get the other players involved, that's our style of basketball."

As for the technical that opened the way for the Tar Heels, Maryland coach Lefty Driesell gave the impression he wasn't too happy with the timing.

"No comment," he said when asked about what happened and when quizzed as to whether that was the turning point.

Bias scored 18 points to pace Maryland, 16-7 and 5-5. Adrian Branch added 15 points and Coleman chipped in 11.

Brad Daugherty added 20 points for the Tar Heels, while Perkins scored 15 points.

North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano said it would be doubly difficult to beat the Tar Heels after they had one week to reflect on the loss to the Razorbacks.

North Carolina wasted little time trying to erase that memory, rushing to a 20-6 lead and repulsing two Wolfpack surges in each half.

"Our practices were more concentrated," Jordan said of the week of preparation for the Wolfpack. "We didn't let our minds drift off to anything. We went back to drills and concentrated on getting the drills down for defense."

It was that defense that Valvano was trying to disrupt.

"We wanted to score against their trapping defense," he said. "Getting behind like that disrupted everything."

The Tar Heels got 18 points from Daugherty and 16 from Perkins. Anthony "Spud" Webb led the Wolfpack with 22 points while Lorenzo Charles added 19 and Terry Gannon scored 10.

N.C. State is 19-8 and 4-6.

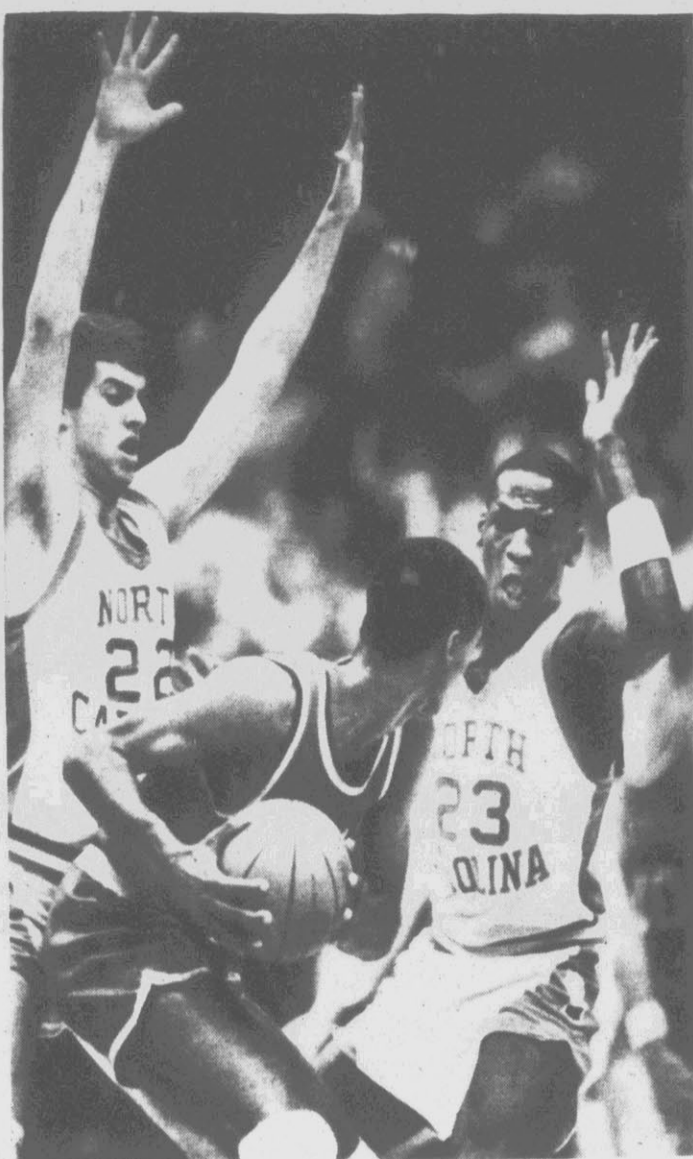

Mark Alarie's layup with three seconds left in the extra period clinched Duke's 21st victory against five losses, and gave the Blue Devils a 6-4 ACC slate.

Alarie who missed a shot that would have given the Blue Devils a victory in regulation, but it was his interception following his basket that sealed the victory. He finished with 23 points, while Johnny Dawkins had 19 and Dan Meagher threw in 10.

Wake Forest, 18-5 and 6-5, also got 23 points from Kenny Green. DeLaney Rudd, whose jumper in regulation forced the overtime, added 20 and center Anthony Teachey had 14. The loss means the Demon Deacons are mathematically eliminated from a shot at the conference title.

"I thought we did everything right in overtime," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski, who beat Wake Forest for the first time in his four years at Duke. "Everybody made big plays."

Yarborough Wins Second Straight

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Cale Yarborough said he could have passed any car at any time, but history has shown him that second was the best place to launch his second straight Daytona 500 victory.

"Second was where I wanted to be," Yarborough said Sunday after he duplicated his 1983 backstretch move to the front on the last lap and captured the 26th annual Grand National stock car classic.

"I didn't see a car that I couldn't pass when I wanted to," said Yarborough, whose Hardee's-sponsored Chevrolet won the pole in qualifying with a track record 201.848 mph on the 2 1/2-mile oval.

The 43-year-old driver from Sardis, S.C., passed Darrell Waltrip's Chevrolet and finished eight car lengths ahead of Dale Earnhardt's Chevy to capture a total of $160,300 — a stock car record — from the $1.1 million purse.

The winner averaged 150.944 mph in the race slowed by seven caution flags.

Waltrip, the two-time Winston Cup champion who never has won a major Daytona race, finished third, the length of a hood behind Earnhardt.

Neil Bonnett, Waltrip's new teammate in another Chevrolet, was fourth, while Bill Elliott's Ford was fifth and Harry Gant made it five Chevrolets in the top six positions.

Waltrip, who took the lead under a caution flag on the 162nd of 200 laps, was a "sitting duck" for the finish, Yarborough said.

The Franklin, Tenn., driver was helpless to stop Yarborough and Earnhardt from passing him, the winner said.

"I felt like Earnhardt knew what was happening and knew he could get second if he went with me," Yarborough said.

"I knew what was going to happen and I didn't see any reason to get all upset about it," Waltrip said. "In that situation, you just have no chance. But, if I was going to get smoked off (at the end), I wanted to be up front. He (Yarborough) could have went sideways and slipped or something; who knows."

Earnhardt said he had hoped to pass Yarborough but "when he made his move he just went right on... there was no way I was gonna catch him, so I went after Darrell."

Connors Downs Noah For Title

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — Jimmy Connors spent most of his time at the Congoleum Tennis Classic explaining why his matches were ending so quickly.

The top-seeded Connors breezed through most of his opponents in the $250,000 event, but Yannick Noah refused to roll over in Sunday's final.

Connors stopped the Frenchman 6-2, 6-7, 6-3 at the La Quinta Hotel Tennis Club, earning $34,000 for the victory. The second-seeded Noah received $17,000.

"He plays well," Connors said after the match. "I enjoyed playing him. The way he plays and the way he moves, he's as talented as anyone who plays."

"I got eliminated in the second round (here) last year. I wanted to win. I don't think I played to my standard last year."

Noah, the defending French Open champion, had praise for Connors, the defending U.S. Open titlist, after the match.

"He hits his backhand really hard," said Noah. "I was surprised the way he passed me, but I wanted to play my game and not stay back. I tried to serve and volley. He just played well — that's the way he plays."

"The strategy against Jimmy is to come in, but he passed me. Jimmy returns well when you serve hard, so I wasn't very confident coming in on my first serve. His best shot is his service return."

Noah said he was pleased with the way he played in defeat.

"I just did my best," he said. "I would have preferred winning but I played well."

ABC Gamble On Winter Olympics A Loser

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Winter Olympics are part spectacle and part sports. Watching the spectacle on tape delay was fine. But watching the sports through a six- or nine-hour time lapse was too much like watching a rerun.

Television viewers indicated during the Sarajevo Olympics, which ended Sunday, that they wouldn't rally around the tube for stale hockey games that America had lost. ABC gambled — and lost — by going overboard to hype hockey before the Games.

But for sports fans, at least hockey has competitive action. It's the only event in the Winter Games with head-to-head matchups. The suspicion is that sports fans would have been more inclined to give the taped broadcasts a look if the U.S. hockey team had at least played exciting hockey in losing.

But many will never sit still for the typical Winter Olympic events — speed skating, luge, bobsledding and skiing — all of which match athlete against the clock. (Downhill skiing is an exception. We all want to see daredevils.)

The drag of watching taped races against the clock was exemplified by the victory of American skier Debbie Armstrong in the giant slalom.

The thrill lost its edge somewhere in the twilight zone between live time and prime time. It was too-old news. For TV viewers, she didn't come out of nowhere.

Figure skating was different. This sport is spectacle. Its artistry can be enjoyed anytime. Viewers flocked to see Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean win the ice dancing. There's real eagerness to watch perfection.

ABC's ratings were far from perfection. Madison Avenue expected the Olympics to attract 32-33 percent of the prime-time viewing audience, and the Sarajevo Games are destined to fall considerably short of that. (As of early last week, ABC had attracted 27 percent of the viewers, compared to 35 percent at the same point for 1980 in Lake Placid.)

"It's painfully apparent that the Nielsen ratings are off from where the network had estimated," said analyst Tony Hoffman of Cralin and Co. Hoffman said ABC might have to provide free or cut-rate commercials in the future as compensation.

Although ABC may not be contractually obligated to give make-good ads, it's good policy in a long-term business relationship to keep the customer satisfied, particularly if the advertiser has just paid as much as $225,000 for a 30-second spot. "I'm sure the networks will find a way to ameliorate us," said Joel Segal, senior vice president at the Ted Bates ad agency.

The impact also will be felt in four years when ABC lines up advertisers again for the Winter Olympics in Calgary.

"We'll consider what happened this year and set our sights a little bit lower," said Segal. "One difference in Calgary, though, is that the events will be shown live."

Another advantage is that those Games will extend over three weekends, instead of two — a concession the International Olympic Committee recently made to ABC. Traditionally, weekends provide an abundance of TV sports and male viewers.

But that also means more coverage than the 63½ hours that were broadcast from Sarajevo, more commercials — so ABC can defray its $309 million rights payment for the Calgary Games — and more padding and frilly reports.

The broadcast rights for Calgary were more than three times what ABC paid for the 1984 Winter Olympics. With some viewers turning a cold shoulder on the Games, ABC now must be sensing a big chill from Sarajevo's wintry winds.

In contrast, the Calgary Olympic Organizing Committee must be feeling the warmth of financial security. Its negotiators deserve gold medals for sealing a deal BEFORE the Sarajevo Games — when ABC was still experiencing the Lake Placid high.

"ABC has taken leave of its senses for Calgary," said Hoffman. "The only way for ABC to get the same financial result as Sarajevo will be a healthy sale to pay TV. The advertisers won't pay for it."

Concerned By Grads' Behavior

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Virginia Tech officials are concerned about the apparently deteriorating behavior among students at graduation, but are loathe to regulate behavior or search students for alcoholic beverages.

Popped champagne corks, thrown champagne bottles and noise during graduation ceremonies at Lane Stadium have prompted letters of protest from some faculty members to high-ranking university officials, including President William Lavery.

"In recent years, there seems to be a tendency for students to celebrate during graduation," commencement committee Chairwoman Enid Tozier said. Faculty members complained that they could not hear commencement speaker Clifton Garvin at the June 11, 1983, ceremony. Others complained that their silk and velvet robes were ruined by sprayed champagne, said John Simmons, editor of the student newspaper.

Ms. Tozier said university officials want graduation to continue to be a time of celebration and that the university is reluctant to regulate behavior at the ceremonies. Leaders of the Class of 1984 are trying to find a way to calm students without imposing regulations, Simmons said.

"This is a problem that has gained enough concern to have come down to the students," he said.

He does not believe the university could easily prevent alcoholic beverages from being brought into the stadium.

At the College of William and Mary, officials have tried to search graduates for alcohol, but found that parents of graduates bring the beverages in for their sons and daughters, he said.

Simmons said students are concerned for the safety of spectators and graduates who could be struck by flying corks or bottles.

"It's the kind of thing that the people who do it don't think it will ever hurt anyone until it does," he said.

Some faculty members have told Simmons they have seen behavior deteriorating for about 10 to 12 years, he said.

The rowdiness of the crowd is probably because of the "growing size of the class" and "the fact that (graduation) is outside," Simmons said.

Woman Died In Burning Auto

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — A woman who apparently had been drinking died after the car she was driving got stuck in a ditch and caught fire, Cleveland County sheriff's deputies said.

The body of Cynthia Beaver Champion, 28, was found late Friday in the back seat of a car parked off a road about 10 miles west of Shelby.

An autopsy was ordered. The fire started after the woman revved the car engine for 15 minutes, trying to get the car back onto the road, said Chief Deputy Ron McKinney.

"We think the death probably resulted from either fire, smoke, carbon monoxide, alcohol, or a combination of all those," McKinney said.

Migrants' Return Puzzles

LEWISTON, N.C. (AP) — Blacks returning to North Carolina from the North are a diverse group that includes poor people and professional or specialty workers, says a Duke anthropologist who is writing a book on the subject.

"One of the important things is for the state to realize the diversity of those coming back," Dr. Carol B. Stack said.

Ms. Stack also says that an economic interpretation does not explain the large-scale return of North Carolina natives, particularly blacks, to their home state.

"For a long time, the Census Bureau said the 'losers' are coming back, the ones who never made it up North," she said. "It's just recently that the 1980 census has shown people who made it up North are coming back and building a house."

"Economists are surprised or perplexed because they view the migration of populations in economic terms," she said. "They think people move for economic reasons. But the very low-income people are returning with an optimism that defies these economic theories."

From 1920 until the mid-1960s, blacks joined a great migration from the farm fields of the South to menial, but better-paying jobs in the North. Between 1940 and 1960, 4.4 million blacks left the South.

The 1970 census showed more blacks returning to the South than leaving it, the first time that had been reported since Reconstruction. The 1980 census showed the trend intensifying.

"Despite Thomas Wolfe's warning about returning home, approximately 106,600 (or 23.3 percent) of in-migrants had been born in North Carolina," John H. McIntyre, a data consultant with the Office of State Budget and Management, wrote recently. "Among blacks, this trend was particularly pronounced."

In her 1974 book, "All Our Kin," Ms. Stack explored the intricate family ties that helped Southern black families survive in a Northern ghetto. That same network, she said, helps prevent the permanent severing of North-South ties.

Fellie and Joyce Cherry of Lewiston are among the migrants returning to northeastern North Carolina. They came home from New York City after 38 years to retire.

"I left here for a purpose," Cherry said. "It was during the Depression, and there were no jobs, no money, nothing else. I didn't like sharecropping because that's all I had ever done, and you want to know why? Because farming was too hard."

Mrs. Cherry left first for New York, and got a cleaning job. Cherry joined her after the harvest was over.

They worked at different jobs, and two years later were able to bring their infant son North. The hard work led to a house, and then other homes purchased for rental income.

"It was beautiful. I wouldn't take nothing for it," Cherry said.

"We were all thinking we were going to die there," Mrs. Cherry said. "The only thing we didn't buy was a burying plot."

"You see, we never gave this up as home," Mrs. Cherry said. "Our children never spent a summer in the city."

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠109652 ♥9873 ♦652 ♣4

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♣ Pass Pass 1 ♦

2 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner must have close to a demand bid for this auction, but you must face the fact that only the ten of spades saves your hand from being a yarborough. Surely partner can, on this sequence, expect you to have a five-card suit and, since you have nothing else, a bid of two spades is more than adequate. But should partner make any further move, you should be delighted to cooperate.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠K76 ♥5 ♦AK107 ♣AK983

The bidding has proceeded:

East South West North

4 ♥ Dble Pass 4 ♣

Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—What would you like to do? We admit that partner could easily have enough for slam, but he might also have little more than spade length. Accept the fact that East's preempt has made it impossible for you to investigate intelligently, and hope that partner has enough to make four spades. Pass.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A85 ♥AKQJ952 ♦65 ♣8

What is your opening bid?

A.—Your hand is not strong enough for a demand bid of two hearts, but too good for a preemptive opening bid of four hearts. That leaves you with only one choice—one heart.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠A83 ♥QJ6 ♦AKQ9873

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—There is no satisfactory solution to your problem. You are not quite good enough for a jump shift, for if partner has only four hearts and a minimum response, game might be beyond you. The wisest course is probably a jump to three diamonds. Though this is an underbid, if partner passes you are odds-on to be in your best spot.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠A87 ♥95 ♦AJ5 ♣AQ982

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass

2 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Four spades is acceptable, but your wealth of controls suggests that you should probe for slam. Bid three diamonds. Your intention is to support spades at your next turn, regardless of partner's rebid. This will give partner an accurate picture of your strong hand rich in controls and allow him to assess slam possibilities.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠96 ♥AQ1054 ♦Q93 ♣762

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?

A.—You have enough to invite game, but you would rather play in hearts if possible. Therefore, you don't want to raise to two no trump. The solution is to employ the Stayman Convention. Bid two clubs. If partner denies a major, bid two hearts—that is forcing to two no trump or three of your suit. If he bids hearts, raise to three. And should he bid two spades, you can invite game by bidding two no trump.
