Utilities Map Water Rate Increase

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Utilities Commission Tuesday night gave final approval to a tentative monthly water and sewer rate schedule, to be presented at a March 6 public hearing, that will increase water revenues by about 20 percent over the next two years.

Sewer rates would increase only slightly above current levels under the proposed rate schedule.

The proposed water and sewer rates are based on a cost-of-service study, completed in late 1983, which states revenues from water rates need to be increased by $500,000 to fund increased current operating costs, maintain and extend the water system, and make debt service payments on the new water treatment plant.

The proposed rate schedule will spread the 20 percent increase in water rates over a two-year period, to lessen the impact on customers, by increasing rates each six months.

GUC's typical in-city residential customer, using 8,000 cubic feet of water per month, now pays $8.30 — including a basic facility charge of $1.50 and a volume charge of $6.80 — while an out-of-city residential customer now pays $16.60.

Following the first step increase under the proposed rate schedule, the in-city customer would pay $9.20 (including a basic charge of 50 cents, a fire protection charge of $1.50, and a volume charge of $7.20), while out-of-city customers would pay $14.35 (a 75 cents basic charge and a volume charge of $13.60).

Rates would increase six months later, under step two, so average in-city customers would pay a total of $9.85 per month, while out-of-city customers would pay $14.35.

Horne explained that the new water rate schedule for out-of-city residential and commercial customers will reduce the present double in-city rates to approximately 150 percent of in-city rates.

Horne also said the new water rates will reflect a fire protection charge for all customers, based on the costs involved in providing general fire protection requirements.

Horne noted that the new sewer rate schedule provides the same rates for in-city and out-of-city customers. He also said the present $7 maximum limit for residential customers will be discontinued, and billing for sewer service will be based on 85 percent of the total water billed.

The new sewer rate schedule will also add a charge to in-city customers who have access to sewer service but are not using the city sewer. In the first step, the sewer availability charge would be $2.50 per month, and will increase each six months until a customer would be paying $3.50 per month in two years.

Israeli Jets Strike At 'Guerrilla Bases'

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli jets attacked suspected guerrilla bases in the Syrian-controlled mountains east of Beirut today, and Druse insurgents said a town in the area was shelled by Lebanese army artillery.

In Beirut, President Amin Gemayel summoned his Christian allies to discuss a peace proposal which would allocate more power to the Druse and Shiite Moslem opposition. One key element of the proposal reportedly would scrap the May 17 agreement providing for withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon.

The Israeli air raid was the third this week and the sixth this year. The military command in Tel Aviv said jets attacked Palestinian guerrilla bases in the Bhamdoun area, including a staging post and headquarters.

It said an artillery position outside the town of Mansouriyeh also was attacked before the warplanes returned to base safely.

The Druse radio station, Voice of the Mountains, claimed the air raid coincided with an artillery barrage on Bhamdoun by the Lebanese army.

Later in the day, the Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said Pvt. Natan Sherafi, a 19-year-old Israeli soldier, was killed when gunmen ambushed an army convoy near the southern Lebanon town of Aaramta.

At Beirut's airport, U.S. Marines today finished reloading heavy equipment and prepared for the final withdrawal from their bunkers to 6th Fleet ships offshore.

"The normal phased redeployment is in progress," said Marine Capt. Keith Oliver, a spokesman for the U.S. contingent of the multinational force. "Line companies are in the process of breaking camp."

Support troops withdrew Tuesday, but Oliver gave no indication how long it would take the line companies to complete their pullout. The Marines have been deliberately vague on details of the operation for security reasons.

"We're on schedule or ahead of schedule for everything we've been told to do," said logistics officer Charles Rinehart. He said the 1,300 shore-based Marines were carrying out the pullback at a "prudent, professional pace," but could be out of the airport base in 48 hours if they were in a hurry.

President Reagan said Wednesday night that the pullout did not signal an end to the Marines' mission.

"I don't see their mission as being over yet," he said at a news conference. "We're not bugging out. We're just going into a little more defensible position."

The Marine base was not affected by shelling duels overnight between rival Moslem and Christian militia gunners in Beirut and in the Druse-controlled hills east of the capital. Police said 15 civilians were killed and 58 wounded.

The fighting subsided by daybreak, and Moslem units of the Lebanese army began policing west Beirut after Shiite Moslem and Druse militiamen gave up their checkpoints. The militias seized control of the Moslem half of the capital four weeks ago.

The quiet transfer followed a decision by Nabih Berri, leader of the Shiite's Amal militia, that national police and army forces based in west Beirut should assume security duties, the state radio said.

The army's 6th brigade and units from other brigades refused to fight against Druse and Shiites when they drove Christian units of the army from the Moslem sector Feb. 6.

The 6th brigade, made up of about 1,500 troops, took control of the airport, the airport highway and checkpoints at southern approaches to the city.

On the diplomatic front, Gemayel and his foreign minister, Elie Salem, met during the night with Saudi mediator Rafik Hariri at the presidential palace on the latest proposals for ending the conflict, palace sources said.

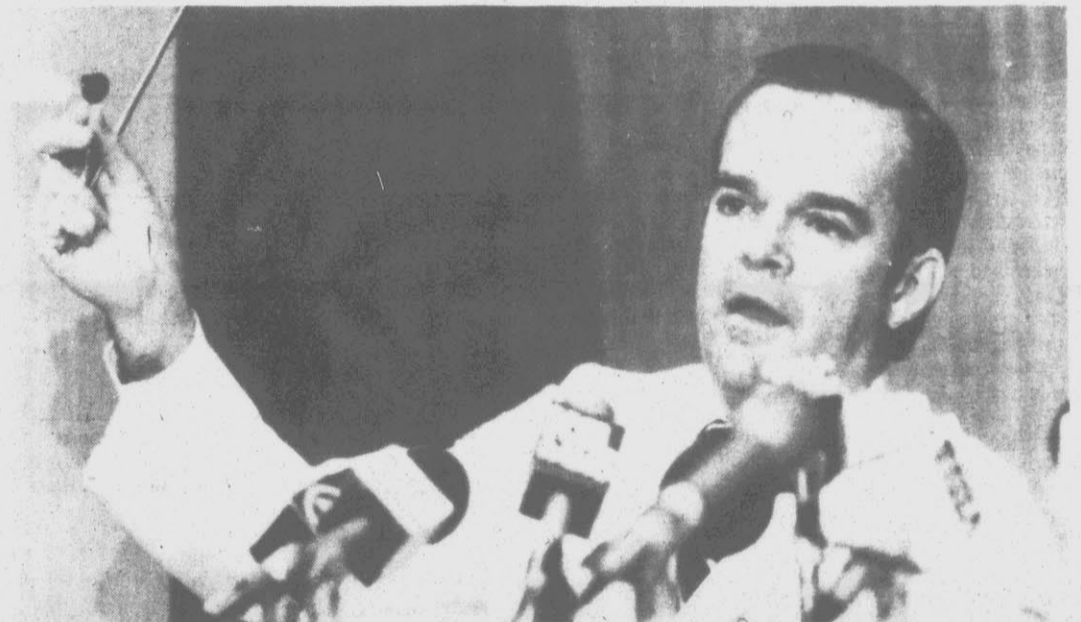

Gemayel was reported ready to scrap the May 17 agreement with Israel, as demanded by Syria and its Lebanese Moslem and Druse allies, government sources said. But several Christian leaders warned they would withdraw their support for Gemayel, a Maronite Christian, if the pact were abrogated.

Gemayel scheduled a meeting with Christian leaders today, and palace sources said he president hopes to convince them to go along with the Saudi plan.

The plan was devised during Syrian-Sauditalks this week.

ARTIFICIAL EAR — Dr. James Parkin shows the INERAID artificial ear approved by the Food and Drug Administration. Parkin announced plans for a series of implants of the new devices. (AP Laserphoto)

Surgeon To Institute New Artificial Ear Implants

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A tiny artificial ear with the potential to help 65 percent of the nation's deaf will be implanted in 20 people within a year, with the first operation to take place in three to four weeks, a University of Utah surgeon says.

Dr. James Parkin, acting chairman of the school's department of surgery, told a news conference Wednesday that he has already chosen the first candidate for an implant of the INERAID ear.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved the implants Tuesday.

Researchers hope to have the tiny electronic device, which translates sounds into electronic signals that can be interpreted by the brain, widely available for five years.

It eventually could help sufferers of cochlear disease, which affects the snail-shaped part of the inner ear. Victims of cochlear disease make up 65 percent of the nation's 250,000 to 500,000 deaf.

Preliminary versions of the device have been implanted in four people during the past eight years, but FDA approval was required for the upcoming implants under new laws that hadn't been enacted at the time of the first implants, Parkin said.

"We're very excited about this because of results obtained in patients that were implanted years ago," he said.

Blindfolded, the patients had 60 percent to 80 percent comprehension of spoken words, and understanding is almost 100 percent when they are able to watch the speaker's lips, he said.

In a normal ear, sound waves travel to the cochlea, which converts them into electronic signals that are transmitted to the brain.

The artificial ear is "like taking the cochlea outside the head and putting it on your belt," Parkin said.

Eight electrodes connected to a plug are implanted in the patient's ear — six of them in the cochlea — during a two-hour operation. The wires are laced through an opening above the natural ear, where the plug is attached with tiny screws to the outside of the head.

The first patients had to be plugged into a room full of computers to hear. But researchers have developed a microprocessor pack that can be worn on the belt and connected by a cord to the plug above the ear. Sound waves enter the device through a tiny microphone attached to the ear, then travel down the cord into the pack to be converted into electronic signals.

The signals then travel into the ear, where the electrodes stimulate nerve endings in the cochlea and transmit the signals to the brain.

Of the four patients who previously had implants, two still are using the ear, one has since died and one has had the device removed because he is hearing-impaired in only one ear and was used only to aid the research, Parkin said.

The research produced by the artificial ear is not the same as that heard by the natural ear, Parkin said. Some sounds are similar, but the patient must learn those that are different, he said.

"I'm starting to learn those things," David Columpus of San Diego, a recipient of the device, said in a videotaped interview released by Kolff Medical, the company developing the ear. "It gives me a lot more independence, a lot more being able to be connected with people."

Without the ear, Columpus would have to communicate through sign language.

The only risk known so far is infection around the plug, a minor problem in one patient, Parkin said.

The first patient will be a Salt Lake City man in his 30s, Parkin said. "I have a series of patients that are excellent candidates waiting," he said.

The device costs $10,000 and the surgery about $7,000, but the first two patients will receive the implants free, Parkin said.

The surgeon said the candidates must be deaf adults who once could hear. Adults who were born deaf and children may be candidates later but are being excluded now for research purposes, he said.

Researchers hope to have available within six months a smaller processing unit that can be slipped into a vest pocket, and hope one the size of a large hearing aid will be ready within a year.

Charge Is 'Bungling'

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The Supreme Military Council today arrested a third military commander who led Argentina to its defeat by Britain in the 1982 Falklands Islands war.

Former Air Force Commander Gen. Basilio Lami Dozo, 55, was arrested after testifying before the nation's highest military tribunal.

On Wednesday, the council arrested Adm. Jorge Anaya, navy commander during the war for the Falklands. It arrested Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri, the wartime president and army commander, on Tuesday.

Anaya and Galtieri were accused of negligence and incompetence in leading an unprepared nation into war and of bungling management of the war effort, according to Argentine press reports. The charges against Dozo were not immediately released.

All three men were members of the governing junta that launched the war.

A commission of six retired generals and admirals, headed by Gen. Benjamin Radtenbach, recently recommended court-martial for 16 officers who held high positions during the war, according to Argentine news media which have received leaked information about the unreleased report.

Wedding Vows Are Solemnized Saturday

Linda Kelly Gordon and Thomas James Whitaker were joined in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. in The Memorial Baptist Church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E.T. Vinson.

The bride is the daughter of Ms. Etsil S. Mason and David J. Gordon, both of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Elizabeth Whitaker of Camden and the late, late Wesley James Whitaker.

The bride was escorted by her father and wore a gown of white matte taffeta over peau de soie fashioned with a high neckline encircled with a band of schiffli lace and the yoke of English net was embroidered in a floral motif and beaded in pearls and iridescent sequins. The princess sleeves were elbow length and styled with a double ruffle of taffeta and chantilly lace. Miniature ruffles of chantilly lace formed the flounce and hemline of the full skirted gown and attached chapel train. She wore a fingertip illusion veil held in place by a Juliet cap trimmed in lace and pearls. The bride carried a mixed bouquet of silk violets, carnations and mums in shades of pink, lavender and purple.

Leskie Karen Gordon, sister of the bride, was the honor attendant. She wore a formal gown of pink jersey styled with a sleeveless blouson bodice and miniature pleated skirt. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations and baby's breath.

Steve Powers of Tarboro was best man and ushers included David J. Gordon Jr. and William McGuirt, brother and stepbrother of the bride, respectively.

The mother of the bride wore a street length dress of deep blue violet chiffon and the bridegroom's mother wore a street length powder blue and white jersey dress. The bride's stepmother wore a street chiffon dress with a white tucked bodice and pearl gray pleated skirt. They carried yellow rose sprays. The grandmothers were also remembered with rose sprays.

A program of wedding music was provided by Joe Goodwin, organist, and Dillon F. Watson, stepfather of the bride.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Courtney Square party house. Karen Gooding, stepsister of the bride, and Karen Smith poured punch. Wedding cake was served by Jenny Whitaker, sister of the bridegroom.

After a wedding trip to the coast, the couple will live in Greenville.

MRS. WHITAKER

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I just read a story about a group of dieters who were grossly overweight and wanted to get rid of the extra pounds.

They were asked to keep records of every single bit of food they put into their mouths for a period of one month. At the end of that time, they were all herded into a dormitory and housed under strict supervision. No visitors were allowed. They were not permitted to leave the building.

They were then fed precisely what he or she had recorded as having eaten during the previous month.

At the end of four weeks, each had lost an average of 25 pounds.

So what! What are they trying to say here? That all dieters are dishonest? That we will connive, manipulate, deceive and cheat to make ourselves look good? Well, no one's perfect!

I used to belong to one of those lose-by-committee groups where you stood in a line before being weighed in and had the woman behind you hold the fillings out of your teeth while you stepped on the scale. The leader of the group was Martha. She had the warmth of Eva Braun.

"Are you still eating popcorn with butter?" she'd ask.

"Popcorn? What is popcorn?"

"Are you still drinking gravy as a beverage?"

"Please, Martha, don't use language like that in front of hungry women on the verge of rioting."

It would have killed Martha to know how I really ate, so I told her I worshipped daily at the Shrine of Our Lady of Celery.

I never told her that I put the bathroom scale on a shag carpet because it weighed me five pounds less. I never told her I ate guacamole on my low-sodium crackers. She couldn't have handled it.

If people trying to lose weight are generally dishonest as a group, it is because the dieters aren't all that honest with the dieters. How many times have we been promised that we can lose inches and eat and drink everything we want? Or that liver can be disguised as malts and taste wonderful? Or that we can hook ourselves up to a vacuum sweeper and have the fat sucked out of our bodies as we clean?

Why, you can't turn the pages of a magazine or a tabloid without reading the testimonial of a woman who wore a dress that could slipcover New Jersey in one photo and 30 days later looked like a well-dressed thermometer. Only mirrors tell the truth... and no one likes them.

Joe's Family Played Cards After Accident

DEAR ABBY: The things busybodies worry about! I am referring to "No Names, Please," who wonders how a woman could play cards on the night of a loved one's funeral.

I think I can tell her because my husband and I, our son, age 21, and our daughter — a twin to the 23-year-old son who was killed in a car accident — played cards the very night our son was killed.

One can do only so much crying, pacing and praying. We all sat around the table so we could touch each other. Instead of filling our glasses with booze or chain-smoking, we were at least keeping our hands busy. We didn't know whose turn it was to deal and we weren't even sure what we were playing. The tears ran onto the cards sometimes, but at least we were together.

JOE'S MOTHER

DEAR UPSET: Please don't panic. Your case is not unusual. People who at some time in their lives have had malaria, scarlet fever, infectious mononucleosis, lupus erythematosus (and many other diseases) are apt to show false-positive for syphilis.

See a dermatologist or hematologist for a more thorough blood study. You will be given tests to rule out the false diagnosis of syphilis.

When you produce the doctor's report of the additional blood tests, you will be able to marry without delay.

TERRIBLY UPSET

DEAR ABBY: I am so upset I can hardly write this. I am a widowed senior citizen who recently met a wonderful man whose companionship I would like to have for the remaining years of my life.

We made plans to marry, then I got the shock of my life. My blood test showed "positive" and now we can't get married. The positive on my blood test means that I have syphilis!

Abby, I have never in my life had syphilis or any other kind of venereal disease. How can I account for this terrible situation?

I have offered to take a polygraph test to prove my innocence, but my DEAR ABBY: My niece's co-workers gave her a lovely bridal shower. We were told it was a "general" shower, which meant the guests could bring anything they wanted.

Well, somebody brought a box filled with items such as disposable diapers, rattles, booties and so on.

Everybody laughed. If this was supposed to be funny, I didn't get the point. How do you feel about a gift like that for a bride?

AUNT KATH

DEAR AUNT KATH: If your niece isn't infanticiding, it was a practical joke. If she is, it's a practical gift.

Beautification Report Given At Club Meet

The Greenville Garden Club held its meeting Friday at the home of Mrs. J.C. Galloway. A report on the beautification of the psychiatric courtyard at Pitt County Memorial Hospital was given.

Mrs. Galloway, chairman of the garden therapy committee, said the club was aided by the Rattlesnake Patrol of the Boy Scouts of America Troop 30, sponsored by Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. Helping plant 100 bulbs, shasta daisies and several nandina shrubs were Nelson Galloway, patrol leader, Fred Hampton, John Uhlman, Mike Swinson, Park Williams and Stephen Smith.

It was announced that the wildflower of the year to be recognized by the Garden Club of North Carolina, Inc. would be the Beard Tongue or Penstemon. State garden club officials and staff members of the N.C. Botanical Gardens are promoting the project to make the public aware of N.C. wildflowers.

The program was given jointly by Mrs. S.N. Highsmith, who spoke on "When, Where and How to Plant Bulbs" and Donna Whitley, who illustrated aerobics and told how this could benefit members.

Mrs. Thomas Norris was welcomed as a guest of Mrs. Ted Steig.

Mrs. John Coughlan and Mrs. Gilbert Peel were assisting hostesses.

Spreading Influence

Legislators studying North Carolina's educational system have come up with a proposal — so far only one of several — that would expand the state Board of Education to include legislative appointments based on nominees submitted by county boards of commissioners.

The proposal would leave intact board membership for the lieutenant governor and the state treasurer, with eight appointments to be made by the governor and 11 — one from each congressional district — by the Legislature. The resulting 21-member board would then appoint a state superintendent of public instruction, who now is elected statewide.

This plan has merit. Other proposals, varying from an elected state board to more power for an elected superintendent, all have obvious flaws. But the proposal for an expanded board appointed by the governor and the Legislature, with a superintendent who would be accountable to that board, would open the way for additional public input.

This plan obviously would still be political in nature, but not to the extent that the school system is now subjected. It would certainly eliminate most of the friction that has at times existed between a gubernatorially appointed board and an elected superintendent. It would also spread influence, political or otherwise, from across the state rather than from one or two sources.

The Legislature would be well advised to take a hard look at this choice. It could be a major improvement in public education.

Taste Of Pride

In recent years North Carolina A&T University has taken its lumps over problems associated with its nursing school and its financial accounting system. But the news coming out of Winston-Salem this year is one of pride — pride over A&T graduates Jesse Jackson, a presidential hopeful, and Ron McNair, a space voyager aboard the last flight by the shuttle Challenger.

A&T officials say candidly they're using Jackson and McNair "for all it's worth" to boost financial giving and enrollment. And it apparently is working. The university had a record enrollment last year of 5,600 students, and applications for the fall semester are up 10 percent over those for last year.

All the publicity over McNair and Jackson, who have been quick to point out their connections with the university, has been an unexpected plus for A&T — but it's a welcome plus.

Outlook Improves

NEW YORK (AP) — The economy will be "incredibly strong" for the first two quarters of the year, says economist William Dunkelberg after analyzing the findings of the latest quarterly survey of small business.

The survey, of more than 2,000-member firms of the National Federation of Independent Business, showed record high January levels for small-business optimism and capital spending plans, said Dunkelberg.

It also showed hiring expectations reached a record for the first quarter of the year, and that sales exceeded efforts to rebuild stocks of goods, in spite of strong efforts by business to accumulate a reserve of items.

"Business is trying hard to accumulate inventories but sales are taking goods off the shelves," said Dunkelberg, a Purdue University professor who analyzes survey findings with Jonathan Scott of Southern Methodist University.

Since lean inventories must be rebuilt, Dunkelberg says he foresees "a nice kicker" for the economy later in the year.

The survey, which has a record of accurately forecasting short-term economic conditions, comes just a few weeks after many economists lowered their expectations.

"They were mistaken," said Dunkelberg. "They thought the consumer would back out, but it isn't so."

The two economists maintain that small business — fewer than 500 workers — provides an accurate reading of general business conditions, since it accounts for half the non-farm workforce and private domestic production. Moreover, they observe, the vast majority of American businesses employ fewer than 20 workers.

The survey showed much of the strength centered among consumers, "who are not through catching up for deferred spending through the recession." High among deferred items are cars, now averaging seven years old, and houses.

Among factors in the restoration of confidence, the survey showed, are tax cuts, low inflation and less uncertainty about jobs.

The survey's small-business optimism index soared in the first quarter to 110.7 — based on 1978 equaling 100 — after having fallen to 73.5 in the second quarter of 1980, the lowest since the survey was begun in 1975.

Among other things, an analysis of returns showed "businesses are loaded with cash-flow dollars" and that fourth-quarter borrowing activity reached near-record low levels. Only 39 percent of companies reported borrowing on a regular basis, just one percentage point above the low of 38 percent in 1975.

Those that did borrow for the short term late in 1983 paid an average interest rate of 13.3 percent, almost identical to rates paid in the third and second quarters.

Avoid The Bonehead And Survive

WASHINGTON — I am developing a theory, and trot it out for inspection: In public life, the first rule of political survival is to avoid the bonehead play. Outright blunders either will be forgiven (Kennedy and the Bay of Pigs) or they will be condemned absolutely (Nixon and Watergate), but the bonehead play is different.

The kind of thing I have in mind begins with something that is too trivial to rise to the level of either forgiveness or condemnation. Then comes the bonehead play, and the matter takes on the fragrance of a pharaoh's roses. It lingers on forever.

The theory is not exactly new. Mark Antony is authority for the proposition that the evil men do live after them, while the good is oft interred with the bones. The bonehead play is seldom "evil," but it sticks in the mind.

George Romney had little chance anyhow in the campaign of 1968, but that chance vanished with his lighthearted confession that he had been "brainwashed" on the matter of Vietnam. Jimmy Carter was handling himself well in his 1980 debate with Ronald Reagan until he got into daughter Amy's opinions on nuclear war. Earlier in the Carter administration, a top presidential aide had had a small but public spat with a young woman in a Georgetown bar. Instead of ignoring the incident, the White House issued a 30-page white paper. It was not the spat, it was the paper that provided the bonehead play.

Other examples spring readily to mind. Earl Butz was an able secretary of agriculture, but his greater talent was for the unfunny joke. James Watt might still be at Interior if it weren't for his public comment about "a black, two Jews, a woman and a cripple" on a special commission. Former Sen. Roman Hruska of Nebraska is remembered for his defense of a mediocre nominee to the Supreme Court: There are a lot of mediocre people out there, said the senator, and they deserve a little representation.

All this comes to mind in the light of a couple of bonehead plays at the U.S. Information Agency. Until recently the name of director Charles Z. Wick was scarcely a household word and the USIA figured lightly in the news. The gentleman and his agency might still be dwelling in peaceful obscurity but for two regrettable lapses.

First off, it transpired through a leak to The New York Times that Wick had been surreptitiously taping some of his telephone calls. That was not the bonehead play. The taping could have been forgiven. The bonehead play came when Wick lied to Timesman William Safire about it. Safire had the goods, and suddenly he was on Wick like a hawk on a field mouse. Wick at once became the cartoonists' darling, and what began as an innocuous transgression has grown to a cause celebre.

Then last week another flap arose at Wick's agency. It further transpired that some political types somewhere in the mazes of the USIA had prepared what amounted to a blacklist of 84 persons who were unacceptable for engagements abroad as lecturers in behalf of the United States. Among the 84 were Walter Cronkite of CBS, John Kenneth Galbraith of Harvard, Elizabeth Drew of The New Yorker, Ben Bradlee of The Washington Post and Sen. Gary Hart of the sovereign state of Colorado.

I happen to know these individuals, and indeed I know them to be subversive — subversive, that is, of Republican principles and supply-side economics.

In every administration, Democratic or Republican, delicate decisions are made on who shall be invited to dinner. In the nature of things, to include is also to exclude. Everyone understands this. The bonehead play comes in writing these decisions down, for it is inevitable that lists will be leaked to the Post or the Times. Little things, just as the songwriter tells us, mean a lot. That's a motto to carve in stone on bureaucratic walls.

Public Forum

To the editor:

This letter is to applaud your editorial on the city-county animal shelter merger and to respond to Mrs. Elizabeth Mayo's letter of the same day, Feb. 15.

Mrs. Mayo, it is irresponsible pet owners who have created the need for animal shelters. You referred to having to "rescue" your animals from the pound. If you are among those who allow their animals to roam, occasionally or habitually, you have contributed to the animal overpopulation problem for which we tax-paying citizens must pay. Where do you think strays come from? Are you aware of the city's leash law?

You're a self-proclaimed animal lover. It seems your love stops at the city limits of Greenville. Does it not bother you that 2,294 dogs and cats were picked up in the county and all but 150 were destroyed? Can you sleep at night with the knowledge that puppies are found frozen to the concrete in bitter weather because there are no inside facilities at the county pound?

I hope you will reconsider your initial stand against the merger. The current city facility is located on property designated for recreational usage and will eventually have to be relocated. There is need for a new county and city shelter. If you fight this merger, you are forcing the city taxpayers to face the burden of the expense of a new city facility alone.

We concerned citizens can reduce expenses of animal population control most by encouraging all citizens to spay and neuter their animals and abide by the city's leash law.

As for your figures, Ms. Mayo on the expenses of operating an incinerator, I have not had time to research them. But Bell's Fork is not 10 miles from Greenville. Could it be possible that some of your other figures were exaggerated?

Strength For Today

A speaker was describing the progressive secularization of our modern life and the adverse effect it was having on democratic institutions. He said that for the most part we, today, are relying on the rotten rope of self-interest to hold us all together.

A rotten rope is a treacherous thing. Just when we need it most it snaps, and the precious things it is holding come crashing to the ground. By way of contrast, the speaker was detailing how the original Pilgrim settlers were bound together by something vastly more secure; namely, their devotion to God and to one another. These were the people who founded our democratic way of life.

Today we naively try to persuade ourselves that our democracy will hold together without the support of religion. We put our trust in self-interest and as a result have pressure groups and a declining sense of community. It should be quite clear today that we can put no reliance on rotten ropes.

Smiles For Atom-Backers

WASHINGTON — When the nuclear industry has been enduring nothing but bad news, Margaret Heckler has given atom-advocates something to smile about.

Margaret Heckler, secretary of Health and Human Services? One and the same.

As chief of the agency that regulates the food and drug industries, she has put the weight of her office behind an atomic substitute for the use of the much-questioned fumigant, ethylene dibromide (EDB), in food preservation. A regulatory proposal to sanction the preservation of food by radiation may not solve the nuclear power industry's problems, but the radiation process could gain public acceptance, given the alternatives.

When we talked in 1982 to a pioneer in the process, Martin Welt, president of Radiation Technology Inc., in Rockaway, N.J., food irradiation seemed something out of the old television series, "Lost in Space." Though it had received sanction from the World Health Organization and, for the space shuttle kitchen, from NASA, its commercial use in America had been limited by the Food and Drug Administration to potatoes and wheat flour.

Welt's unadulterated confidence about the safety of irradiated cuisine (as well as an endorsement from Ralph Nader's Center for Science in the Public Interest) hadn't been enough to convince federal regulators that the public was ready for it on a broad scale. (Of a wide range of proposed foodstuffs, only spices have been added to the list of irradiables since 1982.)

Lately, however, EDB hysteria has given the government new insight. In doses of up to 100,000 rads, the FDA said in a proposal published last Tuesday, "food irradiation does not present a safety and health risk."

Welt complains that food irradiation has received its new boost "by default." Washington, he says, is not citing studies it's possessed since 1979. He adds that a U.S. Army investigation found no unique radiolytic products, known in the trade as "urps," in chicken or bacon treated with up to 9.1 megarads, or 910 times the proposed federal limit.

But Welt should count his blessings. As he concedes, the food industry's interest in radiation stems from fears of product-liability lawsuits resulting from EDB and chemicals like it. Without the public's concern about risky additives, Margaret Heckler may never have put the zip into food zaps.

Konstantin Chernenko's appointment as general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party leaves both superpowers again under the direction of septuagenarians. Yet Eastern Europe still beats Western Europe in the old-leader department.

Hoxka of Albania, for example, is 75; Zhivkov of Bulgaria, 72. Honecker of East Germany, Husak of Czechoslovakia and Kadar of Hungary are all 71.

The improved health of some American automakers seems to have caused the first increase in car dealerships since 1955. Automotive News found that 20,841 dealers were in operation last Jan. 1, or 42 more than a year before. Chrysler and Ford enjoyed the most significant gains in franchises.

Nuclear weapons development and related activities would consume more than half of the $7.8 billion, 1985 budget proposed by the Reagan administration for the Energy Department. The department is considering at least 17 different weapons programs as well as one anti-ballistic missile systems.

Confrontation Ahead

WASHINGTON — If the latest confrontation between Ronald Reagan and Paul Volcker does not produce Federal Reserve Board policy geared to economic recovery, the White House is at long last prepared to go public against the imperious central banker.

In what was supposed to have been a secret meeting last week in the Oval Office, the president told the Federal Reserve chairman that he expects monetary policy to accommodate real economic growth at the 4.5 percent rate forecast by both the Fed and the Treasury. Reagan neither expected nor received a straight answer from Volcker, but this time he is looking for deeds rather than words.

Any deeds will come at the March meeting of the Fed's Open Market Committee. If there is no perceptible monetary easing then, Reagan and his senior aides are ready to do what until now they have dreaded: in effect, ask the people whether their economic prospects should be shaped by their president or an appointed bureaucrat.

Thus, Reagan's long-brewing Volcker crisis has come to fruition, with the nation's short-term political and economic future at stake. After deciding last summer that Volcker's reappointment to the Fed chairmanship was necessary to reassure financial markets, the West Wing staffers have come full circle; they view him as the single biggest threat to continued economic recovery and Reagan's re-election.

This realization was fully crystallized by Volcker's remarkable performance the week of Feb. 6, when his implicit threat to crunch credit unless Reagan raised taxes sent the stock market plunging and punctured Reaganite euphoria. Far more than the Lebanese government's fall, the stock market collapse was heard in the West Wing as the warning siren.

Volcker's closest allies in the administration — budget director David Stockman and Martin Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers — are out of monetary policy. Furthermore, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, who in the past has been double-talked by Volcker into accepting reassurances that the Fed was hitting monetary targets, has clarified his position.

Nevertheless, nobody in the administration is betting Volcker will accommodate the president.

The man called the ultimate bureaucrat by Washington insiders has been transformed at the Fed by adulation in the financial community and treatment as a potentate by foreign powers. He has become Super Civil Servant, defying presidents for what he considers the public interest. The reason why Reagan did not go public in the first place was given us candidly by a senior staffer: "If we can't take care of Marty Feldstein, how do you expect us to handle Paul Volcker?"

How Tar Heels Voted In The House, Senate

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the days before the presidential birthday recess.

HOUSE
PARTY CLASH — By a vote of 153 for and 237 against, the House rejected a move to allocate committee and subcommittee slots to Republicans in the same proportion as they hold seats in the 435-member House. The vote occurred during debate on H Res 436.

Democrats, who control the House and write its rules, allow Republicans a limited number of seats on each panel. Although the GOP accounts for about 38 percent of the overall House membership, its representation on committees averages below 38 percent.

Republicans say this enables Democrats to kill in committee many bills that would succeed if debated on the floor in public view. They say that with their own 38 percent membership on a given panel, plus the support of conservative Democrats, they could salvage many of their major bills.

Supporter William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., said "one of the amazing things about this whole process is that the Democratic Party leadership has ... made an eloquent defense of the civil rights of minorities in America."

Opponent Bill Alexander, D-Ark., noted that when the GOP last controlled the House, 30 years ago, it created an even greater committee advantage for the majority party.

Members voting yes wanted the GOP to have proportional representation on House committees and subcommittees.

Those North Carolina House representatives voting yes were James Martin, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10.

Those representatives voting no were Tim Valentine, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Britt, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, and James Clarke, D-11.

Not voting were Walter Jones, D-1, and Ike Andrews, D-4.

attempts on a president's life. Also covered would be federal crimes that result in death.

A person convicted of a crime specified in the bill would face a separate court proceeding to determine whether the sentence is death.

Supporter Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said the death penalty "is a way for society to express its sense of outrage for intolerable conduct threatening the very foundations of society."

Opponent Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said "it is better to imprison 100 murderers for life than to take the risk that one innocent citizen will be put to death."

Senators voting no on the filibuster issue were opponents of the federal death penalty.

North Carolina Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted yes.

APPEALS — The Senate passed, 67 for and nine against, a bill to limit the filing of federal habeas corpus appeals by persons convicted in state court. The bill (S 1763) was sent to the House.

Habeas corpus, Latin for "produce the body," is a constitutional guarantee that those arrested be informed of the charge and produced in court for a hearing.

Critics say too many state prisoners abuse it and clog the courts by filing endless habeas corpus appeals with federal judges. Because a constitutional question is at stake, federal courts must hear the appeals.

In part, this bill places a statute of limitations on such appeals and spells out instances where state rulings on habeas corpus issues cannot be appealed.

Supporter Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said "we must act now to restore finality to our criminal justice system and to end this type of abuse that is so prevalent." Opponent Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., said "it is the mandate of our criminal justice system to strive for justice — not efficiency, not expediency."

Senators voting yes wanted to limit federal habeas corpus appeals by state convicts.

Sens. East and Helms both voted yes.

2 Injured In Wrecks

Two persons were injured and an estimated $6,800 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated Wednesday by Greenville police.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 6:48 p.m. collision at the intersection of 10th Street and River Bluff Road involving cars driven by Leroy Smith of 2601 Dunn St. and Mason Jay Price of 207B Bryton Hills.

Police, who estimated damage at $1,500 to the Smith car and $3,500 to the Price auto, said Smith was injured in the collision. Price was charged by officers with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Susan Jones Phillips of 104 N. Ash St. was charged with failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident after the car she was driving collided with a vehicle driven by Lisa Van Tapp of Route 1, Chapel Hill, about 1:05 p.m. at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Hooker Road.

Investigators, who set damage from the collision at $300 to the Tapp car and $800 to the Phillips auto, said Ms. Phillips was injured in the accident.

A truck driven by Johnny Lee Lloyd of 114A Howard Circle collided with a parked forklift truck owned by Blount Fertilizer Co. on Beatty Street, 250 feet south of the 14th Street intersection about 4:47 p.m.

Officers estimated damage from the mishap at $600 to the truck and $100 to the forklift.

Require Funeral Flags On Cars

BURLINGTON (AP) — Over the objections of funeral home directors, the Burlington City Council approved Tuesday an ordinance requiring cars in a funeral procession to display a small purple flag.

It is the first such law in the state. Burlington police requested the flags to try to reduce accidents and the city attorney supported the idea, saying the flags will reduce the city's liability in such accidents.

Last year, there were five accidents involving funeral processions, according to Burlington Police Chief Raymond Shelton.

Funeral home directors, however, complained before the council Tuesday that the flags only would be an added expense. They said the flags will cost about $8 each, and one or two extra workers will be required at each funeral to handle them. They said those costs would likely be passed on to the consumer.

Some Raleigh funeral homes already use flags on a voluntary basis, and the state of Ohio has a law similar to Burlington's ordinance.

Jones' Bill Now Law

WASHINGTON — A bill introduced by Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, to facilitate American supervision of Panama Canal operations has been signed into law by President Reagan.

As a result of the Panama Canal Treaties of 1977, Congress established a nine-member supervisory board, composed of five Americans and four Panamanians, to oversee the Panama Canal Commission, the agency charged with operating the canal until the year 2000. Both the treaty and the implementing legislation stipulate quorum requirements for conducting business, which in practice, have required 100 percent attendance.

Jones, an opponent of the 1977 Panama Canal Treaties, said "this has resulted in the postponement and cancellation of board meetings when an American member has been unable to attend, putting off decisions and otherwise disrupting the efficiency of the commission."

"This new law," according to Jones, "will allow, with strict restrictions, the use of one proxy per board meeting, thus providing more flexibility in the conduct of business."

The bill specifies that the proxy must be given to the secretary of defense or his designee. Under current law, the secretary of defense or his designee serves as chairman of the supervisory board and has the power to direct how all five American votes are cast, to insure U.S. control of all policy decisions.

"I am sure it was the intent of those who wrote these requirements to protect American rights in the canal's operation," Jones said, "but what has happened many times is a hamstringing board that serves no one's interests."

"My bill solves this problem and will ensure the fullest American supervision of this vital international trade link," Jones said.

Reagan Says The Mission Remains

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, insisting "we are not bugging out," says he would send Marines back to Lebanon if that would promote stability and an overall settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

"I don't see their mission as being over yet," Reagan said in a vehement defense of his use of the Marines to separate Israeli and Palestinian forces and to back up Lebanese President Amin Gemayel.

About 1,300 Marines are being withdrawn to U.S. ships offshore and Gemayel is faltering, but Reagan told reporters Wednesday night at his first news conference of the year: "We're not bugging out, we're just going into a little more defensible position."

Commenting on Reagan's remarks, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said: "I don't like it. I think it's hawkish, hawkish, hawkish on his part."

"You don't put the lives of Marines in jeopardy to satisfy your own ego. You do it for a real reason and a purpose. And he doesn't have a purpose for us being there."

Reagan said he had talked to parents and widows of servicemen killed in the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut last October and was "amazed at their attitude, which was one of complete confidence that it was a worthwhile mission."

Reagan acknowledged, however, U.S. training of the Lebanese army has been interrupted. Other U.S. officials said shipments of tanks and armored troop carriers also were suspended because of uncertainty over the future of Gemayel's battered forces.

"Everything is in a state of flux," one official said. "If there is something to save, we'll do so."

In the meantime, sources said, Israel is trying to reform remnants of a shattered Lebanese army brigade into a unit that could help defend the southern zone closest to Israel's border.

That could set the stage for a withdrawal of Israeli forces, which Syria and anti-Gemayel factions are pressing on the Lebanese leader as a condition for remaining in office.

Other conditions in a plan being advanced jointly with Saudi Arabia would cancel last May's U.S.-arranged agreement that assured Israel a security footing in southern Lebanon and set the two countries on a path toward diplomatic and other ties.

Reagan said U.S. Navy ships had stopped shelling anti-government positions. "We think this is a time for restraint, and for hoping to cool things down," he said.

And yet, after dismissing as "hypothetical" a question on whether he would return Marines to Lebanese soil, Reagan went on to reply: "If — let me say this — if they could improve the possibility of carrying out their mission, then, yes, that would be a reason for sending them in."

White Collar Crime Rises In N.C.

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The illegal transfer of money through computers in North Carolina nets criminals 10 times as much as does armed robbery, the agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina says.

Urges Parents To Accompany Pupils

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Parents should accompany children to school until police apprehend whoever has sexually attacked four girls, the youngest 8 years old, in the past month, School Superintendent Jerome B. Jones urged.

Two suspects were questioned Wednesday, a day after the 8-year-old was raped, "but there's nothing concrete," said police Maj. George Hydar. He said patrolmen today would begin to "saturate the area," a section of northwest St. Louis dotted with abandoned buildings, where the attacks have occurred since Jan. 24.

Robert L. Pence said the average instance of computer crime involves the illegal transfer of $621,000. According to the National Chamber of Commerce, such computer crimes and other white-collar crimes amounted to more than $40 billion last year.

"And that may just be the tip of the iceberg," Pence said. "Other estimates take it as high as $200 billion. It's probably the biggest money-eater of crimes we've got."

Pence, speaking Tuesday at a meeting of the Asheville chapter of the National Association of Accountants, said white-collar crime, as evidenced by the vote-buying scandal in Clay County, is on the rise in North Carolina.

But, he said, the phenomenon involves money more than politics, adding that white-collar criminals are hard to uncover because their actions are subtle. And when they are caught, their own companies are sometimes reluctant to turn them over to police.

Businesses would rather "cover it up because it makes them look bad (to) their shareholders and boards of directors," Pence said.

Millions of dollars in North Carolina have been diverted primarily by middle-management employees, whom Pence said are especially vulnerable to the temptations of white-collar crime because they have access to company financial records.

The FBI directs most of its effort into scams involving federal programs, Pence said. Tops on its investigation list are frauds involving Medicare, Comprehensive Employment Training Act, the Federal Housing Authority and small business loans.

Pence said one doctor submitted so many Medicare claims that he would have had to treat one patient every 12 seconds.

Credit-card fraud is one of "the scariest and fastest growing white-collar schemes we're finding," Pence said, but can be slowed by the consumers themselves.

He said that making sure all carbon copies of credit card purchases are delivered to the card owner can prevent the card numbers from falling in the wrong hands.

"They're taking the numbers from your Visa cards and embossing them on blank cards," he said. He said thieves may be working in collusion with store owners who, knowing the cards to be false, accept them for large purchases. The owners then cash in the card receipts at a bank and give a share of the money to the cardholder, Pence said.

Banks, who suffer the millions of dollars lost to credit-card fraud, pass the losses to their customers in the form of higher usage rates, Pence said.

But penalties for anyone caught are slight, Pence said. An armed bank robber may get 14 years, but a hacker who breaks into a bank's computer codes and transfers money to his own account is likely to get a suspended sentence.

Most Lebanese Happy To See Americans Go

By STEPHEN K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The U.S. Marines are leaving behind embittered enemies and disillusioned old friends among the Lebanese, who in general are happy to see them go.

Italian troops, on the other hand, will be missed at the Palestinian refugee camps where they stood guard.

Seventeen months after entering Lebanon to support President Amin Gemayel's government and protect the Palestinians, the multinational force is breaking up, and there has been no outcry from the people of Beirut.

The minuscule British force left first, followed by the Italians, and the Marines are now in the process of withdrawing to ships offshore. That leaves only the French, deployed along the Green Line dividing Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors.

Pro-government Christians and Moslems feel the force never had the military muscle to play an effective role.

Anti-government Moslems and Druse remain angry that the Americans took the side of Gemayel's government and bombarded leftist areas.

There is outright hostility toward the Marines in Bourj el-Barajneh refugee camp and Hay el-Selloum, a poor Shiite Moslem neighborhood on the outskirts of the Marine zone which is plastered with posters of Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini.

"They'd better go home before we murder them," said Bilal el-Ameli, 17, a Shiite refugee from the southern city of Tyre. "The day will come when we shall kill the Americans. We are not afraid of anyone but God."

"At the beginning, they did no harm to anyone," said Suad Rahhal, 37, also from Tyre. "But at the end, they left no eye without tears and they made us pull our children from the rubble of our homes. The (U.S. battleship) New Jersey was hitting us. We used to like them. The children who loved them and spent hours with them now despise them."

"May God speed the wheels of their departure," said Wahibeh Briteh, 40, a Shiite refugee from the eastern city of Baalbek.

The Italians were less controversial in their narrowly defined role of policing the Palestinian refugee camps south of Beirut where hundreds of people were massacred in September 1982.

In Chatilla refugee camp, about 200 people have been sleeping in the basement of a school since the Italians left earlier this week and many others fled to homes of relatives because they feared the return of the Christian militiamen who committed the 1982 massacres.

The residents of Chatilla had only good things to say about the Italians. Issam al-Katib, 30, a hospital laboratory director, said some of the Italians had girlfriends and many taught children in the camps to speak Italian.

"The people became attached to these Italians," said al-Katib. "It was more than security. It's like a family member leaving — because they didn't enter the conflict, they were neutral militarily speaking."

"The Italians were very nice," said Nayef Mostafa Ramadan, 44, a shoe store owner. "They provided us with a hospital, medicine, and they did patrols day and night, in the rain and in the sun. Everyone regrets their departure."

The people of Chatilla wept openly when the Italians withdrew. But on neither side of war-divided Beirut were tears shed for the Americans.

"They said they came to make peace, but all they did was sit and watch the war," said Suheil Haddad, 27, who spent Wednesday night in his basement because of shellfire in his Christian neighborhood of Ashrifiyeh.

"If they wanted to make peace, they should not have put up with any fighting," he said. "It looks like they were afraid of the terrorists. You can't deal with terrorists and countries like Syria with diplomacy. You have to use force."

But it was America's use of force on behalf of the government that made enemies of the leftist Moslems and Druse, who at first accepted the presence of peacekeeping troops in their areas.

"We are not against the American people," said Neguib Dik, 35, a Druse fisherman. "We are only against the politics of Reagan in Lebanon. The Americans joined with the Phalangists (Christian militia) against the Druse in the mountains. They destroyed our houses and our families and our children. If they took the middle ground between the Druse and Phalangists, we would want them."

Unlike the Americans, the French did not intervene in the fighting between Gemayel's army and the Druse in the mountains east of Beirut, and confined their military action to retaliation against forces that hit them first.

Ahmed el-Zein, a Shiite resident of Bourj el-Barajneh, referred to the U.S. intervention and said: "The French have come to understand, and they are not involved in such things. But the Americans, they are still against us. They do not learn."

Announce Plans To Build 120-Room Motel This Year

CRICKET INN ... will be Greenville's newest motel, according to plans announced by Quality Oil Co. of Greenville which call for construction of a 120-room facility on Memorial Drive.

Quality Oil Co. of Greenville Inc. has announced plans to build and operate a 120-room motel on a 5.5-acre site on Memorial Drive between Maple Street and South Village Drive.

Charles Gaskins, vice president and manager, said construction on the new lodging facility will begin by late April or the first of May. He said plans call for opening the motel by the fall or no later than the first of the year.

Gaskins said the two-story motel will be operated by the Greenville firm, which is a branch company of the Winston-Salem-based Quality Oil Co., as a Cricket Inn franchise.

The spokesman said the facility, which he termed a "luxury-economy" motel, will feature "the best in room furnishings" and will have a pool. In addition, the firm is looking for a family-type restaurant operation to lease a separate building that will be constructed on the front portion of the tract.

Gaskins said there will be room on the site for future expansion of the motel, which will employ about 25 local residents. He noted that during construction, there will be approximately 30 workers on the site.

The cost of the new facility, including land and items related to the overall package, will amount to $1.75 million to $2 million, said Gaskins. The Memorial Drive site, which was purchased by Quality Oil from William G. Blount and Nelson Crisp, will be fully landscaped, he emphasized.

Quality Oil Co. has operated in Greenville for about 50 years, Gaskins said. The parent firm has previous experience in the motel business, he said, having company-owned Howard Johnson's Motor Lodges in High Point and Rock Hill, S.C.

Cricket Inn, also headquartered in Winston-Salem, is marketed by Turnpike Properties Inc. The firm has 10 facilities in operation throughout North Carolina and is building motels in Statesville, Charleston, S.C., Raleigh and Durham. Bill Turner, an official with Turnpike Properties, is a former resident of Greenville.

Dedicating Specifications Collection

The microforms collection of East Carolina University's Joyner Library, one of the largest in the Southeast, will be dedicated in honor of former ECU library services director Wendell W. Smiley.

The university's board of trustees approved a proposal to name the rooms housing the collection of more than one million volumes on microfilm, microfiche, ultrafiche, microcard and microprint for Smiley in ceremonies this spring.

A portrait of Smiley which hangs in the library will be moved to the microforms collection and a plaque summarizing his accomplishments and the date of dedication will be unveiled. In addition, an invitation dinner or general reception is being planned.

A native of Bryson City, Smiley came to ECU in 1943 when the school had a library staff of only three professionals and library holdings of 50,000 volumes. When he retired in 1973, the library's holdings totaled more than 425,000 bound volumes, nearly as many microfilm volumes, more than 5,000 periodicals and a professional staff of 32.

Smiley, 75, has continued to be a resident of Greenville since his retirement. He came to ECU after serving as librarian at Georgia Teachers College and Mercer University in Macon, Ga. He attended Mars Hill College, the University of North Carolina and the University of Illinois, receiving bachelor degrees in education and library science and a master's in library science.

Specifications Raised The Cost

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government could have saved up to $20.4 million in fiscal 1982 by buying commercial ground beef instead of beef that conformed to special restrictions, the General Accounting Office says.

Federal agencies which buy ground beef to feed the military and provide school lunches follow specifications that raise costs "without increasing quality, flavor or nutritional value," the congressional auditing agency said.

The GAO estimated savings of 6.4 cents to 11 cents a pound if lower cost, commercially accepted meat had been purchased.

VIOLATIONS

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A new U.N. report cites a "disturbing increase" in human rights violations in Chile, and says 68 people were slain in clashes with security forces in 1983.

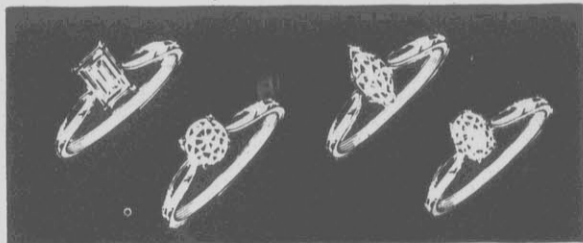

Funds To Fight Pollution Dipped

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spending to fight pollution fell 4.8 percent in 1982, the third consecutive year that business, government and individuals devoted less money to environmental controls, the Commerce Department says.

After adjusting for inflation, $24.4 billion was spent in 1982 to fight air and water pollution and dispose of solid wastes, the department said in a report.

While such spending increased from 1972 through 1979, it said, outlays to fight pollution declined by 2.2 percent in 1980 and 2.7 percent in 1981.

Finally Identify Woman In Coma

BOSTON (AP) — Police received missing-person inquiries from as far away as Nevada before they were able to identify a young woman who has been comatose since she was hit by a truck while crossing the busy Massachusetts Turnpike.

The victim was identified by her mother and her roommate Wednesday as Gail M. Osmond, 23, of Boston and Ipswich, Mass. She was struck just after midnight Friday while darting across the highway in Boston and had carried no identification, police said.

Ms. Brown suffered extensive injuries, and doctors at Boston City Hospital put her on the danger list Wednesday.

NEEDED — A TOUCH OF REPAIRS — This group of buildings along a roadside between the community of Shine and Goldsboro is in need of repairs to correct the altered states into which they have fallen into over the past years. One curious thing about this cluster of buildings — each is leaning in a slightly different direction. The group also calls to mind the raptures of nostalgia which songwriters and poets have often expressed for the remembrance of that tumbled-down shack back home. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Will Deny Challenge

RALEIGH (AP) — A Superior Court judge says he will deny a challenge to the part of the state's driving-while-impaired law that allows the use of an affidavit to show a defendant's blood-alcohol content.

Judge Thomas H. Lee said in a letter dated Feb. 20 he intended to overturn a Wake County District Court judge's recent ruling that the DWI affidavit is unconstitutional.

District Judge Philip O. Redwine ruled against the affidavit on Jan. 6 in response to a pre-trial motion filed by Raleigh attorney William B. Crumpler for Eugene P. Watkins.

Watkins, of Raleigh, was charged with DWI on Nov. 22, 1983. Since Redwine's ruling, several other Wake County judges have issued similar rulings.

Crumpler argued that the affidavit is unconstitutional because it denies a defendant the right to question a "witness" against him — the person who administers the breath analysis test.

But Lee said that in his opinion the DWI affidavit was constitutional. Lee's remarks came in a letter to Isaac T. Avery, a special deputy attorney general who represented the state on the issue.

Lee gave three reasons for his opinion: — The defendant has a right to subpoena the test operator to testify in his trial.

— If found guilty in District Court, the defendant has the right to ask for a jury trial in Superior Court, where the breath-analysis operator is required to testify.

— The DWI statute should be presumed to be constitutional because the Legislature gave it "much study and debate."

Asking Congress For A Hotline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mother of a 13-year-old girl who vanished in 1981 is urging Congress to approve a national hotline and information clearinghouse to help find missing children.

Pearla Kinsey Peterson of Oklahoma told a Senate subcommittee this week such a hotline would have aided the search for her daughter, Charlotte, who disappeared along with a girlfriend while attending the Oklahoma State Fair.

The proposed legislation would authorize $10 million for three years. One such hotline, sponsored by a private group called Child Find, already exists.

Poultry

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 58 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed for a final weighted average. The market is steady and the live supply is light to moderate for a moderate demand. Average weights mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,751,000, compared to 1,760,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market lost more ground today, continuing its long early-1984 decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 152 points from Jan. 6 through Wednesday's close, fell another 3.77 to 1,130.44 by noontime today.

Losers held a 5-4 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened the government reported a 1.1 percent increase last month in new orders for durable goods.

But many investors have been responding uneasily to such seemingly favorable news of late, because of fears that expanding economic activity will exert upward pressure on interest rates and possibly induce the Federal Reserve to tighten credit.

Brokers also said traders were proceeding cautiously in advance of the Fed's weekly report on the money supply, due after the close.

Gulf Corp. led the active list and climbed 1 1/4 to 59 3/4, while Mesa Petroleum was unchanged at 16. Mesa began a tender offer for 13.5 million Gulf shares at $65 apiece.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .33 to 88.44. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .50 at 203.83.

Orders Increased In Durable Goods

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to factories for "big ticket" durable goods climbed 1.1 percent in January, the government reported today in the latest business barometer showing that the nation's economic recovery is continuing.

The Commerce Department said factory orders for durable goods — items expected to last three or more years — rose to $99.2 billion in January, following an increase of 1.7 percent in December.

When the December figure was originally reported last month, the government said there had been a decline of 1.1 percent in orders. That report was one of a string of gloomy assessments that the economic recovery had slowed appreciably in December.

However, the original 1.1 percent decline was later revised to a slight 0.2 percent increase and now, today, to an even better 1.7 percent improvement.

The report on durable goods follows reports released last week showing strong increases in housing sales and personal income in January and a revision upward in overall economic activity for the last three months of the year.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes called today's durable goods report "very impressive" and said it was an "important signal" that industrial production "will remain strong."

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the January increase was the sixth in a row and reflected "excellent growth" in the economy.

He predicted production of durable goods would add significantly to growth in the first three months of the year. After that he forecast a moderation in the increases.

"With an earlier than usual shutdown of some auto facilities for retooling, expansion of durable goods output should slow to a more moderate, sustainable pace," he said.

The January increase in factory orders of durable goods was attributed to a surge in orders for primary metals. This category, which includes iron and steel, was up a strong 17.9 percent, more than offsetting a decline in December of 9.5 percent.

Without the increase in primary metals, factory orders for the month would have declined 1 percent, Commerce Department analysts said.

Within the other major industry groups, both the transportation equipment and machinery industries suffered small declines in January. New orders for transportation equipment dropped 1.6 percent as declines in defense aircraft and aircraft parts were only partially offset by a large increase in the motor vehicle and parts industry.

New orders for machinery were down 2.6 percent.

The closely watched category of non-defense capital goods declined 0.8 percent following a 1.1 percent rise in December. This category reflects industry's plans to add equipment for future production and thus is considered a key barometer of future business activity.

In the highly volatile category of military capital goods, orders dropped 25.6 percent following a 9.6 percent increase in December and a 46 percent rise in November.

Orders for household durable goods rose 3.1 percent.

The 1.1 percent overall increase in orders for January and the 1.7 percent rise in December followed a 3.4 percent increase in November.

Shipments during January totaled $95.7 billion, a decrease of 0.4 percent in January.

All figures are adjusted to discount for normal seasonal variations.

All Wept For 'Bubble Boy'

HOUSTON (AP) — David, the 12-year-old "bubble boy" who remained bright and cheerful through a life of isolation, is dead only 15 days after leaving his sterile environment — the victim of a failed attempt to free him for a normal life.

The longest-surviving victim of a rare condition that robbed him of immunity to disease, David died Wednesday night of heart failure in his room at Texas Children's Hospital, officials said.

The end came just over two weeks after the joyous moment when David stepped out of his bubble for the first time, kissed his mother and felt the loving warmth of a human touch.

"When David died, everybody in the hospital felt it. There were tears all around. All of the family cried. A lot of the nurses cried and even some tough police officers cried," said Houston police Officer Bradley L. Mills.

His family, whose last name has never been released to protect their privacy, left an hour later without comment.

North Pitt Surprises Firebirds; SWE Girls Win

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

FARMVILLE — North Pitt, down by as many as 11 points, rallied to pull out a 56-53 victory over regular season champion Southern Nash last night — and that spelled bad news for Ayden-Grifton's Chargers.

North Pitt, by reaching the tourney finals — the Panthers face the survivor of tonight's SouthWest Edgecombe-Greene Central game — earned the league's number four berth in the District II tournament next week, shoving Ayden-Grifton out the door. The Chargers had finished fourth and were thus on the bubble after losing the first round game to the Panthers.

In the girls' game last night, regular season champ SouthWest Edgecombe overcame an early Farmville Central lead and took a 55-41 victory. The Lady Cougars will meet the winner of tonight's game between North Pitt and Greene Central for the championship on Friday.

"This is the best group of kids I've ever had at North Pitt," a jubilant Cobby Deans said after his team had pulled the upset. "I told them before the game that they needed something good to happen and this was just what we needed."

Both teams shot well — Southern was eight of nine at one time in the first half, and finished with a fine 52.3 percent. North Pitt hit an even 50 percent from the floor.

Southern controlled the boards, 30-25, but North Pitt took command of them in the final period when it really counted. The Panthers also made good on five of 11 free throws in the final period — when they were desperately needed to pad the gap.

Turnovers were also a big factor in the game, as Southern committed 19 to only 13 for the Panthers. That helped North Pitt in its rally from 11 down and in holding onto the lead. During the first three minutes of the final period, North Pitt pushed in six points to take the lead for good while Southern was turing it over three times and missing one shot.

"We played good defense, and we never quit," Deans said. "(Linwood) Harris did a fine job of leading the defense."

In the first half, the Panthers had trouble attacking the basket, relying mostly on outside shooting. But in the second half, they moved the ball into the paint and scored from up close. "We put in a different offense. We had been running a stack, but we shifted to a 1-2-2 and it got more movement for us," Deans said.

After North Pitt got the initial lead, Southern came back to push into a 6-4 lead, then extended it to 10-6 with 3:22 left on a basket by Kelvin Crudup. The Firebirds maintained their 4-point spread, holding a 14-10 lead at the end of the first period.

In the second quarter, Southern slowly pulled out into as much as an 11-point lead, 27-16, with 3:10 on a turnaround jumper by Dwight Carr. But Lenny Langley and Levon Shaw rallied the Panthers over the next three minutes as they cut the lead back to only six, 33-27 at intermission.

Southern inched back out by eight, 39-31, but North Pitt was rallied by Shaw, who scored eight of the final ten points of the period trimming the lead to only 45-43 as the quarter ended.

Shaw tied it up from underneath 15 seconds into the final period, and Langley drove for two layups and a 49-45 lead with 6:16 left.

The Panthers, however, threatened to have problems, missing four of six free throws over the first five-plus minutes of the quarter. But Southern wasn't able to cut into the lead, although it finally did cut it to two, 51-49, at 2:39.

But Shaw tossed back a rebound and Keith Clark made a free throw to up the lead to three. Then, after a Southern basket with 30 seconds left, Langley banged through two free throws with 10 seconds to go to insure the win, 56-51.

Shaw led the North Pitt scoring with 24 points, while Langley had 15 and Harris had 12. Crudup had 18 points to lead Southern.

And while Deans was glad to have his Panthers in the tourney finals, he was just a happy, if not more so, to be in the districts. "I'm really happy about that. The kids deserve it," he said.

For a while, it looked like Farmville Central's girls might be in line for an upset win over regular season champ SouthWest Edgecombe. But the Lady Cougars proved too fast on the transition, and used that to pull away in a sloppy game.

Turnovers were the biggest factor in the game. Farmville had 39 and SouthWest had 32. "That's not a typical game," Farmville coach Hilda Worthington said later. "That's an unusual number of turnovers."

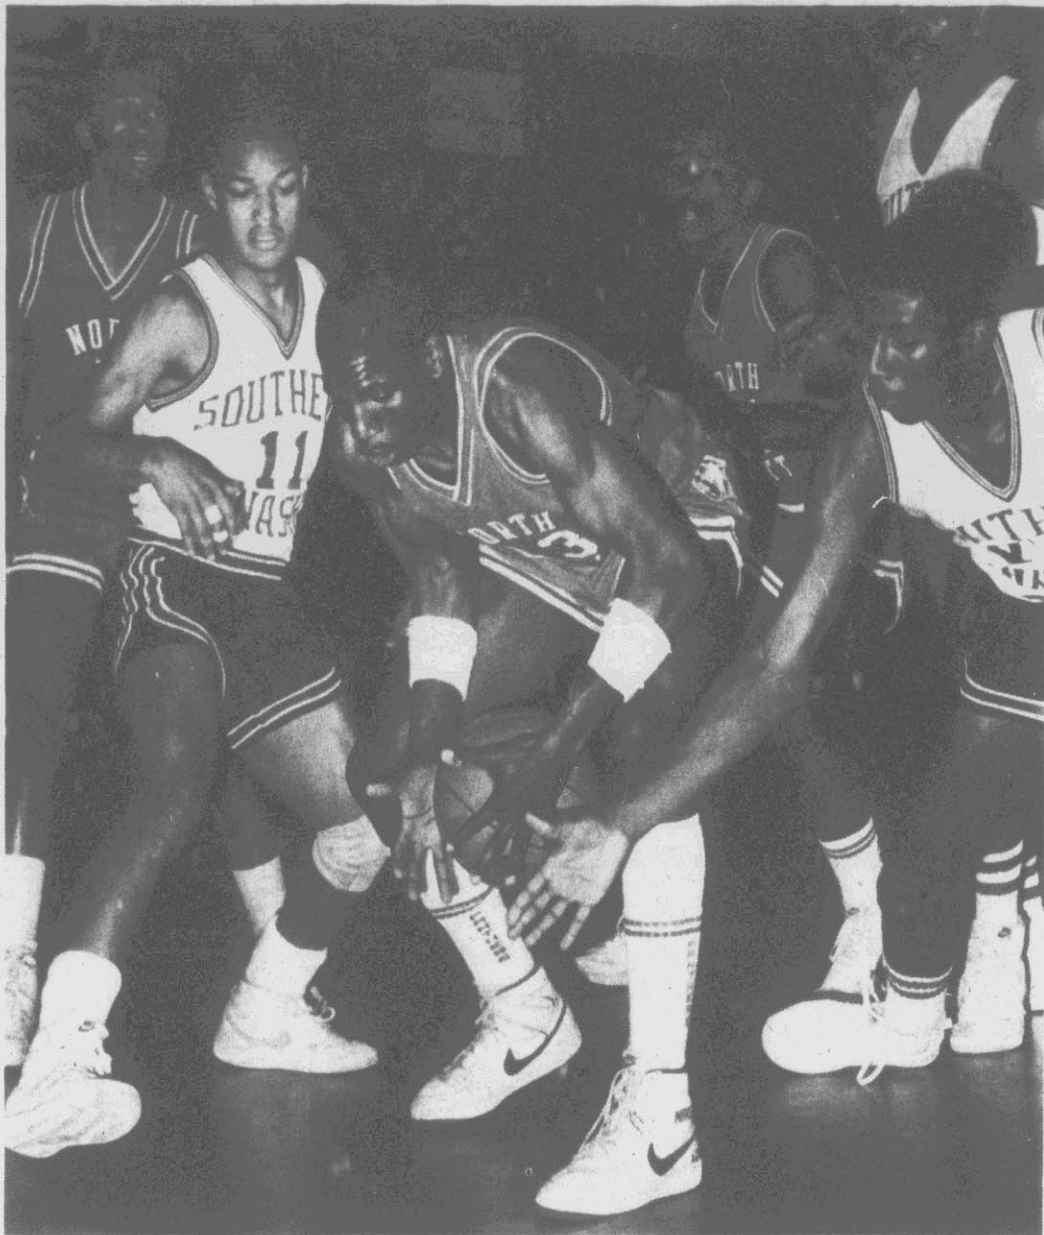

"Neither team played sharp, but it was the first game of the tournament for SouthWest. It was our second, but we had some problems too."

Worthington noted that Lisa Lang, the top reserve for the team, was absent with an illness. Kim Smith, a regular, was suffering from an eye infection, and another starter, Joy Peaden was playing despite a death in her family.

"That's no excuse for the way we played, though," Worthington said. "They are a very quick team and that hurt us. And I'm disappointed in the way we shot free throws (9 of 21). Normally, we do well there. If we had hit our one-and-ones in the first half, we would have been ahead at the half."

SouthWest took the initial lead, but Farmville moved ahead on two free throws by Smith, 6-4. After SWE tied it up, Cynthia Hart made two free throws and a basket to push Farmville into a 10-6 lead. Regina Mabry scored at the horn to cut it to 10-8.

Chocowinity, Bears Win; Bullets Bow In Tourney

Regular season champion Chocowinity, along with Bear Grass, Mattamuskeet and Creswell advanced to the semifinals of the Tobacco Belt Conference Tournament without mishap last night, eliminating the lower seed teams.

Chocowinity tossed Belhaven out, 64-55, Creswell downed Jamesville, 79-55, Mattamuskeet took Aurora, 73-64, and Bear Grass ousted Bath, 55-50.

Chocowinity jumped out into a 20-8 lead in the first period and were never headed by Belhaven. The Indians held a 31-20 lead at halftime and boosted that to 45-34 during the third period. Belhaven outscored the Tribe, 21-19, in the final period to no avail.

Reggie Ross led Chocowinity with 21 points while Terry Moore had 17 and Melvin Tripp added 11. Maurice Green led Belhaven with 16, while Michael Riddick had 12.

Creswell, seeded second, had to battle with Jamesville during the first half, but finally shook loose in the second to pull away and again a wide margin of victory.

Creswell held an 18-14 lead after one period, but the Bullets rallied in the second quarter and tied it up at the half, 29-29. In the third period, Creswell inched away again, moving out to a 50-43 lead. Then, in the final quarter, Creswell raced out to a 29-12 advantage, winning going away.

Danny Moore led Creswell with 23 points while Ezroe Webb added 21 and Stenie Rodgers had 10. Tracy Peele led Jamesville with 17, while Robbie Harris had 14 and Richie Ange had 11.

The Bears eased into a 9-8 lead in their game against Bath, and added two points to the lead in the second quarter. That gave the Bears a 22-18 halftime lead.

In the third period, the Bears continued to pull away, easing out into a 38-30 lead. Bath outscored the Bears, 20-17, in the final period, but it wasn't enough.

Lawrence Watson led the Bears with 19 points while Darryl Brown added 13. Braddy led Bath with 14 while B. Bonner and R. Bonner each had 12.

The tournament moves to Washington High School tonight for the first of two semifinal rounds. Tonight, Belhaven faces Aurora in a girls' game, while Chocowinity takes on Bear Grass in a boys' game. Friday night, Bath and Chocowinity meet in a girls' constt, followed by the Mattamuskeet and Creswell boys. The finals will be played Friday night.

Here's The Whole Truth About Your Dirty Roof

It's not dirt but black fungus that's turning your roof into an eyesore! ... $39.99 Per Square

How black fungus can quickly blacken a white roof

Black fungus is actually a form of concentrated algae growth. Thriving in warm humid southern climates, this fungus grows and spreads much the same way common mildew does in shower stalls. The end result is unsightly black streaks and stains on your roof.

Zinc granules make the big difference.

The porous granules which chemically destroy fungus spores are incorporated into each Celotex fungus resistant shingle. This fungicide is slowly released and washed across the face of the shingle by rain, providing a continuous fungus-inhibiting action.

Self sealing and U.L. rated for wind resistance.

Intermittent bands of adhesive are applied across the face of each shingle. When installed on the roof the warmth of the sun activates this adhesive bonding the shingles. The result is a sealed down roof that can withstand winds of great force without damage.

The Celotex fungus resistant shingle "limited" warranty.

Celotex FRS fungus resistant fiberglass asphalt shingles carry a 20-year limited warranty both as to fungus resistance and life of these durable fiberglass self sealing shingles. (Refer to actual manufacturer's warranty for complete details)

Va. Tech, DePaul Gain Revenge

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

There's nothing like home sweet home when you're seeking revenge. Just ask Virginia Tech or DePaul. Or even their victims, Memphis State and Dayton.

"When you catch a team as good as Tech on a good night, things like this can happen," Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk said Wednesday night after Virginia Tech trampled his 12th-ranked Tigers 89-69 in Metro Conference basketball in Blacksburg to avenge a one-point loss on the road last month.

"We played poorly and Tech was hot and at home," Kirk added. "And that means we were in trouble."

Dayton ran into a similar buzzsaw in Rosemont, Ill., where DePaul Coach Ray Meyer said his fifth-ranked Blue Demons possessed "payback motivation" in the wake of last week's 72-71 loss to the Flyers, a setback that cost the team its No. 3 ranking.

Wednesday night it was DePaul 79-59 and the triumph left Meyer talking about the Blue Demons' defense, rather than revenge.

"We didn't give them anything in the second half, they had to earn it," Meyer said. "Our defense won it and some of our players came of age."

In other games involving Top 20 teams, Boston College beat 16th-ranked Syracuse 90-88 in overtime; No. 8 Oklahoma went an extra period to beat Kansas 92-82; third-ranked Houston breezed past Rice 70-54; No. 15 Wake Forest demolished Monmouth 85-57 and 17th-ranked Temple thumped George Washington 93-77.

Dell Curry and Perry Young combined to score 49 points as Virginia Tech, 63-62 losers at Memphis State on Jan. 31, knocked off the 20-5 Tigers.

The Hokies took the lead for good on Young's three-point play with 12:45 remaining and led 37-23 at halftime.

Curry scored 25 points and Young added 24, while Keith Lee paced Memphis State, 10-2 in the Metro, with 21 points and 10 rebounds despite sitting out the last 11 minutes of the first half in foul trouble.

"When we fell behind in the first half, I think we tried to catch up too quickly," Kirk said. "We took some real bad shots during that stretch."

Virginia Tech Coach Charles Moir attributed the triumph to "great teamwork."

"Everybody that got into the game for us did a heck of a job," he said. "I hope we can get a rematch with Memphis State in the finals of the Metro tournament."

Kevin Holmes scored 19 points and Tony Jackson and Dallas Comegys added 17 and 14, respectively, to pace DePaul's 20th victory in 22 outings.

Comegys and Holmes triggered a burst that sent DePaul into a commanding lead early in the second half and the Blue Demons never looked back.

"We talked about it a lot," Holmes said of the one-point loss to Dayton. "We always want to get back at teams that beat us. The loss Saturday showed us something. It showed us we have to prepare for everybody."

Top Twenty
Michael Young scored 22 points as Houston, 24-3, hiked its record to 13-0 in the Southwestern Conference. The Cougars, who also got eight points from Alvin Franklin in the closing minutes, opened an 18-point lead midway through the second half and coasted as Alvin Franklin finished with 16 points and Akeem Olujuwon added 13 to run the Cougars' winning streak to 37 consecutive league games.

Oklahoma is 23-3, 10-1 in the Big Eight, after surviving a scare from Kansas. The Jayhawks forced overtime on Calvin Thompson's 25-foot jump shot at the buzzer, but the Sooners' Jan Pannell keyed an 18-8 burst with five points in the extra session.

Freshman Tim McCallister scored 31 points and Wayman Tisdale added 28 for Oklahoma.

Boston College, meanwhile, overcame a seven-point deficit in the final 1:02 of regulation and nipped Syracuse on Stu Primus' basket with two seconds remaining in overtime.

Primus, who finished with 14 points, sent the Big East game into overtime by hitting a twisting lay-in after stealing an inbounds pass under the Boston College basket.

The host Eagles held the ball for nearly four minutes of the overtime before Primus took the winning shot, spoiling a 33-point performance by Rafael Addison of Syracuse, now 17-6.

The game also featured a finger-pointing and pushing incident between Boston College Coach Gary Williams and Eagles senior forward Martin Clark.

Afterwards, Williams refused to discuss the incident, saying: "It was just a team thing. I will make no comment on it."

Security guards and officials, meanwhile, had to break up an

Deacs Win With Green Benched

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Wake Forest stepped outside the Atlantic Coast Conference and the 15th-ranked Deacons — even with top scorer Kenny Green out for disciplinary reasons — stomped Monmouth College to move within one triumph of the magic 20-victory plateau.

Delaney Rudd scored 14 points to lead three Wake Forest players in double figures as the Deacons rolled to a 85-57 college basketball victory Wednesday night.

"It was a game we had to win ... our main goal (was) to get that 19th victory," Rudd said.

"I feel good about the team and the way we're playing," Rudd added.

It was the last nonconference game for Wake Forest, 19-5, which finishes the regular season next week against three ACC foes — Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina State.

"It was nice to have a little break before a very tough week of conference play," Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy said. "You never know if playing a nonconference game at this point in the season will break a team's rhythm."

Monmouth coach Ron Kornegay said he knew the Deacons were good and didn't seem surprised at the outcome.

"We knew we would have to give it the fight of our lives to keep within 10 or 12 points," Kornegay said. "Wake Forest is a very good basketball team, worthy of their 15th ranking. They will be a team to be reckoned with down the stretch, and they are playing with a lot of confidence."

The Deacons played without Green, the fifth-leading scorer in the ACC with 17.1 points a game. Green, a forward, was benched because he missed curfew Tuesday night. Monmouth, however, was also without its leading scorer, Solomon McBride, out with a thigh injury.

Rudd scored 12 points in the opening half as the Deacons raced to a 19-4 lead with 9:36 left. The Deacons led 36-19 at the half and

Pistons Fine A New Cure(ton)

By The Associated Press
Isiah Thomas, Kelly Tripucka and Bill Laimbeer usually provide the right medicine for what ails the Detroit Pistons, but Wednesday night they came up with a different Cureton.

Not only did reserve Earl Cureton pull down a game-high 14 rebounds, but he scored seven of his nine points in the fourth quarter to pace the Pistons to a 114-111 National Basketball Association victory over the New York Knicks, who got 43 points from Bernard King.

"There's no question Earl's rebounding was a strong factor in the game," said Detroit Coach Chuck Daly. "He was playing so well I said to myself, 'I'm just going to ride him out.'"

In other games, the San Diego Clippers surprised the Boston Celtics 114-107, the Seattle SuperSonics whipped the Los Angeles Lakers 121-114, the Portland Trail Blazers defeated the Washington Bullets 104-101, the Dallas Mavericks shaded the Houston Rockets 112-106, the Denver Nuggets turned back the San Antonio Spurs 127-121 and the Chicago Bulls trimmed the Indiana Pacers 121-111.

The Pistons and Knicks were tied 98-98 after King scored with 5:49 remaining. But Cureton scored five points in an 11-3 spurt over the next five minutes that gave Detroit a 109-101 advantage. The Knicks led 88-81 after three periods and scored the first basket of the final quarter before the Pistons rallied.

Vinnie Johnson led the Pistons with 25 points, while Thomas and Cliff Levingston each had 22. Terry Tyler, starting in place of the injured Tripucka, added 17 as the Pistons climbed into a virtual tie with Milwaukee for first place in the Central Division.

"Our bench is really playing well now," Cureton said. "We try to add some enthusiasm to the game. That's what you need to win games in this league."

Clippers 114, Celtics 107

Terry Cummings scored 24 points, including 10 in the final quarter, as San Diego prevented Boston from posting the 2,000th victory in the history of the franchise. The Clippers went ahead to stay when Cummings scored six straight points midway through the final quarter, triggering a 10-0 burst that broke a 90-90 deadlock.

However, Boston, which went without a field goal during a 6:18 stretch in the final quarter, pulled within 108-107 with 48 seconds to go. San Diego then scored the final six points, with Bill Walton hitting an 18-footer and Derek Smith and Cummings each adding two free throws. Norm Nixon added 22 points for the Clippers, while Kevin McHale had 26 and Larry Bird 24 to pace Boston.

SuperSonics 121, Lakers 114

Reserve guard David Thompson scored 15 of his 19 points in the second half to pace Seattle. Thompson's baseline jumper with 1:20 to play gave Seattle the lead for good 114-112 after the Lakers had scored 10 straight points to tie the score. Seattle's Tom Chambers topped all scorers with 26 points, while Gus Williams added 24. The Lakers' Magic Johnson scored 22 points and led the rebounders with 13 and the playmakers with 11 assists. Los Angeles was without starting forward Jamaal Wilkes, who had the flu.

Trail Blazers 104, Bullets 101

Jim Paxson made four free throws in the final 19 seconds to clinch Portland's triumph. His first two gave the Trail Blazers a 102-101 lead and he added two more with three seconds left. Kenny Carr scored 24 points for Portland and Paxson had 20. The Bullets were led by Jeff Ruland with 25.

Mavericks 112, Rockets 106

Brad Davis hit two free throws with nine seconds left as Dallas held off Houston. Lewis Lloyd, who led the Rockets with 24 points, capped an 18-4 burst with a basket that pulled them within 109-106 with 37 seconds to play. But Davis hit two free throws and Rolando Blackman, who led all scorers with 33 points, added another Dallas led 105-88 with 6:07 remaining before Houston made its run. The Mavericks played without top scorer Mark Aguirre, out with the flu.

Nuggets 127, Spurs 121
Denver's Dan Issel scored 36 points, Kiki Vandeweghe added 28 and Alex English contributed 24. The Nuggets saw a 12-point lead shrink to four late in the game, but Issel scored four quick points and Vandeweghe added two more as Denver hiked its lead back to 10. Ron Brewer had 22 points for the Spurs, who played without high-scoring George Gervin, who had the flu.

Bulls 121, Pacers 111

Orlando Woolridge scored 32 points and the Chicago bench paced a late third-quarter rally after Indiana shot 60 percent in the first half. Steve Stipanovich scored eight of his 25 points as the Pacers enlarged their lead to 71-55 with 7:35 left in the third quarter.

The Bulls rallied behind David Greenwood and reserve guard Ronnie Lester. Greenwood scored 10 points as Chicago outscored Indiana 28-15 and Lester scored Chicago's final four points of the period to pull the Bulls within 88-85. The Bulls took the lead for good 94-92 on a three-point play by Rod Higgins with 8:31 left.

Indiana played without starting forward Herb Williams, who has an ankle injury.

Washington Girls Fall To Plymouth

WILLIAMSTON — Plymouth High School's girls, seeded second in the Northeastern Conference tournament, had little trouble disposing of seventh ranked Washington last night, 53-32, in the first round of the league's tournament.

In the boys' game last night, number two Tarboro had to come from behind to top number seven Ahsokie, 67-65, to gain the semifinals.

The results finished off the first round and set up the semifinal pairings which begin tonight. In the girls' division, Tarboro, the regular season champ, faces #5 Bertie, an upset winner of Roanoke, while champ Bertie takes on #4 Plymouth in the boys' division.

Friday night's semis send #3 Edenton against #2 Plymouth in a girls' game, while #6 Roanoke takes on #2 Tarboro in the boys' game. The finals will be Saturday night.

Plymouth built up an 11-4 lead in the first period of its game with Washington and was never headed. The Valkyries built their lead out to 24-12 by the end of the first half and boosted that to 37-23 by the end of the third. In the final quarter, Plymouth outscored Washington 16-9 to win going away.

Angie Downing led Plymouth's scoring with 13 points while Jane Fenner had 11 and Shawlena Fenner had 10. Gloria Sherrod led Washington with 15 points.

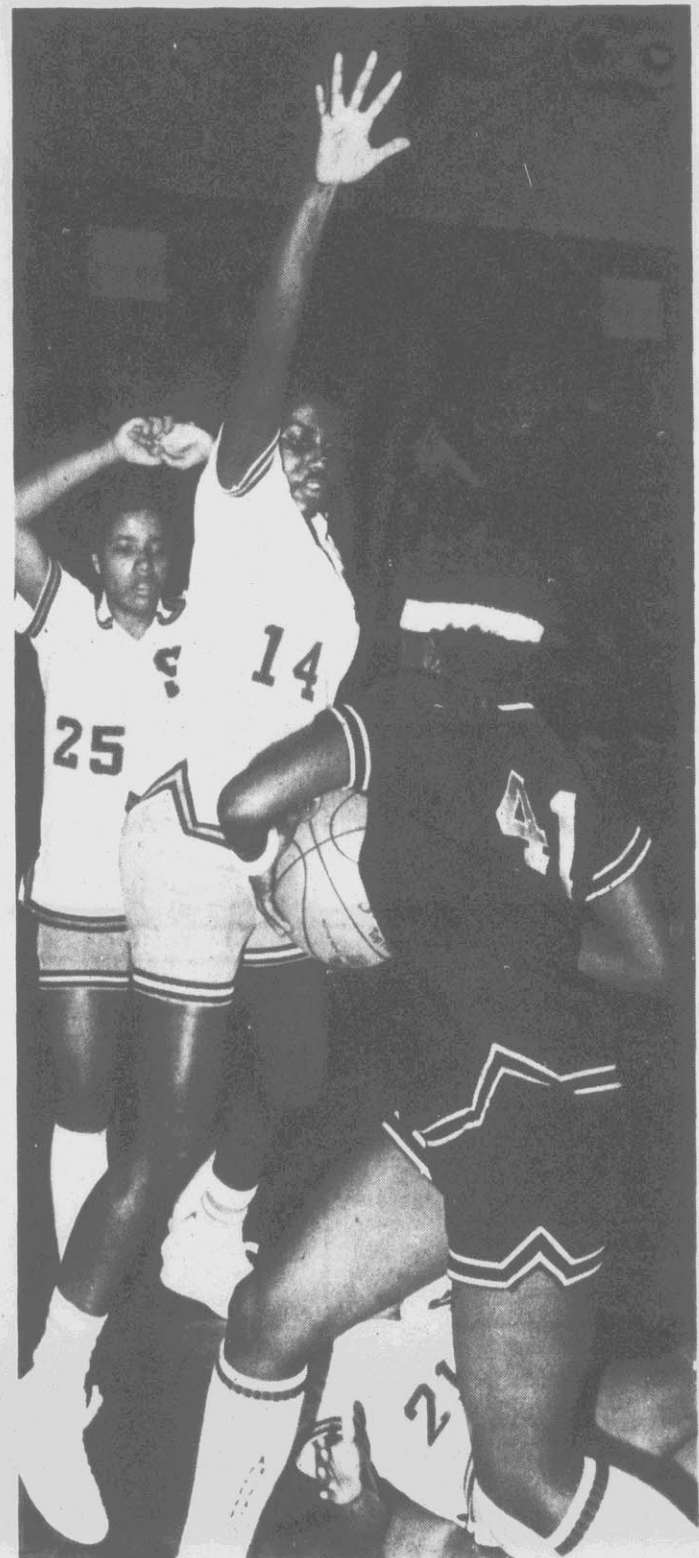

The loss winds up the year for the Lady Pam Pack.

Farmville tied it up once more, 21-21, but Pam Gorham put the Cougars ahead for good and Teresa Mayo and Phyllis Mayo added baskets for a 27-21 lead.

From there, the Lady Cougars began to pull away, moving out by 12 at 35-23. Farmville rallied to within six, however, but trailed 39-31, at the end of the period.

In the first 3:05 of the final period, SouthWest outscored Farmville, 9-4 and built a 48-35 lead. That proved too much to overcome, and SouthWest scored the final five points of the game to wrap it up.

Phyllis Gorham led SouthWest with 22 points while Pam Gorham

Ram Back Is Dead

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Cornerback Kirk Collins, who led the Los Angeles Rams in interceptions last season despite playing in only four games, has died of gastroesophageal, a form of cancer. He was 25.

Collins died Wednesday morning at Anaheim Memorial Hospital, the Rams said.

Collins became a regular for Los Angeles for the first time last fall and started the first four games of the season.

He returned his fifth interception and second of the game against the New York Jets 58 yards, and suffered a groin injury on the play. Doctors diagnosing the injury discovered a tumor in Collins' esophagus. It later was determined to be malignant.

Collins, whose full name was Edward Kirk Collins, was placed on the National Football League team's inactive roster with a non-football related illness and did not play again.

He did make all road trips with the team and attended all home games.

Collins was in and out of hospitals since the tumor was discovered. He was hospitalized for a week before his death.

West Carteret defeated West Craven, 70-53, to move on to the finals of the boys' division. West Carteret is the regular season champ. The Patriots will face the winner of tonight's Conley-Havelock game on Friday for the title.

North Lenoir's regular season champion girls had to struggle for a 67-63 overtime victory over fourth-seeded West Carteret. They will now face the winner of tonight's Conley-Havelock game, also set for Friday.

Credit Card Surcharge Ban Near Expiration

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Unless the House and Senate settle a dispute, America's love affair with the credit card could begin cooling off at midnight Monday.

That's the scheduled expiration time for a controversial 10-year-old law that prohibits merchants from charging higher prices to customers who pay with plastic.

Bills are alive on Capitol Hill to extend the credit card surcharge ban, but the House and Senate are heading in different directions as the clock winds down.

The House last November passed legislation to set a new expiration date of July 31. The measure is a time-buying compromise between representatives wanting to make the ban permanent and others wanting it repealed.

On Wednesday, the Senate Banking Committee took another route, approving two bills, one to extend the ban through May 15, the other to scrap the prohibition and allow surcharges of up to 5 percent on credit card purchases.

The committee's plan is to get the temporary extension through the full Senate and then work to get the main repeal bill enacted by Congress by May 15.

If the law expires next week, merchants across America will be free to demand higher payments from credit card customers.

Such surcharges, however, could put merchants and card companies in violation of the federal truth-in-lending statute and state usury laws, according to recent testimony before a banking subcommittee.

The repeal bill approved by the Senate Banking Committee contains language to permit surcharges of up to 5 percent without running afoul of the federal and state lending laws.

A Federal Reserve Board study says credit card use adds about $6 billion to the cost of goods and services purchased annually by both cash and credit customers. This is because a merchant, in a $100 sale, pays from $2 to $3 to a card company and marks up prices to offset this cost.

Both the Fed and C.T. Conover, comptroller of the currency, have urged Congress to permit the surcharges. The move is being fought by banks and card companies, who face loss of revenue if more people begin paying with cash and checks.

Two weeks ago, industry lobbyists told the banking consumer affairs subcommittee that permitting surcharges would result in confusion to consumers and possible deceptive advertising by merchants.

The 1974 law prohibiting surcharges permits discounts of up to 5 percent to customers who pay with cash. Except for segments of the petroleum industry, cash discounts have not been offered by many merchants, the Fed study says.

The surcharge ban has been extended twice before, most recently in 1979 to permit the Federal Reserve Board to conduct its study, which was completed last summer.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, the Banking Committee chairman, said that while he formerly supported the surcharge ban his mind had been changed by the Fed study. "We should have done this before," he said.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., a longtime advocate of repeal, said, "There's just no basis for the federal government to deny a merchant the right to pass along a cost he incurs."

Crackdown By Library

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Cumberland County is cracking down on people with overdue library books, having filed charges against about 10 people — including a woman who kept 12 books too long.

"We're dead set about deterring people from continuing to rip off the library," County Attorney Neil Yarborough said.

Deborah Zabawa said she was surprised to be taken to court for her overdue books at the public library, but was even more stunned when she found out that she's facing a felony charge.

District Court Judge Beth Keever Tuesday told Ms. Zabawa that under state law, having more than $50 worth of overdue books from a public library is a felony punishable by up to 10 years in prison.

Ms. Zabawa is not alone. Another woman, Terra G. Byrd of Fayetteville, pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor version of the law and was fined $50, assessed $35 in court costs and given a 30-day suspended sentence by Keever. Ms. Byrd had overdue books worth $47.78, according to court records, and had returned them recently.

About 10 Cumberland County residents have been charged under the statute, including one whose case was dismissed at the request of library officials when she returned her overdue books soon after she was charged.

Yarborough said defendants are given three notices that books are overdue and failure to return them is a crime. In one case, officials were particularly incensed when they realized the woman had one topic of books.

"You realize what these people are doing is building their own personal library with county property," Yarborough said.

While we do not normally recommend the underlead of an ace against a suit contract, we heartily endorse West's choice here. The bidding marked North for spade values, and if declarer lacks the queen he will almost surely misguess. Unfortunately, when declarer played low East made the technically correct, though impractical, play of the nine. East should have realized that, if declarer does indeed have the ace of spades, the defenders will get no trick in the suit because dummy's clubs will be a source of discards.

The recent death of Yuri Andropov means the Soviets will now have their third leader within the past 16 months. Since the Russian Revolution in 1917, the Soviet Union has had only 4 major leaders. During that same period, the United States has had 13 Presidents. The average age of those 13 Presidents at inauguration was 55.7 years old. The average age of the Soviet Politburo is now about 72.

Student Contractor Unit Is Organized, Chartered

ECU News Bureau
A recently formed student organization in the East Carolina University School of Technology has been officially chartered by the Associated General Contractors of America, a 9,000-member trade organization representing construction industry contractors across the country.

According to faculty adviser Edward Keeter, the activities of the student chapter will promote a greater understanding of the construction industry and create a forum for interaction between students and people in the industry.

The AGC offers a number of services to its student chapters including an array of educational and instructional materials, a scholarship program and a job search program for graduating seniors.

The chapter's membership is drawn from students enrolled in the school's construction management program. Designed to give students a management perspective to contracting, the program offers courses in business administration and basic sciences as well as in construction techniques and procedures.

Since its formation in December, the student chapter has participated in the Greenville Utilities' "Winter Warm-up" program, installing storm windows, weatherstripping and water heater jackets. The group is preparing for a spring Career Day featuring representatives from contracting firms.

Ask Court Order For Transcripts

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal court has been asked by two news organizations to force the U.S. Information Agency to provide transcripts of telephone conversations tape recorded by agency Director Charles Wick.

M. Fouhy, ABC's Washington bureau chief, USIA general counsel Thomas E. Harvey said the materials requested "are personal papers of the director and, as such, do not fall within the purview of the Freedom of Information Act," according to court papers.

ABC News and The New York Times said in a lawsuit filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court they were unable to obtain the transcripts through requests made under the Freedom of Information Act.

Druse Leader Is Planning A Visit

WASHINGTON (AP) - Walid Jumblatt, leader of Lebanon's Druse rebels, is seeking a visa to visit the United States, the State Department says.

State Department spokesman Joe Reap said that Jumblatt has applied for permission to visit the United States next month. Reap said he did not know any details about the planned visit.

But John Fogarty, president of the National Press Club, said Jumblatt is scheduled to speak to the organization on March 7. Fogarty, the Washington correspondent for the San Francisco Chronicle, said State Department officials indicated last week the visa would be granted.

Justice Dept. Backs Owners Rule Change

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has joined the broadcast industry in supporting repeal of a rule that limits the number of radio and television stations a single owner can have in one area.

The department and the National Association of Broadcasters, in comments filed earlier this week with the Federal Communications Commission, said the regulation is unnecessary because other rules already govern the issue.

The FCC in January proposed repeal of a regulation adopted in 1977 to limit the number of radio or TV stations a single firm or individual may own within a 100-mile area.

It specifies a broadcaster cannot own three stations — radio or TV — if the service areas of two of the stations overlap and the third is within 100 miles of the others.

The commission said such hard-and-fast limits were unnecessary at a time when virtually all areas of the country are served by dozens, if not hundreds, of stations.

"Stations in one city do not compete with stations in another city, such that advertisers would respond to a price increase in one city by shifting to advertising in another city," said Douglas H. Ginsburg, the deputy assistant attorney general for antitrust. "Given the retention of the commission's local ownership rules, any increased regional concentration of TV and radio station ownership is unlikely to have any significant adverse effect ..."

The local ownership rules cited by Ginsburg, none of which have been proposed for repeal, prohibit the ownership of two AM or two FM or two TV stations in the same area; bar the ownership of a local TV station and cable TV system in the same city; prohibit the purchase of a broadcast station and daily newspaper in the same city, and bar the purchase of radio and TV stations in the same city.

More U.S. Mails Coded For Sorting

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — More and more U.S. mail is sporting strange stripes — bar codes that appear on the bottom right corners of envelopes upon delivery.

What are these mysterious mail marks?

They are ZIP codes — expressed in computer language by the U.S. Postal Service's new high-speed electronic sorting systems, explains a mailing systems official.

The sorting systems are now installed in about 100 post offices nationwide, with more planned for the future, reports Robert J. Pascal, group vice president at Pitney Bowes, the mailing systems manufacturer that is producing 126 of these electronic sorting units for the Postal Service.

As Pascal describes the system, the sorters optically read the city, state and ZIP code on printed or typed letter mail. At extremely high speed, the sorters verify the ZIP code by comparing it with computer-stored information.

When the machines obtain a match, they print the correct ZIP code in bar code form. Then, each envelope is sorted into one of 60 channels. When the letter is received by the destination post office, it is scanned by a bar code sorter that automatically sorts the mail for delivery.

The new electronic sorters scan five-digit, as well as nine-digit ZIP codes. But the nine digits are more economical for the Postal Service because they enable the mail to be sorted not only by city and state, but also by carrier route, side of street, and even, in some cases, by particular building.

If the Postal Service's new sorting operations would astonish Ben Franklin, the nation's first postmaster, he would be even more amazed at the speed — less than a second for one envelope — a rate of some 10,000 pieces per work hour.

This is more than 10 times as fast as the manual method used in Franklin's day and still in use in many post offices not yet mechanized.

The prevalence of bar-coded mail symbolizes the age of automation at the post office.

"Efforts to improve and modernize the movement of mail are taking hold," says Pascal. "Automation helps control rising postal rates and every American should be pleased with that."

The Postal Service says full implementation of automation and ZIP plus 4 will produce annual savings of approximately $600 million.

A Finder Is Keeper

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Renee Jimenez found $10,000 in a paper sack on the floor of a Hollywood restaurant in October, the $106-a-week hotel worker did the only thing he thought was right — he gave it to the restaurant management.

On Wednesday, following an unsuccessful attempt to find the owner, Los Angeles police gave it back to him.

"I can't believe it," said Jimenez, 28.

"Hallelujah, thank the Lord," said his aunt, Mary Verdugo.

As police Detective Dave Lovestead counted out 66 $10 bills and $9,340 in $20 bills, Jimenez, who speaks little English, watched silently.

Jimenez was eating at a restaurant in Hollywood on Oct. 17 when he found the money near a table where three men had been seated earlier.

"When he saw what was in the bag, he took it to the restaurant manager and handed it over," Ms. Verdugo said, "and then he came home and told me."

Ms. Verdugo called Hollywood Division police and told them that her nephew had found some money, and the police asked Jimenez to go to the office and sign a found-property report.

Lovestead said officers tried to find the owner, then returned it to Jimenez after the regulation 97-day waiting period.

Jimenez said he plans to give some of it away again — this time to his father, mother, three sisters and a brother in Sinaloa, Mexico. Jimenez was later driven by Lovestead to a bank, where he opened a savings account.

"He contributes quite a bit now out of his little salary," his aunt said. "He's such a nice person. He makes me very proud."

FREE OPERA FRIDAY — The National Opera Company will present a free, open-to-the-public performance of Rossini's "The Italian Girl in Algiers" at 8 p.m. Friday in the Recital Hall of the A.J. Fletcher Music Center on the East Carolina University campus. Orchestral support for the performance will be provided by the East Carolina University Orchestra.

Highest Priced Broadway Play

NEW YORK (AP) — The $47.50 price beginning this summer for some tickets to "La Cage aux Folles" will make it the most expensive show now on Broadway — but it's less than half the record seat price on the Great White Way. Shirley Herz, a spokeswoman for the hit musical about two aging homosexuals, said Wednesday the rate taking effect July 2 — $2.50 above the top price for other big-budget musicals — will reflect a June 1 rise in union contract costs. The rate will apply to orchestra and front mezzanine tickets for all evening and Saturday matinee performances; some balcony seats will still be available for $10.

Carson 'Support' Deal Agreed To

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although Johnny Carson and his estranged wife Joanna have settled on a financial support arrangement, it's nowhere near the $220,000 a month

she had sought, says a spokesman for the host of "The Tonight Show." "The agreed upon figure for temporary spousal support was close to the amount suggested by Mr. Carson's lawyers, which was approximately 10 percent of the amount requested by Mrs. Carson," spokesman Jim Mahoney said late Wednesday, reading from a statement.

Mrs. Carson's request to Los Angeles Superior Court had amounted to about $2.64 million a year from her 58-year-old husband.

She had based the monthly support claim on such items as $37,065 a month for jewelry and furs, $3,955 for clothes, $12,625 gifts to friends and relatives, $1,400 for groceries and $88,000 for personal expenses.

The announcement followed several days of conferences between lawyers and Judge Frances Rothschild.

Mahoney quoted Carson's attorney, Norman S. Oberstein, as saying that "Both parties have accepted an agreement that follows the court's tentative ruling."

Mrs. Carson's lawyer, Arthur Crowley, was not in his office when the statement was released and could not be located for comment.

Many Ask For Place On Ballot

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Democrats like Walter Mondale and John Glenn and Republican President Ronald Reagan aren't the only candidates who want to be on North Carolina's May 8 presidential primary ballot.

Dozens of candidates, including a Wyoming man and his dog and a Michigan man who supports the election of three presidents, have written the state Board of Elections about getting on the ballot. It's unlikely that the candidates will be on the ballot, however, because Elections Director Alex Brock says the board invites only those who qualify for matching federal campaign funds to participate in the primary.

To qualify for matching funds, the candidates must raise $5,000 in contributions of $250 or less in 20 states.

Candidates who already have been invited to appear on the ballot are former Vice President Mondale, Sen. Glenn of Ohio, former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, Sen. Alan Cranston of California, Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado and Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina.

Brock said additional invitations will be issued.

Al Hamburg of Torrington, Wyo., wrote last year that he wanted to be a Democratic presidential candidate in North Carolina, but this month said his dog would be an independent candidate for president.

Hamburg wrote that Woofie D. Coyote could not get on the ballot by petition because many of his supporters are birds and animals. He said Woofie is not the underdog in the race because so many people are fed up with the Republican and Democratic candidates.

Hamburg identified himself as manager of the Committee to Protect Coyotes from Death by Poison and Nuclear War.

Democrat Joseph J. Machcinski of Smith Creek, Mich., has campaigned for Congress and now is turning his attention to the presidency. His platform has been to seek three presidents because the job has become too complex for one man.

Philip Vernon Baker, a Democrat from Shively, Ky., has a proposal for ending poverty, hunger, pollution and war. He wants to seek and settle new worlds in the solar system to "escape spaceship Earth's filthy problems."

Elimination of the national debt in one hour and a more than 75 percent reduction in taxes are major points in the platform of Republican J. John Gordon of Worcester, Mass.

Gordon said he could balance the federal budget by replacing oil with alcohol as a fuel. He said he also would make the first $100,000 of a workers' income nontaxable, end all foreign aid and end all farm subsidies, replacing them with private insurance.

Ray Rollinson of Columbia, N.J., says he is the only Catholic running for president. The Democrat says that if elected, he would withdraw all nuclear weapons from Europe in exchange for the immediate release of all the more than 2 million Jews who want to leave the Soviet Union.

He also said he immediately would reduce all interest rates to 6 percent, raise the speed limit to 65 miles per hour and pardon all inmates on Death Row.

Others who want on the ballot are K. Core Seaman of Denver, a representative of the God and Country Party; Robert Merideth of Bolinas, Calif., who is from the Rainbow Coalition

Gets Prison For Infant Murder

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) — Jeanine Lynn Spangler, 30, of Battleboro, has been sentenced to life in prison for the first-degree murder of her 10-month-old son.

She was sentenced Tuesday in Edgecomb County Superior Court for the October 1983 slaying. Evidence showed she hit the infant's head against a bathtub.

Ms. Spangler pleaded innocent by reason of insanity. A jury deliberated 15 minutes before it convicted her of murder and deliberated three hours before returning with the sentence.

Testimony showed she took the dead infant to Nash General Hospital in Rocky Mount a day after it had died.

Testifying in her own defense, Ms. Spangler said she saw the baby fall the day it died and tried artificial respiration on it after it apparently suffered convulsions.

Evidence showed the child had a skull fracture, a broken arm, bruises and evidence of strangulation.
