N.C. Education Board To Study 'Remedial' Needs

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Board of Education has voted to make some high school seniors eligible for the North Carolina Scholars Program even though they don't meet all course requirements.

The board has also asked the state Department of Education to conduct a study of why the University of North Carolina System must spend millions of dollars each year on remedial studies for college freshmen.

Under the scholars program, which took effect this year, seniors qualify as N.C. Scholars if they have a B average and graduate with 22 credit hours — four more than required by the state for graduation. The credit hours must include extra courses in science, math and foreign language.

Some students have said the program was unfair because this year's seniors did not have enough notice to plan a four-year course of study to meet the requirements.

Also, some small school systems don't offer the courses required for the program. Thomas Houlihan, special assistant for secondary education in the state Department of Public Instruction, told the board at its meeting on Thursday.

The board voted to permit three exceptions to the program's requirements to eliminate some of the problems. Under the exceptions, which apply only to seniors graduating this year, students may qualify for the scholars program if they meet all the requirements except:

- One course in arts education.
- One course in vocational education.
- Two courses in foreign language for students with a concentration in vocational education.

Also Thursday, the board asked the staff of the education department to handle the UNC study as a part of its routine, said Tom I. Davis, education department spokesman.

Davis said he thought the research division of the education department would take a sample of students in remedial classes and "trace them back; find out why the classes were necessary."

The state spends $4 million to $5 million a year on university-level remedial studies programs, Davis said.

C.D. Spangler, chairman of the state board of education, told the board that the study would not cost $100,000, as was reported after last month's meeting. Rather, $100,000 of federal money was set aside for all board projects, including the remedial studies one.

Davis said there was no estimate yet of the study's cost.

In other business the board decided to hold a public hearing April 27 on its plans to set a minimum test score that college students must achieve to be admitted to a state teacher education program.

The vote came after Richard Jaeger and John Busch, education professors at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, recommended a minimum score of 631 on the General Knowledge Test and 636 on the Communications Skills Test of the National Teacher Examination.

With those standards, almost 25 percent of the 800 college sophomores tested in April 1983 would have failed at least one of the tests.

their study showed. The board is expected to establish the minimum scores at its June meeting.

The board also announced the outstanding math and science teachers of the year.

Helen M. Stone, a science teacher at Smith High School in Greensboro, and John A. Goebel, a math teacher at Tuscola Senior High School in Waynesville, were chosen best in the state in their fields.

Each was chosen from seven math teachers and seven science teachers announced in October.

Four Wooing Dixie Votes

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

Four of the five Democrats left in the shrinking presidential field converge on the South today, including a humbled Walter Mondale who is shunning his front-runner "burden" and promising a new, tougher style.

Mondale, New Hampshire winner Gary Hart, Ohio Sen. John Glenn and the Rev. Jesse Jackson all planned appearances in Atlanta tonight, where state Democrats are holding their annual Jefferson-Jackson Day fund-raising dinner in advance of their March 13 "Super Tuesday" primary.

Only George McGovern of the five remaining major candidates was avoiding the South. The former South Dakota senator and 1972 standard bearer remains in Massachusetts, where he says that state's primary on the same day will "make or break" his presidential dreams.

Similar dreams vanished in the face of political reality Thursday for two Democratic hopefuls. South Carolina Sen. Ernest Hollings bowed out after gaining just 4 percent of the vote in New Hampshire; he was followed hours later by last-place finisher former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew. A day earlier California Sen. Alan Cranston quit.

Mondale vowed to go on the attack against Hart after weeks of virtually ignoring his Democratic opponents.

"This is going to be a scrap," he told reporters. "We're in for a long, tough fight that could well go right to the convention. We have to slug it out in every state."

Mondale conceded that a leader's arrogance may have hurt him in New Hampshire, where Hart, the Colorado senator, bested him by 10 percentage points. Being the front-runner became "my burden," he said.

"Forget all this front-runner talk," Mondale said he told his staff. "It's all over. Stop acting like we're front-runners."

He also took aim at Hart's talk of new issues and a new generation of leaders: "Biologically he is not 26. He's 47. I'm not 86. I'm 56."

"It's not a question of whether it is old or new," Mondale said. "It's whether it's right or wrong. It's whether it works or doesn't work."

Most of the candidates were focusing on Dixie because of the looming Super Tuesday when nine states choose their delegates, including primaries in Alabama, Florida and Georgia.

Hart and Mondale both planned New England stops earlier today. Hart in Vermont and Boston and Mondale in Maine. Vermont has a non-binding primary Tuesday and Maine holds caucuses Sunday.

Glenn was in Georgia early today and Jackson in Florida. Glenn, Mondale and Hart scheduled appearances at the Atlanta dinner, while aides to Jackson said he would be in that city and that a Jefferson-Jackson appearance was possible.

Hart stumped across the South on Thursday, ending with a stop in Tallahassee and answering Mondale's challenge to contest him in the region.

"Well, Walter, I'm here," Hart said.

In Alabama earlier, Hart phoned Gov. George C. Wallace to set up a meeting next week and said he was seeking Wallace's backing.

"I don't expect to be rejected in the South," Hart said.

Glenn was in Montgomery, too, and also said he was after Wallace's blessing, though the governor wasn't expected to take sides publicly.

"I guess I'm what you call the new underdog today," Glenn said.

Grab Bag Of Taxes Voted

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee has approved the first deficit-reduction measure of the year — a $49.3 billion grab bag of taxes that would be felt by a cross-section of Americans, from diesel drivers to telephone users to high-income investors.

The measure, similar to one making its way through the Senate Finance Committee, won approval Thursday night after two days of closed-door meetings.

Asked about the plan, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said today: "We have not seen it in details, but those parts which are consistent with the president's budget we will support. There are other measures in it that we would have to look at and analyze. At the same time, we are still sticking to our policy that tax increases should be accompanied by spending cuts and we'd like to see what the spending cuts are."

Since spending cuts of about $50 billion over three years are being worked on, it now seems quite possible that Congress and President Reagan will be able to agree this year on a $100 billion reduction plan that would hold the red ink to about $550 billion over the period.

The Ways and Means bill would delay scheduled decreases in taxes on cigarettes and telephone service; boost taxes on liquor by $3.75 a gallon; make it more difficult for individuals whose earnings rise sharply to cut their taxes by income averaging; and restructure highway use taxes on truckers, including an increase of 6 cents a gallon in the 9 cent diesel tax that also would be paid by drivers of diesel cars.

The Finance Committee, meanwhile, meeting in open session, exceeded the $73 billion mark in its own deficit-reduction package of tax increases and spending cuts. It includes the same extension of the 3 percent telephone tax; a strengthened tax on middle- and upper-income people with large amounts of investment-related deductions; elimination of tax benefits on the value of business cars above $15,000; and a provision — vigorously opposed by the Internal Revenue Service — requiring the IRS to act as a debt collector for the rest of the government.

Both bills include more than $10 billion worth of provisions, recommended by the Reagan administration, cracking down on accounting

INTERSECTION FEEDBACK

Gerald England, N.C. Department of Transportation division traffic engineer, has reported to Hotline the results of studies of the Memorial Drive-Fairlane Road intersection. A Hotline reader had asserted in a Hotline item published Dec. 1, 1983, that the intersection has several qualities that make it unsafe including "a signal light, a curve and hill that need to be graded, a telephone pole that needs to be moved, a tree that needs to be cut down, speed limit that needs to be reduced to 35 miles per hour." The reader's assertions were prompted by the traffic deaths of two of her friends at this intersection a short time earlier.

England answered each suggestion this week:

Signal — Approximately 800 vehicles per day enter Memorial Drive from Fairlane Road. Memorial Drive carries approximately 18,000 vehicles per day. The volume of traffic from Fairlane Road onto Memorial Drive is below the minimum volume necessary to meet our warrants to justify the installation of a traffic signal. The accidents reported at this intersection are relatively low for this type of intersection. Also, the types of accidents reported were not the types which a signal would reduce or eliminate.

Hill and curve reconstruction — This improvement would require a large sum of money and yield only a small benefit. The cost-benefit ratio would eliminate favorable consideration and recommendation of same.

Speed limit reduction — Speed limits on major highways through municipalities are based on the roadway design and type of traffic using the highway. Memorial Drive is designed to carry vehicles safely at 45 mph. The speed studies at this location show that the average motorist travels at 46 mph. The 85 percentile speed is 50.05 mph. The Greenville Police Department has been requested to enforce the posted speed limit.

Tree removal — The property owners just north of the intersection agreed to remove a tree and trim some shrubbery. This work was completed Feb. 28.

Power pole removal — This request would cost an excessive amount for a low benefit. The pole does not block the view on an oncoming motorist to a point that would require the relocation of the pole.

England said that, as a result of the investigation, in addition to the tree and shrubbery removal, an intersection warning sign and a 35 mph advisory sign have been erected for the southbound traffic on Memorial Drive. He said this was done because it was determined that the intersection is hidden from view as a motorist approaches from the north. Also, he said he has been informed that an additional street light has been installed along that section of Memorial Drive.

Teaching Good Table Manners: Finger Bowls Can Be A Lot Of Fun

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The days when kids were taught "the boardinghouse reach" to help them survive at the dinner table apparently are over.

That era has been supplanted, symbolically at least, by Marjabelle Stewart.

Mrs. Stewart, 53, is in the business of teaching table manners to small fry, some as young as 4. She likes to start the instruction as soon as a child's arms are long enough "to reach the bread and butter plate."

Not only does she occasionally provide personal guidance in the fine art of eating out; she also has franchised etiquette classes operating in more than 400 American cities.

"We train the teacher," she said, "and the franchise holder, usually a leading department store, does the rest."

For youngsters, she offers five courses that cost about $65 each for six lessons. Also available are college decorum courses and adult protocol instruction, plus 11 books she has written.

In all, Mrs. Stewart is truly a one-woman etiquette conglomerate.

"Etiquette is now big business," she said, in what may be an understatement.

A native of Council Bluffs, Iowa, who now calls Kewanee, Ill. home, Mrs. Stewart returned to this hotbed of protocol, where she spent part of her girlhood, to preside over a "Children's Dining Out Table Manners Party."

Her 11 pupils at the posh Aux Beaux Champs restaurant ranged in age from 4 to 8 and represented families of international movers and shakers. They included Corinne Quayle, 5, daughter of Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind.; Julie Breaux, 8, daughter of Rep. John Breaux, D-La.; and Matthew Wicks, 5, whose father, Nigel, is the economic minister at the British Embassy.

In short, a typical gathering of Washington upper crust youth.

All were indoctrinated into the mystique of receiving lines, punch bowls and making champagne toasts with ginger ale. Additionally, they were briefed on the proper use of silverware and maitres d'hotel.

But nothing so crass as tipping a headwaiter in order to get a choice seat near the window was discussed. Mrs. Stewart obviously frowns on that sort of thing.

A tall, full-figured matronly type with reddish hair, Mrs. Stewart fairly exudes authority and dignity. In a cinematic incarnation, she would have made a perfect foil for Groucho Marx. And at the children's dinner here, she needed all the savoir-faire she could muster.

"I don't like soup," announced Alexander Coolidge, 4, fr9m Mrs. Stewart's immediately left, at the outset of the five-course dinner provided free by the Four Seasons Hotel.

"Just pretend that you do, dear," came the tactful Stewartian reply.

Other pearls of etiquette wisdom, which were almost as plentiful as the real pearls around Mrs. Stewart's neck:

- "Don't hold your elbows so that they look like flying ducks."
- "Make your mistakes quietly."
- "Finger bowls are a lot of fun."
- "Never make slurping noises while eating soup."
- "Don't hold a fork as if you're playing a cello."
- "If you don't wiggle too much, the napkin will stay on your lap."

A certain amount of droppage and spillage was inevitable at an affair where two of the guests were so little they needed booster seats to raise their chins above tabletop level.

Besides napkins, items hitting the floor included knives and forks, bread rolls, butter pats and asparagus spears. Plus, some of the younger guests needed help in cutting their meat.

Between courses, Mrs. Stewart invited her apprentices to keep the conversational ball rolling with riddles and jokes.

A typical conversational riddle:

"Why did Humpty Dumpty fall off the wall?"

"Because he was having a lousy summer."

Between the fish (grilled shrimp) and meat (veal piccata), the moppets were served sherbet for purposes, Mrs. Stewart explained, of "cleansing the palate."

"What's a palate?" piped up one of the diners.

Mothers were separated from offspring before the receiving line was formed, but some hovered nervously about during the meal. At the end, all assembled to be toasted by their children with ginger ale chilled in a silver bucket and poured into crystal champagne glasses.

"What are mothers?" Mrs. Stewart was asked.

Office Work Can Harm Health Says Pioneer In Job Hazards

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

A scientist who says office work can hurt your health took her flow meter out of its case and stood on a chair. She then stepped onto a desk separating two video display terminals — workhorses of the electronic office.

Tottering a little on high heels, Jeanne Stellman balanced herself and then held the meter against the ceiling on three sides of an air vent. The instrument's needle didn't move.

The needle moved as the instrument was held to the fourth side of the vent. "This looks like a short-circuited air system," said Dr. Stellman, associate professor of public health at Columbia University.

An air system is short-circuited when air coming out of a duct is instantly sucked into an exhaust system so that the fresh air never reaches the workers.

Malfunctioning air circulation systems are among numerous common problems that may hurt the health of office workers, Dr. Stellman said.

One in four Americans — 52 million people — work in offices, and a significant number of them suffer from work-related/eyestrain, backache, headache and even anxiety disorders or depression from poor working conditions, Dr. Stellman said.

Her worry list includes office furniture, supplies, office design, video display terminals, lighting, photocopiers, and indoor air pollutants such as asbestos and carbon dioxide.

Carbon dioxide goes into the air when people exhale. Dr. Stellman said it becomes a problem when air isn't recycled often enough in sealed buildings such as glass office towers.

Dr. Stellman has surveyed office working conditions in Canada as well as the United States, her work funded by the National Cancer Institute and the National Institute of Mental Health.

She is the founder and executive director of the Women's Occupational Health Resource Center at Columbia.

Dr. Stellman and another occupational health authority, Mary Sue Henfin, a graduate of Harvard and Columbia, have just published a book, "Office Work Can Be Dangerous To Your Health" (Pantheon, $6.95). It is not a muckraking expose, Dr. Stellman said. "Rather, it is a sober, non-alarmlist handbook for workers — as well as designers of office buildings and interiors — to use to improve the quality of life in the workplace and even increase worker efficiency."

"Office work problems come from three sources," Dr. Stellman said. "There are the ones already enumerated — mainly clustering around equipment."

Another source is the nature of office work.

"It is moving toward factory conditions of the type on assembly lines in the 1930s," she said, recalling the era of sweat shops.

"A third source of problems are both from physical factors such as air quality, and psychological. We have shown that the psychological factors can cause a lot of job stress and dissatisfaction."

Various factors can cause stress, she said. "Too much or too little supervision. Lack of supervisor support. To have meaningless work such as just typing in numbers all day and then having someone clock your finger movements."

"Offices should provide habitable spaces for workers," Dr. Stellman said, criticizing placement of workers in windowless areas.

"It is safer and healthier to work in an office than it is to dig in a coal mine or to labor in a steel mill," Dr. Stellman said.

"The air, relatively speaking, is cleaner and the work less strenuous. The noise is less deafening and the temperature more bearable. But the merit of the comparison ends there."

The U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) reports that more than 40,000 disabling injuries and 200 safety-related deaths occur in offices each year.

"The unbolted partition, the wobbly chair and the open file drawer are dangers it is necessary to correct but they are relatively obvious once you know how to look for them," Dr. Stellman said.

"Health hazards from indoor air pollution or poorly designed equipment are different. They tend to be more subtle and often are controversial, even among experts."

The hazards in the office do not produce an easily diagnosed disease that might be called office-itis.

"One reason is that most of the occupational hazards in the office don't make people sick enough fast

She considers stress the worst. "Half of us die of cardio-vascular diseases and those are stress-related diseases."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Emergency Phones Access Is Matter Of Life, Death

DEAR ABBY: If this message to the public makes your column, hundreds of police and fire department dispatchers across the nation will thank you from the bottom of their hearts.

When there is a widespread power failure in your area due to a storm, do not call the police or fire department unless you have a genuine emergency!

For the last 12 years, I have been employed as a communications officer, dispatching paramedics, police officers and fire fighters where they are needed.

During a widespread power failure, we are extremely busy handling the many emergencies that occur as a result of the power failure, and our lines are jammed with people asking, "How come there's no electricity, and how long do you think we will be without it?" Consequently, those calling to report fires, robberies, accidents and heart attacks get a busy signal or they are put on hold.

Abby, I hope you think this is important enough to print.

C.E.M., HUNTINGTON BEACH, CALIF.

DEAR C.E.M.: It is. And I hope this will cause people to think twice before picking up their phones to ask non-emergency questions about a power failure. I am sure many did not realize that those lines should be kept open for calls from people who need help in genuine emergencies. I didn't.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 50 and newly divorced. I would like to go out with a man for a good time such as dinner, theater etc., but I'm told that times have changed since I dated 20 years ago.

Today when a man takes a woman out, he automatically expects her to go to bed with him. I am talking about men in their 60s! I would like to know how to handle this situation. Should I let a man know ahead of time that I do not go in for that sort of thing? Or should I wait until I am backed into a corner?

NEW AT THE DATING GAME

DEAR NEW: Don't presume that every man who asks you out wants to hustle you into bed. Some may not. And others cannot.

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl, age 15, with a good reputation, which means a lot to a girl my age. I have a real close friend (let's call her "T") and her reputation is really bad.

The stories told about her are in a sense true, but she is really not as terrible as a lot of people say she is. My parents want me to stay away from "T" because they say if I hang around with her, my reputation will get bad, too. I am struggling to know what to do. Should I drop "T," or should I keep hanging around with her and hope my reputation doesn't get damaged?

I don't smoke, curse, take drugs and get too tight with guys (if you know what I mean), but I really like "T."

What should I do?

"G"

DEAR "G": A person's character is what he is. A person's reputation is what people say he is. Does "T" drink, smoke, curse, take drugs and get too tight with guys? If she does, even though you like her a lot, you would be wise to hang around with girls whose standards are more like your own.

French Pair Makes Global Mark With Street Fashions

NEW YORK (UPI) — Traditionally tailored clothing is through. It does not fit today's lifestyle. Today's living patterns call for clothes evolved from industrial apparel and military fatigues.

Speaking is Francois Girbaud, the male half of the design team of Marithe and Francois Girbaud.

"We're not revolutionists," said Francois. "We're evolutionists."

Some observers of the Girbauds' fashion said the clothes are "up from the street."

"Certainly," said Francois, "we're influenced by what we see around us. Certain people like a Cole Porter or a Paul McCartney had anteds must be doing something right. Their sportswear and accessories right down to footwear, for both men and women, and a children's line, are manufactured by them or licensees in France, Canada, Italy, Spain, Japan, Australia and most recently the United States. They also have retail boutiques in several of the countries including Japan.

Girbaud said the one biggest hit of all their casual wear is what Americans call the baggy jean, hardly any construction involved, and according to Francois the largest selling jean in the world.

The Girbaud label has been marketed by a subsidiary of the Puritan Fashions Corp. But now that Calvin Klein, not a mean marketer of jeans himself, has acquired the stock of Puritan, Girbaud said his company is buying out its portion of Puritan.

Some of the Girbaud and Klein merchandising techniques are similar.

Klein used the actress-model Brooke Shields in his jean ads for a while.

Girbaud has contracted with Jennifer Beals, the star of the movie hit, "Flashdance", to appear in its ads for casual pants and jackets.

The couple moved into fashitrite (pronounced mare-uh-tay) is a pretty blonde but hesitant in English, so both often spoke in the interview through interpreter Alan Goldin, a friend.

"Traditional cuts and those precise measurements are gone," Girbaud said. He has stressed the washed-out (bleached) looking fabrics, the worn-out look, the stone-washed denims, and now the pair is enthusiastic about another material Girbaud has developed. It is a crushed denim woven so that the surface has tiny crinkles.

"It's a registered process," he said. "We're doing it in china blue (a medium to pale shade). It's as soft as down."

One thing you can say about Girbaud designs. They're not stereotypes. Glamour in the traditional sense is out. Clothes look more appropriate for disco than for the opera. Some are just plain sloppy looking.

Consider the outfit Jennifer Beals wears in the advertisement. It consists of a rumplad unfitted jacket, T-shirt and baggy pants with belt loops but no belt, only a drawstring at the louslung waistline to hold up the works.

Perhaps the Girbaud approach to fashion is best summed up in that series of print ads featuring Miss Beals. "Finally," the ad says, "clothing as intelligently designed as you are."

ENGINEERING FEATS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Society of Professional Engineers, composed of some 80,000 engineers, is observing its 50th anniversary this year by citing what it calls the 10 outstanding engineering achievements of the past half century.

The society says these include the development of nylon; the first controlled, self-sustaining nuclear chain reaction; the Electronic Numerical Integrator and Calculator (ENIAC); the transistor; the inertial navigational guidance system; the Boeing 707 jet liner; the pacemaker; lasers; the Telstar satellite, and the Apollo Project.

Nothing Like It

That reminder "since 1952 no one has won the presidency without winning the New Hampshire primary" should jog speculation and pulses among politics-watchers in our 50 states.

Certainly, Sen. Gary Hart has good reason to exult over his upset victory over Walter Mondale in New Hampshire; still, there's a long, costly and rough road before the National Democrat Convention. But after that?

On the basis of campaign funds, Hart is far from matching the Mondale resources. On the basis of campaign organization and the sheer number of workers, Hart trails again.

True, he may gain ground in those two vital elements of success in politics, but the weight of endorsements by large organizations give the former vice president a tremendous advantage at this point in the campaign.

Somewhere along the way there will be more dropouts — a factor unlikely to tilt the scales in either direction between today's front-runners. As a matter of fact, there is no certainty except uncertainties ahead.

The race is only beginning and already has the ingredients for a good one; with no assurance that in the end either Mondale or Hart will be their party's nominee.

There's no game in the world quite like it.

Canadian Sunset

The glamorous prime minister of Canada, Pierre Elliott Trudeau, has announced that he will retire after 16 years in office.

Trudeau expressed his desire to step down as leader of the Liberal Party and, consequently, as prime minister to party President Iona Campagnolo. At 64 years old, he said, being the party's leader "has been one of the joys of my life."

It is difficult to imagine Canada without Trudeau, even though he was out of office for a brief time.

He has been colorful and effective as a prime minister and his career in some respects equalled the style and hope that came in the United States with the election of the youthful John F. Kennedy to the presidency.

Clearly an era is ending in Canada. Someone else will pick up the reigns of party and national leadership, but it will never be quite the same as when Pierre Elliott Trudeau was head of government.

Rates Helping

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. savings bonds are enjoying a modest revival, and supporters of the program credit a decision to pay market-based rates of interest on the securities.

Savings bonds, which have been sold since the 1940s, fell into disfavor in the late 1970s and early 1980s as interest rates climbed to the upper teens. The savings bonds were paying a far lower, fixed rate of interest.

But as of Nov. 1, 1982, interest paid on EE series bonds, which are held for a minimum of five years, is linked by a formula to the rates that the government pays in its open market auctions of five-year notes.

"We made the changes to remain competitive," said Richard Steiger, a spokesman for the savings bond division in the Treasury Department.

He said since the change, sales are up and redemptions are down.

For all of 1983, the government sold $3.9 billion in savings bonds, up 20 percent from 1982. At the same time, redemptions fell $5.9 billion, down 27 percent from a year earlier.

The trend has continued this year as sales in January rose 11 percent to $371 million from $334 million a year earlier, while redemptions fell 34 percent to $479 million from $730 million.

The EE savings bonds have several features that make them attractive to small investors:

—They are sold for terms of 10 years in denominations as small as $50 for half of face value. That means the $50 bond sells for $25.

—There are no agent or broker fees to buy or sell them.

—They can be bought at a bank, savings institution or through a payroll deduction plan.

—The federal government guarantees payment of principal and interest and also will replace them if they are lost, stolen or destroyed.

—Income from the securities is not paid until they are redeemed, a feature that allows the interest to accumulate and compound free from federal taxes year after year. The income is exempt from state and local taxes.

The bonds now guarantee a minimum 7.5 percent interest rate if held for five years, but the rate may range much higher depending on open-market interest rates.

Under the government's formula, the rate on EE savings bonds held longer than five years will be 85 percent of the market average yield of five-year Treasury notes during the life of the savings bond.

If a bond is held for six years, for instance, the average of 12 semi-annual rates, compounded semi-annually, will determine the bond's six-year yield.

The average rate since the new interest rate program began has been 9.70 percent, comparing favorably with average current yields on money market funds.

But there are some drawbacks for those who find they must redeem the savings bonds early.

RALEIGH — It is 6:45 off a brisk autumn morning and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten has just met his pilot and a news reporter at Raleigh-Durham Airport. Edmisten has been up two hours, he explains, working under the floodlights in his backyard, doing some essential pre-winter garden work.

That morning, Edmisten was about to set out on a typical grueling campaign day — one any candidate for statewide office would recognize: three or four speeches, three or four plates of barbecue and finger food, several hundred hands to shake and faces to remember.

Let's give the devils their due. Politicians aren't always the best and the brightest but candidates for statewide office must be hardworking rascals. Campaigning is as much a masochistic, as a narcissistic, act.

The typical campaign day starts with a breakfast speech. The local folk start arriving at 7:30 but the candidate probably had to leave home an hour or more earlier. That trip itself can be enough to wear you out. Lauch Faircloth spoke to a Lexington breakfast group at 7:30 one morning after driving from Greensboro through a cats-and-dogs thunderstorm. Bob Jordan, a candidate for lieutenant governor, tells of slipping and sliding across a mountain snow to get to a western breakfast.

The hardest part of the day may come next. A local supporter will drive the candidate through town, to government buildings and shopping malls, so he can shake some hands. Most people don't know what to say to a candidate so it's his job to say something smart, but short. Most introduce themselves and grab another hand. But sometimes the situation requires a bit of a chat. So, you'll find Jordan, for example, walking through Carteret County offices holding 30 conversations about the high winds blasting Beaufort.

A candidate can get tripped up if he doubles back to a place he's already visited. Folks find it strange that someone they met 10 minutes ago doesn't remember them had about the riveting chat they had about the wind. A good campaign won't waste a minute. A schedule has been drawn and the candidate has to see the sheriff at 10:45, the school board chairman at 11:05, and the newspaper editor at 11:30. The local driver is watching the clock. If by chance the candidate ventures across something interesting, that's tough luck. At noon he gets pulled into the car for a 12:15 speech. Most likely, there's a gabby supporter in the car who won't give the candidate a moment of solitude between all those handshakes.

A typical day will include several press interviews in which the candidate may be questioned on vague, but very important, local issues and interviews with local political groups which seek to get the candidate committed to their agenda. Throughout the day, the candidate must be ready to face someone trying to embarrass him. Maybe it's a plant from another campaign. More likely it's a strange personality type who confronts a candidate with, "You don't remember me, do you?"

In and out of the car all day, pumping hands, smiling. He gets pulled from all sides, from those who want more of his time and those who want him to stay on schedule. It gets tiring after four or five hours. The food is irregularly timed but very predictable. Nine plates out of 10 are barbecue, chicken or gravy-covered mystery meat. But it goes on all day, right through the dinner speech. While accompanying staffers and press can get grumpy, the candidate has to stay pumped up, has to keep smiling, even if the local campaign manager hadn't let him get to a bathroom all day.

Then it's back home in a bumpy small airplane for an hour or so with the family, four or five hours sleep and an early morning call for the beginning of the next day. They can have it.

An Excuse To Get Out

The complete collapse of the Lebanese army came as a surprise to most Americans, who kept being reassured by the Reagan government that it was in shape to take on the "peacekeeping role" assigned to it by President Amin Gemayel.

U.S. military advisers in charge of training the Lebanese soldiers kept sending back optimistic reports that Gemayel's army was prepared to handle any situation.

What went wrong? I asked a high-level official in the Pentagon if he had any ideas.

"The Lebanese army was well equipped, morale was high and the average Lebanese soldier could be counted on to hold his own against any fighting man in the world," the official said.

"Then why did the army fall apart?"

"We didn't count on the fact that the Christian soldiers would not take orders from their Moslem officers, and the Moslem soldiers would not take orders from their Christian officers."

"Why not?" "Because we found out recently the Christians and the Moslems hate each other."

"Didn't we know that when we gave the army all that equipment?"

"Of course not. How could we know something like that?"

"It's been public knowledge for the last 2,000 years."

"It was our opinion that the religious differences would play no part once everyone were the same uniform. We felt a soldier's loyalty toward his comrades in arms would overcome any antipathy one sect in Lebanon had for the other. This proved true when everyone slept in the same barracks. Unfortunately it didn't when the army took to the field."

"Didn't you have any inkling that the army would fall apart when the soldiers were asked to fire on their own people?"

"No, we didn't. The first hint we had that things weren't going as we planned was when half the troops went over to the other side with their weapons."

"Was the president informed about this?"

"I imagine he was. But our advisers were instructed not to worry about it, because the U.S. Navy would fire on Syrian-supported rebel positions to protect the Lebanese army soldiers from killing each other."

"Apparently the strategy didn't work."

"There was a mix up in signals. The White House said we were only firing at the Moslems to protect the peacekeeping force of U.S. Marines, and the secretary of the Navy said we were shelling the Druze, to support Gemayel's troops. Before this could be straightened out, the Druze started their own offensive against Christian positions, and this was the signal for the Moslem soldiers to stop fighting."

"So now the Moslems have half our arms, and the Christians have the other half. What did we accomplish by training the Lebanese army?"

"It gave the president an excuse to move the Marines out of Lebanon, something he's been wanting to do for some time."

"What will happen to the U.S. advisers that were training the Lebanese army?"

"They'll be sent to El Salvador to beef up the government's army there. We've had good reports the Salvadoran soldier can hold his own against any fighting man in the world."

Holding Back The Alarm

WASHINGTON — New intelligence pointing to illegal Soviet jamming of Cobra Dane, code name of a key U.S. radar in the Aleutians, is forcing early White House political decisions on how Ronald Reagan should handle the torrid nuclear issue in the presidential campaign.

The tentative answer: Reagan will encourage surrogates, including congressional Republicans, to explain the dangers of new nuclear agreements in the face of Soviet violations of existing treaties. Reagan is being strongly advised to keep away from the cheating issue until late in the campaign. His taking the lead, it is felt at almost all political levels, would — however unfairly — put him on the wrong side of the peace issue.

That spells quiet time in the White House despite ever more indications of Soviet nuclear cheating like the jamming of Cobra Dane. The voice of protest and warning will come from Cabinet officials and Republicans on the Intelligence and Armed Services Committees. Not until late in the campaign, perhaps when Reagan confronts the Democratic nominee in face-to-face debate and after Soviet cheating has been thoroughly advertised, will Reagan zero in on the dangers of unenforceable treaties.

Republican critics of this decision do not like it because they believe it dangerous. Since the only American voice heard in Moscow is the president's, his silence invites more violations. The new, unpublicized suspicion in the intelligence community that the Russians are jamming American radars in the Aleutians makes the danger more manifest.

Starting shortly after the Soviet shooting down of Korean Airlines Flight 007, "electronic signals" were emitted on at least two occasions against the complex of U.S. radars in the vicinity of Shemya Island near the tip of the Aleutians. That is only a few hundred miles from Siberia's Kamchatka peninsula, the impact area of many long-range nuclear missile warheads being tested by the Russians.

The value of Cobra Dane, along with the airborne and seaborne radars, respectively code named Cobra Ball and Cobra Judy, that make up the trio of U.S. radars located closest to the Soviet test range, became paramount when the Russians started illegally encrypting data from their missile flight tests. Encryption was one of the seven SALT violations President Reagan charged against the Russians in his report to Congress last month.

With the encryption of test data, the U.S. found itself far more dependent on the Aleutians radars.

Although limited in what they can discover, the radar became essential in determining the degree of another Soviet violation, this one of a SALT proviso limiting the U.S. and the Soviet Union to a single new long-range missile. The Russians are known to be testing two such missiles.

Jamming of the radar is particularly insidious because it cracks the foundation of U.S.-Soviet nuclear treaties: the right of each party to keep tabs on the other by "national technical means." Radar is a bedrock of "national technical means" — and far more essential for the U.S. trying to pierce the secrecy of the closed Soviet society than for the Soviets operating in the transparent openness of this country.

The president, however, is not likely to raise the radar-jamming question publicly. Nor will he publicize any part of a new, 275-page study of Soviet non-compliance that has been sent to the White House by the General Advisory Committee of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA). That eminent, bipartisan body (including such prominent Democrats as former Kennedy administration official Burke Marshall) probe Soviet non-compliance in many hitherto unsuspected areas, both nuclear and conventional.

For now, the president will let others ventilate the Soviet chamber of cheating horrors while he tries to stake out a credible arms-reduction position. He will of course not compete with the Democrats on nuclear freezes and other panaceas.

Advance in Revising Districts

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A legislative committee is halfway home in its struggle to develop a state Senate redistricting plan acceptable to the federal courts and to lawmakers fighting to keep their political turf.

The special reapportionment committee tentatively approved Thursday a plan to create four single-member Senate districts in the current 22nd Senate District, encompassing Mecklenburg and Cabarrus counties. One of the districts would be predominantly black the others mostly white.

A subcommittee later agreed on a plan for redrawing the 2nd Senate District. It includes rural and sparsely-populated Bertie, Chowan, Gates, Hertford and Northampton counties and parts of Edgecombe, Martin, Halifax and Washington counties.

However, the subcommittee didn't agree on revising adjacent districts affected by the 2nd District changes. Another meeting was scheduled for Tuesday.

The Legislature is racing to beat a deadline imposed by the three federal judges who ruled Jan. 27 that five House districts and two Senate districts violated the 1965 Voting Rights Act. The judges said that unless North Carolina submits a satisfactory plan by March 16, they would redraw the districts themselves.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green have said they probably will ask Gov. Jim Hunt to call a special General Assembly session for next Wednesday to approve a reapportionment plan. A panel appointed by Ramsey to deal with the House districts is scheduled to meet Monday in Raleigh.

U.S. Chief Justice Warren Burger last week denied a state request that the effect of the federal judges' order be delayed until after the primary election scheduled for May 8. State attorneys expect a ruling today or Monday on their request that the full Supreme Court overrule Burger, but lawmakers say they're proceeding on the assumption that it won't.

A plan for dividing the 22nd District prepared by staff attorneys drew no opposition from lawmakers affected by the change or from representatives of blacks whose class-action lawsuit prompted the federal judges ruling.

Under the proposal, the 22nd District would include all of Cabarrus County and the southeast corner of Mecklenburg and have a black population of 11.1 percent. A new 34th District, 14.4 percent black, would consist of north-central, northeastern and northwestern Mecklenburg.

A 5.8 percent black 35th District would encompass a portion of southern Mecklenburg including a large portion of Charlotte. The 33rd District, with a 66 percent black population, would include the rest of Charlotte and a large suburban area to the north.

Each of the four districts would be represented by a single senator. Currently, the 22nd District has four senators who must run district-wide. That arrangement, the suit contended, kept blacks from being elected because they were outnumbered by whites in the two counties.

The staff attorneys' plan for the 22nd District was accepted without revision. At least three alternative plans for the 2nd District were suggested and the subcommittee got bogged down in debate over how to change that area without disrupting surrounding districts.

"We're trying to (solve) as many of the changes as possible with as few changes as possible," said subcommittee chairman Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne. "We're trying to get the best overall plan."

Under the staff plan, the 2nd District would spread from Vance County eastward to Gates County and south to Edgecombe, encompassing most of the territory it now has. A number of changes would be made to boost the black population from its current 55 percent level to at least 60.7 percent.

The subcommittee agreed on shifts of several townships that "pretty well set in stone" revised 1st, 2nd, 8th and 9th districts, Barnes said.

Still unresolved are the 14th, 15th, 10th, 11th and 6th districts, all of which gained or lost population when the other districts were remade.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the full committee, said he sympathized with lawmakers' desire to protect their territory. He warned, however, that unless the subcommittee can iron out all its differences by next Wednesday he would try to push the staff's original proposals through the committee and the Senate as well.

Drug Charges

Greenville police arrested three men Thursday night on possession of marijuana charges following an incident in a parking lot at the intersection of Fourth and Cotanche streets.

Officer Lyn White said Barry William Brown, 28, of 1803 E. 6th St., Charles Earl Brinson, 40, of Route 3, Richlands, and William Turner Bradley Jr., 29, of 219 Singletree Drive were taken into custody about 11:18 p.m. White said a pipe containing marijuana was confiscated following the arrests.

Building Permits In December Are Given

Building permits valued at $3,765,071 were issued in Greenville during December, according to state Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks.

Greenville ranked eighth among 44 cities of more than 10,000 population in the value of permits issued in December and was one of 14 cities to go over the $2 million mark, Brooks indicated in his report.

The commissioner said the Greenville total included $1,921,216 for 45 single-family dwellings; $1,300,452 for 52 multifamily units; $100,866 for five non-residential structures and $442,537 for 21 additions and alterations. He said a total of 123 units were authorized in Greenville during the month.

Brooks said Pitt County issued permits amounting to $3,863,371 in December, including Greenville's construction figure. The Pitt total included $1,921,216 for 45 single-family units; $1,370,452 for 59 multifamily units; $103,866 for six non-residential buildings, and $467,837 for 25 additions and alterations.

Statewide, the 44 reporting cities authorized 3,047 new units valued at $106,745,669 during December, down 27.6 percent from November's 4,208 units valued at $139,226,430. The figure was up 54.9 percent from last December's 2,406 units valued at $68,930,173.

Brooks said that compared to last December, the average construction cost for single-family home increased 7.7 percent, from $41,601 to $44,805. The average increased 6.1 percent from November's $42,214.

December building permits in several eastern towns included; Elizabeth City, $148,650; Goldsboro, $2,938,718; Jacksonville, $2,217,130; New Bern, $298,365; Roanoke Rapids, $306,856; Rocky Mount, $1,027,212; Tarboro, $380,100, and Wilson, $1,253,868.

Offer Safety Steps If Power Line Down

Carolina Power & Light Co. officials, in connection with Electric Safety Awareness Week in North Carolina, March 5-9, have suggested several basic steps to follow in cases where a power line is down or near the ground.

According to J.F. McMillan, CP&L's eastern division operations manager in Wilmington, said "severe weather and automobile accidents are the main reasons why utility poles can lean or power lines can fall.

Though they may look harmless, fallen power lines can be very dangerous, McMillan said. If someone comes into contact with a power line, it has the potential to cause serious injury or death.

Saying CP&L employees are trained to treat all downed lines as though they are electrically charged, McMillan suggested that persons seeing a power line on or near the ground should first survey the situation, and stop and think before doing anything.

Persons should then identify the hazardous area and keep bystanders away, then call or have someone call for help.

If there is an injury at the scene, emergency medical help should be called and the local electric utility company should be contacted, he said.

Then, McMillan said, persons should wait for help to arrive.

Resist the urge to enter the hazardous area, even if someone has been injured, McMillan said. When professional help arrives, let them take over.

EEG Discussed

The Coastal Plains chapter of the Epilepsy Association of North Carolina recently had as its guest Deborah Wood, an EEG lab technician from Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The EEG or electroencephalogram or "brain wave" is a written record of the brain's electrical activity. This record is an important part of the examination given to determine whether a person has epilepsy or seizure disorders, and in what form the disorders manifest themselves, as there are 20 different varieties.

For more information call 752-3769 and leave a message, or call toll free 800-642-0500. The chapter may be written to at P.O. Box 7121, Greenville.

Board Meeting

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Monday at 10 a.m. at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Included on the agenda is further consideration of a request to move probation and parole offices from the courthouse and reports from various county departments and agencies.

Computer Session

The East Carolina Computer Users Group will meet Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Beef Barn in Greenville. The guest speaker will be Larry McAdams on the subject, "Computers in Politics."

For more information, contact Linda Chappel at 291-8111.

When you increase or decrease home temperatures, remember that setting the thermostat beyond the desired level will usually not enable the system to work faster. Your system will overshoot the desired temperature and waste energy. For more energy information, call Greenville Utilities at 752-7166.

Actor Jackie Coogan, 69, Dies; Known As 'Real Pro'

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jackie Coogan, who shot to fame as a 4-year-old breaking windows for Charlie Chaplin in "The Kid," was a true professional and a "gutsy guy" with a "gargantuan appetite" for life, fellow actors said after his death at 69.

Coogan, who became the first major child movie star when "The Kid" came out in 1920 and who later charmed the TV generation as the eccentric Uncle Fester in "The Addams Family," suffered cardiac arrest and died Thursday at Santa Monica Hospital.

"He had a great lust for life," said actor-director John Astin, who worked with Coogan in "The Addams Family."

Leslie Franklin, one of Coogan's daughters, said her father suffered from kidney problems which strained his heart. She said she thought his problems were caused by "rich food, the side-effect of a good lifestyle."

As an actor, Coogan was "very professional and also had one of the best senses of humor that I ever ran across," said Jackie Cooper, another former child film star.

He "was as much fun to work with as anyone I have worked with in this business," Astin said.

"The main thing I remember is his devouring of life," said Astin, who played Gomez Addams in the 1960s comedy TV show, "The Addams Family." The show featured Coogan as the bald uncle forever putting light bulbs in his mouth in the houseful of ghoulish characters.

Astin said Coogan had a "gargantuan appetite for everything. He never stopped living or creating, being vital."

Cooper recalled Coogan as "a gutsy guy, his own man" who stood up to his mother and stepfather over the $4 million he earned as a child star — a fortune Coogan discovered had been squandered.

In 1938, he sued his mother and stepfather, eventually settling out of court for $150,000. The publicity led to the passage of the so-called Coogan Law, which puts all juvenile earnings into court-administered trust funds.

"I had to be the pioneer," Coogan commented years later, noting that he also "probably earned another $5 million from merchandise. My dad had a good sense about merchandising, and I appeared in all kinds of products from pencil boxes and soap to suits and caps."

Cooper recalled Coogan's World War II experience, when as an Air Force lieutenant he was the first to land when glider-borne forces dropped at night 150 miles behind Japanese lines in northern Burma. He was later awarded the Air Medal for meritorious service.

"Of all the actors, I think Jack was the most genuine and unsung hero in World War II," Cooper said.

Born Oct. 26, 1914, Coogan made his screen debut when he was 16 months old and was discovered at age 4 by Chaplin in his parents' vaudeville act. He was catapulted to fame as the sweet-faced urchin in "The Kid" who wandered about breaking windows that Chaplin, a glazier, would fix.

"When he first met Chaplin, the only thing that really impressed Jackie about him was that he had a moustache that came on and off," said Coogan's son, John Anthony Coogan.

Later, Coogan appeared in "Peck's Bad Boy," "Oliver Twist," "My Boy," "Daddy," "Old Clothes," and as a teen-ager in such talkies as "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn."

Coogan remained active in TV and on the stage through the 1960s. His last theatrical effort was "The Escape Artist" in 1980, a never-released Francis Ford Coppola film, Mrs. Franklin said.

Coogan married his first of four wives, actress Betty Grable, in 1937. His marriage to actress Flower Parry produced a son, John Anthony. Next he married actress Ann McCormick and they had a daughter, Joann.

The three marriages ended in divorce.

Coogan and dancer Dorothea Lamphere married and had two children, Leslie and Christopher.

His acting tradition has been carried on by his grandson, Keith Mitchell, a regular on "The Waltons" TV series who appeared in a recent TV movie, "Memorial Day," said his mother, Mrs. Franklin.

Coogan had suffered several strokes and his kidneys failed four years ago, said Mrs. Franklin.

He was undergoing kidney dialysis when his blood pressure dropped, and he was taken at 11:50 a.m. to the hospital, where he suffered cardiac arrest, she said. He never regained consciousness. He died at 1:32 p.m., hospital spokeswoman Mary Isaacs said.

In addition to his wife and children, Coogan is survived by two grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were not finalized by late Thursday, but the ceremony would be open to the public, Mrs. Franklin said.

Opposes Increase In Contribution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Donald Regan says he opposes any increase in the planned U.S. contribution of $750 million a year to the international fund that makes loans on easy terms to raise living standards in the world's poorest countries.

Regan told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the Reagan Administration will not retreat from holding to that level funding for the International Development Association, a part of the World Bank that makes loans for 50 years without interest.

The $2.25 billion that the U.S. would furnish to the fund over three years, Regan said, would be combined with contributions from other donors to form a $9 billion fund.

HAZARDOUS CHEMICAL DRILL — Members of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department's hazardous chemical team prepare to dress with proper clothing prior to investigating a simulated chemical spill at McKesson Chemical Co. on Watauga Avenue Thursday night. According to Assistant Fire Chief Don Mills, this is the first time the team has had a drill, but has been called upon twice since its establishment in June 1983.

The drill, Mills said, was to test the operating procedures and training of the team members. He said the drill went well, with 14 of the 18 team members participating. The drill simulated a spill of a hazardous chemical from a 55-gallon drum. Mills said the Greenville team is the only one east of Greensboro. (Reflector Photo by Chris Bennett)

Stockholders Of Bank Have Meet

First State Bank, Pitt County's only locally owned bank, measured its 1983 success with "significant progress," bank President C.D. Langston reported Thursday at the firm's 78th annual stockholders meeting.

Langston told shareholders of the state's second oldest state-chartered bank that "growth and progress were achieved and one of the best years in the history of the bank was established in per share earnings, despite a narrowing rate spread situation which persisted for all of 1983."

Langston said per share earnings amounted to $8.04, down from $8.72 in 1982. Total resources as of Dec. 31 amounted to $46,072,084, up about $5 million from a year earlier.

"Looking forward, with a cautious eye on the economy, we hope to continue our growth and to expand our service facilities in the near future," he said.

Langston reported that "significant contributions have been made to the community in interest paid to depositors; in salaries and employee benefits, and in other expenditures made within the community during 1983 totaling over $3.8 million.

In addition to First State's original office in Winterville, three other offices are located in Greenville at Memorial Drive and Trade Street, at Memorial Drive and Farmville Boulevard, and on Evans Mall. Langston said an additional location on East Greenville Boulevard to serve the eastern area of the city has been approved by regulatory authorities.

The board of directors elected for 1984 included Langston, William C. Glidewell Jr., Vernon E. White, Kenneth K. Dews Sr., John M. Minges II, W.M. Scales Jr., J. Milton May, W.A. Weathington Sr., and Pam Kachmer.

Officers elected for 1984 included Langston, president and board

Smuggling Indictment

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Pilot Mountain accountant and three other men have been indicted on charges they conspired to smuggle 200 kilograms of cocaine from Colombia, South America, into the United States.

One of those named in the three-count indictment was Donald Henry Martinat Jr., 37, who was charged last month in another federal case with attempting to possess cocaine with intent to sell. The indictment was returned in U.S. Middle District Court.

Also indicted Tuesday was Steven Chiyka, 30, who was convicted in the U.S. Middle District Court of Georgia in December of interstate transportation of a stolen 1979 Navajo airplane, and who is now serving a three-year sentence in a federal penitentiary.

The indictment named John Milton McDuffie, who also was convicted in Georgia of interstate transportation of stolen property and is now serving a four-year sentence, along with Charlie Rivera, whose whereabouts were unknown.

The indictment charges that the conspiracy to smuggle cocaine occurred between March and June of 1983 with the following events:

— In March 1983, Martinat, Chiyka and McDuffie met in Cascade Mountain, Va., and discussed a plan to smuggle cocaine into the United States, the indictment said.

— Later in the month, Chiyka and Rivera met in Colombia to inspect airstrips and discuss the venture, the indictment said.

— In April, Chiyka and McDuffie inspected a Navajo plane in Vidalia, Ga., and Chiyka flew the plane to Hillsville, Va., and later to Mount Airy. The plane was kept in hangar at the Mount Airy airport rented by Gulf Eastern Inc., a corporation set up by Donald Martinat, the indictment said.

— Checks drawn on Gulf Eastern's account paid for fuel, fuel drums and the hangar rent, it said.

— In April, the Navajo plane was stripped and rebuilt by Chiyka and others, the indictment said.

— In May, Chiyka and McDuffie flew the plane to Colombia to pick up 200 kilograms of cocaine, the indictment said.

But testimony in federal court earlier this month indicated the drug deal never occurred. FBI agent Leonard Bogaty testified that Chiyka and another person "actually made the trip to Colombia, but the plane returned empty for other reasons."

A Review Entertainment In Evening Of Plays

There are few things more exciting than an evening of good one-acts.

More art form than show, more concept than story, one-act plays permit directorial innovation seldom possible within the confines of a full-length structure.

The Ayden Theater Workshop (ATW) presented three one-act plays in an opening evening at Ayden-Grifton School Thursday night — with two more performances coming up — at 8 p.m. Saturday and again at 3 p.m. Sunday.

ATW combines poltergeists in a haunted mansion, power play in a large city vacant lot, and love on a sandy beach for an evening of illusion easily worth the drive to Ayden-Grifton High School.

"Voices" is a truly haunting psychic drama about time and a young couple blizzard-stranded in an old mansion. The wife (Phyllis Townsend) hears voices; "You live in such a simple world," she tells her incredulous husband (Mark Zemei), who jokingly asks if the voices are AM or FM. Director Don Watson weaves the real with the unreal until the fabric is exposed in the dramatic ending. Kathleen Jackson, Becky Liles and Lee Thompson are the apparent ghosts.

"Pigeons" is one hilarious put-on after another, with Pat Houck, Peggy Russell and the amazing Ms. Kevin Adkins as the madcap slipshowing hip swaggering eccentric who thinks someone is following her. With careful direction (Winkie Phillips), the timing and balance so necessary to the workings of "Pigeons" passed with flying colors.

When Mommy (Lauretta Riggs) and Daddy (Doug Mitchell) wheel Grandma (Dora McGlohon) out to the beach, Grandma takes over. She controls the lighting and offstage rumbles, rebukes the pouty musician (Ron Payne), and then gets friendly with the beautiful young man (Mark Zemei). Director Mitchell Riggs does justice to the play's humor: "The Sandbox" is funny, the characters uncommonly strong.

At the end of the three play performances, the audience is invited to stay for a discussion interaction with the actors and directors, a return to ATW's experimental roots. This shift from large scale musicals to intimate forum is

Receiving Bids On ABC Store

The Pitt County ABC Board is receiving bids until March 14 for the construction of a new ABC store on West Third Street in Ayden, a board spokesman said.

The architectural firm of Dudley, Shoe & Hite, P.A., of Greenville will publicly open the sealed proposals March 14 for the new facility. The unit will be built on a lot purchased by the ABC Board adjacent to and just east of the Southern National Bank & Trust property.

The board earlier received bids on the new unit but rejected the proposals in January when they were substantially higher than cost projections, the spokesman said. The architectural firm was asked to modify plans for the facility in an effort to reduce costs and the board accepted those plans during a meeting Thursday.

The new store will replace the unit that operated in downtown Ayden until about a year ago when a lease on the facility expired. The proposed location of the store became a subject of controversy as opposing factions in Ayden disagreed as to whether the facility should remain downtown or move to another site.

no accident. "We'd like to give people who want to direct a place to start," explains Doug Mitchell. "A one-act is the right size to experiment, to play with. There needs to be a place where directors can take chances."

But audiences took no chances; ATW's Evening of One-Acts is a sure thing.

Student Shot By Assailant In Car

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A man drove a station wagon alongside a 17-year-old high school student and shot him several times, killing the student, authorities say.

Phillip Padilla, a Fayetteville resident who attended Douglas-Byrd High School, was dead on arrival Thursday at Cape Fear Valley Medical Center, said Cumberland County Sheriff's Department spokesman Harold Little.

Little quoted a witness as saying the assailant fired several times at the student, who fled and then fell. The man then got out of the car and shot Padilla several times in the head, Little said.

The shooting occurred about three blocks from the school.

No motive in the case has been determined, he said. No suspects had been arrested late Thursday.

THE WESTMINSTER DICTIONARY OF THE BIBLE DESCRIBES THE BOOK OF PROVERBS AS A POETICAL WORK ON PRACTICAL PIETY! IT ALSO INCLUDES THE FABLE, THE RIDDLE, THE SATIRE, AND THE PARABLE. TRADITIONALLY THE PROVERBS ARE ASCRIBED TO KING SOLOMON-- ALTHOUGH MANY EXPERTS HAVE RECOGNIZED THAT SOME OF THE CHAPTERS, PARTICULARLY TWENTY TWO AND TWENTY THREE, ARE BASED UPON THE WISDOM OF THE EGYPTIAN PHAROAH AMEN-EM-OPE! NOT WITHSTANDING, THE PROVERBS HAD A CONTINUING INFLUENCE UPON THE LIVES OF DEVOUT ISRAELITES.

GROUND BREAKING — Groundbreaking for the addition of an education building and fellowship area, shown in this sketch, at St. Timothy's Episcopal Church will be held Sunday at 4 p.m. The brief ceremony will be followed by a reception. The parish began as a parochial mission of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Epiphany of 1978. The church was moved and renovated in 1981. The site is a 5.8-acre tract situated on the front of the Cherry Oaks subdivision.

Drive-In Church Attracts Cars From All Crossroads

By RUTH ANN RAGLAND
 Associated Press Writer
ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — When the Rev. Lawrence Green looks at his congregation each Sunday morning he sees Chevrolets, Hondas, Cadillacs and pickup trucks.
 "I can always tell by the car if they're regular attenders," said Green, who conducts a drive-in worship service every Sunday on the parking lot of the Albuquerque Community Church and neighboring businesses.

"We get people from all crossroads of life," he said. "We get the wealthy and we get the poor. We get the middle class and we have everything from little Japanese cars to Cadillacs."
 Green, 63, who has been a pastor for 40 years, said the drive-in church service meets the needs of many people who won't attend a traditional church.
 "We discovered in doing contact work in our community there were lots of people who didn't want to become involved in church," he said. "There were people who just didn't want to come inside."
 It appeals to the elderly, the ill and the handicapped, he said. "We've had people through the years who were terminally ill who spent their church life here at the drive-in."

 He said the drive-in church also attracts people who want "a certain privacy," such as those "with domestic problems who don't want to go to regular church but come to the drive-in."
 And for many, it's convenience. "One man with five children in their pajamas came to church," Green said. "That's fine with us."
 Some even bring their dogs, "and we've even had a monkey come with one of the families," he said.

He noted, however, that most drive-in churchgoers tend not to be so casual — many dress as if they were going to walk-in church services.
 Louis Bessen, who is in his 60s, has "just about completed his 500th Sunday," said Green's wife, Nina. "He has never missed a single Sunday" since he began attending drive-in church. He now is drive-in manager, responsible for getting facilities ready for services.
 While the concept of drive-in church is not traditional, the services are, said Green, who wears a robe when he preaches.

He said the interdenominational church is "Christ-centered and Bible-centered." The congregation and the choir sing as the organist and pianist play and the ushers collect the offering.
 But "the people can't clap and applaud like they do in other places," he said. "So when something comes along they particularly like, people toot their horns."
 He said one guest musician commented it was gratifying to "play for the cars and have them all toot at you."

 The Albuquerque Community Church began holding services at a local drive-in theater in 1971 as an "outreach mission," said Green. "We wired the sound from all our mikes into the theater sound system and put the sound to the people's cars through the regular theater system," he said.
 A radio studio on wheels later was designed and was moved to the church parking lot in 1976 just before the shutdown of the theater.

Today, Green stands on a platform outside the portable studio to preach his sermon while the 36-voice choir, the organist and pianist are inside, protected from the cold, wind and rain.
 "I feel much better out there with the people," he said, noting he wears an overcoat under his robe in the winter and stands under an umbrella when it rains. But, "I move in if it rains very hard," he said.
 Meanwhile, the members of the congregation — in 30 to 250 vehicles — worship in the comfort of their cars with their radio dials tuned to 1050 AM.

"We have full congregational participation," he said. "In the summer time, they roll the windows down and sing." And in the winter, there's solar heat. The cars face the northeast and "it's the sun that warms the cars."

 For Matilda, this old cliché became a living truth. Born and raised a Mennonite, she lived a defeated life even though she received Jesus as her Saviour at an early age. Broken in health and spirit, the Lord met her in a very real way and gave her a glorious deliverance.
 A gifted teacher, and very sensitive to the leading of the Holy Spirit, she feels it is a privilege to tell others of the truth that made her free, and share the excitement of discovering who we are in Christ.

Johnson's Two-Hitter Leads Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Winfred Johnson tossed a two-hit shutout at Atlantic Christian yesterday as East Carolina University opened the 1984 baseball season, gaining a 1-0 win. But the Bulldogs rallied in the second game of the twin bill to gain a 3-2 victory.

For instance, second baseman Steve Sides, who had three hits in four trips, two of them doubles. Or Jeff Ginn, who went two for three.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, MARCH 2, 1984

walking one and striking out three. "We need to hit the ball better, but their pitcher (Doug) Godwin is a good college pitcher." Baird said. Godwin came on in relief in each of the games, earning a save for his brother Billy in the second.

"Our defense was pretty good although we kicked it around a little there at the end of the second game and it cost us. We've got to get more hitting from our older players. Our big men have got to hit for us."

both freshmen out of Eastern Wayne High School, each had two in game one, with Johnson, a sophomore, getting the other. In the second game, Sides had one, freshman Mike Sullivan had another, while Johnson had one, sophomore Greg Hardison had another and senior Mike Williams provided one. Of the ten, seven came from batters in the bottom half of the lineup.

Johnson, who walked three and hit another on a windy, cold day, gave up two singles, in the fourth and fifth innings of the first game. The defense pulled off three double plays behind him, however and only once did a Bulldog reach third. Two other times, runners got as far as second.

ECU picked up its only run of the game in the second, an unearned tally. Sides led off reaching on an error, then moving to second on an error on a pickoff play. He moved on to third on a hit by Ginn, and scored when Ricky Nichols hit into a fielder's choice.

The Pirates left runners at third on three occasions and on second in another frame.

Atlantic Christian, now 2-2 on the year, gained the lead in the first inning of the second game. Mike DiGuglielmo walked and stole second. He scored on a two-out single by Ruff Bailey.

East Carolina came up with the tying run in the second. With two away, Sullivan doubled to right center and scored on a double to left by Sides.

Atlantic Christian came back with the go-ahead run in the fifth, after a threat in the second. With one away, Greg Frederick singled to right and Matt Sutphin came on to run for him. He moved up on an infield out and scored when DiGuglielmo singled to center.

But what proved to be the winner came over in the sixth. Bailey opened with a single and Jeff Pierce reached when his sacrifice bunt was errored on the throw. Bailey then stole third and scored when Kenny Moore hit into a fielder's choice.

The Pirates came back with a run in the sixth, cutting the lead to one. They had missed on a chance in the fifth, leaving a runner at second. Hardison opened with a single and moved up on an out. He scored on Johnson's double to right. However, the next two batters went down in order, ending the threat as Doug Godwin came in from the bullpen to retire the side.

ECU Closes 1984 Season Against James Madison

The 1983-84 basketball regular season will come to a close for East Carolina University's men's basketball team Saturday night as the Pirates play host to ECAC-South foe James Madison University. Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m.

All that is left of the year is the ECAC-South Tournament, set to begin on Thursday in Harrisonburg, Va., on the JMU campus. The winner of that receives an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament.

East Carolina has already been assured of the sixth and last seed in the field, while Richmond has clinched first. However, two through five are still up for grabs between William & Mary, George Mason, Madison and Navy. All six league teams are involved in conference contests Saturday night and that will determine the final regular season standings.

James Madison comes into the game with a 13-13 overall and 4-5 ECAC-South record, having lost Wednesday night to William & Mary at Williamsburg, 56-47.

East Carolina, in contrast, has lost its last its last eight in play, including a 73-63 overtime defeat at the hands of Campbell University in Fayetteville on Wednesday. In that game, ECU held a 12-point lead late in the first half, only to see it vanish in the second before the overtime finished them off.

The meeting between the two will be the second of the year. Earlier, Madison took a 71-54 victory over the Pirates in Harrisonburg. ECU won here last year, however, in a 43-41 contest. The only other East Carolina victory in the seven games series came in their first meeting, also in Greenville in 1979-80, when the Pirates took a 61-58 win.

In the game in late January, Eric Esch led the Dukes with 19 points, his career high, while John Newman added 10. East Carolina was led by Curt Vanderhorst with 20 and William Grady with 17.

The Madison lineup for Saturday night is somewhat up in the air, with seven people in line for the honor. Eric Brent, a 6-3 freshman, will be at one guard, with either 5-9 senior Derek Steele or 6-6 freshman George Kingland at the other spot. Esch, a 6-9 sophomore, will hold down the center spot, with 6-5 junior Darrell Jackson at one of the forward posts. The other forward will be either 6-5 sophomore Todd Banks or Newman, a 6-5 freshman.

Oddly enough, Steele is the only player in double figures at 11.6. Brent has a 9.2 mark, while Kingland is at 7.7, Jackson at 4.2, Newman at 5.7, Banks a 3.7 and Esch had 8.0.

East Carolina, of late, has been starting Tony Robinson, a 6-1 senior, at the point, with Curt Vanderhorst, a 6-1 sophomore, and Keith Sledge, a 6-3 freshman, at the wings. Derrick Battle, 6-6, and Jack Turnbull, 6-9, both freshmen, have been starting at the posts.

Vanderhorst is the leading scorer for the Pirates, now 4-22, with a 10.8 average. Grady, a freshman guard, is usually one of the first off the bench, and is second in scoring with a 9.2 average. He is the only other player near the ten-point range.

It would appear unlikely at this time that the pairings would end up with East Carolina facing Madison in the first round of the tournament. And it would also seem improbable now that Madison could finish as high as second and earn one of the byes in the tournament pairings. At any rate, ECU will play in the 9 p.m. game Thursday — that much is sure.

A win there would propel them into the semifinals on Friday. A loss would bring an end to the season.

Ferguson Rounds Out Pirate Football Staff

Linwood Ferguson, a Greenville native, has been hired by Coach Ed Emory to fill the vacancy in the position of defensive secondary coach in East Carolina University's football staff.

A 1973 graduate of East Carolina, the 33-year-old Ferguson comes to the Pirates after serving two seasons at North Carolina A&T in Greensboro as defensive coordinator. The Aggies were ranked ninth and tenth during Ferguson's two years in the national defensive standings, while his secondaries were ranked fifth and tenth.

Ferguson began his coaching career at East Carolina as a graduate assistant from 1974-75. He then served as defensive coordinator at Chowan College until 1978, and as defensive coordinator and head recruiter at Elon College until 1981.

"Linwood has been around quality programs, including a national championship team at Elon," Emory said. "He was very persistent about coming back to East Carolina. If his persistency shows on the field, we got one heck of a football coach. We're very pleased that Linwood has come back home to East Carolina to help our program."

The Pirate staff is now complete for 1984. Emory, Don Murray was announced as the new Pirate offensive coordinator, having come to ECU from Southwestern Louisiana.

GCA Bows Out Of State Tournament

WINSTON-SALEM — After leading through three quarters, the Greenville Christian Academy girls suffered with foul trouble in the final period and top-seeded Wake Christian went on to take a 45-43 victory in the North Carolina Christian Activities Association Tournament Thursday.

The GCA boys fell behind early in the first quarter, but Wake Christian cruised to a 65-58 win to advance to the second round.

"That was the key; we just fell behind early (in the boys game)," GCA Coach Dale Thatcher said. "They were number one seed, so we knew we would have to have an extra special effort. They shot well and breaks didn't come our way."

Wake held a 30-24 advantage at halftime and slowly iced the victory.

Billy Buffalo and Billy Prince scored 16 points each to lead the balanced Wake attack, while James Buffalo and Bill Robertson posted 11 each. Chris Harris posted 13 points and Bill Harris 12 to lead Greenville Christian, and Dan Andrews added 10.

Angela Stone paced the Wake Christian girls with 14 points, while Annette Stone added 11 points and Tina Arvin 10. Kathy Vernelson and Patti Carr paced GCA with 13 points each, but foul trouble forced both girls off the floor in the critical fourth quarter.

Vernelson and Carr fouled out with about three minutes remaining.

"I couldn't have been more pleased with the effort of our girls," Thatcher said. "We led all the way through three quarters, but we had some girls get in foul trouble. (Wake) came back to take the lead; they scored one to go ahead and then held on to the end."

"The played according to our game plan, and it worked till we lost those two."

Greenville led 8-4 at the end of the first quarter, but Wake rallied to knot the score 20-20 at intermission. GCA led by two after three periods, and Wake posted a 14-10 scoring edge in the fourth quarter to advance.

Kinston Holds Off Rose To Advance To Finale

By JIMMY DUPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

WILSON — Kinston exhibited its strength on offense in the first half as 6-9 junior center Charles Shackelford fired in 10 points, grabbed 11 rebounds and blocked two shots before picking up his third foul with 5:42 left in the second quarter, but the Rampants of Rose High School battled back in the second half before bowing 58-48 Thursday in the Big East 4-A Conference Basketball Tournament at Wilson Fike.

Shackelford ended the night with 19 points and 17 rebounds — including six on offense — after sitting out 5:42 of the second quarter with three fouls. Tony Dawson came off the bench in relief of Shackelford to post 16 points, and Rodney Davis added 14 for the Vikings, who will play Fike tonight for the tourney championship.

The winner of the Kinston-Fike game will host the Midsouth Conference champions in the opening round of the state 4-A tournament, while the loser travels to the Mideastern Conference champions. Mac Walston paced the Rampants with 14 points on the night, while Carlton Wilson and Dwight Smith added 10 each for Rose, which ended the season with a 12-12 overall mark.

"We showed up to play one half," Rose Coach Jim Brewington said. "We threw up some good shots in the first half that just didn't go in, and we had no rebounding in the first half."

"Kinston has a real good ballclub, but I really thought we'd play better in the first half."

Shackelford dunked the ball over Rose center Jeff Hopkins with just 2:30 elapsed in the game to put the Vikings ahead 6-0, and Kinston went ahead 14-4 with 59 seconds left in the quarter on a 360-degree spinning drive by Davis.

The Vikings outscored Rose 10-2 through the 2:43 mark of the second period to take a 26-8 advantage, as the Rampants were unable to capitalize on the absence of Shackelford. Dawson took up the slack for Kinston scoring eight points through the end of the half.

The teams battled evenly in the opening minutes of the third quarter, as Kinston led 40-16 with 4:20 left. But the Rampants opened an assault on the Vikings and trimmed the margin to 40-22 at the 2:40 mark as Walston, Tyrone Smith and Dwight Smith connected from the floor.

Kinston maintained a 44-26 advantage at the end of the third quarter, but Dwight Smith and Walston connected for Rose to cut the gap to 44-30 with 7:09 left in the contest.

Dawson and Shackelford combined for nine points as Kinston shut out the Rampants through the 3:58 to take a 53-32 lead. Wilson and Hopkins scored inside to cut the margin to 55-36 with 3:18 left, then the Rampants posted their biggest spurt of the night.

Rose outscored the Vikes 12-3 to cut the deficit to 58-46, but only 39 seconds remained on the clock. A 10-footer by Tyrone Smith closed out the scoring.

"Our defense confused them a lot," Kinston Coach Paul Jones said. "We were able to hold them down to one shot. We had a real good first half, but in the second half we got sloppy."

"When you try not to lose, you have a tendency to slow it down. When you have a tournament like this, you tend to rest a bit. You sort of smell that you've got another chance if you win."

In the girls' semifinal game, Northern Nash took a 45-32 win over Rocky Mount and meets Northeastern tonight for the title.

Kentucky Wins; Takes SEC Title

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer
Sam Bowie had 20 points, a career-high 19 rebounds and lot to think about as Kentucky won its 35th regular-season Southeastern Conference basketball title.

Still smarting from a 63-58 loss Monday night at Tennessee, Coach Joe B. Hall had put his Wildcats through two days of strenuous workouts in preparation for Mississippi. Kentucky responded with a 76-57 victory that boosted its record to 22-4, 13-4 in the league. And when Louisiana State lost to Vanderbilt, 76-68, the Wildcats had clinched the SEC title.

"Those last two practices have been like boot camp," Bowie said. "There was no room on the floor for boys, just men. You'd be playing defense and thinking if your man got by you, you might have to run a 'wall.' It does make you think."

Even in victory, Hall could not erase the memory of the game at Tennessee, where Kentucky has won just once in 12 years.

"I think that it was new for us to play with that kind of effort," Hall said. "It sort of threw our execution off. I think if we can pull our game up and get a little sharper, we'll be fine."

Hall vowed to keep up the pressure on his club until the season was over.

"If that's what Coach Hall has got to do, then I'm glad he's doing it," Bowie said. "It definitely turned the team around..."

Kentucky outrebounded Mississippi 46-25 in totally dominating Ole Miss, which is in last place in the SEC.

In other games involving ranked teams, it was: No. 5 DePaul 65, South Carolina 56; No. 6 Oklahoma 79, Nebraska 70; Cal-Irvine 77, No. 7 Nevada-Las Vegas 74; Brigham Young 83, No. 8 Texas-El Paso 65; No. 9 Tulsa 126, Indiana State 102; No. 10 Illinois 73, Ohio State 58; UCLA 73, No. 13 Washington 59, and No. 18 Temple 69, Penn State 66.

Top Ten

DePaul, 23-2, completed what it called a "pay back" sweep with its victory over South Carolina, beating all 10 teams that beat the Blue Demons last year. Tyrone Corbin and Tony Jackson each had 12 points for DePaul, which led by 18 with less than six minutes left in the first half.

All-American Wayman Tisdale scored 31 points and enabled Oklahoma to become the first team to win 13 Big Eight Conference games since 1977-78. Oklahoma, 26-3 and 13-1 in league, scored the final seven points of the half to lead Nebraska 43-33 at intermission, and the Sooners scored the first 10 points of the second half.

Cal-Irvine used a stall in the final five minutes, tied the score 74-74 with 2:42 left on a layup by Bob Thornton and beat Nevada-Las Vegas on Tod Murphy's three-point play with three seconds left. Ben McDonald scored 21 points for the Anteaters in their Pacific Coast Athletic Association triumph. UNLV is 25-3 and 16-2 in the PCAA.

Devin Durant, the second leading scorer in the nation, hit 35 points, and Brigham Young held Texas-El Paso scoreless for six minutes late in the game to win the Western Athletic Conference game. Texas-El Paso is 24-3 and 12-3 in the WAC, while BYU has an 11-4 WAC record, and is 18-9 total.

Herb Robinson and Steve Harris led seven Tulsa players in double figures as the Hurricane beat Indiana State in the Missouri Valley Conference. Robinson had 28 points and 14 rebounds, and Harris added 24 points, including 16 of Tulsa's first 20 in the second half. Tulsa, 24-2 and 13-2 in the MVC, matched its season-high point total with its third straight 100-plus game.

Second Ten

Illinois moved back into a tie with Purdue for the Big Ten Conference lead by beating Ohio State behind the 26 points of Efreem Winters and 24 of Bruce Douglas. The Illini and Purdue each have 13-3 conference marks. Illinois is 21-4 overall.

UCLA, which had lost six of its last seven, held off an early second-half spurt by Washington and got 22 points from Ralph Jackson to score an upset over the Pacific 10 Conference leaders. Washington dropped to 20-6 and 13-3 in the conference. The Bruins, 15-10 and 8-7 in conference, led 39-26 at halftime, but the Huskies scored the first 10 points of the second half.

Terence Stransbury scored 29 points, and Jim McLoughlin added 16 to help Temple keep its Atlantic 10 Conference record perfect at Penn State's expense. Trailing 68-66, Penn State missed a chance to tie when Dwight Gibson's jumper was off the mark with less than 10 seconds left. Temple now is 23-3 and 17-0 in the league.

Tournaments

Two conference tournaments, the winners of which get automatic NCAA tournament berths, also were under way.

In the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference tournament semifinals, Iona defeated St. Peter's, N.J., 59-56 with the help of Gary Springer's 16 points, and Fordham beat La Salle 62-60 when Jerry Hobbie hit a jump shot from the top of the key with one second left.

Iona will play Fordham Saturday for the conference title.

Pittsburgh In Swimming Lead

East Carolina's Pirates, after only one day of competition, have doubled their entire point total from last year's Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming and Diving Championships. The meet for 1984 got underway last night in ECU's Minges Natatorium.

Favored Pittsburgh had barreled out to a big lead, earning 253 points on the first day of competition, while ECU is in second place with 174. Marshall stands third with 151, followed by Maine with 136 and Cleveland State with 106.

A total of ten teams are participating in the meet.

East Carolina captured one of the five championships completed last night as Stan Williams raced home in the 50-yard freestyle in 21.19 seconds, nipping UNC-Wilmington's Steve Bumgarner had four-hundredths of a second.

Pittsburgh captured the title in the remaining four events.

The meet will continue tonight and Saturday at Minges.

The top three finishers in last night's events, along with the other ECU finishers follow:

Team standings: Pittsburgh 253; East Carolina 174; Marshall 151; Maine 136; Cleveland State 106; St. Bonaventure 93; UNC-Wilmington 89; Villanova 88; St. John's 68; Rutgers 23.
500 freestyle: Greg Murphy (P) 4:34.90; Chema Larranaga (EC) 4:36.64; Nick Burrows (Ms) 4:37.29; 13th Stratton Smith (EC) 4:44.50; 16th Richard Wells (EC) 4:50.0.

200 individual medley: Donald Martin (P) 1:53.77; Rich James (P) 1:54.06; Chris Pittelli (EC) 1:56.02; 7th Kevin Richards (EC) 1:56.37; 13th Gregor Wray (EC) 1:58.85.

50 freestyle: Stan Williams (EC) 21.19; Steve Bumgarner (UNCW) 21.23; Ed Eahan (P) 21.48; 5th Steve Hollett (EC) 21.68.

1-meter diving: Mark McCormick (P) 451.85; Kevin Martin (Me) 441.10; Lester Schloen (SJ) 434.6; 4th Scott Eagle (EC) 419.3.

800 freestyle relay: Pittsburgh (Eahan, Murphy, McCrillis, Martin) 6:33.43; Marshall 6:33.83; East Carolina 6:37.34.

Gant Captures Hodgdon Pole

ROCKINGHAM (AP) — Harry Gant raced around the North Carolina Motor Speedway at 145.08 mph to set a track qualifying record and take the pole position for Sunday's $290,191 Warner Hodgdon Carolina 500 NASCAR stock car race.

Gant edged out NASCAR Winston Cup points leader Darrell Waltrip, who joins Gant in the first row after qualifying at 144.39 mph on Thursday. Both drivers are driving Chevrolets.

Gant's qualifying speed bettered a 143.876 mph clocking by Neil Bonnett in October 1983 and surpassed the previous record for the event of 143.413 set by Ricky Rudd last March.

"We have the horsepower this year," Gant said. "We just needed to be on a track that suited us. We were a little under (horsepower) at Daytona and a little over at Richmond."

"The trick here is not how fast you go into the turns, but how fast you come out," he added. "We went low and stayed low."

Rudd drove his Ford into third place to start the second row, followed by Lake Speed and Terry Labonte in Chevrolets, Dave Marcis in a Pontiac, Dick Brooks in a Ford and Dale Earnhardt in another Chevrolet.

They were followed by Bonnett in a Chevrolet, Buddy Baker in a Ford, Joe Ruttman in a Chevrolet, Ron Bouchard in a Buick, Geoff Bodine in a Chevrolet, Bill Elliott in a Ford and Bobby Allison in a Buick. Tim Richmond, Rusty Wallace and Richard Petty followed in three Pontiacs, while Lennie Pond took the 19th spot in a Chevrolet and Sterling Marlin grabbed the last qualifying spot in a Buick.

Qualifying for positions 21-30 was scheduled for today with spots 31-36 to be determined Saturday.

Gant earned $1,500 for the record lap. More importantly, he said, it qualifies him for next year's Busch Clash, a 50-mile race the week before the Daytona 500 that brings together the previous year's pole winners.

"Being on the pole for the race Sunday isn't really that important," he said. "As long as you are in the top five or 10 spots, you're okay. After the first 100 laps or so, it gets down to who is handling the best."

ACC Tops Lady Pirates

WILSON — Despite having only four players, Atlantic Christian College gained a 6-3 tennis victory over East Carolina's Lady Pirates in their first match of the spring season yesterday.

All three of the ECU victories came by default.

The loss leaves ECU with an 0-1 record. They return to the courts on March 15, traveling to UNC-Wilmington.

Summary:
Annika Anborn (AC) d. Janet Russell, 6-2, 6-0.
Lena Tinne (AC) d. Ann Manderfield, 6-1, 6-3.
LeAnne Summerlin (AC) d. Lynn Wallace, 6-3, 6-1.
Susan Maxwell (AC) d. Heidi Bunting, 6-3, 6-3.
Tyraina Myers (EC) won by default.
Laura Zaloydeck (EC) won by default.
Anborn-Tinne (AC) d. Russell-Manderfield, 6-1, 6-1.
Summerlin-Maxwell (AC) d. Bunting-Wallace, 6-4, 6-1.
Myers-Zaloydeck (EC) won by default.

Brown Tops ACC Women

GREENSBORO (AP) — North Carolina center Teresa Brown, whose 20.7-point scoring average helped the Tar Heels to a 20-7 record, led the voting for the All-Atlantic Coast Conference women's basketball team, league officials announced Thursday.

Brown, a 6-foot-2 senior from Raleigh, received five of eight votes by league coaches to earn player-of-the-year honors. Virginia's Cathy Grims was second with three first-place votes.

Brown averaged 8.7 rebounds and led the ACC in accuracy both from the field — 57.3 percent — and from the foul line — 83.2 percent.

Brown and Grimes, the league's leading rebounder, were joined on the first team by scoring leader Linda Page of North Carolina State, Maryland's Marcia Richardson and Virginia's Lyn Anastasio.

On the second team are Janet Knight and Jaqui Jones of Clemson, Belinda Pearman of Maryland, league assist leader Robyn Mayo of N.C. State and Virginia's Nancy Mayer.

Earlier, North Carolina's Dawn Royster was chosen ACC rookie of the year and Debbie Ryan of Virginia was selected coach of the year.

ECU Netters Win Opener

East Carolina's tennis Pirates opened the 1984 spring season with a 9-0 victory over Mt. Olive College yesterday.

The Pirates had little trouble in the match, and were extended to three sets only once, in the opening match between David Creech and Per-Olav Kviback. Otherwise, the Trojans failed to win more than three games in any one set.

The Pirates return to action on March 12, hosting George Washington.

Summary:
David Creech (EC) d. Per-Olav Kviback, 6-1, 4-6, 6-1.
Galen Treble (EC) d. Ki Ferrell, 6-2, 6-0.
Greg Lloyd (EC) d. Mark King, 6-2, 6-2.
Dave Turner (EC) d. Scott Riggs, 6-0, 6-0.
Greg Willis (EC) d. Rick Mallory, 6-0, 6-0.
David Bagley (EC) d. Gary Cane, 6-0, 6-0.
Moran-Creech (EC) d. Kviback-Ferrell, 6-2, 6-3.
Lloyd-Turner (EC) d. Mallory-Riggs, 6-1, 6-1.
John Anthony-Tom Vail (EC) d. King-Larry Blankenship, 6-2, 6-0.

SouthWest Girls Top Pitt; Greene C. Defeats Conley

LITTLEFIELD — SouthWest Edgecombe moved into the finals and Greene Central into the semifinals of the District II 3-A girls tournament last night, while SouthWest's boys also gained a semifinal berth.

The SouthWest boys topped Havelock, 67-66, and will face West Careteret, the champion of the Coastal Conference, in a semifinal game tonight. The other semifinal has West Craven taking on Greene Central.

In the last of the girls' first round games, Greene Central topped D.H. Conley, 60-56, and in the first of the semifinal contests, SouthWest defeated North Pitt, 33-29, to move into the finals.

Conley, which finished third in the Coastal Conference, took a 12-7 lead over the Eastern Carolina Conference runner-up in the first quarter of play. But Greene Central rallied in the second period, 20-18, and closed the gap to 30-28 by the end of the half.

In the third period, the Lady Rams took control of the game, holding Conley to just nine points while scoring twice as many themselves. That pushed Greene Central into a 45-39 lead. Conley rallied, 17-15, in the final period, but was never able to catch up.

Beddingfield Tops Greene

STANTONSBURG — Greg Franks of Wilson Beddingfield won a three-set decision over Steve Harrison as the Bruins went on to defeat Greene Central 6-3 Thursday in high school tennis action.

Beddingfield won the first four singles matches before, Allen Rogers and Steve Putnam claimed the final two for the Rams.

Mark Hall and Tim Sauls of Greene Central teamed for the Rams' only doubles victory. The Rams are now 0-1 and host East Duplin Tuesday.

Summary:
Greg Franks (B) d. Steve Harrison, 6-2, 5-7, 6-3.
Fred Carr (B) d. Mark Hall, 6-2, 6-2.
Richard Holland (B) d. Tim Sauls, 2-6, 6-1, 6-3.
Anthony Carr (B) d. Jamie McLawhorn, 6-3, 6-4.
Allen Rogers (GC) d. Chris Ridley, 6-4, 6-3.
Steve Putnam (GC) d. Michael Frizzelle, 6-3, 6-3.
F. Carr-Franks (B) d. Harrison-Putnam, 8-0.
Hall-Sauls (GC) d. A. Carr-Ridley, 8-0.
Frizzelle-Holland (B) d. McLawhorn-Rogers, 8-4.

Cyndi Hicks led the Greene Central attack with 27 points while Melody Bowen hit for 11. Mechio Korngay led Conley with 20 points while Lisa Mills hit for 19.

SouthWest eased out into a 9-4 lead over North Pitt in the first quarter of the opening semifinal contest, but the Pant-HERS put on a rally in the second period. They outscored the Lady Cougars, 10-4, and took a 14-13 lead at intermission.

In the third period, North Pitt again held onto the lead, outscoring SouthWest, 11-10. That made it 25-23 as the final quarter got underway. But in the final period, North Pitt center Studie Sharpe fouled out and that hurt the Pant-HER rebounding as SouthWest rallied, 10-4, and pulled out the victory.

"I'm really pleased with the way things went this year," Pant-HER coach Randy Avery said. "Our seniors provided us with good leadership and we did much better this year than I had expected."

Phyllis Gorham led SouthWest with 12 points while Pam Gorham added 10. Delores Pittman led North Pitt with nine.

Tarboro Is Eliminated

WELDON — The Northeastern Conference boys' teams continued to bow out in the District I 3-A Tournament last night at Weldon High School.

Northampton County East rolled to a 67-56 victory over Northeastern Conference #2 seed Tarboro last night, eliminating the Vikings from the field.

Northampton East will now face Warren County Saturday night in the semifinals of the tournament.

In the girls' game, Northeastern #2 Plymouth romped to a 59-38 victory over Northwest Halifax. The Lady Vikings will now face Weldon in a Saturday night semifinal game.

Tonight, in the girls' game, Southeast Halifax faces Edenton, while in the boys' contest, Washington meets Southeast Halifax.

Suzanne Pleshette, Ann-Margret Will Shine

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Finally, the legitimate complaint that television doesn't offer good roles for women is becoming an old wives' tale. Sunday night, in a continuing march toward meatier roles in TV movies and more leading parts in TV series, Ann-Margret shines in

ABC's stunning remake of Tennessee Williams' "A Streetcar Named Desire," and Suzanne Pleshette is her sassy old self in the debut of CBS' "Maggie Briggs."

The actual title of Miss Pleshette's first series since "The Bob Newhart Show" is "Suzanne Pleshette Is Maggie Briggs," a recognition of her controlling influence on the project. As co-creator, she hand-picked the cast.

CBS has four series beginning this month, and all have women playing New Yorkers in the starring roles.

Besides Miss Pleshette as a New York newspaper reporter, there's Lila Kaye as a TV cooking-show host from Brooklyn in "Mama Malone," Jane Curtin and Susan Saint James as divorced women pooling their kids and resources in a Greenwich Village apartment in "Kate & Allie" and Sharon Gless and Tyne Daly as New York cops in the return of "Cagney & Lacey."

The first episode of "Maggie Briggs" exhibits a good dose of street-smart humor and nice comedic meshing between Miss Pleshette and Kenneth McMillan ("Ragtime"), a real pro who plays Walter Holden, Maggie's newspaper buddy of 15 years.

"I saw my first dead body with you," says Maggie.

"The good times can't last forever," says Walter.

Maggie is distressed because, in a move to save the dying New York Examiner, she's been transferred from hard-news assignments — "the quality stuff," she says — to the paper's "Modern Living Section," which, she argues, specializes in fashion, movie reviews and where to find the best Mexican food.

And everybody knows where already. "Mexico," she says.

It's a small ensemble cast, with extras constantly floating by in the manner of the hyperactive "Hill Street Blues." As a slice of newspaper life, this is Hollywood's version of the print world, so it's full of fictions. Maggie and Walter don't seem to get much work done, and there's no apparent reason why they or their well-tailored editor (John Getz) are considered good journalists.

But, yes, some restrooms in newspaper shops are decrepit, and hard-edged repartee is the preferred tongue of many journalists. All of which seems to fit the sassy Miss Pleshette, whose real feel for comedy may be in that audiences can see she's really enjoying herself.

Conversely, no one can enjoy playing the emotionally gut-wrenching role of the coquettish Blanche DuBois, the protagonist of Williams' powerful play that was made into the 1951 Oscar-winning film starring Marlon Brando and Vivien Leigh.

Blanche is as fragile as crystal, a walking nervous breakdown who says she's "always depended on the kindness of strangers." Raised a proper Southerner on a plantation, she can't square her upbringing with the tatters of her life that include alcoholism, a busted marriage to a homosexual and her own repressed sexuality.

Having left her teaching job and left town under suspicious circumstances, she comes to sultry New Orleans to stay with her sister and brother-in-law in their claustrophobic tenement. This clearly isn't going to be a balm for frazzled Blanche.

Sister Stella (Beverly D'Angelo) is pregnant, and her husband, Stanley Kowalski (Treat Williams), is a vulgar bully. But Stella is willing to forgive because, she tells Blanche, "There are things that happen between a man and a woman in the dark that sort of make everything else seem unimportant."

When Stanley takes off his shirt, Blanche is simultaneously repulsed and attracted, a tension within that combines with the one between Blanche and Stanley to fuel this tempestuous story.

More than 30 years after Brando's star ascended with passionate shouts of "Stella," this classic holds up magnificently, with fine performances from Ann-Margret, Miss D'Angelo and Williams.

Williams, who went on a crash body-building course with Sylvester Stallone's trainer, still isn't as imposing as Brando, yet he manages to create an animalistic character from the force of his acting, Randy

Quaid as Blanche's shy, oafish tutor is also excellent.

The production's main weakness is the set, which has the transparent look of cheap Hollywood construction, rather than real squalor.

Next Film On Sheriff

FOREST CITY, N.C. (AP) — Longtime Rutherford County Sheriff Damon Huskey will be the subject of Shelby movie producer Earl Owensby's next feature film.

Owensby announced his plans for the movie, to be called "The Rutherford County Line: The Damon Huskey Story" at a press conference Monday. He said he will portray Huskey, 60, the controversial figure who has been Rutherford sheriff off and on since 1958.

Owensby, 48, has produced 27 movies, mostly low-budget films like "Living Legend" in which he starred as Elvis Presley, and "Rottweiler", a 3-D movie on blood-crazed guard dogs.

The movie will be filmed in Rutherford County over a 10-week span three months from now. John Brock, whose John Brock Productions Inc. works out of Owensby's Shelby studios, will be executive producer.

Owensby said he first talked with Huskey about the movie five years ago and decided the sheriff had just as good a story as "Walking Tall," a film about Tennessee Sheriff Buford Pusser, which Brock said made $63 million.

"It was Earl Owensby's idea," said Huskey. "It wasn't my idea."

Huskey was a Forest City police officer from 1951 to 1958, when he was first elected sheriff. He was defeated in 1970, but re-elected four years later. He has said he plans to retire when his term expires in three years.

GUERRILLA ARRESTS
ROME (AP) — Police arrested about 15 Red Brigades suspects during a crackdown on the urban guerrillas in the Rome area Wednesday, authorities said. The operation is reportedly continuing.

'Heavy Hitters' Again Teamed

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Robert De Niro and Meryl Streep, a pair of heavy hitting dramatic stars with four Oscars between them, will be teamed for the second time to star in "Falling in Love" at Paramount Pictures.

Ulu Grosbard will direct the romantic drama from producer Marvin Worth from Michael Christopher's original screenplay beginning March 26 on locations in New York City.

De Niro and Miss Streep first co-starred in "The Deer Hunter," for which they were honored with Academy Award nominations. Both failed to win the Oscar. But De Niro won the best actor award for "Raging Bull" and best supporting actor for "The Godfather, Part II." Miss Streep won the Oscar for best actress in "Sophie's Choice" and best supporting actress in "Kramer vs. Kramer."

March Tribute To TV Pioneers

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Television Academy Hall of Fame, established to honor TV pioneers, will make use of the medium March 4 for a telecast tribute to its first inductees.

The seven original inductees are performers Lucille Ball and Milton Berle, producer Norman Lear, network pioneers William S. Paley (CBS) and Gen. David Sarnoff (NBC), newsman Edward R. Morrow and playwright Paddy Chayefsky.

In addition to profiles of the inductees, the two-hour NBC special will include performances by Lucie Arnaz (Lucille Ball's daughter), Dick Shawn, Eddie Albert and Peter Falk.

Renew 'Cheers' And 'The A-Team'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "The A-Team," the violent prime-time action-adventure drama, and "Cheers," the wacky sitcom set in a Boston saloon, have been renewed by NBC for next season.

Brandon Tartikoff, president, NBC Entertainment, said, "These well-crafted series are not only hits, they are trend-setters. They've established new styles for TV — from broad-action comedy, 'The A-Team,' to the more sophisticated comedy of 'Cheers.'"

Sea Captain Has Yarn After Yarn To Relate

By Chuck Waters
Carteret County News-Times
For The Associated Press
MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) —
Capt. A.W. Motts of Morehead City, immediately strikes you as the type of gentleman you'd love to invite into your home for a sit-down of tea and biscuits.

Between sips, you'd listen as he spins yarn after yarn of sailing stories drawn from his years of experience as a merchant seaman.
Capt. Motts captured something of that feeling Wednesday night at Hampton Mariners Museum in Beaufort. An overflow audience crammed into the makeshift lecture area to hear him.

Charming and affable, Motts at times appeared to amuse himself as much as his audience with recollections of his adventures in the days of steamship and coal-fired merchant vessels. His enthusiasm belies his 80-plus years, and his talk was not so much a chronological narration as spontaneous short stories, improvised on the spot.

Droll commentary was spiced with a delightful English accent.

He recounted the time he bought a "pet baby jaguar," that turned out to be a full-grown ocelot. Or the story about when a cargo of sheep wreaked havoc in below deck holds.

How about a cargo of Brazil nuts — cargo that generated such heat, it required eight tons of space for a one-ton cargo. Heat generated in the hold could cause the nuts to "go off," like giant popcorn kernels.

Stories about the time he and some cronies stole the head of a baked bread saint's effigy.

"Saint head pork sandwiches were pretty good. They couldn't prove we stole it, but they knew who did it. We got some very bad jobs for a while after that," he said.

A Yellow Fever epidemic forced him and other apprentices to sew victims in canvas body bags weighted with lead.

"It was very nauseating. By the time we finished, the skipper gave us this much (he indicated what looked like four fingers' worth) of rum. We'd never even tasted it before, so of course we were as tight as coots," he said.

There was an unusual cargo of rose essence.

"I don't know what they got it from, but it was very potent. If you went into the hold where it was stored, you could get as drunk as a lord," Motts said.

Motts followed his two older brothers to sea, signing on as a 16-year-old apprentice with the Lamport and Holt Steamship Company out of Liverpool, England, in 1918, just a few months before World War I ended.

For four years' work, he received a 30-pound stipend, which he figured amounted to about 7 cents a day for the first year, 8 cents a day the second and so on.

"Every ship in the British Merchant Service had two or four apprentices. We were lucky — we got paid. Some had to pay to learn,"
he said.

"We gradually learned what was what," Motts said. "I could splice any rope that came along — they use clamps today, you know. And we learned how to sing songs, and swing

a lead (for marking depth).

"I cleaned more brass than you can shake a stick at, and I guess I ate curry and rice every day for breakfast for four years," he said.
"But you got fresh food when you got into port."

He related how seamen had to learn how to navigate by the "rules of the road," which included 38 separate articles that had to be memorized word for word. To fail any section meant the apprentice had to take the entire exam over, even the sections passed the first time.

Seamen had to learn how to shoot the stars, and sun, and stow cargo.
Cargo could be anything from plate glass, cloth, china, railway iron, telephone poles, wines, aviation gas and kerosene, "live" cargoes of cattle or sheep, emigrant passengers,
"chilled" meats and a variety of other goods. Ports of call included
New York, England, Scotland,
Africa, Spain and South America.

In all the years of service and miles of travel, Motts recalled one sight in particular as especially memorable.

"Going up the Amazon is one of the loveliest sights I've ever seen.
Once we ran into a stream of migrating yellow butterflies. There were billions of them, flying just above the water. We must have sailed through them for about 15 minutes. I've never seen such a magnificent sight," he said.

Or, the fury of the sea, battering a cruise ship.

"The worst one was off a cruise liner. We were coming off the Gulf Stream and we took a sea (wave) over the bow. It hit behind the bulk-head of the number two hatch, and the pressure of the water was so great it broke through and the water poured into the hold. The hold was loaded with empty drums, and you've never heard such a racket in your life," he said.

What advice does Motts have for would-be modern day sailors?

"I wouldn't go to sea today for a tin shilling," he laughed. "I'd be petrified!"

Fears Quality Of Life In Research Triangle Fading

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — State leaders have commended local officials for their handling of growth in the Research Triangle, but a Duke University professor suggests more should be done to maintain the area's quality of life.

Thomas F. Keller, dean of Duke's School of Business, said Thursday that the quality of life in Wake, Durham and Orange counties already is slipping, and nothing is being done to prevent it.

"Things which made the area attractive five to 10 years ago are disappearing," Keller told leaders from 12 counties at an economic development conference in Raleigh.

Gov. Jim Hunt, who co-sponsored the event with the Triangle J Council of Governments, said that within 20 years more than 500,000 people will be working in the Research Triangle area — an increase of 40 percent — while more than 1 million will be living there — up 57 percent.

"We have developed a comprehensive strategy for economic growth in North Carolina," Hunt said. "And now is the time for us to join together — business, education, state, local and federal governments
— to set North Carolina on a course that will mean long-term economic growth in the 1980s, the 1990s and the 21st century."

Although the meeting was held to discuss economic strategy, Keller said that no such strategy exists.

"Planning is uncoordinated by possessive governments," Keller said. "The chambers (of commerce) compete to the point of selfish deviation and clandestine activities (in industrial recruitment); responsibility for essential services is fragmented, services like sewer, water, telephones and roads; zoning procedures are ineffective when judged by results."

But Hunt said the state is preparing for growth in many ways, including by improving education in the state.

He said the Commission on Education for Economic Growth will call for reforms in the state's public schools, "including tougher curriculum, more rigor in the basic skills, holding back students who have not made enough progress and making teaching a more attractive career."

One basic need to attract companies is a skilled work force, Hunt said. "The state must help train both new workers and older workers who have been displaced from their jobs," he said.

Secretary of Commerce C.C. Hope said the six community colleges in the Research Triangle area are important in training these workers.

"Last year, these schools enrolled a total of more than 13,000 regular students and trained an additional 1,900 through special courses for new and expanding industries," Hope said.

Jim Summers, secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said his department is doing what it can to promote growth by protecting the environment.

"The Falls and Jordan action plan developed cooperatively by our department and units of local government, once implemented, will assure clean water supplies from both lakes," he said.

Summers said the NRCD will ask the legislature to appropriate funds to control phosphorus, a nutrient now threatening Falls and Jordan lakes. The department also will ask for money for a statewide toxics program that will identify and control chemicals entering the water, he said.

Toxic Threat May Also Come From The Sky

By MALCOLM JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Just as people are getting used to hearing about acid rain, environmental researchers are beginning to grapple with a more complex and potentially more dangerous threat: toxic rain.

Toxic rain — or toxic fallout, or "airborne organic contaminants" — refers to dangerous chemicals being swept up into the atmosphere and falling back to Earth in precipitation, sometimes after being carried hundreds or thousands of miles by great air masses.

When the toxic rain falls over lakes and oceans, the airborne chemicals can dissolve in the water.

Largely a result of pesticide spraying, toxic rain is being blamed by some environmental scientists for a continued buildup of toxic chemicals in bodies of water, and for accumulated contamination in fish, despite the reduction of other sources of pollution. Contaminants range from hundreds of chemicals in the Great Lakes to traces in Antarctic penguins.

In fact, atmospheric fallout now is considered the main source of toxic pollution for the upper Great Lakes, accounting for 60 percent to 90 percent of such contamination in the case of Lake Michigan, according to one researcher.

"We can't export our chemical problems to the Third World — they come right back to haunt us," said Thomas Rohrer, an expert on toxic chemicals with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

The chemicals include the banned pesticide DDT, PCBs, dieldrin, chlordane, toxaphene, dibenzofurans — cousins of dioxins — and dozens of other toxic substances.

"There's a lot going into the atmosphere, and nothing goes away," Rohrer said. "It can literally encircle the globe."

"People using DDT in India — some of it will wash out in Michigan, Canada, Bermuda," he said.

Lake trout from a lake on Isle Royale in Lake Superior, a pristine area, showed contamination by PCBs, or polychlorinated biphenyls, a class of toxic chemicals.

"Atmospheric deposition of PCBs is the only possible source," Rohrer said in a DNR report.

"It goes back to what the starry-eyed environmentalists say — you've got to treat the Earth as a whole," he said in an interview.

Scientists "generally agree today that atmospheric deposition of invisible toxic chemicals, toxic fallout, is the worst pollution problem and the greatest long-term threat to life in the Great Lakes," said a 1983 article in Great Lakes Water and Pollution Review Magazine by Lee Botts of the Great Lakes Project at Northwestern University, former chairwoman of the defunct Great Lakes Basin Commission.

"The irony is that the lakes look so much cleaner than they used to be" — with less oil spilling, discharge of waste or sewage, less smokestack pollution and less algae, she wrote. Toxic rain is also being monitored by researchers at the universities of Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Unlike acid rain, which can "kill" lakes and their fish populations, toxic rain shows no immediate effect on fish. But the chemicals build up, threatening people who eat fish and jeopardizing the lucrative fishing and tourist industries. Experts say people apparently are not endangered by direct exposure to Great Lakes water.

Ironically, lake cleanup efforts contribute to the toxic chemical problem, Rohrer said. Such chemicals generally attach themselves to nutrients in the water and are tied up in sediments. Reducing other types of pollution leaves the toxic chemicals with nothing to attach to, so they remain dissolved in water where fish absorb them.

"The regional Great Lakes Water Quality Board reported recently that the decline in toxic substances in the Great Lakes has ended in some lakes and may be increasing again."

"I think toxics in the lakes is the environmental issue of the 1980s," said David Dempsey, environmental adviser to Gov. James Blanchard. "It's just beginning to dawn on people that this is a serious problem."

Toxic fallout was first recognized as a source of significant Great Lakes pollution in the early 1970s, and "the atmosphere is now considered the chief source of toxic pollution for the upper Great Lakes and the only source in many instances," Ms. Botts wrote.

"Even for Lake Michigan, with many possible sources of direct discharge before the controls imposed by the Clean Air Act, the atmosphere is thought to be the source of from 60 to 90 percent of toxic substances today."

To a large degree, the threat posed by toxic rain is unknown, officials say. Environmental experts worldwide are only beginning to work on the problem.

Also, the issue presents staggering scientific, political and social problems, because any final solution must be an international one.

"At a minimum, you're talking North American action (to control such pollution), and ultimately global," Rohrer said.

Dempsey said Michigan and other Great Lakes states will lobby in Congress for legislation to finance increased monitoring tests to determine the scope of the problem in the Great Lakes.

"It's a problem denied any real priority in federal and state budgets," Dempsey said.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is sponsoring research grants, and several universities are studying the issue.

"It's in the very early stages of study," Rohrer said. "In terms of control, there's virtually nothing."

Justice Marshall Out Of Hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice Thurgood Marshall, recovering from viral bronchitis, has been released from the Bethesda, Md., Naval Medical Center.

The 75-year-old Marshall is resting at home and his physician says the bronchitis is "no problem," Supreme Court spokeswoman Toni House said.

Marshall suffered a heart attack in 1976 and twice has had pneumonia. Bronchitis is an inflammation of the windpipe.

Claims 'Payoff' In U.S. Presence

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the U.S. presence in Lebanon "has prevented far greater destruction and loss of life than otherwise would have taken place."

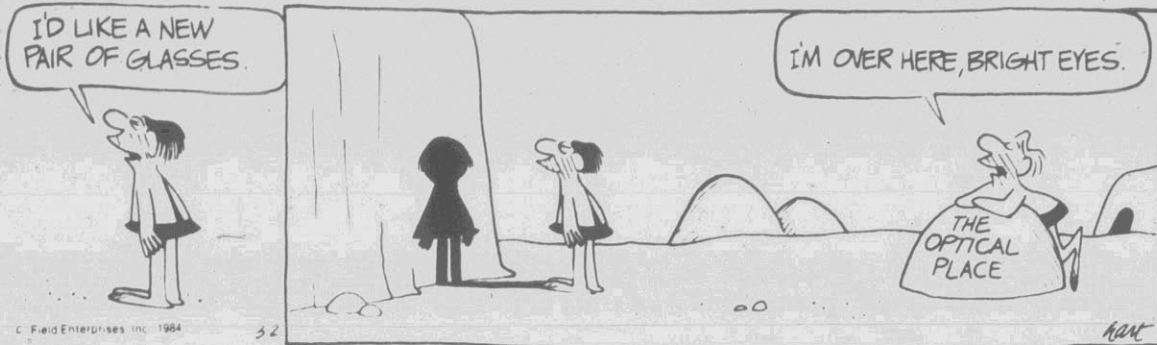

Reagan also said this week in remarks to a senior citizens group that "events in Lebanon have been painful, but we're determined to do all we can to promote stability and peace in the Middle East."

Reagan's remarks came several days after most of the U.S. Marine contingent in Lebanon had been withdrawn to U.S. warships.

Trump Coup Tommy could not remember when last he had enjoyed himself so much. On the first hand of the rubber he had made a grand slam with a quadruple grand coup — a first even for him. As readers are well aware, Tommy has the curious ability to perform like a world champion whenever trumps break badly, while butchering hands that even a neophyte would make.

Tommy picked up a fair hand on the second deal, and even though East opened the bidding to his right, he was soon in four spades. Actually, with his three aces, the raise to game was only slightly aggressive and justified by the vulnerability.

West led the queen of his partner's suit. Tommy held up the ace one round, then crossed to the table with the king of clubs to lead the queen of trumps. East did not cover, and when West showed out, Tommy's eyes lit up.

He ruffed a heart in hand

If East led a heart, declarer would discard a diamond from hand while ruffing on the table with the nine. He would then take the marked trump finesse for the ten and make the balance. So East exited with a trump.

Tommy won the eight, as West safely let go of a club. But when Tommy next cashed the ace of trumps, West was hopelessly squeezed. No matter which suit he discarded, declarer would score the long card in that suit for his game-going trick.

Bases Oil Search In N.C. On Faith

MOCKSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A woman's religious vision — and an unwavering faith in God — has led a Clemmons man to form the Jesus Is Lord Oil Co. to search for oil in Davie County.

Milton Crofts, listed as a "Christian Attorney at Law" in the Yellow Pages, began seeking oil leases in November when incorporation papers were filed with the state.

Crofts concedes some folks are skeptical when they learn the source of inspiration for the venture.

"God is in the middle of this — he is responsible for us being over there doing what we're doing," said Crofts, who declined to identify who had the vision or the exact nature of the experience.

"Once that part of it comes out, you get so much skepticism," Crofts said. "But He precipitated us doing our research and we think the Lord is ready to bless His people. If we find anything, it'll be a great testimony to the Lord."

One Davie resident who signed a lease said the woman who had the vision lives in the La Quinta mobile home subdivision in eastern Davie, and that the first well is to be drilled on her property in that area.

Crofts and Davie County residents said JIL is not soliciting money from any of the landowners. The leases simply give JIL the right to look for oil on the property for two to three years. If anything is found, the landowner gets one-eighth of the revenues. If nothing is found, the owner gets nothing.

"We're not taking any money — there's no need for it," Crofts said. JIL is backed by investors who are "members of the Christian community," and some of the leases have been with people you could call "religious," but we're not being cliquish about this at all," he said.

"He (Crofts) said he got in a man from Tennessee and one from Texas come in and did a survey on the land beside ours, and he talked like there might be something," said John C. Phelps, who lives on Mocks Church Road and who has agreed to allow drilling on his farm. "They didn't ask for anything, so we thought it'd be worth taking a chance — and that's all it is... just a chance."

"All we know is, this lady had a dream or a vision, and that caused them to bring someone in with instruments to check and see if there might be anything," said another woman. "We're not investing, we're just allowing them to look..."

FOCUS

Earth's Neighbor

Today, at 6:00 a.m., E.S.T., the moon reaches its greatest distance from the Earth. The distance from the center of the Earth to the center of the moon will be 252,718 miles. Some scientists claim the moon is receding from the Earth by one half-inch per year. If the moon were placed on the U.S., it would reach from San Francisco to Cleveland. Weather studies show there are more thunderstorms in the world on the second day after the full moon than at any other time.

DO YOU KNOW — How many days does it take the moon to travel around the Earth?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Egypt is the most populous country in the Arab world.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — TOO MANY EXAMS MADE THE EXHAUSTED STUDENT TESTY.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals F.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, MARCH 3, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
 from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Although there is a chance to work out conditions where both men and women are concerned in the daytime, the evening brings a considerable amount of confusion.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be more concerned with those around you and gain their cooperation. A good day for getting fundamental affairs in good order.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Look to good friends for the impetus you need just at this time. Be sure you know what it is you want personally.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can handle those outside affairs that are difficult to handle during busy work days. Sidestep higher-ups.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Handle those affairs that will help you to work on a more lofty level in the future. Stick to the tried and true.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) A good day to wind up whichever responsibilities that have been difficult to handle in the past. Please your mate in the evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Find day for exchanging ideas with your associates. Enjoy the company of your family and friends. Be cheerful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good day to study your surroundings and get them fixed up a little better so they suit your good tastes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Some delay in a trip or other activity gives you an opportunity to do something more important. Show great devotion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get busy fixing up your home so that it is more as you would like it to be. Show devotion to kin.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are inclined to get into deep matters and this is wise since you can comprehend them. The evening is best spent alone.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have a myriad of small tasks to do, so get at them early. Any repairs you can do yourself will be wise.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Go after your personal aims quietly and gain them easily. Your friends can be very helpful to you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one who can see things in an enlarged way but then is capable of whittling them down to a practical size and make them work properly. Teach to be objective since there is a considerable amount of sensitivity.

Area Ambassadors To Visit Mexico This Year

Last Call For Friendship Force

Persons in the Greenville and adjacent areas who may be interested in either visiting Guanajuato, Mexico, from June 16-30 as a Friendship Force Ambassador or hosting a visitor to Greenville from that city in October are asked by Friendship Force sponsors to attend the final round of interviews March 14 from 7:30-9 p.m. at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

At that meeting, information on visa requirements, the itinerary of the trip and the approximate cost per individual will be discussed. For more details call 752-1784.

A Brief Look At Guanajuato's History

By JIM RIVERS

Editor's Note: Jim Rivers has lived and worked in Guanajuato and other Mexican cities. A poet, he currently lives in Greenville. Several volumes of his poetry, both in English and Spanish, have been published.

So, you're thinking of essaying the trek to Guanajuato as a Friendship Force Ambassador from Greenville. Start with a few basics. Pronunciation: Gwah-nah-Hwah-toh. The city lies in a mountainous region of central Mexico, some four to five hours by car, as I recall, from Mexico City, and is the capital of the state of the same name. The scenery is magnificent. Although industrialization is in full sway in many parts of the country, Guanajuato is still basically agricultural (labor-intensive in the current jargon), and free of most of the ills attendant on what we choose to call "progress". There is no locally produced smog, for example. Corn, spuds and peanuts are grown, and you'll find a variety of vegetation not known in North Carolina.

If you're into time warps, you'll love Guanajuato. Even Mexicans say that time has stopped in this place. The city is one of the very loveliest of the colonial period, and centuries of tradition are preserved in its streets, buildings and monuments. People are gracious and friendly, traits not unknown in the U.S. South.

If architecture is your thing, don't just take a camera; take every atom of curiosity and sensitivity you own. You'll be rewarded. See the 18th century Iglesia (Church) de la Compania with its sharp-pointed tower and filigreed columns; the 17th century Temple of San Diego with its ultra-baroque facade; the Valenciana Church of pink masonry and Churrigueresque style, with magnificent altars, pulpit and baptismal font. This last church, as I recall, used to be the Church of San Cayetano. There was a story about its mortar being made of silver dust mixed with the finest Spanish wines. The Count of Valenciana saw to the construction costs out of pocket. His pocket was large, holding an 800 million peso personal fortune: this at a time when the Mexican peso was far more solid than the American dollar.

A little more about our friend, the count. He belonged to a group of men called "The Silver Kings of Mexico" who were among the richest men in the world. Valenciana, ignoring the grazing rights of goats who were there before he was, started one day to hack away at a hill outside of Guanajuato. He hit a rich silver vein and soon began enjoying an above-average lifestyle based on an annual net income of something over $3 million for the rest of his life.

Mexican colonial history is full of the names of other men as rich as, or richer than, the Count of Valenciana. One of them was a Frenchman, whose Hispanized name was

Jose de la Borda. Arriving in Mexico a poor man toward the middle of the 18th century, he started a small-scale mining operation in Taxco, and hit it big. He made, and lost, several silver fortunes. Wishing to thank the Lord for his initial success, he paid for the construction of the Church of Santa Prisca (still standing) in Taxco, and reportedly announced, "God gives to Borda, Borda gives to God."

I can't resist just a little more about the silver kings, even though only one of them is closely identified with Guanajuato. The Count of Regla, via his silver mines in Pachuca, made a little gift to King Charles II of Spain of two warships for his battle fleet, plus a million-peso loan to the royal treasury. Further, he invited the king to come to Mexico for his son's christening, promising to pave with silver the entire road from the coast to the capital (over 250 miles). To my knowledge, the king did not come, and I've never been able to figure the king on that one.

Guanajuato was the site of the first battle in Mexico's War of Independence from Spain, the mother country. Miguel Hidalgo, a local parish priest, led a ragged, mainly Indian multitude, armed with little more than darts, stones and farm tools, against a small well-trained and equipped garrison of royalists. I've read so many estimates of the size of Hidalgo's force (from 25,000 to 100,000) that I no longer believe any figures, but Hidalgo's force by far outnumbered the royalists. By sheer weight of number, the insurgents — I call them patriots — won a victory at Guanajuato which is remembered to this day. Each Sept. 16 is celebrated throughout Mexico and in Mexican colonies abroad with the "Cry of Dolores" — Hidalgo's call to his countrymen to wrest freedom from Spain.

Although I am not a Mexican, I have attended Mexican Independence Day celebrations both in Mexico and in the United States. The cry, "Viva Mexico!" has never failed to move me.

Go to Guanajuato. Visit the Public Granary (now a museum) where the battle for Guanajuato raged. It is an important place in the history of this continent.

A PHOTOGRAPHER'S WAGON ... typical of the 1864 days of the Civil War, will be one of the varied attractions at an encampment to be held at Fort Fisher State Historic Site. The encampment, free and open to the public, will be set up Friday evening and will be open on Saturday and Sunday, March 3 and 4. (Photo courtesy N. C. State Archives)

Everyday Goods Shown In Art Museum

By DAVID M. MAXFIELD
 Smithsonian News Service

Tupperware cereal bowls in a museum? Yes, indeed!

Known for its famous paintings by Thomas Eakins and other masters, the Philadelphia Museum of Art also is home to those ubiquitous plastic bowls that one magazine in 1947 compared to "art objects." Their shapes, it said, were "as good as sculpture."

One of the museum's collections, in fact, is a virtual cornucopia of everyday goods and gadgets considered exemplary of recent decades: clocks, scissors, a sink and toilet, flatware, glassware, pots, plates and casseroles, to name a useful few.

Museum decorative arts curator Kathryn B. Heisinger recently pulled many of those objects off the shelf, supplementing them with other items tracked down from sources in 18 nations, to show exactly what was once meant by "good design" and how that concept was changed over nearly 40 years.

"I thought it was going to be a snap to locate most of these things," she said recently, "but some of the companies that made the products I wanted hardly know about them, things change so fast." Some items, such as a 1967 inflatable chair, were easily damaged, and others, never considered valuable, were soon tossed out.

One reason to be concerned about product design, industrial designer Niels Diffrient suggests, is that "we are involved in judgments of aesthetics and technology with every purchase of a mass-produced product." Moreover, he says, the Japanese and some Europeans have proven by their sales that higher-quality products are the result of "well-integrated" design concepts. From 1945 until about 1960, Heisinger says, the "good design" distinction was applied to objects that were "spare" in form, "explicit" in function and "honest" in their use of materials. As one proponent said about them, "These things really look like what they are."

Above all, non-essential ornamentation was out, the idea being that worthy goods would convey a "sensible beauty" if their forms dovetailed with their function. Thus, a Tupperware bowl was praised, a set of Swedish mixing bowls admired and the owners of a costly Charles Eames lounge chair and ottoman envied. On top of all their other assets, these designs were supposed to last forever, to beat planned obsolescence marketing strategies.

Generally, though, most of these products never reached great numbers here; Americans seemed to prefer a bit of decorative gilding on their goods. But they were eagerly sought after by, to use sociologist Herber J. Gans' words, "progressive uppermiddle brow people," who expected "even utilitarian goods to serve artistic functions."

The quest for well-designed industrial products — items that managed to be both aesthetically and functionally suited for their tasks — began shortly after the Industrial Revolution itself began turning the world topsy-turvy in the early 1800s. Before machines began giving workers a hand in the shop, craftsmen would control both the design and the production of their output.

That quickly changed as machines were set up in the new factories. Then design became a separate act from the production of thousands of products bought by Victorians. The machines made it possible to pile up elaborate decorations (once a sign of exclusivity) on otherwise simple articles that could be sold at modest cost to a rising middle class. Too much was hardly enough; even early typewriters were lovingly adorned with baskets of flowers.

But enough was enough for some design critics. During the second half of the 19th century, there were dominant but conflicting schools of thought: One group wished to return to the old craft practices, while the other tried to find ways to meld art and technology. The agendas of these two factions are still felt today, the first in prized hand-crafted articles, the second in many functional factory products.

Giant walking sticks are twig-like insects that live in trees on the island of Madagascar, off the east African coast. They may grow as long as 12 inches. Smaller relatives are found in North America.

While that debate continued, World War I stimulated a tremendous expansion of American production, and then during the Depression intense competition prompted a more professional approach to design and to a new style — "streamlining." Its lines and forms, derived from studies of the organic forms of fish and birds, were ideally suited for planes and cars. Synthesizing aesthetics and technology, streamlining became a symbol of speed and modernity. And yet, used inappropriately and repeatedly, the style began to lose its luster. According to one story, a coffin maker once asked a designer for his latest in streamlined caskets.

Again, enough. In Germany, a group of designers and architects, who had come together under the banner of the Bauhaus in the 1920s, fought a new round against styling for its own sake. Its credo of functionalism expressed in regular geometric forms and simple silhouettes broke many bad habits of heaping "inappropriate" ornamentation on useful objects. Chairs became "machines" for sitting, so the thinking went, rather than another excuse for decorating.

At home in the 1930s, the designs critic/author Russell Lynes, "who were brought up to accept the Bauhaus doctrine ... but who could not afford to buy the expensive imports. He was exactly right for his time ... very different from the starched Edwardian decade and the frenetic twenties."

The years of World War II were ideal for the functional approach. The concept had provided, and the war needed, designs that were simple, easily made and maintained. In 1943, Architectural Forum, citing a plastic gun-turret seat (by Bakelite) and the plastic nose of a Martin Bomber (by DuPont), noted, "In an extreme emergency we turn unquestionably to functional design."

The style continued its reign after the war as consumers sought low-cost, portable products and furnishings compatible with the smaller living spaces of the 1940s and '50s. Everywhere there was an interest in new materials and processes developed during the war. Plastics, which had an erratic history, began to appear commercially and were used for many purposes, from Tupperware containers to the bonding for the plywood in the chairs designed by Charles Eames. Transistors transformed TVs and radios into manageable, slim, sleek sizes. New alloys ended up on the kitchen table.

By the 1960s, on the heels of all its real and desired acceptance, the functionalism concept was challenged by a new generation of designers who considered it just so much "appearance solution." They charged that the designs often did not adequately address such problems as human comfort, fatigue, suitable fit and need for variety being explored by physiologists and psychologists. "Where function was always taken to mean the inherent mechanical action of the product," designer Diffrient says, "it now also means the compatibility of the product with the user."

The goods of functionalism were also faulted for being too serious, for lacking a whack of whimsy. Today, one international design group, Memphis, is parodying that staidness to the hilt in its production of furnishings that are playful, colorful, extravagantly ornamental — as well as useful. A dressing table by architect Michael Graves looks for all the world like a set from a 1930s musical.

The functionalist camp also claimed that its designs were above obsolescence since the "appropriate form" of the objects retained value through the years. But other "designers are saying that they don't want things that are intended to last forever," Heisinger notes, arguing that "there is no reason why we should want everything useful to be beautiful. Reality is more complicated than these or other standards of design would suggest."

Heisinger and others point out that there is now a shift away from the concept of universal values to the idea that a design may be valid at a given time, for a given purpose; beyond those limits it may not be valid at all.

"It was once so comforting to know what good design was," Heisinger concludes. "It was so easy. But designers now are liberated to go off on their own. There is no one standard now. We are in a state of enormous diversity."
