Tennessee Convict Killed By Lawmen

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

MARION, N.C. (AP) — One of two escaped Tennessee convicts who vowed not to be taken alive was shot and killed in an abandoned house this morning after wounding a state trooper, officials said.

Ronald Lee Freeman, 41, a convicted double murderer, was killed, said Russ Edmonston, a spokesman for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

"When they turned him over, he had two pistols on him, so apparently he was a pretty desperate fellow," Edmonston said.

Freeman was killed in a house in a residential neighborhood of Marion, in western North Carolina, and about 60 officers sealed a three-block area looking for the second inmate, James Clegg, said Forest City Police Chief Tom McDevitt.

"We're keeping the area surrounded," McDevitt said.

Earlier, Maj. D.R. Emory, director of administrative services for the state Highway Patrol in Raleigh, had incorrectly identified the slain inmate as Clegg.

State Trooper Larry Carver was shot in the shoulder, Emory said.

McDevitt said Freeman was found and killed in an abandoned house about half-a-mile from a house where a break-in had been reported earlier.

Jerry Knight, a resident of the neighborhood, said one of the fugitives entered his father-in-law's house through a window, but was seen and fled.

Edmonston said a man broke into a woman's house about 5 a.m. and told her to fix him something to eat.

"He said, 'I guess you know who I am. I got separated from the other party I was with,'" Edmonston said. The woman called police after he left the house.

Officers assume Clegg "is in the same general area. We assume that he is armed. We've asked people in the area to be extra careful," Edmonston said.

Clegg, 30, and Freeman had been believed in North Carolina after another state trooper had been shot Tuesday.

The hunt had shifted from Tennessee to Nebo, N.C., when Highway Patrol Trooper L.H. Rector was shot four times Tuesday by two men he had stopped for speeding. A white Cadillac with the rear window shot out was later found abandoned near the Nebo Elementary School.

The two men "without question" were the Tennessee escapees, said Highway Patrol Capt. Chester Sutton.

Clegg, of Bristol, Tenn., and Freeman, of Knoxville, Tenn., were among five inmates who fled a work gang after pulling guns on two guards. Two of the inmates are back in custody and a third is believed to be in Illinois.

Clegg was serving a life sentence as a habitual criminal and Freeman was serving 198 years for the 1970 murders of his pregnant wife and her stepdaughter.

The police activity by late Tuesday was "like being in the middle of a war zone," said Ben Gunter, who lives near the school.

Blue lights from patrol cars flashed through the heavy fog, sleet and rain in the area. One store stayed open through the night to provide food and coffee for searchers.

Clegg and Freeman, described as armed and extremely dangerous, escaped Feb. 18 from Tennessee's Fort Pillow Prison. On Feb. 21 they allegedly killed a Brownsville, Tenn., man who was grilling steaks in his back yard. They stole his car, took his wife hostage and told her that they would not be taken alive.

RALEIGH — The General Assembly this morning assigned a bill realigning Senate districts in the northeast section of the state, including one that carves up Pitt County, to committees for discussion before reconvening at noon for a vote, a Pitt legislator said.

Rep. Ed Warren of Greenville, who represents the 9th House District, said the latest map scheduled for committee consideration still called for the Pitt townships of Bethel, Farmville, Arthur, Belvoir, Falkland and Fountain to be trimmed from the 9th Senatorial District and placed in the 6th District.

He said the map also has Ayden township remaining in Pitt County as part of the 9th District. There had been some discussion earlier relative to moving Ayden to the 8th District with Wayne and Greene counties.

The newly aligned 9th District, according to the map, would include the remainder of Pitt County, five townships in Beaufort County, three Bertie County townships, and seven townships in Martin County.

"The original report looks like it is intact," said Warren. "I hate to see it that way, but that's the way it looks right now." Warren emphasized that nothing is final relative to the redistricting until the General Assembly votes after lunch.

The Pitt district was affected after the large 2nd Senatorial District was redrawn to comply with federally imposed minority strength guidelines. Eight Senate districts in the northeast section felt the effects of the 2nd District realignment.

1984-85 Calendar Put To County School Bd.

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education has had its first look at the 1984-85 school calendar options but will make no decision on the schedule until the April board meeting, school officials say.

Associate Superintendent Leck Keeter unveiled the proposed calendar options at Tuesday's monthly board meeting. Of the two schedules, labeled option I and option II, he told the board that calendar committee members recommended option I, which mandates that teachers return to work Aug. 20 and students begin classes Aug. 27.

Option I also provides for holidays on Sept. 3 for Labor Day; Nov. 22-23 for Thanksgiving; vacation-holidays on Dec. 20-Jan. 1 for Christmas-New Year's; vacation-holidays on April 8-12 for Easter and on June 17.

For students the school year will end June 6, according to option I, and for teachers June 19. Graduation will be June 7.

Teacher workdays are scheduled for Aug. 20-24, Sept. 28, Oct. 8, Nov. 12 and 26, Jan. 25, March 8, April 26 and June 7-14 in option I. The following days would be designated non-vacation days under option I: Aug. 20-21 and one-half of Aug. 22, Oct. 8, Jan. 25 and June 7 and 10.

In option II, teachers will begin work Aug. 22 and students will begin school Sept. 4, the day after Labor day.

Option II provides holidays Sept. 3, Nov. 22-23; holidays-vacation days Dec. 20-Jan. 1; holidays-vacation days April 8-12; and June 20.

Students will end their school year June 13 if option II is adopted and teachers will end the year June 21. Graduation will be June 14.

Option II schedules teacher workdays for Aug. 22-30; Sept. 28, Oct. 15, Nov. 12, Dec. 3, Jan. 25, March 8, May 3 and June 14-19. The following days are designated non-vacation days under option II: Aug. 22, 23 and one-half of Aug. 24, Oct. 15, Jan. 25 and June 14 and 17.

Snow make-up days, under both options, were listed in the following priority: April 12, April 11, April 10, April 9 and April 8.

Although the committee recommended the board choose option I, it cautioned board members to keep tobacco season in mind when making their decision to avoid having to revise the calendar in mid-August.

In other business, Superintendent Eddie West reported to board members on the progress in the school system's preschool communication project. Currently, West noted, the letters are mailed from the system to the parents of each newborn in the county, congratulating them and informing them of the county schools enrollment policies.

Then annually on each child's birthday, said West, parents will receive a volume from the school system geared to the specific growth and development needs of the child for the upcoming year. "The Tender Years" is volume I and is currently being sent to parents of infants.

"This project is an effort by the school system to facilitate continuous communication between the school system and parents prior to a child's enrollment in school," said West.

West reported that revenue from fines and forfeitures in February was below the anticipated amount for the third straight month. In February the school system received $14,789 from fines and forfeitures, $3,543 below the $18,333-per-month average estimated in the 1983-84 budget.

The board also granted the following easements in Tuesday's session:

BILLED FOR "PRIZE"

Don't give out your VISA or any credit card number to anyone who calls you and tells you you've won a gift. I did as a "verification" after I was called and told by someone who said she was representing Transworld Industries in Los Angeles, Calif., that I had won a gift in a drawing of credit card numbers. I then had a set of luggage shipped to me, with a bill for 49 more dollars. I also had my VISA account billed for $400. VISA is working with me to clear it up and is taking it off my account, but it's been a lot of trouble, including having to cut up my VISA cards and have new ones issued. VISA says many people around the country are having the same experience. Beware. C.H.

Never give out your credit card number unless you're the one who solicited the transaction and then only if you feel you know the company well, consumer protection specialist Jean Ann Wolhar in the N.C. She said she has not heard of this "scam" before, and would like you to send in the details of your experience, plus she'd like to hear from anyone else who's had the same or a similar one. Only a half-dozen people attended a public hearing Tuesday on proposed changes — based on a cost-of-service study — in water and sewer rates charged by the Greenville Utilities Commission.

The major concern voiced at the hearing was that city residents would see an increase in rates, while out-of-city customers would see a decrease.

GUC Director Charles Horne said the next step is for the "commission to take a look at what they heard."

The new water rate schedule, if given final approval, will increase water revenues by about 20 percent over the next two years.

Sewer rates would increase only slightly above current levels under the proposed rate schedule.

The proposed rates are based on a cost-of-service study, completed in late 1983, which states revenues from water rates need to be increased by $500,000 to fund increased current operating costs, maintain and extend the water system, and make debt service payments on the new water treatment plant.

The proposed schedule will spread the 20 percent increase in water rates over a two-year period to lessen the impact on customers, by increasing rates each six months.

GUC's typical in-city residential customer, using 8,000 cubic feet of water per month, now pays $8.30, while an out-of-city residential customer now pays $16.60.

Following the first-step increase under the proposed rate schedule, the in-city customer would pay $9.20, while out-of-city customers would pay $14.35.

Under the new water rate schedule, the GUC's present policy of charging out-of-city residential and commercial customers double the in-city rates would be dropped. The new rates for out-of-city customers, based on the cost-of-service study, will be approximately 150 percent of the in-city rates.

The proposed sewer rate schedule provides the same rates for in-city and out-of-city customers.

The greatest change in sewer rates is that the present $7 maximum limit for residential customers will be discontinued and billing for sewer service will be based on 85 percent of the total water bill.

The new sewer rate schedule will also add a change to in-city customers who have access to sewer service but are not using the city sewer.

In the first step, the sewer availability charge would be $2.50 per month, and will increase each six months until a customer would be paying $3.50 per month in two years.

Hart Prefers The Underdog Image

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Gary Hart said today his three-to-one trouncing of Walter Mondale in Vermont is fresh evidence the Democratic primary tide is turning in his favor, but contends his campaign will "still be playing catch-up" at least through the month.

Out at dawn, the Colorado senator greeted workers at a Birmingham, Ala., plant with "I'm Gary Hart, running for president. I need your help."

Interviewed on the NBC-TV "Today" show, Hart said Tuesday's victory in the non-binding Vermont primary "continues very much what seems to be a pattern evolving."

He added, "There have been three states in a row ... that seem to be moving in our direction."

Yet, with Mondale's campaign outpacing his 10 to 1, Hart said, "In many respects, I guess, I'm still the underdog. ... I think we'll still be playing catch-up, if you will, throughout the rest of this month at least."

For his part, Mondale, who had expected to lose in Vermont, conceded that Hart's apparent sweep of every precinct in the state "will hurt."

To a cheering Florida crowd, the former vice president implored: "This is not just a horse race. This has become a battle for the soul of the Democratic Party and the future of our country."

It is a horse race that has seen Hart win an ever-increasing share of the votes: 37 percent to Mondale's 28 percent in New Hampshire; 51 percent to 44 percent in Maine and 71 percent to 20 percent in Vermont.

Mondale, once the front-runner and the victor so far in only the Iowa party caucuses, looked south for his comeback, campaigning today in Georgia, Alabama and Florida — three of the nine states holding Democratic presidential primaries and caucuses on "Super Tuesday" next week.

Cheering the Vermont results, Hart campaign manager Oliver Henkel proclaimed:

"If I were in the White House ... I would be very concerned about the Hart candidacy. He represents a far more significant threat to the president than does Walter Mondale."

And Hart, noting indications of a Republican crossover vote in Vermont, declared, "I intend to defeat Ronald Reagan."

Comics Aim To Help Kids Spurn Drugs

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Computer, soft drink and cookie giants stand behind a comic crusade alerting fourth, fifth, and sixth grade kids to the evils of drugs.

The theme is "Be a Hero ... Stay Drug Free."

The crusade involves comic books, each featuring a drug adventure designed to help kids make up their own minds and not cave in to peer pressure.

Reaching grade school youngsters through one of their most popular mediums, comic books, is part of a federal government-private sector national campaign against drug use.

The private sector part: International Business Machines Corp., the National Soft Drink Association and Keebler Company are underwriting production of the 3 million comic books and instructional material for teachers in 35,000 schools.

Also in the comic book attack on drugs are the U.S. Department of Education, the White House Office of Drug Abuse Policy and the National Federation of Parents for Drug-Free Youth.

Warner Communications D.C. Comics donated use of its characters from "The New Teen Titans" comics, plus writing, graphics and production talent for three special editions of the popular comic book.

Mary Wolfman, writer of "Teen Titan," said the drug education specials feature Starfire, Wonder Girl, Cyborg, Raven, Changeling — the "Teen Titan" characters who team up to fight evil.

"Because the characters are youths who possess remarkable abilities, they inspire young readers with their adventures and serve as role models," said Jenette Kahn, president and publisher of D.C. Comics.

"We know that this medium — comic books — is a positive way to encourage young people to talk to each other, examine their options and values, and to begin a dialogue with parents and adults about their concerns."

"Young people are not told 'what to do' by the 'Teen Titans' but instead these teenage super-heroes act as role models, provide valuable information and other facts."

"We know young people must determine to say 'No to drugs!' and we hope the comic books can help them to be heroes."

Before writing the drug awareness stories, Wolfman took a drug world tour arranged by Dr. Carlton Turner, special assistant to the president for drug abuse policy.

"I went to the White House office building for a briefing and then was steered through drug detoxification programs, hospitals, psychiatric wards and drug prevention and rehabilitation centers," he said.

"After that I did a massive amount of research."

His daughter Jessica, 7, looked over copies of the drug comics written by her father and drawn by Ross Andru and told her dad she's against drugs.

"That's as we'd expect," Wolfman said. "In our house neither my wife nor I smoke or drink. She doesn't see examples of that."

One of the anti-drug comic books is called "Problem Child."

Wolfman said it tells about a young boy named Jesse and his drug-addicted older brother. The Teen Titans help Jesse and his brother overcome involvement with drugs.

Another, "Battle," tells the story of one young person who is almost destroyed by drug abuse.

"I wanted to create the most dramatic adventure while telling the story of one young person because young people across the country must be warned about the real dangers," Wolfman said.

Turner expects kids to take the comics home so their brothers and sisters and parents, too, will take a look.

"We need to teach our young children how to avoid peer pressure toward trying drugs," he said.

"One of the best ways to do this is to encourage our youngsters to take the lead in applying positive peer pressure against drug-taking behavior."

He noted that only 35,000 of the nation's 51,000 grade schools are getting the comic books.

"The readership of 'New Teen Titans' adventures is such that the comics have a way of circulating very fast," he said.

Inside the front cover of the drug-awareness comics is a message from Nancy Reagan.

"We hope you will give being a hero your very best effort," she says to the fourth, fifth and sixth-graders.

Pet Adoption Fund Pays For Pooch Protection

DEAR READERS: If you're not an animal lover, skip this letter.

Every year, millions of dogs and cats are abandoned because they're either too expensive (or too much trouble) to keep. A few of the more appealing strays are taken in by kindhearted strangers; the rest are picked up by local animal shelters, or the city or county animal regulation department, and taken to the pound where they are eventually destroyed.

I recently learned about the Pet Adoption Fund, a charitable non-profit California organization that takes in homeless dogs, cats, puppies and kittens, and cares for them until someone adopts them. It never puts an animal "to sleep," and many animals have been rescued from shelters and pounds.

Everyone who adopts a pet must sign an agreement stating that if, for any reason, he can't keep it, he will not give it to another party, take it to the pound or offer it for medical research — he will return it to Pet Adoption.

All Pet Adoption animals will have been spayed or neutered, and they leave with collars, identification tags and specific instructions for care and feeding. Although some animals are purebred, none have price tags, but any size donation is gratefully accepted.

This organization is staffed entirely by dedicated volunteers; every dollar contribution goes for caring for the animals.

If you live in the Los Angeles area and want to adopt a pet, visit: Pet Adoption Fund, 7515 Deering Ave., Canoga Park, Calif. 91303.

If you live elsewhere and want to start a similar humanitarian agency (every city should have one), write to the above address for the fund's booklet. It's free, but please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

And when your ship (or your horse) comes in, be a sport and send a few dollars to this wonderful agency. Like the animals whose lives it saves, it can't live without people who care.

SWEATER...is made in a blend of mohair and alpaca and worked from side to side rather than the usual bottom-to-bottom and shaping is kept to a minimum.

Pat's Pointers By Pat Trexler

When a yarn is absolutely elegant, smart knitters stick to basics in the choice of stitches. Here, a heavenly blend of mohair and alpaca is worked in beginner-easy fashion.

This new-as-the-moment popover is worked from side to side instead of the usual bottom-to-top method and shaping is kept to a minimum. The bands are done in garter stitch with all the rest in stockinette, all in a gauge of only 3 stitches to the inch — a quick-knit fashion for the busy woman on the go!

To obtain directions for making the Quick Knit Popover, send your request for Leaflet No. KL-0304 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. K-0304 by sending a check or money order for $22 for small (8-10), $28.50 for medium (12-14) or $35 for large (16-18) to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes imported Thistle-down yarn, full instructions and shipping charges. Please specify your choice of smoke, mink, sandalwood or ecru.

Dear Reader: Frequently you are instructed to "pick up" or "pick up and knit" a certain number of stitches, usually at a neck edge. The usual method for doing this involves inserting the knitting needle from the right side of the work through to the wrong side, wrapping the yarn once around the needle and drawing it through to the right side.

Personally, I find that a crochet hook is easier to use. Holding your yarn in your left hand and the hook in your right, insert the hook into the 2nd stitch in from the edge and pull a loop of yarn through. Then, slip this loop onto your needle.

Keep repeating this procedure until the required number of stitches are on the knitting needle. You may find it easier to leave several stitches on the crochet hook and slip them all onto the knitting needle at one time. To add some refinement, work all stitches of the next row in the back of the picked up stitches when using this method of picking up stitches.

You will usually have to determine how to space the stitches to be picked up. You may also have some stitches being held on stitch holders.

Let's assume your pattern says, "Pick up 78 stitches at neck edge, including stitches on holder." Then if you have 32 stitches for the back and 26 stitches for the front on holders, you can quickly figure that you must pick up 20 additional stitches, half on one side of the front neck and half on the other.

If, on the other hand, your directions simply tell you to pick up a certain number of stitches and none have been held on stitch holders, a slightly different procedure is followed. Divide and mark the space into quarters and divide the total number of stitches by 4. Then plan to pick up this number of stitches in each quarter. For example, with 80 stitches, 20 would be picked up in between each set of markers. If your number is not evenly divisible by 4, adjust as necessary, using common sense.

We have all seen handmade sweaters with unsightly holes where stitches have been picked up at the neck edge. Picking up the stitches through the 2nd stitch in from the edge rather than in the edge stitches usually eliminates this problem.

Also, make a conscious effort to keep your edge stitches firm. Some people recommend slipping the 1st stitch of every row. A slip stitch, however, actually creates a longer stitch so it is not, in my opinion, a good option for this purpose. I use a slip stitch edge only on those edges that will not have further finishing. ("Pat's Pointers: The Needlepoint Handbook" by Pat Trexler guides the needleworker from the beginner basics through more detailed instructions and projects. This 200-page book also includes sections on counted cross-stitch and aids for the han-

Politics At Play

It's been years since the U.S. Supreme Court handed down its one-man, one-vote ruling. Yet, here we are haggling once again over realigning legislative districts. The ultimate issue, of course, is equitable representation. But when the discussion will get around to equality is another matter; that will come, if then, only after the incumbent legislators' seats are protected.

Pitt County and the state 9th Senatorial District were not involved when a three-judge federal panel invalidated the alignments drawn three years ago for seven districts in North Carolina. But, as of this morning, there is a move under way to split Pitt's Senate delegation so that the county would be represented by two or even three districts. Pitt voters would hold the majority in only one district. One of the two announced candidates for the state Senate from Pitt County would have to run in another district.

As we have said repeatedly, splitting a county is bad under any circumstance. There may be some justification, but unless something else comes along that we are not aware of, this is not one of those cases.

The premise is that Pitt must be split to enable the 2nd Senatorial District to meet the requirements imposed by the court panel. Six Pitt townships would go to a new 6th District, and Ayden Township would be split off to the 8th District with Wayne and Greene counties. But, as we understand it, Ayden could remain in the 9th if the Bertie County area around Windsor remains in the 2nd District.

Legislative representation is a statewide problem, but not according to the conduct of a House committee studying the redistricting issue. A Mecklenburg County representative who wasn't on the committee complained that he had had no input into a plan that would split Mecklenburg into single-seat districts. The response from another Mecklenburg legislator who conceived the plan, Rep. Louise Brennan, was that only those lawmakers whose districts were affected needed to be involved.

Obviously, there is little in the way of equality involved; not when isolated townships would be traded off as just so many head of hogs. Not when a legislator — any legislator — could not become involved in a non-local matter. It's more a case of politics and political machinations designed to protect incumbents' seats, which is what brought on the latest redistricting order in the first place.

As we said last week, it is time for the Legislature to follow the law, not just by the word but by the spirit, too.

Reaccreditation

East Carolina University's administration and staff obviously have worked very hard to be ready for a visit by the National Council for the Accreditation and Teacher Education on March 19.

The NCATE denied ECU's teacher education program accreditation last year and college officials noted that the action was based to a large extent on the program's administrative structure.

Since then changes have been made to consolidate education programs in the school of education and university officials are confident that they corrected the problems.

N.C. Department of Public Instruction representatives will also visit the campus on April 19. The State Board of Education last year granted only a two-year provisional accreditation for the school of education.

Chancellor John Howell said that education programs had been spread throughout the university but now "every education program is the education department's responsibility."

It has taken a good deal of planning and work to correct the deficiencies which the accreditation agencies pointed out last year. Now the real test of what has been done is at hand.

WASHINGTON — Walter F. Mondale's vulnerability in the critical days ahead is explained by the fact he has no real choice other than to allow the same strategy that led to his New Hampshire debacle.

"Stay the course!" was the advice given Mondale by a party elder statesman whose counsel is frequently sought by the former vice president. That means continued reliance on money, organization and big labor's close embrace. Indeed, a post-New Hampshire retooling of the carefully planned Mondale campaign seems beyond the capabilities of even his astute managers.

That he means Fritzger remains vulnerable to the poison-tipped darts of his former colleague from Carter administration days: pollster-consultant Patrick Caddell. It was Caddell's quiet entrance into Sen. Gary Hart's presidential campaign a little more than a month ago that began its rejuvenation.

Caddell focused Hart's floundering campaign — where the only focus then was its insistent pro-feminist bias — into a deadly weapon aimed at Jimmy Carter's vice president.

CONCORD — North Carolina has never been very forgiving of political candidates who lose. There's a general rule in state politics: a candidate gets one crack at a statewide office. If he loses, he's finished — at least as a potential statewide candidate.

Former House Speaker Carl Stewart is trying to break that tradition. Stewart, who narrowly lost the 1980 Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor to Jimmy Green, is seeking that office again.

"Early in the campaign, that was my biggest obstacle," Stewart says of the one-shot-at-glory rule. "It was an abstacle in the sense that I've run before and expended all that energy. How do you get yourself psyched up again? How do you get your contributors to contribute again?" He said the tradition made some of his supporters reluctant to contribute or endorse him again.

"I think I've overcome that now," Stewart said in an interview at a Concord restaurant. He was here to meet with the Cabarrus County chapter of the N.C. Association of Educators. Stewart has garnered that group's endorsement plus those of the General Baptist Convention, the AFL-CIO and the N.C. chapter of the National Organization of Women. Stewart's major opponent, Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, conceded that those endorsements make Stewart a more viable candidate, one who will be better able to attract money.

Not long ago, people were telling Stewart he couldn't win. Friends were suggesting that he run for attorney general — he's a lawyer — or for insurance commissioner. "People were saying that maybe I needed to run for something I was sure to win, something that would cost about $100,000 and take four years" to rebuild his image as a winner. "No one is saying anymore that I can't win," Stewart said.

Stewart says this race is much different from his 1980 match-up with Green. On a personal level, he says he's approaching it much differently. He claims to be more relaxed — even though he recognizes that a loss here really would end his political career. He says he also feels less muzzled. "I felt a little muzzled last time. I wanted to get all the votes and please everyone. That is traditional politics but for me it was stifling."

For example, in 1980, he says now, he felt that the Senate was in a mess. "But I didn't raise that because I didn't want to offend the senators." He's raised it this year and he has offended the senators. In fact, there's some talk that if he's elected, the Senate will strip him of some duties.

Running against Jordan is also much different. With Green and Stewart there was a clear ideological difference. Jordan and Stewart come from the moderate — some would say liberal — wing of the party. "The gray area between us is much grayer. Our differences are more subtle," Stewart says. The recognized differences between the candidates are so few, in fact, that they've really sparred over only one issue: who can best open up the Senate.

Stewart says that to win this year, he must build a larger margin of victory in the west, break even in the Piedmont and win in the east. In 1980, he couldn't make many inroads in the east against easterner Green. His wife is from a prominent Bladen County family but Bladen went heavily for its native son Green. Stewart's not expecting to do as well in the Piedmont as in 1980 because that's Jordan's base. But Stewart exudes confidence about winning. He's saying it will be a close contest but he thinks he's overcome Jordan's early organizational lead and larger campaign treasury and that he's on the brink of breaking a state tradition.

Birthday For Barbie

I was terribly shocked to read the other day that Barbie Doll was celebrating her 25th anniversary. You can't call it a birthday because when Barbie was first born she was a full grown lady with a beautiful body and all the curves in the right places. This body required a tremendous amount of clothes to do her justice.

I mentioned the anniversary to my daughter who is now 29. "I wonder where Barbie is right now?" I said.

"She's up in the attic," Connie said. "I put her there years ago."

"Well, bring her down and we'll have a birthday party for her."

"How many candles should we put on the cake?" my wife asked.

"Let's assume she was 21 years old when we got her, so she must be 46 by now. Why don't we just put one candle on the cake because she could be sensitive about her age."

That evening we all sat around the table and Connie brought Barbie down.

The years had been very good to her.

"Barbie, you look wonderful. Your skin is just as smooth now as it was 25 years ago," I said.

Barbie blushed. "I use Oil of Olay every day. No one can guess my age."

"So tell us," my wife said. "What's been going on with you since we saw you last? How's Ken?"

"Didn't you hear? Ken and I split 15 years ago."

"I'm sorry to hear that," I said. "What happened?"

"Irreconcilable differences. He said I spent too much money on clothes. I seemed to want a different outfit every week. Every time the charge account bills came in he lost his temper. I guess I was a spoiled brat, but in those days before my consciousness was raised I thought clothes were everything."

"What happened to Ken?"

"He found a doll that was into jeans and tank tops, and married her. They seem very happy, and after the bitterness of the divorce, we're now friends again."

"What did you do?"

"I married a G.I. Joe."

"You're married to a soldier?"

"He was a soldier. He got out of the Army and he's now a defense spare parts contractor. I couldn't afford many outfits when he was in the service. But now that I can buy anything I want to, I just don't seem to be as interested in clothes as I used to be. I might buy something on sale, but I don't have six closets full of the stuff any more."

"Neither do I," Connie said rather bitterly.

"How are the children?" my wife asked.

"They're all out of the nest. George is in computers, Harriet goes to Princeton, and Debbie drives a school bus."

"But what do you do with yourself?" my wife asked.

"I went to law school six years ago. I'm in practice with Covington and Burling. I never dreamed 25 years ago that I would want a career at this stage in life. But what choice does a woman have? You can't stay home all day long doing what you want to or people think you're worthless."

"Do you ever keep in touch with Midge?"

"Poor Midge. I do see her once in a while. She's a buyer in a department store, and she's been living with a guy for ten years, but he says if they get married it will spoil the relationship. I've told her to dump him, but she says it isn't that easy for a 46-year-old woman to find a guy these days."

"Whatever happened to your dream house which cost us $45?" I asked her.

"When Ken and I broke up we sold it for $78.50. It was a big mistake because now it's worth $150."

—Rowland Evans and Robert Novak—

Serving Up A Pollster

Mondale's emphasis on experience ("I am ready") played into Caddell's plans to contrast the candidate of the future with the candidate of the past.

That a grinning Mondale, suffering the first great defeat of his political career in New Hampshire, kept repeating "I am ready" shows no inclination to change tactics. Even Mondale backers who would like to change believe any dramatic shift toward mimicking Hart's pro-future attitude would be farcical.

Mondale insiders were convinced that his superior funds and organization would roll through Sunday's Maine caucuses into a near sweep of the "Super Tuesday" primaries March 13.

In other words, having been obliterated in New Hampshire and losing in Maine despite a vastly superior organization, the Mondale campaign relies on the same resources in the critical state primaries ahead. The assumption at the bedrock of Mondale strategy is that nobody else — certainly not under-financed, badly organized

Gary Hart — could dream of contesting 11 state delegate contests on that one horrendous Tuesday.

But Hart may not need organization. He will now become, in the words of one Democratic insider, "the candidate of the 6 o'clock news." As such, organization and finances fade into irrelevance compared with what voters see on the television screen. The stampede away from Mondale in the New Hampshire campaign's final weekend suggests rejection of what they saw of him then.

All but Hart's closest supporters believe that the stampede clearly was anti-Mondale, not pro-Hart. The detached, even introverted senator is seen by the political community as a shadowy figure in the New Hampshire outcome, an available missing link thrust at the final moment into Pat Caddell's strategic model.

Almost exactly a year before the New Hampshire primary, Caddell's cool disdain for Mondale turned to hot fury when he read the Boston Globe of Feb. 25. In it, Mondale described Caddell's famous 1979 analysis of national "malaise" as "crazy." Since then, Caddell has been in search of a candidate. Sens. Dale Bumpers and Joe Biden turned him down, and Sen. John Glenn ignored his tactical suggestions.

As portents of the New Hampshire outcome reached the Senate floor recently, some senators noted — only half in jest — that they might be in their Colorado colleague's shoes had they followed Caddell. But with media attention centered on him, Hart no longer can merely be the duces ex machina in Mondale's decline.

The Mondale camp intended before Maine to make sure of that. Mondale insiders talked about doing what had not been done so far: challenge Hart to specify those "new ideas." The trouble with that play is Hart's glib response to such questions, rattling off a series of recon-dite ideas usually headed by his proposed "individual training account for workers."

Besides, what Mondale's supporters around the country want is a sign of his own dynamism rather than an exposure of Hart's weakness.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Most of us are horrified at the number of murders taking place in our nation each day. Almost every newscast tells of some bizarre murder which has claimed an innocent life.

As we listen, we shudder to think that any sane person could commit such heinous crimes. Most of us are fed up with our liberal judicial system coddling such criminals. We feel the guilty of premeditated murder should receive maximum punishment — capital punishment — which our state laws sanction. We abhor plea bargaining and the absurd insanity plea. Our patience is worn thin by such obvious illegal legalities.

"Murder! No, we cannot condone such inhuman acts," we say. "Our job is to protect the innocent from the depraved criminal."

Let us not forget, though, that we have repeatedly elected officials who are taking our tax money and murdering thousands of babies by abortion every day. Not guilty! Who is kidding whom?

If a woman is determined to abort her own child, let her pay for it. Let the blood be on her hands, not yours and mine.

We elect humanistic do-gooders without even asking where they stand on such issues. We, therefore, may be more guilty of murder than the person who kills in the heat of passion or the drunk who runs down an innocent victim because of his inhibited reflexes. While we condemn both of these murderers, they cannot be indicted for pre-meditated murder.

Surely we cannot plead temporary insanity or self-defense when we continue to elect people to office who use our money to murder in the name of human rights or, on the insane notion of giving women the right to use their bodies as they please.

Let's vote against all politicians who will not clearly state their opposition to making us a partner in murder by using our money to pay for abortions.

Strength For Today

A man who had just returned from a trip to Alaska was telling recently how the pilot of the airplane had said to him, "Would you like to take a flight into tomorrow?" He meant, of course, "We'll fly across the international date line."

Most of us fall into lazy habits of day dreaming, that unprofitable and ridiculous practice of flying back into yesterday. For example, the person who can always remember yesterday's slight is slipping into this practice.

Of course, flying into tomorrow can become fantasy if we allow it to do so. But it also can become a thing of hope, of anticipation, of the renewing of our faith. If we are growing as God intends we should, tomorrow should be better than today.

Let us forget the past. Let us take a flight into tomorrow. Forgetting the things that are behind, let us press forward — as did St. Paul — unto the things that are before.

Bell Arthur Fire District 'Run On A Shoestring'

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"If we could get $25 from everyone in the fire district, we wouldn't need any tax," according to Sparky McCaskill, treasurer of the Bell Arthur Fire Department.

McCaskill, explaining why the department is seeking a fire district tax, said in an interview the department has been "operating on a shoe string over the years," and now needs a new truck, which will cost about $74,000. "We just can't raise that kind of money."

Registered voters in the fire district will have the opportunity to vote on the special fire protection tax on Tuesday.

The volunteer fire department at Bell Arthur was organized in 1962, and still has its first truck, a 1944 model. Since then, a 1966 tank truck and a 1976 fire engine have been added, as well as a new fire station to house the equipment.

"We are still providing the best fire protection the county has to offer anyone," McCaskill said, and "we don't owe anyone any money."

The building, valued at $100,000, has been paid for, he said, as well as the trucks, now valued at about $60,000.

The department's 1976 model truck cost $34,000, but a comparable unit will cost $74,000. "We feel there is no way we can cook enough barbecue, have sales, turkey shoots or borrow the money to pay for this capital outlay." And individual donations are not that great, according to McCaskill.

McCaskill, who said "25 percent of our patrons do all the paying," suggested that if everyone in the fire district would contribute $25 a year, "we wouldn't need any tax."

But that's not the case.

When the department was organized, "95 percent of our volunteers were farmers ... self employed. Now," he continued, "we have a much younger group. Most of them are employees of one firm or another and can't get off" to "help beg, borrow and work on fund-raising projects."

A new truck, McCaskill said, would aid the department in securing a better fire insurance rating, from the present 9A rating to a class 8 rating, which would lower fire insurance rates for property in the district.

While approval of the referendum would allow an additional tax of up to 15 cents per $100 valuation on property in the district, McCaskill said a tentative budget, which would "allow us to secure a down payment on the new truck and pay for it in seven years at about 8 percent interest, and maintain the excellent service we now offer," proposes a tax rate of 3 3/4 cents per $100 valuation.

McCaskill said the proposed 3 3/4 cents rate would raise between $14,000 and $15,000.

Based on the $37 million to $40 million estimated value of the property in the district, 1 cent on the tax rate would raise from $3,700 to $4,000.

McCaskill said that if the fire protection tax passes "we are only asking" that residents of the district "give up the insurance savings they are now receiving due to the fire department." In a year or so, according to McCaskill, "by upgrading our department to a class 8, we will give it back to them in yet even greater insurance savings. All we are asking is a brief concession on their insurance savings, which will come back to them in about a year when we go to class 8."

McCaskill said homeowners insurance on a dwelling valued at $50,000 now costs $242 dollars a year in the fire district. With an improved rating, the cost would be $208.

The proposed fire protection tax would cost the owner of a $50,000 home $5 for each 1 cent in fire district tax.

While the proposed budget for the coming year, according to McCaskill, is based on a 3 3/4 cents fire tax rate, the final rate would be established by the Board of County Commissioners.

If the tax is approved, the fire district will bear the cost of the election, as well as costs involved in administration and collection of the tax. If the referendum fails, the county will pay for the election.

Details Still Unclear As To Beirut Deaths

The parents and brother of Violette Saad of Greenville reportedly died Monday in Beirut, Lebanon. The causes of death have not been made clear to relatives here.

According to her husband, George Saad, Mrs. Saad was notified Monday that her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Touma, in their late 70s, had died as a result of injuries sustained in a head-on motor vehicle collision just outside Beirut. It was also reported to her that her brother, Joseph Touma, 45, had died the same day, possibly of natural causes.

The Saads have talked to a sister of Mrs. Saad in Kuwait, who also did not have clear information, but have been unable to talk directly to any of the Touma family in Beirut. Mrs. Saad has another brother who lives in Beirut, but the family so far has not been able to contact him.

"We know from news reports and from having talked with the person who notified us of the deaths that conditions are bad where Violette's parents lived," Saad said. "The person said it would be unsafe for him to go out at that time to go and ask her brother to call us because there was shelling going on."

The elder Toumas and Joseph Touma and his family lived in the same apartment house near the Presidential Palace on the outskirts of Beirut, Saad said.

Arrest Youth In Vehicle Thefts

A 17-year-old Winterville youth has been arrested by Pitt County deputies on charges stemming from the theft of a school bus and two cars from county schools and a license plate from an Ayden vehicle, Sheriff Ralph Tyson said.

He said Steven Lamont Phillips of 426 Hillcrest Ave. was charged with taking a school bus from W.H. Robinson School in Winterville last Friday. Tyson said the bus was later discovered in the parking lot at D.H. Conley High School, where Phillips is a student.

The sheriff said Phillips was also charged with auto larceny in the theft of vehicles from D.H. Conley owned by Donna Mills and Kimberly Ann Chipman. He said the car belonging to Ms. Chipman, a student, was taken on Feb. 29, while Mrs. Mills, a teacher, reported her car missing last Friday. Both cars were found undamaged in an area near the east end of Main Street in Winterville.

Phillips was also charged with the theft of a license plate from a car owned by Ernestine Bright Rogers of 1803 Martin Circle, Ayden. Tyson said the plate was allegedly used on the Chipman and Mills vehicles.

Phillips was placed under a $10,000 secured bond, Tyson said.

Bridge Out For Maybe A Week

DUNN, N.C. (AP) — A truck pulling a construction crane on U.S. 421 hit an Interstate 95 bridge, tearing a beam from the bottom of the bridge, officials say.

Repairs could take a month and cost $100,000, according to William Jones, a spokesman for the state Department of Transportation.

The beam was torn from the interstate's southbound bridge, and Jones said southbound traffic will detour a short distance around the bridge during the work.

The B&F Diamond Construction Co. Inc. truck from Columbus, Ga., was going north on U.S. 421 about 10:15 a.m. Tuesday when the crane struck the bridge, which is just east of Dunn, Trooper D.D. Watson of the state Highway Patrol said.

No one was injured, authorities said.

The driver of the truck, Clinton E. Owen of Baltimore, was charged with exceeding the height requirement of 13 feet, 6 inches, authorities said.

Investigation of a Feb. 28 break-in at a rural mobile home has resulted in one arrest and the recovery of property allegedly taken in the incident, according to Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

He said deputies arrested Melvin Ernest Simmons, 21, of Bland Trailer Park, Route 5, Greenville, and charged him with breaking, entering and larceny at a mobile home owned by William Bright. Tyson said Bright's home is located next door to Simmons' residence at the trailer park.

According to police, the Riggs car collided with an auto driven by Joseph Kevin Svec of Route 1, Grimesland, causing $500 damage to the Svec car and $600 damage to the Riggs vehicle.

Cars driven by Judy Smith Williams of Route 1, Winterville, and Elaine McLawhorn Boyette of 108 Tanglewood Drive collided about 4:36 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 15 feet north of the 10th Street intersection, causing $650 damage to the Williams car and $50 damage to the Boyette auto.

Death Row Inmate's Appeal Sees Setback

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Attempts to save convicted police-killer James W. Hutchins from a March 16 execution will move to the North Carolina Supreme Court after defense attorneys failed to get relief from a Rutherford County judge. Defense attorney Thomas C.

Manning of Raleigh said he would ask the Supreme Court to review the decision by Superior Court Judge Frank Snapp.

Snapp on Tuesday denied defense contentions that North Carolina's method of jury selection is unconstitutional "as a matter of law" and rejected complaints about the attorney general's role in executions as "without merit and frivolous."

Hutchins' scheduled Jan. 13 execution was delayed by an appeal based on the exclusion of jurors opposed to capital punishment on death penalty juries. Manning argued Tuesday that U.S. District Judge James McMillan had granted new trials in four cases based on that reasoning.

"If James Hutchins case had been among the four considered by McMillan, we would not be in a position to execute him today," Manning said, adding that five potential jurors in Hutchins' case were excused for being opposed to the death penalty.

But Snapp said McMillan's ruling was countered by a decision in the Eastern District of North Carolina backing the exclusion of such jurors.

"Although disappointed in the past, it's the hope of this court that there still exists among the federal judiciary enough horse sense to refute the contentions of Judge McMillan's motion," Snapp said.

Deputy Attorney General Jean Benoy argued Tuesday that the issue of death qualification of jurors had been raised prior to the trial-but was abandoned on direct appeal.

"It is clear that on a previous motion ... the defendant was in a position to raise that issue but did not do so," he said. "We say the court should deny on a procedural default."

Snapp said he did not understand defense attorneys' contentions that the governor should have stricter control over executions.

"The court sets the execution date. What is the governor to do?" Snapp said. "He asks the attorney general for advice. Jim Hunt ain't never been much of a lawyer and he's been busy lately running for (U.S.) Senate."

Hutchins was convicted in September 1979 of the May 31, 1979, murders of three law enforcement officers in Rutherford County.

Taped Words To Be In Evidence

CHICAGO (AP) — Four taped conversations between court personnel and a clerk charged with accepting $1,640 in bribes will be allowed as evidence in the first trial from Operation Greylord, the FBI's undercover probe of the Cook County court system.

U.S. District Judge John A. Nordberg ruled the tapes admissible Tuesday in the trial of Harold Conn, a deputy Traffic Court clerk charged with nine counts of extortion and one count of racketeering for allegedly assuring favorable treatment in return for money. Opening arguments were to begin today.

Conn and eight others, including three judges and three lawyers, were indicted in December following the three-year corruption investigation.

Several States Check Doctors' Credentials

By The Associated Press
Several states are checking physicians' qualifications and others are re-examining their medical licensing procedures following published reports that up to 3,000 doctors nationwide may be working under phony credentials.

"I think it's fair to say we'll approach this a little more cautiously in the future," Delaware Deputy Attorney General Edward Kafader, counsel to the Board of Medical Practice, said Tuesday.

The New York Times reported Sunday that federal and state officials have launched a nationwide investigation into reports that up to 3,000 people may be working as doctors or seeking medical certification with false credentials, many from Caribbean medical schools.

According to the report, the probe was sparked by the U.S. Postal Service's discovery last year of extensive trafficking in fraudulent credentials. Federal prosecutors recently disclosed that a Peruvian living in Alexandria, Va., had admitted daking some $1.5 million from 165 people in order to obtain fake documents for them, mainly from a school in the Dominican Republic.

An informal survey by The Associated Press on Tuesday showed that at least nine states have responded by checking to see if the individuals listed by the U.S. Postal Service have been licensed, by further checking credentials of foreign school graduates or by re-examining the thoroughness of evaluation procedures. They are Washington, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, New York, Illinois, Delaware, Minnesota and Massachusetts.

The most extensive investigation is taking place in New York, where officials said at least three psychiatric residents have already been fired for falsifying credentials.

In addition, the credentials of more than 1,000 licensed physicians and residents are being examined by the Office of Mental Health, which checks doctors applying to state psychiatric hospitals, and the Office of Professional Discipline, which handles all residents seeking licenses in New York, officials said.

A resident is a medical school graduate in training to get a medical license, usually in a specialty.

New York is also "developing new guidelines for our hospitals to check the credentials of residents and all doctors," said Robert Spoor, spokesman for the Office of Mental Health.

Maryland officials are setting up a 12-member task force to ensure that physicians who graduated from foreign medical schools are properly trained, said Dr. C. Earl Hill, president of the state Board of Medical Examiners.

The state already requires verification of education outside the United States, but the recent reports show the need for "tighter scrutiny," Hill said.

Pennsylvania's medical board is investigating allegations of phony credentials held by doctors in that state, including cases that arose from information supplied by the Postal Service, said board spokesman Stephen Gardner. He refused to elaborate.

Officials in Washington are checking credentials of five residents from medical schools in the Caribbean, demanding in-person interviews as well as new documents from the schools and hospitals where the five have previously worked, said Deanna Dicomis, executive secretary for the state medical disciplinary board.

The board wants to find a way to single out schools where "if they're not out and out selling degrees, they're not doing a good job of teaching or they accept unqualified students," she said. One school offers degrees after six months, she said, not identifying it.

In Rhode Island, Bob McClanaghan, director of the Division of Professional Regulation, said his office had not found any licenses granted to any of the 165 people listed by the Postal Service.

"I think we'll increase our review" of applicants from the Dominican Republic school cited, McClanaghan added.

Contacted about the reports, the American Medical Association said it keeps a databank on physicians, including the names of students who enter accredited U.S. medical schools and foreign-educated graduates who enter approved U.S. residency programs.

AMA spokeswoman Jean Breivogel in Chicago said the association encourages the public to go to local medical societies if they suspect doctors of practicing without a license.

But while some states are stepping up scrutiny of foreign-educated medical students, officials elsewhere said they feel current safeguards are sufficient.

"Our board feels that the way it screens doctors is the best way it can be done," said Charles Janousek, director of the New Jersey Board. "I don't believe there are phonies out there practicing."

"We do look at graduates of Caribbean schools very closely and individually," said Michael Kelly, executive secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Registration in Medicine.

Unorthodox Dentist Caught In Legal Tangle

By KRISTIN GAZLAY
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Signs hanging on the walls of Dr. Barry Solomon's dental clinics proclaim "We cater to cowards," and a 12-foot molar armed with a smile stands guard outside one of the modest brick buildings.

Solomon and his partners have used advertising, discount coupons and word of mouth to attract some 40,000 dental patients and, in an unusual twist, offer a money-back guarantee.

An energetic, self-styled crusader for both tooth and truth, Solomon is not exactly popular with some other dentists.

He attributes the ill will to "competitive jealousy." But Dr. Neil Morgan, a member of the San Antonio District Dental Society, sums up the situation with a pithy question. "You can't like someone who's got a $3 million lawsuit pending against you, can you?" Morgan said.

Solomon and some of his associates in the Family Dental Health Centers have filed a $3 million antitrust suit against the local dental group and the Texas Dental Association, contending they were wrongfully suspended from membership and asking reinstatement. The local group's two-year suspension of the six dentists, beginning in June 1982, made them ineligible for membership in the state group.

The suspensions, the June 1983 suit contends, were a "vindictive retaliatory scheme" intended to "kill price competition in the field of dentistry."

Now the maverick dentist is preparing for a battle that could end with his license being suspended or revoked by the Texas State Board of Dental Examiners.

The board has scheduled a May hearing on a complaint against Solomon, taking exception to his use of the words "totally preventable" in an advertisement concerning gum disease.

"He's a marketeer and marketeering is legal now," said Morgan, who also is secretary of the state board. "It's when he borders and walks the tightrope of legality — that's when the proper authorities walk in."

Solomon, 42, maintains that dentistry has become stodgy and "at least 20 years behind the times."

"Very little of what I've done is innovative or new," he said. "It just hasn't been done in San Antonio. This is a new era of consumer marketing and dentistry is part of that."

Solomon's two roomy San Antonio clinics are full of offbeat touches. He has chairs in the shape of molars. Rainbow-hued signs are posted on the ceiling over some of the reclining chairs, telling white-knuckled patients: "Smile."

Plaques shaped like molars say: "We cater to cowards, because we believe there is never an excuse for an uncomfortable experience in a dental office."

"We were conditioned in dental school to believe that professionals shouldn't advertise," Solomon said. "Well — why not?"

"And if you pay your hard-earned money to a dentist, why aren't you entitled to a guarantee? It's not any different than Sears, Roebuck guaranteeing their products," he said. He said he could recall redoing three people's dental work for free and refunding one woman's money for denture work.

Solomon was suspended from the local dental society in June 1982, allegedly for making false and misleading comments in a television interview.

Solomon said his words were: "We gear our practice towards completely painless dentistry and we do something that is somewhat unusual, we completely guarantee the work to our patients' satisfaction."

He contends the dental society members heard only the buzzwords "painless" and "guarantee," and suspended him without fully examining the statement. The local dental society refuses to discuss the suspension, saying it is an internal matter.

A place in the local dental society is needed for American Dental Association membership, which carries benefits including life and disability insurance, prestige and help in continuing education, Solomon said.

In addition, Solomon's antitrust suit says, several qualified members of his Family Dental Health Centers were refused entrance to the local group simply because of their association with him.

Solomon says that after much argument, the dentists were offered membership on a probated basis — the probation to end "when the new issue of the Yellow Pages comes out," a reference to Solomon's heavy advertising.

On this issue, too, the local dental society has refused to comment. But Dr. Dan Peavy, president of the San Antonio District Dental Society, denied any vendetta against the Family Dental Health Centers.

"Dr. Solomon started the suit and he can stop it," Peavy said. "We're meanwhile having to show his attorneys that there has been no restraint of trade or conspiracy against Dr. Solomon or his partners. We're proving that those accusations are false."

It was a February 1983 newspaper advertisement that prompted the state board's complaint against

Solomon's repeated comments that most gum surgery now is unnecessary — and "almost criminal" — already had outraged many periodontists, but saying gum disease was "totally preventable" could be consumer fraud, Morgan said.

"I don't think any scientist or doctor around the world would say anything is totally preventable, except maybe polio," Morgan said. "He did not qualify his statement in any way."

Solomon counters that "in the light of today's knowledge, surgery is controversial. These guys are getting away with murder by charging a lot of money — plus, you're getting cut on."

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — In what might be called a shady case, two neighbors are going to court in a clash between one family's right to enjoy the sun and the other's desire to keep its trees.

Attorneys for both sides say the case may break new legal ground.

The problem started in 1972 when trees planted by P. Herbert Leiderman, a Stanford University psychiatry professor, and his wife, Gloria, began blocking the sunlight into the yard and home of Rudolph Sher, an engineering professor, and his wife, Bonnie.

"What was once a bright, cheery and warm house has become dark, cold-feeling and depressing," said Victor Sher, who is representing his parents in their "private nuisance" suit against the Leidermans.

"If the trees were reasonably controlled, the Leidermans could have their privacy and aesthetics and my parents could have their solar access," Sher said Tuesday.

Leiderman "has a right to enjoy his trees," said Mark Solomon, the Leidermans' attorney.

"We've made efforts in the past to comply with what the Shers have stated as their needs," said Mrs. Leiderman. "We've cut trees and trimmed trees."

"But there's a limit to the amount of impingement of our enjoyment of our trees that we're willing to accept," she added. "We love our trees. We enjoy the owl that comes in to sit in the tall tree and the birds that have nested there."

Both sides say the Santa Clara County Superior Court suit, which asks that the Leidermans be ordered to cut down some of their trees, trim others and pay $53,000 in damages, could set a legal precedent.

The suit claims the trees and their shadows constitute a "private nuisance" that blocks solar heat and light and causes severe emotional distress. Traditionally, American courts have not permitted "private nuisance" suits to extend to conflicts over sunlight.

But attorney Sher said "the rule against being able to sue for sunlight is an outmoded doctrine that's got to go."

The suit cites the California Solar Shade Control Act, which makes it illegal to maintain trees that shade a pre-existing solar collector, as an example of changing attitudes toward access to the sun.

"Historically, there was a strong public policy to encourage urban development, and the courts took a position that you can't sue for the right to sunlight," Sher said.

Trying To Solve Deficits Proves Quagmire

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional efforts to find a way out of the federal government's red ink quagmire have run into more trouble.

A move by Senate Republican leaders to draft a $150 billion deficit-reduction plan has brought opposition from Sen. John Tower, the influential chairman of the Armed Services Committee, who is warning that a provision to cut the Pentagon budget may be "well beyond the bounds of prudent risk."

In addition, President Reagan reportedly has expressed virtually no enthusiasm for the plan, dimming prospects for the resumption of talks between Congress and the White House on reducing the federal budget deficit.

And the Senate Finance Committee, which is trying to draft its own $100 billion deficit-reduction package, was trying again today. The panel canceled a public session Tuesday while it tried to agree privately on tax provisions affecting health care and the life insurance and construction industries.

Republican Sens. Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico, who heads the Budget Committee, and Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, who heads the Appropriations Committee, have been working to build a three-year, $150 billion plan for deficit reductions as a way to revive the bipartisan talks on reducing federal budget deficits.

The package would contain about $45 billion in savings each from increased taxes, cuts in defense spending and reductions in domestic spending. The rest would come from savings in the cost of interest in the national debt due to the reduced deficit.

To achieve the defense savings, the increase in military spending authority for next year would be held to 5 percent instead of the 13 percent boost that Reagan has requested.

However, on Tuesday, Tower, R-Texas, rejected that approach. "I think it's too low," he said. "I don't think in terms of percentages. ... I think in terms of the threat" from the Soviet Union.

Nonetheless, Tower — who is retiring from the Senate this year amid speculation that he may seek to become secretary of defense in a second Reagan administration — acknowledged that the mood in Congress is to trim the president's $305 billion request in defense spending authority in fiscal 1985, which begins Oct. 1. "I have no doubt we will reduce it and reduce it significantly," he said.

In separate testimony before the Senate Budget Committee, while Domenici listened, Tower scolded "some in Congress (who) are considering reductions from the president's request well beyond the bounds of prudent risk."

Tower also criticized the congressional practice of making defense and foreign policy decisions primarily on political grounds, rather than on actual needs, and belittled legislators who reject the president's budget out of hand.

"Some in Congress have assumed an almost sanctimonious attitude that I believe vastly inflates our individual and collective competence," Tower told the Budget Committee, which has rejected the president's budget outright in the last two years.

Meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., reportedly briefed Reagan on the Hatfield-Domenici plan on Monday. Sources close to the White House discussion who spoke only on the condition that they would not be named, said the president offered neither encouragement nor a negative response to Baker and Laxalt.

The president's reported lukewarm response to the briefing from Baker and Laxalt appeared to reflect a simmering dispute within the Reagan camp over whether to continue the talks that Reagan proposed for finding a $100 billion "down payment" on eliminating deficit federal spending.

The sources said some of the president's advisers have argued in favor of walking away from the talks and blaming congressional Democrats for intransigence while other advisers say the deficit issue is too volatile to simply be abandoned.

Reagan's proposed fiscal 1985 budget projects a deficit of $180.4

billion. The bargaining stalled last week with Democrats complaining that Reagan refused to consider a slowdown in Pentagon spending and Republicans charging that Democrats were engaged in political posturing on tax increases.

After Tower's testimony Tuesday, Domenici conceded that in the current election-year climate in Congress, a $150 billion package of deficit reduction measures probably "is optimum."

Domenici added that if he and Hatfield "don't get a package that gets some consensus (then) we'll just plow ahead" with Budget Committee plans to begin drafting a budget outline on March 26.

"It would be much better if we had consensus with the White House," Domenici said.

Eight Children Of Presidents Attend

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — "Be it known by these presents," read the invitation, "that the Vice President of the United States and Mrs. Bush and the Living Children of the Presidents of the United States will be honored at a festive Elizabethan Feast hosted by Senator and Mrs. Mark O. Hatfield."

Well, not all the children. Eight presidential descendants made it. John Eisenhower, looking more and more like his father; Elliott Roosevelt, close but not the spitting image; Susan Ford Vance, pretty like her mother, and Michael Ford, the son who didn't see very often.

The other descendants, Lyon Tyler, grandson of president John, a professor of history at the Citadel; William Howard Taft III, grandson of WHT-the-first and another grandson, former Sen. Robert Taft Jr. And finally, Margaret Hoover Brigham, Herbert's first grandchild. "Amy Carter wasn't there. Michael, Maureen, Patty and Ron Jr. weren't there. Two of the Fords and several of the Roosevelts weren't. And Margaret Truman got some shots for a trip to Africa, suffered a bad reaction and had to send her regrets.

But it was festive, nonetheless, this party of, by and for Hatfield, one of the more unusual fund-raisers in this town where fund-raisers are like buses: miss one and the next is just down the road.

Hatfield, Republican senator from Oregon, amateur historian of some repute, collector of presidential memorabilia, held his party in the Folger Shakespeare Library, one of the classiest places on Capitol Hill. In the Great Hall, a waterman shucked "Plump Whitstable Oysters" and there was spicy brawn pastry (pork tenderloin) and hard-cooked quail eggs wrapped in Midlothian sausage.

Clearly not your chicken-peas-mashed potato yawner. Shakespeare would have approved.

Remember Troilus and Cressida: "He eats nothing but doves, love; and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love."

They chatted among the Olde English Standing Rib Roasts, hedgerows and gardens of fresh fruits displayed from trellises hanging with fresh grapes, and wheels of country cheeses.

Hatfield, in a brief speech, said politicians owe a major portion of their success to their families — which often are sacrificed to the "higher calling" of public duty.

So, he said, when he was thinking of a fund-raiser for his upcoming campaign for a fourth Senate term, "We thought it was a great idea to honor the descendants, particularly the children and the grandchildren of the presidents of the United States."

There was no more speechmaking, even by the vice president, and very little politicking. Bush circled around, enjoyed some of the oysters, and talked about how different the campaign trail is for him now that he's vice president and not a presidential candidate.

"I always said Air Force Two beats Cessna One," Bush said.

Then, he and Mrs. Bush made their way out of the room, slowly. Just as it was in Richard II: "Then let us take a ceremonious leave, and a loving farewell of our several friends."

Asserts Killing Due 'Flashbacks'

SENECA, S.C. (AP) — A 63-year-old Baptist minister charged with stabbing a fellow minister to death just before Sunday services "keeps confusing things with wartime" and suffers from Korean War "flashbacks," the accused man's daughter said.

The Rev. Otis Pettigrew was charged Sunday with the murder of the Rev. Henry Sullivan, who was found stabbed 12 times in his study at Mount Nebo Baptist Church. A 14-inch butcher knife found at the scene had tape wound around the handle to form a bayonet-like hand guard, police said.

Pettigrew's daughter, Annette, said her father had a nervous breakdown in the 1960s following his honorable discharge after 25 years in the Army.

Inlet Jetties Again Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — A third House committee gave its approval Tuesday to legislation intended to protect North Carolina's Oregon Inlet from being closed by drifting sand, which would deny the state's fishing fleet access to the Atlantic Ocean.

The House Public Works Committee on voice vote approved the bill, which gives about 150 acres of Interior Department land to the Army Corps of Engineers for construction of jetties that would divert the sand.

The House Interior and Merchant Marine committees had approved the bill earlier. It can now go to the House floor.

Oregon Inlet cuts through North Carolina's Outer Banks and provides access to the ocean for the state's commercial fishing fleet. But storms and tide sweep sand into the inlet, and it is constantly threatened with being closed to navigation.

The proposed cure would build two mile-long stone jetties into the ocean to block the drifting sand. The bill before Congress would facilitate the plan by transferring land for the jetty anchors to the corps of engineers from the Cape Hatteras National Seashore and the Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge.

Town Banishes Biting Doberman

SHREWSBURY, Mass. (AP) — Orders to a Doberman pinscher: Stay out of town!

Shrewsbury is off limits to the dog after it allegedly bit a jogger, and another dog owned by the same person could be next, selectmen said Monday night.

The selectmen issued the restriction based on a report from dog officer Shirley Menendez, who said the Doberman, owned by Helen Garabedian, bit jogger Jean Corrao on New Year's Day.

On a unanimous vote, the selectmen approved a motion to "ban the dog from the town which had done the biting" and require that the owner, "restrain the other dog to the premises at all times."

"Mrs. Garabedian told me the dog that bit Mrs. Corrao is now living with her daughter in Worcester," Mrs. Menendez told the selectmen. "However there is no guarantee the dog will stay at the daughter's home."

She said the Garabedians had been chronic offenders, allowing their dogs to roam at will and failing to license them. Mrs. Garabedian did not testify.

The motion included a provision that if the other dog strays, it will be "automatically banished as well."

Slight Pitt Rise in Unemployment

Recently released figures from the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina show that the preliminary unemployment rate rose slightly in Pitt County during the month of January -- from 7.3 to 7.8 percent. This figure shows a considerable decline from the January, 1983 rate of 9.5 percent.

January estimates reveal that the preliminary labor force in Pitt County was 47,420, with 43,730 being employed and 3,690 unemployed.

Compared with December estimates, it appears the labor force decreased by 170 during the month of December and that employment decreased by 380. The number of Pitt County residents who were unemployed increased by 210.

During the month of January annual seasonal influences contributed to the increase in North Carolina's total unemployment rate, which is 8.1 percent.

A Radio Network For Emergencies

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) -- An Air Force-sponsored radio network designed to resist transmission disruptions during a nuclear attack is needed "to make sure key messages can get through from decision-makers to the various armed forces," an Air Force spokesman said.

A $97 million contract was awarded to RCA for building 50 radio relay stations throughout the nation in the Ground Wave Emergency Network, Air Force spokesman John O'Brien said Tuesday. A contract for more stations is expected to be awarded when the first phase is finished in December 1985, he said.

The independently powered stations will be designed to resist heavy power surges from nuclear detonations that would short-circuit most systems, he said.

Changes Proposed in N.C. Education Board

RALEIGH (AP) -- The North Carolina Board of Education would grow from 13 to 21 members and the state's top public school official would be appointed -- not elected by the public -- under a plan recommended by a legislative panel.

The proposal by the Governance Committee of the Public Education Policy Council also calls for the new state superintendent of public education to appoint the controller of the state Department of Public Education.

The state board now appoints the controller, its chief financial officer, who operates independently of the state superintendent also heads a separate department.

Incumbent superintendent A. Craig Phillips said he opposes the expansion of the board or the appointment of the superintendent because the present plan "can be effective and has been effective."

But Phillips said he did favor the elimination of the "dual management" system that provides for an elected superintendent and a controller appointed by the state board.

He said the controller should report to the superintendent.

Committee members said that the changes would make the state's top public school officials more accessible to the public.

The current school board includes two ex-officio members -- the lieutenant governor and the state treasurer -- and 11 members appointed by the governor. The board members serve eight-year terms.

The new plan would increase that number to 21, each of whom could serve up to two four-year terms. The panel would include the lieutenant governor and state treasurer, 11 members elected by the Legislature from the state's 11 congressional districts and eight members appointed by the governor from the state's eight educational districts.

The committee recommended that the plan take effect in January, 1989, which would allow the superintendent of public instruction to complete a four-year term.

The full council is scheduled to consider the proposal March 27. If recommended by that panel, the plan would require a constitutional amendment to be implemented.

Nation's Oil Reserves Ready And Waiting

By BILL CRIDER

Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Deep under the Gulf Coast, in salt caverns as big as 10-story buildings, billions of gallons of crude oil lie in storage, awaiting a crisis.

form of an Iranian decision to pinch off the flow of oil from the Persian Gulf, the multibillion-dollar Strategic Petroleum Reserve could cushion the shock to the United States.

At last count, at the end of February, there were 387 million barrels of high-class crude bottled up in the reserve, which was started in 1975 by President Ford to counter what the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries called the "oil weapon."

That's enough to replace 90 days of imports at 1983's daily rate of 4.2

million barrels a day from all sources, according to Department of Energy estimates.

But many of those sources are nowhere near the volatile Persian Gulf, where Iran has repeatedly threatened to close the 50-mile-wide Strait of Hormuz, the bottleneck between the gulf and the Arabian Sea.

President Reagan has said the United States cannot allow the Strait of Hormuz to be closed. Last Sunday, the Navy destroyer Lawrence fired warning shots to make an Iranian patrol plane keep its distance, and warned an Iranian frigate by radio not to get any closer.

Tankers carry 7.5 million barrels of oil a day through the strait, but only about 500,000 barrels of that goes to the United States. A barrel is 42 gallons.

Oil shipped through the strait makes up 18 percent of the world's daily crude consumption.

As a gauge of how things have changed since the time when OPEC swung a big stick, withdrawals from the oil bank could cover almost 900 days of the U.S. imports that move from the strait — and about seven months of all imports from all OPEC members.

The top five oil exporters to the United States these days are Mexico at 807,000 barrels a day, Canada at 460,000, Venezuela 413,000, the United Kingdom 369,000, and Indonesia 336,000.

In a series of tests, the last one on Feb. 28, officials showed that the five operating storage facilities in the oil bank, with all pumps going, could extract about 3 million barrels a day. Guy King, a Strategic Petroleum Reserve spokesman, said that when the project is completed in 1991, with 750 million barrels banked, it will be possible to draw more than 4 million barrels a day.

"The test was ordered by the inspector general to find out for sure that we could do it," King said. "We hope it laid to rest all those questions as to whether we can get the oil out."

King referred to accusations by a House Government Operations energy subcommittee, headed by Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., that equipment was so poor the SPR ran the risk of being unable to get its oil back out of the salt caverns.

The subcommittee also charged that project officials had a poor accounting system and accused them of paying too little attention to fire protection and failing to monitor contractor performance.

In hearings last year before the subcommittee, project officials said problems had been corrected.

There are at least 350 of the mountain-size domes of salt, underground and out of sight, along the Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama coasts. The salt is so hard it feels like marble when pieces of it are handled, but like any rock salt it can be dissolved by water.

In the six domes chosen as storage sites, water was injected into the salt, the salt dissolved and the brine was pumped out, leaving vast caverns several thousand feet below the grass. Then, in five of the caverns, the oil was pumped in. The sixth is still under construction.

Oil doesn't dissolve salt, so SPR officials compare the caverns to huge glass bottles.

Except for guard and maintenance buildings, the only surface structures at the five storage facilities are pipeline valves and pumps.

Underground pipelines that can pump oil into or out of the caverns connect the facilities to tanker docks and to pipelines that extend up through the Midwest.

One cavern is in use in Texas under Bryan Mound, near Freeport, and another is under construction at Big Hill, near Winnie, Texas.

In Louisiana, the SPR has oil reserves in West Hackberry and Sulphur Mines, both near Lake Charles; Weeks Island, once a big salt mine near New Iberia; and Bayou Choctaw, near Baton Rouge.

King said the oil bank grows at the rate of 186,000 barrels a day, brought in by tankers, and will continue to do so through fiscal 1984.

Thus far, the oil has cost over $12 billion with final costs projected at $30 billion.

Voter Registration Drive Veterans Recall The Risks

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 20th anniversary of the massive drive to register Southern blacks to vote for the first time is being marked by another major registration campaign, this time aimed at urban poor rather than the rural South.

Students and veterans of the 1964 "Freedom Rides" campaign will be asking potential voters to sign up when they visit a welfare office, a "cheese line" or a health clinic.

The campaign, which will take place for 10 weeks during the summer, will attempt to sign up 1 million low-income voters.

During the "Mississippi Freedom Summer 1964" thousands of blacks registered after the Voting Rights Act removed some legal impediments. Three student registrars lost their lives during that campaign.

"It was like guerrilla warfare to go into the delta of Mississippi or the black belt of Alabama," said Atlanta City Councilman John Lewis, a student organizer 20 years ago who later headed the Voter Education Project.

"In those days, people risked life and limb," James Farmer, founder of the Congress of Racial Equality, said. "The students who volunteered, volunteered knowing they might be giving up tomorrow. It's not that kind of situation now. This time, you won't get to be heroes. You'll just get to be tired."

About 100 paid student workers and 5,000 volunteers will be enlisted in "Freedom Summer '84" and the campaign will run from June 1 to Aug. 11.

It is sponsored by the Human Serve Fund, a national non-partisan group which promotes voter registration at service agencies, the United States Student Association, which represents 3.5 million students on 280 campuses in 30 states, and the National Student Educational Fund, a non-profit research and educational organization which focuses on higher education issues.

Lorraine Sheehan, Maryland secretary of state, said the campaign has the kind of support which would not have been dreamed about 20 years ago. "In 1964, many officials charged with responsibility for elections were an impediment to voter registration," she said. Ms. Sheehan represented the National Association of Secretaries of State.

Gregory Moore, a graduate of Ohio University who is president of the student association, said this campaign "sets out to continue the work that was begun on the battlefields of the Jim Crow South. What distinguishes Freedom Summer '84 is its outreach into cities in the Northeast, Midwest, North and South. We take firm exception with the premise that students are apathetic."

Some 66 percent of the 143 million eligible white voters, 59 percent of the 17.6 million eligible black voters and 35 percent of the 9 million eligible Hispanic voters were registered in 1980. About 74 million of the 160 million eligible Americans did not vote in 1980 and 40 million were unregistered.

The campaign will operate on a $250,000 budget in 60 cities in 18 states — California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

The money is to come from foundations like the Field Foundation and the Stern Family Fund and from private donations, according to Hulbert James, executive director of the Human Serve Fund.

About 100 student coordinators will be paid stipends of $100 a week to supervise volunteers who will be deputized to register voters.

"The focus is on low income persons because the high number of unregistered voters is in this category and they are the hardest ones to get at," James said. "We targeted those agencies because that is where the people are."

Girls Recruiting Years In Advance

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — When the Girl Scouts in the Chesapeake Bay Council pledge to "be prepared," they mean it — they're recruiting troops years in advance by giving tiny Scout shirts to newborn girls before they've even left the hospital.

The undershirts, which have "Future Girl Scout" and the organization's logo printed across the front, will be distributed at 10 hospitals in Delaware, Maryland and Virginia in observance of Girl Scout Week, which begins Sunday, said council spokeswoman Claudia French.

The council bought about 280 shirts and paid the printing costs, Ms. French said. Participating hospitals were told "to just keep giving them out until they run out," she said.

So far, "the response has been real good," she added. Presumably none of the potential Scouts have complained, anyway.

Some Questions Hard To Explain

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Lawyers being quizzed by an appellate court usually find an answer for every question, but some questions are harder than others.

Attorney John Wakefield was appealing his client's rape conviction Tuesday before the California Supreme Court. Aside from improperly admitted evidence, he declared, the case boiled down to "his word versus her word."

But, Chief Justice Rose Bird interjected, wasn't the defendant caught naked in the woman's bedroom?

Wakefield hesitated only a moment.

"I knew somebody was going to bring that up," he said. "It is a little hard to explain."

He then changed the subject.

Thousands Of Young People Enliven Campus With ECU's Summer Camps

ECU News Bureau

During the long, hot days of summer, most university campuses are calm, quiet places. But at East Carolina University, the scene is considerably enlivened by the presence of thousands of youngsters, aged 5 through 18, who come to ECU as participants in the university's summer camp programs.

The camps, offered of varying length, emphasize musical performance, the sciences, athletics and special opportunities for children with learning problems.

Some are day programs, for children within commuting distance of Greenville. Others are residential camps, drawing campers from all the Southeastern states, who live in campus dormitories and enjoy ECU's recreational facilities.

Summer camps are a "break-even proposition" for the university, says Julian Vainwright, ECU business manager.

Campers' fees cover the cost of instructors' and counselors' salaries and buy necessary materials.

This summer's offerings range from an institute for tiny violinists to an intensive training session for high school football players — from a personalized program for youth with reading difficulties to a camp for "whiz kids" interested in computers, astronomy or organic chemistry.

All camps are held at ECU, with the exception of a high-interest environmental science camp for children in grades 4-6 which is held at Camp Caroline on the Neuse River.

The school of music sponsors the university's oldest and largest camp, the annual summer band camp, now in its 31st year. Some 400 schools' band musicians will attend, participating in individual lessons, small group rehearsals, large camp bands and classes in theory and conducting. Band camp this year will run from June 24 through July 6.

The music school is also hosting a first-time event this summer, the state's first and only Suzuki Institute, set for July 8-13. Suzuki string and piano students (and their parents) will participate in daily classes and recitals led by noted Suzuki teachers from several states.

Other music offerings are a summer keyboard camp and a summer choral camp, both scheduled for June 17-23.

Camp programs in the sciences to be held at ECU are the annual gifted and talented science camp (July 15-20, seventh and eighth graders; July 22-27, ninth and 10th graders) and the science day camp for primary grade children June 18-29.

Individual help is offered to children with learning difficulties in two summer programs sponsored by the departments of special education and elementary education. These are a July day clinic for children with learning disabilities and the summer reading clinic for students of all levels who need to strengthen their reading skills.

Advanced education students, under the supervision of faculty members, work with participating children individually as needed.

Children can also come to ECU this summer to develop their athletic abilities while they train in Pirate facilities with Pirate coaches and assistants. Most of the sports camps are designed for individual and team players from ages 8 to 18, although one event, the June 10-15 ECU "Pee-Wee" Baseball Camp, is for children as young as 6.

Other summer athletic camps include baseball camp, baseball pitchers and catchers camp, Cathy Andruzzi and Charlie Harrison Basketball camps (for teams and individuals), Ed Emory Football Camp, Pirate Swim School and Pirate Soccer Camp.

A variety of sporting activities, among them racquetball, archery and tennis, are arranged for elementary-aged children enrolled in the annual sports day camp, offered in repeated weekly sessions through ECU's physical education program.

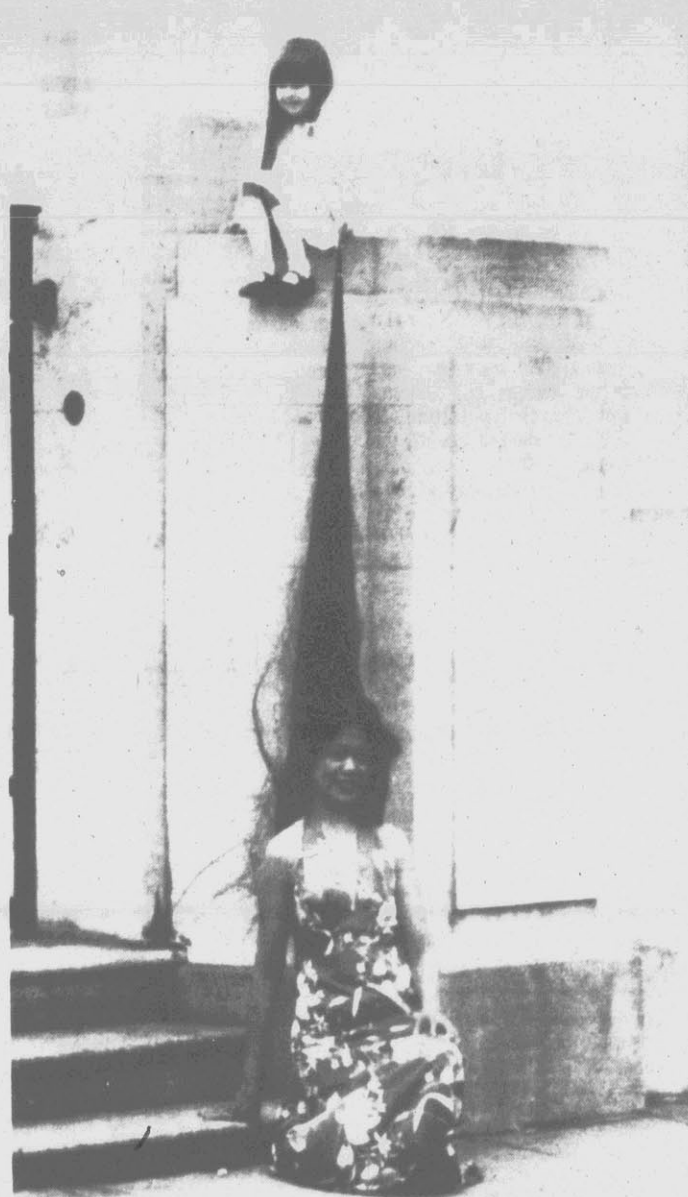

Physical education also sponsors the annual four-day cheerleading camp, for school cheerleaders and those who would like to be. This year's program will be held July 10-13.

Parents interested in enrolling their children in one of ECU's summer camp programs are advised to apply as soon as possible, since some camps are already filled by May. A health statement, signed by a physician, is required along with a deposit.

School counselors and teachers have further information about ECU summer camps. Brochures and applications materials are also available by mail from the sponsoring units.

These are the school of music (all music camps), the department of science education (all science camps), the school of education (reading and learning disabilities clinics), the department of athletics (single sports camps), and the department of health, physical education, recreation and safety (sports day camps session, cheerleading camp). Camp fees cover the cost of activities, instruction, room and board. Some ECU camp programs discourage parents from giving their children spending money. However, if pocket money is allowed, campers might like to have funds for extra snacks and for purchases in the ECU Student Supply Store.

Oppose Sale Of Satellite System

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Reagan administration proposal to transfer the government's Landsat satellite system from the government to private industry could "jeopardize important foreign policy advantages," a congressional study says.

The Office of Technology Assessments says that Landsat's worldwide network, which is used to map, assess and manage land resources, has helped to persuade less-developed countries "to see our use of space as an opportunity rather than a threat."

"Some of these benefits might be lost if a private owner were free to operate Landsat without constraints," the OTA said in a report. "The constraints that would be necessary to protect these benefits would make it difficult for a privately owned firm to succeed without government subsidies."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a broad loss today as the selloff that began late Tuesday continued.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 10.78 to 1,141.75 in the first half hour.

Losers took a 3-1 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said investors' concerns about the federal budget deficit and rising interest rates were exacerbated by remarks this morning by Chairman Paul Volcker of the Federal Reserve.

In a speech to the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, Volcker said the budget deficit was posing increasing risks.

He also said economic activity still appeared to be very strong — an observation that many Wall Streeters interpreted as a signal that the Fed was unlikely to relax its credit policy any time soon.

Interest rates continued their recent rise in the bond and short-term money markets this morning.

Among today's early volume leaders, General Motors dropped 3/8 to 88. Exxon lost 1/4 to 38 1/4, and U.S. Steel was down 1/8 to 28 1/4.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 12.67 to 1,152.53.

Declines led advances by about 9 to 5 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 83.59 million shares, compared with 69.87 million in the previous session.

The NYSE composite index fell 0.89 to 90.07. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index lost 2.60 to 209.26.

'New Beginnings' To Open Monday

The New Beginnings Community Day School will open in Greenville Monday to serve eight emotionally handicapped adolescents in developing the skills necessary to relate to the public school environment, their families and peers, and the world of work.

An open house will be held Thursday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the school site at the Greenville Boys Club, 502 Arlington Blvd.

Cheryl Barnes, director of the program, said the program incorporates ideas she's developed working with mentally and emotionally handicapped children, mostly in Johnston County. Teacher Patience Smith has taught special children for many years and looks forward to having the opportunity to relate to only eight at a time.

The school, part of the Willie M. program court-mandated in 1979, will serve children 13-18 from Pitt, Nash, Edgecombe and Halifax counties. Willie M. children (so-called because this was the designation for a child represented by a class action in the court case) are defined as those who are "emotionally, mentally, neurologically or physically handicapped or possessing assaultive aggressive behaviors toward himself, others or property."

Only eight carefully chosen children will be taught at any given time, with a new student coming in when one "graduates."

Some of those attending will be coming from their own homes; many from foster homes, especially those from out of town. Some will be "graduates" of group homes for emotionally handicapped children; some recently released from state training school programs.

"These are children who have been disruptive in their home and school and community environments for whatever reason," Ms. Barnes said. "We will seek to teach them better ways of dealing with the stress that usually precipitates behaviors which society finds offensive."

Included in the curriculum, in addition to academic subjects, will be vocational programs — first, exploration of various fields of work, then learning of skills necessary to obtain and retain a job, then training in a particular job area.

Each enrollee will also be led to look at what additional academic education is appropriate for him or her. Community resources like Pitt Community College's new diploma program will be explained and made available to them.

Ms. Barnes, a Grifton native, has degrees in special education and emotional disturbance and four years' teaching experience in the public schools.

It's expected that a full-time psychologist will be part of the staff. Initially, however, the program will use the psychological services resources of the Pitt County Mental Health Center.

Niemoeller Dies At 92

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — The Rev. Martin Niemoeller, a pacifist theologian who spent eight years in Nazi concentration camps for leading Protestant church opposition to Adolf Hitler, has died at age 92, the church announced today.

Niemoeller died Tuesday after a long illness at his home in Wiesbaden, the Protestant Church of Hesse and Nassau said in a statement. It did not specify the cause of death.

Niemoeller was West Germany's best known pacifist in the 1950s and 1960s and spoke out against nuclear weapons. He was president of the World Council of Churches from 1961 to 1968.

The Nazis imprisoned him at Sachsenhausen concentration camp in 1937 for criticizing the Third Reich. He was freed from Dachau concentration camp in 1945 by American troops.

He presided over the German Peace Society and was a member of the German section of International of Draft Resisters and was a member of the World Council of Churches.

Grifton Police Study Break-In

GRIFTON — Police continued the investigation today of a Tuesday night break-in at Grifton's Utilities Department and at an adjoining senior citizens facility, according to Chief Linwood Outlaw.

He said assorted hand tools were taken from the department's garage area and a kerosene heater was stolen from the Friendship Club, which is housed in a facility connected to the Utilities Building. The facilities are located on Creekside Drive.

Outlaw said officials are trying to determine the number and value of the tools taken. He noted that the club facility was ransacked, with the contents of office drawers scattered throughout the building.

Entrance to the garage and club were apparently gained through separate windows, he said.

Krzyzewski Voted Top ACC Coach

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Duke basketball coach Mike Krzyzewski guided the Blue Devils to one of the best records in the school's history this season, and because of that he has been named Atlantic Coast Conference coach of the year by The Associated Press.

Krzyzewski is the selection of seven members of the eight-member panel of sportswriters and broadcasters who cover ACC basketball. North Carolina coach Dean Smith received the other vote.

Last season, Krzyzewski brought in five freshmen considered as some of the brightest prospects in the nation. Although the team finished 11-17, he stuck with his youth, a decision that paid off with a 22-8 record this season. It is Duke's best effort since 1978, when the Blue Devils went 27-7 and lost to Kentucky in the national championship.

Now on the verge of earning an NCAA bid, Krzyzewski said his Blue Devils have started a winning habit he can get used to.

"I would like to be 22-8 all the time," he said. "If you're around there, you're doing pretty good. Record-wise, this team has done better than anyone predicted."

Krzyzewski said he thought "things would work out" this season. "We thought we would be a good basketball team at some time. It was tough to find out when that time would be," he said.

That time was Nov. 15, when Duke knocked off Vanderbilt. From there, the Blue Devils reeled off eight straight victories before losing to Southern Methodist in the first round of the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu.

Krzyzewski's success didn't end there. Two more victories in Hawaii were followed by a surprising victory over Virginia in an ACC opener. When the Blue Devils finished with a loss at North Carolina Saturday, they had compiled a 5-2 conference road record. Only the Tar Heels were better and they went undefeated.

"We have proven to be a good team. I don't think we're anywhere near a great team," Krzyzewski said. "We really work together and we really like one another."

One of the sophomores, guard Johnny Dawkins, relinquished some of his responsibilities with the arrival of freshman Tommy Amaker. A consequence has been that Dawkins can concentrate on his offense and he has spent most of the season as one of the top scorers in the league.

Demons Crush Pan Am

By The Associated Press

The defensive denizens for DePaul's fourth-ranked Blue Demons were dominating.

"DePaul made us look like a poor basketball team," lamented Pan American Coach Lon Kruger after DePaul crushed his visiting Broncos 62-29 in college basketball Tuesday night. It was fewest points scored against DePaul since Quincy managed just 22 in the 1954-55 season.

"Our kids were intimidated early. We were surprised by their size and quickness," Kruger said. "We played poorly, no question about it, but DePaul had a lot to do with it."

In other games involving Top Twenty teams, No. 6 Oklahoma downed Missouri 72-66 in the first round of the Big Eight Conference tournament, No. 11 Purdue beat Wisconsin 61-48 and Tulsa outscored Indiana State 110-99 in the opening round of the Missouri Valley Conference tournament.

DePaul, 25-2, which closes out the regular season with Marquette Saturday before advancing to the NCAA tournament, did not want Pan American pulling any slowdown shenanigans, said Blue Demon Coach Ray Meyer.

"We took them out of it in the first four or five minutes because we didn't want them to get into the game and hold the ball," Meyer said.

DePaul raced to an 8-0 lead, then increased it to 22-6 and held a 32-14 advantage at halftime.

Tyrone Corbin and Jerry McMillan scored 12 points apiece for DePaul and Kevin Holmes tossed in 11. Marty Embry grabbed 19 rebounds in 29 minutes for the Blue Demons.

The losers, from Edinburg, Texas, slipped to 13-13.

Top Twenty

Wayman Tisdale once again was the main man for Oklahoma, which downed Missouri in Norman, Okla.

Tisdale scored 31 points as the Sooners, 28-3, tied the 1951-52 Kansas team for the most victories in a season by a Big Eight team. Tisdale broke his own conference single-season scoring total with 830 points.

Missouri pulled within 56-54 with 5:18 left before Tisdale, who had sat out four minutes with four fouls, re-entered the game and carried the Sooners.

Oklahoma advanced to the Big Eight tournament semifinals Friday night in Kansas City, Mo.

In Madison, Wis., Steve Reid scored 23 points and sparked a late streak that helped Purdue down the Badgers in a Big Ten game. The victory enabled Purdue to take a half-game lead over Illinois atop the conference standings.

Wisconsin led 43-42 with 12 minutes left, but Purdue scored the next four points and never trailed again. The Boilermakers, 19-5, sealed the victory by making nine of their last 10 free throws.

High-scoring Tulsa, playing at home, got 33 points from forward Ricky Ross and 25 from guard Steve Harris in its victory over Indiana State. Harris, a junior, became the school's all-time leading scorer with 1,475 points, surpassing Willie Biles, who played for the Hurricane from 1971 to 1974.

Ross had five assists, upping his season total to 175, setting a single-season mark.

Tulsa, 25-3, host Wichita State, which beat Southern Illinois 107-77, in tournament's second round Thursday.

Sumners' Passing Up World Title Defense

EDMONDS, Wash. (AP) — Saying she's gone as far as she can as an amateur, Winter Olympics silver medalist Rosalynn Sumners has announced she won't defend her ladies' world figure skating championship March 19-25 in Ottawa.

Sumners, 19, repeated in a news conference Tuesday that she had not yet signed a professional contract, but was weary of the pressure of amateur competition.

She said on Monday that she had "thought about it real hard, but just came to the decision I didn't want to compete at worlds."

"I've accomplished everything I've wanted to in skating," Sumners, who lost the gold medal to East Germany's Katarina Witt, acknowledged her energy and stamina were down in the wake of the Olympics.

Woods, Jones Lead Hatteras By Tribe

WILLIAMSTON — Lonnie Woods and William Jones combined for 37 points as Cape Hatteras eliminated Chocowinity's Indians 59-41 in the District 1-A High School Basketball semifinals Tuesday night.

In the girls semifinal, Belhaven advanced over Aurora and will meet Chocowinity tonight at 7 p.m. for the championship. Cape Hatteras meets Mattamuskeet at 8:30 to decide the boys title.

Woods fired in 19 points and Jones 18 to lead Hatteras, while Reggie Ross paced the Tribe with 19 points. Melvin Tripp added 10 for Chocowinity.

They had a week and a half layoff because they're not in the conference and they had to make up a special game," Chocowinity Coach DeWayne Kellum said. "Things didn't go our way early in the game, and we had to start chasing them. They have the 6-6 center in the middle and were able to just lob inside to him. It just didn't work out for us."

"We're not upset because we were picked fifth in the conference in a preseason poll of the coaches and

Patriots, Lady Cougs Take District II Titles

LITTLEFIELD — West Carteret jumped ahead of West Craven early in the contest and held off a late rally by the Eagles to take a 72-51 victory in the championship game of the District II 3-A High School Basketball Tournament.

But the girls title game was a different story, as freshman twins Pam and Phyllis Gorham combined for 51 points as SouthWest Edgecombe took the championship with a 55-53 double-overtime victory over North Lenoir. Jennifer Wooten led North Lenoir with 18 points and Helen Wooten added 16.

Donald Johnson paced West Carteret with 16 points, while Jeff Patten added 15 and Mark Mansfield 14 for the Patriots. Tim Cox led the Eagles with 11 points, and Morris Jones added 10.

West Carteret and SouthWest's Lady Cougars now advance to the East Regional Tournament to be played at Wilson Beddingfield.

Rain Forces Area Delays

The East Carolina University-St. Augustine doubleheader scheduled for this after was cancelled, as the rain that fell on Greenville and the surrounding area Tuesday delayed most of the spring sports events scheduled for the day.

The Pirates missed their game against St. Augustine Tuesday, and the games will not be rescheduled.

Meanwhile, several high school teams had to put off 1984 season openers.

Ayden-Grifton High School has not set a makeup date for its game at Kinston, but North Pitt and D.H. Conley will play Friday at 2 p.m. Pamlico and Chocowinity will also meet Friday.

The Manteo-Washington game was to be made up today on the Pam Pack's home field, while Rose traveled to Havelock for a 3:30 game.

East Duplin and Greene Central's tennis match was postponed, as was the Washington-Roanoke contest.

Football Remains At Orange Bowl

MIAMI (AP) — Pro football will not desert the Orange Bowl. The United States Football League has announced plans for an expansion franchise which would play in the stadium. The National Football League's Miami Dolphins plan to leave it after the 1986 season. The spring football league's next stage of expansion will bring a second professional team to Miami as early as 1985, USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons said Tuesday in a news conference at the Orange Bowl. "No franchise has been granted," Simmons said, "but the applications are all ready for quick signatures. We have reached substantial agreement on all points. We're coming here to tell you that we want to come to Miami and to the Orange Bowl. We think it's a very good football area," he added. The announcement came on the heels of a news conference Monday in which Joe Robbie, owner of the Dolphins, made public his plan to move the team to a proposed new stadium in northern Dade County. Robbie wants his team to open the 1987 season there. Both announcements come one week before Dade County residents were to vote on a $55-million bond issue to renovate the Orange Bowl. Few details were made public because the USFL application must be approved by the Miami City Commission Thursday night. Mayor Maurice Ferre denied the announcement was hurried to counter the publicity Robbie got Monday, then reversed himself. "We're not here to talk about Mr. Robbie," Ferre said, but he added, "The timing speaks for itself. Joe Robbie isn't the only one who can play that game." No prospective owners for the USFL franchise were identified, though Simmons said several had applied and one already had been approved. Florida already has two USFL teams — the Jacksonville Bulls and the Tampa Bay Bandits. Simmons said the league expects to increase from its current 18 teams to 20 for the 1985 season. USFL attorney Don Glazer said Miami, if the city commissioners grant their approval, is assured a franchise. "The chances of not having a team in Miami in 1985 are nil," Glazer said. "All of the terms have been agreed to."

Those terms include a 15-year Orange Bowl lease. Regardless of the commissioners' decision, at least one USFL game will be played in the Orange Bowl next year. Bandits owner John Bassett says he has worked out a deal to play an exhibition game Feb. 10 in the stadium against either the new Miami team or some other USFL club.

Dooley Responds To Criticism Of Trip

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — A University of Georgia boosters club visit to South Africa will provide a chance to offer "honest and candid disagreement" with that country's racial policies, said football Coach Vince Dooley in response to criticism from black leaders of his upcoming trip. Dooley said he does not understand "why a visit to South Africa must necessarily be taken for approval of the very real evil of racism there. Visits to such places as communist China and Eastern bloc countries in Europe were never taken as an endorsement or approval of the communist philosophy or system," he said. Dooley commented Monday after Southern Christian Leadership Conference President Joseph Lowery sent him a telegram saying the trip raised questions about Dooley's attitude toward the exploitation of blacks, including black athletes at the university. Lowery called the 2½-week trip planned for late April "an insult to the cause of justice and to all Americans who love liberty." His telegram came on the heels of criticism of the trip by another prominent black leader, state Sen. Julian Bond of Atlanta.

Bucks Down Atlanta

By The Associated Press
Losing three straight games at home after winning 26 of 30 is testing the limits of Atlanta Hawks Coach Mike Fratello's patience. "I wonder if some of those guys care. I wonder how much they care," Fratello said after the Milwaukee Bucks beat Atlanta 109-104 in overtime Tuesday night. "I saw the same mistakes I've seen for the last 14 days. I saw plays that would make you think we hadn't practiced in a week." The defeat was the fifth overall for the Hawks, who fell 7½ games behind the Bucks in the National Basketball Association's Central Division. Atlanta's record is still 26-7 at home, but the Hawks fell to 30-31 in all games. "I've seen junior high and high school teams that could run the break better than we did tonight," Fratello said. "This should be an answer to those who say we don't run the break enough. When we run the break, they run us into submission."

Sidney Moncrief scored 25 points, Marques Johnson 22 and Paul Pressey 21 for the Bucks. Dan Roundfield led Atlanta with 22 points, but Dominique Wilkins shot only 3-for-20 from the field and finished with nine points. Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Boston 108, Washington 85; New York 124, Seattle 110; San Antonio 129, Cleveland 122; Detroit 124, Chicago 108; Kansas City 128, Portland 110; Denver 130, Houston 128 and Golden State 125, Indiana 109. Moncrief sent the Bucks-Hawks game into overtime when he hit a jump shot from the top of the key with one second left in regulation. "It was really our third option," Moncrief said of his crucial field goal. "That was not the shot I was looking for. It was a tough shot, but fortunately it went in. That shot seemed to set the tempo for the overtime." "His strength against someone like (Atlanta center) Tree Rollins is from the outside," Bucks Coach Don

Nelson said. "We encourage him to shoot from the outside." Neither team led by more than seven points, with the Bucks taking the largest lead of the game at 87-80 with 5:30 left. But six straight free throws by the Hawks brought the game back into reach. The Hawks lost despite the return of two players who had been out with injuries. Eddie Johnson, returning to the lineup after missing 15 games, scored 19 points, while Sly Williams, out since December, returned with 13. "It's unfortunate I couldn't come back on a winning note," Johnson said. "Sly and I haven't been playing with the group and we got a little winded. It hurts when you play someone in your division and lose, for it's a two-gamer." Pistons 124, Bulls 108. Isiah Thomas scored 30 points as Detroit stayed only 2½ games behind Milwaukee by winning at Chicago. Reserve guard Vinnie Johnson added 26 points for the Pistons, including seven straight at the start of the fourth quarter to give them a 101-85 lead. Quintin Dailey led the Bulls with 27 points. Celtics 108, Bullets 85. At Landover, Md., Boston got 26 points from Robert Parish and 19 from Scott Wedman to beat Washington without injured star forward Larry Bird. Parish and Dennis Johnson combined for nine points during a 13-4 Celtics spurt in the second quarter that gave them a 51-41 halftime lead. Boston led the Bullets by as many as 23 points in the second half. Knicks 124, Sonics 110. Bernard King scored 29 of his 40 points in the second and third quarters while hitting 12 of 14 shots during that span as New York coasted past visiting Seattle. King scored the last eight New York points during a 21-4 streak that turned a 28-20 deficit into a 41-32 lead. He had 15 more points in the third quarter as New York built its lead to 95-90 and the SuperSonics, who got 25 points from Al Wood, trailed by as many as 22 points in the final period. Kings 128, Trail Blazers 110. Kansas City also won at home as Eddie Johnson scored 16 of his 30 points in the third quarter against Portland. The Kings hit 16 of 18 field goals in the third period for an 88-77 lead, but the Blazers rallied to cut the deficit to 92-88. Then an 18-4 streak by Kansas City gave the Kings a comfortable 110-92 advantage. Spurs 129, Cavaliers 122. San Antonio broke an eight-game losing streak as Mike Mitchell scored 37 points and George Gervin 31 against visiting Cleveland. Mitchell, who hit 16 of 19 from the field in the game, had 17 points in the first quarter. The Cavaliers, who got 25 points from Cliff Robinson, cut a 13-point deficit to 55-54 in the second quarter, but they never pulled even. Nuggets 130, Rockets 128. Denver won its sixth straight game at home, defeating Houston behind Kiki Vandeweghe's 45 points. The Nuggets, who also got 28 points from Dan Issel and 22 from Alex English, built an 89-72 lead midway through the third period. The Rockets, who were led by Ralph Sampson with 33 points and Lewis Lloyd with 30, cut the margin to 111-110 with 4:36 left, but two baskets by English and two free throws by Vandeweghe rebuilt the edge to seven. Warriors 125, Pacers 109. At Oakland, Joe Barry Carroll scored 20 of his 32 points in the third quarter to lead Golden State past Indiana. Keyed by Carroll, the Warriors outscored the Pacers 37-25 in the third period to turn an 11-point halftime deficit into an 83-82 lead. Then Purvis Short scored 14 of his 28 points in the final period as Golden State pulled away.

Driesell Sets Goal For ACC Tourney

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Lefty Driesell may not win the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament for the 15th consecutive season, but the Maryland coach has a goal for the 14th-ranked Terps when the eight-team playoff starts Friday. "The more games you win in the tournament, the higher you're ranked in the NCAA," Driesell said at a news conference Tuesday. "We'd like to be ranked in the top 16, so we'd get a first-round bye." So, in that respect, Driesell said, the ACC affair "still has a lot of importance," though not nearly as much as in the days when usually only the tournament winner was given an NCAA bid. Driesell said it didn't matter to him in which NCAA region the Terps were assigned, "as long as we're in there," but he was emphatic that he wouldn't want an early game with nearby rival, second-ranked Georgetown. "Give me somebody else," he said. "I want the easiest team I can get a hold of."

How about facing Georgetown as one of the Final Four teams in Seattle? "I wouldn't mind that," Driesell cracked. "I'd play anybody in Seattle... even the Celtics." Right now, however, Driesell insists he and the Terps are not worried about which teams may offer the opposition somewhere down the line. "I always tell the players that the most important game is the first game," he said. "After that, you go from there. I'm just concerned about beating North Carolina State." The Terps, 20-7 in overall competition, finished second in the ACC regular season standings at 9-5. State, the defending national champions, have a 19-12 record and were seventh in league play at 4-10. Although Maryland has won all four games played by the two teams during the past two seasons, the Wolfpack has a whopping 9-1 advantage over the Terps in ACC tournament competition including 6-1 against teams coached by Driesell. The most memorable was State's 103-100 overtime victory in the 1974 championship game, a pulsating contest viewed by many as the best ever in the ACC tournament. State then went on to win the national title. Maryland has lost in the ACC finals five times during Driesell's 14 previous ventures into the tournament, the last four times by a total of seven points. Driesell said he'd like to win the title just once, but tried to keep it in perspective. "If we don't," he said, "it won't be the first one we ever lost."

Parker 'Hurt' By Stargell's Book

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Outfielder Dave Parker says he was hurt by critical remarks made about him in a book by former teammate Willie Stargell, but won't believe them "until I hear it from his own lips."

"Yeah, I hit that one for Pops (Stargell)," Parker said of a home run he hit Tuesday in the Cincinnati Reds' 6-5 victory over the Houston Astros in their spring training baseball opener. Parker also made a diving catch in the outfield.

"I never did anything but praise and preach about that man... and to think, I was going to wear No. 8 (Stargell's number) over here. I'd be tearing that thing off my back today," said Parker.

Parker, who left the Pittsburgh Pirates last fall to pursue free agency, was described as a chronic complainer in a book co-authored by Stargell: "Willie Stargell: An Autobiography."

"I didn't look like a guy who hates baseball, did I?" Parker said after the game.

Stargell, who retired after the 1982 season, said Parker, his roommate, became aloof toward fans and teammates after becoming a $1-million-a-year player in 1979.

Stargell wrote that Parker became a "chronic complainer" and wouldn't take advice from teammates.

Stargell wrote that he would have retired sooner but Parker had asked him to "hang around and help me work through a few things."

"I'm hurt," said Parker. "I've never done anything but praise the man as a universal figure and very humane individual. Apparently, he has chosen to set our friendship, or what I thought was our friendship, aside as a means of selling books or to further discredit me with the Pirate organization."

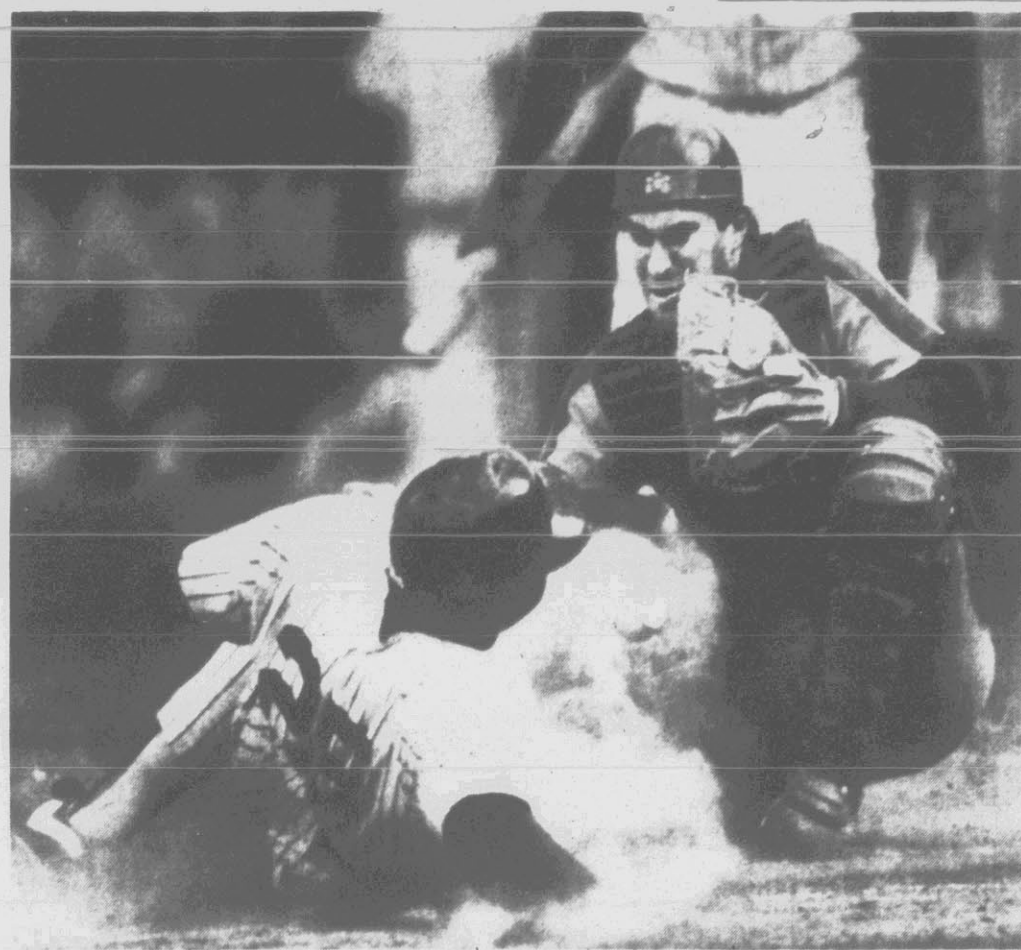

"I don't know. This just takes away a lot of the respect I had for the man," said Parker, adding he was unable to contact Stargell.

He was most upset by the indictment that he had played out of "hatred and revenge."

"It's assinine to say I played baseball for revenge and hatred. It's my livelihood. I have a family and bills to pay. I love this game and that's all the motivation I need," said Parker.

Parker denied he isolated himself from the Pirates players. "I'm a grown man. I don't need to go to cry on their shoulder. I have a mother and father for that. He says he stuck around for me in '82."

"I remember, in '78, when they didn't even want to sign him and I went to bat for him."

A's Down Brewers

By The Associated Press
Arizona's high temperatures and low humidity usually produce a lot of runs and hits during baseball spring training games.

And that's what happened when the Cactus League season started Tuesday as the Oakland A's, with 12 hits, downed the Milwaukee Brewers, with 11, by a 6-5 count in 10 innings.

Bill Almon's two-out single in the bottom of the 10th drove in pinch runner Tom Romano from second base with winning run, pinning the loss on Chuck Porter. The A's had tied the game in the ninth on Mitchell Page's solo homer off Pete Ladd.

Reliever Bill Caudill, acquired by Oakland in an off-season deal with Seattle, pitched two perfect innings for the victory.

Cecil Cooper, Charlie Moore and Jim Gantner each had three hits for the Brewers, who took an early 5-0 lead. Cooper knocked in two runs with first-inning double and a third-inning single.

Milwaukee starter Mike Caldwell tossed three shutout innings before Oakland bounced back on a three-run homer by Carlos Lezcano in the sixth and Dan Meyer's three hits.

In other spring training games, all in Florida, Dave Parker and Dave Concepcion homered as the Cincinnati Reds topped the Houston Astros 6-5.

Parker, signed by the Reds as a free agent, homered in his first at-bat for Cincinnati, which was playing for the first time under new Manager Vern Rapp.

Houston raked Cincinnati starter Mario Soto for five runs in three innings. Alan Ashby doubled in two of the runs. But the Reds rallied to win against reliever Joe Sambito, who was making his first appearance in nearly two years after arm surgery. Tom Lawless tripled home Paul O'Neill with the tie-breaking run in the seventh.

Craig McMurty and three Atlanta relievers combined on a four-hitter, and Terry Harper scored the game's only run on a seventh-inning throwing error by Bob Bailor, as the Atlanta Braves nipped the Los Angeles Dodgers 1-0. Fernando Valenzuela pitched three scoreless innings for Los Angeles.

Wade Boggs and Jim Rice cracked consecutive triples during a three-run first inning against Jack Morris that carried the Boston Red Sox to an 8-4 triumph over the Detroit Tigers.

Steve Kemp and Butch Wynegar delivered RBI singles as the New York Yankees scored four runs in the first inning and went on to beat the Montreal Expos 7-3. John Montefusco was the winning pitcher.

Julio Cruz belted a two-run double off Baltimore starter Scott McGregor as the Chicago White Sox beat the Orioles 4-1.

USFL Owners Open Checkbooks

By The Associated Press
John Bassett has been through it all before. He says he has no intention of going through it again, and he thinks his fellow owners in the United States Football League should apply the brakes to the kind of spending that has made Steve Young a $40 million man.

Bassett owns the Tampa Bay Bandits, a team built on a relatively light payroll, running back Gary Anderson's $450,000 salary being by far the heaviest. In the world of the USFL, where only the Denver Gold turned a profit, the Bandits' ledgers showed one of the league's smallest losses.

A decade ago, Bassett was a founder of the World Football League. In an effort to gain what is known as "credibility," Bassett signed the National Football League trio of Larry Csonka, Paul Warfield and Jim Kiick to a three-year contract collectively worth $3.5 million for his Toronto Northmen... which quickly became the Memphis Southmen... which almost as quickly went out of business along with the rest of the WFL.

On Monday, Young, the former record-breaking quarterback from Brigham Young University, signed sports' biggest contract, a $40 million, 43-year package with the USFL's Los Angeles Express. Of the total, $34.5 million is deferred over the final 37 years.

When the USFL began playing barely a year ago, Bassett was fond of saying he was one of the league's poorest owners as opposed to being one of the WFL's richest. He decried the contract tendered Young by J. William Oldenburg, the head of the San Francisco-based financial firm of Investment Mortgage International Inc.

"Sports history is full of the likes of this," Bassett said. "It has established that you end up with one league or you go out of business."

Leonard Tose, owner of the NFL's Philadelphia Eagles, said he thinks the USFL is looking toward a merger. "If they're basing their hopes on three or four teams getting into the NFL, they're on the wrong track," Tose said.

Bassett reflected: "All this reminds me of the old commentary that goes, 'When a man with money meets up with a man of experience, the man with money usually ends up with the money and the man with the money ends up with the experience.' I have no intention of going bankrupt signing wealthy players. I have had the experience some of our owners have now. I have lost my $10 million."

USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons, too, expressed concern over the signing. He often said last year and this that the USFL would not engage in a salary war with the NFL but rather would limit itself to "selective skirmishes."

"The idea was to be reasonable," he said. "Then came the competition. Once it starts, it's tough as hell to stop it. ... As commissioner, I don't like it. It worries me. I do not think it is in the best interest of professional football or the league, but what is to be done? These are wealthy businessmen seeking to build and sell a product and to compete."

Not all of those businessmen were pleased by the latest acquisition by the USFL. William B. Dunavant Jr., owner of the Memphis Showboats, said Young's contract and the salary war with the NFL are "ridiculous. I'm against this kind of thing. We want to be competitive as a football team in the USFL, but something like this doesn't make economic sense to me. I simply cannot conceive of anything like this."

Mike Lynn, general manager of the NFL's Minnesota Vikings, called the contract "the craziest, dumbest and poorest" business deal he has ever heard of in sports. "It had to be a desperate move," Lynn said.

Carl Peterson, president and general manager of the USFL's Philadelphia Stars, said he had confidence in Oldenburg's financial ability. "Oldenburg did things that were smart," Peterson said. "He knows how to make money, and get money for you in the future. I'm talking about annuities, insurance payouts, tax deductions. I feel confident that it will be good for him financially."

And Ladd Herzog, vice president and general manager of the NFL's Houston Oilers, said the contract "isn't as big as it sounds. I think it's an effective way of getting a lot of attention for the USFL and the LA franchise. The Express is going poorly at the gate. This gets the fans' attention. It's partly a gimmick to get publicity."

But Berl Bernhard, owner of the USFL's Washington Federals, insisted it is "a superb time for the league. It continues to give a stamp of approval to the USFL. But, of course, it's upped the ante for everyone, too. But maybe that's the way to go. With every guy we get, we are moving closer to the NFL in parity."

In one respect, Young's contract isn't all that different from some other recently signed contracts in both the USFL and NFL. The present value of Young's contract — the amount to be paid out over the four-year playing period — is about $5.5 million. The remaining $34.5 million in deferred payments can be covered by $1.5 million invested now at the 11 percent prime interest rate. That puts the four-year value at about $7 million in "real" dollars.

According to sources knowledgeable about pro football contracts, running back Herschel Walker's contract with the USFL's New Jersey Generals is worth $5 million over three years and, like Young's, much of it is deferred. Running back Mike Rozier's contract with the USFL's Pittsburgh Maulers is worth $3.3 million over three years — not deferred. Last Saturday, running back Marcus Dupree signed a $6 million, five year contract with the USFL's New Orleans Breakers.

In the NFL, quarterback Warren

Moon's contract with the Oilers is worth $5.5 million over five years — and is payable over 11 years. Quarterbacks Dan Fouts of the San Diego Chargers and John Elway of the Denver Broncos are in the $1 million-a-year range. And when running back Walter Payton signs with the Chicago Bears, his contract is almost certain to exceed that.

Like Bassett, Lamar Hunt was a prime mover in the founding of a rival league. In Hunt's case it was the American Football League in 1960. His Dallas Texans of that era are now the NFL's Kansas City Chiefs. The AFL, which began business with each team spending about $1 million a year for everything — salaries, uniforms, travel, office space — merged with the NFL in 1966. Less than a decade later, the NFL fought off the challenge of Bassett and the WFL.

"When I hear what USFL teams are reported to be paying," Hunt said, "I think of that great line Clint Murchison (owner of the NFL's Dallas Cowboys) said when the WFL started signing players. He said, 'If they succeed, let's not go after their players. Let's go after their accountants.'"

Oliver Serious On Hitting

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Al Oliver was well established as one of baseball's most consistent hitters before young teammates began asking for advice.

"I love to talk about hitting. But it probably wasn't until about 1977 that players approached me. They thought I was mean," Oliver said with a laugh in the training camp of the San Francisco Giants, his new team.

"Like Ty Cobb, I guess. But I understand Cobb really was mean," Oliver added.

If Oliver, 37, plays with a scowl it's a look of concentration, especially when he's crowding the plate against pitchers. He has a .305 lifetime batting average and will be shooting for his ninth consecutive .300 season in 1984.

Oliver was the Montreal Expos' first baseman the past two seasons. He led the National League in batting with a .331 average in 1982 and hit exactly .300 last season.

He was traded to the Giants Feb. 27 for pitcher Fred Breining and another player, partly because first base was the most sensible spot for the Expos to place newly acquired Pete Rose. The Giants sought help at first after losing Darrell Evans, who became a free agent and signed with the Detroit Tigers.

Oliver, who knew a trade was possible and also lived with the same situation late last season, was happy when the uncertainty ended three days into his spring training workouts with the Expos in Florida.

He reported to the Giants quickly and was talking hitting with his new teammates, including pitchers, soon after reaching training camp.

"I'm always interested to hear what pitchers have to say. I like to know how they think when they're out there on the mound," Oliver said.

"My attitude toward pitchers is that you must respect anyone with a ball in his hand. Some deserve more respect than others."

His hitting theories, Oliver said, are his own, and about 30 years old.

"I've never tried to overpower the ball. I try to use the whole field," he said. "I think I've remained within my limits as a hitter."

"If they pitch me inside, where my power is, I might hit a home run. But my first choice is hitting line drives."

He hit a career high 22 homers in 1982, only eight last year, and has 214 in 15 seasons.

Oliver's career has been a model of consistency, in contrast with that of a boyhood friend.

Larry Hise, who played in high school with Oliver at Portsmouth, Ohio, had a fine rookie year, slumped his way back to the minor leagues, then returned to become one of the American League's top sluggers until a shoulder injury ended his career.

"With Larry, it was the confidence factor. Once he got that back, he was as good a hitter as anybody in baseball," Oliver said.

"When we played high school and American Legion ball, I would say, 'I'm going to get three hits today.' Larry would say, 'I might get three hits today.'"

Pirates Front Office Full Of 'Hypocrites'

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirates pitcher John Candelaria, upset by the National League team's refusal to renegotiate his contract, has described Pirates officials as "hypocrites."

"They negotiated a new lease with the city and they say they won't negotiate players' contracts. That makes them hypocrites," Candelaria told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

"I like Pittsburgh and I like the people there. The club management I don't like," he said.

Pirates Executive Vice President Harding "Pete" Peterson objected strongly to Candelaria's remarks.

"His job is to pitch, not to analyze what went on between the Pirates and the city. He's paid to win and he's paid handsomely," Peterson said Tuesday.

Candelaria, a veteran left-hander, is in the second year of a four-year contract worth about $700,000 a year.

He displayed his discontent with the Pirates' front office by not reporting to spring training camp until Feb. 29, 11 days after the other

Pirates pitchers and the first day that a player could be fined for not reporting to workouts.

Peterson has declined to say whether he's made any attempts to trade Candelaria or any other player.

"If you would ask me if I tried to trade Candy or say Jason Thompson or Tony Pena, my answer would be the same. It would be no comment," Peterson told the newspaper.

Candelaria, 30, who lives in nearby Sarasota, reportedly wants to renegotiate because of the contract signed by reliever Kent Tekulve. Tekulve's three-year deal with an option year is worth close to $4 million.

"I don't know if it's true and I don't care," Tekulve said. "If Candy is upset... well, he has been upset before."

"Candy is a good person and a great pitcher. He'll pitch. Don't worry about that," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner. "He'll pitch for the Pirates, too, because he loves to play and he is a competitor."

Thompson Pushes Hoyas To New Heights

WASHINGTON (AP) — As he has done for the past 12 years, John Thompson is prodding, pushing his players and Georgetown University to new basketball heights. Thompson's team, led by 7-foot center Patrick Ewing, a tenacious defense and a bench that goes 10 deep, has captured the Big East Conference regular title and compiled a 26-3 record, rising to No. 2 in the weekly ranking. The climb is that much steeper when one recalls the humble beginnings of the Thompson era at Georgetown. Georgetown's basketball fortunes sank to new lows under the weight of an administration committed to academics over athletics. In 1972, following a 3-23 finish, Georgetown turned to Thompson. A product of the inner city, Thompson had returned to Washington after starring for Providence College and serving a stint as a back-up to Bill Russell on the Boston Celtics, to become one of the most respected high school coaches in the area. "When I first came to Georgetown we had to beg, pay money, to have games put on local television," said Thompson, whose team received over $500,000 for the telecast of one game last year. "We've won a reasonable amount of games and turned the program around," says Thompson, Georgetown's all-time winningest coach with 254 victories. On a personal level, the giant of a black man who overcame poor reading skills as a youngster to earn a teaching certificate and coach of a major university, Thompson says, "I was a success the first time I walked through the door here." He refuses to evaluate his performance as a coach. "I guess I'm not the worst in the business, but I don't evaluate me that much. I don't sit down and look at the stats and say this is my 250th win. Those are things I will certainly appreciate one day when I retire," Thompson said. "I have become a better basketball player after I retired then when I was playing. I imagine I will be a better coach after I retire because I will sit down and evaluate then. If you do that while it is going on you will find yourself slipping." Meanwhile, there is a perception of Thompson as an over protective taskmaster. Thompson disagrees. "One of the things I am not interested in supplying is love. If that develops that's fine and I like it but I don't think one should substitute education and teaching with love. These players came to Georgetown to contribute to their education whether it be on the basketball court or in the classroom. Love they can get from their family and friends," Thompson says. "I'm not trying to be popular. Sometimes when you are pushing a person to learn and help him develop you don't always have time to explain it to him." The media, angry and suspicious of Thompson's penchant for limiting access to his players, cries for an end to "Hoya Paranoia." "I don't feel you can over protect someone," Thompson bristles. "What kind of man would I be if I had these kids run hard up and down the floor, play hard for me, as a coach and then run to you and overexpose their weaknesses for the benefit of some newspaper. These kids make a living for me." He says the criticism reminds him of the reputation his coach with the world champion Celtics, Red Auerbach, received. "I always listened to people talk about Red Auerbach who didn't play for him and they always perceive him as a lot tougher than I remember him," he says. "And believe me Red could be very tough. My players know that I can become disturbed and I can become emotional." With seven straight 20-victory seasons, he's taken his team once to the Final Four. He takes this year's squad to the Big East tournament in Madison Square Garden as a clear favorite. Its first game is Thursday night. Thompson has been chasing a national championship for 12 years.

Two years ago he reached the finals against North Carolina, only to lose on a last-second basket. "If we lose it will hurt but I have hurt every year for the past 12 years because we haven't won the national championship. We want the national championship but at the same token I wouldn't say these kids are failures if we don't get it. When we lost in the finals it was strange to do so well and go so far and feel so bad." Secure in his position, Thompson occasionally entertains thoughts of leaving the Hilltop. "Everybody entertains thought about leaving, but as long as the people here are fair to me and I can work with them honestly I see no problem. I like Georgetown. If I felt I didn't feel comfortable at the school I would leave. "I've reached the point now where people are calling me asking me for my advice on who they should get. And of course that's a sneaky way of finding out if you're interested too," Thompson winks. "I feel flattered about it. But you never know when or what. Sometimes you just come to a period when you need a change."

Colts Nearing Move To Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Baltimore Colts coach Frank Kush, owner Robert Irsay's son Jimmy and the team's general counsel are in Indianapolis where the National Football League team may sign a 20-year lease to play in the Hoosier capital's 63,000-seat domed stadium. Kush and Irsay flew into Indianapolis International Airport under assumed names Tuesday night. They declined, however, to connect the trip to the relocation of the franchise. Irsay would not divulge his father's whereabouts. "We're just here on a visit," Kush said. "Other than that, I can't say." Also reported to be in Indianapolis was NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle. WJZ-TV in Baltimore reported Rozelle's presence. But an NFL spokesman said he was not aware a move by the team was imminent. Meanwhile, the Baltimore Sun today quoted an unidentified source as saying information from "three different directions" was that Irsay was ready to sign an agreement that would bring to an end the Colts' 31-year stay in Baltimore. The Sun quoted the source as saying "my best guess is that he's ready to sign. It's either done now, or for some ceremonial reasons they've elected to do it tomorrow (today)." "We are aware — I've been told by reporters — that there is an assemblage of people there (in Indianapolis), but until we hear something from Mr. Irsay we have no idea what that grouping means," said Pat Bernstein, Baltimore Mayor William Donald Schaefer's press secretary. "We haven't heard officially any statement from Mr. Irsay and we go on the assumption that Mr. Irsay would keep his word to the mayor, that is, that he would not move the team without calling and warning the mayor first," she said late Tuesday night. Michael G. Chernoff, the team's general counsel who has been involved in the negotiations, arrived from Chicago Tuesday and spent the afternoon and evening talking with city representatives. He also declined comment.

Indianapolis Mayor William H. Hudnut left Washington late Tuesday afternoon and returned home. Meanwhile, Maryland's economic development secretary said earlier Tuesday night he was very optimistic about putting together a financial package which could be presented to Irsay in the next day or two.

Believe Amtrak Derailment Cause Is Found

Condemn Russian Downing Of Jet

MONTREAL (AP) — The International Civil Aviation Organization, on a 20-2 vote, has condemned the Soviet downing of a South Korean jetliner last fall and reprimanded the Soviets for keeping information from its investigators.

Soviet warplanes shot down an off-course Korean Air Lines Boeing 747 on Sept. 1, killing all 269 people on board.

The governing council of the ICAO, a U.N. agency, on Tuesday adopted a resolution that "condemns the use of armed force which resulted in the destruction of the Korean airliner and the tragic loss of 269 lives."

The impact of the resolution is basically political, because the ICAO does not have the power to take disciplinary action.

ICAO investigators concluded that human error probably caused the jumbo jet to drift 300 miles off course into Soviet airspace over the Sea of Japan. The Soviets claimed the aircraft was spying for the United States.

The ICAO report said there was no evidence to support the Soviet allegations of spying.

The resolution embraced the ICAO investigators' findings. The council, made up of representatives from 33 nations, adopted the resolution by a vote of 20-2. Nine members abstained from the secret balloting and two were absent. The Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia had opposed the resolution.

Tuesday's resolution went beyond one the ICAO passed in September. That one "deeply deplored" the downing of the jumbo jet.

The United States presented the later resolution. Canada and Japan were among the co-sponsors. The passengers on Flight 007 included Americans, Canadians and Japanese.

South Korea's Foreign Ministry today issued a statement welcoming the resolution.

U.S. delegate Donald Segner hailed the vote, which followed a week of debate on the agency's report that was completed in December and submitted by Secretary-General Yves Lambert.

"The world is now more aware of the actions that were taken" by the Soviets, and all states must recognize the need for safe and free passage by civil airliners, Segner said.

Soviet delegate Boris Ryjenkov called the ICAO action "completely unjustified and flying in the face of the facts." He repeated the claim that the report was based on "doctored" U.S. and Japanese transcripts of monitored radio communications between Soviet fighter pilots stalking the jet and ground controllers.

Canada's delegate, Pierre Arpin, said the "original critical assumption was the one made by the perpetrators of the act."

South Korea was not represented on the council, but its observer, Keun Park, said the scars on his nation "are still deep and fresh."

He said the Soviets could have forced the plane to land, searched it, interrogated the crew and examined flight recorders.

The Soviets refused to cooperate with the ICAO investigative team, saying their own inquiry should take precedence.

KITTRELL, N.C. (AP) — A failed wheel bearing and a broken axle that caused an Amtrak train to derail will be analyzed by investigators to see if they can determine why the parts failed, a member of the National Transportation Safety Board says.

Investigators "will be examining the axle and the bearing at a laboratory in Wilmington, Del., to determine exactly what happened," Dr. Vernon L. Grose said Tuesday at a news conference in Henderson.

He said that it was too early to tell why the axle and bearing failed, or if tighter inspection regulations were needed for the parts. But he said that damaged bearings and axles caused three similar derailments in the past eight years.

The train derailment occurred Monday night in Kittrell and left 50 people injured and scattered cars along an embankment.

"There was nothing the crew could have done to prevent the accident," he said. "There would have been little warning with something like this."

He said the bearing and axle were in the third engine pulling the train, and the crew was in the lead locomotive.

The derailment, which is being called the worst accident in Vance County history, left about 3,000 feet of track torn up. Amtrak officials estimated damage to the train at $1.5 million and about $55,000 to the track.

Thirteen of the 50 people injured were admitted to Maria Parham Hospital in Henderson, hospital spokesman Gerald Fuller said Tuesday. The only other admission was a Columbia, S.C., man taken to Duke University Medical Center with neck injuries.

Grose credited luck — and re-designed railway passenger cars — with keeping injuries to a minimum.

"There are good places to have a derailment and bad places to have a derailment," Grose said, noting that the crash site is within a few miles of a trestle over the Tar River. "We were very fortunate in this case."

"It could have been much worse had the train gone the other way over the embankment and down onto U.S. 1," he said. "We're always pleased when the injuries are no more severe than they are."

Grose said his inspection of the cars Tuesday showed they had weathered well the force of the crash. He said that was due, in part, to design changes in cars after a similar crash in the 1960s.

"We are very pleased with the crash-worthiness of the cars," Grose said. "We found only one loose seat in our inspection this morning."

He said rescue and evacuation crews made up of volunteer firemen and rescue squad members did "marvelous work."

Emergency workers first handed injured passengers down the muddy embankment into waiting ambulances and then led uninjured passengers out of the cars and down the slippery slope.

Grose said a team of NTSB investigators would not leave the crash area until at least today.

He said a final report on the derailment probably would not be published for about six months.

Railroad work crews Tuesday afternoon had set one passenger car back on the tracks and had only about 100 yards of track left to repair so temporary service could be restored.

S. Owen Pride of Seaboard Railroad Systems said a siding on top of the embankment would be repaired first to let trains pass the wreckage.

Uninjured passengers taken off the train were examined at the National Guard Armory in Henderson before being taken to area motels for the night. Tuesday, they were taken to their destinations by bus.

"They just didn't want to travel any more last night," Pride said. "Most of them said they just wanted to get a hot bath and a night's rest before continuing."

Listed in stable or satisfactory condition Tuesday at Maria Parham Hospital were Minnie T. Forte of Durham; Leroy Polite of Jacksonville, Fla.; Rosena Wright of Bennettsville, S.C.; Charles Little of Columbia, S.C.; Deborah W. Snell of Southern Pines; Aija J. Dolinich of Orange, N.J.; Vincent S. Williams of Jacksonville, Fla.; Denise Craney of Ottawa, Canada; Mary Jane Cunningham of Pinehurst; Arthur L. Bass of Jacksonville, Fla.; Jean Mazingo of Forestville, Md.; Solomon McRay of Jacksonville, Fla.; and Andrew C. Liddelow of Queens, N.Y.

Admitted to Duke was Richard Owen Martin, who was listed in fair condition Tuesday after surgery.

Overturns Sentence

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Supreme Court has overturned the death sentence of an Edgecombe County man, saying even first-degree murder does not always warrant the death penalty.

In a 5-2 decision, the court ruled Tuesday that Charles David Stanley of Rocky Mount, convicted of the shooting death of his estranged wife in 1982, should not be sentenced to die because the murder was not "especially heinous, atrocious or cruel" as defined by state law.

Stanley will serve life in prison. "Any murder shocks our conscience," Justice James G. Exum Jr., wrote in the opinion. "But there is no evidence that the defendant inflicted suffering upon the victim, either physically or psychologically, beyond that ordinarily suffered by anyone who is shot to death."

Stanley was convicted of firing nine shots from his car at Joyce Stanley, his estranged wife, as she stood outside her home.

Testimony in the trial showed that Mrs. Stanley uttered the words "please, Stan" just before Stanley fired the first shot.

After Stanley was convicted, the trial judge instructed the jury to consider the death penalty based on the aggravating factor that the crime was "especially heinous, atrocious or cruel."

But in Tuesday's decision, the court ruled that the aggravating factor didn't apply in Stanley's case.

The evidence that the victim uttered the words "please, Stan" before her death "does not support a reasonable inference that the victim was mercilessly shot to death while begging for her life," the ruling said.

In Stanley's case, because the court ruled invalid the single aggravating factor submitted to the jury as a reason for the death penalty, a life sentence automatically was substituted.

Network To Use Closed Captions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CBS television network, after resisting the use of a special "closed-captioning" system for deaf viewers for four years, says it will begin using the system with next fall's TV season.

The network will transmit three hours of captioned prime-time programming a week starting with the 1985 season, CBS Television President Tony C. Malaro announced.

How Tar Heels Voted In The House, Senate

ROLL CALL REPORT SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Feb. 23-29.

House

LANGUAGE — By a vote of 265 for and 120 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 2708) to upgrade foreign language instruction at all levels of American education.

The Department of Education would funnel federal grants through state agencies to institutions that expand and improve their foreign language curricula, at a cost to the Treasury of $50 million annually during fiscal 1984-86.

Supporter David Bonior, D-Mich., said America's trade, diplomacy and national security have been harmed by its growing illiteracy in foreign languages.

Opponent Gene Taylor, R-Mo., said matters of curricula "are best left to the local school boards, state governments, and colleges and universities themselves."

Members voting yes wanted a new federal program to upgrade the teaching of foreign languages.

Voting yes: Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Britt, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: James Martin, R-9. Not voting: James Broyhill, R-10.

Senate

CREDIT CARDS — By a vote of 22 for and 66 against, the Senate refused to permanently prohibit merchants from charging extra for credit card purchases. The vote occurred during debate on S 2336, which was sent to the House.

Separately, the Senate by voice vote extended until May 15 a temporary ban on credit card surcharges. The House and Senate soon will make a final decision on whether surcharges of up to 5 percent are to be permitted on plastic money transactions, which are estimated at $250 billion annually.

Supporter Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., said surcharges would "work a tremendous hardship on ... the middle-class families who have no alternative but to use credit cards for many of their purchases."

Opponent Slade Gorton, R-Wash., called it "the purest of free market exercises" to permit merchants to recover the cost of handling credit card sales.

Senators voting yes wanted a permanent ban on credit card surcharges.

John East, R, voted no. Jesse Helms, R, voted no.

EXPORTS — By a vote of 20 for and 74 against, the Senate rejected an amendment to retain a president's strong power to block farm exports. This was a victory for the farm lobby and a defeat for President Reagan.

The vote left intact a proposal that both houses approve any lengthy agricultural embargo imposed by a president to punish an enemy nation. The proposal is part of an exports bill (S 979) that seeks to harmonize America's trade and foreign policies. The bill was headed for final passage.

Farm interests cited former President Carter's 1980 embargo of grain sales to the Soviet Union. They said it failed to remedy the Soviets' invasion of Afghanistan but cost farmers and branded the U.S. as an unreliable supplier.

Sponsor John Heinz, R-Pa., said the amendment was necessary to prevent "a congressional intrusion into the foreign policy area."

Opponent Alan Dixon, R-Ill., said "embargoes, or even the possibility of embargoes, make it much more difficult for our farmers to meet increased foreign competition."

Senators voting no wanted Congress to be able to end a president's embargo of farm exports.

East voted no. Helms voted no.

NUCLEAR SPREAD — The Senate rejected, 38 for and 55 against, an amendment that opposed an absolute ban on nuclear exports to nations that refuse international inspection of their supposedly peaceful nuclear operations.

This preserved language to ban the sale of nuclear technology and fuel to national, such as Israel, Argentina and South Africa, that reject inspection by the International Atomic Energy Agency. The vote occurred during debate on S 979 (above).

The White House said it favors tougher policing of nuclear proliferation by opposes the absolute ban called for in S 979.

James McClure, R-Idaho, who sponsored the amendment, said the ban would "cut off dialogue with the very nations whose conduct we hope to influence ..."

Opponent Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said "almost certainly" Libya will eventually get nuclear weapons if the U.S. fails to take tough action to slow the worldwide spread of nuclear material.

Senators voting no wanted to ban nuclear exports to nations that decline international inspection. East voted yes. Helms voted yes.

Guilty Plea To Embezzlements

WILMINGTON (AP) — A Wilmington businessman has pleaded guilty to 50 counts of embezzlement, most involving money he collected for Christmas gifts that he never delivered, authorities say.

Edward Charles Parker, 35, also pleaded guilty on Tuesday in New Hanover Superior Court to six worthless check charges, failure to maintain a $25,000 bond and failure to maintain a trust fund, court officials say.

Parker had operated Family Savings of Wilmington, a discount-buying club that offered such items as auto supplies, tools, furniture and toys.

He was arrested — and his business subsequently closed — in December after customers complained to police they were unable to get refunds for Christmas gifts they had paid for but which never arrived, said Patrick A. Zeman, a Wilmington Police Department investigator.

Will Seek New 'Racism' Aura

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights plans a study to determine whether there is a "new racism" directed against Asian Americans, especially new immigrants.

Witnesses have told local hearings on race relations of "an increase in racial incidents, from racial taunts in schoolyards to tire slashings and shots fired into buildings inhabited by Asians," according to Commissioner John H. Bunzel.

Farm Work Among Most Dangerous Fields

By DAVID McCORMICK
 Associated Press Writer
 EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — While new safety requirements have made life easier for miners, construction workers and those in many other occupations, farms have emerged as one of the most stressful and dangerous workplaces left in the nation.

About 3,300 people died in farm accidents in 1982, according to the National Safety Council.

That contrasts with 122 people killed in the same year in the nation's coal mines, commonly considered among the more hazardous places to work.

And a study by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health found farmers second to laborers in the number of deaths from heart and artery disease, ulcers and nervous disorders.

"I'd have to say that paints a pretty accurate picture," said Harold Hartman, a grain farmer in Haubstadt, Ind.

"You never know from one year to another what your weather's going to be, what your yield is going to be, what your price is going to be or anything," he said. "And that's stress."

There are far more people earning their livings on the land than in all types of mines — 3.4 million, not counting spouses and children, in 1983, compared with 1.1 million mine employees, said the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

It is the lack of control over production and market that make farming so stressful, said Dr. Barry Johnson of the occupational health institute's Cincinnati office.

"We find stress almost everywhere people are caught in jobs that present them with requirements for success that exceed their capacity to control," he said.

Ronald Steinkamp, who farms about 200 acres near Evansville, agrees.

"Everybody else prices their product," he said, "but we ask, 'What are you going to give us?'"

Stress on the farm is nothing new, but is compounded by the huge sums of money farmers risk each season to get out a crop, said Bob Fetsch, an agricultural extension agent with the University of Kentucky.

"Farmers today need so much capital that many have over-extended themselves financially and are having a hard time making ends meet."

Steinkamp said he and his fellow farmers are acutely aware of financial pressures.

"It's hard to go to sleep at night when you need rain and know that if you don't get any you're not going to have anything," he said. "We say to ourselves there's nothing we can do about it so there's no sense worrying about it, but anybody who tells you he's not worrying is lying."

Financial worries also wear on the farmer's family to an unusual degree, Fetsch said.

"A decision to buy a new tractor may well mean having to put off a new refrigerator or drapes," he said.

Bill Field, an agricultural extension agent with Purdue University who specializes in farm safety, said he believes the problem of stress is overplayed in relation to the number of accidental deaths.

"One of the things I get into trouble saying at meetings is that maybe farmers just have more free time now to worry about their problems. I doubt if their problems are any greater than they were 50 years ago, and I would dare venture that running a shoe store in downtown Lafayette, Indiana, is at least as much a source of stress as running a farm."

But Field said he finds most fatal farm accidents are stress-related.

"Usually it's a case of somebody feeling anger, frustration or being in too much of a hurry," he said.

Steinkamp, who farms more than five times as much land as his father did, disagreed that the modern farmer's problems are nothing new.

"We're really rolling big stakes now," he said. "You have one bad year and you might not be able to refinance."

Hartman agreed that today's farm life is far different than that he knew as a boy in the 1930s.

"Years ago, prices were a lot more stable, and it didn't cost nearly as much to get a crop out. Today, something happens across the ocean and it affects your price dramatically. Things used to not be that sensitive."

Both Field and Fetsch have developed stress reduction and safety programs they present at Farm Bureau meetings and other agricultural forums, and say they must work hard to attract interest in them.

Fetsch said he gets his best results with "captive audiences."

"Most of the people we see are highly reluctant to see a psychologist, but if we can get them to an extension meeting there's more of a willingness to talk about stress."

Field said he believes there is far more potential for reducing farm fatalities than farm stress.

He noted that 45 percent of all farm deaths involve people under 16 or over 65, and said increasing their supervision "would go a long way toward reducing overall death rates."

Field said he found it frustrating that 75 percent of farm deaths involve either tractors or the equipment pulled behind, yet "people go out every day and buy brand new tractors without rollover protection."

The actual number of accidental deaths on farms is declining each year, Field said, but continues to rank higher on a percentage bases as other, more closely regulated industries develop new safety controls.

"Farming is less dangerous than it was 50 years ago and is getting safer every day, but other industries are getting safer faster."

If you are shown a bridge hand where the low cards are signified by an 'x', you might be looking at a misleading situation. To illustrate, on this hand it is the six and seven of spades that are the key to the winning line!

With seven tricks in hand and his side not vulnerable, South's opening bid of four hearts was eminently correct. North could hardly do less than raise to slam.

West led the queen of clubs, and a casual look at the hand diagram might lead you to believe that the best chance for slam is to try the spade finesse first. If that fails, you can next hope for a 3-3 spade division and, should that suit not split favorably, you can still fall back on a diamond finesse — a combined chance of about 84 percent.

Pretty good odds, but doomed to failure as the cards lie. Declarer looked deeper into the position, and saw that he had a foolproof line as long as East had no more than four clubs.

Declarer won the ace of clubs and ruffed a club high. He crossed back twice to the table with the eight and ten of trumps, each time using the entry to ruff a club high. In the process he drew the outstanding trumps and stripped East of clubs. Now declarer led a spade. Had West played low, declarer intended to put in the board's six, forcing East to win and end playing him. However, West was awake and inserted the nine. Declarer won the king, returned to hand with the ace of trumps to bring about this position:

'Mama Malone' At Least Innovative

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Mama Malone, a Brooklyn cooking-show host, relies more on intuition than mathematical measurement for her meals. The same goes for CBS' "Mama Malone," which comes from the heart rather than the networks' comedy cookie cutter.

"Mama Malone," debuting tonight, is not an especially funny sitcom, but it is worth a look anyway because of its innovative format, family warmth (though exaggerated) and the dynamic performance of its star, Lila Kaye.

Mama is an Italian widow who does a cooking show from her apartment. Viewers depending on Mama for their dinner menu will have to fall back on TV dinners. Very little cooking gets done. Her specialties are folksy sermons, motherly advice and right-wing philosophy.

In tonight's episode, she questions the credentials of a Puerto Rican priest, spits on the lasagna when the hated New York Yankees are mentioned and manages to solve this week's family crisis — whether her grandson had stolen somebody's lunch money — all within 30 minutes and in full view of the camera.

The second episode deals with her reaction to her brother and his live-in girlfriend, a stripper. Issues here are more personal and comically broad than the more cosmically serious concerns on "All in the Family."

Mama is not Archie Bunker with an apron, even though she uses ethnic slang as liberally as salt. Her ways are set, not immovable. Her views don't stem from ignorance or misguided patriotism. They come from tradition, religion and the knowledge that they made life better and more comprehensible for her.

What makes this show unique is its open kitchen, let-all-the-dirty-laundry-hang-out, loony-bin look. Relatives, priests and much of the neighborhood drop by the set during Mama's cooking show. Their relations and discussions are the main course. So what if tonight's lasagna gets burned?

Everything takes place over the stove, with Mama chatting to her friends inside and outside the home simultaneously. It's a half-hour slice of life, including commercials, and we see it from the same angle as the

Paul Bogart, who hasn't done full-time direction of a series since "All in the Family," brings a sense of TV reality to "Mama Malone." The fictitious show's commercial breaks and credits become the real ones on CBS. The make-believe show's forgotten director (Raymond Singer) occasionally interrupts the family saga to remind Mama that the roast is ready.

What's unusual is that, except for Mama, the passersby don't mug much for the cameras. (As if an intrusive TV camera could really record reality without becoming part of it.)

On "Mama Malone," the TV experience becomes the experience. This goes beyond "The Burns and Allen Show," when George Burns would go upstairs, watch the show on TV and become an inside observer and part of the audience. Here, life becomes TV — and vice versa — the ultimate, voyeuristic soap opera.

What makes it all work better than the material is Miss Kaye, a British actress whose multi-role performance in "Nicholas Nickleby" caught the producers' attention. Miss Kaye is a bundle of warm emotions and down-home editorials — all of which she shares openly and shamelessly with her audience.

Other characters include her younger brother the lounge singer

HAPPY COUPLE — Simon Le Bon, lead singer with the rock group Duran Duran, shares a smile with companion Clair Stansfield of Toronto Monday night. The pair, who have been romantically linked, were together at an awards ceremony after the band finished its two-night visit. (CP Laserphoto)

'Lace' Final Chapter Top-Rated For Week

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The final chapter of ABC's "Lace," the miniseries about a movie sex goddess trying to discover her mother, became the top-rated TV show of the week and second highest-rated movie of the season, just behind another ABC offering.

But CBS remained on top of the overall ratings for the week ended March 4.

For the season, "Lace" ranks only behind the ABC movie, "The Day After." It squeezed ahead of "Something About Amelia" by only a tenth of a rating point.

The week before, the first of the two-part "Lace," based on Shirley Conran's best-selling novel, tied for first with CBS' "Master of the Game."

CBS won the week for the second time in a row and ABC again was second. NBC was a distant third.

CBS' coverage of the Grammy awards was second for the week, and ABC's remake of "A Streetcar Named Desire" tied for sixth place with CBS' "60 Minutes."

The huge audience for "Lace" offered further evidence that the three commercial networks get bigger ratings with original movies and miniseries than with theatrical blockbusters. The made-for-TV productions have consistently gotten better ratings this season than the theatrical movies. In fact, only four theatrical films were successful in the ratings.

The growth of pay cable, which gets first crack at the big movies, has cut away at the network's potential audience for the blockbusters. By the time the movies reach the network the excitement has waned. Network officials have said that original productions will become even more important in the future, while the role of the theatrical movies will decline.

Bob Hope's Hawaiian special, opposite "Lace" last Monday night, also took a bit of a drubbing. It tied for 19th place with ABC's "Webster."

CBS won the week with a rating of 18.8 in the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey. ABC was second with 18.1 and NBC was third with 13.8. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 18.8 percent of the audience was tuned to CBS.

The network also maintained its lead in the ratings for the season to date. The ratings: CBS 18.2, ABC 17.4, NBC 15.1.

(Don Amendolia), her divorced daughter (Ranee Heller) and her grandson (Evan Richards) — none of whom seem memorable.

Playwright Terrence McNally (Broadway's "The Ritz" and "The Rink") created the series, which had 13 episodes ready for a scheduled debut in the fall of 1982. But it was bumped for more episodes of "Filthy Rich," a surprising summer sensation.

A year and half later, Harvey Shephard, CBS' programming whiz, said this was the first appropriate opening for "Mama Malone." He seems sincere since CBS paid a heavy financial tax to keep the cast available and ready for future production, if this current trial run is a success.

To be a hit, though, "Mama Malone" will have to add another ingredient to the recipe of love, novelty and Lila Kaye — laughs.

Polish Golden Gate For The Democrats

By THOMAS MURPHY
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — They're stocking up on souvenir donkeys, returning the rebuilt cable cars to the streets and reserving 20,000 hotel rooms.

But most of all, San Franciscans are hoping. Hoping the whole world will watch as the Democrats pick their candidate by the Golden Gate at the Democratic National Convention.

From Mayor Dianne Feinstein to the crab cocktail vendors on Fisherman's Wharf, residents of the City By The Bay are gearing up for the campaign — not the presidential race, but a publicity blitz aimed at boosting San Francisco's image.

Recent reports have been unkind to San Francisco, alternately portraying it as a homosexual haven or a quiche eater's delight. Rarely have the stories recalled the city's stunning topography, extraordinary architecture or healthy budget surplus.

Witness Chicago newspaper columnist Mike Royko. In an essay that ran on front pages here, he called San Francisco "a city of slender, swiveling hips." A CBS "60 Minutes" report on the mayor's recall fight last year angered Ms. Feinstein and irritated many others because of its emphasis on fringe elements of the politically active gay community.

San Franciscans see the convention, July 16-20, as a chance to set the record straight. It will bring, along with 25,000 conventioners, the media.

George Kirkland, director of the San Francisco Convention & Visitors Bureau, expects 10,000 to 15,000 journalists.

"We expect they'll treat San Francisco fairly and equitably," he said. "But we're not taking that for granted."

The city will spend up to $7 million on the convention, a record for a host city, and the convention is expected to generate $36 million in retail sales, two-thirds of it in hotels and restaurants. But city officials believe the real payoff will come later.

"If the convention goes well, we think it could attract seven or eight like-spending conventions to our city and an infinite number of visitors who might see it on television or read about it," said Nancy Pelosi, chair of the city's Host Committee.

To guide the media, the city has recruited California pollster Mervyn Field to set up a committee of local journalists to assist visiting colleagues.

"I think San Francisco will hold up well under the scrutiny," said Mrs. Pelosi. "While they may focus on one or more element of the city, they will also see a city that knows how to work together for common goals and people who love their city."

"That's a feeling, an attitude that we have to convey," she said. "And we hope to do that by treating the press very professionally, making every story available to them. If they want to cover the Castro (heart of the gay community), we'll have somebody there who can talk to them in any language."

Preparations for the convention itself are elaborate and expensive. The city will spend $4.5 million to modify the 27-month-old Moscone Center, installing 20,000 gray upholstered seats (the Democrats picked the color) and hanging broadcast booths above the convention floor, an area the size of six football fields.

The Democrats also got the Hilton Hotel, the convention headquarters, to hold the price of drinks to $2 and demand an additional 274 toilets in Moscone Center, hourly restroom inspections and 10 city transit passes.

City merchants are excited about the prospect of increased trade. A half-block from the convention hall, Henry Parecki, owner of Henry's Sandwiches, predicts business will quadruple during the four-day meet.

"If I stay open later, I'm talking sixfold," he said. "It could be anywhere up to 400 sandwiches a day..."

"It's going to be great, with the cable cars and the Democrats," said Mike Guardino, who's been selling crab cocktails at Fisherman's Wharf since 1971. "It's going to be booming. It's gonna be a great year."

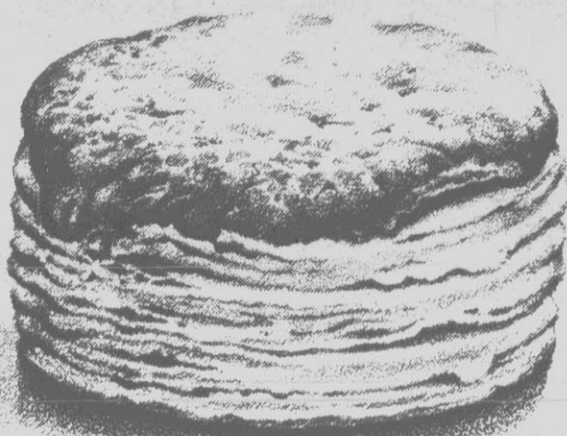

Severin Sivertson, manager of the Sea Captain's Chest souvenir shop at the Wharf, said he was stocking up on the usual assortment of buttons, banners, T-shirts and donkeys.

"You know, ceramic donkeys with San Francisco on the side," he said. "Isn't that the party symbol, a donkey?"

Nigerian Press Is Still Free

By W. JOSEPH CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — When a military coup ousted Nigeria's civilian government last New Year's Eve, the new leaders sealed off the country but they didn't stop the presses of Nigeria's 16 daily newspapers.

The widely circulated papers were on the stands New Year's day with details of the coup while Nigeria remained under a dusk-to-dawn curfew with borders sealed and communications cut.

The major dailies — The Guardian, The National Concord, The Punch, The Daily Sketch, The Daily Times, among others — had skyrocketing sales and held on to the prestige and influence they have gained in the past 10 years.

Since the takeover, the newspapers have not hesitated to criticize and advise the military regime in a way that would be unthinkable almost anywhere else in Africa, where as a rule the press is tightly controlled.

However, a challenge is looming between the military authorities and the outspoken newspapers.

The leader of the military regime, Maj. Gen. Muhammadu Buhari, has scarcely concealed his distaste for Nigerian newspapers and has vowed to "tamper with" press freedoms, saying that irresponsible journalism can threaten national stability.

The regime's second-ranking officer, Brig. Tunde Idiagbon, has warned that the military would not tolerate published "untruths intended to cause disaffection." He cautioned newspaper executives against "sensational stories" based on anti-regime remarks by former civilian leaders who fled abroad.

Some analysts suggest that Buhari is still smarting from published allegations that 2.8 billion naira ($3.7 billion) was missing from accounts of the Nigerian National Petroleum Corp. when he was the company chairman under an earlier military regime.

An official inquiry found no wrongdoing and affirmed that the corporation's books were in order.

"The enduring lesson of the 2.8 billion-naira episode is that there ought to be a constant free flow of information throughout society, actively encouraged and nurtured by government," The Lagos Guardian said in a recent editorial.

The newspapers began developing a critical voice in the early 1970s, in the midst of 13 years of military rule in Nigeria. Press assertiveness intensified in the four years of civilian administration that ended with Buhari's coup, and now it is felt that moves to curb the press would be vigorously contested.

"The Nigerian press has gone well beyond the point where you can pocket it quite easily," said Eddie Iroh, managing editor of The Guardian, an independent newspaper that is generally ranked with The National Concord and The Punch, both of Lagos, as the best in the country.

The Buhari regime "is dealing with a press that is far stronger now than at any time in the past," Iroh said.

"It would be an absolutely fatal move (for the Buhari regime) to take action against the press," said a veteran Western diplomat who monitors the Nigerian media. "The Nigerian press is extraordinarily responsive to public opinion, and shifts in public opinion show up quite quickly in the papers."

Although only 25 percent of Nigeria's estimated 100 million people are literate, the outspoken press is often identified as a reflection of the opinionated nature of Nigerians.

"The press is no more than a reflector," said Tony Momoh, a writer-lawyer and former editor of The Lagos Daily Times, the country's largest newspaper with a circulation of about 350,000. "To want to suppress freedom of the press would be to suppress freedom of expression of Nigerians. And that would be very difficult. Nigerians are very outspoken."

The press did little to investigate corruption the military leaders say they have found in the civilian government of President Alhaji Shehu Shagari. Misconduct was widely suspected while Shagari was in power, but specific revelations have only emerged since the military coup.

"The Nigerian press can't be said to be a crusading press," said Momoh, who successfully resisted official moves in 1980 to force him to reveal confidential sources for a report that federal officeholders were soliciting public works contracts.

Iroh added in an interview that press inquiries into suspected corruption were usually thwarted by a lack of access to official records.

On the whole, said the Western diplomat and other independent observers, while the press did not go to any lengths in investigating corruption, it did accurately identify and reiterate the drift and failings of the civilian government in the weeks before the coup.

Say Wolf Is Given 'Bad Rap'

By MATT MYGATT
Associated Press Writer
ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Children's literature has given wolves a bad rap — Little Red Riding Hood's grandmother was a blue plate luncheon, the three little pigs were harassed and the boy who cried wolf got one.

"In our society, we are literally raised from the cradle to be afraid of wolves," said Curtis Carley, endangered species biologist with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"The general public has had a very strong opinion in regard to wolves — they think they're diseased, have rabies, 5-inch fangs, pull babies off porches," he said.

"They really are quite shy," Carley said. "And like any wild animal, they don't want to have anything more to do with man than they have to."

People are now becoming more educated in the ways of wildlife and perhaps more tolerant of predators, Carley said.

It's a timely shift of attitude for the Mexican wolf — there may be less than 25 roaming northern Mexico, he said.

"But any number in the wild is a wild guess," Carley said. "For all practical purposes, the Mexican wolf is extinct in the United States, but we think there is an occasional lone wolf that may wander into southern New Mexico and Arizona."

The Mexican wolf's range stretches from southern New Mexico and southern Arizona to central Mexico near Durango — a lot of territory for scientists to look for a few animals.

And a lot of territory for a male wolf looking for a female to help propagate the species, which once numbered in the thousands, Carley said.

"The consensus is that chances of the species continuing to exist in the wild without significant help are very remote," he said.

"They obviously are occurring in very low numbers, they are widely dispersed and therefore there is a very low opportunity for reproduction in the wild and a low survival rate of any offspring."

There are three subspecies of gray wolves in the United States — the Mexican wolf; the eastern timber wolf, primarily in Minnesota and a few adjacent Great Lakes states; and the northern Rocky Mountain wolf, limited to mountainous areas of Montana, Idaho and Wyoming, Carley said.

"In general, the Mexican wolf is slightly smaller than other subspecies of gray wolves," he said. "The Mexican wolf ranges in weight from about 45 to 90 pounds ... They're all fairly similar looking."

The wild Mexican wolves, which roam mountains interspersed with grasslands, could have their ranks bolstered from 18 animals in captivity used as breeding stock.

The Rio Grande Zoo at Albuquerque has four, the Wild Canid Research and Survival Center near St. Louis has six and the Arizona-Sonora Desert Museum at Tucson, Ariz., has eight.

Last year was a banner year for the Mexican wolves — 15 pups were born in captivity and eight survived, Carley said.

"In the long run, for survival of the species, we as a rule of thumb try to average about a 50 percent survival rate because that is accepted as what, over a period of years, they have in the wild," he said.

"In the long run, we maintain a stronger genetic stock in captivity," he said.

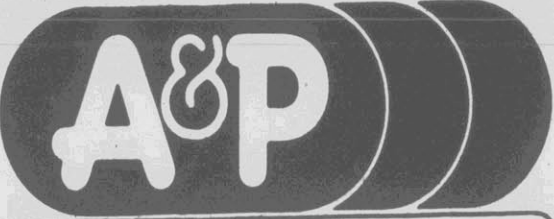

The breeding program for the Mexican wolf at the Arizona museum was placed on hold this year because of space limitations.

Jim Johnson, chief of endangered species for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's southwest region, said his agency was helping zoos maintain Mexican wolves to bolster their population in the wild.

Asking A Medal For 'Bubble Boy'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Texas congressmen have offered a resolution urging President Reagan to award a special medal to David, the "bubble boy" who died after a life-long bout with a rare immunity deficiency.

The measure, which says the boy "fully deserves the acclaim of the American people," was introduced by Reps. Mickey Leland and Michael A. Andrews, both Democrats.

The 12-year-old David, whose last name has not been revealed to the public, spent most of his life in special sterile bubbles at the Baylor College of Medicine-Texas Children's Hospital in Houston. He died Feb. 22 after undergoing a bone marrow transplant. He suffered from an immunodeficiency that leaves its victims unable to fight any disease.

Catalogs Tree Pest At Center

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Packages wrapped in brown paper sit piled high on a slate table, bearing return addresses from such exotic places as Czechoslovakia and Sri Lanka.

A huge open card file containing thousands of cards, and marked with a rainbow of colored dividers, rests atop an L-shaped desk.

Four assistants work at a long table, their backs to a counter that features a glass-enclosed live scorpion, busy beetles the size of silver dollars and a mounted tarantula big enough to fill a shoebox.

The central actor in the scene is Dr. Stephen L. Wood, professor of zoology at Brigham Young University, curator of insects at BYU's Monte L. Bean Life Science Museum and considered the world's foremost authority on bark beetles — the pests that kill more trees every year than do forest fires.

The packages, card file and assistants are all part of one of the most extensive reference systems of scientific literature ever undertaken.

At the request of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and Canada's Department of Agriculture, Wood is collecting and cataloging every article published worldwide on the bark beetle families Scolytidae and Platypodiidae since 1758, the year animal nomenclature began.

USDA personnel will use Wood's reference work to help them control the destructive species of bark beetles and accelerate forest research. One species, the mountain pine beetle, has killed billions of trees during the past decade.

"With the catalog, USDA researchers will save hours of library work finding out what's been written on a certain species," Wood said.

The tall, bespectacled professor was working on another project, classifying the 6,000 Scolytidae species and the 1,000 Platypodiidae species, when a colleague persuaded him to apply for a grant to catalog the bark beetle literature.

"I wasn't expecting to get the grant and was hoping it would be rejected so my classification work would not be delayed," he said. The grant was awarded, and Wood is now in the 15th month of a three-year, $250,000 project.

The finished products will include a bibliography, which Wood estimates will contain 800 pages, and a catalog about the same length, listing articles on each bark beetle species with reference to the bibliography.

Wood is also gathering a copy of each article. The completed collection will be kept at BYU and made accessible to any researcher.

Wood almost daily receives articles from libraries and scientists in many countries. Colleagues in Czechoslovakia, Poland, Mexico and elsewhere have agreed to translate titles for him, and his assistants collectively speak or read English, Spanish, German, French, Italian, Japanese, Mandarin and Cantonese.

Wood is also searching libraries throughout the United States for articles, using university and public inter-library loan systems. Once those sources are exhausted, the USDA's library in Beltsville, Md., and the British Museum of Natural History Library have agreed to search for articles.

Meanwhile, Wood's classification project is not being neglected. A solid taxonomy, he said, must serve as the framework for cataloging the literature. Classification and identification of species is his forte. He has been collecting bark beetles for almost 40 years and has the largest collection in the world.

He is often the first to be called when officials in the United States or other countries want to know if a beetle is benign or potentially destructive. In 1982, he published a 1,359-page monograph called "The Bark and Ambrosia Beetles of North and Central America."

Wood has traveled all over the world doing field work and scrutinizing beetle collections. He spent three years in Canada, a year in Costa Rica, a year in Venezuela and a month or more in Colombia, Mexico, Honduras, Guatemala, India and Sri Lanka.

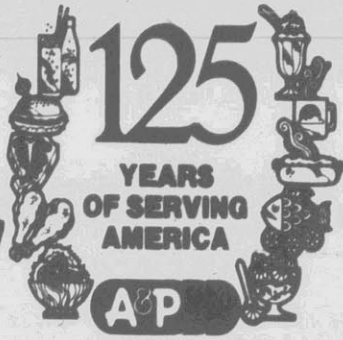

Wood is also asking museums, libraries and private collectors to send their collections or portions of collections to him for inspection. He finds about one new species in every 50 boxes examined, he said, though he once found 34 species new to science in one shipment from Mexico.

Want Fluency In 2nd Language

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Education Department advisory panel, criticizing U.S. "indifference to foreign languages and cultures," has called for colleges to require all students to be fluent in a second language.

The panel said foreign language enrollments in American high schools have dropped from 36 percent in 1915 to 15 percent in 1980.
