Water Rates Not Touched

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville Utilities Commission members spent very little time talking about a proposed water and sewer rate increase that had been on the agenda for their workshop meeting Tuesday night when no one showed up to comment on the proposed rates.

Commission members last week tabled final action on the new rate schedule, which would increase water revenues by about 20 percent over the next two years, after members of the City Council voiced objections to a proposed reduction in charges for out-of-city water customers.

The proposed water and sewer rates are based on a cost-of-service study completed last year, which says revenues from water rates need to be increased by $500,000 to fund increased current operating costs, maintain and extend the water system and make debt service payments on the new water treatment plant.

Under the proposed rate schedule, the utilities' present policy of charging out-of-city water customers double the in-city rates would be dropped. The new rates for out-of-city customers, based on the cost-of-service study, would be approximately 150 percent of the in-city rates, and this is the point the City Council objected to.

Members of the Utilities Commission have been discussing the proposed rates for several months, and a public hearing was held March 6. Final approval of the new rates was tabled March 13, after a letter voicing the council's objections was delivered to commission members on the day of the meeting, and commissioners agreed to discuss the rates, once more, at the workshop meeting Tuesday.

Councilman Stuart Shinn, the council's ex-officio member on the GUC, said at the March 13 meeting that "one way to encourage annexation ... make annexation more attractive," would be to maintain the out-of-city water rate at 200 percent of the in-city rate. "The council is unanimous in this feeling. It needs to be attractive to be annexed."

"The City Council doesn't often get involved," in Utility Commission business, Shinn said. But, he suggested, "it would be to the advantage of all in the long run to maintain the present" 200 percent rate for out-of-city customers.

Shinn did not attend Tuesday's workshop.

The discussion of the proposed rate increase was dropped Tuesday night after Commissioner Fred Robbins commented, "If the City Council was that concerned about it (the reduction in out-of-city rates), they would have at least shown up."

Only about 10 percent of GUC's water customers — between 1,200 and 1,300 — live outside the city limits.

In other business at the workshop, commissioners were given a copy of a memorandum from City Manager Gail Meeks to GUC Director Charles Horne, suggesting that the City Council may delegate the responsibility for providing streets lights to the commission, and began work on the 1984-85 budget by reviewing projected capital needs of the electric, water, sewer and gas departments.

Mrs. Meeks' memorandum said Assistant City Attorney Mack McCarty has checked into whether the city may delegate responsibility for providing street lights to the GUC and enclosed a copy of McCarty's

REAL WINNER — Walter Mondale raises his arms in victory Tuesday night at a rally following his primary victory in the Illinois primary. (AP Laserphoto)

Illinois Vote For Mondale

CHICAGO (AP) — Walter F. Mondale, blunting Gary Hart's momentum and predicting "a long tough race ahead" before the Democratic presidential nomination is settled, moves from his Illinois primary victory into a batch of big state contests led by New York.

By winning in Illinois on Tuesday, Mondale took the biggest primary prize so far and boosted his comeback after a string of early primary losses to Hart in New England and Florida. Mondale also won caucuses Tuesday in his home state of Minnesota.

But both Mondale and Hart noted that the road to San Francisco and the party's nomination is destined to be long.

"The debate has just begun," said Mondale, dismissing a suggestion that he has once again assumed the front-runner status that crumbled in New England. "I have a long way to go before I'm nominated."

Hart conceded that Mondale won a "significant primary" in Illinois but said he would battle the former vice president in a series of industrial-state contests coming up in Connecticut, New York and Pennsylvania.

"As he is, I'm prepared to go on to Connecticut, New York and beyond," the Colorado senator said.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson drew 21 percent of the vote, compared to Mondale's 41 percent and Hart's 35 percent. But nine of every 10 of Jackson's votes came from blacks, belying his claim that women, Hispanics and other minorities will eventually join in a "rainbow coalition" to win him the nomination.

Among blacks generally, 70 percent voted for Jackson, television networks' exit polling showed, while Mondale led Hart for the remainder.

Nonetheless, Jackson said he would press on and insisted there is a now a three-man race for the nomination.

"This is a three-man race," said Jackson. "And the only way it'll be a two-man race is if Mondale or Hart quits."

In analyzing his biggest defeat so far, Hart said he was the victim of new Democratic Party rules which bunched up primaries and party caucuses early in 1984, making it hard for a dark horse candidate to become well known and then run in every state.

"I don't consider tonight's loss that big a loss," said Hart. "We've done extraordinarily well under the circumstances."

"I think perhaps if we'd had another week we could perhaps have won," he added.

But Hart's contention was contradicted by network television exit polls which showed that voters who changed their minds in the final days before the voting shifted not to Hart but to Mondale.

Oliver Henkel, Hart's campaign manager, said today he was "very pleased with Gary's performance" in Illinois, a state where Hart had only an estimated 3 percent of the vote four weeks ago.

But, Henkel said on ABC's "Good" (Please turn to Page 16)

Seek Leadership In Merging Of Schools

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Reporter

City school board members are voicing agreement that the time has come to generate some action in reaching decisions on the status of the merger proposal of the Greenville and Pitt County public schools.

In a lengthy discussion this week, board members expressed evident frustration by an apparent stalemate on the issue, a situation which they say makes it impossible to make concrete plans on school issues which board members believe need attention now, not later.

"It's a complex issue. The real difficulty is to get leadership. Some are for it, some against it," Superintendent Delma Blinson commented near the end of the discussion on merger. "My opinion is that the responsibility for a decision rests with the officials of Pitt County."

A merger study by the Research Triangle Institute, requested by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and completed and delivered to county and city officials in September 1983, has been the topic of several public hearings and numerous discussions since its receipt — without any real indications of which of several alternatives might eventually be approved.

City school board members Monday night indicated that, in the absence of some decision, they may opt to move on to alternatives applicable only to city schools.

In order to be prepared to initiate definite action at an early date, board members directed Blinson to have his staff prepare and bring to the board details on several possible actions.

Priority items on which board members have asked for detailed information include:

•Procedures necessary to secure authorization to make the city school district co-terminus with the city boundaries, and procedures required to extend the city school district to the one-mile extraterritorial limit outside the city limits.

According to Blinson, creating school boundaries on a co-terminus basis with city limits would add about 90 students to the Greenville school population; extending the school district to cover the extraterritorial limit would add about 800 to 900 students.

Blinson emphasized that either of the extended city school boundaries choices would contain clauses to provide a freedom of choice for students living within the areas that would be effected.

•Information on the possibility of re-instituting a supplemental school tax for the Greenville City School district. Several board members

SPINAL CORD SOCIETY

I am a paralyzed person and, while I appreciate all the rehab effort on behalf of myself and others, it bothers me that I hear so little about research on finding a way to reverse spinal cord injury at the same time all sorts of organs are being transplanted and other medical breakthroughs are getting lots of public attention. Is there an organization that supports progress in finding a cure for or reversal of spinal cord injury? I have recently read that this breakthrough might be four to seven years away. I would like to do whatever I can to work toward this end. M.N.

The Spinal Cord Society is an international charitable research organization with a membership of over 10,000 persons, many of them quadriplegics and paraplegics, who are supporting research in finding a cure for spinal cord injury and its effects. Michael Mercado, editor of the organization's monthly newsletter, said the organization's motto is "Cure — Not Care," and its logo is a wheelchair symbol crossed out. "We're militant paralyzed people," he said.

He said the SCS publishes an 18-24-page monthly newsletter dealing with the most recent advancements in cure-treatment research as well as skin and bladder care and supportive services for the spinal cords injured. He said the organization has, since 1982, sponsored 20 major research conferences with prominent scientists and clinicians presenting papers, films and lectures. They've also funded $224,000 worth of research projects. Among these are the utilization by a paralyzed person of a computerized walking system enabling her to bicycle, stand, and walk using her own paralyzed muscles; the use of an intramuscular electronic stimulator by a paralyzed person allowing him to stand and walk using his own muscles; the study of autologous brain grafts and regeneration in the injured spinal cord; artificial bone substitutes for the spinal column; replenished blood supply in the injured spinal cord through momentum transplants; and the use of steroids and other pharmaceuticals to reduce paralysis.

Future promising funding areas, he said, are biodegradable synthetic nerve guidance system, fetal and auto nerve grafts, recombinant DNA, and drugs to enhance nerve growth and dissolve spinal scar tissue.

The newsletter costs $24 a year and is available from Michael Mercado, 6203 Bella Ave., North Hollywood, CA, 91606. Eight to 10 photocopied reports of recent cure research re available by sending $5 to the same address.

For your fairest little one, knit a circular yoke Fair Isle sweater complete with matching hat and soakers. Make it easy to care for in machine-washable yarns with light and dark trim on a white background. Directions are for 6-month and 1-year sizes.

To obtain directions for making the Fair Isle Baby Set, send your request for Leaflet No. KL-0318 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler (The Daily Reflector), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. K-0318 by sending a check or money order for $9.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and sufficient yarn for making the full three-piece set. Please specify your choice of blue, green or lavender for the trim color.

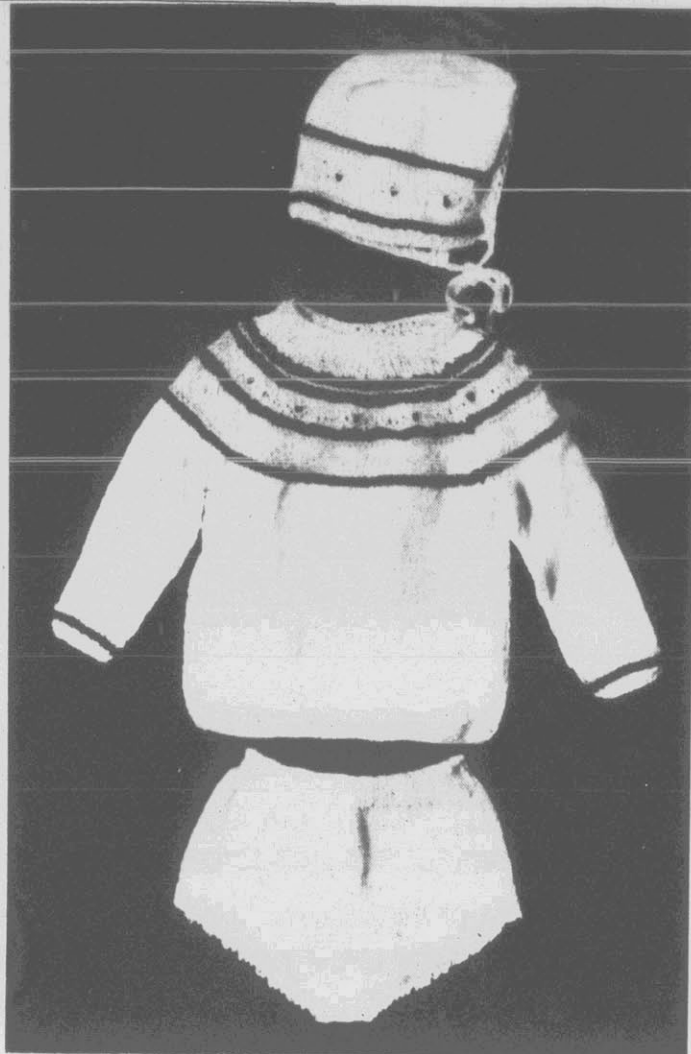

Dear Pat: I would like to put neck zippers into sweaters I make for my youngsters, who won't wear my handknit pullovers if they are difficult to pull on and off, but I don't know how to go about it. Can you help? — Martha H., Denver, Colo.

This is a particularly good idea, Martha, as children's heads are proportionately larger in relation to neck measurements than are adult's. Some sweater designs make allowances for this by making the neckline lower, which automatically makes it wider; but many do not.

You can leave an opening in the center front or back for the zipper, or you can eliminate the shoulder seam on one side — usually the left shoulder — and insert the zipper there.

While I believe there are very few unbreakable rules in knitting, I do feel that zippers should always be set in by hand even if the garment is assembled by machine.

If your opening is to be in the center front or back of the garment, I would suggest purchasing the zipper before you start and then you will know the proper length for the opening.

BABY SWEATER SET...includes a Fair Isle sweater, matching hat and soakers. It is made with machine washable yarns.

If you are planning to set it in a shoulder seam or a raglan seam, you are not likely to be able to change the length of the seam to match the zipper size, so you should do the knitting first and then purchase whatever size zipper is needed to fit the available space.

Either way, you will then work a row of single crochet on both edges of the zipper opening and baste the zipper in place before doing the final stitching. Be sure that the two edges meet over the center of the zipper, completely concealing it.

Check to see that the zipper lies perfectly flat without buckling. When you are satisfied with the appearance, take tiny stitches, with matching sewing thread, through the sweater fabric and zipper fabric.

If you make these stitches through the crocheted edging, they will not show at all. Whether you can do this or not will depend upon the width of the crocheted edging, which will vary according to the size of yarn and hook used. With a very fine yarn and small hook, the crocheted edging will probably be too narrow to allow you to take the stitches there.

You've all heard the myth about overweight people being jolly, fun-loving and having friends.

"Well, it's not a myth. It's true. And the reason it's true is because the moment you lose a few pounds, you lose all your friends and you have nothing to be jolly and fun loving about."

I lost ten pounds once — five in my neck and five in my bust — and an aunt of mine said, "You look terrible. You're going to make yourself sick with all that dieting." Another friend said, "I liked you better when you had some meat on those bones." And my husband said, "You look haggard. Are you sure you're not too thin?" (He said this on the day I couldn't find my seat belt buried under my stomach without a metal detector.)

Another time, I lost three pounds in seven years and my best friend, mind you, had the nerve to say, "Don't lose it too fast or your face will wrinkle and you'll look like you're a hundred years old."

When you're dieting, you're out there all alone. There's no pleasing anyone. They turn on you when you least expect it. Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Wife's Attitude Is Husband's Millstone

DEAR ABBY: My husband has made fantastic progress with a large company. (He's in sales.) I am very proud of him and love him very much.

Now the problem: One of his best accounts has social "business" functions for men only. I have asked him to suggest that wives be included, and he said it wasn't his place to make suggestions. I told him that if enough men, beginning with himself, would turn down such invitations, the company would have to start including the wives.

Last week my husband received another one of those invitations. I begged him not to go, but he said, "When a big shot invites you, you don't turn him down." And he went anyway.

Abby, I feel my husband has no respect for me or himself. What is your opinion?

FEELING REJECTED

DEAR REJECTED: Assuming that these functions are respectable company get-togethers, your husband's decision to go has nothing to do with his respect (or lack of respect) for you or himself.

It would be inappropriate for him to suggest that wives be included, then refuse to go unless they were.

If you love your husband, add some confidence to that love and quit hassling him. Your present attitude is a millstone around his neck.

DEAR ABBY: For the past few weeks I have been dreaming that I am pregnant! I know it is not a suppressed desire, and it certainly cannot be the fear of pregnancy because I am 74 years old!

I have all my marbles, Abby, and this isn't of sufficient importance to justify seeing a "shrink."

What could the reason be?

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

At a time when families are breaking up in alarming numbers, many families are asking, "What can we do to prevent it?" Researchers who have been studying family life for over 40 years have come to some simple conclusions. Strong families have these characteristics in common:

- Family members practice good communication.
- Family members show appreciation for and enjoy being with one another.
- Family members are committed to shared family goals and responsibilities.
- Family members are adaptable and support one another.
- Family members have a strong religious orientation.
- Family members interact with the community in mutually productive ways.

Surprised? Perhaps your family already has these characteristics. Or maybe you see the need to work on some aspects of your family life.

The Agricultural Extension Service is participating in a statewide Focus on the Family Week March 25-31. During this week we encourage you to plan some activities to help strengthen your family. Following are some suggestions:

- Ask each member what the word "family" means. Look up the word in the dictionary.
- Make a list of things your family does for you and what you do for them.
- Spend an evening with the family album.
- Ask grandparents (or "adopted" grandparents) and parents to tell about how life used to be and special remembrances.
- Discuss your family roots: prepare a family tree (include occupations).
- Send a contribution to an orphanage.
- Invite another family or someone who lives alone over for the evening.
- Visit relatives and discuss family customs, mannerisms and personality characteristics.
- Make a family calendar marking birthdays, anniversaries and other special days for all the family.
- Prepare a book or tapes of stories about the family, furniture or other items passed down.

To culminate Focus on the Family Week, the Pitt County Board of Commissioners has proclaimed Thursday, April 5, as Focus on the Family Day. Call the Agricultural Extension Service at 752-2934 for more information about special activities planned for the evening.

Dr. Trevathan Has Slide Presentation

The Greenville Garden Club held its meeting Friday at the home of Mrs. R.R. Forrest. Dr. G. Earl Trevathan presented a slide program on The Nature Conservancy.

The organization is dedicated exclusively to the conservation of the remaining natural areas in the United States. The N.C. Chapter of the Nature Conservancy, founded in 1977, is identifying and preserving examples of forests, mountains, islands and wetlands in the state.

Reports were given by the conservation and garden therapy chairmen.

Mrs. H. Lindy Edwards, president, told of scheduled tours of private gardens in Wilmington April 6-8 and in Ahoskie April 11. A standard flower show is also scheduled.

A certificate of appreciation has been received from CARE Headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., for the donation sent by the club to Costa Rica.

Assisting meeting hostesses included Mrs. R.M. Helms, Mrs. George Fleming and Mrs. Guy Evans.

Guests were Mrs. Sammy Tucker and Mrs. Thomas Norris.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Friendships Need To Be Developed

"To make a friend, you must first be a friend," goes the old saying. There is much truth in this statement, says Dr. Leo Hawkins, extension human development specialist, North Carolina State University.

But a person who is having difficulty in this area may need more detailed guidelines. "To develop and maintain fulfilling interpersonal relationships, you must have developed certain basic skills," Dr. Hawkins says.

First, the people involved must know and trust each other. This also involved acceptance of self, a stumbling block for many people.

Accurate understanding of each other is also essential. This involves listening, expressing feelings and the communication of warmth and liking.

Mutual support and help should be offered. This means making yourself available when needed and spending time with a person.

Problems and conflicts are inevitable and should, in fact, be welcomed. Those who are skilled at handling anger and conflicts will find these actually strengthen a relationship.

Club Planning Bridge Benefit

The Greenville Woman's Club will be sponsoring a benefit bridge luncheon March 29 starting at 10 a.m.

Proceeds will go to the N.C. Retardation Center's Fund. The cost will be $4.00 per person.

For reservations call Carolyn James at 752-2733 or Polly Dail at 758-1446. The benefit will be held at the club house.

Spring Is Here

It was unpardonable ... matching the forgetfulness of a woodchuck that neglected to observe Groundhog Day, or swallows forgetting their way to Capistrano. We overlooked our annual salute to spring. She arrived Tuesday, exactly as scheduled (which airlines, bus lines and trains do not always accomplish). Our oversight probably was not noticed. There were more important things, such as leaf buds on trees, jonquils flaunting their yellow horns, dandelions adding spots of gold to the ground. And there were days when old Mother Earth was warmed by a sun that rose just a bit earlier than a longtime norm ... and was staying up later (to enjoy the view?). More of the smallest-of-the-small children, who joined the scene when winter prevailed, have been coming out into the open, too; gazing with wide eyes at an earth we trust they shall inherit. The air was never more sweet rid of the wood-smoke ... and positively heady. No. Spring did not miss our welcome. But we did.

Good News

The February unemployment report showed an increasing number of Americans back on the job; 700,000 of them finding work. It's good news from any number of standpoints ... not the least of which is the impact bound to be felt in retail sales. Martin Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, says job opportunities should improve throughout the year as the economy continues to grow. February was the sixth straight month of falling joblessness. Coincidentally, the Small Business Administration in another report said younger and better educated minority workers are increasingly getting into business for themselves. The SBA found the number of non-white workers who were self-employed soared 42.8 percent from 1972 to 1982. All things considered, the rate of growth in that field should rise, too. Significance of the SBA data cannot be overstated. Jobs generated by small firms are likely to be taken by younger, older and female workers ... filling needs that large businesses do not meet. One of facts of life in small business is that blacks and Hispanics face impediments to business entry that range from low family income and inadequate occupational training, to differences in educational attainment, according to the report. Another way of saying that economic advancement in one's private life begins with education, and moves on into applicable experience. Overcoming those handicaps sometimes may require more than the continued efforts of one or two generations.

Unexpected Worry

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Sen. Gary Hart's sudden surge in U.S. public opinion polls has given American and Salvadoran officials here an unexpected worry: the prospect that someone other than Ronald Reagan may occupy the White House on Jan. 20, 1985. Until recently, the assumption of a Reagan victory in November permitted both political and military strategists here to attend to the concerns of congressional skeptics. The president's supposed invincibility had also eased fears about losing White House commitment to providing El Salvador's armed forces substantial aid in post-1985 budgets. But the emergence of a new challenge to Reagan (Hart beats the president in the latest Gallup Poll and gives GOP strategists a more difficult target than Walter Mondale) has brought additional anxieties to bear on Salvadoran military planners. Hart, who has backed the use of a country's human rights record as a criterion for U.S. military aid, would likely tighten the reins on this country's uniformed services, if not reverse U.S. policy entirely. Walter Mondale, on the other hand, has been much more circumspect about his position, leading most observers to doubt his commitment to changing U.S. policy here significantly.

Only a few miles south of La Palma, a mountain town in El Salvador's northern Chateango province, two guerrillas with the Faribundo Marti Liberation Front (FMLN) had stopped a truck to "borrow" some cigarettes when we came upon them. One of the fighters, an 18-year-old dressed in a La Coste tennis shirt, said he'd left high school to join the guerrillas. The other combatant, age 30 and, by the looks of his T-shirt, a New Orleans Saints fan, had been a farm worker. Each man was carrying a U.S.-made automatic weapons. "The U.S. is taking care of us by sending a lot of guns," said the younger guerrilla, adding, "Tell Ronald Reagan to leave the White House, pick up a gun and shoot with us."

Changes Needed For Teachers

RALEIGH — While many politicians and educators have been calling for big teacher pay raises this year, a counter-argument has also been heard. Voices of dissent have warned that raising salaries alone will not assure that the public schools have good teachers. Since the 1983 General Assembly adjourned, a legislative research group known as the Education Policy Council has been looking for other ways to improve the profession of teaching. They hope that their recommendations, when combined with a pay raise, will help draw more good people to teaching and help keep the best teachers where they are. The proposals took their first step toward ratification this month when the council's personnel subcommittee gave them approval. The most sweeping change is the call for a career ladder program. Under the subcommittee's proposal, teachers could advance through five different classifications. Local school boards would decide which teachers deserve the promotions. Teachers would be evaluated on performance and other standards set by the State Board of Education. As teachers moved up the ladder, their responsibilities would expand. But, unlike the current system where teachers can advance only by going into administration, teachers under this plan would remain in the classroom. Pay raises would come with the advances.

Another change included in the career ladder plan calls for a sabbatical leave at full state salary for teachers. Between their seventh and twelfth years in the public schools, teachers could apply for 12 months sabbatical leave for self-improvement such as advanced study. They would be bound by contract to teach at least three more years upon returning to work. The subcommittee also approved a proposal which would make mid-career transfers into teaching easier for professional people. Currently, you can't be hired by a public school if you don't have a teaching certificate and to get that you must have studied the discipline of education.

This has caused the schools some problems lately as they've recruited private sector professionals to teach in the teacher-short areas of math and science. Although it is possible to get a provisional certificate for these mathematicians and scientists, it is difficult. Rep. D.R. Mauney, D-Gaston, says his local schools have had to turn people away who volunteered to work for free. The proposal would allow these mid-careerists to teach for up to five years with provisional certification. During those five years, they'd be expected to work on the academic credits needed for certification. The subcommittee says the state can do more to encourage college students to become certified to teach in disciplines currently experiencing teacher shortages. It proposes to begin a scholarship program for students majoring in these areas while pursuing a teaching certificate. The state board has been asked to draft a scholarship program which can be presented to the 1985 General Assembly.

Public Forum

To the editor: North Pitt High School has been much in the news recently, and it is certainly regrettable that one class had the lowest competency test scores in the county. On the more positive side, I would like to remind the citizens of this county that in its short history, three Morehead scholars, two Johnson scholars and three National Merit scholars have graduated from that institution. There have been many others. Additionally, just last year, North Pitt High School's team won the Pitt County title in the Quiz Bowl competition. Last year and the year prior to that, North Pitt High School had the Best Overall Math Team in the competition between Pitt County Schools.

One of the programs, however, of which we are most proud is the program of studies developed for students with educational handicaps. A special curriculum has been developed in the academic and the vocational areas for these students, and it is considered to be one of the pilot programs in these areas. Those of us who teach at North Pitt are proud that we can help meet the needs of these students, and we are happy that they are remaining in school longer and learning skills that help make them employable and self-supporting citizens of this county. Tangled Spending Web

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At times there is no love lost between some members of the House committee that says how much money may be spent for defense and the committee that puts the money into the Pentagon's bank accounts. Under the complicated congressional budgeting process, the first panel — the Armed Services Committee — sets out what it thinks the spending limit should be. The second — the Appropriations Committee and its defense and military construction subcommittees — actually approves the spending of the money. Rep. Sam Stratton, D-N.Y., pointed out the Armed Services panel's frustrations recently when the committee adopted its recommendation on how much should be spent for defense. The committee decided defense spending should grow by 7.5 percent in 1985.

Noting that the recommendation goes to the Budget Committee, which can trim the amount even before the Appropriations Committee begins its work, Stratton made a point, in making his motion to approve the 7.5 percent figure, of getting in a dig at the Appropriations Committee. His motion stipulated that the Budget Committee tell the Appropriations Committee that it should go no lower than 7.5 percent. Virtually everyone on the committee agreed that by the time the Appropriations Committee finishes the figure will be 5 percent or less, and the money may not end up in the same categories where Armed Services originally put it. Once the Budget Committee makes its recommendation on a growth figure, the Armed Services Committee then writes a budget authorizing spending, but the Appropriations Committee sets out what can be spent and usually comes in under the Armed Services figure. Congressional sources suggest the complaints of Stratton and others may be prompted by the fact that the Armed Services panel traditionally has been far kinder to the Pentagon than other committees and credit for budget cuts may have gone to the Appropriations Committee, even though the Armed Services Committee has made cuts of its own. "They may be saying, 'Why do we keep doing this if Appropriations gets the credit,'" said a source. Stratton lent credence to that theory when he told the committee, "I don't see why this committee should suffer heartburn and shed blood" writing a defense budget authorization package only to see the other panel "do as they please." Because the Appropriations Committee can spend less than the Armed Services Committee recommends, and can spend it in different categories, Stratton likened that panel to "a loose cannon that can do anything it wants to. It can buy Coke, or it can buy Pepsi. It can buy beef, or it can buy hamburger or anything it wants to do. I don't think one committee ought to have absolute control over what this committee has labored hard to bring about." Rep. Floyd Spence, R-S.C., also expressed some of the same frustration as Stratton, terming the entire process "a game." The Armed Services figure, he said, "almost certainly will be cut by the (House) floor and other committee (Appropriations).

Building Your Momentum

The group from Argyle, Argyle and Sox Advertising Agency was ushered into Senator Dimblebuton's office. They were there to get the account for Senator Dimblebuton's political race. "Senator," said the vice president of AA&S, "we've worked on a campaign that is going to knock your eyes out." The AA&S creative VP said, "We're going to give you something that your opponent doesn't have." Two flunkies set up an easel and put a large white sign covered by a cloth on it. "Get ready for this, Senator," a VP said. The cloth was pulled off. There was one large word, "MOMENTUM." The advertising men all looked at the senator for his reaction. "That's it?", the senator asked. "What do you mean, that's it?" This is going to get you re-elected for the next six years. Our research people have been working on this campaign for six months. The one thing they discovered that every voter in your state wanted was momentum. No candidate who has ever run for public office ever lost a race if he had it, and no candidate has ever won if he lost it. "How do I get momentum?" the senator wanted to know. "That's our job. We'll run commercials, plaster billboards and place newspaper ads, and every one of them will say that you have the 'Big Mo.'" "But where's the beef?" "Show him the videotape of a proposed TV commercial, Harry." Harry inserted a videotape into the machine. A runner wearing a big "M" on his sweatshirt came on the screen jogging along freeway. He said, "My name is Senator Dimblebuton and I'm running for a third term. If I am re-elected I will give this state something it has never had before — momentum. The jogger started to speed up and passed a car with a driver who looked exactly like Dimblebuton's opponent, and as the TV commercial ended, Dimblebuton was 50 yards ahead of his opponent. "It says it all in 30 seconds," the VP said. "Don't you want me to do any TV commercials stating where I stand on unemployment, the Soviet threat, and how the big interests are taking over the country?" "You'd be wasting your money. The only thing the voter is interested in is a candidate's momentum. If he has it they want to be on his side because America likes winners." "I see your point," the senator said. "But aren't we putting all our eggs in one basket with a momentum campaign? Couldn't we have some backup commercials emphasizing my charisma?" "Chariama is old hat. Look what it did to John Glenn. This is new, this is fresh, and if you don't mind my saying so, sir, with your voting record, momentum is the only thing you've got going for you." "It's not just the advertising campaign that will put you over," a VP said. "The media is crazy about a candidate who has momentum. Look at Gary Hart. Before he ran in Iowa and New Hampshire no one knew he was in the race. But after those victories, the press could talk about nothing but Hart's 'M Spot.' How did the political pundits explain it? Very simply. They said Hart had momentum and Mondale lost it." "OK, you persuaded me," the senator said. "How much will it cost me?" "Ten million dollars, including the jogging suit." "That's a lot of money." "Senator, that's the beauty of momentum. Once the lobbyists think you have it, the campaign money starts dropping from the sky like acid rain." Strength For Today

An old gardener worked incessantly to bring to his sweet peas a certain distinctive coloring. Years passed and he was unsuccessful. One night there was a hail storm and much of the glass in his greenhouse was broken. The cold night air rushed in on the delicate flowers, and behold, when he went to the greenhouse the next morning, his sweet peas had a hue he had dreamed about but had never been able to produce. What the tender care of the hot-house could not create, the cold blast of a wintry night brought forth. It is so in our lives. We hope that they will have nothing but pleasantness and sunshine. It seems that everything will grow better and stronger under these circumstances. But this is not the case. Conflict and opposition are involved in growth. It takes the stormy night, the windswept days, the bleak winters, to give strength to the growth which sunny days have started.

Soviet Vessel Hit Mine Off Nicaragua

By FILADELFO ALEMAN
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista government says U.S.-backed rebels planted a mine which blew a hole in the hull of an incoming Soviet oil tanker and injured five crewmen.

The incident, which occurred Tuesday afternoon in Puerto Sandino harbor on Nicaragua's Pacific Coast, was reported today by the Soviet news agency Tass in a dispatch which began: "The policy of terrorism by the Reagan administration toward Nicaragua has resulted in a fresh crime."

The Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry said crewmen aboard the 22,000-ton Lugansk managed to patch the hole in the hull and reach the dock to begin unloading its cargo of oil. The Foreign Ministry blamed the United States for the attack and issued a call "to the international community to give Nicaragua the technical and military means necessary to defend itself from the terrorism being unleashed by the United States."

There was no immediate response from U.S. officials.

The United States provides aid and training for the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, a Honduras-based rebel group trying to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist government. The rebels have warned several times that they would mine Nicaraguan ports.

In El Salvador Tuesday, leftist guerrillas in the eastern part of the country stopped motorists along a highway and confiscated hundreds of the voter identification papers needed to vote in Sunday's presidential election, sources in the area reported.

Rebel activity in the area caused bus traffic to fall off by half, said the sources, who requested anonymity for fear of reprisals. Buses normally carry thousands of people daily along eastern stretches of the Pan American Highway.

Voters must present government identification cards at the polling places when they vote in the presidential election — the nation's first since 1977. Belamino Garcia of the Central Elections Council said people who lose their identification papers still have time to get them replaced before the election.

The rebels, who have been battling the U.S.-backed government in a four-year civil war, are boycotting the election, saying their candidates would be easy targets for rightist death squads that have been linked to government security forces.

The clandestine rebel force Venceremos said in a broadcast late Monday that the guerrillas would take "drastic measures" against public officials who pressure citizens into voting Sunday. The government has said it will impose fines as high as $20 on people who do not vote.

The Soviet seamen injured at Puerto Sandino were taken to a hospital in Chinandega, 78 miles northwest of Managua, said a Nicaraguan military source who spoke on condition his name not be used. He said the Soviet ship struck the mine in midafternoon.

The Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry's statement said the incident "one more time confirms the aggressive and criminal character of the terrorist policy that drives the Reagan administration, in its desire to reestablish its control over our country."

On March 1, a Dutch ship dredging Puerto Corinto, 90 miles northeast of the capital, exploded after it hit what was believed to be a mine planted by rebels. The Geoponte VI was seriously damaged and five seamen were injured.

Six days later, the Panamanian ship Los Caribes struck a mine in Puerto Corinto. The Panamanian vessel, which was being used by a group of several Caribbean nations, was transporting medicine and other material to Nicaragua. Five seamen also were injured in that incident.

The new incident came as Daniel Ortega, coordinator of Nicaragua's leftist junta, arrived in Mexico to discuss efforts to topple his government.

"The Central American crisis is extremely critical by the aggression of the United States, which (is)...increasing its military presence that is a clear threat of direct intervention in Nicaragua and El Salvador," Ortega said Tuesday before leaving Managua.

On Monday, a Nicaraguan government delegation went to the Soviet Union to discuss the military situation with Soviet officials, the office of the ruling junta reported.

The Sandinistas, who took power in July 1979 from rightist President Anastasio Somoza, receive aid from both the Soviet Union and Cuba.

Find 2 Of 3 For Death Sentence

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Two out of every three North Carolina residents favor the death penalty for convicted murderers, according to the latest Carolina Poll.

Sixty-five percent of the people questioned in a random telephone survey said they favor the death penalty, while 25 percent said they opposed it, according to the poll. Ten percent said they aren't sure.

The poll was conducted Feb. 17 to March 1 by the University of North Carolina School of Journalism. Interviewers questioned 1,209 adults.

Blacks were the only segment of the population in which a majority of those surveyed opposed the death penalty. Fifty-four percent said they oppose it, while 33 percent said they favor it.

Seventy-one percent of whites said they support capital punishment.

Men were more likely to favor the death penalty, with 73 percent approving, while 58 percent of women supported capital punishment.

The poll also showed greater support for the death penalty from people who earn more than $25,000 a year and from Republicans.

The poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percent. With the random sample of 1,209 people, the pollsters would have a 95 percent chance of getting the same results, within the margin of error, had they dialed every telephone in the state.

Drug Crackdown In Asheboro Area

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — More than 80 charges have been made against 37 people in a crackdown on drugs and alcohol by the Randolph County Sheriff's Department.

Sealed drug indictments were issued by the Randolph County Grand Jury Monday and officers began rounding up suspects at 5 a.m. Tuesday.

Sheriff Robert Mason said his department began the undercover operation eight months ago. Most of the charges involve the sale and delivery of controlled substances, including cocaine, Mason said, with a small number of warrants issued on alcohol-related charges.

"This is really part of our ongoing attempt to curb this sort of thing," Mason said. "And, after this is over, that doesn't mean we will slack off. We are going to be right back on this."

He said some of the same suspects charged in a similar investigation two years ago will be charged in the new probe.

The operation covered over 2,400 miles — some of which was traveled on skis. Members were trained and instructed on surviving in a climate of severe cold while actively bivouacked in a frozen snow forest.

Sunday Guests

The Rev. Charlie Wilson and the congregation of Bethel Chapel Church in Washington, N.C., will render services at Sweet Hope Free Will Baptist Church on Sunday at 7 p.m. The Sweet Hope Pastor Aid Club will sponsor the service.

Exchange Teacher

Dr. Maria B. Malby, professor of Russian and German at East Carolina University, will participate in an exchange of U.S. language teachers with the Soviet Union this summer. She will join a group of approximately 35 U.S. language teachers who will go to the Soviet Union in mid-June for two months of study.

She was notified of her selection by the International Research and Exchange Board in New York. Selection also required approval by the American Council of Learned Societies. Funding for the program is provided through the U.S. Information Agency under the Fulbright program and by the Soviet Ministry of Higher and Specialized Secondary Education.

A native of Zagreb, Yugoslavia, Dr. Malby has been a member of the ECU faculty since 1970.

Woman Nominee?

Political analyst Frank Mankiewicz says he expects the Democratic Party to nominate a woman for vice president this fall.

Mankiewicz, in Greenville for a lecture-seminar series at East Carolina University, predicted at a news conference that the vice presidential nod would go to Rep. Geraldine A. Ferraro of New York, whom he described as being "strong on domestic issues."

He expressed confidence a woman would receive the second spot on the Democratic ticket regardless of the party's choice for a presidential nominee.

Mankiewicz headed Sen. George S. McGovern's campaign in 1972 for the Democratic presidential nomination and is a former president of National Public Radio.

He is scheduled to deliver a lecture on the ECU campus tonight.

Task Force

The Pitt County Juvenile Task Force will meet Monday at 3 p.m. in the third floor conference room of the Pitt County Office Building, 1717 W. Fifth St.

Deadline Is Set On Nominations

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has announced the deadline for nominations for the second annual Governor's Awards which recognize teaching excellence and business support for math and science education.

"North Carolina is suffering from a shortage of qualified math and science teachers," Hunt said in a news release. "Recognizing those who have done an outstanding job in the classroom encourages them to stay in the teaching profession."

Hunt said the deadline for nominations is June 1.

The awards were established last year under the auspices of the Business Committee for Math-Science Education.

Entries must be ready to hang and must be taken to the museum April 11 from 2-10 p.m. or April 13 from 10 a.m.-7 p.m. To register a work, contact Maxine Harker at 524-4681 or write Box 225, Grifton, N.C.

Doctor Is Urging N.C. Health Care Lottery

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — Dr. Ed McKenzie wants you to bet on better health care in North Carolina.

The Salisbury surgeon says his campaign for a state lottery to finance health care for catastrophic illnesses and injuries is gathering strength in Rowan County, and he hopes to make it a statewide effort.

"We're getting a very strong positive reaction," McKenzie said in a telephone interview from Salisbury.

The doctor said he had been "struggling with the concept for several years" but began his campaign in earnest on Feb. 14.

"I look forward to the day when everyone in North Carolina can wake up...and know the risk of catastrophic illness will no longer destroy their lifetime savings in a few months," he said.

Ireland has had a similar lottery — the Irish Sweepstakes — since 1930, and Rhode Island also has a successful state lottery for catastrophic health care, said McKenzie.

Rhode Island, with a population of about 950,000, raises about $13 million and helps about 900 people a year through its lottery, he said. North Carolina, with a population more than six times as large, can expect proportional success, he added.

McKenzie said he hopes soon to begin an advisory council made up of religious, educational, medical, legal, labor, industry and other leaders. Next he plans to recruit more volunteers and start organizations in other counties.

"It's important that this be done soon to catch up with the June short session of the Legislature," he said. "I'm looking for 100,000 to 1 million signatures by June."

The exploding cost of health care and new medical discoveries led McKenzie to propose the lottery. Many hospitals that have had to absorb the costs of people who couldn't pay for care are in financial trouble.

Rowan Memorial Hospital, for example, expects to lose $2 million this year, much of it from catastrophic illness, he said.

Part of the money raised in the lottery would pay the winners whose numbers were chosen. The money left over from that and from treating catastrophic illness and injury could go to Medicaid and mental health programs, said McKenzie.

"This would liberate other money for research," he said.

Most of the opposition to the proposal has come from people who oppose all forms of gambling, said McKenzie.

"One man said I was an apple salesman in the Garden of Eden," he said. "But a lottery is nothing but a voluntary tax, and those who choose to support it just have more fun than the average taxpayer."

Previous attempts to have a general statewide lottery approved by the General Assembly may have failed because people thought politicians would use it to enrich themselves, he said. This latest attempt may succeed because of its more specific goal, he added.

Many doctors have signed McKenzie's petitions, but he said he is not actively seeking physicians' support right now because "if they put it out, it's open to question."

Some people might think they are padding their pockets."

McKenzie said if the proposal were approved, he would refuse any payment for care from the lottery fund and decline any prize money.

Meanwhile, people keep signing petitions and volunteering to gather more names, said McKenzie, adding that he has lost count of all the volunteers.

"But we've got a long way to go in three months," he said.

River Park North Uses Underlined

By JERRY RAYNOR

Greenville's River Park North as a center to help foster quality science education, as a recreation park for certain types of activities, and as the site of an outdoor nature area constituted the focus of a slide presentation-lecture presented to the Greenville School Board this week.

Dr. Bob Wendling, an assistant professor in the East Carolina Parks and Recreation Department and an advisor to the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department on nature, showed a series of color slides taken in the city's largest (359 acres) park which reveals the extent and diversity of flora and fauna to be found there.

Detailing plans oriented to the science education role of the park, Wendling spoke about programs of field trips and studies which were used during the 1982-83 school year and have been continued this school year.

"The use of the park as a viable tool in science education has proven to be feasible and rewarding," Wendling said. "We have had 142 fifth graders from the city and county schools take part in a series of full day nature visits. Our focus in working with students has been on the natural history of the region through preparatory studies in the classrooms followed by a variety of hands-on experiences at the park."

Wendling explained that in conjunction with student experiences, students at East Carolina University in several science and recreational fields have gained valuable training in working with the fifth graders, along with classroom teachers from the various schools.

He mentioned the scope of non-competitive recreation opportunities available at the park — fishing, nature walks, boating, nature photography, picnic facilities.

Wendling also touched on development plans for which groundwork is being laid cooperatively by the city and East Carolina University — including plans for a building to house a planetarium, a taxidermy museum, and other buildings to house research and study programs.

"One exciting development is the offer of a private collection of over 200 specimens of mounted animals from all parts of the world," Wendling said. "The owner has had offers from the Smithsonian and from other museums, but has stated a preference to have the collection housed in this area. If we can get this collection, it will be a tremendous asset for the general public and for students."

Wendling said "River Park north, with its mixture of bottomland, 48

Rezoning In Moyewood Property Is Refused

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

A request by a local physician to rezone his property in Moyewood in order to make his medical facilities a conforming use failed to gain the endorsement Tuesday night of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission.

After hearing several pleas from neighboring property owners not to rezone Dr. Andrew Best's facilities, the board voted 4 to 2 in favor of recommending that the City Council deny the physician's petition.

Best sought to rezone .42 acres at the southeast corner of South Roundtree Drive and Moyewood Drive from R-6 residential to medical arts. Under the present zone, Best's medical offices are considered a "non-conforming use and if the facilities were destroyed by fire or some other casualty, there would be some question as to whether he could rebuild.

Commissioners continued the matter at last month's meeting in order to see if Mrs. Jesse Roundtree Moye, who owns a parcel adjoining the Best tract, would join Best in petitioning for rezoning her parcel to medical arts. Gwynette Hilburn, an attorney representing Mrs. Moye, said her client did not wish to participate in the petition and requested that Best's request be denied.

Best said he has operated his medical offices on the site since 1968 and has been "a good neighbor" who is in favor of maintaining and improving the quality of the Moyewood area. He said he planned "no great changes" in his facilities and merely wanted to rezone the property to insure that he could rebuild if something happens to the offices.

"I can assure you I would not be the person to even suggest violating the rights and privileges of people in my neighborhood," said Best.

Harriet Dixon, a Moyewood resident, said no one questioned that Best has been a good neighbor but she asked what would happen if he moved and someone else occupied the facilities who did not share Best's concern. She said she would be in favor of the neighborhood remaining in its present state.

Mrs. Dixon also produced letters from other property owners, including Esther Porteur and Jesse and Sadie Nobles requesting that the residential nature of the area be maintained.

Attorney Fred Mattox, representing Best, said the issue is whether Best will continue his practice on the site under a "grandfather clause" since he was there before the property was rezoned, or as a permitted use. He said what Best is requesting would not change the neighborhood but would enhance the quality of the area.

According to zoning laws, if Best experienced a loss that exceeded half the value of his property, he could not rebuild his offices.

Planning Director Bobby Roberson said the tract is surrounded by residential zoning and is not contiguous to other medical arts classifications.

Commissioners Rufus Keel, Wallace Woole, Danny Jacobson and Chuck Ziehr voted to recommend council denial, while Barbara Fenner and Wiley Hines opposed the motion to deny.

The board voted to recommend that the council approve three annexation requests. The petitions were submitted by: Unity Free Will Baptist Church to annex 7.94 acres on the east side of 14th Street extension just south of Quail Ridge; Dr. Howard Satterfield, North Raleigh Development Corp., and David Jones to annex 8.7 acres east of Nichols Shopping Center, 400 feet south of Greenville Boulevard; and by Myles Cartrette to bring in .97 acres on State Road 1204 on the east side of Greenridge subdivision, south of Westhills about 1,450 feet west of N.C. 43.

Commissioners accepted (with Hines voting no) the preliminary plat of Fairlane Farms Apartments, located in Fairlane Farms subdivision on the west side of Hooker Road. Roberson said the developer proposes to build 84 apartment units on a 6.7-acre site. He said 172 parking spaces, or four over the minimum required, will be provided in what is section three of the project.

Louise Whichard, who said she owns property adjacent to the development, asked that the plat be denied. She said her land would depreciate in value if apartments are built.

Col. Harvey Bradshaw, who owns the Fairlane Farms development, said the new apartments would be quality units with the average income for rental qualification expected to be in the $30,000 category.

The motion to approve Bradshaw's plat also called for two previous preliminary plats for the development to be rescinded. Bradshaw indicated plans to submit a revised preliminary plat for the remaining portion of his property.

In other business, the board:

- Accepted a final draft on a proposal addressing flashing signs in the city;

- Accepted the revised preliminary plat of Colindale Court, located in Kensington Park on the west side of N.C. 43 South just south of Oakmont Professional Plaza, calling for the deletion of three units to provide a site for recreational use;
- Accepted the preliminary plat of Executive Park on the south side of Stantonsburg Road across from Pitt County Memorial Hospital, involving five tracts totaling 23.5 acres zoned for medical arts usage;
- Scheduled a workshop for April 3 at 7:30 p.m. to discuss the land use intensity rate for multifamily development;
- Referred the review of a sign proposal submitted by Hoover Taft to the planning and zoning task force; and
- Established a subcommittee to meet during the second week of April to review rezoning requests that do not conform to the comprehensive plan.

Vow Prayer Struggle Not Ended

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and other backers of a rejected constitutional amendment to permit organized prayer in public schools vow they'll return another day to wage another battle.

Senate leaders, however, say it's unlikely the politically sensitive issue can be brought up again this year — even in a different form.

The Senate on Tuesday ended more than two weeks of debate by turning down the proposal, which Reagan had lobbied for, on a 56-44 roll call. That was 11 votes short of the two-thirds majority required for a constitutional amendment.

Reagan, who made passage of the amendment a major re-election campaign theme, said afterward that he was disappointed but that the battle was not over.

In a written statement, the president said:

"This has been an important debate revealing the extent to which the freedom of religious speech has been abridged in our nation's public schools. The issue of free religious speech is not dead as a result of this vote. We have suffered a setback, but we have not been defeated. Our struggle will go on."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., an amendment supporter, told the Senate following the vote, "We have just begun to fight. As long as I'm in the U.S. Senate, there will be other rounds."

But Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., a supporter of the amendment, said he had promised a full and open debate and that has now occurred.

"This is my commitment that I feel I have fulfilled, and I have no plans for anything else," Baker said.

Opponents of the amendment hailed the vote. Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., the leader of the anti-amendment forces, called it "the crest of the wave" of the so-called "social issues" pushed by Reagan and his conservative allies in the Senate, none of which have won congressional approval.

"I think anyone who uses this issue in a presidential campaign in 1984 is going to have it backfire on him," Weicker added. Weicker had previously called Reagan's tactics in lobbying heavily for the proposal "tasteless."

Supporters argued that approval of the amendment, which would have overturned the 1962 Supreme Court decision outlawing government-sanctioned prayer in classrooms, would follow the will of a majority of Americans. "Our Constitution never intended to remove religion from our daily lives," said Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

But opponents argued that students can pray in silence now in public schools, and that the amendment would have eroded the principle of separation of church and state.

"All constitutional amendments are hard to pass. We'll be back for another day. I'm going to do my best to see that we look at the alternatives," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee on constitutional issues, and a strong supporter of the amendment.

Supporters talked of several possible routes to revive the debate: another try at winning support for a silent-prayer-only amendment, already rejected once by the Senate; and a proposal by Helms that would limit the jurisdiction of federal courts on matters like prayer, school busing and abortion.

All 100 senators voted on the measure. Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., the only remaining presidential candidate in the Senate, canceled a trip to Kansas and flew to Washington from Chicago to vote against the amendment. And Republican Sen. Charles H. Percy, a candidate for re-election in the Illinois senatorial primary, returned to the Capitol to vote in favor of the amendment.

The proposed amendment read: "Nothing in this Constitution shall be construed to prohibit individual or group prayer in public schools or other public institutions. No person shall be required by the United States or by any state to participate in prayer. Neither the United States nor any state shall compose the words of any prayer to be said in public schools."

Passage of a constitutional amendment requires a two-thirds vote of those voting in each house of Congress and ratification by three-fourths of the states.

Backers of the amendment had claimed that the amendment was non-partisan, with support cutting across party lines, and had cited national opinion surveys showing that 80 percent or more of the nation backed prayer in public schools.

In Tuesday's roll call, 37 Republicans and 19 Democrats voted for the amendment, while 18 Republicans and 26 Democrats voted against it.

But Helms said prior to the vote that, no matter the outcome, the way senators voted would become an issue in the fall congressional campaigns.

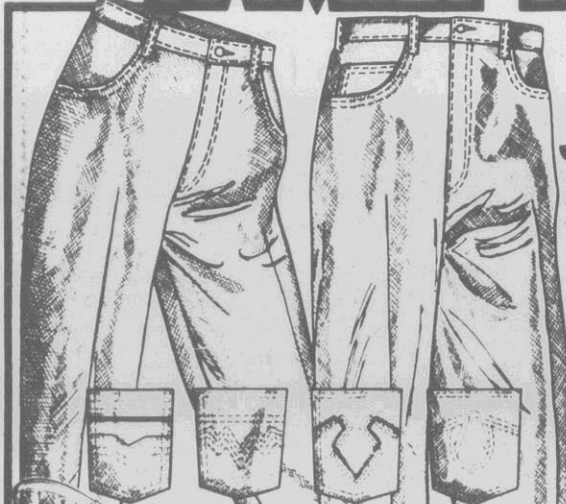

"The clerk will call the roll and we shall see where the votes are. And, more importantly, the American people will see where the votes are, and they can then adjust their own votes accordingly," Helms told the Senate.

Even if the measure had won Senate approval, sponsors were skeptical of being able to get it through the Democrat-run House, where a similar version has been bottled up before an unsympathetic Judiciary Committee for months.

The House Judiciary Committee has scheduled a March 29 hearing on the issue, but it now appears to be a moot issue with Tuesday's Senate rejection.

How N.C. Voted In The House

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes March 8-14. There were no contested votes in the Senate, which remained tied up in debate over the school prayer constitutional amendment.

CONFLICT — By a vote of 205 for and 173 against, the House adopted an amendment aimed at an alleged conflict-of-interest involving the National Education Association, the teacher's organization.

The amendment denies the use of federal vocational training money for school purchases that yield a financial benefit to an educational organization that has endorsed the product being bought. Supporters cited an existing arrangement whereby an NEA foundation gets a share of the profits when schools buy a brand of computer software endorsed by the NEA.

It was attached to a bill (HR 4164) that extends the Vocational Education Act through 1989. The bill was sent to the Senate.

Sponsor Marge Roukema, R-N.J., said Congress would set "a dangerous precedent" if it condoned arrangements such as the NEA's.

Opponent William Ford, D-Mich., disputed Rep. Roukema's allegations of conflict-of-interest involving the NEA and said she was "rushing out to legislate on a problem that has not yet emerged ..."

Members voting yes supported the amendment.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were: Tim Valentine, D-2; Stephen Neal, D-5; James Martin, R-9; and James Broyhill, R-10.

Those voting no were: Walter Jones, D-1; Charles Whitley, D-3; Ike Andrews, D-4; Charles Britt, D-6; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8; James Clarke, D-11.

LOANS — By a vote of 72 for and 331 against, the House rejected an amendment to convert the Small Business Administration direct loan programs into a loan guarantee program.

Loan guarantees to small businesses cost taxpayers only when the borrower defaults. Direct loans entail immediate spending, usually in behalf of targeted groups that have trouble getting private credit. Critics say the default rate on direct loans is too high, while supporters say the risk must be taken to stimulate recovery at the bottom of the economy.

The conversion to loan guarantees was to have saved the Treasury about $300 million in fiscal 1984, and would have implemented one of the Grace Commission's major budget-cutting recommendations. The amendment was offered to a bill (HR 3020) extending financial aid programs for small businesses, usually those with fewer than 500 employees. The bill later was sent to the Senate.

Sponsor Thomas Biley, R-Va., said members voting for the amendment will "let people know that all this deficit talk is not just lip service ..."

Opponent Parren Mitchell, D-Md., said it was wrong to eliminate loans to the handicapped, minorities, women, veterans and "all those other persons who cannot obtain funds from any other source."

Members voting yes favored loan guarantees rather than direct loans to small businesses.

North Carolina representatives voting no were: Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Neal, Britt, Rose, Hefner, Broyhill and Clarke.

James Martin did not vote.

Basic Training For Executives

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — New executives at Godfather's Pizza have been made an offer they can't refuse, if they want to earn their dough.

New front-office hires for the pizza chain with 800 outlets nationwide must take on-the-job training at one of two company-owned restaurants in Omaha, said Executive Vice President Richard Jeffries.

"They generally will be the older-looking guys in the kitchen or at the counter who are moving slower than the kids," Jeffries said. "That's one way to identify them."

On-the-job training for executives has been company policy since 1973 when Willy Theisen opened the first Godfather's in Omaha.

"Our founder worked from the bottom up and he expects everyone else in management to do on-the-job" restaurant training, Jeffries said.

Secret Defense Document Found In Telephone Booth

LONDON (AP) — A document identifying 23 U.S. and British scientists, servicemen and officials involved in a top secret radar defense project has been found in a telephone booth at London's Heathrow airport, the London Times reported today.

It said the three-page document, found two weeks ago by a man who passed it on to the paper, codenames the project Cold Witness.

Cold Witness "is so sensitive that the Pentagon will not discuss its existence (It) is believed to be an advanced radar project being conducted by the United States Air Force, the United States Navy and U.S. civilian contractors. The (British) Ministry of Defense Procurement Executive is also involved," the paper said.

It said the document lists addresses and phone numbers of people, companies and government agencies involved in the project. It gave no indication of who was responsible for leaving the document in the telephone booth or why it was left there.

An unnamed British Defense Ministry official quoted by the paper attributed it to carelessness.

"You have chanced on something about which we cannot really talk. I cannot even tell you what the project is about. Unfortunately it is genuinely classified," the official said.

"It is most unfortunate that through the carelessness of somebody who may have been concerned with the project such a list has been left lying around in this fashion," he continued.

"We will obviously make inquiries, but it will not be a full scale leak inquiry, just an internal attempt to discover how this list came to be lying about."

The paper said a Briton named John Johnson found the document at a phone booth while waiting for his wife in one of the airport terminals. Unable to understand it, Johnson passed it to The Times, the paper reported.

It quoted Johnson, who works at a recreation center, as saying: "It was about 9 or 10 at night. The document was left unfolded. Most of it was hidden, but you could see the corner of it poking out."

The Times said the document listed individual telephone numbers for researchers at two American companies engaged in defense work — Mitre Corp., of Bedford, Mass., and SRI International. It said the numbers for SRI included offices in San Francisco and Arlington, Va.

It said the document also gave addresses and telephone numbers for military officers and officials at five American defense establishments and the numbers for "staff working on radar, early warning systems and naval warfare."

"Staff at four British organizations are named: the Ministry of Defense Procurement Executive; the Rutherford Appleton Laboratory near Didcot (50 miles west of London) ... and the main building of the Ministry of Defense. Several home telephone numbers are included," it added.

List Four Among Top

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four North Carolina schools were among 263 junior and senior high schools Education Secretary T.H. Bell named as finalists in Education Secretary T.H. Bell's search for some of the top public schools in America.

The North Carolina schools are Carmel Junior High School, Charlotte; Ligon Middle School, Raleigh; Manteo High School, Manteo; Needham Broughton High School, Raleigh.

The schools were chosen from among 555 recommended by state school superintendents. Selection teams composed of non-government officials will visit each of the 263 schools between now and mid-May, then convene here in early July to choose the winners.

Last year, President Reagan and Bell honored 152 schools that were chosen from 396 nominees for the Secondary School Recognition Program. The winners were honored at a White House ceremony last September and received 4-by-6 foot "flags of excellence" for their schools.

Bell's agency said the finalists include schools in every state except Maryland and New Jersey, which did not submit nominees, as well as the District of Columbia and three Department of Defense Overseas Dependent Schools in Germany.

The department is sponsoring a separate program to recognize outstanding private high schools. It has given a $370,000 grant to the Council for American Private Education to carry out that search.

KHMER ROUGE CLAIM BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Khmer Rouge guerrillas claimed in a radio broadcast today that they attacked and "entirely occupied" a major Vietnamese army base in a central Cambodian province.

Wick Says 'Blacklist' Is Less Than Critics Implied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The director of the United States Information Agency says politics was involved in choosing speakers for overseas appearances, but he insists that the USIA's speaker blacklist was not really "onerous."

The statements by Charles Z. Wick on Tuesday marked the first time a high-ranking USIA official had publicly acknowledged that political considerations were involved in selecting speakers for the American Participation Program.

"Some of those people may have been turned down for political bias, but not too many," he told the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State and the Judiciary.

Wick said that while some people were blacklisted because they said they wouldn't represent the USIA before foreign audiences, "Others, I'm sure, (were listed) for some political bias."

Wick said the USIA is preparing a "complete report" on the 84-name list and that when it is made public within the next two weeks, the list will appear "a lot less onerous than has been implied."

Covering the period from August 1981 to January 1984, the list contained the names of such people as retired CBS-TV news anchor Walter Cronkite; consumer activist Ralph Nader; Mrs. Coretta Scott King, widow of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.; Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo.; and Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, chairman of the Government Operations Committee.

Wick did not say which names were included on the list because of political considerations nor did he explain the term "political bias." Published reports have said that some people were included because of their liberal or anti-administration views.

Wick said the only lists he had seen were the ones prepared weekly by the speaker's program office listing potential speakers for overseas engagements. He said he saw "two or three" of these lists but was "too busy to be involved in it."

"I personally would not sanction a blacklist," he testified. "It is un-American."

Wick said that "the list is very perplexing. There's people on the list who later became Amparts," speakers in the American Participation Program.

The USIA has said that the 135 original copies of the list have been destroyed. Thomas Harvey, the agency's general counsel, has taken responsibility, saying he felt they were duplicate files not relevant to the blacklist issue.

Wick has asked the Justice Department to determine whether federal law was violated by the destruction of the records.

No Agreement By Lebanon's Leaders

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christian and Moslem militias engaged in their heaviest battles in more than a week today after their leaders ended a peace conference in Switzerland with no agreement on political reforms.

The combatants exchanged artillery, mortar and machine gun fire in residential neighborhoods on both sides of the "green line" dividing Beirut into Christian east and Moslem west.

Overnight casualties totaled four dead and 22 wounded, according to police, who reported fighting in the old commercial district, the Ras el-Nabaa residential neighborhood and the Shiite Moslem-populated southern suburbs.

The fighting tapered off at midday into occasional explosions and sniper fire, police said.

The nine-day reconciliation conference in Switzerland ended late Tuesday, and Beirut's major newspapers today pronounced it a failure. Two reports said President Amin Gemayel had threatened during the closing session to resign and turn over power to a military government, but was dissuaded by the other delegates.

The conference in Lausanne had been intended to outline political reforms to end nine years of civil strife in Lebanon and appoint a "national unity" cabinet to implement the changes. But instead of suggesting how Christians and Moslems could share power more equally, the meeting ended with only a vague six-point declaration aimed at consolidating the fraying cease-fire declared on the second day of the conference.

The statement called for formation of a high-level security committee, headed by Gemayel, to disengage combatants along civil war fronts and arrange the deployment of Lebanese police units and army reserves in the buffer zones.

The statement said there also was agreement to continue consultations among the participants in the conference while Gemayel appoints a 32-member commission to prepare a draft constitution within six months.

Many participants and aides indicated that the agreements would be no more than ink on paper. They noted that scores of cease-fire agreements have so far failed to end Lebanon's turmoil.

"Whether we've succeeded to save Lebanon, I do not know," said 78-year-old Pierre Gemayel, the Lebanese president's father and leader of the Phalange Party, the largest Christian militia faction.

Robert Franjeh, son of former president Suleiman Franjeh, a Syrian-backed participant in the talks, called the statement a "face saver."

A government official privately commented saying, "It is a diplomatic way of saying we have failed to agree."

In Beirut, the independent daily An-Nahar and the leftist As-Safir said Gemayel made a threat to resign during the closing session of the talks but that the eight other conferees unanimously pledged to cooperate in bringing about a genuine cease-fire and urged him not to step down. Gemayel then agreed to stay on, the papers said.

There was no official confirmation of the report, which would indicate that the Druse and Shiite Moslem opposition leaders no longer were demanding that Gemayel, a Christian, quit his post.

As-Safir quoted Syrian Vice President Abdul-Halim Khaddam as telling the nine conferees in Lausanne: "You are responsible for the dialogue's failure. At the next conference, and there will definitely be another one, others beside you will come who will not make miscalculations."

Khaddam, officially the Syrian observer at the conference, was actually a major force at the meeting because of Syria's backing for the Druse and Shiites.

Jury Indicts Tax Protestors

RALEIGH — Two tax protestors from Wilmington were indicted Tuesday by a federal grand jury on charges of violating federal tax laws, the Internal Revenue Service said in a news release today.

The IRS said the indictments were returned against Marc S. Kelly and Margaret Mintz. Kelly was charged with one count of conspiracy to defraud the U.S. government and seven counts of aiding and assisting in the preparation of false W-4 forms. Ms. Mintz faces one count of conspiracy and four counts of aiding and assisting in preparation of the allegedly false W-4 forms.

The IRS said the conspiracy charge carries a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. The aiding and assisting charges each could result in a maximum sentence of three years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Has Big Plans For N.C. Studio

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — "King Kong" producer Dino De Laurentiis has announced he is building up his North Carolina studio to mammoth proportions, including up to 10 movie production stages for year-round use.

His studio complex already houses two sound stages, 20 production offices and wardrobe and property facilities.

But De Laurentiis, 61, says his company will spend $25 million to $50 million in the Wilmington area in the next year by producing a new film and through studio expansion.

De Laurentiis, whose other pictures include "The Bible" and "Ragtime," was in this eastern North Carolina city Monday for the premiere of "The Bounty," his recently completed film starring Lord Laurence Olivier, Anthony Hopkins and Mel Gibson. He said he was premiering the movie in Wilmington as a way of thanking some of the people involved in negotiations to bring the studio complex here.

Utilities...

opinion affirming the city's authority to do so.

"After you have had an opportunity to discuss street lighting with the commissioners," Mrs. Meeks memorandum said, "we can proceed with the adoption of an ordinance (by the City Council) delegating the responsibility for street lighting to the Utilities Commission."

Horne, reminding commission members that the street lighting question has been discussed a number of times over the years, said the city now pays the commission about $250,000 a year for street lights.

Horne noted that if the commission is given the responsibility of funding the street light system, "the cost would be passed along to (GUC) rate payers. We'd have to increase rates to pay for the lights," Horne said, suggesting that the cost to the 24,000 electric customers would be "less than $1 per month for residential customers."

During the discussion of projected capital needs, commission members were told that the electric department would need an average of $5 million a year over the next five years to meet maintenance and expansion costs. Horne suggested that the revenue will have to come from rates and charges.

"We've been spending $2.2 million to $2.4 million" in revenue from rates and charges over the past few years for capital projects, with the rest coming from bond funds.

If the commission continues to fund maintenance and expansion at its present rate, Horne said "we will need a rate hike," pointing out that a 5 percent increase in electric rates will yield about $1.5 million in revenue.

Horne suggested that the GUC also faces large expenditures if areas under consideration for annexation by the city are annexed.

Horne told commissioners that water and sewer service to three areas named as future annexation possibilities by the City Council on March 8 would cost an estimated $9.63 million.

Service to an area north of Greenville Terrace up to and including Colonial Mobile Home Park, Oakgrove Estates and property outside North River Estates would cost $3.1 million, while service to property north and south of Mumford Road not presently in the city limits, including Floral Gardens subdivision and Country Squire Estates, would cost an estimated $1.15 million to install, Horne said.

Service to the third area, including all property north of N.C. 33 to the Tar River, including acreage along Port Terminal Road, River Hills, the subdivisions of Brook Valley, Holly Hills, Oakhurst, Camelot, Cherry Oaks and Tuckahoe, as well as Azalea Mobile Home Park, would cost $5.38 million.

School Bd. ...

mentioned they understand legislation is already in place to re-institute such a tax. Board member Frank Grooms recalled that the RTI study shows that over 40 percent of countywide taxes are raised in Greenville, but only about 30 percent is spent by Pitt County Commissioners on city schools, "which means simply that more money is being raised in Greenville than is being spent here."

In response to a question by board member Ernest Brown on how much a supplemental tax would add to the city school budget, Blinson said it would take some research to come up with an estimate, and that the information would be part of the report brought back to the board.

Under the current tax allocation structure, no funds from city taxes are allocated to the city schools — local support comes entirely from county funds appropriated to county and city schools on a pro-rata share basis. Blinson reiterated a finding by the RTI report which indicated that, if merger takes place, the estimated cost of bringing facilities in both school systems up to recommended standards would be $30 million. Without merger, the cost is estimated at $40 million. "Which means, in my opinion," Blinson commented, "the eventual difference in cost if merger does not take place will be in the neighborhood of $10 million. I feel that instead of duplicating facilities, the money could be used much more effectively elsewhere."

Board members will conduct a workshop at Rose High Monday night to continue the discussion of alternatives to merger.

Hail-Bearing Thunderstorms Hit Southeast

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

Hail-bearing thunderstorms ripped through the Southeast today, sending trees crashing across roads, while wintry weather blamed for 16 deaths frosted 10 states from Tennessee to Michigan and darkened 160,000 homes in Kansas and Missouri.

Firefighters in southern California meanwhile kept watch for more blazes, fueled by hot, dry winds and near-record heat, after a fire destroyed 600 acres of rugged terrain Tuesday.

Beaches in the Los Angeles area were crowded in balmy weather, and two people were swept to their death by waves.

Hundreds of people spent Tuesday night in shopping malls and emergency shelters around Kansas City, Mo., as utility crews from as far away as Indianapolis continued trying to restore power to more than 90,000 customers blacked out when an ice storm roared in from the Rockies on Sunday night.

An additional 70,000 homes scattered around Kansas also remained without electricity.

Kansas City Power & Light Co. called the damage the worst in its history, and said it might be next week before hundreds of two- and three-man crews could restore power.

"This has been one of the more taxing operations in recent times," said Don Eisenberg, director of disaster services for the Kansas City chapter of the American Red Cross.

Deaths from the last storm of winter before that season gave way to spring Tuesday included those of an elderly couple found asphyxiated in their home south of Topeka, Kan., where they had burned charcoal to heat their bedroom.

Winds accompanying strong thunderstorms gusted to 61 mph at Fort Bragg, N.C., this morning. Severe thunderstorm watches calling for hail and high winds were up for the morning hours in advance of the storms' march through North Carolina and Virginia.

Strong gusts overturned a trailer in North Carolina's central Lee County, where the wind uprooted barns, shelters and trees that blocked rural roads, a sheriff's dispatcher reported.

Near Tokeena Crossroads in western South Carolina, high winds during a thunderstorm lifted a barn into a house, damaged buildings and other barns and wrapped roofing tin around power lines, the National Weather Service reported.

Those storms were expected to head out to sea after sweeping through Virginia today, but forecasters said no break was in sight from the snow that has plagued the Ohio and upper Mississippi valleys.

"This rain and snow will be lingering over the Northeast for at least the next couple of days," said Hugh Crowther of the Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo.

By early today mostly light snow extended from Michigan into Wisconsin, Minnesota, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Ohio, Missouri, Tennessee and Kentucky.

The heaviest snow fell in east-central Iowa, where Columbus Junction got 7 inches Tuesday with up to 5 more inches forecast today.

With Tuesday's temperature in Los Angeles at 87 degrees — just two short of the 52-year-old record high for the date — about 50,000 people frolicked on the city's South Bay beaches.

"We are extremely busy today with a lot of rescues," said Hermosa Beach senior lifeguard Dan Crompt. A 62-year-old man and a son who was fishing with him were swept to their deaths when a large wave dragged them into the surf near Marineland on the Palos Verdes Peninsula.

Power lines downed by high wind sparked a fire that charred about 600 acres of rugged countryside on Rattlesnake Mountain, on the Riverside-San Bernardino county line, fire officials said.

In Missouri, where more than 6,000 telephone lines were still down, the National Guard was activated to help set up emergency generators and clean up uprooted trees after Lt. Gov. Kent Rothman declared a disaster in Clay, Platte, Johnson and Cass counties.

Red Cross and Salvation Army shelters were filled Tuesday night and about 50 people brought sleeping bags, blankets and pillows to the Blue Ridge Mall, which was open as a shelter for the second night.

Some blacked-out residents were frustrated to see neighbors' homes across the street still lit, a quirk of power line configurations.

"That's a point of tremendous frustration," said Turner While, a spokesman for KCP&L. "You're looking at your neighbor on a cold night, and it doesn't do your attitude any good at all."

Besides the elderly couple asphyxiated, deaths blamed on the storm since Sunday included those of two people whose light plane crashed in snow in Joplin, Mo.; two truck drivers killed on an icy Kansas highway; a woman who died in a Nebraska traffic accident; a skier killed in a Colorado avalanche; five people whose boat capsized in heavy winds in New Mexico; and three people whose pickup truck was swept off a bridge in Missouri.

power and phone lines in the Topeka, Kansas area. Local residents are still without power due to the widespread damage. (AP Laserphoto)

Guilty Of Fraud In 'Tax Shelters'

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Taxpayers are always in the market for a tax shelter, but an internal revenue service official advises caution because some can cost more money than they save.

That was the case for two Charlotte financial consultants convicted of operating a fraudulent tax-shelter and their investors.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert Potter Monday sentenced Robert Jones Jr. and James Mallas, two Charlotte financial consultants, to 12 years in prison for operating a fraudulent tax-shelter scheme and conspiring to defraud the government of more than $4 million in taxes.

Potter also fined Mallas $75,000 and Jones $40,000 and ordered them to pay any taxes they owe. The two businessmen say they plan to appeal.

FBI and IRS agents spent two years investigating a coal mining venture promoted by Jones and Mallas. The agents interviewed dozens of investors, which included more than 100 doctors, lawyers and business executives from North Carolina and South Carolina.

"It happens all over the country," said Rod Young, an IRS spokesman in Washington. "People are looking for ways to shelter their income. There are some unscrupulous promoters trying to take advantage of the tax laws in ways that were not intended."

Agents found that the typical investment in the Charlotte case called for the investor to put up $10,000 cash, get a $25,000 loan and deduct $35,000 on tax returns as advanced royalty payments.

"It was fraud," said Robert Pence, who heads the FBI's operations in North Carolina. "They were representing to (investors) that they had land available and this land had resources: coal that could be mined."

But the land had few, if any, coal reserves, Pence said, and Jones and Mallas knew it.

A special grand jury indicted Jones and Mallas last May, accusing them of causing more than 120 investors to take fraudulent deductions totaling about $8.7 million on their 1977 and 1978 income tax returns.

Although the investors were not subjects of the FBI and IRS investigation, those who took advantage of the tax-shelter program may have to pay millions of dollars in back taxes.

Bill Ball, chief of the IRS examination division for North Carolina said those back taxes could total more than $4 million.

Join Rush For Immunity Status

WASHINGTON (AP) — Local governments are pressing for the same antitrust immunity enjoyed by states.

More than 200 suits have been filed against county governments since a 1982 Supreme Court decision made them liable for antitrust damages, just as corporations are.

"The results are chilling for county governments and their officials because, under the terms of the Sherman Antitrust Act, not only is the government potentially liable for damages, but so are its elected officials."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened mixed today, as traders watched developments affecting budget deficits and interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 1.25 points at 1,174.52 in the opening half hour of trading.

Advances and declines were about even in the early going on the New York Stock Exchange.

A Commerce Department projection Monday that the economy is expanding at a robust 7.2 percent annual rate in the first quarter renewed fears that such growth cannot be sustained without re-kindling inflation.

And speculation has increased that inflation jitters would prod the Federal Reserve to make credit scarcer, something that could push interest rates even higher. Some analysts say the Fed already may have moved to a more restrictive stance.

But hopes have grown for some Congressional action on reducing budget deficits before the November election. President Reagan is lobbying Congress for a three-year, $150 billion deficit-reduction plan while Democrats are pushing for $185 billion in cuts.

Reflecting the uncertainties on Wall Street, eight of the 15 most active issues were unchanged in the opening minutes of trading on the NYSE.

Dayton-Hudson fell 1/4 to 30, American Express was up 1/4 at 31 1/2, Eastman Kodak was off 1/4 at 66 3/4 and Exxon slipped 1/8 to 38 1/4.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones industrials rose 4.39 points to 1,175.77.

About three stocks rose in price for every two that fell on the NYSE.

Big Board volume climbed to 86.46 million shares from 64.06 million on Monday, which was the slowest session since last Dec. 27.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 53 to 91.40. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .60 at 211.30.

Hospital Board...

Approval was given for Pitt Memorial to be a training site for the Surgeon General of the U.S. Army, with the training of surgeons enlisted in the Army to be carried out here.

The number of patients served by the hospital was reported down from 12,182 last February to 11,946 this February, even with one extra day. While activity was less, expenses are also down because of careful management, Hospital President Jack Richardson said. As an example, he reported that nursing services salaries are 18.1 percent under budget for February.

The Phase I construction project is going well, with the roof expected to be begun within the next three weeks, building committee chairman Charles Gaskins said. Architectural work for the minimal care unit, additions to the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit, and renovations and additions to the critical care unit to support cardiac surgery are under way. It is expected, Richardson said, that the new Emergency Department will be ready for occupation by January 1985.

Reappointment of one-half of the medical staff was approved, following a recommendation of the medical staff executive committee for this approval. The action reappointed 106 doctors for full privileges. Provisional active staff privileges were given to Dr. Thomas G. Irons and Dr. Roberta S. Gray in pediatrics, Dr. Stefano Marcuard in gastroenterology, and Dr. David Dabbs in pathology.

Provisional consulting staff privileges were accorded Dr. Frank C. Sheldon and Dr. Howard L. Shareff in dental surgery; Dr. Ronald B. May in pediatrics, Dr. David Shumway in emergency medicine and Dr. Edwin B. Cooper in rehabilitation medicine.

Full staff privileges were given for the first time to Dr. H. Thomas Norris and Dr. Henry Marrow in pathology; Dr. Suzanne Shepherd and Dr. David Small in emergency medicine; Dr. Edwin Bartlett in surgery-orthopedics; Dr. Nicholas Ogburn in surgery-vascular and thoracic; Dr. David Clark in obstetrics and gynecology; Dr. Elizabeth Gamble in internal medicine; Dr. Joseph Wicker in anesthesiology; and Dr. Angela Stewart in pediatrics.

Dr. Jack Koutz was moved from active to consulting privileges.

David M. Coniglio was approved by clinical duties as a physician's assistant, with Dr. Jack Allison as his primary supervisor.

It was reported that medical staff bylaws have been amended to correct gender designation.

Mondale...

Morning America" program that the Hart surge early in the campaign stemmed in part from the "effects of momentum." He added: "That's a very ephemeral notion." Now, he said, "We'll see a discussion of the issues."

James Johnson, Mondale's campaign manager, said on the same program that in Illinois, "I think we were really able to change the terms of the debate so that people focused for the first time seriously on who would be the best president."

In the popular vote, a non-binding beauty contest for presidential contenders, here's how the balloting looked with 11,416 of 11,640 precincts, or 98 percent, reporting:

Mondale 657,056 or 41 percent.

Hart 573,683 or 35 percent.

Jackson 336,364 or 21 percent.

Democratic candidates who have dropped out took the rest, led by Sen. John Glenn. President Reagan ran unopposed on the Republican ballot.

Illinois voters separately selected 171 delegates, plus an uncommitted slate under the control of Chicago Mayor Harold Washington. The breakdown gave Mondale 97 delegates, Hart 39 and Washington 35.

And as expected, Mondale outdistanced the field in Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party caucuses in his home state of Minnesota, where 75 delegates were up for grabs. With 150 of 250 sample precincts reporting, Mondale carried 62 percent of the vote to 7 percent for Hart, 3 percent for Jackson and 28 percent uncommitted. Party officials said it would be several days before all 4,108 precincts reported in.

In the five days before Tuesday's voting, Mondale attacked what he said was Hart's naivete and inexperience and questioned whether the senator is ready for the White House. Enjoying his most significant success, Mondale indicated he would continue that line of attack.

"Americans are finally getting the debate they deserve on who would make the best president," he said.

Hart blundered twice in the days leading to the primary, accusing Mondale of making a personal attack on the basis of television commercial which later turned out to be nonexistent, and airing — and then yanking — another commercial which attacked the endorsement of Mondale by Cook County Democratic boss Edward Vrdolyak, an unpopular figure among blacks because of his running feud with Washington.

Over the next few weeks, 460 delegates will be chosen in primaries in Connecticut next Tuesday, in New York on April 3.

Bomb Threats At County Schools

Telephoned bomb threats were received at three Pitt County schools this morning, forcing evacuation of some students.

School officials said the anonymous calls were received at Wellcome Middle School, Pactolus Elementary School and Belvoir Elementary School. The callers said bombs had been set in each school, and had been set for detonation in late morning.

Principal Ed Tadlock said the call was received at 9:22 a.m. at Wellcome Middle School. A search of the building failed to turn up any explosive but Tadlock said the students would be removed from the building.

A second call was received at the Pactolus Elementary School at approximately the same time. According to school officials, students were evacuated from the building and placed on buses shortly after the call. By mid-morning no bomb had been located.

Belvoir School received its call later in the morning.

Chargers Emerge With Forfeit Win

By JIMMY DUPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — With a couple of exceptions, the baseball game Tuesday between D.H. Conley's Vikings and Ayden-Grifton's Chargers was a routine pitchers' duel for six innings. But the operative phrase in that sentence is "a couple of exceptions."

Conley pitcher Paul Hill gave up just one hit and struck out seven through six innings, while Ayden-Grifton's Terry Garrett gave up four hits and struck out four as pitching dominated the action on the field.

The result of the contest, as it stands, was that the Chargers emerged with a 7-0 victory on a forfeit, which was protested by Conley Coach Alan Wilson. The ruling on that appeal is expected by the end of the week.

The controversy centers around the interpretation of a rule by home plate umpire Charles Coburn. An error in transferring the names of Conley's starters from the original list to the card given Coburn resulted in first baseman Darryl Edwards being omitted from the lineup. Both coaches' lineup cards, as well as the official scorebook, had the correct list of Conley players.

The mistake went undetected until the top of the seventh when Hill walked the first two batters, then fell behind 2-0 against Shannon Peede.

Wilson decided it was time to make a pitching change and summoned Edwards to relieve Hill. When Coburn attempted to make note of the change on his card, he noticed the error.

Edwards was ejected for being an illegal substitute, but Coburn then realized the game had been started — technically, at least — with just eight fielders for the Vikings. North Carolina high school baseball rules require nine players in the field at the start of the game, and Coburn's interpretation was that that requirement had not been met.

The result: forfeit followed by (vehement) protest.

"It was (Coburn's) responsibility to check the lineup before he allowed the game to start," Wilson said. "I was wrong for giving him a lineup without the right names written in, but he was wrong for letting the game start without checking to make sure there was a fielder listed for the (designated) hitter."

"He's saying you can't finish it with eight, but he started it with eight. I'm not worried about the outcome because we were playing well; I really think we'd have won it anyway."

Until the game-ending (?) decision in the seventh, the contest was a showcase of pitching, defense, and, well, controversy.

The Vikings managed just three base runners in the early innings. Steve Mills reached first on an error in the opening frame but was the latter half of an inning-ending double play.

Edwards also reached on an error, and Charger pitcher Terry Garrett caught him leaning off first.

Edwards raced for second on the pickoff attempt but was tagged for the first out, and Garrett struck out the side.

Hill drew a base on balls to open the third, but courtesy runner Martin Anderson was picked off by Garrett to end the rally.

Conley's only runner to get past first was Todd Cochran, who led off the fourth with an infield single — the Vikings first of the afternoon. Cochran got to second on a sacrifice by Steve Mills, and then the first skirmish of the day erupted.

The base umpire called a balk on Garrett for a "jerking" movement after he was on the rubber, allowing Cochran to take third against mild protest by Ayden-Grifton Coach Bob Murphrey.

But on the next pitch, Coburn called another balk when Garrett "stepped off the front of the rubber," allowing Cochran to score the game's only run. This time Murphrey's comments were rewarded with an early exit, as Coburn ejected him from the game.

"I didn't think he said enough to get thrown out," Wilson said. "I've done a lot worse, and I'm sure Bob has too, and not gotten thrown out."

Despite the outcome, both coaches put the game in perspective afterwards.

"If the protest is upheld, we won't finish the game or replay it," Wilson said. "We're trying to get a ruling one way or the other. (Ayden-Grifton) may count it as a win, but as yet they haven't scored against us on the field.

"We're showing a lot of improvement in the way we've been playing lately, and they showed today they can play in tight situations."

Murphrey, who was as surprised by the forfeit as he was by his ejection, showed more concern over his team's offense.

"I'm disappointed we're not hitting the ball any better than we did today," Murphrey said. "We just haven't scored a run in our last two games. Our pitching is good; our defense has been excellent; we just haven't hit the ball the way I know we're capable."

Ayden-Grifton enters Eastern Carolina Conference play Thursday against SouthWest Edgecombe, while Conley travels to Kinston on Friday.

UNC No-Hits ECU, Lady Bucs Retaliate

North Carolina's Virginia Augusta tossed a no-hitter at East Carolina University's Lady Pirates yesterday, but the ECU got some measure of revenge by handing the Lady Heels their first loss of the year in the second game.

Carolina took the opener, 6-0, while the Lady Pirates bounced back with a 2-1 win in the nightcap.

Augusta allowed only one baserunner in the game, walking the first batter she faced. But she then retired the next 21 in a row while her teammates were scoring more than enough for the win.

The Lady Heels got all they needed in the first, scoring once. Candy Jarrell tripled and scored on a single by Maria Powers. Carolina added one in the second, two in the fifth and two more in the seventh. The last two came on a homer by Jarrell.

Jarrell led the Lady Heel hitting with two.

In the second game, the Lady Pirates broke a scoreless tie in the fourth, scoring twice. Both runs came after two had been retired on five straight walks.

Carolina rallied for one in the sixth, but ECU snuffed out the rally in time.

Marsha Brown struck out 10 in the loss, while winner Stacey Boyette fanned four. Kay Holt had two hits for UNC, the only batter with more than one hit.

East Carolina climbs to 9-5 with the win while the Heels drop to 5-1.

Crum Confident Against Cats

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The good thing about college basketball is that on a given night, anybody can beat anybody, says Louisville Coach Denny Crum.

"And we're playing on a given night," Crum said of Thursday's NCAA Midwest Regional semifinal against No. 3 Kentucky in Rupp Arena.

"It's obvious that Kentucky's going to be the favorite," Crum said at a news conference Tuesday. "They're supposed to win and we're not, but that just means we're relaxed."

One key, Crum said, is that if Kentucky dominates on the inside, his Cardinals must prove master on the outside.

"We always have trouble with big men, because our center (Charles Jones) is only 6-foot-8," Crum said. "If we let them get the ball inside, it's going to be hard to beat them.

"If they dominate the inside, we have to dominate the outside. Hopefully, somebody (for Kentucky) won't shoot the ball well from the outside and we can sag and help out inside. Of course, Kentucky is so big, they can get the ball inside even if we're sagging."

Jim Master canned 19 points for Kentucky in the season-opening 65-44 rout, while Louisville's backcourt duo of Lancaster Gordon and Milt Wagner, the team's leading scorers, combined for only 12 points.

Louisville outrebounded the much taller Kentucky 41-36 in the game, but while Louisville's backcourt of Jones, 6-8 Billy Thompson and 6-7 Manual Forrest managed only 16 points combined, the Wildcats 7-foot Sam Bowie, 6-11 Melvin Turpin and 6-9 Kenny Walker had 36 points together.

Gordon, a senior, said Kentucky's guards applied a lot of pressure in the last game, and Gordon hopes that he and Wagner have adjusted to that.

"They pressured us and when we tried to drive, they helped out a lot," Gordon said. "But we've been playing against that all year now."

Jones said Kentucky presents a unique problem because "you don't face too many seven-footers on the same team."

"It's hard to stop them because of their height," Jones said. "We're just going to have to work much harder."

"We won't shy away or be afraid," on offense, Jones said. "If we get the ball inside we are going to take it to them. Sometimes they make you want to arch your shot more to get it over them, but you just got to play your game."

A new problem for Louisville is the status of Forrest, who severely twisted an ankle in Louisville's two-point win over Tulsa on Sunday. "It's just a wait and see thing with Manual," said Crum.

The game doesn't hold the same emotion as the season opener and there is no talk of retribution, Crum and the players said.

"It's a different game for both teams," Crum said. "It will be exceptionally emotional because this is the regional semifinals," Crum said.

"We don't have to make up for anything," Gordon said. "Our record and where we are stands for itself."

The Kentucky-Louisville game is one of four Thursday night as the NCAA playoffs resume with regional semifinal competition in the East at Atlanta and the Midwest at Lexington, Ky. The Midwest bracket in St. Louis and West in Los Angeles, also semifinals, are set for Friday night.

Along with the Kentucky-Louisville contest, Maryland, 24-7, plays sixth-ranked Illinois, 25-4, in the Midwest. North Carolina, 28-2, faces Indiana, 21-8, and Virginia, 19-11, takes on No. 18 Syracuse, 23-8, in the East.

In the Midwest, No. 5 Houston, 29-4, engages No. 16 Memphis State, 26-6, and No. 4 DePaul, 27-2, plays Wake Forest, 22-8. The West pairing matches No. 2 Georgetown, 30-3, against No. 13 Nevada-Las Vegas, 29-5, and No. 15 Washington, 24-6, vs. Dayton, 20-10.

Virginia, which failed to win the NCAA championship the past three seasons despite the presence of towering Ralph Sampson, feels it has a lot to prove since the 7-foot-4 center has gone on to the pros.

"I think people tended to underestimate us going into the season," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland. "I think people tended to look at us and say, 'They were a good basketball team with Ralph Sampson, but they won't be that good anymore.'"

Syracuse, a young team headed by sophomore Rafael Addison and freshman point guard Dwayne "Pearl" Washington, is expected to play run-and-gun against Virginia, a veteran team.

Top-ranked North Carolina has three starters from the 1982 NCAA championship team — Michael Jordan, Sam Perkins and Matt Doherty — plus freshman point guard Kenny Smith returning to pre-injury form.

Maryland, the Atlantic Coast Conference tourney winner, comes off an impressive 102-77 victory over West Virginia.

Jaguars Crush West Craven, 22-5

VANCEBORO — Farmville Central exploded for ten runs in the fourth inning and romped to a 22-5 baseball victory over West Craven yesterday.

The win was the second of the season over the Eagles by the Jaguars and brought their record to 3-0-1 on the season.

Farmville took the initial lead in the opening frame, scoring three times. But West Craven rallied for a pair in the bottom of the first and then added one in the second to tie the score.

The fourth was decisive, however, as ten Jaguars crossed home plate before the side was finally retired. Nat Norris, Randy Daniels and Billy Godley all walked, loading the bases for Joey Stepp, who singled in one run. Successive walks to Taylor Walston, Mark Wooten and Brian Windom brought in three more runs before Dennis Tripp broke the string with a single, scoring Walston. Craig Shirley singled in both Wooten and Windom and Norris walked to reload the bases. Daniels walked to score run number eight, and a single by Stepp brought in Shirley and Norris to complete the scoring for the frame.

West Craven came up with two more in the bottom of the inning, and Farmville closed out the scoring with nine more runs in the sixth.

The game was called at the end of the sixth because of darkness.

Daniels led the Farmville hitting with a three-for-four afternoon, while Stepp was two-for-three and Tripp was two-for-four.

The Jaguars enter Eastern Carolina Conference action on Friday, hosting Greene Central.

SNOW HILL — Joe Lane handcuffed Greene Central yesterday as North Lenoir claimed a 6-1 baseball victory over the Rams.

Lane, who went the distance, scattered three hits — two of them in the inning in which the lone Rams run came — walked just one and struck out seven.

The Hawks took the lead in the non-conference affair in the second, scoring once. Stanley Robinson singled and was sacrificed up. He scored on Bobby Simmons' hit.

In the fourth, the Hawks got what proved to be the winning run. Robinson again opened with a single and Russell Heath walked. After both were sacrificed up, Lane's sacrifice fly scored Robinson.

The Hawks added three in the fifth and one in the sixth.

The lone Greene Central run came in the sixth. Michael Warren singled and moved to second on an error. He scored on Brian Hall's single.

Donnell Thorbes, John Johnson, Eric Wade, Robinson and Simmons each had two hits for the Hawks, while no one had more than one for the Rams.

Greene Central, now 2-2-1, enters Eastern Carolina Conference play Friday at Farmville Central.

HOOKERTON — Maury Harris fired a no-hitter at the Mount Calvary Warriors as the Trinity Tigers opened their 1984 baseball season with a 15-0 romp.

Trinity got all it needed in the first inning, scoring three times. Tim Moseley walked and Harris followed with a single. Two more walks forced in the first run and Steve Stevens singled in the other two.

The Tigers added two more in the second, then scored four in the fifth and six in the sixth.

Harris got into trouble only in the third when he walked the bases loaded but fanned the final batter to end the frame. He struck out 18 and walked five on the day.

Powers and Harris led the Trinity hitting with four each.

Magic In Two Laker Roles

By The Associated Press
 Earvin Johnson was two different players for the Los Angeles Lakers — and the Milwaukee Bucks didn't care much for either.

Johnson played the role of assist man in the first half and scorer in the second to lead Los Angeles to a 99-94 victory over the Bucks Tuesday night and gain a spot for the Lakers in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

"I play so differently and I play for the team," said Johnson, who scored all 20 of his points in the second half. "In the first half I was looking to pass. In the second half I was looking to score and pass."

With the victory, the Lakers became the first team in the Western Conference to clinch a spot in the postseason playoffs.

In other NBA action, it was Washington 99, New Jersey 91; Indiana 123, Boston 121 in overtime; Chicago 108, Cleveland 104 in overtime; Kansas City 115, Houston 102; Phoenix 146, Denver 120; Golden State 103, Seattle 102; Portland 106, San Diego 105 and San Antonio 135, Atlanta 132 in triple overtime.

Johnson sank nine of 11 shots in the second half. He also handed out 11 assists for the game.

The Lakers turned the game around in the third period, outscoring the Bucks 31-17 to take a 68-59 lead. Johnson and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored eight points apiece as the Lakers had runs of 10-0 and 8-0.

Bullets 99, Nets 91
 Darren Daye and Charles Davis combined for Washington's first 14 points in the fourth quarter and Rick Mahorn added the next eight as the Bullets defeated New Jersey.

After entering the final period with 69-68 lead, Washington pulled ahead 83-78 as Davis scored six of his nine points and Daye eight of his 14. Mahorn then took over the scoring load and his eight consecutive points gave the Bullets a 91-80 advantage with 1:58 remaining.

Pacers 123, Celtics 121
 Butch Carter scored 14 of Indiana's 15 overtime points to finish the night with a game-high 28 as the Pacers edged Boston.

The Pacers, who were forced into overtime after leading by 15 points with about six minutes to play, took the lead for good on a Carter's three-point play only seconds into the extra session.

Carmon's Hits Pace Rose In Split

NEW HOPE — Sheila Carmon gave the Rose Rampettes all the offensive punch they needed in the first game with a double, triple and homer for three RBI, but the Lady Warriors avoided the issue in the second game with four walks.

As a result, the Rampettes won the first game 11-6, then lost the second 13-8 despite a seventh-inning rally Tuesday in high school softball action.

"Sheila hit it right out of the park," Rose Coach Bill Kurkendall said. "I've never seen that happen before in girls softball, but that ball must have cleared the fence by 15-20 feet. They decided they'd seen enough in the first game and put on every time in the second.

"That really hurt because we depended on her to get it going today. It seemed like the girls stood around till they got too far behind, then decided to score some runs."

In the opener, Carmon posted a perfect 3-3 at the plate while scoring four runs. Lisa Harkley went 2-3 in the game, with Vicki Parrott 2-4. Amanda Smith went the distance on the mound for the Rampettes.

Rose jumped on the Lady Warriors for five runs in the first inning of the opener. After one out in the first, Windy Jones drew a base on balls, Carmon doubled and Nianza Outlaw walked to load the bases.

A walk to Harkley scored Jones, and Jo Ann Green walked in Carmon. Parrott singled in Outlaw. A dropped fly ball to right by Smith allowed Harkley to score, and Jane Whitley ripped a sacrifice fly to drive in Green.

After Rose took the early lead in the second game, Eastern Wayne plated a run in the third and another in the fourth for a 2-1 edge. But the Lady Warriors scored five in the sixth and six more in the seventh to put the game out of reach.

The Rampettes, now 1-3 on the season, host Northern Nash Tuesday in their Big East 4-A Conference opener.

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's girls' softball team won its fourth game of the season yesterday, rolling over Ayden-Grifton, 11-1.

The game was deadlocked until the fourth when Ayden-Grifton pushed over what was to be its only run.

Then, in the bottom of the fourth, Conley came up with two, moving ahead for good. Cheryl Waters walked and both Karla McLawhorn and Karen Barrett reached on error. Lisa Mills' sacrifice fly scored Waters and a hit by Karen Carraway brought in McLawhorn.

Conley added seven more in the fifth and got two in the sixth on a homer by Barrett.

Carraway went three-for-four in the game for Conley, while Barrett and Vonda Stokes were two-for-four and Anita Lloyd was two-for-three. Ayden-Grifton was led by Danita McCotter with a perfect three-for-three.

The win leaves the Valkyries at 4-1, while Ayden-Grifton is 0-2. The Conley girls return to action Friday at Kinston, while Ayden-Grifton hosts C.B. Aycock Tuesday.

Rocky Mount pushed over two runs in the first inning of the opener and added one in the second. The third was the deciding inning as five Lady Gryphons crossed the plate. Rocky Mount picked up two more in the fourth and one in the fifth. All four Pant-HER runs came in the sixth.

K. Courtney led Rocky Mount with three hits, while Alice Pittman, Bobbie Purvis and Rene Ayers each had two for North Pitt. Pittman slapped a solo homer to open the sixth inning for North Pitt.

In the second game, North Pitt scored all four of its runs in the first inning. It stayed that way until the seventh, when Rocky Mount rallied for three, but was stopped in time.

Courtney, M. Coleman and M. Powell each had two hits for Rocky Mount, while Delores Pittman, Deedee Hines, Annette Moore and Alice Pittman each collected two for the Pant-HERS.

The split left North Pitt with a 1-3 record on the year. The Pant-HERS open Eastern Carolina Conference play on Friday, hosting Charles B. Aycock.

Brighter Outlook For Pitt Future

By ALAN ROBINSON
AP Sports Writer

Just a week ago, the University of Pittsburgh's basketball program was reeling from a late season slump and rumors of impending player defections.

Two victories later, hundreds of Pitt fans stood patiently in line for up to three hours Tuesday to purchase tickets for the Panthers' National Invitation Tournament quarter-final round game Friday against Notre Dame.

The 5,000 tickets allocated the Panthers for 6,500-seat Fitzgerald Fieldhouse went on sale at 9 a.m. and were gobbled up shortly after noon by many of the same fans who thought the Panthers' season ended with a first round Big East tournament loss to Villanova.

"Last week, everybody was saying we had a mediocre season," said Clyde Vaughan, who led Pitt to NIT victories over LaSalle and Florida State. "I said if we won this thing we could call it a great season."

"We're on the verge of a great season," Pitt, 18-12, and Notre Dame, 19-11, will meet in one of four third-round NIT contests Thursday and Friday nights.

Thursday night's games match Santa Clara, 24-8, at Southwestern Louisiana, 22-8, and surprising Xavier, 22-10, at Michigan, 20-10. Virginia Tech, 20-12, is at home against Tennessee, 21-13 on Friday.

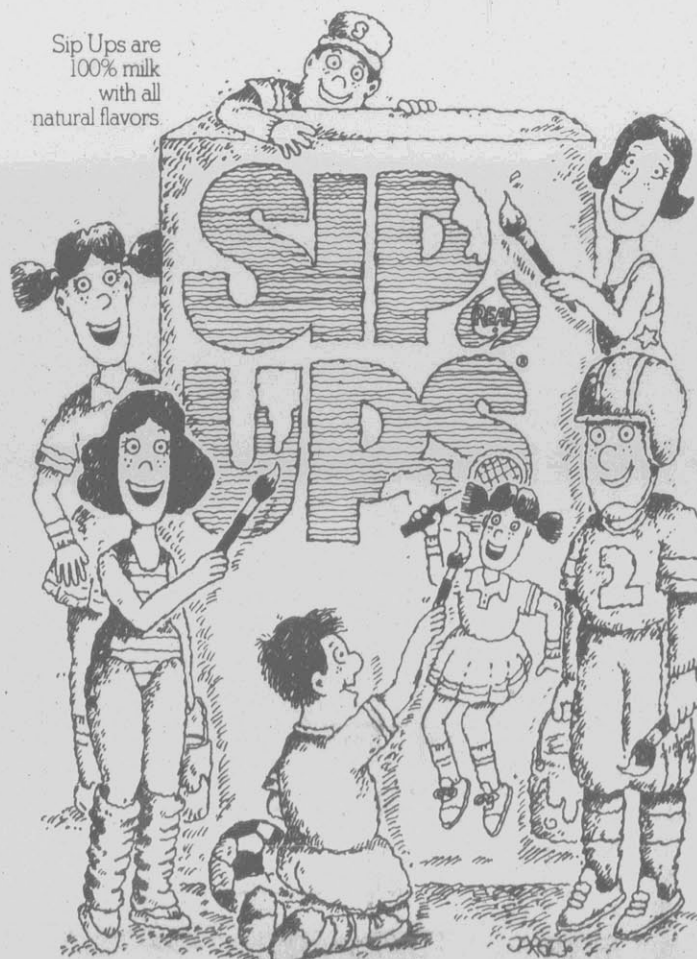

The four winners advance to the semifinals Monday at Madison Square Garden in New York, with the finals set next Wednesday.

The second season provided by the NIT has given a second chance to teams like Santa Clara, Southwestern Louisiana and Xavier that were passed over for the NCAA tournament.

Santa Clara surprised a Lamar team with a 26-4 record by 76-74 on Monday, while Southwestern Louisiana scored a mild upset by knocking off Weber State 74-72 in double overtime. Xavier, 8-20 only two years ago, edged Nebraska 58-57, while Notre Dame, which once trailed Boston College by seven points, rallied to beat the Eagles 66-52.

'Clem' Foster To Miami?

MIAMI (AP) — Clemson University Coach Bill Foster is expected to be named as the University of Miami's new basketball coach today, according to published reports.

The Miami Herald and The Orlando Sentinel, both quoting sources, reported that Foster will be named at UM's announced 11 a.m. EST news conference today in downtown Miami.

Foster, 47, compiled a 156-106 record in nine years at Clemson, in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

He led the team to four post-season appearances — the NIT in 1979, 1981 and 1982 and the NCAA West Regional final in 1980. The Tigers had a 14-14 record this past season, repeating their last-place finish in the ACC.

Foster is one of several coaches UM officials have interviewed since announcing last year that the school's basketball program, dropped 12 years ago, would be resurrected for a full Division I schedule for the 1984-85 season.

Clemson sources told The Sentinel that Foster had flown from Greenville, S.C., to Miami late Tuesday to be on hand for the news conference.

The Herald quotes sources as saying Foster accepted the job Tuesday after talking with UM Athletic Director Sam Jankovich.

Last Friday, Jankovich said he was interested in Foster but they had not talked seriously about the job.

"I think there is mutual interest at both ends," he told The Herald. "If he were very interested, he would be under top consideration."

Foster's revolving 5-year agreement at Clemson was not renewed last year, leaving him three years on the current package.

UNC, LSU Set Games

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana State University has signed a football contract with North Carolina, with the home-and-home series scheduled to start in the 1985 season, athletic director Bob Brodhead announced Tuesday.

Brodhead said the Tigers will play at North Carolina on Sept. 14, 1985. The Tar Heels will visit Tiger Stadium on Oct. 25, 1986.

"We're certainly pleased to be able to add LSU to our schedule," North Carolina Athletic Director John Swofford said. "LSU's football program has a lot of tradition and I think this will be a popular series with fans of both schools."

Brodhead also said that the Tigers have replaced Rice on their 1984 schedule with Indiana State, which will play at LSU on Sept. 15.

"I asked Rice to play us at home only on alternating years starting with the 1984 season," said Brodhead. "I offered them substantial financial remuneration for such a contract and Rice opted to cancel the series instead."

"While I hate to see such a long-time opponent as Rice leave our schedule, it will give us more flexibility to schedule some outstanding teams on a home-and-home basis."

Valvano Tabbed East A-A Coach

SEATTLE (AP) — Jim Valvano of defending NCAA basketball champion North Carolina State will coach the East team in the 22nd annual College All-America game at the University of Washington April 1.

The game, scheduled at 1 p.m. PST at UW's Hec Edmundson Pavilion, is presented each year in the host city of the NCAA's Final Four by the National Association of Basketball Coaches. This season's Final Four will be held in Seattle's Kingdome March 31-April 1.

Top seniors will be picked by the NABC beginning next week. Only those seniors gaining the final round of the NCAA tournament will be missing among those chosen for the East and West squads for the All-America game.

The West coach will be selected later.

The East has a 12-9 edge in the series.

Valvano's North Carolina State Wolfpack, 19-14, was not picked to go to the NCAA tournament this season. Instead, they played in the National Invitation Tournament, losing 74-71 in overtime to Florida State.

Joe DiMaggio, holder of the major league record for hitting in consecutive games with 56 in 1941, set one in the minors also when he batted safely in 61 straight games for the San Francisco club of the Pacific Coast League in 1933.

STEAMING TOWARD CUBA — The Soviet aircraft carrier Leningrad, designed for helicopters, entered the waters of the Caribbean Tuesday accompanied by two other vessels in a task group headed toward Cuba. (AP Laserphoto)

Crew Of Soviet Carrier Waved To U.S. Airplane

By WALTER PUTNAM
Associated Press Writer
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Crew members on the first Soviet aircraft carrier heading for Cuba in 15 years waved at a U.S. Navy plane as it passed close by, carrying a group of American reporters and photographers for a firsthand look.

But inside the surveillance plane, military personnel Tuesday viewed the carrier and two other Soviet ships with sensitive infrared devices, while civilian and military photographers took pictures from the cockpit.

The Orion P3C passed about a dozen times within 1,000 feet of the helicopter carrier Leningrad, the guided-missile destroyer Udaloy and the cargo-oiler Ivan Bubnov about 600 miles east of Miami and 117 miles northeast of Grand Turk Island in the Bahamas.

Nick Young, a civilian spokesman at Jacksonville Naval Air Station, said it was the first time the Soviets have deployed a carrier in the Caribbean region in 23 missions since 1969.

"They've always had cruisers, destroyers," Young said. "But this is the first time they've had an air-capability ship."

Young said official word came Tuesday morning from the Pentagon that the Soviet task group had entered the region. There was no indication of the specific mission, but "they have a friend south of here," Young said, referring to the government of Fidel Castro in Cuba.

"It shows the importance the Soviet Union places on the region," said Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch at a Washington briefing. "We consider it a major movement. We will watch it very closely."

Soviet deployments in the area normally last one or two months, Young said.

Tuesday's media tour for eight reporters and photographers was approved by Navy officials in Washington, Young said.

"They saw it as an opportunity. They just decided to make the opportunity available if anybody wanted to go," Young said.

A similar trip was arranged last year when a disabled Soviet submarine was seen off the Atlantic Coast.

During the three-hour flight from Jacksonville, the Lockheed Electra used radar, infrared detection devices and sophisticated computer equipment to track the vessels well before they were seen traveling in a group.

"Usually, merchant ships are not going to transit in formation," said Lt. Cmdr. Ed Dumas, the mission commander.

"We think we're coming up on the task group now," Dumas said at about 4:15 p.m. EST.

"That's them. That's definitely them," said Petty Officer 3rd Class Jody L. Ponsell, zooming in on his infrared detection screen.

Heat in one ship's stack, dark against lighter shades of gray, was plainly visible on the 8-inch screen.

"You can see his engine room if you want to," Ponsell said. He said later that crew members could be seen in the Leningrad's engine room during the closer passes.

With the fast frigate USS Aubrey Fitch about a mile away, the three Soviet ships steamed west through glinting sunlight on the water.

Greece's Jailed Colonels Make Voices Heard

By KERIN HOPE
Associated Press Writer

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Nine years after he was sentenced to life in prison on charges of high treason, the leader of Greece's disgraced junta, ex-Col. George Papadopoulos, is trying to re-emerge as a political force from his prison cell.

Several other imprisoned ex-officers who staged a coup in April 1967 are now demanding freedom in appeals by their lawyers.

Socialist government officials, many of whom were imprisoned or exiled during the seven-year military dictatorship, insist the jailed colonels' efforts to make themselves heard pose no threat to Greek political stability.

"Democracy today isn't afraid of this fascist front of one-time torturers and tyrants, despite their provocations," the Socialist daily Eleftheri Gnomi said in a recent editorial.

But the government recently cut visits by the colonels' relatives from twice to once a week, after a tape-recorded speech by Papadopoulos was smuggled out of Korydallos jail and played at a right-wing political meeting in the Greek capital.

Justice Ministry officials rule out an early amnesty or a pardon for the jailed colonels.

Despite his imprisonment, Papadopoulos, 64, was named leader of a new right-wing political party, the National Political Union (EPEN) at the January meeting attended by more than 4,000 junta supporters. Party officials and lawyers involved in the case say Papadopoulos agreed in advance that he would become the EPEN leader.

EPEN members want the ex-dictator to head their ticket in next June's elections for the European Parliament based in Strasbourg, France. As a European Economic Community member, Greece sends 24 deputies to the 434-member chamber.

But Justice Minister George Mangakis told reporters: "The cashiered colonels aren't eligible to run for office because they were deprived of political rights as part of their sentences."

Papadopoulos' speech from behind bars attacking Premier Andreas Papandreu's Socialist government for its "Marxist ideology and anti-Americanism" provoked strong protests in Greek newspapers.

"This was a painful gathering of people from the outer darkness. Who permitted such a political provocation and how can this violent man dream of a political career?" the Athens daily Eleftherotipia wrote.

Meanwhile, the dictatorship's former economic czar, former Col. Nicholas Makarezos, 64, has appealed to the EEC for immediate release, alleging he was wrongfully imprisoned.

Brig. Stylianos Pattakos, 72, the third member of the troika that led the junta, appeared last month before Greece's Supreme Court with a similar claim. It was rejected.

Asked about the dictatorship, many Greeks now describe the colonels as "forgotten men." They joke about the junta's puritanism and pettiness, recalling official measures to ban beards and miniskirts.

But grim memories also persist, of torture by the brutal military police and banishment to barren prison islands for opponents of the regime.

The leaders of the coup remain unrepentant, according to their lawyers.

"They don't consider they committed any crime by staging the coup and as a result their morale remains high even after 10 years in prison," Pattakos' lawyer, Panayotis Galanopoulos, told The Associated Press.

Papadopoulos was overthrown by his military police chief, Brig. Dimitri Ioannides, in November 1973 after a student rebellion at Athens Polytechnic University.

Democracy was restored in Greece the following summer after Ioannides' junta collapsed following the Turkish invasion of Cyprus.

Papadopoulos, Makarezos and Pattakos were sentenced to death for high treason and insurrection in 1975, but the sentences were later commuted to life imprisonment. Another 20 officers were given life terms.

The aging ex-officers are held in an isolated wing at Korydallos Prison in a suburb of Athens' port of Piraeus. They occupy single, cement-floored cells measuring 2.5 yards by 3 yards along the same corridor.

"They spend much of the time reading, watching television, discussing among themselves. My father and Papadopoulos, I think, are both writing their memoirs," Yiannis Makarezos, son of the one-time economic czar, told the AP in an interview.

One former officer, Michalis Balopoulos, died of a heart attack in his prison cell. Two others have been paroled for health reasons.

The ex-colonels have no contact with other prisoners at Korydallos. They exercise in a high-walled courtyard. Family members bring food, and they are permitted newspapers and tobacco, but no alcohol, according to Makarezos' lawyer, Panayotis Haritos.

Social Security Rule For The Self-Employed

Retired persons whose livelihood was based on self-employment should note that any income they receive that is based on services performed before entitlement to Social Security benefits is not subject to the annual limit on the amount of earnings a person may have without affecting his or her benefits, according to Fred Lilley, supervisor of the Greenville office of the Social Security Administration.

The rule applies only to self-employment income received in a year after the first year of entitlement to Social Security benefits. This is the year a person files for benefits and meets all conditions of eligibility, whether or not he or she actually stops working.

People who especially benefit from the change are self-employed insurance agents who receive renewal commissions after they retire, retired farmers whose leftover crops are sold in a year after they stop farming, sales people who receive deferred commissions and persons who continue to receive income from their investment in a business or partnership, Lilley said in a news release.

In 1984 the annual earnings limit is $6,960 for people 65 and over, and $5,160 for people under age 65. Benefits are reduced $1 for each $2 earned over the exempt amount. The limit does not apply to people who are 70 or older.

During the first year of retirement, self-employed people can get a full benefit for any month they don't perform substantial services in self-employment regardless of their earnings before retirement.

Whether or not services performed in a business are "substantial" depends on a number of factors. They include the amount of time devoted to the business or profession, including time spent planning and managing, the kind of work done and how the work compares with that the person previously did.

The more valuable and highly skilled the work performed or the larger the business, the more likely it is to be considered substantial.

In general, more than 45 hours of work devoted to a business during the course of a month constitutes substantial service. Less than 15 hours a month is never considered substantial services.

Magician Nearly Impaled In Trick

GLENDAL, Calif. (AP) — Magician David Copperfield is using a cane to get around after nearly being impaled when an underwater escape trick being taped for television went awry, his publicist says.

In the stunt, Copperfield, 27, was bound with chains and submerged upside down in a tank of water, his wrists handcuffed to the tank's frame.

"A 10-foot, 500-pound spike hanging from above was timed to drop two minutes after he was submerged," spokeswoman Dawn Bridges said.

"The chains got tangled up, and because he was handcuffed he had trouble getting out. A couple of assistants finally pulled him out ... I believe they said it was after one minute, 50 seconds."

Hyperventilating and in shock, Copperfield was taken to a Burbank hospital.

"The diagnosis was basically abrasions and pulled tendons in the arms and legs," Ms. Bridges said.

She said he was confined to a wheelchair for a week. "He's on a cane now."

The incident occurred March 11 but was not made public until after doctors decided the magician will be able to complete the special, "The Magic Of David Copperfield," to be broadcast by CBS on April 6, Ms. Bridges said Tuesday.

As for the stunt, "He's still going to try to do it," she added.

Exit-Pollers Saw No Sign Of Lies

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The television networks say there was no evidence that Illinois voters lied to TV pollsters about their choices when they were interviewed after casting primary ballots.

But, just in case, CBS said Tuesday that it carefully checked the exit-polling results "in several different ways," and ABC anchor Peter Jennings cautioned on his evening newscast that the poll results were valid only if the voters had been "straightforward."

Concerns about voters fibbing about how they voted were raised after Mike Royko of the Chicago Tribune suggested in a column last Thursday that lying to TV exit pollsters was "a noble cause."

"Be polite. Talk to them," urged Royko, but "don't give them one honest answer. If you voted for Mondale, say you voted for Hart. If you voted for Hart, say you voted for Mondale."

Royko's concern was that exit-polling information used by the networks, before the polls had closed, had subverted the election process. He was echoing concerns already voiced by the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee, which held hearings last month about the networks' exit polls.

In another column Tuesday, Royko said lying would hurt only the networks. "The results wouldn't change," he said. "The real votes would be counted in a few hours and we'd know who won and who lost. The difference is, our votes — not some network computer — would be 'declaring' the winners."

The battle between former Vice President Walter Mondale and Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado was tight, which helped account for the networks taking longer than usual before forecasting the winner.

The polls in Chicago closed at 8 p.m. EDT. ABC projected Mondale's victory at 9:01 p.m., when 7 percent of the raw vote was counted. ABC said it used raw vote, key-precinct analysis and exit polling. CBS estimated that Mondale would win at 9:30 p.m. NBC called it for Mondale at 9:56 p.m.

CBS said it was taking extra precautions to authenticate its polling results. Ramona Dunn, a spokeswoman for CBS News, said the network's top election officials were looking for evidence of dishonest answers "in several different ways," but "they did not find anything." Ms. Dunn did not specify the special measures.

Jeff Alderman, ABC's director of polling, said no special protections were taken in its polling. "People don't seem to like to lie," he said, adding that rather than lie, some people chose not to talk to the survey interviewers.

"I don't think Mike Royko is powerful enough to make people's behavior change," said Alderman.

Need Viewers, No Laughs

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It appears likely that NBC will be canceling two shows with one pink slip.

"Buffalo Bill," the comedy about the obnoxious Bill Bittinger and his egocentric TV talk show, "The Buffalo Bill Show," is in trouble — and all the laugh tracks that the network forces on the producers will not save either series.

Although the real "Buffalo Bill" has won critical raves and a loyal, albeit small, following who revel in Danby Coleman's antagonistic anti-hero, an NBC source said consistently low ratings have dimmed the chances of seeing the series returned to NBC's fall schedule.

Given one of the few comfortable "hammock" spots on NBC's schedule, Thursday nights between "Cheers" and "Hill Street Blues," it's clear that many viewers have actively rejected "Buffalo Bill," actually getting off the couch to switch off Bill's outrageousness.

This season, the Nielsen ratings show that 17 percent of all the nation's TV homes watched "Cheers," 13 percent watched "Buffalo Bill" and 18 percent watched "Hill Street Blues." "Buffalo Bill" has averaged only a 20 percent share of the viewers watching TV from 9:30 to 10.

"We have been satisfied with the production of 'Buffalo Bill,' but we have not been satisfied with the audience levels it has achieved," said Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment.

NBC has been concerned since the show's inception that "Buffalo Bill" was going to be too spicy for an audience addicted to artificial sweeteners. The network knew that viewers who were questioned by the network were turned off by Bill's totally unrepentant and unredeemable behavior.

That's too bad. "Buffalo Bill" is daringly funny exactly the way it is, but the fact that it hasn't been accepted is just one more reflection of television's numbing, warping influence. It's not enough that sitcoms often are mindlessly bland, but now their characters must be sickeningly likeable, in order to appeal to the broadest audiences.

Besides this trend toward homogenized humor, Hollywood still insults audiences with one of mankind's most condescending inventions — laugh tracks. These loud and boorish mechanical convulsions are not so subtle forms of brainwashing, designed to trick viewers into thinking the material is funnier than it really is.

But those who enjoy "Buffalo Bill," which is not filmed before live audiences, don't need coaxing from a machine. In fact, this series' style of humor made it a highly inappropriate candidate for a laugh track.

"Buffalo Bill" features unconventional comedy, not based on a character telling one-liners, but generally stemming from Bill's loutish behavior and the conflicting personalities and attitudes of the characters. Since much of the funny repartee flowed from conversation, there was little time for a gag man's hammy pause for rim shots.

But when "Buffalo Bill" began last summer, it not only had a laugh track, it had a obnoxiously raucous one.

There are hundreds of maxims that apply to bridge. But if you follow them slavishly, you will never be a winning player. They cater to general situations, not particular hands. Witness this example from last year's world championship.

The French North-South pair reached four hearts and West led a spade. Declarer won and played a trump. He covered the ten with the jack, West won the queen and reverted to spades. Declarer won, picked up the king of trumps, cashed two high clubs and ruffed a club in dummy. Then he came back to hand by cashing the ace of diamonds and ruffing a diamond, drew the last trump and claimed twelve tricks.

In the other room, the Italians were too aggressive and ended up in six hearts. Here, too, the lead was a spade to dummy's king and a trump was led. But French star Michel Lebel stepped in with the king of trumps!

This play made a vast difference in the outcome of the hand. Declarer won the ace, but he could not afford to play another round of trumps — West would win and remove dummy's last trump, and declarer would end up losing a club unless he took a very unusual view of the club position.

So declarer tried something else. He cashed the king and ace of clubs and tried to ruff a club with the board's nine. But when East overruffed with the ten, declarer still had to concede a trump trick for down one.

Knowing the rules for any situation is well and good. Knowing when to break them is better.

Order Retrial In Case

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The state Court of Appeals ruled that a Scotland County man who exercised his right to remain silent should receive a new trial on a conviction of using an explosive to damage an occupied house.

The Appeals Court ruled Tuesday that a lower court erred by letting the state question Isaac Junior Williams about his refusal to talk to officers at the time of his arrest.

The court said the Constitution gives defendants the right to remain silent when they are arrested and it would be unfair to use the arrested person's silence to impeach him at trial.

Williams allegedly bought some gasoline and put it in a plastic milk container shortly before a fire bomb was hurled through his old girlfriend's window in August 1982.

The court also upheld the Forsyth County Superior Court conviction of Thurmond Brown in January 1983 for conspiracy to assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious bodily injury, conspiracy to commit non-felonious breaking or entering and non-felonious breaking or entering in connection with hiring someone to assault his neighbor.

He also was convicted of two counts of solicitation to commit murder stemming from efforts to have a detective and associate connected with the earlier assault killed.

After Brown was indicted on charges stemming from the assault, a paid informant told police that Brown wanted to have an associate and a detective murdered. Another police detective telephoned Brown and met with him, secretly taping both conversations.

Within days, Brown was indicted on two counts of soliciting to commit murder.

Brown's attorneys charged that the taped conversations after Brown had been indicted violate the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to legal assistance.

The Appeals Court ruled Brown's rights were not violated because he voluntarily waived counsel after indictment on the first three charges and before the undercover investigation.

The Appeals Court upheld an Industrial Commission ruling that denied compensation for former Cone Mills Corporation employee James A. Dean, who said he suffered from an occupational disease because of his exposure to cotton dust while working for Cone.

Dean worked for Cone for 24 years before he retired. Court records indicate he smoked about eight to 10 cigarettes a day for about 21 years.

There was conflicting testimony between two physicians on whether the exposure to cotton dust contributed to his disease.

The Appeals Court said the opinions were somewhat speculative and upheld the commission's decision.

Today's Cryptquip clue: N equals B

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Neighbors Delay The Carter Library

By CAROLYN S. CARLSON
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The road to Jimmy Carter's library isn't even built yet, but it already leads from Atlanta to Washington and may yet make a detour to federal court.

It started in the governor's office, wound through the state Department of Transportation and curled past the Olmsted Parks Society and the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation.

And it gets bumpier every day. The road is proving to be the chief obstacle to the former president's plans to create a library, museum and policy center in northeast Atlanta.

Carter sees the road — a four-lane parkway that would encircle the library — as a kind of buffer, protecting the facilities from the encroachments of future development, such as high-rise apartment buildings.

But some neighbors say the road is an encroachment itself. They see the library as an insidious excuse to build an expressway through a historic area.

"It is just as if one slashed a painting in half. Although some pieces would remain, the original work of art would be destroyed," Sally Harbaugh of the preservationist Olmsted Parks Society has said.

"The road is now an albatross pulling down the library ... and, possibly in the future, tying it up in litigation," said Joe Drolet, president of Inman Park Restoration Inc., an association of owners of colorful Victorian homes.

Carter recently denied that the project has been held up: "We never had plans to get started any earlier than May of this year."

But opposition has delayed construction of at least the parkway by as much as a year, as Atlanta and the state Department of Transportation adopted a deliberate approach in order to minimize the chances of the courts cancelling the project.

State Transportation Commissioner Tom Moreland at one point had told Carter that construction could proceed on the roadway starting in October 1983. But the Federal Highway Administration still must approve the road, so mid-summer is the earliest that construction for the road or library could begin.

And neighborhood groups are still promising to file suits in federal court.

Despite the opposition, there are indications of strong support for the $25 million library project, at least outside of the immediate neighborhood. More than half the $21.5 million in gifts and pledges raised so far has come from Georgia, fund-raisers say.

The $20 million Presidential Parkway would be a limited access road stretching 2.4 miles northeastward from the combined Interstates 75 and 85 in downtown Atlanta. It would proceed along a clearing that once was supposed to have been the route of an interstate highway, later abandoned.

A little more than a mile from the exit, the road would split, and the Carter Presidential Library and Carter Center of Emory University would stand on a 31-acre median with formal gardens and a man-made lake in the middle of a half-circle of one- and two-story buildings. The site is one of the highest spots in the city, offering a magnificent view of the Atlanta skyline.

The lanes would converge northeast of the library and then bridge two parks in a middle class neighborhood bordering the Candler Park Historic District.

The parkway would end by forming a T with Ponce de Leon Avenue in the Druid Hills Historic District, a neighborhood dating from the 1890s that includes some of the first mansions built in the Atlanta area.

History buffs were particularly offended by that intersection in a narrow spot between two small parks designed by Frederick Law Olmsted, who designed New York's Central Park and the grounds of the U.S. Capitol. It was that intersection that prompted the comparison with the slashed painting.

The historic significance of the area prompted Carter, as governor of Georgia in the early 1970s, to stop plans for two interstates that would have met at the site now reserved for his library.

But Carter aide Dan Lee said the parkway — with bike and jogging paths, planted medians and shoulders and a 35 or 40 mph speed limit — is "tremendously different" from an interstate.

The well-organized opponents have flooded public hearings since then-Gov. George Busbee first offered the site for the library about six months after Carter left office in January 1981.

"What we have said all along is, build something that's needed and that's all," Drolet said, charging that the DOT's own traffic figures don't justify the elaborate road that is planned. The parkway project, proposed by Mayor Andrew Young in 1982, hit its first real snag last month when the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation recommended the FHA disapprove the road. Once the state and city respond, the federal agency will make a decision, and there will be a 30-day comment period. Carter has firmly tied the future of the road to that of the library, calling the parkway "certainly necessary" to give the library a buffer zone.

He has said he wants to build the library in Atlanta. But he has said he's been invited to go to several universities outside of Georgia, and "if there is a legal or other impediment, I'll have to look for other alternatives."

Research Poses Enamel Fillings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dental researchers says tooth cavities — once filled by metal or porcelain — may soon be plugged by the real thing, the body's own tooth enamel.

The researchers claim to have isolated the gene responsible for the formation of tooth enamel and predict that genetic engineering, will eventually lead to a paste, made from cloned enamel crystals that will be indistinguishable from the original enamel of the tooth.

New Orleans Preparing For A World's Fair

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — With the gates set to open May 12, the New Orleans World's Fair is in what one executive calls the "duck mode" — smooth and unruffled on the surface, paddling like crazy underneath.

Air Base Closed To Civilians

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A few years ago, Edwin Colodny, chairman of USAir, offered an idea for easing the pressure on Washington's crowded National Airport — shift some of the traffic, especially the small private planes, to underused Andrews Air Force Base.

But the suggestion in a speech to an aviation group died almost as it was uttered. If it had not, the Pentagon would have been ready with its biggest guns to shoot it down, say government and private aviation experts.

As congestion at many civilian airports increases, the military stands as determined as ever to block any widespread use of its facilities by commercial or private pilots, even though the Federal Aviation Administration long has urged such a move as a way to save tens of millions of dollars.

"This is an ongoing struggle between the Department of Transportation and the Department of Defense," says Steve Bassett, a spokesman for the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association, which would like many of the military airfields opened up to its members.

Over the past three decades more than 150 military fields have been closed and many are being used by civilian pilots today. But only about 10 percent of the country's 233 active military fields — many of them operating far under capacity — are open to civilians, usually with severe restrictions.

In a report by the Defense and Transportation departments soon to be sent to Congress, the Pentagon again prevails, according to government sources knowledgeable about the report. Of 25 additional facilities examined for possible joint use, "less than five" are given a favorable recommendation and some of those are being phased out for military use anyway, one source said.

Congress two years ago said it wanted the two departments to submit a plan to make military airfields available for other users "to the maximum extent compatible with national defense requirements," saying such a move would avoid the need to spend millions on new airports.

The FAA suggested several years ago that at least 50 military facilities might be suitable for joint civilian use to avoid the need for more civilian airports.

"The FAA traditionally has been for joint use because it increases airport capacity in metropolitan areas and permits more efficient use of existing airports," said agency spokesman Fred Farrar.

Those who advocate civilian use of more military fields argue the facilities were constructed at taxpayer expense and should be made available unless it can be demonstrated that civilian planes would jeopardize the military's mission or pose a safety problem.

Among the facilities that long have been eyed by the private pilots are military airfields near major cities including Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, New Orleans, New York and Boston. But in each case the Pentagon has been firmly opposed to opening the facilities.

In a few cases the aviation community has succeeded.

The city of Houston has been trying to get nearby Ellington Air Force Base for civilian use for eight years. The Pentagon recently agreed to sell the airfield to the city, which plans to open it to small, private planes in July to take some pressure off of the region's two major airports.

An Air National Guard unit will still use the airfield, now paying the city for the privilege.

"Joint use can contribute significantly to resolving capacity problems in major hub cities and enhance the safety and efficiency of air traffic near those cities," says John H. Winant, president of National Business Aircraft Association.

But the Pentagon says each case must be decided independently. It argues that in many cases the civilian use of military airfields would conflict with the military's mission, cause unneeded headaches for local commanders and anger civilians living near the facility who oppose the influx of private aircraft.

Nevertheless, say industry and government officials, the issue is unlikely to go away.

Big buttons worn by fair employees say: "Don't Panic."

Out there in the mud, in what used to be a warehouse district beside the Mississippi River in the middle of town, the site of the fair still looks like a war zone.

But the shape of this $350 million exposition is beginning to show.

For two months, a cash flow pinch gripped the fair. Now Petr Spurney, the fast-talking president of the Louisiana World Exposition Inc., says a fresh infusion of $10 million from the city and the Dock Board means the fair's money worries are over.

The place is as busy as an ant hill kicked in by a kid.

With foundation work complete, or nearly so, exhibitors and concessionaires were moving in as fast as construction traffic would allow.

"An event like this is sort of like a giant stage set," said Jim Brandt, vice president of planning.

"I would guess 5,000 people are working on the project now on a full-time basis ...

"All that stuff snaps into place in the last three or four weeks, including the landscaping, the paving, the filling of the watercourses, the lagoons and the lighting," he said.

"On opening day, be careful where you sit because the paint might still be wet. But we will open as advertised, completely ready."

Brandt said 78,000 season passes for the six-month fair had been sold in advance, and $7 million worth of one-day tickets were bought by tour and travel agencies. Between 11 million and 15 million visitors are expected.

A monorail train system, designed to move 3,500 people an hour, has made test runs loaded with engineers and sand bags instead of tourists.

The theme of the 82-acre fair will be "The World of Rivers; Fresh Water as a Source of Life." It sounds pretty dull but it has been gussied up with such attractions as a 1939-style aquacade in the old Billy Rose style featuring the cleanest beauties in town. They will thrash around in a water ballet, six shows a day, seven days a week.

In addition to lagoons and bayous, there will be weird fountains, a real offshore oil drilling rig, an undersea aquarium filled with former denizens of the Gulf of Mexico, riverboats and a "kid wash" where you send the children through the water spray, clothes and all, and they come out the other end blown dry.

Countries to be represented by exhibits include Australia, Canada, Egypt, El Salvador, France, Israel, Italy, Japan, Liberia, Mexico, China, Korea, the Vatican, Peru, Belgium, Denmark, West Germany, Greece, Ireland, Luxembourg, Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States.

President Reagan is scheduled to fly in for opening day ceremonies.

The biggest national publicity splash came when a newspaper ran a picture of the two voluptuous papier-mache mermaids, with breasts 4 feet wide, who will loom over the fair's city gate, along with sea gods, alligators and other sea creatures.

The fair has resisted demands to cover up.

"Would these same people be upset about the Sistine Chapel?" complained artist Joseph Barth III.

Though Spurney believes practically any publicity is better than none, he would rather head off reports on the fair tax.

It totals 14 per cent — made up of an 8 percent state and city sales tax, the city's 50-year-old 5 percent amusement tax, and a special 1 percent tax imposed to help repay a city loan to the fair.

Spurney, and those who hold concessions, argue that reporters sent to write about the fair will seize upon the 14 percent tax to cry "ripoff."

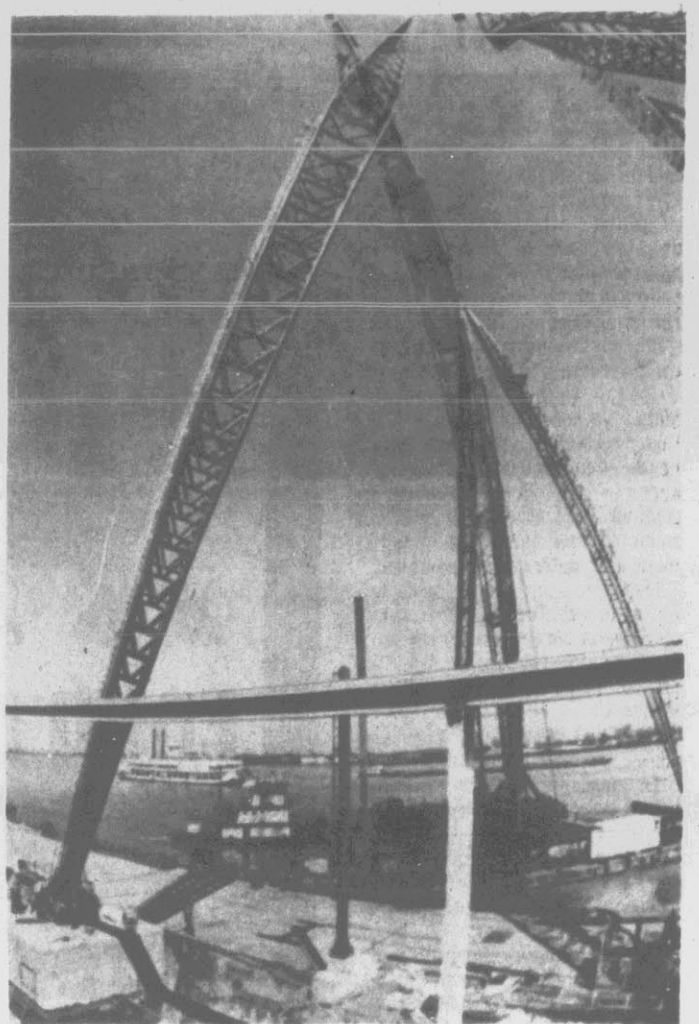

The City Council has before it a proposal to exempt the fair from the amusement tax. Since the move cannot require the 5 percent to be taken off prices, it would leave concessionaires free to add that to their profits. Exemption would cost the city welfare programs about $6 million.

Spurney is hard put to name any world's fair that has broken even. He scoffs at a report that the 1982 World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn., will break even and says the true picture of Knoxville's loss isn't yet known.

Yet there is no shortage of world's fairs: After Louisiana comes Tsukuba, Japan, in 1985; Vancouver, Canada, in 1986; Queensland, Australia, in '88; Paris in '89; Chicago in '92.

Buzz Price, a Los Angeles consultant on fairs, said the appeal is the "residual" value — the structures and improvements that remain when a fair is over. For New Orleans, the benefits will include a 15-acre convention center, new wharves and a new look to an old warehouse district.

At the bottom of the economic pile are the thousands hoping to get a fair job, even one that pays only the minimum wage of $3.35 an hour. The fair will hire 10,000.

TRANSIT TOWER — Workers begin bolting in place one of the giant supports for the aerial transit system that will span the Mississippi River in New Orleans, a featured amusement ride at the World's Fair as well as a long range commuter facility. (AP Laserphoto)

'Suitable' Husbands Said Rare

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Galina is a university professor with her own apartment and two privileges much prized in the Soviet Union — trips abroad and her own car.

But she is unhappy because she can't find a suitable husband.

Galina's problem is not unique. More and more women in the Soviet Union, which celebrates International Women's Day on Thursday, appear to be chafing against ingrained male chauvinism, staying single and pursuing careers rather than marrying for marriage's sake.

Their changing attitudes, as reflected in a recent newspaper article and the published responses from readers, have given rise to social problems which are increasingly worrying Soviet authorities. A declining birth rate is one of the chief concerns.

The Communist Party last year called for more meticulous studies on the changing society.

"What do you need a man for?" is one of the most frequent utterances of young Moscow women. "They all drink, they are lazy, good for nothing. It is very difficult to find a good man."

"How can I marry a man and have his children if I don't respect him?" a Moscow woman asked recently. "It's better to be alone, although to be alone is terrible."

Although Soviet women make up 50 percent of the labor force, they rarely hold senior posts. Promotion is blocked by traditional prejudice and hampered by women taking time off for children.

The typical Russian husband doesn't help at home. His wife shops, queuing for hours for scarce goods. She cooks, cleans and cares for the children.

Younger, mostly Russian women are beginning to rebel. They are forging ahead in education, with statistics showing that 59 percent of those with secondary and higher education are women.

Women's greater independence has spawned a rocketing divorce rate — 3 percent 30 years ago, 30 percent nationwide now and as high as 50 percent in Russian cities such as Leningrad.

A decade ago, most divorcees quickly remarried. Now, says journalist Tatyana Panina, a writer on women's affairs, "the picture is changing."

The problem of liberated women rebelling against their men is almost exclusive to Russians, the dominant nationality in the Soviet Union.

Because of unstable marriages, a more cosmopolitan outlook and in some cases mutual agreement, Russian couples are having fewer children. The tradition-bound Moslem population of central Asia has a much higher birth rate and if the trend continues, the Soviet Union will be less than 50 percent Russian and almost 25 percent Moslem by 2000.

The main newspaper of the Russian federation, Sovetskaya Rossiya, recently carried a reader discussion of Galina's fruitless search for a good husband and the antagonism between sexes.

"For many years, I have lived alone," a Moscow divorcee, S. Romanova, wrote in response to Galina's story.

She has had marriage proposals, she said, "but I have had enough. I have no desire to link my life with a drunkard or a loafer puffed up with the mere realization that he is a man. I haven't met one man on whom I could rely, who could be my helpmate and my friend, not just an egoistic consumer. I have no confidence I will marry again ... Live again under one roof with a stranger who is just called a husband. What for?"

Male anger with modern women was no less great. Galina's tale drew a rebuttal from V. Sysenko, an academic who accused modern women of being selfish and unfeminine.

"You certainly can't apply the words dear or sweet to them," he wrote.

Men thanked him for his attack. "I am ready to sign my name under every line and even to learn the article word for word," wrote V. Boyko from the far eastern town of Nikolayevsk on Amur.

Women were furious. "I am indignant to the depth of my soul," said M. Pavlova of Orel, 200 miles south of Moscow. "Don't you think that the problem is not the emancipated woman but the infantile, effeminate modern man, who is incapable of carrying out his previous role in the family?"

Ms. Panina, who summarized the letters in a long article, said the response was so overwhelming that her newspaper would continue the discussion of male-female problems.

She suggested that "the root of the evil" may be educational differences.

Another reason for the battle of the sexes, she and many letter writers suggested, is that women have changed their ideas, while men have not.

Truffles Growing Scarcer

By SUZY PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
CAHORS, France (AP) — Gourmets are in a dark mood over this year's disastrous hunting season for truffles, the black, subterranean fungi that have graced French sauces, foie gras and other dishes since before the time of Louis XIV.

Truffles, once practically a staple for master chef Escoffier, these days are ever-scarcer and more costly — as high as $200 a pound. That's an increase of 50 percent over last year.

Truffles grow underground in southwestern France and are hunted with pigs and dogs trained to follow the piquant scent. Gourmet writer Brillat-Savarin dubbed them "black diamonds."

"It's the worst year in memory," said Jacques Pebeyre, head of the top French truffle buying and distributing firm in the southwest region of Quercy.

"Very sad," agreed the family patriarch, Alain, who at age 99 is the unofficial dean of truffles and can remember bumper crops before the turn of the century.

A total harvest of 12 tons of truffles is expected by early March, the end of the four-month hunting season — compared with about 45 tons unearthed last year.

The Pebeyres say this season is the nadir of a general downturn in truffles that began in 1914, caused in part because farmhands lost in World War I weren't around to look after truffle-producing land and trees.

Jacques Pebeyre thinks the poverty of this year's crop is mainly due to a torrid July that killed off the truffles.

"But truffles are a mystery," said Pebeyre. "We only know they need our peculiar conditions such as poor, stony soil, scrubby oaks or hazelnut trees, weather that is warm and humid in the spring, dry and hot with some good thunderstorms in the summer. Extremes are out."

They've never been successfully cultivated, but must be hunted.

"In our region, pigs used to do all the hunting, but now we use at least as many dogs as pigs," said Pebeyre.

He sometimes hunts truffles on his own land near Cahors. The dogs can be anything from poodles to mutts and are taught to associate truffle scents with meat.

Other methods, according to Pebeyre, include searching for cracked earth around truffle oaks and looking for the "truffle fly."

"This fly is hooked," said Pebeyre. "It gets stoned on the truffle smell and flits drunkenly around the mushroom, where it lays its eggs. But finding the fly is a darned hard way to find truffles."

The advantage of dogs is that they don't eat the truffles and can be transported easily in cars.

"Pigs want to eat a truffle right away," said Janine Marty, owner of a truffle-hunting pig as she pulled her snuffling charge away from its quarry.

The Pebeyres say top-grade truffles, tinned or fresh, must be firm, dense, black and of a decent size. The most "recherche" truffles for connoisseurs are more than two inches in diameter and have a white-veined inside network when sliced open.

Most produce goes to retailers and restaurants in France, but more orders are being sent to the United States and Japan.

Should one be so lucky to have a fresh, musky truffle on hand, Pebeyre recommends the simplest preparation possible: "Eat it fresh, in salad, or make an omelette."

Both Sides Need 2 CIA Reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorneys for both CBS and retired Gen. William Westmoreland say release of two CIA reports is critical to them in Westmoreland's $120 million libel suit against the network.

U.S. District Judge Thomas P. Jackson took the requests under advisement during a hearing that was part of the pretrial maneuvering in Westmoreland's suit, which alleged he was libeled by a 1982 CBS documentary entitled, "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception." Both sides are seeking a number of documents to buttress their cases, including a report by the CIA's inspector general reviewing U.S. intelligence and another CIA-authorized document detailing the agency's history during part of the Vietnam War period.

BEHIND SCHEDULE
MOSCOW (AP) — An article in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda says the Soviet Union is behind schedule in fulfilling its present five-year economic plan and urges officials to combat idleness, alcoholism and corruption.

Tanning Booths

A Hawaiian Hit

HONOLULU (AP) — In the state known for its sun-drenched beaches, Kimo Turner has it made in the shade with a hot idea in the unlikely form of indoor tanning booths.
After all, no one wants to be caught sunbathing in Hawaii without a tan.
"Everybody thought I was crazy at first," said Turner, 30, who has opened three tanning salons and is planning others. The demand, says Turner, may be created by the fact that in Hawaii a person without a tan sticks out like, well, like a person without a tan.
"It's reverse psychology," he said. "In areas where you don't get much sun, people aren't used to seeing people with tans."
His customers seem to agree.
"A tan is vital here," said one customer who declined to give her name. "You can get a complex if you're not tan in Hawaii."
Others say they like the ease and convenience of the indoor booths.
"I don't like the sand, the grease, grime and all the people," said Judith Shelly.
Others prefer the booths because their busy schedule prohibits them from getting a tan the usual way, Turner said.
"When they can't get out, they come inside," said Turner. "It's time and convenience, just like 7-Elevens."

FIRE PRECAUTIONS
PEKING (AP) — The Chinese government has announced new fire regulations to protect ancient sites, museums and revolutionary monuments, citing heavy fire losses in 1982 and 1983.

Prehistory Complex Is Found

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A South American archeological site has yielded evidence of a prehistoric "condominium," complete with row houses and gathering areas, which indicates people in the Western Hemisphere lived in well planned communities up to 14,000 years ago, scientists say.

Although communities of this type and age are known to have existed in the Old World, the finding in Chile suggests that some people in North and South America were more socially advanced at the time than many previously believed.

Dr. Thomas D. Dillehay of the University of Kentucky said Monday that the well-preserved community has the best evidence recovered so far of this advanced social and economic activity.

Other communal sites this old have been found in the New World, but they lack the quality of relics to prove that they represent the advanced planning and diversified economy of the one in Chile, Dillehay said in a telephone interview.

Generally, man is believed to have arrived in the New World from Asia across an Alaskan land bridge less than 20,000 years ago.

Dillehay, whose work is funded by the National Science Foundation, said the settlement is at Monte Verde in southern Chile, about 800 miles south of Santiago.

Researchers found the site in 1976 but did not begin a major excavation until January 1983. Most of the discoveries came from this recent dig.

So far, they have unearthed 14 rectangular foundations consisting of logs that had been staked into the ground and believe more will be uncovered at the site. Each living unit was about 6-by-10-feet in size, had its own entrance and a shallow, clay-lined hearth pit in the ground.

Some of the units included fallen poles that had been used as side walls, and a few well-preserved pieces of animal hide were attached to the logs and poles. Two large community hearths and piles of clay were found outside the shelters.

"All these architectural units are attached to each other, with one wall being used for two units," Dillehay reported. "The whole complex reminds one of crudely laid-out modern row houses."

Dillehay said that about 35 to 50 persons appeared to have occupied the site and that they stayed at least through several seasons.

"Perhaps most interesting is that the clay comes from distant bogs and rivers and was stockpiled at the site," the anthropologist said. "One of these piles preserved a small footprint, presumably that of a child."

The clay and well-preserved samples of food, including potatoes, nuts, berries and fruits, indicate the dwellers visited distant areas to retrieve products for their diverse economy, he said.

Radioactive carbon dating on charcoal and animal bones found around and in the dwelling units indicate they are between 12,500 and 14,000 years old, Dillehay said.

The remains are buried in the ancient bank of a small creek and were well preserved because they had been covered by a muddy peat-like substance, the scientist said.

Math Teachers Widely Needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office says 42 of the 45 states responding to a survey reported a shortage of mathematics teachers in 1982, following a 10-year decline in the number of mathematics and science education graduates.

"About half of recent bachelor degree graduates who are teaching science and mathematics are not certified or eligible for certification in the fields they are currently teaching," the GAO says. "However, research to date clearly has failed to show a straightforward relationship between teachers' knowledge and the subsequent learning of their students in mathematics and science," the report adds.

Jim Lehrer Back At His TV Job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jim Lehrer, co-anchor of the "MacNeil-Lehrer Newshour," has returned to his public television post after suffering a heart attack last December.

The 49-year-old Washington-based newsman said he was doing fine and the experience was "not without some blessings." Lehrer underwent a double-bypass operation in January.

The Bear Or Sheep To Move

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Associated Press Writer

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — All winter, sheep and ranchers in southeastern Idaho rested easy while notorious No. 38 slumbered. But with spring, the lamb-hungry grizzly will wake again, and now even the experts are having trouble sleeping at night.

The U.S. Forest Service, charged with protecting the endangered bear, says No. 38 is apt to remember a good meal and where she found it.

That's what rancher Bill Enget fears.

Last summer, he says, the grizzly killed 25 sheep on the federal grazing allotment next to his St. Anthony ranch.

"It's tough enough to make it in the sheep business, without having a grizzly bear on your back porch," says Enget, whose family has ranches in the scenic country on the edge of Yellowstone National Park for nearly a century.

Federal officials, who believe the troublesome sow has wintered about 15 miles north of Enget's ranch, also harbor an uneasy anticipation about her debut, expected within a few weeks. But their fear is for the bear's safety.

"We're still working out our contingency plans," says John Burns, Targhee National Forest supervisor. "The concern about the sheep is certainly legitimate. But we also have to look at some course of action that protects the bear."

After No. 38 invaded Enget's herds last year, the sheep were moved off the federal allotment his family has used since 1924. The bear's needs came first, because the land is classified as prime grizzly habitat under the government's program to rebuild the bear population.

However, the conflict between bear and sheep wasn't resolved by moving the livestock to Enget's own land. No. 38, oblivious to the turf rights of civilization, simply followed.

Wildlife managers then set up traps on Enget's ranch and re-located the bear and her two yearlings. Special collars were put on all three so their travels can be tracked through radio signals.

Where they go and what happens to them is of particular concern to federal agencies because both the young are females, essential for bolstering Yellowstone's grizzly population.

"We don't want anything to happen to those three bears," says Jay Gore, leader of the endangered species program of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Boise.

But Enget, busy in his lambing sheds these days, says he doesn't want anything to happen to his sheep.

He thinks the Forest Service should re-designate his grazing allotment so the bears' needs don't prevail. And he wants No. 38 transplanted into the heart of Yellowstone, away from his herds and the growing resort settlements near St. Anthony. His request is supported by the Idaho Wool Growers Association.

"They're all for me removing my sheep," Enget says of the Forest Service. "But that won't work."

He says he can't afford to transport his livestock to distant allotments.

"I could end up out of the sheep business," he says, accusing federal agencies of dragging their feet in responding to his requests.

But officials say they're merely trying to be careful.

Burns says choices under study involve either moving the bear or moving the sheep. And even if an agreement is reached in this case, he says, that won't mean a permanent solution.

"Wherever bear country stops and civilization begins, you'll always have problems," he says.

Obscenities Not For Passwords

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Four-letter obscenities are being denied access to Bank One automatic teller machines, but not because they won't compute.

Bank officials say they felt compelled to begin censoring the four-letter passwords chosen by customers. Some customers, especially in the Ohio State University area, have been choosing words that are unacceptable in polite conversation.

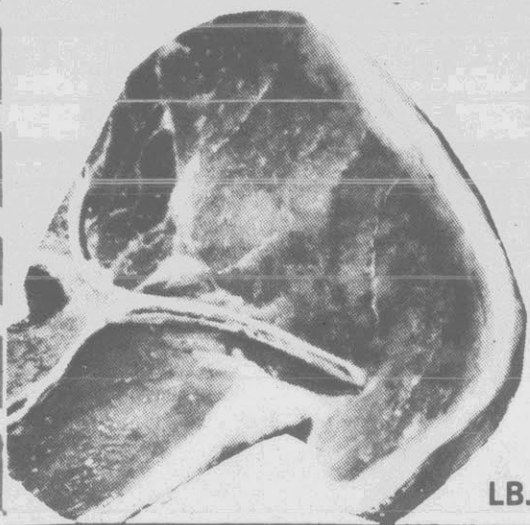

The bank decided to reject the unseemly codes, some of which were in use, said Betsy Brickey, the bank's customer service representative. Pending applications with offensive passwords are being returned.

"It was more of a laugh than any trouble," she said.

The bank has not recalled any cards, but has logged new passwords into the computers, she said.
