No Known Damage In Collision Of Sub And U.S. Carrier

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon officials say a Soviet attack submarine was to blame for a collision involving the nuclear-powered sub and the 80,000-ton U.S. aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk during maneuvers in the Sea of Japan.

The mishap Wednesday resulted in no apparent damage to either vessel, officials said.

There were no casualties aboard the Kitty Hawk, the Navy said. It was not known whether any of the submarine's crewmen were hurt, but the Soviet ship — a 5,200-ton craft of the Victor I class — proceeded away from the collision scene under its own power.

Pentagon officials, who spoke only on condition that they not be identified, asserted that the submarine was traveling without navigation lights.

"We think the submarine hit the Kitty Hawk apparently as the sub was coming up through the sea," said one Navy official.

Capt. David N. Rogers of the Kitty Hawk said he assumes the sub was surfacing at the time of the mishap, because it did not appear on radar.

A submarine possibly would have shown up on sonar equipment, but the Kitty Hawk is not equipped with sonar, Rogers said.

Pentagon officials report that most U.S. carriers depend on their escort vessels and aircraft for sonar detection. Rogers said the closest vessel equipped with sonar was 2.5 miles away at the time.

Senior Navy officials said the escort ships had been tracking the submarine for a couple of days. "The only surprise was that it hit us," said a Navy official who declined to be identified. But, he added, "there may have been an instant when we did lose contact."

The sub commander, U.S. officials said, "may have made an error in judgment" concerning the movement of the Kitty Hawk.

At the time of the collision, Rogers said, he felt his vessel shudder.

"Then the assistant navigator called and said he had a shape in the water that appeared to be the upper portion of a submarine. I went to the starboard side of the bridge and could see what appeared to be two periscopes and the upper portion of a sub that was turning right," Rogers said.

"The sub appeared not to have received extensive damage," Rogers added. "It was under way. But there were no navigation lights. It was completely dark."

In a statement describing the incident, the Pentagon said:

"Following a noticeable shudder which was felt throughout the ship, observers on the starboard side of Kitty Hawk saw the outline of the sail of a submarine resembling that of a Soviet Victor class moving away."

Although the identification of the Victor was somewhat qualified in the statement, Pentagon officials said they have no doubt the boat belongs to the Soviet Navy. Neither mainland China nor Communist North Korea owns Victor-type submarines.

"A visual sighting of the submarine by USS Kitty Hawk's SH-3H helicopter indicated no apparent damage," the Pentagon statement said.

It added that other U.S. warships were "remaining in the area to render assistance if required."

A Soviet cruiser of the Kara class, the Petropavlovsk, was said by the Pentagon to be steaming near the submarine, which was described as traveling at a slow five knots on a northerly course in the general direction of the main Soviet naval base at Vladivostok.

The Kitty Hawk was continuing its normal operations, the Navy said. The collision occurred about 150 miles east of the South Korean coast while the huge carrier was taking part in an annual U.S.-South Korean war game called Exercise Team Spirit '84, a Pentagon official said.

The Soviet Navy customarily keeps a close watch on U.S. naval maneuvers, using submarines, surface ships and aircraft. The United States tracks Soviet ship movements the same way.

Last Nov. 17, a U.S. destroyer and a Soviet guided-missile frigate brushed against each other in the Arabian Sea. U.S. Navy officers also blamed that minor collision on the Soviets.

U.S. and Soviet ships tangled repeatedly in incidents of this type at sea in the 1950s and 1960s, but the number of such potentially explosive confrontations dropped significantly following a 1972 agreement between the two navies aimed at "prevention of incidents on and over the high seas."

Death Squad Suspect Said Long On Payroll Of CIA

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high-ranking Salvadoran police officer allegedly tied to rightist death squads was on the CIA payroll for about five years, according to a U.S. government source.

The source, who spoke on condition he not be named, said the officer, Nicholas Carranza, was paid $8,000 to $10,000 a month by the spy agency.

The source, who provided no other details of the arrangement, had access to material supplied by the CIA to congressional oversight committees on its dealings with Carranza.

The source also was familiar with material provided about Carranza by a former Salvadoran military officer who has been interviewed by several members of Congress and appeared on the CBS Evening News Wednesday.

In the CBS interview, the official said Carranza had received up to $90,000 a year from the CIA.

The New York Times reported in today's editions that Carranza, now head of the Salvadoran Treasury Police, had been recruited by the CIA while he was deputy minister of defense to provide information on power struggles within the Salvadoran military and on political and military developments in the country.

The CIA would not acknowledge or deny that Carranza had been on its payroll.

The former military officer who named Carranza has implicated other top-ranking officials as death squad activists.

In the CBS interview, the informant said Roberto D'Aubuisson, right-wing candidate in El Salvador's presidential election Sunday, had been in charge of the death squads and had taken orders from Col. Carranza.

Asked if the CIA knew of any specific murders, the informant, who was filmed in shadows and spoke to correspondent Walter Cronkite through an interpreter, said, "No, I don't think so."

The informant has been paid by a private, Washington-based organization, the Center for Development Policy, because he "is a courageous man — risking death for himself and endangering his family," said Lindsay Mattison, the center's director.

Mattison, who commented after the payments were disclosed Wednesday, said, "We are optimistic that the Salvadoran officer's revelations will convince the administration and the Congress to investigate these issues more closely and review current U.S. policy."

Two others who played key roles in bringing the anonymous informant's story to public attention, Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., and Massachusetts industrialist Philippe Villers, said they hoped that the officer would come forward and identify himself now that he and his family are settled in the United States.

Mary Helen Thompson, Tsongas' press secretary, said the senator knew nothing about the payments to the former official by Mattison's group and "feels they may have tarnished his credibility somewhat."

Villers, president of Automatix Inc. of Burlington, Mass., a manufacturer of robot systems, said he was approached a few weeks ago by individuals, including Robert White, U.S. ambassador to El Salvador during the Carter administration, who had been in touch with the former officer and vouched for his story.

Mitterrand Is Welcomed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Francois Mitterrand, the Socialist president of France, was welcomed to the White House by President Reagan today at the start of an eight-day visit expected to underscore close French-American cooperation despite differences over economic policies, Central America and the Middle East.

"What matters is that when it counts, we can count on them," a senior U.S. official said shortly before Mitterrand and his wife, Danielle, landed here Wednesday.

Mitterrand's White House arrival was heralded with mass marching bands, trumpeters and a 21-gun salute in ceremonies on the South Lawn.

After conferring with Reagan, Mitterrand was to address a joint session of Congress and attend a state dinner in his honor. This is the first full day of his trip to the United States.

The meeting comes, one official said, as relations between the United States and France are at their warmest in recent times.

Mitterrand's strong support for NATO's deployment of U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 nuclear missiles in Western Europe has apparently bridged past differences between the conservative White House and the Elysee Palace.

Mitterrand's visit is viewed here as a key event in a series of trans-Atlantic meetings intended, one official said, to "demonstrate and reflect alliance cohesion" in economic and political policies.

These meetings, culminating with the annual summit of industrialized democracies in London in June, include a meeting of NATO foreign ministers in Washington in May and the meeting of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development in Paris in April.

Reagan recently has met with the top governmental leaders of West Germany, Portugal, Austria and Ireland.

Although Mitterrand was in the United States for the Williamsburg economic summit last May and has been in Washington for short working visits, his arrival here Wednesday evening marked the first state visit by a French president since President Giscard d'Estaing visited in 1976.

For The Missing

RALEIGH — The first issue of the North Carolina Missing Persons Bulletin, published by the N.C. Department of Justice's Police Information Network, has been published and distributed to law enforcement agencies and members of the news media across the state, according to Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

Edmisten said the missing persons bulletin, which contains photographs and identifying information submitted to the PIN system by law enforcement agencies, is planned as a monthly publication.

He said the bulletin project is designed to help identify, locate and return missing persons.

According to Edmisten, the missing persons bulletin will compliment existing programs, such as the automated Missing Persons/Unidentified Persons File operated by PIN in conjunction with the National Crime Information Center.

N.C. Unemployment Drops

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's unemployment rate dropped to 7.6 percent in February from January's 8.1 percent as nonmanufacturing positions increased by 12,400, the North Carolina Employment Security Commission reported today.

ESC Chairman Glenn Jernigan said 222,100 North Carolinians were out of work in February, compared with 330,900 in February 1983. The February rate was down 3.7 percentage points from the revised February 1983 rate of 11.3 percent, which was last year's highest, he said.

In the nonmanufacturing sector, government work contributed 7,100 jobs, while service and miscellaneous jobs were up by 3,700 and construction jobs increased by 1,200, the ESC said.

The most losses came in tobacco manufacturers, which dropped 1,000 workers due to seasonal influences, and textile mill products, which lost 600 workers, Jernigan said.

"As an indicator of economic recovery, the trade sector of nonmanufacturing jobs is a good example," he said. "From February, 1983 through February, 1984 more than 34,000 workers were added for a 7.3 percent increase. Construction added 15,600 workers for a 15.9 percent gain."

Jernigan said the rate would continue to decline in coming months as weather conditions improve and tourism-related activities increase.

Average hourly earnings for manufacturing production workers for February was $6.92 — up 2 cents from January and up 33 cents from February 1983.

Average weekly hours worked by manufacturing production workers came to 39.7 in February, unchanged from January and up from 38 in February of last year.

Changing Skills Can Be Awkward

You've read a popular self-help book or an article in a magazine and recognized that some interpersonal skill of yours could use a little improvement. But when you try to change, the new behavior feels awkward.

"This is natural. Many people report that a new interpersonal skill feels mechanical or like a role and unreal when they first begin to practice it," says Dr. Leo Hawkins, extension human development specialist, North Carolina State University.

Don't let this stop you. Remember that all new skills feel strange at first. "Learning new interpersonal skills is usually easier in a group which can give approval and help supply motivation. You may want to try to convince some group to which you already belong to have some programs for this purpose," the extension specialist says.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

My daughter says talking me into buying a home computer is like trying to sell diamond earrings for pierced ears to a coward. The temptation is there. All I have to do is to get over the fear of the slight discomfort of preparation.

Easy for her to say. She sells computers.

She has already pointed out to me the two-year-old child on television who positions his chubby fingers over a keyboard and pushes the right key so that his diaper inventory is flashed across the screen in seconds.

She has informed me about bunch of teenagers who put down a computer manual and within five minutes unlocked the secrets of the Pentagon.

If those inspirational stories don't make a convert out of me, I suppose nothing will. But as I explained to her, "I lead a simple existence. There is no need in my life for a computer."

"What about your recipes?" she asked. "Look at the time you would save by storing all your favorite ones in a computer. You could have one before your eyes in minutes."

"I can call your Grandma in less time than that. She has hers filed."

"Just think," she persisted, "about having all your personal documents in one place. Your marriage license, your insurance policies, your warranties. Isn't that something you'd sleep better at nights knowing is in one place?"

"No."

She chewed on the sides of her mouth and I knew she was going to bring out the heavy artillery.

"Okay, Mom, you're having us all home for dinner. Big brother hates ham, loves Mexican food and cheeses that smell dead. Little brother won't eat unless it's under a Golden Arch, in the car or out of a bucket. He demands frozen chewing gum, skim milk and breakfast cereal. Dad is a fruit-yogurt-lettuce nut, will only eat onions that are cooked, has catsup on eggs, hates spinach and doesn't trust casseroles. You're always on a diet, can't eat anything with nuts because of diverticulosis or with salt or high butter fat and love pasta and gravy. I'm a vegetarian, I'm allergic to shellfish, prefer lemon juice on salads and chocolate for dessert. You need a computer!"

"When are you planning to come for dinner?" I asked.

"We'll say Tuesday," she said.

"I won't be home," I said and left the room.

Diamonds just aren't all that important to me.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Is Mother Wrong In Her Opinion?

DEAR ABBY: Am I an old fuddy-duddy or what? (I'm 32.) My daughter, who is 11 and in the sixth grade, insists that she is the only girl in her group who isn't allowed to wear eye makeup, shave her legs and go to the movies with boys unsupervised.

She's right, unfortunately. Most of her friends are allowed those things. It really burns me up that so many parents give their kids so much freedom that those of us who don't are "the bad guys." Everyone keeps telling me that kids are more "mature" these days and do things at a much younger age. Sometimes I wonder if their parents aren't nuts.

We trust our daughter and know that she has a good head on her shoulders, but where is the line drawn? Am I really old-fashioned? We had hoped to make her wait to use makeup and shave her legs until she was at least 13, and hold off the boys until she was 14 or 15. But 11?

Please help me, Abby. I feel very "old" tonight.

OLDIE AT 32

DEAR OLDIE: Don't blame other parents for caving in when their children pull the old line, "Everyone else can — why can't I?" (It's not always true.) You are responsible for raising only your child — and setting the limits that seem appropriate to you.

Makeup can wait, and so can boys. But a girl who's old enough to be self-conscious about hairy legs should be given an electric shaver and permission to use it.

DEAR ABBY: I'll get right to the point: When somebody asks, "How are you?" isn't it proper to be truthful about it? If I am fine, I reply, "I am fine, thank you." But if I am ailing, I tell the person that I have a backache or I feel as though I am coming down with something, just getting over the flu, or whatever.

A friend of mine told me I should always say "I'm fine" whether I am or not because nobody really cares — it's just a friendly greeting like "hello" or "Good morning."

Please settle this.

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

DEAR DIFFERENCE: Generalizations are dangerous (even this one), but usually when people ask "How are you?" they don't want an

More Assessments?

Funding problems have always plagued rural volunteer fire departments, prompting them to supplement county allocations with proceeds from turkey shoots, barbecue and chicken dinners and through occasional donations.

So, citing a need for more money, members of the Bell Arthur Fire Department petitioned the Pitt Board of Commissioners in 1983 to call for a vote on the creation of a special fire protection tax for the Arthur fire district.

When balloting took place recently, district residents approved by a narrow 26-vote margin an assessment of up to 15 cents per $100 valuation on property within the fire district, over and above the county's ad valorem tax rate.

Approval of the fire tax levy was without precedent in Pitt County.

We have no qualms with the idea of property owners assessing themselves to help support their fire departments. It's commendable that they are willing to assume that tax burden.

When the Bell Arthur petition was secured, signatures of only 15 percent of the district's property owners were required. The General Assembly has now upped the figure to 35 percent and that makes petitioning difficult. In view of that, it will be interesting to see if other districts feel special assessments are the answers to their money needs.

Due Process

James W. Hutchins, killer of three officers, is dead. He received a lethal injection in the Central Prison death chamber last week.

No doubt all who participated in the execution found it a difficult experience. It was a particularly trying time for Gov. Hunt, who had to make a final decision as to whether to stay the execution. Hutchins, himself, halted the legal maneuvering and asked that his final day be left free with family and friends.

The debate over capital punishment will go on in North Carolina and elsewhere, and in our state others are awaiting the death penalty.

There are many shades of thinking on capital punishment with opponents maintaining it is uneven in that some who commit murder escape the death penalty. Perhaps it is uneven, but no one can say that anyone is executed without full review by the courts. Before the death penalty is applied in these times, the case has been reviewed many times by many courts and every possible legal question is raised. All evidence has been sifted and resifted and adequate time has passed for the bringing forth of any new evidence.

It is not the governor's role to grant clemency on a whim, as ancient emperors might have done. The governor's power to step in and halt the legal process should be used only if there is compelling new evidence that requires quick action.

It is not our intent here to convince anyone to be for or against capital punishment. Taking a life is final insofar as earthly existence is concerned and each of us has to wrestle with our conscience in determining how we feel about state sanctioned executions.

At this time, however, the death penalty is not used without the most careful review by our judicial system, and certainly that is the way it should be.

SCRABBLE, Va. — At the risk of encroaching upon the turf of Ann and Abby, those veteran dispensers of advice to the lovelorn, I propose a few words of counsel today to affectionate SJF, vibrant WDF and Christian WWM. They are ISO mates, but ladies and gentlemen, I would respectfully submit, you are advertising the wrong specifications.

If that lead paragraph has the sound of gibberish, it is because you have not been reading the classified ads in such publications as the Village Voice, Washingtonian magazine, and even National Review. This is where the SJF (single Jewish female), the WDF (white divorced female) and the WWM (white widowed male) advertise their wants and their wares. They are ISO (in search of) the realization of dreams. The ads carry some of the poignancy, and some of the bawdiness, of Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales." You can learn a little of life and loneliness in 20th-century America from these pages.

But as I was saying, these nubile women and 6-foot men need to get their priorities straight. To be sure, the MWM, 40, who would like to arrange "some discreet and intimate meetings" with a warm and sensuous M/SWF, 30-38, needs no particular counsel. Most of the ads, however, come from young people in search of marriage or a "permanent relationship," and it is here that a few observations from the geriatric corner may be useful.

Typically, a female advertiser sets forth such qualifications as "a male who is about 6 feet, in his 30s or 40s, a non-smoker, around 160 to 190 pounds." A Catholic gentleman seeks a Catholic SWF, about 36-45, "not overweight." Other ads call attention to "likes candlelight dinners," "fond of animals" and "loves travel." All these are important considerations, but I have yet to see an ad that raises the two questions that are crucial to a lasting relationship. The questions do not involve politics, religion, money, children, sports or cooking. They are:

- (1) Are you a "day person" or a "night person"?
- (2) Are you a creature of order or disorder?

The human race is divided in various significant ways. There are beach people and mountain people. There are people who can wind spaghetti on a fork and there are people who need the assistance of a spoon. There are people who jog. We observe city people and country people, dog people and cat people, and people with diametric tastes for eggplant, anchovies, coconut and black-eyed peas. The division that matters most is division by day and by night. The fellow who is gung-ho, ready to go and full of good cheer at 6:30 a.m. will never find happiness with a woman, no matter how lovely she looks by candlelight, if the woman is the merest lump of dough at dawn. And vice versa, of course.

By the same token, as "The Odd Couple" demonstrated, people who are by nature orderly cannot dwell contentedly with people who do not make beds. I have had some experience with a compulsive dishwasher and ashtray-dumper. Two tidy people can experience pure bliss in rearranging a pantry; two sloppy people can hold hands beside a dirty stove and never see the crud.

These imperatives seem never to have occurred to the young hopefuls of the classified ads. It is all very well to go in search of a prospective mate who is "sensual" (I think they mean "sensual," but no matter), and I raise not even an eyebrow at a publicly proclaimed desire for a chum whose pleasures are "erotic" and "uninhibited." It doubtless is useful to know if a respondent feels strongly about hiking, camping, skiing and French cuisine. The vital questions are precisely as I have described them: How does he or she react to Monday morning — early Monday morning? Does he pick up his socks? Does she leave hair in the sink?

I have just recently acquired my fifth granddaughter, weight 6 pounds, name of Rebecca. It is too late, I fear, to shape the metabolism and the character of No. 1, who is 13, and No. 2, who is almost 8. But No. 3 is only 17 months and No. 4 only 15 months, and they may yet be persuaded not to go back to sleep in the Rice Krispies and not to hang their clothes on the bedroom rug. If one day they take to the classified ads ISO the perfect mate, I trust they will keep all this in mind.

Strength For Today

The prophet Habakkuk, speaking to his contemporaries, once said, "though the vision tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come..." (Hab. 2:3)

The visions recorded in the Bible were external. Certain great leaders at important times were informed by God in a supernatural manner concerning his will. Probably very few people today have external visions. But the internal vision continues — that inner illumination of mind and heart in times of crisis, that facing of a high ideal which everyone of true moral character experiences, that emergence of intuitions which lead us in a certain direction. These visions are as real today as ever.

Let us not waver in our faith that God still guides his children. He guides them in different ways, in different ages, but always his presence is with us. Press therefore toward the vision. If it tarry, wait for it; "it will surely come."

Board Sets Policy

NEW YORK (AP) — You may never have heard of the Federal Open Market Committee, but when it meets behind closed doors next week, it could make decisions that determine whether you can afford a home mortgage or whether your boss can afford to borrow money to expand the company and add jobs.

The committee is the policy-making arm of the Federal Reserve System and its deliberations determine how much money will be made available to finance the economy's growth and the government's deficits.

With interest rates already on the rise, including the first increase in banks' prime lending rate since August 1983, the panel's meeting set for Washington next Monday and Tuesday will "set the tone for interest rates for the year," said David Jones, a senior economist at the investment firm of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. Inc.

Here are some questions and answers about the Federal Open Market Committee and its impact on the economy:

Q: Who sits on the committee?
A: The FOMC, which meets eight times a year, has 12 members. All seven governors of the Federal Reserve Board, who are appointed by the president and confirmed by the Senate, sit on the committee. The president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York holds another position, and the remaining four seats are rotated among the presidents of the 11 other regional Federal Reserve banks. Federal Reserve bank presidents are selected by the board of directors of those regional banks, subject to the approval of the Federal Reserve governors.

Q: What does the committee do?
A: The committee tries to determine how much money is needed to sustain economic growth without pushing inflation higher. The question before the panel at each meeting is whether the Fed should be concerned with restraining growth in an attempt to keep prices from rising too fast or whether it should emphasize stimulating the economy. For example, the Fed's aggressive efforts to pump money into the economy and lower interest rates beginning in July 1982 helped revive the United States from a deep recession. Many economists now believe the FOMC's next move will be toward restraint, however. These analysts cite prospects for higher inflation because the economy is growing at a faster pace than expected, pushing up business demand for credit to compete for available funds with huge federal deficits.

Q: How does the FOMC carry out its decisions?

A: The panel directs the Federal Reserve Bank of New York to manage bank reserves in a way that will either make funds more plentiful or scarcer. A more accommodative posture would contribute to lower interest rates, a more restrictive stance could push interest rates higher. One way the Fed can influence bank reserves is through the sale and purchase of government securities. When the Fed arranges the sale of government securities the payments to the central bank drain reserves from the banking system. When it buys securities, money flows into the economy.

Q: When does the public learn what the Fed has decided?

A: The meetings are not open and minutes of each session are not published until after the next meeting, which is at least a month away. The Fed has said it believes the secrecy is necessary to effectively carry out its policies and prevent financial markets from reacting prematurely.

Putting The Diners On A Cost Basis

WASHINGTON — When then-Rep. Gerald R. Ford, R-Mich., was answering questions at his vice presidential confirmation hearing in 1973, he said that he and wife Betty had managed to live on less than $50 a week during their tenure in Washington.

Yet his admission didn't startle a single member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. As the panel members knew, federal officials have traditionally supplemented their incomes with trade association dinners and subsidized dining facilities.

Budget-cutting, in fact, has had little effect on the stomachs of White House aides, Cabinet officials and Congress itself. The legislators still allocate more than $3 million a year to 23 executive dining rooms in town.

Though patrons of these dining rooms don't necessarily receive freebies, they do enjoy bargains. On Feb. 20, 1984, for example, the senior staff at the Department of Health and Human Services could dine on Chicken Delmonico with rice, green peas with pearl onions, a carrot-and-raisin salad and a dessert of almond cookies for only $3.90 — about the cost of a big lunch at McDonald's. Likewise, an assistant secretary of defense could order a chopped steak platter with french fries and salad for a mere $2.25.

Many of Washington's public servants would probably fight to maintain their nutritional assistance on grounds that they've given up so much to work here. But prompted by government's success in cutting $12.5 billion from food programs for the poor, Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wis.) thought it appropriate for Congress, at least, to apply fiscal austerity to its own house. Accordingly, at 11 p.m. on March 1, Proxmire attached an amendment to Senate Bill 956 (legislation concerning federal merit pay) that would require all executive dining rooms in Washington to set prices that reflect and cover the operating costs of their facilities.

Surprisingly, without a murmur, a tired chamber passed the amendment by voice vote. The legislation now goes to the House of Representatives where, Senate aides say, it stands an even chance of passage.

Of course, cynics will ask who cares about saving a puny $3 million? But they'll miss the point. Any measure that can jolt our public officials from the surreal existence of Washington is worth the effort.

Henry Kissinger, whom everyone knows, will be nominated for election as a director of the American Express Co. at the corporation's annual meeting of shareholders, on April 30.

Sen. Gary Hart seems to have the best of both worlds these days. He's won strong praise for his environmental record from the League of Conservation Voters and received substantial money from oil interests in Colorado for his decade-long support of oil shale development. A review of Hart's contributors list filed with the Federal Election Commission reveals he's received contributions from individuals associated with the following Colorado energy concerns: Bird Drilling Co., Wolf Energy Corp., Gary Energy Corp., Davis Oil Corp., Rock Oil Corp., Interstate Gas Co., Grynbert Petroleum Co., Mizel Petroleum Resources and Brachman Oil.

Meanwhile, Hart's campaign has also received contributions from such Hollywood figures as Walter Matthau, Goldie Hawn, Norman Lear, Mary Tyler Moore and Jeff Wald. Gifts have come from Thomas Watson of IBM fame and former Carter administration officials Peter Bourne, Brock Adams, Sam Brown and Robert Strauss.

President Reagan may believe in private-sector financing but not when it comes to presidential libraries. Despite the administration's supposed commitment "to bringing the growth in unnecessary federal spending under control," David Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, recently told the House sponsors of a presidential library to underwrite the facility's maintenance.

"As a general rule," said Stockman, "the administration is opposed to the imposition of additional legislative restrictions on the privileges and prerogatives of former presidents."

In an effort to turn students on to public service, former Health Education and Welfare Secretary John W. Gardner offered these comments to a crowd of undergraduates at Stanford University on Feb. 25: "If you're lucky, you will escape the root ailments of the young urban professional—an overvaluation of intellect as against character, of getting there first as against growing in mind and spirit, of food for the ego as against food for hunger of the heart..."

"People run around searching for identity, but it isn't handed out free anymore — not in this transient, rootless, pluralistic society. Your identity is what you've committed yourself to."

Visa policy, Soviet style: Soviet authorities have denied a visa request from Phyllis Curtin, dean of Boston University's School for the Arts, who'd been invited by U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hartman to sing in Moscow and Leningrad. The Russians explained they were granting no visas to "guests of the ambassador."

Speaking of injustices, of those Americans who'll earn $20,000 or less this year, 81 percent will be women. Meanwhile, 75 percent of those earning $40,000 or more will be men.

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The head of the North Carolina Association of Educators says the re-election campaign for Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is using a defunct teachers organization in its radio ads.

The ads refer to the North Carolina Teachers Association. In the ads, the NCTA is shown as criticizing Gov. Jim Hunt's education record.

But Frances Cummings, head of the NCAE, said Wednesday that the NCTA has not existed for more than 10 years. She said the NCTA was an all-black group that merged with the NCAE in 1970.

Ms. Cummings also said she felt Helms' radio ads were misleading.

Fire Dispatcher In Fatal Delay

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A county dispatcher fired for waiting 22 minutes to send an ambulance to a home where a man was dying had "labeled the patient a drunk," his boss said in a report.

The Tampa Tribune reported Wednesday that Charles Throckmorton Jr., 46, was dead by the time paramedics arrived at his home Jan. 23. His father had called Hillsborough County emergency services saying he was "100 percent disabled" with "cirrhosis of the liver."

Kenneth Gearhart, a dispatcher for nine years, was fired Feb. 24 as a result of the death, the newspaper said. A second dispatcher is under investigation in the incident, the newspaper said.

Delay N.C. Auto Insurance Change

RALEIGH (AP) — A proposal which would lower insurance rates for North Carolina's multi-car owners but could raise rates for some single-car owners has been postponed until next year.

Insurance Commission John Ingram and the state's auto industry agreed in a consent order signed Tuesday to postpone until Jan. 1, 1985, an industry proposal to change insurance rate classification factors.

The North Carolina Rate Bureau, which proposed rates for the industry, and the state Reinsurance Facility, a pool of companies which insures risky drivers proposed the changes in the rate classifications in December to take effect July 1.

The industry also agreed in the consent order not to propose new rates before Aug. 10.

Under the consent order, owners of more than one car would receive a 20 percent discount on base rate premiums — up from the 15 percent discount they now receive.

More than half the vehicles in the state are insured under multi-car policies, said John W. Watkins, assistant manager of the Rate Bureau and Reinsurance Facility.

Higher rates would be paid by one-car owners who use their automobile for pleasure or to drive less than 10 miles one-way to work, Watkins said. Lower rates would be paid by one-car owners driving 10 miles or more one-way to work, using their car for business or garaging their car on a farm, he said.

Paul L. Mize Jr., general manager of the Rate Bureau and manager of the Reinsurance Facility, said the industry agreed to the delay because the alternative would have been rejection of the proposal by Ingram, followed by a potentially lengthy court fight.

Ingram said Wednesday the delay was needed so the Insurance Department could conduct a study to determine whether insurance companies were collecting all the premiums due from drivers with points for driving violations.

Ingram said the "slight increase" for single-car owners would be offset "if the auto insurance companies properly collect all the premiums due from drivers with points."

Drunken Driving Arrests Decline

By The Associated Press

The state Highway Patrol reported a 20 percent decrease in drunken driving arrests during the first two months of 1984 as compared to the same period in 1983, and some state officials attribute part of the decline to a blitz of information about the Safe Roads Act.

Alcohol-related traffic accidents also decreased 6 percent in January compared to those counted in January 1983, according to the Department of Motor Vehicles. The figures also show fatalities involving drunken drivers in single-car accidents increased slightly for 1983, but accidents involving drivers slightly impaired decreased by almost half.

"I think what's happened is that the laws are affecting people who have two or three drinks (by keeping them off the road), opposed to the true alcoholic to whom it doesn't make a bit of difference," said Dr. Arthur McBay of the North Carolina Chief Medical Examiner's office in Chapel Hill.

The law, which took effect Oct. 1, 1983, replaced several drunken driving-related charges with a single driving-while-impaired offense to eliminate plea bargaining. It also raised the legal drinking age from 18 to 19 and provided for automatic revocation of a drivers' license for 10 days if a person registers a .10 or above on a Breathalyzer test, or for one year if a person refuses to take the test.

Although drunken driving arrests are down, about five times as many people are going to jail, according to Bill Stafford, assistant chief jailer for Buncombe County.

In December 1982, some 247 people were arrested for drunken driving and six were sentenced. In December 1983, 138 people were arrested and 34 were sentenced.

Fifty people convicted of DWI were sentenced to active jail time in February and 40 have been sentenced so far this month, Stafford said.

Some court observers said in October that the new law would bring a backlog of appeals to Superior Court, but so far only about 15 have been placed on the court calendar. The number may increase as more cases move through the system.

Protesters Maintain A Vigil At Waste Dump

By ARTHUR BUCKLER
Associated Press Writer
GIRARDVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Heaps of rock litter the landscape around this old coal town, the surrounding mountains have been strip-mined, and Shenandoah Creek runs a deep rust color — the legacy of acid drainage from decades of mining.

It's no beauty spot, but some residents of this close-knit community are protesting around the clock to prevent what they say would make it worse, the reopening of a chemical waste dump.

Since Jan. 28, about 20 protesters, claiming the support of several thousand of their neighbors, have taken turns at a constant vigil at the site's entrance, said Rob Krick, one of the ad hoc group's leaders.

The demonstrators, many retired or unemployed, sit in a plastic-covered wood shanty displaying an American flag, warmed by a drum of burning coal. At least two people maintain the vigil at any time, the group says.

"There's a great fear that the coal region is going to be dumped on by everyone," said Jackie Reigel, one of the townspeople fighting the Keystone Chemical Co.

The company says this economically depressed section of eastern Pennsylvania, already scarred and polluted from decades of mining, is an ideal place to treat and store 20 to 250 tons of hazardous waste a day. Keystone plans to solidify the waste, then bury it in plastic-lined cavities.

"When you first look at it, it doesn't look as if it's good for anything except to dump," acknowledged Steve Chuba, 64, a retired miner and opponent of the facility who lives beside its entrance.

Among the wastes the company wants to process are heavy metals and "pickle liquors" — high-acid liquids used to process metals. Keystone attorney Richard Caplan said the company will accept any waste it is permitted to take, but has no plans to truck in PCBs, dioxin or radioactive waste.

Opponents say the wastes are bound to seep into ground water, and from there into a creek and drainage ditch that flow through the town of 2,000 people, many of them elderly. Girardville was founded in 1832 and lifelong residents, many living in red-brick row homes, still speak with the accents of their ancestors in Lithuania, Ireland, Italy and Poland.

Opponents of the chemical dump say it will leak because of shifting, subsiding ground from the underground mines, and they scoff at the company's claims for its plastic liner.

"It's just a swimming pool liner. That's what it is," said Krick, 32, who owns a garage near the site. "We sit here and say we don't want it. Nobody wants it. But they've picked the worst possible site they could pick."

However, Keystone vice president Mark Alsentzer said: "It's an excellent site for something like this. The groundwater underneath is really of no value. It's already been contaminated by the underground mine."

State officials say Pennsylvania ranks fourth in the nation in generation of hazardous waste — thanks to its high concentration of manufacturing, especially in the steel and chemical industries — but has too few places to dispose of it. A shortage of licensed disposal sites increases the likelihood of illegal "midnight dumping" while raising costs to industry, which must truck its waste long distances, officials say.

Still, few towns want a toxic chemical site in their backyard. "I can't think of any that are welcomed by the local townspeople," Alsentzer said.

The Keystone site opened in 1980 but was closed in 1982 after the state Department of Environmental Resources ordered the company's previous owners to correct 44 breaches of state regulations. The container for wastes already dumped there does not meet standards, said DER spokesman Mark Carmon, and the agency wants the company to build a new "impoundment," line it with plastic, and transfer the old waste to it.

Once the changes are made, DER says it will let the facility reopen under its current "interim" status. Department officials say they will hold public hearings on whether the site should receive a permanent permit, which would probably require more improvements.

Because the facility already exists, it won't have to meet tighter rules now being developed by the DER on location of disposal sites. "If it was a brand new site, chances are it wouldn't be approved," said DER solid waste manager David Lamereaux.

The company dismisses the protesters' claims that subsiding ground will cause leaks.

"We feel there's no chance of subsidence occurring," Alsentzer said, adding that the plastic liner — "the best available" — is impervious to the chemicals in question.

Company employees have done no work at the dump site since the demonstrations began in January, and Ms. Reigel said, "I think the picket line intimidated them."

However, Alsentzer maintained that cold weather was the reason for the halt.

The protesters acknowledge they're novices at legal and technical matters, but plan to continue their fight.

"We're new at this game," Krick said.

GOP Candidate For Governor Is Campaigning

Although she says her campaign is "running on a shoestring," Ruby Hooper is confident she'll be North Carolina's next governor.

Mrs. Hooper, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, said Wednesday during a Greenville visit her campaign platform is based on education, the environment, mental and physical health and employment.

She supports a raise in base pay for teachers and supports merit pay, but says "the process must be worked out."

"Teachers should receive compensation adequate to their work and be respected for what they do," said Mrs. Hooper. "In addition, there should be funds to reward those who perform over and above what's required of them."

Mrs. Hooper says North Carolina must protect its environment and its resources and better utilize them. She does not support ground waste disposal of toxic substances. "There are ways of disposing of waste other than putting them in the ground," said the candidate. "Several states are far ahead of North Carolina in disposal technology and as governor I would work to have the state catch up."

Mrs. Hooper said she feels the state should actively recruit new industries but should also invest time in keeping the industries it already has. "We cannot forget the industries already in North Carolina, the ones that are already providing jobs for our people," she said.

The candidate said agriculture is "one of North Carolina's important industries and I support it." "As a licensed dietician, I see the need to feed our people and to feed them healthily," she said. "We cannot do this without an equally healthy agriculture."

Mrs. Hooper says her strength is management — a skill sharpened by 30-plus years as food service director at Broughton Hospital in Morganton, her home. "I am a home economist and a licensed dietician," said Mrs. Hooper. "I am strong and experienced in management and I know how to run a tight ship."

"That (running a tight ship) is what I feel we must do in North Carolina in the future," she said. "We must make better use of the resources we have and as governor I will work to do this."

"As a working woman I understand better than any candidate the problems of working men and women," said Mrs. Hooper.

The candidate is a graduate of Mars Hill College and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She is a member and vice president of Grace Episcopal Church in Morganton and has served three terms as chairman of the governmental affairs committee of the Burke County Chamber of Commerce. Other community affiliations include public education chairman of the Burke County Chapter of the American Cancer Society, member of the board of the Burke County Chapter of the North Carolina Diabetes Association, chairman of area 18 of the North Carolina Employment Association, past chairman of the Burke County Republican Party, member of the Catawba County League of Women Voters and of the Business and Professional Women.

The plan to run for governor began 10 years ago, said Mrs. Hooper, when she nearly lost her job "because of some politics," she said. "I've been planning for this for some time. I wouldn't do it if I didn't feel I could win and that I'd do a good job in the office."

Candidate For Court

Raymond Mason Taylor of Raleigh, a former resident of Washington, N.C., was in Greenville Wednesday campaigning for the Democratic nomination for associate justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court.

Taylor is seeking election to the seat vacated last year by J. Phil Carlton, a position now held by Greensboro lawyer Henry Frye.

Taylor has a law practice in Raleigh and has a total of 14 years of service in the Supreme Court as marshal and librarian. Taylor received a bachelor's degree in political science and a legal degree from UNC-Chapel Hill. He served in the Army as a military intelligence specialist.

"The term of a Supreme Court justice is eight years," Taylor said in an interview. "This race is important because the Supreme Court of North Carolina is elected by the people and the eight-year term of the justice is a longer term than that of the governor, lieutenant governor or any other elected official; the person elected to hold this position will most likely serve into the 21st century."

Taylor said, "My hope is that the people will not, in their natural interest in the other state and local races, overlook that they have a choice for the associate justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court."

Bill Smith, head of the insurance committee for the New Jersey License Beverage Association, said Wednesday his group supports a proposed bill to limit to $75,000 the amount that victims could seek from bar owners who had served motorists involved in accidents.

With a rapid increase in the number of such suits, Smith said liquor liability insurance policies once available for as low as $80 now cost $1,500 a year for small taverns to $6,000 a year for large ones.

Policy Rates Up 7,500 Percent

EDISON, N.J. (AP) — Insurance policies for tavern owners who may be sued in connection with drunken driving accidents have risen up to 7,500 percent in eight years, but bar owners "can't afford to be without it," a spokesman for 8,000 owners says.

URGES RELEASE MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (A) — Freed leftist politician Liber Seregni yesterday called on the government to free nearly 800 Uruguayans who remain detained for political reasons.

Street Closing

Portions of Third and Fourth streets, between Pitt Street and Elizabeth Street, will be closed to traffic Monday to allow the replacement of old sewer line. The project, which will cost between $15,000 and $20,000, will replace 10-inch and 12-inch sewer line, installed in the 1930s, with new pipe.

The streets will reopen to traffic after work is completed March 30, Ferren said.

A 25-mile route for the event has been laid out beginning at E.B. Aycock Junior High School parking lot on Red Banks Road, going into Brook Valley and Cherry Oaks, and forming a loop which will be ridden five times before returning to Aycock for the finish.

Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m., with the ride beginning at 10 a.m.

Entry blanks and sponsor forms will be available at most Greenville and Pitt County schools, the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and at East Carolina University, beginning Monday. Riders will seek per-mile contributions from donors, then will return after the ride to collect.

Collections will be taken at Elm Street Gym on April 14 from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.

For further information, call 758-4207 between 4 and 9 p.m.

Radio Endorsed

The City Council recently adopted a resolution expressing "sincere and wholehearted support" for the proposed expansion of public radio services of WUNC-FM to Greenville and eastern North Carolina.

An application to the Federal Communications Commission by WUNC Radio in Chapel Hill for a license to operate an extension of its services near Greenville has been delayed due to opposition by WECT-TV in Wilmington. WECT-TV said it feared interference problems with the television station's reception.

If the WUNC application is approved, the station's signal would be transmitted from the WUNK-TV broadcast location in Farmville.

The council said "the cultural, news, educational and entertainment programs broadcast by WUNC-FM would enhance the quality of life" here and in the eastern section of the state.

Letters urging support of the WUNC application have been sent by the city to U.S. Senators John East and Jesse Helms, U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones, and the FCC. The East Carolina Orchestra and Chamber Music Association earlier expressed concern that National Public Radio is not available in this area.

The N.C. Wildlife Federation was organized in 1945 and is the state's largest volunteer conservation organization, with about 30,000 members.

Thomas is serving his third term as senator for the 3rd Senatorial District, which includes Craven, Carteret and Pamlico Counties, and is chairman of the Natural and Economic Resources and Wildlife Committee.

High winds ripped aluminum siding from a trailer at A.G. Cox Grammar School in Winterville on Wednesday. Principal Glenn Strickland said today. Strickland said there were no personal injuries.

"The wind got underneath the aluminum siding of one trailer and some of the siding was removed because of the high wind," said Principal Strickland. "No students were injured."

A spokesperson at the Pitt County Fire Marshall's office said no other wind damage had been reported in the county as of this morning.

Researcher Sees 'Signal' Of Fewer N.C. Hospitals

RALEIGH (AP) — A University of North Carolina researcher says an increasing oversupply of hospital beds could close 25 to 50 of the state's less efficient hospitals in the next few years.

I. Glenn Wilson, professor and chairman of social and administrative medicine, told the Legislative Commission on Medical Cost Containment that those most vulnerable will be hospitals with fewer than 100 beds and those in the mountains.

Compounding the problem is a pronounced, 10-year decline in use of hospitals with fewer than 100 beds and a dramatic increase in use of hospitals with more than 400 beds.

Wilson said.

"The reasons for the movement are not fully understood but undoubtedly are related to the new technologies which tend to be concentrated in the larger facilities," he said.

Wilson, who did a 10-month study of hospitals in North Carolina, said six hospitals in the state were in financial trouble in 1982 while another 25 showed signs of stress. He said nine of the 10 hospitals whose expenses exceeded their cash revenues in the past three years had fewer than 100 beds.

In 1972, 27 percent of all patients went to the 16 hospitals with more than 400 beds. But that figure has risen to 37 percent — most coming at the expense of smaller institutions, Wilson said.

Meanwhile, occupancy at hospitals with fewer than 100 beds fell from 67.3 percent in 1978 to 58.2 percent in 1982. Occupancy of 80 percent is considered reasonably efficient.

"We have five hospitals in the state that haven't reached 50 percent occupancy in any of the past five years and more than 50 that haven't reached 70 percent occupancy in at least four of the past five years," he said. "Achieving the 80 percent level across North Carolina would require a reduction of two thousand to three thousand beds. Believe it or not, however, the state has authorized construction of an additional 1,300 beds."

The 34 hospitals in the mountains may face the most pressure because there are more beds per 1,000 people there than in other areas, the study said.

In the past, the cost of maintaining unused beds was passed on to the government and insurance companies under liberal cost reimbursement plans provided by Medicare and insurers like Blue Cross-Blue Shield, Wilson said.

In April 1983, however, Congress passed legislation designed to hold down Medicare costs by paying only for specific services at pre-established rates — a strategy being copied by insurers.

Funds For Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury will forward $1.2 million in matching funds to five Democrats today, with Walter F. Mondale getting $609,413, or half the money.

Sen. Gary Hart qualified for only $9,630 in this round of matching funds, approved Wednesday by the Federal Election Commission.

Mondale now has gotten nearly $5.9 million in matching funds to Hart's $948,535. The candidates can submit requests for matching funds every two weeks.

Hart's campaign, outspent 4-to-1 by Mondale through February, said Wednesday it has raised approximately $1.8 million in the first 20 days of March, two-thirds of which should qualify for matching funds.

The FEC also approved $313,802 in matching funds for the Rev. Jesse Jackson on Wednesday, giving him a total of $702,157. It also approved $210,515 for George McGovern and $69,223 for Sen. John Glenn of Ohio for contributions they submitted before dropping out of the race.

To date, eight Democrats have shared $14.2 million in matching funds. The commission is expected to approve shortly President Reagan's request for matching funds for his unopposed bid for the Republican nomination.

Eligible candidates can get matching funds for all individual donations of up to $250. Those who withdraw can still get matching funds if they have debts to pay off.

12-Year-Old Boy Is Fatally Shot

Jackson Hopes On Virginia Caucuses

By JEAN McNAIR
Associated Press Writer
NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — After a three-city tour of the state, the Rev. Jesse Jackson says "We're going to win Virginia" when it holds Democratic caucuses this weekend.

The Democratic presidential contender, appearing here Wednesday night, promised to return to Norfolk on Saturday to "lead thousands to the polls."

Virginia Democrats hold caucuses, or "mass meetings" as they are called here, on Saturday and Monday. It is the first step in deciding how 68 of the state's 78 national delegates will be awarded.

Jackson spoke to about 2,000 people at Hampton Institute in Hampton and later to a crowd of about 9,000 people at Norfolk's Scope arena.

At a news conference in Richmond earlier in the day, Jackson said he has attracted little white support for his campaign because most whites don't view blacks as viable presidential candidates.

"There remain divisive patterns in this country clearly established along lines of race," he said.

At an afternoon news conference at his Norfolk campaign headquarters, Jackson said party rules such as the one requiring a candidate to have the support of at least 20 support of those attending a mass meeting in Virginia have been "major impediments" to his campaign.

"Yet there is such a fervor by the Jackson supporters that we've somehow been able to rise above even those obstacles. We hit the 20 percent threshold in Alabama, in Georgia ... We passed the 20 percent threshold in Illinois," he said.

After delivering his campaign pitch for improved voting rights, more programs for the poor and reduced defense spending, Jackson tried to explain to his audiences Virginia's complicated delegate selection process.

"My name is not uncommitted. My name is Jackson," he said.

Democratic Gov. Charles S. Robb, who supported Ohio Sen. John Glenn before he dropped out of the race, has said he hopes to lead uncommitted delegates to the national convention.

Former Vice President Walter Mondale has the strongest organization and longest list of prominent supporters in Virginia. Colorado

Sen. Gary Hart had virtually no organization in Virginia before his strong showing in several primaries and now has an informal network of backers.

Jackson described himself as a campaign survivor.

"First there were eight in the race, and now only three remain. There is Hart, who you don't know, and Mondale, who you know too well. And here is Jesse Jackson. Send me," he told a crowd of about 3,500 at Virginia Union University in Richmond.

Ammunition Truck Is Overtaken In Wreck

By TOM EBLEN
Associated Press Writer
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A shift in cargo probably caused the overturn of a truck holding nearly 40,000 pounds of military mortar shells that was on its way to North Carolina, authorities said.

The truck fell on its side in Knoxville, Tenn., Wednesday morning, prompting officials to close the interstates and other nearby highways for nearly seven hours. Homes, businesses and three schools within a 5,000-foot radius of the site were evacuated.

The truck's driver — pulled from the cab by a policeman — suffered broken ribs, but nobody else was reported injured. An Army spokesman said it was unlikely the ammunition could have exploded.

"They told us there was enough explosives to take out all of north Knoxville," The Knoxville News-Sentinel quoted an unidentified policeman as saying.

But Fort Campbell spokesman Bill Harralson said a detonation device or extreme heat would have been necessary to make the ammunition explode.

The truck was carrying 81mm mortar shells from the Naval Ammunition Depot near Crane, Ind., to Camp Lejeune Marine Base near Jacksonville, N.C., authorities said.

One crate of shells punched a hole in the trailer roof, but no ammunition spilled out.

Three explosives experts from Fort Campbell reached the scene about 2 p.m. after rain, snow and sleet hampered their trip by helicopter and car from the Army base in southwestern Kentucky.

The experts supervised unloading of the ammunition into another truck.

Firefighters sprayed water and foam around the truck, which leaked diesel fuel.

"We believe that if the truck was going to blow up, it would have done so when it wrecked," said Charles Hansard, an assistant city fire chief.

No Bombs Found

Superintendent Eddie West of Pitt County schools reported today no bombs were found on the campuses of three schools that received bomb threats Wednesday.

West said Belvoir, Pactolus and Wellcome Middle schools followed "usual precautions" — fire drill procedure until the premises were searched — after they received threatening phone calls.

West also said the schools' phone lines are equipped with tracer equipment capable of detecting the source of prank calls but that officials have no information on who made the calls Wednesday.

Edmisten Campaign Team Mourns Death Of Strategist Charles H. Smith

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Rufus Edmisten campaign aide said the death of one of the Attorney General's chief strategists may result in a rededication of efforts among Edmisten supporters.

Deputy Attorney General Charles H. Smith was among five passengers on a twin-engine plane that crashed near Hendersonville late Tuesday night. Smith, 46, died early Wednesday of multiple traumatic injuries, according to Dr. Robert H. Dowdeswell, a medical examiner.

Charlie's imprints have been made — he was one of the best political strategists in the state," said Asheville attorney Bruce Moore Sr., one of three statewide co-chairmen for Edmisten's campaign. "That is there. ... The pattern has been set — other people can execute it. But what we're feeling now is the loss to his friends."

At Edmisten's campaign headquarters Wednesday, campaign workers talked among themselves in somber tones. Some were shaking their heads in sorrow. "I can't believe it," said campaign office manager Diana Mooneyham.

"I don't know about the effect on the campaign, but the situation is that we are now mourning our lost friend," said assistant attorney general Bob Cansler.

The Edmisten aides had met in Asheville Tuesday with 20 campaign leaders from mountain counties to review Edmisten's final campaign blueprint, said campaign spokesman Jay Eaker. The five passengers and pilot were returning to Raleigh.

Winds were southeast at 5 mph and visibility was five miles with fog at 10:07 p.m., shortly after the plane lost power on takeoff and nosed into an eastbound rest area on Interstate 26 near the airport.

"The weather was not good, but it was not extremely bad," said Ronald Drummond, spokesman at the National Weather Service office at the Asheville airport. "We had thunderstorms earlier in the day, but the weather had begun to improve a little bit after dark."

Drummond said there were some low clouds, but the thickest clouds were at 3,900 feet.

Assistant Attorney General Mike Carpenter, Smith aide Dolan Simmons and Richard Carlton, chief field officer of the Edmisten campaign were aboard the plane, Eaker said. They were treated and released at Margaret Pardee Hospital in Hendersonville.

Eaker said William Carl, a chief fund raiser for the campaign and co-founder the Golden Corral restaurant chain, was a passenger, and was held for observation at Pardee Hospital.

Henderson County Sheriff's Department officials said Craig Gurgew was the pilot of the plane which took off from Asheville Airport near Arden in Henderson County shortly before 10 p.m. It crashed about 1 1/2 miles from the runway.

Walter G. Stiner, air safety investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board in Atlanta, said it will be 60 to 90 days before the cause of the crash is determined. He and other investigators would not speculate on the cause.

Federal Aviation Administration officials at Asheville Airport said the plane rose about 50 feet off the runway after the pilot said, "Roger," acknowledging a clearance for takeoff from the tower.

Jim Britt, FAA area supervisor at Asheville Airport, said he watched as the plane went down.

"He got to about 50 feet above the runway," Britt said. "He was holding altitude there for a short time. He got to about 100 feet out there some time."

"Then he started a shallow descent and never really leveled off. He disappeared behind the treetops to me. It was very obvious something was wrong."

Britt said the plane veered off course, turning left too soon after takeoff.

"They weren't supposed to be making a turn at that time," he said. "They were supposed to be heading straight out until they were told to make a turn."

Britt said "Roger" was the last word the pilot uttered, "nothing to indicate at all that he had a problem."

Buck Wood, FAA air traffic manager at the airport, said the plane "never got up high enough to be on radar."

Stiner, investigating the crash for the NTSB, said the wreckage would be cleared from the highway rest area either Wednesday night or Thursday.

Smith's funeral is scheduled for Friday in Asheville at Trinity Episcopal Church, Eaker said.

Brandy Born Of War Emergency

NEW YORK (AP) — A war was responsible for the introduction of brandy.

The Cognac Information Bureau says that in the early 1600s France's vintners had a lively sea trade with Holland. But with the outbreak of the Thirty Years War, the merchants had to find a way to ship the same amount of wine to market in a greatly reduced amount of commercial cargo space.

The merchants found that unfortified wine contained at least 80 percent water. They extracted the water, shipped the remaining essence of wine — which was reconstituted at debarkation — and were able to equal the amount of pre-war shipments. To achieve the water extraction, a second distillation of the wine was performed.

The Dutch sampled the new concentrated form and called it "Brandewijn," which is how brandy was born.

Hundreds Just 'Disappear' In Andean War

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
AYACUCHO, Peru (AP) — Tears streak Sophia's broad Indian face. Her hands play nervously in her lap. She crosses and re-crosses dust-caked feet as she tells her story.

The day before, she says, a neighbor rushed over with news that Sophia's 17-year-old son had been seized on the street by "sinchis," anti-insurgent national policemen. For the rest of the day, Sophia walked from one police post to another, told each time that her boy, Raul, was not there.

Now she is reaching out to her listener, a stranger. "Papa! Papa! Help me find my son!" she implores.

In the two-mile-high valleys of Peru's towering Andes, desperately poor people are trapped in a struggle between extreme leftist guerrillas and the security forces of President Fernando Belaunde Terry's centrist government.

More than 2,000 people have been reported killed in two years of violence. But hundreds more are listed as "desaparecidos" — disappeared. Perhaps thousands of other disappearances, in backward Indian hamlets deep in the rocky uplands, have not been reported, local authorities say.

The guerrillas of the "Sendero Luminoso" — Shining Path — have waged an often brutal war against civilians who "collaborate" with the government.

But local community leaders say the people here now dread the military and national police forces even more, as those young soldiers and security men hunt round-the-clock for suspected guerrillas and sympathizers among the Andean Indians, the insurgency's base of support.

"They can kill you like a dog in the street, and nobody will do anything about it," Mayor Leonor Zamora complained to a visitor in Ayacucho, a dusty colonial town — population 65,000 — about 200 miles southeast of Lima at the heart of the embattled area.

Mrs. Zamora said anonymous telephone tips and fleeting suspicions are enough for the army and police to seize Ayacuchoans. Bodies, often unidentified, regularly are found in the surrounding countryside, usually shot in the head.

But army Brig. Gen. Adrian Huaman, who commands the 20,000-square-mile military zone in southeast Peru, said in an interview that the only wrongdoing he has discovered among his men was thievery — "only one or two cases."

As word of disappearances and indiscriminate killings in the distant Andes filtered to the outside world last year, international human rights organizations became alarmed.

"Peru is now the most worrisome situation in South America," Juan Mendez, Washington-based Latin American specialist for the Americas Watch Group, said in a recent telephone interview.

The human rights group Amnesty International has appealed to President Belaunde to put a halt to what it says are "disappearances" or extrajudicial executions ... carried out by combined military and police forces ... with impunity."

Amnesty International's report detailed scores of disappearances and other cases — including alleged cold-blooded killings by security forces in villages believed sympathetic with the guerrillas.

It was rejected as "false and slanderous" by the government. Interior Minister Luis Percovich accused the human rights group of "saying nothing" about reported guerrilla atrocities.

The Amnesty international document did detail killings by the guerrillas, including the slaying of at least 67 villagers in the Lucanamarca area last April.

The Maoist insurgents, one of whose captured members has been quoted as saying 40 percent of the population must be exterminated before a "new Peru" can be built, have periodically raided Indian communities, put alleged government collaborators on "trial" and killed them.

But Amnesty International insisted that the "gravity" of the alleged excesses by security forces "is in no way diminished ... by the commission of similar abhorrent acts by opposition groups."

A ranking security official here, speaking on condition he not be identified, claimed that many "desaparecidos" were Sendero Luminoso guerrillas who were killed in battle and whose families are trying to hide their rebel affiliation by reporting them missing.

But one of the government's own investigators, from the Peruvian attorney general's staff, told a reporter he had files on 592 "disappeared" people, and some clearly had been seized by security forces. Others may have been guerrilla defectors tracked down and executed by former comrades, he said.

"I believe these mothers tell the truth," said this informant, who like others in tense Ayacucho asked not to be named. "Day after day they come in here to ask about their children."

'Could' Colonize The Moon By 2010

WASHINGTON (AP) — Using a space station as a stepping stone, Americans could colonize the moon by the year 2010 and Mars by 2060, says the chief of the national space agency.

"Just as the airplane opened Antarctica to permanent human habitation, a manned space station, to be built and serviced with the aid of the space shuttle, will open space to a limitless range of opportunities for mankind," James M. Beggs, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said Wednesday.

Beggs outlined a scenario for the expansion of human life beyond planet Earth in a speech at the U.S. Naval Academy in nearby Annapolis, Md.

President Reagan in his State of the Union message directed NASA to develop a permanent manned space station, and Beggs predicted it would be in place 300 miles high within 10 years. He called it a "logical expansion of our activities in space."

"As we look to the future, many of our most innovative thinkers have devoted a good deal of time to imagining what the next 100 years in space might be like," he said. "I think we've come to the point now where their vision might very well become reality. Let me paint a picture of that future for you now."

Using the space shuttle, he said, "we build a permanently-manned space station. Then we must learn how to tug it out, or move it in other ways to geosynchronous orbit." At geosynchronous orbit, 22,300 miles up, a satellite rotates at the same rate as the Earth and thus remains stationary over one point.

"As we enter the 21st century, or shortly thereafter, we will have established a manned space station in lunar orbit, which will allow us to exploit the moon's resources," Beggs said. "Out about the year 2010, we could establish a colony on the moon, beginning with a small research station. By 2020 or 2030 we might have an operating productive activity on the moon."

In that period, he added, robots could be constructing a station on Mars.

"In about the year 2040, the colony on the moon would be flourishing," he said. "Twenty short years after that, the colony on Mars would be healthy and growing. And with the technology being developed today, we could be mining large amounts of material, expanding our economic activities in space and bringing the benefits back to Earth."

A New Monitor For Hot Spots

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Geologists are using a new device to monitor hot spots in volcanoes.

The device, a fully integrated night attack system for aircraft, was developed by Hughes Aircraft Co. for the U.S. Navy. It was used in early 1980 when Mount St. Helens began to heat up. Geologists, in cooperation with the Navy, discovered hot spots on part of the volcano's increasingly unstable north slope.

Because of the instability of this slope, civil authorities stepped up their warning and evacuation efforts in the vicinity of the volcano.

UNESCO Fire Described As Criminal Act

By JON-THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — The director-general of UNESCO said today a fire that gutted a wing of his organization's headquarters was "criminal" in origin and asked employees to cooperate in a police inquiry.

One UNESCO official estimated the blaze cause more than $625,000 damage and affected about 100 offices on seven floors of the eight-story building.

The fire caused no injuries but destroyed an undetermined amount of documents. UNESCO officials said the blaze began in an archives storage area, but denied that any classified documents had been destroyed.

March 2 news conference and said at the same time that he had heard rumors of UNESCO documents being destroyed and shredded. UNESCO formally denied any documents had been destroyed.

In Wednesday's fire, "no document concerning the budget or the administration of UNESCO that could interest the U.S. congressional inquiry due here shortly was destroyed," said Jerome Hinstin, a UNESCO official.
He said only recent correspondence and files concerning the correspondence were damaged, and that budget and administrative files were kept in another wing of the building. Hinstin said personnel files were kept in another UNESCO building in Paris.

1974, agreed to the congressional probe, officially termed a "review."
He also said he would welcome establishment of an international commission to investigate the organization's operations in order to end "untruthful allegations" against him.

Poison Control Week Being Observed Here

This is "National Poison Prevention Week" and the department of emergent medicine at East Carolina University's School of Medicine has issued reminder to parents to be on the alert to prevent accidental harm to their children.

Dr. Samuel Spicer, an assistant professor of emergency medicine at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, said accidental ingestion of drain cleaner, dishwasher detergent, furniture polish, aspirin and — common in this area — exposure to farm chemicals, are poisoning cases typically seen at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Spicer, who has an 18-month-old child, points out that no "child-resistant" container is 100 percent entry-proof in the hands of a youngster. It's wise, therefore, to treat medicines and chemical products as the potentially deadly substances that they are, he said.

If it is suspected that a child has swallowed a dangerous substance, Spicer said, several basic steps need to be taken immediately:

- Keep the container, with any remaining contents, for emergency personnel.
- Call a hospital or physician immediately. (The emergency department number at PCMH is 757-4455.)
- Report any symptoms exhibited by the victim — coughing, vomiting, drowsiness — to the physician over the telephone at that time.

In most poisoning cases, the primary first aid objective is to remove, dilute or flush away the offending substance as quickly as possible. In some cases it is desirable to induce vomiting with syrup of ipecac, though Spicer said this should only be done at the direction of a physician.

Amadou Mahtar M'Bow, the top official of the United Nations agency, told assembled members of his staff he had requested a "pains-taking inquiry" by French police, firefighters and prosecutors into the Wednesday night blaze.

The fire broke out at the modernistic Y-shaped building near the Eiffel Tower an hour after most employees had left for the day. It raged through seven of the buildings' eight above-ground floors before 200 firefighters brought it under control.

The United States, which provides one quarter of UNESCO's $187 million annual budget, announced Dec. 28 that it would withdraw from the organization at the end of this year because UNESCO had become too politicized, was anti-Western and badly managed.

"I have the will to assume to the very end the responsibilities that the member states have vested in me," M'Bow told the audience, which responded with a standing ovation.

Spicer believes other safety de-

•Call a hospital or physician immediately. (The emergency department number at PCMH is 757-4455.)

Henri Lopes, an assistant director-general, said at least 40 percent of the documents "were comparatively old" and could be replaced by use of a central file where copies are kept.

He said most damage occurred in the mail room, and that he believed various UNESCO departments had copies of some of the lost correspondence. He said he wasn't immediately sure how much of the material could be replaced.

In closing his speech today, M'Bow requested UNESCO employees "to reinforce our solidarity," and said he would remain at the helm of the international organization despite criticism by Western nations that under his leadership UNESCO has strayed from its original responsibilities in education, science and culture.

Johnson's Homer Lets ECU Split

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Winfred Johnson cracked a two-run homer in the bottom of the eighth inning to give East Carolina a 3-1 baseball victory over Northwestern University and a split of a doubleheader with the Wildcats yesterday.

Northwestern took the opener, 4-2, behind a couple of home runs and a fine pitching performance by John Trautwein.

"I'm tickled to death to get away with a split," ECU coach Hal Baird said. "This is by far the best club we've seen this year. They're really good."

The Wildcats finished the day with a 4-5 overall record, but Baird said that three of those losses came when Northwestern tossed pitchers way down in their order. "Their coach said they used their seventh, eighth and ninth pitchers against Campbell. That's something we don't even enjoy (the depth). But their best people went against us."

Baird said he was glad to see the Pirates rally in the second game and pull it out. "I really think it will help us in the long run."

The loss snapped a seven-game winning streak by the Pirates, who are now 11-4 overall after coming back for the split.

Winfred Johnson took the loss in the opener, but Baird said that both of the long balls hit off him really were helped along by a stiff wind blowing to right field. "Both of them probably would have been routine fly balls on a normal day," Baird said.

The Wildcats jumped into the lead in the opener in the second inning, scoring three times. Joe Girardi led off with a solo shot to right. Then, with one away, Ed Tompa reached on an infield hit but went out at second on Bob Juskie's grounder. Al Quintance singled to left and Michael Huff followed with a hit to center, scoring Juskie. Dan Grunhard followed with another hit to center, driving in Quintance.

The fourth Wildcat run came over in the third. That came on another solo homer by Reggie Hammonds.

The Pirates cut the lead in half in the bottom of the third. Steve Sides got a one-out double to left and Greg Hardison also used the wind for a two-run homer to right.

But the Pirates were unable to come up with anything else after that. Grunhard led Northwestern's hitting with three, while Huff, Girardi and Tompa each had two.

Todd Evans had two hits as he finally saw a six-hit streak come to an end on his final at-bat.

Robbie McClanahan sailed along with a no-hitter until the fifth inning for the Pirates in the second game, when Tompa doubled to left. And that came after a foul fly was nearly caught on the previous pitch.

East Carolina, meanwhile lost a chance in the fourth when it put runners on first and third with none out. But a fielder's choice and a double play ended that threat.

East Carolina finally scored in the fifth. With two away, Mike Sullivan doubled and Mark Shank walked. Jabo Fulghum then singled to center, scoring Sullivan for a 1-0 lead.

Northwestern came back with a run in the sixth to tie it up. Greg Beck singled to right and courtesy runner John Stewart stole second, racing to third when the ball was thrown away. He scored on a sacrifice fly by Huff.

McClanahan was finally chased in the eighth, as Jimbo Peterson came on to claim his third win of the

The Pirates, after leaving two on base in the seventh, came up with the winning tallies in the eighth. With two away, Evans singled and Johnson stepped in to wrap the ball

Sullivan led the ECU hitting with two, the only player on either team with more than one.

Xavier Tries To Slow Michigan

By The Associated Press

Xavier of Ohio, which has a pair of heart-stopping victories in the first two rounds of the National Invitation Tournament, will try tonight to slow down a Michigan team that has squashed its first two NIT opponents.

The Wolverines appear to have two factors in their favor going into tonight's meeting.

First, the game is in Ann Arbor, Mich., which not only could spark the Wolverines, but also could hinder the Musketeers, who are unbeaten at home this season, including two NIT victories, and 4-9 on the road. Second, Michigan is on a roll, having beaten Wichita State and Marquette by 24 and 13 points, respectively, to reach the third round.

"We've been playing very well at home," Michigan Coach Bill Frieder said. "This is a big thing for us. It's the first time in three NIT appearances we've been home for the third-round game. Our attendance has been good and the crowd has been supportive."

"You go where they tell you to go," said Coach Bob Staak of Xavier, which beat Ohio State in overtime and Nebraska by one point in the earlier NIT rounds. "We're looking forward to the challenge."

In another third-round game tonight, Santa Clara will be at Southwestern Louisiana, while Notre Dame is at Pittsburgh and Tennessee at Virginia Tech on Friday. The third-round winners will come to New York for the semifinals and final next week.

Despite being on a hot streak and at home, Michigan won't hold all the aces against Xavier.

The Musketeers have 6-foot-8 center Jeff Jenkins, who followed a regular season in which he averaged nearly 17 points per game with 30- and 18-point performances in his first two NIT games.

"Xavier is a good team and has had some impressive victories," Frieder said. "Jenkins is a pro player. He'll go in the first round of the draft. He's a good scorer inside and outside."

Michigan will counter Jenkins with 6-11 forward Tim McCormick and 6-10 center Roy Tarpley.

"We've played against bigger teams all year," Staak said. "We played two physical teams in Ohio State and Nebraska. This is nothing we haven't seen before. We're quicker, and we use that to offset our height disadvantage."

In tonight's other game, Santa Clara will be on the road for the third straight time in the NIT. The Broncos beat Oregon 66-53 and then defeated Lamar 76-74, only the second loss in 82 games at home for the Cardinals.

Southwestern Louisiana won both of its previous NIT games by two points over Utah State and in two overtimes against Weber State.

Foster Goes To Miami

MIAMI (AP) — Clemson basketball officials told Bill Foster to make a decision once and for all — now he's Coach Bill Foster of the University of Miami.

Foster decided to leave his head basketball coaching position at Clemson and try to resurrect the Hurricanes' program, abolished 14 years ago because of lack of money.

"I don't predict we'll be in the NCAA (tournament) in five years or the final four.... But we might be," Foster said Wednesday morning, confirming rumors that he had accepted the Miami post. "Some places you can only go so far. Here we can go from bust to the top. That was one of the reasons I took the job."

After a highly publicized national search, UM Athletic Director Stanley Jankovich selected Foster and offered the head coaching job to him Tuesday afternoon.

"At each of the schools he has been at, he has established a winning program," said Jankovich.

But Foster was still weighing the pros and cons of the important career move.

He said he also was asked Tuesday afternoon by Clemson officials to hold a news conference there to help dispel rumors that he would leave the South Carolina school.

"It was starting to hurt recruiting," Foster said here Wednesday. "They (Clemson athletic officials) asked me to make a decision either way."

Foster, who built new programs at two previous stops in his 19 years as a college head coach, will have one year to build the foundation at Miami before play begins in the 1985-86 season.

"We've got a lot of work ahead of us. It'll be a challenge and a lot of fun," Foster said.

Foster, 47, compiled a 156-106 record in nine years at Clemson. He led the team to four post-season appearances — the NIT in 1979, 1981 and 1982 and the NCAA West Regional final in 1980. The Tigers had a 14-14 record this past season, repeating their last-place finish in the ACC. Foster's college coaching career began at Shorter College in Rome, Ga., where he started the program and compiled a 110-31 record in five years.

After two years as an assistant at The Citadel, he moved on to North Carolina-Charlotte, compiling an 87-39 record in the program's first five years in Division I. When he moved to Clemson, Foster turned the UNC-C program over to Lee Rose, who took the 49ers to the NCAA Final Four in 1977.

"I never had more fun than I had the five years at Charlotte," said Foster, who announced he would bring his top Clemson assistant, Clint Bryant, with him to Miami. "And the things that we have here are so much better than I had at Charlotte."

Foster is one of several coaches UM officials interviewed since announcing last year the basketball program would be re-established.

Home games are planned for the 5,000-seat James L. Knight Center.

Foster's revolving five-year agreement at Clemson was not renewed last year, leaving him three years on the current package. He said he would have no trouble being released from the contract.

A native of Hemingway, S.C., Foster graduated from Carson-Newman College in Jefferson City, Tenn. He has spent his entire coaching career in the South.

Facing Carolina Doesn't Bother Indiana's Alford

ATLANTA (AP) — Facing the nation's top-ranked college basketball power doesn't bother Indiana freshman guard Steve Alford.

"We know they're a great team," Alford said Wednesday of the North Carolina Tar Heels, Indiana's foe tonight in the NCAA East Regional semifinals.

"It's a great opportunity for us to play against them," Alford said. "If we play as well as we can, we feel we can cause them an awful lot of problems."

Alford, an All-Big Ten Conference performer, is one of three freshmen in the young Hoosier starting lineup that will be facing a veteran team that includes a pair of All-Americans, Michael Jordan and Sam Perkins.

The Carolina-Indiana clash is the nightcap of the doubleheader that opens at 7:10 EST with Virginia tangling with Syracuse.

North Carolina and Virginia, two of the four remaining Atlantic Coast Conference representatives in the NCAA field, are the nation's only two schools to reach the round of 16 teams the last four years in succession.

Alford leads the Hoosiers in scoring with 15.4 points per game, but only one other player averages in double figures — 7-foot-2 Uwe Blab, 11.7.

The nightcap matches two of the college game's most successful coaches — Dean Smith of Carolina and Bobby Knight of the Hoosiers.

"I think the coaches are going to have fun tomorrow," Alford said. "Coach (Knight) strives for perfection. That's what makes him a great coach."

Knight, who steered Hoosier teams to national championships in 1976 and again in 1981 with a 63-50 victory over North Carolina in the finals, always strives to have his team playing well when the postseason tournament begins.

"For a long, long time, the basketball season for me has been March," Knight said.

Carolina carries a 28-2 record into the game, Indiana is 21-8.

"The thing that worries me is they're improved," Smith said in comparing the way Indiana plays now to the way it played earlier in the year. "I'm confident his (Knight's) teams will always perform well."

Syracuse, ranked 18th with a 23-8 record, faced a rebuilding season, but rode the brilliant play of freshman guard Dwayne "Pearl" Washington, an All-Big East choice, to the NCAA playoffs. Washington averaged 14.6 points per game, second on the team behind sophomore forward Rafael Addison's 17.6.

Virginia, 19-11, used a veteran backcourt trio of Othell Wilson, Rick Carlisle and Ricky Stokes to gain its tournament berth in its first season after the departure of Ralph Sampson.

"No doubt at the beginning of the year, these two teams were not expected to be here," Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim said. "Both teams deserve to be here the way they played."

"I think we've proved ... we are a good basketball team," Virginia's Terry Holland said. "I felt all along we had a very sound basketball team and if we'd survive the regular season, we'd be prepared for this kind of competition."

Tonight's two winners will advance to the regional championship game Saturday afternoon, with that winner earning a trip to the Final Four in Seattle next weekend.

Koch Could Face Same Cast In New Orleans Golf

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — With some of golf's leading lights experiencing difficulties coming into the USF&G Classic, the chances are increased that Gary Koch could face some of the same cast of challengers he met last week in the Bay Hill Classic.

"Gary's playing really very well right now," said Tom Watson. "This could be a good golf course for him. He could play well here."

And, Watson said, the men Koch beat in the Bay Hill — Australian Greg Norman, West German Bernhard Langer, PGA champion Hal Sutton, veteran George Burns — very well could be contenders again.

"They're all good players. Obviously, they're all playing well right now. When you get players of that caliber, when they're playing well, they tend to keep it going for a while," Watson said.

Watson, twice a winner of this title, discounted his own chances in the tournament that began today on the 7,080-yard, par 72 Lakewood Country Club course.

"I'm playing better, hitting more good shots, but it's still not there," said Watson, a five-time British Open champion who won the first tournament of the 1984 season, then plunged into a slump. His ninth place finish last week was his best in two months.

"It's going in the right direction. But I'm still hitting too many bad shots," he said.

Larry Nelson, the U.S. Open champ, also pointed to Koch, who already has won two tournaments this year, as a potential winner of this event that offers $400,000 in total prizes with $72,000 to the winner.

"The way he won last week, shooting 63 on that golf course, is very impressive," Nelson said. "I wouldn't be surprised to see him win again, maybe this week."

As for his own game, Nelson said a restricted schedule has prevented him from reaching full stride. He said his children are in school for the first time and he reduced his schedule to spend more time at home. He plans to increase his schedule when school is out.

"It's difficult to play really well when you aren't playing much," he said.

Rampant Golfers Capture 3rd Win

ROCKY MOUNT — Rose High School's golfers captured their third straight victory yesterday, downing hosting Rocky Mount High School by nearly 70 strokes.

The Rampants had little trouble with the Gryphons in the match held at Rocky Mount's Northgreen Country Club. Rose finished with a 324 team score, while Rocky Mount was far back with a 392.

Simon Moye and John Jordan led Rose, each carding a 79. Jordy Smith and Burt Aycock rounded out the scoring, each coming in with an 83.

Rocky Mount's best was Jeff Vaughn with a 96, while Kevin Cox had a 97, John Evans, 99, and Brian Wrenn, 100.

Now 3-0, Rose plays host to Beddingfield on Monday at Brook Valley Country Club.

MT. OLIVE — Ayden-Grifton's Marc Davis topped the field, but the Chargers finished third in a three-way golf match held yesterday at the Southern Wayne Country Club in Mt. Olive.

Hosting Southern Wayne finished first with a 336 team total while Eastern Wayne was second at 339. Ayden-Grifton finished with a 349 total.

Davis was medalist for the day with an 80, but didn't get the needed support from the other members to pull the Chargers through. Brian Heath was next for A-G with an 87, while Jeremy Shadle had a 90 and Keith Griffin had a 92.

Southern Wayne was led by Kenny Kirby with an 81, followed by Mark Raynor at 82, Bo Young at 83 and Keith Bunch at 90.

Charlie Delorey led Eastern Wayne with an 81, while Drew Nelson had 85, Richard Kimble had 86 and Kent Denton had 87.

Now 1-3, Ayden-Grifton travels to Morehead City on Monday for a match with West Carteret.

Coach K Predicts

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Now that he's looking in on the NCAA basketball championships, Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski can spend some time preparing for next year — and a little time predicting this season's outcome.

Four Atlantic Coast Conference teams remain in the field of 16. It might have been five if the Blue Devils had not fallen victim to Washington and some questionable clock-keeping in the second round of the NCAA West Regional.

Most people are looking at North Carolina as the team to beat in the stretch run toward Seattle. Krzyzewski believes Maryland and coach Lefty Driesell could also be headed for the Great Northwest.

"You start with excellent overall talent. They're as physical and mature a team as there is in the country," said Krzyzewski, whose Blue Devils lost to the Terrapins in the ACC tournament finals.

"They're older, bigger and they're good athletes. They're not hurt," he added.

If there's a roadblock to Maryland's quest, it's the fact that they're placed in the Mideast Regional. The Terrapins meet Illinois Thursday night and will meet Kentucky or Louisville on Saturday if they can get the victory.

"I think they have an excellent chance to win it," Krzyzewski said. "They've been loose. Lefty's been loose. They've played hard and had fun."

The key to Maryland, Krzyzewski added, is that freshman Keith Gatlin filled in admirably for Adrian Branch while Branch was serving a suspension on drug charges.

"They all saw that he's a heck of a player," Krzyzewski said of Gatlin. "Once Branch got back into shape, they became a new team. It's not the roll of a lucky team — they're as good as anybody."

Virginia has justified its selection to the 53-team field by downing Iowa and Arkansas. They aren't necessarily a Cinderella team.

"They've been through the wars," Krzyzewski said. "When you have three excellent guards, they're gonna give you an opportunity to win every game."

Syracuse lies ahead for the Cavaliers in the East Regional at Atlanta and Krzyzewski thinks experience will be the best teacher for coach Terry Holland.

"They're tournament-tested. They've been through all that stuff before," he said. "I think they can beat Syracuse."

Wake Forest faces DePaul and retiring coach Ray Meyer in the Midwest Regional at St. Louis. That alone gives the Demon Deacons trouble.

Chargers Top Kinston

KINSTON — Ayden-Grifton High School got only three hits off Kinston pitching yesterday, but made it pay off as the Chargers gained a 3-1 victory over the Vikings in the contest.

The Chargers moved ahead for good in the second inning, scoring twice. Roger Moye walked and raced all the way to third on a sacrifice. He scored on Shannon Peede's single. Terry Garrett followed with a walk and Tony McLawhorn singled, scoring Peede for a 2-0 lead.

Kinston came back with one run in the bottom of the third. Ralph Sutton and David Mitchell both reached on singles. Ike Brown walked and Tom Vermillion grounded into a fielder's choice, scoring Sutton.

Ayden-Grifton added its insurance run in the fifth. Garrett reached when his third strike got away from the catcher and he stole second. A passed ball moved him to third and he scored on a wild pitch.

Mitchell had two hits to lead Kinston.

Ayden-Grifton, now 3-2, plays host to SouthWest Edgecombe today in its first Eastern Carolina Conference game of the year.

Johnson, Conway (2), Garrett (6) and Moye, Watson and Whitley.

"The fans will be behind DePaul. I think Wake has a tough game," Krzyzewski said. "They have the type of team, they have to keep everybody in the game."

The difference in the two teams will be bench strength and Krzyzewski gives the edge to the Blue Devils.

Then there's North Carolina, which Duke beat to advance to the ACC tournament championship game. The Tar Heels meet Indiana in the East Regional nightcap at Atlanta.

"Just getting the first NCAA game behind you, you just get into the swing of the tournament," Krzyzewski said. "I think they're definitely the heavy favorite in the East. Indiana just doesn't have the athletes."

Duke might be in the Sweet 16, but Krzyzewski said time and fatigue caught up with his team out in Pullman.

"The team didn't have the ability to bounce back quickly," he said. "Physically, they weren't there. There's nothing you can do about it."

There is a next year for the Blue Devils and plans are underway to improve the attack. Duke has already recruited blue-chipper Billy King of Sterling, Va., a 6-foot-7 forward who might be able to give some relief to the Duke front line.

"We're just looking for good players," Krzyzewski said. "If we get a good athlete, we add to our defense. We've already got some quickness."

Trojans Top Pitt Netters

Mt. Olive Junior College gained a 5-4 tennis victory over Pitt Community College yesterday in the opening match of the year for the Paladins.

The two teams split the singles matches, 3-3, but Mt. Olive captured the number one and two doubles to win the day.

Pitt and Mount Olive are scheduled to meet again next week, but the date is still unsettled.

The Rampettes finished the afternoon with 58 points while Fike wound up with 55. Northeastern was in third place with 41 points.

"Exxon motor oil is standard equipment in this car."

There's one thing that always goes wherever I go, and that's Exxon motor oil. Why, since I bought this car back in 1971, I've gone 133,000 miles. And you can take my word for it, Exxon Extra has been with me every mile!

A lot of people have been satisfied with the results they get from Exxon motor oil. Economically priced Exxon Extra — a high quality, low viscosity multi-grade motor oil. It now contains special friction modifiers that save gas, compare to non-gas-saving motor oils.

And you can find the same gas-saving technology in two other Exxon motor oils. Super premium Uniflo, 10W-40 and 10W-30. SAE 15W-40 and 15W-30. Multi-grade motor oils especially suited for diesel as well as gasoline engines.

Given the choice of Exxon's three oils, you can get the gas-saving quality you want in the motor oil you need.

Don't Overlook Terps

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — With everyone in town talking about No. 3 Kentucky's game with Louisville tonight, a coach might worry that the other NCAA Midwest Regional semifinal between No. 6 Illinois and 11th-ranked Maryland would be overlooked.

Not Lefty Driesell. "I'm looking forward to seeing that one myself," the Maryland coach said Wednesday. "Denny (Crum) and Joe B. Hall have a war going ... like the Hatfields and McCoys again....

"I'll be glad when our game's over so I can watch it."

The Illini and Terrapins play at 7:10 p.m. EST, followed by Louisville and Kentucky. The winners square off Saturday. The winners for the regional championship and a spot in the Final Four.

Actually, the state basketball war has cooled off considerably since last year's "Dream Game," the Midwest final that got Crum's Cardinals and Kentucky together for the first time in 24 years. Tonight, the state's basketball powers will be meeting for the third time in 12 months, with each squad winning once.

The celebrations and mad dashes for tickets that greeted last year's game are absent this time. The regional was sold out long ago, and tickets just can't be had.

"I don't think this game is missing anything, it's just that there was so much extra hype around the other two," said Crum, whose Cardinals lost to Kentucky 65-44 in Rupp Arena last November but won the 1983 Contest in overtime, advancing to the Final Four.

"It'll always be a great rivalry, but it'll be hard to ever surpass that first one," Crum said. "This game is more important from the standpoint that it's a tournament game than from the standpoint that we're playing Kentucky. We'd want to win no matter who we were playing."

The Cardinals, 24-10 and the Metro Conference regular-season champions, are playing a 27-4 Kentucky squad that has been inconsistent but touted as one of the most talented Wildcat clubs ever.

However, Kentucky, which has won 10 of its last 11 games and hasn't lost here in over a year, is heavily favored.

Hall acknowledged that the Kentucky-Louisville game could be so emotional, the winner might come up flat Saturday in the final.

"It is possible," he said. "But I don't see how you're going to avoid it. If it becomes an emotional game, I'm not going to hold them back. There is a danger that they'd play themselves out. The main thing is to win the next one, and the next one is Louisville."

"If it takes emotion, we'll just have to spend it."

Driesell doesn't buy the theory. He's still worried about the fact that he's playing on Hall's floor, even if the five NCAA championship flags and the blue and white banners commemorating NIT titles and second-place finishes in the NCAA tournament have been taken down.

"I don't see the logic behind that," the Maryland coach said. "If we win, we'll play Kentucky on their home court. Emotions have nothing to do with that. I imagine most of the tickets sold here were sold to Kentucky fans."

Driesell's team may be seeded below Illinois, but Illini coach Lou Henson concedes the depth advantage to the Terps, noting that key injuries turned his reserves into fine starters this season.

"We do not have a lot of depth," Henson said. "We play five guys most of the time, sometimes six or seven. If one of our starters gets in foul trouble, it'll really hurt us."

The Illini, 25-4 and Big Ten co-champions, are known for their defense, and the Terps, 24-7, for their eight-game winning streak and Atlantic Coast Conference tournament title.

"I think we're peaking right now and we're ready," Driesell said. "I think we're both well matched up...."

"They're a good defensive ball club," he added. "They help each other a lot on defense. Offensively, they're very patient. They don't turn the ball over ... and they're the kind of team that doesn't beat themselves. You've got to beat them."

Old Dominion Takes Tourney

BUIES CREEK (AP) — Alan Schulte of Old Dominion fired a final-round 3-over-par 75 Wednesday to capture the Lonnie D. Small intercollegiate golf tournament at the Keith Hills Country Club.

ODU won the team title, defeating Campbell-Black on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff. Both teams finished the 54 holes of regulation with a 906 score.

Schulte finished the three-day tournament with a 217 total after firing back-to-back 71s in the first two rounds. Jeff Flowers of Ohio shot a 76 on Wednesday and finished second with a 222 total.

Matt Ball of Virginia Commonwealth and John Marshall of Campbell-Black tied for third at 224. Ball had a final-round 86 while Marshall fired a 77 on the 6,085-yard, par-72 course.

Guilford finished third in the team title chase with a 912, followed by Ohio at 915, Elon at 917, Campbell-Orange at 926, Virginia Commonwealth at 930, Virginia Tech at 935, Miami of Ohio at 939 and East Carolina at 941.

Appalachian State was 11th at 957, followed by North Carolina-Wilmington at 972 and Richmond at 976.

Deacons Seek To End Last Season For Meyer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — At the end of a trail spanning 42 collegiate basketball seasons at the same school, Ray Meyer insists he's going to go out with a smile.

"Even though it's my last time around, I'm having a ball. It's all gravy," the venerable DePaul coach told reporters Wednesday by telephone. "These young kids have exceeded my expectations. I figure that even if we lose, they've given me a fantastic year."

Meyer's team, of course, isn't expected to lose when it faces Wake Forest in Friday night's second game of the Midwest NCAA regional semifinals at the Arena.

But the 70-year-old coach of the nation's fourth-ranked team is taking nothing for granted against the 19th-rated Demon Deacons. Neither, for that matter, is Coach Guy Lewis of No. 5 Houston, which will take on 16th-rated Memphis State in the other semifinal.

DePaul's record, 27-2, tops the Midwest field as a tribute to the man who has advanced the Chicago school into the NCAA tournament a seventh time in the last nine years.

The Blue Demons, who were knocked off three times in a row in preliminary rounds, cleared that hurdle last Sunday with a 75-61 triumph over Illinois State. Now their challenge is an opponent which shared third place in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Meyer said he anticipates no slowdown by Wake Forest, 22-8, despite a disparity in team quickness and bench depth favoring DePaul.

"I don't see them holding the ball or playing a half-court game as such. They're a running ballclub," the coach said. "I know quite a bit about them. I have four or five films."

Meyer said is concerned, however, by the combination defenses the Deacon coach has apt to throw at his young charges.

"They go into that trap and drop right back into that 1-3-1. We don't want to stop and get out of our offense."

the coach said. "I think that maybe did something this morning (in practice) that may help us solve that problem."

It is an opportunity for the Blue Demons, to present their coach with a school-record 28th victory in one season.

"I think their quickness is most effective at the defensive end of the court. The fact that they held their opponents to 41 percent shooting gives us concern," Wake Forest Coach Carl Taty said. "Their explosiveness on the offensive board causes us concern. They do an awfully good job of keeping the ball alive."

Taty calls junior forward Tyrone Corbin the Demon Deacons' biggest worry and senior center Anthony Teachey perhaps the ACC school's biggest hope.

Wake Forest advanced to the Friday night assignment with a 69-59 victory over Big Eight tourney champion Kansas. "The tempo and control is the big issue," Taty coach said.

In Friday night's opener, underdog Memphis State, 26-6, is hoping history doesn't repeat itself against Houston, 28-4, the king of the Southwest.

A year ago, Houston prevailed 70-63 in the same contest. But Dana Kirk, the coach of Keith Lee and the rest of the Metro Conference tourney champions, hopes the Tigers learned a lesson.

"We had a chance to win. With 40 seconds left, we had the ball and a chance to tie it up," Kirk said. "What I know about Houston is you've got to try to neutralize their transition game. What you've got to do is try to match up with them and keep their (scoring) spurts down."

Michael Young, 20.3 scoring, and Akeem Olajuwon, the nation's top rebounder and shot-blocker, are leaders of a Cougars team vying for its third straight Midwest tourney title.

Chargers For Sale?

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Chargers owner Eugene V. Klein was expected to announce that the National Football League team was on the selling block.

A league source told the Associated Press Wednesday night that health concerns and the recent high-priced sales of the Dallas Cowboys and Denver Broncos had prompted the 63-year-old Klein to sell the team he has owned since 1966.

"He's putting it up for auction, but he hopes to sell it to San Diego interests," the source said. A press conference was scheduled for today.

One year ago, the city of San Diego announced the signing of a lease committing the Chargers to play in San Diego-Jack Murphy Stadium until 2003.

Based on the Dallas and Denver transactions earlier this week, Klein would stand to make a healthy profit by selling the team he purchased for $10 million from Barron Hilton. The Cowboys went for a reported $80 million, the Broncos for $70 million. The Chargers would presumably carry a similar pricetag.

Klein returned to San Diego on Tuesday from the NFL owners' meetings in Honolulu and was not available for comment. He had a "prior commitment," said Chargers spokesman Rick Smith.

"I know he has had offers for the team before and this franchise is one of the great franchises in sports," said Smith, who added that any direct comment on the possible sale of the team "would have to come from Mr. Klein."

Flame Feud Reignited

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A feud over commercialization of the Olympic flame has reignited between Greek officials and organizers of the Los Angeles Games, less than a day after the Americans announced a "complete accord and settlement."

A high-ranking Greek Olympic official said Wednesday he was "shocked and amazed" that the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee planned to continue taking contributions for the controversial torch relay across the United States until April 10th.

"As far as we're concerned the LAOOC promised to stop the sponsorship scheme yesterday (Tuesday)," said Nikos Filaretos, secretary general of Greece's Olympic committee.

During the Tuesday press conference, Ueberroth also announced that the flame will be electronically transmitted from Athens to New York City May 8. He said the LAOOC is paying the Greeks between $150,000-$200,000 to relay it 550 kilometers from Olympus to Athens by torchbearers.

The flame is traditionally kindled from the sun's rays by a Greek actress dressed in the robes of a classical priestess in an elaborate ceremony near the site of the first Olympic Games of 776 B.C.

Ueberroth said he was confident the Greek government and the Greek Olympic Committee would persuade the Greek populace that the relay was "not a commercial exploitation, but a good thing. Plus it's good for the (Olympus) community. If you visit Olympus, their economy is somewhat based on the efforts of the torch."

Free Rallies Cavs To Win

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

After a 4-for-14 start from the field, World B. Free proved again why he is one of the most dangerous players in basketball in a game's closing minutes.

The New York Knicks, with a five-game winning streak on the line, led 95-90 with three minutes left before Free sank his last five shots to rally the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 100-99 National Basketball Association victory Wednesday night.

All of the baskets came from the 15-20 foot range.

"I say to the other guys, 'Just get out of the way, here I come,'" Free said when asked what he does when he feels a hot streak coming on. "I really struggled in the first half of the game because New York's my home and I was really pressing. I knew my mom was watching."

"If he's on your team, you've got to go with him," Cavaliers coach Tom Nissalke said. "You don't just jerk him if he takes a crazy shot. As long as he works hard, he's in there. As long as he's working, I'll take a couple of bad shots, because he'll give you some great ones."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Denver 134, Houston 125; Dallas 102, Atlanta 101; Milwaukee 102, New Jersey 95; Los Angeles 123, Kansas City 116; Seattle 104, Phoenix 102; and Detroit 132, San Diego 123.

Cleveland, which snapped a four-game losing streak, was led in scoring by Cliff Robinson with 24 points, while Free scored 22.

With New York ahead 95-90, Free hit a 15-footer with 2:40 remaining and followed with an 18-foot shot with 1:22 left to pull the Cavaliers within 95-94.

Bernard King, who led the Knicks with 19 points, hit a short hook shot eight seconds later, but Free countered with an 18-foot jumper to cut the deficit to 97-96 with a minute to go.

New York's Ray Williams made a jump shot with 44 seconds left to push the Knicks' lead back to three, but Free tossed in a 20-footer to make it 99-98 at the 31-second mark.

Knicks center Bill Cartwright was called for an offensive foul with 11 seconds left, turning the ball over to Cleveland. Following a timeout, Free took a pass from Robinson, dribbled to the right baseline and sank the winning basket from 16 feet.

"He just came through when it counts," said Williams, who scored 18 points. "That's what a money player is for, and he's a money player. You expect that from him. It's just too bad we couldn't deny him the ball."

Lakers 123, Kings 116

The first-ever sellout crowd for a Kings game — 17,164 — saw Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Earvin "Magic" Johnson score 24 points apiece for

Los Angeles against Kansas City.

The Lakers led 98-78 after three quarters, but Reggie Theus scored 17 of his season-high 36 points in the fourth period for the Kings, cutting the deficit to 118-115. But Los Angeles scored five of the game's final six points to win going away.

Johnson had 19 assists and 12 rebounds in addition to his 24 points.

Bucks 102, Nets 95

Marques Johnson had 23 points and 10 rebounds to help Milwaukee win at New Jersey.

The Nets outscored the Bucks 22-8 to turn a 12-point deficit into an 84-82 lead on a three-point shot by Michael Ray Richardson, who led New Jersey with 23 points. But Milwaukee scored the next six points, including a tip-in by Johnson, to regain the lead for good.

Pistons 132, Clippers 123

Bill Laimbeer scored 24 points and Kent Benson 23 as Detroit stayed only a game behind Central Division leader Milwaukee by winning at San Diego.

The Pistons took the lead for good midway through the first period, but led only 67-65 at halftime. They outscored the Clippers, who got 30 points from Terry Cummings, 34-20 in the third period and led 105-85 early in the final quarter.

Laimbeer hit 10 of 13 from the field and Benson 10 of 12 for the Pistons.

Mavericks 102, Hawks 101

Rolando Blackman got the last two of his 30 points on an off-balance 10-footer with two seconds left to give Dallas its victory over Atlanta.

The Mavericks, playing before a sellout home crowd of 17,007, trailed by six points with four minutes left. But they pulled within one on a free throw by Mark Aguirre with 34 seconds left. Dan Roundfield led the Hawks with 27 points, while Aguirre added 25.

Nuggets 134, Rockets 125

Kiki Vandeweghe and Dan Issel scored 30 points apiece as Denver beat Houston for its ninth straight home victory.

The two teams were tied 80-80 midway through the third quarter before Issel led a 19-10 streak that gave the Nuggets a 99-90 lead after three periods. The Rockets, who got a season-high 28 points from rookie Rodney McCray, trailed by as many as 20 before rallying in the closing minutes.

Alex English had 22 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists for the Nuggets.

Sonics 104, Suns 102

Gus Williams scored 22 points, including six in a row midway through the fourth quarter, to lead Seattle over visiting Phoenix.

After Jack Sikma hit a baseline jumper and Williams hit three straight baskets to give Seattle a 94-88 lead with 6:05 left, the Suns never caught up.

Pitt Health Fair To Be Opened On Friday

The Pitt County Health Fair begins this weekend at Carolina East Mall, where screenings for abnormal blood pressure, anemia, sickle cell disease and a variety of other illnesses will be offered.

The fair will be open on Friday from 1-8 p.m. and on Saturday from 1-6 p.m.

Individuals age 18 and over may take part in the screenings and tests, which cost 25 cents. This fee goes to cover the cost of a stamp and envelope in which test results are mailed back to each participant.

In addition, two optional blood chemistry tests will be offered. A blood chemistry analysis, which screens for diabetes, kidney and liver disease, triglycerides, iron and cholesterol, will be conducted for $8. Participants must fast for four hours before taking it in order to give accurate results.

A coronary risk profile, which combines the above screenings with a coronary risk evaluation, will also be offered for $14. Participants are required to fast 12 hours before being tested.

All screenings are optional and do not take the place of a physical examination.

In addition to screenings, a number of displays and programs on various health-related topics will be offered. Health professionals and non-medical volunteers will be on hand to help participants understand how daily lifestyle choices and habits affect total health.

The Pitt County Health Fair, which is sponsored by WRAL, Winn-Dixie and the ECU School of Medicine, will bring together 40 health-service organizations from the Greenville area.

For more information, call the ECU School of Medicine, local coordinator for the event, at 757-6510.

Edible Poisons

This week is National Poison Prevention Week. Most people are aware of the danger of some household chemicals, but few are aware how much poison they consume on a daily basis. Shrimp contain arsenic. Sodium and chlorine are each poisonous in large amounts. But combined as salt, they make up a large portion of our diet. Americans consume 119 pounds of potatoes a year. The amount of solanine in those potatoes, if taken at once, would be fatal.

Speech Therapy for Children

Our 6-year-old child has a tendency to speak like a younger child. When is the best time to start treatment for such a problem? Many of my friends have had the same problem. They say that I should go along with the idea that he'll outgrow it. — Mrs. L.S., New Jersey
Dear Mrs. S.:

Speech therapy should begin right away. An untreated speech disorder can become a distinct handicap to a child. It is estimated that more than 2 million children have speech defects which interfere with their social relationships and scholastic achievement.

Speech may affect a child's acceptance or rejection by classmates in the formative years. When speech is babyish, children are teased and mimicked. The psychological impact of this can be damaging.

The first approach to such a problem should be a complete examination of the nose, the throat, the tongue and the vocal apparatus. Speech problems may be caused by a small band of tissue that ties down the tongue or by a malformation of the jaw and palate.

Habitual patterns of distorted speech are easily acquired. Allowing them to continue without any form of treatment tends to make them fixed and difficult to eradicate.

The science of speech therapy has made enormous strides in the past 30 years. Almost all large university centers, medical schools and hospitals have speech departments. Newly developed techniques and electronic instruments can "chart" a speech defect, establish the reason, and outline the ideal form of treatment.

Since children learn to speak by mimicking those around them, good hearing is essential to learning. An undisclosed hearing impairment may be responsible for a child's speech defect. Once the exact cause is determined, intensive treatment by speech therapists is essential.

The advantages of speech therapy are great. Delaying the treatment makes it more difficult to obtain perfect results.

Peter Weichsel and Alan Sontag have long been considered one of the best pairs in the world. They confirmed this ranking when their team won the 1983 world championship in Stockholm. Defense has been their forte. Here's an example from the semifinal of the championships.

In North-South's methods, South's hand was not good enough for a two-over-one response. His one no trump was a one-round force, and two no trump was invitational. North-South needed points — they were trailing by a considerable amount — so North pushed on to game.

Since South's long suit was almost certainly clubs the could have bid two hearts over North's rebid if that was his suit, Weichsel, West, elected to attack with a low heart. Declarer won East's queen with the ace and forced out the ace of diamonds. East returned a heart to his partner's king and it seemed normal to clear the suit.

Had Weichsel made the reflex play, declarer would have gotten home easily. Weichsel, however, visualized the position. Instead of playing a heart, he shifted to the king of spades (to cater to a singleton queen in the South hand). Declarer held up, but Weichsel continued with the ten of spades to the ace.

Declarer now had only eight tricks, and he had to look to the club finesse for his ninth. But when that failed, Weichsel continued with the jack and six of spades for down one.

In the other room, Weichsel's teammates reached the less ambitious contract of three diamonds. Declarer made an overtrick, so Weichsel's brilliant defense turned a potential loss of 7 International Match Points into a gain of 5 IMPs.

Lauds Decision On Missile Sale

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The consul general of Israel said Wednesday he applauds the decision by President Reagan not to sell "stinger" anti-aircraft missiles to Jordan.

Yosef Yaakov said the U.S. should not sell arms to any country that has used force against Israel while refusing to honor the Camp David accords as Egypt has done.

Yaakov, speaking at the Jewish Community Center in Asheville, said the "stinger missiles" are extremely portable and could be used by terrorists to paralyze Israeli air traffic.

Yaakov also said that Reagan had done a good job in the foreign policy area, but refused to take a stand on the upcoming American presidential election.

PBS Offers Beatrix Potter Story

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — John Hawkesworth, whose best-known television project was the much-acclaimed "Upstairs, Downstairs," has moved into the nursery to write about Flopsy, Mopsy, Cottontail — and their creator, Beatrix Potter.

Hawkesworth's "Tales of Beatrix Potter," which chronicles the life of the famed writer and illustrator of children's stories, will be broadcast on Mobil's "Masterpiece Theatre" in two one-hour installments, this Sunday night and next.

Alistair Cooke, host of "Masterpiece Theatre," is surrounded by cages of animals when he introduces Sunday's broadcast. He says Hawkesworth was drawn to Miss Potter's work because of the delicacy of the animal illustrations scattered throughout her classic square-shaped books.

"Animals are no problem, it's people," says Miss Potter in the broadcast.

Hawkesworth's script, which is based on the biography written by Margaret Lane, emphasizes how Miss Potter was the child of snooty, rigid parents in the late 19th century in England. With no one to give her love or receive her affection, Miss Potter lavished her attentions on small animals, who become the inspiration for such popular characters as Peter Rabbit, Mrs. Twiggwinkle and Jemima Puddle-Duck.

Holly Aird of "The Flame Trees of Thika" gives the young Beatrix wonderful charm, and Penelope Wilton is also winning in the role of the older Beatrix, the adult writer-illustrator and, after she turns 50, the successful and contented sheep farmer.

Befitting its subject matter, the TV series is gentle and sentimental, but it lacks the excitement, high drama and strong character development of Hawkesworth's best projects. It is watchable, but never compellingly so.

Why would Hawkesworth do such a different type of project?

"It's the epitome of a certain sort of life," Hawkesworth said in a recent interview. "The idea came when we were filming in Kenya for 'Flame Trees,' and I thought that Holly would make a wonderful 'Alice in Wonderland.'"

"Then my mind went to Beatrix Potter doing illustrations for 'Alice in Wonderland.'"

Besides "Upstairs, Downstairs" and "Flame Trees," Hawkesworth has done public television's "Danger: UXB" and, for American commercial TV, "Q.E.D.," a failure on CBS several seasons back.

"Q.E.D.," a tongue-in-cheek adventure story starring Sam Waterston, "didn't please network audiences," Hawkesworth said. "But I don't think I could ever please that network audience. It (Q.E.D.) turned out to be too sophisticated and a bit too clever."

"Upstairs, Downstairs" was one of the most popular miniseries on public television. To some, it was the classy forerunner of the network's serial sagas, such as "Dallas" and "Dynasty."

"I think it hit at the right moment," said Hawkesworth. "It was the first program we produced in color and the first one we actually exported." It also legitimized PBS' "Masterpiece Theatre" as a respected program importer.

In 1975, CBS thought the class-conflict tale was commercial enough to do an American-cousin version. "Beacon Hill," set in Boston in the 1920s, had the outline but not the same content, character or class.

Hawkesworth was summoned to put things right. "I came in when the patient was dead," he said. "I was disappointed that I came in so late."

Hawkesworth does not condemn the networks, except to say that "people should make TV for their own customers." He said his two favorite American programs are "Hill Street Blues" and "M-A-S-H."

Among his future projects are "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," a 13-part series, and "By the Sword Divided," an adventure series he based on the division in his family in England's 17th century civil war. Both will be on public television next year.

He's also thinking about a modern version of "Upstairs, Downstairs," "where the grandchildren are in 1984," Hawkesworth said. "But I wouldn't try to write something contemporary unless I really felt inspired."

"We Britons are still haunted by class. We like to go back. We seem to feel safer buffered by time."

Jazz Greats In Friday's Tribute

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Jazz greats Dave Brubeck and Gerry Mulligan are among the talents getting together Friday night in a tribute to renowned pianist and educator John Mehegan.

Mehegan, in his 60s, is in a New Canaan nursing home suffering from an inoperable brain tumor, said Lucille King, organizer of the benefit concert to be held at New York's Symphony Space.

He spent six months in a hospital undergoing treatment and is "tens of thousands of dollars in debt from the medical bills," she said.

Actor Egan To Court For Pay

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Richard Egan is going to court against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Co. contending the studio failed to pay him for its use of scenes from his 1959 film "A Summer Place" in its 1982 picture "Diner."

The suit, filed Tuesday in Los Angeles Superior Court, contends that under a Screen Actors Guild contract the studio was required to negotiate separately with the actor for using portions of "A Summer Place," said Egan's attorney, Douglas Smithers.

Egan, 60, is seeking $12,844.56 compensatory damages and $100,000 exemplary damages, the lawyer said.

For starring in "A Summer Place," produced by Warner Bros., Egan was paid $75,000 for seven weeks of work, according to the court papers.

Heritage Year For The Brits

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Britain is bragging up its rich heritage this year with a cornucopia of anniversaries, from the 40th of D-Day to the 1,000th of St. Ethelwold's death.

1984 has become "Heritage '84" in the literature of the British Tourist Authority, and from the month of April through the summer a foreign visitor could spend so much time event-hopping that missing Big Ben might become a possibility.

People with special interests in music, letters, religion, arms and architecture may be tempted by a variety of commemorations, and if you can't come this year, there are hints of more in 1985.

Auto enthusiasts, for instance, are invited to the Duxford Aerodrome in Cambridge on June 17 for "On Wheels and Wings," a fete of Roll-Royce's 80th year, with a showing of 1,000 luxury Rolls cars going back to 1904.

For car-fanciers who have booked themselves elsewhere this year, 1984 will offer "Motor 100" — a celebration of 100 years of motoring in Britain. Reserve May 25-26, 1985, at the Silverstone race circuit.

This year the Tourist Authority is touting "a nationwide celebration of Britain's past and the country's living history." There'll be a Saxon Festival, a Year of Christian Heritage, a Festival of Architecture.

All of those events are linked to anniversaries. For architecture it's the 150th of the Royal Institute of British Architects. For Christians it's 450 years since the Church of England was created in the break with Rome.

The Saxon Festival, from April 29-Sept. 10, marks 1,000 years since the death of St. Ethelwold, the bishop of Winchester from 963-984, when Saxon rule was flourishing before the Norman Invasion in 1066.

Invasion buffs have a more modern event to commemorate: the 40th anniversary of the D-Day invasion in World War II. As always the beaches and villages of Normandy in France, where the massive Allied force landed and fought on June 6, 1944, will have the central commemorations. But Britain's English Channel ports, from which the invasion force embarked, have planned big memorials and are opening new museums.

Thousands of Allied veterans, most now 60-plus, are expected to make return visits to their staging points on British soil, and the British and American armed forces are providing troops, ships and planes to give a military look to events in Portsmouth, Southampton, Slapton Sands and other coastal locales.

For music-lovers, 1984 offers the 50th anniversaries of the deaths of two composers, Sir Edward Elgar and Frederick Delius. There already has been an Elgar concert, but special performances of Delius' work are set for Oct. 25-28, in Bradford, West Yorkshire, where he was born.

The Glyndebourne Festival Opera, marking its 50th season, will be on stage in Glynde, East Sussex, from May 28 to Aug. 17.

Perhaps the greatest musical celebration of the year will be a six-month series of concerts starting March 31 in honor of the composer George Frederick Handel, marking the bicentenary of the Great Handel Commemoration of 1784. The central concert will be on May 29, a performance of Handel's "Messiah" at Westminster Abbey, where the composer is buried.

1984 is the 200th anniversary of the death of Samuel Johnson, the great English writer, wit and lexicographer. Johnson memorabilia, manuscripts, portraits and books will be displayed in many places, including the Arts Council at 105 Piccadilly in central London.

Dr. Johnson died on Dec. 13, 1784, and the Dec. 13-16 period this year has a range of Johnson memorials scheduled, including a banquet in the House of Commons and the laying of a wreath on his grave in Westminster Abbey.

In central London the still lively St. James's Church is marking its 300th year. In July it will be the center of a Piccadilly Festival, and in November St. James's will have a week of concerts and liturgical celebrations.

A much older church, Worcester Cathedral, is celebrating the 900th year of its present building in Worcester, 120 miles north of London. A series of concerts and pageants started in January and will end Aug. 25.

To the visitor who finds the day not long enough to take in all the events, here's 18th-century advice from Dr. Johnson: "Whoever thinks of going to bed before twelve o'clock is a scoundrel."
