Copter Crash Kills 29 Troops In Korea

By EDWIN Q. WHITE
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Military teams searched through the widespread wreckage of a U.S. Marine Corps helicopter Saturday, hunting for bodies of 18 American and 11 South Korean marines believed killed in a fiery crash in the rainswept coastal mountains.

An U.S. military report said all 29 marines, who were taking part in a combined training exercise, were "believed to have perished" when the aircraft plowed into the side of a mountain in pre-dawn darkness Friday. The site is about 25 miles north of the southeast port of Pohang.

The military said the copter, one of six in the maneuvers, had been headed back to base at Pohang after deteriorating weather conditions forced cancellation of the night exercises.

A fire, spotted on the mountainside, was the first indication of a crash.

The report said "some bodies" were recovered Saturday. The rugged nature of the terrain about 200 miles southeast of Seoul made the grim hunt a slow, difficult process.

"It was a violent crash that spread the helicopter all over," one source said. "It covered a great area of steep, rugged mountain."

All the Americans aboard the helicopter were members of the 3rd Marine Amphibious Force based on Okinawa and in South Korea for the joint maneuvers, called Team Spirit '84.

The helicopter was a CH-53D type, a "Sea Stallion" that can carry as many as 38 marines and a crew of three. It was taking part in a night exercise involving the movement and landing of combat troops.

Col. Rallin J. Aars, public affairs officer and spokesman for U.S. Forces in South Korea, gave this account:

"The helicopter which crashed was one of six helicopters which took off from Pohang Airfield...

"The weather when the helicopters took off was above minimum standards. However, as the flight continued the weather deteriorated. The mission was terminated and all aircraft were returning to Pohang when the helicopter crashed."

Aars said a Marine observation aircraft sighted a fire on a rugged mountainside and search and rescue operations got under way immediately.

He said the identities of the victims are being withheld until their families are notified.

Other sources said it probably would be late Sunday before it could be confirmed positively that all aboard were dead, and it might be two or three days before identifications could be made and families notified.

Elements of the 3rd Marine Amphibious Force are among some 60,000 American military people taking part in this year's Team Spirit, the ninth annual exercises in the series.

With the South Korean forces participating, the total number that will have been involved when Team Spirit '84 ends next month will reach about 207,500. The exercise began Feb. 1 with the deployment of troops and equipment, some coming from as far away as Hawaii and the U.S. mainland.

Earlier this week, nearly 50,000 U.S. and South Korean marines carried out a major amphibious assault landing on the beaches around Pohang. The U.S. Navy vessels supporting that operation included the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk.

The carrier was moving away from the Pohang area Wednesday night when it collided with a nuclear-powered Soviet submarine in the Sea of Japan. The U.S Navy said there were no casualties aboard the carrier, but both vessels sustained some damage.

PCMH And Med School Site Booming With Construction

One of the boomingest areas of construction in Pitt County is the grounds of Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the adjacent ECU Medical School.

According to Ralph Hall Jr., hospital vice president for facility management, approximately $12 million worth of construction is under way at present and more is planned to start soon.

•A $6.2 million construction-renovation project is under way which will provide a new emergency department and additional radiology and surgery space next year.

•A $5.5 million radiation therapy center is being added to the medical school.

•An open heart surgery intensive care unit will begin soon, with work to be done by the hospital plant operations crew.

•An 18-bed minimum care unit will be added adjacent to the psychiatric unit, with bids to be taken in April.

•A 2,500-square-foot support space for the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit.

•A digital angiography room in the Radiology Department.

Work on the new emergency department is well under way, with occupation eexpected next January.

Once completed, the waiting room for this area will be off the main 14-foot hospital corridor which will, at that time, be connected to the Brody Medical Science building by a glassed-in corridor. A breezeway between the hospital proper and the Brody Building is at present being enclosed by glass. Square footage of the emergency room area is to be and it is designed to more nearly be a regional trauma center as it has been designated by the state.

Once the present emergency department area is vacated, the area will be renovated into additional

Terrorist Theft Nets $21 Million

ROME (AP) — Five self-proclaimed Red Brigades terrorists staged a daring robbery Saturday that netted the equivalent of $21.8 million from the vaults of a security company. It was believed to be the biggest armed robbery in modern Italian history.

Police said the men, carrying submachine guns and pistols, pulled off the robbery with military precision and must have had inside help because of their knowledge of the operations and security at the Brink's Securmark company.

The firm, which is connected with the U.S.-based Brink's Inc., is an armored car and security company that stores cash for several local companies and banks.

Police said the robbers captured a company employee, held his wife and child, and forced him to help them into the Securmark offices before dawn. They waited calmly for the time lock on the vault to open at 6:30 a.m. and made off with their loot in 20 minutes.

Police said no one was hurt.

Officials said 85 percent of the loot was in cash and the rest was in securities.

City's Ambassador Eagerly Awaits Trip

By JANE WELBORN

A Rose High School student will travel to the mountainous country of Switzerland this summer, bringing tidings from his hometown. While in Europe, Curt Hendrix of Greenville will learn about life in the Netherlands and will inform his host country about eastern North Carolina.

Hendrix, a junior at Rose High, was recently chosen as Greenville's Community Ambassador for 1984. He is enthusiastic about this experience and is anticipating his travel.

The son of Mary Alice Hendrix and the late James Curtis Hendrix, and the grandson of Mrs. H.A. Hendrix, all of Greenville, Hendrix has spent his entire life here and hopes to make Greenville his home as an adult; he looks forward to telling the people of Switzerland about his hometown.

"I like Greenville and the people here," he said in an interview. "The town is growing fast, but the people here aren't 'big town people.' People here still help others and there is a lot of love here."

Hendrix said he was able to choose the country he wished to visit. He chose Switzerland because "it is a beautiful and well-off country," he said. "It has never had a war."

Another reason for his choice of Switzerland is because of its location.

"It is a central country in Europe," Hendrix said. "It is not even the size of eastern North Carolina, and it is near Germany,

Youth Keeps Winning

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Gary Evans just can't stop winning.

Two years ago, as a senior at Ayden-Grifton High School, he won the North Carolina Tractor Driving Championship for his 4-H club.

Now, as a second-year student in agriculture at Pitt Community College, he has won the state agribusiness employment interview competition and will leave Monday for Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to try for the national championship.

Evans will pit his job interview skills against students in two-year agriculture programs from across the nation at the annual conference of the National Postsecondary Agricultural Student Organization March 26-29.

Each youth will be interviewed by representatives of agricultural-related companies and will be evaluated on the interview and a pre-prepared resume, an application for employment form and a letter of application. The competition is designed, says agriculture instructor Harold Smith of PCC, who will travel to Iowa with Evans, to test a student's ability to apply knowledge and skills used in securing employment in agriculture, agribusiness and renewal natural resources jobs.

"Contestants are judged solely on their interview skills, not their technical skills," said Smith. "It (the competition) is designed to encourage students to be outstanding when competing for jobs."

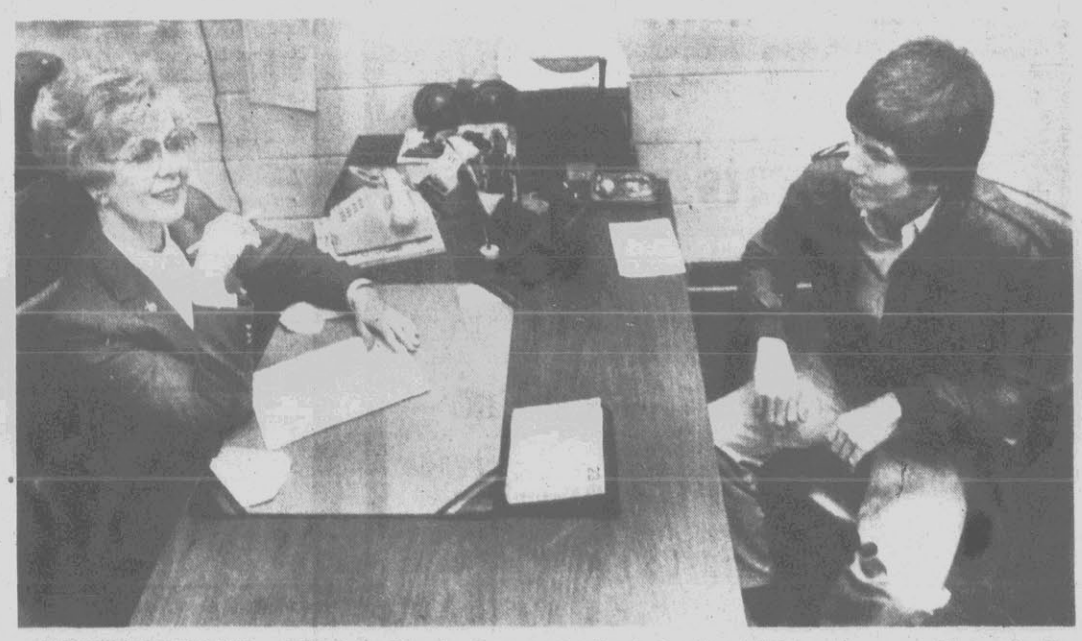

During the interview students will be asked to answer questions about managing people and finances and will be scrutinized for confidence, enthusiasm, composure and neatness.

On the state level, Evans said the interview portion of the competition was very realistic, and he expects the same in the national. "They sat me down just like I was actually being interviewed for the job and asked me questions about difficult situations," said Evans. "They asked me what I'd do, for example, if I were a supervisor and had an employee that couldn't get to work on time, and how I'd handle certain business methods of the company."

To prepare for the competition, Evans has been practicing his interview techniques with campus instructors and practicing writing letters of application. He says a course he took at PCC on job search and placement has helped him a great deal. "The course stressed how to look for a job and how to get the edge on others looking for the same job."

Evans will graduate from PCC's agriculture program in May with a double major in business technology and agricultural chemicals. He is in the college's work co-op program, is employed at A.C. Monk in Farmville and farms part time. In addition, he serves as vice president of the North Carolina Postsecondary Agricultural Student Organization, the state chapter of NPASO. Both organizations are geared for students in

Pusher Sought

NEWARK, N.J. — A drug pusher who sold fake heroin that killed three people was being sought by police Saturday as health officials warned other drug users that the deadly substance is on the streets.

Two men and a woman who believed they were injecting heroin suffered "very bizarre deaths" after they were sold the drug ergotamine, which can rupture blood vessels in the brain if taken in large doses, officials said.

The identities of the victims, who were in their 20s, have not been released and other details surrounding the deaths were not available. Officials said the victims died over four days last week.

Presidential Visit

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — President and Mrs. Reagan, taking advantage of a sunny spring day, paid a surprise visit Saturday to Monticello, Thomas Jefferson's plantation home in the foothills of western Virginia.

Disrupting the routine public tours of the historic building as little as poasible, the Reagans' helicopter landed in the front yard after a 120-mile flight from Washington.

The first family then joined a group of 20 other tourists for a guided walk through the house, which is filled with the third president's inventions and memorabilia.

Italy and France." Hendrix said he hopes to travel around Europe while he is community ambassador.

A sports enthusiast, Hendrix likes sailing, snow skiing and all sports, as well as hunting and fishing. He is a member of the Rose High soccer team and was on the tennis team.

Hendrix is also interested in politics. He served as Student Government Association president at Aycock Junior High School and was class president at Rose for the past two years.

"I am interested in community affairs," Hendrix said, "I want to find out about the government in Switzerland and I want to share with them our government."

He is presently sergeant of arms of the Key Club at Rose High, and was recently elected as vice president of the club for next year. He is also public relations person for the Fellowship of Christian Athletes at Rose High.

Hendrix is a member of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church and is active in the United Methodist Youth Fellowship there. He said his religious views are an important part of his life.

"I prayed a lot" about being community ambassador, Hendrix said. "God is first in my life. I know this is what he wants me to do this summer."

Hendrix says he enjoys helping people, and is considering a business career.

But right now, he is interested in representing Greenville as a community ambassador.

"Going to Switzerland to represent Greenville is a big obligation," Hendrix said. "I will live with a family in Switzerland for three weeks and tell them about the way things are in the southern United States. I will cook them Southern-style food and take slides and bring back things. When I get home, I will make presentations to civic groups and those who sponsored me and anyone else who wants to hear me speak about my experiences." Hendrix said that last year's community ambassador, Hunter Bost, has given 50 presentations this year.

"I want to thank the people of Greenville for sending me and thank my peers for encouraging me," Hendrix said.

The community ambassador receives $2,500 to enable him to go to the country of his choice. The money for the trip is donated by merchants, civic groups and citizens of Greenville, he said.

Hendrix said, "I am not following in my father's footsteps, although he taught me a lot in the short time I knew him; he was a really big influence in my life. But I want to make footsteps of my own."

Becoming Greenville's community ambassador is one way Hendrix wants to make his own path in life.

space for the radiology department and the surgery department will have additional operating rooms added in space now serving as radiology area. The additional operating rooms will be used for open heart surgery, but open heart surgery at PCMH, planned to begin July 1, will not wait until these rooms are ready. Minor renovations are being done in the present surgery area so this type of surgery can begin being offered sooner.

A 12-bed unit for intensive care of open heart surgery patients will be made in 1 North, a patient care area now used for medical-surgical patients. This project is expected to cost about $100,000.

The minimum care unit, expected to cost about $700,000, will be used for patients who are "not too acute," perhaps persons being kept in the hospital for observation following not-too-serious surgery or other therapy or for an overflow of psychiatric patients, Hall said.

The 24,000-square-foot radiation therapy is planned to provide "comprehensive cancer care to patients in eastern North Carolina" and will support and be supported by existing radiation therapy units in New Bern, Kinston and Goldsboro. Located between the Family Practice Center and the Brody Medical Science Building, the center is spending nearly half of its budget on two medical linear accelerators — a 6 million volt unit and a 20-million-volt unit being installed at present. Occupation and use is expected to begin about July 1, Medical School Dean Dr. William Laupus says.

The shelling-in of the Neonatal Intensive Care support space (offices, etc.) is part of the Phase I contract and interior will be developed by in-house construction forces, Hall said. The estimated cost is expected to be about $100,000.

The equipment to be housed in the angiography room will cost approximately $800,000. This renovation should be completed and ready for use within 30 days and will remain intact when the planned radiology renovations begin next year.

Pitt Memorial has experienced an increase in patient services every year from its opening in 1977 through 1983 when a leveling off and dropoff began. The planned additions and renovations, Hall said, will ensure continued utilization, since most of the services being allowed by the construction projects are those that will serve the entire region as the hospital continues to establish itself as the acute care center of Eastern North Carolina.

The Republican Corner

Pitt County's Conservative Voice

For the past several weeks, this column has presented excerpts from The North Carolina Republican Party Platform dealing with prayer in schools, teacher salaries, criminal justice and other state issues. In the future, we will present our party's position on more state issues as well as issues of local and national concern. Today, we present the Preamble to our Party Platform in its entirety:

We, the members of the North Carolina Republican Party, affirm our belief in limited government and in open and fair administration of the law. The Republican Party of North Carolina is truly the people's party. The Republican Party represents every segment of American society-the worker, business leader, farmer, the homemaker. We are the party of those who are interested in opportunity, not government giveaways. We are the party of those who champion local control of local issues. We are the party of fairness, not the party of the old politics of power hungry machines.

As North Carolina Republicans we have great pride in our state. But we stand for more than the tired old policies of the complacent and unresponsive Democratic Party leadership. We stand for an even better North Carolina where all citizens can share in the richness of opportunity that our nation has to offer.

Nowhere in the annals of history has a one party system worked for the best interests of the people. Our country has prospered these many years because a viable and vibrant two party system existed. North Carolina Republicans are pledged to support a two party system in which the people will possess true representation.

We pledge to bring responsive government back to North Carolina. We pledge to listen to the people, not the governor's political machine. We pledge to restore fiscal responsibility and legitimate priorities to state government. We endorse this platform as a plan of action. We call upon concerned citizens to join us in these efforts to return responsive government to our state. Together we can make it better for all of us for now and for the future.

We invite you to join us-to help promote a healthy,two party system in our state. You can register or change party affiliation right in your home. Call or write today for more information.

Over 20 events are scheduled. Application deadline is Tuesday. For more information, call 752-4137, ext. 259.

VFW Speaker

Carl Whitfield, a candidate for the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, will speak at the annual Veterans of Foreign Wars' ladies night program Thursday.

The 7 p.m. meeting will be held at the VFW post building on Mumford Road. Whitfield's speach will center on community development.

Market Meeting

The Pitt County Farmers Market Association meeting will be held Monday starting at 7 p.m. at the Pitt County Office Building, room 201.

Gymnastics Class

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will offer a new session of gymnastics to be held at Elm Street Center beginning April 4.

Classes for school age youth will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 4:30-5:15 p.m.; the fee is $30. Classes on Wednesday and Friday for school-aged participants will be held from 5:15-6 p.m., fee $25. Preschool classes, fee $20, will be held on Wednesday and Friday from 6-6:30 p.m. or from 6:30-7 p.m. All classes will meet for six weeks.

Preregistration is necessary and will be held at Elm Street Center Tuesday from 5-6 p.m. For more information call April Maxam evenings, 752-9432.

Participant

Dr. Lester L. Laminack, assistant professor, department of elementary education at East Carolina Univeristy, will participate in a microworkshop on "ALERT: A strategy for developing Critical Thinking Skills Through Evaluation of Advertisements and Commercials" at the International Reading Association's 29th annual convention. The convention will be held May 6-10 in Atlanta.

Balloons Found

A Greenville area woman found balloons behind her house Thursday afternoon that were released by school girls in East Tennessee earlier the same day.

Linda Creech found the colorful balloons in a field behind her house on Ram's Horn Road. Mrs. Creech said the balloons, connected by a strand of red yarn, were caught on weeds and one balloon had burst. The names of Amanda Myers and Megan Jenkins, along with the address of the Loudon Elementary School in Loudon, Tenn., were found in one of the balloons.

Kathy Waller, a teacher at the school, said the balloons were released "when it was super-windy." She said each child in the school released a balloon as part of a contest to see which would go the greatest distance.

Loudon is about 30 miles from Knoxville, approximately 500 air-miles from Greenville.

Support Group

The SHARE Support Group will meet Monday starting at 7:30 p.m. in the Regional Rehabilitation Center conference room at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The purpose of the group is to provide support for couples who have experienced miscarriage, stillbirth or death of a newborn infant.

Regular meetings will be held the third Monday of each month at First American Savings and Loan at the same time.

Genetic Symposium

A symposium on Genetic Engineering and Monoclonal Antibodies will be held April 12-13 at the Brody Medical Sciences Building Auditorium sponsored by the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

The schedule includes Recombinant DNA Technology, Eukaryotic Cell Genetics, Genetically Engineered Farm Animals, Biotechnology in Forestry and Medical Therapy with Monoclonal Antibodies. Lecturers include staff members of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, department of genetics at the University of California at Berkeley, North Carolina State University, and Iowa State University, as well as representatives of Hoffman-La Roche Inc. of Nutley, N.J., Granite Diagnostics of Burlington and the National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Md.

Because seating is limited, advance registration is encouraged brfore April 1. There is no registration fee. For more information, contact Uwe Muller, School of Medicine, 757-2700.

Art, Essay Contest

An art and essay contest open to Pitt County and Greenville students will be sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors April 8-14, board president Blanche Forbes has announced.

The art contest is open to all students in grades 4-6 and the subject is "My Perspective of Home Ownership." Rules for the contest will be distributed in the schools.

The essay contest is open to high school seniors and the subject is the Abraham Lincoln quote "The Strength of a Nation Lies in the Homes of Its People." Students must interpret this quote, Ms. Forbes said, as it relates to their future. Essays are limited to 1,500 words. Local winners will compete in the North Carolina Association of Realtors contest.

Three local winners in both contests will be announced April 9 and first prize will be a $100 savings account. Second and third prizes will be $50 and $25 savings accounts. Entries are due April 4.

Both contests are being held in conjunction with private property week.

Reckless Homicide

MUNCIE, Ind. — A couple who charged a dying cancer patient about $10,000 for Laetrile treatments and enemas were convicted Saturday of reckless homicide and unlawful practice of medicine.

A Delaware Superior Court jury, after eight hours of deliberation, convicted Harry W. Graham, 67, and his wife, Ellen, 58, in connection with the Sept. 11 death of Sybil Bennett of rural Yorktown.

Although testimony indicated Mrs. Bennett died of breast cancer, the jury ruled that the Grahams were responsible for her death.

ECU Announces Promotions

Promotions in academic rank for 31 members of the faculty of East Carolina University have been announced by the division of Academic Affairs, effective Aug. 20.

In addition , tenure has been granted 15 members of the faculty, six of whom also received promotions. The actions were announced by Dr. Angelo A. Volpe, vice chancellor of academic affairs.

Receiving promotions in the college of arts and sciences, by department, were:

Chemistry: to professor, Caroline Ayers, Chia-yu Li. English: to professor, Ted R. Ellis III, Malcom South; to associate professor, Colett Dilworth; to assistant professor, Julie Fay. Geography and planning: to professor, Simon Baker. Health, physical education, recreation and safety: to professor, Karen Hancock. History: to professor, Bodo Nischan, James Hugh Wease. Philosophy: to associate professor, Joy Roberts; to assistant professor, George Bailey. Political science: to associate professor, Lon Felker, Sandra Wurth-Hough. Theater arts: to professor, James Rees; to associate professor, Patricia Pertalion.

In the professional schools (except Medicine): Allied health and social work: to professor, David Stevens; to associate professor, James Campbell, Stephen Thomas. Home Economics: to professor, Kathryn Kolasa.

Music: to professor, Paul Q. Topper; to assistant professor Thomas Goolsby. Nursing: to professor, Therese Lawler; to associate professor, Mary K Kirkpatrick. Technology: to professor, Jerry Tester; to associate professor, A. Darryl Davis. Library Services: to associate professor, Artemis Kares.

Tenure was granted to the following faculty members: Collett Dilworth, English; Lon Felker, Sandra Wurth-Hough, political science; Cedric Winchell, theater arts; Madge McGrath and Stephen Thomas, allied health and social work; Clarence Morgan, art; Dogan Altuner, Havva Altuner, Carl Gooding, Yuan-Hsi Hsu, business; Rosemary Fischer, (effective Oct. 1, 1983), Rhonda Fleming, music; Roberta Edwards, nursing, and Ruth Katz, library services.

Hearings Set

RALEIGH — N.C. Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks will hold three public hearings in early April to receive citizen comments on a proposed new federal OSHA field standard for farm workers.

The proposed Occupational Safety and Health Act standards, applying to farmers who employ 11 or more workers, would require that drinking water, handwashing facilities, and toilets be provided at no cost to employees engaged in hand labor in the field.

The hearings will be held April 2 in Hendersonville, April 5 in Clinton, and April 10 in Raleigh.

Persons unable to attend one of the hearings may send written testimony to the state labor department by April 11. North Carolina has had a field sanitation standard covering drinking water and handwashing facilities since July 1, 1983.

Near-Sightedness Isn't Greenville's Way Of Growing

An editorial on this page Monday was critical of the City Council's tardiness in responding to proposed rate changes for water supplied by the Greenville Utilities Commission. The council, at the last minute, said the rate for non-city GUC water customers should continue to be twice that charged in-city customers. We disagreed, supporting the GUC proposal to set the rate at 150 percent of the in-city rate.

City Councilman Stuart M. Shinn, in a letter to the editor, responded to that editorial by calling it naive and asking: "Whose city is this? Whose utilities? Whose water?"

Mr. Shinn has a valid, but rather near-sighted, point. Greenville is the city of its residents; Greenville Utilities is owned by the city, and the processed water belongs to GUC, and thus to the city.

But, we point out to Mr. Shinn that it is East Carolina University; it is Pitt County Memorial Hospital; it is Pitt Community College. And, industry such as Burroughs Wellcome is in Pitt County, not in the city.

The point is, Greenville is the Greenville of today as the result of a joint effort within the area, not just Greenville alone. If to say it is a mistake to gouge on water rates to "make annexation more attractive" is naive, then we plead guilty. But we can live with our conscience.

GUC needs those out of city customers as well as the ones who live in the city to supply the quality service it has begun. They represent money in the bank, far above the cost of supplying the water to them. They also made it worthwhile to plan that new water treatment facility which, without the non-city customers, would operate below capacity. At the same time GUC is supplying a badly needed service to Greenville's neighbors.

Two years ago the GUC, with city approval, called for a service area outside the city and agreed to provide water in the designated areas. That commitment should be honored in spirit as well as by the letter. The council's attitude as expressed by Mr. Shinn, one that could be described mildly as "who gives a darn about you," doesn't fit that bill.

Road Improvements In Pitt Are Welcome

Approval by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners of a secondary road improvement program for 1984-85 is welcome news, especially for area farmers who tend to utilize those rural corridors more than the average motorist.

The $594,650 package, which had the endorsement of the N.C. Department of Transportation, includes not only stabilization of various unpaved roads but some paving as well.

The DOT representative who discussed the projects with the board labeled secondary roads as "a lifeline for farmers," a fitting description. In spite of a growing industrial flavor in our area, we still live in a rural setting and dusty county roads have been slow in yielding to the paving machine.

The spokesman reported that all of Pitt's unpaved roads will be "re-rated at the end of this year" and assigned new priority levels.

Hopefully, right-of-ways that are necessary to complete the projects can be acquired and 1986 will find our secondary roads in better shape.

Learning It All Over Again

WASHINGTON — Every presidential campaign is a learning experience for those of us who sit in the political press box. This year we are learning some old lessons all over again.

Lesson One: Sweet are the uses of perversity, which is to say, the candidate who can capitalize on the opposition to his opponent enjoys a great advantage. More often than not in our elections, we are motivated to vote against, not for. Reagan's victory in 1980 owed much to his own efforts, but it owed more to that year's political ABC: Anybody But Carter.

We have witnessed the same currents of antagonism flowing in this year's Democratic race. I cannot believe that at this point in the contest we are seeing a tremendous surge of sentiment "for" Gary Hart; what we are seeing is mostly ABM — Anybody But Mondale. The force of this negativism ought not to be underestimated. It could carry Hart all the way to his party's nomination, and if we could capitalize upon the opposition to Reagan, it could carry him into the White House. At the moment Hart has few enemies, and it is in this category that numbers count for the most.

Lesson Two: An endorsement on a bank check makes the check transferable in full, but political endorsements do not work that way at all. In the days of well-oiled political machines, endorsements counted for something. In Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Memphis, Kansas City and New York, votes could be delivered in great impressive blocs. In Virginia, where I cut my political eyeteeth, it was not necessary for Harry F. Byrd Sr. even to speak aloud in support of his candidate; he had only to preserve what was called a "golden silence" for his organization to turn out the troops.

With the decline of political parties and the rise of political independence, the old assumptions no longer are valid. In 1980, you may recall, Strom Thurmond did his best to deliver South Carolina's Republican primary to John Connally. Thurmond is the state's most popular politician, but his effort fizzled. Connally got less than 30 percent of the vote and won only a single delegate. This time around, organized labor's endorsement of Mondale carries no promise of delivery. Union families will vote as they durn well please, both now and in November.

Lesson Three: The best qualified candidates regularly get blown away by the fickle winds of circumstance. In 1952 the sober and experienced Robert Taft could not overcome the hero's appeal of Dwight Eisenhower. In 1960 Hubert Humphrey was the superior man; John F. Kennedy won the nomination. In 1972 the Democrats had at least three superbly qualified candidates — Henry "Scoop" Jackson, Edmund Muskie and Humphrey again; none could overcome the sweet simplicity of the lesser-known McGovern. In 1980 the wit and wisdom of Morris Udall, one of the finest gentlemen in my political experience, proved no match for the toothy charm of Jimmy Carter.

The same situation is apparent this spring. Ernest "Fritz" Hollings is beyond question the ablest of the eight candidates who started the Democratic race. The South Carolinian was a notably successful governor of his state; he has served with real distinction in the Senate; he is a man of commanding presence, physically attractive, with a lively sense of humor and a keen grasp of world affairs. If Fritz ever made it to the White House, even those of us who are the most dedicated Tories, Whigs or troglodytes could sleep in peace at night. But Fritz has bombed out of the race: no money, no press, no votes.

It is not exactly a lesson — it is more of an afterthought — that some of the ablest figures in our public life have no stomach for the hurly-burly of the hustings. Averell Harriman played a key role in the Democratic convention of 1952, but he shunned the campaign trail. Sam Nunn of Georgia has everything it takes to serve in the Oval Office; he won't run. The Republicans' Barber Conable is qualified in every way; he is retiring from politics at the end of his term in the House.

So it goes. Front-runners fall, unknowns catch fire, and the race goes on for the biggest political prize on earth. I have sworn off predictions this year. It is more fun just to watch the runners run by.

Sunday Morning Notes

Beautiful Atlanta. It's a fun place to be. Your columnist was there last week attending a Southern Newspaper Publishers Association seminar. Unfortunately, the organizers expect the participants to work and there wasn't much time for seeing the city.

Still it was a change of scenery and an exciting place to be, situated as we were at the Sheraton-Atlanta, just across from the Georgia Tech campus.

The participants at the seminar come from all over the Southeast, from Texas to Florida, and it is always interesting in such a diverse group trying to explain where Greenville, North Carolina, is located. Many will note that it is near Charlotte, to which I explain that that is Greenville, South Carolina. The next question is, how far is it from Asheville? I explain that Asheville is hundreds of miles away.

Then the question is, "I've been to Nags Head. Is that close?" I explain that Nags Head is in the ball park, even if it is 120 miles away.

I talked to a female reporter from the Atlanta Journal and told her where I was from. "Oh," she said, "I once worked with the Wilmington paper."

"Well," I said, "You must know where Greenville is."

"Vaguely," she replied.

That's better than nothing.

A professor from the University of Miami said he was attending a session in Chapel Hill soon and he and his wife planned to drive to Nags Head. He asked directions and I told him to take U.S. 64 to the east. Of course, he asked if that would take him through Greenville.

"Well, not quite," I had to tell him. "But," I said enthusiastically, "when you reach Bethel you'll be within 11 miles of Greenville."

It all proves what we who live here know. Greenville is not hardly on the way to anywhere. All we can tell those who are curious is to visit us. It is an exciting and vibrant community.

One person who does know exactly where Greenville is would be Edward VanHorn III, assistant director of the SNPA Foundation, who organized the seminar. He is from Morehead City, and comes home for visits a couple of times a year. He knows Greenville, but unfortunately travels U.S. 70 to get to Morehead City.

Oh, well, what it all means is we just have to try harder.

Automakers

WASHINGTON — Every morning brings a new adventure for these two commuters. When we turn the key to start our aging automobiles, we never know if they've died in their sleep.

Like many of our friends and peers, we've reached a watershed moment in our lives. The cars that we've owned since college are begging us to give them a rest and to go out and buy something new.

Yet the exciting prospect of late-model wheels brings tension, too. On one hand, patriotic inclinations urge us to buy American. On the other, we bought imported cars for reasons of cost and quality that seem as valid today as 10 years ago.

Despite recent surges in domestic automobile sales, in fact, U.S. automakers continue to be plagued by consumers in our age group. One U.S. automobile marketer calls car buyers now in their late 20s and early 30s "a lost generation to the American car company." The foreign allegiance of this generation could foil any limited expectations that Detroit has for itself.

As one might suspect, Detroit took a wrong turn with baby boom America in the early 1970s. U.S. automakers at the time still pushed the fabled gas-guzzling living-rooms-on-wheels. Implicit in the industry's targeting was the presumption that, as consumers earned more money, they preferred such "luxurious" monsters.

That presumption, of course, proved rather hollow for a new generation then increasingly hostile to conspicuous consumption. It became even more so when the Arabs turned off the oil spigots in 1973, enabling American oil companies to squeeze us at the pumps. Then there were the seemingly innumerable recalls of various American models for defects incurred on the assembly line.

Japan won our hearts, so to speak, and Detroit has been trying to catch up ever since.

The industry is counting on a large number of Americans to forget their well-founded grievances. Yet, U.S. automakers may need to emphasize not only new quality but more candor about past mistakes.

Administration's Strife Rages

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger is quietly telling friends that George Shultz should resign for President Reagan's sake, a symptom of a renewed Pentagon assault on the weakened secretary of state that threatens White House "peace" strategy for the re-election campaign.

Weinberger is not recommending such a resignation to the president. But he is known to have told business and corporate pals of both himself and Shultz that Shultz should quit. He did so more in anger than sorrow because of the effect on Reagan of State Department failures.

Shultz is not about to resign. That means, that the Shultz-Weinberger struggle, the worst since Secretary of State Dean Acheson ran Defense Secretary Louis Johnson out of town 35 years ago, will continue. Any personality clash between the former Bechtel Corp. colleagues is eclipsed by strong policy differences, particularly on the Soviet Union, between the president's top two national security officials.

The Lebanon fiasco, based on Shultz policies opposed by Weinberger, is the reason for private suggestions that a new secretary of state is needed. It also has emboldened the Pentagon to renew disputes over Soviet relations previously decided at the White House in the State Department's favor.

The renewed Pentagon offensive, taken up by its allies in Congress, endangers the way the re-election campaign has been planned by White House chief of staff James A. Baker III and campaign manager Edward Rollins. Their plans to show candidate Reagan flourishing an election-year olive branch could be frustrated if Weinberger can cash in on Shultz's post-Lebanon vulnerability.

Pentagon allies on Capitol Hill scent that weakness and are moving fast to take advantage of it. Conservative Republican senators are convinced of two things: first, that Shultz wants a pre-election U.S.-Soviet arms deal; second, that to get it he and top aides are conducting "back-channel" (out of normal procedures) talks with Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko, offering him juicy concessions. So, these Reaganauts have decided on a secret appeal to the president against any softening of the U.S. position on strategic arms.

This challenge to Shultz's dominance in foreign policy has clear Pentagon backing. Excluded from back-channel communications with the Russians and not at all happy about it, Weinberger sent Assistant Secretary Richard Perle to the House Armed Services Committee recently to denounce Soviet treaty violations in terms much harsher than any ever used by the State Department. Perle quoted Weinberger as warning that Soviet treaty violations "must have been planned many years ago ... perhaps at the very time the Soviet Union entered into the agreements."

That contrasted vividly with the administration tone in charging Soviet non-compliance, set deliberately low-key by Shultz before the Lebanon fiasco weakened him. The secretary of state found that Moscow has "probably" violated the SALT II limit on one new-type strategic missile. In the defense Department's recent budget, Weinberger hardened Shultz's finding by saying flatly: The Soviets "currently have two new types ..."

To State Department insiders, the rancor between their boss and Weinberger has reached an alarming point that casts doubt on how Reagan wants his Soviet policy to look in an election year. That rancor, they feel, is getting worse, not better. Even though such recriminations against Weinberger are rife throughout the State Department, counterattack is unlikely both because of Shultz's current state of weakness and his personality.

"George won't retaliate out loud," one intimate told us. "It is not in his stolid, Germanic character to explode." Weinberger has fewer inhibitions, which explains the current attack on detentism at the State Department. That may give him a slight edge in a struggle that will determine not only Ronald Reagan's campaign posture but perhaps the U.S. posture toward the Kremlin in the years immediately ahead.

Public Forum

To the editor:

In response to last Sunday's editorial on the Piedmont orientation of football and politics, eastern North Carolina will always be second in line for better roads, projects and economic development so long as the Democratic Party has a monopolistic hold on the East. For example, suppose a Republican candidate for the state Legislature from Pitt County captured 49 percent of the vote. While in office, the Democrat legislator will work harder for his district to obtain better roads, educational programs and economic development, knowing that in the next election, a swing of two percentage points will cost him his seat. Rigorous two-party competition in the Piedmont and West has resulted in state projects and economic development for those areas.

I have talked with many of our citizens who are registered Democrats but who vote Republican. If those who vote Republican would register Republican, good competitive candidates from both parties would give voters the opportunity for a full and complete discussion of the issues, and more importantly, a choice.

To my knowledge, at the present time, there will be no primary in the Democratic Party for our state Senate or House seats and no Republican has filed in opposition. With no competition, there will be no choice. Election by default is not in the best interests of our citizenry.

Randy D. Doub
Greenville

To the editor:

It seems to me that the purpose of a political campaign should be to present information to voters describing what the candidates will do, or how they will vote, if elected. If a campaign is meant to present information to voters so they can make an informed choice, the current Senate race between Hunt and Helms is a poor example.

From information presented so far, all I can figure out is that Hunt is more "liberal" and supports better education. There is no mention of what, precisely, he intends to do to improve it. Helms is cast as more "conservative" and tends to be tied with organizations such as the Conservative Caucus and the Moral Majority (or, more accurately, "minority"). He claims to favor "prayer in school," which is pretty safe since what politician in his/her right mind would argue we shouldn't pray, although he has not said whether the prayer should be silent, who should and should not pray, or if everyone in a classroom should pray, etc ... I am sure Helms has a voting record in the Senate. This is the only real indicator of what he has done, but I have yet to see it without digging it out of the Federal Register myself. Consequently, I am not sure what he has done in relation to what he "supports."

It seems that, if campaigns are to provide knowledge so voters can base their decision on information, state citizens are being short-changed. We hear criticisms of where campaign contributions come from and a lot of "hot air" about what candidates "support" but nothing about what they will do, or how they will vote on important issues such as the arms race, defense spending, industrial pollution, our lack of consistent foreign policy, high infant mortality, the numbers of people dying from cancer, how social security will be financed when the proportion of elderly in our population doubles, etc. ...

Next January, when I check the box for campaign contributions on my tax form, I think my response will be a "no" vote. So far, I'm sure not getting my money's worth.

To the editor:

In reference to the letter to the editor of March 21, 1984, from Councilman Shinn: the 1 million or so dollars that the Utilites give to the city at the end of its fiscal year, who pays? The city dwellers or all the utilities customers?

Also, on this point, Greenville Cable has to pay a fee to the city for its right to do business. Who pays? Just the city dwellers or all subscribers?

Please, let's be fair to all.

Jimmy A. Hughes
225 Fairway Drive
Greenville

To the editor:

Being a strong supporter of President Reagan's proposed prayer amendment, when I first heard of our defeat in the Senate, I was deeply grieved. History will record that on March 20, 44 Senators denied the wishes of 80 percent of the American people.

As I stated, my initial response was grief. Within seconds, however, I realized that as a result of this crucial vote the battle lines have been drawn. Every war has many battles and this defeat is but the first battle. I found myself remembering the immortal words of John Paul Jones in the War of 1812. In apparent defeat, he boldly announced, "I have just begun to fight." When Pearl Harbor was bombed the now-famous words of a Japanese general echoed in my ears, "I fear we have just awakened a sleeping giant."

Concerned Americans, we, too, have been a sleeping giant. I pray that this initial defeat will stir us to action. Unlike the above mentioned wars, our weapons are simple instruments — P-E-N-S. With our pens we vote the men and women into office that will faithfully represent us. This wonderful country that we live in affords us this precious privilege.

This first defeat also has identified the enemy. We are now fully aware of our elected officials that voted not to restore prayer to our children in the public schools where it had flourished for well over 100 years.

I urge you use your weapon. Vote! If you're not registered — register! Statistics indicate that a miminum of 15 million Christians aren't registered voters. Research the candidates. Find out their previous voting record and/or their stand on moral issues. Let your voice be heard.

There are forces at work in our society whose aim is to totally undermine the Judaea-Christian principles our country was founded upon. In light of this, the fact that one of the 15 stated goals and objectives of the Communists is to remove prayer from the schools makes this fact less surprising.

I am confident that this "one nation under God," will soon, once again, be acknowledging Him in the classrooms across our country. That is if we the people use our pens!

New Move Against Tax

RALEIGH — For years, business lobbyists have been trying to get inventory tax relief. They've tried outright repeal, a gradual phaseout, a partial tax credit. They've proposed that repeal or relief apply just to the inventories of manufacturers. But, to date, the inventory tax is still on the books.

Now there is a new movement to experiment with a tax credit for inventory taxes paid. The proposal, which is being pushed by business lobbyists, has already won the approval of one important tax law committee and it goes before another later this month. Ironically, if the proposal becomes law it will be the outgrowth of a business tax increase which the Legislature passed last year over the objections of business lobbyists.

The inventory tax is a property tax which is paid to the counties. Efforts to repeal the tax are really efforts to get the state to reimburse companies, through tax credits, for the money paid to counties. Central to all the talk about cutting the tax is the feeling that the counties can't afford to lose the revenue which the inventory tax yields.

So the latest proposal would have businesses pay their inventory taxes to the counties. Then, on their state income tax reports, they would be eligible for a tax credit of 13 percent this year, 15 percent next year and 17 percent the following year. The total proposal would cost the state $97 million over three years, according to statements made to the Revenue Laws Study Committee by Bill Rustin, lobbyist for the Reatil Merchants Association.

Businesses want the tax cut because they want to pay less taxes. But they make the argument that cutting the tax would be wise state policy. The tax hurts the state's industrial recruitment, they say, and it is driving warehouses of some North Carolina businesses south, north and west to neighboring states.

During the three-year experimental period, the state Department of Commerce would be required to study the effectiveness of the tax cut. Through its contacts with industries considering expansion in, or movement to, North Carolina, the department would be expected to test the notion that relief from the inventory tax would help recruitment.

Can the state afford this $97 million revenue loss? Proponents of the three-year trial say yes because their plan would simply cancel out increases in business tax revenues which were put in place by the 1983 General Assembly. In seeking to balance the budget last summer, the Legislature ordered the acceleration of business tax payments. Over the next three years, that phased-in acceleration will bring the state a $97 million windfall. What better way to spend that money, Rustin asks, than in a trial run at inventory tax relief?

No one doubts that relief in this area will help industrial recruitment. But the question has always been will it help enough to make up the lost revenue. Will cutting the tax bring enough new industry here to generate enough tax revenue to pay for the cut?

The idea of a trial tax cut is also questionable. Will an industry move here knowing that by the time they get their operation started, the inventory tax relief program may have expired? Rustin says yes. "It's a statement that the General Assembly is concerned about the tax, that we know it is a deterrent and that we're doing everything we can about it."

The proposal next goes to the Property Tax Study Committee and then to the full assembly. Considering last year's tax acceleration and the anticipated state surplus this year, Rustin's proposal may just have a chance in the June short session.

Traveling Circus

Back in May 1963, some folks would have been justified in describing the North Carolina General Assembly as "a traveling circus." That was the time the 170 legislatures, clerks, lobbyists and newspapermen boarded a Southern Railway train for a two-day junket that carried them from Raleigh to the mountain town of Cullowhee where they held a legislative session on the campus of Western Carolina University.

Reese Hart, who made the journey to report the doings for the Associated Press, recalled recently that hundreds of mountain folk gathered along the tracks as the Legislative Special choo-chooed its way to the far western end of the state. Asked if the mountain people were all that interested in the doings of their legislators, Hart said, "No. It was the first time they had seen a train with 18 Pullmans, two club cars and three private cars."

At Cullowhee, WCU President Paul Reid welcomed the lawmakers, pointing out that it was the first time in more than 300 years of state history that the General Assembly had met west of the Blue Ridge.

Gov. Terry Sanford, doubtless aware that critics had called the 1963 session a "do-nothing" Legislature, praised the junketing lawmakers. He said the session "will stand at the top in contributions made to all the people in North Carolina and I am happy to be associated with it."

In winning, hands down, its title of "traveling circus," the 1963 session had already traveled to Wilmington where it held a session aboard the battleship North Carolina, had gone to Halls Creek near Elizabeth City to commemorate the meeting there in 1665 of the first "Grand Assembly of the Albemarle," and had made two other junkets before hieing to the hills for the session at Cullowhee.

A year or so later, the Legislature made one of its most memorable junkets when the folks down at Charlotte arranged to fly the Legislature, lock, stock and gavel, to the Queen City. Except for the mode of travel, the trip to Charlotte was very much like one we made there on Feb. 22, 1939. That one also was by special train, but I don't recall any crowds gathered along the right-of-way to watch the solons go by. Possibly the folks in the Piedmont are more blase. Maybe it was because we were traveling by day coach instead of Pullman.

At any rate, we arrived around noon and the Legislature met in the Charlotte Armory Auditorium. Speakers included Gov. Clyde R. Hoey who predicted that the lawmakers would be able to balance the budget before the coming biennium.

Another speaker was Gov. Burnet Maybank of South Carolina who told the lawmakers the sister states claimed many firsts, including the first English-speaking colony at Roanoke, the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence and the first defeat of the British Navy off Sullivan's Island, S.C. About the only disagreement, he said, was over the birthplace of President Andrew Jackson, which is claimed by both states.

Most legislative junkets provide a pleasant outing, an enjoyable respite from the tedium of the workaday world. I'll never forget my first such junket. We boarded buses and rode to Fayetteville where we went aboard attorney Oscar Breece's yacht. While we cruised down the Cape Fear River to Elizabethtown we were served a delicious meal.

Other trips have taken the General Assembly to Elizabeth City, New Bern, Camp Lejeune, Fort Bragg and other spots in the state. At one, in Chapel Hill on Jan. 30, 1941, the two Houses got their first bills in Spanish. Since the trip was made to honor 120 visiting South Americans, the lawmakers had no difficulty in finding an interpreter.

The legislators still enjoy junkets and many lawmakers take two or three trips a session, but the type where the whole legislative kit and caboodle went along and held a formal legislative session appears to be a thing of the past. In recent years the Legislature has become busier and its staff has expanded tremendously, making it more complicated to move the whole setup around the state. The attitude of the presiding officers and other leaders also has been an important factor in such trips.

"Since I've been speaker, I've just frowned on them," said House Speaker Liston Ramsey in a recent telephone interview. "The Legislative Building is in Raleigh, where it is supposed to meet every day. That's what the law says. We've been invited to things, like the North Carolina Zoo at Asheboro. Some went and some didn't.

"As long as I am speaker, the General Assembly is not going to be a circus, a traveling road show."

Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — Picture this: A president popular with his party, which controls the Senate, strolls into the Rose Garden with the Senate leaders for a major announcement.

When the announcement is made, the world learns that the president, after weeks of pleading and arm-twisting, has been able to win support for a deficit reduction plan.

It wouldn't have happened when Lyndon B. Johnson was president and sending budgets to the Congress, and the Democrats controlled the Senate and the House. It would have been odd, in fact, if Jimmy Carter had to put Robert C. Byrd, the Democrats' majority leader when Carter was president, through the paces that President Reagan and the Republican Senate leadership just went through to be able to make that announcement.

But things are different these days. Indeed, they have even changed considerably since those halcyon days three years ago when Reagan won quick approval of his first budget plans from a Congress more than willing to cooperate with the new president.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. delivered a week ago for Reagan. But Baker had his hands full getting his fellow Republicans in line.

At issue most recently has been a key element in the president's budget package for fiscal 1985, which begins Oct. 1 and is now moving slowly toward center stage on Capitol Hill.

In his State of the Union speech on Jan. 25, Reagan challenged the Democrats in Congress to join him in making a $100 billion "down payment" over three years toward eliminating the federal budget deficit.

He proposed bipartisan talks, involving the administration and representatives of both sides of the aisle in the House and Senate to find ways to trim the budgets over the next three years.

After only a few meetings, those talks broke down, and the president made it clear that he had given up any hope that they would be able to achieve the consensus he sought.

Enter Howard Baker.

He was faced with Republican committee chairmen split into two camps: Sen. John Tower of the Armed Service Committee and Ted Stevens of the Defense Appropriations subcommittee wanted to give the Pentagon every nickel of the 13 percent defense budget increase Reagan sought; Pete V. Domenici of the Budget Committee and Mark Hatfield of the Appropriations Committee wanted to trim. The final figure amounted to a 7.8 percent increase.

Studio Expected To Grow

WILMINGTON, N.C. (UPI) — Movie producer Dino De Laurentiis' decision to build a major studio complex in Wilmington may turn into a bigger project than anyone expected when it was announced last fall.

Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. says the studio will make North Carolina the nation's third major film center.

The governor was in Wilmington last week for a special showing of one of De Laurentiis' latest films, "The Bounty," starring Anthony Hopkins and Mel Gibson.

De Laurentiis invited about 400 civic and business leaders to the showing, which he called his first world premiere in North Carolina. The film is a new look at the 1789 mutiny on board a British sailing ship in the South Pacific and was filmed in New Zealand and Polynesia.

"It's a beautiful movie. I'm very proud," De Laurentiis said during a tour of his Wilmington production facilities.

Martha Schumacher, president of De Laurentiis' North Carolina Film Corp., told reporters the company's plans for the facility have gone beyond those announced last fall, when Wilmington won a recruiting battle with Charleston, S.C.

"William Arnold, head of the North Carolina Film Office, said he didn't know the full scope of De Laurentiis' plans until he arrived in Wilmington last week.

"It really caught us by surprise," he said. "I don't think anybody knew about it."

"If they follow through over the next 10 years on everything they plan, I'm told it will be the second biggest studio in the country," Arnold said. "It will be second only to Universal in Hollywood and bigger than five others in Hollywood."

De Laurentiis filmed "Firestarter" in the Wilmington area last year. The movie, based on a Stephen King novel, will premier in Wilmington in May. During the production, De Laurentiis bought an existing building and converted it into a sound stage.

Last November, he announced plans to expand the facility into a studio complex with three sound stages, a special effects stage, wardrobe and property facilities and offices.

Charleston tried to lure him away after the project was announced, but after a heated recruiting battle, De Laurentiis stayed in Wilmington.

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — Amid the current debate, a new Gallup survey sheds light on the extent of hunger and deprivation in the United States, revealing that many Americans did not have enough money during the last year to buy food, clothing or medical care for their families.

—Twenty percent of adults — including 17 percent of whites and 51 percent of blacks — say there were times during the last year when they did not have enough money to buy food.

—Twenty-six percent overall — 24 percent of whites and 50 percent of blacks — report they were sometimes unable to buy clothing needed by their families.

—Twenty-five percent of the nation — 22 percent of whites and 47 percent of blacks — say there were times during the last 12 months when they could not afford to pay for their families' health care.

—Finally, 35 percent of all persons surveyed — 33 percent of whites and 59 percent of blacks — say they worry "all of the time" or "most of the time" that their total household income will not be enough to meet family expenses and pay the bills.

A comparison of the current findings with those recorded in a survey 10 years ago, in the recession year of 1974, shows that the situation may have actually grown worse — at least in the public's perceptions.

The latest findings are based on in-person interviews with 1,562 adults, 18 and older, including 1,407 whites and 133 blacks, conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period January 27-30.

For the sample of whites, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 3 percentage points in either direction. For the sample of blacks, the comparable figure is plus or minus 11 points.

Farmville Schedules Dedication Of New Community Arts Center

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — One of the highlights of the dedication of the Farmville Community Arts Center will be the appearance of actress-songstress Sally-Jane Heit in a performance of one of her one-woman shows, "Starting in the Middle."

The performance will be at 8 p.m. Saturday in the newly renovated Arts Center building at 107 N. Main St. in Farmville. Tickets are $5, and may be purchased at the door prior to performance hour if all tickets have not been sold in advance.

Miss Heit is well-known to area audiences for her work in several Summer Theater plays on the East Carolina University campus in past years. She was in two of the premiere Summer Theater season productions in 1964 — "Anything Goes" and "Kiss Me Kate. Since that time she has been in several other summer theater musicals, including "Carnival," "Guys and Dolls," and as Dolly in "Hello, Dolly!".

This is the inaugural performance in the theater of the Farmville Community Arts Center. The theater seats about 240 patrons. Tickets may be purchased in Greenville from Tyson's Jewelers, 325 Arlington Blvd.

In a ceremony earlier this year, the former Arts Council building was renamed the Farmville Community Arts Center.

Daniel (Dan) W. Thomas, chairman of the Farmville Community Arts Council, said the downtown building "was originally the Paramount Movie Theater. After being acquired by the Arts Council, a fund-raising campaign was conducted. With the funds raised in that campaign, plus a grant from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, we have been able to complete phase one in renovating the building.

"At this point," Thomas said, "we have reached the stage where we can use the theater for performances. Sally-Jane's play Saturday will be the inaugural event at the center."

The next step, Thomas said, "will be to raise funds to complete a planned addition. This will be a two-story structure behind the present building which will include additional rest rooms, dressing rooms and property areas."

Once all phases of construction are completed, the old movie house will be a center to serve a number of community needs for the town of Farmville.

Three Escapees Sought

CHICAGO (UPI) — Half the city's police force searched Saturday for three violent prisoners — a convicted killer, an accused murderer and the alleged "high-rise bandit" — who escaped from the Cook County Jail's maximum security block.

Six prisoners with at least two handguns overpowered and stripped guards, then fled the jail Friday night. Three of them were captured within hours of the escape.

Det. Steven Peterson said half the city's police officers were involved in the search for accused murderer Jerry Mahaffey, convicted murderer Michael Bevins and Gregory Hill, known as the "high-rise bandit" because he allegedly stole cars, cash and jewels from luxury high-rise apartments, remained at large.

Shortly before his arrest last November, an acquaintance said Hill boasted he would never be taken alive.

Accused murderers Reginald Mahaffey and Raymond Charles Greer surrendered in the prison's main building and Brian C. Daniels, also charged with murder, was recaptured at a South Side tavern.

After his arrest, Reginald Mahaffey tried to escape from the Marquette Disctrict lockup by jumping out a second-story window. He was in critical condition at Cook County Hospital.

The jailbreak began around 9 p.m. in the maximum security cell block, said Phillip T. Hardiman, the executive director of the Cook County Department of Corrections.

Hardiman said the cell block housed 19 inmates watched by guards who checked them every 15 minutes. The inmates had no physical contact with anyone but their attorneys and prison guards. Authorities could not figure out how the prisoners got the guns.

Hardiman said the escape began when three of the convicts were returning to their cells from a common area, grabbed an unarmed guard and held him until two more guards arrived. They forced all three guards to strip, handcuffed them, took their uniforms and released the other prisoners.

Leaving the guards handcuffed to the cell bars, the six went down to a tunnel connecting the cell block to the main building, where they encountered three other guards, took their clothes at gunpoint, then handcuffed them.

None of the guards was injured.

Peterson said one guard uniform was found in a garbage can near Bevins' South Side home.

Walesa Cancels Pilgrimage

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa canceled a pilgrimage to Poland's holiest shrine on Saturday, saying he feared demonstrations would desecrate ceremonies making him an honorary member of the Pauline religious order.

The Solidarity labor movement founder said "uneasy times and unsolved problems" affecting his fellow workers at the Gdansk shipyard put their planned pilgrimage to the Black Madonna shrine and his own "purely religious award" into a "political sphere."

Walesa, his wife Danuta and seven children have been named honorary members of the Pauline society and were to be formally welcomed into the order in ceremonies Saturday.

Despite Bombing Saturday

Queen's Jordan Trip Still On

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II, undeterred by a bombing in Jordan and growing fears for her safety, will carry out her official visit to the Middle Eastern nation, the British government announced Saturday.

A statement from the office of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said the decision followed a three-hour meeting of ministers and security advisers at Chequers, the prime minister's official country residence.

The 57-year-old queen and her husband, Prince Philip, set out Sunday on what may be the most dangerous trip of her 32-year-reign.

The royal couple was to stay overnight Sunday at a British air base in Cyprus and fly to Amman on Monday morning. They were to spend four days in Jordan, visiting the Red Sea port of Aqaba and the ancient city of Petra in addition to the capital.

On Saturday morning, a small bomb exploded outside the capital's Intercontinental Hotel, which is to serve as press headquarters for the Amman section of the visit. The hotel is across the street from the U.S. Embassy.

The Jordan government said two people suffered minor injuries and witnesses said a third woman was slightly hurt as she drove her car into the hotel parking lot.

A short time after the explosion, a bomb made up of at least 20 sticks of dynamite was discovered hidden in another part of the parking lot. It was defused.

The explosion occurred a day after Western embassies and airline offices received letters saying that Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, was planning to disrupt the queen's visit.

Callers claiming to speak for Islamic Jihad in the past have claimed responsibility for the deadly car- and truck-bomb attacks at U.S., French and Israeli military posts in Beirut and at U.S. embassies in Beirut and Kuwait.

At the Chequers meeting, Mrs. Thatcher consulted with Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe, Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine and Foreign Office minister Richard Luce. They were called to "review the advice given to the queen on her state visit to Jordan," an official statement said.

"After considering all the information and advice available it was concluded that the visit should go ahead," the statement said.

Luce will accompany the queen to Jordan.

A Buckingham Palace spokesman said earlier that the queen would be guided by the advice of her ministers.

Even before Saturday's events, British politicians and the press had expressed concern for the monarch's safety in Jordan.

The Daily Express, in a March 3 editorial headlined "Why the Queen Must Not Make This Perilous Trip," said the visit was "at best ill-advised."

It said King Hussein has himself been the target of more than a dozen assassination attempts

Howe told a parliamentary committee two weeks ago that security would be of "paramount importance."

He refused to say what precautions were being taken, but published reports said these range from special police and commando squads from Britain's crack Special Air Service team to anti-missile devices fitted to the queen's Lockheed TriStar jumbo jet.

Palace press secretary Michael Shea said he will release details of the royal schedule only a few hours beforehand.

In Amman, the queen is to stay at the royal palace complex built by King Abdullah, King Hussein's grandfather, who was assassinated in a hail of gunfire in 1951. One of the bullets would also have killed Hussein, who was then 15, but he was saved by a medal on his chest.

The Jordanian Royal Guard, a Bedouin fighting force that usually protects the Raghadan Palace, will have primary responsibility for security.

Iraq Says 4 Irani Ships Are Destroyed

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraqi aircraft and warships destroyed four ships, including oil tankers, south of Iran's main oil terminal of Kharg Island, Baghdad Radio said Saturday. The report was not confirmed and Iran made no comment.

"Fire engulfed the stricken vessels while the attacking Iraqi aircraft and naval vessels returned safely to base," said an Iraqi war communique quoted by the radio. It did not provide details or identify the targets in the 3 a.m. attack.

Iran has threatened to blockade the Persian Gulf, which supplies 20 percent of the West's crude oil, if it is prevented from using Kharg Island. The United States has vowed to prevent any blockage of the gulf and has moved naval forces closer to the area.

Iran did not respond to the Iraqi claim. Its war communique, broadcast by Tehran radio, referred only to fighting Friday along the 700-mile war front. It said an Iraqi MiG-23 jet fighter and a helicopter were shot down by Iranian forces east of the Iraqi city of Basra.

Iranian government departments were closed Saturday, the la day of the five-day Iranian new year holiday, and official comment was unlikely until after the end of the holiday.

There was no independent confirmation of the Iraqi claim from shipping sources in Kuwait that are usually in contact with vessels sailing through the war zone in the northern reaches of the Persian Gulf.

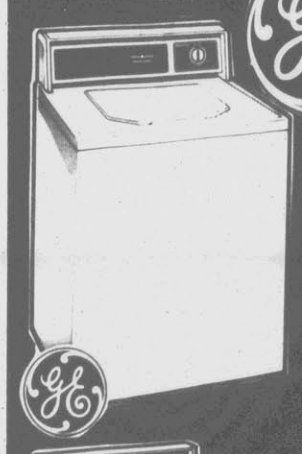

"We will strike at any naval target in the zone of military operations to strengthen the blockade on Kharg and other Iranian ports," an unidentified spokesman on the Baghdad Radio broadcast said.

Kharg Island, 125 miles southeast of Iraq, is Iran's main oil export terminal, handling an average of two supertankers daily, according to oil industry reports.

This was the first Iraqi attack on shipping in the vicinity of Kharg in nearly a month.

France Says To Withdraw Its Troops From Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival leftist militias halted two days of street battles that claimed 28 lives in the Moslem sector of the capital on Saturday and France announced it was withdrawing its troops within a week.

A cease-fire held throughout the day as Druse and Sunni Moslem fighters buried their dead. Thunderous blasts interspersed the separate funeral processions as rocket-propelled grenades were fired in the air to salute fallen comrades.

French Defense Minister Charles Hernu's announcement in Paris on Saturday that the 1,250-man French contingent would leave Beirut by March 31 was widely expected to accelerate Lebanese government moves to head off a new round of civil war.

The French contingent is the last unit of a multinational force that served in the Lebanese capital after the Israeli army withdrew from west Beirut in the summer of 1982.

The U.S., Italian and British contingents pulled out or left token forces after Druse and Shiite Moslem militiamen wrested the city's Moslem sector from the Lebanese army early last month.

Hernu said he expects the French troops to be replaced "by elements designated by the Lebanese authorities."

The French Defense Ministry in Paris said five French soldiers suffered minor shrapnel wounds Saturday afternoon when shells fell near their headquarters.

Eighty-six French soldiers have been killed and 96 wounded since the force arrived in Lebanon.

Druse and Christian antagonists remained active along the traditional mid-city war front trading sporadic mortar and sniper fire across the "green line" between the Moslem and Christian sectors.

Local radio stations said the outlying Christian suburb of Hadath came under massive bombardment at nightfall. The stations urged residents to remain indoors.

The explosions at the funerals created panic in west Beirut's crowded shopping thoroughfare of Corniche Mazraa. Motorists raced away with horns blaring, pedestrians dived for cover, vegetable vendors deserted their carts and shopkeepers hurriedly lowered their shutters.

Salvadorans Facing New Elections Today

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels killed 32 soldiers in an ambush east of the capital Saturday and attacked an army communications center, sharply increasing guerrilla activity on the eve of the first presidential election in seven years.

Election officials expected 1.8 million Salvadorans to vote Sunday. Security forces were on alert in anticipation of rebel attempts to disrupt the balloting, which the Reagan administration hopes will provide an underpinning of popular support for continued military and economic aid.

Military sources said army and national guard troops were surprised by guerrillas just north of Tecoluca in San Vicente province, about 45 miles east of San Salvador.

Reporters counted the bodies of 32 soldiers in a hospital morgue in the nearby city of San Vicente and military sources said 27 soldiers also were wounded in the attack.

Col. Roberto Rodriguez Murcia said the ambush occurred an hour or two after daybreak on a road linking Tecoluca with the village of Arco, about five miles to the north. He had no figures on rebel casualties.

An air force plane bombed and strafed the surrounding area as helicopters evacuated the wounded.

Military sources, who asked not to be identified for security reasons, said guerrillas attacked the communications post five miles west of San Miguel shortly before dawn.

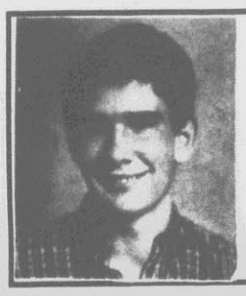

They said the guerrillas swept the hilltop post, 85 miles east of the capital, with automatic rifle fire for about 20 minutes before falling back. There said there were no known casualties and no damage.

Guerrillas also set up a roadblock at El Triunfo on the Pan American Highway, about 70 miles east of San Salvador, but troops chased them away with no casualties to either side, the sources said.

Not far away along the highway, two civilians were wounded when a bus hit a mine. The guerrilla threat to mine highways had paralyzed most transportation, especially in the east.

Small arms fire was heard in San Salvador before dawn. The capital and much of the country to the east were temporarily without electricity following attacks on power installations.

On The Young Side

By Clay Deanhardt

Qualifying to go to state competition, the Rose Quiz Bowl team was successful at the Kinston regional tournament. Though Parrot Academy claimed the regional title, Rose's runner-up status is a stepping stone to a shot at the state championship.

After drawing the bye, team members Clay Deanhardt, Derek Dickens, Elizabeth Ellen and Steve Worley faced Northern Nash in the fifth game. Victory in the crucial game was hard-won; only four sudden death tie-breaker rounds decided the outcome in Rose's favor.

Historians were victorious also, capturing many awards at the local History Day at East Carolina University. This year's theme, "Family and Community in History," was expounded upon by history students in five categories of competition. Barry Holmes captured first place in the individual project division, with Ginger Galloway coming in second. Another second place finish, this one in the group projects category, was awarded to Kelly Fadel, Leah Harris, Rebecca Murphy and Samantha Steingold.

In the media division, first place honors went to the combined efforts of Carol Ambert, Sue Holec, Charles Moore and Joseph Rayle. Randy Davis, Joe Rhea and Dale Smyth won second place in the same category.

At the UNC-Wilmington Math Contest, senior Steve Worley had the second highest score in Division I. This rating earns him the right to advance to the state contest.

Science has been the main topic of conversation at Rose this week. Speakers on topics such as sickle cell anemia, the electron microscope, robotics and nutrition have made Science Week a successful event. Students have participated in a "science question of the week" contest.

Wednesday night elections decided the future leadership of the Key Club. Tommy Perkins will take over the presidency. He will be assisted by Kurt Hendrix, vice president, Lewis Robbins, secretary, Carl Wille, treasurer, Stewart Pittman, historian, Adam Levine, program chairman, and Gregg Ward, sergeant-at-arms.

Flaming Drink

SHREVEPORT, La. (UPI) — A bottle of 151-proof rum ignited and exploded during the mixing of an exotic flaming drink, spraying "liquid fire" on three restaurant employees, firefighters said Saturday.

Two of the employees suffered first-degree burns of the face and chest and the third had minor arm and hand burns.

Celotex Fiberglass Shingles 20 Year Warranty: 5 more than plain asphalt.... $38.50 Per Square

Self-sealing strips of adhesive are sun activited.

This action bonds the shingles together into a single, weatherproof shield that is capable of resisting damaging winds of up to 60 miles per hour. These durable shingles are also very resistant to blistering and warping, "cupping" and decay. All of these features combine to produce a very rugged (and economical) roof.

The fiberglass mat is the important difference.

A fiberglass mat repels moisture much more effectively than the mat under regular asphalt shingles. The result is an exceptionally resilient, durable roof that will give years of service.

Celotex

And these shingles have a U.L. class A fire rating.

Their fiberglass base offers extra protection against external fire. These Celotex shingles are one of the most economical class A roofs you can buy. It's just one more of the safety benefits of fiberglass.

Although they're tough they're also attractive.

These shingles give you rugged dependable service without sacrificing beauty. From basic black to earthtone shades their handsome looks are available in a variety of attractive colors to suit your roofing needs.

Chile Declares Emergency, Cracks Down On Leftists

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Military authorities arrested 12 leftists Saturday in their first action under a renewed state of emergency, and opposition leaders warned the crackdown would provoke confrontations with the military government.

The state of emergency, effective at midnight Friday, was declared after opposition leaders seeking to end 10 years of military rule called on Chileansto stage a mass protest Tuesday by banging on pots and pans in their homes.

Similar protests last year resulted in the deaths of 60 people and forced Gen. Augusto Pinochet to promise political liberalizations, including the lifting of the state of emergency last September.

The state of emergency had been in force since Pinochet toppled Marxist President Salvador Allende in a U.S.-backed coup in 1973.

In an indication the government intends to crack down on protesters, at least 12 left-wing leaders linked to the Communist Party were arrested in their homes shortly after midnight, relatives said.

Christian Democratic leader Gabriel Valdes said the state of emergency, which allows Pinochet to use troops to suppress demonstrations, would weaken the government's political position.

Under the move, the country's 16 military chiefs can restrict the right of assembly, censor the press and decree a curfew at any time to maintain law and order in their zones of emergency.

The government decree followed a series of dynamite attacks Thursday night that felled electrical towers in Santiago and other major cities and caused a nationwide blackout.

Valdes, president of a coalition of moderate parties called the Democratic Alliance, said the return of the state of emergency had put an end to the six-month phase of concessions and killed chances of a political settlement between government and opposition.

"The country wants peace," Valdes said. "But it is not prepared to continue subjected to a failed political regime."

Both Valdes and former Christian Democratic presidential candidate Radomiro Tomic warned that the government retrenchment will encourage terrorist groups to operate freely.

Tomic said the measure was "an escalation of state terrorism aimed at repressing the majority of the country's legitimate right to protest peacefully."

Troopers Join Air Exercise

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. paratroopers jumped near the Palmerola airfield in Honduras on Saturday as part of a combined readiness exercise with Honduran armed forces, a Pentagon spokesman said.

Troops from the 82nd Airborne Division jumped at about 7 a.m. EST from C-130 aircraft that had flown them from their home base at Fort Bragg, N.C., Navy Cmdr. Jeff Renk reported.

Renk said the jump was part of a "short-notice readiness exercise" named Kilo Punch, which involves about 350 U.S. personnel and 130 Honduran airborne infantrymen.

Kilo Punch is designed to test the ability of the U.S. and Honduran forces to quickly assault and hold airfields, he said.

The one-day exercise also called for combined airborne and air assault forces to secure the San Lorenzo airfield in southern Honduras and reinforce defensive positions there.

Kilo Punch is part of a continuing series of training activities by Honduran and U.S. forces taking place in the interim between the recently concluded Big Pine II exercises and the Granadero I exercises planned for later this spring, Renk said.

He said the U.S. paratroopers are scheduled to return to Fort Bragg on Monday.

Six Believed Dead In Fire

CHICAGO (AP) — Firefighters pulled the bodies of a woman and four children from the smoldering rubble of their home after a predawn fire Saturday and searched for the body of a fifth child.

The father of the family, Santos Lupercio, 30, was critically injured after he leaped from the attic of the burning two-story frame building on Chicago's southwest side.

After leaping, Lupercio screamed "My wife and kids are in there," a neighbor told police. Lupercio was taken to a hospital for treatment of a fractured skull and smoke inhalation.

The bodies had not been positively identified but were believed to be those of Elva Luz Lupercio, 27, and four of her children, ranging in age from 3 to 10 years, said police bomb and arson unit Sgt. Edwin Olivieri. A fifth child was unaccounted for, Oliveiri said.

Firefighters said the blaze broke out just before 4 a.m. A family living on the first floor of the house escaped safely, but the building had collapsed by the time firefighters arrived, police said.

WHEN WE NEEDED A START ON FOUR-LANE 264, TOM TAFT WAS THE RIGHT MAN.

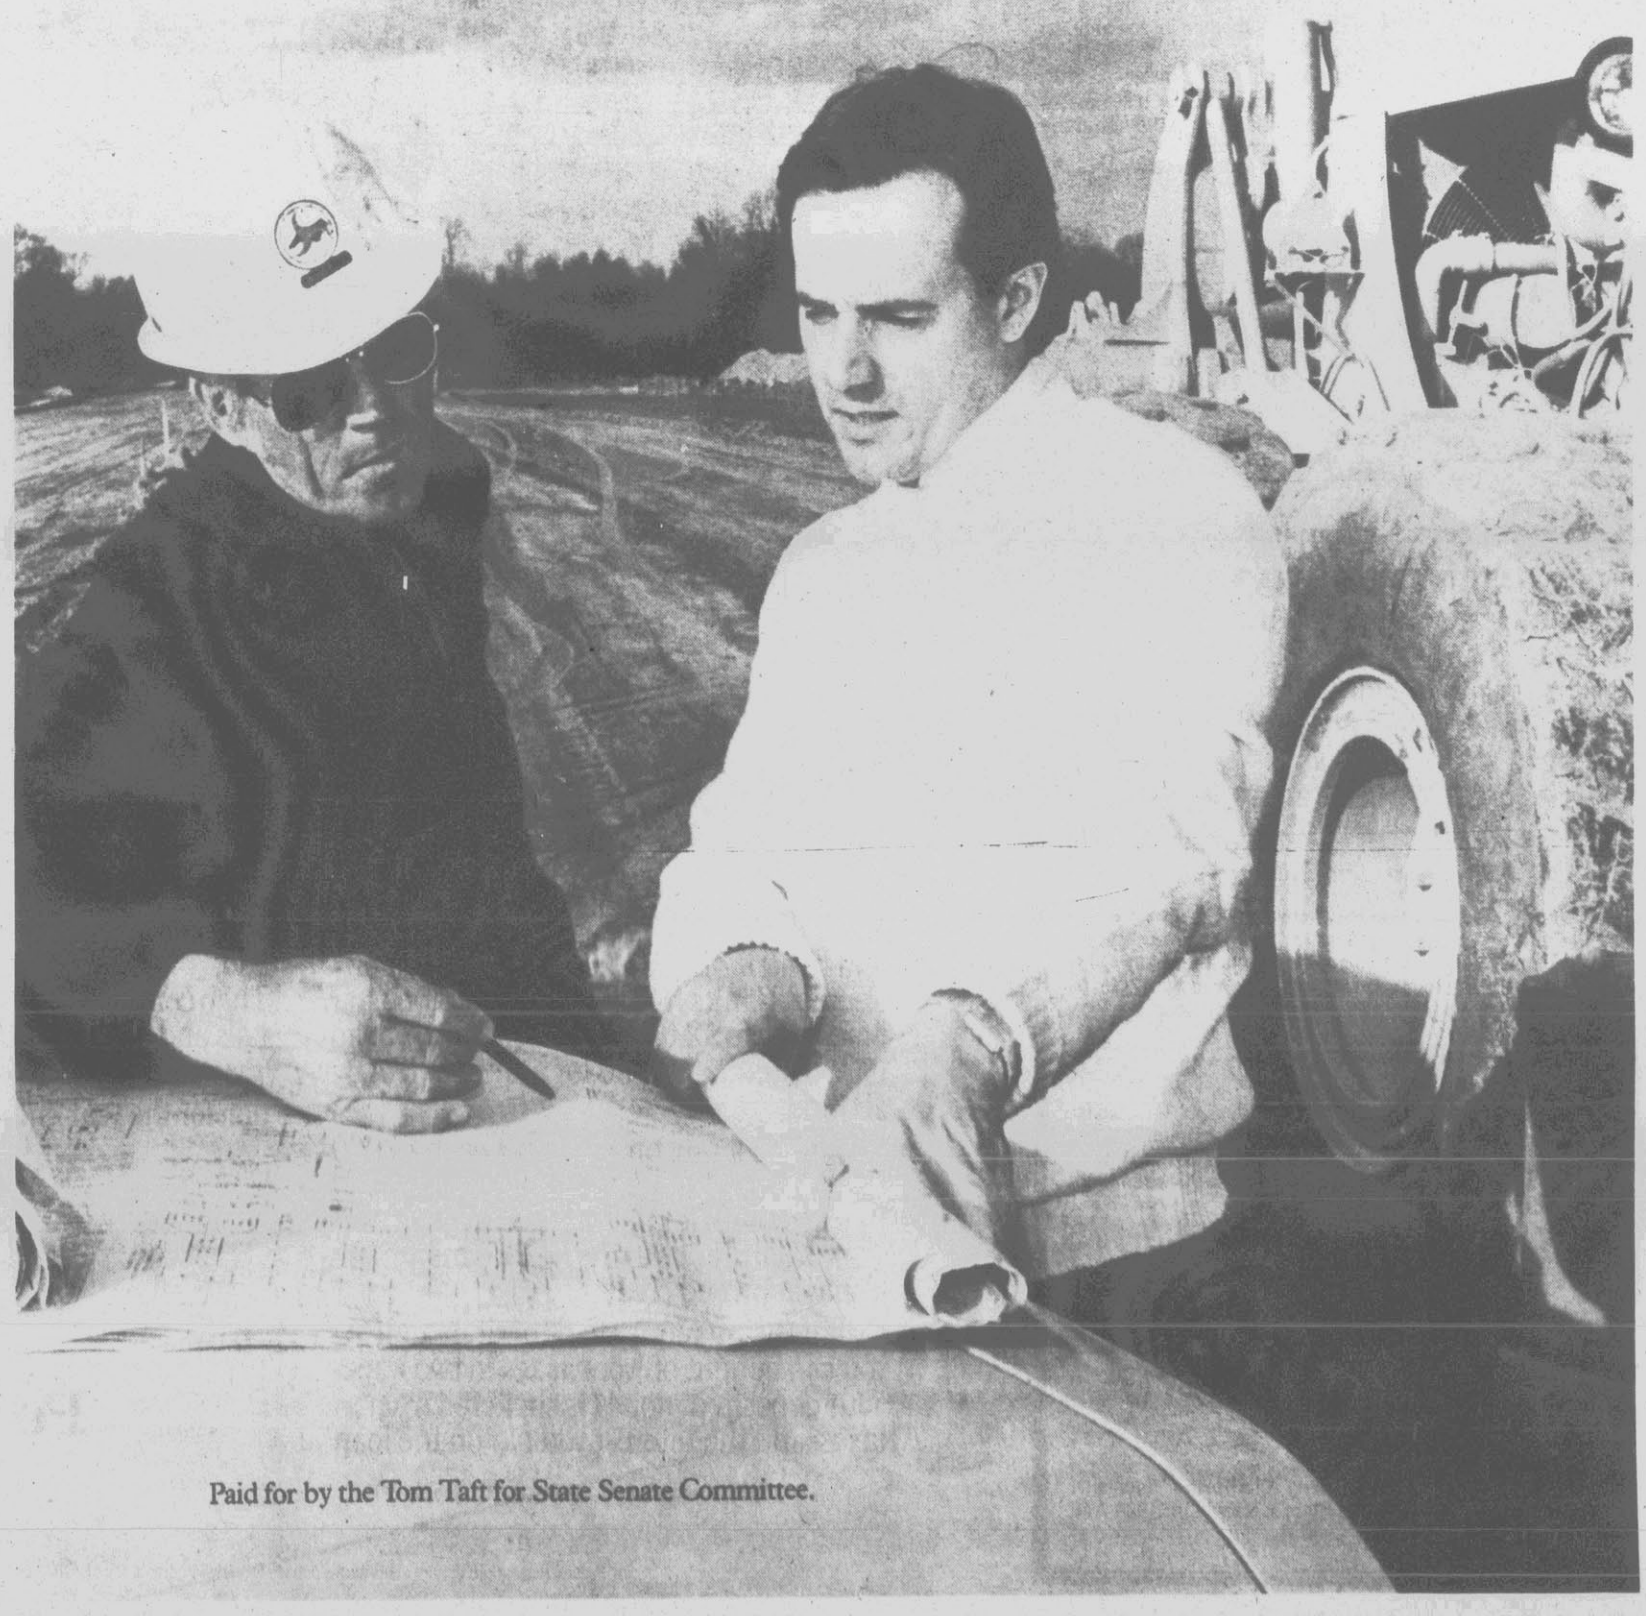

Eight years ago, Tom Taft became the founding president of the U.S. 264 Association. Today that project is under construction from Wilson to Greenville, and rights-of-way are being purchased from Pactolus to Washington. Tom and other key leaders persisted through eight years of meetings, hearings, lobbying and negotiations to gain support for the tens of millions of dollars the project requires. It was a tough job.

Determination, persistence and results like this make Tom Taft the right man for the state senate. We need a strong voice to gain speedy completion of U.S. 264 and the four-laning of U.S. 64 as well.

It's time for a new era of senate leadership from Pitt, Martin and Beaufort Counties that forcefully represents our agricultural, transportation, education, business and job development needs. Getting our fair share from state government is a tough job.

That's why Tom Taft is the right man for the state senate.

Florida Concerned Over 'Coke' Industry

By MADELYN MILLER
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Cocaine factories stocked with volatile, explosive chemicals are a new growth industry in South Florida, and law enforcement officials say the illegal labs are virtual time bombs.

Arthur Nehrbass, who heads Metro-Dade's Organized Crime Bureau, said that already this year eight coke factories have been uncovered in Dade County, which encompasses Miami.

By comparison, one lab was found in 1982 and three were shut down in 1983. One was found just to the north in Broward County last year and one was discovered in a Collier County swamp, west of Miami.

Law enforcement officials say more and more of the potentially lethal labs are moving here from Colombia. Many are set up in homes in residential neighborhoods and often an explosion is the first clue to their existence.

"I was getting ready to come to work when I heard the big boom," recalls Alex Chamizo, 23, whose southwest Miami home was two blocks from one of three cocaine factories found in Dade County last October. This one was found when it blew up.

Flames engulfed the clandestine factory as its walls collapsed. The blast shattered windows in nearby homes. Spattered chemicals turned neighbors' lawns brown.

The house remains a shambles, marring an otherwise well-kept neighborhood now sprouting house-for-sale signs.

But the problem is not confined to Florida.

Ron Caffrey, who heads the Drug Enforcement Administration's cocaine investigations section in Washington, said about a dozen labs were found nationwide in 1983 and about 10 have turned up so far this year.

Illegal labs have been discovered in California, Rhode Island and Kentucky, Caffrey said. Many move from Florida to areas with less visible drug enforcement.

"People are not looking for it in Minnesota, are they?" Caffrey said "They're not looking for it in Kentucky."

Caffrey says market factors are the major reason why more and more factories are setting up in the United States.

Since last year, the wholesale price in southern Florida for a kilo (2.2 pounds) of cocaine has dropped from the $45,000-to-$50,000 range to between $17,000 and $24,000, Caffrey said.

The labs refine cocaine base, a paste derived from leaves of the coca plant, to make the finished product, Caffrey said. Since costs are lower than for smuggling in already refined cocaine, he said, refiners can maintain their profit margin even when the price of cocaine drops.

The widespread availability in the United States of ether, hydrochloric acid and acetone — the main chemical tools in cocaine labs — is another reason why factories are springing up, Caffrey said. Such chemicals are easier to get here than in Colombia, where most of the base originates, he said.

Nehrbass and Frank Chellino, a DEA agent in Miami, said a Colombian government crackdown on cocaine trafficking is another factor in the shift to Florida.

Last week, police in Colombia attacked an isolated jungle cocaine processing plant and seized 13.8 tons of cocaine with a street value of $1.2 billion in what officials called the largest drug raid ever.

The biggest operating lab ever found in the United States was discovered across from a public school in a farming area called The Redlands near Homestead, Fla., last January, Nehrbass said.

More than 200 students were evacuated while police confiscated about $60 million worth of newly processed drugs and firemen removed 1,000 gallons of highly explosive ether.

Many people who work in the labs, Chellino said, are unsophisticated Colombian laborers. Some even smoke around the highly volatile chemicals, he said.

"We are frightened by the prospect of one of these labs exploding and injuring innocent citizens," Nehrbass said.

Late-Night Call Ends Big Prize

PLAINFIELD, Conn. (AP) — After winning a weekend at a hotel in a radio contest, Donald and Linda Lemanski were enjoying their first vacation in 15 years — until they got a telephone call in the middle of the night telling them to pay up or get out.

The Lemanskis won what they thought was an all-expenses-paid weekend at the Sheraton-Tara Hotel in Nashua, N.H., in a drawing held in December by radio station WNOU-FM in Willimantic.

But at 11:30 p.m. last Saturday, the Lemanskis were told they would have to pay for the room because the station could not be reached to confirm payment arrangements. They drove home that night.

Mrs. Lemanski, 36, called it a "very embarassing and humiliating" experience.

"We wanted it to be a dream vacation, and it was a nightmare," said Donald Lemanski, 44. "How can you go back to sleep at midnight when you don't know who's paying for the bed?"

When they got to the hotel, they were given a VIP envelope with certificates for breakfast, brunch and other extras. Then came the phone call.

Katie Kane, an administrative assistant at the Sheraton-Tara, said the hotel knew nothing about the contest and that no arrangements had been made for payment of the Lemanskis' room.

The VIP envelope, she said, was part of the hotel's regular weekend package.

Mrs. Lemanski, who has written to the Sheraton chain complaining of the treatment they received, said she called the hotel twice in advance and was told that everything was set.

She said hotel officials have blamed the confusion on "semantics."

"I thought I had pretty good command of the language," Mrs. Lemanski said Saturday.

The Lemanskis tried to phone WNOU, but its phone was disconnected. They drove to the station and found its doors locked, even though it continued to broadcast.

The station's telephone remained disconnected Saturday, but a radio station official was reached by The Associated Press at his home in Bloomfield.

Sullivan Brown, a director for Delta Communications Corp. of Manchester, said station manager Talbert Gray blamed the incident on "some mix-up with the hotel." He also said Gray had talked to the Lemanskis to explain what happened, a claim denied by Mrs. Lemanski.

"It wasn't the station's fault," Brown said, adding that he didn't know what the station planned to do.

Gray, who lives in Manchester, could not be reached for comment because his phone number is unlisted.

A state Department of Consumer Protection official said the agency could not intervene unless the couple files a complaint, which Ms. Lemanski said she intends to do.

"We got a bum deal," she said. "We've never had a vacation in 15 years — we got married and then had the kids and the house and all. We just really were looking forward to it."

Second 'Embryo' Baby Born

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A "beautiful little girl" is the world's second baby delivered by an infertile woman who received an embryo donated by another woman, doctors announced Saturday..

The baby was born earlier this month, but it was not made public until this weekend's meeting of the Society for Gynecological Investigation in San Francisco.

Dr. John Buster, who is in charge of the embryo transfer research team at Harbor-UCLA Medical Center in Torrance, has said the announcements of such births are delayed because UCLA wants the first word to be released in scientific forums, not through the news media.

The date and location of the birth, the size of the baby and identities of her parents were withheld to protect their privacy, said Michael Eberhard, vice president of Memorial Health Technologies. That firm plans to open an "adopt-an-embryo" clinic this summer in Long Beach to help infertile couples have children.

The first such baby — whose January birth was announced Feb. 3 — was a boy.

Buster, whose team developed the embryo transfer technique, described the baby as a "beautiful, full-term little girl," and said she was born within the last 10 days at a Southern California hospital after an uncomplicated delivery.

He said the parents were a professional couple in their mid-30s who "had been unable to bear children because of the mother's intractable infertility that two major surgical procedures failed to correct." The woman who donated the embryo is a mother in her mid-20s, he added.

In the embryo transfer process, the donor is artificially inseminated with sperm from the infertile woman's husband.

After five days, the tiny embryo is washed out of the donor's uterus and transferred into the recipient's womb, where it develops until birth.

Reagan, Religious Allies Plan Next Step

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan and his religious allies, batting near zero on social issues he has made central to his presidency, likely will turn to "equal access" and tuition tax credits for their next legislative battles.

And some of Reagan's allies in the Senate, such as Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., say they would like to mount another effort to restrict Supreme Court jurisdiction in such areas as school prayer.

"We move on to 'equal access,'" Christian Voice's Gary Jarmin said after the Senate soundly defeated an effort to return government-sanctioned prayer to the public schools.

The little-noted "equal access" legislation currently exists in two versions, one sponsored by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., who voted against the prayer amendment, and the other by Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., who supported prayer in public schools. Similar bills have been introduced in the House.

The bills generally say schools cannot discriminate against or prohibit groups of students who meet in public schools during non-instructional periods for religious purposes ranging from prayer to Bible study.

The prayer question, the most bitterly fought of the social issues during this session of Congress, was a major political defeat for Reagan and the Religious Right, made up of organizations such as Christian Voice, Moral Majority and the Christian Broadcasting Network.

Last year, Reagan also lost battles on anti-abortion legislation and tuition tax credits, the other two major items on the conservative social issues agenda.

After his proposed constitutional amendment to allow prayer in public schools failed 56-44, 11 votes short, Reagan called for quick legislative action on the equal access proposal.

Religious leaders who joined in opposing Reagan on prayer, however, are divided on the 'equal access' legislation while all of those who favored Reagan's constitutional amendment generally favor the 'equal access.'

"It is now time for reconciliation and progress," said James Dunn, executive director of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs and an ardent opponent of the prayer legislation. He said equal access legislation is needed "to safeguard and clarify the rights of students to exercise freely their religion."

Robert Dugan, spokesman for the National Association of Evangelicals, a strong supporter of Reagan's prayer amendment, said the equal access legislation would "protect the free speech of free association rights of high school students who want to gather together during non-instructional time for student-initiated prayer, devotional reading, or other such religious expression."

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., who led the successful floor opposition to the Reagan proposal, said he has not seen the equal legislation and does not know if he will support or oppose it.

The Rev. Barry Lynn of the American Civil Liberties Union predicted there would be another effort to pass tuition tax credit legislation during the session and that "there might be another anti-abortion vehicle."

"The big story," he said, "is how Reagan has decided that equal access bills are now what he wants and that will be the really big development in the House and Senate."

"Some religious groups support it if they can get in a pure form," he said. "Some of us oppose it. I think it's very dangerous."

Astronomers Check Comet In Dry Run

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Astronomers from around the world will turn their eyes and telescopes skyward Sunday to observe Comet Crommelin in a week-long rehearsal for the arrival of Halley's Comet next year.

"What we learn from those two comets will tell us about comets in general, those two comets in particular and something about the early formation of the solar system," said Stephen J. Edberg, an astronomer at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here and a coordinator for the International Halley Watch project.

Comets are believed to contain ice and dust — samples of remnants of the "material that formed the solar system," he explained.

Halley's Comet, which has a 3-mile-diameter nucleus, races around the sun every 76 years, with the sun's heat and light pushing out a tail from the comet nearly 50 million miles long. It was last visible from Earth between September 1909 and June 1911, Edberg said.

Astronomers at Palomar Observatory northeast of San Diego were able to detect it again on Oct. 16, 1982, as it heads down toward the sun.

Amateur astronomers should be able to see Halley's Comet in September or October 1985. It will be visible to the naked eye no later than March 1986, when it comes within 39 million miles of Earth, Edberg said. It is now about 707 million miles from Earth.

Comet Crommelin, which zips around the sun every 27 years, came within 72 million miles of Earth on March 17. It is smaller than Halley's Comet, and has either a very small tail or no tail.

Nevertheless, observers will be able to "see the coma, the outer atmosphere around the nucleus," Edberg said.

"In fact, Crommelin looks much more like most comets look like," he said. "Most comets don't turn out to be the long-tailed spectacles that we enjoy. They turn out to be just small, fuzzy, celestial objects."

Edberg said that for one week starting Sunday, up to 500 professional astronomers in 40 nations and as many as 100 amateurs will train their telescopes on Crommelin.

Crommelin "is visible from temperate latitudes to the equator in both hemispheres," he said. "Both amateur and professional astronomers will be observing the comet from their regular viewing sites, whether it be an observatory, a backyard or making several evening trips to the deserts of mountains with portable telescopes."

The effort is being run by International Halley Watch, based at JPL near Pasadena, and at the University of Erlangen in West Germany, which will compile information collected by astronomers worldwide.

Meteor's Acids Indicate 'Life'

PEKING (UPI) — Scientists have discovered amino acids from a meteor which struck China last year, indicating the existence of life on other planets, a news report said Saturday.

Amino acids are a basic component of protein and nucleic acid, the fundamental elements of living organisms.

The official Xinhua News Agency said a meteorite estimated between 19 to 23 inches in diameter fell on the city of Wuxi in east China last April 11.

Ice from the meteor melted before scientists could preserve it, but a retired worker in the area saved some of the remaining water for analysis.

Scientists discovered amino acid compounds, which "indicated that life could exist on other planets if conditions were favorable," Xinhua said.

They also said the existence of water to form the ice was another indication life on earth may have originated elsewhere in the universe.

The water had a greater density and higher mineral content than found in ice on earth.

Wachovia
IRA

Wachovia is still your best choice for an Individual Retirement Account.

Here's why. There's one thing nearly all financial experts agree on: An IRA is one of the best tax-deferred retirement plans you can have. Here are five good reasons to have yours at Wachovia.

1. Money market rates. All Wachovia IRA investments earn top money market rates, compounded daily for higher annual yields. And there are no investment fees to reduce your yield. Compare with the rates being paid anywhere.

Example: Current rate and yield on Wachovia IRA invested in a 4-year, fixed-rate deposit (subject to change daily).

10.50% Annual Percentage Rate	11.069% Annual Yield
Other variable-rate and fixed-rate options are available. For the current rate, call a Personal Banker.℠

2. No minimum deposit. At Wachovia, you can open or add to your IRA in any amount. The maximum, by law, is $2,000 per year for every wage earner, or $4,000 for a working couple. But at Wachovia you don't have to deposit that much to get tax benefits and start saving for your retirement.

3. Multiple investment options. Wachovia offers a wide range of fixed-rate investments with guaranteed rates, at terms from three months to four years. And our variable-rate investment, the Accumulator, has no minimum and no required term. That means you can deposit any amount anytime, and you can automatically transfer funds to fixed-rate investments as often as you like without paying interest penalties. You'll receive a periodic statement showing all activity on your account.

4. Insured safety. Every Wachovia depositor's funds are insured up to $100,000 by F.D.I.C. And no matter how far away your retirement may be, you know Wachovia will still be here.

5. Your own Personal Banker. Only Wachovia gives you the services of your own Personal Banker, who can explain all the investment options in detail and help you decide which ones are right for you.

Add up the advantages, and you'll see — there's no better place for your IRA than Wachovia. Talk to a Personal Banker right away.

You can save on your 1983 taxes if you deposit before April 15.

Wachovia
Bank & Trust

*Federal regulations require substantial interest penalties for early withdrawal from fixed-rate investments. In addition, tax penalties may apply to withdrawals from an IRA before age 59½.

Autopsy Found

CHICAGO — The missing autopsy report on John Dillinger, public enemy No. 1 when he was gunned down by FBI agents 50 years ago, has been discovered in a brown paper shopping bag, the Chicago Tribune reported Saturday.

Dillinger, the daring gangster who vaulted bank counters and cleaned out cash drawers with stopwatch timing, was shot July 22, 1934, as he left a Chicago theater on the arm of the legendary "Lady in Red."

The autopsy was performed the next day by Dr. Jerry Kearns — but it is believed the report has been missing since the 1930s. A clerk discovered the report, then known as a coroner's protocol, in a brown paper shopping bag in a room near the office of Cook County Medical Examiner Dr. Robert Stein.

Stein told the Tribune's Sunday editions the report is genuine.

Meese Complains

WASHINGTON — Presidential counselor Edwin Meese, taking the offensive against allegations of financial and ethical misdeeds, complains he is a victim of "character assassination sneak attacks" and deserves to be confirmed as attorney general.

Meese made the spirited defense in an interview published Saturday in The Washington Post, one of a series of interviews he is giving this weekend.

The interviews, and Meese's decision to ask the Justice Department to recommend that a federal court name a special prosecutor to look into the allegations, indicate Meese has decided to wage an aggressive public battle against his critics instead of waiting to answer the charges before the Senate Judiciary Committee, as he had pledged to do.

Phone Evidence

TOPEKA, Kan. — Police can lawfully monitor and record cordless telephone conversations heard over an ordinary FM radio and use the recordings as evidence in court, the Kansas Supreme Court ruled Saturday.

In overturning a Reno County District Court judge, the high court decided that cordless telephone conversations are the equivalent of oral communications and not subject to wiretap laws.

Attorney General Robert Stephan hailed the ruling as "a great decision for victims and for law enforcement."

Daughter To Stay

SAN FRANCISCO — The daughter of a Filipino colonel who was beheaded by the Japanese for helping American POWs escape from prison camps during World War II can remain in the United States, a federal immigration judge has ruled.

Belen de Guido Ver, 62, is entitled to stay in this country because President Harry Truman signed a special bill granting her family legal resident status because on her father's war efforts, Judge Bernard Hornbach ruled Friday.

Mrs. Ver's father, Col. Jose de Guido, spied for this country during World War II and helped Americans escape from Japanese prison camps in the Philippines. He was caught and beheaded by the Japanese.

State Birthday

ST. MARY'S CITY, Md. — Maryland is re-enacting the landing of its first colonists and a 17th-century legislative session in an elaborate celebration of the state's founding 350 years ago.

More than 4,000 people, including most members of the General Assembly and Gov. Harry Huges, were expected to participate in Sunday's ceremonies at St. Clement's Island on the Potomac and later at nearby St. Mary's City, the state's capitol from 1634 to 1694.

The celebration was to open with the arrival at St. Clement's Island of a working replica of the Dove, one of the two square-rigged wooden vessels that carried Maryland's first settlers. Commissioned in 1978, the ship cost the state $300,000.

The first Dove, and a larger ship named the Ark, left Cowles, England, in the fall of 1633 with about 140 youthful settlers, most in their late teens or early 20s.

Trooper Sought

DUGGER, Ind. — State police were searching Saturday for a fellow trooper who allegedly broke into his ex-wife's home, wounded her and then fatally shot a man who was there.

Trooper Jerry W. Cliver, 30, forced his way into the home of his former wife, Jerri Lynn Cliver, about 10:30 p.m. Friday, said state police Cpl. Herb Jones.

Donald L. Clayton, 38, died immediately from gunshot wounds, Jones said. Mrs. Cliver, 30, was wounded and taken to Terre Haute Regional Hospital for surgery. A hospital spokeswoman said Mrs. Cliver was listed in critical condition Saturday afternoon.

Police have not found a motive for the shooting.

Return Fire

HAZLEHURST, Miss. — A Mississippi Highway patrolman, apparently shot several times by a man he had arrested hours earlier on a traffic charge, rolled over and killed the man with a single shot, a patrol spokesman said.

The trooper, Steven Kennedy Gardner, 30, was shot several times late Friday night on a rural part of Highway 51, just south of Hazlehurst, Patrol spokesman Edd Jussely said.

Before he died, Jussely said, Gardner fatally shot his apparent assailant, identified as Herman L. Ayers, 36.

Hazelhurst Police Chief Kenneth McLendon quoted witnesses as saying the gunman stood over the trooper to fire the last shot into his back. McLendon said the witnesses told him Gardner managed to roll over and get off the single shot that killed Ayers.

Gardner, who had been a trooper for four months, had arrested Ayers several hours earlier on charges of speeding and running a stop sign and Ayers was free on bond at the time of the shooting, Jussely said.

Power Still Out

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Thousands of people in Kansas City remained huddled around fireplaces and gas stoves Saturday, a week after an ice storm tore down power lines serving 235,000 homes in the Midwest.

Saturday dawned cold and dark for about 8,500 customers of Kansas City Power and Light. The utility predicted it could restore power to everyone by Sunday night.

About 160,000 homes and businesses in Kansas City lost power at the height of the storm which was centered in Kansas and Missouri.

Rebuilding Town

MOSCOW — A powerful earthquake in Soviet central Asia caused so much damage in the hardest-hit area that authorities have decided to rebuild an entire town of 20,000 residents, a television report said Saturday.

The report did not specify whether the quake last Tuesday had destroyed every home in the city of Gazli or if authorities had decided to replace even those still habitable with more strongly built residences.

Young Honored

ATLANTA — French President Francois Mitterrand presented his government's highest award to Mayor Andrew Young on Saturday, calling the mayor "a man with vision."

During a six-hour stopover, Mitterrand said he was drawn to the Georgia capital because of its interest in international business and because it was the birthplace of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

Mitterrand, who was to leave for San Francisco later Saturday, began his state visit last week in Washington, where he met with President Reagan and addressed a joint session of Congress. He is also to visit New York, Pittsburgh and the Galesburg, Ill., farm of U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block.

Haig Report

LONDON — Former Secretary of State Alexander Haig says an Argentine general told him the Soviets offered to sink a British aircraft carrier during the 1982 Falklands war, according to a newspaper's excerpts of his memoirs.

Haig's account appeared Saturday in an early edition of London's Sunday Telegraph newspaper in the first serialized excerpt from his book, "CAVEAT: Realism, Reagan and Foreign Policy."

The book is to be published by Weidenfeld and Nicolson of London, which specializes in political memoirs, on April 30, the Telegraph said. The first excerpt dealt only with the Falklands war.

Haig was in Argentina, trying to mediate an end to the conflict, shortly before the British task force invaded to retake the South Atlantic islands from Argentine troops.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Although there are apt to be some necessary changes in the plans that you had made for today's activities, you are able to turn these conditions to your advantage.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Some situation in the outside world does not seem favorable, but use your head and it can be to your benefit.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Some new conditions fascinate you, so study them well, but expect delays. Show that you are firm and poised.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure you use good mature judgment in whatever comes up of a practical nature today. Don't rely solely on your intuition.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Show that you are supportive of those who expect much from you in practical affairs. Tact is the key word now.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You have work to do that you thought you could put aside or delegate to another, so delve right into it. Wear a smile.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Some recreational activity can meet with disappointment, but don't let it floor you. Be more understanding.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) The situation at home may not be to your liking, but make it better through understanding and patience.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You find it difficult to understand a philosophy which interests you, but more serious study makes it clear. Danger lurks everywhere.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Schedule your time wisely, and you can handle all those intimate matters well today and still have time left for other things.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Although you are troubled about something, don't let this deter you from seeing good friends. Your mate may have problems.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Your philosophical ideas and practical aims are hard to blend together, but more thought brings right results.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You find it hard to do what you had planned for the morning, but after some delay, all works out well. Be happy

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will want to have everything explained exactly so that he or she can follow orders and get everything done right. Give as fine an education as you can so that the future will be successful. Connections are important.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, MARCH 26, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Forget those duties you have to others, and concentrate more upon being able to use your most unusual talents. Look to the future and study New Age interests you have.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure to keep any promises you have made to others, and get your finest skills improved. Be careful in driving.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be more concerned with you finest talents and gain greater benefits, but you have to turn down invitations from others to do so.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can easily understand whatever is new, especially where philosophical thought is concerned. Plan a trip.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Handle those affairs which will please the one you love, such as shopping, running errands, etc. Be helpful to others.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Read your newspaper well for ideas that are good and can meet with the approval of partners. Avoid one who is tricky.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get your work scheduled well so that you can get more done. Tonight do something to make you feel more dynamic.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get into all kinds of writings that will gain you knowledge, and look into novel ways of having entertainment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be alone for awhile at home, and figure out how to make your premises more charming and valuable. Keep busy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are happiest when busy at progressive outlets, and this is a fine day for that.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are mentally busy deciding the right course of action to follow so that you gain your aims more easily. Follow your hunches.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Follow your intuition and go after the personal aims that most activate you. Be happy with your mate in the evening.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Although usually conservative, now is a day for looking into the more modern things of life. Be generous.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be a product of the Jet Age and will act accordingly, so be sure to send to modern schools where the most up-to-date systems and subjects are taught, and where your progeny can be well prepared for future success.

Record Plague Cases Reported

ARLINGTON, Texas (UPI) — Bubonic plague, carried by fleas in wild animals, appears to be spreading across several western states and has infected a record number of humans in the United States, a veterinarian reported Friday.

"Last year was the worst year on record," said William Rosser, state veterinarian for the West Texas region, in a report to delegates at the annual "Diseases in Nature" conference.

"We hope that this year will be an improvement, but there's just no telling."

Rosser said the disease — which killed a third of the population of Medieval Europe — has spread steadily eastward from its origin in California 80 years ago, and now exists in at least 14 western states including New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and Texas.

"Texas is at the extreme eastern edge," he said. "It's been pretty much confined to the west so far," he said. "But many people feel the endemic is steadily drifting eastward."

He said a record 40 human cases were reported in the U.S. last year, compared with 19 the previous year.

The latest case in Texas struck a man in Kermit, just west of Odessa, who caught it from rabbits he had killed.

"The 45-year-old Kermit man complained to authorities of sweats, head throbbing and groin pain," Rosser said.

Initially misdiagnosed, Rosser said blood tests eventually revealed the plague bacteria and the man was cured with antibiotics.

"The disease is treated easily, but it must be diagnosed quickly," he said. "Most victims in Europe died within two or three days."

More than half of last year's cases — 27 of 40 — came from New Mexico and many were centered in the northern Navajo lands, he said. Three of the state's cases were fatalities.

He said an unrelated human outbreak was reported just north of Houston last year.

"But that was not part of this wild animal endemic," he said. "That was associated with rat-carried fleas coming off foreign ships."

Introduced by a Mongol army, the plague or "Black Death" killed millions in Europe between 1346 to 1665.

Cugat Hospitalized

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — Rumba bandleader Xavier Cugat, 84, was hospitalized in the intensive care unit of a Barcelona hospital Saturday for treatment of a respiratory ailment.

A spokeswoman for the Qurion Clinic, where Cugat has been hospitalized three times in recent months, said the patient's condition was serious.

Cugat entered the clinic Monday with severe breathing problems aggravated by a cold, the Spanish news agency Efe reported. The musician's doctor told the agency that the patient was connected to an articial respirator for 26 hours.

Efe said Cugat's doctors hope he will be well enough to leave the intensive care unit within a few days.

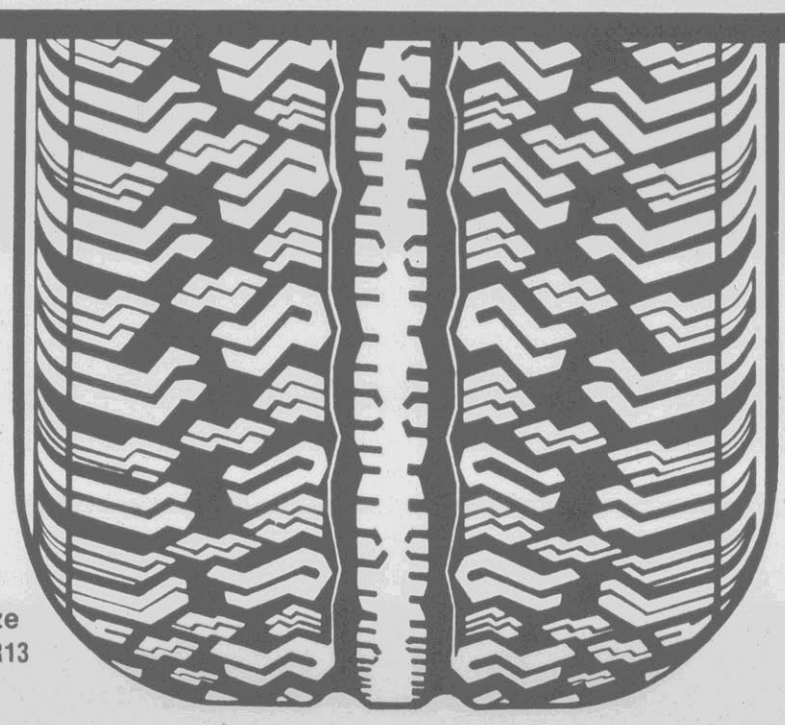

Ivonne Martinez, Cugat's companion in recent years, cut short a visit to the United States to be near the man who gained fame as a rumba bandleader in the United States.

He had been maintaining an active social life lately and in one of several recent press interviews, Cugat said his ambition was to die on Dec. 31, 1999 — a day before his 100th birthday.

Rose Supports Tobacco PAC

By The Associated Press

A North Carolina congressman and two Washington, D.C., lobbyists with tobacco-state ties have proposed creating a tobacco-related political action committee to improve the industry's image in Congress.

"You can't buy votes, but giving some money here and there does increase your opportunity for access to tell your side," said Horace D. Godfrey, a lobbyist and former U.S. Department of Agriculture official from North Carolina.

Last month, Godfrey, Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., and former Rep. John L. Napier, R-S.C., told the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. it should consider setting up a PAC.

"The board is looking at it," said Fred Bond, manager of the cooperative, adding that "it is important for tobacco to have a broad base in Congress."

Tobacco is among the few major commodities with no PAC to represent farmers, although several major cigarette companies and their trade association, the Tobacco Institute, have PACs. The companies focus on tax and smoking and health issues.

Godfrey said he had suggested the cooperative board might consider setting up a PAC independent of the corporation but guided by stabilization directors. He said growers could make voluntary payments to fund the PAC based on each pound of tobacco they market at warehouses.

Godfrey said if half the growers volunteered a quarter-cent on each pound marketed, the PAC could scatter about $1 million among congressmen who might be sympathetic to tobacco state legislation. That could be especially important in light of recent attacks on the federal tobacco program.

Rose said the plea for funds should be made to warehousemen and larger growers who can better afford the contributions.

Rose said details still need to be worked out, but has proposed the PAC be called Friends of Flue-Cured Stabilization.

Court, School Leaders Say Truancy Difficult To Block

MONROE, N.C. (UPI) — Judges and educators say legislation has gutted the state's compulsory school attendance laws, making officials powerless to force students to go to school.

Since 1976, state law has prohibited sending children to juvenile detention homes, or truining schools, because they chronically missed school. Lawmakers agreed children whose only offense is skipping school should not be thrown together with children who have committed serious crimes.

Judges and educators also agreed, but now say without the threat of a detention home, it is difficult to enforce school attendance.

"The legislation prohibiting status offenders from going to training schools had the effect of nullifying compuslory attendance laws in the state," said Dudley Flood, with the Division of Pupil-Personnel Services of the state Department of Education.

"When the legislation was approved to stop sending student offenders to training school, we were promised community based alternatives, but up to this time we don't have anything better," Flood said.

Under state law, a judge can fine parents or send them to jail, but the most he can do to the students is put them on probation.

Judge Donald Huffman, chief district judge for the 20th Judicial District, said the theory behind punishing or threatening to punish parents is that it will either disturb the child or force the parents to get the child to school.

But judges said they are reluctant to punish parents for the misbehavior of their teenage children.

They also said if a child appears unconcerned that his parents could go to jail, a judge's only recourse is to repeatedly put a child on probation each time he fails to live up to the terms of probation.

State officials said 3 percent to 4 percent of the state's children who are required to attend school until age 16 are attendance problems and a small percentage of those are in situations where parents face penalties.

Gwyn Griffin, director of Union County's school attendance program, said stringent school attendance policies could be one approach to decreasing truancy.

Union County's new attendance policy provides automatic failure with 15 unexcused absences, but Griffin said older students who refuse to go to school remain a problem.

Griffin said sometimes a brief time in jail for parents does work. One Union County 14-year-old girl never missed another day of school after her mother was jailed for several hours and she was left crying on the courthouse steps without a ride home, Griffin said.

Five Tar Heel Women Honored

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has given five North Carolina women the first Distinguished Women of North Carolina Awards.

Hunt presented the awards Friday night during a banquet in honor of the 20th anniversary of the North Carolina Council on the Status of Women.

Receiving the award were U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, Ruth Braswell Jones of Rocky Mount, Martha Clampitt McKay of Raleigh and Chapel Hill, Ellen Black Winston of Raleigh and Deborah Crouch McKeithan of Charlotte.

"The five women ... are special people," Hunt said. "They come from different parts of the state, and they hold different occupations. But they have one thing in common: a commitment to excellence in their chosen fields, and in their lives."

State Shows Rise In Wine Sales

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wine appears to be gaining ground on liquor and beer in North Carolina's alcoholic beverage sales, officials say.

"For some reason, people have found wine more acceptable," said Jay Hare, administrative officer for the state Department of Revenue. "Over the past few years, unfortified wine sales have been increasing steadily."

Hare said sales of unfortified wines containing 17 percent or less alcohol were up 6.6 percent in the past eight months over the same period a year ago — an increase of $189,000. Sales of the stronger fortified wines dropped 4.4 percent, or $62,000. These wines have had distilled spirits added to boost their alcohol content, Hare said.

Beer sales increased by $466,000 or 1.2 percent while liquor sales fell 9 percent, with sales down $3,188,461, he said. The number of cases are down by 167,358 in the same period noted above.

Har said the trend may reflect North Carolina's tough new anti-drunken-driving laws.

"We're expecting a decline in liquor sales" to continue, he said. "People are aware of the DWI statutes in North Carolina. People are drinking a lot more responsibly than they used to."

The average bottle of liquor in New Hanover County, for example, costs $7.25, Hester said.

North Carolina residents have about 6,000 kinds of wine to choose from, said Bill Hester, state Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission administrator.

North Carolina was once a major wine producer. In 1909, the nation's largest winery was located at Aberdeen.

Blacks Lead Infant Death Statistics

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The tendency toward early pregnancies among black women means their children are almost twice as likely to die in their first year than white children, a researcher says.

Research by the University of North Carolina at Charlotte sociology professor shows blacks in North Carolina lead in infant mortality statistics.

Dr. George S. Rent also said social programs have greatly reduced infant mortality among North Carolina's 65,000 Indians.

Rent said there were 23.8 deaths per 1,000 black infants in North Carolina in 1977, compared to 12.2 deaths per 1,000 white infants and 15.1 deaths per 1,000 Indian infants.

"Teen-age pregnancy (among blacks) is a major problem nationwide," Rent said. "A younger mother is more likely to have problems, and the weight of the child is likely to be lower."

Rent worked with sociologists Dr. Fernando Bertoli of UNCC and Dr. Clyda S. Rent of Queens College on the study, published in the April issue of the national journal "Sociology and Social Research."

The researchers analyzed about 900,000 birth records and 19,000 infant death records for the years 1968-1977 from the state Department of Human Resources.

The infant mortality rates declined for all groups, but Indians saw the greatest drop — from 35 deaths per 1,000 in 1968 to 15.1 a decade later. In 1968, the infant death rate was 37.9 per 1,000 among blacks and 20.8 percent among whites.

"It could be a function of the fact that Indians are not having pregnancies as early as blacks," said Rent. But the increase in federal social programs aimed at infant mortality may be more significant, he said.

"Indians are more highly concentrated in several different sections of the state" than are blacks, said Rent. "They're either on the reservation in Cherokee or in two or three counties in the eastern part of the state. They're more likely to have greater access to services."

The study also found that the more education the infant's mother has, the less likely he is to die, said Rent.

"Mothers with an eighth grade education or less had rates two to four times higher than those of mothers with 16 or more years of school," he said.

But that factor was less significant among blacks and Indians than it was among whites.

"We considered the possibility that the effects of education may take more than one generation," said Rent. "The impact of education on lifestyle ... and prenatal care may take two generations."

Ralph-less Virginia In Final Four

ATLANTA (AP) — An orange-clad Virginia fan waved a sign that said it all:

"There is Life After Ralph."

The Cavaliers, who reached the NCAA Final Four only once during the four-year career of three-time Player of the Year Ralph Sampson, gained a return trip in the first year of his absence Saturday by upsetting another longshot, Indiana, 50-48, in the title game of the NCAA East Regional.

Virginia, 21-12, will meet the winner of Sunday's Midwest Regional final between No. 5 Houston and 19th-ranked Wake Forest in Seattle next Saturday.

"I guess coaches are crazy," Coach Terry Holland said. "People were saying Ralph is leaving, but I was crazy enough to think we'd be back in the Final Four."

The hero of the latest of three consecutive upsets in the 1984 NCAA tourney was an unlikely one — 6-foot-8 senior center Kenton Edelin.

With the Cavs trailing 44-43 and Indiana attempting to run out the clock with its delay game, Edelin slipped up behind the Hoosiers' Dan Dakich, stripped the ball away and ambled three-fourths of the floor to hit a layup that gave Virginia the lead for good with 1:27 remaining.

Edelin, a 50 percent free throw shooter, then hit one of two attempts with 63 seconds to play and added two more with 47 seconds remaining to give the Cavs a 48-44 lead Indiana was unable to overcome.

When the final horn sounded, Edelin sprawled on the floor as his teammates surrounded him.

Holland said Edelin told him before the game he never wanted anything more in his life than to win this game.

"It was a great play," Holland said. "Kenton is an excellent full-court dribbler. Although he did mishandle it, there was no question in his mind he was going to get it in the basket. Anything inside three inches, that's his shot."

Edelin had been 10-for-10 from the field in three previous tournament games but had missed an attempted stuff on an alley-oop pass earlier in the second half before hitting his only other attempt in the game, the go-ahead basket with 1:27 to play.

"Edelin's steal was absolutely crucial," Indiana Coach Bobby Knight said. "Instead of perhaps being up by three points and having as much as 20 seconds off the clock, they get the ball."

Knight had expressed concern Friday about Indiana's penchant this season for following an exceptional performance with a poor one.

"We had good effort today, but effort comes in different packages," Knight said. "I don't think Virginia played particularly well either. We made some crucial mistakes at the end."

After Edelin's free throws had put Virginia up 48-44, the teams swapped a basket by Dakich and a pair of free throws by Rick Carlisle before Indiana freshmen Steve Alford cut the margin to 50-48 with 26 seconds remaining.

Carlisle then missed the first shot on a one-and-one opportunity with 19 seconds to play, but the Hoosiers failed to force overtime when Stew Robinson's 18-footer bounced off the rim and Virginia retrieved the rebound to run out the clock.

The Cavaliers, who finished sixth in the Atlantic Coast Conference, entered the tournament with the second-worst record of all 53 teams, 17-11. Only Nevada-Reno, 17-13, had a poorer mark.

Indiana, 22-9, had appeared set for Knight's fourth trip to the Final Four after upsetting top-ranked North Carolina 72-68 Thursday night in the East semifinals.

The victory was the fourth in a row in the tournament for the Cavaliers, who reached Saturday's game by beating Iona, Arkansas and Syracuse.

Indiana appeared to be in control when Alford hit a pair of free throws with 3:21 remaining for a 44-41 advantage. But Carlisle's 15-footer rolled around the rim and fell in to cut the lead to one point with 3 minutes to play, setting the stage for Edelin's heroics.

Both teams used a deliberate style throughout, and neither team led by more than four points the entire day.

The Hoosiers led 26-23 at halftime.

Andruzzi-Led Committee Seeks Media Exposure

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

With women's basketball fighting with men's basketball for better coverage, East Carolina coach Cathy Andruzzi is heading a committee that will determine how the sport can increase its exposure.

Andruzzi is chairman of a media panel of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association. The entire group, newly formed this season, will meet next week in Los Angeles during the NCAA women's Final Four.

"What we're doing is working with newspapers and cable television," Andruzzi said in a telephone interview. "First, we want to establish a foundation. Next week, we're going to sit down and talk about it."

Already, Andruzzi has initiated a series of questionnaires in each of nine regions throughout the country. In each area, media outlets are being quizzed on how much attention is focused on women's basketball and how much coverage is provided.

"What's happening now is that we're not getting exposure. We're not a revenue-making sport. It certainly can become a spectator sport," Andruzzi said. "We have a really good product and we need to let people know about it. We have to go out there and sell ourselves, give people a chance to see us."

Andruzzi is familiar with getting coverage for her Pirate squad. She is one of the few women's basketball coaches in the country with a television highlight show.

"I was the first one in the U.S. that had a TV show," she said. "Now, there are 14 of them."

Even as the trail is being blazed, Andruzzi admits that the battle is uphill.

"We have to break down and ask people to give us more coverage and encourage them to come out," she said. "Our major step is to contact newspapers personally."

Still another factor is the success of particular teams. East Carolina has played to large crowds when names such as Old Dominion and Southern California visit the Greenville campus. Such teams attract large media gatherings.

"It's really based on how good the team is," Andruzzi said. "It really depends on the basketball state itself. Certain schools really go big-time. Some schools don't."

The first meeting of Andruzzi's committee is scheduled for Thursday.

"We will evaluate and probably establish new guidelines," Andruzzi said. "I imagine what we propose will be accepted. We're talking about total coverage."

Kentucky Nips Illini

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Sam Bowie was "Mr. Clutch" for third-ranked Kentucky Saturday, scoring 11 points and pulling down 14 rebounds as the Wildcats beat No. 6 Illinois 54-51 to advance to the Final Four of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Kentucky, 29-4, will face the winner of Sunday's Dayton-Georgetown West regional championship game next Saturday in Seattle.

Bowie's contibution to the Kentucky victory didn't show in the halftime statistics, though. At intermission, the fifth-year senior from Lebanon, Pa., had not scored a point and had only four rebounds in the Mideast Regional championship game.

"I wanted to put myself in a situation where I could be the hero or the goat," said Bowie, who suffered a sprained ankle with 14 seconds left in the game. "I didn't score any points in the first half, but I had a defensive assignment against Efrem Winters. I think he had three points at the half.

"In the second half, they went more to a zone and allowed me to go to the boards."

Bowie said "someone stepped on my left ankle. I was going up and the ankle stayed down. This (the victory) makes the ankle feel fine."

Kentucky point guard Dicky Beal said Bowie was "Mr. Clutch for us. He and (center) Melvin (Turpin) are the guys you have to go to."

Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall, who will be making his third trip to the Final Four in 12 seasons at Kentucky, was thrilled.

Lulled Pirates Get Only A Split

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The relative ease of East Carolina's 10-2 victory over American University in the first game of a doubleheader lulled the Pirates to sleep yesterday and by the time they awoke in the second game, it was too late.

The Pirates, down by as much as 4-0, tried to come back, but left the tying run at third base in the bottom of the seventh as the Eagles claimed a 6-5 victory in the nightcap, winning their first game of the year.

"I just can't understand why we didn't hit their pitcher," East Carolina coach Hal Baird said afterwards. "He wasn't throwing that gooda stuff. I guess we just didn't have our minds in the right frame.

"I tried to tell them between games that when you blow somebody away in the first game, you generally are going to have a bear to fight in the second game. I guess they just didn't believe me. We made enough mistakes to fill a book in that game."

Oh, yes!

Of the six runs scored, only three of them were plated by the action of the batters. Two scored on errors and another scored on a wild pitch. Another — what proved the final difference — got into scoring postion because of a mental mistake.

"We missed signs and we made physical and mental mistakes all over the field," Baird said. "We just self-destructed."

Ironically, the Pirates thoroughly dominated play in the first game, with Robbie McClanahan hurling a five-hitter to earn his third win against no losses. His teammates played flawlessly behind him, pulling off a couple of double plays. In this game, it was the Eagles who made the mistakes, and appearing totally outmanned.

East Carolina took the lead in the second game in the bottom of the first inning when Winfred Johnson — who took the loss, his second in five decisions — slapped a two-run homer. Steve Sides had reached earlier on a walk.

But in the third, Johnson was tagged for three runs, partly his own fault and partly others.

Greg Hall led off with a single and Steve Salem got a hit to center. Paul Grzyb also singled, and when the ball got away from Chris Bradberry in left, each advanced a base, scoring courtesy runner Mike Weisflog. Johnson then unleashed a wild pitch, plating Salem. With two away, Kevin Conaway singled to score Grzyb.

The Eagles picked up another in the fourth. John Sood reached on an error on shortstop Greg Hardison and Bruce Barkley followed with a double to left. Hall's infield popup was dropped by catcher Jim Riley, loadingh the bases. Grzyb grounded to short, but Sood scored on the play and it was 4-0.

The Pirates finally got another run in the sixth as Johnson tried to help his own cause with a homer to center, trimming the lead to 4-3.

And if the Pirates had been on the ball in the top of the seventh, that might have been enough.

Instead, the poor play continued and American was able to add two more runs for a 6-4 lead. Grzyb opened with a double to left, his second, and that finished Johnson. David Barnes hit a pop-up to short right on which the first baseman, right fielder and second baseman all converged upon but none of them could get to it. Hardison, however, instead of covering second, also came on toward the crowd and that left second open and Barnes race on there.

Greg Wells lofted a sacrifice fly to center, scoring Grzyb. Ricky Nichols' relay to third, however, bounced into the dugout — as relief pitcher Chubby Butler failed to back up the play, and Barnes was awarded home on the overthrow.

Now, instead of having to make up one run, the Pirates had to make up three. It proved impossible.

Not that they didn't try. Mark Cockrell reached on an infield hit, and was replaced by Mark Shank. Sides walked and Hardison singled to load them up. A wild pitch scored Shank and Todd Evans grounded out to score Sides and move Hardison to third with the tying run.

Johnson was intentionally walked to set up a force, and Robert Langston was brought on as a pinch-runner.

But David Wells watched a third-strike sail past him for the second out and pinch-hitter Mike Sullivan's grounder to second ended it.

• •

It had started out like a day for the Pirates to rejoice in. The Bucs batted around in the first inning, scoring four times. With one out, Hardison reached on an error and Evans doubled, driving him in. Johnson singled and Wells walked, loading the bases. Mike Williams singled to score Evans and Sullivan hit into a fielder's choice, getting Johnson at the plate. Shank followed with a double, driving in both Wells and Williams.

East Carolina picked up four more in the second. Hardison singled and Evans got a hit. Johnson's grounder forced Evans and Wells again walked, loading the bases. Williams was hit by a pitch — for the third time in three days — and that forced in Hardison. Sullivan doubled to left center, scoring all three of the runners.

American got on the board in the fifth. Sood doubled off the top of the fence in right center and moved up on an out. He scored on Bruce Barkley's infield hit and Weisflog got a hit to move him to third. Barkley scored when Salem grounded to second.

The Pirates picked up two more in the fifth. Shank reached on a fielder's choice and Jabo Fulghum walked. Hardison then doubled to drive in both runners.

The final Pirate run came in the sixth. Jeff Ginn singled and Mark Council got a hit. A fielder's choice moved Ginn to third and he scored on Sullivan's hit.

The Pirates banged out 11 hits in the first game, two each by Hardison, Evans and Sullivan. In the second game, they added eight, with Williams getting three, Johnson two and Hardison two. American was led by Grzyb with three in the second game.

The split left the Pirates with a 15-5 overall record, and a 3-1 ECAC-South mark. American climbs to 1-2-1 overall and 1-1 in the league.

East Carolina jumps right back into the ECAC-South race today, hosting the University of Richmond in a 3 p.m. game that was originally scheduled for 1 p.m. but was moved back at Richmond's request.

Rose Bows To Rams; Tops Warriors

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

Billy Michel threw a two-hitter and Doyle Kirkland ripped a grand slam homer as the Rose Rampants pounded Eastern Wayne 7-0 after losing to Greene Central 8-1 in the opening game of a baseball doubleheader Saturday at Guy Smith Stadium.

Kirkland's homer, his first on the Rose varsity unit, came in the fourth inning with one out and capped the Rampants' offensive assault. Traye Fuqua ripped a two-run homer in the first, and Mike Smith added a solo shot in the second. Eric Woodworth cracked a solo shot for the Rampants' only run against Greene Central.

Kirkland finished the game with two hits in three trips to the plate, while Marc Nover tripled and singled in three at bats.

Michel struck out six Warrior batters and gave up just one walk before being relieved by Battle Emory in the seventh.

"I'm very pleased with Billy Michel," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said. "I think he's going to be a good pitcher for us this year; he threw well, threw strikes all day.

"Kirkland has been playing well all year. I think he'll get more playing time in the next few games."

The early homers gave the Rampants a three-run advantage, but Kirkland's blast put the game out of reach. Michel opened the inning with a base on balls, and Tony Taylor followed with a single. After one out, Mike Walsh drew a walk to set up the four-run homer.

Kirkland singled to open the seventh, then took second on a passed ball. A fielder's choice by Gary Scott moved Kirkland to third, but David Ellis struck out the next two batters to get out of trouble.

The Warriors threatened just twice in the game, as Robbie Strickland opened the game by reaching first on an error. A sacrifice by Brad Dawson moved Strickland to second, and he took third on a grounder by Anthony Russo. But a grounder to second by Jeff Watson ended the rally.

Eastern Wayne's other scoring opportunity came after two out in the second, as David Ellis reached on an error and moved to third on a single by Bailey Ward. But Michel closed the door by striking out Charlie Thayer.

"I was glad to see us come back strong after that first game," Vincent said. "We just didn't seem to be here for the first game. Greene Central played well and didn't make the mistakes in the field that we did.

"We made about every mistake we could. Maybe we learned that you've got to be ready to play every game."

Otis Barnes set the stage in the first game, as he led off with a homer on the second pitch from Steve Wall. After a base on balls to Press Harris, Wall settled down to record his second strikeout of the first frame.

The Rampants left just one runner on base against the Rams, as Elmer Dixon and Adrian Smith baffled Rose hitters through seven innings. Nover had a pair of hits for Rose, but the Rampants had just three in the game. Dixon and Smith struck out just three Rose batters, but they never gave up a walk.

The Rampants' trouble started in the second inning, as Rick Radford led off with a single. Then the Rose defense collapsed on what appeared to be a routine double play grounder by Stacey Chase.

Radford was safe at second when the shortstop missed the bag making the pivot, and Fuqua's throw sailed to the fence out of the reach of Michel at first. Woodworth, the Rose catcher, backed up the play and fired the ball to second attempting to nail Chase trying to advance.

But Woodworth launched the ball into left field over Fuqua's outstretched glove. Mike Kinley chased ball down and fired it toward home plate — which remained vacant with Woodworth behind first — allowing Radford to score.

One play — four errors.

"I picked up the ball and they were yelling for me to (throw toward home plate)," Kinley said. "But I saw there wasn't anyone there after I had already thrown it."

Chase scored on a single by Ken Wade, and Wade scored on a single by Michael Warren.

Greene Central added a run in the fourth, two more in the sixth and another in the seventh to seal the victory while pounding out 11 hits.

Barnes led the Rams with three hits in five at bats, while Warren and Chase had two each.

The Rams improved their record to 3-3-1 with the win, while Rose stands at 3-2-1 on the season. The Rampants entertains Northern Nash Tuesday, while Greene Central visits North Lenoir.

Kentucky Nips Illinois...

"I thought Sam's second half was outstanding. He had 10 rebounds, and all 11 of his points in the second half, which in this low-scoring game was outstanding," Hall said.

Illinois Coach Lou Henson credited Bowie with two plays that he considered keys to the victory.

"One big play for Kentucky was when Bowie went to the free throw line and hit two when they were ahead by three points," Henson said, recalling Bowie's foul shots with 4:28 to play. "And then he blocked a shot a little later, with 2:36 left, again when we were behind by three....

"We played good enough ball to win. We thought we played pretty well," Henson said. "With a break here and there, we could have won the trip to Seattle."

Kentucky led 49-44 when Bowie hit the free throws with 4:28 remaining, but Illinois forward Doug Altenberger hit a long jumper from the right sideline and guard Quinn Richardson added another basket from the top of the key to cut the deficit to 50-48 with 2:20 to play.

Beal ran his way out of the Illini's pressing, trapping defense to hit a layup with 43 seconds left.

Richardson hit another basket with 27 seconds left to make it 52-50, but Beal made two free throws with 14 seconds left to put the Wildcats up by four again.

Illinois, 26-5, had one last chance. Altenberger hit one of two free throws with seven seconds left, and the Big Ten co-champion Illini got the rebound after he missed the second shot but could not score before the buzzer.

It was the only time in the second half Illinois went to the free throw line. Kentucky hit 10 of 15 free throws in the second half.

Turpin led Kentucky with 13 points, but Beal, who didn't even start until February after recovering from knee surgery, was named the regional's Most Valuable Player. Richardson led Illinois with 16 points, 10 of them in the second half, all on long-range shooting against the Kentucky zone defense. Altenberger finished with 13, while Winters, who was questionable for the game because of a sprained ankle suffered Thursday night, had seven.

Kentucky goes to the Final Four for the first time since winning the national championship in 1978. The Wildcats will be looking for their sixth national title.

Illinois, a two-point loser to the Wildcats in December, was the third straight regular-season opponent that Kentucky had to beat in the NCAA tournament. The Wildcats also beat Louisville and Brigham Young in earlier rounds.

The Wildcats, who struggled to a 24-22 halftime lead on a jumper by Beal with two seconds left, had trouble all day with the Big Ten's best defense. They turned the ball over once in the second half when Beal was trapped near midcourt and again when Beal was unable to get the ball across the 10-second line.

Bowie hit two straight tip-ins for a 32-26 Kentucky lead at 16:04 of the second half, and a free throw by Turpin 23 seconds later gave the Wildcats their biggest lead at 33-26.

From there, Illinois outscored Kentucky 10-3 to draw even at 36-36 when Winters hit a jumper from the right corner with 10:35 to play. The Illini were helped during the streak by five Kentucky turnovers.

Kenny Walker and Turpin scored to put Kentucky up by four and a free throw by Bowie at 8:32 made it 41-36, but Richardson brought the Illini back to within three with long jumpers at 7:54 and 6:38, sandwiched around a tip-in by Bowie.

The Illini press, which held opponents under 50 points 17 times this season, nullified Kentucky's height advantage by keeping the 7-foot-1 Bowie and the 6-11 Turpin out from under the basket. Bowie even brought the ball up at times to help out the hard-pressed guards.

Ellis, Hirschman On Miller Poles

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Richmond's Tommy Ellis and Tony Hirschman of Northampton, Pa., will have pole starts in Sunday's Miller Time 500 twinbill at the Martinsville Speedway.

Ellis, a 13-year veteran of the Late Model Sportsman circuit, has only one career win here, despite capturing the national championship in 1981. He won seven races in 1983 but is winless so far this year.

Hirschman, on the other hand, has never won a major race since joining the Modified circuit in the mid-1970s, but he had two runner-up finishes here last year.

Hirschman's pole was captured Friday with a qualifying speed of 96.435 mph. Amazingly, that time was matched by Charlie Jarzombek of Baiting Hollow, N.Y.

Both drivers, in Cavaliers, had the same time over the .526-mile speedway. Hirschman won the pole by virtue of qualifying before Jarzombek.

"It's a million-to-one shot, I guarantee you," said Jarzombek, a 41-year-old veteran driver. "When they used to use hand stop watches, things like this weren't uncommon. But for two cars to go that distance in the same time down to the thousandth of a second is too hard to comprehend."

Jarzombek will start on the outside pole in the 250-lap Modified event.

Each race will feature 30-car fields, with the green flag for the 250-lap Late Model Sportsman half dropping at 12:30 p.m.

Other Modified qualifyers included seven-time national champion Richie Evans and brothers Geoff and Brett Bodine. Late Model Sportsman contenders include defending national champion Sam Ard, Morgan Shepherd, Jack Ingram and Larry Pearson, son of all-time great David Pearson.

Miller Named Most Valuable

ATLANTA (AP) — Jim Miller, who scored 19 points to lead Virginia to a 50-48 victory over Indiana for the NCAA East Regional basketball championship Saturday, was named the most outstanding player in the event in a vote by news media.

Miller was joined on the all-tournament team by another Cavalier star, freshman Olden Polynice, Indiana's Uwe Blab and Steve Alford, and Sam Perkins of North Carolina.

Edelin Elated After Virginia's Win

ATLANTA (AP) — Senior center Kenton Edelin, the hero of Virginia's 50-48 victory over Indiana Saturday for the NCAA East Regional basketball title, sprawled flat on his back on the floor of The Omni as the buzzer went off, pounding his fists emotionally on the floor while gazing at the heavens.

"This is probably my greatest accomplishment in sports. I'm so happy to be going to Seattle," the 6-foot-8 Edelin said of the Cavaliers' trip to the Final Four for the NCAA title in Seattle next weekend.

Edelin, who averages only four points a game, was scoreless and only tried one shot in Saturday's thriller until the final 1:27. He then went on to score five straight points to kill Indiana's hopes.

First, he made the key steal of an inbounds pass by Indiana's Dan Dakich, dribbled halfway down the court and dropped in a layup to give Virginia the lead at 45-44.

Edelin, who led the team in rebounding and field goal percentage but shot only 50 percent from the free throw line, then dropped in three of four free throws in the closing seconds before Rick Carlisle added a pair with 19 seconds to clinch the victory.

Edelin, a walk-on who earned a scholarship as a sophomore, was named runner-up to teammate Jim Miller for the tourney's outstanding player award although he was not named to the All-Tournmanent squad.

But that didn't matter to the 21-year-old who plans to attend law school after graduation.

"We were expected to lose after Ralph (Sampson) left. People didn't expect we could play like that without Ralph, but I guess this proves we could do it," said Edelin.

"We weren't playing to be vindicated but it is a good feeling to know you can accomplish something like this without a great player like Ralph Sampson," he said.

Virginia had been favorites the past three seasons in the NCAA tournmament with Sampson, but never finished better than third.

This season, Virginia, 21-11, had the second worst record of any school invited to the tournament after finished 6-8 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"The steal was the big play of the game," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland. "Our defense made the difference."

It was the 14th game this season Virginia had held its opponents under 60 points and the Cavaliers have won 13 of them. The only team to score under 60 and win was Virginia Tech in a 56-54 victory.

Virginia's Othell Wilson played a key role in holding Indiana's Steve Alford, the Hoosiers' leading scorer to only eight shots and holding the freshman guard to eight points.

"They went man-to-man and I didn't move very well," Alford said of the Virginia defense which opened in a zone and switched to man-to-man for the last 30 minutes of the game.

"I congratulate Virginia and I wish them the best of luck in the Final Four," said a subdued and disappointed Indiana Coach Bobby Knight.

"Edelin's steal was absolutely crucial. Instead of perhaps being up by three points and having as much as 20 seconds off the clock, they get the ball," Knight said.

"I think that playing for an opportunity to go to the national championships has an effect on kids," he said.

Victory Relieves Bowie, Beal

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — For Sam Bowie and Dicky Beal, Saturday's NCAA Mideast Championship was a happy ending to a sometimes frustrating journey.

"It's an awesome feeling. It makes all the hurt and pain worth it," said Beal, who was named Most Valuable Player in the tournament.

Beal — who had to come back from three operations on his knee during the off-season and who fought off ankle and groin injuries during the season — hit two free throws and a layup in the final minute to help No. 3 Kentucky hold on to a 54-51 victory over No. 6 Illinois.

The victory moves the Wildcats, 29-4, into the NCAA finals in Seattle against the winner of the Western Regional. Illinois finished at 26-5.

"There was a lot of adrenaline flowing," Beal said afterwards. "It was our last chance. We wanted to go out with a bang."

Both Beal and Bowie had to mingle pain with joy right to the end of Saturday's game. Beal was banged up while going up for a rebound while Bowie suffered a slight ankle sprain with 14 seconds remaining. Both of the players were back in the game by the end of the contest.

Illinois Coach Lou Henson said that two plays by Bowie — two free throws with 4:28 remaining and a block with 2:36 remaining — were keys in the game.

"We went out and played a courageous game," Henson said. "We played it good enough to win and didn't. But with a break here, a break there and we'd have won the ball game ... we'd be going to Seattle."

Henson afterward wondered aloud how the home court advantage might have affected the fact that going into the final minutes, Illinois was faced with an 11-2 foul deficit.

He noted Kentucky had the luxury of going to the line and then fouling without having Illinois retaliate.

"You can't come to Kentucky, have the fouls go against us 11-2 with about a minute left and win the ball game," Henson said. "We can't win the game under those conditions."

Illinois' George Montgomery also commented on the "physical" nature of Kentucky's game.

"The officials let the game get out of hand," Montgomery said.

"I'm not crying but I'd like to play them somewhere else," said Illini Doug Altenberger. "Playing here is like playing an SEC game."

Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall refused to get into a controversy about home court advantages and talked instead of what Illinois had done to his team's offense.

"Their defense was awesome," Hall said. "It was one of the best defensive jobs anyone's had against us. They stopped almost everything we attempted."

Bowie — who had to sit out two seasons after surgery on his left shin — finished with 11 points and 14 rebounds.

"Sam's second half was outstanding," Hall said, "and I'm glad to see Beal is receiving the recognition he deserves."

And when the game ended, it was the seniors — Beal, Bowie and Melvin Turpin — who hugged at the net as they celebrated the victory.

And when Beal was announced as the tournament's MVP, Turpin picked up the 5-foot-11 guard and lifted him for the crowd to see. There were tears in Beal's eyes as he waved one finger in victory to the crowd. Then he came down into Bowie's arms.

"All of the team — particularly the senior — realized this was a last opportunity," Bowie said.

Bowie and the seniors hope they have the opportunity to savor the feeling two more times in Seattle.

Wildcats Land Three On Unit

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Point guard Dicky Beal was selected most valuable player of the NCAA Mideast Regional on Saturday, leading three players from third-ranked Kentucky on the all-tournament team.

Beal, a 5-foot-11 senior, handed out six assists, scored nine points and had a pair of steals in a 54-51 victory over sixth-ranked Illinois that sent the Wildcats to a Final Four matchup with the West Regional champion in Seattle next weekend.

Also honored by the regional press corps were Kentucky center Melvin Turpin and forward Sam Bowie, a second-team All-America.

Two other guards were chosen for the all-tournament team: Louisville's Lancaster Gordon, who scored 25 points in a semifinal loss to Kentucky on Thursday, and Bruce Douglas of Illinois, who had 11 assists and three steals Saturday.

VCU Downs Pirates, 6-3

Virginia Commonwealth University spotted East Carolina University wins in the number one, two and three singles matches then came back to take a 6-3 victory.

The Rams swept through the bottom three singles and took all three of the doubles event.

The loss drops the Pirates to 4-3 on the spring. They play host to Harvard "B" team on Monday.

Eastwood In Position For First Title

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — After 13 long years of struggle and frustration, Bob Eastwood has put himself in position — three shots clear of the field — to acquire his first title on the PGA Tour.

"It would be nice to have a win," said Eastwood, who stretched his leading margin in the $400,000 USF&G Classic with a 4-under-par 68 in Saturday's third round.

But Eastwood, never before positioned this well after three rounds, took a low-key approach going into the final 18 holes.

"I'll go out and play the best I can," he said.

"If I win, I win. If not, well, I'll know I tried."

Eastwood, 38, completed three trips over the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course at 202, 14 strokes under par.

"Bob is playing well," said Doug Tewell, who is in second place at 205.

"He's overdue to win. He's paid his dues out here for all those years," Tewell said. "It takes a special kind of person to do what he's done, hang in there all that time. So many guys would have given up by now. But Bob wanted to play golf, and he hung in there, and got his game to where he's competitive. You have to give him credit."

Tewell, who collected his only two victories four seasons ago, closed up with a 66 in the cloudy weather that produced a few light showers.

Former PGA champion John Mahaffey, winner of the Bob Hope Classic earlier this season, birdied his last hole to complete a 68 and was alone in third at 206.

"John's been there before, lots of times. He could be tough to handle," Tewell said, looking ahead to Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

Larry Rinker was at 207 after a 70 and was followed by Bernhard Langer, the West German who finished third in last week's Bay Hill Classic. Langer, a five-time winner in Europe last season, matched par despite some erratic putting and finished 54 holes at 208.

Corey Pavin, with a 67, and Don Pooley, with a 68, were next at 209.

Tom Watson, the five-time British Open champion trying to fight his way out of a slump, had a 68 and was in a group at 210. PGA title-holder Hal Sutton struggled to a 74 and was at 217.

Eastwood, whose career-high finish came last year as a runner-up in the Tournament Players Championship, started the third round with a two-shot lead and, at one time, expanded it to five shots.

"About that time, I was telling myself, 'he's having one of those days. Don't let him get too far out in front,'" Tewell said.

Eastwood played the front in 32, 4-under-par, making putts of 15 and 35 feet on the third and fourth, and scoring from 15 and 25 feet on the eighth and ninth.

But he bogeyed the 11th after hitting a tree with his drive, then bogeyed the 14th when, he said, "I put my worst swing of the day on a 2-iron."

At that point, his lead had dwindled to two strokes.

"I didn't really feel like it was getting away from me," he said. "I'd made one bad swing, but that's going to happen."

And he promptly birdied the next two holes, chipping to six feet on the 15th and hitting a 9-iron to within three feet on the 16th.

That re-established his control and he preserved it with a scrambling par from the oak and moss-dripping cypress trees on the left of the 18th fairway.

Fusina Leads Stars By Maulers, 25-10

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Chuck Fusina hooked up with former college teammate Scott Fitzkee on three touchdown passes, lifting the Philadelphia Stars to a 25-10 victory Saturday over the expansion Pittsburgh Maulers in the United States Football League.

Fusina and Fitzkee, who played at Penn State, teamed on scoring pass plays of 16 and 23 yards to give Philadelphia an 18-3 third-quarter lead after the Stars had eased to a 6-3 halftime lead on a pair of Dave Trout field goals.

The Maulers closed to within 18-10 early in the fourth quarter on Glenn Carano's 5-yard scoring shot to Jackie Flowers, but the Stars came back quickly on a 40-yard Fusina to Fitzkee scoring pass to put the game out of reach with 7:42 remaining.

Fitzkee caught eight of Fusina's passes for 176 yards, including a 45-yard gain early in the second quarter that set up a 21-yard Trout field goal.

Trout, released two years ago by the Pittsburgh Steelers because of his inability to make extra points, missed two PAT attempts, but did hit on a 42-yard first period field goal that opened the scoring.

The victory raised the Stars' record to 4-1 and was their 19th in 23 USFL games since the league began last season. The Maulers, who got 54 yards on 16 carries by Mike Rozier, fell to 1-4.

With the Stars nursing the 6-3 lead, Garcia Lane returned Larry Swider's punt 27 yards to the Maulers' 42 on the fifth play of the second half. Kelvin Bryant picked up 18 yards on a pair of carries and caught a 10-yard Fusina pass to set up the first of Fitzkee's three scoring catches.

Fusina, who completed 16 of 21 passes for 249 yards and no interceptions, then threw to Fitzkee for 13 yards and scrambled seven yards for a key first down before finding Fitzkee open close to the right out-of-bounds line in the end zone with 37 seconds left in the third quarter. The 23-yard score raised the Stars' lead to 18-3 and was hotly contested by the Maulers, who complained that one of Fitzkee's feet landed on the out-of-bounds line while he made the catch.

The crowd of 24,341 — with 4,718 no-shows — was less than half the 53,700 the Maulers drew for their first USFL home game two weeks ago.

Gunslingers Top Oakland

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Al Penn-White's 1-yard run with 1:22 remaining gave the San Antonio Gunslingers a 14-10 victory over the Oakland Invaders Saturday afternoon in a United States Football League game.

San Antonio raised its record to 1-4, while Oakland fell to 0-5. The game was played before 11,012 in Alamo Stadium.

Penn-White's run capped an eight-play, 42-yard drive.

Oakland took a 7-0 lead by marching 46 yards in seven plays on their first possession of the game. Quarterback Fred Besana threw a 19-yard pass to wide receiver Gordon Banks for the touchdown.

The Gunslingers gained a tie with 3:13 left in the first half. San Antonio quarterback Rick Neuheisel threw a 9-yard scoring pass to tight end Joey Hackett, wrapping up a 52-yard drive that took 12 plays.

Oakland kicker Kevin Shea then gave the Invaders a 10-7 lead midway through the third quarter with a 36-yard field goal.

Both teams missed field goal attempts in the second quarter. San Antonio's Nick Mike-Meyer missed a 37-yard attempt 4:28 into the period, and Shea missed a 51-yard attempt with two seconds remaining in the first half.

King Holds Four-Stroke Lead In LPGA Kemper

KAANAPALI, Hawaii (AP) — Betsy King of Limekiln, Pa., swept into a four-stroke lead after three rounds at the $200,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association's Kemper Open, shooting a 4-under-par 69 Saturday to bring her total to a 7-under-par 212.

In second was Tatsuko Ohsako of Osaka, Japan, who had led the first two rounds with a 4-under-69 on the first day and a par-73 on the second. Ohsako bogeyed once to finish Saturday's round with a 1-under-par 74.

Third place in the race for the $30,000 first prize was a tie between Pat Bradley of Marco Island, Fla., Sue Ertl of Sarasota, Fla., and Cathy Morse of Rochester, N.Y., with 2-under-par 217s and Cathy Morse.

King, 29, who is looking for her first tournament victory, got off to a slow start with a bogey on the par-3, 160-yard second hole. She recovered with birdies on the seventh, eighth and 10th holes. On the par-5, 471-yard 12th hole, King had an eagle to bring her score to 7-under. A bogey on the 434-yard, par-5 14th hole cost her a stroke, but she recovered to birdie the par-4, 340-yard 15th hole.

Ohsako, shooting steadily in the relatively light breezes at the Royal Kaanapali North Course, parred every hole until the par-4, 370-yard 16th.

Bradley went into Saturday's round with par-73 in the first round and a 72 in the second.

Ertl, who shot a par-73 the first day and a 2-over 75 on the second, scored a 4-under-par 69 Saturday.

"I've had an on again-off again year," Ertl said. "It's real nice to put it together. I believe in myself. I believe in my golf game."

Judy Clark of Jupiter, Fla., and Patty Sheehan of Tahoe Donner, Calif., shot the best scores in the tournament so far, 5-under par 68s. Sheehan's score stood at 219 with Clark at 221.

Blue Jays Romp Past Orioles

DUNEDIN, Fla. (AP) — The strong pitching of Jim Clancy and the hitting of Domaso Garcia led the Toronto Blue Jays to an 8-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles in an exhibition game Saturday.

Clancy went six innings and gave up only four singles and one run.

The Blue Jays scored a run in the first off Mike Flanagan, as Garcia doubled, went to third on a single by Lloyd Moseby and came home on Cliff Johnson's sacrifice fly.

Baltimore tied the score in the second on an RBI single by Todd Cruz.

The Blue Jays broke open the game with five runs off Flanagan in the third as Garcia doubled home Alfredo Griffin, then Dave Collins, who had singled, scored on a groundout by Moseby. Jesse Barfield's double scored Garcia, and Willie Upshaw cracked a two-run homer.

The Blue Jays added their final runs in the eighth on Buck Martinez' two-run single.

The Blue Mays have a 10-9 exhibition record, while the Orioles are 13-7.

Astros.....3
Twins.....2

ORLANDO, Fla. — Jerry Mumphrey's two-run homer in the sixth inning gave the Houston Astros a 3-2 exhibition victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

Mumphrey's homer, his first of the spring and only the third by a Houston player, came off loser Larry Pashnick and scored Dickie Thon, who had reached base on shortstop Lenny Faedo's error.

Mumphrey also drove in the Astros' other run with a first-inning single off John Butcher.

Houston starting pitcher Mike Scott, who allowed five hits and two runs in six innings, was the winner1. The Astros now have a preseason record of 13-7.

Kent Hrbek had two hits and drove in a run for Minnesota, 8-10.

Pirates.....6
Red Sox.....5

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Hedi Vargas drove in the game-winning run with a sacrifice fly in the bottom of the seventh inning to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 6-5 exhibition victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

Vargas' sacrifice fly drove in Marvell Wynne, who had reached when he was hit by a pitch and went to second on a ground out. Wynne took third on on a bunt single by Jim Morrison, his eighth straight hit in three games.

Boston took 4-0 lead in the third inning on a grand slam home run by Jim Rice. The Pirates went ahead 5-4 in the fifth inning as Jason Thompson had a three-run home run and Johnny Ray and Bill Madlock had run-scoring singles.

The Red Sox tied the game in the seventh on a solo home run by Reid Nichols.

Don Robinson was the winning pitcher after giving up two hits and one run in three relief innings. Roger Clemens took the loss. He gave up eight hits and six runs in three innings of relief.

Dodgers.....3
Tigers.....2

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — A single and a stolen base by Rafael Landestoy keyed a three-run eighth-inning for Los Angeles, and Burt Hooten closed out the game with four innings of one-hit relief as the Dodgers beat the Detroit Tigers 3-2 in an exhibition game Saturday.

Greg Brock singled to start the Los Angeles eighth, and Jose Gonzalez, running for him, went to third on a single by German Rivera. Gonzalez scored on a sacrifice fly by Jack Fimple, and Rivera came home on an RBI single by Landestoy.

Landestoy stole second and scored the winning run when Terry Whitfield's grounder went through Tom Brookens' legs at second for an error.

The Tigers scored both their runs in the third off Los Angeles starter Alejandro Pena. Dwight Lowry and Alan Trammell singled and both scored on Darrell Evans' double.

Dave Gumpert, the fourth of five Tigers' pitchers, was the loser. Hooton, the winner, struck out four in four innings.

The victory improved the Dodgers' spring record to 8-10, while the Tigers slipped to 7-13.

Reds.....4
White Sox.....2

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Dan Driessen and Brad Gulden drove in two runs apiece Saturday to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 4-2 spring training victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Cincinnati improved to 10-8 while Chicago slid to 12-9 in exhibition play.

Gulden put Cincinnati ahead with an RBI single in the first inning off struggling starter Lamarr Hoyt, 0-4, who gave up all four runs while working six innings. Gulden's single drove in Eddie Milner, who had singled and stole second.

Chicago tied it in the second against starter Joe Price, 1-2, as Marc Hill walked, took second on Hoyt's sacrifice and scored on Rudy Law's single.

Cincinnati scored twice in the third. Milner singled, was sacrificed to second by Gary Redus, and scored on Driessen's single. Driessen took third on Dave Parker's single and came home when Gulden hit into a force out at second.

Scott Fletcher walked, stole second and scored on Mike Sodders' broken-bat single for Chicago in the fifth to make the score 3-2, but Redus doubled and scored on Driessen's single in the bottom of the inning.

Phils.....7
Cardinals.....3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Mike Schmidt slugged a three-run homer and Bo Diaz slammed a two-run blast, powering the Philadelphia Phillies to a 7-3 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals in exhibition baseball SAturday.

Diaz's homer provided Philadelphia a 2-0 lead in the second innings. The Phillies added a run in the fourth on an RBI double by pitcher John Denny and made it 7-0 with four unearned runs in the sixth.

A error by St. Louis third baseman Ken Oberkfell triggered the rally, which was capped by Schmidt's home run over the right field wall off Cards reliever Bruce Sutter.

Earlier in the same inning, Len Matuszek singled home a run. Denny, who pitched five hitless innings at the start, was the winning pitcher despite allowing St. Louis three runs in the sixth, his final inning.

Willie McGee doubled home a run and George Hendrick followed with a two-run single for the Cards before Jay Tibbs and Al Holland checked the Cards over the final three innings.

Dave LaPoint absorbed the loss for St. Louis, 4-13, as Philadelphia improved its spring training record to 9-12.

Expos.....4
Royals.....0

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Terry Francona tripled in two of the Expos' four unearned runs in the sixth inning as Montreal blanked the Kansas City Royals 4-0 in an exhibition game Saturday.

Bryan Little started the rally against losing pitcher Joe Beckwith with a one-out single and advanced to third base on a single by Tim Raines.

Little scored and Raines advanced to third when Royals first baseman Steve Balboni threw wild in an attempt to gun down the Expos' infielder at the plate. Mike Stenhouse, who had grounded to Balboni on the play, reached first on a fielder's choice.

Giants.....4
Cubs.....1

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Dave Bergman had two singles and drove in a run in a farewell performance with the San Francisco Giants, who announced a trade of the veteran first baseman after a 4-1 exhibition baseball victory over the Chicago Cubs Saturday.

Five San Francisco pitchers combined on a four-hitter. Leon Durham hit an inside-the-park homer in the ninth inning for the only Chicago run.

The Giants fielded split squads Saturday, with another group beating the Seattle Mariners.

Peterson, Johnson Lift Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Ohio University's Bobcats have got to wonder when the law of averages is going to catch up with them and the East Carolina Pirates.

Friday afternoon, Jimbo Peterson hurled a five-hitter and Winfred Johnson cracked a two-run homer highlighting an 8-1 Pirate victory over the Bobcats. The win gave East Carolina a sweep of the three game series for 1984, and ran their consecutive win streak over the 'Cats to nine in a row since the two began playing each other. Ohio has yet to claim a victory in the series.

"Today was pretty much of a fun game. We got a good pitching job from Jimbo, even though he really didn't have his best stuff. And we hit the ball well and fielded well, too. I'm glad to get it," Coach Hal Baird said.

The Pirates missed out on only a few of their scoring opportunities, putting the game away in the second inning, scoring three times.

Peterson, who went the distance for his fourth win against no losses, gave up the first hit in the third and never allowed more than one per inning. Four times, Ohio pushed men as far as second base, but Peterson kept them off balance except for the seventh inning when the lone Bobcat run scored.

Rick Korkate led off that frame with a double to left and Paris Yoho came on to run for him. He advanced to third on an out and just did reach the plate ahead of Chris Bradberry's throw on a sacrifice fly to left by Brian Ritter.

The Pirates got all they needed in the third. David Wells walked with one down and Bradberry singled to center, moving to second when the ball was bobbled in the outfield. Mike Williams got the first of two hits with a single to right scoring Wells. Ricky Nichols walked and Jim Riley grounded into a fielder's choice, scoring Bradberry. Nichols was safe at second, however, when the fielder pulled his foot off the bag too early. Steve Sides then grouned to the infield, scoring Williams with the finah run of the frame.

East Carolina came up with one in the third. Todd Evans doubled to right and took third on an out. He scored on Wells' single.

The Pirates ran the lead to 6-0 with two more in the fourth. Williams doubled to left and scored on Nichols' single to center. Nichols moved up on an out and scored on a hit by Sides.

The final two came in the seventh. Evans singled and Johnson followed with his home run to center.

Williams, Wells and Evans each collected two hits on the day, while Korkate picked up two hits for the Bobcats.

The win boosted the ECU record to 14-4 on the year, while Ohio leaves with a 3-7 mark.

Following an ECAC-South doubleheader against American University on Saturday, the Pirates will play host to the University of Richmond today at 1 p.m.

Godley Ices GC For Jaguar Win

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central's Billy Godley threw a three-hitter and struck out seven batters as the Jaguars survived a 1-0 pitching duel against Greene Central Friday in Eastern Carolina 3-A high school baseball action.

In fact, Greene Central hit the ball out of the infield just three times in the contest, with one of those a pop fly to center.

Press Harris ripped a two-out triple in the second inning for the Rams' first hit of the day, but Godley got Jerome Flowers to tap back to the mound for the final out. Greene Central got runners as far as second base just three times, and only in the sixth did they manage a pair of runners at the same time as Godley gave up two walks in seven innings.

Meanwhile, Murphy was having what would usually be a standout performance on the mound, allowing five hits, four walks and striking out five.

"When you've got a good pitcher on the mound who's hitting the corners, it's tough to get the hits," Greene Central Coach James Fulghum said. "After the first inning, I felt like our pitcher (Rusty Murphy) settled down and threw a good ballgame. We just weren't able to score any runs."

Godley, who improved his record to 2-0 on the season, was the only batter in the game with two hits — both to the infield.

"We've been swinging the bats well," Farmville Coach Bill Davis said. "Murphy pitched well for Greene Central, but I thought we would hit the ball better. I thought it was a well-played game, though, for both teams."

Nat Norris, who stole a pair of bases in the game, scored the game's only run in the first inning. Norris led off with a base on balls and stole second. Randy Daniels walked, and Godley slapped an infield single which went off the tip of Murphy's glove to load the bases.

Joey Steppe struck out, but Taylor Walston followed with a fielder's choice to drive in the game winning run. After a walk to Mark Wooten to reload the bases with two out, Murphy got Hugh Moore to ground out to the shortstop to get out of the inning.

"We knew we couldn't give up many runs," Fulghum said. "But if you don't score any yourself, you sure can't win. We've been facing good pitching the last two games. When Godley's on the mound, Farmville Central is going to be tough."

The only other time the Jaguars threatened was in the third, when Godley opened with his second infield single and stole second. After one out, Godley moved to third on a fielder's choice by Walston. But a pop fly to left by Wooten ended the rally.

Farmville Central, now 4-0-1 on the season, travels to SouthWest Edgecombe Tuesday, while Greene Central visits North Lenoir.

Reid Ross Takes Title

ELON COLLEGE (AP) — Monique Pompili scored 12 points and two other players added 10 points each to spark Fayetteville Reid Ross to the 4-A girls state basketball championship with a 45-39 victory over Greensboro Smith on Friday night.

Pompili's follow shot early in the opening period gave the Cougars a 6-5 lead, which they never relinquished. Reid Ross went up 40-27 with less than four minutes left before the Eagles rallied in the final minutes.

Reid Ross, which ended the season at 27-3, led 26-19 at the half and upped its lead to 36-25 near the end of the third period. Greensboro Smith managed to cut the deficit to 42-37 in the final period, but a missed shot and free throw kept the Eagles from slicing the lead further.

Lisa Burton and Tressa Reese each scored 10 points for Reid Ross.

FAYETTEVILLE ROSS (45) — Bruton 10, Hollins 0, Krause 7, Pompili 12, Reese 10, Walker 2, Grant 4.
SMITH (39) — Trapp 9, Solomon 6, Nance 13, Rigley 3, Dillon 8.
Halftime: Ross, 26-19.

Bullock Lifts Hobbton

GREENSBORO (AP) — Phillip Bullock's short jumper with 30 seconds remaining helped lift Hobbton to the 2-A high school state boys basketball title with a 73-68 victory over West Davidson Friday night.

Bullock maneuvered inside for a bucket to give the Wildcats a 69-68 lead, and Hobbton hit four straight free throws to seal the victory and end the Dragons' 22-game winning streak.

West Davidson stretched a 37-29 halftime lead to 48-36 midway through the third period before the Wildcats, which finished 20-8, scored eight straight to cut the deficit to 53-50 at the end of the quarter.

The Wildcats grabbed a 54-53 lead on David Chestnutt's layup with 7:16 left in the final period, but the Dragons, 25-7, regained the lead at 58-56 two minutes later.

The lead then seesawed back and forth before Bullock's bucket.

Chestnutt led the Wildcats with 18 points. Clarence Underwood scored 17 points while Bullock chipped in 15 and Ira Blue added 12.

Stan Lanier led West Davidson with 24 points while his brother, Stewart, added 15, despite playing with a broken wrist.

HOBBTON (73) — Chestnutt 7-22 4-6 18; Underwood 7-18 3-6 17; Blue 6-12 0-1 12; Lee 0-1 7-11 7; Bullock 7-10 1-2 15; Darden 2-5 0-1 4. 29-68 15-27 73.

Pryor Boosts Edneyville

GREENSBORO (AP) — Keith Pryor scored 30 points and grabbed 7 rebounds to lead Edneyville to the 1-A boys high school basketball championship over Cape Hatteras 75-50 on Friday night.

The Yellow Jackets, who finished the season at 26-3, won its first state championship. It was also the first 1-A title for a western North Carolina school since the NCHSAA adopted the four-classification format in 1960.

Despite Pryor hitting only one of seven field goals in the first period, Edneyville led 16-10. Pryor hit three straight jumpers in the second period and finished the half with 14 points. But, Cape Hatteras, the smallest public high school in North Carolina, only trailed at the half 24-22.

Pryor picked up his third foul midway through the third period, but Mark Dalton and Mark Splawn helped keep the Yellow Jackets stretch their lead to 41-31 midway through the fourth period.

Splawn scored 18 points to join Pryor in double-figures.

The Hurricanes, 27-4, were led by William Jones' 15 points. Joey Hammond chipped in 11 points.

Deacs, Cougs Meet In Midwest Final

ST. LOUIS (AP) — DePaul is out, Wake Forst is in and Houston's in the driver's seat for a run at its third straight NCAA Midwest Regional basketball title.

A throng of 20,143 looked on sympathetically as Ray Meyer, the Grand Old Man of the college game, watched his young DePaul team stumble at the finish Friday night. The Blue Demons lost 73-71 in overtime to Wake Forest after Houston triumphed 78-71 over Memphis State.

"Basketball is always going to be my love. The game has given so much to me and my family," said Meyer, who is planning next year to become a DePaul fund-raiser.

"I will look forward in my declining years to giving something back," the 70-year-old coach said. "Basketball is at its peak. I don't expect basketball to be greater than it is right now."

The team on the court Meyer considered "special" gave no indication the end was near when it grasped an 65-57 lead with 3:07 left.

Then misplay begat misplay. Delaney Rudd's shot from the corner, a slam by Kenny Green and Anthony Teachey's rebound effort brought Wake Forest back.

Rudd matched two foul shots by Kenny Patterson with 1:04 to play, making it 67-65, and cooly threw in a 25-footer at the buzzer to send it into overtime tied at 71.

Wake Forest spread its offense in the extra session, first taking the lead and then falling behind 71-69. After Danny Young tied for the Demon Deacons with 1:12 left, he won it at the final buzzer with a driving layup.

"I gave it to Delaney," said Young of his winning shot, a layup which followed a missed free throw by Patterson.

"I told him to shoot, but he said, 'We've got time.' " the Wake Forest senior guard said. "I was going to take a jump shot. I was hoping maybe I'd get fouled."

Carl Tacy, the Demon Deacons' coach, said his confidence grew following Rudd's tying shot.

"They've done this so many times," he said, referring to Wake Forest's six victories in seven overtime tests. "What a good way to end the game."

Until Rudd and Young came through with their clutch shots, the burly Teachey was forced to play the role of the Demon Deacons mainstay.

His 6-foot-9 presence in the lane was altering the course of many DePaul shots. The Blue Demons shot only 38.7 percent after leading 39-35 the half. But their misplays hurt more.

Particularly damaging was a lob pass by Patterson for Tyrone Corbin which went out of bounds ahead of Rudd's pivotal shot.

"We made a lot of mistakes that we shouldn't have. We had the game and made a bad pass," Corbin said.

"I felt very confident that we were going to win. When I saw the last shot go in, it made me feel bad."

Tacy admitted he had mixed feelings about closing the curtain on Meyer's illustrious career.

"He's a great coach. If we weren't playing him, I'd like to have seen him go all the way," the Wake Forest mentor said. "When the ball's tossed up, it's a different feeling."

In the opener, Houston overcame a 20-19 edge by Memphis State with a run of 10 points and clung to a 41-40 lead at halftime.

Freshman William Bedford's two baskets gave the losing Tigers their last advantages in the early minutes of the closing period. Afterward, Akeem Olajuwon and Michael Young moved the Cougars away.

Houston Coach Guy V. Lewis said he resurrected a defense he had concocted nearlytwo decades earlier in putting the brakes on Memphis State star Keith Lee.

"It's a 1-3-1, but it's sort of a crazy 1-3-1," the Cougars' coach said. "I used it first in Valparaiso, Chile when we were on tour. We're probably the only ones that use it."

Olajuwon had 25 points, pulled down 13 rebounds and blocked four shots for Houston, which shot 61 percent.

Alvin Franklin popped in 12 of his 24 points for the Cougars in the opening 10 minutes. Bedford wound up with 21 points for Memphis State, which lost three starters on fouls.

Kenny Green had 25 points and 13 rebownds for Wake Forest, which will take a 23-8 record up against Houston, 30-4, in Sunday's final.

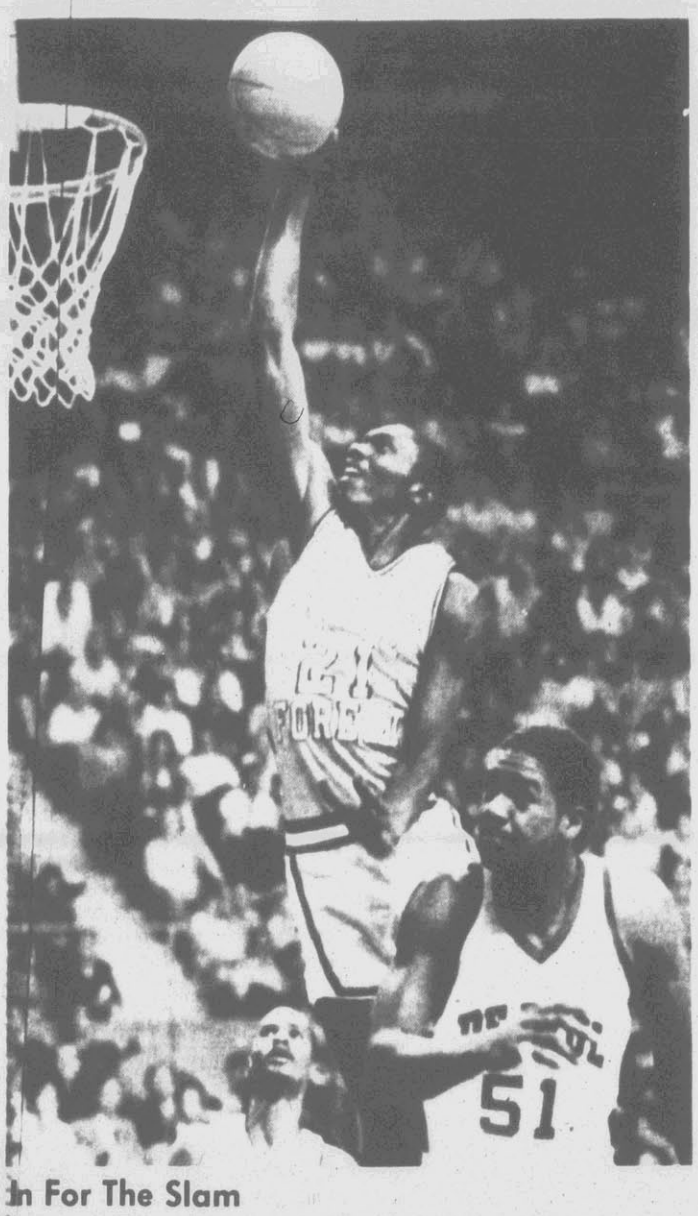

"I haven't really had time to think about it but we look forward to it," said Tacy. "It will be difficult for us to match up in size, but we've had that problem before."

In For The Slam

Meyer's Final Game 'Not A Pretty Sight'

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The last few minutes of Ray Meyer's 42 years were not a pretty sight. His DePaul Blue Demons knew it.

More than 20,000 who squeezed into The Arena for a glimpse of basketball history knew it.

And with the same simple honesty which has characterized the remarkable career of a remarkable man, he at once admitted it.

"We panicked at the end," said the 70-year-old coaching legend who will coach no more. "That's the story of this game."

Meyer's dream of winning the collegiate championship at the end of his 42-year career was shattered Friday night in a 73-71 overtime loss to a gritty team from Wake Forest.

The semifinal match of the NCAA Midwest Regional probably should never have gone into overtime. The Blue Demons, although playing raggedly most of the night, held a six-point lead with 2:13 to go.

But some ill-advised passing and a couple of careless turnovers let the Deacons tie it at 67-67 on Delaney Rudd's 20-footer at the buzzer.

It was the same story in the overtime. The score was knotted at 71 when Wake Forest's Danny Young split the defense and drove the lane for the winning layup at the buzzer.

The game and the era were over. The Meyer record: 724-354. Only four coaches ever won more games than he.

"It wasn't the way I planned to end my career," Meyer said. "I started it with a win. But now I end up with a loss."

As always, he was gracious in defeat.

"We didn't play as well at the end of the game as we had been all year, but I want to congratulate Wake Forest and hand it to them," he said. "Normally, we don't play this poorly, but that's basketball. I congratulate Wake Forest and their coach, Carl Tacy, and I wish them well in the tournament."

The humility and integrity of Meyer and his DePaul teams had endeared him to basketball fans everywhere. The recruiting scandals which rip ugly scars across the face of many college programs never touched his institution.

Throughout his long reign, there was never one hint of one suggestion of one bit of wrongdoing at the Catholic school in Chicago.

As he prepared to turn the job over to his assistant coach and son, Joey Meyer, a whole nation began pulling for the grandfatherly coach with the gap-toothed smile. The record crowd of 20,143 who packed the 55-year-old St. Louis Arena stood and cheered when the Blue Demons jumped out to a nine-point lead in the first half.

One of Meyer's first DePaul teams, the 1945 Blue Demons featuring George Mikan, won the National Invitation Tournament when it was considered the most prestigeous postseason college basketball prize. But the NCAA championship was to forever elude him.

"I was thinking as I walked off the floor that this will be the last time," he said with a smile. "But basketball is so special to me that I'll be a spectator in the tournament next year."

Perhaps the Blue Demons' fatal collapse at the hands of the tenacious Deacons should not have been surprising. Meyer had suggested all along that their 27-2 record may be deceptive.

"This team has already done more than I could have expected," he had said the day before.

"The team I left in the lockerroom will always be special to me," he said Friday night. "I'm sorry we didn't win. But I'm happy for the year they gave me. I'm not sorry for myself, but for the players."

Perez Back In Jail

SANTIAGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — For a little while, it looked like Pascual Perez would be in an Atlanta Braves uniform before opening day. Now, no one is sure when he might be free to resume his major league career.

"I'm ready to win 20 games or more for the Braves. I'm not going to disappoint my fans, my teammates on the Braves, and much less the Dominican people who have supported me through this difficult time," Perez said Friday after being convicted on a reduced charge of cocaine possession, fined $1,000 and ordered released from prison.

But, an appeal of the criminal court decision was immediately entered by District Attorney Luis Coss and, under Dominican law, Perez was sent back to jail.

"People in Atlanta and the Dominican Republic can have confidence in me, because I'm going to play the role that everyone expects," Perez said after the trial. But it was not known when the appeal would be heard by the Dominican Republic Supreme Court and the 24-year-old right-handed ace of the Braves' staff could be jailed past the major league opening day of April 2.

Perez also faces a possible suspension by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Meyer Thinks Of Game

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

When it was over, when 42 years of recruiting, game plans and coaching were behind him, Ray Meyer wasn't thinking of himself. He was thinking about his players, his replacement and his sport.

"Basketball is a part of me and will always be a part of me," Meyer said after his fourth-ranked DePaul Blue Demons were tied at the buzzer to end regulation time, then lost 73-71 to No. 19 Wake Forest on Danny Young's driving basket at the end of overtime in the NCAA Midwest Regional semifinals. "I'm sorry we didn't win. I'm not sorry for myself. I'm sorry for the players."

Meyer, 70, now hands over the Blue Demons' coaching duties to son Joey.

"I hope they don't expect too much of him," said the man they call simply "Coach," who compiled a 724-354 career record. "This ballclub has to improve and get better. I'll be in the stands pulling for them, just as I've been pulling for them on the bench."

Meyer will be in the stands without an NCAA title partly because his latest team could not protect a lead. Ahead by six points in the final two minutes, despite having four starters shackled with four fouls through the last seven minutes of regulation, the Blue Demons got sloppy.

They had the ball with less than 20 seconds to go, butfreshman Dallas Comegys hurled a cross-court pass in the direction of Tyrone Corbin, who saved the ball from going out of bounds but knocked it to Wake Forest's Kenny Green.As the final seconds ticked off, Green passed to Delaney Rudd, whose 20-footer at the buzzer tied it 67-67.

With the game tied 71-71 and 19 seconds to go in overtime, Rudd fouled DePaul's Kenny Patterson, who missed the front end of the one-and-one. Wake Forest got the rebound, delayed and then Young drove in for the decisive basket.

"We panicked at the end. That's the story of the game," Meyer said. "We win with class and we lose with class. We'll walk out of here with our heads high. Maybe we didn't play our best, but we tried."

Wake Forest was at its best in the frantic final moments of regulation and overtime before a St. Louis Arena record crowd of 20,143.

"They've done this so many times," Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy said of his 23-8 Demon Deacons, who have won six times in seven overtime contests. "I didn't think we played all that well through the game. We were a little bit tentative off the boards."

But they did what was needed to advance to Sunday's Midwest finals against No. 5 Houston, which dumped Memphis State 78-71. And to ring down the curtain on Meyer's career.

"It's starting to sink in right now," Meyer said. "It wasn't the way I planned to end my career."

In the West Regional at Los Angeles, No. 2 Georgetown beat No. 13 Nevada-Las Vegas and will face unheralded Dayton, a 64-58 victor over No. 15 Washington, on Sunday.

Today, it was Virginia, 20-11, against 22-8 Indiana for the East title at Atlanta, and No. 3 Kentucky hosting No. 6 Illinois for the Mideast crown.

The Final Four will be staged next weekend in Seattle.

Houston, 30-5, moved a step closer to making the national finals for the third straight year as Akeem Olajuwon scored 25 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and blocked four shots. The champions of the Southwest Conference also held All-American forward Keith Lee to four points in the second half.

Alvin Franklin added 24 points for Houston, while Memphis State was paced by freshman 7-footer William Bedford, who had 21 points before fouling out.

"It seemed like we'd get a lead and it would vanish," Houston Coach Guy Lewis said. "It was that way throughout until the end. We'd score at will at one end of the court and they'd score at will at the other."

Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk wondered about the officiating. His Tigers drew 25 fouls and had three starters foul out, while Houston collected only 11 fouls.

"It's hard for me to conceive that the most physical team in the country could go more than 11 minutes without a foul," Kirk said. "But Houston is an excellent team and they can win it all."

For Georgetown, center Patrick Ewing scored 16 points and grabbed 15 rebounds and Michael Jackson hit all 12 of his free throws. Georgetown, 31-3, broke the game open at the outset of the second half with a 10-2 run.

"I'm not ready to go home yet," Ewing said. "We set a goal at the beginning of the season to win the national championship, and that's what we're here to do."

Dayton, 21-10 and on its own shocking rush for the Final Four, ended Washington's hopes of qualifying for the finals in its hometown.

Roosevelt Chapman had 22 points and the Flyers, with no starter taller than 6-7, broke the game open with an 11-1 surge in a 7:49 span of the second half.

Edwards' Two-Hitter Boosts Conley Victory Over Kinston

KINSTON — Darryl Edwards held Kinston to only two hits as D.H. Conley squeezed out a 2-0 baseball victory over the Vikings Friday afternoon.

Edwards struck out 11 and walked just one in pitching the shutout for Conley.

Conley scored both of its runs in the third inning. With one away, Steve Mills walked and Fred Bryant reached on an error. Chria Via beat out an infield grounder for a hit, loading the bases. Calvin Phillips then singled, driving in both Mills and Bryant.

Via finished the game with two hits to lead Conley at the plate.

Now 3-3 overall, the Vikings are idle until Friday when they travel to Farmville Central.

TARBORO — Williamston's Tommy Wynne limited Tarboro to only two hits as the Tigers gained a 2-0 Northeastern Conference baseball victory over the Vikings Friday.

Wynne, in going the distance, walked but one and struck out six in the shutout.

Williamston got all it needed in the third inning as James Ward singled, stole second and scored on Les Keel's fly that was errored.

Ward came around again in the fifth with an insurance run. He doubled, was awarded third on interference and scored on Glenn Hardison's hit.

Ward was the game's lone player with two hits.

Now 5-0, Williamston plays host to Murfreesboro in a non-conference game Wednesday.

Wilmington.....8
Greenville.....5

WILMINGTON — Wilmington Christian Academy took the lead in the first inning and held off a Greenville Christian rally in the final frame for an 8-5 victory over the Knights Friday.

Greenville pushed over a run in the top of the first, but didn't score again until the seventh when it pushed over four runs to cut the margin to three.

In the meantime, Wilmington scored three in the bottom of the first and added one in the second.

In the fourth Wilmington got what proved to be the difference. Steve Dover and Eddie Blake both walked, coming around to score when Tom Lewis' fly to the outfield was errored. Jim Reagan then grounded out, with Lewis scoring on the play.

That made it 7-1 and Wilmington added an insurance run in the sixth.

Blake led the Wilmington hitting with two, while Darren O'Brian had three, one a triple, for GCA.

The Knights, now 1-1, play host to Wilson Christian on Friday.

Washington.....12
Plymouth.....4

PLYMOUTH — Washington High School's Sam Stephenson scattered six hits and the Pam Pack romped to a 12-4 Northeastern Conference baseball victory over Plymouth Friday afternoon.

The Pack took a 1-0 lead in the first, then exploded for nine runs in the second to put the game on ice. Washington added one each in the sixth and seventh innings. Plymouth came up with one in the second, two in the sixth and one in the seventh.

Stevenson, in going the distance, walked four and struck out 11. Only two of the runs against him were earned.

John High led the Washington hitting with three, while Joe Ange and Dick Cherry each had two. John Mobley drove in three runs with a bases loaded double and Brian Williaston had three rbi's on a sacrifice fly and a single.

Steve Hart led Plymouth with three hits, half his team's total.

Washington is now 3-0 overall and 2-0 in league play. The Pam Pack hosts Ahoskie on Tuesday.

PIKEVILLE — John Herring cracked a grand slam homer to cap a 17-run explosion by C.B. Aycock in the fourth inning and John Thomas fired a two hitter as the Falcons blasted North Pitt 28-0 Friday in Eastern Carolina 3-A Conference baseball action.

Thomas recorded the win on the mound for Aycock, with Michael Bartlett closing out the abbreviated contest in the fourth.

Tommy Dunn led the Falcons with six hits in as many trips to the plate, including a pair of triples and three runs batted in. Paul Summerlin knocked in five runs with a homer, a triple and a double. Johnny Carr went 4-4 at the plate with a double and a homer for four RBI, while Jesse Woodard needed three hits to drive in four runs. Jeff Lynch followed with three hits and a pair of RBI.

C.B. Aycock improved its record to 3-1 overall and 1-0 in the conference. North Pitt entertains Southern Nash Tuesday.

AHOSKIE — Stacy Wallace rapped four hits and scored four runs to lead Roanoke to an 18-5 pounding of Ahoskie Friday in Northeastern 3-A Conference high school baseball action.

Richard Wilson pitched through six innings for the Redskins to pick up the victory, while Steve Day came on in the final frame to close out the game.

Charles James went 2-2 at the plate for Roanoke with a double, while Greg Casper had a pair of hits and Sammy Respess was 2-3.

"We just had our hitting shoes on yesterday," Roanoke Coach Nolan Respess said after his team swatted 17 hits. "Our pitching wasn't real good, but we played pretty good defense. If we get some pitching, we'll be all right.

"I knew we were going to be a good hitting team, but we haven't been able to take batting practice until Thursday. We've either been playing or the weather's been bad."

Perez Jailed...

"With the decision, we are now in position to complete our own investigation," a baseball spokesman said before the appeal was announced. "As to his reporting, we are currently evaluating that."

There was no indication when the commissioner would make a decision on Perez's baseball future.

"We've been proceeding on the assumption that we probably or possibly would not have Pascual Perez this year. And at no point did we make any determination that we would make any trade to come up with another pitcher, because we didn't want to break up our club," Braves General Manager John Mullen said from West Palm Beach, Fla., where the team is stationed for spring training.

"We'll just have to see what happens," Mullen said after learning of the appeal from The Associated Press.

Braves representatives monitoring Friday's trial said Perez had been issued a visa before he was arrested and was to leave for their Florida training camp on Tuesday. With the prosecution appeal pending, he will not be permitted to leave the Dominican Republic even if he should be released from prison.

It could not be learned immediately if the U.S. consul in Santiago would revoke the visa because of the conviction, the equivalent of a misdemeanor.

Perez was arrested Jan. 9 outside a Santiago bar with one-half gram of cocaine in his wallet. He was charged with drug trafficking because of the quantity, and has been held without bail at the Fort San Luis prison.

After hearing testimony Friday in a packed criminal courtroom, Judge Fanny Cervantes de Bales reduced the charge against Perez to simple possession. The reduction removed the conviction from the criminal to the correctional category, which carries no jail sentence.

The prosecution had asked for the minimum sentence of two years imprisonment and a $500 fine on the trafficking charge.

Cervantes based her decision on defense arguments showing procedural violations in Perez's indictment. The envelope of cocaine presented in evidence was unsealed, unlabeled and had remained in the possession of the arresting officer.Dominican law requires that the evidence be placed in the custody of the courts.

Spectators packing the courtroom burst into applauseand cheered when the court clerk read the verdict. An enormous crowd had gathered outside the court early Friday to cheer Perez as he was escorted by police from the nearby prison.

Perez told the court the envelope had been given to him by an unidentified woman in Atlanta for delivery to a third party, and that he had never bothered to open it to see what it was.

Perez also told the court he had been pressured into signing a confession by police and the district attorney's promise of a deal. He said police had him stripped and questioned him while naked, a charge corroborated in court by police witnesses.

Thousands of people jammed the street behind the police patrol car that returned Perez to the prison after the trial. The huge crowd gathered outside the prison gates shouting encouragement and applauding.

N. Iredell Tops SW Edgecombe

ELON COLLEGE (AP) — Amy Cartner scored 21 points and hit both ends of a one-and-one with 17 seconds left to propel North Iredell to a 50-47 victory over SouthWest Edgecombe and the 3-A girls basketball championship on Friday night.

The Raiderettes, who finished the season at 28-2, trailed SouthWest 47-44 with 2:13 left but consecutive baskets by Teresa Smyre and Cherie Foster put North Iredell up 48-47 with 1:10 to go.

The teams exchanged baskets in the final minute before Cartner hit the two free throws.

The Lady Cougars led 13-7 at the end of the first quarter and 22-17 at halftime before Tina Tolliver's three-point play put North Iredell into the lead 28-26 at the 5:11 mark of the third quarter.

The Lady Cougars, 26-5, regained the lead at 36-30 late in the third quarter before having its lead cut to 42-40 with 4:43 left.

Cartner led the Raiderettes with 21 points, while Smyre added 12.

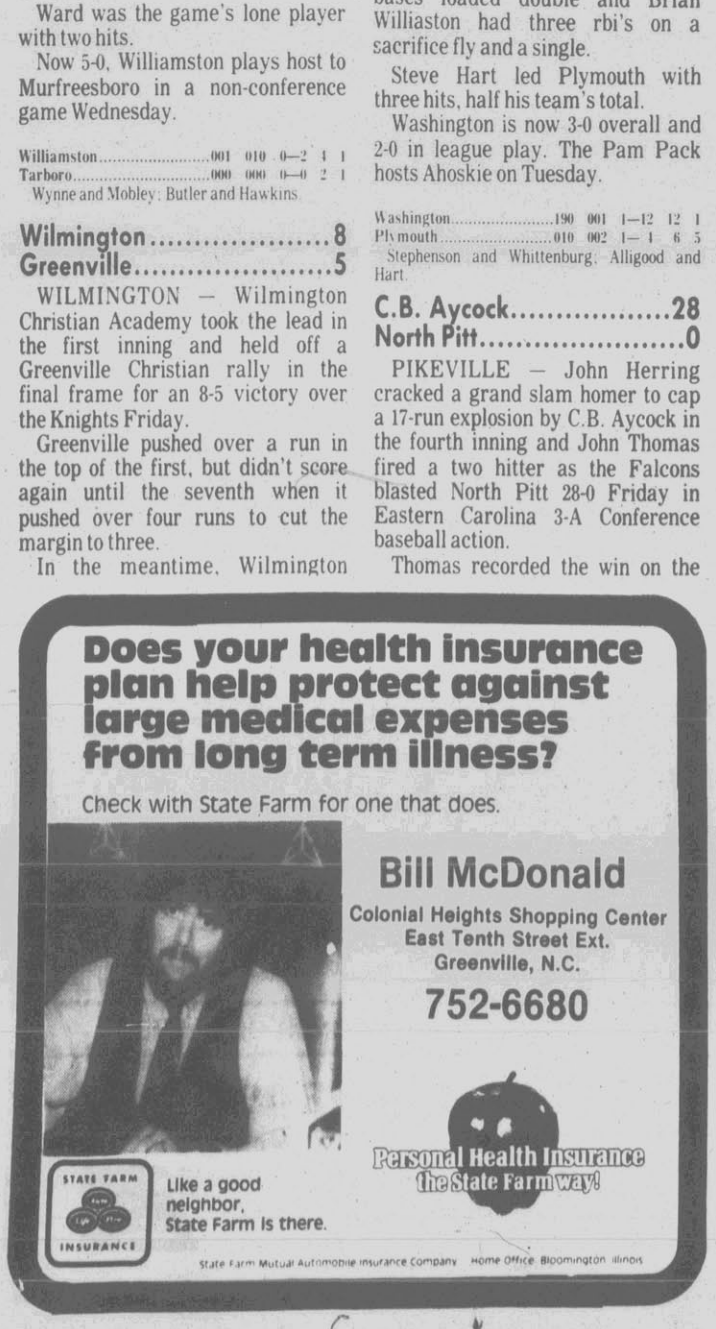

Phyllis Gorham scored a game-high 30 points for the Lady Cougars. Her twin sister, Pam, chipped in with 11.

Irish 'Going To New York' After Win Over Pittsburgh

By The Associated Press

"We're going to New York," said Tom Sluby, who led Notre Dame with 18 points in a 72-64 victory over Pittsburgh in the quarterfinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

"We're going to New York," echoed Charlie Moir, who coached Virginia Tech to a 72-68 triumph over Tennessee in Friday night's other quarterfinal, a game marked by eight ties and 13 lead changes.

Virginia Tech-Michigan and Notre Dame-Southwestern Louisiana will all be in the Big Apple on Monday night for the semifinals of the 47th NIT, the nation's oldest postseason basketball tournament. On Thursday night, Michigan edged Xavier of Ohio 63-62, while Southwestern Louisiana trounced Santa Clara 97-76.

Point guard Joe Howard, a two-sport star who has been Notre Dame's leader in reception yardage in each of the last three football seasons, hit a driving layup and added four key free throws as the Irish broke open a tight game on Pitt's court in the final three minutes.

Tim Kempton scored on a short-range shot before Howard broke free for his layup with 2:41 remaining to give the Irish to a 60-56 lead. After Pitt's Clyde Vaughan made two free throws, Notre Dame's Scott Hicks worked free for a back-door layup, starting an eight-point run that built the lead to 68-58.

Sluby fell two points short of 20, losing a pair of free throws on teammates' lane violations. Howard added 14 points and 6-foot-10 center Tim Kempton had 13. Vaughan, the leading scorer in Pitt history, topped the Panthers with 20 and closed his career with 2,011.

"We're going to New York. We're looking forward to that because they love us there," said Sluby.

Coach Digger Phelps echoed Sluby.

"They said we didn't have a chance to get to the NIT's final four, they said we didn't have a chance to win 20 games, they said we'd lose our first (NIT) game," Phelps said. "Well, we're going to New York."

At Blacksburg, Va., Dell Curry scored 27 points to lead Virginia Tech over Tennessee. The Hokies trailed 54-49 with 12:17 remaining, but tied the score 56-56 with 9:50 to go and took the lead for good at 64-62 with 6:14 left on two free throws by Bobby Beecher following a technical foul on the Tennessee bench.

Perry Young, who scored 17 points, sealed the victory on a driving jump shot with 54 seconds left. Rob Jones had 17 points and Willie Burton 16 for Tennessee.

"We're going to New York to have fun, but it's a fact that you have more fun when you win," said Moir. "That is our goal – to win the NIT, but we know we must play extremely well in order to do that."

Dawkins Leads Nets To Victory

By The Associated Press

Robert Parish was out . . . and Darryl Dawkins was in.

"A big difference tonight was the fact that Parish wasn't in there," said New Jersey Coach Stan Albeck after Friday night's 101-97 National Basketball Association victory over the Boston Celtics. "There's no question the game would have been different with him there."

With the Boston center out of the game with an ankle injury, Dawkins scored 33 points, including the Nets' last 15.

"He's always played well against us, with Robert or without Robert," said Boston's Cedric Maxwell about Dawkins. "When he's going the way he was going, there's not too many people in the league who can stop him."

In other NBA action, it was Philadelphia 100, Cleveland 95; Indiana 119, Chicago 112; Dallas 116, Houston 104; Golden State 115, Utah 104; Denver 126, Kansas City 116; Portland 124, Phoenix 98; Detroit 121, Los Angeles 118, and San Diego 108, Seattle 102.

After dropping behind 54-41, the Nets outscored the Celtics 35-13 to move in front 76-67 late in the third period. The Nets held their lead throughout the rest of the game as Dawkins continued to hit game-saving shots down the stretch.

Larry Bird, who paced the Boston comeback in the late going, scored 32 points for the Celtics.

"Dawkins was a hot man and they kept going to him," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones. "You like to see him take those fallaway jumpers, but tonight they kept going in."

76ers 100, Cavaliers 95

Moses Malone scored 31 points, hitting 17 of 18 shots from the free throw line, to lead Philadelphia over Cleveland.

Malone put Philadelphia ahead to stay 98-95 with 1:02 left in the game after a string of four free throws. Andrew Toney added two more free throws for the final margin.

World B. Free, who tossed in nine points in the fourth quarter, had given Cleveland a 95-94 lead with 2:07 left.

It was Cleveland's 20th straight loss in Philadelphia and marked the first time all season that Free, who averaged 23 points a game, was held scoreless in the first half.

Pacers 119, Bulls 112

Butch Carter scored 20 points to lead seven players in double figures as Indiana downed Chicago. The Pacers led from virtually start to finish, taking the lead for good with 7:20 left in the first quarter.

Indiana led by nine points at the end of the first quarter, 27-18, and at the half, 56-47. In the second half, the Pacers pulled out with a 16-point lead at the end of the third, 90-74. Then in the fourth, they got as high as 19, 96-77, with 10:15 remaining.

Mavericks 116, Rockets 104

Mark Aguirre's 28 points paced Dallas over Houston as the Mavericks won their 38th game of the season to equal last year's entire victory total.

The Mavericks led by as many as 22 points in the first half and after the Rockets came within eight with 5:31 to play, a 6-0 run capped by Aguirre's eight-footer put the game away.

Houston, led by Ralph Sampson's 20 points and 14 rebounds, lost its fifth straight game and sixth in a row on the road.

Warriors 115, Jazz 104

Purvis Short scored 32 points and Joe Barry Carroll added 30 to lead Golden State over Utah.

After battling back from a seven-point halftime deficit, the Jazz saw their victory hopes diminish with 6:14 left in the game as Don Collins scored on a driving layup, giving the Warriors the lead for good at 99-98.

Adrian Dantley and John Drew each scored 23 points for Utah.

Nuggets 126, Kings 116

Rob Williams sparked a 23-1 streak for Denver in the third period to pace the Nuggets over Kansas City. Williams had four assists and one field goal in the streak, which also featured the shooting of Alex English, who had 12 of his 28 points during the scoring spree.

The victory was Denver's 10th straight at home and put the Nuggets ahead of the Kings by .001 in their battle for third place in the Midwest Division.

Trail Blazers 124, Suns 98

Kenny Carr scored 14 of his 25 points in the first period to trigger Portland over Phoenix.

After trailing 4-0 in the game's first minute, the Blazers reeled off 10 straight points, eight by Carr, on route to a 31-19 first-quarter lead. Portland led by as many as 32 points on four occasions. Reserves played most of the fourth quarter.

Pistons 121, Lakers 118

Bill Laimbeer grabbed 20 rebounds and scored 21 points to lead Detroit past Los Angeles. Detroit had not beaten Los Angeles in four years, losing 10 games in a row, and the Lakers were carrying a five-game winning streak, including the last three on the road.

Kelly Tripucka led Detroit with 24 points, while Kareem Abdul-Jabbar paced Los Angeles with 35 points, leaving him 163 shy of Wilt Chamberlain's all-time NBA record.

Clippers 108, SuperSonics 102

Terry Cummings scored a game-high 32 points, including seven key points in the fourth period, to propel San Diego over Seattle.

The Clippers led 61-53 at halftime and 88-81 after three periods. Seattle sliced the lead to 99-98 with 3:09 left, but Cummings made a pair of free throws and converted a three-point play with 1:40 to extend San Diego's advantage.

The Clippers used a 16-4 run near the end of the second quarter to take control of the contest.

Cobb Is Found Not Guilty

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Boston College guard Ernie Cobb, whose basketball career was under the cloud of a gambling scandal for more than three years, says he still has dreams of making it in the National Basketball Association.

Whether Cobb's prospects are anything more than dreams remain to be seen, but for now the hope is still there, thanks to a Brooklyn federal court jury's decision to acquit him of conspiring to commit sports bribery.

Cobb apparently came through when it counted most. He took the witness stand in his own defense, and the jury appeared to accept his explanation that the $1,000 he accepted from a now-convicted member of the plot was not for any illicit purpose.

Five prosecution witnesses, including Cobb's former teammate Rick Kuhn, had testified that Cobb joined the scheme in December 1978 and helped fix three games before the enterprise fizzled in February 1979. They said he was paid a total of $2,000.

Kuhn and three of the other witnesses were convicted in 1981 and drew sentences of four to 10 years. All are seeking reductions in the sentences, and the defense attacked their credibility by saying they were accusing Cobb to benefit themselves.

The jury also acquitted Cobb's co-defendant, 47-year-old Peter Vario of Brooklyn. Vario was accused of being one of several New York bookmakers who bankrolled the plot and took bets on fixed games. Both he and Cobb would have faced up to five years in prison if convicted.

"I still have the drive and determination to succeed," Cobb said, adding that he hopes Chicago Bulls Coach Kevin Loughery will give him a tryout. Loughery was coach of the New Jersey Nets when Cobb tried out with that team in 1980, just as the FBI investigation was starting. He was quickly cut.

Cobb averaged 21.3 points per game and became BC's third-highest career scorer during 1978-79, his senior year. The team compiled a 21-9 mark.

Still, he acknowledged it would be tough to make it to the NBA now. A scant 5-foot-11 to begin with, he now is 27 and has been out of organized ball for more than a year.

Before that, his resume since his 1979 graduation shows stints in the Continental Basketball Association,

Greene Central Pops Lady Jags

FARMVILLE — Greene Central jumped on Farmville Central for six first inning runs and raced to a 19-7 softball win over the Lady Jaguars Friday.

The game was the first Eastern Carolina Conference action for both teams.

Sheila Dawson banged a three-run homer to spark the Lady Rams in the first. D. Warren hit a two-run homer in the second as the Rams picked up four more. They added three in the third, three more in the fifth, two in the sixth and one in the seventh on a homer by Stephanie Streeter.

Farmville also went on a hitting tear, getting four homers, accounting for all seven of its runs. Pam Ellis hit a solo shot in the first and added another in the fourth. Kim Smith hit a two-run homer in the fourth, while Diane Bullock had a three-run homer in the fifth.

Dawson led the Ram hitting with four, while Warren and Streeter each had three. Anntionette Wilkes added two. Ellis had three, while Smith and Bullock each had two for Farmville.

The Lady Jags, 1-4 overall, are 0-1 in the league, while Greene Central is 1-0.

Farmville travels to SouthWest Edgecombe on Tuesday, while Greene Central hosts North Lenoir.

North Pitt.....12

BETHEL — Charles B. Aycock High School snuffed out a rally by North Pitt just in time Friday as the Falcons hung on for a 13-12 softball victory over the Pant-HERS.

The game was the first outing in the Eastern Carolina Conference for the two teams.

Aycock took the lead with three first inning runs and doubled its total in the second. The Lady Falcons picked up one more in the third and two in the top of the fourth for a 9-0 score.

North Pitt finally got going with one in the bottom of the frame which Aycock matched in the fifth. North Pitt then scored three more, only to see that matched by Aycock in the sixth.

The Pant-HERS rallied for seven runs in the bottom of the seventh, falling only one run short to catching up.

T. Gurley led Aycock with three hits, while K. Malpass and T. Brown each had two. Deloris Pittman, Alice Pittman, Bobbie Purvis and Rene Ayers each had three for North Pitt.

The Pant-HERS, now 1-4 overall travel to Southern Nash on Tuesday.

PLYMOUTH — Plymouth High School scored early and went on to score a 16-10 softball victory over Washington High School Friday in Northeastern Conference play.

The Valkyries picked up a run in the first and then added seven in the second inning after Washington had come up with one in the top of the frame to tie it at 1-1.

Plymouth then added six in the third and two in the fifth, the latter coming on a homer by Wendy Barber. Washington scored one in the fourth, five in the fifth and three in the seventh for its total.

Barber led the Plymouth hitting with three, while J. Jones had two. Jennifer Koepnick and Gloria Sherrod each had three hits. Sherrod had a solo homer in the fifth for the Lady Pack.

Now 0-2, Washington plays host to Ahoskie on Tuesday.

KINSTON — Sheila Speight slapped four hits in as many trips to the plate including a homer to lead Kinston to a 10-1 thrashing of D.H. Conley Friday in high school softball action.

Barbara Tucker went the distance on the mound for Kinston to collect the victory, while Lisa Mills suffered the loss for the Valkyries. Mills also led Conley at the plate with a pair of hits.

Cindy Mercer ripped three hits in four at bats for Kinston, while Carolyn Burkette and Madelyn McGleen went 2-4 and Tucker 2-3.

Conley posted its only run in the fourth, when Carla McLawhorn tripled and scored on a single by Mills.

The Valkyries, now 4-2 on the year, visit Farmville Cnetral Friday.

Williamston.....12
Tarboro.....7

TARBORO — Timberly Rodgers legged out a two-run homer in the first inning as Williamston went on to defeat Tarboro 12-7 Friday in Northeastern 3-A Conference high school softball action.

Rodgers finished the day 3-4 at the plate, adding a double to her total. Winning pitcher Jan Mills went 3-5, while Kim Bowen, Sonya Purvis and Hope Coffield each went 3-4.

The score was tied 5-5 after three innings, but Williamston raced away with seven runs in the fourth. Hopkins reached on an error and later scored when Shirley Godard made it to first on an error. Shelly Harrington's grounder was bobbled to score Godard, and she crossed the plate on a single by Mills.

Mills scored on a Rodgers single, Bowen knocked in Rodgers. Purvis drove in Bowen for the the final Williamston run of the day.

Williamston, now 3-0 overall and 2-0 in the conference, entertains Bertie Monday.

Cobb Is...

with the Harlem Wizards — a touring team modeled on the Globetrotters — and in Israel.

"I was the leading scorer in Israel," he said. "I've been invited back to Israel as an alternative. I'm not sure what I'm going to do."

The moments after the verdict were emotional. Cobb jumped from his chair, embraced his attorney, David Golub, and disappeared down a corridor, to reappear moist-eyed a few minutes later. His parents, fiance and high school coach, who were all on hand, expressed relief and satisfaction.

Cobb's mother, Hattie Cobb, commented, "I knew he wasn't guilty. If he'd been guilty I would have known it."

Cobb said he felt "no bitterness" toward either prosecutor Jerry Bernstein or Kuhn, whose contacts with Pittsburgh gamblers allowed the plot to take place.

"I understand that Mr. Bernstein and the prosecutors were doing their job," he said. Asked what his thoughts were while Kuhn was testifying that he had been in on the scheme, Cobb replied: "I felt the only reason he was doing that was he was feeling some pressure from someone."

Bernstein contended that Cobb, Kuhn and Jim Sweeney — a Boston College guard who was never charged — agreed to "shave points" against Harvard, Rhode Island and Fordham that year. Cobb received the $1,000 from Rocco Perla, who was convicted with Kuhn at the first trial, the night of the Harvard game.

Shaving points means to win by less than the "point spread" set by oddsmakers, or to lose by more than the spread, allowing gamblers to make money by betting on the oppposing team.

Cobb answered "absolutely not" when asked on the witness stand if he ever shaved points.

He said he took the $1,000 from Perla because he needed the money and because he thought it was merely in thanks for playing well in a game early in the season in which he though Perla had bet on Boston College.

Golub maintained that the $1,000 was "a come-on," an unsuccessful effort to coax Cobb into joining the plot later. Cobb was never asked about the other $1,000, which he allegedly received from Kuhn in two installments.

Dorothy Dobbins of Queens, the jury foreman, said most jurors believed from the start of deliberations that Cobb was innocent, despite taking the $1,000. It took almost exactly one day — from 11 a.m. Thursday until about 11:15 a.m. Friday — to convince the rest.

"I thought he was too naive to understand what he had done," Dobbins said.

Chicago Set To Blitz Dupree

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Marcus Dupree of the New Orleans Breakers has become a poster boy — for the Chicago Blitz.

They Blitz have hung a blown-up photo of the 19-year-old running back in their locker room "just for a little extra motivation," Chicago Coach Marv Levy said, looking ahead to Sunday's United States Football League game against the unbeaten Breakers.

Sunday's other games are Washington at New Jersey, Denver at Memphis and Jacksonville at Los Angeles. On Monday night it's Michigan, the USFL's only other unbeaten team, at Houston and Birmingham at Tampa Bay.

Saturday it was Oakland at San Antonio and Philadelphia at Pittsburgh, plus Oklahoma at Arizona tonight.

The Breakers boosted their record to 4-0 last weekend by pounding Jacksonville 38-9, with Dupree rushing for 96 yards, 42 on a touchdown sprint.

"We understand he had a pretty good outing Monday night," Chicago linebacker John Gillen said. "But I think he'll find things a little different this Sunday. We've got a good plan to pressure him. We're going to gang-tackle him and get in some good licks early ... The man has got to pay his dues."

And fellow linebacker Tom Kilkenny added: "We'll have bodies flying around him wherever he goes. It's a welcome to pro football."

Levy acknowledged: "It's rare for a defense to face a back of his calibre and we want to make sure they're ready." But he also cautioned: "Dupree is not the only problem. Concentrate too much on him and those other backs (Mark Schellen and Buford Jordan) will kill you. It's as fine a backfield as I've seen in a long time."

Dick Bielski, head coach of Washington's winless Federals, thinks the 3-1 Generals are as fine a team as he's seen in a long time. "They're awesome both on offense and defense. I see things I see in the National Football League.

"It's a good football team all around. It's excellent," Bielski went on. "How's that? That's a better word than good, isn't it?"

He also called his own players "alley fighters. They don't know when to quit." That's a bit different from what Federals owner Berl Bernhard called them, namely "untrained gerbils." His comment came shortly before he fired Ray Jauch and promoted Bielski to head coach.

The Federals are a minus 2 on the takeaway-giveaway chart, compared to the Generals' plus 7, and New Jersey Coach Walt Michaels says they'll become more competitive as soon as they stop self-destructing.

"They're aggressive, but they make some big mistakes," he said of the occasional blown coverages, fumbles, dropped passes and league-high 10 intercepted passes. "If they eliminate three or four mistakes, they're going to give you fits."

The Birmingham defense gave Memphis quarterback Walter Lewis fits last weekend in the Stallions' 54-6 rout, limiting him to completions on only six of 19 passes for 68 yards and an interception before Ken Johnson (6-13, 71 yards and a touchdown) took over. But Lewis will be starting against the Gold.

"He's making improvement, but we won't hesitate to use Johnson if things aren't working out," Memphis' offensive coordinator Jimmy Sharpe said.

"Things change all the time in this game," said Johnson, a veteran if the World Football League, the Canadian Football League and the NFL. "The bottom line is to be ready to play when you get the call."

Steve Young won't be getting the call for at least another week. The $40-million quarterback for the Los Angeles Express will be in street clothes while Frank Seurer calls the signals against Jacksonville. The Express, 2-2, plans to have Young suit up for the April 1 game against the Generals.

The Bulls, too, are going with a rookie quarterback, but not by choice. Ken Hobart, who got his first taste of action in the pros last Monday night in the 38-9 pounding administered by the Breakers, is starting because both first-stringer Matt Robinson (sprained foot) and backup Robbie Mahfouz (separated left shoulder) are sidelined.

"We don't seem to ever have it easy," said Lindy Infante, the coach of the 1-3 Bulls. "This is the fifth consecutive game against a charter member team and we're the only team in the league with that distinction.

"Los Angeles is playing good football at this point of the season. They've won two straight and their defense hasn't allowed a touchdown in both of those wins. They have a wide-open passing attack that has the potential to score points."

SPEED SKATING

MOSCOW (AP) — Andrea Schoene of East Germany and Viktor Shasherin of the Soviet Union set world speed skating records on the first day of a Soviet-East German competition, according to Tass.

Schoene clocked 4 minutes, 20.91 seconds in the 3,000 meters, and Shasherin posted a 6:49.15 in the 5,000 meters.

Design Selected For Duck Stamp — The North Carolina WIlsdlife Resources Commission recently announced that a painting of hen and drake wood ducks by wildlife artist James Killen of Minnesota has been selected as the design for North Carolina's second state waterfowl stamp and are print. The publishing and national marketing of this program will be handled by Ambassador Graphics of Summerville, S.C.

Killen is a nationally known wildlife artist. His honors include being selected Ducks Unlimited Artist of the Year for 1983, Minnesota wildlife artist of the year for 1983, winner of the South Carolina stamp print contest of 1983 and many others.

"We're sure that sportsmen and wildlife art collectors will be very pleased with the new State waterfowl stamp and art print," said Vernon Bevill, executive director of the Wildlife Resources Commission. "The new design will make an exceptionally attractive art print, and this program should continue to make great contributions towards waterfowl conservation in North Carolina."

The 1984 North Carolina waterfowl stamp art prints are not yet available. However, literature on the program will be sent to art dealers throughout the country in the near future, and dealers will be taking advance orders for the prints. While the wildlife commission receives a royalty on print sales, they are not involved directly in the retail selling of these prints. Stamps will not go on sale until July 1; however, 1983 stamps will still be available from license agents through June 30.

At the present, anyone who wants a wildlife art print should consider investing in one of the 1983 North Carolina Sportsman's Stamp prints. These prints feature a painting of a covey of quail done by Duane Raver, a well-known wildlife artist who was formerly editor of Wildlife in North Carolina magazine. The image size of the print is 6½ by 9 inches, and the cost or each is $90. Orders for this time-limited edition print are being accepted by art dealers only through March 31. As with the duck stamp prints, the wildlife commission is not directly involved in the retail selling of these prints.

"The sportsman's stamp prints — like the state duck stamp prints — are not only beautiful pieces of artwork, but should also appreciate in value in the future," said Sid Baynes, chief of the commission's division of conservation education and contract administrator for stamp and print programs. "In addition, a royalty from the sale of each sportsman's stamp print goes to the wildlife commission and is used for wildlife conservation. Buying one of these prints is a great way to beautify your home or office, it helps wildlife and is used for wildlife conservation. Next year's sportsman's print will feature a beautiful painting of whitetailed deer by nationally famous artist Harry Antis.

"Fishy Tales" — Calling all liars! If you'd rather talk about "the one that got away" instead of spending all day trying to catch a fish, here's the opportunity for you to win a trophy, even if you've never landed a fish.

The Grifton Shad Festival "Fishy Tales" storytelling (or liar's) in fish story and tall tale (non fish) categories. There are divisions for adult and for youth.

The date is Wednesday April 11 at 8 p.m. at the Grifton Elementary School cafeteria, as one of the opening events of the 14th annual Grifton Shad Festival.

In what has become an annual tradition, bass fishermen will take part in the tournament as part of the 14th annual Grifton Shad Festival.

Most festival events are April 10-15, with the Hickory Shad Fishing Contest already underway. The Bass Tournament will be the Saturday before the other Shad Festival events, with start and finish at Lawson Creek in New Bern. Fishing locations will be the Trent and Neuse Rivers. Date is April 7 and starting time is 7:30 a.m. Weigh-in will be at 4:30 p.m.

The deadline is April 1 for registration, which requires a $30 fee for two-person fishing teams. Registration blanks are available from Danny Joe Humphrey, Rt. 8 Box 101, Kinston, N.C. 28501, or Boo Hayes, 1407 N. Pollock St. Kinston. Checks should be made out to WETSU Bassmasters of Kinston, sponsors of the Bass Fishing Tournament.

Trophies, cash and merchandise prizes will be given, with trophies to the top three and lunker, cash to the top five an lunker and merchandise to at least the top 10.

Information on all events of the Grifton Shad Festival may be obtained by writing to Grifton Shad Festival, Box 928, Grifton, N.C. 28530 or calling (919) 524-4356.

Phils Acquire Wockenfuss In Deal With Detriot Tigers

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies completed a three-way trade Saturday in which they acquired catcher John Wockenfuss and outfielder Glenn Wilson from the Detroit Tigers for left-handed reliever Willie Hernandez.

The Phillies also sent outfielder Alexandro Sanchez to the San Francisco Giants for infielder Dave Bergman and then sent Bergman along with Hernandez to Detroit.

Wockenfuss, 35, a 10-year major league veteran, is a right-handed hitter who also can play first and third base and the outfield. Wockenfuss, who has a .261 career batting average, also is expected to be used by the Phillies as a pinch hitter.

Hernandez, 29, came to the Phillies last May in a trade with the Chicago Cubs and posted a 3-4 record with eight saves and led the Phillies' staff with 74 appearances as the club won the National League penant.

Wilson, 25, is a right-handed hitting outfielder, who was the Tigers' first-round selection in the June 1980 amateur draft. He batted .268 last year with 25 doubles, seven triples, 11 home runs and 65 RBI. He led all Detroit outfielders with 12 assists last year.

Sanchez, 25, batted .247 at Portland last year in the Pacific Coast League with 17 home runs, 74 RBI and 33 stolen bases. He will be assigned to the Giants' Triple A club in Phoneix.

Bergman, 29, hit .286 in 90 games for the Giants last season with six home runs and 20 RBI.

The Phillies had been trying to get Wockenfuss and the Tigers insisted on Hernandez, whom the Phillies reluctantly gave up in the deal.

Phillies Manager Paul Owens said, "this was a tough decision because we're giving up Hernandez, one of the better relief pitchers around. But down the road we feel we got considerable help for the future in the power potential of Wilson."

Owens said that according to Phillies' scouts, Wilson is one of the better power-hitting outfielders around.

"And of course, Wockenfuss is the guy I wanted all along."

Owens said the Phillies probably would have lost Sanchez in the draft since he is out of options and was ticketed for a return to the minors.

Owens indicated that he would decide where to use Wilson after the Phillies are through dealing.

"We're not done (trading) yet," said Owens, who also indicated that left-hander Tug McGraw, making a comeback from elbow surgery, would replace Hernandez as a middle-inning reliever.

Hamilton Wins 4th Skate Title

OTTAWA (AP) — Scott Hamilton was still in the Civic Centre locker room when he heard about Brian Orser's magnificent triple axel.

And when he took the ice, Hamilton looked up and saw the string of 5.9s eight of nine judges handed Orser.

"A 10 mile per hour wind was taken out of my sails by just looking at those marks," said the U.S. Olympic gold medalist.

But Hamilton, 25, of Denver, still had enough steam to make off with his fourth straight World Figure Skating title. No skater has won four straight World crowns since American Hayes Alan Jenkins held the titles from 1953 through 1956.

Orser, who landed a very difficult 3½-revolution triple axel right on the nose, finished second. The Soviet Union's Alexander Fadeev was third.

Brian Boitano of Sunnyvale, Calif., was sixth and Mark Cockerell of Los Angeles was 13th.

Hamilton said his performance was satisfying. But it wasn't his best. Orser, the Canadian Olympic silver medalist, outskated him in the finale, just the way he did in Sarajevo.

Hamilton's freestyle was, indeed, superior to the one he skated at the Winter Games. He popped two of five triples in Sarajevo. He did them all here, but the opening two were shakey.

"It was a little hairy at times early but I settled down," he said. "I said to myself, 'Hey, this is for me. And then I went after it.

"I was a little hyper out there for the first two jumps. I knew Brian was going to be great and the crowd was really on his side," Hamilton said.

"It was a little distracting coming up against a string of 5.9s. But after the first two jumps I thought it went pretty well. I was really pleased with my performance," he said.

It likely was his last as an amateur.

"I haven't made up my mind, but I probably will step down now. It's about time," said Hamilton, who hasn't lost a major competition since 1981.

As they did in Sarajevo, the compulsory figures saved Hamilton and did in Orser, 22, of Penetanguishene, Ontario. Hamilton won both the compulsories and short program. Orser was seventh after the figures and fifth after the short program.

Had the U.S. champion not held that lead, Orser may have toppled him.

Hamilton, dressed in a sequin-less Yankee Doodle red, white and blue costume, opened with a shakey triple lutz that nearly sent him into the boards in one corner.

He did the triple flip he popped out of at the Olympics, but he touched the ice on landing. And he did the triple salchow he left out of the Olympics and sprinkled the program with several double axels and two more triples.

Still electrifying are his spins and his footwork — both so fast he becomes merely a blur.

His marks for technical merit were mostly 5.8s and 5.7s with a 5.6 from the Yugoslavian judge. For artistic impression, he scored marks of mostly 5.8 and 5.9, with a 5.7 from the Canadian judge.

Save for one 5.8 from the Danish judge, Orser collected a string of 5.9s for technical merit.

In addition to the axel, he landed four more triples and his footwork and spins nearly match Hamilton's. Orser's marks for artistic impression were all 5.9s and 5.8s.

"Technically, I think my performance was a little better here than it was at the Olympics," Orser said. "It certainly makes things look good for next season."

Meanwhile, ice dancing continues today with British Olympic champions Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean likely to get more perfect marks for their passionate dance to Ravel's "Bolero."

On Friday, the three-time world champions earned a solid row of nine perfect marks for their haughty dance to the Paso Doble in the original set pattern event. On Thursday, they earned seven perfect marks in compuslory dances.

In second place were Soviet Olympic silver medalists Natalia Bestemianova and Andrei Bukin.

Americans Judy Blumberg and Michael Seibert were third. Their finale, skated to "Scheherazade," just missed a bronze medal at the Olympics, where the couple finished fourth.

Must Use Same Tactics

NEW YORK (AP) — For the United States men's team to win its first title in the World Cross Country Championships Sunday at the Meadowlands race track in East Rutherford, N.J., it will have to employ the same tactics as the three-time defending champions, says Craig Virgin.

"We will have to run as a team," said Virgin, the 1980 and 1981 champion and the only American ever to win the title in the meet's 71-year history. "That's what the Ethiopians do."

Virgin noted that the Ethiopians — men's champions in the only three years they have been in the competition — try to break very fast from the starting gate in the 7.3-mile race.

"They tend to go out kamikaze style," said Virgin, 28, the veteran of the nine-member U.S. team. "They're fearless. They might have seven in the top 30 at the one-mile point, even though they might drop back later."

The Ethiopians have produced the last two individual winners — Mohammed Kedir in 1982 and Bekele Debele in 1983 — and both are back this year. They are among the favorites, along with Virgin and U.S. trials winner Pat Porter, world marathon champion Rob de Castella of Australia, world 10,000-meter champion Alberto Cova of Italy, and versatile long-distance star Carlos Lopes of Portugal.

The women's 3.1-mile race features five-time champion Grete Waitz of Norway, 1982 winner Maricica Puica of Romania, former 10,000-meter world record holder Ludmila Baranova of the Soviet Union, Italy's Gabriella Dorio, Norway's Ingrid Kristiansen, and Betty Jo Springs of the United States.

The American women are the defending champions and have won a total of five titles, only one less than all-time leader Britain.

"Hopefully, the team will have another victory, and hopefully, I will improve my finish (fifth) of last year," said Springs, the national collegiate and national champion last year.

Virgin and Springs said Friday that neither the men's nor women's teams had devised any special strategy for the race. But both emphasized that all the members of the team would have to try and start quickly and not lose contact with the field.

"Whoever runs the smartest race and has something left in the last lap will do well," said Virgin. "The race is usually decided in the last 100 or 200 yards. You have to be patient. You have to run tactically."

"We had no special strategy last year," said Springs. "But we keyed off each other. We tried to help each other along the way. Hopefully, we will be able to help each other again.

"I don't want to go out too fast, just fast enough," she added. "With about a mile left, I want to be in contact with the leaders."

A five-mile cross country race for juniors will precede the men's and women's events.

Viola Earns Pitching Slot With Twins After Trouble

By The Associated Press

Frank Viola came to Minnesota's spring training with his job on the line and apparently has pitched himself off the unemployment rolls.

The 22-year-old left-hander, who has compiled an 11-25 record and 5.38 earned run average in two seasons with the Twins, combined with two relief pitchers on a two-hitter, and John Castino and Kent Hrbek homered as Minnesota edged the Cincinnati Reds 2-1 in Friday's exhibition game.

A fifth-inning single by Dan Driessen was the only baserunner in six shutout innings by Viola, who is 2-0 with a 1.89 earned run average this spring.

"Viola pitched the way he is capable of," said Manager Billy Gardner. "He has worked hard. He knew he had to make the ballclub this spring."

Castino homered in the first inning and Hrbek connected in the fourth, both off Reds ace Mario Soto.

Baltimore's Lenn Sakata drove in all three runs with a double and single to lead the Orioles to a 3-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers in what may have been a costly triumph. Slugging first baseman Eddie Murray singled in the second inning, but left the game because he had fouled a ball off his left foot. Cal Ripken Jr., the American League MVP in 1983, started the Orioles' sixth with a double and later left the game limping.

The Cleveland Indians got four-hit pitching — all singles — from Mike Jeffcoat, Steve Farr and George Frazier and blanked the San Diego Padres 4-0. Cleveland's nine hits included a two-run single by Carmelo Castillo, while Julio Franco had three singles and a double for the Indians.

Mario Ramirez wiped out a 4-3 Milwaukee lead with a three-run homer in the sixth inning to lift another group of Padres to a 7-5 victory over the Brewers. San Diego also got solo homers from Juan Bonilla and Kevin McReynolds.

A couple of rookies starred for the Chicago White Sox. Mike Sodders contributed a triple and three singles, while Bob Fallon pitched five shutout innings, allowing five hits, as the Sox routed the Houston Astros 10-1.

The San Francisco Giants roughed up Seattle rookie Mark Langston for six runs and rolled to a 9-4 victory over the Mariners. Langston, who had allowed just one hit and no runs in his previous eight innings this spring, was tagged for 11 hits in 4 2-3 innings against the Giants. Mike Krukow, the Giants' probable opening-day pitcher, went seven innings, allowing five hits and two runs, one of them unearned.

But two-run doubles by Gorman Thomas and Jack Perconte paced another squad of Mariners to a 4-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs, who have lost seven games in a row and are 3-14 for the spring.

Steve Lubratich's two-run single with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning gave the California Angels a 6-5 victory over the Oakland A's. Daryl Sconiers and Reggie Jackson led off with singles off Tim Stoddard, who retired the next two men while a wild pitch advanced the runners.

Business Notes

Account Manager

H.M. (Skipper) Johnston, vice president for Airway Moving Systems, Greenville, has announced that Terry Meineke has joined the firm as account manager for eastern North Carolina.

A Minnesota native, Ms. Meineke was formerly an account executive for a local radio station and lives here with her son Noah.

Airway is an agent for United Van Lines with offices in Greenville, New Bern, Jacksonville, Wilmington and Albany, Ga.

New Board Member

JOE WILSON

Joe Wilson, vice president and general manager of Synnyside Eggs Inc., Greenville, has been named to the board of directors of Southeastern Poultry & Egg Association.

The SPEA, the largest poultry industry organization of its kind in the world, serves poultry and allied industry firms in government relations, industry education, research funding, and communications, as well as sponsoring an annual trade show.

Engineers To Meet

Region IX of the American Society of Safety Engineers will sponsor its annual professional development conference Wednesday through Friday at Virginia Beach, Va.

Ralph Dudley of Burroughs Wellcome in Greenville is eastern section chairman for the North Carolina chapter of the engineering society.

Gains Membership

Pitt County native Debbie Leggett, an agent for State Farm Insurance in Cary, has qualified for the company's Millionaire Club. State Farm said the honor is based solely on the quantity and quality of life insurance sold.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon R. Hardee of Greenville, Ms. Leggett joined the company in 1979 in the Raleigh claims office and then opened her sales office in Cary in 1982.

The agent is a graduate of Rose High School and East Carolina University. She and her husband Ronnie and their son Ronnie Jr. live in Cary.

Anniversary Noted

Dean James of Dean's Photography, 203 Evans St., has announced that the Greenville firm is observing its 10th anniversary Saturday.

Opens Local Office

J. SAMUEL EBERDT

SunHealth Inc., a multistate hospital system based in Charlotte, has opened an office in Greenville at 200 Arlington Blvd.

The company said J. Samuel Eberdt, a SunHealth group vice president who has been associated with the firm for the past five years, will operate the new office. Eberdt, who resides in Greenville, has supervisory duties for seven hospitals managed by SunHealth, including Beaufort County Hospital in Washington.

SunHealth provides management, consulting and networking services to approximately 350 hospitals in the Southeast.

Declared Dividend

Jack Eckerd Corp. directors declared a cash dividend of 25 cents per common share, an increase of 4 percent over the regular quarterly dividend of 24 cents, payable on April 2 to shareholders of record March 16.

The company said future dividends will be paid at the beginning of each calendar quarter.

Jack Eckerd Corp. operates 1,385 Eckerd Drug stores in 15 states.

Volume Increased

Hampton Industries Inc. has reported that sales volume for the 53 weeks ended Dec. 31 totaled $130,730,000 as compared to $123,416,000 for the 52 weeks ended the previous December. Net earnings for the current year were $2,738,000 as compared to $2,781,000 last year.

Sales volume for the 14 weeks ended Dec. 31 amounted to $45,588,000, up from $39,767,000 reported for the 13 weeks a year earlier. Net earnings for the current quarter were $1,614,000, up from $812,000 reported the previous year.

Prepshirt of Greenville is a division of Hampton Industries.

Trip Qualifiers

Local Equitable Life Assurance Society agents Robert J. Powell III, CLU, Jerry L. Carawan, G. Edwin Porter and William S. Johnson, and Barry C. Chesson, CLU, district manager, and their spouses attended Equitable's 1984 national convention in New York.

Equitable said the representatives qualified for the trip on the basis of production obtained in 1983.

The company is celebrating its 125th anniversary this year.

Flights Planned

Piedmond Airlines has announced that it will start the first transcontinental air service in North Carolina's history on April 1 with nonstop flights from Charlotte to Los Angeles.

Wade Allen, Piedmont's station manager at the Eastern Regional Jet Port in Kinston, said the flights will link with existing service between Kinston and Charlotte, giving travelers in the Kinston / Goldsboro / Greenville area a daily single-carrier route to the Pacific coast.

Allen said the cities are three of at least 25 southeastern locations that the airline will connect with Los Angeles through Piedmont's "hub" at Charlotte.

Named Regional VP

WILLIARD G. ROSS

William D. Reagan Jr., president of North State Financial Corp. of Greenville, has announced that Williard G. Ross has been named regional vice president of the midstate region of the firm's distribution group.

Ross will supervise and direct distribution of North State's financial products through the Raleigh, Cary, Albemarle, Rockingham, Southern Pines and Fayetteville First Colony Savings & Loan offices.

A Davidson College graduate, Ross was formerly associated with the State Employees Credit Union. He joined First Colony as city executive in Raleigh/Cary and was named vice president in 1982. As regional vice president, he will reside in Raleigh.

The financial corporation operates 23 offices in North Carolina and Virginia.

Staff Additions

Troy Narron, manager of Western Steer Family Steakhouse in Greenville, has announced that Gary M. Dolbee and Mitchell Graham have joined the restaurant's management staff.

Narron said Dolbee and Graham have both completed the Western Steer training school in Hickory and will assist him at the East 10th Street facility.

Dolbee, a 1979 graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in food, nutrition and institution management, was formerly with Ramada Inn.

Graham recently moved to the Greenville area from Charleston, S.C., where he was assistant manager at Dexter's Restaurant.

Opens Brokerage

JOHNNY STEVENSON

Johnny W. Stevenson has announced the opening of a new Engage-A-Car brokerage at 2113 Montclair Drive in Greenville for the leasing of new cars, vans and light trucks to individuals and firms.

Wilson said the firm combines features of both open and closed-end leasing with consumers able to choose the exact vehicle he or she wants.

A Pactolus native, Stevenson is a graduate of Bethel Union School. The new broker, who is retiring from the Navy in August after over 20 year service, has been a Navy recruiter in Greenville since 1979. He is currently 1st vice commander of American Legion Post 160.

Stevenson is married to the former Mary M. Cherry of Greenville and they have two children, Johnny Jr. and Brenda.

Elected To Posts

Three area residents were elected recently to leadership posts at the annual meeting of the statewide organization of Electric Membership Corporations.

Horace Moore of Snow Hill, a board member of the Pitt & Green EMC, was re-elected as North Carolina's representative on the board of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association. He will serve his eighth term on the board of the national group, which represents about 1,000 electric co-ops.

Jane Patterson of Farmville was elected to a second term as chairwoman of the women's arm of the North Carolina Association of Electric Cooperatives. She is a member of the women's committee of the Pitt & Greene EMC.

Linda Whitehurst of Greenville, a committee member with the Edgecombe-Martin County EMC, was named to a second term as vice chairwoman of the group.

The NCAEC presented Lloyd Gay of Route 1, Fountain, a director of the Pitt & Greene EMC, a plaque citing him for 20 years of service on the board.

Attended Meeting

J. Larkin Little of Greenville, president and chief executive officer of Home Federal Savings and Loan of Eastern North Carolina, attended the legislative conference of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions in Washington, D.C.

During the conference, Little met Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. They discussed upcoming legislation which will affect the savings industry.

Empire Promotion

Empire Brushes of Greenville has announced the promotion of Joseph J. Tonegatto to manager of manufacturing engineering.

The company said Tonegatto now has technical responsibility for plastics machinery, molds, and materials plus various other manufacturing projects as head of its recently-formed manufacturing engineering department.

Tonegatto, who joined Empire a year ago from Eaton Corp., studied mechanical engineering at Detroit Institute of Technoloty, tool design and metallury at Cass Technical Institute, and industrial management at the University of Michigan, Oakland.

He and his wife Shirley live in Winterville with their daughter April.

Juice Futures Prices Sharply Higher

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Orange juice futures prices were sharply higher Friday on the Cotton Exchange in New York.

Prices were higher in early trading and sources said that prompted buying by traders who held positions to sell orange juice.

Seth Diamond, an orange juice analyst in New York with Shearson American Express, noted that a report on traders' positions released Tuesday indicated that 71 percent of the short positions, or agreements to deliver, were held by speculators.

As a result, many speculators were forced to cover their positions by buying contracts when a rally appeared to take shape, he said.

Contracts for delivery in most months reached life of contract highs in the rally.

Buyers also have been encouraged in recent sessions by reports that consumption this year is exceeding that of last year while production was reduced sharply by freezes that occurred in late December and early January.

Orange juice settled 2.25 cents to 3.20 cents higher with the contract for delivery in May at 169.80 cents a pound.

Cattle and frozen pork bellies were sharply higher and live hogs were mixed in active trading on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Most live hog and frozen pork belly contracts advanced to life of contract highs.

Live hogs continued to take support from the inventory report on pigs and hogs released Tuesday by the Agriculture Department said Robert Kuhn, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Dean Witter Reynolds. Kuhn noted that the contracts for delivery in April and June were unchanged while those for delivery later in the year were higher, reflecting the 10 percent reduction in the breeding herd disclosed in the report.

Pork bellies also were supported by the report, and contracts for delivery in 1985 advanced by the 2-cent limit set by the exchange, while those for delivery through August posted less substantial gains.

Cattle prices were supported by strong demand on wholesale markets for carcass beef, Kuhn said.

He noted that carcass beef prices advanced to $1.05 a pound Friday from $1.03 a pound Wednesday, and supplies were pretty well depleted by the end of the week.

Feeder cattle were strong as well, though not as strong as live cattle because grain prices were higher, which tends to reduce demand among feed lot operators, he said.

Live cattle settled .40 cent to 1.07 cents higher with the contract for delivery in April at 72.12 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .10 cent to .48 cent higher with April at 69.35 cents a pound; live hogs were .15 cent lower to .60 cent higher with April at 49.70 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were .80 cent to 2 cents higher with March at 67.77 cents a pound.

Grain and soybean futures prices were mixed on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Prices fluctuated in directionless trading throughout the session in very light volume.

Don Outland, a grain analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert, Inc., noted that most analysts are concentrating on technical factors such as trends on price charts rather than fundamental factor such as supply and demand. And he said the technical factors are failing to provide any clear signals as to price direction.

Prices were pressured at midsession by implications of higher interest rates that were spawned when economist Henry Kaufman said he expected the Federal Reserve's discount rate to be increased 1 percentage point by May 1, Outland said.

Wheat settled 1¼ cents lower to 1¼ cents higher with the contract for delivery in May at $3.61 a bushel; corn was ½ cent loweer to ½ cent higher with May at $3.53¼ a bushel; oats were ½ cent lower 2½ cents higher with May at $1.83¼ a bushel; and soybeans were 1½ cents lower to 2¼ cents higher with May at $8.00 a bushel.

Precious metals prices finished steady after sporadic trading on the Commodity Ex-change in New York.

Metals traders still are tracking the value of the U.S. dollar closely, said Howard Levine, a metals analyst in White Plains, N.Y., with ACLI International.

Selling at midsession came as traders scrambled to cover losses taken in the recent decline, but prices recovered prior to the close when the dollar lost value.

PURCHASE A 12 MONTH CAPITAL NOTE; GET 10½% INTEREST IN ADVANCE; USE THAT MONEY FOR IMMEDIATE ACCESS TO AN I.R.A.*

10½% INTEREST IN ADVANCE (11.7% Annual Yield)

Example: You Purchase A $20,000.00 Capital Note; You Immediately Receive $2,100.00 In Advance—Interest Which Can Be Used To Fund A Tax-Deferred Individual Retirement Account.

10½% INTEREST IN ADVANCE (11.7% Annual Yield)

Everyone should know by now that there is a tremendous tax advantage in opening an I.R.A. Account. An individual can contribute up to $2,000.00 of his income and deduct it on his or her 1983 income tax return if you act before April 15 ...and it is tax deferred until withdrawn.

And, we at Great Southern Finance of Greenville would like to make it especially easy for you to open an I.R.A.

*If you purchase a 12-month Certificate of Deposit for $5,000.00...$10,000.00...$15,000.00 or $20,000.00...Great Southern Finance will give you A YEAR'S INTEREST IN ADVANCE...at an annual rate of 10½ PERCENT...money with which you can open your tax-deferred I.R.A.

In other words, you are paid your interest in advance...have funds with which to open your I.R.A....have up to $2,000.00 in deductions on your 1983 tax return. Or, take the interest in cash.

This is a unique opportunity...so act now as the offer may be withdrawn at any time.

*Provided you meet the requirements to open an Individual Retirement Account. Substantial penalty for early withdrawal

With other computers, the advertised price is just the start of what you actually wind up paying.

Because, as a rule, that temptingly low price includes a keyboard and a plug. Period.

Anything else is considered an "optional" extra. (Try using a computer without a monitor and see how "optional" it is.)

This is not the case when you buy a Kaypro.

At Kaypro, we've become the 4th largest-selling personal business computer becuase we sell you a complete computer.

So, when you plunk down $1295 for a Kaypro II you get a whole lot more than a keyboard.

You get a 64K RAM, Z-80 microprocessor. A 9" green-screen monitor. Dual disk drives with a 400 K capacity. A detachable keyboard (how could we leave it out?) with numeric keyboard. Interfaces for both a printer and telecommunications. And a complete software package for Word Processing, Data Base Management and Financial Spreadsheeting, with top quality programs such as Wordstar.

All for $1295, absolutely and completely complete. With no compatibility problems. No "optional extras." No extra cost.

How's that for starters?

Business Notes

Cited For Service

Carolina Telephone has recognized Gerald E. Heath, installer repairer in the installation and repair department in Greenville, for completing 10 years of continuous service with the company.

A Greenville native, Heath and his wife Malinda reside at Route 2, Robersonville, with their two children. They attend Sweet Gum Grove Free Will Baptist Church.

Joined Area Bank

Dan Thompson, city executive in Robersonville for Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., has announced that Dennis Hardee has joined the office as a personal banker trainee.

A Robersonville native, Hardee received a bachelor's degree from Atlantic Christian College. He was formerly employed with Hardee's Peanut Buying Station.

Institute Graduate

Virgil O'Neal, staff member at Winterville Insurance Agency, has graduated from the Institute of Insurance in Chapel Hill, according to agency owner Sparky McCaskill.

The institute has been conducted for over 40 years for members of the Independent Insurance Agents of North Carolina Inc.

McCaskill said O'Neal, who has been with the agency for three years, will continue his studies on a selective basis at the institute.

The agency has operated in Winterville since 1962.

Appointment Made

Charles A. Hollingsworth has been appointed manager of the Colfax Furniture Company's Greenville store, the firm has announced.

Colfax said Hollingsworth has been in furniture sales in the Greenville area for many years.

Record Figures

Rose's Stores Inc. has announced record earnings for the fourth quarter and 1983 fiscal year ended Jan. 25.

Sales and net earnings were $829,286,000 and $21,886,000 for the fiscal year. Sales increased 25.3 percent from $661,903,000 and net earnings jumped 89.3 percent from $11,559,000 recorded a year earlier.

Sales for the fourth quarter increased 28.3 percent to $284,550,000 from $221,745,000 the previous year. Net earnings (unaudited) rose 38.4 percent to $10,142,000 from $7,328,000 in last year's fourth quarter.

New Employee

Larry Wayne Stephenson has joined WNCT-TV as local and regional sales manager, according to Bob Peretic, general sales manager.

Stephenson is a 1968 graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He joins the station after five years as director of advertising at Oakwood Mobile Homes Inc. in Greensboro.

Stephenson has served on the public relations committee of the North Carolina Manufacturers Housing Institute. He is married and has two children.

Joins New Network

Aldridge & Southerland Realtors, 226 Commerce St., has announced that it has joined the newly created Equi-Net (Equitable Realty Network Inc.) national real estate broker network.

Mike Aldridge, general partner, said Equi-Net was created when Equitable Relocation Management Corp. and Inter-Community Relocation Inc. entered into an agreement whereby ICR was dissolved and a new broker network was formed.

Aldridge said Equi-Net is the nation's second largest relocation assistant company based on total number of brokers and agents.

Zoo Provides A Mating Service

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Finding a mate for a 7-foot tall gaur ox isn't easy.

So zoo officials have set up a computerized mating service, according to "Enter," the Children's Television Workshop's new computer magazine.

The service is located at the Minnesota Zoo. Its computer lists the numbers of male and female animals at member zoos and gives information about species, age and availability.

Wall Street Takes Negative Look At News

NEW YORK (AP) — All news seems to be bad news on Wall Street right now.

If some bit of information reaches investors suggesting that the economy is still strong, they react with the gloomy presumption that interest rates are headed higher.

If some other news flash suggests the economy is slowing, they react with the equally gloomy presumption that corporate profits will be disappointing.

Recently, when Chairman Paul Volcker of the Federal Reserve used the word "strong" to describe economic activity, the stock market took a tumble. Last week, when the government reported a surprise decline in new orders for durable goods in February, the stock market reacted negatively as well.

This kind of behavior naturally puzzles many followers of the markets, who would like to find some logic in the ups and downs of stocks, but who are often frustrated in that quest.

As some analysts see it, the market's response to any news that comes along, no matter how positive or negative it may seem, is inherently unpredictable. That is the case, they say, because most investors have their attention focused on the hazy future, rather than on what is taking place now.

What they see in that hazy future is difficult to know, since all the participants in the market are never simultaneously available for a mass interview.

But some market-watchers believe it is important to watch the market's response to current news anyway, because it can provide a tip-off to changes in the prevailing sentiment among investors. When the market "wants" to go down, in this view, investors will accentuate the negatives, paying little attention to what looks on the surface like good news.

Furthermore, in theory at least, the market may be signaling that it is approaching a turn for the better when negative news begins to be absorbed with diminshing impact.

Some analysts believe the market is approaching that stage now. But others say investors are still feeling pretty grumpy, as witness their response last week to an increase in the bank prime lending rate from 11 percent to 11.5 percent.

For the week, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 29.52 to 1,154.84, wiping out much of the previous week's 44.60-point gain.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index dropped 1.38 to 90.35, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was down 2.93 at 209.49.

Big Board volume averaged 80.96 million shares a day, against 92.38 million the week before.

Real Estate Agents Plan Special Week

Long Journey Home For Virginia Dare Statue

Text By Marie Odom

(Editor's Note: Mrs. Odom, of Ahoskie, is chairman of the board of governors of the Elizabethan Gardens).

History, mystery and fantasy are combined in the beautiful Elizabeth Gardens which are a memorial to the valiant men and women who, as English colonists, came to Roanoke Island from 1584-1587 and walked "away through the dark forest into history" as the Lost Colony.

History remembers Virgina Dare as the first child born of English parents in the New World. In August 1585, 22 years before the first permanent English settlement at Jamestown, Va., 108 Englishmen under the far-reaching hand of Sir Walter Raleigh managed to sail into what is now called Roanoke Sound and came ashore on an island called Roanoke in present-day Dare County.

Having found a safe harbor betwen the mainland and the Outer Banks, they chose an area covered with live oaks on Roanoke Island overlooking the Roanoke Sound as the site for the first English colony in North America. Later this group returned to England.

Second Ship

Two years later, Raleigh sent a second ship of colonists, this time including women and families. Several weeks after their arrival in the new found land in July of 1587, Eleanor Dare gave birth Aug. 18, 1587, to a baby girl who was named Virginia after Elizabeth I, England's Virgin Queen. It was also a name befitting the first English child born in the virgin wilderness of the New World.

Ten days after the birth of his grandchild, John White, governor of the colony, returned with the ship to England to secure additional supplies to help the settlement through the coming winter of 1887-88. The colonists were left to fend for themselves without the unifying strength of their governor, with limited supplies and ignorant of the skills needed to deal with the wilderness of a strange and alien land. The settlers were also subjected to the actions of various Indian tribes in the area and to the whims of nature which vacillated from drought to hurricanes.

War Delays Return

Because England was at war with Spain and involved in efforts to defeat the powerful Spanish Armada, Governor White could not return immediately with his ship of supplies. When he finally was permitted by Queen Elizabeth to return three years later in 1590, there was no trace of the colonists and no visible evidence of a struggle. On a post near the entrance to the settlement the bark had been peeled off and a single enigmatic word carved into the wood — Croatan. There was no sign of a cross which had been the prearranged signal in the event of distress. No trace has ever been found of these colonists in subsequent years.

Caught Imagination

The poignant mystery surrounding the child Virgina Dare lost forever in the great American wilderness caught at the imagination of Maria Louise Lander of Salem, Mass., an American sculptor.

At a very early age Miss Lander displayed a noticeable ability to fashon wax heads for her broken dolls. So her family decided to support her efforts toward an artistic career.

When she was in her late 20s (she was born in 1826) she sailed for Rome where she established her own studio and produced two of her most famous sculptures — Evangeline and Virgina Dare. It is significant that Louise Lander created the figure of a heroine, not from Greece or Rome, but from a haunting legend of her own country.

After nearly a century of misadventure including shipwreck, fire, rejection and public ridicule, the life-sized statue of Virginia Dare depicted as a young woman is finally at home in the serenity of the Elizabethan Gardens on Roanoke Island.

Pillar Of Marble

Using a large pillar of white marble from the famed quarry of Carrara, Italy, Miss Lander began to chisel endless markings on this fine-grained stone. After 14 months of labor, she completed her statue and placed it aboard a sailing vessel en route to Boston. The vessel encountered a severe storm off the coast of Spain and was wrecked, sending its cargo to the bottom.

Two years later the ship's cargo was salvaged, including the statue of Virginia Dare. Miss Lander was forced to buy back her statue which she restored to its original beauty and exhibited in Boston where it was greatly admired.

A New York collector reportedly bought it for the sum of $5,000 and displayed it in his studio, which caught fire. The statue of Virginia Dare was again in danger of being destroyed, but was saved by a pair of folding doors that were closed. After the New York dealer died, the executors of his estate refused to confirm the sale, so Virginia Dare went back to Miss Lander.

Offered To Sell

About this time Miss Lander learned that North Carolina was to erect a building at the World's Columbian Exposition which was upcoming in Chicago in 1892. She wrote to a Women's Committee of the North Carolina Commission, offering to sell the statue as a most appropriate ornament for the building. The committee was interested, since Virginia Dare was born on North Carolina soil. However, as no funds were available, the committee suggested that Miss Lander give the statue to North Carolina where the history of Virginia Dare would always be of interest.

Miss Lander was 67. Her health was frail although she would live for many years more. She loved the Virginia Dare statue. It was her pride and joy and by now it had become a friend. Miss Lander decided to keep the statue until her death and will it to the state of North Carolina. In 1926, three years after Miss Lander's death in her late 90s, the Virginia Dare statue was officially accepted by the state and formally exhibited in the Hall of History in Raleigh for all to admire.

Controversial Art

But it soon became a controversial work of art — some not being able to see art in a near-nude maiden clad in a fish net. Complaints came to the Department of Archives and History that the statue was obscene. The fact that it was placed beneath the portraits of three Confederate generals didn't help.

In 1938 the Hall of History moved to its new home in the Education Building and all historical effects were taken there except Virginia Dare — the shocking lady was left behind. Whether intentional or not, the marble lady was relegated to isolation in the basement of the old Supreme Court Building.

Later, she somehow made her way to the office of the late George Ross Pou, state auditor. Again, Virginia Dare became the topic of controversial conversation.

One Raleigh newspaper at the time stated: "A Marble Lady, clad only in a fish net, whose downs have included one resting place deep under the water off the coast of Spain, and another resting place in the dingy basement of the Supreme Court Building, is up again!"

More Frowns, Neglect

When the Lost Colony drama was written in the late 1930s by Paul Green, it was decided to send the statue of Virginia Dare to Roanoke Island to be placed in the waterside theater.

In the meantime, Fort Raleigh, location of the theater, had become a national historic site. National Park Service officials frowned on the statue being placed at this historic site since there was no authenticated record that Virginia Dare ever lived to maidenhood. So, once again the marble lady was shunted aside — left unpacked in its shipping crate backstage at the waterside theater.

There it remained until after World War II, when Albert Q. Bell, builder of the theater, decided to send the statue to Paul Green at his Greenwood Estate near Chapel Hill. The Pulitzer prize-winning author never got around to erecting the statue on his estate. When the Elizabethan Gardens were created on Roanoke Island in the early '50s, Green decided to send the statue to the gardens to be placed with the famous statuary from the Whitney Estate of Thomasville, Ga., which had been acquired as ornamentation for the English-style garden.

Finally, A Home

And so, nearly a century after Miss Lander first lovingly carved from white marble her statue of Virginia Dare as she imagined she would look in early womanhood, the life-size statue had a home. The statue had survived shipwreck, fire, abandonment and rebuff, finally to come home to rest in the Elizabethan Gardens near the spot where Virgina Dare was born more than three centuries earlier.

Today, the "maiden of mystery" stands in her own niche at the foot of an ancient live oak, one of the same species of sea-battered oaks that existed in the area where she was born to one of the first family of settlers.

She gazes dreamily beyond the trees toward the gentle sea surge of nearby Roanoke Sound.

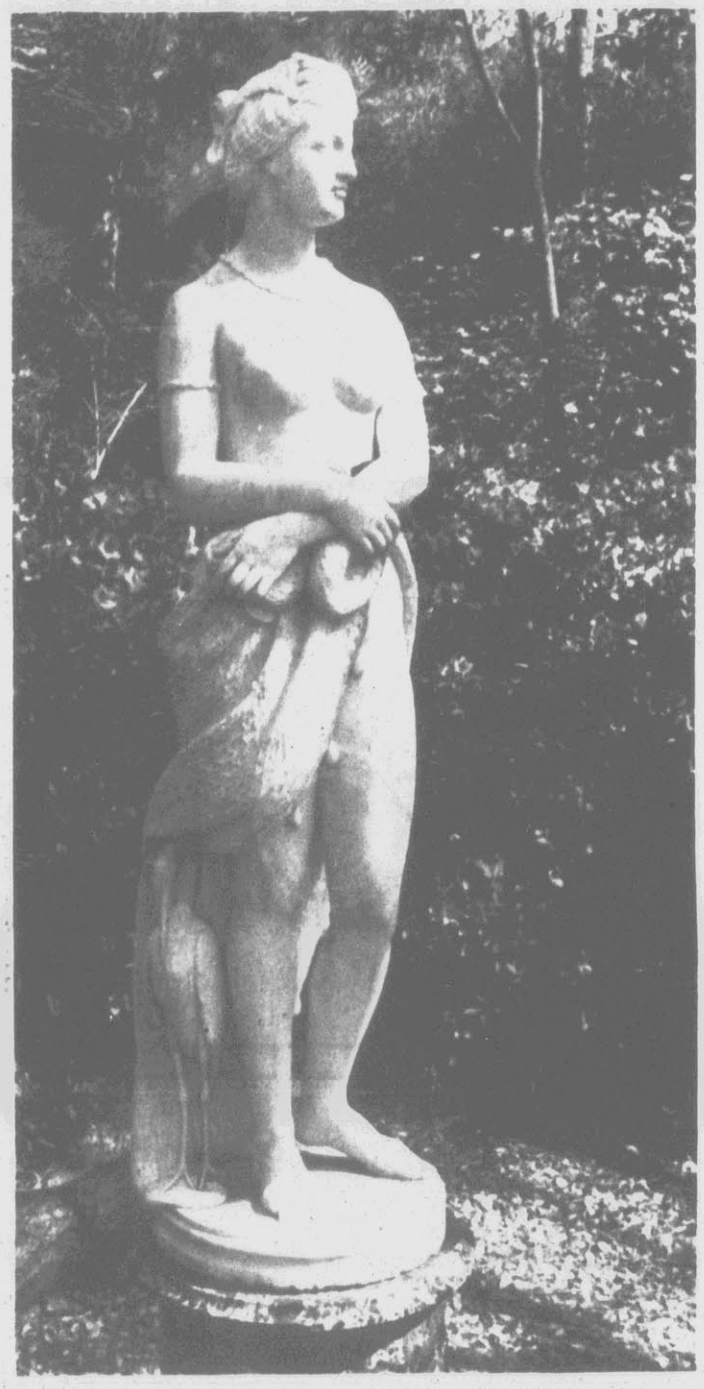

Instead of school books or a classical scroll, Virginia Dare holds a fishnet with pearl-like weights draped about her waist. Around her neck and arms she wears the Indian jewelry of an Indian princess. Instead of a royal greyhound, she is accompanied by a royal heron standing by her right foot.

White Doe Legend

An old Indian legend speaks of a "white doe," which avows that Virgina Dare did indeed grow up among the Indians and that her spirit still roams Roanoke Island in the form of a white doe. Whatever one elects to believe, Maria Louise Lander's sculpture of Virginia Dare stands serene in the Elizabeth Gardens today, a figure of quiet hope, wide-browed and intelligent, the first child of the first colony of Elizabethan England. She gazes toward the future, triumphant over all the odds of survival she weathered before coming home to Roanoke Island.

A FAVORITE VISITATION SITE ... The spacious Elizabethan Gardens, adjacent to historic Fort Raleigh, is a year-round favorite garden for visitors. Here, two costumed members of "The Lost Colony," Sir Walter Raleigh and Queen Elizabeth I, stand in the sunken gardens beneath crepe myrtle trees in flower, surrounded by clipped parterres. The statue and balustrade in the background are among several examples of 16th century statuary and ornamentation in the gardens, gifts from Mr. and Mrs. John Hay Whitney.

A SERENE LADY ... The white marble statue of Virginia Dare in young maidenhood, sculpted by Massachusetts-born Maria Louise Lander while living in Rome, today graces the Elizabethan Gardens on Roanoke Island. It was not until about a century after being carved that the life-size statue finally found a permanent home in the gardens.

Festive Celebration Set For 'Miss Polly's' 100th Birthday

Text By Gail Roberson

HAMILTON — On April 5 Ethel "Polly" Hughes will be 100 years old. Today she is comfortably settled in the Baptist Retirement Home in Hamilton, where she has lived since September 1977.

Soft, white hair crowns a gentle, much younger face than one would expect to find — but her bent hands are evidence of long years.

Her eyes are bright, alert and her nature is lively, with only an occasional moment when her thoughts stray from the conversation at hand to past times.

The wit and delightful humor for which she has been known all her life is still very much alive — "I declare, we have to get up early so we'll just have a longer time to do nothing!", is one of her typical comments.

Staff and other residents of the retirement home say she's been the delight of the home for many years. Though she no longer enjoys perfect health and is a little slower in getting about, she lets people know she "isn't letting 100 years get me down."

Her husband, Julian Thomas Hughes, who served in World Ear I, has been dead for many years. "Miss Polly," as she's affectionately known, is reputed to be the oldest veteran's widow in the area. Childless, she enjoys periodic visits from nieces and nephews. Many friends from past years also visit her.

Because of the special relationship she has with so many people, plans are being made to celebrate her birthday in grand style. Together, staff of the home, relatives and friends are laying the groundwork for a truly memorable 100th birthday celebration. This will take place on April 7 — two days after her birthday — to make it possible for more to attend. If the weather permits, the festivities will be held at 1 p.m. on the grounds of the home. Already, numerous birthday cards have begun arriving in advance.

Kinston Native

A native of Kinston, Miss Polly graduated from Meredith College and went to Chowan in 1909 to head the art department there. She also taught arts and crafts at the Caswell Training Center in Kinston for 30 years.

The love of art has been a source of inspiration to Miss Polly all her life. She still paints, and is especially fond of painting nature and landscapes scenes. Her comfortable room contains several of her paintings.

Her favorite, a painting she did of her mother from memory, hangs over a dresser. It shows her mother standing in a flower garden, with soft petals brushing against the long dark dress she is wearing, partially covered by a Sunday white apron Miss Polly associates with her mother.

On the floor by her bed is another painting, one that Miss Polly always explains to a first-time visitor. The canvas is a bit worn from the many times she has used her walking cane to trace the outline of features while she explains the history of the painting.

"This sycamore tree is where I lived as a child. Below the tree was a cool water spring where mother stored jars of perishables with strings attached to pull them out when needed." Miss Polly reminds listeners "that was back before the days of ice. The only drawback," she adds with a twinkle in her eyes, "was the ugly old bullfrog that would jump in just about the time mother would reach for the string on one of the jars." She laughs about that old frog and the cool water, fond memories of a long-ago childhood.

Soap Opera and Apples

Miss Polly avows "I go to bed when I get good and ready. I enjoy watching television, particulary the soap opera, 'As the World Turns.' I also like good soup and apples, which I get often." She admits, too, to a passion for scarves.

Bird watching is something else she enjoys. Birds gather around a feeder she gave to the home. The roses that bloom in the home's garden during several months of the year is another of her joys.

Miss Polly's bed is covered by a snow white spread. Things she love best surround her in the room, painted a mellow blue.

Miss Polly says "there's only one answer," the secret to what has kept her young in heart after so many years. "I'm a sister in nature," she declares, pointing to trees and skies outside the window of her room. "I'm aged the natural way," she smiled. "You see those old trees over there, across that field? Ain't they pretty! And look, look at that sky above them. Just as pretty as a picture, I'd say. I never stopped looking at nature's stuff. I never stopped taking the time to look.

"Come here," she motioned. "Come here and look what I painted. It's the place where me and Mama walked every day to fetch jars ..." Forgetting momentarily she's explained it before, Miss Polly returns to the cool water and the bullfrog — a cherished memory from nearly 100 years ago, back to where for her it all began.

IN APRIL, HER 100TH BIRTHDAY ... Mrs. Ethel "Polly" Hughes will reach her 100th birthday April 5. A native of Kinston, now a resident of the Baptist Retirement Home in Hamilton, Miss Polly is shown with a painting of a large magnolia blooms she painted recently. She claims that being a sister in nature has been an important factor in her long life.

Corbett-Stoneham Vows Solemnized

St. James United Methodist Church was the scene of the Saturday afternoon wedding ceremony of Susan Lenore Stoneham and Wiley Barnes Corbett III. Conducting the single ring ceremony was the Rev. Dewey Tyson assisted by J.M. Bragg.

Mrs. Francis Cain was organist for the ceremony. Mrs. Todd Pair played the guitar and sang and "The Wedding Prayer" was sung by J.M. Bragg.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. William Leon Stoneham of Route 8, Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Wiley B. Corbett Jr. of Greenville.

The matron of honor was Karen Garris Gaskins and maid of honor was Susan Leigh Corbett, sister of the bridegroom, both of Greenville. Bridesmaids included Gena Christine Buck of Grimesland and Lisa Carol Dobbs of Greenville. Kathryn Hicks of Greenville was flower girl.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Jeffrey Bryan Spear, Harold Reid Joyner and Donald C. Hicks III, all of Greenville.

Debbie Pollard presided at the wedding register.

The bride graduated from D.H. Conley High School, attended East Carolina Univesity and Pitt Community College. She will be attending Hardbarger Junior College of Business. The bridegroom graduated from J.H. Rose High School and attended Lees-McRae College and ECU. He is now a junior account executive with Hamilton-Avnet Electronics of Raleigh.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore the wedding gown which was worn by the mother of the bridegroom. It was styled of white nylon tulle and lace over satin with a fitted basque waist, off-shoulder neckline with folds of tulle and lace beaded in pearls. The bouffant skirt was trimmed in lace and extended into a chapel length train. Her chapel length veil of illusion was fastened to a bandeau of lace and pearls. She carried a cascade of white bridal roses, white cymbidium orchid trimmed with baby's breath and ivy.

The matron of honor wore a dress of mint green taffeta fashioned with a fitted bodice, double bell puff sleeves and a flowing ruffled train. She carried a cascade of pink carnations, white mums, daisies, purple statice, baby's breath and greenery.

MRS. CORBETT

The flower girl wore a pink taffeta dress and carried a white wicker basket filled with rose petals.

A reception was held at the Brook Valley Country Club after the ceremony. Slides of the bridal couple were shown prior to the cake cutting. The refreshment table was centered with a silver wine cooler filled with mums, pink carnations, daisies, statice, baby's breath and greenery.

Johnna Brookshire, cousin of the bride, presided at the register which was placed on a table decorated with a bouquet of pink carnations.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at the Brook Valley Country Club for members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests. A dance followed and was given by friends of the couple for the wedding party, family, friends and out-of-town guests.

ADA Encourages Moderate Cholesterol

Cutting back on cholesterol as a way to avoid coronary heart disease doesn't mean "giving up" anything, says the nation's largest group of nutrition professionals. It just means "balancing" the fat and cholesterol content of meals and snacks.

As more and more Americans react to a recent federal study linking the risk of heart attack to cholestrol consumption, The American Dietetic Association (ADA) advises against overreaction. Removing dairy foods from your diet to prevent heart disease, for example, would only increase your chances for osteoporosis since dairy foods are a major source of calcium, says the ADA.

Instead, the ADA encourages moderation, not elimination, of foods high in fat to reduce the cholesterol in your diet.

Some ways are obvious, such as opting for lowfat and nonfat products when shopping by the dairy case, trimming fat from meat and avoiding fried foods, especially those breaded or batter-fried. But because the amount of fat in food varies according to the type of fat, the ADA says there are more methods for cutting back on cholesterol that you may not know about.

Animal fats, for example, tend to be higher in saturated fats, while most vegetable oils are generally higher in polyunsaturated fats. And only animal fats contain cholesterol.

Therefore, the ADA suggests you:

•Select soft margarine in which the first ingredient listed on the label is a liquid polyunsaturated oil, such as corn oil.

•When possible, choose vegetable oils. And despite what the recipe says, use oil or margarine rather than shortening, lard or butter when baking.

•Use moderate amounts of salad dressings or try lemon juice with a variety of herbs and spices to season a salad.

•Use a blender to whip plain lowfat yogurt ot lowfat cottage cheese and substitute the whipped ingredient for sour cream and mayonnaise.

•Try mozzarella cheese and other cheeses made from part skim milk, which are lower in fat and cholesterol than cheddar or Swiss.

•Use skim or lowfat milk in puddings, sauces, soups and baked products. It's a fallacy that whole milk is essential to recipes.

Substitute egg whites for whole eggs, using two whites for every egg listed in a recipe. Egg yolks have a high cholesterol content, while the whites have no cholesterol at all. When making scrambled eggs, use only one yolk per serving and add a few whites to make the serving more generous.

•Carefully read labels of frozen main dishes, such as lasagna, pizza and pot pies to see if fat is a primary ingredient (One of the first on the list).

•Trim fat from meat before and after cooking — including the fat between the muscles. Cook the meat or poultry on a rack so the fat drains off and remove the skin from poultry.

•Roast, bake, broil or simmer meat, poultry or fish without adding fat. Braise in a covered pan on top of the range or in the oven. Try pan-broiling in a nonstick pan.

More suggestions on reducing cholesterol from your diet, including recipes, are available in ADA's "Food 3: Eating the Moderate Fat and Cholesterol Way." To order "Food 3," send $5 to P.O. Box 91403, Chicago, Ill. 60693. Allow four weeks for delivery.

Students Visit Day Care Center

Students in the advanced child development class at Rose High School recently visited Tammy's Day Care Center under the guidance of Marian Wilkes. Students' preparations included planning storytimes, music games, songs and rhythm sessions.

Ande Harper and Linda Harris, in entertaining the toddlers and 1-year-olds, colored pictures and played with the youngsters. Donna Pierce, Sharon Vines and Millett Laughinghouse worked with the 2 and 3-year-olds in a storytime and color bingo. Winners receiving stuffed animals made by the group were Kris Ridenour, Mathew Rogers, Lauren Weaver and James Beverly.

Carldene Daniels and Carolyn Hines led the 3 and 4-year-olds in musical chairs and storytime. Playing house was also enjoyed. Working with other 4-year-olds were Alex Gowen, Kim Snyder and Ed House. Hokey pokey, musical chairs and storytime were scheduled activities.

James, one of the 4-year-olds, said, "I want to sing Michael Jackson."

Campaign Promotes Balanced Diets

March is National Nutrition Time and in a year dominated by the Olympics, the nation's largest group of nutrition professionals warns Americans not to imitate their heros without properly fueling their bodies.

"There are a lot of armchair athletes who think they can go straight from their living rooms to the gym," says Marilyn B. Haschke, R.D., president of The American Dietetic Association (ADA). "But getting into shape has just as much to do with good nutrition as flexing your muscles."

That's why the 50,000 members of the ADA will be promoting balanced diets for athletic prowess during the 12th annual campaign to improve American eating habits.

"So may people get caught up in the excitement of the Olympics and think they can go out and start running two miles a day," Haschke says. "What they don't realize is that these Olympians have been training for years and good nutrition has a lot to do with their success."

Before starting any exercise program, ADA advises a complete assessment of your cardiovascular health through a stress test — especially if you're over 35, smoke or have high blood pressure. An exercise program should be planned around the results of the stress test and for most healthy persons, the ADA recommends 15 to 60 minutes of continuous aerobic activity three to five times a week.

The key, Haschke says, is to begin a program realistically and comfortably and work up to a desired goal. ADA also suggests that each exercise session begin with five to ten minutes of warm up to avoid muscle and joint injury.

Aerobic exercise — jogging, brisk walking, dancing, swimming or cycling — should be strenuous to the point of conditioning muscles and the cardiovascular system without being excessive. A brisk walking program is recommended by the ADA for persons of all ages. Jogging, however, is not for everyone and may cause foot, leg and knee injuries.

A balanced diet should be part of the fitness program for persons at all levels of activity, Haschke says, contending that poor eating habits can detract from the benefits of exercise. Food choices should be made from the four food groups — milk, cheese and other dairy products; fruits and vegetables; enriched or whole grain breads and cereals; and fish, chicken, beans or meat.

Extremely active people need additional breads and cereals for the extra energy they use in vigorous exercise programs.

Couple Marries In Morning Ceremony

Mary Dell Smith and William Robert Enecks were united in marriage Saturday morning at 11:30 in a ceremony performed on the Town Common by the Rev. Ola Forbes Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. George Delma Smith Sr. of Chocowinity are parents of the bride. Mrs. Elizabeth Enecks of Dayton, Tenn., is the mother of the bridegroom.

J.K. Loftin was guitarist for the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory satin. The Victorian inspired gown featured a high neckline encircled with ivory Venise lace and the fitted bodice was centered with a panel of ruched satin interspersed with rows of Venise lace and ivory satin ribbon. The scalloped patterned Venise lace enhanced the modified basque waistline and the long fitted Juliet styled sleeves were trimmed in satin ruche and Venise lace. She wore a crown of ivory silk flowers with a tiered veil of ivory illusion. She carried am arm bouquet of pink tearoses, ivory cymbidium orchids, alstromeria lilies and baby's breath tied with ivory satin streamers.

MRS. ENECKS

Elaine Smith of Greenville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids included Jan King of Greenville and Sharon Arnold of Stirling, Va.

Dave Balch was best man and ushers were Malcolm Smith and Greg Wilson, all Greenville.

The attendants were each dressed in a formal gown of rose matte taffeta designed with an open, sweetheart neckline and long fitted sleeves. The modified natural waistline was enhanced by a belt of self-fabric and the gathered skirt was edged at the hemline in a ruffled flounce of taffeta which extended up the gown back in a bustle effect. Each carried an arm bouquet of alstromeria lilies, ivory fuji poms, heather with satin streamers.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Florida.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of East Carolina University. She is an English instructor at Beaufort Community College and he is a field representative, State Board of Examiners of Heating and Plumbing Contractors.

A reception was held at Margaux's. Dr. and Mrs. Karl Rodabaugh greeted guests and Blanche Williams presided at the register. Laura Hoke and Nina Dooley poured punch and cake was served by Leigh Weatherly and Connie Taylor.

The bride's table was decorated with an arrangement of snapdragons, heather and alstromeria lilies.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's family at the Holiday Inn in Greenville. Guests were members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests.

A bridesmaids luncheon was given by the maternal aunts of the bride at the Holiday Inn in Greenville. The bride remembered her attendants with gifts.

Several parties were given for the couple prior to the wedding.

Eggs Turned Into Varied Objects

SAG HARBOR, N.Y. (AP) — Eggs may not have artistic potential for most people, but to Alexandra Eames they are a blank canvas for her creative efforts.

She colors them in vivid hues and transforms them into such objects as birds, flowers, spaceships and vases, or makes them "grow" on trees by hanging decorated eggshells from small branches.

Before she starts work on an egg, she has a preconceived notion about how she wants it to look.

"I get my inspiration from almost anything around me," says Ms. Eames, who creates the eggs for display purposes for PAAS, a major manufacturer of Easter egg color kits. "One year, for instance, a seed catalog came with a lot of pictures of flowers. So, I said, I've really got to use them somehow, and I ended up doing decoupaged eggs."

These, she explained, are cut-out flowers, animals or geometric designs from scraps of fabric or magazine illustrations, which are attached to colored eggs with glue or double-faced sticky tape.

Ms. Eames, who studied art at Parsons School of Design, spends an average of a half hour decorating an egg. Does she mind that her art work may be destroyed so quickly after Easter is over?

"If the egg turns out to be really nice, it's worth saving," she says. "I have seen eggs, even those that were hard-cooked, that people carefully set aside for years. Slowly the insides dry up and harden and the egg begins to rattle. If you have an egg you really like, you should save it."

One of her favorite decorations involves the use of real leaves. This is the type of design she calls "resist-leaf decorated eggs."

"This means coating the egg with something that will resist the coloring bath," she explains. "Dip tiny leaves in vegetable oil and lay on the egg surface. To keep leaves from slipping, wrap the egg in a square of discarded nylon stocking and tie tightly with thread. Dip the egg into the coloring. When the color is dark enough, remove the piece of nylon and leaves and blot the egg dry." The imprint of the leaves will remain.

Another popular creation is a decorative egg vase. Ms. Eames empties an egg, which she colors to a bright hue as a background for her design. Then, using a sharp pair of cuticle scissors, she carefully cuts off the narrow top of the egg. After using a wax crayon to decorate — with a name, flowers, or simply a design — she glues the base of the egg to a a curtain ring that has been colored to match the egg.

For Easter, the egg vase can be used to hold water and live flowers. Later, silk or dried flowers can be put in the vases, to be used in place settings or for favors.

Spinning Workshop Starts Tuesday

Pitt Community College and Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will offer a spinning workshop Tuesday and Wednesday at the Community Building.

Participants in the workshop will begin with raw wool and learn to card and spin the wool using floor style spinning wheels.

The instructor will be Judy Havercamp, a spinner from Goldsboro. She became interested in spinning when she learned the antique wheel could be used. She developed the Spinners' Guild in Wayne County after she taught guild members to spin. Ms. Havercamp repairs and spins on old spinning wheels.

The registration fee for the workshop is $6 plus $6 for supplies (total $12). To preregister or to obtain further informationn call Myra Sexauer at 756-1223.

Some 100 of every 1,000 children died before their first birthday 70 years ago, according to the American Council of Life Insurance. Today, because of medical and technical advances, the rate is 11 deaths per 1,000 infants born.

Consumer Can Aid Doctor's Knowledge Gap

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Most doctors didn't learn enough about nutrition to fill a teacup when they were in school, says Dr. Joseph J. Vitale, a Boston University Medical School nutrition professor.

That, he claims, is why you must make yourself a nutrition-wise consumer and even tell your physician what you eat and drink when you see him for any reason.

"For one, there is evidence many drugs might interfere with nutrients," Vitale, a professor of nutrition, pathology and community medicine, said. He said knowing your dietary style can influence directions the doctor gives you about taking such medicine.

If enough patients bring up nutrition in talking to doctors, Vitale said, more doctors might try to improve their knowledge of nutrition, making up for the void in their education.

(The National Cancer Institute gave a handful of medical schoolc money a while back, asking them to develop model programs for teaching nutrition. The programs still are under development.)

To help people learn about about nutrition, BU's Vitale, Dr. Robert N. Ross and Laura Freid just produced a report, "Nutrition In an Age of Affluence," published in Bostonia, a BU Alumni House publication.

Vitale said the report is designed to help people wade through opinions, advertising pitches and popular science to devise well-balanced diets.

It tells about fast food, additives, food myths, processed food and overeating, and contains a questionnaire and work sheet.

On the 24-hour food worksheet there are places to record: time started eating and time stopped; a meal or snack; place where it was done; physical position while eating; alone or with whom; associated activity; mood; level of hunger, food and amounts.

Vitale said the food log can help make you more aware of what you eat, how much, when, why and under what circumstances.

"You may find that you eat when you are bored or anxious or that your eating habits are encouraging you to eat quickly without paying attention to your food," Vitale said.

People who engage in what he called "mindless eating" consume a large portion of their food standing up, on the run or just standing in front of the refrigerator.

By answering questions on the BU nutrition questionnaire you can learn about your own nutritional lifestyle and be better able to formulate dietary goals that will promote good health, Vitale said.

"What, when and why are the most important questions in analyzing a diet," the BU experts say.

To get you started, here is the questionnaire, reprinted with permission from Bostonia:

1. Has your weight changed markedly in the last years? Up or down?
2. Do you cook for yourself? If not, who cooks?
3. How many times a week do you usually eat away from home?
4. Would you say your appetite is good? Fair? Poor?
5. What foods do you particularly dislike?
6. What foods do you particularly like?
7. Are there foods you like but do not eat? Why?
9. Do you add salt to your food?
10. Do you take vitamins? Which ones? How often?

To improve nutrition, the BU experts recommend:

—Pay attention to the food you put in your mouth.

—Eat while sitting.

—Eat only in kitchen or dining room.

—Eat slowly.

—Put in front of you only as much food as you will eat at that sitting.

—Wait until the food has had a chance to get into your system before you go back for more.

—Stay out of the kitchen unless you are cooking.

—Substitute activities for eating.

—Store foods you eat too much of in less visible places.

—Put low-calorie foods up front.

—Re-wrap foods into small packages and eat only what is in the package.

—Remove uneaten food from table immediately.

(Bostonia's "Nutrition in an Age of Affluence" may be obtained by sending $3.50 to Bostonia, 10 Lenox St., Brookline, Mass. 02146).

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

The Stepfamilies are coming! The Stepfamilies are coming!

Not only are their numbers on the rise, but because 75 percent of divorced women and 83 percent of divorced men remarry, by 1990 there will be more stepfamilies than traditional ones.

I was a stepchild back in the days when they were rare and had a lot of bugs to be worked out. My grandmother, sparked by a low threshold of boredom, was married five times. At family reunions, there was no such thing as a family resemblance. We never knew what it was, so we never knew if we had it.

I had a whole brother and a half sister. She in turn had a half brother, a half sister, a stepsister, and a full sister. We always prefaced every meeting with, "Who's your father?" and went from there. We had half-aunts, uncles by divorce, and a few dozen cousins by association. We racked up stepchildren three years younger than their stepmothers, brothers who couldn't begin to spell their sister's last name, and grandfathers who were never too sure who you were. I went to a funeral once and wept like a baby over an aunt who was never related to me.

Just last week I said in a column that I saw no need whatsoever for a home computer. I take that back. If there is one area that needs a storage unit for names and relationships, that can be printed out in a matter of seconds, it's the stepfamily.

Take the child whose divorced mother had four children and married a widower with five, all under 18. He was the only kid in town with two brothers named Jimmy, a brother and a sister a month apart and two sisters 12 days apart. A rabbit on a good day couldn't top that.

The record-keeping alone of these families is enough to boggle the mind. Traditional families have enough problems keeping track of immunizations and school records without having to figure out who had their tonsils out and who didn't.

The computer would not only keep pace with how many tickets are needed for graduation and seats for the wedding, but whether or not the separation would allow for three mothers and three fathers to sit in peace and love or be scattered throughout the crowd.

I had a terrible time once explaining to a teacher about the twins in our family who were six and eight who had the same last name. They were not twins to each other in her class because the six-year-old twin got held back when theymoved with their father, and the eight-year-old twin lived with his mother in another town.

I don't know why they looked alike.

Someone should have kept better records.

Engagements Announced

JENNIFER JO WESTER...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Ray Wester of New Bern, who announce her engagement to Richard Glenn Joyner Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard G. Joyner of Route 2, Aurora. The wedding is planned for June 2.

HELENE FARRELL CLARK...is the daughter of Ann Chaffin Clark of Route 1, Grimesland, who announces her engagement to David John Steffensen, son of Mr. and Mrs. John David Steffensen of Greenville. The bride-elect is also the daughter of the late William Farham Clark. A May 19 wedding will take place.

Transportation Is Large Budget Item

The cost of transportation is the second biggest budget item for most North Carolina families. There are a number of practices to reduce these costs, says Dr. Thelma Hinson, extension family resource management specialist, North Carolina State University.

One large saving will be realized if a family uses a car for another year instead of trading it in. Smaller, but significant savings can also come from driving at lower speeds, reducing the number of trips made, carpooling and contacting the insurance company for a lower premium, keeping tires properly inflated and the engine tuned up.

COME FOR DESSERT
Cherry Cheesecake & Coffee

CHERRY CHEESECAKE

It's chocolate flavored.

- 2 large eggs
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1 ounce unsweetened chocolate, melted
- 1/2 teaspoon almond extract
- 8 ounce package cream cheese
- 2 cups sour cream
- Crumb Crust, recipe follows
- One 16- or 17-ounce can pitted dark sweet cherries
- Cherry Glaze, recipe follows

Beat eggs, sugar, melted chocolate, almond extract and cream cheese until very smooth; stir into sour cream. Pour into Crumb Crust. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 to 50 minutes or until edge is set and dull in color while center is still glossy. Cool completely. Remove rim from pan. Drain cherries; reserve 3/4 cup syrup for Glaze. Arrange cherries over cheesecake. Top with Glaze. Chill several hours. Makes 10 to 12 cervings.

Crumb Crust: Combine 1 cup fine vanilla wafer crumbs, 2 tablespoons sugar, 3 tablespoons melted butter. Press over bottom and 1 1/2 inches up sides of 8-inch springform pan.

Cherry Glaze: Combine reserved syrup and 1/4 teaspoon almond extract; heat to boiling. Dissolve 1 tablespoon cornstarch in a little cold water; add to hot cherry syrup mixture; cook over medium heat stirring constantly until clear and thickened. Cool slightly. Makes about 1 3/4 cups.

CHICKEN BARBECUE

Ruddy brown color and well-balanced sweet and sour flavor.

- 3-pound frying or roasting chicken, cut up
- Medium onion, finely chopped
- Clove garlic, minced
- 3/4 cup tomato ketchup
- 3/4 cup water
- 2 tablespoons cider vinegar
- 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 1 bay leaf

Line a large shallow roasting pan with foil; arrange chicken in it, skin side down, in a single layer. Thoroughly whisk together onion, garlic, ketchup, water, vinegar, Worcestershire, salt, pepper; add bay leaf; pour over chicken. Broil 6 to 8 inches from high heat for about 20 minutes; turn chicken skin-side up and, basting often with sauce in pan, continue broiling until chicken is tender — about 25 minutes longer. Good served with rice. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

He's In Trouble Due To Wife's Buying

DEAR ABBY: I am on the verge of bankruptcy because my wife loves to shop. She writes checks, doesn't record them, and when the bank statements come, she hides them, thinking I won't find out.

She keeps buying clothes until there is no more room in the closets. She has charge accounts all over town. Also credit cards. She says we're in trouble financially because I am a "failure." Abby, I make $37,000 a year, which is well above the poverty level, and she calls me a failure.

There are just the two of us — no children. She doesn't work outside the home and doesn't want to. Have you ever heard of anything like this? It's like a disease. Please help me.

GOING UNDER IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR GOING UNDER: Yes, it's called "compulsive spending."

Write to the National Foundation for Comsumer Credit Inc., 8701 Georgia Ave., Silver Spring, Md. 20910, for the address of its local office. (Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.) Counselors can help hold off the creditors, show you how to budget your money and get out of the hole you're in. (Be prepared to surrender your credit cards.)

But there is another problem here that needs addressing: To get to the cause of her problem, your wife needs counseling. (Here we go again!) She needs to know why she is a compulsive spender. There is a strong possibility that she's trying to substitute "things" for some unmet need in her life.

•••

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago, after treating a few friends to lunch, I left a tip that amounted to exactly 15 percent of the bill. The tip included seven pennies.

One of the parties with me told me that it was in bad taste to leave pennies in a tip.

Was it really in bad taste or not?

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: While pennies aren't the most desirable form of legal tender, they're better than nothing.

And speaking of "taste," I think your guest showed worst taste in pointing out your "bad taste" than you did in leaving seven pennies.

•••

DEAR ABBY: I realize that there are more profound questions in the universe, but mine is, "Why isn't there a man on earth who knows what to do when a woman he cares about cries?

I am 45, started dating at 14, have been married once and divorced once, and I have yet to find a man who knew what to do when a woman cried.

When my father died, my then-husband lay motionless with his hands behind his head while I lay beside him, crying at night. The man I am presently dating is a psychologist, and he's no better than the rest.

If you've covered this, I must have missed it. What's the answer, Abby?

CONSTANT OHIO READER

DEAR READER: Don't assume that because you've never met a man who knew what to do when a woman he cared for cried, none exist. I assure you they do.

However, for the benefit of those who don't know and would like to, my advice would be to kiss her tears away.

'Hello Girl' Recalls World War I Service

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — In 1917, 200 young American women joined the Army's Female Telephone Operators Unit in response to advertisements from Gen. John J. Pershing, which said, "I need you because I can't fight the Germans and France's appalling telephone system."

One of these "Hello Girls" of World War I was Anne Campbell Atkinson, now 92. Sitting at the kitchen table in her Boise home, she holds a large magnifying glass to her eye, reads the words on the Honorable Discharge papers she finally got in 1979, and remembers how it all began.

She was 25 years old and worked as Chief Operator in the Emmett, Idaho, telephone company. On a hot August afternoon in 1917, she placed a long distance call that changed her life.

"The lines were very noisy and I had to repeat the conversations between both parties," she recalled in a recent interview. "They completed their business and I hung up and I went back to other chores."

Within minutes, one of the operators summoned her to the line and a voice said, "Madam, if you are the lady who just assisted with the call to New York, I'd like to hire you for the U.S. Army. I'm a recruiter for General Pershing and your voice is so crisp and clear — would you be willing to go to France as an operator for the Army? Your country needs you."

Mrs. Atkinson hadn't given much thought to the war in Europe, but after considering the offer, she accepted. "It was partly out of patriotism, a little curiosity, and a great deal because my sister, Bess, was in Paris as an Army nurse," she said.

The Signal Corps had not been authorized funds for uniforms. The women were expected to dig into their purses for the nearly $300 to buy the blue uniforms, black shoes and boots, woolen underwear and black sateen bloomers "in case the ankle-length skirts were blown up by the winds."

The Commercial Club of Emmett (forerunner of the Chamber of Commerce) held a community picnic on a steamy August afternoon, and that evening the club president handed Mrs. Atkinson the money she needed to buy Army clothes.

During the train trip to New York, she met another telephone operator from Idaho and the two excitedly talked about their futures. "We could hardly wait to see New York and tried to guess what the Army would do with us."

Six weeks later, the telephone operators had completed a condensed military training program and had learned to operate the Army switchboards. In the fall of 1917 Mrs. Atkinson, together with 35 women classmates, boarded the troopship Aquitania, which carried nearly 10,000 Army officers and men, for the trip to England.

Mrs. Atkinson was stationed at La Belle Epine, 40 miles outside Paris, where the operators dispatched telephone communications between American, British and French headquarters. General Pershing visited the center regularly and she remembers "he was very stern and didn't talk much but we always had everything we requested and he always asked if we were all right and if the equipment was operating. Sometimes at the end of his visit he would smile and tell us to keep up the good work.

"When word of Germany's surrender came down the telephone lines, we all cried with happiness, but we didn't dare tell anyone. We decided to go to Paris and shop, see the people, and celebrate the peace and happiness because we hadn't been allowed to set foot off our military post during the war."

Mrs. Atkinson remained in the Army and in Paris until the spring of 1919. But it would be 60 years before the remaining 19 survivors of the original 200 women would receive Congressional recognition as World War I veterans.

More than 50 pieces of legislation were introduced in the U.S. Congress in the six decades following the Armistice in the long struggle for their recognition. Finally, in November 1977, a package of bills was approved to extend full veterans' rights to the Female Telephone Operators Unit, but another two years passed before the Congressional action was printed.

In September 1979, Mrs. Atkinson, then nearly 88, and the other 18 survivors scattered across the country were presented with Honorable Discharges from the U.S. Army by the senior Army officer in each state during formal military ceremonies.

Through the magnifying glass Mrs. Atkinson reads "...whose service in World War I encompassed the period November 28, 1917, through June 30, 1919, be considered active military service in the U.S. Armed Forces for the purpose of all laws administered by the Veterans' Administration..."

Laying the magnifyer down, she says in a clear, crisp voice, "I'd do it all over."

Women In Politics Making Some Progress

By FRED McNEESE
United Press International

Women in the South have made some progress in their quest to break male domination of elected statewide offices, but still have a long way to go before they achieve political equality.

There is one women U.S. senator from the South, one congresswoman and a few female constitutional officers and state legislators, but there are no women governors.

In the eight Southeastern states, there are only a handful of women holding statewide elective office. And campaign '84 is primarily a male event, with few women making a credible bid for office.

Neva Greenwald, president of the Missisippi League of Women Voters, and Elizabeth Grant, head of the North Carolina League, said women candidates begin any campaign with a strike against them.

"Women do not have the ready access to financial resources as men and that's a deterrent," said Ms. Greenwald. "Women also do not hold in the world of work the same types of positions men do. Women hold more of the low-prestige, low-paying positions than men do."

Ms. Grant said women also must contend with bias on the part of some people that they can't do the job simply because they are women.

"There is almost an onus on women candidates to prove they are far superior to the male candidate," she said.

Ms. Greenwald said she believes the sex issue had a lot to do with last year's loss of Evelyn Gandy in the Mississippi gubernatorial election.

Miss Gandy, a former state insurance commissioner, state treasurer and lieutenant governor, led a five-candidate field for the Democratic nomination for the state's highest office, but lost to now-Gov. Bill Allain in a runoff.

"People are going to have to learn to disregard sex as a criterium for office," said Ms. Greenwald. "But I think statewide, we're quite a ways from that because there have not been as many women elected on the local levels.

"I think that's beginning to change because there are more and more women running for local races, not only working (in campaigns) but actually beginning to run for public office themselves."

Dorothy McDiarmid, a member of the Virginia House of Delegates since 1960, said the experience issue is a critical one. She said women are only now beginning to get the experience in lesser offices that qualifies them in the eyes of voters for the statewide posts.

"I see a woman in the U.S. Senate for Virginia when a really good one runs," she said. "Women and blacks do not have a history of being elected and we don't have the basis to move up in the system like men do."

In North Carolina this year, just six women are seeking statewide or congressional offices under the Republican or Democratic Party banner.

Ms. Grant said she believes women's groups are taking the steps that will lead to more women in elective and appointive positions in the future. The women's organizations are gathering names of qualified women to be submitted to state officials responsible for appointments to boards and commissions.

"We are trying to get a talent bank roster of qualified women who should be considered for these appointments," she said. "Now, by the time it gets in the paper that a vacancy exists, the wheels usually are in motion and it is too late."

She said organizations also hope to encourage more women to participate in the political process by creating a women's network of political contacts.

"It is discouraging for those of us who would like to see it happen sooner, but the patient groundwork is being done." she said.

Florida has only one woman in statewide office, Republican Sen. Paula Hawkins — the highest-ranking female officeholder in the Southeast. In the state senate, the seven Republicans recently elected Toni Jennings of Orlando as Senate minority leader.

Ms. Jennings, a construction company executive, says the problems of female officeseekers could be more of media perception than political fact.

"Let's skip the 'woman' part and talk about political issues," she said. "I don't want to say I'm not interested in women's issues — that's not it at all — but why are we singled out? Why shouldn't we just be considered senators with views of our own."

South Carolina state Sen. Norma Russell was trounced by Democrat Mike Daniel in 1982 but she said she believes her defeat was more a factor of party than sex. She said she didn't find any difficulty in the race because of her sex.

"I think it was an asset," she said. "It's always been an asset when I was running for election.

"I think it's a copout for women candidates to say they're discriminated against because they're women."

Mary Marshall, a member of the Virginia General Assembly since 1966, sees the perception of female candidates changing in her state.

"When I first ran, a lot of people didn't want to vote for a woman and now I think a lot of people vote for me because I am a woman," she said. "Women have come into style."

Alabama elected a female governor in 1966 when Lurleen Wallace substituted for her husband, George Wallace, who could not succeed himself. She was Alabama's first and only woman governor, dying in office in 1968 of cancer.

Alabama currently has three women holding elected statewide offices — Treasurer Annie Laurie Gunter, Auditor Jan Cook and Associate Justice Janie Shores of the state Supreme Court.

Jane Katz of Montgomery, the Alabama League of Women Voters' legislative representative, said the offices of state auditor and treasurer have traditionally gone to women.

There are not as many women as there should be," Mrs. Katz said, "but I think that's increasing."

State Sen. Ann Bedsole of Mobile made history in 1982 when she became the first female to be elected to the state Senate after serving in the House.

"Once a woman is elected and does all right it's easier for other women to come along," Mrs. Katz said. "I think gradually more women are going to run and are going to get elected.

"It's not an overnight process because we started so much further back because of a lack of money, a lack of contact to get money — that's ready made for men. Also, as women get more active in the business world, they will come to think of that as a natural thing."

Ms. Cook said her job as state auditor was "stereotyped" for a woman. She said women have tended to stay out of races for other state offices.

"Perhaps it is because they don't think they can step into that arena," she said. "To have someone elected, someone has got to run. That area hasn't been tested in Alabama very much."

Mrs. Gunter, who has served as state treasurer since 1978, said she thinks apathy has a lot to do with the number of women in public office.

"People don't want to take a position," she said.

Presently, there are no women in statewide elective office in Georgia.

Kathy McDonald, wife of Rep. Larry McDonald, attracted national attention when she attempted to succeed her husband after he died Sept. 1, 1983, when the Soviet Union shot down Korean Air Lines Flight 007.

She finished first in the primary election among eight candidates, but she lost in the runoff election to state Rep. George "Buddy" Darden.

Tennessee has just one woman holding statewide political office — Jane Eskind of ther three-member Public Service Commission.

However, the Volunteer State also has the Southeast's only female congresswoman, Rep. Marilyn Lloyd. She was first elected in 1974 after the death of her husband, a Chattanooga TV commentator, who was the Democratic nominee for the office. Mort Lloyd was killed in a plane crash.

Thusfar, no other Tennessee women have announced as candidates, or even indicated they will run, for any major office this year.

Ms. Greenwald of Mississippi said one way to increase the number of women officeholders is to begin at home when the child is young.

"If you are led to believe early on that it is possible for you to do anything, if you're given opportunities, it helps to overcome societal biases," she said.

MAPLE PORK

It has a lovely glaze that's also a sauce.

2 to 3-pound smoked boneless pork shoulder butt
Whole cloves
2 tablespoons maple syrup
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard

Cook pork according to wrapper directions; drain well. Insert cloves, several inches apart, over surface of pork. Place in a small shallow pan — lined with foil if you like. Stir together syrup and mustard; spoon over pork. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven, basting once, until syrup mixture is hot. Baste several times before serving.

Powerful Novel About Viet Nam

FRAGMENTS. By Jack Fuller. Morrow. 211 Pages. $12.95.

Fragments are broken pieces, but given the proper glue they can be assembled into a whole.

And this is the technique Jack Fuller uses to create a powerful novel about the Vietnam War and the men who fought and died in it.

The fragments which make up this novel are narrated by Bill Morgan, a young Midwesterner who gets drafted into the Army in 1968. During basic training, Morgan teams up with Jim Neumann, largely because Neumann is poised and able to cope with the world in which he finds himself while Morgan is the opposite, unsure of both himself and his surroundings.

After training, both young men are sent to Vietnam and briefly separated. Morgan is attached to an infantry unit and his descriptions of combat Vietnam-style are so truly told that the reader's blood often runs cold.

Following a particularly brutal ambush in which two of Morgan's buddies are cut down by the enemy, Morgan decides he wants out and volunteers to join an elite airborne unit, called the Blues, to which Neumann already belongs.

Reunited, the two friends go into any number of bloody combat episodes together. And then there is a lull in the fighting. Rather than sit around and go stale, Neumann decides to adopt a small Vietnamese village and help its people by building a medical dispensary for them.

Things go well for a while, but Neumann falls in love with one of the Vietnamese women in the village and then everything seems to fall apart. The Viet Cong attack the village and during the fighting, Neumann, in a seeming mindless act of violence, kills his lover as well as her family.

This bloody act is another of the fragments Morgan must carry home with him, and his efforts — eventually successful — to make sense of all that has gone before, bring this very good novel to an emotional conclusion.

Writers Will Meet Tuesday

The second meeting in March of members of the Greenville Writers Club will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the office of the Playwrights' Fund of North Carolina. The office is located in the basement of the Humber House, West Fifth Street, just across from city hall. Those attending are asked to use the side door, the Washington Street entrance.

The club is open to anyone interested in creative writing. There are no fees involved in attending the meetings.

N.C. Competition

HUDSON — Competition for the Poetry Council of North Carolina will open April 1 and close June 15. Contest categories include the Oscar Arnold Young Memorial Contest for the best book of poetry with more than 20 pages published in 1983 by a writer who is, or has been, a resident of North Carolina.

Other categories of competition are:

- The James Larkin Pearson contest for free verse and experimental forms limited to 22 lines;
- The Archibald Rutledge contest for sonnet entries, of either Shakespearean or Italian forms;
- The Virginia Dare contest for poets 12-18 in any form, limited to 24 lines.

Prizes amount to about $600 and are awarded on poetry day in October, held each year in Asheville.

For full details, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Ms. Lucy M. Walters, P. O. Box 93, Hudson, N. C., 28638.

Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Last summer, stamp collectors had the opportunity to make arrangements to order cacheted covers to be carried aboard the Space Shuttle Challenger. The U.S. Postal Service tells us that there were 260,899 covers carried in the cargo bay and 1,001 covers carried in the crew cabin during the eighth shuttle flight (Challenger's third mission) from Aug. 30 to Sept. 5.

The space mail project represented a joint philatelic venture between the USPS and NASA. Every cover sold to collectors was carried aboard the flight and has been delivered to the people who ordered them.

According to NASA and USPS officials, the covers carried were part of an experiment to see if the mail would be exposed to the space environment, extremes in temperature, moisture and atmospheric pressures, as well as radioactivity. The covers passed the test with "flying colors." But, alas, the Postal Service says there are no further plans do carry flight covers aboard future shuttle flights.

The Island of Jersey has released a new six-stamp set dedicated to the preservation of its wildlife. The stamps also hail the 21st anniversary of the Jersey Wildlife Preservation Trust and Jersey Zoo's Silver Jubilee Year. Depicted are endangered species, all part of the Zoo's captive breeding program. The stamps are the fourth in the popular Jersey Wildlife series.

The 9-pence shows the golden lion tamarin. The 12-p features the snow leopard. The 20½-p has the Jamaican boa. The 26-p illustrates the round island gecko. The 28-p pictures the coscoroba swan. The 31-p depicts the St. Lucia parrot.

When the U.S. Postal Service completes its 1983-1984 Olympic Games stamps series it will be the largest ever issued on the Olympics by this country. The entire set will consist of 24 stamps featuring athletic events from high jumping to ice dancing.

There are four blocks of four and eight singles. Three of the blocks are for the summer games and one block is for the winter events. You may check with your local post office concerning the stamps already issued and watch this column for the upcoming adhesives.

The International Stamp Collectors Society is now offering a collection of 200 world-wide Olympic stamps, including a series honoring the 1984 games in Los Angeles, for $12.95. Send to ISCS, PO Box 854, Van Nuys, CA 91408.

Azalea Festival Films Today

WILMINTON — Two color films of past Azalea Festivals will be shown at 2:30 p.m. today at the New Hanover County Museum, 814 Market St., Wilmington. The screenings are free and open to the public.

The nostalgic look at the past through these films show many Wilmington buildings and scenes which no longer exist, and also reveals the rapid progress the festival has made since its inception.

Eureka Exhibition

DURHAM — "Eureka!," an exhibition of important inventions by small-business people, is currently on view at the N.C. Museum of Life an Science, 433 Murray Ave., Durham, through April 22. The display features 13 inventions, with visitors permitted to operate the working models.

Museum hours are 10-5 Mondays-Saturdays and 1-5 Sundays. Admission is $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for children and senior citizens.

SHARK PUZZLE

WAIKIKI, Hawaii (AP) — A 14-foot, 1,650-pound shark recently captured off the coast of Hawaii is a new breed of shark, and scientists wonder how the big fish had escaped discovery.

Living in depths of 800 to 1,500 feet, the shark is too big to be caught in trawling nets and, with a density equal to sea water, it has eluded sonar detection, according to marine biologist Leighton Taylor, who is head of the Waikiki Aquarium.

Nicknamed "megamouth" for its enormous mouth, huge lips and 236 teeth, the shark is one of only three of the 350 shark species that feed on plankton.

Senior Shows On View

Senior art shows by East Carolina University School of Art students Carlyn Jarvis Knott of Greenville and Brad Parris of Snow Hill are on view at Mendenhall Student Center. The show opens today and will be up through April 1.

The shows include interior design presentation boards and other mixed media work, textiles, drawings and paintings.

There is no admission charged and the shows are open to the public during regular operating hours at Mendenhall.

POETRY CONTEST

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By MEREDITH FOLTZ

Health problems and health care, topics of continuing interest to public library patrons, are the concerns of the following books recently added to the shelves of Sheppard Memorial Library.

"The Alternative Health Guide" by Brian Inglis is an encyclopedic survey of unconventional physical, psychological and paranormal therapies for treating health problems. The author discusses the history, procedures and cases suitable for these treatments which were developed and are practiced outside traditional medicine.

Included are such therapies as reflexology, biofeedback, shiatsu, rolfing, Silva mind control, herbalism, psychic surgery, acupuncture, Christian healing, meditation, t'ai chi and primal therapy. For some of these therapies, the author also reports on research which has attempted to test the claims of the therapy's advocates.

The book's final section lists disorders and the traditional and alternative procedures which are available for treating those disorders. Although details for each therapy are necessarily limited, interested readers can secure further information from the alternative health practicioners, organizations and publications listed at the end of the book.

"Understanding Leukemia" by Cynthia Margolies is intended for victims and the families of victims of the many forms of leukemia. Text, diagrams and photographs are combined for a thorough explanation of the biochemistry of leukemia. Chemotherapy, radiotherapy, bone marrow transplants and other conventional treatments are described.

A chapter on "living with leukemia" addresses the special concern of stricken children and adults as well as controversial treatments. Organizations and agencies which provide information, assistance (including financial assistance) and treatment for leukemia victims are named.

Research has enabled doctors to extend the lives of many people, especially children, afflicted with leukemia during the last 20 years, and the authors of "Understanding Leukemia" look to the future and the directions which present research is taking.

"Cataracts" by Julius Shulman is subtitled "the complete guide — from diagnosis to recovery — for patients and families." Shulman explains the formation of the cataract, which is a clouding or loss of transparency of the lens of the eye.

The choices for surgery are reviewed and illustrated, with emphasis on the importance of the patient's own feelings as a "second opinion." The cataract sufferer must also choose glasses, contact lenses or implants for restoring vision after the removal of an affected lens, and these options are fully described.

Dr. Shulman's book will equip people with cataracts with the information to understand the progress of their vision problems and to make intelligent choices for treatment.

Other health-related books new to the library are "The Doctor's Book On Hair Loss" by T. Gerard Aldhizer and "Cycles: Every Woman's Guide To Menstruation" by Patricia Allen.

DEADLINE

COGNAC, France (AP) — Brandy makers here are nearing the fruition of last year's grape harvest which ends with the distillation of wine into cognac no later than April 1.

"Unless our wine can be distilled into cognac by the stroke of midnight, March 31, it misses its first birthday," according to Jacques Martell, director of a cognac firm.

He says all true cognacs celebrate their birthday April 1, and it is law that if fermented grapes are not made into cognac by that time, the brandy produced too late has to wait for the following year to be certified.

LECTURE TODAY

RALEIGH — A lecture by sculptor Paul DiPasquale will be presented at 2 p.m. today at the North Carolina Museum of Art. The event is free and open to the public. Two large works by DiPasquale are now on view at the museum.

Lartique Photographs Shown In Paris

By MARILYN AUGUST
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — A display of 250 photographs from the personal albums of Jacques Henri Lartigue mark a celebration in honor of the man many call the doyen of French photography.

In 1979, Lartigue donated 130 of his private photo albums and several hundred thousand negatives to France. The pictures from the 1919-1922 album had never been seen by the public.

Lartigue, who will be 90 June 13, made a special trip from his home in southern France to be at the opening at the Grand Palais.

Wearing a navy and white polka-dotted shirt, the white-haired photographer greeted well-wishers including filmmakers, actors, singers and government officials. He carried a camera and continually broke off sentences to snap pictures of the many photographers taking his picture.

Lartigue has long been recognized as one of France's leading photographers. Critics agree his work captures the restlessness and elegance of France's leisure classes in the 1920s.

Lartigue has been filling his personal albums, which he calls "a visual diary of my life," since the age of 7 when he was given his first camera.

The show, which will run until Sept. 16, features photos of Lartigue's honeymoon in Chamonix with Madeleine Messager, the daughter of French composer Andre Messager; France's Davis Cup matches on clay courts at Deauville; a glider competition; young couples dancing at an outdoor ball and his own paintings in progress.

The black and white photos on display are 50 percent larger than those in the original album, which is displayed at the Grand Palais in glass cases.

Lartigue, who goes by his initials J.L., was born in 1894 in Courbevoie, a Paris suburb. A banker's son, he studied with private tutors and later took courses at the Julian Academy in Paris. The young Lartigue photographed the world around, down to the mundane details of everyday life.

He began his professional career in 1916, but didn't have his first official show intil 1962. By then, critics hailed his work as historical documents of fashion and lifestyle trends in 20th century France.

The current exhibition shows to what extent Lartigue was fascinated with technology, and man's relation to it. Many of the photos juxstapose the old and the new — a bicycle and a car, a bird and a glider plane.

His human subjects were his friends and family, and he snapped them in action — dancing, skating, boating and hiking.

Lartigue was an avid sportsman, and much of his best work involved the top sports figures of the day, including tennis champion Suzanne Lenglen whose landmark short skirts and unabashed athleticism changed the face of women's tennis.

Lartigue was impressed with Miss Lenglen's agility and coordination, and he photographed her leaping for overheads and stretching for vollies. He played tennis well into his 80s, but was sidelined, he said, by tennis elbow.

Rose High Art Club To Help Paint An Outer Banks Mural

The Art Club of Rose High School has been chosen to assist artists and citizens in painting a huge outdoor mural in Nags Head as part of North Carolina's America's 400th Anniversary celebration.

The mural, measuring 355 feet by 20 feet high, will be on the wall of a shopping center, and is being sponsored by Carolista Fletcher Golden of Carolist Jewelry Designers, who will also be directing the design of the work. Artwork will depict historical Manteo and Nags Head along with its sound side and ocean front.

Rose High students will be joined by other artists as well as by local citizens on the project, most of which will be done on Saturday.

The Rose Art Club has planned a field trip on the Outer Banks for that weekend and will stay in Ms. Golden's ocean-front cottage, which is over 100 years old. In addition to the mural project, Art Club members will visit museums, galleries, and do some photography and sketching while sightseeing on the banks.

For the occasion, students have had T-shirts made, emblazoned with "Art Club" across the front.

This trip and painting session will conclude the club's activities for the current school year. During the year they have conducted a doodle-art contest, painted murals in the bandroom, and formed a National Art Honor Society with affiliation with the National Art Education Association.

HANDICAPPED ARTIST — Harold Crowell, 32, a resident of the Western Carolina Center in Morganton, an institution for the profoundly mentally handicapped, is an accomplished artist who has had several one-man shows throughout North Carolina. Royal Proclamation From Elizabeth I MANTEO — Although she died in 1601, Queen Elizabeth I — the "Virgin Queen" — has been heard from again.

A "Royal Proclamation" in Elizabethan lettering over the monarch's scrawled signature has turned up and is making the rounds of certain persons interested in North Carolina's upcoming America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Celebration.

The document consists of a parchment-like paper with a royal lion etched at the top, and a red ribbon, affixed with a wax seal, at the bottom. Experts have noted that the proclamation bears the signature "Elizabeth R" at the bottom in a handwriting very similar to, if not the same as, that which we know to be the famous monarch's own. The letter "R" following the queen's name stands for the Latin "Regina," or Queen.

While some of the wording could conceivably have come from a 16th century mind, there is, however, substantial doubt that the document is authentic.

The tip-off that the proclamation is anything but royal came when it was discovered that over 1200 identical parchments were received across the country — via third class mail — by travel agents and bus tour operators.

The obvious "hoax" is a promotional stunt conceived by Lynn Summerell, public relations director of "The Lost Colony" outdoor drama. If there was ever even the slightest doubt that Queen Elizabeth I did not actually compose and sign this newly "unearthed" proclamation, that doubt could easily be dispelled by reading a sentence or two of the queen's message. It reads, in part:

WHEREAS "The Lost Colony" outdoor drama takes place amidst the pomp and splendour of the court of Elizabeth I (me!), and

WHEREAS "The Lost Colony" plays a key role in the celebration of the 400th Anniversary of English Speaking America,

I, ELIZABETH TUDOR, do hereby command Travel Agents and Bus Tour Operators to bring their groups to Manteo, on Roanoke Island, in North Carolina — formerly my colony of "Virginia" — during June, July and August. This, in order that these good peoples might thrill to the Grand Specatacle that is "The Lost Colony."

TELEPHONE my Royal Staff at 919-473-2127 for more and complete information.

IGNORE this Proclamation ... and heads will roll!

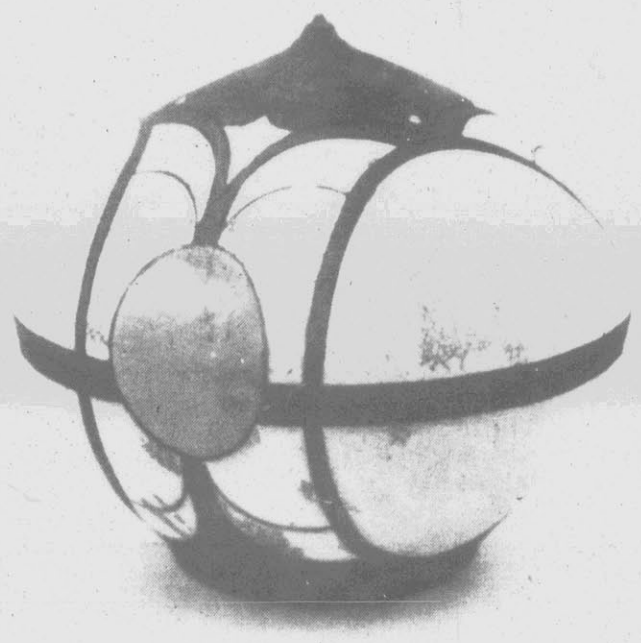

Summerell said that he felt he wanted to find an unusual and eye-catching way to bring his production to the attention of travel agents, and that a letter from Queen Elizabeth, rather than himself, seemed to be the way.

"I had hoped that applying a bit of royal red ribbon, affixed with gold wax, would lend a touch of authenticity," he said. "Of course, I really blew it by using the 919 area code for North Carolina. If there had been telephones in Buckingham Palace in the 1500s, they would have had an 01 code for the city of London. I hope the old girl's ghost doesn't come back to haunt me for this. I only wanted to get people to come see how magnificently she's portrayed in 'The Lost Colony.'"

ART WINNER — Scott Hobson, 9-year-old son of Ed and Sharon Colston, is the recipient of a first place award in the pastel category of the Boys Club Southeast Regional Fine Arts competition. The competition was held in Knoxville, Tenn. Scott's work, titled "The Wall," represents the Boys Club of Pitt Club, located at 502 W. Arlington St.

Clay Artist Andy Smith To Be Visiting At ECU

A RAKU POT ... by ceramist Andy Smith. Smith will visit at ECU on Friday and Saturday, presenting a slide show and giving demonstrations. The events are free and open to the public.

Clay artist Andy Smith of Marshville will be at the school of art, East Carolina University on Friday and Saturday. Smith, a specialist in raku ceramics, will present an introduction to raku and show slides at 8 p.m. Friday in the auditorium of the Jenkins Fine Art Center.

At 10 a.m. Saturday, he will give a demonstration in raku decoration and glazing; and at 2:30 p.m. he will conduct a raku firing and sum up the process involved in this type of ceramics.

A native of Union County, Smith began his education in ceramics at Wingate College and continued studies in that field at Arrowmont. His eight-year involvement with clay has been exclusively devoted to raku.

His work has been shown in juried and invitational shows with the League of Charlotte Artists, Storybook Crafts in Springfield, Ohio, the High Point Art League, and Elm Street Gallery, Greensboro. Smith's work is represented in 30 galleries from Massachusetts to Florida, and as far west as Chicago and Dallas.

His visit to Greenville is under the auspices of the Clay Artists Guild, headquartered in Ayden.

Goldsboro Art Show Entries

25 Landmark Buildings On Itinerary Of New Bern Tour

THE ATTMORE-OLIVER HOUSE ... at 513 Broad St. in New Bern is one of over 25 historical landmarks to be open April 6-7 on the biennial Historic Homes Tour. Built in 1790 and remodeled in 1834, the home has a two-story porch and four exterior chimneys. The interiors of the house are Federal in form but use Greek Revival moldings.

NEW BERN — On April 6 and 7, over 25 extraordinary private homes and landmarks in old New Bern will be opened for the Historic Homes Tour. The biennial event coincides with the arrival of springtime in this coastal town.

At the scenic confluence of the broad Neuse and the smaller Trent rivers, New Bern was the Colonial capital and first state capital of North Carolina. As an early seaport, New Bern was also bustling with commerce that attracted merchants, planters and shipbuilders. Many of these well-traveled individuals found the town a choice location for their business pursuits. They built homes in varying scale appropriate to their wealth, and craftsmen moved in to satisfy their needs.

The buildings to be opened for the tour date from 1760 to 1910 — 150 years of architectural expression. Some of the restored homes have never been shown before, while others are of national historic significance. A sampling of the 25 points on the tour includes:

•Robert Palmer, who sat on the bench of the Colonial Superior Court, built his home in 1768, and, eight years later, a new owner added a major addition to the front. The handsome landmark has recently been restored.

•Another of the newly restored residences is the Nathan Tisdale House, built about 1800. Tisdale was an artist and silversmith. His home, a striking red frame structure, is thought to have also been his shop.

•The Attmore-Oliver House, built in 1790 by a merchant who came from Philadelphia, is one of the town's larger homes. For many years the headquarters of the local historical society, this impressive residence will disappear from future homes tours when it becomes a year-round museum.

•After the fall of New Bern in March 1862, Union Gen. Burnside and his soldiers occupied many fine homes for the remainder of the war between the states. The three and a half story Governor Benjamin Smith House is one example, for it became a Union guard center at a strategic location near the railroad trestle. The upstairs ballroom of this home will feature a collection of antique dolls.

•Representative of some of the early churches to be shown is the Presbyterian Church, erected in 1819. The sanctuary, noted for its magnificent interior, was converted into a hospital during the war between the states.

•Seafaring days will be recalled at the Jerkins-Beasley House, built by a prosperous sea captain who crowned the stately mansion with a captain's walk. Built in the early 1800s, the residence is furnished with fine antiques, carpets and a French mural in the foyer.

•The Victorian era produced many elaborate houses. One such home was built by a Beaufort native, Ulysses Mace, in 1884; and contains superb stencils, woodgraining and period furnishings.

•Shipowner Eli Smallwood erected his residence and gardens on the Neuse River so that his ships could tie up at the property. This was a common building practice on the New Bern peninsular. The 1810 Smallwood House, designed in a sidehall fashion, is a nationally famed example of fine Federal architecture. On Saturday of the Historic Homes Tour, the Eastern Suzuki Violinists, a childrens' group, will perform at 2 p.m. in the riverside gardens of the Smallwood home.

•The distinguished Bryan House was erected in 1804 by a local architect for the prominent merchant, James Bryan. His son, a lawyer, added the unusual office in 1820.

•The extensive gardens of the Tryon Palace Restoration Complex constitute just one stop of many on the tour. The grounds will open earlier and close later than the private landmarks. The annual tulip display, with over 30,000 bulbs planted, is expected to be more dazzling than ever.

•Tickets for the New Bern Historic Homes Tour are $10 per person and may be purchased in advance by mail or upon arrival, at local motels, the visitors information center and the Tryon Palace ticket office. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. April 6-7.

Proceeds from the event go to the New Bern Preservation Foundation Inc. and the New Bern Historical Society Inc.

For advance tickets or information contact Historic Homes Tour, New Bern Preservation Foundation, P.O. Box 207, New Bern, N.C. 28560, phone 633-6448.

Wilmington Home Tour In April

WILMINGTON — Some of the finest homes and buildings in Wilmington's Historic District will be open for public visitation during the 10th annual Old Wilmington Preservation Tour on April 7-8.

Sponsored by The Residents of Old Wilmington Inc., the tour will be held each of the two days from 2 to 5 p.m. Tickets are priced at $6 and are good for both days. They are available in the Murchison House garden. Brochures, tickets and group tour information are also available by writing to: Residents of Old Wilmington, P.O. Box 1862, Wilmington, N.C., 28402.

The tour begins at the Murchison House garden at 305 S. Third St. Eight homes are featured on this year's Preservation Tour. They are:

•David R. Murchison House, circa 1876. Built as a family residence by merchant David R. Murchison, it was orginally "French style" with mansard roof and tower. Alterations were made in 1910 and 1915. It was used as headquarters of the Episcopal Diocese of East Carolina until recently. It now serves as a private residence and bed-and-breakfast inn.

•John C. Bailey House, circa 1864, at 219 S. Third St., is an Italiante style home. The cast-iron fence and gate were probably cast in the Hart-Bailey Foundry by Bailey himself.

•Zebulon Latimer House, about 1852, is located at 126 S. Third St. A large Italiante home built by Zebulon Latimer, a wealthy Wilmington merchant, it was restored by the Lower Cape Fear Historical Society and serves as its headquarters. It is furnished in original and period items.

•Elliot-Brown House. Dating from 1897 and located at 218 S. Second St., this is a Queen Ann style house built as a home for the widow of a merchant and steamboat captain.

•The House on Church Street, at No. 118. Constructed about 1865, this 19th century cottage exterior gives no hint of the earlier smaller house. Present owners have utilized an attic loft area to provide additional living space.

•The House at 615 S. Second St., dating from about 1880, is a cottage that has recently been moved from 7th and Ann streets to save it from demolition.

•Wessel-Hathaway-Boney House, dating back to 1854, is located at 120 S. Fifth Ave. A fine townhouse built by James F. Post for Wilmington merchant James Wessel, it is a good example of Wilmington's early 19th century style home. It contains brackets, a low hipped roof, and floor length piazza windows. (Refreshments will be served in the dining room of this home).

•Gilfillin Cottage. Not historic (built last year), this cottage is the first example of the use of 19th century style for infill housing in Wilmington's Historic District. It sits on the site of two recently destroyed homes.

The Residents of Old Wilmington is a non-profit organization. Funds raised from the tour will be donated toward new preservation projects in the old section of Wilmington.

ONE OF EIGHT HOUSES ... This cottage, at 118 Church St. in Wilmington, is one of eight houses to be visited on an Azalea Festival Tour of homes in the historic district on April 7-8. Price of the tour is $6. Tickets, brochures and group tour information is available by writing to the sponsor: The Residents of Old Wilmington, P.O. Box 1862, Wilmington, N.C., 28402.

Chimney Rock Opens

CHIMNEY ROCK — Following the construction of a new bridge at the entrance of Chimney Rock Park over the Rocky Broad River, the park is now open for the 1984 season. Picnic tables, barbeque grills and a children's playground are among facilities of this scenic park.

A brochure listing attractions and events is available by sending a long stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Chimney Rock Park, P.O. Box 39-OR, Chimney Rock, N.C., 28720.

Summer Programs

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Summer outdoor programs for children are being offered in two sites — in the Blue Ridge Mountains of North Carolina and the Rocky Mountains in Colorado. The treks are for either 12 or 15 days at a cost of $400 to $455. For details, write to: Earth Treks/Ranger Rick Wildlife Camp, National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th Street, Washington, D.C., 20036 or call 703/790-4369.

Recreation Department Sets Backpacking Trips

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will offer two programs in backpacking on the Appalachian Trail in the Pisgah and Cherokee National forests during April and May.

The first trip will be April 21-24. The hike will cover 17 miles from Iron Mountain Gap in North Carolina to the Nolichuckt River near Erwin, Tenn.

This section of the Appalachian Trail passes through hardwood forests and massive rhododendrom groves, and over Little Bald Knob (4,459 feet), Unaka Mountain (5,180 feet) and Beauty Spot, a natural open grassy bald with views of the surrounding mountains and the Nolichucky River.

Participants will spend two-and-a-half days hiking along the Appalachian Trail and spend three nights camping along the trail. Cost of the trip, which includes transportation from Greenville, all meals on the trail and all equipment except shoes, clothing and toiletries, is $42. Additional expense of $10-15 can be expected to cover meals while traveling to and from the trail.

The second trip, a week-long adventure, will take place on May 26-June 2. The longest hike this season will take in 52 miles along the Appalachian Trail and Iron Mountain Trail as they run through Mount Rogers National Park in western Virginia. High open meadows, hundreds of acres of rhododendroms, steep gorges and rolling mountain streams will be viewd. The trip will include Mount Rogers; a walk along Whitetop Laurel Creek; and a visit to Creek Junction, a historic abandoned railroad. The hike will take six and-a-half days and seven nights on the trail. Cost of this trip, which includes transportation from Greenville, all meals on the trail and all equipment except shoes, clothing and toiletries, is $80. Additional expense of $10-15 can be expected to cover meals while traveling to and from the trail.

These programs are geared toward the beginning and novice backpacker, and no experience is necessary. Endurance, good physical condition, and a minimum age of 18 years is required.

Orientation and discussion sessions will be held prior to each trip.

Anyone wishing to take part in either of these trips or wanting additional information is to call Bill Twine, Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, at 752-4137, ext. 201.

Camp-In Set

DURHAM — The North Carolina Museum of Life and Science is offering two camp-ins on Thursday and Friday.

Groups such as Scouts will report to the museum after dinner for several hours of visiting exhibits and engaging in hands-on activities. Films and music will be featured prior to sleep time. Early the following morning camp-in members will have breakfast at the musuem and take part in one more activity before leaving at 9 a.m.

Representatives of groups wanting additional information on scheduling a night camp-in may write to: N.C. Museum of Life and Science, 433 Murray Ave., P.O. Box 15190, Durham, N.C. 27704 — phone 477-0431.

Fossil Field Trip

BEAUFORT — A fossil hunt field trip will be taken at the Texas Gulf Phosphate Mine at Aurora on Friday, sponsored by Hampton Mariners Museum, 120 Turner St., Beaufort. Those attending are to meet at the Aurora Fossil Museum at 8:30 a.m. The hunt will last until 3 p.m.

The fee is $5, and reservations, which are required, can be made by calling Hampton Mariners Museum at 728-7317.

In 1870, Gen. Bazaine of France surrendered Metz with 173,000 men to the Prussian army.

During World War II, the British 8th Army, under Gen. Montgomery, began an offensive Oct. 24, 1942, against Axis forces at El Alamein. After a heavy preliminary bombardment, the way was cleared through mine fields and tank traps for an armored break-through that led to Tunisia

Prize-Winning Young Violinist To Perform At ECU April 2

APRIL 2 CONCERT ... Young violinist Stephanie Chase, winner in 1982 of the Bronze Medal in the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow, will perform in concert at 8 p.m. Monday, April 2, in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus. She will be accompanied by pianist Anne-Marie McDermott. The concert, a feature of Festival '83-'84 is free and open to the public on a first-come, first-seated basis.

Local audiences will have an opportunity to hear young American violinist Stephanie Chase when she performs at 8 p.m. April 2 in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus.

She will also present masterclasses from 10 a.m. until noon on Monday, and again from 2 to 4 p.m. on April 3.

Both the concert and the masterclasses are being presented without charge to the public. Seating at the concert will be on a first come-first seated basis.

Many area music lovers are already familiar with Ms. Chase's talents through the Hearst/ABC/"Arts"/PBS/BBC documentary on the 1982 Tchaikovsky Competition held in Moscow.

In the summer of 1982, 24-year-old Stephanie Chase captured the hearts and attention of a Russian audience and international jury at this prestigious competition, at which she received the Bronze Medal. The New York Times gave her critical accolades, saying she was "the most highly praised of all the contestants."

Ms. Chase's appearance in Greenville is a feature of the East Carolina University School of Music Festival '83-'84, and is sponsored in part through a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, Washington, D.C., Solo Recitalists Program.

Robert Hause, conductor of the ECU Symphony, is the local project director for the grant.

For her concert program Monday, Ms. Chase will be accompanied by pianist Anne-Marie McDermott. Works by five composers are scheduled for the concert — Mozart's "Sonata in B-flat Major, K. 454;" Janacek's "Sonata for violin and piano;" Ysaye's "Sonata for violin solo, Opus 27, No. 3" and "Ballade;" the "Sonata No. 3 in D Minor for violin and piano" by Brahms; and Wieniawski's "Polonaise in D Major, Opus. 4."

Currently artist-in-residence at the Boston Conservatory of Music, Ms. Chase has studied with her mother, Fannie Chase, with Sally Thomas of the Juilliard School, and with the Belgian artist Arthur Grumiaux.

She plays a Petrus Guarnerius violin made in Venice, Italy, in 1742.

This past season, she made recital debuts in Boston, Chicago and in Los Angeles. She has appeared as soloist with the American Youth Symphony under Mehli Mehta, and was soloist with the English Baroque Orchestra in London's Barbican Centre. She has additionally performed in Vermont, Canada, and San Francisco, and was featured in a "Music from Marlboro" (Vermont) tour of 11 major East Coast cities.

Her numerous awards, aside from the Tchaikovsky Bronze Medal, include first prizes in competitions in Dallas, Houston, Buffalo, and in several other locales.

Her accompanist, Anne-Marie McDermott is also a young, highly praised performer. In 1983, at 19, she won the Young Concert Artists International Auditions, and is the recipient of several other prestigious prizes. With her two sisters, she is a member of the McDermott trio.

ECU String Chamber Concert Thursday

A concert by the East Carolina University String Chamber Orchestra will be presented at 8:15 Thursday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus. The concert is free and open to the public.

Paul Topper is conductor of the String Chamber Orchestra, which will present a program of three compositions.

The first work to be performed is Mozart's "Adagio and Fugue in C Minor, KV 546." This will be followed by Arensky's "Variations on a theme by Tchaikovsky," with seven variations based on a moderato theme.

After an intermission, the final work of the evening, Vivaldi's "Concerto in G Minor for Two Violoncelli" will be performed. Soloists for this piece are cellists Mary Ann Prussing and Lynn Jackson.

In addition to Prussing and Jackson, members of the orchestra are: violin I, Amanda Kartchner, Martin Glasco, Carla Dvorak; violin II, Coralie Patterson, Speros Katopodis, Angela Hinton; viola, Jacquelyn Kartchner, Sandra Caskey; cello, Jeffrey Tuthill; double bass, Michael Sheard; and harpsichord, Val Parker.

Percussion Group In Monday Concert

The East Carolina University Percussion Ensemble, directed by Harold Jones, will be in concert at 8:15 p.m. Monday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the ECU campus. The concert is free and open to the public.

Compositions to be performed on the program are John Beck's "Overture for Percussion Ensemble;" John J. Bergamo's "No. 33;" and Jack Stamp's "Vociferation for Percussion," featuring soloists Blair Smith, timpani; Sharon Ross, percussion; and Beth Faircloth, percussion.

Other selections on the program are Henry Cowell's "Pulse;" Larry London's "Starry Nights — Doggy Days;" and Alec Wilder's "Suite for Solo Guitar" arranged by Gordon Stout. David McCollum, marimba, is soloist in the Wilder work.

The final work on the program is William Kraft's "Momentum."

Abduction Opera Airs Saturday

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Mozart's comic opera, "Die Entfuehrung aus dem Serail" (Abduction from the Seraglio) will be broadcast live from the Metropolitan Opera beginning at 2 p.m. Saturday. Locally, it will air over WITN-FM radio, Washington, 930 on the radio dial.

The cast features Catherine Malfitano as Konstanze; Judith Belgan as her maid, Blondchen; and Francisco Araiza as the Spanish nobleman Belmonte.

Others in the cast are Philip Creech as Pedrillo; Arthur Korn, as Osmin; and Nico Castel in the speaking role of Pasha Selim. Announcer is Peter Allen, and the Metropolitan orchestra is conducted by Julius Rudel.

Dance Scholarships

DURHAM — The Association for the American Dance Festival is sponsoring five tuition scholarships for North Carolina dancers to participate in the 1984 American Dance Festival School.

A full scholarship will be offered for the ADF's Six Week School, Young Dancers School and Jazz Workshop. In addition, two partial scholarships will be awarded for the Young Dancers School and the Six Week School.

Scholarships will be awarded based on both ability and financial need. All North Carolina applicants to the ADF are eligible, but those from the Triangle area will receive priority consideration. To qualify, applicants must audition. Auditions for the Six Week School and Jazz Workshop scholarships will be held on April 15, 1-5 p.m. at the Duke University East Campus Gym. Only those applicants who have applied to the ADF by April 5, 1984, will be admitted to the audition. The auditions for the Young Dancers School will be announced at a later date.

Funding for the scholarships was raised at a fashion show held last spring at the Hotel Europa. A grant was also awarded to the Association by the Durham Arts Council to support a scholarship for the Young Dancers School.

For further information contact School Administrator, American Dance Festival, P.O. Box 6097, College Station, Durham, N.C. 27708, 684-6402.

Kochanski Concert At ECU Monday

Polish pianist Sir Wladimir Jan Kochanski will perform in concert at 8 p.m. tonight in Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus.

Tickets are priced at $4 for adults, $3 for students, and $3 per person for groups of three or more. Tickets are available at the Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Center, telephone 757-6611.

His program Monday evening will range over a wide field of periods from Baroque to modern.

Norfolk Area Events

NORFOLK, Va. — Two plays are opening in the Norfolk area on Friday. At the Wells Theater, the Virginia Stage Company is presenting Tennessee Williams' "Night of the Iguana," with performances at 8 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays; at 5 and 9 p.m. Saturdays; and at 2 p.m. Wednesdays and Sundays, through April 21. For details, phone 804/627-1234.

"Romantic Comedy" will be on stage at Virginia Beach through April 14, presented by Little Theater of Virginia Beach. Performances are at 8:30 Fridays and Saturdays, and at 3 p.m. Sunday, April 8. For details, phone 804/428-9253.

New Clarinet Ensemble Presents Inaugural Concert Today

MEMBERS OF THE ECU CLARINET CHOIR ... above, and other other musicians not shown here, will be participants in the premier performance by the ECU Clarinet Ensemble at 3:15 this afternoon in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. The ensemble is directed by Bryan Schweickhardt. The concert is free and open to the public.

The East Carolina University Clarinet Ensemble, a newly formed group, will make its inaugural public appearance in a concert to be held at 3:15 p.m. today in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. The group is directed by Brian Schweickhardt, a member of the ECU faculty.

This premiere performance is free and open to the public.

Today's program will begin with the duet from the Mayerbeer-Lazarus opera, "Robert le Diable," featuring soloists Susan Kay and Sally LaCava. The second selection, that of "Duets" by Bela Bartok (originally for violins) will feature soloists Kevin Kaufman and Ralph Watson.

This will be followed by George Keith's "Interlude," for quartet with soloists Ms. Kay, Kaufman, Jackie Pleasants, and Don Corne; and Whitney Tustin's "Cheerful Elegy," for quartet, with soloists Bryan Wamsely, Kevin McKechnie, Walton, and Cherly Minck.

The final selection before intermission will be "Six Pieces for unaccompanied clarinet," a 1972 composition by ECU faculty member Brett Watson, performed by Schweickhardt.

For the second half of the program, three works are programmed for performance by the ECU Clarinet Choir — Karl Ditters von Dittersdorf's "Partita" in four movements; Jakob Dont's "Larghetto and Scherzo," arranged by Waln; and "Suite for four Equal Clarinets" by T. Stewart Smith."

Performers, in addition to clarinetists named above, include Thomnas Amoreno, contrabass.

Carolina Today

The North Carolina Mother of the Year and two musicians are among guests to be appearing on Carolina Today next week. The early morning program, co-hosted by Slim Short and Shauna Barnaby, airs weekday mornings from 6 to 8 a.m. over WNCT-TV, Channel 9, Greenville.

The calendar for the coming week is:

Hospitality House Today

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Blood pressure, a flower show and a nursing home carnival are topics to be discussed by guests on Kay Currie's Hospitality House today. The Sunday weekly show airs from noon to 12:30 p.m. each Sunday over WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington.

Dr. David McCarron, associate professor of medicine, Oregon Health Sciences University, will present the latest medical facts on high blood pressure.

Greenville Mayor Janice Buck will talk to Ms. Currie about the Greenville Villa Nursing Home Outdoor Carnival on March 31, and the final guest on today's show, Ruth Eure, represents three Carteret County Garden Clubs: Pine Knoll, Sea and Sound, and Surfside. The clubs are sponsoring the Standard Home Flower Show and house tour to raise funds for scholarships.

DOCUMENTARY ON WRIGHT

NEW YORK — Architect Frank Lloyd Wright will be honored on the 25th anniversary of his death in a special 90-minute documentary airing at 8 a.m. April 3 on Arts and Entertainment Network. The film will be repeated at 9 p.m. April 4, at 1 a.m. and at noon on April 5, and at noon on April 17. A co-production of the British Arts Council and ABC Video Enterprises, Inc., it will be narrated by Wright's granddaughter, actress Anne Baxter.

Recital Tonight

IN RECITAL TONIGHT ... ECU faculty member pianist Timothy Hoekman and guest soproano Carla Connors will be in recital at 8:15 p.m. tonight in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus. They will be assisted by Brian Schweickhardt, clarinet, and Kelly Via, flute. The recital is free and open to the public.

A recital featuring Carla Connors, guest soprano, and Timothy Hoekman, harpsichord and piano, assisted by Brian Schweickhardt, clarinet and Kelly Via, flute, will be presented at 8:15 p.m. today in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus. Hoekman and Schweickhardt are school of music faculty members, and Via is a graduate teaching assistant.

The recital is free and open to the public.

The first work on the program is Lester Trimble's "Four Fragments from The Canterbury Tales" (Chaucer), featuring all four performers. The next work is Handel's "Suite in F minor," Hoekman, soloist; followed by three Mendelssohn songs, with Connors and Hoekman.

After an intermission, Connors and Hoekman will be heard in songs by Franz Lehar, Brahms, and William Walton.

The final selection of the evening will be John McCabe's "Three Folk Songs for voice, clarinet and piano," featuring Connors, Hoekman and Schweickhardt.

$30,000 Grant To Arts Council

The N.C. Arts Council has received a $30,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts to help support dance touring in the 1984-84 season. This grant is the result of a new dance initiative by the National Endowment of the Arts to assist presenters in booking top-quality, professional dance touring companies.

A fee subsidy grant will be given to any North Carolina presenter who books an out-of-state, out-of-region professional dance company for the 1984-85 season. Performance and residency dates must be between July 1, 1984 and June 30, 1985.

A grant application along with a signed contract with the company must be received by the N.C. Arts Council Grants Officer by June 1, 1984.

For more details, contact Miller Sigmon, N.C. Arts Council, N.C. Department of Cultural Resources, 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611, telephone 733-2111.

A Review

GENTLEMEN OF ADVENTURE. By Ernest K. Gann. Arbor House. 445 Pages. $16.95

For years, Ernst K. Gann has had no equal as a writer of novels about aviation, past and present.

His books included such gripping tales as "The High and the Mighty," "Fate Is the Hunter" and "The Aviator." Some were made into highly successful movies.

Now Gann is back with still another novel of fliers and their times, with central characters whose lives span the era from World War I until after World War II. They take the reader along with them from the time when planes just barely flew, on into the jet age.

This story lacks the high drama and growing intensity of other Gann books. It is, however, a fascinating account of people and the planes they flew during the decades of aviation growth.

For added spice the author's characters know and work with many of aviation's celebrated pioneers — including such figures as "Slim" Lindbergh, Amelia Earhart and Howard Hughes.

In a foreword, Gann says he personally knew most of the notables portrayed and flew nearly all the aircraft described in the story — "Thus it has been easier to take fact and make it fiction."

Samuel Ramey, Superman Of The Opera

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Bass Samuel Ramey is, in many ways, the Superman of the opera world. This tall, handsome, mild-mannered fellow goes into a phone booth — in opera it's a dressing room — and emerges in a flamboyant costume, to swashbuckle all over the place.

Of course Superman rights wrongs. Ramey is usually stirring up the trouble. His Don Giovanni is trying to seduce the girls. He sings Attila the Hun and the three evil geniuses in "The Tales of Hoffmann." When he made his Metropolitan Opera debut in January, he sang the Saracen general Argante, who tries magic to defeat the Christian Crusaders, in Handel's "Rinaldo." Ramey's bold entrance aria, sung from a chariot, was the opera's high point.

Ramey is considered America's leading operatic bass, praised for his vivacious acting as well as his voice.

His teacher thinks that when the even-tempered Ramey, in costume and makeup, walks out on stage, he becomes a different person.

Ramey says, "I do know that on stage I'm not at all like I am as a person. I wouldn't say I'm shy, but I'm not terribly extroverted. I'm low-key. I seldom get angry or upset or excited. On stage I'm very extroverted.

Ramey, at 42, is a superstar in the New York City Opera, where he has sung since 1973, and a star zooming toward superstardom in Europe. But the Metropolitan Opera has been cool.

The bass says that James Levine, the Met's music director, "told my agent that he considered me too big a star at City Opera to bring to the Met. People could hear me for $20 there. Why would they come to the Met and pay $50?"

The Met offered Ramey the bullfighter role in "Carmen" in 1978, though not in the first "Carmen" of that season, when the critics attend. The Met also offered a small role in "Rigoletto" at a student performance. Ramey's agent turned both down.

When "Rinaldo" came to the Met, it was with the cast Marilyn Horne, in the title role, had chosen for a Canadian production. Canada loaned the sets and costumes. The audience and critics thought it was dynamite. Nobody from Metropolitan Opera management greeted the debuting bass at any of the rehearsals. "That's unheard of in Europe," Ramey says. Miss Horne introduced Met General Manager Anthony Bliss to Ramey at the party after the first "Rinaldo." Levine didn't attend.

The Met has re-engaged Ramey, but not until the 1986-87 season. He'll again sing "Mefistofele" at the New York City Opera next fall. He says he won't abandon that company.

And what about Superman in the dressing room taking off the makeup after the opera? Does Mefistofele or Don Giovanni evaporate in there, or does some go home to Mrs. Samuel Ramey?

"I stay in character throughout the opera," Ramey says. "I try not to get involved in chit-chat during the intermissions.

"But as soon as the opera is over, it is over."

Fame Renewed

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The on-again, off-again adventure of the "Fame" TV series is definitely on again now that the hour-long musical series has been renewed for a second season in syndication by the MGM-UA Television Group.

"Fame," the most expensive first-run series ever produced for a syndicated network, was dropped by NBC-TV after its second season on the air last year.

Twenty-four new episodes of the series, which stars Debbie Allen, Lee Curreri, Cynthia Gibb, Albert Hague, Carlo Imperato and Gene Anthony Ray, will be filmed at MGM Studios for release next season.

SUBTLE CHANGES ... will be noticeable in this small black water stream within a few weeks. New green will appear in the winter burnished shore grasses; the swirl of returning fish will break the surface of the water; and families of snapping turtles will clamber aboard the structure of the partially sunken boat.

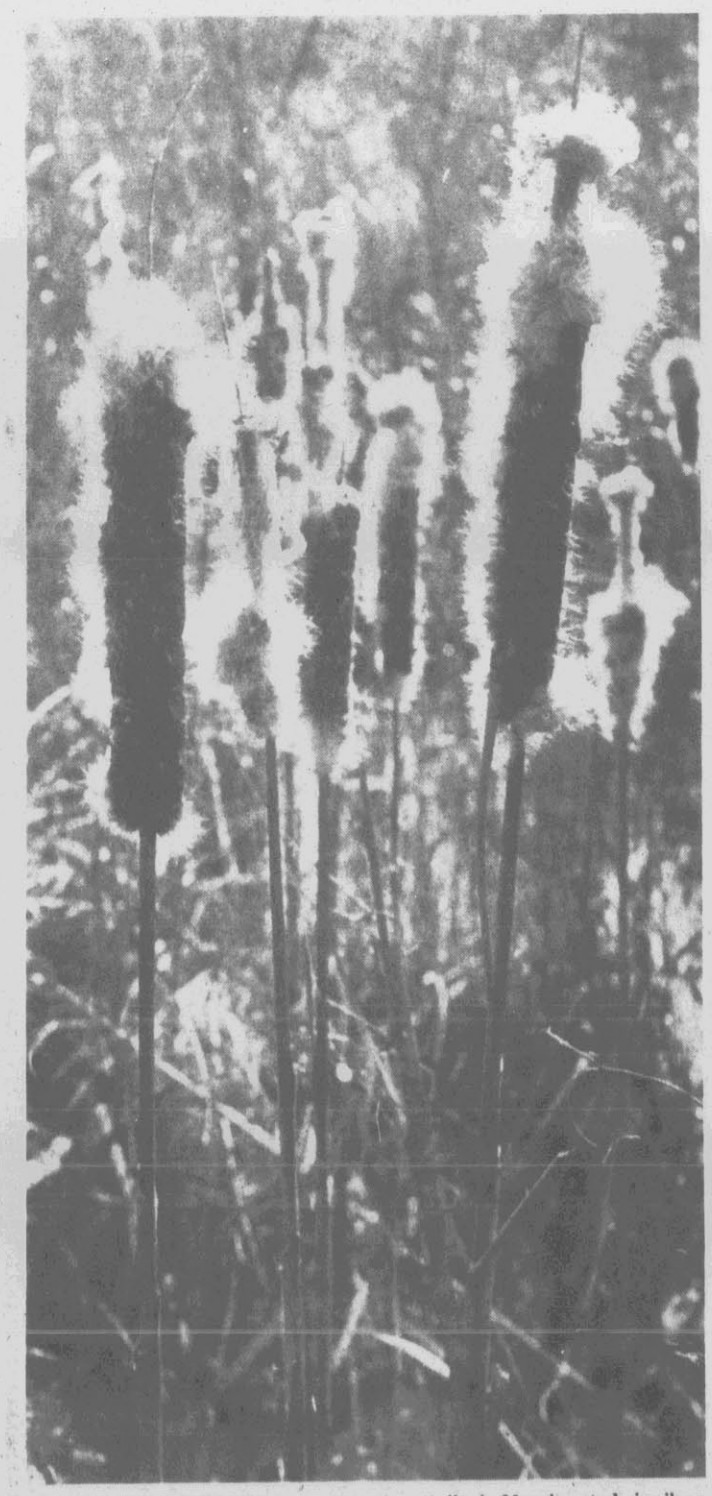

CHORE AHEAD . . . As warmer weather arrives, fishermen will be occupied in a yearly task — cleaning the accumulation of dried sea deposits clinging to the chicken wire frames of winter-stored crab pots.

Spring In The Marshlands — A Different Rhythm

An America's 400th Anniversary Article

FINAL BLAZE OF GLORY ... Last year's cattails, in March a study in silver and chocolate, display disintegrating finery as breezes scatter the loosened down from the once tight heads. By early April, new growth begins to arise from the damp soil in which they thrive.

The rhythm of spring's arrival in eastern North Carolina's marsh areas obeys a noticeably different pulse than that of firmer land areas adjacent to these places of water, mud and marsh grasses.

Winter's coloration of gray, silver, golds and browns in marsh areas linger a little longer than in forest, field and meadowland.

In late March and early April, when roadsides are carpeted with purple henbit and dandelion, when yards are festooned with the white of pear trees and spirea, the gold of daffodils and forsythia, and the cerise paper-like petals of Japanese quince, marshes have not yet taken on the first hue of spring colors.

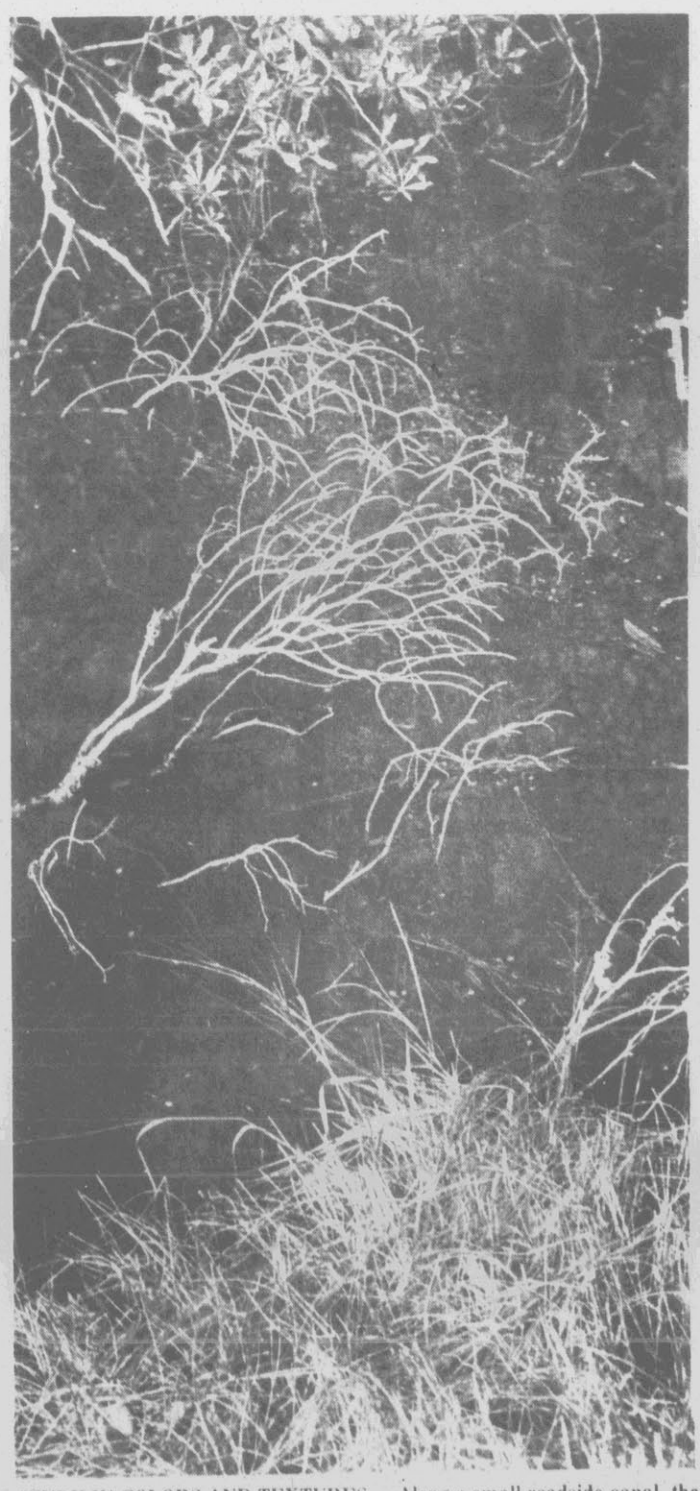

It will only be weeks, however, before the rich water-mud mixture supporting shore and shallow-water stands of brittle marsh grass, trees and flowering plants — begin to nudge into existence the visible signs of marsh green.

Calm black waters too will soon show renewed activity. The first dragonfly, new colonies of surface skittering water bugs, snapping turtles seeking sun, snakes ending their winter hibernation, and insect-hungry fish breaking the near motionless surface of water — all will become active in marsh areas.

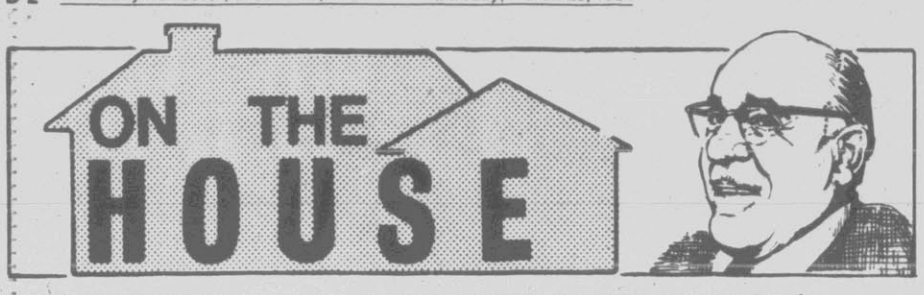

The delayed arrival of spring in marsh areas provides an opportunity to witness a subtle, intriguing variation in the endless cycles of nature's renewal.

A FESTIVE NOTE ... in the Pamlico landscape is this large rope of black intertwined into yellow, looped and nailed to the trunk of a young pine.

STUDY IN COLORS AND TEXTURES ... Along a small roadside canal, the green leaves of myrtle at top, the wheat colored grass at bottom, and dead silver myrtle branches in the water provide a lyrical visual study in colors and textures against dark water.

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A chemical dehumidifier.

Manufacturer's claim — That this product prevents mildew and mold and stops rust by removing harmful moisture ... that it will protect hundreds of items, including tools and clothing ... that it is ideal for attics, kitchens, basements and closets ... and that it is excellent for motor homes and mobile homes.

THE PRODUCT — A tile backer board primarily for bathrooms.

Manufacturer's claim — That it combines the installation ease of a conventional drywall system with the durability and water resistance of a portland cement mortar system ... that it is forgiving of the do-it-yourselfer who might not make tightly fitted grouted joints ... and that it is also approved for use with U. L.-listed stoves and room heaters.

THE PRODUCT — A vertical blind in both aluminum and fabric for picture windows and patio doors.

Manufacturer's claim — That it is attractively textured, has a tight weave to block out light and is rigid enough to require no weights ... That sandwiched between layers of polyester is a metalized polyester that helps keep heat in or out ... and that it bears a "forever" warranty that provides a no-charge replacement as long as the blind remains in the window for which it was purchased.

THE PRODUCT — A multi-purpose electronic alarm designed to protect your life and personal property.

Manufacturer's claim — That it acts as a deterrent against purse snatchings, muggings, assaults, home burglaries and numerous other hazardous situations ... and that it can be hand-held, carried in your purse, on your belt, in your pocket or on the key ring provided with the unit.

THE PRODUCT — A programmable thermostat which automatically adjusts for either heating or air conditioning.

Manufacturer's claim — That, without bothering to program the thermostat, the user can flip a switch to establish a single setback program, a double setback heat program or a single setback cooling program ... that it can be programmed for up to six different temperature settings a day and seven different daily programs ... and that it brings savings to air conditioning operations and serves both gas and electric-heating-cooling operations.

(The dehumidifier is manufactured by Lionel Industries, 2035 Burlington Rd., Akron, OH 44313; the tile backer board by U. S. Gypsum Co., 101 South Wacker Drive, Chicago, IL 60606; the vertical blind by Levolor Lorentzen, Inc., 1280 Wall St. West, Lyndhurst, NJ 07071; the personal alarm by Ravin Products, 80 Central Ave., Bridgeport, CT 06607; and the thermostat by Quad Six, Inc., 3752 Plaza Drive, Ann Arbor, MI 48104.)

Trend to Luxury, Fitness Marking Modern Decorations For Homes

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Is the recent preoccupation of a number of Americans with exercise and fitness merely a fad?

According to an interior designer, a psychologist and several bath fixture manufacturers, the answer is no. These disparate interests all report a substantial increase in luxury bathrooms and recreation rooms fitted with whirlpool tubs, exercise equipment and other paraphernalia designed to lead to the body beautiful.

Florence Perchuk, a New York interior designer with a specialty in kitchens and baths, says both luxury and fitness are now in when it comes to designer bathrooms.

As a consultant to several large bath fixture manufacturers, she says the general public is also opting for bathrooms with extras such as the whirlpool tubs, floor-to-ceiling mirrors and other luxury fittings.

This point of view was confirmed by executives of American Standard and Kohler Co. They say sales of luxury products are increasing much faster than sales of moderately-priced bath fixtures.

Dr. S. A. Maddi, a psychologist and specialist in stress studies and management at the University of Chicago, provided some intellectual underpinnings to explain and account for the reasons that Americans are turning to the growing use of whirlpools and hot tubs in America.

According to Maddi, the rising appeal of water relaxation and other stress management techniques such as exercise and massage is directly related to the growth of stress-related disorders.

"Bad backs, flu, and many other types of stress-related disorders are increasing by leaps and bounds," he said at a recent meeting in New York sponsored by Kohler. "The good news is that there are things people can do to counteract this stress — and they are doing them.

"One important way of dealing with stress (which if unchecked leads to strain and disease) is to adopt various health practices which essentially distract the mind and help make it easier to relax."

That's where bathrooms with hot tubs, spas and exercise equipment come in. The interesting social change, he said, is that these activities which once were strictly private are being done in a communal setting — which in itself can be a stress reducer once an individual has conquered any lingering shyness.

To Mrs. Perchuk, this new attitude represents "the most fascinating change." As a pioneer in the field of bathroom interior design, she recalled that "Years ago, people didn't decorate the bath, they didn't enjoy their bathrooms, they didn't even talk about them. They were strictly private."

Today, she finds clients are not only decorating the bath to the nines. They are just as likely to plan to entertain in the room.

Not everyone plans as elaborately as her clients who are revamping a wing of their house and turning it into a spa-exercise room that will accommodate fairly large parties.

Besides a steam-shower, the area features a whirlpool tub, a separate spa, a sauna, double lavatory, washer and dryer, refrigerator and serving area for refreshments, a seating area for lounging, mirrors, heated towel rack, exercise bike and floor-to-ceiling mirrors.

"And, if I can figure out how to do it, a waterfall run on a recirculating pump," added Mrs. Perchuk.

One indication of the growing sales importance of whirlpool baths, spas and hot tubs (all of which usually offer the extra feature of water jets that provide a constant gentle stream of water "bubbles") is that beginning in 1984, the bath industry will be reporting shipments and sales of these fixtures separately in monthly figures it supplies to the U.S. Department of Commerce.

According to John Hansen, vice president for business planning at American Standard, "the collection of these figures will make it possible by June to have an official measure of the sales of whirlpool baths."

Up till now, added Hansen, manufacturers have been relying on their own sales figures and anecdotal information to prove their point.

Hansen said that at American Standard whirlpool baths represent the fastest growing product in terms of sales. Since 1979, the bath fixture manufacturer has introduced seven new models. Before 1979, there was only one in the company's line.

Hansen's comments were echoed by Michael O'Malley, marketing manager at Kohler. "We are enjoying a huge increase in the number of customers upgrading from standard tubs to whirlpools," he said.

Q. — I read your reply to a reader about removing old paint from the outside of a house. As a painting contractor for 22 years, I would like to tell you what I have learned. Removing paint with a liquid remover produces fumes which are a health hazard. Removing it with an electric heating unit is slow and costly. Removal with a torch burner, as you said, is dangerous and should never be recommended. In addition to the possibility of setting fire to the house, the flames will char the wood, which would cause a great deal of sanding to take place. Heat is the fastest way to remove paint from a house, but with an infrared heater. I have used this tool for 20 years without a single close call. The heater is available in several sizes. I thought you and your readers would like to know.

A. — Thanks.

Q. — We have baseboard heating — what is called a hydronic system. Every once in a while there is a slight gurgling sound, not very much, but just enough so it can be heard. What causes this and what can we do about it?

A. — Baseboard heaters are usually trouble-free or almost so. There seems to be what is called "air binding" inside the tube, which in hydronic heating is copper and thus not susceptible to rust or corrosion. The gurgling can occur, although not very often, if some water is drained from the system and fresh water comes in bearing entrained oxygen. If there is automatic air eliminator near the boiler, the free oxygen might form an air pocket at some high point in the system and slow down the flow of water. In such an event, a small amount of water can be drained with the entrained air until there are no more bubbles. This can be done at the baseboard if, as usual, it has an air vent or at the vent near the boiler. You can get more information about this subject from the Hydronics Institute, P. O. Box 218, Berkeley Heights, NJ 07922.

Q. — Can I apply lacquer over a varnished surface which is in good condition?

A. — No. The lacquer may ruin the finish.

Here's the Answer

Q. I have been raising pin oaks and willow oaks. They are now large enough to set out in yards. Do they have to be inspected before I can sell them? (J.Y., Newton)

A. Yes, they need to be inspected. Direct your inquiries to Howard Singletary, N.C. Department of Agriculture, Plant Industry Division, Raleigh, telephone 733-6930.

Q. Is it a good practice to use Epsom salts around rose bushes? (K.F., Durham)

A. Some gardeners and professional growers use Epsom salts to supply magnesium to trees and shrubs. This should never be done without taking a soil test. Contact your county agricultural extension agent for information on taking a soil sample and having it tested.

Q. What is a jardiniere? (P.G., Burlington)

A. A jardiniere is a type of large ceramic flowerpot. The name is also applied to an ornamental stand for plants or flowers.

Q. How can I start caladiums indoors? (P.T., Burnsville)

A. Plant the bulbs in small pots in a soil medium high in organic matter. Water the bulbs thoroughly. Cover the pots with black plastic and place them in a sunny window. This heats the soil. A soil temperature of 70 degrees is best for promoting root development. Once shoots sprout, remove the plastic because the shoots will not tolerate the heat. If you lack the time and space to start your own caladiums, consider buying them from a grower.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

The first World Bridge Team Olympiad was held in Turin in 1960. It was won by Italy by the margin of only 1 Victory Point over Great Britain.

There are many hands in any tournament that can be singled out as the one that cost a title. Certainly, this hand from the match between Britain and one of the U.S. teams was one that caused the most discussion, mainly because of a remarkable psychic bid by our late colleague, Harold Ogust.

Ogust and Howard Schenken were sitting North-South against Boris Schapiro and Terence Reese of Great Britain, one of the world's foremost pairs. After Schenken's one heart opening bid was overcalled by Reese with one spade, Ogust had no doubt that the hand belonged to his opponents. Not only did he have little or nothing to contribute defensively, but his length in his partner's suit was certain to detract from South's defensive capabilities.

He came up with a master stroke — a psychic bid of two no trump. His intention was to subsequently correct to hearts at the five-level if necessary, should the opponents reach four spades.

His tactic worked better than he anticipated. After Schenken duly raised to three no trump, Ogust removed to four hearts. When that got passed round to Reese, he decided that his hand was better suited to defense than to offense, so he doubled. The consensus after the event was that Schapiro should have pulled the double to four spades because of his trump length and scant defensive values. Be that as it may, he elected to pass, and the result was disastrous.

The defenders cashed a spade and shifted to a club. Declarer lost only one trick in each plain suit, while four spades was unbeatable. The match, and with it Britain's world title, went down the drain.

LEGAL NOTICE

The North Carolina Egg Marketing Association will hold a referendum among egg producers on April 25, 1984 between the hours of 6:00 a.m. and 6:00 p.m. as provided by the North Carolina Enabling Act (G.S. Article 50, Chapter 106). Purpose of such referendum shall be to determine if egg producers wish to approve continuation of assessing themselves a maximum 4 cents per case of eggs packed, processed or handled in the state to promote egg research, education and marketing. 3 cents will go for funding the promotion and education programs of the North Carolina Egg Marketing Association. One cent of the assessment will provide membership for North Carolina egg producers in National Egg Company and United Egg Producers. Polling places will be located by key communities in each county producing eggs in North Carolina. Collection of such assessment shall be made by first processors or handlers of eggs.

CAR TALK
From PHELPS CHEVROLET
By Ed Briley

BEFORE BUYING BATTERY

Before you buy a replacement battery, be sure you need one. Have the old one checked by your service station to ensure that the rundown condition is not due to a loose connection, corrosion, or other correctible cause.

Be sure that the new battery has an electrical rating at least equal to your old battery, and fits the hold-down brackets and battery tray.

Compare prices, ratings and warranties. You will find substantial differences in batteries of the same size. Be sure the warranty is in writing and dated.

Be wary of bargain batteries-they may be low in both capacity and quality. As in most everything else, you get about what you pay for.

If your car came equipped with a six-cell, 12 volt battery, replace it with a six-cell, 12 volt battery. Similarly, replace a three-cell 6 volt battery with another of the same. The two types of batteries are NOT interchangeable.

★★★★★★★★

When you think Chevrolet—think PHELPS CHEVROLET—where you get a good deal plus a great deal more. We pride ourselves in offering the lowest price, maximum trade allowance, low cost financing and quality service.

Paul Rodriguez Finds A Future In Comedy

By Joe Haviland

Known in most circles as a stand-up comic, Paul Rodriguez stands out as Paul a.k.a. Pablo Rivera in his first TV series, "a.k.a Pablo."

"Humor is humor. It crosses over," says Rodriguez discussing the new series produced by Norman Lear. "This show is not about a Mexican family, it's about a family that happens to be Mexican. A family that cares for each other; that disagree with each other; that have certain ambitions; and that came to America like many immigrants in hopes of a better living."

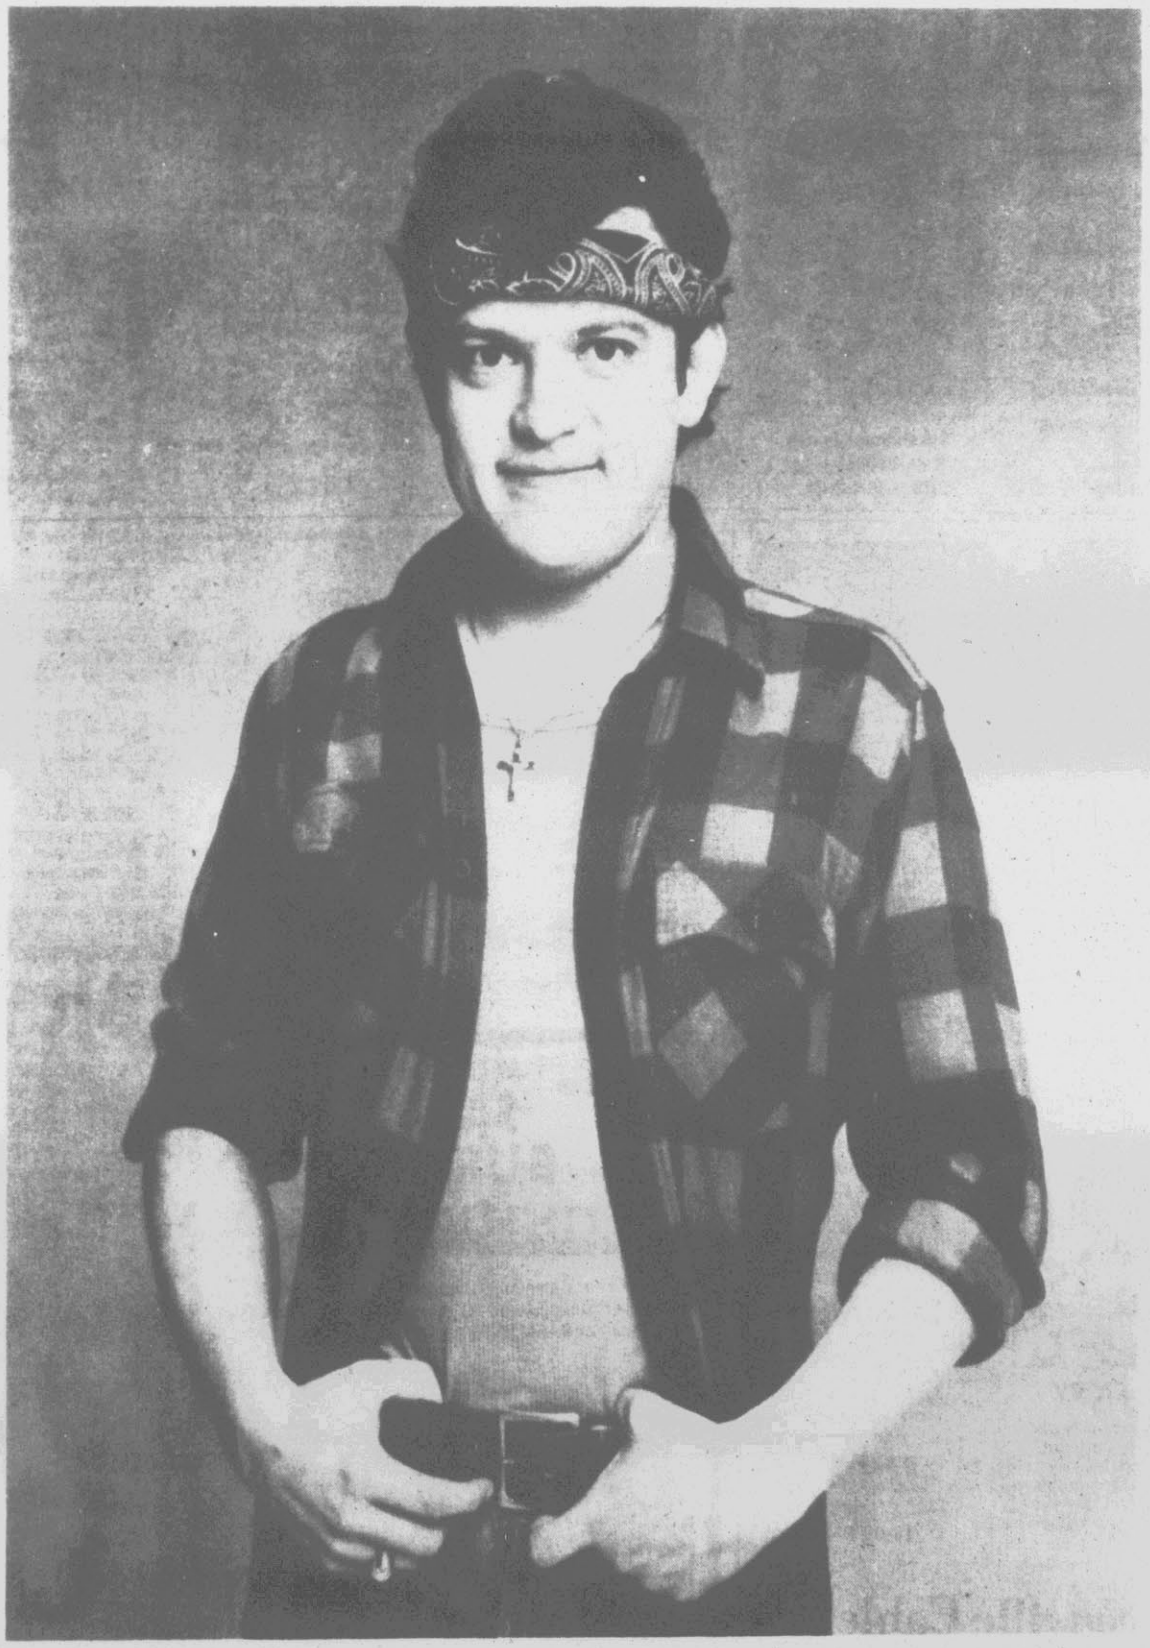

In many ways the character of Paul Rivera mirrors Rodriguez' own life. But Rodriguez is quick to point out that it is a younger version of himself.

"I know who Paul Rivera is," he says. "He's a naive person who has a certain kind of 'Wizard of Oz' type of feeling about show business. Paul Rodriguez, however, knows a little about the business and he realizes that there are many compromises and that there are many bummers in show business. It's not all jacuzzis and parties in Beverly Hills. It's a lot of work. When you become a public person you literally become responsible for your actions and your words."

After earning a degree at Long Beach City College, Rodriguez enrolled in pre-law studies at California State University, Long Beach, but an appearance at amateur night at the Comedy Store in Hollywood in November 1980 led to a job offer working at the club and the opportunity to perform on stage. It is this Paul Rodriguez, a rising young comedian, who most resembles his character. "It's kind of ironic," Rodriguez says, "because the very reason that I didn't finish school and became a comedian was because I shun responsibility.

"My parents love me and I'm their son but they still believe that it's a part-time job and I'll quit and go back to college," says Rodriguez referring to his own home life, a home life that is reflected in the series. "They don't see show business as any kind of future. Like my dad said, only a lunatic or a madman would decide to make a living out of telling jokes. Of course I disagree with him."

For Paul Rodriguez, stand-up comedy will always be his first love. "Whether 'Pablo' goes or dies," he says "I will always be a stand-up comedian. After all, you have to know on which side your tortilla is buttered."

Paul Rodriguez stars as Paul a.k.a. Pablo Rivera, a young Mexican-American comedian on the brink of stardom, in Norman Lear's new comedy series, "a.k.a. Pablo," airing Tuesdays on ABC.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: I recently watched the movie "The Four Seasons," which starred Alan Alda and Carol Burnett. Could you tell me if the daughters of the two couples in the movie are Alan Alda's daughters in real life? — Barbara Echternach

To Barbara: Long live nepotism! Yes, they are Alda's daughters. Elizabeth Alda has reprised her film role as Beth Burroughs, Jack Burroughs' daughter who moves to Hollywood, in the new CBS-TV series "The Four Seasons." Her sister Beatrice Alda, who was also seen in the film as Beth's best friend Lisa Callan, has also re-created her role for the small screen.

DEAR MICHELE: Did Dennis Weaver play the role of Festus on the famous series "Gunsmoke"? If not, who did? — Beverly Chafin

To Beverly: Weaver appeared as the limping deputy Chester Goode from 1955-1964. In 1964, Ken Curtis replaced Weaver as Marshall Dillon's new deputy, Festus Haggen. Curtis stayed with the series until the final telecast in 1975. Interestingly enough, the only stars of "Gunsmoke" who remained with the show for its entire 20-year run were James Arness and Milburn Stone, who played Marshall Dillon and Doc Adams, respectively.

DEAR MICHELE: How tall is John Denver? — M. Nomer

To M. Nomer: I wouldn't say John is ready for the starting lineup of the Los Angeles Lakers. Denver stands 5 feet 9 inches tall.

DEAR MICHELE: I would like some information on Vera Reynolds, who played the lead in Cecil B. DeMille's "Feet of Clay." I met Vera and her then-husband Robert Montgomery when we lived across the street from her in-laws, the Smith's. I would like to contact Vera and invite her for a visit. — Mrs. Clifford J. Waas

To Mrs. Wass: I am sorry to inform you that Vera Reynolds died in 1962 at the age of 62. Vera retired from the screen in 1932 and was the widow of actor Robert Ellis.

DEAR MICHELE: Please settle an argument. I say that Roy Thinnes, who used to play on "Falcon Crest," also starred as Jesse Brewer's husband, Phil, on "General Hospital." My sister says no. — Billie Baise

To Billie: Before there was Luke and Laura, there was Phil and Jesse. Roy Thinnes did appear for a time on "General Hospital" as Phil Brewer.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

James Cagney started his life on the tough streets of New York City, punching his way through schoolyard brawls. He once contemplated becoming a boxer until his mother dared him to punch it out with her. It's ironic that Cagney, now 84, would return to New York to film his first TV movie, "Terrible Joe Moran." The film, airing Tuesday on CBS, is the story of a former welterweight boxing champion who is confined to a wheelchair, but is living in comfortable retirement in a New York City brownstone.

Art Carney stars as his loyal companion, cook and housekeeper. New York City Mayor Ed Koch and former heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson appear in cameo roles.

When Mayor Koch learned that Cagney was filming on location in New York, he visited the production at a gym on 14th St. Koch said he wanted to welcome Cagney to the city and shake his hand. As he was leaving, the mayor smiled at Cagney and said, "Why don't you put me in your picture? You know I've always wanted to be an actor and I'm better than Carney."

"We took him up on it," says producer Robert Halmi. "We wrote him into the gym sequence as Moe, the promoter who's trying to convince Cagney to manage one of his young boxers. And you know — the mayor really is a very good actor."

Ted Koppel will receive the first annual Sol Taishoff Award for excellence in broadcast journalism. Koppel is being honored with the award, named for the late founder and editor of Broadcasting magazine, for his "fair and tough" approach as a television interviewer and for his contribution to the success of "Nightline."

Together again

Jamie Lyn Bauer and John Cook, who once played lovers on "The Young and the Restless," have been signed to play the leads in a syndicated fall serial "Together Again." Irlene Mandrell, Barbara's sister, is also in the cast.

"Together Again" is the story of two international lovers, Scott and Victoria, who have the money and power to get anything they desire — except each other.

ASK ME ABOUT TV

By Val Carew

A girlfriend and I are having an argument. She says that David Hasselhoff, who stars on "Knight Rider," also plays on a daytime soap opera. Is this true? Where can we write him? — E.M., Elizabeth Township, N.J.

Hasselhoff was on a soap opera prior to "Knight Rider." He played Snapper Foster on "The Young and the Restless" for six years. The day after he left the soap he was cast in "Knight Rider." Write him in care of his present series, Universal Studios, Universal City, Calif. 91608.

David Hasselhoff

Melanie Gaffin

Do you know the name of the young actress who plays on "Whiz Kids"? Where can I write her? — B.S., Colorado Springs, Colo.

You must mean Melanie Gaffin, who plays Cheryl, the sister of Richie (played by Matthew Laborteaux). Write her in care of the series, Universal Studios, Universal City, Calif. 91608.

What happened to "Tales of the Gold Monkey"? Will it be back? Is the guy who played Louie related to the guy who plays the IRS man on "Lottery"? — B.M., Kings Mountain, N.C.

First of all, "Tales of the Gold Monkey" was a victim of low ratings and will not return. Roddy McDowall played Bon Chance Louie and he is not related to Marshall Colt, who plays Eric, the IRS man on "Lottery."

Who played Steven Cord in "Peyton Place"? — E.W., Kimberly, Ore.

James Douglas played Cord, the illegitimate grandson of Martin Cord, for the whole run of the series that premiered in September 1964 and ran through June 1969. When "Return to Peyton Place" made an effort at being a daytime soap in 1972 (it lasted until 1974), Cord was played by Joe Gallison who now plays Neil Curtis on "Days of Our Lives."

(Do you have a question about TV? Write Val Carew at 200 Park Avenue, Room 602, New York, NY 10166.)

Dreams of food

"I Dream of Jeannie" star Barbara Eden, will record a series of radio and TV public service announcements for the First Annual InterAid Artists Benefit for Children of Hunger. Miss Eden will deliver the spots in English, French, Italian, Portuguese and Spanish.

"Obsessive Love" filming

Production has begun in Los Angeles on "Obsessive Love," a psychological suspense drama starring Yvette Mimieux and "Manimal" star Simon MacCorkindale.

Miss Mimieux, who also is one of the producers of the film, portrays a woman whose fantasies about a love affair with a handsome daytime drama star envelops three people in tragedy.

Baseball Bonanza on NBC

By Willie Schatz

They played baseball's All-Star game a little early this year — before the season started!

How's that possible? Won't the 1984 All-Star game be played in San Francisco on July 10?

Well, yes. This wasn't the "real" All-Star game. The two leagues did battle one another in softball, however, with the National League defeating the American League 4-3.

The seven inning game was played February 18 in Sarasota. Viewers can see the game Saturday, March 31, from 2:30-3:30 on NBC. This might be worth a look. It's the only All-Star game series the AL leads. It also won in 1982 and 1983. The game will be the centerpiece of NBC's pre-season baseball special, which will feature special previews and analysis, including an interview with new baseball commissioner Peter Uberroth.

Actually, the game's not really the thing here. The softball action will be used as a lead-in to practically everything on the show. There'll be highlights from last year, no doubt featuring the world champion Orioles, who provided most of the good times in 1983. Of course, the White Sox, Phils, and Dodgers will be mentioned.

Joe Garagiola and Bob Costas will tell you what they think about the upcoming season, and various players will tell you what they think. The thinkers will not necessarily agree on everything. Or anything.

Softball fans and players will think they've died and gone to heaven. Average league players such as Steve Garvey, Mike Schmidt, Lonnie Smith, Al Oliver, Jim Rice, Ken Singleton, Wade Boggs and Cal Ripken will be on the field. They won't be wearing cleats, but they'll be clothed in snazzy uniforms. Three thousand people will be cheering them on. They'll undoubtedly make the most noise when MVP Andre Dawson of the Expos hits a two-run homer to tie the game at three.

A good time was surely had by all. The NBC people must have had a blast putting this together. Too bad they won't feel so wonderful when the ratings for the pre-season show arrive. It's up against the NCAA basketball semifinals on CBS.

"God help us and save us," said an NBC source. Forget it. Even he can't do that job.

Saturday, March 25

NCAA Regional Finals, CBS, 1:30-6 p.m. The Midwest Regional final from the Checkerdome in St. Louis, followed by the West Regional final from Pauley Pavilion in Los Angeles. Where the best teams go, Gary Bender and Billy Packer will follow.

SportsWorld, NBC, 2:30-4 p.m. A Western Hemisphere first. The International Amateur Athletic Federation World Cross-Country Championships, brought to the United States by the intrepid Fred Lebow. You may remember him as the gentleman who made the New York Marathon into what it is today. He has equally grandiose plans for this race. Don't count him out.

Saturday, March 31

NCAA Basketball Semifinals, CBS, 3:30-8 p.m. The Mideast Regional winner versus the West champion, followed by the Midwest survivor against the East champion, all from Seattle's Kingdome. Gary Bender and Billy Packer, as usual, will be talking during the best game (at least from CBS' viewpoint). Brent Musburger will pontificate from a Kingdome studio specially constructed for the occasion.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

NEW SUBJECTS FOR KING LEAR

Norman Lear, king of innovative programming — All in the Family, Maude, Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman — has returned to the small screen with a vengeance after a five-year absence. If a.k.a. Pablo, his new ABC sitcom with an all-Latin cast, gets a poor reception, he has another pilot waiting to take off: Good Evening, He Lied, a sitcom set in a TV newsroom. Lear, who will also produce an ABC-TV movie, Heart Sounds, says he came back to TV because "the world has turned 120 to 130 degrees in the last five years in terms of what there is to write about — including the emergence of a whole Latino culture. All of this is fresh."

◉

Die-hard Cagney & Lacey fans were so affronted by its cancellation last fall that CBS gave the series a seven-episode reprieve. Sharon Gless, who shares star billing with Tyne Daly, is so confident the beat will go on that she's begun looking for a weekend beach house in Laguna (she already has a house in Studio City that's like a little cabin). But why the Orange County artists' colony rather than trendier Malibu? "Malibu is show business," explains Sharon. "I'm in show business, I work among show-biz people; I don't need to live among them. I have to fight for a table in town; do I want to fight for a table at my beach house, too?"

Were it not for the rearrangement of files at the Las Vegas Convention and Visitors Authority and the subsequent resurfacing of some old material, no one would know that 30 years ago, Ronald Reagan made his debut as a performer in Gambling City. A spokesman reports that Reagan worked as a backup for an all-male singing, dancing and acting group, The Continentals. . . . Though she was star of the movie Daisy Miller and now heads the NBC series The Yellow Rose, Cybill Shepherd is no frail flower. When a hopeful hombre asked her definition of a terrific evening, Shepherd sent him packing with the thorny reply: "Roping steers under a full moon."

SUITORS WHO DON'T RIDE SHOULD STEER CLEAR OF CYBILL

◉

Paul Newman, whose new film Harry and Son was released this month, wanted to undergo his angioplasty — a surgical procedure that cleans out cholesterol from the arteries — in secret. So Newman elected to check into the remote Sequoia Hospital in Redwood City, under the nom de hospital John Smith. John Smith? C'mon Paul, surely you can do better than that.

HARRIED PAUL BECOMES NEW MAN IN HOSPITAL

◉

Maybe the problem is that former Attorney General John Mitchell just can't sit still. Although he repeatedly has been told that there is $5,000 at his disposal to commission a portrait to grace the halls of the Justice Department, he "just hasn't availed himself of the opportunity," says a department employee. According to sources, he is the only Attorney General in memory who is not captured — on canvas, that is.

◉

Some clever foot-dragging at the United States Information Agency produced at least one complaint about the agency's chief, Charles Z. Wick, whose secretly recorded telephone calls with other Government officials have been an embarrassment to both the agency and the White House. Stencilled boldly on the snow-covered courtyard ground of U.S.I.A.'s headquarters was one anonymous critic's proposal: "It's Time to Trim the Wick."

Is there any one person responsible for helping you get where you are today? — P.S., Aurora, Ill.

I started out as a background singer and vocal arranger, working with people like David Bowie, Bette Midler and Quincy Jones. On one of my tours with Roberta Flack, when I was singing in the background, she suddenly said to me, "It's about time you got hooked up with a record company." She promised to introduce me to managers and lawyers to make the transition easier. But Roberta must have known it would take something more dramatic to loosen me from my comfortable background slot. She fired me.

Does Your Pet Need Animal Psychotherapy?

BY PATRICIA LEIGH BROWN

Tuesday night in Metuchen, N.J. At the suburban home of Mr. and Mrs. W., a tan, overweight 7-year-old male Yorkie named Sandy is undergoing treatment by one of the few types of doctors left who make house calls. "Our friends don't visit us anymore," the perturbed Mr. and Mrs. W. lament to Dr. Peter Borchelt, Ph.D., an animal behaviorist.

Lately, it seems, Sandy has taken to biting friends of the family, as well as their housekeeper; this night he has also decided to nip the loafer-clad toes of Dr. Borchelt, a wholesome-looking 39-year-old who appears as if he still consumes Skippy peanut butter (he does). Observing this behavior, which is triggered when nonfamily members have the unfortunate experience of coming too close to one of the W.'s, Dr. Borchelt concludes that Sandy is "fearful and aggressive toward strangers." Prescribing a series of "gradual exposure" techniques designed to lessen Sandy's fear, the doctor helps the W.'s guide their pet toward overcoming the behavior. People start visiting again, but one problem remains: "Our friends think we're nuts to invest in an animal psychiatrist."

Perhaps it was inevitable. In a nation that is highly therapy-oriented and in which half of all families own dogs or cats, the emergence of the pet psychologist should come as no surprise. At least one professional observer regards the growing legion of animal-behavior specialists as part of a new frontier. "People are realizing that animals have intrinsic value," contends Dr. Michael W. Fox, scientific director of the Humane Society of the United States in Washington. "Pets are more deeply connected to people now than they ever were before."

Admittedly, the image of the "animal shrink" conjures up strange visions of cats on couches and dogs free-associating about their relationships with their mothers ("She was a — a real... bitch"). In fact, the modus operandi of Peter Borchelt resembles Sherlock Holmes far more than it smacks of Sigmund Freud.

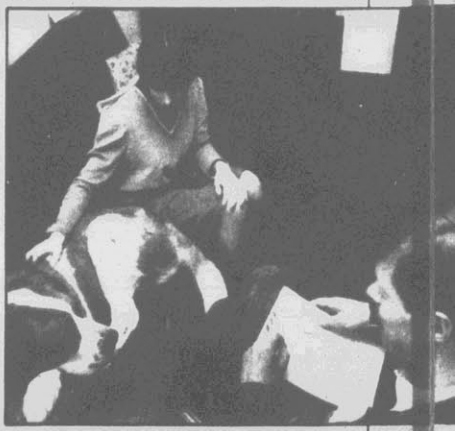

Floral Park, Queens, N.Y. Dr. Borchelt is pondering a case involving Brandy, a 4-year-old neutered-male short-hair cat. The problem, succinctly put by the owner, is that "Brandy goes 80 percent of the time on the living-room carpet." This situation has persisted for two years, necessitating costly cleaning bills and causing undue embarrassment to Brandy's "family."

The first thing Dr. Borchelt tries to determine is whether Brandy's predicament involves a preference for surface or for location (oddly enough, the cat urinates on the living-room carpet, but not on an identical bathroom rug). "We know there's a method to his madness," a pacing Borchelt explains to the owners, "so think of what we're doing as though it were a football game. We know some of the basic rules. What we don't know is at exactly what point we'll win."

Borchelt spends 45 minutes or so probing Brandy's behavior, asking questions related to his history: When did the problem begin? What methods were used to counteract it? What were the results? Later, combing the premises, the doctor happens to notice the texture of the more heavily-trafficked bathroom carpet. Matted down, it is a little less cushy than its living-room counterpart. "This might account for Brandy's preference," reasons the latter-day Holmes. He then devises an experiment in which litter boxes are positioned on two favorite living-room spots, and a swatch of living-room carpet is nailed to the desired bathroom litter box. Eventually, Brandy should learn to use the litter box in the bathroom. "He's just like Quincy," Brandy's family says of their animal behaviorist.

The image of the animal shrink conjures up visions of dogs free-associating about their mothers.

In a given week, the know-how of the peripatetic Dr. Borchelt has extended to an inter-male aggression case with two Dobermans, a separation problem of a Portuguese water dog in New Jersey and somewhat destructive behavior (chewing and clawing) involving a miniature poodle. It has also encompassed more serious matters: bites, the most common reason for seeking the assistance of an animal behaviorist. Forty-five percent of all children between ages 4 and 18 are bitten by dogs, according to a 1982 University of Pennsylvania study.

Linda Baron

Hardly dogmatic, Dr. Borchelt still manages to make use of the couch.

Since the late 19th century, when

Russian physiologist Ivan Pavlov discovered he could make dogs salivate on command, animal-behavior research has been applied to everything from training pigeons to deliver messages to teaching Flipper how to be a movie star. It wasn't until the 1970's, however, that behaviorists, relying on techniques developed for the modification of human-conduct problems, began turning their attention to pets. Though qualified behavior therapists like Dr. Borchelt are still relatively rare (he has a Ph.D. in comparative psychology with a specialty in animal behavior), the field is expanding; today there are at least four veterinary schools with staff animal behaviorists, and courses on animal behavior are slowly becoming a part of curriculums.

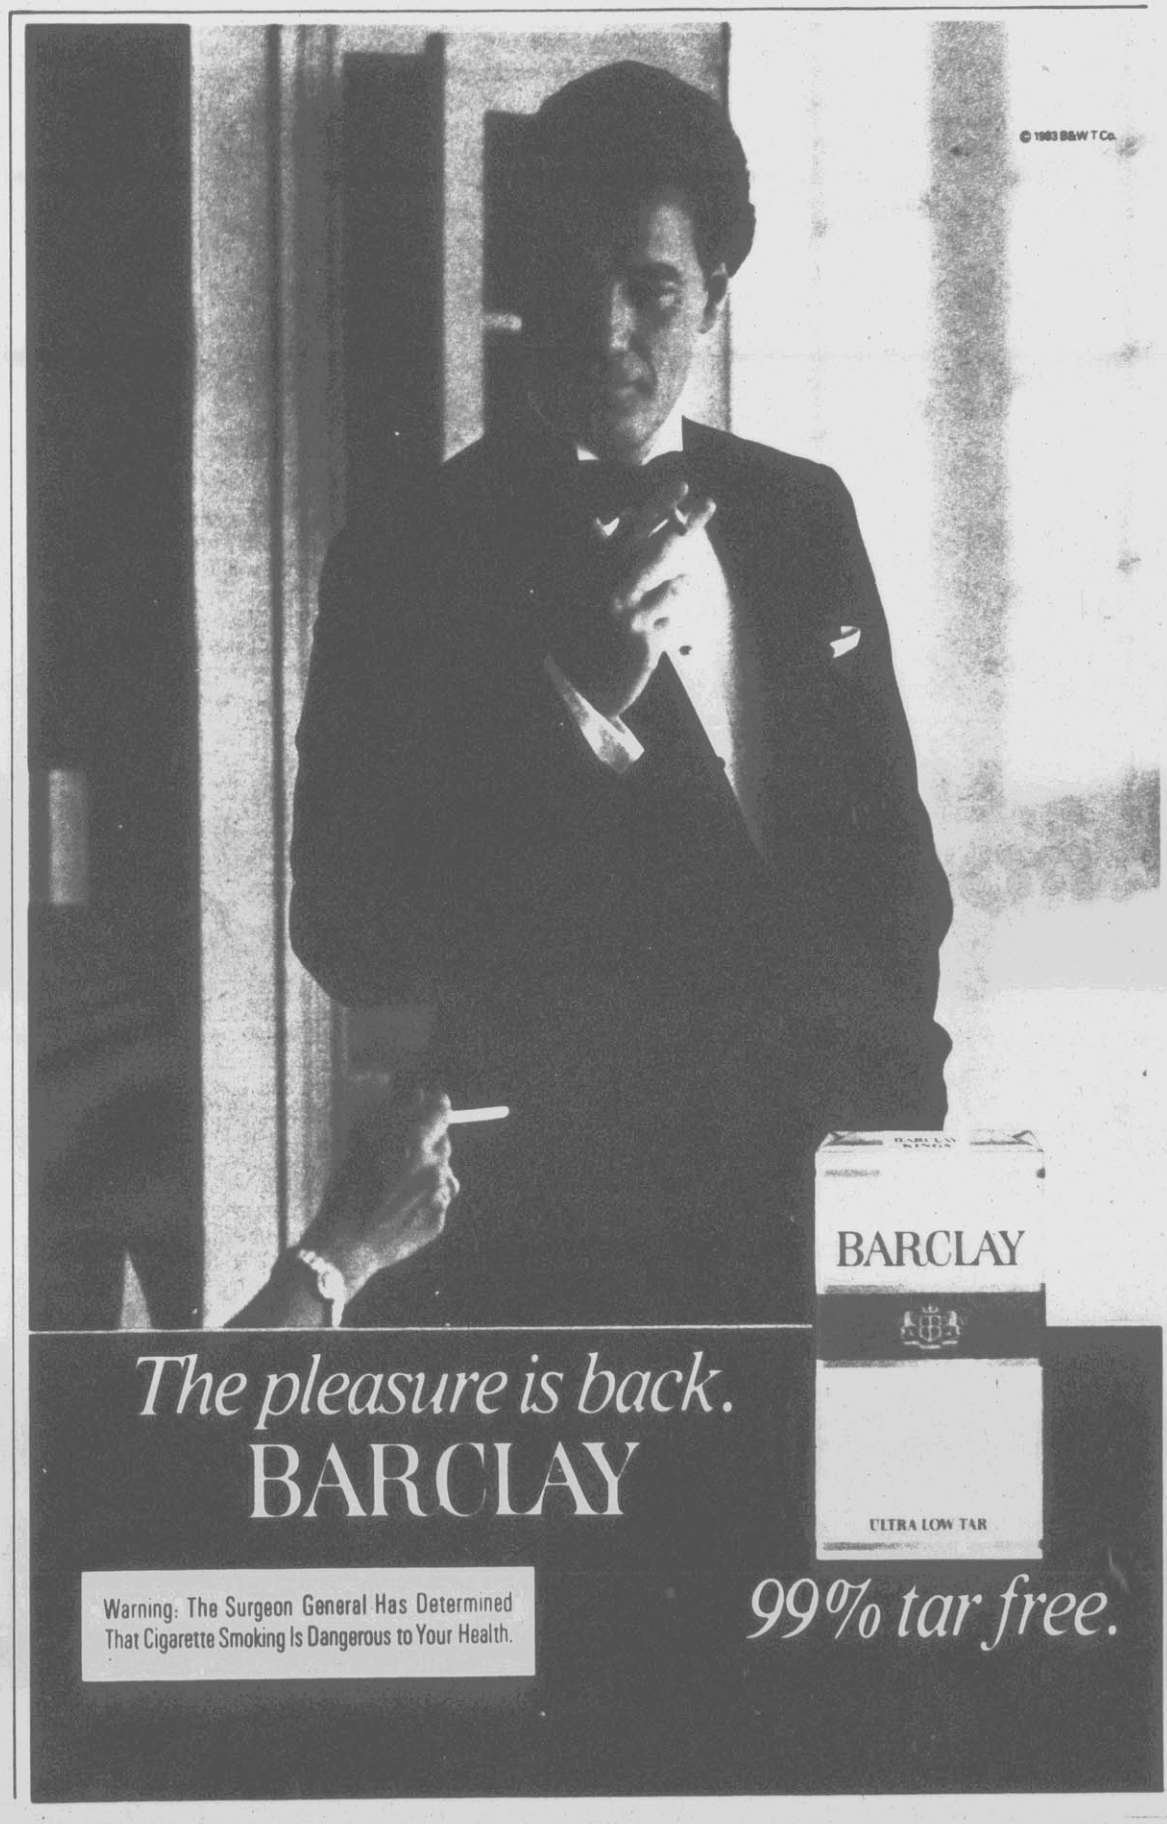

The acceptance of a Dr. Borchelt can be attributed to new scientific knowledge, public-health imperatives and changing relationships between people and pets. Sheer numbers tell some of the story. There are 55 million dogs and 52 million cats in this country, and according to Dr. Alan Beck, director of The Center for the Interaction of Animals and Society at the University of Pennsylvania's School of Veterinary Medicine, one-quarter of the pets turned over to animal shelters every year are abandoned because they have behavioral difficulties. Of those animals, Beck estimates that 85 percent are eventually euthanized.

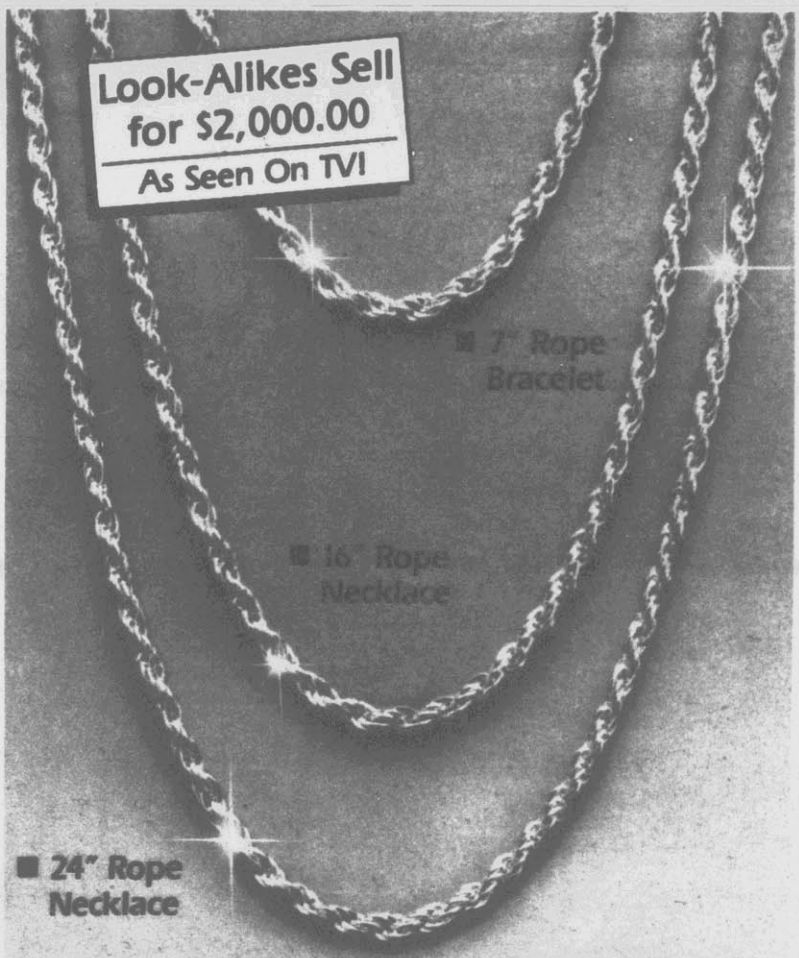

At the same time, though, there seems to be a countervailing trend afoot. Americans are beginning to come to grips with their attachment to pets, the "human companion animal bond," as it is known in veterinary circles. "We have individuated our relationship to our pets," observes University of Pennsylvania psychiatrist Dr. Aaron H. Katcher. Fewer children, increased familial instability and a lack of familiarity with animals are some of the reasons he feels pets are becoming more important in our culture. So the idea of pet therapy, in his view, is a logical outgrowth of the legitimization of the feelings people now hold toward their animals.

Peter Borchelt opted to treat animals because, he explains, "it's easier to find answers." He completed his doctorate in 1973 and joined the staff of New York City's Animal Medical Center in 1978. In 1980, still affiliated with the hospital, he started a private practice. His specialty was considered so obscure that the phone company refused to list "Animal Behavior" in the Yellow Pages.

Today he roams the streets and highways of the New York City area in his silver Volkswagen, license plate emblazoned: ANML BHVR. Along with some two dozen others who share his specialty nationwide (others include Dr. Benjamin Hart in Davis, Calif., Dr. Suzanne Arguello in Fort Collins, Colo., and Dr. Sharon Cromwell-Davis in Athens, Ga.), Borchelt is filling a long-existing void between obedience trainers and veterinarians. Some vets argue that good trainers work better than Ph.D.'s: Dr. Borchelt insists that potential clients consult a vet first. Typically, he'll spend two to four hours with a pet, usually at the client's home, at a cost between $100 and $200, depending on the severity of the case.

Unlike the proverbial Dr. Dolittle, who talked to the animals, Borchelt talks to their owners, focusing their attention on learning techniques or on altering the environment. Aggressive behavior, separation dilemmas, phobias and excessive grooming and feeding patterns all fall within this purview.

Sometimes the solution is easy. Arriving at a household on the posh Upper East Side of Manhattan, where Din-ny and Corky, two Dalmatians, were fighting, all Dr. Borchelt had to do was take one look to realize he had "a classic inter-male aggression problem." Unbeknownst to the owners, the dogs had not been neutered. "In this situation," he explained to them, "we know it is related to male hormones."

By Mimi Pond, reprinted with permission of the East Side Express

Sometimes success is elusive, however, as in the case of an 11-year-old male Yorkie afflicted with acute separation anxiety. For almost all its life, the little fellow would shake, pace and salivate whenever his owner left for work. Eventually, the owner contacted Dr. Borchelt, who attempted to treat the disorder behaviorally. "We couldn't fake that dog," he recalls now. "It was the equivalent of trying to get an American to unlearn English."

Many people assume that their pets' behavior troubles are their fault, but "the owner is just one of thousands of variables that influence behavior," says Borchelt. He points out that the bereft but typical response of the owner of a wily Lhasa apso is, "My mother-in-law says I'm doing it all wrong; I should stick her nose in it and hit her with a newspaper."

In some cases, however, personal situations can affect pets. The so-called "jealousy response," for instance, is common when a divorcée living in her old apartment starts seeing someone new, or when a baby arrives. Under such circumstances, a dog may bite or howl, exercising its natural protective instincts while "misinterpreting affection on the part of humans as a threat." One of Dr. Borchelt's cases involved a situation in which a newly remarried woman, terrified of being kicked out of her second husband's apartment building due to her rambunctious boxer, came to him for advice. Using a gradual exposure technique in which she would repeatedly pretend to leave home, the woman managed to reduce the dog's fear of his new home — and also pacify the neighbors.

Not every case involves cats and dogs. Dr. Borchelt once made a "stable call" to see a horse deathly afraid of blacksmiths. To counteract this "blacksmith phobia," Borchelt "desensitized" the animal by having other stable workers don pieces of the blacksmith's clothing.

Peter Borchelt doesn't know whether animal behaviorists will become American institutions the way veterinarians and dog trainers have.

It does seem likely, though, that as pets continue to play an important role in our lives, so, too, will specialists like Peter Borchelt. "There's still so much we don't know," he stresses as he drives home contemplating the future of his field. But no doubt, Borchelt will pursue this, and other issues, with dogged determination. FW

$TREETWISE SENSE FOR NEW CITY SLICKERS

Peggy Schmidt

Young people heading to the big city to make their mark may be in for a rude awakening unless they understand the financial considerations of relocating. FAMILY WEEKLY asked Peggy Schmidt, lecturer and author of Making It Big in the City: A Woman's Guide to Living, Loving and Working There (Coward-McCann), to advise readers about stepping clear of the monetary pitfalls they may face when moving from their hometown to an urban setting.

Q: What's the most important financial advice for young people who plan to move to a big city to find their first job?

A: Save enough money before you leave home!

Q: How much is enough?

A: There's no specific amount, since the cost of living varies from city to city. But you need enough to get you through several months of job hunting. Depending on the availability of job openings in your field, it could take up to six months.

Q: Do you have a checklist for figuring out relocation expenses?

A: Yes. Start with the costs of the move itself — the expenses involved in getting yourself and your belongings to your destination. If you have more than you can take with you, compare the shipping rates of private companies such as United Parcel Service, the U.S. Mail and other moving companies. Keep in mind that unfurnished apartments are cheaper to rent than furnished ones. But in that case, you will have to get furniture, which often can be bought used or constructed out of inexpensive materials.

Q: What is the single biggest expense of city living?

A: Rent. In cities where vacancy rates are low, expect to spend as much as one-third of your gross income on it. And don't forget to add in an extra month's rent for a security deposit. If you don't have the time to look for a reasonably priced apartment, you may have to pay a broker to help you find one. And that fee ranges from a half month's rent to 10 percent of your annual rent expense.

Q: What other kinds of first-time costs are there?

A: Installation of your telephone, which can be close to $100 in some cases, and if you've never had a phone in your name before, figure on a deposit of up to $100. Crime deterrents such as gates, locks and bars may also be necessary expenses. Most young people can't afford to live in the best neighborhoods. Keep in mind that ground-floor apartments are among the most prone to break-ins, and thieves are looking for the kinds of highly portable items young people often own: bikes, stereos, cameras. That's why it pays to get renter's insurance. It costs between $68 and $139 for between $10,000 and $25,000 of coverage.

Q: Once a person is working, what are the best steps to establishing a solid financial base?

A: Keep track of your monthly expenses — rent, utilities, food and entertainment costs. You'll see whether you're spending too much in relation to your income. If you're over budget, you can cut down on certain items. If you're spending more than $25 a month on long-distance calls, for example, look into one of the new long-distance services. Shop at grocery stores instead of zipping into a late-night deli where you pay extra for the convenience. Even penny-pinching habits sometimes can't compensate for a meager salary in an expensive city. You may find you need a roommate or a second job to make ends meet during your first year. Or you may have to rely on Mom and Dad for extras, such as trips home.

Q: How soon should a newcomer open a bank account?

A: Immediately. Banks in big cities often won't cash your checks unless you or your employer have an account with them. One factor in your choice of bank ought to be how fast out-of-town checks clear, since you may be transferring money back and forth for some time. Another consideration is whether the bank has automated tellers and whether branches are convenient to where you live and work.

Q: How important is getting a credit card?

A: Since many restaurants and stores only take cash or credit cards and the latter are safer to carry, it's a good idea to get a bank credit card such as American Express, Mastercard or Visa. You'll probably be eligible for a card once you begin working in a salaried job. Besides the convenience, it's smart to start building a credit record early on because you may need a car loan or a mortgage in a few years. However, get in the habit of charging only as much money as you have available on hand, or you'll end up paying high interest payments on your monthly bills. FW

Amazoy withstands active kids and cookouts. Gives you time to relax since it needs little water and cuts mowing two thirds

GRASS SEED WILL NEVER GROW A LAWN LIKE THIS—DROUGHT & WEAR RESISTANT!
Amazoy lawns stay green right thru scorching heat and drought!

Lady Plugs In Zoysia Grass Saves Time, Work & Money

Amazoy is the Trade Mark Registered U.S. Patent Office for our Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass

FREE! UP TO 1000 AMAZOY PLUGS JUST FOR ORDERING NOW

By Jack T. Johnson, Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow ... until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn"...is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in...Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds—it's just wonderful!"

LAWN WATERED ONLY ONCE

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn —nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick, rich, luxurious, established Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long.

FOR SLOPES, PLAY AREAS, BARE SPOTS

End erosion of slopes with Amazoy. Perfect answer for hard-to-cover spots, play-worn areas.

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS—PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

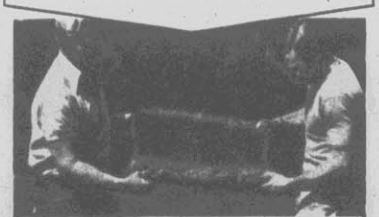

Just set Amazoy plugs into holes in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style.

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth including weeds—from part shade to full sun. Goes off its green color after killing frosts. Begins regaining its green color at the time when the temperature in the spring is consistently warm. This, of course, varies with climate. Easy planting instructions with order.

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed: like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills. Save time, work, money. Plug in Amazoy.

TWO GROWN MEN CAN'T PULL IT APART

So deep-rooted is Amazoy . . . it grows into practically indestructible turf. Amazoy thrives in porous, sandy soil, "builder's soil"—even salty beach areas! Beauty is but one advantage of Zoysia Grass. It's also so vigorous and rich it thrives in soils where lesser grasses have failed you repeatedly. Start your Amazoy lawn this Spring, and never re-seed your lawn again!

WEAR RESISTANT

When America's largest University tested 13 leading grasses for wear resistance, such as foot scuffling, the Zoysia (matrella and japonica Meyer Z-52) led all others.

Your Amazoy lawn takes such wear as cookouts, lawn parties, lawn furniture, etc. Grows so thick you could play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Even if children play on it, they won't hurt it—or themselves.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS... FREE WITH ORDERS OF 1000 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

CUTS YOUR WORK, SAVES YOU MONEY

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement...ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by ⅔.

YOUR OWN SUPPLY OF PLUG TRANSPLANTS

Established Amazoy gives you Zoysia plugs to plant in other areas as desired!

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass was perfected by U.S. Govt., released in cooperation with U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be delivered at earliest correct time for planting in your area.

We ship all orders the same day plugs are packed, shipping/handling charge collect via most economical means.

TEI GORDON, 13, VERY DEFINITELY MEANS BUSINESS

By Steve Jenning

Everybody talks about the weather but nobody ever does anything about it — so goes the old saw. Well, Tei (pronounced "Tay") A. Gordon, a 13-year-old eighth grader from Corvallis, Ore., is doing something: He's making money from it via weekly newsletters that help building managers cut energy costs.

Known as The Energy Advisor, this young tycoon's research enterprise boasts 50 corporate clients, including Fortune 500 heavyweights like J.C. Penney and General Mills, who pay as little as $47 a year for Tei's service and, in the case of General Mills, save as much as $13 million in energy costs because of it. Tei's bank account has also benefited nicely. "I've made $3,000 to $4,000 in the last year." What precise service does Gordon provide to such an impressive client roster?

Every Monday morning, Tei rings the National Oceanic & Atmospheric Administration (N.O.A.A.) in Washington, D.C., to gather information the agency collected the previous week. The data concern so-called "degree days," a measure that indicates how much fuel is needed to keep a building's temperature comfortable.

Such information is important to owners of large commercial buildings, particularly if they have buildings in several cities. Degree figures coupled with calculations on energy usage help landlords rate the efficiency of heating and/or cooling systems.

Tei receives these statistics through a telephone hookup that connects his father's office computer with N.O.A.A. The data appear on the computer screen and are then printed out and mailed to Tei's subscribers.

Though Tei has been the high-octane fuel behind The Energy Advisor, credit for the idea goes to a family friend named Arthur N. Orans. He started the service in 1982 but soon turned it over to Tei through a licensing agreement.

"The kid is a pretty good marketer," says Orans. "He's got subscribers in North Carolina, Florida and Washington state — all over."

But few of those customers know that they're actually dealing with a 13-year-old, 5-foot-1-inch vendor.

"Thirteen, oh really? I'd like to buy stock in his company," was the reaction of E.R. Haduch, director of engineering for First Office Management in Chicago. He uses Tei's data to monitor energy in 18 buildings across the country.

Until recently Tei worked only about half an hour a week and hired friends to help with tasks like envelope stuffing. "But once I got a little publicity and more subscribers, it went up to about an hour a week," reports Tei.

There has, of course, been a bit of ribbing from classmates about his success. "But most of them are taking it pretty well," he says. "And I've made a lot of new friends." FW

THE AMAZING DIET SECRET OF A DESPERATE ACTOR

"AT 275 POUNDS LUKE ALLARY KNEW HIS CAREER NEEDED A MIRACLE"

"You must lose weight". I've been hearing it since I was 15 years old; from friends, family, agent, and finally my doctor. It's easy advice to give but didn't they understand I was trying to lose weight and couldn't?

At 275 pounds I knew my acting career needed a miracle, and finding myself in the hospital with a blood pressure reading of 190/119, I prayed for one.

YOU NAME IT, I'VE TRIED IT. Diet 21, Slim Fast, Ayds, Nutri-Diet, Glucomannan, Weight-Watchers, health spas, etc., and none of them worked. I was even on a diet under a doctor's supervision with minimal results.

Then I saw an ad for the ROBANN CLINIC. They were only about 40 miles down the road so I decided to drive down and see if they had anything different to offer or if it was just more of the same.

The people there explained their program and the theory behind it, but what really sold me on their product was the fact that if I wasn't completely satisfied they would refund my money immediately.

After starting on the Formulas and Diet, I was amazed that I could eat three delicious meals a day and still lose weight. I was satisfied and never felt hungry. I could go out to dinner with friends and not appear to be dieting, eating bacon and eggs for breakfast to steak and wine for dinner. I could even have an occasional dish of ice cream, or some peanuts or popcorn — things I love and could never have on a diet plan before.

I lost 85 pounds in 90 days and my blood pressure went from being dangerously high to normal.

Best of all, I can hardly believe all of the opportunities in my acting career that have opened up for me since my weight loss.

Luke Allary

SWORN STATEMENT:

I certify that the dramatic improvement in Luke Allary's acting career began with the amazing weight loss he experienced using only the Robann Clinic's Formulas and Diet.

Paul Bedard, Theatrical Agent

The main active ingredient in the Robann Formula is generally recognized as "safe and effective" for weight control by an advisory panel for The Food and Drug Administration. (Federal Register — Vol. 47 No. 39)

Consult your physician before starting any diet. If you are losing weight too rapidly (over 6 pounds a week) reduce intake from 3 wafers a day to two wafers. Luke is one of the most successful people to realize the incredible weight loss possible with the ROBANN CLINIC PROGRAM and he would love to hear from you regarding your weight loss progress.

If your weight loss goal is 20 pounds or less we suggest you use only Formula 30. DO NOT use all three formulas UNLESS your weight loss goal is over 50 pounds.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO WAIT WEEKS FOR YOUR ORDER. ALL ORDERS ARE "SAME-DAY SHIPPED" VIA UPS, SPECIAL DELIVERY OR FIRST CLASS MAIL AND YOU CAN EXPECT DELIVERY IN THE CONTINENTAL U.S. WITHIN 2 TO 6 WORKING DAYS.

AS YOU START TO LOSE WEIGHT (on any program) your body metabolism begins to resist any further weight loss. This is the primary reason, generally after about 30 days, that so many advertised plans become ineffective. To overcome this DEAD END PLATEAU syndrome, we have gathered together eminent professionals in their field — Medical and Dietary. The ROBANN PROGRAM they have created is designed to not only reach your weight loss goal but to help you maintain it.

THIS ADVANCED TECHNIQUE uses three different formulas. Each has it's own 30 day supply. THESE FORMULA changes are scientifically planned to overcome any resistance your body builds against further weight loss.

Reduction of body fat and weight depends on reduced caloric intake which can be accomplished by reducing carbohydrate intake. Naturally the amazing benefits described above require that you follow the complete ROBANN CLINIC PROGRAM, including the formulas and our special copyrighted diet.

1. NO PILLS TO SWALLOW.

2. ALL THREE FORMULAS CONTAIN NEITHER CAFFEINE NOR DRUGS THAT ARE HARMFUL TO PEOPLE WITH HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE.

3. YOU CAN LOOK FORWARD TO A NEW ADVENTURE IN WEIGHT LOSS BECAUSE YOU WILL NEVER BE HUNGRY OR BORED, AS WE DO NOT TRY TO RE-EDUCATE YOUR STOMACH OR YOUR TASTE BUDS.

4. INCLUDED FREE WITH YOUR ORDER IS A SUPPLY OF OUR MULTI-VITAMINS AND MINERALS TO KEEP YOUR ENERGY LEVEL UP WHILE YOUR WEIGHT GOES DOWN.

MEDICAL STATEMENT:

"The ROBANN CLINIC PROGRAM with the formulas, multi-vitamins and minerals along with its diet is THE MOST EFFECTIVE WEIGHT REDUCTION METHOD FOR WOMEN I'VE SEEN IN MY 22 YEARS OF MEDICAL PRACTICE."

Dr. James S. Ray, MD., OB-GYN., Long Beach, CA.

OUR GUARANTEE . . . If you are dissatisfied for any reason with your weight loss return the unused portion within 30 days and keep the vitamins.

INN-SIDE WEEKEND VACATIONS

By Janice Meehan

It may be only a brief escape, but a weekend away at an old inn or small resort can be just as relaxing as a vacation.

I'm a die-hard devotee of the weekend getaway and have found that one well-planned and executed jaunt can last — in spirit at least — until, well, the following Friday. It comes down to five basic rules.

Rule 1: Make reservations. Gone are the days when you could simply show up at the door of some charming inn and get a room for the night. It's not impossible, but why take the chance of being disappointed? A spokesman for the New England Vacation Center suggests that a good rule of thumb is to book at least a week or two in advance. It only takes a phone call and usually a deposit to insure that you'll get the weekend retreat you want.

And bring the confirmation slip with you. If you haven't heard back from the hotel after sending the deposit, call before you leave home to make sure you are expected.

If you are lucky enough to get a reservation on short notice, get the name of whomever you speak with on the phone. "Well, she sounded young and had a very nice voice" probably won't get you very far at 11 P.M. when the inn is full. As a final courtesy to the innkeeper, and for your own peace of mind, let him know about what time you plan to arrive. "If you're stuck somewhere at 10 P.M., give him a ring to hold your room and maybe a small supper," suggests Jim McGovern, owner of Hermitage, an inn in Wilmington, Vt.

Rule 2: Do some research. Surprises can be nice, but not if they involve your pocketbook. Find out if the establishment takes credit cards. Very small places and, shockingly, some quite expensive ones do not. Ask what meals are included in the room price. Generally, but not always, breakfast is; dinner may be part of the package, which is fine if you want to stay put. However, if you want to dine elsewhere, make sure you are not paying for two dinners in one evening. Do a little reading before you go in order to learn what's in the neighborhood. Perhaps there's a county fair or a museum with an interesting exhibit.

Rule 3: Know where you are going. Sounds funny, huh? Well it's no joke driving back roads at 4 A.M. looking for "that quiet little lane that veers off near the big tree." Get explicit directions: Exactly how many miles after the fourth stoplight?

Rule 4: Pack a snack. Inns and most resorts have set — and usually early — dining hours. If you're leaving on a Friday after 5 P.M., chances are you won't get to your destination until after the kitchen closes. Unless you plan to last until morning on nuts and a beer from the local pub, bring along something to eat.

Rule 5: Most important of all: Be realistic. If you have been working all week, a seven-hour drive to get somewhere to relax is anything but relaxing. It might be easier to take a train or to price a spot closer to home.

Be certain, too, that your expectations make sense. Brochures can spin some remarkable fairy tales, like the charming Colonial that is actually frosted with aluminum siding, or the cozy inn that turns out to have 187 rooms. If you find yourself in this sorry situation, use the disappointment as a reason to investigate nearby places that may prove more hospitable the next time.

Also remember that it takes some time to wind down after a week of deadlines and meetings, so don't make a fuss if the relish tray isn't delivered to your table five minutes after you're seated. Relax and have an olive.

Finally, leave your weekday pace at home: You don't have to see everything in one weekend. If you like where you are staying, that's a perfect reason to return. Let yourself settle in, enjoy the pampering and the quiet. You worked hard for this getaway, and if you've planned it well, you won't have to work hard to enjoy it. FW

RAG TIME

SCRAP DOLLS THAT ANY CHILD COULD FANCY

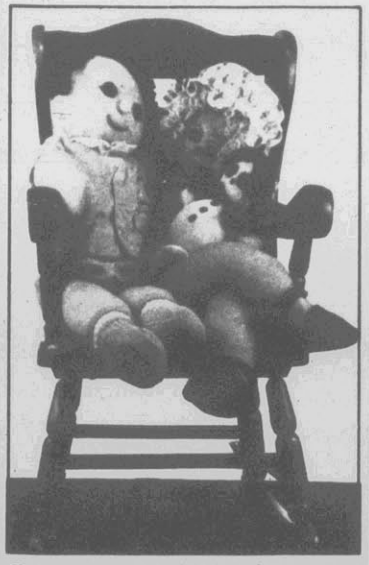

All dolled up with many places to go.

Torn T-shirts, old pantyhose and worn sheets. They may sound like prime candidates for the rag pile, but with some imagination and a bit of stitching, they can be turned into cuddly, lovable dolls.

One pair of pantyhose and several knee-highs can become a three-foot missy when you stuff them with polyester filling. Dress her in a children's size 1 hand-me-down and use black felt for her shoes. Her brother is made with cast-aside T-shirts. Like sis', his curly hair is four-ply yarn and his eyes are held in place by stitches.

A smaller doll — 10-inch, pigtailed Peggy — is cut from an old sheet. Her arms, legs and body are all one piece.

Our tiniest playmates use one basic pattern. These 3-inch pals snuggle in a child's pocket or rest in their own traveling pouch. The hair and features can be embroidered or simply drawn in with colored pens. Wear them on a lapel, tie them on a package or sit them on a shelf.

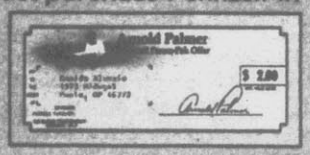

From rags to rich delights, this remnant family is fun to cuddle.

Detailed instructions and illustrations are available in our booklet "Create and Make Your Own Dolls" (#373). To order, send $2 plus 50 cents for postage and handling to:

WHIZ QUIZ

WILL HARD WORK CAUSE HARD FEELINGS?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. If your boss takes his anger out on you, there isn't much you can do about it without risking your job security.
2. Your attitude toward work can affect your health.
3. Making a great deal of money is the sole motivation for people to start their own businesses.
4. Your chance of success in starting a new business is better if you do it alone — without a partner.
5. The arrangement of furniture in an office can affect a visitor's impression of the occupant.
6. Your success on the job may provoke colleagues to feel jealous toward you and thus not give you full credit for your achievements.

ANSWERS

1. False. According to investigators at the University of Michigan, there are three possible responses to the situation: (1) Seethe inwardly at your employer's unfair attack, but say nothing; (2) yell back at him for having blown up without getting your side of the story; (3) wait until the boss has cooled down and can discuss the matter rationally. The researchers point out that the last response is the most effective because it restores your sense of control over the situation; problems are more likely to be resolved in a calm atmosphere. They note that, although you can't avoid conflict entirely, you can take a reflective approach rather than suppressing anger or blowing your stack.

2. True. Institute for Social Research studies showed that when the resources and demands of the work environment do not adequately meet the needs and abilities of the worker, the employee is likely to develop symptoms of strain, which can lead to illness. The investigators found that the individual who finds his job tedious and boring is more likely to have health problems than someone who is challenged by his work.

3. False. According to research at Purdue University, people who start their own businesses fall into three categories. The first, the craftspeople, utilize a particular personal skill, like plumbing or hairstyling, and view having their own business as a vehicle for doing what they like to do.

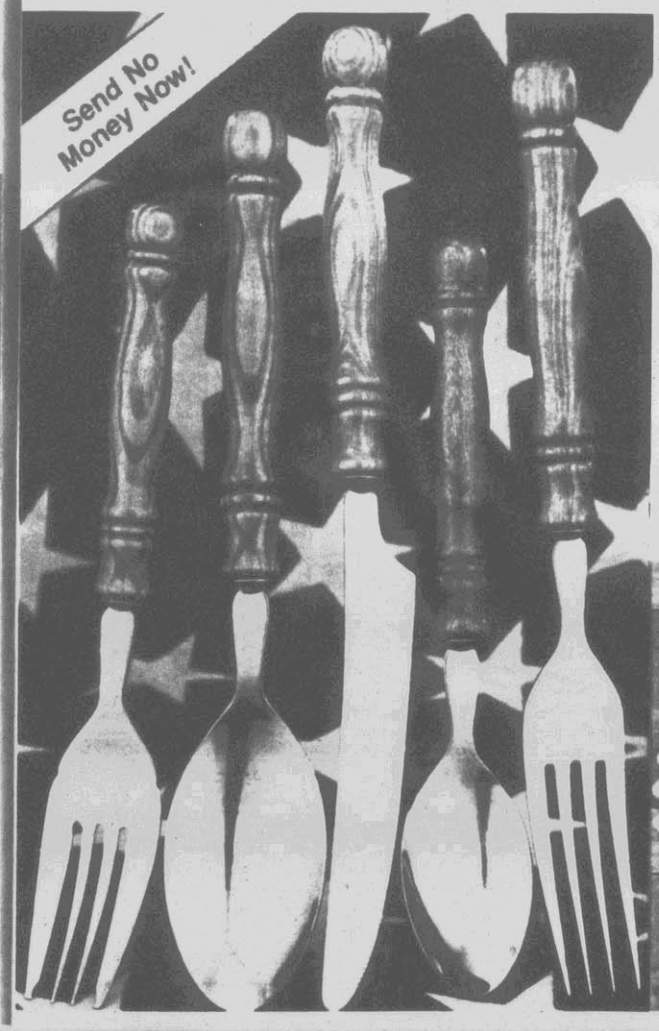

The second group consists of growth-oriented types, individuals who usually have had previous managerial experience and are seeking to capitalize on their know-how and start a business in order to achieve specific financial goals. The third group, entrepreneurs, are strongly motivated to start their own companies as a way of avoiding working for others.

Business success may often result from the support and balance of a partnership.

4. False. Nearly one-third of those who start their own companies have full-time partners; those establishments, on the average, tend to fare better financially than those firms founded by one person. Researchers say this success may result from the psychological support and the balance of skills found in a partnership.

5. True. The relationship between the way an executive is perceived by visitors and the arrangement of the office furniture was studied by a team of behavioral scientists at the Iowa State University's School of Business Administration. Employees who work in an office with an open desk arrangement (desk against the wall, with the visitor's chair pulled forward so the desk is not a barrier) are perceived by outsiders to be friendlier and more extroverted than workers operating in a closed desk arrangement (where the desk is situated as a barrier). In addition, more favorable impressions are elicited about persons whose work places are somewhat messy, rather than excessively clean or excessively sloppy.

6. True. Studies conducted by psychologists at the University of Toronto showed that if a person is successful at work, his detractors will outnumber those who will give him the credit he deserves. In most cases, someone else's success is perceived by others as largely a matter of luck or of knowing the right people. Colleagues consider financial failure, on the other hand, to be the result of the entrepreneur's own inability, laziness, mistakes in judgment and stupidity. PW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

BY MARION LONG

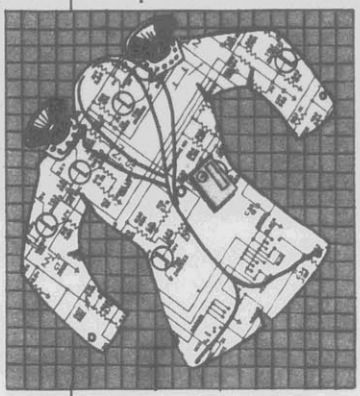

Bob Camp

GOOD OLE BOYS?

Members of the Old Boy Network — businessmen who grew up or went to school together — have long been thought to have an advantage over those in business without such contacts.

But Prof. Stuart L. Meyer of the Kellogg Graduate School of Management at Northwestern University says that collaborating with old pals is fraught with peril: Friends often fail to demand the same standards from one another that they do of strangers. They can be reluctant to criticize their buddies and sometimes expect special concessions. And most dangerous, Meyer adds, is that "friends usually figure a handshake seals their deal."

Vincent Waller

How to avoid such pitfalls and put your contacts to work? Get everything on paper, for one thing. And if you know your "buddy" has a short temper or is unreliable, reconsider the deal.

CATCHY CLOTHES

The fashion world has tried to cope with the Walkman and its many clones by designing jackets with special pockets for the stereos. But now, for those of us who like the idea of portable music but whose sartorial sensibility is offended by foam-rubber earpieces, there's the Music Vest, clothing with an FM radio and speakers built right in.

Michael J. Waldron, creator of the vest, contends that his design is a public service as well as a fashion statement. Headphones — lack of aesthetic value aside — can be a safety hazard, blocking out the sound of, say, an oncoming car. His invention solves that problem by placing the speakers squarely on the shoulders of the music lover.

The vest may soon be available nationally, along with Waldron's other tuneful togs, the Music Jacket and the Music Jogger (a jogging suit).

HUNDRED-TO-ONE SHOTS

"When I was 17," crooned Frank Sinatra, "it was a very good year." According to the song, Sinatra had a couple of other notable years. But how many banner years can the rest of us expect? According to Desmond Morris, author of the Book of Ages, any age can be exceptional.

Morris points out that great achievements have been made at all different points in people's lives. The compound microscope was invented by Zacharias Janssen in 1590, at age 10. Brigham Young fathered his 56th child at 69. And pianist Artur Rubinstein filled recital halls through his 95th year.

Nor does Morris neglect the middle years. Charles Goodyear came up with a new rubber process, Rudolf Diesel invented an engine, Edwin Land designed a revolutionary new camera, and Charles Townes brought the laser to light — all at age 38.

"The lesson these people teach us," says Morris, "is to never think it is too late."

THE TASTE OF SUCCESS

America's lean economic years may be over for a while. One indicator: In 1983, 1,803 new food products were introduced — more than any year in the last two decades. According to New Product News, unveilings of new edibles were up a fat 20 percent over 1982.

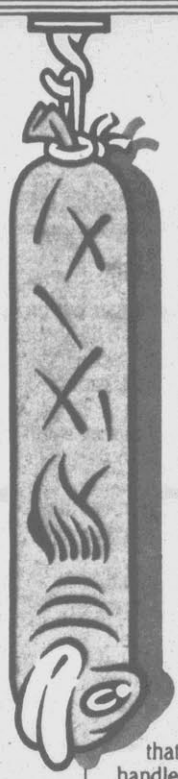

The debut of a veritable cornucopia of foods suggests that the industry expects a robust economy in 1984. And it is tempting America's taste buds with offerings like curry-flavored ketchup, salami made from fish (Sea-lami) and ketchup-flavored potato chips (Ketchips).

The largest helping of the new foods was baked goods, and close on the heels of breads came an assortment of low-calorie and low-sodium goodies. But the item that has America chomping at the bit is Guacamole Bubble Gum.

A MINOR INJUSTICE

It looks like Justice's blindfold may have slipped a bit, at least when it comes to crimes committed by female juveniles. Research by a Toronto lawyer shows that punishments meted out to girls are stiffer than those handed down to boys for similar offenses. Girls are also more likely to end up in court, and once there, are more often sent to reform schools.

Lawyer Sherrie Barnhorst contends that police and judges apply one set of standards to boys, another to girls.

Steven Mellor

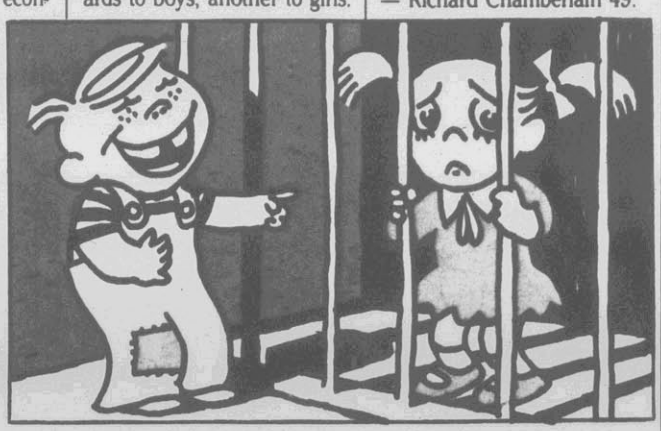

For example, curfew violations are tolerated in young males as a sign of burgeoning independence, but are punished in females as self-destructive behavior. Further, the sexual indiscretions of young men are far more likely to be overlooked than are those of young women.

This discrimination may well be unconscious. But to eliminate it, Barnhorst suggests that training sessions be started for both police and judges and that misdemeanors be handled out of court, reserving the courtroom for more serious crimes.

What a deal! The RCA MUSIC SERVICE gives you 4 TAPES or RECORDS FOR THE PRICE OF ONE!

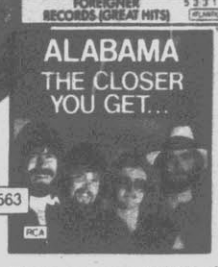

YEAH, but then you have to buy a whole lot more, RIGHT?

WRONG! You actually get 4 for the price of one! ...WITH NOTHING MORE TO BUY EVER!

Start with 3 tapes or records for only 1¢ plus postage and handling with Club membership

Buy just 1 smash hit in one year's time.

Enjoy 4 tapes or records for the price of one.

Nothing more to buy...EVER!

START SAVING NOW!

Start Now with 3 Hit Albums for 1¢! Yes, pick any 3 records, cassettes, or 8-track tapes for just 1¢. Then agree to buy only 1 more hit at regular Club prices (usually $8.98 to $9.98)...and take up to one full year to do it...with nothing more to buy ever! That's 4 smash hits for the price of one!

No Further Obligation Whatsoever! It's all up to you! You buy what you want...when you want to. This is one record and tape offer that really is different. And you pocket the savings!

Exciting "Members-Only" Benefits. Once you enroll, you'll receive your subscription to our exclusive music magazine MEDLEY. Each issue is crammed with hundreds of hit tapes and records—many as low as $2.98 to $3.98—plus your featured "Selection of the Month" in your favorite category. In all, you'll have 19 convenient, shop-at-home opportunities a year.

Superstars! Super hits! Look at the stacks and stacks of exciting selections here. Feast your eyes on the variety of hits. By fantastic artists like Kenny Rogers, Hall & Oates, Alabama, Foreigner, Barry Manilow, Lionel Richie, Van Halen, Pat Benatar and more. On famous labels, in your favorite music category, too.

It's Easy to Get Your Favorite Hits! If you want the "Selection of the Month," do nothing. It will be sent to you automatically. If you want other selections, or none, just indicate your preference on the card always provided...and mail it back to us by the date specified. You'll always have at least 10 days to decide. But if you don't, you may return your "Selection of the Month" at our expense for full credit. As a member in good standing, send no money when you order, we'll bill you later. A postage and handling charge is added to each shipment.

Free Albums! Yes! The sooner you purchase your 1 hit at regular Club price the sooner you'll enjoy our Bonus Plan: it guarantees you 1 FREE ALBUM for every 2 regular purchases you make, or, if you prefer, you may cancel your membership.

FREE 10-Day No-Risk Offer! Listen to your 3 big hits for a full 10 days. If not satisfied, return them for a prompt refund. You risk nothing! So don't delay. Pick your hits, write the code numbers in the boxes at left and mail today!

AH, SPRING PUZZLER!

If you can name the right spring flower, you will solve this riddle-enigma:

My first letter is in duck, but not in drake.
My second's in bread, but not in cake.
My third's in oak, but not in tree.
My fourth's in trice, but not in three.
My fifth's in lute, but not in fife.
My sixth's in spoon, but not in knife.
What flower am I? Clue: I am known often to poke my head through snow.

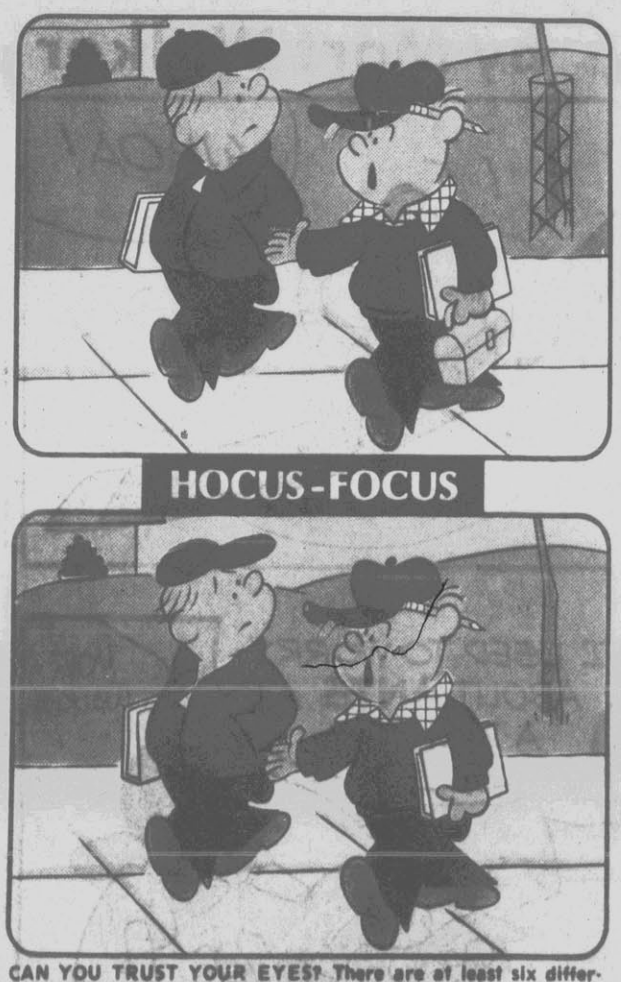

I am a crocus.
