'Security Vacuum' Concerning Beirut

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese leaders conferred today over how to fill the security vacuum which will be left when French peacekeeping troops complete their withdrawal from the capital.

In west Beirut, Druse fighters agreed to give up positions they captured last week from a Libyan-backed Moslem group, the Mourabitoun.

However, Moslem and Christian militiamen clashed overnight in Beirut's center, killing two people and injuring 14 before the fighting tapered off after daybreak, police said.

A four-party security committee representing the Lebanese army and Christian, Druse and Shiite Moslem militias met today to discuss arrangements for dealing with the French withdrawal. Radio reports said the meeting took place at the French headquarters.

French troops guard the museum crossing, the only open gateway between Christian east Beirut and the mostly Moslem west, as well as other positions on the "green line" which separates the two sections.

A scramble for territory by either Christian or Moslem militiamen after the French withdrawal is completed Saturday could touch off a new round of civil war.

Local radio stations and newspapers said the committee was considering forming a police force buttressed by reservists to guard the museum crossing and patrol the green line. The committee was established by rival Lebanese leaders who met earlier this month in Switzerland.

The French contingent, the last of the four-nation multinational force, began its pullout Sunday, loading between 250 and 500 of the remaining 1,300 troops aboard a ferry boat for the trip home via Cyprus. The force, which lost 86 men in terrorist attacks and crossfires during its stay, continued its evacuation today by loading equipment onto landing ships at Beirut's port.

The United States, Italy and Britain already have pulled out their multinational force contingents. The force was deployed in Beirut in September 1982 after the Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

Meanwhile, Walid Jumblatt's Druse fighters agreed to give back the Mourabitoun headquarters and radio station to the Sunni Moslem group today and to withdraw from the streets of west Beirut, turning over their security duties to the national police.

The accord was announced after a lengthy meeting between representatives of Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party and Grand Mufti Hassan Khaled, spiritual head of Lebanon's Sunni community.

Jumblatt's fighters dislodged Mourabitoun militiamen from their west Beirut strongholds in street fighting last week that left 28 people dead and more than 100 wounded.

Meanwhile, Syrian President Hafez Assad was quoted as saying in an interview in the April 2 issue of Time magazine that Syria would withdraw its troops from Lebanon if a unified government was formed and made that request.

"We will never accept any linkage between Syrian and Israeli withdrawal," Assad was quoted as saying. "But when a government of national unity is formed as a result of the desire of the Lebanese government, we will meet its request to withdraw unreluctantly, and this could be within a month or within days or months."

Cox Will Seek Ninth District Senate Seat

Percy R. Cox, former mayor of Greenville, announced today that he will file as a Democratic candidate for North Carolina's 9th Senatorial District, which includes precincts in Pitt, Beaufort and Martin counties.

A Pitt County native, Cox is a Greenville businessman who established Cox Armature Works Inc. 38 years ago.

Cox has been involved in local government here for the past 17 years, serving six tenures as a city councilman and three terms as mayor. Cox said in this role he has "been involved with many activities and projects leading to growth and improvement for this entire region, including such fields as education, medical care, transportation, agriculture and industrial growth."

At a press conference this morning, Cox said he is "vitaly concerned for the continued economic growth of eastern North Carolina, particularly the 9th District counties of Beaufort, Martin and Pitt, which represent the center of growth for the eastern region of our state. He said, "Jobs are essential to a strong economic base."

Cox pledged that he would "work diligently to help focus and coordinate efforts to promote proper and orderly growth for all communities in the 9th District." He said, "There are many resources which are available and should attract steady growth."

PERCY R. COX

The former mayor said progress "doesn't happen without the force of the people. The citizens of this region have determination and vision." Cox suggested that his experience in government and business will enable him to "provide leadership in the North Carolina General Assembly" for 9th District residents.

As an example of determination by the people, Cox said "transportation has improved and continues to improve for eastern North Carolina." He said over the past 20 years he has "worked closely with many communities within the 9th District to improve highways such

Vote Count Stopped In Salvador Foulup

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Vote counting in El Salvador's presidential election — already beset by bureaucratic foulups and guerrilla harassment that prevented thousands from voting — came to a standstill today after allegations of dishonesty in the tabulations.

Leftist rebels, who called the election a farce and refused to take part, kept up their attacks early today.

The vote tabulation was suspended Sunday night after Morgan Bojorques, the chief technician at the national election computer center, was accused of favoring right-wing candidate Roberto d'Aubuisson and ordered off the job. Other technicians walked out in protest.

The accusation was made by Roberto Meza Delgado, the Christian Democratic Party representative on the Central Election Council, which is made up of one representative of each of the eight competing parties.

D'Aubuisson of the far right Republican Nationalist Alliance and Jose Napoleon Duarte, a moderate Christian Democrat, were the two top contenders among the eight candidates in the country's first presidential elections since 1977.

Unofficial results compiled by the Christian Democrats showed Duarte, with 355,655, or 47.3 percent of the total today.

The Republican Nationalist Alliance was second with 316,132 votes, or 28.7 percent, and the conservative National Conciliation Party third with 130,694, or 17.4 percent, the Christian Democrat figures said.

Christian Democrat tabulators said the figures are based on results from 3,327 of the country's 6,598 precincts. Other parties are not giving out tabulations.

The U.S. observer team here gave similar percentages they said were based on unofficial information from the Central Elections Council.

The observers said the vote total would be about 1.3 million, or a 70 percent turnout. However, the Central Elections Council had said earlier there were 2.5 million eligible voters, which would make the turnout just over 50 percent. The reason for the discrepancy was not clear.

Thomas Pickering, U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, said today that early, unofficial vote tallies from poll watchers indicated "something above 40 percent" of the vote went to Duarte while "30, 30-plus percent" went to d'Aubuisson.

Hart, Mondale Vie For Jewish Vote

NEW YORK (AP) — Gary Hart and Walter F. Mondale are going still another round in the sparring over who is the best friend of Israel and focusing on Connecticut on the eve of its Democratic presidential primary, while Hart enjoys his first victory in 10 days of campaigning.

Mondale is hurrying back to Connecticut today for last-minute campaigning before Tuesday's Democratic primary, but he continues to put most of his time and effort into New York, which holds its primary next week.

Hart is hoping that Sunday brought a portent of things to come — he defeated Mondale handily in the Montana caucuses.

The Colorado senator won 49 percent of the vote and 11 national convention delegates there. Mondale took 35 percent in Montana, good for eight delegates, while the Rev. Jesse Jackson had 5 percent, and 9 backed uncommitted slates.

But Mondale was the victor Saturday in Kansas caucuses, winning 372, or 48.9 percent, of local delegates to 317, or 41.7 percent, for Hart, 25, or 3.3 percent, for Jackson and 47, or 6.1 percent, unpledged, party officials said.

Hart planned to spend all day in Connecticut, where he is well ahead of Mondale and Jackson in the polls in advance of the voting. Hart wants to complete his shut-out of Mondale in the New England primaries by taking a majority of the 52 pledged delegates at stake on Tuesday.

Mondale was to spend most of the day in New York — where a new poll puts him in the lead — before a two-hour trip to Connecticut in the early evening.

Jackson, who spent Sunday night with a poor Puerto Rican family in New Haven, was to campaign for most of the day in Connecticut before heading for Buffalo, N.Y.

Mondale is looking for a victory and a boost for future contests in the wrap-up tonight of the remaining caucuses in Virginia, where he held a slim lead in the preliminary caucuses over Jackson on Saturday. Hart trailed in fourth place behind uncommitted voters.

Mondale and Hart spent Sunday in New York, searching for votes amid the various ethnic groups important to the Democratic vote here and keeping up the heated exchanges over who has stood up for Israel's interests most consistently.

Both men talked to the National Council of Young Israel — Mondale at a pre-dinner reception and Hart at a post-dinner speech. Both men have been making repeated appeals to Jewish voters, who are often more than a third of Democratic primary voters.

'Very Optimistic' On Accreditation Survey

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

An East Carolina University official said today that he is "very optimistic" over a report by a site visitation team from the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education which visited the campus last week.

Dr. Angelo Volpe, vice-chancellor for academic affairs said the NCATE team was on campus three days and "we're very optimistic with the positive report they gave us."

However, Volpe said "we're not at the point where we can put anything out ... they've got to go through their process now, with the council giving the final decision."

A final decision is expected sometime in June, Volpe said.

The NCATE withdrew accreditation for the school's teacher education programs effective September 1, 1983, based on problems they perceived with organization and administration, Volpe said.

"The quality of the programs was never in question but ... administration and supervision of the teacher education programs was different from the standards which they promulgate and which they are accustomed to," the vice chancellor said.

Since last March, when the NCATE notified ECU that accreditation would be dropped in September, university officials have created the position of coordinator of teacher education in the office of the vice chancellor for academic affairs, with authority over all teacher education programs, and made other changes in teacher education programs to meet NCATE requirements.

UNIVERSAL NUMBER? 7

Does Hotline know who to contact and how citizens can effectively petition to get a universal disaster phone number (911, isn't it?) in the Greenville area? This system, being adopted widely, makes it a lot easier to contact police, fire, ambulance, or other emergency services without trying to look up a phone number and dial it in a stressful situation. K.T.

The Pitt County Commissioners have asked County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner to conduct a survey on the need and desire for a 911 system in this county and what would be involved in instituting it. He said he has met with all the police chiefs in the county and is in the process of meeting with each mayor of each municipality now. He then will go to the phone company, he said, and find out exactly how much the project will cost. A petition for 911 was started during the recent Fire Prevention Week display project at Carolina East Mall. The Winterville Fire Department promoted the 911 concept and provided a form for citizens who favor the system to sign. Several hundred did. These names are on file in the fire marshal's office and any other petitions or letters for or against the idea will also be kept there and presented to the county commissioners at the appropriate time, Joyner said. His office address is 1717 W. Fifth Street, Greenville.

Views On Dental Health
Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A.

HOW OFTEN SHOULD YOU SEE A DENTIST?
If you are married to a dentist, you will probably see him every day. For patients it used to be every six months. Today, most dentists believe it should be "as often as necessary".
I know there are more pleasurable things to do than making a dental office visit when there's "nothing wrong", but at the very least, no one can clean his own teeth perfectly and it allows the dentist to keep track of developing problems.
Even if you are certain you have no decay or gum condition, the dentist will probe the gums to make certain that periodontal disease, which can affect everyone, is not quietly developing. And he will minutely check your teeth with an explorer, or perhaps take X-rays to find and treat any hidden cavities. He may find that the potential for trouble is there and want to see you in three months - or he may feel that seeing you once a year is sufficient.

Billions of dollars are spent each year on dental restoration rather than prevention. Regular visits to your dentist are tiny investments in comparison.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Once in a while an inventive cook concocts something different and asks me to sample it. That's what an acquaintance of mine, proud of her innovation, did when she brought me a tasting of her Strawberry Maple Butter.

The first lovely fresh strawberries are coming into the market now and she was spurred on to use the fruit—ad on English muffins, toast, or hot biscuits for brunch or snacktime. It's also good to serve on a Lazy Susan of condiments that may hold cottage cheese or a cheese spread, cucumber pickles, spiced beets and a conserve. Now the last-named can be this new Strawberry Maple Butter.

A hint about fresh strawberries. When you buy them, use them right away; if you plan to refrigerate them, dump them onto a platter or tray with a little room between each berry. Rinse the strawberries in cold water and then hull them just before using them.

Wedding Invitation

Mr. and Mrs. Seth T. Morgan request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Julie Ann, to Cecil Benjamin Adams Jr. on Sunday, April 1, at 3 p.m. in the Friendship Free Will Baptist Church in Farmville.

- 1 cup buttermilk
 - 1 large egg
 - 1/4 cup butter, melted
 - 1 cup pitted dates, slivered
- In the large bowl of an electric mixer stir together flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, cinnamon, nutmeg and sugar. Add buttermilk, egg and butter; beat at medium speed until batter is smooth; fold in dates. Turn into a greased and floured 9-inch-square cake pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean—40 to 45 minutes. Cut in squares and serve warm with lemon sauce and garnish of cream cheese whipped until fluffy.

STRAWBERRY MAPLE BUTTER

- 1 pint strawberries
 - 3 cups peeled, cored, sliced tart apples (such as Granny Smith)
 - 1/4 cup maple syrup
 - 1/2 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
 - 1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon, if desired
- Hull and slice strawberries. In a non-corrosive medium saucepan bring strawberries, apples and maple syrup to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer, stirring often, until very soft—about 15 minutes.
- In an electric blender whirl half the mixture at a time until pureed; return puree to saucepan. Stir in brown sugar and, if used, the cinnamon. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, stirring often until thickened—about 20 minutes. Immediately pour into hot 1/2-pint canning jars, leaving 1/4-inch head space. Seal according to jar manufacturer's directions. Place jars on a rack in a large saucepot of boiling water—water should cover jars by 1 or 2 inches. Cover saucepot; bring water to a boil; boil 10 minutes. Remove jars to a towel to cool. Store in a cool dry place.
- If you do not wish to process the jars, pour mixture into hot jars; cover and refrigerate up to 4 weeks. Makes two 1/2-pint jars.

Summer Jobs For Teens Are Found Through Persistence

DEAR READERS: If you aren't a teen-ager or if you have no teen-agers children, grandchildren or friends who want a summer job, skip this column.

Employers are looking for good kids to hire, just as good kids are looking for good jobs. It may take some time to make the proper connections, so it pays to start looking early.

Spring is the time to line up summer work, and fall is the time to nail down a Christmas job. Some tips:

Start looking early. Check with your school. Schools often have job listings available and can put you in touch with local community service organizations for jobs in your neighborhood.

Ask everybody. People will keep their ears open for jobs for you if you convince them you're ready, willing and able.

Go from store to store and speak to the manager. Don't telephone! You will have better luck if you present yourself in person.

Follow up. If they don't call you, call them. Be persistent, but don't make a pest of yourself.

Be realistic. Minimum wage for a not-so-hot job may be the best you can do this year, but think of the experience you can gain and how impressive that experience will look on your resume next year.

Check your newspapers under "Employment" or "Help Wanted"—especially on Sunday. Call early in the day; the jobs may be snapped up quickly.

When you're out for a stroll, keep your eyes open. Many establishments place "Help Wanted" signs in their windows.

Some places likely to like you: Baskin-Robbins, Kentucky Fried Chicken, Dairy Queen, McDonald's Wendy's Old-Fashioned Hamburgers, Burger King, Taco Bell, movie theater concession stands, adventure parks, pet stores, vets, hospitals, drugstores.

Some of these places have very strict rules concerning job applications because of the access to drugs. Expect a thorough check and don't bother applying if a personal check on your habits would turn up drug use.

Also check: summer camps, summer resorts, restaurants and coffee houses, stores, large and small.

The above is from a dandy little Ballantine paperback entitled "Jobs for Teen-Agers" by Ilene Jones.

It contains a wealth of information for teen-agers who really want to work. It's available at your local bookstore for $2.25. Or write to: Ballantine Books, Dep. TA, 201 E. 50th St., New York, N.Y. 10022. Add 50 cents for postage and handling for each copy ordered.

Get going and good luck. (Luck is preparation waiting for an opportunity.)

Corrective Action

The Greenville School Board's approval of a request to restore remediation programs for grades K-6 would correct an action of three years or so ago when those funds were withdrawn.

The cutback came at a time when the economy was slipping and indicators pointed to the recession to come that dealt harshly with the country at large.

The federal government fought back with budgetary slashes felt keenly in the field of education. Area schools (and youngsters of the K-6 level) were the immediate losers; and the resultant gap in remedial education conceivably will show its impact well into the future.

The city schools will be asking an additional $350,000 in their 1984-85 budget for remediation programs. That sum would provide additional teachers and aides for the student group commonly held to be in their most formative years.

It is hardly to be expected that kind of money will be forthcoming from Washington; and suggests the main recourse (as this page suggested in the past) will be state and local funding.

This we do not begrudge.

While it would be easier by far to simply file a request to Washington, the ultimate truth is that certain local responsibilities have been returned to local levels.

The remediation programs (in math and reading) are highly desirable and quite possibly essential if quality education continues to be the standard we want to prevail. It's well worth supporting.

Find The Subs

In a world armed to the teeth it is not surprising that a United States aircraft carrier overran a Soviet nuclear submarine last week.

The aircraft carrier overtook the Soviet vessel apparently as the submarine was surfacing. Neither vessel seemed to be seriously damaged but some experts say the difference of a few feet could have meant the sub's being cut in half.

It is clearly a dangerous situation, both from the standpoint of loss of human life and the creation of an international incident.

It is known that Soviet subs regularly shadow American naval vessels and obviously the subs cannot be blown out of the water in peacetime. It seems on America's part, however, that it would not be impossible to keep track of the subs and prevent such dangerous incidents from occurring. Certainly the Soviet subs should not be around our ships, but the U.S. has no control over that. The responsibility falls on the U.S. Navy to know where the Soviet subs are.

Debt Burden

NEW YORK (AP) — Households aren't yet stumbling under the weight of their debt burdens, but a slight shuffle is causing some concerned glances, and not just from the ever-vigilant Federal Reserve.

Consumers are carrying a heavy load these days. They went deep into debt for mortgage and car payments early in the recovery, and more recently they have been running up a lot of lesser, credit-card debts.

In fact, net installment debt — loans minus repayments — during the first year of the recovery increased faster than income, a rarity. Generally speaking, post-recession buyers watch their money more closely.

As Continental Illinois Bank puts it, "Consumers have displayed a stunning eagerness to take on debt in this recovery," an observation documented by a $125 billion net expansion of consumer debt last year.

The pace of household debt accumulation also rose as the year progressed. During the fourth quarter of the year it leaped by a 12.4 percent annual rate, the sharpest in more than four years.

In spite of this, the ratio of installment debt to personal income rose only moderately to 13.4 percent this January from 12.8 percent in November 1982. Rising incomes held it down. It remains below the 15 percent of 1979.

Those figures, however, might tell only part of the story.

Jack Lavery, chief economist at Merrill Lynch, notes that the value of household assets is slipping, even if incomes are rising. "A cautionary note would seem to be in order," he says.

A little background: Between mid-1982 and mid-1983 the stock market advance added $530 billion to the financial net worth of the household sector, quite likely giving a substantial boost to consumer confidence.

But the market no longer is booming. Household psychology no longer is buoyed by expanding financial asset values. Equity holdings in the last half of 1983 declined by $44.5 billion. And the decline continues this year.

At the same time there has been a disturbing note from the credit markets. The prime rate has risen one-half percentage point to 11.5 percent, and few people would be shocked to see another rise to 12 percent.

What happens beyond that point is just a guess, but experience shows that rates can continue to rise to shocking levels. There is no automatic cap on interest rates. Ask anyone who had a floating-rate loan in 1981.

What will the impact be when a family's adjustable rate home mortgage begins to rise? That's the question nobody can answer; never has the nation had to face that situation, simply because adjustable rate mortgages — ARMs — were rare before the 1980s.

RALEIGH — The Revenue Department wants to collect some overdue taxes owed by people outside North Carolina and it's asking the Legislature for some help with the crackdown.

Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch went before the Revenue Laws Study Committee recently to ask for a change in the state's privacy laws. He says that to best collect delinquent taxes from those outside the state, he must be able to provide collection agencies with information which the state cannot now release.

Under current law, the state pursues out of state delinquent

Going After The Taxes

taxpayers through the courts. The attorney general's office has several lawyers attached to the Revenue Department. They look for these people and when they find them, they go into court in the state in which they're now residing, and seek payment of the taxes owed North Carolina.

Lynch says he doesn't have any idea of how much money the state is owed by people now living outside North Carolina. And he says he hasn't tried to figure how much money the state can collect with the changes he's requesting. But he says the figure is probably "substantial."

Out-of-staters get on the delinquent tax roles in several ways, he said. Maybe they're former residents or businesses who left the state still owing income tax. A frequent example is that of a supplier who closes his operations in North Carolina still owing the state sales tax.

Lynch says that by using collection agencies the state should find more of these deadbeats and end up paying a smaller percentage of the overdue taxes for the collection.

"This is their business. They're equipped to find people. They can get to people more quickly and they can demand the money," Lynch said.

Under the current system, a private lawyer must be hired on contingency. If he wins the case and collects the overdue taxes, then the state must pay him one-third of that collected. With collection agencies, Lynch said, the commission is usually 15 or 20 percent.

The committee, after being assured that the law would not increase administrative costs, decided to recommend to the full assembly changes in the tax record privacy laws to allow information on out-of-state delinquent taxpayers to be released to collection agencies.

Don't you know that the voters, faced with presidential, statewide and local campaigns, can get a bit confused. One gubernatorial candidate tells of approaching two voters in Garner. He asked for their vote and asked if he had a chance of getting it.

No, both said, they'd already decided to vote for "that tall, dark-haired one." The candidate, who asked not to be named, couldn't figure out who they were talking about. Finally he asked, "do you mean Hart?"

Yes, they said, they were going to vote for Gary Hart for governor.

The Department of Public Instruction reports that parents aren't saving money when they have their children carry that bag of baloney sandwiches and corn chips to school for lunch.

According to a study done in the Chapel Hill-Carrboro city schools, bag lunches are 13 to 40 cents more expensive than those offered by the school cafeteria and they're less nutritious and varied.

more." "So you believe that Chernenko owes his victory to the KGB?"

"Dan, no Soviet leader has ever been elected without the support of the KGB."

"Thank you, Vladimir. Now let's go to an exit polling station and talk to Alexander Novisty who is standing by in Kiev with a voter who has just cast his ballot for Chernenko."

"Dan, I'm here with Comrade Mikail Dobrinsky, a steelworker from the Lenin Foundry. Comrade, what was it about Chernenko that made you decide to vote for him?"

"He's young, and he has new ideas. I was sick and tired of hearing the same promises from the same old Soviet politicians every election year. I decided to vote for someone who could get the country moving again."

"Thank you, Comrade. Dan, I will now talk to someone who didn't vote for Chernenko. He's in a police van over here and although our cameras can't see him, I'll put the microphone up to the grill. Comrade, can you tell us why you didn't vote for Chernenko?" "How did I know they were going to do exit polling?"

"If you didn't vote for Chernenko, who did you vote for?"

"I left my ballot blank. I put it in the box, stepped outside to light a cigarette and the next thing I knew I was inside the police van."

"How many people are in the van with you?"

"Three dissidents, four enemies of the state and two counterrevolutionaries who keep yelling, 'What's the beef?'"

"Alexander, this is Dan. I have to interrupt. We're going to switch live to Chernenko's headquarters in the ballroom of Hotel Moskva where Roger Muddnikov is standing by. Roger, there seems to be a lot of celebrating going on."

"It's a madhouse, Dan. The Chernenko supporters have been screaming and shouting ever since you declared their candidate a winner. I hope to speak to the new secretary of the party when he comes down, which should be any minute. He must be arriving now because the orchestra is playing the theme song from 'Rocky.' Here he is. Comrade Chernenko, would you say this was the biggest night of your life?"

"It's been a long hard battle from the first primaries in the cold steppes of Siberia in February to our squeak-through by the Caspian Sea in November. The turning point for me was the debates."

"We didn't see any debates."

"They all took place in the Kremlin, and you don't think we'd show them on television, do you?"

"Comrade Chernenko, forgive me for asking the tough questions, but that's the Soviet media's job. Why do the people believe so many Soviet politicians are phonies?"

"What is your name?" "All right, if you won't answer that one, how about doing your imitation of Yuri Andropov?"

"Comrades, this is Dan Ratevitch. Because of technical difficulties we seem to have lost Roger Muddnikov. We'll return to him as soon as possible — but then again, who knows?"

Counseling Is A Requirement

WASHINGTON — It's been said that Leap Year usually coincides with a new wave of marriages, and 1984 seems to be no exception. One of us, in fact, has become just another example of the quadrennial trend — but not without certain conditions, he's discovered.

His particular nuptial experience will take place in a Roman Catholic church this May. One of the church's stipulations is that spouses-to-be undergo a relatively new form of group marriage counseling called "Pre-Cana." The exercise is as much political as it is well-intentioned, but the experience can provide an unusual perspective on marriage in the 1980s.

Pre-Cana counseling constitutes the church's response to changing sexual mores, high divorce rates and family fragmentation during the last two decades. Pre-Cana is something akin to a pre-game chalk-talk. The point isn't that several hours of discussions between couples and religious types will guarantee lifelong marital bliss, but that the Church can at least know it tried to shape the outcome.

Partly underlying this mission is a notion that too many men and women have skipped into marriage with insufficient knowledge of the communication required for successful relationships. (Only Hollywood celebrities — we'll resist naming names — would argue with that premise.)

As one might suspect, there's another important factor at work: the church's obsession with sex. If nothing else, Pre-Cana is a recapture adult style) of Human Sexuality 101. To sit through a session on natural family planning is to witness the forces behind one of America's strongest political movements, and to wonder why any adult would have to pay $10 (aa we did) for the privilege.

Political interpretations probably didn't occur to most of the 30-odd couples who recently gathered in a Washington suburb for their Pre-Cana session. The packed house (it's Leap Year, remember) seemed to share a principle interest in putting this particular marriage requirement behind them in a single afternoon. They were only too glad to have avoided the six evening (or one whole weekend) sessions usually required.

But the median age of the participants could have been no less than 25; in about half the couples, one of the partners came from the outside the church. Many in the crowd had already held jobs for years. Must it be said that most of these adults probably didn't need a Roman-collared clergyman or afternoon seminar leader to tell them how to manage their sex lives?

Apparently aware of their audience, the priest and parish couple in charge kept the ordeal brief. The church made its own sales pitch ("we need you desperately") and stressed the day's principle then ("communication makes or breaks a marriage"). Everyone was free to go in three hours (the schedule had called for five).

But the Pre-Cana didn't conclude without revealing something deeper about the efforts of any institution, religious or otherwise, to influence the ever-changing society in which it functions.

Some institutions can anticipate or even precipitate change, as the scientific world has done in microbiology and personal computers. Other institutions, like the church, usually react. Pre-Cana is a reaction, and an out-dated one at that.

Ten to 15 years ago, with America caught in the throes of cultural (and partly political) revolution, the church was forced to deal with new forms of artificial contraception, recreational sex, and divorce as a national pastime.

In recent years, however, the media and statistics keepers have been saying that promiscuity is out, abstinence (or at least the inclination toward it) is in, and couples are marrying later.

Strength For Today

Sometimes we ask the question, "Why does God not bless me more?" Perhaps the answer is that God's blessing has often been extended, but we did not observe the heavenly messenger when he came because we were spiritually blind, or our attention was taken up with something else, or we were thinking about ourselves or were indulging in some sin. God's message often fails to reach our ears because they are so full of the clamor of the world. Frequently we miss the joys of the spirit because we are so fascinated by the pleasures of the world.

Some people never catch the point made continually by Biblical writers that the relationships God established between Himself and man in ancient times are still operative. The supernatural is just as real a factor in life today as it was in antiquity.

What was ever true in the life of the spirit is true today.

N.C. Expected Spend Record Sums On Roads

By The Associated Press
Flush with new federal government funds, North Carolina is expected to spend a record $363 million this year on highway and bridge construction and resurfacing contracts.

Highway Administrator Billy Rose said that will be the most ambitious highway program in the state's history. The previous record came in 1979, when the state awarded contracts valued at $285 million.

The expanded program is being fueled with $122 million in increased federal funds, which is North Carolina's share of the 5-cents-a-gallon gasoline tax imposed in April.

The expanded highway construction program not only will help refurbish worn-out roads and bridges, but is expected to add 4,402 jobs in the highway construction industry in fiscal 1983-84.

Highway revenues from the state motor fuels tax, motor vehicle fees, licenses and miscellaneous income peaked at $471 million in fiscal 1978-79, then began a decline to a low $435 million by 1981-82, according to the highway division.

By 1981, Rose said North Carolina was forced to make drastic cuts in its highway construction program.

But the new federal gasoline tax has changed the outlook.

"We've been able to add back a lot of those projects taken out in 1981, plus add projects," Rose said.

Rose said that in November, the transportation board added $765 million worth of highway projects, including some 500 bridge replacement jobs, to the state's Highway Improvement Program.

After a steady reduction in the work force, the Division of Highways is hiring again.

The division added 11,239 employees in July 1979. By July 1983, the number had been reduced to 9,615 because of layoffs within the department and a state government hiring freeze.

This month, the division began hiring 264 people to work in its highway design, traffic engineering and right of way branches.

After President Reagan signed the Surface Transportation Assistance Act in Jan. 1983, the Division of Highways dusted off construction plans that had been shelved for lack of money.

The state has been given no choice on how it must spend about 90 percent of the new federal tax revenues it has been allocated, according to William R. Roberson, Jr., state secretary of transportation.

The new federal program is aimed at completing construction of the national interstate system and the rehabilitation of the nation's highway, bridge and transit systems.

Other increases in the federal government's program for North Carolina roads include an increase in interstate highways from $17.5 million in 1981-82 to $53.9 million this fiscal year. Primary roads will get a gain of $9.4 million to $33.7 million, and secondary roads are up from $3.38 million to $10.6 million.

"That shows the (federal) emphasis has been shifted from new highways to improving existing highways," Rose said.

Rose said that outside of urban areas, the last major new North Carolina highway that will be built is Interstate 40 from Benson to Wilmington. A third of that 91-mile project is under construction.

as U.S. 264 and other improvements vital to our counties and cities." He stressed that "much more will be done to further meet transportation needs, including highways as well as rail and air service."

He added, "We have been successful on many fronts. We are recruiting good paying businesses and industries who care about our environment; the people pulled together and secured one of the nation's most modern medical schools; East Carolina University continues to grow and expand its services; we have three of the most outstanding community and technical colleges in our state; and, we are making progress in our battle to preserve our vital tobacco program and other agricultural interests within this region."

Cox told the gathering today that, "Our region and state cannot prosper without an excellent educational system." He said as a member of the General Assembly, the promotion of adequate funding for quality education would be a high priority. "Our people have voiced their strong support for this need."

He added, "In my many years of service in local government, I applied business principles to insure that the people were receiving the most in services for their tax dollars. This will be my philosophy in state government."

Cox has served on the boards of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and the Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival; the U.S. 264 Committee; the Mid-East Commission; as chairman of the board of advisors of the East Carolina University Center for Applied Technology; and the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority. He is a member of the ECU Sports Events task force; the advisory board and executive committee of the Salvation Army; and the board of directors of the Greenville Christian Coffee Hour.

Cox is a member of Unity Free Will Baptist Church and has been a lay speaker at various churches. He is a mason, a shriner and a Kiwanian.

The candidate is married to the former Janice Brown of New York City and they have five children.

Bomb Threats Investigated

Greenville police and Pitt County deputies were investigating separate bomb threats reported this morning at two area schools.

Police said students at E.B. Aycock Junior High School were evacuated for about 20 minutes while officers checked the building. The threat was reported around 9:45 a.m.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said deputies were investigating a similar incident at D.H. Conley High School. School officials, who reported the call at 9:50 a.m., told deputies that someone telephoned the main office at Conley and indicated a bomb had been placed in the school.

Authorities said nothing was found in their searches at the two facilities.

Seeking Input On Five-Year Plan

The Division of Parks and Recreation of the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development will hold a public meeting tonight to get public input for the division's five year plan.

Registration for the session at the Willis Building, at the intersection of First and Reade Streets, will begin at 7 p.m., with the meeting starting at 7:30 p.m.

Steve Moler, regional parks and recreation consultant, said issues that are important to the development of parks and recreation will be covered. He said a slide show relating to the nine issues to be addressed in the plan will be shown, then those participating will be divided into discussion groups, and come together later in the program with recommendations.

The Greenville session, Moler said, will "focus on facilities and activities most prominent in this region," but will include the basic issues: administration of resources, operations and personnel, land acquisition, capital improvements, the National Heritage Program, the Trails program, the Natural and Scenic Rivers Program, public access to local governments.

Armed Robbery Is Reported

WALSTONBURG — An armed robbery was reported at Dail's Quick Mart on Highway 264 one mile from here Friday about 4 p.m.

The clerk, who said he was alone in the store at the time, told Greene County Sheriff officers that one black man walked into the store and demanded to be given all the money, and that the clerk lie on the floor as the man was leaving.

The clerk said he raised up in time to see the man leave in a small white compact car, accompanied by another black man. The amount of money taken is not being disclosed, Greene County Sheriff Early Whaley said. He said investigation is continuing.

around 3 p.m., said chief of detectives Al Parnell. It will be sent to the state medical examiner's office in Chapel Hill for a autopsy and identification, said Parnell.

Suit Challenges UC's Farm Research Work

By DIANE CURTIS
Associated Press Writer
OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Ever since Eli Whitney's cotton gin helped turn the United States into the world's largest cotton producer, researchers have been seeking machines to help draw more food and fiber from the nation's farmland.

But a lawsuit filed by supporters of farm workers against the University of California challenges the idea of progress at any cost, especially the government's cost — and asks the university to consider the human effects of its technological feats.

The suit, now in its third week in an Alameda County courtroom, questions the role of government-financed schools in furthering mechanization of California's $15 billion agriculture industry, largest in the nation. The plaintiffs charge it benefits a few big corporations at the expense of farm jobs and a dwindling number of small "family" farms.

"We're not asking for research to be halted," says Don Villarejo, spokesman for one plaintiff, the California Agrarian Action Project. "Let the research that has real social merit continue. But a very precious resource is being captured by private industry. If the research is so important to them, why not put up their own money instead of letting the public do it for them?"

"We have a university that's one of the greatest research universities in the world," said Gary Morrison, a university lawyer. "If we told researchers what to do, we'd be second-rate."

California agriculture "has been a tremendous success in terms of productivity, and in large part that is due to the work of the university," agreed Donald Reidhaar, UC's general counsel.

The suit originated after the agrarian action project, a Davis, Calif., grass-roots organization whose 500 members include small farmers, farmworkers and rural residents, found that giant mechanical tomato harvesters were creating "widespread displacement" of farm laborers.

In 1979, California Rural Legal Assistance, a federally financed legal rights group, filed suit on behalf of the agrarian association, which is an outgrowth of Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers union, and 17 farm laborers.

The suit does not ask for damages. What it wants is a court order directing the university to assess the social consequences of mechanization studies before they begin, to eliminate "private industry influence" on university research, and to create a fund supporting studies beneficial to small farmers, farm workers and consumers.

The suit alleges that federal Hatch Act funds intended for use by land grant colleges to benefit small farmers are being used by researchers to benefit large corporate farms which dictate what research should be done and which sometimes receive confidential reports on research.

The University of California's College of Agriculture and Environmental Sciences has an annual research budget of about $60 million, about 15 percent contributed by private firms and commodity groups. This year the university received $4.27 million in federal funds.

The university, joined by the 45,000-member California State Grange as a defendant in the suit, does not deny big agriculture influences what research is undertaken.

But the plaintiffs' lawyer, William Hoerger, says industry's needs are not necessarily those of other Californians. "There is no real consideration for the needs of groups who can't supply the money," he said.

Because of the instability of the farm labor force, state officials say figures show both an increase and a decline in farmworkers from the 1960s, when most mechanization occurred.

"Machines do replace people," says Jerry Siebert, director of UC's Cooperative Extension, one of the agricultural research arms of the university. But he said that a "significant shift from field and row crops to tree and vine crops" has allowed much of the workforce to find other farm jobs.

Siebert also denied the research has helped only a few big farmers. As an example, he cited his brother, a Madera County grape farmer with 70 acres who grosses less than $40,000 per year.

"He and three of his neighbors purchased a mechanical grape harvester and spread the cost around," Siebert said. "If he hadn't had this harvester four or five years ago during the drought, he would have lost his crop completely."

The university denies it has misused Hatch Act money. And it argues that mechanization represents a very small portion of its research budget, and the university has in place a program of job training for displaced farm workers, one of the requests of the suit.

The judge hearing the case, Spurgeon Avakian, said the issue is not "whether agricultural machinery may not be used."

"If the plaintiffs get all they seek, 'it sets a dangerous precedent in terms of academic inquiry,'" Siebert said.

"Probably one of the biggest (labor) displacements is caused by computers."

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES
County Extension Chairman

Soybean growers in the Carolinas will be planting pretty much the same varieties they have in the past, with only a few exceptions.

Crop specialists in both states say no new soybean types are expected to take the region by storm in 1984.

E.J. Dunphy, North Carolina State soybean specialist, said several producers near the South Carolina border are looking at four new group eight varieties — Coker 368, Foster, Kirby and Johnson, all which have been impressive in recent yield tests conducted by N.C. State.

Although those tests were limited, all four have consistently out-yielded Hutton. The rest will be pretty much the same.

Unlike some of the other southeastern states which have experienced costly levels of stem canker infection, North Carolina has been virtually free of the disease. Because of this, variety selection has not been affected.

Nematode build-ups in the coastal plains are forcing some producers to change soybean types in favor of most resistant ones. Dunphy said the move is probably wise considering the fact that many growers have seen their yields reduced tremendously by nematodes.

For the short run, these varieties are the most economical tools available to deal with nematodes. Resistant varieties aren't much more expensive than other varieties and are very effective.

Long-term use of resistant varieties may lead to the development of other races of nematodes which could pose even greater threats to yields. However, another variety which has gained recognition as having the most stem canker resistance is Tracy M. But while the soybean type is popular in Mississippi and Alabama, it hasn't performed well in tests in South Carolina.

Supplies of most traditional varieties will be sufficient this season, although some of the newer ones, like Coker 368, may run a little short.

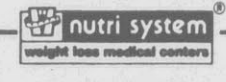

An increase in the use of nematode-resistant varieties may cause some of the types to be scarce.

Growers in the coastal plains have heard and seen enough about cyst, lance and root-knot nematodes to want to try resistant varieties. This is going to be a big demand.

HOW TO AVOID THE 6 MOST COMMON MISTAKES OF DIETING.

- 1 The first mistake is to go on a diet. People who lose weight successfully don't go on diets. They go on a total program.
- 2 Count every calorie you consume. That's a mistake that will doom you to failure. Successful weight losers know how to lose without counting calories, weighing and measuring foods. There is an easy to follow program that requires no special shopping for foods, no time-consuming preparation.
- 3 Eat only celery and carrots and other uninteresting diet foods. And what will happen is what's always happened. Your starved taste buds will crave more interesting foods and you're destined to start cheating. Losing weight doesn't mean eating bland food.
- 4 Diet without any professional help. And you're doomed to make mistakes. The knowledgeable people who lose weight easily and effortlessly do it with guidance from trained weight loss counselors who are sensitive to your own special problems.
- 5 Take diet pills or injections. What will happen is you might lose some weight, but stop taking the pills and you're back where you began — fat and frustrated. Sensible weight losers are taught how to keep the weight off forever.
- 6 Do lots of strenuous exercise. That's fine. But face it, most of us just aren't the type. Strenuous exercise is unnecessary. Why not try a program with moderate exercise?

MAKE NO MISTAKES, and call today for a free no-obligation consultation.

Pondering Rail Spur

MURPHY, N.C. (AP) — Some state lumber industry members said they expect the Louisville & Nashville Railroad's Murphy spur to close and they are working on alternative measures.

L&N officials have tried to close the 23-mile line since 1977, saying it is losing $100,000 a year.

"We knew it eventually would come to this. We couldn't stand around and wait. If the railroad goes, then we'll truck — given enough time, we can do it," said Jack Hughes, owner of Hughes' Wood Yard in Murphy.

Hughes predicted that the three wood yards in Murphy would have no alternative but switch to trucking pulpwood. The L&N runs one train a week over the line, and Hughes ships the maximum of 10 carloads a week.

"The state has made a study and so forth," said Cherokee County Commissioner and Manager John Boring. "As far as the state's concerned we'd be better off without it (railroad). They've got experts. They've made the study and that's the state's position."

The DOT told Cherokee County commissioners in a letter that closing the line would create jobs in the trucking industry and would not create a hardship for the county. A public hearing on the issue was scheduled for today, but many people believed the decision has already been made.

Georgia DOT officials estimate that as many as 600 jobs depend on the line and that state has offered to spend $400,000 to upgrade the line from Blue Ridge to the North Carolina line.

Tom Davis, DOT commissioner for District 14, which includes Cherokee County, said he was unaware of the state's decision. Davis added that he has long been in favor of keeping the line open and his position has not changed.

Will Investigate Parachute Death

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) — An investigation will be conducted into the death of an Army lieutenant colonel killed while jumping with a civilian parachuting club, officials said.

No decision has been made on whether military or civilian authorities will conduct the probe. Fort Bragg spokesman Bill Maddox said Sunday. Lt. Col. Dale A. Burroughs was off duty Friday when the accident occurred, Maddox said.

Burroughs, 44, whom authorities said was preparing for retirement, was jumping with the Green Beret Sports Parachute Club near Raeford Airport about 2 p.m. when his parachute malfunctioned.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a small loss today amid lingering interest-rate uncertainties. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .95 to 1,153.89 by noon.

Losers held a 4-3 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said traders were proceeding cautiously, with the Federal Reserve's policy-setting Open Market Committee meeting this week.

Some analysts believe the Fed will decide on measures to tighten credit, if it has not already done so, and thereby exert some new upward pressure on interest rates.

If nothing else, economists say it is likely that the central bank will soon raise its discount rate — the charge on loans to private financial institutions — to bring it into line with other rates that have risen lately.

Southwest Forest Industries gained 2 to 2 1/2. The company said it agreed to be acquired for $24 a share by a group of private investors through a leveraged buyout — a type of transaction in which the assets of a company are typically used as collateral to help finance its purchase.

Walt Disney Productions rose 1 1/2 to 65. The company has been the subject of continuing takeover speculation.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .12 to 90.23. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .41 at 209.08.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 28.94 million shares at noontime, against 36.84 million at the same point Friday.

Cougars Oust Deacs, Earn Final Four Berth

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Coach Guy Lewis says his Houston Cougars made a crusade out of working their way back to college basketball's Final Four following their title miss 12 months ago.

"They've grown so tired of being compared to last year's team," said Lewis following a 68-63 triumph Sunday over Wake Forest in finals of the NCAA Midwest Regional. "I don't blame them, really. I'm proud of them, because they've played up to their potential."

Houston, by overcoming shaky foul shooting in the late minutes, improved its record to 31-4 and earned the praise of Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy.

"I really think that they're a much improved team over a year ago. First of all, they had a lot more poise," Tacy said. "They seem to have more of a 'together' club. Their inside game is very powerful."

Tacy's reference to power applied specifically to Akeem Olajuwon, the regional's Most Valuable Player and a towering force in the middle.

The 7-foot junior hit all eight of his field-goal tries in the opening half, catapulting Houston into the lead for good with a mighty slam dunk. In the final 20 minutes, although missing all three of his foul shots, he added 12 points and helped wreck the Wake Forest offense.

"You're always thinking about him, but he's not intimidating," said forward Kenny Green, the Demon Deacons' top scorer with 18 points.

"We changed our shots as a result of him," Tacy said, however. "He's a great talent. I don't expect to see very many as good as he is."

Wake Forest, while spreading its offense in a bid to control the game's tempo, grabbed a 27-22 lead at 15:10 of the opening half before Olajuwon asserted his skills. He had four first-half slam dunks, the final of which gave Houston a 32-29 lead.

Olajuwon's dominant performance enabled Lewis to chuckle when asked how the Cougars managed to win despite 6-for-15 foul shooting in the second half.

"Having this guy get a whole lot of points didn't hurt anything," said Lewis, nodding to Olajuwon on his left. "This guy at the end hitting his free throws finished them off," he said with a nod to Alvin Franklin at his other side.

Lee Garber pulled Wake Forest to within 34-33 at outset of the second half before Michael Young of Houston found the range.

Young's shooting put Houston up 45-37 and later 49-41 with 12:09 left. Afterward, Anthony Teachey's bomb from 22 feet put Wake Forest close at 53-51 and his two foul shots posed the Demon Deacons' final threat at 57-55.

"We felt that if we stayed close until the end we would have a good chance to win," said Tacy, whose team bowed out with a 23-9 record.

"When we did have some opportunities we hurried and made some crucial mistakes that cost us some points and the ballgame," Tacy added. "We needed more time to prepare for a team such as this."

Olajuwon, in addition to his 29 points, pulled down 12 rebounds and blocked three shots while playing the entire 40 minutes.

Green, a 6-6 sophomore, grabbed 16 missed shots for the Demon Deacons. Both he and guard Delaney Rudd, who scored all 12 of his points in the opening half, joined Young of Houston and freshman William Bedford of Memphis State on the Midwest all-tourney team.

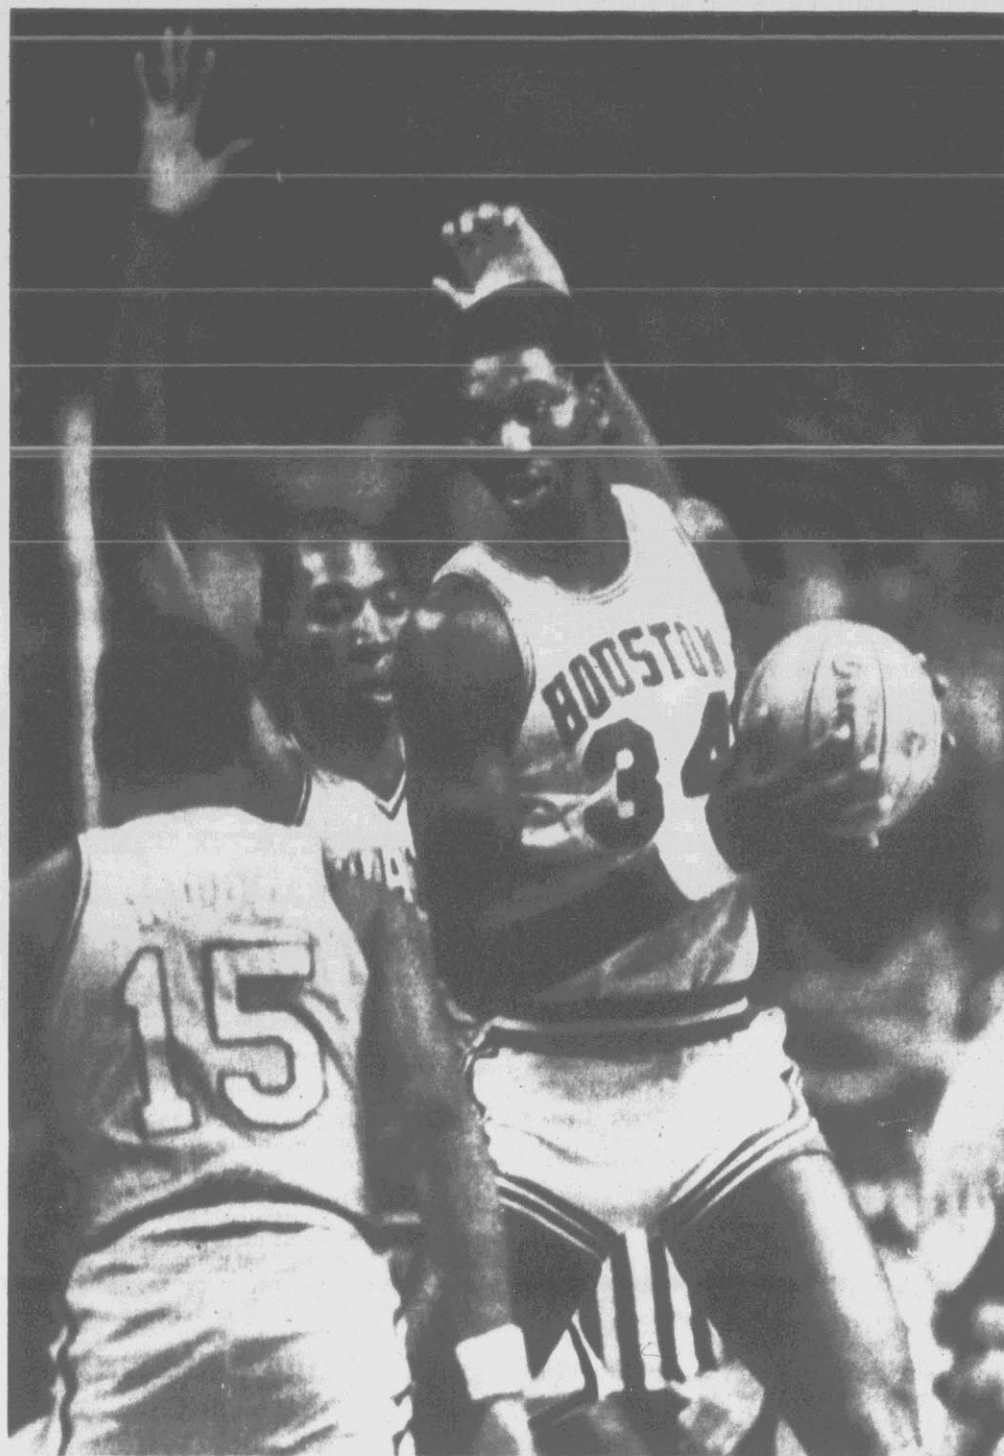

The journey to the Final Four, where it will play Virginia, 21-11, in Saturday's semifinals, will be the third in a row for Lewis' team, which a year ago fell 54-52 to North Carolina State in the title game.

"It's such a thrill to be going back. It's just as thrilling this time as it was two years ago," Lewis said. "I don't look forward to playing them (Virginia). I'm just glad I'm able to get there."

Houston, a 75-67 victor at home over Virginia during the regular season, will be encountering a team that went further than most expected after losing former college Player of the Year Ralph Sampson.

"I'm sure they're as sick of hearing about playing without Sampson as our players were of hearing about playing without (Larry) Micheaux and (Clyde) Drexler," said Lewis. "They've got very fine guards, they've got good perimeter shooting, they're very well-coached and they're on a roll."

VPI Set For NIT Final

NEW YORK (AP) — Michigan Coach Bill Frieder is hoping his team doesn't get a look at the game-by-game results of Virginia Tech, the Wolverines' opponent in tonight's semifinals of the 47th National Invitation Tournament.

"I'm not going to tell my kids that Virginia Tech beat Virginia, Louisville twice and Memphis State," Frieder said. "They'll choke right up. They don't want to hear that. I'm going to tell them they're a good team, but I'm not going to tell them who they beat, I think they might get scared."

Michigan, 21-10, shouldn't be that scared of the Hokies, 21-12. After all, the Big 10 team beat Indiana, Illinois and Dayton during the regular season.

Notre Dame, 20-11, faces Southwestern Louisiana, 23-8, in the second game with the winners meeting for the championship Wednesday night.

"They have great athletes, good quickness. They play great defense," Frieder said of Virginia Tech, which allowed just under 65 points per game this season. "They play aggressive defense, they bump you around. They do the little things you don't get called for but seem to disrupt you."

Virginia Tech Coach Charlie Moir put the physical tag on Michigan.

"They have a good basketball team," Moir said. "They have had some great wins and they're more physical than we are. It's going to be a real test."

Virginia Tech relies on two players for its offensive production. Sophomore guard Dell Curry scores 18.8 per game, while junior forward Perry Young contributes 18.5.

"We're going to have to shoot pretty well to beat Michigan," Moir said.

Michigan has a balanced scoring attack with all five starters averaging between 12.0 and 8.0. Sophomore Roy Tarpley's team-leading 372 points was the lowest total to lead a Michigan team in 23 years.

The key, however, may be rebounding for the Wolverines, who out-rebounded their opponents by 3.2 per game this season.

"When (sophomore forward Tim) McCormick plays aggressive, we seem to play well," Frieder said of his 6-foot-11 junior forward. "When he plays lethargic we're in trouble. We had three straight games this year where he had one rebound in each game and we lost two of them. He's playing a little better and we're playing better."

Notre Dame is playing better and Coach Digger Phelps says there's a reason for his team's late-season victories.

"The three things I've stressed to the team have been defense, rebounding and foul shooting," Phelps said. "I've told them we can shoot 45 or 55 percent from the field and still win if we do those three things."

What has improved the rebounding of late is the return of sophomore center Tim Kempton, who missed seven of eight games in February with a stress fracture of the leg.

"With Tim in the lineup we were 17-5, without him we were 3-6," Phelps said. "We need his rebounding."

Kempton returned for the Fighting Irish's opening-round NIT game against Old Dominion and in the three tournament games he has scored 40 points and pulled down 20 rebounds.

Southwestern Louisiana, which has five starters in double figures, enters the semifinals with a tournament scoring average of 88 points per game.

"We can play a game in the 50s and 40s if we have to," Ragin' Cajuns Coach Bobby Paschal said. "Our philosophy, though, is to get as easy a basket as possible. We like to press and run."

Emile Griffith and Nino Benvenuti fought three times for the world middleweight championship, with Benvenuti winning twice and Griffith once.

Eastwood's USF&G Victory 'Triumph Of Perseverance'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Bob Eastwood's victory in the USF&G Classic was a triumph of perseverance.

"I knew I could win. It was just a matter of when, a matter of when I could put everything together," the 38-year-old Eastwood said Sunday after he had ended 13 years of struggle and frustration by winning for the first time in his career.

He nailed down his front-running, three-stroke victory with a closing round of 2-under-par 70.

Eastwood, who led or shared the lead throughout the 72 holes, started the final round on the Lakewood Country Club course — 7,080 yards of lakes and ponds and fairways lined with oaks and moss-dripping cypress — with a three-stroke advantage.

He holed a bunker shot for a birdie on the first hole, hit a driver from the fairway and two-putted for birdie-4 on the second and never looked back. He finished with a 272 total, 16 under par.

It was worth $72,000 — more than he had won in 10 of his 12 previous full seasons — from the total purse of $400,000.

Eastwood led by six shots much of the way. No one ever got closer than three. And for most of the day the drama concerned a struggle for second place.

That position eventually was secured by Larry Rinker, with a 68-275.

Doug Tewell, in second place when final round play started, dropped back with a double bogey on the third hole, taking pressure off Eastwood, and could do no better than a par 72. He was tied for third at 277 with John Adams and John Mahaffey. Adams closed with a 67 while Mahaffey scored an eagle-2 on the way to a 71.

Ewing Boosts Georgetown

Hoyas Dunk Dayton

By The Associated Press
Patrick Ewing stood dripping wet under the hot lights of the television cameras, searching for the right word to express himself.

Second-ranked Georgetown finally had ended the sweet dreams of Roosevelt Chapman and upstart Dayton.

"I told the guards just to stop him," Ewing said of Chapman. "I told them to ... I can't think of the right word." A smile split Ewing's sweat-soaked face. "I just told them to stop him, and I'd help out."

Ewing, a 7-foot junior, did more than help. He intimidated. He dominated. He scored when he needed to. He blocked a few shots. He rebounded. And when it was over, the Hoyas were in the NCAA basketball tournament's Final Four next weekend in Seattle.

Chapman, who had averaged 30.7 points in the tournament, had just 13 points, while Ewing scored a game-high 15 as Georgetown defeated Dayton 61-49 to win the West Regional championship at Los Angeles.

The Midwest Regional title also was decided Sunday, going in favor of fifth-ranked Houston and Akeem Olajuwon, the only college center who can contest Ewing's claim to best in the country. Olajuwon scored 29 points, connecting on 14-of-16 shots, as the Cougars defeated No. 19 Wake Forest 68-63 at St. Louis.

Georgetown, 32-3, will play third-ranked Kentucky, 29-4, in the national semifinals Saturday, while Houston, 31-4, takes on unranked Virginia, 21-11. Virginia upset Indiana 50-48 in the East, and Kentucky defeated 16th-ranked Illinois 54-51 in the Mideast in Saturday's regional finals.

WEST

To get to the regional final, Chapman had led Dayton to upsets of Louisiana State, Oklahoma and Washington. He had a tournament-high 41 points in the Oklahoma game, but all that ended Sunday.

"We felt that we had to play great defense against them because they're so small and quick," Ewing said. "I think we contained them very well."

In addition to his 15 points, Ewing had seven rebounds and dominated under the basket as Georgetown pulled away with a 15-5 spurt that gave the Hoyas a 51-37 lead with 3:43 to play. Ewing had a three-point play in the spurt, and freshman Michael Graham hit three baskets.

Against Kentucky, the 7-foot Ewing will not enjoy the height advantage he did against Dayton, whose tallest player was 6-7. Kentucky has one of the biggest teams in college basketball, anchored by the twin towers of 7-1 Sam Bowie and 6-11 Melvin Turpin.

"I really haven't been thinking about that," Ewing said. "I'm happy we won this game. I'll start thinking about that tomorrow or next day."

The Hoyas' last trip to the Final Four was in 1982 when they lost to North Carolina in the championship game.

MIDWEST

Houston is making its third straight trip to the Final Four. The Cougars lost in the semifinals to North Carolina in 1982, and North Carolina State upset Houston last year in the title game.

Cougars Coach Guy Lewis said this trip couldn't be compared with the others.

"It's such a thrill to me to be going back. It's just as thrilling as it was two years ago," Lewis said. "I'm so proud of this team," he said, adding: "This team is tired of being compared to last year's team."

Wake Forest trailed by only two points, 57-55, with 5:24 left, but Michael Young and Olajuwon hit consecutive baskets as Houston took control 61-55.

"I think they're a much improved team over a year ago," Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy said of Houston. Lewis hoped Tacy was right, since the Cougars lost to Final Four opponent Virginia 72-63 late last season.

"They've got very fine guards. They've got good perimeter shooting," Lewis said of the Cavaliers.

"They're very well coached, and they're on a roll."

MIDEAST

Bowie had a plan in mind as he led Kentucky over Illinois. "I wanted to put myself in a situation where I could be the hero or the goat," Bowie said.

After the first half, Bowie looked like a goat. He hadn't scored a point, and he had only four rebounds. But after intermission, Bowie scored 11 points and upped his rebound total to 14 as Kentucky held off a physical squad from Illinois.

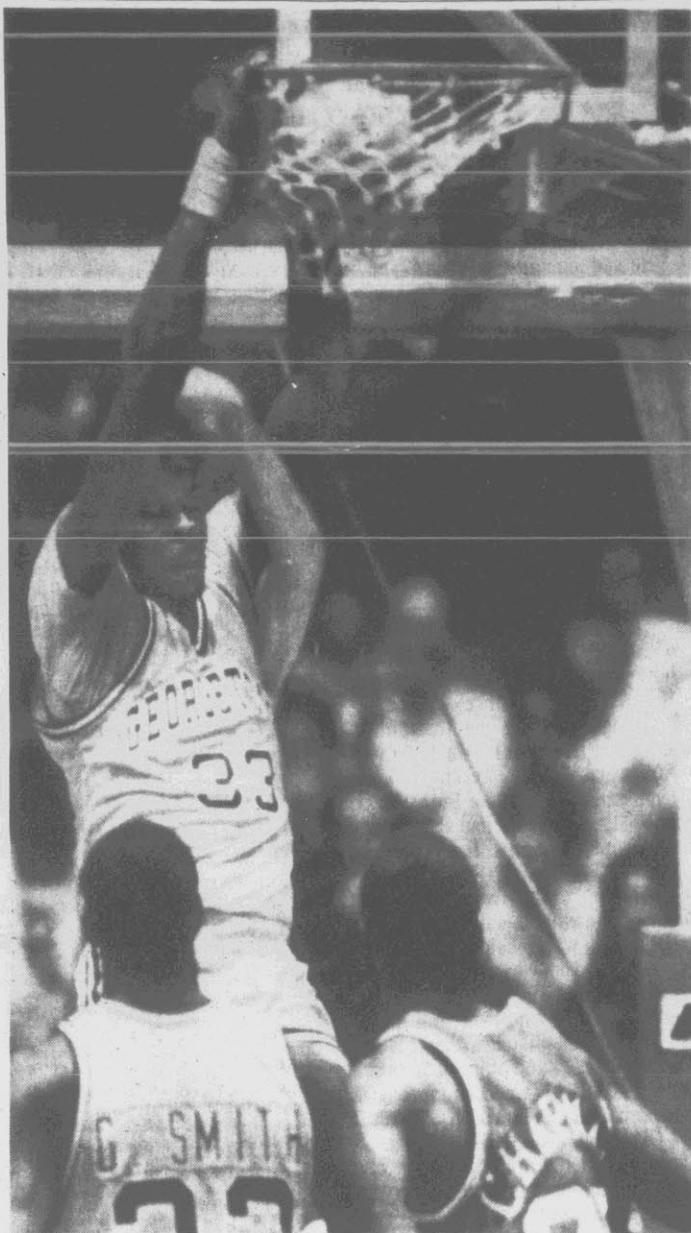

Bowie hit a pair of free throws with 4:28 to play gave the Wildcats a 49-44 lead, and, with 2:36 left, he blocked an Illinois shot that could have cut the Kentucky lead to one point. Turpin had 13 points for Kentucky.

"That might have been the biggest play of the game when Bowie went to the free throw line and hit two when they were ahead by three," Illinois Coach Lou Henson said.

EAST

Kenton Edelin, who played under-study to Ralph Sampson the past two seasons, finally emerged from the shadow with five straight points in 1½ minutes as Virginia surprised Indiana. The run started when Edelin made a steal and scored to give Virginia a 45-44 lead. Rick Carlisle led the Cavaliers with 19 points.

"I guess coaches are crazy," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said. "People were saying Ralph is leaving, but I was crazy enough to think we'd be back in the Final Four."

Slam Of Authority

Olajuwon Sizzles In Win Over WFU

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Akeem Olajuwon cooled off in the second half. He missed two shots.

But Houston's 7-foot all-American, possibly drawing the curtain on a great college career, still hit 14 of 16 field goals in the Cougars' 68-63 victory over undersized Wake Forest in Sunday's NCAA Midwest title game.

He was unstoppable from start to finish. He, more than anyone else, propelled last year's NCAA runners-up to a third consecutive Final Four.

The junior from Lagos, Nigeria announced the week before that he would be off-limits to the media. He appeared with guard Alvin Franklin and Coach Guy Lewis at the post-game mass interview session. But his words, like his missed field goals, were infrequent.

"It's going to be tough," he said when asked about going to the Final Four a third consecutive time.

"Everybody on the team played the way they were supposed to play," he said when asked about the conquest of Wake Forest.

Asked about Virginia, the Cougars' semifinal opponent in Seattle Saturday, Olajuwon practically waxed eloquent, saying, "We're going to have to play our game and we're going to beat them."

Many expect the junior all-American to end his college career this month and make himself available for the National Basketball Association draft. Hearts must race faster in the NBA at the prospect.

After hitting 8-for-8 from the field in the first half against Wake Forest, he wound up with 29 points, 12 rebounds, two assists, two steals and three blocked shots.

When Lewis was asked what made the difference, he smiled and pointed to Olajuwon and said, "Having this guy."

Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy admitted that Olajuwon's forceful presence beneath the basket forced the Demon Deacons to take a great many low percentage shots from the perimeter.

"We didn't do a very good job of stopping their inside game," he said. "Akeem is a great talent. Because of him, we changed our shots in the second half."

Lewis, as much as anybody, will be a man on the spot in Seattle. The grizzled Cougar boss took a lot of heat last year when his team, which had looked so invincible, lost to North Carolina State. Three starters return from that ill-fated squad known as Phi Slama Jama for the slam-dunking power basketball it played.

And Lewis, possibly thinking ahead to the army of reporters who will greet the Cougars in Seattle, served notice that he does not care to compare.

"This team is tired of being compared to last year's team. They are sick of it," he said. "They played well all year long. They played up to their potential."

Wake Forest, turned back in a bid to become the third straight Atlantic Coast Conference team to bring home the NCAA title, was at a height disadvantage at virtually every position.

Ingram Takes Miller Race For First Win

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — For Jack Ingram, persistence has paid off.

Ingram took home his first victory in his 21 years of racing at Martinsville Speedway when he won Sunday's Late Model Sportsman half of the Miller Time 500.

"I've never been able to win at Martinsville but I've run well here," Ingram, of Asheville, N.C., said. "I've led races with a few laps to go and something always seemed to happen."

Ingram, a four-time national Sportsman champion, averaged 77.751 mph over the .526-mile track, breaking the record of 70.731 mph set in 1980 by Mike Porter.

"I told a reporter the other day that if I never won a race at Martinsville, I'd feel like when I hung it up that I'd still done just about everything you could do in Sportsman racing," Ingram said. "But we still wanted to win here badly. That's the reason we kept coming back, and today we did it."

The second half of Sunday's scheduled double-header, a 250-lap race for Modified cars, was postponed until April 28 when rain hit the track just moments after the Sportsman event ended.

Ingram, driving a Pontiac, passed Dickie Boswell on lap 188.

After the leaders pitted under the yellow flag for the final time on lap 208, Dale Jarrett took over the lead. But Ingram caught Jarrett five laps later and held the lead the rest of the 250 laps to win the $9,000 first-place prize.

Following Ingram were Jarrett, Boswell, Charlie Luck, Elton Sawyer, Robert Ingram Jr., Larry Pearson, Brad Teague, Sam Ard and Jay Hedgecock.

Waugh Sets New Mark

HILLSBOROUGH — Rose High School's William Waugh set a new meet and school record in winning the shot put in the Orange County Relays Saturday.

Waugh's toss of 56 feet even took first place in the event, while his toss of 140 feet, 8½ inches was good enough for fourth in the discus.

Bobby Casey finished seventh in the shot with a toss of 45-2½.

Roswell Streeter finished in third place in the high jump at 6-6, while Ed Farley was sixth in the pole vault at 11-0.

The Rampants entertain Beddingfield and Eastern Wayne today.

As if sicklepod (or coffeeweed) wasn't a tough enough problem, now scientists tell us that sicklepod grows up with a herbicide shield. This is a waxy coating that can actually interfere with the effectiveness of your critical postemergence sprays.

But Vernam® herbicide, tank-mixed right in with your Treflan®, Prowl®, or Basalint®, makes a difference. Research shows us that Vernam applied preplant incorporated has the unique ability to reduce the foliar waxes on sicklepod. So your postemergence sprays stick better, adsorb better and knock out sicklepod more effectively.

Vernam. It not only knocks back the first flush of sicklepod, but also cuts the wax to help your postemergent finish the job.

See your chemical supplier now. Always read and follow the label directions. Stauffer Chemical Company, Agricultural Chemical Division, Westport, CT 06881.

Cagney Appears Tuesday

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Winner of a 1974 Academy Award, Art Carney became a movie star late in life. But his legacy is bound to be his most famous and favorite second-banana role — sewer worker Ed Norton on "The Honeymooners."

On Tuesday night, Carney again moves downstage a bit, playing a houseboy-handyman to a wheelchair-bound James Cagney, making his television debut in the "ITT Theatre" presentation of "Terrible Joe Moran" on CBS.

In its few bad moments, the film is a far-fetched ramble, but, most of the time, it manages to be sentimental and moving without being overly mushy.

Cagney plays Joe Moran, a tough-skinned ex-boxer who's really jelly inside. When he lets down his guard, he can show tenderness to Troy (Carney), another ex-pug who has been helped by Joe over the years. But Joe's real gleam is for Ronnie (Ellen Barkin from "Tender Mercies"), his estranged granddaughter.

Joe was never the settle-down type, and his marriage, which produced Ronnie's mother, lasted only three months. Joe hasn't kept up with his family for years. Then, one day, 23-year-old Ronnie, a would-be writer in need of money to bail out her dreaming, scheming boyfriend, comes calling.

Although they each place initial obstacles in the way, the developing grandfather-granddaughter relationship proves beneficial and important to both. He finds the family love he's never had after years of superficial adulation from the sports world. She finds somebody who genuinely cares for her and challenges her to be better.

The script originally was written for Katharine Hepburn, and the plan was for her to be Terrible Tessie, former tennis great. But she turned down the role, and CBS went for Cagney. The acting legend suffers from circulatory problems, the effects of a mild stroke and impaired speech.

His doctors felt working was good therapy, although they restricted his work to two hours a day. His voice let him down occasionally during the filming, and some of his post-production dubbing is noticeable.

But Cagney, in his 64th film, very often is Cagney, which means the eyes twinkle, he acts tough, and shows joy and his famous sneer when he needs to.

Old fight films, with Cagney doing the duking, are used nicely during a scene in which Joe is toasted on TV. Of lesser value is a contrived gym scene, in which ex-heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson and New York City Mayor Ed Koch have cameo roles.

Koch is funny playing a glad-handing agent, but he's not sleazy enough. He wasn't paid for the performance, which seems the appropriate compensation.

Carney, 65, is the thorough professional throughout. He had never worked with Cagney before, although he had felt his influence. As a kid, he said he imitated Cagney's flip hairstyle, combing his hair in a wave and maintaining the curves by sleeping on his back.

The first time the two actors met was several years ago, when Carney had a personal problem and "I thought Cagney would be the guy to talk to. I called and asked him for some time. There was a pause, then he said: 'You got it.' He was always so direct, a man of few words. He helped me a lot."

Carney said Cagney enjoyed "The Honeymooners," the classic series that also starred Jackie Gleason. "He would call my agent on Saturday nights and discuss it," Carney said.

Playing Norton to Gleason's Ralph Kramden the busdriver has been the highlight of Carney's career. Unlike many more ambitious actors, Carney said he "was very satisfied with supporting roles. I didn't want the responsibility of carrying a show."

But a movie doesn't have the same long-term burden, and Carney, who had done bit comedy part in several films finally took a starring role in "Harry & Tonto," for which he won an Oscar. "I was a little hesitant about the role," he said. "I was in my 50s and I was supposed to play a man in his 70s. I didn't know if I could make it believable."

Carney talks quite frankly about his self-doubts and bouts with alcoholism. He's a card-carrying member of Alcoholics Anonymous.

Olivia Hussey To Be In Miniseries

By JULIANNE HASTINGS
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK — Since her first hit movie role as a child Juliet 19 years ago in Franco Zeffirelli's "Romeo and Juliet," Olivia Hussey has played classical heroines. She's tired of it.

"For some reason all people think I can do is be sweet," said the raven-haired actress whose petite face has the fragile features of an exotic cat. "I want parts that are a little more bitchy."

Of all the roles she has played, Juliet is her favorite. It got her out of the cattlecalls for London stage parts, put her in the limelight at the age of 15 and gave her a chance to act.

"But it's been sort of a vicious circle," she said in her soft, smokey voice.

Since then she has played the Virgin Mary in Zeffirelli's "Jesus of Nazareth," and other classical roles in such miniseries as "The Pirate," "The Bastard," "The Story of Esther" and "Ivanhoe."

Still, when she read the part of Ione, a would-be high priestess who can't help falling in love in the miniseries "The Last Days of Pompeii," she decided to do it one more time.

The seven-hour drama about the lives and loves of the citizens of Pompeii just prior to the 79 A.D. eruption of Mt. Vesuvius will air on ABC May 6-8.

Heading the large cast is Sir Laurence Olivier, whom Miss Hussey previously worked with in both of her Zeffirelli films.

"I liked the script," Miss Hussey said. "And if it's a successful miniseries, more people watch you in three nights than in any movie you might do."

"Pompeii" is the last period piece Olivia said she is going to do. She currently is considering five projects — all contemporary.

The 32-year-old Argentine-born actress considers "Pompeii" the resurrection of her acting career. "I've been working in Europe but I really wasn't concentrating on work here."

Immediately prior to the new miniseries, she spent a couple years concentrating on housework and caring for her two children, Alex, 11, son of her first husband Dean Martin Jr., and Max, 2, son of Japan's rock star Akira Fuse, whom she married four years ago.

She was promoting a line of cosmetics in Japan when she met Akira, who has had 27 No. 1 records in Japan over the past 16 years.

"I did a three-week tour in Japan and Akira sang the songs in the commercial. We met on stage."

Jerry Lee Lewis Is Hospitalized

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Jerry Lee Lewis was in stable condition at the Regional Medical Center early today after being hospitalized for an apparent reaction to a muscle relaxant, officials said.

Lewis, 48, became ill at his Nesbitt, Miss., home Sunday night after taking a muscle relaxant for a sore shoulder, said J.W. Whitten, the singer's road manager.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦KJ1063 ♥5 ♦QJ9 ♦AJ63
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass
5 ♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Had partner wanted to know how many aces you have, he could have employed Blackwood. Therefore, he must be interested in something else, and logically it can only be the quality of your trumps. You are certainly more than adequate in that department, so we would go on to six spades.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦A106 ♥KJ53 ♦A985 ♦72
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—Sometimes you have to stretch a little to jump to two no trump, but that is not the case here. Your hand is suit oriented because most of your points are prime. However, that does not mean that you should respond one heart. Bid your hand naturally. Respond one diamond. If partner has four hearts, he can introduce the suit; if not, you can jump in no trump at your next turn.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦AKJ1054 ♥9 ♦AK95 ♦Q6
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ 2 ♥ Pass Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—You have a very good hand, but to show it with a jump in spades is too unilateral. Double is more flexible. For all you know, partner might have a heart stack and be able to convert to penalties for your best result. If he responds in clubs, you can then rebid your spades.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦95 ♥AKQ63 ♦A87 ♦KJ4
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 3 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Your hand rates one move toward slam. Since you will not get the information you need by asking for aces, the obvious course to adopt is a cue-bidding sequence. Bid four diamonds. However, if partner simply rebids four hearts, throw in the towel.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦98732 ♥Q6 ♦86 ♦AKJ9
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ 1 ♥ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Partner may, or may not, have significant support for one of your black suits, but any effort to probe for an alternative contract courts disaster. For example, if you bid one spade partner might pass with a singleton, fearing a misfit. Your hand is worth some action, and the recommended move is a raise to two hearts. A doubleton honor is adequate support for a suit in which partner has overcalled.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦QJ8 ♥AKQ9873 ♦A92
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Your superb hand has just become even better. As little as five spades to the king and the king of clubs in partner's hand will give you an excellent play for six hearts, and even a grand slam could be laydown on minimal values. You can apprise partner of this by jump shifting to three clubs.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, MARCH 27, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Although there are some delays or frustrations in the path of your desires, accept them in stride, and avoid being depressed or put off by these unavoidable obstacles. Remain steadfast.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Now you understand how good friends fit nicely into your scheme of things, and you gain more success, even though delays may occur.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You think your career work is not going as fast as it should, so try to find out where the trouble lies. A bigwig can be of help.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You may find that work affairs are rather difficult to handle, but if you improve your credit, all goes much better.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Get right down to business, and handle affairs well, forgetting that desire for pleasure for now. Be more affectionate.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Make appointments with outside partners who can help to enrich your life. Come to a fine agreement for the days ahead.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be most careful in driving, and keep focused on the duties that only you can perform the best.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Enjoy a different kind of entertainment, but make sure it is not too expensive. Be more thoughtful of your mate; you can be happier.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Forget self, and handle those tasks that kind desire of you, and you can get fine results. You will be happy, but a little tired.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't permit a private worry to deter you from accomplishing much in the outside world. Make the evening a fine, social one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Avoid that capricious friend who likes to get own way, and get busy modernizing your possessions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Concentrate more on personal aims now since worldly ones may take more time to materialize. Be happy with friends.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Forget that new outlet, and concentrate on worldly affairs that are important. Handle your tasks efficiently.

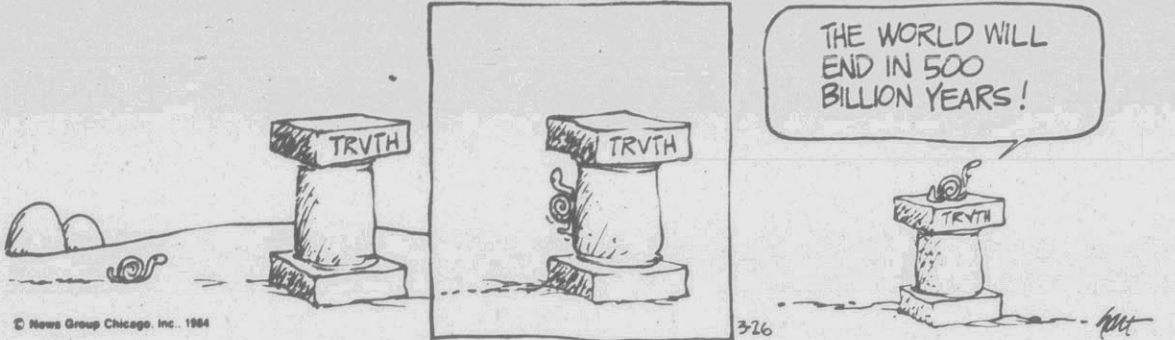

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who can see where the future is trending in commercial, political and other affairs, and should have as fine an education as possible in order to make a big success in life, no matter what the forte may be.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

A Year Devoted To Combing Space For ET

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — For a solid year, Harvard Professor Paul Horowitz has listened for a message from Out There, some bleep or blip to prove that aliens in other worlds are trying to talk to earthlings.

No, E.T. has not phoned Harvard. Not yet, anyway.

Horowitz admits he would like to have found something in his first year of listening. But still, he is not too disappointed.

"I think it's going to happen someday," he says. "This is our first chance, and we may not succeed in our first chance. I'd be surprised if, in the next few hundred years, we don't make contact."

Horowitz's around-the-clock listening is the largest, most intensive search ever launched by humans to make contact with galactic civilizations.

It began last March when Harvard's 84-foot-wide radio telescope was switched on at the Oak Ridge observatory in the town of Harvard in central Massachusetts. In the first two days of operation, it accomplished more in the search for extraterrestrial intelligence than all of the previous such projects combined.

But there is more to it than simply pointing the big ear skyward. The most important decision is which radio frequencies to listen to. And this involves the unlikely process of trying to figure out how those aliens think.

"We're playing a guessing game in which we assume that they'll do the most reasonable thing," says Horowitz, a physicist. "The only thing that works for us in this game is that if they are trying to establish communication, they're going to make it easy, not hard. They will choose a guessable strategy."

So Horowitz has zeroed in on "magic frequencies," ones that, in the universal scheme, make sense.

Hydrogen is the most plentiful element in the universe, and it naturally emits radio waves at 1420 megahertz. So Horowitz's ear sweeps the sky each day listening for an unusual transmission on a frequency band 2,000 hertz wide that is centered on 1420 megahertz.

The heart of his machinery is a computerized signal processor that breaks the signal into 131,072 channels. It ignores random noise and bursts of energy and seeks out an "unnatural" beacon in the sky.

So far, the telescope has scanned most of the sky twice on this magic frequency. There have been a few false alarms, but all have been discarded as earthly interference.

For the rest of this year, the telescope will listen to 1660 megahertz, another magic frequency that is hydroxyl's cosmic signature.

By the end of 1984, however, Horowitz hopes to expand the search dramatically when he installs a new signal processor that will monitor 8 million channels at once over a 350,000-hertz bandwidth. It will catch signals that are not beamed directly at the earth, as the present system requires.

"This will lift the level of restriction that we now impose on an extraterrestrial civilization," Horowitz says. "We now insist that they transmit a special kind of signal and that they transmit it so it will arrive in our solar system at the right frequency. It's asking a lot of them."

The search depends most of all, of course, on another assumption — that intelligent beings exist on other worlds.

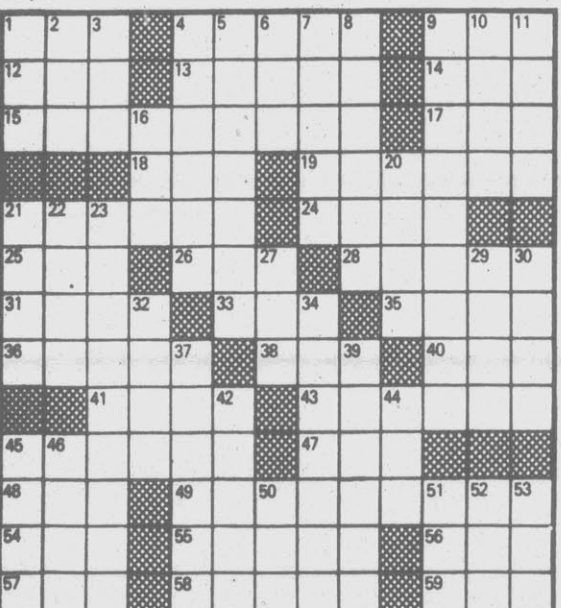

"I believe pretty strongly that they've got to be there," Horowitz says. "It would seem to me to be a most unusual state of affairs to have life only on this one planet, given how ordinary it appears to be in every way."

A Shot In The Arm

Dr. Jonas Salk announced a new vaccine to immunize against polio on this day in 1952. That year, almost 58,000 Americans contracted polio. In 1982, three cases were reported. Edward Jenner is generally credited with the first successful vaccination in 1796. Russia was so grateful for Jenner's discovery that the first child to be vaccinated there was named Vaccinov and educated at the expense of the nation.

DO YOU KNOW — Who developed the oral polio vaccine?
