Showdown Awaits Hart And Mondale

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The Democratic presidential marathon turns to New York today, with Sen. Gary Hart hoping his impressive sweep of Connecticut will give him the edge he needs in next week's showdown with Walter F. Mondale.

Hart was cautious about making too much of his win Tuesday night, telling supporters only, "We expect to do very well" in New York.

"Front-runnership seems to change about once a week," he added. "We'll wait and see."

But Connecticut's Democratic primary was his best election showing in two weeks — a romp that completed a six-state sweep of New England and was the kind of convincing victory he needed to tarnish Mondale's claim of a comeback and to regain campaign momentum for himself.

Mondale, campaigning in New York state, said Hart had a "very good win ... and I commend him for it."

"We go now to New York for the next campaign," said the former vice president, the one-time front-runner now squeezed for cash even before the midway point of a long march of primary and caucus contests.

Final returns in Connecticut gave Hart 53 percent of the vote, compared with 29 percent for Mondale and 12 percent for the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Hart won 33 delegates to the Democratic National Convention, to Mondale's 18 and 1 for Jackson. There are 252 delegates at stake in New York, nearly five times as many as in Connecticut.

Even so, Mondale continued to hold a wide lead in delegates overall — 692 to 422 for Hart and 76 for Jackson. It takes 1,967 to nominate.

In New York, a small sample poll of likely primary voters taken by ABC News and The Washington Post during three days ending Tuesday gave Mondale 43 percent to 33 percent for Hart. Jackson trailed with 15 percent, and 9 percent were undecided. There was a 6 percentage point margin of error.

Jeff Alderman, ABC News polling director, says the poll also shows that blacks have a greater share of the vote than they have had in the past.

"If that happens, it will reduce the share of the Jewish vote. Mondale's fortunes then will depend a great deal on how big the black turnout is, and the percentage of that vote that goes to Jackson," Alderman said.

The three Democratic presidential candidates, meanwhile, will participate in a one-hour debate starting at 8 p.m. EST tonight in New York. The debate, which will be broadcast on CBS-TV, will be moderated by Dan Rather.

Hart said his broad Connecticut win was proof that voters want "a break with the establishment politics of the past."

"I think the results showed a rejection of a foreign policy which calls for the continued presence of American troops in Honduras and the possible loss of American lives there," he said. Hart has been criticizing Mondale's refusal to call for an immediate withdrawal of American forces in Central America.

Hart had lost to Mondale in the last two primary elections and had fared poorly in recent weeks in several caucus states.

Roundtable Here

CORPORATE EXECUTIVES MEET — About 30 area executives were expected today at Burroughs Wellcome for a business roundtable sponsored by the state Department of Administration. Among those taking part were, left to right, Don Barham, vice-president-industrial relations of National Spinning in Washington; Wayne Peterson, president of Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Co.; and Thomas Heath, president of First Financial Savings & Loan of Kinston. The purpose of the roundtable is to inform coporate executives of the state's management programs and the challenges that face managers in implementing those programs. New Chief FARMVILLE — Longtime Farmville police officer Wilbur G. Barber was sworn in as chief of police here Tuesday.

Barber, who joined the Farmville force in 1971, advanced through the ranks from patrolman to captain and served four times over the years as acting chief. Since 1976 he has been a special investigator for the department.

Born and reared in the Ballard's Crossroads community of Pitt County where he still lives, he was educated at Bell Arthur High School. He has attended various police science courses over his 13 years of service, including a police management course offered by Northwestern University.

He and his wife, Bonnie, expect to move into Farmville soon, he said, as it is the town's policy that the police chief live inside the corporate limits. The couple has a son, Tony, who works for the N.C. Department of Corrections, and one granddaughter.

There were 13 applications for the job following the resignation of Ronald Cooper as chief. Barber was unanimously selected by the town commissioners, a spokesman for the town said.

Big Decision For Martin

BETHEL — R.L. "Bob" Martin said today that he does not know what action he will take in light of a ruling earlier this week by the state Attorney General's office that would allow him to seek the 9th Senatorial District seat in the General Assembly if he changes his place of residence.

In January, Martin filed as a candidate for the 9th District seat now held by Vernon White of Winterville, and campaigned for the Democratic nomination.

Earlier this month, the General Assembly adopted a redistricting plan which took Bethel, Belvoir, Falkland, Fountain, Farmville and Bell Arthur townships from the 9th District and realigned them with Martin County's Robersonville Township and several townships in Edgecombe and Wilson Counties as the 6th Senatorial District.

Martin, no longer a resident of the 9th District under the new plan, filed as a candidate for the senate from the 6th District.

Monday, Assistant State Attorney General Norma Harrell said candidates whose districts were altered

Artillery Shelling Claims Beirut Toll

By SCHEREREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Artillery shelling erupted in Beirut's Moslem and Christian neighborhoods today, and security sources reported at least 50 people were killed or wounded in Moslem areas.

There was no immediate casualty report from Christian east Beirut. The security sources did not give a breakdown on the number of dead or injured.

Also today, a bomb exploded at an American University of Beirut classroom 10 minutes before students were to arrive for class. No one was injured.

The shelling came as President Amin Gemayel's administration tried to accelerate efforts to disengage Lebanon's warring factions and achieve a permanent cease-fire.

One witness, who declined to be identified, said he heard five shells hit dhe Sanaye neighborhood in Moslem west Beirut. Security sources said shells also fell in several other Moslem neighborhoods and in the Palestinian refugee camps of Sabra and Chatilla.

Christian radio stations reported shelling in the east Beirut neighborhood of Ashrafiyeh and in the suburbs of Furn el-Shubbak and Baabda, site of the presidential palace. The radio stations reported shelling along the Mediterranean Coast as far north as Jounieh, 12 miles north of the capital.

One shell crashed into the living room of Abdul-Fattah Naamani's sixth-floor apartment in the mostly Sunni Moslem Zarif area in west Beirut. Naamani looked at the wrecked furniture and ripped carpets, and said his mother, wife and two small children were in the staircase when the shell hit.

"They would have been killed, too," he said as he broke into tears, pointing to a photograph of his teen-age sister who he said was killed by a sniper early this year.

Other people in Naamani's building sat in corridors for more than an hour after the last explosion. No one in the building was injured.

Also today, at least three people in Israeli-controlled south Lebanon were killed by security forces who fired weapons on demonstrators hurling stones at them. Israeli military sources in Tel Aviv said the shots were fired by Israeli-backed Lebanese militiamen, and that three people were killed and 10 wounded. But witness reports received in Beirut said at least six people were killed by Israeli soldiers who stormed the village of Jibchit and fired at demonstrators.

In the bombing at American University, an explosive charge with a timing device went off in an empty classroom at 8:20 a.m.

The university has been the target of occasional bomb attacks in the past, most recently late last year when an explosive charge went off in a restroom, also injuring no one. The university's president, Malcolm Kerr, was assassinated in January.

Salvador Counting

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Early official returns from El Salvador's presidential election showed centrist Jose Napoleon Duarte leading his right-wing opponent Roberto d'Aubuisson today — but not by enough to avoid a runoff.

Election officials said the count, delayed by two days, might be finished on Friday.

Duarte and d'Aubuisso, both claim they could end the country's 4½-year-old civil war. But Ruben Zamora, a spokesman for the leftist rebels, declared Tuesday: "The war continues, and with zero or 40 elections nothing will be resolved."

With 15 percent of the vote counted early Wednesday, Duarte was leading with 70,576 votes, or 37.5 percent, to 61,759, or 32.8 percent, for d'Aubuisson.

Francisco Jose Guerrero, a conservative who could prove a key figure in the expected Duarte-d'Aubuisson runoff, was third with 44,540 votes or 23.6 percent. The five odher candidates split the remaining votes.

The total of 188,357 votes counted, out of an estimated 1.3 million cast, included the provinces of La Paz, Chalatenango, Ahuachapan and San Vicente. They included none from the three biggest cities in the country, where the Christian Democrats traditionally are strong.

Duarte and 400 supporters held a victory celebration at party headquarters in San Salvador.

Guerrillas knocked down power lines 65 miles east of the capital late Tuesday, blacking out power for 1.3 million people in the eastern third of the country, according to a spokesman for the power company in San Miguel province.

Green Campaigns In County Today

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green was campaigning in Pitt County today in his bid for the Democratic nomination as governor.

Talking of his campaign and his standing in polls, Green said "I feel more confident every day. The poll that counts is the one that is counted on May 8."

Voicing support for economic development if elected, Green said one thing that would help is the elimination of the state's manufacturers inventory tax. "It would be an incentive to attract new industry" he said, as well as an incentive for existing industry to expand.

However, Green suggested that the inventory tax should be phased out over a 5 year period, giving an "income tax credit" to manufacturers "so local governments will not suffer" the loss of revenue.

Green also suggested that the state's intangible tax, which he described as "a nuisance tax," also be phased out.

The lieutenant governor, acknowledging that many candidates for governor have raised the issue of education, said he has visited a number of schools and "haven't seen a crisis in education."

However, he did say suggest that many school buildings throughout the state need to be improved.

Green's first stop of the day was at the Bethel Pharmacy in Bethel. Then he toured the Procter & Gamble Paper Products Co. at Greenville, meeting employees and asking for their support in the May 8 primary.

Following lunch at Pete Jones' barbecue house in Ayden, Green was scheduled to return to Greenville for a visit to Mendenhall Student Center at East Carolinalina University, then tour the university medical school's Brody Medical Science Building before ending his campaigning in the county for the day with a visit to A.C. Monk and Company in Farmville.

Former Nun Has No Regrets Over Quitting To Keep Her Post

By JEFF MAYERS
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Many people thought Sister Agnes Mansour would back down a year ago when Detroit Archbishop Edmund Szoka ordered her to denounce public financing of abortions or quit as Michigan's welfare director.

But while members of religious orders in similar situations had yielded before, Ms. Mansour — who left the Sisters of Mercy in May — says today she had no choice but to resist Szoko by leaving her religious order.

"What was being asked of me would have compromised my integrity," she said an interview Feb. 13.

On Feb. 14, 1983, she said, Szoka told her in a private meeting he might have to withdraw his support of her right to run the Department of Social Services under Gov. James Blanchard.

Ten days later, Szoka called a news conference without notifying her and announced his decision.

After she sought clarification from Rome, the nun was told by the pontiff's representative, Bishop Anthony Bevilacqua, that Pope John Paul II supported Szoka's action.

Ms. Mansour, 52, said a public stand against Medicaid abortions would have been "totally inappropriate," and that eliminating public funding "could do more harm than good."

Although she personally opposed abortions, she said, she considered it unjust to deny the payments to poor women.

"I just couldn't" argue against Medicaid abortions, she said. "I don't regret anything."

Ms. Mansour's case, still hotly debated among church theologians, on the surface involved the morality of abortion — considered by the Roman Catholic church to be murder.

But Ms. Mansour, who was supported by the Sisters of Mercy, said the abortion issue was exaggerated and shrouded issues such as the place of a "political ministry," "the legitimate authority of the religious community and due process."

Also apparent is the former nun's feeling that her present status has to do with her sex.

She drinks from a coffee mug that upright reads: "When God created man ..." Tilted back, the bottom says: "... She was joking."

The church is "chauvinistic ... by its structure," Ms. Mansour said. "Let's face it — most institutions are chauvinistic ... In other words, women are simply not in positions of power, authority or decision-making."

She said she thinks the pope lacks "a full understanding or sense ... of religious women in the United States."

John Dempsey, a Roman Catholic layman who preceded Ms. Mansour in the Michigan post, never was confronted over the abortion issue. In January, another Sister of Mercy — Arlene Violet — quit her order to run for attorney general in Rhode Island.

Ms. Mansour noted that the Rev. Robert Drinan, a Jesuit from Massachusetts, opted not to seek re-election to Congress after an order from the church, and Sister Mary Madonna Ashton heads Minnesota's health department.

"Where the problem comes in is that our new canons give so much authority to the local bishop," she said. "From that standpoint, you're always going to have a man make the final decision."

Szoka and Bevilacqua, now bishop of Pittsburgh, declined interviews.

Ms. Mansour, who heads Michigan's largest agency — with an annual budget over $2 billion — is generally cheerful. The former president of Detroit's Mercy College enjoys reading, watching sports and playing poker or bridge after long hours at work.

But she is subdued when discussing her separation from the Sisters of Mercy, based in suburban Farmington Hills. She said last May that "in my heart, I'm still a nun," and has been giving her $58,400 salary to the order. She receives a stipend for living expenses.

"I'm probably going to have to do something about that because I don't have a secure future at all," she said. "What is happening is that they (the church hierarchy) are creating every possible obstactle to my ever returning.

"I have a very strong commitment to service. I'm not after the money, the power, the position. That hasn't changed. You can do that (serve the poor) in or out of the religious communities.

"I still have great affection, respect ... for the Sisters of Mercy, but I'm not a Sister of Mercy any more."

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I was thumbing through one of those catalogues of gadgets when the words caught my eye, "NEVER WASTE ANOTHER MINUTE SEARCHING FOR YOUR CAR KEYS!"

Are they serious? In the years I have piffled away looking for the keys to my car, I could have qualified for the downhill slalom in the Olympics. I could have written "Gone with the Wind" in longhand. I could have fixed myself up and married above me. I could have built a Porsche from a kit.

Never has one woman spent so much time pursuing something that cannot walk and is always in the same place in which she left it. And I'll bet you cannot guess how many years in therapy it has taken me to admit that!

For a long time, I honestly thought I was losing my grip. The kids would be in the car fighting over the windows and I'd be running around like a crazy person trying to find the car keys. They always turned up, but in the most unlikely places. I found them once in the soap dish in the shower, on top of the beach towels in the linen closet, in a diaper on the baby, in the sewing basket, the clothes hamper, stored with the Christmas tree lights and in the yellow pages on the refrigeration page. I once found them in a milk carton in the garbage can.

No one could convince me those little suckers weren't mobile.

My husband bought me one of those little wooden plaques with hooks to hang by the door that said "KEYS" on it. I remember laughing and saying, "Who are we kidding here? You know and I know that little hook can't keep keys from walking!"

In time, reason returned. I think it occurred the day I had all the kids at the shopping center and forgot on which color level I parked the car. One of them said, "Mom not only can't find her car keys, she can't even find the car!"

I know now that it's me. If God had meant for me to drive a car, He would have given me ignition key fingers. It's not going to get any better. I will go through life emptying out sofa cushions, dumping handbags in the middle of the floor and standing in the middle of a room shouting, "If I have to come and get you, you'll be sorry!"

But when I saw, "NEVER WASTE ANOTHER MINUTE SEARCHING FOR YOUR CAR KEYS," I became a believer again. The gadget comes in two parts, a finder and a receiver. The key ring emits an electronic beep and flaehes a light for six seconds when I'm within 12-15 feet of it with the finder.

That little gadget is going to save my sanity — just as soon as I find my car keys to attach to the receiver...

Dear Abby

Friend Not Responsible To Share Your Loss

DEAR ABBY: Last summer before going to Paris, I was asked by a friend of mine to buy her a souvenir gold Eiffel Tower charm. She wanted to give me her credit card to charge it on, but I told her that I would pay for it myself and she could pay me back.

I found the charm she wanted and bought it. It came to $61.50 in American money. (I kept the sales slip.)

Well, someone stole the charm from me while I was still in Paris, so when I returned home, I showed the friend the sales slip, explained that I had bought the charm for her, but it had been stolen. Then I asked her to share half the loss with me since I had bought it as a favor to her. She refused to share the loss, saying she didn't feel she owed me anything.

Now our relationship is strained. Do you think I should have suffered the entire loss? Or do you think she should have gone 50-50 with me?

NO LONGER FRIENDS

DEAR NO: You were most accomodating to have purchased the charm as a favor to your friend. But since it was never delivered to her, I see no reason why she should go 50-50 on the loss. It would have been generous had she offered, but you were out of line to suggest it.

•••

DEAR ABBY: I'm a girl of 14. I always knew I'd wind up writing to you sooner or later, but I was betting on later.

Five months ago while on vacation, I met this guy I'll call Scott and we fell in love. You'll probably say that I'm too young to know what love is. Well, you're wrong! It happened real fast. Just 3 1/2 hours after we met, we were making love. I never dreamed of going that far, but I couldn't help myself. He's 16. Three days later he told me it was all over between us.

After that, I started doing all kinds of crazy things like drinking, smoking, stealing and even doing drugs. Then I met this guy I'll call Kevin. He's everything I want, but I'm scared the same thing will happen with him that happened with Scott.

My parents are very old-fashioned. They won't let me have Kevin over to the house and they won't let me go to the mall to see him. I know I'm capable of handling myself, but my parents don't think so. How can I convince them that I am really more grown up than they think? They would kill me if they knew I had already experienced love.

Please, Abby, help me prove to my parents that I am mature and responsible. Sign me...

GROWN UP AT 14

DEAR GROWN UP: You can prove to your parents that you are mature and responsible by acting that way. So far, you have proven that you are not. Having experienced "love" (in your case it would be more accurately described as "sex") does not make you mature. Mature people make responsible choices and have no need to sneak and lie.

Your parents love you and they don't want to see you hurt. They are your friends, not your enemies.

Get back on the right track before you end up in serious trouble.

•••

DEAR ABBY: I know how "Proud Mama (and Grandma, Too)" feels. I had one in college and one in diapers at the same time. When strangers learn the baby I'm holding is not my grandchild but my child, they say, "I don't know how you can stand it. I'm glad she's yours and not mine."

I smile and say, "That's why God gave her to me and not to you."

FIRST PAPER SACKS

CHICAGO (AP) — Paper was first used to store and ship commodities in 1902 when Joseph Cornell invented a bag to ship salt.

The sacks used paper made from old rope, string, burlap and sisal in various combinations, depending on the strength required. Shipping sacks previously had been made of burlap and cotton.

Now, paper is the primary material, according to St. Regis, a paper sack maker, which acquired Cornell's company in 1929.

We've Had Enough

Supporters say the "organized prayer in public schools amendment" is not dead; that it will be fought over again.

We hope they're wrong.

The campaign was an obvious effort to override the Supreme Court's interpretation of the Constitution, not unlike congressional maneuvers to override functions of the administrative branch (which the high court rebuffed, too).

There's no doubt in our mind the effort was also motivated with the idea of votes it might generate...additional grounds for revulsion among beholders.

We are told opinion surveys showed "80 percent or more" of the nation backed prayer in public schools, but yet to read as to what organization did the polling nor how questions were phrased; in short, a most unreliable basis for so drastic a step as supporting a constitutional amendment.

Members of the House should proffer their own prayers (of thanksgiving) they were spared sharing the ordeal to which their brethren in the Senate were subjected. It was not pretty.

Fueling Our Boom

If anyone wonders how the Greenvillle area boom is being fueled, he only has to look at the boomingest area of all — the Pitt County Memorial Hospital and ECU Medical School complex.

Construction has been underway there constantly since the first spade of dirt was turned and there is no end in sight.

Even now work is underway on various projects including a new emergency department, additional radiology and surgery space and a radiation therapy center. Major new projects are projected for the future.

The series of additions and improvements at the medical complex regularly swell the new construction totals for Greenville and Pitt County, and it means that a superior medical center is being assembled to serve the needs of Eastern North Carolina people.

A $40 Million Quarterback Question

All I know about sports is what I read in the newspaper. The other day headlines bannered the signing of a Brigham Young quarterback, Steve Young, for $40 million by the Los Angeles Express, USFL franchised football team.

Details of the contract varied in different sports pages as to how the money would be paid. The one story I read said the payout would be over a period of 43 years. The article did not indicate whether Mr. Young would have to play for 43 years or not. But I can't believe any professional football owner shelling out 40 million bucks would not expect quarterback to play out the full life of his contract.

Since Young is now 24 years old I can see him playing up to his reputation for the first 15 years.

But then things could start getting a little tough, when he approaches the 40 mark.

The first sign that he isn't the quarterback he used to be might come in key game in 1999 against the Chicago Blitz. Young is intercepted for the fourth time and his coach is steaming mad.

"What happened?" the coach screams at him.

"I don't know. My shoulder seems to hurt. I could use a few weeks off."

"We can't give a $40 million quarterback a few weeks off. You're costing us so much money we can't afford a backup quarterback. Now you go out there when we get the ball again and get us three touchdowns."

Ten years later Young, at 50, his knees having been operated on 14 times, hobbles on the field. He is sacked nine times. A new coach is frothing at the mouth.

"Why didn't you scramble on that last play?" the coach cries.

"I tried to but I just don't seem to have the moves I used to," Young says.

"Don't give me that. You're the highest-paid quarterback in football. We wouldn't have signed you if we thought you couldn't scramble."

"My knees are killing me."

"We'll give you another operation when the season is over. But right now you better play football, or we'll trade you to the Alaska Eskimos. The owner didn't pay 40 million bucks to see his quarterback fall all over the ground."

Ten years later, at 60, Young, with two artificial knees, two artificial hips and one artificial shoulder, is still calling signals for the Los Angeles Express. He calls for a screen pass in the huddle, and then tries to hand off the ball to his fullback, whose assignment is to block tight end. The ball drops to the ground, Tampa recovers and goes in for the score.

This is too much for the owner of the Los Angeles Express who rushes down from his box and starts chewing out Young.

"What are you doing to me?" the owner demands.

"I'm sorry, sir. It's just that it's getting harder and harder for me to remember the plays."

"That's what you're being paid for. Do you think I shelled out $40 million for a quarterback that doesn't even study his play book?"

"I study it, but I forget. Sir, is there any chance of getting out of my contract?"

"A contract's a contract. You've still got eight years to go. I've got a lot of money invested in you, Young, and I'm not going to let you go now, just when you're hitting your prime."

Eight years later, it's Young's last game.

He has had two cataract operations, a pacemaker implant, a kidney transplant, and is taken in and out of the game in a wheelchair.

Two linemen have been assigned to hold him up when he gets the ball. On the first play the entire defensive line of the Georgia Gorillas breaks through and smashes Young to the ground.

When he doesn't get up after five minutes, the Express sends out the paramedics who wheel him off the field in a stretcher. As they work over him, the reporters say to the owner, "Was he worth $40 million?"

"In retrospect probably not. But you never know about these things until you play the guy for awhile.

Voters Show Volatility

RALEIGH — Over the past six years, a new phenomenon has developed in American politics. Voters have showed an incredible "volatility" in the days preceding Election Day. Across the country, races have taken wild swings in the closing days as candidates came from far down in the polls to win, or fell from high up in the polls to lose.

The best known example of this volatility was President Reagan's 1980 win. Remember that just one week before that election, on the night of the Reagan-Carter debate, the polls — both Democratic and Republican — were showing the two as dead even. In the next seven days, voter opinion shifted dramatically and Reagan won by a landslide. (In North Carolina, John East made up an incredible amount of ground in the closing days of the 1980 campaign to win a Senate seat and Ike Andrews did the same to keep his congressional seat in 1982.)

Pat Cadell was Carter's pollster and, through his daily polls, saw that shift coming in 1980. As pollster for Colorado Sen. Gary Hart this year, he's also seen that Democrat skyrocket from unknown to serious presidential contender in a matter of weeks. Cadell, who is polling for the gubernatorial campaign of Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, was in Raleigh recently and spoke about volatility during a press conference.

Volatility is not a phenomenon reserved for federal races, he said. Nationally, candidates for state, loal and federal offices have experienced sudden and significant shifts in their popularity with the voters. Conservatives who used tough negative advertising were the first beneficiaries, in 1978, he said.

Now, a liberal is as likely as a conservative to be the beneficiary of this volatility. The shift in voter sentiment doesn't come from any distinguishable demographic, geographic or political group, Cadell said. It's really a broad-based trend. The sudden surge of new support for a candidate, he said, comes both from voters who've been waiting until the final days to decide who'll they'll vote for and from people who simply change their minds.

Cadell said three factors explain these sudden shifts. First, "attachments to party ideology are not very well anchored." The number of die-hard party members has dwindled. Fewer people are certain to vote for their party's nominee, or for the candidate endorsed by their union, trade association or local political leader.

Secondly, Cadell said, television has taken on an expanded role in American political life. The candidates spend a fortune bombarding voters with a carefully manicured impression of themselves. The networks cover the horserace between the candidates, treating politics like a circus. The total effect, Cadell said, is that the voter sees things which causes him to change his mind much more quickly than in the past.

Finally, the voters have become increasingly unsure that the political process will deliver. They're ready for change, to throw the rascals out and start over again with a whole new group of leaders.

Will North Carolina experience volatility in its 1984 races? Cadell said the race between Jesse Helms and Jim Hunt for the U.S. Senate has already shown wide swings in the polls. He said he's sure people will keep changing from one candidate to another in that race.

While he was speaking, another pollster, Walter DeVries of Wrightsville Beach, was releasing a poll which indicated the presidential race here has already taken a sudden change of course. Hart, who was a polling blip just weeks ago, is now the favorite of Democratic voters, DeVries said.

Intolerable Type

NEW YORK (AP) — The executive, highly successful in his job with a blue-chip company, was asked about a former boss. "He was a living snake and a pathological liar," he replied.

Said another executive about his former boss: "Being wrong never slowed him down." And another: "He was a little dictator . .. other people making decisions was an affront to him."

All three worked at one time for intolerable bosses, and not only survived but thrived, in the process learning lessons that others might apply to coping with their own seemingly intolerable situations.

Millions of workers have them: Snakes in The Grass, Attilas, Heel-Grinders, Egotists, Dodgers, Business Incompetents, Detail Drones, Slobs and the like. Some bosses might even be doubly intolerable — snake and slob together.

But before pasting labels, consider this: The study leading to these portrayals also found that good bosses sometimes might have a terrible quality too. One was also called "mercurial" and a "total ass."

All these descriptions are based on interviews with successful executives of very large companies by researchers at the Center For Creative Leadership, a non-profit research and executive training institution in Greensboro, N.C.

Researchers Michael Lombardo and Morgan McCall, Jr. interviewed 73 managers as part of a larger, ongoing study of how executives grow and change in their careers. Of the 73, only 19 said they had never worked for an intolerable boss.

"The most frequently mentioned failing in our catalogue of sins was lack of basic integrity," said the authors. Those with the failing they called snakes, and 10 of the executives said they had worked under them.

The snakes, said the authors, "lied, failed to keep their word, used their authority to extract confidential information, created compromising situations for their subordinates, or otherwise couldn't be trusted."

Dictators, nine of them, made up the next largest group of intolerables, variously described by executives as little Napoleons, martinets, and ex-Marine types. For convenience, Lombaro and McCall call them Attilas.

"They were both the easiest to spot and the hardest to cope with," according to their report. "They simply sat on people." One executive related that his boss told him, "You have too much freedom and I will curtail it."

Heel-Grinders, of which there were eight, are described as having not even a modicum of human respect for those who report to them. Unforgiving and intolerant, they demean, humiliate and emasculate.

The authors called seven bosses Egotists "who already knew everything, wouldn't listen, and paraded their pomposity." Another seven rated the Dodger designation because they were unwilling or unable to make decisions.

"Just plain incompetent" was the tag awarded to six bosses who "didn't know what they were doing and apparently were afraid to admit it." Six more were found to be Detail Drones who made big issues out of little ones.

And finally, five Slobs were uncovered whose "personal habits, appearance, or prejudices were intolerable to others." One was a drunk; another slept on the job.

Giving Up On Schools?

WASHINGTON — Have young, upwardly mobile parents given up on the public school system? If they haven't done so yet, then statistics seem to reveal a trend in that direction.

Between 1975 and 1982, enrollment in the elementary grades of accredited private schools increased by 20 percent, according to the National Association of Independent Schools (NAIS). The National Center for Education Statistics contends that private school rolls in the pre-high-school level will have grown another 13 percent by 1992.

In contrast, Census Bureau projections indicate that the population of grade-school-age Americans is expected to grow only 6 percent between now and 1992 (the annual rate of expansion increases as 1992 approaches).

Meanwhile, education experts suggest that the enormous volume of applications indicates that the demand for private school placement is far greater than enrollment figures show.

Conditions in the public schools aren't the only factors prompting the decision of many baby-boom parents, most of whom attended taxpayer-supported institutions themselves, to go private. The movement toward having only one or two children has left more families with extra income for such discretionary expenses as education. Especially because of the upwardly mobile, private schools are proving a popular beneficiary of that enhanced affluence.

If the recent rhetoric about educational excellence takes root in deeds, trends could change. But a large share of baby-boom Americans, influenced by their own competitive experiences, apparently value private education as insurance in the job market and the continued prosperity of many private universities may underscore that thinking.) The net effect could be the loss of talented students from public schools that opponents of tuition tax credits have long predicted. Public schools may improve their product but lose customers nonetheless.

Speaking of demographics, Alaska has undergone a 19.2 percent increase in population since 1980. Nevada, Texas and Utah have gained about 11 percent, or more than three times the national average of 3.3 percent.

Meanwhile, the north central region has continued to lose people since 1980. Michigan, with a 2.1 percent drop in population, has experienced the largest net exodus.

Former deputy secretary of state Warren Christopher, now back at his Los Angeles law firm, contends the Reagan administration's request for $311 million in additional military aid for El Salvador is "obscene."

Speaking recently in Palo Alto, Calif., Christopher, who led the U.S. delegation that the negotiated the release of the American hostages in Iran, said El Salvador could not absorb such a level. He added that U.S. economic aid to El Salvador would be ineffective unless a moderate, reform-minded government is established in that country.

Now it's Rosalynn's turn. Jimmy Carter's wife has finished her memoirs, "First Lady from Plains," and publication is scheduled for early May. The former president's book, "Keeping Faith," appeared shortly before the mid-term elections in 1982, just in time to remind American voters of the Carter years.

Strength For Today

Napolean during his Egyptian campaign was listening one evening to a discussion carried on by a number of scientists and philosophers whom he had taken with him to study the ancient culture. These men agreed that natural laws in themselves were sufficient to account for creation without assuming the existence of a creator.

Napoleon simply pointed to the sky and said to his learned friends, "Gentlemen, who made this?"

Those people who say that the world made itself have the burden of proof resting upon them to show how every effect in the world apparently has a cause, but that all the effects put together are not related to a cause in the beginning.

The Bible sums it up succinctly in the statement, "The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God."

Await 'Crisis' On Mortgage Rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home mortgage rates are on the way up again and could reach 14 percent or more within 90 days, according to a panel of top mortgage bankers.

That's the rate where, historically, large numbers of potential homebuyers stop looking for homes.

James Wooten, president of Lomas & Nettleton Co. of Dallas, predicted Tuesday that fixed-rate mortages could be at 15 percent by the end of the year. Others forecast rates between 14 and 14½ percent.

Six members of the Mortgage Bankers Association briefed reporters and only one, Felix Beck, the association's president, saw signs that rates might decline as the year wears on.

Beck, president and chairman of Margaretten & Co., Inc. of Perth Amboy, N.J., said he thought today's rate of about 13½ percent for fixed-rate home mortgages is "very close to their top."

"Economic activity is not as strong as it looks in the first quarter," he said, and "all the talk and furor" aboud federal budget deficits will eventually be "psychologically good for the markets" allowing interest rates to decline.

Beck said, however, that if rates do go up, people unwilling to accept the uncertainty of adjustable-rate mortgages will stop shopping for homes.

Warren J. Dunn, association staff vice president for communications, said about a year ago that most mortgage lenders consider 14 percent a "threshold rate" over which "almost everyone is squeezed out of the mortgage market."

More than half of all mortgages written today have an adjustable rate. Beck said a decrease in rates will send borrowers back to fixed-rate loans because "Americans prefer being able to budget" their bills and know exactly what their monthly payments will be.

Lenders who offer very low rates to break down consumer resistance to adjustable-rate mortgages also concerned the panel.

"That chicken will have to come home to roost someday," said Robert Spiller, chairman and chief executive officer of the Boston Five Cents Savings Bank and first vice president of the association.

Congressional Club To Give Information

RALEIGH (AP) — The National Congressional Club and Jefferson Marketing Inc. says they will answer most of the questions the Federal Election Commission has been asking about their 1982 election year activities.

In an agreement filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Raleigh, the two organizations agreed to answer certain questions and provide documents sought by the FEC.

In return, the FEC agreed to withdraw some questions about which the organizations said they had no more information.

"We are agreeing to withdraw (some questions) because they have shown us that they have provided us with as much information as they have or have answered (the questions) to the best of their capability," said FEC spokeswoman Sharon Snyder.

The FEC went to court last month to force the club and Jefferson Marketing to answer questions about their operations during the 1982 election period.

The commission is investigating the two organizations for possible violations of federal campaign law.

One issue is whether Jefferson Marketing hides the operations of the National Congressional Club, which has raised millions of dollars over the last few years for conservative causes and candidates, including Sen. Jesse Helms.

The FEC requested the information last year while probing allegations of election law violations by the two organizations. The investigation is continuing and could result in civil penalties if the FEC determines that violations occurred.

The FEC investigation stems from a complaint by Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C. Rose contended that Jefferson Marketing made illegal corporate contributions to his opponents by charging them less than the market rates for advertising, consulting and other campaign services.

If the two organizations provide answers to FEC questions within 20 days from Tuesday, the FEC will drop court action and the court hearing would be unnecessary, Ms. Snyder said.

In May, the FEC voted 4-2 that there were reasons to think the organizations had violated election laws. As part of its probe, the FEC subpoenaed information from the organizations twice last year.

The FEC ultimately filed a claim in federal court seeking a court order to compel disclosure.

The Proof Was In The Powder

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — "The "proof" is in the powder.

In Colonial days, the only way to determine how much alcohol was in liquor was to mix a sample with gunpowder and set fire to it. If it burned, it was "proved."

That's how the word "proof," which appears today on bottles of spirits, was born, according to Heublein Inc. One degree of "proof" equals one-half of one percent of alcohol. Thus, an 80 proof liquor contains 40 percent alcohol.

Council Votes Name School Superintendent

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina voters might not see a state school superintendent category on their ballots in the near future if a plan approved by a legislative committee is enacted.

The Public Education Policy Council voted Tuesday to approve a plan which would allow the appointment of a superintendent by the state Board of Education.

If approved by the General Assembly, the constitutional amendment would be submitted to voters in November 1986. The first restructured board would convene in 1987 and appoint the first superintendent to take office in 1989.

The state Board of Education now includes the lieutenant governor, the state treasurer and 11 members appointed by the governor.

Under the new plan, the 21-member board would consist of the lieutenant governor, the state treasurer, one member from each of the state's eight educational districts appointed by the governor and one member from each of the 11 congressional districts elected by the General Assembly.

Board members' terms would be shortened from eight to four years, with a maximum of two consecutive terms.

State Superintendent Craig Phillips said he opposes the plan because voters now have the right to choose the top spokesman for North Carolina schools. He said the proposal makes the board a "legislative creature" and throws off the balance of power between the branches of government.

"I hope they'll leave it (the system) alone because it will work and there are more important issues," Phillips said.

He said he doesn't think the call for change is directed at him.

"It has been an issue for a long time. It was an issue before Craig Phillips became superintendent," he said.

The council also asked the Legislature to significantly increase teachers' salaries and set other spending priorities totalling $50.3 million. Those priorities include more money for textbooks, special education programs, finance officers and maintenance directors. They ask the state to assume full funding for vocational education programs at the cost of $35 million.

The council's recommendations will go to the General Assembly during the short session this summer and the longer session that begins in January 1985. The group passed a resolution calling for the 1985 General Assembly to meet as a committee for the first 20 days of the session to devote more time to educational policy questions.

The council also voted to urge the Board of Education to outline at least five steps in a career growth program for classroom teachers. Criteria for advancement could include performance.

The program could be tested in at least one school unit in each of the state's eight educational districts beginning in the 1984-85 school year. A system is recommended for use statewide in 1987-88.

The council also recommended teachers get a year's sabbatical leave with pay although state Treasurer Harlan Boyles warned that such high-cost items could jeopardize the whole package.

The council asked the state Board of Education to develop a standard course of study to be offered to each North Carolina child and submitted to the General Assembly by Dec. 1.

The board was asked to specify maximum class sizes, staff requirements, facility requirements, necessary materials and other information to help legislators appropriate money.

In other recommendations, the council asked that:

— Counties pay for public school facilities and the state pay instructional expenses for current operations.

— The General Assembly clarify specific financial responsibilities of the state and local governments for schools.

— Legislative committees review laws on public education to reduce the number of statutes and determine which of them should be Board of Education regulations. The review should be complete by Feb. 1, 1985.

— A candidate for local superintendent must have been a principal in a North Carolina public school and have other credentials and educational prerequisites as the state Board of Education prescribes. The prerequisites must be outlined by Jan. 1, 1985.

— Until complete standards are adopted, a teacher must have at least four years of classroom teaching experience and a master's degree in education administration before applying to become a principal. The state Board of Education must develop a quality assurance program for administrators by Nov. 30, 1986.

— The state Board of Education develop a plan for maintaining the highest quality teacher education programs by Nov. 1, 1984.

— By Nov. 1, 1984, the state Board of Education recommend a method for providing loan and scholarship help to prospective teachers in areas of anticipated shortages.

— The state Board of Education develop a program of expanded on-the-job training for public school employees by Nov. 1, 1984.

— Before the 1985-86 school year starts, the state Board of Education develop criteria and procedures to encourage entry into the teaching profession by skilled workers in the private sector. Such workers will be required, however, to obtain teaching certification before contracting for a sixth year of service.

— Before the 1987-88 school year starts, the state Board of Education develop criteria and procedures to help people transfer between school units without being penalized by loss of status.

— The state Board of Education recommend to the Legislature by Feb. 1, 1985, a system for using formulas to determine the number of non-certified support personnel to be alloted to each local school unit.

Files Guilty Plea To Manslaughter

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) - A former Beaufort County nurse-anesthetist pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter after a witness testified Monday that she had often seen him under the influence of drugs on the job.

Glenn Milton Shearer pleaded guilty Tuesday to involuntary manslaughter in the death of surgical patient Mary Louise Simmons, and two counts of obtaining controlled substances by fraud.

Shearer had been charged with second-degree murder. He entered a plea bargain in Beaufort County Superior Court in the fifth day of the trial after his former girlfriend, Janice "Jo-Jo" Wiggins, testified that he told her of a fear that he "might have killed someone" after an operation.

In more testimony, a State Bureau of Investigation agent said Shearer turned over two syringes from his pocket during a May 20 arrest on drug charges. The arrest followed tips to the SBI from hospital personnel.

T.M. Nelson testified that Shearer told officers that drug abuse in his practice was common.

The 34-year-old Shearer stood motionless as he entered his pleas, following an hour-long conference between defense and prosecution lawyers and Judge Herbert O. Phillips III.

Shearer said in a Tuesday interview that he decided to enter the plea because he and his attorney did not think the jury could distinguish between the evidence of the alleged murder and the evidence of alleged drug use.

Under the agreement, charges against Shearer will be consolidated for sentencing. Both involuntary manslaughter and obtaining controlled substances by fraud carry maximum sentences of 10 years in prison, the judge said.

Mrs. Simmons, 73, of Washington, was at Beaufort County Hospital for an operation to amputate her foot. The operation took place last April 22 and she died May 8 without regaining consciousness.

The prosecution alleged that Shearer was under the influence of Demerol during the operation and failed to warn doctors for 30 minutes that the patient's blood pressure had dropped.

Funding Group Accepts Penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's 1980 campaign committee and a group that makes campaign contributions have agreed to pay $5,000 in penalties to settle charges they violated federal election laws, the Federal Election Commission says.

Commission spokesman Fred Eiland said Tuesday the 1980 Reagan for President committee will pay $4,000 and Citizens for the Republic will pay $1,000.

Ronald E. Robertson, attorney for both groups, said recently the case involved allegations that Citizens for the Republic made in-kind contributions to the Reagan committee in excess of the legal limit of $5,000.

The agreement did not specify by how much they exceeded the limit.

The investigation by the elections commission began after a group called the Committee for an Effective Congress complained that political action committees founded by several 1980 presidential candidates were affiliated with their formal campaigns.

Chooses To Die By Injection

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A 32-year-old former Eagle Scout convicted in the sex-murders of five boys has chosen lethal injection over a firing squad for his execution.

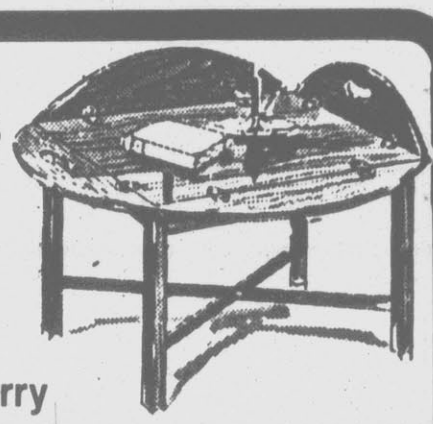

Arthur Bishop begged forgiveness from the families of his victims before Judge Jay Banks approved a jury's death sentence Tuesday. Banks set May 3 as the execution date, but the trial and sentence is subject to review by the Utah Supreme Court.

Bishop was convicted March 19 in the slayings between 1979 and 1983.

Bureaucracy Closing In

BY MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

GREENHAM COMMON, England (AP) — Defiant women protesters have endured cold, jail terms, fines, court injunctions and demolition squads for 2½ years in makeshift camps outside this cruise missile base.

But bureaucracy, with bulldozers looming behind, is tightening its control around the world's best-known "peace camp." Frustrated officials hope to drive away the women whom guards, patrol dogs and barbed wire have failed to intimidate.

"I think they're finally going to throw the book at us this time," said Hazel Pegg, 24, a college dropout who came here 15 months ago. "But we won't go. Some women may give up, but others will come."

Ms. Pegg was with 20 other women wearing jeans and muddy boots as they boiled lunchtime eggs over a fire outside the main gate of the U.S. Air Force base where U.S. nuclear-tipped cruise missiles are deploied.

Established Sept. 5, 1981, after NATO announced its plans to deploy 96 U.S. cruise missiles at the base 50 miles west of London, the camp is the oldest of seven strung round the 9-mile perimeter fence. The camps — clusters of plastic sheeting, broken furniture, fluttering peace symbols and overflowing garbage cans — have rotating populations of between a half-dozen and 50 women.

The women's protest is based on a combination of pacifism, anti-nuclear sentiment and feminism; men are not permitted to join.

Since the protest began, about 1,500 women have been fined, mainly for breaking into the base or blocking roads, Ms. Pegg estimated, and another 500 jailed for between a week and a month.

In addition to the 96 missiles at Greenham Common, another 64 cruise missiles are scheduled to be deployed at Molesworth near Cambridge by 1988. The missiles are part of the total of 572 cruise and Pershing 2 mid-range nuclear missiles NATO has agreed to deploy in Britain, West Germany, Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands to counter Soviet SS-20s already in place in Eastern Europe.

Most of the camps are on land owned either by the local Newbury District Council or the larger Berkshire County Council, which have stepped up attempts to evict the women since Feb. 25 when the councils decided on joint action.

The women at the main gate responded by making sure that part of their camp was on land owned by the Department of Transport, a tactic which for a time left them immune to eviction threats.

But in what officials said was a coincidence and what the women called an orchestrated squeeze, the Transport Department has announced plans to start a $217,500 road-widening project on its land.

On March 23 the department got a court injunction ordering the women to leave by April 2 when, officials said, bailiffs will evict them and the bulldozers move in.

Two wardens hired by Newbury council have made forays to tear down the women's plastic shelters, sometimes dumping their possessions in garbage trucks. But the women returned, often putting up new shelters after spending a night in the open.

"I can't say whether it's working or not," Newbury Council spokesman John Page said of the latest series of evictions. "But we're trying to protect our property."

A group of 10 protesters at a camp half a mile from the main gate said they've been evicted eight times in two weeks.

"They usually give us five minutes to collect our clothes and things. Sometimes we just move them across the road, sometimes into a car," said Christine Drake, 44.

She's been jailed three times for break-ins and demonstrations and is about to lose custody to her former husband of her three children she left with her sister in northern England.

The joint push against the women's camps by the councils, both controlled by the ruling Conservative Party, appears to have had little effect so far.

But the Transport Department has said it means business. "We know what a sensitive issue this is and it's just not true to say we're doing it in conspiracy with the councils," said spokeswoman Trudy Shah.

"We need the land. If they don't go, bailiffs will move them physically. Don't ask me how they'll do it, but we're going to start work on April 2 or thereafter," she said.

Last month, the Defense Ministry discovered it owns a patch of land on which one camp is located. "We're considering what to do ... we'll do something," said a spokesman.

"We don't really know what's going to happen now either, but somehow it'll continue," said American Teresa Fitzgibbon, 47, of Trenton, N.J., a former teacher who splits her time between her apartment in London and the camps.

Rose Senior Awarded A Poteat Scholarship

Lewis Harvey Roberson, a senior at J.H. Rose High School, has been awarded a Poteat Scholarship at Wake Forest University for school year 1984-85.

The Poteat Scholarships, established in 1981, are named for Dr. William Louis Poteat, president of Wake Forest College from 1905 to 1927. They are awarded to a North Carolina Baptist student in each of the 11 congressional districts, are valued at $2,000 and will be renewed on the basis of a satisfactory academic and citizenship record.

Roberson, the son of Pauline Bell Roberson, is a member of the National Honor Society, the Rose marching band, and the debate, science and computer clubs. He was one of six students chosen to take part in a science honors program at the East Carolina University Medical School, and has attended Governor's School and the Brevard Music Camp.

He is a member of Memorial Baptist Church and the adult choir.

Will Apply Good Hand

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Imagine a neat pile of one-inch boards 750 feet high, looming higher than two football fields stretched end-to-end in the air.

Now imagine cutting through them all — with your bare hands.

One by one, at a rate of about eight boards per minute, for 24 hours, Dale Craig, an expert at tae kwan do, a Korean martial arts form, plans to break 10,000 of them with his right hand.

The 24-hour event Friday, at the Omaha Home Show at City Auditorium, is an effort to raise money for the local chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

The 31-year-old Omahan has won several national competitions and holds records for concrete block as well as wood breaking.

He holds the national board-breaking record — 7,369 boards in 1981, also done for charity.

With MS pledges being sought for the number of boards Craig breaks at the home show, the chapter hopes to equal that record.

In 1981, he broke 40 inches of concrete at a hospital fund-raising event.

Knowing he doesn't have his work cut out for him, Craig plans to take five-minute ice breaks every hour when he'll plunge his hand into a bucket of ice water to control the swelling.

During past timber-splitting sprees, Craig says his hand swelled to two or three times its usual size.

He'll start Friday at 5 p.m. and figures he'll be done about that time Saturday.

"Always after these, I plan on spending a day in the hospital to check my blood pressure and vital signs," Craig said.

Say Inlet Costs Outweigh Value

WILMINGTON (AP) — Stabilizing Lockwood's Folly Inlet with a $14.1 million pair of jetties would not be worth the expense of construction and maintenance, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has told Brunswick County officials and residents backing the project.

Wayne Hanson, Wilmington district engineer, announced the decision in a letter to the Lockwood's Folly Inlet Stabilization and Erosion Committee on March 13.

The corps estimated that the construction would cost $14.1 million, with annual maintenance expenses of $2.2 million. Projected benefits would amount to only $1.1 million, falling short of the one-to-one cost-benefit ratio needed to justify such a project, Hanson said.

Reprieve Given Cottage Industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cottage industry of home-knitting can stay in business for at least another 120 days, Labor Secretary Ray Donovan has ruled.

Donovan said his ruling, which conflicts with a federal court ban on such work, was aimed at helping those who knit for a living in their homes remain in business. Many are Vermont women who make ski caps and sweaters.

The home-knitting industry was banned from 1943 until 1981, when the Reagan administration lifted the restriction. It was reimposed by the U.S. Court of Appeals here in November at the request of the 110,000-member International Ladies Garment Workers Union, which is expected to seek to overturn Donovan's decision.

Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, 89, Dies In Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Benjamin E. Mays, a nationally known civil rights leader and educator who once said he "never let race beat me down," died today at an Atlanta hospital. He was 89.

The former president of Morehouse College "had been in declining health for some time" and was admitted to Hughes Spalding Community Hospital on Sunday, said hospital spokesman Charles Delane. He died about 7:20 a.m.

Mays, who also was a former president of the Atlanta Board of Education, had been treated at the hospital in January for pneumonia.

Born Aug. 1, 1894, in Epworth, S.C., Mays was the son of a black man born nine years before the Emancipation Proclamation.

During his lifetime, Mays received many honors, including at least 45 honorary degrees in law, divinity and the humanities from colleges and universities across the nation, and more than 200 awards and plaques.

He served on the boards of many colleges and the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Social Change in Atlanta.

One of his most recent honors was his induction in January into the South Carolina Hall of Fame, when former President Jimmy Carter said in a videotape presentation that Mays was "a credit to the Southland and he's a credit to America and the world."

Mays was a champion of the civil rights movement in the South and a quiet but persistent thorn in the white conscience.

In his 27 years as president of Morehouse College, he met regularly with students.

His most famous student was the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., the civil rights leader who was assassinated on April 4, 1968. At one time King called Mays "my spiritual mentor and my intellectual father." On the day of King's funeral, Mays eulogized King as a son, "so close and so precious was he to me."

Georgia state Sen. Julian Bond, another of Mays' students, said at the South Carolina ceremony, "I am kneeling at the feet of a giant. Making friends of enemies has been a lifelong mission of Benjamin Mays."

In March 1960, a group of Atlanta University students told Mays they planned to begin sit-ins designed to open lunch counters to blacks. The confrontation spread to the schools, where the struggle to integrate in Georgia dragged on for 18 months.

In 1961, Mays cited the admittance of two black students to the University of Georgia as the end of diehard resistance to integrated schools. At the same time, he urged black colleges to recruit whites.

Mays retired from Morehouse in 1967 and was elected to the Atlanta Board of Education at the age of 75. In 1970, he was elected chairman of the school board. He stepped down from that post in 1981.

He was an honor graduate of Bates College in Lewiston, Maine, and received his master's degree and Ph.D. from the University of Chicago. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Mays also was the author of many books, including "Born to Rebel," a study covering three-quarters of a century of black-white relations in the United States.

Volcano Lady Has Gin Gift For Pele

HILO, Hawaii (AP) — When Hawaii's volcanoes heat up, 76-year-old Leatrice Ballesteros reaches for her gin bottle — not to calm her nerves, but to offer as a placating gift to the islands' legendary volcano goddess Pele.

For almost 35 years, Mrs. Ballesteros has been making such offerings to Pele, who according to folklore governs eruptions like the one this week at Mauna Loa.

Pele, says Mrs. Ballesteros, prefers gin or "any of the good brands of whiskey," so that's what she usually provides. She also offers Hawaiian and Japanese food.

"I have the feeling that she wants to drink," Mrs. Ballesteros said.

As Mauna Loa ended a nine-year slumber and roared to life this week, Mrs. Ballesteros was one of the first people to arrive at Hilo Airport, seeking a flight over the eruption site. Dressed in a bright red muumuu and red shoes and stockings — "Even my unders are red," she said — she went aloft in a small plane and tossed her gifts into the roiling cauldron below.

"I've come to respect her," Mrs. Ballesteros said of the volcano goddess. "I'm happy because maybe I serve God and Madame Pele. I'm a happy and healthy woman."

Born near the town of Volcano in 1907, Mrs. Ballesteros now lives on the island of Oahu, where she is considered a spiritual healer. She says people frequently are referred to her for help with ailments believed related to the volcano goddess.

Often, she said, she finds that they have taken something from the volcano area that they must return. After they return the stone or whatever they have taken the pain disappears, she claimed.

by the Legislature would be eligible to run for seats representing their old districts if they change their place of residence before they refile as candidates.

"I got that ruling yesterday," Martin said this morning. "If I move to the new (9th) district (which now includes the remaining townships in Pitt County, most of Beaufort County, and several townships in Martin County), I will be eligible for running. If I stay in Bethel, I can't run in the 9th, but I can run in the 6th."

In light of the recent redistricting, Martin said "the constitutional requirement" that candidates live in their districts for a year before their election "is not being enforced."

Before making a decision, Martin said "I'm going to see what people think ... kind of pass it around" and "wait and absorb" the ruling by the attorney general.

"I'm just reflecting on a decision. I don't know what to do."

Martin is presently serving his sixth term as a member of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners. Now chairman of the board, he is a member of the board of directors of both the N.C. Association of County Commissioners and the National Association of County Officials.

A Season For Signs

GREENSBORO (AP) — Every election year, Donald Whitaker can depend upon a fresh crop of illegal political signs.

For Greensboro's chief code enforcement officer, the signs are more than a minor irritation. Whitaker and Archie Andrews, assistant planning director for code enforcement, have nursing homes and day-care centers to inspect, and they are charged with seeing that zoning ordinances are obeyed.

"This may be a minor thing to some people," Whitaker says, "but to others it's major, especially if one of these signs blows into your yard. And if we just allowed signs to be put anywhere, well, I think the city would look kind of junky."

The culprets, Whitaker says, are the overzealous supporters who are trying to get their candidate some name recognition.

"During the last election we went out along Wendover and Church (streets) and took down at least 100 signs," Whitaker says. "Lo and behold, we came back the next morning and there must have been twice as many there."

During the recent ACC basketball tournament, Andrews was present at the Greensboro Coliseum, but he wasn't enjoying the games.

"Edmisten's people had put up 150 signs on the streets leading to the coliseum," Andrews says. "They didn't have them up long before I came along and took them down."

Andrews and Whitaker say they realize that candidates and their supporters grumble about ordinances restricting their signs. They want to know what's wrong with a few campaign posters.

DR. JAMES HEMBY JR

WILSON — Dr. James B. Hemby Jr. will be inaugurated as the 10th president of Atlantic Christian College at 2 p.m. April 14 on the college campus. The ceremony will be open to the public.

Among those taking part will be Thomas J. Hackney Jr., chairman of the ACC Board of Trustees, Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., and UNC president William C. Friday.

An Ayden native, Hemby is the son of Mrs. Mavis Parker Hemby and the late James B. Hemby. He is a member of the First Christian Church of Wilson, and is married to the former Joan Edwards. They have three sons.

Hemby graduated from Atlantic Christian College in 1955, and began his career as an educator there in 1959. He also holds degrees from Vanderbilt University Divinity School and Texas Christian University. Before returning to ACC in 1965, he taught at TCU and at Memphis State University.

Currently, Hemby serves as director of the North Carolina Writing Project with sites at eight colleges and universities. He was chairman of the N.C. Writers' Conference in 1982-83 and is president-elect of the N. C. Literary and Historical Association. He also heads the N.C. Competency Test Commission.

Drug Role Charged 7

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A federal jury has handed down seven indictments stemming from an investigation into drug trafficking in Wilkes County that includes multi-million dollar trades and international connections, U.S. Attorney Charles Brewer said.

Six of the seven indictments remain sealed for fear that the defendants may flee, but the seventh names Garvey Martin Cheek Jr., a Wilkes County grocer who is serving a seven-year prison term for tax evasion, Brewer said Tuesday.

Cheek is charged with 10 counts of illegal drug sales and possession, distribution and conspiracy involving marijuana and cocaine, which could net him a maximum prison term of life or 110 years and fines totaling $575,000.

Brewer said he expects 50 or more indictments to follow, most of which involve more serious charges.

"These are not the glamour cases," Brewer said. "They are not the biggest indictments we expect to get."

Brewer said the grand jury studied these cases first because a five-year statute of limitations was nearing.

Brewer declined to discuss where the drugs originated or their street value, fearing defendants not in custody would identify themselves and leave the country.

One of the drug organizations being investigated in Wilkes County sold in 1980 about $25 million worth of marijuana, $10 million worth of methaqualone and $1.2 million worth of cocaine, according to testimony at a U.S. Senate hearing in Charlotte this fall.

The investigation was prompted in 1981 when a West Virginia grand jury investigation into drug trafficking there pointed to Wilkes County, Brewer said.

"There is a three-fold purpose for the dinner," committee chairman Betty Speir said. "It is held to honor those who have rendered extraordinary service to the hospital, to bring to community attention the exciting things that are happening at the hospital, and to raise money to buy special equipment and fill special needs at the hospital."

The event, the Foundation's major fund-raising project for the year, will include dinner followed by entertainment by the Eastern Carolina chapter of Sweet Adelines Inc. Awards will be presented to individuals and/or groups deemed to have significantly supported the hospital during the year.

Tickets, which cost $35 per person, may be purchased from Foundation and gifts committee members or from the hospital's community relations Office. These contributions are tax-deductible. For more information, call 757-4869.

'Drowned' Boy Is Soon Going Home

CHICAGO (AP) — Jimmy Tontlewicz, the 4-year-old boy who has made a "miraculous" recovery from a 20-minute plunge in icy Lake Michigan that left him "clinically dead," may be able to leave the hospital in two to three weeks, doctors say.

Dr. Paulette Harar, the boy's physician at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago, said Tuesday that Jimmy had regained near-normal physical fitness and faculties.

"He's showing a gradual, slow improvement and will probably return to his previous abilities," she said of Jimmy, whose plucky recuperation from a "clinically dead" state spurred letters and offers of financial assistance from around the country.

She said Jimmy's speech, vocabulary, body control and strength were "appropriate" and that his progress since the Jan. 15 accident had been "miraculous."

Before an audience of reporters Tuesday, Jimmy answered questions quickly and without a stammer. He walked easily and wrestled a bit with a roommate, 5-year-old Kenneth Thurmon.

But Jimmy's attention span was still just seconds long and he got confused when asked to do a series of tasks.

Jimmy fell into the lake while retrieving a sled during an outing with his father, and he remained underwater for more than 20 minutes before being fished out by divers. Jimmy was slowly brought out of a "clinically dead" state over a two-week period.

Doctors say they believe the extreme cold temperature of the lake water minimized damage to Jimmy's brain and helped save his life.

"I think he's doing great and he will be all right," said Jimmy's mother, Kathy. "Jimmy got to visit his grandmother (last weekend) and stayed overnight there."

It was his first night out of the hospital since the accident.

Fifteen Await Radio Licensing

RALEIGH (AP) — Fifteen North Carolina cities and towns are on a Federal Communications Commission list of proposed sites for FM radio stations that could widen on-the-air opportunities for minorities.

Once Considered Spiritual Flame

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Natural gas, which since World War II has been increasingly used as a fuel, was once considered a spiritual substance.

Ancient temples were built to worship the gods of fire at locations where seeping gas had accidentally ignited, according to Phillips Petroleum. Julius Caesar, the Roman emperor, knew of such a "burning spring" near Grenoble in southeastern France.

Wiggle Way To Slimness

PITTSBURGH (AP) — They're not the Rockettes and not nearly as pretty, but about 75 volunteer firefighters spend one or two nights a week kicking, bumping and grinding their way toward physical fitness in aerobics dance classes.

Dreams of slimness, agility and strengthened cardiovascular systems are what drives the firemen to don colorful legwarmers and sweat it out in syncopated agony at the Aerobic Center in Greensburg.

"We've got butchers, bakers, beggermen and thieves — all dancing," said Greensburg Fire Chief Ed Hutchinson, who shapes up during Monday and Wednesday night classes.

Hutchinson wants his men to beat the bulge so they can better battle blazes.

The chief, who admitted only to being "fiftyish," started 10 years ago with a fitness program for firemen that stressed running and jogging. It has since come to include basketball, racquetball and swimming.

But while the methods may change, his message continues: a healthy fireman is a better fireman.

"There is no job more strenuous than a fireman's job," Hutchinson said last week. "It's the highest-risk profession in the world. You start at nothing and go into high gear in seconds. There are more heart attacks among firemen, both professional and volunteer, than among any other profession."

The inspiration last October to add aerobic dancing to the firefighter activities came from Councilman Emil Peterinelli, a 29-year department veteran.

"During the winter months there isn't much activity," Peterinelli said. "The men try to play some basketball or racquetball, but it's nothing organized. I heard of aerobics and decided to try it."

Aware most of his men would scoff at "leotard dancing," Hutchinson worked to dispel any notion that aerobics was for "flakes and yo-yos."

"I picked out the 28 studs in the department for the first group because we had to prove something," he said. "Now that people around here have seen us on television — guys with beards and muscles sticking out of their T-shirts — they realize we're not a bunch of yo-yos."

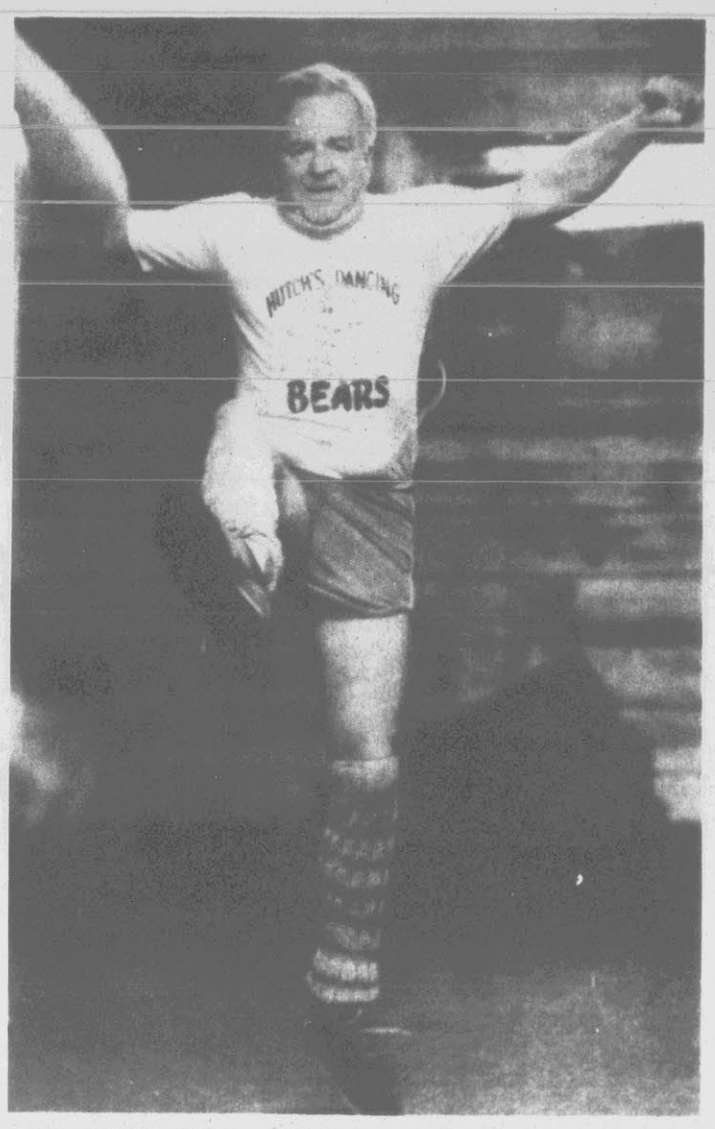

Within months, the group tripled in size and two more evenings of exercise were added. Now, three nights a week, passers-by can hear deep, throaty grunts over the high-pitched voice of singer Michael Jackson urging firemen to "Beat It."

"I sweat more in 45 minutes in this dance class than I do running eight to 10 miles on a hot summer day," Hutchinson said.

The firefighters range in age from 25 to 60, and keeping them interested sometimes means mixing laughs with the lifts.

"One teacher suggested we buy leg warmers and someone got out and bought everyone legwarmers," Hutchinson said. For St. Patrick's Day, he said, the plan was for green crepe-paper bowties and noses painted green. "The point is, you have to make it fun."

"Everybody said this was a girl's thing," Peterinelli added. "So one day I wore a tutu, leotards and a wig. This guy thought I looked pretty good from the back, but when I turned around and he saw me with a moustache, he had to laugh."

DANCING BEAR — Harvey Waugaman, assistant fire chief of volunteer firemen from Greensburg, Pa., kicks up a storm at an aerobic dance class which (it's hoped) will make firemen better and more efficient. (AP Laserphoto)

Oppose Investing In Mortgages

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department has announced it opposes a bill aimed at permitting large-scale investment of worker pension funds in home mortgages.

The measure would end the department's authority "to protect participants and beneficiaries of the plans," Robert A.G. Monks, administrator of the department's Office of Pension and Welfare Benefit Programs, told two Senate Finance subcommittees. He said retirement income should not be used to subsidize housing.

Sponsors of the bill, such as Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., say the 1974 Employee Retirement Income Security Act puts undue restrictions on how the $700 billion in worker pension funds may be used, and that his measure would promote housing without "jeopardizing anybody's investment."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened higher today, adding to Tuesday's slight gains, as some interest rate jitters faded.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 3.25 points to 1,157.56 in the opening half hour. More than four stocks rose in price for every three that fell in the early going on the New York Stock Exchange.

Stocks had been under pressure in recent weeks because of worries that rapid economic growth would prod the Federal Reserve to adopt a more restrictive anti-inflation policy, pushing interest rates higher. High interest rates make returns more attractive on bonds than stocks and also threaten to curb the economy's expansion.

Fed policymakers met for two days earlier this week to review strategy, but, as usual, the session was held behind closed doors and no decisions were made public.

Yet despite the uncertainty about the Fed's advance and even though the Treasury Department is in the midst of the sale of $15 billion in notes and bonds, most interest rates have held sdeady, with some short-term rates declining this week.

Meanwhile, bank stocks advanced despite a threat that Argentina will miss a Saturday deadline for making $650 million in interest payments on its foreign loans. U.S. banks holding the loans would have to re- duce profit to reflect the increase in nonperforming loans on their books.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said Tuesday that the government is monitoring the situation closely. Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker said he was "somewhat more encouraged" because active negotiations were under way to deal with the problem.

In early trading, Chase Manhattan was up ⅛ at 49⅛, Citicorp gained ½ to 34⅞ and J.P. Morgan rose ⅝ to 67. All have large loans to Argentina.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 1.36 points to 1,154.31.

Advances and declines ran about even on the NYSE.

Big Board volume rose to 73.67 million shares from 69.07 million Monday.

The NYSE's composite index gained .31 to 90.55. But at the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .24 at 209.19.

A Jury Of Lawyers

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — Could 12 lawyers ever agree on anything?

A Sonoma County Municipal Court judge has put that question to the test, in what is believed to be the first trial in the nation ever heard by a jury made up entirely of attorneys.

Judge Raymond Byrne decided to use lawyers in the case, which involves an attorney's fee, to sidestep a technicality that threatened to postpone the trial for months.

Lawyers for both sides agreed to the unusual procedure, and the panel of nine men and three women began hearing testimony Tuesday. The case was expected to go to the jury today.

It involves Cotati lawyer William Doty, who is suing his former client, Sebastopol building contractor William C. Schmuhl, for allegedly failing to pay him for work on a 1982 divorce. Schmuhl, in turn, is suing Doty for $15,000, claiming he had to pay other lawyers to correct mistakes made by Doty in preparing the case.

On March 19, the judge decided to use lawyers on the jury because an attorney involved in the case had failed to post the required jury fee on time.

The judge then scanned his courtroom, filled with lawyers waiting to appear before him on other matters.

"At that point, the judge got a twinkle in his eye," one of the attorneys in the case said. "He asked the lawyers for both sides if they felt a jury of lawyers could handle the matter. They both agreed, and the judge asked the lawyers in the court if they would agree to serve on a jury and waive jury fees in the case."

The judge said he based his solution on old English common law.

"When there was no jury available, the judge would simply order his bailiff to go outside and round up the first 12 men he could find. They became, ipso facto, the jury," Byrne said.

The judge said lawyers, who deal with client fee questions daily, would make an excellent jury.

Pirate Homers Topple Tar Heels

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Pirates slapped three home runs — each of them accounting for two runs — and they allowed the Bucs to take a 6-4 baseball victory over the Number Four ranked Tar Heels of North Carolina yesterday.

Down 2-0 after a shaky first inning, the Pirates rebounded in the fifth to tie it up on a Mark Shank homer, took the lead in the sixth on a Winfred Johnson blast, and secured what proved to be the winning runs in the seventh on a round-tripper by Greg Hardison.

Carolina had two homers on the day, one each by Scott Johnson and Devy Bell, but Jimbo Peterson held the Tar Heels in check most of the way, scattering nine hits.

And Peterson handcuffed leading hitter B.J. Surhoff in five appearances at the plate, not allowing him to reach base all day. Surhoff's grounder in the ninth with two men on base was the final out of the game.

And while he wore a wide smile, Coach Hal Baird downplayed the game to a certain extent. "I've been telling the kids how important it is to beat the best," he said, "and this should be a boost to us. But this game is not nearly as important to us as our conference games. The crowd may think this is more important, but it's not."

A crowd of around 2,000 viewed the contest, the largest of the season for the Pirates.

While Peterson appeared in trouble several times, Baird said he never really considered him until Surhoff came up with the two-out, two-on situation in the ninth. "It was really not good baseball to stay with him," Baird admitted, "but he had only thrown 80 pitches to that point and I just thought that he deserved to stay in there. Jimbo did a great job out there. He battled and kept the ball in the park for the most part. Other than the jitters he and the rest of them went through in the first inning, it was a good game for us.

"We're a young team, and I was worried for us, not so much because we were playing North Carolina, but because of the crowd reaction to the game. But they came through. I just hope it's a springboard for us the rest of the year."

The Tar Heels used the first inning jitters by the Pirates to push over two runs. With one down, Walt Weiss reached on an infield hit. Steve Sides was able to knock down his sharply hit ball into the hole between second and short, but couldn't make a play on it. A passed ball let Weiss advanced and he took third on an out. A wild pitch by Peterson then allowed him to score.

Two pitches later, Johnson ripped the ball out of the park in right for a 2-0 lead. Carolina went on to put two more on via a hit and an error before a groundout ended the frame.

Carolina didn't threaten again until the sixth inning when two hits put a runner at second base, but a double play ended the frame.

The Pirates went down in order to starter Ken Turner until the fourth when Hardison got a one-out single to break it up.

Then, in the bottom of the fifth, the Pirates struck to tie it up. With two away, Mike Sullivan singled and Shank followed with a homer to right, knotting it at 2-2.

One inning later, the Pirates struck for the lead. Steve Sides walked to open the inning and was sacrificed up, moving on to third on the second out. Johnson then connected on the first pitch, drilling it out in right to put East Carolina up, 4-2.

The Heels pulled Turner at that point, but reliever Tim Kirk promptly gave up a single to David Wells and a double to Mike Williams, and that brought on former Rose High School star Gordon Douglas from the bullpen. Douglas, the top reliever for the Heels, fanned pinchhitter Mark Cockrell to end the threat.

The Heels cut the margin to 4-3 with a homer of their own in the top of the seventh. That came off the bat of Bell with one man gone.

However, ECU rallied for two more in the bottom of the seventh to put the game on ice. Sides reached on a fielder's choice and Hardison followed with the third Pirate homer and it upped the score to 6-3.

Weiss led off the eighth for North Carolina with a double and he moved on to third on an out. A sacrifice fly by Johnson brought him home to cut to the final margin of 6-4.

The Heels used a walk and a single to threaten in the ninth, but Surhoff's grounder to second ended the threat and preserved the victory for the Pirates.

Hardison led the ECU hitting with two while Johnson had three, and Weiss, Todd Wilkinson and Bell each had two for the Tar Heels.

East Carolina climbs to 16-5 with the win, while North Carolina drops to 25-7.

East Carolina was scheduled to play host to Campbell today at 3 p.m., then will travel to Williamsburg, Va., on Saturday to face William & Mary in an ECAC-South contest.

Kinley Blanks Knights

Mike Kinley threw a two-hitter and struck out 10 batters while Tony Taylor provided a three-run homer to lift the Rose High School Rampants to a 6-0 victory over Northern Nash in the opening game of the Big East 4-A Conference schedule.

Leadoff hitter John Adams, who suffered the loss on the mound for the Knights, cracked a double to open the game. But Kinley struck out eight out of the next nine Northern Nash batters, including six straight, to record his third win in four decisions.

The only other hit for the Knights was double by Charlie Long to open the sixth, as Northern Nash swatted the ball to the outfield just four times.

Kinley's outstanding performance was not limited to the mound, as the senior lefthander ripped a pair of singles and drew a walk for a perfect on-base percentage.

"I was very impressed with Mike Kinley today," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said. "He stayed in the strike zone and mixed his pitches well all day.

"I thought we played good defense except for a couple of mistakes, and Marc Nover had a good game at second base. He came up with some tough plays.

"We didn't hit the ball that much, but we bunched them together and got some runs when we needed them."

Shortstop Traye Fuqua added a pair of hits for Rose, including an RBI double in the fifth.

But the Rampants managed just six hits — three of those during a four-run rally in the second.

Kinley laced a leadoff single up the middle, and Billy Michel followed with a single. After a passed ball advanced courtesy runner Doyle Kirkland and Michel, David Jester walked to load the bases.

Mo Matthews drove in Kirkland with a sacrifice fly to left-center, and Taylor followed with his first homer of the year for a 4-0 Rose advantage.

The Knights first threat to score came in the fourth, as designated hitter Sam Vines reached first when his grounded rolled under Fuqua's glove at shortstop. A walk to Jarrod Moody moved Vines to second, and he took third on a fielder's choice by Todd Goins.

But third baseman Toby Fischer chased down a pop fly in foul territory for the final out of the inning.

The Rampants posted two more runs in the fifth, with Fischer starting the one-out rally with a walk. Fuqua doubled to right to score Fischer, and after a single by Kinley, a fielder's choice by Kirkland allowed Fuqua to score the final run.

After Long's double to open the sixth, Kinley retired the next six batters to raise the Rampants' record to 4-2-1 overall. Kinley struck out pinch hitter Maurice Cooper for his second double-digit strikeout performance of the season.

Jags Rip Cougs For 5th In Row

PINETOPS — Randy Daniels hit two home runs and Joey Steppe added another as Farmville Central romped to a 12-3 Eastern Carolina Conference baseball victory over SouthWest Edgecombe Tuesday.

The win was the fifth straight for the unbeaten Jaguars, who are now 2-0 in ECC competition.

The Jaguars took the lead with a run in the first. With two away, Billy Godley singled and stole second. He scored on a hit by Steppe.

Then, in the third, Steppe's homer accounted for three runs. Daniels had reached on an error and Godley had walked prior to the blast that made it 4-0.

The Jaguars pushed over five more in the fourth, two of them on Daniels' first homer. Two more crossed in the fifth, one of them on Daniels' second roundtripper. Farmville added one final run in the seventh.

SouthWest scored two in the fourth and one in the sixth.

Daniels, Godley, Steppe and Taylor Walston each had two hits for Farmville, while Mike Varnell had a pair for SouthWest.

The Jags return to action on Friday, hosting D.H. Conley in a non-conference meeting.

Southern Nash.....5
North Pitt.....4

BETHEL — North Pitt rallied for three runs in the third inning but fell short as Southern Nash held on for a 5-4 victory Tuesday in Eastern Carolina 3-A baseball action at Bethel Elementary.

John Hobbs yielded just six hits on the mound in recording the loss for the Panthers, while Bailes went the distance for Southern Nash.

Hendricks had a pair of hits with two RBI to lead Southern Nash at the plate, while Alfred Braxton went 2-4 for North Pitt.

The Firebirds got on the board in the top of the first with three runs. Morgan reached first on an error, and Bryant followed with a single. After one out, Morgan scored on a fielder's choice by Harris. Lucas and Bissett walked to load the bases, and Hendricks singled in Bryant and Lucas.

But North Pitt trimmed the margin with a run in the bottom of the frame. Hobbs walked, moved to second on a passed ball and later scored on a fielder's choice by Braxton.

In the second inning, Morgan led off with a double for Southern Nash, Bryant reached on an error, and both runners scored on a single by Lucas.

North Pitt cut to within striking distance in the third, as Hobbs again opened with a base on balls and Scott Rawls followed with a single. Daniel Keel singled in Hobbs, and Braxton drove in Rawls and Keel with a single.

But the Panthers were unable to knot the score and suffered their second conference loss, while 0-5 overall.

"Hobbs started off a little shakey," North Pitt Coach Doug Warren said. "But after the first two innings, he came back and threw real well.

"When we come out and play like we did tonight, it lets me know we can play with other teams in our conference. We're young, and we've had to change our practice schedule around because of the weather.

"But these guys have got a good attitude; they're eager to play and eager to learn."

The Panthers travel to Greene Central Friday for another Eastern Carolina matchup.

Ayden-Grifton.....6
C.B. Aycock.....0

LITTLEFIELD — Doug Coley struck out the last five batters and threw a four-hitter as the Ayden-Grifton Chargers downed C.B. Aycock 6-0 Tuesday in Eastern Carolina 3-A Conference baseball action.

Coley finished with nine strikeouts and did not give up a base on balls.

"He really pitched well," Chargers Coach Bob Murphrey said. "He threw strong all the way. I think he's going to get better the more he gets to work this season. He was really in trouble only one time, and that was when we misplayed a couple of balls."

While Coley enjoyed his day on the mound, he also helped himself at the plate with a pair of hits in four trips. Roger Moye added two hits in three trips to the plate.

But the game began with a mixup similar to the controversy began last week in a game between the Chargers and D.H. Conley.

In that game, the Chargers were awarded a forfeit because of a technical error with the lineup card presented to the plate umpire. While the lineup in the home scorebook listed nine fielders and a designated hitter, the umpire's copy showed names filling only eight positions. Earlier this week, a protest of the umpire's decision was upheld, and that game will have to be resumed from the point of the forfeit or Conley wins 1-0.

In yesterday's game, the umpire's lineup listed John Thomas as the starting pitcher for C.B. Aycock. But on the official scorebook and the cards given to the two coaches, Paul Summerlin was the starting pitcher.

The umpire ruled that Thomas would have to face at least one batter. But this time that's exactly what happened, and the game went on without incident.

Wesley Hardee opened the bottom of the first with a double, and Shannon Peede followed with a single. Coley singled in Hardee, and Jackie Conway's double drove in Peede.

The score remained 2-0 until the bottom of the fifth. Coley reached first on an error and scored on a double by Moye. Gene Johnson followed with another double to drive in Moye. Conway drew a walk, and both runners advanced on a wild pitch. Eddie Brown singled home Johnson and Conway to set the final margin.

Ayden-Grifton improved its overall record to 4-2 on the season, with a 1-0 conference mark. The Chargers travel to Southern Nash Thursday.

COLUMBIA — Kevin Perry struck out 12 and threw a one-hitter as Jamesville blasted Columbia 12-0 in Northeastern 3-A Conference baseball Tuesday.

Greg Hardison ripped four hits in as many trips to the plate and drove in three runs, while Rusty Holliday went 2-2. Catcher Terry Perry finished with a pair of hits in three at bats.

Kevin Perry walked five while recording his second win of the season on the mound, but only a single in the bottom of the first blemished his bid for a no-hitter.

The Tigers struck for three runs in the first, as Matthew Moore led off with a single, Hardison singled and Holliday doubled in both runners. An error on a grounder by Whit Brown allowed Holliday to score.

Jamesville added three more runs in the second. Moore reached first on a fielder's choice and stole second. Hardison singled, and Kevin Perry walked to load the bases. Holliday walked to score Moore, and Terry Perry singled in Hardison and Kevin Perry.

Jamesville added two more runs in the third and four in the fourth of the five inning contest.

Jamesville improved its record to 5-0 in the conference, while 5-1 overall. The Tigers host Creswell Thursday in another Northeastern contest.

Greene Central.....1
North Lenoir.....1

WHEAT SWAMP — Greene Central rallied in the top of the seventh inning to knot North Lenoir at 1-1 and it stayed that way as the game was called because of darkness at the end of the frame.

It marked the second time this year that the Rams have ended up in a tie. They earlier tied Rose High School.

North Lenoir got its only run in the fifth. With one away, Jerry Waters singled and stole up, scoring on a single by John Johnson.

The Rams tied it up in the seventh. Brian Hall walked and was sacrificed up, scoring on a hit by Otis Barnes.

Barnes led the Greene Central hitting with two, one of them a double. Johnson had two for North Lenoir.

The tie leaves the Rams with a 3-3-2 record on the spring. They play host to Eastern Carolina Conference foe North Pitt on Friday.

Washington.....7
Ahoskie.....6

WASHINGTON — The bounce of the ball went in the Washington Pam Pack's favor Tuesday, as four "unusual" hits in the bottom of the seventh helped them rally for a 7-6 victory over Ahoskie in Northeastern 3-A Conference baseball.

Ahoskie took a 6-2 lead in the third and appeared to be on the way to its first conference win. But the Pam Pack, which had managed just two hits off starter Pat Kirby through six innings, came alive in the seventh.

Dick Cherry led off with a single, and when Ronnie Godley tapped the ball back to the Kirby, the second baseman missed the bag at second. John High hit into a fielder's choice to reach first, and Steve Oden cracked a triple down the line to drive in both runners.

After two outs, John Modlin walked, and Duane Whittenburg's drive bounced off third base for a single over the Ahoskie fielder's glove. A line drive by Sam Stephenson caromed off the pitcher's leg into right field, allowing Modlin to cross the plate with the winning run.

Kirby recorded the loss on the mound for Ahoskie, while Brian Williams went all the way for the Pam Pack.

Washington is now 4-0 overall while 3-0 in the league. Ahoskie slipped to 0-5 with the loss.

Tom Moye hurled the shutout win, striking out 14 along the way.

Now 1-0, Aycock travels to West Craven on Thursday.

BATH — Bear Grass, down 8-0 after six innings, suddenly came to life, scored nine runs in the top of the seventh and came away with a 9-7 baseball victory over Bath yesterday in Tobacco Belt Conference play.

Bath had scored twice in the first and added three each in the fourth and fifth innings for the 8-0 lead.

But in the seventh, the Bears exploded. James Lilly led off with a walk and Billy Fulford reached on an error, scoring Lilly. Lawrence Watson reached on another error and Dave Cratt siongled. Jerry Bowen walked, scoring Fulford and Traver Speller reached on an error, scoring Watson and Cratt. Bobby Perry's single plated Bowen and Speller and Brian Coletrain walked. Lilly reached on an error, scoring Perry and Fulford double in both Coletrain and Lilly.

Jimmy Chipman, Richard Hardin and Fagge each had two hits to lead Bath, while no one had more than one for the Bears.

Now 4-1 in the league and 4-2 overall, the Bears play host to Cape Hatteras on Thursday.

Jordan Wins Eastman

NEW YORK (AP) — The disappointment still was in Michael Jordan's voice when he talked of North Carolina not being part of the NCAA basketball tournament's Final Four this weekend.

"I would give up all these awards to be in Seattle," Jordan said Tuesday after receiving the 1984 Eastman Award as the nation's best college basketball player, an honor voted by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Jordan knows what it will be like Saturday in the tournament semfinals and then next Monday night in the title game.

As a freshman, he scored the winning basket with 15 seconds to play to give North Carolina a victory over Georgetown and the 1982 national championship.

"It's a memory you always have," he said of capturing the title, though he insisted he didn't remember much of his winning basket. "Even if you never reach that goal again, you at least accomplished it one time and a lot of people will never accomplish it in their four years at school."

Guard Play Important For Hoyas

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Georgetown Coach John Thompson thinks it'll "come down to the guards" Saturday when his No. 2 Hoyas meet third-ranked Kentucky in the semifinals of the NCAA basketball tournament. That wouldn't surprise Dicky Beal or Jim Master at all.

Kentucky has had problems with the full-court press in the past — problems that put the guards in the spotlight — and that's what Georgetown will throw at the Wildcats. But this will be the third straight game of the press for Kentucky, 29-4 and champions of the Mideast Region.

"We should be used to the press. The last two games, we were really pressed hard by Louisville and Illinois. Hopefully, we'll come through again," said Master, the Wildcats' 6-foot-5 shooting guard.

The Georgetown press, he said, "looks exactly like the Louisville press. That's probably where they got theirs from."

Wherever the Hoya defense came from, Master and Beal, his running mate, expect trouble from Gene Smith, Michael Jackson and their backups.

"We're going to have to be able to keep our composure," said Beal, the 5-11 dynamo who stepped into the lineup at point guard in late February and took over the team. "They'll press us the whole game. They have the best defensive guards in the country. We'll have to take our time and try to capitalize on any defensive mistakes they make. But from what I've seen, they don't make too many."

Cav Formula For Win

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia coach Terry Holland says he has the prescription to keep alive the Cavaliers' Cinderella journey through the NCAA basketball tournament.

"Houston is a beatable basketball team," Holland said of Virginia's semifinal opponent Saturday in Seattle. "We have to control the tempo, make sure each shot we get is a good one, make a good percentage of those shots and on defense take away their easy shots."

Holland is confident the Cavaliers, 21-11, will fare better against Houston Saturday than they did on Feb. 18, when the Cougars handed Virginia a 74-65 setback in Houston. Holland admitted his team was outplayed.

"They backed us off and they played so aggressive defensively," he said. "At the end, the only question was could we make a game out of it ... it wasn't going to be a matter of us beating Houston."

Virginia underestimated Houston guard Alvin Franklin and forward Michael Young in February's game, according to Holland.

"Franklin is the key to them being a better basketball team this season," Holland said, "and Young literally destroyed us the first game."

Holland said Virginia will "gang up" on Houston center Akeem Olajuwon, who's averaging over 23 points and 13 rebounds per game in NCAA tournament play.

"He's as big as a house and does such a great job establishing position," Holland said of Olajuwon. "It seems like he's trying to do more offensively in NCAA games. We'll try to take away his game."

Saturday's game will mark Houston's third straight appearance in the Final Four. The Cougars will take a 31-4 record to Seattle.

"I think they're a much better basketball team than they were last year," Holland said. "They may not be quite as talented but they're much more patient. They have a perfect blend."

Holland said he's tired of hearing the Cavaliers called the team without Ralph Sampson, who has gone on to the Houston Rockets of the National Basketball Association.

"It bugs me," Holland said. "It's not fair to this year's team and I don't think it's fair to Ralph himself. He taught us how to win and left us a great legacy. He's still here in spirit."

Holland felt Virginia's arrival in Seattle several days before Saturday's game will help the Cavaliers prepare. Virginia was to leave today.

"Hopefully we'll be in our best mental frame of mind on Saturday," he said, adding that the early arrival would enable the team to "get settled in and have a workout at the University of Washington on Thursday. I think that gives us time to get out there and to get settled."

Holland said Sampson's departure may have a positive influence on Virginia's attitude in the tournament.

"There's a big difference between being expected to win and not being expected to win," he said.

Critics Still Follow Lewis

HOUSTON (AP) — University of Houston basketball coach Guy Lewis is back in the NCAA Final Four tournament for the third straight year — and so are his critics.

Lewis guided the Cougars to 26 consecutive victories last season before losing in the championship game to North Carolina State.

The Cougars' spectacular season was all forgotten and critics zeroed in on Lewis' slowdown strategy in the second half — a move that allowed the Wolfpack to get back into the contest.

"The quickest way to be labeled a bad coach is to get to the Final Four and not win it all," Lewis says.

At 62, he has 561 career victories, fourth among active Division I coaches. His team is in the NCAA playoffs for the 14th time and he has a string of 25 consecutive winning seasons.

But there are recurring complaints about Lewis' coaching abilities — that his teams are undisciplined, that they can't win the big games, that he can't teach free throw shooting.

Lewis remains outwardly unruffled.

"Most of the people who talk about our program don't know anything about the game so I don't pay much attention to it," Lewis said.

Lewis' practices often resemble pickup games compared to some other teams — until he blows his whistle or reminds the team that he is in charge.

"I don't run a concentration camp here," Lewis said recently. "That's not my style.

"But if I do say something, I want them to listen to me.

"I don't think you can play basketball if you are scared all the time that you are going to make a mistake.

"I don't want them thinking when they come off the bench if they make one mistake it's all over for them."

Lewis doesn't criticize other coaching methods, but is determined to stick to his own beliefs.

"The biggest thing for a coach is to coach what is right for him," Lewis said.

Farmer Quits UCLA Post

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry Farmer had reluctantly accepted a two-year extension to his contract as UCLA basketball coach. But, in a stunning development, he reversed himself and resigned four days later.

And a few hours after Farmer's resignation became public Tuesday, Walt Hazzard, like Farmer a former standout for the Bruins under legendary Coach John Wooden, was announced as the new UCLA coach.

Hazzard, an All-American guard on UCLA's first NCAA championship team in 1964, who later played 10 years in the National Basketball Association, had been the head coach at Chapman College for the past two years.

For the last two weeks, it had been rumored that Hazzard would be joining Farmer's staff as an assistant.

But all that changed with Farmer's announcement. Farmer, 33, coached the Bruins for three seasons, taking over after Larry Brown resigned in March 1981.

There had been some pressure on Farmer because the Bruins finished with a 17-11 record and weren't invited to compete in the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 1966, not including two years ago when they were on probation.

The record was UCLA's poorest since 1959-60 when it was 14-12.

UCLA had a 21-6 record in 1981-82, Farmer's first season, and was 23-6 in 1982-83.

Farmer originally signed a three-year contract, but it was extended for one year last summer.

Hazzard's teams at Chapman, an NCAA Division II school, were 44-14. Chapman is located in Orange, about 30 miles south of Los Angeles.

Farmer issued the following statement through the UCLA sports information office:

"On Friday, when I announced I would continue as head basketball coach at UCLA for the next three years, I did so with a great sense of pride and relief. Weeks of soul-searching had led to a decision with which I believed I could happily live.

"The soul-searching, however, continued. This morning I concluded with a heavy heart that I was mentally and emotionally unprepared to provide for the next three years the total and undivided commitment which the head coaching position at UCLA demands and deserves.

"Accordingly, I submitted my resignation to Athletic Director Peter T. Dalis at 12:30 p.m. today.

"I believe this decision is in the best interest of both UCLA and myself. I wish to emphasize that this decision was based entirely upon my own assessment of some very personal feelings which I have shared only with family and a few close friends.

"It is in no sense an expression of dissatisfaction with UCLA, the institution I love most in this world. My alma mater has been loving, generous, and most of all, understanding.

"I have benefitted from this association in countless ways for which I will forever be grateful. I hope I have proven myself a worthy son."

Farmer was a starting forward at UCLA under Wooden for three years starting in 1970, and was an integral part of three Bruin teams that captured NCAA championships and won 89 of 90 games.

Following graduation, Farmer served as the junior varsity assistant to Frank Arnold for one season, 1973-74, before spending the next season in West Germany, serving as player-coach of the Koblenz Sports Club.

The following year, 1975-76, he returned to UCLA as an assistant coach under Gene Bartow, who had taken over when Wooden announced his retirement after the 1975 season.

UCLA, which captured 10 NCAA titles in Wooden's final 12 years, hasn't won one since. Bartow, Gary Cunningham and Brown served as head coach for two years each before Farmer took over. Farmer was an assistant during those six years.

"Surprised?" said Wooden. "Very definitely."

There had been reports that UCLA was insisting on the selection of new assistant coaches, replacing Kevin O'Connor and Craig Impelman.

Wooden, reacting to the speculation, said, "I would think he (Farmer) would (resign) if a change is being forced on him."

While agreeing that Farmer could be very protective of his assistants, Impelman said, "The bottom line is he didn't want to coach at UCLA anymore . . . Coach has always been the type of person who has been in control of his life, but I don't think that (changes) was the bottom line.

"I don't think he was forced to resign or that he resigned because he couldn't pick his own coaches. I don't think it was quite as simple as that."

Hazzard, a three-year letterman at UCLA, began his NBA career with the Los Angeles Lakers in 1965. He was traded to Seattle in 1968 and later played with Atlanta, Buffalo, Golden State and Seattle again.

His career scoring average in the NBA was 12.6 points in 724 games.

Comiskey Park, the home of the Chicago White Sox, is the oldest major-league park, having been in use since July 1, 1910.

Given Heart Of 16-Year-Old Boy

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — The heart of a 16-year-old Moore County youth who was declared clinically dead Tuesday, was successfully transplanted into a Georgia man's body only hours later, a Duke University medical official said.

Matt W. Brown, a member of his high school football team and a volunteer on a community rescue squad, suffered severe head injuries in an Aberdeen car accident Friday night. He had directed that his vital organs should be donated upon his death.

After Brown was declared clinically dead Tuesday evening, his heart was removed at Moore Memorial Hospital and flown to the University of Alabama Hospital in Birmingham.

By 10:15 p.m. Tuesday, Moore had provided the unidentified patient with a second chance.

Corbin Peterson, a member of the Duke University organ procurement team said the heart was "working fantastically."

The removal operation was the first of its kind at Moore Memorial Hospital and in central North Carolina.

"It's super that a small place away from the big medical centers was the first to produce that donor," Peterson said. "It's a credit to the hospital and everyone concerned that this happened."

Peterson said the recipient is a man in his early 40s with one young child.

"He had a dying heart and he was dying with it," Peterson said. "He would have not lived without this transplant."

Peterson estimated the chances of the body accepting the new heart are 75 to 80 percent.

In addition to the heart, the teen-ager's eyes and kidneys also have been donated. Peterson was searching Tuesday through data in an effort to find compatible recipients.

Brown's stepmother, Elizabeth Brown, said she was glad that some good could come from Brown's death.

"I'm so proud of him, and knowing he's done this and that we were able to follow through with his wishes," Mrs. Brown said. "I feel that my son is living on in someone else. It's his legacy. Because of him and because of his decision, somebody else has a chance to live."

Peterson said discussions were begun with the family about organ removal after 10:15 a.m. Tuesday when Brown was declared legally dead and his body was kept alive by machines.

Derry Walker, director of development at Moore Memorial, said an operating staff began the surgery to remove Brown's heart shortly before 5 p.m. and was completed at 6:22 p.m.

"We literally ran (with the heart) from the operating room, through the corridors to the emergency room area to the van," Walker said.

Peterson said the heart was sealed in a sterile bag and packed in ice in a cooler.

A private jet took off from the airport, about eight miles from the hospital, at 6:36 p.m., Walker said.

Peterson said the flight from Southern Pines to Birmingham took about 90 minutes, leaving doctors there with more than two hours to implant the heart.

Cardiologist Warns Stress Fatal Factor

DALLAS (AP) — Stress helps cause 1,200 sudden deaths each year and contributes to heart disease in people whose bodies react strongly to stressful situations, a doctor told a gathering of heart specialists.

Dr. Robert S. Eliot said his study of more than 4,000 men and women shows that stress can cause death from heart disease just as much as obesity, a high-cholesterol diet, high blood pressure or diabetes.

To dramatize his findings, Eliot persuaded doctors to go into a booth Monday at the Dallas Convention Center during a meeting of the American College of Cardiology.

There they were given the chance to sit in an easy chair and play the video game "Breakout."

Most of the physicians who played appeared calm. But after 15 minutes, blood pressure cuffs on their arms showed that one in five had reacted to the stress of playing the game as if they were "fighting a saber-toothed tiger."

They are what Eliot calls "hot reactors" — people whose bodies react strongly to stress and thus are more susceptible to heart disease.

"Hot reactors burn a dollar's worth of energy for a dime's worth of trouble," Eliott told his colleagues. "These are people who are driving 75 miles an hour with the brakes on. Their engines are burning up."

Such a reaction to stress can cause blood pressure to rise sharply, increase the heart rate and constrict blood vessels, making them more resistant to the flow of blood, Eliot said.

"Cholesterol is important, but it can be raised as much by stress as by diet," he said. "You can't get your cholesterol down until the person gets control over their lives."

Eliot said his interest in the effects of stress on the heart was sparked by the discovery of a high incidence of heart attacks and sudden death in men working on the space program in Cape Canaveral, Fla., during the 1960s.

"Men from 28 to 35 years of age were experiencing sudden deaths well above the national average," he said. "They weren't being poisoned and the usual risk factors prompting heart attack weren't occurring."

What the researcher found was the men were working in a stressful, frenzied atmosphere, and their stress was exacerbated because 15 percent of them were dismissed because of budget cuts.

A "hot reactor," he said, can improve his or her health by dieting, exercising, counseling or other methods to control stress.

"We are a product of what we live and the way we perceive life," he said. "They need to decide what is punching their button and decide whether it's worth dying for. They can't change the world, but they can change the way they perceive it."

New Proceedings For Immigrant

CHICAGO (AP) — New immigration proceedings will be held for a Mexican man whose application for a visa was denied because his American wife is a transsexual.

A lawsuit challenging the denial was dismissed Tuesday by U.S. District Judge Prentice Marshall after both sides agreed on certain conditions.

Attorney Louis Goldstein, who sued the Immigration and Naturalization Service on behalf of Patricia Michelle Castaneda, said he and INS attorneys agreed to drop the lawsuit provided the INS abandon a policy that considered sex-change operations as cosmetic surgery.

HIGH COST

ATLANTA (AP) — Not many things cost $25,000 a minute, but that's nearly how much arthritis costs the United States, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

The foundation says, "The impact of arthritis on our economy — in lost wages, lost taxes and medical care expenses — will be at least $13 billion this year." It says that amounts to a cost of $412 a second, $24,720 a minute, and $1.48 million an hour, all year long.

O'Herlihy, O'Shea Shining In '2 X Forsyth'

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Dan O'Herlihy and Milo O'Shea star in a pair of short, eccentric tales from Ireland on "2 X Forsyth," tonight on the syndicated Mobil Showcase Network.

Both actors and the author, Frederick Forsyth, are known to moviegoers in this country: Forsyth for three novels that were adapted to the screen, "Day of the Jackal," "The Odessa File" and "Dogs of War," and O'Shea most recently for his portrayal of the judge in "The Verdict," with Paul Newman.

The two half-hour stories, directed by Dan O'Herlihy's brother, Michael, were shot on location in Ireland by the Dublin-based Tara Productions, but there is nothing provincial about either one. Both stories, Forsyth says in an introduction, deal with "the gap between law and justice," and the application is universal.

In the first story, "A Careful Man," O'Herlihy plays Tim Hanson, a terminally ill millionaibe gho devises a scheme to make sure that his fortune does not fall into the hands of greedy relatives. Greedy? These folks can't wait to get the money.

"How much?" Tarquin, Tim's nephew (Phillip O'Sullivan), demands as Pound, the solicitor (Cyril Cusack), is about to read the will. "Perhaps you'd just get to the relevant parts," suggests Jean, Tim's sister (Shirley Ann Field). "This is very trying."

"'I have all my life,'" Pound reads from the will, "'been possessed of a horror of being consumed ... by worms and other parasites ...'

"Other parasites ... " the solicitor muses aloud.

.You'll read no more about this story. There is one twist at the end, then another, and the denouement is entirely satisfying.

The same goes for the resolution of "Privilege," in which O'Shea plays Bill Chadwick, a rare stamp dealer who faces the loss of his business and home after a gossip columnist wrongly accuses him of involvement in an illegal deal.

Chadwick complains to the newspaper but is rebuffed, and even his own solicitor seems reluctant to sue the columnist, Brent (Patrick Bedford). "It's a case of the elephant and the mouse," the lawyer (Barry Cassin) advises. Richard Brent is too big, and you're too vulnerable."

Chadwick is inclined to let the matter slide, even if it means losing his home. But his wife (Gayle Hunnicutt) insists. "If this goes," she says, meaning the house, "I go."

He decides to fight back, and begins by punching Brent in the nose.

There is elegance to this hour of entertainment, thanks in large measure to the leading players, who portray the likeable con artists with wit and style.

"2 X Forsyth" is not great television, but it is engaging and eminently palatable in the concise form of its two parts.

News from London: Nicol Williamson has been cast as Lord Louis Mountbatten and Janet Suzman as his wife, Lady Edwina, in "Mountbatten: The Last Viceroy," scheduled for broadcast on the Showcase Network in 1986.

Production is scheduled to begin in England in July and in India in September on the six-part miniseries that spans the period from December 1946, when Mountbatten was appointed viceroy to India, to June 1948, when he and his wife left the troubled country.

In addition to Williamson and Ms. Suzman, the cast will include Ian Richardson as Jawaharlal Nehru and Sam Dastor as Mohandas Gandhi.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — PLACE FOR A LIMBER PITCHER TO DO FORMAL DANCING: THE GRAND BALL.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Y equals O

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, MARCH 29

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A daytime activity to reduce your over-all aims and ambitions is good, but it can lead to an upset in the evening when it is necessary that you hold tight to accepted standards.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Gain the favor of a bigwig during the day for some ambitious plan you have in mind, but don't think there is something wrong in P.M.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Try a new tact, and gain some personal aim, but carry through once you have made up your mind; don't dilly dally.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study your wordly goals, and make them work like a charm, and don't permit a negative thinking person to dissuade you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Look to a powerful friend to help you with some new interests that could prove lucrative. Think more constructively.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Make the right decision about some future course with one you want as an associate, but put everything down in black and white.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Know what a partner expects of you, both financially and in work matters. Avoid a family tie who is opposed to new interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get your home in better condition, and be happier in it. Start using your own head instead of listening to others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have to contact a co-worker if you want to have some pleasure you desire. Be clever and you succeed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have a chance to talk with kin about finances, so don't procrastinate any longer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have a problem in the business world that a good partner can help you to solve. Be happy in the evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't permit an inquisitive friend to butt in on a talk you are having with a bigwig who can be of assistance in the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Look for suggestions from a good pal regarding some modern idea you have, and you can handle it successfully.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one who can comprehend anything of a cultural or artistic nature so give as fine an education as you can, and add business courses to the curriculum in order to become more successful during the lifetime.

Marine Saved A Driver's Life

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Marine bomb squad member waiting for a ride to work pulled a man from a pickup truck that burst into flames when it was hit by a taxi on U.S. 17, authorities said.

Master Sgt. Dennis L. Lecher was credited with saving the life of Paul Thomas Baggett, 63. Baggett was turning left into the Marine Chevrolet dealership just after 8 a.m. Tuesday when the oncoming cab struck his truck on the right side.

After its gas tank exploded, the truck spun around and slammed against the auto showroom.

"I ran to the pickup truck, and the gentleman inside was leaning over to the side that was on fire," said Lecher. "I got him up and away from the flames, and then people with the fire extinguishers arrived."

The cab driver, who injured a leg, was charged with failure to yield.

There are many tales about bridge players wandering barefoot about the streets of London because they failed to draw trumps. But there are twice as many unshod in New York for drawing trumps when they needed them for other purposes.

South had to choose between a jump rebid of three spades or the more conservative simple rebid. He chose the latter, but then became bullish when his partner could leap to four spades at his second turn. In turn, North valued his three aces highly, and when South showed slam interest with his five heart cue-bid, North was more than willing.

West elected to lead the unbid suit. That was a surprisingly effective attack since since it removed a key entry to the table. Declarer drew two rounds of trumps, then started on diamonds. When that suit split 4-1, declarer found that he was an entry short to set up and cash his long diamonds, so he ended up down one.

Declarer could not afford the luxury of spending dummy's trumps prematurely — they might be needed for entries. After winning the ace of clubs, declarer can afford to draw one round of trumps with a high trump from hand. Then he should cash the king of diamonds.

If both defenders follow low, declarer continues with a diamond and, assuming West follows, he goes up with the ace. This caters to the possibility that East started with singletons in both diamonds and trumps. If East produces a diamond honor on the first round of the suit, declarer should draw a second round of trumps and then lead a diamond to the ten. And if West shows out on the second diamond, as is the case here, the slam is assured regardless of whether or not West ruffs. Declarer has enough entries to establish and cash the long diamonds on the board. Try it.

Could Deport Gang Rapists

BOSTON (AP) — Two of four men convicted in a barroom gang rape could be deported to their native Portugal upon completion of their prison terms, according to immigration authorities.

Timothy Whelan, deputy district director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, said Tuesday that his office is looking into the cases. He did not name the two men subject to deportation proceedings.

The four men, all Portuguese immigrants, were sentenced to six to 12 years in prison for the March 6, 1983, rape of a woman atop a pool table at a New Bedford tavern.

Whelan said a non-citizen can be deported if convicted of a crime of "moral turpitude" during the first five years in this country. Deportation also can result later if a person is convicted of two such crimes.

All Whelan would say is that one of the defendants had been in the United States less than five years when the rape occurred and that a second had a criminal record.

During Monday's sentencing, Bristol County District Attorney Ronald Pina said Victor Raposo, 23, had a record of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. Another defendant, Joseph Vieira, 28, was in the United States less than five years at the time of the attack, according to his attorney, David Waxler.

Waxler said there was little he could do in anticipation of federal action.

"There's not many steps you can take," he said. "It's a little like waiting for the other shoe to drop."

Whelan said any action by his agency requires an administrative hearing.

"We cannot simply remove them from the United States," he said. "There must be a hearing before an immigration judge, and only a judge can order them out of the United States."

But Whelan said any action would wait until the men have served their prison terms. Raposo won't be eligible for parole for six years; Vieira faces at least four years in prison.

"It wouldn't be proper for us to take custody and deport one who is culpable," said Whelan. "It's our policy to await till the state has completed its action and carried out all its reponsibilities."

London Transit Is Knotted In Strike

LONDON (AP) — A one-day strike by London's bus and subway workers today forced more than 2 million mass transit riders to find other means of travel and created traffic jams as long as 12 miles.

All trains on the subway were out of action, and only about 10 percent of bus routes were in operation, he said.

"We very much regret that people should be caused this inconvenience," said London Transport spokesman David Hales.

On an average weekday, Hales said, London buses have 3.25 million fares and the subway carries 1.5 million, so more than 2 million people had to find alternate ways of reaching their destinations and returning.

The strike was called by London Transport's 20 unions to support a "democracy day" orchestrated by the Trades Union Council, the national labor federation.

Appointment Links Shuttle And Star Wars

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The marriage of the military and the space shuttle has been consummated with the appointment of Air Force Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson to direct the Pentagon's $26 billion search for a "Star Wars" missile defense system.

For the last 2½ years, Abrahamson has directed the shuttle program for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Now, he's bringing that connection to the Defense Department.

"Of course, the shuttle will be a big part of this thing," he acknowledged Tuesday after Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger appointed him to head what the administration calls its Strategic Defense Initiative.

The initiative is a direct result of President Reagan's so-called "Star Wars" speech of March 23 last year in which he presented the military-industry complex with what he called a revolutionary challenge to devise a missile defense system that would render nuclear weapons "impotent and obsolete."

Weinberger said giving Abrahamson general control over the vast program, starting in mid-April, means work "can begin ... in earnest" on the ways to use lasers and other high-technology devices to ward off missile attacks.

The administration has budgeted $2 billion for the program in fiscal 1985, and Pentagon officials have testified to Congress that a five-year research program will cost about $26 billion.

Many of the devices are expected to be tested on secret military space shuttle missions.

Abrahamson, 50, an aeronautical engineer who had directed the Air Force's F-16 air combat fighter program, is credited with moving the shuttle program forward at a time when it was suffering many technical problems.

His planning advanced the first shuttle space walks, the first outside excursions by free-flying astronauts and the first satellite repair mission — the latter scheduled to start next week — by several months.

The Defense Department early on began staking its claim to a big share of the reusable shuttle. As one official stated in 1981: "NASA's offices are filling up with Air Force blue suits."

The Air Force, which operates most of the Pentagon's space programs, had a role in shuttle planning from the beginning, and prevailed upon NASA to include design features that would apply to military missions, even though the agency wasn't always pleased.

For example, the space agency gave the space plane a cross-range capability of 1,100 miles, twice the original design. This will enable the shuttle to fly that far to the west to make an emergency landing after one circuit of the globe when the military starts launching shuttles out of a new, secure base at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., late next year.

A north-south over-water launch from Vandenberg will enable the shuttle and its payloads to overfly all areas of the globe. Direct north-south liftoffs are not made from NASA's base at Cape Canaveral, Fla., because the potentially-explosive powered portion of flight would be over inhabited areas.

NASA has tried to play down the Air Force shuttle role. It has been reasonably successful because only one of the first 10 flights to date have carried a military cargo. But starting next year the Air Force will step up its use of the ship, and 20 of the 71 flights planned between 1985 and 1988 are classed as secret defense missions.

For security, the Pentagon is building its own mission control center at the Air Force Space Command headquarters at Colorado Springs, Colo.

NASA is concerned that its reputation for maintaining an open space program will be tarnished by all the secrecy. And it hasn't exactly figured out yet how to respond.

It may be difficult if word leaks out the shuttle is testing laser devices or some other "Star Wars" technology in two or three years.

The Soviets have charged all along that the shuttle is designed as a space weapon, which NASA and the Pentagon have steadfastly denied. Officials acknowledge the shuttle could be used as a testbed for various devices, but they say if a missile defense system is placed in orbit, it will be unmanned and will be defensive in nature. Although it probably will be transported there by the shuttle.

Looking to the future, the Air Force is conducting research it hopes will lead to a small two-man shuttle that can take off directly into orbit, without rocket assist, from any large airfield, starting in the late 1990s. These quick response ships would be used to counter enemy threats to the "Star Wars" defense shield or other military satellites and to carry up additional satellites in a crisis.

Marathon On Piano

RIVER GROVE, Ill. (AP) — French composer Erik Satie might not have been serious when he suggested musicians play his composition "Vexations" 840 times — but that doesn't matter to a music professor at Triton College, Eugene Schlabach.

"Most don't do it, but there are a few crazies who take him up on it," says Schlabach, who has signed up more than 20 pianists for a musical marathon during the college's Salute to the Arts Festival.

Schlabach notes that he'll only be following the eccentric Satie's directions. Satie wrote the mock-Romantic "Vexations" in 1896 as the middle movement of a short work called "Bages Mystiques."

"He, perhaps with tongue in cheek, attached a note saying, 'Play it 840 times,'" Schlabach explained.

"Vexations" is an example of what Satie called "furniture music" — spare, undemanding works to fade into the aural background and free listeners to hear more spontaneous sounds, such as their neighbors' conversations.

The marathon begins the afternoon of April 2.

Students, teachers, administrators and guest performers have volunteered to take turns at a grand piano playing "Vexations" over and over until they get through number 840.

Schlabach will be at the piano at that time, and as he plays repetition No. 840, the audience will drink a toast of champagne.

Fortunately, the piece is only about one minute long.

Indict Man For False Signatures

GREENSBORO (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted a Pilot Mountain man who faces charges in two major cocaine cases with making false statements when applying for $450,000 in loans.

The indictment says that on three occasions in 1979 and 1980, Donald Henry Martinat Jr. falsely claimed that his parents would guarantee loans from the Bank of Pilot Mountain and Farmer's Bank, also of Pilot Mountain.

The indictment adds that the signatures of Martinat's parents were false and not authorized by them.

The loans were made on behalf of two businesses, according to the indictment.

In February, the same grand jury indicted Martinat in two drug cases.

Sylva Votes To Keep Beer Sales

SYLVA, N.C. (AP) — Sylva residents have voted overwhelmingly to keep beer sales in the city.

Tuesday's vote was 481 for and 279 against.

The Rev. Dillard Moore, pastor of Moses Creek Baptist Church in Cullowhee, said, "We gave it a good fight and we lost. The beer industry won the election and our children lost."

Moore said he was considering bringing the issue before the voters again in three years.

How Tar Heels Voted In The House, Senate

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes March 15-21.

House

DAM REPAIRS — By a vote of 194 for and 192 against, the House gutted an amendment to require those who get irrigation or hydroelectric benefits from Bureau of Reclamation dams to pay for repairing the facilities.

This occurred during debate on a bill authorizing $650 million for repairing about 50 western dams that the government says could not withstand a major flood or earthquake. The bill (HR 1652) was sent to the Senate.

Also, the vote required beneficiaries to pay for enhancements that yield them additional benefits from Bureau of Reclamation dams. However, since virtually all of the $650 million was earmarked for repairs rather than enhancements, the provision had little immediate impact.

Morris Udall, D-Ariz., said it was only just that "where the federal design failure has caused the dam to be unsafe, repairs will be (its) responsiblity...."

Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., who sponsored the gutted amendment, said making beneficiaries pay for safety repairs would prevent "undue favoritism" toward the west and trim the budget deficit.

Members voting yes wanted all taxpayers rather than just beneficiaries to pay the cost of repairing Bureau of Reclamation dams.

North Carolina representatives voting yes included Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Clarke, D-11.

Members voting no included Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Britt, D-6, James Broyhill, R-10.

BANKRUPTCY — The House adopted, 250 for and 161 against, an amendment to set up a new bankruptcy court system under the jurisdiction of the existing federal judiciary.

This replaced a plan to create an independent bankruptcy judiciary with 227 new judges appointed by a president to lifetime tenures. Under the amendment, they will be appointed by federal appeals courts to 14-year terms.

The amendment was attached to a bill to restructure bankruptcy courts in order to comply with a 1982 Supreme Court decision. The high court said judges had too much legal authority and not enough independence.

The bill (HR 5174), which was sent to the Senate, also contained labor-backed language making it more difficult for companies to break union contracts when they filed for bankruptcy.

Supporter Thomas Kindness, R-Ohio, said the amendment meets constitutional tests and averts the disruption of creating an entirely new structure with 227 new judges.

Opponent Barney Frank, D-Mass., said he preferred the presidential appointment of bankruptcy judges because "judges appointed for life provide a more certain constitutional course."

Members voting yes wanted judges in the new bankruptcy court system to serve fixed terms and be subordinate to the exisiting federal judiciary.

Voting yes: Jones, Britt, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill, Clarke.

Voting no: Andrews, Neal.

Not voting: Valentine, Whitley.

Senate

VOCAL PRAYER — The Senate defeated a proposed Constitutional amendment to permit the organized recital of prayers in public schools. The vote of 56 for and 44 against was short of the two-thirds majority required for changes in the Constitution.

The proposal to allow spoken prayer was sent to Congress by President Reagan. The Senate also voted on a silent prayer amendment that was less popular with conservatives (below).

Supporter John Warner, R-Va., said the amendment posed no conflict between church and state because it "will allow students to ask for God's blessing in their own way...forbid government-written prayer and continue to forbid the establishment of a state religion."

Opponent Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., said the basic question was: "Is prayer to remain a personal act of devotion, a one-on-one relationship between an individual and his or her God, or is it to be an official function of the state?"

Senators voting yes favored the spoken prayer amendment. John East and Jesse Helms voted yes.

SILENT PRAYER — By a vote of 81 for and 15 against, the Senate tabled and thus killed a proposed Constitutional amendment under which public school students could gather for silent prayer sessions.

This was a misleading test of sentiment because it involved a parliamentary maneuver aimed at achieving a clear up-or-down vote on the vocal prayer amendment that conservatives preferred (above). After the silent prayer amendment was killed, as expected, the Senate held its vote on vocal prayer.

In most cases, a yes vote meant the Senator either opposed all prayer amendments or joined President Reagan in preferring the vocal prayer amendment. East and Helms voted yes.

VETO — By a vote of 87 for and 12 against, the Senate overrode President Reagan's veto of a bill (S684) to spend $180 million over five years on water research grants to each state. This issue is now before the House.

Created by Congress in 1964, the Great Soceity program awards matching grants to state institutes for basic research or for probing water problems such as acid rain and desalinization that are unique to a region.

Reagan, in his veto message, said the program is "not an appropriate federal activity."

Senators voting yes wanted to override the veto. East and Helms voted yes.

'Residues' Pose Major Concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chemical residues in food worry more than 75 percent of all Americans, making the topic a greater cause of concern for most people that salt, sugar or cholesterol, the Food Marketing Institute says.

Institute spokesman Timothy Hammonds disclosed a consumer survey in January found 77 percent of those polled consider residues such as pesticides and herbicides a serious hazard.

Cholesterol was considered a serious hazard by 45 percent of the public, he said, followed by salt, 37 percent; additives and preservatives, 32 percent; sugar, 31 percent, and artificial coloring, 26 percent.

Insecure People Obnoxiously Offensive

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — While still in college, Teresa Amabile noticed that students and junior professors always asked the most biting, vicious and obnoxious questions at scholarly conferences.

Now that she is Dr. Amabile, psychologist and Brandeis professor, she is trying to discover what makes people brutally critical of others' intelligence. And she believes she has the answer:

People who are insecure about their own intellectual standing go on the offensive by questioning the brain power of others. And it works. Supercritical people really do give the impression they're smarter.

In short, nastiness pays.

Ms. Amabile has conducted experiments on college students to test her theories about "negativity," as she calls it.

"We have evidence that people tend to be more negative in assessing other people's intelligence if they themselves are intellectually insecure for some reason," she said. m"Does it serve any purpose? Does it convince people that you are smart? It seems that the answer is 'yes.' A very loud 'yes.'"

She acknowledged that she had picked an ideal environment to research backbiting. Universities are, after all, famous for intellectual hissing. But she thinks her findings also apply to ordinary life — to any situation where someone feels slightly inferior in the IQ department.

Those who cast aspersions pay a price, however. They're not viewed as very nice people.

Ms. Amabile found that ruthless critics are seen as insightful but mean, brilliant but cruel. On the other hand, those who have something positive to say are considered to be undiscerning but affable, plodding but friendly.

Her work, published in the Journal of Experimental Social Psychology, began with an attempt to compare the behavior of students who felt secure and those who did not.

Forty-four students were paid to serve as "experts" to review essays on social problems. Some were told they would keep jobs no matter what. The rest were led to believe their future in the program depended on how impressively they conducted their first analyses.

Half of the students also thought they were working for a graduate student, while the rest thought the boss was a psychology professor.

When the results were in, those who believed their jobs were in jeopardy were far more critical of the essays than were their colleagues. And the professor's students were nastier than the graduate student's — even though all, in reality, were working for Ms. Amabile.

Next, 104 students were asked to assess the intellect of an actor who was being interviewed on videotape. Half thought the experimenter was a sophomore undergraduate, while the rest thought she was a graduate student working on a doctorate.

Again, those who thought their opinions would be judged by someone with high academic credentials were far more scathing.

So it seemed clear that people go for the jugular when they think their own gray matter is in question.

The third study set out to learn whether this "impression management tactic" really works.

Ms. Amabile found two book reviews — one glowing, the other damning — written by the same critic and published the same Sunday. To confuse matters even more, she produced two versions of each review by changing words like "inspired" to "uninspired" and "successful" to "unsuccessful." Then 55 students assessed the writers' intellectual and social qualities.

"The negative reviewer was overwhelmingly rated as more intelligent," she said. "At the same time, he was seen as cruel."

The students thought the positive reviewer was less intelligent but "compassionate, forgiving, open-minded and kind."

When somebody writes a blistering critique, she believes, it may say as much about the reviewer as about the play, book or movie being judged. New reviewers, especially, may try to prove their intellectual muscle by ripping a work to shreds.

Ms. Amabile remembers her own days as a newly minted Ph.D. asked to review studies submitted to a psychology journal.

"I pored over the first few I got looking for every fault I could, feeling I had to prove to the editor that I was bright, incisive, brilliant," she said. "I was much more negative than the manuscript called for."

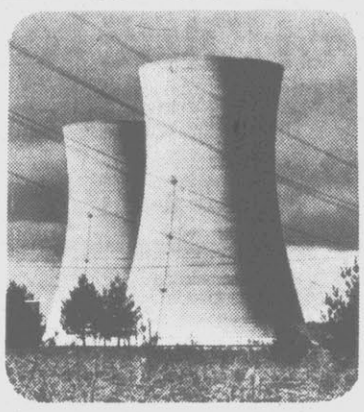

But if the ploy is so obvious, why does it work?

"In some sense, you have to be smarter than the person who did the thing you're evaluating if you can see what's wrong with it," she said. "That doesn't necessarily mean you could have done it any better, but it gives the impression that you could have."

Yet, there's an irony here, she said. Positive, constructive criticism is far tougher to offer than condemnation. So the querulous might actually be stupider, not smarter.

"This tactic may be built on thin air," she said. "There really is nothing there. But people believe there is."

FOCUS

Meltdown

Exactly five years ago today, an accident crippled the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant in Pennsylvania. The cleanup is expected to cost more than $900 million. Nuclear reactors produce 81 percent of the electricity in Vermont, 60 percent in Maine, and 50 percent in Nebraska. More than 25 percent of the world's uranium lies under the western U.S. One pound of uranium contains nearly 3 million times the energy of one pound of coal.

DO YOU KNOW — What percent of U.S. electricity do nuclear power plants produce?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — FAA stands for Federal Aviation Administration.

Music Sees Big Rebound

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After four years of singing the blues, the music industry is dancing to a happier tune — the sound of cash registers ringing amid a financial and creative renaissance.

Nobody did it better in 1983 than Michael Jackson's "Thriller," which has sold some 32 million copies worldwide to become the best-selling LP of all time and contributed substantially to CBS Records Group's $109.4 million in earnings — a leap of nearly 500 percent over 1982.

But other record companies celebrated too, with other albums scoring multimillion sales: "Synchronicity" by the Police, the "Flashdance" soundtrack, Def Leppard's "Pyromania" and David Bowie's "Let's Dance," to name a few.

But perhaps the most welcome development was the emergence of many new faces on the Top 10 album and single charts. Groups like Men at Work, Eurythmics, Culture Club, Def Leppard and Duran Duran injected new artistic and commercial life into an industry that for a while seemed trapped in a time warp in which only veterans had a chance at success.

The recovery was not dramatic for all — giant Warner Bros. experienced a decline in earnings for its U.S. record labels — and no one is betting on a return to the music industry's glory years of the 1970s, when growth rates of 15 percent and 20 percent were not uncommon.

But observers say last year's rebound gives the lie to those who feared pop music was permanently on the skids.

"It's as healthy as it's ever been — it's diverse, it's vital," says Arista Records chief Clive Davis. He always maintained that the slump was never as severe as it was made out to be, but rather reflected the general economic conditions of the last four years.

But a slump it certainly was, and perhaps because the music business had so many boom years it came as a shock to many. According to the Record Industry Association of America, the value of domestic record and tape shipments tumbled from $4.31 billion in the peak year of 1978 to $3.59 billion in 1982.

During the four-year period, record companies cut hundreds from their staffs — and dozens from their artist rosters.

The RIAA has yet to compile its 1983 year-end figures, but all indications are that they will show healthy gains. The National Association of Record Merchandisers has already noted that average sales of the thousand-odd stores it surveys were $53,430 per month last year, compared to $47,589 in 1982 and $46,276 a year earlier.

Also, the huge sales of "Thriller" contrast sharply with the 3 million or so copies of 1982's top sellers, "Asia" and John Cougar's "American Fool."

What happened? Industry observers offer several theories, including the emergence of rock video through its primary outlet, the MTV cable channel, and a simultaneous decline in the video game business, which for a while seemed to be siphoning off young people's entertainment budgets.

Some say music simply got better last year.

"There was really more exciting music around," says Polygram Records, Inc. President Guenter Hensler, who estimates that such LPs as "Flashdance" and Def Leppard's "Pyromania" helped his firm to a 25 percent sales increase.

Much of the credit for getting that music to its audience is given to MTV, the Warner-Amex channel, which for the first time gave new bands an alternative to radio as a means of national exposure.

"Consumers were asking for records that weren't on radio, so they must have seen them on MTV," said NARM consultant Joe Cohen. "It gave exposure to groups like Duran Duran, Stray Cats, Men At Work — groups that may not have been heard of ever again if it were not for the MTVs in the world. We're seeing a changing art form and a generation of new consumers who are embracing it."

MTV — and a handful of big-city stations that got good ratings playing new music — also convinced American radio to drop its resistance to newcomers. The Police, for example, released their first album in 1979 and even had a minor hit with "Roxanne," but it took another few years for them to become a staple on rock radio.

The record industry also helped itself by re-examining its marketing strategies. The extended play (EP) record, with five or six songs, and the 12-inch single have become popular ways of introducing bands without the expense of a 10- or 12-cut album.

Record companies also chopped prices on their catalog or older albums, a departure from the previous practice of discounting hot new releases in hopes of selling older LPs at higher prices.

A few clouds still hang over the industry, most notably piracy and home taping.

"We may have sold 4 million or so of Lionel Richie, but there could have been another 4 million or so taped," said Motown Records president Jay Lasker. A 1983 RIAA survey estimated that Americans record the equivalent of 564 million albums each year, resulting in annual lost sales of 325 million LPs.

But executives also believe that new technology still in its infancy — the compact digital disc, for example — may herald more good years for the record business.

"I can remember in the 1940s, when television started. People thought the record business was finished," Lasker saidbeen a new technology that's been sound, the record business has grown."

Promote Private Space Investors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government will encourage private investment in space by offering tax incentives and reducing the technical and financial risks involved, the head of the National Aeronatics and Sapce Administration says.

"We want your investments to go forward," James M. Beggs told representatives of several firms attending a space business conference. "And we know that you may find it difficult to go it alone. That is why we will reduce those risks that might inhibit business from going into orbit."

Beggs said the White House "has some tax incentive plans to encourage business in space ... For our part, NASA will establish a high-level office to serve as a focal point for our activities in stimulating space commerce."

See Approval Of Joint Venture

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission staff is recommending final federal approval of the proposed joint carmaking venture between General Motors Corp. and Toyota Corp., an agency source says.

The final approval by the five-member commission is likely to come soon, according to the source, who spoke under conditions requiring anonymity. The commission granted tentative approval to the project by a 3-2 vote in December.

Pastors As Police Chaplains

By ARTHUR BUCKLER
Associated Press Writer

YORK, Pa. (AP) — Armed with no more than a police radio, a beeper and a car marked with crosses and the city seal, a group of pastors performs an unusual blend of police work and Christian ministry.

The 16 evangelical ministers in the city's volunteer "police chaplain corps" are each on call 48 hours a month, largely to comfort and counsel people in crisis situations, said the Rev. Carl Scott, a corps captain and one of the six-month-old program's founders.

"These are things police officers would not be able to do. They don't have time to do it nor the expertise to do it," said Scott, pastor of Bible Tabernacle Church.

While some of the chaplains regularly ride along in squad cars, most spend their shift waiting for calls from officers at the scenes of fires, suicide threats and household and neighborhood disputes.

"We're not trying in any way to be law enforcement officers or replace the police," said the Rev. John Oldfield, pastor of Yorktowne Chapel. "We're trying to relieve the police."

But one minister more than relieved an officer when the two went to investigate a disturbance at a restaurant. "I ended up having to place the handcuffs on this man and help subdue him," said Tom Shelley, a deacon in a Methodist seminary.

"He was just extremely violent," Shelley said. "It's certainly not what we intend for chaplains to have to do."

The police willingly let the chaplains have the job of notifying families of people who die in accidents and other violent circumstances, said Lt. Dennis McMaster. "One of the toughest things I've ever done as a police officer is tell someone their son is dead," he said.

In several cases, a family without a religious affiliation has asked the chaplain who brought the bad news to conduct the funeral, Oldfield said.

When a natural gas explosion injured eight people early this year, several chaplains visited victims in hospitals and helped with the subsequent evacuation of thousands from the downtown area.

The chaplains are evangelical Christians, although ministers of all sects were invited to join the program, Shelley said.

"In the evangelical churches, there is a commitment to outreach and mission that in the other churches just isn't there," he said.

The idea of a police chaplain often raises eyebrows. "We've gotten some strange reactions, some people that didn't want us involved. So we just back off," Scott said. "We don't force ourselves on anybody."

But Shelley says he believes the dispossessed people encountered in police work need ministers the most.

"Police chaplaincy is really ministry to the last, the lost, the least and the lonely," Shelley said.

Mexicans Go North To Shop

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer

REYNOSA, Mexico (AP) — Mexicans along the 1,760-mile border with the United States shopped in American stores for decades, until a severe recession two years ago forced them to shop at home.

But now, they're slowly going back, both out of habit and because inflation in the border zone higher than the national average has made American goods competitive again.

The trend is most visible in the relatively more prosperous stretch along the California border, in cities like Tijuana. Here, in northeastern Mexico south of Texas, the return to shopping across the border still is incipient as poorer residents struggle to survive.

"We don't have the buying power on either side of the border," said Miguel Valdes Revilla, mayor of this city across the border from Texas' Rio Grande Valley.

The door to the United States slammed for many border residents in 1982 following three major peso devaluationc. The shock waves were felt by American merchants who had grown increasingly dependent on Mexican customers.

A $10 lunch for two at a U.S. diner cost a Mexican couple about 270 pesos in February 1982. Now it costs 1,700 pesos for a $10 meal — two and a half days pay for the worker earning the minimum wage of 680 pesos a day.

Under the gradual devaluation ordered last fall by President Miguel de la Madrid, the value of the peso is slipping another 13 centavos each day. So Mexicans need an extra peso every eight days to buy a dollar.

"Despite the exchange rate, it appears Mexico will once again give up its border residents to the U.S. economy," says Jorge Bustamante, director of the Tijuana-based Border Studies Center of Northern Mexico and one of Mexico's foremost experts on the border.

"The tendency is toward going back to business as usual. That is, Mexican consumers buying American products," he said in a telephone interview.

Barring unforeseen circumstances such as another major peso devaluation, Bustamante predicted that Mexican shoppers should be back in full force in U.S. border cities within three years, two years in California.

Mexico's national inflation rate hit 100 percent in 1982 and 80 percent last year, but Tijuana's 1983 inflation rate was 150 percent.

The rate in Matamoros, on the Gulf of Mexico south of Brownsville, Texas, was 95 percent and the rate in all other border cities fell somewhere in between, according to figures gathered by the Border Studies Center.

The soaring prices of Mexican goods have made American products competitive again, and the tradition of shopping in the United States for prestige and, often, availability of goods adds to the attraction.

"The higher the inflation the closer the gap between the prices of Mexican-made products and American-made products," Bustamante said.

The situation in Reynosa, Matamoros, Nuevo Laredo and the other towns across the border from southeast Texas, one of the most underdeveloped areas of the United States, is harsher than in northwestern Mexico across the border from prosperous southern California.

Bustamante said Ciudad Juarez, across the border from El Paso, Texas, "is truly the middle point" in terms of economic health.

"The closer you get to California the better off you are," he said. "Tijuana is going back to normal faster than Ciudad Juarez and Ciudad Juarez is going faster than Matamoros."

Although many products now are cheaper, of better quality and more readily available on the U.S. side of the border, many border residents here still must do without or with a lot less than two years ago.

"Those who ate meat four times a week now eat it once a week," said Mario Cesar Trevino, a Reynosa bakery owner. "We'd be lying if we said we didn't have less."

He said he's compared prices and found that many items — meat, for example — now cost less in the United States. The cost of running his business has skyrocketed because of inflation.

"Two years ago, 50 pounds of lard cost 1,500 pesos, now it's 3,300 pesos," Trevino said. "Fifteen tons of flour cost 15,000 to 18,000 pesos, now it's 46,000."

Valdes says one of the keys to the economic recovery of the border is to keep consumers in Mexico.

"The Mexican people made shopping in the United States a way of life," he said. "That's our problem and now it's difficult to change the psychology of the people."

Reynosa Chamber of Commerce President Jorge Gonzalez acknowledged little can be done to change that psychology while border residents suffer from an insufficient supply of such basic necessities as milk, toothpaste and soap.

'Children' Leaving Ma Bell

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like wayward children who sever all ties with home, the seven Bell System companies may soon be turning their backs on Ma Bell and her best known product — long-distance phone service.

Two of the seven Bell companies created by the breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. are already experimenting with using long-distance circuits from AT&T's competitors for their corporate business calls. Those two are Ameritech and Nynex.

Four of the other five — BellSouth, Bell Atlantic, Pacific Telesis and Southwestern Bell — say they're actively exploring the idea. The one exception is US West. But even there, spokeswoman Barbara Smith says "it's not something we would ever rule out."

"We are definitely looking at it," says Pete Hoffman, a spokesman for Bell Atlantic. "We (Bell Atlantic employees) all received a memo recently noting we have to pay our own long-distance telephone bills now and urging that we be judicious with our calling. Our internal telecommunications bill is pretty high and it's only natural we would look to outside competitors."

"We're looking at our phone costs just like any other business does," added Bill Hensley, a spokesman for Ameritech, which is now using some circuits from AT&T arch-foe MCI Communications. "And that means actively looking at other carriers besides AT&T."

While the amount of telephone traffic at stake appears relatively small at this point, few competitors of the old AT&T ever thought they'd see the day when local Bell companies would consider abandoning AT&T. Not surprisingly, they like the idea.

"I think you could characterize us as eager to serve them," said MCI spokesman Gary Tobin.

AT&T is not thrilled.

"We offer a good, high-quality service and would like for all of our customers to stay with us," said AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner. "But obviously they're looking around."

Wagner blames the possibility of defection on the fact that until federal regulators resolve a fight over telephone "access fees," the competitors don't face the same level of expenses as AT&T.

Under the antitrust settlement that broke up AT&T, the Bell companies were restricted primarily to the local telephone business. AT&T was allowed to keep most of the long-distance network. The settlement included one major exception, however, specifying the Bell companies could maintain their own long-distance networks for internal, corporate communications.

Ameritech, for example, has constructed an internal network to connect offices throughout the five states it serves. Hensley says there are 10 primary phone links in that network, four of which are now provided by MCI. Five are provided by AT&T and the 10th is owned by Ameritech.

In addition to seeking the least expensive option for internal networks, the Bell companies say they are also concerned about the cost of long-distance calls made in the course of business to points outside their territory.

Nynex, the firm that owns the New York Telephone Co. and the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., has gone the farthest in that regard. New York Telephone spokesman John Quinn says the firm is now conducting a three-month experiment using "least-cost routing" equipment.

Long-distance calls placed by New York Telephone executives are automatically routed to whichever one of six different networks offers the best rate at that hour. Besides AT&T's network, the equipment can select among MCI, GTE-Sprint, ITT, Western Union and Satellite Business Systems.

At Southwestern Bell, which serves Texas, Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas, vice president Ken J. McIntyre says the firm will probably decide "within the next 30 days" whether it wants to use an AT&T competitor for long-distance calls that go outside its own territory.

"We're obviously interested in saving money," he adds.

Grads Will Hear Jesse Jackson

GREENSBORO (AP) — Democratic presidential hopeful the Rev. Jesse Jackson will deliver the commencement speech at his alma mater, North Carolina A&T State University, school officials said.

The ceremony will be at 11 a.m. on May 6, N.C. A&T Chancellor Edward B. Fort said Monday.

Up to 14,000 people are expected to attend the ceremony in the Greensboro Coliseum, Fort said.

A Breath Test Not Trusted

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CREVE COEUR, Mo. (AP) — About halfway through "happy hour," Charlie Grable slipped a quarter into a brightly colored machine at a popular restaurant. Grabbing a straw from a dispenser, he struck it in the machine and blew into it.

"I've had five or six glasses of beer since I got here," Grable said. "This machine says I can drive. But I wouldn't use it as gospel truth."

Grable is not alone in his distrust of the breath-testing machine.

When this affluent St. Louis suburb passed an ordinance 16 months ago requiring nine restaurants to install them for voluntary use by customers, the law was touted as the first of its kind in the country.

But city officials have had their troubles enforcing it.

Faulty equipment supplied grossly inaccurate readings and overzealous patrons dumped drinks on the machines, rendering them useless for weeks at a stretch.

The machines, which give an unofficial reading of blood-alcohol content, can be either rented or purchased. Only two restaurants currently have them in working order.

"We've had some problems with maintenance and with the accuracy of the machines," said Mayor Harold Dielmann. "But we hope to have them back in all of the bars and restaurants by May 1."

Dave Cochran, manager of the Stewart Anderson Cattle Co. restaurant, said the machine he bought for $1,700, "tends to be misused and abused more than it is properly used."

But he recalled at least one time when it changed a person's mind about driving home.

"A wife asked her husband to breathe into the machine, and if he failed, he wasn't allowed to drive home," Cochran said. "He failed, so he handed the keys over."

David Seager, manager of a El Torito, a Mexican eatery across the street from Stewart Anderson's, said his experiences with the breath-testing machine have been "terrible" because of frequent breakdowns.

"They're disgusting. I want them out," Seager said. "The only reason I keep putting up with it is because I don't want to jeopardize my liquor license."

Police Chief Don Daniel said the number of drunken driving arrests in Creve Coeur decreased from 234 in 1982 to 195 last year. But Daniel said the decrease could be attributed to stiffer state laws against drunken drivers and efforts by several citizens' groups.

"I'd like to believe they are helpful," Daniel said. "If it keeps one person off the street who shouldn't be there, then we don't have to go about cleaning up the problem by punishing the offender after the fact."

Dielmann maintains that statistics could never bear out the true success of the program because it reshapes attitudes about drinking and driving.

"It's brought an awareness to the community," the mayor said. "Hey, I like to have a drink myself. But there ought to be some way to know where you stand before you grab the car keys."

"Happy hour" was just about over when Joe Hamill, a friend of Grable, decided to take the test after his fifth martini.

The red light came on, but Hamill insisted he was still able to drive.

"It won't stop me from getting into my car," he said. "I still rely on my own judgment."

Lobbying Against Traditional Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — College students from across the nation are lobbying against the Reagan's administration's 1985 budget for student financial aid and proposals on Capitol Hill to freeze spending.

Three groups said in a joint statement that federal aid to students has been slashed by more than 20 percent since 1980. Reagan's fiscal 1985 budget would make the figure 26 percent, according to the National Student Association, the National Coalition of Independent College and University Students and the National Organization of Black College and University Students.

Education Secretary T.H. Bell told a House committee last week that the administration's plan proposes to "restore the traditional responsibility of the parent and student for helping to finance the cost of a college education and to target the neediest students with federal funds.

DISPOSAL PROBLEM

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Denmark's environment minister has ordered an urgent study of how an estimated 100,000 tons of German mustard gas dumped after World War I, can be fished out of the Baltic Sea.

(Even without these cards, your application will be processed with minimum delay.) Ask a Lowe's salesperson for complete details, and put a whole new world of home improvement right at your fingertips. Stop by today... and see how your home improvement spending can be improved.

Our Newest! The Lowe's Low Payment Credit Plan!

LOWE'S
Low Payment Credit Plan

Finance Major Purchases Of Up To $5,000.

Our Low Payment Plan offers you an easier way to make those major home improvements and larger purchases. It's designed to let you finance purchases of $250 to $5,000 for up to five years at competitive rates. The result is a very low monthly payment that fits comfortably into your family budget and brings important home additions, from a new refrigerator to a new roof, within easy reach. Just look for the above symbol on selected items in our ads. And, where space is available, we'll also provide the specific credit details on selected items, to give you an idea of the relative size of monthly payments and Annual Percentage Rates. Low Payment Credit Terms are outlined below. So apply today. You may qualify for up to $1,000 instant credit when you present your Visa, American Express, MasterCard, Sears or Lowe's card!

*Lowe's Low Payment Credit Terms: Your credit must be satisfactory. Our cash price does not include sales tax. The monthly payment price may be slightly lower, depending upon state law. The monthly payment price includes sales tax of 4%. If sales tax differs in your area, the monthly payment will vary slightly. Credit Life and Disability Insurance is available upon request. Delivery charges are excluded.

MasterCard VISA AMERICAN EXPRESS

In addition to the above, we also honor MasterCard, Visa and American Express.

Lowe's Pricing Policy: Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended as a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area, and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices as described above represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.
