Tornado Kills Eight In County

HOME DESTROYED ... Joel Brown (with cap) took time today to look over the remains of his house trailer, along with his brother, Jay (center) and Kevin Ivey. Brown's trailer

A tornado, spawned by an intense spring storm, left eight people dead and at least 146 people injured in Pitt County Wednesday night as it slammed into Ayden, then roared along a northeasterly path, demolishing homes, house trailers and other property from N.C. 43 south of Greenville, to Simpson, near N.C. 33 east of the city.

The tornado which hit Ayden, about 9:10 to 9:15 p.m., entered Pitt County after destroying a number of homes in the Scuffleton area of Greene County.

The high winds wreaked havoc in the Pines subdivision west of N.C. 11 at Ayden, then damaged the new middle school under construction and the elementary school, as well as the Harris and Food Lion supermarkets, Farmer Funeral Home and other buildings.

The funnel-shaped cloud then jumped about eight miles to N.C. 43, three miles south of the Greenville city limits, where it caused extensive damage to mobile homes in the Taylor Estates trailer park.

For the next four miles, the tornado created havoc to homes and other buildings along SR 1753, SR 1732, SR 1726, SR 1727 (near the Eastern Pines Fire Department), all in the Portertown area, and in the village of Simpson.

Jay Brown, his wife and two children were in their trailer at Taylor Estates when the tornado hit.

Brown said "we found ourselves outside," as he poked through the rubble last night, trying to find a pair of shoes. Their home was destroyed. Their two cars were heavily damaged.

A short distance away, on SR 1732, workers loaded a stretcher carrying Ray Brewer, who suffered eye and ankle injuries, on a rescue truck, then helped Alene Harris to the waiting vehicle.

They both had been in a mobile home which was destroyed. When the tornado passed, they found themselves in a field across the road.

In Simpson, the new U.S. Post Office building lost half of its roof; one truck was damaged when the fire department lost part of one side and rear wall.

This morning, Lonnie House searched through the wreckage of his mobile home on SR 1726 ... 50 feet from where the trailer stood before the storm.

"It blew me out. I got behind a tree once I got out," House said. "I was looking out a window for it when it hit. I got down on my hands and knees. It sounded like a train. It got louder, got louder."

A short distance down the road, Walter Bryant looked at the damage to his home. A part of someone's 2-by-8-inch board came through a picture window at the front of his house and came to rest against the rear wall.

"I was right here," he said. "I ran in the other room" before his house was damaged, when "it popped into my mind it was a tornado."

"It sounded like a locomotive ... roaring, vibrating. It shook the house," Bryant said.

"There was a terrible noise when the (window) glass shot ... a frightening noise."

Bryant's wife and mother-in-law were at a mobile home next door. Both were injured.

Across the highway, Ed Sturgeon said he returned home a hour after the tornado struck. His two children and a babysitter were at home. The babysitter was taken to the hospital for treatment of nerves.

A few houses away, Corbett Joyner said he and his wife, headed in opposite directions met in a hallway of their home as "the top went off." They got down on the floor.

A few moments later, the couple rescued their 12-year-old son from his destroyed bedroom and escaped by climbing over the front wall of the house which had toppled into the livingroom.

Aided The Homeless And Injured

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The gymnasium at D.H. Conley High School, off N.C. 43, was deserted this morning after serving as a refuge for approximately 65 Pitt Countians Wednesday night after a tornado swept through the southern part of the county.

Those who had spent part of the night in the gymnasium left as the weather calmed to sift through the wreckage of their homes.

Volunteers "pulled together" and worked to aid the homeless and injured in the wake of Wednesday night's twister. Volunteers remaining at the gym said the victims in the southern part of the county were moved to the school Wednesday night shortly after the tornado hit.

Local organizations, including the Red Cross, the Salvation Army and the Pitt County Mental Health Center, along with emergency medical technicians and rescue personnel from throughout Pitt County and from Elm City, Vanceboro, Belhaven, Aurora and Wilson, among others, rushed to the aid of the disaster victims.

Bobby Joyner, Pitt County

emergency management coordinator, said, "I am sure that the homes damaged runs into the hundreds."

Charles Davenport, Red Cross Disaster director for the county, said this was his first experience providing disaster relief. He remained at D.H. Conley most of the night.

"It went so much better than I had ever dreamed," he said this morning. "Everyone pitched in and pulled together. Someone would say, 'Let's do this,' and boom, it was done."

One hundred cots and blankets were set up in the gymnasium of the school and the Salvation Army and the cafeteria of the school provided food. Emergency generators were brought in from surrounding areas to provide electricity in the high school.

Davenport said, "People have come to Conley today offering any assistance they can — their homes or anything."

Cay Hackney, regional supervisor for the North Carolina Office of Emergency Medical Services, helped coordinate the D.H. Conley shelter.

"The school was the staging area for out-of-area emergency vehicles and we had rescue squads and firemen from surrounding counties. Three nurses and an emergency medical technician from Pitt County Memorial Hospital were at Conley to help with the injuries."

Ms. Hackney praised the ham radio operators who helped relay messages. A command post, 43 Control, was set up to handle all radio traffic and requests. She also gave credit to the volunteers at Conley and the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Emergency Department.

"I really can't praise the Pitt County system enough," she said.

"Pitt County did a fantastic job in this emergency situation."

Ed Garrison, director of the Pitt County Department of Social Services, said the agency "will be working with the Red Cross to provide emergency assistance for the people in need. We also have staff at the D.H. Conley shelter helping families track down missing persons."

Maj. Ronald Davis of the Salvation Army said that volunteers from the agency went out throughout the disaster area Wednesday night.

"We picked our way to D.H. Conley in a round-about way and set up at midnight last night," Davis said. "We served coffee, soft drinks and refreshments to workers and victims there until about 7:30 this morning. We also dispatched a crew to Eastern Pines Fire House and the City Hall building in Ayden serving refreshments.

"Today we are circling the area and serving refreshments to the disaster workers in the field," he said.

Other members of the Salvation Army are working to feed, clothe and shelter the disaster victims.

"We are preparing clothing to give out to the disaster victims when they are able to come in and get them," Davis said. "We also have access to rooms for those people who don't have a relative or friend to stay with. Those victims should check with the Salvation Army office as soon as possible."

"As soon as the families are

The Schools

Ayden Elementary School will not be open Friday, county school officials said today, but other Pitt County schools will resume a normal schedule.

Ayden Elementary was damaged by Wednesday night's tornado and will not be usable, county school Superintendent Eddie West said this morning, for two to three weeks.

A decision will be made Friday, he said, on where to house the 500-plus students that attend the school.

"We are not going to be able to use it (the building) for a while," said West. "We're going to have to move those kids to another situation."

West said initial estimates placed the damage to the building's roof and interior at $350,000 to 500,000.

He also said two walls of the nearby New Ayden Middle School, currently under construction, were also damaged, but that no monetary estimates were available today.

TORNADO VICTIM DONATIONS ASKED

Rachael Hardee of near Simpson has asked Hotline to appeal for donations for families whose homes were devastated by the tornado Wednesday night. She said household items, clothes, food — anything of use — may be taken to New Greenville Warehouse on the Pictolus Highway from 8 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. any day through Saturday. She or someone she designates will be there to accept it.

A number of people have offered to donate trucks and their time to pick up donations, she said. For pickup, call Mrs. Hardee, New Greenville Warehouse, 752-2800.

Outside Crews Help In Utilities Repair

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

All of the Greenville Utilities' repair crews, plus two crews from Fayetteville and four crews from Wilson, were working throughout Pitt County today in attempt to restore "power to our customers by dark," GUC Director Charles Horne said this morning.

"Right now there are literally hundreds of customers without service as a result of last night's storms. Transmission lines are down and we still have a sub station out of service," Horn commented.

Most of the utility-related damage was centered from Hollywood Crossroads to Simpson, Horn said, adding that "it's almost a miracle that we had no major damage in Greenville."

"All I can say is that the damage was extremely severe. You have to see the physical damage to understand what happened. It wiped out some areas and some were literally torn to pieces," Horn said.

According to figures compiled at the GUC Water Plant at 7 a.m., there was .82 inches of rainfall Wednesday night, while the river level was 10.4 feet. Temperatures Wednesday reached 78 degrees and the low last night was 52.

Son-In-Law Needs To Be Educated

DEAR ABBY: When our married children come for Sunday dinner, one son-in-law rushes to the table before anyone else has even been seated and starts eating. He doesn't even bother to wash his hands, and from the looks of him, he rarely washes at all.

Also, when food is passed, when we have fried chicken, he picks up several pieces with his fingers before taking what he wants. Once he picked up a whole duck and just squashed it until the grease covered his hands and ran down his elbows. It was revolting!

He is not stupid; he just has no manners. We all find his crudeness quite sickening, but nobody wants to say anything to him. I mentioned this to my daughters (his wife) once, and she said, "Yes, Mom, I know, but he has so many good qualities."

Have you any suggestions on how to solve this one?

DISGUSTED IN MAINE

late? Or is it OK not to send anything?

FEELING GUILTY

DEAR GUILTY: Webster defines a gift as "something transferred voluntarily by one person to another without compensation."

It is not something one gives in order to get rid of a guilty conscience.

Your gift will be welcome any time, so don't feel that you must come up with an excuse for not having come up with a gift sooner.

DEAR ABBY: I know how "Proud Mama" feels. After she became a grandma, she became a mother again.

My youngest son is 7 and my oldest is 22. When I'm with my 7-year-old, I also get some "Grandma" comments, which doesn't bother me because the people who matter know who I am.

On one occasion, a saleswoman commented, "You look too old to be the mother of your youngest, and too young to be the mother of your oldest."

Capt. F. Lee Edwards (USN Ret.) will be the keynote speaker.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Tell your daughter privately that a few more "good qualities" — namely cleanliness and table manners — would make her husband immeasurably more attractive. And if she is unwilling to tell him, then you must take him aside and educate him. He needs to be told.

DEAR ABBY: How do I prevent the wife of a very good friend of my husband's from going through my cupboards and fridge and helping herself to whatever she wants? She is welcome to share whatever I have, but I would appreciate the opportunity to be a hostess when she is in our home.

I have already told her nicely that I didn't want her going into my cupboards and fridge, but she has ignored me. Should I give her a taste of her own medicine and invade her cupboards and fridge when I am in her home?

I don't want to jeopardize my husband's friendship with her husband, and short of not inviting them to our home, I am at a loss as to what to do next. Any suggestions?

BURNED IN BIRMINGHAM, MICH.

DEAR BURNED: Don't invade her cupboards and fridge; to do so would justify her invading yours.

The next time she heads for your kitchen, try this: "I don't mean to be an ungracious hostess, but I'm telling you for the last time that my kitchen is off-limits to guests, so if there is anything you want, please ask for it and if I have it I will be happy to get it for you."

Be assertive. Don't waffle or apologize. Say it like you mean it, and it will work.

DEAR ABBY: Six months ago a close friend of mine who lives out of town was married. My husband and I were invited to her wedding, but we were unable to attend. Some friends informed me that it isn't necessary to send a wedding gift if you don't attend the wedding. My conservative husband agreed, so we didn't send anything.

To this day I feel bad about not having sent a gift. I thought of sending them a check and telling them I thought I had sent it, but I just found it in a dresser drawer. If that sounds stupid, what other excuse could I make for sending it so

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

Homeowners who are thinking about building a fence or deck are urged to think twice about the type of wood they select.

Choose the right wood and use it properly, and you can enjoy your deck for 25 years or more. Make the wrong choice and you'll be repairing or replacing it in a year or two, according to extension wood products specialists.

Basically, homeowners have three choices when selecting wood for outdoor use. They can use pressure-treated Southern pine, the heartwood of naturally decay-resistant trees or untreated wood.

Of these alternatives, pressure-treated Southern pine is the best choice for most homeowners. It costs about half as much as decay-resistant, clear, redwood heartwood and will often last much longer. Some other naturally decay-resistant species are black locust, cedar and cypress.

Untreated Southern pine is not recommended for outdoor use because its life span is only one to two years in the ground. In addition, it is generally not practical for the homemaker to treat his own wood. The preservatives must be forced deep inside the wood and this is most easily done under pressure. Call the Extension Service at 752-2934 for more information on selecting wood for decks, fence posts, piers and other outdoor uses.

Irons
Soleplate: For normal cleaning and polishing of the soleplate of an iron, use a paste-type silver polish applied with a soft cloth. Buff with a clean, lint-free cloth. To remove more troublesome starch build-up on an iron, rub the heated soleplate over soda placed on top of a dampened cloth such as terrycloth. Keep turning the cloth and adding more soda until all the black is removed. For more securely stuck spots, you may have to use very fine steel wool, No. 0000. An occasional coating of wax on the soleplate will keep it gliding smoothly. This can be done by brushing paraffin across the warm soleplate or ironing over wax paper.

Inside Steam Iron: If your steam iron spits and sputters and occasionally makes brown spots on whatever you're ironing, you probably need to clean the steam chamber of your iron.

First, unplug and empty out any water. Put the indicator on a DRY setting. To clean the steam chamber, use either full strength white vinegar or a commercial steam iron cleaner diluted with distilled water. To dilute, follow the instructions on the bottle. Fill the iron almost full. Set it in a horizontal position on a rack in a shallow pan. Plug the iron in and turn on to a STEAM setting. Let it steam 15 minutes, then let it cool completely.

Empty out the iron. Wipe off any excess vinegar or cleaner with a damp cloth. Clean the steam vents with a swab dipped in water.

Refill with distilled water and steam again. Let cool, wipe off the iron and empty it. Now you're ready to use the iron again. To prevent almost all spitting and spattering, use distilled water in your steam iron — either the bottled kind sold in grocery stores are the kind you can make at home using a demineralizing bottle. Tap water, commercially softened water, rain water and defrosted water from the freezer all contain particles that can deposit and clog your steam iron. For best results, use distilled water. Tiny threads and fibers can become trapped in the steam iron vents, so clean them often, too.

Smaller Hospitals Are Endangered

—Paul O'Connor—

Very Unreliable

It was a voice out of the far past last week. You have to have been around politics awhile to remember Billy Sol Estes who was convicted over 20 years ago in a fertilizer tank swindle which involved federal agricultural loans. The case had political reverberations and Billy Sol dropped from public view as he served a prison term.

Last week he was back in the news. Texas papers reported he had told a grand jury that Lyndon B. Johnson ordered the murder of a federal official in 1961. The reports said Estes claimed the official could have tied the then President Johnson to Estes' activities. A U.S. Department of Agriculture official Henry M. Marshall did, indeed, die of a gunshot wound on June 3, 1961. The death was listed as a suicide for 23 years and was recently ruled a homicide by a grand jury.

Later reports did not identify who Estes implicated.

The Johnson family and former advisors to President Johnson reacted indignantly to the charges calling them scurrilous and the comments of a "con man."

And that is the way it should be left for now. Unless something more concrete than what has been said surfaces, the public should assume that President Johnson never did any such thing.

RALEIGH — The future doesn't look very promising for some of North Carolina's small rural hospitals. At least that's the opinion of two experts in hospital operations who appeared this month before the legislature's Medical Cost Containment Study Commission.

Duncan Yaggy, chief of planning for Duke Hospital, and Glenn Wilson, chairman of the Department of Social Medicine at the UNC Medical School, described a number of forces that are bearing down from all sides on small hospitals.

Small hospitals are now being forced to compete with large hospitals on both quality and cost of care. In most cases, the two experts said, they can do so on neither ground. Small hospitals are being forced to compete with clinics and other special out-patient care facilities which can treat people for minor ailments and injuries far less expensively. And small hospitals are being squeezed by new government regulations and health insurance company guidelines that are aimed at efficiency but which also cut hospital income.

The result, Wilson said, is that 30 percent of America's hospitals might close within the next decade. That would mean between 25 and 45 North Carolina hospitals would go under.

It's not that North Carolina will be left with a hospital system unable to treat those who need care, the two said. This shaking out process will mean that the surviving hospitals will probably have higher occupancy rates and maybe fewer financial problems. But, it will mean that geographic areas may be left without a local hospital.

Wilson said that hospital industry economics indicate that hospitals of less than 200 beds simply won't be efficient enough to survive in the future. Smaller hospitals will not be able to afford the capital investments necessary for today's high tech medical equipment. They won't be able to afford the specialized services that will draw patients. At the other end of the spectrum, new medical clinics which specialize in emergency care and out-patient surgery are draining away from these hospitals the patients with the least severe illnesses. The small hospital has been hit from two sides and it's lost both battles.

Yaggy said there are other pressures involved. Employers are trying to reduce their health insurance costs so they're adding deductibles and co-payments to their health plans. These out-of-pocket expenses will discourage some patients from going to the hospital. Second opinions are reducing the number of unnecessary operations and cutting hospital income. Insurance companies are writing rules that eliminate some of the inefficiencies of admission and testing procedures which had benefitted the hospitals with extra daily room charges. And, insurance companies are offering incentives to physicians who'll perform outpatient surgery.

These problems have not hit North Carolina as severely as they've hit other states, Yaggy said. But they will. At that time, those patients who rely on small hospitals will have trouble. When a small community's hospital closes, it might have trouble holding or attracting physicians.

The two warned the committee that small hospitals may have to be merged, and new centrally located medium-sized hospitals may have to replace the local hospitals of three or four small counties. Small hospitals may have to change to accommodate the patients they can get, those seeking long-term care and ambulatory surgery.

The alternative, the two experts said, are a lot of hospital closings in North Carolina's smaller communities.

—James Kilpatrick—

Tough Decision

What now politically for R.L. "Bob" Martin? The county commissioner had decided to run for N.C. Senate representing the district that included Pitt County. Then came a court ruling which forced a redistricting that put Martin's hometown in the sixth district. That district puts part of Pitt in with parts of Martin, Edgecombe and Wilson counties.

Now, however it has been ruled that Martin can still change his residence to the ninth district, which includes Greenville and be a candidate for that Senate seat.

He is pondering what to do. It is a difficult decision for him in what has already become a complex political situation.

Fudging Numbers

NEW YORK (AP) — If some of the nation's biggest banks legally avoid listing as defective some of their unpaid loans to Argentina it would not be the first time the numbers have been fudged.

Fudging the numbers is an old tradition, practiced by anyone with a point to make that might be contrary to the evidence.

As a political tool it has been developed almost to the status of art. It is practiced in labor relations, in economic debates, in corporate accounting, in mortgage loans, in government contracts, in taxation battles.

Many people are convinced it was used in estimating nuclear power costs, in part because advocates thought it was the best way for utilities to go, whatever the cost. The cost, of course, is many times the estimates.

Fudging has been used in matters of even greater social consequence. Many critics, for instance, claim that Social Security's immediate problems were "solved" by fudging the numbers. And others feel certain that the same techniques will be used to some degree in the debate about budget deficits.

But most of these are relatively long-range problems and tend to be more susceptible to fudging, especially after everyone has become so weary of the debate that fudging seems to be a reasonable disposal.

The banking problem, however, is immediate. It is a crisis.

If regulatory officials decide banks may not count as income the overdue (by 90 days or more) and unpaid interest on their Argentine loans there will be an immediate and precipitous income drop at some large institutions.

As matters stand, about $650 million of overdue interest must be paid to American banks by March 31. If Argentina fails to do so, U.S. regulations require the banks to lower their official earnings by that amount.

Argentina has indicated it may need more time in which to pay, which brings up the question: Should American regulations be relaxed — bent — in order to help banks to avoid lowering their reported earnings?

The question brings up more questions, perhaps the most basic of which is this: What is accomplished by hiding from the facts?

The answer offered by those who defend the bending of regulations is that Argentina might be able to pay the overdue interest in a matter of weeks, and that to reduce U.S. bank earnings in the meantime would be damaging.

The usual rejoinder by realists is that greater danger is done by hiding from the realities. Many financial authorities, for example, feel that loans to less developed nations can never be repaid in full and on time.

Numbers fudging on such a scale, should it occur, might be unusual, but in lesser amounts it is an everyday fact of life.

For years, steel companies and unions sat down to bargaining with different set of statistics for hourly wages earned. Inevitably, management's figures were higher than the union's, creating an immediate obstacle to negotiations.

Earlier this month some financial institutions were chided by regulatory officials for offering extremely high interest rates on Individual Retirement Accounts — and then explaining the rate was for two months only.

WASHINGTON — In the scenario by lawyer Melvin S. Narol, writing in the National Law Journal, it is January 1986 and the Dallas Cowboys have lost a playoff game against the Los Angeles Rams. The Cowboys have won the game in the last two seconds, but a touchdown was called back on the referee's ruling that the Dallas quarterback had crossed the line of scrimmage before throwing his pass.

A videotape of the play proves conclusively that the call was improper. The referee had confused his line markings. What do the Cowboys do?

They sue. Their suit charges that the referee's error cost the players thousands of dollars in bonuses and deprived the team of millions in TV revenues. Will the Cowboys collect?

As the law stands today, says Narol, probably not. Judges tend to stand together, and football referees are in the judgment business. Unless bribery or corruption can be proved, the courts will not impute compensable negligence to a sports official, even if error can be demonstrably shown.

Narol, a New Jersey lawyer, is an authority on sports law. His article tells us something about out litigious society and something about the importance we attach to sports. Americans tend to sue at the drop of a bat, or more aptly, the drop of a football. A few years ago, fans of the Washington Redskins brought a suit in U.S. District Court. A referee had ruled that an opposing receiver had caught an end zone pass and had not fumbled it. The fans wanted a declaratory judgment of a Redskins victory, but the court ruled their suit out of bounds.

Some of these suits get to trial. In October 1981 in Georgia, Osbourne High School was leading Lithia Springs High School 7-6 with seven minutes to play. Osbourne punted on fourth and 21, but the referee called a 15-yard penalty for roughing the kicker and declared it still Osbourne's ball on fourth and six. The referee clearly had misapplied the high school rule, which decrees an automatic first down. Osbourne lost the game and brought a suit in the local Superior Court. The school won a court order at the trial level, requiring the game to be replayed from the point of the referees error, but the decision was reversed on appeal to the Supreme Court of Georgia.

In Boone County, Mo., two years ago, a high school basketball game between Wellsville-Middleton and Glasgow led to a lawsuit. Here the issue had to do with the score itself. The official scorer had it 54-54 as the clock ran out, but both team scorebooks and the scoreboard showed that it should have been 56-54 for Wellsville-Middleton. The game went into overtime, and Glasgow won. The disgruntled losing team sought immediate injunctive relief and asked an order naming it the victor so it could advance in the state tournament, but the court dismissed for failure to state a proper claim.

It would be a pity to see athletic contests decided in legal forums instead of in sports arenas. We ought not to yield the authority of flesh-and-blood referees to the impassive evidence of electronic robots. One of the pleasures of baseball lies in booing the ump. "Blind Tom!" we yell. "Robbuh!" There wouldn't be much fun in crying "Sue 'em!" instead.

Plotting Harsh Warfare

NEW YORK — The most formidable political-labor establishment left in the country is plotting harsh warfare here on behalf of Walter F. Mondale's crucial April 3 primary test against Sen. Gary Hart, buoyed by signs that Mondale came east from Illinois a born-again winner.

As the first major primary state to disallow voting rights for independents in the Democratic primary, the Empire State denies Hart a proven electoral resource: exploiting his appeal to non-Democrats.

A hint of bloodshed was in the air only 24 hours after Mondale's endorsement by Mayor Ed Koch. Koch is a dangerous fighter with impeccable standing in the large activist Jewish community. Asked if Hart's positions on Israel would become an issue in a primary in which the Jewish vote is about one-third of the total, Koch told us: "I hope so. He must be held responsible for all his past positions on Israel." The mayor's first exhibit was Hart's late endorsement of New York Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan's dubious bill to move the U.S. Embassy in Israel to Jerusalem.

Without drawing a precise parallel, Koch recalled for us a prime factor in President Carter's precipitous 20-point tumble in the polls late in his losing 1980 primary battle with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. "The Jews smelled his sellout of Israel," Koch said. He is also advertising what he calls another Hart sin in Jewish eyes: the senator's espousal of quotas if need "to remedy the effects of past discrimination," as Hart explained to Koch in a letter.

Koch said that Gov. Mario Cuomo, Moynihan, Attorney General Abrams and Koch himself will "walk the Jewish neighborhoods," make speeches, hold rallies and do whatever Mondale asks of them between now and April 3.

Labor leaders, tied to the former vice president by AFL-CIO decision and their own choice, pledge equal help for Mondale. When Victor Gottbaum, head of the huge Local 37 of the State, County and Municipal Employees union, proposed sending anti-Hart literature to his entire membership, his political director vetoed it on grounds that at least 70 percent of the rank-and-file were already committed to Mondale.

—Elisha Douglass—

The worst liars in the world are those who lie to themselves. There are many different kinds of lies. Some people tell the so-called white lies. Others exaggerate. Still others spread malicious tales about their friends and neighbors.

But the person who tells the most damaging lie is the person who keeps deceiving himself day after day and year after year. He may never utter an untruthful word, but he continually shields himself from reality by assuring himself of something which is not true. He excuses himself for mediocrity. He deceives himself into believing that his little indulgences will never lead to anything serious. Nobody can make him face the truth about himself or the world.

People lie at different levels of personality. The deeper the level at which they lie, the more dangerous the lie. To deceive one's self is to lie at life's deepest level.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I read with great interest the article in a recent Sunday paper, "Chamber to Cite Teachers." May I, as a teacher of some years' experience, offer some helpful suggestions to Dr. Tingelstad and his committee?

You could show your appreciation by using your influence to obtain resources to provide for the needs of schools — decent modern buildings instead of mobile classrooms, grounds which are not flooded each time it rains, paved parking lots, ample supplies and equipment with which to teach and — most importantly — time to teach.

Time, or lack of it, is what causes depression. Everyone wants schools to cater to their pet project. The list of tasks schools are expected to fulfill is interminable: feed children breakfast, brush teeth, fluoride teeth, take care of medical needs, clothing needs, mental health needs. Then there are the contests and celebrations schools are expected to carry on — dental health contest, homemade valentines contest, activities for cultural arts week and heritage week, t-shirt contest, bookmarks for media week, decorate Christmas trees and make Easter eggs for the mall, energy awareness contest, black history week, children's book week, and on and on.

You could show your appreciation by using your influence to ensure class size limits, duty-free lunch periods, and other such rules are not exempted by boards. You could show your appreciation by using your influence to provide levels of pay commensurate with education levels and experience.

Perhaps I could be so bold as to ask that you show your appreciation by having the money taken from teachers for the past two years by the salary freeze returned to them and teachers placed back on the salary scale where they should be not two years behind for the remainder of their career.

Show your appreciation, yes, but don't give us another job to do, which is what an art contest is.

To the editor:

Because of recent negative publicity both locally and nationally, we feel the public is largely uninformed about the role of Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetists as health care providers.

To become a C.R.N.A., a person must first be a Registered Nurse with a good academic record, and at least one year experience in a critical care area. He or she may then be accepted at a nationally accredited school of Nurse Anesthesia. This consists of two years intensive training in the administration of various types of anesthetics and anesthetic techniques. He or she must then take and successfully complete a national qualifying examination.

Over fifty percent of the anesthetics administered in the United States is by C.R.N.A.s under the supervision of a physician.

C.R.N.A.s work in all types of hospital and clinic settings, large and small, are well trained anesthesia providers and are thoroughly competent to give a safe, high level of anesthetic care.

Lights Out, But Sermon Went On

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

The parchment-like pages rustled as members of the congregation turned to page 449 in the hymnal. There was a moment of silence, then the pianist struck up the first few bars of "To God be the Glory."

To anyone standing outside the church, it would have sounded like just another service. However, the guest speaker at Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church Wednesday night was Gov. Jim Hunt. And if that didn't make the night special enough, moments into Hunt's talk, the lights of the church blinked and then went out. As a surprised murmur went through the congregation, Hunt quipped that he hoped it wasn't an omen.

Nevertheless, he continued. "I can't emphasize enough how important the family is," Hunt told church members as ushers silently placed lighted tapers on the podium to illuminate the governor's face. Further into his sermon, the stained-glass windows began to rattle, as a storm that included whistling winds, pelting rain and tornados that struck Pitt County Wednesday night moved in. Except for an occasional nervous shuffle of feet, a cough and the voice of the governor, the church was silent.

At the end of the service, the church pastor, Dr. Cedric Pierce, took the podium. "It's been a long time since we've seen a preacher deliver a sermon by candlelight, but I'll bet none of you thought you'd ever get to see the governor do it ... Now if you Girl Scouts who were hoping to get a picture with Governor Hunt will pray real hard, maybe the lights will come on." The lights came on briefly. Then went out. "Now that's what I call an immediate answer to prayer," Pierce said.

Hunt stayed around to shake hands and talk with members of the congregation after the service until news came that a tornado had just moved through Simpson. Shortly thereafter, the governor was taken to the Greenville Airport to catch his flight home. "It took us over an hour to get him to the airport, because we wanted to find a safe route," Pierce said. "We didn't get there until 11:30, but by that time the weather had cleared and it was safe enough for the governor to fly back to Raleigh."

The Wednesday night program featuring Hunt was the climax to the Black Jack FWB Church's Special Family Month series of services. According to Pierce, other special guests this month included Jack Richardson, Pitt County Memorial Hospital administrator; Judge Arnold Jones of Goldsboro, and the church's youth director, the Rev. Stacy Carter.

Hunt declined to be interviewed after the service, saying, "This is not a political occasion."

Preparing For The 1990 Census

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau says it will hold meetings across the nation starting next month in preparation for the 1990 census.

Discussions will focus on kinds of information to be collected, questions to be asked, the best methods for getting facts and how to reach as many people as possible, the bureau said Wednesday.

River Of Lava Continues To Flow From Mauna Loa

By STEWART TAGGART
Associated Press Writer

HILO, Hawaii (AP) — A 13-mile-long river of lava from Mauna Loa moved slowly and relentlessly towards Hawaii's second largest city as some residents fled, although authorities said the lava posed no immediate threat to inhabited areas.

The flow was being fed by a fissure at the 9,000-foot level of the world's largest active volcano. The leading edge of the lava flow, its black crust concealing angry red molten rock, was about halfway between the summit and the ocean.

It moved about a half mile in 12 hours Wednesday on its advance to Hilo, a city of 40,000, Kim said.

"The lava is slowing as it moves farther from the vent," said Dr. Robert Decker, scientist in charge of the U.S. Geological Survey's Hawaiian Volcano observatory. "This may be due to its cooling and spreading and the long distance it has traveled."

But lava continued to pour at a rate of about 1 million cubic yards per hour from the eruption site on the sides of the 13,677-foot volcano, as it has since the eruption began, Decker said.

Civil Defense officials ordered no evacuations, but some residents voluntarily left their homes Wednesday, said Harry Kim, Hawaii County Civil Defense administrator.

"The flow is being monitored at this time and no residential areas are threatened. It may be several days before such a determination is made," Kim said.

The vent fed four lava flows, with the fastest-moving flow headed to the northeast. Earlier flows in the area laid down by Mauna Loa in 1852 and 1942 moved quickly early in the eruption and progressively slowed, stopping well short of present-day Hilo, Decker said.

Clearing weather late Wednesday made smoke from burning trees in front of the lava flow clearly visible from Hilo: A plume of light smoke trailed the flow's front as it coursed down the broad flank of Mauna Loa toward the city.

"The molten river is so smooth, the top is black and the sides are orange," said Joe Ruble, news director for KKBG radio in Hilo, who flew over the eruption site Wednesday afternoon.

Six Greene Co. Residents Killed

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

Six Greene County residents, including four children, were killed Wednesday night as a result of a tornado that passed through much of eastern North Carolina, according to Greene County Coroner Sandy Rouse.

"Two families of three were killed last night and I've heard that there may be two more people dead that haven't been found yet," Rouse said.

Rouse identified one family as Grace Bunn, 59, and her daughter, Carolyn Drake, 38, and Mrs. Drake's daughter, Crystal Gayle Drake, 6. All were residents of Route 2, Snow Hill.

Rouse said the deaths occurred when Ms. Bunn, who lived in a brick house beside her daughter, "went over to her daughter's trailer to get her daughter and granddaughter to come stay with her until the tornado was over. She thought it was safer in her house."

Rouse said Mrs. Drake's husband was at work.

"As they were standing on the steps of the trailer, the wind blew the trailer and the family through trees and fields for about 40 yards and they were killed instantly," the coroner said.

Rouse also said that two sisters and their brother were killed while sleeping when their trailer in Snow Hill was blown away by the high winds. The children's parents were unconscious and listed in critical condition at Lenoir Memorial Hospital.

The sisters and brother were identified as Earl Farmer, 12; Patricia Ann Farmer, 10, and Kisha Wilson, 4 months.

"The tornado literally blew their trailer to smithereens. They were battered up pretty bad," he said.

According to a spokesperson at the Snow Hill Medical Center, all six people were dead on arrival at the center. She said the center was "not too busy with other injuries. Most of the ones we saw were so severe that they were transported to hospitals."

At Lenoir Memorial Hospital, 76 people were treated for tornado-related injuries and 23 people were admitted.

Ex-Panther Will Face Sentencing

NEW YORK (AP) — A former Black Panther Party member faces 25 years to life in prison for his conviction of attempting to murder police officers three days after a botched $1.6 million Brink's holdup.

A Political Counterpunch Is Displayed By Mondale

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With the nation looking over his shoulder, Walter F. Mondale lectured Gary Hart on the real lesson of the Vietnam War and gave the Colorado senator a personal demonstration of political counterpunching.

Facing Hart across the table in the nationally televised debate, the former vice president dealt head-on Wednesday with Hart's charge that he has repeatedly failed to demonstrate leadership on the question of sending U.S. troops to fight.

For days, Hart has been pounding away at Mondale, saying the former vice president's "old-style" policies on using U.S. troops in Central America and the Middle East could lead to massive losses of American lives in the future.

"I think some of us learned a lesson from Vietnam and that is that military might in the Third World is not always going to work," Hart said in the debate put on by CBS. "This country cannot deploy young Americans in every drooble spot in the Third World and expect to solve that problem."

With the crucial New York primary looming Tuesday, Mondale fired back at Hart, hitting him on a whole range of issues from the Chrysler Corp. bail-out bill to the windfall profits tax to the nuclear freeze.

With anger in his voice, Mondale's strongest counterpunches came on the lessons of Vietnam. Admitting he had been slow to oppose the war, Mondale retorted that he at least had learned the right lesson from the U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia.

"I was late in opposing that war. I've admitted it. It was the worst mistake in my life," Mondale said.

"There is a lesson to be learned from Vietnam ... I think the problem with what you're saying is that you learned the wrong lesson," he told Hart. "The e is a proper role for American power in the world. The toughest test of presidential leadership is the sophisticated, knowledgeable use of that power."

When Hart had stepped up the pressure on Mondale earlier this week on keeping U.S. troops in Central America, Mondale's responses had been complicated and unclear.

Hart had put Mondale on the defensive for the first time in almost two weeks. But Mondale was the one attacking Wednesday, and Hart was on the defensive during the debate.

"Why do you question my commitment to arms control and civil rights?" Hart said of two of Mondale's most frequent charges.

Mondale was upset by Hart's rhetoric and the suggestion in his ads that Mondale's policies are reminiscent of the Vietnam era and might lead to many U.S. deaths.

"Why do you run those ads that suggest that I'm out trying to kill kids, when you know better. I'm a person who believes in peace," Mondale said.

With Mondale on the attack, Hart's responses were generally that Mondale had his facts wrong.

"Vice President Mondale doesn't always characterize the record accurately," Hart said at one point.

All the back and forth between Hart and Mondale left the Rev. Jesse Jackson often with the role of peacemaker, although he got off a few salvos of his own — at both other men.

In fact, the black candidate began the debate on use of U.S. troops as he tried to stop an argument between Hart and Mondale on the nuclear freeze.

"The reason I'm trying to get us off of that is because — he may have been slow — and then you (Mondale) were slow in coming out of Vietnam and slow on the invasion in Grenada," Jackson said.

And he didn't think much of his opponents' arguments about who was first on the nuclear freeze and other issues.

"I think the point is not whether or not Gary caught onto a good idea later because a good idea's a good idea," he said.

TO INVITE REAGAN
DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Parliament's Procedure and Privileges Committee has decided to invite President Reagan to address a joint session when he visits Ireland in June.

Negative On Embassy Shift

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan said a bill requiring the shift of the U.S. embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem "should never have been introduced" in Congress, and suggested he would veto such legislation.

"... If we are to have a negotiated peace that will end once and for all the hostility between the Arab world and Israel, then that would be one of the things to be negotiated," Reagan said in an interview published today in The New York Times.

Reagan said any such transfer of the embassy would be "most unwise." Asked if he would veto such legislation, Reagan replied: "I am hoping I won't have to."

The president said that until the two sides in the dispute can reach decisions on "Jerusalem, the West Bank, things of this kind," the United States "has no right to put itself in a position of trying to lean one way or the other on those those areas for negotiation."

Presidential candidates Walter Mondale and Gary Hart favor moving the U.S. Embassy to Jerusalem, while the Rev. Jesse Jackson opposes it.

Reagan was asked whether U.S. intervention in Lebanon was worth the price of hundreds of Marine casualties.

"I don't know how you answer this thing that is becoming worldwide now, the terrorist method of suicide attacks and so forth. ... We did not succeed in what we thought could have gone forward," he said.

The president defended U.S. support of guerrillas trying to overthrow the government in Nicaragua, a government with diplomatic ties to the United States.

"Well, the answer to that is, first of all, this particular government of Nicaragua is a government that was set up by force of arms and the people have never chosen it. It's a revolutionary government."

On another matter, Reagan said U.S. government entitlement programs should be restructured, but declined to be specific on his plans for Social Security and Medicare.

"... This is something that is going to require thorough study to ensure that you do not pull the rug out from under anyone who presently depended on those programs," he said.

Reagan's comments came in a 37-minute interview with the Times in the Oval Office at the White House.

Leading Indicators Point Upward During February

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main gauge of future economic activity rose a healthy 0.7 percent in February, the government reported today, as the economy continued to show surprising strength.

The February increase in the Index of Leading Economic Indicators was down from January's 1 percent rise but still stronger than many economists had predicted.

That optimistic outlook was clouded, however, by a separate report that the nation's foreign trade deficit posted a record in February of $10.1 billion. It marked the second straight month that a record has been set, seeming to confirm pessimistic forecasts that the trade deficit for the year will easily top $100 billion and far surpass last year's record of $69.4 billion.

The increase in the index was the 17th rise in the last 18 months as the nation has climbed steadily out of the depths of the 1981-82 recession.

Since March 1982, when the index hit its low point, it has risen 23.2 percent, posting a better improvement than the average 17.8 percent rise over similar time periods for economic recoveries following World War II.

When the index declined in November and showed only slight improvement in December, many economists said that confirmed predictions economic growth would slow considerably in 1984.

But so far this year, the index has performed much better than in the closing months of 1983. The index is designed to forecast economic activity in the next six to nine months.

Five of the 10 indicators available for February contributed to the increase in the index. Improvements were shown in new state unemployment claims, net business formation, building permits, money supply and vendor performance, which shows how fast companies make deliveries to customers. As in January, the best improvement came from a surge in building permits.

Four of the indicators decreased.

They included manufacturers' new orders for consumer goods and materials, contracts and orders for plant and equipment, the price of sensitive raw materials and stock market prices, which contributed the largest amount to the decline.

One indicator, the average workweek, remained unchanged.

The report revised the December increase from 0.1 percent to 0.2 percent and changed the initial January rise from 1.1 percent to 1 percent.

The index now stands at 165.9 percent of its 1967 base of 100.

Seek Spread Out Defense Slashes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department is trying to spread a proposed slowdown in its budget buildup among many of its departments instead of making drastic cuts in any large weapons or individual programs, a top Pentagon official says.

"We're trying to make sure the cuts are as balanced as we can make them," Lawrence Korb, assistant secretary of defense for manpower, said Wednesday at a seminar sponsored by the Georgetown University Center for Strategic and International Studies.

The White House and Senate Republicans recently agreed to trim President Reagan's fiscal 1985 defense spending request by $14 billion to $291 billion.

Know 6 Dead In Bertie Twisters

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

AULANDER — Six people were known dead and 19 injured were in hospitals this morning, two in serious condition, following a 9 p.m. tornado that cut a four-mile long swath in the Lewiston-Woodville area in northwestern Bertie County Wednesday night, 42 miles north of Greenville.

Names of the killed and injured had not been released at mid-morning today.

Billy Smithwick, Civil Disaster Coordinator in Aulander, said "the storm came in just about 9 o'clock and lasted for about six minutes. It struck about three miles west of Woodville, a short distance outside Lewiston. The tornado cut a path of destruction about four miles long on a northeast tract, then lifted a little, doing less damage once out of the four-mile path."

It was within the four-mile stretch, Smithwick says, "that the six fatalities occurred. Fatalities included both men and women. The bodies were taken to morgues from the scene."

Smithwick reports that "somewhere between 75 and 100 people were treated at the scene for cuts and bruises. Of the 19 injured and taken to hospitals, five were taken to Bertie Hospital, others to Roanoke-Chowan Hospital in Ahoskie. The two who are in serious condition with head injuries were taken from Roanoke-Chowan to Pitt (County) Memorial Hospital."

The condition of those hospitalized was not known, and no estimate is available on property damage resulting from the tornado. The storm abated as it continued its northeast path, passing between Aulander and Connaritsa.

Smithwick said there were no reports of serious damage or injuries in Windsor or other areas of Bertie County.

In Martin County, between Pitt and Bertie counties, officials reported no injuries or serious damage to property. The only reported storm damage was minor damage in the Farm Life Community.

Endorsed By PAC

A political action committee for the N.C. Chapter of the National Association of Social Workers and the North Carolina Social Services Association — North Carolina Political Action for Candidate Election (NC-PACE) — has endorsed a number of candidates for the state House and Senate races, as well as candidates for the U.S. Congress.

Area candidates endorsed by NC-PACE include Joseph Parker of Ahoskie, who is seeking the state House seat from the 6th district (which includes Bethel and Carolina Townships in Pitt County), and 1st District Rep. Walter Jones of Farmville, who is seeking reelection.

In other races, NC-PACE endorsed Bob Jordan, a candidate for the Democratic nomination as lieutenant governor, and Gov. Jim Hunt, a candidate for the U.S. Senate.

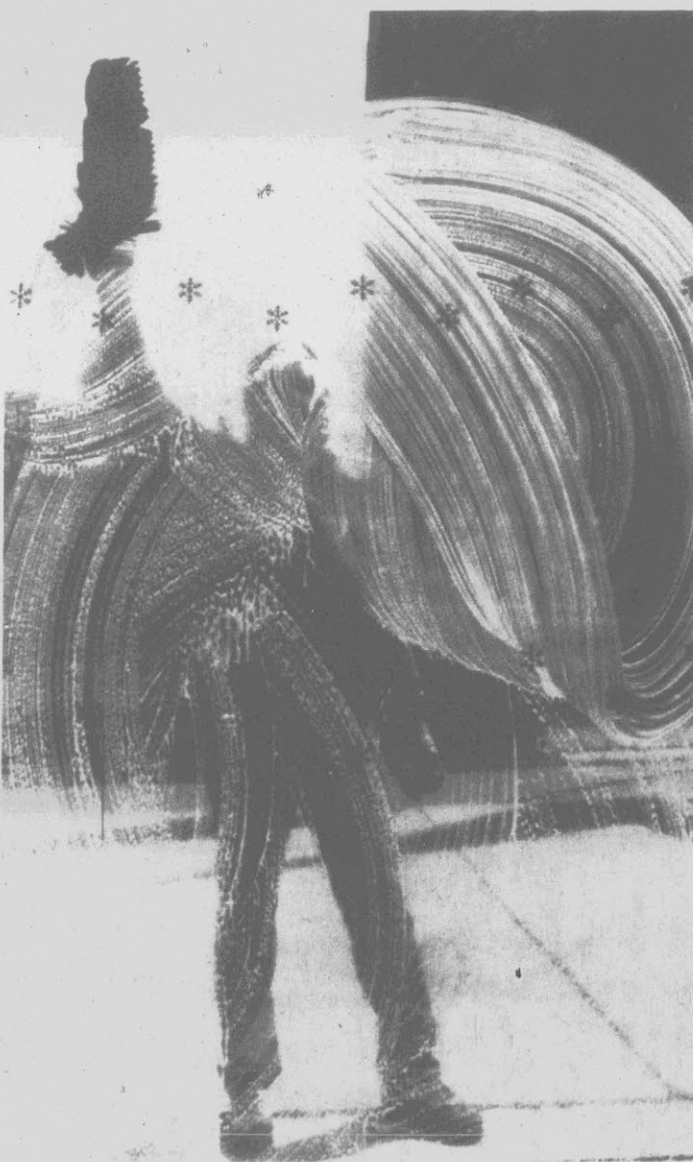

Although citing no individual candidate for governor, NC-PACE said of the Democratic hopefuls, Tom Gilmore, Eddie Knox and Rufus Edmisten support positions most closely aligned with the objectives of NC-PACE.

No endorsements were made in primary races where there is no opposition or in areas effected by redistricting.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, hesitating after Wednesday's strong rally.

The 10:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials stood at 1,174.62, unchanged from Wednesday's close.

Gainers held a 3-2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The catalyst for Wednesday's rally, most analysts agreed, was a drop in interest rates in the credit markets.

Rates on Treasury bills and long-term government bonds turned upward again this morning, however.

The government reported this morning that the index of leading economic indicators, which is designed to detect future economic trends, rose 0.7 percent in February.

Today's early volume leaders included Amax, up 1/4 at 27 1/4; Dana Corp., unchanged at 26, and Citicorp, down 1/4 at 35.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrials shot up 20.31 points to 1,174.62, for K their biggest gain since a 30.47-point rise on Feb. 24. K

With more than 1,100 shares rising in price, advances out-numbered declines by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume increased to 104.87 million shares from 73.67 million Tuesday.

The NYSE's composite index rose 1.35 to 91.90. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .95 at 210.14.

146 Were Treated At Hospital

By CAROL TYLER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County death toll from the tornadoes which struck this area Wednesday night stood at eight at midday.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital reported treating 146 persons who had sustained injuries in the tornadoes which struck Pitt and neighboring counties.

Four other persons were dead on arrival at the hospital. Four of those brought in died and 28 were admitted, ten with critical injuries. Hospital officials said 103 were treated and released and four were still being observed this morning.

The eight dead were identified by Dr. Stan Harris, regional medical examiner, as:

- Nellie Riggs, age unknown.
- Pam Price, late 20s.
- Michael Lee House, 15, of Route 9, Greenville.
- Albert Green Paramore, Route 9, Greenville.
- Jerry T. Worthington, 62, of Route 1, Ayden.
- Carol Tripp Taylor, 42, of Route 2, Greenville.
- George Robert Armistead, 62, of Clinton.
- Donna Lee Suggs, 28.

Most of them died of either head or chest injuries, Harris said. He said he had little information about the circumstances of each death.

"We declared a Level I disaster as soon as we learned that the tornado had hit in Ayden — at 9:15 p.m.," PCMH Vice President Fred Brown said. "This means we would be expecting 25 or fewer disaster-related emergencies. Within a few minutes we'd upped it to Level II, 25-50 persons expected, and it very soon became apparent as people started flooding in that we had a full Level III emergency. It was near shift change time and we asked second-shift personnel to stay and called in doctors and other personnel in addition to the third shift people who were coming to work anyway. In all we added about 300 extra staff persons to take care of the injured."

Seven persons had undergone surgery by 5 a.m. today and many orthopedic injuries were treated. "We really couldn't describe or classify the injuries," Brown said, "except to say multiple trauma. There is some of everything."

Hundreds of family members came pouring in to wait with or learn about particular injured persons, Brown said. They were accommodated in the hospital cafeteria with a public address system set up to let each family know as soon as possible about their loved one's condition. As patients were released, they and their families were, in some cases, transported to the evacuation center at D.H. Conley High School by GREAT buses donated by the city of Greenville.

Of those treated, most were thought to be from Pitt County, although Bertie County reported sending two persons first to Roanoke-Chowan and then to Pitt Memorial.

A few Pitt Countians were taken to Beaufort County Hospital. Only one, Elvin Ray Brewer, was still a patient at the Washington, N.C., hospital this morning.

was the front wall. Empty caskets were scattered on the ground at the rear of the building.

"I just can't believe it. It's a total loss," a funeral home employee said this morning.

Ayden Elementary School received damage estimated by Pitt County officials at $350,000 to $500,000. School Superintendent Eddie West said the school would be closed for two or more weeks, with the students going to other schools.

Jeff Clark, manager of Harris' Supermarket in Ayden, said "the entire front wall has been pushed in ... there's more structural damage than anything. All our frozen foods are gone," because the electric power went off.

"A storage shed in back is gone, the roof damaged. It's just amazing. I can't believe it," Clark said.

Cora Wade of Grifton, who rents a barn in Ayden for her horse Bee-Bee, said the wind "picked up Bee-Bee, carried her through the air" for a short distance. The horse was bruised but not injured seriously.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital officials said 28 of the 146 people treated for injuries were admitted, ten in critical condition.

At least one person, Faye Creagan, a teacher at E.B. Aycock Junior High School in Greenville, was listed as missing late this morning.

Her principal, Gene Baker, said her mobile home near Simpson was demolished and that Mrs. Creagan did not report for work this morning.

Bobby Joyner, Pitt County fire marshal and emergency management coordinator, said rescue units from Pinetops, Craven County, Wilson County, Belhaven, Edgecombe County, Williamston and Robersonville joined with squads from Ayden, Farmville, Winterville and Greenville, and all Pitt County fire departments, in searching the rubble for victims and transporting the injured.

A command post was set up in the courthouse about 9:30 or 9:45 p.m. Wednesday to direct rescue efforts, according to Joyner, who said the Greenville National Guard unit was "called in about 10 p.m. last night to help secure the area, search" and patrol the roads in an effort to prevent looting.

Although Beaufort County Hospital in Washington offered to help take care of those injured, Joyner said PCMH was "able to handle all of them in-house."

Joyner said employees of the county tax supervisor's office were "out surveying ... to give an estimate of the damage."

Joyner also said that Gov. Jim Hunt would fly to Greenville sometime today to survey the damage left by the storm.

All Greenville Utilities Commission repair crews were called out immediately after the tornado struck in an effort to restore power to customers as soon as possible.

"There are literally hundreds of customers without service," GUC Director Charles Horne said this morning, with most of the utility damage centered from Hollywood Crossroads to Simpson.

Rep. Walter Jones, whose district includes Pitt and several of the other counties hit by tornadoes Wednesday, said today, "Along with all other citizens, I am extremely concerned about the loss of life and property.

"At the present time, there is no way to assess the total damage, but once the damage is determined, then the procedure is for the governor to request the president of the United States to declare the affected area eligible for certain emergency assistance for restoration and other purposes."

Jones said he has already contacted Randy Davis, "a special assistant to the president for such matters, and requested that if and when the request for emergency assistance reaches the White House, it be expedited as soon as possible," and "he assured me he would offer every possible assistance."

Jones said he also has written President Reagan, "making the same request in order that those individuals and municipalities can receive the assistance at the earliest possible moment."

Joyner and other officials urged persons not to try to visit the areas affected by the storm.

Joyner suggested that residents of the areas be alert for potential hazards, such as shattered glass, splintered wood or other sharp objects, and take extreme care when moving about.

He also said if "your property is damaged, make temporary repairs to prevent further loss from rain, wind and looting, then contact your insurance agent as soon as possible."

Said To Carry Outback Brunt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women and children are bearing the brunt of three years of federal budget cuts that have left America worse off than before, 78 private organizations say in a report on President Reagan's economic programs.

"For three years we have seen unwarranted cuts in domestic survival programs that have weakened, not strengthened, families, that have made children hungrier, not healthier," Eleanor Holmes Norton of the Coalition on Women and the Budget told a news conference called to unveil the 100-page report titled "Inequality of Sacrifice."

"We have no comment," Ed Dale, spokesman for Budget Director David Stockman, said when asked about the report.

getting re-established, they will need furnishings and we will be ready with some furnishings to help them out," he continued.

Davis said the Salvation Army is in need of clothes and food, but especially furniture and appliances.

"I have no doubt that they will come through, the way people are in Pitt County," Davis said.

U.S. Weaponry Used By Sudan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sudan is using American weapons against rebels in its southern region, but this country is making no effort to help quell the religious rebellion, U.S. officials say.

James Bishop, deputy assistant secretary of state, told a House subcommittee hearing Wednesday that a U.S. airlift into the Sudan recently was aimed at bolstering that nation's air defense system in the aftermath of a March 16 bombing of the Sudanese capital he said was conducted by an aircraft based in Libya.

Michigan Captures NIT

NEW YORK (AP) — Tim McCormick was second best for Michigan all season. When it came time for someone to take the Wolverines to the championship of the National Invitation Tournament, the 6-foot-11 forward took the lead.

McCormick scored a career-high 28 points, on 13-of-16 shooting, pulled down 14 rebounds and was voted Most Valuable Player as the Wolverines defeated Notre Dame 83-63 Wednesday night for the 47th NIT title.

"It's good to see McCormick play like this," Michigan Coach Bill Frieder said of his team's second-leading scorer and rebounder this year. "He's capable of being a great player and he's been a great player in this NIT."

In the five tournament games McCormick averaged 15.8 points and 8.6 rebounds, still second best to sophomore center Roy Tarpley's totals of 19.6 and 11.6. But the championship game was all McCormick's.

"There's no question, this is the thrill of my life," McCormick, a junior in eligibility, said of the MVP honor. "At the beginning of the tournament we were a little bit disappointed not to get into the NCAA. But we looked at it very positively, saying we could win the NIT and that was our goal. I think if we would have been in the NCAA we would have fared well against those teams, but realistically we weren't going to win the tournament."

If the Wolverines, fourth-place finishers in the Big Ten, played as they did at the start of the second half against Notre Dame they might have swept any comers away.

The Fighting Irish, 21-12, had rallied from a 26-17 deficit with 3:21 remaining in the first half to forge a 28-28 tie 54 seconds into the second half on two free throws by Tim Kempton. That was the beginning of the end for Notre Dame.

Michigan, 23-10, reeled off seven straight points, three by McCormick, before Notre Dame scored on a layup by Jim Dolan to make it 35-30 with 15:09 remaining. Thirteen straight Michigan points, six by Tarpley, and 3:52 later it was virtually over as the Wolverines had a 48-30 lead. After a rebound basket by Kempton, Michigan scored four more points and it had a 20-point lead.

Michigan finished the night with 56 percent shooting, including 19-of-26 in the second half.

"Those are nice to get, you don't get those very often," Frieder said of the spurt. "In the second half, we did a good job of controlling the defensive boards and a good job of attacking the press and getting some easy baskets. I think for a little while there we got them to shoot it a little quicker than they wanted to and we got half a dozen easy baskets."

The baskets didn't come easy for Notre Dame's Tom Sluby, who finished with 19 points, just above his average for the season and the same total as Kempton, but it was on 7-for-20 shooting. Entering the game, Sluby was shooting 51 percent from the field.

"I thought we did a great job on Sluby," Frieder said. "I thought (Antoine) Joubert did a great job on him initially and I thought (Richard) Relfford and the guys in our zone did real well throughout the game."

"It seemed as if they ran a lot of people at me," Sluby, who scored 26 points in the semifinal victory over Southwestern Louisiana, said. "They double-teamed me a lot and when I got in the post they triple-teamed. They were looking to lay off their man and I didn't want to force a lot of shots. They just doubled up on me a lot."

Virginia Tech, 22-13, defeated Southwestern Louisiana, 23-10, 71-70 in the consolation game behind the 20 points of sophomore guard Dell Curry. Senior forward Graylin Warner led the Ragin' Cajuns with 21 points.

Joining McCormick as the all-tournament team were Tarpley, Sluby, Ken Barlow of Notre Dame, Curry, and Alonza Allen of Southwestern Louisiana.

Hall Refuses To Get Involved In Dispute Over Hoya Tactics

SEATTLE (AP) — Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall refuses to say whether he thinks John Thompson's Georgetown Hoyas play dirty.

He'd rather let the officials answer that question.

"I don't think it really matters what we think," Hall said Wednesday. "It's up to the officials to call the game. It's their job."

"People are entitled to say the things that they say about us as long as they understand that other people are entitled to remain silent."

The third-ranked Wildcats, 29-4, meet No. 2 Georgetown, 32-3, Saturday in the semifinals of the NCAA basketball tournament following the game between unranked Virginia, 21-11, and No. 5 Houston, 31-4.

The winners play Monday night to determine the national collegiate championship.

"It's our job to play the game, and that's what we intend to do," Hall said by telephone hookup. "We're not there to officiate."

Thompson, who has said he resents implications that his Hoyas play like thugs, was the only coach at the news conference and told reporters he hopes none of the officials arrived in Seattle with preconceived notions about Georgetown's style of play.

He likened the situation to prejudicial publicity before a trial.

"The only problem I have with being called aggressive and intimidating is that I certainly hope the people who are calling the game aren't picking this stuff up and coming in with a predetermined idea about it," Thompson said.

Neither Coach Terry Holland of Virginia nor Guy Lewis of Houston said he could see anything improper about Georgetown's style of play.

"Georgetown plays a very physical brand of basketball like all of us would like our teams to play," Holland said.

"I admire their team myself," added Lewis. "They look very aggressive and play good defense. I see nothing wrong with the way they play."

Both Thompson and Hall drew laughter on two different subjects.

Hall's team is headed by the menacing "Twin Towers" of 7-foot-1 Sam Bowie and 6-foot-11 Melvin Turpin.

"I don't consider us physical at all," he said amid laughter. "We're a finesse ball club."

Thompson, who sequesters his team in different locations while on the road in an attempt to keep its concentration high, refused to divulge where his Hoyas were staying this week.

"I'm going to have a raffle on that subject," he said with a smile. "I can't give you that information free because I've already read three different places where we're staying, one of them being the hotel where we're at right now."

Holland talked about trying to defend Houston's star center, Akeem Olajuwon, who scored 29 points in the Cougars' victory over Wake Forest last weekend to get to the Final Four.

"I think it was one of the finest games that I've ever seen a big man have," Holland said. "If he plays like that against us, we'll be packing it in to go back to Charlottesville."

Heitz Glad He Stuck Around

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — For Kentucky's Tom Heitz, no amount of money is worth passing up a chance to win the NCAA championship.

Heitz, a fifth-year senior who earned a business degree last spring, rarely plays for the Wildcats and could have foregone his last year of eligibility to stick with his lucrative job trading on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, as he has for the past two summers.

"I had some second thoughts, but when we made the Final Four, I was glad I chose to come back for my fifth year," Heitz said. "It would have been hard to be in Chicago, no matter how much money I was making, and watching my teammates in Seattle."

"I came back for the chance to win the national championship," he said. "Money can't buy that. So few people can get involved in a national champion — you can't put a price on that."

The 6-foot-9, 220-pound forward-center from Hamilton, Ind., will be in Seattle with his third-ranked teammates this weekend for their Final Four matchup against No. 2 Georgetown.

It might have been tempting for a guy who rarely plays to have passed up another year of tough workouts and grueling travel.

Heitz — overshadowed by Sam Bowie, Melvin Turpin and Kenny Walker — could have played regularly at most schools, but he chose Kentucky and a role as a practice player.

He's made one start in his career, and that was the final home game of the season, against Louisiana State, in honor of his status as a senior. The eight minutes he played were a season high.

Heitz, red-shirted in 1980-81, had his best season as a sophomore in 1981-82, when he averaged 7.6 minutes and scored 89 points.

"It was tough (to take) at first because I'd been a starter all my life," Heitz said. "When I came to Kentucky as a freshman, I knew my role would be limited as far as playing time. But I felt that I could contribute as a practice player and give it all I can. Sometimes it's hard."

Heitz usually doesn't get in a game until it's a blowout and the fans have lost interest.

Cards Picked To Rule Roost

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

In one season, the St. Louis Cardinals went from World Series champions to fourth place in the National League East.

They finished four games below .500 and 11 games back of the division-champion Philadelphia Phillies.

Manager Whitey Herzog stood helplessly as his pitching staff went from one of the best in the league to one of the worst.

"I don't think they can all be that bad again," Herzog says. "I think that's impossible."

So be it. Last season, the NL East finished like this: Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Montreal, St. Louis, Chicago and New York.

This year, it will look more like this: St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Montreal, Philadelphia, Chicago and New York.

Pitching wasn't St. Louis' only problem in '83. Second baseman Tommy Herr underwent three knee operations; left fielder Lonnie Smith was gone for five weeks for drug rehabilitation; center fielder Willie McGee started the year on the disabled list with a separated shoulder, and George Hendrick was moved to first base after Keith Hernandez was traded to the Mets.

This year, all those wounds have healed.

Philadelphia, meanwhile, has seen its winning combination dismantled. Gone are Pete Rose, Joe Morgan and Tony Perez, all old but invaluable when the Phillies won the pennant last year. While Montreal still is strong, the Cardinals' real competition this year will come from Pittsburgh, with a pitching staff that many consider the best in the league. The Cubs and Mets again bring up the rear.

St. Louis
The Cardinals stumbled to a team ERA of 3.79 last season after compiling a figure of 3.37 the year before. Joaquin Andujar was 6-16, Bob Forsch 10-12, John Stuper 12-11 and Dave LaPoint 12-9. Stuper's 3.68 ERA was the best on the staff. At the same time, relief ace Bruce Sutter was 4-23, 9-10 and 21 saves.

But with these men back in form — and newcomers like Neil Allen, Kevin Hagen and Rick Ownbey to push them 'long — Herzog says "this is the toughest pitching staff I've ever had to cut."

While lacking real power, the Cards have speed and some of the finest hitting in the game with players like Hendrick, Smith, McGee, David Green, Darrell Porter and Ken Oberkfell.

Defensively, the Cardinals are the best in the league with a healthy Herr at second, Ozzie Smith at short, Hendrick back in right field thanks to Green taking over first, Porter at catcher and McGee in center field.

Pittsburgh
Detroit Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson called Pittsburgh's pitching staff the finest in the league.

Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner has starters John Candelaria, Larry McWilliams, Jose DeLeon, Lee Tunnell and newcomer John Tudor, acquired from Boston for Mike

Easler. In the bullpen there's Kent Tekulve, Rod Scurry, Manny Sarmiento and Cecilio Guante.

The Tudor trade may have exacerbated Pittsburgh's only real weakness — lack of power. Jason Thompson carries most of that load, but rookie Doug Fobel is expected to help out. For sheer hitting, the Pirates have Bill Madlock, Tony Pena, Johnny Ray and free-agent acquisition Amos Otis.

Some have criticized Dale Berra at shortstop, but he may be the Pirates' only defensive weakness with catcher Peqa, second baseman Ray and center fielder Marvel Wynne up the middle.

Montreal
They've fooled us too many times, and even the acquisition of Pete Rose won't help this time. The Expos aren't even the best team in the league on paper this year.

They rate well in pitching, led by Steve Rogers and Jeff Reardon, and they've got some good hitters in Andre Dawson, Gary Carter, Tim Wallach and Terry Francona. But despite all the ink, they're not really a power club, nor with the exception of Tim Raines, do they have speed.

Defensively, no one really knows how they'll be because no one's sure whether Rose will play left or first base. If he plays the outfield, the Expos might be worse than average. If he plays first, they're average. The Expos are counting on rookie Argenis Salazar at shortstop — another questionmark.

Philadelphia
The strength of this club is pitching, but even that's not certain.

With the best season of his career, John Denny won the Cy Young. Steve Carlton is 39 and coming off a losing season. Charlie Hudson is one year past rookie status, and the other starter is up-and-down Marty Bystrom. The real strength is the bullpen, with Al Holland.

Mike Schmidt can hit, but he is the only reliable source of power on the club. Other hopes are pinned on Von Hayes, Len Matuszek, Joe Lefebvre and Sixto Lezcano.

Shortstop Ivan DeJesus, rookie second baseman Juan Samuel and Garry Maddox in center could provide sound defense up the middle.

Chicago
The Cubs have one of the best hitting teams in the division, getting even better with their acquisition of Gary Matthews, and have more power than their competition. Leon Durham, although injured three times last year, is a legitimate 20-plus homer man. Power abounds also in Ron Cey, Jody Davis, Keith Moreland, Bill Buckner and second-year outfielder Mel Hall.

Defensively the Cubs also rate well, but the pitching hurts. Chicago dropped Fergie Jenkins, leaving Dick Ruthven, Dickie Noles, Steve Trout and Scott Sanderson, acquired from Montreal, as the top four. The best pitcher on the club is reliever Lee Smith.

New York
The Mets may not even be as good as they were last year when they finished 22 games back.

Neither second base nor shortstop is set, and even the catcher's spot may be up for grabs, although John Ortuz probably will get it. The only secure job up the middle belongs to center fielder Mookie Wilson.

The Mets have some hitting in 1983 Rookie of the Year Darryl Strawberry, Keith Hernandez, Wilson, Hubie Brooks and pinch-hitter Rusty Staub. George Foster could add some power. But that's it.

The starting pitching is young and unproven for the most part since Tom Seaver left. Jesse Orosco is the bullpen ace.

Indiana To Learn Soon If Colts Are To Move In

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indianapolis may soon learn whether it will be getting Robert Irsay's Baltimore Colts.

"Stick around for tomorrow. We might have good news for you," today's editions of the Indianapolis Star quoted a "top level Indianapolis official" as saying Wednesday.

WRTV-TV in Indianapolis quoted unnamed sources at American Fletcher National Bank late Wednesday night as saying a $15-million loan for Irsay had been transacted.

The TV station also reported that Indianapolis Deputy Mayor David R. Frick said Wednesday that negotiations between the city and the team were completed.

National Football League officials have told Irsay they want a decision on where the team will play by Sunday so the league can prepare a schedule for next season.

Irsay has been considering moving the Colts for two months.

"We are still working on the deal and we are still very hopeful," Indianapolis Mayor William H. Hudnut said in a statement released by his executive assistant, Bruce Smith.

"That's all he felt he could say at this time," Smith said.

Asked if Indianapolis had set a deadline on the Colts deal, Smith said, "We don't put time limits on Mr. Irsay."

Indianapolis has the new Hoosier Dome, which seats more than 61,000. Representatives of the city reportedly offered to build a practice field and office-compound facility.

Meanwhile, Phoenix businessmen said Wednesday they would wait no longer for Irsay to make up his mind and withdrew the offer they made to the Colts owner in hopes of luring the team to Arizona.

"The banks said they had extended their commitment as far as they could. I was told to withdraw the offer last night," said Phoenix attorney Harry Cavanagh, a member of the Phoenix Metropolitan Sports Association trying to attract the franchise.

"If I was a betting man, I'd bet he (Irsay) is going to Indianapolis," Cavanagh said at a news conference. "But I talked to him this morning and he did not give any indication one way or the other."

Meanwhile in Baltimore, Michael Chernoff, Baltimore Colts attorney, returned Wednesday night after reportedly meeting with Indianapolis officials, according to WBAL-TV in Baltimore.

Chernoff refused to talk to a WMAR-TV reporter about whether a deal was finalized with Indianapolis.

The two television stations along with WJZ-TV in Baltimore reported that moving vans were at the Colts training complex in Owings Mills, Maryland. There was no word as to what the vans were doing at the complex.

Baltimore Mayor William Schaefer anticipates meeting with Irsay later this week, said Pat Bernstein, Schaefer's press secretary. "The mayor is still waiting to hear of a final decision from Irsay," she said.

"The complexity of the transaction and the recent moves by the state of Maryland and the city of Baltimore have made the likelihood of the NFL team being moved to Phoenix appear very doubtful," Cavanagh said.

"We couldn't come up with the city and state guarantees — ticket sales, dollars and things of that nature," Cavanagh added.

Baltimore officials and businessmen offered Irsay a $15-million loan at 8 percent interest, and a California developer offered to build a domed stadium in Baltimore for the Colts and baseball's Baltimore Orioles if both teams agree to long-term leases.

Cavanagh had said the Phoenix group's offer also included a $15-million loan at discounted rate, rent-free use of the 70,021-seat Sun Devil Stadium and a guaranteed $3 million in ticket sales.

Irsay reportedly was seeking $7 million in ticket sales, however.

The NFL has said it will do nothing to block a move by the Colts, noting it is powerless because of a court order to stop an owner from moving a franchise.

Seek To Send Perez To Jail For 2 Years

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Atlanta Braves pitcher Pascual Perez could be jailed for two years on a drug possession charge if the state has its way.

A government spokesman said Wednesday that a hearing will be held April 5 on an argument to step up the present charge against the pitcher. The hearing will be on an appeal filed by Santiago District Attorney Luis Coss last Friday after Perez was convicted on a reduced charge of cocaine possession and fined $1,000.

"The evidence shows serious indications of guilt," said Miguel Garcia Cordero, another district attorney who will argue the state's case against Perez.

Court officials said Judge Antonio Valentin would preside over the appeal hearing. He received the case Wednesday shortly before the hearing date was announced. Valentin will not only consider the prosecution's appeal, but will also consider a motion for dismissal of the appeal made by Perez's lawyers.

As a result of the ruling, the 26-year-old pitcher was expected to be freed immediately and allowed to join the Braves at spring training. When Coss filed his appeal, however, Perez was ordered held in the prison until completion of the appeals process. He has been jailed since early January.

Perez was arrested Jan. 9 in his car parked near a Santiago bar with a half-gram of cocaine in his wallet and was charged with drug trafficking.

Last Friday, Perez admitted he had the cocaine but claimed he didn't know what it was. He said a woman in Atlanta gave him the envelope to deliver to a third person, and that he had never bothered to open it to see what it contained.

White Sox Team To Beat In West

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Chicago White Sox have suffered only two key losses from the club that romped to a 20-game runaway — a record for division play — in the American League West a year ago.

Starter-reliever Jerry Koosman was traded to Philadelphia for Ron Reed, who will pitch strictly in relief. And Dennis Lamp, who led a deep bullpen with 15 saves, was lost to free agency and signed with Toronto. To take his place, the White Sox merely came up with a future Hall of Famer in Tom Seaver, who was claimed from the compensation pool when the New York Mets left him unprotected.

"Although many people singled out our pitching as the key to last year's title, we feel our balance and depth made the difference," says Manager Tony LaRussa, who is solidly entrenched after being on the hot seat at the start of last season. "While we may not be tops in every category, we should have a plus in every department."

"Offensively, our goal is to match last year's ranking as the major-league leader in runs scored (800). We blend power, speed and 'situation' hitting. The power is supplied by (designated hitter) Greg Luzinski, (left fielder) Ron Kittle, (catcher) Carlton Fisk and (right fielder) Harold Baines. (Center fielder) Rudy Law and (second baseman) Julio Cruz generate most of the excitement on the bases. Our first basemen — Tom Paciorek, Mike Squires and Greg Walker — are among our best situation hitters.

"Complemented by good defense (Fisk, Cruz, shortstop Scott Fletcher, third baseman Vance Law), our pitching staff took off in June and never stopped. The threesome of Cy Young recipient LaMarr Hoyt (24-10), Richard Dotson (22-7) and Floyd Bannister (16-10) posted a remarkable 42-5 record during the second half."

Britt Burns and Seaver round out the rotation, but there is still no bullpen "stopper." Over-all, however, the White Sox are so solid that LaRussa says there was spring competition "for only a spot or two on the opening-day roster."

The White Sox were 99-63 last year; every other club in the AL East was under .500. Runnerup Kansas City would have finished sixth in the AL East at 79-83 and the usually stable Royals are in what Manager Dick Howser calls "a year of transition" brought about mainly by the drug-related charges that sent four players to jail during the off-season.

Three of the four (Willie Aikens, Jerry Martin, Vida Blue) are gone; only CF Willie Wilson is left and he has been suspended, at least until Commissioner Bowie Kuhn reviews his case May 15. Nevertheless, Howser says all the problems "don't mean we're not going to have a quality team."

He has proven veterans in 3B George Brett, DH Hal McRae, relief ace Dan Quisenberry, 2B Frank White, C-1B-OF John Wathan and starting pitchers Larry Gura and Paul Splittorff. But Dennis Leonard is still recuperating from a 1983 knee injury and Bud Black, who has never spent a full season in the majors, has been handed the opening-day assignment.

The new-look outfield (Amos Otis is gone, too) includes Butch Davis in left and Pat Sheridan in center until Wilson returns. Rookie John Morris couldn't hold the right-field job this spring. Elsewhere, Don Slaught will catch when Wathan doesn't, Onix Concepcion is closing in on U.L. Washington at shortstop and minor-league slugger sensation Steve Balboni, obtained from the New York Yankees, will play first every day regardless of how often he strikes out.

"Last year, we led the league in pitching and fielding," says Texas Manager Doug Rader. "We finished third, so obviously we lacked consistent hitting."

Rader thinks the acquisition of outfielder Gary Ward from Minnesota will provide some punch. Ward will be in the middle of the batting order along with 3B Buddy Bell, CF George Wright and DH Larry Parrish. The Rangers also are counting on new catcher Ned Yost (veteran Jim Sundberg was traded to Milwaukee for Yost), LF Billy Sample, 1B Pete O'Brien and 1B-DH Dave Hostetler to add some meaningful stickwork. Wayne Tolleson returns at 2B with veteran Bucky Dent trying to fend off rookie Curtis Wilkerson at short. The starters are Charlie Hough, Dave Stewart, Frank Tanana and Danny Darwin, but someone must take charge in the bullpen.

The Oakland A's will run less and hit more and may be the most improved team in baseball. Newly acquired Bill Caudill could be the bullpen ace the A's have been seeking since Rollie Fingers left after the 1976 season), while new-comer Lary Sorensen joins the starting rotation. Veterans signed as free agents include 1B Bruce Bochte and 2B Joe Morgan, who will provide those intangible leadership qualities.

A year ago, Manager Steve Boros "felt like the leader of a MASH unit" as 14 players went on the disabled list and 16 different pitchers were used as starters. Boros expects youngsters Chris Codioli, Tim Conroy and Mike Warren (the first major-league rookie in 10 years to hurl a no-hitter) to keep getting better.

The outfield of Rickey Henderson, Dwayne Murphy and Mike Davis is one of baseball's best and a healthy 3B Carney Lansford holds the key to an improved infield. Boros will likely shuttle around the keystone with Morgan, Donnie Hill, Tony Phillips and Bill Almon. Mike Heath is a solid catcher and the top DH candidate is Dave Kingman, who may have found a new lease on life after wearing out his welcome with the New York Mets.

The California Angels flopped from a division title in 1982 to a tie for fifth last season, mainly because they lost 36 games in the seventh inning or later. To remedy that situation, they added relievers Frank LaCorte (Houston), Jim Slaton (Milwaukee) and Curt Kaufman (New York Yankees) over the winter. They may have their work cut out for them since the starting rotation includes Tommy John (40) and Geoff Zahn and Ken Forsch (both 37). Capable catcher Bob Boone is 36.

Elsewhere, the biggest change is Fred Lynn moving from CF to RF to make room for speedster Gary Pettis. Brian Downing is the incumbent in LF, while Reggie Jackson, trying to come back from a .194 batting average and 14 home runs, is the DH. With Rick Burleson's shoulder aching again, rookie SS Dick Schofield Jr. joins 1B Rod Carew, 2B Bobby Grich and 3B Doug DeCinces in the infield.

"The one positive factor which emerged last year from a disappointing season was the pride and determination of the players," says Manager John McNamara.

Minnesota improved 10 games over its 1982 record, but still had to settle for a fifth-place tie with California. Nevertheless, Gardner says the main question about the 1984 Twins "is how much we will improve over last year — not IF we'll improve, but how much."

To try and prevent the opposition from busting fences in the Home Dome — er, Metrodome — the Twins sent slugger Gary Ward to Texas for pitchers Mike Smithson and John Butcher. Ken Schrom, Al Williams and Frank Viola are other starters, with Ron Davis No. 1 in the bullpen, but the Twins' pitching has been last in the league for two years now.

Scoring runs shouldn't be a problem with 1B Kent Hrbek, RF Tom Brunansky, 3B John Castino, C Dave Engle and DH Mickey Hatcher around. Gary Gaetti, another power hitter, has been switched from 3B to LF because three-fourths of the infield is set with Hrbek, rookie 2B Tim Teufel and Castino. CF Jim Eisenreich, who appears to be over his nervous disorder, could be a key man at the top of the lineup. But the man at the head of the club, long-time owner Calvin Griffith, is still talking about moving the team elsewhere, which can't help but hurt.

Seattle Manager Del Crandall talks about "offensive punch and improved defense." But the Mariners, whose best record in their seven-year existence was 76-86 in 1982, need help just about everywhere after finishing a whopping 39 games out last season.

Mike Moore, Matt Young and Jim Beattie are Crandall's top three starters, while Dave Beard joins Mike Stanton and Ed Vande Berg in the bullpen to help ease the loss of Caudill to Oakland. The Mariners acquired catcher Bob Kearney from Oakland for his glove.

There are question marks at 1B (Pat Putnam-Ken Phelps) and 2B (Jack Perconte-Harold Reynolds). On the left side of the infield are SS Spike Owen (80 major-league games) and 3B Darnell Coles (27). The Mariners bolstered their outfield by grabbing Gorman Thomas from Cleveland and Barry Bonnell from Toronto and re-signing Steve Henderson, their top hitter. Dave Henderson and Al Cowens could enter the picture.

Predictions: Chicago, Oakland, California, Kansas City, Texas, Minnesota, Seattle.

Hazzard At UCLA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Walt Hazzard not only doesn't mind toiling in the lingering shadow of John Wooden, he'd like the legendary coach to be around in person.

"I spoke with Coach Wooden this morning and he wished me luck and I asked him where he wanted me to put his desk in my office," Hazzard, just named to replace Larry Farmer as UCLA basketball coach, said with a smile Wednesday.

Hazzard becomes the fifth Bruin coach since Wooden retired in 1975.

Farmer abruptly resigned Tuesday after three seasons, becoming the latest "victim" of high expectations at UCLA, where Wooden had produced 10 NCAA champions. Gene Bartow, Gary Cunningham and Larry Brown all quit after two years in the pressure-packed job.

"John Wooden made this a very difficult job, but I don't mind being in it," Hazzard said at a Westwood press conference formally introducing him as Farmer's replacement. "In fact I love sitting here right now."

"I feel it's an awesome task, but I'm not afraid of it and I look forward to the challenge that faces us in trying to restore respectability to UCLA basketball. I'm not worried about the heat, I'm not worried about the pressure . . . Let's go to work."

"I think it's beyond my wildest dreams to ever envision that I would be sitting in the same seat that the 'Wizard of Westwood' (Wooden) sat in for so many years and carried on this program and developed this into the dynasty it's become," he said.

The failure to win NCAA titles brought great pressure on the other four Bruin coaches who followed Wooden, but Hazzard took care not to promise his club would win the championship.

"I think that my four predecessors have been very successful coaches," said Hazzard, who was given a three-year contract. "They didn't win a national championship, but I thought that they were excellent coaches and did an excellent job for UCLA."

"If success is winning the NCAA, I'm not going to promise that. All I promise is that when my team hits the floor, we will give 100 percent and you will enjoy the action and you will enjoy the style of play."

Hazzard, 41, an All-American guard on UCLA's first NCAA championship team in 1964, later played 10 years in the National Basketball Association and had been the head coach at Chapman College for the past two years.

He said he had expected to become a UCLA assistant, and was surprised when Farmer suddenly announced that he was quitting.

"I just got the call about the (head coaching) job yesterday," Hazzard said.

Hazzard's teams at Chapman, an NCAA Division II school located some 30 miles from downtown Los Angeles, were 44-14.

He said his NBA experience should prove valuable, commenting, "There were a lot of things I learned over my 10-year pro career, playing for many teams and many coaches. I learned some things that I'd like to incorporate . . ."

Hazzard immediately named his assistant at Chapman, Jack Hirsch, to a similar post with the Bruins, but said he would fill out the rest of his staff later.

Farmer, like Hazzard a former player under Wooden, had accepted an extension on his contract just last Friday, but announced Tuesday, after some more "soul-searching," that he was resigning.

Interestingly, all four of Wooden's successors had good records by most standards, but they were considered relative failures in comparison to the string of NCAA championships Wooden produced.

There's one thing that always goes wherever I go, and that's Exxon motor oil. Why, since I bought this car back in 1971, I've gone 135,000 miles. And you can take my word for it, Exxon Extra has been with me every mile.

A lot of people have been satisfied with the results they get from Exxon motor oil. Economically priced Exxon Extra is a high-quality 10W/30 multi-grade motor oil. It now contains special friction modifiers that save gas, compared to non-savings motor oils.

At Least 58 Dead In N.C. Tornado Barrage

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

Small towns, farms and forests from the sandhills to the ocean were left topsy-turvy by a tragic barrage of tornadoes that tore through North Carolina, killing 58 people, injuring 461 and leaving hundreds homeless.

National Guardsmen were ordered to help local officials assist the injured and stranded and restore order in areas barely recognizable after Wednesday's storms.

Gov. Jim Hunt left at 8:30 a.m., flying over the affected areas to view the destruction.

Hunt told CBS news this morning that the disaster was worse than anything he had seen in North Carolina in his life.

"We have never had a disaster of this magnitude covering a wide part of a third of the whole state of North Carolina," Hunt said. "We just really have no idea on the full extent of the damage and we simply know that we have never seen a disaster like this before and pray to God we never see one again."

Meanwhile harried doctors from Laurinburg to Greenville treated victims in crowded hospitals.

"The counties have done a magnificent job in the past 12 hours," said Bryant Haskins, a spokesman for the Department of Human Resources. "They have worked in the dark, pulled people out of the rubble, and got people in shelters. We're sending them whatever they request now." "It's so tragic it's unbelievable," said Greene County Deputy Sheriff Mary Webber.

"Some buildings just aren't there any more," said Police Chief Luther W. Haggins of Red Springs in Robeson County, where a 3-year-old child died in a demolished building. "No buildings, no nothing."

Lori Herring of Mt. Olive said the tornado sounded like a freight train — "but not the kind that usually comes through Mt. Olive."

The storm that ravaged 13 North Carolina counties originated over Texas Tuesday and marched through Georgia and South Carolina before hitting the Tar Heel state between 7:30 and 9 p.m. It brought the second lowest barometric reading in the history of the Raleigh-Durham Airport, said Rod Gonski of the National Weather Service. The first came during Hurricane Hazel in 1954.

"The storm hit Scotland and Robeson counties and worked almost in a direct line to Gates and Perquimans counties," Gonski said. "If you could draw a straight line, this would be the axis." Gonski said the storm did not diminish in strength as it moved through the state. "It's been getting stronger more than anything else," Gonski said. Russ Edmonston, spokesman for the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, put the death toll at 56 at 5 a.m. They included 10 in Pitt County, six in Greene, six in Bertie, five in Robeson, 11 in Sampson, two in Scotland, two in Gates, two in Lenoir, seven in Duplin, two in Wayne, one in Cumberland, one in Hertford, and one in Perquimans counties.

Administrator Robert Martin said 95 to 100 people had been taken to Scotland Memorial Hospital, where a spokeswoman said the situation was "a mess."

Edmonston said 126 people had been treated at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, 23 for serious injuries.

At Wayne County Memorial Hospital, 40 people were treated and 10 admitted after a twister leveled buildings and dwellings in Mount Olive.

John Hodges, Mount Olive Police Chief, said at least 200 had been injured and "I don't know how many (are) dead."

"The wind just blew my house to pieces," said Lucy McCullen of Mt. Olive. "I had a time. My friend was dead. The house just fell on him."

A curfew was imposed in Greenville and southern Pitt County, where three people were killed. Schools were closed in Pitt County today.

Hunt, who was speaking at Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church in Greenville when the storm hit, toured some of the damaged areas Wednesday night, said press secretary Gary Pearce.

Tornadoes also struck the Robeson County towns of Maxton, Red Springs and Parkton. As the storm system moved northeast, twisters touched down in Hertford, Bertie and Lenoir counties.

Law enforcement officials said 10 to 20 people were injured in Maxton and Red Springs. Steve Tant of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety said 153 were injured in Pitt County, 100 in Scotland County, 75 in Wayne, 62 in Sampson, 27 in Cumberland, 19 in Bertie and 13 in Hertford. Tants also said five were injured in Gates County, four in Lenoir, and one each in Nash and Perquimans. He said there were injuries in Green Duplin and possibly Harnett and Wake counties, but he did not have figures.

Maxton police Sgt. Kenneth Bullard called the situation "pretty rough" with "several buildings down and trees all over the place." Several mobile homes were blown over, he said.

"Some of these homes were blown all over the fields and there were people blown all over the fields, too," said Tardis.

Roads were flooded while others were blocked with trees and downed power lines that delayed transportation of the injured to hospitals, Bullard said.

Three state highways leading into Maxton — N.C. 130, N.C. 71 and U.S. 74, the main route from Charlotte to the beaches around Wilmington — were impassable, he said.

Bullard said some injured people were being housed in the First Baptist Church of Maxton. Strickland said most of the hurt people lived in several mobile home parks.

Power was lost throughout the town, Strickland said. "It's like a big blackout," he said. Hundreds of trees were uprooted and roofs were blown off many buildings.

An American Legion shelter in Laurinburg was opened to house those whose homes were damaged.

Eight miles north of Red Springs, in Robeson County, pine trees sprawled across N.C. 20. In the town itself, police erected roadblocks to keep out spectators and prevent looting of stores whose windows were blown out.

Stoptlights, electrical wires and utility poles were snapped by winds and dangled in the wind in the town's main intersection. Walking was difficult as the streets and sidewalks were littered with sections of roofs, bricks, wire and other debris.

The state is sending power generators and communications equipment into areas where power was interrupted. There was some electrical loss in all the counties hit.

"I was home when it hit," said Haggins. "I got down here just as fast as I could. You could hear the storm coming and all of the crashing downtown."

Twister Leaves Death, Devastation

FOUND HERSELF IN A FIELD — Tornado victim Alene Harris, shown being helped down the steps of a neighbor's house by Ron Moore of the Greenville Fire and Rescue Department (left) and volunteer Ruel Tyer of Farmville (right), said she and a companion, Ray Brewer of Greenville, were thrown from a house trailer located on SR 1732 into a field across the road during Wednesday night's storm. Ms. Harris said that her trailer was demolished.

ALL THAT REMAINS — This twisted basketball goal and rubble are all that remain of Debra Oakley's home located on N.C. 43 just outside of Greenville. Although Ms. Oakley was in the house when the tornado struck, she was only slightly injured.

AERIAL VIEW — This aerial photo of Portertown in Eastern Pines shows the zig zag path of destruction left by a tornado that swept through Pitt County Wednesday night. The Portertown area was one of the most heavily damaged portions of the county, according to officials.

TORNADO DAMAGE — Ashley Dail, a Winterville Rescue Squad captain, walks past an overturned car at Taylor's Estates trailer park in Greenville. As of 11:30 a.m. today eight people were reported dead.

BROKEN TREES, WASTE — Red Oak fireman Wade Marley surveys the snapped trees and debris littering this area near Taylor's Trailer Park, located approximately three miles south of Greenville on N.C. 43.

POWER LINES DOWN — Leaning, twisted utility poles and downed power lines show the random destruction left in the wake of a tornado that hit Ayden. Numerous homes and businesses were also gutted in the Ayden area during Wednesday night's storm.

Another Safeguard For Key Secrets Center

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The supersecret National Security Agency plans to shroud its main operations building at Fort Meade, Md., in an "electromagnetic envelope" to prevent leakage of electronic signals that might be detected by spies, according to congressional testimony.

The agency, which controls America's mammoth network of electronic intelligence-gathering posts around the globe, also wants to embark on a variety of other construction projects — ranging from a high-technology equipment testing center to replacement of support facilities now housed in pre-World War I barracks.

In addition, testimony this week before a House panel disclosed that the agency, which is part of the Defense Department, generates a staggering 24,000 tons of highly classified material each year.

That output of computer tapes, photographs and paper documents is continuing to grow, an agency official said, to meet increased U.S. intelligence requirements.

Nearly all of the security agency's budget — which has been estimated at up to $10 billion annually — is kept secret, buried within classified sections of the overall Pentagon budget. However, small portions of the agency's spending program are included in unclassified military budget requests submitted each year to congressional committees.

Dale A. Seaberg, NSA assistant director for installations and logistics, testified Tuesday before the House Appropriations military construction subcommittee to urge funding for agency projects totaling $48 million in the 1985 fiscal year, which begins on Oct. 1.

He said these plans included a $12.7 million "TEMPEST and energy retrofit package" for Operations Building 1 at the NSA's Fort Meade headquarters complex. The sprawling, A-shaped structure, dating back to 1957, provides 1.4 million square feet of floor space to house arrays of sophisticated, high-capacity computers and other intelligence operations.

TEMPEST is a term used by the military to describe techniques — such as metal shielding — aimed at preventing leakage from computers and other electronic equipment of telltale signals that could be of intelligence value to a potential enemy.

The NSA complex — closely guarded and surrounded by multiple cyclone, barbed-wire and electrified fences — is located just off heavily traveled Baltimore-Washington Parkway, about midway between the two cities.

Seaberg told the House panel that "electromagnetic material and thermal insulation will be applied to the exterior of the building, behind a reflective glass wall and beneath a new roofing surface. ... Unneeded windows will be covered over."

"We estimate that we now spend $4.5 million each year to build TEMPEST features into the individual pieces of equipment we buy. Provision of an electromagnetic envelope around the building will obviate the need for these expenditures," he testified.

Seaberg said the agency also was requesting:

— $12.58 million for a 148,000-square-foot "Systems Processing Center" to provide improved facilities for testing and evaluation of advanced electronic equipment. This would replace "very limited facilities ... now housed in temporary, World War II wooden structures."

— $7.5 million to purchase a downtown Baltimore building and convert it into a storage facility for NSA files.

The Baltimore building, Seaberg said, would replace an existing storage facility that "fails to meet minimum archival standards ... due to structural, mechanical, environmental and electrical deficiencies. These conditions pose dangers to the valuable cryptologic records stored."

— $4.68 million for a 56,000-square-foot addition to Support Activities Building No. 3 at Fort Meade, to provide "space for special tape processing equipment, document handling equipment and photographic developing equipment."

Seaberg noted that this project would permit expansion of a document handling area used for the Armed Forces Courier Service, "a tri-service agency charged with the movement of highly classified material for all DOD, State Department and federal contractor activities."

Approximately 80 percent of the 60 million pounds of material that the courier service handles annually is produced by NSA, the official testified.

That would put the agency's yearly output of classified material at 48 million pounds, or 24,000 tons.

Seaberg said the project would provide for "expansion of the current operation in order to meet increased requirements."

— $4.5 million for "Powderblue 1," which Seaberg described as an "operational warehouse complex" at an unspecified overseas location. He said this project would replace a limited existing facility "located in a pre-World War I barracks."

Although Seaberg's testimony focused largely on the security agency's needs for better physical facilities and intelligence-handling hardware, the human factor wasn't altogether omitted.

The construction requests also included $3.8 million to rebuild two barracks for single enlisted personnel at Fort Meade, replacing "central latrines" with "semi-private baths separating two sleeping rooms."

"Should funds for this project be denied, it will further aggravate a long-standing morale problem," Seaberg said.

Borrowed Identity

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — David J. Sleeter was applying for a high-security job when authorities told him that, according to police records, he had served time in prison. That was news to Sleeter, who learned that a convict had adopted his identity.

The convict, who has identified himself as Willie Lewis Weathers Jr., began using Sleeter's identity — right down to his birthdate, Social Security number and driver's license number — and kept it up while serving a year in prison for voluntary manslaughter.

The district attorney's office is now trying to determine how and why Weathers managed to carry out the charade throughout his prison term.

Sleeter, an engineer with BDM Corp., is trying to clear his name from police records.

"We haven't been able to get many straight answers as to why or how this happened," his wife, Joan, said recently. "It's been a hardship on David."

Sleeter himself declined comment because he and BDM attorneys are looking into the case.

Police said Weathers assumed Sleeter's identity sometime before his January 1982 arrest for manslaughter, to which he pleaded guilty. There was no reason to question the credentials Weathers presented because they had no evidence to the contrary, police said.

Weathers' true identity went undiscovered until earlier this year when investigators checking Sleeter for a security clearance discovered the prison record.

Authorities say Sleeter never lost his wallet or driver's license, but had lived at a married student housing complex at the University of New Mexico, as had Weathers.

"It's caused us a lot of problems and will probably cost us money to clear his name," Mrs. Sleeter said.

Mayor Could Get 55-Year Penalty

DETROIT (AP) — The mayor of suburban Dearborn Heights could face 55 years in prison if he is convicted on charges that he extorted money from three cable TV companies and obstructed a federal grand jury investigation of the contract.

Donald Bishop, 53, was indicted Wednesday on charges of extortion, conspiracy and obstruction of justice and will be arraigned Friday, authorities said.

Bishop allegedly extorted payments ranging from $25,000 to $250,000 from three companies while the city solicited bids for cable television service, U.S. Attorney Leonard Gilman said.

Missing Persons 'Emotional Issue'

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — On any given day, the missing persons file in the Police Information Network lists 185 adults and children who have vanished in North Carolina.

And the number of reports is increasing, says William Corley, who directs the PIN.

"We don't keep a total list, but it averages about 185 a day in the system," Corley said. "Some go out and some go in every day."

Corley's agency, which operates under the N.C. Attorney General's Office, has begun a monthly missing persons bulletin that includes photographs and information from the PIN files.

The bulletin, Corley said, is an attempt to enlist the public and the media in helping to locate missing adults and children.

"I'm not an investigator, but the impression we get is that these are very frustrating cases for officers," Corley said. "Officers have their other cases to work on, and sometimes you don't know if young people have just left home.

"The criminal cases are important, but to the family with a missing child, that case is the most important," he said. "It's a very emotional issue. We, as members of the general public, often don't understand the resources needed for an investigation like this."

Corley said public interest in missing person cases has been sparked by the case of Adam Walsh, a missing Florida boy whose head was later found in a ditch.

But the police network of automated files for missing persons have been used for nine years, Corley said.

"We've had the automated files since 1975," Corley said. "I don't think people have been totally aware on a national basis of what's been done in these kinds of cases."

Corley said about 710 issues of the first missing persons bulletin were mailed to law enforcement agencies, daily newspapers and radio and television stations.

The second issue of the bulletin is due to be released next week, and Corley hopes future issues can be mailed to twice as many agencies.

"If we had more money, we could give it wider circulation," Corley said. "We haven't got any money budgeted for this, so the money is coming out of our hide."

Residents Help With Evidence

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — Authorities are crediting residents with gathering evidence needed to arrest 10 men in an alleged racial attack on a group of sailors.

A grand jury Wednesday indicted the men, ranging in age from 17 to 33, on 109 counts, said Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt.

The rock- and bottle-throwing occurred Feb. 18 at a local bar involved bar patrons and sailors, who included three blacks, one Hispanic and one white.

Salvadoran Vote Worries Senate

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Roberto d'Aubuisson, the right-wing candidate for president of El Salvador, is emerging as a central figure in what could be a lengthy Senate debate over President Reagan's military aid package for the troubled Central American country.
Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Wednesday he will propose to cut the already reduced proposal for $62 million in military aid to $21 million, enough to last until after a scheduled runoff election between d'Aubuisson and centrist Jose Napoleon Duarte.
The issue is the extent of d'Aubuisson's involvement, if any, with right-wing death squads that some human rights groups say have been responsible for 38,000 political murders in El Salvador since 1976.
"It is no secret that if Roberto d'Aubuisson wins the runoff election next month, there will be massive resistance in Congress to further U.S. aid to El Salvador, because of the serious allegations involving Mr. d'Aubuisson's role in the death squads," Kennedy said.

The Massachusetts senator then asked Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, to say whether d'Aubuisson was "connected in any way" with the death squads.
"I could not do that in open session," Goldwater said. "It would require a secret session of the Senate."
Kennedy replied, "If the answer was 'no,' it seems to me it would not be very difficult to make that comment." Goldwater responded that Kennedy was well aware of the restrictions imposed on discussion of classified information.

Later, Sen. John East, R-N.C., said those restrictions prevented Goldwater from "commenting publicly on the question, one way or another."

Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee abandoned plans to bring the Salvadoran aid package to a final vote today after Kennedy said he looked forward to "being on the floor for several days" on the issue.
Baker told reporters Kennedy's words were "shorthand or longhand for a filibuster; if that is his idea, then in that case I intend to run it out." Baker said at some point he would probably file a cloture petition to limit debate, but that would not be done until next week.

Ambassador Harry Shlaudeman, the administration's new special envoy to Central America, meanwhile, was to set out today on a week-long mission to the region to review the progress of a mediation effort by Venezuela, Mexico, Panama, and Colombia.

They have been working with little success for 14 months to get a reduction in foreign military presence in the region.
Kennedy spoke at length against the aid proposal as the Senate began debate on Wednesday.

Earlier, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said he would oppose any amendment committing the United States to cut off aid if the government chosen in the runoff is overthrown by a military coup.
At an appropriations hearing, Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said he had heard talk that there might be such a coup by military supporters of d'Aubuisson if Duarte is elected.

He asked Shultz if he would support an amendment to cut off aid in that event.
"No, sir," Shultz said. "I think it is not necessary and is inappropriate to seem to be predicting that possibility. The military in El Salvador have gone to great lengths to depoliticize themselves. I don't see any evidence of anything to the contrary."

The bill before the Senate, as approved by the appropriations committee, provides $93 million in military aid for El Salvador in the fiscal year ending Sept. 30. After Senate Democrats balked at taking it up on the floor, some of them struck a compromise with the administration to decrease the amount to $62 million and go ahead with the bill.
Kennedy opposed the compromise, saying, "Congress has no responsibility to bail out the administration's failing policies in Central America under the pretext of bipartisanship."
Congress has already approved $64.8 million in military aid for the Central American nation in this fiscal year, but ordered that $20 million of it could not be spent until there is a trial and verdict in the case of four American churchwomen murdered in El Salvador in December 1980.

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, the sponsor of the compromise measure, told reporters, "It's going to pass." Inouye is chairman of a Democratic task force on Central America and senior Democrat on the appropriations subcommittee that handles foreign spending.

President Reagan, asked if he expected Congress to approve the money, said, "We just keep on hoping and working."

In addition to his proposal to reduce the amount, Kennedy has prepared amendments calling for a congressional investigation of the death squads, prohibiting any aid until after a verdict in the case of the murdered churchwomen, and cutting off all aid unless the new Salvadoran government agrees to unconditional talks with leftist guerrillas.

Another Kennedy amendment would delete $21 million for the support of rebels against the leftist government of Nicaragua.

Haydn Price

LONDON (AP) — The manuscript of an unperformed Mass by Joseph Haydn found recently in a farmer's attic was sold for $219,240 Wednesday at Christie's auction house.

The buyer asked to remain anonymous.
The 16-page manuscript contains two movements of a 1786 Mass by the Austrian composer which experts say has probably never been performed. The Mass, in D-minor, is titled "Sunt Bona Mixta Malis", Latin for "The Good is Mixed with the Bad." Experts classify it as "the most important discovery of a Haydn work in 20 years".

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — When the Henry Doorly Zoo opens its 1984 season Friday, the main attraction will be a record pair of primates.

The as-yet unnamed gorilla twins are the only ones who have survived birth in this country. And their unexpected arrival posed an unusual custody problem.

The hairy tots are a byproduct of a lengthy fling between Bridgette, the Doorly Zoo's 23-year-old female, and Oscar, a 14-year-old ape from the Columbus Zoo. Delivery was last Oct. 26.

The parents were paired at the Columbus Zoo, and both facilities agreed that Doorly was to receive Bridgette's first born.

Trouble is, no one expected twins. To avoid a messy custody dispute, the twins — born 4 pounds 8 ounces but now weighing 12 pounds apiece — will remain in Omaha for about two months under a joint zoo agreement. They are due to arrive Friday.

They will return to Columbus shortly before the Memorial Day weekend for, appropriately, the opening of a new gorilla building, and then return to Omaha by the end of July.

How rare are Darwin's duo? There are only two other known cases of gorilla twins surviving birth in captivity. A pair was born in Frankfurt, Germany, in 1967, and a second set arrived in Barcelona, Spain, in 1981.

Expected Worse Than Probation

CORUNNA, Mich. (AP) — A wheelchair-bound housewife who said she expected to be sent to prison for fatally shooting her abusive husband has been sentenced to five years probation.

Dorothy Andrews, 43, confined to a wheelchair with multiple sclerosis, pleaded guilty last week to involuntary manslaughter for the 1981 death of Terry Andrews.

Mrs. Andrews, who was sentenced Wednesday, had said her husband abused her physically and mentally for 11 months. Her first trial in 1982 on a murder charge ended in a hung jury and a second trial had been scheduled to begin next week.

Don't paint yourself into a corner. Sometimes you can give declarer a push over the edge by just giving him a few options.

This hand cropped up in a team game. At both tables South became declarer at four spades after similar auctions. At both tables West dutifully led his partner's suit, but the results at the two tables differed remarkably.

At one table, East won the queen and king of hearts and continued with the ace. Declarer ruffed with the ten and West discarded a diamond. The hand was now an open book.

Since West would surely have overruffed with the king of trumps if he held it, East had to have that card. So declarer continued with a trump to the ace and, when the king came tumbling down, declarer's only other loser was a diamond. Making four odd.

At the other table East won the first two tricks with the king and queen of hearts and then shifted to a diamond. Declarer played low, West won the king and continued with diamonds.

Now declarer had to bring in the trump suit without a loser. While it was quite possible that East had the trump king, to play him for a singleton king was too long a shot. So declarer took the percentage play of the finesse and ended up down one.

While it is true that East could not insure defeating the contract, at least he did not force declarer into the winning line. Any declarer who is good enough to divine the trump position after East's defense is entitled to the pot!

Yearly Disaster Drills 'Paid Off'

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson says the yearly disaster drills that are conducted in this area paid off in helping personnel respond to Wednesday night's tornado activity.

Tyson, who reported that he summoned "everybody we had" to meet security and assistance needs, said his deputies and dispatchers as well as volunteer ham radio operators worked all night in trying to handle a variety of demands.

"We had about 20 deputies out in the county, plus about 10 more people answering telephones," said Tyson, noting that about 100 National Guard personnel were also requested to help secure stricken areas.

Tyson said his office meshed its activities with county civil preparedness coordinator Bobby Joyner and served as the central dispatch point for Pitt operations.

The disaster training enabled

"everybody to step right in and do what had to be done. You could tell the ones who had received that training," the sheriff said. "It really paid off."

He said a curfew was implemented after "curiosity seekers" began to hinder search and rescue operations, but people generally cooperated with law enforcement personnel after learning of the night-long restrictions.

Before the curfew, "We had people blocking up the highways and wandering around and some were getting downed power lines caught up in their vehicles," Tyson said. He reported that no arrests were made during the night and looting was not a problem. "Most people just wanted to look and help in whatever way they could."

Tyson said authorities would "look at the situation later on" before deciding whether to impose the curfew tonight. "If it's necessary, we will call for it."

He said, "We searched all night for victims and National Guardsmen worked with us, particularly out on the highways in areas where there was a lot of damage." Rescuers were dragging ponds this morning in areas where homes were destroyed nearby, he reported.

According to Tyson, the home of Deputy Jimmy Evans in the Scufleton area was heavily damaged in the storm.

Tyson said "a lot of people called in from other counties offering their assistance and law enforcement personnel from other areas volunteered to help" in Pitt.

"Our people are still on the job this morning," Tyson said. "Our job now is to continue looking for people, to preserve the areas and to help where we can."

He said during the night, deputies and other authorities were involved in securing businesses damaged by the storm, helping victims dig out of their homes, providing escort services, and calling in rescue trucks and wreckers. Radio bays were established for fire, rescue and sheriff's department activities.

Tyson credited volunteer ham operators who provided emergency communication services with being "a big help to us" in manning radio sites at schools and at the various disaster points. He said the hams also provided valuable assistance when the department's radio system went out for a short period of time, he said.

Safety Under The Mattress

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Marcia Leggett and her daughter, Angie, spent Wednesday night under a mattress, listening for the jet-propelled sound of another twister and waiting for dawn.

When a tornado that flattened the town of Simpson ripped the windows out of the Leggetts' house, both mother and daughter said they didn't know what was going on.

"I heard it coming," said Ms. Leggett, "and I grabbed Angie and got in the kitchen under a mattress. It sounded like a train. We slept under a mattress all night."

Ms. Leggett said she "felt strange" just before the twister hit. "It was really eerie. Everything got real quiet and the air felt so strange," she said. "Then I felt the pressure in my ears when it hit. I had to keep swallowing."

Angie, a student at Sadie Sautler School, said she "started crying real hard and did what my mama told me to do," during the storm. Her mother said the youth kept saying "I just don't know what happened, I just don't know."

heart attack as the tornado struck her home. Boyd said she crawled out of her house and was found by rescue workers in the yard.

An adjacent house belonging to Dorothy Taylor was also damaged, but Mrs. Taylor was reportedly "OK this morning," according to Simpson rescue personnel.

The Rescue Squad lost its building in the storm. Officials this morning said the "structure was totaled" along with one truck.

A brick warehouse near the rescue building was nonexistent this morning. Steel beams from the structure were scattered throughout the area, some in trees and one perched atop a car.

No official estimates of damage in the Simpson area were available this morning and one rescue official said, "We may never know, because the most valuable things that were lost were ones without a dollar figure on them."

Indict 24 With 'Pot' Conspiracy

WASHINGTON (AP) — An indictment charging 24 people with conspiracy to import and distribute cocaine, marijuana and methamphetamine in eight states has been returned by a federal grand jury in Tucson.

The indictment returned March 20 but sealed until Wednesday also seeks the forfeiture of nine airplanes connected with drug smuggling operations that reached into Columbia, Jamaica, Mexico, the Bahamas and Panama, according to U.S. Attorney A. Melvin McDonald of Tucson.

McDonald said its U.S. operations extended to Arizona, Florida, Nevada, New Mexico, Michigan, California, Texas and Washington state.

Others, such as Hyman Boyd, Simpson's fire chief, who lost his home in the tornado, were not so fortunate.

Boyd said he and his wife and a neighbor were inside, watching television, when "a hard gust of wind came and I told everybody to get on the floor." The house came down on top of them, he said, and they were trapped inside.

"I kept hollering for help on my walkie-talkie and finally I pulled myself out, then pulled my wife and the other lady out," Boyd said. "We crawled down the road and met the rescue on the way."

By that time Boyd said he had lost so much blood from a cut on his forehead that he could hardly move.

Today, sporting a blood-soaked bandage, and kicking through the debris of his home, he said he was glad to be alive.

Another neighbor of Boyd's, Simpson Postmistress Virginia McDonald, suffered an apparent

Major Factor In House-Hunting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Utility bills account for an estimated 15 percent of total monthly housing expenses and have become a large factor in influencing a home purchase decision.

Shopping for a home in the winter can give a potential buyer a good picture of a home's energy efficiency and the size of utility bills, according to the U.S. League of Savings Institutions.

It says potential buyers should test for drafts around doors, window and electrical outlets for inefficient insulation; heavy frost or ice on windows, which indicates a lack of or ineffective storm windows, and they should note varying temperature levels as they walk about, a sign of an inadequate furnace.

Also ask for utility bills to get an idea of how much it will cost monthly to heat or cool the house.

Service Woes Beseige AT&T's Customers

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
Kaye Soka of Owens-Illinois Inc. says the problems are "abominable." Maxine Warner of 20th Century-Fox says "It's one of the worst things that ever happened." Carol Cordial of Maryland National Bank describes it as "absolutely disastrous." Those individuals, each a corporate communications manager, are talking about something they used to take for granted — service from the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

A survey by The Associated Press indicates the problems are serious and nationwide, although they appear restricted to specialized business services such as WATS lines and private phone circuits.

The survey also found the Federal Communications Commission had launched a monitoring program, that many state regulators were receiving more complaints since the Jan. 1 breakup of the Bell System, and that AT&T has formed a special "strike force" to attack the problems.

At the local level, the survey found no evidence of new delays in providing residential customers with dial-tone service. Corporate executives warn, however, consumers shouldn't assume they're home free. If a special private circuit used by a bank for its automatic teller machines breaks down, for example, and it takes AT&T and a Bell company two days to repair it, consumers as well as the bank are inconvenienced.

"In 17 years, I've never seen this before," says Dennis J. King, the vice president and communications manager at Wells Fargo Bank in San Francisco. "Frustrating is not the word."

AT&T executives say they are frustrated. They acknowledge the breakup wasn't supposed to affect service. They also acknowledge the problems can be traced to a lack of coordination between AT&T and the Bell companies, while denying any wish to "pass the buck" or take advantage of captive customers.

Thanks to the antitrust pact that split the Bell System, AT&T is now responsible only for long-distance links, notes Gus Blanchard, the AT&T vice president tapped to head the company's strike force. The Bell companies must provide local connections. If the Bell company doesn't complete its work at the same time AT&T does, or vice versa, the result is an unhappy customer.

The AP survey found plenty of unhappy customers. It also found:

—AT&T has significantly increased the wait for customers who want new private lines and WATS circuits. Despite those increases, from 28 working days to 48 working days for private lines for example, AT&T is still completing on time only one of four such private-line orders. Its backlog for private lines is 14,000. AT&T is meeting 75 percent of its startup promises for new WATS circuits and faces a backlog of 15,000 to 20,000 orders.

—Although AT&T says most of its problems stemmed from handling new orders, evidence of repair delays for existing customers also abounds. Those problems are not laid solely at AT&T's doorstep. Companies with large networks that require both local Bell and AT&T long-distance circuits claim they've experienced a dramatic increase in repair time. John Wulf, the communications chief for the Portland-based Pacific Power & Light Co., says the utility recently had to wait two days for repairs after an outage, compared to an almost immediate response in the past. Adds Phil Onstad of the Control Data Corp.: "There is a serious lack of coordination between AT&T and the Bell companies in getting things fixed."

—The FCC is receiving unsolicited complaints about service shortfalls. The complaints have forced the agency to start a special monitoring effort, raising the prospect of regulatory involvement that neither AT&T nor the Bell companies want.

—State public service commissions across the country — from Maryland to Michigan and South Dakota to New Jersey — report complaints are up. In Maryland, consumer complaints "are up an alarming 40 to 50 percent," says Joseph Ismail, the chief communications engineer for Public Service Commission. David Lewis of the Public Utility Commission's Bureau of Consumer Services says calls have tripled to 50 to 60 a week. Both say consumers are complaining about their inability to understand new bills or to figure out where to turn with problems.

The AP survey was conducted earlier this month through interviews with corporate managers, government officials, consumers and telephone executives across the country. The news was not all bad.

Those interviewed generally agree the nation's basic telephone system continues to operate well. There has been no measurable increase in complaints of busy signals, poor voice quality, no dial tone or disconnected calls. But that doesn't help the large business customer who needs new service.

"We had a resource that ... we had no reason to question fail us," says King of the Wells Fargo Bank. He recounts how the bank arranged last month to move 50 telephones from one office to another; the phones were moved, but there were no dial tones for a week.

"It's chaotic out there," adds Gus Morck, the telecommunications manager for the Atlantic Richfield Co. in Los Angeles.

"I guess I wouldn't call it chaotic, but trying to get anything done now is extremely difficult," says Val B. Bala, an executive with Johnson & Johnson in New Brunswick, N.J., and the president of the Communications Managers Association.

What troubles AT&T executives is that they know their customers are right. They worry not only about lost revenue through service delays — they won't discuss dollar amounts — but also a loss of goodwill and the need to divert managerial attention to existing services instead of new business ventures.

The delays in filling new orders

"are totally unsatisfactory from our viewpoint and certainly from the viewpoint of our business customers," says Blanchard. He notes more than 40 computer systems and 3,000 AT&T employees are involved now in coordinating orders with the Bell companies, but adds the kinks just haven't been worked out.

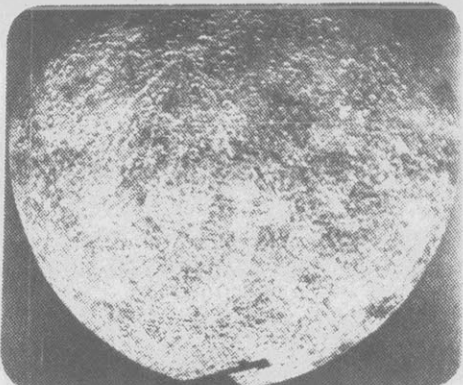

To resolve the problem, AT&T is increasing the number of computer terminals at its engineering centers. By April 3, it will have transferred 750 to 1,000 employees to the terminals from other jobs and will go to a 16-hour workday compared to 10-to-11 hours now, he says.

Bala and Onstad say they still believe AT&T cares about service and that the problems will be corrected. Others aren't so charitable. Says Morck: "They had a whole year (before the breakup) to get this thing working properly."

"When the judge was authorized to do this (approve the breakup), he should have given out boxing gloves," concludes Ms. Warner of 20th Century-Fox.

Messenger Of The Gods

Mariner 10 transmitted the first pictures from Mercury on this day in 1974. The probe flew to within 460 miles of the planet. Temperatures on Mercury range from 300 degrees below zero Fahrenheit to more than 800 degrees above — the widest known temperature range in the solar system. Mercury and Venus are the only planets in the solar system without moons. Mercury circles the sun in 88 days. It takes Pluto 248 years to accomplish that task.

DO YOU KNOW — Which planet is currently the outermost in the solar system?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Nuclear plants produce about 13 percent of U.S. electricity.

SMOKERS
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — About 90 percent of the people who stop smoking and then "slip" with one or two cigarettes reportedly become full-blown smokers again.

Deborah Ossip-Klein, assistant psychology professor at the University of Rochester, says, however, that just under half of the ex-smokers who slipped and then called a telephone hotline for ex-smokers were able to stop smoking again after a two-week followup.

In addition, "two-thirds of the callers who were tempted to smoke, but had not yet slipped when they called, were still abstaining after a two-week follow-up," she said. The hotline is sponsored by the American Lung Association-Finger Lakes Region and the university's psychology department.

Close Contact Made For Lively TV Debate

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It may have looked like four guys playing bridge, but having the three Democratic presidential candidates and moderator Dan Rather sit around a table was instrumental in making a political debate become lively, human television.

"We wanted them to be in close proximity, in a position where they had to look directly at one another, or run the risk of avoiding each other's eyes," said Rather, the CBS News anchor, who was interviewed by telephone Wednesday night after conducting the debate.

The session with presidential contenders Walter Mondale, Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson was broadcast live on CBS. It was the first debate this campaign season in prime time and the first one carried live on network television.

Commercial network coverage means sizeable audiences, especially when compared to the previous national debates carried on public television.

After all, according to the Nielsen ratings, 4 million homes actually had on minor candidate Lyndon Larouche's paid political announcement when it was broadcast in prime time on NBC on a Saturday night two weeks ago.

Asked how he would characterize Wednesday's debate, Rather said he might compose this lead paragraph: "Walter Mondale continued to step up his attacks on Gary Harty, and Gary Hart stepped up his defensive measures. Meanwhile, the Rev. Jesse Jackson did his best to serve as peacemaker."

Mondale and Hart, sitting directly across the table from each other, flailed away at the other's positions on energy, arms control, American military involvements abroad and the Chrysler loan.

In past debates, the candidates have been lined up on a stage facing the audience. This was conducive to speech-making. The CBS confrontation, a theater-in-the-round set-up at the Low Memorial Library at Columbia University in New York City, was more conducive to real contesting and confrontation.

One exchange really was eyeball to eyeball as the former vice president attacked Sen. Hart for supporting a tax on imported oil. "Gary Hart voted with big oil," Mondale said.

"Mr. Mondale knows better than that," replied Hart.

Later, Mondale blasted Hart for running ads that the former vice president said "suggest I'm out trying to kill kids" in Central America. "I'm for peace," said

Mondale.

The candidates were careful to avoid the kinds of gaffes that contributed to the defeats of Gerald Ford in 1976 and Jimmy Carter four years later.

How they appear under the camera's intense scrutiny can mean a lot to voters, whom columnist Russell Baker calls the "teletorate."

Studies showed that in the 1960 debates between Richard Nixon and John F. Kennedy, people listening on radio thought Nixon won, while TV viewers thought Kennedy performed better.

As TV performers Mondale seemed looser and more secure than Hart. Perhaps going one-on-one allowed him to be himself — advice he recently received from Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

Jackson provided most of the night's comic relief. Asked what was his major weakness, Jackson said he had been too busy trying to "maximize my few strengths" to give it much thought. And, several times, when the dialogue between Hart and Mondale became intense, Jackson intervened.

Once he put out his hand to silence his rivals, then he joked that the disagreement could be resolved during commercials. Rather replied that the one hour broadcast, which was sponsored by CBS, had no interruptions.

"We were unfairly criticized by others who said that network people always go for drama at the expense of substance," said Rather in the interview. "We badly wanted this to be an hour of substance."

Rather certainly did his share. He asked serious, contemplative questions designed to provide character insights as well as positions on the issues.

Live TV also worked to his advantage. With the nation looking on, candidates find it very difficult to duck questions such as, "What's your weakness as a person?"

There were times when the politicians ignored Rather's attempts at closure, but he generally maintained control and he was consistent and fair.

At one point, after having said that Hart would have the final say on a subject, Rather said he would have to allow Mondale to respond to an accusation. "I'm inclined to agree," Mondale joked about the Rather reversal.

On being moderator, Rather said, "It was as difficult as I thought it would be. My role was to amplify them, not amplify myself."

Most Songwriters 'Remain Anonymous'

PASSAIC, N.J. (AP) — George David Weiss of Edgewater says most songwriters are "absolutely anonymous" — and the man who penned the words to such popular songs as "The Lion Sleeps Tonight," "Mr. Wonderful" and "Can't Help Falling In Love" cites himself as an example.

"A songwriter sits in a little room and writes songs you hope get sung, but even then you're still anonymous," said Weiss as plans were announced Wednesday for creation of a Songwriters' Museum of New Jersey to honor lyricists who wrote words made famous by others.

The $4 million museum is being established by the National Academy of Popular Music in one of 10 buildings in a former Niroyal complex.

A SWISS NO-NO
ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — The director of Switzerland's largest newspaper, Blick, has been fined the equivalent of $1,295 for publishing massage parlor advertisements.

"The New Jersey effort is designed to demonstrate the tremendous creative energies of the Garden State's people," said songwriter Sammy Cahn, who performed some of his popular hits, including "Come Fly With Me," "Three Coins in the Fountain" and "It's Been a Long, Long Time."

The museum will house recordings, films, the original sheet music and other memorabilia of famous songwriters and performers from New Jersey, including Count Basie and Frank Sinatra.

Said Weiss: "This will take a little bit of that cloak of anonymity away. You'd be surprised how many people think the performer wrote the song. People tell me I didn't write 'Can't Help Falling in Love.' They say, 'Elvis Presley wrote it.' He sang it."

Panel Proposes Discrimination Penalties

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights says if even one instance of discrimination is found in a federally aided institution, all of the facility's programs should face the possibility of disciplinary action.
But the commission said Wednesday the anti-discrimination remedies should not include affirmative action quotas.
The commission position, in the form of a recommendation to Congress, was adopted by a 5-2 vote with one absentee.

The resolution both supported and opposed key elements of the Reagan administration's civil rights policy. The more conservative commission majority that took control last January has been accused by civil rights groups of blindly following the administration's lead.
The suggested prohibition on quotas agrees with the president's position, but the application of civil rights remedies to an entire college or other institution is in sharp disagreement.

Justice Department lawyers have contended in Supreme Court arguments that sanctions against an institution should only apply to the specific program where bias was found.
The commission said while the most severe penalty, a cutoff of aid, should only apply to the biased program, remedies such as court injunctions could be applied to all areas of an institution.
Passage of the resolution caused an uproar characteristic of the commission since the new majority took over.

Commissioner Mary Frances Berry, one of the dissenters, said the prohibition against affirmative action will "throw red meat to the wolves." She said she referred to congressmen and others looking for an excuse to avoid enforcement of civil rights laws.
Robert Destro, who voted with the majority, said, "We all agree with the need for strong civil rights enforcement. We're unanimous on that point, so we haven't thrown red met to anyone."

Commission Chairman Clarence M. Pendleton Jr., also a majority voter, snapped at Ms. Berry, "You've done your job for the 6 o'clock news. I am just disappointed and appalled."
The commission said its policy should apply to a number of civil rights laws, including those affecting discrimination based on race, sex, age and handicap.
The commission vote was a recommendation to members of Congress, a number of whom are sponsoring bills to nullify a Supreme Court ruling that narrowly interpreted enforcement of sex discrimination provisions of the law.

In a 6-3 vote of Feb. 28, the court said the federal government may not cut off all aid to a college because it practices sex discrimination in a particular program.
The justices said Title IX of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 requires that federal money be cut off only for the specific program that receives federal aid.
