TRUTH IN PREFERENCE TO FICTION

103rd YEAR NO. 79 GREENVILLE, N. C. SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 1, 1984 64 PAGES PRICE 50 CENTS

ALL SMILES — Many Pitt County residents haven't smiled much in the past few days, but Saturday morning Martel Clemmons, 6, found a reason to do so. He found a box of toys donated to replace his own toys that were lost Wednesday night when a tornado struck his family's mobile home. His parents, Gloria and Garry Clemmons, of Taylor's Estate Mobile home park were only slightly injured when the tornado winds destroyed the mobile home. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Pitt Area Digs Out As Damages Mount

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Jewel Nethercutt sat on a large bottled-gas cylinder in the front yard of her home in the afternoon sun, tears running down both sides of her face.

"There's nothing left but memories," she said as a large front-end loader pushed up debris — once her home — into a pile.

Saturday morning her husband, Jimmy Nethercutt, looked on as the same machine loaded what was left of the home — bricks, splintered pieces of wood, broken furniture, bits of dishes, rags that had once been clothing — into a truck to be hauled away.

The house, on SR 1726 in the Portertown area, was one of many destroyed by a tornado Wednesday night that killed nine people and injured at least 148 others as it roared along a 22.5 mile path in Pitt County — from the Greene County line, through Ayden, the Portertown area, the village of Simpson, and east of Pactolus, into Beaufort County.

"We're going to rebuild," Nethercutt said. "The insurance will help," but won't replace everything that years of work had accumulated.

Nethercutt's wife, as she watched her home being piled up, said, "We were going to bed when the back window broke out. We laid in the hall," then "the roof came off and the walls caved in."

She said one of their two children was in bed. "Jimmy went in" and got the child off the bed, "then the bed flew out the top of the house."

The Nethercutts were not injured. Four people within a mile of their home died.

Saturday, as funeral services for five of those killed Wednesday night were in progress, several hundred volunteers were at work clearing debris in the Portertown area.

Lyman Hardee, chief of the Eastern Pines Fire Department, said Saturday, "We ain't going to stop 'til it's cleaned up from Simpson to N.C. 43."

The department asked for volun-

Wind-Powered

If there is any question in the minds of local residents about the power of a tornado, or any question that the storm that killed nine people and caused $16 million in damage in Pitt County Wednesday night was the same one that caused heavy damage to property in Greene, Wayne, Duplin and other counties to the southwest, they should take note of a check found here Saturday.

Edith Payne was hanging out clothes behind her 2527 Dickinson Ave. home and noticed a piece of paper on the ground. It was a check for $11.66 that K.G. Sloan used to pay his telephone bill on Dec. 13, 1972.

Sloan's daughter, 64-year-old Edna Sloan Davis, lives about 1½ miles west of Calypso, in Duplin County. Her father's home, until Wednesday night, was next door.

That's about 53 air miles from where Mrs. Payne found the check.

Mrs. Davis said Saturday that Sloan's home and several storage buildings behind it, were destroyed Wednesday night by the tornado. One of those storage buildings, she said, contained a box of old bank statements and canceled checks. Some of the old checks were found in bushes in her yard.

The others, however, were lost to the winds — but this one came to earth in Greenville.

Volunteer Donations Pour In For Victims Of Tornado

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Although Wednesday's tornado was devestating to many residents of eastern North Carolina, one bright spot can be seen — the citizens of North Carolina have reached into their hearts and let the victims know that they care.

Volunteers have given their time to help clear the debris left by the storm, and donations of food, clothing, furnishings and money have been collected throughout the United States for the relief of the victims.

Even the people of Ohio have pitched in to help the victims of the twister. Pitt County emergency management coordinator Bobby Joyner said an Ohio sherrif's department contacted him about relief supplies it was sending to Pitt County.

The people in the Winston-Salem area have expressed concern for the eastern part of the state with their donations.

"We had no idea when we started this (collection of supplies) that it would turn out like it did," said Robert Owen, operations manager of WSJS radio in Winston-Salem. "One of the announcers came to me with the idea to send blankets (to eastern North Carolina tornado victims.) We announced it on the air, and within two hours we had 200 blankets. It (the donations from the citizens and businesses in the Peidmont triad) snowballed from there."

The collection drive, conducted in conjunction with Sunbird Airlines, netted 60,000 pounds of relief supplies in two days. A total of seven airplanes, three of them C130 military transport planes, shipped the food, clothing and furniture into the Pitt-Greenville Airport Friday afternoon.

Besides the supplies brought in for the victims, $104,000 in cash plus additional pledges have been donated for the relief of eastern North Carolinians left homeless by the twister.

"We are thrilled to do it," Owen said. "Not only are we helping (the people in eastern North Carolina), but we have brought our own community together. As busy as our lives are, we still have time to care."

Come Take A 'Ride-Along' With Me ...

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

"Looks like we're in for a boring day today — not much happening," Officer J.L. Corbett told me as we got in the blue and white police car. "But you never can tell."

I was finally going to see first-hand what a typical policeman's day was like. The day before, I had signed papers saying that I realized the ride might be dangerous and that I wouldn't hold the city of Greenville responsible for injuries to me during the "Ride-Along" program.

When I went to the police department that morning, Lt. J.H. Tripp assigned me to ride with Corbett, a policeman here for nine years. He was one of two policemen working an 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. permanent shift that day (the other three were in court).

"It's been kinda' slow today," he said.

"When are the busiest times?" I asked.

"It varies with the weather. On rainy days there are wrecks all day. But any day can be busy or slow. There's no particular pattern as far as I can tell," he said.

The navy blue interior of the police car looked like the inside of any other car, except for the radio and the speed radar. I noticed the big red digital numbers on the radar dropping by fives and tens everytime we passed a car.

"Do people always slow down when they see you?" I asked, knowing how I hit the brake pedal everytime I catch a glimmer of blue lights.

"I think it's instinct. They drop their speed even if they're in the speed limit. They let off the gas before they even look to see how fast they're going," he said.

"What's the radar's range?" I asked him.

"When the unit's new, it's good for a mile to a mile and a half. It gets you before you ever see me," Corbett answered.

"Well, how do you know which car the radar is picking up?" I wanted to know.

"It picks up the closest and the biggest vehicle. If I were riding down the road and I met a Volkswagon and a transfer truck side by side, it would pick up the speed of the transfer truck," he said.

"Hmmmmmm," I thought, "I'm going to start driving beside transfer trucks."

"When you're sitting on the side of the road with the radar on, people slow down, but act like they don't see you. They scratch their head or reach for something. Then there's the type that waves like they know you," he joked.

"Is it against the law for people to blink their headlights to warn an oncoming car that there's a policeman with a radar ahead?" I asked him.

"No. And I say let 'em do it. It serves the same purpose that I'm trying to serve — to slow down traffic and prevent wrecks. My salary will be the same whether I give 10 tickets a week or 20 tickets a week," he answered.

We rode around town and chit-chatted for awhile. Every now and then we were interrupted by the dispatcher on the radio, but she never called Corbett to go to a big hold-up at a downtown bank like on TV. "At this rate," I thought, "the city of Greenville doesn't have to worry about being responsible for my injuries."

My thoughts were interrupted when a big gust of wind blew a tin garbage can out in the road in front of us. Corbett stopped the car and put it behind a tree in somebody's yard.

"I told you it was going to be an exciting day. Sometimes Tuesdays run you to death and sometimes Saturdays are slow. It just depends," he said.

"Is there a difference when the college students leave town?" I asked.

"There's a big difference when the students are gone on breaks, but there's not that much difference in the summer because there's a big influx of other people. The high crime areas though are the student areas where there are always complaints of loud music, breaking and enterings and disturbances at night clubs," he said.

"What's the most exciting thing you've ever done while on the job?" I asked. (I was curious to know if he ever did anything besides drive around town.)

"I've had my share of exciting times," he said. "I've worked on several murders. I remember a few years ago there was a machine gun murder at the Piggly-Wiggly. But all in all, Greenville's fairly quiet. I've never had to use my gun," he said.

The dispatcher came on the radio to tell the on-duty policemen to keep their eyes open for a white truck that had been stolen from the Brody Medical Sciences Building near the hospital.

"Are there a lot of stolen cars around here?" I asked.

"Yes, especially in the summer because people leave their windows down with the keys in the car. We average about five a month," he said.

While we were chatting, Corbett said he was married and had a little girl in kindergarten.

"Does your wife ever worry about you — whether you will come home or not?" I asked.

"To some extent I guess she worries. But she's been good about it. The worst time was when we had

VOLUNTEERS AT WORK — These volunteers were clearing debris left by Wednesday night's tornado from fields on SR 1727 near the Eastern Pines fire station Saturday so farmers would be able to till the land. More than 500 volunteers joined a clean-up effort sponsored by the Eastern Pines fire and rescue department. Eastern Pines Fire Chief Lyman Hardee said "we ain't going to stop 'til it's cleaned up from Simpson to N.C. 43," one of the areas hit hardest by the storm. Half the area was cleared of debris by dark Saturday. People interested in helping were asked to report to the Eastern Pines fire-rescue station at 9 a.m. Sunday to continue the clean-up. Pitt Designated Disaster Area

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — President Reagan declared six North Carolina counties as disaster areas Friday, enabling them to get federal aid to rebuild from Wednesday's devastating tornadoes.

The order, signed after 6 p.m. at Camp David, covers Bertie, Duplin, Hertford, Pitt, Robeson and Wayne counties.

Bob Blair, a spokesman for the Federal Emergency Management Administration, said the aid would include temporary housing, loans to repair homes and businesses and aid to repair and restore public facilities.

North Carolina Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. had asked Reagan to declare a "major disaster" in 18 counties. Blair said some of those other counties may be named after FEMA analyzes their needs.

Besides the counties named, Hunt also recommended disaster status for the ounties of Bladen, Chowan, Columbus, Cumberland, Gates, Greene, Lenoir, Perquimans, Sampson, Scotland, Union and Nash.

Five Disaster Assistance Centers will open their doors Tuesday to give federal and state help to North Carolinians ravaged by the tornadoes, Herman Clark, secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety, said Saturday. One of the centers will be at the Pitt County Office Building in Greenville.

The centers will help tornado victims find temporary housing, give help on mortgage and rent payments, assist in job placement, provide grants of up to $5,000, give legal service and distribute food coupons. They also will provide loans and give aid to farmers, veterans and Social Security recipients.

Reagan's order was based on a helicopter visit FEMA officials made to the affected counties shortly after tornadoes cut a swath of destruction through the Coastal Plain.

"FEMA reported to the president that the storms had killed 44 and injured over 800 people, plus 197 dwellings were destroyed, 55 received major damage and 120 dwellings had minor damage," Blair said.

Similar damage was suffered in South Carolina, where Reagan declared four counties as disaster areas.

While federal officials began sending help to eastern North Carolina, private groups and local governments were already at work distributing food, blankets and clothing to tornado victims.

"The devastation to the poor is just terrific," said Heman R. Clark, state secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety. "These people are absolutely wiped out."

Armored Car Tips, Quarters Spill Out

GLOUCESTER CITY, N.J. (AP) — A "sea of quarters" scattered over a grassy knoll along an interstate highway after an armored truck spilled its cargo of more than $10,000 in coins, police said.

It took three hours to pick up the quarters after the accident, which occurred on Interstate 76 near Gloucester City on Friday when a Brooks Armored Car Co. truck lost a tire, bumped the curb and tipped sideways, police said.

"There was a sea of quarters out there," state Trooper William Higgins said.

The truck was carrying between $10,000 and $40,000 in bags of quarters, Higgins said. A large amount of paper currency in the truck did not spill out.

The side doors of the truck were sheared off during the crash and the bags of quarters flew out and ruptured, he said.

"I can't believe those doors would shear off like that," Higgins said. "I was flabbergasted."

He said the money was scooped up and rebagged by state police and Brooks' employees.

The driver of the truck, G. Mark Carolson, 25, of Wilmington, and another Brooks employee were slightly injured but declined medical attention, Higgins said.

Higgins said he was unable to determine why 18 lug nuts failed to hold the truck's wheel on. Brooks, a Wilmington, Del.-based company will investigate the mishap, he said. No summonses were issued.

Collision

Approximately $1,250 vehicle damage resulted from a collision Friday on East 10th Street, according to police records.

Police said the accident occurred when a vehicle driven by Andrea Layne Cox of 2405 Umstead Avenue and a vehicle driven by Ramey Jo Dickerson collided. No injuries were reported and no charges were made.

Estimated damage to the Cox vehicle was $800, while damage to the Dickerson vehicle was placed at $450.

Top School Job Should Remain Elected Post

When the North Carolina Public Education Policy Council recommended a plan to adopt apointment of a state school superintendent by the State Board of Education, it was a move to take one more tiny bit of power from the voters.

Call that "strike one".

The proposal requires approval by the General Assembly, followed by submitting a necessary amendment to the state constitution to a vote by the people.

Another amendment proposal?

"Strike two!"

State Superintendent Craig Phillips says he opposes the plan because voters now have the right to choose their top spokesman for North Carolina schools, and the proposal would make the board itself a legislative creature, upsetting a balance of power. He's right, of course.

The N.C. Board of Education now includes the lieutenant governor, the state treasurer and 11 members appointed by the governor. The superintendent is the voters' choice as their spokesman.

Under the plan, the state board would include the lieutenant governor, the state treasurer, one member from each of the state's eight educational districts appointed by the governor, and one member from each of the 11 congressional districts elected by the General Assembly.

There will be a "strike three" if voters remember their stake in the matter. The organizational change could be approved if, with the passage of time and under subtle pressures of those "who know best" what is good for North Carolina education, basic principles are forgotten.

The truth is, election of state school superintendents has brought to that position some highly talented, dedicated and capable people. The process has worked in the past, and there is just no good reason for change.

Cooperation Needed In School Situation

Among the problems caused by the tornadoes of last Wednesday was that of major damage to the Ayden Elementary School.

The school, which was in the path of one of the killer storms, received heavy damage during the night Wednesday. County School Superintendent Eddie West estimated the building's damage at $350,000 to $500,000. While other county schools reopened Friday the Ayden Elementary School remained closed. The students who attend there will be sent to Grifton starting Monday. The heavily damaged building will not be usable for some time.

Damage to the building is a major concern for the school system and an inconvenience for the students and faculty who must now move elsewhere. It is something that cannot be helped, however, and we are certain that everyone involved will cooperate to make the best of the situation.

Arts Win Advocacy Group

RALEIGH — A group of North Carolinians who feel the Legislature has failed to provide enough money for the arts in North Carolina has decided to start fighting for that money. ARTS Advocates of North Carolina has been formed as a private, non-profit corporation that will lobby the Legislature for increased funding for arts programs.

In December 1983, 90 arts supporters from across the state met in Winston-Salem to discuss what they consider to be a problem with arts funding in the state. A number of arts organizations were represented along with some of the state's leading arts' patrons. Out of that meeting came the decision to form ARTS Advocates. Hoping they could hit the ground running with instant credibility, the group chose Mary D.B.T. Semans, chairman of the Duke Endowment and vice-chairman of the Mary Duke Biddle Foundation, as its first president.

Miller Sigmon, who'll serve as executive director, says the group will ask the Legislature to increase funding for the N.C. Arts Council programs by $2 million next year. Current budget for that division of the Department of Cultural Resourves is $2.3 million.

The Arts Council sponsors artists in public schools, grassroots block grants and grants to 15 arts organizations around the state. The council does not deal with the state's major cultural endeavors, the N.C. Symphony, the N.C. Museum of Art, the state library or the Division of Archives.

Sigmon said that the group will try to pursuade the Legislature that more money is needed for the state's 600 non-profit arts organizations and 20,000 artists. "But we're not saying that the government ought to underwrite the arts. We're saying that the state is just one piece of the funding as we seek to provide artists with a livable wage."

How much luck can an arts lobby have with legislators accustomed to having their arms twisted by the banks, utilities and teachers? Sigmon said he'll do some lobbying and in 1985 a part-time lobbyist will probably be hired on contract. But the strength of the group will come, he said, from its ability to call in help from prominent citizens like Mrs. Semans.

Sigmon said that the state spends less than 40 cents per citizen on local arts programs each year. On a per capita basis, that rants the state 28th in the country. He's hoping that this new lobby will help raise that appropriation.

Sunday Morning Notes

Wednesday's tornado strike in Pitt County was a tragedy in every sense, but, as always, there were lighter moments.

Staff Writer Mary Schulken drove to Simpson early Thursday morning on assignment. When she arrived she found the area sealed off. She called the office and told Sports Editor Woody Peele her predicament. He called across the news room to Tom Baines, who happened to be talking to the sheriff by phone at the time. Tom told the sheriff that Mary needed to get into the area to cover the story. The sheriff radioed to officers at the scene and Mary was allowed in. It ain't always easy but somehow the job gets done.

Tornados are fickle in that they do incredible damage in one location and then lift off to completely miss a nearby area. George Holland of the newspaper production department pointed out his house in an aerial photo which was published Thursday. The picture showed destroyed houses at Portertown, an area where some people died. Yet only a short distance down the road Holland's home was undamaged.

Mary and Bion Schulken live east of Winterville. Wednesday night they heard the mighty storm approaching. It sent them to the center of the house for shelter. The dwelling vibrated and trembled and they were conscious of the air pressure dropping. It spared them, however, and dropped down a few miles away to do hundreds of thousands of dollars in damage to Ayden Elementary School, as well as damage to other Ayden buildings.

It is little wonder that tornadoes are known as nature's most treacherous event. They are unpredictable.

Glenn Hudson of Route 5, Greenville, is a student at Pactolus Elementary School. Lynn Jobes of The Daily Reflector spoke to his class recently and Glenn asked if he could send in something for use in the newspaper. Mrs. Jobes told him to send it along and last week the item came to the news department.

"This is the article I wanted to send for publication," Glenn said, "I hope you can use it."

Well, we can't use the picture that Glenn drew which is a remarkable likeness of a racing car and is entitled "The Scrambler."

With it, he wrote, "This is a later model built to race on dirt tracks. It has wide and tall tires which help the driver to control the car at high speeds. The body on a late model is usually fiberglass. Late models weigh two or three tons. The Spoiler is used to keep the back wheels down. The back wheels are the tires that make the car go. This late model can go up to 100 to 117 miles per hour."

Very informative and certainly that is more than we knew about racing cars.

How much is North Carolina land worth?

Well, Walter E. Boswell of 206 N. Harding St. brought by a land grant issued to his great-great-grandfather by the state of North Carolina on Dec. 23, 1854.

The state granted to Fenwick Ellis 4.3 acres of land on Camp Creek "adjoining Wilbourn Hampton and lands formerly owned by Edwin Paschal."

The paper was witnessed by Warren Winslow, speaker of the Senate, and was signed by the secretary of state.

What was the price of the land? Five cents per acre.

Impact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. troop withdrawal from Lebanon was supposed to free the Reagan administration to concentrate on resolving the Arab-Israeli dispute. But the king of Jordan, the Congress and, some would say, the forthcoming presidential election have helped shift U.S. diplomacy into low gear.

Former President Jimmy Carter would spread the blame farther, to the White House itself. He says that except for President Reagan's Sept. 1, 1982, speech outlining a proposed settlement, the administration has not demonstrated "that our nation is truly committed to the peace process."

The State Department disagrees. Spokesman Alan Romberg, asked to comment on Carter's assertion this week, said "the various efforts that we've made, the statements made by the president, the secretary, among others, answer that."

Unquestionably, though, King Hussein and Congress have contributed to a slowdown. Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz were depending on the Jordanian leader to revive the moribund U.S. peace initiative by agreeing to negotiate with Israel. The administration also was counting on proposed new arms sales to Jordan and Saudi Arabia to help enlist the support of the two Arab nations.

But Hussein condemned the United States as unprincipled and biased toward Israel. He concluded that further diplomatic efforts would be hopeless. Congress, already skeptical about selling U.S.-built Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to Jordan and Saudi Arabia, forced Reagan to cancel the purchases.

Shultz acknowledged that Hussein's remarks dealt "a serious setback" to the Stinger sales and to U.S. diplomatic efforts. He suggested the administration had reached at least a temporary dead end.

"King Hussein has obviously said that he doesn't intend to step forward and start a process of negotiation with Israel in the near future. He said that. We accept that," Shultz said.

The impact, if any, of the presidential election is hard to gauge.

The conventional wisdom is that progress toward a Middle East settlement is extremely difficult when a president is seeking reelection because he would not risk offending Jewish voters by putting pressure on Israel.

This theory presupposes, however, that pressuring Israel would produce positive results — and that the president is inclined to muscle a generally reliable ally.

Carter, who was an aggressive player in the negotiations that produced the peace treaty between Egypt and Israel, is critical of some of the moves taken by the Reagan administration in the Middle East.

He said sending U.S. Marines to Lebanon failed to stabilize the country, tended to weaken President Amin Gemayel's esteem among the Lebanese people and made him look like "an American puppet."

Carter, in an interview on ABC's Nightline, also disapproved of the U.S. strategic alliance with Israel. He said it "sends a clear signal to the Arab adversaries or potential adversaries that we are not going to be fair-minded or objective when we get to the negotiating table."

But the former president's main point is that "the crucial element in resolving the Mideast disputes, or at least part of them, is a sustained and determined commitment on the part of our country to play the central role."

Reagan's special mediator, Donald Rumsfeld, and Laurence Silberman, a former ambassador to Yugoslavia, are on a hectic swing through the Middle East. They covered nine countries, including several on the periphery, in their first six days.

Other U.S. emissaries, including Philip Habib, Morris Draper, Robert McFarlane and Richard Fairbanks, have traveled the same road. And yet the Arab-Israeli conflict remains unsettled.

In Carter's view, "there is not going to be any substantial progress made nor concessions granted on the part of any of the disputing parties, unless they can make them directly in response to efforts by the secretary of state of the United States or the president himself."

Remembering Wendell Willkie

WASHINGTON — The word among the professional pollsters is that they have never seen anything quite like the skyrocket rise of Gary Hart in the race for the Democratic nomination. The Colorado senator soared from a puny 7 percent in early January to a point in early March where "if the election were held today," he would have toppled Ronald Reagan.

Well, maybe yes, and maybe no. Depending upon how a definition is qualified, perhaps Hart's record is unique. But we have short memories. Has everyone forgotten Wendell Willkie? The story of the "barefoot Wall Street lawyer," as columnist Jay Franklin dubbed him, is one of the more remarkable tales of our political times. Let us take a moment to look back to 1940.

The parallels abound. Both Willkie and Hart came to the presidential arena with backgrounds in the Midwest. Willkie was born in Indiana, Hart in Kansas. Both men became practicing lawyers. A couple of generations back, the family name was changed from Willcke to Willkie.

Willkie was born in 1892; he came down with the presidential itch in 1930. He was then approximately Hart's age today. Willkie had a great shock of unruly hair; he had the ru led air of a man who has slept in his suit; he excelled in the informal, spontaneous speech. Willkie's biographer, Joseph Barnes, describes him as "full of energy and physical magnetism and self-confidence."

Differences also abound. Hart may fairly be described as a man who has made a profession of politics: campaign manager for George McGovern in 1972, a successful candidate for the Senate in 1974, re-elected in 1980. By contrast, Willkie never had run for any public office. He had been a registered Democrat until 1938. Politically, he was an unknown quantity.

But Willkie was not unknown otherwise. He was well-known as a public utility tycoon, a crusading foe of Roosevelt's New Deal, a lawyer of formidable skills. His battle against the Tennessee Valley Authority had made his name, if not a household word, at least as familiar as the name of industrialist Lee Iacocca is familiar today. In July 1939, Willkie made the cover of Time magazine. Such pundits as Arthur Krock and David Lawrence mentioned him as a possibl.e Republican candidate.

Willkie professed to pay little attention to the press he was getting. In March 1940, the American Institute of Public Opinion posed this question in a national poll: "Whom would you like to see elected this year?" Willkie got less than 1 percent of the response. He never entered his name in a single primary.

Yet a political situation was developing within the Republican Party that suggested the possibility of a coup. The two leading candidates were Thomas E. Dewey and Robert A. Taft, but neither had aroused great enthusiasm. Dewey was 38, a successful district attorney in Manhattan; Taft was no more than a freshman senator from Ohio. As the spring wore on, volunteers began to rally around the Willkie flag. The Cowles and Luce publications endorsed him. In June the New York Herald-Tribune joined the parade.

Then came "the miracle in Philadelphia." Republicans gathered for their national convention to find that Willkie's partisans were everywhere. These were people, says biographer Barnes, "who wanted something newer than the New Deal." The appeal was to rank-and-file Republicans and also to independents. But "the strongest cement of the entire Willkie campaign" was to be found in this demand: "We want Roosevelt out." Dewey led on the first ballot with 360 delegates, followed by Taft with 189 and Willkie with 105. By the fourth ballot, Willkie had taken the lead. He won his party's nomination on the sixth.

The rest of the story is anticlimactic. With Europe engulfed in World War II and America's involvement a certainty, the country was not about to change its commander in chief. Willkie carried only 10 states in November. He trailed in the popular vote by 22.3 million to Roosevelt's 27.2 million. He lost the Electoral College 449-82. Over the next four years Willkie wrote his best-selling book, "One World." He crusaded for civil liberties. Then a series of heart attacks felled him, and he died in October 1944.

To the editor:

Asking questions and searching for the correct answers are basic educational skills all students must master. Most failures to grasp a concept in a subject area are probably due to one's fear of asking a question, not knowing how to express a question or the inability to find the correct answer.

Greenville city schools are giving every area student an invaluable and convenient opportunity to sharpen his or her question-and-answer-seeking abilities outside of class with Dial-A-Teacher at 752-4192 every Monday through Thursday from 6 to 8 p.m. when school is in session. I challenge all area students to take advantage of this innovative and helpful approach. The key to learning has been given to you, turn it and see what happens.

Fame May Be Fleeting For YUMPS

Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer

WASHINGTON — As a rule, fame in America is only as current as the last issue of People magazine. Andy Warhol says it only lasts 15 minutes. Consequently, young upwardly mobile professionals, or YUMPS, whom presidential contender Gary Hart has helped make America' latest overnight celebrities, may become victims of this cultural tendency.

But the YUMPs' (or YUPs', depending on how you like your acronyms) emergence is neither sudden nor transitory. Behind the affinity that many of them have for Hart is a fundamental notion about their own place in both politics and the economy. Of course, Hart's star may fall in their estimation, but to explain the Coloradan's popularity as an example of trendy consumerism might be unduly compulsive.

America's young professionals, whether urban or suburban, already affluent or still aspiring to be so, have prompted our curiosity for some time. Their role in giving Hart most of his primary victories so far (mostly in states where unemployment is below the national average) was no surprise, especially after the success that the similarly cerebral John Anderson had with them in 1980.

But our immediate interest, we admit, comes in response to skeptics — such as The Washington Post's George Will, an old 42 — who've suggested that YUMPs (a club Will limits to 25-to-40-year-olds) take their politicans with their tortellini or any other foodstuffs sanctioned by D.E. Crimmins' "The Official Young Aspiring Professional's Fast-Tract Handbook." Some stereotypes can go too far.

While the more affluent and ambitious members of the baby boom bear a strong resemblance to Crimmins' caricature, their political interests are both diverse and substantive. Their vote, like that of a machinist or senior citizen, is an expression of how they feel about themselves. A politician can become a symbol; his campaign a metaphor for his supporters' own struggles.

YUMPs may seem to be the least oppressed of American voters. Many of them like Ronald Reagan, too. The president's studious pursuit of the good life (supplemented by the first lady's attention to current fashion) has certainly merited as much mention as any Democrat's in Crimmins' handbook.

Hart's generational message, however, runs across typical partisan lines. It speaks to millions of Americans who, despite their relative wealth and comfort, feel shortchanged and frustrated.

Last year, the Brookings institution issued a study illustrating the extent to which younger adults have enjoyed greater benefits in education, housing and other essentials than their frequent complaints indicate.

Yet their sheer numbers have stymied the expectations of continued career advancement of which they became prisoners in grade school. Nowadays, even J.D.s and M.B.A.s aren't guaranteed exemptions from a middle-management glut, with which they will slowly grow old. For many older YUMPs, there is an unsettling sensation that their gray hairs are multiplying more quickly than their opportunities.

Though Hart is 47, his candidacy has given young adults not only a relatively fresh alternative to the Democrats of the past, but alos, through its early cussess, a vicarious sensation of accomplishment.

It's unclear how Hart's change of name, fudging on birthdate and other personal decisions will influence his share of the YUMP bloc. While Hart's recent loss of momentum may be attributable to misgivings about his honesty, YUMPs, as college students, have helped give rise to the professional writers of term papers and resumes for whom fact is no substitute for creativity. Hart's miscues, intentional or not, may be forgiven.

But one thing is fairly certain: Hart is only among the first political practitioners to grasp the restiveness of newly-emerging voting bloc. This group's independent political inclinations will benefit both Democrat and Republican to the extent that either party speaks to its common experiences. Its increased involvement may well prove to be a godsend to moderates and a deadly blow to the far right.

At work is the Vietnam-Watergate generation's rebirth in politics. Hart may fall to ride this generation's self-interest to the White House this year, but other candidates will undoubtedly have a chance to try again in the future.

Alan Is Back

Steve Gerstel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At the bottom of the "whip notice" outlining the Senate's schedule for the week, Alan Cranston penned in a personal note.

In bold strokes, the California Democrat wrote: "Great to be back with you all! — Alan."

It was a nice touch by a nice man but it's a little hard to believe that Cranston feels that it is all that "great to be back" in the Senate.

After all, the 69-year-old Cranston has spent more than a year trying to become the Democratic presidential candidate. That's heady stuff for anyone.

People in every state listening to what you say, winging around the country and sometimes even being recognized, showing up even a little bit in national polls, being at least offered Secret Service protection.

To say nothing about raising huge amounts of money, spending that and going a $1 million in debt and being spurned by the voters.

After that, the Senate, with its archaic rules and hidebound traditions, must seem a very tame existence.

But Democratic voters decided in Iowa and New Hampshire that Cranston and Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina are much better suited to the Senate than to the White House.

And the voters in those two states plus their kin in Alabama, Georgia and Florida rendered the same verdict on Sen. John Glenn of Ohio.

That leaves Colorado's Gary Hart as the lone survivor in the four-man Senate entry into the nomination sweepstakes.

It appears, as of now, that Hart will remain absent for some time, returning either after the convention in July, the election in November or for his inaugural next January.

Cranston, Hollings and Glenn can find some solace in the Senate, which abounds with men who have sought and failed to win the White House.

There's Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, the Republican standard bearer of 1964, and Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, the party's vice presidential candidate in 1976 and a presidential candidate in 1980, and Senate GOP leader Howard Baker, who ran in 1980 and plans to go again in 1988.

It will be interesting to watch what Cranston, Hollings and Glenn do now and in the years ahead.

These three are unlikely to emulate former Sen. Eugene McCarthy, who fired up a generation with his opposition to the Vietnam war and his elegance of speech in 1968 and then sulked through the election, winding up his Senate career without the hint of distinction.

They appear more likely to folliw the lead of Sen. Edward Kennedy, who returned after his 1980 defeat to reclaim the role of leader of Senate Democratic liberals.

Age very probably precludes any of the three of running again, although Glenn is a possible vice presidential candidate, relieving them of the burden of that ambition.

They should be free to devote their time and talents to legislation, pursuing the goals that they spelled out in their presidential campaigns.

For Cranston, that means relentless support for a nuclear freeze and a jobs program; for Hollings a budget freeze, a military draft and merit pay for teachers; for Glenn, his five-point nuclear disarmament plan, a corporate and individual surtax, pay-as-you go budget increases, defense cuts, job retraining loans and a manned space station.

As of now, Cranston, Hollings and Glenn appear immune from election pitfalls in their home states.

But Cranston has always been a prolific vote-getter in California, Hollings is hugely popular in South Carolina, and Glenn easily won re-election in Ohio even as President Reagan carried the state in 1980.

They should be able to avoid the fates of George McGovern, Birch Bayh and Frank Church who were purged the first time the voters trooped to the ballot box after their unsuccessful presidential candidacies.

Numbers Fudging

John Cunniff

NEW YORK (AP) — If some of the nation's biggest banks legally avoid listing as defective some of their unpaid loans to Argentina it would not be the first time the numbers have been fudged.

Fudging the numbers is an old tradition, practiced by anyone with a point to make that might be contrary to the evidence.

As a political tool it has been developed almost to the status of art. It is practiced in labor relations, in economic debates, in corporate accounting, in mortgage loans, in government contracts, in taxation battles.

Many people are convinced it was used in estimating nuclear power costs, in part because advocates thought it was the best way for utilities to go, whatever the cost. The cost, of course, is many times the estimates.

Fudging has been used in matters of even greater social consequence.

Many critics, for instance, claim that Social Security's immediate pboblems were "solved" by fudging the numbers. And others feel certain that the same techniques will be used to some degree in the debate about budget deficits.

But most of these are relatively long-range problems and tend to be more susceptible to fudging, especially after everyone has become so weary of the debate that fudging seems to be a reasonable disposal.

The banking problem, however, is immediate. It is a crisis.

If regulatory officials decide banks may not count as income the overdue (by 90 days or more) and unpaid interest on their Argentine loans there will be an immediate and precipitous income drop at some large institutions.

As matters stand, about $650 million of overdue interest must be paid to American banks by March 31. If Argentina fails to do so, U.S. regulations require the banks to lower their official earnings by that amount.

Argentina has indicated it may need more time in which to pay, which brings up the question: Should American regulations be relaxed — bent — in order to help banks to avoid lowering their reported earnings?

The question brings up more questions, perhaps the most basic of which is this: What is accomplished by hiding from the facts?

The answer offered by those who defend the bending of regulations is that Argentina might be able to pay the overdue interest in a matter of weeks, and that to reduce U.S. bank earnings in the meantime would be damaging.

The usual rejoinder by realists is that greater danger is done by hiding from the realities. Many financial authorities, for example, feel that loans to less developed nations can never be repaid in full and on time.

Numbers fudging on such a scale, should it occur, might be unusual, but in lesser amounts it is an everyday fact of life.

For years, steel companies and unions sat down to bargaining with different set of statistics for hourly wages earned. Inevitably, management's figures were higher than the union's, creating an immediate obstacle to negotiations.

Earlier this month some financial institutions were chided by regulatory officials for offering extremely high interest rates on Individual Retirement Accounts — and then explaining the rate was for two months only.

And would you say a bit of numbers fudging in involved when mortgage lenders qualify applicants on the basis of a 9.5 percent first-year interest rate, when that rate almost certainly will rise in the second year?

Numbers fudging is a great tool for avoiding the hard realities, for postponing decisions, for political obfuscation, for making corporate earnings look better than they are and for many other purposes.

The practice can serve what many would claim to be good purposes. But never is it the servant of clear and direct communication.

Changes Coming

Chet Currier

NEW YORK (AP) — As it revolutionizes banking and investing, financial deregulation is bringing some big changes as well to the nation's credit unions.

It has opened their doors to such things as automatic tellers, money-market investing, individual retirement accounts, and even mortgage lending and discount stock-brokerage services.

The basic idea of a credit union is familiar to just about everyone. It dates back more than a century in Europe, and to the early 1900s in this country.

According to the Credit Union National Association, a trade group, some 48.5 million Americans were credit union members of the end of 1983. At last count, they had about $90 billion on deposit, and more than $50 billion in loans outstanding.

Credit unions most commonly operate through their members' place of employment — companies, government entities, professional associations and labor unions. But they also can be organized by people who share some other common bond — through their community, say, or a religious, fraternal or civic group.

They are set up as cooperatives, owned by their members, with deposits normally covered by federal or state insurance for up to $100,000 per account. Many employers enthusiastically support credit unions, often subsidizing them by providing office space, equipment and other facilities.

"Employers often find that a credit union is an excellent, low-cost fringe benefit," the trade association says. "A credit union frequently reduces or eliminates problems such as garnishment, wage assignments, company loans and salary advances."

For many people, credit unions have an image as small-time institutions, a place primarily to conduct simple transactions like savings via payroll withholding, and borrowing to finance the purchase of a consumer item such as a car or boat.

To some credit-union members, in fact, smallness and informality may be part of their appeal. At a credit union where your face, or at least your name, is familiar, a check might be cashed or a loan obtained without elaborate security measures or extensive paperwork. The loan might come relatively cheap, as well, because overhead at credit unions is typically low.

In any case, the small-time image doesn't consistently fit with reality. There is certainly nothing small about an organization like the Navy Federal Credit Union, with more than half a million members and total assets that surpassed $1 billion in 1982. And the number of services credit unions can offer has been expanded significantly in recent years.

They have been given the right to make long-term home mortgages, extend revolving credit, and offer "share draft" — checking — accounts. Complete deregulation of savings accounts at federal credit unions took effect in 1982.

To date, change under deregulation has come in widely varying degrees to individual credit unions, depending on their size and ambitions. For example, at the end of 1982, the first year in which individual retirement accounts were available to all working Americans, credit unions had more than 1.5 million IRAs.

At the same stage, only a small percentage of credit unions had begun to offer services like credit cards. On some of the more sophsticated new possibilities for these venerable institutions, the Credit Union National Association nevertheless sounded an optimistic note.

"While today, mortgages and stock purchases are available from only a few credit unions," it declared, "they point the way to the credit union services of tomorrow."

Island Paradise

Noel Yancey

When Gov. Luther Hodges, accompanied by a host of bigwigs, flew to Ocracoke Island in March 1955 to announce that he was allocating money to build a highway from Hatteras Inlet to the Outer Banks village of Ocracoke, he did so with a tinge of regret.

Speaking to the islanders who had assembled in the village's tiny recreation building, the governor said he had received letters from numerous persons saying, "Please don't spoil Ocracoke."

"You people have learned to live and enjoy life and believe in simple behavior and relationships," Hodges said. "I hope you will continue it."

The governor knew that a paved road to the inlet where it would connect with a ferry would join the village to the nation's highway system and bring in hosts of tourists who would need motels, restaurants, filling stations and other appurtances of modern life.

In urging the Ocracokers not to allow speedier access to the outside world and alter their simple way of life, Hodges was echoing a rite of spring among newspapermen. Every year they'd write pieces extolling the simple pleasures of vacationing on Ocracoke. They'd picture an island paradise, the lovely village with its neat white houses nestled around the harbor with the poetic name — Silver Lake — and flanked by coverts of windblown trees — live oaks, yaupon and myrtle.

They'd wax poetic about the lack of traffic, just a truck or so that did not have to have state auto tags because there were no state-maintained roads on which to drive. One of the trucks was a flatbed, owned by Jake Alligood and driven by his son, which served as the village taxi. It hauled the visitor's luggage from the boat landing to his hotel and ferried him and his family and a handful of other visitors across the mile of sand flat that lay between the village and the beach. When you arrived at the beach, you could look north or south, and as far as eyes could reach, you could see no one. But when you asked Little Jake to drive you to a spot up the beach, he'd refuse because Mrs. Astor-Smith and her daughter were up there swimming in the altogether. Nudity did not shock the people of Ocracoke, and they could understand the feeling of freedom that swimming in the nude gave.

The writers would tell of the afternoon walks that would lead you past the British Cemetery — where the bodies of four English sailors killed when their ship was torpedoes off Ocracoke during World War II are buried. The walk would lead you then to Ocracoke Lighthouse which rises above a grove of live oaks. It was erected in 1825, and its light, which can be seen 12 miles at sea, still guides ships past the shoals and into Ocracoke Inlet.

On another day you might get Little Jake to drive you to Springer's Point — which is covered by a dense oak thicket where the pirate Blackbeard had a hideout. There you might meditate about the legend which says the island got its name because Blackbeard, wishing for daylight as his ship lay off shore, kept muttering, "Oh crow, cock." In demolishing this legend, literal minded folk point out that charts bearing the island's name existed before Blackbeard made the island his haunt. In Pamlico Sound just west of Springer's Point is Teach's Hole where Blackbeard was captured and killed in 1718 by Royal Navy Lieutenant Robert Maynard.

Even after the road was built and Ocracoke Island was incorporated into the Cape Hatteras National Seashore and tourists began flocking to island campsites by the hundreds of thousands, travel writers continued to wonder would "success spoil Ocracoke's flavor?"

"There aren't many places nowadays where a family can enjoy seashore free of hotdog stands, see-the-bear filling stations and neon-lighted commercial enterprises, and so the park on the Outer Banks has attracted vacationists like a magnet pulls iron." Ralph Bugg wrote in 1964. "Most of the visitors come from Virginia, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and New York — in that order — but they come from all over eastern United States and occasionally one sees a California tag ...

"We have spent two summer vacations there, fishing in the surf, bathing in the booming breakers, seeing the sights — and again, just sitting and looking into sea and sky and doing little more than breathing.

Ride ...

rotating shifts. Police officers have strenuous days. It takes an hour or two to calm down and go to sleep because you're so emotionally keyed up and alert when you get home. It's not like shoveling or laying bricks all day," Corbett commented.

"You must really be dedicated to law enforcement," I told him.

"If you were in it for the money, you'd be hurting. The starting salary is $13,000 and you've got to consider the hazards. The public also puts you on a higher plateau than in most jobs, but you don't get paid for it. This job takes a lot of common sense to go along with your (college) degree.

"You've got to know how to handle drunks, dopers, a mother whose child has been cut. I try to treat them like I am in their position," he explained.

"People always fear the uniform and authority. They don't judge you as a person. They always think the police are there to harm you and they judge you a lot of times by how they were treated by another law enforcement officer or how their brother or somebody was treated. This is how it spreads through society.

"People are always on the defensive to start with. And I think it all adds up to the break-down of the family structure — with both parents working. The judicial system cannot correct what the family has failed to do," he commented.

"A lot of people think law enforcement is supposed to be like on TV. You never see a case on TV that goes unsolved. But I like Hill Street Blues — it's probably realistic compared to the New York police," he said.

The dispatcher's voice blared on the radio for Corbett to go to a wreck at the intersection of 14th and Broad streets. When we arrived at the accident, one car had a minor dent and neither driver was hurt. Corbett asked the two men to get in the police car.

"Gentlemen, I have about 10 minutes of paper work to do and then I'll be right with you," Corbett told them.

After filling out the report, he asked each driver to give his account of what had happened. Both told the same story.

"Well, I came around the corner and my door swung open and hit his car while he was sitting at that stop sign," the 62-year-old man explained.

"Is that what happened?" Corbett asked the other driver.

"Pretty much," he answered.

"Have you ever had any trouble with your door before, sir?"

"No, not that I recall. I guess it just won't shut good," he told Corbett.

"How fast were you going when you went around the corner?" Corbett asked him.

"I don't know. I guess about 15 (mph)," he answered.

"Do you have any doubt that you were at fault?" Corbett asked him.

"I guess not," he said.

"Well, I'm not going to issue you a citation because the only thing I could give you one for is careless and reckless and that carries a heavy fine. But your insurance company will find you at fault," Corbett told him.

After asking the men other questions, like if they were wearing seatbelts and if they were injured in any way, Corbett told them to have a nice day and they left.

"That was easy," he said. "It's hard sometimes when I get two versions of what happened."

We began roving the streets again and I asked him what he looked for while he was riding around.

"I look for inspection violations, speeders, anything unusual. But I think the public needs to be more involved. You know who belongs in your neighborhood better than I do," he explained.

The dispatcher's voice came on the radio again. The stolen truck, she said, had been located parked on Fleming Street. I had never heard of Fleming Street.

"You really have to know exactly where all these streets are, don't you?" I asked him.

"Yea, you've got to know the roads. One of the most important things is getting there as fast and as safe as you can," he commented.

We pulled up behind the old white truck and Corbett got out and inspected it. In the bed of it, there was an almost full bottle of Canadian bourbon, a pair of cowboy boots and an old pair of Levi's. In the cab, there was a lot of junk, including a big glass pickle jug and a nightclub pass lying on the floorboard.

"Looks like somebody might have slept in it and just left it here," Corbett said.

E.D. Moore, an identification officer, pulled up and parked behind Corbett's car. He took some pictures of the inside of the cab and tested for fingerprints on the door. The dispatcher told Corbett the owner was on the way. Moore said he would handle it from there, so we left.

"Well," Corbett said, "You about ready to head on back?"

"Yea," I said, "Not too much happening today." We started back to the police department.

Too bad, I thought, that Greenville policemen and law enforcement officers everywhere couldn't have a day like that everyday.

Nazi SS Group's Reunion Draws Protest In Germany

OBERAULA, West Germany (AP) — Five thousand demonstators on Saturday protested a weekend reunion by veterans of the Nazi SS "Death's Head" division in a hall ringed by riot police.

About three dozen black-clad youths, some with their faces masked by scarves, tried to approach the hall, but were kept away by more than 250 officers in riot gear 50 yards from the building.

Kurt Hoffmann, a spokesman for the reunion, said about 250 veterans and an equal number of wives and relatives attended the weekend activities, which are to end Sunday with a memorial service for German soldiers who died in World War II.

Franz Baier, Schwalm-Eder county supervisor, said 5,000 people attended the march and rally in the village square. Police had estimated earlier that 3,000 were at the demonstration.

The demonstrators, mostly young adults and students from outside the village, carried placards accusing the SS veterans of involvement in World War II atrocities, such as the destruction of the Warsaw Ghetto and guarding Auschwitz and other concentration camps.

Veterans at the reunion told reporters that they served only in combat units and were never detailed to guard concentration camps.

The SS was the black-uniformed elite guard of the Nazi party. This unit got its "Death's Head" nickname because the men wore a skull insignia on their uniforms.

Police arrested a marcher armed with an iron rod and another person who had allegedly damaged property. Both were released after their identities were checked, police said.

"We are pleased that there were no major incidents," police director Horst Hinn told reporters at a command post adjacent to the site of the veterans meeting.

Some of the protesters wore striped suits and signs identifying themselves as survivors of Nazi death camps.

One of the veterans, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said that more than 80,000 Germans served with the division between 1939 and 1945. He insisted his unit had not been involved in any atrocities.

Honduras Shakes Up Military

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The head of the Honduran armed forces was dismissed Saturday and three other top generals resigned, the government announced. President Roberto Suazo Cordova assumed command of the military and assured citizens that all was calm.

Gen. Gustavo Alvarez Martinez, the armed forces chief who had been considered the most powerful figure in the government, reportedly left the country.

No reason was given for the top-level military shakeup in this country, which the Reagan administration considers a critical ally in Central America. Honduras was ruled by military men for 17 of the previous 19 years before Suazo Cordova was elected in November 1981.

The government said the changes "do not signify the alteration of the democratic goals of the constitutional government."

Four government communiques read over radio stations during the day announced the dismissal of Alvarez Martinez and the resignations of Gen. Jose Bueso Rosa, chief of staff of the armed forces; Gen. Daniel Bali Castillo, commander of the state security police, and Gen. Ruben Montoya, head of the navy. The Honduran navy uses army-type ranks.

Alvarez Martinez had worked closely with U.S. Ambassador John Dimitri Negroponte in the Reagan adminsitration's plans to put pressure on the leftist Sandinista government of neighboring Nicaragua.

A statement by Suazo Cordova read over the radio stations said there was "absolute" tranquility throughout the country.

"The armed forces and the high military command remain loyal to the constitution, to the president of the republic and to the constitutional and democratic government," said the third statement.

It said Alvarez Martinez had presented his resignation at the request of the high command, which had "decided on his ... transfer outside national territory."

The second communique said the president had assumed command of the armed forces, and it announced the resignation of Bueso Rosa.

In the fourth communique of the day, the government reported the resignations of Bali Castillo and Montoya and urged Hondurans not to misinterpret the actions.

"The people should not be alarmed since there is no reason to be. The present situation should not be interpreted to mean that there is a state of emergency in the country," it said.

Alvarez Martinez, 48, became commander of the armed forces in January 1982 after Suazo Cordova took office as the first elected president since 1973.

In an interview in late 1982, Alvarez Martinez, who was considered more powerful than Suazo Cordova, denied allegations he was taking instructions from Negroponte.

"No gringo gives us orders — no foreigner. We are not going to be a vassal or a puppet of the United States," he said.

Alvarez Martinez was an outspoken anti-communist, however, and entered his forces in joint U.S.-Honduran military maneuvers under way since last August.

Lava Still Flowing

VOLCANO, Hawaii (AP) — Mauna Loa kept erupting Saturday, pumping out molten rock toward the outskirts of Hilo, but smaller Kilauea fell silent and dozens of people forced to evacuate by fast-moving lava were allowed to return home.

"The eruption (of Kilauea) just stopped all of a sudden" at about 3:24 a.m., said George Yoshida, a volunteer at the Hawaii County Civil Defense headquarters in Hilo, biggest city on the island of Hawaii. "But who knows what may happen tomorrow?"

A total of 74 homes in the remote hillside Royal Gardens community and nearby Kalapana were evacuated just before midnight Friday because of the eruption from Kilauea and roadblocks were set up in the area. Residents were allowed to return home Saturday morning.

While lava from Mauna Loa, the world's biggest active volcano, had traveled about 16 miles from its source in just under one week, the lava flow from Kilauea went 5.6 miles in less than 24 hours.

The lava flow from a fissure on the side of the 13,677-foot Mauna Loa, about 20 miles from Kilauea, slowed considerably during its more than six-day, 16-mile advance.

RELIEF SUPPLIES ... Residents in the Winston-Salem area sent 60,000 pounds of supplies for the relief of the tornado victims in eastern North Carolina. Three C130s and four private planes brought the supplies to the Pitt-Greenville Airport Friday afternoon, where trucks donated by local organizations and businesses transported the items to the New Greenville Warehouse for distribution. teers to begin a massive clean-up drive Saturday morning, and more than 200 had arrived by 9 a.m. In all about 500 took part.

"We've divided the area into five sections. We've sent one crew to Simpson. We're going to start up here (on SR 1726 West of the fire station)" Hardee said, "and work our way to N.C. 43."

Ervin Hardee, captain of the rescue squad at Eastern Pines, said 20 to 25 pieces of heavy equipment, bulldozers, front-end loaders, big trucks, back-hoes," had also been donated to the clean-up effort.

The volunteers were treated to a free breakfast — eggs, bacon, ham, toast — and given free chicken pastry for lunch Saturday, cooked by members of the Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church.

And the clean-up was to continue Sunday, when the remaining four victims of the storm are to be buried.

Ervin Hardee, who said about half the debris was cleared by dark Saturday, said volunteers would be welcome again Sunday, and should report to the Eastern Pines fire-rescue department at 9 a.m.

Jimmie Hardee, Pitt County tax supervisor, said Saturday that revised estimates of damage to property from Wednesday's tornado total $16 million.

He said a survey by tax department employees Thursday found more than 400 buildings, including 125 mobile homes, 250 houses, a school, 15 businesses and a number of other buildings, such as barns and garages, received damage.

The $16 million figure, Hardee said, also includes damage to utilities, vehicles and farm equipment.

Of the 50 mobile homes in Taylor Estates on N.C. 43, three miles south of Greenville, before the storm, Hardee said, "22 have partial damage ... the others are gone."

Figures compiled by American Red Cross assessment teams Friday and Saturday were higher.

Dick Carney, director of the Red Cross blood center in Greenville, said "our count is 457 dwelling units damaged in one fashion or another ... 92 homes totaly destroyed, 88 trailers totaly destroyed, and nine small businesses.

"Major damage" Carney said, was done to 77 homes, 26 trailers and nine small businesses, while minor damage resulted to 112 homes, 14 trailers and 31 small businesses.

A survey Saturday morning by Lyman Hardee of areas along 2¼ miles of SR 1727, SR 1726, SR 1732 and SR 1733 within the Eastern Pines fire district, showed that 14 houses were destroyed and 34 others suffered damage.

Some of those that were damaged may be torn down and hauled away. Others had only shingles blown from their roofs.

Mobile homes along the same route faired worse. Of the 21 trailers, 20 were destroyed. The other was damaged.

Law enforcement agencies have maintained roadblocks and patrols in the areas hardest hit by the tornado since Wednesday night, to prevent looting and keep sightseers, who hamper rescue and clean-up efforts, away.

Bobby Joyner, Pitt County fire marshal and emergency management coordinator, said Saturday that Pitt County sheriff's deputies, 10 Highway Patrolmen, 110 members of the N.C. National Guard's 514th Military Police Co. in Greenville, and 30 men from the Division of Prison's eastern area were involved in the security detail.

Although the roadblocks are keeping most signtseers out of the area hardest hit by the storm — the areas of Taylor Estates, Portertown-Eastern Pines and Simpson, between N.C. 43 and N.C. 33 — Joyner said traffic, especially along N.C. 43, has been heavy with people wanting to see the damage.

He urged sightseers to stay away from the areas of damage so clean-up efforts will not be hampered.

He said the curfew that has been in effect each night since the storm, and the roadblocks, may be lifted Monday.

By Friday afternoon, relief supplies were pouring into centers in Greenville from local residents and other areas of the state and nation.

So much clothing had been received that Maj. Ronald Davis of the Salvation Army said Friday that "we have all the clothing we need. We need to distribute what we already have" so there will be room for more donations.

"We will need more (clothing) later, but we have so much stuff now we can't work."

In fact, Davis urged persons "who have suffered loss, to come to the Salvation Army for clothing, food, and to register for furniture and furnishings when they acquire new living quarters."

Joyner agreed Saturday. "We have enough clothes," he said.

But Joyner, who said county officials were notified late Friday afternoon that Pitt has been designated a federal disaster area, said, "we need essential toilet items ... toilet paper, soap, tooth brushes, tooth paste, towels and staple food items."

Two N.C. National Guard four-engine C130 cargo planes delivered clothing and food from the Winston-Salem area to the Pitt-Greenville Airport Friday afternoon, along with at least four private planes and a Sunbird Airlines craft that had been stripped of it's seats to accommodate the cargo.

Other supplies arrived by truck Friday and Saturday.

In an effort to help other areas, local officials sent one truck load of food, and another truck with clothing and furniture to Bertie County for distribution, as well as a load of relief supplies to Greene County.

Officials Thursday had been puzzled by the small number of requests for assistance. But Ed Garrison, director of the Pitt County Department of Social Services, said relief agencies have been "getting more and more requests on a daily basis." Many, he said, are "asking help in finding housing since their's was blown away."

Carney said assistance available from the Red Cross includes funds for medical costs, prescriptions, eye glasses, basic furnishings and clothing.

For example, Carney said, "We can give up to $10 per person for bed linen, up to $500 on bedroom furniture, $250 for kitchen tables and chairs, $300 for a dryer, $400 for a washer.

"We can also provide money necessary for utility deposits, up to $1,000 for emergency home repairs ... gas money so a person can travel to and from work.

Storm victims needing aid should call the main county office building at 752-2934, where all disaster relief agencies have offices.

Last French Troops Sail From Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The last French troops of the multinational force sailed out of Lebanon on Saturday, ending a 19-month peacekeeping effort by the United States, France, Italy and Britain that cost 402 lives.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel's administration formally pronounced the mandate of the multinational force over as of midday Saturday, the state radio and television stations reported.

Army and Druse militia gunners fought sporadic artillery duels in the hills east of the capital Saturday evening. Local radio stations said efforts were under way to curb the flareup around the towns of Souk el-Gharb, Shweifat and Hadath three hours after the outbreak. No casualties were reported.

One hundred commandos who stood guard during the five-hour withdrawal of the last French units lowered the French flag at 4:47 p.m. and were gone from Lebanese soil 12 minutes later, leaving the capital free of foreign armies for the first time in 7½ years.

French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson and Defense Minister Charles Hernu watched the 15-minute ceremony at Beirut's port.

A band played the Lebanese anthem and the Marseillaise. The French army chief of staff, Gen. Jeannou Lacize, read out a 16-line order of the day.

"Your mission has come to an end," he told departing soldiers. "We salute the memory of those who have fallen. You have by your presence your courage and your sacrifices contributed to the defense of peace, of unity and of sovereignty of a nation that is a friend of France."

President Reagan formally ended American participation on Friday, although the 1,800-man Marine contingent had pulled back to U.S. warships off Beirut on Feb. 26.

A Pentagon spokesman Friday night said the move means American warships will gradually move away from the Lebanese coast. The spokesman, Air Force Maj. Pete Hefler, did not say how far they would pull back.

In Beirut on Saturday, a U.S. military spokesman, Army Maj. Don McClary, said the United States had about 15 warships in the area, but was "gradually reducing" the 6th Fleet squadron stationed in Lebanese waters.

Italy said its warships headed home Saturday. The British contingent returned home without fanfare last week.

Radio and television stations said Foreign Minister Elie Salem sent letters thanking the United States, France, Italy and Britain for their contribution to "active peacekeeping in Lebanese territory during the last 19 months."

The French were the first to come and the last to go. The force was deployed in west Beirut on Aug. 21, 1982, to guard the evacuation of Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization from the Moslem half of the capital. Beirut then was besieged by Israel's invading army.

The force withdrew from Lebanon on Sept. 10, 1982, after the PLO evacuation, only to rush back later the same month after the massacre of hundreds of civilian refugees by Christian militiamen in west Beirut's Sabra and Chatilla refugee camps.

In all, 264 Americans, 137 Frenchmen and one Italian died while serving in the force.

It suffered its heaviest casualties in the twin suicide truck-bombings of the U.S. and French command posts in Beirut that killed 243 American and 58 French troops last Oct. 23.

The force remained in place as the Israelis pulled back to southern Lebanon in 1982, but the British, then the Italians and Americans withdrew in February after rebel forces drove the government from west Beirut and much of the rest of its territory earlier this year.

The French departure left Beirut without a foreign army for the first time since the Syrians arricved in November 1976 at the end of the first round of Lebanon's civil war, which had claimed more than 37,000 lives.

No Dieting - Eat All You Want Pill Does All the Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special)—An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Has ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Pill Contains 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Nixon To Give Briefing

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon's plans for a private Sunday talk on foreign affairs has drawn an audience "from all over the United States," former Treasury Secretary William Simon said Saturday.

Simon, now in private business, was spending the weekend with Nixon at the Palm Springs-area desert estate of publisher Walter Annenberg, former ambassador to Great Britain and also a close friend of President Reagan.

"It's just another example of ... when President Nixon's willing to step forward and speak on topics ... there's no limit to the number of people who want to listen to him. There's an understanding that this man has a brilliant reservoir of knowledge," Simon said in a telephone interview.

The closed briefing on foreign affairs by Nixon is scheduled for Sunday at the nearby Annenberg Center for Health Sciences, located at Eisenhower Medical Center.

Among the scheduled guests were Annenberg; former President Gerald Ford, a resident of Rancho Mirage; former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Robert Finch; former Secretaries of Commerce Maurice Stans and Frederick Dent, and other old friends of Nixon, said his chief of staff Nicholas Ruwe.

"They recognize a great man and the notion that history is going to treat him much differently than the treatment of 10 years ago," said Simon, referring to the Watergate obstruction-of-justice scandal that led to the Republican president's resignation in 1974.

"There were mistakes that were acknowledged," Simon said. "I think it was overdone, absolutely hysteria."

Nixon arrived in Southern California Thursday. He spent Friday touring the site of his future presidential library and museum on the San Clemente coast, and talking amiably with reporters.

He also visited the nearby "La Casa Pacifica" that was his western White House during his 1968-74 presidency.

He was the guest of honor at a 400-person reception Friday afternoon at the home, which is now owned by pharmaceutical manufacturer Gavin Herbert.

Acid Rain Hurting Forests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Worldwide forest damage linked to acid rain could lead to timber losses totaling in the billions of dollars, says a study released Saturday by a Washington-based research group.

But acid rain is only one of several air pollutants now threatening trees and curbing a single pollution source, such as sulfur emissions from power plants, may not be enough to protect forests in the long run, the Worldwatch Institute said.

At least 9 million acres of forests in Europe, as well as broad areas of the eastern United States and Canada, now show damage linked to air pollution and several pollutants, acting along or together, appear to be stressing forests beyond their ability to cope, it said.

"Deforestation has long been associated only with tropical forests in the Third World, while temperate forests of industrial countries were assumed to be stable," the report noted. "This assumption no longer appears to hold."

In West Germany, reported forest damage nationwide jumped from 8 percent to 34 percent in just a year, with the famed Black Forest among the areas most severely struck.

According to the study, the value of trees already lost in West Germany totals well over $1 billion, and the wood market will be severely disrupted for decades.

Forest injury has also appeared in the Netherlands, France, Switzerland, and East Germany, the study said. Foresters recently detected damage in Sweden, the country whose dying lakes first brought international attention to acid rain, which results when sulfur emissions mix with precipitation.

In North America, spruce trees are dying on Appalachian mountain peaks, threatening recreational forests enjoyed by millions of hikers. The study said recent reports also revealed dramatic growth declines in trees of several species from Maine to Alabama. This could eventually limit timber production and raise prices for lumber and housing.

Forest damage in Eastern Europe will grow worse with plans for stepped-up industrialization, Worldwatch reported. Sick and dying trees now cover 1.2 million acres in Czechoslovakia and portions of this area already resemble a wasteland.

I have enjoyed the honour and privilege of practicing in Greenville for 34 years and I now look forward to many happy years of varying activities here in retirement. I ask that any patients whom I have not already contacted who wish their record transferred to another surgeon, please call my office prior to May 17.

Wachovia is creating better ways to borrow.

Whatever your reason for borrowing, and however you prefer to borrow, Wachovia has new ways to lend you money you won't find anywhere else — ways that offer you lower interest rates and better terms.

Wachovia BankLine℠

Wachovia BankLine is a personal line of credit from $2,500 to $25,000 at rates that are determined monthly, based on Wachovia's prime rate*. BankLine is as easy to use as writing a check. Your BankLine account costs you nothing to open, and there are no annual fees.

The rate you pay is based on your credit line, not on the amount you borrow.

If your line of credit is:	Your rate is:
$10,000 or over	Prime + 1%
$ 5,000 to $9,999	Prime + 1½%
$ 2,500 to $4,999	Prime + 2½%

If the prime rate goes down, so does your interest rate. But no matter how high the prime rate should go, under present North Carolina law the maximum Annual Percentage Rate (APR) you will be charged is 18%. The minimum rate is 8% APR.

Wachovia Prime-Plus Installment Loans

Wachovia Prime-Plus Installment Loans offer prime-based rates lower than most fixed-rate loans. And that means lower payments.

The rate you pay is based on Wachovia's prime lending rate* and can vary monthly, but the amount of your payment remains the same. Any changes in interest rates will result in adjustments to the number of payments you make, not to the monthly payment amount. If rates fall, your loan will be paid off earlier. Rising rates may require additional payments.

You have the protection of an interest rate ceiling established at the time you take out your loan. So you'll know in advance both the maximum and minimum interest rate you could be charged.

Wachovia Brokerage Margin Loans

A Wachovia Brokerage Service margin account is an effective way of using your securities to access cash you need for other purposes, without selling the securities. You may borrow up to 50% (or more) of the market value of the securities you own, simply by making a phone call.

Mondale Wins 12 Seats In Kentucky Delegation

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer

Walter Mondale ran far ahead of his two Democratic presidential rivals Saturday in Kentucky caucuses but the largest chunk of the delegates picked went to an uncommitted slate supported by Gov. Martha Layne Collins.

The party's three presidential candidates, meanwhile, remained preoccupied with New York — ranging from Manhattan to Niagara Falls in search of votes in the upcoming primary there.

Fifteen of the 36 delegates selected at in the precinct caucuses will go uncommitted to the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco. Mrs. Collins had urged Kentucky Democrats to select a mostly uncommitted delegation.

Mondale won 12 delegates while the Rev. Jesse Jackson took six. Colorado Sen. Gary Hart won three delegates. The rest of the state's 63 delegates will be selected at congressional district conventions in April and a statewide caucus in June.

In the Virgin Islands, Mondale picked up 2¼ delegate votes and Jackson 1½ in caucuses Saturday.

As the voters spoke in Kentucky and the Virgin Islands, the candidates remained in New York to make their speeches, just as they have most of the time since the Illinois primary nearly two weeks ago.

The reason is simple: There are 252 delegates at stake in next Tuesday's primary.

Jackson moved up and down Manhattan in an attempt to attract homosexuals, Chinese, Hispanic and black voters into his Rainbow Coalition while Mondale and Hart ranged upstate.

Mondale criticized Hart for making comments about the governments of Europe that Mondale said a president would have to spend weeks explaining, calling it another case of Hart not being "sure-footed and solid."

The former vice president also said it ill behooves Hart to be making "sanctimonious" criticism of some activists working on Mondale's behalf taking money from political action committees when Hart took PAC money himself the last time he ran for the Senate.

At a news conference in Niagara Falls, Mondale said Hart is guilty of "a peculiar pattern of mistakes and errors on foreign policy."

"If a president had said what Mr. Hart said (about Europe) he would have to spend weeks explaining what he meant," Mondale said. "This instance is the latest in a series by the senator that creates doubt."

Hart was discussing the fairness of U.S. tax laws at a fund-raiser Friday when he said: "If you fool around with basic obligations, then you are undermining the crediblity of the government and you're encouarging disrespect of the citizens for their government."

New Flight To Test Man's Ability To Make Repairs In Space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronauts open a new chapter in space operations this week, rocketing into orbit on a daring mission that will send a free-flying spaceman to capture and repair a crippled satellite.

It will be a scene out of science fiction when astronaut George Nelson, nicknamed "Pinky," leaves the space shuttle Challenger's cargo bay and flies untethered, powered by a jet-pack, 300 feet to the satellite Solar Max.

Nelson will fire small jets to match the satellite's slow rotation and then move between two solar panels to latch onto a grappling pin with a clamping device.

He will stabilize the satellite and hold it steady while commander Robert Crippen guides Challenger to within 30 feet so the ship's robot arm can reach out and snare Solar Max, bringing it into the bay where Nelson and James van Hoften, known as "Ox," will make repairs.

The flight, the 11th in the shuttle series and fifth for Challenger, is to start at 8:59 a.m. EST Friday, with the five astronauts blasting away from launch pad 39A. They will shoot into an arbit 305 miles up, highest yet for a shuttle.

Before the crew makes a service call on the satellite, mission specialist Terry Hart will use the bionic arm Saturday to place in space an 11-ton research payload named LDEF, for Long Duration Exposure Facility. It is packed with 57 technology, science and materials experiments that will operate in space for 10 months until another shuttle crew retrieves it in February.

Early Sunday, Crippen and pilot Dick Scobee will make the final thruster firings to guide Challenger close to Solar Max. Then "Pinky" and "Ox" will glide outside to do their thing. Nelson will maneuver with one of the jet-packs that was tested successfully and dramatically on the 10th shuttle trip in February.

Once Hart has secured Solar Max on the end of the arm, Nelson will cast off and return to the cargo bay.

Hart will place the satellite in a work cradle in the bay. Van Hoften will mount a work station — similar to a utility crew's "cherry picker" — on the end of the arm and remove a large module from the base of the satellite.

The module contains the payload's attitude control system, which failed 10 months after Solar Max was launched in February 1980 because three fuses blew. That knocked out the satellite's pointing system and prevented scientific instruments from aiming precisely at the sun, rendering them useless for collecting data on solar flares — massive eruptions on the surface.

The failure has left Solar Max with a slight wobble. It also is spinning slowly, at a rate of one revolution every six minutes.

Solar Max was the first satellite built with grappling devices and easily removable modules so that it could be retrieved in space. NASA had originally planned to recover and refurbish it in 1986, but the failure has given the agency an early chance to demonstrate another capability of the reuseable shuttle.

The faulty module will be replaced by a new unit. Engineers at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., will check the health of the satellite, and Nelson and Van Hoften will return to the shuttle cabin after about six hours outside.

NASA is planning to make all its future satellites recoverable, and is encouraging commercial satellite owners to do the same.

Airport was a private plane owned by Ed Welch of I.L. Long Construction Co. in Winston-Salem loaded with more donations from the Triad area. Welch said he volunteered to help WSJS with the drive, and his trucks loaded the large plane before he took off in his private plane bringing additional clothing that was donated.

Relief shipments totaling $150,000 from R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. in Winston-Salem were to arrive in Greenville Saturday night.

"The shipment to Greenville is part of a one-half million dollar donation Reynolds announced yesterday," said Reynolds spokesperson Betsy Annese. "Three Reynolds trucks are coming to the Salvation Army in Greenville to drop off $150,000 in products that Raynolds and its subsidiary, Del Monte, makes, mainly canned vegetables and fruits and tobacco products."

Alesse said that in addition to the total of $300,000 worth of products the company is splitting between the tornado victims of North and South Carolina, $100,000 cash will be sent to each state for relief purposes.

Local citizens have expressed their concern for the tornado victims through their donations.

"I was sitting on the sofa watching the news of television," said Rachael Hardee. "They showed a picture of a woman looking at (the debris) where her house was and crying and I thought, 'How can I help.' I called Hugh (Hardee) Thursday morning to see if I could get the (New Greenville) warehouse for donations."

Mrs. Hardee said donations began to pour in soon after the warehouse center was announced.

"Procter and Gamble sent over cases of toilet tissue and facial tissues," Mrs. Hardee said. "Sunnyside Eggs sent 3,000 dozen eggs and Ormond Wholesale sent cereal. Flowers Baking Company brought bread and Nichols sent shampoo, socks and toiletries. Lots of other companies have sent us things.

"Volunteers have just walked in," she added. "Ed Emory sent the ECU football players over to help. And donated trucks are picking up donations and distributing them to the victims."

The warehouse is now serving as a base for the collection and distribution of relief supplies. Two truckloads of food and clothes were sent from the warehouse to Bertie County Friday. Shipments were sent to Greene County Saturday.

WRQR radio in Farmville broadcasted from Brinkley Moore Motors in Greenville Friday morning and collected four truckloads of supplies to send to the New Greenville Warehouse. Six truckloads of food and clothing were brought into the radio station from the people in Farmville and Fountain.

John Moore, general manager of WRQR, said Collice Moore Realty in Greenville notified the radio station it was donating several condominuims for temporary shelter.

"People really got on the bandwagon," Moore said. "The people on this side of the county are involved and helping. I think that it's really great in a time of need that the people in the county show the true meaning of friend and neighbor."

Eric Miller of WRQR said over $1,500 has been contributed to the Red Cross' disaster relief fund by the employees of Collins and Aikman, North State Garment and several other Farmville companies.

Because the station can't handle all the donations, Farmville-area residents were asked to take their contributions to the Farmville National Guard Armory.

A relief fund set up by the students of E.B. Aycock Junior High School in Greenville amounted to $210 during Friday's lunch period alone. Aycock teacher Faye Creegan was a tornado victim, and the fund was set up in her memory, according to David Moseley, a student at the school.

With the help of teacher Frank O'Neal and students Kate Shappley, Tarshia Sutton, Mike Barnhill and Melissa Pruden, a table was set up in the student commons area of the school and donations were taken for the fund. The table will be set up again Monday and the money collected will be sent to the state level to help the tornado victims throughout North Carolina.

Several ladies who belong to Falkland Presbyterian Church decided to help the victims of the tornado.

"We were sitting around the bridge table and decided to do something," said Ruth Watson, a member of the church. "We called members of the church and community and asked for donations to be brought down to the church."

Mrs. Watson said the church sent a load of supplies to the New Greenville Warehouse and made a monetary donation to the Red Cross. Efforts at the church were to end Saturday at 1 p.m., but Mrs. Watson said the church expected to send at least another truckload of supplies for the tornado victims.

Maj. Ronald Davis of the Salvation Army said the organization has distributed approximately 300 boxes of food supplies to the disaster victims. Donated food was also used to make over 300 bag lunches that were given to those in need of food and the workers in the disaster areas.

Davis said the Salvation Army building is "full of clothes and we don't have the space to put them any more clothes or furniture." The Salvation Army building will be opened at 2 p.m. Sunday so victims can pick up needed items.

Ed Whichard, a teacher at D.H. Conley, said the high school is being used as a collection and distribution center for clothing. Anyone wishing to donate clothes or pick up clothes can do so Sunday from 1-9 p.m. in the Conley gymnasium.

Area collection points said the items most needed for the disaster victims were food, dishes, towels, linens, blankets, pillows, furniture, kitchen items and toiletries.

Ship's Passengers Evacuated

MIAMI (AP) — Hundreds of passengers were evacuated from a stranded cruise liner and flown to Miami Saturday after more than two days of rescue efforts failed to budge the ship that ran aground off Grand Cayman Island, officials said.

The first group of 107 evacuees from the S.S. Rhapsody arrived in Miami International Airport aboard an Air Florida Boeing 737 at about 11:30 a.m. EST, said Bob Smith, a vice president for Paquet French Cruises, the ship's parent company.

A second flight arrived almost four hours later, but Smith said he wasn't sure if all 128 seats on the plane were filled.

Four other flights were to deliver the rest of the 798 passengers to Miami about 450 miles north of the island, Smith said.

No injuries were reported among the passengers or 400-member crew of the 24,000-ton, Miami-based vessel, Smith said.

Smith said the ship was registered in Panama.

"We had no major concerns. We thought we were safe at all times," said Gene Kester, of Centerville, Ohio. Kester, his wife, and two sons arrived in Miami aboard the first Air Florida flight to leave the Caribbean island.

Japan Lets Farm Import Pact Die

TOKYO (UPI) — A crucial agreement regulating U.S. agricultural exports to Japan expired without being renewed Saturday, raising the prospect of retaliatory action by Washington in a deepening trade dispute with Tokyo.

Japan, the largest buyer of U.S. farm products, has restricted quality beef imports — largely from the United States — to 30,800 tons annually, and orange imports to 80,000 tons a year.

The two trading partners are locked in a bitter struggle over U.S. demands that quotas be raised substantially in the new accord.

U.S. officials believe a high farm import ceiling — opposed by Japan's powerful farm lobby — will put a big dent in the massive U.S.-Japan trade deficit, which grew to $21.7 billion last year.

The deficit, which reached a record $2.65 billion in January, will climb to $30 billion this year, officials predict.

"It is imperative that Japan permit the principle of competition to prevail within its markets," said a letter signed by 22 U.S. congressmen and delivered to Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone before the current agreement expired.

"If we do not see any action before the March 31 deadline we will request that the president take strong action," the letter warned.

Talks broke down last week in Washington despite last ditch efforts to reach an accord that have involved top-level officials on both sides of the Pacific.

The Reagan administration, under election year pressure to take a tough line on trade, has pushed hard for an expansion of the beef quota by 10,000 tons annually for the next four years. Japan has reportedly offered to raise the ceiling by 5,000 tons a year.

On oranges, U.S. negotiators proposed a 15,000-ton annual expansion over four years and Japanese officials have, according to unofficial reports, countered with a figure in the range of 12,000 tons a year.

The Washington Post reported this week that Trade Representative William Brock was angered by Tokyo's stubborn stand and threatened that "things are going to get very unpleasant" if a new agreement is not signed by Saturday.

A statement released this week to the Japanese press warns that Washington will seek compensation under the GATT on any unilateral restraints imposed by Tokyo after March 31.

Working Mothers Cited

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan praised working mothers Saturday as a key element of his "opportunity society," recognizing that "sometimes their days resemble a script from 'Mission Impossible.'"

He used his weekly five-minute paid political radio speech to make a bid for the women's vote in a campaign whose polls show he still suffers from a "gender gap" in which women, particularly those who work, oppose him in far greater numbers than men.

In a reference to the Equal Rights Amendment, which he opposes, Reagan said, "Economic growth will provide more opportunities for women than if all the promises ever made in Washington, D.C., were enacted into law."

Hammering away at what has become his re-election theme, Reagan said, "We're building a true opportunity society, and this is especially true for today's woman."

With 3 million more women at work than when he tooktoffice, Reagan said: "Economic growth is very strong. And job opportunities for women are popping up like springtime tulips."

Nerve Gas Ingredient Impounded

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Customs agents in New York have impounded a shipment to Iraq of 74 drums of potassium fluoride, a principal ingredient of a deadly form of nerve gas, the Customs Service said Saturday.

"It's going to sit at the airport until it's cleared and Customs will keep a close watch on it," said Michael Kaufman," a spokesman for the Customs Service in New York City.

The disclosure by Customs headquarters in Washington came one day after the State Department announced a U.S. ban on the export of a list of chemical agents to Iraq and Iran, which are engaged in a protracted war.

Potassium fluoride headed the list of five chemicals banned for shipment to the two countries.

On Friday, State Department spokesman John Hughes said the United States has evidence that Iraq has used nerve gas in its war against Iran.

Earlier, the department had accused Iraq of using mustard gas and other potent chemical weapons forbidden by international agreements.

Hughes said an immediate ban had been slapped on the export to either Iraq or Iran of a list of chemicals, including potassium fluoride, dimethyl methylphosphonate, methylphosphonol difluoride, phosphorous oxychloride and thioglycol.

Son Killer Executed

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Hundreds of death penalty supporters demonstrated outside a prison, some yelling "trick or treat," as Ronald Clark O'Bryan was executed Saturday for killing his 8-year-old son with poisoned Halloween candy.

O'Bryan, dubbed "the Candy Man" by fellow inmates, asked God's forgiveness for all of us" and then yawned and gasped as deadly drugs started flowing into his body.

He was pronounced dead at 12:48 a.m., 10 minutes after the execution began. His body was taken to the Harris County Medical Examiner's office, where an autopsy was performed and his eyes were removed for transplantation, as O'Bryan had requested.

O'Bryan, 39, who professed his innocence until the end, was the 16th person to be executed since the U.S. Supreme Court allowed states to restore the death penalty in 1976. He was the third Texas inmate to be put to death, including James David Autry, executed March 14.

O'Bryan's sister-in-law said the family felt "a definite sense of relief," but "any tears that we have" were for the murdered son, Timothy Marc, who ate cyanide-tainted candy given to him on Halloween in 1974.

O'Bryan spent his last day of life listening by radio to news about the flurry of legal maneuvers that his lawyers employed to try to save his life, including two unsuccesful pleas to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The execution process began shortly after midnight when O'Bryan was led the eight steps from a holding cell to the death chamber. He was strapped to a hospital cart, and needles were inserted into his arms.

In a two-minute final statement to 24 witnesses, O'Bryan said in a calm, firm voice that the death penalty was "wrong," but "it doesn't mean the whole system of justice is wrong.

"Therefore, I forgive all — and I do mean all — those who have been involved in my death."

14 Perish In Home Fires

By The Associated Press

Three home fires killed 14 people across the nation Saturday, including a Philadelphia arson fire that killed five, a blaze blamed on a hot plate that killed four in Richmond, Va., and a smoky fire in Modesto, Calif., that claimed five lives.

A small living room fire pumped moke and heat into the bedrooms of a single-story house at Modesto, killing two adults and three children, said Battalion Chief Robert Hastings.

A passerby raised the alarm and the first officer at the scene, Patrolman Doug Lovell, found smoke pouring out of all windows and flames in the living room, said Police Lt. Douglas Winfrey.

"He went to the back and broke out several windows," Winfrey said. "The smoke was too thick and the heat too intense to allow him to go in or to see inside."

"The fire itself was minor. It was put out almost immediately," Winfrey said. "The major damage was thick smoke."

Flames were confined mostly to the living room, but "blistering heat" buckled walls in other rooms, Hastings said. The cause was under investigation.

The Philadelphia fire, in the city's Mount Airy section, apparently began with an explosion shortly before 1 a.m. Lt. Edward Keegan of the city fire marshal's office said the cause was arson.

Police said the victims included three women, a man, and a boy 3 to 4 weeks old. Three others escaped unharmed.

"The first-floor living room was engulfed in flames. The flames were leaping out the windows," said neighbor E.T. Poole, who ran two blocks to a firehouse. By the time he returned, less than five minutes later, flames had reached the top two floors, he said.

The fire was the city's third within two months to claim at least five lives.

In the Richmond fire, Detective James Samuel with the city Fire Prevention Bureau said four bodies, including two women, a man and a child, were found in a two-story frame home.

Four people escaped, one of them jumping from a second-floor porch, Samuel said.

Valentino Wright, 24, who rented a room in one of the downstairs apartments, said he woke up and noticed that a hot plate he used to heat his room had set his bedspread on fire.

"I woke up and tried to put it out," said Wright, whose hair and eyelashes were singed. "I went in the bathroom and got a little pan and started throwing water in the room. ... Everything was burning like paper. I couldn't get it out."

He said he knocked on the door of downstairs neighbors, but could not get upstairs because the fire spread so quickly.

Houston Stops Virginia's Dream

SEATTLE (AP) — Rickie Winslow, the newest brother in the Phi Slama Jama fraternity, rescued Houston from another humiliating loss, and with one thunderous dunk propelled the Cougars to a 49-47 overtime victory Saturday over Virginia in the NCAA basketball semifinals.

Winslow, a highly recruited freshman, grabbed an air ball by Akeem Olajuwon and slammed it through the hoop for the winning points that sent the Cougars into their second consecutive final.

Last year, in a 54-52 loss to similarly unheralded North Carolina State, Olajuwon, a native of Nigeria, was at the foul line when Lorenzo Charles grabbed a desperation shot and rammed it home for the winning points as time ran out.

This time, Akeem was too close to the basket — almost beyond it — when he threw up an ill-timed shot.

"Akeem still has a problem with knowing the strategy of basketball," said Coach Guy Lewis, whose band of dunkers were given the Phi Slama Jama nickname last year. "There are probably 25,000 American players who would have known to throw that ball out. But he was trying to shoot it."

It went up, high over the basket, and down, into Winslow's hands. The Houston freshman, leaping to meet the ball from the left side of the rim, stuffed it home, giving Houston its final points — the winning ones — and a four-point lead.

"I saw it go high off the glass and thought I had to go get it," said Winslow.

Olajuwon said he was "just happy to be the final again. This time, we are going all the way."

And, asked how he felt as the clock wound down and Virginia refusing to buckle under Houston's pressure, Akeem said: "Scared!"

Terry Holland, the coach of a Cavalier team which was not expected to even get into the Final Four, said he was disappointed at being knocked out one game short of the final.

"Any time you come this far and have as many opportunities to win, you'd like to say you've had a good season. Maybe we can say that in two weeks. Right now, we're disappointed. We'd like to still be playing," Holland said.

The basket by the 6-foot-8 Winslow offset a pair of foul shots by Virginia's Rick Carlisle with 18 seconds left.

As the final seconds ticked off, Lewis threw his famed checkered towel in the air as the Cougars advanced to Monday night's final against the winner of Saturday's other semifinal, Georgetown of Kentucky.

The outmanned, unheralded and unranked Cavaliers, who were never expected to get even this far without three-time Player of the Year Ralph Sampson, repeatedly fell behind and, just as often, charged back, refusing to cave in to the taller Cougars.

At the close of the first half and the start of the second, they ran off 10 consecutive points to turn a 25-17 deficit into a 27-25 lead.

And, in the closing minutes of regulation play, after Houston had strung together nine points for a 41-35 lead, the Cavs reeled off eight of the next 10 points. Othell Wilson's basket off his own steal tied it 43-43 with 27 seconds left to force the overtime.

Seventy seconds into the overtime, Carlisle hit a jumper for Virginia, capping the Cavaliers' eight-point run and giving them their last lead of the game, 45-43.

One minute later, Olajuwon, a 52.5 percent foul shooter — 15 percent below his field goal percentage — hit both ends of a one-and-one after being fouled by center Olden Polynice. That tied it at 45.

A little more than a minute later, Michael Young scored to put the Cougars on top to stay. Then came Olajuwon's air ball, a shot that missed everything. But Winslow was there to grab the ball and ram it through, giving Houston a four-point cushion, 49-45.

Olajuwon, neutralized in the first half when he scored only four points, finished the game with 12. Young led Houston with 17 points and Winslow had eight.

Miller and Wilson shared Virginia's scoring lead with 12 points apiece. Polynice had nine — none of them after halftime.

The victory sends fifth-ranked Houston into the final with a 32-4 record and ended the Cavaliers' season at 21-12.

In the opening half, Houston's zone defense appeared to be playing into the Cavaliers' game plan. It never attacked Virginia's ball handlers, laying back and waiting for Virginia to shoot from the perimeter. For the first 4:35, the Cavs couldn't get a basket, missing their first five shots. And, eight minutes into the game, Houston had built a 14-4 lead.

Slowly, Virginia got its outside shooting going, with Polynice occasionally laying the ball in over Akeem as well. But with 3:30 to go in that opening half, Houston held a 25-17 margin.

The Cougars didn't score again in the half as Wilson, Carlisle and Polynice all connected from short range to pull scrappy Virginia to within two at halftime.

With 10:40 left in the second half, Virginia held a 35-32 lead. Then Reid Gettys hit a pair of baseline jumpers and Olajuwon connected on a three-point play, then on a rebound of a deflected shot as Houston took a 41-35 lead.

Still, Virginia refused to fold. After an exchange of baskets, Miller put in a rebound and Wilson pumped in a 20-foot jumper before he tied it with his layup off the steal.

Graham, Ewing Chop Down Kentucky, Twin Towers, 53-40

SEATTLE (AP) — Michael Graham and Patrick Ewing took the inside game away from the "Twin Towers" of Kentucky and the Wildcats scored only two points in the first 16 minutes of the second half as the second-ranked Hoyas roared into the NCAA basketball championship game Saturday with a 53-40 victory.

Georgetown's 10th straight victory and 20th in 21 games put the Big East powerhouse in the title game Monday night against fifth-ranked Houston. The Cougars defeated Virginia 49-47 in overtime in the opening game of the Kingdome doubleheader.

The Hoyas, down seven points at halftime, ran off the first 12 points of the second half to take command en route to their 33rd victory against three losses. Second-ranked Kentucky ended with a 29-5 record.

The Wildcats' collapse actually began in the first half after they took a 27-15 lead with 3:06 to go before intermission. They seemingly were in a comfortable spot since Georgetown's 7-foot All-American, Ewing, was sitting on the bench with three personal fouls and Kentucky was alternately resting its "Twin Towers," 7-1 Sam Bowie and 6-11 Melvin Turpin.

Kentucky still led 29-22 at halftime. But in the second half, with Georgetown starting out in a stingy man-to-man defense, it was a different story. The Wildcats missed their first 11 shots and went 9:55 without a field goal. At one point, Kentucky was 1-22 from the field.

Starting in the first half, Georgetown had a 19-2 surge to take a 34-29 lead before Kentucky's Winston Bennett hit a field goal with 10:05 remaining in the game.

But Georgetown kept pouring it on, taking its biggest lead, 45-31, with 4:16 left. That meant the Hoyas had outscored Kentucky 30-4 after trailing 27-15.

Michael Jackson paced Georgetown with 12 points and David Wingate had 11. But Graham, a 6-9, 210-pound freshman who has built a reputation as an enforcer for the aggressive Hoyas, and Ewing each scored eight points.

Bowie, who had missed the last two seasons with a leg stress fracture, wound up as the Wildcats' top scorer with 10 points, all but two of them in the first half. Turpin finished with five points — all in the first half.

Graham, who had averaged only 14 minutes' playing time and 4.4 points, turned in a brilliant defensive job on Turpin for the first part of the second half before the Hoyas switched back to a zone defense.

Kenny Walker, at 6-8 another member of Kentucky's heralded front line, finished with only four points, hitting only two free throws in the second half.

Kentucky made only 3-of-33 shots in the second half and shot an overall 13-for-53 for 24.5 percent. Georgetown made 46 percent of its shots from the field, hitting on 13-of-21 after intermission.

Ewing picked up two quick fouls, then got his third with 8:52 to play in the first half, sitting down until the second half. Ralph Dalton, 6-11, and Graham were forced to take over up front for the Hoyas.

Kentucky, which jumped out front to begin the game, did not trail until Ewing put in a tap-in to make it 30-29 early in the second half.

Reserve guard Gene Smith started the second half and helped key Georgetown's pressure defense as the Hoyas snapped the Wildcats' eight-game winning streak.

It is the ninth NCAA tournament for Georgetown, which finished second in 1982 to North Carolina and second to Wyoming in 1943. The Hoyas beat Southern Methodist, Nevada-Las Vegas and Dayton to reach the Final Four.

Tribe Tops Pirates

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — John Volpi has been tough on opposing hitters for William & Mary's Indians so far this year.

Saturday afternoon, he added the East Carolina University Pirates' scalp to his wampum belt, hurling an 8-2 ECAC-South baseball victory for the Tribe.

Volpi has hurled 42 innings so far this spring, and until he faced the Pirates had allowed but two earned run. Both those scored off him this day were earned — but that was the least of his worries.

In recording a complete game, Volpi moved his record to 5-2 on the year, striking out seven, walking two and allowing six hits.

Only three of those hits came in the first six innings, and the Pirates didn't score until the top of the eighth inning. By then, they trailed 4-0.

The defeat was the second straight against ECAC-South competition and dropped the Pirates to 3-2 in the league. They are 16-6 overall. William & Mary boosted its record to 10-8-1 overall and to 3-1 in the league. They had earlier split a pair of games with James Madison — ECU's opponent in Greenville Sunday afternoon.

The Indians pushed over three runs in the second inning, taking the lead for good. Jeff Wolf led off with a triple and he scored on John O'Keeffe's single. Then, after an out, Volpi singled, moving O'Keeffe up.

D.C. Akins' grounder got Volpi at second base, but the return throw to first was not in time to complete the double play. Todd Evans, ECU's first baseman, then tried to pick O'Keeffe off third, but his throw was off target and it allowed the runner to score the second run and Akins to dash all the way to third. Trey Harris followed with a single, scoring Akins.

The Indians picked up two more runs in the sixth. Joe Lenzewicz singled and Volpi walked. Akins then singled in Lenzewicz for a 4-0 edge.

East Carolina rallied to a pair in the top of the eighth, cutting the lead in half. With two away, Steve Sides walked and scored on a triple by Greg Hardison. Hardison crossed when Evans followed with a double, but the rallied died there.

The Indians then came back with four more in the bottom of the inning to put the game away. O'Keeffe singled dn Lenzewicz singled, chasing ECU starter Robbie McClanahan. Volpi sacrificed them up and Akins was intentionally walked to set up a force.

However, Harris hit a Texas League single to score O'Keeffe, and Dan Zembrowski got a hit to bring in Lenzewicz. Stan Yagiello then doubled to drive in the final two runs.

For McClanahan, it was the first loss in four decisions.

Harris led the William & Mary hitting with three, while O'Keeffe and Lenzeciwz each had two. Hardison and Evans each had a pair for the Pirates.

East Carolina returns home this afternoon for another league contest, hosting James Madison at 2 p.m. at Harrington Field.

Pigskin Pigout Party Planned

Take a former All-NFL defensive lineman, mix in a suntan bikini contest and a tug-of-war with an elephant, top with barbecue and you have the partial recipe for what's been dubbed as the "First Annual Great Pirate Purple/Gold Pigskin Pigout Party."

What it is is football — the annual Purple-Gold intrasquad scrimmage, set for Saturday, April 14. And it's not going to be your ususal scrimmage.

Instead, it's going to be a two-day celebration of East Carolina football, with activities getting underway starting at 7 p.m. Friday night in Ficklen Stadium.

L.C. Greenwood, former All-Pro defensive lineman with the Pittsburgh Steelers, and currently seen in Miller Lite commercials, will be on hand for the affair, making his first appearance Friday night.

Highlighting the whole affair is a pig-cooking contest. A $100 entry fee is being charged and the field is limited to 25 pigs. Those interested in cooking may call 757-6178. Cash prizes, Pirate Club memberships and trophies will be awarded to the three best pigs, with two additional Pirate Club memberships and trophies awarded to the number four and five pigs.

Pigs are to arrive at 7 p.m. Friday night, with fires begun at 9 p.m. and cooking started at 10 p.m.

Judging will be held from 7 to 9 a.m. Saturday morning, and barbecue plates will be sold to the public from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. for $3.50 each. All proceeds from the sale of the dinners will go to the Pirate Club.

Starting at 10 a.m. Saturday, a number of activities are planned. They include:

- 10 to 11 a.m. — L.C. Greenwood autograph session.
- 11 to 11:30 a.m. — Clowns in stadium area with purple and gold balloons.
- 11:30 a.m. to 12 noon — L.C. Can Crushin' Contest.
- 12 noon — Tug-of-War between Clyde Beatty-Cole Brothers Circus elephant and the ECU Football Team.
- 1 to 2 p.m. — Purple/Gold kiddie games and competitions.
- 2 to 2:30 p.m. — Suntan Bikini Contest.
- 2:30 to 3 p.m. — Best Dressed (Purple/Gold) Contest among tailgaters.
- 3:30 p.m. — Contest winners announced.
- 3:40 p.m. — Air Time for Purple/Gold Game broadcast.

Most Valuable

Houston's Akeem Olajuwon (34) goes up for two points Saturday against Virginia's Olden Polynice (24) and Othell Wilson during their NCAA semifinal at Seattle's Kingdome. Olajuwon was named the most valuable player in the game, won by Houston, 49-47, in overtime. (AP Laserphoto)

Akeem Still Has Lot To Learn

SEATTLE (AP) — Houston's Akeem Olajuwon may be the most dominating center in college basketball, but his coach says he still has a lot to learn about the game.

Olajuwon, the 7-foot junior from Nigeria, nearly turned from hero to goat in the final seconds of overtime in the fifth-ranked Cougars' 49-47 Final Four semifinal victory over Virginia Saturday.

"Akeem still has a problem with knowing the strategy of basketball," Coach Guy Lewis said. "I don't mind telling you that."

Olajuwon, who made two free throws with 2½ minutes left in overtime to tie the score, threw up a five-foot air ball with 34 seconds to play and his team leading by two points.

Fortunately for Houston, Rickie Winslow grabbed the errant shot and dunked to increase the margin to four, enough to allow the Cougars to hold on.

"There are probably 25,000 American players who would have known to throw that ball out," Lewis said. "But he was trying to shoot it."

Olajuwon agreed with his coach.

"I was going to shoot it off the glass. I wasn't looking to pass the ball out. I was trying to shoot it," he said. "That was my mistake. I know he (Lewis) will talk to me about it."

Olajuwon, who finished 12 points and a game-high 11 rebounds, said he was worried in the final stages of the game.

"I was scared when I looked at the clock, but I didn't think we'd lose," he said. "In overtime, I was very nervous and happy that I made those two free throws. When I concentrate, I can make them."

Reid Gettys, Houston's 6-foot-7 guard, said he made a mistake by passing up so many outside shots in the first half, allowing Virginia to swarm inside around Olajuwon, as an early eight-point Cougar lead dwindled to two by halftime.

"I took only seven (shots)," Gettys said. "I should have taken about seven more. That's my job. If they back off, I've got to shoot it."

Said Olajuwon: "I really didn't like their defense. It was too crowded."

"We played their game, not our game," Olajuwon said. "Ours is a running game."

Lewis insisted he wasn't at all discouraged with the tight victory for his heavily favored team, which is trying avenge last season's 54-52 last-second upset loss to North Carolina State in the NCAA championship game.

"I'll guarantee you I'm not disappointed in the point spread," Lewis said. "We were trying to win a basketball game. A two-point win is just as good as a 40-point win after it's over."

"I told our team this morning it would probably be a two- or three-point game and that they'd better be ready for that."

Michael Young, who led the Cougars with 17 points, was ushered out of the locker room after the game to be told that his older brother had been slightly wounded in a shooting accident Friday in Houston.

The brother, James Earl, was grazed in the head and is not hospitalized, Lewis said. Young's father did not tell the player nor his mother about the incident until after the game. Young immediately returned to his hotel.

Defense Didn't Shock Thompson

SEATTLE (AP) — Everything is relative in basketball.

Trailing badly in the first half of his team's NCAA semifinal game against Kentucky Georgetown Coach John Thompson found himself with his 7-foot center, Patrick Ewing, saddled with three personal fouls.

"I thought I'd take the 10 (point deficit) and try the second half," said Thompson. "I thought I'd take the 10 and play with the big fellow in the second half."

Instead, the Hoyas went into the dressing room trailing by seven after outscoring Kentucky 7-2 over the final three minutes of the first half.

"We felt pretty good down seven points," said Michael Jackson, who led Georgetown scorers with 12 points. "We had played awful, not our brand of basketball, and we knew we'd have Patrick back in there in the second half. He enables us to extend our defense and play the ball tougher."

With Ewing back, Georgetown went on a tear, turning what once was a 27-15 deficit into a 45-31 lead. The Hoyas outscored Kentucky 30-4 to turn the game around, and 23-2 in the first 16 minutes of the second half.

Ewing played all but 30 seconds of the second half and never picked up another personal foul.

"They still came at me, but we played such great defense that it wasn't as effective," Ewing said.

Georgetown set an NCAA record during the season, limiting their opponents to 39.2 per cent shooting from the field. In Saturday's semifinal, Kentucky shot 3-for-33 in the second half, a percentage of .091.

"I've seen us play defense before," Jackson said. "I know what we can do."

Senior guard Gene Smith said: "If you look at it from a statistical standpoint, we hadn't done that before. But I'm not surprised. I think they were tired. If I keep jumping in your face, it's definitely going to wear you down."

When Ewing was forced to the bench with foul problems, Thompson substituted 6-9 freshman Michael Graham, who filled the big man's role nicely and scored eight points, including an emphatic slam-dunk at the end of the first half.

"Graham has a lot of raw talent and ability," Thompson said, "a lot of the character of Patrick. He is so dramatic about it. He's raw, but he can be great if he works and continues to develop."

Thompson said he thought the game had turned because of a combination of good Georgetown defense and Kentucky not being as sharp as it usually is.

When Ewing went to the bench, Thompson said he kept shouting to his guards, "Be patient, be patient."

"We like to tease our enemies," he said, "get them all happy, thinking we're going to get blown out. Then we come back and get done what we have to get done."

Hall Can't Explain 9 Percent Shooting

SEATTLE (AP) — Maybe it was a creature from outer space. Joe B. Hall could only shrug his shoulders and offer that possibility to why his team shot 9 percent in the second half Saturday as third-ranked Kentucky fell to No. 2 Georgetown 53-40 in the NCAA basketball semifinals.

"I can't explain it . . . it's totally beyond me," Hall said. "Maybe there was some electrical device from outer space beaming sound waves around the basket. That's the only explanation I can give — an extraterrestrial phenomenon."

The Wildcats, who led by 12 points, 27-15, with 3:06 left in the first half — and 29-22 at the break — didn't score a field goal again until midway through the second half, and hit on 3-of-33 shots in the second period.

"It's going to take a long time to get over this one," said 6-foot-11 Melvin Turpin, half of Kentucky's vaunted "Twin Towers."

"Outside shots wouldn't go in, our inside shots wouldn't go in. It was awful. I didn't think anyone could lose in the Final Four the way we did," Turpin said.

Guard Dicky Beal called it "spooky. It just wasn't us. We didn't shoot the ball well. The shots felt good, but they just didn't fall.

"We have to give a lot of credit to Georgetown's defense. They took away our inside game and took us out of our offense a lot."

Sam Bowie, 7-1 and the other half of the "Twin Towers," wondered if he had fallen asleep.

"You're thinking that sooner or later something is going to start falling," said Bowie, who shot 3-for-4 in the first half but missed all six field goal attempts in the second half. "I looked up about midway through the second half and we still had 29 points. I thought I was asleep or something because I knew we had 29 points at halftime."

But by the time freshman Winston Bennett hit a 16-footer from the right sideline with 10:05 to play, Georgetown was out in front 34-31, and it only got worse for the Wildcats from there.

Before Bennett's basket, Kentucky made 12 consecutive trips down the court without scoring. At one point, the Wildcats were shooting 1-for-22 in the second half, and finished hitting only 3-of-33 after intermission.

"Once we lost the lead and we kept missing those shots inside, I think it became psychological," Bennett said. "I think you have to give them some credit. But we have to take some blame. When you get this far, you really don't expect to get beat like this."

Beal and Bowie both credited Georgetown's defense.

"Georgetown is probably one of the better defensive teams we've played all year," Beal said. "We were getting shots, but they weren't dropping. It wasn't one of our great shooting games. But you can't take anything away from the way they played us."

Added Bowie: "You aren't going to beat a team like Georgetown shooting 1-for-22. That's a credit to Georgetown's defense."

Kentucky, which closed at 29-5, had not been to the Final Four since winning the championship in 1978. This year, the Wildcats won their 35th Southeastern Conference title and the Mideast Regional. But Georgetown was too much for them.

"You had a great year, fellas," Hall could be heard telling the team in the dressing room. "But Georgetown had a great second half. It was unbelievable; just one of those things."

Breaks Went Against Virginia

SEATTLE (AP) — "We got this far on some breaks and maybe it was time the breaks went against us," Virginia guard Othell Wilson said Saturday after the Cavaliers fell 49-47 to Houston in the semifinals of the NCAA Final Four basketball championships.

Wilson, Virginia's top scorer and defensive catalyst, had a chance to tie the game and send it into a second overtime. But he lost the ball with two seconds left in the extra period.

In regulation, Wilson lost the ball with three seconds left and the score tied at 43.

"I'll tell you the honest truth," the Virginia senior said. "I'm not that upset about what happened in overtime, but we'd love to have the ball back in regulation. I think we could have scored if we got a second chance."

Virginia scored the last six points in regulation and got the ball back for the last time with 15 seconds to go when Houston's Akeem Olajuwon was called for walking.

In overtime, Virginia got to within two points on a pair of Rick Carlisle free throws with 18 seconds left. Carlisle immediately fouled Michael Young, and Young missed the front end of a one-and-one free throw opportunity.

Olajuwon rebounded the ball, but lost it out of bounds with 13 seconds to go, giving Virginia its last chance to tie the game again. The Cavaliers didn't call a time out, and there were some contradictory accounts of what happened next.

"We had set up a couple of last plays earlier," explained Ricky Stokes. "That's why we didn't call time out."

Wilson, who brought the ball up the floor, said he looked over at Cavaliers Coach Terry Holland and didn't see any time out signal.

"We wanted to come down and try to create something and score," Wilson explained. "I don't think we had the time to call a play.

"We practice these situations a lot. But, gosh, you can't make it work all the time. If you do that, you'd be the national champions."

Wilson said the Cavaliers were just free-lancing for the final shot in overtime because "everyone wasn't in place."

He explained "you can't fault anyone. They just didn't have time to get down the court.

"But I really feel good about ourselves. People wrote us off, but we gave it our hardest and we almost pulled it off."

Holland, criticized heavily in the past for failing to win a title when he had 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson, who has since graduated, but praised for his team's surprising performance this season, took the defeat stoically.

"We had our chances to win the game," he said. "But Houston did a great job of coming up with the defensive plays when they had to.

"We wanted to control the tempo, and I thought we did a great job of that.

Olden Polynice, Virginia's 6-11 freshman center, held Olajuwon to 12 points with the help of a collapsing zone.

"He's really tough," Polynice said of Olajuwon. "He's a good player, but he's the type of player you can contain if you have help, and I had help today. He's a great player one-on-one, but he's just a good player if you have help on him, and that separates him from the great players."

Brett Sidelined For Two Months

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City Royals all-star third baseman George Brett will be sidelined for up to two months with a knee injury, the team announced Saturday.

Brett, a two-time American League batting champion, sustained a partial tear of the ligaments in his left knee during an exhibition game at Tampa, Fla., on Friday, said a team spokesman.

Bryant Unlikely For Game Today

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Stars may be without running back Kelvin Bryant when they meet the Tampa Bay Bandits in United States Football League action Sunday.

Bryant, who leads the league in rushing with 483 yards on 111 carries, pulled a hamstring in his right leg in last weekend's game at Pittsburgh and did not practice with the Stars all week.

Coach Jim Mora listed Bryant as "questionable" on Saturday, and said he might not know until an hour before the game whether Bryant, named the league's Most Valuable Player last season, would start.

If Bryant sits out, Allen Harvin will take over his tailback spot and Bryan Thomas, a 23-year-old rookie from the University of Pittsburgh, will get his first chance to start as Harvin's backup.

Mora sees the game as a major test of the Stars' defense, which leads the league after giving up only 49 points in five games. The coach said the Stars, 4-1, have faced only one team with a winning record so far this season and that team, New Jersey, beat them.

"Tampa Bay is a good passing team and one of the top defensive teams in the league. And they've played only one team with a losing record," Mora said.

The Bandits, 3-2, have had their problems on offense. Veteran John Reaves, a former Philadelphia Eagle who led the USFL in passing last year, had six interceptions in two games and was replaced by Florida rookie Wayne Peace at the quarterback spot.

In Peace's first start against Birmingham on Monday night, he completed 13 of 26 passes for 166 yards and one touchdown, was sacked four times and threw two interceptions before leaving the game with a sprained toe. He was expected to start Sunday, however.

"He made some plays that none of our other quarterbacks could have made," Tampa Bay Coach Steve Spurrier said last week. "He made some good throws and a couple that he could have thrown better. I think you could see that with more experience he can become a very good quarterback."

Young To Make His Debut

By The Associated Press

Steve Young, the multimillion dollar quarterback, finally makes his professional debut Sunday, with both football scouts and the U.S. Football League's marketing experts watching for portents of the future.

Los Angeles has been a disappointment both on the field and at the gate, posting a 2-3 record and drawing only 16,042 and 14,789 in its last two games at the 90,000-seat Coliseum. Express spokesman say they expect a crowd of 25,000 to 30,000, drawn both by the anticipation of Young's debut and a "twofer" promotion — two tickets for the price of one.

"From a marketing standpoint, this will be one of the most important games in the league's history because we have a chance to make a real impact," says Don Camera, the USFL's director of marketing.

Young, whose contract will pay him $40 million over 43 years, has been working out with the team for a month and Coach John Hadl thinks he's ready. But Brigham Young's gift to the USFL says:

"I'm sure there will be times when I'll be running around on the field and people are going to say, 'He doesn't know where he's going.'"

In other games Sunday, Arizona will be at Denver, Tampa Bay at Philadelphia, Oakland at Pittsburgh and San Antonio at Michigan.

On Saturday, Houston played at Oklahoma, Chicago at Washington and Jacksonville at Memphis.

New Orleans will be at Birmingham Monday night.

New Jersey, 4-1, will be returning to Los Angeles for the first time since Herschel Walker made his pro debut there a year ago in the opening game of the USFL's first season, a game won by the Express 20-15. Walker is coming off his first 100-yard game of the season in the Generals' 43-6 victory last week over Washington.

This time, Young will be the focus of attention. The game will be telecast to much of the nation by ABC.

"How long was I supposed to wait?" asks Hadl, whose young team has had trouble scoring. "We want Steve to be our quarterback. He's going to have some ups and down. We've just got to get through it."

The Denver-Arizona game is for first place in the Pacific Division. Denver is 4-1 while Arizona only is 3-2 despite outscoring opponents 164-72 in its first five games.

Trumaine Johnson, the league's leading receiver, presents a particularly dangerous threat to the Gold, considering the way Michigan's Anthony Carter destroyed the Denver secondary three weeks ago in a 28-0 victory. "And Arizona thinks Johnson is even better than Carter," said Denver Coach Craig Morton.

"We know Arizona is a good football team, but we're not intimidated by their great talent," said Morton. "We have good talent, too."

Philadelphia's defense tops the USFL, having given up 49 points in the Stars' 4-1 start. Coach Jim Mora believes 3-2 Tampa Bay will be its toughest test of the season.

"We've played only one team with a winning record so far, and we've lost," Mora said.

The Giants played in the shortest and longest major-league nine-inning baseball games. In New York, in 1919, they needed only 51 minutes to beat the Phillies, 6-1. As the San Francisco Giants in 1962 they outlasted the Dodgers, 8-7, in 4 hours, 18 minutes.

Board Welcomes Colts To Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — After hearing from its lawyers that there were no legal roadblocks, the Capital Improvements Board of Marion County Saturday ratified a complex agreement developed to move the National Football League's Baltimore franchise to Indianapolis.

The six board members voted on an agreement that already had been signed by their representative, the mayor of Indianapolis and the Colts.

Indianapolis Mayor William Hudnut announced that lawyers believe the tentative agreement signed Wednesday was binding on all parties, including Colts' owner Robert Irsay, who has not been heard from since the club's property was removed from its training complex in Maryland late Wednesday and shipped here.

The meeting was held despite court action Friday in Baltimore, where City Circuit Judge Robert Karwacki signed a 10-day temporary restraining order barring the team from moving. The order was signed less than an hour after Baltimore Mayor William Donald Schaefer signed a bill giving the city the right to move or seize the team under eminent domain.

"In terms of what the judge did yesterday; what the law is that he acted on; what apparent rights the law may give the city; we've not seen any of those documents," said Gerald Moss, who represents the board. "We feel comfortable that the franchise was here prior to the court action. And there really was nothing to act upon in front of the court."

David Frick, CIB treasurer who negotiated the nearly 200-page agreement, made its terms public at the meeting. The board members approved the agreement without question.

Frick outlined the agreement at the public meeting in the Indiana Convention Center — a part of the complex which includes the new $80 million Hoosier Dome where the Colts expect to play next season.

"The agreement calls for the team to be called the Indianapolis Colts," Frick said, adding that the agreement contains several clauses that appear unique to a professional sports team.

"We have the right to match any offer to buy the team if Mr. Irsay decides to sell. We also have a clause that sets ticket prices," he said after the meeting.

"We were looking for three things when we started the negotiations," said Frick. "One, we were interested in a long-term lease. Two, would be that if Mr. Irsay wanted to sell the franchise there would be an opportunity for a local group to purchase that team."

He said the third concern was producing "a favorable lease for the franchise" which the CIB "could stand up and defend to the citizens of our community."

Frick called the agreement "a fair deal to this board and the city of Indianapolis."

Frick's indicated that the CIB stands to make money during the term of the 20-year lease. He showed the CIB should expect $1.2 million in expenses per year, while receiving $2.6 million in revenue.

Frick told the board that he had heard Baltimore would sue to keep the Colts, which "would add some cost that couldn't be anticipated."

The agreement gives the Colts two five-year renewal options after the initial 20-year period expires. The Colts would pay $250,000 per year plus $25,000 per playoff game during the term of the lease. In 1984, the rent would be only $225,000 since the Colts have only nine home games, including one preseason game.

Day-of-game expenses would be divided between the Colts and the CIB, with the team paying for items such as ticket takers, security and ushers and the CIB paying for items like medical crews, technical crew and cleaning.

The CIB helped work out a $12.5 million loan for the Colts with Merchants National Bank in Indianapolis. The Colts would pay 8 percent interest with the CIB paying the difference between that and the prime rate — currently at 11½ percent. The bank also provided the Colts with a $2.5 million line of credit, Frick explained.

The CIB also is required to provide a temporary office and training facility in addition to constructing a new office and training facility to replace the one the Colts left in Maryland. The estimated cost for the new facility is between $3 million-$4 million and the Colts would have an option to purchase it for $4 million.

The CIB also was agreeing to guarantee income of at least $7 million in ticket sales, preseason television and radio receipts, Frick said. It also would provide $25,000 toward the team's relocation costs, which Frick said would be much higher due to possible lawsuits over the move.

The Colts also would receive the first $500,000 of income from 87 private suites built in the Hoosier Dome, which would cost purchasers between $10,000 to $24,000 a year in addition to ticket prices.

The court order issued Friday prohibits the team from playing NFL games anywhere but in Baltimore — the city in which the NFL granted the team the right to play.

However, the NFL has said that due to a court order involving the shift of the Los Angeles Raiders from Oakland it would not do anyhing to block the move of any of its franchises.

Ben Brown, the Baltimore City solictor, has notified the Colts' general counsel and the Indianapolis city attorney of the restraining order.

Couples Has His Work Cut Out

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Fred Couples, who made a gritty rally on the back nine to retain a two-shot lead, knows he has his work cut out for him Sunday in the final round of the Tournament Players Championship.

"It can get tough when you're playing with a guy like Tom Watson," Couples admitted after Watson some of golf's greatest players in their move toward the top of this, the annual championship of the game's touring pros.

Watson, Seve Ballesteros of Spain, Lee Trevino and Craig Stadler all are very much in the title chase.

Couples, who played the back in 33 to salvage a 1-under-par 71, will be paired with Watson and the dangerous Ballesteros in Sunday's final round.

"Seve is very aggressive," Couples said. "He hits the ball a long way. Like Watson, he's a great putter, so he can afford to be aggressive on the greens. He can run one eight feet by and know he's going to make it coming back.

"But the tough thing in playing with a Watson is that the gallery is all pulling for them. They like to see a Tom Watson win. It's kind of tough when they're all cheering fora guy when he's making up ground on you."

Couples finished 54 holes over the difficult Players Club course in 206, 10 under par.

Ballesteros, 70-208, was second alone. And Watson, the five-time British Open champ now on the mend from a puzzling, frustrating slump, rapped in a 20-foot eagle putt on the 16th as the highlight of a 67 that lifted him to third at 209.

Possibly the most dangerous of the challengers, however, could be the 44-year-old Trevino.

"I'm more surprised than you are," Trevino said after birdies on the last three holes had capped off a 68 that lifted him into a tie for third at 210.

Trevino, a non-winner for two years and an infrequent competitor this season, said he "really didn't expect to play well at all."

He now combines his PGA Tour activity with a parallel career as a television golf analyst. And, he said, his television duties have kept him away from the golf course much of this season.

"I haven't been able to practice. I haven't been able to work on the game. And that could make me dangerous tomorrow," he said.

"I still have the drive to win.

"But since I haven't practiced, since I haven't had a chance to work on it, I'm not expecting to play too well.

"And that's a dangerous golfer, the one who's just out there waltzing around the countryside."

He was tied with Stadler, a non-winner for more than a year, and Mark O'Meara. Stadler had a 66 that included par-saving putts of 40 and 50 feet, while O'Meara closed up with a 69.

John Mahaffey was next at 69-212.

Jim Thorpe, in second place at the start of the day's play, finished double bogey-double bogey for a 78 and was at 215.

He had plenty of company in his misery, however.

Former TPC champion Lanny Wadkins, within two strokes of the lead at one point on the back nine, made double bogey on the 14th, hit into the water on the 17th and made triple bogey. He played the back in 41, had a 78 and was out of title contention at 216. Johnny Miller displayed some rare exhibitions of frustration on the way to a 78 that eliminated him from the chase.

Jack Nicklaus shot a 75 and was at 223. That's one stroke ahead of Arnold Palmer, who had a 76. U.S. Open titleholder Larry Nelson was 74-221. And Hal Sutton, the defending champion, had to work hard to salvage a 74-215.

Couples, 24, whose only previous victory came last year in the Kemper Open, got off to a good start with a birdie-4 on the second hole after getting into a greenside bunker in two.

But he began to falter with a 3-putt bogey on the fourth. A drive got away from him and he bogeyed the seventh. And when he missed the green and bogeyed the eighth—with some of the game's best moving into a challenging position—he appeared to be in severe difficulty.

"I didn't really feel it was getting away," he said. "I hadn't played all that bad. I'd just missed a couple of putts. I didn't feel all that much pressure."

After Ballesteros had tied him for the lead, Couples hit an 8-iron to four feet and birdied the 13th, then came out of a fairway bunker to make birdie from 15 feet on the 14th. He scored his 19th birdie of the tournament with a 2-putt on the 16th.

Third round scores Saturday in the $800,000 Tournament Players Championship on the 6,857 yard, par 72 Players Club course:

THE HARD WAY

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Cliff Stoudt, the new quarterback of the Birmingham Stallions of the USFL and former Pittsburgh Steeler signal-caller, has a quick wit.

After one game for Pittsburgh last fall, in which he was intercepted three times, Stoudt was asked if he had learned anything from that experience.

"Yeah," he said. "I learned how to tackle."

Lady Tigers Rip Jackets

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School blew Roanoke Rapids away in a Northeastern Conference softball game held Saturday afternoon, taking a 30-0 victory.

The Lady Tigers got all they needed in the first inning, scoring eight times. Half that total came when Shelly Harrington hit a grand-slam homer. Timberly Rodgers added another four in the third inning on another grand-slam as the Tigers picked up eight more to go with three they had scored in the second for a 19-0 lead.

Williamston pushed over 11 more runs in the fourth to close out the scoring.

Harrington was the lone Tiger with more than one hit, getting two.

Now 4-0, Williamston travels to Roanoke on Tuesday.

Harrell Scores Two In Houston Loss

Evans Leads Blitz Victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — Quarterback Vince Evans ran 6 yards for a touchdown with 1:05 remaining to lift the Chicago Blitz to their first victory of the U.S. Football League season Saturday, a 21-20 triumph over the still winless Washington Federals.

The Blitz, 1-5, who had lost three times this year on the final play of the game, courted disaster again but escaped when Washington's Greg Porter's attempted 21-yard field goal with six seconds to play was foiled by a a bad snap from center.

The Federals had taken a 20-14 lead with five minutes to play on Curtis Bledsoe's 80-yard run, the longest run from scrimmage in the history of the franchise. Porter's point after attempt was blocked.

Evans, who completed 16 of 38 passes for 278 yards, then marched the Blitz 78 yards in 3:43 for the winning score.

A key play on the drive was an 18-yard bootleg by Evans on fourth and nine from the Washington 23.

After a delay of game penalty moved the Blitz back from the 1 to the 6-yard line, Evans took over again on his touchdown jaunt with 1:05 to play.

Federals quarterback Mike Hohensee drove his team from the Washington 16 to the Chicago 6-yard line where the errant field goal attempt left the home team with their sixth loss in as many outings.

The game was witnessed by 7,373, the smallest crowd of the year here. there were 4,535 no shows.

Bledsoe led the Federals with 114 yards.

Chicago's Marcus Anderson caught seven passes for 137 yards before departing in the fourth quarter with a pulled hamstring.

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Rookie receiver Alfonso Williams snared a pair of spectacular catches in a stunning Oklahoma comeback and Efren Herrera's 19-yard field goal gave the Outlaws a 31-28 overtime victory over the Houston Gamblers Saturday in the United States Football League.

Oklahoma improved to 4-2 while Houston dropped to 3-3 in the contest between Western Conference Central Division expansion clubs.

Trailing 28-20 with 35 seconds left, Outlaws quarterback Doug Williams engineered a 68-yard drive capped by a 48-yard bomb Alfonso Williams wrestled away from two defenders in the end zone with no time left. Williams hit running back Ted Sample at the goal line for the two-point conversion to tie the game.

Houston won the overtime coin toss and Kelly had the Gamblers at midfield when his pass went through Greg Moser's hands and Wilson came up with a second key interception.

On a flea-flicker in which Williams handed off to Sample and then got the ball back on a shovel handoff, the Outlaw quarterback heaved a 53-yard bomb to Williams, who again wrestled the catch away from defenders at the 1-yard line.

Herrera booted the winning field goal, his third of the game, on the next play with 3:19 gone in the overtime period.

Kelly hit slotback Richard Johnson for a pair of touchdowns and running back Sam Harrell ran for two more as the Gamblers built a 15-point advantage after three quarters.

Kelly completed 25 of 42 passes for 325 yards while Williams struggled with 16 for 35 passes for 243 yards. At one point in the first half, Williams threw 10 straight incomplete passes.

Nettles Okays Trade To Padres

NEW YORK (AP) — Graig Nettles consented to a trade to the San Diego Padres Saturday, officially ending an 11-year career with the New York Yankees that saw him become only the third captain of the team.

The trade, announced Friday night by the Yankees, will send the 39-year-old Nettles to the city of his birth and end a sometimes stormy relationship with club owner George Steinbrenner.

As a 5-and-10 player (five years with one club, 10 years in one league), Nettles had the right to refuse the deal. But the Gold Glove third baseman gave his approval Saturday after a conference call from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., with his agent, Jerry Kapstein, Padres General Manager Jack McKeon and Yankees Vice President Bill Bergesch.

Nettles, who followed Lou Gehrig and Thurman Munson as the only Yankees' captains, reportedly will sign a contract similar to the two-year deal he had with the Yankees, earning him about $1.8 million through 1985. The contract reportedly also will contain a no-trade clause.

Nettles was en route to San Diego and was unavailable for comment.

The deal will send rookie pitcher Dennis Rasmussen and a player to be named later to the Yankees. Rasmussen, 6-foot-7 left-hander, was 13-10 for New York's Triple A farm club at Columbus last season, but the Yankees sent him to San Diego last August for right-hander John Montefusco.

Nettles, who lives in Del Mar, Calif., asked to be traded after Yankees Manager Yogi Berra said he would platoon him at third with Toby Harrah, acquired from Cleveland in February. The Yankees failed in an attempt to trade Nettles to San Diego in 1982.

Most of Nettles' problems with Steinbrenner centered on money, but a yet-to-be-released book by Nettles also reportedly will heavily criticize the Yankees' boss. Steinbrenner, in a published interview, denied the book had anything to do with the trade.

"I didn't appreciate the things he (Nettles) said about me in it, but this was a decision that was made by Yogi and the coaches," Steinbrenner said.

Rudd Nips Labonte For Valleydale Pole Position

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Ricky Rudd narrowly edged Terry Labonte Saturday to grab the pole position for Sunday's $219,165 Valleydale 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race at ~~Bristol~~ International Raceway.

Rudd, of Chesapeake, Va., wheeled his Wrangler Jeans Ford Thunderbird around Bristol's .533-mile oval at an average speed of 111.390 mph. Labonte's speed of 111.319 was good enough to put his Piedmont Airlines Chevrolet on the outside of the front row in the 30-car field.

"In practice we were as quick as anyone, but I thought the speeds would be faster," said Rudd, who is looking to drive into the winner's circle for the second time this year after starting the 1984 NASCAR season with a serious crash at Daytona.

"I'd heard from (Dale) Earnhardt all about how much of a handicap Fords were on the short tracks," said Rudd, who came back from the Daytona mishap to win on the half-mile oval at Richmond in the second race of the season.

"I really can't see a lot of difference between this car and a Chevrolet," added Rudd after becoming the fifth differnt pole winner in five events this season. "Bud and the guys have been spending a lot of time looking for more acceleration out of the Ford motor this year."

General Motors products had dominated pole qualifying at Bristol since Buddy Baker drove another Ford to the top starting position in the 1976 Southeastern 400. The last time a Ford won at Bristol was in 1971 when David Pearson drove to victory in the Volunteer 500.

Another constant at Bristol in recent years has been Darrell Waltrip, who will start in the third position Sunday. Waltrip will be looking for his seventh straight Grand National win at Bristol, the track with 36-degree banked turns, the most severe on the NASCAR circuit.

Waltrip roared to a 110.920 mph lap on his first qualifying run, but smacked the first turn guard rail on the second lap. He was not injured.

Rounding out the top 10 starting positions were Harry Gant, Geoff Bodine, Neil Bonnett, Bobby Allison, Morgan Shepherd and Dave Marcis.

First place in Sunday's race is worth $18,570.

The starting lineup for Sunday's $219,165 Valleydale 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race on the Bristol International Raceway .533-mile track, with qualifying speed:

1. Ricky Rudd 111.390 mph.

Greenville Christian Tops Wilson

WILSON — Greenville Christian held off Wilson Christian for a 12-9 baseball victory Friday night.

GCA took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first but Wilson came back to take over with two in their half of the frame. GCA went back out with four in the top of the second, while Wilson got one in the third.

The fourth was decisive for the Knights as they scored nine runs to take a 10-3 lead. Mike Bragg walked and stole second. Tom Warburton singled him to third and a double steal scored Bragg. Mike Griner walked and a single by Paul Hollingsworth scored Warburton. Tim O'Shea walked, loading them up and a walk to Chris Harris scored Griner. Mark Holloman also walked, scoring Hollingsworth, and a wild pitch let O'Shea score.

GCA added two in the sixth. Wilson picked up two in the bottom of the fourth, three in the fifth and one in the seventh.

Warburton led the GCA hitting with three while Harris added two.

Now 2-1, the Knights travel to Bethel Academy on Monday.

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville High School romped to an 8-0 victory over Creswell Friday in a Tobacco Belt Conference baseball game.

Rusty Holliday hurled a two-hitter in the shutout, going the distance for the Bullets.

It was all over in the first inning as the Bullets scored six times to put the game out of reach. Matthew Moore led off with a single and Greg Hardison reached on an error. After a sacrifice, Holliday walked and Whit Brown also drew a free pass, forcing in Moore. A walk to Peewee Groover scored Hardison and Chris Jones doubled, driving in Holliday and Brown. A double by Earl Bowen plated Groover and Jones to make it 6-0.

Jamesville added two more in the third to finish the scoring.

No one had more than one hit for Jamesville, but Whit Brown also had a double for the Bullets, along with those by Jones and Bowen. Danny Hall collected both of the Creswell hits.

Now 6-0 in the conference, the Bullets are 6-1 overall and travel to Cape Hatteras on Tuesday for a non-conference game.

Chocowinity 7
Aurora 5

AURORA — Despite a brawl which erupted in the seventh inning, the Chocowinity Indians pulled out a 7-5 baseball win over Aurora High School on Friday in Tobacco Belt Conference play.

Aurora pushed ahead in the game in the first inning, scoring a pair of runs. They added two more in the second for a 4-0 lead.

Chocowinity rallied for five runs in the third, two of them coming on Kevin Tyree's double that brought in the go-ahead run.

Aurora tied it up, however, in the fifth, scoring once for a 5-5 deadlock.

In the top of the seventh, Shawn Hardy singled and stole second. He moved to third on an infield out and watched as both Phillip Terry and Larry Hardy were hit by pitches.

Tyree, at the plate, squared around to bunt on a squeeze play, but the Chocowinity pitcher, seeing the runner break for home, stepped off the mound and fired home. The catcher dropped the ball and Hardy barreled over him. That led to a brawl that halted the game for approximately an half-hour.

When order was restored, the umpires called a balk, scoring Hardy and advancing the other runners. Tyree then hit a sacrifice fly to score Terry with the insurance run.

Mark Asby led the Creswell hitting with two and he also stole six bases.

Chocowinity goes to 2-4 in Tobacco Belt play and 3-5 overall. The Indians entertain Bath on Tuesday.

Sports Medicine Conference Set

Injuries are a part of athletics, but the methods of detection, treatment and rehabilitation of those injuries is a rapidly advancing science.

Knee injuries will be the central topic of the 14th Annual East Carolina University Sports Medicine Conference April 6-7, with lectures and demonstrations conducted by members of the ECU Sports Medicine department and area physicians.

"The conference is actually for anyone responsible for the health care of student-athletes," according to ECU Sports Medicine Director Rod Compton. "The program is presented in a number of different manners so there is something for everybody. For example, we have basic anatomy for the very beginners and advanced anatomy for those who have worked with this before.

"We even have a special section for the very advanced for time management in sports medicine."

The time management lecture, which will be given by Carol-Ann Tucker of the ECU Regional Training Program, is designed to increase effectiveness through "making the most of your time" personally and effectively. Other lectures deal with deal primarily with actual injuries.

"The three most injured joints are the knee, ankle and shoulder," Compton said. "Each year we rotate one of these areas and concentrate on the injuries common to joint. This year it's the knee."

Greg Beres, ECU assistant athletic trainer, opens the seminars discussing the anatomy of the knee. Compton follows with immediate care of knee injuries and Rochelle Rittgers, also assistant trainer at ECU, will discuss knee rehabilitation.

Heat stress is often a factor in athletics, and Phil Callicutt will outline methods of preventing and treating victims. Callicutt is the trainer at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in Glynco, Ga., and he is responsible for rehabilitation of in-field injuries — such as shootings — to federal agents.

Knee ligament and cartilage damage will be the topic of Dr. Edwin Bartlett, and Dr. Robert Timmons will talk about head and spine injuries.

Dr. James McCallum, ECU team physician and director of student health, will address the group on illnesses and the athlete, while Dr. Paul Camnitz will discuss ear, nose and throat problems. Dr. James Bowman's topic is patellar-femoral conditions.

Lab sessions will "reinforce what is described in lectures," according to Compton. "They'll get hands-on experience in rehabilitation and taping."

Enrollment for the conference will be limited, with applications accepted in order received prior to the registration deadline of April 2. The tuition for the conference is $45, and preferred customer rates are available at several area motels.

For further information, direct inquirees to: Sports Medicine Conference, Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University, or call 757-6143.

Kinston Hands Rose Track Loss

Rose High School's track team suffered its first loss of the season Friday, bowing to visiting Kinston by two points.

The Vikings finished the meet with 71 points, while Rose ended up with 69. An exchange of a third for a second could have made the difference in the meet — and in one event, the long jump, a difference of only a half-inch cost Rose those points.

"We had five people out for various reasons," Coach Bud Phillips said. "That could have made the difference too."

As it was, the Rampants had four double winners. William Waugh won both the shot and the discus, while Roswell Streeter took the high jump and high hurdles. Reggie Smith captured first in the triple jump and the 100-meter dash, while Steve Strother won both of the distance events.

Wiggins was the lone double winner for Kinston, taking the long jump and triple jump. Kinston also was helped out by winning two of the three relays.

Rose, now 4-1, returns to action on Thursday traveling to Wilson Fike.

Hagler Gets TKO In 10th Round

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — While Juan Domingo Roldan may have looked like a routine stop on middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler's route to another mega-bucks fight, for a brief time he appeared to be a major obstacle.

Roldan knocked Hagler down in the first round of their title bout Friday night, then landed a number of solid blows in the next.

That, however, ended the brief blaze of glory for the underdog challenger from Argentina.

Hagler, who hopes to be able to meet Sugar Ray Leonard or Thomas Hearns in a fight that would produce a huge purse, took command of the fight in the third round and went on to the ninth successful defense of his undisputed middleweight title with a 10th-round knockout.

The tide turned in the third when Hagler landed a crushing uppercut to the challenger's right eye. Roldan stood straight up, blinking, and Hagler landed a flurry of punches that sent the Argentine sprawling into the ropes.

Wobbly, Roldan took an eight-count and continued, but the fight belonged to the champion from that point on.

Hagler used his boxing skill, cautiously punishing Roldan through the next six rounds, then unleashed an all-out attack in the 10th.

"The bell saved him a couple of times, but I said, 'OK, this is the bus stop, this is where he gets off,'" Hagler said.

Although some, including Leonard at ringside, contended the telling blow in the third round was a thumb to Roldan's eye, Hagler said: "I hit him on the bridge of the nose and the eye with a closed glove.

"Also, if he wants to complain about thumbing, I got thumbed in the eye in the fifth or sixth round and had to back off till my vision cleared."

Referee Tony Perez backed Hagler's claim that it was a clean shot.

But Perez and Hagler disagreed on the first-round knowdown of the champion.

"That was no knockdown, it was a slip," said Hagler, who was backing away when Roldan caught him on the back of the head with a roundhouse left.

The champion said that he was "embarrassed" when the referee started counting.

Asked if he'd ever been knocked down before, Hagler replied: "No, and I still haven't. Don't you try to say I have."

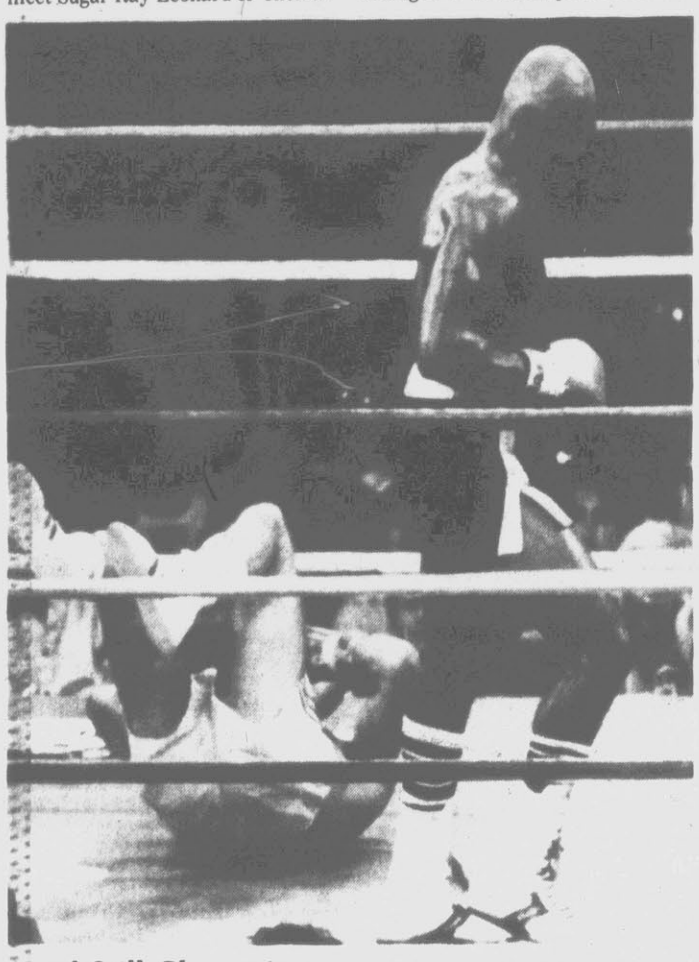
Hagler complimented his foe, who absorbed much punishment before he went down 39 seconds into the 10th round and told the referee he'd had enough.

"The guy was very strong and was a very game warrior," said Hagler. "His unorthodox style was difficult for me at first because he throws punches off balance."

Asked about his future, Hagler said, "The monster is back," referring to his last title fight going the distance in a decision over Roberto Duran. "I was hitting with great power. Ask Roldan."

Roldan, however, wasn't talking. He had his eye tended by doctors and retired to his quarters.

Hagler, winner of his last 34 fights, has won by knockout in eight of his nine title defenses since he took the title in 1980. He is now 59-2-2 overall, with 49 KOs.



And Still Champion

Lady Pirates Split Two Games

East Carolina University's Lady Pirates split a doubleheader with Francis Marion Friday as the two teams swapped one hitters.

East Carolina rallied for a 2-1 win in the opening game as Stacy Boyette tossed a one-hitter at Marion, but the visitors responded with a 2-0 win in the second game, holding the Pirates to only one hit.

Marion scored in the first inning of the opener, and it stayed that way until the sixth when ECU tied it up. Pam Young singled and Carla Alphin reached on a fielder's choice. Wendy Ozment then walked, loading the bases and a walk to Tamara Franks brought in Young.

In the eighth, Alphin reached on a fielder's choice and Ozment singled. Franks then singled to drive in Alphin with the winning run.

Young had three hits while Suzanne Martin and Franks each had two to lead the Lady Pirate hitting.

In the second game, it was a different story as the Lady Pirates got only a second inning single by Alphin and went scoreless.

Marion scored both of its runs in the second. Summersell walked and Renfrow singled. Yates and Costas both reached on errors, the latter scoring Summersell. McLoud then grounded out, scoring Renfrow.

The split leaves East Carolina with a 10-6 record. The Lady Pirates host Florida State in a doubleheader today at 2 p.m. at University Field.

Two Aces At Brook Valley

Two holes-in-one have been recorded at the Brook Valley Country Club recently.

Dr. John Reynolds, 79, got his first career hole-in-one on the 182-yard 18th hole while playing with Bill Wright, Lacy Harrell and Howard Porter. Reynolds, who has been playing at Brook Valley since its opening in 1966, used a four-wood for the shot.

The other ace came on the 12th hole by Whit Miller Jr. He used a five-iron on the 135-yard hole. It came while he was playing with his wife, Lea, and Ken Barnes. The ace was also his first.

The team of Robbie Pinner, Skipper Johnston, Dave Bumgarner and Gary Hess took first place in a Super Ball Tournament with a 61.

Taking second place, also with a 61 were John Finch, Rich Rados, Jim Marlowe and Al Smith. Third, also with a 61 were Charles Mitchell, Danny Hammond, Tommy Lane and Marty Goldfarb.

The team of Joe LaMotte, Horace Topping, Dorson White and Lloyd Mills finished fourth with a 62, while Robbie Armistead, Bill Lee, Roy Thompson and Skip Browder were fifth with a 62.

Ties were broken by comparing scores on a blind hole. A total of 28 teams participated in the tournament, sponsored by the Brook Valley Men's Golf Association.

ECU Netters Top UNCW

East Carolina University's men's tennis team romped to a 9-0 victory over UNC-Wilmington on Friday.

The Pirates had little trouble with the Seahawks, extended to extra games only once in the singles and three times in the doubles. UNCW failed to win a set on the day.

Now 5-4, the Pirates, following a Saturday meeting with Guilford, travel to Atlantic Christian on Monday.

Roldan Caused Hagler Problems

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — No, he was not knocked down and no, it was not a thumb to the eye of his opponent that turned the tide, said Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

And yes, Hagler said, he was confident all the way although Juan Domingo Roldan's unorthodox style caused him some problems in their bout for the undisputed world middleweight championship Friday night.

Looking relatively fresh and smiling broadly following his 10th-round knockout of Roldan, Hagler seemed generally pleased with the ninth successful defense of his crown.

"The guy was very strong and was a very game warrior," said Hagler, who went down early in the first round when, as he was backing away, the Argentine challenger caught him with a looping left to the back of the head.

"That was no knockdown, it was a slip," said Hagler, who added that he was "embarrassed" when the referee started counting.

Asked if he'd ever been knocked down before, Hagler said, "No, and I still haven't. Don't you try to say I have."

The bullish Roldan, powerful but awkward, was the aggressor during the first two rounds, but the momentum changed abruptly in the third, when Hagler landed a crushing right uppercut to the challenger's right eye.

Roldan stood up and blinked in pain, then Hagler followed with a combination that sent him sprawling into the ropes. Some, including Sugar Ray Leonard, who was working the fight for television, said Roldan caught a thumb in the eye.

"I hit him on the bridge of the nose and the eye with a closed glove," said Hagler. "Also, if he wants to complain about thumbing, I got thumbed in the eye in the fifth or sixth round and had to back off till my vision cleared."

The referee, Tony Perez, agreed with Hagler that it was a clean blow that stunned Roldan, but, going back to the first round, said the knockdown of Hagler was a knockdown.

After the third-round knockdown, when Roldan groggily took an eight-count, Hagler took command of the fight.

"I felt very confident, very strong," he said. "He got desperate and was looking to land a big blow. I wanted to be careful, and I knew I was punishing him, I could hear him grunting when I hit him.

"The bell saved him a couple of times, but in the 10th, I said, 'OK, this is the bus stop, this is where he gets off.'"

Roldan was having his closed and bloody right eye tended by doctors following the bout.

Celtic Guards Lead Boston Win

By The Associated Press

Inside or outside, it was all the same to the Boston Celtics.

While their defense did a job on Atlanta's big men inside, Boston guards Dennis Johnson, Danny Ainge and Quinn Buckner connected on 16 of their 20 field goal attempts and the Celtics rolled to a 105-96 victory over the Atlanta Hawks Friday night.

"I've been here five years and people say the same thing — guards can't hit the outside shot," said Gerald Henderson. "I can remember one year — last year — where that was a problem. But it's an entirely different story this year."

Ironically, Henderson made just two of 12 shots and was the only weak link in Boston's backcourt.

Elsewhere, the Philadelphia 76ers downed the Dallas Mavericks 118-110, the Washington Bullets buried the New York Knicks 107-79, the Milwaukee Bucks swamped the Chicago Bulls 119-86, the Denver Nuggets beat the San Antonio Spurs 145-136, the San Diego Clippers whipped the Golden State Warriors 124-112 and the Indiana Pacers nipped the Cleveland Cavaliers 90-87.

Ainge and Kevin McHale combined for nine consecutive Boston points late in the third quarter and early in the fourth to break the game open as the Celtics completed a 5-0 sweep of the season series with the Hawks. Atlanta lost for the 14th time in its last 17 games.

Larry Bird led Boston with 19 points, McHale added 17, Johnson 16, Robert Parish 15 and Ainge 13. Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins had a game-high 23 points.

The Hawks' starting front line of Tree Rollins, Wilkins and Dan Roundfield combined for 34 points in the first half but managed just 17 in the last two periods.

"When we're able to do that kind of a job on a team that goes inside a lot, we're going to take full advantage of it," said Boston's Cedric Maxwell.

76ers 118, Mavericks 110

Julius Erving scored 29 points and Moses Malone and Andrew Toney 22 each for Philadelphia. Malone also collected 13 rebounds as the 76ers won for the 12th time in their last 14 games. Mark Aguirre scored 26 and Rolando Blackman 24 for the Mavericks.

Bullets 107, Knicks 79

Guards Frank Johnson and Ricky Sobers combined for 18 of Washington's 31 points in the third quarter as the Bullets opened a 24-point lead and broke a five-game losing streak. The Knicks, who played without injured Bernard King and ill Marvin Webster, were held to their lowest point total of the season while losing for the fifth time in seven starts.

Jeff Malone led five Washington players in double figures with 17 points and Greg Ballard had 15 as the Bullets solidified the eighth and last playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. Bill Cartwright scored 20 points for the Knicks.

Bucks 119, Bulls 86

Paul Pressey scored 20 points and Marques Johnson 18 to lead seven Bucks in double figures as Milwaukee won its fourth game in a row. Other Bucks in double figures were Sidney Moncrief with 17 points, Alton Lister with 14, Paul Mokeski with 12, Bob Lanier with 11 and Junior Bridgeman with 10. Milwaukee, which led 53-44 at halftime, outscored Chicago 23-7 in the first six minutes of the third period. Orlando Woolridge scored 20 points for the Bulls.

Nuggets 145, Spurs 136

Alex English scored 39 points and Kiki Vandeweghe added 30 as Denver moved into a tie with idle Phoenix for the sixth playoff spot in the Western Conference. It was the 11th straight home-court triumph for Denver, while the Spurs' road record fell to 8-30. Early in the third quarter, Denver's Dan Issel became the fifth-leading scorer in pro basketball history, surpassing former Boston star John Havlicek. Issel, in his 14th pro season, finished with 29 points and has 26,407 for his career. Mike Mitchell led the Spurs with 33.

Clippers 124, Warriors 112

Terry Cummings scored 10 of his 25 points in the final period to help San Diego hand Golden State its fourth consecutive defeat. The Clippers took command for good early in the second quarter as they outscored the Warriors 11-4 to break a 31-31 tie. Purvis Short led the Warriors with 29 points, while Norm Nixon contributed 19 points and 10 assists for San Diego.

Pacers 90, Cavaliers 87

Jerry Sichting scored six of his 12 points in the last two minutes for Indiana. Sichting's rebound basket with 49 seconds left put the Pacers ahead for good at 88-87 and his two free throws with three seconds left clinched the victory. World B. Free led Cleveland with 24 points. Indiana's Clark Kellogg had 13 of his 24 points in the third quarter as the Pacers rebounded from a 44-37 halftime deficit to win for the fifth time in six outings.

Record Purse For Winston

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — A record purse of $475,715 will be awarded to contestants in the May 6 running of the Winston 500 stock car race at Alabama International Motor Speedway.

"With this kind of money on the line, nobody is going to hold back anything," said speedway manager Don Naman. "It should be one heck of a race."

The winner's share of the purse will be at least $36,500, with $9,400 available in lap money and a $3,000 to the driver who stays in the lead for the most laps during the race, Naman said.

The purse is a $35,000 increase over the money awarded at the 1983 Winson 500.

Trojans, Vols In Women's Finale

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It figured to be a classic, and classics are usually decided by the top players.

Cheryl Miller didn't disappoint anyone — except perhaps the Louisiana Tech faithful.

The 6-foot-3 Southern California sophomore took control in the final two minutes, scoring the game's last five points as the fifth-ranked Lady Trojans defeated No. 2 Louisiana Tech 62-57 Friday night in an NCAA women's basketball semifinal at Pauley Pavilion.

In the other semifinal, No.15 Tennessee rolled to an easy 82-73 victory over No.13 Cheyney State.

Southern California, seeking its second straight championship, will meet Tennessee for the title on Sunday. The nationally televised game is scheduled to start at 1:10 p.m. PST.

"This probably was one of the most exciting games I've ever seen," said Southern Cal Coach Linda Sharp.

Southern Cal trailed throughout most of the first half and needed a shot from freshman Amy Alkek 10 seconds before halftime to catch the Lady Techsters at 27-27.

The Lady Trojans, 28-4, opened a 40-31 lead with 13:42 to play, but Louisiana Tech rallied and took a 44-43 advantage with 9:20 remaining. The contest, which featured eight lead changes in the second half, remained close the rest of the way.

With the teams tied at 57-57, Miller put the Lady Trojans ahead to stay on a 10-foot shot and added a free throw and a layup to conclude the scoring.

Miller, a two-time All-American, finished with 22 points, but wasn't the only All-American to put on a show. Louisiana Tech's Janice Lawrence, given the Wade Trophy as the nation's top player earlier in the day, led all scorers with 28 points.

Lawrence's performance was an NCAA semifinal scoring record. And it stood for nearly two hours before Tennessee's Mary Ostrowski poured in 35 points in the Lady Volunteers' victory.

While Miller put in the key points at the end, it was a pair of reserve guards that put Southern Cal in a position to win.

Yolanda Fletcher and Cynthia Cooper combined for 12 critical points in the second half.

"I think what turned the game around was when Yolanda Fletcher hit two outside shots, and then Cooper hit another outside shot," said Sharp.

Southern Cal's defense also deserves some credit for holding Louisiana Tech's talented point guard, Kim Mulkey, scoreless. The 5-foot-4 Mulkey was 0-for-6 from the floor and had eight turnovers.

Despite the physical nature of the contest, relatively few fouls were called, which didn't go unnoticed by Louisiana Tech's coaches.

"I think the women's game is getting to the point where teams are so good that they must get officials who can keep up with the game," said the Lady Techsters' co-Coach Leon Barmore. "It got a little too physical early.

"I don't think we could have played much better defensively. We lost the game at the offensive end of the court, and turnovers were a factor in the second half."

Ostrowski completely dominated the night's second semifinal, pulling down 16 rebounds to go with her season-high point total. The 6-foot-2 senior forward made 13 of 20 floor shots and all nine of her free throw attempts.

"I wasn't really aware that I had set any records," said Ostrowski. "I was kind of playing unconscious. I'm just glad to be playing USC on Sunday."

Tennessee, 23-9, led by 14 points on three occasions in the first half and held a 37-28 advantage at halftime. The Lady Wolves trimmed the deficit to 41-37 with 17:24 to go, but the Lady Volunteers went on to lead by as many as many as 24 points in the closing minutes.

"I think we have to play better than we played tonight to beat USC," said Tennessee Coach Pat Head Summit.

Cheyney State, 25-5, was paced by Margaret Diaz with 26 points and Yolanda Laney with 20.

"In every game you're going to have your ups and downs," said Cheyney State's first-year Coach Winthrop McGriff. "My team went out a winner tonight because we didn't die.

"We did everything we could to stop (Ostrowski). We tried various defenses: zones, box and one, but her shots were falling."

Baltimore Still Chasing Colts

BALTIMORE (AP) — City officials hope legal action that would stop the Baltimore Colts from moving the National Football League franchise to Indianapolis will give them the grip they need to keep the team in Baltimore.

"We're not bringing (team owner Robert) Irsay back," said Baltimore Mayor William Donald Schaefer. "We're bringing the franchise back."

City Circuit judge Robert Karwacki signed a 10-day temporary restraining order Friday barring the move less than an hour after Schaefer signed a bill giving the city the right to move or seize the team under eminent domain. The City Council passed the bill during an emergency session Friday.

But Indianapolis officials said they planned to go ahead with today's meeting of the city's Capital's Improvements Board, which is expected to formally approve the move.

Schaefer said the matter is not just a Baltimore issue. Every city with a professional sports franchise faces the same possibility, he said.

"All mayors of professional football, baseball teams: beware," Schaefer said, warning that any team owner can put any city in a situation like Baltimore's.

Karwacki's order prohibits the team from playing NFL games anywhere but in Baltimore — the city in which the NFL granted the team the right to play.

Ben Brown, the Baltimore City solictor, has notified Colts' general counsel Michael Chernoff and the Indianapolis city attorney of the restraining order. They will now have 10 days to show in court why the restraining order should be lifted.

If the eminent domain action is successful, the city would have to pay Irsay market value for the football team. The city would then presumably arrange for private businesses or individuals to buy the team from the city.

In preparation for the action, the city solicitor's office had the franchise appraised at $40 million and offered to buy the team from Irsay.

Meanwhile, lawyers for Equitable Trust bank persuaded Judge Thomas Ward Thursday night to put under court control the assets of the Baltimore Football Club and the Colt Center Company, which runs the team's training complex in Owings Mills, Md.

Richard P. Kidwell, a lawyer for Equitable, said the football companies owe his client more than $2.3 million on an industrial revenue bond authorized by Baltimore County when the training facility was developed.

Kidwell said the action was taken "because we think they are an absconding debtor. We think they have already moved out all of the equipment from the Baltimore County facility."

Indeed, Mayflower spokesman Don Wilson in Indianapolis said eight of 11 moving vans that left Maryland Wednesday night with Baltimore Colts equipment have arrived in that city.

In another development, city officials said while they had received a $150,000 check from the Colts for the 1983 Memorial Stadium rent, it was not the amount that is owed.

Harold Tall, deputy city solicitor said the Colts actually owe $173,000. He said he has no plans to cash or deposit the check until he finds out about the remaining $23,000, but will hold onto the check until the matter is clarified.

Sneaking Through

Cheyney's Yolanda Laney breaks for the basket although Tennessee's Tanya Haave, right, is too much for her, resulting in a miss. The action came in Friday night's NCAA women's semifinals at Los Angeles as Tennessee won, 82-73. (AP Laserphoto)

Spring Fishing Holds Promise — Veteran anglers agree that the spectacular run of bluefish on the Outer Banks late last year was at least as good as the fabulous runs of the early 1970s. Since these fish winter off the North Carolina capes, chances are better than even that when they come ashore and begin their northward migraiton in the spring, fishing could again be exceptional.

Normally this occurs in April and May. Giant bluefish in the spring usually are thin from their overwintering ordeal, so North Carolina fishermen will not likely see as many over 20 pounds as were caught last December. Citations were given to 71 anglers in the North Carolina Fishing Tournament for blues weighing 10-16 pounds.

Locations with the best chance of spring bluefish, if past years are any guide, will be the tip of Cape Lookout and the rock jetty there, the tip of Cape Hatteras and Oregon Inlet. But big blues are only partly predictable, so they could show up anywhere. In past years vast schools have wintered off Cape Fear and occasionally some of these fish in spring have come into waters near shore in the Wilmington area, and particularly on Frying Pan Shoals near Southport.

But giant bluefish are only one species Tar Heel residents and visiting anglers will be after in the spring. Nearly all guides and veteran red drum (channel bass) fishermen agree that there has been no time in memory when chances of catching a trophy drum have been better. The state fishing tournament recognized 122 anglers for catching channel bass weighing 40 pounds or more last year. Of those, 36 were for drum measuring 46 inches in length or longer and released alive.

Like most saltwater species, the number and size of Tar Heel red drum vary over time. Through the 1950s and 60s, few drum over 50 pounds were caught by anyone. Since about 1980, however, there have been numerous 50-pounders and larger caught every spring and fall. Last year, 26 red drum weighing 50 pounds or more were cited in the state fishing tournament, including one that weighed 65 pounds. So far, however, no fish has been approached Elvin Hooper's 90-pounder — the world's all-tackle record, caught from a Hatteras Island pier in 1973.

Hot spots for spring channel bass are Portsmouth Island in the Cape Lookout National Seashore and Ocracoke Inlet and Hatteras Island within the Cape Hatteras National Seashore. Portsmouth is inaccessible by road. Four-wheel drive vehicles may be ferried to the Core Banks, on which Portsmouth is located, from the mainland community of Atlantic by concessionairs of the national seashore. Overnight stays are recommended, since auto ferry rates are about $50 round trip. Rental cabins are available. There are guides for surf and boat fishing at all these locations. Boat fishing out of Ocracoke has been especially productive of big channel bass in the spring. When weather is good and the water id clear, sight casting to schools of drum is possible. Most fish are caught, however, by anglers bottom fishing with bait from anchored boats in the inlet.

Offshore fishing will get underway in late April. Early in the year, blackfin tuna are likely catches at the edge of the Gulf Stream. Behind them will be bluefin and yellow fin tuna, then the usual summer run of dolphin, wahoo and billfish. Any wreck from inshore to the Gulf Stream could harbor big blues well into June.

While most guides and charter boat skippers book themselves weeks, if not months, in advance, af few will have open days in the summer. For lists of chater boats and guide services or for accommodations listings and a road map, call the North Carolina Travel and Tourism Division toll free at: 1-800-334-1051 (in state) or write to 430 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

Wildlife Tax Checkoff — There's still time to contribute to the North Carolina Wildlife Tax Checkoff. State income tax forms are due by April 15, and this year for the first time the form will enable North Carolinians to support the management and protection of non-game and endangered species. Non-game species are animals which are neither fished for, hunted or trapped, and include most small animals and birds and all reptiles. Endangered species are animals which have been legally declared to be in danger of extinction.

The non-game tax checkoff allows residents of North Carolina receiving a refund from their State Income tax to designate that a portion or all of their refund be used for the management and protection of these animals.

If you aren't receiving a refund but wish to contribute to the non-game wildlife fund, tax-deductible contributions may be sent to the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission, 512 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611. Please note on the check that the proceeds are to be used for non-game and endangered species.

Orioles, Mets Ready To Go

By The Associated Press

The Baltimore Orioles and New York Mets are in midseason form. The 1983 world champion Orioles played sharp baseball while the 1982-83 last-place Mets brought back memories of the franchise's daffy early days.

Things looked good for the Mets when they jumped to a 4-0 lead over the Minnesota Twins in Friday night's exhibition game on two-run homers by Darryl Strawberry and Hubie Brooks in the first inning.

By the fourth, however, they trailed 5-4 — Gary Gaetti's two-run double highlighted a four-run third-inning rally, while Mickey Hatcher drove in three runs with a homer and two singles as the Twins rallied to win 7-4 — and were about to make exhibition history.

Brooks opened the bottom of the fourth with a single. After Danny Heep flied out, Brooks was caught stealing for the second out as Junior Ortiz swung and missed the first pitch from Minnesota starter Larry Pashnick. For some reason, Ortiz walked away from the plate and coaches Bobby Valentine and Bill Robinson also headed for the dugout as the Mets took the field. Amazing.

"It was my responsibility," said Manager Davey Johnson. "I wasn't paying attention. I was talking to one of my pitchers.

Meanwhile, Baltimore's Mike Boddicker and Dennis Martinez combined on a three-hitter and Wayne Gross hit a three-run homer as the Orioles whipped the Atlanta Braves 8-1.Boddicker allowed two hits in five scoreless innings, lowering his spring training earned run average to 1.24. The right-hander allowed only one run in the last 22 innings of exhibition action.

With a crowd of 62,921 on hand for the opener of the annual Freeway Series, Greg Brock and Rick Monday belted consecutive homers in the seventh inning and Rick Honeycutt fired two-hit ball for seven innings as the Los Angeles Dodgers blanked the California Angels 7-0. Mike Marshall also homered for the Dodgers.

Graig Nettles, who was traded later in the day to San Diego, hit a two-run homer in his final appearance with New York and Roy Smalley followed with a home run to lead the Yankees to a 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros.

The Cleveland Indians scored eight runs in the sixth and Neal Heaton scattered four hits in seven innings in a 10-1 victory over a team made up of mostly minor leaguers from the San Diego Padres' organization. Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales said the Indians may file a complaint against San Diego because the Padres sent a team to Tucson without at least four regulars, which violates Cactus League regulations.

"The rules state you have to have four regulars on the field," Corrales said. "It was Las Vegas (the Padres' Class AAA farm club), not San Diego out there. It's not fair to the people. They pay their money and they want to see (Garry) Templeton and (Steve) Garvey and those people."

Ron Kittle, Vance Law and Carlton Fisk homered to lead the Chicago White Sox to their sixth straight victory, an 11-4 pounding of the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Kansas City Royals also won their sixth straight, topping the Cincinnati Reds 5-3 as rookie Butch Davis had a triple and three singles.

The Chicago Cubs, who snapped an 11-game losing streak earlier in the week, made it three victories in a row by clubbing the San Francisco Giants 11-5 as Mel Hall drove in four runs with a homer and a sacrifice fly.

Tony Armas drove in four runs with an inside-the-park homer and a double as the Boston Red Sox trimmed the St. Louis Cardinals 7-1.Bobby Ojeda allowed three singles in seven scoreless innings for the Red Sox.

Gary Carter hit a three-run homer to power the Montreal Expos to a 7-5 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Gorman Thomas had two doubles and a single as the Seattle Mariners rapped out 17 hits and trounced a team composed mostly of Oakland Athletics' minor leaguers, 12-4.Tim Conroy, one of Oakland's regular starters, was belted for 11 hits and

Courts Extended

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan signed legislation Saturday extending the temporary authority of federal bankruptcy courts to operate, giving Congress another month to resolve its differences over a permanent plan for the courts.

The current bankruptcy court operation has been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court and is operating under the temporary authority until the constitutional problems are resolved.

Both the House and the Senate have passed bills bringing the court system into line with the Supreme Court decision. But their measures differ, primarily over new judgeships and cancellation of labor agreements, and the two houses have not been able to agree on a single version of the bill to send to the White House.

Firms Say IRS Hurting Benefit Plan

By DAVID GREGORIO
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Companies with benefit plans that pay employees for unused medical coverage are irate about a recent announcement by the Internal Revenue Service that may threaten the plans.

They say many "flexible" benefit plans have saved companies money by making employees more responsible consumers of health care.

Some flexible plans offer employees the option to set aside part of their wages tax-free for use in paying medical or dental expenses, instead of taking a standardized health insurance plan that would end up costing their company more.

If employees spend less on health care than the amount set aside, they receive the balance at the end of the year. But in a February press release, the IRS said such plans were improper.

The statement also barred Zero Balance Reimbursement Accounts, known as "Zebras," under which companies reimburse employees for medical expenses by deducting the expenses from subsequent paychecks, thus reducing an employee's taxable income.

The IRS announcment prompted several companies to drop their flexible benefit plans. Others have put off instituting new plans until the controversy is resolved.

Steve Pyrek, an IRS spokesman in Washington, said the agency had been flooded with calls and letters from angry companies. He conceded the IRS had not acted quickly enough to clarify its position "and I think that has added to the confusion."

He said the IRS issued its new rules through a press release in February instead of taking more time for a formal review ruling because a growing number of companies were abusing the reimbursement plans.

"There was a certain amount of urgency" in getting the news out, he said. "We want people to be aware of the ruling when they file their returns."

But Charles Rogers, director of benefits at Pepsico Inc., said the ruling was unfair to companies that had spent money instituting plans they thought were legal, only to be told a year later they were improper.

Rogers, who is also chairman of the Employers Council on Flexible Compensation, said the council would ask Congress to impose a two-year moratorium on the IRS rules affecting flexible plans and to disallow taxation of income from Zebra plans in this tax year. He said that "it is really retroactive taxation" of plans that were instituted in good faith.

Rogers said companies put flexible compensation plans in place to take advantage of legislation Congress passed in 1978, offering tax advantages for "cafeteria benefits." The bill defined cafeteria benefits as plans in which employees choose between taxable compensation and non-taxable benefits.

Rogers said wording of the bill was vague, and without the tax-free compensation offered under flexible plans, employees "consistently choose the most expensive health care plan" a company has to offer.

He said this "defeats the whole idea of the legislation, which was to get employees to reduce their health care costs, which they will only do if they feel they're spending their own money."

With a flexible plan, he said a young, single employee in excellent health might agree to less expensive medical insurance if it means more income at the end of the year.

Wheat Futures Prices Up

By ELLEN PORATH
Associated Press Writer

Wheat futures prices climbed substantially Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade after tra-ders heard reports that Con-gress was making progress on a new program to reduce pro-duction.

The rally in wheat helped support corn and soybeans as well, analysts said.

Walt Spilka, a grain analyst in New York with Smith Barney, Harris Upham and Co., said the wheat market rallied in the closing minutes of the session as reports circulated that Con-gress had wound up committee action on wheat program legislation and is expected to bring it to a vote early next week.

Although the market has anticipated completion of action on the program, the report Friday prompted many traders to buy wheat futures contracts, Spilka said. Contracts for delivery in May paced the advance.

The program would encourage farmers to take wheat acreage out of production, which would decrease the supply and thereby increase prices, he said.

Spilka said reports that the U.S. dollar was a bit weaker also helped grains somewhat because that would encourage exports. Some commercial buying, probably for exports, was reported in light trading in the soybean pit, he said.

Wheat settled 4 cents to 11¼ cents higher, with the contract for delivery in May at $3.74 a bushel; corn was ¼ cent to 2¾ cents higher with May at $3.53¼ a bushel; oats were 1½ cents to 2¼ cents higher with May at $1.85½ a bushel; and soybeans were 1½ cents to 5¾ cents higher with May at $7.89 a bushel.

Livestock and meat futures prices were mostly lower on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Phil Stanley, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Thomson McKinnon Securities Inc., said many traders were selling to take whatever profit they could before prices went lower. He said most of the traders probably were responding to trends on price charts rather than to the cash market, even though that weakened slightly during the day.

Stanley said meat packers who have been losing money on hogs and cattle have been delaying purchases to wait for lower prices. The weakened demand was a factor in the decline, as well, he said.

Cattle prices increased late in the day, Stanley said, adding that traders expressed concern that a possible weekend storm in the Texas panhandle would make already muddy feedlot conditions even worse, inhibit weight gain in the animals and therefore tighten supplies of cattle suitable for delivery to the market.

Stanley said a cattle slaughter of 128,000 animals and hog slaughter of 340,000 animals Friday appeared to be too high for current demand, which would decrease prices.

He said reports that cash hogs were $1.25 lower in Peoria at 48.75 cents a pound reinforced traders' impressions that cash market prices would be lower Monday.

At the close, live cattle were .40 cent lower to .02 cent higher with the contract for delivery in April at 71.45 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .75 cent to .07 cent lower with April at 68.55 cents a pound; live hogs were .85 cent lower to .08 cent higher with April at 48.80 cents a pound; and pork bellies were 1.17 cents lower to .30 cent higher with May at 69.40 cents a pound.

Gold futures prices were down slightly and silver prices were up slightly in trading on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

Traders appear to be uncertain about price direction because of volatility in credit markets, sources said. Indications that the Federal Reserve Board is tightening credit is pressuring prices, but that is being matched by expectations that inflation could result from the current state of the eco-nomic recovery, said Jack Boyd, a metals analyst in New York with Drexel Burnham Lambert, Inc.

Gold for delivery in April settled $2.30 lower at $387.50 a troy ounce; April silver settled 5.5 cents higher at $9.82 a troy ounce.

Report Blames Deaths On Flaw

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A design problem in Bell military helicopters may have been responsible for 231 deaths since 1967 but remains largely uncorrected even though the Army discovered it 10 years ago, according to military documents, former Pentagon safety experts and Bell officials.

The top lawyer at Bell Helicopter of Fort Worth urged the company in 1979 to fix the problem even if it had to spend its own money to do so.

"I consider this matter very serious and, if we do nothing about it, very likely to be the subject of attempts at punitive damages," George Galerstein, Bell's chief legal counsel, told company management in a 1979 internal memo.

The memo was among documents obtained by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, which also interviewed people involved with the helicopter in a series of copyright articles published last week.

Since Galerstein's memo, families of five pilots killed in crashes attributed to the design problem have filed damage suits against Bell seeking nearly a quarter of a billion dollars.

Since 1970, when Bell lost the first case in which the design problem was cited as a cause, the company has settled all other suits out of court, emphasizing that is no acknowledgement of wrongdoing.

Farmville Opens New Arts Center

By CHRIS BENNETT
Reflector Staff Writer

Friday night marked the gala opening of the Farmville Community Arts Center with a Hollywood-style opening and pre-and post-theater parties. The celebration was the culmination of three years of fund-raising and community effort within the Farmville community.

The occasion marked the opening of the newly renovated Paramount movie theater. The theater, vacant for many years, has been refurbished with new floors, seat coverings and the addition of a stage and lighting. The renovation will continue with the addition of dressing rooms prop rooms and additional lighting.

After a pre-show cocktail reception at the Colonial Inn, chauffered limosines whisked guests to the door of the theater which had been decorated with a red carpet and spotlights. Other guests were directed to the theater by lighted luminairios lining the streets of Farmville.

After a brief dedication ceremony, Broadway actress and comedienne Sally-Jane Heit performed a one-woman show titled "Starting In the Middle" which chronicles the life of Harriet Ferment from a 7-year-old in the 1950s to a mature woman of the '80s. Ms. Heit, known to area audiences by her work in ECU Summer Theater productions, charmed the audience with her portrayal of a woman growing up amidst a changing social structure. Ms. Heit showed her virtuosity by interspercing comedy with songs accompanied by pianist Paul Tardiff.

After the performance a champagne reception was held at the Colonial Inn where Ms.Heit was joined by director Ed Loessin, actor George Grizzard and Mary Grizzard, Mary Regan, head of the North Carolina Arts Council, and state and local dignitaries. A performance for the general public was scheduled for Saturday.

Two-Gender Workforce Evolving

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Corporate America is evolving new "two-gender work force" policies that will help women — including wives and mothers — to advance in jobs.

Felice N. Schwartz, president and founder of Catalyst, says many corporations already are moving in that direction, aiming "to lead to the full assimilation of men and women in the work force, with a broad range of priorities that make good business sense."

Priorities she cited include child care, flex time, and reduction of sex role stereotypes and myths.

Mrs. Schwartz founded Catalyst in 1962. Her work keeps her in touch with boardroom types as she seeks to promote full participation of women in business and the professions. Often she is assisted by a firms' chief executive officers.

At Catalyst's ninth annual awards dinner, chaired by John R. Opel, chairman and chief exeutive officer of IBM, she said evolving corporate policies need to:

—Reduce sex role stereotypes and myths. "Neither sex should have to cope with the tension that results from being unable to conform to traditional and outmoded ideas of how a man or woman should behave."

—Provide high quality child care. "This is not just a women's problem. It is everyone's problem. Everyone suffers if child care is inadequate — child, parent, society."

— Create flexible work schedules. "If part-time schedules were available to women and men at critical periods, employers would benefit from the reduced time that any one employee was absent from work."

—Restructure the traditional benefits system. "These benefits were designed for the traditional single wage earner with a wife and children at home (less than 15 percent of the population). To a considerable extent benefits packages denote worthless duplication for two-paycheck and two-career families."

—Pay attention to human factors in relocation. "The average cost of a relocation for a corporation today is $46,800, but the emotional costs to the relocating family has been largely ignored."

—Eliminate sex-based pay differentials. "If women comtinue to earn less than their husbands, they will be forced to regard their careers as secondary to their husbands'."

"The fundamental changes in the workplace and the work force demand that companies seek talent and creativity at all levels of management," Mrs. Schwartz said.

"To depend on only half the population — the male half — to produce that pool of talent is a tremendous and self-defeating waste.

"The quintessential challenge is not to respond to the needs of women but to respond to the needs of men and women today, to free them from artificial limitations so that they can function at their fullest capacity..."

Women executives honored by Catalyst "Mushroom" awards were nominated by their bosses. Each was asked by IBM's Opel to speak out on implications for business and society of "the two gender work force" — one composed equally of men and women.

He decribed the four honorees as "representatives of the quality of future leadership," telling the audience of some 700 corporation officers that "it is in our best interest to ensure the growth of this vital resource."

Cathleen Black, president of USA Today, said, "A work force composed equally of men and women" is "more natural, it's smart, it's good business and it's long overdue."

In nominating her, Allen H. Neuharth, chairman and president of Gannett Company, said: "Cathie Black has demonstrated that we have moved away from the era of good-old-boy publishing. Her leadership in the publishing business and with Gannett has had and will continue to have nationwide impact."

Other awardees responded to Opel's request as follows.

Carol Einiger, managing director and head of short term finance, First Boston Corporation, said, "We must debunk the myth of the superwoman by recognizing and removing the impediments — both real and imagined — which prevent many women from realizing their full potential."

Caryl S. Bernstein, executive vice president, general counsel and secretary, Federal National Mortgage Association, said, "The challenge for management and for society is dual: to encourage women to use their talents to the fullest and to create an environment in which women can succeed without having to forego parenting"

Dawn Mello, president, Bergdorf Goodman, said, "When the subject of working women is no longer a burning issue, corporate management will have met the most significant challenge of a modern work force."

Pamela Suzanne Davis Is Bride Of Lynn R. Barber

MRS. BARBER

GOLDSBORO — Pamela Suzanne Davis became the bride of Lynn Russell Barber Saturday at 3 p.m. at the Clingman Street Church of God. The Rev. Kenneth R. Boyd officiated at the double ring ceremony.

A program of wedding music was presented by Keith Mozingo, organist, and Dwight Myers and Beverly Phillips, vocalists. A trumpet duet was rendered by Pamela Mason and Obie Godley.

Dr. and Mrs. Donald Fales Davis of Route 10, Goldsboro, are parents of the bride. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn E. Barber of Route 10, Goldsboro.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white formal gown of silkened organza and reembroidered alencon lace over peau de soie. The fitted lace bodice, encrusted with bridal pearls, was fashioned with a ruffled scoop neckline edged with alencon lace and satin ribbons. A double ruffle flounce, also trimmed with satin ribbons, bordered the short pouf sleeves and full skirt which flowed into a chapel train. Alencon lace flowerettes were appliqued on the organza sleeves and along the ruffles of the skirt. Overlaid with silk Venise lace, her bridal hat featured a side-rolled brim and a silk illusion face veil and pouf which extended to a fingertip veil in the back. She carried a cascade of silk roses.

Angela Jeanne Allen, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Donna Leigh Davis, sister of the bride, Beverly Phillips and Sharon Barber, sisters of the bridegroom; Judy Anne DeVault, cousin of the bride, and Pamela Mason.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Greg Phillips, brother-in law of the bridegroom; Fredrick Allen, brother-in-law of the bride, Ricky Davis, Jeff Deans and Eddie Rhodes.

The director of the wedding was Frances Deans.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside at Route 2, Goldsboro.

The bride is a 1977 graduate of Eastern Wayne High School. She graduated from Pitt Technical Institute and is currently attending East Caroling University. She is employed at Burroughs Wellcome Co. in Greenville.

The bridegroom, a teacher and coach at Rosewood School, graduated from Eastern Wayne High School and East Carolina University.

Immediately following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall. The wedding cake was served by Lynette Cooley. Bobbie Jean DeVault, aunt of the bride, poured punch.

Music was provided by Keith Mozingo.

The parents of the bridegroom were hosts for the after-rehearsal dinner on Friday night at Jennings Restaurant.

Angela Jeanne Allen was hostess for a bridesmaids luncheon. Several showers were given for the couple prior to the ceremony.

On The Young Side

(Editor's Note: Elizabeth Ellen is the guest columnist.)

Superior ratings in both prepared program and sight reading competitions crowned the efforts of the Rose High Symphonic Band Thursday. Rose had the only double superior score at the N.C. High School Music Contest Festival in Rocky Mount.

Other artistic endeavors were rewarded last weekend at the N.C. Federation Women's Club state arts festival held in Winston-Salem. Carol Ambert won first place in the drama division. Pianist Philippe Aronson and violinist Carol Moore each captured third place in their respective categories of the music competition.

Parrott Academy was the site of a literary contest sponsored by the state-wide Dickens Disciples Club. This year's chosen novel "A Tale of Two Cities," served as the basis for interpretive reading and essay competitions. Charles Moore and Emanuel Wadel wrote essays on the topic of good and evil characters in the novel. Clay Deanhardt gave an oral interpretation. Advancement to the state contest will be announced within the next few weeks.

The newly-formed Debate Team traveled to High Point this weekend for their first taste of competition. Todd Boler, Derek Dickens, Marjorie Jones and Joe Rhea participated in the extemporaneous category of the state-wide contest while Bill Messick delivered a prepared oration.

Hugs, Kind Words Boost Children's Self-Esteem

PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

Parents generous with hugs and kinds words help their children keep a guard up against narcotics addiction and maybe even teenage pregnancy, a National PTA report on self-esteem suggests.

Hugs and encouragement work magic by reinforcing kids' self-esteem, says Elaine Stienkemeyer, PTA president.

"Psychologists tell us that problems such as drug and alcohol abuse and adolescent pregnancy are rooted in a lack of self-esteem," she said.

"People who do not believe in their self-worth often behave in ways that are not in their best interests."

Experts say that persons with high self-esteem feel good about themselves, trust themselves and others, get along in the family, do not exploit others, form relationships that are mutually valuable, and care about others.

Mrs. Stienkemeyer said such qualities have their foundation in childhood.

"As a result, parents, teachers and even interested adults can foster good feelings in children by responding to them in positive ways.

"How often do we tell a child, 'Good job,' or hug them when they have done something we are proud of or just to show them we care?"

Other tips on ways to help boost a child's self-esteem come from Dr. Thomas Coleman, a fellow of the American Academy of Pediatrics. They include:

—Level with kids. Don't talk down. Put yourself at eye level with a child. It makes the child feel equal.

—Let kids in on decision making. For example: "Do you want liquid medicine or tablets?" That gives them participation in a health care decision and lessens their feelings of powerlessness.

—Use rules in child raising. Rules help people get along with each other, and foster good feelings. Make rules during calm times and let the child participate.

—Level with the kids about your childhood. Children need to know their parents had trouble learning, too. Telling them so shows you understand.

Parents need to feel valued and self-confident, too, before they can help their children develop self-esteem, the PTA report said.

Planning memorable activities with your children also helps develop their self-esteem. Samples: help your child make a scrapbook of a trip or something he or she enjoys; help the child plan, plant and be responsible for his or her own space in the gardening patch or in several pots on a windowsill.

A never-fail way of boosting pint-sized self esteem: Mount their original, colorful and sometimes mysterious paintings and drawings on cupboard and refrigerator doors or on walls around the house.

If you've got a Picasso-in-the-rough under the roof you're in luck.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Sometimes I yearn for the good old days when cars were black, shirts were white and ice cream was either chocolate or vanilla.

No pressures. No decisions. No anxieties. Is it any wonder everyone is falling apart these days? We're drowning in choices.

Do you want your bathroom to smell like a pine forest or a day at the gym? Pick a scent. Potatoes, rice, or stuffing? Make a choice. First class, economy, coach, business, or a folding chair on the wing? Smoking or nonsmoking? Window or aisle?

When I ate out, I used to be able to place my order in a couple of sentences. Now I have a dialogue with the waiter that lasts longer than most marriages.

"How do you want your steak? Rare? Medium rare? Medium? Medium well? well? Burnt beyond recognition? What do you want on your salad? Thousand Island? Vinegar and oil? Roquefort? Blue cheese? House? We have Brussels sprouts, buttered peas, limas and asparagus for a vegetable. How do you want your potatoes? French fried? Home fries? Baked? What do you want on your baked potato? Butter, chives? Sour cream? Bacon bits?"

And if you've ever made a decieion lately on what phone to buy, you know you could make a profession out of it. The decision to have your phone rest on the table or hang from a wall was just the beginning. Next came what color do you want resting on the table or hanging on a wall. This was followed by all kinds of options. Do you want a cord on it? Do you want it to dial a number for you? One line or six? A hold button? Do you want one in the car? With or without a cord? How about a privacy release button? A receiver in Kermit the Frog's mouth? A button for conference calls? An extra-long cord that will follow you to the shopping center? A ring that plays the theme from "Dr. Zhivago"?

Television for me used to be an antidote for a life-threatening day. I'd prop myself up in front of the set like a lump and try one of three channels.

No more.

Every night I have to decide what I want to watch: a 24-hour mini-series called "Sleaze" . . . a documentary on how scorpions mate . . . the Yugloslavian Battery Jumping team vs. the Polish team . . . Convent Bloopers . . . Your Car's Horoscope . . . Sibling Face-off . . . the city council of Gary, Ind., in session . . . a weather feature tracking a cold front . . . Michael Jackson riveting himself into the floor . . . a spleen traneplant . . . watching celebrities floss for dollars or any one of 300 shows being offered.

All my husband asked last night was, "Which one do you want to watch?" I fell apart.

Gifted Students Flock To Weekend Classes

By JOHN NOLAN
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Joanne Gerson's weekend classes for gifted students grew out of her desire as a mother to find educational advancement for her two youngsters.

In two years, her program has grown to attract the support of the University of Cincinnati and the city's public schools, and student enrollment has swelled to 250 or more per quarterly session.

Youngsters from ages 5 to 15 are learning about rocketry, computer programming, creative thinking, drawing, foreign languages and other topics in Saturday sessions.

Mrs. Gerson, who began the program in January 1982 in her living room, now serves as program coordinator for an endeavor offered on Saturdays and some weeknights through the University of Cincinnati's office of continuing education.

In the 1983 fall session, the program enrolled a record 279 youngsters.

"My feeling about the classes is they have to be spectacular," she said. "They hafe to be something you can't get in the classroom. The teacher wouldn't have time to teach them. You go into depth, because the children have the talent to do it."

Mrs. Gerson taught art for four years before she took time out to have children. She got her initial exposure to supplemental classes for the young when she took her offspring to Children's Museum in Indianapolis, where her family lived before moving to Cincinnati.

She said she had found no comparable programs in Cincinnati for her children, so she teamed with the Cincinnati Zoo to offer "Kinder-Zoo," a program about animals for children age 3 to 5.

When her children graduated from Kinder-Zoo, she was in the market for other supplemental classes, but found none that fit the bill. She approached education administrators at the University of Cincinnati, got support from a non-profit group called the Ohio Valley Association for Talented and Gifted and wrote letters to learn about gifted-student classes offered elsewhere.

Other volunteers joined with Mrs. Gerson to draft a proposal for the program and submit it to Hendrik Gideonse, dean of UC's College of Education. University officials agreed initially to support it as a pilot program, but they had reservations about whether the program would locate enough children by restricting eligibility to gifted students.

"The feeling was, 'How are you going to attract enough kids who are just gifted?' They liked the idea, but they weren't going to sacrifice any of their people," Mrs. Gerson said. "Not only that, but we were starting with no money."

With volunteer help, she distributed brochures in December 1981 to advertise the program and started it in her living room. She got a lively response, filling the 70 spots allocated for students and rolling up a waiting list of 150.

Last session, the waiting list was whittled to 25, along with the record enrollment of 279. The program has enrolled about 1,100 youngsters in its existence, and Mrs. Gerson hopes to begin offering summer classes to meet the demand.

The university now provides a full-time, paid staff to assist Mrs. Gerson, who doesn't teach but assigns instructors to each class. The program has about 20 teachers, all paid, to teach approximately 25 classes in the upcoming quarter, she said.

Youngsters admitted to the program must satisfy at least one of three requirements. They must have an IQ of 120 or more, or an achievement test score that places them in at least the 92nd percentile in either verbal or math categories, or be highly creative.

"Some children are highly creative," she said. "That's not testable, but that's a very important ability."

A young student of rocketry, for instance, begins by studying why an air-filled balloon is propelled across the room when released. The student then moves on to studying rocket propulsion and some basics of rocket engine design.

"By the time those classes are finished, they have a very advanced understanding of how rockets work," Mrs. Gerson said.

"The whole stress in gifted education is that these children have very capable minds. They are very quick at absorbing information," she said. "They can be leaders in the future. What they need is not more knowledge, but more solutions to the knowledge they have, how to synthesize their information. These classes stress thinking on a higher level."

The program draws participants from as far away as Aurora, Ind., Maysville, Ky., and Georgetown, Ohio. Although the parents bring their children to the classes, Mrs. Gerson said she insisted that the children come of their own will, not at their parents' urging.

"What amazes me is that the children come when they could be watching cartoons," she said. "They've been in school all week, and they want more."

LOSE WEIGHT EVEN AS YOU SLEEP
THE 24 HOUR DIET PLAN PACK
Losing weight has never been easier, faster, more healthful, or more certain.
The GNC Research Staff had a difficult assignment...to develop a weight loss program that puts its demands on science rather than human will power. They screened all the most effective plans and aids now known, and combined the best of the best. Although nobody expected a miracle, a lot of people are describing this three-part program as just that.
1. Glucomannan helps you shed an average one-half to one pound a day. Two Glucomannan capsules taken ½ hour before meals with an 8 oz. glass of water form a natural high fiber gel that reduces amounts of food you need to feel full, and also provides the bulk your system needs for passing more calories undigested out of the body.
2. Amino FB burns away fat while you sleep. These amino acid tablets taken before bedtime have been known to stimulate the production of growth hormones which direct your system to burn fat for energy instead of protein or carbohydrates—a reversal of the usual process. This action is continuously effective, even during sleep.
3. Preventron assures healthful nutritional balance. This high potency vitamin and mineral supplement delivers the all important nutritional requirements your body needs to look your best, feel your best and work your best.
Absolute Guarantee We unconditionally guarantee that the 24 Hour Diet Plan Pack will help you lose 5 pounds in ten days or your full purchase price will be refunded.
The 24 Hour Diet Plan Pack contains directions and a 2 week supply of products that together make weight control a physical science, not a challenge for your willpower.

Effect Of Morning Snack Tested On School Kids

MADERA, Calif. (AP) — Officials aren't sure whether a mid-morning snack of nuts and raisins makes Madera elementary school children smarter, but it does seem to make them nicer.

The district gave mid-morning snacks of donated raisins and nuts to 200 students during the 1982-83 school year and compared them with 200 students who didn't get the treats.

The study was based on theories of pediatrician Lendon Smith that children who eat sugar-based breakfasts have high blood sugar levels at the start of the school day, which dissipate by mid-morning.

Called "Project Nibble," the Madera study involved students in grades two through six.

Results reported to trustees recently showed "no significant differences" in mathematics learning between the two groups. However, it was noted that 20 percent of the youngsters didn't have math lessons immediately after the snack.

Scores on the California Test of Basic Skills showed that math achievement improved in four of the five grade levels but not by enough that the gains couldn't be credited to chance.

However, primary-level children who ate the nuts and raisins developed "significantly better attitudes" than the non-snack group, said the report prepared by Superintendent Duane Furman and Howard School Principal Pamala Noli.

"The intervention of a mid-morning snack of nuts and raisins does have a positive effect on the attitudes of primary students, particularly as those attitudes relate to their teachers and school in general," they added.

They weren't sure whether attitudes of fourth- through sixth-graders improved as much.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

Reader's Letter Speaks For Many

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for helping to get the Living Will legalized in Georgia. It's long overdue.

I stood by helplessly and had to watch my terminally ill mother suffer for months when she begged to die. She was in her 90s and had always been such a proud and independent woman. How I wished I could have disconnected all those machines that kept her alive long after her life held any meaning.

Yesterday I went into an antique shop and asked the owner if I could come in and browse. She said, "Please come back later — we are just about to take Fifi to the vet to be put to sleep." In her arms she held a beautiful little white poodle with a bright pink ribbon in her hair. Her nails were painted matching pink.

The woman said, "Fifi is very old. She's incontinent, lame and nearly blind. The vet said she should be put out of her misery." (Lucky dog!)

Abby, I agree with you. We all have a right to die with dignity. I for one will never go to a nursing home where people are alive but not living. I don't want my grown children to say, "You go see Mama this Sunday. I went last week.

RUTH IN ATLANTA

DEAR RUTH: Well said, dear lady. My warm thanks for a letter that speaks for many.

DEAR ABBY: My mother and I are having an argument about "affairs," and we hope you can settle it.

I am over 21 and have a gentleman friend with whom I've been going for some time. I told my mother that he and I had been intimate, and she insists that I am having an "affair." I say I am not — that one of the parties must be married in order to call it an "affair."

Please clear this up for me.

PERPLEXED IN WESTERLY, R.I.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Would you believe Webster? He defines an "affair" as "a romantic or passionate attachment typically of limited duration." In other words, it's just a passing "glandshake."

DEAR ABBY: Can you help me? I don't know who has the problem — my husband or me. He is 65 and retired. I am 63.

He has two beers every day with his lunch, then he takes a nap. Before dinner (on an empty stomach) he pours himself two or three 4-ounce vodkas on the rocks. He has three to five 8-ounce glasses of wine with his dinner. Socially he drinks more. At a recent party here, he drank three 3-ounce glasses of vodka in 4 1/2 hours. (He said he didn't think he was overdoing it.) Before we go out for a social evening he has one or two "quick ones" — usually vodka on the rocks.

He sleeps between 10 and 12 hours a day. We have no sex life. He's getting what I call "spacey." His mind is slow, but he says I can't explain things very well. Also, his memory is poor. We can have two conversations on a subject and he can't even rememver talking about it.

Thank you for your time.

HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Your husband is an alcoholic, and if you care about him (and I assume you do or you wouldn't have written), your problem is him. No one can help your husband unless he (a) admits he has a problem, and (b) wants to do something about it. Help is as near as your telephone, and the number to dial is Alcoholics Anonymous, but your husband must dial it. If he refuses, I hope you will call Al-Anon, and learn how to live with an alcoholic husband and possibly persuade him to seek help for himself. I wish you both well.

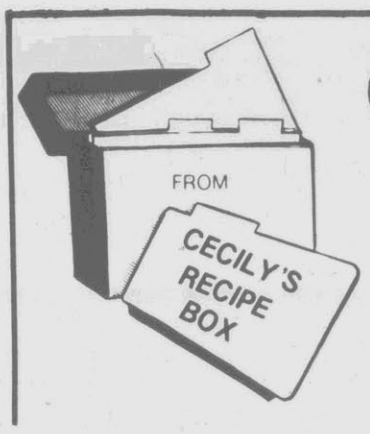
Cooking Is Fun



By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Some years ago a home economist friend of mine developed an easy method for making marshmallows at home. She used an electric mixer for the long beating needed for this candy.

When recently we tried the electric mixer method, we had an amusing idea. Why not cut the pan of marshmallow into Easter shapes, using metal chick and bunny shape cookie cutters? Then we decorated the marshmallow chicks and bunnies appropriately with colored Decorators' Frosting. We hope, if you try this Easter sweet, it will be as popular at your house as it was at ours.

MARSHMALLOW CHICKS AND BUNNIES

½ cup cold water
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
½ cup sugar
1 cup light corn syrup
1½ teaspoons vanilla
Confectioners' sugar
Decorators' Frosting, recipe follows

Line the bottom of a 13 by 9 by 2-inch (across the top) baking pan with wax paper. Lightly grease paper.

Pour the water into a 2-quart saucepan. Sprinkle the gelatin over the water and let stand to soften — about 5 minutes. Stir constantly over low heat until the gelatin dissolves — about 3 minutes. Add the sugar and corn syrup; stirring constantly, cook until the sugar is dissolved — about 1 minute. Off heat, stir in the vanilla.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, at high speed, beat the gelatin mixture until it thickens and is a soft marshmallow consistency — about 5 minutes. Turn into the prepared pan. With a lightly buttered spatula, spread evenly. Let stand, uncovered, at room temperature to dry for 8 to 12 hours.

Heavily dust a cutting board with confectioners' sugar. Turn out marshmallow mixture onto it. Carefully peel off wax paper.

Grease 2-inch metal bunny and chick cookie cutters — do not use plastic cutters. Leaving ¼-inch between each, cut out shapes. Dust top and sides of shapes with confectioners' sugar.

Fit a pastry bag with a plain decorating tip (No. 3). Fill the bag one-half full with Decorators' Frosting. Pipe along top outer edges, outlining chicks with yellow and bunnies with pink frosting. Use blue for eyes. Let dry at least 5 minutes. Wrap separately in wax paper or saran and store in a tightly covered container.

Makes about 18.

DECORATORS' FROSTING: In the small bowl of the electric mixer stir together 1½ cups confectioners' sugar, 1 large egg white and ⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar. At high speed, beat for 8 minutes. Keep frosting covered with a damp paper towel. Place about 1-3rd of the Frosting in each of 3 small bowls. Stir in several drops of food color until blended — yellow in one bowl, blue in another bowl and pink in the remaining bowl. There may be some leftover frosting which you can use to decorate sugar cookies cut in Easter shapes or on vanilla wafers.

Japanese Keep Warm Without Using Central Heat System

By SALLY SOLO
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Winter lasts from December through February in Japan, with temperatures dropping in some areas to as low as 16 F outside — and inside.

But central heating is not a common way of life here, and running from bath to bedroom to fetch a hairdryer may be considered an act of courage. Most people enter their homes and keep their coats on until their gas or electric heaters are turned on and have taken off the room's chill.

Space heaters, in various shapes and sizes, are the most common of modern gadgets, but they are only the tip of the iceberg. To cope with winter's cold, Japanese appliance manufacturers like Sanyo, Mitsubishi and Hitachi have learned to electrify just about everything. They have turned the act of keeping warm into an art.

Starting from the floor and moving up, electric carpets come in all sizes. Small, personal rugs are designed to keep feet warm under tables and desks, but there are also carpets large enough to heat part or all of a Japanese living room.

And if a plug-in, cleanable carpet is not enough, one can always step into some plug-in ankle boots. While not very light or flexible, the boots — usually blue or red and lined with cotton fluff — consume less electricity than the carpets. Advertisements say the latter cost about 5 yen (2 cents) per hour for the smallest to 20 yen (9 cents) per hour for the full-room model. An hour's time in the boots is said to cost less than 1 yen (.04 cents).

The bootie-wearer's mobility is limited by the length of the cord, but not so the wearer of "poka-poka (comfortably warm) pantelon." These quilted nylon leg warmers come long or short, and with a few snaps can be converted into pants or a skirt. One can move freely about, keeping warm to the waist.

Most daytime heating devices stop there — at the waist. Manufacturers say it's healthier to keep one's bottom warm and top cool. The concept can even be found in the Japanese dictionary under the one word, "zukansokunetsu."

Very much in the zukansokunetsu tradition is the "kotatsu," a low table with a heat source underneath, that has been a household fixture for generations of Japanese.

In the days before household electricity was common, individuals, families and friends gathered around the kotatsu in every Japanese home. Coals were placed in a well-like hole in the floor under the table, deep enough so that dangling feet would not touch the fire. A quilt extending out from the table on all sides covered the legs of those seated around the table. It kept the heat in and the lower body toasty, although one's back could become a bit frigid.

In the modern version of kotatsu, an infrared light is affixed to the underside of the removable table top, which fits snugly into place after the quilt is draped over the frame.

Kotatsu have not lost their popularity, despite the proliferation of newer alternatives for keeping warm. Rather, they have kept pace with the progress of Japanese technology. Today, kotatsu accessories — zabuton, or floor cushions, and legless chairs — also heat up at the flick of a switch.

Mitsubishi's "harmony hit," a semiconductor-powered kotatsu, is one of this season's most sought-after models, according to Yasuhiro Murakami, kotatsu salesman at a Kyoto branch of Japan's largest retail chain, Daiei. The table may be used all year, Murakami said, because the heater, built into the top of the table, is invisible. It also distributes heat more evenly than the infrared type, he said.

Despite turning on and off the myriad winter gadgets, Japanese still use far less energy than do Britons, French, West Germans, Swedes or Americans. Latest figures from the Energy Conservation Center, a nationwide organization formed by the Ministry of International Trade and Industry in 1979, show that Japanese families used 3.6 times less energy in 1979 than American families did the previous year.

During the same period, Americans used about 20,556 megacalories to heat their rooms — 780 percent more energy than the 2,778 megacalories the Japanese used for the same purpose.

While modern apartment buildings and business offices have central heat and air conditioning, foreigners are frequently puzzled by the absence of insulation and central heating that turns older types of Japanese homes into drafty barns in wintertime.

Central heating is not likely to become a part of the Japanese family's future very soon, according to Teruo Nakagawa of the energy center.

"Some places have it," he said, "but not many. And there don't seem to be trends in that direction. Japan imports so much of its energy, the Japanese have to have a strong 'save energy' consciousness."

Book News

BY HANSEY JONES

Young mystery lovers will welcome the addition of several intriguing new titles to the juvenile mystery collection.

For Encyclopedia Brown fans who have read all of the escapades of that young sleuth, it is time to move on to the McGurk mysteries. In the newly published "The Case of the Slingshot Sniper," (by E.W. Hildick), the McGurk Detective Organization is confronted with a very tricky case — one that has stumped even the police. For over a year, the windows of a rambling old house have been the periodic targets of a mystery attacker. Is it the work of a slingshot sniper? Or is it, as the owner believes, evil forces at work? Poltergeists, even? Adding to McGurk's problems is a creepy clairvoyant rival who so complicates the mystery that it takes the combined talents of all the McGurk detectives to solve it. Master sleuth McGurk and his intrepid assistants find this one of their most baffling cases yet, a spooky, suspenseful, sidesplitting adventure in the best McGurk tradition.

Fans of Patricia Reilly Giff's books about Casey Valentine and her friends will delilght in Abby Jones's triumphant return to the crime-solving scene in "Loretta P. Sweeny, Where Are You?" Wearing her I SOLVE CRIME T-shirt, the unsinkable Abby is on the lookout for a new crime to solve. She and her timid friend Potsie don't have far to go once Abby finds Loretta P. Sweeny's wallet with a frightening note inside. Is the mysterious Loretta P. really planning to kill someone on the Fourth of July? If so it's up to Abby and Potsie to find and warn the possible victim. This one is great fun and suspense for junior armchair detectives.

On a slightly more sophisticated note, "The Dollhouse Murders," (by Betty Ren Wright), offers some spine-tingling suspense. Each time Amy goes up to the attic in the middle of the night, the dollhouse is filled with a ghostly light and the dolls have moved from where she last left them. Even though she's terrified, she knows the dolls are trying to tell her something, but what? Could their movements be connected to the grisley murders that took place years before? In a chilling climax, Amy and her retarded sister unravel the mystery and liberate their aunt from a terrible burden of guilt. A good read for older mystery lovers.

A Review

Rememberance Of Things Loved In Poems

As Long As You're Not Cold. Poems by Hal J. Daniel, III. Injection Press, 1984. Paper.

(Note: This book will be available the week of All Fools' Day in the ECU Bookshop and in The Book Barn.)

I like the feel of this book in my hands. The choice of material and the workmanship are a step backward — to a time in which books were put together with love and care.

Hal Daniel, an ECU professor, cries with us, chortles with us, shares his anger with us in this, his first book of poetry. I must confess to a measure ofrespect for members of the scientific community who are willing to put themselves on the line and enter the capricious world of art and literature.

Yet a small but increasing number of medical doctors, scientists and other professionals are doing so, aware of the urgent need to disencumber themselves of a narrow vision in this country of what "science" and/or "professionalism" ought to be.

And, as if somehow he were Puck, Hal Daniel hovers over, perhaps even within, the very pages of this book, reminding us repeatedly that we mortals are fools — but at no time does he preclude himself from our numbers, and I like that. No posture of superiority here, no scientific elitism. He is human, with defects.

Several themes run through the book: The rememberance of loved persons (with a concurrent sense of loss). Reflections on the environment. Interactions with his students, and with his own teachers. A sense of anger when he dwells on our unthinking rape of nature.

He thinks of his son, removed from him by a divorce court:

I lost him.
Solomon was right,
you can't split a child down the middle
. . . . . .
Maybe he'll come to see me when he learns to drive.

and of a buddy, removed by a war:

The lasting impressions upon us he made came back as steel laughter
when he bellied our grenade.

One of the obligations of a poet, I think, is to help others to wend their ways on different paths:

I walk home alone,
throw a beer can through a nest of caterpillars
. . . . . .
I ride the can through the hole.

to see this world from a different perspective, through other experience, whether his own or that of fellow creatures:

Terrified ducks with blown ear drums perforate the sunset
as the boats whine by.

Ambivalence, depression, a sense of loss following separation from wife or lover, are explored by the poet:

Last night I wrote
I loved you and your oatmeal cookies;
tonight I write
I hate you but I still love your oatmeal cookies.

Space restrictions don't let me mention other good things in this book, but for those who opt for ownership of it, I recommend the father poem on page 15. Most poets sooner or late make a poem about their father and/or mother. This is one of the stronger father poems that I can recall having read. There is, in fact, a strong family sense in this book.

I must mention the cover. Edward Bellamy, in his "Looking Backward," likens society to a stagecoach moving forward, with great numbers of people trying to claw their way aboard while those already there fight to gain a more secure position. On the back cover of this book, a lone figure leans jauntily against a somehow familiar edifice. The Empire State Building, perhaps? Or closer to home, the Wilcar Executive Building right here in Greenville. Is it society itself? And the leaning figure — Puck?

An Armchair Thriller

THE AQUITAINE PROGRESSION. By Robert Ludlum. Random House. 647 Pages. $17.95.

In Robert Ludlum's latest novel, "The Aquitaine Progression," a New York lawyer who doesn't speak any foreign language is abruptly thrust into the middle of a deadly international intrigue. Can he survive some 650 pages of Ludlumian action and violence?

Not to worry. In the Vietnam War, Joel Converse was a topnotch flier, and though he was captured by the North Vietnamese, he managed to escape a POW camp by crawling through enemy jungle. He knows how to cope with hazards.

Converse is on business in Geneva when he is sought out by a former college classmate and told confidentially that a group of aging generals and field marshals of France, Germany, South Africa, England and Israel are plotting to build a "global Third Reich." They plan to seize power by creating worldwide unrest, thus making the public cry out for law and order.

The mastermind of this fascist scheme, code-named "Aquitaine," says the classmate, is George "Mad Marcus" Delavane, a retired U.S. army general with whom Converse had a few unpleasant brushes during the war. The classmate stumbled on their clandestine plot by accident while working as the general's legal representative.

Since the plotters are shipping weapons to rebels and dissidents illegally, the classmate says, a couple of lawsuits might discourage them from pursuing their silly but dangerous delusions. He wants Converse, a crack attorney, to take on the job, to be paid for by a "concerned citizen who insists on anonymity" and who is willing to pay up to a million dollars.

Converse is reluctant, but within a few hours the classmate dies in his arms, his body riddled with bullets fired by Aquitaine's assassins.

Ludlum knows how to thrill armchair adventurers, and this novel shows him in top form.

Spring 'Zoo Fling' At N. C. Zoo

ASHEBORO — Everything's coming up dogwoods — and redbuds and forsythia and crabapples — at the North Carolina Zoological Park near Asheboro.

That's the nature of the zoo in spring.

"Zoo Fling," a month-long April celebration, will be a garden party featuring the whole zoo — especially the plant life. On tap are plant tours of the zoo grounds and the R.J. Reynolds Forest Aviary, arts and crafts, storytelling, bluegrass music and other spring delights.

"At the zoo, the photo possiblities are endless," he says.

Every weekday during April, a member of the zoo's education staff will conduct a one-hour plant tour beginning at 1 p.m. in the zoo plaza. Tours will emphasize not only types of plants at the zoo, but how they are used to create the outdoor habitats and their contribution to the animals' well-being — from the pampas grass in the lion habitat to the willow oaks in the elephant and rhinoceros exhibits.

On weekends, aviary plant tours will be given every 20 minutes from 1 p.m.-2:30 p.m.

Raleigh storyteller Ron Jones will kick off "Zoo Fling's" special events on April 1. Jones, coordinator of children's services for the Wake County Public Library, will begin his story and song routine in the zoo amphitheater at 1 p.m., with another performance at 3 p.m.

Saturday, April 7, offers an aesthetic attraction for zoogoers — artists working in the plaza and at the animal habitats from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

There'll be woodcarvers galore — Hal and Sue McClure from Franklin, Bill Lemonds of Seagrove and Asheboro bird carver Linton Slack. Add to those artists members of the zoo design team: painters Mike Harney and Breck Smith, sculptor John Paul Harris and basketweaver Ellen Greer Auman.

On Sunday, April 15, learn everything you always wanted to know about photographing plants and animals with Burlington resident Lee Roane, a Technical College of Alamance photography instructor and marketing consultant with a Burlington camera shop.

One-hour photo sessions begin at 10 a.m. with a bird and plant class in the R.J. Reynolds Forest Aviary. At 1 p.m., Roane will lecture in the zoo amphitheater, then take the class to photograph blooming plants. At 3 p.m., visitors can catch monkeyshines at Baboon Island, while Roane tells how to get the best animal shot.

April will usher in the zoo's summer hours: 9 a.m.-5 p.m. weekdays and 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

Admission is $3 for adults and $1 for children 2-15 and senior citizens. Events and tours are free with admission. The tram, which takes visitors on a tour of Africa, is $1 a person for the day.

The North Carolina Zoological Park is located six miles southeast of Asheboro off U.S. 64. For information, call (919) 879-5606.

Greenville Museum Program In Schools

An educational program, "Museums in the Schools," offered free to schools in Greenville and Pitt County, is one of the public services of the Greenville Museum of Art. The program is operated by the museum's docents.

The docents, working in teams, visit individual fifth grade classrooms. They take with them one of the museum's Education Collections which includes examples of paintings, drawings, prints, sculpture, photographs and pottery by local and regional artists.

In their talks with students, docents explain the role of the Greenville Museum of Art, its significance in the community, and different ways in which visual art objects are created.

They encourage questions from students, and provide them with a "hands on" opportunity to explore art objects such as sculpture and ceramics. For many of the students, the program is their introduction to the museum world and professional art.

One of the primary goals of the program is to instill a desire on the part of young people to form the habit of visiting and enjoying museums. Another purpose is to reinforce the belief that the arts are for everyone, and that local museums should be used and enjoyed in the same manner as one uses and finds pleasure in their local librray.

Follow-up trips to the Greenville Museum of Art for a special tour are encouraged as are trips to the msueum with family and friends.

This is the third year this program has served city and county schools. It has received an enthusiastic response.

The "Museum in the Schools" program is coordinated by Corinne Sewall. Docents operating the program are: Eleanor Ruffin, Jill Camnitz, Mary Taylor Mosier, Joanne Honeycutt, Yvonne Deyton, Susie Williams, Lynda Blount, Marcy Byrd.

Also, Vicki Clement, Martha Coffman, Rae Daniel, Betsy Lewis, Anne Mattox, Sarah Sugg, Kay Sutton, Ruth Trevathan, Joan Van Scoy, Norma Van Veld, and Helen Weaver.

Funding for these activities are provided by the City of Greenville, Pitt County, the North Carolina Arts Council Grassroots Grant Program and GMA memberships.

'The Veriest Shrew' Printed On Poster

By Palmer Hill
N.C. Department
Of Cultural Resources

Called "the veriest shrew" and "a vain and worldly woman" by her enemies, she was nevertheless one of England's most powerful rulers.

Queen Elizabeth I has come to symbolize an age of adventure and pageantry, and this year North Carolina begins a celebration of its unique link with that era. As part of the celebration, a 1584 portrait of the queen is now being made available to the public in the form of a poster published by the Historical Publications Section of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources.

The poster is based on a miniature portrait of Queen Elizabeth I reproduced from the initial letter of the charter authorizing the foundation of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, England, in 1584. The miniature portrait is believed to have been painted by Nicholas Hilliard, a prominent portraitist of the Elizabethan era.

It was Queen Elizabeth I's devotion to sea power and exploration that inspired and financed the first English colonies in the new world, at what is today Roanoke Island, North Carolina.

The Roanoke Voyages, made 1584-1587, didn't result in permanent settlements because the colonists either died, returned to England or disappeared. But their efforts are being remembered all over North Carolina from this year until 1987 because they paved the way for an English America. The Roanoke settlements were forerunners of English colonies at Jamestown, Va., and Plymouth, Mass.

The 1584 portrait of Elizabeth is reproduced in black and white as the frontispiece in "Passage to America: Raleigh's Colonists Take Ship for Roanoke," by Helen Hill Miller, published by the Historical Publications Section in November, 1983.

The four-color poster measures 15 3/4 inches by 21 1/2 inches and is suitable for mounting or framing. It is available at $3 per copy, plus $1 for postage and handling, from the Department of Cultural Resources, Historical Publications Section, 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611, telephone (919) 733-7442.

Novelist Is Top Art Collector

By JO-ANNE BYRNE

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Lothar-Gunther Buchheim was 18 when he purchased his first work of art.

Buccheim is best known as the author of the popular German novel, "Das Boot", about a submarine trapped undersea. It was made into a film that was recently distributed widely in the United States.

A collector of extraordinary foresight and energy, Buchheim's exhibition covers the chaotic period of pre-and post-World War I Europe. All of the artists and their art were persecuted by the Nazis, Buccheim said on a visit here to see his collection hung.

The Nazis "swept them away, shaming the artists in the eyes of the people as degenerate or Jewish-influenced.

"There is not enough known what a government like that can do," he said. "Sometimes this could be a good warning."

The paintings cut across the human range of emotions — love, hate, humor, fear and despair. They are an expression of protest against social injustice and Victorian convention and an exploration of the soul and mind.

Works of Die Brucke (The Bridge), a group of painters who came together in 1905 in Dresden, form the core of the iexhibition.

The painters, Heckel, Ernst Kirchner, Mueller, Max Peckstein and Karl Schmidt-Rottluff, regarded life and art as one.

In experimenting with new means of expression, they revived printmaking as a major form of art and used graphics to build a bridge to society.

Watercolorist Emil Nolde, much older than the others, was encouraged to join the group in 1906. He introducted etching to Die Brucke. Others became members for a brief time.

Die Brucke moved to Berlin in 1911 and the artists began to go their separate ways, eventually dissolving the group in 1913. Waves of their influence filtered down the years.

The collection of more than 450 paintings, watercolors and woodcuts is insured for more than $18 million.

The collection is housed in the Wilhelm-Lehmbruck Museum in Duisberg, Germany. It is being circulated under the sponsorship of the Federal Republic of Germany.

Besides the Brucke artists, the exhibition includes works by members of a second group of German artists, Der Blaue Reiter (The Blue Rider). Franz Marc, one of the organizers of that group, which eventually absorbed Die Brucke, is represented, as are Lyonel Feininger and Alexej von Jawlensky, Dix, Oskar Kokoschka, Max Kaus, Max Beckmann and Conrad Felixmuller.

Buchheim is himself a painter, consummate photographer, former champion wrestler, and author of numerous art books as well as "Das Boot." Touring the gallery with the aid of a crutch as a result of a recent operation, he praised the institute for doing his show "with intelligence." "It's an adventure to see my pictures here on these walls," he said, adding that he because of his insatiable acquisitiveness there isn't room to hang them all in his home. As he put it, "In my house they have disappeared."

Buchheim, who has published comprehensive studies of Die Brucke, describes his collection as "explosive, dynamic, revolutionary art." But in the aftermath of World War II, the Expressionist painters still were not accepted in their own country, he said.

"There was a second persecution after the second war ended. Now it is a real triumph for all these painters." Finding the money to collect the art was not difficult at first for Buchheim. But now that Expressionist art sells for hundreds of thousands of dollars, "sometimes it can be a problem.

Buchheim described Kirchner as "the most important member of Die Brucke but the spiritual leadership belongs to Heckel."

Kirchner suffered a breakdown in 1915 and moved to Switzerland where he eventually became the most important painter of the Alps in this century. Buchheim said. Kirchner committed suicide in 1938 following Hitler's condemnation of 600 of his works.

Heckel, more gentle and balanced than Kirchner and Schmidt-Rottluff, is known for the compassion in his work. Mueller's central theme is the nude in nature, exemplified by his soft and quiet "Two Girls in the Sedge." Nolde, who had the distinction of being forbidden to paint by the Nazis, achieved unusual effects in watercolor by letting the colors run freely, as seen in his exquisite "Poppies."

Buchheim's own gallery in Frankfurt, Germany was the first to display Paul Klee in 1950, as well as Braque and Picasso.

During a 4½-year stint as a correspondent in World War II, Buchheim took some of the best photographs of submarine warfare ever seen, said Dr. Siegfried Salzmann of the Duisberg museum. "Das Boot" resulted from his war experiences.

Blackbeard Auditions

BATH — Playwright-director Stuart Aronson has announced the date for the first open auditions for the summer 1984 production of his outdoor drama, "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag."

The auditions will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday at the amphitheater in Bath. A number of singers, dancers and actors are needed, male and female. One role is open for a ten-year boy.

Performers should be physically agile, particularly the males, some of whom will be involved in pirate fights.

Rehearsals will get underway the first week in June. The production is scheduled to open June 28, with three performances weekly on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings.

Aronson says the run of the play this year will be longer than in any previous season, ending Saturday, Sept. 1.

As in the past, arrangements will be made for cast members from Greenville who may wish to pool rides to and from Bath for rehearsal and for performances.

Selections she has listed for her program are works by composers Handel, Brahms, Wolf, Massenet, Pinkham, and Poulenc.

Foreign Films Nominated

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Every year, the filmmaking countries of the world submit their best movie product to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for consideration as best foreign language film.

This year, 26 countries participated, with each country allowed only one entry. Only feature-length films with non-English sound tracks can be submitted in this category.

Films entered in the foreign language category may also qualify for other Oscars, but not the best picture of the year award or the best documentary feature award.

Here are capsule reviews of the 56th annual Academy Award nominees for best foreign language film:

"CARMEN" (Spain) is a brand-new version of the Prosper Merimee saga, incorporating Spanish ballet and flamenco, as well as the Bizet opera music. Antonio (Antonio Gades) seeks a young dancer to star in his stage production of "Carmen" and finds the fiery Laura del Sol. Their violent relationship parallels the Merimee plot. The director is Spain's most famous contemporary filmmaker, Carlos Saura.

"ENTRE NOUS" (France) depicts the friendship of two women, Miou Miou and Isabelle Huppert, who endure tragedy during the Occupation and meet 10 years later when both are suffering unhappy marriages. They decide to leave their husbands and go away together. The director-writer, Diane Kurys, ("Peppermint Soda"), says the film was not a feminist tract but an attempt to understand the divorce of her parents.

"FANNY & ALEXANDER" (Sweden) follows the lives of a large, intensely human Swedish theatrical family, as seen through the eyes of a precocious boy (Bertil Guve). A large, richly textured movie, it has been hailed as one of Ingmar Bergman's finest films. He has said it will be his last. It received six Academy Award nominations this year.

"JOB'S REVOLT" (Hungary) lists Imre Gyongyossy and Barna Kabay as its directors and writers. It tells of a childless, elderly Jewish couple who adopt a Christian boy to try to leave their legacy. The boy shows little interest in their ways but is gradually won over before his adoptive parents are taken away by the Nazis.

"LE BAL" (Algeria), directed by Ettore Scola, traces the mores and manners of society, as depicted by the dances that have been popular over the past half-century. There is a large French-Algerian cast that speaks no dialogue.

RUGGED SURVIVORS . . . These two farm mules, nibbling on growth in the mule lot before their stable, are rugged survivors. Like all mules, they can get by on cheaper, coarser foods than a horse. "A mule will live on what a horse will die on," declares Willie Nelson of near Greenville, one of the last mule dealers in eastern North Carolina. Once numbering an all-time population high of about 300,000 in North Carolina in 1940, the Tar Heel population of the old farm reliable currently numbers less than 5,000. However, there are indications that the number of mules is on the rise again, including a smaller breed resulting from crossing a donkeys with Shetland pony mares instead of a mare horse.

Text And Photographs By Jill Adams

Mules — Are They Creatures Of The Past?

(Editor's Note: Ms. Adams, of Merry Hill in Bertie County, is a freelance writer who has contributed extensively to newspapers in Virginia and North Carolina.)

Mules. They used to be everywhere. Each farm had a barn full of them, and each town, no matter how small, had at least one livery stable that boarded and sold the beasts of burden.

But no more.

"Mules are soon going to be a thing of the past," predicted one of the few remaining mule traders of the South, Willie Nelson of Greenville.

Nelson, who has sold and rented thousands of mules since he started trading in 1952, remembers when almost every farm had mules, the sturdy, sterile offspring of a mare (female horse) and a jackass (male donkey). He partially farmed his own 75 cleared acres with four mules until 1980, trading work and a peanut allotment with a tractor-owning neighbor who broke Nelson's land and planted his corn. Even though he owns a tractor himself now, Nelson still uses mules to plow his tobacco, soybeans, garden vegetables, and to pull the carts that carry his tobacco from the fields.

But Nelson, even by his own admission, is a rare exception.

4.5 Million In 1910.

There were over 1 million mules in the United States in 1860, and over half of them were in the South. By 1910, the national mule population had grown to about 4.5 million, and North Carolina had about 183,000.

With the appearance of the tractor in the 1920s, the number of mules in the United States began to decrease, although North Carolina's population increased until about 1940, when there were almost 300,000 in the state. But by 1960, most of the state's farmers had recovered from the effects of the Depression and were enjoying a national economy boosted by World War II. The number of tractors in North Carolina had increased tenfold from 1940, and the number of mules had been cut almost in half with only about 170,000 of them remaining.

Mules were used on farms to pull wood and iron implements for breaking land, plowing, planting, cultivating and some harvesting. They were also the main mode of transportation for many families until the 1940s, pulling a cart that took the family to town on Saturday and to church on Sunday. That same cart may have taken cured tobacco to be sold at a warehouse, where there was a stable underneath to provide shelter and shade for the mule while the farmer observed the sale.

Mules were also logwoods workers. Mules that pulled logs were generally larger than farm mules, although many farmers who had large farm mules used them for logging also. "A little fellow couldn't do that logwoods work," recalls 89-year-old Charlie Cobb, a former mule trader from Bertie County. "You had to have the big ol' thing."

Mules Preferred

Mules, rather than horses, were used on farms and in forests because they are generally stronger and tougher, although they are not necessarily larger than horses. Compared to horses, they are not as prone to overeat, overdrink, or experiencing digestive problems, and they will survive on cheaper, courser foods. "A mule will live on what a horse will die on," Nelson insists.

Perhaps the biggest endorsement of mules as work animals is their temperament. Horses are often high strung and nervous, but mules seldom are. The calm animals will accept hard work, poor handling and abuse more readily than horses.

Many farmers preferred jenny (female) mules to jacks (males) because they are calmer and not as given to mischief. "A jenny would let you trim her hooves most any time, but a jack would give you the devil if you got near him. The jennies just didn't have the meanness that the old jacks did," recalls Max Adams, a 55-year-old Bertie County farmer who grew up working with mules.

Mules were usually 3 years old before they started their lifetimes of work, and they most often were trained while working. "I used to start out in the spring with a pair of 3-year-olds working behind a plow, and by the time I was ready to truck tobacco (in mid-July), they could do almost anything," Nelson says.

Hollering Whoa!

A common method and one that Nelson has often used is to pair a young mule with an older one that is already broken. Many mules can be trained to respond to voice commands, stopping when they hear the familiar "Whoa, mule!" and starting when the master says, "Go on, now."

"Lord, that's all we used to hear around here in the summer," recalls Nelson's assistant, Melvin Atkinson. "Folks would be hollerin' 'Whoa, mule; go on, mule; whoa, mule; go on, mule.'"

Since the 1930s, however, it has been increasingly difficult to find a farm that echoes with those calls.

"When the tractor came along, it slam put me out of business," says Cobb, who was a mule dealer until after World War I. "Folks wanted tractors so bad, they would just about give me mules."

But many farmers, especially the smaller ones who were also the poorer ones, held on to their mules even after the advent of tractors. And when many of those smaller farmers did get tractors, they kept the mules to do more tedious jobs like plowing tobacco and gardens. This is evidenced by the fact that Nelson didn't even go into the mule business until 1952.

Amish Are Buyers

Much of his trade has always gone to the Amish people of Pennsylvania who don't use machinery. In 1967, he estimates that he sold over 200 mules to them.

The Amish market still demands mules, but the animals aren't around for Nelson to supply them. "The last year I sold any mules to amount to anything was in 1974, and then I had to go slam to Missouri to get them," the small, soft-spoken man recalls.

Until 1975, he rented out 100 mules per farming season, with some farmers getting as many as 20 mules. Most of these animals were used to truck tobacco out of the fields in Pitt and Greene counties.

Sentimentalists

But since then, just about the last of the mule-using tobacco farmers have either died or converted to tractors, which for every 40 horsepower can do the work of four mules. A few farmers, like Dock Taylor of Williamston, held onto their mules for sentimental reasons even after they purchased tractors. Taylor kept his two jennies, Rhodie and Lizzie, near his house until they died, allowing them to live the last 20 years of their lives in relative leisure. "Rhodie died just five years ago. Both of them lived to be about 40, and I sure did hate to see them go," he remembers.

There are a lot of people like Taylor who hated to see the mule go, but realized it was leaving in the name of progress.

Today, there are between 3,000 and 5,000 in the state, and the national population is down to about 1 million. Nelson only has seven in his barn that used to hold 100.

"They just aren't breeding them anymore," he says. "Most all the folks in the mule business are either retired, quit or dead, and the places that used to breed them have gone to cattle or horses.

"I used to think that mules might come back if we were to have a sure enough depression and folks couldn't buy gas or equipment. But if that were to happen now and folks were to really need mules, there wouldn't be enough to go around."

Will mules become a thing of the past like Nelson predicts?

Number Is Rising

Actually, the number of mules in the state is rising, according to Ed Temple of Benson, who says that there is a renewed interest in breeding mules, although the product of this breeding is not the large farm and logwoods mule. "People are breeding jack donkeys to Shetland pony mares and getting a smaller mule," he explains, and adds, "These aren't working mules, of course. This is done just for a hobby."

Temple has some familiarity with the goings-on of mules, for he has worked with the Benson Mules Days Festival for 12 years. The festival, which started in 1950, honors and appreciates the mule as well as trying to educate the public about the contributions of the work animals. Temple explains: "This thing was started by a few men who saw that the mule was fast being replaced by the tractor. They realized the contributions of the mule and wanted to pay homage to that dumb old creature who's not so dumb after all.

"Without that old mule, this country wouldn't be what it is today," Temple avows.

An America's 400th Anniversary Article

AS IN DAYS OF THE RECENT PAST . . . Willie Nelson is shown standing in a standard single-mule cart of the type that took many a farm family to town on Saturday, to church on Sunday. A mule and cart was an expedient combination for use in a variety of farm work during weekdays in all seasons of the year.

PORTRAIT OF A YOUNG MULE . . . This five-year old mule, a resident of Willie Nelson's stables near Greenville, is very trusting and affectionate. Mules are generally calmer than horses, which are their mothers. Donkeys are the fathers. A mule is sterile and cannot reproduce.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. I sometimes do woodworking where it is necessary to use bits of dowels to hold pieces of wood together. I am somewhat new at this kind of work and occasionally find that one of the holes I have drilled is not precisely straight. Is there some way to be certain I have drilled a hole exactly straight so the dowel fits perfectly into both pieces of wood.

A. While you can make a homemade jig that will enable you to do this, it is better to buy a regular doweling jig. You will never again have trouble with guiding the bit.

Q. To settle an argument, why do all plumbing drains always have water in them?

A. For several reasons, the most important of which is that this prevents the passage of gases and odors. The subject is a lot more complex than that, but the details are unnecessary unless you are going into plumbing in a professional way.

Q. I have been having some flooding at my house recently because of heavy rains and have been told there is no drain tile around the bottom of the house to carry away the water. I was told it should have been done when the house was built years ago, but apparently was not. What I don't understand is how tile can solve the problem instead of pipe. Can you enlighten me?

A. While the material is popularly called tile, it is actually a form of pipe except that it has perforations in the top of it. The rain enters the holes and then runs through the pipe, usually to a dry well. If you plan on doing the job yourself, be sure the dealer gives you detailed instructions on how to lay it with a slight slope. Sometimes, on certain types of sloping property, you can get by without the dry well.

Q. We have some fake wood beams in the family room in our house, which is a converted large barn. We painted the beams, but some stains are now showing through. What is the solution?

A. First, find out where the stains are coming from and eliminate the cause, otherwise you'll have the same trouble all over again at a later time. Once that has been done, cover the stained areas with clear shellac or aluminum paint. Wait about a week, then lightly sand off any gloss, being sure not to sand off the shellac or aluminum. Wipe carefully, then repaint the beams with your choice of color. Two coats would be preferable.

Q. Can I use common brick for a driveway wall or will it cause too many problems?

A. Yes, it wil do well. It is less expensive than regular brick and, if installed professionally, shouldn't cause any problems. You may find, however, you can't get them all of the same color or type, but this is no big disadvantage.

Q. We have a stained table and wish to paint it white to match the decor in the room. Will the stain bleed through?

A. First, coat with aluminum paint or diluted shellac.

Q. — We have a problem with occasional mildew in a clothes closet. A handyman we sometimes employ says it needs more ventilation. Among his suggestions is that we replace the present solid door with a louvered door. We can understand how this will allow air into the closet, but won't it also allow dust in?

A. — Yes, but the amount will be so small it will be a good tradeoff. Getting in the air is more important if you are to have a chance of eliminating the mildew. However, a louvered door alone will not work wonders if the condition is severe. Your helper obviously realizes this, which is why he has made other suggestions.

Q. — Our house is very old and has wood shingles on the roof. Now we want to put on a new roof, using asphalt shingles. Can they be applied directly over the wood shingles?

A. — Yes, if a considerable amount of preparatory work is done. Loose or protruding nails must be removed and new ones put in. If there are any loose shingles, they will have to be renailed. One of the things that often occurs with old wooden shingles is that they curl up and turn at the butts. If this is the case on your roof, you can provide a smooth surface for the new shingles and a solid nailing base by installing a feathering strip nailed along the butt edges.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, bleach, stain, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

No. 22000 — The Gastonne
French Provincial Spotlights Family Room

By Jerry Bishop

Traditional elegance marks the exterior of the Gastonne, a three bedroom design, while the floor plan revolves around family living. Besides the centrally-placed family room, the plan also calls for an 18-ft. gameroom, patio and family dining nook.

With the U-shape and hip roof, the design is true to its French Provincial motif. Tall, small-paned windows and ornate entry door add interest to the appealing facade. Inside, the arrangement takes into account family needs.

Entry is into a small foyer with direct access to the family room.

Q. What are some recommended varieties of broccoli for North Carolina? (R.G., Brasstown)

A. Green Comet, DeCicco, Bravo and Green Duke do well throughout North Carolina.

Q. What is a good mulch to use around roses? (I.E., Archdale)

A. Pine bark, pine needles, straw or leaves are good choices. Mulch helps conserve moisture and keeps down grass and weeds. If the plants are not mulched, cultivate shallowly and often enough to keep out weeds.

Q. How call I tell if nematodes are present in my soil? (R.W., Rural Hall)

A. To determine if damaging nematodes are present in the soil before planting, collect about one quart of soil in a plastic bag as a representative soil sample from the areas to be planted and take it to your county extension office. Check with your county extension agent for more details on the procedures, forms and fees.

Q. How should I control crown gall of roses? (I.F., Stanley)

A. Crown gall is a bacterial disease that causes large galls or swellings (one to two inches in diameter) on roots or lower parts of the main stem. Affected plants are stunted, weak and lack parts of the main stem. Grown gall can be avoided by purchasing healthy plants. Do not plant roses in areas where this disease has been a problem. If swellings do occur, prune them promptly. Also, avoid wounding roots, the lower stem and graft area of rose plants. Mulching plants to control weeds will reduce the chances of wounding.

How do you arrange your television set for maximum viewing convenience without destroying a room's decorative theme?

Some award-winning ideas include the following:

—Installing a freestanding "tower" that houses the set and accessory items in sections that pull out as needed.

—Placing a set in a room divider located between the sleeping and sitting area of a master bedroom.

—Converting an alcove into an "invisible" cabinet through use of a see-through mirror. When the set is on, the picture is seen through the mirror; when off, it isn't seen.

—Creating a cabinet that looks like the footboard of a bed. The television rests on a shelf that is raised and lowered automatically.

These ideas and others were developed by professional designers when RCA Corp. conducted a video design competition in cooperation with The Designer Magazine. The assignment was simple: use today's television equipment and other home entertainment components in a creative way in the home.

RCA executives and the editor of the trade magazine for interior designers reasoned that many families have recently acquired new video equipment and need good ideas for integrating the equipment into their homes.

The winning designers, who received cash prizes and RCA components, discussed their ideas and showed the renderings of their rooms in New York recently. Several offered suggestions based on their designs for the general public to consider in the arrangement of their home entertainment spaces.

Don Killaby, a space planner who also teaches at Cornell University's interior design division, offered suggestions for a room designed solely for television watching.

In the small room he created, a large cabinet is located directly in front of a window. The cabinet, whose doors retract when opened, is sized generously so new video components will fit as they come into existence.

Killaby said that in rooms designed mainly for video there should be little to distract the eye from the set. It's important to be especially careful about light entering the room. If light enters behind the viewer, it can reflect off the surface of the screen and create glare. If it enters behind the set, viewers' eyes must constantly adjust from low light to high light, which gives the eyes extra work.

Instead, cover the windows so you screen out light when daytime watching occurs. Artificial lights should be on dimmers so that they can be lowered as required. Up-lighting, which throws a wide diffuse light, should be employed instead of downlighting which concentrates a beam of light onto a surface.

For many people, the prospect of devoting a room solely to television is impractical or undesirable. George Wachob, a designer and teacher at Louisiana State University, thought of them when he created a traditional living room designed to include activities such as television watching, listening to music, talking, reading and entertaining.

Buying an old house and restoring it to its former grandeur was once confined to a rather small group of home purchasers. Whatever the reason — and it actually has little to do with economics, remodeling costs being what they are — the practice has gained surprising popularity in recent years.

A man whose business is buying old houses and restoring them, Bob Vila, has some advice for homeowners thinking about purchasing old homes to remodel. Question No.1 was: What is the top priority in searching for a remodeling prospect?

He says: "One of the first things a buyer should do is decide on a prospective neighborhood — or two. This is done by careful research — finding out everything from zoning regulations and tax incentives available for restorations, to the quality of the local school system and the public transportation system. What's next door and down the block really counts too. The most magnificent house will be a tough sell if it's adjacent to a super highway or a shopping mall. Also, take a look at — and talk with — your future neighbors. If they're out there on weekends with paint, hammers and nails, it's a good sign the neighborhood's on its way up."

Once you've found the right neighborhood, what then?

"Look for a home that's structurally sound — that won't deplete your entire bank account while remodeling it," Vila says. "If the home has sagging or rotting floors, large cracks or water stains on walls and ceilings, crumbling cornices, a sagging roof and exterior detail that's decayed beyond repair, it's not a good idea to buy it even if you're thrilled about its possibilities.

"Repairs for structural damage can be much too costly and time consuming, and most of us don't have the luxury to live somewhere else while we attempt such a massive renovation project."

What else is important? Is size a consideration?

"Certainly. These days, rambling old castles are much too costly to maintain — much less renovate. When I look for a home, I want one that's within the realm of the feasible, one that can be updated without becoming a monstrous undertaking."

Is it practical to buy a home that you plan to gut?

"I don't think so. Why buy an old house unless you plan to preserve its basic design and layout? I think it's important to have a finished home that pleases you, but if you're going to make major structural changes, you may as well buy an old loft or gutted shell in the first place."

What about restoration? What type of home's a good candidate?

"Restoration is an expensive undertaking and requires a lot of time and patience on the part of the homeowner. Often people buy ornate, large homes to restore and realize too late how difficult it is to replace or restore the home's intricate detailing. My advice is to look for a smaller house and plan to restore its basic features like doors, floors and fireplaces, while modernizing the rest."

Anything else buyers should look for?

"Well, in terms of layout, the kitchen and bath must be in workable locations, the bedrooms and living room should be well lit — or at least have the potential for good lighting. As for systems, check that the wiring and plumbing are in good working condition. It's a good idea to have a pro examine them."

We had one more question for Vila, whose Public Service broadcasts are funded by Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. What final advice did he have for those who plan to buy and remodel an old house?

"Before committing yourself to an investment, assess what has to be done to the house. Draw up a plan for each room, listing the projects you can do yourself and those that will require a contractor — and estimate the cost for each project, including a cushion for overspending and inflation. After you've done this, you'll be able to determine more realistically if the house is worth your investment in terms of both time and dollars.

"If it is, and you're prepared to exist among the ruins — with dust flying and saws buzzing — then buy."

K-9 Force Puts Teeth In The Law

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Archie, Michelob and Cochise put teeth into the law at Fort Benning.

They are part of the 40-member Working Dog Platoon, 20 military policemen and 20 dogs.

Their jobs are to stop crime and catch criminals.

"The dogs are an extension of the military police, and are trained to assist them in the performance of duty," said Staff Sgt. Jerry Ragan, base kennel master.

"Our patrol dogs, for example, replace the need for a two-man patrol team. Instead of sending two men out, we can send one man and one dog. The man drives and the dog is trained to look for acts of violence, such as a person running an screaming."

The dog also "is trained to attack and hold a person until the MP can apprehend that person," Ragan said.

In addition, the dogs are trained to search buildings, scout forest areas and sniff out narcotics and explosives.

The dogs at Fort Benning range in age from 2 to 12. They work as long as they can.

"When a dog retires, he is usually unable to eat and he is put to sleep," Ragan said.

The dog and handler are a pair. Once a dog and a handler are matched, they are partners until the man gets out of the service or until the dog dies. The handler takes care of all of the dog's needs.

The dogs get their basic training at Lakland Air Force Base in Texas, then it's up to Ragan.

"The dogs are 2 or 3 years old when we get them," he said, "and they have had about six weeks training if they are patrol dogs and about eight weeks training if they are narcotics dogs."

Ragan, a 17-year veteran, sees to it they receive about four hours training each day at the post.

Ragan, 35, of Miami, said he can't recall a time when he didn't have at least one dog as a pet.

A dog's willingness to please is the basis of training, he said.

"Dogs are not fed gunpowder to make them mean," he said. Narcotics detection "dogs are not given drugs. The dogs are trained to detect drugs and explosives by scent and scent alone. The dog is presented with the scent and then the reward, the scent and then the reward, over and over. When the dog can identify one scent, he is introduced to others — one at a time."

The reward can be a snack or a toy, but always includes a lot of praise, petting and affection.

Dogs in the military are nothing new.

"Julius Caesar's army used dogs. In World War I, dogs were used as sentries, messengers, ammunition carriers, scouts, and they pulled sleds carrying the wounded," Ragan said.

A quarter million dogs saw service in World War II.

"During the Korean War, dogs are credited with reducing casualties by over 60 percent and many dogs established impressive records. A dog named York led 148 combat patrols and never lost a single man," Ragan said.

At Fort Benning, the dogs and men even get their conditioning together.

"I take my entire command on a 4-mile run every Thursday morning at 6:15," said Col Curtis Earp, provost marshal, who commands all the MP companies. "And the handlers and their dogs run together in the formation.

"We are the only command on post that has runners that run on all fours. The dogs seem to have a psychological effect on runners who might want to drop out."

Hawaii Drawing Filmmakers

HONOLULU (AP) — Los Angeles filmmakers tired of smog and traffic are looking West. Asian filmmakers seeking a Pacific mystique are looking East.

Both are coming to Hawaii, drawn by the islands' sunny days, exotic locations and diverse population, state officials say. The result is millions of dollars for Hawaii's economy.

"We can deliver just about everything but a smoky city," says Henry Wong, director of the Hawaii Film Office.

"In Los Angeles, sometimes the smog is so bad you can't shoot until afternoon," says Wong. "Our skies are clear, s you can shoot from early morning."

In 1983, filmmakers left about $35.2 million in the state, says Wong.

The biggest spenders were the producers of the "Magnum, P.I.," television series, who spent about $10 million; producers of Japanese television commercials, who spent about $8 million in the state; and the producers of "Uncommon Valor," an action film

Cloistered Nuns Like Their Life

MARBURY, Ala. (AP) — Theirs is a holy place.

Quiet reigns. Years pass and little changes. Inside the gray cement buildings 14 women follow their duty and their hearts.

One resident has ventured from the compound only twice during her 39-year stay. Others with nearly as many years mention a similar number of outings — one, maybe two.

The women say they don't want to leave their 90-acre sanctuary. And they don't want the world to come in to see them.

They are cloistered nuns, Roman Catholic sisters who have taken vows that promise them to a life of prayer apart from the world. Their home, the Dominican monastery of St. Jude's, was founded in 1944. It is run by donations alone.

There are an estimated 120,000 nuns and sisters, but only 10 percent of those are cloistered.

Visitors to St. Jude's are allowed during limited hours and must stay in a designated area. Occasionally, a workman or a medical person goes beyond that area — but only when absolutely necessary, said Mother Mary Magdalene. Sisters are separated from guests by a "grill" — a metal lattice.

They leave only for medical emergencies — no personal emergencies, such as a death in the family.

As one sister says, St. Jude's would be "hell" for most women — anyone but the very few committed to a life of prayer and solitude — a woman who believes she is answering a special call from God.

"Prayer is our job and our joy," said Mother Mary Magdalene, who came to St. Jude's 33 years ago. "We're striving to be as perfect as human beings can be in our Lord ... Other things are distractions.

Being separated is "a sacrifice and penance," she said. "It's meant to be — to make clear what a separation it is."

The one and only controvery surrounding this order was its founding. St. Jude's was the first interracial monastery in the U.S., according to Mother Mary Magdalene.

Its two founding sisters, who belonged to a Maryland monastery, searched the country for a diocese willing to take sisters of different races. They moved to California, believing their plan had found acceptance, only to find they were wrong.

They returned to Maryland and prayed some more.

Eventually, the two women found a home in Marbury because of a Montgomery bishop who was willing to help. The sisters were warned troublemakers opposed to Catholics or blacks might make life in rural Alabama unpleasant.

Nothing bad happened — not even cruel words, say several sisters, including two black sisters who have been in the order for years. Both founding sisters are now dead.

Mother Mary Magdalene refused to say how many black sisters now live at St. Jude's. "I've never noticed," she said.

The monastery has never grown beyond 16 sisters although it has room for 28. Mother Mary Magdalene said she expects it to stay at about 14.

Because of their vows of silence, the sisters speak to each other only during two recreation hours each day.

Even while doing assigned chores, such as cooking, sewing or cleaning, the sisters say they keep their minds on prayer and their eyes downcast. Every 15 minutes work stops briefly for a spoken, group prayer.

"We're trying so much to make our personalities disappear in Christ," said Sister Mary of the Eucharist, 27, who joined when she was 16.

The sisters' day starts at 5 a.m. when morning chimes sound. They sleep in a nun's habit so they can get out of bed and immediately begin their devotions.

Prayers and meditations continue until 7 a.m. Mass except for a few minutes spent washing at the basin in each sister's 7-by-10 foot room, called a cell. Each cell has a wooden-plank bed, desk and straight-backed chair. There are no personal decorations.

Breakfast, usually cereal or bread, butter and peanut butter, is at 8.

The day is then divided into household work, prayers, and meditations, with breaks for lunch and supper.

No radio or television. No newspapers. No letter-writing to family other than brief notes at holidays or for a special occasion.

Dull? Monotonous?

Never, say the sisters.

"Your mind is taken care of all the time," said Mother Mary Magdalene.

CAR TALK

From PHELPS CHEVROLET

By Norman Vanhorne

QUIT CHECKING WATER

It used to be that when you drove into a service station for a tank of gas, the attendant routinely unscrewed the radiator cap and checked to see whether you were low on water (or the water-antifreeze mixture now called "coolant"). Today, if yours is a late-model car, manufacturers say you should check only about once a month or at oil-change time.

Sudden releasing of pent-up hot air, vapor and liquid, depressurizes the cooling system which is designed to operate at 10 to 18 pounds. Then the system may boil over and lose a considerable amount of coolant. Moreover, the hot vapor and liquid can scald you.

So, while it's vital to check the engine oil each time you buy gas, it's best not to check the radiator unless there is a definite indication of leakage or engine overheating. Make sure the engine is cool; the car should be parked for at least 15 minutes.

★★★★★★★★

When you think Chevrolet—think PHELPS CHEVROLET—where you get a good deal plus a great deal more. We pride ourselves in offering the lowest price, maximum trade allowance, low cost financing and quality service.

At the end of the 1960s, Omar Sharif came up with the idea that for bridge to become an exciting spectacle, it had to involve big money. So in 1970 Sharif and some of his favorite partners sat down against some of Britain's leading players in the highest stake rubber bridge game on record—$4 a point! To make it even richer, there were considerable amounts wagered on side bets.

The records show that Sharif and company won about $30,000 in the match. However, he came out a loser. A film of the match that he financed to the tune of some $500,000 was never picked up by the television networks, and he was stuck with the tab.

This was perhaps the most dramatic hand of the match. Sitting East and West were Omar Sharif and Claude Delmouly of France, while North South were the British internationalists Jonathan Cansino and Jeremy Flint. After passing initially, Cansino doubled Delmouly's raise to two hearts for takeout. Sharif jumped to four hearts on his distributional hand in the hope of keeping Flint out of the auction, but Flint's hand was too strong. He came in with four spades and, not surprisingly, Delmouly doubled—he had no desire to play five hearts.

West led the king of hearts and continued with a low heart. Declarer ruffed on the table and ran the jack of trumps to West's queen. The defenders completed their book by taking the diamond ace, and Sharif threw declarer on lead with the king of diamonds. Everything now hinged on how declarer played the club suit.

Flint cashed the ace of clubs, and Sharif dropped the queen. Now declarer drew trumps and led the nine of clubs. The Rule of Restricted Choice applies in this situation, and the finesse is the percentage play. If Flint guessed right, he would make his contract; if he went wrong, he would be down four doubled and vulnerable. With side bets, about $10,000 hinged on his decision.

After considerable thought, Flint elected to go with the odds by running the nine. He made no more tricks.

Snoring Is More Than Noise

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Snoring is wife-threatening and it can be life-threatening, experts say.

Snoring is more than just noise, said Dr. Milton Kramer. It also is a symptom of obstructive sleep apnea in which the sleeper stops breathing for 10-second intervals more than 15 times an hour.

The result, he said, can be a real risk of heart failure, especially if the victim suffers from a heart condition, hypertension or diabetes.

But in many cases, doctors at University Medical Center in Jackson and elsewhere are having success with surgical treatment, which not only cures annoying snoring, but in 75 percent of the cases eases the threatening strain on the patient, most of whom are men.

Kramer is chief of the division of somnolgy, or the study of sleep and its disorders, in the department of psychiatry at the large teaching hospital.

Some of the problems are obvious, he said, such as the stress snoring puts on marriage.

"Some wives have said, 'Get it taken care of, or we're through,'" he said. "Night after night, the snorer sleeps while the partner is awake."

And the problem is not limited to married people.

He recalled the case of a woman in her 70s who snored. She belonged to a travel club and "no one would share a room with her," he said. "She spent much of her time alone."

Basically, Kramer said, the problem is caused by an irregular narrowing of an air way.

He said it is a little like water running through a tube. If the tube is smoothe, the water runs freely and quietly. But a rough or narrow spot in the tube will cause an eddy with diminished flow and noise.

It's the same with the air, he says.

A narrowing sets up an eddy in the air flowing in and out of the body and causes the noise that can be very annoying.

In serious cases of sleep apnea, oxygen in the blood drops drastically during the periods in which the patient's throat closes. The heart and lungs start slowing down, and the strain on the heart can cause failure.

The heart beat drops from a normal of 60 or more down to 40 or less. The worst he ever has seen, Kramer said, was 12 in a overweight man. Any heart beat count of 24 or so lands a patient in intensive care.

The first approach is to put the patient on a weight-loss program. In some cases, this relieves the snoring problem.

But if that doesn't work, the next step is to consider a surgical procedure, but that, he said, "requires a very careful assessment."

It begins with an extensive examination of the patient, including a so-called "CAT scan" of the head.

If all the tests show there is a narrowing of the passageway, the surgery is relatively easy, and involves the removal of tissue to open up the air passage.

"It's a sort of glorified tonsilectomy," he said.

Kramer said no complications had developed in the 20 or so operations performed in the hospital. The average patient stay is about one week. There is some initial discomfort after the surgery.

"Snoring is almost always taken care of by the surgery," he said, "and there is an improvement" in the life threatening problems.

"I find the big catches. Block finds me the big refunds."

"Big refunds are the best catch of all at tax time. That's why I rely on H&R Block. My preparer is trained to know where to look for every deduction and credit. And over the long haul, that means more money in my pocket."

Cannell and King bow to 'Riptide'

By Peter Meade

It's not surprising that "Riptide," NBC's new Tuesday night adventure series, has done well in the ratings.

The show blends many of the elements necessary for a successful series: buddy-buddy private detectives a la "Simon & Simon," a distinctively painted helicopter a la "Magnum, P.I.," a computer nerd a la "Whiz Kids," plus pretty guest stars and plenty of action on land, sea and air.

It also has pedigree parentage. The ingredients of "Riptide" have been collected and concocted by Stephen J. Cannell, a top-flight TV chef, whose previous credits include "The A-Team."

Cannell and Perry King, who stars as Cody Allen on the series, hope the concoction will yield the sweet taste of success. Both men tasted bitter failure with last season's short-lived series, "The Quest." It was canceled with four episodes left un-aired. Despite the experience, King was eager to find another series, especially a Cannell creation.

With "The A-Team" reigning as NBC's top-rated series, Cannell used his influence to assure that his new series would have an additional element in its favor: an advantageous time slot. So when "Riptide" was added to the Tuesday night lineup, "Remington Steele" was moved back an hour, with "The A-Team" remaining as the evening's lead-in.

"It was a smart move," says King. "We share similar demographics with both shows. 'Remington Steele' is more sophisticated, so it's better off at 10 o'clock. And if any new series deserved the weight of 'The A-Team' as a lead-in, Stephen's did."

King says Cannell created "Riptide" as a "bow to the '60s" because it borrows from "Surfside 6," "77 Sunset Strip" and "Route 66."

Similar to its 1960 s predecessors, "Riptide" films most of its footage outdoors, especially by the water. King enjoys this aspect because he spent his boyhood summers in Nantucket, Mass., where he put in a lot of time working on his father's boat. The boats used in the series, both the Riptide and the handmade Contessa, are docked near Redondo Beach, Calif., at King Harbor.

"My harbor," says King, noting the coincidence with a chuckle. "If the show goes 10 years, hey, I'll buy the place."

Joe Penny (l.) and Perry King play an unlikely pair of detectives living out their fantasies aboard a yacht at Redondo Beach, Calif., in NBC's "Riptide," airing Tuesdays.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: I have been watching Bruce Lee's movies on TV. Is Lee still alive? Someone told me he had died a violent death from drugs. I hope that isn't so. — B. Staub

To B. Staub: Cult-hero Bruce Lee died in 1973 at the age of 32. Born in San Francisco, Lee received a degree in philosophy from the University of Washington. His acting career began in television where he guest starred on "Batman." He later co-starred as Kato on the "The Green Hornet" from 1966-1967. It wasn't until the early 1970s, however, that Lee really rose to fame and fortune. He starred in a series of martial arts films that were hits with the younger theater crowd. Mystery continues to shroud his sudden death. He did not die of a drug overdose. It was widely rumored that Lee was the victim of a cult who inflicted internal injuries upon him because he capitalized on their sacred art form. This has never been substantiated, and could be part of the myth that surrounds famous people when they die at a young age.

DEAR MICHELE: How long were the shows "Laugh-In," "Hogan's Heroes," and "Perry Mason" on the air? — Jim Holladay

To Jim: "Rowan & Martin's Laugh-In" ran for five years, from 1968-1973, while "Hogan's Heroes" was on the tube for six seasons, from 1965-1971. The original "Perry Mason," starring Raymond Burr, was television's longest running series about a barrister. Ol' Perry was in the courtroom for nine years, from 1957-1966. In 1973, the series was resurrected as "The New Adventures of Perry Mason," with Monte Markham in the title role. Markham did not enjoy Burr's success, however, and the series was canceled after one short season. With the exception of the Perry Mason remake, all of the above are enjoying a successful run in syndication.

DEAR MICHELE: Would you please give us a little background information on Robert Wagner? We know he was born in Detroit. What was his father's profession? Does he have any relatives? Where was he educated? — Mrs. John S. Cain

To Mrs. Cain: Unlike his Ivy League-educated television counterpart, Jonathan Hart, 54-year-old Robert Wagner never enrolled in the halls of Ivy. The only son (he has a sister, Mary Lou) of a wealthy Detroit metals manufacturer, Wagner was a hellion in his younger days and was expelled from several fashionable prep schools. He attended Hollywood Military Academy, Black-Foxe Military Academy, the Harvard School and Santa Monica High School. While still in high school, Wagner decided to forgo a career in business, and began to pursue a career as an actor.

TV Chatter

by Polly Vonetes

Farrah Fawcett, who came to fame as one of "Charlie's Angels," is returning to television in the role of a madam in the CBS movie, "The Red-Light Sting," airing this week. The film, based on a true story in New York magazine, recounts an FBI undercover operation that used a bordello to snare an underworld leader.

Ever since Miss Fawcett left the "Angels," she has been trying to prove that she is not just another pretty face. In a complete reversal of her TV image she has chosen roles that have proven she can act. "I feel," she says, "that I have made a clear statement, and have said, in essence, 'Please don't judge this book by its cover!'"

Anthony Geary fans be careful — or you may miss your idol when he appears on the ABC movie "Sins of the Past" on April 2. Geary, who portrayed Luke Spencer on "General Hospital," has shed more than his doctor's white coat to create a new image. He has changed his hairstyle, grown a moustache and changed his style of dress.

That lovable clown, Red Skelton, who has entertained audiences with his zany characters for more than 60 years, recently taped a new special for HBO at the Royal Albert Hall in London. Britain's Royal Family were among those attending the show. The special, "A Royal Performance," which makes its debut this week, features an array of Skelton's lovable creations including Clem Kaddiddlehopper and Freddy the Freeloader.

Kemp uses her past to develop character

By Gregory Garver

HOLLYWOOD — Once in a while, Hollywood casting people get lucky. They cast an actor or an actress in a part where the performer has some special knowledge about the type of character he or she is being asked to play.

That has happened in the case of Brandis Kemp, who plays Alma Cox, the executive secretary on the hospital staff of CBS' "AfterMASH," which is currently on hiatus.

Because of her background, Miss Kemp is one of the few people in a network television role who could probably both act in a show and serve as the show's technical adviser. "My father," she says, "had suffered serious injuries in World War I. And, when I was a child, growing up in Palo Alto, he was confined to a veterans' hospital. I used to go and visit him all the time. So I can vouch for the authenticity of everything on the 'AfterMASH' set — the beds and the chairs and everything."

After her father died, Miss Kemp's mother supported the family by working as a beautician. Miss Kemp's brother's constant playing of show music was what got her interested in the theater when she was very young.

She went to Stanford, not generally known for its acting studies, but she says she got a good grounding in the theater there. She also got a graduate degree in drama.

Before "AfterMASH," Miss Kemp played in the Los Angeles-based play, "Women Behind Bars." One of her coactresses was Sally Kellerman, the original Hot Lips in the original "M*A*S*H" movie. When Miss Kemp left to play in "AfterMASH," Miss Kellerman gave her a set of model lips that director Robert Altman had given her.

Brandis Kemp

Miss Kemp is pleased that her character on "AfterMASH" is softening, as she was originally very tough. And she hopes that her progress follows in the fancy footsteps of Loretta Swit.

'Down to Earth' may land on its feet

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Carol Mansell

Most sitcoms running on cable have been reruns of classic family programs from the 1950s such as "Leave It to Beaver" or 1960s fantasy shows such as "Bewitched" and "I Dream of Jeannie."

Now Superstation WTBS is airing its first original sitcom, "Down to Earth," whose style and substance resembles those '50s and '60s reruns. "Down to Earth" may be the first neo-conservative sitcom, combining as it does past TV plot devices (angels and time-traveling) with a nod to contemporary society (the single parent family).

Here's the plot: Ethel MacDoogan (Carol Mansell), now known as Angel 972, was killed in 1925 in a trolley-car accident. In the ensuing 59 years, she has been unable to earn her wings because she has developed the reputation of a troublemaker. The head angel, Mr. D'vine (Lester Fletcher), offers one last chance to get the wings. She must return to Earth to be the housekeeper for the Prestons, a family of a widowed father and three children. The family has not been the same since Mrs. Preston died.

The heroine, complete with bobbed hair, descends into 1984. Not unexpectedly, many jokes center around her wrestling with the modern world. When told that the Prestons have a modern kitchen, she exclaims that she's not bothered by that. Her previous employer had a modern kitchen — it had running water inside. So what do you think happens the first time Ethel is confronted by the Prestons' kitchen array of Cuisinarts, Vegematics, microwaves and toaster-oven?

The situations are obvious — yet there's an innocence about "Down to Earth." The dizzy Miss Mansell is kind of a Gracie Allen-in-training. The kids are earnest and endearing. This Procter & Gamble-produced show is certainly on a par with the middle-level sitcoms on network TV and above the quality of at least two of the recent network fantasy sitcoms that have come and gone ("Just Our Luck" and "Mr. Smith").

It's wholesome enough to meet Ted Turner's standards and has an unpretentious, almost-underdog appeal. Let's hope "Down to Earth" stays on its feet.

Sue Ellen (Betty White, r.) tries to comfort Mama (Vicki Lawrence) after Mama finds out that another woman is buried in her cemetery plot next to her deceased husband, in the "Grave Mistake" episode of "Mama's Family," airing Saturday, April 7 on NBC.

NCAA Basketball Tournament On Tap

BY Willie Schatz

Billy Packer has broadcast 48 college basketball games this season — 29 for CBS and 19 for the Atlantic Coast Conference — and that's just for starters. Packer estimates he has actually seen hundreds of games. Therefore, he should be bored — if not to death, then surely to tears.

Forget it.

"There's no danger of that happening," says Packer, CBS's nonpareil analyst. "Not when we're going to the NCAA Final Four."

Actually, Packer, play-by-play partner Gary Bender and a supporting cast of hundreds have been on the road to the Final Four since March 15. Tomorrow's championship game (CBS, 9 p.m.) just means the 1984 clock will finally reach 00:00.

Packer does his homework, and it pays off. Some fans may be surprised by the teams in the final game, but not Packer.

"By the time we've broadcast the regionals, I'll have seen every team," he says. "And unless there's a major, major upset, I'll know every team cold before the tournament starts.

"So I don't do much homework. I keep a Final Four file during the season. It has some offbeat things and good historical anecdotes in it. I'll pull it out before the series. More than likely I'll never use it. But at least I'll have it there."

Like Packer and Bender, CBS has come a long way from three years ago, when it telecast its first tournament after outbidding NBC. Now, games on CBS are crisp, sharp, visually pleasing and rarely saturated with useless graphics or replays. The CBS eye is seeing much more clearly these days. "We're going to have a lot of people watching who've never seen a game before," says Packer. "So we've got to get our point across early, through graphics and pictures that capture the excitement of the event. I'm aware that a lot of people may not understand the basics. But I'm much deeper into the game, so I can't spend a lot of time on that."

"When it's over, I hope the new fan says, 'That was good. I think I'll watch another.' I want the real fan to feel I explained the flow of the game. I want him to say, 'Packer had a handle on that.'"

Sunday, April 1

NCAA Women's Division I Basketball Final, CBS, 4-6 p.m. It's hardly hyped like the Final Four, but this should be a good show. Former superstar Anne Meyers will be the analyst.

Al McGuire's Championship Special, NBC, 3:30-4:30 p.m. NBC presented McGuire's special last year in order to show the NCAA how desperate it was to regain the premier basketball tournament. Unfortunately, NBC fouled out while CBS hit a three-(year) pointer. Now NBC just wants to save face. McGuire's always worth a look.

Saturday, April 7

Major League Baseball, NBC, 1:45-4:30 p.m. Play Ball! Top billing goes to the Orioles-Twins game, because the network always begins the season with the world champions. Joe Garagiola and Vin Scully will tell you all about it. The backup game features the Detroit Tigers and the Chicago White Sox. Announcers Bob Costas and Tony Kubek will be on hand.

SPURRED ON

Q: What is the largest crowd ever to see a professional basketball game?

A: The single-game, regular-season record in the National Basketball Association was set on Feb. 11, 1984, when the San Antonio Spurs defeated the Detroit Pistons 123-116. The game attracted 35,624 fans to the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich.

4th Annual Eastern Carolina Arts Festival

PITT COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA

April 1-14, 1984 — and Post Events

Sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council

400th Anniversary Chairman Excited About Events

By STACY HUGGINS

(Reprinted by permission from "Circa '84," Vol. 4, No. 4)

This July 13 marks the beginning of the three-year, statewide America's 400th Anniversary Celebration.

North Carolina, in cooperation with Great Britain, will commemorate the 400th anniversary of Sir Walter Raleigh's Roanoke Island settlements, the first English attempts to colonize North America.

The America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee, an arm of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources, has designed numerous activities and projects for the three-year celebration. That committee, in turn, authorized each county in North Carolina to adopt its own 400th anniversary committee to plan commemorative projects locally in every area of the state.

The Pitt County America's 400th Anniversary Committee is certainly notable for its resourceful membership and its enthusiasm. One of the best examples, and a major catalyst, of that enthusiasm is committee chairman Mrs. John M. (Gladys) Howell. Mrs. Howell vibrantly communicates an excitement for local history, and she obviously enjoys conducting the business of commemorating the 400th locally. She presides over the committee's numerous projects, including the most noteworthy, the design and construction of the Pitt County Tobacco Museum, which is now in its early planning stages. She is also working with the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, which has adopted the 400th theme for the Spring Arts Festival.

Mrs. Howell recently discussed the 400th Committee, the museum, and the other locally significant America's 400th activities for this special feature in "Circa."

CIRCA: Why did the statewide America's 400th Anniversary Committee sanction the local committees and what exactly is the purpose of a local America's 400th committee?

HOWELL: The 400th Anniversary was established by Governor Hunt and a state committee as a statewide exercise in celebrating the history of the English-speaking people coming to the new world. From the very inception, the idea was to generate two levels of activity — the state level, which would center in Dare County, and then, local manifestations of interest in the history of the sate at each county.

From the very beginning, the idea existed that there would be county chairpersons with local committees who would generate particular programs of interest in each of the counties. That was part of the framework for celebrating the 400th Anniversary from the onset.

The big doings for the celebration are going to center on the locale to which the original English-speaking people came. The dates — the 400th markings of the dates — go from July 1984 through August 1987. Four hundred years ago, the first expeditions arrived — in July 1584 — and continued, then, until August '87, the birth of Virginia Dare. In Manteo, we have already had one preliminary celebration, which was the launching and christening of the Elizabeth II, the replica of the sailing vessel, which has been built right there in Manteo. Now, that is going to be in dock at Manteo for visitors to see.

On July 13, there is going to be a big celebration in Manteo. We hope to have people from England coming over, including, we hope, members of the royal family. All kinds of state personnel who have been involved in the 400th Celebration will converge there. There will be pageantry, there will be parades — each county is going to send some kind of a banner that is county-oriented, so that there will be 100 counties, with each individual banner there as part of the pageantry.

A group of North Carolinians, by the way, will leave North Carolina in April of this year and go to England, to Plymouth, and will put a plaque in Plymouth to celebrate the beginning of the journey (Raleigh's expedition to the New World).

For our main project, for which we have sought clearance with Raleigh, and have gotten the full go-ahead and commendation, we decided that we really wanted to try and do something that would have some permanent value to the community, that could be used as educational and a resource that called to mind the roots, the history of the group, the sense of place and our own historical origins. Pitt County is not as old as the coastal communities — its heritage is a little different; and while the Elizabeth II has a great deal of symbolic significance for every North Carolinian, we were looking for something which would harken to the local area's sense of place, sense of purpose, sense of history. The tobacco museum, tobacco being so much a part of Greenville's heritage, seemed to be a good idea.

The goal of all this will be to house artifacts particularly linked with the farming activities that typified Pitt County. That is to say, while a tobacco museum from Durham or any other place might concentrate on the manufacture; in Greenville, it has been the rural aspects that are important; and that's what our museum will concentrate on — artifacts related to the farming and cultivation. But, also, I think we will want to have things that hark up the whole context of living on the tobacco farm, not just tobacco per se, but what tobacco-farming life was like, probably, though that's just my own assessment.

The other aspects are much more limited in scope, but they begin with trying to get every group that might, in any way, have a legitimate interest in the 400th to participate with us in any way that is available to them in making the 400th a focus of their activities.

We begin, of course, with this wonderful chance that the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council has provided to us to build their festival for 1984 — this spring — around the 400th.

CIRCA: Considering the museum project, the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council's involvement, the city-county schools, the churches, some of the other things, the Pitt County 400th Committee seems to be one of the most active committees in the state.

HOWELL: We feel that we've gotten off on a good footing. We feel that what we have done has substance and may well have continuity with the past and into the future. We are hoping that as the celebrations go on, we will have some festivals, like the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council festival, that will bring in a wide range of people from all walks of life to participate in the awareness. We also feel that some of the things we're doing — like the tobacco museum, which has occupied a great deal of our time — will have a lasting benefit.

Excellence Is Goal Of Area's Young Violinists

The Suzuki Violinists of Eastern North Carolina, one hundred students between the ages of two and 18, will play music from the classical violin repertoire in the 18th annual Greenville Suzuki Violin Festival April 14 at 7 p.m. at Memorial Baptist Church. Joanne Bath is the director and Charles Bath is the piano accompanist.

Students from Greenville, Ayden, Farmville, New Bern, Kinston, Washington and Tarboro will play. The program will include the complete Concerto in A Minor by Vivaldi, La Folia by Corelli, the Concerto in A Minor by Bach, the Sonata in G Minor by Eccles, the first movement of the Concerto in A by Mozart, Pracludium from the Unaccompanied Sonata in E by Bach and compositions by Brahms, Dvorak, Handel and Suzuki.

The Suzuki Violinists of Eastern North Carolina have performed throughout the eastern part of North Carolina. Students from the group performed at the North Carolina State Capital in the fall of 1982 and toured England in 1981. The group that will be touring England in 1984 has been designated. Many music competitions have been won by members of the group, including the North Carolina Music Teachers' Association String Competition, the Music Teachers' National Association Southeastern Regional String Competition, the NCNB Regional Music Competition, the Greenville School's Talent Competition and membership in the North Carolina All-State and Regional Honors Orchestra. Music scholarships have been won to the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, East Carolina University, the North Carolina School of the Arts, Meredith College, the Univeristy of North Carolina in Greensboro and the University of Michigan; and to the East Carolina University Music Camp, Cannon Music Camp, Summer Strings on the Meherrin at Chowan College, Eastern Music Fesival and the National Congress of Strings.

All the Suzuki violin students in Greenville will be included in the Arts Festival program. Teachers will be Joanne Bath, director; Charles Bath, pianist; Catherine Jenkins, Jon Shaw, Nancy Kosteck, Paul Topper, Stephen Bath, Andrea Bath, Elizabeth Ellen, Sarah Burden, Danielle Nieman, Amy Moore and Carol Moore.

Nine of the 19 students nominated this year by the Greenville Public Schools for Governor's school are Suzuki violinists; both Greenville Morehead winners are Suzuki violinists; 10 of the 18 first violinists in the All-State Orchestra are Greenville Suzuki students; the winners of this year's Wilminsgton Concerto Competition are Suzuki violinists. Indeed, our area is known around the state as a place that can be counted on to produce fine music for today's and tomorrow's citizens.

In June of this year we are taking Greenville's musical message of excellence to England for the second time. Three years ago, when a smaller group of 19 musicians visited England, the accent was upon making contact with English youth and their parents. English Suzuki parents, like those from eastern North Carolina, are interested in building into their children's existence a life-long joy of music and commitment to quality. On this tour we will fulfill some of the dream of the first visit as well as extend that dream.

House With Green Roof

As you drive through downtown Greenville on Fifth Street, you can't miss a restored home that graces the area: the Robert Lee Humber House.

Recently restored to its original grace and beauty, its Victorian colors are striking. Many people refer to this house as "the house with the green roof."

Today this house is a very busy place, for it now houses several arts and history groups for this region.

In the basement, you might hear a play reading or see a poet hard at work; this is the new home of the Playwrights' Fund of North Carolina Inc.

First floor of the Humber House is now the Eastern Office for the Division of Archives and History, North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources. Friendly faces will greet you in the second floor offices of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, sponsors of the Eastern Carolina Arts Festival and publishers of "Circa," a journal of the arts. And in the magnificent, gothic-style attic is housed the Greenville Area Preservation Association.

Tours, on which you are shown the many architectual delights of the Humber House, are conducted every Wednesday at 3 p.m. For further information, call Diane Hankins, secretary, at 752-7778.

New Chamber Music Series For ECU

ECU News Bureau

A new chamber music series for 1984-85 has been scheduled through a joint arrangement by the East Carolina University School of Music and Department of University Unions.

The series, to be called the 1984-85 Chamber Festival, will include performances by the Dorian Wind Quintet, the Annapolis Brass Quintet, the Los Angeles Piano Quartet, the Western Wind ensemble and the Composers String Quartet.

All performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. in Hendrix Theatre.

The series is partially sponsored by grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Southern Arts Federation.

The Dorian Wind Quintet, performing Oct. 10, is known in the U.S. and abroad for its performances of commissioned scores and residency activities, as well as its numerous recordings and sold-out concert tours.

The Annapolis Brass Quintet, appearing Nov. 5, will showcase music for brasses spanning 400 years. The group is celebrating 12 years as the nation's only full-time performing brass ensemble.

Of the Los Angeles Piano Quartet, scheduled for a Jan. 28 concert, a leading critic wrote: "The group enlists highly accomplished players who have forged an ensemble based on like-mmindedness, on equality of technical skills, on disciplined reaction to interpretive style ..."

Performing Feb. 11 is the vocal sextet, the Western Wind. Its unique musical phenomenon has rekindled a love for "a capella" singing among audiences in several nations.

The final program of the Chamber Festival, set for April 20, will be presented by the Composers String Quartet, critically praised for its precision, musical understanding and sensitive interpretations.

Each ensemble's members will present masterclasses for ECU music students during its visit to campus. Masterclasses, set for 10 a.m. until noon on the mornings after concerts in Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall, are open to the public without charge.

Season tickets for the ECU 1984-85 Chamber Festival are on sale at the ECU Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center at $15 for the general public and $10 for ECU faculty and staff members. Discount prices of $10 and $7.50 respectively are offered to those who also purchased season tickets for the 1984-85 University Unions Artist Series.

April 4 Focus On Fiber Art

A WORK OF FIBER ART . . . by Betty Harris. Ms. Harris and other fiber artists will show fiber art at Jaycee Park, 2000 Cedar Lane, April 4.

Betty Harris

"Handmade paper suits me as a medium. I approach papermaking sculpturally from a love of natural fibers. I am exited by the many variables — fibers, dyes and techniques for manipulating the pulp to create shapes and textures.

"My work is non-traditional and pertains to the nature of handmade paper and its relation to us and out existence. My works are 'visual kaiku' which are created within self-imposed boundaries and deal with questions of permanence-impermanence, strength-fragility, lightness-heaviness and opacity-translucence. Often the soarce surrounding a piece is as important as the piece itself. Through my work I hope to coax the viewer into a new awareness of objects, ideas and relationships and of paper itself."

Harris has exhibited works throughout the southeastern United States and was a winner in the 1981 Women in Design International competition.

Handmade Paper

Although there have been changes in materials and equipment as the papermaking process passed from one culture to another, the basic method of papermaking has not changed in almost 2000 years. Cooked and beaten plant fiber is mixed with water to form pulp. A mould, which is a frame covered with screen, is drawn through the pulp. The screen allows water to drain through but catches the fibers, causing them to interlock and form a sheet of paper. The wet sheet is removed from the mould, pressed and dried.

Though this is an ancient process, only in the mid-twentieth century has handmade paper emerged as an art form. It is a versatile medium adaptable to many approaches including fibers, printmaking, bookmaking and sculpture.

Suzanne Yowell

To Susanne Yowell, a craftsman/artist who uses the natural materials of the earth to respond to the spirit of life. Susanne uses natural fabrics, scissors, paint, thread and needles to visually respond to an awareness of being part of a greater whole. Sometimes this takes form in a functional item like a quilt or handmade garmet. Other times it could be a stack of images in fabric that collectively make a book of pictures for others to see and feel. Recently she has enjoyed creating different parts of an image on separate pieces of fabric, then quilting them together to create the illusion of a single vision with depth.

"I feel that the separate fabrics are like different layers of experience. We feel or know life on many levels, not just on a physical or surface one. In my work I try to indicate this."

In 1981, Susanne was commissioned by the State of North Carolina to make a ten-foot wide quilted map of the state for a new welcome center. She discovered that this was an objeet that people could participate in on many levels. This sparked her interest in helping to create other visual records of the places in which we live.

"Since we all share in the land on which we depend for our survival, I would like to encourage community participation in creating collective records of their own areas."

"N.C. Quilted Map" and other works to be displayed at Jaycee Park, 2000 Cedar Lane, April 4, 10 a.m. — 3 p.m.

Slide presentation: "Quilts and Women: A History in Pattern."

Liars Day

Calling all liars! If you'd rather talk about "the one that got away" instead of spending all day trying to catch a fish, here's the opportunity for you to win a trophy, even if you've never landed a fish.

The Grifton Shad Festival "Fishy Tales" storytelling (or liar's) contest is just the answer. There's no entry fee and prizes are trophies in Fish Story and in Tall Tale (non-fish) categories. There are divisions for adult and for youth.

The date is Wednesday evening, April 11, at 8 p.m. in the Grifton Elementary School cafeteria, as one of the opening events of the 14th annual Grifton Shad Festival. Other events include a parade, fish fry and fish stew, street dance, clogging, arts and crafts, tournaments and competitions to appeal to all ages and interests and two types of fishing contests.

Trophies for the "Fishy Tales" contest are donated by Grifton's weekly newspaper, "The Grifton Times" and its publisher Russell Wooten is chairman of the contest. He may be reached at 746-6361.

ECAF Offering 3 Varied Plays

(Reprinted by permission from "Circa '84" Vol. 4, No. 4)

"All good things are cheap; all bad, are very dear.

—H. D. Thoreau

Americana — we flaunt it, we jab at it, we devour it. It shows us what we really think is important.

Greenville's ECAF '84 offers three different plays, all relatively new, each representing a different perspective of American values.

"Shepard uses a structure familiar as part of everyone's Americana," explains Cedric Winchell, director of the ECU Playhouse production of Sam Shepard's "Angel City." "But when he puts it into a different context, it is unfamiliar."

"Angel City," described by its author as "a moving picture show in two acts," is the story of a Hollywood disaster movie producer who hires a poet-visionary to save the movie by giving the people "what they are crying for." Pulitzer Prize-winning Shepard writes of surreal, barren atmospheres and American settings. His changing perspectives blur distinctions between the movies and the real world. His characters, with names that sould like graffiti bits, are distinctly American, and often speak in harsh, jumpy rock music jargon. His titles are less for identifying the plays than for announcing them; his blendings of satire with suspense in "epic fables of the nation's ruthlessness" have made him America's most controversial playwright.

"What's ironic about Shepard," continues Winchell, "is that even though he's writing about the decay of our traditional values, he's really saying 'there is something there: a potential for creativeness.' He's telling us 'quit listening to commercial images and trying to live up to false values. Then you may discover within yourself the ability to transcent these and come back to yourself.'"

The old American dream, a family, a house, and a good crop, is the subject of "King 'Bacco," which the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council has selected to initiate its 400th Anniversary Celebration commemorating the first European settlement of North Carolina. A slice-of-life drama about tobacco farming in eastern North Carolina during the Great Depression, "King 'Bacco," by Pactolus author Ida Wooten Tripp, represents the family as a reinforcing social structure, holding its own against the external economic conflict. While characters in "Angel City" speak the lyric dialogue of improvisational jazz riffs, those in "King 'Bacco" warble in the natural rhythm of eastern North Carolina. (For more information on "King 'Bacco," see CIRCA, Nov/Dec 1983.)

Another inherently lyrical dialogue pattern is used in "A Redneck Story", one of a trilogy of one-acts by North Carolina playwright Nora St. John, the winner of the 1984 Playwright's Fund of North Carolina Playwriting Competition. Ms. St. John's play takes place in the home of a mill family whose life is shattered by the advent of unionization. According to Sheila Turnage, literary manager of PFNC, ""A Redneck Story" deals with three main values: the strength of the family, the identification the family gives its individual members, and the individuals' personal integrity, but is ultimately torn apart because of that integrity.

"Even though the relationship that fostered this integrity is destroyed," continues Ms. Turnage, "the strength it created is not destroyed —jt takes form and direction."

All three ECAF playwrights, then, deal with the disintegration of American values: Shepard in the midst of a swagger; Ms. Tripp, externally, and Ms. St. John, from within the existing social structure. Their work, like that of many contemporary writers, reflects the uncertainty of our times.

And yet, each in his or her own way speaks to our frustration with a message well represented by Helen Merrell Lynd in her 1958 book, "On Shame and the Search for Identity":

"Instead of lamenting, as a threat, the distintegration of many traditional values and the lack of clear definition with which our historical period presents us, we may attempt to understand and to use the very conflicts and ambiguities of the time to open up the way for realization of new possibilities."

ECU Artists Series Listed

ECU News Bureau

Five nationally and internationally recognized soloists and musical ensembles have been scheduled to perform at East Carolina University for the campus' 1984-85 Artists Series.

The Tokyo String Quartet, praised by critics as one of the finest chamber emsembles performing today, will open the series Wednesday, Sept. 26. This is a return appearance, scheduled "by popular demand," said a University Union official.

Young soprano Marvis Martin, who has been called the new Leontyne Price, will make her eastern North Carolina debut in the series Thursday, Oct. 25.

Pianist Janina Fialkowska, a discovery and protege of Arthur Rubenstein, will perform in recital at ECU Monday, Nov. 19.

The Vienna Choir Boys, a popular Artists Series attraction in previous seasons, will return to ECU Tuesday, Jan. 15.

The series' final attraction will be a concert by the Rotterdam Philharmonic Orchestra with conductor James Conlon scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 27.

Season tickets for the 1984-85 Artists Series, priced at $30 for the general public and $15 for youth aged 14 and under, are abailable at the ECU Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center. Purchase of season tickets is advised since the season is expected to sell out by subscription. Season tickets also offer a considerable savings over single tickets, which may not be available for individual events.

In addition, purchasers of Artists Series season tickets may secure season tickets for the ECU Chamber Festival at reduced prices.

All Artists Series concerts will be held in Wright Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Betty Dixon Works Costume Magic On Her Machine

By MAXINE CAREY HARKER

If the director asks for a crate of penguins for The Man Who Came to Dinner, or four puppets for Carnival ... Abracadabra! Betty Dixon can do it. Her proficiency with a needle learned from her mother, or skills with tools learned from her father, makes her more than just a costumer for the Ayden Theatre Workshop. "Usually if I know how something looks, I put it together by trial and error."

She works her costume magic on a 22-year-old Singer purchased to make baby clothes for the first of two daughters. "I wonder how many miles it has sewn?" she muses. A good guess would be "half-way around the world" in the six years she has been sewing for the Workshop.

It is rare for Betty to daydream (she is a confessed workaholic), but when she does, her dreaming takes her backstage of a lavish Braodway musical with an equally lavish budget and a wealth of elegant fabrics at her disposal. Working on a shoestring budget, however, has been her forte. "I absolutely hate to throw anything away," she says. What she keeps is not stored haphazardly. It is put into boxes and labeled. Consequently when ATW chose Camelot as a project, Betty was able to put her hand on a 20-year-old playbill she had saved from the original Broadway production. She studied the cover and replicated Lancelot's and Guenevere's costume. She made some fifty items for that show. The deadline approached and Guenevere's "May" costume was only eight yards of aqua curtain material at dress rehearsal. By noon of the next day it was ready for a fitting. Each night during the run of the play, it sprouted more and more floral trim.

Betty cuts many of her own patterns from her physician husband's examining table paper. Experimenting with muslin or old sheets, she "fiddles with it" till it suits her. "Actually," she says, "I don't make costumes by definition; 'a pin, a piece of cloth and hope it will stay togethert ill the end of a show' — I make things much more finished because they have to be washed and reused. I have kept the Woolite people in business."

She washes things contrary to strict instructions. "I even washed a candlelight satin wedding gown with a cathedral train and when I found it washed successfully, I dyed it gold."

No costume is thrown away and storage has become somewhat of a problem. The Dixon's large home in Ayden has a small basement meant to accommodate their furnace, but it also houses the ghostly garments from Camelot, My Fair Lady, Lion in Winter and Carnival and many of the other twenty or so productions. There, Betty can put her hand on favorite creations and reminisce about the problems she encountered with each and how she solved them.

Betty likes any color as long as it is turquoise. Perhaps that is why she waxes ecstatic over the water off the British Virgin Islands where the Dixons sometimes go to sail and skin-dive. It is there she truly relaxes. By contrast, while sailing the Westwind in local waters, she is usually "fixing stuff."

She inherits her busy-ness from her tool-and-die maker father and nurse-handiworker mother. Betty grew up being encouraged to experiment with machines. She was allowed to run the sewing machine sans material or thread. At age seven, while her mother was recovering from pneumonia, Betty lugged the heavy machine up to her mother's bedside and made her first dress following verbal instructions. Though she continued to make her clothes, she could not make an A in Home Ec because she was required to wear a thimble. "I don't know whether I was just stubborn or what, but I couldn't do it ... still don't."

She learned to use tools by helping her father build a summer place near their home in Rochester, N.Y. Touches of her father's woodworking talent are everywhere in the Dixon home: a laundry chute, a wonderful grandfather clock, her workbench in the garage. "First time I got money for my birthday after we were married, I went out and bought a sabre saw. The second time I bought a drill." Betty repairs things around the house, and built her daughter's balance beam. She talks of building a drafting table. It seemes invariably that before a play, I would develop back problems. Then Elliot began to count how many times I got up and down from my chair while I was doing finishing work on costumes. He suggested I sit on a stool in front of a high table, but I can't find one I like so I guess I am going to have to build it."

Betty rarely gets to see a play. During most of the productions she works backstage primarily assisting the female lead, but doing a hundred other things as well. Mame was a big challenge with seventeen costume changes for the leading lady. Betty laid out each complete outfit on the ironing board, the star dropped whatever she was wearing on the floor and was back on stage with a totally new look in a matter of seconds. In between each flurry Betty picked up, ironed, straightened ties, pinned "this and that" and kept the floor swept.

Ayden Theatre Workshop's last production of Annie found Betty making costumes as well as "trodding the boards" as the villanous Miss Hannigan.

Despite the pins in the carpet and 'burger' dinners before the show, her family accepts and is proud of her avocation. After all, some of the miles on her sewing machine have been devoted to them. She makes Catherine and Mary's "special" outfits, sews her husband's examining robes and linens for his office. Even their Doberman "Lynx" benefits. After the dog's recent bout with an automobile, Betty made a vest to keep her from licking the wounds. Her sewing extends to friends as well. She has made over sixty blue garters for blushing brides.

"Dressing up" and pretending have always been a part of Betty's life. There was always a trunk in her mother's attic where family members could find a costume when one was needed. While she was in the Air Force a storybook romance blossomed after she livened up a social hour with her performance of Honeybun. The then-Lt. Mary E. Kaiser (nurse) married Capt. John E. Dixon (doctor). In recent years their family have all been involved with the Workshop.

Sometimes, when nearly every room in the house is bedecked with costumes-in-the-making, she thinks about retiring. When it's over she looks at "Lancelot's" blue velvet cloak or "Mame's" moon hat and begins to anticipate what new challenge awaits her from the Spring musical 1776. An idea for what Abigail Adams will wear begins to take shape in her mind. Her fingers begin to itch. "It'll be turquiose and ..."

BETTY DIXON . . . adds to the mileage on her 20-year old Singer Sewing machine as she makes yet another costume. (Photo by Maxine Carey Harker)

Humber House Now Serves Community Roles

Dr. Robert Lee Humber's house in downtown Greenville is an architecturally interesting and historically important asset for the people of eastern North Carolina. Built in 1895 and significantly altered during the subsequent 75 years, the house reflects the influence of two generations of the Humber family.

Robert Lee Humber Sr. constructed the house on a lot adjacent to his machine shop in the heart of the city. Originally it consisted of a two-story side hall structure with a one-story kitchen wing in the rear. The exterior, which included a porch on part of the west and north elevations, featured Colonial Revival and Queen Anne details. Humber completed a two-story addition to the east side of the house between 1911 and 1916, giving the structure its present T-plan. The front porch was extended at the same time. Between 1916 and 1923 the family addded another two-story wing to the rear to accommodate a bathroom for the master bedroom upstairs and a sun porch downstairs.

ROBERT LEE HUMBER HOUSE (1895)

Robert Lee Humber Jr. instituted many changes in the structure after his return to Greenville from France at the outbreak of World War II. The younger Humber (1898-1970), who had received his undergraduate and legal degrees from Wake Forest College, studied at Harvard, Oxford University's New College and the Sorbonne in Paris prior to working as an international attorney and oil company executive in Paris during the 1930s. Humber, his wife, Lucie Berthier, and their two sons fled France in 1940 as it was being overrun by German forces.

Upon his return to Greenville, Robert Lee Humber divided much of his time between public service and the renovation of his father's home. During the 1940s, Humber worked to establish a World Federation in which participating nations would abide by the laws of a single government. Although his efforts failed, he received widespread recognition for his work on behalf of world peace.

Largely because of Humber's initiative, the North Carolina General Assembly in 1947 appropriated $1 million for the purchase of an art collection. The appropriation was matched with works of art donated by the Samuel H. Kress Foundation of New York. Humber's dream of a new art museum for North Carolina became a reality in 1956 when the State Art Gallery moved to spacious quarters in the renovated Highway Building in Raleigh to become the North Carolina Museum of Art.

Humber also served his area as a member of the North Carolina Senate (1959-1963) and as a founder of Pitt County Technical Institute.

The Humbers spent much of the period after their departure from France in renovating their new home. They contracted with several craftsmen to design and install impressive plaster molding and elegant Georgian and Federal woodwork throughout the structure. Humber even dug out a basement and finished its rooms with paneling similar to that found in English houses of the Georgian period. Marble mantels brought from Europe were installed in the drawing room and the sitting room. When Dr. Humber died in 1970, the house was an appropriate setting for his valuable antiques and works of art, even though he had not completed the alterations he had planned.

Brahms Requiem April 29

(Reprinted by permission from "Circa '84," Vol. 4, No. 4)

"A German Requiem, after the words of the Holy Scripture," (Op.45) is probably the best and most popular choral work ever written by Johannes Brahms.

Finished in 1868, this composition is traditionally believed to have been inspired by Brahm's grief over the death of his friend, Robert Schumann, and his own beloved mother. It is a "mourning cantata based on passages from the scriptures" rather than the customary Catholic Requiem Mass for the Dead.

Brahms wrote this work for humanity as a whole to give consolation and confidence to the living. His optimistic spirit pervades the somber music from the opening line, "Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted," to the fine spiritual and musical union of all men in the lines, "Blessed are the dead ... that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

The six-movement composition has often been considered Brahms' "most personal musical expression." One of the most widely known of the six is the beautiful fourth section, "How lovely is thy dwelling place, O Lord of Hosts." This piece, along with the other five movements, will be performed in English by the Greenville Choral Society and Orchestra, assisted by the Men's and Women's Glee Club from the ECU School of Music.

The baritone solo will be sung by Thoms Mercer and the soprano solo will feature Jon Shaw.

The concert will be in Wright Auditorium on the ECU campus April 29 at 3 p.m. Admission for the general public is $3.50 at the door.

Laing To Judge Show

Dr. Richard H. Laing, professor of art at East Carolina University and development specialist in cultural affairs, Regional Development Institute, ECU, will judge the Grifton Shad Festival Art Show in April, according to Maxine Carey Harker, volunteer art coordinator for Town of Grifton Arts.

Opry House Dance Night On April 3

How often does real family entertainment come along — the kind that grandma can enjoy just as much as your 5 year old? At least once a year, is the answer from the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, sponsors of the Eastern Carolina Arts Festival and of Music and Dance Night at the Opry House!

For the past three years, Music and Dance Night has proven itself to be family entertainment: clogging contests (for young and old), fiddle, guitar and accordian music, square and round dancing, singing and everything that is "down home country" or bluegrass.

Audiences have doubled in size each year as the event moved toward becoming a tradition. This year's Music and Dance Night will be on April 3, with the doors opening at 6 p.m. and the music starting at 6:30p.m. Admission is $1 for all ages and can be paid at the door or to the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, 757-1785.

The Shad Festival Art Show, which in the past has attracted much favorable comment from visitors and professional artists, will be held Saturday and Sunday afternoons, April 14 and 15. The show will be in the lobby of the Grifton Historical Museum at the Grifton Civic Center. Hours are noon-6 p.m. both days and there is no admission charge for visitors and no entry fee exhibitors.

Ribbons will be awarded for adult and student work in a number of categories including sculpture and photography if four or more entries are received in these categories.

Work must be ready to hang and should be taken to the Museum either Wednesday, April 11 from 2-10 p.m. or Friday, April 13 from 10 a.m.-7 p.m. Advance notice to Mrs. Harker of intention to exhibit will be appreciated. She may be contacted at 524-4691 or by writing to Box 225, Grifton, N.C. 28530.

The Grifton Shad Festival Art Show is a featured attraction of the Eastern Carolina Arts Festival and one of the highlights of the annual Grifton Shad Festival. This year's Shad Festival is April 10-15 and will include over 25 other events to appeal to every age and interest.

Information about other Shad Festival activities may be had by writing to the Grifton Shad Festival, Box 928, Grifton, N.C. 28530 or calling 524-4356. This is the 14th annual Shad Fetival and the theme this year is "Shad Fever — Catch It!"

All Eyes On North Carolina

All eyes will be on North Carolina this summer, as the kick-off event begins for a national celebration honoring the landing and settling of English-speaking people in America.

The event will open with a program in Manteo on July 13, where English royalty and top-ranking U.S. diplomats will meet to keynote the national-international event.

From there the celebration will quickly spread across the state from county to county where planned programs and events, currently in preparation, will be unveiled. This three-year-long highlight event of the decade, which began on the anniversary date of the landing, will run until Aug. 18, 1987, the anniversary of the birthdate of Virginia Dare, the first child born of English parents in the New World.

People will be able to see the ship Elizabeth II docked at the newly prepared welcome site in Manteo. A special flotilla of 60 boats will move from Elizabeth City to Manteo on the opening day. Other cities and towns are dressing up their buildings to receive the expected flood of people visiting historic sites

Funds for the Elizabeth II were raised by the American Quadricentennial Corporation, a private, non-profit organization. The corporation assists American's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee (AFHAC), the branch of the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources coordinating the commemoration.

Locally, the Pitt County 400th Committee is promoting a project to allow a new Tobacco Museum to be placed in the Village of Yesterday in the County Fair Park.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

BRITTANY SPEAKS SMALL WORDS SLOWLY

Dallas bad girl Kathryn Wentworth could probably give Dynasty bad girl Alexis Carrington a run for her money. But offscreen, Morgan Brittany, who plays the Texas temptress, insists she is nothing like her character — well, almost nothing like her character. "I did play a practical joke on one of the cameramen on Dallas recently," she acknowledges. "I saw him having dinner with his girlfriend, so I sent him over an unsigned note that read, 'Thank you for last night' and had a thick lipstick imprint on it. It was a terrible thing to do," admits Morgan, who later confessed all. She probably said J.R. made her do it.

Sixteen-year-old Tasia Valenza, currently on view as Dottie Thornton in the ABC daytime trauma All My Children and the new Louis (Pretty Baby) Malle comedy, Crackers, has been compared to Brooke Shields and Nastassja Kinski. But Valenza, whose first name rhymes with Fantasia, is not overwhelmed by the comparison or the compliment, thank you very much. "I don't want to be another Brooke or Nastassja," she shrugs. "I want to be the next Tasia Valenza." That seems easy enough to arrange.

CHRISTOPHER REEVE'S SUPERHUMAN STORY

We all know that Superman hath no fear greater than Kryptonite, so why would the man of steel quiver in his cape over Alice in Wonderland? Ask Christopher Reeve, who as a small boy was terrified by the Lewis Carroll classic. "The whole book scared me, especially the part about the Mad Hatter's tea party," he explains. Worse, the girls in Reeve's class did not share his alarm. "I made myself feel better by believing they'd be terrified by the Robert Louis Stevenson adventure stories that I loved."

The critics have had hearts of glass when appraising rocker Debbie Harry's nonmusical efforts. With the flop of her Broadway show Teaneck Tanzi: The Venus Flytrap and the chilly reception accorded her film Videodrome, Harry has decided to confine her show-biz activities to singing.

HARRY SINGS, SINGS, SINGS

Jack Nicholson and Amy Irving are among the glitterati bent on reviving dances like the Twist and the Mashed Potatoes. When Nicholson recently took to the floor of the New York rock club Heartbreak, everyone else cleared the area to let the star go through his turns of endurance.

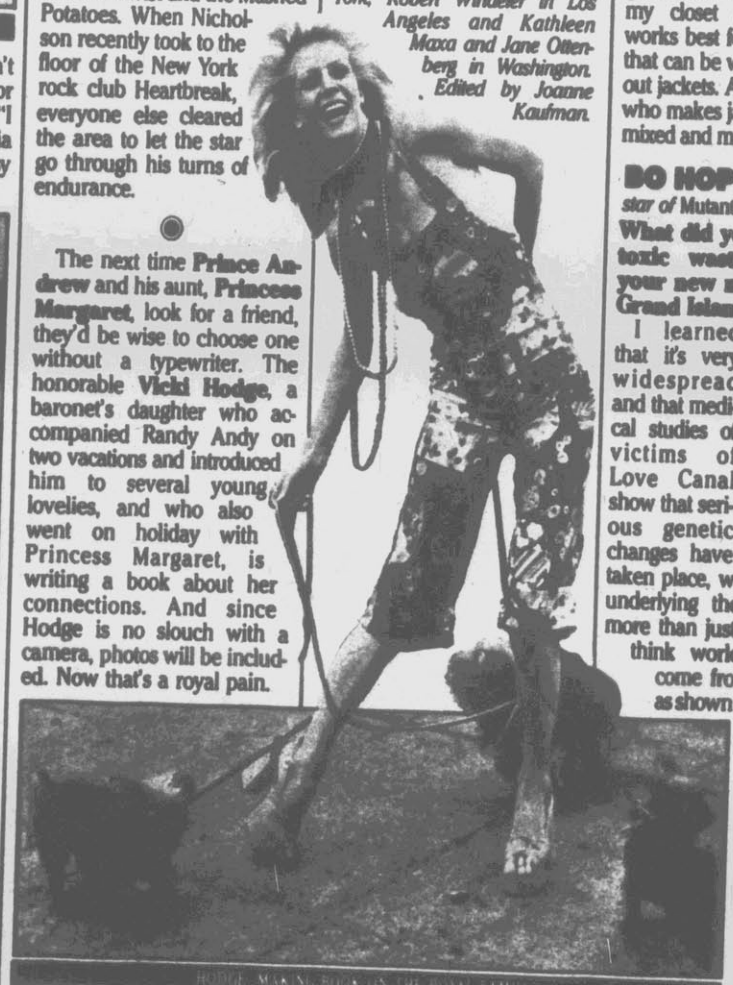
The next time Prince Andrew and his aunt, Princess Margaret, look for a friend, they'd be wise to choose one without a typewriter. The honorable Vicki Hodge, a baronet's daughter who accompanied Randy Andy on two vacations and introduced him to several young lovelies, and who also went on holiday with Princess Margaret, is writing a book about her connections. And since Hodge is no slouch with a camera, photos will be included. Now that's a royal pain.



HODGE MAKING BOOK ON THE ROYAL FAMILY

William Hurt needn't be surprised if he gets the big chill from playwright and fellow actor Sam Shepard should the two meet on the street. Recently, while holding court at the San Francisco restaurant Mama's, Bill was overheard being less than kind about Sam: things like The Right Stuff star was pretty stiff as a performer. "In all his movies, he's used only six facial muscles," claimed Hurt. "He doesn't want to be an actor; he wants to be a star."

SHEPARD: HURT'S REMARKS

MARY TYLER MOORE

actress

Do you have any system for planning your wardrobe? S.V., Anderson, Ind.

No. My system is based on desperation. I never know ahead of time what I'm going to wear. Half an hour before I go, I head for my closet and grab. What works best for me are dresses that can be worn with or without jackets. And I have a tailor who makes jackets that can be mixed and matched with skirts.

BO HOPKINS

star of Mutant

What did you learn about toxic waste in making your new movie? — D.R., Grand Island, Neb.

I learned that it's very widespread and that medical studies of victims of Love Canal show that serious genetic changes have taken place, which makes the underlying theme of Mutant more than just fiction. I don't think world disaster will come from the skies — as shown in the television film The Day After — but rather through reckless poisoning of our land. Not only our country, but the world should be aware of and alerted to this danger.

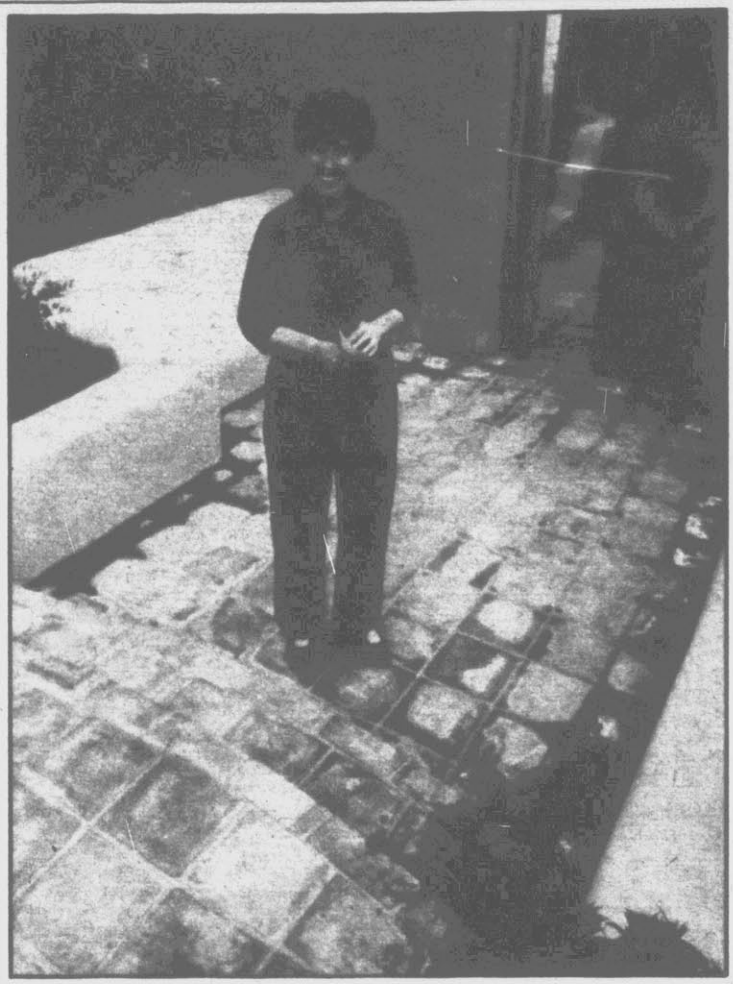
Erma Bombeck: At Home With Success

When your career is cooking and your family life is fine, it's easy to be in good humor.

By Rubin Carson

Rampantly in touch with her inner life, strikingly middle-aged, Erma Bombeck is America's premier Mom. She writes a humor column three times a week for 900 newspapers from her home in Paradise Valley, Ariz.; appears twice a week on ABC's Good Morning America; and her most recent book, Motherhood, The Second Oldest Profession, has been a best seller for more than 24 weeks. She has a loving husband, William, and three children, who have never published a book about her. She calls her mom and stepdad at least once a week.

Each evening, Bill comes home and asks, "So what have you been doing all day?" Los Angeles-based writer and humorist Rubin Carson talked to the amazing Erma recently to try to find out the same thing — plus a lot more. Here is his report.



Bombeck outside her Arizona home: "I'm not a person who's 'on' all the time."

Carson: Hello, Erma. I'm a satirist myself but, naturally, not as successful as you.
Bombeck: Maybe you haven't worked on it that long.

Q: Well, that isn't what my wife would say. Anyway, I really loved your book on motherhood. I was kind of shocked because you went to places that caught me unaware: I found myself crying as well as laughing.
Bombeck: Yes, I surprised many readers.

Q: O.K., now let's see: Age — under 40, or over 30?
Bombeck: 56. I'm not ashamed of it.

Q: I haven't watched you perform much but—
Bombeck: Listen, I was 37 when I began. I've been writing for 20 years. I'm in prime time.

Q: And your marital status?
Bombeck: Very married.

Q: "Very married" — how long?
Bombeck: Thirty-four years last August.

Q: Incredible. And three children?
Bombeck: Uh-huh.

Q: So what are you working on right now?
Bombeck: Well, the bread-and-butter stuff I always work on: my column and TV scripts. And since February I've been committed to do a Broadway play for Larry Kasha and his partner.

Q: I was just going to ask you why you didn't do a play!
Bombeck: I didn't do it before because I've been committed to other things. I was committed to my ill-fated television series, Maggie, which ran eight times and floated into oblivion.

Q: What will the play be about?
Bombeck: I don't know; I have no idea. I have ideas, but — let's forget the whole thing. It makes me nervous!

Q: O.K. What was your first job as a kid?
Bombeck: Ironically enough, it was as a copy girl. I was 16 years old and worked on a small daily paper in Ohio. I was in a vocational high school and —

Q: A vocational high school?!
Bombeck: I had no idea of ever going to college or ever doing anything except maybe, you know, selling orange slices at the dime store. That was my big thing. But I loved newspapering and I loved being around things that were happening, and that's what I decided I wanted to do.

Q: Did your family think you were funny?
Bombeck: No. No, I don't think, when you're around someone all the time, that you see that dimension in him or her a lot. It would get a little tiresome. I'm not a person who's "on" all the time. If we were at a party, you would not sit next to me.

Q: Oh, I would.
Bombeck: No you wouldn't. You'd say, "Oh, I bet I know which one Bombeck is — she's the one there in the center who's doing all the talking," and you'd be wrong! I'd be having a paper plate of hors d'oeuvres over in a dark corner by myself, or hiding out.

Q: You mean, socially you're a loner, is that it?
Bombeck: I am. I do real well with a couple of people — I do fine with a couple of people — three or four at a table, you know, it's good conversation and I enjoy it.

Q: I don't want to hear any more! What's your favorite pig-out food?
Bombeck: I'm a big pasta freak. I love pasta! Any pasta! Anything that has starch in it and adheres to my hips and grows as we speak of it.

Q: Do you have any favorite restaurant you go to after a fight with your husband?
Bombeck: We don't fight all that much. It's really counterproductive, and we're too old and too tired. We know that both of us are too exhausted to shop anymore. It's sort of a quiet resolution. Not *rev*olution — *re*solution!

Q: A quiet resolution.
Bombeck: Hassling takes a lot of energy, you know, and we never seem able to come up to it. We don't seem to have that kind of energy.

Q: So at 56 the fire is missing.
Bombeck: No, we never really had a lot of it. We are a couple who allows each other to be — always have. Even before I became a card-carrying feminist, it was always understood that we both would do what we enjoy doing. We enjoy each other's company, but on vacations, if he wants to scuba and I want to snorkel, that's it. We don't come as a totally matched set.

Q: And it's always been like that?
Bombeck: Oh, yes.

Q: What was your first date like?
Bombeck: Well, I sort of picked him out. I knew he was the one I was going to marry. He had no idea about that, but that's all right. He sort of saw it coming.

Q: Where did you meet him?
Bombeck: He was a copy boy for the morning newspaper in Ohio, and I was the copy girl for the afternoon paper. It was inevitable.

Q: Is he a writer, too?
Bombeck: He was a sportswriter for a while. Then he got a Ph.D. in education administration and became a principal of a high school. He retired about four years ago and now handles our business affairs.

Q: Do you have any significant childhood memories?
Bombeck: I don't have too many bad memories of childhood.

Q: Well, let me help you. You almost never mention your father in your articles. . . .
Bombeck: My father died when I was 9, and I have a stepfather who is fantastic. Why I let him alone, I'll never know — I pick on my mother a lot!

Q: O.K., I'm still going to play

A Tomus/Family Weekly

shrink: So you identified more with your mother, apparently.
Bombeck: Yes, well, you see, my mother was married at 14 and had me when she was 16, so there is this almost-sister relationship. We also spent a couple of years by ourselves after my father died, and there's something about a crisis that brings people together; when you survive something like that, there's a bond that's really very difficult to explain.

Q: Well, maybe you took over for your father. That's what often happens. When a parent dies, one of the children seems to take over the role of that parent.
Bombeck: My mother and I have a good relationship. It's a firm, strong one. I don't dissect it, I don't tamper with it; I just enjoy it.

Q: Do you make New Year's resolutions?
Bombeck: I don't make too many resolutions. They're just sort of ludicrous, and I always end up breaking them anyway. I just hope to God every year that my car passes its emission test. I'm very shallow, very shallow — no depth at all.

Q: I don't believe that. You couldn't do satire as well as you do without having a lot of pain and anger.
Bombeck: You just have to be off-the-wall.

Q: Who do you think has the best job in the world?
Bombeck [after pondering a moment]: I want Charles Kurault's job! I think it's great, because he is ferreting out the bits of Americana that are just there, and he mines some great stuff out of just being ordinary. To be able to do that and to have that kind of freedom must be just wonderful. I would love to do that.

Q: What was the worst advice your mother ever gave you?
Bombeck: "Eat everything on your plate!" The woman should be put away forever for that remark. I mean, thanks to her, I'm still wearing the queen-size panty hose. If she'd just kept her mouth shut, I probably would have developed some decent eating habits. I'd have stopped eating when I was full. And I would have sent the rest to the garbage can, where it really belonged.

Q: If you could change one thing about yourself, what would it be?
Bombeck: Well, I think that's obvious. My God! I was born to be a nymph, a svelte nymph...I would change my weight, of course.

Q: Is that the only thing?
Bombeck: Sure. From the waist down, where the sand has shifted. I would really love to be thin. It's something I talk about all the time, and sometimes I get on the road to it, but I never quite reach my destination.

Q: Now that you're a celebrity, what are some of the things you can no longer do?
Bombeck: A lot of things — it's very limiting. You can't sit out in public and yell at your kids. You can't scream at your husband. And really, I have so much guilt: Rarely can I walk into a store without buying something I don't want or need, because the salespeople are standing there at your elbow and saying, "We're so glad you came into our store." I mean, you can't just say, "Oh, you have a nice shop here" and walk out! I mean, forget it, you know?

Q: So you probably never go into shops.
Bombeck: It's not only shops. You have to tip more, too; that's expected of you. For instance, to get my luggage back, I figure I've paid 18,000 times what the luggage is worth. I'd like to just leave it right there at the airport and say, "It's yours!"

Q: What was the worst time in your life?
Bombeck: I guess it was when my father died and my whole world came apart. I was just 9 years old, you know. On June 3rd, I had a house, I had toys, I had a mom and dad, we had a car and I was in school and I had friends. On June 4th, I didn't have a house anymore; we were living in a room at Grandma's. I had no father. My mother went to work. It was like someone had pulled the rug out from under me. In one day, my whole life just changed, and things were never the same as they had been, nor would they ever be again. It's a traumatic thing to have happen to you.

Q: Well, that's why you're so funny. I see, from your pieces, that it's all unresolved grief and anger over your father's death. This is all very California, of course.
Bombeck: Grief and anger you get out of that?

Q: It's all displaced grief and anger. That's what a shrink would tell you. Anyway, what was the best time of your life?
Bombeck: The best time was back in Centerville, Ohio, when I had three kids under age 5 and I knew what I was supposed to be doing, and I did it. I got great satisfaction out of taking clean-smelling laundry off the line, having those three tucked away at night with clean feet. It was a good time of my life.

Q: Isn't that strange! That is the time most women would remember as the most horrible.
Bombeck: I know, and I write about that now. It was trying; it was the best of times and the worst of times. But to feel needed and productive and know what you're all about and be something special to someone else — it had all the ingredients, it really did.

Q: O.K., if you've learned one thing in life, what is it?
Bombeck: I've learned a lot about relationships with my kids, I think, because I've written so much about it. One of the things is that the one who deserves your attention the least needs it the most — and that's hard to do. When a child has defied you and says, "I hate you and I don't want you around anymore!" that's when he or she really needs you. That's the time you've got to hang in there.

Q: Do you consider your children your best friends?
Bombeck: I'll give you the honest answer: no. A best friend to me really is someone that you can unload on and tell everything to and he or she won't be shocked. I don't think most parents have that kind of relationship with their children. I love them and I'd do anything for them and I think there's a great affection from me, but I don't think children should be friends! I still think I have a great parent-child relationship with my kids.

Q: Do you have a best friend?
Bombeck: Oh, yes.

Q: Who is he or she?
Bombeck: I call her Mavis in the column, but her name is Marianna Cochran, and we've been friends since we were sophomores in college. She never goes on a diet when I'm fat. She's a wonderful person. We have sustained each other, and a good friend is someone you don't have to maintain like a car. If I don't talk to Marianna in three, four weeks, two months, it doesn't matter. We pick up the phone and we go again. We're honest with one another; we can say things to one another; we're genuinely glad to see one another. I can count on her during the bad times. My sister died last May and I went back to Ohio. Marianna was there and, you know, we sat there for a whole evening and she just let me talk. I mean, that's what a friend is all about.

Q: What do you think of those people who say their spouse is their best friend?
Bombeck: Bill and I share a ton of stuff, but women think a little differently than men. Their attitudes toward things are different.

Q: O.K., I have just two more questions for you. Do you go to high school reunions?
Bombeck: I went to a couple of them. They were very depressing. I've never forgiven people for not letting me be a cheerleader with my thighs. So I'm really quite hostile when I go. They say, "It's nice to see you," and I say, "Oh, sure!" It's too late to make up, sweetie!

Q: And now for my final question! What will your epitaph be?
Bombeck: You don't really want my epitaph, do you?

Q: Yes, I do!
Bombeck: O.K., here goes: "YOU WANT THIN, YOU GOT THIN!"

Q: Is that it?
Bombeck: Isn't that sick?!

Q: Yes, that is sick. But, as they say in California, thank you for sharing anyway.
Bombeck: Bye-bye, and thank you for sharing. FW

THE WARNING SIGNS OF STROKE

By Linda Marsa

Each year, more than half a million Americans are stricken with stroke, the nation's third most common cause of death. Thanks to medical advances, however, the number of deaths caused by a stroke has dropped 40 percent in the past few decades, and physicians can now treat likely candidates with drugs or delicate surgical procedures that can prevent or postpone one. Heeding certain warning signs can cut down your chance of having a stroke by as much as half.

Four out of five stroke sufferers have actually experienced a mini-stroke — known in medical jargon as a transient ischemic attack (T.I.A.) — prior to a major one. "Roughly 30 percent of those who experience T.I.A.'s will have a stroke within five years," cautions Dr. Albert Yellin, director of vascular research at Los Angeles-County-University of Southern California Medical Center.

Transient ischemic attacks occur when there's a brief reduction of the blood flow to a section of the brain, triggering a momentary lapse in the bodily functions governed by that area of the brain. It could be compared to a temporary power failure in a computer.

"For its size, the brain requires an enormous amount of oxygen and glucose to work, so it needs a continuous supply of blood," explains Dr. Michael D. Walker, director of the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke.

Most frequently, T.I.A.'s are characterized by a weakness or immobility on one side of the body, particularly in the arms, hands, legs or the facial muscles. Less common, but equally ominous, are symptoms such as difficulty swallowing and articulating or understanding words. Or there may be brief spells of blurry vision or partial blindness. Even a sudden headache, a temporary loss of balance or forgetfulness could be due to a T.I.A. Once the blood flow returns to normal, the symptoms disappear, usually within a few minutes, or at most, 24 hours.

Because these symptoms are transitory and often vague, the critical question is: At what point should you become genuinely alarmed? "Stroke is more likely to occur with people who have high blood pressure, diabetes or heart disease," says Dr. Mark Goldberg, head of the neurology department at Harbor-U.C.L.A. Medical Center in Torrance. And the incidence of stroke increases dramatically after age 60. Anyone who falls into these categories and exhibits recurring symptoms of a T.I.A. should see his or her doctor immediately.

The most common cause of these attacks is when small blood clots, which can be produced by a hardening of the arteries or by tissue breaking loose from some other part of the body, plug up the vessels leading to the brain. Normally, these can be dissolved with anticoagulants, and even daily doses of aspirin have been an effective stroke preventative in men. T.I.A.'s can also result from arteriosclerosis, a buildup of fatty deposits inside the major arteries, which gradually reduces the blood flow. A combination of a low cholesterol diet and drugs may control this problem, though in more extreme cases, surgery to remove excess tissue or to clean the insides of the vessels may be necessary.

The best stroke prevention, however, is treating the cause. While you can't control such risk factors as age, sex (men are more prone to stroke than premenopausal women) or hereditary dispositions, there's plenty you can do about habits that indirectly contribute to stroke, such as stress, inactivity, obesity, smoking and taking oral contraceptives past age 40. Dr. Yellin advises, "Go after what you can control to change the odds in your favor." FW

LABOR MARKET

GETTING JOBBED BY A CHANGING ECONOMY

THE TERRIBLE TRAUMA OF WORKERS WHOSE SKILLS SOCIETY NO LONGER NEEDS

By Steve Lerner

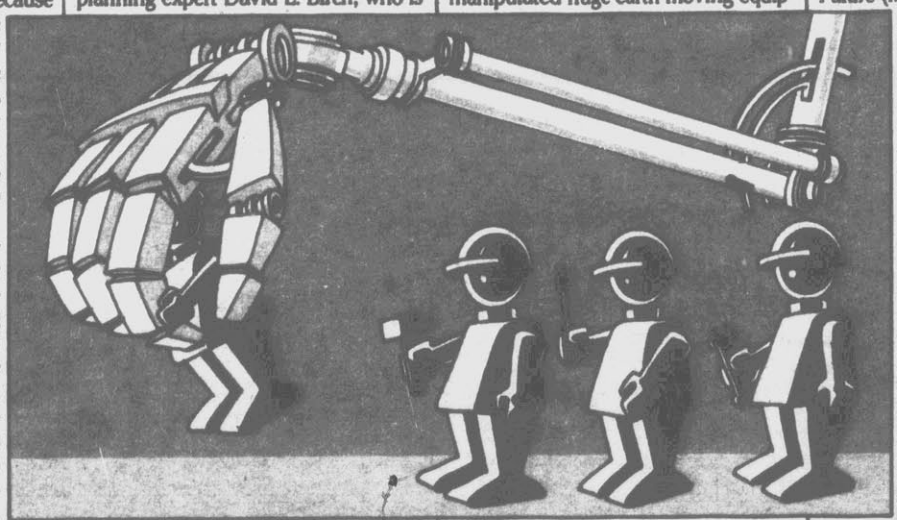
Much as we all like to complain about the necessity of work, having a job gives us a sense of self-worth, as well as bringing structure, rhythm and stability to our lives. Unfortunately, during the last two decades millions of Americans have lost the benefits of steady work as joblessness in this country has escalated alarmingly.

What's more, a substantial portion of these laid-off workers face the possibility of never being re-employed at comparable salary or skill levels, because their training and abilities have been rendered obsolete by changes in the economy. Some experts even speculate that this group of laborers is no longer essential to the economy at all and have coined the ominous term "superfluous workers" to describe them.

Labor leaders and Government officials prefer to use the less controversial term "displaced workers" when talking about the phenomenon. But whatever these workers are called, they will be a problem in the 80's, as the economy continues its shift from being a goods producer to one in which most job opportunities are in the service and information sector. These dramatic changes in the economy are making moot the skills of a growing number of blue-collar (and, to a lesser extent, white-collar) workers, especially with the introduction of high-tech computers and robots into the workplace.

Although pinning down the exact number of displaced employees is problematic (a Federal survey is under way), experts estimate that it is in the millions. Attesting to the growth of job displacement is the fact that during the last three business cycles, the minimum level of unemployment has escalated from 3.5 to 5 to 5.9 percent, reports David M. Gordon, professor of economics at the New School for Social Research in New York City, in his book Beyond the Waste Land: A Democratic Alternative to the Economic Decline (Anchor/Doubleday). Although Washington tells us that unemployment has fallen from a high of 10.8 percent in December 1982, to 8.2 percent in December 1983, even the most optimistic economists think it unlikely that unemployment will fall below 7 percent during the recovery. Thus, celebrating the current dip in unemployment statistics may be a bit premature.

Particularly hard hit by the displacement trend have been the lunch-pail, clock-punching, hard-hat workers who were once considered the backbone of the American industrial miracle: printers, coal and copper miners, refinery employees, automobile and steel workers. Indeed, much of the increase in displacement has been attributed to the long-term shift from heavy industry and manufacturing to an information and service-oriented economy. "We are working ourselves out of the manufacturing business and into the thinking business," says M.I.T. architecture and planning expert David L. Birch, who is quoted in John Naisbitt's book Megatrends (Warner). But acknowledging this does little to help people such as Dennis Betleyoun, 43, a displaced rubber worker from Akron, Ohio. Married and the father of three, Betleyoun has lost not only his job, but also his car, his house and, most significantly, his sense of being a useful, productive member of society.



Eric Carrier

Miners who once manipulated huge earth-moving equipment are now folding laundry.

The experiences of Germany, Scandinavia and Japan indicate that retraining workers and intentionally creating new jobs is indeed possible and desirable. But training programs in American industry are proceeding slowly. President Reagan has addressed himself to the problem via the Government's Job Training Partnership Act, which has allocated $215 million to retrain workers who have permanently lost their jobs due to the recession.

In the meantime, displaced workers who have not been reached by industrial or Governmental retraining efforts are becoming what Fortune magazine has described as "foot soldiers in the armies of the service economy." Accustomed to handling heavy machinery in an industrial setting, most of these laborers are being thrown into competition for lower paying jobs in the service economy. Miners who once manipulated huge earth-moving equipment are suddenly finding themselves folding laundry, steel workers are flipping hamburgers and oil-refinery workers are bagging groceries, all at a fraction of the wages they previously made. Bob Tinkle, for example, who was earning more than $13 an hour when he was laid off two years ago at the Climax Molybdenum Mine in Leadville, Colo., now has a temporary job hanging siding for $6.25 an hour. He cannot find steady work.

The A.F.L.-C.I.O. is concerned about the displacement trend. "Four to six million jobless workers may become a permanent labor-surplus underclass in a polarized, two-tier society," the labor organization writes in its pamphlet "The Future of Work." On top will be a small group of highly paid and highly skilled executives, scientists, engineers and managers; on the bottom there will be a large number of workers holding dull, dangerous, low-paying, routinized jobs. This kind of polarized work force, experts note, is an ideal recipe for social ferment.

Futurists project that the introduction of the robot into the factory and the computer into the office may soon eliminate even more jobs. While there were only 1,400 industrial robots in the world in 1981, it is estimated that 100,000 to 200,000 mechanical workers may be on the assembly lines in the U.S. alone by 1990. A French Government report predicts that a third of the jobs in the insurance and banking industries will be displaced during the next 10 years due to widespread use of the computer.

But if robots destroy some jobs, they will also spawn a whole new field requiring numerous technicians, as Marvin Cetron and Thomas O'Toole write in their book Encounters with the Future (McGraw-Hill). The robot industry itself may employ more than a million workers by the turn of the century. Furthermore, as long as the number of working hours is adjusted downward as technology increases productivity, no one need lose his job.

Lest the displacement phenomenon in this country be made to look artificially grim, Naisbitt points out that we are now creating 600,000 new small businesses a year. Clearly, displaced workers would do well to heed this trend and look for opportunities to start a small business — however modest — of their own, or join a small firm in an expanding sector of the economy.

But that is easier said than done for many of these people, who find themselves without the training or capital to start businesses of their own. Many live in pockets of industrial unemployment where there simply are no jobs to be had, and they can't afford to relocate. Mary Wehrs, a laid-off aircraft worker in Wichita, Kan., for instance, was only able to land temporary work with her local Job Service Center, where she tried to help other unemployed people find work. During that period she heard of thousands of other skilled machinists like herself looking for jobs. "These are proud people who don't want to go on welfare but they have no choice," says Wehrs.

"It is awful to get up in the morning and look forward to a day of submitting applications for jobs you know you won't get," she adds. "I don't feel good about myself when I'm not productive. I'd flip burgers at McDonalds or make beds in a hotel if I could. The wages are no longer a big deal these days; just having a job is a big deal." FW

GETTING PERSONAL WITH

KEITH BARISH

FROM REAL-ESTATE DEALS TO HOT HOLLYWOOD PROPERTIES

Five years ago, Florida real-estate magnate Keith Barish decided he wanted a different lot in life—a back lot, to be precise—and moved out to Los Angeles to be a film producer. Barish got his start with Endless Love and Kiss Me Goodbye, then made his mark with Sophie's Choice, which he purchased for an astounding $750,000. Now he has his own company to finance and produce films. Among his latest ventures are the TV production of A Streetcar Named Desire, starring Ann-Margret, and the just-released film Misunderstood, with Gene Hackman. Barish, 39, talked about his flourishing second career in a FAMILY WEEKLY interview with writer Michelle Willens.

Willens: What turned you into a Hollywood producer?

Barish: I just got tired of business. I began wondering, "Is this it?" I didn't want my financial statement to be my obituary.

Q: What is your new film, Misunderstood, about?

Barish: It's about the relationship between two boys and their father. It's a personal film, not commercial; small but special. The worst movies are usually those that start out as commercial projects. No one went into Terms of Endearment saying, "This is going to make money." You go with something because you believe in it. Even so, you can have all the right intentions and still a movie won't work. One problem with doing important movies is that you're judged more harshly by the critics.

Q: What does it take to be a good movie producer?

Barish: It really takes taste, judgment, the ability to recognize good material and to put the right elements together. Money is the least important factor.

Q: Do you find Hollywood exciting and glamorous?

Barish: No, it's a real company town; everyone talks business. People go to bed early and read scripts on weekends. It gets boring, so I need to get away a lot. I have a wife of 14 years and a 10-year-old child, and I spend a lot of time with them to keep balanced.

Q: Do you think of a movie producer as a figure of power?

Barish: The President of the United States is powerful. Doctors who save lives are powerful. I think a movie producer can do good by making important movies, but I don't know if that is having power. FW

MENTAL HEALTH

IMAGINARY PALS: SUCH GOOD FRIENDS

By Susan Lapinski

"Don't sit in that chair, Mommy!" cries 3-year-old Lauren. "Baby Kippy's already sitting there."

Looking at the empty stool, Lauren's mother isn't at all sure she should go along with her daughter's fantasy about having a live-in buddy. "Is it normal for a child to have an imaginary friend?" she asks herself.

The answer is yes, within reasonable limits, according to professionals. In fact, expert opinion about children's imaginary friends is virtually unanimous on the point that they are actually a sign of good health. "Usually, an imaginary friend is part of a normal, sound childhood need to fantasize," says child psychologist Jonathan Kellerman, Ph.D., an associate clinical professor of pediatrics at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles and author of Helping the Fearful Child (W. W. Norton). He suggests that parents not dissuade their child but instead make room for the imaginary pal. "By condemning the fantasy, parents cut off a major avenue of communication for a child," he warns.

Teresa Anderko

Parents sometimes worry because they associate talking to such a friend with mental illness in adults. But most children actually know the difference between a real friend and an invisible one, according to Peggy Miles, M.A., director of the Children's Education Center at Catholic University in Washington, D.C. "If you ask them about it, they'll say, 'Oh, it's just pretend,'" she explains.

Studies a few years ago at Yale University found that as many as 70 percent of children under 5 talk about having these kinds of friends. And children with fantasy companions tend to be brighter, show greater ability to concentrate and are generally happier, the researchers concluded.

Preschoolers are the most likely age group to have imaginary companions, as the boundaries between fantasy and reality are most blurred then. Once a child starts school and increases his number of real companions, the need for a fantasy friend often subsides. But for as long as they're around, imaginary pals can help children in different ways.

"For Lauren, worrying that Baby Kippy has a place to sit may fill a need in her to look after another individual, in the same way that her parents care for her," says Miles.

An imaginary buddy can also give a child the feeling that he is in charge of a situation. For example, Robert O'Brien, M.A., a teacher at the Children's Education Center, recalls that as a preschooler, his imaginary pet — a big dog — faithfully followed him everywhere.

Sometimes, kids will use this friend to echo their parents' commands — "Be careful with that glass of milk" — as a way of trying to understand the rules they themselves are being asked to follow. Or they may use him or her to convey thoughts they are embarrassed to express directly. A little girl who is afraid of the dark, for example, may find it easier to ask for a night-light for "my friend Joey" than to admit to her fear.

"Imaginary friends help children deal with a stressful situation by distancing themselves from it," says Dr. Kellerman. "It's a child's version, in a way, of the adult who telephones a therapist and says, 'I have this friend with a problem, Doc . . . .'"

Parents only need to worry when an imaginary companion begins taking over a child's life by blocking the need for real friends, or seriously disrupting family routines. "Don't cancel a family trip because the imaginary playmate is sick," says Dr. Kellerman.

But he and Miles agree that it's fine for parents to make small accommodations for an invisible pal, such as turning on a night-light. "Be matter of fact," counsels Miles.

If parents can relax and enjoy their children's imaginary friends, the result could be that the creativity that launched the fantasy will last a lifetime. That's what happened to Robert Louis Stevenson, who turned the imaginary friends of his childhood into the magical characters of Treasure Island and other beloved books. FW

A MESSAGE FOR ALL PARENTS

Send Them Home LTD. CAN HELP YOU!

THE FOLLOWING COULD BE PRICELESS TO YOUR FAMILY!

A program has been thoughtfully assembled to assist parents in gathering NECESSARY information BEFORE a loved one vanishes. It provides insight into prevention and tells you what to do if tragedy strikes. Included for you is an instrument which Local and State Police can use to coordinate their efforts with the FBI for positive, permanent identifiction nationwide.

"A child's disappearance, a tragedy repeated 1.8 million times each year in the United States, is a national problem . . ."

"Some are murdered; many thousands more are never found. We can only speculate about the great risks of physical harm and sexual exploitation that may befall these children. We share the grief and anguish of the families who have yet to learn about their children's fate."

"Millions of children remain at risk, vulnerable to abduction, abuse, and murder. It is imperative that the Federal Government assume a more active role."

Above are a FEW words from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE, October 27, 1983, resulting in the signing of the MISSING CHILDREN'S ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1983. This Act provides Local Authorities, State Police, and Parents with Technical Assistance from the FBI.

HUMAN DRIVE

There's no trick to exceeding the speed limit from behind the wheel of your car, but just how fast can a person go on his own? The existing speed record for a single-rider, human-powered vehicle is 58.89 miles per hour, achieved by Dave Grylls on a vector tricycle in 1980. Recently the Du Pont Company commissioned a study to determine what the limit would really be. Their computers suggested that no human could top 65 m.p.h. in a vehicle he powers himself.

So now Du Pont has issued a challenge, offering a prize of $15,000 to the first person to exceed 65 m.p.h. unaided.

While this race will definitely go to the swift, you don't have to be in a hurry to enter. The contest lasts until the end of 1987. If by then no one has proven the computer wrong, the prize will be awarded to the entrant coming closest. For more information, you can chase down the International Human Powered Vehicle Association. They're, uh, running the contest.

LET'S GET QUIZZICAL

Of all the childhood banes, nothing chilled more hearts than the pop quiz. You remember the pop quiz: "All right class, close your books, take out a pen and piece of paper and...." But it's recently been shown that, like lima beans, early bedtime and regular baths, those quizzes were good for you.

Psychologists at the American College in Bryn Mawr, Penn., had 97 high school students read a 1,700-word passage about British history. Roughly a third of the students were immediately given a multiple-choice/short-answer test. Another third reread the material, and the remainder went on to something else. Two weeks later, each of the three groups was tested on the history they had read: It turned out that the quiz-takers scored 13 points higher than those who had only reread the information and 28 points higher than the others.

The study revealed, however, that quizzes are most effective for recalling simple facts; they are of little use when it comes to concepts. But we can't answer why.

CURRENT DENTISTRY

Do you grit your teeth at the thought of paying your dentist a visit? What's the worst part? That little metal hook he uses to poke and jab at your choppers? Well, here's reason to smile. Your dentist may soon be trading in his hook for a wand.

The "wand" — whose brand name is Vanguard — is a device invented by George White, an oral pediatrician at Tufts University. It checks for cavities by giving each tooth a little electric jolt. Healthy teeth do not conduct electricity, but as a tooth's enamel coating begins to decay, the resistance to an electrical current diminishes. So, the bigger the cavity, the less the resistance.

The electrical resistance is measured via the ground conductor, which the patient holds in one hand during the examination. If very little electricity gets through the tooth and travels to the ground, that means the tooth is healthy.

The Vanguard can detect the formation of a cavity even before an X-ray can. But what about discomfort? Relax. Says Dr. White, "The current is too weak to cause pain." And that's not just lip service.

THE TRUE PAC MENTALITY

Eye damage. Poor grades. Increased aggressiveness. Greater tolerance of violence. Misspent lunch money. These were some of the dire consequences that parents, teachers and even politicians foresaw at the beginning of the video-game boom. It was enough to make a kid Pac up and head into hyperspace.

Many of the evils of video games, however, seem to have vaporized. According to Patricia Marks Greenfield, a developmental psychologist at the University of California, Los Angeles, the games' addictive power was vastly overrated: Recent surveys show that the average player drops less than $5 a week into the coin slot and spends at least two hours less per day with the joystick than with the channel changer on his TV.

Further, studies at Auburn University suggest that while some video games do tend to promote aggressiveness, others can actually play down the negative aspects of competition and promote cooperation. That report also shows that it is not the violence attracting many youngsters, but the feeling of control that the games afford.

HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Head is tilted. 2. Phone is missing. 3. Frame is different. 4. Desk lamp is different. 5. Basket is missing. 6. Letters are moved.

• HAL'S PALS! Dear Hal: They say there are two sides to everything. What say you? Dear Pal: There are exceptions — a triangle has three sides, a square has four, etc. Dear Hal: How can I send mail to an astronaut? Dear Pal: Try Spacial Delivery.

• Sum Fun! Add my two digits and a nine you will see, and you'll still get a nine when I'm divided by three. What number am I?

Twenty seven

• Like So! All of these words have something in common: define, laughing, first, hijack, student. How quickly can you discover what it is?

All contain three consecutive letters of the alphabet

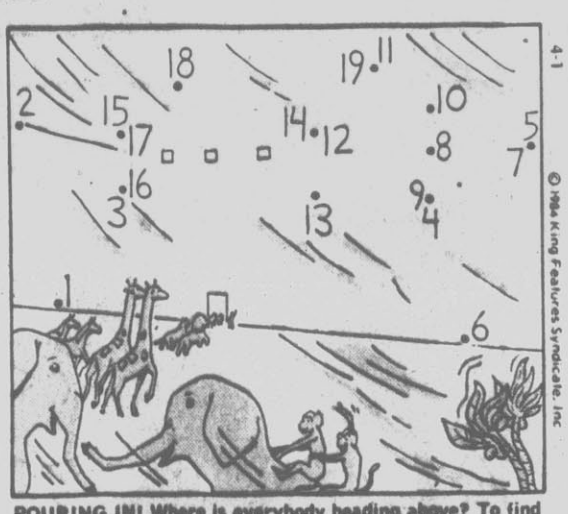
• Tongue Tests! Say fast and repeat: "Mind over matter, matey," muttered Matty. "Shut the cupboard, Cutter," sputtered Sutter. Slim Sarah Slinn.

APRIL FOOL FIGURES!

How can the figures above add up to the amount shown? Impossible, you say? The figures 3414, 340 and 74213 total up to 77967, nowhere near the 43 million plus mark indicated.

Stumped? Reflect for a moment and the answer is patently obvious. Hold the illustration in front of a mirror and the totals will make perfectly good sense.

It's an instance, you'll agree, where being backward at math really pays off.



POURING IN! Where is everybody heading above? To find out, add connecting lines from dot 1 to dot 2, dot 3, etc.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

MANDIBLE

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 50 points.

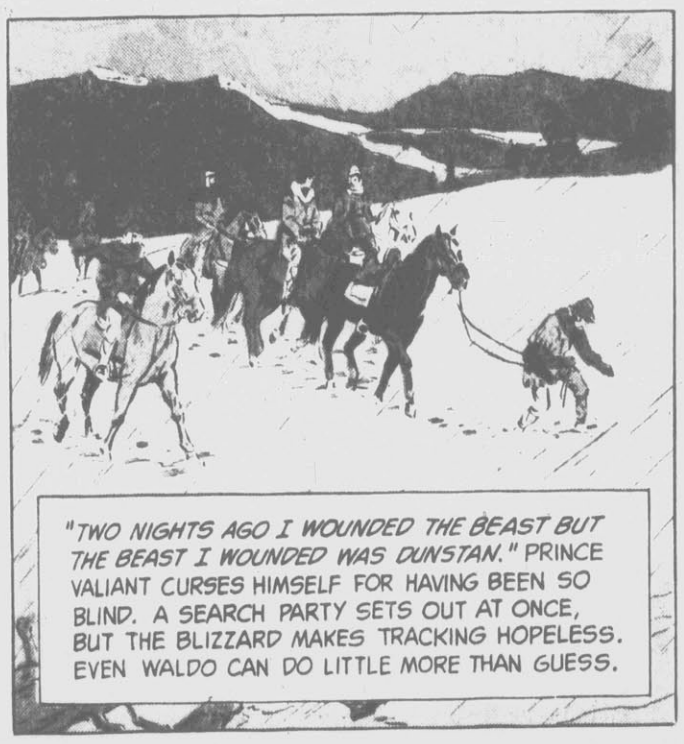
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

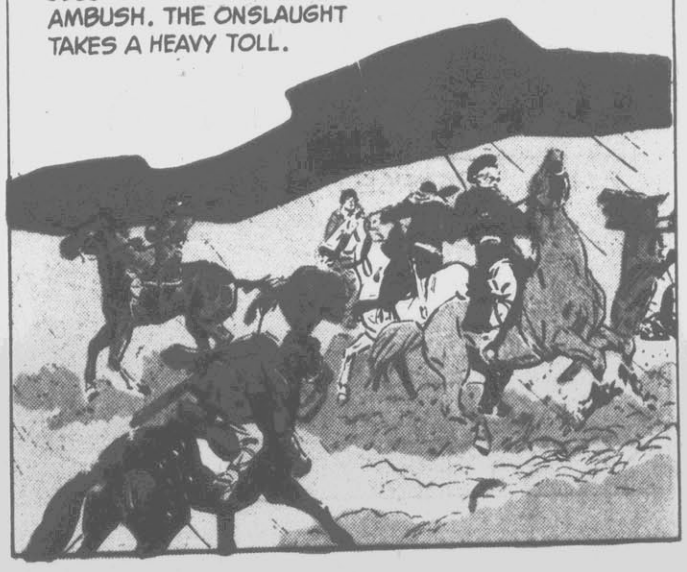
Our Story: IN THE STORAGE ROOM VAL AND HIS FRIENDS COME UPON THE CREATURE'S COSTUME STREWN ABOUT THE FLOOR. SO THIS WAS THE BEAST THAT STALKED THE HILLS, THIS BUNDLE OF FUR AND BONE. INSIDE THE CREATURE'S MASK JUDITH MAKES A CHILLING DISCOVERY: "THE CAP, IT IS NATHAN'S," VAL ORDERS THE PALACE SEARCHED.

NATHAN CANNOT BE FOUND. NOR, THE GUARDS REPORT, CAN DUNSTAN. THE BLOOD-SOAKED RAGS IN DUNSTAN'S CELL CONFIRM VAL'S FEARS.



"TWO NIGHTS AGO I WOUNDED THE BEAST BUT THE BEAST I WOUNDED WAS DUNSTAN." PRINCE VALIANT CURSES HIMSELF FOR HAVING BEEN SO BLIND. A SEARCH PARTY SETS OUT AT ONCE, BUT THE BLIZZARD MAKES TRACKING HOPELESS. EVEN WALDO CAN DO LITTLE MORE THAN GUESS.

AFTER SEVERAL HOURS A SUDDEN BARRAGE OF ARROWS CONFIRMS THAT WALDO HAS GUESSED CORRECTLY. "I WAS A SOLDIER ONCE, AND A GOOD ONE," THE MONK HAD TOLD PRINCE VALIANT. VAL SEES TOO LATE THAT DUNSTAN HAS SPRUNG AN AMBUSH. THE ONSLAUGHT TAKES A HEAVY TOLL.



SHROUDED BY THE STORM, THE ARROWS APPEAR AS IF FROM NOWHERE. VAL HEARS ONE WHISTLE BY HIS EAR MOMENTS BEFORE ANOTHER STRIKES HOME.

HE IS KNOCKED TO THE GROUND. GETTING UP HE STAGGERS FORWARD, CRAZED BY COLD AND PAIN. BEFORE HIM HE MAKES OUT A SHAPE, A SHAPE THAT OWNS AN EVIL LAUGH. "THE BOY IS MY SAFE PASSAGE, SIR VALIANT. WHEN I AM FREE PERHAPS I WILL SEND HIM BACK." IN THE WIND VAL HEARS HIS SON MERRILY CRY "DA!" AS HE MIMICS DUNSTAN'S MANNER.
