Lebanon Factions Stage Heavy Battles In Beirut

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's warring factions fought their heaviest battles of the past 10 days in and around Beirut early today as the government assembled a 2,000-member police force intended to separate the combatants.

Explosions rocked several Beirut neighborhoods, including the old commercial district, the port and the suburbs. Flares illuminated the night skies and ambulances with wailing sirens raced through the streets.

Four people were killed and 21 wounded in overnight duels with artillery, mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns, police said.

Despite the escalation of fighting, local radio stations said President Amin Gemayel hoped that summit talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad in Damascus next week would help him stabilize a cease-fire and form a national coalition government to introduce political reforms.

Syria, a longtime supporter of the anti-government militias in Lebanon, has been working with Gemayel's administration on an increasingly close basis since the multinational force withdrew from Beirut.

Besides the fighting along the "green line" separating Christian east Beirut from the mostly Moslem west and in nearby hills, heavy battles also raged early today around the strategic town of Souk el-Gharb, police said.

The fighting tapered off around noon but escalated in the afternoon. The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said shells fell on the Christian suburb of Furn el-Shubbak as Lebanese army troops and Shiite Moslem militiamen battled in neighborhoods at the southern outskirts of Beirut.

Combatants fought with mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns in the afternoon duels, the radio said.

Souk el-Gharb controls the mountain routes to Gemayel's presidential palace and the Defense Ministry compound on the hills east of the capital.

The army's 8th Brigade and Syrian-backed Druse rebels accused each other of mounting overnight ground assaults to improve their positions, using field artillery and tank cannons to back up the attempted advances.

The state radio and private stations said a military committee representing the army and all the warring factions was trying to negotiate a cease-fire.

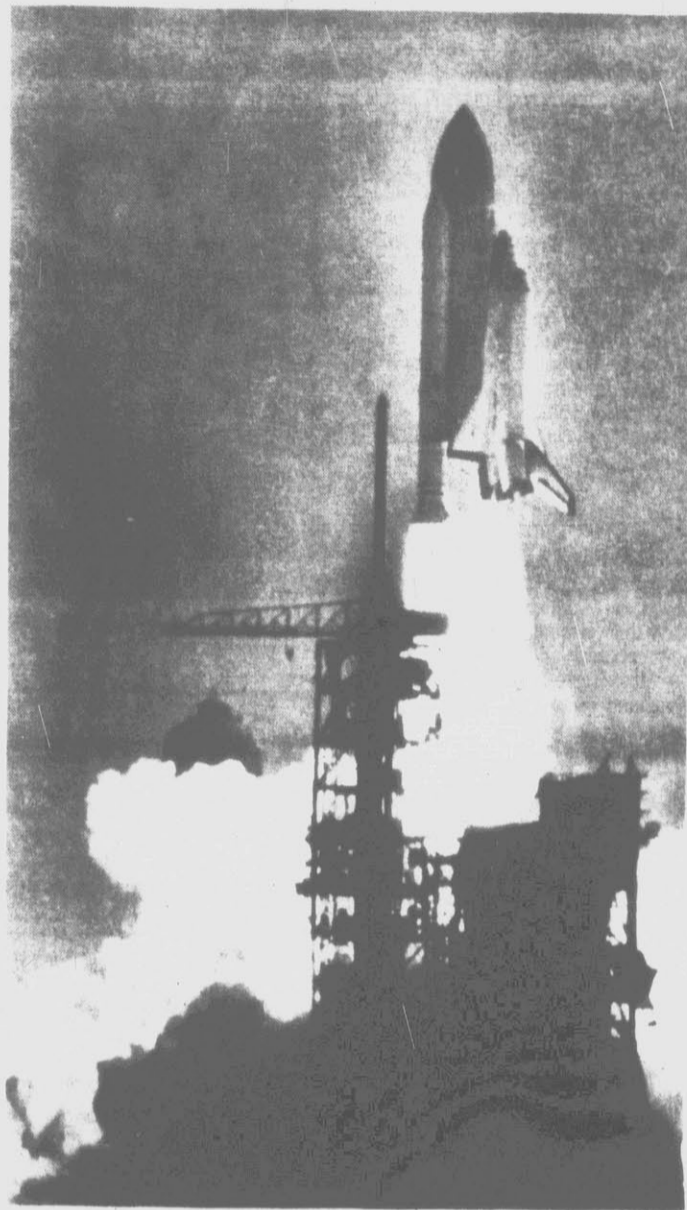

The committee, mandated last month by Lebanon's factional leaders during a conference in Switzerland, has agreed to the key points of a new disengagement plan which calls for combatants to pull back 300 to 700 yards from fronts along the green line and in the central mountains east of the capital.

The buffer zones would be patrolled by Lebanese police and army reserve members.

Government sources said Gemayel's administration has ordered the police department to put 2,000 officers on standby to patrol buffer zones.

The sources also said the government was expected to ask France to increase the number of French observers to help in the disengagement process. Forty French

U.S. Jobless Rate Stable For March

By The Associated Press

The U.S. civilian jobless rate was unchanged in March at 7.8 percent, snapping a six-month string of declines, the Labor Department said today.

Meanwhile, stock prices tumbled Thursday to their lowest level in nearly a year after major U.S. banks raised their prime lending rates to 12 percent, the second increase in three weeks.

And U.S. manufacturers' after-tax profits averaged 4.4 cents per dollar of sales in the fourth quarter of 1983, up 2.3 percent from last year's third quarter and 57 percent above the fourth quarter of 1982, the Commerce Department said today.

Last month's unemployment rate remained at its lowest level since it stood at 7.6 percent in September 1981, and is down from a post-Depression peak of 10.7 percent in December 1982.

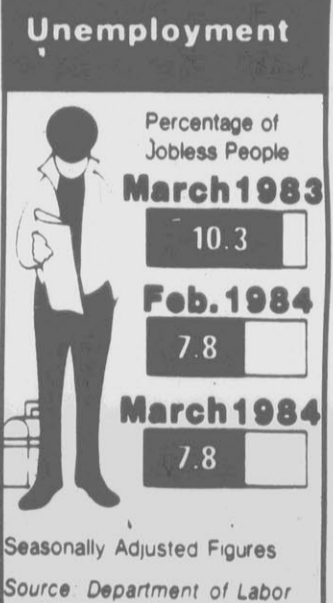

About 250,000 jobs were created in March while the civilian labor force increased by about 220,000, the Labor Department said. The resulting decline in total unemployment was too small to change the overall jobless rate.

Total civilian employment reached a record 104.1 million, while about 8.77 million people remained officially categorized as unemployed, the department said.

The most widely known stock market measure, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, fell 18.01 points to 1,130.55 in active trading Thursday. It was the lowest level for the average since last April 8.

The market's retreat continued in today's opening trading, and the Dow Jones industrial average lost another 2.62 to 1,127.93 in the first half hour.

The half-point increase in the prime rate on Thursday left major banks' base corporate lending rate at its highest level since October 1982.

The increase had been widely expected on Wall Street. Some analysts said investors apparently were fearful of further rate hikes, while other analysts said they expect interest-rate stability.

The Federal Reserve Board reported Thursday that its M1 measure of the nation's basic money supply rose $2.2 billion in the week ended March 26. The rise was slightly higher than analysts had expected, but it left M1 within the central bank's target for money growth.

"I think rates over the very near term are likely to remain fairly stable or perhaps decline a little bit," said Jeffrey Leeds, money market economist at Chemical Bank in New York.

Meanwhile, major U.S. retailers posted mixed sales results for March, and blamed poor weather and a late start to the Easter shopping season for sluggish sales growth compared with a year ago.

Industry leader Sears, Roebuck & Co. reported a 2.4 percent rise in sales. Third-ranked J.C. Penney Co. had a 7.7 percent gain. Sales fell 0.2 percent at No. 2 K mart Corp. and were off 0.4 percent at No. 7 Woolworth Co.

In other economic news Thursday: — Directors of Chrysler Corp. put off a decision on whether United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber is entitled to the board seat now occupied by former UAW chief Douglas Fraser. Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca has contended that the union was never guaranteed a permanent position in the Chrysler board room.

—Shell Oil Co. said oil prices, which have been unusually stable after a decade of relentless increases, could nearly double in the next 10 years and surge more than six fold in 20 years.

— Exxon Corp. retained its top position on the Fortune 500 list of U.S. industrial companies in 1983, even though its sales dropped by $8.6 billion to $88.6, the magazine reported. General Motors remained No. 2.

— The Investment Company Institute reported that assets of the nation's 327 money market mutual funds fell $76.5 million in the latest week, slipping from an 11-month high. The decline, to $171.62 billion in the week ended Wednesday, followed a $460.6 million increase in the funds' assets the previous week, according to the Washington-based mutual fund trade group.

Shuttle Challenger Goes In High Orbit

Would Jail 'Leakers'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz, concerned about leaks to the news media, says government officials who reveal classified, sensitive information "should be tossed in jail."

Shultz, meeting with editors of The Washington Post, also said Thursday that by and large the "aggressive, high-powered press" is "doing a good job of keeping track of things."

But he said leaks of sensitive information sometimes prevent government from carrying out its policies.

"I'm not persuaded that lie detector tests are the thing to do by a long shot," he said. "So, it's very difficult to find out who's leaking what."

But he added that people who reveal "highly classified, sensitive information should be tossed in jail."

Shultz also criticized the media for lacking perspective. For example, he said he delivered a speech earlier in the week, raising the issue of terrorism. But the speech was not tied to any particular event.

He said he was disappointed that the press, on the whole, looked at the speech and said, "Well, where's the news peg?"

Some of the problem, Shultz said, is due to decreased competition in the news business. He said that in most major cities the one or two newspapers and three television networks are "pretty much the same" in their news coverage.

To broaden television news coverage, Shultz suggested changes in the licensing system. He added that the advent of cable has helped bring new ideas to television, and predicted that the "monopoly of the networks" is going to be broken down.

today into orbit 290 miles above Earth, highest yet for a shuttle, and set off in pursuit of a crippled solar observatory for a daring first attempt to repair a satellite in space.

The flight, in which astronaut George Nelson will use a jet-powered backpack to fly 200 feet from the ship and snare the satellite, began with a rumbling liftoff right on schedule at 8:58 a.m. EST.

"You looked great going up the hill," Mission Control told the crew after the shuttle climbed through cloudless blue Florida skies and settled into orbit.

"The view from here is as spectacular as ever," replied commander Robert Crippen, the first astronaut to make three shuttle flights.

Accompanying the crew were 3,300 honeybees and the shuttle's heaviest cargo so far: an 11-ton package of experiments, including 13 million tomato seeds, that will be dropped off in orbit and picked up next year.

The 100-ton space plane rose from its launch pad swiftly on 7 million pounds of engine thrust and darted eastward over the Atlantic Ocean.

Challenger's trail of fire and smoke was visible for several minutes to tens of thousands who watched from ocean and riverfront viewing areas.

Two minutes into the flight, the shuttle shed its two solid propellant booster rockets and they parachuted into the Atlantic, where ships were to recover them for use on a later mission.

As the astronauts soared into orbit, the target satellite was half a world away, 11,500 miles in front of the shuttle. Crippen will lead Challenger on a chase of 828,000 miles over two days until he moves to within 200 feet of his goal.

It was the 11th shuttle launch, the fifth for Challenger. The flight is to end next Thursday with the second landing back at Cape Canaveral.

Crippen is in charge of an all-rookie crew of pilot Dick Scobee and mission specialists Nelson, Terry Hart and James van Hoften.

Their journey puts a record 11 people in space at the same time, including five cosmonauts and an Indian astronaut who are traveling on the Soviets' Salyut 7 space station. The old mark of eight was set in February when five astronauts and three cosmonauts were aloft.

With the skies so crowded, NASA had only 7 minutes, 45 seconds leeway for today's launch. The United States and Soviet Union have an agreement not to come within 200 miles of one another's spacecraft, and liftoff any later would have put the shuttle and space station closer than that.

The flight is the last directed by Air Force Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, NASA's shuttle chief. He was named last week to guide the Pentagon's effort to develop a spaceborne missile defense system — President Reagan's "Star Wars" initiative.

Challenger's mission calls for it to rendezvous with the Solar Maximum Satellite, which has been wobbling and spinning slowly since losing its control system nearly three years ago.

It will be Nelson's job, putting the backpack to its first practical use, to cast free from the orbiting shuttle, flit 200 feet away and attach a device to Solar Max so it can be hauled into the cargo bay for repairs.

The altitude is the highest yet for a shuttle flight, but far short of the 840-mile Earth orbit record set by Gemini 10 in 1966. Apollo astronauts

Hats Sail Back Into Fashion

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Don Anderson, veteran milliner, says that fashion is in a cycle that has ended the "tyranny of hair."

Hair styles are simple again and women can safely put on hats without ruining an elaborate "do." When the teased, bouffant hair styles had run their cycle, hats began a resurgence that sees them at a new peak for spring and summer.

Anderson, a designer with Trio Accessories Inc. in New York, says part of the revival can be credited "to the kids — they're the ones who in the 1960s and '70s started the fad also for funky thrift shop clothes and funny antique clothes."

"Then, too, today's clothes are so dull. They need something to brighten the look."

"I remember when a woman would have a wardrobe of 40 or so hats and one basic black dress. She changed her look with her hat."

"Women no longer look to any one fashion leader to imitate," Anderson said. "I do know women, though, who will select a type from a fashion magazine and dress to it. I call them fashion victims. They look simply awful."

"Style has such a broad scope these days. Look at the helmets. You make your own choice. Fashion is not like a cookie cutter, all of one mold."

Don Anderson, a native of International Falls, Minn., studied art at the University of Minnesota and at first planned to be a painter. He also studied at the Parsons School of Design in New York.

"I really wasn't a very good artist," he said in an interview. "For a while I worked in theatrical costuming with Irene Sharif."

He recalled it was in the 1950s when he was looking in New York's millinery supply windows at beads, ribbons and other trims that a storekeeper emerged and asked, "Are you interested in the hat business?" Anderson's career was set.

Through the years he designed and worked with many of the big names — Chanda, Fred of John-Fredericks, Lily Dache and at one time was a Halston licensee.

"We were doing hats when a woman would come in with some fabric sample or trim and want a hat made to order," he said. "Sometimes she would have three fittings. That was hat couture."

Anderson recalled that in other days veiling was such a part of the industry that that salesmen would come around with dozens of sample books. "Now," he said, "there are only about two places to buy veiling. Women stopped wearing veils the same way they dropped those little white gloves."

Retailing also has changed. That is why so many designers make store appearances. Anderson makes them regularly at leading stores around the nation. "Used to be," he said, "a customer would have her own saleslady. Today, the designer in effect becomes a salesperson for a day. 'The customer has to try the hat on; she is asking, 'Is this what I should wear?'"

"For summer we're doing well with wide, stiff-brimmed sailor shapes. I tend to design hats that roll away from the face. The mannish fedoras are always good. And we've done quite well with tiny evening hats. We call them doll hats. For a while there they just disappeared."

"I believe more women are again wearing hats because they're not so gussied up."

"For some reason we've always done well with hats in the South."

"But I'll tell you one thing. England is THE great hat country. I guess it's partly the royal family influence. Much as I admire the Queen Mum, her whole getup sometimes is almost a circus."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

Invite Your Daughters And Sons-In-Law To Visit

DEAR ABBY: Our two daughters are successful businesswomen in Los Angeles. Both are married to welders who wear ponytails and one earring.

These are men of good character, treat our daughters well, and there is nothing wrong with them except they look like a couple of hippies instead of the good guys they are.

Because of their appearance, we have told them that they are not welcome in our home. Our daughters refuse to visit us because their husbands can't come to our home, and we're certainly not invited to their homes.

We're losing contact with our daughters because of two ponytails and two earrings — how's that for dumb?

We still write to one another and sometimes phone, but there are no concessions or negotiations on either side. What do we do next, Abby?

ARIZONA PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: What you should do next is call your daughters and invite them and their husbands to your home — ponytails, earrings and all. Apologize for your inexcusable snobbishness and hope they accept.

DEAR ABBY: In your answer to a recent letter, you made reference to your "Irish" gynecologist, Dr. John A. Haugen. Where did you ever get the idea that Haugen is an Irish name? Haugen is a Norwegian surname meaning "dweller on the hill."

Abby, please correct this error in your column, as we Norwegians are rather proud of our heritage.

S.E. HAUGEN, OREGON

DEAR S.E. HAUGEN: "Uff-da!" I'll take 20 lashes with a Norwegian salmon. I just checked with Dr. Haugen, who confirmed that he is not Irish, he's 100 percent Norwegian. He also added good-humoredly that he doesn't dwell on a hill, he's over it.

DEAR ABBY: Your reply to "Irritated Neighbor" could have been more helpful. She wrote: "Over the Christmas holidays, a neighbor asked our 13-year-old son if he would feed her cats and fish and bring in the mail while she and her family were out of town. She promised to pay him, but at this writing he hasn't been paid. Should we just forget about it, or remind her of her promise? Our son is too shy to ask her himself."

Abby, instead of telling the mother to speak for her son, you should have advised her to insist that her son handle it himself. It would have been educational for him to have collected what was owed him. Example:

"Mrs. (), would you please pay me for the service I rendered to your household while you were away? As a student, I need this money for my regular expenditures. I hope my work was satisfactory."

It would encourage the youth to settle his own problems and bring to a satisfactory conclusion his first business venture.

CARROLL H. LUHR, MONTICELLO, KY.

DEAR MR. LUHR: Thank you. Your answer was better than mine.

Modern Lovers Are Lacking Romance

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD
BOSTON (UPI) — "When was the last time you wrote 'I love you' on the bathroom mirror with a piece of soap?" the instructor asked his bewildered class.

"How about running a bubble bath for your wife or girlfriend?" he asked when the first query failed to awaken a single memory.

The blank expressions confirmed what Greg Godek suspected all along, that "there just isn't enough romance" in today's relationships.

Godek, a romantic since his teens, is helping men and women put the spark back into comfortable but boring marriages and affairs, and even adding zest to first dates.

Single, divorced and even long-married men, confused by the attitudes of liberated women, are signing up for Godek's evening adult education class, seeking to resolve such basics as "whether it's still all right to open her car door."

"With women's liberation, roles are no longer sharply defined," Godek said, "and men wonder if all that old-fashioned romance is of-fense to the modern woman."

"In learning that romance actually improves the quality of life, men are also opening up and expressing their desires for some spontaneous gesture, even a bouquet of flowers."

Godek, 28, an account executive with a public relations firm, said the course was the outcome of years of accumulating information and experience with romance.

His files are packed with lists of gift suggestions, restaurants, romantic ideas, poetry, songs and even comic strips depicting the dilemmas of love.

Godek, still single after a broken engagement, said, "I'm just a romantic person. I'm interested in romance the way some men are into cars or sports."

He was skeptical a year ago when a friend running the adult school suggested he offer a course, but now the enthusiasm it has generated has inspired Godek to offer coed classes in addition to the ones for men only.

"This class is about showing you care," Godek said. "Being more romantic improves the quality of life."

He quickly cautions that "romance is not going to save a bad relationship, resolve major faults or improve your sex life in the long run. Women typically complain that a man just doesn't show he cares, while men respond defensively, 'she knows I love her.'"

The feminist movement had not resolved "the gap between what women expect and what men think is OK, remember to do and feel comfortable doing," Godek said.

"Be a little bit outrageous," he advises aspiring romantics, male and female. "Here is a part of life that most of you haven't focused on as much as you could. The smallest little things can be romantic."

His suggestions include a note in a plastic bag under the windshield in case it rains, mailing a card with a LOVE postage stamp every day for a week, packing a "trip kit" for the traveler filled with "corny things like a roll of dimes and a note saying 'Call Me,'" and giving one another $5 to spend on a shopping spree.

Godek also recommends dispersing resumes to new acquaintances "to get to know about each other," mailing lingerie in an envelope within an envelope to a woman's office in established intimate relationships, attaching a $50 bill to a catalogue with a note saying, "I'd like to see you in the item on page 63" and tape recordings of romantic songs for a car stereo.

"The coed classes are particularly effective because the participants don't need to just take my word on something," Godek said.

Women tend to doubt that men really want romantic expressions, he said, but their male counterparts in the class shatter any misconceptions.

Roy Anderson, 27, a businessman who signed up for Godek's course "because my girlfriend accused me of not being romantic enough," said, "I'd love it if a girl sent me flowers. There's nothing unmasculine about enjoying what's beautiful in life."

Anderson has not only written "I love you" in soap on the mirror but on the bathtub bottom as well. He's even taken his girlfriend on a surprise trip to Bermuda in the hope that she'll eventually "pick up the hint and realize I would love a romantic surprise, too."

While the breakdown of the classes includes single, married and divorced men and women in their early 20s to 50s, Godek said many of the males are enrolled by wives or girlfriends seeking a cure to insensitivity.

"Sometimes guys are just dropped off by their wives or girlfriends without even knowing where they are going ahead of time," Godek said.

Carol Cone is delighted with the change in her fiancée, Hank Shafron, who took the class out of curiosity.

"He's wonderful about keeping my favorite wine in the refrigerator, leaving notes saying, 'I love you,' and even bought me a beautiful diamond bracelet for Valentine's Day," she said.

Shafron, deputy commissioner of the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, said Godek "made me think and reflect about my relationship with Carol."

Shafron, who is divorced, said, "I wanted to see if Carol would notice any difference, and she did. I'm hoping my romantic inclinations will extend through our marriage. They certainly make a difference."

Godek is not as enthusiastic about "obligatory" romantic occasions such as Christmas, Valentine's Day, anniversaries and birthdays as he is about impulsive expressions.

To make holidays special, "do something out of the ordinary," he suggests, even if that means sending "flowers because you never sent them before."

"Make a giant card, write out a love poem but do something that is expressive of you and not just yanked off a shelf."

Godek does warn his students to be aware of the subtle message that romantic gestures may convey.

"Sometimes someone says, 'If I start doing these things, the girl is going to think I want to marry her. I don't want her to get the wrong idea.'"

"So I tell them to keep the lines of communication open," Godek said. "If you don't feel ready for a commitment, make that clear so your motives for doing romantic things are not misunderstood."

"Never give a woman a ring box that doesn't contain an engagement ring," Godek said. "Even if she didn't want one, she'll be disappointed."

BATHROOM ORGANIZATION TRICKS

Balancing career and/or volunteer time, family, personal life and household demands leaves you little time for cleaning, especially for those necessary but unattractive tasks such as cleaning the bathroom. A little organization and a few handy techniques can help the most harried keep bathrooms clean and clutter-free with a minimum of time and effort.

These techniques for organizing bathroom items and taking full advantage of bathroom space can help make your bathroom more attractive and easier to clean.

Baskets for Decoration and Storage. If you need extra space for storing bathroom linens, team the linen with attractive baskets to add organized color to bathroom walls. Mount baskets on your bathroom wall, open (top) side out. Roll extra towels, washcloths and other linens to store attractively in the baskets. The baskets keep clean linens in a convenient place and the linens lend color to your room as well.

Color Coding for Efficiency. Color coding individuals' bathroom items can simplify laundry sorting and cleanup. Each member of the family chooses a favorite color, then each individual's towels, washcloths, toothbrush, bathroom cup and even hair care items are keyed to that color. If family members duplicate personal items such as makeup and mascara, shaving cream, etc., you may want to take a minute to mark each person's item with a dot of paint in the appropriate color. Color coding can eliminate time-consuming confusion in sorting and putting away bathroom clutter. Because color coding helps identify quickly who left which towel where, the technique can foster responsibility in family members and help eliminate family disputes as well.

Plastic Box Organizers. When several people share the same bathroom, it's a good idea to provide a clean plastic box-organizer for each person to store and organize small personal items such as curlers and hair-care items, makeup, shaving supplies, toiletries, etc. Family members can store these boxes in a handy bathroom closet shelf, drawer or carried into the bathroom when needed.

Bathroom Cleaning Carry-All. A plastic carry-all with a handle provides an easy way to organize bathroom cleaning items. Place sponges, toilet bowl cleaner and brushes and other supplies in a carry-all and store under the bathroom sink or if you have toddlers in the house, on a high shelf in the bathroom or utility closet. The carry-all keeps cleaning supplies organized and handy and you can carry it from bathroom to bathroom for quicker cleaning. These quick tricks make cleaning faster and easier as well as help everyone in the household take responsibility for keeping the bathroom clean.

Quick Cleaning. When you don't have time to clean thoroughly, simply spray your cleaner on the tub, sink, counter and toilet. The cleaner works while you rearrange and replace towels and washcloths, clean-up clutter, etc. Rinse off the cleaner with a sponge or clean cloth. Your bathroom will look and smell clean with a minimum of effort.

Preventive Cleaning. Teach other members of your household to clean up after themselves. Even older children can use liquid cleaners to clean out the tub and sink after they use them. (Buy a long-handled brush to make tub scrubbing easier — mark it "tub only." If each person using a bathroom puts away personal items after each use, thorough bathroom cleanups take only a minimum of time.

Clean Cards. Identifying steps in cleaning and defining each cleaning task can teach family members to do much of the bathroom tasks to your satisfaction. Write out tasks involved in quick daily cleanup on a large card. (For example: 1. Spray sink with cleaner; 2. Pick up towels, etc.). Use another card to list tasks involved in thorough once-a-week cleaning. (For example: 1. Replace soiled towels. 2. Clean bathroom bowls, etc.) Mount the cards in a convenient place in the bathroom. The person assigned to clean the bathroom should follow the steps on the card to make sure each task is completed.

Just Routine

A few short years ago Earthlings sat glued to their television sets watching as man first "walked" in space, hooked to the end of a tether that held him safe from any mishaps that would take him into the nothingness beyond.

On Sunday, man actually will be in space, without the tether, and we wonder if the audience here at home and around the world will come even close to that of the early days of mankind's flirtation with space.

Astronaut George Nelson's scheduled challenge of space ranks along with the daring acts of previous space exploration, but today it is to be expected. Part of the glamor is gone, even if there are still among us many who would be unwilling to try it themselves.

We now look for each rocket to take with it astronauts trained and ready to do what previously could not be done, to do that which in less than a generation was only a dream of the future. Anything less would be mundane to say the least, a matter for page 20 in anyone's newspaper.

With that training, Sunday's walk in space to repair a faulty satellite is now all in a day's work.

But with all of the sophistication, we still feel that twinge of apprehension, the crawl of excitement through anticipation and the pride of our fellowman for doing his job.

Where's The Gas?

Belatedly the United States has clamped down, or so it says, on the shipment of chemicals that could be used for nerve gas to Iran and Iraq. That's fine, but it's still the case of closing the door after the horse got out.

This country has been in the forefront in giving lip service to prohibiting the use of chemical warfare, but that hasn't stopped our shipments of ingredients any high school chemistry student could use to make deadly compounds. In this last case, the shipments have gone to both Iraq and Iran, two nations fighting each other.

Neutrality and private enterprise, you might say, would justify the sales. Maybe so, if U.S. chemical companies were really that desperate for income, which they weren't, or we as a nation didn't care for the fate of other nations, which we say we do.

Of course there is a problem in knowing what to ban — even a nail could become a major tool for war — but selling the ingredients and not the mixed compound is no justification for anyone.

Japan is selling us cars, computers and electronics. We're shipping helicopters, tanks, guns and chemicals. Perhaps the goods involved, as well as the price, should be considered by the nation which has set itself before the world as a brother's keeper.

prayer in public schools. That particular proposition is dead for this session of Congress, and I shed not a single tear. The proposed constitutional amendment was seriously flawed.

But a bill is coming along, known as the Equal Access Act, that merits wholehearted support. Sponsored by Alabama's Sen. Jeremiah Denton, the bill would restore religion to intellectual comparability with — let us say — football, politics and chess. The measure might provide an antidote to a poisonous notion that has infected many school systems in recent years — the notion that public schools should be actively hostile to the slightest expression of religious thought or activity.

It is high time, it seems to me, to shake off the pernicious theory that religion is a second-class subject. We may all agree, I suppose, that the public schools have no business in the religion business. I have yet to meet anyone who seriously proposes that children be compelled to recite prayers. Nobody wants to see an "establishment of religion" imposed on our classroom. But the trend has not been toward greater entanglement of religion and the state, but rather toward an antagonistic condition in which, as President Reagan has said, God must be "expelled." In this bizarre state of mind, obscenities may be condoned; prayer can never be forgiven.

In its report recommending the Equal Access Act, the Senate Judiciary Committee documented some of the absur-RALEIGH — On May 8, North Carolina voters will decide on a state constitutional amendment that could help farmers raise the money needed for capital improvements. The proposed amendment would authorize the state to issue tax-exempt revenue bonds and then lend the money raised to farmers.

The amendment, passed by the 1983 General Assembly at the urging of Rep. Bobby Etheridge, D-Harnett, would extend to farmers a credit break which industry, homebuyers and hospitals already enjoy.

According to State Treasurer Harlan Boyles, this is how the credit break works: The state issues the revenue bonds at below-market interest levels. Investors buy the bonds because they don't have to pay state or federal taxes on the interest. The state loans the money to farmers through local lending institutions.

According to Frank Bordeaux, chief economist for the state Department of Agriculture, the program would probably make loans at rates as much as two or three points below market levels. Considering that loans of up to $500,000 might be made, that's a big savings. Just as importantly, the bonds put capital especially earmarked for farm facilities into farm communities, a move which should reduce the scarcity of capital in these areas and help stabilize rates.

Etheridge's program allows farmers to borrow only for capital expenses. They could borrow to buy land, to improve or add buildings, to finance a tractor or other piece of heavy equipment. They could not borrow for operating expenses like seed, fertilizer, labor or the water bill. (Farm cooperatives could borrow up to $2 million for capital expenses related to food processing facilities.)

Bordeaux says the program will not be a bail-out. Farmers who are not in good shape financially will not be able to get loans under this program. But, by increasing the amount of capital available to farmers, it will indirectly help those in financial difficulties. They'll have less competition for regular loans, he said.

Boyles says the bonds would neither increase state expenses nor make the state liable to a big debt. "These are revenue bonds and would not be backed by the full faith and credit of the state and therefore they would not constitute a direct obligation of the state of North Carolina," he said. The state would lend the money at a rate high enough, he said, to cover administrative costs and any defaults or late payments that would be anticipated. It would be unconstitutional for the program to involve any direct state subsidy to the borrowers, he said.

The amendment is needed, Boyles explained, because the constitution currently says that state funds can only be used for public purposes. This amendment would define farm capital expenditures as a public purpose.

Etheridge said the amendment and the program it will set in motion are only fair to farmers. If the bonds are available to other industries, they should be available to the state's oldest industry.

Etheridge doesn't see any opposition to the bonds materializing. Proponents will soon start pushing the amendment publicly. But it's important to remember that in 1982, voters unexpectedly rejected constitutional amendments that would have given the same credit breaks to private colleges, airports and seaports. Etheridge said he doesn't expect the same reaction to this amendment. "Everybody can relate to agriculture because they eat three times a day," he said.

Mondale Surprised Labor Chiefs

WASHINGTON—Top Level AFL-CIO operatives were amazed when Walter F. Mondale, their endorsed Democratic presidential candidate, asked to be invited to the big AFL-CIO regional meeting in Manhattan March 24 for one reason: to get himself introduced by earthy, pungent Lane Kirkland.

Mondale's dependence on the tart-tongued AFL-CIO president, more pronounced every day, reached its peak when he started borrowing Kirkland's now-famous use of the Wendy's hamburger TV ad, "Where's the beef?" to attack Sen Gary Hart. Big labor insiders have little respect for Mondale's ability to phrase complicated issues in short takes, a Kirkland speciality.

That partly explains Kirkland's increasingly caustic attacks on Hart, despite his 80 percent pro-AFL-CIO voting record. Top Kirkland aides say privately that since Mondale's speech-writers apparently are unable to supply the former vice-president with any quotable lines for the all-important local TV evening news, Kirkland has to do it for him.

Administration insiders say privately that Secretary of State George Shultz gave away the store when he agreed with Sen. Daniel Inouye to accept $62 million for vital programs to keep the Salvadoran army in the field against Cuban-backed insurgents.

In fact, if Shultz had stayed tough in the saddle, the administration's full $93 million request almost certainly would have been approved by the Senate. That would have raised the break-even point between later Senate and House conference committee negotiations.

At the time Shultz made the deal — person-to-person — with the ranking Democrat on the Senate Foreign Operations Subcommittee, prospects for getting the full amount asked by President Reagan looked weak. Nevertheless, Shultz disregarded minority advice not to compromise so deeply so fast.

Usually sure-footed Robert McFarlane, President Reagan's national security adviser, slipped when he advised Reagan to use his speech to the United Jewish Appeal as the platform for his program to sell Stinger anti-aircraft missiles and other arms to Jordan, a leading pro-Arabian Arab state.

Diplomatic insiders immediately warned that using such a public Jewish platform to appeal for support for the U.S. to arm Jordan would needlessly antagonize Jordan's King Hussein. "Hussein would think Reagan has to clear everything with the American Jewish community, no matter how it demeans Jordan," one Mideast specialist said privately.

That is exactly what happened. In his zeal to assuage pro-Israeli opinion on the Jordan arms deal, Reagan unleashed a swarm of Arab wasps that immediately stung him. Hussein's response was the harshest attack on the U.S. he ever made, and the Stinger sale died.

Mondale's New York supporters who had complained about Gov. Mario Cuomo's late start in getting ready for the presidential primary campaign are furious over the way he ran the Mondale effort once he got it.

Cuomo was typically aggressive in promoting Mondale. What bothered the Mondaleites was the activity of Cuomo's agents — state Democratic Chairman William Hennessey and son Andrew Cuomo — in protecting the governor's turf.

Specifically Cuomo's men vetoed plans calling for a fairly heavy role for the governor's factional Democratic rivals: New York City Mayor Ed Koch and State Attorney General Robert Abrams. "We're trying to elect a president and they're playing political games," one Mondale insider complained.

Advisers to President Reagan believe Attorney General William French Smith inadvertently contributed to the woes of his designated successor, Edwin Meese III, by the Justice Department's handling of the Carter briefing book affair.

Smith last year chose not to reveal the department's full findings when it looked into how the 1980 Reagan campaign acquired President Jimmy Carter's debate briefing book. Instead, the attorney general put out an unrevealing three-page summary.

That left an opening for foes of Meese's confirmation to utilize memos indicating he had seen the Carter briefing documents.

Bill Would Give Religion Equal Status

dities that have come along. Many school districts permit extracurricular activities that involve non-religious speech. If a group of students wants voluntarily to form a stamp club, to meet in an empty classroom before or after school, that is fine. But if another group of students wants voluntarily to form a students for Christ club, to meet on an identical basis, many districts regard this as wrong, unacceptable, unlawful and unconstitutional — and perhaps disruptive as well.

The committee said: "These districts have banned student newspaper articles on religious topics and student art with religious themes. They have even prohibited students from praying together in a car in a school parking lot, sitting together in groups of two or more to discuss religious themes, and carrying their personal Bibles on school property. Individual students have been forbidden to say a blessing over their lunch or recite the rosary silently on a school bus."

The committee report provides a dozen specific examples, drawn from around the country, in which school administrators have sought ruthlessly to stamp out the dreadful virus of religious contamination. In Sonoma, Calif., in April of 1983, eight students attempted to gather at the high school to discuss religion on their own time and on their own volition. The school board held such conduct illegal. In Williamsport, Pa., Lisa Bender led a student group called Petros. The group wanted to meet under the same conditions extended to 25 other student groups. The school board said no: This would be "improper."

In Osseo, Minn., the school board came up with a trickier: The students could hold religious meetings, all right, but only if the meetings were concluded by 7:30 a.m., an hour before school began. In Indianapolis, non-religious groups were authorized to use a high school gym; religious groups were forbidden access to it. In Clayton County, Ga., the Youth for Christ Club, which met after school hours, was banned by court order, though "the drama club, FHA, math and science club, newspaper staff, student council, lettermen's clubs, language clubs, chess club, plus a wide variety of sports-related activities" were permitted to continue their use of school facilities.

Senator Denton's bill would provide simply that any school receiving federal aid (which is every school) must give religious groups "equal access" to extracurricular opportunities. If the rights of free speech and free assembly still mean anything, these rights must mean that when two or three students gather together, they are as free to invoke the name of God as any bailiiff in any federal court in the land.

Strength For Today

"Please let me alone. I am comfortable. I have plenty to eat. I live in a nice house. I enjoy the companionship of interesting friends."

Certainly all these things are good, but an alarming atmosphere surrounds such statements because if we as a nation do no more than recline upon our advantages, then we are already on the skids and our civilization is on the way to dissolution.

We may not like the political involvements of foreign aid, but we rich countries of the western hemisphere must use our advantages to the benefit of mankind or we can be sure that God will snatch these benefits from us and let us stew in our own selfishness.

We can't push the world away and say, "Let me alone. I am comfortable and have everything I want." With that attitude we may end up having nothing.

House, Senate Face New Meese Allegations

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A House civil service subcommittee is investigating whether a federal job was created for Gretchen Thomas, whose husband once lent $15,000 to attorney general-designate Edwin Meese III.

In the Senate, meanwhile, investigators are questioning Meese's failure to report reimbursements from private groups for more than 30 trips he took as White House counselor, a congressional aide said Thursday night.

The Ethics in Government Act requires that senior federal officials report reimbursements for trips costing more than $250. Meese provided a committee member with a list of more than 40 such trips, but only eight of them were reported on the financial disclosure statements filed in the last three years, said Roy Meyers, an aide to Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, Meese's leading critic on the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Leonard Garment, Meese's attorney, said the allegation that Meese failed to properly report payment for the trips is an example of "piecemeal and misleading stories about overcomplicated factual issues ... that have been extremely unfair and hurtful to him."

The House subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., is looking into whether Meese or someone on his behalf exerted undue influence to help Mrs. Thomas obtain her position as an attorney examiner with the Merit Systems Protection Board in San Francisco.

Andy Feinstein, an aide to Mrs. Schroeder, said he believes "the job was created just for" Mrs. Thomas and argues that she did not have the qualifications for the original post as advertised by the San Francisco office.

Meese's confirmation as attorney general has been stalled while independent counsel Jacob A. Stein investigates, among other matters, the presidential counselor's failure to disclose a $15,000 loan made to his family by Mrs. Thomas's husband, Edwin.

Meese has said the failure to list the loan on government financial disclosure forms was inadvertent.

Stein also is looking into whether several persons who helped Meese financially got federal jobs in return, as well as other allegations against Meese that were raised during his confirmation hearings.

Thomas, who has told the Senate Judiciary Committee that he has loaned Meese money interest-free on several occasions, was appointed regional administrator for the General Services Administration in San Francisco after working in the White House. His son Tad, has also held a federal post.

A spokesman for the merit protection board, Mahlon Anderson, said Mrs. Thomas was "fully qualified" for the job she received. He acknowledged that a misunderstanding resulted in a Washington official passing on "an order" to the San Francisco office to hire her.

Feinstein said, however, that Mrs. Thomas was hired several months after she passed the bar exam, and with little or no professional legal experience. The office had advertised the post required at two years experience or at least one year with if combined with an advanced law degree or superior law student work.

Mrs. Schroeder's office released a letter she received from Paul Trayers, the merit board's legislative counsel, which states that the head of the merit board's San Francisco office, Luis Lucero, called the office of the managing director of the board in Washington to ask "whether he had to hire" Mrs. Thomas.

Jacqueline Bradley, the assistant to managing director Richard Redenius, "advised Mr. Lucero ... that he was obliged to hire Ms. Thomas," the letter from Trayers states.

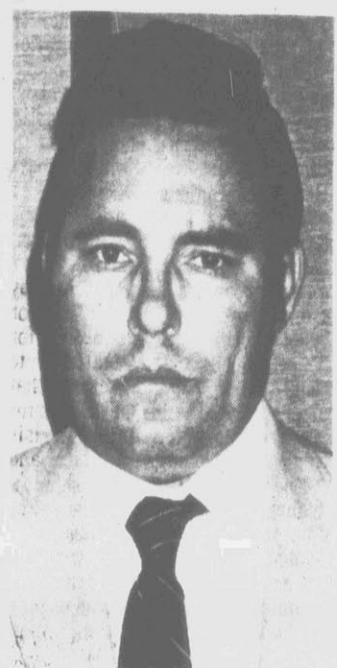

On the matter of Meese's travel, Garment said all of the White House counselor's business trips were arranged by his staff and related financial disclosure statements were prepared on the advice of White House lawyers.

"None of this involves him pocketing anything," Garment said. "It's all paper stuff, they buy the tickets."

"All arrangements for his travel, including scheduling, expenses and compliance with federal reporting requirements were handled by his staff," Garment said.

Some of Meese's trips did not have to be reported, such as appearances for the Republican National Committee that were reported to the Federal Elections Commission, according to a source, who spoke on condition he not be identified by name.

W.G. BARBER ... is the new chief of the Farmville Police Department. A veteran of 13 years on the Farmville force, he assumed the chief's office March 24.

Quest In Cambodia

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A delegation from the Vietnam Veterans of America is in Cambodia seeking information about Americans listed as missing since the Vietnam war, according to the official Cambodian news agency in Phnom Penh.

A well-informed diplomatic source in Bangkok said today the group had quietly gone to Vietnam's capital, Hanoi, on March 28 before proceeding to Cambodia.

The private eight-member delegation, led by VVA President Robert O. Muller, arrived in Phnom Penh on Thursday and was met by officials of Cambodia's Foreign Ministry, the SPK news agency said in its report, seen in Bangkok today. No further details were given.

The source, asking not to be identified, said the same group had visited Hanoi about two years ago seeking information on U.S. troops listed as missing in action, known as MIAs. They also discussed Amerasians — children of American-Vietnamese parentage — and Agent Orange, a herbicide U.S. forces used during the Vietnam war, the source said. Many veterans blame the effects of the herbicide for chronic health problems.

The source said he had no information on the current trip. He said he knew of no other private groups that had gone to Phnom Penh to discuss MIAs.

Less than 100 of the approximately 2,450 MIAs are thought to have been missing in Cambodia, now ruled by a Vietnamese-backed regime that the United States does not recognize.

The Vietnam war spilled over into Cambodia and Laos.

The last official MIA delegation visited Hanoi in February. Led by Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Armitage, it was the highest-level U.S. delegation to visit Vietnam since the end of the war in 1975.

One member of that delegation, Ann Mills Griffiths of the National League of MIA-POW Families, said on her return to Bangkok that the Vietnamese had given a "new commitment" to increase its efforts to resolve the MIA issue, which has hampered relations U.S.-Vietnam relations.

POSTAL AWARDS — Gold Joyner, sectional center manager and postmaster, second from right, presents awards to two postal employees and a private citizen this morning at Greenville's main post office. Receiving the awards for "efforts beyond the call of duty" were, left to right, Ed Stallings, the citizen, and Brenda Ross and Sonny Lancaster, postal employees. Joyner said Ms. Ross and Lancaster helped secure the Simpson Post Office which was damaged during last week's tornado. Joyner said Stallings supplied heavy equipment, at no charge, to remove a safe and other large articles at the post office. The Simpson Post Office will begin operation today from a mobile unit in the parking lot of the old building. The office had been operating from a local church since last week. Lebanese news photographers staged a one-day strike today to protest Thursday's beating of a Christian colleague, Assad Mashalani, by local militiamen in west Beirut. Mashalani was in the hospital today with severe bruises on his face and body.

Beirut newspapers today quoted Foreign Ministry sources as saying the Lebanese government has decided to resume normal diplomatic relations with Libya and Iran.

Lebanon broke ties with Libya late last year when it decided the presence of Libyan troops allied with Syria and stationed in eastern Lebanon constituted interference in Lebanese affairs. Ties were broken with Iran when it failed to respond to Lebanon's demand to withdraw several hundred Iranian "revolutionary guards" from the same area.

On Thursday, the Higher Shiite Moslem Council in Beirut urged the U.N. Security Council to pass a resolution demanding an Israeli withdrawal from all Lebanese territory occupied since a June 1982 invasion. Attacks on Israeli forces occupying Lebanon's predominantly Shiite south have occurred almost daily.

Also, the U.S. Embassy announced that $300,000 in U.S. aid was being granted to help 12,000 displaced and needy Druse and Moslem families in Beirut's southern suburbs and the Chouf Mountains.

Wants Inquiry To Clear DAR

WASHINGTON (AP) — The national president of the Daughters of the American Revolution says an ethics committee should be established to investigate allegations that the group discriminated against a black woman who tried to join a local chapter.

It would prove, "We have no discrimination against black people at all," DAR President General Sarah M. King said at a news conference.

Lena Ferguson, of Washington, D.C., has been accepted for non-voting, at-large status but has not been invited to join a chapter, although she tried to join the Mary Washington Chapter in the capital, last spring. A DAR member told reporters at a news conference Wednesday it was a case of discrimination.

But Mrs. King said, "I have been told directly it was not because of race," Mrs. King said.

Mrs. King said she has invited Mrs. Ferguson to attend several DAR events to determine which chapter she would like to join. There are 39 branches in the Washington area.

Gasoline Mileage Ratings Being Trimmed By EPA

By GUY DARST
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Many drivers have considered government gasoline mileage ratings unbelievable, and now the Environmental Protection Agency is trimming them to reflect more accurately what drivers can actually expect on the road.

The agency said Thursday it will still compute the published "city" ratings the same way — based on a laboratory test simulating a calm, warm, dry day with fully inflated tires and a feather-footed driver — but will deflate the number by 10 percent before publishing it.

The "highway" number — which hasn't been published for five years, but which car manufacturers have been free to advertise — will be deflated by 22 percent, and will be published along with the city rating.

The deflation percentages, to be applied to 1985 model cars coming out this fall, are "based on the average difference between the laboratory estimates and the fuel economy data the agency has collected on vehicles in use," EPA said. Mid warned drivers that their cars' mileage may still vary from the published figures.

For the best-rated 1984 model car, the Honda Civic coupe, the change would have meant the city rating of 51 miles per gallon would have been published as 45 mpg and the highway rating of 67 mpg, if published, would have appeared as 52 mpg.

EPA was given the job in 1975 of testing for mileage because its exhaust pollution tests were a convenience way of doing the calculation. In addition to pollutants, engineers measure all the carbon compounds in the exhaust, and calculate a mileage figure on the assumption that all the carbon comes from the standard test fuel through known chemical reactions.

The result almost always overstated what mileage a real car gets on the road, and has led to many proposals for more realistic ratings over the years. EPA admitted the test results were artificial, never intended to represent real mileage, but provided a fairly reliable guide to the relative differences in mileage among various car models.

The agency stopped publishing the highway figure in 1979 on the ground that the city number better represented most people's experience.

The highway test simulates a 10-mile trip at an average of 48 mph, well under the national 55-mph speed limit. The city test was based on an engineer's 23-mile daily commute in the Los Angeles area.

The agency said its new rule will require both the test city rating and the two deflated ratings to appear on window stickers of 1985 and 1986 model cars.

Challenger...

 traveled a quarter-million miles from home to reach the moon.

Early today, the shuttle's huge external tanks were filled with 540,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen — a bit more fuel than previously, to carry the ship the extra distance.

The astronauts' first major task will come Saturday, when they use the shuttle's remote-controlled arm to place in orbit the 11-ton satellite carrying 57 science, technology and materials experiments which will operate in space until another shuttle crew recaptures the payload and returns it to Earth 10 months from now. That payload includes the tomato seeds whose growth back on Earth will be studied for any effects of weightlessness.

The bees, safely tucked away in a box, will be kept aboard the shuttle to see if they can build honeycombs in weightlessness as well as they do on Earth.

On Sunday morning, Crippen and Scobee will guide Challenger through the last of a complex series of 11 engine firings to track down Solar Max. They will adjust their 17,400-mph speed to fly in formation with the scientific satellite, and Nelson and van Hoften, in spacesuits, will move through an airlock into the open cargo bay.

Crippen will move Challenger to within 30 feet, and Hart, operating the shuttle's 50-foot crane from inside the cabin, will reach out and snatch the payload and bring it into the bay. Van Hoften and Nelson will replace a faulty control system that prevents Solar Max from pointing precisely to the sun to study flares and other phenomena. The spacewalkers will be outside again two days later to switch out a bad electronics box on one of the satellite's seven experiments. If the repairs work, Hart will use the arm to return the payload to a productive orbit.

Success would restore a payload which cost $77 million to build and launch four years ago. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration estimates it would cost $235 million to replace at today's prices, compared with $48 million for the shuttle repair job.

Not only would the astronauts salvage a useful scientific observatory, but they also would begin the age of orbital repair.

NASA has a list of orbiting satellites that are candidates for retrieval, including two communications satellites injected into the wrong orbits by faulty booster rockets during the 10th shuttle flight in February.

Wilmington's Azalea Festival Is Launched

WILMINGTON (AP) — Fireworks from the grounds of the USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial as a television soap opera star formally opened the 1984 N.C. Azalea Festival.

The city fireboat spewed columns of water high in the air and tugboats sounded horns in salute as Sharon Wyatt, Queen Azalea XXXVII, sailed up the Cape Fear River for her formal arrival in the city.

Miss Wyatt, who plays Tiffany on the ABC-TV series General Hospital, rode aboard the tour boat, escorted by the tugboats and a police motorboat.

"This is so exciting," she said. "I've never been a queen before."

The plants which serve as the theme for the event have apparently overcome a winter freeze as hundreds of bushes were blooming by mid week and thousands of others were beginning to sprout buds of scarlet, magenta, light pink, white and apricot.

About 300 people came to the opening festivities, which included a 21-gun salute, military regalia, and a host of television celebrities, including Ben Murphy of Lottery, and John Gabriel of Ryan's Hope.

The festival will continue today with performances by the Clyde Beatty-Cole Brothers Circus, a classical concert by pianist Roya Weyer-Haeuser, a country and western variety show and a children's musical.

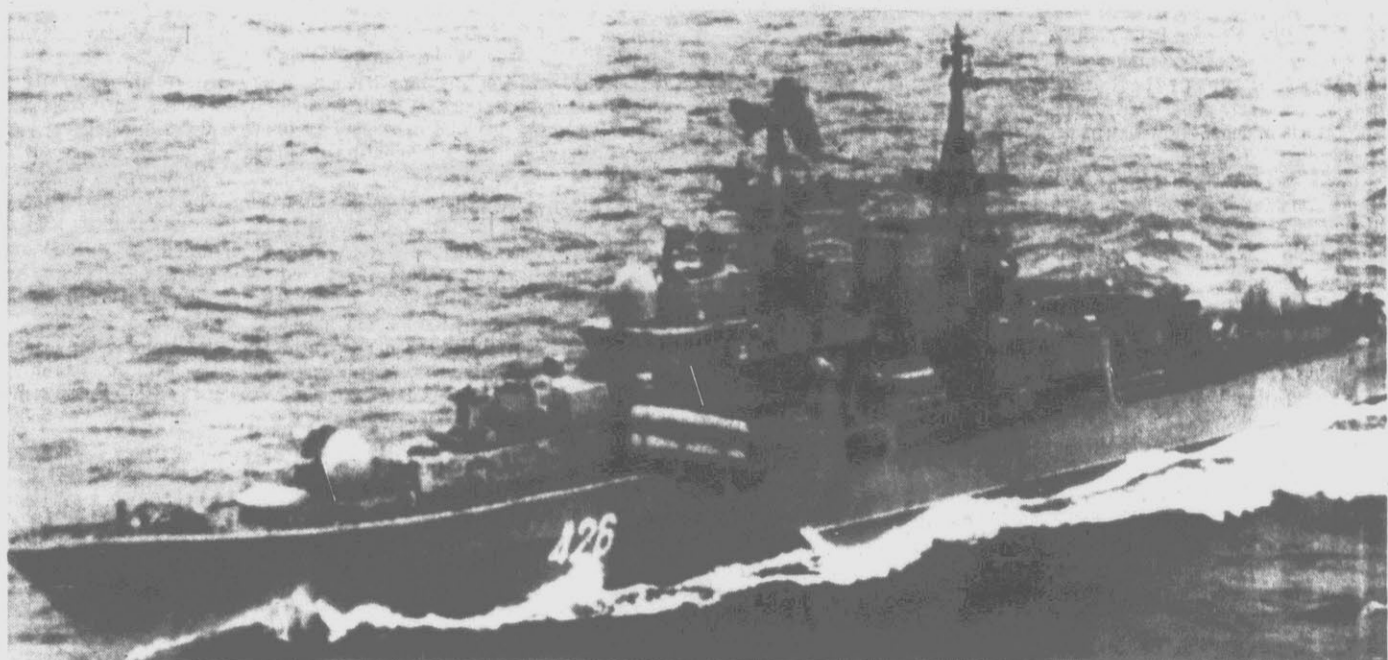

Gilbert H. Burnett and his wife, Nancy, are expecting as many as 2,000 people during the festival, when they open their home during the Azalea Garden Tour this weekend.

The Burnett garden includes a nature trail along the Cape Fear River, and azaleas of all types in full bloom. Theirs will be one of nine homes featured on the tour. Another of four homes, which belongs to Jim and Toppy Robinson, will feature curving beds of azaleas, dogwoods, pansies and impatiens. And Bill and Sandy Nixon will offer a garden of 3,500 tulips and daffodils for garden tour visitors.

Eight historic homes have been refurbished for this year's festival and will also be open for guided tours over the weekend.

Artillery Guards A Sahara Ghost Town

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer
LA GUERA, Western Sahara (AP) — Artillery bunkers facing the Atlantic Ocean protect this sandblown Sahara ghost town, one of the world's least-known trouble spots.

Early in March, the Moroccan army and navy were on the verge of launching a seaborne invasion of the disputed former Spanish colonial outpost, occupied by Mauritanian military forces. Morocco's King Hassan II dropped the plan at the last minute, apparently under strong pressure from France and other Western nations fearful of a new African war.

Western Sahara lies between Morocco on the north and Mauritania on the south. Morocco and the Algerian-based Polisario guerrilla movement both lay claim to the territory, including this outpost on Mauritania's border.

Mauritania has military aid agreements with France and Algeria, and both could have been drawn into the conflict if Morocco invaded.

Mauritanian troops are in firm control of this ruined town, their heavy artillery and machine gun posts pointing toward the open sea. Some of the beaches are mined.

Mauritania's military ruler, Lt. Col. Mohamed Khouna Ould Haidalla, keeps a battalion of his French-trained army in occupation of La Guera despite his recent formal recognition of the would-be "Sahara Arab Democratic Republic" set up by the Polisario guerrilla movement.

La Guera, once a smuggler's paradise of 3,000 inhabitants, lies on a 30-mile-long strip of sand that juts into the Atlantic at the southern end of the disputed former Spanish Sahara colony. The old Spanish border with formerly French-ruled Mauritania ran down the middle of the three-mile-wide sandspit where the world's largest desert reaches the Atlantic.

On the Mauritanian side of the peninsula lies Nouadhibou, the country's largest city and economic and industrial capital, the site of its only oil refinery and the terminal of the rail line carrying the iron ore that is the country's only wealth.

The ruins of La Guera stand on a barren plateau of rock and sand a few hundred yards from the Nouadhibou industrial complex.

Haidalla, in an interview in his distant capital, Nouakchott, said he intends to hold La Guera as long as the Sahara conflict remains unresolved, because "it is absolutely vital to the defense of our largest city."

But he stressed that Mauritania does not intend to annex La Guera, and will ultimately hand it over to its "rightful owners," whoever they turn out to be.

The Organization of African Unity is trying to organize a referendum among the 80,000 nomadic tribesmen of the Western Sahara to determine whether they want independence or annexation by Morocco which holds most of the territory.

Meanwhile, however, Haidalla has recognized Polisario as the "sole legitimate representative" of the population. Morocco has accused him of allowing the Polisario to transform La Guera into a major arms depot and base camp for guerrilla attacks on Moroccan desert garrisons farther north. This accusation was what the Moroccans gave as justification for the planned invasion.

An intensive tour of La Guera disclosed no trace of any Polisario presence. Mauritania's yellow-crescented green flag flies over the command post in the old Spanish fort.

Capt. Niang Harouna, commander of the Nouadhibou military region, said not a single Polisario guerrilla has set foot in the place since it was the scene of bitter fighting early in the Sahara War, when Mauritania briefly joined Morocco in the struggle against Polisario.

Bamba Ould Yazid, the Mauritanian civil governor of Nouadhibou, said if either side were allowed to take over La Guera "it would surely be attacked by the other side — with inevitable destruction on our side of the border and a catastrophe for our country."

"This is why we have to hold it despite our recognition of the Polisario," he added.

Capt. Harouna and other Mauritanian officers expressed outright sympathy with what they view as Polisario's "liberation struggle."

"But it is not our struggle," Harouna said. "We are Mauritanian patriots first and foremost, and we are determined to defend our country against aggression or threats, from wherever they may come."

He made it clear that the defense of Mauritania included that of La Guera. Several times since Mauritania's military regime came to power in 1978, he said, his shore batteries have opened fire on Moroccan naval vessels that came too close to the shore. The machine gun posts strung along the beach keep a permanent watch for Moroccan or Polisario intruders.

Some 30 miles north of La Guera, the Mauritanians have drawn a new border line between their occupation area and the open desert. Beyond that line, Polisario columns roam across the barren wilderness.

But they have made no attempt to attack the Mauritanian positions. The nearest Moroccan outpost is in Dakhla, formerly Villa Cisneros, 200 miles to the north. Moroccan patrols normally do not venture far south of Dakhla.

All of La Guera's civilian inhabitants have fled, many of them to Nouadhibou, and are not allowed to return. No outsider is permitted to cross the old Spanish border post between Nouadhibou and La Guera.

Under Spanish rule, La Guera was a customs-free zone, giving rise to a flourishing smuggling industry. The smugglers' old warehouses stand empty, their doors flapping in the wind; most of the town is ruined and covered with windblown sand.

Not a single tree grows in La Guera.

Bicycling Injuries Suggest Helmets

By BILL HAUDA

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Evidence is mounting that serious head injuries and deaths among the growing numbers of bicyclists could be cut dramatically by greater helmet use.

Thorough studies of bicycle accidents, particularly those designed to look specifically at the role of helmets in injury prevention, are largely nonexistent. The surveys that do exist, however, support helmet use.

A computer analysis requested by UPI of the 1,621 automobile-bicycle accidents reported to the Wisconsin Department of Transportation in 1982 showed more than one-third of the bicyclists had a head injury.

"Out of the 1,621 accidents, there were 563 head injuries," said Russell R. Fleming, who handles the agency's accident data. "That means 34.7 percent of the cyclists who were injured had head injuries of some nature."

In 15 cases, the head injuries resulted in death. In 141 other cases, the cyclist were incapacitated.

An analysis of Madison Police Department bicycle accident data for 10 months last year pointed out the seriousness of head injuries.

Of 127 bike accidents reported to Madison police, 16.5 percent (21) resulted in a head injury. Eight percent (17) of the head injuries were serious enough to require conveyance to a hospital.

Cyclists in the statewide sample had a much higher percentage of head injuries because the figures were for car-bike encounters. Madison's figures covered all types of bike accidents, such as falls caused by railroad tracks or potholes.

University of Wisconsin researchers randomly surveyed 1,200 students in 1977. They found 63 percent of the students used bicycles and 13 percent had been involved in an accident during the previous year.

"The fact that 18 percent of the victims received head injuries is somewhat alarming," said Drs. Diana L. Kruse and Andrew A. McBeath of the UW orthopedic surgery division.

Kruse and McBeath said a 1975 survey in Calgary, Alberta, Canada, showed 67 percent of the hospitalized victims of bicycle accidents were admitted for head trauma. They said a 1973 U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission study of death certificates of bicycle injury victims showed 76 percent of the deaths were due to head injury.

"A study such as ours does not reflect mortality," they said. "We did not address the role of a bicycle helmet in preventing head injury. Any further studies of this type should document helmet usage patterns and the effect on injury."

While thorough studies remain to be done, bicycle organizations like The League of American Wheelmen are already promoting helmet use by members. The U.S. Cycling Federation, the nation's racing organization, requires helmets to be worn in all sanctioned events.

Bids Given To Bethel

The Bethel Town Board has received bids on six houses that are to be rehabilitated under the fiscal year 1983 Community Development Block Grant program.

Harriet Britt of Talbert, Cox and Associates, in presenting the bids this week, recommended that the bid on Rosa Weaver's house be awarded to D&A Contractors, the bid on Henry Bennett's house be awarded to E.T. Leggett, and for four others to be rebid unless the owners agree to pay the cost of repairs in excess of $14,000, which is the maximum amount that can be spent on each house. The board voted to approve her recommendations.

In other business: The board authorized the police department to include a used Chevrolet police car in its fiscal year 1984-85 budget.

Board members authorized the superintendent of utilities to require plumbers to install a Y clean-out plug at each sewer connection.

A new schedule of building permit fees was adopted.

The board voted to raise the charges for cemetery lots in both of the town's cemeteries and to discontinue the opening and closing of graves. Undertakers will also be required to secure an interment permit before a grave is opened.

The board accepted the resignation of Robert Young Jr. from the Planning and Zoning Board and appointed Leon Wright to fill his unexpired term.

A letter was read from Olsen and Associates stating there are no funds available from a clean water grant so it was recommended that the board not submit an application. Members are investigating a site at the old Bethel Union School property for new water well.

The board discussed houses that need to be condemned.

It was reported that a person has been hired to work for the recreation department this summer.

The board voted to endorse a proclamation designating the week of April 8-14 as "N.C. Clean Up Litter Week" in Bethel.

Detecting Genetic Defects in Fetuses

At the Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago, a new and exciting procedure is being used to detect genetic defects in fetuses during the first three months of pregnancy. The test now is being offered to pregnant women and can yield important information within 24 hours.

The technique, called chorionic villi sampling, was first developed in Europe. The Michael Reese Hospital is the first medical center to use it. Many institutions, such as Yale University School of Medicine in New Haven and the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, are in the process of establishing programs.

The results are so important, it is thought that this sampling technique may eventually replace amniocentesis as a method of diagnosing early genetic malformations.

The technical aspects of this procedure are complicated. Consequently it requires the close cooperation and teamwork of highly trained physicians and personnel.

An International Symposium on this technique is being sponsored by the United Nations. Hopefully, this will stimulate the growth and spread of valuable information on the use of this technique among doctors everywhere.

Ultrasonic vibrations are now being used for tissue study in most of the organs of the body. During the past 10 years, ultrasound has come into its own. Of greatest importance is its apparent (though as yet unconfirmed) total safety. Its value as an alternative to the potentially dangerous ionizing radiation of X-rays is enormous.

Recently ultrasound was successfully used to determine the time of ovulation and to enhance the chance of pregnancy in infertile women. It is particularly valuable for those women who are being treated with hormones and for whom artificial insemination and in vitro (test tube) fertilization is being considered.

Ultrasound is even used to guide the surgeon who is trying to extract the egg from the ovary during the period of ovulation.

A new drug is being watched very carefully as an important force in increasing the success of organ transplants.

Essentially, cyclosporine comes from a fungus. Dr. Jean F. Borel, of Basel, Switzerland, discovered this substance in 1972.

The pros and cons of this unique drug were recently discussed at a symposium in Houston.

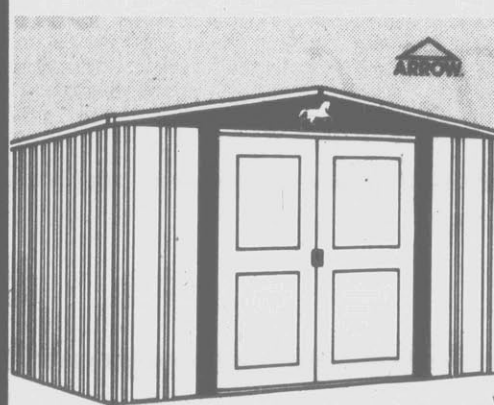

Numerous clinical trials have demonstrated the extreme value of cyclosporine to recipients of transplants. The drug seems to reduce the rejection of transplants and also tends to reduce episodes of serious infections.

The preliminary results are so exciting that surgeons everywhere eagerly await the approval of this substance by the Food and Drug Administration.

Dr. Coleman welcomes questions from readers. Write to him in care of this newspaper.

The U.S. Vice-Presidency is not the most glamorous job in the world. Witness William DeVane King, whose birth anniversary is tomorrow. King was elected VP in 1852. By special Act of Congress, he was sworn in in Havana. But he died one month later and never got to perform any duties of the office. No U.S. President or Vice-President other than King has been sworn in on foreign soil. King was also the only VP to serve in both houses of Congress.

For The First Time, Demo Contenders For Nomination Focused On Reagan

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — For the first time in this long presidential campaign, the Democratic contenders debated and spent more time attacking President Reagan than going after each other.

The result was a debate that produced no individual winner. Instead, they all won.

Walter Mondale, Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson confronted each other on stage for 60 minutes, and each had moments when he looked particularly effective. None of the candidates made an obvious mistake.

But most striking was the lack of bitter exchanges that characterized earlier debates.

This was not an intra-party brawl. These were three candidates who seemed to have concluded that their agreements are far deeper than their disagreements and that it was time to stop giving the Republicans ammunition to use against whichever of them ends up as the Democratic presidential nominee.

As a result they came across as three candidates who shared concerns about the troubles of Pennsylvania's depressed steel industry

It was the sort of atmosphere Hart wanted. The Colorado senator felt he suffered from the acrimonious atmosphere of the earlier debates, particularly the recent confrontations in New York.

After the New York primary there was widespread anticipation that Mondale would attack Hart with the same ferocity he displayed in his winning campaign in the Empire State.

When Hart had a chance to question Mondale, he asked the former vice president the question he knew was coming: how would he revitalize the troubled steel industry which is such an important part of Pennsylvania's economy.

Mondale cited actions the Carter administration took to help the industry and mentioned the case of Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel, a company that was saved by government intervention.

"That was a company that was losing its competitive edge," he said. "I helped work out the arrangements, they are now back on their feet, they are now producing the most advanced, highly competitive steel rails, they're in very good shape now and over 1,000 jobs were saved."

The most striking aspect of Mondale's response was that he made no mention of the fact that Hart opposed the assistance to Wheeling-Pittsburgh.

When it came time for Mondale to question Hart, the former vice president tossed the senator an easy one on the freeze.

"It unites us, it doesn't divide us," responded Hart.

He went to contend that real arms control was unlikely "unless we defeat Ronald Reagan... This president frightens me to death."

Jackson was impressive when asked what his policy would be toward the repressive regime of President Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines.

Jackson said he would "never negotiate away human rights."

Responding to the same question, Hart said, "The Rev. Jackson is exactly right."

Mondale also echoed the emphasis on human rights and cited his experience confronting Marcos on the issue when he was vice president.

"Human rights and national security do not collide," said Mondale.

With almost every answer, the Democrats pointed out their differences with Reagan policies.

"You need somebody as president who keeps a sense of reality and keeps close to the American people," said Mondale in his closing statement.

Pierce Fellowship Has Annual Meet

Threatening skies served to hold down attendance at Wednesday's 62nd annual meeting of the John Pierce Fellowship Club but the weather failed to discourage a host of candidates from getting in another round of handshaking.

Only 125 to 150 people, about half the number expected for the election-year gathering, had lunch on the banks of Contentnea Creek.

Linwood Briley of Bethel, club president for 1983, presided during the meeting. New officers elected for 1984 included George Saleeby of Grifton, president; Charles McLawhorn, Winterville, vice president; Kirby Smith, Ayden, secretary, and Steven McLawhorn, Winterville, assistant secretary.

Among those attending were gubernatorial hopeful Rufus Edmisten; Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham; John Gillam, who is seeking the 1st Congressional District seat; Commissioner of Insurance hopeful Jim Long; Tom Taft, who is seeking the state's 9th Senatorial District seat; state Sen. Vernon White; state Reps. Walter B. Jones Jr. and Ed N. Warren, who are seeking new terms in the state House of Representatives from the 9th District;

Bob Martin, state Senate hopeful from the 6th District; County Commissioner candidates Charles P. Gaskins, Tom Johnson, Carl Whitfield and Bruce Strickland; District Court judge aspirants J. Randal Hunter and Don Hicks; Ferrell Blount III, county Board of Education candidate, and State ABC Board Chairman Marvin Speight.

The fellowship club began in 1922 when a small group of men met at Peele's Beach on the Pamlico River in Beaufort County to celebrate the 48th birthday of John B. Pierce of

Urban Sprawl Can Only Share Blame

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although it may take months of study before conclusions are drawn, it appears from a new Agriculture Department study that urban sprawl has not gobbled up nearly as much U.S. farmland as previously believed.

The 1982 National Resources Inventory report was prepared by the department's Soil Conservation Service and released this week. Among other disclosures, the report said cropland soil losses due to water erosion averaged about 4.4 tons an acre in 1982, down from 4.6 tons in 1977, when the previous inventory was made.

In all, the report said, more than 3.00 billion tons of soil eroded from the nation's cropland in 1982 — 1.25 billion tons as a result of wind and 1.38 billion tons from water runoff.

Officials said the loss of 1.83 billion tons alone would be enough soil to cover about one million acres to a depth of one foot or fill 23 million railroad cars.

According to the new survey, there were 46.6 million acres of "urban and built-up land" in the United States in 1982, a 28 percent drop from 64.7 million acres reported by the 1977 inventory.

The urban and built-up land represents about 3 percent of 1 billion acres of non-federal land in the United States. Cropland in 1982 comprised 421.4 million acres, up from 413.3 million in 1977.

Gary Nordstrom, director of the agency's Resources Inventory Division, said Thursday the smaller acreage in 1982 "does not reflect a true decline" in the amount of agricultural land taken up by cities and other built-up areas such as parks and airports.

But, when asked if the figures indicate that "urban creep" into farming areas might be less than previously thought, Nordstrom replied in a telephone interview, "Based on that '77 number, that's absolutely correct."

However, he emphasized that it is too early for making a quick analysis of the situation and that questions concerning urban sprawl and other land-use factors will take time to work out.

One reason it is difficult to compare the 1982 numbers with those of 1977 is the different method used, he said. The 1977 survey overestimated built-up areas partly because of limited mapping and zoning information. In 1982, the sampling was enlarged and refined.

Nordstrom said that in the earlier effort, some of the land was in transition between agricultural and urban use, although none of the structures or other urban criteria actually existed.

"Some thought it had been lost to the agricultural infrastructure; therefore they put it into that category," he said.

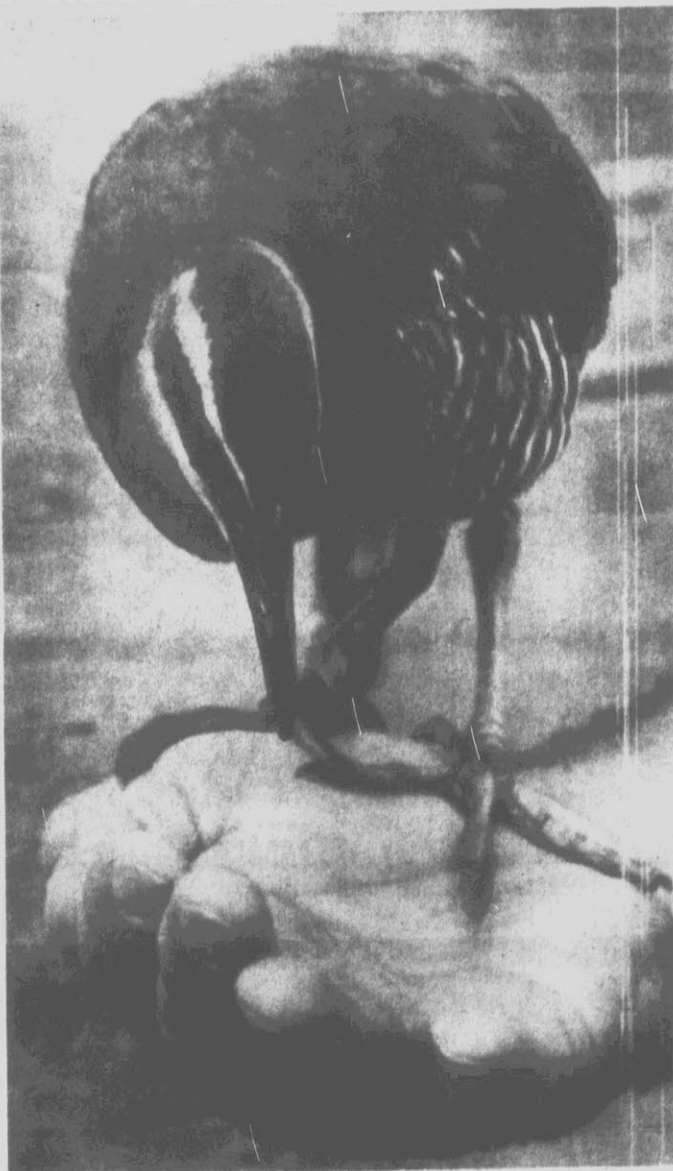

Then, in 1982, Nordstrom said, some of the land that had been classified as "urban and built-up" was judged differently and that it had to fit a strict definition.

Nordstrom said the decline in cropland soil losses from water runoff to 4.4 tons per acre from 4.6 tons in 1977 were average U.S. figures and do not show the great variability among different parts of the country.

Also, he said, those do not include soil losses to wind erosion, which were gathered nationally for the first time in the 1982 survey. Previously, wind damage was assessed only in 10 Great Plains states.

Thus, in 1982 soil loaveraged about 3 tons per acre on cropland. The total, including losses due to water runoff, was reported due to rounding at 7.3 tons per acre, not 7.4 tons as the figures suggest.

The Agriculture Department considers a loss of up to 5 tons per acre as a "tolerable" level, depending on the kind of land involved.

ENDANGERED SPECIES — The number of kokos — The Guam Rail — has been steadily declining in numbers over the past several years. Spokesmen for the Guam Division of Aquatics and Wildlife say there has been an 80% reduction in the number of rails since studies were conducted in 1978. Snakes are suspected for causing a large part of the decline. (AP Laserphoto)

Eye Homework In 'Kissing' Course

BARNESLEY, England (AP) — The students in a new class at the Bretton College drama department should really look forward to their homework — the course is on kissing.

"There is an art" to smooching, insists James Hodgson, who as head of the department has traced the history of the kiss.

His research helped spawn a kissing workshop, and drama students began signing up on Thursday.

"The kiss can be anything from just a friendly greeting to a strong sexual signal and anyone who wants to be successful on stage must know how to do them all properly," Hodgson said.

The workshop will take place in the afternoon, but only 30 budding actors and actresses can take part. "We don't want things to get out of hand," Hodgson noted.

One student, Patrick Murphy, said he was eagerly awaiting his latest lesson. "It should be a real eye opener. I hope there is plenty of practical work."

U.S. Will Permit A Gas Inspection

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration will permit inspection of U.S. nerve gas stocks as part of a worldwide ban on chemical weapons, even as Iraqi use of lethal nerve gas is raising fears about a new arms race.

Vice President George Bush promised Thursday that he will propose "bold new proposals on the verification front" when he presents the administration plan to the 40-nation Committee on Disarmament in Geneva in two weeks.

The United Nations group has been trying to come up with a new anti-chemical weapons treaty to replace the existing 1925 Geneva Protocol and a 1972 treaty. Neither pact has enforcement or verification provisions.

Reagan provided few details in his announcement Wednesday, but administration officials who declined to be named said Thursday that the United States will offer to allow Soviet inspectors to look at U.S. gas stocks and production facilities if the Soviets will permit reciprocal inspections.

The Soviets have already proposed a ban on the weapons in Europe. The Soviet news agency Tass said Thursday the Reagan proposal is only designed as a justification to win congressional approval for a new generation of U.S. gas weapons.

While seeking the ban, Reagan also urged congressional approval of new U.S. weapons. No U.S. gas weapons have been built since 1969 and Congress has refused Pentagon plans for the past three years to end that moratorium.

House Approves Outline For Deficit-Coping

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has approved the outlines of the nation's first $1 trillion budget, opening the way for congressional action on a series of spending cuts and tax increases designed to slash the record federal deficit.

The Democrats' target 1985 budget approved by the House Thursday on a 250-168 vote envisions adoption of a plan favored by party leaders that would reduce the deficit by about $182 billion over the next three years. But while the House action improves prospects of a first start toward reducing the deficit this year, it does not assure it.

Just a year ago, Congress agreed to raise taxes by $73 billion and cut spending by $12 billion. None of that combined $85 billion deficit reduction had won final approval until Thursday, when the Senate agreed to a House-passed bill reducing spending by $8.2 billion over three years.

That measure, passed 67-26, now goes to President Reagan for his signature. It would delay annual cost-of-living increases in the pensions of federal civilian and military retirees and limit federal employees — including members of Congress — to a 4 percent pay raise this year.

That $8.2 billion was but a drop in the bucket, conceded Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, senior Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee, "but to save a buck around here is not very easy."

Nevertheless, the votes Thursday in the House and Senate were the most substantive action in Congress this year to do something about the deficits, which have become a major political issue and a concern of many economists. There is a fear that interest rates will continue rising until investors are convinced that Congress is serious about reducing the red ink.

Here is what now faces the lawmakers in light of Thursday's actions:

—On Monday, the Senate Budget Committee will begin writing its version of a target budget for fiscal 1985, which begins next Oct. 1. Republicans, who control the Senate, had hoped to bypass this process and simply have the Senate accept the $150 billion deficit-cutting plan endorsed by Reagan and GOP senators. Just as with the House version, adoption of a budget outline will do nothing about the deficit until Congress passes the spending cuts and tax increases necessary to meet the target.

—Also on Monday, the Senate will begin work on a bill approved by the Finance Committee that would raise taxes by $48 billion through Sept. 30, 1987. The bulk of those higher taxes would fall on upper-income investors and businesses, but the measure also would extend the 3 percent tax on telephone service; raise liquor taxes; delay a new tax break for savers and make it more difficult for individuals whose earnings rise sharply in one year to reduce their taxes by income averaging.

—On Wednesday, the House will debate a similar tax bill written by the Ways and Means Committee. It contains most of the provisions in the Senate package plus a 12-cent-a-pack cigarette tax after Sept. 30, 1985. That tax, now 16 cents, is scheduled under present law to drop to 8 cents on that date.

The House and Senate bills also contain additional cuts in federal spending, chiefly in outlays for the Medicare and Medicaid health programs. Hospitals, doctors and other providers of health care would have to take most of those reductions, although many beneficiaries would have to pay a greater share of their medical costs.

Eventually, the House and Senate will have to agree to the same spending cuts and tax increases — just as they did Thursday on the $8.2 billion package — before any of the actions reduce the deficit by as much as a penny.

The target budget that won House approval Thursday would permit government agencies to spend $1.002 trillion during that 12 months, the most ever but about $20 billion less than Reagan originally requested.

Outlays — the checks that actually would be spent for services and purchases — would be limited to $918.2 billion, and the government would be expected to collect $742.4 billion in revenues, creating a deficit of $175.8 billion for that year.

That Democratic plan won the votes of 229 Democrats and 21 Republicans; 139 Republicans and 29 Democrats voted against it. It was approved after seven other versions, including the president's original budget and a plan written by GOP leaders, had been rejected. The GOP bill would have allowed more money for defense than the Democratic version, and it would have made deeper cuts in the growth of spending for social programs.

"It was a victory for a united Democratic Party and a defeat for Reagan's unfairness," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill proclaimed after the vote.

Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois, the GOP leader, accused Democrats of slashing too much from defense and said the two days of debate had produced little more than "a menagerie of meaningless numbers."

Surveyed Police Job Satisfaction

ECU News Bureau
Uniformed police officers in medium-sized departments have generally higher levels of job satisfaction than officers in large or small departments, according to a former graduate student in sociology at East Carolina University.

Roderick Winstead of Wilson surveyed uniformed police in Raleigh, Wilson, Ayden, Clinton, Newton, Oxford and Washington to test four hypotheses regarding job satisfaction among police.

He found that, while such factors as officers' education levels, race and prior military experience seemed not to affect job satisfaction among police he surveyed in North Carolina departments, a relationship was indicated between job satisfaction and the size of the municipal police unit.

The departments surveyed in Winstead's research project were selected because of similarities in crime rates and population coverage.

Winstead said that while many studies have been undertaken of aspects of the urban police role, most researchers have overlooked job satisfaction and disregarded police in small cities.

"The police officer is responsible for the enforcement of thousands of laws," Winstead noted. "Not only must the police officer protect innocent citizens, but also those who may overtly break the law."

"Although police officers have much power and responsibility, they are given relatively little status and pay and are frequently ridiculed by the public which they are sworn to protect and serve," he says.

Winstead also cited high pressure as a contributor to low morale among police officers, as well as having to be targets of the public's "resentment against authority."

His research report, "Job Satisfaction of Police Officers in Seven North Carolina Police Departments," received the 1984 Emory S. Bogardus Award, as best paper presented at the preceding year's national research symposium of Alpha Kappa Delta honor society in sociology. Research symposia are held at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, Va., hosted by the founding chapter.

Winstead is employed as a crisis social worker in the Wilson County Department of Social Services and is a member of the Wilson County Crisis Center board of directors.

ECU students who presented research at this year's symposium are eligible for the 1985 Bogardus Award.

Student presenters and their topics were:

Lisa Wilson of Clinton, "Living in a Coed Dorm;" Beryl Waters of Greenville, "Roses Blooming on Campus: Returning Older Students in Education;" Larry Bellis of Greenville and Martha Loren Olive of Durham, "Ethnography of a Psychiatric Unit;" and Robert Lucas of Greenville, "Fieldwork in Mexico: The Fishery at Temascal."

The symposium drew student and faculty sociologists from more than a dozen eastern and midwestern states.

May Deny Ballot Spot

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — North Carolina has a right to deny Lyndon H. LaRouche a place on its May 8 Democratic presidential primary ballot, the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled.

In overturning a lower court decision, the appellate court said Thursday that it was not unreasonable for the state to limit ballot placement to candidates who have either met petition requirements or who have been certified by the Federal Election Commission as being eligible for federal matching funds.

The fact cannot be ignored that LaRouche has not been certified by the FEC because he still owes it $69,000 from his 1980 campaign, the court said.

LaRouche unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination for president in 1980. In 1976, he ran for president as a Labor Party candidate.

In oral arguments before the 4th Circuit Court Wednesday, attorneys for North Carolina asked for a stay of U.S. District Judge James C. Fox's order that LaRouche's name be placed on the May 8 ballot.

They contended that tying ballot placement to FEC certification for matching funds was both reasonable and constitutional.

And they said the ruling by Judge Fox would, if it could be implemented, cost North Carolina some $230,000 in reprinting ballots and instruction forms and reprogramming voting machines.

LaRouche's attorneys, however, said LaRouche planned to pay the $69,000 owed the FEC and his certification would be a mere formality once this was done.

Big Lingering Storm Causes Flood Alerts

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer
Flood alerts went up from Maryland to Maine today as a lingering storm bearing record rainfall swelled rivers over their banks, closed major highways around New York City and chased at least 3,300 New Jersey residents from their homes.

Seven National Guard units using boats and trucks helped move residents to higher ground in northern New Jersey, where more than 4 inches of rain sent rivers as much as 7 feet above flood stage to record levels in places.

John Kozak of the state Office of Emergency Management said about 1,000 people were still in emergency shelters this morning, while many had returned to their homes.

Kozak said that 1,475 people were evacuated in Passaic County, 1,600 in Morris County and 245 in Bergen County.

Flood warnings were in effect for southeastern New York, most of southern New England and inland areas of New Hampshire and southern Maine.

The heavy rain reached New England this morning, with 3 inches measured at Sebago Lake near Portland, Maine. In New Hampshire, highways near Manchester were covered by 4 feet of water and mudslides blocked roadways near Laconia.

Floodwaters in the White Mountains pushed a car off the road.

In Goffstown, N.H., about 60 people were evacuated from their homes along the Piscataquog River, including four families that had to be taken out by boat. The Central Avenue Bridge in Farmington was washed out.

Flash flood watches were in effect throughout most of New England as the Housatonic, Connecticut, Androscoogin and other big rivers rose to or near flood stages. The Potomac River was rising at Point of Rocks, Md.

New York City received a record 4.15 inches of rain on Thursday, easily topping the old record for the date of 1.95 inches set in 1947. In the suburbs, where the rainfall was closer to 5 inches, rain and mud forced police to close parts of the New York State Thruway and four major parkways this morning.

Several stores and the post office were flooded in the Westchester County suburb of Ardsley.

The storm, resembling a huge apostrophe whose leading edge curved out into the Atlantic, moved northeastward from New York State this morning and took aim on northern New England.

Forecasters said it would probably be Sunday before the storm cleared New England, with snow and rain trailing behind it as far west as the Great Lakes.

The floods that filled basements in parts of western Pennsylvania, New York State and New Jersey have "nothing to do with snow melt," Nolan Duke of the Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today.

"It's two days of fairly heavy rain that's moving very, very slowly northeastward," Duke said.

An average of 2 to 3.5 inches had fallen by today on Connecticut, western Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Elderly residents of a convalescent home in Danbury, Conn., had to spend the night elsewhere after an earthen dam burst on a small pond.

"They're scared it's going to break," said Lou Badaracco of the city public works department. "The old age home is right near the river that comes through that dam."

A construction worker in Pennsylvania was hospitalized with back injuries after two tornado-like funnel clouds swept Philadelphia's northern suburbs Thursday evening.

The first damaged two or three homes in Warminster, while the second, a few minutes later, destroyed two construction trailers in nearby Northampton.

The Potomac River was expected to hit 19 feet — 3 feet above flood stage — at Point of Rocks, Md., and 21 feet — about 6 feet above flood stage — at Shepherdstown, W.Va., today.

Passaic, Saddle, Raritan and Millstone rivers were all at least 4 feet over their banks.

Maine's Wild River at Gilead was rising rapidly, from 9.1 feet to 12.8 feet in just three hours Thursday night. It was expected to hit its record of 15.6 feet sometime this morning.

In New Hampshire, where the Merrimack and Connecticut rivers were both nearing the tops of their banks, the Pemigewasset River at Plymouth swelled nearly 4 feet — from 6.5 feet to 10.2 feet — in three hours Thursday. Flood stage there is 11 feet.

At Mahwah, N.J., the Ramapo River crested late Thursday at 15 feet — a full 7 feet above its flood stage. The Wanaque River crested earlier at a record 9.2 feet, and the

Deformed Baby Jane Doe Leaves Hospital

STONY BROOK, N.Y. (AP) — The deformed infant known as Baby Jane Doe has gone home from the hospital, where she been since birth while her parents fought a legal battle to refuse her surgery that might prolong her life.

The 6-month-old baby was discharged from University Hospital on Thursday afternoon, said Daphne Nelson, a nursing supervisor at the hospital. She refused to provide any details on the release of the infant, who has become the center of a court battle between her parents and the Reagan administration.

The child, whose first name is Keri-Lynn but whose last name has not been revealed, was born Oct. 11 with spina bifida, an incomplete closure of the spinal cord, excessive fluid on the brain and an abnormally small head.

Her parents, identified only as Dan and Linda, have chosen a conservative course of treatment for the baby, who doctors say may be paralyzed and may not live past her 20s.

The Reagan administration is seeking the child's medical records to determine if she has been discriminated against because of her handicaps.

The parents have rejected the idea of surgery that would have closed the baby's spine and drained the excess fluid from her brain, instead allowing the child's natural healing process to handle the problems.

Right-to-life advocates, including the National Right to Life Lobby, have fought unsuccessfully in court to force the surgery, alleging the parents' decision could result in the infant's death.

Since her birth, the baby has weathered several infections and pneumonia, and her parents said in several interviews they were hoping to bring her home.

Her mother says the opening in the baby's spine has healed naturally.

Both state and federal courts have denied government attempts to gain access to hospital records, but the Reagan administration has asked the 2nd Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals to reconsider the denial.

The parents termed the administration actions an "offensive intrusion" in their lives.

The child's development has been slower than that of other babies her age. Her parents said that when Keri-Lynn was 4½ months old, she was doing what a month-old infant would do.

"There is no operation, no medication in the world that's going to change her," the mother said recently. The parents say they love their daughter although she "is never going to get better."

Fourth Arrest In Wilkes Probe

GREENSBORO (AP) — A 35-year-old Florida man on Thursday became the fourth person arrested in an investigation of drug smuggling, racketeering and public corruption in Wilkes County, authorities said.

Jorge Felix Oragon, of Melbourne, Fla., was arrested without incident late Thursday afternoon in Charlotte, according to U.S. Marshal Max Wilson.

Oragon was charged with conspiracy to unlawfully possess and distribute cocaine and with several other drug-related charges, Wilson said.

Oragon was being held in the Mecklenburg County Jail on $1 million bond, Wilson said.

Oragon was one of seven persons indicted two weeks ago by a federal grand jury meeting in Asheville in an investigation dubbed "Wilco."

The other three who have been arrested are Martin Cheek, a Wilkes County grocer who is in prison on a tax evasion charge; James Alvin Rhodes, a Wilkes County native; and Meynardo Gonzalez, a Miami boat racer.

Rhodes and Gonzalez were being held in the Mecklenburg County Jail on $500,000 bond each, Wilson said.

Scheduled For Competitive Bids

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department has withdrawn nearly 140,000 acres of oil leases on the ground they should not be awarded without competitive bidding.

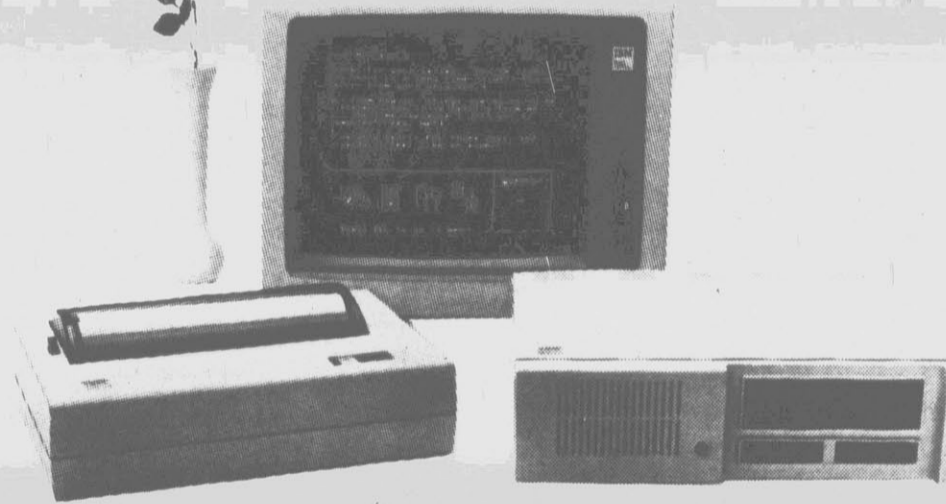

A review showed that the 196 tracts contained geological structures known to bear oil or natural gas, spokeswoman Elizabeth Morris of the Bureau of Land Management said.

Another 143 tracts, for which an acreage figure was not available, will undergo further geological review, she said.

The department awards oil leases without bidding on land it does not believe contains oil and gas. Relinquished tracts are awarded in a lottery. Land that has never been leased may be leased on application.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market lost more ground today, encountering continued selling pressure at its lowest levels in a year.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 18.01 Thursday to its lowest closing level since last April 8, dropped another .42 to 1,130.13 by noon-time today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 9 to 5 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market's sharp drop late Thursday had prompted some additional selling.

But they said a downturn in interest rates in the credit markets this morning improved traders' spirits. Rates dropped in response to the government's report that the civilian unemployment rate held steady at 7.8 percent last month.

That news was taken as a tentative sign that the pace of the economy might be slowing enough to lessen upward pressure on interest rates.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines rose ¾ to 109½, while Ford Motor was unchanged at 33¼, and General Motors slipped ¼ to 62½.

The NYSE's composite index fell .09 to 89.24. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .72 at 205.56.

Volume on the Big Board came to 40.80 million shares at noontime, against 39.74 million at the same point Thursday.

Escaped In Crash

By The Associated Press
 Nine crewmen on a Pope Air Force Base aircraft escaped injury when their plane skidded off a runway at Lages Air Base in the Azores and burst into flame, base officials say.

The Thursday accident occurred as the C-130 Hercules plane touched down following a flight across the Atlantic Ocean of about eight hours, according to Pope Air Force Base officials.

Base spokesman Lt. Walter Thorp said the nine crew members were part of the 39th Tactical Airlift Squadron of the 317th Tactical Airlift Wing at Pope. Their names were not released.

Thorp said the aircraft left McGuire Air Force Base, N.J. and arrived in the in the Azores off the coast of Portugal about 6:30 a.m. EST.

The airplane skidded about 400 feet across a field as flames engulfed the left wing, he said. The nose of the aircraft entered an unoccupied shed as it came to a stop, Thorp said.

There was no hazardous cargo on board, he said.

The cause of the accident will be investigated by a special board of Air Force officers, Thorp said.

Thorp said with the extent of damage reported, the loss could exceed $500,000. He said the accident may have been the worst involving a Pope aircraft since a November 1978 crash of a C-130 near Charleston, S.C., in which six people died.

A C-130 is a four-engine, turbo-prop cargo and troop transport plane used primarily by the Air Force. The bubble-nosed plane, in service for more than 20 years, is used by the 82nd Airborne Division and flew hundreds of missions in the American invasion of Grenada, including the initial assault in which Army Rangers parachuted onto the island to secure the Point Salines airfield.

Airline, Union Parleys Stalled

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Talks were reported stalled between Northwest Airlines and a flight attendants' union after members rejected the company's final contract offer and set an April 15 strike deadline.

Dennis Quinn, spokesman for Airline, Aerospace and Allied Employees Local 2747, said 78 percent of Northwest's 2,900 attendants voted against the offer Thursday. Rejection by more than two-thirds was needed to authorize a strike, he said.

Northwest spokesman Matt Gonnring said the company's final offer would place the flight attendants among the highest-paid in the industry.

Rejected Appeal For Bible Class

IRWIN, Pa. (AP) — A school board has rejected a religious group's request to conduct Bible study classes before the start of each high school day, saying the voluntary sessions would violate the Constitutional provision against "establishment" of religion.

Parents who supported the Christian Youth Crusade's request were upset by the decision. "We feel our children should have the opportunity to hear what God has to say about such items as creation, abortion, trial marriages and other subjects," says Lee Harrold.

Blimp Evaluation Funds Allocated

WASHINGTON — Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., said today the U.S. Coast Guard has earmarked $500,000 to continue an evaluation of the effectiveness of blimps for its surveillance and search missions.

Jones said the Coast Guard, in conjunction with the U.S. Navy, has completed a month-long testing program at the Elizabeth City Air Station, which proved the blimp's general capabilities. A five-month evaluation of the blimp's performance during actual Coast Guard operations will follow, Jones noted.

The test blimp was provided by Airship Industries, which is located in Elizabeth City.

"I am particularly excited about this project because not only may we be identifying a new tool for the Coast Guard, but we may be doing it with the help of the people of eastern North Carolina," Jones said. He said the potential exists for the Airship Industries plant to employ up to 800 people if it manufactures the blimps for the Coast Guard.

Wolfpack Rallies, Holds Off ECU

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

When N.C. State and East Carolina met last night in baseball at Harrington Field, it was a game of give and take.

Both teams gave the other the opportunity to score through mistakes, and the other took advantage of it.

But it was East Carolina that gave last and State that took advantage for a 7-6 victory in the non-conference contest.

The Wolfpack pushed over two runs in the top of the ninth to break a 5-5 tie and then held off the Pirates in the bottom of the inning to gain the win.

While six of the seven State runs were earned, ECU mistakes helped contribute to their scoring. A misplayed fly ball turned into a double and a homer followed that — erasing a 5-2 ECU lead. A passed ball and an error brought on the two winning runs in the ninth.

It left a bitter taste in the mouth of ECU Coach Hal Baid. "It wasn't pretty at all. We misplayed a couple of balls defensively and it hurt us."

"I thought Robbie (McClanahan, starting pitcher) had good stuff, but he made some bad pitches, too. State has a good club, and you can't afford to give them stuff and still expect to have a chance to win. We swung the bats pretty well, but we must make too many mistakes at the wrong times. We could have won, that's what bothers me."

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, 1984

McClanahan went through the first five innings and allowed but one run, that coming on a second inning homer by Doug Davis with two men away. That gave the Wolfpack a temporary 1-0 lead. Otherwise, State had only one runner reach scoring position through the first five frames.

Meanwhile, the Pirates were taking advantage of some State mistakes to score a couple of second inning unearned runs. Mike Williams led off the second with a single to right and Mark Council's grounder to third was booted. With two away, Jim Riley walked and Greg Hardison singled up the middle to drive in both Williams and Council, giving ECU a 2-1 lead.

The Pirates, after leaving a runner on third in the fourth, pushed over two more in the fifth. David Wells reached on an error and with two away, Winfred Johnson slapped a homer to right and East Carolina held a 4-1 lead.

State's Tracy Woodson, the career homer leader for the Wolfpack, hit his 20th of the year in the top of the sixth, as the ball just cleared a leaping Mark Shank in dead center. That trimmed the lead to 4-2.

But the Pirates got it back in the bottom of the inning as Council drove the ball out in left center, giving ECU a 5-2 margin.

Doug Davis led off the seventh for State with a walk and Bob Marczak's fly to left was misplayed by Todd Evans, and it went for a double. Andrew Fava followed that up with a booming homer to left, scoring three runs and knotting it at 5-5.

State took the lead in the ninth as the Pirates gave them plenty of help. Marczak reached on a fielder's choice that left one down, and he advanced to second on a passed ball. Fava's grounder to third was thrown away at first, allowing Marczak to score and putting Fava on second. He scored from there on Dickie Dalton's single up the middle, giving the Wolfpack a 7-5 edge.

East Carolina tried to rally, but came up short. Steve Sides led off with a single and moved up on an out. He scored on Greg Hardison's single, but that was it as Wells grounded to the mound for the final out.

Davis, Fava and Dalton each had two hits for the Wolfpack, which advanced its record to 26-5 on the season. Hardison led the Pirates with two hits.

The Pirates, now 17-8, travel this weekend for two ECAC-South games. They play at Richmond on Saturday and at James Madison on Sunday.

Homers Power Rampants, 8-4

By JIMMY DUPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

The Rose High School Rampants ripped three homers in the fifth inning including a solo shot by pitcher Billy Michel to defeat Kinston 8-4 in Big East 4-A baseball action Thursday at Guy Smith Stadium.

Tony Taylor and Eric Woodworth each swatted two-run homers in the fifth, as the Rampants recorded their fourth conference victory.

"Billy threw the ball okay," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said. "But he has thrown the ball with more zip before. Those were the first runs scored against him this year." Michel struck out eight and gave up just six hits while recording his fourth victory in as many decisions.

The Rampants fell behind early, as Kinston's Steve Whitley reached first when Michel dropped a toss from first baseman Mike Kinley while attempting to cover the bag in the top of the third. Whitley moved to second on a wild pitch and later scored on a sacrifice fly by Ricky Carlyle.

But Rose struck back in the bottom half of the frame. Taylor reached first on an error by Carlyle at shortstop, and a bloop single by Traye Fuqua drove him across to knot the score.

"I was pleased with the way we hung in there and kept the pressure on them," Vincent said. "But I thought the turning point of the game was that double play in the top of the fifth."

On that play, the Vikings had Whit Whitley on second after a walk and stolen base. Steve Whitley floated the ball over Battle Emory's glove in right field, and Taylor retrieved it for the throw home. Kinley relayed the ball to Woodworth for the tag on Whit Whitley. But Steve Whitley made a wide turn at second, and Woodworth ran towards him and fired to Gary Scott at third for the final out.

"Kinley made a good play on the relay, and Eric chased the guy down the way you're supposed to," Vincent said. "That gave us the momentum we needed."

Kinston starter Ike Brown got into trouble early by walking Emory, and Taylor lined the ball over the left field fence to give the Rampants a 3-1 advantage. Then Marc Nover walked, stole second, moved to third on a fielder's choice by Fuqua and scored on a passed ball for a three-run Rose lead.

After Brown hit Kinley with a pitch, James Watson came on in relief for the Vikings. But Woodworth's greeting was less than cordial, as he ripped Watson's first pitch over the fence. Michel watched a pair of pitches before launching his homer, giving Rose a 7-1 margin.

The Rampants added another run in the sixth, as Emory was hit by a pitch and later scored on a single by pinch hitter Les Turner.

But Kinston rallied in the seventh, with Steve Nesbitt ripping a leadoff homer to center. Tom Vermillion reached first on an error and advanced on a single by Richie Henderson, and a long single to the corner in left by Whit Whitley loaded the bases.

Steve Whitley lofted a sacrifice fly to right to drive in Vermillion, and Henderson scored on a throwing error. But Michel settled down to strike out the side for the win.

The Rampants improved their overall mark to 7-2-1 and travel to Wilson Fike Tuesday.

Chargers Bow To Firebirds

STANHOPE — Southern Nash pushed over two runs in the bottom of the third inning and went on to record a 3-1 baseball victory over Ayden-Grifton yesterday.

The defeat was the first of the year in Eastern Carolina Conference play for the Chargers, who fall to 3-1. The Chargers are 5-3 overall.

Ayden-Grifton scored first, getting a run in the top of the third. Leo Venters walked and Wesley Hardy singled. Shannon Peede then doubled in Venters.

But the Firebirds rallied for two in the bottom of the third. Jeff Morgan singled and Phil Bryant walked. Lynn Webb also walked, loading the bases. Carl Blackman followed with a single, scoring Morgan, and Bryant scored on a single by Bob Maye.

The Firebirds added their insurance run in the fourth.

Blackman had two hits, one of them a double, to lead the Firebird hitting. No one had more than one hit for the Chargers.

Ayden-Grifton returns to action tonight, hosting Farmville Central in a 7:30 p.m. contest.

Greene Central.....4

PIKEVILLE — Johnny Carr cracked a three-run homer to highlight a five-run first inning as Charles B. Aycock High School dumped Greene Central, 7-4, in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game yesterday.

Those five runs in the first were all the Falcons needed. Tommy Dunn led off with a walk and Jesse Woodard singled. John Thomas followed with a double, driving in both runners. Duane Nichols reached on an error and Carr followed with his roundtripper.

The Falcons scored single runs in the second and fifth, the former on a solo homer by Paul Summerlin.

The Rams scored once in the fourth and three times in the fifth, but it wasn't enough. They also left the bases loaded in two other innings.

Thomas led the Aycock hitting with three, while Todd Grant had four hits, three of them doubles, to lead the Rams. Stacy Chase also had two hits, while Carlton Joyner had a two-run homer in the fifth inning for Greene Central.

The Rams drop to 1-3 in the Eastern Carolina Conference and are 4-5-2 overall. They play host to Southern Nash on Tuesday.

Bear Grass.....10
Chocowinity.....4

CHOCOWINITY — Bear Grass managed just six hits at the plate but utilized five errors by Chocowinity as the Bears recorded a 10-4 victory over the Tribe in Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference baseball action Thursday.

Lawrence Watson went the distance on the mound for Bear Grass.

Chocowinity got on the board in the third, as Melvin Tripp slapped a leadoff single, stole second and scored on a double by Shawn Hardy. A single by Johnny Squires' drove in Hardy for the Tribes' second run.

But Bear Grass broke the game with five runs in the fourth. Watson and Dave Cratt reached first on errors, and Jake Whitley doubled them in. Whitley scored on Bill Cherry's single. A base on balls to James Lilley forced Cherry in later in the inning, and Billy Fulford walked to score Billy Nielson.

Chocowinity retaliated with a pair of runs in the fifth to trim the margin to 5-4, but Cratt's two-run single capped a four-run offensive by Bear Grass in the sixth to put the game out of reach.

Bear Grass improved its Tobacco Belt record to 6-1 while 6-2 overall. Chocowinity, now 2-5 in the league and 3-6 overall, travels to Cape Hatteras Tuesday for a non-conference game.

GLEANING---THE POOR MAN'S HARVEST!
GATHERING THE GRAIN THAT THE REAPERS HAVE OVERLOOKED OR THE GRAPES THAT THE PICKERS HAVE FAILED TO REMOVE AFTER THE VINTAGE SEASON (JUDGES 8:2, ISA. 17:6) WAS THE POOR MAN'S HARVEST BY LAW. ALSO BENEFITTING WERE THE FATHERLESS, THE WIDOW, AND THE STRANGER IN THE LAND! THE OWNERS OF ALL FARMLAND WERE INSTRUCTED BY THE LAW NOT TO GLEAN THEIR HARVEST FIELDS OR VINEYARDS, NOR RETURN FOR A FORGOTTEN SHEATH, NOR GATHER ANY FALLEN FRUIT (LEV. 19:9,10 DEUT. 24:19). IN THIS MANNER THE ISRAELITES TOOK CARE OF ALL THEIR LESS FORTUNATE BRETHREN. A FINE EXAMPLE OF THIS IS THE STORY OF RUTH IN THE BIBLICAL BOOK OF RUTH.

Mission Serving Homeless Men For A Hundred Years to find job training programs, cash in on available welfare and other benefits and get treatment for alcoholism, drug addiction, psychiatric disturbances and other problems, he said.

By MARTIN J. WATERS
Associated Press Writer
HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - The residents of the Open Hearth Mission may be down on their luck, but they don't live that way.

Founded a century ago in a rough waterfront district that now is the site of an interstate highway, the Open Hearth is still in business, providing a home-style environment for about 75 men.

"I try to have a family concept here, and everyone has responsibility to the group," said Don Goulette, a former school teacher and administrator who has been executive director of the shelter since 1977.

All able-bodied residents at the privately run Open Hearth work, mainly at the shelter's firewood business which dates back to the turn of the century and provides more than half of the $384,000 yearly operating budget. The rest comes from welfare payments, endowment income and contributions.

The men who don't split and deliver wood - the Open Hearth sold 2,000 cords last year - clean and maintain the building and staff the shelter's kitchen. Residents operate their own meal service.

Danny Capa, 47, an experienced cook, is the current kitchen supervisor. He said he came to the shelter four months ago after hitting hard times in Boston.

"I figure I'm looking at another six months, then I'll find some goal," he said. "This is not a flop-house. This is a home, and that's a lot of difference."

The shelter, in a four-floor brick building converted in 1927 from a rooming house, includes a brightly decorated chapel to the left of the main entrance. The chapel is in a room that was a honky-tonk barroom in the rooming-house days.

The recreation room, where residents gather to watch television, is stark, with benches along the wall and a worn-out linoleum floor. But the dormitory section is kept painted and neat.

"The place was cold" when he took over, Goulette said. "It seemed to say, 'You must be bad or you wouldn't be here,'" he said. "The first thing I did was get the place painted and hang some draperies."

The average stay at the shelter is three to four months, and the ages of the residents range from 17 to 84, Goulette said.

The demand for emergency shelters has increased markedly in Connecticut over the past four years, and especially since 1982, according to James G. Harris Jr., the state human resources commissioner. Harris estimated the number of homeless people in Connecticut at between 6,000 and 10,000 and rising.

The state is spending $1.2 million this year on aid to shelters and soup kitchens, $950,000 of it from federal social-service block grants.

In Washington, the Federal Emergency Management Agency allocated $40 million for 1984 to help private agencies house the homeless nationwide. New Orleans Mayor Ernest N. Morial, chairman of the U.S. Conference of Mayors' task force on joblessness and hunger, estimated last January that there are 500,000 to 2 million homeless people nationwide.

Goulette is critical of many shelters' lack of support and rehabilitation facilities.

"You can give a guy fish and feed him for a day, but you really should teach him to fish for himself," Goulette said. "These other kinds of shelters that are opening more and more now are just Band-Aids."

They have suffered the tragedy of losing four children in accidental deaths. He has gone through the agony of a nervous breakdown and can now share with you the joy of an overcoming life through the power and grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. He is a sought after speaker and has appeared on radio and television programs all across America. Many of the major newspapers have carried the tragedies and victories of his life's story.

'George Washington' Miniseries All-Heroic

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In this age of mirrors and make-up, when political image-making strives to make mountains out of molehills, CBS' "George Washington" has erected a real skyscraper of a man.

It makes you wish he were on the ballot this year. The eight-hour miniseries that begins Sunday night, continues Tuesday and concludes Wednesday is televised American history at its classiest. At long last, the oldest countenance on Mount Rushmore has come down from the mountain and been returned to the masses.

Before CBS began spinning history in our living rooms, what most Americans knew about George Washington could fit on a one-dollar bill. But that can be corrected now.

Forsaking references to wooden cherry trees, wooden teeth or the wooden soldier, CBS combines rich, historical detail, warm, personal biography and dignified, invigorating drama to give Washington's image much-needed flesh and blood. This is as close to the real thing as TV can do.

It begins slowly as characters are introduced and motivations are given roots, and, sometimes, in trying to cover too much ground, it jumps around a bit too frantically. But, from the middle of the first installment on, "George Washington" soars magisterially as documented drama.

The sweeping miniseries is based on James Thomas Flexner's Pulitzer Prize-honored four-volume biography of Washington. The vision that Flexner's epic could be grandly drawn on the small screen belonged to Executive Producer David Gerber ("Police Story," "Police Woman"). Gerber sold the idea to CBS. General Motors Corp. paid around $9 million for full sponsorship. The total production cost was about $22 million. Producer Richard Fielder wrote the teleplay.

Barry Bostwick stars as Washington. His is a sensitive, noble and, even, a regal Washington, though the first president himself would never stand to be king.

The fact that Bostwick (the original Danny Zuko in Broadway's "Grease") is not an overworked TV face adds to his credibility, as Washington's story is traced from an 11-year-old in 1743, just after his father died, to his days as a surveyor to his first taste of battle in the French and Indian War to his up-and-down-but-never-out military career as America's leading revolutionary.

Washington's humanizing transformation into Gentle George is done through the depiction of his personal relationships.

His mother (Rosemary Murphy) was a shrewish nag, always complaining, never happy with her limited wealth or the frontier wanderings of her son. George, who understood her, tolerated her and even loved her, could have become a bitter, cynical, never-satisfied man.

The one passionate love in his life was for the flirtatious Sally Fairfax (Jaclyn Smith), happily married to his best friend (David Dukes.) But this affection was destined to be an unconsummated, yet devout friendship. "You're one of a kind and I'll never find another," he tells her.

This unfulfilled love helps explain his marriage to the widow Martha Custis (Patty Duke Astin), who was kind, caring, short, plain and no threat to extinguishing the candle Washington had burning for Sally. George loved Martha, but not in the same way.

Jackson Videos Earned Awards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Jackson, continuing to sweep the entertainment world's highest honors, won best pop video and best male performance for "Beat It" at the second annual American Video Awards.

Jackson's videos also won two technical awards in ceremonies Thursday.

Cyndi Lauper was honored for best performance by a female with "Girls Just Want To Have Fun," and The Police won for best group performance in "Every Breath You Take."

Herbie Hancock won first place for soul video with "Rockit," and Merle Haggard and Willie Nelson's "Pancho & Lefty" video scored first for best country video.

Bob Giraldi took best director honors for "Beat It." The two-hour presentation, sponsored by the 500-plus members of the American Video Association and hosted by disc jockey Casey Kasem, was taped for coast-to-coast TV syndication at a later date.

Michael Nesmith, performer, producer and director, was inducted into the video association's Hall of Fame. Last year's choice was former Beatle Paul McCartney.

'Dynasty' Stars Will Join Show

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Dynasty" triangle of John Forsythe, Linda Evans and Joan Collins will be there, so plans for a repeat of the "Night of 100 Stars" extravaganza are moving right along — as soon as the organizer signs up 97 more luminaries.

But Broadway showman Alexander Cohen has plenty of time to complete the cast of "Night of 100 Stars II." The sequel to the 1982 event, which brought together more than 200 of the biggest names in show business, isn't being held for 10 months.

Cohen said Thursday that the next celebrity gathering will be taped on Feb. 17, 1985, at Radio City Music Hall, and will be televised later that spring, as a three-hour special on ABC.

The first "Night of 100 Stars," which was televised in March 1982, was dedicated for the Actors Fund of America and raised more than $650,000.

Count Basie Is Ulcer Patient

NEW YORK (AP) — Jazz bandleader Count Basie, who has suffered two heart attacks in recent years, is being hospitalized for treatment of a "rather severe" ulcer, a spokesman says.

Wayne Hutchison, a spokesman for Willard Alexander Inc. in New York City, Basie's booking agent, said Thursday that the 79-year-old pianist was in a Florida hospital, but he declined to disclose exactly where.

His humanity also comes across in his compassion for his troops. As Washington lost numerous battles on his way to winning the war, some of his generals lost faith, but Washington's undying belief in his men was returned in kind.

Among the dissenting generals was Benedict Arnold, but even this textbook scoundrel is given life and some motivation for his treason. Through Stephen Macht's portrayal, we learn that Arnold felt betrayed first, for not having received credit and additional rank for his victory and wounds at Fort Ticonderoga. The miniseries clearly doesn't excuse him; it just tries to understand him.

Washington is depicted as the reluctant military leader, whose experiences with bloodshed in the French and Indian War turned him toward a career as a gentleman farmer. Yet the contempt and condescension he felt for the British for being a mere "provincial" soldier never died.

"That's the last time I let some British lord look down his aristocratic nose at me," he says.

The battle scenes, including Brooklyn Heights, Trenton and Yorktown, are some of TV's best-staged military encounters. It's astounding that Washington, riding tall on his white horse, often was spitting distance from the fighting. Without any Secret Service.

In "Police Story," Gerber earned a reputation for dramatizing urban warfare. Director Buzz Kulik has helped enhance it here.

taking place at Washington's home in Mount Vernon, the army's winter encampment in Valley Forge and the final battlefield at Yorktown.

Convenient Stores Said To Be Convenient To Thievery

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Police say it happens all the time. Someone walks into a convenience store and runs out with a six-pack of beer, or pumps a tank of gas into a car and drives away without paying for it.

A national convenience store trade union does not keep separate records of losses caused by shoplifting. But petty thieves, and dishonest employees and vendors accounted for $31 million "shrinkage problem."

How much of that amount is lost to shoplifting "is a matter of speculation," said Kerley LaBoueff, president of the National Association of Convenience Stores.

"There are just too many ways to generate shrinkage," he said, adding that estimates within the industry vary widely.

As losses mount, stores are rearranging their layouts to protect themselves.

Aisles in Fast Fare stores run perpendicular to the checkout counter, giving clerks unobstructed views of customers, according to James Cuppy, manager of the Fast Fare in Franklin. Ceiling mirrors are used in almost all chain stores.

Merchandise across from video games is often intentionally unappealing to kids. When candy near the machines started to disappear, Lynda Jackson of The Pantry in Hendersonville replaced it with charcoal and paper towels. customers," Ms. Jackson said.

Shoplifting becomes larceny once the goods are taken out of the store, and most owners and security officers will let a thief get outside with the loot, said an Asheville police records spokesman.

Larceny of less than $400 worth of merchandise is punishable by up to two years in prison, while a first-time conviction for shoplifting is punishable by up to six months in prison and a $100 fine.

Convenience store owners have little heart for people who pilfer from their businesses. Signs in most chain stores warn customers that the companies will prosecute.

Generally, when we prosecute we are successful," said Ed Lambert, corporate legal counsel for Mumford Inc., which owns some 950 Majik Market Stores.

Steve Stone, owner of The Little Cupboard in Rutherfordton, estimates he loses between $2,000 and $3,000 every year to shoplifters, and that, in the end, it's the consumers who make up the difference.

"Somebody's got to pay," he said.

According to Asheville area police reports, most popular among thieves are cigarettes, beer and gas, but almost anything that can be easily handled has been lifted. Arrest reports show that shoplifting knows no economic or social boundaries.

An operator, like any other North Carolinian, may detain a person if he has probable cause to believe the person has committed a felony, a breach of the peace, a crime involving physical injury to another person, or a crime involving theft or destruction of property.

Rockefeller Sees Criticism Fade

WASHINGTON (AP) — Banker David Rockefeller says criticism of the Trilateral Commission has declined in recent years because the private group of world leaders has turned out not "to be a subversive group trying to control the world."

"There are still fringe groups who oppose us, but most of it has died down," the former chairman of Chase Manhattan Bank told a news conference. He said President Reagan, who criticized the group in his 1980 campaign, expressed "his belief in and support for what we were doing," at a White House reception for the organization last Sunday.

The group, which held its annual meeting this week, was created 11 years ago to bring together opinion leaders from Japan, Europe and the United States. Nearly 20 members served in President Carter's administration.

Army Considers Divisional Base

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army is considering forts in six states as a possible home base for a new 10,000-man light infantry division to be formed next year.

It also could split the division at more than one fort, the Army said. The new unit would be the first formed in eight years and would bring the number of divisions to 17.

Bases under consideration are Fort Greely, Richardson and Wainwright, Alaska; Fort Benning, Ga.; Fort Campbell, Ky.; Fort Drum, N.Y.; Fort Lewis, Wash. and Fort Ord, Calif.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — COY GARDENER, PURPOSELY COMPILING FAMILY TREE, FOUND ROOTS.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: R equals S

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Overcame Handicap

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Mitch Crimm met a special challenge when he decided to parachute with the U.S. Army Golden Knights.

Crimm, a graduate student at East Tennessee State University, has cerebral palsy and only limited use of his legs. He has been living for two weeks with the Golden Knights, the Army's crack skydiving team, preparing a photo essay on the team.

"I just want to show that regardless how limited you are, you can use your gifts," Crimm said before the jump. "You can push yourself to the limit. If someone looks to me and learns something, I'll feel blessed and honored."

For his jump Tuesday, he was strapped into a special harness and parachute with Rusty Vest, a member of the Golden Knights. Both men shared the single chute during the 7,000-foot fall to the ground.

"Kids can look at what I'm doing," he said, "and even though they may realize the can't do this, maybe they'll tell themselves, 'I can learn numbers.' Maybe they'll think about what they can do."

Vest, a master at using the tandem chute, said before the jump that his legs would take the impact for both bodies on the landing.

As Vest and Crimm drifted toward the ground, another skydiver landed in a gravel-padded pit, forcing them to veer off toward hard ground.

Crimm's face contorted as he hit the ground, and he grabbed for his leg.

"I took the total impact on that leg," he said. "I think it's just sore."

"Mitch couldn't get his knees real close together — not quite tight enough," Vest said. "That's why he banged his leg. I'm real happy with the jump myself. It tells us we can afford the luxury of trying something like this. We now know — it works."

"First thing he did under canopy was scream. With excitement, I mean," Vest said. "On the way down, we just sat and looked around. It was a pretty decent landing, though a little bit rougher than what I'd hoped."

The bidding:

South West North East
1 ♠ 1 ♥ 2 ♦ Pass
3 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass
5 ♣ Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: King of ♥.

Here's a chance for you to test your technique. Cover the East-West hands with your thumbs and see how you would play five clubs after the lead of the king of hearts.

It is not easy to reach three no trump. That contract has nine tricks on any lead. Now, however, you must justify your bidding by making eleven tricks at your club contract.

Obviously, you have no trouble if East has the queen of spades. You can win the ace of hearts, finesse the jack of spades, win any trump, draw two rounds of trumps, cash the king of spades and then ruff a spade in dummy. So your only problem arises if West has both the ace and queen of spades.

But there is another danger. You cannot allow East to gain the lead, for he will shift to a spade and you will lose two spade tricks in addition to the trick you conceded to East—down one.

Your best chance is to concede a trick that you would not normally have to lose—allow West to win the king of hearts! Now your contract is virtually ironclad.

Assume West shifts to a trump—as good a defense as any. Win in your hand, cross to the ace of diamonds and discard a diamond on the ace of hearts. After ruffing a diamond high, return to the table with a trump and ruff another diamond. Dummy's diamonds are established, and since you still have a trump entry on the board, you will make an overtrick.

What if the diamonds are 4-1? You can still set up the suit with a ruffing finesse if West turns up with a singleton diamond honor. And if East started with four diamonds to the king-queen, you will have to fall back on the spade finesse for your contract.

TWO GIRLS AND A BOY — Mike and Liane Schmidt admire their triplets, James, Jamie and Jessica, at Mercy Health Center in Dubuque, Iowa this week. The triplets, all under four pounds, were born on April 1. Mike Schmidt, who lost his legs two years ago as a result of a motorcycle accident, says his disability will not keep him from helping to care for the triplets. "I'll take my share of the 2 a.m. feedings", he said. (AP Laserphoto)

Agriculture Dept. Reports N.C. Storm Damage Funds

By The Associated Press
North Carolina farmers received some good news when the U.S. Department of Agriculture made $300,000 available to repair damage done to farms by the tornadoes, said John Cooper of the Agriculture Conservation and Stabilization Service.

A string of storms hit North Carolina March 28, taking 44 lives, causing over 800 injuries, leaving about 2,200 homeless, and doing millions of dollars in damage.

Cooper said Thursday his office was notified by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., that North Carolina farmers were eligible for the funds under the Emergency Conservation Service.

Under the program, farmers can receive 64 percent of the cost of removing debris from their land, for grading, shaping or leveling damaged farmland or for restoring the certain structures on the farm, Cooper said.

Max Powell of the state Division of Emergency Management said Pitt, Green and Scotland counties have been certified as eligible for emergency food stamps.

Storm victims needing the stamps should apply to the local social services departments beginning Friday, he said. The emergency stamps will be available for a limited time, Powell said, but the time period has not yet been determined.

Three emergency disaster centers will open today at Nashville, Gatesville and Lagrange and a mobile center will be open for one day Saturday in Red Springs.

Federal Emergency Management Agency spokesman Phil Cogan also said centers at Maxton, Mount Olive and Snow Hill closed Thursday. He said 1,177 families had used the centers, many of which opened Tuesday, for applications for emergency housing and other needs.

Cogan said late Thursday that a few mobile homes will be coming into the state to be used as temporary housing.

"A few will come trickling across the North Carolina border tomorrow" from the agency's storage center in Atlanta, Cogan said. He said the mobile homes will be stored at Maxton Airport and Seymour Johnson Air Force Base until sites are prepared for them.

He said most of the mobile homes will be brought into the state Saturday but did not know the exact number.

State Employment Security Commission officials said Wednesday 350 victims of last week's storms have filed for federal unemployment benefits because of jobs lost in the disaster, and more applications are likely.

Unlike state unemployment benefits, federal disaster benefits are available for people unable to work because of injuries. The benefits also are available for self-employed workers.

Meanwhile, a storm that hit Durham Wednesday was classified by the National Weather Service as a small tornado.

The storm smashed windows at Northgate Shopping Mall, turned over cars in the parking lot, took the roofs off houses in the area and damaged new construction at Durham County General Hospital.

Insurance agents for various businesses were still assessing the damages from the storm Wednesday, but unofficial estimates placed the repair work from $200,000 to $400,000. Most of the damage was to the Sears Auto Center and surrounding buildings.

Bruce Benton, manager of Northgate Mall, estimated that 30 or 400 people were shopping at the mall at the time of the storm.

"We are extremely pleased with our employees and our shoppers," Benton said. "There was absolutely no warning ... and everyone acted in a mature fashion."

Benton said his insurance agents estimated that roughly $30,000 in damage was done to the mall itself. He said there was no structural damage, and the main problem was rainwater that poured into the mall after the skylights were destroyed.

There were a few injuries which were blamed on the storm, but all were reported to be minor.
