Solar Max Fixed, Returned To Orbit

FLYING AGAIN — A healthy Solar Max satellite had been retrieved from space and repaired after four years of inactivity in the void. (AP Laserphoto)

By HOWARD BENEDICT

AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's astronauts returned a healthy Solar Max satellite to space as an orbiting sun watcher today, and the shuttle's skipper declared: "Satellite servicing is something that's here to stay."

"We pick up, repair and deliver," said commander Robert Crippen, obviously pleased with the historic first retrieval and repair of a satellite in space.

The satellite was dropped off at 4:26 a.m. EST by the shuttle's 50-foot mechanical arm, which had plucked it from space on Tuesday for in-orbit repairs. Two of Challenger's crew replaced defective parts during a record space walk on Wednesday.

"Solar Max is dead on the sun," said Mission Control in reporting the satellite had a firm lock on its target after a television picture showed it drifting slowly away from the shuttle.

"Good news," said Crippen. "It looks pretty good there."

After more than three years of circling the globe as dead weight, Solar Max was back to provide valuable information on giant solar flares that pour torrents of radiation into interplanetary space. What scientists learn from the satellite may help them better understand the sun and how it affects weather, radio communications and other conditions on Earth.

With the retrieval, repair and return task behind them, the five astronauts were in good spirits when they answered questions from reporters on Earth during a 30-minute news conference.

They appeared on television wearing T-shirts with the slogan "Ace Satellite Repair Co." and Crippen opened with:

"Welcome to the Ace Satellite Repair Co. We pick up, repair and deliver."

Asked how he felt about failing to collar Solar Max on Sunday and then salvaging the mission with a successful capture on Tuesday, Crippen replied: "We were somewhat disappointed on the initial attempt. But we were all feeling good after we picked it. It was a team effort both here and on the ground."

"We proved that repairing satellites is a doable thing; satellite servicing is something that's here to stay."

Spacewalker George Nelson said he did not know why his docking device failed to lock onto Solar Max when he tried to grab it while flying free on Sunday. "The jury's still out on that," he said.

On Tuesday, during the repair task, he detected a possible answer — a small metal pin, used to hold down an insulation blanket, was protruding about an inch above the docking pin on the satellite. NASA officials said this metal pin may have prevented Nelson's attachment device from penetrating far enough to trigger a clamping mechanism.

Expect House Join Assault

By W. DALE NELSON

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democrat-led House is expected to follow the Republican-controlled Senate in overwhelmingly condemning the CIA-directed mining of Nicaraguan harbors, and lawmakers of both parties say the House will probably vote to end aid to Nicaraguan rebels altogether.

The House scheduled action late today on a non-binding resolution, approved 31-3 by its Foreign Affairs Committee on Wednesday, expressing "the sense of Congress that no additional funds be used to mine the ports or territorial waters of Nicaragua."

A resolution saying the same thing was approved 84-12 by the Senate on Tuesday.

Rep. William S. Broomfield of Michigan, the senior Republican on the Foreign Affairs panel, supported the resolution and predicted the House would pass it "by an overwhelming margin."

Expressing the complaints of many in Congress that the administration kept them in the dark, Broomfield said, "I was not informed of what was going on and I have been indignant about it ever since I found out about it."

During a sometimes acrimonious session with Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Dam that preceded the committee vote, Broomfield told the State Department's No. 2 official:

"I can't help but believe that covert aid is down the drain."

Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., agreed, saying, "As a practical matter, I think we've seen the end of this."

The Senate voted last week, before the CIA role in the mining became generally known, to grant the administration's request for $21 million to continue covert assistance to guerrillas fighting Nicaragua's leftist regime.

The bill containing these funds, along with $61.7 million in additional military aid for El Salvador, is in the hands of a House-Senate conference committee that will draft a final version for submission to both houses.

Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, agreed Wednesday to a request from 103 Democrats and three Republicans in the House that he insist the conferees eliminate the money for aid to the guerrillas.

Dam told the Foreign Affairs Committee that the harbor mining is legal because the United Nations charter specifically permits collective self-defense.

Rep. Lawrence J. Smith, D-Fla., said that in a later closed session, Dam "indicated that other countries besides ourselves were involved" but did not say what country, if any, had asked for U.S. aid.

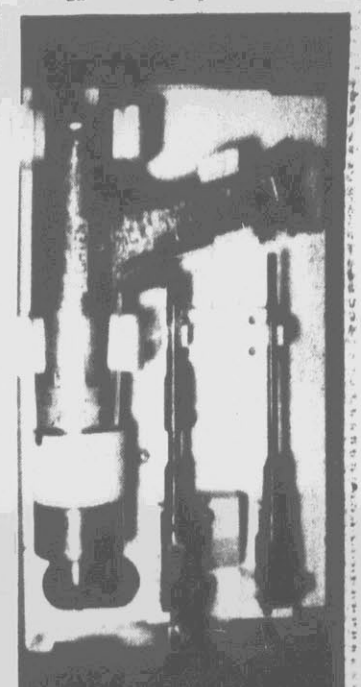

Senior administration officials, speaking with the understanding that they be anonymous, said the mining was discontinued Friday, four days before the Senate vote, and was not likely to be resumed.

Some administration sources said it was pointless to resume the mining because it had accomplished its purpose of disrupting Nicaraguan arms shipments to Salvadoran insurgents.

But one senior State Department official said the political furor over the mining was a principal reason for its apparent abandonment.

The sources expressed concern that Salvadoran guerrillas, backed by Cuba, appear to be preparing for a major fall offensive that may leave Reagan with the difficult election eve choice of allowing a rebel victory or escalating American military involvement.

The rebels are getting extremely large quantities of equipment from their Soviet bloc allies, the sources said.

SPACE TOOL — A battery powered screwdriver, like the one used by mission specialists' George Nelson and James van Hoften in repairing the inoperative satellite. (AP Laserphoto)

Astronaut Terry Hart reported he had no trouble snatching the slowly spinning Solar Max with the arm on the first attempt Tuesday. "I made the first try as the pin came by the cockpit and I had it after it had rotated just 35 degrees."

Hart said with practice, an astronaut using the arm should be able to grab faster spinning satellite.

Lebanon Opposition Want Syria Return

By FAROUK NASSAR

Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese opposition leaders today urged the return of Syrian troops to Beirut as "the sole solution to stop the fighting," and a planned meeting between President Amin Gemayel and Syria's President Hafez Assad appeared to be in limbo.

Beirut was "relatively calm" during the night, police said today — a break from the frequent cease-fire violations that have occurred regularly despite last week's announcement that the warring factions had agreed on a disengagement plan.

No date has been set to begin the plan, which covers Beirut, the southern suburbs and the mountaintop town of Souk el-Gharb, and calls for a police and observer force of about 2,150. Government sources have said disengagement was not expected to begin before Gemayel visits Damascus, Syria, to meet with Assad.

That meeting, originally scheduled for Wednesday, was rescheduled for today and then postponed until Saturday, according to local news reports. The leftist newspaper As-Safir, which is close to opposition leaders, said today the summit would be held only once a cease-fire was firmly in place and warring militias were separated in Beirut and the neighboring hills. The independent newspaper An-Nahar, however, said the final date of the meeting between Gemayel and Assad would be set by contacts among their aides by sometime Friday.

The Syrians have been active in efforts to call a truce in Lebanon since Gemayel bowed to Assad's pressure and scrapped Lebanon's troop withdrawal pact with Israel last month.

Druse leader Walid Jumblatt said today he was not "too optimistic" that an agreement could be reached among Lebanon's feuding Christian and Moslem forces and suggested the return of Syrian forces to Beirut to end the country's civil war.

"The Syrians have intervened in the past and I think, for the sake of Lebanon, they should intervene again," Jumblatt said in Damascus, in an interview with The Associated Press.

Former President Suleiman Franjeh, a Maronite Catholic, told a news conference at his native town of Zgorta in north Lebanon on Tuesday:

"The return of the Syrian deterrent force is the sole solution to stop the fighting. But it is unlikely that this sensible course to resolve the crisis would come about."

"We welcome the entry of Syrian deterrent forces to Beirut to disengage the combatants if all parties concerned agree to this. We have no objection," said Grand Mufti Sheikh Hassan Khaled, spiritual head of Lebanon's Sunni Moslem Community. He made his comments Wednesday to reporters after a conference at his west Beirut headquarters with the community's prominent politicians.

"The return of the Syrian deterrent force appears to be the only and easiest solution to enforce peace in Beirut," agreed Assem Kansou, head of the pro-Syrian Lebanese Baath Party.

Report Gift For Special Olympics

By JERRY RAYNOR

Reflector Staff Writer
A donation of $950 to help defray expenses of the annual Special Olympics was presented to the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department Wednesday night at the April meeting of the department's commission.

Attorney Charles M. Vincent, representing the night-time Kiwanis Club of Greenville, presented the donation to Bill Twine of the Recreation and Parks Department, coordinator of the Special Olympics.

"This means a great deal to members of our club to work with you in this super event," Vincent commented. "We hope to continue to make contributions to Special Olympics in the future."

Twine told commission members that the $950 contribution this year brings to over $2,000 the assistance given by the Kiwanis Club of Greenville in the past two years. "This is the kind of support that makes our job a lot easier," Twine said.

A certificate authorizing Jim Parker as an instructor-trainer in water safety was presented to Parker by Nell Stallings of the Pitt County chapter of the American Red Cross. Parker is a staff member of the Recreation and Parks Department who serves during the swimming season as director of the city pool.

"As a teacher of teachers," Ms.

Stallings noted, "Jim has a tremendous responsibility to teach others first aid, CPR, water safety, all the factors that deal with the functions of preventing accidents and saving lives. It's a big job."

Ms. Stallings noted that in addition to Parker, there are only two others in Pitt County currently qualified as a Red Cross instructor-trainer.

Executive Director Boyd Lee reported to commission members that "no concrete leads have turned up" in the police investigation of the extensive vandalism wreaked at the Town Common recently.

A person or persons unknown destroyed 11 light poles and 17 fixtures in the area of the Town Common from the flag poles all the way to Greene Street, resulting in damage estimated at $7,000. Lee said, "If it was a single individual, it was an exceedingly strong person. I have a feeling this may have been the work of a group of vandals. It's most unfortunate that we have people who want to destroy instead of help us."

'Campaign's Sort Of Like A Runaway Horse'

LINDA EDMISTEN

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

When Linda Harris Edmisten became a bride Dec. 22, 1983, she became a gubernatorial campaigner as well.

"A campaign's sort of like being on a runaway horse," she said. "You just keep your seat and ride it to the end. It's fortunate if you enjoy the ride, and I have so far. I like people and I've met a lot of them since the campaign began. I've learned a lot and I wouldn't take anything for the experience."

If her husband, Rufus Edmisten, becomes governor of North Carolina, she'll possibly be the first first lady to be gainfully employed in a full-time job. Now, in addition to campaigning on three-day weekends with her husband or alone as he campaigns elsewhere, she's working four-day weeks as executive director of the City of Raleigh Historic Properties Commission and the Raleigh Historic District Commission.

A Fayetteville, Ark., native who grew up in various cities in various states all over the country as her father pursued his career as a staff member of the U.S. Public Health Service, she began work with historical preservation in the Raleigh city planning department in 1974. In 1975, the first historic district in Raleigh — Historic Oakwood — was established. Since then two other historic districts — Capitol and Blount Street — have been added to her duties, as have seven national registry districts and two historic college campuses — St. Mary's and St. Augustine's.

"No, I won't give up my work when Rufus becomes governor," she said. "There's much more preservation work to be done in Raleigh and I'm going to continue with it. I love it."

She lived nine years prior to her marriage in a 1920-vintage house she redid herself in the Five Points area of Raleigh and is now helping redo her husband's bungalow, also built in the 1920s, in South Raleigh.

"I love everything about North Carolina and about Raleigh," she said. "I chose it and I rechose it."

She said she decided 20 minutes into a visit with her parents, after her father had been transferred to the Research Triangle Park, that she, too, wanted to move here. "I'd lived all over," she said, "and I knew a good environment when I saw it."

A fine arts graduate of Ohio State University in Athens, she obtained a job with a High Point desk company, worked in this state a while and then soon agreed to represent the company at its show room in Chicago. "I enjoyed the urban working girl scene for a couple of years," she said, "but I was lonesome for my family and lonesome for North Carolina, so I came here and was lucky enough to be hired by the city of Raleigh."

Linda is a horsewoman. She has a hunter named Diana. She also has a dog that goes to the office with her every day. And at home, there are three cats and a parakeet. "I'd have a barnful of animals if I could," she said.

She likes to paint — with watercolors and oils — when there's time. "All I've been painting lately," she said, "are kitchen cabinets."

She also likes to help her avid husband with gardening projects and to wander with him on his parents' 60-acre farm on the New River in Watauga County. She enjoys her parents, who still live nearby, and her two brothers — one a Ph.D. candidate in solar energy utilization, the other a Raleigh high school student.

"When I married Rufus," she said, "I got five new brothers and sisters and even became an aunt and a great aunt at one time. I just love his family."

Linda expects to become first lady, she said. She plans then to enjoy the convenience of walking with her dog from the Governor's Mansion to her office in the historic area of Raleigh for which her dog is named — Moses Mordecai.

ITALIAN PUFFS

When this recipe was demonstrated at a cooking school in a Brooklyn department store it was most successful.

Bake cream puffs according to a standard recipe based on 1 cup all-purpose flour. Cool completely. Just before serving, cut off tops and fill with the following: Beat together until very smooth a 15- or 16-ounce container of ricotta, 1/2 cup confectioners' sugar and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Stir in 1/4 teaspoon lemon rind. Beat 1 cup heavy cream until stiff and fold in. Fill bottoms of puffs with mixture and replace tops; sprinkle with confectioners' sugar.

Note: The ricotta mixture also makes a delightful filling for layer cakes.

Sisters' Information Wrong For Betting

DEAR ABBY: My sister and I have a friendly bet with some friends, and we hope you can settle it. It goes like this:

Say that Linda and Albert (not their real names) marry and have a daughter. Then they get divorced. Linda then marries Jim, and together they have a daughter. Linda now has two daughters. We say that Linda's two daughters are true sisters because they have the same mother.

Now Albert marries Martha, who has a son by a previous marriage. Albert and Martha then have a son. We say that Albert's daughter from Linda and his son from Martha are half brother and sister. However, his son from Martha and his stepson (Martha's son from her previous marriage) are true brothers because they have the same mother.

We say that no matter how many husbands a woman has, all the children born to her are natural sisters and brothers. Are we correct? Our friends say we are wrong.

Openly Covert

A White House announcement that it will not abide by World Court decisions on Central America for the next two years inspires an odd mixture of disgust and dismay.

The World Court was set up as a recourse for those governments who feel they have been wronged, as well as an impartial forum for hearing disputes.

The United States has been among the beneficiaries; but with the prospect of possible condemnation, our country says "no way!" We are setting a less than poor example for the rest of the world.

Imagery matters in world affairs.

For many years the United States has capitalized on the Kremlin's image as portraying the dark side of human nature and our own qualities as a role-model for the rest of the world. It was a truly great asset.

With details of a "covert" war against the Nicaraguan government now surfacing, and prospects of a Nicaraguan lawsuit in the World Court over mining of Nicaraguan waters, it is widely presumed Washington wants no part of it. The tacit admission of guilt poses self-damaging effects that will be felt for years to come.

Covert?

"Covert" operations in Central America have been about as covert as Mount Rushmore. Worse yet, U.S. efforts in that direction have created an impression of ineptness and blind naivety, resulting in more damage to our global standing than to presumed targets.

We suspect it is symptomatic of our preference for an "open society" in which large-scale secrecy in the governmental role is unnatural and runs counter to our way of thinking.

A lot of Republicans may be wishing for a rivalry in their national convention to nominate a candidate for president.

Prompt Action

The Soil Conservation Service has announced that work will begin next week on clearing tornado debris from area streams.

The SCS has received $250,000 for emergency repairs to streams affected by the tornado. Twenty percent of the cleanup cost will come from the local government unit which is normally responsible for the stream's maintenance.

We have no doubt that a massive cleanup is needed in the area where tornados did heavy damage. Large trees were blown into streams and huge amounts of roofing and other material from destroyed homes and buildings no doubt are contributing to stream blockage.

We are happy to see the stream clearance work in the storm area getting under way so promptly.

New Roadblock

NEW YORK (AP) — Efforts to steer the economy in the direction of lower interest rates have encountered a new roadblock.

It seems that businesses have developed an increasingly ravenous appetite for borrowed money in recent months. Strong demand for credit naturally tends to keep interest rates at high levels.

Consequently, some economists are starting to worry that interest rates might not come down significantly later this year, even if consumer spending slows and progress is made toward reducing the federal budget deficit.

A lot of people have pointed to the recent rash of mergers in the oil industry as the source of increased credit demand. They say heavy borrowing to finance these takeovers is diverting credit from other areas in which it would do the overall economy more good.

But Edward Yardeni, economist at the Wall Street firm of Prudential-Bache Securities, says there is more behind the rise of business borrowing than the wheeling and dealing of energy financiers.

Since the beginning of the year, Yardeni pointed out recently, there has been an increase of more than $10 billion in the amount of commercial paper outstanding. Commercial paper is a form of unsecured IOU issued by companies for brief periods. It is not used to finance mergers.

Behind the corporate rush to borrow, Yardeni and several other economists agree, is a developing boom in capital spending — business purchases of buildings, machinery and equipment, in order to expand capacity, increase productivity and start new projects.

A pickup in capital spending is welcome in some important respects. It means increased orders, and more jobs, in the various industries that make so-called "capital goods."

As a period of economic recovery and growth proceeds, stepped-up capital spending is a normal development. Indeed, in the classic pattern of the economic cycle, capital spending is supposed to come in relief of consumer spending in the middle to late innings of a recovery to keep the ballgame going.

The trouble now, economists say, is that the credit markets are in less than ideal shape to handle capital-spending demand. The Federal Reserve has been holding down the supply of money available for lending, and the U.S. Treasury has been consuming a large amount of that supply to finance budget deficits.

WASHINGTON — On the Wednesday morning after New York's primary election, this politically obsessed city wasn't talking about Walter Mondale's decisive victory. That was expected. The talk was of Jesse Jackson. What does he want? What can the gentleman deliver?

Jackson claimed about 26 percent of the vote in a state in which blacks constitute 12 percent of the eligible population. He finished only one point behind Gary Hart. If there had been doubters before New York, there are few doubters now. The Jackson factor has emerged as the most powerful part of this year's political equation.

The speculation here in Washington divides naturally into two segments. One concern has to do with Jackson's role at the Democrats' convention in San Francisco in July. The other, larger, concern has to do with the general election in November.

It is possible, though highly improbable, that Jackson could go to San Francisco with enough committed delegates to hold the balance of power in a deadlocked convention. With New York behind him, Jackson has just about shot his wad. He will win all of the District of Columbia's 19 delegate votes; he should do well in the Louisiana and Texas caucuses and in the North Carolina and Maryland primaries, but that is about the size of it. Barring some serious blunder, Mondale should be close to the magic number of 1,967 pledged delegates before he goes over the top in the final round of primaries on June 5.

Thus, while a dramatic scenario can be drafted for the first ballot — Mondale 1,700, Hart 1,300, Jackson 900 — I don't believe it will happen. The Jackson factor will loom large; it won't be decisive.

If that assumption is valid, and Mondale is to become the Democratic nominee, the big question becomes: What price Jackson? The delicate situation may be summed up in a sentence. The Democrats may not be able to defeat Ronald Reagan even with Jackson's enthusiastic support, but they will have a much tougher time without it. Jackson will have to have some large reward at San Francisco. If he leaves the convention with hurt feelings and lost expectations, there goes the old ball game.

Will Jackson demand the vice presidential nomination as his price for delivering 80 to 100 electoral votes? He is too shrewd a politician for so bold a leap. Jackson knows — he is bound to know — that a Mondale-Jackson ticket would be doomed. The American people are not about to put an inexperienced black minister within a heartbeat of the Oval Office. Jackson never has held a public office; he is woefully ignorant of the legislative process; his core constituency is as narrow as it is passionate. The time will come when an experienced and respected black figure — an Andrew Young, a Tom Bradley, a William Coleman — will be on a national ticket, but the time is not yet and Jackson is not the man.

If not the running mate's spot, then what? Jackson surely will have an influential role in drafting the Democratic platform, but platforms are French pastries, good for an evening only. If Jackson is to throw his formidable energies wholeheartedly into the autumn campaign, he will bargain understandably for something substantial.

Could a fired-up Jackson deliver in November? The prospect is enough to give the Republicans a bad case of the pale gray willies. Reagan's plurality in New York in 1980 was only 165,000 votes. Reagan carried Massachusetts in 1980 by only 2,400, Tennessee by 4,700, Arkansas by 5,100, South Carolina by 11,000, Mississippi by 12,000, Alabama and Kentucky by 17,000 and North Carolina by 39,000. Those nine states will cast 112 electoral votes. Jackson's candidacy already has prompted several hundred thousand blacks to register for the first time. Will they march to the polls at Jackson's bidding in November?

My guess is, yes, most of them will.

Strength For Today

The doctrine of the Holy Spirit (or Holy Ghost as the ancient translations have it) baffles many Christian believers. What is this Holy Spirit? Where is it and what does it do for us?

The Holy Spirit is the spirit of God moving amid the affairs of men. One of the worst mistakes we can ever make is to get the idea that God created the world and then went away and left it. God is still in his creation, sustaining, guiding and inspiring it. This presence of God in the human heart and amid the affairs of the world is known as the Holy Spirit.

That power — much greater than anything the human race has ever known — has been operating in the hearts and souls of believers since the beginning. The Holy Spirit is the soul of the church. This is Christ's fulfillment of the promise that he would be with his disciples even unto the end of the world (Matthew 28:20).

Japanese Market Uncertain

RALEIGH — The recent decision by the Japanese government to deregulate domestic cigarette sales should provide a major boost for American cigarette makers. But it is far from certain that the sale of more American cigarettes in Japan will boost the amount of leaf which North Carolina farmers sell to the Japanese.

The Japanese government currently owns the Japan Tobacco and Salt Corp., which has a complete monopoly over cigarette sales in Japan. That monopoly has stunted the growth of the American cigarette market in Japan, keeping American cigarette sales to less than 2 percent of the country's total sales.

But in another way, JTS has been a friend of American, and especially North Carolina, leaf farmers. JTS manufactures 42 brands of Japanese cigarettes using a blend which averages 50 percent bland Japanese-grown leaf, one-third rich American leaf and the rest cheap foreign filler. When the North Carolina leaf markets open, Japanese buyers are there, spending about $200 million a year. They buy the state's best leaf, pay top prices for it, and in that way, they drive up prices.

As the American government urged the Japanese to open their cigarette market, there were voices of dissent in this country. Farmer representatives worry that the sale of more American cigarettes in Japan will mean the sale of less North Carolina leaf directly to the Japanese.

Both farmer and manufacturer representatives figure the Japanese will buy a lot of American cigarettes once the market is opened. In an interview last year, a representative of R.J. Reynolds International estimated that within several years, American cigarettes will take 20 percent — or $2 billion — of the $10 billion Japanese market.

The U.S. Tobacco Merchants Association estimated last year that, if American cigarettes grabbed 20 percent of the Japanese market, American farmers would average an extra $70 million in annual leaf sales.

But there are skeptics. They fear that increased sales of American cigarettes in Japan will cut the amount of American leaf the Japanese buy. Representatives of the N.C. Farm Bureau and of Tobacco Associates in Washington, D.C., raised several concerns.

First, if American cigarettes grab 20 percent of the Japanese market, JTS will suffer financially. With revenues down, they'll seek to cut costs. Politically, they can't afford to cut purchases of Japanese-grown leaf, so they'll cut their next biggest expense, American leaf purchases.

Secondly, American cigarettes may flood into Japan but that doesn't mean they'll be made with as much American tobacco as those same brands sold in this country. Nor is there any guarantee the cigarettes will be manufactured here rather than in some low-wage Asian country where shipment costs would also be lower.

Finally, if the Japanese are not buying as much raw leaf, farmer representatives worry that the Japanese purchases will no longer drive up market prices.

Under the Japanese plan, JTS will be replaced by a government-controlled company. The Japanese Finance Ministry promises to allow foreign cigarettes to compete on an equal footing, a footing they currently do not have.

The Japanese market is very large, and if things work as the cigarette manufacturers say, there should be plenty of new sales for farmers and plenty of new manufacturing jobs in the cigarette factories. The farmer representatives aren't sure it will work that way. It shouldn't be long before experience indicates which side is right.

Threat Spurs Thurmond To Act

support him.

President Reagan's deepening interest in details of his speech rhetoric as the election draws near was shown when he salvaged anti-tax increase language from his March 27 speech in Washington to the Independent Insurance Agents of America.

The original speech draft contained a formulation by a White House aide that the president had used earlier: that in seeking a balanced budget, it is preferable to "balance down with lower tax rates and spending" than to "balance up with tax increases."

But that language was mysteriously missing from the final draft of the speech — believed at the White House to be the victim of staffers at the pro-tax-increase Council of Economic Advisors. Reagan himself remembered the phrase from a previous speech, and ordered it reinstated.

A somber warning to Syrian President Hafez Assad was delivered in Damascus by Sen. John Tower just before U.S. Marines were evacuated from Beirut.

Tower, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, told the Syrian strongman that his "intransigence" had won a short-term victory by breaking the Israeli-Lebanese pact and forcing Western troops from Lebanon. But in the long run, he continued, Syria has lost by strengthening the hand of diehard hawks in Israel.

The warning carried special weight because Tower is no particular friend of Israel. He often has clashed with and been critical of Washington's pro-Israeli lobby in Washington.

Gov. Mario Cuomo's political organization made clear its extreme displeasure with Walter F. Mondale's Washington-based political headquarters when the candidate committed a blunder less than a week before the New York presidential primary.

The Cuomoes, in full charge of Mondale's New York operation, were outraged when he blundered by attacking Sen. Gary Hart for a position on Lebanon identical to Mondale's own. The word was dispatched from New York to Washington that there was no way the governor could help win the state if Mondale's brain trust did not get serious.

A footnote: Cuomo managership of Mondale won high marks from the governor's key supporters with the exception of his 1982 pollster and adviser, Pat Caddell. A consultant for Hart, Caddell was unhappy that Cuomo was undercutting his future by embracing old-fashioned, establishment politics.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright has privately advised that badly needed remedial tax legislation definitely will pass sometime this year whether Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, likes it or not.

That puts a few coals on their long-simmering feud. Wright never has hidden his low regard for Rostenkowski's stewardship of Ways and Means and privately blames him for the failure of last year's tax bill.

Wright and Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill pledge they will do all they can to pass the currently pending $48 billion tax measure approved by Rostenkowski's committee. But if it gets derailed, Wright personally promises passage of a limited bill containing needed tax law changes — particularly vital for the life insurance industry — no matter what Rostenkowski wants.

Developing Nations Complain Over Deficits

By SALLY JACOBSEN
AP Economics Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials of developing nations, in town for special international meetings, are renewing their complaints about the United States' big budget deficits and high interest rates.

They contend that lower deficits and interest rates would help the world's economy shake off the financial doldrums lingering from the long recession.

The complaints are not unexpected and are likely to continue the rest of the week as foreign officials gather here for the spring meeting of the International Monetary Fund.

Indeed, even before the first spate of complaints was lodged Wednesday, Treasury Department officials countered the criticism by arguing the United States' strong economic recovery is leading the global rebound.

Reviewing recent economic trends, one Treasury official said, "It's my judgment, there are far more positives than negatives."

The official, who would only speak with reporters on condition he not be named, said that in particular, concern about the budget deficits "has been grossly exaggerated."

He also said the U.S. trade deficit, which hit a record $69.4 billion last year, "has played a very important role in stimulating economic activity" in both industrialized and developing countries. The trade deficit means the United States is buying more from foreigners than they're ordering from American producers.

The Treasury official cited Commerce Department figures showing that U.S. imports from Mexico were up 18 percent in the January-February period, compared to a year ago, and imports from Brazil rose 43 percent. Imports from other Latin American countries increased 36 percent during January and February, and from other developing countries, 47 percent.

"The trade deficit which is sometimes criticized unjustly, is playing a very important role in encouraging growth (worldwide)," he said.

Even so, worries about U.S. economic problems persist.

The staff of the International Monetary Fund said in an economic survey that the budget red-ink, approaching $200 billion, poses "a major potential danger on the road to sustained global growth."

And finance and economic ministers from 24 developing countries issued their own statement, saying, "High and persistent fiscal deficits and excessive interest rates in the United States continue to be matters of wide concern." It added that such economic problems "raise doubts about the durability of the recovery."

Most analysts argue the deficits tend to keep interest rates higher than they would otherwise be. That happens, they say, because the government's demand for credit competes with the demands for money of consumers and businesses.

Higher U.S. interest rates mean developing countries have to pay more for their loans from commercial banks. Those rates also, according to many analysts, bolster the value of the dollar against other major currencies and attract money from foreign investors eager to earn high yields.

Because of the links, the officials from developing countries said that "lowering of fiscal deficits and interest rates in the United States and adjustment of (the) exchange rate of the dollar to more sustainable levels would have a beneficial impact on the world economy."

The officials also expressed concern about the ability of developing countries strapped with billions of dollars in debts to reshape their economies so they can better meet their payments.

"In some countries adjustment efforts have reached the limits of social and political tolerance," they said in their statement.

As a result, they said, it was "imperative that the severe strains of adjustment be relieved so as to make it more orderly and to revive the momentum of development."

The IMF, made of 146 member nations, has been instrumental in drawing up aid packages for the debt-stricken countries. In return for the aid, debtor countries agree to make changes to bring their economies into better shape.

In its staff report, the IMF said "substantial progress" was made last year in coming to grips with those countries' debts, estimated at $669 billion in 1983 for developing nations which don't export oil.

Still, it said those nations must continue working to reduce their budget deficits, maintain overseas markets for their products and keep inflation under control.

The Big Top Will Be Here Two Days

THE STRIPE OF THE BIG TOP ... of Clyde Beatty-Cole Bros. Circus is shown in this aerial view of the big top fully erect and taut with guy-lines to secure the 8,200 yards of canvas comprising the top. The circus will give performances in the area behind Carolina East Mall on Friday at 4:30 p.m. and 8 p.m., and again on Saturday at 1:30 p.m., 4:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. The circus is under the sponsorship of the Greenville Civitan Club.

Elephants and football players, at times pitted against each other, will highlight preshow activities of the Clyde Beatty-Cole Bros. Circus Friday and Saturday.

Workmen, aided by the elephants, will get together Friday morning back of Carolina East Mall to assemble the "World's Largest Circus under the Big Top" in preparation for performances at 4:30 and 8 p.m. Friday and at 1:30, 4:30 and 8 p.m. on Saturday.

Tickets to a performance are $6 for adults (13-65), $4 for senior citizens, and $3 for children.

On Saturday morning, members of the East Carolina University football team will pit their collective strength against one of the elephants in a man and beast tug of war.

Both events, the tent-raising and the tug of war, will be open to the public but circus spokesmen ask that spectators remain at a safe distance from workmen.

Cruel Twist

LAKE GENEVA, Wis. (AP) — Gov. Anthony Earl, who has given up beer for Lent, put in a tough day — at the Wisconsin Wholesale Beer Distributors convention.

"This is truly a cruel occasion," said the governor at the convention in Lake Geneva on Wednesday.

"As a beer fancier, I have been looking forward to visiting with you for some time," he said.

"But today falls within my Lenten period of beer abstinence. I hope I am piling up some rewards in heaven, because the temptation around me here is powerful indeed."

Residents Advised To Avoid Downtown

MARSHVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Evacuated Marshville residents were given back their town, and while officials urged the residents to stay away from the downtown area, about 50 showed up to see what remained of the train derailment that forced them to leave.

The residents were allowed to return home Wednesday morning, about 24 hours after they were evacuated when a train carrying flammable methanol derailed in their town.

Some evacuees spent the night in a shelter at Forest Hills High School, where they said they spent a comfortable night and were given a hot meal Wednesday.

"I just thank the Lord for how beautiful and how courteous they were," said Pearlina Staton, 68. "They opened up their hearts to us, just like Jesus."

Dorothea Evans, 71, said she had planned on having a miserable night, "but in the end, I enjoyed it."

"We got together and sang songs. Two young men read the scriptures," she said. "We got to meet old friends." Ms. Evans said she slept on a cot, which she found "very comfortable."

Meanwhile, railroad and town officials assessed the cause of the derailment and the damages resulting from it. Three businesses were destroyed in the fire which began in the tank cars carrying the methanol.

Marshville Mayor Bobby Griffin said Wednesday that it would be at least two days before the downtown business section reopens.

Seaboard System spokesman Owen Pride said a possible cause of the derailment was a wheel malfunction on one of three cars carrying pulpwood.

Workers began pumping the methanol out of tank cars while railroad crews cleared the tracks Wednesday. Authorities had feared the 281,000 gallons of methanol in four tank cars would explode Tuesday and endanger the entire town.

No explosion occurred and the fires were out by 10:30 p.m. Tuesday, about 10 hours after the town was evacuated. The 73-car train was carrying grain, coal and some empty cars, in addition to the methanol, plastics and pulpwood. Seven cars were on fire — four carrying methanol, two wood and one plastic.

Muslim Says Press Focus On Contrived Controversy

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Muslim leader Louis Farrakhan, a key supporter of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, says the media is focusing on "press-contrived" controversies rather than on the real threats to the black civil rights leader's life. Farrakhan denied Wednesday he had threatened anyone, including Washington Post reporter Milton Coleman, and said the media should stop badgering Jackson on the issue as he seeks the Democratic presidential nomination.

"It is unfortunate that Rev. Jackson has to be badgered, pounded, harassed, intimidated in an attempt to force him to denounce his brother," the leader of the Nation of Islam said. "There is a very real fear among white people when black people show solidarity."

Coleman was the first to report that Jackson used the word "Hymies" to describe Jews. In a radio broadcast last month, Farrakhan said Coleman gas a traitor and should be made an example of for such "Judas" behavior.

The Muslim leader said that the media had twisted his words to make them appear to be a threat against Coleman.

"To date, there have been more than 100 real threats to the Rev. Jackson's life," he said. "Why has there been so much attention to a press-contrived threat and no attention at all to the real attempts on the Rev. Jackson's life?"

Jackson was the first candidate to receive Secret Service protection and has been threatened repeatedly.

The Chicago Tribune on Wednesday printed more remarks from Farrakhan's same March 11 radio address, these dealing with Adolph Hitler.

He said: "Here, the Jews don't like Farrakhan, so they call him Hitler. Well, that's a good name. Hitler was a very great man. He wasn't great for me as a black person, but he was a great German and he rose Germany up from the ashes of her defeat by the united force of all of Europe and America after the first World War..."

"Now I'm not proud of Hitler's evils against Jewish people. But that's a matter of record. He rose Germany up from nothing. Well, in a sense, you could say there's a similarity in that we're rising our people up from nothing. But don't compare me with your wicked killers."

Asked Wednesday about those comments, Farrakhan said, "I don't think you would be talking about Adolph Hitler 40 years after the fact if he was some minuscule crackpot that jumped up on the European continent. He was indeed a great man, but also wicked. Wickedly great."

Meanwhile, Democratic Party chairman Charles T. Manatt said

Rules End To Forms

BOSTON (AP) — The U.S. Education Department overstepped its bounds by requiring students seeking financial aid to sign forms saying they had either registered or were ineligible for the draft, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Robert E. Keeton ordered a temporary halt to the practice.

Wednesday's ruling was sought by three Boston University theology students, a man over 25 and two women, all members of the United Methodist Church.

The three, already exempt from military registration because of age or sex, contended that by refusing to comply with the federal regulation and fill out the form, they would lose all financial aid and have to quit school.

The Solomon Amendment, adopted by Congress in 1983, required a cut-off of federal student loans to eligible men who had not registered for the draft. The Education Department then established regulations requiring all loan applicants — regardless of age or sex — to state they either had registered or were ineligible.

In his 11-page ruling, Keeton said the secretary of education "established a new ground for denial of aid: failure to comply with an administrative requirement that all applicants for aid file a registration compliance statement."

"In other words, the sanction that Congress reserved for a small group of lawbreakers was imposed by the secretary on a potentially much larger group of persons who have not broken any law and who have met all the statutory requirements for aid. The imposition of this sanction on those persons is beyond the power delegated by Congress."

Thursday that he reacted with "disgust and outrage" to Farrakhan's remarks.

"I gather we have someone from a religious movement who isn't nor hasn't been particularly involved in the political process and the political part of it at all," said Manatt, "and I think a lot of the statements I've been reading at least are ones of great concern and outrage to many people."

Mixed Predictions Are Available

By NANCY BENAC
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A divided Federal Trade Commission is offering conflicting views on how its approval of the joint carmaking venture between Toyota Motor Corp. and General Motors Corp. could affect sticker prices in the auto industry.

On the pro-side, commission Chairman James Miller reasons: "What we're trying to do is ... heighten competition in this industry, (which will) result in lower costs for consumers, a greater variety in the number of small automobiles from which they have to choose."

Commissioner Michael Pertschuk counters: "The most likely result is upward pressure on GM and Toyota automobile prices, with other manufacturers' prices following along."

The assessments were offered Wednesday after the FTC voted 3-2 to give the government's final go-ahead to the carbuilding plan. It had given the plan a tentative OK last December.

Chrysler Corp., the chief foe of the venture, vowed to continue pressing its lawsuit to block the project, and said it was obvious the commission majority had been "determined not to be confused by the facts."

Operating under limitations spelled out in the FTC's ruling, GM and Toyota have permission to build up to 250,000 small cars annually for 12 years at a former GM plant in Fremont, Calif. The two companies are limited in the kinds of information they may exchange as they work together.

The automakers' new joint company — New United Motor Manufacturing Inc., or NUMMI — is renovating and expanding the Fremont plant and hopes to employ 3,000 workers by the time its two-shift operation is in full swing next year.

"We are in the process of reviewing applications for employment from the former Fremont workforce," said NUMMI spokesman Thomas Klipstine. "We anticipate some hiring for skilled trades and group leaders will begin soon, with the majority of the workforce to be hired in the fall."

Chairman Miller said the FTC's restrictions have "bullet-proofed" the joint venture to guard against unfair collusion between GM and Toyota, the world's largest and third-biggest automakers, and to ensure that the project won't harm the domestic auto industry.

NUMMI's production of cars, to be sold under the Chevrolet nameplate, would mark the first time U.S. and Japanese automakers join forces to build cars on American soil.

Chrysler said it continues to believe the venture is "an illegal combination between two of the three biggest and strongest car companies in the world and that it clearly violates the nation's antitrust laws."

GM, Toyota and the Justice Department are seeking dismissal of Chrysler's suit in federal court to block the venture. Chrysler has said the joint venture could start a chain of events that would lead all domestic automakers to import more of their cars and eventually cost 300,000 American jobs.

Ford Motor Co. said it has long believed the venture is "contrary to law and the longterm public interest," but was more upbeat about how to compete.

"Now that the decision is final, our interests are best served by getting the controversy behind us and getting on with our job," Ford said. "We are confident we will be fully competitive against all comers."

In Los Angeles, Bruce Lee, director of the United Auto Workers union's nine-state western region, said the union was "delighted" with the FTC ruling.

"We are looking forward to working with the new company to build a new and innovative relationship and atmosphere based upon mutual trust and cooperation," Lee said. "Our members are ready to go to work and build the best quality car in the world at the lowest price possible."

GM Chairman Roger Smith issued a brief statement saying he was pleased with the FTC action.

"Now, New United Motor Manufacturing Inc. can devote its full attention to meeting the December 1984 target for start of production," Smith said.

Trent River Bridge Funds Are Approved

WASHINGTON — The U.S. House of Representatives has approved $3.5 million to replace the 125-year-old railroad bridge over the Trent River at New Bern, Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., said today.

The funds were included in the fiscal year 1985 authorization bill for the U.S. Coast Guard, the agency charged with altering or removing bridges over navigable waters, Jones said.

The legislation must be approved by the U.S. Senate and signed by the president before it becomes law.

Jones, chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries committee, which has jurisdiction over the Coast Guard, said "the Trent River bridge posed no problems for local navigation for almost 100 years. But as our region has developed and the vessels using our waterways have increased in size, the bridge, with its narrow channels, has become a hazard and indeed thwarted further economic progress."

The congressman said one New Bern industry, Barbour Boat Works,

"in one two-year period lost bidding opportunities on over $16 million worth of work simply because the jobs involved vessels too large to pass through the bridge span."

The present bridge has a center swing with horizontal clearances of 39.5 and 40 feet. The Coast Guard now requires new bridges to have a 78-foot clearance to allow adequate leeway for modern vessels.

The state of North Carolina owns the bridge and will contribute $195,570 as its share of the construction costs, Jones noted.

Find 44 Of Every 100 Adults Bypass Books

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Of every 100 adults, 44 say they never pick up a book, a study finds, but 36 say they do occasionally and 20 are bookworms claiming to go through a book a week or more, on average.

The study was underwritten by the Book Industry Study Group, representing publishers, book manufacturers, suppliers, wholesalers, retailers, librarians and others in the book business. It was released Wednesday, with a note of optimism: "In the age of electronic entertainment and personal computers, books are thriving." But the picture was mixed. When results are compared with a similar study conducted in 1978, it turns out that there are more heavy readers and fewer light readers. And young people aren't reading as much as the young used to. Overall, the percentage of people who say they read at least an occasional book has barely changed. It is 56 percent now and was 55 percent in 1978. The proportion of heavy readers — those who say they've read 26 books in the last six months, an average of one a week — has doubled, from 18 percent of all book readers five years ago to 35 percent today.

Man Charged In Shooting Spree

CONNELLY SPRINGS, N.C. (AP) — A 28-year-old Burke County man was charged Wednesday with murder following a shooting spree that left one man dead and his wife wounded, authorities said.

William Rondal Ingle has been charged with first-degree murder in the slaying of Jerry William Leger, 33, authorities said Wednesday. Both men are from Connelly Springs. Leger died at his house of multiple gunshot wounds to the head at 10 p.m. Tuesday, authorities said.

Record Profits For Park Inc.

RICHMOND (AP) — Park Communications Inc., owner of 73 publications and 21 broadcasting properties, announced record profits Wednesday for 1983. The news was given at the first stockholders meeting since Park Communications became a public company in October 1983. Roy H. Park, president and chief executive officer, said last year brought new highs in revenues, net income and earnings per share. And he said the first quarter results for 1984 "will show gains in volume, operating profit, net income, operating cash flow and earnings per share." For 1983, Park said, gross revenues were up 14 percent to $93.8 million.

Chief Burke County Sheriff's Deputy Don Bumgarner said Wednesday Ingle entered Leger's home and shot him apparently as he opened the front door for Ingle. Ingle then shot into a bedroom where Leger's two children, ages 2 and 8 years old, were sleeping, authorities said. The children were not hurt. Ingle then went to another rear bedroom, where he shot Leger's wife, Patsy, Bumgarner said. According to the police report, a number of shots were fired, and two struck the woman in the leg while she slept.

— People read twice as much fiction as non-fiction. A quarter of readers only read fiction. — An acquaintance's recommendation is the most likely reason people cite for reading a book, but 58 percent say they'll read it if it is on the best seller list. — The average book reader spends $100 a year on books and gets 24 of them — paperbacks or hardbacks. — Fifty-seven percent of Americans say they visited a bookstore in 1983, a quarter of the time just for browsing. Fifty-five percent went to the library and checked out an average of 3.2 books. — And 21 percent of all books read are borrowed from libraries.

Jackson Builds Up Democratic Clout

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson likes to tell supporters, "We've already won," with the breadth of his victory measured by the attention that other Democratic presidential candidates and party pros are giving to his new-found clout and how he will use it at the national convention.

"Blacks as a political force will be stronger and have to be dealt with more than at any time in the past," said John White, former Democratic chairman and a Mondale supporter. "He is going to test the maturity of this party and his own maturity as a political leader," said White.

"It's going to be tough to please him," said Victor Kamber, a consultant whose clients include many of the nation's largest unions. "He scares a lot of labor leaders."

The object of all this attention is a Baptist minister who never ran for public office until he jumped late into the presidential race.

No one predicted at the time the impact that Jackson would have in the black community. It was assumed his candidacy would encourage black registration and turnout, but many politicians thought Mondale might outpoll Jackson among blacks.

Instead, Jackson has been riding an unprecedented surge of black votes in the nation's largest cities. He ran second in Chicago and New York City and carried Philadelphia.

"He is establishing himself as a force to be reckoned with," said Charles Curry, former finance chairman of the Democratic Party.

Last summer, a big political question was whether Jackson would seek the Democratic presidential nomination, and White recalled telling James Johnson, Mondale's top campaign aide, that if Jackson decided to run "he wouldn't last three weeks."

At midpoint in the race, Jackson has outrun and outpolled Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, the early favorite to be Mondale's strongest challenger. Glenn, Sens. Alan Cranston and

Ernest Hollings, former Sen. George Mcovern and former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew have long since dropped out. And, as Jackson likes to put it,

"We're moving on up." After he carried Philadelphia on Tuesday, Jackson declared "our campaign gains momentum" and he talked about having "a strong standing in the convention." So long as Jackson talks about jobs and peace, the Democrats say they should have little problem accommodating his demands with platform language. "I would think we would see some awfully hard bargaining," said Curry.

Aver Need Not Force-Feed Demented Elderly

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Doctors ethically need not force-feed severely demented, elderly people who have stopped eating on their own as long as the patients are kept comfortable, a group of prominent physicians said in guidelines published today.

The nation's oldest congressman, 84-year-old Rep. Claude Pepper of Florida, denounced the recommendations as "a sign of callousness" by doctors "taking advantage of (patients') helplessness."

"If you're not going to do everything possible to save the lives of the ill, you might as well hit them over the head with a sledgehammer," Pepper said Wednesday night.

The guidelines are not intended to "hasten" the deaths of elderly people, said Dr. Sidney H. Wanzer, who wrote them up for the report in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Rather, the report said, the rules are meant to help doctors decide how to treat "hopelessly ill" patients who can no longer express their feelings about their treatment. Elderly people make up the bulk of those in the "severely and irreversibly demented" category, the report said.

"These poor, pathetic beings just go on and on, and people have felt uncomfortable in the past about not giving intravenous fluids or antibiotics or nasogastric feeding if they quit desiring this spontaneously," said Wanzer. "And yet we feel that it is ethical not to push ahead with those things."

Such patients need not be given antibiotics if they get pneumonia or other disorders, although they must be kept comfortable while they die, the guidelines said.

But the report cautioned, "The provision of food and water is so important symbolically that family, friends and staff need to understand that many patients in a terminal situation are not aware of thirst or hunger."

Wanzer is on the staff of Emerson Hospital in Concord, Mass. The rules were created at a meeting at Harvard Medical School chaired by Dr. Daniel D. Federman, former president of the American College of Physicians. Among those attending were doctors from Hennepin County Medical Center in Minneapolis, the University of Virginia Medical Center, the Mayo Clinic and the medical schools at Harvard, the University of Pittsburgh, Johns Hopkins and the University of Texas.

The guidelines say doctors must always obey the patients' wishes, but that aggressive treatment is wrong if it only prolongs a painful death. Such decisions are especially difficult for doctors when patients are too sick or demented to say how much care they want. "Severely and irreversibly demented patients need only care given to make them comfortable," the guidelines say. "If a patient rejects food and water by mouth, it is ethically permissible to withhold nutrition and hydration (water) artificially administered by vein or gastric tube."

Barbara Meara, director of public relations for the Right to Life organization in New York, said her group agreed with most of the recommendations.

"But withholding food and water seems extreme," Ms. Meara said. "There are instances that a patient cannot ingest food and water, but a recommendation to withhold food and water seems inconsistent with offering them comfort."

Lillian Sarno, head of the Gray Panthers chapter in New York, said patients sometimes "make startling recoveries" from seemingly irreversible mental illness.

Wanzer acknowledged the guidelines would provoke controversy.

"The idea was that if a group of prominent physicians took the lead in suggesting what is possible that these principles might become accepted among the general physician population," Wanzer said in an interview.

The doctors said that "if emergency resuscitation and intensive care are required, the physician should provide these measures sparingly, guided by the patient's prior wishes, if known, by the wishes of the patient's family and by an assessment of the patient's prospects for improvement."

They recommended that patients always be told the truth about their conditions when they have fatal illnesses. This way they can choose the level of care they want when death grows near.

If the patient requests general nursing care but rejects emergency resuscitation, intensive care or other medical treatment, everything should be done to keep him comfortable.

When he reaches the terminal phase of his illness, doctors need not take his temperature, check his pulse, do blood tests, administer antibiotics, perform surgery or do anything else except relieve pain and promote comfort, the doctors said.

Protest Policy

BERLIN (AP) — The three Western military powers in Berlin have protested "brutal methods" by Communist authorities in trying to halt escapes over the Berlin wall.

The protest Wednesday by U.S., British and French missions in West Berlin denounced East German border guards for shooting at two men trying to scale the wall Sunday.

One of the 20-year-old men made it safely to West Berlin, but his friend fell back into Communist territory and his fate remained unknown.

Change In Anthems

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Australia has abolished "God Save The Queen" as the national anthem and replaced it with an unsexist version of "Advance Australia Fair."

The news of the change was announced Wednesday by an exuberant Prime Minister Bob Hawke, who heard the song sung at a ceremony in Sydney.

Hawke said he got so carried away with the "beautiful rendition" that he revealed to the audience that the Cabinet decided this week to make "Advance Australia Fair" the anthem.

In the future, "God Save The Queen" will be played only as a royal anthem when the queen is present, he said.

"Advance Australia Fair" will be slightly changed to eliminate sexist language. A line which formerly read "Australia's sons let us rejoice" now will be written as "Australians let us all rejoice," Hawke said.

"Advance Australia Fair" was the national anthem between 1974 and 1976, during the previous Labor government of Gough Whitlam. The liberal government led by Malcolm Fraser reinstated "God Save The Queen" as national anthem in 1976.

A 1977 poll showed that 42.2 percent of Australians favoured "Advance Australia Fair" as the national song, while 28.3 percent favored "Waltzing Matilda" and 18.7 percent favored "God Save The Queen."

REOPENED

VENICE, Italy (AP) — The Ponte dell'Accademia, one of the major bridges crossing the Grand Canal, has been reopened after a seven-week shutdown for emergency repairs.

CHECK GIVEN TO RELIEF FUND — David Maxwell, left, and Donald Lloyd, branch manager of Metropolitan Insurance Co., present a check to Red Cross Executive Director Ruth Taylor Wednesday for $5,000. The money will be used to aid the March 28 tornado victims in a five-county area — Pitt, Lenoir, Greene, Wayne and Bertie. A Metropolitan company newsletter said Maxwell's house was nearly leveled by the tornado, and he then brought the extent of the disaster to the attention of the company. ## Shooting Victim

A 78-year-old Farmville man, Willie Sims, was found with a gunshot wound in his home after police returned gunfire from the dwelling Wednesday night, police said today. Sims was admitted to Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Police said an investigation was being run to determine whether Sims' hip wound was inflicted by Police Officer Jerry R. Lee or by someone else. Lee shot into Sims' residence, it was reported, after a bullet allegedly fired from inside the residence narrowly missed Police Sgt. William E. Waters.

Waters and Lee were responding to a 9:46 p.m. call to 124 Baker Blvd. The caller had stated that shots were being fired in or near the residence, located in a public housing area.

A woman was reportedly present in the residence at the time police arrived, but her identity was not released by police. Charges in the case are pending, police said.

Mondale And Reagan Court Same Industry

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
With the Democratic presidential race at a midpoint lull, Walter Mondale is on the same mission as Republican President Reagan, courting autoworkers and claiming credit for the domestic auto industry's partial recovery. Both Mondale, the re-established front-runner for the Democratic nomination, and Reagan, unopposed for renomination by the GOP, were in Missouri on Wednesday touring automobile assembly lines.

Mondale visited a Chrysler plant at St. Louis while Reagan was 250 miles away at a modernized Ford plant in Claycomo near Kansas City.

"Reagan in an auto plant is like a fox in the chicken coop," said Mondale. "This is the president who caused the worst trade year in our nation's history and who will not stand up against the flood of imports."

Said Reagan: "Times have been rough, and yes, the recession was much deeper and longer than almost anyone predicted. But these problems had been building up for 20 years, and we were determined to find a real economic cure, not just resort — as they had so often in the past — to another political quick fix."

And in a jab at his political opponents who accuse him of a lack of compassion, Reagan said, "There's no compassion in snake oil cures."

Sen. Gary Hart, Mondale's chief party rival, planned to resume campaigning today in Missouri, Texas and Arizona after taking Wednesday off in his hometown of Denver.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, the third Democratic hopeful, was visiting Indian reservations in Arizona and New Mexico today. In Phoenix on Wednesday, he said the mining of Nicaraguan harbors by CIA-backed rebels is "an act of war" and criticized Reagan for it.

"I do not call for his impeachment, but it is provocative and a de facto state of war," Jackson said. "If he operates beyond the law it must be challenged."

Mondale, also stopping in Phoenix before going on to California, criticized the mining too, saying it was "clumsiness" by the Reagan administration. "It's wrong. It's counter-productive," he said.

After seven weeks of major battles every week, the Democratic campaign now heads into three weeks of smaller skirmishes before the next big round in early May. Arizona attracted the Democrats because of its caucuses on Saturday; Missouri Democrats hold their caucuses next Wednesday.

In Pennsylvania's primary Tuesday, Mondale finished first with 47 percent to Hart's 35 percent and Jackson's 17 percent. In delegates, selected separately, Mondale won 124 to 17 for Hart and 1 for Jackson.

The only other contests this month are caucuses in Utah and Vermont. Among the remaining contests are Texas, which holds a caucus May 5, and California, which has its primary June 5 — both states for which Hart has high hopes.

"The calendar from now on favors me," Hart said.

Reagan's trip to Missouri and on to Dallas today was deemed non-political by the White House — so taxpayers will pick up the bill, not Reagan's re-election campaign.

But his message was similar to the one he delivers at political events: The economy is on the mend and the Reagan economic program is the reason why.

"All of us, working together and ignoring the gloomcriers and pundits who said it couldn't be done, have hung tough," Reagan said.

Mondale, vice president in the Carter administration, told autoworkers he was instrumental in securing the federal loan guarantees in 1979 that kept Chrysler afloat. And he reminded them Hart voted against the bailout.

"I'll be frank about it — I'm proud of my role in saving Chrysler," he said.

Mondale has the backing of organized labor, including the United Auto Workers, and in Reagan's audience some of the autoworkers wore caps bearing Mondale's name. The head of the Kansas City UAW local, William Barker, a Mondale backer, said the Ford plant still has at least 1,500 workers on the street.

Mondale's victory Tuesday, his third big industrial state victory over Hart, gave him 1,035.8 delegates to 578 for Hart and 152.2 for Jackson. The number needed to nominate is 1,967, and Hart must win two-thirds of the remaining delegates if he is to capture the nomination.

"I now believe I have a chance to get the delegates before the convention," Mondale said.

Meanwhile, Virginia Gov. Charles Robb, chairman of the Democratic Governors Association, denied there was a master plan to thwart Jackson from trying to include liberal planks in the party's national platform. His comments followed a report of a memo by the association's executive director, Charles Dolan, outlining a strategy to squelch an attempt by Jackson to "ignite every liberal sentiment" at the July convention.

NCAE Convention Is Meeting Today

GREENSBORO (AP) — Political as well as educational issues are expected to highlight the North Carolina Association of Educators annual convention, which begins today in Greensboro.

NCAE President Frances Cummings of Lumberton said she will ask the group to raise at least $10,000 for NCAE's political action committee for education during the convention.

Delegates will also present a resolution calling for a beginning teacher to earn an annual salary of at least $22,000, with the opportunity to earn $40,000 to $50,000 based on education and years of experience.

Teachers now earn from $13,660 to $22,680 a year. Gov. Jim Hunt's North Carolina Commission on Education for Economic Growth has recommended the salary for a beginning teacher rise to $15,710, while those for teachers with master's degrees increase to a $26,180 maximum.

By 1987-88, experienced teachers would be able to earn up to $34,000 under the proposal.

Another resolution calls for reducing the number of students high school English teachers and teachers of composition at other levels teach each day. Ms. Cummings said.

The 2,500 delegates will hear from Hunt and candidates the NCAE has endorsed for state offices. It will also vote on several constitutional amendments and resolutions, including one seeking a major raise in teachers' salaries.

Hunt, challenging U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., for his Senate seat, will address the delegates Friday afternoon. The NCAE has not endorsed a candidate in the Senate race yet.

NCAE has endorsed Tom Gilmore for governor, Carl Stewart for lieutenant governor, Lacy Thornburg for attorney general and Dick Barnes for commissioner of labor. All four are scheduled to speak.

Ms. Cummings said delegates will write 6,000 postcards Friday to friends asking that they support NCAE endorsed candidates.

Object To Poorhouse

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sacramento County's policy of sending single welfare applicants to a "poorhouse" in lieu of cash payments robs the residents of their privacy and should not be mandatory, an attorney told the state Supreme Court.

"It evokes welfare policies of the last century which this society has rejected and steadily moved against," Melinda Bird, attorney for the Western Center on Law and Poverty, said at a hearing.

Ms. Bird urged the high court to bar Sacramento County from forcing unmarried welfare applicants into the shelter in place of giving them the regular $200-a-month welfare stipend.

"The question is not whether this is a reasonable public institution," said Ms. Bird, who represents 25 welfare applicants in a lawsuit. "The question is whether poor people should be institutionalized simply because they're poor."

The 67-bed facility, called Bannon Street, was set up by Volunteers of America to take care of indigent people. The county began using it to house single, able-bodied welfare applicants in October 1982.

Besides being ordered there in lieu of getting cash stipends, the residents were subjected to bed checks, unannounced locker searches, and no place to even have a private conversation," Ms. Bird said.

Although they were given no money, poorhouse residents were given food and basic necessities in exchange for working several days a month on county projects such as litter clean up and landscaping. Only single people with no dependent children were sent to the poorhouse.

Last year, the Sacramento County Superior Court refused to halt the practice. However, the state Supreme Court ruled last June that no one could be forced into the house until it could hear the case.

Sacramento Deputy County Counsel Steve Burris told the court the poorhouse program resulted in a dramatic reduction in welfare applications, proving that many who sought welfare had "other resources."

The county got 852 welfare applications in September 1982, and 500 were approved, said Ms. Bird. Following start of the poorhouse program, applications dropped to 347 in October 1982, with 160 approved.

Justice Joseph Grodin said the county had not provided proof the applicants had other resources.

Chief Justice Rose Elizabeth Bird suggested the decline in applications could mean that people preferred a life of destitution over life at the poorhouse.

U.S. Is Criticized Before Soviet Parliament

By NANCY TRAYER
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union sharply criticized the United States today for "upsetting the military-strategic balance" by deploying new missiles in Western Europe, and said any resulting Soviet arms build-up is "a natural reply."

Soviet Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov, speaking to the 1,500-member Soviet Parliament shortly before it ended its two-day session, said Washington "has created obstacles to talks not only on medium-range nuclear systems but on strategic nuclear weapons as well."

"If the U.S. side removes the obstacles put by it in this matter and restores the previous state of affairs, an opportunity will then open up for the resumption of the talks," he said.

The Parliament was meeting for the first time under the chairmanship of Konstantin U. Chernenko, who on Wednesday became the Soviet Union's 10th president.

Chernenko, 72, has been Communist Party secretary general, the most powerful position in the Soviet Union, since after the Feb. 9 death of leader Yuri V. Andropov. He also took over as chairman of the Defense Council.

Opening his speech, Tikhonov, 78, heartily congratulated Chernenko on being named to the largely ceremonial presidential post. The assembled deputies applauded loudly at each mention of Chernenko's name.

Tikhonov also was formally approved for another term as premier, and today the party's choices for the 100-member Council of Ministers were ratified.

Tikhonov said any arms build-up by the Soviet Union is "a natural reply to the reckless attempts by the militarist circles of the U.S. and other NATO countries at upsetting the military-strategic balance."

"We are stating that it will be kept under all conditions," he said. "Security — both our own and that of our friends and allies — will remain reliably ensured." The NATO build-up he referred to calls for 572 U.S.-built medium-range missiles to be deployed in West Germany, Belgium, Netherlands, Britain and Italy. The missiles are intended to counter Soviet SS-20s already in place and targeted at Western Europe.

On domestic matters, Tikhonov, who is one of the Soviet Union's leading economic officials, lauded the limited reforms introduced under Andropov.

CHERNENKO

The reforms, published last summer and put into effect Jan. 1, aim to give a carefully circumscribed degree of independence to planners and factory managers in selected industries.

Western diplomats in Moscow who follow economic affairs expect the measures to be introduced, perhaps with slight moderation, throughout the Soviet economy with the next five-year plan in 1986.

"We must continue the economic experiments that provide flexibility and independence to some of our enterprises in order to ensure the full development of labor productivity," Tikhonov said.

"We have noticed much economic progress but there are still a lot of bottlenecks. A major task is to secure and develop positive changes to improve living conditions of the Soviet people and to implement the five-year plan." Later today, the Parliament, which meets twice each year to ratify decisions made by party leaders, passed a wide-ranging educational reform that has been hotly debated in the Soviet media and at meetings throughout the country since its publication in January. The reform calls for lowering the school starting age to six from seven and encouraging teen-agers to enter vocational school. Chernenko has said it will help produce a strong workforce educated in skills needed to improve the Soviet economy.

Ranger Bn. Is Added

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Another Ranger battalion, like those that parachuted into Grenada, will be added to the Army's list of quick-strike forces sometime this year, according to a Fort Bragg 1st Special Operations Command official.

Along with the proposed 3rd Battalion, 75th Infantry (Ranger), the Army is also activating Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 75th Infantry Regiment (Ranger). Both new units will be stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., home of the Ranger School, but will come under the direct command of Fort Bragg's SOCOM, commanded by Brig. Gen. Joseph C. Lutz, a major general designee.

The newly formed third battalion, like the two existing battalions, will consist of about 600 soldiers. The headquarters company will consist of about 130 people. Currently, the two existing Ranger battalions are stationed at Fort Lewis, Wash., and a Hunter Army Airfield, Ga.

Maj. Don Maples, a Department of the Army spokesman, could not confirm a date that the new Ranger units would be activated, only that they would be established sometime this year. New units, said Maples, sometimes operate below their allotted strength until all the slots within the unit have been filled.

The missions of the Rangers are conventional quick-strikes, tactical reconnaissance for a limited duration, and they are sometimes used as a light infantry unit against certain targets for a short time, said Lt. Col. Harold Isaacson, a SOCOM spokesman.

Members of both the 1st and 2nd Ranger Battalions were the first to parachute into Grenada last October.

"When it (a Ranger unit) jumps in, it jumps in with everything it's going to take," said Isaacson. Rangers usually carry only light weapons, including some mortars and recoilless rifles, said Isaacson.

Approve Buying Of Metromedia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has approved a deal in which four top officers of Metromedia Inc. will buy the huge communications company, turning it into a privately held concern.

The agency, in a brief public notice, said it agreed to the deal after concluding it represented no real change in terms of operating control of the company. The firm is in effect controlled by John W. Kluge now, the FCC said, and the buyout will merely cement that arrangement.

The 68-year-old Kluge is Metromedia's chairman and chief executive as well as the largest single stockholder with roughly 25 percent of Metromedia's common shares. It will cost $1.5 billion.

The deal is considered the largest in communications history. Other large transactions occurred in 1981 when Westinghouse Electric Corp. bought Teleprompter Corp., for $646 million, and in 1983 when A.H. Belo purchased six TV stations from the Dun & Bradstreet Corp. $606 million.

Metromedia is one of the nation's largest broadcasters with 13 radio stations and seven TV stations. It also is active in radio paging and cellular mobile telephone markets, outdoor advertising and TV production. It owns the Ice Capades and the Harlem Globetrotters.

Battleship Sails For U.S. Port

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After one of the longest voyages since World War II, the battleship New Jersey will return home next month from Beirut, where its huge 16-inch guns pounded Syrian-held Lebanese territory.

Relatives of the 1,600 men aboard the ship have been told it will dock at Long Beach, Calif., on May 5, defense officials said Wednesday, speaking on condition they not be named.

The 11-month trip began last June when the 42-year-old battleship left Long Beach on what was supposed to be its first shakedown cruise after it was taken out of mothballs and overhauled.

But the cruise to the Western Pacific was followed by a Central America voyage and capped with sentinel duty along the Lebanese coast.

The ship is the first of four World War II battleships the Reagan administration wants to bring back to service to give the U.S. fleet more firepower. The nine 16-inch guns aboard each ship, the biggest afloat by far, can throw a 7,000-pound shell up to 23 miles.

A second battleship, the Iowa, will be recommissioned April 28 at the Pascagoula, Miss., shipyard where it was been overhauled. Vice President George Bush is expected to attend.

Two months after the New Jersey left last year, it was moved to the Pacific coast of Central America to take part in exercises showing U.S. support for friendly governments.

In late September, it was quickly moved to the eastern Mediterranean Sea, where it could back up 1,800 U.S. Marines who were coming under increasing fire in their role as part of a multinational peacekeeping force in that war-wracked nation.

The New Jersey cruised up and down the coast off Beirut for more than two months. Then, in December, it opened up with the big guns against positions that had been firing at U.S. Navy planes.

The battleship opened up again in February, shortly after President Reagan announced that the Marines would be pulled back to Navy ships offshore. It rained about 400 shells on sites east of Beirut that had been firing at U.S. positions.

The Pentagon has not publicly provided assessments of the damage from the February shelling, but Navy Secretary John Lehman said a Syrian general may have been killed when one of the shells landed on a Syrian command bunker.

Congressional critics of the administration's Lebanon policy attacked the use of the battleship, saying it was doing little to provide security for U.S. troops.

Reagan last month announced that the 6th Fleet was being moved away from the Beirut coast.

Originally commissioned in 1942, the New Jersey was mothballed after the war, returned for the Korean War and retired again, and was brought back into the fleet again during the Vietnam War.

After the Iowa, based in Norfolk,

Va., is commissioned, it will put to sea for several weeks of trials.

Lehman has said the Navy wants to start overhauling a third battleship, the Missouri, next fall at the Long Beach shipyard. Congress has yet to approve money for the fourth ship, the Wisconsin.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market continued its fall today, extending Wednesday's broad decline.

Defense, technology and some key blue-chip issues led the decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, which fell 7.33 points Wednesday to approach the 1984 low, was down 4.19 points at 1,126.78 by noon.

Declining issues led advances by 8 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said investors remain skeptical about the course of interest rates, which have fallen in recent days.

They are fearful, the analysts say, that the pace of economic growth will continue strong and that private demand for credit will rise, increasing pressure on rates.

Other analysts say that the pace of the recovery will slow in the second quarter, reducing pressure on rates.

Among the early volume leaders, American Express was down ¼ at 27½, American Telephone & Telegraph was down ¼ at 15½, Caterpillar Tractor was down ½ at 45½ and Baxter Travenol was down.

International K Business Machines was down at 108 despite reporting a 23 percent rise in first-quarter earnings. Teledyne was 8½ at 149½, Control Data was down 1½ at 31½ and Digital Equipment was off 1½ at 88½.

The NYSE's composite index was down .37 at 88.87. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .61 at 203.82. Opening hour volume on the Big Board was 41.26 million shares, compared with 37.67 million shares at the same point Wednesday.

Rebels Kill Trio In Raid

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Communist rebels gunned down a vice mayor and killed two other people in a midnight attack on a coronation ball for a village beauty queen, the military said today.

Rosita S. Villafuerte, the vice mayor of Sipocot, was the fourth politician shot to death in two weeks — since the beginning of the 45-day campaign for the May 14 National Assembly election. The military said communist insurgents were believed responsible for two of the three previous killings.

Mrs. Villafuerte was killed because of "her open support" for government forces operating against rebels in her municipality, a military announcement said.

The 42-year-old vice mayor was without her usual military escorts when she was shot, the military said.

She was the sister-in-law of President Ferdinand E. Marcos' former trade minister, Luis Villafuerte. Villafuerte, an assemblyman, has bolted Marcos' party and is running as an opposition candidate for reelection to the assembly.

Mrs. Villafuerte was attending the coronation of a local beauty contest winner in a village of Sipocot, 150 miles southeast of Manila, when she was shot in the back of the neck, the military said.

Five rebel gunmen then killed two men in the crowd, wounded two others and fled after ordering the crowd to lie flat on the ground.

Earlier, the military had identified 188 cities and towns in 44 provinces, including the Camarines area, as potential "hot spots" in the forthcoming election.

Constabulary Chief Lt. Gen. Fidel Ramos had assured election commission officials the military was reinforcing government forces in the sensitive areas to ensure peaceful balloting.

These areas were considered potential trouble spots because of the presence of rebel bands and intense rivalry among politicians, Ramos said.

Three other politicians killed were a 73-year-old assembly candidate in Bislig, Mindanao; a town mayor in Misamis Occidental, also in Mindanao; and a vice mayor in Ilocos Sur province. Last April 1, Assemblyman Antonio Ceniza was ambushed in Zamboanga del Sur province but was unhurt.

South Carolina Honors Astronaut

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Astronaut Ronald E. McNair, a physicist who flew aboard the space shuttle Challenger in February, has been given South Carolina's highest honor, the Order of the Palmetto.

The presentation was made Wednesday before the General Assembly by Gov. Dick Riley who told the 33-year-old Lake City native that he had reached "heights that few of us will ever reach."

"Long live the space shuttle, long live the space station and long live South Carolina," proclaimed McNair, the second black astronaut to go into space. "May they flourish forever and ever."

He gave the governor a patch carried aloft during the mission and the General Assembly a flag decal.

lites, such as the two communications payloads that shot into the wrong orbits on a February shuttle mission. NASA is considering plans to salvage them.

After the news conference, the astronauts began stowing equipment and checking flight control systems in preparation for coming home Friday after a week in space. Landing is set for 7:07 a.m. EST at Cape Canaveral, and weather conditions, which had been forecast as marginal, were upgraded to favorable today as a storm system moved away from the area.

The arm had held Solar Max away from the shuttle overnight while engineers on Earth checked its systems. Early today, they termed it "golden" and gave the spacemen the OK to let it go. The arm's wire fingers relaxed, Challenger pulled back, and the satellite drifted away.

Nelson and James van Hoften replaced a control system and an electronics box on the satellite during the longest space walk ever on Wednesday. Remote checks by experts at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., showed the once-crippled Solar Max was working well.

Wearing protective space suits, they worked in the shuttle cargo bay for seven hours, seven minutes — almost five turns around the globe — breaking by six minutes the spacewalking record set by two Skylab astronauts in 1973.

Pirates Crush Wesleyan By 18-7

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
ROCKY MOUNT— East Carolina's Pirates unleashed a 19-hit attack on N.C. Wesleyan yesterday, rolling to an 18-7 victory over the Battling Bishops.

Three Pirates, Mike Williams, Chris Bradberry and Mark Council each collected three hits. Williams had a homer, while Council cracked a double.

Robbie McClanahan took the victory, his fourth against one defeat. He was finally chased by the Bishops in the seventh inning when he scored five runs, three of them unearned. Bobby Davidson came on in relief and gave up one more run and just one hit in two and a third innings.

"We swung the bats well today," Coach Hal Baird said. "They helped us with some walks (12), but we hit the ball well too."

"I was hoping that Robbie could go the distance and save some arms, but he just didn't seem to have his best stuff today. But Bobby came in and did a great job for us. That's three good games he's had in a row, and I hope that it's turned the corner

East Carolina University head basketball coach Charlie Harrison announced the signing today of two point guards, one a freshman and the other a junior college player.

Scott Hardy, 5-9, 170-pounds, will play for the Pirates after two years in the Hagerstown Community College program in Hagerstown, Md. Herb Dixon, 6-3, 188-pounds comes to East Carolina from Hyde School in Bath, Maine.

"We are very pleased to sign these two young men today," said Harrison. "Our priority in recruiting and scored on a double by Council. The Pirates then broke it open in the sixth, scoring three more times for an 8-0 lead. Sides reached on an error and Council singled. Greg Hardison — who transferred from Wesleyan to ECU after his freshman season — doubled to right center, scoring both runners, but he was thrown out trying for a triple. David Wells followed with a walk and moved up on a wild pitch. He scored on a single by Todd Evans.

Wesleyan scored its first run in the bottom of the sixth. That came on a homer by Steve Durelli in the sixth. East Carolina scored three more in the seventh to up the lead to 11-1. Bradberry singled and Council got a hit. Jabo Fulghum singled to load the bases, with Ricky Nichols running for him. Hardison's single plated Bradberry and Council, while Nichols scored on a sacrifice fly by Wells.

Wesleyan scored five times in the bottom of the seventh, chasing McClanahan. John Green started it with a single and Kevin Rose reached on an error. Danny Tomko also singled, loading the bases. With one down, Durelli singled in two runs and Clen Mattocks followed with a three-run homer.

The Pirates scored again in the eighth. Nichols, now in the game as a fielder, walked and moved up on an infield hit by Robert Langston. A wild pitch scored him.

The final six came in the closing inning. Hardison walked and Wells singled. A walk to Evans loaded the bases and Mark Shank walked to force in one run. Nichols singled in another and a walk to Langston added still another. Mike Sullivan then doubled, driving in all three baserunners for the final 18-run tally.

Wesleyan picked up one more in the bottom of the frame. Ronnie Shorter doubled and moved up on an out, then scored on another out as Charlie Simpson grounded to third.

While Williams, Bradberry and Council each had three hits, Hardison, Evans and Fulghum each recorded two. Durelli led Wesleyan's hitting with four.

East Carolina travels to Richmond to face Virginia Commonwealth tonight in a 7:30 p.m. contest.

ECU Signs Two Point Guards

system and have time to develop without pressure."

Hardy was being sought by ECAC-South opponents American University and George Mason University, as well as George Washington University. Originally from Northeast High School in Hyattsville, Md., Hardy averaged 16.0 points per game and 11.0 assists per game.

The Hagerstown program was in the top five junior college rankings throughout this season. Hardy played last year with Len Bias, this year's ACC tournament's Most Valuable Player, and is currently a teammate of freshman Barron Burke, an outstanding performer in last summer's East-West all-star game, out of Wilson Beddingfield High School.

Dixon, originally from Boston, averaged 21.8 points and 8.0 assists per game on a 17-3 club. He has been selected to play in the prestigious Boston Shootout this summer, after being named all-New England.

Dixon is from a strong athletic family, his brother Robin was named the player-of-the-year in the ECAC-North as a member of the University of New Hampshire club; his sister Medina is an outstanding member of the Old Dominion women's team; and another brother is an outstanding kickoff return man with the Seattle Seahawks.

In contention for Dixon's services were Northeastern University, Duquesne, Niagara, Marquette and American.

"We feel we have really improved our backcourt with two nice players that have talent," said Harrison. "Now, we hope to bring in one or two big men, but numbers are not important for us here as is quality. We have to keep in mind our people already here, be fair to them, and most important, bring in players who really want to play for East Carolina University."

Harrison begins his third year, with the Pirates and had his contract extended earlier this week through 1978.

Pete Rose Set To Celebrating

CINCINNATI (AP) — Montreal outfielder Pete Rose can celebrate a wedding, a birthday, a hitting milestone and a home opener in Montreal all in the same weekend.

After failing to get a hit in his hometown Wednesday, Rose was ready to board the train plane with his new bride and a determination to get his 4,000th career hit in the Expos' home opener Friday — one day before he turns 43.

The former Cincinnati Reds star drew four walks and grounded out in Montreal's 9-3 victory Wednesday at Riverfront Stadium before a boisterous crowd that littered the field in disgust when Reds pitchers gave Rose little to swing at.

His next swing at becoming only the second player ever to reach 4,000

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 12, 1984

Wesleyan scored five times in the bottom of the seventh, chasing McClanahan. John Green started it with a single and Kevin Rose reached on an error. Danny Tomko also singled, loading the bases. With one down, Durelli singled in two runs and Clen Mattocks followed with a three-run homer.

The Pirates scored again in the eighth. Nichols, now in the game as a fielder, walked and moved up on an infield hit by Robert Langston. A wild pitch scored him.

The final six came in the closing inning. Hardison walked and Wells singled. A walk to Evans loaded the bases and Mark Shank walked to force in one run. Nichols singled in another and a walk to Langston added still another. Mike Sullivan then doubled, driving in all three baserunners for the final 18-run tally.

Wesleyan picked up one more in the bottom of the frame. Ronnie Shorter doubled and moved up on an out, then scored on another out as Charlie Simpson grounded to third.

While Williams, Bradberry and Council each had three hits, Hardison, Evans and Fulghum each recorded two. Durelli led Wesleyan's hitting with four.

East Carolina travels to Richmond to face Virginia Commonwealth tonight in a 7:30 p.m. contest.

Fike Hands Rose First Loop Loss

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
WILSON — Wilson Fike erupted for seven runs after one out in the fifth inning and handed the Rose High School Rampants their first Big East 4-A baseball loss of the season, 7-3.

Golden Demon pitcher Brooks Bissette scattered eight hits in going the distance on the mound and didn't give up a walk until two out in the seventh.

Rose starter Mike Kinley cruised through four innings, striking out eight Fike batters and giving up just one hit before the barrage. Kinley yielded five hits in all and was credited with six of the runs. Billy Michel came on after one out to close the door.

"It's a funny game we played today," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said. "I thought Mike threw the ball extremely well. They never hit him, but I figured we would bring the righthander (Michel) and show them something different."

The Rampants held a 3-0 lead going into the bottom of the fifth, but Rose shortstop Traye Fuqua drew Michel off the bag at first on a grounder by Ricky Jenkins to open the rally. Mark Harris singled and Jimmie Page walked to load the bases, and Doug Flowers slapped the first of three infield singles to drive in courtesy runner Neal Davis.

Milo Popowitch, Brian Harris and Rusty Dail each followed with RBI singles to give the Demons a 4-3 lead. Dail was the first batter Michel faced, but David Allen put the game out of reach with a two-run single to right. Jenkins again reached first on an error but ended the inning later when he was caught in a rundown attempting to steal second. "We hit the ball hard, but it was always right at somebody," Vincent said. "We played well enough to win; we just didn't get the breaks on defense."

The Rampants got on the board in the second inning when Fuqua reached first on an error, stole second and scored on a single to right by Michel. Kinley got to first on an error by Bissette in the fourth, and courtesy runner Battle Emory later scored on a sacrifice fly to left by Fuqua.

The other Rose run came in the top of the fifth. David Jester reached first on a bobbled grounder to shortstop and stole second. An infield single by Mike Smith moved Jester to third, and he scored on a fielder's choice by Marc Nover.

The Rampants left a runner on third in the sixth and again in the seventh, as Bissette improved his record to 6-1 while the Demons are 5-0 atop the Big East standings. Rose dropped to 7-3-1 overall and 4-1 in the league, while Kinley slipped to 3-2 on the season.

Michel and catcher Eric Woodworth each went 2-3 at the plate to lead the Rose offense, and Woodworth gunned down a pair of Fike runners attempting to steal to earn defensive praise.

Mark Harris was the only Fike batter with more than one hit, finishing 2-3.

The Rampants host Wilson Hunt Friday.

The Panthers added their other run in the sixth, while Southwest's lone run crossed in the fifth.

Rawls and Briley each had two hits to lead North Pitt, while Mark Pittman and Alphonso Barnes each had two for the Cougars.

Now 1-3 in the conference and 1-6 overall, the Panthers play host to Ayden-Grifton on Friday.

Rose Golfers Down Demons

WILSON — Rose High School's golfers continued their unbeaten streak through the season yesterday, downing Wilson Fike in a match played at Willow Springs Country Club.

The Rampants finished the day with a 322 team total, while Fike wound up with a 339 score.

John Jordan led Rose with a 78, while Simon Moye carded a 79. Tee Davies added an 81 and Chris Evans had an 84.

For Fike, Claude Allgood had a 75 to earn medalist honors for the match. But he got less help from his teammates. Billy Price had an 86, Ricky Collins had an 88 and Sid Bruton carded a 90.

Rose is now 8-0 on the season and travels to the Ayden Country Club today to face hosting Ayden-Grifton, along with Farmville Central and Tarboro.

Jones To Olympics

Sam Jones, former East Carolina University Lady Pirate basketball star, has been chosen to play on the U.S. Team Handball Olympic team.

Jones, who began her team handball career only at the completion of her basketball career two years ago, first came to prominence in her newly chosen sport two summers ago when she made the South team for the Sports Festival Games. She was then chosen to the U.S. National Team for a European tour.

Since then, Sam has become one of the top women team handball players in the country, and it was announced earlier this week that she had been selected to play on the U.S. Olympic team this summer.

Pete Rose...

hits should come Friday against the Philadelphia Phillies — the team that signed him as a free agent after the 1978 season and released him last year.

"Who's pitching? Carlton?" Rose said, figuring his big hit could come off Phillies' left-hander Steve Carlton, baseball's all-time strikeout king.

Told the Phillies plan to start Jerry Koonsman, Rose snapped his fingers in disappointment and said, "I thought it would be Carlton."

The 18,923 fans in Riverfront Stadium Wednesday hoped it would be either Bruce Berenyi or Frank Pastore giving up No. 4,000.

Rose, who played in Cincinnati his first 16 major league seasons, drew three consecutive walks from Berenyi, who started and lasted 3-1-3 innings. Rose took a cut at only one of Berenyi's offerings, fouling it off.

The fans booed Berenyi loudly when he was replaced by Pastore, who retired Rose on a first-pitch grounder back to the mound in the sixth.

"Berenyi was a little wild. He's a tough guy to get a hit off of," Rose said. "The one ball I hit hard, if it gets by Pastore it's a base hit."

Instead, the drama was played out into the eighth inning, when Rose led off as the stadium rocked with encouragement. Pastore threw two balls and then a strike, then put his hand to his mouth for an automatic ball three. The next pitch brought Rose his fourth walk.

Rose, wanting a pitch to hit, was disappointed when home plate umpire Fred Brocklander called the automatic ball on Pastore for going to the mouth.

"He was so involved in pitching, he went to his mouth," Rose said. "I was hoping he (Brocklander) wouldn't see him, but he was looking right at him."

Although the fans booed Reds pitchers loud and often for failing to give Rose more pitches to hit, Rose said he was glad to get the four walks because they helped the Expos break a three-game losing streak.

"I'm going to get another hit this year," he said. "I'm not worried about that. I'm just happy we won today's game. I'm a little disappointed (at not getting 4,000 in his hometown), but it's just one of those things that happen."

Pitt Takes Net Win

Pitt Community College remained unbeaten in conference play yesterday with a 6-2 tennis victory over Cape Fear Technical College.

The number three doubles match was not played, as Pitt took a 4-2 lead in the match in the singles and added the two doubles that were contested.

Pitt is now 3-0 in the league and 4-2 overall. The Paladins return to action on Friday, hosting James Sprunt.

Jack Wants Another Major Win

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus says someone some day will break his record of 17 major professional golf championships, and he'd like to make it a little more difficult by adding to his collection.

"Somebody will come along and do it," Nicklaus said Wednesday on the eve of the 48th Masters Tournament. "They always do. When they do, I'd like the record to be more than 19," Nicklaus said, adding a pair of U.S. Amateur titles to his personal list.

"I would like to win a lot more major tournaments," he said, adding that he is gearing his game each year to peak during the season's four major events — the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA.

"I have as good a chance as anybody else here this week," Nicklaus said before beginning his quest for a sixth Masters title today on the 6,905-yard, par 72 Augusta National layout.

Nicklaus, generally acclaimed the greatest player in the history of golf, has not won the Masters since 1975.

He tied for second in 1981, had a strong 69 on the opening round in 1982 before developing the flu and falling back in the pack, and was forced to withdraw before the start of the second round last year because of an ailing back.

"I'm not quite as good a player as I used to be, but I think I'm still capable of winning, just not as often," he said.

At age 44, Nicklaus said he doesn't know how long he will continue to play, but he will perform as long as he thinks he is competitive.

The only five-time champion in Masters history fired a 66 in a practice round Saturday, and says he is more confident than he's been in recent years.

He faces a tough field of 87 other international players, including defending Seve Ballesteros, the dashing Spaniard who hopes to become the only player other than Nicklaus to put together consecutive Masters titles. Jack did it in 1965 and 1966.

"Usually when I come into a tournament I have a feeling," Ballesteros said. "I think I can win, but I really don't feel a hundred percent."

Ballesteros said the winner likely will come from players who have been playing well, such as Andy Bean, winner last Sunday of the Greater Greensboro Open, and players who know the course so well, such as two-time champion Tom Watson and Nicklaus.

Regarding Nicklaus, Ballesteros said, "he likes fast greens, and he has a little patience, too."

The defending champion said the course is playing long because of rain earlier in the week and that the "greens may be a little too quick. I'm sure somebody will complain."

Nicklaus almost did when he discussed the greens.

"These greens right now will separate a great putter and a good putter very quickly," Nicklaus said. "They are tough."

Nicklaus said they are close to being so tough that it could produce what he called "goony golf."

"If you get beyond that, you'll find the gallery laughing at the shots. I hope that doesn't happen. I don't think the Masters wants that to happen."

Nicklaus said if the greens get much faster, "It will be very difficult to put pins in places where you won't embarrass the players."

The weather forecast called for ideal conditions for the first two rounds today and Friday, with a chance of rain moving in Saturday and Sunday.

"That's the key," Hord W. Hardin, Masters chairman, said. "If we get past the cut, we're more flexible. If it rains Saturday, we could play 36 holes Sunday."

Heels Defeat Wake

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — B.J. Surhoff belted two home runs to power No. 4 North Carolina to a 8-4 Atlantic Coast Conference college baseball victory over Wake Forest on Wednesday.

The victory left the Tar Heels 33-9 overall and 10-2 in the ACC, one-half game behind Clemson, which beat Georgia Tech 7-2 Wednesday night.

Surhoff's two-run homer in the third inning broke a 1-1 tie, and after Mitch McCleney singled home another run, the Tar Heels led 4-1.

In the bottom of the fourth, Surhoff blasted a solo shot, his eighth of the season, to give North Carolina a 5-1 lead.

Wake Forest, 17-20 and 1-10, scored two runs in the fifth to cut the lead to 5-3 and chase starter Tim Kirk. But reliever Bob Mulligan came on to hold the Demon Deacons to just one more run as he picked up the victory, his second in three decisions.

The Tar Heels scored a run in the sixth and two more in the seventh, one of which came on a home run by McCleney.

Mike Featherstone, 4-2, suffered the loss.

The final regular season standings and pairings for the 1984 ACC Baseball Tournament, scheduled for April 18-22 in Durham, will be decided this weekend as the Tar Heels travel to Virginia on Saturday and to Maryland on Sunday.

Clemson has one game remaining after Wednesday. The Tigers play host to Wake Forest on Saturday.

Civilian Rule Is Spreading In South America

EDITOR'S NOTE — One by one in the 1960s and 1970s, South American governments fell under military control. Now the soldiers are in retreat. The following report on Latin America's changing political face is based on a tour of regional capitals.

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Democracy has a new Latin beat, one echoing up and down a continent.

You can hear it in the clangor of pots and pans in Chile, in the samba drums of young Brazilian marchers, in the chants of election crowds in Argentina and demonstrators in Uruguay.

Across South America, the military lockstep is breaking down.

Where only two elected civilian governments existed five years ago, a half-dozen now debate and decide their nations' future in the open light of parliaments and the press. And pressure is mounting on four remaining military governments to hasten their withdrawal to the barracks.

"Civilianization" is contagious. Last October's elections in Argentina inspired democrats in nearby Uruguay and Chile. And those movements now encourage others, even raising faint hopes in Paraguay, ironclad domain of strongman Gen. Alfredo Stroessner.

"We have to unite all the opposition around a single, peaceful action plan, just as the Chileans are doing now," Paraguayan opposition leader Juan Manuel Benitez Florentin told a reporter visiting Asuncion.

South America's new democracies may operate in the shadow of a military that reserves a "right" to intervene again. But South American politicians, academics and others say growing public awareness, international condemnation of military repression, and the armed forces' own weariness of grappling with society's ills may slow the historic cycle of military coups.

The most bitter showdown is here in Chile, the beautiful land of 11 million people strung slenderly along the continent's Pacific coast.

Democratic roots may run deepest here — Chileans claim a 130-year electoral tradition. But the military ruler — the glowering Gen. Augusto Pinochet — may also be the most immovable.

The Chile story shows the forces at work as South America transforms itself.

A protest movement to topple the authoritarian president sprang to life a year ago in the dusty slums and on the stately boulevards of this Old World-style capital. Developments in 1984 may determine whether the Marxist left or capitalist center leads the opposition, and whether strikes and demonstrations can force the army to abandon the general.

The battle lines are clearly drawn.

"We will never have a dialogue with Pinochet," Gabriel Valdes, leader of the centrist Democratic Alliance coalition, said in a recent interview.

"The public keeps saying, 'Enough! Enough!'"

A Pinochet spokesman, Alfonso Marquez de la Plata, government secretary general, said the regime is willing to discuss changes in Pinochet's long-established plan for a slow return to democracy.

"But the opposition says, 'We are the only ones who have the truth, everything we say is right,'" Marquez de la Plata said. "This is the antithesis of dialogue."

Not all the opposition is free to protest or make dialogue, however.

From his 17th-floor office suite, Marquez de la Plata can see the grimy city prison where one key anti-Pinochet figure — Marxist opposition front leader Manuel Almeyda — has been jailed since Feb. 15 for publically for Pinochet's ouster.

The 68-year-old president mixes repression with concession as he maneuvers to maintain the power the Chilean military seized in a bloody coup Sept. 11, 1973, when he brought down the elected government of President Salvador Allende, a Marxist who was pulling Chile sharply leftward. Allende and as many as 10,000 other Chileans died in the coup and its aftermath.

The Pinochet decade has lurched from boom to bust.

As the economy soared in 1982, "El General" went to the people with a referendum on his plan for returning Chile to democracy — over a 17-year period. Chileans approved it two to one.

Within a year Chile slipped into a disastrous depression — unemployment reached 25 percent — and many Chileans' apathy gave way to anger, finally overflowing into "National Protest Days" of strikes and rallies staged monthly beginning last May, protests orchestrated to the rhythmic banging of household pots and pans in the smoggy Santiago evenings.

The demonstrations were costly — 62 people were killed in 1983, most shot by police in clashes with protesters. But Pinochet ended some harsher authoritarian measures and opened indirect talks with the Democratic Alliance, comprising Valdes' Christian Democrats and four other centrist parties.

Those talks collapsed. The Alliance demands Pinochet's resignation and full democracy within 18 months. The general, for most Chileans just a distant, white-uniformed figure on television, counters with a vague scheme for future plebiscites to endorse the Pinochet way to democracy.

But the demonstrations continue and so do the president's concessions. After protests March 27, Pinochet dismissed his economic team and pledged to relieve unemployment.

The opposition is weakened by distrust — legacy of the Allende years — between its two political blocs, the Democratic Alliance and Almeyda's Democratic Popular Movement, a coalition of Communists and other Marxists.

Popular young labor leader Rodolfo Seguel, a key anti-Pinochet organizer, has sought to draw the two factions closer together, but he sounds exasperated.

"The political differences are very deep," he said in an interview. "It's not for labor leaders to try to resolve them."

The divisions keep the multi-party opposition from offering their countrymen a coherent view of a post-Pinochet Chile.

Jaime Insunza, an intense, 38-year-old Communist who is secretary-general of the Marxist bloc, says it is ready to discuss its program with the Democratic Alliance, "but always with the conviction that our program corresponds with the needs of the country."

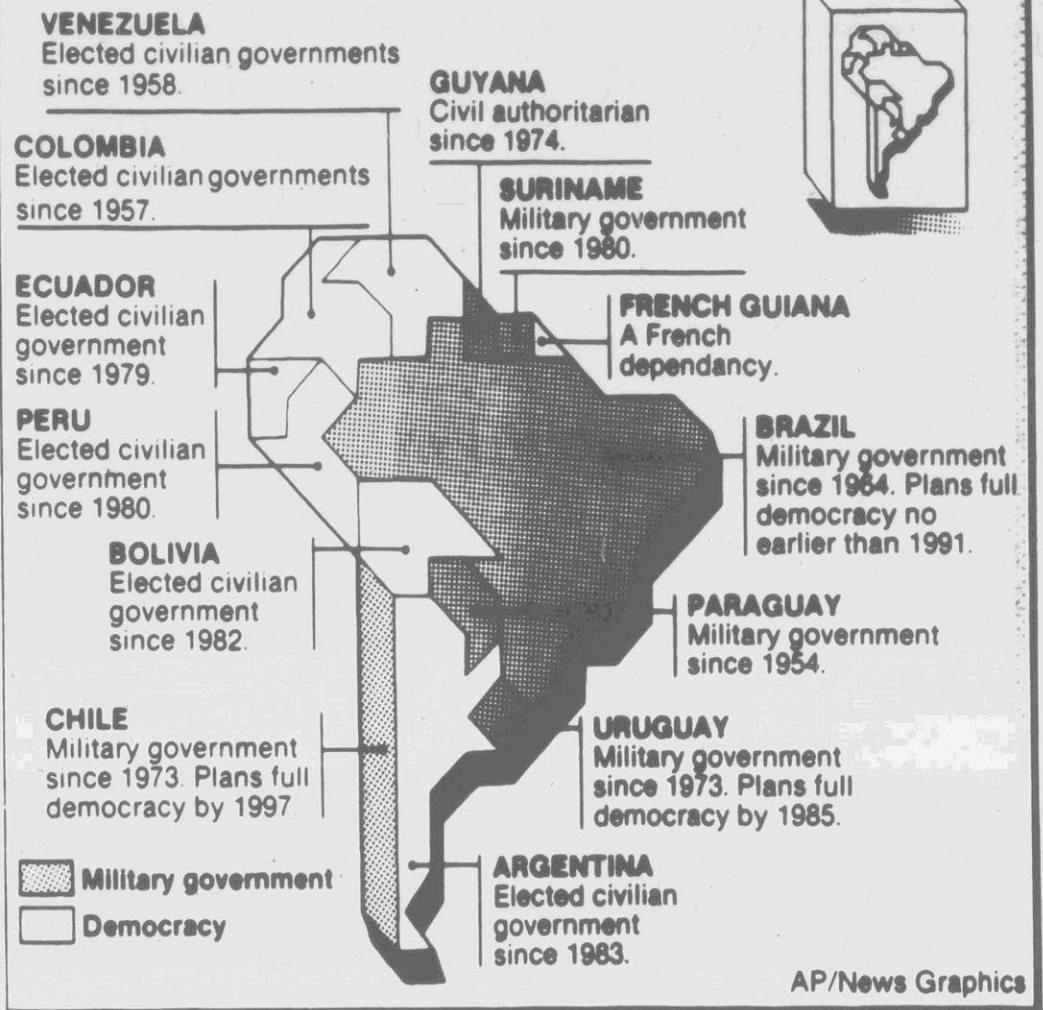

Would a post-Pinochet Chile revert to Allende-style Marxism? The leftists are well-organized in the squatter camps and shantytowns that ring this 443-year-old city. And the unemployed slum-dwellers are bitter, complaining about Chile's $21-billion debt to U.S. and other banks, and claiming their country has been "stolen" from them.

But Chilean analysts suggest that the Marxists, who even in Allende's day could garner little more than one-third of the vote, would not try to revolutionize the Chilean system on such a narrow political base.

"That was Allende's mistake. They won't repeat it," said political scientist Manuel Antonio Garreton, a socialist.

The protest movement, meanwhile, drives on toward its immediate goal — toppling

DEMOCRACY IN SOUTH AMERICA

Pinochet. The underlying strategy: Step up disruptive actions, draw harsher repression, attract additional support.

But Valdes cautions: "If the government takes a tough position... I think the protests will move toward radicalization. Very dangerous."

Extremists are already at work. Gunmen and bombs of the outlawed Leftist Revolutionary Movement are blamed for the slayings of seven policemen since late last year.

Elsewhere on the continent, the clash is not so bloody, but the anti-military fever runs as high:

BRAZIL

By the tens of thousands, to a Brazilian samba beat, T-shirted protesters are parading and rallying in Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo and other cities to demand "Diretas Ja!" — "direct elections now" for president.

They reject the 20-year-old military government's plan for the presidential choice to be made next Jan. 15 by an electoral college dominated by the pro-military party. As elsewhere, debt-burdened Brazil's economic woes feed popular anger at a leadership the people did not choose.

URUGUAY

The 11-year-old military government promises national elections for next November, but the traditional parties in this historically democratic country oppose the armed forces' efforts to retain a political role indefinitely. Dissident Uruguayans turned recent soccer-victory celebrations and annual Carnival events into anti-military protests.

PARAGUAY

Stroessner, who has held power for three decades, has allowed two dozen old political foes to return from years of exile. But the dissidents' activities are tightly controlled, and few Paraguayans expect any quick liberalization.

DEMOCRACY CHALLENGED

Some of South America's new civilian governments are under pressure.

Bolivia is the likeliest candidate for a reversal of the democratic trend. A possible military coup is now openly discussed in La Paz, where President Hernan Siles Zuazo's 17-month-old elected government is wracked by economic indecision.

In Peru, leftist guerrilla violence has prompted elected President Fernando Belaunde Terry to suspend civil liberties regionally and, for a time, nationally. Some Peruvians believe that the military, which held power in 1968-80, will step in again if Belaunde falters.

Coast Guard Eyes Testing Of Blimp

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — If bigger really is better, the Coast Guard may be on to something.

In December, the Coast Guard plans to begin a five-month test of the abilities of blimps in law enforcement and other functions.

"For the most part, we expect to use it in law enforcement patrols," said Cmdr. Richard McDonald. "But we want to go ahead and do the full gamut of Coast Guard missions to see what it is capable of, to see what it is best suited for."

McDonald, who supervises dirigible research in the Coast Guard Office of Research and Development, said the Coast Guard was attracted by a blimp's fuel efficiency and ability to stay on site for extended periods.

A month-long evaluation last summer near the Coast Guard Air Station in Elizabeth City, N.C., showed skeptics that modern airships — faster, sturdier and electronically equipped — had a significant potential for some Coast Guard missions, McDonald said.

The service hopes to begin training six pilots and three ground chiefs next fall to operate a blimp for five months during regular patrols in one of the Coast Guard's 12 districts.

McDonald said a contract to lease a blimp and provide training for Coast Guard personnel should be awarded in late summer.

He said it will be the first time the Coast Guard has used the blimp for an extended time in a broad range of missions — "just as we would any other resource."

The Coast Guard began experimenting with a 165-foot technologically sophisticated blimp last year to evaluate its performance as a ship of the future. That blimp, the Skyship AI-500, was designed by Airship Industries Ltd., a British company.

"We feel that with fuel and maintenance and everything else, the savings are considerable" with the airship, McDonald said.

No district has yet been selected to test the blimp, McDonald said. It could be operated in the 5th Coast Guard District, which has its headquarters in Portsmouth and includes Virginia, North Carolina, Maryland and a portion of Delaware.

The blimp to be used later this year will carry a five-meter, semi-rigid inflatable boat that could be lowered from the blimp with a crew inside to board vessels or rescue boaters.

The Coast Guard expects the blimp to hover above key law enforcement points in the ocean for 48 hours at a time.

While the blimp carries radar and is able to detect ships at long ranges, McDonald said, it is barely visible on radar screens.

Although the blimps now on the market travel at between 50 and 60 knots, the Coast Guard, if it were to incorporate the airship permanently into its fleet, eventually would need one that traveled at 100 knots.

U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., said the Coast Guard has appropriated $500,000 to continue the evaluation of the blimps.

"There are a number of features which make the blimp attractive, including its ability to stay on site for long periods of time and its relative fuel efficiency," said Jones, who is chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

Non-Game Wildlife Tax Checkoff Adopted

CHICKADEES . . . are common winter birds at feeders all across North Carolina. In summer they may nest in fence post cavities along the Blue Ridge Parkway.

MOMENTARILY A CAPTIVE . . . This young bald eagle is being held by a member of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service so that it may be banded with a device that will permit tracking its movement by radio signals. Ongoing efforts are being made to re-introduce bald eagles in North Carolina.

Text By Mark Taylor, N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission

RALEIGH — A bald eagle soars from a cage overlooking a coastal sound while a wildlife biologist tracks its movements with a radio receiver. A youngster wielding a dipnet dredges aquatic insects from the bottom of a pond, and then identifies the creature in a classroom. A bird club builds a nature trail in an urban park.

What do these activities have in common? All of them involve non-game or endangered wildlife. Non-game wildlife species are those which are neither trapped, fished for, or hunted, and include most birds, small animals and all reptiles. Endangered species are those animals legally declared to be in danger of extinction.

Thanks to the recent passage of the non-game Wildlife Tax Checkoff in the General Assembly, the future looks bright for these animals. This year for the first time, citizens receiving a refund from their North Carolina state income tax may designate that a portion or all of their refund be used for the management and protection on non-game and endangered wildlife. This program will be administered by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

"North Carolina is now one of 31 states having a non-game wildlife tax checkoff," said Jack Donnelly, coordinator of the non-game program for the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission. "These programs have been very successful in other states. Colorado, for example, was the first state to enact a non-game tax checkoff, and raised $700,000 for non-game wildlife through their program last year."

"We expect the program to be very successful here. North Carolina is rapidly changing, and the strong interest in a non-game program reflects that change. In the past, most people in the state either grew up in or lived in rural areas and experienced wildlife through hunting or fishing. Plenty still do, but this is changing," Donnelly said.

"North Carolina now ranks 10th nationally in population and is one of the fastest growing states in the country. Much of our population now lives in urban areas, and in the future many of these people may only experience wildlife in their backyards or in local parks. The non-game wildlife program will help these people enjoy wildlife through educational programs, development of urban wildlife areas, and management and restoration of non-game and endangered species," he said.

Several existing wildlife projects — which were threatened with extinction by the cutback of federal funding for endangered species programs — are being continued as part of the new non-game wildlife program. These include restoration projects for endangered bald eagles and peregrine falcons, and a study of endangered loggerhead sea turtles.

"Last year, two young bald eagles were released at Lake Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge in Hyde County as part of an effort to restore a population of these birds to North Carolina," said Donnelly.

"We plan to release additional birds at the refuge this summer, and hope to establish release sites at other locations in the future — possibly in the Croatan National Forest and at the Camp Lejeune Marine Base. Since it takes five years for young eagles to mature and return to nest, restoration of eagles is a long-term project. Eventually, we hope to establish a nesting population of about 30 bald eagles on the North Carolina coast," he said.

An entirely new restoration program is planned for peregrine falcons. These magnificent birds-of-prey are often seen migrating along the Outer Banks in the spring and fall, but once nested in the North Carolina mountains. Populations of peregrine falcons were almost destroyed by the use of DDT and other persistent pesticides during the 1950s and 1960s. However, peregrine falcons — and many other birds-of-prey — have recovered since the use of these chemicals was banned in the early 1970s.

"Most of the suitable habitat for peregrine falcons in the northeast has been filled, so the national peregrine recovery team has turned its attention to the southern Appalachians," Donnelly said.

"We've already selected two release sites for the peregrine falcons in North Carolina. One is on Grandfather Mountain, and the other is an urban site in Asheville. Releases of peregrine falcons in urban areas is not unusual — the birds often do quite well in cities. This project should be completed in five years," he said.

"An on-going loggerhead sea turtle project which has been underway for several years will also be continued. This project was conducted by the N.C. Natural Heritage Program of the State Parks Division with the cooperation of the Wildlife Commission. Sea turtle nesting has been monitored along the coast, and key nesting areas have been identified. Young and adult sea turtles have also been tagged so that we may learn more about their populations, movements, life expectancies and habits," Donnelly said.

The non-game program will not be confined to the management and restoration of non-game and endangered species, however. Development of urban wildlife areas and the expansion of environmental-education programs for young people are two of the main priorities of the program.

"Other states have found that the development of urban wildlife areas are very popular programs," Donnelly said.

"We plan to work closely with local governments to identify areas — such as city parks — that have strong potential as urban wildlife habitats. On these lands, cooperative efforts will be made to increase wildlife populations and to develop nature trails and observation blinds. Volunteers will play a big role in developing these facilities in urban settings," he said.

In addition, the Wildlife Commission is the lead agency within the N.C. Division of Natural Resources and Community Development in developing an environmental education program for schools. As part of this cooperative effort, a four-page environmental education aid called the "Carolina Notebook" is being published and mailed free to over 5,000 teachers in North Carolina.

"The non-game program will allow us to expand educational efforts, including the "Carolina Notebook." Eventually, we hope to have an environmental education program in all of our schools. We will also create educational materials dealing with non-game and endangered wildlife for the general public."

How can citizens contribute to the non-game wildlife tax checkoff? Start by taking a close look at your 1983 North Carolina State Income Tax Form — the literal bottom line for non-game and endangered wildlife depends on how you file your tax return in the next few months.

In the lower right-hand corner of page 2 of the instructions for your state income tax form is a section on how to contribute to the North Carolina non-game Wildlife Fund, which is another name for the non-game tax checkoff. If you wish to support this fund, enter a donation from your refund on line 21 of the form. You may designate that a portion of your refund (but not less than $1) or all of your refund be used for the protection and management of non-game and endangered species. This donation will not increase the tax you pay, and may be deducted on the following year's tax form. If your tax returns are prepared professionally, tell your accountant that you wish to contribute to the non-game Wildlife Fund.

If you aren't receiving a refund, but wish to contribute to the non-game Wildlife Fund, tax-deductible contributions may be sent to the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, non-game Wildlife Fund (designate this on your check), 512 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, NC 27611. Information on the non-game program is also available from this address.

North Carolina Is An Exceptionally Fine Area For Bird Watchers

RALEIGH — A survey by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service concludes that bird watching is one of the fastest growing wildlife-related activities in the nation, and experts agree that North Carolina is a premium location for it.

About 80 percent of the birds of eastern North America have been recorded in the Tar Heel state — 415 species. With the exception of one or two western states, North Carolina has a greater diversity of bird species than any other.

"You have the northern limit of a lot of southern birds on the coast," said Roger Tory Peterson, dean of birders in North America, "and the southern limit of the more northern species."

North Carolina capes divide the colder North Atlantic Ocean from warmer southern waters, so northern and southern species overlap on the Outer Banks. Storms sometimes force birds into this area from the Caribbean and the Arctic. The third most extensive estuary in North America, after those of Louisiana and Alaska, lies in coastal North Carolina, offering vast marshes and extensive sand beaches. Along the crest of the Blue Ridge in western North Carolina, which are some of the highest mountains of eastern America, there is a Canadian zone with plant and animal species indigenous to more northerly latitudes.

"For the birder," Peterson said, "North Carolina's got more variety than any other state on the east coast."

Top Tar Heel birding locations include the Cape Hatteras and Cape Lookout national seashores, Lake Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge, Fort Macon near Morehead City, Fort Fisher near Wilmington, the Great Smoky Mountains National Park and the Blue Ridge Parkway.

The Outer Banks act as a funnel for birds coming down the coast, and birding there is particularly good in the fall. Waterfowl abound, there are many species of sea birds and long-legged waders, and Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge on Hatteras Island is especially well known for flights of peregrine falcons and other hawks in the fall. From October until March, numbers of waterfowl, including great white flocks of greater snow geese, may be observed beside highway NC No. 12 that runs down the Outer Banks. At the tip of Cape Hatteras you may see shearwaters, petrels, a variety of gulls, gannets and other sea birds.

Lake Mattamuskeet hosts a wintering population of waterfowl, particularly Canada geese, whistling swans and ducks, all of which may be seen from the causeway that crosses the lake. Both Fort Macon and Fort Fisher are seasonally rich in wading birds, such as ibises, willetts, godwits and sanderlings. On Tar Heel mountain peaks above 4,500 feet you may see birds that are indigenous to the northeastern U.S. and Canada — kinglets, nuthatches, certain finches, ravens and the pine siskin.

A greater variety of birds may be seen in spring and fall in North Carolina than in summer and winter. Migrants ride the warm fronts in spring through the Piedmont and Mountain sectors, while fall cold fronts push birds down the Coastal Plain.

No one knows just how many birders there are in the U.S., but estimates run to 30 million and the number is growing. The appeal lies in the fact that birding can be done practically anywhere — on the way to market, in a city park, a national seashore or in your own backyard. It's inexpensive. All you need is a $100 pair of binoculars and a field guide.

Experts recommend you join a bird club or a local chapter of the National Audubon Society or the American Birding Association. NAS is primarily concerned with conservation of all wildlife and protection of the natural environment. It supports nature centers and wildlife sanctuaries across the nation. Its 450 chapters conduct field trips and ecological workshops and encourage such outdoor activities as birding. The ABA was formed primarily as a means of communication among birders. It promotes the hobby and sport of birding by providing members with information.

Bird watchers seem to fall into two categories: the "listers" whose main purpose is competition, and those who attempt to study birds in detail and learn something of their relationship to the environment.

The former type is serious in varying degrees about compiling lists of birds they have sighted. There are seasonal lists, daily lists, birds-I-have-seen-from-the-car lists, and life lists, and there are state lists and national lists. For 85 years, the NAS has sponsored an annual Christmas bird count. Teams are formed to count all the species and numbers of birds within a circle of 15 miles in diameter in a single day during a two-week period beginning Dec. 15. The scientific purpose is to allow ornithologists to estimate wintering populations and relate them to pesticide use, economic development, drought and pollution, for example, but many of these events degenerate into area competitions. Unfortunately, some of these birders are too busy counting birds to comprehend them.

National seashores and wildlife refuges within North Carolina are eager to assist birders with information and directions. Some even provide blinds from which shy birds may be observed undetected. Three marines resources centers offer bird walks, films and workshops. Here are some important addresses and phone numbers for prospective birders in North Carolina:

- Cape Hatteras National Seashore, Route 1, Box 675, Manteo, N.C., 27954. Phone 919/473-2117.

Key Books for birding include "Birds of the Carolinas" by Potter, Parnell and Teulings, and "A Field Guide to the Birds — Eastern Land and Water Birds" by Roger Tory Peterson.

How Tar Heels Voted In The House, Senate

(By Roll Call Report)
 WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Mar. 29 through April 4.

HOUSE
SPENDING — By a vote of 288 for and 109 against, the House gave the Select Committee on Hunger a budget of $449,250 for the remainder of 1984. This will cover salaries at an annual rate of $32,000 for 15 professional staffers, as well as $1,000 per member in travel expenses for domestic field hearings.

The committee lacks power to approve legislation and is to expire at the end of the year. When it was created in February, supporters called it necessary to focus House attention on domestic and worldwide hunger. Critics called it a grandstand play that will soak taxpayers while doing little to combat hunger.

Supporter Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y., said the panel will "underscore to the public our nation's need to assign a higher priority to hunger

Opponent Robert Badham, R-Calif., said too much of the budget was allocated to field hearings that will duplicate research efforts by other House committees.

Members voting yes favored a $449,250 budget for the Select Committee on Hunger.
 North Carolina representatives voting yes were: Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Britt, D-6; W.G. Hefner, D-8; and James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no were: James Martin, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10.
 Not voting were: Charles Whitley, D-3; Ike Andrews, D-4; and Charles Rose, D-7.

CREDIT CARDS — The House passed, 355 for and 34 against, a bill (HR 5026) to prohibit merchants from charging extra for credit card purchases. This reimposes a ban that had expired Feb. 27. The bill, which was sent to the Senate, outlaws credit card surcharges until June 1985.
 American Express and the American Bankers Association were among lobbyists for the prohibition. Many free-market economists opposed it, along with retailers who said the cost of handling credit card sales drives up costs for those paying by cash.

Supporter Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., disputed the argument that surcharges would result in lower prices for cash customers. He said the money saved "will be passed right on to ... the pockets of that merchant."

Opponent Barney Frank, D-Mass., accused American Express and the American Bankers Association of "hypocrisy" in favoring this type of federal regulation while complaining about congressionally set interest ceilings.

Members voting yes wanted to ban credit card surcharges.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were: Walter Jones, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Neal, Britt, Rose, Hefner, James Martin, Broyhill and Clarke.
 Valentine did not vote.

SENATE
COMBAT — The Senate rejected, 23 for and 72 against, an amendment requiring congressional approval before a president can send U.S. combat forces to El Salvador or Nicaragua. The measure sought to go beyond the War Powers Act, which delays congressional votes on the deployment of combat troops until at least 60 days after they have gone to war.

The amendment was offered to an appropriations bill (HJ Res 492) that would nearly double fiscal 1984 military aid to El Salvador, to a level of $126.6 million. The measure was headed for final passage and conference with the House.

Sponsor Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said "the American people do not want Ronald Reagan to send their sons to fight and die in the El Salvadorean civil war. It is not our country to win or lose."

Opponent Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said the existing War Powers Act and oversight by congressional committees give Congress "more than an adequate voice with respect to the deployment of combat forces of the U.S."

Senators voting yes favored prior congressional approval of any decision to send combat forces to El Salvador or Nicaragua.
 North Carolina senators John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted no.

CHURCHWOMEN — By a vote of 54 for and 39 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to penalize the government of El Salvador for its failure to prosecute the case of four American churchwomen who were murdered there in December, 1980.

The amendment was offered to a bill providing additional fiscal 1984 military aid to El Salvador (above). It sought to withhold 30 percent of the outlay until a verdict has been reached in the slaying of the three nuns and one Roman Catholic lay worker.

Robert Kasten, R-Wisc., who voted to kill the amendment, said Salvadorean officials "are doing their best to wind through the judicial system ... we will soon see results."

Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who sponsored the amendment, said the case typifies "the miscarriage of justice and the failure to accord basic human rights in El Salvador ..."

Senators voting yes opposed this method of resolving the case of the slain U.S. churchwomen.
 North Carolina senators East and Helms voted yes.

NICARAGUA — The Senate rejected, 30 for and 61 against, an amendment to delete $21 million earmarked for continuing the CIA-run "secret war" against the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua. The measure was offered to H Res 492 (above).

Supporter Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said that by backing guerilla actions against the Nicaraguan government the U.S. is "systematically intervening in the internal affairs of Nicaragua and is clearly violating the charter of the Organization of American States ..."

Opponent Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said the purpose of the CIA operation is not to overthrow the Sandinistas but "to let them know we will not allow them to export revolution (or) attack their neighbors ..."

 Senators voting yes were opposed to U.S. backing of anti-Sandinista guerillas.

 Senators East and Helms voted no.

OUT OF THE PAST — Dr. Donald Johanson, director of the Institute of Human Origins at Berkeley, Calif., holds up a replica of a 3-million-year-old human skull during a preview showing at the Museum of Natural History in New York. The exhibit, "Ancestors: Four Million Years of Humanity" is the most complete collection of human and pre-human fossils ever assembled. This collection has been three years in the making, with some of the most important remnants ever found of human ancestors. (AP Laserphoto)

IRA Role 'Booming'

GREENSBORO (AP) — Many North Carolinians wait until the last minute to file their income tax, and apparently many are also waiting until the bitter end to take advantage of a tax shelter.

Telephones are ringing frequently in state financial institutions with questions about Individual Retirement Accounts and North Carolina National Bank plans to stay open Saturday to help taxpayers who want to take advantage of the accounts before the Monday filing deadline.

"Statistically, most of the action takes place in March and April," said John McNair, vice chairman of Wachovia Bank in Winston-Salem.

"We have been exceedingly busy," said Kemp Reece, manager of the Greensboro Interstate Securities office. "I think every other call has been about IRAs."

Americans are expected to invest more than $30 million in IRAs for 1983. Rules allow the investment to be made up to the day the tax return is filed and still be claimed as a deduction.

Since IRAs were made available three years ago to all wage earners under the age of 70½, they have become America's favorite tax shelter. Wage earners can invest up to $2,000, or $2,250 for married couples with one income, and deduct the entire amount. If left alone until the investor is at least age 59½, earnings from the investment are not subject to tax while they accumulate.

Studies of typical IRA contributors show they keep going back each year to the same insurance agents, brokers or bankers.

Larry Wertz, senior vice president for marketing in Northwestern Bank in North Wilkesboro, said that $2,000 usually is not considered the size of investments that banks would spend much time and effort trying to attract.

But IRA buyers "tend to come back next year and that's why it is so important to get them this year," he said. "A few years down the road, they'll be substantial customers."

Palestinian Aid Said Frustrated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says Israel has frustrated the delivery of U.S. aid intended for Palestinian economic projects on the occupied West Bank and Gaza.

Israel receives more American aid than any other nation — an estimated $2.6 billion in fiscal 1984. By contrast, U.S. aid for the occupied territories is set at about $8.5 million for 1984.

The State Department declined direct comment on an independent Israeli study last week saying the Israelis have directed millions of dollars away from programs that would strengthen the Palestinian economy in the West Bank and Gaza, which have been occupied by Israel since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

But in a written response to reporters' inquiries, the State Department said it had hoped the aid would contribute to economic development.

"In general terms, we share the concern that Israel has not been forthcoming in allowing such activities to go forward," the department said. It urged Israel to be "more flexible in permitting them (the Palestinians) to undertake economic activity, at their own initiative, to develop local industry."

Major Provisions Of Tax Measure Approved By The House Wednesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are major provisions of tax legislation approved Wednesday by the House of Representatives. The measure would raise revenues by $49 billion Sept. 30, 1987.

TELEPHONES: The 3 percent excise tax on local and long distance service, due to expire after 1985, would be extended through 1987.

CIGARETTES: The federal tax of 16 cents per pack, scheduled to drop to 8 cents after Sept. 30, 1985, would drop only to 12 cents.

LIQUOR: The tax on liquor, now $10.50 per proof gallon, would rise to $14.25. That would mean a boost of 75 cents per fifth of 100-proof liquor and 60 cents a fifth of 86-proof. Beer and wine would not be affected.

INTEREST: The bill would repeal a new provision that, starting in 1985, would allow a taxpayer to avoid taxation on up to $450 of interest earned each year ($900 for a couple filing a joint return) after subtracting interest paid for any purpose except business or a home mortgage.

INCOME AVERAGING: Couples and individuals whose income rises markedly from one year to the next may cut their taxes by averaging current earnings against those of the four preceding years. Averaging is permitted if current income is more than 120 percent of the four-year figure. The bill limits use of averaging by raising the threshold to 140 percent and restricting the averaging period to three years.

FRINGE BENEFITS: The bill would recognize as tax-exempt most fringe benefits now provided workers by employers, including merchandise discounts, parking and the like. Generally, any new benefits created in the future would be subject to tax. This provision would end a 6-year-old moratorium that has banned the IRS from issuing regulations on what benefits are taxable. That moratorium has not applied — and the bill would not apply — to a dozen specific benefits already provided by law, including employer-financed health insurance.

RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS: A one-earner couple would be allowed to set aside up to $4,000 a year — compared to $2,250 under current law — in Individual Retirement Accounts, but the additional $1,750 would be taxed at the time it is deposited. Interest would not be taxed until it is withdrawn at age 59½ or later. Present law exempts the $2,250 and the interest until withdrawal. The change would put a one-earner couple in the same IRA position as a two-earner couple.

TAX SHELTERS: The bill has provisions recommended by the Reagan administration that are designed to halt what the IRS views as abusive tax shelters, especially involving partnership arrangements and the selective allocation of expenses and losses among partners in a shelter transaction. Promoters of shelters would have to register their deals with the IRS and each deal would be assigned a number which investors would have to list on their tax returns.

LEASING: A scheduled liberalization of tax benefits available to unprofitable businesses that lease, rather than purchase equipment, would be delayed. Tax benefits associated with arrangements under which colleges and other nonprofit organizations sell their property to taxable investors and then lease it back would be curtailed.

FOREIGN EARNINGS: The bill would freeze at $80,000 the annual amount an individual may earn abroad without paying U.S. taxes.

BUSINESS PROPERTY: It would freeze at $5,000 the amount of business property, such as machinery, that may be fully deducted in the year it is purchased. It disallows any depreciation or investment credit on the value above $21,000 of a car bought for business.

BONDS: The measure renews the tax exemption, which expired last year, for bonds issued by state and local governments to subsidize mortgages for first-time homebuyers. It imposes new restrictions on the use of tax-free industrial development bonds for such private purposes as building retail stores.

LIFE INSURANCE: Laws affecting taxation of the life insurance industry would be totally overhauled; the changes would cost the treasury as much as $2 billion over the 1984-87 period.

HIGHWAY TAXES: The tax on diesel fuel would be raised from 9 cents a gallon to 14.5 cents. Owners of diesel-powered cars could apply for a rebate on the additional 4.5 cents. Trucks weighing less than 55,000 pounds would be exempt from highway-use taxes. The heaviest trucks would be taxed $500 a year, compared with a maximum tax under current law that is due to rise to $1,900 in 1988.

Smuggler Convicted

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — A federal jury has convicted a 23-year-old Asheville, N.C., man of smuggling $100 million worth cocaine into southeast Oklahoma.

Alan Kaye was accused of importing the cocaine from Colombia on July 11, 1982. The drugs were unloaded from an airplane at the Tahihina Municipal Airport, then transported to the Miami area for nationwide distribution, authorities charged.

It took the jury a little more than four hours Wednesday to find Kaye guilty of the smuggling charge. He was found not guilty of three related drug charges.

After a short hearing following the verdict, U.S. District Judge Frank Seay ruled Kaye could remain free on a $200,000 bond, pending an expected appeal of his conviction.

Seay did not set a date for Kaye's sentencing.

Kaye's conviction was the seventh in a yearlong federal investigation into an international drug smuggling operation that operated between South America, Oklahoma and Florida.

Five people have pleaded guilty to taking part in a July 1983 effort to smuggle 464 pounds of cocaine into Oklahoma.

The FBI seized the drugs and arrested four men near the Tahihina airport shortly after a plane landed with the drugs. Those four, and two others, are serving five-to-25-year prison sentences for their part in the operation.

Gorilla Imports Are Forbidden

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Fish and Wildlife Service has denied three zoos permission to import gorillas from a French couple who are raising them in Cameroon.

The service said such a deal would encourage trade in the endangered species.

Zoos in Columbus, Ohio, Memphis, Tenn. and Asheboro, N.C. had sought permission to import two male and five female adolescent lowland gorillas from Robert Roy and his wife, a French couple who live in a back-country trading post in Sangmelima, Cameroon.

The lowland gorilla, found only in Africa, requires an import permit because it is on the endangered species list and also is protected by the 70-nation Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species. It is a frequent target of poachers who kill it for meat and farmers who kill it to protect crops.

About 10,000 are believed to exist, some 1,500 in Cameroon. Only 400 of a related species, the mountain gorilla, are believed to be still alive in all of Africa.

In letters to lawyers for the three zoos, the Fish and Wildlife Service said: "The best alternative for the conservation of the species as a whole is to deny permission to import these animals, although the owner might ship them to a zoo in some other country less concerned about conserving gorillas."

Seven Ghost Stories Loom

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Why would Garvin want to stay in that dark, dank stone farmhouse in the first place ... with all those wacky people?
That's the trouble with a good ghost story: it's a license to ask questions that don't have answers.

Garvin, played by John Duttine, moves in with Falshaw and his deranged wife in "The Intercessor," the second show, April 19, in "Shades of Darkness" on public television's "Mystery!"

The series of seven, hour-long productions from Britain's Granada TV premieres tonight with Eileen Atkins in "Bewitched," adapted from a short story by Edith Wharton. It's a fairly sluggish start, and the pace quickens with Garvin and the second installment, drawn from a story by May Sinclair.

Garvin is a writer who can't work with children around (remember Duttine as the sympathetic schoolmaster in "To Serve Them All My Days" on "Masterpiece Theater" last season?) "They make such noise," he complains.

Falshaw assures him there are no kids in his house, and Garvin takes the wretched man's word for it ... until one night, when he hears a child's mournful cry from a locked upstairs room.

There's more, but first a word or two about tonight's story.

Patricia Rutledge (Miss Atkins) summons the Rev. Hibben, Owen Bosworth and Sylvester Brand to her isolated country house. The minister and Bosworth meet along the way, and Hibben (Alfred Burke) asks his companion (Gareth Thomas) if he knows the woman well.

"Not Mrs. Rutledge," Bosworth says. "She always seems strange ... distant ..."

"Strange, yes," Hibben responds. "But God-fearing. I hope there's not trouble ..."

But there is, of course. Mrs. Rutledge tells the incredulous party that she has seen her husband, Saul (Alfred Lynch), consorting with Brand's daughter, Leona, who is dead and buried.

Saul arrives, and admits he's seen Leona, whom he once intended to marry. Brand wants proof, and the minister tries to talk him out of his story: "You knew, or thought you knew, what you were seeing," Hibben says. "Think of what you're saying. It's against our religion."

The three men decide to see for themselves, and what happens inside the tiny hut on the beach is unclear and not particularly convincing.

Back at the Falshaw place, in "The Intercessor," Garvin finally sees the crying child, little Effy, who died three years ago. One night, she enters his room and crawls into bed with him.

Neither Falshaw nor his wife, nor Falshaw's orphaned niece, Rachel, have seen the ghost, though the farmer admits he's heard stories and is "afear'd." "She knows I'm not afraid," Garvin says, explaining Effy's attraction to him.

Ultimately, Garvin sees something in the house that does frighten him, and he hurries to town to talk with Dr. Mackinnon (Peter Hughes), who sent him to the Falshaws in the first place.

He tells Mackinnon about seeing Effy.

"Did you find the experience frightening?" the doctor asks.

"No," Garvin replies. "I was not frightened by the little girl. One cannot be frightened by innocence."

"But," he continues, "I was frightened by what lies beyond all this. There is a quality in that house, and in that family, a sense of evil and guilt, and corruption, if that is not too strong a word."

"No, Mr. Garvin," Mackinnon says, "that is not too strong a word."

"The Intercessor" is a genuinely entertaining story, rooted in aberrant psychology. Yet, why would Garvin ...?

"Shades of Darkness" includes t'rggstrler by Miss Wharton, an American novelist who died in 1937: "Bewitched," "The Lady's Maid's Bell" (May 3) and "Afterward" (May 10).

Other stories in the series include "Seaton's Aunt," by Walter de la Mare (April 26), "The Maze," by C.H.B. Kitchin (May 17), and "Feet Foremost," by L.P. Hartley (May 24).

Vincent Price, host of "Mystery!" the past two seasons, deserves special mention for the cocked-eyebrow style with which he handles his continuing role.

"In the 1930s," Price says in a typically witty observation, "Wharton said that the ghost instinct in modern man was sadly and gradually being atrophied by those enemies of the imagination, the wireless and the cinema."

"Goodness knows," he says, "how she would have evaluated the potential erosive effect on the imagination by television."

Another Bombing Death In Ulster War

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A bomb detonated today outside a Roman Catholic home, killing a woman and a policeman she had called to examine the device, police said.

The woman's husband suffered minor injuries and her son and two other policemen were treated for shock, a spokesman for the Royal Ulster Constabulary police force said.

There was no claim of responsibility for the bombing, but police said they assumed it was done by Protestant extremists.

The victims were identified as officer Michael Dawson, 23, and Margaret White, 51, a staunch supporter of the Irish Republican Army movement to unite predominantly Protestant Northern Ireland with the mostly Roman Catholic Irish Republic to the south.

Mrs. White summoned police to her home early today after she noticed a red shopping bag under her front window, police said. Dawson was chatting with her at the front door when the bomb — about 15 pounds of explosives — went off.

Neighbors and friends said Mrs. White, a mother of eight, was well known for her nationalist views. But a spokesman for Sinn Fein, legal political arm of the outlawed IRA, said as far as he knew she had no connection with either organization.

Last April, a Protestant extremist, David Maitland, placed a bomb at the back door of the White house but accidentally kicked the device, detonating it and blowing off his leg.

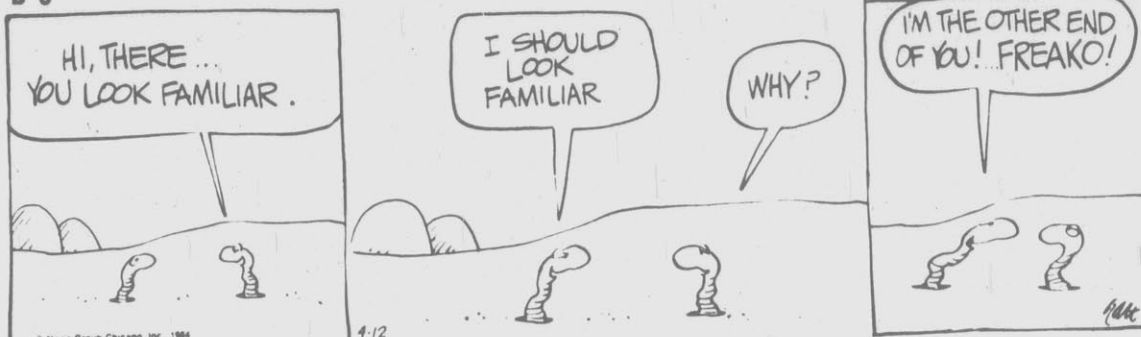

The White home, in predominantly Protestant south Belfast, is less than a mile from the home of Belfast magistrate Tom Travers, a Catholic, who was critically injured Sunday by IRA gunmen in an ambush that killed his 22-year-old daughter Mary.

Today's deaths brought the toll in Northern Ireland to 2,360 since sectarian violence between the Protestant majority and Roman Catholic minority flared in 1969. The toll so far this year is 18.

Efforts are underway to save starving giant pandas. Every 45-50 years, the panda's main food supply — bamboo — flowers and dies. Zoo pandas will eat 40 pounds of bamboo daily. Scientists do not agree on what pandas are. Some place them with bears, others with raccoons. Some say they are a separate family. There may be fewer than 1,000 giant pandas left in the wild. At birth, a giant panda is smaller than a mouse and weighs 4 ounces.

Radio Network Will Carry 4 Debates By Candidates

By The Associated Press

Republican and Democratic candidates for governor and lieutenant governor will have a chance to debate prior to the May 8 primary.

The radio debates will begin at 9 a.m. April 14 with a debate between Republican gubernatorial candidates. At 1 p.m. April 14, the Republican lieutenant governor candidates will debate. The state chapter of the League of Women Voters will sponsor those debates.

The state Cable Television

Association will sponsor a debate among Democratic gubernatorial candidates April 19 at 9 p.m., and the state Association of Broadcasters will sponsor a debate for both Democratic and Republican gubernatorial candidates April 28 at 7 p.m.

The North Carolina News Network will air the series of debates.

In other political news, Attorney General and Democratic gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten said Wednesday that the state is moving to make restitution to crime victims a condition of parole for criminals.

Edmisten, speaking at the founding meeting of the Southeastern CrimeStoppers Association in Durham, said that crime victims are not treated fairly under present laws.

"That has been the greatest failure of the American criminal justice system that we've had," Edmisten said. "We have persisted in treating the victims of crime as fourth-class citizens. Our whole system, when you think about it, is geared toward doing something for those who commit crimes."

Edmisten said criminals should have to guarantee restitution before they can be paroled from prison. He said restitution was often a requirement in probation cases, but not in parole.

Democratic presidential hopeful Jesse Jackson was hailed by supporters as a source of pride and hope for black Americans during the opening of his western North Carolina campaign headquarters.

Scanning the audience of about 60 black and white supporters, Jackson organizer Leo Ferguson said "I see a 'rainbow coalition,' which is a phrase often used by Jackson.

"This is the first time in American history that a (descendant of a) slave can enter the White House," Ferguson said.

Ferguson said Jackson will camaign in Asheville between May 4 and 6.

Rep. Jim Martin said Wednesday that he would support "fiscally responsible" legislation to cut federal spending by more than $100 billion over the next three years.

Martin, a Republican candidate for governor, said Congress should enact the spending cuts before the summer recess. He called upon the body to "Go to the medicine cabinet and take a big dose of political courage."

Martin also said the legislation included his amendment to reduce the federal cigarette tax from 16 to 12 cents.

The North Carolina League of Conservation Voters has endorsed both Eddie Knox and Tom Gilmore for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Bill Holman, president of the league, said the board was evenly split between Knox and Gilmore, so the group decided to endorse both candidates.

Democratic lieutenant governor candidate Bob Jordan Wednesday announced the formation of a statewide Committee of Educators for Jordan.

Ruth Watkins of Rockingham, former president of the North Carolina Association of Educators, will chair the committee of more than 100 members, Jordan said.

At a news conference Wednesday, Jordan said he would work to improve the salaries of all educators, and would support an across-the-board pay hike, removal of the freeze on the merit pay system and other benefits that would increase current salaries by about 15 percent.
