Klansmen And Nazis Acquitted Of Civil Rights Violations

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Grand Dragon Virgil Griffin thrust two thumbs in the air and said he'd attend a Ku Klux Klan rally after he and eight other Klansmen and Nazis were acquitted of civil rights violations in a 1979 gunfight that left five anti-Klan demonstrators dead.

"Man, I think I died and went to heaven," said Griffin, who said he would celebrate with "three beers tonight ... and a Klan rally next Saturday night in Louisburg."

An all-white jury concluded Sunday that the defendants did not plot to provoke the violence that erupted in a Greensboro housing project after a caravan of Klansmen and Nazis challenged participants in a "Death to the Klan" rally sponsored by the Communist Workers Party.

Instead, the jury evidently concluded that the CWP provoked the violence, defense attorney Thomas Keith said after the federal jury handed down 25 "not guildy" verdicts in the 14-week civil rights conspiracy trial.

Asked what was the major factor in the jury's decision, Keith said: "Trying them twice and the fact that we portrayed the communists as aggressors who were trying to capitalize on a situation and cause a riot."

Lawyers for the demonstrators' widows, however, said the government had given the jury too narrow a definition of conspiracy.

"I'm shocked and outraged," said a weeping Dale Sampson, wife of slain demonstrator William Sampson. "The overwhelming evidence for over four years was that they should have been found guilty. This just gives the go-ahead for Klansmen and Nazis to kill people — black people and anyone who's an activist."

Prosecutors declined to comment on the reason for the acquittals, and jurors were led out of the court building and could not be reached.

Defendants, relatives and attorneys laughed, cried and embraced when the verdicts were read after 23 hours of jury deliberations Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The other defendants were ex-Klansman and former Greensboro police informant Edward W. Dawson, Klansman David Wayne Matthews, ex-Nazi Roland Wayne Wood, ex-Klansman Jerry Paul Smith, ex-Nazi Jack Wilson Fowler Jr., ex-Klansman Roy C. Toney, ex-Klansman Coleman B. Pridmore and ex-Nazi Raeford Milano Caudle.

Sampson, Dr. James Waller, Cesar Cauce, Dr. Michael Nathan and Sandra Smith, all CWP members, were shot to death and six supporters wounded in the CWP "Death to the Klan" rally in Greensboro on Nov. 3, 1979. One Klansman was wounded.

Six Klansmen and Nazis were found innocent of murder in a 1980 state trial. The nine current and former Klansmen and Nazis, including five of the original defendants, were indicted last year on federal civil rights charges after civil rights and church groups blasted the acquittals.

Prosecutors contended that the nine men, fired by racist fervor, plotted to provoke a fight at the rally to disrupt it because it was integrated. Defense lawyers said the defendants went to the rally only for a peaceful protest against communism and were attacked.

"What a relief," said Dawson. "I was down bad, I'm coming up now."

"Praise the Lord," said Fowler.

"Thank God for honest people," said Matthews as he folded an American flag in a room where the defendants had waited out the verdict. "They saw us through all this."

"I feel terrible," said Ms. Sampson.

"The man who murdered my husband is now walking the streets."

She said the acquittals would make survivors "fight even harder" on their $48 million civil suit against the defendants, the FBI and Greensboro police. The Greensboro

More Tornadoes In Eastern N. Carolina

By The Associated Press

For two straight days, tornadoes whipped through eastern North Carolina counties, causing property damage but no injuries, say authorities in the affected counties.

Tornadoes touched down in Washington and Beaufort counties Sunday afternoon, and a twister hit Scotland County early Saturday evening.

Less than a month ago, the state was ravaged by a savage series of storms that left 44 people dead.

One tornado touched down near Plymouth in Washington County and a second twister hit about six miles north of Washington in Beaufort County, authorities in the two counties said.

"(Cape) Hatteras radar was picking up tornado signals in that area," said Larry Datilo, a meteorologist technician for the National Weather Service in Raleigh.

"It's more than a possibility it was a tornado," he added.

Hal Walker, the coordinator for emergency management for 15 counties, said the twister came down about 4:45 p.m. "once, possibly twice."

He said that there were a number of visual sightings reported in Beaufort County and estimated damage at "roughly" $100,000.

"A lot of chicken houses and several outbuildings are gone," Walker said in a telephone interview.

Two houses were damaged, including one which had a tree fall through the roof, he said. A woman at home in that house said she heard a "whistling noise (which) passed real fast," Beaufort County Sheriff's Deputy Kenny Waters said.

The unidentified woman was "scared but not injured," Waters said.

Meanwhile, a twister came down about 5:30 p.m. some eight miles south of Plymouth, ripping off at least one house, Sheriff's Deputy Tim Davenport said in a telephone interview.

"There were some other (tornadoes) sighted in the Creswell area, but no damage was reported down there except some trees down," Davenport said in a telephone interview.

Saturday, a tornado touched down in Scotland County, destroying a mobile home and damaging several houses near the same path as a string of tornadoes that hit the state on March 28, authorities said.

Scotland County Deputy Audie Woodward said he was also involved in the series of tornadoes that swept through the state March 28 and his mobile home was one of the casualties.

"My wife and I had to dive in a ditch," he said. "I hope I never see another tornado."

Trooper G.M. Webb said he was at the scene shortly after the tornado hit.

"One mobile home was totaled and power lines and trees were down," he said. "Roofs and porches on houses were damaged."

He said the tornado appeared to touch down "twice...within a half-mile area."

Moynihan Resigns Committee Role In Protest Move

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan says resigning as vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee is "the most emphatic way" to protest what he calls an administration failure to brief the panel on U.S. involvement in the mining of Nicaraguan harbors.

"I'm telling you, I resign," the New York Democrat said Sunday in an interview on ABC News' "This Week With David Brinkley."

Moynihan later said in a statement that resigning the position was "the most emphatic way I can express my view that the Senate committee was not properly briefed on the mining of Nicaraguan harbors with American mines from an American ship under American command."

"If this action was important enough for the president to have approved it in February, it was important enough for the committee to have been informed in February," Moynihan said in the statement issued by his office. An aide, who asked to remain anonymous, said Moynihan would remain on the committee, although not as vice chairman.

Moynihan announced his resignation on the interview program. He also said that if the administration had briefed the Intelligence Committee on the matter, the panel would not have approved the harbor mining.

"We tried so hard to insist that what we did were things that could be defensible under law, particularly under the charter of the Organization of American States," Moynihan said.

Another Intelligence Committee member, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said on the Brinkley show that senators were told of the action but not at length. ABC News reported the mining was described in 27 words as part of two hours of testimony on CIA activities.

Leahy said a number of senators knew of the mining before they voted 79 to 16 early this month to spend $21 million on covert military aid to Nicaraguan rebels. He said many of the same senators voted last week 84 to 12 to prohibit the mining operations. He said some "were solely influenced by public opinion" after the mining was disclosed in the news media.

Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, also on the show, said the mining operation was legal under the U.N. charter as a joint defense by El Salvador and the United States against Nicaraguan aggression.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick said the controversy evidently stemmed from the impact of U.S. efforts on the flow of arms to Salvadoran guerrillas.

Deadline For Filing

Taxpayers were given an extra 24 hours by the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and the N.C. Department of Revenue to file their 1983 income tax returns this year because April 15 came on Sunday.

But taxpayers who waited until today to mail their returns should mail them at the city's main post office on Second Street by 6:15 p.m. in order to have them postmarked by the midnight deadline.

"We're not expanding our hours," Postmaster Lloyd Mills said, pointing out that the last collection from boxes at the main post office is at 6:15 p.m.

However, there is still hope for those who've failed to fill out their tax returns.

Persons needing an extension may file form number 4868 with the IRS (it also must be postmarked by midnight tonight) and receive an extension until midnight August 16.

IRS officials said the extension as "automatic" unless a taxpayer owes "back taxes or has a history" of problems.

"There's not ample time for approval" for an extension from the N.C. revenue department, a spokesman said. But, if a parson has filed for a federal extension, simply "attach a copy of the federal application to your state tax return," and the return will be treated as being filed on time.

WALLET, MONEY RETURNED

Last Thursday somewhere between Cotanche and Thirteenth streets, I dropped my wallet containing cash and credit cards. As a self-supporting college student, this loss represented a serious financial setback. I searched frantically in the dark and even returned at sunrise to try to find it. I reported the loss to the Greenville Police Department, feeling hopeless. Who would return a wallet with over $60 in it? Kenneth Pollard, that's who — a resident at the REAL Crisis Intervention Inc. He found my wallet and in the true sense of his helping profession alerted the police, who in their typical efficiency contacted me immediately. I was lucky and I believe we are all lucky to have two such fine public service organizations in our community — REAL Crisis Intervention and the Greenville Police Department. K.B.

James-Underwood Vows Solemnized

Corinne Lilley Underwood and John Robert James were united in marriage Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at the home of the bride. The Rev. William Byrum performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilliam Wilson Underwood of Hertford. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Milton James Sr. of Bethel.

Wedding music was provided by Caroline Wright, pianist, and Billy Wooten sang special arrangements of "Follow Me," and "Gentle Shepherd."

The bride wore a formal gown of ivory satin and organza with alencon lace, featuring a fitted bodice with Victorian neckline and sheer yoke, accented with seed pearls. The leg-o-mutton sleeves were adorned with scattered appliques of alencon lace. The organza skirt fell from the waistline to a scalloped satin border and ruffled hemline. For her headpiece, the bride chose a silk floral wreath attached to a chapel length train of French illusion.

Maid of honor was Bonnie Underwood, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Hugh Milton James Jr. of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, Betty Carol Broughton and Ann Ward, both of Hertford.

The maid of honor wore a matinee-length gown of antique pink chiffon which featured a blouson bodice designed with vertical tucks, ivory lace and a Victorian neckline. The full bishop sleeves of tucked chiffon were trimmed with lace cufs. The full gathered skirt of chiffon was accented with ribbon sash.

Bridesmaids wore identical dresses and carried hand bouquets of baby's breath, daises and roses.

Sarah Leigh James, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl and wore an antique pink chiffon dress similar to the bridesmaids.

The best man was the bridegroom's father. The groomsmen were James Underwood, brother of the bride, Hugh Milton James Jr., brother of the bridegroom, and Ivey Allen.

MRS. JAMES

The mother of the bride chose an aqua chiffon matinee-length dress with boat neck and draped back. The bridegroom's mother chose a mauve matinee-length dress of lace over qiana.

The reception followed immediately after the ceremony.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bridegroom's parents entertained the wedding party at a rehearsal dinner on Saturday evening.

At the turn of the century, the average life expectancy was 47.3 years. A child born today, however, can expect to live 74.5 years, on the average.

Dear Abby

After Ingesting Lye, Michael Can Swallow

DEAR READERS: This letter appeared in my column on July 28, 1975:

DEAR ABBY: I am a physician. About 72 hours ago, a previously healthy, beautiful, 16-month-old child was brought to our department with obvious burns around his lips and mouth.

Only a few hours before, while visiting his grandparents, he discovered a bottle of lye and ingested only one mouthful. Fourteen doctors and dozens of nurses and operating personnel have been involved in the three operations that this child has already undergone.

The boy is now in our intensive-care unit, his eyes held shut with plastic tape, his breathing controlled by a machine and his life supported by tubes placed in his neck, chest, abdomen, penis, arms and legs. All of his esophagus and most of his stomach were destroyed by the lye and had to be surgically removed. If he lives, he will have to be fed through a hole in his abdomen for months.

Abby, please ask your readers to inspect their kitchens, bathrooms, basements and garages and to place all dangerous chemicals outside the reach of small children. And ask them to pass the word on to their friends and neighbors who may not have children but who occasionally have young visitors.

This type of needless suffering and death to small chidlren can be stopped today without spending one penny for research or donations.

I hope you will consider this worthy of your column, which is probably read by more people than any other.

ARNOLD E. KATZ, M.D., IOWA CITY, IOWA

DEAR DR. KATZ : Worthy? If only one letter makes my column today, this will be it.

Readers, please place all detergents, bleaches, cleaning fluid, paint, polish, rat poison, drain cleaner and pills (including aspirin and iodine) under lock and key today!

And today I received this one:

DEAR ABBY: Do you remember the letter you printed in 1975 about a 16-mont-old boy who had swallowed a mouthful of lye? Dr. Arnold E. Katz sent it to you hoping you would publish it as a warning to all who may have a child in their care.

Well, the boy's name is Michael, and I am his mother. I wrote to you a year later to tell you that our son had survived but we were still facing a long hard battle.

Michael is 10 years old now, and he's had so many operations we've almost lost count. He's doing fourth-grade work but had to be taught at home.

On Jan. 10, Michael was in surgery again for 10 hours. Dr. William Panje and his team of doctors at the University Hospital in Iowa City did a super job. Eight days later my husband and I brought Michael home. No one knew if the operation would be successful, but we were all hoping. You see, since his accident, Michael had been unable to swallow. He had to be fed through a tube in his stomach.

On Feb. 27, Michael took a gulp of soda pop, and it actually went down his throat and into his stomach!

He said, "Mom, it's gone! It's gone!" I told him to take a smaller sip to see if he could swallow it again, and sure enough he could.

It's been a long 8 1/2 years, Abby, but as of today Michael is actually eating and swallowing food. We can hardly believe it.

The tube through which he had been fed was removed from his stomach yesterday, and I wanted you to be one of the first to know that our son is normal again! This fall he will be able to ride the bus and go to school for the first time in his life.

I am enclosing a picture of Michael. Thank you for caring, Abby.

BETTY (MRS. EUGENE) STRIEGEL, LISBON, IOWA

DEAR MRS. STRIEGEL: Thank you from the bottom of my heart for wanting to share your joy with me. I know that my readers will rejoice with me on learning the wonderful news.

How I wish I could publish Michael's picture. His large blue eyes, pink cheeks and warm smile reveal an exceptionally beautiful and courageous child. May he and his family know only good fortune from this day on.

New Members Are Inducted

The Junior Woman's Club of Greenville recently inducted Carla Suitt and Jan Tysinger as new members.

A shower for the Children's Home Society was held by the Home Life Department. Jackie Carson announced that invitations for the Cystic Fibrosis Make Believe Tea are ready.

Gayle Sterken was recognized and congratulated for teacher of the year at South Edgecombe Middle School. Jane Gurganus, president, was presented the Juanita Bryant Citizenship Award. Nominees for the Outstanding Young Women of America are Lydia Hayes, Sandra Garner, Kathy Kazior and Gayle Sterken.

The annual garage sale will be held May 5 starting at 8 a.m. at the Women's Club. For information or donations contact Lydia Hayes at 758-4083.

Linda Barnes, Mary Vojtecky, Beth Murphy and Debbie Stewart were meeting hostesses.

Between 1959 and 1970, the death rate among young children declined by 53 percent.

Bridge Winners Announced

Mr. and Mrs. George Martin were first place winners in the Wednesday morning game played at Planters Bank. Their percentage was .642 percent. Others winning were Mrs. John McConney and Mrs. Everett Pittman; tied for third were Mrs. David Fraade and Mrs. Paul Eck with Mrs. Lib LeConte and Emma B. Warren.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.PA

WHY DIFFERENT FEES FOR FILLINGS?

Why do fillings vary in cost from dentist to dentist or even the same dentist? The answer is simple. Like snowflakes and fingerprints - no two fillings are alike.

The reason for making a filling is to remove and replace diseased or decayed tooth's crown structure. The crown, of course, is roughly a cube with five surfaces, a top and four sides.

Decay causes cavities, and it can strike any of these five surfaces. If the decay afflicts a single surface, the filling is called a one-surface restoration. If it affects several surfaces, we often join cavities by drilling. The result is a multiple (two-three-or-even-a-four-) surface filling. Usually, the amount you pay for a filling depends on the number of surfaces affected. Sometimes decay may stretch to an adjacent tooth in which case a filling may well involve the preparation of more than one tooth.

Fees for fillings, besides depending on the number of surfaces involved, are generally based also on the complexity of the cavity, its depth, the type of filling material used, and above all, the time required to complete the procedure.

Couple Marries In Ceremony On Sunday

St. Peter's Catholic Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Hilda Darlese Darden and Robert Stanley Pozner Sunday afternoon at 2:30. The Rev. Jerry Sherba and Rabbi Robert Shafran performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. J.L. Darden of Route 6, Dunn, and Mr. and Mrs. George S. Pozner of Asheville.

The couple was given in marriage by their parents. Belva Smith of Fayetteville, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Marcia Shayne Pozner, sister of the bridegroom of Miami, Fla., and Mary Sue Keefe of Fayetteville, sister of the bride.

The brother of the bridegroom, Mark Pozner, of Atlanta, Ga., was best man and ushers included Richard Darden of Maxton and Joseph R. Darden of Athens, Ga., brothers of the bride.

Mark Gansor of Greenville provided a program of organ music.

The bride wore a Victorian style floor length gown of white acetate taffeta and polyester lace with a white taffeta cummerbund accented by an Israeli hand-carved cameo brooch, a gift of the mother of the bridegroom. She wore a halo of white silk flowers with a fingertip nylon veil and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses, white fuji poms, greenery with baby's breath and white satin streamers.

The honor attendant wore a white blouse of similar Victorian style and blue taffeta floor length skirt accented by a pink taffeta cummerbund. She carried an arm cluster of a single pink rose with greenery and baby's breath.

The bridesmaids were dressed identically.

A reception was held after the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. Assisting in serving were aunts of the bride, Mrs. Radon Stancil of Dunn and Mrs. Anthony Godwin of Benson. Mrs. Lawrence Jernigan of Dunn presided at the guest register and Mrs. W.C. Strickland of Dunn said goodbyes. Both are aunts of the bride.

MRS. POZNER

Piano music was presented by Vivian Caughron of Greenville.

The couple will live in Gainesville, Fla.

The bride is a graduate of Sampson Community College and Hobbton High School.

She is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital in the department of laboratory medicine. The bridegroom will graduate in May from the East Carolina University School of Medicine and will enter residency in Gainesville, Fla. He is a graduate of Duke University and Western Carolina University.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Knit tops are the big news item in the spring and summer fashion story and this cap-sleeve shell is a real winner. It is designed to be made with double strands of variegated acrylic yarn with the look and feel of silky cotton.

Fascinating tweeds (no two exactly alike) are formed with the double strands. Best of all, the shell works up quickly with a gauge of 4 stitches per inch. Easy-to-follow directions are written for sizes 10 through 18.

To obtain directions for making the Tweed Shell, send your request for Leaflet No. KL-0415 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, (The Daily Reflector), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. K-0415 by sending a check or money order for $14.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and Luster Sheen yarn in your choice of the following tweed combinations: lullaby (pastel yellow, blue, pink), marshmelon (tangerine with light and medium beige) or misty (soft lilac, pale green and dark beige). Be sure to specify your choice of color.

Dear Pat: I was particularly interested in your column several weeks ago concerning one-row-repeat patterns suitable for scarves. I am now making the third of eight scarves for gifts next Christmas using a pattern stitch I discovered quite by mistake. I was trying to work out another pattern, got it all wrong and the following pattern was the result.

It is worked on a multiple of 3 stitches plus 1 and is ridiculously simple. Knit 1 in the back of next stitch, yarnover, knit 2 together. Repeat these three steps over and over across the row, knitting the final stitch of each row plain.

Worked in a soft yarn, this makes a lovely fabric with a twilled effect. I am using a medium-weight, inexpensive yarn with size 4 needles and the result is very pleasing.

Also, I wish you would give us a column sometime on the subject of choosing yarns — especially synthetic vs. natural fibers. In addition to my Christmas projects, I am making six Aran afghans for six nieces (three down and three to go) and I am using an off-white synthetic yarn.

I have used an assortment of authentic Aran patterns and I think these afghans are handsome indeed. My thought in choosing this yarn was that I want these gifts to be used and enjoyed, and in my mind, that is most likely if they can be tossed in the washer and dryer.

But some of my knitting friends are having heart attacks because I am using a synthetic yarn. Apparently it is gross heresy to knit these patterns unless you use imported Irish wool. They say I am investing my time and money in worthless junk. I would like your opinion. Thank you. — Sue S., Seattle

You are a busy gal, Sue, and I take my hat off to you for sharing your talents with friends and relatives, and for sharing your "mistake stitch" pattern with us. There is not enough space left today to do justice to your question, so I'll just hit the high spots and cover the subject more fully in a later column.

Pure wool is an elegant choice for any afghan, with a softness seldom found in synthetic products. But the easy care properties of synthetics are definitely a plus. Today, wool is much more expensive, but when the synthetics were first introduced, there was not a great difference in the cost of one over the other. So in the beginning, economy was not the primary reason for choosing synthetics — it was the easy washability that appealed to most people.

There are many different levels of quality among the synthetic yarns and I will admit that some of the "bargain" brands often don't measure up to high quality standards, but I think your friends may be guilty of a bit of snobbery when they refer to your yarn choice as "worthless junk."

I'll welcome comments from readers to be included in future columns on this subject.

CAP-SLEEVE SHELL...is knitted with double stands of variegated acrylic yarn to give it the look of tweed and the feel of cotton.

Thank You!

We would like to express our heartfelt love and thanks to all who came to our rescue during the recent tornado. Words can only express a small part of our deep appreciation for your acts of kindness too numerous to list.

Greatfully,
Kirby, Evonne, Tony and Christy Boyd

TEATIME FARE

Vermont Bars & Tea

VERMONT BARS

Good version of a favorite cookie.

- Two 8-ounce packages cream cheese, cut up or softened
- 2 large eggs
- 1 tablespoon milk
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- ¼-pound stick plus 2 tablespoons butter
- 1 cup packed light brown sugar
- 2 cups well-stirred all-purpose flour
- 1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts

In a medium bowl beat together cream cheese, eggs, milk, lemon juice and vanilla until blended; reserve. In a medium saucepan melt butter; off heat stir in sugar; gradually work in flour, then nuts, using your hands if necessary. Lightly spoon enough of the flour mixture into a 1-cup dry measure to fill it; reserve. Press remainder over bottom of a 9-inch square pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until slightly browned around edges — 12 to 15 minutes; leave oven control at 350 degrees. Spread reserved cream cheese mixture over crust; spinkle with reserved flour mixture. Continue baking for 25 minutes. Cool completely and cut into bars.

Initiation Ceremony Held For Pledges

Patricia Artis, Barbara Johnson and Mildred Gwendolyn Lee were recently initiated into Iota Kappa Omega chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority after a pledge period.

The pledges originated a public service project in fulfillment of the sorority motto "Service to all mankind" during the pledge weeks. They conducted a grooming workshop with a group of pre-teens and a special feature was a lecture on oral hygiene given by Dr. Hazel Brown, dentist.

Following the formal initiation ceremony, the new members were presented potted mums from the sorority, gifts by individual members and were guests of the sorority at a dinner at the Sheraton.

The initiation ceremony was held at the home of Charlotte Smith. Jean Carter, president, conducted the meeting.

The Democratic National Committee sponsored a television program from New York in 1932. It was the first political telecast in the United States.

Easter Egg Hunt Set Saturday

Easter eggs and treasure hunts were discussed at the meeting of the Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held last week.

Janice Hopkins will have an Easter egg hunt for chapter members' children Saturday at her home. A picnic party will follow. Members and their husbands will participate in a treasure hunt social later during the evening.

Proceeds from the recent doughnut sale will be given to Camp Rainbow and the Epilepsy Foundation.

Candy Gunn presented the program on "Southern Speaking."

Trump Card?

Industrial-state victories have put Walter Mondale into a commanding lead -- possibly even an insurmountable lead — in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination. Last week's victory in Pennsylvania and the outcome of the New York primary a week earlier leave little breathing room for challengers Gary Hart and Jesse Jackson.

Jackson, steadily polling respectable third-place finishes in the primaries thus far, may hold the trump card yet with his "rainbow coalition" bloc of delegates. Hart, hoping for more support from the western states than he has found in the East, can only keep plodding along with the possibility that Mondale will falter.

Little is expected to change, however, between now and May 5, when the next major test comes in the Texas caucuses. Between now and then, there are only caucuses in Arizona, Utah and Missouri and primaries on May 1 in the District of Columbia and Tennessee.

The Texas caucuses will be followed by another Super Tuesday, with primaries in Ohio, Indiana, Maryland and North Carolina.

Mondale, already half-way to the delegate count needed for nomination, could wrap it up in those states — especially if he and Jackson reach any sort of agreement.

Favorable Role

A recent Newsweek magazine referred to Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole as a potential female Republican candidate for president.

It was perhaps the first time we have seen such a reference in a national news magazine, and (to us) it struck a chord of approval.

Mrs. Dole, wife of the influential and personable Sen. Robert Dole, has created an image of herself in the press and television interviews as an articulate, intelligent, talented woman in the administrative field.

Missing is the shrillness of single-issue political warfare; in its place she projects a sort of "woman for all seasons" capability, masking any possible iron in her makeup (a la Margaret Thatcher) with a smiling voice.

Newsweek did not err in casting her as one with the potential for pre-eminence on the national scene.

Tax Confusion

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans come to the annual day of reckoning with Uncle Sam amid more than the usual amount of confusion this year.

After numerous efforts at "reform" in the past decade, the national system for collecting taxes remains under siege.

The symptoms of the problem are numerous and, by most experts' diagnosis, severe. For one, there is the much-publicized federal budget deficit.

For another, even with a recent drive to crack down on deadbeats, the amount of income taxes that is legally owed but doesn't get paid keeps growing. By official calculations, it is close to $100 billion. By unofficial estimates, it is much more that that.

Tax-shelters — legitimate, abusive, or somewhere in between — continue to proliferate at a time when government policy is supposed to be encouraging investments that yield productivity gains, not tax writeoffs.

There was a 1981 tax bill, a 1982 tax bill, and a 1983 tax bill. Congress is partway through the job of producing a 1984 tax bill, and analysts are already busy trying to assess what a 1985 tax bill will probably contain.

As numerous commentators have observed, the problem is not that Americans have developed a sudden aversion to paying taxes. The typical citizen was never fond of parting with the money.

Rather, some say, it is that people have lost respect for the tax system itself, viewing it as hopelessly convoluted, unfair and impossible to enforce.

"The tax code is too complicated, has too many loopholes, is too hard to administer, and, most seriously, raises too many doubts about whether everybody is carrying his or her proper share of the tax burden," Business Week magazine declared in an editorial.

The government has been working to develop more sophisticated methods of assuring compliance with the existing rules. But it is hard to find anyone in the private sector who thinks the answer to the underlying problems lies solely in mustering up a tougher force of tax police.

Instead, many people think the country is ready to get serious about bona fide tax reform — adopting a simpler system that commands respect and is easy to comply with and enforce.

Numerous plans to make that vision a reality are already in the legislative hoppers in Washington. Much more talk doubtless will be heard about tax reform in the remainder of the current political campaign, and after the election is settled.

But as flawed as the present system may be, the politics of changing it radically still promise to be complex and difficult. One of the main reasons for the many intricacies of the tax code is that the government has chosen in the past to use tax incentives and special tax rules as instruments of social policy.

Are they really ready to eliminate, or even significantly reduce, this practice? And what about all the people who made business and investment commitments in the past based on the existence of these incentives?

Lessons For The President

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's primordial suspicion of the Soviet Union was restored during the past month when the Kremlin, clearly seeking to prevent his re-election, rejected overtures intended to lead to an election-year peace spectacular.

Most recently, the Soviets brushed aside the Reagan administration's chemical warfare ban they themselves had been requesting. But that might have been expected after what happened in mid-March to "back channel" negotiations launched by the White House to climax in a pre-election summit: The U.S. Embassy in Moscow was unable to arrange for delivery of a super-secret letter from President Reagan to Konstantin Chernenko, the new Soviet leader.

Whether or not that hurts Reagan's re-election prospects, it could backfire on the Kremlin. Intended to weaken Reagan politically, the Soviet boorishness has stuck in his craw and confirmed his ancient suspicions about the Soviets. That may make him more receptive to raising new challenges, especially to Soviet conduct in the Caribbean. He may now cast a keener eye on evidence that Moscow's arms buildup there poses a greater threat to the U.S. than generally appreciated.

Reagan's latter-day dalliance with detente now has been conditioned by unmistakable and growing evidence of Soviet hostility to his re-election. As of today, he has ruled out any new overture to Moscow, knowing that (in the word of one adviser) it would look like "crawling." To the contrary, the humiliating Soviet rebukes have moved him back to his old and assured perch of watching Moscow through skeptical, suspicious eyes.

This outcome was certainly not in the minds of Michael K. Deaver, deputy chief of staff, and others at the White House when they planned what is known there as the "back channel ploy." Their avowed goal: transformation of Reagan into the peace president.

Retired Gen. Brent Scowcroft, who happened to be going to Moscow, was picked by Reagan to deliver his letter to Chernenko. As President Ford's national security adviser, Scowcroft is well-known and respected in the Kremlin. Reagan's purpose was to set up the back channel directly with the new Soviet leader, bypassing Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. The Oval Office views Gromyko, whose power is rising in the Kremlin, as Dr. No — a man with whom the U.S. can barely do business.

The unexpected result was a slap in the face. "Scowcroft arrived in Moscow, and all the doors were shut on him," a diplomat told us. Deaver, Reagan's public relations planner, was so upset that he proposed publicizing the effort to embellish Reagan's peace image. The State Department, worried about offending Gromyko, talked him out of it.

Word leaked out anyway, an occurrence widely attributed to Deaver. But arms controllers and other critics on Capitol Hill gave Reagan no credit for making the overture. Conservative Republicans there correctly judged that Soviet humilation of the president's personal emissary would stiffen Reagan's back.

That did not immediately happen. Two weeks after Scowcroft returned and reported to the White House: Reagan unfurled his next peace gambit (much to the displeasure of the Pentagon). He proposed an anti-chemical warfare treaty of the kind that the Soviet Union has noisily favored for months. Within hours, it was shot down by Moscow as a political gesture.

White House insiders confide that the president could not understand this Soviet rebuke, particularly in view of Chernenko's February speech. The Soviet leader had asked for American "deeds," not just words, and specifically mentioned a chemical warfare treaty.

That completed the re-education of Ronald Reagan. He may decide to accept the advice of his Senate allies and charge the Soviets with a series of violations of their agreements banning offensive arms in the Caribbean. Or, he may press new charges against the Russians for non-compliance of SALT and other nuclear treaties.

Whatever course he chooses, playing the peace politics so avidly pressed upon him by Mike Deaver is considerably less conceivable than it was a month ago. Reagan now knows how far apart he and the Russians stand as the American presidential campaign begins.

Politics, American-Style

When French President Francois Mitterrand returned from his visit to the United States, his cabinet was anxious to find out what he learned about the American elections.

Mitterrand said, "Alors. There is a lot of bitterness in the campaign. I was told that Mondale is a big spender, and a puppet of the large interest groups, and just another Jimmy Carter. He would make a disastrous president."

"Did President Reagan tell you that?"

"No, Gary Hart did. I was also informed that Hart was a liar, soft on defense, and although he keeps saying he has new ideas, he hasn't come up with one since he changed his name from Hartpence."

"Who told you that?"

"Mondale. Then I was told that neither Hart nor Mondale would be worth a sou as a serious presidential candidate because although they made a lot of promises, they wouldn't keep any of them."

"That's strong medicine from the right wing."

"The right wing did not say it. Jesse Jackson did."

"But don't the three men belong to the same opposition party?" a cabinet minister asked.

"Mais oui. That is what confused me. Mondale said Hart is a dirty fighter who doesn't have the truth in him. Hart told me Mondale sold out to the unions. Jackson told me it doesn't make any difference which of them was ahead because they both would have to come to him if they wanted the nomination."

"What is the main difference between Mondale and Hart?"

"You're not going to believe this but it is a question of steak," Mitterrand said.

"Le boeuf?"

"Oui. Mondale keeps asking Hart where is the boeuf, and Hart keeps holding up a book he wrote saying the boeuf is there. Mondale says Hart has no boeuf, and Hart says Mondale wouldn't recognize boeuf if he saw it."

"C'est formidable," a minister said. "What about relations with the Soviets?"

"I heard some joking about getting the Soviets back to the arms talks."

"By both Hart and Mondale?"

"No, by President Reagan. He showed me his briefing book for the 1984 campaign."

"Monsieur le President," a cabinet officer said, "are we to understand Hart and Mondale, the members of the opposition party, spend all their time attacking each other, instead of attacking Reagan?"

"Pour le moment. Perhaps after the nomination they will then attack the Republicans."

"But aren't they giving President Reagan ammunition against themselves?"

"Naturellement. President Reagan has pasted everything they said about each other in his briefing book."

"C'est cannibalisme," a minister said.

"Non. It is American politics. Once they decide who will be the candidate, Mondale and Hart will deny they ever said such terrible things about one another. But at this stage they need each other. If it wasn't for Hart, the press would pay no attention to Mondale, and without Mondale, they would ignore Hart. The Democratic Party has to produce un spectacle or the American people will go to sleep."

A cabinet minister said, "C'est incroyable, how they elect a president in Amerique. You can never choose the best man that way."

"One of the candidates told me in confidence the same thing," Mitterrand said.

"Was it Reagan, Mondale, Hart or Jackson?"

"Non. it was John Glenn."

Reasoning Of A President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyndon B. Johnson saw himself as a besieged president, misunderstood and maligned. On Lincoln's Birthday in 1968, at the Lincoln Memorial, Johnson compared his ordeal in Vietnam with Lincoln's in the Civil War.

Lincoln, he said, "heard the charges that the war was long and wrong; he saw Americans die ... he saw dissent, riot and rebellion."

But even in his bleakest days in coping with dissent, riot and rebellion, LBJ didn't go as far as Ronald Reagan did in his suggestions that Congress has a duty to hush up and go along once a president has sent troops into a dangerous place.

Reagan said at his news conference on April 4 that members of Congress "must take a responsibility" for a loss of American credibility suffered when Marines were withdrawn from Lebanon and their peacekeeping mission ended.

He said congressional dissent stimulated the terrorists who attacked Marines sleeping in their headquarters on Sunday morning, Oct. 23, killing more than 240 U.S. servicemen.

"When you're engaged in this kind of a diplomatic attempt," the president said, "and you have forces there, and there is an effort made to oust them, a debate as public as was conducted here raging with the Congress demanding — 'Oh, take our, bring our men home; take them away' — all that can do is stimulate the terrorists and urge them on to further attacks because they see a possibility of success in getting the force out which is keeping them from having their way. ... It should be understood by everyone in government that once this is committed, you are — you have rendered them ineffective when you conduct that kind of a debate in public."

Most of the congressional dissent on Lebanon that Reagan complained of occurred after, not before, the terrorist attack. Before then, Congress had given Reagan almost a free hand in Lebanon, just as it has given him most of what he wanted in military spending and in cutting taxes.

Reagan's complaint was no off-hand comment, laid down under the pressure of coming up with a quick answer to a tough question on television. Rather, it represents an administration policy.

On March 1, Secretary of State George P. Shultz told a Senate subcommittee that congressional debate on the U.S. presence in Lebanon "just totally took the rug out from under U.S. interests." He said the debate led Syria to doubt American resolve.

And the day after Reagan's news conference, an official who under the ground rules could only be identified as "a senior administration official" briefed reporters. He said a president has a responsibility to consult Congress before he jeopardizes American lives in a foreign maneuver but congressional criticism must be muted once American forces are deployed.

"Full and open debate are fine before the decision (to dispatch U.S. forces)," he said. "Full and private criticism is fine after that."

He said criticism should be restricted to private meetings with the president, letters to him and closed forums.

The next day, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes, identified the "senior administration official" at a public briefing. He was Robert McFarlane, the president's top adviser on foreign policy matters.

And the following day, Reagan made a speech at the Georgetown Center for Strategic and International Studies. He said "wavering" and "second guessing" by members of Congress prolonged the violence in Lebanon and encourages Marxists in Central America.

Strength For Today

Michaelangelo once observed that the more the marble wastes, the more the statue grows.

By way of illustration, the great sculptor saw one day in the studio of a mediocre craftsman a huge block of marble at which the inept fellow had been hacking away. Immediately Michaelangelo, the genius, saw a marvelous statue waiting to be born.

He took the mutilated block and forthwith modeled it into his famous statue of David. The people of Italy prize it so highly that they have built a beautiful section of an art gallery just to house this statue.

It is when men mix imagination and vision with any kind of human technique that the result is a work for which succeeding generations are gratedul. Just to cite a few examples, Shakespeare, Homer, Bach and Mozart have made the world their debtors. Genius is strange — and glorious. We all benefit when we become aware of it.

10 Bodies Are Found In Brooklyn Massacre

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A baker who followed a screaming neighbor to his apartment found a "massacre" of three women and seven children — all shot in the head and showing no signs of panic — while an unhurt toddler sat crying among the bodies, police said.

It was believed to be the largest mass slaying in the city's history, authorities said.

"Six of the victims, at least, were sitting in chairs," Deputy Police Commissioner Patrick Murphy said Sunday night. "There appear to be no signs of panic. There appears to be no disruption."

Murphy and other police officials said they had not established a motive for the slayings and knew of no suspects. No drugs or signs of forced entry were found, and the 10 victims remained unidentified early today.

"We don't think they were all members of the same family," said Sgt. Eddie LeSchack. "There may have been some people visiting."

Authorities described the victims as three adult women, one teen-age girl and four younger girls and two boys ranging in age from about 3 years to the early teens.

The man who discovered the bodies, described as the common-law husband of one of the victims, voluntarily came to police headquarters for questioning early today but was not considered a suspect, LeSchack said. The man was not identified.

Police today were combing rooftops and searching the neighborhood for other clues, LeSchack added. He also said "quite a few" neighbors had also volunteered information to police.

Two neighbors said they recalled hearing noises that sounded like gunshots around 5:30 p.m. Sunday. Eileen Bell, 30, said she was walking by the house and "I heard a popping sound and it kept repeating, this constant popping. It sounded like a car backfiring." Another neighbor, Lucy Marrero, said she had "heard the shots" at 5:30 p.m.

Mayor Edward Koch, who arrived for a brief tour of the house with city Medical Examiner Elliot Gross, appeared grim and shaken when he emerged. "Obviously, it's a massacre," he said.

Gross declined to discuss his preliminary observations, except to say that all 10 people had died of gunshot wounds to the head. He said autopsies were to be conducted today.

Inspector Robert Burke said police were first notified of the deaths Sunday night by Carmine Rossi, owner of the Rossi Bread Bakery next door to the victims' apartment house. Rossi said he was in his bakery when a man went into the two-story brick building and emerged screaming.

Rossi said the man, who said he lived in the house, asked if he was a police officer. He accompanied the man to the house, where "there were bodies all over the place," he said.

"I came to a small bed. A young girl was dead in the bed," Rossi recalled later. "Then I went to the living room. There were about seven people in the living room on couches. All dead, shot in the head. Then in the kitchen, a couple more people, the same way."

Burke said the victims' bodies were in three different rooms of the first-floor flat, which sits in the middle of a mostly commercial block in a quiet, working-class Brooklyn neighborhood. The second-floor neighbors were not home when the bodies were found, he said.

The victims probably had been dead for about six hours when they were found, Burke said. Rossi said the man who led him to the bodies told him he had left the house at 1:30 p.m. and had not been back until he found the bodies.

Rossi said he found the only survivor, a 2-year-old girl, inside the house and brought her back to the bakery. She was later taken to Baptist Medical Center for examination and then to police headquarters not far from the slaying scene.

Burke, a 28-year police veteran, said the crime was the city's largest mass slaying that he could recall, and other police officials agreed. Six people were shot to death in a Harlem apartment in 1979 in what police said was a drug-related mass murder.

Police sealed off the block where the crime occured, and dozens of onlookers gathered outside to gaze for hours at the cluster of activity around the house. As midnight approached, the crowd remained in a driving, cold rain to see the bodies removed.

Neighbors described the victims as "quiet" people who had moved into the house just two months earlier. They said they knew little else of them, not even their names.

One woman, Eduarda Sanchez, said she had lived in the flat until two months ago, when she moved out and the newcomers moved in. But she said she knew nothing about them.

"I thought this was a nice neighborhood, once upon a time," said Delia Veronica, a neighbor. "It's very shocking. I can't imagine who would do something as horrible as this. Why children?"

Alfredo Gomez, who lives across the street, said he believed that one of the two families in the two-story house was from Colombia and the other from Puerto Rico, but he was unsure which lived on which floor. Other neighbors said the victims were Hispanic.

A Holiday To Gripe

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Just because you missed National Griper's Day, that's no excuse to keep complaints to yourself.

Griper's Day founder Jack Gilbert will listen to a troublesome tale any day in his effort to give the disgruntled, disappointed and depressed a sympathetic audience.

The 55-year-old Columbus man — who marked the first National Griper's Day on Sunday — said he invented the holiday of sorts to bring back old-time personal communication.

"If I am right that it's becoming more and more difficult to have people listen to you, the whole idea of having people call is good," Gilbert said. "The second purpose is just to get people to feeling like people again and not afraid of high technology and computers and all that stuff."

Gilbert doesn't stop at promoting National Griper's Day. The free-lance writer also publishes his phone number and address so people can use him as an outlet for their frustrations.

He hopes to compile the complaints he gets into a humorous griper's newsletter that could be sent to government officials so they know what really irks constituents.

Gilbert said complaints range from consumer costs to chemicals in food. The oddest gripe, he said, came from a Texas man who believes there is too much satellite debris in outer space. "The first permanent space station should be a garbage truck," he wrote to Gilbert.

Services Planned

Holy Week services will start tonight at 7:30 and continue through Thursday at Riddick Chapel Missionary Baptist Church in Bethel.

Speakers for the week are: tonight, the Rev. J.H. Williams of Olive Branch Missionary Baptist Church in Parmele; Tuesday, the Rev. W.C. Blount of Greenville with Riddick Chapel Junior Choir; Wednesday, the Rev. Brown of Greenville and the church senior choir; Thursday, the Rev. G.L. Harris of Wynne Chapel Church in Robersonville. A communion service will follow.

A sunrise service will be held Sunday at 6 ...m. and the annual Easter program will start at 3 p.m.

In The Area

Vehicles Collide

A motorcycle driven by Steven Russell Boyd of Evans Trailer Park and a car operated by Julius Ceasor Streeter of 612 Hudson St., collided about 3:57 p.m. Sunday at the intersection of Colonial Avenue and Davis Street.

Damage from the mishap was set at $500 to the motorcycle and $600 to the Streeter car.

Police charged Streeter with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Boyd was charged by officers with speeding and driving without a license.

Thefts Investigated

Greenville police are investigating the theft of money from two homes here Sunday.

Officer D.W. Nichols said a break-in at 407A Darden Drive was reported at 6:20 a.m.

He said $75 in cash was taken from a closet after entrance to the home, where five people were sleeping, was gained through a window.

Officer D.R. Wyrick said $40 was from 104E Eastbrook Apartments after entrance was gained through a window.

That break-in was reported at 9:30 p.m.

Arrest Is Made

Greenville police arrested Christopher Allen Madry, 26, of 7 White's Trailer Park on charges of being intoxicated and disruptive following a 2 a.m. incident at Pirates Landing Saturday.

Officer C.R. Anderson said Madry was taken into custody following a complaint that a man with a gun was in the parking lot of the apartments.

Anderson noted that a .12 guage shot gun was taken from Madry.

Lawn Mower Taken

Officer B.M. Hamill said police are investigating a break-in at 503 E. Gum Road, which was reported about 7:38 p.m. Sunday.

Hamill said a storage shed was entered and a lawn mower taken.

Break-In Reported

A break-in at 403B Eastbrook Drive was reported at 7:05 p.m. Saturday.

Officer D.C. Johnson said entrance to the apartment was gained through a rear window. Two speakers were reported stolen.

Money Is Taken

Police are investigating the theft of $40 from a cash register at Ellen's Hallmark shop at Pitt Plaza Saturday.

Officer D.C. Johnson said the theft was reported at 5:12 p.m.

Safe Stolen

Greenville police are investigating the theft of a safe from the King and Queen North on Greene Street early Sunday.

Officers said the break-in was discovered at 3:52 a.m. Entrance to the building was gained through a door.

A safe containing an estimated $1,800 in cash was taken from the building.

Shooting Reported

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of a shooting at 402B Darden Drive about 12:52 p.m. Sunday.

Officers W.R. McLawhorn and Detective C.E. Weatherington said Robert Lee Hooker, 62, of Portsmouth, Va., was shot in the hip with a .22 caliber pistol following an argument over money.

Police are looking for a relative of Hooker's for questioning in connection with the shooting.

Referral List

The Federal Emergency Management Agency has published a referral list of offices Greenville area tornado disaster victims may contact for legal assistance.

On a rotating basis, the follow members of the Yooung Lawyers Division of Legal Services are serving: Cordell Avery, 752-6000; Dallas C. Clark, 752-5883; Hugh D. Cox, 757-3977; Lawrence S. Graham, 756-2188; Danny Harrington, 752-3192; Walt Kitchen, 758-5835; David A. Leech, 752-3303 or 752-6161; John Savage, 756-3392; or Thomas F. Taft, 752-2000.

Dance To Be Taught

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department has announced the formation of a new program, Middle Eastern dance (belly dancing), to begin Wednesday from 6-7:30 p.m. at Jaycee Park auditorium.

Classes last eight weeks and the fee is $25. The first night will be an introductory session by instructor Kathryn Rose (Rania). This session will cover basic steps and movements, rhythm patterns, veil dancing, step combination and floor dancing.

The course should increase physical fitness and create an interest in other cultures and lifestyles. Interested persons should call 756-1240 for more information. Registration will be held at the first class.

Agency To Meet

The Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency will meet April 25 at 7:15 p.m. at the Ramada Inn.

The ECHSA's project review committee will meet at 5 p.m.

Additional information about the meeting may be had by calling 758-1372.

NARFE To Meet

Pitt County Chapter 1530 of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees will meet Wednesday at the Three Steers Resteraunt at 12 noon.

All Civil Service retirees, their spouses and present employees of at least 50 years of age and with at least five years of service are invited to attend.

Mayor Ross Persinger of Ayden will be the guest speaker.

For further information, contact Steve Nobles at 746-3246.

P-Z Agenda

Five rezoning requests, three preliminary plats and an annexation petition are among the agenda items scheduled for consideration Tuesday by the Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission.

Submitting requests were: William H. Clark to rezone 12 acres on the south side of Red Banks Road Extension from R-15S, RA-20 and shopping center to R-6, office and institutional and R-15S; R. Guy Mayo to rezone 9.752 acres on the south side of State Road 1200 across from Pitt County Memorial Hospital from medical arts to highway commercial and office and institutional-2;

Thomas Anthony to rezone 26,606 square feet on the east and west side of Vance Street from R-6 to downtown commercial fringe; Tucker Farms Inc. to rezone .923 acres on the north side of U.S. 264 west of Tobacco Road from highway commercial to R-6; and by Collice C. Moore to extend the extraterritorial limits and zone 23.65 acres on the southwestern corner of N.C. 43 and State Road 1204 to neighborhood commercial and R-6.

Clark has also petitioned for annexation of section sih of Quail Ridge Townhomes, containing 2.7556 acres, on the east side of 14th Street Extension.

The preliminary plats were submitted for: Court "D" of Twin Oaks Townhomes at the intersection of Laura Lane and 14th Street Extension; Medical Oaks Townhomes on the east side of State Road 1203 north of Cornerstone Baptist Church; and Upton Court (revised) on the west side N.C. 43 in Kensington Park.

Other business includes: report regarding restaurants in the office and institutional district; discussion of a request by Hoover Taft regarding identifying signs; and discussion relative to the recent workshop on the land use intensity rating system.

Avoiding Details In Governor Race

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The race for governor has been marked more by consensus than disagreement on issues although several philosophical differences have emerged.

Of the Democrats, Tom Gilmore has expressed the most progressive leanings while Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth have spoken in the most conservative terms.

Gilmore has strongly advocated ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and increased state funding for abortions for poor women. He is the only candidate to oppose the death penalty.

"I don't think the state should be in the business of legalized murder," he said. "We should substitute a lifetime sentence without parole."

On such social issues, Faircloth has advocated no changes. He said he supports the ERA, which has failed six times to get legislative approval in North Carolina, and continued funding of abortions at current levels.

But Green has sought to improve the lot of women using other means than the ERA and has worked to limit abortion funding in past legislative sessions.

Faircloth, true to his background as a businessman and former Commerce Department secretary, believes the criminal justice system has undergone enough changes recently and it should be given time to "settle down."

He thinks the best way to lower the crime rate is to get more North Carolinians a job.

"A good job and a good education are two of the most important pieces in the puzzle of prevention and intervention," he said.

Green has been cautious about making new proposals. As president of the state Senate, he has helped appoint a number of legislative committees to study proposals for controlling hazardous waste, improving public schools and revenue laws.

While Green said he is waiting for committee proposals to control hazardous waste, Gilmore has told reporters he would like to ban landfills and establish a pollution prevention-disease prevention center. He said the non-profit corporation would collect information on pollution prevention technology and coordinate ways to minimize health hazards due to exposure to toxic substances.

Gilmore has taken a controversial decision to support legislation requiring employers to label hazardous substances and to train workers in the proper use of hazardous substances.

Many of the gubernatorial candidates have made public their support for legislation repeatedly rejected by the General Assembly.

One such issue is the ERA, which has been supported by all Democratic candidates except Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, who favors a referendum, and Green.

All the candidates interviewed by the League of Conservation Voters said they favored repeal of the state law prohibiting North Carolina from enacting environmental laws more stringent than federal laws.

That proposal failed to win wide support in the last session of the General Assembly.

Annual Meeting In Goldsboro

The 86th annual meeting of the Women of the Church, Albemarle Presbytery, was held at the First Presbyterian Church in Goldsboro last week. Mrs. Henry Marc Cathey of Silver Spring, Md., was the keynote speaker.

Mrs. P.H. McArthur of Goldsboro, president of the Women of the Church of the Albemarle Presbytery, conducted sessions. The theme for the meeting was "The Parable in a Mirror."

New officers were installed by Dr. David Jenkins. Mrs. Freb Webb of Greenville is the personal faith and family life chairman and Mrs. Carter Smith of Fountain is the District II chairman.

Missouri Next Scene For Delegate Battle

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson are looking to Missouri's caucuses this week after winning weekend contests in Arizona and South Carolina, while Walter Mondale takes a rest from the Democratic presidential campaign still holding a comfortable delegate lead.

Hart was heading to St. Louis and Jefferson City, Mo., today from California, where he spent the weekend raising money and savoring a win over Mondale in Arizona's caucuses.

"It's been a rough couple of weeks, but I think things look better now, particularly here in the West," he said in Beverly Hills, Calif. "We won that state pretty decisively."

Jackson planned a trip to Missouri, too, after a rally Sunday afternoon in Washington, D.C., that drew 10,000 people. Missouri Democrats caucus Wednesday to choose 75 national convention delegates in the only such contest scheduled this week.

The black civil rights leader told the Washington gathering that while he may not win the nomination, his campaign — and the huge black vote it is turning out — will have an effect in November's elections.

"We are not measured by whether we get there — just so we are going in the right direction," he said.

Jackson said he had already won 15 congressional districts in the primaries, indicating minority candidates can win House seats there this fall.

"We may or may not change the face of the White House," he said. "But we will change the face of the U.S. Congress. It will never be the same again."

Jackson, too, was raising money at the rally and at private events in Washington, where he is hoping to win the District of Columbia's May 1 primary.

"The spirit tells me we're going to get at least $50,000 here this afternoon," Jackson said.

Jackson gained a victory Saturday in his native South Carolina, winning 34.4 percent of the vote at the state's Democratic convention. That will yield him 17 of the state's national convention delegates, compared with 12 uncommitted and six each for Mondale and Hart, who already has one more South Carolina delegate — former presidential hopeful Sen. Ernest Hollings.

In an interview with U.S. News and World Report, Jackson said he was "not likely" to run for president as an independent and that he "certainly expects" to support the Democratic nominee and campaign for him.

"The poor have too much invested in the Democratic Party to pick up our marbles and go home," Jackson said.

While Mondale was taking a break in Washington, he did manage to snatch a victory from Hart in Alaska.

Although Hart won the precinct-level caucuses a month earlier, Mondale appeared to have come out on top in Alaska's legislative-district caucuses Saturday. With 22 of the 27 districts reporting, Mondale had 38 percent to 33 percent for Hart and 9 percent for Jackson, with 20 percent uncommitted.

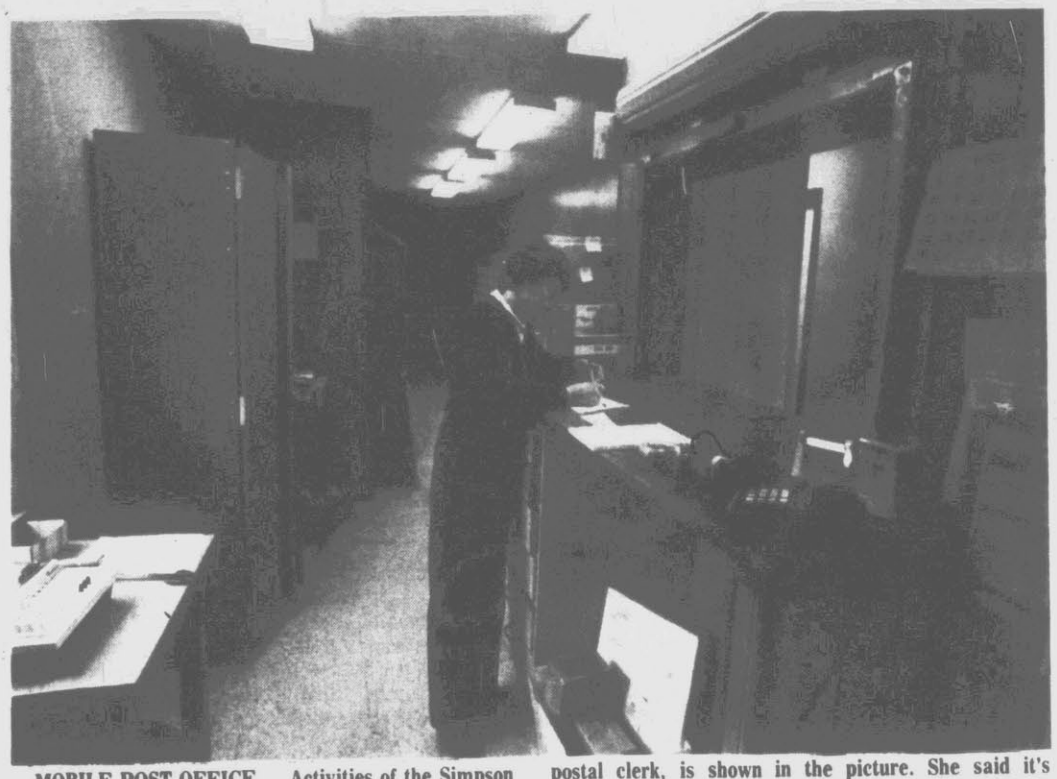

State party chairwoman Diane Anderson said that was substantially fewer uncommitted than in the first round and "it appears many of them went to Mr. Mondale."

The latest delegate count shows Mondale with 1,079.8, Hart with 604 and Jackson with 158.2. It takes 1,967 to nominate.

In New York, meanwhile, Mayor Edward Koch said Black Muslim leader Louis Farrakhan's support for the Rev. Jesse Jackson "has cast a chilling shadow across the 1984 campaign."

Koch said Jackson has had several opportunities "to demonstrate that he is worthy of the presidency" and repudiate the support of Farrakhan, whose remarks on a variety of topics have become controversial.

Koch said Jackson has expressed disapproval for Farrakhan's statements but "has not been able to find it in his heart" to repudiate his support.

ARIZONA CAUCUSES

Total 33 Delegates

Hart, who is trying to recover after successive losses to Mondale in Illinois, New York and Pennsylvania, won 17 delegates Saturday in Arizona, while Mondale won 15 and Jackson one. With 99 percent of the vote counted, Hart had 45 percent to Mondale's 40 percent and Jackson's 13 percent.

Despite the narrow edge in delegates won, Hart called Arizona a "clear and decisive victory" and renewed his attacks on the former vice president.

"Increasingly, Democratic voters ... are turned off by Mr. Mondale's cheap attacks on me and his failure to put forth any vision of the future other than the Carter-Mondale period," Hart said in California.

He also criticized President Reagan's Central America policies. "I think this president is on a foolhardy course that the American people do not accept and will not support and will inevitably lead to the loss of American lives unnecessarily," Hart said.

Hart collected $85,000 at two San Francisco-area fund-raisers.

A Belly Dance, Not Bellyache

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Riad Tannir isn't bellyaching because he can't find an engineering job — instead, he's belly-dancing.

"I need money. I was bored to death. And belly-dancing is something I know how to do," said the 26-year-old Charleston resident. "So I thought, 'Well, why not?'"

Tannir, who learned the wiggly art in his native Lebanon, goes to work this week teaching belly-dancing at sites around Charleston.

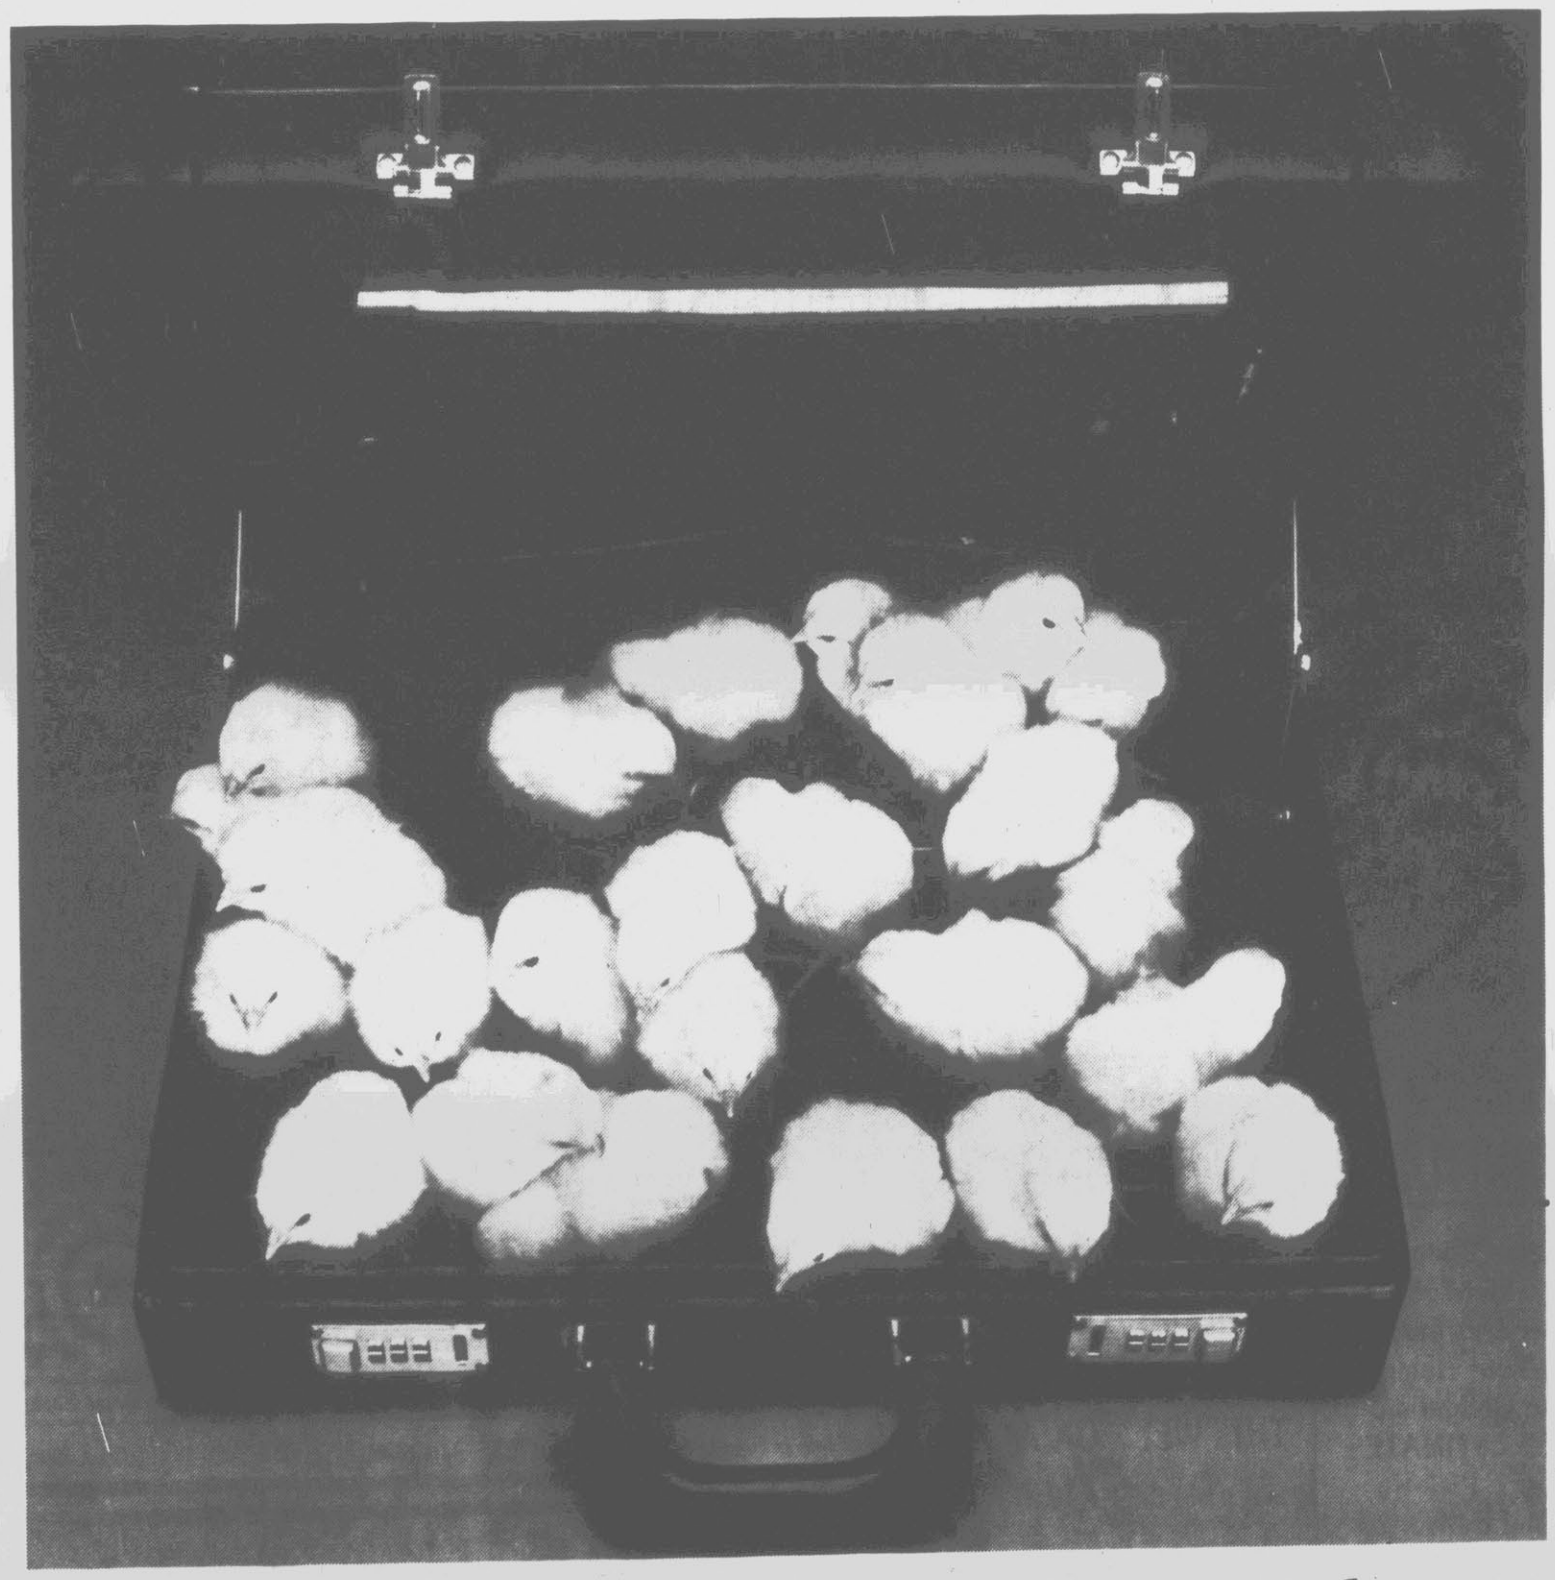

"I'm a civil engineer," he said. "I'm very qualified. I have a master's degree.... Either they tell me they won't hire someone without experience or they say they're not hiring at all."

Tannir concedes that the folks back home wouldn't understand his new job.

"They'd say, 'What's this? You go to school for 20 years, get a master's degree and then go teach belly-dancing?'" he said. "In America, I don't have to be ashamed. The feeling here is, 'If you can do it, whatever it is, show it off.' That's why I love the U.S."

And besides helping him buy groceries, belly-dancing ic a great way to keep in shape, he said.

"It's a good fitness exercise for any woman. A woman taking a class for one hour should be moving every muscle in her body for one solid hour," he said, adding "You sweat a lot."

Smart Investors Flock to Perdue

With Perdue poultry houses bringing, on the average, a greater return than other crops, it's no wonder they're a popular investment.

The good return isn't reduced by labor costs, either, because with an easy-operating Perdue house you can do the work yourself.

Exact return from your Perdue house depends on the loan arrangement you make with your bank. Still, even producers with 100-percent financing make a reasonable return.

Tulips Require A Special Know-How

By DEBBIE HAMRICK
North Carolina State News

You may be wondering why the bed of red tulips that bloomed so well last spring looks spindly or is not blooming at all this year.

The reason could be related to growing factors such as soil drainage, nutrition or tulip variety, says Dr. Paul V. Nelson, professor of horticulture and plant nutritionist at North Carolina State University.

Tulip bulbs planted in the fall disappear by the time the flower finishes blooming the following spring, he explained. New bulbs or "daughter" bulbs for next year's tulips begin to form as the plant flowers and during the six-to-eight-week period following flowering. Food reserves for the "daughter" are made in the above ground leaves and transported for storage below ground in the new bulbs, he said.

In order to insure that tulips planted this year perform well for many years, American gardeners need a new "flowerbulb philosophy," Nelson said.

Part of the reason for poor year-to-year performance is due to the persistence of European ideas about bulb gardening. In Europe where the average garden is small, bulbs are treated as an annual crop and replanted each year. They don't have to pay much attention to the tulip's growing environment, nutrition or variety because their objective is just the flower, not a replacement bulb as well.

The average American gardener, however, has more room to garden and doesn't want to go to the trouble or expense of replanting every year. For American gardeners, the right conditions make a difference. Their objective is to produce flowers this year as well as successive crops of large bulbs for many years.

For the past six years Nelson has been developing a new "flowerbulb philosophy" through research at N.C. State. His year-to-year performance tests which include the three major growing factors — soil environment, bulb nutrition and variety — are being conducted in the North Carolina mountains and Piedmont and coastal areas.

During the first leg of the research, Nelson determined optimum bulb growing conditions, and already that work has led to the development of a commercially available bulb fertilizer and new planting guidelines.

This year the first of two, three-year variety tests will be evaluated.

"Bulb variety is a particularly important factor in the South. Too much hot weather in the months after the tulip has flowered will discourage it from developing new 'daughter' bulbs. In hot weather the plant uses a lot of the food produced by leaves just to survive," he said.

That is why each of the 160 tulip varieties included in the test were hand picked for tolerance to heat. These tests are the first tests worldwide to incorporate heat tolerance as a selection factor, he said.

In addition to the tulip tests, Nelson is evaluating 50 kinds of daffodils and eight kinds of hyacinths.

"Because the test sites are located in widely varying climatic regions, the variety of information will be valuable to gardeners not only in North Carolina but other areas of the U.S. as well," he said.

Nelson explained that since the North Carolina mountain climate closely resembles the climate of northern New Jersey, horticulturists there will be able to use the information to select tulip varieties which will give the best year-to-year performance. Information from the Piedmont and costal areas, he said, will be valuable to gardeners in other areas of the South — as far south as northern Florida.

Nelson's research is being funded in part by the North Carolina Agricultural Research Service and in part by the Netherlands Flowerbulb Institute and the Dutch Bulb Exporters Association. North Carolina State University serves as the center for Dutch-sponsored flowerbulb research in the United States.

Convict Mother In Shooting Case

RALEIGH (AP) — A woman has been convicted of shooting and paralyzing for life a teen-ager whom the woman's attorney said she considered a bad influence on her son.

A Wake County Superior Court jury found Susie B. Fox of Raleigh guilty of one count of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to inflict a serious injury. Sentencing was postponed until a "presentence diagnostic study" is completed.

William T. "Tommy" Davis, 18, of Raleigh, was shot in the neck Aug. 16. The bullet severed his spinal cord and left him paralyzed from the neck down.

Ms. Fox's attorneys, Henry Willis and D.K. Stewart, told the jury during the trial that she acted in self-defense when she shot Davis.

She had asked Davis to meet her that day because she was worried about his influence on her teenage son, Thomas Gabriel Goodman, her attorneys said. They said Goodman had come home late the previous night and had been drinking.

Mrs. Fox's attorneys said she fired at Davis when she saw him behind bushes holding a shotgun. But prosecutor Eric Michaux countered that Mrs. Fox had told Davis the night before she would "blow his head off."

Seat Belts Insured

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. will insure for $10,000 each the lives of everyone wearing seat belts in new GM cars and light trucks, the automaker announced today.

The insurance on each occupant will pay $10,000 to the estate of anyone fatally injured while wearing a seat belt in new GM vehicles during the first year of ownership, GM President F. James McDonald said in a statement.

Insurance certificates will be included at no cost with every new GM car and light truck sold in the United States and Canada as of today, McDonald said.

"This innovative action underscores ... the faith we have in the protection offered by seat belts if occupants use them," McDonald said.

The carmaker's announcement, which McDonald said was an industry first, came as the Highway Users Federation claimed that even sporadic use of seat belts would prevent more than 2,000 deaths every year.

"Experts estimate that almost half of all automobile occupant fatalities and many serious injuries could be avoided if people wore seat belts," McDonald said. "It is a national tragedy that in the United States, seat belt usage is only about 15 percent."

He said usage is much higher in Canada, where seven of the 10 provinces have legislation requiring the wearing of seat belts.

The Highway Users Federation, a national business and industry coalition promoting highway safety, said in a report that if every state mandated the use of seat belts, more than 12,200 lives would be saved each year.

Additionally, it said, there would be 330,700 fewer disabling injuries and a savings of more than $5.2 billion a year in medical, legal and other related costs.

"When the first state adopts a seat belt law, we believe its lifesaving benefits will be so dramatic that other states will soon follow suit," said Robert M. Calvin, the federation's manager of highway safety programs and author of the seat belt report.

He said a state-by-state estimate of the number of lives saved and injuries forestalled each year ranged from a high of almost 1,300 lives and 34,700 injuries in California to a low of about 10 lives and 300 injuries in Washington.

Improving After A Deadly Allergy

BOSTON (AP) — Recent medical tests show improvement in an Oklahoma 3-year-old who has never been able to eat food because of an allergy but has been kept alive by drinking 200 to 300 ounces of donated mother's milk daily, a hospital spokesman says.

Lacie Lynette Smith and her parents came back to Worcester Hahnemann Hospital on Sunday to celebrate the girl's third birthday and thank volunteers who have provided the milk through the hospital, said Phillip Finn, public relations director. Doctors have said Lacie should eventually outgrow the syndrome.

On Tuesday 400 people, including many milk donors, will gather for a party at which Lacie will blow out candles on a "nonfood" styrofoam cake with fake icing, Finn said.

Soviets Pose Possibility Of 'No-Show' At Olympics

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The head of the Soviet Olympic Committee today refused to say whether the Soviet Union would attend the 1984 Summer Olympics and left open the possibility that Moscow will not send a team to the Los Angeles games.

Repeating the full range of Soviet complaints about preparations for the Olympics, committee chairman Marat Gramov said a final decision on Soviet participation would not be made until the end of May. The deadline for notification of a nation's plans to attend the games is June 2.

Gramov said the Soviet Union would go to Los Angeles only if it is satisfied that the United States is observing the Olympic charter and providing "normal conditions" for Soviet athletes to attend the games.

Asked to explain these conditions, Gramov said the chief Soviet complaints remain plans by private American groups to protest against Soviet participation and attempt to induce Soviet defectionc, as well as arrangements for athletes' entry into the United States, plans to accredit Radio Free Europe to the games, and participation by U.S. government officials in preparations for the Olympics.

Gramov, who also is chairman of the Soviet government sports committee, insisted the Soviet Union will not "boycott" the summer games, but made it clear that this did not rule out the possibility that the Soviets will not participate.

"We never use the word boycott, and will never use it," he said in response to a question from an American reporter. "We will never boycott."

But, he added, "We make distinction between boycotting and not attending."

Asked if he would state unequivocally that the Soviet Union will attend the Olympics, Gramov replied: "What do you mean unequivocally? Soviet sportsmen must have normal conditions (to compete), this is a very important consideration that will lead to participation by the Soviet team."

Another reporter asked Gramov if the Soviet Union would stay away from the Olympics if its current complaints and demands are not satisfied.

Gramov cited plans by a private U.S. group called "Ban the Soviets" to protest Moscow's participation in the games. He accused the Reagan administration of backing the group.

"What do you think (we should do) if the situation does not change? if the situation remains, if the U.S. connivance continues, how should we react?" he asked.

Asked to elaborate on his distinction between a boycott and not attending the games, Gramov said, "We never will apply a boycott. ... If the (Olympic charter) rules and traditions are observed, there will be no basis for not attending."

Western diplomats and journalists in Moscow have been optimistic that the Soviet Union will finally decide to attend the Los Angeles games, but believe no decision will be announced until the last minute.

Some diplomats also have said that if the Soviets decide not to attend, they will avoid the word "boycott" in view of the vehement Soviet attacks on the 1980 U.S. boycott of the Summer Olympics in Moscow.

Gramov said the Soviet Union wants the Reagan administration to take steps to prevent demonstrations during the games.

He made it clear Moscow does not accept White House statements that the U.S. government has no control over protest groups even though it may not condone them.

Gramov also said the United States has satisfied Soviet complaints about entry arrangements, but he continued to complain about the involvement of the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and the U.S. State Department in arrangements for bringing Soviet athletes to the United States.

Average Price Of Gasoline Is Up

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A decrease in the number of oil refineries producing fuel and an increase in motorist consumption caused a 1.06-cent rise in the average price of a gallon of gasoline during the first quarter of 1984, oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg said.

If the trend continues, prices could increase 10 to 12 cents a gallon by the end of June, Lundberg said Sunday.

Tornado - Emotional Disaster for Children
by Cheryl Barnes
Director of Day Treatment

Tornadoes leave a path of emotional as well as physical destruction in the lives of young children. While property damage is readily seen and restored, emotional damage and restoration are more difficult. If you have a child between 1 and 11 years of age, there are several typical behavioral symptoms that result from the disruption of the child's world by a disaster. There are several treatment options that you can follow at home to help rebuild your child's sense of security.

Symptoms for 1-5 year olds include:
1. Loss of appetite, indigestion, vomiting
2. Bowel or bladder problems.
3. Sleep disorders, fear of darkness.
4. Resumption of bed wetting or thumb sucking.
5. Nervousness, irritability, or muscle spasms.
6. Speech difficulties, such as stuttering.
7. Refusal to leave parent's side.

Parents of children showing these symptoms should hold, caress, and verbally assure their child. Set up a comforting bedtime routine such as quiet activities, a story, and a glass of warm milk. Temporarily allow the child to sleep in the parent's room. Encourage expression of emotions or fears through play activities such as re-enactment of the disaster with blocks, puppets, dolls or other toys.

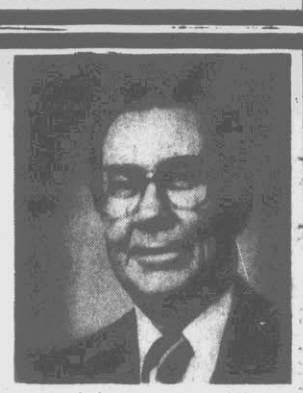

Symptoms for 5-11 year olds include:
1. Headaches, visual or hearing related complaints.
2. Itching and scratching.
3. Sleep disorders.
4. Fear of school, inability to concentrate, drop in grades.
5. Increased competition for attention at home.
6. Fighting with or withdrawal from friends and family.

Parents should temporarily lessen requirements in school and home activities. Insist firmly but not sternly on age appropriate behavior. Encourage your child to talk about fears and feelings towards the disaster. Plan and rehearse safety measures to be taken in future emergencies.

If problems persist, it may be wise to seek help. The children's services area of the Pitt County Mental Health Center is prepared to assist your child in emotional recovery. Call Barbara Vosk at 752-7151 for more information.

HERBERT W. PATE
MONDAY, APRIL 16
RAMADA INN 264 BY-PASS
7:00 p.m. — Dinner
7:30 p.m. — Meeting

Herbert W. Pate is a native of Lenoir County and a 1937 graduate of Wheat Swamp High School. His interests and talents are quite varied. As an Army man he served four years with the Field Artillery during World War II, stationed in Europe. As an athlete, he played professional baseball with the Kinston Eagles from 1946 to 1948. Turning his talents toward auctioneering, he graduated from Reppert School of Auctioneering in Decatur, Indiana in 1948 and has been actively engaged in auctioneering for some 38 years, specializing in auto sales, estate appraisals, real estate and personal property auctions. As a businessman, Herbert is well known in the Lenoir County area as being the owner of Pate's Fine Furniture Company of Kinston which he has operated since 1949.

When Herbert returned to Kinston after the war in 1946, he joined Gordon Street Christian Church and although he participated in the usual church activities, his relationship with his church was more on a casual basis rather than an involved one. As time went on he became beset with various problems which led him to spend more time with the bottle and other unchristian involvements. Finally, as an alcoholic, he reached the "end of the line."

It was in February 1968 that he attended the Regional Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship meeting in Washington, D.C. and life began to take on new meaning. About two weeks later on March 6, 1968, Herbert met Jesus in a very moving and dramatic way. In August, 1968, he was led to organize the Weekly Kinston Businessmen's Prayer Breakfast which is still going strong today. Herbert is well known as a Christian businessman who is extremely active in FGBMFI, serving as President of the local chapter. Herbert is a "new creature in Christ" and his personal and business life give testimony to the transforming power of Jesus. His charming wife Jeanette is also Spirit-filled and they are blessed to be joint servants of the Lord Jesus Christ

Free Clinic For 'Flower Children' Still Free

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dr. David Smith's Free Clinic, born in the 1960s out of the needs of the city's flower children, is still ministering to its diverse patients, among them children with names like Moonbeam and Stargaze.

"Still free after all these years — that's what the sign says," says Smith, who exudes the calmness of a trusted family physician. "It worked then, and it still works."

In an examining room in the main clinic, Smith has preserved a mural that he calls his "60s wall" — a stream-of-consciousness, mish-mash of colors, free-form designs and bare-chested women that flowed from the mind of an artist on LSD.

That was the trip of choice on Haight Street when Smith opened his door in June 1967.

Smith and his non-profit clinic have continued to specialize in the field of drug addiction. But the clinic also has branched out into areas such as women's health and acupuncture.

In 1967, Smith, now 45, was a young doctor bound for a career in academic medicine. But he lived in the heart of a community where the spirit of the 1960s was born, and like many of his generation, he was touched and changed.

"Initially, this clinic was an extension of a civil rights perspective," Smith recalled. "There were several thousand flower children who came to the Haight using drugs, and the system was very opposed to them and denied them medical care.

"The original philosophy of our clinic was and still is that health care is a right, not a privilege, and that people who have a different lifestyle than you should not be denied health care because you disapprove of their lifestyle," said Smith.

The clinic's success can be measured by one statistic: it has had more than 500,000 patient visits in its 17 years.

Smith can remember when the landlords who owned the now-refurbished Victorian homes would rather sell than rent, when police cracked heads and when rock singer Janis Joplin used to show up at the clinic.

From 1965 to 1967, the Haight was in the throes of a counter-culture revolution, and Smith spent much of his time talking hippies through bad trips. In 1968, the scene turned ugly.

"Along came the speed freaks and heroin addicts, and things got really rough down here," Smith said. "But just because it stopped being nice flower children and started being hard-core heroin addicts and speed freaks with addictive disease, health care (was still) a right and not a privilege, and the system didn't have the right to put them in jail because of their disease."

The clinic modified its program to deal with the addicts and the "speed freaks," or amphetamine abusers. But the clientele continued to change. As the flower children moved aside for the addicts, so the addicts gave way to a far more middle-class and diverse patient load.

"Addicted nurses, physicians, cocaine-abusing stockbrokers, street people, alcoholics, gays," Smith said, rattling them off. "Medically, we're even treating second-generation flower children ... a whole generation of kids with names like 'Moonbeam' and 'Stargaze.' We're like a community clinic to that group, in the sense that the Free Clinic has been their health-care delivery system ever since they were born."

The clinic, located in several different buildings within a three-block area, employs 40 staff members and attracts hundreds of volunteers. It's organized in eight divisions, including a women's health center, a drug detoxification center, an acupuncture center, an administrative center and a rock medicine section that provides care at crowd events.

It survives on a $2 million annual budget, gleaned from donations and federal, state and local sources. All services are free, including prescription drugs donated or purchased by the various clinics. A patient has to pay only when he wants something which a doctor has not ordered; pre-marital blood tests are the most common paid service.

The city's Free Clinic inspired the formation of many similar clinics around the country. One federally-supported program of community health centers provides $337 million a year to support centers run by 560 organizations, mainly in rural areas or poor inner-city neighborhoods. These centers provide basic primary care for 4.5 million people and operate on a sliding fee scale, with charges based on patients' ability to pay, according to Tim Ray of the U.S. Public Health Service in Washington.

However, recent changes in federal programs have reduced funds available to the clinic, which for the first time in its history has a waiting list.

Smith sees patients twice a week. Much of the rest of his time he participates in the clinic's drug recovery groups, lectures nationwide, writes, teaches and runs.

"That 60s spirit is not dead completely. That's the prevailing thing now, to say it's dead, and nothing good came out of it," Smith said. "It's not true. One thing that came out of it is a health care movement that a lot of people responded to and participated in."

IT'S STILL FREE — Dr. David Smith poses beside signs at entrance to the Haight-Ashbury Free Medical Clinic which opened 17 years ago. "It's still free after all these years", he says. (AP Laserphoto)

Three 'No' Votes Ended Convention

GREENSBORO (AP) — After a heated debate, the North Carolina Association of Educators voted down a proposal to enroll 4-year-olds in public schools.

The NCAE also ended its three-day convention Saturday with no votes on two other proposals including increasing organizational dues and supporting legislation to abolish a second primary for candidates who achieve 40 percent of the vote.

In the resolution to enroll 4-year-olds in school, which state Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips' proposes, the dissenters said today's children were already under enough stress.

"Let the children be children," said one teacher.

The NCAE also voted against increasing its annual dues from $10 to $67. The resolution to increase dues was contingent upon the passage of an amendment to the NCAE constitution, which was defeated 1,146 to 341.

NCAE President Elect Cecil S. Banks of Greensboro told the group that if the NCAE is to achieve unquestioned leadership in the shaping of public education policy in North Carolina, members need to address six key areas: membership expansion, professionalizing the profession, enhancing political effectiveness, improving legislative lobbying and improving public image and equity.

Banks, a teacher at Greensboro Page High School, will take over the office of president July 1, replacing Frances Cummings.

In other action Saturday, NCAE members:

— Directed the Board of Directors to assess the extent of the asbestos problem in North Carolina public schools and to develop a plan of action to include assistance to local affiliates for rectifying the situations hazardous to staff and students.

— Agreed that the NCAE provide technical and financial assistance to local affiliates that seek to respond to or to participate in the development of any merit pay plans, career ladders or other career-incentive teacher compensation plans.

Officers Chosen By Press Women

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Judy Phillips of the High Point Enterprise was elected president of the North Carolina Press Women at the group's 41st annual Spring Institute held Saturday.

Rose Post of the Salisbury Post was elected first vice president and Nell Perry of the Winston-Salem Journal-Sentinel was elected second vice president at the meeting held at the University of North Carolina School of Journalism.

Dawn Kane of the Greensboro News-Record was elected secretary and Tommye Morrison of the High Point Enterprise was voted in as treasurer.

Five district chairwomen were also elected. They were: Kathryn Yarbro of the Lincoln Times-News, Lynn Jaluvka of the Durham Morning Herald, Gina Crawford of the Anson Record, Kathy Kepley of The Times of Thomasville and Jennifer Moore of the News-Herald in Ahoskie.

Outgoing President Lib Stewart of Kings Mountain will serve as an adviser.

SENTENCED

'Mended Hearts' Group Is Planning To Lend Support

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Mended Hearts Inc. Chapter No. 23 of Eastern North Carolina, composed mostly of persons who have successfully completed having open heart surgery, is gearing up to provide non-profit service to those who will have open heart surgery here when the Cardiac Surgery Unit of Pitt County Memorial Hospital opens July 1.

Dave Martin, assistant golf pro at the Brook Valley Country Club, is president of the group which formerly called itself the Zipper Society of Pitt County. "We've affiliated with the national Mended Hearts organization, changed our name and expanded and clarified our purpose," Martin said in a recent interview. "We still meet once a month to be supportive to each other, but now we're seeking to train ourselves to serve others who are about to undergo or are undergoing the same surgery or similar surgery to each of ours. We're been where those people are and we know we can help and we want to help."

Many of the members will be participating in a three-day seminar to learn how to best alleviate the fears of a person facing open heart surgery. "Doctors, nurses, the hospital chaplain and others will be teaching us," said Howard Dawkins Sr., Mended Hearts vice president and visitation chairman.

A former hospital chaplain himself, Dawkins said he and many of the other Mended Hearts members have been visiting informally already when they hear of someone who's facing open heart surgery.

"It's the least I can do," Dawkins said. "Joe Clark visited me when I was on my way to Birmingham for surgery. He had successfully recovered from the same surgery I was anticipating and it was wonderful to have him share with me what he went through and came out of on the other side. I feel I have to do this for others."

"That's how most of our members feel," Martin said. "We're grateful to be alive and relatively well and we want to share with everyone we can."

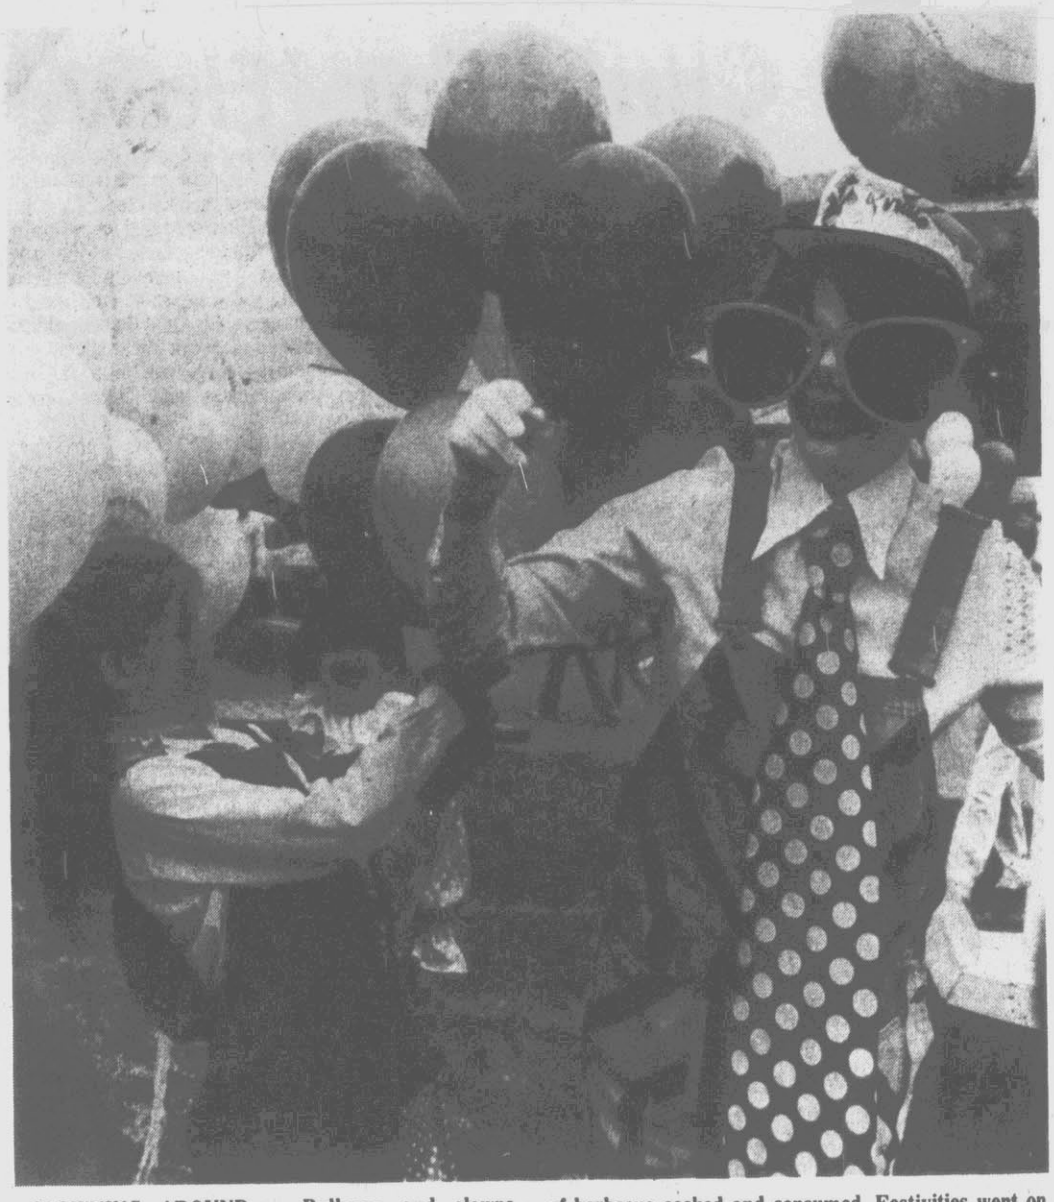

Spouses of open heart surgery veterans often are associate members of the club and they are instrumental in relating to spouses of heart patients. "My wife, Carmen, has been wonderful," Dawkins said. "about visiting wives of heart patients and in doing volunteer work in the intensive care unit waiting room. She and many others of the members and the spouses (the majority of the heart surgery veterans in the club are male) will probably do considerable volunteer work in the family waiting area of the post-cardiac surgery unit of the hospital and also with the families while their loved ones are waiting for surgery."

The Eastern Carolina chapter will be the third in North Carolina. There are now chapters in the Triangle area — Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill — and in the Triad area — Winston-Salem-High Point-Greensboro. The national group was founded in 1951 by four post-surgery heart patients who had been in a Boston hospital at the same time. It was incorporated in November 1955, and now has national headquarters in Dallas.

The group meets the first Thursday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in the Gaskins-Leslie Building of Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Usually, in addition to fellowship and business, a program is held — often a speaker on some aspect of heart surgery or the care of oneself to prevent future difficulty.

"The group is not directly affiliated with the Heart Association of Pitt County, but is supportive of its programs," Martin said.

Officers other than Martin and Dawkins are Phyllis Martin, secretary; Roy Thompson, treasurer; David Bumgarner, program chairman; Betty Goodson, education chairman; Billy Dail, membership chairman; Myrt Leslie, social chairman; Ed Ryan, awards chairman; Tommy Lane, publicity chairman, and Don Wilkerson, Heart Association liaison.

CLOWNING AROUND — Balloons and clowns abounded at the first annual Great Purple/Gold Pigskin Pig-Out Party. The event marked the preview of the 1984-85 football team with their annual game. This year, however, a pig cooking contest was held with over a ton of barbecue cooked and consumed. Festivities went on all day with beer can crushing contests, a bikini judging contest, children's games and even a tug-of-war between the football team and an elephant. Composers Honored

NEW YORK (AP) — Henry Mancini and Neil Diamond were among nine composers inducted into the Songwriters Hall of Fame of the National Academy of Popular Music, which honored clarinetist-band leader Benny Goodman with a lifetime achievement award.

Diamond, who wrote "Song Sung Blue" and "You Don't Send Me Flowers," and Mancini, known for "Moon River" and "Days of Wine and Roses," were inducted Sunday at the academy's annual fund-raising dinner.

Another composer active since 1950 and inducted Sunday was Norman Gimbel, ho wrote lyrics for such songs as "Canadian Sunset" and "I Will Wait for You."

Inducted from among composers and songwriters active before 1950 were Richard Adler, composer of Broadway's "Pajama Game" and "Damn Yankees," and Bennie Benjamin and George David Weiss, who together wrote "Wheel of Fortune" and "Oh! What It Seemed To Be."

Inducted posthumously were Billy Strayhorn (1915-1967), composer of "Take the 'A' Train" and "Lush Life"; Al Hoffman (1902-1960), co-writer of "Allegheny Moon" and "Mairzy Doats"; and Maceo Pinkard (1897-1962), co-writer of "Them There Eyes" and "Sweet Georgia Brown."

JUST HANGING AROUND — These are three of the thirteen Indian Fruit bats that were introduced to Los Angeles Zoo visitors on Friday the 13th. Also known as flying foxes, the bats spend most of their daylight hours hanging upside down from tree limbs, wrapped snugly in their four-foot wings. (AP Laserphoto)

A 'Different Kind Of Aid' Being Sent To Costa Rica

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — At a time when the United States is making an increasing military investment in Central America, a Wilmington resident is sending a different kind of "aid" to Costa Rica.

In a "total people to people effort," Richard Carter is bringing medicine in Costa Rica into the 20th century.

During the last two years, Carter has sent that country almost $1 million in medical equipment donated by private American corporations.

Carter, 61, launched his medical mission in 1980. He and his wife, Jan, took a trip to Central America to see how heart pacemakers were used there. Carter, whose life depends on a pacemaker, wanted to see what the survival rate was in Third World countries.

Sailing to the tropical isthmus on their 40-foot Kettenburg yacht, the couple visited several hospitals. Carter said he was left with a sense of hopelessness in most of the places he visited.

He found the people and the place he was looking for, however, in Liberia, Costa Rica.

"Costa Rica is the brightest spot in all of Central America," Carter said.

A country of 2.6 million people, Costa Rica is considered the last hope for democracy in the war-torn region. Although some anti-Sandinista guerrillas are operating against Nicaragua from the northern part of the country, Costa Rica has largely avoided the warfare that has engulfed most of its neighbors. It has no army and has had a relatively stable series of elected governments for more than 30 years.

The people at Liberia's Enrigue Baltodano Hospital were "very sophisticated, polished, soft, kind and disarmingly frank," Carter said.

And very much in need of help.

The hospital's intensive care ward had a light bulb, a bed and a chair for a nurse to sit in around the clock. Bandages were boiled and used over and over again. Disposable syringes were used at least six times each.

"My God," Carter recalls saying to himself. "How can anybody operate like this? We're going to change this."

Carter made his promise to Dr. Jose Murillo, the hospital's chief surgeon. Murillo, fluent in English, had studied in the United States and France. His surgical skills and medical knowledge, however, were stymied by lack of equipment.

Murillo was skeptical of Carter's promise. He had hit all before.

"We met Mr. Carter about three years ago," Murillo said in a telephone interview from his hospital. "We were in real bad conditions. He wanted to help us the best way he could. We didn't believe him because he was a foreigner."

Murillo, somewhat doubtful, sent Carter a list of badly needed equipment. The first shipment arrived in August 1982. It consisted of incubators and bedpans, "anything I could lay my hands on," Carter said.

That first load, "from the people of Wilmington," was shipped free of charge by Sea-Land Service Inc., a container shipping company. Women from the Retired Senior Volunteer Program helped pack dozens of IV bottles. Prisoners at the state's minimum-security camp near New Hanover County Airport painted the bedpans.

From this modest beginning, Carter's project became a nationwide venture.

"So he started sending us a lot of equipment," Murillo said. "A lot of pacemakers to help people with no means to get them. We have a lot of incubators, X-ray (equipment), transformers, monitors in the delivery room, a laboratory, respirators, 10 monitors for ICU, EKG and infusion pumps and all the new things that we should have in a hospital in 1984."

Carter relied soley on donated equipment from American corporations. A few of them are General Electric, Westinghouse, Phillips Medical in Shelton, Conn., Marquette Electronics in Milwaukee and Dart Medical in Lansing, Mich.

Murillo marvelled that his hospital was no longer operating in the "Middle Ages."

"We really think that in our country, Mr. Carter made a revolution," Murillo said. "Not just this province, but the rest of the country knows of Mr. Carter."

The project that gave Carter a national name was a cardiac surveillance telephone network set up throughout the country, the first of its kind in the world.

The basis of the system is a heart monitoring device that can be used by rural doctors. Through the telephone network, they can send a readout of a patient's heart condition to a cardiologist. The cardiologist can then determine whether the patient needs to adjust his medication or whether he should be airlifted immediately to a properly equipped hospital. The equipment also can be used to monitor a patient's heart during emergency surgery.

The network is being set up in 97 clinics and hospitals throughout the country with cardiologists based at two urban centers.

For his work, Carter recently received word that he is to be the guest of honor at the Sixth Annual Costa Rican Medical Congress in July. Never before has an American received such an honor.

Carter thinks the U.S. government could learn a lot about foreign aid to Central America from his program.

"We've spent billions in those countries and they would like to spit in our face," Carter said. "We are instilling in people all through Central America a hatred that is going to take decades and decades to go away."

Answer to Saturday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 4-16

QDDU, HWRRDN-JZOKDNDP JWIIHBEU EBO HD JTWOP JWQHIZOK B JTTR-HBII.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — OUR SENSIBLE BUT JOLLY PRANK PLAYER IS A PRACTICAL JOKER.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals F

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Poultry

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 54.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. 100 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 52.55 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is weak and the live supply is moderate for a light to very light demand. Average weights desirable to occasionally heavy. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,4$3,000, compared to 1,386,000 last Monday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks were mostly lower through morning trading today although they rebounded from steeper declines posted early in the session.

Retail, steel, telephone and oil-service issues were numerous among the losers, while some auto and drug stocks advanced.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 7.01 on Friday, slipped another 1.57 to 1,148.56 after two hours of trading today. The measure had been off more than 5 points shortly after the opening bell, however.

Declines maintained a 7-5 lead over advances on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index fell 0.16 to 90.35.

Big Board volume slowed to 27.99 million shares at noon EST, compared with 55.68 million at that hour Friday.

Stocks received a temporary boost last week after government reports signaled a moderating economic expansion. Investors hope slower economic growth will reduce the upward pressure on interest rates.

But Wall Street analysts said the massive U.S. budget deficits, and their contribution to higher rates, continue to worry both the stock and bond markets.

Indeed, the stock market's lower opening came after the bond market opened weaker, with prices of some long-term government bonds falling nearly ½ point, or $5 for each $1,000 in face value.

On the NYSE's active list, Chrysler rose ⅛ to 24⅞, American Telephone & Telegraph lost ⅛ to 15¾ and Deere fell ⅜ to 33⅛.

Johnson & Johnson, up 1⅜ to 38½, said it plans to buy up to 2 million of its shares.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 0.09 to 206.48.

Civil Rights Fund, which filed the suit on behalf of the survivors, contends government officials helped plan the confrontation, citing the presence of Dawson and federal undercover agents among the Klansmen and Nazis.

Fund attorney Lewis Pitts said the conspiracy indictment provided a "back door" for the defendants because it required that the government prove beyond reasonable doubt that racial motiviation was a factor without which the Klansmen and Nazis would not have come to the rally. He said the government should have charged the Klansmen and Nazis with a simple civil rights violation.

"Within the skewed indictment and a narrow definition of conspiracy, the three prosecuting attorneys did a vigorous job of pursuing the case," he said, however.

U.S. Justice Department attorney Daniel Bell declined to comment except to say: "We're obviously deeply disappointed and disagree with the verdict, but in our system of justice, the jury has the responsibility for the final say."

Before the jurors began deliberations Friday, Flannery warned them to put aside their prejudices about the three extremist groups. But jury selection transcripts indicate many jurors knew little about the groups before the trial began.

During the 14-week, $1 million trial, the jury sifted through testimony by about 120 witnesses and 400 pieces of evidence, including videotapes showing defendants firing on demonstrators.

The self-defense claim depended largely on who fired the first shots. FBI sound analyst Bruce Koenig, who plotted echo patterns from the tapes' soundtracks, testified that the first 11 of the 39 shots came from an area occupied by Klansmen and Nazis.

Defense attorneys noted that Koenig testified for the defense in the 1980 trial that the third, fourth and fifth shots could have been fired by demonstrators instead.

The defendants' references to "niggers" during several meetings where the rally was discussed suggest a racist motivation, Bell said.

"They didn't just talk about anti-communism," he said. "They talked about niggers and communists in the same breath."

Defense attorney Jim Cooley said the CWP manipulated the Klansmen into coming to the confrontation. Quoting the poet John Milton, he compared the CWP to Satan "exhorting the fallen angels to rise up against God."

All nine defendants were found innocent of conspiring to violate civil rights. Matthews, Wood, Smith and Fowler were found innocent of actually violating individual marchers' rights by killing them or aiding and abetting.

Wood, Toney and Matthews were acquitted of intimidating individual marchers by wounding them. Wood was also acquitted in the wounding of a television cameraman.

Griffin and Dawson were found innocent of conspiring to prevent witnesses from talking to federal agents.

The maximum penalties ranged from five years in prison and a $10,000 fine for conspiracy to life in prison for a civil rights violation resulting in a death.

Tax Collections

Net sales and use tax collections in Pitt County during February amounted to $527,793, according to state Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch.

Totals in several neighboring counties for February included: Beaufort, $399,304; Carteret, 193,236; Craven, $233,522; Edgecombe, $192,964; Greene, $28,958; Lenoir, $257,903; Martin, $74,522; Nash, $254,286; Wayne, $392,859; and Wilson, $350,662.

Net collections in the 100 participating counties during the month totaled $26,308,681, said Lynch.

MASONIC NOTICE

Greenville Masonic Lodge No. 284 AF&AM will have a stated communication Monday at 7:30 p.m.

The funeral service will be conducted at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. J.M. Bragg, his pastor. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Mr. Sutton was born and reared in Pitt County and graduated from Chicod High School. He attended Milkwaukee School of Engineering. A veteran of World War II, he served in the United States Army. For the past 15 years he was associated with the dry cleaning business and for the past three years he had owned and operated Home Cleaners Inc. of Greenville. He was a charter member of Peoples Baptist Temple.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eloise Tripp Sutton; two sons, Billy W. Sutton of Lenoir and Mike L. Sutton of Greenville; two brothers, Norman F. Sutton and Ernest H. Sutton, both of Stokes; one sister, Eula Mae Sutton of Stokes; and one granchild.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7-9 p.m. Monday and at other times will be at the home near Stokes.

FARMVILLE — Mrs. Agnes Williams died Sunday night in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. She was the wife of Leroy Williams. Arrangments are incomplete at Joyners Mortuary.

HIGH GNP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although smaller than the state of Connecticut, oil-rich Qatar has the highest per capita gross national product (GNP) in the world.

Each of Qatar's 220,000 people, if given equal shares of their country's GNP, would receive $27,790, according to the Population Reference Bureau. Ethiopia's per capita annual GNP, at the other extreme, is $142.

Card Of Thanks

The family of Donna Suggs wishes to thank their many friends and neighbors for the kindnesses shown to them during their time of bereavement. Thank you for the cards, flowers, food and most of all, your prayers.

Your Social Security Disability Benefits

ADDIE'S ADVICE

BENEFITS DENIED?

Have you been denied benefits under Social Security's disability benefits programs? Do not be discouraged. That happens to most people who apply the first time.

Have you asked for reconsideration of your disability claim and been turned down a second time? Again, don't be discouraged or give up. That's the way the disability system works today.

Take your case one step further and go before a Social Security Administrative Law Judge for a hearing with a qualified representative to present your case. Then the chances of your winning benefits are somewhere between 70% and 80%. The Judge will see you and hear your personal description of your physical or mental illness, and your representative will present your case as it applies to the complex rules of the Social Security Act.

If you have a hearing requested or scheduled before an Administrative Law Judge, call now for an immediate conference. There is no fee for an initial conference to discuss your eligibility for disability.

Crenshaw Captures First Major Title.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw knew he had the first major championship of his golf career sewed up — and so did the massive gallery surrounding the 18th green at Augusta National.

The thunderous ovation came in waves as the popular Texan prepared to put the finishing touches on a closing 68 that left him with an 11-under-par 277 total and the coveted Masters title.

"I honestly didn't know where I was," Crenshaw said.

"Coming up 18 I had so much support. It was incredible. I just didn't want to let those people down."

They had been with him all the way on the treacherous back side of this famous course built by Bobby Jones.

The cheers started at the 10th hole where he rolled in a monstrous, breaking 60-foot putt for his third straight birdie — one that gave him a three-shot lead.

He bogeyed the 11th, but then came back with a 12-foot birdie putt on the 155-yard, par-3 12th — a hole that took out the only two players with a realistic chance.

Larry Nelson, the U.S. Open champion who had closed the gap to one with a birdie on 11, knocked his tee shot in the water and took a double bogey.

Tom Kite, the third-round leader who was two back at the time, also found the water, and made triple bogey.

There was a sense that this tournament was over, that the only person who could beat Crenshaw was Crenshaw.

He didn't let it happen.

He saved par with a 20-footer on No. 14 and then applied the clincher, a 15-foot birdie putt on the 15th that built the lead to four shots.

The ovations at each hole continued to grow.

They were the type that had been reserved for two legends in Masters lore — for the popularity of Arnold Palmer during his heyday and for the respect for the brilliant play of Jack Nicklaus, the only five-time winner of this prestigious event.

Tom Watson, a two-time Masters winner, made two birdies over the last three holes to claim second place at 69-279, but he really never was in the title chase.

David Edwards and Gil Morgan shared the low round of the final day with 67s, and were deadlocked in third place at 280.

Nelson was next at 70-281 and Kite had a 75, falling into a four-way tie at 282 with Ronnie Black, 68, Australian David Graham, 73, and Mark Lye, the colorful 36-hole leader who closed with a 74.

"I haven't been through this before," Crenshaw said. "It's a feeling of relief more than anything. There's no question I've put pressure on myself to win the important tournaments."

He narrowly missed a major title in 1981 when he lost the PGA championship in a playoff with Graham.

"Today was just my day," he said. "I was determined. I tried to hit the fairways and the greens, and I did a darn good job of it."

It was the 10th victory of a career that began with a triumph in his first professional start — the 1973 San Antonio-Texas Open.

He was fresh off the campus of the University of Texas, where he claimed three individual NCAA crowns.

The golf world expected great things from him. So did Crenshaw.

Asked if it were better to win his first major now, rather than in the early stages of his career, he said:

"It means more now. There have been disappointments, but this is a sweet, sweet thing. I don't think there'll ever be a sweeter moment."

It wasn't a day to remember for Kite, Crenshaw's former college teammate who has come close, but never won a major title.

Asked if he knew what might be going through Crenshaw's mind, Kite replied, "No, but I can guarantee he knows what's going through mine. It's sure not jubilation."

"He has got to feel sick," Crenshaw said of Kite.

"Believe me, he's hurting," Crenshaw added. "He played well up to one hole. If you don't think golf's tough, ask him."

Watson, who has been in a slump, called it "one of those days I never got close enough to the lead to put any pressure on Ben. I was just too far behind to catch up. I had to have some mistakes, and Ben just didn't make any."

Watson, playing in a out, and then greeted him.

"I told Ben 'Welcome to the majors club,'" Watson said. "He deserved it."

Okamoto Promises To Defend

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Japan's Ayako Okamoto learned to her surprise after a runaway victory in the $200,000 J&B Scotch Pro-Am golf tournament that she could win $1 million with a repeat performance in 1985.

"I'll be here," she promised Sunday after admitting she didn't know of the bonus offer until after she won the Ladies Professional Golf Association event with a tournament-record score of 275.

Okamoto, 33, won going away by firing a 5-under-par 67 in the final round over the Desert Inn Country Club course.

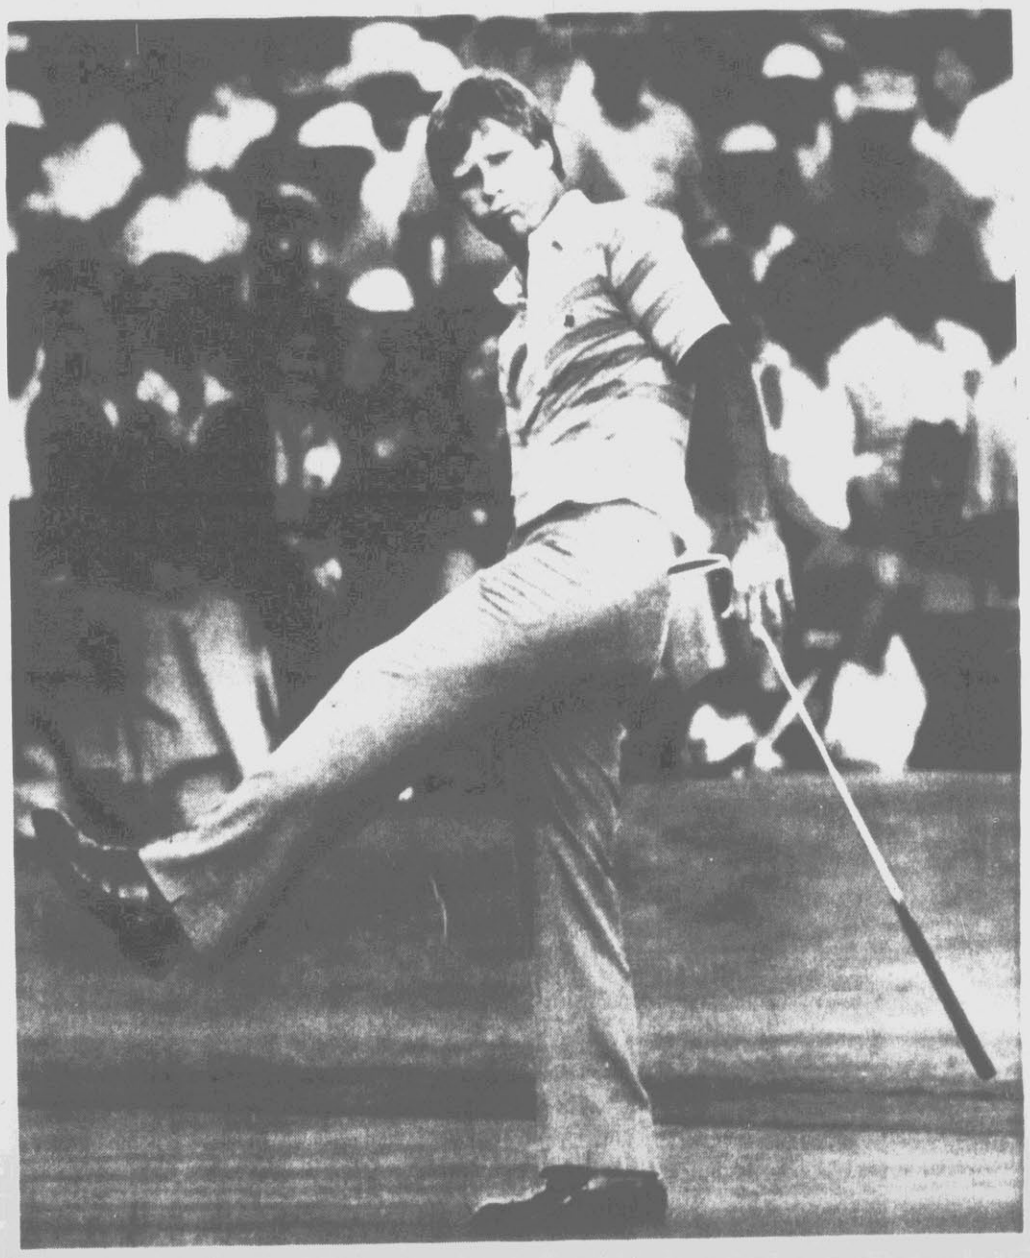

"Up until last week, I was hitting good shots but had trouble with my putting," said Okamoto, who is from Tokyo. "This week, everything came together. I didn't change my putting stroke, I just got a new putter."

Interestingly, it was the same model putter she had been using, so apparently the new one provided a psychological edge, although she didn't describe it that way while speaking through an interpreter.

Donna H. White, recovering from a back operation last fall, finished second with 72-hole score of 280. She fired a 69 in the final round.

Beth Daniel was alone in third place at 284 after a 74 on Sunday. Then came Sandra Haynie at 286 after carding a 72 in the final round. Defending champion Nancy Lopez, who set the previous tournament record of 279 in 1982, finished well back at 293.

Okamoto collected $30,000 for her victory.

College Football Returns With Intrasquad Clashes

By The Associated Press

Some familiar names were back in the spotlight in intrasquad collegiate spring football games.

Joe McIntosh and Joe Greene scored one touchdown each, both in the second quarter, to lead North Carolina State to a 14-10 victory over the Wolfpack alumni in spring football Saturday.

In Chapel Hill, Norris Davis and William Humes caught short touchdown passes and John Duffel had a 6-yard touchdown run as North Carolina's Blue squad beat the White 21-0.

Meanwhile, sophomore tailback Julius Grantham rushed for 169 yards and scored four touchdowns to lead the Duke offense to a 50-28 victory over the Blue Devil defense.

In Greenville, quarterback Robbie Bartlett rushed for 100 yards and passed for 96 to lead the Gold to a 12-6 victory over the Purple.

McIntosh knifed in from the 2-yard-line after alummi quarterback John Isley fumbled a snap. Greene's 2-yard scoring plunge capped a 91-yard drive on the Wolfpack's next possession.

The alumni scored on a 26-yard field goal by Rod Sewell after an interception and Isley scored on a quarterback sneak after a fumble.

Varsity quarterback Tim Esposito connected on seven of nine passes for 103 yards in his one-half of work. Wolfpack split end Phil Brothers led all rushers with 37 yards.

"It was a slug fest," N.C. State coach Tom Reed said. "They really came after us."

In Chapel Hill, quarterback Kevin Anthony hit Davis from 12 yards out to cap an 81-yard scoring drive. A fumble set up Duffel's fourth period score.

Duffel paced the Blue running attack with 57 yards on seven carries while Humes rushed for 41 yards and fullback Eddie Colson added 33. Anthony completed 12 of 30 passes for 153 yards.

Tailback Ethan Horton, who led the Atlantic Coast Conference in rushing last season, led the Whites with 69 yards on 20 carries.

"This is the youngest college team I've been around and we needed this spring to work on fundamentals," North Carolina coach Dick Crum said. "I think we got a lot of teaching done and was pleased with the progess we made."

In Durham, Grantham scored on runs of two and 18 yards in the first half as the Duke offense grabbed a 31-14 lead. The 179-pounder, who carried the ball 22 times, added touchdown runs of 10 and two yards in the second half.

Relay Team Takes Third

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — East Carolina University's 4 X 100 relay unit of Chris Brooks, Erskine Evans, Joe Dingle and Henry Williams finished third at the Dogwood Relays with a time of 40.22, just .22 off the national qualifying time for that event.

Evans' time of 10.40 claimed fifth place in the 100 meter invitational.

ieh hisan Dogwood Relays

"Right now we're fifth out of all teams east of the Mississippi (River)," ECU Coach Bill Carson said of the 4 X 100 relay unit. "Georgia, North Carolina State, Tennessee and the University of Mississippi are ahead of us. Our time would put us in the top 20 of the country.

"Evans' finish was really tremendous; his leg in the 4 X 100 and the 100 meter run were the two best races he's ever run at ECU."

ECU results:

4 X 100 relay: third (Chris Brooks, Erskine Evans, Joe Dingle, Henry Williams) 40.22

100 invitational: Erskine Evans (fifth) 10.40

4 X 400: Seventh (Vincent Epps, Ruben Pierce, Phillips Estes, Chris Brooks) 3:11.10

Waltrip Wins TranSouth

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Darlington Raceway, billed by promoters as "too tough to tame," ran into a trainer Sunday who pampered it into submission.

Before winning the 28th annual TranSouth 500-mile stock car race, Darrell Waltrip had described the narrow, 1.366-mile oval as a track where "you hate to race but love to win."

Following his fourth career win on the 34-year-old layout, he said the demanding characteristics of the track "are what makes it so much fun when you do well here."

"I anguish over races at this track more than any other" on the NASCAR Grand National circuit, Waltrip said after scoring a two-second victory over fellow Chevrolet driver Terry Labonte.

"There's not much room to race here," Waltrip added, "and the competition in racing has gotten so keen that putting 38 drivers on this track is like putting piranhas in a pool with just one piece of meat.

"To win here, you've got to learn to race against the track instead of against the other drivers. Otherwise, this place will reach out and get you."

It got Benny Parsons on the first lap Sunday when his pole-winning Chevrolet hit the wall.

A five-car wreck two laps later spoiled victory thoughts for Richard Petty, Bobby Allison, Dick Brooks, Geoff Bodine and Ron Bouchard.

Before the halfway point, mechanical woes thwarted Neil Bonnett and 10-time Darlington winner David Pearson, and wrecks ruined the hopes of Tim Richmond, Dave Marcis, Buddy Baker and Joe Ruttman.

After tire problems knocked Harry Gant, Cale Yarborough and Petty from contention and an overheating engine sidelined Lake Speed, Waltrip had clear sailing to his 59th career triumph.

"I couldn't get over the start of the race," said Waltrip, who averaged 119.926 miles per hour as nine caution flags slowed the pace for 69 laps. "Half the cars you normally have to contend with were torn up in the first few laps.

"Track conditions were OK; maybe some of those guys were just trying too hard."

Return To Silverdome Good For Cliff Stoudt

By The Associated Press

Cliff Stoudt's appearance at the Pontiac Silverdome as quarterback of the Birmingham Stallions was quite a contrast to his last previous visit as a member of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Stoudt had a miserable game last Thanksgiving as the Steelers lost 45-3 to the Detroit Lions, but on Sunday he helped the Stallions win their seventh straight game, 28-17 over Michigan, the defending United States Football League champions.

"My trip to Detroit last time was pretty low," said Stoudt, who completed 15 of 24 passes for 133 yards and two touchdowns in the victory over the Panthers. "It was a rotten way to spend a holiday. But that's in the past now."

Elsewhere in the USFL Sunday, the Arizona Wranglers swamped the New Jersey Generals 20-3 and the Philadelphia Stars bombed the Chicago Blitz 41-7.

On Saturday, Oklahoma edged Washington 20-16, Los Angles beat Memphis 23-17 in overtime, Denver topped Pittsburgh 31-21 and San Antonio blanked Jacksonville 20-0.

Houston will play at Oakland and Tampa Bay will be at New Orleans in tonight's games.

Stoudt got plenty of help from former Buffalo Bill Joe Cribbs, who caught one of the TD passes for seven yards, rushed three yards for another score and finished with 116 yards on 20 carries.

"Cribbs is the key to our offense," Stoudt said. "He takes the pressure off us. He just does a lot of things well. He's an All-Pro player. He has the ability to break it any time."

Despite Birmingham's lofty 7-1 record under Coach Rollie Dotsch, Stoudt's statistics are undistinguished. He has completed less than 52 percent of his passes, has thrown for an average of only 144 yards per game and has only seven touchdown passes in eight outings.

"Rollie's system doesn't need a quarterback to throw for 300 yards every week," Stoudt said. "We want to play the way Green Bay and Miami did (in the 1960s and '70s). You play hard, possess the football and win."

Wranglers 20, Generals 3

Kevin Long, who used to play for the New York Jets when they were coached by Walt Michaels, rushed for 123 yards and two touchdowns in leading the Arizona over Michaels' current team, New Jersey.

The loss before a crowd of 31,917 at Giants Stadium dropped the Generals to 6-2 and out of a first-place tie in the Atlantic Division with Philadelphia.

In addition to his hard running, Long set up his 2-yard touchdown run early in the fourth quarter when took a short pass from Greg Landry and raced 40 yards. Long later scored on a 9-yard run.

Stars 41, Blitz 7

Philadelphia won easily at home before 17,417 fans, scoring four touchdowns before the game was nine minutes old and 31 points in the first period.

Linebacker Sam Mills set up two touchdowns and a field goal with two interceptions and a fumble recovery, and the Stars also intercepted two other passes and recovered another fumble, the latter being returned 35 yards for a touchdown by defensive back Scott Woerner.

The Stars are 7-1, while the Blitz fell to 2-6.

Saturday's Games

Oklahoma improved its record to 6-2 by winning its third straight game and keeping Washington winless. Quarterback Doug Williams, who hit 24 of 44 passes for 334 yards, passed eight yards to Ron Wheeler with 57 seconds left for the Outlaws' winning touchdown, climaxing a 93-yard drive. Williams finished with 24 of 44 passes for 333 yards.

Steve Young, Los Angeles' rookie quarterback, won his first game in three starts when he scored on a 1-yard plunge in overtime for the home-field victory over Memphis. Tony Zendejas of the Express sent the game into overtime with a 27-yard field goal with one second left in regulation.

Prep League Tryouts Set

Tryouts for Prep League baseball teams will be held Wednesday and Thursday at Jaycee Park from 4:30-6:30 p.m.

The league, sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, is open to 13-year-olds with birthdays between Aug. 1, 1970 and July 31, 1971. Those who did not play in Greenville Little Leagues should bring their birth certificate to the tryout.

Hillard, Clark Win Tourney

GRIFTON — Jim Hillard and Billy Clark III fired a combined 140 to win the Shad Festival Golf Tournament Sunday at Indian Trails Country Club.

The duo won a playoff against Thomas Riley and Tommy Riley for the championship, while Cecil Lilley and Ray Thomas took third place.

Padres Take Show On Road

By The Associated Press

The San Diego Padres, with a cast that includes a couple of Broadway characters, two young hoofers and a pair of newcomers starring in lead roles, have gotten their act together and are ready to take it on the road.

Off to the fastest start in their history, the Padres beat the Atlanta Braves 6-4 Sunday to wrap up their long-running, season-opening homestand with a lofty 9-2 record.

That mark puts the Padres, who have never finished in the first division since being formed in 1969, in a position they have never enjoyed prior to this year — 3½ games ahead of the pack in the National League West.

"I would have hated to think we wouldn't play good baseball," said San Diego Manager Dick Williams. "But I didn't think we would win nine of the 11 games."

In other NL games, St. Louis nipped Pittsburgh 1-0, Houston shaded Cincinnati 6-5, San Francisco topped Los Angeles 8-6 in 11 innings, and Philadelphia at Montreal and New York at Chicago were rained out.

San Diego rallied for three runs in the third inning, aided by an Atlanta error, to overcome a 4-3 deficit. With runners on first and second and one out, Carmelo Martinez lined a single to left, and both runners scored and Martinez reached third when the ball skipped by outfielder Gerald Perry.

Kevin McReynolds then hit a sacrifice fly off reliever Rick Mahler, who had relieved Craig McMurtry, 1-2.

Winner Sid Monge, 2-0, is one of six San Diego pitchers with a victory this season.

Claudell Washington drove in all four Atlanta runs with a three-run homer, his third of the year, and an RBI single.

The Padres venture to San Francisco for games Tuesday and Wednesday and then play four in Los Angeles before returning home.

"Everybody's playing 100 percent right now, but we have a long way to go," said rookie slugger Martinez, who is batting .324 since being acquired from the Chicago Cubs in an off-season trade.

Also supplying Padre power is McReynolds, who barely misses qualifying as a rookie, but, like Martinez, has two homers and seven runs batted in this year.

Assisting the San Diego attack are 23-year-old Tony Gwynn, who is hitting .415 with five stolen bases, and 26-year-old Alan Wiggins, who has swiped four bases.

And, there's reliever Rich Gossage, the multimillion-dollar free agent from the New York Yankees, who already has saved four games, and third baseman Graig Nettles, dealt by the Yankees to San Diego, who has knocked in six runs.

Meanwhile the Braves, accustomed to fast starts, are just 3-8.

"Well, it's not as much fun as last year or the year before," said Atlanta Manager Joe Torre.

"It sure gets you out of the box in a hurry," he said of the Padres' burst. "But the season is too long for one streak to carry you."

Giants 8, Dodgers 6

Pinch hitter Joel Youngblood's one-out single in the 11th inning sent San Francisco ahead for good in the four-hour seesaw contest at Los Angeles.

The Giants had scored twice in the top of the ninth against reliever Burt Hooton to take a 6-4 lead. Dusty Baker, whom San Francisco claimed on waivers from the Dodgers this year, drove in those two runs with a pinch single.

Los Angeles rallied in the bottom of the ninth against reliever Greg Minton to tie it on sacrifice flies by Steve Sax and Ken Landreaux.

But Chili Davis led off the Giant 11th with a double off Tom Niedenfuer, 0-1, and moved to third on a sacrifice. After an intentional walk, Youngblood singled to left off Carlos Diaz. Manny Trillo delivered a sacrifice fly off Pat Zachry, the sixth Los Angeles pitcher, for an insurance run.

Randy Lerch won his first decision of the season and Frank Williams, the fifth Giant pitcher, got his first save.

Fernando Valenzuela, who lost his first two starts of the season, went seven innings for the Dodgers.

Cardinals 1, Pirates 0

St. Louis scored in the bottom of the first inning and Cardinal starter Bob Forsch and three relievers made the run stand up.

Forsch departed with strained back muscles with one out in the fifth. Dave Rucker, 1-0, left in favor of Jeff Lahti with one out in the seventh, and Bruce Sutter came on with one out in the eighth for his fourth save.

The St. Louis pitchers, who entered the game with a 5.15 earned-run average, teamed on a seven-hitter.

Lonnie Smith scored the game's only run when he singled, Ozzie Smith doubled and George Hendrick grounded out.

Larry McWilliams, 0-2, and Cecilio Guante yielded six hits to the host Cardinals.

Astros 6, Reds 5

Houston scored four runs in the bottom of the eighth to make it 5-5 and then won it in the ninth on Phil Garner's one-out single with the bases loaded.

Garner's hit, through the left side of a drawn-in infield, came after the Astros loaded the bases on two walks and Enos Cabell's single off Tom Hume, 0-1.

Frank DiPino, 1-0, got the win at the Astrodome.

• • •

In Montreal, Philadelphia and the Expos were rained out after three innings. Mike Schmidt had homered for the Phillies.

Philadelphia's John Denny left the game in the second inning after getting hit in the shin by a line drive off the bat off Andre Dawson. The 1983 Cy Young Award winner got a bad bruise but is not expected to miss a pitching turn.

Ball, Akers Take Title

GRIFTON — Don Ball and Jim Akers of Greenville defeated Ben Johnson and Marvin Hardy 6-1, 6-4 to win the men's open doubles championship of the Grifton Shad Festival Tennis Tournament.

Don Mills and Steve Creech of Greenville defeated Bill Winfield of Rocky Mount and Eric Kelder of Washington for the men's 35 and over championship.

Results:

Men's open championship: Don Ball-Jim Akers (Greenville) d. Ben Johnson-Marvin Hardy (Greenville) 6-1, 6-4

Men's open consolation: John Switzer-Richard Anderson (Tarboro) d. Wes Singleton-Mike Davis (Greenville), 6-3, 6-3

Men's 35 championship: Don Mills-Steve Creech (Greenville) d. Bill Winfield (Rocky Mount)-Eric Kelder (Washington), 7-6, 3-6, 6-4

Clemson Wins Title

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Clemson, led by top-seeded Jane Forman, took five of six singles championships and two doubles titles to capture the 1984 Atlantic Coast Conference women's tennis title.

Forman beat second-seeded Sue Taylor of Duke 6-2, 6-3 as Clemson amassed a total of 138 points to outpoint North Carolina, which finished second with 122 points. Duke was third with 96 points.

Forman and Jody Trucks rallied to defeat North Carolina's Nancy Boggs and Julie Kirby 3-6, 7-5, 7-5 in the No. 1 doubles finals on the varsity courts at Wake Forest.

Forman was named the most valuable player in the three-day tournament by the league's coaches as she won her third straight title and sparked Clemson to its third straight crown.

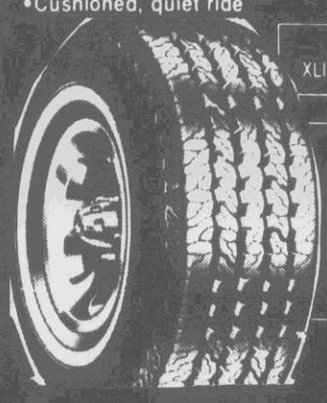

Boggs defeated Krista Clark of Virginia 6-2, 6-2 to win the No. 3 singles title while Kathy Barton and Stephanie Rauch of North Carolina defeated Lisa Bobby and Fernanda Cash of Clemson 6-3, 6-3.

The Cavaliers finished fourth with 78 points followed by Maryland with 75 points, Wake Forest with 55 points, North Carolina State with 27 points and Georgia Tech with 23 points.

Quisenberry-Fingers: Classic Confrontation Of Relievers

By The Associated Press

It was a classic confrontation of pitchers, not starters, but between relievers — one at the top of his game, the other struggling to get back.

It was Dan Quisenberry vs. Rollie Fingers. The single-season save king vs. the all-time save leader.

Quisenberry, who set a major league record with 45 saves in 1983, had earned a save in each of his previous four appearances with the Kansas City Royals this season. He relieved rookie Bret Saberhagen on Sunday to start the eighth inning.

Fingers, who came into the season with the all-time save record of 301, had earned his first save in nearly two years for Milwaukee the night before. Apparently on the road back from arm surgery, Fingers took over from Mike Caldwell with one out in the eighth inning.

When Fingers came to the mound, the Brewers had a 3-2 lead, and he made it stand up with 1 2-3 innings of one-hit relief, striking out three of the six batters he faced. He hadn't had a save since Aug. 27, 1982. Now, he had two in two days.

"I'm not 100 percent of what I was," said the tall right-hander with the handlebar mustache. "The fastball is about five miles slower, but my forkball is working. I've worked on it for four or five years now, and I can finally throw strikes."

The Brewers took the lead with two runs off Quisenberry in the eighth inning. Ted Simmons drove in a run with a single, and Dion James had a sacrifice fly. Two walks by Quisenberry, one intentional, aided the Milwaukee rally.

"I know I'm going to blow some games, and this is the first one of the year," Quisenberry said. "That's the first time I can ever remember walking two guys in one inning."

Steve Balboni doubled and scored twice to help the Royals take a 2-1 lead.

In other American League games, California outslugged Oakland 12-8, Baltimore edged Cleveland 6-5, New York beat Chicago 2-1 in 10 innings, Toronto defeated Texas 2-1 and Seattle beat Minnesota 5-4. Detroit at Boston was rained out.

Angels 10, A's 8

California scored nine of its runs with four homers, including a grand slam by Brian Downing, and the Angels led 10-0 after a seven-run second inning. Reggie Jackson, who has 10 RBI and three homers in 10 games, and Juan Beniquez hit two-run homers, and Rob Wilfong hit a solo shot after Downing's slam in the second.

Doug Corbett, making his first appearance of the season, pitched 3 1-3 innings of hitless relief to earn the save. He entered the game in the bottom of the sixth with the score already 10-8.

Oakland, which had 13 hits, scored twice in the fourth, once in the fifth and five times in the sixth. Dwayne Murphy and Davey Lopes had three hits apiece.

Orioles 6, Indians 5

Wayne Gross' two-run double with the bases loaded in the top of the ninth inning capped a three-run rally that broke a 3-3 tie, and the Orioles held on to win for only the second time in eight games. Ken Singleton's ninth-inning single broke the tie.

Sammy Stewart worked the final two innings for the victory, but in the ninth inning, he gave up one earned run and the Indians scored again on an error by left fielder Jim Dwyer to pull within one.

Dwyer's error on an RBI-single by Brett Butler allowed a second run to score, and Butler ended up at third with one out. On the next play, however, Dwyer atoned for the error. Tony Bernazard hit a fly ball to medium left, and Dwyer cut Butler down at the plate.

Yankees 2, White Sox 1

Ken Griffey hit a two-out, bases-loaded single in the 10th inning to help the Yankees end the White Sox's three-game winning streak. Griffey's hit looked like a routine out until it fell over the head of Chicago left fielder Ron Kittle, who was playing shallow against the left-handed hitter.

Dave Righetti, who pitched a no-hitter last season as a starter, won his first game of the season with 1 2-3 hitless innings in his fourth relief appearance.

Pollano, Mayo Win Tourney

Danny Pollano and Lavern Mayo won the Sunday Night Best Ball tourney at Putt-Putt Golf and Games.

The pair combined scores of 31, 27, and 24 to finish with a 26-under 82. They rallied in the final round to overtake Jake Loftin and Davis Beacham who were leading going into the last round. Loftin and Beacham finished second with a 21-under 87.

Proving Again New York Is Good TV Background

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — As the only prime-time entertainment series that wears a "Made-in-New York" label, CBS' "Kate & Allie" shopped in West Side boutiques for its wardrobe, hunted out-of-the way bargains for its set and fought midtown traffic snarls to meet its production deadlines.

Like native New Yorkers who love the big city, in spite of its agonies and anxieties, "Kate & Allie" is proving that entertainment programs not only can be produced here, they can also be successful.

After a two-week hiatus because of college basketball and last Monday's Academy Awards show, "Kate & Allie," starring Jane Curtin and Susan Saint James, returns tonight with another splendid episode. The first two broadcasts, March 19 and March 26, finished fourth and eighth in the weekly ratings.

"We feel some burden to succeed to demonstrate what can be done here," said Josh Kane, CBS' vice presidend for program development in New York. "It could inspire more shows in New York and alter the perception that you can't staff a show in the East."

The last successful entertainment program done here was NBC's "Love, Sidney," but that was a carpetbagger production. Star Tony Randall insisted he stay in New York, so the writing and production staff was flown in from Los Angeles and put up in hotels.

"Our show is different. It was created here, developed here, and the production company is based here," said Michael Ogiens, CBS' vice president for programs in New York. "Many of the people arrive on buses and subways from their homes."

Director Bill Persky said that means "writers who don't normally get involved in TV are bringing their distinctive sounds and attitudes to the show." Bob Randall, who wrote the play "6 Rms Riv Vu," is the producer.

"There's a rhythm here that's different," said Persky. "You pick up by osmosis the city's vitality and energy. The deliveries are faster, so our page counts are 25 percent higher. The whole production is tighter and more clipped."

Kane and Ogiens won't say New York is a better place than Hollywood for TV; just different. "The concept would have been the same — two divorced women, both single parents, living together," said Kane. "We would just have different people, that's all."

Miss Curtin and Miss Saint James, who both live in Connecticut, say they would not have done shows in Hollywood. And, if "Kate & Allie" were done on the West Coast, the bit parts would have been cast with California actors, not Broadway stage stars, such as John Heard and Rosemary Murphy.

The show's weekly opening, in which the leads exchange banter at some New York City location, wouldn't work as well on a Hollywood back lot. "And you wouldn't have seen the winter breath coming out of their mouths," said Kane.

The New York elements make for reality, but they don't necessarily make things easier.

"If you're shooting a summer scene in the winter, you have to make sure the palm tree doesn't die before you get it to the set," said production designer Tom John. "It's hard dragging it through the snow and the slush."

But city traffic was another thing. Persky was losing so much time getting crosstown for post-production work that he had an editing facility built at the Ed Sullivan Theater on Broadway, where "Kate & Allie" is taped.

Baltimore Group Trying To Honor A Great Jazz Singer

By LARRY ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Billie Holiday was never sentimental about her hometown of Baltimore — she associated it with big rats, Jim Crow and poverty — but a community group here wants to pay tribute to her reign as one of America's greatest jazz singers.

Her admirers say the tribute is long overdue. But it also may be long coming.

Plans for a drug center bearing her name have been abandoned, and although an 8½-foot-tall statue of Miss Holiday is nearly complete, the city and the sculptor disagree over it and there is some question if it will ever be finished.

"It seems to me that this is just another type of degradation that she has had to stand," said Lena Boone, president of the Upton Planning Committee, the community group.

Miss Holiday, whose heroin addiction, turbulent love affairs and 10 months in prison were portrayed in the movie "Lady Sings the Blues," is known almost as much for the degradation of her life as for the music she made.

She was born to unwed parents, and when she died in 1959 at the age of 44, her body was buried in an unmarked grave at St. Raymond's Cemetery in New York, where it still lies. In between she was raped, was sent to a home for wayward girls, worked as a call girl and was arrested on narcotics violations.

But she also was one of the most highly regarded vocalists of her day. She sang with Artie Shaw, Benny Goodman and Count Basie, and became known for her renditions of such diverse songs as "Them There Eyes," "God Bless the Child" and "Strange Fruit."

In 1943, she was rated the best vocalist by jazz critics in the first Esquire poll, beating out Mildred Baily and Ella Fitzgerald. Frank Sinatra, who first heard her in the early 1930s, said she was the greatest single musical influence on him.

Members of the Upton Planning Committee, named for the section of the city where the statue would be placed, say they want a "positive image" of Miss Holiday to remember. But 12 years after plans for the statue and drug center were first made, there is still no memorial to the woman who came to be known as "Lady Day."

"There has been so much said, so much done, but nothing concrete," said Clifton Sherrard, a former Baltimore school official who is not part of the Upton group but met Miss Holiday and attended some of her performances.

The statue is encased in a plaster cast and awaiting shipment to a foundry. But the sculptor, James Reid, wants more than the $50,000 the city of Baltimore promised him in 1978 to complete the statue. The Upton group, which initiated the project, says the artist has had time and money enough.

"It's our feeling that the statute is being held hostage," said Ms. Boone. "Whatever fight he has, he has with the city."

Reid, a teacher at the Baltimore School for the Arts who has been beset by personal problems during the project, said he was being unfairly cast as the bad guy.

Two U.S. Officials Dead In African Bomb Explosion

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa (AP) — Two U.S. officials monitoring South Africa's troop withdrawal from Angola were killed when a bomb blast shattered a gasoline station that has been a past target of guerrillas fighting for independence.

A Western diplomatic source said that the attack apparently was not aimed at the Americans and that they simply happened to be there at the time.

The two, en route to a briefing on troop withdrawal arrangements, were killed Sunday 25 miles from the Angolan border when the bomb exploded at the station where they had stopped to service their car.

Two other people, both from the South African-ruled territory, also died, the South African government said.

South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha identified the American victims as Dennis Keogh, director of the U.S. diplomatic office monitoring the troop withdrawal agreement, and military attache Lt. Col. Ken Crabtree.

No one claimed responsibility immediately for the blast.

The South African administrator-general of the territory, Wille van Niekerk, blamed the explosion on the South-West Africa People's Organization, which has fought a low-key independence war for 17 years in the territory it calls Namibia. The blast was in an area where SWAPO has been most active.

"At a time when virtually everyone in southern Africa is working toward peace, SWAPO still clings to a barbaric preference for senseless violence," van Niekerk said.

But in London, SWAPO's deputy chief representative Jacob Hannai said, "We didn't kill them. We never have known that there have been diplomats there. Who invited those diplomats to come to Namibia?"

Botha sent a message to U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz expressing South Africa's "shock and deep regret" over the deaths of the two Americans.

"It is bitterly ironic that these officers, who were so closely involved in the search for peace in southern Africa, should have become the victims of the very cycle of violence which we are trying to end," Botha said in a message to the families of the victims. "Let me assure you that our prayers will be with you and your families."

The bodies of the two Americans were being flown to Johannesburg late today and would be returned to the United States on Tuesday, said Robert Gosende, spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Pretoria. Gosende said an embassy official, political counsellor Tim Carney, would become acting director of the U.S. monitoring office.

Reports from witnesses at the gas station said one American was killed instantly by the bomb and the second died while being treated for burns.

Officials said they had not determined what type of explosive was used or how it was set off.

SWAPO guerrillas have relied on land mines and bomb attacks in their war against South African troops. The filling station hit Sunday was built in part with money from a government development corporation overseen by South Africa.

The blast occurred about 300 miles north of the U.S. office in Windhoek, capital of the disputed territory.

The office was established after a pact was signed Feb. 16 between Angola and South Africa. The United States helped set up that meeting in Zambia.

South Africa, which had staged a number of operations into southern Angola to attack SWAPO bases, agreed to withdraw its troops and Angola agreed to stop aiding the guerrillas.

The pact was seen as a step toward cease-fire in the bush war. SWAPO leader Sam Nujoma said his men would stop launching attacks into Namibia from Angola. But guerrillas inside the territory would continue to fight.

South-West Africa, formerly a German protectorate, came under South African administration through a mandate from the old League of Nations following Germany's defeat in World War I.

South Africa's white-minority government has continued to rule the mineral-rich but sparsely populated region in defiance of United Nations resolutions demanding that the territory receive independence. Virtually all of Namibia's 1 million citizens are blacks.

Victim Helped In Tracking A Killer

By JOHN F. BONFATTI
Associated Press Writer

PENN YAN, N.Y. (AP) — Despite near-fatal stab wounds, a 16-year-old girl provided "very thorough" information that was crucial to cornering Christopher Wilder, whose nationwide spree of terror ended with his shooting death in a scuffle with police, a sheriff says.

Within two hours of Dawnette Sue Wilt's arrival at Soldiers and Sailors Hospital here, "we were sure Wilder was the man we were looking for," Yates County Sheriff Jan S. Scofield said Sunday.

Miss Wilt, of Dyer, Ind., was found walking along a road Thursday after being abducted from an Indiana shopping mall, driven across country, then stabbed and left for dead.

"She described him," Scofield said at a news conference. "She described a vehicle that was involved within a relatively short period of time, and through working very closely with the FBI, we had confirmed that it was Wilder that we were looking for."

Wilder, a former race car driver and millionaire electrical contractor from Boynton Beach, Fla., shot himself to death Friday during a struggle with police in northern New Hampshire.

The FBI says he was responsible for an eight-week cross-country spree of rape, torture and murder in which 11 women were abducted. Four were killed, four are missing and three escaped.

Scofield praised Miss Wilt's composure in the face of her ordeal.

"It was unbelievable how a 16-year-old girl could go through what she had gone through, and as soon as the hospital personnel had done what they had to do to reassure she wasn't going to succumb, she was very, very concise, very thorough with all her descriptions," he said.

"If we hadn't had the break with her in this case, I firmly believe that Mr. Wilder would still be alive," Scofield said.

Miss Wilt, abducted April 10 from a Merrillville, Ind., shopping mall, was described by her father, David, as "progressing quite nicely." The hospital listed her in stable condition.

Wilder's body will be returned to Boynton Beach on Tuesday or Wednesday at the request of his younger brother, Steven, said Robert Moore, owner of the Newman Funeral Home in Colebrook, N.H.

Wilder died when two bullets from his own .357-Magnum revolver ripped through his heart during a struggle with a state trooper, who was wounded. Although official records list Wilder's death as "accidental," authorities say they may never know whether he intended to shoot himself or the trooper, or whether the gun went off by mistake.

"We don't have any conclusions yet. But we think the evidence is mounting that he drew that gun to try to kill the trooper," said New Hampshire Assistant Attorney General Michael Pignatelli.

Meanwhile, Wilder's sister-in-law told an Australian newspaper today that his parents have gone through "living hell" as their son was hunted for the string of killings and attacks.

"At least now the nightmare is over. We still have to live with the people who wonder what sort of family could have produced someone like Christopher," said Valerie Wilder, Steven's wife. "The last three weeks has been living hell."

Wilder was born in Sydney, Australia, in 1945, moved to the United States with his family when he was 9, then returned to Australia with them some years later.

He returned to the United States 16 years ago and became a successful businessman and American citizen, Mrs. Wilder said. "It was always work, work, work.... I think maybe it all became too much and that may have been why he cracked," she said.

In California, a psychiatrist said that Tina Marie Risico, whom Wilder drove across the country and then freed in New York, may have been released because "she did not meet his need to murder and destroy."

Miss Risico, who was offered $100 to pose for photographs for Wilder before he pulled a gun on her April 4 in Torrance, Calif., was put on a plane in Boston on Thursday night by the fugitive and arrived in California the day he died.

Dr. Roland Summit, a psychiatrist, said he believed Miss Risico "showed a kind of humanness, gentleness, a kind of feeling that somehow didn't provoke rage" in Wilder. He added that she was "subjected to sexual humiliation and brainwashing. The pattern follows explicitly one in which terror and obedience are instilled in the victim."

While the Wilts and the Risicos were rejoicing over their daughters' returns, authorities and volunteers searched the San Juan Mountains on Sunday for a missing 19-year-old Grand Junction woman.

Sheryl Bonaventura was last seen March 26 in a Silverton, Colo., sandwich shop with a man believed to have been Wilder the day she vanished from a shopping center in Grand Junction, 110 miles away.

TAKING CALLS

Registrars taking calls for the Pitt County Professional Private Duty Nurses' registry are: Grance Turner, R.N., 756-0375, April 16-20; and Helen McArthur, R.N., 756-1854, April 23-27. The registry consist of all nurses approved for private duty in Pitt Memorial Hospital. Registrars try to cover both home and hospital cases. For emergencies call either of the above.

Will Probe Comet Tail

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists plan to send a 1,000-pound, unmanned spacecraft hurtling through the tail of comet Giacobini-Zinner at a point 44 million miles from Earth.

With what scientists called a slingshot-like boost from the moon's gravity, the solar-powered spacecraft International Cometary Explorer is aimed at a point where it should intercept the comet and begin readings on Sept. 11, 1985, scientists said Sunday.

A dim photo of the comet, which orbits the sun every 6 12 years, was taken April 3 when Giacobini-Zinner was 5 million times fainter than the faintest stars that can be seen by the naked eye, scientists at Kitt Peak National Observatory in Tucson, Ariz., said.

Dr. Robert Farquhar, mission director, said that the comet's course must be watched to make sure the spacecraft meets it.

"We have aimed the spacecraft to a point in space and we want to make sure the comet will be there," the National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientist said.

The Explorer has enough fuel aboard for several course corrections. But Michael Belton, one of the astronomers who found the comet, said it is only about 6,000 miles from where scientists predicted it would be. That means only a small correction of the spacecraft's course may be needed, he said.

Over the next two years, worldwide attention will focus on Halley's Comet as it makes its first appearance since 1910. Scientists suggested diverting Explorer's mission from Halley's Comet to Giacobini-Zinner, a smaller body observed near the sun 10 times since its discovery in 1900, when a budgetary problem developed.

Officials said the Giacobini-Zinner mission will cost between $3 million and $5 million.

Abandoned Baby Given Family At Burial Rites

HITCHCOCK, Texas (AP) — A 4-day-old girl who died after being abandoned in a roadside ditch found a family in death when 65 strangers showed up for her graveside service.

"We were all her family out there," said the Rev. Robert W. King, pastor of the First Baptist Church of La Marque.

He said there was no lack of names in the section of the guest register reserved for relatives.

"We all signed the book," King said.

The mourners Saturday included 20 La Marque police officers and about 45 other people from all walks of life.

The child's real name is not known, but nurses who worked to save her life called her April Cora — "April" for the month in which she was found, "Cora" from the Latin word for heart.

The infant was discovered beside a road April 9 by a service station worker who was hunting for aluminum cans. She died of cardiac arrest Thursday in the neonatal intensive care unit of the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston.

When she was found, April Cora badly needed medical treatment for the insect bites on her back and a sunburn so severe doctors could not determine her race.

"Even though her life lasted only four days, those four days were valuable," said King, who is also chairman of the child abuse prevention committee of the Noon Optimist Club in La Marque.

La Marque police Capt. Larry Crow said scores of people offered to adopt April after she was found.

"The baby kind of grabbed the hearts of everybody in the community," Crow said.

One of those who was touched from afar arrived too late for the graveside ceremony, but knelt beside the grave afterward and added her own bouquet to the flower-covered mound of dirt.

"I'm not religious, but I prayed for her every day," said Lyn Banks Nun of Houston, a 48-year-old receptionist. "How could somebody walk away and leave a poor little thing like that? I would've taken her. Who she was, what she was, I don't care. I would have given her a good home."

BOATS ON STILL WATER . . . are lovely to look at and to photograph. The boats here, with new fronds of soft green willows at right, are at the home of fisherman Kurt Schaefer in the Burbage Cross Roads Community southeast of Bath in Beaufort County.

FLOWERING TREES . . . fruit-bearing or ornamental add color and fragrance to home yards and along the countryside.

The Outdoors Lure Of Spring

Now that income tax time frustration has passed, the Arts Festival is drawing to a close, and hopefully, the last days with winter's bite have gone, it's getting out into the countryside time again.

Nature is coming into full green and children in school are getting restless. They want the smell of outdoors and the joy of shedding shoes. With days getting longer, there's extra hours to explore the country roads away from the traffic of busy towns, a time of respite from the demands of routine work hours.

Fishermen young and old experience the renewed excitement of the lure of fishing trips, and housewives neglect household chores to devote pleasant hours in their flower gardens.

Farmers populate the fields once more, their tractors pulling equipment that transforms last year's stalk-studded cultivated land into friable, dark new-plowed earth.

In short, spring fever time is here again, as the last half of April beckons young and old to enjoy the all too brief magic of springtime.

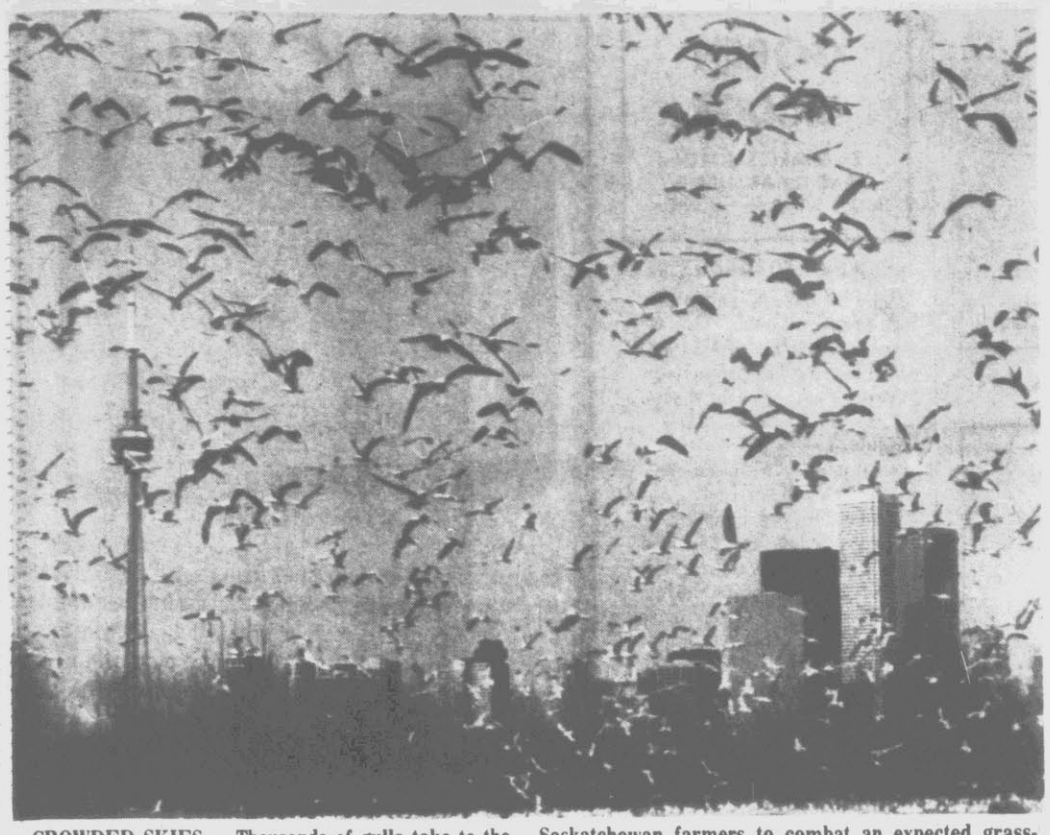

WAITING FOR SPRING FISHING . . . A couple of outdoor sinks under a shelter alongside a fishing pond will very likely see use again soon. It will not be long before fisherman will use the sinks to clean their catch of perch and bass from the waters of the pond.

GETTING IN CLOSE . . . for a careful look at the formation of flowers is rewarding. A single flower, such as this white iris, reveals a complex world of shapes, textures and details.

RETIRED FROM THE SCENE . . . Happily, not every farmer immediately consigns obsolete equipment such as this hay rake to a junk pile. This rake, on a roadside in Beaufort County, fascinates children who want to stop to see something from the past, something unfamiliar to most of them.

Forecast Varying Farmer Financial Gains In 1984

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government and private forecasters say 1984 will mean financial gains for farmers, although they admit improvements will vary greatly according to types of production, region and weather patterns.

But there are also some worrisome symptoms that suggest the basic health of the U.S. farm economy has some distance to go before full recovery.

The Agriculture Department says farm income may be up substantially. Overall, commodity prices are currently running about 9 percent above year-ago levels, including a 16 percent gain for crop prices. Livestock prices in March were up only 2.7 percent from a year earlier.

Chase Econometrics, Bala Cynwyd, Pa., takes somewhat of a mixed view of 1984 farm prospects.

"Agricultural commodity prices have been relatively strong during the last few weeks, but the underlying factors that are currently acting to support the spotty pockets of strength in the farming sector are for the most part quite tenuous," Chase says in idc April outlook report. "These pockets of strength include the feed grains, oilseeds and poultry sectors."

The Chase report added that while the cash flow and incomes of corn and soybean farmers are "much improved over a year ago," the improvement has fallen short of expectations because of "the overvalued U.S. dollar and generally weak underlying demand" in domestic and export markets.

"Prospects for crop producers in 1984 remain dim as supplies rebuild and prices dip," the report said. "The bright spot is in the livestock sectors — livestock producers will benefit substantially from higher meat prices and lower feed costs."

A recent annual report by the Farm Credit Administration shows that thousands of full-time commercial farmers are still in financial trouble, with debts piling up and their ability to repay loans put under heavy stress.

The FCA, an independent federal agency, oversees operations of the cooperatively owned Farm Credit System, which includes federal land bank associations and production credit associations.

According to the annual report, which covered the year that ended on Dec. 31, 1983, loan losses of the PCAs or production credit associations — which provide short-term loans to farm borrowers — rose to $238 million last year from $159 million in 1982.

Federal land banks, which offer long-term loans on real estate, saw their losses rise to $9.8 million from $1.8 million the previous year.

The loan volume of the federal land banks dropped 36.5 percent in 1983 and PCA lending by 8.7 percent. The land bank associations hold more than 43 percent of all farm real estate loans outstanding, and PCAs hold more than 18 percent of all non-real estate farm debt.

As of Dec. 31, the federal land associations had 662,270 loans outstanding, a total of $51.1 billion. Of those, 2,778 loans totaling $572 million "were in the process of being liquidated," the report said.

The liquidation process may include volutary sales of assets or foreclosure on the farm loan.

As of Dec. 31, federal land banks had 632 "acquired properties on hand" totaling $119 million, compared to 239 valued at $31 million a year earlier, the report said.

The PCAs had $19.3 billion in loans outstanding to 340,837 members. As of Dec. 31, 5,520 loans were in the process of liquidation, compared to 4,163 a year earlier. The value of loans in the liquidation process rose to $471 million from $356 million.

Aussies Score In 2 Asian Markets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Australia, always a major U.S. competitor in the world grain trade, has scored again in two important Asian markets, according to the Agriculture Department.

The USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service said in a recent review of trade developments that South Korea "has emerged as a significant market for Australian wheat this season." Total purchases of wheat to be used as livestock feed are estimated at nearly 400,000 metric tons, primarily from Australia.

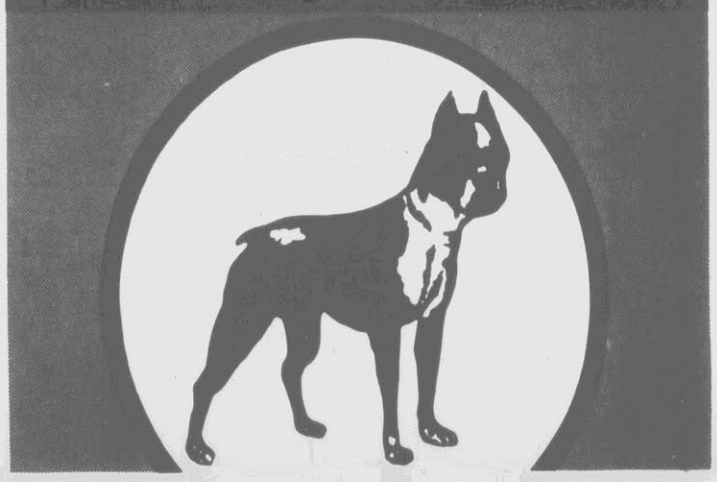

Exports of U.S. corn to South Korea, meanwhile, are expected to fall "considerably below" last season's level of 3.9 million tons.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

Further, the report said, Bangladesh has signed an agreement with Australia for the purchase of an additional 200,000 tons of "general purpose" wheat, raising commercial sales of Australian wheat to more than 400,000 tons. The United States has sold only about 140,000 tons of wheat to Bangladesh in 1983-84.

'Generics' Doing Well

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — They don't come in eye-pleasing packages, have no slick names or million dollar advertising budget, but generic cigarettes are doing well for Liggett & Myers.

It is all but alone in producing the low-cost smokes at a time when other companies are seeking ways to combat the record decline in cigarette sales.

Generics cost about $1.80 a carton less than brand-names, which soared in price after federal excise taxes were doubled to 16 cents a pack on Jan. 1, 1983.

James Dowd, director of generic marketing for Liggett, said profits on generics have been kept relatively low. Liggett skipped three general price increases before raising generics about 30 cents a carton on March 1, he said.

Dowd said that more than 99 percent of all generics are made by Liggett in Durham, N.C.

Some companies have "sales forces as large as 2,000. We run ours on less than 50," he said, adding that the absence of brand advertising is the biggest savings even though Liggett does some informational advertising for generics.

Unheard of three or four years ago, generics have captured about 4 percent of the market. "And it looks like they will be at 5 percent or better for 1984," said John Maxwell Jr., a leading analyst with Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb.

A brand is considered successful if it can capture more than one-half of 1 percent of a shrinking market.

Other companies have been coming up with other marketing ploys.

R.J. Reynolds and Brown & Williamson are offering large packs as a sort of bonus to customers.

Ordinarily, cigarettes come 20 to a pack, 10 packs to a carton. The jumbos come 25 to a pack, nine packs to a carton. In that way, the companies are offering 225 brand-name cigarettes for roughly the price of 200.

Reynolds began offering its Century brand of 25-packs, as they are called, last July.

Brown & Williamson is testing a 25-pack called Richland.

Dowd said that with a continued price gap, generics should attract more smokers who "don't feel their pack of cigarettes is necessarily an extension of their personalities."

Generic sales are being watched by such groups as the Kentucky Farm Bureau. It talks of making generics out of excess burley, which is creating major problems for Kentucky growers.

Hunting Natural Fire Ant Enemy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department scientists are turning to Brazil, the ancestral home of the imported red fire ants that infest the southern United States, in hopes of finding natural enemies of the fierce, biting insects.

The department's Agricultural Research Service has provided $100,000 to help finance the project, which will be carried out cooperatively with Brazil's agricultural research agency, Empresa Brazileira de Pedquisa Agropecuaria.

Terry B. Kinney, administrator of the USDA agency, said recently that the project "will focus on detecting effective biological weapons" against the [illegible] ants, which currently infest about 230 million acres across the South, from Texas to the Carolinas.

Red fire ants were inadvertently imported from ship cargoes unloaded in Mobile, Ala., in the 1930s, the agency said. For years, a pesticide — mirex — was used to control the ants, but the Environmental Protection Agency canceled its use in 1978.

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES
County Extension Chairman

I predict that a few years down the road we'll all look back and say that 1984 was the year many North Carolina soybean growers got serious about soybean production and growers also got serious about growing soybeans for a profit instead of preparing the soil and planting.

I also predict that those farmers who are still growing soybeans in the future will be the ones who started a crop rotation program. In fact, I don't believe that persons who have grown soybeans continuously on the same land year after year will be able to do so much longer. Many farmers are already following a crop rotation program. Because of the threat of stem canker, nematodes and other diseases, 1984 is certainly the time for the grower who hasn't already started rotating to do so.

A good rotation system should result in decreasing pressure from diseases, nematodes and weeds. Variety recommendations can be geared more toward those with high yield potentials, rather than a heavy emphasis toward nematode and disease resistance.

With a decrease in weed pressure, growers can move to narrower rows and worry less about eliminating cultivation.

When we advise rotation, we are talking about a full crop season out of soybeans. Planting wheat or another small grain in the winter, but then following with soybeans in the spring does not constitute an effective rotation.

For nematodes and diseases to be depressed significantly, beans should remain out of a field for a complete cropping season. Leaving land idle for a cropping season can be effective, provided the field is kept free of weeds. It's usually more convenient and more economical to plant some type of crop than to let the land stay idle.

Commercial seed producers and some growers have routinely treated soybean seed with a fungicide at planting. Most growers, however, have not treated seed as a regular practice except when it was necessary to use seed of questionable quality.

When high quality seed was used, there were few problems in getting adequate stands. So, response to seed treatment was generally non-significant.

But we have developed a rather complex disease problem in fields in which soybeans have been grown continuously for several years. It may be desirable for growers to begin considering seed treatment as a regular practice, at least until a rotation program decreases pressure.

It's important to remember that fungicides can damage inoculating bacteria if the two are mixed together very long before planting.

Three People Die In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press:

Three people died in weekend traffic accidents on North Carolina roads, including an a man who died in a bicycle accident, the state Highway Patrol said today.

Mark Edward Collins of Lillington died when he rode his bicycle into the path of a car on U.S. 421 in Harnett County, troopers said.

Thomas McLaughlin of Ellerbe died when his car ran off a rural Richmond County road and overturned at 8:45 p.m. Saturday.

Early Saturday, Tracy Scott Marsh, 22, of Bessemer City, was killed when the car in which he was riding struck a tree in Gastonia.

The deaths raised the state's yearly death toll to 308, compared to 320 at this same time last year.

A North Carolina woman was also killed in an accident in Cocke County Tennessee Saturday.

Mary West Crumbley, 31, of High Point, N.C., was killed about 1 a.m. when her car was struck by a car driven by Arnold N. Whaley, 18, of Newport, the patrol said.

Troopers said Whaley's car crossed into the wrong lane of U.S. 25-70 about two miles west of Newport. Whaley was also killed in the collision.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A94 ♡A1093 ◇4 ♣K10843
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Dble
Rdble	3 ◇	?

What action do you take?
A.—You described your hand when you jump raised partner's suit at your first turn. Now, you don't know what to do. You could have a slam in clubs, or no more than a partscore — it might even be right to double the vulnerable opponents. Pass, and leave the decision to partner.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K983 ♡Q932 ◇AKJ9 ♣10
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—There is no reason to depart from the general principle that, as responder, you should bid your suits up the line. Respond one diamond. If partner has a four-card major suit, he will be able to show it at the one-level and the fit will be uncovered.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K983 ♡Q932 ◇AKJ9 ♣10
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Not only has partner denied a four-card major suit with his club rebid, he almost surely has a six-card suit in this sequence — with any other distribution, he would either have been able to raise diamonds or bid one no trump. There is no future in this hand beyond game. Bid three no trump.

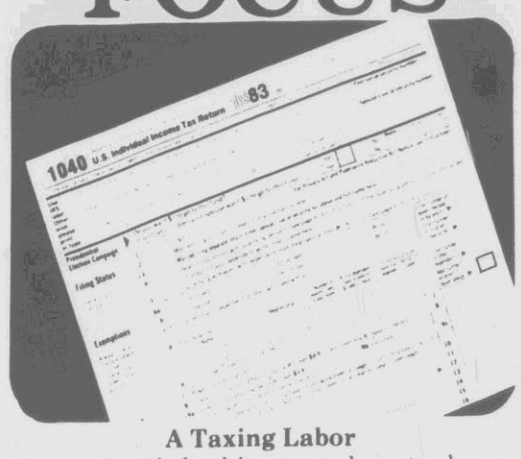

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ73 ♡K1087 ♣K752
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—You could easily have game if partner has the right cards — the fate of the hand depends on how little he has in diamonds. You are worth a try for game, and we recommend three clubs. If partner returns to three spades or bids three diamonds, be content with a partscore.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQJ97632 ♡6 ◇9654
What is your opening bid?
A.—This is simply a question of hand valuation. When you have a seven-card or longer suit, you should count any side four-card suit, no matter how weak, as being worth one playing trick. Your hand, therefore, is worth eight playing tricks and, at this vulnerability, merits an opening bid of four spades according to the Rule of Two and Three.

A Taxing Labor

The mailman's load is sure to be extra heavy today, as millions of Americans send in their tax returns. The Tax Foundation estimates the average American worker labors 1 hour and 5 minutes a day to buy food; an hour and a half for housing; and 20 minutes for recreation costs. However, 2 hours and 44 minutes of work are required to pay taxes. In 1981, for every $1 in tax paid by Americans, West Germans paid $1.08 and the French paid $1.18.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, APRIL 17, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Don't let your prejudices or any criticism you have of persons or conditions show or you can find yourself behind the eight ball where it can be most embarrassing.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You may find yourself arguing over some business affair if you don't give it further study first.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are apt to get into a big quarrel with a partner because you do not agree on something. Use tact.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Try not to argue with fellow workers or others because you have different views. Make sure you safeguard your reputation.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You and a friend may disagree about some pleasure, but it is best to compromise. Avoid an argument with your mate.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Take care you do not disagree with those at home otherwise a bug fuss can ensue and reconciliation would be difficult later.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Find a better way of handling those who do not agree with your ideas and gain their cooperation. Drive with care.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A financial expert and you may see things differently on some matter, so postpone coming to any definite decision.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Find the right means through which you and allies can handle problematical affairs much better. Not a good time for the social side of life.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't make the mistake of trying to belittle others or you could get into trouble easily. Think along constructive lines.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You don't understand why you don't get a personal wish granted; don't argue with a bigwig if that is the way it is going to be.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You may not agree with one in power, but could get into big trouble if you voice your views. Enjoy some hobby in the evening.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You want to be off to new sites and interests but could get into trouble if you don't keep your part of any agreements already made.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one who has a penchant for fighting over every little thing and should be taught to be more willing to deal harmoniously with others, and then there can be much success during the lifetime, otherwise life could be most difficult. Teach to be cooperative.

ADVERTISING OF TAX LIENS OF REAL PROPERTY

Under and by virtue of the authority vested in me by Section 105-369 of the North Carolina General Statutes and pursuant to an order of the City Council of City of Greenville, dated April 12, 1984, I am hereby advertising tax liens for the year 1983 upon the real estate described below. The amount advertised will be increased by interest and costs, and the omission of interest and costs from the amount advertised will not constitute a waiver of the taxing unit's claim for those items. The real estate that is subject to the lien, the name of the person to whom the property is listed for taxes, and the principal amount of the taxes are set out below. If the taxes remain unpaid, the lien will be foreclosed by the taxing unit and the property sold to satisfy the taxing unit's claim for taxes.

This 16th day of April, 1984.

Direct Mail Helps Candidates Target Money

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — In an effort to reach more and more of North Carolina's 2.7 million registered voters — and potential political contributors — many candidates have turned to direct mail.

Gov. Jim Hunt is hoping to raise $2 million outside North Carolina and assistant campaign director Mike Davis said less than half of that will come from direct mail.

Hunt has not used direct mail in the past and is trying it in his U.S. Senate campaign in an effort to more closely match Sen. Jesse Helms' spending.

"There is nothing sinister about direct mail," Davis said. "It is a communications tool and the only way to get to some folks.

"The advantage is that it's a reasonably quick source of income and if you're good at it ... it is a very large source of income," Davis said.

"The concept is to go directly to your client," said Doug Davidson, president of Jefferson Marketing Inc. in Raleigh. "Radio and TV is more of a shotgun approach. You don't know who you're reaching."

Jefferson Marketing is one of the nationally recognized leaders in the field of direct mail, and has helped Helms raise money since 1979.

The level of activity at JMI and the company's successful techniques remain closely guarded secrets, but Davidson acknowledged that several years ago JMI was mailing 5 million letters a year.

Davidson says that letters to proven contributors might raise $1 for every 25 cents spent on the mailing.

Like prospectors searching for gold, direct mail companies buy lists of voters that will be sifted through time and again to sort out willing contributors.

For example, a Republican candidate for governor might buy a list of North Carolina subscribers to more conservative magazines like the National Review or U.S. News & World Report and a list of contributors to conservative candidates in previous elections.

Those who use direct mail say they hope to break even on such "prospect" mailings and would be happy if about 2 percent of the letters brought contributions.

In follow-up mailings as often as once a month, direct mail companies predict that about 10 percent of the letters will generate a response and that can be increased to 20 percent with telephone calls.

Direct mail consultants have refined the art of writing fundraising letters too. The letters tend to be several pages long, with short paragraphs, catchy phrases and popular political names that are sure to motivate voters to reach in their pockets and give.

Republicans say the mention of President Reagan's name boosts their fundraising. Supporters of Hunt say the mention of Helms' name helps their efforts.

The most successful letters outline a specific need for money, suggest how much money is needed and exactly when the money will do the most good. They often include a postscript to emphasize the need.

Many are personalized to mention the recipient's last donation. That can boost the cost of letters from 12 cents to several dollars each.

Davidson said he's surprised at the number of times a candidate can ask contributors for money without drawing a negative response.

"You run across a certain amount of folks who feel like you've invaded their privacy," Davidson said. "But the benefits far outweigh the drawbacks."

Political parties are joining candidates in the business of direct mail.

Randolph Cloud is helping the state Democratic Party compile a list of all registered voters which candidates may buy to use for mailings. He said Democrats running for everything from clerk of court to U.S. Senate have been interested in the information.

"It is encouraging to us," Cloud said. "It indicates a great deal more sophistication and ernestness on the part of our campaigns. They want to take advantage of all resources available."

State Republican Party Chairman Dave Flaherty said he hopes his party can match the Democrats' computer services this summer. He said the party now contracts with an outside mail consultant to build its number of contributors.

Flaherty said Republicans often must rely on Helms' organization for direct mail and getting conservatives out to vote.

In the governor's race, some candidates are using direct mail on a more limited basis. It takes time to develop good contributor lists and few gubernatorial candidates have been working long enough to develop them.

But the candidates can buy lists and use computers to target pockets of support.

Most campaigns use computers to write letters and memos to the staff, address envelopes, keep track of supporters and volunteers and compile information on donations and expenditures required by state campaign reporting laws.

In addition, some volunteers have home computers to help the campaign.

But the campaigns with perhaps the most sophisticated computer mailing and volunteer organization programs are those of Edmisten and former Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth.

Do you recognize these common flaws in your group health coverage?

Group health programs have become enormously sophisticated in recent years, but their flaws tend to be rather basic.

How many of these problems do you recognize in your own group coverage?

1. Your plan is based on insufficient data.

Health needs, health services and health costs in North Carolina can vary substantially from one community to another, so your planning should be extremely sensitive to local differences. Annual usage estimates, for example, should not be based on gross averages but on actual community data.

Now our database provides that level of precision. What sort of database is your carrier using?

By completing Xray and lab tests on an outpatient basis, a surgical patient can eliminate the cost of at least one night's stay in the hospital.

From an actuary's viewpoint, having a baby in Thomasville is not necessarily the same thing as having a baby in Greenville.

2. The carrier offers few, workable cost-containment strategies.

Over the years we've developed 26 different strategies that can be specifically tailored to your group, enabling us to place some meaningful controls on the cost of healthcare without neglecting the true needs of your people.

What does your carrier offer?

3. Claimants are being over-paid.

Many employees are covered by more than one sort of health policy, and it's not unusual for such situations to yield windfall benefit payments.

So to make sure our group subscribers get every cent they're entitled to, but not a cent more, we coordinate benefit payment with every other carrier involved, including Medicare.

This program is saving our subscribers more than $110 million each year—so if your carrier isn't coordinating benefits efficiently, you can imagine what it's costing you.

4. Claims aren't properly reviewed.

The most direct and immediate way to control the cost of coverage is to limit benefit payments to legitimate claims exclusively.

That's why every benefit claim we receive, without exception, is rigorously reviewed for validity. And the claims filed by all the health care facilities that have contracts with us are audited every year.

5. Your carrier's operating costs are too high.

The less it costs your carrier to operate, the more you can get for your coverage dollar, and we are, by far, the most cost-efficient carrier in the state.

Out of each dollar we take in, we spend less than 6¢ to cover all our expenses. The rest is used to benefit our subscribers.

And yet year by year our services improve, becoming faster, more efficient and more sophisticated.

To assess their value to you, just phone our nearest service office. Or write to Cost Containment, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina, Box 2291, Durham, NC 27702.
