City School Board Seeks County Boards Conference

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville's Board of Education, exploring alternatives to the proposed merger of the city and Pitt County school systems, has called for a meeting of its members with the county school board and the County Commissioners for a general discussion of local education programs.

The call for the meeting was issued after the city board received a report showing it no longer receives a supplemental school tax and heard a discussion of a possible suit for more funding from the county.

County Manager H. Reginald Gray, responding to the city board's request for clarification on the supplemental tax, informed the board by letter that the tax was discontinued after an election in 1970 rejected a proposed levy of 25 cents per $100 valuation. City voters, in 1943 and 1947, had approved smaller levies.

Gray's report, after delineating information on the supplemental tax, added, "I find no further action until 1976 when the Board of Commissioners incorporated the local school district tax in the countywide rate and increased the rate to compensate for future growth expected in the Greenville School District."

Based on the 1983 valuation tax base for Pitt County and city school districts, the figures show valuation for Pitt County property at $1,469,830,015 and Greenville at $1,469,830,015. (Please turn to Page 14)

Planning-Zoning Commission Frowns On Request To Rezone 5-Acre Tract

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

A request to rezone about five acres located across Stantonsburg Road from Pitt County Memorial Hospital to a commercial classification was unanimously opposed Tuesday by the Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission.

The board voted to forward its recommendation for denial to the City Council after hearing opposition to the R. Guy Mayo petition to change the zoning designation from medical arts to neighborhood commercial. The planning department had expressed reservations about the request.

Leroy Cherry, appearing on behalf of the petitioner, said he feels a shopping facility on the tract would serve the needs of the hospital area, including employees and visitors to the medical complex. Cherry said the proposed zone would provide a "natural separation" between adjacent highway commercial and medical arts designations.

Dr. Earl Trevathan stated his opposition to the plan and urged the board to preserve the property for medical-related facilities. Trevathan said Greenville only has to look at other cities to see what can happen when hospitals become surrounded by commercial development.

Trevathan read a letter from his wife, Ruth, who was a member of the planning board when the medical district development was adopted in 1975. Mrs. Trevathan suggested that the basic plan has been eroded "piece by piece" in the nine years since it was adopted. She urged the board not to compromise the plan, saying approval of the request would leave the commission without basis to deny other rezoning petitions in the area.

Dr. Pat Daugherty, speaking for the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters, said the organization supported the development plan in 1975 and feels the concept should be followed as closely as possible.

The comprehensive plan, according to staff planner Skip Browder, called for the property involved in the Mayo request to be designated for medical and medical support uses, with limited industrial development clustered at the intersections. Browder said the planning (Please turn to Page 14)

Major Gift For Hospital

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board members Tuesday night accepted a $191,000 gift from the Greenville Service League.

Lib Layne, president of the Service League, presented the check to board chairman Reid Hooper. She said the money is to be used for equipment for the cardiac intensive care unit of the hospital which is to open July 1. She pointed out that, since its inception, the Service League has donated more than $500,000 to the hospital.

Norma Van Veld, Service League member and hospital board member, reported on the ongoing work of the Service League, 90 active members and 50 sustaining members who do volunteer work and money-raising for the hospital and other local charitable causes. Kathryn McConnell, who manages the hospital gift shop and coffee shop for the Service League, was given special acknowledgement for her continuing contribution to the hospital through the league.

Reports were given by several administrators on how the recent tornado disaster was dealt with by hospital staff. It was resolved to send a letter of commendation to Dr. Joe Williamson, chairman of the hospital's disaster committee, for the service rendered patients and their families that night. Trustee David Speir pointed out that the tornado-injured people who came to the hospital the night of March 28 and morning of March 29 should have appreciation expressed to them. He quoted a doctor as saying he never saw people so willing to cooperate and let others they deemed more seriously injured go first.

Hospital Vice President Fred Brown said that budget planning is under way for the fiscal year which begins Oct. 1. He said a no-growth year is expected and that strategies are being developed to provide services that will create increased patient days.

Among these is the possibility of an emergency helicopter service for bringing acute patients to PCMH immediately following accidents or medical emergencies. A letter of intent to pursue the possibility of instituting such a service was approved by the board. This statement of intention is not binding on the hospital to create the service if it is not deemed wise following further investigation.

Brown said he is serving on a committee which is investigating the feasibility of a statewide helicopter emergency transport service. He said Dr. Sarah Morrow, secretary of human resources for the state, called for the study.

Preliminary design development for the expansion of the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit has begun, it was announced. Plans for the Minimal Care Unit are in final stages and construction should begin soon.

The list of applicants for vice president for nursing services has been narrowed to four, with interviews planned for next week, Brown said. He said Marilyn Rhodes, acting vice president for

Standoff At Libyan London Embassy As Armed Police Play Waiting Game

LONDON (AP) — Police sharpshooters ringed the Libyan Embassy today and British officials negotiated with its occupants a day after a burst of submachine gun fire from the mission killed a policewoman and wounded 11 demonstrators.

Five senior Cabinet ministers, members of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's "crisis committee," met for 90 minutes to plot strategy, and officials sources said later that "the waiting game" would continue. In Libya, a retaliatory siege of the British Embassy in Tripoli was also in its second day.

Police in telephone contact with the mission tried to persuade the Libyans to leave the Georgian embassy building. Plainclothes and armed uniformed police were seen moving across the roof and on the tops of adjoining buildings, which all had been evacuated. British police normally do not carry firearms.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, speaking in Washington, condemned Libya as a "troublemaker in the world" and said the shooting merely symbolizes the "out of bounds behavior" of the Libyan government.

An unidentified Libyan inside the embassy said in a brief telephone interview with London's Thames Television network that the firing "wasn't from our people. We are innocent."

In Libya, Ambassador Oliver Miles was escorted from the British Embassy by as many as 60 uniformed policemen to the Foreign Ministry, his wife, Julia, said in a telephone interview. She did not specify why Miles had been summoned.

Foreign Office undersecretary Richard Luce said he did not think the British Embassy staff in Tripoli or the estimated 8,000 other Britons in Libya were "in any danger at the present time."

The Foreign Office said three British citizens had been detained in Libya since the London attack.

A Foreign Office spokesman said 25 people, including 11 women and two children, were trapped in the British Embassy in Tripoli, surrounded by "revolutionary guards." Another seven British women and 11 children remained in staff homes around the city, surrounded by "small crowds."

"There is no suggestion at the moment of any attempt to storm our embassy, but it's a minute-to-minute situation," added the spokesman, who asked not to be identified.

Luce said the Libyan Embassy in London, surrounded by police since the shooting Tuesday, "expressed to us, through our contacts, regret at the fact that a British policewoman was killed."

Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, said it had learned that the expression of regret was authorized by Col. Moammar Khadafy's government in Tripoli.

Khadafy's government, suggesting on Tuesday that British officers were preparing to storm the five-story Libyan mission, declared that "an act of this magnitude will not go unanswered by the Libyan people."

Home Secretary Leon Brittan told reporters Tuesday night, "It's not a question of people going in — it's a question of people coming out." He said the shooting was a "barbaric outrage."

Luce said in a British Broadcasting Corp. radio interview today: "We remain in the position that we ask them to come out peacefully and thus enable us to go in and search for weapons and explosives. We are doing our utmost to resolve this problem sensibly and peacefully."

Double Ring Vows Are Spoken Sunday

Judy Lynn McLawhorn and David Lee Drach were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at two o'clock. Willie Bell performed the double ring ceremony in Boyd Memorial Presbyterian Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. William McLawhorn of Route 1, Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Drach of Newark, Del.

Donna McLawhorn was honor attendant for her sister. Bridesmaids included Tammy McLawhorn, sister of the bride, Karen Griswell, cousin of the bride, Karrie Waller and Mary Sykes, all of Greenville, and Jan Drach of Raleigh, sister of the bridegroom.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included John Drach of Delaware, brother of the bridegroom, Danny Brown of Southern Pines, Robb Godley of Greenville, Kent White of Whitestone and Chuck Fanning of Memphis, Tenn.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white chiffon over peau de soie which was fashioned with open Queen Anne neckline outlined in imported re-embroidered alencon lace beaded in pearls and iridescent sequins. The fitted bodice was appliqued in beaded lace and the full, sheer bishop sleeves were enhanced by an inset of point d'esprit trimmed in a border of alencon with appliques of the beaded lace accenting the calla points. Embroidered lace edged the hemline and extended around the chapel train. She wore a fingertip illusion veil edged in alencon lace. It was attached to a Juliet headpiece trimmed in lace and pearls. She carried a bouquet of white and pink silk roses with Boston fern.

The attendants wore formal gowns of romance blue faille taffeta fashioned with open necklines and elbow length puffed sleeves that featured pleated taffeta ruffles in an off-shoulder effect. The fitted bodice was embroidered in a floral motif in matching romance blue. A tie sash enhanced the modified natural waistline of the gathered skirt. Each carried yellow silk roses in a cascade with lace ribbons and wore matching headpieces.

A reception followed the ceremony.

The couple will live in Williamston after a wedding trip to Orlando, Fla.

The bride graduated from Farmville Central High School and formerly worked at Pitt Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom graduated from Kinston High School and is manager of the Etna Station in Williamston.

A rehearsal dinner was held Saturday evening at the Greenville Sheraton.

Couple Marries In Farmville Church

FARMVILLE — Dolly Jean Streeter and Matthew Lewis Ward were married April 7 at 3 p.m. in the St. Paul Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Willie H. Joyner performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Ella Gray Streeter of Farmville and the late Moses Streeter. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Ward of Greenville.

A program of music was presented by the Rev. A.J. Clark, organist, and soloists, Mary Streeter, Carolyn and Jessie Jones. The wedding was directed by Mary M. Daughtry of Greenville.

The bride was escorted by her uncle, Walter Streeter. She wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza and Venise lace. The empire bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline and full length organza sleeves cuffed at the wrist and trimmed with lace. Venise lace adorned with seed pearls outlined the neckline. The full length skirt extended into a chapel train. Venise lace bordered the hemline of the gown. Her headpiece was an ivory fingertip length mantilla of bridal illusion bordered with a Venise lace garland with a blusher flowing from a Venise lace cap etched with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of red roses, daisies, white mums and baby's breath tied with red and white streamers.

Carolyn Jones of Greenville served as her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Alma Payne of San Diego, Calif., Mary Streeter of Greenville and Annie Streeter of Farmville, all sisters of the bride, Pamela Daughtry of Greenville, cousin of the bride, Carolyn J. Streeter, sister-in-law of the bride of Farmville, Linda Tyson, cousin of the bride of Stanford, Conn., Mary Gardner of Farmville and Ruby Dupree of Greenville.

Shay Corbett of Farmville, niece of the bride, was flower girl and the ring bearer was Donta Streeter of Greenville, son of the bride.

Moses Streeter Jr. of Farmville was best man and ushers included James and Ronald Streeter, nephews of the bride of Greenville, Jessie Jones, brother-in-law of the bride, Ronald Darden, Herman Smith, Kenny Council, Jimmy Lewis, James Daniels and Richard Lawler, all of Greenville.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Gladys Daughtry, Lissie Mercer, Dorothy Ellis and Dorothy Barrett assisted in serving.

The bride is employed by Collins and Aikman in Farmville and the bridegroom is employed by the Boy's Club in Rocky Mount.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will live in Greenville.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

There is not a day goes by that something doesn't change in this country. Technology is racing to keep pace with our lifestyles. Cars are becoming smaller, phones are mobile, and everyone remembers the day when shoestrings were replaced in running shoes by Velcro tabs.

For awhile there, I was afraid to sit down for fear I'd become obsolete.

And then I look at the refrigerator and figure I've got a few more good years left. It has maintained its original form and use for the last 50 years. No one has deemed it necessary to design a refrigerator for this generation, despite that fact that most of our children have no idea what a refrigerator is for. It just came with the apartment. They have vague memories of growing up with one that stored the leftovers until it was time to throw them away. And every time they opened it, someone yelled, "Shut the door!"

But beyond that, kids today have no idea what to do with those large, massive dinosaurs that dominate their kitchens. There they stand, 16 cubic feet of refrigeration, and do you know what's inside of them? If we're talking about sons, on a good day there will be a quart of milk that has gone from beverage to solid status, a can of beer, and a doggy bag from a restaurant that closed three years ago. If it is your daughter, there will be six cans of diet something, a couple pairs of pantyhose, a bottle of cologne and three eggs. (An omelette looms eternal.)

This generation has found the secret of life... fast foods!

I looked in my son's fridge a few weeks ago and was appalled. There was nothing in it to even justify a box of baking soda to remove the odors. "Don't you even have any leftovers?" I asked.

"What's a leftover?" he said. "It's something you have after you've cooked too much."

"What's to cook?" he asked.

Refrigerators are not a priority in the scheme of technology, but when they do get around to them, there's no doubt in my mind what they'll look like. They'll sit on the countertop like a microwave and have a cork door for messages. When you open the door, it will reveal a wine rack for eight bottles of white wine and a cheese keeper.

They won't have the history mine did... the formulas, the suppositories, meal worms, snowballs, or prom corsages. Or maybe that's what my mother said when she clung to her icebox with the pan underneath that had to be emptied.

Coronation Of Queen Highlights Spring Festival

RALEIGH — St. Mary's College springtime festival was held here Friday. Highlighting the event was the coronation of the queen, Jeannie Marsh Trueblood.

She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Neal Trueblood of Washington. She will graduate this year from St. Mary's and plans to enter East Carolina University.

Kathryn Lynn Ross represented the sophomore class. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ledyard Ross of Greenville.

The spring court was elected by the St. Mary's students and included a maid of honor and 18 attendants. Two personal pages were chosen by the queen. The coronation and presentation was followed by the court performing the Maypole dance and performances by the St. Mary's dance groups.

Vague Invitation Is Pleasant Rhetoric

DEAR ABBY: I am constantly running into an acquaintance who says, "When are you and your husband coming over; we'd love to see you!" She makes me feel almost guilty for not having barged in on her.

Personally, I would not want anyone dropping in on me, and I am not the type to drop in on others without a definite invitation.

Do people who say, "We'd love to see you; why don't you come over sometime?" actually expect you to drop in? Or am I expected to phone and say, "Hi, are you folks busy tonight? We'd like to come over."

Please print this, Abby. Others may be wondering the same thing.
 ANNOYED IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR ANNOYED: The vague "Come see us sometime" invitation should be regarded as pleasant rhetoric — nothing more. People who really want your company will invite you for a specific time.

DEAR ABBY: If you had to print that letter from "Nancy B." with her off-the-wall list of no-nos for Seventh-Day Adventists, why didn't you follow it with some facts?

I always thought you did your homework, Abby. Now I'm beginning to wonder about your literary professionalism. If you're going to throw church ideologies and personal theories into your column, you should become knowledgeable in the doctrines of all churches and not accept as gospel any old thing some reader happens to send to stir up things and cause your readers to come to wrong conclusions.

Seventh-day Adventists are Christians who worship in church on Saturday, await the second coming of Christ, believe in the virgin birth, the Trinity and baptism by immersion. They discourage divorce and do not drink alcoholic beverages or use tobacco. They are discouraged from drinking coffee and tea (notice I said discouraged, not thrown out if they do). They are interested in medical and welfare works of all kinds around the world and so many other caring involvements with our society.

Back to Nancy B. and her "list" of taboos: For the most part, she was on target, but I'm a S.D.A. and I wear a wedding ring and a touch of makeup.

However, that last no-no forbidding marital relations on the Sabbath because "it is considered a sin to seek pleasure on the day set aside to worship the Lord" is totally false. Please set the record straight.
 MAGGIE B. IN BARSTOW

DEAR MAGGIE: My apologies. I shall attempt to set the record straight by publishing this letter:

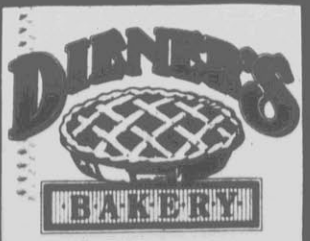

DEAR ABBY: "Nancy B." is not very well-informed about what is expected of Seventh-Day Adventists. She was correct to say that

Larger Farms

Statistics released recently by the U.S. Census Bureau support the ongoing trend toward fewer but larger farms. North Carolina fits into that trend, losing more than 9,000 farms between 1978 and 1982.

But the average farm in North Carolina increased in size by seven acres during that time span as small farmers dropped by the wayside only to have their land annexed by surviving but usually larger neighbors. The Census Bureau defines a farm as any place from which $1,000 or more of agricultural products were sold or normally would have been sold.

As of 1982, the latest year reported by the Census Bureau, North Carolina had 72,799 farms. More than half of those farms reported sales of less than $10,000 in 1982, while nearly 9,000 of them had sales in excess of $100,000.

One note, however, showing the extent of capital investment in farming: The average value of land and buildings per farm, including the smallest as well as the largest, was $187,882.

Timely Act

Rep. Walter B. Jones announced last week that the U.S. House of Representatives has approved $3.5 million to replace the Trent River railroad bridge at New Bern.

The bridge is owned by the state of North Carolina which will contribute $195,570 to the cost of replacing it.

The old bridge has a center swing with horizontal clearances of 39.5 and 40 feet. New bridges are required to have 78-foot clearance.

It appears desirable that the bridge be replaced. Too often we emphasize the replacement of highway bridges to meet modern navigation standards and forget that rail bridges were built at different times to meet different needs.

I was out sailing on the Chesapeake Bay last weekend when I saw a fellow throwing a large round plastic ball over the side of his boat.

"Hey, what are you doing?" I asked.

"Mining for oysters," he said.

"Why mines?" I asked.

"It's easier to find them if you can make a big explosion," he replied.

"Are you from the CIA?"

"Let's just say I'm an oysterman, and let it go at that."

"Are you an overt oysterman or a covert oysterman?"

"I'm a covert oysterman," he said.

"You don't think I'd be throwing mines over the side if I was overt?"

"Are those things explosive?" I wanted to know.

"I hope so. How else are we going to shake up the oysters?"

"But good heavens, man," I cried, "some sailor could hit one with his boat and be sunk."

"Well, we have to practice somewhere," he said.

"Would you want us to drag for oysters with duds?"

"No. But suppose you damaged a foreign ship? There would be hell to pay."

"We've informed all shipping nations we're mining for oysters in the Chesapeake and they sail at their own risk."

"But why the Chesapeake?"

"We might want to go after bigger shellfish off the coast of Central America, and we have to make sure our mines work."

While we were talking, two Latin Americans came on deck with plastic packages, and one said, "Senor, here are five more tortillas we assembled. They will explode as soon as they hear a sound."

"Oysters don't make any sound!" I yelled.

The skipper said, "Jose, Pedro, go below decks." Then he turned to me and said, "That is how much you know about fishing. Every time an oyster opens its mouth it emits a noise, and then we've got him."

"Do you know what I think? I don't believe you're looking for oysters at all. I believe you're testing mines for use in Nicaragua."

"The authorities know what we're doing."

Oyster Hunting ... With Mines

"Suppose I told you the president of the United States knows?"

"Then I would say you were crazy, or he was crazy."

"You better get going or I'll dump one of these mines on your boat."

"If you do I'll go to court and sue you."

"We don't recognize the courts, and don't write to your senators, because we don't recognize them either. If you're a loyal American who believes in your country you'll forget you ever saw me dropping mines off the side of the boat."

Pedro came back on deck.

"Senor, Jose wants to know if we can come topside to see what happens when a boat hits one of our tortillas."

The skipper got red in the face.

"I told everyone to stay below decks until we located an oyster bed."

Pedro grinned. "Excuse me, boss. I forgot where we were."

The captain said to me, "I've got to pull up anchor. Now get the hell out of here. If I don't bring back any oysters tonight the company will kill me."

Halfway Measures Blocking Victory

WASHINGTON — Halfway measures by an administration lacking the will to win are leading to this tragic turn in the fight against Central American communism: betrayal by political posturing in Washington of Nicaragua's anti-Marxist contras.

Murky charges float around Capitol Hill that the latest political maelstrom was started by high-placed career officers in the Central Intelligence Agency who always had opposed Director William Casey's anti-Sandinista campaign in general and mining Nicaragua's ports in particular.

In truth, however, retreat was started elsewhere — by the Republican leaders in the Senate. Seeking vainly to defuse the issue, and pressed to do so by the White House, they joined liberal senators instead of fighting them.

Thus can be glimpsed the end of an anti-Sandinista policy in Nicaragua that was too cautious from the start. Ronald Reagan now finds himself on the brink of a foreign debacle dwarfing the Lebanon fiasco, endangering his foreign policy and his re-election.

An attempt by the president to mobilize the nation may be necessary to avert a congressional cutoff of funds. Unless third-nation backing (Israel or Saudi Arabia is mentioned) can be found or token U.S. financing maintained, communist control in Nicaragua will be confirmed.

Playing cut politics ended the administration's chances to shape a dramatic up-or-down vote on Nicaragua. That test would have created an election-year contest between a resolute Reagan, willing to take risks to save Central America, and a divided Democratic Party whose neo-isolationist wing abjures the use of force against revolutionary Marxism. Such an election-year issue would at least give voters a chance to choose.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker set the stage for the mass Republican backdown on the port-mining issue. Addressing a closed-door Senate Republican conference April 10 (with an usually high attendance of nearly 50 senators), Baker called for a show of hands on this question: How many support Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's resolution to cut off all aid for the mining?

Counting 16 hands, Baker told his colleagues that much support would guarantee Kennedy's winning. Rather than court humiliating defeat for the president, he said, better for the Republicans to "defuse" the issue by joining Kennedy. Yet, a shrewdly managed battle against the resolution conceivably might have won in the Senate. Instead, moderate Democrats were freed by the Republican surrender to join Kennedy.

Baker's rationale was that since the resolution was non-binding, Kennedy's victory would signify nothing. That ignored screaming headlines and major takeouts on the evening television news. It also ignored the poisonous impact of retreat on other Latin American states.

But the majority leader was in tune with the White House, where chief of staff James Baker III was an architect of the go-with-Teddy strategy. Jim Baker's political priorities today is not fighting communists in Central America but in devising new ways to shape Reagan as the peace president.

Even before Reagan took the presidential oath, his national security planners had focused on Nicaragua as the obvious place for the new administration to prove its credibility in the East-West struggle. Step by step, however, original plans were shaved and shorn. Published reports of planned mining of Nicaraguan ports appeared as early as July 1983, but nothing happened cases, the center says — but raises the possibility that ratepayers are subsidizing the non-utility ventures of utility companies.

According to the center, state utilities have owned non-utility subsidiaries for years. Most recently, however, the practice of diversification, of buying up non-utility companies, has accelerated.

For example, Piedmont Natural Gas has gotten in the business of selling home insulation, Public Service of North Carolina is expanding its propane operations, Carolina Power and Light owns 100 percent of two coal mining operations, says the center.

When a state-regulated utility diversifies into operations which are not also regulated, it raises the question: "Are the ratepayers subsidizing the non-regulated operation?" The center says it has found several instances of such subsidization. It says Piedmont Natural Gas used storage tanks to store propane but did not have its propane subsidiary pay rent to the regulated mother company. Duke Power and CP&L have both been found to have paid more for coal purchased from their own subsidiaries than for coal purchased from other suppliers.

The center says there are several ways the ratepayers may be subsidizing the utilities' spin-off companies. The first is cost allocation. When a natural gas company uses the same trucks, personnel and facilities to provide service to customers of both regulated natural gas and non-regulated propane, the company's costs must be apportioned. Determining how much of a truck's cost went to the natural gas customer and how much to the propane customer becomes an important issue when the rate base upon which monopolized natural gas fees are determined.

The second possible subsidy involves the purchase of goods by the utility from a non-regulated subsidiary. Thus, a power company makes a big profit by buying its subsidiary's coal at an inflated price and then passes the extra cost onto the ratepayer.

The center also asks if utilities are using their special status in the credit markets to raise money for their non-utility subsidiaries. If they are, that would be an indirect subsidy. And, finally, the center asks if the giant utilities aren't helping their subsidiaries engage in below market pricing which hurts competitors who don't have the advantage of a large mother company which is a state regulated monopoly.

The center has raised some important questions, ones which could affect the amount all North Carolinians pay when the monthly utility bill arrives.

Public Forum

To the editor:

How long must we permit a system to exist that is sexually biased, financially ruining, emotionally devastating, and once concluded, harder to change than sprouting wings to fly?

I'm referring to our so-called justice system and the manner in which it concludes who is better qualified in a child custody hearing. I firmly believe that the present manner of deciding who gets custody, how much child support the other side pays, etc., is perhaps reminiscent of the Dark Ages.

The American divorced father is probably the most discriminated-against single segment of our society today.

Consider these points:

1. Our state legislators pass the laws pertaining to child custody, necessary support, etc.
2. The vast majority of these legislators happen to be attorneys.
3. The attorneys argue the cases.
4. The judge, who also happens to be an attorney, rules or makes his God-like decree in the case. This decree is going to affect the father for the rest of his life — or at least until his children reach a certain age. So I ask you, how many times does a father — regardless of his ability, character or sincerity — obtain custody of his children?

I submit to you that rather, in the space of just a few minutes, when the all-knowing judge speaks, the father will join the already-overcrowded ranks known as "Weekend Fathers." But also, the judges give you a couple of weeks during the summer with your children for good measure.

I further submit to you that, until our society becomes concerned, the present system will not change. The judges and attorneys certainly will never change it. The reason — money; it's big business to them. To expect them to change a system that affects their pocketbooks is totally out of the question.

It is time for divorced fathers to unite to work for a fairer way that recognizes the needs of all concerned. After all, we fathers love our children just as much as their mothers do.

To the editor:

This is Industrial Appreciation Week in Farmville, sponsored by the Farmville Economic Council.

For 28 years the Farmville Economic Council has led the effort in Farmville to identify and locate industries to promote a healthy, diversified economic base. Through this effort, Farmville has prospered and maintained stable employment levels.

Those industries which have chosen Farmville as the place to locate and do business have meant much to the community. They are responsible for a tax base that, in turn, provides much of the municipal services to which we have become accustomed and of which we demand. They provide many jobs, therefore wages, which provide an ever-increasing standard of living in our area. They provide the need for the many support service businesses which, in turn, prosper in Farmville.

They give untingly of their volunteer time and charitable contributions to those projects dear to the hearts of all of Farmville.

Farmville, during the early 1950s, began to experience out-migration and an ultimately unhealthy economy due to farm mechanization predominantly. Through long-range planning and an unusual commitment for a small rural community, emphasis was placed on industrial location to shore up this possible economic lag. This commitment has paid off through significant and diversified industrial locations and a remarkable economic stability in our area during the most recent recession.

Farmville is indebted to those industries who have located here and, through many special events scheduled for April 16-19, wishes to express its sincere support and appreciation for all the benefits our citizens have derived from their presence.

To you, Farmville industries, thank you.

Strength For Today

We protest against problems. Yet, without problems our lives would wither up and die. Life is a struggle and — constituted as it is — life is never healthy unless it is involved in struggle.

Some years ago a man was sent to prison because he had espoused an unpopular case. Technically he was guilty, but many people felt that he was being unjustly punished and they tried in every way they could to get him out of jail. One of the prisoner's discerning friends warned these well-intentioned people that, if they succeeded in getting this man out of prison and thus freeing him of problems and removing challenge from his life, the "hero" would shrivel up and die. He was released, and within six months did precisely that.

Neither you or I like struggle. Yet without struggle life would lose vitality. Maybe you are involved in too much struggle — but that's another matter.

Board Probing Phony Medical Degrees

By CHRISTOPHER B. DALY
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — With two hospital interns suspended after admitting their medical degrees from a Caribbean school were bogus, state officials say they are investigating whether other physicians bought false credentials from a Peruvian who brokered phony diplomas.

In a similar case, the state Board of Registration in Medicine began disciplinary action earlier this month against a physician, Dr. Ronald Theodore of Winchester, ordering him to show why his license should not be suspended, officials said.

All three cases involved degrees purportedly obtained from the Universidad Centro de Estudios Tecnológicos, known as Cetec, in the Dominican Republic.

The two interns suspended Tuesday at City Hospital in Worcester, Raymond Allard and Barbara Gillon, had been quoted in The New York Times as saying they obtained their degrees through Pedro de Mesones.

De Mesones, a Peruvian who had been living in Alexandria, Va., is serving a three-year federal prison sentence for mail fraud and conspiracy after admitting in December that he faked credentials for at least 100 people in exchange for thousands of dollars.

Allard said he paid de Mesones $9,000 for a medical degree and transcript from Cetec although he did not complete two years of classroom study. Ms. Gillon said she had not done any medical studies at the school. However, both had passed two basic medical tests required of medical school graduates, and both had previous experience in health care — Allard as a certified physician's assistant and

Ms. Gillon as a registered nurse, officials said.

"We have had an ongoing investigatory process concerning graduates from schools in the Caribbean basin which seem to have targeted American citizens as a sector of the market for medical degrees," Michael Kelly, executive secretary of the state medical registration board, said Tuesday.

Authorities in 16 states and five federal agencies are examining the credentials of applicants and newly licensed doctors in the wake of an international scandal blamed on de Mesones.

In Massachusetts, the state registration board is conducting two parallel investigations, Kelly said.

One concerns cases of suspected fraud stemming from the de Mesones scandal, he said. The other is directed at the "sufficiency" of the education received by students who legitimately attend Caribbean and Central American medical schools, which have received a surge of American-born students as U.S. medical schools have become crowded.

"I wouldn't speculate on when this investigation will be complete," Kelly said, refusing under board policy to say how many cases were being investigated. The board could deny or revoke a license and refer cases to the attorney general.

Allard and Ms. Gillon agreed to be interviewed after their identities were learned from public hospital records and people familiar with the de Mesones investigation.

Philip G. Dionne, City Hospital superintendent, said the two were suspended "pending resolution of the investigation as to the validity of their medical degrees."

The two told The Times they had been misled by de Mesones and that they had hoped to practice medicine as fully accredited doctors.

Allard's home telephone was unanswered Tuesday. Ms. Gillon's line was repeatedly busy, but she told The Evening Gazette of Worcester, "I really would rather not answer any questions if you don't mind."

The chairman of the City Hospital trustees, William F. Lynch, said he doubted the hospital would be sued over the interns' presence because interns "work under the direction and supervision of physicians" with more complete training.

Neither Allard nor Ms. Gillon had received their medical licenses, according to Kelly. Their applications had reportedly been pending more than six months — longer than the usual delay, he said.

Dr. John A. Merritt, City Hospital's chief of medicine, said hospital officials had contacted the medical registration board about the delay, but were not told of any problem with the education or qualifications of the two interns.

Filling Posts In Faculty Assembly

ECU News Bureau
East Carolina University faculty members Dr. James LeRoy Smith and Dr. Rosalie Haritum were recently elected to positions on the Faculty Assembly of the University of North Carolina system for 1984-85.

Dr. Smith, professor of philosophy at ECU, was elected chairman of the Faculty Assembly and is currently acting chair of the Department of Philosophy and chair of the ECU Faculty Senate. He is also a member of the four-person ECU delegation to the Faculty Assembly and serves as assembly secretary.

Dr. Haritum, professor of music education in the ECU School of Music, was elected chair of the Professional Development Committee of the Faculty Assembly.

The UNC Faculty Assembly is composed of faculty representatives from the 16 constituent institutions of the UNC system and is charged with gathering, exchanging and providing information between institutions and communicating through the UNC president to the Board of Governors on matters of university-wide import.

Bush Presents Chemical Warfare Ban Plans

- GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Vice President George Bush today presented a new U.S. proposal for banning chemical weapons and said America was "willing to pay the price" by allowing inspections on short notice to verify compliance.

Addressing the 40-nation Geneva Conference on Disarmament, Bush said the verification provisions of the 66-page draft were "indispensable to an effective treaty" to eliminate "the possibility of chemical warfare forever."

The key article of the draft spells out what Bush called an "open invitation" verification proposal under which the United States and other countries would agree "to open for international inspection on short notice all of its military or government-owned and government-controlled facilities."

The proposal said consent to a special inspection must be given on 24 hours notice.

"This pledge to an 'open invitation' for inspections is not made lightly," Bush said.

In a reference to the Soviet Union, which has criticized the proposal, Bush said "some governments speak as if openness and effective verification cut against their interests alone."

"But openness entails burden for every state, including the United States. Openness of the kind we are proposing for the chemical weapons ban would come at a price... The U.S. government is willing to pay the price of such openness."

Victor Issraelyan, Moscow's ambassador to the conference, said the Soviets would study the treaty, but in his brief address after Bush spoke he seemed to link progress on a chemical weapons ban to now-suspended U.S.-Soviet talks on medium and long-range missiles, and other arms pacts.

"Verification is impossible without appropriate agreement on limiting the arms race and disarmament," he said. "Disarmament is hardly probable without control, and likewise, there cannot be control without disarmament."

Bush repeated previous U.S. offers to resume the stalled missile-control talks suspended by the Soviets last November after NATO began deployment of new Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Europe to counter an existing Soviet arsenal.

He said the U.S. verification proposal "springs from a desire that the ban work — work permanently and effectively to provide the security all of us seek."

"The goal of our proposal is a treaty to require states to declare the sizes and locations of their chemical weapons stocks and production facilities, to destroy the stocks and facilities and to forewear creating new chemical weapons," he said.

At a news conference later, Bush said the verification provision goes "beyond anything that we really proposed before." Bush left Geneva for Washington at 2 p.m. (7 a.m. EST).

The Reagan administration wants to put teeth into a 1925 Geneva protocol and a 1972 treaty outlawing chemical and biological weapons.

The proposed treaty calls for provisions for enforcement and verification — stipulations lacking in the existing pacts.

Reagan announced on April 4 that his administration had come up with a plan to ban production, development, possession and use of chemical weapons but withheld details, saving the specifics for the conference.

The proposal comes amid White House reports that Iraq used chemical weapons in its war with Iran and Soviet denials of U.S. charges that its troops used chemical weapons in Afghanistan. The Iraqis have denied they used the weapons.

Bush repeated U.S. charges of chemical weapons use by Iraq, and by the Soviets and their allies in Afghanistan and Southeast Asia.

But he said a Soviet offer to the conference last February for on-site international inspection of chemical weapons destruction facilities, had "advanced the negotiations toward establishing confidence."

On Tuesday, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko said his nation "firmly objects to the dishonest game being played with regard to the banning of the chemical weapons."

"The latest statements by Washington hint at such unworthy maneuvers," Gromyko said after arriving in Hungary for a meeting of Warsaw Pact nations.

"If we look behind the flowery language, it turns out that they keep thinking in terms of keeping and stockpiling such weapons," Gromyko said.

Differences on enforcement and verification have deadlocked debates on a chemical weapons ban. Last year, Issraelyan proposed having international inspectors at chemical weapons destruction sites. U.S. Ambassador Louis Fields reacted cautiously to that proposal.

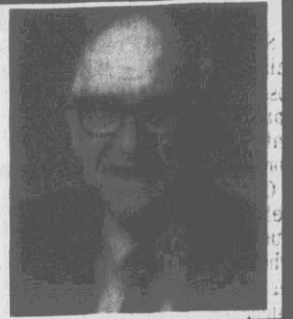

Bush promised a U.S. proposal for a new treaty last year, when he addressed the conference.

Six Are Slain In Guerrilla Raid

BACOLOD, Philippines (AP) — Suspected communist rebels gunned down six policemen and militia members today as they were driving to a village to recover the body of another policeman killed in an earlier ambush, police said.

Militiaman Roger Villaflor, one of six government men wounded in the mid-morning attack, said the armed band included several women.

Villaflor told reporters in a hospital in this central Philippine city on Negros Island that one of the attackers, a young woman, "shook my hand and told me not to return to this work when I recover."

The attackers companions took the victims' weapons, which included high-powered rifles, before fleeing, police said.

Negros, 300 miles southeast of Manila, is one of the rural areas where the New People's Army, military arm of the outlawed Communist Party, is active. Armed forces chief Gen. Fabian Ver has warned of possible intensified rebel action before the May 14 parliamentary election.

The ambush brought to 20 people — including 15 police and militiamen and five suspected insurgents — the number killed in encounters in the past three weeks on Negros.

Hart Anticipates Setback In Missouri Race

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
Sen. Gary Hart already is dismissing what he calls a probable loss to Walter Mondale in Missouri caucuses tonight in which 75 delegates to the Democratic National convention will be selected.

On the eve of this week's only delegate selection, Hart began Tuesday to look ahead to Texas while the Rev. Jesse Jackson accused union leaders of locking out minorities and women.

Ending a three-day vacation from the campaign trail, Mondale planned a pre-caucus appeal to Democrats in Kansas City.

Hart acknowledged in an interview Tuesday that the former vice president "probably" will win the Missouri caucuses but sought to play down their importance.

"I don't think Missouri will be any bigger for him than Arizona was for us," said the Colorado senator, who won 17 delegates to Mondale's 15 in Arizona's caucuses Saturday.

Missouri state party Chairman Pat Lea predicted Mondale will get 50 to 55 national convention delegates from Missouri, with Hart taking 15 to 20 and Jackson receiving eight to 10.

"A bigger turnout could favor Mondale," said Lea, who is uncommitted. "They have been organized longer and better."

Hart and Jackson, meanwhile, wrap up their tours of the industrial Midwest today and turn southward, with Hart planning a long day of events across Texas, where Democrats caucus May 5 with 169 delegates at stake.

Jackson was appearing today in St. Louis before the National Conference of Black Mayors before heading to North Carolina, where 75 delegates are at stake in the May 8 primary.

In Cleveland Tuesday night, Hart said the federal government has failed to provide adequate job training.

"I say shame on this country and shame on our government for not building that bridge between the human skills that are available if they were trained and the jobs that need to be done," he said at Cuyahoga Community College.

Earlier, Hart confronted one of his problems with organized labor, meeting over coffee with two union leaders at McDonnell Douglas Corp., the military aerospace contractor and the state's biggest private employer.

Hart has opposed construction of two of the company's aircraft carrier fighters, the F-15 and the F-18a, while supporting a third model capable of vertical take-off and landing. Hart tried to assure workers that his military proposals wouldn't reduce jobs.

"Under a Hart administration, the workforce at McDonnell Douglas would remain constant," he declared. "Under a Hart administration, we would be building more tactical aircraft than we are today."

In St. Louis, Jackson attacked Missouri's caucus system, saying it takes away the right to privacy in voting.

"We must engage in the caucus tomorrow night because it is the live option," Jackson said. "But we are not going to stop fighting until we get what we deserve, one person-one vote."

But Jackson also predicted his "rainbow coalition" would do well in the state. "We're going to win Missouri and have a little rainbow here," he told about 7,000 people at a rally.

Jackson also called on AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland to open more union job training programs to young people and complained that minorities and women have been locked out of unions.

"There is substantial evidence of historical lockout schemes against the black, the Hispanic and the female," Jackson said. "We on the one hand must open up trade unions and train our youth and on the other hand free up money from the Congress that these youth might have the mission of rebuilding America and ending the slums."

Mondale has the backing of Sen. Thomas Eagleton and other leading Missouri Democrats as well as organized labor.

Jackson is hoping to turn out a large black vote in the two major urban areas, Kansas City and St. Louis.

After today's caucuses, the next delegate-selection contest is in Vermont, where Democrats caucus Tuesday. Utah follows the next day, and on May 1 Democrats in Tennessee and the District of Columbia choose delegates.

Mondale enjoys a comfortable lead in delegates, with 1,080.8 to Hart's 606 and Jackson's 159.2. It takes 1,967 delegates to secure the nomination.

Plane Fuelers Concern Of Safety Agency

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A new federal report raises concerns that many of the thousands of people who daily fuel planes, from tiny private aircraft to jumbo jets, may not be adequately trained and not properly screened.

The National Transportation Safety Board has been concerned for years about the fueling of small aircraft or large propeller planes such as a DC-3 that crashed in St. Louis after receiving jet fuel by mistake.

The report does not specifically cite the St. Louis crash. But investigators said in that case they discovered that a fuel handler, unable to start a truck loaded with aviation gas, had topped off the tank with jet fuel from a nearby truck. With the wrong fuel mixture, the plane's engines failed.

As part of an investigation of operations at 14 airports around the nation, the safety board examined 30 fuel service facilities. Its report found:

—Only two of the facilities administered a pre-hire test for aptitude and in most cases not even minimal background checks are required. Only three facilities checked into employees' driving records or whether they had drivers' licenses.

—Three of every four facilities "hired people off the street for refueling positions" and did not require any aviation or fueling experience.

—Although all the facilities required some on-the-job training, supervision normally lasted only a few weeks. In some cases the initial training was limited to the employee attesting by signature that safety, operational and quality control manuals had been read.

—Airport managers often showed little knowledge or interest about the fueling facilities, contending that the FAA and the fueling company should be responsible. But, the report continued, most FAA inspectors "did not have experience with or knowledge" about the fueling operations.

"It hasn't been that we observed reckless practices, but we've found that the people, given the sensitivity of their positions, are not being adequately screened and adequately trained," NTSB chairman Jim Burnett said of the fuel handlers.

NTSB officials and airline industry representatives acknowledged that a variety of factors make it highly unlikely that the wrong fuel will be put into large jetliners. They said small private planes or large propeller aircraft were the key concern.

Furthermore, the NTSB said it found conditions at fueling operations that raised other safety concerns.

At all but two of the 14 airports examined, the investigators said they discovered "leaking fuel trucks, fuel trucks without fire extinguishers, trucks on which the fuel type was not easily identified" and inadequate "hands on" training into the use of fire extinguishers by facility workers. And urban growth in many of the cities has eroded open terrain that once separated fuel storage facilities from populated areas or heavily traveled roadways posing additional safety concerns, the board said.

On other subjects, the report: —Warned against possible safety hazards in an FAA proposal to reduce fire-rescue operations at some small airports where large jets may continue to operate.

—Expressed concern about the construction of structures near airport flight paths, but said the FAA "has been successful in limiting the number of obstructions by negotiation" with local officials.

—Urged that all airports be required to conduct crash emergency drills every four years.

The board did not attempt to give a safety grade to any of the airports studied.

The airports examined were: Dulles and National near Washington D.C.; John F. Kennedy International and LaGuardia in New York; Los Angeles International, San Diego-Lindbergh and Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena in California; Houston Intercontinental and Hobby in Houston; O'Hare and Midway in Chicago; Stapleton in Denver; Logan in Boston; and Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood in Florida.

Bus Driver Is Praised

GREENSBORO (AP) — A 17-year-old Guilford County school bus driver was charged with a traffic violation after his bus was involved in a wreck, but a teacher who investigated the incident said the student deserved commendation.

The bus driven by Joey Bertrand, carrying 24 Jamestown Middle School students, was involved in two accidents Monday morning. The first occurred about 7:50 a.m. when his bus struck a car making a right turn on Eastchester Drive in northwest High Point, police said.

Bertrand turned on the bus' flashers and moved the vehicle from the center of the road. Moments later, a car driven by High Point City Manager H. Lewis Price ran into the bus.

Bertrand, 17, a senior at Southwest High School, said his passengers panicked and began yelling.

"I just said, 'Come on, let's get off the bus now,'" Bertrand said. "And they started coming off. I was real proud of them. I got them off as fast as I could."

Bertrand and another student then "yanked Mr. Price's door open and got him out (of his car). He was real woody."

Price was charged with failing to decrease speed to avoid an accident. Bertrand faces the same charge in the first collision.

"The (bus) driver certainly did what we would ask him to do in the case of an accident," said Joe Myers, a Southwest High School teacher who investigated the crash for the Guilford County school system. "He didn't panic at all. He behaved like an adult."

Minor Increase In Income

Re-Elect
Zadeits

Greenville Board of Education

A Vote For  Greenville Students

Paid for by friends to re-elect Sue Zadeits

By The Associated Press
A government report today of the smallest rise in personal income in seven months added to signs that the economy's growth rate is slowing down.
The Commerce Department said that Americans' personal income increased 0.5 percent in March, compared with a 0.7 percent rise in February and a 1.6 percent jump in the first month of 1984. It was the weakest showing since the 0.3 percent rise last August.

On Tuesday, the Census Bureau reported a 26.6 percent plunge in housing starts last month, the steepest monthly slide in the 25 years the government has been keeping such records.

Although economists blamed the March homebuilding slowdown on late winter storms, they warned that recent increases in interest rates were already beginning to put a damper on the industry.

The decline followed a revised 12.7 percent rise in February, which also was attributed to weather — good weather.

In a separate report, the government said declines in unemployment rates were substantial in many states in the nation's industrial heartland, where hiring has picked up as the auto industry improved.

Thirteen states had double-digit unemployment in February, far below the 32 states which had 10 percent or more of their labor force out of work a year ago, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported Tuesday.

Recent increases in interest rates were a contributing factor to the March decline in housing starts, economists said. Fixed-rate mortgages increased to 13.74 percent in March and Michael Carliner, economist with Chase Econometrics, predicted rates would climb toward 15 percent this year and could hit 16 percent in 1985.

But Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the home builders, said at least 70 percent of the March drop was attributable to weather factors.

New home construction fell to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.64 million units in March, down from 2.23 million units in February, the Commerce Department reported.

The decline was the sharpest since the government began keeping monthly records in 1946. The next largest drop was a 26.2 percent decline in March 1960.

"The monthly rate is getting bounced around and distorted by seasonal adjustment factors and weather conditions," said Pete Herder, president of the National Association of Home Builders.

Herder and others said the unusually warm weather in February boosted construction activity as many builders began homes they would have normally delayed until March. This cut into March activity, which was further depressed by severe storms in much of the country.

In Milwaukee, the "new" American Telephone & Telegraph Co., shorn of its Bell System companies, today reported first quarter earnings of $226.9 million on revenue of $8.04 billion.

The results, which AT&T Chairman Charles L. Brown said were "about what we anticipated for the period in question," were nonetheless lower than some of the first-quarter earnings reported over the past week by AT&T's former Bell subsidiaries.

Just Tuesday, for example, the BellSouth regional holding company reported first quarter earnings of $270.4 million.

Brown released the earnings figures as he prepared for the company's first annual stockholders' meeting since the breakup of the Bell System on Jan. 1. A turnout of at least 1,500 was expected by AT&T, which with roughly 3 million shareowners still has more stockholders than any other company even though its assets shrank by three-quarters with the breakup.

In Michigan, Chrysler Corp. today announced it earned $705.8 million in the first quarter of 1984 — more than the No. 3 domestic automaker earned in all of last year.

The earnings came on a 58 percent increase in sales. Chrysler earned $701 million in 1983.

In its Tuesday report, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said that Michigan's jobless rate had fallen to 12.6 percent this past February — based on the raw, seasonally unadjusted statistics — from 16.5 percent in 1983.

The levels of unemployment also receded dramatically in Illinois, Indiana, Alabama and Wisconsin, the figures showed.

Between February of 1983 and last February, unemployment rose only in Alaska.

Conditions improved in West Virginia, hard hit by layoffs in coal mining, but not enough to keep it from leading the nation in unemployment in February with its 16.5 percent overall rate.

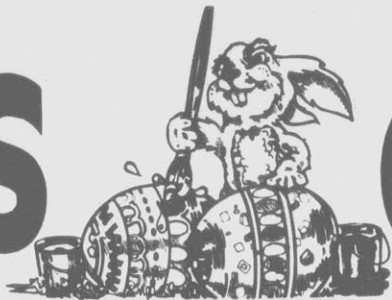

Separately Tuesday, a private survey said college seniors this spring are getting 30 percent more job offers from business recruiters than last year. The College Placement Council Inc., which represents career placement offices across the nation, said it had surveyed 162 colleges nationwide.

— Texaco Inc., an oil giant that recently spent more than $10 billion to buy Getty Oil Co. and shelled out nearly $1.3 billion to ward off a potential takeover threat, has asked its shareholders to adopt a series of anti-takeover measures. Texaco said the proposals were not aimed at any specific overtures for gaining control of the nation's third-largest oil company.

— Oil companies on Tuesday bid $631 million for the right to explore for oil and gas in the Bering Sea on the farthest reaches of America's outer continental shelf, in what federal officials categorized as the largest ever off the coast of Alaska.

— In Cincinnati, Baldwin-United Corp., the financial services company which has been in federal bankruptcy reorganization since last September, says it is discussing with creditors a contingency plan that could mean eventual sale of all the company's businesses.

Escapee Eludes

400 Searchers

FORT PILLOW, Tenn. (AP) — A convicted murderer who slipped out of Fort Pillow State Prison with three other inmates last week has apparently eluded more than 400 law enforcement officers, authorities said.

Highway Patrol Capt. Jerry Scott said Tuesday "it's obvious he's not in the area" and announced that the main search for Garry Bernard Sanders, 30, had been called off.

The other fugitives were captured within 24 hours of the April 9 breakout, the second escape from the facility since Feb. 18.

Guilty Plea In 'Greylord' Cases

CHICAGO (AP) — A former assistant city attorney faces up to 120 years in jail and $293,000 in fines after entering the first guilty plea in the FBI's Operation Greylord investigation into corruption in the city's courts.

James Canoff pleaded guilty Tuesday to 20 counts stemming from charges that he solicited and accepted bribes to fix traffic tickets between 1978 and 1983.

Canoff, one of 17 people — including four judges — indicted in the sting operation, will be sentenced June 7, officials said.

Reagan Says Bankruptcies By Farmers Are Expected

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm foreclosures and bankruptcies will claim 2 percent to 4 percent of U.S. farmers this year, President Reagan said, partly due to his administration's attack on inflation that has devalued the land they use for loan collateral.

Speaking Tuesday to a group of farm writers and editors, Reagan noted that many producers, expecting inflation to continue, had borrowed heavily to expand their farms and take advantage of strong commodity prices and export markets in the late 1970s.

"We know many of these problems have been caused by what had to be done, and still has to be done more completely, is bring down inflation and get back to a stable economy," Reagan told the group during the brief White House meeting.

"Now we're seeing the effect of borrowing based on a (land) value that now has begun to deflate and get down to a lower level, and it's a very great hardship for many," the president said.

"Some of them were caught with debts out of proportion," Reagan said, noting Agriculture Department figures that show expected bankruptcies among 2 percent to 4 percent of farmers this year.

He said that the failure rate during normal times would average 1 percent to 1.5 percent, "so we have to keep that in perspective. But it doesn't lessen the tragedy for the farmer who finds himself in that position," he added.

"I think that all of us are aware the agricultural community has some problems in this country," said Reagan, who according to some farm and political experts is politically vulnerable in parts of rural America because of the lagging recovery. Farm foreclosure sales that have dominated news of the rural economy remain a highly visible reminder of the problem.

"Like unemployment, they're one of the last to be able to come back as we have this recovery we now have," said Reagan. "I think our big battle still remains the continued dropping of interest rates."

While he said his administration's trimming of the inflation rate has helped some of the agricultural industry, he acknowledged "it also has been part of the problem."

Reagan declined a specific answer when asked to predict when the economic recovery would reach the farm sector. But he said: "The prices are up and are holding firm.... We're going to weather this storm."

Last week Reagan signed a two-year rewrite of major government crop subsidy laws that will pay farmers to idle some of their wheat cropland this year, with the chance the offer will be extended to cotton, rice and corn farmers in 1985.

As part of that program, farmers will get up-front advances on their land-idling payments, meaning many could receive government checks just before November's elections.

Europe's Farmers Grow More But Revenues Down

By JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer
PONT-L'EVÈQUE, France (AP) — The architects of the new Europe failed to reckon with dairy farmer Guy Baratte and his 80 cows. Now the Common Market is teetering on the brink of bankruptcy and Baratte says he, like many of his fellows, is "two years from ruin."
From the rolling countryside of Normandy and cows like Baratte's come the rich, creamy milk that goes into some of France's most famous cheeses, like Camembert and Pont-l'Évêque. The green, hedgerow-bound fields near the English Channel have been farmed since William the Conqueror's time and seem peacefully eternal.
But Baratte's herd of 80 Frisians that graze here, plus the 25 million other cows in Western Europe, have become one of the Old World's knottiest political problems.

They produce the surpluses of milk and butter the Common Market has gagged on for years, the largest single category of European farm surpluses. The Common Market spent two-thirds of its $21.6 billion budget this year on supporting prices for farmers and buying up their surpluses.
After weeks of haggling, the ministers of the 10 Common Market member nations agreed in early April to cut milk production, with special concessions to farmers from Italy, Northern Ireland, the Republic of Ireland and Luxembourg. When those who work Normandy's soil now assemble in cafes to share shots of applejack, they worry aloud about the effects of the politicians' decisions.

"Frankly, we're getting desperate," said Baratte, 40, a butcher's son who has farmed for 16 years. "I think there's going to be an explosion."
"Does anyone, in Brussels or Paris, really care about the farmers anymore?" wondered Baratte's wife, Monique, 41.
Some are bitter about the new ceilings because subsidized loans once were offered to boost dairy production. That was a direct consequence of the Common Market's unlimited pledge to buy and dispose of agricultural surpluses, a policy that will break the trade bloc by this fall unless sweeping changes are made in farm spending.
In the meantime, some dairymen, including Baratte, feel caught in a trap: They are barred from producing more to get money they need to pay off loans they were encouraged to take out when the Common Market's chief concern was not getting rid of surpluses, but making Europe self-sufficient in food.
Many of Europe's potent farmers' unions already have protested the cuts in milk production, but in rural France citizens have a centuries-old tradition of taking direct action when they feel angry or discontented. And Baratte predicts Norman farmers will soon act.
"We don't encourage violence," said Baratte, an officer of France's dairy farmers' union for the Calvados department. "But the men, especially the young ones, are getting worked up and we may be overwhelmed by events."
One Norman who will not stay on the farm is Baratte's eldest son, Laurent. In front of their wood-burning fireplace, the 17-year-old student has installed a U.S.-made home computer to help him pass a high school course in data processing.
Faced with his son's decision to quit the land to become an office worker, Baratte has mixed feelings: "When I think about what I'm going through now, and all I've had to do to survive, I ask myself if he's not the one who is right."

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

A most sensible contribution to longevity recently came from Vanderbilt University Medical Center in Nashville. Dr. George V. Mann is an expert on the relationship between diet and heart disease. He had developed 10 commandments which he believes should maintain good health for most people until late in life.

Our patterns of living and our general life styles in a great measure determine our health and our longevity. Many causes of illness and premature death can be avoided if sensible attitudes of living are adhered to. Dr. Mann is convinced that the individual can, by following these guidelines, determine his her medical destiny.

1. Be physically active. This is essential for healthy living. Exercises that are customized to each individual are essential. These exercises should be increased slowly and sustained until they become a ritual in one's life.

2. Eat one main meal a day. People eat too much, Dr. Mann says. The average person needs only one major meal a day and several snacks. Exceptions to this rule are for growing children, pregnant women, the elderly, and those performing strenuous manual labor. Since many of us lead fairly sedentary lives, overloading our bodies with the proverbial "three big meals a day" is not necessary.

3. Eat a variety of foods each day. This is essential for a balanced wholesome diet. Almost always this contains sufficient vitamins and minerals so that massive doses of supplemental vitamins and minerals are not necessary. A daily single vitamin tablet that contains all the major ones and minerals is all that is necessary.

4. Eat seafood at least three times a week. Dr. Mann believes that certain substances in seafood make blood less likely to form troublesome clots and promote healthy blood flow.

5. Eat one serving of red meat daily. Three ounces of red meat a day will insure adequate iron consumption. This is especially important for women who need more iron than men. Liver is a great source of iron.

6. Be careful with alcohol. Alcohol is responsible for a tremendous amount of death and disease in our society. This holds true for tobacco too.

7. Avoid margarines and cooking oils. Dr. Mann says that even though these products are said to contain low cholesterol, they often contain hydrogenated fats and trans-fatty acids.

8. Drink water when you exercise. Clean cold water is a lot better for the thirst than the so-called athletic thirst quenchers.

9. Seek calcium, avoid phosphate. Read the labels on foods and soft drinks. Americans seem to consume more phosphate than they need.

10. Avoid sodium, seek potassium. Salt consumption is linked to high blood pressure and cardiovascular complications. Check labels for hidden salt content. Eat five or six servings of fruit a day to maintain proper potassium levels.

These are not difficult rules to follow. They can be responsible for greater health and greater longevity.

Town And Soviets In A Tentative Detente

GLEN COVE, N.Y. (AP) — A summit meeting has produced tentative detente between the Soviet Union and the town of Glen Cove in a two-year cold war over the use of public recreational facilities by Soviet diplomats who have a retreat here.

The town's new mayor, Vincent Suozzi, announced Tuesday that he will propose next week that the town council lift a ban on the diplomats' use of Glen Cove's residents-only beaches, golf course and tennis courts.

Suozzi said he reached that decision after having lunch March 31 with Oleg Troyanovsky, Soviet ambassador to the United Nations, and his wife, Tatyana, at the Soviet retreat on a 36-acre estate known as Killenworth.

The council, some of whose members also attended the informal gathering, was expected to approve Suozzi's recommendation in a vote scheduled for April 24.

But former Mayor Alan Parente, whose administration imposed the ban in May 1982 after a Soviet defector alleged the estate contained devices for eavesdropping on Long Island's defense industries, called Suozzi's action "foolhardy."

"Suozzi likes being a peacemaker, but this is peace without honor," said Parente.

"The Soviets," replied Suozzi, "have shown constructive interest in our city and have indicated by word and deed that they want to be neighbors."

The Soviet Union retaliated against Parente's ban by barring U.S. diplomats from using a beach near Moscow frequented by foreign envoys. The State Department contended that Glen Cove was meddling in foreign affairs, and the Justice Department filed a suit against the town that still is pending in U.S. District Court.

Suozzi said the city would continue to negotiate with the State Department on the question of reimbursement for extra police protection at the Soviet compound.

Suozzi and Vincent Taranto, the council's Republican majority leader, said in a joint statement that the Soviets responded "enthusiastically" when they were recently asked to participate in a city cleanup and beautification program.

"They were extremely charming people and they spoke such good English that they were actually able to be witty," Councilwoman Ann Gold said after meeting with Troyanovsky. "I don't know that we'll ever meet again. But I took this as a sign they are certainly willing to improve relations between the Soviet Union and the city of Glen Cove."

School Bd.

$838,584,275. This results in a breakdown on a pro-rata share of county funds to the school systems of 63.67 percent for Pitt County, and 36.33 percent for Greenville.

Phillip R. Dixon, attorney for the Greenville school system, in a letter to the board dated March 30 and in comments at Monday night's meeting, raised the possibility of what he called possible "justification to challenge on constitutional grounds the current formula allocation of monies on a per pupil basis." Dixon warned, however, "that considering the fact that my comments in this regard might result in litigation, I would prefer to discuss this matter with you in executive session."

Dixon urged the board to consider all possibilities. "I recognize some alternatives may not be as good as merger, but we may have to consider alternatives," he said.

Commenting on a variety of problems in general in education, not only in the Greenville schools, Dixon said, "Our major problem is declining enrollment. Many systems with similar problems have a supplemental tax to help out."

"There are many systems which say inequities exist because of the way money is allocated. By law, the North Carolina General Assembly enacted legislation some years ago allocating funds on a pro-rata formula. I feel confident it was a commendable thing for the legislators to do, to prevent one system from having advantage over another."

"However," Dixon said, "in doing this they tied the hands of county commissioners, who find the formula does not take into account special needs. For example, the cost of special programs such as those for the handicapped or gifted."

Dixon said he believes it could be effectively demonstrated to a court that the "effect of a state allocation formula is different for school units with declining enrollments than it is for school units with stable enrollments or with increasing enrollments. In my view," he said, "this results in a denial of equal protection to many of our students."

Dixon suggested three options open to the city school board. One is that if it is decided that money received is not sufficient for priority needs, there is an appeal route, "but first I think the board should exhaust all administrative procedures, ask for a meeting with the County Commissioners to hopefully resolve any differences."

"If this proves not satisfactory, then you could prepare a series of appeals, probably with relief only through the Supreme Court of North Carolina."

"A third option would be 'a suit directly to the Supreme Court challenging the allocation on constitutional grounds.'"

Dixon reiterated several factors that can have direct effect on the decision of which route to go, "things like a possible supplemental tax, establishment of co-terminous boundaries."

"Asked how long it would take to get things in readiness in the event the board should choose to go the law suit route, Dixon said 'at the earliest, two or three weeks of intensive, hard work, as a lot of additional research, a number of decisions would have to be made.'"

Mayor Janice Buck, attending the meeting as the representative of the city government, asked about the possibility of a class action suit.

"That would be the most logical thing, to have the suit on the part of certain parents. A class action suit would be much easier," Dixon said.

Planning-Zoning...

staff is not in a position to recommend approval of the request.

Board member Wallace Woolees, who offered the motion to deny the petition, said the hospital and medical school is the single largest employer in the area and room is needed for both to grow and develop. Woolees, suggesting that "we better start thinking five, 10, 15 years down the road," said he did not feel a shopping center across from the hospital would compliment the medical facilities.

The planning board, after hearing several residents and property owners say they were not notified of a rezoning request involving land on N.C. 43, voted to table the matter until the May meeting. Commissioner Jim Ward opposed the tabling motion.

The action followed discussion of a request by Collice C. Moore to zone 23.65 acres on the southwestern corner of N.C. 43 and State Road 1204 to R-6 (high density residential) and neighborhood commercial. The board had already voted to extend the extraterritorial limits to include Moore's property.

John Causey, who lives across the highway from the parcel, joined several citizens who objected to Moore's plan to zone about 300 feet of road frontage for neighborhood commercial use and the remaining section for multifamily units. Causey said he and other neighbors on the north side of the highway were not informed that the rezoning petition would be considered.

Browder said all property owners within 100 feet of the Moore tract should have been notified by the city. He said the list of adjoining owners is supplied by the petitioner.

Moore said he proposed to build a small shopping facility on the highway if residents in his development indicate they want such a service.

The commission voted to recommend that the council approve requests by: Thomas Anthony to rezone .611 acres on the east and west side of Vance Street, between Fifth and Cherry streets, from R-6 to downtown commercial fringe, and by Tucker Farms Inc. to rezone .923 acres on the north side of U.S. 264 west of Tobacco Road from highway commercial to R-6.

A request by Bill Clark to annex section six of Quail Ridge Townhomes, containing 2.76 acres, into the corporate limits received the endorsement of the board. The property on the east side of 14th Street Extension is not contiguous to the city limits and would be considered under satellite annexation procedures.

The board also approved:

- A preliminary plat for court "D" of Twin Oaks Townhomes, involving six units and a swimming pool on a .96-acre parcel at the intersection of Laura Lane and 14th Street Extension;

- A preliminary plat for Medical Oaks Townhomes, calling for 82 townhouse units on a 5.95-acre tract on the east side of State Road 1203, just north of Cornerstone Baptist Church;

- The revised preliminary plat of Upton Court on the west side of U.S. 43 in Kensington Park, deleting three units to provide required recreation area.

A request by Bill Clark to rezone 12 acres on the south side of Red Banks Road Extension from R-15S, RA-20 and shopping center to R-6, office and institutional and R-15S was continued at his requests until the May meeting.

Rash Of Minor Auto Accidents Reported

An estimated $560 in damages were done in automobile accidents in Greenville Tuesday, Greenville Police report.

Heaviest damage occurred in a 8:30 a.m. wreck at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Evans Street involving vehicles driven by Susan Briley Congleton of 134 Oakmont Drive and Catherine Sue Calemine of Route 7, Box 568. According to police, the Congleton vehicle, traveling east on Greenville Boulevard, had stopped for the traffic light at the intersection of Evans Street and was hit from behind by the Calemine vehicle, also traveling east.

Damage to the Calemine vehicle was estimated at $300. The Congleton vehicle was not damaged, say police. Ms. Calemine was cited for operating a vehicle with no operator's license.

A four-vehicle accident around 5:30 p.m. at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Hooker Road caused an estimated $160 of damages, police reported. According to police, a vehicle driven by William Earl Wooten of 600-D W. 14th St. was towing a vehicle on Dickinson Avenue owned by James Clarence Johnson of 113 Wade St. when he collided with a vehicle driven by Mildred Adams Hines of 605-B Hudson St., making a right turn off Hooker Road. The Wooten vehicle also struck a vehicle driven by Harry Finn Kelly III of 305 Lewis St., located in the opposite travel lane. The Wooten vehicle was also struck from behind by the Johnson vehicle in tow. Damage to the Johnson vehicle was estimated at $100. Damage to the Hines and Kelly vehicles was set at $25 each and the Wooten vehicle at $10.

An early morning wreck at the intersection of North Oak and Willow streets caused an estimated $100 damage to a vehicle belonging to Milton Ray Clemons of 1402 Willow St. According to police reports, a vehicle driven by Dorothy House Clayton of 300 N. Oak St. was traveling south on Oak Street when the Clemons vehicle entered Oak from Willow Street and struck the Clayton vehicle. The Clayton vehicle was not damaged.

Gasoline Price Average Said Up

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Average gasoline prices have increased 5.8 cents per gallon in North Carolina and 1.7 cents in South Carolina since last Easter, the AAA-Carolina Motor Club says.

Motorists traveling this Easter weekend will pay, on the average, $1.23 per gallon in North Carolina and $1.22 in South Carolina, the club said in its latest survey.

"The substantial price break that we anticipated in our area during the first three months of this year didn't occur," said Ralph Peters, president of the 243,000-member Carolinas affiliate of the American Automobile Association.

About 80 percent of the service stations in the two states will be open during the Easter weekend, the survey said.

Credit Surcharge Protests Flood Congress

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Spurred by an American Express direct-mail appeal that two senators claim is misleading, postcards are flooding Congress to protest fees on credit-card use.

"The volume of mail is tremendous," according to House Postmaster Bob Rota, who says it rivals the outpouring that followed President Reagan's 1981 appeal for support of his economic program and the 1983 campaign waged by banks against tax withholding on savings account interest.

One day last week, the House Post Office handled 1.38 million pieces of mail — more than four times normal volume. On the Senate side, some 100,000 postcards have arrived at the office of Alan Dixon, R-Ill.

Other offices are getting about the same," said George Dahlman, a spokesman for Dixon, who is co-sponsor of legislation to permanently prohibit the imposition of surcharges on purchases made with credit cards.

The postcards result from a letter American Express sent to 8 million of its domestic cardholders on March 26. Enclosed was an antisurcharge postcard requiring only a constituent's signature, stamp and a lawmaker's name.

The letter warns the "cardmember" that "Congress could be dangerously close to restricting your right to use your own charge or credit cards where and when you please."

It says that surcharges would give "some merchants an unfair windfall — at your expense" and that the extra fees are being supported by "a few members of Congress — backed by some powerful special interests."

Surcharges were prohibited by federal law until expiration of an 8-year-old ban on Feb. 27. Since then, however, there have been no reports of widespread action by merchants to demand extra fees on credit-card transactions.

Both sides in the multi-billion-dollar consumer struggle agree on one point. Until legislation is enacted specifically authorizing surcharges, a merchant imposing them risks violating federal and state usury laws.

Proponents of surcharges point to a Federal Reserve Board study concluding that cash customers subsidize card-users because merchants increase prices to everyone to recover the percentage of each credit sale they must pay to a card company. American Express and other opponents of surcharges argue that the Fed study is flawed and that if the extra fees are clearly legalized, it would mean lower prices to no one and higher prices to card-users.

The card company's direct-mail campaign is not sitting well with the Senate's two principal surcharge advocates, Banking Committee Chairman Jake Garn, R-Utah, and Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., the committee's senior Democrat.

"You resorted to inflammatory rhetoric supported by inaccurate and misleading statements calculated to incite, rather than inform, your cardholders," Garn said in a letter to American Express.

He noted that earlier this year the Senate voted 66-22 against permanently banning surcharges. "The 'powerful special interests,' namely the credit card companies and banks, lost on that vote," Garn said.

In his letter to American Express, Proxmire said the card company's appeal was "particularly offensive and demeaning" to small retail merchants.

"Your letter implies that every merchant is a gouger ready to raise prices at the drop of a hat and that we must have federal laws to prevent these greedy merchants from abusing their customers," Proxmire said.

The senator said in a separate statement that American Express last year collected $1.35 million from merchants accepting the firm's green and gold cards, compared to $750 million in annual fees paid by cardholders.

Proxmire noted that while the company wants to "impose price controls on small retail merchants ... it supports sweeping legislation to deregulate companies in the financial services business.

"If there were a surcharge on hypocrisy, American Express would be bankrupt," Proxmire said.

Asked for comment, Harry Freeman, a senior vice president of American Express, said: "He's entitled to his viewpoint. We're entitled to ours. It's part of the American political process."

Kluxers Call Off 'School Patrol'

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — A Ku Klux Klan leader said his group called off plans to patrol a local elementary school after school officials hired a security guard.

Glenn Miller of Angier, head of the Carolina Knights of the KKK, had warned that Klansmen would begin patrolling Melver Elementary School on Monday if police didn't provide a full-time guard. Men have been found in girls' bathrooms at the school three times.

Last week, parents began patrolling school halls and restrooms and the security guard was hired. Sanford police also have beefed up surveillance of school grounds.

William R. Johnson, superintendent of Lee County schools, denied that the guard was hired because of Klan pressure. "We're doing what is necessary for us," he said.

Miller said Monday that the Klan was "pleased that ... the school provided a guard, so we will not place guards at the school. We want to protect the little white children."

Found Body Of A Missing Man

RALEIGH (AP) — The body of a 27-year-old Creedmoor man was found in Falls Lake about a mile from where his boat was discovered near the Wake County-Durham County line, authorities say.

Steven McCoy Bennett had been missing since last week, when he went fishing, said Durham County Sheriff's Deputy R.D. Love. The body was located about 8:30 a.m. Tuesday and sent to the state medical examiner's office in Chapel Hill for an autopsy.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks turned mostly lower at midsession today after opening mixed.

Oil, auto, telephone, mining, airline and drug issues were numerous among the losers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 5.34 to 1,159.23 after two hours of trading, offsetting its 4.29-point gain on Tuesday.

Declines held a 7-5 lead over advances on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index fell 0.38 to 91.03.

Big Board volume totaled 39.96 million shares at noon EST, compared with 47.53 million at that hour Tuesday.

Recent government reports have signaled a slowing of economic expansion, a development investors would welcome if it resulted in less upward pressure on interest rates.

But many Wall Streeters are said to remain skeptical that the economy will slow to the point where rates actually fall in the near future, especially if the U.S. budget deficit remains unchecked.

Stocks also followed the credit markets today, where bond prices fell and interest rates edged higher. Some long-term Treasury bonds and corporate issues lost 1/2 point, or $5 for each $1,000 in face value.

On the NYSE's active list, Chrysler fell 1/4 to 25 1/2 despite posting a record quarterly profit of $705.8 million in the first quarter.

American Telephone & Telegraph lost 1/8 to 15 1/4. AT&T today said first-quarter earnings totaled $227 million, but that it does not expect to reach its projected $2.02-a-share profit for the full year.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index slipped 0.06 to 207.59.

Arrest 2 After Area Break-Ins

Two men have been arrested by Pitt County deputies on charges stemming from Monday night break-ins at the fairgrounds northeast of Greenville and at a flea market on U.S. 264 near the county line.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Tony Glenn King of 311 Airport Road and Jeffrey Scott Waller of Route 8, Greenville, were apprehended just after midnight Monday and charged with breaking into the fairgrounds and interior facilities there, as well as Poor Man's Flea Market east of Pactivol.

Tyson said the fairground incidents involved three museums inside the property where various antique farm items were taken. He said a grill inside the fenced area was also entered and soft drinks valued at $57 were stolen. Approximately $800 worth of property, including stereo equipment, speakers and amplifiers, was taken from the flea market. The missing items from the fairgrounds and flea market were recovered, he said.

Tyson, who said a burglar alarm was set off at Poor Man's, reported that deputies arrested the two men near Grimesland.

Bond for King and Waller was set at $10,000 and $5,000, respectively, with first appearance hearings scheduled for today in District Court.

Held Responsible Despite Drugs

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — A judge who ruled that a man under the influence of drugs was responsible for his actions has found the man guilty of first-degree murder in the Christmas night beheading of his 14-month-old child.

Stephen Craig Johnson, who police said claimed he was God and his son was "Jesus reborn," was convicted Tuesday in a non-jury trial.

Break-In Reported

Greenville police are investigating a break-in Tuesday at 117 Greenwood where a estimated $735 was taken from the residence of Charlene Boyd. Items reported stolen include a television set, an arm chair and a jewelry box and its contents.

Johnson Sparks Pirates By Seahawks

WILMINGTON — Winfred Johnson banded out four hits, two of them doubles, to spark East Carolina University to a 9-7 baseball victory over UNC-Wilmington last night.

The contest raised the Pirate record to 23-8 on the year, and was their sixth straight win.

The Pirates scored early in the contest to take a big lead, but then had to hold off a late Seahawk rally to pull it out.

"It's good to win one here," ECU coach Hal Baird said, referring to the difficulty the Pirates have had in the past winning in Wilmington. "It's also good to keep getting wins on the road."

"They gave us a lot early but as it turned out we needed it. Late in the game we earned a few ourselves. It seem like Winfred loves this place. He really seems to hit it when he comes here."

Baird said that Robbie McClahanan, the starter who claimed his fifth win in six decisions, battled well, but had to get some relief in the seventh. It was then that the Seahawks put together a four-run rally to cut an 8-2 deficit to 8-6.

"I thought Bobby (Davidson) did a good job in relief. He's done that the last three outings." Davidson earned a save for the game, his second on the year.

The Pirates started the scoring in the first inning, getting one run. With two away, Todd Evans got a bloop double that fell between the right fielder and second baseman.

Johnson then singled, driving in Evans.

East Carolina pushed over five runs in the top of the second inning for a 6-0 lead. With one away, Steve Sides walked and Mark Council reached on an error. Both moved up on a wild pitch and Jim Riley walked, loading the bases. Greg Hardison also walked, forcing in Sides, and an attempted pickoff play was errored, scoring Council. David Wells walked to reload the sacks and a walk to Evans brought in courtesy runner Ricky Nichols. Johnson then doubled to drive in Hardison and Wells with the final two runs.

The Seahawks, who will join ECU's ECAC-South next year, got their first run in the bottom of the second. With two away, Chuck Jones singled and scored on a double by Buddy Walters.

Another Seahawk run crossed in the third. With two away, Ken Jones slapped a home run.

The Pirates got a single run in the fifth. Mike Williams singled and Chris Bradberry reached on an errored fielder's choice. Sides then grounded into another fielder's choice that scored Williams.

East Carolina added an eighth run in the sixth. Evans reached on a fielder's choice and Johnson singled. Williams then got a hit to score Evans.

Wilmington then rallied for four runs in the bottom of the seventh. Walters walked and Mitchell Wells reached on an error. Hall cleared the bases with a three-run homer. Billy Reynolds kept it going reaching on a two-base error and Ken Jones walked. Johnny Slaughter then singled in Reynolds.

Both teams scored single runs in the ninth. ECU's Johnson doubled and was sacrificed to third. He scored on a wild pitch. UNCW's Hall hit his second homer to account for the final run.

Williams also had two hits for the Pirates, while Hall's two homers made him the lone Seahawk with more than one.

The two teams travel to Greenville for a 7 p.m. game tonight.

Knicks Claim Memorable Win

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

No matter how far the New York Knicks get in the National Basketball Association playoffs, their first victory may be the one they remember the longest.

The Knicks, down 14 points in the final minute of the third quarter and still trailing 93-87 with only 1:16 left, rallied to beat the Detroit Pistons 94-93 Tuesday night in the opener of their best-of-five first-round playoff series.

"This one was a miracle, but we made it happen and created it," said Knicks forward Bernard King, who led all scorers with 36 points, including nine in the fourth quarter when New York outscored the Pistons 30-17. "We had so many turnovers down the stretch that the game was there for them to take and we still came back and won it."

"I will let you know after Thursday's game if we can come back," said all-star guard Isiah Thomas, who was held to 10 points. "You lose a ballgame, you lose it. We should have won the game. There's no way we should have lost it."

In other playoff openers, division winners Boston, Milwaukee and Utah each won. The Celtics beat Washington 91-83, the Bucks defeated Atlanta 105-89 and the Jazz outlasted Denver 123-121, while Dallas stopped Seattle 88-86. It was the first playoff game ever for both the Mavericks and Jazz, who spent their first five years of existence in New Orleans.

Tonight, Philadelphia entertains New Jersey, Kansas City is at Los Angeles and Phoenix at Portland.

The Pistons, making their first playoff appearance in seven years, seemed to have the game well under control before a series of bad passes down the stretch.

"It was an inspirational win because we played a lackluster game," said Knicks Coach Hubie Brown, who was ejected with two technical fouls with 8:44 remaining and had to watch the wild finish from a television monitor in the dressing room.

King cut the deficit to four when hit a pair of free throws with 1:08 remaining, then Rory Sparrow hit a jumper to narrow the margin to 93-91.

The Pistons still appeared to have the game wrapped up with 20 seconds remaining when they grabbed a rebound under the New York boards following a free throw by Darrell Walker that made the score 93-92.

However, a pass from Kent Benson to John Long was mishandled and Benson was called for a foul on Sparrow, who stepped to the line and canned a pair of shots to win the game. A last-ditch shot by Bill Laimbeer at the buzzer was batted away by Walker, who was credited with seven steals for the Knicks.

"You have to give them credit," said first-year Detroit Coach Chuck Daly. "We made three costly turnovers at the end and it cost us the game."

Detroit led virtually the entire game, including 53-40 at halftime and 76-64 after three quarters.

Kelly Tripucka led Detroit in scoring with 26 points, while Bill Cartwright finished with 21 points for the Knicks. Benson had 18 points and 14 rebounds for the Pistons.

Celtics 91, Bullets 93
Boston, the Atlantic Division champion seeking its 15th NBA title, put together streaks of 22-8 and 12-2 to stifle rallies by visiting Washington.

Ricky Sobers, who led the Bullets with 24 points, gave Washington its last lead, 37-36, in the second quarter. The Celtics, who got 23 points from Larry Bird, then took charge by scoring 22 of the next 30 points for a 58-45 advantage with 5:56 remaining in the third quarter.

The Bullets cut the deficit to three before Boston retaliated with the 12-2 run that gave the Celtics a 72-59 advantage early in the final period.

Jazz 123, Nuggets 121
Adrian Dantley scored 30 points, 13 of them in a 41-point third quarter, and Utah held off a furious Nuggets rally to win at home against Denver.

The Jazz shot 72 percent in the third quarter and outscored Denver 20-10 in the final minutes of the period to take a 98-93 advantage into the fourth period.

But the lead evaporated swiftly as Kiki Vandeweghe scored 13 of his game-high 33 points and guard Rob Williams hit two three-point goals in the final quarter to help Denver back from a 17-point deficit.

But three free throws by Dantley and two by Ricky Green kept the Nuggets at bay.

Bucks 105, Hawks 89
At Milwaukee, Sidney Moncrief scored 19 points and Marques Johnson added 18 as the Bucks built a lead of 28 points en route to victory over Atlanta.

Milwaukee held a 55-40 halftime advantage as Johnson poured in 16 points in the first two periods. After the Hawks cut the margin to 13, Moncrief triggered a 17-6 spurt with 10 points as the Bucks opened a 78-54 lead with 3:36 left in the third quarter.

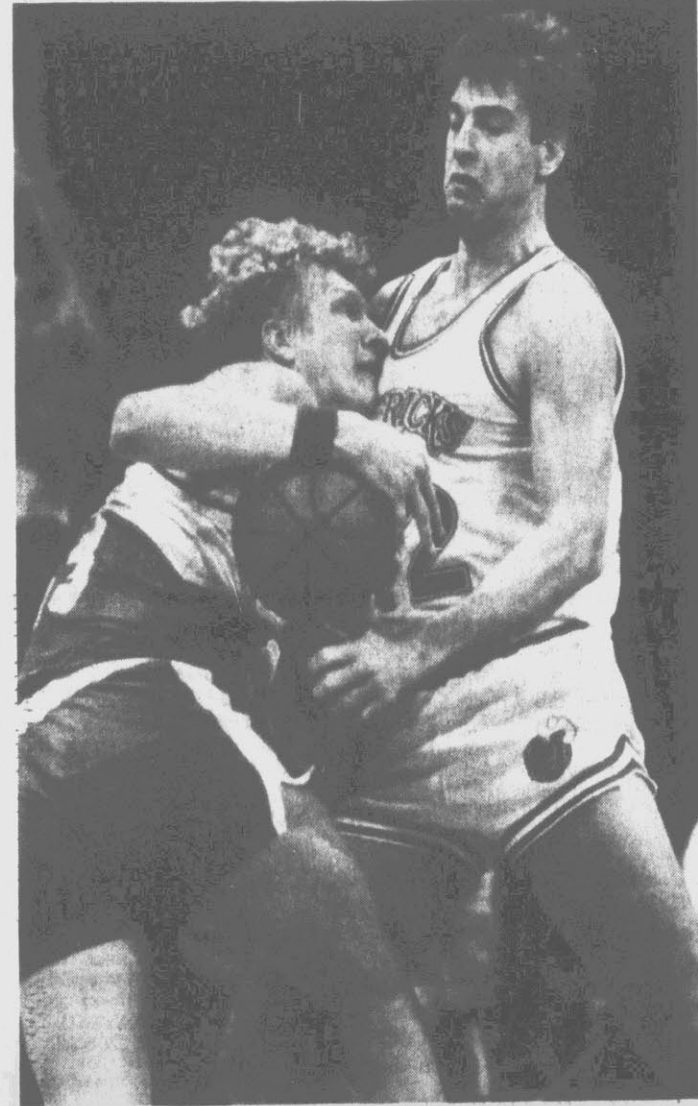

Dominique Wilkins and Dan Roundfield had 21 points apiece for Atlanta.

Mavericks 88, Sonics 86
Rolando Blackman rebounded his own missed shot and hit a short jumper with 10 seconds to play, giving Dallas a one-point lead over Seattle, which lost despite a spectacular performance by Gus Williams.

The Sonics still had a chance to win in the final seconds, but Jack Sikma missed a short jump shot with one second left. Blackman, who scored 19 points, hit a technical free throw for the final margin.

Williams had a playoff career high of 37 points, including an NBA record of 23 points in the first quarter. The previous mark of 22 was held by Elgin Baylor.

Mark Aguirre was high for Dallas with 20 points.

Perez Suspended, Returns May 16

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves and Toronto Blue Jays are relieved. But the Los Angeles Dodgers figure they've been mistreated.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office announced Tuesday that Pascual Perez, convicted in the Dominican Republic of cocaine possession, could return to the Braves on May 16. The same announcement said Willie Aikens, who served three months on a drug conviction, could play with the Blue Jays on the same date.

But the attorney for Dodger Steve Howe and Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda were baffled.

Howe was suspended for the entire season last December after continued drug use during and after the 1983 season. Howe's attorney Jim Hawkins said his client should be allowed back if Perez and Aikens can return.

Rose Slams Eagles By 12-1 Score

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
ELIZABETH CITY — Steve Wall hurled a three-hitter and Eric Woodworth banged out four hits as Rose High School's Rampants crushed Elizabeth City Northeastern, 12-1 yesterday in Big East baseball.

The victory completed Rose's first swing through the Big East Conference, tied for first place with a 6-1 record. Northeastern rests on the bottom of the league with a 1-6 mark.

Wall, in claiming his first victory in two decisions, went the distance, scattering three hits. The lone run off him came on a lead-off homer by Clint Williams in the sixth inning. Wall walked but one and struck out four along the way.

Rose, meanwhile, banged out 14 hits, including the four by Woodworth, one of them a double, in gaining the easy victory.

"We played a good game," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "Steve Wall really did a good job considering that he hadn't pitched in a good while."

"Our infield made some fine defensive plays, and I was really pleased with the way our subs came in and hit the ball."

The subs started coming in during the sixth inning and by the time the game ended, only Wall and Woodworth still occupied their starting spots. The rest had all been substituted for, and a total of 18 players appeared in the scorebook.

Rose started the scoring in the first inning, getting one run. With one down, Toby Fischer walked and stole second. He scored on Woodworth's two-out single to right.

The Rampants picked up another drop and that Michel was safe.

Nover then walked to load them up and Battle Emory's ground out scored Alston. Wall then singled to drive in Michel and Nover.

The Rampants scored twice in the sixth. David Jester reached on a fielder's choice and Woodworth singled, with Alston again running. Eric Jarman doubled to score both in the second. Marc Nover reached on a third strike passed ball and raced all the way to second while the catcher looked in vain for the ball. He stole third and scored on Wall's infield out.

The Rampants got their third run in the third. Traye Fuqua led off with a single and moved to third on a wild pitch and a stolen base. He scored on Woodworth's single to center.

After being held scoreless in the fourth, Rose came back with three in the fifth. Woodworth doubled and Van Alston ran for him, stealin third. Billy Michel reached on a controversial third-strike passed ball. Northeastern coaches argued that, a) the ball wasn't dropped, but was only bobbled, and b) Michel left the basepath before racing to first. The ump, however, ruled it was a Jester and Alston.

The final four scored in the seventh. Tony Taylor doubled and Larke Weatherington walked. Gary Scott reached on an infield hit and Jester doubled in both Taylor and Weatherington. Joey Hallow followed with a single to score Scott and Jester.

In addition to Woodworth's total,

Wall and Scott each had two hits for Rose.

The Rampants are now 9-3-1 overall while Northeastern is 1-10.

Rose travels to Rocky Mount on Thursday, to face Northern Nash in a 4 p.m. game at the N.C. Wesleyan College field.

Farmville Tops Rams; Chargers Best Cougars

SNOW HILL — Joey Steppe banged out three hits, one of them a double, to lead Farmville Central to a 9-6 baseball victory over Eastern Carolina Conference foe Greene Central yesterday.

The Rams took the early lead, scoring once in the first and adding two in the third.

But Farmville rallied for four in the third, then scored four more in the sixth to put the game on ice.

In the sixth, Brian Windham led off with a walk and Greg May singled. Dennis Tripp walked to load the bases and a double by Nat Norris plated Windham and May. Randy Daniels hit a sacrifice fly to score Tripp, with Norris moving to third. He then score on a wild pitch with the eighth Jaguar run.

Farmville added one in the top of the seventh, then held off a Ram rally in the bottom of the inning after Greene Central scored three times.

Billy Godley, Daniels and Norris each had two hits to add to Steppe's total. Barnes led Greene Central with two, one of them a double.

The Jaguars climb to 5-2 in the ECC standings and 8-2 overall. They host SouthWest Edgecombe on Friday. Greene Central plays Reid Ross of Fayetteville on Saturday at 11 a.m. in the first round of the Wilson Optimists Tournament.

Terry Garrett went the distance on the mound for the Chargers, now 8-4 overall and 5-2 in the league.

"I didn't think he was very sharp," Charger Coach Bob Murphrey said. "He stayed in trouble most every inning; they left 12 on base. I'm very disappointed with our defensive play; we're too sloppy."

In the fifth, Leo Venters reached first on a passed ball of a third strike and Wesley Hardee walked before Coley's homer.

McLawhorn walked and Peede singled in the seventh to set up Coley's triple.

The Chargers travel to C.B. Aycock Friday night for a rematch of the Falcons' only conference loss of the season.

11-1 overall with an unblemished 10-0 atop the Tobacco Belt standings. The Bullets travel to Aurora Thursday.

Bear Grass slipped to 7-3 in the league with the loss.

After taking the lead with the four in the first, Wilson scored what proved to be the winning run in the fourth. In that frame, Jeff Vaughn singled and came around on a double by Mike Kemble.

Wilson added one more in the sixth.

The Knights scored three in the fifth and one in the sixth to try and rally, but they fell short.

Kemble and Mike Barnes each had three hits for Wilson, while Darren O'Brien had two for GCA.

Now 3-5, GCA entertains Falls Road on Thursday.

VANCEBORO — D.H. Conley scored early and went on to record a 5-2 Coastal Conference baseball victory over West Craven yesterday.

The win boosts the Conley conference mark to 3-1 on the season.

The Vikings pushed over a run in the top of the first for the lead. Steve Mills singled and was sacrificed to second. He took third on a stolen base and then scored when a pickoff attempt by the Eagle catcher was off-target.

In the third, the Vikings added two more. Mills doubled and took third on a wild pitch. He scored when Todd Cochran got a hit. Cochran, however, was thrown out trying to stretch his hit to a double. Fred Bryant singled and courtesy runner Martin Anderson stole second. He moved to third on a wild pitch and scored when the pitcher tried a pickoff that was off-base.

Conley added single runs in the fifth and seventh, while West Craven scored once each in the third and fourth.

Mills went four-for-four at the plate to lead the Vikings, and was the lone player in the game with more than one.

Conley, 8-3 overall, travels to Havelock on Thursday.

Aycock Drills Panthers, 14-1

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
BETHEL — C.B. Aycock pitcher Paul Summerlin ripped four hits at the plate to drive in three runs and allowed just three hits while striking out eight in four innings as the Falcons defeated North Pitt 14-1

Tuesday night in Eastern Carolina 3-A Conference baseball action at Bethel Elementary.
Tommy Dunn scored three runs, slapped a pair of singles, drove in four runs and stole two bases for Aycock, which finished with 12 hits. Summerlin recorded his fourth win in as many decisions, while reliever Mike Bartlett picked up a save.

Jeff Lloyd ripped two hits for North Pitt, which dropped to 1-5 in the conference and 1-8 overall. Alfred Braxton suffered the loss for the Panthers, his second in two outings, giving up nine hits and 10 earned runs. But Linwood Harris Jr. came on in the fourth and allowed just three hits while striking out six Aycock batters.

The trouble started early for the Panthers, as Dunn walked to open the game, stole second, moved to third on a single by Summerlin and scored on a fielder's choice by John Thomas. Dwayne Nichols followed with a double to drive in Summerlin.

Aycock took command with four more runs in the second. After one out, John Herring walked, Perry Jones reached first on an error and both scored on Dunn's triple to deep center field. Dunn marched home on a double by Jesse Woodard, and a single by Summerlin with an error in left field allowed Woodard to score for a 6-0 Falcons lead.

stepped on the bag at second and relayed to Keel for the third out.
Dunn drove in two more runs in the sixth with a single after Lynch and Herring walked, and Summerlin later doubled in Dunn for a 13-1 advantage.
Bartlett singled in Lynch in the seventh for the final Aycock run.
C.B. Aycock improved its record to 6-1 in the league while 9-2 overall, and Summerlin is now 4-0 on the season.
North Pitt travels to Southern Nash Friday.

Lacey Gets Invitation

RALEIGH (AP) — Eight players from the Atlantic Coast Conference will try out for the U.S. Olympic women's basketball team, but only one of those players received an invitation.

For Trudi Lacey, twice a U.S. representative in international basketball competition, it's one more chance. That chance comes next weekend.

"I've had butterflies for four months now," Lacey said. "It's constantly been on my mind."

It's a chance that has been long and painful in coming. Lacey suffered a rotator cuff injury in 1980 and spent several years trying to recuperate.

"My muscles around the rotator cuff were completely stretched out. It would leave me limp for about three days," Lacey said.

Surgeons had to take muscles from her back and place them in her shoulder to rebuild the muscle there.

Ready Leads Brewers Over Chisox

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer
 Even before Paul Molitor was hurt, the Milwaukee Brewers knew they had to make a place somewhere for Randy Ready.
 Tuesday night's game against the Chicago White Sox showed that he is indeed ready, as the Brewers' hard-hitting rookie infielder belted a three-run homer in a six-run sixth inning to help Milwaukee post a 7-3 victory.
 Just the inning before, Ready had struck out going after a bad pitch with runners on second and third and the Brewers trailing the White Sox 2-1. But he was hardly fazed by that.

 "I blocked that out," Ready said of the fifth-inning strikeout. "You have to do that in this game. You have to shake it off."
 Ready was playing third base for the injured Molitor, who has a sore elbow. He didn't know he would start until 1½ hours before the game.

"It's unfortunate for Molitor," Ready said. "That's the type rule I will be playing under this season. I've just got to be ready to play."
 In other American League games, Toronto edged Baltimore 3-2, Texas trimmed Boston 8-4, California turned back Minnesota 6-3 and Oakland beat Seattle 6-2. Two games were rained out, New York at Cleveland and Kansas City at Detroit.
 The Brewers also got a two-run single from Jim Sundberg in the sixth as they came up with their biggest inning of the season.
 "Those are the things we have to have to be a contender," Brewers Manager Rene Lachemann said of the sixth.
 The Brewers' home opener was played in intermittent drizzle and snow. Players on both teams said the field conditions were nearly unplayable.

Stewart, the third Baltimore pitcher. Toronto reliever Jimmy Key, 2-0, and Dennis Lamp contained the Orioles. Lamp got his second save.
 The Orioles had taken a 2-0 lead in the fifth, one of the runs coming on a home run by John Lowenstein. But the Blue Jays eventually tied it with two runs in the sixth on an RBI single by Cliff Johnson and a sacrifice fly by Buck Martinez.
 Rangers 8, Red Sox 4
 Larry Parrish drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single and Pete O'Brien homered, leading Texas over Boston.
 Southpaw Frank Tanana allowed two runs in the second inning, but settled down and evened his record at 1-1 with eighth-inning relief help from Tom Henke and Odell Jones.

Dennis Eckersley, 0-2, allowed 10 hits and eight runs in less than seven innings as the Red Sox suffered their fifth consecutive loss. With a 3-7 record they are winless since April 7.
 "Anything can happen in this ballpark, like in a pinball game," Tanana said of Boston's Fenway Park. "However, it doesn't make any difference where I pitch. I have to change speeds and try to get ahead of the hitters in any ballpark."
 Angels 6, Twins 3
 Tommy John won his first game of his 20th major league season and Reggie Jackson knocked in two runs with a fourth-inning double to lead California over error-prone Minnesota.
 The 40-year-old John allowed two earned runs and eight hits during 6 2-3 innings to even his record at 1-1. Luis Sanchez picked up his second save.

 Minnesota's John Butcher, 1-1, yielded six runs in 5 2-3 innings, but only two were earned because the Twins committed three errors.
 A's 6, Mariners 2
 Steve McCatty and Chris Codiroli combined on a six-hitter and Donnie Hill drove in two runs with a single and home run as Oakland beat Seattle.
 McCatty, 2-0, pitched five innings and allowed five hits and walked five. Codiroli picked up his first save.
 The loss was Seattle's fourth in the Mariners last five games, while the A's have won four of their last five.
 "I liked the movement of my fastball," said Codiroli, who altered his delivery from three-quarters to more directly over the top. "I felt good but I got a little tired in the ninth."

Honeycutt's Pitching Leads Dodgers, 1-0

By The Associated Press
 The Los Angeles Dodgers have a knack for coming up with good pitching — even if they have to go to the American League to get it.
 Rick Honeycutt, who led the AL in earned run average last season before coming over from Texas for pitchers Dave Stewart and Ricky Wright, raised his record to 2-0 this season by hurling a five-hitter as the Dodgers edged the Houston Astros 1-0 Tuesday night.
 "I think early in the year I'm ready to go because I'm always in good shape," Honeycutt said. "Some of it has to do with the clubs I've played with."
 His victory kept the Dodgers three games behind the NL West Division-leading San Diego Padres, who edged San Francisco 2-1. In other games Tuesday, Philadelphia defeated Pittsburgh 4-1 and Montreal clobbered the New York Mets 10-0.
 St. Louis at Chicago was postponed by rain, while Atlanta at Cincinnati was called off because of cold weather.
 With Honeycutt's slider working to perfection, Houston was able to hit only seven balls to the outfield, four of them for hits.
 "He keeps everything down," Houston's Jose Cruz said of the 29-year-old southpaw. "He threw me a slider, but that was right on the black. I think that's why we hit so many ground balls."
 "I was 70 percent away with my 'sinker,'" Honeycutt explained. "It worked real well. I stayed ahead of the hitters and kept the ball down."
 The Dodgers got the only run they needed in the third inning when Bill Russell singled off loser Joe Niecko, 1-3, and went to third on Mike Sciosia's hit-and-run single to left. Russell scored when Honeycutt bounced into a double play.
 Houston put only two runners in scoring position the entire game, both with two outs.
 Padres 2, Giants 1
 Reliever Rich Gossage, another American League refugee, came on in the seventh inning to post his fifth save of the season and help San Diego build the best record in the NL, 10-2.
 "I'm usually not going to be in there except in the eighth and ninth. But I was ready, and what difference does one more guy make?" said Gossage after he hurled 2 1-3 innings of hitless relief, striking out three and walking one. "Over the season, though, I'll tell Dick Williams when I think one or two days off would make me better the next four or five days.
 "I'm not sure about tomorrow. I'll sleep on it and see how I feel when the sun rises."

Steve Garvey singled home the first Padre run and reliever Renie Martin walked Kevin McReynolds with the bases loaded to force in the eventual winning run.
 Phillies 4, Pirates 1
 Charles Hudson and Al Holland combined on a four-hitter and Mike Schmidt's homer drove in the decisive run in Philadelphia's victory over Pittsburgh. It was the Pirates' sixth consecutive loss.
 After Tony Pena slammed his second homer of the season in the second inning, the Phillies tied the score 1-1 in the fourth on Sixto Lezcano's single and a one-out double by Glenn Wilson. Schmidt then broke the tie with his fourth homer in the sixth inning and the Phillies added two insurance runs in the eighth.

"There's no sour grapes as far as the weather is concerned," said Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa. "You can expect this kind of weather in Milwaukee and Chicago this time of year."
 Moose Haas, 1-2, gave up three runs on six hits, three walks and struck out six before being replaced by Pete Ladd in the seventh inning. Ladd earned his first save with three innings of two-hit relief.
 Tom Seaver, 0-2, was the loser for Chicago.
 Blue Jays 3, Orioles 2
 George Bell snapped a 2-2 tie with an RBI single in the eighth inning, giving Toronto a come-from-behind victory over Baltimore.
 Willie Uppshaw opened the eighth off reliever Tippy Martinez, 0-1, and after Cliff Johnson was intentionally walked, Bell singled off Sammy

Brinkley, A&S Win

WINTERVILLE — Brinkley Moore Motors and Aldridge & Southerland each claimed victories last night as the Winterville Little League opened play.
 Brinkley Moore downed Hastings Ford, 10-3, behind the pitching of Brian Smith.
 Fred Streeter had a triple and a grand-slam homer to pace the Moore hitting with Darrell Tyson adding two singles. Stacy Hodges had three hits to lead Hastings.
 Aldridge & Southerland beat Edwards Auto, 6-1. Edward Farrow tossed the victory. Farrow also had a homer, while Hal Conger had two hits to lead the A&S team at the plate. No one had more than one hit for Edwards.

Aver 700-Mile Sahara Wall Stops Guerrillas

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer

EL AYOON, Western Sahara (AP) — Moroccan army commanders believe their 700-mile wall of rock, sand and concrete bunkers has crushed the Polisario guerrillas' military threat to Morocco's control of the Western Sahara.

The Algerian-sponsored Polisario movement's campaign for "liberation" of the mineral-rich desert territory continues on the international political level. But militarily, Polisario leaders have abruptly stopped predicting "certain victory" and for the first time admit their guerrilla war is stalled.

The Western Sahara is a former colonial territory of Spain. Morocco has annexed it and the Polisario movement lays claim to it, with the support of neighboring Mauritania as well as Algeria.

The conflict between Morocco and Polisario, together with a decade of drought, has driven agay the last of the Bedouin nomads who traditionally roamed the area with their herds of camels and goats.

Officers of the 80,000-member Moroccan force that controls every inhabited locality in Western Sahara assert that their success has only one name: the wall.

The costly revetment has repulsed everything the guerrillas have been able to throw against it, including a mass assault early in January by 40 Soviet-built T-54 and T-55 tanks backed by an estimated 10,000 rounds from rocket launchers, mortars and heavy artillery.

Col. Abid Tria, Moroccan commander of the central sector of the wall east of Smara, said in an interview the guerrillas have realized they can neither stop the construction of the wall, nor pierce its mine and radar-studded defenses when it is completed. Giant bulldozers are working on extensions of the wall at a rate of 1,000 yards a day, heavily protected by Moroccan troops.

Since the guerrillas' January attack was turned back, Tria said, they have not launched a single new attack except for "isolated rockets or mortar shells lobbed in from landrovers at least 20 kilometers (12 miles).

Louali said the guerrillas left four of their tanks, innumerable armored personnel carriers and other vehicles and more than 200 bodies on the battlefield against a loss of 33 Moroccan soldiers. It was the first time that Polisario abandoned its traditional ambush and hit-and-run tactics, he said, and tried to resort to classical warfare.

He said Moroccan investigators have now "positively identified" the body of the Polisario "defense minister," Brahim Ghali, among the dead in the battle area near Amgala. Polisario previously denied reports that Ghali had been killed.

Since Polisario lacks air support, has long and vulnerable lines of communication and is heavily outnumbered in troops any kind of conventional mass attack was doomed to failure, Louali said.

He added that Polisario's tanks were particularly vulnerable to the wear and tear of the desert terrain and no match for the Moroccans' more maneuverable heavy armored cars.

The landrovers and other wheeled vehicles in which the guerrillas roam across unprotected parts of the flat desert cannot cross the wall — eight feet high in places — even if they were not detected by the electronic devices along its crest.

Louali said intelligence reports indicate that only 15 of Polisario's tanks are still operational, but are keeping well away from the wall.

He stressed that Moroccan armored columns are continuously on patrol in the uninhabited no man's land beyond the wall, making it impossible for the Polisario to set up fixed strongpoints anywhere between the wall and the Algerian border.

He declined to estimate the cost of the wall, but admitted it was a "considerable burden" on Morocco's financial resources. Saudi Arabia and other oil-rich friendly nations are contributing a substantial part of Morocco's estimated war costs of $1.5 million a day.

"Whenever we have the means, we intend to extend the wall all the way to the Algerian border," Louali said.

This would more than double the 29,000 square miles — an area helicopter trip to towns and strongpoints in the protected area did not disclose any trace of Polisario activity, not even a slogan on the side of a house.

However, most of the barren and uninhabited Rio de Oro region south of the wall is apparently being left as a no man's land and "free fire zone" for Morocco's F-5 fighter-bombers. The wall has cut off the Rio De Oro from all land contact with Polisario's Algerian sanctuaries, except through Mauritania.

The Mauritanian government has formally recognized Polisario and therefore has no relations with Morocco. But President Mohamed Khouna Ould Haidalla of Mauritania said in a recent interview he will not allow Polisario to use Mauritanian territory for attacks on Moroccan forces.

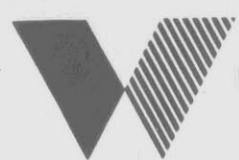

Some of the area's nomads live in newly built houses in the Moroccan-controlled towns, others in tent camps near the Algerian oasis of Tindouf.

Efforts to organize a referendum among the territory's 76,000 inhabitants registered when Spanish colonial rule ended in 1975 are stalled.

Nearly 100,000 Moroccans from northern areas have settled in the Western Sahara since the Moroccan annexation, attracted by Morocco's massive development program for the region estimated to cost more than $200 million a year in addition to the war costs.

The newcomers from the north are rapidly "Moroccanizing" the Western Sahara and its prosperous phosphate mines.

Promotion Unveiled

RALEIGH (AP) — The first three commercials in a series of radio and television advertisements highlighting the 400th anniversary of the British settlement of the new world have been unveiled by Gov. Jim Hunt.

Hunt presented Tuesday the first three commercials in a series entitled "We Remember: North Carolina 400th Historical Minutes." The 60-second spots depict the adventures of the first English colony in North America, located on Roanoke Island.

The series, which will air beginning Easter Sunday on all the state's television stations, is narrated by North Carolinian Andy Griffith.

Thirty segments will run this year, and a total of 120 will have run by the time America's 400th Anniversary ends in 1987.

The commercials were produced by the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television in conjunction with the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters.

A $150,000 grant by Carolina Pepsi-Cola Bottlers and Pepsi-Cola USA financed the production.

"This is the first time since the inception of the state network that private industry and commercial and public television have combined efforts to produce and broadcast coverage of a major event of such historical significance," said Bobby Royster, director of production for the center.

"I've always believed that when citizens, private corporations and the state work together, the results can be far-reaching and powerful," Hunt said in a prepared statement. "With the debut of these historical minutes, even more North Carolinians will be inspired to participate in county and statewide celebrations of America's 400th Anniversary."

Diplomatic Immunity Rules Confound Probe

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The aftermath of the shooting of 11 people outside the Libyan Embassy in London shows how the legal concept of diplomatic immunity can shield diplomats who commit criminal acts from arrest and prosecution.

"The purpose of diplomatic immunity is to enable countries to carry on their international business without the interruptions of people being interfered with by local courts," said William W. Bishop, an international law professor at the University of Michigan.

The cloak of diplomatic immunity goes back centuries, to when warring tribes agreed not to kill each other's couriers. The concept is designed to prohibit one country from harassing another country's visiting diplomats and their aides and family members.

Diplomatic immunity also strives to keep individual misdeeds from becoming international incidents, but may prevent the British from arresting and drying anyone for the Tuesday shootings, which left a London policewoman dead and 10 people who were demonstrating against Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy injured.

British officials say the exact status of the Libyan Embassy is unclear because in January a group of students entered the building and took over its functions. The British Foreign Office asked the Khadafy government who was in charge, but there was no answer.

By guaranteeing that a Soviet diplomat in Washington will not be arrested for shoplifting or for not paying parking tickets, for example, the United States expects that its diplomats in Moscow will not be arrested on trumped-up espionage charges. And vice versa.

"It's sometimes a sensitive area insofar as the public is concerned in seeing a group of people with a privileged status in the United States, our classless society. It's sometimes hard to understand," said Richard Gookin, the associate chief of protocol at the State Department in Washington.

"It's necessary for us to uphold the principle of diplomatic immunity," he said. "We need that protection for our people overseas more than we feel they need the protection here."

Nationally, he said, there are 26,700 foreigners in the United States, most of them in New York and Washington, who have complete diplomatic immunity. There are about 6,500 more who, under a 1978 federal law that took away their full immunity, have diplomatic immunity only for actions connected with their official duties.

Diplomatic immunity has been law in this country since the early 1800s, and it has been part of formal international law since the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations.

Diplomatic immunity is also designed to protect foreign officials from unfamiliar legal systems. For example, Mike Sim, an immigration attache at the British Embassy in Islamabad, Pakistan, was caught drinking whiskey in public last year. If he had not pleaded diplomatic immunity, that violation of Islamic law could have meant a public flogging and a year of hard labor.

An unfortunate side effect, however, is that diplomatic immunity routinely allows some people to escape the consequences of their illegal acts simply because they are part of the diplomatic community.

A number of Soviet officials and their relatives have been caught shoplifting in recent years, but none has been prosecuted. When it happened in Paramus, N.J., the police chief let the wife of a Soviet diplomat go but responded to Soviet demands for an apology by saying it would be "a cold day in Siberia" before he would say he was sorry for the arrest.

In Washington, the son of the Brazilian ambassador was arrested after a shooting outside a nightclub in 1982. Antonio Francisco da Silveira Jr. was permitted to leave the country after his father claimed diplomatic immunity on his behalf, causing protests from some congressmen.

The strongest formal action a country can take against someone who has diplomatic immunity is to expel the offender.

In the London shootings, British sharpshooters surrounded the Libyan embassy. But authorities were barred from entering the building, searching the premises and interviewing the people inside to determine who fired the submachine gun shots from an embassy window.

The University of Michigan's Bishop said that while British authorities may not be able to arrest and try anyone qualified for diplomatic immunity, they can legally order everyone in the Libyan mission out of the country. "And they can use force if necessary to remove them," he said.

In fact, on May 6, 1981, the Reagan administration ordered Libya to close its mission in Washington because of a "general pattern of unacceptable conduct" and "support for international terrorism." The U.S. Embassy in Tripoli officially closed in May 1980.

In response to the surrounding of the Libyan Embassy in London, Libyans surrounded the British Embassy in Tripoli, refusing to allow those inside to leave.

The dilemma for London authorities trying to investigate the shootings is similar to two other recent cases.

In April, the body of a Romanian engineer, a knife stuck in the chest, was found on the sidewalk in front of the Romanian Embassy in Paris. A woman told police she had seen the body fall from a fourth-floor window of the embassy, but authorities were unable to enter and investigate because of diplomatic immunity.

And in January, Washington police were similarly confounded when they were denied access to the room where a 32-year-old Soviet employee died inside the Soviet Embassy.

In cases such as these, police can enter the embassy and investigate only to the extent that the person in charge of the embassy allows. Legally, the foreign embassy is not really regarded as the territory of that country, but for some purposes it is treated as if it were foreign soil.

Most cases of diplomatic immunity never come to public view, however. The Washington Post, relying on State Department documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, in January listed several examples of cases where alleged crimes by people with diplomatic immunity were never publicly reported.

"Indeed, it is in the interest of our bilateral relations if a problem comes up that we do not advertise it and it be handled discreetly and through diplomatic channels to avoid embarrassment," the State Department's Gookin said.

Slippage In Some Federal Salaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is facing critical shortages of white collar workers in several key programs because federal salaries for some professionals are slipping further behind those in private industry, congressional auditors say.

The General Accounting Office said Tuesday that the difference is most marked among federal entry-level engineers, who earn 47 percent less than their counterparts outside government.

The GAO report focuses on 34,000 positions that carry special pay rates higher than those normally authorized by law. The special rates, which the report said will cost almost $102 million in 1984, are offered to attract and retain employees who might be lured to higher paying private jobs.

But the report said, "since 1981, the Office of Personnel Management has limited or denied pay increases for most special rate employees even though there are substantial pay disparities between private sector and federal salaries." OPM directs personnel practices for the federal government.

"OPM has based its decisions on information indicating that the staffing situation in these occupations stabilized despite the pay disparities. Agencies, however, believe OPM's decisions are affecting their ability to attract and retain well-qualified individuals and are resulting in extra training and recruiting costs, more overtime, productivity losses, work delays, and other problems," the report said.

The report gave several illustrations of the problem. It said the National Cancer Institute turned away patients who required radiation therapy because it was unable to get approval for special pay for technicians it needs.

"Two million dollars worth of equipment was idle because of a shortage of a shortage of these personnel," the report said.

At the Mare Island Naval Shipyard, Vallejo, Calif., officials are concerned about their inability to retain physical science technicians. "At the end of fiscal year 1982, Navy reported to OPM that the shipyard experienced a 23 percent vacancy rate and a 37 percent turnover rate in this occupation," the GAO said.

S&L Application

Commercial Credit Savings & Loan Association of Statesville has filed an application with the state Department of Commerce to establish a branch office in Greenville.

Ted White, president, said Commercial Credit hopes to operate a full-service savings and loan program in Greenville if the application with the savings and loan division is approved.

The firm currently operates a Commercial Credit consumer finance business at 3201 S. Memorial Drive and would convert that office into a stock-held savings and loan.

White said the division observes a 30-day waiting period after the application is submitted in order to receive statements favoring or protesting the proposal. The state then has 60 days to act on the application, he said.

Commercial Credit, which has been in the consumer finance business since the 1930s, began its savings and loan activity when it acquired Amity Savings & Loan in Statesville. The firm has 28 consumer finance associations in North Carolina.

Whole Lotta Shakin'

About 10,000 acres of San Francisco's business district were destroyed by a massive earthquake on this day in 1906. More than 500 lives were lost in the quake and subsequent fire. History's deadliest earthquake killed 830,000 people in China in 1556. Probably the most intense quake in U.S. history occurred in 1811 in Missouri. It changed the course of the Mississippi. About 500,000 earthquakes are detected around the world each year.

Things had turned sour for Trump Coup Tommy. The year had started out with a host of bad trump breaks, and Tommy had produced near perfect results. Then suddenly the hands had become commonplace, and he had reverted to being the hopeless player that he was most of the time.

Then along came this hand. Tommy bid his hand relatively well, and reached a slam that would have been laydown had trumps broken normally. As usual, there was something about a bad trump break that changed Tommy into a wizard of technique.

Tommy won the diamond lead in dummy and instinctively made the key play of ruffing a diamond in hand. He led a low spade toward dummy in an attempt to sneak a spade trick through, but West alertly rose with the ace. Since he did not want to help Tommy by shortening his trumps still further, West continued with the ten of spades, ruffed on the table.

Continuing with his plan, Tommy ruffed a diamond in hand and then cashed the ace-king of trumps. When West showed out on the second round, the hint of a smile twitched on Tommy's lips — he was ready to land another slam.

Motion Denied For Gag Order

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Superior Court judge has denied a motion for a gag order and restrictions on media coverage of court hearings in the murder trial of a 19-year-old youth accused of stabbing a woman to death last November.

Although Judge William Freeman denied the requests from attorneys for Jimmy Lee Martin Monday, he said he may impose restrictions on the press if its coverage threatens to endanger Martin's right to a fair trial.

Martin and Arthur William Mastin, 19, are accused of first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder in the death of Betty Foley Peeler, 48. Conviction could bring the death penalty.

They also are charged with assaulting Mrs. Peeler's 84-year-old father, Thomas T. Foley, who lived with his daughter, and with conspiracy to commit robbery and robbery.

He cashed the ace of clubs and overtook the queen of clubs with the king. When both defenders followed, it was all over. Tommy simply led high clubs from the table. He was prepared to discard his spade winners until such time as East ruffed, when he would simply overruff, draw the last trump and claim the rest of the tricks.

HBO Miniseries Is An Ambitious Project

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Say this for "The Far Pavilions," starting Sunday night on Home Box Office: the six-hour miniseries is spectacular in its re-creation of palace life in 19th century India, and of the splendor of the British Raj.

An unusually long wedding scene toward the end of the second, two-hour installment, set in the lavish mountain fortress of Bhor, is, for instance, extraordinary in its attention to colorful detail in set, costume and ritual. And that is indeed rare for a medium normally preoccupied with an audience restless to get on with the action.

The miniseries, to be shown by the pay-cable network over three consecutive nights and repeated April 30-May 2 (a shortened, theatrical version is being distributed internationally), is composed of 547 different scenes, most of them shot on exotic location in northern India.

"You could not do this film anywhere else with the kind of authenticity we managed to get," said the director, Peter Duffell. "The palaces we filmed in exist in India and nowhere else. Nobody could afford to build them in studios."

"What excites me about the movie," said Michael J. Fuchs, HBO's president who arranged to preview the $12 million miniseries in a theater adjacent to the reconstructed Egyptian Temple of Dendur at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, "is what it looks like. It's a feast for the eyes."

In fact, more than 5,000 original costumes were made for "The Far Pavilions," and that may be the miniseries' most impressive feature.

For alas, "The Far Pavilions" is weakened by curiously stilted dialogue drawn from M.M. Kaye's commercially successful novel. The characters — and the cast is good, at least in reputation — frequently mouth lines eminently more suited to the printed page.

"Have you heard of the Far Pavilions, Wally?" Ash, the miniseries' leading man, asks a companion while on a camping trip. "It's the highest mountain in the range that you can see from Gulkote, a great crown of snowpeaks.

"I used to say my prayers to them," Ash adds. "Silly, isn't it?"

That kind of expository conversation reads nicely, but sounds awkward when spoken aloud.

Ben Cross, who played Harold Abrahams, the sprinter, in the Oscar-winning movie "Chariots of Fire," seems stiff and unnecessarily humorless as Ashton Pelham-Martyn (perhaps because he is never sure, in his own mind, whether he is British or Indian).

Amy Irving, an Academy Award-nominee for "Yentl," is Anjuli, an Indian princess who is forced in the middle segment — much to Ashton's dismay — to marry the aging Rana of Bhor (Rossano Brazzi).

The supporting cast includes Omar Sharif as Ashton's long-time friend, Koda Dad; Christopher Lee as Anjuli's uncle, Kaka-ji Rao; and John Gielgud as Major Sir Louis Cavagnari, who is in charge of the British mission at Kabul.

Here is the story: Pelham-Martyn, the orphaned son of British parents, is raised by an Indian woman, and at first believes himself to be Indian. As a child, he is befriended by Koda Dad, and the young Princess Anjuli.

Soon, however, he learns of his British parentage and flees to England. At 19, he joins the Corps of Guides and is sent back to the country of his birth, where he is assigned — after adventure and misadventure — to lead a royal wedding caravan from Gulkote to Bhor. He's given the temporary rank of captain.

"That's small consolation," Ash says, "for having to be a combination of sheepdog, supply officer and nursemaid to a passel of squealing women and palace parasites. And in the polo season, too."

"It could be a bit of a lark, too," says Wally (Benedict Taylor), his soldier-friend.

Ash is surprised after joining the caravan to encounter Koda Dad, and Anjuli, neither of whom he has seen for years, as members of the wedding party for Princess Shushila (Sneh Gupta).

The action through the first two-thirds of the miniseries frequently moves as slowly as the caravan, and most of the excitement is in the final episode, when Cavagnari provokes a riot and Ash and Wally lead the defense of the British mission, and later, when Ash attempts to rescue Anjuli from almost certain death at Bhor.

"The Far Pavilions" is visually magnificent and landmark television for that reason, if no other. Indeed, TV Guide magazine will feature the HBO miniseries on the cover of its April 21 edition — the first time in the publication's 31-year history that a cable show has received that valued display.

CBS Won In Ratings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The winner and still champion: CBS, which captured the ratings title for the 1983-84 TV season on the strength of heavyweights "Dallas" and "60 Minutes" and such miniseries as "Master of the Game" and "Chiefs."

CBS claimed its fifth ratings victory in a row at the April 15 close of the current 29-week season. ABC was second and NBC was third. Here are the final ratings: CBS 18.1, ABC 17.2, NBC 14.9.

ABC, which had the week's highest-rated show with the Academy Awards presentation, tied CBS in the last week of the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey, but, unlike last year, posed no last-minute threat to CBS.

All three networks could draw some consolation from the fact that, while audiences defected to other forms of home video entertainment, the season's viewership decline was the smallest since the 1979-80 season. CBS and NBC viewership were down 1 percent from last year and ABC's was down 3 percent.

CBS won the first week of the season, which began Sept. 26, and gave up its lead only during the World Series, when ABC was ahead for one week. In all, CBS won 19 weeks and twice tied with ABC for first. ABC won seven weeks and NBC won one.

The season's No. 1 show was CBS' "Dallas," with "60 Minutes" at No. 2. Others in the season Top 10 were: ABC's "Dynasty," third; NBC's "The A-Team," fourth; CBS' "Simon & Simon," fifth; CBS' "Magnum, P.I.," sixth; CBS' "Falcon Crest," seventh; ABC's "Hotel," eighth; CBS' "Knots Landing," ninth; and the ABC Sunday Movie, 10th.

The top miniseries of the season were, in order, CBS' "Master of the Game," CBS' "Chiefs," NBC's "Celebrity," CBS' "George Washington" and NBC's "Kennedy." CBS' Grammy Awards coverage was the top special, with ABC's Academy Awards coverage second.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — IS BELOVED PATRIOT PAUL REVERED BY HONOR HISTORY STUDENTS?
Today's Cryptoquip clue: X equals I

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Changes Plea In Molesting Case

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro businessman accused of taking indecent liberties with a minor has changed his plea to guilty on lesser charges of assault on a child under 12 years of age.
Richard Watts Jennings, 47, changed his plea Monday after five days of testimony. He faced a possible 10-year prison term under the original charges.
He will be sentenced June 11 in Guilford County Superior Court, and in the meantime will undergo psychiatric examination and treatment.
Jennings' plea to two misdemeanor counts followed two deliberation sessions in which jurors failed to reach a verdict.
The businessman was originally charged with felonious offenses involving an 11-year-old boy at Jennings' residence during 1983. The state contended that Jennings took indecent liberties last September and December with the boy, who is now in a foster home.

Judge Is Named To Fill Vacancy

WAYNESVILLE (AP) — Waynesville lawyer Danny E. Davis, 31, was sworn in Monday to fill the 30th Judicial District judgeship vacancy created when J. Charles McDarris retired.
Davis was chosen to fill the post by Gov. Jim Hunt on the recommendation of the 30th Judicial Bar Association. His term expires in December 1986.
Davis, the first graduate of Campbell College Law School to become a judge, served as an assistant to District Attorney Marcellus Buchanan in 1980 and 1981.

Wife Gets 20 Years For Slaying Husband

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Hubert woman, described by her attorney as a battered wife, pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter and was given the maximum 20-year prison sentence by an Onslow Superior Court judge.
Pamela Merissa Tignor Heidmous, 26, had been charged with first degree murder in the 1983 shotgun slaying of her husband, David, but the proceeding ended in a mistrial last October. Mrs. Heidmous did not testify at the October trial or Tuesday's sentencing hearing.

Defense attorney Chuck Henry told Onslow Superior Court Judge Henry L. Stevens III Tuesday that his client was a battered wife. He asked Steven to "exercise mercy" and asked for the minimum six-year sentence.

Henry said the couple had argued the night of May 12, 1983. He said David Heidmous was beating and choking his wife on their bed, but when he pushed her off the bed, she grabbed a 12-gauge shotgun and loaded it.

Henry said the shotgun discharged accidentally as she fell backwards.

Assistant District Attorney Walter Vatcher disputed the defendant's version, saying evidence showed Mrs. Heidmous wasn't a battered wife, but a wife who was "having an affair" and "threw rages when she didn't get her way."

Vatcher said the gun was on a six-foot shelf and the shells were in boxes inside a plastic bag. He said Mrs. Heidmous shot her husband while he was asleep in his bed.

Dr. Walter Gable, the Onslow County Medical examiner, testified Heidmous was lying in bed with the covers drawn to his waist and his hands behind his head at the time of the shooting.

Mrs. Heidmous, who had a baby while in prison three months ago, threw a piece of paper to the floor, and began to cry after Stevens pronounced the sentence.

Candidates Agree On Industry's Even Spread

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

The issue of jobs — how to get them and where to put them — has taken a back seat only to education as the hottest topic of debate among candidates for governor.

Democrats D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth, Tom Gilmore, Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and Eddie Knox as well as Republicans Jim Martin and Ruby Hooper agree that North Carolina's traditional industries should not be ignored in the rush to lure high technology industries.

They also agree that new industry should be spread more evenly across the state, but there is no consensus about how to hold down costs of one of the state's biggest industries — utilities.

As a former state commerce secretary, Faircloth is urging North Carolina to hire the best professional developers and give them freedom to meet industrial needs for training workers, sewer, water and roads.

"There is nothing more important than jobs," he said. "They are the thread that makes the state work."

Faircloth says the state cannot offer tax incentives but should try to phase out the tax on manufacturers' inventories and the tax on intangibles, such as cash on deposit in banks. He says money to eliminate the taxes could come from a no-growth policy in state government.

There is a plug in the pipeline of bureaucracy between the collection of taxes and the delivery of services.

I intend to clean it out," he said.

Gilmore is stressing the past administration's failure to raise the state's wages. North Carolina has one of the nation's lowest manufacturing wages and one of the lowest per capita incomes. Gilmore says the governor should try to improve workers' skills so they are eligible for better paying jobs.

"The answer is not to bring more manufacturing jobs," Gilmore said. "The answer is to develop apprenticeship programs. The answer is to develop higher skills in our people."

"To reduce crime and the prison population and bring good paying jobs we must start by providing good health, education and opportunities for young people," he said.

Gilmore says it would be nice to repeal the inventory and intangibles taxes but, "not at the expense of our school children."

Ingram says the next governor must "pinpoint areas in special need of jobs and help locate the industries where unemployment or underemployment exists." He says he would help such areas use available resources, including community colleges and technical institutes, to support new industries.

Ingram says phasing out the intangibles and inventory taxes could be done, but says he is concerned that such changes could harm county governments and local school systems with the loss of revenue. He says repeal of the taxes could be considered by a blue ribbon study commission.

Green says the state must place a priority on attracting jobs to underdeveloped and less privileged areas, perhaps by establishing enterprise zones.

He says completion of Interstate 40 can recapture for North Carolina some of the business that's going to South Carolina and Virginia now.

He also supports development of tax and job credits to encourage industrial development.

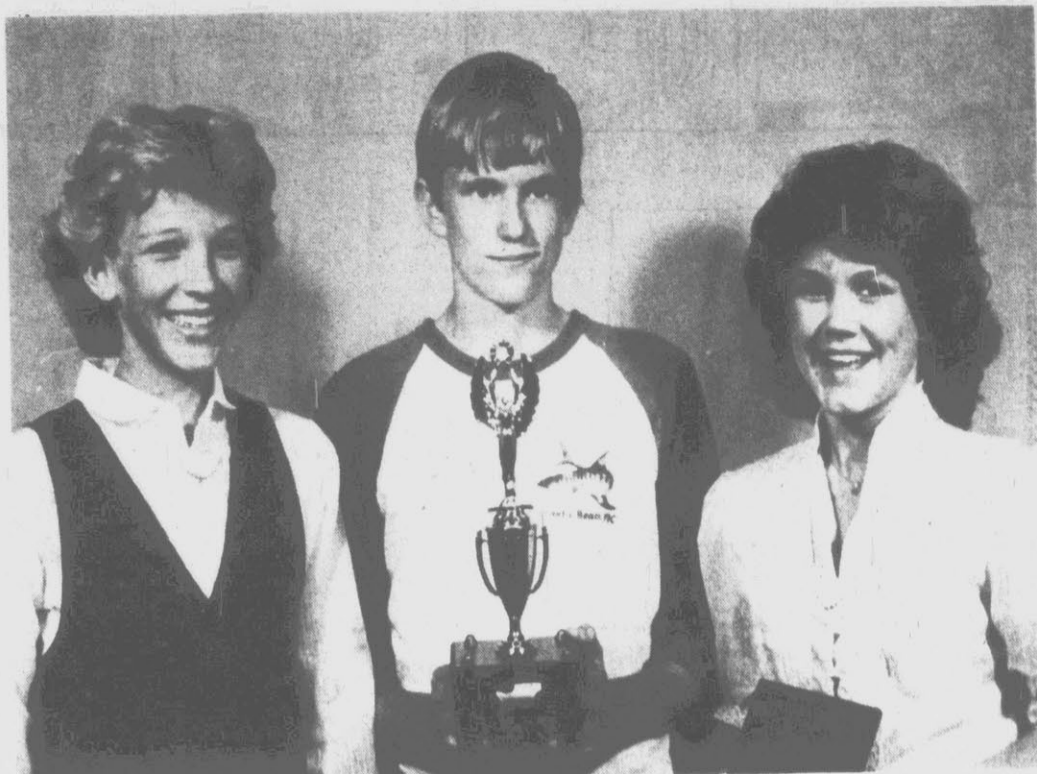

"I have always favored phasing out the inventory tax," Green said. "I recognize however the impact on local government. The state can't eradicate that without a supplement."

Knox places similar emphasis on boosting the rural economy and has developed a Rural Economic Action Program to do that. The plan is designed to help the 60 counties with populations of less than 50,000.

It calls for state financial help to establish local offices for economic development, incentives for counties to appoint economic development commissions, help for analyzing public facility needs and use of community colleges for economic development research.

"Our well publicized efforts to lure large, out-of-state industry into North Carolina have clearly benefited some parts of the state," Knox said. "But we must do more to relieve the joblessness and economic stagnation that continue to plague many of our rural areas."

Knox says he would support phasing out the intangibles and inventory taxes if revenue could be found to replace them. He says one option would be giving a corporate credit on income taxes.

Edmisten has called for improving export markets and the travel and tourism industry. He says industrial recruiters should not bring businesses to the state that will destroy North Carolina's "liveability."

"There are some industries I wouldn't bring in here for 50 jobs," he said.

Edmisten does not favor repeal of the intangibles and inventory taxes until some fair alternative sources of revenue can be found.

Martin says the state should stimulate investment as the best way to bring new jobs and remove "self inflicted handicaps" of the inventory and intangibles taxes.

"Those are very damaging as we try to recruit new industry," Martin said. "Think what they do to businesses already here."

Martin says completion of Interstate 40 should become a top priority because it would help develop import and export markets. He wants to recruit the food processing industry to boost the state's agricultural economy and he wants to establish a research center to keep the textile industry abreast of the latest trends toward modernization.

Mrs. Hooper wants to focus on expanding small business, which she believes hold the most potential for expanding the number of jobs. She says an expanded economy should provide the base for repealing the inventory and intangibles taxes.

One of Ingram's top campaign themes has been the push to join 11 other states who elect their Utilities Commission. The governor now appoints the commission in North Carolina.

Ingram also wants to eliminate the Construction Work in Progress charges. Utilities use the CWIP law to finance construction of power plants.

"The appointive system in North Carolina no longer works, and it no longer reflects the importance of electric bills on our state's households and businesses," Ingram said. "There is no excuse to hang onto an outdated appointive system when states with elected commissions have track records better than ours."

Other candidate disagree, arguing that the kind of power used by companies has more effect on utility rates than the method of selecting the commission.

"To dangle that idea out in front of the people as a solution to utility rates is a cruel hoax, especially to people on fixed incomes," Faircloth said.

He supports restricting use of CWIP to cases when the utility's financial wellbeing is at stake.

Edmisten has promised to appoint Utility Commission members from all areas of the state, to appoint more consumer advocates and to limit to once a year the number of times a utility company may file for increases.

"People who want a solid, guaranteed return on their investment, should consider the utility stock," Edmisten said. "The speculator, looking to make big money, should look elsewhere."

He also proposes granting CWIP only in cases where "extraordinary rate relief is required to preserve the financial integrity of the company."

Gilmore and Mrs. Hooper say they support repeal of CWIP while Green, Knox and Martin want to continue with the present law.

"The Democrats generally argue that you save the consumers a few extra dollars by not including it," Martin said. "But we (Republicans) say you should include it so the utilities will be able to economically finance construction... My argument is if you save a few bucks the consequences are worse than what you saved."

No Position On Detergent Sale

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt still hasn't taken a position on a proposal to ban the sale of phosphate detergents statewide, aides say.

The ban has been proposed by the N.C. Environmental Management Commission and endorsed by state Secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development James A. Summers.

"It is not accurate to say (Hunt) is staying out of the issue because he has not yet taken a position on it," said Hunt deputy press secretary Lynne Garrison. "The governor is studying the issue."

How Tar Heels Voted In The House, Senate

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes April 5-11.

House
PANAMA CANAL — By a vote of 188 for and 214 against, the House rejected an amendment to reduce the fiscal 1985 outlay for the Panama Canal Commission by $8.3 million or two percent. The House later sent to the Senate a bill (HR 4900) appropriating $443.9 million for the panel.

Under 1977 treaties turning over the canal to Panama, the U.S. commission is to administer the canal until the year 2000. Congressional appropriations are supposed to be offset by canal revenues. Chiefly at issue on this vote was whether U.S. employees in Panama deserve a cost-of-living hike to offset their loss of commissary privileges, and whether the U.S. administrator's perks, such as a rent-free house, are excessive.

Sponsor William Carney, R-N.Y., said the U.S. canal zone administrator "should be paying approximately $3,000 a year rent (for) that gorgeous home he has down in his little kingdom."

Opponent Horman Shumway, R-Calif., said any budget cut might jeopardize a cost-of-living hike "which I think is essential to keep those employees in place."

Members voting yes wanted to cut the Panama Canal Commission budget.

Voting no: Charles Rose, D-7.

Not voting: Walter Jones, D-1.

TAX BILL — By a vote of 318 for and 97 against, the House passed a tax bill to cut $47.2 billion from the $600 billion deficit that is projected over three years beginning Oct. 1. The measure (HR 4170) was sent to the Senate.

Most of the bill's revenue would come from the corporate sector through a partial crackdown on tax shelters, loopholes and questionable accounting practices. Its most visible everyday consumer provisions would increase telephone, liquor and cigarette taxes. Its most prominent features affecting individual income tax returns would tighten rules for "income averaging" and lessen the interest income and income earned abroad that can be excluded from taxation.

Supporter Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., called the bill "a pretty good piece of work" and noted that President Reagan supported it.

Opponent Eldon Rudd, R-Ariz., said "the deficit must be attacked with responsible spending policies, not just higher and higher taxes."

Voting yes: Valentine, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Britt, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill, Clarke.

Not voting: Jones.

Senate
NICARAGUA — The Senate passed, 84 for and 12 against, a non-binding resolution condemning the CIA-supervised planting of mines in Nicaraguan harbors. The CIA has acknowledged it acted with White House approval. The vote occurred during debate on a tax bill (HR 2163).

Supporter Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, said "participation in mining the territorial waters of another country is considered an 'act of war' in the international community."

Opponent Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., said "we in the Senate tread upon dangerous, dangerous (constitutional) ground when we interfere with the authority and responsibility of the president."

Senators voting yes wanted to register opposition to U.S. involvement in the mining of Nicaraguan harbors by anti-Sandinista rebels.

Senators John East and Jesse Helms voted no.

INDEXING — By a vote of 57 for and 38 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to delay from 1985 to 1988 the start of "tax indexing," the mechanism to keep inflation from pushing taxpayers into higher tax brackets. The vote came during debate on HR 2163, a bill to cut the deficit by $62 billion in fiscal 1985 through tax hikes and spending cuts.

Indexing will raise tax brackets by the same percentage as the rate of inflation. It is designed to thwart the "bracket creep" that causes individuals to pay higher taxes even though their real earning power does not increase.

Martin Feldstein, the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, was quoted in debate as saying "the long-term success or failure of President Reagan's economic program is likely to hinge more on retaining tax indexing than on any other piece of legislation."

John Chafee, R-R.I., who sponsored the amendment said indexing will cost the Treasury $51 billion over the next three years. The government will have to borrow that amount, thus "aggravating the self-same inflation that indexing is supposed to mitigate against."

Senators voting no wanted to delay tax indexing for three years.

Senators East and Helms voted yes.

HEALTH INSURANCE — By a vote of 39 for and 57 against, the Senate rejected an amendment to establish a program of federally funded health insurance for unemployed persons who lost their medical coverage along with their jobs.

If established, the program would have cost $700 million over a two-year period, with the money being raised by closing loopholes in the tax code. States were to have received block grants for setting up their own medical insurance programs for the jobless. The vote came during debate on HR 2163, a revenue measure that was headed for final passage.

Bill Bradley, D-N.J., who supported the plan said "we must provide these desperately needed health benefits..."

Senators voting against the amendment called the outlay a budget-buster, and noted that unemployment is lessening in most areas of the country.

Senators voting yes favored a new federal program to provide medical insurance for the unemployed.

Education Is The Starting Point

WINCHESTER, Va. (AP) — Lawton Foushee, crew chief of the Jaguar auto racing teams, says he gives this advice when asked how to break in as a professional crew member.

"You really need well-rounded, hands-on experience in all aspects of automotive work," says Foushee. "Staying in school is important. I would say the ideal candidate would be one who has a college degree in mechanical engineering and four to five years of broad-based experience either in a new car dealership or in a general repair shop."

"That experience gives you the background to diagnose a problem and fix it in a hurry, often under bad conditions, and always under the pressure of the clock."

"Now you can enjoy my great Virginia ham without going whole hog."

George Hamilton, President, Smithfield Packing Company

Last fall when George Hamilton introduced his new Easy Karv Ham, the response was overwhelming.

Shoppers bought every Easy Karv he could produce. Which is enough to make a Smithfield meat packer squeal with delight.

Still, some grocery stores ran out of the tender, lower salt hams far too soon. And too many ham-loving families didn't get the Easy Karv they wanted. That won't happen again.

Because this time George Hamilton has pieced together an ingenious new plan. He's dividing his original, whole Easy Karv Hams into three delicious new cuts.

So now you'll find more Easy Karv Hams, in more convenient sizes. Like center slices. Averaging about a pound a piece, they're cut out for quick and easy dinners for two.

And the butt and shank cuts, at seven or eight pounds each, can feed a hungry family. With some to spare.

Of course, all three new cuts give you more tender ham per slice than other hams. Less fat and waste. Because they're trimmed the special Easy Karv way at Smithfield Packing Company.

Naturally, these new hams have 25% less salt than regular bone-in hams. Just like whole Easy Karvs.

And to make his hams even more tempting, George Hamilton will actually refund a dollar on the purchase price of Easy Karv center slices, butts and shanks.

So look for them at your supermarket. Even when they're cut down to size, Easy Karvs are a cut above other hams.

Archeologists To Seek Little Bighorn Dead

By NICK GERANIOS
Associated Press Writer
HELENA, Mont. (AP) — The bodies of five to 15 troopers never accounted for after the Battle of the Little Bighorn might be buried in a ravine below the hill where Lt. Col. George Armstrong Custer made his famous "last stand," a Park Service historian says.

Archeologists hoping to solve the more than 100-year-old mystery will look for the bodies in Grey Horse Ravine at the Custer Battlefield National Monument starting May 7, Park Service historian Neil Magnum said.

"We want to satisfy the question of were there any bodies down there, and if not, where did the missing soldiers fall and where are they buried," Magnum said.

The missing troopers were among the estimated 210 U.S. soldiers and civilians attached to five companies of the 7th Cavalry who were wiped out on June 25, 1876, by 4,000 to 5,000 Sioux and Cheyenne Indians.

Magnum said the search was inspired by a prairie fire last August that exposed what appeared to be burial mounds in the ravine.

While most of Custer's troopers are buried in a mass grave at the top of a hill in the 600-acre park in southeastern Montana, some bodies never were found. The exact number of dead is unknown because troop rosters were lost in the battle, Magnum said.

The missing include enlisted men and three officers: Lt. James Sturgis of Albuquerque, N.M.; Lt. Henry Harrison of Albion, N.Y.; and Lt. James Porter of Strong, Maine.

Eyewitness accounts of the battle said some soldiers of E Company were killed in the ravine, Mangum said.

"Speculation is that those bodies in the ravine were never taken out of there," Magnum said. "There are indications that dirt was kicked down from the top of the ridge onto the bodies because the stench and decomposition was so bad."

Historians have speculated that E Company either may have tried to escape to the nearby Little Bighorn River or that Custer sent them to protect his flank as he prepared for a retreat he never made.

The confusion after the battle may be one reason the bodies were never found, Magnum said, adding that most of Custer's dead troopers were hastily buried three days after the battle in shallow graves.

The Army returned in 1877 to dig deeper graves and to put up makeshift markers, Magnum said, but most of the dead weren't identified.

What historians believe was Custer's body was exhumed and buried at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y.

The other bodies were exhumed in 1881 and moved to a mass grave at the top of a treeless hill where the Custer Monument was built.

In 1890, the government placed marble markers at the spot where they guessed each trooper died, Magnum said.

No markers were erected for the Indian dead because the bodies of the estimated 100 Sioux and Cheyenne killed were immediately removed by their kin, the historian said.

The excavation of the Grey Horse Ravine will continue past June only if something is found, Magnum said. Searchers probably will find just bits and pieces of skeletons, if anything, he added.

Magnum said archeologists also will conduct the first inch-by-inch mapping of the entire battlefield this spring, using equipment they hope will reveal any unmarked graves.

"We might surprise ourselves and find another skirmish line and shed more light on the battle," Magnum said. "We want to find out exactly what evidence of the battle we have to possibly reconstruct more of it."

Study Of 4,000 Mentally Ill Hints At Connection

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A study of 4,000 mentally ill patients over nearly two decades indicates that the disease's severity varies with the motions of the sun and moon, with psychotics showing their most bizarre behavior when the moon is full, a psychiatrist says.

The new study found that at the time of the full moon — and especially during the full moons of the summer and fall — psychotic mental patients display their most inappropriate appearance and strongest irrational fears, said Dr. Charles Mirabile, a psychiatrist at The Institute of Living in Hartford, Conn.

For centuries, poets have speculated about the ill effects of the moon. Shakespeare spoke of people becoming "fools by heavenly compulsion," and the poet John Milton wrote of "moon-struck madness." The word "lunacy" itself comes from the Latin word for the moon, luna.

"It has been recognized for some time that patients with mood disturbances tend to become ill during particular seasons of the year," Mirabile said. But the new research suggests "that seasonal effects are much more pervasive than has generally been realized," he said.

Mirabile's study also found that disease severity climbs not only when the moon is full but also at the time of the new moon, when the lunar image disappears and no moonlight appears. This effect was most apparent in spring and winter, Mirabile said.

The seasonal and lunar variations were most obvious in psychotic patients, but were also evident in patients with other mental disorders, he said. Psychosis is defined as a mental disorder marked by deranged personality and loss of contact with reality.

Seasonal variations in mental illness have previously been attributed to changes in the length of day and night — changes brought about by the motion of the sun relative to the Earth.

The link between illness and the invisible new moon, however, suggests that the brain may also be responding to the same lunar effects on gravity that are responsible for rising and falling tides.

"Perhaps, during the course of evolution, the brain organized its development around these geophysical cues, and the systems responsive to them are obliged to maintain an appropriate temporal order for effective function," Mirabile said.

His research was made possible by what he said was a unique computer record of daily observations of 4,000 patients at The Institute for Living, a 400-bed private hospital. The daily record-keeping was begun in 1965 and continued until six months ago, Mirabile said.

The system was first used to show that differences in severity of mental illness among individuals might be due to differences in underlying temperament.

Mirabile showed that a person's susceptibility to motion sickness was a good indicator of overall temperament, although why that should be true is not clear.

Mirabile then found that patients with either very large or very small susceptibility to motion sickness tended to be admitted to the hospital in the spring and fall. Those with intermediate susceptibility were most likely to be admitted during the summer and winter.

Those findings were what led to the investigation of the effects of the sun and the moon on severity of mental illness, Mirabile said.

Researchers have made progress in understanding the effect of changes in light on the chemistry of the brain, Mirabile said, and he speculated that the motions of the moon might affect the body's balancing system, located in the inner ear.

"It appears that these systems operate in delicate coordination, or balance, and that the perturbation of this relationship is largely responsible for the unique disturbance we call mental illness," Mirabile said.

Warn Merger Is No Sure Cure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two companies planning to merge into what will be the nation's No. 2 steelmaker estimate first-quarter losses of up to $40 million each and acknowledge they would face risks even after final approval of their proposal.

Republic Steel Corp. and LTV Corp. "have incurred substantial operating losses in 1982 and 1983," the two companies said in a joint proxy statement to stockholders sent in preparation for a May 18 meeting. They estimated losses for the first three months of this year of $35 to $40 million for Republic and $30 million to $40 million for LTV.

The proxy statement, released by the Securities and Exchange Commission said bluntly that the risks include the possibility that their steel operations "may not return to profitability." But it also said "operating results for both companies improved progressively during the quarter" and cited possible increased efficiencies that are the stated reason for the merger.

Reagan To Visit Tacoma For Tour

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will visit Tacoma, Wash., on Thursday to tour a Weyerhaeuser log-shipping facility.

Afterward, Reagan will fly to his California ranch, where he will remain until leaving for China on Sunday, Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes says.

Speakes said the president wanted to visit Weyerhaeuser because it was the first wood products company to deal with China and is helping China with a reforestation project.

ASURVIVOR
PEKING (AP) — The white-tailed sea eagle, long thought extinct, has been discovered in a recently designated nature reserve in northeast China, the news agency Xinhua says.

Village May Be 'Dead' To Some Folks, But Exciting Those Who Remained

By DENNIS MONTGOMERY Associated Press Writer

SNOWBALL, Ark. (AP) — On a day when the sun finally banishes the last winter chills from the hollows, a village name can make a motorist follow curiosity right off a highway and into the past.

As U.S. 65 meanders through Searcy County's Ozark Mountains, it fetches up on a sign for Snowball. Arkansas 74 bridges Bear Creek, climbs a hill, crooks a finger. Snowball again.

Seven miles of macadam farther, the byway breaks through a cedar-crested bank. There below, in the sun, sits Snowball.

Calif Creek browses down a rocky bed past the frame houses and fieldstone buildings. The twinkling water bends toward the Buffalo River beyond a string of stoop-shouldered hills. A buzzard wings high above.

"I've lived about all my life around here," Gertha Griffin said. "I know it is dead to some folks, but to us it is not. It has been a thrilling and thriving little community."

Mrs. Griffin, 66, lives on a farm homesteaded when Rutherford B. Hayes was president. She married Fred Griffin 50 years ago this July. Their daughter, Janice McDaniel, 48, lives in a white house with two chimneys, one raised by slaves.

Next door is McDaniel's Grocery, the only store left. Five bewhiskered men in overalls sit on wooden chairs in a semicircle around a cast iron stove drinking pop from glass bottles. Their voices fall quietly on the cool, rock-dust damp.

Grandpa Smith built the store in the '30s or '40s, Mrs. Griffin said. "And he wouldn't tell anybody what he was building. He was just that kind. He had a droll sense of humor. He told some folks it was a bank. He's done gone on. He's down there in the cemetery."

Beside a red dirt road, a path climbs through a rusting, wrought-iron arch into a hillside burial ground. Fabric flowers grace every grave. Mrs. Griffin and the Snowball Cemetery Association see to that the fourth Sunday of every August.

In the Hodge family plot, three miniature stone coffins perch on two-stepped stone slabs raised in the 1880s. E.S. Hamm's obelisk has cast its shadow like a sundial across his wife's remains for 88 years.

But most of the monuments in this old section are simpler. Some are of concrete, sprinkled with bits of broken, colored glass, the names scratched in by hand before they set. Farther back stands a short, wooden cross.

"You can see we have not been a dead place all these years," Mrs. Griffin said. "This little town has burned down twice. We used to have a cotton gin. We had two cotton gins at one time. It burned down again a few years ago.

"And we used to have two grist mills. And you could buy anything. Shoes ... just anything. On Saturday nights people would bring in the grain, and that little old place would be working alive up there. There would just be people everywhere."

"My husband's grandfather blew up in one of those mills. The boiler blew up and it killed four men at one time. They just picked up the pieces and carried them away in winding sheets. One of them is buried up here in the cemetery."

The name Snowball? It seems a man named Snow, a Mason, built a hall in the early days. He asked the government to put a post office in the place and list the name as Snowball. His "h" looked like a "b." The government took its post office back in the '60s but left its name.

Must Provide Names, Address

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government must give the non-profit National Association of Atomic Veterans Inc. the names and addresses of servicemen to take part in atmospheric nuclear weapons tests in Nevada and the South Pacific from 1945 to 1963, a federal judge says.

In her ruling, U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green said that studies planned by the group would provide a public benefit beyond the government's own studies, such as a 1977 finding by the Centers for Disease Control of a number of leukemia cases among veterans of nuclear testing.

The Pentagon's Defense Nuclear Agency said it withheld the information because disclosure would constitute a "clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy."

AMC Will Recall 62,400 Autos

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Motors Corp. will recall 62,400 cars from the 1979 model year to upgrade pollution control systems, the Environmental Protection Agency says.

The cars are Concord, Spirit and Pacer models with automatic transmissions and 258-cubic inch (4.2 liter) engines, the agency said. Cars sold in California are not affected.

EPA spokeswoman Marth Casey said many of the cars probably have exceeded the 50,000-mile limit for which manufacturers must warrant pollution control systems, and thus the government cannot force a recall. But she said that issue did not arise because the company is acting voluntarily.

Some Snores Can Be Very Noisy

DETROIT (AP) — Most people snore occasionally, but some snorers register as much as 80 decibels — a sound as loud as a pneumatic drill.

According to a World Health Organization study, such truly loud snorers — those who can be heard a room away — may total 10 percent of adults.

Wall Of Hate Divides The Factions In West Belfast

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A red-brick wall 20 feet high snakes through West Belfast, separating the Protestant Shankill and Roman Catholic Falls Road districts.

More walls, topped by razor-sharp metal spikes, divide other "interface" zones on the front line in Northern Ireland's sectarian warring.

The British have built the walls over the last few years to replace the ramshackle "peace lines" of barbed wire-topped corrugated iron erected a decade ago to keep the rival communities from each others' throats.

British officials call the walls "environmental barriers." But they are in reality somber monuments to the nearly 2,400 men, women and children who have been killed since 1969 and to Britain's failure to end "The Troubles."

The walls also symbolize Ulster's deepening sectarian divide and the refusal of Protestants and Catholics to end centuries of sectarian hostility. The polarization of the two communities has extinguished hopes that flickered in the late 1970s that reconciliation was possible.

The Belfast Telegraph, the province's non-sectarian evening newspaper, calls them "the walls of shame."

Although Britain's Northern Ireland Secretary, James Prior, said recently that he perceives a lessening of sectarian hostility, not many in Ulster share that viewpoint.

The violence drags on, with a momentum all its own, against a backdrop in both parts of Ireland of chronic economic malaise, ever-mounting unemployment rolls and a growing disenchantment with political and church leaders, especially among the young.

Thousands of the province's 1.5 million people, weary of the bloodshed, have fled to England, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the United States.

Among the 500,000 Catholics, there is continuing support for Sinn Fein, political front of the Irish Republican Army.

IRA guerrillas are fighting to end British rule in Northern Ireland and unite the province with the Catholic Irish Republic to end 62 years of partition and set up an all-Ireland socialist state.

Among the million-strong Protestants, there are growing suspicions that the British, weary of trying to pacify the unruly province, are increasingly prepared to talk about unification.

In East Belfast, a Protestant stronghold, John McMichael, top strategist of the Ulster Defense Association, said Protestants "now believe in the Big Bang theory, that we must prepare for the final conflict within the next few years."

McMichael, 37, said: "We would hope to avoid that conflict, but the IRA and Sinn Fein are not interested in reconciliation."

"Unionism and Republicanism are irreconcilable. We're not talking about politics, but the existence of Northern Ireland, our home."

"Many Protestants believe the Republicans are winning because the British do not have the will to defeat the IRA and because most British politicians, despite their claims Britain will not withdraw, are no longer interested in keeping Ulster in the United Kingdom."

Brian Feeney, a moderate Catholic Belfast councilman, said: "These walls say that we're never going to have reconciliation, that we're always going to be divided."

"The walls are part of the British government's policy of containing the nationalist community in West Belfast. It's very effective."

Tom Hartley, a member of Sinn Fein's eight-member central committee, said in an interview: "Over the years the Brits have penned us in. Most of west Belfast can be sealed off in minutes now. We're sitting on a timebomb. The Brits have built up a police state of enormous proportions here and the nationalist people are reacting against it."

Apart from the walls, the authorities have built a major six-lane highway that creates a barrier between the rival strongholds of the Falls and the Shankill.

The road, including a 40-foot-deep underpass that made a ravine between the Falls and the city center, cuts off the troublesome Unity Flats complex from the Catholic stronghold.

Eamon McConnell, a 25-year-old Catholic social worker who lives in the shadow of the wall in Bombay Street, an area burned in the riots of 1969, said the barrier has curbed Protestant attacks.

"People do feel more secure," he said. "But the kids still lob bricks over the wall. The people who live close to the wall want it even higher."

"But everyone else sees these walls in a much more ominous light."

Cold Winter Brought Rare Birds To Japan

By KOZO MIZOGUCHI
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — This year's unusually harsh winter has filled Japan's skies and gardens with hundreds of rarely seen northern birds, bringing joy to the nation's birdwatchers and problems for resident species facing increased competition for reduced food supplies.

The winter migratory birds from Siberia and the Arctic region, such as geese and swans, have come this year in twice their usual force, while some birds are being spotted this year for the first time in decades, according to members of the 13,000-member Wild Bird Society of Japan.

The birds apparently have been driven further south than normally this winter by a cold front, with upper air temperatures of around -49 F hovering over eastern Siberia. Japan, influenced by the front, has also shivered through one of its coldest and snowiest winters in years, with about half a dozen snowfalls in the usually mild Tokyo region.

Mamoru Takahashi, a staff member of the Wild Bird Society's branch in Saitama Prefecture, just north of Tokyo, said that on one day in mid-January, birdwatchers counted 21,500 geese and swans — double the usual number — at the Izunuma marshland area of northern Japan.

In Izumi City, noted as a winter home for migratory cranes in southwestern Japan, as many as 8,500 of the Siberian birds have been seen this winter, exceeding last year's record of 7,550, city official Masaaki Mori said.

Hooded cranes and white-necked cranes come in great numbers every year, but this year, two Canadian cranes and four black cranes, rarely seen in Japan, were spotted in the city's paddy fields and lakes, Mori said.

Some of the rarest birds have been sighted around Shari-cho, a town facing the Sea of Okhotsk on the farthest reaches of Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido.

Noboru Ose, chief of natural environmental protection in the town office, said 60 glaucous gulls had been spotted — the first time they've been seen in 10 years — and other uncommon visitors were the white falcon, snowy owl and white-tailed sea eagle.

Every day, he said, dozens of amateur photographers line up with telephoto lenses to take pictures as the birds come skidding in along the frozen shore.

Wild Bird Society official Munenori Takeda said it was difficult to estimate how many migratory birds fly to Japan every winter, but the number definitely is up this year.

Rift Over Sabbath Is Displayed

By MARC D. CHARNEY
Associated Press Writer

PETAH TIKVA, Israel (AP) — Each Friday after sundown, as the holy Jewish day of peace and rest begins, the Sabbath war erupts afresh in Petah Tikva.

For two months now, thousands of pious Jews, led by the black-clad ultra-Orthodox, have marched each Friday to the center of this small city of 150,000.

There they demonstrate and chant, pushing at times against lines of baton-wielding police and uniformed border guards manning the limits set out in the demonstration permit.

Streetcorner arguments break out between secular Jews and the religious — shouting, finger-pointing, arm-waving exchanges that reflect one of the deepest cleavages in Israeli society.

The immediate issue is whether a movie theater should be shut down on the Sabbath, when Orthodox Judaism permits neither the exchange of money, nor travel, nor frivolous entertainment.

But that drab theater, a few blocks from the main synagogue in this otherwise quiet suburb of Tel Aviv, is testing an issue far larger:

Should religious law or temporal law govern public conduct in this, the Jewish state?

It is an issue of religion, and of emotion.

The religious claim the duty to preserve a "Jewish" environment, even though they make up only 20 to 25 percent of the population.

Secular Jews, the overwhelming majority, claim the right to live however they choose, free of the hundreds of scriptural restrictions on what a Jew can eat, wear and do.

Each side says the other can do what it wants in private. But when the moment comes for compromise on what happens in public, each side says there is no room.

The theater will stay open, says the city government.

The city council will be forced to step down, says the chief rabbi.

By trying to enforce its will on the majority, says Dan Ben Canaan, spokesman for Mayor Dov Tavori, the religious minority is "taking advantage of the Israeli democracy" and bringing Petah Tikva close to violence.

In an interview, Ben Canaan said the religious are led by "fanatics" whose motto is, "For serving God, you will do anything." They tell you straight, "Don't question. Just do."

The city's chief rabbi, Baruch Salomon, says "there is nothing to compromise over. You can't desecrate the Sabbath halfway."

Still, he adds, even though secular and religious Jews live differently, "when a man has to bar mitzvah his son or get married, it is we who escort him through the most beautiful moments of his life. We have necessary meeting points and we have to take care that these won't be points of friction."

Those are the public positions of leaders in the controversy, and they do not convey the deep prejudices evident each Friday night on the streets.

At one recent demonstration, two men shouted and gestured angrily at each other. One wore the black coat and hat of the pious. The other, a worldly "sabara," or native-born Israeli, wore a plaid jacket.

"Will you come to my house?" the man in plaid demanded, as if daring the other man to accept the invitation.

"Yes," said the man in black.

"But I live far away. Will you ride with me in my car?"

"No. This is the Sabbath."

"Then forget it."

A woman offered a compromise. Let the secular Jew drive and the pious man walk, arriving later.

"All right," said the man in plaid.

"When you arrive, we'll offer you our food. We aren't kosher. Will you eat from my kitchen?"

"No."

The conversation had ended.

Conscious of the need for people so different to live side by side, Israel's first prime minister, David Ben-Gurion, decades ago struck with Israel's rabbis a rough balance of influence known as the "status quo."

Major cities such as Tel Aviv and Haifa today offer many restaurants and theaters open on the Sabbath. Jerusalem and smaller municipalities such as Petah Tikva have few. Secular law governs most matters, but the rabbis have a large say in marriage and divorce law.

In recent years, emboldened by a coalition system in which either major party needs their cooperation to govern the country, small religious parties have tried to expand their arena of influence. For example, they forced El Al, the national airline, to cancel all Saturday flights.

Now in Petah Tikvah, they face a reversal. The labor-led secular parties won a large majority in municipal elections last autumn, and they no longer need the religious parties' votes.

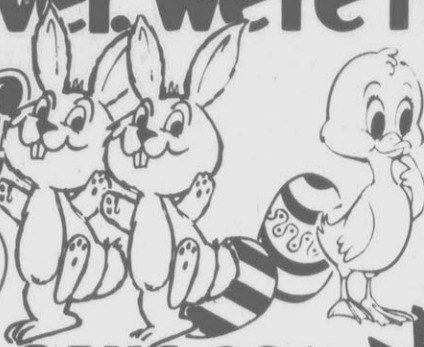

So, in February, the council could approve the theater's request to open on Friday nights. Immediately, the rabbis took to the streets.

Taiwanese Wary Over Reagan's China Visit

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — The 19 million Chinese on this Nationalist-held island will be watching warily when President Reagan, for many years a staunch patron of their cause, journeys to Peking on April 26.

State visits to China are no longer a novel experience for American presidents, and the Taiwan-based Nationalists have become reluctantly accustomed to the idea of their biggest ally hobnobbing with the enemy.

In interviews, ordinary Taiwan citizens offered a variety of reactions — ranging from fear that Reagan could be fooled by the leaders in Peking, to suggestions that it will help him to better understand Chinese communism.

Some people are apprehensive that improved relations between Washington and Peking might undercut the personal ties that Reagan has tried to maintain with Taiwan since his predecessor, Jimmy Carter, decided in 1979 to end 30 years of diplomatic relations with the Nationalists and formally recognize the People's Republic of China.

Peking claims that Taiwan is a part of China and made the severing of official U.S. ties with the Nationalists a condition for establishing its own full diplomatic relations with Washington.

"The visit of any U.S. president to the mainland does us no good," said Chang Wen-li, a 25-year-old university student.

He recalled that it was the 1972 visit by another sturdy Republican friend of Taiwan, Richard Nixon, that originally opened the way to normalization of relations between the Americans and the mainland government. Reagan's visit, he predicted, will lead to closer ties "and that will be bad for Taiwan."

According to an official who asked not to be identified, the Nationalist government's attitude is one of resigned "understanding."

"Of course, we are very concerned about the visit. We have to watch it carefully," said Dr. James Soong, the government's chief spokesman.

"Mr. Reagan has repeatedly indicated that he wishes close, cordial relations with the Republic of (Nationalist) China. And he has assured us he will not sacrifice old friends for new ones. We have confidence in him."

At the same time, said Soong, "He has to maintain some kind of relations (with Peking) to check Soviet expansion in the Far East."

Describing the Communist leaders in Peking as "very tricky," Soong said they have adjusted to the possibility that they may have to deal with Reagan for another four years.

"What they hope to do is to soften Mr. Reagan's anti-communist stand and erode the firmness of his policy toward Taiwan," he said.

When Reagan was elected in 1980, officials and others here hoped his long record as a pro-Nationalist meant he would take steps to reverse the trend toward closer U.S. ties with the Peking regime.

The Nationalists were disappointed, especially when Reagan signed an agreement with Peking in 1982 to phase out arms sales to Taiwan, but toned down their rhetoric when it was found that, in practice, military sales continued virtually as before.

Soong said his government remains unhappy over Reagan's refusal to sell it advanced FX or F-16 fighter planes, and hopes that he will review the decision.

Interviews with a sampling of Taiwanese drew mostly negative reactions to Reagan's visit to China. However, some said they thought it wouldn't do any harm and might even do some good, particularly in terms of the three-way relationship between China, the United States and the Soviet Union.

"A year ago," said Tsai Sheng-bong, an independent legislator and businessman, "Soviet ships were in the Taiwan Strait. They are using the Vietnamese naval base at Cam Ranh Bay (in Vietnam). The short-term effect of the Reagan visit may be to ease the tensions."

Lee Teng-hui, the 60-year-old Taiwan governor and next vice president of the Republic of China, said he thought the China-U.S.-Soviet balancing act was futile.

"The United States may be thinking that if it becomes friends with Peking it will deter the Soviet Union," he said. But Moscow's belligerent attitude hasn't changed despite years of individual Chinese and American confrontation, and isn't likely to, he said.

Jeffrey Koo, 50, a prominent Taiwan businessman, said that by going to China, Reagan will "do some harm psychologically" to Taiwan, but won't trigger an outflow of capital.

"We have learned that we cannot depend on anyone, not even the United States, too much. When the presidency changes, the whole thing changes," he said.

"Because of this system, Taiwan has been exposed at many vulnerable points. So we have learned to look after ourselves."

Chen Tsai-wen, a railway ticket collector, called the visit "an awful mistake, both for the Reagan administration and for Reagan himself."

Equally emphatic was Su Hsien-ming, 38, a plumber, who said, "It is absolutely unnecessary for him to go. It gives the impression the United States is more concerned with communist countries than free ones like Taiwan."

Chou Min, a 23-year-old nurse, said, "It is good because, as leader of the free world of democracy, he must visit the other side of the street. Now he must see the mainland, deepen his understanding of the Communists. He will find that their government doesn't represent its billion people."

Argentina In A Diplomatic Row Over Beirut Embassy

By JUAN-CARLOS GUMUCIO
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese army troops occupy Argentina's embassy compound in Beirut and the South American nation's chief diplomat says everything he has done to get them out has failed.

The Argentines call the occupation "a serious offense" and charge that the Lebanese Foreign Ministry has ignored every protest lodged since the Lebanese soldiers took the embassy over Feb. 17.

"I think the whole episode has been undramatized, but I give it all the connotations of a very grave act," said Eduardo Gonzalez Plaza, the Argentine charge d'affaires. "We have not received a single official explanation. We were simply told by the military that the embassy was a military zone."

The compound, which includes a two-story, stone building and takes up about half an acre, has great strategic value between the warring factions in Beirut because it is on the "green line" crossing at the closed Lebanese Museum, the only open corridor between Beirut's Christian east and Moslem west.

After Moslem militiamen took control of west Beirut, army troops loyal to President Amin Gemayel's government launched a drive to capture positions along the corridor, and the Argentine compound became involved. Now it provides the most advanced post of the army facing the city's western half.

The embassy, surrounded by bougainvillea and trees, has been overridden before during the nearly nine-year Lebanese civil war.

Palestinian fighters reportedly used the embassy's backyard to launch attacks against invading Israeli troops in 1982. Later other militiamen opened holes in the compound's walls to provide quick escape after hit-and-run raids.

Today, the embassy's facade bears the scars of years of nearby fighting. In the lobby an engraving of Jose de San Martin, the father of the 1816 independence of Argentina from Spain, hangs from a wall damaged by a stray bullet.

"When the Israelis bombed us in 1982, at least they gave a reason — their usual one — that we were housing terrorists," Gonzalez said in an interview.

"But the Lebanese government has not given us any official explanation. They have simply ignored our protests."

Gonzalez displayed a formal note he said he sent to the Foreign Ministry Feb. 23.

Reporters' efforts to get official comment from the Foreign Ministry produced no results. A source at the ministry who declined to identify himself said no one in the ministry was familiar with the problem. But Gonzalez said he sent his protest by telex and had acknowledgment that it was received.

"To say that they have not received this or that document is common practice in the Lebanese Foreign Ministry," he charged.

The occupation occurred two days after Ambassador Tulio Sugasti left Beirut on home leave, and the Argentine government has not been able to discuss the matter with the Lebanese ambassador in Buenos Aires, Edmond Khayyat, because he has resigned, Gonzalez said.

He said 50 soldiers stormed into the compound on Feb. 17, but the number was later reduced to 27. They sleep in the embassy's basement and have set up a sandbagged observation post in a corner of the compound. They also closely monitor embassy guests, Gonzalez added.

"No pictures," a Lebanese officer ordered a news photographer. The photographer asked if the compound was not, under diplomatic practice, Argentine territory.

"This is a military zone," the officer replied.

Gonzalez, the 34-year-old second secretary who is the top-ranking diplomat still present in the three-member mission, said the Lebanese government "would never have allowed the military occupation of the French Embassy, for example."

But he said the issue is not likely to lead to a breaking of relations with Lebanon.

He noted that more than a million Lebanese or Argentines of Lebanese descent live in Argentina.

"The worst relations are better than no relations," Gonzalez said.

Industry Learns To Save Energy

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Energy conservation is not only having an impact on the homeowner, but industry also has learned to conserve.

Today, manufacturers are using 10 percent less energy to produce a ton of steel than they did in 1972, 19 percent less to produce a ton of cement, and 23 percent less energy to produce a gallon of gasoline, according to Phillips Petroleum.

Overall, the U.S. real gross national product has grown 25 percent since 1972, but energy use has remained practically unchanged while oil use is down 7 percent.

TOO ILL FOR TRIAL
BONN, West Germany (AP) — A West German court has ruled that former Nazi doctor Richard Rühl was too ill to stand trial on charges of experimenting on concentration camp prisoners with mustard gas.

Long-Exiled Bobby Baker Returns To Washington Broke, But Not Broken

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Long-exiled from the heady days when his ability to count votes and money made him a millionaire and a powerful Senate insider, Bobby Baker says he is broke but not broken.

"I've found out there's a lot more to life than money," he says. "If you go to bed feeling good and wake up feeling good, that's 90 percent of the battle of life."

The onetime protege of Lyndon Johnson has mellowed at 55, forty-one years after he arrived in Washington to become a Senate page.

"I laugh more now than I ever before did before because I see the human foibles of life," Baker said in recent interview.

By most standards, he hasn't had a lot to chuckle about in the last two decades.

Literally growing up in the Senate, Baker combined hard work, ambition, intelligence and political smarts to become clerk to the Senate Democrats in the 1950s when Johnson was majority leader.

With his Pickens, C.C., drawl, he could cajole and threaten with the best, helping put together vote packages for Johnson and collecting what he says were political contributions from businessmen — $500,000 every two years — for getting bills killed or passed.

Baker's Senate salary was $19,600 in 1963, the year he resigned his post after his backstage wheeling and dealing became public. He estimated his net worth then at $2 million. Today, he says, "I'm cleaned out."

After Senate investigators finished exposing him, federal prosecutors started proceedings that led to his 1967 conviction for stealing nearly $100,000 in purported campaign contributions and evading income taxes in 1962 and 1963.

Baker, who served 16 months in prison following unsuccessful appeals that reached the Supreme Court, still insists he is innocent. Fighting to clear his name, he says, has helped land him in bankruptcy court.

"It has cost me ... probably half a million dollars in out-of-pocket expenses between accountants and lawyers, in lost business enterprises. If I had just kept those businesses that I had prior to my resignation, I could show (a net worth) beyond $100 million. I am a net loser, if money's your guide."

In recent years, 20-year-old documents have emerged from government files that Baker says would have acquitted him had they been available in 1967. Last year, a federal appeals court reviewed them and ordered the trial judge to reconsider Baker's plea for a new trial. That decision is pending.

Baker, citing debts of $384,955 and no income, filed for bankruptcy in 1982. Divorced, he lives with a girlfriend in suburban Maryland, drives her Mercedes and says he hasn't lost his interest in either business or politics.

He says he travels around arranging deals and giving free advice.

"Those are the kinds of things I do best," he says. "Other than their paying my expenses, I will not take a fee. I'm sort of hanging on until I get out of bankruptcy. That's not income. When I go to California, I stay in the best hotels and eat in the best restaurants ...

"I still have my brain, I know how to make money and I will."

Baker, who observes Washington "willfully" from the outside, says the post-Watergate ethics reforms haven't changed a system of cronyism and big-bucks he once exploited.

"This is the way it works ... It will never change ... Politicians look for easy money," he says.

Baker says political action committees, virtually created by campaign disclosure laws, have replaced the type of slush fund he and Johnson used to collect and distribute to cooperative senators.

"It's still going on, and it will never change until we find a way to buy" the media advertising needed to put across a political campaign, Baker said.

Baker, who says he is not bitter about his life, said his "biggest mistake" came in 1961 when Johnson moved on to the vice presidency and he turned down $500,000 a year to become Martin-Marietta's Washington lobbyist.

"Once Johnson was gone, I was much better not to be in politics. You can stay too long ... Once the fellow I had the relationship with left — had I left then I probably would have had one of the most lucrative law firms in town."

He said he never thought about leaving Washington, even though he feels he was deserted by many former cronies, including Johnson, after his troubles began.

"Why should I? I know the truth. I know the facts. I hold my head high, and I hope I'm too smart to hate."

Ice Cream Their Favorite Dish

DENVER (UPI) — Ice cream licks all other foods among children's favorites, says a school food service magazine.

"Nine out of 10 children rate it as No. 1," says the article in the January-February issue of School Food Service Journal.

Doughnuts come in second, chocolate chip cookies third, and french fries fourth.

Eggplant came in last on a list of 206 foods included in the Food Preference Study conducted with a nationally representative sample of 1,051 children, ages 2 to 12.

The study was based on children's and mother's attitudes toward the foods and beverages, and the Menu Census of 4,000 representative households measuring what children actually eat.

Pizza narrowly won over chocolate cake, and Mexican food beat out fish sticks.

Corn on the cob ranked as the most popular vegetable, but mothers don't often serve it, the study showed.

Almost six out of 10 children voted dill pickles their No. 2 vegetable, and carrots No. 3.

Chicken noodle soup was more popular than peanut butter and jelly sandwiches — and was outranked as a lunch favorite only by hamburgers and hot dogs.

Traitor's Trial Stirs Big Furor

LONDON (AP) — Michael Bettaney, the first officer of Britain's M15 counter-espionage agency to be convicted of spying since it was founded in 1909, has begun a 23-year jail sentence, but the furor over the case continues.

Members of Parliament complained about security lapses, and news reports today said Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was furious and had ordered an urgent investigation by Lord Bridge, an appellate judge who heads the Security Commission.

Bettaney, who sought to spy for the Soviet Union but was uncovered, was convicted Monday after a five-day trial. During the trial, it was revealed that he was promoted in 1982 within two months of a magistrates' court conviction for being drunk in a London street.

A police officer testified in that case that he found Bettaney babbling: "I am a spy, I am a spy."

If his senior officers knew of the drunk charge, "they have proved themselves unfit to hold their offices, and if they didn't know, why not?" complained Conservative Party lawmaker Anthony Beaumont-Dark.

"I am very disturbed about the 'I'm a spy' incident," said Edward Taylor, a Tory who heads his party's home affairs committee in the House of Commons.

"It should have given rise to suspicions about his character. I want to know if an opportunity was missed or lost."

The secret service recruited Bettaney in his last year at Oxford University in 1972.

Bettaney, 34-year-old son of a factory cleaner, was based at the M15 headquarters in London. His job was to counter Soviet spying efforts in Britain and assessments of Soviet activity as well as secrets of MI-5 operations flowed across his desk.

He began taking notes and photographing documents at work and approached Soviet Embassy officials in London, offering them samples of what he could get if they took him on as a spy.

According to information released by the security service to some British journalists, the Soviets rebuffed Bettaney because they thought they were being set up for entrapment.

Bettaney was arrested last September as he was due to fly to Vienna. He told colleagues he was going on vacation, but allegedly was planning a new bid in the Austrian capital to gain Soviet confidence.

After he was sentenced, Bettaney's lawyers read a statement by him attacking the Thatcher government for creating unemployment and accusing the British and U.S. secret services of seeking to "destroy the entire fabric of society in the Soviet Union and in other socialist countries."

Passing sentence at the Old Bailey Central Criminal Court, Lord Chief Justice Geoffrey Dawson Lane called Bettaney's views "puerile... self-opinionated and dangerous," and said that if he had joined the Soviet spy service he could have betrayed agents to their deaths.

Most of the trial was in secret but Lane said that Bettaney was convicted "on the plainest possible evidence" by a jury of nine men and three women who found him guilty on all 10 counts of spying.

The Home Office said Bettaney will be prevented from mixing with other prisoners because of the amount of information he has about the security services.

He spent the first night of his sentence at Coldingley Prison, a high security jail southwest of London.

Grants Available To Aid Victims

Gov. Jim Hunt has announced that grants are now available to programs aiding victims of domestic violence. The Legislature included $250,000 each year for domestic violence programs in the 1983-85 budget.

Approximately 60 counties in North Carolina now offer some type of service to victims of domestic violence. Most are staffed entirely by volunteers. Last year 27 programs were awarded grants by the N.C. Department of Administration.

Grants not to exceed $13,000 each will be made to eligible community groups to help them provide direct services. Program services that are eligible for funding include counseling, shelter services, and emergency food and transportation. Applications for grants must be submitted by May 17.

For more information, contact Amy Reaves, Domestic Violence Project Director, 733-2455.

LBJ Saw Trouble In Vietnam

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Two and a half years before he became president, Lyndon B. Johnson told a Senate committee that Vietnam was a critical trouble spot for the United States, but sending U.S. troops was not the answer "at this time."
Johnson's testimony, given May 25, 1961, while he was vice president, has been released by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which periodically issues edited transcripts of historic closed hearings.
"American combat troop involvement is not only not required, it is not desirable," Johnson, who had just returned from his first trip to South Vietnam and other parts of Southeast Asia, told the committee.
After being catapulted into the presidency by the assassination of President John F. Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963, Johnson presided over a deepening U.S. military involvement in the Vietnam War, which eventually claimed more than 55,000 American lives.

The increasing unpopularity of the war was a major reason for Johnson's decision not to seek a second elected term in 1968.
In his previously undisclosed testimony, Johnson said, "Vietnam and Thailand are the immediate and most important trouble spots that are critical to the United States."
"There is no alternative to U.S. leadership in Southeast Asia," he added.

But he cautioned: "Asian leaders at this time do not want American troops involved in Southeast Asia other than on training missions. American combat troop involvement is not only not required, it is not desirable."
The 655-page transcript, covering closed hearings for the first five months on 1961, also showed that Kennedy administration officials gave conflicting testimony as to whether the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961 was intended to trigger a popular uprising in Cuba.

The April 17, 1961, invasion — in which 1,400 Cubans opposed to President Fidel Castro were landed at Cuba's Bay of Pigs with support from the Central Intelligence Agency — was a major foreign policy disaster for Kennedy. The invasion was crushed within three days and all of the survivors were captured.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk told the committee on May 1, 1961, that part of the objective was "to spark an uprising by many elements in Cuba, which would open the way for upsetting Castro by the Cubans themselves."

The next day, CIA Director Alan Dulles, saying he wanted "to correct what may be a slight misapprehension," told the senators, "We did not count on ... any immediate uprising in Cuba."

Two weeks later, Gen. Lyman Lemnitzer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, testified that the operation was approved "in the hope this would trigger off other uprisings throughout the island."

The late Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, then a member and later chairman of the committee, told Lemnitzer he was "a little bit confused on what seems to me to be a different emphasis now coming from CIA and from this testimony this morning."

Lemnitzer replied that he agreed with Dulles that it was not anticipated there would be "immediate" uprising but "a flow into and reinforcement of ... the people who were coming ashore."

Lemnitzer also testified that "if the beachhead was held for a reasonable length of time, a matter of several days, if the uprisings did not begin to show up at that time, and the pressure from Castro's forces developed to the degree which required them to give up the beachhead, they would then resort to a guerrilla status."

Report Change In Beverage Choice

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new study indicates Americans are drinking less coffee and tap water and more of everything else.
"Beverage Trends in America 1960-2000" anticipates a 1.1 percent annual growth rate in beverage consumption over the next 15 years, including alcoholic beverages, with beer and wine in the forefront of the growth.
Health concerns related to caffeine and local water supply pollution are largely responsible for the expected decline in coffee and tap water consumption, according to researchers for M. Shanken Communications Inc., which did the study.
Reasons for overall growth in drinking include an increasingly adult population, a wider choice of beverages, population shifts to warmer climates and an expected increase in advertising expenditures combined with more sophisticated sales techniques.
