Libyan Siege Seen Lengthy Test Of Wills

By ED BLANCHE

Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Police strengthened barricades around the besieged Libyan Embassy today and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, back from a visit to Portugal, drove straight to her country retreat for a briefing on the diplomatic standoff.

Both London and the government of Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy are taking tough stands in the four-day showdown. Khadafy says he will settle for nothing less than an end to the siege while London is demanding to search the Libyan Embassy and question those inside about the shooting incident which began the confrontation.

In Tripoli today, Britain's Libyan ambassador, Oliver Miles, met for the second time in as many days with Libya's foreign minister, Ali Abdulsalam Treiki.

"Both sides reaffirmed their wish to conclude matters in a peaceful manner," said a spokesman at the Foreign Office in London who declined to be identified.

In London, top government officials assembled at 10 Downing Street while police continued talking via telephone to the Libyans holed up in the embassy. Scotland Yard spokesman John Miller said the conversations were "cordial."

Lemonade, candy bars and American cigarettes were sent in before dawn and "talks are continuing as and when necessary," Miller said. He declined to elaborate.

The confrontation began Tuesday after a gunman firing from the embassy sprayed 70 peaceful anti-Khadafy demonstrators with submachine gun fire, killing a young policewoman and wounding 11 protesters.

Inside the besieged embassy, a Libyan who gave no name told a reporter by telephone: "We're innocent. We have not harmed anyone, nor broken any laws in this country."

"We have no gunmen here in this building and we have no guns or ammunition."

He said he and his 20 to 30 colleagues plan to observe a "holy day" today, but did not elaborate.

Scaffolding and other materials were moved in to strengthen the 20-foot-high blinds of blue plastic sheeting blocking off the six streets that run into fashionable St. James's Square where the Libyan "People's Bureau" is ringed by marksmen.

Spectators who have gathered daily at the entrance from Regent Street, one of London's main shopping zones, can see only police officers and blue-bereted, flak-jacketed Scotland Yard snipers moving in and out of the barricaded area.

Still, the crowds reach up to 100 people at a time, and Scotland Yard said today, "We're expecting larger crowds than usual over the long Easter weekend. We're taking routine precautions."

Khadafy declared in an NBC News interview from Tripoli that he would settle for "nothing else" but the lifting of the siege.

But Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative government stuck to its demand to search the embassy for weapons and question the trapped Libyans, some accredited diplomats.

Tripoli Radio, monitored in London, quoted Treiki as saying the British demand was "unacceptable and contrary to international traditions. I do not think the British will insist on such a request."

The Vienna Convention of 1961 prohibits the search of embassy premises or the prosecution of an accredited diplomat without permission.

Khadafy also reiterated Libyan charges that police and dissident exiles attacked the embassy Tuesday. The British Foreign Office retorted: "His allegations are totally false."

Khadafy's charge was echoed by Libyan diplomats at news conferences in major capitals, including Tokyo, Rome, Paris, New Delhi and Athens. They insisted Britain provoked Tuesday's shooting.

A crowd demonstrated outside the British embassy in Tripoli on Thursday night. There were no reports of any injuries or arrests.

London fears anti-British rhetoric on Libyan Radio will inflame hostility against 8,000 Britons living in the north African country.

Tumultuous Welcome For Rev. Jackson In Greenville

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"We seek to complete the last leg of a long journey, from slaveship to championship," declared Democratic presidential hopeful Jesse Jackson in a rally Friday at the King and Queen North. "It is time for more than just a new president, it is time for a new direction."

Despite being two hours late in arriving in Greenville from a previous stop in Rocky Mount, Jackson received a tumultuous welcome from the packed audience of blacks and whites who had waited from 4 p.m. and earlier until Jackson's arrival shortly after 6 p.m.

Greenville Mayor Janice Buck, in a brief welcoming statement, asked, "Isn't this a great occasion? We are fortunate to have Reverend Jesse Jackson visit us. We welcome him to Greenville. We are excited and happy to have him here with us."

Combining a pulpit oratorical style laced with Biblical allusions to the Crucifixion and Resurrection with pointed observations on education, social conditions and foreign policy mixed with references to local conditions, Jackson cited eastern North Carolina as "a belt, an area often exploited. You also have the greatest potential for change here."

"Dixie isn't just Charlotte, Greensboro, Raleigh or Durham. It is not free of eastern North Carolina. When the slaves of eastern North Carolina rise up, they will free the slaves of Raleigh, Durham, Charlotte, Greensboro."

Jackson several times stressed the "ache and pain of poverty," noting that poverty in the United States "is not mostly black, or brown, or mostly women or white, ... color it pain, ache, desperation, heartache. Poverty knows no race or sex."

Lashing out against huge sums in the federal budget earmarked for defense, Jackson called for cutting the defense budget. "You can use that money to build bridges, a mass transit system, to build houses, to create jobs and to pay teachers." (The reference to teacher pay drew a round of thunderous applause).

"We must not raise another generation to send to Nicaragua, El Salvador or Lebanon. We must no longer be South Africa's number one trading partner. We need a foreign policy that makes sense to everybody."

"Our first line of defense should not be a guided missile. It should be a developed mind. We must learn the fine diplomatic art of talking, negotiating, not fighting. There is no peace in nuclear war." On the threat of the Soviet power, Jackson declared, "I am not as concerned with a Soviet bear coming through my window as I am about a tapeworm coming into my belly."

"Our involvement in Central America is all wrong. The time is long past for reliance on gunboat diplomacy, the big stick approach. We must understand we cannot rely on superior weapons and inferior minds."

A Contrast With 1960

By PATRICIA MOORE

Late Thursday afternoon — two hours late, to be exact — the Rev. Jesse Jackson became the first black presidential candidate to visit Greenville.

He arrived at the King and Queen North, one of Greenville's more elegant restaurants, in a late-model camper, accompanied by a bus and an automobile motorcade.

On Saturday, Sept. 17, 1960, John F. Kennedy became the first presidential candidate ever to visit Greenville. He arrived at Pitt-Greenville Airport in a private plane accompanied by two other planes, one carrying the press. He was about 20 minutes late. By the time he reached Farmer's Warehouse, he was running 30 minutes behind schedule.

Greenville's first lady mayor, Janice Buck, officially greeted Jackson at the King and Queen North.

Twenty-four years ago, Mayor S. Eugene West welcomed Kennedy and gave him a foot-long key to the city.

By the time Jackson, who is seeking his party's nomination, reached Greenville from Rocky Mount and other eastern North Carolina stops, he seemed hoarse, but as he intensified his message, the hoarseness disappeared. On hand to hear him were an audience of about 1,000, including Southern Christian Leadership Conference officials and area candidates.

In contrast, Kennedy arrived at 9:30 a.m., just beginning a new day. On hand to greet the official Democratic presidential nominee were a

Faircloth Wants 'Less' Regulation

Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Lauch Faircloth said today he does not support more gun control for North Carolina and called the issue "an example of further government regulation."

Faircloth said he wanted to reduce the "20,000 pages of regulations we (North Carolina) have already."

"Earlier this week there was a great outcry over gun control from former Charlotte mayor Eddie Knox," Faircloth said in remarks prepared for a press conference in Greenville. "The former mayor of Charlotte has a history of support for more gun control."

"As governor I will not support any bill for additional gun control in this state," said the candidate. "This issue is an example of the many differences between the former mayor of Charlotte and myself."

Faircloth said he does not favor "running the (state) government by studies and commissions."

"I want to invest our monies in better roads and support for our existing industrial recruitment program," Faircloth said. "Then we can continue to attract companies like TRW and Simpson Industries."

"The former mayor (of Charlotte) wants to spend $16 million to plan and study economic development," he said. "If we had left it up to the former mayor of Charlotte we would also still be studying whether or not we need a medical school at East Carolina University."

Faircloth said he is also "strongly opposed to raising taxes."

"Doing things directly and making good decisions with as little government interference as possible, investing in what we need rather than frills and studies, that's the eastern North Carolina approach to living," Faircloth said.

"I've grown up with that approach all my life in eastern North Carolina," he added. "It's the foundation on which I will build my administration as governor."

Cajun Chef Shares Simple Secrets To Exciting Delicacies

By JOHN DEMERS
NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Cajun master chef Paul Prudhomme says it took him four years and $14.95 in pots to overcome what he sees as the most serious problem with cookbooks today.

He insists they aren't written for the average American kitchen. The stout, bearded restaurateur, who attracts lines of hungry diners whenever he takes his show on the road, says he refused to let his recipes be collected until he had hammered them into their simplest form.

"To explain to somebody in this book and to explain to one of my experienced cooks are two completely different things," Prudhomme said in an interview, as he sat at his corner table at K-Paul's Louisiana Kitchen.

"All these had to be unraveled one thing at a time."

Since his landmark French Quarter restaurant is open only for dinner, the culinary celebrity has more time than ever to talk about cooking, eating and life — and his new cookbook "Chef Paul Prudhomme's Louisiana Kitchen" (Morrow, $19.95).

"What I want from this book," Prudhomme said, "is for the person who purchases it or receives it as a gift to get a great deal of pleasure. The thing that we do most often in life is eat. So many of us eat simply because we're hungry, or because it's there."

"In my life in Louisiana, eating has been a great source of emotion. I love for other people to be able to experience some of that. And I hope that the pleasure of eating right will put them in the mood for living right, for caring about the person nearest them."

He has been acclaimed by food writers as one of America's greatest chefs, but Prudhomme did not take naturally to writing a cookbook.

He first began work in an office next to K-Paul's, drawing constantly on the kitchen's supplies to test his favorite recipes. But he was dissatisfied.

Even less successful was his attempt to work in the restaurant kitchen. Besides the constant distractions, Prudhomme found himself relying on exotic local ingredients and expensive professional cookware that only a chef or a millionaire could justify.

After three years of false starts, he built a modest test kitchen in a building next to his restaurant and outfitted it with an everyday stove and what he said was a $14.95 set of pots — complete with painted yellow flowers.

He and an assistant tested and retested the recipes he had developed in the years since leaving the farm — using local ingredients such as rabbit, crawfish, pecans, Creole mustard, okra and tasso, a highly seasoned local ham.

Some had to be reworked five or six times until they lived up to Prudhomme's expectations.

In his book, as in his restaurant, he insists on freedom from European straitjackets. He also has a passion for fresh produce and seafood and different types of peppers that explode like time capsules in the mouth.

In the introduction to his book, he lays Cajun food's roots were in southern France and Nova Scotia.

The Acadians (Cajuns in local patois) adapted their dishes ingredients they found growing wild in southern Louisiana — including file powder from sassafras trees, different peppers such as cayenne, Tabasco, banana and bird's eye.

"I've always believed first of all in American regional food," Prudhomme said, sketching his own rise to prominence against a background of national rediscovery. "I felt for a long time that I was as good as any other cook in the kitchen. But because I was an American, I always got the lesser job."

"A lot of times we Americans ran the kitchen, but the two big bosses from Europe made all the money. I didn't think that food had to be foreign. I wanted to make sure that the wonderful food I was raised with would not perish."

Prudhomme learned about wonderful food far from the spotlight that follows him now, far from his television and radio shows and his courting by world-class food writers.

When he was 7, his last sister left their home in Acadian (Cajun) farm country south of Opelousas, La. to get married.

As the youngest of 13 children, Prudhomme then was drafted to help his mother in the kitchen, plucking chickens, stirring gravies and learning the special relationship between field, barn and table.

At 17, the fledgling restaurateur failed with a drive-in in his hometown. He then made his way to New Orleans as a cook and busboy. Eventually he became a chef in Colorado, working mostly in resorts.

Prudhomme began carrying special blends of hot peppers in tiny plastic bags, ready to sprinkle on his own meals or on the clientele's when the boss wasn't looking.

Despite the arguments that often ensued, and threats of demotion and dismissal, Prudhomme came away from his 12-year apprenticeship more certain than ever the world was ready for Cajun cooking.

Back in Louisiana, he signed on as assistant chef with the Brennan family. He eventually became executive chef of their Commander's Palace restaurant in the Garden District and Mr. B's in New Orleans, as well as for the Houston, Dallas and Atlanta spinoffs of the original, family-run Brennan's of New Orleans.

By 1979, Prudhomme was ready for his big gamble. On Chartres Street in the French Quarter he opened K-Paul's, working with his new wife Kay to serve the bounty of his childhood.

Before long people from around the world lined up outside at mealtime — he accepts no reservations — lured by tales of blackened redfish, Cajun popcorn (batter-fried crawfish tails), sticky chicken with rice and rabbit jambalaya with sauce piquante.

In May 1983, Prudhomme was among the few chefs — all of them American — recruited to prepare special meals for the leaders of seven western nations who met at the economic summit conference in Williamsburg, Va. He served a Cajun feast of batter-fried crawfish and crab claws, broiled redfish with oyster sauce and roast duck with pecan sauce.

Two months later, he took his entire kitchen and staff to San Francisco. He purposely avoided advertising, but instead of the 20 or 30 homesick New Orleanians he expected for opening night, he found more than 200 San Franciscans on his doorstep.

The lines lengthened as the month-long visit produced national publicity. At one point, a staff member rushed in to tell Prudhomme 625 people were waiting to taste his handiwork — in a dining room with 78 seats.

"When you come to New Orleans, you're prepared for all this by the hype," Prudhomme said. "I really had my doubts whether New Orleans food could be accepted in its true form elsewhere. But the hype backfired and I really didn't find out anything."

For the chef, his wife and his restaurant, all this fame is paying off in cookbook sales.

A spokesman for his publisher said the 60,000-copy first printing disappeared from the warehouse in just 12 working days — even before the official publication day, April 13, in New York and the start of an eight-city promotional tour.

Husband And Wife Have Different Etiquette Points

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I differ on a point of etiquette. We are both seniors. He says that on being introduced to a lady, if the lady extends her hand, he should shake it. If she does not extend her hand, she expects to be kissed on the cheek, whereupon he kisses her to avoid embarrassing her.

I say, if the lady extends her hand, the gentleman should shake it; if she doesn't extend her hand, there is no need to kiss her on the cheek.

DIANA

DEAR DIANA: This may be an oversimplification, but most kids begin using drugs out of curiosity. They've heard how great it feels to get high and they want to find out what they're missing.

Some kids take drugs in order to avoid facing their problems; it's a quick and easy way of avoiding reality with all the painful thoughts and feelings.

The very young try drugs because they want to be "one of the crowd." They think everybody's doing it. (They're wrong — everybody is not doing it.)

And some kids take drugs because the more they take, the more they need, until finally they're hooked.

DEAR ABBY: People come to you with every conceivable problem, so I'm encouraged to present one that is so touchy I've never seen it mentioned in your column.

How do you get people to wash their hands after using the bathroom? In our home, the bathroom is right off the kitchen, and when the water is turned on, it can be heard in the next room. Guests have gone into the bathroom, used the toilet (I can hear it being flushed), and they come out without having turned on the faucet, so I know they haven't washed their hands. Then after supper, they offer to help me dry the dishes! (I always say no, thank you.)

Worse yet, where I work there's a cafeteria, and I've seen some cafeteria employees walk out of a bathroom stall and go straight out to serve the people without having washed their hands!

Abby, please explain how dangerous this is. If you print this, I promise to frame it and hang it above our toilet. Thank you.

PLEASE WASH IN WINONA, MINN.

DEAR PLEASE: I cannot stress too emphatically how important this one specific area of hygiene is to good general health. Children should be taught to wash their hands (with soap) after using the bathroom, and adults should have made it a lifelong habit.

Last November, the Mayo Clinic, the medical mecca of the world, sponsored an "Infection Awareness Week" program. As part of its campaign, prominently displayed along the corridors of the Mayo hospital complex were posters showing a pair of hands under this terse message: "The 10 Most Common Causes of Infection."

To remind doctors, nurses and employees of the Mayo Clinic to wash their hands frequently were other posters bearing this catchy

Tokyo Fashion School Nurtures Top Talent

By ANN SCOTT
TOKYO (UPI) — Up-and-coming designer Yoshio Ishikawa is wowing Tokyo with a collection of sassy stripes, bold, clashing prints and comical unisex styles for the new season.

Another hot new Japanese designer, Akemi Kato, is going traditional with her soft, antique, ribbon-and-lace gowns.

Although they thrive on opposite ends of Tokyo's dynamic fashion spectrum, Ishikawa and Kato have two things in common.

Both are recent winners of Japan's prestigious Soen design competition, and both graduated from the Bunka College of Fashion — Japan's oldest, largest and best-known design school.

The college, Japan's answer to New York's Fashion Institute of Technology, helped catapult Tokyo into the international fashion limelight in the 1970s.

The school continues to churn out promising young talents to the delight — or envy — of the Paris-Milan-New York fashion elite.

Established in 19' as a tiny dressmaking academy and rebuilt after the war in Tokyo's bustling Shinjuku district, the college boasts a spectacular alumni roster.

Kenzo Takada, Mistuhiro Matsuda, Junko Koshino, Yohji Yamamoto, and other celebrated Japanese designers emerged from Bunka College in the 1960's — just as Japan's growing affluence and post-war baby boom was spurring demand for ready-made clothing.

Today the unpretentious cluster of beige buildings accommodates more than 6,000 students, including about 500 men and 200 foreign students.

Talent scouts from top international clothiers flock to the private, self-supporting school to lure budding Japanese designers straight out of the classroom and into their firms.

"Foreign companies offer jobs to our students because they want Japanese influence in their designs," said Akemi Uno, secretary of Bunka College.

Beyond their distinctly Japanese flair, Bunka College graduates have gained a reputation for inventive, high-quality designs that ooze with originality.

Student dress speaks of an eagerness to experiment:

One aspiring designer with a penchant for French clowns, wears a pink jacket decorated with a smattering of hearts and the words, "Sweet Kiss."

Another flaunts a leather jacket, dark glasses and a frizzy punk hairdo dyed a brazen honey blond.

For inspiration, students are encouraged to tromp off to European and Japanese cultural spots — from Florence to the cradle of ancient Japanese civilization, Nara — on yearly "study tours."

"Sometimes after students go to Nara their dresses resemble Buddha's robes," said Uno. "In Europe, they are influenced by punk."

Looks made popular by top designers like Rei Kawakuba also emerge in the dozens of student sketches pinned up on classroom bulletin boards — but often with a quirky new touch.

Kawakuba, known for her dramatic black creations, and Yamamoto have especially large followings among Bunka students.

"Every dress I wear is Rei Kawakuba," said 19-year-old Chikako Saito, sporting a bulky black coat, charcoal leather boots and a baggy, scoop-necked black sweater dress.

"I want to work for Rei's company," said Saito, a first-year student. As a Bunka graduate, Saito will have a head start in landing the job she wants.

High-caliber teaching and facilities are Bunka's strength.

The two, three and four-year programs are built around a core of basic sewing, pattern-making and designing courses with an average enrollment of 55. These are supplemented with advanced seminars of only four or five students each.

Industrial seaming, cutting and pressing machines, dyeing workshops and laboratories for the chemical analysis of fabrics give the students hands-on training with the most modern dressmaking gear.

Chie Koike, the school's elegant 54-year-old president, is confident the college will remain a seedbed of fashion talent.

Koike, who taught at Bunka for 40 years following her graduation in the 1930s, reminisces about famous designers she knew as undergraduates.

"Kenzo (Takada) liked to draw as a student," Koike said. "He worked very hard, sketching endlessly."

"Junko (Koshino) was exceptional," Koike said. "I remember her use of colors was stunning — she liked to experiment with bright pink."

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I turned the page of a leading magazine recently and my heart skipped a beat.

There in full glorious buttercup yellow were 12 crocheted pieces for your bathroom. There was a crocheted cover for the toilet seat and the tank, a contour rug, an oval rug for use in front of the bowl, a cover for the toilet tissue and a tie-back for the shower curtain. There were also crocheted covers for the bar of soap, the nose tissue, cleanser can, facial tissue and a little hat to decorate the wall.

I pray my Aunt Mae will not read the article and crochet herself blind by next Christmas.

Don't bother to write and tell me that gifts made from the heart are the most beautiful gifts one can receive or that I am a pile of worthless slime who doesn't deserve to be remembered in such personal way. Don't you think I know that and feel rotten enough about it?

It's just that I have a whole house full of gifts from Aunt Mae's heart already. Aunt Mae leaves nothing undressed. There is a Mexican serape and 10-gallon hat over my tabasco sauce. Every bottle on our bar is dressed like a poodle. There's a costume for every doorknob for every season beginning with a crocheted valentine and ending with a Santa Claus.

There are crocheted coasters, afghans, pillows, tablecloths, sachet holders, lampshades, bookmarks, chairback doilies, placets, and a cover for the phone book.

Poor Aunt Mae succumbed to the talents of her nimble fingers years ago. And who among us has not at one time or another nearly drowned in our handiwork? With me, it was a knitting class I joined back in 1973. By 1974, everyone who nodded to me within a 200-mile radius had a pair of knitted one-size-fits-all bedroom slippers. I was a woman possessed.

With my sister-in-law, it was seashells. She moved to a Florida beach a couple of years ago and worked the beach like a mine sweeper. Shells became her life. Christmas ornaments, mirrors, lamps.

The last time I walked the beach with her, she only picked up two shells thought about it, then discarded one. She's recovering.

Victory Can Be Unfruitful

Uplifting Visit

There has been so much done for tornado victims in Pitt and other eastern North Carolina counties.

People from far and near have given supplies and money for those who suffered losses in the major storm.

The students of Liberty School in Randolph County decided they wanted to help and they chose Ayden Elementary School for their project. The school was damaged by the storm and its students are now attending classes in Grifton.

Liberty School students not only collected school supplies and money for the Ayden students, but a delegation of 30 eighth grade students came down Wednesday to make the presentation.

"We just wanted to do something that would help ...," one of the students commented.

They certainly did help, and the visit by the Randolph County students was as uplifting as anything.

Moving Onward

Those of us who are growing older sometimes falter when we think how long ago something happened in our lives. President Reagan, in his zest for leadership well into his 70s, has spurred some of us on. South Carolina's venerable senator, Strom Thurmond, who has remained active in Congress, got a hair transplant, remarried and became a father well on in life, has been an inspiration to us all.

And now comes Vermont Royster, who retired 13 years ago but now has won his second Pulitzer Prize, for excellence in journalism, at the age of 70.

"When you are young and the first time, it is obviously very exciting," said Royster, who won the prize for his column in the Wall Street Journal, which he once served as editor. "Thirty years later, at age 70, it is not quite so exciting but it gives me great personal pride and satisfaction to think I could do it when I was 40 and here I am 70."

Royster, a member of the North Carolina Journalism Hall of Fame, said he plans to continue writing the column. "I am going to quit when I feel like I haven't got it anymore or when my bosses in New York feel like I haven't got it anymore," Royster said.

May we all have a winning drive, not just to get up in the mornings, but to move onward in profitable use of our talents.

Election Form

NEW YORK (AP) — The normal rules that business people and investors go by are traditionally suspended in a presidential election year.

Because the politicians in power are presumed to be concentrating their efforts on getting re-elected, a different set of principles is supposed to apply.

Under this reasoning, the economy is normally expected to enjoy strong growth under the influence of stimulative government policies. Interest rates should ideally be low, to help promote this growth.

The stock market should thrive, banking in the general enthusiasm. Furthermore, it goes without saying that nobody would raise taxes in an election year.

So far this year, some of the players are following the standard script. But others seem to have forgotten all their lines.

By most measures, the economy is robust. Cars and other goods and services are selling briskly, employment gains continue, and surveys show consumer confidence at high levels.

Many economists believe, however, that the pace of expansion has begun to slow, in part because interest rates have risen markedly since last winter.

The trend in interest rates has lately been underscored by a rise in the bank prime lending rate from 11 percent to 12 percent. The Federal Reserve has raised its discount rate — its charge on loans to private financial institutions — from 8½ percent to 9 percent.

"The myth that interest rates don't go up in an election year has been exploded," remarked Greg Smith, director of research at Prudential-Bache Securities.

As for taxes, both houses of Congress have finished putting together tax-increase bills, and a conference committee is expected to go to work soon on a final version to send to President Reagan.

The measures contain mostly bits-and-pieces provisions designed to increase government revenues without inflicting much pain on the general voting public. Nevertheless, an election-year tax increase is a very likely prospect.

And the stock market? It has gone up in all recent presidential election years. By the calculations of Salomon Brothers Inc., it rose 16 percent in 1964; 11 percent in 1968; 19 percent in 1972; 23 percent in 1976, and 31 percent in 1980. Yet in the first 3½ months of this year, the Dow Jones composite average of 65 stocks declined more than 10 percent.

In trying to explain these discrepancies, many observers in the financial world say there is plenty of time remaining for things to take on a more "normal" election-year form.

The huge federal budget deficit is forcing some token action to raise taxes this year, they say. If there is going to be a tax increase that the electorate will really feel, it will most likely be voted in 1985.

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Gary Hart keeps winning as "decisively" as he did in Arizona, the Colorado senator is going to find himself far short of the Democratic presidential nomination when the primary season is over in June.

Hart did get back on the winning track in the Arizona caucuses this past weekend as the campaign for the nomination moved to the West, where Hart claims the kinship of a resident of the region.

But the victory demonstrates the dimensions of his problem as he tries to overtake Walter F. Mondale before the delegates answer the roll call in July at the Democratic National Convention.

Hart won 45 percent of the vote at the caucuses, while Mondale won 40 percent. The Rev. Jesse Jackson took 13 percent.

"We won that state pretty decisively," Hart told reporters after the victory.

Those numbers translated in to 17 delegates for Hart, 15 for Mondale and 1 for Jackson.

That two-delegate edge for Hart didn't do much to narrow Mondale's lead in the important delegate count. After the weekend, Mondale held a 475-vote margin over Hart in delegates. The former vice president had just under 1,100 delegates, while Hart had just over 600.

Jackson had less than 200. More than 300 delegates were uncommitted or pledged to other hopefuls or favorite-son candidates.

To win the nomination, a candidate will have to reach the magic number of 1,967 delegate-votes.

Looking at the second half of the primary and caucus season, Hart has a formidable task of reaching that level for victory.

With seven more weeks to go before the primary season ends on June 5, about 1,770 delegates remain to be chosen after the weekend events.

Each of the remaining 21 states and territories has its own method for parceling out delegates among the three contenders — from California's 345 delegates to Guam's 7 votes.

Just assuming that Hart repeats the dimensions of his Arizona victory in state after state through June 5, Mondale would end the season very close to victory and Hart would be far away.

If Hart wins 52 percent of the remaining delegates — as he did in Arizona — he would pick up about 920 and have a total of about 1,525 on June 6. That's 442 short of the magic number.

But Mondale would be almost home under the same assumptions.

The former vice president won 45 percent of the Arizona delegates. A similar showing in the remaining states would give him about 800 more delegates and put his total at about 1,875 on June 6.

That's only about 92 short of victory.

Jackson would end up with 211 delegates, while 320 would still be in the uncommitted or favorite son column.

To win, Hart would have to attract 83 percent of the uncommitted black and Jackson delegates. If Jackson threw his support to Hart, that would put the Colorado senator only halfway to 1,967.

But for Mondale, successfully wooing only 17 percent of that outstanding bloc would clinch the nomination.

Blunder Proves Costly

WASHINGTON — A blunder by the State Department's recently appointed chief lobbyist seriously endangered continued Senate support for the anti-Sandinista "Contras" in Nicaragua by offending two senior Republican senators.

W. Tapley Bennett, the new assistant secretary of state for legislative affairs, is a veteran diplomat but a neophyte when it comes to Capitol Hill. He proved it by failing to inform key senators in advance of the U.S. decision not to recognize World Court jurisdiction on the mining of Nicaragua's harbors.

Sens. Charles H. Percy, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Barry Goldwater, chairman of the Intelligence Committee, were equally enraged over the rebuff. Percy went so far as to promise that his days of support for the Contra program probably were over.

Ronald Reagan's fabled luck figures to rebut the Kremlin's planned election-year assault on him by accidentally putting him in a favored place to respond: China.

Reagan's Kremlinologists have informed him that the new Soviet leadership will "make a series of tough runs" against him between now and the Nov. 6 election in an effort to weaken him. But the fact he will be in Peking this month to meet these attacks will be viewed in Moscow as a U.S. warning of closer Washington-Beijing relations.

That was not intended. The timing is purely by chance, but the president is no longer prepared to say anything in Beijing that might disabuse Moscow of concern over Reagan's Chinese connection.

Strategists for attorney general-designate Edwin Meese III are hoping that independent counsel Jacob Stein may complete his deliberations by May and permit the confirmation process to go forward.

That would be a far speedier handling of the widely scattered charges against Meese than is generally considered likely. Based on the recent experience of special prosecutors, Justice Department officials expect Stein to be sifting the charges against Meese well into autumn.

National Republican operatives believe Sen. Charles H. Percy is looking like an endangered species for re-election in Illinois and have warned him he cannot expect to win a fourth term by putting together his usual center-left coalition of voters.

Percy, a liberal Republican, always has combined a respectable showing among Chicago's blacks with the traditional Republican base in downstate Illinois. But no Republican, Percy included, can count on black votes this year.

—Art Buchwald—

Who's Paying Reagan's Bill?

One of the greatest problems, when an incumbent president is running for office, is how to differentiate a political trip he takes from one when he is on the nation's business. If Mr. Reagan goes out campaigning, the Republican Party is supposed to pay for it, but if he is traveling as a president, the taxpayer does. We're not talking about nickels and dimes. Every time the president leaves the White House with his entourage it runs into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

So who makes the decision whether the president is out on the road making a political speech or delivering an inspirational message as this country's elected leader?

The White House staff does. "How do you decide when Mr. Reagan is going out for political reasons, and when he goes out for presidential ones?" I asked a friend at the White House.

"We're very careful not to confuse the two," he said with a straight face. "During an election year it's always a close call."

"What are the criteria?" I wanted to know.

"Well, if the president flies out to attend a luncheon of businessmen to explain how well his economic plans are working, after inheriting the worst financial mess in 40 years from the Democrats, then that would be a presidential trip and considered non-political."

"Would a speech to the fundamentalist preachers about prayers in school be considered political or presidential?"

"Presidential, of course. The president would never make the prayer issue political. Only the liberal Democrats would do that."

"Recently, one of the president's main themes in his speeches around the country is that Congress is responsible for all his failures in foreign policy, including Lebanon. He has almost called them traitors. Would the upcoming elections have anything to do with the thrust of his remarks?"

"Certainly not. The president has a right to inform the people of this country who should be blamed for the collapse of his bipartisan foreign policy, and the loss of American lives, whether he makes the speech in New York, Chicago or Los Angeles."

"Couldn't he do that from the White House?"

"It's important that the people see their president, and the more he gets around to the key electoral states, the stronger the message he is sending to the Soviets that we intend to have peace through strength. It is also his duty as Commander-in-Chief to warn the nation of the disastrous consequences of a nuclear freeze now being put forth by the presidential candidates in the opposition party."

"Some might interpret those as political speeches in an election year," I said.

"How can they be considered political when the nation's freedom is at stake, and all he is saying is that the Democrats would deliver us into the hands of the Communists?"

"When will the president dig into the Republican war chest for his re-election?"

"If he stays presidential, not until he goes to Dallas in August for the Republican convention."

To the editor:

In March 1984, the Prudential Insurance Co. donated 120,000 acres of precious wetlands in Dare and Tyrrell counties in eastern North Carolina to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Not only is this one of the largest land gifts ever in the United States, but it will also save an important habitat for such wildlife as the black bear, bobcat, whitetailed deer and, possibly, bald eagle. Wetlands are also important because they naturally hold back runoff water which allows our coastal waters to maintain a sensitive salinity balance that is required to spawn ocean-going creatures. By one estimate, 60 percent of our nation's fish catch is dependent on estuaries and these adjacent wetlands which have been disappearing at an alarming rate.

I also wish to commend Mr. William deBuys and the N.C. Nature Conservancy for their splendid work in coordinating this project which is one of the most wonderful gifts ever received in eastern North Carolina.

To the editor:

Area "A" of the Division of Emergency Management serves 15 counties, including Pitt and Martin. Our office coordinates with the emergency management coordinators in each of these counties.

During the course of the year, our office assists in training exercises and education of county individuals in areas such as radiological training, chemical spills, evacuation procedures, drills, nuclear civil protection exercises, dam failure, etc. Each county has its own Nuclear Civil Protection, Hurricane Evacuation, Communications and Disaster Relief and Assistance Plans, developed and updated by your own Emergency Management Coordinator.

During the tornadoes of March 28, your EMC was out there on the scene lining up necessary heavy equipment for debris removal, reporting fatalities and personal injuries, setting up shelters for homeless persons, seeking additional fire and rescue transportation vehicles for the injured, and following on a steady stream of paperwork that had to be fulfilled for the homeless to receive temporary housing until loans could be made or insurance companies could settle.

Bobby Joyner, Pitt County EMC, is one of the "unsung heroes" of this disaster. He was operational 24 hours a day, nonstop. Our office held hands with this guy from the moment this disaster happened. Even after the long physical and emotional strain, never once do I recall unpleasantness or distaste expressed by him. He had everything under control. There was no panic.

Our office spends a lot of time mock disaster drills, using victims, but we never know the true results of our planning until the actual disaster. I am proud to be a part of this team that has worked so well together under such difficult conditions. I hope your county is as proud of Bobby Joyner as I am.

Hart Makes A Bid For Black Votes

By F. Alan Boyce
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — While the Rev. Jesse Jackson generated large crowds of black supporters in his campaign stump through North Carolina, Sen. Gary Hart made his own plea for black votes for the state's May 8 primary.

Hart said during a campaign swing Thursday that he had "first and foremost ... a virtually perfect record" in the Senate on issues of concern to blacks.

"In opening up economic opportunity for black citizens, the Democratic Party has to go beyond telling minority citizens that we will offer jobs when what we have to offer is the opportunity to own and operate businesses."

Hart said he would do well in the state's primary, adding he had attracted broad based support from the state's educational community, environmentalists, and blacks.

this state," Hart said. "I've seen recent polls that indicate we're running neck and neck with (Walter) Mondale."

In Durham, where several hundred people turned out at St. Joseph's A.M.E. Church, Hart continued his plea for black votes. Hart stressed he had been given a 100 percent grade on his civil rights record in his 10 years in the Senate.

Hart said the federal government should help minorities own and operate businesses. He said Reagan "does not believe in the fundamental civil rights of all people" and said if elected he would stand "equal justice, social justice and equal opportunity."

Before speaking in Durham, Hart addressed more than a dozen black leaders in a closed session. After the meeting, former Durham Mayor Asa Spaulding said that he was impressed with Hart's directness.

"I think much better of his approach than of Mr. Mondale," he said.

Loretta Martin, a former president of the North Carolina Association of Educators, said she had been backing Hart for two years although the NCAE has endorsed Mondale, whom the NCAE backed in 1980 along with then-President Jimmy Carter.

"His (Hart's) position on education issues were almost better than my positions," she said.

Hart said he opposed to a degree the double primary system, like the one in North Carolina, where a runoff can be called when a candidate does not achieve a majority win.

"I oppose the double primary to the degree that they discriminate against minorities. I think a sweeping elimination...would be wrong," he added.

Hart, speaking at a news conference at Raleigh-Durham Airport, also said that Democrats must abandon policies of handouts and bailouts, but added "the federal tobacco program does not bail out the tobacco farmers in this state."

"Farmers ... have required some kind of predictability in terms of their own income to survive," he said. "I will support efforts by tobacco farmers and, indeed, all farmers to keep their land. If that means phasing into other crops, then I'll certainly support that."

But he said he would be surprised by such an offer.

Ruckelshaus was asked at a luncheon meeting with reporters if he would stay at the EPA under a Democrat to further his call for taking the agency out of politics.

"I don't know the answer to that," he said. "I doubt it. I think if a Democrat wins he ought to put his own person in here." He noted that Walter F. Mondale already has promised to replace Reagan administration officials if he wins and added: "I presume he includes me."

Bitter Pill

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — The government has ordered a 200 percent increase in the prices of imported goods, including some basic foods.

President Salvador Jorge Blanco said Thursday's order was part of an agreement reached last week with the International Monetary Fund for continuation of a three-year $487 million loan program that began in January 1983.

Strongly Oppose 'Access' Proposal

NEW YORK (AP) — The Synagogue Council of America, an umbrella organization of Reform, Conservative and Orthodox Judaism, has strongly opposed proposals in Congress to allow "equal access" at public schools for off-hour student religious meetings on par with other extracurricular meetings.

It is "a devious attempt to subvert" First Amendment rights, undermine "separation of church and state" and "attack the very foundations of our American democracy," says Rabbi Mordecai Waxman of Great Neck, N.Y., the council's president.

Most Christian groups, many of which had opposed recently defeated measures for voluntary school prayer, are supporting the "equal access" measure.

Winter Making A Comeback In The Rockies

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

Winter made a comeback today with a snowstorm dumping more than a foot of snow for an Easter backdrop in many areas of the Rockies, where serious flooding was a menace.

Many homes went dark and some highways had to be barricaded as the powerful storm out of the Pacific buried spring buds.

Elsewhere, rain-swollen rivers in Idaho and Oregon forced 45 families from their homes and residents of northern Texas and Oklahoma were warned to beware of severe thunderstorms, heavy hail and possible tornadoes.

In Montana, a 60-car Union Pacific freight train derailed Thursday when a six-foot section of track washed out about two miles north of Dell. A dozen cars were thrown off the track, including two tank units which ruptured and began leaking creosote into a culvert that drains into the Red Rock River.

The snowstorm which earlier deposited 10 inches of snow in Nevada spread across the Rockies from Montana to northern New Mexico and eastward into western Nebraska and southern South Dakota.

By morning, up to 16 inches of snow heavy, wet snow had fallen in the mountains of Utah, where a record snowpack was almost 15 feet deep in places, and in southeastern Wyoming several highways were closed and power lines were down.

"We've got about a foot of snow," said police dispatcher Christy Helms in Lusk, Wyo., a town of about 1,000 on the eastern plains which lost power for about three hours during the night. "It's still snowing and blowing real bad."

In Cheyenne, 5 inches of snow and trees and branches fell across lawns that had turned green in the 70-degree temperatures of three days earlier.

A 100-mile stretch of Interstate 80 from the Nebraska line to Laramie was closed. U.S. 80 was closed north and south of Lusk and several other state and local roads were impassable.

Two people were killed and five were injured in an accident Thursday on a rain-slicked road in Point of the Mountain, Utah.

The mountains of Utah and Colorado were expected to get up to 2 feet of snow with as much as 8 inches possible in cities such as Denver and Colorado Springs.

An unofficial report from a rancher said 5 to 6 inches of snow already was on the ground around Mitchell, Neb.

The Utah Highway Patrol discouraged travel over several highways, including Interstate 70 from Salina to Green River, where 4 to 5 inches of snow already had fallen. More than an inch of rain fell in the Salt Lake City area, contributing to the already serious flood threat.

Heavy thunderstorms that spawned a tornado in Reelton, Ala., late Thursday, destroying a game arcade but causing no injuries, raced into Georgia early today and dumped an inch of rain on Atlanta in two hours.

And the tail of a huge Eastern storm that has spent the week edging into the Atlantic Ocean brought yet another day of rain from northern Virginia through most of New York.

Utah's mountains had 8 inches of snow by late Thursday and were expected to get another 16 today, with half a foot in lower elevations. The temperature dropped from 56 to 37 degrees in just four hours at Cedar City as the storm moved in Thursday.

"We're going from summer to spring to winter in just a matter of a few days," said Jim Weismuller, a National Weather Service forecaster in Denver.

In the Northwest, 10,000 sandbags were being installed at spots on the rain-swollen Snake River along the Idaho-Oregon border to contain the water. The Snake was at 12.8 feet Thursday at Ontario and expected to hit 13.2 feet sometime this morning, sheriff's deputies said. Twelve feet is considered flood stage.

Four families were evacuated from an eastern Oregon trailer park Thursday when leaks sprouted in an earthen dike at the confluence of the Snake and Maulheur rivers.

"They don't have the water coming over the dike; it's coming through it," said National Guard Sgt. Gary Getman. "We're looking for a little Dutch boy."

Authorities estimated 45 families had been chased from their homes in eastern Oregon as a record snowpack — 240 percent above normal — began to melt. The town of Owyhee Junction was "darn near completely evacuated" after 18 inches of water covered Main Street, Getman said.

The Snake's waters broke up a section of Interstate 84 a mile east of the Idaho border Thursday night, sending a truck crashing into the center divider and injuring its driver.

State police said westbound traffic would have to detour around the section for the next three or four days while crews made major repairs on the highway, a link between Portland, Ore., and Salt Lake City.

In Nevada, where 10 inches of snow fell at Blue Canyon on Thursday, the Humboldt River was lapping at the bottom of an Interstate 80 bridge in Winnemucca, threatening to cut off the community's sole link to Oregon.

The river was already over its banks to the east from Elko to Halleck, and the weather service said it could rise another foot before leveling off this weekend.

"We're just sitting here watching the water rise," said Dave Kettles of Winnemucca. "It's a very non-dramatic flood — no rushing torrents."

Salt Lake City's 1300 South Street, which was turned into a sandbag river during last year's flooding, reopened late Thursday after being closed when debris clogged a storm drain, flooding the street.

Officials reported three mudslides in Ephraim Canyon near the central Utah town of Ephraim.

Bomb Wrecks Officers Club At Washington Navy Yard

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — An explosion triggered by a bomb placed under a sofa wrecked the officers club at the Washington Navy Yard early today. A Puerto Rican nationalist group claimed responsibility and said it was protesting a massive U.S. military exercise beginning today in the Caribbean. There were no injuries in the blast, which occurred about two hours after closing time. Sailors sleeping in nearby barracks were rocked awake by the explosion, which blew the steel doors off the building and started a fire.

Responsibility was claimed by the Puerto Rican nationalist underground group FALN, which for several years has used bomb attacks to publicize its demand for Puerto Rican independence from the United States.

"It was a bomb, but we don't know what type," said Norman Zigrossi, special agent in charge of the FBI's Washington office. "We believe it was located under a couch in the entryway."

He said "we are considering the possibilities" that the bomb was set by the same group that detonated a device at the Army War College at Ft. McNair in April 1983 and in a corridor at the U.S. Capitol last November. There were no injuries in those attacks.

Lt. Cmdr. W.R. McLoughlin, a Navy spokesman, said the Washington Post and United Press International were called by an organization claiming responsibility. Asked which group, he said, "It was the FALN with the Washington Post and with UPI I can't confirm that."

UPI newsman Pat Killen said that, shortly after 2 a.m. EST, a woman called the news service and asked for the news desk. She then played a tape, Killen said, of a raspy-voiced man who spoke of "guerrilla resistance ... that bombed at 2 a.m. the officers club at the Washington Navy Yard ... in protest of current war games."

That was an apparent reference to "Ocean Venture '84," a major exercise beginning today in the Caribbean and involving 30,000 personnel from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force.

As part of the operation, due to last through May 6, an amphibious landing and air assault will be staged on Vieques Island, Puerto Rico.

McLoughlin said that "at about 1:50 a.m. this morning an explosion at the Washington Navy Yard officers club building No. 101 caused significant damage to the lobby and first floor."

"Security at the Navy Yard has been increased and the U.S. Army bomb squad is on the scene. There were no injuries. An investigation is continuing."

McLoughlin said the FALN claimed responsibility last July for another bomb attack at the Navy Yard, at the entrance to a building near the site of today's explosion. There were no injuries in that attack.

McLoughlin said there were about 35 patrons and five employees in the club Thursday night, most of them for a regular "steak night" dinner.

During the day, the club is frequented by up to 200 Navy officers and Defense Department civilians, but the navy base — the nation's oldest onshore Navy facility, established in 1799 — is easily accessible to tourists coming to two museums and a combat art gallery.

Asked if there would have been casualties if the building had been occupied, Lt. William White of the Washington police said, "No question about it."

McLoughlin said "security was changed on the base after the last incident," but he wouldn't say in what way.

An armed forces policeman billeted across the street from the club said he heard the explosion and rushed to see what happened.

"It had to be pretty big to blow out the steel doors," said the sailor, who asked that he not be identified. He said there were flames that had to be suppressed by base firemen.

The area was cordoned off by Navy, police and FBI investigators until daybreak, when reporters were shown the damaged three-story building.

The explosion ripped out triple sash windows, splintered the lobby and wrecked the walls. Curtains fluttered through the open windows and the streets and sidewalks for 150 feet around the building were covered in a dusting of glass particles.

Site For Falcons

LINVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Grandfather Mountain has been chosen by a team of scientists as the first site for re-establishing the peregrine falcon in the Southern Appalachians.

Cages will be placed on top of the mountain Friday, according to the scientists.

The falcon, which once inhabited rocky ledges and outcroppings such as Looking Glass Mountain and Table Rock, has been missing from the region for about 20 years.

Grandfather Mountain was chosen after biologists from Cornell University, Tennessee Valley Authority, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and state Wildlife Resources Commission studied potential sites in South Carolina, east Tennessee and West Virginia, said Curtis Wooten, district biologist with the Wildlife Commission.

"A major consideration was the absence of the great horned owl in the Grandfather area," Wooten said. "The great horned is the prime predator on the peregrine falcon."

Cornell scientists for about 10 years have been seeking to re-establish the falcon.

Wooten said the group will use a helicopter to carry the cages into the Grandfather backcountry and to high rock outcroppings.

The falcons, which are being hatched from eggs laid by captive birds at Cornell, will be placed in the cages about the middle of May or a little later, he said.

The falcons are expected to be established on Grandfather in about five years if all goes well, Wooten said.

See Little Done For U.S. Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unnecessary and expensive weapons are increasing the Pentagon budget by $45 billion without doing much for national security, a new study says.

Examples of duplication and waste, according to the study by William Kaufman, a former Defense Department budget adviser who prepared it for the private Brookings Institution, are the B-1 and "stealth" bombers, two types of cruise missiles and the upgrading of the current B-52 bomber force.

Kaufman recommends eliminating the B-1 and MX nuclear missiles, along with a variety of new conventional weapons, including new F-15 and F-14 fighters, the Army's Apache attack helicopter, the Sergeant York anti-aircraft gun and the Sparrow and Phoenix missiles.

Guerrilla Wars Are Factor In Latin America

EDITOR'S NOTE — Democracy, debt and severe recession are transforming South America. But another factor — guerrilla war — remains ever-present on the continent. Here is a report on a new generation of Latin American revolutionary.

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
AYACUCHO, Peru (AP) — In the lofty Peruvian sierra, a young democracy and a new kind of guerrilla are locked in a quiet war among the clouds, a conflict adding a fresh chapter to Latin America's bloody revolutionary saga.

A year ago, the general then in charge of combatting Peru's fanatical guerrillas — the "Sendero Luminoso," or Shining Path — predicted that by the end of 1983, "the subversive problem will be over."

Instead, the leftist insurgents have moved the problem elsewhere.

The new anti-guerrilla chief, Brig. Gen. Adrian Huaman, has lifted the nighttime curfew in this old Andes mountain town, a sign the government feels firmly in control here in the center of the embattled region. At the same time, however, Huaman added another county, the 13th, to the emergency zone.

"The subversives have gone off in various directions," the general told a reporter at his headquarters, on a bluff overlooking Ayacucho.

The war of small military patrols and hit-run guerrilla attacks is being waged behind a curtain of silence. The army issues few communiques, and Shining Path none.

But the guerrillas — pressured by the military and committed to long-term struggle — appear to be shifting operations farther out into the wind-chilled uplands, where primitive Indian hamlets huddle beneath three-mile-high Andean peaks.

Shining Path poses little direct threat to President Fernando Belaunde Terry's centrist government. By tying down 4,000 soldiers and police in a war of attrition, however, the guerrillas could still weaken the new democracy, which was installed after May 1980 elections ended 12 years of military rule.

These diehard Peruvian revolutionaries, followers of a radical "Maoist" line, are part of a new generation of Latin American guerrillas.

The old generation died, symbolically, with international revolutionary Che Guevara, killed in a failed Bolivian uprising in 1967.

One by one through the 1960s and early 1970s, guerrilla movements inspired by Cuba's revolution — groups of radicalized middle-class students looking for quick victories — were crushed in Venezuela, Brazil, Guatemala, Bolivia, Peru, Uruguay and Argentina.

But by the late 1970s, new groups rose up. Some — in Venezuela, Colombia and Peru — embraced Chinese revolutionary Mao Tse-tung's strategy of waging prolonged war in the countryside. They steadily built support among Indians and mixed-blood, or mestizo, peasants.

Peru's Shining Path leaders fixed on this rugged, isolated region, 215 miles southeast of Lima, the capital, as suitable for their plans.

Ayacucho state is among the poorest in a poor country. A half-million people, mostly Indians, are scattered over 17,000 square miles of snow-draped mountains and narrow valleys, subsisting on potatoes, beans and the few other crops they can grow in the thin air and dry, flinty soil.

The dusty streets of this state capital, a town of dingy pastel adobe, are crowded with mute-faced Indian women bearing paposes, with many dogs and wandering pigs, and with armored personnel carriers packed with Huaman's black-capped troopers. From Ayacucho's walls, spray-painted red graffiti shout out: "Viva Presidente Gonzalo!"

"Comrade Gonzalo" is the code name for Shining Path leader Abimael Guzman.

More ideological father than guerrilla chieftain, Guzman attracted students to his Marxist thought as a philosophy professor at Ayacucho's Huamanga University in the 1960s. In the 1970s, he and his disciples, many of them youths speaking the local Indian language, Quechua, withdrew into the countryside to prepare for revolution.

A splinter group, they regard themselves as the true "Peruvian Communist Party," but they also use the term Shining Path, associated with the theories of early 20th-century Peruvian revolutionary Jose Carlos Mariategui.

As Mao sought to do in China, Guzman believes a semi-feudal Peru can be brought from backwardness to modern communism without an intermediate capitalist phase.

His strategy: protracted rural war, after which the mostly Indian guerrillas would slowly strangle Peru's white- and mestizo-dominated coastal cities.

In their 4-year-old rebellion, the guerrillas have attacked police posts with small arms and dynamite-packed soft-drink cans, often hurled by Indian slingshots. They blow up power lines, blacking out Ayacucho. And they terrorize government "collaborators."

Sweeping into villages, hooded guerrillas stage "trials" for local officials, "exploitative" storekeepers, even mailmen, and "execute" them. In some instances, raiders massacred inhabitants of villages identified as pro-government, witnesses reported.

Belaunde sent the army into the area in December 1982 to reinforce the national police. The combined forces mounted an aggressive counter-offensive, striking villages believed to harbor or otherwise aid the Shining Path.

Human rights groups say the military has been as ruthless as the guerrillas, and hundreds of people have "disappeared" or been killed unjustly.

More than 2,300 deaths — civilians, guerrillas and security-force members — have been reported since 1980.

"Right now it's a standoff," said a well-informed source in Lima who follows the conflict. "The Sendero Luminoso is like a sponge — you squeeze it in one area and it comes out in another."

This source, who asked not to be identified, and security officials here said the guerrillas not only are more active now in outlying counties in Ayacucho state, but also seem to surface more frequently in cities across Peru, staging bomb attacks as far away as Cajamarca, 500 miles north of here.

Estimates of the number of guerrillas vary — from 500 armed fighters to 6,000 "activists." The government has found no evidence they have foreign help.

Gauging the rebels' popular support is difficult.

Some Ayacucho-area villages forcefully resist guerrilla attempts to "liberate" their zones. But analysts note, too, that at least 10,000 people attended the funeral of a woman guerrilla leader in Ayacucho in 1982.

"Many of the peasants support the Sendero," Ayacucho Mayor Leonor Zamora told a reporter. "Their lives are so miserable. They're so poor. There's no chance for work, no future for their children."

Gen. Huaman agrees. The 52-year-old, U.S.-trained infantryman — taciturn, tough — is himself of highland Indian descent.

"The population helps the Sendero to protest their misery, the injustice, the poverty," he said. "The government spends its money on Lima. This place they forget."

On a table beside him lay a book, "Terrorism," by American scholar

Walter Laqueur, who wrote that violence from below has always produced "infinitely more effective terror from above."

But the general said the only effective answer to the Shining Path uprising is greater government investment in the highlands. "There is no other solution," he said.

Huaman proposes a $20-million Ayacucho development plan. But he may make little headway — Peru, like much of South America, is crushed by foreign debt and devastating depression.

A key question, meanwhile, troubles government officials: Does the stepped-up insurgent activity in the cities mean urban leftist youths are joining forces with the extremists from the sierra?

Mildred The Bear Is A Surrogate Mother

LINVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Mildred the Bear, Grandfather Mountain's 18-year-old mascot, is doing her part to help celebrate North Carolina's 100th anniversary by becoming a surrogate mother to a pair of 10-week-old orphan cubs.

Mildred's new children are named Walter and Elizabeth, to honor Sir Walter Raleigh and Queen Elizabeth

Though bear experts say females normally respond in a hostile manner to cubs which are not their own, Mildred has taken to the idea of adoptive motherhood, even allowing a human to help entice the cubs to breast-feed.

Lynn Rogers, an authority on the black bear, said he had never heard of a mother bear being able to take on adopted cubs when her own cubs were yearlings and had been weaned.

In other years, Mildred has adopted cubs that were not hers, but always when she was nursing her own cubs of identical size.

Walter and Elizabeth were born to a mother in Ohio and were purchased by Grandfather Mountain when its own group of four adult female bears failed to produce young this year.

Rogers and other wildlife experts said that Mildred likely was able and willing to accept the pair because she occasionally breast fed the yearling cubs she adopted last year.

Hugh Morton, who owns Grandfather Mountain and maintains a model wildlife habitat in a wilderness atmosphere, said he consulted several wildlife authorities familiar with Mildred's gentle disposition before attempting to introduce her to the new cubs.

"Everyone urged extreme caution for the safety of the cubs, since adult female bears are usually hostile to cubs that are not theirs," Morton said.

He said Mildred was given the opportunity to first inspect the cubs and smell them through a chain-link fence.

"She reacted in a friendly manner," Morton said, "and the cubs were then given to her."

Mildred's first move was to pick up one of the cubs by the nape of its neck in her mouth and gently carry it into the den in Grandfather Mountain's Cub Habitat. She then returned for the other cub. Later she took them out of the den, where she began raking the cubs against her breast in an invitation for them to feed.

Near 3,000 Free Copies Of Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — Billionaire industrialist J. Peter Grace, head of a presidential cost-cutting commission, is sending nearly 3,000 free copies of the panel's report to editors and reporters across the nation in hope of building public support for its recommendations.

The 590-page, paperback report, titled "War on Waste," started arriving Wednesday at news offices.

In many cases, offices received multiple copies of the privately financed edition — one organization got 16.

"Maybe we overdid it a little," said Fred Bona, a spokesman for the New York-based W.R. Grace & Co.

But how else can we be sure to get a copy to someone covering the White House as well as someone on the agricultural beat?"

GIVES UP MOSCOW (AP) — Oleg Radzinsky, 25, a founding member of an unofficial Soviet peace group who is serving a five-year exile in Siberia, says in a letter to Western journalists that he has quit the organization.

THE SCENE OF A PARABLE!

ASCENDING FROM THE JORDAN VALLEY TO THE HILL COUNTRY IS A STEEP PASS ADJACENT TO THE "PASS OF THE RED". THIS MARKS THE BOUNDARY BETWEEN JUDAH AND BENJAMIN AND THE SHORTEST AND MOST TRAVELED ROAD FROM JERUSALEM TO JERICHO. BECAUSE IT WAS SUCH A MUCH TRAVELED ROUTE FOR CARAVANS IT BECAME, THROUGH THE CENTURIES, A HIGH SPOT FOR ROBBERS AND BRIGANDS TO PLY THEIR NEFARIOUS TRADE! IN FACT, SAINT JEROME ASCRIBED THE ORIGIN OF ITS NAME TO THE BLOOD SO FREQUENTLY SPILLED THERE BY THE HAWKISH THIEVES AS THEY PILFERED THE LOOT FROM THEIR VICTIMS. NO WONDER THAT IT WAS THE SCENE OF JESUS'S PARABLE OF THE GOOD SAMARITAN.

LARGE CROWD ... Well wishers and supporters listen to the Rev. Jesse Jackson Thursday afternoon during his campaign stop in Greenville. Security was tight for the rally.

A Contrast.....

host of state party leaders, including Gov. Luther Hodges, Sen. Sam Ervin, gubernatorial candidate Terry Sanford and Rep. Herbert Bonner.

Jackson made it clear Thursday that he, Sen. Gary Hart and former Vice President Walter Mondale are still slugging it out for the nomination. He told the crowd what it already knew: he doesn't have money for television ads and he lacks a well-oiled campaign machine. But, he said to cheers, he has a "rich" message: "We may not win, but we're equal. Our time has come."

Again and again he talked about change: "It's time for a change — to enforce the voting rights act, end gerrymandering, make democracy democracy for everybody."

Kennedy, 43 when he came to Greenville, a U.S. senator and son of a millionaire, also spoke of change, of making life in American more nearly equal for everyone. After he was elected president, his administration was referred to as Camelot. For many Americans, Camelot ended with Kennedy's assassination.

But Jackson, 42, son of a poor South Carolinian who had a fourth-grade education, told his Greenville audience, "There is no impossible dream. ... We may not win, but we're equal. Our time has come."

Those were the words his supporters, young and old, came to hear. They came, too, white as well as black, because they consider him a powerful speaker and they thought his visit — like Kennedy's 24 years ago — was a historical event.

Seventh graders like Yvette Howard, Starla Huggins, Clarence Gray and Edward Moore wanted to see him. Bill Carroll and Gil Gardner, ninth graders, wanted to hear him.

Ella Morgan of Simpson expressed the sentiments of other blacks: "I feel it's time for blacks to share power. We've been on the bottom all our lives."

Jean Darden was there because she believes in what Jackson is trying to do: "Make us a part of the political process. He's trying to give us a chance. This country isn't going to work unless everybody can be a part of it."

Charla Davis came to see a presidential hopeful who, she thinks, has exceptional charisma. The first time she heard Jackson speak, she was a college student and he was establishing PUSH. "I did exactly what he told me to do — try to achieve and excel, to provide role models for today's youth," she said.

Now an East Carolina University faculty member, Ms. Davis sees parallels between the late John Kennedy and Jackson. "Kennedy was able to express concern for all groups of Americans. That's what the Rainbow Coalition is all about — a collection of all people."

As Derek Dickens, Rose High School senior commented, no matter what happens at the Democratic Convention, "Jesse Jackson is making an impact."

Facing Trial In

Explosion Deaths

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A man sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $10,000 for illegally making explosives now awaits trial in the deaths of 11 of his relatives killed last year when a fireworks factory blew up.

Dan Lee Webb, 31, of Benton, received the maximum sentence Thursday in U.S. District Court. Federal authorities say his business, Webb's Bait Farm, was actually a plant that produced fireworks the government classifies as explosives.

On May 27, 1983, Webb's mother, brother and nine other relatives by blood or marriage were killed when the plant blew up. He faces trial April 30 in Polk County Circuit Court on 11 counts of manslaughter.

another local issue Jackson spoke about in strong terms. "Small farmers are striving to survive, trying to borrow money to farm. But they are losing out, being driven to the jungles of asphalt. They're being driven off their land. Something is wrong here, when the administration is paying big, rich farmers not to farm land, giving them tax write-offs. As prices for farm products go down, consumer prices for food goes up. We have an administration that can bail out Chrysler, or Argentina. Why can't someone bail out the small farmer in America?"

On several occasions, Jackson displayed a touch of humor. Referring to his student days at North Carolina A&T State University, Jackson noted: "When I was a student there, the enrollment was about 3,000. I understand it's about 6,000 now. In my travels, I have met about 8,000 former roommates and classmates."

"However," he said, "there's one bonafide roommate of mine living here in Greenville, Freddie Outerbridge." He called for Outerbridge, a teacher in the Pitt County schools, to come on stage.

Asking that obstacles to registering and voting be eliminated, that "fair voting be enforced to make democracy for everybody," Jackson said, "We are not fighting for welfare. We are only fighting for our fair share. We want to play the game by the same set of rules."

"Give me a chance. We may or may not win, but our doubts have been removed. More than anything else, we have won our self-respect. If you want me for your president, get out and vote for me. I'm ready. Send me."

Jackson's visit to Greenville was

Price Increases Said Due Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Automobile Association says motorists will pay an average of 7 cents more for gasoline this Easter than they did a year ago, mainly because of federal and state tax increases.

The group said that its latest survey of 6,000 filling stations across the nation showed gasoline prices average $1.24 per gallon, about 1.3 cents per gallon lower than at Christmas.

Most residents of Greenville and Pitt County will have a long holiday this weekend as many work places and schools will be closed for Easter Monday.

"This is the first Easter in memory that the county school system has been able to take the allotted days off for Easter. Usually we have to make up for snow days," Barry Gaskins, public relations coordinator, said.

Both teachers and students in the Pitt County school system will be out of school all week, with 12-month personnel having the option to either work or take vacation time.

Greenville school teachers and students also will be off next week, while at East Carolina University, the students, faculty and staff have only Monday off. Pitt Community College will be closed today and Monday.

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, along with the administrative offices at Jaycee Park and the community building, will be closed Monday. River Park North will not be open Sunday or Monday. City gymnasiums and Elm Street, South Greenville and West Greenville recreation centers will be open Saturday. Gyms will be closed Monday. River Birch Tennis Center will be open all weekend and Monday from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The county offices on West Fifth Street will be closed on Monday, along with department of transportation employees, Pitt County courthouse employees and department of motor vehicles employees.

The Greenville Post Office, along with the ECU Post Office, will assume regular operation hours throughout the weekend and Monday.

Sheppard Memorial Library and its branches will be closed Saturday, Sunday and Monday, but ECU's Joyner Library will be open Sunday from 1 p.m. to midnight and Monday from 8 a.m. to midnight, its regular hours.

City Hall and all municipal offices will be closed Saturday, Sunday and Monday for the Easter holidays.

The transit system will operate on a regular schedule Saturday but service will not be provided on Sunday or Monday.

The sanitation division will be closed Monday, but both residential pick-up routes will be served during the remainder of the week. Emergency calls for public works services may be made to 752-3473.

Most banks, including First State, NCNB, BB&T, Planters and Wachovia, will be closed Monday.

Chairman Didn't Pay His Postage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House postal operations subcommittee has failed for nearly two years to pay for $1,663 in postage used during his 1982 congressional campaign, according to campaign finance reports filed this week.

Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., has owed the money to the St. Louis post office, the reports show, at least since July 1982. Postal Service spokeswoman Barbara Moldauer said "our policy is not to extend credit at all."

As chairman of the subcommittee, Clay has an important say in matters affecting postal operations, including the size of its budget.

Asked about the matter Pearlle I. Evans, Clay's campaign treasurer in his St. Louis office, said, "I'm in the process of paying it."

She said the debt stemmed from underpayment of a bill for a bulk mailing in 1982. "We have been very busy down here. We have attempted to maintain an impeccable record of record keeping."

A spokesman for the Postal Service in St. Louis had no immediate explanation for the delay in collecting the overdue bill.

Pilgrims Visit Old Golgotha And Sepulcher

By EARLEEN F. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — The air is thick with the scent of burning incense and oil lamps in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, which honors the agony of Christ's death on the cross and the glory of his resurrection on the first Easter.

Just inside the heavy wooden doors, two elderly Greek women dressed in black prostrate themselves on the Stone of Unction, which tradition says is the place where Christ's body was anointed with oils and wrapped in a clean linen shroud for burial.

Up a steep flight of stone steps, French pilgrims pray in front of the crucifixion altars built over the stone called Golgotha, the place of the skull.

In the dimly lit rotunda below, the languages of a dozen nations mingle softly as visitors await their turns to enter the holy tomb.

Inside the small, rock-hewn cave, a young Greek Orthodox monk watches over a smooth slab of marble that marks the traditional burial place of Christ. A Palestinian Christian and his wife lift up their son to kiss the marble, whispering to the little boy in Arabic that this is the place where the body of Jesus was placed nearly 2,000 years ago.

The site of the crucifixion, the holy tomb and many of the other shrines inside the church were determined in the early 4th century by Queen Helena, a convert to Christianity and the mother of Byzantine emperor Constantine the Great.

"The site of the crucifixion is only tradition," said Vassilios Tzaferis, deputy director of excavations for Israel's antiquities department. "What archaeology can say about this is that so far nothing has been found to contradict this tradition."

However, the Greek-born Tzaferis, who came to Jerusalem in 1950 to study for a Christian religious order but instead became an archaeologist, said Helena's information could be true.

"After all, it was less than 300 years between the events themselves and the discovery of Golgotha by Helena," he said. "The story would have been passed from generation to generation. Golgotha was a public place for executions, and such places remain in the memory of people for a long time." Crucifixion, used by the Romans throughout their empire for thousands of non-Romans, was a death of supreme agony, designed to keep the condemned person alive and prolong the greatest amount of pain for the longest possible time. "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Christ cried in a loud voice before he yielded up his spirit, according to the New Testament Gospel of Matthew. The bones of a crucifixion victim who lived in the century after Christ were discovered in 1968 in a hillside tomb just north of Jerusalem, providing further evidence of the method used. According to Tzaferis, who brought the bones out of the tomb, and other biblical scholars, no other scientifically documented victim of crucifixion has ever been found. The ossuary, or stone box, containing the bones bore an inscription in the Aramaic language that the victim was named Jehohanah but gave no explanation of his death. A single iron nail, about 6 inches long, pierced the heel bones. Fragments of olive wood remained around the nail. A forearm bone bore a scratch and a dark reddish stain.

"Death caused by crucifixion," Dr. Nico Haas of the Hebrew University's Department of Anatomy concluded in a paper detailing the analysis of Jehohanah's bones. Haas' findings also indicated that nails had been placed in Jehohanah's forearms above the wrist, which would have held him more securely on the cross than nails through the palms as traditionally depicted.

"This is the most painful place," Tzaferis said, "because it is passing through the most painful nerve and, also, it keeps the victim on the cross. The palms of the hands could rip."

Golgotha, the place of crucifixion, and the tomb of the Holy Sepulcher mark the final "stations of the cross" that tourists and Christian pilgrims today follow along the Via Dolorosa in the Old City of Jerusalem.

The first stations are in the Old City's Moslem quarter, but Christian churches, convents and small shrines line the route, interspersed with souvenir shops selling olive wood crucifixes, prayer beads, postcards and T-shirts.

At the beginning of the Via Dolorosa, minarets of mosques and domes of churches soar into the sky past a tangle of television antennas. A crumpled picture of Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat, torn from an Arabic magazine, blows down the narrow cobblestone street. The smell of freshly baked bread fills the air as a truck delivers loaves to tiny groceries and coffee shops carved into the walls of houses.

Near the place where Jesus is said to have fallen for the first time while carrying the cross is the entrance to two yeshivot, Jewish schools for the study of religious law. Across the street a young Palestinian man sells T-shirts whose slogans range from the Hebrew greeting of "shalom" to the rock group "Pink Floyd." One shirt recalling the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon shows a green cedar of Lebanon surrounded by "Beirut 82" in English and "I love you, Lebanon" in Arabic.

Memo For Candidate

RALEIGH (AP) — An aide to Gov. Jim Hunt wrote a memo for the governor's administration that details how to keep momentum for Hunt's policies and how to preserve the appearance the governor is firmly in charge amidst a heavy campaign schedule, the Greensboro News and Record reports in today's editions.

In interviews Thursday, senior administration officials disavowed the importance of the memo, written by Douglas P. Champion, a cabinet aide and director of the Governor's Program for Executive and Organization Development.

The memo suggests avoiding any calamities within state government while taking advantage of any outside it.

"Avoid major mistakes (e.g. a prison riot in September)," it says at one point. At another, it says, "Welcome a good disaster."

Champion said Thursday his "only concern is that (the memo) would be misinterpreted or taken out of context, sensationalized, like the thing about having a 'good disaster.' That may be ironic."

Hunt has flown to a series of disaster sites in recent weeks in the wake of the tornadoes that hit eastern North Carolina March 28 and the Marshville train derailment April 9.

Gary Pearce, Hunt's press secretary and assistant for policy and planning, said "The memo is not being used in any way by the governor, his cabinet or staff as a guide to the Hunt administration's final year."

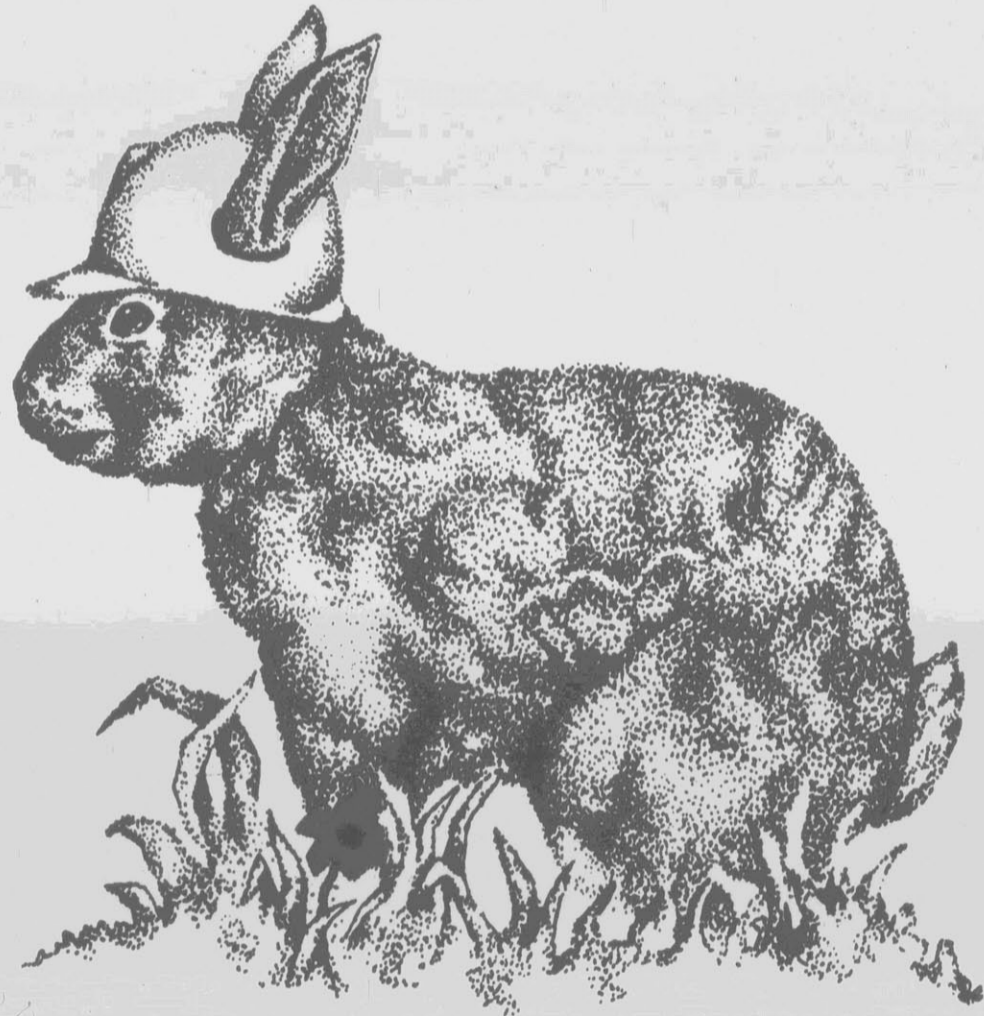

The memo suggests that Hunt help some administration employees find new jobs outside government. About 50 employees, those in policy-making positions and their secretaries, will be subject to dismissal when the new governor resumes office next January.

For other employees, it suggests, "bury people within the administration; give the staff a sense of protection ... help people survive to the next administration by burying them in the bureaucracy."

The memo also says Hunt should create an image (beyond the close circle of advisers) of working full time to the end and transmit no real thoughts of winding down ... try to constantly create an atmosphere of being at the helm running things ... keep going strong to the end; work hard till the last day."

"Quickly and quietly find someone to be in charge of running the ship (still being the figurehead) ... put someone in charge (must be the governor's man)," the memo says.

Champion said the memo was meant as a framework for thought. "It has value, and it has helped," he said.

Psychiatrists Convinced Judge

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — A judge says psychiatric reports convinced him that life in prison, not execution, was the appropriate sentence for a 26-year-old woman who drowned her four sleeping children by putting them in a rain-swollen river.

Jeanne Anne Wright, who pleaded guilty to murder in the November 1963 killings, was so distraught over her life that she concluded the children would be better off dead than alive, Superior Court Judge Rudolph J. Rossetti said in sentencing her Thursday.

Miss Wright and her three oldest children had been abused by the children's father, her lawyer said. She must serve at least 30 years before becoming eligible for parole from the four life sentences.

Comb Area

NORTH BEND, Wash. (AP) — Police searched a wooded area for clues that might link a set of possibly human remains to the 20 so-called Green River killings of young women, authorities said.

Members of the Green River Task Force rushed to the scene, about 25 miles east of Seattle, after a Weyerhouser Co. employee found the remains late Wednesday, King County Officer Bruce Kalin said Thursday. He said there was no "positive link" to the slayings but that the task force was interested in the discovery.

So far, 20 deaths have been attributed to the Green River killer, named for the river where the first victims were found in the summer of 1982. Police say the disappearances of 10 other women may be linked to the killer.

VCU Breaks Pirates' String, 6-2

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Seven times in the past, Virginia Commonwealth University has gone up against East Carolina University in baseball and come away a loser.

Last night, under a steady drizzle, the Rams finally broke their jinx, thanks to an outstanding pitching job by Larry Stout, handing the Pirates a 6-2 defeat.

The loss snapped a seven-game winning streak by the Pirates, and brought to an end a seven-game winning string by starting pitcher Jim Peterson, who went out in the sixth inning, suffering his first loss.

Stout gave up only two hits, and held the Pirates hitless until the seventh.

"I didn't say anything to the guys about the fact that we had never beaten East Carolina, but I think they knew it and just decided among themselves that this was going to be their night," Coach Tony Guzzo said. Guzzo, in his second year at VCU, is an ECU graduate and a former baseball assistant with the Pirates.

It was a frustrating night for the Pirates, who couldn't buy a hit until the bottom of the seventh when Steve Sides finally broke the ice with a double into left. Pinch-hitter Mark Cockrell added another double, driving in both of the Pirate runs in the inning and that was the only time ECU touched Stout.

It wasn't that the Pirates played badly; they didn't. It was just that their hitting died and the Rams continually pushed balls through for base hits.

"You know, you hate to lose, but I think I'd rather lose to Tony than anyone else," ECU Coach Hal Baird said. "They played a good game and they got a good job from Stout."

VCU threatened in the first inning on two one-out walks, but Peterson got out of that jam.

In the second, however, the Rams pushed ahead with one run. Vernon Word led off with a single to right and Mike Ford, attempting to bunt, reached when third baseman David Wells slipped in the wet grass trying to field the ball. They were sacrificed up and Word scored when Terry Summerfield grounded out.

In the third, VCU picked up a second run. Jay Tyler led off with a single and was sacrificed up. He took third on an out and scored when Chuck Downs singled.

The Rams upped it to 3-0 with another run in the fourth. Ford led off with a walk and was sacrificed to second. He scored on Summerfield's single up the middle.

VCU then put the game out of reach with three in the sixth. Ford opened with a double to left-center, taking third on a wild pitch. James Austin walked, and that ended Peterson's time on the mound.

Reliever Mike Christopher got the next batter to line into a double play, but Rodney Wright reached on an error, scoring Ford. Wright stole second and scored on a hit by Tyler. Billy Webster singled, and a double by Brock Vitasek to right brought Tyler over for a 6-0 lead.

East Carolina finally got to Stout in the bottom of the seventh. With two away, Sides hit a liner into left that the fielder tried to make a shoestring catch of but missed and it rolled on to the fence, allowing Sides to race to second, breaking up the no-hitter. Mark Shank walked and Council doubled to left-center, bringing in both Sides and Shank.

The rally died there, however, and the Pirates never got things started again.

Ford led the Ram hitting with three, while Tyler and Vitasek each had two. No one had more than one for the Pirates.

VCU raises its record to 17-22 with the win, while the Pirates drop to 24-9.

East Carolina returns to action on Saturday, hosting N.C. Wesleyan in a 7 p.m. contest. The two meet again Monday night, and the Pirates travel to Wilson for a doubleheader with Atlantic Christian at 6 p.m. Wednesday. The final game of the regular season will be back in Greenville on Thursday against ECAC-South opponent William &

Mary.

Steppe, Tripp Lead Jaguars By SouthWest Edgecombe

FARMVILLE — Joey Steppe drove in three runs and Dennis Tripp ripped a solo homer to lead Farmville Central to an 8-4 victory over SouthWest Edgecombe Thursday in Eastern Carolina 3-A baseball action.

Billy Godley led the Jaguars with a pair of hits in three trips to the plate, while Steppe finished 2-4.

Powell led SouthWest with a 2-3 performance, as Nat Norris threw a five-hitter for Farmville Central.

After the Cougars scored a run in the top of the first, Farmville retaliated with in the bottom of the frame. Daniels got to second on an error and scored on a single by Steppe.

Tripp opened the second with his homer, and Craig Shirley reached first on an error. After two outs, Godley singled and an error in center field of a pop fly by Steppe gave the Jaguars a pair of unearned runs.

In the fourth, Daniels and Godley singled, and Steppe followed with his second hit to drive in Daniels. Taylor Walston walked, and Greg May lofted a sacrifice fly to score Godley.

SouthWest cut the margin to 6-3 with a pair of runs in the top of the fifth, but Norris doubled and stole third before Daniels walked. Godley's sacrifice fly scored Norris, and an error in center allowed Daniels to score.

Farmville Central begins play in the Pitt County Easter Tournament Saturday at 2 p.m., with Steppe on the mound for his first start of the season. Farmville improved its record to 9-2 overall with a 6-2 conference mark.

Fischer's Triple Tops Knights

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
ROCKY MOUNT — Toby Fischer ripped a two-out, two-RBI triple in the top of the seventh to lift the Rose High School Rampants to a 9-7 victory over Northern Nash Thursday in Big East 4-A Conference baseball.

Billy Michel came on in the first inning in relief of Mike Kinley and recorded the victory with eight strikeouts. Michel helped his cause with a pair of hits including a two-run single in the first and an RBI double in the fifth.

Fischer's crushing blow came after Vann Alston walked and Mike Smith singled. Traye Fuqua popped up for the second out, and Fischer drilled the ball to left-center to put the game out of reach.

Michel struck out two and covered first for the third out in the ninth to record the victory, his sixth in as many decisions.

"I thought Billy Michel did a good job pitching," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said. "He was very competitive. This was a real good high school baseball game; I thought Northern Nash showed a lot of scrap and determination. Their comeback is what really impressed me the most."

Rose jumped out to a five-run lead in the top of the first only to see that advantage dwindle in the bottom half of the frame. Knights' starter Sam Vines had trouble finding the plate in the opening frame, as he walked three and threw a pair of wild pitches to spark the rally.

Traye Fuqua walked on four pitches to open the game, and Fischer followed with another base on balls. A fielder's choice by Kinley moved Fuqua to third, and he scored on a wild pitch. Courtesy runner Battle Emory stole second, and catcher Eric Woodworth beat out an infield single to put runners on first and third. Vann Alston, another courtesy runner, stole second, and Michel followed with a single up the middle for a 3-0 Rose advantage.

Michel stole second and moved to third on passed ball. Marc Nover walked, stole second and took third on a wild pitch by reliever Bert Boone which allowed Michel to score. Designated hitter Steve Wall walked, and a fielder's choice by David Jester drove in Nover with the Rampants' fifth run.

But the layoff after warming up gave Kinley problems, as he walked two and hit another batter along with three wild pitches in facing just four batters.

"I think the first inning was too long for us," Vincent said. "(Kinley) got cold, but Michel came in and did a good job. Mike just couldn't get loose again."

John Adams ripped a leadoff single, and Gary Wallace drew a base on balls. A wild pitch advanced the runners, and Kinley hit Charlie Long. Two more wild pitches allowed Wallace to score and Long moved to third on a sacrifice by Steve Wall and scored on a passed ball.

But again Northern Nash managed to knot the score in the bottom half of the frame, as Anthony Marshman doubled in Boone and Hunter.

The Knights had a chance to take the lead in the sixth, as Wallace singled and moved to third on a passed ball and a wild pitch. Moody walked and stole second after one out, but Michel struck out Goins and Fuqua chased a grounder to his right to gun down Boone for the third out.

Maurice Cooper drew a base on balls in the bottom of the seventh and Adams singled before Michel closed the door.

Rose improved its record 7-1 in the conference with the victory, while 10-3-1 overall. The Rampants open play in the Pitt County Easter Tournament Saturday at 11 a.m. against North Pitt.

Conley scored four times in the first inning to take the lead. With one away, Todd Cochran walked and Fred Bryant singled. Chris Via also got a hit, leading the bases. Calvin Phillips singled to drive in Cochran and two wild pitches brought in Bryant and Via. Lee Hardee walked and stole second, and a passed ball let Phillips score for the 4-0 lead.

After adding two in the third, Conley saw Havelock begin its rally with two in the bottom of the third. The Rams added three in the fourth to cut the lead to 6-5.

Then, in the fifth, Havelock pushed over three to win the game. With one away, Danny Clark reached on an error and Jimmy Burroughs ran for him, stealing second. David Cherry singled to score Burroughs with the tying run, and J.J. Griffin walked. Marty Ripenback singled to load them up, and D.J. Fleming hit a sacrifice fly to score Cherry with the go-ahead run. A wild pitch let Griffin score the insurance run.

The Vikings, now 8-4 overall and 3-2 in the conference, return to action on Saturday at 8 p.m. in the first round of the Pitt County Easter Tournament at Conley.

West Carteret.....56
MOREHEAD CITY — A bad

handoff may have cost D.H. Conley a track victory yesterday as Havelock nosed out the Vikings for first place in a three-way Coastal Conference meet at West Carteret.

Havelock finished the day with 66 1/2 points, two more than Conley's 64 1/2. West Carteret finished third with 56.

An exchange of any one place in the standings would have given Conley the victory, and in the 800-meter relay an exchange slowed the Vike progress and they lost to West Carteret by four-tenths of a second.

Gary Nobles was a double winner for Conley, taking the 100 and 200-meter dashes. Kling took two events for Havelock, the hurdles races.

Now 10-7, Conley's next outing will be May 3 in the Coastal Conference championship meet, now set for West Carteret.

Glitz And Glamour Eclipse Straight Dramatic And Non-Action TV Shows

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The glitz and glamour of "Dallas" and "Dynasty" — the two top-rated TV shows — have eclipsed straight, dramatic, non-action series. Throw in "Knots Landing" and "Falcon Crest" and TV can be accused of presenting a cockeyed version of American homelife. The four highly rated soap operas involve the high and the mighty, rich men who build empires and women who change sex partners as often as they do their Dior gowns. If TV has its way, history will record us as a nation of Sybarites. Is there room on TV — or an audience — for a family show depicting a semblance of 1980s American home life as it exists in fact?

65, and there's a new baby on the way. "The Waltons" and "Family" did very well. The trouble is that realistic family shows don't generate the publicity that makes for hit shows. The very normalcy of our characters and stories prevent them from being exploited. "For instance, when we were doing 'Family,' there was no way any major magazine would put Sada Thompson on the cover. But Linda Evans, Joan Collins and Linda Gray are prime targets for magazines."

"Our audience is there. I'm confident of that. But our ratings are rotten. Maybe it has to do with our opposition."

Savitch Estate Sues Over Wreck Death

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An attorney for the estate of anchorwoman Jessica Savitch has filed suit against eight parties, including the estate of the newspaper executive who died with her when their rental car plunged into the Delaware Canal.

Corp., the local outlet for the New York agency from which the car was leased.

The suit filed Thursday by Arthur L. Raynes also names as defendants the state Department of Environmental Resources; Chez Odette restaurant in New Hope and its owner, Frank C. Csaszar; and General Motors Corp., which made the 1983 Oldsmobile that went into the canal. Ms. Savitch, 36, and Martin M. Fischbein, 34, were killed Oct. 23 when Fischbein drove the car off a canal towpath near the restaurant, where the couple had eaten dinner. The car landed on its roof in about 5 feet of water, trapping Ms. Savitch and Fischbein inside. Police said Fischbein drove onto the towpath in heavy fog and rain, apparently mistaking it for the main road leading away from the restaurant. The suit alleges that Fischbein, vice president and assistant general manager of the New York Post, drove the car carelessly and violated state motor-vehicle laws.

'Hurt' By Look-Alike

NEW YORK (AP) — Woody Allen, whose movies have joked about the lack of privacy suffered by celebrities, has asked a court to keep a look-alike from appearing as his double in advertisements because he feels his privacy has been invaded.

The star of such movies as "Annie Hall," "Play It Again, Sam," and "Sleeper" is also asking for $10 million from look-alike Phil Boroff of Los Angeles and a company that used Boroff to advertise a movie rental chain. "I have suffered and continue to suffer ... harm," Allen, 48, said in court papers filed with his suit this week. "My right of privacy has been invaded. And my right to control the publicity value of my name and likeness has been usurped."

The suit also claims that the state DER, which maintains the canal as parkland, knew that the towpath was dangerous but allowed the hazard to exist. A York, Pa., man was killed in 1977 when his car fell into the canal near where Fischbein and Ms. Savitch died. Also named as defendants were: John Nyari, owner of the property next to the restaurant; News America Publishing Inc., publisher of the Post, which leased the car for Fischbein; and Potamkin Cadillac

The suit asserts that National Video Inc. of Portland, Ore., tried to give the false impression that Allen endorsed its movie rental chain in an ad featuring Boroff with video cassettes of Allen movies and two Humphrey Bogart flicks Allen toyed with in "Play It Again, Sam."

Boroff said Thursday that the advertisements carried a disclaimer making it clear he was not Allen. He referred requests for further comment to his agency, Ron Smith Celebrity Look-Alikes. "We have 4,000 look-alikes and we do this as a tribute because we love the stars," said agency President Ron Smith.

In January, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis won a similar suit when a judge barred the fashion house Dior of New York Inc. from using ads featuring a model with a "striking resemblance" to Mrs. Onassis.

Drugs, Victims' Compensation Are Issues

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
Victims' compensation, the flow of illegal drugs into North Carolina and prison alternatives are among the criminal justice issues being discussed by Democratic and Republican candidates for governor.

All but one candidate, Democrat Tom Gilmore, favor the death penalty. The proposals for relieving prison overcrowding and overflowing court dockets are more diverse.

"I don't think the state should be in the business of legalized murder," Gilmore said. "We should substitute a lifetime sentence without parole."

He argues that improving the public schools will help many young people avoid a life of crime.

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten is emphasizing the need to appropriate $1.5 million to compensate victims of violent crimes and has suggested no parole without restitution. The Legislature already has enacted a Victims' Compensation Act but a budget crunch beveled its funding.

"In many cases, the perpetrators of crime are given every available assistance and care while the unfortunate victims are left to wander aimlessly through the judicial process and trying to return to a normal life," Edmisten said.

Edmisten also promises to seek a victims' impact statement to make judges aware of personal and financial hardships to victims of the offenders being tried.

He advocates a victims' bill of rights to make sure witnesses aren't kept waiting needlessly, don't spend too much time away from work or family, are safe from threats or harm, have property quickly returned and have a place to wait at the trial away from the defendant.

Republican Jim Martin is proposing a $5 million plan to attack the state's drug problems. He recommends creation of a State Bureau of Narcotics that would have equal standing with the State Bureau of Investigation.

"It is clear that if the drug problem can be brought under more manageable control, we can expect to achieve reductions in expenditures in the court and prison systems," Martin said.

Martin says the U.S. Coast Guard and the National Guard could help with surveillance and detection of drug smuggling activities. He says state National Guard units could help locate and eradicate marijuana crops.

He also advocates a drug education program to warn young people of the dangers of drugs and alcohol.

Republican Ruby Hooper agrees the narcotics problem requires attention, but she says it does not require an additional agency. Mrs. Hooper advocates increased cooperation with federal agencies to control the flow of drugs.

Democrat D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth has said it's time to let the criminal justice system settle down since there have been so many changes in recent years, including presumptive sentencing, stricter drunken driving laws and speedy trial provisions.

"A good job and a good education are two of the most important pieces in the puzzle of prevention and intervention," he said.

But he is calling for the funding of the Victims' Compensation Act and advocates more support for community-based prison alternatives. He supports a stronger youthful offenders program with a community service restitution and statewide in-school suspension programs.

He also endorses the idea of a trust fund to provide money for better training for law enforcement personnel.

Eddie Knox, another Democrat, says his crime-fighting efforts would focus on improved collection and analysis of information on case processing to measure the effectiveness of law enforcement officials and prosecutors as well as sentencing and correctional practices.

He says prosecutors should concentrate on "career criminals" and should be encouraged not to plea bargain, but to pursue the stiffest penalties for them.

Those who are not career criminals should be given alternative sentences that include tight community surveillance, he says.

He says officers must be better trained in management and investigative techniques and their salaries must be boosted, but he gave no figures.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green suggests creating a traffic court to speed up the process and keep Highway Patrol troopers on the road. He also supports increased restitution to crime victims.

"Some who are not a menace to society should be punished without putting them behind barbed wire," Green said. "We should come up with a reasonable alternative."

Democrat John Ingram says he would convene a study commission to advise him how to crack down on drug smuggling.

"Rape also is a serious and increasing problem and North Carolina must encourage women to report rape as well as prosecute rapists," he said.

Other crime problems cited by Ingram are child molestation, pornography and illegal dumping of hazardous wastes.

He says young first offenders deserve special consideration because of their age and criminal record.

"I do not believe that all crimes or all criminals are equal and the state should not place young nonviolent criminals with more serious offenders," Ingram said. "The best alternative to prison is prevention of crime itself through quality education, equal employment opportunities and more support for our state's law enforcement personnel."

DISASTER RELIEF — Joe Long, vice president of Peoples Bank and Trust company, right, presents a check for $4,000 to Margaret M. Roberts, finance officer of Pitt County, and Ed Garrison, director of the Pitt County Department of Social Services. The Peoples Bank Foundation is contributing a total of $10,000 to state disaster relief funds in counties that were declared disaster areas. Robert R. Mauldin, president of Peoples Bank and Trust, and spokesman for the foundation, said the "contribution will be divided among Hertford, Pitt, Cumberland, Perquimans and Nash Counties, and will provide relief to those not covered by federal relief programs." ## Registration Of N.C. Voters Sharply Rises

RALEIGH (AP) — Black voter registration jumped sharply in the six-month period ending April 9, and the state elections director says the presence of the Rev. Jesse Jackson's name on the ballot may be a contributing factor.

"You ask a person why he registered to vote, and he'll tell you it was for Jesse — and he doesn't mean (Republican Sen.) Jesse Helms," said North Carolina Elections Director Alex Brock.

Voter registration in North Carolina increased by 224,631 in the period between Oct. 10, 1983 and April 9, and black voter registration rose increased by 77,020 — from 488,261 to 565,281.

The most active area of the state for black registration was the 2nd Congressional District, where state Sen. Kenneth B. Spaulding is challenging Democratic incumbent I.T. "Tim" Valentine.

In Spaulding's home county of Durham, black registration rose by 21.5 percent with 28,386 new voters. Only 6.5 new white voters registered.

White registration increased from 2,224,143 to 2,369,016. Indian registration rose from 21,455 to 23,181, and registration of people of other races rose from 3,229 to 4,214.

Brock attributed the overall surge to strong voter registration drives by factions supporting individual candidates.

"Everybody from Jerry Falwell to Jesse Jackson is conducting some kind of registration drive," Brock said.

Brock said changes in state law, which allow driver's license examiners and librarians to act as registrars and permit registration outside elections board offices have also been a factor.

"We're registering people almost everywhere except emergency rooms of hospitals," Brock said.

Breaking down the figures by party affiliation, the totals show that:

- Democratic registration increased by 163,354, from 1,973,651 to 2,137,005.
- Republican registration rose by 52,854 — from 651,447 to 704,301.
- Libertarian registration decreased by 31 — from 591 to 560.
- Socialist Workers registration rose by 26, from 30 to 56.
- Independent voters increased by 8,428, from 111,369 to 119,797.

Town's Mayor Is Available

BUFFALO, Wyo. (AP) — How small is Buffalo, Wyo.? It's so small that even the politicians make house calls when folks need to be bailed out.

A woman turned to Mayor Emil Hecht when her bathtub faucet broke. Hot water was gushing into the tub, which didn't have an overflow drain. It was, of course, a Saturday, and the plumber couldn't be found.

The woman was trying to empty the tub and wanted someone from the city "to come and turn the water off," Hecht said Thursday.

Hecht obliged, then told her, "Gosh, let me look at this. Maybe I can even fix it for you."

"So I fixed it for her," he said.

The retired shipping company manager said he's lived in Buffalo all his life and in a town of "3,789 people," everyone knows everyone else. He declined to identify the woman with the broken faucet, but said she was "a real nice person" whose call for help he couldn't refuse.

To Report A 'Theft'

RALEIGH (AP) — The president of Jefferson Marketing Inc. says Raleigh newspapers which printed stories about a debt deal the company allegedly made with two Republican candidates failed to mention that the evidence of the agreement was stolen.

Douglas Davidson, president of Jefferson Marketing, said in a prepared statement Thursday that the ad agency would report the alleged theft to law enforcement authorities.

"In its recent story about the (I. Beverly) Lake for Governor Committee's debt settlement with Jefferson Marketing Inc., The News and Observer failed to point out that the documents they based their story on were apparently stolen from Jefferson Marketing's CPA, Ernst and Whinney," the statement said.

The articles appeared Wednesday in The Raleigh Times and Thursday in The News and Observer of Raleigh. The stories reported Jefferson Marketing wrote off nearly $100,000 in campaign debts incurred by two statewide Republican candidates in 1980 in exchange for the candidates' mailing lists.

Under the agreements, the newspapers said, Jefferson Marketing wrote off a campaign debt of about $75,000 owed by Lake Jr. and about $21,000 owed by the campaign of William W. Cobey Jr. in exchange for the candidates' campaign mailing list.

Lake ran for governor in 1980 while Cobey was the party's candidate for lieutenant governor.

Jefferson Marketing is owned by the Educational Support Foundation Inc., a non-profit, tax-exempt organization controlled by two officials of the Congressional Club — Thomas F. Ellis, chairman, and R. Carter Wrenn, executive director.

The Congressional Club is Sen. Jesse Helms' political organization.

Jefferson Marketing called on The News and Observer Publishing Co., and the reporter who wrote the story to cooperate with the FBI and Raleigh police in determining who stole the documents.

Newspaper publisher Frank Daniels Jr. said in an interview Thursday that he didn't know whether the documents were stolen, but that he didn't think the newspapers' help would be necessary.

"We've turned the papers over to the state elections board and also the Federal Elections Commission and I don't believe there will be any necessity for us to be involved in the process," he said.

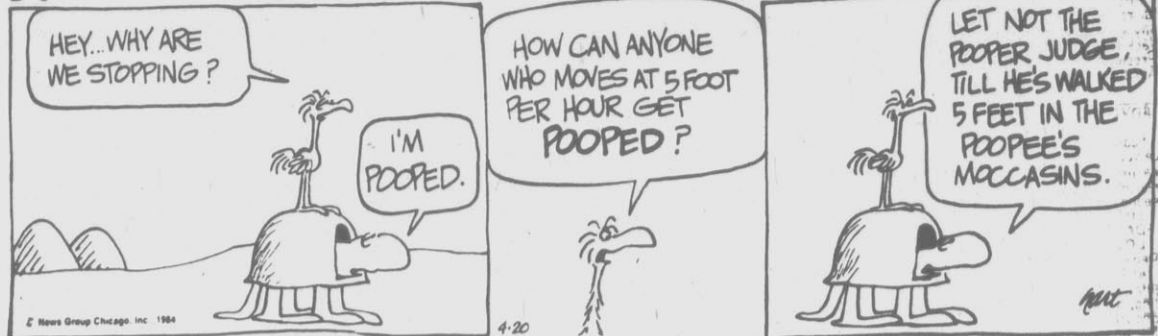

The documents were obtained by The Raleigh Times from a source which the newspaper said asked not to be identified. The News and Observer obtained the documents after they appeared in The Times.

The 84 pages of material were turned over Wednesday to the state elections board.

Opening lead: King of ♠.
Especially in duplicate bridge, light opening bids can be an effective weapon. However, if you don't buy the hand when you open light, the tactic may boomerang — it might steer declarer to the winning line.

We have often said that, with freak hands, it usually pays to bid one more rather than defend. Here, West would have done well to go on to six diamonds. If he divines the trump position, he will go down only one trick unless North finds the spade lead.

Against six clubs, West led the king of spades. Obviously, declarer's only problem was to limit his heart losers to one. However, since East almost surely had the king of hearts for his opening bid, declarer had to resort to an end play.

Declarer ruffed the opening lead, crossed to the king of trumps and ruffed another spade. He cashed the ace of diamonds, ruffed a spade in hand. He then returned to the board with a diamond ruff to complete the groundwork for the end play.

Now declarer led dummy's last spade and discarded a heart from his hand instead of ruffing. East won, but was in the unenviable position of either leading a spade, which would give declarer a ruff-sluff, or leading a heart away from the king. Declarer would allow that to run to dummy's queen and all would be well.

We don't like East's light opening bid. If East feels constrained to open, we would prefer a three or four spade preempt. Now even if the opponents get to slam, odds are that declarer will misguess the heart position and go down.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. ## Cost-Of-Living Boost Delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A delay in the effective date of cost-of-living increases for federal civilian and military retirees has been approved by President Reagan.

Under a measure signed into law by Reagan this week, the increases that were scheduled for May will go into effect at the end of the year.

Reagan said the measure would result in budget savings of about $2.65 billion and thus was "a vital part" of efforts to reduce the deficit.

FOCUS

Suing The Senator

95 years ago today, Adolph Hitler was born in Austria. Hitler once owned 8,960 acres of land in Colorado. In the late 1930s, a young American journalist was outraged to find the U.S. version of "Mein Kampf" had been severely edited. Along with a partner, he illegally published his own translation of the book, stressing Hitler's devious plot to conquer Europe. Hitler was furious, and promptly sued the American. His name? Alan Cranston.

DO YOU KNOW — In what year did Germany elect Hitler and the Nazis to power?

Amerasian Seeking His Father Nailed To Cross

NAILED TO A CROSS — Filipino Donald Rexford hangs from a cross to which he was nailed by the hands in a bloody reenactment of the Crucifixion. Rexford said he is making the sacrifice in the hope he would meet his American father who was separated from his mother after World War II. (AP Laserphoto)

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A Filipino construction worker had himself nailed to a wooden cross for a fifth straight Good Friday today to dramatize his desire to be reunited with his American father.

"Oh God, forgive us," Donald Rexford Jr., 36, cried out in Tagalog as aides hoisted him up on the cross for a few seconds in view of some 300 people, including foreign tourists and news photographers.

Rexford had five-inch stainless steel nails driven through his palms in an annual ritual he has vowed to continue until he meets his father, a World War II soldier he says now lives in Pontiac, Mich.

The soldier and his Filipino sweetheart, who now makes a living washing clothes, were abruptly separated after the war and the young woman was not able to tell him she was pregnant, Rexford said.

Rexford's employer, engineer Romy Enriquez, told reporters today's crucifixion may be the last for Rexford. He said some civic organizations in a Manila suburb were raising money for Rexford to travel to the United States later this year to meet his father.

Rexford told reporters earlier his father had written to him twice and sent him $100 last Christmas as a present for him, his wife and three children.

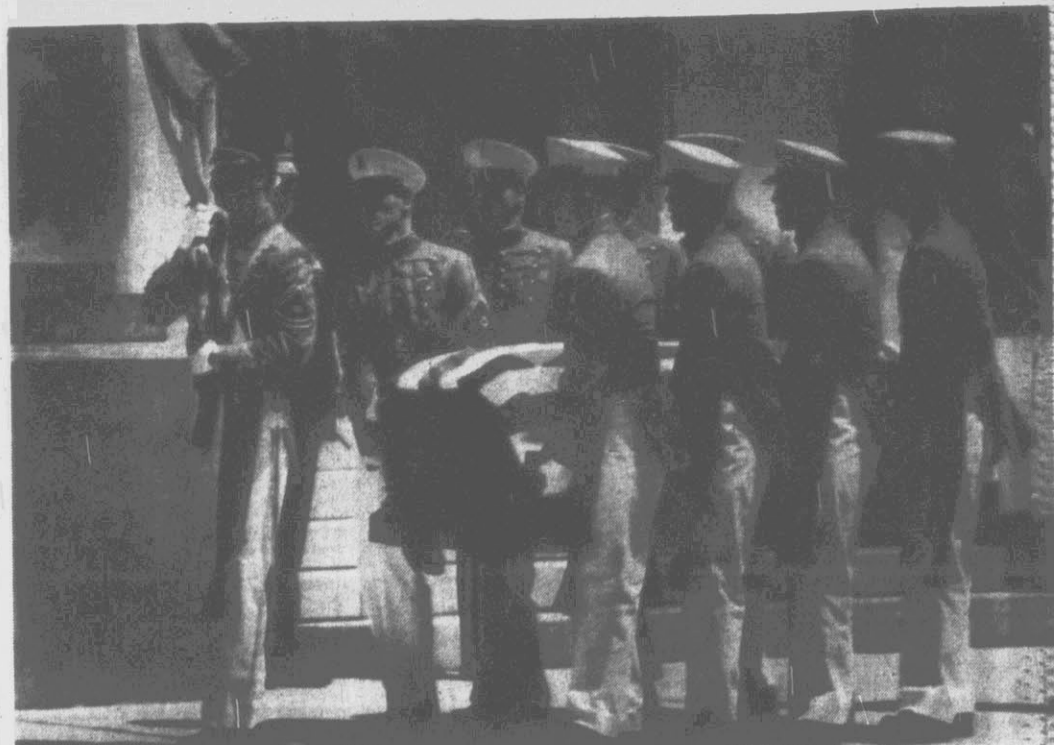

Rexford's ritual nailing to the cross came at noon atop a watertank dome on the grounds of a former government reform school for delinquents. It followed a 10-hour procession during which the penitent, aided by two others, dragged his 15-foot cross from a Manila suburb.

Hundreds of people lined the streets to watch the procession, including three sickly old women who touched Rexford apparently in hopes of a miraculous cure.

Besides Rexford, six other people also were to have themselves nailed to crosses today in provinces north of Manila.

The practice has been going on for decades, primarily in Luzon, the biggest and most populous region of this predominantly Roman Catholic nation. The church officially frowns on the practice but has failed to stop it.

Advocates For Kids

DURHAM (AP) — A group of medical professionals at Duke University Medical Center are now acting as advocates for abused children as part of the Child Protection Team.

The CRT, which consists of Duke physicians, nurses, a physician's associate and a social worker, is part of a team that meets regularly to help abused children through psychological and physical trauma.

"Our primary roles are to help supervise medical treatment of the abused child and to serve as a medical advisor to Durham County's Department of Social Services," CPT member Dr. Peter English said.

English said that in the past DDS social workers had to be sleuths and check with each doctor involved with the case. Now, after reviewing information from all the physicians who treated the child, CPT provides the DDS with a consensus of the child's physical injuries, providing proof of abuse.

The CPT, which provides its service without charge, evaluates around 100 cases a year, with about 25 percent of these cases involve sexual abuse, he said.

"Even with mandatory reporting laws, people often don't want to get involved," he said.
