Two Officials Arriving Help For Libyan Staff

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — The Foreign Office said two Libyan officials were flying to London today to help their embassy staff prepare to leave the country by the Sunday deadline. British police ringed the Libyan Embassy for the eighth day unsealed the immediate area to businesses and workers arrived at their jobs by ladder and rooftop.

The Libyan officials were coming at the suggestion of British authorities, a Foreign Office spokesman said.

Police marksmen ringed the 18th century building in St. James's

Square, as they have since last Tuesday when a gunman fired on a crowd of demonstrators from an embassy window, killing a policewoman and wounding 11 protesters.

On Sunday, Britain broke relations with the regime of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy and ordered the London embassy staff, estimated to number 20 to 30, out of the country by midnight April 29.

Police said their contacts with the embassy staff remained "cordial," and today, the first business day after Britain's Easter holiday weekend, authorities began allowing office workers back into buildings near the embassy.

To avoid possible lines of fire, men in pinstripe suits and women in spring dresses walked along building roofs, climbed ladders into rear windows and walked through underground passageways.

The immediate area had been sealed off since the siege began last week.

The Times of London today reported "a fierce dispute" in the besieged embassy between hardliners who want to remain until they receive direct orders from Khadafy and moderates who insist a telex received Sunday from the Foreign Liaison Bureau in Tripoli gave them authority to leave.

"We know nothing of the reported dispute," said a Foreign Office spokesman, who spoke on condition he not be named.

In Tripoli, Libyan Foreign Minister Ali Abdussalam Treiki said his country would treat British diplomats and offices exactly as Britain treats Libyan diplomats and offices in London, the British Broadcasting Corp. reported. British diplomats have been preparing to leave Tripoli.

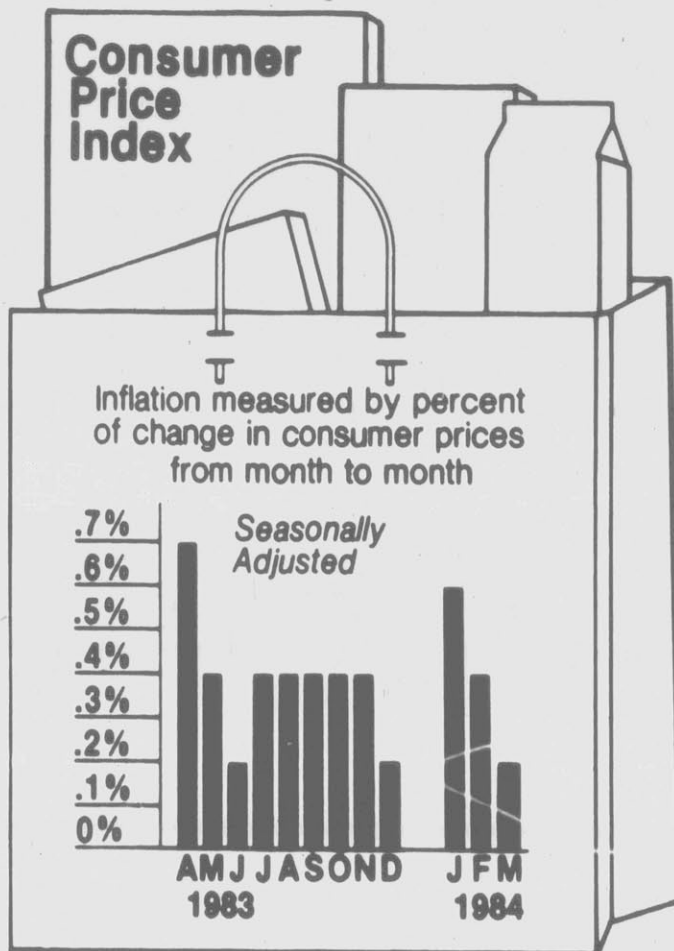

Treiki expressed regret over the death of Constable Yvonne Fletcher, 25, and said he was sorry relations had been broken, the network said.

Treiki was also quoted as denying an ABC television report, attributed to U.S. intelligence sources, that Tripoli had ordered those inside the embassy to use force against the demonstrators.

The Foreign Office in London reported that two Britons detained in Tripoli shortly after the siege began were still being held.

Another spokesman, who also commented on condition he not be named, said British diplomats had not yet been allowed access to Douglas Ledingham, British Caledonian airline's manager in Tripoli, and John Campbell, whose occupation was not known. No charges have been filed, he said.

A Libyan weekly said the Irish Republican Army would be allowed to open recruiting offices throughout Libya to assist its struggle to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

Small Gain In Prices Cited

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Strong food price declines overcame the first gasoline price hike in six months to send consumer prices up just 0.2 percent last month, the government said today.

It was the smallest overall gain in three months.

The lion's share of the credit went to cheaper meat and poultry, eggs and fresh fruit, which sent food prices overall down 0.1 percent following gains of 0.6 percent in February and 1.6 percent in January.

Food prices were down for the first time since last July and were more than enough to counteract a 1.0 percent jump in gasoline prices.

For the first three months of the year, consumer prices have risen 5.0 percent, calculated annually, and were right on target with many economists' predictions that inflation for all of 1984 will be in the range of 5 percent. Others, however, cite the economy's recent strong rebound and say they fear that the pace of inflation could step up later in the year.

Presidential economist Martin Feldstein saw only good news in the report, calling it "further evidence that the economy is not overheating."

If the strong food price decline is eliminated from the March calculation, he said, consumer prices rose a moderate 0.3 percent.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater called the report "very reassuring news in view of the extraordinary growth of the economy in the first quarter," when the gross national product spurted ahead 8.3 percent.

Fitzwater also said today's report was "very promising for a downward trend in interest rates."

In a separate report, the Commerce Department said today that factory orders for "big ticket" durable goods — those expected to last at least three years — edged ahead 0.8 percent in March, the smallest one-month gain since December.

Prices had risen 3.8 percent for all of last year, the smallest gain in more than a decade.

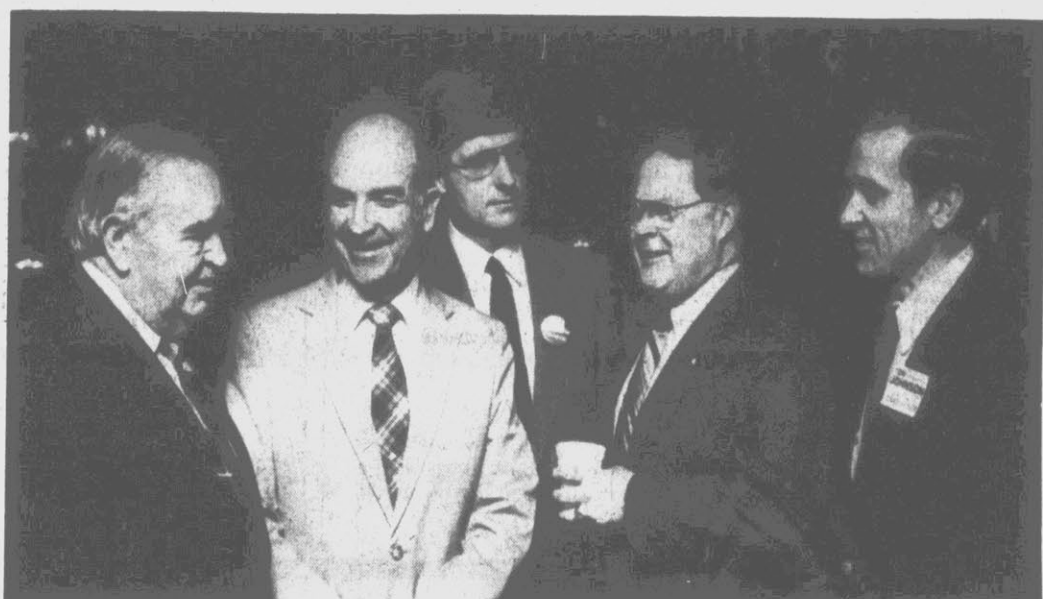

The best news for consumers in today's report was that the devastating effects of last year's severe weather on food prices have dissipated, as has the influence of a deadly chicken influenza.

Price decreases were posted for beef, down 0.5 percent; pork, off 0.4 percent; poultry, down 1.0 percent; and fresh fish, down 0.5 percent. Eggs prices plummeted 12.1 percent while fresh fruit prices fell 2.2 percent. Vegetable prices, however, rose 0.1 percent.

One analyst, noting the previously reported 30.2 percent spurt in March wholesale fish prices, said he expected that dramatic increase to be reflected in the April retail price report.

As for energy, the Labor Department said the bad news on gasoline was moderated by a 5.0 percent drop in fuel oil prices, which had soared 10 percent in January.

Hearing On A Psychiatric Hospital Bid Nears Close

RALEIGH — It may still be several months before the fate of an application for a private psychiatric hospital in Greenville is decided, a spokesman for the Certificate of Needs Section of the Department of Human Resources' Division of Facility Services said today. Charter Medical Inc., a Macon, Ga., firm, applied for a certificate of need to build a 65-bed psychiatric hospital in Greenville early last year. A public hearing was held on the application by the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency, and on March 30, 1983, the ECHSA's project review committee recommended that the application be disapproved, which the ECHSA board did on April 13.

The state Certificate of Needs Section followed ECHSA board's lead and denied certification of need in July.

In a letter to James Beck, manager of health facilities development for Charter Medical, the Certificate of Needs Section said the proposal was "inconsistent" with the "cost effective, providing health care services to the medically underserved, and treatment settings" provisions of the state medical facilities plan.

The letter also said Charter Medical (Please turn to Page 10)

FINGERPRINTING PROGRAM

My club would like to see what would be necessary to undertake the systematic fingerprinting of children in schools and day care centers as a protection against kidnapers or others who would harm a child. How can we go about it? C.M.

Contact the Adam Walsh Child Resource Center in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and request information on its model program for fingerprinting children in their schools. Since 1983, the center has fingerprinted more than 50,000 Florida children, the largest such program ever conducted by a non-police agency.

In order to be of value, a child's fingerprints must be clear and classifiable. Volunteers must be carefully trained to take prints and each print must be checked by a professional before it is given to parents. The Walsh Center's program uses an inkless method approved by the FBI. Its two advantages are that volunteers can easily be trained to take classifiable prints and there is no mess to get on children's hands, faces and clothes. The prints are given to the parents.

The Adam Walsh Center, named for a child who was kidnapped and murdered in 1981 and founded by his parents and others, is a non-profit privately funded organization which fights to change laws and policies through court and legislative monitoring and other means and to better protect children from molesters through parent and child education.

The address of the center is 1876 N. University Drive, Suite 306, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 33322; the phone number, 305-475-4847.

Transplant Offers Fifty Percent Chance For Life

GRIFTON, N.C. (AP) Adam Potter appears to be a normal six-year-old who likes to play on the slides and swings at his neighborhood park.

But a combination of myelofibrosis and a genetic deformity makes Adam different from other children.

Myelofibrosis is scarring of the bone marrow which brings about a form of cancer of the blood chronic myelogenous leukemia.

There is no other documented case of this combination, according to Brenda Martin, a staff member of Dr. Tate Holbrook, who is treating Adam.

This morning Adam and his family were scheduled to leave their home in Grifton and fly to Seattle, Wash. where Adam is to receive a bone marrow transplant at the Hutchinson Cancer Research Center.

With the transplant, Adam has only a 50 percent chance of survival, and doctors believe he could not survive without it.

Adams condition was diagnosed at the beginning of March when his mother, Jo Ann Potter, took him to a Kinston doctor believing he had the flu.

Dr. Orvyl Reece prescribed iron supplements for Adam for a month after finding the child's hemoglobin level low. When Adam's hemoglobin level did not increase, Mrs. Potter said Reece referred Adam to Holbrook, a pediatric hematologist and oncologist at the East Carolina University Medical School.

Mrs. Martin said that myelofibrosis is so rare in children that Holbrook sent several samples around to be checked before settling on the diagnosis.

In order to arrest the development of this cancer, Adam will undergo chemotherapy and radiation treatments to kill the defective bone marrow.

After Adam's defective marrow is destroyed, he will receive a transplant using his father's bone marrow. Large needles will extract the bone marrow from Harold Butch Potter's hip in a process called harvesting.

After the marrow is screened for bone fragments and bacteria, it will be injected into Adam to replace his own marrow.

Adam and his family will live for about three months in a special apartment, part of the hospital complex, so Adam can be checked at least three times each day to make sure his body is accepting the bone marrow.

Mrs. Potter said she has been given an estimate of between $30,000 to $150,000 dollars for the cost of the treatment, and the family expenses while in Seattle will probably be $6,000.

Workers at the Du Pont plant where Potter is employed have set up a fund for Adam and contributions may be made in his name to the Immanuel Baptist Church in Kinston or the First Baptist Church in Grifton.

LIFE IN WASHINGTON...the honeymoon is long since over for official wives, the women married to men in the Reagan administration, says Sue Block, left, wife of Agriculture Secretary John Block, and Ursula Meese, wife of Presidential Counselor Edwin Meese III. (AP Laserphoto)

Official Wives Speak Out About Living In Nation's Capital

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Carolyn Deaver says her stomach turns all the time.
"Inevitably, we'll be criticized for something," says Midge Baldrige.
Sue Block was scared of moving to Washington, "and I would have been more scared if I'd known what we were getting into."
These are Official Wives, married to men in the Reagan administration. And recently they have been speaking out. They say the honeymoon is long since over, that it is emotionally exhausting to live in the limelight and that Washington can be a catty and vicious town. They fear the daggers might one day turn on them.

To many, it would seem that Carolyn Deaver, Midge Baldrige and Sue Block should have no complaints. They and their husbands are well liked, well respected and have survived three years in Washington with their reputations unscathed and their integrity unquestioned. No one is hammering them.

But they empathize with friends like White House counselor Edwin Meese III and his wife, Ursula, who have been caught in an awkward spotlight.

Many who come to Washington feel they live in a pressure cooker, even those who handle it well.
Mrs. Deaver, whose husband, Michael Deaver, is White House deputy chief of staff, said that when one administration family is criticized, all are affected.

"It seems to be a function of finding any slight error and making a large thing about it," she said. "It does affect you, whether you're in the (news) article or not. You feel that sooner or later, your time will come."

Many cheered when Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said at a press conference that he would not pay for his wife's use of government limousines when she used the cars to attend functions as a "Cabinet wife," such as charity and diplomatic receptions, or to attend official events at night.

There was no reason to think her actions were "illegal, immoral, unethical or anything else," Regan said.

In interviews, several Official Wives said they have been particularly shaken by the recent controversy surrounding the Meeses. A special prosecutor has been appointed to investigate charges involving Meese, including one that Mrs. Meese accepted a $15,000 loan from a man who later got a federal job.

Friends of Mrs. Meese said she was deeply upset by the controversy and that it was exacerbated by reporters and photographers who spent two weeks virtually camped in front of the Meeses' house.

Finally, she complained publicly. "What has gone wrong with the country?" she asked one reporter. "...It's unbelievable. You should never feel uncomfortable going to church but when you have photographers there filming you when you leave ... Nobody should have to live that way. Nobody."

Mrs. Deaver said that whether one is a Democrat or Republican, the pressure of having one's professional and private life under a magnifying glass "is deflating and demoralizing."

"It reaches a point where you say, 'I don't think it's worth it,'" she said. "It doesn't matter what party you're in ... To be tried by the press is awful. You have a real churning in your stomach all the time. You're under siege. It's not fun."

Mrs. Baldrige, who is married to Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, said the constant scrutiny discourages people from going into government life.

"It will deter capable people from serving," she said. "The country will suffer in the long run. I feel inevitably we'll be criticized for something."

Mrs. Block, who is married to Agriculture Secretary John Block, said in an interview last November that she is friendly with wives of men who have resigned from Reagan's cabinet and are no longer on the official circuit.

"In Washington, when you're in, you're in," she said. "You have a title and prestige. But when you're out, it's like you vanish from the face of the Earth."

One woman who knows what life is like in a Washington sandstorm is Leilani Watt, wife of former Interior Secretary James G. Watt, who resigned last October after the years marked with controversy.

In a recent interview, Mrs. Watt said, "It's the scrutiny in every part of your life that is wearing. It seems that because you are a public official, you're held to a standard of being perfect. You're not perfect."

Nancy Reynolds, a lobbyist in Washington with close ties to the Reagan administration, said life in Washington can be like a soap opera.

"When you first come, everybody panders to your ego," she said. "Total strangers give parties in your honor. Two years later, the honeymoon is over."

At Wits End

By Erna Bombeck

The trouble with raising kids is there is no instant gratification. Just when you're sailing along and you feel it's all worthwhile you get a plastic ice scraper from your 27-year-old son for Mother's Day that he picked up free at the gas station.

You get plain tired and wonder how much longer you have to hang on. We all need stories with "happy endings" to sustain us. A mother in California said recently she got a note from her son that said, "I appreciate you. I know I have contributed to your headaches."

Bingo! A year and a half ago, according to his mother, he barely spoke English. (Yeah, man!) He was going to surf as a profession, had been asked to leave three schools, was involved in alcohol and drugs and was neither moral nor immoral, he was amoral (he made his own rules).

Work and patience turned him around and today he's in school and is a caring human being.

The other letter is from a "carrier" of parental frustration who has seen the light. She wrote, "My mother never turned to drink. No one could save her from chocolate, but I couldn't blame her either. I was the child who announced at 7:15 on a Monday morning Sister Margaret James wanted 47 pairs of used nylons for an art project.

"I was the adolescent who yelled, 'I hate you!' because I was not allowed to hitchhike 65 miles in December and sleep at a rock concert where the proceeds were going to help hippies in crisis.

"I was the new driver in the house who honestly felt that a dollar's worth of gas was reimbursement for the Saturdays spent cruising every shopping center mall in the county.

"I was the young adult leaving home to experience life on my own to follow a boyfriend 1500 miles, and 14 months later return to the bosom of my family, using their car, leaving my wet towels on the floor and monopolizing the telephone.

"The vicious threat of my mother has been partially realiz-

When springtime comes so do chives, that delicate herb with its onion-like flavor and intense green color.

With chives in hand, I was ready to find a use for them that was new to me — and may be to you. We put them in a hominy and cheese puff and they added welcome flavor. If you try the recipe, you may want to pass a small bowl of yogurt or sour cream — or a combination of the two — sprinkled generously with extra fresh green chives to accompany the puff.

HOMINY, CHEESE AND CHIVE SOUFFLE
1 1/4 cups water
1/4 cup enriched white hominy grits
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons minced chives
3 large eggs, separated
2 ounces cheddar cheese, grated medium fine (1/2 slightly packed cup)

In a heavy large saucepan, bring the water to a boil. Gradually stir in the grits and salt; bring to a boil again and cook, uncovered, over low heat, stirring often until thick — about 25 minutes.

Off heat, stir in the chives; whisk in the egg yolks, one at a time, until blended after each addition; stir in the cheese.

Raise Your Profile And Enjoy Wealth

DEAR ABBY: Four years ago when my wife and I were divorced, she tried to clean me out. She said I was a "millionaire." What is a millionaire? Does having more than a million dollars in total assets make me a millionaire? Or do I have to have a net worth of more than a million dollars?

I have no one to discuss my finances with. At present I don't have a CPA. And when I did have one, I never disclosed my total situation because I was afraid if he knew how much I had he might charge me more for his services.

Since my divorce I have accumulated quite a lot of property. I'm not bragging, but I haven't done too bad for a country boy who never went to college. I'm still single and plan to stay that way unless I meet a woman who doesn't judge a man by how much money he has. I drive a 10-year-old car and prefer to keep a low profile.

Thanks for any advice you can give me, but most of all I want to know if I'm a millionaire.

DOING OK IN TEXAS

DEAR DOING: According to the dictionary, a millionaire is one whose wealth is estimated at a million or more dollars, so you qualify.

My advice, Raise your profile a little, enjoy the fruits of your labor and use everything you have going for you — including your money.

P.S. If you want to withhold information from your CPA, that's your business. But don't try to fool the IRS — that's their business.

DEAR ABBY: Do you think that after being a houseguest for a week, it is proper to make a long-distance telephone call saying "thanks" in lieu of a bread-and-butter letter?

It seems to me that considering the work and expense involved for the hostess, a guest should take the time to write an expression of thanks.

I will bow to your decision, before condemning.
ASKING TOO MUCH?

DEAR ASKING: The written thank-you note is without question the most elegant and mannerly way to express gratitude. But don't condemn any method of conveying thanks — including the telephone call. It gets the job done.

P.S. What ever happened to saying it with flowers.

DEAR ABBY: Your recent column on prescription drugs was a real service to everyone — except nurses!

ed: 'May you have twins just like yourself.' I am now the mother who contemplated breaking my child's legs when my husband announced, 'We'll get a dog as soon as the baby can walk.' I used to be articulate. I call dogs doggies and actually excuse myself to 'potty' in a group of adults.
"I live in fear that the punk look will still be with us when my daughter is old enough to date. I don't know how my mother stood it."

I'm going to keep these two letters handy. I wouldn't be surprised if I reread them twice a week ... just to keep going.

I'm so tired of hearing, "Ask your doctor or pharmacist." I'd like you to know that nurses are also highly informed sources who are frequently consulted about drugs. And they should be. The Gallup organization reports that 32 percent of the average nurse's work time is spent on medication-related functions. Besides at work, nurses are constantly asked about drugs by neighbors, friends and relatives. And did you know nurses can prescribe drugs in 13 states?

Abby, please acknowledge nurses as another important part of the health care team.

TERRY MASON, R.N.,
NORWALK, CONN.

DEAR MS. MASON: Acknowledged. And thanks for the needling. I needed that.

DEAR ABBY: You ask where laddies put their nose, When kissing pretty lasses, I'll tell you my sad tale of woe, Right on my nice clean glasses.

A happy blend of basic needlework skills is all it takes to make a stunning set of club covers for the golfer in your life. The covers are knitted in cable stitch with the club numbers worked on 10-mesh plastic canvas. Four separate cable patterns are given ranging from a basic beginner's cable to more involved Aran Isle cables. Make the covers all alike or choose one cable stitch for each / the choice is yours.

If you're not a needlepointer, perhaps you can find a friend to make the numbers for you / or better yet, take this opportunity to learn how on this small project. If you prefer, just top each cover with a pompon.

color for number tabs and cord.

DEAR PAT: Here's a quickie pattern for you and your readers. While on vacation, I made three pairs of infant mittens (plus a bonnet) from one skein of "pompadour" yarn. These will be gifts for two new babies in my family.

You will need approximately 1 2 ounce of three-ply baby yarn for one pair of mittens and a pair of knitting needles that will give you a gauge of 5 stitches per inch. I used a size 5 needle, but my knitting is on the loose side so others may need a larger needle.

Cast on 30 stitches and work 10 rows of knit 1, purl 1 ribbing for the cuff. Then work in pattern stitch as follows. Row 1: Knit all stitches. Row 2: Purl 2, knit 1; repeat these steps over and over across row. A similar alternate pattern stitch is worked the same for Row 1, but Row 2 is worked knit 2, purl 1, repeating across as in the original stitch. With either pattern, Rows 1 and 2 are repeated alternately until desired length is reached.

Work in pattern for 3 and one-half inches above the ribbing. To decrease for the top of the mitten, work these two rows: Row 1: Knit 1, knit 2 together; repeat these steps across row. Row 2: Purl 2 together; repeat this step all across row.

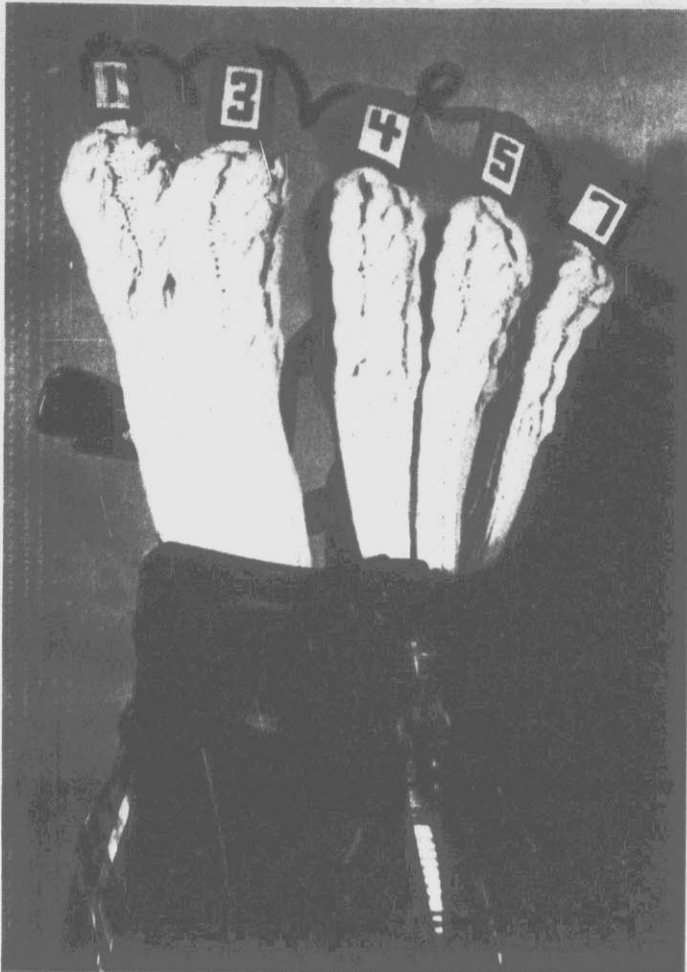

Break yarn leaving a 10-inch end. Thread end into a tapestry needle and draw through all stitches on the knitting needle. Draw these stitches together and sew the side seam. With a C or D crochet hook, chain 65 stitches. With the tapestry needle, pull chain through ribbing about midway on cuff and tie in a bow.

I like this pattern as either side can be used for the "right" side. I prefer the one that most would consider the wrong side. — Polly Curtis, College Park, Md.

Polly, a former knit shop owner turned designer, visited me while on vacation and showed me these adorable little mittens plus some sweaters and shells she designed with chevron stripes in a very interesting stitch technique. One or more of these designs will be featured in future columns. Thanks, Polly, for the "goodies"!

Cream puffs, often found in pastry shops, have been baked at home successfully by American cooks for a long time. At first the puffs were filled traditionally — with sweetened and flavored whipped cream. And old-fashioned cooks used to keep on hand a large shaker of confectioners' sugar with which to sprinkle the puffs (and other desserts) just before serving.

Note: You can bake the Pistachio Puffs ahead and, appropriately wrapped, store them in the freezer. At serving time, unwrap and place the frozen puffs on a cookie sheet; heat in a fairly hot oven just until thawed and surface is crisp; serve at once.

For some decades now, the puffs have often been made into a savory rather than a sweet. For this they are made small — no bigger than a mouthful — and filled with a savory combination of perhaps cheese or seafood or both.

Interestingly enough, a savory French variation of the puffs made with Swiss cheese (called Gougere and from Burgundy) has been a late-comer to the United States. Only occasionally do you find recipes for it. Now an inventive American cook has varied the French recipe for Gougere by adding pistachios, which contribute great texture. These Pistachio Puffs are delicious served straight from the oven; they do not need to be filled.

- PISTACHIO PUFFS
- 1 cup water
 - 1/4 pound stick butter
 - 1 cup all-purpose flour
 - 1/4 teaspoon salt
 - 4 large eggs
 - 1/3rd cup shredded (medium-fine) Swiss cheese
 - 1/4 cup finely chopped pistachios

Heat the water and the butter in a 2-quart saucepan over moderate heat until water boils and butter melts. Add the flour and the salt all at once. Remove from heat; stir vigorously until mixture leaves side of pan and begins to form a ball.

Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition; continue to beat until mixture is smooth and glossy. Stir in the cheese and pistachios.

Drop by rounded tablespoonfuls, about 1 inch apart, onto a large greased cookie sheet. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until golden brown — 40 to 45 minutes. Serve at once.
Makes 15 puffs.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?
HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Ever wonder why a drink is called a cocktail?

One legend traces the origin of the word to the Revolutionary War and a New England tavern run by Betsy Flanagan, where American officers gathered and complained to her about a prosperous Tory who lived nearby.

One night, according to Heublein Inc., she served the officers a drink of rum and fruit juice — each cup decorated with a tail feather plucked from the Tory's prize rooster. When she told where the feathers came from, the Americans shouted their praise of the drink, as did a French volunteer who said, "Vive le coq's tail."

Surviving The Short Haul

Futile Fussing

To put it bluntly, the U.S. State Department should not get involved with the Russian word-game over attending (or not attending) the forthcoming Olympics in Los Angeles.

The problem is one for the International Olympics Committee to resolve.

By responding through the news media to Soviet complaints, the government is playing into the hands of a propaganda game plan which permits heating up the existing frictions between two governments and their peoples.

It is popularly presumed ... and an ideal to be pursued ... that the Olympics are a non-political event; but reality and experience tell us otherwise.

When a Soviet spokesman says there will be "no boycott" but, on the other hand, the athletes may not show up, he is signalling a propaganda ploy.

There has been some talk during the past year or so that the Russians have not fared well in athletic competition. (A cartoonist pointed this up not long ago, with a Soviet coach haranguing his squad, saying, "If you don't shape up and win, you really will be amateurs!")

So what we are reading and hearing conceivably is preparation for a Los Angeles exit notice. It remains of concern mainly to the Olympics Committee; the international one, that is.

The fussing is pure futility.

Look Seaward

Look out world. Here come the new Navies.

The word is out that the "Caspian Monster" is afloat. It has nothing to do with strange sea creatures. This monster is a surface skimmer being developed by the Soviet navy. The monster is capable of high speeds, and could carry assault troops and equipment almost anywhere in the world quickly.

Never fear that the United States is being left behind. Our nation, too, is experimenting with such craft, with speeds of up to 345 miles per hour. It may be that military, and also civilian, traffic which took to the skies for speed will one day return to the seas.

WASHINGTON — With Congress in its Easter recess, the hullabaloo over Nicaragua has subsided on Capitol Hill. While this blessed quiet reigns, let us look at the proposition. This has not been our finest hour, for either the administration or the Congress, but the situation is not as bad as the president's critics have hoked it up to be.

What is our national purpose in Central America? That is the key question; we ought never to lose sight of it. Our purpose, stoutly defended by the bipartisan Kissinger Commission, regularly proclaimed by the White House, strongly supported by key figures in both parties, is simply this: to prevent the Soviet Union from expanding its military power and its political influence into our hemisphere. One Cuba, we have said to the world, is enough.

Is this a valid purpose? Surely it seems valid to me. Nicaragua, El Salvador, Costa Rica, Panama, Honduras, Guatemala — these are nations in our own backyard. It is a fair assumption that no present or future U.S. president — not a Reagan, not a Mondale, not a Hart, not a Kennedy — wants to awaken some morning to news of communist takeovers. The prospect of Soviet naval bases in the Caribbean is not a comforting prospect.

For the sake of argument, suppose we assume the purpose is a valid purpose. The question then becomes, What do we do about it? How may we best prevent the calamity? Over the long haul, as the Kissinger Commission recommended, the most desirable answers lie in economic aid — in the kind of assistance that would mean better education, better medical care, higher incomes and an improving standard of living for the whole region. Over the long haul, patient diplomacy obviously is necessary. Not many persons object to the idea of linking an increase in foreign aid to a demonstrable improvement in human rights and democratic institutions.

But the unavoidable truth is that unless our policies survive the short haul, we may never get to the long haul. It is beyond dispute that the Sandinista government of Nicaragua is funneling Soviet arms and ammunition to leftist rebels in El Salvador. The only dispute turns upon the nature and the volume of these supplies. If a chance for democratic survival is to be preserved in El Salvador, it follows that the Sandinistas' intervention must be curbed.

There is a French proverb that applies: To make an omelet, one has to break eggs. For months the United States has been engaged in openly supporting a covert operation against the Sandinistas. Until last week, Congress had supported this contradictory policy. But when the story broke of our role in mining Nicaraguan ports, the Senate erupted with virtuous cries of outrage at the unspeakable villainy of the CIA. The White House compounded the uproar by formally rejecting the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice in any proceeding brought by Nicaragua.

What about all this? The mining was widely reported in February. Knowledgeable persons have assumed for two months that the CIA was behind the operation. The laying of mines, after all, is not to be compared with loading a rifle; the levels of required skill are not quite the same. These mines, so far as we know, were designed to harass visiting ships, not to sink them; the mines have inconvenienced the Sandinista government, but they represent an escalation in only small degree of the help we have been giving to El Salvador's defense.

The Reagan administration erred, in my own view, in its slippery effort to wiggle out of a case before the World Court. The announcement may have been legally acceptable — lawyers specializing in international law are divided on the point — but it is not morally acceptable. The president needlessly surrendered some high ground. It would have been far better to have mounted a vigorous defense against Nicaragua's charges, based upon the vulnerability of the pot that calls the kettle black, than to have taken a course that smacks of the shyster lawyer.

Let me return to the point of beginning. If our purpose is to deter Soviet adventurism in Central America, we must act decisively, and we must act decisively now. If that is not our purpose, the thing to do is to elect Gary Hart in November and tune our ears thereafter to the slip-slap-slip of dominoes falling.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Fred Sanford III — he calls himself this, and with a smile, mind you. Mr. Claude Atkinson of Greenville was the controversial subject in last week's news. The property on which he operates his recycling center has been labeled an eyesore by members of the black community. These members call themselves (proudly) leaders of the community. Yet, as self-appointed leaders, they have stooped low enough to ridicule their supposed followers in the public media.

Mr. Atkinson is a hard-working (as he has been all his life), honest property-owning member of our community. He lived on a fixed income which, after paying his bills and attending to the needs of his sick wife, a resident of University Nursing Home, had hardly enough money left to buy himself a Coca-Cola. His recyclables, which used to be property of others in the community that outgrew the need for these items, are now available for others less fortunate than a successful CPA, a successful DJ and a successful chattering kitchen operator.

The kind of leader that our community needs is one who would rather expose the drug dealers to the media and save our kids or promote a drive to purchase an 8-foot-high wood fence and erect it around our community's recycling center for their sore eyes. Fred Sanford III is an honest man. This is a rare trait in this day and time. It is a shame that the numbers runners, booze sellers and drug dealers are more respected by our so-called black leaders than a man who earns his way by the sweat of his brow. Our government encourages free enterprise. That's where your success came from.

Eat And Be Merry, But Leave The Tulips Alone

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you hope to be among the thousands of American or foreign tourists who'll soon come to the U.S. Capitol, then you should learn two things right away:

You'll probably have to stand in line no matter where you go.

And it's a crime to pick the flowers.

Elliott Carroll, the Capitol architect's executive assistant, said the police are "fairly diplomatic" if you snitch a tulip or two. However, it still falls in the category of damaging the landscape.

"We've had whole azaleas dug up at night," says Carroll who strongly suggested that, if caught, the culprits would get no mercy.

The law also says the Capitol grounds may not be used for recreational purposes.

So, technically, you can't fly a kite; hang glide; sled, or ride bikes there.

But you can picnic on the lawn, even with a jug of wine.

If you feel the need to carry a sign in protest against something, then you must get a permit from the Capitol Police. Those permits are "pretty easy" to get, says Carroll.

If you want to harangue a member of Congress, that's your right anytime, anywhere.

What about climbing one of the magnificent trees on the grounds? Well, replied Carroll, it sort of depends on how it's done, and how the police on duty view the particular feat.

Another odd prohibition is that you can't use a camera tripod on the Capitol grounds without a special permit from the Capitol Police Department. Inside the Capitol building, use of tripods are restricted during certain hours, roughly those in which the House and Senate are in session.

As the House completed its vote on the tax bill, there was a lengthy pause but still Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill did not announce the final tally. Several minutes lapsed with no further votes and members mullered around wondering why the holdup.

Then Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ala., — a marathon runner — bounded into the chamber, attired in a red windbreaker and jogging pants, slipped his card into the voting machine, and scurried out the door again.

It was a spring day and Alexander couldn't resist taking a run around the grounds when he was caught off guard by the timing of the tax vote.

A popular sunny-day pastime for tourists is to stop and listen to high school bands on the Capitol steps and at the Ellipse near the White House.

You can hear hymns, rock, jazz, blues and all other types of music but there is a rule that it can't be amplified so loud that it interferes with the work of Congress.

Groups wanting to get in on the act should contact their House member or senator to arrange for a date and time to play.

After playing at the Ellipse, they get a tour of the White House.

Several Midwestern band players said they paid their travel and living expenses in Washington, D.C., by holding car washes, bake sales and yard sales back home.

Everything that politicians say to one another in the heat of battle ought not to be taken as gospel.

For instance, in Chillicothe, Ohio, Lew and Marilyn Coppel took seriously House Speaker Thomas O'Neill's suggestion that President Reagan put up a chapel at Camp David so the chief executive can attend services there.

O'Neill, grumbling that Reagan's support for a constitutional amendment for prayer in public schools was politically inspired, had told reporters: "There's a man (Reagan) that doesn't go to church and he talks about prayer."

Reading all this, the Coppels sent a $50 check to O'Neill to help pay for the building of a Camp David chapel.

O'Neill returned the check, saying there was no plan to build a chapel, and suggested the Coppels might want to send the money to a mission.

Green's Status Changing

RALEIGH — To hear Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green's supporters tell it, their man has been robbed of the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

"After the 1980 election, Jimmy Green was the leading candidate for governor. Then this whole mess started," says Bill Franklin, Green's administrative assistant.

The mess of which Franklin spoke was the lengthy Colcor investigation that led to Green's indictment — but later acquitted — on fraud charges. Green's gubernatorial ambitions were in limbo until October 1983, and while he defended himself, others organized their campaigns.

As Franklin sees it, Green lost the natural front-runner status and valuable time and saw his reputation "unfairly tarnished."

Franklin's perspective on the race is certainly up for question. He may be overstating Green's political strength. Green barely survived in 1980. First he narrowly defeated Carl Stewart for the nomination and then he slipped by Bill Cobey, a previously unknown entity, in the general election. Green's firm control of the Senate, his conservatism and opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment has made him a pariah to large segments of the Democratic Party. A cash gift of nearly $5,000 which he accepted from a paving contractor continues to haunt his reputation.

But Democrats will concede to Franklin the point that had Green not been forced through the trial, he would probably be among the frontrunners today instead of lagging far back in the polls.

As the campaign enters its final stages, Green is working feverishly to climb back into contention. He's raised enough money to get his message on television where he's stressing his conservative principles as a way of regaining his previous supporters.

Green, 63, is a tobacco warehouseman who has served eight years as lieutenant governor and 16 years in the Legislature. He attended Washington & Lee University in Virginia and, as a U.S. Marine, fought in World War II.

On the issues, Green is easily the most conservative Democrat. He was a strong opponent of the Equal Rights Amendment, although he downplays that opposition now, stressing instead the legislation he helped women legislators push through the assembly in 1983. Also, by casting a rare vote, he personally killed the Senate's version of a nuclear freeze resolution during the 1983 session.

Green opposes establishment of a state-run lottery. He opposed gubernatorial succession when it was introduced in 1976 and says he would ask for another vote on the amendment if he were elected in 1984. He says he would not seek a second term. He also opposes any change in the primary run-off system.

Green also opposes the peculiar election of the state's utility commissioners. "North Carolinians do not want utilities commissioners who are seeking office in the heat of campaigns while they are deciding rate cases," Green does favor renewed study of the Construction Work in Progress law. "It is evident that energy consumers are being penalized, and that recommendations to correct this fault should be presented."

—Elisha Douglass—

Strength For Today

"Separation" can, under certain circumstances, be one of the most tragic words in our language. When husband and wife separate, a tragedy involving them and others is being enacted. When class lives apart from class, when the rich look down on the poor, when people are judged on the basis of race rather than on the basis of worth, these types of separation are horrible.

In Jesus Christ, God broke down the walls of separation between the peoples of the world. Now we know ourselves to be all one race, one family under God. Only one separation — a necessary one — remains. This is the separation we must all make between ourselves and the sinful influences about us.

Let us realize that in spite of differences in wealth, education and culture, all men everywhere are brothers. To live the life of brotherhood is to live as a world member in the family of God.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Officially, the leftist government will be seeking total victory when it opens its World Court case against the United States on Wednesday, but legal experts say moral vindication is a more realistic goal.

States has violated international law by aiding rebels battling the Sandinista government and by supervising the mining of Nicaraguan ports.

A legal adviser at the Justice Ministry, which is responsible for the petition, said the court will provide a forum for telling a "David and Goliath" story to the international community.

He said that, although the Reagan administration has made no secret of CIA backing of the rebels, Nicaragua will face a tough challenge in trying to prove American involvement in the harbor mining.

"The reality is that there is skepticism in our government about demonstrating the accusation," the adviser said, speaking on condition he not be identified.

"Therefore, the final objective will be trying to halt American aid to the counterrevolutionaries, and through the publicity that the case will have, gain international support for our government."

The U.S. State Department announced before Nicaragua's petition was filed April 9 that it would not recognize the court's jurisdiction over Central America for two years. Nonetheless, court statutes provide for oral proceedings, which are scheduled to start Wednesday.

Jeanne J. Kirkpatrick, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, and other Reagan administration officials have said the decision not to recognize World Court jurisdiction in the region was justified on grounds the Sandinistas would exploit it for propaganda.

A barrage of publicity already is evident in Nicaragua. State-run radios have broadcast live telephone interviews with Nicaragua's ambassador to the Netherlands. The radio and press also have carried extensive information about the petition.

"United States to the Defendant's Table at The Hague," the pro-government Nuevo Diario newspaper said in a headline.

"Routing The Greatest Offensive of the CIA," declared another headline in the newspaper.

The mining is believed to have stopped after the disclosure that the CIA participated with the approval of President Reagan drew condemnation from the U.S. Congress and several nations. The mines damaged seven ships at Puerto Sandino and Corinto in March.

Nicaragua's petition asks the World Court to declare "illegal all covert activities against Nicaragua sponsored by the United States and that it order an end to the support that is provided the rebels."

It says anti-government activities intensified in March with the infiltration into Nicaragua of more than 6,000 rebels, and asks the court to order the immediate halt of support to the rebels as a "provisional measure" while hearings are conducted.

It also asks for financial compensation, claiming that more than 3,000 Nicaraguans have been killed by the rebels and that material damages exceed $250 million.

A Foreign Ministry official involved with the petition said the compensation request "could be for several hundreds of millions of dollars." He spoke on condition he not be identified.

A lawyer who teaches international law at the University of Nicaragua said he believes it will be very difficult for Nicaragua to win the case, much less to be awarded compensation.

"The principal problem that Nicaragua faces will be to show that the CIA effectively is involved in the placement of the mines. Even though it is true that newspapers, magazines and American congressmen have denounced the mining of the ports, it will be very difficult to prove it," he said, asking not to be identified for fear of reprisal.

Another Nicaraguan lawyer said that even if the Sandinistas fail to prove their case, the government would consider it a "triumph" if the court ordered an investigation of the accusations.

The case itself could last many years, as has happened with other cases before the court.

Its legal team will be headed by Abraham Chayes, a law professor at Harvard University, and Washington lawyer Paul Reichler; Ian Brownlie, a British professor of international law at Oxford, and Carlos Arguello, Nicaragua's ambassador to The Hague.

Well-Balanced Diet 'Best' Laxative

What's the best way to choose a laxative? — Miss S.R., Virginia.

Dear Miss R.: The ideal way to choose an "ideal" laxative is to try to avoid it. A well-balanced diet including fresh and cooked fruits, vegetables, cereals and water can usually avoid the need for laxatives.

Patience, too, may be a good laxative. Far too often there is unnecessary concern about the need for "timeclock regularity." Missing one or two days is not as serious as most people believe it is.

When laxatives are necessary, it is good to know how they function. Some laxatives stimulate the bowel function by irritating it. Others act as lubricants. And still others work by increasing bulk and roughage.

It is apparent, therefore, that any laxative that is chosen must have a specific objective.

A haphazard choice of laxative can be dangerous, especially to the elderly or infirm. It is for this reason that doctors choose laxative for their patients with great care. The choice of a laxative should be that of the doctor who knows the general condition of the patient.

My father was told that he has varicose veins of the esophagus. Is this possible or didn't he hear correctly? — Mr. C.Y., New Jersey.

Dear Mr. Y.: Varicose veins, or varicosities, are enlargements of veins. The common ones, of course, are those that occur in the legs. They do occur in the esophagus.

There are a number of conditions related to liver disease, to heart disease, and to lung disorders that may be responsible for these enlargements of the veins in the esophagus.

Obstruction of the blood circulation to the liver, to the stomach, and to the intestinal tract can be responsible for the enlargement of these veins.

The esophagus is a delicate tube that carries food from the mouth to the stomach. It is subject to a many disorders. Varicose veins is but one of them.

Sometimes these veins can become markedly distended and may even rupture if the underlying condition is not eradicated.

There are now some highly refined surgical procedures by which the obstructed blood flow can be relieved. These bypass operations are aimed at the underlying problem and can reduce the size of the varicose veins of the esophagus.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH: When driving an automobile for long stretches, stop the car occasionally, get out and walk around in order to stimulate the blood circulation. All passengers, too, should do the same thing.

Only in this way can the stagnation of blood be avoided. Blood clots often occur in people who have a predisposition to them when their legs and feet are kept in one position for a long time.

Office workers who are trapped by their chairs must consider stimulating their circulation during their coffee break.

Hart Even Asks Republican Help

DALLAS (AP) — Democratic presidential hopeful Gary Hart has been combing Texas for support in the state's May 5 caucuses, and he's even asking the state chairman of the Reagan-Bush campaign for money and inviting him to the Hart inauguration.

Thanks, but no thanks, says Republican Sen. John Tower, who heads President Ragan's campaign in Texas.

"Senator Tower does plan to attend the Reagan-Bush inaugural in January 1985," Dottie de la Garza, Tower's spokeswoman, said Monday.

In the six-page form letter received by Tower, Hart asked for contributions and, in a postscript, extended the inaugural invitation.

David Bolduc of Austin, a district coordinator for Hart, said it's not unusual for computer letters to go to the wrong places, especially when the campaigns use various lists of possible supporters.

TO RECRUIT WOMEN

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — The Defense Ministry reportedly is planning to recruit 1,000 to 1,500 women for the West German armed forces next year. They would be the first women in the armed forces since Germany was divided at the end of World War II.

Lebanese Snipers Dispute Key Buffer Zones

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Observers assigned to monitor Lebanon's fragile cease-fire came under sniper fire today at a disputed building along the line dividing Beirut's Moslem and Christian sectors. State radio said two civilians were killed.

Disputes over buffer zones at the disputed building and at a closed elevated highway between the two sectors have held up completion of a plan to separate warring militias and establish a coalition government that would more accurately represent the nation's religious and ethnic makeup.

A security committee met again today to work out details of the disengagement plan. Afterward, the group announced that the "problems" had been resolved and that a truce force would begin taking positions in the disputed areas later today.

The committee, which represents the Lebanese army and Christian, Druse and Shiite Moslem militias, did not say how the disputes were resolved.

The Shiite Moslem militia Amal said a restaurant owner and one of his employees were killed by sniper fire today in the Khandak el-Ghamik Moslem neighborhood of west Beirut, state radio reported.

The sniping along the "green line" dividing east and west Beirut touched off local exchanges of rocket-propelled grenades, mortars and anti-aircraft fire.

An Associated Press reporter in the Jdeideh residential neighborhood of Christian east Beirut said two mortar shells hit that area, sending people scurrying for cover. Christian-controlled radio stations said at least two women were injured by shrapnel in Jdeideh.

Also today, an independent Beirut newspaper reported that President Amin Gemayel had agreed with President Hafez Assad of Syria on negotiating new security arrangements for Israel in southern Lebanon.

On Monday, a Lebanese policeman serving on the disengagement force and two civilians were killed in clashes provoked by snipers, police said.

Disengagement of the combatants, which began Thursday, has been completed along the rest of three-mile green line, in Beirut's southern suburbs and around the mountaintop town of Souk el-Gharb east of the capital.

Police said 1,500 policemen and army draftees, along with 160 observers, were deployed in buffer zones in Beirut and the suburbs to monitor the truce, while another observer force has moved into disengagement areas around Souk el-Gharb.

On Monday, an army engineering unit removed mines from buffer zones between government troops and Druse militiamen on the town's southern outskirts, according to police.

The newspaper An-Nahar said the Assad-Gemayel agreement on negotiations would cover "security arrangements that would ensure an Israeli army withdrawal from the whole of southern Lebanon ..." The paper, which did not elaborate on possible arrangements, said the two presidents agreed on this point during their talks in Damascus last week.

Syria had rejected security arrangements of a U.S.-brokered troop withdrawal pact that Lebanon and Israel signed May 17, 1983. Gemayel scrapped the accord last month.

The summit last week produced agreement on formation of a half-Christian, half-Moslem government in Lebanon.

A Sunni Moslem and former prime minister, Rashid Karami, met with Assad on Monday. Karami, 62, is considered likely to head the new Cabinet.

"We shall not plant mines in the way," Karami said after the meeting, apparently indicating opposition leaders have agreed to join a coalition government.

On Monday, Israel's defense minister, Moshe Arens, said Israel, through the International Red Cross, would try to exchange war prisoners with Syria.

However, he said, there are questions about whether Israeli soldiers held by Syrian-backed factions of the Palestine Liberation Organization would be included in an exchange.

Syria holds three Israeli soldiers captured after the Israeli invasion of Lebanon in June 1982 and PLO rebels hold four prisoners. Six Israelis are listed as missing.

Israel holds 290 Syrian prisoners and about 2,700 other Arabs convicted of terrorism and security offenses.

Six Israeli soldiers held by Yasser Arafat's PLO faction were released in a Red Cross-mediated exchange Nov. 23. They were swapped for 100 Palestinians held in Israel and 4,500 Palestinian and Lebanese prisoners held in Israeli-occupied southern Lebanon.

In Tel Aviv, Israel, military sources said today that a small bomb exploded Monday outside a mosque in the occupied Gaza Strip. There were no casualties, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity. Another bomb was defused, they said.

In another development, Jordan's King Hussein arrived in Saudi Arabia for talks with King Fahd.

Arab diplomatic sources said the two men were to review the latest developments in the Arab-Israeli conflict and their countries' relations with the United States.

Weinberger Sees Vital China Role

By PETE JACOBS
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says improved relations with China would help stabilize the Pacific at a time when the Soviets are engaged in a worldwide military buildup that threatens "the sinews of the Western economies."

Weinberger, in an address Monday night that drew more than 1,000 chanting demonstrators opposed to President Reagan's foreign policy, said Reagan hopes to launch an "era of peace" in the Pacific during his visit to China.

But he also said the United States would continue to provide military aid to Taiwan and needed continuing military cooperation from South Korea and Japan, which he said should take a greater self-defense role.

He said he expected Chinese leaders to mention U.S. relations with Taiwan in talks with Reagan, but that he believed their comments "would indicate their understanding of it."

"Certainly, a strong, secure and independent China dedicated to peace is a positive force for peace and stability," Weinberger told the Institute of Contemporary Studies, a research group he helped found.

His remarks followed White House spokesman Larry Speakes' announcement earlier in the day that Reagan hoped to produce an agreement with the Chinese on commercial nuclear power. The president is scheduled to arrive in China on Thursday. Weinberger said the Soviets have mounted a growing naval and air presence in the Pacific and Southeast Asia "as demonstrated by joint amphibious exercises with Vietnam this month ... of concern to us all."

The United States faces multiple challenges from expanding Soviet air and naval forces worldwide that "could endanger the flow of energy, goods and raw materials that are the sinews of the Western economies," he said.

Weinberger did not mention Central America at the dinner. But in an earlier meeting with newspaper editors, he dismissed the idea that U.S. troops were poised and ready to assume a fighting role there.

"I don't see any situation at all in which American combat troops would be used in that region," he said. "I don't see any necessity for it, I don't see any desirability of it, and I would oppose it."

Outside the hotel where Weinberger spoke, more than 1,000 demonstrators chanted slogans opposed to American intervention in Central America. Police said eight were arrested for blocking traffic.

The demonstrators were kept behind barricades across the street from the hotel. They dispersed voluntarily after about two hours, said Deputy Police Chief George Eimil.

CENSORSHIP

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — The army command has ordered censorship of all news broadcasts in and around the capital — the latest in a series of restrictions to counter popular pressure for direct presidential elections.

Hearing...

cal "has not demonstrated that the proposal is the most effective alternative for providing the services" and that the proposal would develop services "at a level greater than that identified as needed."

After the state action, Charter Medical requested a reconsideration hearing.

That hearing got under way April 16, according to Certificate of Needs Section spokesman Ed Jenkins, who said today that "it is still continuing and will go to the end of the week."

Jenkins described the hearing process as "similar to a court proceeding," during which the state and Charter Medical "provide testimony, witnesses, legal counsel is present," and witnesses are cross-examined.

The hearing officer, Jenkins said, will "develop a recommended decision" for I.O. Wilkerson, director of the Division of Facility Services, who will, in turn, "render a final decision on the part of the state."

That final decision, Jenkins said, "could be ... three or four months" away.

Roy Selby, executive director of the ECHSA, said this morning that two other applications considered by ECHSA at the same time the Charter Medical application was reviewed were withdrawn after they were disapproved.

One was for a private psychiatric facility in Rocky Mount, while the other was for a private psychiatric hospital in New Bern.

At the ECHSA hearings, representatives of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the East Carolina University School of Medicine and others voiced opposition to the Charter Medical project.

After ECHSA recommended disapproval, the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce's board of directors voted 11-7 in favor of supporting the private hospital plan.

Boy Falls While Playing On Roof

RALEIGH (AP) — A nine-year-old boy fell through a skylight at the Legislative Building in Raleigh Tuesday, crashing into a courtyard three stories below.

The unidentified boy, who authorities said was apparently playing on the roof of the building, was taken to a Raleigh hospital. A hospital spokesman said the boy was in critical condition.

Officials at the building said the child was visiting the building with his family when he fell through the Plexiglass skylight.

The incident came as Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green was holding a news conference in the Legislative Building.

(AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 48.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. The final weighted average is 48.58 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market tone for next week is steady to fair and the live supply is moderate for a good to moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Tuesday was 1,758,000, compared to 1,651,000 last Tuesday.

Hens
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina hen market was lower. Supplies adequate. Demand moderate. Prices paid per pound for hens over 7 pounds at farm for Monday and Tuesday slaughter was 22 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks turned mostly lower in morning trading today after opening mixed. The downturn also came despite further indications that the economy's expansion is cooling off.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 8.58 on Monday, edged up 0.42 to 1,149.92 after two hours of trading today. But the Dow Jones transportation and utility averages declined.

Losers held a 7-5 lead over gainers on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index slipped 0.07 to 90.16.

Big Board volume totaled 34.39 million shares at noon EST, compared with 29.54 million at that hour Monday.

Before the opening bell, the Labor Department said consumer prices rose 0.2 percent in March and the Commerce Department said factory orders for durable goods rose 0.8 percent last month. Both were the smallest increases in three months.

Investors hope slower economic growth will reduce private demands for credit, which have risen along with the economic expansion to produce upward pressure on interest rates.

But most short-term rates in the money markets edged higher today despite the government's latest figures.

On the NYSE, Exxon gained 3/4 to 41 1/4 after posting a 39 percent rise in first-quarter profit.

Carter Hawley Hale rose 3/4 to 27 1/2, Ford Motor lost 1/4 to 34 and Paine Webber skidded 1 1/2 to 28 1/2.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index lost 0.41 to 206.77.

Planting Of Corn Runs Late

By JERRY RAYNOR
 Reflector Staff Writer

"Many farmers are four to six weeks behind in getting their corn planted because of the excessive rain we've had this spring," said Leroy James, Pitt County Agriculture Extension chairman. "Generally, farmers have most of their corn planted by March 15, which means lots of them are four to six weeks behind."

Because of the additional heavy rainfall over the past weekend, James said today "very few farmers will be planting much corn this week, but if it doesn't rain more, most corn land should be dry enough by the weekend or early next week for getting equipment into the fields for planting."

The late schedule for planting, James commented, "will probably cut down the yield of corn. Chances are the crop will fall short of the regular annual yield this year."

This week, a number of farmers have been seen hand-shoveling small drainage ditches across low-lying fields on which surface water is standing. "It's the only way farmers can attempt to drain off surface water," James said. "There's no way they can get equipment in to dig drainage ditches, and if they let surface water stand for any length of time, it can do a lot of damage to the land."

Prospects for other crops at this time look a little brighter, mostly due to normal planting dates being later than that for corn. "Tobacco planting is not especially late. The cool weather we've had the past few days is not so good on tobacco already planted, but it shouldn't suffer very much if it turns warmer sooner."

"Tobacco plants in plant beds look good, and are ready for transplanting. Early next week should see a lot of tobacco planting activity if today's sunny weather holds."

Prime planting dates for other crops come in May. "The first two weeks in May is the normal time for planting soybeans, and mid-May is when most farmers plant peanuts."

The wheat crop, James said, "is looking good despite the heavy rains. Most was planted in October and November, and will be harvested in late May and early June."

Defy Weather At Jamesville Event

By JERRY RAYNOR
 Reflector Staff Writer

JAMESVILLE — Monday's cold, rainy weather was not conducive to a festival atmosphere, but "there were still several thousand people who came to eat herring and herring roe during the day," said Tommy Mizelle, an area resident and a staff member of the Williamston Enterprise.

The annual April Herring Festival in the eastern Martin County village of Jamesville on the banks of the Roanoke River each year draws thousands of people who come to eat the migrating silver fish and its tasty roe. When a day of warm spring weather prevails, the steep-sloped forested area is the scene of packed crowds strolling along the river banks, watching fishermen bring in their catches, listening to country and blue grass bands, taking in the crafts and art shows, and of course, eating fish.

"This year," Mizelle commented, "the weather drastically limited what could be done for outdoor entertainment. A few musicians played in what little sheltered space they could find, and a few artists managed to show their work in other sheltered areas, but all in all there was not much activity for arts and music." Face painting, a favorite for children and teen-agers, was not possible in Monday's weather.

"For the most part," Mizelle said, "it was a matter of slipping in the mud to get down the slopes to stand in long lines outside the cafes."

The Cypress Grill, an old un-painted wooden structure, has acquired a reputation as a historical rural eating place favored by oldtimers who faithfully visit Jamesville year after year to eat herring there. Often they come from long distances. Another restaurant, River's Edge, a modern brick building, is also noted for its fish and fish roe dinners. Saturday is the last day the Cypress Grill will be open this year. It traditionally closes a week after Easter. River's Edge remains open.

Some fishermen utilize small sheds and shacks to cook herring and hot cornbread for themselves, their families and friends.

"Lots of people before or after eating ignored the rain to take time to stand by and watch fishermen bring in their hauls," Mizelle said. "No matter what the weather is, it seems people are willing to brave it to come to Jamesville to take part in the herring festival."

Small Price Gain...

and February, and by an accompanying drop in natural gas prices.

Despite the 1.0 percent jump in gasoline prices, the sharpest one-month increase since May, those costs are still 12.4 percent below their peak of three years ago.

In all, March's increase in the price measure was half the the 0.4 percent seasonally adjusted advance in February and one-third the 0.6 percent of January.

Detailing the March Consumer Price Index, the department gave this breakdown of its calculations:

—Transportation costs overall soared 0.9 percent, boosted by the higher gasoline prices and by higher costs for new and used cars. New auto prices rose 0.5 percent while used car prices surged 2.4 percent.

—The cost of local telephone service tumbled 0.8 percent after posting a record 8.5 percent gain in January with the breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Overall phone charges fell 0.5 percent.

—Medical care costs were up 0.5 percent, down moderately from January and February and in line with the average monthly increase of 0.5 percent recorded in 1983.

—Housing costs were unchanged following increases of 0.5 percent in January and February.

—Clothing prices rose 0.1 percent.

—Entertainment costs fell 0.2 percent, their first decline since April 1977. Analysts said the drop reflected widespread cuts in prices for reading materials.

—The cost for meals eaten outside the home rose 0.3 percent. Alcoholic beverage prices were unchanged.

The department also noted that overall food prices, despite the March drop, rose 8.6 percent for the quarter, their largest three-month increase since the end of 1980.

All the changes are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

If last month's 0.2 percent increase held for 12 straight months, the yearly advance would be 2.8 percent. The annual rate reported by the department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly prices than the figure made public.

Over the last year, prices have risen 4.7 percent.

In all, the Consumer Price Index stood at 307.3 in March, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $30.73 last month.

A companion index, the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers, was unchanged. This index is widely used in calculating cost-of-living increases in collective bargaining contracts and government benefit programs.

Jim Nabors Has Lost His Wheels

HANA, Hawaii (AP) — Jim Nabors, the actor-singer who played Gomer Pyle on TV in "The Andy Griffith Show," and "Gomer Pyle USMC," got to meet the president — but in the process lost his wheels.

Nabors, 51, had a Yamaha dirt bike stolen from his Hana ranch Sunday afternoon, police said Monday.

The theft occurred while Nabors was in Honolulu attending an Easter service at St. Andrew's Cathedral, where he was among those who greeted President and Mrs. Reagan. The Reagans stopped in Hawaii for two days on their way to China.

Burns, Cruz Lead Chicago Victory

By The Associated Press
The game featured a matchup of three-time Cy Young Award winners — Jim Palmer of Baltimore and Tom Seaver, now with the Chicago White Sox.

As it turned out, neither was around at the end Monday night when a couple of lesser-known names emerged as heroes in Chicago's 7-6 victory over the Orioles in 10 innings.

The hitting star was Julio Cruz. He crossed up the Baltimore defense by slapping a single to right in a sacrifice situation to drive in the winning run.

Britt Burns was the pitching star. He went the final three innings for the victory and allowed just one hit while striking out seven.

In other AL action on a wet slate, Cleveland trimmed Texas 3-1, Toronto knocked off Seattle 8-5, Boston beat California 2-0 in a rain-shortened game and Oakland at Milwaukee, Minnesota at Detroit and Kansas City at New York were washed out.

Burns entered the game in the eighth inning after Baltimore had scored once to pull within 6-5 and was threatening with runners on first and third and none out. After striking out Benny Ayala, Burns allowed Rick Dempsey's sacrifice fly, which tied the score.

In the 10th, Baltimore reliever Tippy Martinez, 0-2, walked leadoff batter Vance Law. Then, with the count 2-0 on Scott Fletcher, Sammy Stewart replaced Martinez and walked Fletcher.

With the Orioles expecting a bunt, Cruz hit a 2-0 pitch through the right side to score Law.

Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa took the bunt sign off when the count reached 2-0 on Cruz.

"If everybody in the ballpark knows you're going to bunt, it's the toughest bunt in baseball," he said.

Said Cruz: "They were breaking in real quick and the turf was soggy. Where was I going to bunt the ball? To the pitcher?"

Baltimore Manager Joe Altobelli, who watched his team slip to 4-12, saw little else the Orioles could have done in their predicament.

"It didn't surprise me that he swung away," Altobelli said. "But he's a good bunter and it was a bunt situation."

Neither Seaver nor Palmer, each at 0-2 this season, was pleased with his performance. Seaver, seeking his first American League victory, worked six shaky innings and left with a 6-4 lead.

Palmer departed in the fourth inning with a pain in his neck. He gave up four earned runs on three hits and four walks in 32.3 innings.

"I'm having mechanical problems and haven't pitched enough to work them out," Seaver said. "I'm disappointed but I have to be realistic as well. I'm not going to judge myself until I pitch every fifth day."

Palmer said he wasn't "a good April pitcher anymore."

"It's disappointing not to be able to pitch six or seven innings like I thought I was capable of doing. When it's cold, it affects my ability to pitch."

Baltimore's Cal Ripken and Chicago's Carlton Fisk each swung heavy bats early in the game. Ripken belted his sixth home run of the season and added two doubles to drive in three runs. Fisk, who came into the game without an RBI this season, smacked a solo homer and had a two-run single.

Indians 3, Rangers 1
Rick Sutcliffe again sparked on the mound for Cleveland and then got late relief help from Ernie Camacho.

Sutcliffe, 3-1, gave up six hits, struck out four and did not walk a batter before leaving with two outs in the eighth inning. Camacho yielded a run-scoring single to Mickey Rivers but settled down for his third save.

Tony Bernazard and Julio Franco sparked the Indian attack. Bernazard tripled home Otis Nixon, who had walked, in the fifth and then scored on Franco's double.

Cleveland added a run in the eighth when Franco walked, stole second and scored on Andre Thornton's single off Charlie Hough, 1-2, who went the distance for visiting Texas.

Blue Jays 8, Mariners 5
Lloyd Moseby, who had cracked an RBI triple in the fourth inning, slapped a three-run double in the fifth to pace Toronto.

The Blue Jays took a 3-2 lead in the fourth when Damaso Garcia doubled. Moseby tripled and George Bell followed with his third home run of the season.

Then, after Seattle went ahead in the top of the fifth on run-scoring groundouts by Al Davis and Pat Putnam, host Toronto rallied for four runs in its half of the inning.

Moseby's double off Mark Langston, 1-1, was the big blow. Dave Collins then singled in Moseby. Dave Stieb, 3-0, went 7 1/3 innings. He yielded Gorman Thomas' first home run of the season in the eighth and Roy Lee Jackson finished up for his second save.

Red Sox 2, Angels 0
Marty Barrett, making his first start of 1984, drove in one run and scored the other before the rains came with Boston batting in the sixth inning.

Barrett, filling in for second baseman Jerry Remy, singled three times as the Red Sox ended California's five-game winning streak.

Rain Forces Event Delays

Rain forced the postponement of baseball tournaments throughout the area yesterday.

Delayed a day were the Wilson Optimist Tournament at Wilson and the Jamesville Invitational Tournament at Jamesville, while the Pitt County Tournament at D.H. Conley was delayed till Wednesday. Play was to resume today in all three, with the finals on Wednesday.

In the second, he singled in Reid Nichols, who had doubled. In the fifth, Barrett singled and later scored on Mike Easler's sacrifice fly.

Winner Bobby Ojeda, 1-2, allowed three hits and struck out six, including Reggie Jackson three times. Geoff Zahn took his first loss in three decisions.

The game was called after a steady downpour of 50 minutes in Boston.

Pirates Delayed, Site Changed

Rain washed out Monday night's East Carolina game with N.C. Wesleyan and forced a switch of the site for Wednesday night's doubleheader with Atlantic Christian.

The Pirates and Wesleyan will meet tonight in a make-up contest scheduled for 5 p.m. at Harrington Field.

The ACC-ECU twinbill was to have been played Wednesday night at Wilson's Fleming Stadium. However, the Wilson Optimist Baseball Tournament had first right to the use of the stadium, and the rainout of the event on Monday forced it to move its final round to Wednesday.

Thus, the ECU-ACC contests will now be played in Greenville at Harrington Field Wednesday starting at 6 p.m.

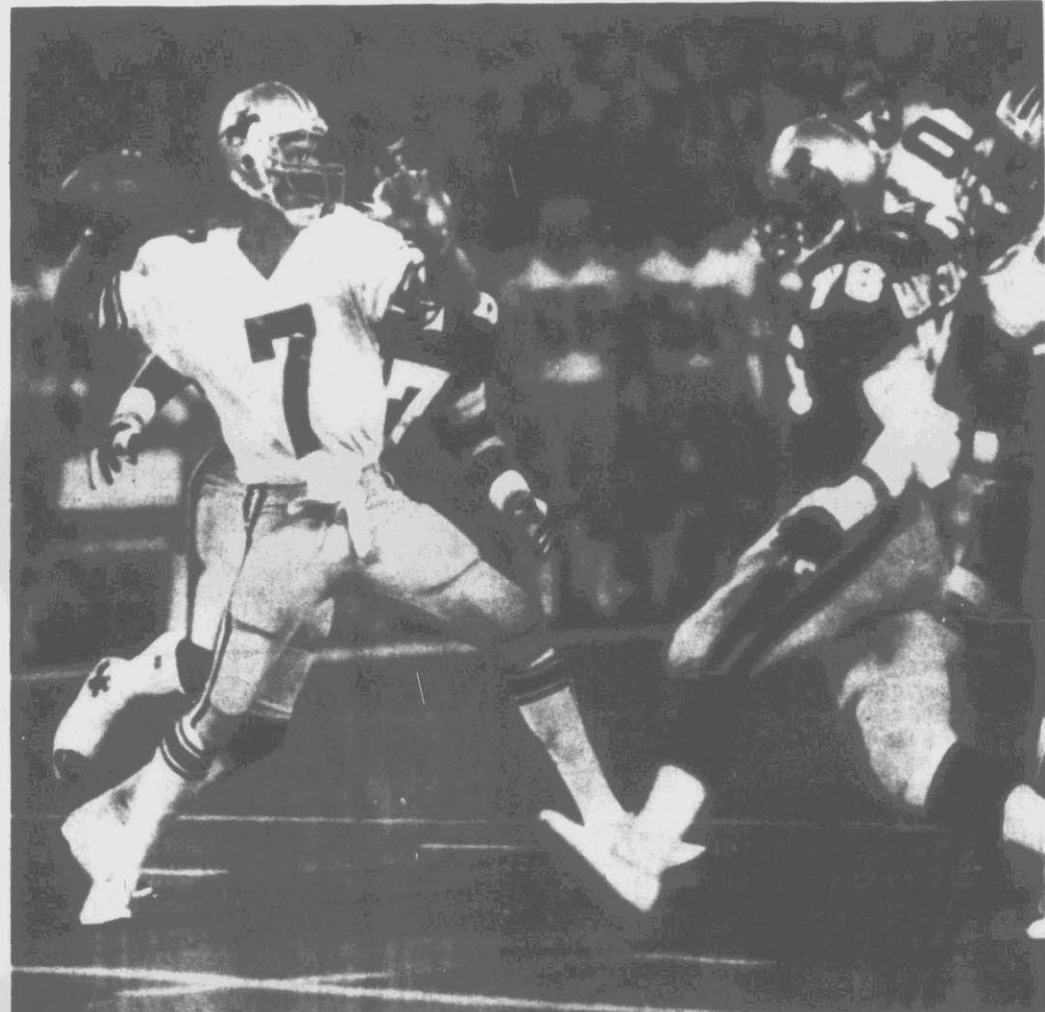

The game with Wesleyan, the ACC doubleheader, and a single game Thursday night with William & Mary, also at Harrington Field, will wind up the 1984 regular season for the Pirates.

Reaves' Passing Leads Tampa In 20-7 Victory Over Michigan

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Playing without injured star wide receiver Anthony Carter hurt Michigan, but not as much as Tampa Bay's ability to take away the Panthers' running game, Bandits defensive end Mike Butler says.

John Reaves threw two touchdown passes Monday night to lead the Bandits to a 20-7 victory over Michigan, extending the defending United States Football League champions' losing streak to three games.

"We felt that since they had lost two games in a row they would want to set up their running game," said Butler, a former Green Bay Packer. "So what we wanted to do was take that away from them from the beginning and that's what we accomplished."

That's an understatement. Tampa Bay limited Michigan to just 44 yards rushing, 10 first downs and forced five turnovers, including four interceptions against Panther quarterback Bobby Hebert.

"Once we stopped the run and got the lead, the line was teeing off and wasn't even thinking about the run," said Butler. "That's when we starting putting pressure on the quarterback. It made Hebert a little jittery."

Hebert completed 18 of 35 passes for 262 yards. "I just think it was a lack of concentration," said Hebert, who excited the crowd of 31,443 momentarily in the first period with an 80-yard touchdown pass to rookie Walter Broughton that tied the score 7-7.

"It's like when things are going good, they are really going good," he said. "When things are going bad they're going bad. At times a quarterback is only as good as they people around him."

Hebert has been missing his best friend on the field in Carter, who has been sidelined since suffering a broken left arm three weeks ago.

The Panthers haven't won since, dropping to 6-3 and a first-place tie in the Western Division with Oklahoma and Houston, two expansion clubs.

"Obviously they miss Anthony Carter," said Bandits' Coach Steve Spurrier after directing his team to its third straight victory. "He's a super all-around player. But our defensive coaches came up with a good game."

Butler agreed. "I think the true champions are the ones that come to the top at the end of the year. That's what we seem to be doing."

Reaves was particularly good against Michigan, hitting 22 of 37 passes for 251 yards. He hit Marvin Harvey on a 12-yard TD strike in the opening quarter and connected with Eric Truvillion on a 17-yard scoring play just before halftime to give the Bandits a 14-7 lead.

"We've played well the last couple of weeks," Reaves said. "Our offense is really starting to gel, particularly the offensive line."

Zenon Andrusyshyn booted field goals of 38 and 20 yards in the second half to ice the game for Tampa Bay.

"It's difficult to do the job when we get outplayed," said Michigan Coach Jim Stanley. "We didn't get enough pressure on the quarterback. It appeared that we didn't have enough heart and soul."

Dodgers Winning Right And Left

By The Associated Press
Earlier this season, the Los Angeles Dodgers were soft touches for left-handed pitchers, and just about everyone else, it seemed.

Lately, though, they've been winning left and right. Following a good series against the San Diego Padres, in which they took three of four games, the Dodgers continued to roll with a 2-1 victory Monday night over the Houston Astros and Bob Knepper.

Although only the third triumph against a southpaw this year, the victory was the Dodgers' 10th in their last 13 games as Bob Welch survived some early trouble and went on to pitch an eight-hitter.

"The time to get Welch was early and we couldn't do it," said Houston Manager Bob Lillis. "After he got out of trouble in the first inning, he just got tougher and tougher for us to hit. Welch just pitched an outstanding game."

In other National League action, Montreal beat New York 6-4, Chicago stopped St. Louis 6-2 and San Diego tripped San Francisco 8-2.

Welch, 2-2, struck out five and walked one in his first route-going performance of the season.

Houston got its run off Welch in the first inning when Kevin Bass singled, stole second, moved to third on a passed ball and came home on a double by Jose Cruz. Mike Marshall got the run back for the Dodgers in the second inning with his fifth home run of the year and his third in two games.

But the Dodgers took the lead in the third as Dave Anderson singled and was sacrificed to second by Welch. Anderson moved to third on Steve Sax's single and scored on a sacrifice fly by Bill Russell.

"Once I got past the first inning, I felt pretty good," said Welch. "I got rolling, my rhythm picked up, and I kept getting stronger and stronger as he came went on."

Welch lost a 3-0 decision to the Astros in Houston last week, when Knepper pitched a four-hitter, but cited an effective fastball and an improved curveball as the reasons for the turnaround Monday night.

"I thought he pitched pretty well both nights," Los Angeles Manager Tommy Lasorda said of Welch. "All

I know is he was consistently strong and was able to pitch out of trouble. Bobby's stuff was as good in the ninth inning as it was in the first."

Expos 6, Mets 4
Tim Wallach slugged a three-run homer to erase a sixth-inning deficit and Charlie Lea scattered eight hits over the first seven innings as Montreal defeated New York.

The Expos trailed 4-3 when Wallach, who is tied for the NL lead with five homers, lined a 3-2 pitch from Walt Terrell, 2-1, over the left field fence at Montreal's Olympic Stadium. Terrell had walked Andre Dawson and hit Gary Carter with a pitch after getting the first out in the inning.

Lea, 3-1, walked five and struck out two before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the seventh. Gary Lucas worked the final inning for his third save.

Darryl Strawberry's two-run single off Lea, his sixth hit in his last six at-bats, boosted New York to a 4-0 lead in the third. But the Expos scored three times with five hits against Terrell in their half of the third.

Cubs 6, Cardinals 2
Scott Sanderson gave up only two hits in seven innings of work and Larry Bowa drove in three runs with a single, a squeeze bunt and a grounder, leading Chicago over St. Louis.

Sanderson, 2-1, walked two and struck out none before leaving for a pinch hitter during a three-run uprising in the Chicago eighth. Lee Smith pitched the last two innings for the Cubs, allowing three hits.

Asked about the Cubs' surprising 9-6 start, Bowa said: "We can do a lot of things. We're running, we're stealing; we don't just rely on home runs, we're being aggressive. As long as we do those things, we're going to win."

Padres 8, Giants 2
Graig Nettles drove in three runs with a homer and a single and Andy Hawkins and Dave Dravecky teamed up on a six-hitter as San Diego downed San Francisco.

Hawkins, 2-0, who started the game with a 9.90 earned run average, gave up five hits and three of his six walks in the first three innings when the Giants took a 2-1 lead. But the 24-year-old right-hander combined with Dravecky to blank the Giants the rest of the way. Hawkins pitched eight innings, giving up five hits.

In contrast to Hawkins, rookie right hander Jeff Robinson started for the Giants with a league-leading 0.95 ERA but the Padres hammered him for seven hits and seven runs before he left with one out in the fourth. San Diego, rebounding from a 15-7 drubbing by the Dodgers Sunday, scored four runs in the third and added three more in the fourth to take command 8-2.

Northern Nash Gains Finals

SNOW HILL — Northern Nash High School moved into the championship game of the Greene Central Softball Tournament yesterday, but had to wait until today to learn who its opponent would be.

Greene Central and Havelock gained the lower bracket semifinal game, but were unable to complete play yesterday and were to finish that game this morning.

Northern Nash gained the semifinals with a 22-0 romp over North Pitt and a 6-0 victory over North Lenoir. North Lenoir nipped Southern Wayne in the opening game, 7-5.

In the lower bracket, Greene Central advanced with a 9-0 win over D.H. Conley, while Havelock defeated Plymouth, 16-3.

In the North Pitt-Northern Nash contest, Northern put the game away with four runs in the first, then exploded for 13 in the second. The Lady Knights added two more in the fourth and three in the fifth to wrap it up.

Alexis Scott led the North Pitt hitting with two.

Greene Central took the lead over Conley in the first inning with a single run. The Lady Rams added four each in the third and fifth innings for the nine-run total. Sharon Croom led the Greene Central hitting with three, while Patronell Davis added two. Karla McClawhorn led the Valkyries with three, while Mechio Kornegay had two.

In the losers' bracket games, Southern Wayne routed North Pitt, 6-0, and Conley topped Plymouth, 9-4.

North Pitt saw Southern put the game away with five runs in the first inning. The other run came in the fifth. No one had more than one hit for Conley.

Plymouth scored first getting two runs in the first. Conley rallied with two in the fourth, but Plymouth went back out with two in the fifth. The Valkyries then tied it again with two in the sixth, then came up with five in the seventh to win it.

Karen Barrett led Conley with three hits, including a two-run homer in the fourth. Kornegay added two hits.

Today, in addition to the Greene Central-Havelock semifinal, Plymouth and North Pitt meet for seventh place; Southern Wayne and Conley meet for fifth; North Lenoir and the Greene-Havelock loser meet for third and the Greene-Havelock winner meets Northern Nash for the championship.

Manning Has 200 Average

Bowler James Manning set a new house record for Hillcrest Lanes, becoming the first ever to average 200 for a season.

Manning, bowling in the Men's City League, finished the year with a 200 average over 96 games and 32 weeks. He has been bowling for nine years.

Manning's fete marked the first time in the 22 year history of Hillcrest Lanes that anyone has averaged 200 or more.

Five other members of the league finished the year with 190 or better. They included Earl Sermons and Carlos Mercer, both with 195 averages; Ed Deihl, 194; and Gary Watson and Linwood Worthington, boty 191.

Miller Leads Women

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Cheryl Miller, who helped lead the University of Southern California to the NCAA title this season, heads the list of 17 finalists selected Monday for the 1984 U.S. Olympic women's basketball team.

The 12-member squad and five alternates will be chosen from the 17 finalists.

Olympic Coach Pat Summitt of Tennessee was scheduled to name the starters and alternates on Monday, but said that she was "in no rush to name the 12 final players."

The 17 players will practice under international rules at Colorado Springs starting Tuesday and continuing until next Monday, when Summitt is scheduled to announce her starting squad.

Other finalists joining Miller at forward are Cathy Boswell of Illinois State and Denise Curry of UCLA.

The guards are Patty Jo Hedges of Kentucky, Lynette Woodard of Kansas, Kim Mulkey of Louisiana Tech and Lea Henry of Tennessee.

The centers are Anne Donovan, Old Dominion; Janice Lawrence, Louisiana Tech, who's also expected to see action at forward; Cindy Noble, Tennessee; and Pam McGee, Southern Cal.

Guard La Taunya Pollard of Long Beach State, also was named to the team even though she suffered torn cartilage in her right knee Saturday night in the trials.

The five alternates chosen were guards Joyce Walker of Louisiana State, Teresa Edwards of Georgia and Kamie Ethridge of Texas, as well as centers Tresa Spaulding of Brigham Young and Carol Menken-Schaudt of Oregon State.

The squad for the Summer Olympics in Los Angeles features five members of the 1980 Olympic team. Donovan, Woodard, Noble, Curry, and Pollard were members of the team struck by the boycott of the Games in Moscow.

All the other players — except for Edwards and Ethridge — have participated in international play on U.S. national teams.

And except for Edwards and Ethridge, all the other members of the 1984 Olympic team were among 27 players invited to the tryouts, which began Friday.

The Amateur Basketball Association-USA also invited 79 other players from across the country to tryout for the team. The 106-player roster was cut to 21 on Sunday.

The ABA-USA women's games committee voted to expand the U.S. Olympic roster from 16 to 17 on Sunday after Pollard — the 1983 college player of the year — suffered her injury and was scheduled for arthroscopic surgery.

"Her performance up to the time of the injury was strong enough for consideration for selection to the group of 16," said committee chairwoman Lea Plarski.

New Women's League To Open

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Bill Byrne, commissioner of the new Women's American Basketball Association, says the fledgling professional league will concentrate on the East, Midwest and South in its first season this fall.

The new league officially began operations today with its first player draft of 14 rounds in a downtown Columbus hotel.

Of the first-year alignment, Byrne said, "That's where all the talent and interest seems to be. We're expecting to go to the West Coast in 1985."

Byrne helped form and served as a commissioner for two years of the Women's Basketball League which folded in 1981.

"I started it but I didn't fold it," he said. "Why does he believe the pro sport will survive now?"

"I think the time is right. Look at the growth of the women's college programs. And the Olympics will be a big help. Of the 15 players on the U.S. Olympic team, only four are underclasswomen," Byrne said Monday in the league's headquarters in Columbus.

"Wouldn't it be nice for them to bring the gold medal with them into our new league?" he asked a sports writer.

Ken Boggs, the new league's attorney, disclosed Columbus will be one of the 1984 franchises in the WABA.

"It was firmed up today," he said Monday of the Ohio team. He listed the other charter members as New York, New Jersey, Boston, Baltimore, Atlanta, Chicago, Dallas and Houston.

Boggs, however, said the first draft was to be conducted among only eight teams. He would not say which city would be asked to sit out 1984 and join the league in 1985.

Byrne said Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle are expected to join in 1985.

"We'll play a fall schedule of 22 to 30 games this fall and then play a summer schedule next year," he said.

Wilson Retires

Greenville native Dr. Richard C. (Carlton) Wilson recently announced his retirement from the University of West Florida at a banquet held in his honor.

DR. RICHARD C. WILSON

Wilson, a member of the university's education faculty, was lauded at the banquet for his contributions to reading education and was told that the reading center he started 17 years ago at West Florida was being named after him.

The son of Myrtle H. Wilson of Greenville and the late R.C. Wilson, he holds a bachelor's degree in mathematics and social science from East Carolina University. Wilson has published several books and articles and is an honorary life member of the Florida State Reading Council. He was also named University of West Florida professor emeritus, the fifth faculty member to be given the honor.

Wilson and his wife, Peggy, live in Pensacola and have two children, Richard Jr. and Sherrie.

Assault Charge

Greenville police have arrested Samuel Latham, 62, of Baltimore on assault charges in connection with a shooting incident here on April 15.

Officer L.E. White said Robert Lee Hooker, 62, of Portsmouth, Va., was shot in the hip with a .22 caliber pistol following a dispute over money at 402B Darden Dr. White said Latham was taken into custody about 8:15 p.m. Monday.

Guilty Plea To Fraud

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Seventeen people pleaded guilty to food stamp fraud in U.S. District Court on Monday and were ordered to repay the government the amount they bilked.

Two defendants were sentenced to two-year prison terms and the others received suspended sentences.

Judge Woodrow Jones ordered the defendants, who received suspended sentences, to also pay a fine, serve probation and pay court-appointed attorneys' fees.

Jones ordered one woman to take immediate legal action against the father of her youngest son for support payments, so that she could remove herself from another welfare roll.

"You're getting $202 from the government when he is able to work and provide support?" Jones asked Phyllis Jackson, 41. "That is just hideous. I'll put you on probation under the condition that you take a warrant out against him by sundown."

Jones later amended the order and gave the woman until Tuesday night to swear the warrant after learning state offices were closed Monday.

"I realize there seems to be a feeling across the land that anything you can get from the government is all right, that everybody's doing it and you can lie," said Jones. "But that's not the law."

"Maybe there's not enough enforcement. But sooner or later it's going to catch up. And that's what has happened here."

Acid Rain Said Reaching Sunbelt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acid rain is spreading into Sunbelt states, the National Wildlife Federation says in a new report.

The report, which collected data on acid rain in 21 states, showed Florida and California are suffering along with such northern states as Pennsylvania and Ohio, where the problem has been recognized longer.

Acid rain is a chemical reaction in the atmosphere formed by a mixture of sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides released by auto exhausts and industrial smokestacks. Environmentalists and others say it is killing plants and wildlife and ruining lakes and waterways.

Two Collisions Here Yesterday

An estimated $10,275 in damages resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Monday.

Police said Apolinar Arellano of Parrish, Fla., was charged with driving while impaired and with no operator's license following investigation of an 8:47 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 250 feet west of the 14th Street intersection.

In addition to Arellano, drivers of the other vehicles involved in the mishap were listed as Andrew Wade Trask Jr. of 106 Graham St. and Tay Marlin James of Bethel.

IS TOBACCO IMPORTANT TO PITT COUNTY AND EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA?

JIM MARTIN THINKS SO. CONGRESSMAN MARTIN EFFECTIVELY FOUGHT TO REDUCE THE FEDERAL TOBACCO TAX TO HELP OUR FARMERS AND THE TOBACCO INDUSTRY. HIS LEADERSHIP TO REDUCE THE TOBACCO TAX WON PRAISE FROM REP. WALTER B. JONES (D-N.C.), REP. CHARLES ROSE (D-N.C.) AND FROM THE TOBACCO INSTITUTE.

JIM MARTIN HAS DONE THE JOB IN WASHINGTON, JUST THINK WHAT HE CAN DO IN RALEIGH!

The Honorable
James G. Martin
U. S. House of Representatives
Washington, D. C. 20515

Dear Jim:

Every man and woman in the tobacco industry should thank you for the herculean effort you made recently on their behalf before the House Ways & Means Committee. In a bipartisan effort with five of your colleagues from tobacco states, you were able to achieve what few here in Washington would have thought possible -- a commitment in the House of Representatives to reduce the federal cigarette tax from 16 to 12 cents if that tax is extended beyond October 1985.

The doubling of the federal cigarette tax has had a devastating effect on the tobacco industry. Cigarette consumption dropped over five percent last year, to its lowest level in nine years. Thousands of tobacco workers were forced out of work or found themselves on a reduced work schedule.

Lower demand for cigarettes is also affecting leaf sales. The national marketing quota for flue-cured tobacco has been cut 11.5 percent; burley quota, cut 10 percent. With your continued leadership and support, we can help change that situation.

As you know, The Tobacco Institute and its member companies believe the federal cigarette tax should revert back to 8 cents per pack as currently required by law. That does not diminish, however, our admiration and appreciation for what you were able to achieve in the House.

We will press forward with our fight to reduce the cigarette tax in the Senate.

With all good wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,

Horace R. Kornegay

Photographer Ansel Adams Dead At 82

CARMEL, Calif. (AP) — Using nothing but a camera and the scenery around him, Ansel Adams raised public consciousness about the environment while carving an exalted place for himself in the history of photography, said colleagues mourning his death.

Friends, students and fellow photographers across the country on Monday remembered Adams as a champion of environmental protection and a photographer whose rare vision will endure.

Adams died of heart failure Sunday night at a Monterey hospital where he had been since Friday. His wife of 56 years, Virginia, was at his side. He was 82.

"The greatest impact he had on 20th-century photography was the role he played in establishing photography as a fine art," said David Featherstone, executive associate of the 12,000-member Friends of Photography, which Adams helped found.

Those images include "Monolith, the Face of Half Dome" and "Moonrise, Hernandez, New Mexico," considered by many to be landmarks of 20th century art. "Moonrise" sold several years ago for $71,500, the highest price ever paid for a photographic print, and his books and folios of photographs have sold more than 1 million copies, making him a millionaire.

Adams' work "changed our sense of what the physical world was like," said John Szarkowski, director of the photography department at the Museum of Modern Art in New York, which Adams also helped found.

"Before, people thought mountains were made out of stone. He demonstrated they were made out of light and were never the same twice."

Born Feb. 20, 1902, Adams snapped his first photograph at age 14 during a family vacation to Yosemite National Park. He had ambitions of becoming a pianist, but exposure to the work of Paul Strand in 1930 convinced him to pursue photography as an art and a career.

"I felt those works," said Adams, who developed a concept called "visualization."

"In my mind's eye, I am visualizing how a particular revelation of sight and feeling will appear on a print," he said in a magazine interview last year. "If what I see in my mind excites me, there is a good chance it will make a good photograph."

"His impact and influence on the field was both as an artist and as a leader for the recognition and appreciation of photography as an art form," said James L. Enyeart, director of the University of Arizona's Center for Creative Photography, which Adams helped found.

Adams willed all his negatives to the center with instructions that they be printed by advanced students, "not just locked up in a case."

Adams, who lived in Carmel, taught photography almost from the beginning of his career, passing along his Zone System of exposure calculation, now a staple of serious study of photography. He wrote 40 books, and an estimated 5,000 students have attended his seminars and workshops.

Adams' devotion to his art was matched only by his passion for protecting his beloved wilderness. A member of the Sierra Club board of directors for 37 years, Adams was an outspoken foe of the Reagan administration, which he called the "greatest threat to our environment ever."

"His pictures and books moved millions to save the Earth's wild places. The Earth has lost a great friend," said Ron Rudolph, assistant executive director of the San Francisco-based environmental group Friends of the Earth.

The bearded, bespectacled

Adams, who recently testified before Congress on the need to preserve the California coastline from development, had environmental issues on his mind even as he lay in his hospital bed, said William Turnage, executive director of the Wilderness Society and Adams' former business manager.

"He felt that the whole Reagan administration threatened the integrity of what had been his life's work," Turnage said. "He said to me on Friday when he was beginning to understand that he possibly wasn't going to make it, 'I just don't want to go until we get Reagan out of office.'"

Urea Accidentally Spills Into Stream

MILLS RIVER, N.C. (AP) — A tanker truck loaded with about 4,800 gallons of solution containing nitrogen overturned, dumping most of its contents into a creekbed that feeds into the drinking water supply for about 55,000 homes and businesses.

But the dumping into Mills River was not dangerous, according to officials at the scene.

Shortly after noon, Hendersonville Water Filtration Plant officials were notified of the spill and quit pulling water from the river, said Forrest Lyda, plant operator.

None of the urea, which has a 30 percent nitrogen content and is used as fertilizer, escaped into the drinking water. Lyda said the chemical, which is not toxic or flammable but will burn the eyes, evaporates quickly.

About 4.5 million gallons of water are pumped from Mills River daily and 2 million come from an alternate mountain basin near North Mills River Road, Lyda said.

The Hendersonville water plant serves Henderson and Polk counties and seven or eight towns from Rowah to Fletcher and clean to Lyda," he said.

Claudette Colbert Honored For Work In 64 Movies

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Claudette Colbert, whose career on stage and screen spans more than half a century, was honored by the Film Society of Lincoln Center for her work in 64 films.

The gala event Monday, attended by such stars as Lillian Gish, Fred MacMurray and Ray Milland, kicked off at Avery Fisher Hall with clips of Miss Colbert's films and tributes by some of her peers. Afterward, the glittery gathering moved across Lincoln Center to the New York State Theater for a party. "I've met and worked with practically everybody in the business," Milland said at the tribute. "Miss Colbert is the most delightful one of them all, and I love her."

Colbert, 80, interrupted rehearsals in London with Rex Harrison for the play "Aren't We All?" to attend.

Among the film clips was the silly and sexy hitchhiking scene with Clark Gable in the 1934 gem "It Happened One Night." That film won an Academy Award for both actors and director Frank Capra. There was also the pool-side milk bath in the 1933 film "The Sign of the Cross," and Miss Colbert being unfurled from a rug in the 1934 epic "Cleopatra."

Miss Colbert, who entered a box wearing a red gown and soon donned large dark glasses, shook her head and laughed at the end of nearly every series of film clips. With her heart-shaped face, small waist, high cheekbones and curly bangs, she looked amazingly like her movies' younger self.

"I knew her way back when — during the Revolutionary War," said actress Arlene Francis. She called Miss Colbert "a lovely, decent, marvelous woman," adding, "It has replenished my life, knowing her."

Others who spoke were George Rose, who acted with Miss Colbert and Rex Harrison in "The Kingfisher" on Broadway in 1978; Kitty Carlisle Hart; choreographer Jerome Robbins; Claire Trevor; and producer John Logan.

Among those in the audience were Joan Bennett, Hermione Gingold, Miss Gish, Patrick O'Neal, Polly Bergen and Amanda Plummer.

Miss Colbert spoke last and briefly, thanking those who spoke and attended. After seeing the film clips, she said, she realized "I had all the best-looking men on the screen."

Something Unorthodox In Public Television's Show

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Give David Fishelson and Zoe Zinman credit for attempting something new, and unorthodox, with "City News," tonight on public television's "American Playhouse."

The result is an hour of visual, and frequently aural, images that somehow converge in an amusing, awkwardly charming story about the editor of an underground newspaper and his secret desire to draw a cartoon strip.

An actor named Elliot Crown plays Tom Domino, the editor and publisher of The Other Paper, a small weekly on New York's Lower East Side. Crown, in his film debut, looks and talks like Jeff Goldblum.

Remember Goldblum (recently, "The Right Stuff" and "The Big Chill") as the rock critic in "Between the Lines," the 1977 theatrical film about a small Boston newspaper?

The struggle of a small, independent newspaper for survival might be considered a common theme, though Crown's resemblance to Goldblum is the only real — though no doubt unintended — tie between the films.

That, and the fact both were relatively low-budget.

The folks who made "City News" met while studying film theory in Paris in 1979 and began production on the movie two years later, with $5,000 that Miss Zinman received from a long-pending lawsuit.

The film cost less than $100,000 to make, but it's a neat package, nonetheless. Alas, there is only one genuinely laughable (slapstick) scene in the film, though Fishelson and Miss Zinman seem more inclined to sophisticated humor (naughty language).

The funny moment comes with Domino calling on banks in search of "quick cash" to save his newspaper. "The most I ever got was a handshake ... when they knew I was there," he says. He's shown in a darkened room, hand extended, pumping up and down, while a banker works unaware of the editor's presence.

In any case, "The Other Paper," Domino says, "was going to be my shot at the big time. ... I wasn't out to get popular, just a Pulitzer."

He meets Daphne (Nancy Cohen) in a bar, and they strike up a conversation:

Daphne: "So what is it you do? ... No, don't tell me."
Tom: "What?"
Daphne: "Suffer."

As they continue to talk (Daphne: "By the way, no." Tom: "No?") Daphne: "No." Tom: "No what?" Daphne: "No way.") Domino realizes that the young woman will be the inspiration for the comic strip he has always wanted to draw.

He rushes back to his office and starts work on the cartoon, which quickly becomes a popular success.

"To keep the strip continuing," he says, "I had to make sure of one thing ... that my muse didn't get away. ... I started drawing what happened between her and me, the day before. That wasn't bad for a guy who was not an idea man."

Despite the popularity of the strip, The Other Paper is about to go bankrupt, and some members of the staff complain that Domino is spending too much time with Daphne, and not enough trying to save the rag. Then, one night, $20,000 arrives in a bologna and cheese sandwich.

"Not only was the paper saved," Domino says, "but they forgot the beverage."

Business picks up, and, the editor declares, "My life had gotten so intense, I didn't need Daphne to write the strip anymore."

Daphne complains ("You put me in your comics, but I can't even talk to you"), to no avail, and the years pass. The story takes an unexpected turn, and then a novel twist, and the surprise ending seems to bring the whole thing together.

Music plays an important part in this eccentric play, along with the cartoons created especially for "City News." It's an artful effort, and worth a look.

Filmmakers Face Trial Over Deaths

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge's decision that three filmmakers should stand trial in the deaths of three actors on the set of the movie "Twilight Zone" could set a dangerous precedent that would send "thousands of innocent people" to jail, a defense attorney says.

But Municipal Court Judge Brian Crahan's ruling Monday in the deaths of Vic Morrow and two children, killed when a helicopter crashed amid special effects explosions, won praise from a lawyer for the family of one of the victims.

"There are certain limits beyond which none of us have the right to go for reality and authenticity. Just because we are portraying the war doesn't mean we have to kill anybody," said attorney Jerome Berchin, who has sued the moviemakers and Warner Bros. for $200 million in the death of Renee Chen, 6.

Crahan ordered director John Landis, special effects coordinator Paul Stewart and helicopter pilot Dorcay Wingo to stand trial on charges of involuntary manslaughter in the deaths of Morrow, 53, Renee Chen, and Myca Dinh Le, 7. However, the judge dismissed charges against two other filmmakers, associate producer George Folsey and unit production chief Dan Allingham.

The deaths occurred July 23, 1982, when the helicopter crashed on the three actors during filming of a Vietnam War scene about 40 miles north of Los Angeles. The scene was being filmed for the first of four segments, each with a different director, that made up "Twilight Zone: The Movie," which was released last summer. Landis' attorney, Harland Braun, maintained that the accident was caused by misfiring of special effects explosions by a worker who was not charged. He said Crahan's reasoning means that "if someone under you does something wrong ... you are responsible for that."

Such reasoning "would make Ronald Reagan responsible for the 200 people (U.S. servicemen) killed in Beirut," Braun told reporters after the ruling.

"If this principle is established ... our whole system will collapse. Thousands and thousands of innocent people will be in jail," he said.

The attorney said he would ask a Superior Court judge to set aside Crahan's decision, which followed a lengthy preliminary hearing that ended April 9. Any trial would be held in Superior Court.

Crahan said evidence indicated that Landis, Stewart and Wingo were criminally responsible for the circumstances leading to the fatal crash.

"Each one of these three, acting on his own and in consort with each other, created an unreasonable exposure of harm to the persons who ultimately died as a result of the helicopter crash," the judge said.

Stewart was responsible as "ultimate arbiter of the special effects," and Wingo "knowingly hovered his helicopter" so close to the explosions "as to create a known risk of harm to anyone within the danger zone of the crash," the judge said.

Probable Virus Causing AIDS Discovered

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers are gearing up production of the virus that appears to cause AIDS in an effort to have a blood screening test for the mysterious disease widely available within six months.

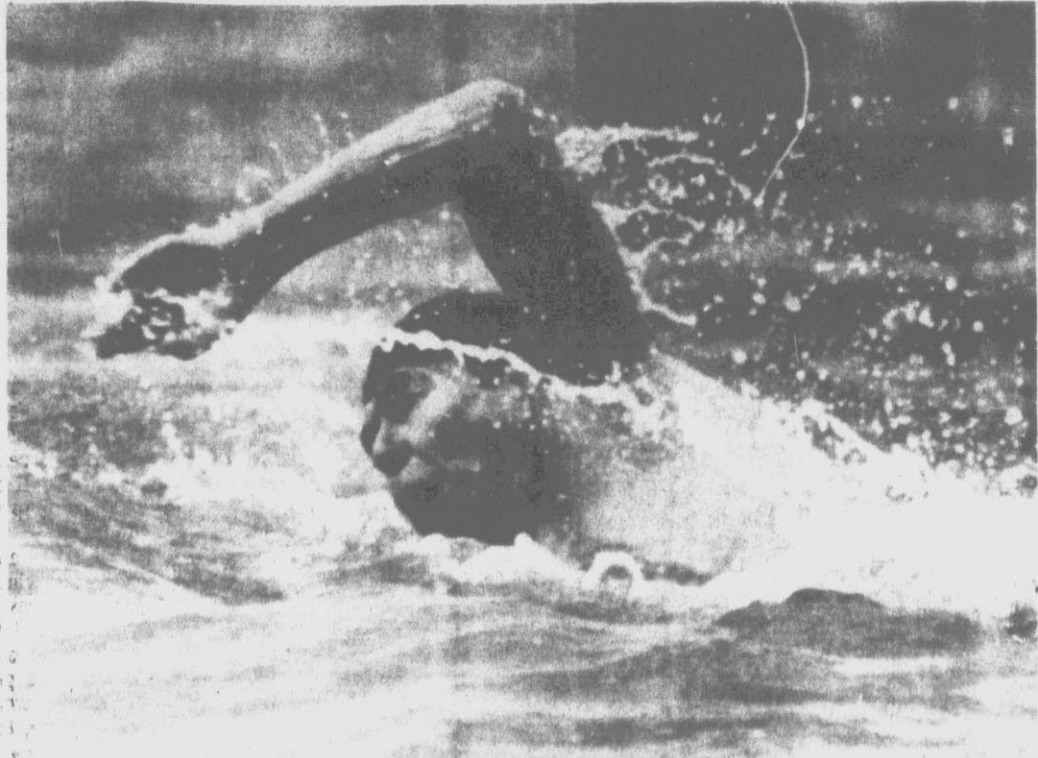

Officials announced on Monday that government researchers found a virus that probably causes the debilitating and deadly breakdown of the body's immune system known as acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS.
The officials made it clear that scientists have not discovered a cure for AIDS and acknowledged that any treatment that eventually results from identification of the virus may come too late for those currently afflicted with the deadly disease.

Scientists at the National Institutes of Health, led by Dr. Robert Gallo of the National Cancer Institute, were credited with isolating the virus they call HTLV-3 and devising a process to routinely detect and grow it.

Health officials said their evidence that HTLV-3 is the link to AIDS is so firm that they consider the results a remarkable achievement after only three years of research.
"The NCI work provides the proof we need that the cause of AIDS has been found," Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler told a news briefing.

used to attract and identify antibodies formed in the body by a similar viral infection.
Mrs. Heckler said the blood test allows identification of AIDS victims with nearly 100 percent certainty.
By screening donors and checking supplies of blood, which are suspected of being one way the virus is transmitted, "we should be able to ensure that blood for transfusion is free of AIDS," Mrs. Heckler said.

Gallo said he believes HTLV-3 may be identical to a virus called lymphadenopathy associated virus (LAV), which was discovered last year by French researchers at the Pasteur Institute in Paris.
The scientist said his group has worked closely with the French researchers and, despite some recent "misunderstandings," still is collaborating with them. He denied that his group was trying to steal credit from the French for finding the virus.

headquarters at the Kahala Hilton Hotel, during his stay in Honolulu Monday. (AP Laserphoto)

AIDS results in the collapse of the immune system, which defends the body against disease. Victims become susceptible to rare cancers, pneumonia and other infections that lead to disability and death.
The ability to mass-produce the virus opens the door to developing a vaccine to prevent AIDS and also has resulted in a test to detect evidence of the virus in blood.
Developing an anti-viral vaccine is difficult, but Gallo said it might be possible to isolate a portion of the virus, using genetic research techniques, that could stimulate immunity without causing the disease. Authorities said such a vaccine could be available for testing in two or three years.

Dr. Edward N. Brandt, assistant HHS secretary for health, said, however, that the blood test could be widely available within six months. With the blood test, proteins obtained from the laboratory virus are

At the National Cancer Institute's Frederick Cancer Research Facility in Maryland, researchers are developing methods to increase production of the viral proteins needed for the blood test.
Brandt said the problem is switching from making pint quantities to the thousands of gallons needed for an estimated 23 million blood tests a year.
More than 3 million transfusions are given annually and much more blood is used to make blood products such as those used to treat hemophilia and other blood disorders, he said.

Dr. Alfred J. Katz, executive director of National Red Cross Blood Services, praised discovery of the virus and said his organization is anxious to evaluate the newly described test "as soon as possible."
Brandt said the latest developments do not offer much immediate hope for those already diagnosed as having AIDS, a number now estimated to be more than 2,400.

"What we have at the moment is not of particularly great benefit to those with the disease right now," Brandt said. However, he added, the blood test should help researchers define the early courses of the incurable disease and possibly find a way to intervene at an earlier stage.

He also raised the distant possibility of using HTLV-3 to develop super antibodies that might be injected into victims to fight an AIDS infection.
According to Gallo and papers outlining the work of his team, the virus appears to be a member of a family of viruses called human T-cell leukemia virus (HTLV) previously suspected of having a role in AIDS.

U.S. Plot To Pravda

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party newspaper Pravda said today that the incident at the Libyan Embassy in London was part of a planned provocation coinciding with an anti-Libyan campaign by the United States.

Pravda reported Britain's decision to sever diplomatic relations with Libya because of the April 17 shooting incident, in which a British policewoman was killed and 11 Libyan dissidents wounded as they protested outside the embassy.

Pravda noted that Libya has denied its embassy staff was involved in the shootings.
"All this, as it transpires now, fully fit into the framework of a scenario worked out in advance for a large-scale provocation, the masterminds of which should be sought not only in London," said Pravda.

"The provocation obviously coincided with the step-up of the anti-Libyan campaign in the U.S.A. Literally on the next day, U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz ... stated that the Libyans allegedly sow sedition around the world and that everyone should realize the fact."
Pravda said that was "a transparent hint to London on how it should act."

Gubernatorial Candidates Share Heated TV Debate

By The Associated Press
Six Democratic gubernatorial candidates took part in another debate on statewide television in Chapel Hill, and though no new stands were announced, the discussion proved lively and at times, heated.

Gilmore said that Faircloth's claim of attracting 180,000 new jobs to the state is tainted by his failure to raise the state's average wage level — the lowest in the nation.
He accused Faircloth of attracting out-of-state companies to North Carolina by implying that they would have cheap labor costs here.
"This is a shame and a disgrace," Gilmore said.

Participants in the Monday debate included Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten, former state Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth, former state Rep. Thomas O. Gilmore of Julian, Lt. Gov. James C. Green, Insurance Commissioner John R. Ingram and former Charlotte Mayor H. Edward Knox.

"Would you tell me which ones you want to send back out of state that we have brought in?" Faircloth responded.
Democrats Carl Stewart and Bob Jordan, candidates for lieutenant governor, renewed attacks on each other Monday during a forum taped for statewide broadcast on cable television stations.

Those candidates also participated in a debate sponsored by the N.C. Cable Television Association.
The sharpest exchange of the evening came when Gilmore called Faircloth's seven years as commerce secretary a failure "based on his own standards."

Stewart, of Gastonia, former state House speaker, said that Jordan was a member of the "good old boy club ... (that's) causing misery for the rest of the General Assembly, and Mr. Jordan is their candidate."
"They found him; they've promoted him; they're desperate to get him elected," said Stewart.

Chapel Hill An Educated Town

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Chapel Hill has more highly educated residents per capita than any other city in the nation, says a study released by the U.S. Census Bureau.

The statistics, published in the 1983 County and City Data Book, showed that 69 percent of the town's 13,934 residents age 25 and older had at least an undergraduate college degree. The town's 1980 population was 32,421.

Most of the cities that ranked near the top were small towns built around major universities, such as Chapel Hill, where the University of North Carolina is located.

Others among the top five, in order of percentage of residents over 25 with degrees, are East Lansing, Mich., home of Michigan State University; Davis, Calif., home of the University of California at Davis, 61 percent; State College, Pa., where Pennsylvania State University is located, 60 percent; and Ann Arbor, Mich., with the University of Michigan, 56 percent.

Vote More Sums To World's Fair

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana's House of Representatives approved and passed on to the Senate a financial bailout plan to keep construction going at the site of this year's World's Fair.

The vote was 66-29 in favor of lending the fair $10 million. Opponents criticized the loan at a time when fiscal belt-tightening has the state facing cutbacks. The measure goes to the Senate today.
The fair, due to open May 12, has had trouble meeting its construction bills for the $94 million project.

Skull-Crushing Is New Sweet Treat

By CHRIS DAHL
Associated Press Writer

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — The importer of Skull Crushers was explaining the method European kids have developed for eating the macabre candy his company is introducing to the New York metropolitan area this week.

"They squeeze them on the sides so the blood comes squirting through the eyes," Larry Albert said, quite seriously.

Albert said he doesn't believe there's anything wrong with the concept of a thumb-size white chocolate skull that oozes a blood-like strawberry cream through the mouth and eyes when pinched.

"It's a fun thing," he said Monday.

The candies, which cost a nickel apiece, will be sold starting this week in New York City, parts of New Jersey and southern Connecticut.

If they prove popular, Albert said, he'll try to sell them nationally.

R.L. Albert & Son Inc., a family business which has operated out of Greenwich for 60 years, is importing the grisly sweets from Alma Confectionary Ltd. of Kirkcaldy, Scotland. The inventor of the candy was not Dr. Frankenstein, but the Scottish company's sales director, Mario Maciocia, whom Albert described as "kind of a nut."

Albert said his company is also trying with the idea of bringing another novelty candy into the American market soon.

"A little squiggly worm — they look like fishing lures," he said, dangling the colored candy worm.

In America, he said, they would be known as Squirmly Worms.

"We don't think kids are actually going to go out and eat worms because they eat these," he said.

He admitted, however, that some people might question Skull Crushers.

"A lot of people have a lot of different ideas and ways of looking at things, and I understand that it's possible for people to look at it in a negative way," he said. "But I think it's much more fun and happy to look at in a positive way."

Albert said there have been "relatively few" complaints about Skull Crushers in Europe, where they have been available for about a year and a half. More than 50 million of the novelty sweets have been sold in Europe, Australia and Africa, he said.

"The spirit of the candy is for kids to have fun," he said. "Kids see

Says Candidacy Adding To Pride

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — The head of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People says the Rev. Jesse Jackson will not be the Democratic presidential nominee but his candidacy is giving blacks pride.

Benjamin Hooks said Monday that it will be a long time before a black person is elected president, primarily because many whites still believe blacks are incapable of holding public office.

Even if Jackson does not win the nomination, he can influence the party platform and help interest more blacks in the November election, Hooks said.

Hooks said the NAACP hopes to register 500,000 new voters before the election. He said the NAACP registration drive, which began last October, has already signed up 300,000 new potential voters.

Vietnam Veterans Say Cambodians Promise Effort To Find War Dead

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven Vietnam veterans, the first to visit Cambodia since the Vietnam War, say they've been promised that the government in Phnom Penh will undertake its first efforts to locate the remains of 82 Americans missing in action in that country.

Robert O. Muller, a wounded Marine lieutenant who is the president and founder of the 17,000-member Vietnam Veterans of America, also said officials in Vietnam told them they have the remains of eight Americans ready to be turned over to U.S. authorities.

So far, Vietnam has returned the remains of 88 Americans but 2,490 servicemen, mostly fliers, are still listed as missing in action in Southeast Asia. The United States and Cambodia have had no contact on the subject.

In a telephone interview, Muller discussed a 15-day visit he and other members of the organization made to Southeast Asia earlier this month. A delegation from the group had visited Vietnam once before, last year, but the veterans were the first to visit Cambodia since the war ended.

In addition to the missing Americans, they discussed the resettlement of children fathered by American servicemen during the war, the effects of Agent Orange on the Vietnamese people and cultural exchanges.

Muller decried the U.S. refusal to establish diplomatic relations with Vietnam and American support for awarding Cambodia's seat in the United Nations to the Khmer Rouge element led by Pol Pot — a government he accused of genocide on an unparalleled scale.

He said the delegation of veterans was taken to a mass grave on the outskirts of Phnom Penh containing the bodies of 30,000 to 40,000 Cambodians. He said they saw stacks of skulls, each bashed in at the identical place at the back of the head.

"You could still see the blindfolds, the hands still tied behind backs," Muller said. "It was unbelievable. You would hear the bones crunch as you walked along."

Among those killed and buried in the field in 1977 were two or three Americans, Muller said he was told.

The group also visited a prison where, he said, more than 20,000 Cambodians were tortured and killed by Pol Pot's forces between 1975 and 1978, when Vietnam invaded and installed its Cambodian allies in control of much of the country.

"These lunatics took photographs of their victims before and after they tortured them," Muller said of the Khmer Rouge. "We went through room after room after room where all four walls were covered with photographs of their victims. Everywhere you looked, there were shackles and devices to torture that were as barbaric as you could imagine."

"What angered us, given this evidence, is that the U.S. government still recognized Pol Pot as the legitimate government of Cambodia," Muller said. "To us, this is immoral and an outrage. It goes against humanity."

Among the pictures in the prison were those of three Americans who were killed in the prison, Muller said. He said people and documents at the prison identified two of them as Michael Scott Deeds, James William Clark and Lance McNamara, although, he said, the identity of McNamara was not certain.

He said he understood the three were on a yacht and picked up in Cambodian waters by the Khmer Rouge forces and forced to sign confessions before they were put to death. An Australian was also with them, he said.

He said Hun Sen, foreign minister in Cambodia, said he had no information about the 82 Americans missing in his country but promised to form a committee within his ministry to "gather whatever information could be gathered and explore what could be developed."

Muller said the Vietnamese government agreed to receive a delegation from his organization four times a year and that Sen said the group would be welcome to visit Cambodia at the same time.

Muller said the Cambodian foreign minister also said he would meet with U.S. officials despite the lack of diplomatic relations. And in every meeting with Vietnamese officials, the veterans were told of Vietnam's eagerness for normal relations with the United States, Muller said.

Old Launch Sites Are Historic Landmarks

MERRITT ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Eight abandoned launch sites at Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, the birthplace of America's space program, have been named national historic landmarks.

The Department of Interior's designation was announced Monday by U.S. Rep. Bill Nelson of Melbourne. The landmark status will require the U.S. Air Force to consult with a board of historians before changing the sites in any way.

After the rocket towers fell into disuse, they were first ignored. Then some were blasted with dynamite as hazards and others were sold for scrap metal. The rest are rusting away, and Nelson said he didn't know what plans the Air Force might have to prevent further decay.

The sites are launch complexes 5 and 6, where the two manned Mercury-Redstone flights began; complex 26, which is the Air Force Museum; and complex 13, where Atlas-Agenas launched deep space probes.

Also, complex 14, where manned Mercury-Atlas flights originated; complex 19, where manned Gemini flights were launched; complex 34, where Apollo-Saturn 1 and Apollo-Saturn 1B Earth-orbit test flights were launched; and the old Mercury mission control building.

In 1982, the Interior Department requested studies of whether the entire station should be made a landmark, Nelson said.

"As a result of these studies and working with the Air Force, the final decision was that specific launch pads would be made historic sites," he said.

"The reason that the whole thing wasn't designated a historic landmark is that once designated a historic landmark, it is a monumental effort to change it, and that just wouldn't do in an operational missile launch facility."

Among the sites sold for scrap were the towers at complex 19, where 20 men were placed into orbit; complex 14, where John Glenn started the first orbital flight by an American; and complex 34.

The remains of complex 26, where America's first satellite was launched into orbit, are in danger of rusting into oblivion. They are part of the Air Force Museum.

Don't bid the same cards twice. You simply give the opponents two chances to do the right thing.

We don't like West's preempt at any vulnerability — his hand is too strong defensively. East raised in the hope of shutting out the opponents, but it didn't help.

When North-South reached six hearts, East made the curious decision to sacrifice at six spades — he had no reason to think he could beat a grand slam. South's pass was forcing and North now not only decided that his side could make a grand slam, but he redoubled when West, for some reason known only to himself, chose to double.

All would have been well had West led the king of spades — that would have taken a vital entry off the board before declarer could put it to good use. Not surprisingly, however, West doubted that his side would get a spade trick — diamonds looked like a better proposition.

The hand did not take long to play. Declarer won the ace of diamonds, ran all his trumps and then took three rounds of clubs. This was the position:

Declarer led his last club, and West was squeezed to death. In the hope that his partner had the jack of spades, West let go of a spade honor. Declarer had been watching the spade spots carefully and he realized that only the king of spades was higher than the seven. So he discarded dummy's jack of diamonds and, when he then led a spade and the king appeared, the board's seven of spades became the fulfilling trick.

Fewer Attending Catholic Schools

BOSTON (AP) — About 58,000 fewer pupils are attending Roman Catholic schools in the United States this year from last, a decrease attributed to a drop in the number of school-age children, a new report says.

Catholic school enrollment continued falling this year, but the number of church schools has begun to level off, according to the report prepared for the National Catholic Educational Association's 81st meeting, which opened here Sunday.

During the 1983-84 school year, 31 of the 7,937 Catholic elementary schools and 1,474 secondary schools closed, compared with an average of 72 closings a year for the past seven years, the report said.

Evacuations of People in A Deraiment

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — About 250 people were evacuated from homes and businesses for about seven hours when a railroad tank car loaded with a flammable substance derailed and overturned near downtown Fayetteville.

Three railroad cars derailed shortly before noon Monday, including a leaking tanker carrying 30,000 gallons of methanol.

Assistant Fire Chief James "Bo" Strickland said no injuries were reported, but that an area of homes and businesses in a 1/2-mile radius around the crash had been evacuated when a small leak was detected in the tanker.

John McInnis, county emergency management coordinator, said residents were allowed to return to their homes about 7 p.m. He said the residents were never in serious danger but were evacuated as a precaution.

Charles Percy and his family were taking a nap in their frame home when police officers came to warn them to them.

"I didn't know what was going on," said Percy, 25. "All they said was that they were afraid it would blow up. They said there was enough stuff there to blow all of this up," indicating other homes on his street.

Percy later helped direct traffic away from the roped off section near his home.

"This is my good deed for the day," he said. Some employers at businesses in the area left quickly scribbled notes on the doors saying that work had been cancelled for the day.

"I sure hope they get this mess straightened out," said Lessie Burch as she closed her shop. "It kind of hurts business."

Strickland said the leak may have been due to a loose bolt.

He said methanol was dripping from the top of the tanker at a rate of about 66 drops a minute.

A team from Borden Chemical Co. of Fayetteville, where the tanker was bound, was called in to transfer methanol to another tanker, Strickland said. They later decided to bring in a crane to right the tanker and put it back on the rails instead of draining it.

McInnis said it was a potentially dangerous situation and that fire hoses had been rigged at each side of the tanker to be operated by remote control if necessary.

Witnesses said the tanker was lying on its side between two box cars.

By 7 p.m., emergency crews from Seaboard Coast Line had righted the overturned tanker and put a set of wheels beneath one end of it.

Strickland said the wheels stabilized the car and ended the safety threat.

McInnis said the evacuees were not sheltered, although two facilities were on standby in the event they were needed.

The cause of the Seaboard System derailment is under investigation.

The derailment came just two weeks after Marshville's 2,100 residents were evacuated when methanol-laden tank cars caught fire after a Seaboard System wreck in that Union County town.

Now Seafood Is Simulated

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — Food scientists at North Carolina State University are turning the state's biggest fish catch into a Japanese product that will simulate more expensive shellfish in taste, color and texture.

The product is called surimi, and flavored with a bit of lobster and crab, it can be made to resemble more expensive shellfish but cost much less. A Japanese company that makes simulated seafood from surimi is slated to open in Raleigh this month.

Last year, North Carolina fishermen landed 178 million pounds of menhaden. That represented about 73 percent of the fished fish catch for 1983. The catch was worth $6.2 million, however, and that was just 22 percent of the total $27.7 million paid to fishermen for fished fish last year.

Tyre C. Lanier, an associate professor of food science at N.C. State, wants to improve those prices by perfecting a process of turning menhaden into surimi, a bland, white product made of compressed fish meat that is washed heavily with water to remove oils.

The Japanese have long been adding bits of crab and lobster to surimi made from fish such as Alaskan pollock, a more efficient way to use that fish since much of the catch is too small to be filleted. By adding food coloring to simulate the pale, red tinges of shellfish and changing the texture, a frozen product close to the real thing can be produced.

Menhaden, Lanier said, makes excellent surimi. He added that small fish could be used in the ground fish product.

"Imagine what it would be like if we cut only steaks out of cows," said Lanier, who has been working on surimi for six years. "That's what we're doing with fish. It's a tremendous waste."

Surimi products have already turned up in dishes at local restaurants, Lanier said. For those dismayed by the possibility of finding simulated crab in their Newburg, Lanier had a reply.

"What's a hot dog? Fake meat? People like a hot dog because it's a hot dog, not a sirloin steak," he said.

Women Backpacking Across The Country

HAMLET, N.C. (AP) — Louise and Jan Rose, two widowed sisters-in-law who have "lots of grandchildren and great-grandchildren" between them, stopped briefly in Hamlet on their backpacking tour of America.

Louise, 57, of Orlando, Fla., and Jan, 62, of Las Vegas, Nev., said they started their trek in October and touched most of the western states "the first four or five months out," said Jan.

They are backpacking across the country "because we want to show that senior citizens can lead an active life, and really, a life that many people only dream of," she said.

Soviets Begin Afghanistan Spring Offensive

By STEPHEN R. WILSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Soviet forces have begun a spring offensive against an Afghan rebel stronghold, massing troops in the region and staging bombing raids to retaliate for destruction of a strategic bridge, Western diplomats said today.

In Washington, U.S. government sources also reported that an offensive was under way. They said the rebels, who are trying to topple the Soviet-installed regime in Afghanistan, dealt a severe blow to the Soviets' supply line by blowing up the bridge.

A Western diplomat, speaking in New Delhi on condition he not be identified by name or nationality, said Soviet aircraft began high-altitude bombing of the Panjsher Valley on Saturday. He said Soviet troops and equipment are massed in the area of Panjsher, a 70-mile long valley north of Kabul, the Afghan capital.

A year-long truce between the Soviets and a Panjsher rebel leader, Ahmad Chah Masud, expired in January, and a spring offensive was anticipated.

Six large-scale Soviet campaigns over the past three years have failed to wrest control of the valley, which Masoud uses as a base for guerrilla strikes in other regions.

The U.S. sources in Washington, speaking Monday on condition they not be identified, cited one estimate that up to 20,000 Soviet troops might be involved in the new offensive. They said 60 to 80 helicopter gunships and hundreds of tanks and armored vehicles have been readied for what was shaping up as the biggest campaign of the four-year war.

The diplomatic report in New Delhi said the bombing raids were prompted by the destruction by Masoud's forces of a major bridge on the highway linking Kabul and the Soviet Union.

On the night of April 16, the Moslem rebels blew up 20 yards of the concrete Mattock bridge over the Ghorband river south of the Salang Pass, the report said.

The Soviets reportedly tried to build a pontoon bridge, but the river, swollen by melting snow, washed it away.

The guerrillas also reportedly blew up three other bridges on both sides of the Salang Pass in mid-April and mined the highway between the bridge and the pass, the diplomats said.

Soviet troops and equipment began massing near Panjsher about two weeks ago and are digging artillery emplacements to bombard the valley, according to the report, which said there are now "thousands" of soldiers and more than 500 tanks and armored personnel carriers in the area.

It said few Afghan troops appear to be involved in the offensive because of their "increasing unreliability."

The U.S. sources in Washington said the destruction of Mattock Bridge and mining of alternate routes have forced the Soviets to airlift supplies.

It was unclear whether the bombing was being carried out by TU-16 Badger bombers spotted recently at bases in the Soviet Union near the Afghan border, specialists said. They said it also was uncertain if the Soviets have reinforced the estimated 108,000 troops already stationed in Afghanistan.

For four years, Soviets have waged offensives to try to crush the anti-Communist resistance. Guerrillas control much of the rugged, mountainous countryside. The Soviets have concentrated on securing major cities and their lines of communication.

While spring is the usual time for troop rotations, diplomats believe the number of Soviet soldiers, aircraft and armor is "significantly higher" than at any time since the Soviet intervention began in December 1979.

The rebel bombing of the bridges has aggravated Kabul's fuel shortage to the point that cars begin lining up at 5 p.m. for the next day's rations, the diplomatic report said. Over 400 vehicles reportedly were spotted at one gas station. The diplomatic report cited a "dramatic escalation" of guerrilla attacks in Kabul in the past 10 days. Last Wednesday, the diplomat said, rebels attacked a Soviet post between the Soviet Embassy and the Afghan presidential palace with rockets, mortars and machine guns. No report on damage or casualties was available. The same night, they attacked an Afghan military post in Kabul and appeared to inflict heavy damage and casualties, the report said.

Grab Tons Of Hashish

PARIS (AP) — Narcotics police staked out a shed in a village near Versailles and seized 6.6 tons of hashish and 110 pounds of opium in what authorities today called a record haul of illicit drugs in France.

Authorities said the drugs could have brought in $37 million in street sales.

Some of the hashish had been hidden in jute bags, the kind French farmers use as potato sacks.

Four men from Marseille with criminal records were arrested in the weekend seizure, authorities said. Also arrested were two brothers from Lebanon and an Algerian, police said.

Some of the drugs were to be sold in France and the rest was headed for other parts of Europe, said a spokesman for the Interior Ministry.

The spokesman said undercover police and customs agents trailed the drug shipment after it was unloaded in Marseille off a ship that arrived from the Middle East. They tracked the drugs to a hamlet south of Paris, where drug agents staked out a shed.

Around midnight Easter Sunday, the spokesman said, police stopped a truck from leaving the shed, and found about 1.6 tons of hashish inside the vehicle. The hashish was divided into 2.2-pound (1-kilogram) bricks.

Agents then raided the shed, where they found five tons of hashish and 110 pounds of opium. Hashish is a concentrated, intoxicating form of hemp.

Authorities did not name those arrested. The Interior Ministry spokesman said the suspects were being transferred to holding cells in Paris.

Under French law, drug suspects can be detained up to four days before having a court appearance.

Searching For An Iredell Man

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A search was underway for an Iredell County man who disappeared from his fishing companions over the weekend, authorities said.

Det. Gary Edwards of the Iredell Sheriff's Department said Terry Lynch, 20, went on a fishing trip Saturday with three friends on a Lake Norman island about 300 yards offshore.

Companions said Lynch continued fishing after the others went to sleep Saturday night. When the others awoke Sunday, Lynch was gone, Edwards said.

He added that Lynch's car and fishing equipment were at the scene, although the tires on the car were slashed.

The Civil Air Patrol was conducting an air and land search Monday. Sheriff's deputies and county rescue officials were dragging the area of the lake where Lynch disappeared.
